House Bill 218
By: Representatives Teasley of the 37th, Ramsey of the 72nd, Fleming of the 121st, Welch of the 110th, Williamson of the 115th, and others

A BILL TO BE ENTITLED
AN ACT

To amend Title 50 of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated, relating to state government, so as to provide for the preservation of religious freedom; to provide for the granting of relief; to provide for definitions; to provide for a short title; to provide for findings; to provide for an effective date; to repeal conflicting laws; and for other purposes.

BE IT ENACTED BY THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF GEORGIA:

SECTION 1.
This Act shall be known and may be cited as the "Preventing Government Overreach on Religious Expression Act."

SECTION 2.
(a) The Georgia General Assembly finds and determines that in passing the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 with an overwhelming bipartisan majority, the United States Congress specifically affirmed that:

(1) The framers of the United States Constitution, recognizing free exercise of religion as an inalienable right, secured its protection in the First Amendment to the United States Constitution;

(2) Laws neutral toward religion have the same potential to burden religious exercise as laws purposely intended to interfere with religious exercise;

(3) Governments should not substantially burden religious exercise without having a compelling justification;

(4) In Employment Division v. Smith, 494 U.S. 872 (1990), the United States Supreme Court decision had the practical effect of eliminating the requirement, absent a statute enacted by Congress, that the government justify burdens on religious exercise imposed by laws neutral toward religion; and
(5) The compelling interest test as set forth by the federal courts is a workable test for striking sensible balances between religious liberty and competing prior governmental interests.

(b) The Georgia General Assembly further finds and determines that:

(1) Paragraph III of Section 1 of Article I of the Constitution of this state provides that each person has the natural and inalienable right to worship God, each according to the dictates of that person's own conscience; and no human authority should, in any case, control or interfere with such right of conscience;

(2) Paragraph IV of Section 1 of Article I of the Constitution of this state provides that no inhabitant of this state shall be molested in person or property or be prohibited from holding any public office or trust on account of religious opinions; but the right of freedom of religion shall not be so construed as to excuse acts of licentiousness or justify practices inconsistent with the peace and safety of the state;

(3) In City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507 (1997), the protections of religious exercise afforded by the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 were ruled applicable only to religious exercise burdened by federal law or agencies and provided no protection from burdens on religious exercise from state or local law or governments; this decision mandated that any state seeking to provide the same level of protection of religious exercise from state or local governments would be required to enact a state statute equivalent to the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 as enacted by the 103rd United States Congress;

(4) Since the 1997 Supreme Court decision the following states have enacted state-level Religious Freedom Restoration Act statutes: Alabama, Arizona, Connecticut, Florida, Idaho, Illinois, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, Missouri, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia; and

(5) In numerous cases at both the federal and state levels, the Religious Freedom Restoration Act statutes have provided meaningful protections from unreasonable burdens on religious exercise and in no cases have been used to discriminate or undermine the rights of any person or class of people; in fact, these statutes have been models of achieving the balance between preventing government overreach in religious expression allowing governments at all levels to protect peace and public safety, and providing an environment of economic vitality and individual freedom that has made the United States a model worldwide.
SECTION 3.

Title 50 of the Official Code of Georgia Annotated, relating to state government, is amended by adding a new chapter to read as follows:

"CHAPTER 15A

50-15A-1.

As used in this chapter, the term:

(1) 'Demonstrates' means meets the burdens of going forward with the evidence and of persuasion.

(2) 'Exercise of religion' or 'religious exercise' means the practice or observance of religion, whether or not compelled by or central to a system of religious belief, including but not limited to the use, building, or conversion of real property for the practice or observance of religion.

(3) 'Government' means the state or any local subdivision of the state or public instrumentality or public corporate body created by or under authority of state law, including but not limited to the executive, legislative, and judicial branches and every department, agency, board, bureau, office, commission, authority, or similar body thereof; municipalities; counties; school districts; special taxing districts; conservation districts; authorities; and any other state or local public instrumentality or corporation.

(4) 'Penal institution' means any jail, correctional institution, or similar facility for the detention of violators of state laws or local ordinances and any entity supervising such violators placed on parole, probation, or other conditional release.

(a) Government shall not substantially burden a person's exercise of religion even if the burden results from a rule of general applicability, except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section.

(b) Government may substantially burden a person's exercise of religion only if government demonstrates that the application of such burden to a person is in furtherance of a compelling governmental interest and the least restrictive means of furthering that compelling governmental interest.

(c) A person whose religious exercise has been burdened in violation of this chapter may assert that claim or defense in a judicial proceeding and obtain appropriate relief against government.
50-15A-3.

(a) Nothing in this chapter shall be construed to create any rights by an employee against an employer if such employer is not government.

(b) Except as provided by subsection (c) of this Code section, this chapter shall apply to all actions by government.

(c) This chapter shall apply neither to penological rules, regulations, conditions, or policies established by a penal institution that are reasonably related to the safety and security of incarcerated persons, staff, visitors, supervised violators, or the public nor to the maintenance of good order and discipline in any penal institution or parole or probation program.

SECTION 4.

This Act shall become effective upon its approval by the Governor or upon its becoming law without such approval.

SECTION 5.

All laws and parts of laws in conflict with this Act are repealed.
