Pistol admissible where procured in search incidental to arrest of another. — It is not error, in the trial of the accused for armed robbery, to admit in evidence, over objection, a pistol procured by FBI agents in the search of an apartment in Los Angeles, where the search was made incidental to the lawful arrest of another person, as the search and seizure of the evidence was lawful. Cash v. State, 222 Ga. 55, 148 S.E.2d 420, 1966 Ga. LEXIS 396 (1966).

Lottery tickets and money allegedly obtained from a defendant are not obtained by a search of the person but of the premises when found on the floor where the defendant had been standing after the defendant had moved from the spot and which were not there before the defendant had stood there, and if the search of the premises was lawful, then there is no ground to suppress this evidence. Logan v. State, 135 Ga. App. 879, 219 S.E.2d 615, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1857 (1975).

Heroin inadmissible where burden of proof showing legal arrest not met. — Heroin seized from defendant's automobile following arrest for prowling is inadmissible as evidence where the state failed to carry its burden of proof for showing that the arrest itself was legal by introducing an exemplified copy of the city ordinance, if such existed, under which defendant was arrested. Traylor v. State, 127 Ga. App. 409, 193 S.E.2d 876, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 904 (1972).

Tourist camp registration cards admissible. — Objection to admission in evidence of registration cards kept by tourist camp under former Code 1933, §§ 52-308 and 52-312 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 43-21-56 and 43-21-52), on grounds that the acquisition of such cards was in violation of U.S. Const., amends. 4, 5, and 14, was without merit in view of the provision of former Code 1933, § 52-112 that the permanent record for the registration of guests should be available at all times for inspection by any peace or law enforcement officer. Copeland v. Leathers, 206 Ga. 280, 56 S.E.2d 530, 1949 Ga. LEXIS 455 (1949).

Evidence admissible if probable cause existed at time of arrest and seizure. — Certain evidence consisting of bloodstained carpet removed from the premises where the deceased and defendant lived is admissible if probable cause existed at the time the evidence was removed and when the defendant was arrested. Ray v. State, 235 Ga. 467, 219 S.E.2d 761, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 904 (1975).

Scope of pat down search exceeded. — Trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion to suppress the evidence since the investigating police officer exceeded the scope of a Terry pat down search when the officer pulled open defendant's pocket to discover what was in it; the officer provided no facts which would lead the officer to suspect that the pill bottles the officer felt in defendant's pocket were some type of atypical weapon so as to justify intruding into defendant's pocket for the officer's protection. Howard v. State, 253 Ga. App. 158, 558 S.E.2d 745, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 5 (2002).

Officer was justified in conducting a pat-down when the officer testified that the officer observed the defendant place something in defendant's pocket and then place defendant's hand in defendant's pocket; defendant refused to remove defendant's hand although the officer repeatedly instructed the defendant to do so; and, the officer became concerned for the officer's safety because of defendant's actions. However, the trial court erred in denying defendant's motion to suppress since the officer could not identify the object the officer felt as either a weapon, or by its contour and mass, contraband and thus the intrusion into defendant's pocket was impermissible. Sudduth v. State, 288 Ga. App. 541, 654 S.E.2d 446, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 1243 (2007).

Photographs of automobile and paint scrapings taken from exterior of vehicle were not subject to defendant's motion to suppress. Deshazier v. State, 155 Ga. App. 526, 271 S.E.2d 664, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2655 (1980).

Evidence held legally seized and admissible. — There was probable cause for arrest where radio report described blacks in a Buick, and the persons stopped were blacks in a Buick similar in color and style to that described, and matching leather jackets in plain view on the car's back seat corresponded with and corroborated the report that the robbers had been wearing such jackets; therefore evidence was legally seized. Cobb v. State, 244 Ga. 344, 260 S.E.2d 60, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1230 (1979).

Evidence held legally seized and admissible as: (1) evidence seized from the defendant's residence as a result of an interrogation was sufficiently attenuated from any illegality to be admissible; (2) the duration of the search had no bearing on the subsequent consent given by the defendant's roommate; (3) the consent was not a product of any illegal conduct; and (4) there was no evidence of any flagrant misconduct and coercion on the part of the investigating law enforcement officers involved. Spence v. State, 281 Ga. 697, 642 S.E.2d 856, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 241 (2007).

Because a search warrant affidavit provided the issuing magistrate with sufficient probable cause connecting the defendant to the residence of a female friend for the magistrate logically to conclude that there was a fair probability that evidence of a crime would be found therein, despite the omission of additional evidence by the affiant, an order granting suppression of the evidence seized therein was reversed. State v. Hunter, 282 Ga. 278, 646 S.E.2d 465, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 360 (2007).

Failure of arbitrator to decide any and all disputes. — Although only a little time elapsed between an officer's act of pushing aside the blinds in a home and the acquisition of the inculpatory evidence, this factor is not dispositive. The record reflects that the officer pushed aside the blinds for safety reasons only after the defendant voluntarily questioned what was going on and that the officer did not view any evidence in the home that was ultimately gathered pursuant to the search warrant. Defendant's act of voluntarily opening the door of the home, attacking the officer, and then resisting arrest were intervening acts that completely purged the taint from the officer's initial unlawful act. If the defendant had not attacked the officer and then resisted arrest, the evidence found in the home would be inadmissible as fruit of the poisonous tree. Lawson v. State, 299 Ga. App. 865, 684 S.E.2d 1, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 845 (2009), cert. dismissed, No. S10C0118, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 206 (Ga. Mar. 1, 2010), cert. denied, No. S10C0117, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 195 (Ga. Mar. 1, 2010).

Statement granting consent to search suppressed. — The trial court properly suppressed evidence as to the defendant's statement granting consent for the search of defendant's vehicle after applying the "reasonable person" test; the trial court determined that after the defendant was placed in the back of the trooper's car, the defendant was "in custody" for Miranda purposes even though defendant was not "under arrest" and then concluded that a reasonable person in the defendant's circumstances would not feel that they were at liberty to terminate any interrogation and leave based on the officer's retention of possession of the defendant's driver's license and an above average amount of cash while placing defendant in the back of the patrol car to await the arrival of a drug dog. Cotton v. State, 237 Ga. App. 18, 513 S.E.2d 763, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 337 (1999), cert. denied, No. S99C0985, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 598 (Ga. June 11, 1999).

Failure to object to no ruling made on motion to suppress. — In the absence of a ruling on a pretrial motion to suppress and of an objection when the evidence was offered at trial, a defendant waived his right to contest the admissibility of the evidence on appeal. Castillo v. State, 281 Ga. 579, 642 S.E.2d 8, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 127 (2007).

Abandoned property. — Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to suppress as the police search of a bag containing the items purportedly stolen from the burglary and theft victims was not illegal; the bag was located in a closet of a bedroom in a friend's residence, and because the evidence showed the defendant had abandoned it, the defendant did not have a reasonable expectation of privacy in the bag and the defendant could not claim that the fourth amendment prohibited a search of the bag by police. Gray v. State, 260 Ga. App. 197, 581 S.E.2d 279, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 306 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1000, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 576 (Ga. June 2, 2003).

Warrant for vehicle following search of home proper. — Defendant's suppression motion was properly denied as a magistrate's issuance of a search warrant for defendant's home was supported by probable cause for purposes of the fourth amendment, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII, and O.C.G.A. § 17-5-30 where: (1) witnesses reported seeing defendant at the victim's home near the time that the victim disappeared; (2) the farm manager who located the victim's body told police that defendant commonly used the farm for hunting; (3) defendant had a tumultuous relationship with the victim; and (4) defendant's mailbox was painted in a similar camouflage as the cattle trough in which the victim was found; as the warrant for the house was proper, the warrant for defendant's truck was not fruit of the poisonous tree. Fortson v. State, 277 Ga. 164, 587 S.E.2d 39, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 840 (2003), overruled on other grounds, Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 685 (2018), overruled in part, Terrell v. State, 313 Ga. 120, 868 S.E.2d 764, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 17 (2022).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to suppress photographs that were developed from film that was in a disposable camera found in the defendant's duffle bag at the time of the defendant's arrest because: (1) the defendant lacked standing to challenge the admission of the evidence since the camera belonged to the defendant's sibling, most of the photographs had been taken by the sibling, and the camera had only been borrowed by the defendant; (2) the film was admissible under the same rationale as an inventory search because the police had to develop the film to determine to whom the camera belonged before they could return it to its owner; and (3) the film was the fruit of a search incident to the defendant's lawful arrest because it was found in the defendant's duffle bag in a search incident to the defendant's arrest. Wright v. State, 276 Ga. 454, 579 S.E.2d 214, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 319 (2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1106, 124 S. Ct. 1059, 157 L. Ed. 2d 892, 2004 U.S. LEXIS 79 (2004).

Consent to search. — Trial court erred in granting defendant's motion to suppress evidence of contraband, namely, defendant's possession of marijuana, as police officer's discovery of the marijuana was not pursuant to an impermissible pat-down search that two other officers conducted on a group of students, including defendant, but was pursuant to defendant's invitation for the officer to search defendant after the officer asked defendant why defendant's license had been suspended; however, a remand was necessary to determine whether defendant's consent to search was voluntarily given. State v. Baker, 261 Ga. App. 258, 582 S.E.2d 133, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 562 (2003).

Inevitable discovery rule. — Evidence gathered by a crime scene investigator from a motel room where the victim was found dead was admissible under the inevitable discovery rule; the information contained in the affidavit in support of the application for a search warrant that was issued after the investigator's illegal entry was gathered prior to the illegal entry. Teal v. State, 282 Ga. 319, 647 S.E.2d 15, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 480 (2007).

Inevitable discovery rule did not apply. — The inevitable discovery doctrine did not apply despite the state's position that the discovery of the methamphetamine was inevitable because the officer would not have allowed the defendant to drive the vehicle without a tag away from the scene and when the vehicle was searched the pipe and syringe would have been found, providing probable cause for the search of defendant's person and the inevitable discovery of the methamphetamine in defendant's pocket. However, no testimony was presented regarding the procedure that the officer would have followed in this situation and, even accepting the state's argument that the officer was required to impound the car since the car did not have a tag, there is nothing to show that an inventory search would have been conducted immediately at the site of the stop and, likewise, there is nothing to show that the defendant would have been present, whether the inventory search was conducted at the scene or subsequent to the vehicle being removed from the area, and thus nothing to show that the defendant would have been immediately searched. Sudduth v. State, 288 Ga. App. 541, 654 S.E.2d 446, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 1243 (2007).

Multiple blood samples. — Although a first search warrant for defendant's blood was defective, a second blood sample that was later drawn from defendant was not "fruit of the poisonous tree" because there was no evidence that the second search warrant for the blood was defective or that the second blood sample was obtained by exploitation of the original defective warrant; the second sample was separate and distinguishable from the first sample so as to be purged of the primary taint and, therefore, the trial court did not err in refusing to suppress the second sample. McKinney v. State, 261 Ga. App. 218, 582 S.E.2d 463, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 515 (2003).

Probable cause for blood test of suspected intoxicated driver. — There was probable cause under the fourth amendment for an officer to request a blood test under O.C.G.A. § 40-5-55 from a defendant suspected of driving under the influence when the defendant showed four out of six signs of impairment on a horizontal gaze nystagmus test, admitted to drinking, smelled of alcohol, had a positive alco-sensor result, and had bloodshot eyes. The fact that an officer did not believe that there was probable cause to request the blood test did not require a different finding, as the scope of a person's fourth amendment rights was determined objectively. State v. Preston, 293 Ga. App. 94, 666 S.E.2d 417, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 842 (2008).

"Protective sweep" following the defendant's arrest was permissible and reasonable because officers on the scene did not know whether other assailants or victims remained inside the residence. Williams v. State, 302 Ga. 474, 807 S.E.2d 350, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 922 (2017).

Stop of juvenile was not an illegal detention. — Juvenile court properly denied a juvenile's motion to suppress the physical and testimonial evidence as well as properly adjudicated the juvenile delinquent as a result of the evidence obtained by the police not being the product of an illegal detention. The officers who stopped the juvenile and three other cohorts had a reasonable suspicion, based on specific and articulable facts, that the juvenile should have been in school at the time and day of the stop, the juvenile matched the description of a youth involved in home burglaries with three others, and the four were stopped while canvassing the same neighborhood where a rash of burglaries had been occurring. In the Interest of J.T., 297 Ga. App. 636, 678 S.E.2d 111, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 503 (2009).

Remedies for Violation of Rights

Constitutional tort claim depends on conduct's reasonableness. — Where the factual allegations clearly established a factual dispute which impacted on the reasonableness of federal agents' conduct in serving a subpoena and where, given the factual circumstances, a jury was entitled to find whether the agents' search and seizure of business records and material violated established constitutional rights of which a reasonable officer would have known, the district court correctly denied summary judgment to the agents on the question of qualified immunity on the plaintiffs' constitutional tort claim for unlawful search and seizure. Goddard v. Urrea, 847 F.2d 765, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 8600 (11th Cir. 1988).

Defendant must show harm from challenged warrant. — Where defendant failed to show any harm resulting from the issuance of a challenged warrant, there was nothing for the court to review on appeal. Soto v. State, 252 Ga. 164, 312 S.E.2d 306, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 614 (1984).

Plaintiff was not required to show significant injury as an essential ingredient to a fourth amendment excessive force claim. Gardner v. Rogers, 224 Ga. App. 165, 480 S.E.2d 217, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 1345 (1996).

Compensation for invasion of Fourth Amendment rights. — Courts of law are capable of making the types of judgment concerning causation and magnitude of injury necessary to accord meaningful compensation for invasion of rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4. The same may not be true, however, with respect to other types of constitutionally protected interests, and therefore the appropriateness of money damages may well vary with the nature of the personal interest asserted. Polakoff v. Henderson, 370 F. Supp. 690, 71 Ohio Op. 2d 106, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12414 (N.D. Ga. 1973), aff'd, 488 F.2d 977, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 10357 (5th Cir. 1974).

Suppression of illegally seized evidence justified. — An officer, who knew the defendant, forcibly opened the defendant's vehicle door, thereby physically restraining defendant's movement so that defendant's subsequent consent to a search of defendant's vehicle, after arriving at a location under surveillance for drug manufacturing, was invalid as the consent was the product of a wrongful detention; thus, the trial court erred in denying defendant's motion to suppress the evidence seized from the vehicle. Smith v. State, 288 Ga. App. 87, 653 S.E.2d 510, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 1148 (2007).

Subjective intent in making arrest.

— Because a police officer's subjective intent in making an arrest is irrelevant to a finding of probable cause, a plaintiff need not establish intentional conduct or even gross negligence to establish a violation of the fourth amendment. McKenna v. County of Clayton, 657 F. Supp. 221, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14668 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

Qualified immunity of officer in making arrest denied. — When an arrestee allegedly called an officer "a fucking asshole" and was arrested, the officer was properly denied summary judgment based on qualified immunity as to the arrestee's claims under the fourth amendment because the officer did not have arguable probable cause to arrest the arrestee for disorderly conduct under Georgia law since the arrestee was not shouting and did not appear to be a danger to anyone as the arrestee walked away. Merenda v. Tabor, 506 Fed. Appx. 862, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 2351 (11th Cir. 2013).

Good faith and reasonable belief in validity of arrest are the appropriate standards in testing the arresting officer's liability for a warrantless arrest. Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12174 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Federal constitutional standards proper measure of conduct of state officer. — Where an unlawful state arrest is the basis of an action for violation of rights under U.S. Const., amends. 4 and 14, federal constitutional standards are the appropriate measure of the conduct of the arresting officer. Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12174 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Liability under federal civil rights statute. — Even if a police officer violates a state arrest statute, the officer is not liable under the federal Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1983, unless the officer also violated federal constitutional law governing warrantless arrests. Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12174 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

A supervisory or nonsupervisory official's failure or refusal to intervene when a constitutional violation such as the use of a chokehold once an arrestee is shackled is taking place in the official's presence establishes direct liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for excessive use of force against the arrestee in violation of the arrestee's rights under the fourth and fourteenth amendments. McQuirter v. City of Atlanta, 572 F. Supp. 1401, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13851 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

A municipality cannot be held liable under the federal civil rights statute, 42 U.S.C. § 1983, for an illegal arrest absent a showing that the arrest without probable cause was the result of a custom, pattern, or practice of the municipality. Shelby v. City of Atlanta, 578 F. Supp. 1368, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19906 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Where a governing body has worked constitutional deprivation of a citizen pursuant to an impermissible or corrupt policy which is intentional and deliberate, a cause of action is accrued against the governing body and its employees under the federal Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1983, in spite of the doctrine of sovereign immunity. City of Cave Spring v. Mason, 252 Ga. 3, 310 S.E.2d 892, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 564 (1984).

An unprovoked beating and killing of a suspect by police officers was sufficiently serious to be actionable, as a federal civil rights claim, under U.S. Const., amend. 4, notwithstanding the existence of a state tort remedy. Gilmere v. City of Atlanta, 774 F.2d 1495, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 23839 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1115, 106 S. Ct. 1970, 90 L. Ed. 2d 654, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 3043 (1986), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1124, 106 S. Ct. 1993, 90 L. Ed. 2d 673, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 3168 (1986), overruled in part, Severe v. City of Miami, No. 17-22153-CIV, 2019 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 105523 (S.D. Fla. June 25, 2019), overruled in part, Bledsoe v. Bd. of Cty. Comm'rs, No. 16-2296-DDC-JPO, 2021 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 87618 (D. Kan. May 7, 2021).

In a federal civil rights action by a state prisoner alleging violations of fourth amendment rights, federal abstention was proper until the state appellate court decided the issue upon its review of the conviction. Doby v. Strength, 758 F.2d 1405, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 29421 (11th Cir. 1985).

In a case involving use of excessive force by police officers brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the balancing test for determining whether a substantive due process violation has been committed, while similar in many respects to that for assessing a fourth amendment claim, requires a plaintiff to show that the force used by a defendant officer was applied maliciously and sadistically for the very purpose of causing harm. The fourth amendment balancing test, on the other hand, does not include a "malicious and sadistic" element; rather, the reasonableness of the seizure or intrusion is the central inquiry, as is the case with respect to fourth amendment analyses outside of the police abuse context. Thompson v. Spikes, 663 F. Supp. 627,

Remedies for Violation of Rights (Cont'd)

1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5541 (S.D. Ga. 1987).

Recognizing that 42 U.S.C. § 1983 clearly requires a showing of something more than common law tort elements, the court analyzed a deputy sheriff's tort claims for malicious prosecution, abuse of process, false arrest and false imprisonment, in the context of the fourth and fourteenth amendments, and found that claims thereunder were validly inferable for alleged conspiracy by fellow officers to force the deputy to give false testimony against a county sheriff. Mastroianni v. Deering, 835 F. Supp. 1577, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19036 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

In an action brought pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, because where the facts indicated that the plaintiffs' arrest had not ended at the time of the defendant police officers' use of excessive force, U.S. Const., amend. 4 applied to the plaintiffs' excessive force claims even if the plaintiff was in post-arrest, pre-charge custody at the time of the use of such force. Albritten v. Dougherty County, Ga., 973 F. Supp. 1455, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18774 (M.D. Ga. 1997).

In an action brought pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983, where there were genuine issues of material fact as to whether defendant police officers' use of physical force against plaintiff violated U.S. Const., amend. 4, defendants were not entitled to qualified immunity in their individual capacities. Albritten v. Dougherty County, Ga., 973 F. Supp. 1455, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18774 (M.D. Ga. 1997).

Because a plaintiff in a civil rights case prosecuted under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging excessive force used in arrest may receive compensatory damages for such things as physical pain and suffering and mental and emotional anguish, and because such a plaintiff whose constitutional rights are violated is entitled to receive nominal damages even if the plaintiff fails to produce any evidence of compensatory damages, the district court erred in granting judgment to defendant officers as a matter of law. Slicker v. Jackson, 215 F.3d 1225, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 14355 (11th Cir. 2000).

In an arrestee's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suit that alleged that the arrestee's fourth amendment right against the use of excessive force was violated when a sheriff's deputy crashed a cruiser into the car during a high-speed pursuit, rendering the arrestee a quadriplegic, the arrestee's deliberate indifference claim against the sheriff in an individual capacity was dismissed on summary judgment because the sheriff had provided the deputies with all of the training that was required by the State of Georgia; even if there were a causal connection between the sheriff's failure to train the deputies in the techniques of making high-pursuit stops, the sheriff was entitled to qualified immunity. Harris v. Coweta County, No. 3:01-CV-148-WBH, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27348 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 25, 2003), rev'd in part, aff'd, 406 F.3d 1307, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 6721 (11th Cir. 2005).

Internal Revenue Service Commissioner absolutely immune from liability. — The United States is absolutely immune from damages in a suit seeking damages under the Constitution, as is the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service insofar as the Commissioner is acting within the scope of the Commissioner's official capacity. Sellers v. United States, 569 F. Supp. 1149, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16949 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service cannot be held vicariously liable for the fourth and fifth amendment violations of the Internal Revenue Service agents. Sellers v. United States, 569 F. Supp. 1149, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16949 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Police officers' use of deadly force against suspect who was armed with knife and had just stabbed several people was reasonable and hence within the bounds of the fourth amendment. O'Neal v. DeKalb County, 850 F.2d 653, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 9980 (11th Cir. 1988).

Habeas corpus. — If the petitioner is aggrieved by unconstitutional search and seizure, the petitioner is entitled to habeas relief on that basis alone. Wilson v.

Hopper, 234 Ga. 859, 218 S.E.2d 573, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1307 (1975).

In federal habeas corpus court the test of legality of state arrest is "federal probable cause." Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12174 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

If the state has provided an opportunity for full and fair litigation of a fourth amendment claim, a state prisoner may not be granted federal habeas corpus relief on the ground that evidence obtained in an unconstitutional search or seizure was introduced at trial. Anglin v. Green, 639 F. Supp. 490, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23503 (S.D. Ga. 1986), aff'd, 853 F.2d 930, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 8883 (11th Cir. 1988).

Right to acquittal on ground of unlawful arrest. — A defendant in a criminal case cannot claim a verdict declaring the defendant to be not guilty on the ground that the defendant was illegally arrested. Morton v. State, 132 Ga. App. 329, 208 S.E.2d 134, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1683 (1974).

When illegal arrest not grounds for reversal. — Assuming that the warrantless arrest was illegal, it is not in and of itself a ground for reversal where defendant has been indicted and convicted. Thompson v. State, 157 Ga. App. 600, 278 S.E.2d 62, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1927, aff'd, 248 Ga. 343, 285 S.E.2d 685, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 1012 (1981).

Conviction based on evidence illegally admitted must be reversed. — The fruits of an illegal arrest are not admissible in evidence against a defendant, and a conviction which is based upon evidence thus illegally admitted must be reversed and set aside. Traylor v. State, 127 Ga. App. 409, 193 S.E.2d 876, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 904 (1972).

Mere claim of illegal arrest insufficient for new trial or release. — If there is no claim that the conviction rested upon evidence seized as a result of an illegal arrest, or upon a confession secured pursuant to the illegal arrest, etc., but simply that the defendant was illegally arrested, then this, alone, does not entitle the defendant to release or a new trial. Johnson v. State, 128 Ga. App. 69, 195 S.E.2d 676, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1393 (1973).

When objections raised. — The lack of probable cause to arrest should be raised before trial if possible, and certainly at trial. A court, nevertheless, is bound to consider error apparent on the face of the record which rises to the level of "plain" or "fundamental" error. United States v. McGee, 464 F.2d 542, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 8289 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 989, 93 S. Ct. 346, 34 L. Ed. 2d 255, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 869 (1972), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1078, 93 S. Ct. 697, 34 L. Ed. 2d 667, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 226 (1972); 409 U.S. 1078, 93 S. Ct. 697, 34 L. Ed. 2d 667 (1972).

Fourth amendment objections may be raised in proceedings other than criminal trials. FTC v. Page, 378 F. Supp. 1052, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7885 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Authority of state drug enforcement officer to search and seize. — The Chief Drug Inspector of the State Board of Pharmacy and the Inspector's assistants have the authority to make arrests for violations of former Code 1933, Chs. 79A-7 and 79A-8 (see O.C.G.A. Arts. 2 and 3, Ch. 13, T. 16), and to search and seize evidence necessary for presentation before courts of this state or before the State Board of Pharmacy; the Chief Drug Inspector and the Inspector's assistants do not have the authority to seize prescription from a pharmacy without properly acquiring a valid search warrant. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-112.

Authority to seize prescriptions. — Any law enforcement official who has obtained search warrant may lawfully search and seize prescriptions retained for inspection by a pharmacy as required by Georgia law. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-112.

Constitutionality of fingerprint requirement. — Requiring applicants for driver's license or identification card to submit fingerprints does not violate constitutional rights. 1997 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U97-7.

Regulation allowing search of vehicles entering hospital grounds valid. — A regulation established by the Department of Human Resources which makes vehicles entering the grounds of Central State Hospital subject to search is a valid exercise of the department's power, and does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 4. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-15.

Unauthorized dormitory searches. — A college may not rely absolutely on a contractual provision in a dormitory contract to conduct a search of a student's dormitory room in the absence of a valid warrant or consent. 1994 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 94-13.

Use of metal detectors in schools. — The use of a metal detector to screen everyone or to randomly screen students as they enter school is not an unreasonable search and thus is not unconstitutional. However, the metal detector could be used in some manner, such as selective screening, which could violate the prohibition against unreasonable searches. 1994 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U94-9.

General Consideration

Nature of rights under fifth amendment. — Assurance that a person's Fifth Amendment right against compelled self-incrimination was not violated does not necessarily overcome a failure to protect the person's right under the fourth amendment against unreasonable search and seizure. State v. Guillory, 236 Ga. App. 230, 511 S.E.2d 591, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 125 (1999).

Defense counsel cannot invoke defendant's rights without consulting defendant. — Defense counsel, acting without having consulted the defendant, is not empowered to invoke the defendant's personal rights under the fifth and sixth amendments. Edwards v. State, 167 Ga. App. 681, 307 S.E.2d 264, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3339 (1983).

Waiver of rights. — Implicit in a finding that the defendant was properly advised of the defendant's rights, that the defendant understood those rights, and that the defendant voluntarily signed a written waiver of those rights is the factual determination that the defendant was mentally competent to waive the defendant's rights. Hance v. Zant, 696 F.2d 940, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 31169 (11th

Kemp*, 762 F.2d 1383, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30625 (11th Cir. 1985), overruled in part, Sutton v. Waddington, No. C07-1462-MJP-MAT, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60732 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 5, 2008).

There is no requirement that waiver of constitutional rights be in writing. Brown v. State, 162 Ga. App. 198, 290 S.E.2d 540, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2107 (1982).

Failure to voice objection. — The refusal to grant a mistrial, on the grounds that the state's cross-examination of a witness was improper, is not an abuse of discretion if the defendant failed to voice an objection during the questioning. Kirk v. State, 168 Ga. App. 226, 308 S.E.2d 592, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2734 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 133, 311 S.E.2d 821, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 608 (1984).

Plaintiff's allegations of statutory and constitutional predicates mandates federal court jurisdiction. — Where a plaintiff alleges 28 U.S.C. § 1343(3), in conjunction with 42 U.S.C. § 1983, as the jurisdictional predicate, and alleges federal constitutional predicates, such as fourteenth amendment property rights, first amendment rights to free speech and association, and fifth amendment just compensation or "taking" clause, a federal court must assume jurisdiction to decide whether the allegations state a cause of action on which the court can grant relief, as well as to determine issues of fact arising in the controversy. Stone Mt. Game Ranch, Inc. v. Hunt, 570 F. Supp. 238, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15846 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 746 F.2d 761, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16791 (11th Cir. 1984).

Standing to complain about violations of voter's constitutional rights. — Election candidate and chairman of county board of elections lacked standing to complain about alleged violations of a voter's constitutional rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. I, Para. I. Hammill v. Valentine, 258 Ga. 603, 373 S.E.2d 9, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 423 (1988).

Effect of sovereign immunity. — Claims against the United States based directly on Fifth Amendment violations are barred by sovereign immunity. United States v. Article or Device Consisting of Biotone Model 4, 557 F. Supp. 141, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17419 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Claims against Internal Revenue Service Commissioner. — The United States is absolutely immune from damages in a suit seeking damages under the Constitution, as is the Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service insofar as the Commissioner is acting within the scope of the Commissioner's official capacity. Sellers v. United States, 569 F. Supp. 1149, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16949 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service cannot be held vicariously liable for the fourth and fifth amendment violations of Internal Revenue Service agents. Sellers v. United States, 569 F. Supp. 1149, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16949 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Failure of state to preserve evidence. — There was no merit to a defendant's claim that due process had been violated because the state allowed a car in which a shooting took place to be sold from an impound lot before the car could be tested for fingerprints and other evidence. The defendant did not argue that the state had acted in bad faith, and the record did not show bad faith. Lockheart v. State, 284 Ga. 78, 663 S.E.2d 213, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 541 (2008).

As there was no showing that a videotape of a criminal incident and crime scene had "apparent exculpatory value" because the images were small, distorted, and non-identifiable, and the state did not act in bad faith when the state failed to preserve the tape, dismissal of an indictment against the defendant due to the state's failure to preserve the videotape was error. State v. Brawner, 297 Ga. App. 817, 678 S.E.2d 503, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 550 (2009).

Presentments and Indictments*1. In General

U.S. Const., amend. 5 requires that persons charged with crimes shall be indicted. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15556 (5th Cir. 1979).

Not intended to limit court jurisdiction but to protect individuals. — The language of the pertinent part of U.S. Const., amend. 5 is that “No person shall be held to answer”, not that “No court shall hold any person to answer,” as would likely have been the language had the provision been intended to be a limitation on the jurisdiction or the power of the court instead of a privilege for the protection of the individual. Barkman v. Sanford, 162 F.2d 592, 1947 U.S. App. LEXIS 2149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 332 U.S. 816, 68 S. Ct. 155, 92 L. Ed. 393, 1947 U.S. LEXIS 1658 (1947).

Adequacy of notice of criminal charges. — The test as to whether one accused of crime is given adequate notice in a charge against the accused is whether the charge is definite and specific enough to meet the test of reasonably apprising the accused of what the accused must defend against and enable the accused to avoid a second conviction for the same offense or included offenses. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Waiver of right to protections afforded by presentment or indictment. — The first provision in U.S. Const., amend. 5 is intended as a protection to the individual to the same extent as were the other four provisions of U.S. Const., amend. 5, and each provision therein may be waived as fully as the accused may waive the rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6. Barkman v. Sanford, 162 F.2d 592, 1947 U.S. App. LEXIS 2149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 332 U.S. 816, 68 S. Ct. 155, 92 L. Ed. 393, 1947 U.S. LEXIS 1658 (1947).

Validity of indictment. — Validity of an indictment is to be determined by reading it as a whole. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15556 (5th Cir. 1979).

Sufficiency of indictment as question of law. — Whether an indictment sufficiently charges a crime is a question of law, not of fact. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15556 (5th Cir. 1979).

One indictment with multiple offenses sufficient. — Evidence was sufficient to find appellant guilty of felony murder and other crimes regarding a home invasion resulting in a resident's death as the indictment was not multiplicitous having all charges brought in a single prosecution because the U.S. and Georgia Supreme Courts have held the procedural protections against double jeopardy applied only to multiple prosecutions, meaning multiple or successive indictments or criminal proceedings, not a single indictment containing multiple counts. Eleby v. State, 319 Ga. 234, 903 S.E.2d 64, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 138 (2024).

Minor deficiencies in indictment. — Indictments are read for their clear meaning and convictions will not be reversed because of minor deficiencies which do not prejudice the accused. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15556 (5th Cir. 1979).

Practical rather than technical considerations are determinative. — Sufficiency of an indictment is to be tested by practical rather than technical considerations, and the test of sufficiency is not whether the indictment could have been more artfully or precisely drawn, but whether it states the elements of the offense intended to be charged and adequately apprises the defendant of that which the defendant must be prepared to meet. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15556 (5th Cir. 1979).

Criteria for testing sufficiency of indictment. — The two criteria by which the sufficiency of an indictment is to be tested are whether the facts stated show the essential elements of the offense and whether the facts alleged are sufficient to permit the defendant to plead former jeopardy in a subsequent prosecution. Marshall v. State, 127 Ga. App. 805, 195 S.E.2d 469, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1024 (1972); Calley v. Callaway, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 851 (1976); United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15556 (5th Cir. 1979).

Presentments and Indictments (Cont'd)
1. In General (Cont'd)

Use in indictment of trade name. — An indictment containing a trade name which does not designate an individual or import a corporation is not void where it satisfies the requisites of informing the defendant with reasonable certainty of the nature of the accusation for defense purposes and does not subject defendant to the possibility of double jeopardy, particularly where the trade name is unique to the area and the accused's dealings have been in such trade name. Marshall v. State, 127 Ga. App. 805, 195 S.E.2d 469, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1024 (1972).

Indictment may rest upon hearsay, but informal unsworn hearsay from the mouth of the prosecutor only is interdicted by U.S. Const., amend. 5. United States v. Hodge, 496 F.2d 87, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 8007 (5th Cir. 1974).

Charging at trial for conspiracy where not indicted for such. — It is not, on the trial of one of two or more persons jointly indicted for a crime, inappropriate to charge upon the law of conspiracy merely because the indictment does not, in terms, allege that there was a conspiracy to commit the offense. Talley v. State, 120 Ga. App. 365, 170 S.E.2d 444, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 781 (1969).

Requirements of proof for indictment for conspiracy. — In a conspiracy case the government should not be able to procure an indictment without having to prove to the satisfaction of a jury that at least one act was done in the district of the indictment. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

Indictment charging theft by taking must describe property sufficiently to protect accused from double jeopardy. Chesser v. State, 159 Ga. App. 261, 283 S.E.2d 24, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2572 (1981).

Amendability of criminal indictments. — Criminal indictments are not amendable to conform to the evidence. Bowers v. State, 177 Ga. App. 36, 338 S.E.2d 457, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2484 (1985).

Second indictment returned while jeopardy ongoing. — Second indictment, which was apparently filed to address the eventuality that the defendants' motion to withdraw a guilty plea would be granted, was returned while the defendant's jeopardy was ongoing, and, as such, the indictment did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 5, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, or O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8. Phillips v. State, 298 Ga. App. 520, 680 S.E.2d 424, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 616 (2009).

There was no fatal variance or due process violation in juvenile petition as the petition contained sufficient information, including the date of the incident and the fact that it involved egg-throwing, to inform defendant of the charge, enable defendant to prepare a defense, and protect defendant from subsequent prosecutions for the same offense; the discrepancy between the delinquency allegations and the evidence regarding the number of windows damaged did not demand reversal as the petition fully informed defendant. In the Interest of M.M., 265 Ga. App. 381, 593 S.E.2d 919, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 123 (2004).

2. Grand Juries

Impartiality of grand juries. — U.S. Const., amend. 6, expressly provides that the trial jury in a criminal case must be impartial. No such requirement in respect to grand juries is found in U.S. Const., amend. 5, which contains the guaranty against prosecutions for infamous crimes unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury. Creamer v. State, 150 Ga. App. 458, 258 S.E.2d 212, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2259 (1979).

Defendant has the right to be tried solely on charges returned by a grand jury; this preserves the defendant's right to be accused by the defendant's fellow citizens, and also insures that the defendant will have adequate notice of the charges against the defendant and will be protected against double jeopardy. United States v. Johnson, 713 F.2d 633, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 24460 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1081, 104 S. Ct. 1447, 79 L. Ed. 2d 766, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 1356 (1984).

Discrimination in selection of grand jury forepersons. — A criminal defendant may attack a conviction on the grounds of purposeful discrimination against an identifiable group in the selection of the grand jury foreperson of the grand jury indicting the defendant. United States v. Sneed, 729 F.2d 1333, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 23511 (11th Cir. 1984).

Even if discrimination entered into the selection of grand jury forepersons, such discrimination did not warrant a reversal of conviction and the dismissal of the indictment absent an infringement of the fundamental right to fairness. United States v. Lewis, 743 F.2d 859, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 17892 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1067, 105 S. Ct. 2144, 85 L. Ed. 2d 500, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 1689 (1985).

Permissible criteria for grand jury foreman selection. — The grand jury foreman is not required to be a cross section of the community, and the appointing officer has wide discretion based on acceptable criteria that is race and gender neutral. United States v. Browning-Ferris Indus. of Ga., Inc., 555 F. Supp. 595, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16764 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Purported showing of low “non-white” representation not a prima facie case. — The defendant, who submitted statistics comparing the representation of white and “non-white” people on the qualified grand jury wheel, failed to establish a prima facie case of discrimination, “non-white” persons not comprising a distinctive group singled out for special treatment under the law. United States v. Lewis, 743 F.2d 859, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 17892 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1067, 105 S. Ct. 2144, 85 L. Ed. 2d 500, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 1689 (1985).

Systematic and arbitrary exclusion of Negroes from jury venires. — Negroes may not be systematically and arbitrarily excluded from the jury venires from which the grand jury that has indicted a Negro is selected, for such constitutes a denial of due process and equal protection of the laws. Mobley v. United States, 379 F.2d 768, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 5810 (5th Cir. 1967).

Grand jury witness cannot refuse to answer questions on the ground that they are the product of unlawful searches and seizures. United States v. Worobytz, 522 F.2d 196, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12303 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1507, 47 L. Ed. 2d 761, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 858 (1976).

Double Jeopardy

1. In General

Double jeopardy prohibition applies to the states through U.S. Const., amend 14. Price v. Georgia, 398 U.S. 323, 90 S. Ct. 1757, 26 L. Ed. 2d 300, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 22 (1970); Staggers v. Stynchcombe, 319 F. Supp. 1305, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13127 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 436 F.2d 585, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 12561 (5th Cir. 1971); Alexander v. State, 129 Ga. App. 395, 199 S.E.2d 918, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1021 (1973); Clark v. State, 144 Ga. App. 69, 240 S.E.2d 270, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2588 (1977).

Scope of protection generally. — The double jeopardy clause prohibits merely punishing twice, or attempting a second time to punish criminally, for the same offense. The question is whether a statute imposes a criminal sanction. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 783 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 90 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 1857 (1970); Middlebrook v. Allen, 234 Ga. 481, 216 S.E.2d 331, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1171 (1975).

The Georgia constitution is less protective than the fifth amendment, for it recognizes an exception to the bar against double jeopardy when the first trial ends in mistrial. State v. Oliver, 188 Ga. App. 47, 372 S.E.2d 256, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 886 (1988).

The double jeopardy clause protects a criminal defendant against successive, rather than simultaneous, prosecutions. United States v. Farmer, 923 F.2d 1557, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 2706 (11th Cir. 1991).

Retrial of a charge of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon would not itself violate double jeopardy or any other constitutional right, since the right not to be prosecuted on a count which was quashed for the second time was purely statutory pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-53.1. Langlands v. State, 282 Ga. 103, 646 S.E.2d 253, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 420 (2007).

Prosecution for separate and similar offense allowed. — Precedent supports the conclusion that simultaneous prosecution for carjacking and using or carrying a firearm during a crime of violence (18 U.S.C. §§ 2119, 924) does not offend the double jeopardy clause. United States v. Grant, 860 F. Supp. 843, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11029 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 119 F.3d 9, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 17314 (11th Cir. 1997).

Procedural double jeopardy prevents successive prosecutions for the same offense; it does not prevent prosecutions for offenses which are separate from and similar to a prior prosecuted offense. Loden v. State, 199 Ga. App. 683, 406 S.E.2d 103, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 609 (1991).

Where defendant was convicted of driving under the influence in municipal court and then prosecuted for vehicular homicide and driving under the influence in superior court, the latter prosecution was not barred by principles of double jeopardy since the offenses did not arise from the same transaction and, because the offenses were completed at different times and in different locations, there was no single court with jurisdiction over all the crimes. Lefler v. State, 210 Ga. App. 609, 436 S.E.2d 777, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1283 (1993).

Double jeopardy clause did not prohibit additional punishment for a separate offense which the Georgia General Assembly deemed to warrant separate sanction; therefore, the trial court did not err in refusing to merge defendant's armed robbery and hijacking convictions because O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1(d) specifically provided that the offense of hijacking would be considered a separate offense and would not merge with any other offense. Boykin v. State, 264 Ga. App. 836, 592 S.E.2d 426, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS

Defense of previously overcome charges. — The double jeopardy clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5 protects against: (1) a second prosecution for the same offense after an acquittal; (2) a second prosecution for the same offense after a conviction; and (3) multiple punishments for the same offense. United States v. Johnson, 709 F.2d 639, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25934 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1010, 104 S. Ct. 531, 78 L. Ed. 2d 713, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 2669 (1983).

A defendant should not be forced to defend against charges or factual allegations that the defendant overcame in an earlier trial. Albert v. Montgomery, 732 F.2d 865, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 22334 (11th Cir. 1984).

Jury, in acquitting defendant of malice murder, felony murder, and aggravated assault at a prior trial, necessarily determined that defendant acted in self-defense, and self-defense was an element of voluntary manslaughter. Therefore, double jeopardy and collateral estoppel barred the state from re-prosecuting the defendant for voluntary manslaughter. Roeser v. State, 294 Ga. 295, 751 S.E.2d 297, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 949 (2013), cert. denied, 573 U.S. 946, 134 S. Ct. 2874, 189 L. Ed. 2d 834, 2014 U.S. LEXIS 4612 (2014).

Questions of double jeopardy in Georgia must be determined under the expanded statutory proscriptions found in O.C.G.A. §§ 16-1-6, 16-1-7, and 16-1-8, which place limitations upon multiple prosecutions, convictions, and punishments for the same criminal conduct. Stone v. State, 166 Ga. App. 245, 304 S.E.2d 94, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2117 (1983).

O.C.G.A. §§ 16-1-7 and 16-1-8 are broader in scope than constitutional standards regarding double jeopardy. Trimble v. State, 156 Ga. App. 9, 274 S.E.2d 10, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2850 (1980).

Double jeopardy did not bar evidence of prior acts of which defendant acquitted. — In the defendant's trial for the shooting death of a drug dealer, evidence showing the defendant's involvement in a prior similar incident was admissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-4-404(b), despite the defendant's acquittal of charges in that case; Moore v. State, 254 Ga. 674, 333 S.E.2d 605 (1985), applying collateral estoppel principles, was disapproved. State v. Atkins, 304 Ga. 413, 819 S.E.2d 28, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 600 (2018).

Continuation of a trial for two months before the same jury, absent exceptional circumstances or consent of the parties, was improper; however, the continuance did not constitute a "termination" within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8 and later proceedings were not barred by double jeopardy; overruling Paquin v. Town of Tyrone, 261 Ga. 418, 405 S.E.2d 497 (1991). Morris v. State, 264 Ga. 823, 452 S.E.2d 100, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 2 (1995).

Bar to successive prosecutions is referred to as the procedural aspect of the double jeopardy rule. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1072 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2621 (1977).

Rationale behind the bar to successive prosecutions is to prevent harassment of the accused. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1072 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2621 (1977).

Bar to multiple convictions is referred to as the substantive aspect of the double jeopardy rule. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1072 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2621 (1977).

Rationale behind the bar to multiple convictions is to prevent multiple and excessive punishments. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1072 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2621 (1977).

Double jeopardy clause provides three related protections: protection against a second prosecution for the same offense after acquittal; protection against a second prosecution for the same offense after conviction; and protection against multiple punishments for the same offense. United States v. Dunbar, 591 F.2d 1190, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15937 (5th Cir. 1979); United States v. Cowart, 595 F.2d 1023, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 14503 (5th Cir. 1979).

The double jeopardy clause affords the defendant three basic protections. The clause protects against a second prosecution for the same offense after acquittal, against a second prosecution for the same offense after conviction, and against multiple punishments for the same offense. United States v. Cochran, 883 F.2d 1012, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 13952 (11th Cir. 1989), superseded by statute as stated in, United States v. Diaz-Clark, 292 F.3d 1310, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 10737 (11th Cir. 2002).

Fundamental protection against double jeopardy guards against the risk or potential that an accused may again be convicted of the same offense for which the accused was initially tried. Price v. Georgia, 398 U.S. 323, 90 S. Ct. 1757, 26 L. Ed. 2d 300, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 22 (1970); Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975); Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 769, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

State with all its resources and power should not be allowed to make repeated attempts to convict an individual for an alleged offense, thereby subjecting that individual to embarrassment, expense, and ordeal and compelling the individual to live in a continuing state of anxiety and insecurity, as well as enhancing the possibility that, even though innocent, the individual may be found guilty. United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 11545 (5th Cir. 1978); United States v. Tammaro, 636 F.2d 100, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20397 (5th Cir. 1981).

The double jeopardy clause forbids a second trial for the purpose of affording the prosecution another opportunity to supply evidence which it failed to muster in the first proceeding. United States v. Bizzard, 493 F. Supp. 1084, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12781 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 674 F.2d 1382, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19491 (11th Cir. 1982).

The double jeopardy clause bars retrial where bad faith conduct by judge or prosecutor, threatens the harassment of an accused by successive prosecutions or declaration of a mistrial so as to afford the prosecution a more favorable opportunity to convict the defendant. Chatham v. State, 247 Ga. 95, 274 S.E.2d 473, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 637 (1981).

Prohibition against double jeopardy is not against being twice punished, but against being twice put in jeopardy. Price v. Georgia, 398 U.S. 323, 90 S. Ct. 1757, 26 L. Ed. 2d 300, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 22 (1970); Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 769, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

Double jeopardy addresses potential or risk of trial and conviction. — Double jeopardy clause is written in terms of potential or risk of trial and conviction, not punishment. Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 769, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

Multiple conviction and punishment for the same offense is prohibited. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Multiple convictions arising from successive prosecutions. — If multiple convictions arising out of a single prosecution are barred, they will likewise be barred from successive prosecution. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1072 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2621 (1977).

Violation of plea agreement. — Trial court did not err in granting the state's motion to set aside defendant's plea agreement and retry defendant for the crimes covered by that agreement, as defendant breached the agreement by agreeing to testify truthfully in exchange for a lesser sentence and then falsely testified at a codefendant's trial that defendant was not involved in an armed robbery that defendant had admitted being involved in at defendant's plea agreement hearing; defendant could not argue that trying defendant on the crimes that were the subject of the plea agreement violated double jeopardy principles since defendant chose to voluntarily violate the plea agreement and a double jeopardy argument was not available to shield defendant from the consequences of a defendant's voluntary choice. Brown v. State, 261 Ga. App. 115, 582 S.E.2d 13, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 560 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1336, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 816 (Ga. Sept. 22, 2003).

Criminal and administrative convictions not double jeopardy. — The criminal and administrative conviction and punishment of a defendant for the same act does not constitute double jeopardy. Culbertson v. State, 198 Ga. App. 513, 402 S.E.2d 111, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 149 (1991).

Suspension of defendant's operator's license pursuant to administrative proceedings did not constitute former punishment foreclosing prosecution for driving under the influence. Jackson v. State, 218 Ga. App. 677, 462 S.E.2d 802, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 846 (1995), cert. denied, No. S96C0146, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 313 (Ga. Jan. 19, 1996).

Suspension of a driver's license at an administrative hearing is not punishment, nor is the hearing a prosecution for the purposes of double jeopardy. Kirkpatrick v. State, 219 Ga. App. 307, 464 S.E.2d 882, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 1024 (1995).

Forfeiture proceedings not a bar to prosecution. — Double jeopardy did not attach to bar prosecution of a defendant on state drug charges following federal civil forfeiture proceedings because the defendant's failure to contest the forfeiture meant the defendant was not placed in jeopardy in those proceedings and, also, Georgia constitutional and statutory provisions did not bar the prosecution because they apply only to criminal proceedings, not civil proceedings. Waye v. State, 219 Ga. App. 22, 464 S.E.2d 19, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 930 (1995), cert. denied, No. S96C0367, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 323 (Ga. Feb. 2, 1996); Lundy v. State, 226 Ga. App. 197, 482 S.E.2d 516, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 282 (1997).

The forfeiture proceeding under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49 is legitimately a civil sanction and does not constitute punishment for purposes of double jeopardy. Murphy v. State, 267 Ga. 120, 475 S.E.2d 907, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 712 (1996); Rojas v. State, 226 Ga. App. 688, 487 S.E.2d 455, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 744 (1997), cert. denied, No. S97C1646, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 971 (Ga. Oct. 31, 1997); Cuellar v. State, 230 Ga. App. 203, 496 S.E.2d 282, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 102 (1998).

Indictment as recidivist. — A defendant's complaint that the defendant's indictment as a recidivist violated the double jeopardy clause was patently without merit. McCoy v. Newsome, 953 F.2d 1252, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 1108 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 504 U.S. 944, 112 S. Ct. 2283, 119 L. Ed. 2d 208, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 3196 (1992).

Reprosecution on substantive count after acquittal on conspiracy count not barred. — Reprosecution of a defendant on a substantive count alleging violation of the federal civil rights law, after the defendant's acquittal on a conspiracy count, was not a successive prosecution barred by double jeopardy but rather, a mere continuation of the initial prosecution, and the second prosecution on the substantive count therefore did not implicate the double jeopardy clause. United States v. Farmer, 923 F.2d 1557, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 2706 (11th Cir. 1991).

Resolving reasonable doubts. — Reasonable doubts must be resolved in favor of the accused in double jeopardy cases. United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 11545 (5th Cir. 1978).

Waiver of protection. — The second provision of U.S. Const., amend. 5 "nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb," is a personal privilege which may be waived. Barkman v. Sanford, 162 F.2d 592, 1947 U.S. App. LEXIS 2149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 332 U.S. 816, 68 S. Ct. 155, 92 L. Ed. 393, 1947 U.S. LEXIS 1658 (1947).

No jeopardy unless court has jurisdiction. — Before a person can be said to have been put in jeopardy of life or limb the court in which the person was acquitted or convicted must have had jurisdiction to try the person for the offense charged. Stephens v. Zant, 631 F.2d 397, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11918 (5th Cir. 1980), modified, 648 F.2d 446, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 10705 (5th Cir. 1981), rev'd, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 79 (1983).

A person is not put in jeopardy unless the court in which the person was tried the first time had jurisdiction to try the person for the charge the person now seeks to avoid. Potts v. Zant, 575 F. Supp. 374, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20217 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 526, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 22119 (11th Cir. 1984).

An acquittal before a court having no jurisdiction is absolutely void, and therefore no bar to subsequent indictment and trial in a court which has jurisdiction of the offense. Stephens v. Zant, 631 F.2d 397, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11918 (5th Cir. 1980), modified, 648 F.2d 446, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 10705 (5th Cir. 1981), rev'd, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 79 (1983).

Failure to establish venue does not bar re-trial in a court where venue is proper and proven. Kimmel v. State, 261 Ga. 332, 404 S.E.2d 436, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 251 (1991).

"Jeopardy," in its constitutional and common law sense, has a strict application to criminal prosecutions only. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 783 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 90 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 1857 (1970).

Only actions intended to authorize criminal punishment, as distinguished from remedial actions, subject the defendant to jeopardy. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 783 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 90 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 1857 (1970).

Two proceedings not necessary for jeopardy to attach twice. — While the idea of double jeopardy normally arises from an accused's involvement in two proceedings, it is not necessary that there be two proceedings before jeopardy can attach twice. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Pendency of a former indictment for same ground. — The pendency of a former indictment for the same offense does not provide a ground for a plea of double jeopardy because even if an accused has been arraigned and has entered a plea, the accused is not placed in jeopardy until a jury is impanelled and sworn. Teal v. State, 203 Ga. App. 440, 417 S.E.2d 666, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 445 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0795, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 413 (Ga. May 8, 1992).

The pendency of a prior indictment for the same offense based on the same facts for which the defendant was arraigned and entered a plea did not place the defendant in jeopardy. The defendant did not face a repeated prosecution simply because the defendant was tried on a subsequent indictment. Hubbard v. State, 225 Ga. App. 154, 483 S.E.2d 115, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 145 (1997).

Use of facts underlying dismissed indictment to charge another offense. — If a prior indictment is dismissed, the government is not barred from using the underlying facts in that offense as the basis for a charge that the defendant committed a different offense. United States v. Nixon, 634 F.2d 306, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20934 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 828, 102 S. Ct. 120, 70 L. Ed. 2d 103, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3238 (1981).

Use of same witnesses and evidence at second trial not double jeopardy. — A defendant is not placed in double jeopardy just because the same witnesses testify in the second trial and much of the same evidence is introduced. United States v. Dunbar, 591 F.2d 1190, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15937 (5th Cir. 1979).

Bifurcated trial of case in which death penalty may be imposed. — Double jeopardy clause does not prohibit the bifurcated trial of a case in which the death penalty may be imposed for the reason that although such a trial is divided into two stages, it is but one trial.

Peek v. State, 239 Ga. 422, 238 S.E.2d 12, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1195 (1977), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 882, 99 S. Ct. 219, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978).

With respect to cumulative sentences imposed in single trial, the double jeopardy clause does no more than prevent the sentencing court from prescribing greater punishment than the Legislature intended. United States v. Eley, 723 F.2d 1522, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25990 (11th Cir. 1984).

No violation where act results in injury to two or more persons. — Upon defendant's conviction of three counts of homicide by vehicle (O.C.G.A. § 40-6-393) through a violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391, driving under the influence, it was not a violation of double jeopardy to sentence defendant to 15 years for each of the homicide counts. Cox v. State, 243 Ga. App. 668, 533 S.E.2d 435, 2000 Ga. App. LEXIS 464 (2000), cert. denied, No. S00C1407, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 792 (Ga. Oct. 20, 2000).

Failure to file written plea does not defeat right. — The failure to file a written plea of former jeopardy prior to trial will not defeat an accused's right to be free of multiple convictions for the criminal act. McClure v. State, 179 Ga. App. 245, 345 S.E.2d 922, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2608 (1986); Dotson v. State, 213 Ga. App. 7, 443 S.E.2d 650, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 449 (1994).

Right may be waived by failure to file written plea. — The procedural bar against double jeopardy can, at least in some circumstances, be waived by failure to assert it in writing prior to trial. McClure v. State, 179 Ga. App. 245, 345 S.E.2d 922, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2608 (1986).

Double jeopardy clause, by its own terms, applies to retrial for same offense. Neal v. State, 159 Ga. App. 450, 283 S.E.2d 671, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2642 (1981).

Trial court's declaration of a mistrial as to the malice murder count was a nullity because the jury's verdict had already been returned before the mistrial was declared and, thus, the jury's verdict precluded a retrial on the malice murder count under the double jeopardy clause.

Medina v. State, 309 Ga. 432, 844 S.E.2d 767, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 453 (2020).

First conviction set aside because of error. — The double jeopardy clause's general prohibition against successive prosecutions does not prevent the government from retrying a defendant who succeeds in getting the first conviction set aside because of some error in the proceedings leading to conviction. Allen v. State, 262 Ga. 240, 416 S.E.2d 290, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 427 (1992).

After the defendant's conviction for possession of cocaine was reversed due to a finding that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance for failing to object to the admission of cocaine without establishing an adequate chain of custody, and for failing to preserve objections to the jury instructions, retrial was not barred by the double jeopardy clause of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII and U.S. Const., amend. 5, as the evidence offered by the state and admitted by the trial court — whether erroneous or not — would have been sufficient to sustain a guilty verdict against the defendant. Wilson v. State, 271 Ga. App. 359, 609 S.E.2d 703, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 41 (2005).

Double jeopardy clause in U. S. Const., amend. 5 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII did not bar a second trial on the same charges because the defendant's motion for new trial was granted due to an erroneous evidentiary ruling. State v. Caffee, 291 Ga. 31, 728 S.E.2d 171, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 344 (2012).

Acquittal on earlier charge resolves "identity" factor. — Where the defendant's identity as the perpetrator of two separate offenses of rape was in dispute, the jury's acquittal of the defendant on the earlier charge resolved the "identity" factor in the defendant's favor and the state could not relitigate the issue in the later trial. Lucas v. State, 178 Ga. App. 150, 342 S.E.2d 377, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 1629 (1986).

Prosecution of prior offense after conviction of subsequent offense not barred. — The defendant was not placed in double jeopardy by a second prosecution for driving under the influence, even though the second incident occurred prior to the filing of the first accusation upon which the defendant was convicted and the state failed to allege the date of the first offense, since the pending charge stemmed from a different incident than the first. Grogan v. State, 179 Ga. App. 300, 346 S.E.2d 378, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 1907 (1986).

Submission of same issue in successive trials. — Because, in the first trial, the trial court never dismissed the lesser-included offense but merely agreed not to submit it to the first jury as a separate count, under Georgia law the defendant was at risk, both in the first and second trials, of being convicted of violating the defendant's oath as a public officer, a lesser-included offense of the bribery count. The double jeopardy clause of the fifth amendment did not prohibit submission of that issue to the second jury, following a hung jury in the first trial. Nave v. Helms, 845 F.2d 963, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6914 (11th Cir. 1988).

Victim of felony dying after conviction. — If victim of felony dies as a result of that felony after defendant has already been convicted of the felony, double jeopardy considerations do not prevent subsequent prosecution for felony-murder. Bell v. State, 249 Ga. 644, 292 S.E.2d 402, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 871 (1982).

Dismissal of a rule nisi, without prejudice, by the court in a parole revocation case where the state is not ready to proceed is, in effect, dismissal of the court's own show-cause order to appellant, and not a ruling on the merits of the probation revocation; and, absent abuse, such action does not subject a parolee to double jeopardy nor denial of due process of law. Brooks v. State, 162 Ga. App. 485, 292 S.E.2d 89, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2193 (1982).

Dismissal of counts improper even if multiplicitous. — Trial court erred by dismissing 47 counts of defendant's indictment at the pretrial stage of the proceedings because the substantive bar on double jeopardy applied only after a defendant was found guilty, and therefore, it did not warrant the pretrial dismissal of the child pornography charges against the defendant, even if those charges were multiplicitous. Williams v. State, 307 Ga. 778, 838 S.E.2d 235, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 50 (2020).

Double jeopardy clause applies to juvenile proceedings. United States v. Whitney, 649 F.2d 296, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 11915 (5th Cir. 1981); In re J.B.W., 230 Ga. App. 673, 497 S.E.2d 1, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 27 (1998).

Extension of juvenile disposition order. — Provision permitting the juvenile court to extend an order of disposition for two years does not violate constitutional prohibitions against double jeopardy since it operates to further the accomplishment of the juvenile's treatment and rehabilitation. In re T.B., 268 Ga. 149, 486 S.E.2d 177, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 361 (1997).

Improper revocation of bond. — Incarceration of the defendant resulting from the improper revocation of the defendant's bond was not a bar to prosecution for vehicular homicide and related offenses. Shaw v. State, 225 Ga. App. 193, 483 S.E.2d 646, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 306 (1997), cert. denied, No. S97C1006, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 530 (Ga. June 6, 1997).

Parole and probation revocation proceedings do not constitute a stage of a criminal prosecution. United States v. Whitney, 649 F.2d 296, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 11915 (5th Cir. 1981).

Permitting defendant to be prosecuted in successive actions for probation revocation based on violations that were part of the same conduct did not violate double jeopardy. Perry v. State, 213 Ga. App. 220, 444 S.E.2d 150, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 507 (1994).

Double jeopardy clause is not applicable to parole or probation revocation proceedings. United States v. Whitney, 649 F.2d 296, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 11915 (5th Cir. 1981).

Double jeopardy clause does not bar consideration of certain acts in probation revocation proceedings where those acts formed the basis of a previous parole revocation. United States v. Whitney, 649 F.2d 296, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 11915 (5th Cir. 1981).

Use of a crime as a ground for revocation of probation. — Double jeopardy protection does not preclude the use of a crime, for which a probationer has been acquitted by a jury, as a ground for revocation of probation. Johnson v. State, 240 Ga. 526, 242 S.E.2d 53, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 697, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 881, 99 S. Ct. 221, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 3249 (1978).

Double jeopardy protections inapplicable to cases of contempt. — Constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy is inapplicable to cases of contempt. Sumbry v. Land, 127 Ga. App. 786, 195 S.E.2d 228, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1022 (1972), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1079, 94 S. Ct. 598, 38 L. Ed. 2d 486, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 1717 (1973).

Double jeopardy protections applicable to courts martial. — The provision of U.S. Const., amend. 5, "nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb", is applicable to courts martial. The immediately preceding exception of "cases arising in the land or naval forces" from the requirement of an indictment, abundantly shows that such cases were in contemplation but not excepted from the other provisions. Sanford v. Robbins, 115 F.2d 435, 1940 U.S. App. LEXIS 2894 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 312 U.S. 697, 61 S. Ct. 737, 85 L. Ed. 1132, 1941 U.S. LEXIS 862 (1941).

Former conviction is a defense in a court-martial. — In a court-martial, former conviction is a defense to be heard in the exercise of jurisdiction, and not a fact destroying jurisdiction. The defense must be claimed and is waived by not asserting it. When claimed and adversely determined, there is an adjudication which if not reviewed is conclusive. Sanford v. Robbins, 115 F.2d 435, 1940 U.S. App. LEXIS 2894 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 312 U.S. 697, 61 S. Ct. 737, 85 L. Ed. 1132, 1941 U.S. LEXIS 862 (1941).

No jeopardy protection as to character and fitness investigation for bar examination. — The investigation of the character and fitness of an applicant to take a bar examination is not a criminal proceeding, and the principle of double jeopardy has no application to such investigation. Therefore, the dismissal of an investigation, without action, when it is learned that an individual has failed to pass an examination, does not preclude a new investigation into an incident on the individual reapplication to take the examination. Gardner v. Gwinnett Circuit Bar Ass'n, 241 Ga. 614, 247 S.E.2d 64, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1060 (1978).

Disciplinary proceedings of State Bar of Georgia do not place accused in jeopardy. — The accused in a disciplinary proceeding by the State Bar of Georgia is not placed in jeopardy of life or liberty since the power of the grievance tribunal is limited to making findings of fact and recommendations to the court as to appropriate sanctions, and the power of the court is limited to reprimanding, suspending or disbaring. A matter is criminal only if imprisonment or the assessment of a fine may follow conviction. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 783 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 90 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 1857 (1970).

No double jeopardy can arise out of a decision in an extradition proceeding. Broughton v. Griffin, 244 Ga. 365, 260 S.E.2d 75, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1236 (1979).

Effect of grant of writ of habeas corpus in extradition proceedings. — While the grant of a writ of habeas corpus is generally to be given res judicata effect in a subsequent habeas proceeding based on the same issues of law and fact, where a previous writ of habeas corpus in an extradition proceeding was granted because of the insufficiency of the supporting documents or other technical defects which may be subsequently corrected, the prior judgment granting the writ of habeas corpus will not be res judicata in a subsequent extradition demand brought to avoid the technical objections fatal to the first proceeding. Broughton v. Griffin, 244 Ga. 367, 260 S.E.2d 75 (1979).

Use in aggravated assault case of prior incident found not to involve criminal intent constituted double jeopardy. — Introduction of evidence of a previous incident in which the defendant had attacked someone but had been found not guilty of aggravated assault by reason of insanity, admitted as a similar transaction solely to prove the defendant's motive, bent of mind, plan, scheme, course of conduct or other matters dependent on a person's state of mind, permitted the jury to determine that the defendant had made the first attack with criminal intent although the defendant had already been found by a jury to have acted without criminal intent at that time. Accordingly, the defendant was subjected to double jeopardy when that issue was permitted to be retried, and it could not be said beyond a reasonable doubt that the error did not contribute to the jury's verdict of guilty. Riley v. State, 181 Ga. App. 667, 353 S.E.2d 598, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2566 (1987).

Transfer to superior court following juvenile adjudication violates double jeopardy prohibition. — The attempt to transfer a juvenile to superior court after an adjudicatory hearing violates O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) and places the juvenile in jeopardy twice, in violation of the fifth and fourteenth amendments. In re T.E.D., 169 Ga. App. 401, 312 S.E.2d 864, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 2768 (1984).

Increase in amount of child-support payments constitutional. — Court's increase in the amount of the child-support payments pursuant to the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 42-8-34 does not constitute double punishment or jeopardy. Hudson v. State, 248 Ga. 397, 283 S.E.2d 271, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 1016 (1981).

When plea of former conviction good against motion to dismiss. — A plea of former conviction is good as against demurrer (now motion to dismiss) only when it sets out the record of the former trial and conviction and judgment, and such a state of facts as will show that the former conviction was for the same offense for which the defendant is about to be arraigned. Gresham v. State, 52 Ga. App. 77, 182 S.E. 416, 1935 Ga. App. LEXIS 45 (1935).

Where double jeopardy raised in motion in arrest of judgment. — A motion in arrest of judgment, being narrow and restricted in its province, is limited to the face of the pleadings in determining whether a violation of the constitutional double jeopardy provisions is presented by the record. Hall v. State, 202 Ga. 42, 42 S.E.2d 130, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 360 (1947).

Determination as to frivolousness of double jeopardy motion. — The district courts, in any denial of a double jeopardy motion, should make written findings determining whether the motion is frivolous or nonfrivolous, and if the claim is found to be frivolous, the filing of a notice of appeal by the defendant shall not divest the district court of jurisdiction over the case. United States v. Dunbar, 611 F.2d 985, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 21035 (5th Cir. 1980).

Proof of plea of former acquittal or conviction. — In all pleas of former acquittal or conviction, proof of the plea has to consist partly of matter of record and partly not of record. The identity of the two cases is the part of the plea which it is the peculiar business of the evidence, which is not of record, to make out. Gower v. State, 71 Ga. App. 127, 30 S.E.2d 298, 1944 Ga. App. LEXIS 294 (1944).

Burden of proof as to double jeopardy motion. — In considering a double jeopardy motion, the district court must determine whether a defendant has tendered a prima facie nonfrivolous double jeopardy claim before shifting the burden of persuasion to the government. United States v. Dunbar, 611 F.2d 985, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 21035 (5th Cir. 1980); United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20035 (5th Cir. 1981).

Standard of proof as to frivolousness. — To satisfy the test of frivolousness it is essential to find beyond doubt and under any arguable construction, both in law and in fact of the substance of the plaintiff's claim that he would not be entitled to relief. United States v. Bizzard, 493 F. Supp. 1084, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12781 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 674 F.2d 1382, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19491 (11th Cir. 1982).

Findings as to frivolousness. — The federal district courts, in any denial of a double jeopardy motion, should make written findings determining whether the motion is frivolous or nonfrivolous. If the claim is found to be frivolous, the filing of a notice of appeal by the defendant shall not divest the district court of jurisdiction over the case. If nonfrivolous the trial cannot proceed until a determination is made of the merits of an appeal. United States v. Bizzard, 493 F. Supp. 1084, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12781 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 674 F.2d 1382, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19491 (11th Cir. 1982).

Timely filed plea of double jeopardy is directly appealable without resort to the interlocutory appeal procedures set forth in O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34. Rogers v. State, 166 Ga. App. 299, 304 S.E.2d 108, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2143 (1983).

Jury instructions as constructive amendment to indictment. — Jury instructions that altered an essential element of the offense of conspiracy to rob, and thereby broadened the possible bases for conviction by allowing the jury to convict the defendant if the defendant conspired with anyone, when the indictment alleged the defendant conspired solely with a named individual, constituted a constructive amendment of the indictment and therefore violated the defendant's Fifth Amendment right to be charged by grand jury indictment. United States v. Keller, 916 F.2d 628, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 19268 (11th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 499 U.S. 978, 111 S. Ct. 1628, 113 L. Ed. 2d 724, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 2382 (1991).

Trial court's direction to jury to continue deliberating after return of verdict not double jeopardy. — Georgia does not recognize an inconsistent verdict rule which would permit a defendant to challenge the factual findings underlying a guilty verdict on one count as inconsistent with the findings underlying a not guilty verdict on a different count. A conviction on one count and an acquittal on another related count may reflect a compromise or lenity by the jury rather than inconsistent factual conclusions and Georgia courts will generally not look behind the jury's decision to convict on certain counts and acquit on certain counts. Furthermore, a trial court's request that a jury continue deliberations after the jury failed to comply with the court's instructions concerning a mutually exclusive verdict was proper. Easley v. State, 262 Ga. App. 144, 584 S.E.2d 629, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 800 (2003), cert. denied, No.

S03C1616, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 904 (Ga. Oct. 20, 2003).

Provisions of the Tort Reform Act, O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1, relating to punitive damages, violated the due process and equal protection clauses of the federal and state constitutions, violated the excessive fines provisions of both constitutions, and violated the double jeopardy provision of the Fifth Amendment to the federal constitution. McBride v. GMC, 737 F. Supp. 1563, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5993 (M.D. Ga. 1990).

Implied acquittal barred rewritten verdict. — Because a jury's verdict found the defendant "guilty" of only the "intent" to traffic in narcotics, a rewritten verdict for "attempt" was void for double jeopardy since the original verdict amounted to an acquittal. Douglas v. State, 206 Ga. App. 740, 426 S.E.2d 628, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1761 (1992).

Guilty plea based on single incident waived double jeopardy challenge. — Because defendant pled guilty to four misdemeanor counts of public indecency based on one lewd act witnessed by several school children, and willingly and knowingly accepted the specified sentences as to the four counts, the defendant waived any claim before the habeas court that there was in fact only one act and that the resulting sentences were void on double jeopardy grounds. Turner v. State, 284 Ga. 494, 668 S.E.2d 692, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 844 (2008), overruled in part, Nazario v. State, 293 Ga. 480, 746 S.E.2d 109, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 611 (2013).

Trial court erred in granting the defendant's plea in bar because double jeopardy did not bar a second trial on the same charges since the retrial was granted due to an erroneous evidentiary ruling; the order granting a new trial did not find the evidence was legally insufficient to sustain the verdict, but instead, the second trial judge granted the new trial based on the original trial court's error in admitting an exhibit to prove that defendant had a prior felony conviction after the defendant offered to stipulate that the defendant was a convicted felon. State v. Caffee, 291 Ga. 31, 728 S.E.2d 171, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 344 (2012).

2. Attachment of Jeopardy

Threshold question is attachment of jeopardy. — The threshold question to be addressed in any case involving double jeopardy is whether jeopardy has attached to the defendant during the proceedings which the defendant contends preclude further prosecution. Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 949 (1980).

Where the Georgia Supreme Court had previously ruled that evidence seized from defendant's former car and apartment had to be suppressed, the trial court was not precluded on double jeopardy grounds from re-hearing the issue of the admissibility of the blood evidence seized from these places pursuant to fresh search warrants. As defendant had never been put to trial, jeopardy had not attached. State v. Lejeune, 277 Ga. 749, 594 S.E.2d 637, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 270, cert. denied, 543 U.S. 861, 125 S. Ct. 187, 160 L. Ed. 2d 103, 2004 U.S. LEXIS 6458 (2004).

Before any double jeopardy considerations arise, one must have been placed in jeopardy. United States v. Pitts, 569 F.2d 343, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 12192 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 959, 98 S. Ct. 3076, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1125, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2219 (1978).

Defendant is placed in constitutional jeopardy if, in a court of competent jurisdiction with a sufficient indictment, the defendant has been arraigned, has pled, and a jury has been impaneled and sworn. State v. Martin, 173 Ga. App. 370, 326 S.E.2d 558, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 1550 (1985).

No jeopardy where jurisdiction lacking. — Because the defendant's original trial was before a court that lacked jurisdiction the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's plea of former jeopardy. Jackett v. State, 209 Ga. App. 112, 432 S.E.2d 586, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 759 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1502, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 991 (Ga. Oct. 8, 1993).

After a defendant was granted a directed verdict on the basis that the state failed to prove venue in a criminal prosecution for driving under the influence per se, retrial was not barred under U.S.

Const., amend. 5 and O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8 because, while venue had to be laid in the county in which the crime was allegedly committed under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. VI and O.C.G.A. § 17-2-2 and venue was a jurisdictional fact, failure to prove venue was a procedural error that implied nothing as to defendant's guilt or innocence. Hudson v. State, 296 Ga. App. 758, 675 S.E.2d 603, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 322 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1163, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 413 (Ga. June 30, 2009), cert. denied, 558 U.S. 1076, 130 S. Ct. 799, 175 L. Ed. 2d 559, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 8848 (2009).

No jeopardy where prior judgment was void. — Because a uniform traffic citation was deliberately withheld from filing, and the state did not authorize or participate in the prosecution of the case, the probate court lacked authority to accept defendant's plea to the proposed charge and impose a fine, making its resulting judgment void; hence, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's plea in bar based on double jeopardy, since the probate court's void judgment could not serve as the basis for barring the subsequent indictment and prosecution of defendant in the superior court. Roberts v. State, 280 Ga. App. 672, 634 S.E.2d 790, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 787 (2006), cert. denied, No. S06C2103, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 846 (Ga. Oct. 16, 2006).

Retrial after not guilty finding returned by an unsworn jury was not barred by the double jeopardy principles under both the U.S. and Georgia Constitutions, as said jury lacked any authority to pass upon any of the issues at trial, and hence, could not make any determinations whatsoever as to the defendant's guilt or innocence. Spencer v. State, 281 Ga. 533, 640 S.E.2d 267, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 48, cert. denied, 551 U.S. 1103, 127 S. Ct. 2914, 168 L. Ed. 2d 243, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 6835 (2007).

Trial in county other than where crime occurred. — If a defendant is tried in one county in a court having jurisdiction of the offense, but the crime occurred in another county, no jeopardy attaches. Schiefelbein v. State, 258 Ga.

When jeopardy attaches in jury trial. — For a jury trial, jeopardy attaches when that body is empaneled and sworn. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 783 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 90 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 1857 (1970); Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975); White v. State, 143 Ga. App. 315, 238 S.E.2d 247, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2302 (1977); United States v. Pitts, 569 F.2d 343, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 12192 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 959, 98 S. Ct. 3076, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1125, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2219 (1978); Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 949 (1980); United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20035 (5th Cir. 1981).

Defendants were not placed in jeopardy before the trial court granted the state's Batson challenge and dismissed a jury that was selected to try them on charges of armed robbery and possession of a firearm during the commission of a crime because the jury was never empaneled and sworn, and the trial court did not err when it denied defendants' plea in bar and proceeded with trial. Garlington v. State, 268 Ga. App. 264, 601 S.E.2d 793, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 887 (2004), cert. denied sub nom. Harrison v. State, No. S04C1874, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 864 (Ga. Sept. 27, 2004).

When jeopardy attaches in bench trial. — For a bench trial, jeopardy attaches when the judge begins to receive evidence. White v. State, 143 Ga. App. 315, 238 S.E.2d 247, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2302 (1977); United States v. Pitts, 569 F.2d 343, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 12192 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 959, 98 S. Ct. 3076, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1125, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2219 (1978); Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 949 (1980).

When first jeopardy is complete. — First jeopardy is complete on the swearing of a jury or on the submission of evidence if the trial is stopped for insufficient cause. Sanford v. Robbins, 115 F.2d 435, 1940 U.S. App. LEXIS 2894 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 312 U.S. 697, 61 S. Ct. 737, 85 L. Ed. 1132, 1941 U.S. LEXIS 862 (1941).

Amendment of accusation. — Where amendment of accusation was made in open court prior to the selection of the jury, there was no violation of double jeopardy even though the defendant was not served with the amended accusation until after the jury was selected. Reed v. State, 205 Ga. App. 209, 422 S.E.2d 15, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1102 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C1446, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 865 (Ga. Oct. 8, 1992).

Jeopardy does not attach at a probation revocation hearing so as to invoke the double jeopardy clause. Smith v. State, 171 Ga. App. 279, 319 S.E.2d 113, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 2973 (1984).

Admission of crimes at juvenile transfer hearing. — Jeopardy did not attach so as to preclude further proceedings against a juvenile for crimes he admitted at a transfer hearing, where the juvenile court accepted the admission for the limited purpose of determining whether the case should be transferred to superior court. In re M.E.J., 260 Ga. 805, 401 S.E.2d 254, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 68 (1991).

Federal civil forfeiture actions. — Double jeopardy does not apply in criminal trial where federal civil forfeiture judgment was entered after criminal convictions because the double jeopardy clause reaches only subsequent punishments, not the initial punishment imposed for the criminal act. Durfee v. State, 221 Ga. App. 211, 471 S.E.2d 32, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 433 (1996).

Carjacking and robbery. — Defendant's conviction of hijacking a motor vehicle and armed robbery were properly entered, despite defendant's contention that the state used the same facts to establish both offenses, and that defendant should have only been convicted of and sentenced for one of the offenses, as: (1) hijacking a motor vehicle was considered a separate offense and did not merge with any other offense; (2) O.C.G.A.

§ 16-5-44.1 superseded the double jeopardy provisions of O.C.G.A. § 16-1-7 in motor vehicle hijacking cases; (3) O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1(d) did not violate the prohibition against double jeopardy, since the double jeopardy clause of the Georgia Constitution did not prohibit additional punishment for a separate offense which the legislature deemed to warrant separate sanction; and (4) defendant failed to offer any evidence in support of defendant's allegation that O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1(d) otherwise violated defendant's double jeopardy rights. Holman v. State, 272 Ga. App. 890, 614 S.E.2d 124, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 389 (2005), cert. denied, No. S05C1295, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 606 (Ga. Sept. 19, 2005).

Application of modified merger rule. — Modified merger rule, which speaks to the validity of a verdict on a charge of felony murder when the jury also finds the accused guilty of voluntary manslaughter, is effective at the time the jury renders the jury's verdict and is not destroyed by the granting of a motion for new trial on the voluntary manslaughter charge; likewise, the presence or absence of a separate charge of aggravated assault in the indictment has no effect on a court's application of the modified merger rule because while the existence of a separate aggravated assault charge must be carefully considered in applying the rule and making determinations as to proper sentencing, its existence does not render the rule inapplicable. Williams v. State, 288 Ga. 7, 700 S.E.2d 564, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 626 (2010).

There is no meaningful distinction between an implicit acquittal based on a guilty verdict for a lesser included offense and the vacation of a verdict under the modified merger rule because in both cases the accused is placed in jeopardy, the jury is given a full opportunity to return a verdict on the greater charge, and the verdict rendered results in no conviction being entered; in both cases there can be no appeal because the accused's jeopardy has ended, and in both cases double jeopardy prevents retrial. Williams v. State, 288 Ga. 7, 700 S.E.2d 564, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 626 (2010).

3. Prosecution by More Than One Sovereign

When multiple prosecution not prohibited. — Double jeopardy provisions of the Constitution do not prohibit multiple prosecution for the same act if that act constituted an offense against more than one sovereign. Dorsey v. State, 237 Ga. 876, 230 S.E.2d 307, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1432 (1976).

As the defendant's theft by taking an automobile occurred in both Georgia and Kentucky, the fact that the defendant was prosecuted in Kentucky did not bar Georgia from also prosecuting the defendant under the dual sovereignty doctrine of the double jeopardy clause; further, O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8(c) was inapplicable because there was not a federal prosecution for the same crime. Jackson v. State, 284 Ga. 826, 672 S.E.2d 640, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2009).

Double jeopardy provision of U.S. Const., amend. 5 does not bar federal prosecution despite a previous conviction or acquittal in the state courts based on the same act. Jolley v. United States, 232 F.2d 83, 1956 U.S. App. LEXIS 3006 (5th Cir. 1956).

An act denounced as a crime by both national and state sovereignties may be punished by each without violation of the double jeopardy provision. Screws v. United States, 325 U.S. 91, 65 S. Ct. 1031, 89 L. Ed. 1495, 1945 U.S. LEXIS 2096 (1945).

Person may not be convicted by both the state and a municipality for the same crime. — The test for determining if there is a fatal identity between the crime and the ordinance is whether the ordinance contains an ingredient or element, essential to the city's peace but not essential to the state offense, or if the offense created by the ordinance lacks some element essential to the state crime. Barrett v. State, 123 Ga. App. 210, 180 S.E.2d 271, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 1165 (1971).

Nor may same state prosecute both a felony and lesser included misdemeanor. — Prosecutions of the same defendant in different courts of the same state, one prosecution being for a felony and the other being for a misdemeanor which was included in the felony offense, must be viewed as the acts of a single sovereign under the double jeopardy clause. Brock v. State, 146 Ga. App. 78, 245 S.E.2d 442, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 2256 (1978).

Prosecution on state and federal charges of murder and kidnapping held proper. — Since the facts necessary to prove the federal charges of kidnapping and interstate travel with intent to commit murder for extortion are different from the facts necessary to prove the Georgia charges of murder and aggravated assault, there was no violation of Georgia's statutes barring multiple prosecutions, O.C.G.A. §§ 16-1-7, 16-1-8, nor the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy, when the defendants were prosecuted in federal and state courts for all of the above offenses. Satterfield v. State, 256 Ga. 593, 351 S.E.2d 625, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 539 (1987).

Multi-county crime spree. — Where a criminal defendant goes on a multi-county crime spree, the double jeopardy clause does not preclude successive prosecutions in separate counties for separate crimes arising out of a single criminal episode — even if they have factual elements in common — where they are not the "same offense" as a matter of fact or of law. Potts v. State, 261 Ga. 716, 410 S.E.2d 89, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 983 (1991), cert. denied, 505 U.S. 1224, 112 S. Ct. 3040, 120 L. Ed. 2d 908, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 4662 (1992).

Prosecution of lesser included offense in different county. — A prosecution for a lesser included offense, which includes the underlying felony in a felony murder case, after a conviction for the greater offense in a different county violates O.C.G.A. § 16-1-6, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, and the fifth and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. Perkinson v. State, 273 Ga. 491, 542 S.E.2d 92, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 101 (2001).

4. Determination as to Whether Same Offenses are Involved

a. In General

Prohibition against double jeopardy forbids double punishment for what is the same offense, not eo nomine, but the same transaction. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Double jeopardy clause's prohibition of multiple punishments for the same offense is not violated as long as the "same evidence" test is satisfied. Where the same act or transaction constitutes a violation of two distinct statutory provisions, the test to be applied to determine whether there are two offenses or only one, is whether each provision requires proof of a fact which the other does not. Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 11780 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 590 (1978).

To support a claim of double jeopardy, a defendant must show that the two offenses charged are the same in law and fact. United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20035 (5th Cir. 1981); United States v. Henry, 661 F.2d 894, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 16046 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 992, 102 S. Ct. 1619, 71 L. Ed. 2d 853, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 1179 (1982).

Doctrine of collateral estoppel is a part of U.S. Const., amend. 5's guarantee against double jeopardy. Clark v. State, 144 Ga. App. 69, 240 S.E.2d 270, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2588 (1977).

Collateral estoppel means that when an issue of ultimate fact has once been determined by a valid and final judgment, the issue cannot again be litigated between the same parties in a future lawsuit. In a criminal case it is a protection embodied in the Fifth Amendment guarantee against double jeopardy. United States v. Mulherin, 710 F.2d 731, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25429 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 964, 104 S. Ct. 402, 78 L. Ed. 2d 343, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 2311 (1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1034, 104 S. Ct. 1305, 79 L. Ed. 2d 703, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 1214 (1984).

Concept of collateral estoppel is distinct from double jeopardy in the sense that the traditional bar of double jeopardy prohibits the prosecution of the crime itself, whereas collateral estoppel, in a more modest fashion, simply forbids the government from relitigating certain facts in order to establish the fact of the crime. United States v. Mulherin, 710 F.2d 731, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25429 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 964, 104 S. Ct. 402, 78 L. Ed. 2d 343, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 2311 (1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1034, 104 S. Ct. 1305, 79 L. Ed. 2d 703, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 1214 (1984).

Second prosecution for the same offense occurs when the state attempts to relitigate issues of fact necessarily determined in a defendant's favor at a prior trial. Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 11780 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 590 (1978).

Test of whether collateral estoppel bars later prosecution is whether the jury could not have rationally based its verdict on any other issue than the one the defendants seek to foreclose. That the jury may have based its verdict on this issue is not enough; the defendant has the burden to show that an issue was necessarily determined in the defendant's favor in the former trial. United States v. Mulherin, 710 F.2d 731, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25429 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 964, 104 S. Ct. 402, 78 L. Ed. 2d 343, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 2311 (1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1034, 104 S. Ct. 1305, 79 L. Ed. 2d 703, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 1214 (1984).

Although collateral estoppel is a corollary of the double jeopardy clause, a defendant may not invoke collateral estoppel unless the facts sought to be foreclosed were determined in the defendant's favor in the prior trial. Humphrey v. United States, 888 F.2d 1546, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 17655 (11th Cir. 1989).

Even assuming arguendo that the defendant's position that O.C.G.A. § 40-6-395 set out two distinct offenses, wilful failure to stop and fleeing and eluding a police officer, the defendant was tried, first in a bench trial and again on remand after an appeal, on an accusation charging the defendant with fleeing and eluding an officer and was found guilty and sentenced both times for fleeing and eluding; hence, because the defendant was not tried on the offense of wilful failure to stop, the defendant's contention that double jeopardy considerations prohibited a jury trial on that charge was moot. Harbuck v. State, 280 Ga. 775, 631 S.E.2d 351, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 401 (2006).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)*4. Determination as to Whether*Same Offenses are

Multiple convictions and punishments for single crime improper. — Appeals court agreed that because there was only one homicide victim, only one life sentence, and not three, could be imposed, because such improperly subjected the defendant to multiple convictions and punishments for one crime. Turner v. State, 281 Ga. 487, 640 S.E.2d 25, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 8 (2007).

Prosecution under more than one statute not barred where each requires element of proof which other does not. — The test is not whether the defendant has already been tried for the same act, but whether the defendant has been put in jeopardy for the same offense. A single act may be an offense against two statutes; and if each statute requires proof of an additional fact that the other does not, an acquittal or conviction under either statute does not exempt the defendant from prosecution and punishment under the other. Ballerini v. Aderholt, 44 F.2d 352, 1930 U.S. App. LEXIS 3368 (5th Cir. 1930); Brock v. State, 146 Ga. App. 78, 245 S.E.2d 442, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 2256 (1978); United States v. Dunbar, 591 F.2d 1190, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15937 (5th Cir. 1979); United States v. Cowart, 595 F.2d 1023, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 14503 (5th Cir. 1979); United States v. Caston, 615 F.2d 1111, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 18304 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 831, 101 S. Ct. 99, 66 L. Ed. 2d 36, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2760 (1980); Stephens v. Zant, 631 F.2d 397, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11918 (5th Cir. 1980), modified, 648 F.2d 446, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 10705 (5th Cir. 1981), rev'd, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 79 (1983); United States v. Tammaro, 636 F.2d 100, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20397 (5th Cir. 1981).

A defendant may properly be prosecuted under the general federal conspiracy statute and a specific conspiracy statute so long as each statute requires proof of an element not required by the other. United States v. Lanier, 920 F.2d 887, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 200 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 872, 112 S. Ct. 208, 116 L. Ed. 2d 166, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 5469 (1991).

Lesser or greater included offense is the same offense for double jeopardy purposes. Stephens v. Zant, 631 F.2d 397, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11918 (5th Cir. 1980), modified, 648 F.2d 446, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 10705 (5th Cir. 1981), rev'd, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 79 (1983).

By charging a lesser offense in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 16-1-6, the trial court did not permit the jury to convict defendant in a manner not alleged in the indictment in violation of defendant's due process rights. Rupnik v. State, 273 Ga. App. 34, 614 S.E.2d 153, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 392 (2005).

Reuse of elements for lesser included offenses. — A person who has been convicted of a crime having several elements included in it may not subsequently be tried for a lesser included offense, that is, an offense consisting solely of one or more of the elements of the crime for which the person has already been convicted. Ballerini v. Aderholt, 44 F.2d 352, 1930 U.S. App. LEXIS 3368 (5th Cir. 1930); State v. Burroughs, 246 Ga. 393, 271 S.E.2d 629, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1120 (1980).

Same transaction established. — Defendant's conviction of voluntary manslaughter under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-2 was improper, as the defendant was also convicted of felony murder under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-1(c) for the same transaction, and this would have subjected the defendant to multiple convictions and punishments for one crime, which would have placed the defendant in double jeopardy in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII and U.S. Const., amend. 5. Lawson v. State, 280 Ga. 881, 635 S.E.2d 134, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 567 (2006).

Acquittal on some offenses did not bar retrial on other offenses with dif- ferent elements. — Although a defendant was acquitted of charges relating to the beating death and kidnapping of a robbery victim in a first trial, the defendant was convicted of armed robbery and assault of the victim. On the defendant's retrial, granted due to the state's failure to prove venue in the first trial, the state was not barred from re-prosecuting the defendant for armed robbery and assault. Patmon v. State, 303 Ga. App. 151, 693 S.E.2d 120, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 297 (2010).

Conviction of lesser included offense bars subsequent trial on greater offense. State v. Burroughs, 246 Ga. 393, 271 S.E.2d 629, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1120 (1980).

In order for the rule that jeopardy for an offense ends after a jury convicts a defendant of a lesser offense to apply, there must be an unambiguous conviction of the lesser offense, and the trial court must have given the jury full opportunity to return a verdict on the greater charge. Potts v. State, 258 Ga. 430, 369 S.E.2d 746, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 326 (1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1068, 109 S. Ct. 1347, 103 L. Ed. 2d 815, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1333 (1989).

Conviction of lesser offense amounts to implicit acquittal of greater offense. — If a defendant is tried on more than one count, and the jury returned no verdict on the greater offense, but convicted on a lesser included offense, the defendant may not be retried for the greater offense after the conviction is overturned, because the jury had implicitly acquitted the defendant of that greater offense. Price v. Georgia, 398 U.S. 323, 90 S. Ct. 1757, 26 L. Ed. 2d 300, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 22 (1970).

State's re-prosecution of the defendant for felony murder was barred by double jeopardy after the jury found the defendant guilty of the voluntary manslaughter of the same victim because the jury was given a full opportunity to return a verdict on the felony murder charge, which the jury did; although no judgment of conviction or sentence was entered on the jury's verdict of guilt on the felony murder charge, the defendant was placed in jeopardy of conviction of that charge in the first trial and could not, consistent with the fifth amendment's double jeopardy clause, be placed at risk of conviction again. Williams v. State, 288 Ga. 7, 700 S.E.2d 564, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 626 (2010).

Reversal of conviction for greater offense does not bar retrial for that offense. — If there is a conviction of two crimes in a single prosecution, one of which is included in the other, and the defendant obtains a reversal of the major crime for lack of jurisdiction, the remaining conviction of the lesser crime does not bar a retrial on the major crime. In the event the defendant is then convicted on retrial for the major crime, an invalidation of the defendant's conviction of the lesser included offenses for the same conduct would be authorized in appropriate proceedings. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1072 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2621 (1977).

No merger absent conviction for greater offense. — No merger of greater and lesser included offenses when there is no conviction for the greater offense. Hill v. State, 207 Ga. App. 65, 426 S.E.2d 915, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 66 (1993).

Where second indictment may be proved under first, offenses are same for double jeopardy purposes. — In determining what is the same offense for the purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 5, the test is whether, if what is set out in the second indictment had been proved under the first, there could have been a conviction; when there could, the second cannot be maintained; when there could not, it can be. Bertsch v. Snook, 36 F.2d 155, 1929 U.S. App. LEXIS 2116 (5th Cir. 1929); Ballerini v. Aderholt, 44 F.2d 352, 1930 U.S. App. LEXIS 3368 (5th Cir. 1930).

Evidence insufficient to convict under second indictment. — If the evidence required to convict under the first indictment would not be sufficient to convict under the second indictment, but proof of an additional fact would be necessary to constitute the offense charged in the second, the former conviction or acquittal could not be pleaded in bar to the second indictment. Price v. State, 76 Ga.

Where counts charge same offense and maximum sentence is imposed for one. — Where counts of an indictment to which the defendant pleads guilty charge the same offense, and the maximum imprisonment authorized for a single conspiracy was imposed on one count, imposition of an additional sentence of imprisonment on the second count is void. Bertsch v. Snook, 36 F.2d 155, 1929 U.S. App. LEXIS 2116 (5th Cir. 1929).

Double jeopardy clause is not violated by treating single agreement as two offenses where Congress intends to impose multiple punishment, as where there is an agreement to trade firearms for drugs and defendants are charged under two separate conspiracy statutes, a drug conspiracy under 21 U.S.C. § 846 and a firearm conspiracy under 18 U.S.C. § 371. United States v. Mulherin, 710 F.2d 731, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25429 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 964, 104 S. Ct. 402, 78 L. Ed. 2d 343, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 2311 (1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1034, 104 S. Ct. 1305, 79 L. Ed. 2d 703, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 1214 (1984).

Underlying felony in felony murder. — As felony murder is defined under Georgia law, the underlying felony is a lesser included offense of felony murder and thus the same offense for double jeopardy purposes. Stephens v. Zant, 631 F.2d 397, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11918 (5th Cir. 1980), modified, 648 F.2d 446, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 10705 (5th Cir. 1981), rev'd, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 79 (1983).

Previous conviction for underlying felony bars prosecution for felony murder. — Once the state tried and convicted petitioner for kidnapping, it would be barred from prosecuting him for felony murder only if the underlying felony upon which that prosecution was based were that same kidnapping. Stephens v. Zant,

Bifurcated trial of malice murder and felony murder not double jeopardy.

— Double jeopardy principles were used to bar prosecution of a defendant in a second proceeding after the defendant was tried on a charge in a former proceeding, but defendant's trial on a charge of felony murder in a case where the trial was bifurcated and defendant was first tried on a malice murder charge did not violate defendant's double jeopardy rights since the delay between the proceedings did not constitute the termination of the prosecution and, thus, trial on the malice murder charge did not involve a former prosecution; rather, the charges were different phases of the same trial, and, thus, the fact that the malice murder charge had already been tried did not bar a trial on the felony murder charge. Jones v. State, 276 Ga. 663, 581 S.E.2d 546, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 532 (2003).

No exposure to double jeopardy. — Trial court did not err in allowing the manufacturing methamphetamine offense to proceed to the jury under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(b); despite the poor wording of the caption of the count at issue, which stated "trafficking in methamphetamine," because the body of the count clearly charged the defendant with manufacturing methamphetamine, and the defendant failed to show how the defendant was misled by the presentment, nor did it expose the defendant to double jeopardy in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 5 or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII. Gentry v. State, 281 Ga. App. 315, 635 S.E.2d 782, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 943 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0117, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 78 (Ga. Jan. 22, 2007).

Defendant's second prosecution for speeding and DUI was not barred by double jeopardy because the defendant's counsel joined in the state's motion for a mistrial in the first case due to the prosecutor's misstating the evidence in closing; further, the record showed that the prosecutor's error was inadvertent and not in bad faith. Williams v. State, 311 Ga. App. 783, 717 S.E.2d 264, 2011 Ga. App. LEXIS 806 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0244, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 171 (Ga. Feb. 6, 2012).

Accusation was sufficient because if, after jeopardy had attached, any other proceedings were taken against the defendant arising out of a domestic incident, the defendant could plead a former acquittal or conviction because the accusation set forth specific acts and adequately defined the offenses of battery, family violence battery, and criminal trespass. The state would not be able to charge the defendant with a new offense simply by alleging that the defendant struck the victim or the victim's closet door with an object. State v. Leatherwood, 326 Ga. App. 730, 757 S.E.2d 434, 2014 Ga. App. LEXIS 272 (2014).

Revocation of probation for offense of escape and criminal prosecution for the same offense is not double jeopardy. Aldridge v. State, 155 Ga. App. 916, 273 S.E.2d 656, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2835 (1980).

Where defendant was charged with five traffic violations and disorderly conduct, a guilty plea having been accepted for the latter, trial court's denial of defendant's plea of former jeopardy to preclude prosecution for the traffic violations was not in error where the offense of disorderly conduct for which the defendant was earlier tried did not arise from the same transaction as the five traffic offenses with which the defendant was also charged, as they were completed at a different time and at different locations; therefore, prosecution for the traffic offenses did not constitute double jeopardy for defendant. Boyette v. State, 172 Ga. App. 683, 324 S.E.2d 540, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 2631 (1984).

Separate proof for traffic violations. — Where defendant could not have been convicted for aggravated assault and criminal damage to property under prior citations for traffic offenses requiring separate proof of facts, no double jeopardy attached. Cates v. State, 206 Ga. App. 694, 426 S.E.2d 576, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1749 (1992).

Defendant properly sentenced on separate counts of attempting to elude police. — Trial court properly sentenced the defendant on five separate counts of attempting to elude a police officer because the evidence supported the jury's conclusion that the defendant willfully led police on a dangerous high speed chase after being given clear signals by five separate police vehicles to stop; it is the act of fleeing from an individual police vehicle or police officer after being given a proper visual or audible signal to stop from that individual police vehicle or officer, and not just the act of fleeing itself, that forms the proper "unit of prosecution" under O.C.G.A. § 40-6-395. Smith v. State, 290 Ga. 768, 723 S.E.2d 915, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 340 (2012).

Firearm charge and underlying felony. — Cumulative punishment for armed robbery and carrying and using a firearm in the commission of a felony does not subject a defendant to double jeopardy. Jackson v. United States, 976 F.2d 679, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 28484 (11th Cir. 1992).

Defendant's conviction of offense of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon was not precluded by collateral estoppel where he was acquitted of two other charges (aggravated assault and possession of a firearm during commission of a crime against a person) arising out of the same incident; the jury could have concluded that the defendant had the gun but did not assault or attempt to rob the victim with it. Clark v. State, 194 Ga. App. 280, 390 S.E.2d 425, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 90 (1990).

Defendant has burden of proving plea of former jeopardy. — In order to sustain a plea of former jeopardy, it is always incumbent upon the defendant to plead and prove that the transaction charged in the second indictment is the same as a matter of fact as that charged in the first indictment under which the defendant was put in jeopardy. Waters v. State, 112 Ga. App. 201, 144 S.E.2d 477, 1965 Ga. App. LEXIS 644 (1965).

What defendant must prove in support of double jeopardy plea. — In addition to pleading and proving that the transactions are the same as a matter of fact, it is also necessary in order to sustain a double jeopardy plea to plead and prove: (a) that the transaction charged in the second indictment is an offense that is identical in law with that charged in the first indictment, or else that under the actual terms of the first indictment proof of the second offense was made necessary as an essential ingredient of the offense as first charged; (b) that the transaction charged in the second indictment is an offense that represents either a major or minor grade of the same offense, of which the defendant might be convicted under an indictment for the major offense; or (c) if the transactions are the same as a matter of fact, even though the offenses be not identical or in effect identical as a matter of law, so as to come within the scope of the preceding items (a) or (b), the defendant may nevertheless, under the principles of res judicata, which may be included in a plea under the broader doctrine of former jeopardy, show that the defendant's acquittal on the first charge was necessarily controlled by the determination of some particular issue or issues of fact which would preclude the defendant's conviction of the second charge. Waters v. State, 112 Ga. App. 201, 144 S.E.2d 477, 1965 Ga. App. LEXIS 644 (1965).

If defendant establishes a prima facie claim the burden shifts to the government to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the indictments involved in fact charge separate offenses. United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20035 (5th Cir. 1981).

Operation of bar to multiple convictions where several crimes arising from one transaction are tried together. — The bar to multiple convictions usually arises where several crimes arising out of one criminal transaction are tried at the same time. In such cases the bar does not operate until after the verdicts. Under Georgia law it bars the conviction and therefore the punishment of all crimes which are as a matter of law or a matter of fact included in a major crime for which the defendant has been convicted. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1072 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2621 (1977).

b. Crimes Against Property

Crimes of illegal possession of heroin and illegal sale of heroin. — As a matter of law, the crime of illegal possession of heroin is not included in the crime of illegal sale of heroin for the purposes of double jeopardy and multiple prosecution. Wilson v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 859, 218 S.E.2d 573, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1307 (1975).

Possession of a controlled substance is separate and distinct from the conduct required to establish the offense of driving under the influence of intoxicants, although the offenses may arise out of the same conduct, i.e., driving. Rogers v. State, 166 Ga. App. 299, 304 S.E.2d 108, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2143 (1983).

Burglary and robbery. — No double jeopardy violation occurred when defendant was convicted of and sentenced for both burglary and robbery. Luke v. State, 171 Ga. App. 201, 318 S.E.2d 833, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 2142 (1984).

Carjacking and armed robbery. — Defendant's prosecution for a car hijacking was not barred by the double jeopardy clause as the refusal to admit evidence of the car hijacking as similar transaction evidence at defendant's trial for armed robbery was based on the lack of similarity between the car hijacking and the armed robbery incidents, not the lack of evidence of defendant's culpability for the car hijacking. Syas v. State, 273 Ga. App. 161, 614 S.E.2d 803, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 435 (2005).

Financial transaction card theft not lesser included offense of financial transaction card fraud. — Financial transaction card theft, O.C.G.A. § 16-9-31, is not a lesser included offense of financial transaction card fraud, O.C.G.A. § 16-9-33, thus, the defendant's prior conviction for the former offense did not preclude prosecution for the latter.

Sword v. State, 232 Ga. App. 497, 502 S.E.2d 334, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 728 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1422, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 977 (Ga. Oct. 2, 1998).

c. Crimes Against People

Malice murder and kidnapping are not the same offense for double jeopardy purposes under Georgia law, even though they involve the same transaction and considerably overlap each other factually. Stephens v. Zant, 631 F.2d 397, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11918 (5th Cir. 1980), modified, 648 F.2d 446, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 10705 (5th Cir. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 79 (1983).

Malice murder and kidnapping with bodily injury have separate and distinct elements and require proof of different facts. Thus, even if they involve the same transaction and considerably overlap each other factually, they are not the "same offense" under the double jeopardy clause. Potts v. Zant, 575 F. Supp. 374, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20217 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 526, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 22119 (11th Cir. 1984).

Hijacking and armed robbery. — Defendant's separate convictions for armed robbery and hijacking a motor vehicle did not violate the prohibitions against double jeopardy as O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1(d) provided that hijacking a motor vehicle was a separate offense and did not merge and it therefore superseded the state statutory double jeopardy provision; further, the Georgia Constitution did not prohibit additional punishment for a separate offense that the Georgia legislature had deemed to warrant a separate sanction; the defendant failed to show how the hijacking statute violated the federal double jeopardy clause. Mullins v. State, 280 Ga. App. 689, 634 S.E.2d 850, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 929 (2006).

Disorderly conduct conviction precludes retrial for battery. — An individual may not be retried for a simple battery based upon a striking and kicking incident for which the individual was convicted of disorderly conduct. State v. Burroughs, 246 Ga. 393, 271 S.E.2d 629, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1120 (1980).

Trial on an indictment for simple battery and criminal damage to property in the second degree constituted double jeopardy where these charges were based on the same facts underlying defendant's plea and conviction for disorderly conduct. Henderson v. State, 206 Ga. App. 642, 426 S.E.2d 264, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1731 (1992).

Acquittal of use of obscene and vulgar language no bar to prosecution for soliciting for prostitution. — After defendant's acquittal on charge of communicating to a virtuous female by writing obscene and vulgar language and an improper proposal under former Code 1933, § 26-6303 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-11-39.1), the defendant is not placed in double jeopardy by being placed on trial for charge of soliciting another for the purpose of prostitution under former Code 1933, § 26-6201 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-6-12), on grounds that the two cases are based on the same transaction. Price v. State, 76 Ga. App. 108, 45 S.E.2d 84, 1947 Ga. App. LEXIS 382 (1947).

Malice murder and armed robbery. — Conviction of a defendant for armed robbery, a lesser included offense of the malice murder for which the defendant was also convicted, subjected the defendant to double jeopardy. Huynh v. King, 95 F.3d 1052, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 24900 (11th Cir. 1996).

Rape and battery. — Defendant's right to be free from double jeopardy was not violated by rape prosecution in second trial after defendant was acquitted in a first trial on a charge of battery, as the facts used to prove the rape charge in the second trial were distinct from the factual allegations cited in support of the battery charge in the first trial, and, thus, the state was not barred by double jeopardy from retrying defendant on the rape charge in the second trial after the trial court declared a mistrial on that charge in the first trial. Dawson v. State, 260 Ga. App. 824, 581 S.E.2d 371, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 497 (2003).

Separate instances of aggravated stalking. — The prosecution of the defendant in Fulton County for aggravated stalking was not barred by defendant's previous conviction in Cobb County for aggravated stalking since, although the offenses pertained to stalking of the same victim, each prosecution pertained to events that occurred on different days and in different places. Daker v. State, 248 Ga. App. 657, 548 S.E.2d 354, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 282 (2001), cert. denied, No. S01C1050, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 662 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2001), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1085, 122 S. Ct. 1977, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1035, 2002 U.S. LEXIS 3710 (2002).

Essence of a double jeopardy determination in a conspiracy case is whether there was more than one agreement. United States v. Tammamro, 636 F.2d 100, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20397 (5th Cir. 1981).

Factors to be considered in concluding that events charged in two indictments were part of a single agreement: (1) time; (2) persons acting as coconspirators; (3) the statutory offenses charged in the indictments; (4) the overt acts charged by the government or any other description of the offense charged which indicates the nature and scope of the activity which the government sought to punish in each case; and (5) places where the events alleged as part of the conspiracy took place. United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20035 (5th Cir. 1981).

Test for existence of unified conspiracy. — The usual tests for determining the existence of a unified conspiracy are whether: the participants shared a continuing, common goal; the operations of the conspiracy followed an unbroken and repetitive pattern; and the cast of coconspirators remained the same. United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20035 (5th Cir. 1981).

Central question in narcotics conspiracies is existence of larger unified conspiracy. — The question that is central to double jeopardy claims arising in the context of a narcotics conspiracy is whether the particular transactions alleged in the indictment were within a larger unified conspiracy. United States v. Futch, 637 F.2d 386, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20035 (5th Cir. 1981); United States v. Henry, 661 F.2d 894, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 16046 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 992, 102 S. Ct. 1619, 71 L. Ed. 2d 853, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 1179 (1982).

Conspiracy to commit a crime and the crime itself are separate offenses and a defendant may be tried in separate trials for both. United States v. Tallant, 547 F.2d 1291, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 14417 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 889, 98 S. Ct. 262, 54 L. Ed. 2d 174, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 3533 (1977).

Since whatever evidence is introduced in a trial on a substantive offense, later prosecution for conspiracy based upon the same evidence cannot amount to a double jeopardy violation because the conspiracy and the substantive offense are distinct, where the situation was reversed, the first charges were for conspiracy and the pending charges involved substantive crimes, there was no double jeopardy violation. United States v. Eley, 968 F.2d 1143, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 18631 (11th Cir. 1992).

Only if the substantive offense and the conspiracy are identical does a conviction for both constitute double jeopardy. United States v. Tallant, 547 F.2d 1291, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 14417 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 889, 98 S. Ct. 262, 54 L. Ed. 2d 174, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 3533 (1977).

Conviction and punishment for conspiracy as well as aiding and abetting does not violate the double jeopardy clause because the offenses are separate and distinct, even where the evidence adduced serves “double duty” in establishing the elements of both offenses. United States v. Cowart, 595 F.2d 1023, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 14503 (5th Cir. 1979).

Attempt and conspiracy. — Prosecuting a defendant on attempt and conspiracy charges does not violate double jeopardy even though both offenses arose out of a single narcotics transaction. There can be no double jeopardy bar, therefore, to punishing a defendant for both crimes. United States v. Cochran, 883 F.2d 1012, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 13952 (11th Cir. 1989), superseded by statute as stated in, United States v. Diaz-Clark, 292 F.3d 1310, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 10737 (11th Cir. 2002).

Possession of cocaine and conspiracy to sell and distribute. — Charging the defendant with conspiracy to sell and distribute cocaine after the defendant had pled guilty to a substantive crime, possession of cocaine, did not constitute double jeopardy because the second prosecution required proof of facts not required on the prior prosecution. Rogers v. State, 201 Ga. App. 426, 411 S.E.2d 289, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1441 (1991).

RICO prosecution based on same evidence as prior conspiracy and drug convictions. — No double jeopardy violation existed in an indictment charging the defendants with substantive and conspiracy violations of the federal Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), O.C.G.A. § 16-14-1 et seq., based on the use of the same proof as prior federal conspiracy and substantive drug convictions. United States v. Boldin, 772 F.2d 719, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 23369 (11th Cir. 1985), modified, 779 F.2d 618, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 21288 (11th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1048, 106 S. Ct. 1269, 89 L. Ed. 2d 577, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 613 (1986), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1110, 106 S. Ct. 1520, 89 L. Ed. 2d 917, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 1798 (1986).

e. DUI Offenses

Convictions for both driving under the influence and public drunkenness not barred. — Where convictions for both driving under the influence and public drunkenness are not based upon proof of the same facts, the defendant has no viable claim of double jeopardy under the United States Constitution; moreover, the fact that both crimes arose from the same intoxication has no bearing on this issue. Fuller v. State, 169 Ga. App. 468, 313 S.E.2d 745, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 2779 (1984).

Miranda warnings not required prior to asking person to submit to breath test. — Supreme Court of Georgia held that neither Georgia's right against compelled self-incrimination, Georgia's right to due process, nor Georgia's statute prohibiting compelled self-incrimination, O.C.G.A. § 24-5-506, requires law enforcement to provide Miranda warnings to persons arrested for DUI before asking a person to submit to a breath test. State v. Turnquest, 305 Ga. 758, 827 S.E.2d 865, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 320 (2019).

DUI and unlawful blood alcohol level. — Where charges of driving under the influence of alcohol (O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391(a)(1)) and driving with an unlawful blood alcohol level (O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391(a)(4)) were based on the same conduct, they merged under the substantive double jeopardy rule, requiring vacating of conviction of latter offense. Hoffman v. State, 208 Ga. App. 574, 430 S.E.2d 886, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 625 (1993).

DUI and serious injury by vehicle convictions. — Proof that the defendant was guilty of driving under the influence (DUI) under O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391 was a required element for convicting the defendant of serious injury by vehicle under O.C.G.A. § 40-6-394, and while proof of serious injury by vehicle also required proof of an additional element, bodily harm, the DUI charge included no element that was not also contained in the crime of serious injury by vehicle; accordingly, the Blockburger test was not met, and the subsequent indictment for serious injury by vehicle violated the double jeopardy clause of the fifth amendment. Thus, defendant's plea in bar was a valid exercise of the federal double jeopardy clause. Garrett v. State, 306 Ga. App. 429, 702 S.E.2d 470, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 961 (2010).

5. Imposition of Other Penalties for Same Act

No bar to imposition of civil and criminal penalties for same act. — The prohibition against putting any person twice in jeopardy of life or limb for the same offense applies only to twice subjecting an individual to criminal processes for the same offense against the same sovereign. There is no bar to the sovereign's imposing both civil and criminal penalties for the same act. Alexander v. State, 129 Ga. App. 395, 199 S.E.2d 918, 1973 Ga.

App. LEXIS 1021 (1973); Johnson v. State, 142 Ga. App. 124, 235 S.E.2d 550, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 1504 (1977), aff'd, 240 Ga. 526, 242 S.E.2d 53, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 697 (1978).

Revocation of business license. — Revocation of a business license to operate a health spa following the owner's plea of nolo contendere to a sexual offense was not double jeopardy. Moser v. Richmond County Bd. of Comm'rs, 263 Ga. 63, 428 S.E.2d 71, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 361 (1993).

Suspension of a driver's license at an administrative hearing was not punishment, nor was the hearing a prosecution for the purposes of double jeopardy, thus, a subsequent criminal prosecution for driving under the influence was not barred. Nolen v. State, 218 Ga. App. 819, 463 S.E.2d 504, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 896 (1995), cert. denied, No. S96C0143, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 205 (Ga. Jan. 5, 1996), cert. denied, No. S96C0288, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 282 (Ga. Jan. 26, 1996); McDaniel v. State, 224 Ga. App. 5, 479 S.E.2d 779, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 1328 (1996).

Payment of the fee required for reinstatement of a driver's license after it was suspended following an arrest for driving under the influence was not punishment and did not bar a subsequent prosecution for driving under the influence. Thompson v. State, 229 Ga. App. 526, 494 S.E.2d 306; Morgan v. State, 229 Ga. App. 861, 495 S.E.2d 138, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 1518 (1997).

Modification of bond conditions were not criminal punishment for double jeopardy purposes. — Conducting a hearing to modify the bond conditions of a third-time DUI offender and placing limitations upon the offender's driving privileges, predicated upon the necessity to protect the welfare and safety of the citizens of Georgia from a recidivist offender, was not punishment, nor was the hearing prosecution, for the purposes of double jeopardy. Strickland v. State, 300 Ga. App. 898, 686 S.E.2d 486, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1301 (2009), overruled in part, Edvalson v. State, 339 Ga. App. 348,

793 S.E.2d 545, 2016 Ga. App. LEXIS 626 (2016).

Ten-day suspension from school following defendant's arrest and indictment for armed robbery did not rise to the level of "punishment" for double jeopardy purposes. Clark v. State, 220 Ga. App. 251, 469 S.E.2d 250, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 95 (1996).

Civil forfeiture proceeding in a drug case was not a criminal prosecution for purposes of double jeopardy. Murphy v. State, 219 Ga. App. 474, 465 S.E.2d 497, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 1076 (1995), aff'd, 267 Ga. 120, 475 S.E.2d 907, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 712 (1996).

A civil federal forfeiture action was neither punishment nor criminal for purposes of the double jeopardy clause. Battista v. State, 223 Ga. App. 369, 477 S.E.2d 665, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 1167 (1996).

Criminal punishment and administrative punishment for same act. — Imposition of criminal punishment and administrative punishment for the same act does not constitute a violation of the double jeopardy prohibition. Horne v. Hopper, 238 Ga. 140, 231 S.E.2d 735, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 927 (1977).

A prisoner's convictions for certain criminal acts and prison administrative punishment for the same acts do not constitute double jeopardy. Minton v. State, 167 Ga. App. 114, 305 S.E.2d 812, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3301 (1983).

The constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy is not violated when a prisoner is subjected to executive department punishment for an act committed while a prison inmate and is then prosecuted and convicted in a court of law for having committed a crime even though the crime and the act for which administrative punishment is assessed are one and the same. Flowers v. State, 166 Ga. App. 740, 306 S.E.2d 16, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2314 (1983).

Nonsummary criminal contempt proceedings. — Nonsummary criminal contempt proceedings can trigger the Fifth Amendment's double jeopardy bar to subsequent prosecution. Tanks v. State, 292 Ga. App. 177, 663 S.E.2d 812, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 722 (2008).

Pretrial detentions. — Where defendant's pretrial detentions were not to punish defendant for two murders or the result of prosecutorial misconduct, the United States Constitution's fifth amendment double jeopardy clause did not bar the state's prosecution for the murders and related crimes. Agee v. State, 276 Ga. 536, 579 S.E.2d 730, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 352 (2003).

Termination of a police officer for threatening and attempting to choke the victim did bar prosecution of the officer for the same offenses. Pennyman v. State, 222 Ga. App. 779, 476 S.E.2d 71, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 1008 (1996), cert. denied, No. S97C0111, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 251 (Ga. Jan. 31, 1997).

Separate conspiracy trial considering quantity of drugs sold. — Where the Northern District Court considered the quantities of drugs which were the object of the prosecution in the Southern District in determining the Northern District sentence for a conspiracy conviction, there was no double jeopardy violation for criminal conduct relating to those quantities of drugs because Congress may punish separately each step leading to the consummation of a transaction. United States v. Eley, 968 F.2d 1143, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 18631 (11th Cir. 1992).

Consideration of murder in federal sentencing not a bar to state prosecution. — Double jeopardy did not bar the state from prosecuting defendant for murder even though the federal district court had considered the murder in its sentencing of defendant for bank robbery. Nance v. State, 266 Ga. 816, 471 S.E.2d 216, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 350, cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1043, 117 S. Ct. 615, 136 L. Ed. 2d 539, 1996 U.S. LEXIS 7731 (1996).

Proceeding to revoke a probated sentence is not a criminal proceeding. Johnson v. State, 142 Ga. App. 124, 235 S.E.2d 550, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 1504 (1977), aff'd, 240 Ga. 526, 242 S.E.2d 53, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 697 (1978).

Discipline of a prisoner by prison authorities for violations of prison regulations and prosecution by civil authorities for the same acts does not violate the double jeopardy clause. Gilchrist v. United States, 427 F.2d 1132,

1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 8648 (5th Cir. 1970).

When one is criminally convicted and sentenced for escape and is also subjected to administrative in-prison punishments for the same escape, constitutional double jeopardy protection is not violated. Middlebrook v. Allen, 234 Ga. 481, 216 S.E.2d 331, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1171 (1975).

Stalking and violation of protective order. — When a defendant was indicted for aggravated stalking under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-91(a) in violation of a protective order issued under O.C.G.A. § 19-13-4, a criminal contempt proceeding based on the same incident could trigger the double jeopardy clause of the fifth amendment. The protective order violation contained no elements not contained in the criminal offense; furthermore, the protective order specifically enjoined the defendant from surveilling the subject of the order for the purpose of harassing and intimidating the subject, as also proscribed by § 16-5-91(a). Tanks v. State, 292 Ga. App. 177, 663 S.E.2d 812, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 722 (2008).

6. Mistrial

State's right to mistrial. — Defendant's right to a fair trial is not paramount to the state's right to a fair trial; the trial court has the duty to ensure a fair trial to all parties in a case and has as much authority to grant a mistrial where injustice is caused to the state as where injustice is cause to the defendant. Sinkfield v. State, 217 Ga. App. 589, 458 S.E.2d 665, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 530 (1995), cert. denied, No. S95C1572, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 1076 (Ga. Oct. 2, 1995).

Impaneled jury may not be discharged except for manifest necessity or ends of public justice. — Once the jury has been impaneled, the court may not discharge the jury from giving a verdict unless there is a case of manifest necessity for such an act, or the ends of public justice would otherwise be defeated. Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 949 (1980).

Violation of court order did not provoke mistrial. — The requisite intent to provoke a mistrial, entitling the defendant to a dismissal on double jeopardy grounds, was absent where, in violating a court order to refrain from using the term “organized crime,” the prosecutor referred to the government’s witnesses only and there was no direct reference to the defendant, and where the defendant failed to object to the violation at the time it was made when the infraction could have been cured with proper instructions. United States v. Dante, 739 F.2d 547, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 19400 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1036, 105 S. Ct. 512, 83 L. Ed. 2d 402, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 4498 (1984).

Reprosecution permissible where jury cannot fairly try the issues. —

Reprosecution is permissible where, before declaring a mistrial, the court justifiably concludes that it is impossible for the jury, in considering the case, to act with the independence and freedom requisite to a fair trial of the issues. United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 11545 (5th Cir. 1978).

No double jeopardy where verdicts were repugnant. —

General principles of double jeopardy did not bar the defendant’s retrial on the malice murder charge because the verdicts were repugnant and, thus, failed to result in an event that terminated jeopardy, akin to a situation in which a mistrial is declared after a jury could not reach a verdict. McElrath v. State, 315 Ga. 126, 880 S.E.2d 518, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 296 (2022), rev’d, 601 U.S. 87, 144 S. Ct. 651, 217 L. Ed. 2d 419, 2024 U.S. LEXIS 997 (2024), vacated in part, reaff’d, 319 Ga. 539, 905 S.E.2d 654, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 165 (2024).

Strictest scrutiny is appropriate when the basis for a mistrial is the unavailability of critical prosecution evidence, or when there is reason to believe that the prosecutor is using the superior resources of the state to harass or achieve a tactical advantage over the accused. Cobb v. State, 246 Ga. 565, 272 S.E.2d 297, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1198 (1980).

Termination of trial in defendant’s favor before guilt or innocence determined. — When a criminal defendant obtains a termination of the trial in the defendant’s favor before any determination of factual guilt or innocence, a new trial is not barred by the double jeopardy clause. State v. Williams, 246 Ga. 788, 272 S.E.2d 725, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1283 (1980).

As a general rule, the genuine inability of a jury to agree on a verdict provides manifest necessity for discharge and a mistrial due to a deadlocked jury does not bar reprosecution. United States v. Wright, 622 F.2d 792, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15267 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 961, 101 S. Ct. 376, 66 L. Ed. 2d 229, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3840 (1980).

When a deadlocked jury was dismissed, the effect of the court’s action was a mistrial, and a subsequent declaration of mistrial based on improper closing argument was a nullity; thus, the state was not barred from a retrial of defendant. State v. Telenko, 225 Ga. App. 724, 484 S.E.2d 725, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 422 (1997), cert. denied, No. S97C1281, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 819 (Ga. Sept. 18, 1997).

Failure of a jury to agree on a verdict of either acquittal or conviction does not bar retrial. Cameron v. Caldwell, 232 Ga. 611, 208 S.E.2d 441, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 1027 (1974); Hooks v. State, 138 Ga. App. 539, 226 S.E.2d 765, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2225 (1976); Kelly v. State, 145 Ga. App. 780, 245 S.E.2d 20, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 2129 (1978); United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 11545 (5th Cir. 1978); Cherry v. Director, State Bd. of Cors., 613 F.2d 1262, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19591 (5th Cir. 1980).

Whether a trial for the same offense or one growing out of same act. — If the grant of a mistrial results from the inability of the jury to agree on a verdict that makes the discharge of the jury necessary and the completion of the trial impossible, a second trial for the same offense or for an offense growing out of the same acts is not barred and does not violate the guaranty against double jeopardy. Van Scoik v. State, 139 Ga. App. 293, 228 S.E.2d 229, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1770 (1976).

A second prosecution is not prohibited because of disqualification of a juror, mere irregularity of procedure, or tactical necessity in wartime. United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 11545 (5th Cir. 1978).

Third trial, held after two mistrials caused by jury disagreement, does not constitute double jeopardy. Orvis v. State, 237 Ga. 6, 226 S.E.2d 570, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1128 (1976).

Jury request for mistrial due to lack of evidence. — Because, after deliberating for only a few minutes, the jury sent a note to the trial judge asking if it could declare a mistrial due to lack of evidence, but because the foreman stated a belief that the jury would eventually reach a decision, there was no manifest necessity for declaring a mistrial, and retrial was barred by the double jeopardy clause. Cobb v. State, 246 Ga. 565, 272 S.E.2d 297, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1198 (1980).

Trial court can retry a defendant following mistrial. — Trial court can retry a defendant following mistrial without violating double jeopardy protections. Bell v. State, 249 Ga. 644, 292 S.E.2d 402, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 871 (1982).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's plea in bar based on double jeopardy under U.S. Const., amend. 5 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, seeking to prevent a retrial of criminal charges against defendant after the motion for a mistrial under O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8(e)(1) was granted in the first trial upon the jury's advisement to the trial court judge that they were hopelessly deadlocked due to the refusal by two jurors to consider the direct evidence; the mistrial was properly declared and there was no improper conduct shown by the trial court or the state but rather, the defendant's counsel admitted that defendant hoped that another jury would be more sympathetic to the defendant upon a retrial, as the first jury was deadlocked 10-2 in favor of conviction. Jackson v. State, 282 Ga. App. 476, 638 S.E.2d 865, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1417 (2006).

As the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in declaring a mistrial sua sponte on the basis that evidence inadvertently taken to the jury room which contained the defendant's exculpatory statement had irreparably prejudiced the state's right to a fair trial, and that curative instructions would be insufficient, the defendant's retrial was not barred by double jeopardy. Varner v. State, 285 Ga. 334, 676 S.E.2d 209, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 158 (2009).

After the trial court excused a juror who had been left a telephone message stating that the defendant was a good person, the juror discussed the evidence with the other jurors and made negative comments in an apparent effort to discredit the prosecution. As the trial court concluded that the excused juror may have had a bias that affected the other jurors, it properly declared a mistrial; therefore, the defendant's retrial did not violate the double jeopardy ban. Brown v. State, 285 Ga. 324, 676 S.E.2d 221, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 146 (2009).

Retrial of a criminal defendant after a mistrial caused by the inability of the jury to reach a verdict does not constitute double jeopardy where there is manifest necessity for declaring the mistrial. Glass v. State, 250 Ga. 736, 300 S.E.2d 812, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1028 (1983); Jackson v. State, 257 Ga. 484, 361 S.E.2d 156, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 925 (1987).

A retrial after a mistrial had been declared because of the jury's inability to reach an unanimous decision, it being hopelessly deadlocked after deliberating for two days (more time than the actual trial), sending four notes to the court explaining its situation, and being recharged twice, did not deprive the defendant of the defendant's right to be protected against double jeopardy. Walker v. Weldon, 744 F.2d 775, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 17598 (11th Cir. 1984).

A trial terminated as a result of the jury's inability to reach a unanimous verdict. It is well known that retrial under these circumstances is not barred by the double jeopardy clause. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 305, 369 S.E.2d 232, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 226, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 891, 109 S. Ct. 225, 102 L. Ed. 2d 215, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 4327 (1988).

There was no double jeopardy violation as the trial court's decision to grant a mistrial was authorized, even if the mistrial was not strictly necessary, because under the totality of the attendant circumstances, reasonable judges could differ as to the type of disposition required to protect the fair trial rights of the parties after the case went longer than expected, requiring either mistrial or three-week continuance, which upset many jurors, who would likely have blamed one of the parties. Laguerre v. State, 301 Ga. 122, 799 S.E.2d 736, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 330 (2017).

Mistrial during prosecution of multiple offenses. — Where the state seeks to prosecute a defendant for two offenses in a single prosecution, one of which is included in the other, and the defendant receives a mistrial on the greater offense, the remaining conviction of the lesser offense does not bar retrial of the greater offense. Taylor v. State, 238 Ga. App. 753, 520 S.E.2d 267, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 944 (1999).

Where a jury is hopelessly deadlocked, this constitutes manifest necessity for declaring a mistrial. Glass v. State, 250 Ga. 736, 300 S.E.2d 812, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1028 (1983); Hurston v. State, 206 Ga. App. 570, 426 S.E.2d 196, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1694 (1992).

Reprosecution generally not barred by mistrial sought or consented to by defendant. — The double jeopardy proscription of the federal and state Constitutions generally does not prevent reprosecution of a defendant where a mistrial occurs on the motion of, or with the consent of, the defendant. Studyvent v. State, 153 Ga. App. 161, 264 S.E.2d 695, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 1723 (1980).

Consent to mistrial. — Defendant was not prosecuted twice for the same offense where evidence introduced at habeas hearing did not contradict the court's recital that defendant consented to mistrial for lack of formal arraignment, and in fact defendant did not object to the mistrial, and either expressly or tacitly joined in codefendant's motion for mistrial. McCormick v. Gearing, 253 Ga. 531, 322 S.E.2d 716, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 1035 (1984).

Where, after a jury was impaneled, defendant moved for severance and a mistrial, and the trial court granted the motion for severance and elected to go forward with the trial of the codefendant, but, instead of granting a mistrial, continued defendant's case, the grant of the continuance was equivalent to the grant of a mistrial, and defendant's plea of double jeopardy was properly rejected since defendant had sought and consented to the severance. Stone v. State, 218 Ga. App. 350, 461 S.E.2d 548, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 715 (1995).

Defendant did not carry defendant's burden of showing that the state goaded defendant into moving for a mistrial when the state failed to provide the defense with one of two statements that the victim provided to police regarding the charges brought against defendant for child molestation and statutory rape, and, thus, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's plea of former jeopardy under either the state or federal constitution after the trial court granted defendant's motion for a mistrial. Beach v. State, 260 Ga. App. 399, 579 S.E.2d 808, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 373 (2003).

Delay in reducing mistrial order to writing. — Where the first trial ended with the grant of defendant's motion for mistrial and the order declaring the mistrial was not reduced to writing and entered on the minutes of the court until after the second trial, and where the court's written order merely perfected the record in this regard and the delay in no way affected defendant's rights, no double jeopardy defense is established. Swafford v. State, 161 Ga. App. 139, 291 S.E.2d 3, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 1786 (1982).

Erroneous ruling invoked by defendant. — Because the prosecution's failure to present to the jury sufficient evidence to support a conviction resulted from an erroneous ruling of the trial court, which ruling was invoked by the defendant, the defendant waived the right to obtain a judgment of acquittal due to evidentiary insufficiency. Consequently, a new trial was not barred by the double jeopardy clause. Hunter v. State, 257 Ga. 571, 361 S.E.2d 787, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 1009 (1987).

Prosecutor allowed inadmissible matters into evidence through negligence, and did not intend to "goad" defendant into seeking a mistrial; thus, defendant's retrial on the same charges after a mistrial was declared was not barred by double jeopardy. Collis v. State, 252 Ga. App. 659, 556 S.E.2d 221, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 1274 (2001), cert. denied, No. S02C0508, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 344 (Ga. Apr. 15, 2002).

Prosecutorial overreaching is gross negligence or intentional misconduct, causing aggravated circumstances to develop which seriously prejudice a defendant causing him to reasonably conclude that a continuation of the tainted proceeding would result in a conviction. United States v. Wright, 622 F.2d 792, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15267 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 961, 101 S. Ct. 376, 66 L. Ed. 2d 229, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3840 (1980).

Retrial barred where defendant forced to move for mistrial because of prosecutorial overreaching. — Reprosecution is barred by the double jeopardy clause when prosecutorial overreaching forces a defendant to the choice of giving up the substantial right that the defendant has to the trial before the present jury, or moving for a mistrial and giving the government a second chance before another jury with any additional advantage accrued by matter learned in the first trial. Studyvent v. State, 153 Ga. App. 161, 264 S.E.2d 695, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 1723 (1980).

What constitutes "prosecutorial overreaching". — "Prosecutorial overreaching" occurs and bars retrials where bad faith conduct by judge or prosecutor threatens the harassment of an accused by successive prosecutions or declaration of a mistrial so as to afford the prosecution a more favorable opportunity to convict the defendant. Studyvent v. State, 153 Ga. App. 161, 264 S.E.2d 695, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 1723 (1980).

To find prosecutorial overreaching, the government must have, through gross negligence or intentional misconduct, caused aggravated circumstances to develop which seriously prejudiced a defendant causing the defendant to reasonably conclude that a continuation of the tainted proceeding would result in a conviction. United States v. Bizzard, 493 F. Supp. 1084, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12781 (S.D.

Ga. 1980), aff'd, 674 F.2d 1382, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19491 (11th Cir. 1982).

Where the trial court and the district attorney are totally at fault in the contempt finding which resulted in a mistrial it is unfair to allow the state to take advantage of such an abuse by again putting defendant in jeopardy. Chatham v. State, 247 Ga. 95, 274 S.E.2d 473, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 637 (1981).

Judicial or prosecutorial misconduct. — In determining if a retrial is barred by double jeopardy after a mistrial is granted because of prosecutorial or judicial misconduct, the issue is whether there has been a judicial or prosecutorial intent to harass the defendant and deprive the defendant of a fair decision by the jury before whom the defendant is being tried. Benford v. State, 164 Ga. App. 733, 298 S.E.2d 39, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3343 (1982).

In the context of a granted motion for mistrial, governmental misconduct will support a plea in bar based on double jeopardy if the prosecutor or trial judge intended to goad the defendant into moving for a mistrial. In the context of a reversal or grant of a motion for new trial, on the other hand, double jeopardy may bar a retrial where the prosecutor intended to prevent an acquittal that the prosecutor, or the trial judge accused of misconduct, believed at the time was likely to occur in the absence of the judge's misconduct. Paul v. State, 266 Ga. App. 126, 596 S.E.2d 670, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 317 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1199, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 579 (Ga. June 28, 2004).

Prosecutorial misconduct will bar retrial pursuant to the double jeopardy clause only if there is an intent on the part of the prosecutor to subvert the protections afforded by the double jeopardy clause. Fugitt v. Lemacks, 833 F.2d 251, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 15074 (11th Cir. 1987).

Trial court did not err in granting a plea of double jeopardy after a motion for mistrial had been granted, where, in granting the plea, the court orally ruled that the prosecutor had "a deliberate intent to goad [defense counsel] into a mistrial, . . . and that it was prosecutorial misconduct." Beck v. State, 261 Ga. 826, 412 S.E.2d 530, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 54 (1992).

The applicable standard is the intent of the prosecutor in the misconduct, and such intent is a fact question for the court to resolve. Reed v. State, 222 Ga. App. 376, 474 S.E.2d 264, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 840 (1996).

Prosecutorial misconduct before and after trial. — Because all but one of the incidents of alleged prosecutorial misconduct occurred either before or after trial, because the one trial incident did not result in a mistrial, and because the evidence did not show that any alleged incident of harassment was intended to subvert the protections afforded by the double jeopardy clause, the defendant's claim that a retrial was barred had no merit. Fugitt v. State, 253 Ga. 311, 319 S.E.2d 829, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 875 (1984).

Prosecutor's failure to follow the instruction of the trial court to avoid questions concerning a witness' credibility did not bar retrial, where the prosecutor's mistakes were made in good faith and there was no intention to provoke mistrial. State v. Oliver, 188 Ga. App. 47, 372 S.E.2d 256, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 886 (1988).

Prosecutorial misconduct amounting to harassment or overreaching, even if sufficient to justify a grant of mistrial, is nevertheless insufficient to bar retrial absent intent on the part of the prosecutor to subvert the protections afforded by the double jeopardy clause. State v. Oliver, 188 Ga. App. 47, 372 S.E.2d 256, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 886 (1988).

Defendant not "goaded" into moving for mistrial. — District attorney's improper quoting of prior court cases was not intended to "goad" defendant into moving for a mistrial and therefore did not bar the state from retrying the case after it had been remanded to the trial court for retrial on sentencing. Hardy v. State, 258 Ga. 523, 371 S.E.2d 849, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 347 (1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1040, 109 S. Ct. 1174, 103 L. Ed. 2d 237, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 998 (1989).

Where a mistrial was granted at the behest of the defendant, a retrial was not barred; the state had not intended to goad the defendant into moving for a mistrial by inadvertent testimony of its private investigator. Mobley v. State, 262 Ga. 808, 426 S.E.2d 150, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 237, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 870, 114 S. Ct. 198, 126 L. Ed. 2d 156, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 5756 (1993); Weems v. State, 269 Ga. 577, 501 S.E.2d 806, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 734 (1998).

Repeated misconduct by defense counsel, resulting in the jury's exposure to extensive assertions that were irrelevant, immaterial, highly prejudicial, and wholly lacking in evidentiary support, made it impossible for an impartial verdict to be reached; therefore, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in declaring a mistrial based on manifest necessity, and retrial of defendant was not barred. Jackson v. State, 226 Ga. App. 256, 485 S.E.2d 832, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 577 (1997), cert. denied, No. S97C1340, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 852 (Ga. Oct. 3, 1997).

Mistrial ordered after co-counsel experiences personal tragedy. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in declaring a mistrial in the interests of justice, and in turn the defendant's plea in bar based on alleged double jeopardy, after co-counsel's niece committed suicide causing co-counsel to suffer severe emotional distress, rendering the co-counsel unable to effectively serve as co-counsel. Carman v. State, 304 Ga. 21, 815 S.E.2d 860, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 431, cert. denied, 586 U.S. 974, 139 S. Ct. 434, 202 L. Ed. 2d 331, 2018 U.S. LEXIS 6433 (2018).

Mistrial caused by defense's improper question. — A mistrial was declared when defense counsel asked the defendant whether, in the context of the investigation of the present charges, the defendant had "ever taken a polygraph examination" and the defendant responded, "No, not for the State of Georgia." In violation of the rules of evidence and contrary to the true state of facts, the question and answer intimated that, although the state had not undertaken to conduct its own test, there did exist a private polygraph test, the results of which were exculpatory. Therefore, the trial court did not abuse its sound discretion by granting the state's motion for a mistrial and in denying the defendant's plea of former jeopardy. Phelps v. State,

In a trial of multiple counts where defense sought to impeach a complaining witness with character evidence of a specific act, a mistrial was proper only for the counts prejudiced by such improper evidence. Venson v. Georgia, 74 F.3d 1140, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 2045 (11th Cir. 1996).

In a prosecution for malice murder, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in declaring a mistrial when defense counsel injected the prejudicial issue of the victim's violent acts without having first made a prima facie showing of justification, and the state could try defendant again. Laster v. State, 268 Ga. 172, 486 S.E.2d 153, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 354 (1997).

No manifest necessity for mistrial where no evidentiary infraction. — In a prosecution for speeding and driving under the influence, the defendant did not engage in an intentional evidentiary infraction or knowingly violate any instruction of the trial court not to divulge an alcosensor reading in the defendant's testimony sufficient to establish manifest necessity for a mistrial and avoid double jeopardy on retrial. Dotson v. State, 213 Ga. App. 7, 443 S.E.2d 650, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 449 (1994).

Error on part of prosecution in failing to produce document cannot be classified as prosecutorial misconduct barring retrial, unless the prosecutor's action was intended to subvert the protections afforded by the double jeopardy clause. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 305, 369 S.E.2d 232, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 226, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 891, 109 S. Ct. 225, 102 L. Ed. 2d 215, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 4327 (1988).

Questions based on past sexual behavior. — In a rape prosecution, it was proper for the trial judge to declare a mistrial, on the judge's own motion following the cross-examination of the alleged victim, which culminated in a question by defense counsel concerning the past sexual behavior of the witness, a violation of the shield law (O.C.G.A. § 24-2-3) that was "highly improper" and prejudicial. The declaration of mistrial did not bar a second trial of the defendant for the alleged offense. Abdi v. Georgia, 744 F.2d

Defendant's introduction of evidence that was prohibited by the rape shield statute gave the court grounds to find manifest necessity for a mistrial; therefore, state and federal double jeopardy provisions did not bar reprosecution. Banks v. State, 230 Ga. App. 258, 495 S.E.2d 877, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 111 (1998).

New trial after former mistakenly ended in mistrial. — Trial court erred in denying a rape defendant's plea of double jeopardy after a mistrial had been granted on the mistaken ground that the defense line of questioning of the victim had violated the Rape Shield Law. George v. State, 257 Ga. 176, 356 S.E.2d 882, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 778 (1987).

Absent prosecutorial or judicial overreaching, defendant's motion for mistrial ordinarily removes bar to reprosecution. — Where circumstances develop not attributable to prosecutorial or judicial overreaching, a motion by the defendant for mistrial is ordinarily assumed to remove any barrier to reprosecution, even if the defendant's motion is necessitated by prosecutorial or judicial error. United States v. Romano, 482 F.2d 1183, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8459 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1129, 94 S. Ct. 866, 38 L. Ed. 2d 753, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 1436 (1974); Studyvent v. State, 153 Ga. App. 161, 264 S.E.2d 695, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 1723 (1980); Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 949 (1980); Cherry v. Director, State Bd. of Cors., 635 F.2d 414, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20653 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 840, 102 S. Ct. 150, 70 L. Ed. 2d 124, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3378 (1981).

Mistrial granted at behest of defendant. — Where a mistrial is granted at the behest of the defendant, a retrial is not barred by principles of double jeopardy unless the governmental conduct in question (from whomever derived) is intended to "goad" the defendant into moving for a mistrial. Ellerbee v. State, 215 Ga. App. 312, 450 S.E.2d 443, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 1213 (1994), overruled in part, Felix v.

State, 271 Ga. 534, 523 S.E.2d 1, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 786 (1999).

Where a mistrial is granted at defendant's request, reprosecution is barred only if the mistrial resulted from grossly negligent or intentional misconduct by judge or prosecutor, conduct which was undertaken to harass the accused by successive prosecution or to gain the prosecution a better opportunity at conviction. United States v. Kennedy, 548 F.2d 608, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 14329 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 865, 98 S. Ct. 199, 54 L. Ed. 2d 140, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 3330 (1977); United States v. Luttrell, 609 F.2d 1190, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 21229 (5th Cir. 1980); Chatham v. State, 247 Ga. 95, 274 S.E.2d 473, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 637 (1981).

Mere negligence on the part of the government is not sufficient to preclude a second trial. United States v. Luttrell, 609 F.2d 1190, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 21229 (5th Cir. 1980).

Double jeopardy clause does protect a defendant against governmental actions intended to provoke mistrial requests and thereby to subject defendants to the substantial burdens imposed by multiple prosecutions. It bars retrials where bad faith conduct by judge or prosecutor threatens the harassment of an accused by successive prosecutions or declaration of a mistrial so as to afford the prosecution a more favorable opportunity to convict the defendant. United States v. Wright, 622 F.2d 792, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15267 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 961, 101 S. Ct. 376, 66 L. Ed. 2d 229, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3840 (1980); United States v. Bizzard, 493 F. Supp. 1084, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12781 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 674 F.2d 1382, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19491 (11th Cir. 1982).

Defendant's refusal to agree to continuance deemed motion for mistrial. — If a defendant will not agree to a continuance of some reasonable and finite length, and a mistrial is declared, the defendant has essentially forced the mistrial, and the defendant's actions should be declared akin to a motion for a mistrial.

Accordingly, further proceedings against the defendant are not barred by the double jeopardy clause. Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 949 (1980).

Reprosecution after mistrial without accused's consent stringently limited. — The protections offered by the double jeopardy ban include a stringent limitation on the government's right to reprosecute after a mistrial is declared without the consent of the accused. United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 11545 (5th Cir. 1978).

When free and fair trial cannot be had. — When it appears that a free and fair trial cannot be had, the trial ought to be stopped, even over objection of the accused, and the Constitution will not prevent another and better trial. Sanford v. Robbins, 115 F.2d 435, 1940 U.S. App. LEXIS 2894 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 312 U.S. 697, 61 S. Ct. 737, 85 L. Ed. 1132, 1941 U.S. LEXIS 862 (1941).

Trial court's finding of manifest necessity requiring a mistrial was proper, and double jeopardy did not bar a retrial, where, during a break in deliberations, a juror made a comment in the presence of other jurors about making money from defendant's family. Perez v. State, 266 Ga. App. 82, 596 S.E.2d 191, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 238 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1200, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 578 (Ga. June 28, 2004), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 957, 125 S. Ct. 410, 160 L. Ed. 2d 319, 2004 U.S. LEXIS 7139 (2004).

Judge's inability to disregard inadmissible evidence. — In a bench trial, the judge's inability to disregard evidence the judge ruled inadmissible constituted a manifest necessity for a mistrial and the defendant's double jeopardy rights would not be violated by a retrial to a jury. Bailey v. State, 219 Ga. App. 258, 465 S.E.2d 284, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 1014 (1995), cert. dismissed, No. S96C0522, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 420 (Ga. Mar. 8, 1996).

If, for reasons deemed compelling by the trial judge, the ends of substantial justice cannot be attained without discontinuing the trial, a mistrial may be declared without the defendant's consent and even over the defendant's objections, and the defendant may be retried consistently with U.S. Const., amend. 5. United States v. Wayman, 510 F.2d 1020, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 15340 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 846, 96 S. Ct. 84, 46 L. Ed. 2d 67, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 2536 (1975).

Retrial not barred where defendant successfully attacks conviction for lack of sufficient evidence. — The jeopardy provision does not prohibit a second trial on the same charge where the defendant has been successful in the motion for a new trial in having the conviction set aside for want of sufficient evidence. Staggers v. State, 120 Ga. App. 875, 172 S.E.2d 462, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 947 (1969).

Retrial barred where prosecution unprepared and mistrial granted over defendant's objection. — If the prosecutor begins the case without sufficient evidence to convict and the court grants a mistrial over defendant's objection, the defendant's plea of former jeopardy should be sustained should the state attempt to call the case again. Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 949 (1980).

Defendant's objection to mistrial must be timely. — Where defendant objects to declaration of mistrial, but court order states that the mistrial was granted upon agreement of counsel for the defendant and counsel for the state, defendant's remedy is to file a motion to correct it, before the judge who issued it, at the same term of court, and while the matter is still fresh in the judge's mind. Minter v. State, 122 Ga. App. 695, 178 S.E.2d 335, 1970 Ga. App. LEXIS 1004 (1970).

Failure to consider less severe alternatives to mistrial. — While not determinative, the failure of a trial judge to consider adequately less severe alternatives to a mistrial shows an inadequate concern for the severe consequences of ordering a mistrial without the accused's consent. Cherry v. Director, State Bd. of Cors., 613 F.2d 1262, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19591 (5th Cir. 1980).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in declaring a mistrial and abridging defendant's constitutional right to be tried by the originally impaneled jury without first considering less drastic alternatives when the assigned courtroom was unavailable at the appointed time. The procedure the court used was flawed, not the result. A trial court is not categorically required to grant a continuance under similar circumstances; merely the court should consider a continuance as an alternative to declaring a mistrial. Since the trial court told defense counsel that if the defendant did not plead guilty, the court would declare a mistrial, the court took little or no heed to McGee's constitutional rights thereby constituting an abuse of discretion. McGee v. State, 287 Ga. App. 839, 652 S.E.2d 822, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 1053 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0391, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 176 (Ga. Feb. 11, 2008).

Unavailability established when witness asserts privilege. — Trial court accepted the witness's assertion of the witness's fifth amendment privilege, which made the witness legally unavailable under O.C.G.A. § 24-8-804(a)(1). Lumpkin v. State, 310 Ga. 139, 849 S.E.2d 175, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 669 (2020).

Unavailability of key corroborating witness. — Retrial after a mistrial was not barred by the double jeopardy prohibition, where there was "manifest necessity" for the declaration of a mistrial because of the unavailability of a key witness who could corroborate an accomplice's inculpatory testimony. Spencer v. State, 192 Ga. App. 822, 386 S.E.2d 705, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 1255 (1989).

Retrial possible if jury deadlocked. — Because defendant was acquitted of a charge of malice murder and the jury was deadlocked as to other offenses before them, retrial on the lesser included undictated offense of voluntary manslaughter was not barred, provided the jury did not know about the murder charge. State v. Archie, 230 Ga. App. 253, 495 S.E.2d 581, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 19 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C0732, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 556 (Ga. May 15, 1998).

Failure of solicitor to pay state bar dues. — Even if the solicitor failed to pay the solicitor's state bar dues, this fact did not show intentional misconduct or investigative intention on the solicitor's part, and, therefore, the double jeopardy clause did not bar the retrial of the defendant after the granting of a mistrial when it was discovered that the solicitor was not in good standing. Spears v. State, 234 Ga. App. 498, 506 S.E.2d 446, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1202 (1998).

Consent to mistrial. — Although defense counsel had an opportunity to raise an objection after the court announced its intention to excuse the jurors and before the jurors were returned to the courtroom, counsel failed to do so; therefore, the trial court was authorized to find that defendant, through counsel, impliedly consented to the grant of a mistrial and defendant's plea of double jeopardy made during trial was properly denied. Howell v. State, 266 Ga. App. 480, 597 S.E.2d 546, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 413 (2004).

Declaration of mistrial because of juror's false statements. — Where, after requesting and considering alternatives to aborting a trial, the trial judge in good faith declares a mistrial because false statements of a juror might prevent a fair trial, the trial judge has not abused sound judicial discretion. In such a case, the double jeopardy clause does not bar retrial of a state criminal defendant. Jones v. Anderson, 404 F. Supp. 182, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6877 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 522 F.2d 181, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12104 (5th Cir. 1975).

Mistrial resulting from removal of a juror who misadvised the trial court as to the juror's qualifications upon voir dire, thereby depriving the jury of the statutory minimum number, constituted a mistrial as a result of "manifest necessity," therefore, retrial following the mistrial was not barred by a plea of double jeopardy. Bishop v. State, 179 Ga. App. 606, 347 S.E.2d 350, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2654 (1986).

Option of replacing juror does not eliminate grounds for declaring mistrial. — The option of selecting a replacement juror pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-12-167 does not eliminate manifest necessity or the need for the protection of the ends of public justice as a basis for the declaration of a mistrial at a defendant's first trial. Nor is the trial court required by the double jeopardy clause to utilize an available alternative so that failure to do so constitutes an abuse of discretion. Jones v. Anderson, 404 F. Supp. 182, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6877 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 522 F.2d 181, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12104 (5th Cir. 1975).

Juror bias created a manifest necessity to declare a mistrial. Wilson v. State, 217 Ga. App. 544, 458 S.E.2d 486, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 509 (1995).

Mistrial based on outside influences on jury did not bar retrial. — In the defendant's trial for malice murder and felony murder arising out of the shooting death of a drug dealer, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in declaring a mistrial over the defendant's objection out of manifest necessity given that a juror had consulted with outside sources and shared legally inaccurate information with the jury. The mistrial did not bar the defendant's retrial on the charges. Blake v. State, 304 Ga. 747, 822 S.E.2d 207, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 798 (2018).

7. Effect of Appeal

Distinction between reversal for trial error and for insufficiency of the evidence. — Reversal for trial error, as distinguished from evidentiary insufficiency, does not constitute a decision to the effect that the government has failed to prove its case. It implies nothing with respect to the guilt or innocence of the defendant. It is a determination that a defendant has been convicted through a judicial process which is defective in some fundamental respect. Hall v. State, 244 Ga. 86, 259 S.E.2d 41, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1126 (1979).

Where a conviction is reversed for trial error, retrial does not violate the double jeopardy clause. Hall v. State, 244 Ga. 86, 259 S.E.2d 41, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1126 (1979); United States v. Bizzard, 615 F.2d 1080, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 18366 (5th Cir. 1980).

Retrial barred by finding of not guilty or that evidence did not support verdict. — A defendant can be tried a second time for an offense when the defendant's prior conviction for that same offense had been set aside on appeal unless the accused was adjudged not guilty or there was a finding that the evidence did not support the verdict. Keener v. State, 238 Ga. 7, 230 S.E.2d 846, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1072 (1976), cert. denied, 433 U.S. 911, 97 S. Ct. 2980, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1096, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2621 (1977); Holloway v. McElroy, 632 F.2d 605, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11507 (5th Cir. 1980); State v. Williams, 246 Ga. 788, 272 S.E.2d 725, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1283 (1980).

To obtain double jeopardy protection, challenge must be reviewable before second trial. — If a criminal defendant is to avoid exposure to double jeopardy and thereby enjoy the full protection of the clause, the defendant's double jeopardy challenge to an indictment must be reviewable before that subsequent exposure occurs. United States v. Dunbar, 591 F.2d 1190, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15937 (5th Cir. 1979).

Because the double jeopardy clause is a guarantee against being twice put to trial for the same offense, the rights conferred thereunder would be significantly undermined if appellate review of double jeopardy claims were postponed until after conviction and sentence. United States v. Dunbar, 611 F.2d 985, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 21035 (5th Cir. 1980).

Filing notice of appeal prevents retrial pending review. — Timely filing of a notice of appeal strips the trial court of its jurisdiction to try the case on the merits pending the outcome of the prior jeopardy appeal. United States v. Dunbar, 591 F.2d 1190, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15937 (5th Cir. 1979).

No bar to reprosecution where new trial sought and obtained. — U.S. Const., amend. 5's double jeopardy provision does not apply to a subsequent prosecution after a defendant has sought and obtained a new trial. Staggers v. Stynchcombe, 319 F. Supp. 1305, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13127 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 436 F.2d 585, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 12561 (5th Cir. 1971).

No bar to reprosecution where defendant succeeds in having conviction set aside. — The constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy imposes no limitations whatever upon the power to retry a defendant who has succeeded in getting the first conviction set aside. Staggers v. Stynchcombe, 319 F. Supp. 1305, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13127 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 436 F.2d 585, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 12561 (5th Cir. 1971).

Retrial not barred by successful appeal. — Because the defendant was tried and convicted and was granted a new trial on appeal, the grant of the new trial is not an acquittal of the defendant, and to try the defendant again does not violate the double jeopardy provision of the United States Constitution. Staggers v. State, 225 Ga. 581, 170 S.E.2d 430, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 571 (1969); Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 11780 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 590 (1978); United States v. Starling, 571 F.2d 934, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 11545 (5th Cir. 1978); Cherry v. Director, State Bd. of Cors., 613 F.2d 1262, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19591 (5th Cir. 1980).

Adjudication of delinquency was reversed as the state presented no evidence of venue and the juvenile court did not take judicial notice that the location of an aggravated assault described at a hearing was in Sumter County; the county in which the offense was committed was not established and the evidence was insufficient to support the conviction, but retrial was not barred by the double jeopardy clause so long as venue was properly established at retrial. In the Interest of T.W., 280 Ga. App. 693, 634 S.E.2d 854, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 933 (2006).

Retrial not barred by successful collateral attack. — When a conviction is overturned on collateral attack, the double jeopardy clause does not bar retrial for the charges of which the successful appellant or petitioner had been found guilty. Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 11780 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 590 (1978).

Reversal of sentence on appeal and new trial as to punishment is not double jeopardy. — If the jury, at the first trial, finds defendant guilty of the offense of murder, with such conviction for murder being affirmed on appeal, but with the sentence for that offense reversed and a new trial ordered as to punishment, the defendant is not twice put in jeopardy of being convicted for the same offense, since the conviction for murder is affirmed on appeal. Defendant's punishment was the only thing that remained to be decided by the jury upon the defendant's retrial. Redd v. State, 242 Ga. 876, 252 S.E.2d 383, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 769, cert. denied, 442 U.S. 934, 99 S. Ct. 2870, 61 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1979).

Government is barred from appealing an acquittal. — U.S. Const., amend. 5's double jeopardy prohibition bars the government from appealing an acquittal in a criminal prosecution. Price v. Georgia, 398 U.S. 323, 90 S. Ct. 1757, 26 L. Ed. 2d 300, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 22 (1970).

Government can appeal a judgment of acquittal entered after a verdict of guilt. United States v. Clemones, 577 F.2d 1247, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 9649 (5th Cir.), modified, 582 F.2d 1373, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 7939 (5th Cir. 1978).

Review of court of appeals decision in favor of defendant in criminal case. — The Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review by certiorari any decision by the court of appeals in the defendant's favor in a criminal case, and a defendant's constitutional right against double jeopardy is not implicated when the state seeks discretionary review of an adverse decision by the court of appeals in a criminal case. State v. Tyson, 273 Ga. 690, 544 S.E.2d 444, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 273 (2001).

Failure to assert claim on interlocutory appeal. — The double jeopardy claim is not lost for failure to assert it on an interlocutory appeal. United States v. Bizzard, 674 F.2d 1382, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19491 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 4148 (1982).

Where a double jeopardy claim is found by the district court to be frivolous, the filing of a notice of appeal divests the district court of jurisdiction to try the case. United States v. Bizzard, 674 F.2d 1382, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19491 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 4148 (1982).

Waiver of right to appeal. — A defendant is entitled to appellate review of a double jeopardy claim prior to trial, but such right to appeal before trial can be waived. United States v. Bizzard, 674 F.2d 1382, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19491 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 4148 (1982).

Where a defendant notices an appeal of a double jeopardy claim, suspends the trial, then dismisses the appeal, the right to appeal before trial is waived. United States v. Bizzard, 674 F.2d 1382, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19491 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 305, 74 L. Ed. 2d 286, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 4148 (1982).

Reversal for insufficiency of evidence, but not for error, bars retrial.

— Once a reviewing court reverses a conviction solely for insufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict of guilty, double jeopardy bars retrial; however, where a defendant obtains a reversal based upon "trial error," double jeopardy does not bar retrial. Osborne v. State, 166 Ga. App. 439, 304 S.E.2d 416, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3239 (1983).

Grant of new trial based on insufficiency of evidence. — Where defendant's motion for new trial was granted on the basis of insufficiency of evidence, the trial court erred in denying defendant's plea in bar as to the defendant's further prosecution. Priest v. State, 265 Ga. 399, 456 S.E.2d 503, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 242 (1995).

Retrial not barred where reversal for erroneous admission of evidence.

— Where the testimony of a lab technician was not inadmissible because it was incompetent, but because the defense had not been furnished a copy of the laboratory report as required by former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211, it was not excluded automatically on retrial. Thus, where the original conviction was reversed due to the trial error in the admission of evidence, rather than insufficiency of the evidence, a retrial was not barred by the double jeopardy provisions of the Georgia and United States Constitutions. Osborne v. State, 166 Ga. App. 439, 304 S.E.2d 416, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3239 (1983).

Retrial not barred by judicial or prosecutorial misconduct at initial trial. — Even if misconduct of the trial court and prosecutor required the defendant to represent self at the initial trial without benefit of counsel, a retrial was not barred since there was no evidence that retrial was an intended consequence of the actions of the court and prosecutor. Keith v. State, 222 Ga. App. 360, 474 S.E.2d 256, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 825 (1996).

Retrial not barred by failure to properly establish venue. — Although there was sufficient evidence to support a juvenile's adjudication of delinquency based on the finding that the juvenile had committed acts, which, had the juvenile been an adult, would have supported a conviction for burglary in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(a), the adjudication was reversed because the state failed to present any evidence to establish proof of venue beyond a reasonable doubt. The investigating officers' county of employment did not, in and of itself, constitute sufficient proof of venue to meet the beyond a reasonable doubt standard; however, the reviewing court noted that retrying the juvenile was not prohibited under the double jeopardy clause, because the evidence presented at trial was otherwise sufficient to support the adjudication of delinquency. In the Interest of B.R., 289 Ga. App. 6, 656 S.E.2d 172, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 1320 (2007).

Sentencing error corrected by Supreme Court of Georgia on appeal averted double jeopardy violation. — While the defendant was correct in asserting that the trial court should not have imposed sentence on both felony murder guilty verdicts, the Supreme Court of Georgia corrected that error on appeal when it affirmed the judgment of conviction and sentence only on the count three guilty verdict, and the defendant's argument was not based on what actually occurred, but upon speculation that, had the trial court imposed the correct sentence, it would have done so by merging count three into count two. Thus, even assuming, arguendo, that such speculation warranted a review of the sentence imposed, such presented no basis for reversal because nothing required the trial court to merge the two counts in the way the defendant proposed. Brady v. State, 283 Ga. 359, 659 S.E.2d 368, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 299 (2008).

8. Resentencing

Neither double jeopardy nor equal protection provisions bar more severe sentence upon reconviction. —

The guarantee against double jeopardy does not restrict the length of sentence which may be imposed upon reconviction, and the imposition of a more severe sentence upon retrial does not violate the equal protection clause of the U.S. Const., amend. 14. Chaffin v. State, 227 Ga. 327, 180 S.E.2d 741, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 690 (1971); Rozier v. State, 126 Ga. App. 336, 190 S.E.2d 627, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1139 (1972); Stuckey v. Stynchcombe, 614 F.2d 75, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19420 (5th Cir. 1980).

Sentence modifications. — Double jeopardy concerns are not implicated in sentence modifications as long as the overall period of imprisonment is reduced. United States v. Jackson, 923 F.2d 1494, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 2559 (11th Cir. 1991).

Juvenile defendant's voluntary manslaughter sentence was vacated, and resentencing was ordered, when the trial court erred by increasing the same after defendant had already begun serving it, because the original sentence was final at the time it was imposed, and defendant had no reason to believe otherwise; hence, the trial court's increased sentence constituted double jeopardy and could not stand. Williams v. State, 273 Ga. App. 42, 614 S.E.2d 146, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 399 (2005), cert. denied, No. S06C1198, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 364 (Ga. May 18, 2006).

Imposition of more severe penalty following successful appeal. —

System that allows the imposition of a more severe penalty following a successful appeal is not per se constitutionally infirm. The focus is on the potential for vindictiveness to determine whether a particular procedure violates due process. Dan J. Sheehan Co. v. Occupational Safety & Health Review Comm'n, 520 F.2d 1036, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12445 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 424 U.S. 965, 96 S. Ct. 1458, 47 L. Ed. 2d 731, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 4042 (1976).

Vindictiveness against a defendant for successfully attacking the defendant's first conviction must play no part in resentencing after retrial. Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 66 (1973), see 23 Emory L.J. 879, United States v. McDuffie, 542 F.2d 236, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 6299 (5th Cir. 1976); Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 11780 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 590 (1978); Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2349 (1980).

Rendition of a higher sentence by a jury upon retrial does not violate the double jeopardy clause nor the due process clause so long as the jury is not informed of the prior sentence and the second sentence is not otherwise shown to be a product of vindictiveness. Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 66 (1973) (for comment, see 23 Emory L. J. 879(1974)).

Defendant must show that jury acted in spirit of vindictiveness. — An increase in a defendant's sentence by a jury, on retrial of the case, is not unconstitutional unless the defendant can demonstrate that the increase was prompted by a spirit of vindictiveness, since the jury ordinarily will not know of the previous trial or sentence. Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 455 F.2d 640, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 11400 (5th Cir. 1972), aff'd, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 66 (1973) (for comment, see 23 Emory L. J. 879 (1974)).

Judge must affirmatively state reasons for more severe sentence upon retrial. — To ensure the absence of vindictiveness and to assure defendants that they will not be penalized for asserting their rights on appeal, whenever a judge imposes a more severe sentence upon a defendant after a new trial, the reasons for so doing must affirmatively appear. Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714, 1973 U.S.

LEXIS 66 (1973); United States v. McDuffie, 542 F.2d 236, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 6299 (5th Cir. 1976); Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 11780 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 590 (1978); Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2349 (1980).

Reasons given for more severe sentence should in fact support the imposition of the harsher penalty. Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2349 (1980).

More severe sentence must be based upon objective information concerning identifiable conduct of the defendant occurring after the original sentencing proceeding. United States v. McDuffie, 542 F.2d 236, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 6299 (5th Cir. 1976); Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 11780 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 590 (1978).

Factual data upon which the increased sentence is based must be made part of the record, so that the constitutional legitimacy of the increased sentence may be fully reviewed on appeal. United States v. McDuffie, 542 F.2d 236, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 6299 (5th Cir. 1976).

Trial court could not sentence defendant as recidivist after defendant was already serving prior oral sentence. — Trial court improperly increased the defendant's sentence by imposing a recidivist sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, making the defendant ineligible for parole, when the defendant had already begun to serve the trial court's prior oral sentence; although the length of the sentence was not changed, the recidivist designation constituted added punishment. Caldwell v. State, 355 Ga. App. 608, 845 S.E.2d 345, 2020 Ga. App. LEXIS 356 (2020).

Submitting an additional aggravating circumstance to the jury for its consideration at a resentencing trial does not violate double jeopardy protection. Davis v. State, 242 Ga. 901, 252 S.E.2d 443, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 765 (1979), vacated in part, 446 U.S. 961, 100 S. Ct. 2934, 64 L. Ed. 2d 819, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 1790 (1980).

Resentencing to correct an illegal sentence is not double jeopardy, even if the prisoner has already served part of the prisoner's term. Stuckey v. Stynchcombe, 614 F.2d 75, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19420 (5th Cir. 1980).

Resentencing to include the mandatory fine did not violate double jeopardy. — Because O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(f)(1) required a mandatory minimum sentence for trafficking in methamphetamine of ten years and a $200,000 fine, and the sentence imposed by the trial court failed to include the fine, the trial court's resentencing to add the fine after defendant began serving the sentence was valid and did not violate defendant's double jeopardy rights. The suspended sentence provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1(a) were inapplicable to the mandatory sentence provisions of § 16-13-31, and there was no indication that the trial court intended to suspend the fine portion. Strickland v. State, 301 Ga. App. 272, 687 S.E.2d 221, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1365 (2009).

Where the original sentence was invalid, vacation of that sentence and imposition of another sentence did not constitute double jeopardy. Crews v. State, 170 Ga. App. 104, 316 S.E.2d 549, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 2857 (1984).

Prisoner entitled to credit for time served. — The guarantee against double jeopardy is violated when punishment already exacted for an offense is not fully credited in imposing a new sentence after retrial for the same offense. Chaffin v. State, 227 Ga. 327, 180 S.E.2d 741, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 690 (1971).

Court may not reinstate original, vacated sentence where lesser punishment received upon resentencing. — Where a defendant who was convicted for murder and sentenced to life imprisonment is granted a new trial and subsequently pleaded guilty to voluntary manslaughter and is sentenced to ten years imprisonment, the trial court is without authority to vacate the motion for new trial and ten year sentence and reinstate the sentence of life imprisonment. Brown v. Moody, 243 Ga. 473, 254 S.E.2d 853, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 945 (1979).

The imposition of a new sentence to be served consecutively to a sentence on a prior conviction, in place of a vacated sentence that was to be served concurrently with the sentence on that prior conviction, may constitute an impermissible harsher punishment. Thomas v. State, 150 Ga. App. 341, 258 S.E.2d 28, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2304 (1979).

Different aggravating circumstance to support death sentence. — Where a first death sentence is vacated, the double jeopardy clause does not prevent the state from relying on an aggravating circumstance to support a death sentence at a second sentencing hearing not relied on at the first such hearing. Davis v. Kemp, 829 F.2d 1522, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 12938 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 929, 108 S. Ct. 1099, 99 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 996 (1988).

Death penalty may be sought on retrial. — A reversal of a conviction in which the death penalty was imposed does not preclude imposing the death penalty upon a retrial unless the sentencer or reviewing court has found that the evidence is insufficient to support the death penalty. Crawford v. State, 256 Ga. 57, 344 S.E.2d 215, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 707, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 989, 107 S. Ct. 583, 93 L. Ed. 2d 585, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 4966 (1986).

State was not prohibited from seeking anew the death penalty after reversal of a murder conviction, where, although the jury had improperly specified "kidnapping" as the aggravating circumstance in imposing the death penalty, there had been no finding that the evidence was insufficient to support the death penalty. Crawford v. State, 256 Ga. 57, 344 S.E.2d 215, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 707, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 989, 107 S. Ct. 583, 93 L. Ed. 2d 585, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 4966 (1986).

Death penalty barred upon retrial after jury imposed life sentence. — If convicting jury in a murder trial sentences the defendant to life imprisonment, this constitutes an acquittal of the charge that the evidence supports a finding of a statutory aggravating circumstance, and in any retrial the double jeopardy clause prohibits the defendant's being given the death sentence. Hill v. State, 250 Ga. 821, 301 S.E.2d 269, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1033 (1983).

Initial judgment that evidence insufficient to support death sentence bars imposing death penalty on retrial. — The federal district court's initial judgment holding that there was insufficient evidence to support a death sentence, i.e., insufficient evidence to prove the alleged statutory aggravating factors beyond a reasonable doubt, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(c), which decision was left undisturbed by the federal appellate court, which reversed the district's court's denial of the writ of habeas corpus with respect to the guilt phase of the trial, barred the state under the double jeopardy clause from attempting to impose the death penalty on the defendant in the defendant's retrial. Young v. Kemp, 760 F.2d 1097, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30004 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 476 U.S. 1123, 106 S. Ct. 1991, 90 L. Ed. 2d 672, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 3163 (1986).

Only one aggravating factor was presented to and considered by the jury which imposed the death sentence in the defendant's first trial for murder. Since the ground failed, on appeal, for constitutional insufficiency of the evidence, the state could not, should it choose to try the defendant again, seek to reimpose the death penalty. Godfrey v. Francis, 613 F. Supp. 747, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18352 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 836 F.2d 1557, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 453 (11th Cir. 1988).

Overturning death sentence on legal grounds. — If a defendant overturns a death sentence on legal grounds, the death penalty may be sought on resentencing, and the state may offer proof of statutory aggravating circumstances not offered at the first trial. Zant v. Redd, 249 Ga. 211, 290 S.E.2d 36, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1132 (1982), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3552, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 4715 (1983).

If a defendant overturns a death sentence on technical grounds, the sentence is nullified and the state and the defense start anew. Consequently, on resentencing, the state may again seek the death penalty and may offer any evidence on aggravating circumstances in support thereof. Likewise, the defendant is entitled to bring the jury any mitigating circumstances available to him, including those not known or utilized at the first sentencing trial. Zant v. Redd, 249 Ga. 211, 290 S.E.2d 36, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1132 (1982), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3552, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 4715 (1983).

Rule that state cannot seek death penalty on resentencing after original sentencing jury has imposed a life sentence does not apply where jury has imposed death penalty and death penalty is vacated on legal grounds as opposed to grounds that the evidence is insufficient to support the verdict. Patrick v. State, 249 Ga. 708, 293 S.E.2d 329, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1177, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1089, 103 S. Ct. 575, 74 L. Ed. 2d 936, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 4739 (1982).

Reimposition of death sentence based on another aggravating circumstance. — The double jeopardy clause was not violated at the defendant's resentencing trial because the judge permitted the state to introduce evidence pertaining to the defendant's alleged rape of the victim, where the jury in the first sentencing trial returned a death sentence upon a finding of "torture." The first jury may have taken the alleged rape into account, as sexual abuse constitutes "torture" under Georgia law for the purpose of a death sentence aggravating circumstance. Green v. Zant, 738 F.2d 1529, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 20071 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1098, 105 S. Ct. 607, 83 L. Ed. 2d 716, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 471 (1984).

Amending of orally pronounced sentence permitted if not vindictive. — Court is authorized to amend its oral pronouncement to change sentence from 12 months on probation to 12 months in jail, where there is no suggestion of vindictiveness against defendant for having exercised any legal right, but rather it is only trial court's effort to make punishment fit crime of which jury had found defendant to be guilty. Curry v. State, 248 Ga. 183, 281 S.E.2d 604, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 941 (1981).

Although an oral sentence is not a binding judgment of the court, once a person has entered upon the execution of the sentence, the court is without power to change it by increasing the punishment. However, when there is an error or irregularity in failing to inform the defendant of conditions under which the sentence to confinement was imposed, the court may correct the error by recalling the defendant and sentencing the defendant as provided by law. Henderson v. State, 162 Ga. App. 320, 292 S.E.2d 77, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3122 (1982).

Where the record shows, without dispute, that the amended sentence is identical to the intended original sentence and the amended sentence is corrected to the oral pronouncement of the trial court and to the defendant's original understanding of the sentence, this is merely a correction to make the sentence speak the truth. Henderson v. State, 162 Ga. App. 320, 292 S.E.2d 77, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3122 (1982).

Once a person has entered upon the execution of the person's sentence, the court is without power to change it by increasing the punishment. Brown v. Moody, 243 Ga. 473, 254 S.E.2d 853, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 945 (1979); Hudson v. State, 248 Ga. 397, 283 S.E.2d 271, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 1016 (1981).

Sentence which has been reduced to writing and signed by judge may not be increased after defendant has begun to serve that sentence. Curry v. State, 248 Ga. 183, 281 S.E.2d 604, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 941 (1981).

Unless a statute explicitly provides for sentence modification, or the defendant knowingly engages in deception, a sentence may not be altered in a manner prejudicial to the defendant after the defendant has started serving the sentence. United States v. Jones, 722 F.2d 632, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 14381 (11th Cir. 1983).

Oral sentence may not be increased after execution commences. — Although it is true that an oral sentence is not a binding judgment of the court, the law is also clear that once a person has entered upon the execution of the sentence, the court is without power to change it by increasing the punishment. This is considered a violation of the prohibition under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against double punishment or jeopardy. Inman v. State, 124 Ga. App. 190, 183 S.E.2d 413, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 866 (1971), overruled in part, Pittman v. State, 366 Ga. App. 372, 883 S.E.2d 56, 2023 Ga. App. LEXIS 10 (2023); Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1668 (1973); Jones v. State, 155 Ga. App. 382, 271 S.E.2d 30, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2589 (1980); Harp v. State, 228 Ga. App. 473, 491 S.E.2d 923.

Oral declaration as to what sentence shall be is not the sentence of the court; the sentence signed by the judge is. However, oral declaration of sentence may not be increased after defendant has begun to serve it. Curry v. State, 248 Ga. 183, 281 S.E.2d 604, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 941 (1981).

Where defendant is jailed over weekend pursuant to oral sentence, increase in sentence barred. — Where a defendant is in fact incarcerated immediately upon oral announcement of misdemeanor sentence on a Friday and is held in jail over the weekend, the court is without power to increase the sentence the following Monday. Jones v. State, 155 Ga. App. 382, 271 S.E.2d 30, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2589 (1980).

Self-Incrimination

1. In General

Self-incrimination clause creates zone of privacy. — The fifth amendment, in its self-incrimination clause, enables the citizen to create a zone of privacy that the government may not force the citizen to surrender to the citizen's detriment. Smith v. Price, 446 F. Supp. 828, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13884 (M.D. Ga. 1977), rev'd, 616 F.2d 1371, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 17470 (5th Cir. 1980).

Criminal Procedure Discovery Act. — The requirement of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4, part of the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., that a defendant disclose any mitigating evidence the defendant intended to introduce in the presentence hearing did not violate the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination; statements of witnesses a defendant intends to call to testify are not personal to the defendant, and although the disclosure of the list of witnesses a defendant intends to call is personal to the defendant, a trial court can exercise its discretion to specify the time, place, and manner of making the discovery and to enter such orders as seem just under the circumstances when self-incrimination concerns arise, such as a protective order or a continuance pending the completion of the guilt/innocence phase of the trial. Muhammad v. State, 282 Ga. 247, 647 S.E.2d 560, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 489 (2007).

— The constitutional privileges against self-incrimination are applicable to post-arrest, pretrial police interrogation. Howard v. State, 237 Ga. 471, 228 S.E.2d 860, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1272 (1976); Clark v. State, 237 Ga. 901, 230 S.E.2d 277, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1439 (1976).

Applicability of the privilege to the trial itself. Howard v. State, 237 Ga. 471, 228 S.E.2d 860, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1272 (1976).

Protections of U.S. Const., amend. 5 apply fully to state proceedings through U.S. Const., amend. 14. Tennessee, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga. App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2579 (1977).

When fifth amendment protections may be invoked. — Protections of U.S. Const., amend. 5 may be invoked in civil as well as criminal actions. Tennessee, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga. App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2579 (1977).

The insured's danger of incrimination was sufficient to support the insured's refusal to answer the insured's liability insurer's questions about the insured's actions giving rise to the claim against the insured, because those actions had led to criminal convictions, and a possibility existed that the insured's pending motion for a new trial in the criminal case could have been granted. *Anderson v. Guar. Ins. Co., 235 Ga. App. 306, 508 S.E.2d 726, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1430 (1998), cert. denied, No. S99C0395, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 224 (Ga. Feb. 26, 1999).

In defendant's trial for forgery and racketeering for selling fake badges for a golf tournament to a ticket agency, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for mistrial when the state attempted to question defendant's spouse after the spouse invoked the fifth amendment while on the witness stand because, despite defendant's argument that defendant's spouse's use of the fifth amendment could have been interpreted as evidence against the defendant and thus violated defendant's own right against self incrimination, the spouse's use of the fifth amendment related to the spouse's own concerns about self incrimination, not to defendant's, and the court instructed defendant that defendant could request a charge on the scope of the fifth amendment right against self incrimination but the record did not indicate that defendant requested such a charge. Davis v. State, 264 Ga. App. 128, 589 S.E.2d 700, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1414 (2003).

Privilege against self-incrimination cannot be asserted in advance of the questions actually propounded in the examination or hearing. Spivey v. State, 200 Ga. App. 284, 407 S.E.2d 425, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 978 (1991), cert. denied, No. S91C1381, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 834 (Ga. Oct. 18, 1991).

Privilege against self-incrimination may not be overridden by the right of confrontation under U.S. Const., amend. 6. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d 819, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20902 (5th Cir. 1981).

Right to resist inquiry not as extensive under first amendment. — Undeniably, U.S. Const., amend. 1, in some circumstances protects an individual from being compelled to disclose the individual's associational relationships. However, the protections of U.S. Const., amend. 1, unlike a proper claim of the privilege against self-incrimination under U.S. Const., amend. 5, do not afford a witness the right to resist inquiry in all circumstances. Braden v. United States, 272 F.2d 653, 1959 U.S. App. LEXIS 2911

State courts and federal constitutional right against self-incrimination. — State courts do not have the power to expand the federal constitutional right against self-incrimination beyond the limits given it by federal authorities. Page v. Page, 235 Ga. 131, 218 S.E.2d 859, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 804 (1975).

Amendment applies to all evidence, oral or real, not just testimony. — While the language of U.S. Const., amend. 5 has long been construed to be limited to testimony, the language of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI) has been construed to limit the state from forcing the individual to present evidence, oral or real. Johnson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 496, 274 S.E.2d 837, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3091 (1980).

Constitutional right against self-incrimination is incorporated in O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1370 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977).

O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20 is governed by the same standards as its constitutional counterpart, U.S. Const., amend. 5. Jordan v. State, 239 Ga. 526, 238 S.E.2d 69, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1232 (1977).

Where privilege expressly predicated on U.S. Const., amend. 5, state constitutional and statutory provisions immaterial. — Where refusal to answer questions is expressly and exclusively predicated on the self-incrimination clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5, the parallel Georgia constitutional and statutory provisions, Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI) and O.C.G.A. § 24-9-27, and interpretations of them, are not material. Master v. Savannah Sur. Assocs., 148 Ga. App. 678, 252 S.E.2d 186, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 1606 (1979).

Essential predicate for a claim under U.S. Const., amend. 5 is a finding that an accused has been compelled to incriminate oneself. McAllister v. Brown, 555 F.2d 1277, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 12440 (5th Cir. 1977).

Determination as to whether statement would be incriminatory. — The protection of U.S. Const., amend. 5 and O.C.G.A. § 24-9-27 can only be invoked when there is a substantial and real danger of incrimination. The mere say-so of the witness does not establish this. Defendant must also show that the defendant has reasonable cause to apprehend danger of incrimination from the answer, and the court must first determine whether there is a proper basis for invoking the privilege. Prince & Paul v. Don Mitchell's WLAQ, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 502, 194 S.E.2d 269, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 927 (1972).

Trial court did not err in refusing to let the defendants call the co-indictee as a witness to testify about the prior acts of violence the co-indictee committed in 1994 for choking the co-indictee's mother and in 2004 for choking another person because the co-indictee's counsel announced that the co-indictee would invoke the co-indictee's privilege against self-incrimination as to any questions about those prior acts and the trial court reasonably concluded that any questions as to the co-indictee's past violent acts could incriminate the co-indictee and affect the co-indictee's pending trial. Brown v. State, 295 Ga. 804, 764 S.E.2d 376, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 751 (2014).

Extensive questioning concerning financial affairs as incrimination. — Extensive questioning concerning financial affairs might tend to incriminate a person as a matter of law. In the particular situation of financial affairs, only the defendant or witness can weigh the effect. Busby v. Citizens Bank, 131 Ga. App. 738, 206 S.E.2d 640, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1538 (1974).

It is not error to permit the defendant to determine whether answers would incriminate the defendant. — If a court can not say that answers to questions concerning a defendant's financial resources and dealings might not tend to incriminate the defendant in any matter, under either state or federal law, a trial judge does not err in allowing the defendant to determine whether answers to the interrogatories might tend to incriminate the defendant. Mallin v. Mallin,

227 Ga. 833, 183 S.E.2d 377, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 859 (1971).

Person is not entitled to Miranda warnings as a matter of right, even though that person is a suspect, unless that person had been taken into custody or has been deprived of freedom of action in another significant way. Although the focus of the investigation may be on the defendant, the defendant must also be in a custodial situation for Miranda to apply. Ford v. State, 205 Ga. App. 12, 421 S.E.2d 294, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1055 (1992).

Where the accused was neither in custody nor so restrained as to equate to a formal arrest, any statements made to the investigating officer were made under noncustodial circumstances and Miranda warnings were not required. Tolliver v. State, 273 Ga. 785, 546 S.E.2d 525, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 331 (2001).

Miranda warnings not required if movement restrained by defendant's injury not police. — Defendant was not in "custody" for Miranda purposes when questioned by police because although defendant's movement was restrained, it was because of defendant's own injury and not by any police conduct. Meadows v. State, 264 Ga. App. 160, 590 S.E.2d 173, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1426 (2003).

Defendant driven to hospital by police not in custody and Miranda not required. — Since the defendant was not under formal arrest or any restraint when an officer questioned the defendant in the defendant's hotel room and drove the defendant to a hospital, Miranda warnings were not required. That the defendant was the focus of a murder investigation did not require the officer to give Miranda warnings; the relevant inquiry was whether a reasonable person in the defendant's situation would have perceived that the person was in custody. Timmreck v. State, 285 Ga. 39, 673 S.E.2d 198, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 49 (2009).

Assertion of privilege with particular questions protected. — Defendant in SEC violation case had repeatedly invoked the defendant's fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination, but not in a blanket manner, in pre-indictment discovery requests. Although a defendant may not assert the privilege on matters which would not tend to incriminate defendant, it was likely that any testimony or response sought in investigating allegations of civil allegations of fraud would provide or would lead to providing relevant incriminating information for a criminal securities fraud case; furthermore, the act of producing documents whose contents might not be privileged would likely be sufficiently testimonial and incriminating in nature to trigger the fifth amendment privilege. Therefore, the defendant's response to particular questions by invoking the privilege was protected. SEC v. Zimmerman, 854 F. Supp. 896, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9792 (N.D. Ga.), dismissed sub nom. SEC v. Scherm, 854 F. Supp. 900, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20035 (N.D. Ga. 1993).

Privilege need not be expressly invoked where plain from context. — If it is plain from the context of the questioning in general that the plaintiff is invoking the privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against self incrimination it is not necessary to invoke the privilege in express terms. Temple v. Temple, 228 Ga. 73, 184 S.E.2d 183, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 463 (1971).

Assertion of privilege must be clear. — Law enforcement officers must immediately cease questioning a defendant who has clearly asserted a right to have counsel present during custodial interrogation; but if the defendant makes a reference to an attorney that is ambiguous or equivocal in that a reasonable officer in light of the circumstances would have understood only that the suspect might be invoking the right to counsel, cessation of the questioning is not required. Since a reasonable officer would not necessarily have understood defendant's reference to an attorney to be a clear request for counsel, the officer was not required to cease the questioning. Fitz v. State, 275 Ga. 349, 566 S.E.2d 668, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 587 (2002).

Defendant's statements made to law enforcement during an interrogation in jail were properly suppressed as made in violation of the defendant's fifth amendment right to remain silent because the defendant's statement that "I ain't got no more to say. I mean, this is it" was an unequivocal assertion of the right against self-incrimination; statements made prior to that assertion were not suppressed as the defendant was properly given Miranda rights. State v. Moon, 285 Ga. 55, 673 S.E.2d 255, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 58 (2009).

Trial court did not commit a clear error in admitting the defendant's incriminating statements into evidence because the defendant failed to clearly and unequivocally invoke the defendant's fifth amendment right to remain silent during a custodial interview with the police as the defendant's mumbled statements were not indisputably discernible. Walker v. State, 312 Ga. 332, 862 S.E.2d 542, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 591 (2021).

Exclusion is remedy for violation of U.S. Const., amend. 5. — Under Miranda, a criminal defendant's remedy for a violation of the defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 is the exclusion from trial of any evidence obtained from the defendant during the defendant's illegal detention. Sheffield v. State, 235 Ga. 507, 220 S.E.2d 265, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 914 (1975).

Effect of civil action while criminal charges as to same conduct pending. — Being forced to go to trial in a civil case while criminal charges arising out of the same conduct are pending does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 5 by forcing the defendant to choose between preserving the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination and losing the civil action. United States v. White, 589 F.2d 1283, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16634 (5th Cir. 1979).

If there is no indication that invocation of U.S. Const., amend. 5 would result in an adverse judgment, nor any indication that the defendant's silence would compel a verdict for the plaintiff, compelling the defendant to go to trial in a civil suit before the defendant's trial on a related criminal charge did not violate the defendant's privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5. United States v. White, 589 F.2d 1283, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16634 (5th Cir. 1979).

In a case in which the defendant moved the court to stay further proceedings in a civil action by the comptroller of the currency pending the outcome of possible criminal proceedings against the defendant in a pending criminal investigation, it was held that although the choice between testifying or invoking U.S. Const., amend. 5 may be difficult, it does not create a basis for a stay. Comptroller of Currency v. Lance, 632 F. Supp. 437, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27391 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Generally, there is no unconstitutional infringement of the fifth amendment privilege by forcing an individual to risk disadvantage in a civil case by refusing to provide material facts for fear of self-incrimination in a pending criminal case, but there is an exception to this rule in instances where an individual who is a defendant in pending civil and criminal cases is forced to choose between forfeiting the privilege against self-incrimination or losing the civil case by automatic summary judgment; the exception does not apply if assertion of the privilege merely results in loss of the defendant's most effective defense rather than an adverse summary judgment. Anderson v. Southern Guar. Ins. Co., 235 Ga. App. 306, 508 S.E.2d 726, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1430 (1998), cert. denied, No. S99C0395, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 224 (Ga. Feb. 26, 1999).

In a widow's wrongful death suit arising out of a vehicle accident in which the defendant driver was charged, the driver could claim the fifth amendment in response to the widow's discovery; however, there was no blanket fifth amendment right to refuse to answer questions, and the trial court's judgment did not show that the court evaluated the privilege in each response in which the privilege was asserted, requiring remand. U-Haul Co. of Arizona v. Rutland, 348 Ga. App. 738, 824 S.E.2d 644, 2019 Ga. App. LEXIS 87 (2019).

Forfeiture proceedings. — Defendant failed to show how requiring the defendant to conform to the pleading requirements of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49(o)(3), relating to civil forfeiture proceedings against persons arrested for controlled substances violations, violated defendant's fifth amendment right against self-incrimination. Jett v. State, 230 Ga. App. 655, 498 S.E.2d 274, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 250 (1998).

Defendant was not compelled to be a witness against self in violation of defendant's fifth amendment rights when the trial court permitted admission in defendant's criminal case of answers defendant gave in pleadings in a related civil forfeiture proceeding that defendant owned certain items of property seized at defendant's residence, including illegal drugs, as defendant could have sought a stay of the forfeiture proceeding by asserting defendant's fifth amendment rights under the forfeiture statute, but chose not to do so. Clemons v. State, 257 Ga. App. 96, 574 S.E.2d 535, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 1059 (2002).

Trial court could infer admissions from defendant's invocation of defendant's fifth amendment right against self-incrimination in a civil forfeiture proceeding. Sanders v. State, 259 Ga. App. 422, 577 S.E.2d 94, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 121 (2003).

Consent to search. — Although a consent to search was requested and obtained after the defendant had invoked the defendant's right to remain silent, the defendant's rights under the fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination were not violated by use of the consent and by introduction of the evidence obtained as a result of the ensuing search, since the fifth amendment protects only against compelled incriminating evidence of a testimonial nature and not against compelled production of physical evidence. United States v. Hidalgo, 7 F.3d 1566, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 30960 (11th Cir. 1993).

Refusal of consent to search home was not testimonial. — Because the Fifth Amendment's protection against self-incrimination was limited to testimonial evidence, the defendant's right was not violated by the admission of testimony that the defendant initially consented, but then refused consent, for law enforcement to search the defendant's home after a murder; the request to search the defendant's home did not seek testimonial evidence from the defendant. Dunbar v. State, 309 Ga. 252, 845 S.E.2d 607, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 461 (2020).

Privilege retained despite guilty plea. — Defendant who entered a guilty plea retained the privilege against self-incrimination prior to sentencing. United States v. Kuku, 129 F.3d 1435, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 34308 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 909, 118 S. Ct. 2071, 141 L. Ed. 2d 147, 1998 U.S. LEXIS 3664 (1998).

Right against self-incrimination is personal. — A witness cannot be compelled to answer any question the answer to which would tend to incriminate the witness, or would constitute a necessary link in the chain of testimony sufficient to convict the witness of a criminal offense. But the privilege is personal to the witness, and cannot be claimed for the witness by a party to the action. Johnson v. State, 112 Ga. App. 597, 145 S.E.2d 636, 1965 Ga. App. LEXIS 782 (1965).

Defendant in a civil action lacks standing to challenge the admission of testimony given in a previous criminal action on the ground that such action violated the witness' fifth amendment rights or the immunity agreement between the witness and the state, since the privilege against self-incrimination is that of the person under examination as a witness and is intended for the witness' protection only. Kesler v. Veal, 165 Ga. App. 475, 300 S.E.2d 217, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 1915 (1983).

Right may not be vicariously asserted. — Some constitutional rights are personal and may not be vicariously asserted, among these is the right against self-incrimination. Hall v. United States, 413 F.2d 45, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 11638 (5th Cir. 1969).

Right against incrimination is personal right. — Party's successors cannot invoke the original party's right under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against incrimination. The privilege is purely personal. United States v. Ayers, 615 F.2d 658, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 18550 (5th Cir. 1980).

Defendant may not invoke the defendant's privilege on behalf of a witness. — The privilege against self-incrimination is that of the person under examination as a witness and is intended for the witness' protection only. The defendant on trial has no standing to raise this issue on behalf of the witness, even where the witness is an accomplice. Lively v. State, 237 Ga. 35, 226 S.E.2d 581, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1137 (1976).

Privilege as applicable to juveniles.

— A child is entitled to the same constitutional privilege against self-incrimination as is available to adults. Freeman v. Wilcox, 119 Ga. App. 325, 167 S.E.2d 163, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 1087 (1969), overruled in part, Cuvas v. State, 306 Ga. App. 679, 703 S.E.2d 116, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 1029 (2010), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023) (for comment, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 597 (1971)).

Constitutional privilege against self-incrimination is as applicable to juveniles as it is with respect to adults. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 2191 (1975).

Privilege as applicable to corporations. — Under U.S. Const., amend. 5, a corporation cannot avail itself of the privilege against self-incrimination. Classic Art Corp. v. State, 245 Ga. 448, 265 S.E.2d 577, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 815 (1980); In re Agan, 498 F. Supp. 493, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13453 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Corporate officer may be compelled to identify and authenticate corporate records produced pursuant to a valid subpoena duces tecum even though this involves compelling oral testimony, where the officer is compelled to state nothing more than the belief that the papers are those described in the subpoena, since such testimony is only ancillary to the primary act compelled — that of producing the documents. In re Agan, 498 F. Supp. 493, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13453 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Corporate officer may be compelled to give name and address. — In context of compliance by corporate officer with requests for documents designated in subpoena duces tecum, absent unusual circumstances, testifying before grand jury as to the officer's name and address merely provides identification information ancillary to production of the documents called for in the subpoena and is not within the scope of U.S. Const., amend. 5's privilege against self-incrimination. In re Agan, 498 F. Supp. 493, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13453 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Corporate officers may be compelled to produce corporate records even though they may be personally incriminating, since corporations can only speak through their officers. In re Agan, 498 F. Supp. 493, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13453 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Even though a corporate officer is the sole shareholder or alter ego of the corporation, the officer may be compelled to produce corporate records that may incriminate the officer. In re Agan, 498 F. Supp. 493, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13453 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Generally, corporate books and records cannot be insulated from reasonable demands by governmental authorities by a claim of personal privilege and same only applies to the private property of the person claiming the privilege; thus, a corporate officer may not withhold testimony or documents on the ground that the corporation would be incriminated, nor may the custodian of corporate books or records withhold them on the ground that the custodian personally might be incriminated by their production. Jacobs v. State, 157 Ga. App. 466, 278 S.E.2d 21, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1870 (1981).

An individual may not claim the fifth amendment privilege against compulsory self-incrimination to withhold documents of a collective entity held in a representative capacity and an order of a district court finding that individual in contempt of court for refusing to produce the records of a corporation in compliance with a grand jury subpoena duces tecum will be affirmed. In re Grand Jury Subpoena Duces Tecum, 795 F.2d 904, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 27134 (11th Cir. 1986).

A corporate representative or agent cannot claim a fifth amendment privilege against producing corporate documents, whether or not they were prepared by the representative or agent, regardless of the incriminating nature of the information they contain. In re Grand Jury Subpoena, 635 F. Supp. 569, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26314 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Defendant in a criminal case, an attorney who was the sole shareholder of a professional corporation, was properly held in civil contempt for not producing a noncompetition agreement between the corporation and a former employee. The agreement was a corporate document, and the defendant had been subpoenaed to produce the document as a corporate agent; thus, the defendant could not assert the defendant's personal right against self-incrimination and the small size of the corporation was immaterial. Thompson v. State, 294 Ga. App. 363, 670 S.E.2d 152, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1193 (2008).

Custodian of corporate or association books, by accepting custodianship, voluntarily assumes a duty that overrides the custodian's claim of privilege with respect to the production of records themselves, but does not waive the custodian's constitutional privilege as to oral testimony; therefore, a corporate officer who is the custodian of the records may not resist the production of corporate books in response to subpoena even though such books may tend to incriminate the custodian as an individual. Jacobs v. State, 157 Ga. App. 466, 278 S.E.2d 21, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1870 (1981).

Custodian of records not required to disclose whereabouts of records. — The custodian of corporate records must produce the records if the custodian has them and the custodian may also be required to identify them; but the custodian may not be required to do more in answering questions as to their whereabouts such as to disclose the whereabouts of the records or who has possession of them. Jacobs v. State, 157 Ga. App. 466, 278 S.E.2d 21, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1870 (1981).

Witness in a state court can claim the privilege against self-incrimination as to matters which might tend to incriminate him under either state or federal law. Mallin v. Mallin, 227 Ga. 833, 183 S.E.2d 377, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 859 (1971).

Persons other than criminal defendants cannot stymie questioning totally, but must take the stand when called and decide after each question whether to invoke the privilege or not. Tennessee, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga. App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2579 (1977).

Nondefendant witness cannot refuse to testify. — Therefore, such a witness cannot be said to have waived the witness' privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against self-incrimination by testifying. United States v. Dooley, 587 F.2d 201, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 17874 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 949, 99 S. Ct. 1430, 59 L. Ed. 2d 639, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 1132 (1979).

Applicability to potential defendants. — A potential defendant may be subpoenaed to appear before a grand jury and subsequently indicted without violating the self-incrimination proscription of the fifth amendment, if the potential defendant testifies voluntarily. Blackwell v. United States, 405 F.2d 625, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 9306 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 395 U.S. 962, 89 S. Ct. 2104, 23 L. Ed. 2d 747, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 1298 (1969).

Disciplinary hearing while incarcerated in a state correctional institution is a custodial hearing which requires an appropriate warning of the right against self-incrimination before any statements made are admissible against the speaker in a subsequent criminal proceeding for those same criminal acts (in the absence of waiver). Grant v. State, 154 Ga. App. 758, 270 S.E.2d 42, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2375 (1980).

Attorney under investigation by State Bar of Georgia may invoke privilege against self-incrimination. — An attorney whose professional activities are under investigation by the disciplinary authorities of the State Bar of Georgia is entitled to the protection of the constitutional safeguards of the federal and state Constitutions against self-incrimination. Wilson v. State Bar, 225 Ga. 343, 168 S.E.2d 584, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 494, cert. denied, 396 U.S. 957, 90 S. Ct. 429, 24 L. Ed. 2d 421, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 130 (1969).

Attorney improperly found in contempt where requisite determinations about questions not made. — Attorney who delivered an anonymous campaign contribution on behalf of a client in violation of O.C.G.A. § 21-5-30(e) was improperly held in contempt for failing to disclose the client's name to the State Ethics Commission; the attorney invoked the self-incrimination privilege, and the trial court found the attorney in contempt without first determining whether the commission's proposed questions might have been incriminating. Begner v. State Ethics Comm'n, 250 Ga. App. 327, 552 S.E.2d 431, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 754 (2001).

Self-incrimination a complete defense where compliance with statute would violate that privilege. — When compliance with a federal statute entails a very substantial risk of self-incrimination, a plea of the privilege against self-incrimination provides a complete defense to a prosecution based on failure to comply with that statute. United States v. Davis, 330 F. Supp. 899, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11785 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Firearm registration statute not unconstitutional where prosecutorial use of information is prohibited. — A statute requiring the registration of firearms does not violate the privilege against self-incrimination where the statute prohibits the direct or indirect use of any information obtained from firearm registration in a criminal prosecution of a violation occurring prior to or concurrently with the registration. United States v. Bright, 471 F.2d 723, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 12272 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 412 U.S. 921, 93 S. Ct. 2742, 37 L. Ed. 2d 148, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 2302 (1973).

Prosecution under National Firearms Act. — The timely assertion of the privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 by the transferee of an unregistered firearm is no longer a defense to a criminal prosecution under the National Firearms Act, 26 U.S.C. § 5801 et seq., since the transferee of a firearm who attempts to comply with the Act no longer faces the risk of self-incrimination, the transferee does not need immunity, whether "use" or "transactional." United States v. Smith, 341 F. Supp. 687, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14358 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Prosecution under Federal Marihuana Tax Act. — The assertion of the privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 is a complete defense to a prosecution based on non-compliance with the Federal Marihuana Tax Act, 26 U.S.C. § 4741 et seq. United States v. Davis, 330 F. Supp. 899, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11785 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Prosecution under federal tax wagering statutes. — This amendment's privilege against self-incrimination provides a complete defense to prosecution under the federal wagering tax statutes. Lawson v. United States, 397 F. Supp. 370, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11201 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Information concerning the nature of one's business may be privileged under U.S. Const., amend. 5. In re Agan, 498 F. Supp. 493, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13453 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

How privilege asserted as to business records. — Rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 in business records should be asserted by refusal to deliver the records rather than by subsequently revoking that delivery and demanding their return, for when a person has voluntarily submitted records in response to a summons, it is only reasonable to assume that the government would conclude its examination and copy such records prior to return, even after a demand, and that it should have a reasonable time to do so. Kelley v. Godbout, 379 F. Supp. 532, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7194 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Application of privilege to federal tax returns. — See United States v. Vance, 730 F.2d 736, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 23286 (11th Cir. 1984).

In a prosecution for willful failure to file income tax returns, by refusing to allow the defendant to submit any evidence to the jury of good faith as to the defendant's assertion on the defendant's tax forms of the privilege against self-incrimination, without first making a prima facie showing to the court, the trial court impermissibly invaded the province of the jury. United States v. Goetz, 746 F.2d 705, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16787 (11th Cir. 1984).

Production of records under IRS summons. — A taxpayer failed to show that any potential incrimination would have occurred as the result of the enforcement of a summons by the IRS requiring the taxpayer to testify and to produce certain designated records; therefore, U.S. Const., amend. 5 did not bar the production of the requested records. United States v. Reis, 765 F.2d 1094, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 20305 (11th Cir. 1985).

An IRS summons to a bank requiring the production of certain records relating to an individual taxpayer did not violate the taxpayer's privilege against self-incrimination, since U.S. Const., amend. 5 does not protect against the production of records belonging to third parties and the records were not being sought pursuant to a justice department criminal prosecution. United States v. Saunders, 621 F. Supp. 745, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17942 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

Debtor bears burden to establish privilege in fieri facias interrogatories. — Where interrogatories in fieri facias do not constitute or evidence extensive questioning as to the judgment debtor's financial affairs which would tend, as a matter of law, to incriminate the debtor, work a forfeiture of the debtor's estate, or bring disgrace or infamy upon the debtor or the debtor's family, but are clearly within the ambit of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-69, the burden is on the debtor to state the general reason for the debtor's refusal to answer and to specifically establish that a real danger of incrimination exists with respect to each question. Petty v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 169 Ga. App. 418, 312 S.E.2d 874, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 1571 (1984).

Voluntary waiver of privilege by property settlement agreement. — Privilege against self-incrimination can be voluntarily waived by a property settlement agreement as to future income tax returns and financial information covering future financial events unknown at the time of entering into the contract. Feig v. Feig, 246 Ga. 763, 272 S.E.2d 723, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1266 (1980).

If waiver necessarily follows settlement agreement, express waiver not required. — If a person represented by counsel enters into a property settlement agreement that has the necessary effect of waiving a constitutional right, express notice of or reference to such waiver is not required. Feig v. Feig, 246 Ga. 763, 272 S.E.2d 723, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1266 (1980).

Evidence of flight and escape. — Evidence of flight, including defendant's failure to show up at time of trial, and evidence that accused attempted to escape during trial is admissible as tending to establish guilt of an accused and is not violative of defendant's right against self-incrimination. Carruth v. State, 155 Ga. App. 666, 272 S.E.2d 531, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2728 (1980).

Noncustodial electronic surveillance. — Electronic surveillance of a suspect who is not in custody does not violate right under U.S. Const., amend. 5 not to be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against oneself. Granese v. State, 232 Ga. 193, 206 S.E.2d 26, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 905 (1974).

Electronic interceptions of the defendant speaking to self in the defendant's cell in the penitentiary did not violate the defendant's fifth amendment rights against self-incrimination and the defendant's due process rights. United States v. Moody, 977 F.2d 1425, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 29012 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1052, 113 S. Ct. 1948, 123 L. Ed. 2d 653, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 3043 (1993).

Illegal search and arrest. — If a search and arrest are illegal, then admissions made during the illegal detention are tainted and therefore inadmissible. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1368 (1976).

Validity of defendant's testimony after admission of illegally seized evidence. — In the absence of a contrary showing by the state, a defendant's testimony in a case after the admission into evidence of illegally seized evidence is unconstitutionally impelled by that erroneous admission. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1368 (1976).

Psychiatric evaluation. — No violation of the privilege against self-incrimination occurred where the accused was compelled to undergo a psychiatric evaluation to be used by the state after the accused made it clear the accused was going to raise the defense of insanity and requested that the state pay for the accused to be examined by a psychiatrist. Godfrey v. Francis, 613 F. Supp. 747, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18352 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 836 F.2d 1557, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 453 (11th Cir. 1988).

Defendant's suppression motion was properly denied as to the defendant's psychiatric examination by a state's expert as the defendant's counsel knew of the time, place, scope, and nature of the examination, but chose not to attend; the examination did not violate the defendant's fifth or sixth amendment rights. Durham v. State, 281 Ga. 208, 636 S.E.2d 513, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 832 (2006).

Admissibility of testimony given at suppression hearing under fourth amendment. — When a defendant testifies in support of a motion to suppress evidence pursuant to U.S. Const., amend. 4, the defendant's testimony may not thereafter be admitted against the defendant's at trial on the issue of guilt, unless the defendant makes no objection. Culpepper v. State, 132 Ga. App. 733, 209 S.E.2d 18, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1801 (1974).

Statement properly admitted. — The trial court did not err in admitting the written statement of the defendant into evidence, because the defendant voluntarily went to the police station and told an officer that the defendant wanted to talk about the charges against the defendant. After the officer advised the defendant of the defendant's rights, the defendant indicated that the defendant understood the defendant's rights by signing a waiver of rights form. McDaniel v. State, 204 Ga. App. 753, 420 S.E.2d 636, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 982 (1992).

Trial court did not err in admitting defendant's statement that if the police would let defendant walk away, defendant would identify a major drug dealer, as there was no evidence that defendant was coerced or threatened by the police, or that defendant did not understand defendant's Miranda rights; thus, the trial court was authorized to find that the statement was freely and voluntarily given. Johnson v. State, 267 Ga. App. 549, 600 S.E.2d 667, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 710 (2004).

Trial court properly denied suppression of statements that defendant made to police officers while defendant was getting treated in the hospital for injuries sustained after committing criminal acts with a codefendant in two home invasions, as the first statement that defendant gave to a police officer occurred when defendant was not in custody and the officer was unaware that defendant was involved in any criminal incidents; when the second officer questioned defendant, defendant was already handcuffed to the hospital gurney, such that defendant should have been given Miranda warnings, but as the statement given to that officer was repetitive of the one given to the first officer, the error was deemed harmless. Moyer v. State, 275 Ga. App. 366, 620 S.E.2d 837, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 973 (2005), cert. denied, No. S06C0145, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 142 (Ga. Feb. 13, 2006), overruled in part, Vergara v. State, 283 Ga. 175, 657 S.E.2d 863, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 202 (2008).

Defendant's motion to suppress two statements the defendant made to the police were properly denied as the defendant was not in custody when the defendant made the statements; the defendant's motion to suppress a third statement was properly denied as the defendant was read the defendant's Miranda rights before the defendant made the statement. Durham v. State, 281 Ga. 208, 636 S.E.2d 513, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 832 (2006).

In a prosecution for felony murder, armed robbery, and burglary, a defendant's post-Miranda statements were properly admitted at trial as a detective's telling the defendant that the detective knew that the defendant was not the shooter did not constitute the hope of a lighter sentence that tainted the voluntariness of the defendant's statements. Jackson v. State, 284 Ga. 484, 668 S.E.2d 700, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 846 (2008).

Admission of testimony in support of motion to suppress would chill right against self-incrimination. — It is error for a trial court to admit in evidence on the issue of guilt incriminating statements given by a defendant in support of an unsuccessful pretrial motion to suppress; such a practice would require a defendant to surrender the defendant's U.S. Const., amend. 4 right against unreasonable search and seizure in order to maintain the defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 5 to remain silent. Sharp v. United States, 410 F.2d 969, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 12517 (5th Cir. 1969).

Sanction for use of privilege against self-incrimination to avoid discovery. — Federal court interpretations of the privilege against self-incrimination have generally allowed dismissal of a plaintiff's action as a sanction against the plaintiff who is avoiding discovery via the self-incrimination privilege. Master v. Savannah Sur. Assocs., 148 Ga. App. 678, 252 S.E.2d 186, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 1606 (1979).

Imposition of maximum sentence for failure to answer questions about unrelated offenses. — A trial judge's imposition of the maximum sentence possible upon a defendant as a result of the defendant's failure to answer the judge's questions concerning an unrelated offense imposes an unconstitutional condition on the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination and violates U.S. Const., amend. 5. Bertrand v. United States, 467 F.2d 901, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 7408 (5th Cir. 1972).

Jury instructions regarding defendant's failure to testify. — It is proper for the court to give a charge on the defendant's failure to testify without a request and it is not reversible error to fail to give the charge if the defendant does not request it. Stapleton v. State, 235 Ga. 513, 220 S.E.2d 269, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 918 (1975).

In the absence of a timely written request, the trial court does not err in failing to charge the jury that the defendant has a constitutional right not to testify and that no inference could be made as a result of the defendant's failure to testify on the defendant's own behalf. Stephens v. State, 157 Ga. App. 414, 278 S.E.2d 70, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1849 (1981).

Jury instructions regarding presumption of truthfulness as to witness testimony. — Instructing the jury that "witnesses are presumed to speak the truth unless they are impeached in some manner as provided by law" does not violate the fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination. Head v. State, 191 Ga. App. 262, 381 S.E.2d 519, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 541 (1989).

Jury instruction regarding inference of guilt from possession of stolen property. — An instruction stating that guilt of the defendant can be inferred from possession of recently stolen property unaccounted for by the defendant cannot properly be construed as a comment on the defendant's failure to testify. Horton v. State, 228 Ga. 690, 187 S.E.2d 677, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 886 (1972).

Party asserting privilege must respond to each question asked in discovery. — If a party asserts the privilege against self-incrimination concerning matters sought to be discovered, that party must respond to each question asked, asserting the privilege to those questions that party deems necessary. Axson v. National Sur. Corp., 254 Ga. 248, 327 S.E.2d 732, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 670 (1985).

Invocation of privilege by foreign nationals. — A French citizen, who sued American citizens for fraud in connection with the sale of Georgia land to the French citizen, could invoke the fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination on the ground that the answers to certain questions posed on deposition might incriminate the French citizen of violations under the criminal law of France. Yves Farms, Inc. v. Rickett, 659 F. Supp. 932, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3909 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

Testimony concerning alien detainee's criminal behavior in another country not privileged. — The privilege against self-incrimination simply protects any disclosures that the witness may reasonably apprehend could be used in a criminal prosecution or that could lead to other evidence that might be so used, and testimony concerning an alien detainee's criminal behavior in the alien's country is not privileged, since such acts could not form the basis for any criminal prosecution in the United States. Fernandez-Roque v. Smith, 567 F. Supp. 1115, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15614 (N.D.

Ga. 1983), rev'd, 734 F.2d 576, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 21962 (11th Cir. 1984).

Statements attributable to a coconspirator who refuses to testify are properly admitted as declarations of the other coconspirator during the course of the conspiracy. Owens v. State, 251 Ga. 313, 305 S.E.2d 102, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 766 (1983).

Right of a witness in a criminal case to invoke the fifth amendment is not unqualified. Jones v. State, 162 Ga. App. 502, 291 S.E.2d 103, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2198 (1982).

Grand jury witness' refusal to answer questions on fifth amendment grounds did not warrant contempt sanctions because there was no court order that the witness answer the questions before the grand jury, nor was the witness in anyway granted immunity. Baker v. State, 162 Ga. App. 606, 292 S.E.2d 451, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2260 (1982).

Law firm complying with grand jury subpoenas and directing it to produce records reflecting, inter alia, its clients' financial status, business activities, payment of taxes, and involvement in litigation, did not implicate its clients in any compelled testimonial self-incrimination. In re Grand Jury Subpoena Duces Tecum, 754 F.2d 918, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28242 (11th Cir. 1985).

Gun obtained by police after the police denied the defendant's request for an attorney in an interview in which the defendant told the police the murder was committed by the defendant using the defendant's parent's gun was the fruit of a voluntary statement and was not subject to the exclusionary rule. Taylor v. State, 274 Ga. 269, 553 S.E.2d 598, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 776 (2001), overruled in part, State v. Chulpayev, 296 Ga. 764, 770 S.E.2d 808, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 193 (2015).

Statements during traffic stops. — A motorist detained pursuant to a traffic stop is not taken into custody for the purpose of the Miranda warning. Hudgins v. State, 176 Ga. App. 719, 337 S.E.2d 378, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2930 (1985).

Refusal to undergo alcohol screening test. — Because the defendant in a prosecution for driving under the influence was not in custody, there was no requirement that a request that the defendant undergo an alcohol screening test be preceded by Miranda warnings, and evidence of the defendant's refusal to undergo the test was not inadmissible as violative of the defendant's constitutional right to remain silent. Keenan v. State, 263 Ga. 569, 436 S.E.2d 475, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 801 (1993), overruled in part, Ammons v. State, 315 Ga. 149, 880 S.E.2d 544, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 295 (2022); Bravo v. State, 249 Ga. App. 433, 548 S.E.2d 129, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 516 (2001), cert. denied, No. S01C1267, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 704 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2001).

Noncustodial defendant and field sobriety tests. — The alphabet test and the physical dexterity tests for determining sobriety are not inadmissible under the fifth amendment of the United States Constitution because they were not evidence of a testimonial or communicative nature. Lankford v. State, 204 Ga. App. 405, 419 S.E.2d 498, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 879 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C1162, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 675 (Ga. July 16, 1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1051, 113 S. Ct. 972, 122 L. Ed. 2d 127, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 93 (1993); State v. Sumlin, 224 Ga. App. 205, 480 S.E.2d 260, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 14 (1997).

Upon seeing the car in distress in a through-lane of traffic, police officer was authorized to approach the car and make inquiry and, when the defendant admitted to have been drinking and driving, the officer was authorized to conduct the field sobriety tests without giving Miranda warnings. Coates v. State, 216 Ga. App. 93, 453 S.E.2d 35, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 1425 (1994).

Field sobriety tests are not inadmissible under the fifth amendment because they are not evidence of a testimonial or communicative character. Coates v. State, 216 Ga. App. 93, 453 S.E.2d 35, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 1425 (1994).

Where defendant was not placed under arrest during an investigatory stop, Miranda warnings were not required to be given before field sobriety tests were conducted. State v. Kirbabas, 232 Ga. App. 474, 502 S.E.2d 314, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 718 (1998), overruled in part, State v. Turnquest, 305 Ga. 758, 827 S.E.2d 865, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 320 (2019).

Self-Incrimination (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Defendant whose license was taken and who was placed temporarily in a patrol car for the defendant's own safety was not in custody and, therefore, evidence of the defendant's statements was admissible, as was evidence of the defendant's refusals to submit to alco-sensor and HGN tests and of the defendant's failure of other tests administered before the defendant's arrest. Turner v. State, 233 Ga. App. 413, 504 S.E.2d 229, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 900 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1897, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 1224 (Ga. Dec. 4, 1998).

Driver could not assert right against self-incrimination to suppress results of field sobriety test, since the driver was not a person "charged in a criminal proceeding" at the time the test was given, the driver was not in police custody at that time, and no force or threat of penalty was used against the driver. Montgomery v. State, 174 Ga. App. 95, 329 S.E.2d 166, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2695 (1985).

Breath tests. — The choice under O.C.G.A. §§ 40-5-55 and 40-6-392, either to agree or refuse to take a blood-alcohol test, is not protected by the privilege against self-incrimination. Neither is the form signed by the defendant, agreeing to take a breath test. A police officer is not required to inform defendant of the defendant's Miranda rights. State v. Mack, 207 Ga. App. 287, 427 S.E.2d 615, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 154 (1993).

Fact that defendant was not advised of defendant's Miranda rights before field sobriety tests were conducted did not violate the fifth amendment; such tests were not evidence of a testimonial or communicative nature and therefore, they did not constitute "statements" subject to the fifth amendment protections embodied in Miranda. Disharoon v. State, 263 Ga. App. 787, 589 S.E.2d 339, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1323 (2003).

Because the defendant was informed of the Miranda rights in a timely manner and the procedure employed to gain defendant's consent was fair and reasonable, the trial court erred in suppressing the results of the state-administered breath test. State v. Allen, 272 Ga. App. 169, 612 S.E.2d 11, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 151 (2005), cert. denied, No. S05C1257, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 615 (Ga. Sept. 19, 2005).

Striking of testimony. — When the defendant asserted a possessory interest in a suitcase, the ownership of the suitcase was not a collateral matter and was a proper subject of cross-examination but, once the defendant claimed the privilege against self-incrimination, it was proper to strike the testimony concerning the case. Rasnake v. State, 164 Ga. App. 765, 298 S.E.2d 42, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3345 (1982), cert. denied, 250 Ga. 544, 301 S.E.2d 287, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 595 (1983), cert. denied, 462 U.S. 1132, 103 S. Ct. 3114, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1368, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 628 (1983).

Where nonimmunized witnesses are involved, such witnesses are allowed to consult with their attorneys during the course of the questioning to determine whether or not they should invoke their privilege based on U.S. Const., amend. 5 against self-incrimination. In re Earnest, 90 F.R.D. 698, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13293 (M.D. Ga. 1981).

Admission of confession not harmless in sentencing phase. — Admission of a mentally retarded murder defendant's confession of guilt was harmless error at the defendant's trial but not at the defendant's sentencing, where the confession may have played some part in the jury's decision to sentence the defendant to death rather than to life imprisonment. Smith v. Kemp, 664 F. Supp. 500, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6219 (M.D. Ga. 1987), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 855 F.2d 712, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 11707 (11th Cir. 1988), aff'd, 887 F.2d 1407, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 14759 (11th Cir. 1989).

Testimony of codefendant. — Because a codefendant was informed of the codefendant's constitutional rights under the fifth amendment and was willing to testify, but was prevented from testifying by the trial court, this was harmful error requiring reversal of a finding of delinquency. In re J.L.B., 184 Ga. App. 243, 361 S.E.2d 236, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2198 (1987).

Exculpatory statement followed by inculpatory statement. — Even if defendant's initial statement to police was erroneously admitted, the error was harmless because the statement given was exculpatory rather than incriminating, and it was followed by a statement which was much stronger and tended to be inculpatory, thereby, if valid, vitiating any possible damage accruing from the admission of the first statement. Caplinger v. State, 185 Ga. App. 476, 364 S.E.2d 610, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 17 (1988).

Statement held not inculpatory. — It was unnecessary to determine whether there was a Miranda defect, because the defendant's statement was not inculpatory, since all it could stand for is that the defendant knew the location of a rifle, which was not inconsistent with the defendant's defense of "defense of self and home", so that any error in admitting the defendant's statement was harmless. Delay v. State, 258 Ga. 229, 367 S.E.2d 806, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 206, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 850, 109 S. Ct. 132, 102 L. Ed. 2d 105, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 4092 (1988).

Contractual obligation of insured to submit to examination under oath. — The fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination did not excuse an insured from fulfilling the insured's contractual obligation under a homeowner's insurance policy to submit to an examination under oath as a condition precedent to suit. Pervis v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 901 F.2d 944, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 8000 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 899, 111 S. Ct. 255, 112 L. Ed. 2d 213, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 5179 (1990).

Trial court's instruction on flight of the accused was neither burden shifting nor violative of defendant's right to remain silent. Sweet v. State, 196 Ga. App. 451, 396 S.E.2d 82, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 950 (1990).

Rights noted in record. — Trial defense counsel's request that trial court lay defendant's rights on the record precluded defendant from seeking a mistrial after the request was granted. Brundage v. State, 208 Ga. App. 58, 430 S.E.2d 173, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 416 (1993).

Prosecution may not use claim of privilege against defendant. — Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for a mistrial due to a fire investigator's comments on defendant's exercise of defendant's right to remain silent as the motion was initially made before any such testimony was given, and, while in the second instance the investigator did improperly comment on the exercise of defendant's right, the trial court properly gave the jurors a curative instruction and specifically asked them whether they could disregard the testimony. George v. State, 263 Ga. App. 541, 588 S.E.2d 312, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1258 (2003), overruled in part, Littlejohn v. State, 320 Ga. App. 197, 739 S.E.2d 682, 2013 Ga. App. LEXIS 153 (2013), overruled in part, Taylor v. State, 303 Ga. 624, 814 S.E.2d 353, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 291 (2018), overruled in part, Gordon v. State, 373 Ga. App. 592, 908 S.E.2d 297, 2024 Ga. App. LEXIS 431 (2024).

Waiver of fifth amendment privilege. — Because the testimony of a cameraman established that a videotape was a fair and accurate portrayal of defendant's arrest, and there was no chain of custody requirement for the admission of videotapes, defendant's custodial statements to police in Florida were properly admitted at defendant's trial in Georgia; it was not necessary for a valid waiver of the fifth amendment privilege that defendant knew and understood every consequence of the waiver. Smith v. State, 279 Ga. 48, 610 S.E.2d 26, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 143 (2005).

Question first, warn later tactic of investigating resulted in inadmissible statements. — Patrol officer's question-first, warn-later tactic of interrogating a burglary suspect rendered both statements given to the patrol officer and statements later given to an investigator after Miranda warnings inadmissible. The defendant was not advised that the defendant's earlier statement to the patrol officer could not be used. State v. Kendrick, 309 Ga. App. 870, 711 S.E.2d 420, 2011 Ga. App. LEXIS 476 (2011), overruled in part, State v. Abbott, 303 Ga. 297, 812 S.E.2d 225, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 173 (2018).

2. Interrogations

Relationship to sixth amendment.

— Admission of defendant's statement to a police officer concerning an attempted burglary was proper under the fifth amendment as defendant had only invoked defendant's right to counsel under the sixth amendment in connection with unrelated charges in Fulton County; defendant never invoked defendant's fifth amendment right for counsel to be present during questioning in connection with the attempted burglary in Henry County. Smith v. State, 273 Ga. App. 107, 614 S.E.2d 219, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 423 (2005).

What constitutes "interrogation".

— The term "interrogation" under Miranda refers not only to express questioning, but also to any words or actions on the part of the police, other than those normally attendant to arrest and custody, that the police should know are reasonably likely to elicit an incriminating response from the suspect. The latter portion of this definition focuses primarily upon the perceptions of the suspect, rather than the intent of the police. Murray v. State, 155 Ga. App. 816, 273 S.E.2d 219, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2804 (1980); United States v. Bennett, 626 F.2d 1309, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 13478 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1092, 101 S. Ct. 888, 66 L. Ed. 2d 821, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 466 (1981).

Defendant's suppression motion was properly denied as to the statements given to the police before the defendant was given the defendant's Miranda warnings as, although the defendant was in custody as the defendant was approached at gunpoint, handcuffed, and placed on the ground while guarded by three police officers even before the defendant was advised that he was under arrest, the defendant was not subjected to interrogation as the officers asked the defendant's father, not the defendant, about the missing truck, and their questions to the father were not reasonably likely to elicit any response from the defendant. Waters v. State, 281 Ga. 119, 636 S.E.2d 538, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 843 (2006).

What constitutes "custodial interrogation". — By custodial interrogation is meant the questioning initiated by law enforcement officers after a person has been taken into custody or otherwise deprived of freedom of action in any significant way. Chester v. State, 157 Ga. App. 191, 276 S.E.2d 684, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1730 (1981).

The custodial interrogation that requires investigating officers to advise the person interrogated of constitutional rights to counsel and against self-incrimination is that interrogation that occurs after the investigation has focused on an accused. Boutwell v. State, 256 Ga. 63, 344 S.E.2d 222, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 711 (1986).

Even a clear statement from an officer that the person under interrogation is a prime suspect is not, in itself, dispositive of the custody issue for purposes of giving constitutionally required custodial warnings, for some suspects are free to come and go until the police decide to make an arrest. McAllister v. State, 270 Ga. 224, 507 S.E.2d 448, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 1149 (1998).

Trial court erred in suppressing a defendant's pre-Miranda statements based on the court's findings that police had probable cause to arrest and that the defendant was the focus of the investigation as these considerations were irrelevant for determining whether the defendant was "in custody" for Miranda purposes. The proper inquiry was how a reasonable person in the defendant's position would have perceived the situation. State v. Folsom, 285 Ga. 11, 673 S.E.2d 210, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 35 (2009).

Custodial and noncustodial interrogation distinguished.

— One who is under investigative detention or is the subject of a general on-the-scene investigation is not in "custody" within the meaning of Miranda. Bailey v. State, 153 Ga. App. 178, 264 S.E.2d 710, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 1733 (1980).

Custodial interrogation not found.

— Defendant was not subjected to improper custodial interrogation where the officer read to defendant the implied consent warnings for suspects over 21, and placed defendant in the back of the officer's patrol car, during an impound search of defendant's car, the officer found an identification card that showed that defendant was under 21, the officer asked defendant the defendant's age, and learned that defendant was under 21, the officer read defendant the implied consent notice for suspects under 21, and the question was not designed to incriminate defendant, as the officer was arresting defendant for driving under the influence (less safe driver), and defendant's age was not an element of the offense. Evans v. State, 267 Ga. App. 706, 600 S.E.2d 671, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 720 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1683, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 883 (Ga. Sept. 27, 2004).

Detective's inquiry into whether codefendant was okay, made while they were in the bathroom, did not constitute interrogation under Miranda. Smith v. State, 269 Ga. App. 133, 603 S.E.2d 445, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 1007 (2004), cert. denied, No. S05C0089, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 1056 (Ga. Nov. 22, 2004).

The trial court did not err in admitting the defendant's statements made at a hospital to a sheriff's deputy and an investigator as the statements were given while the defendant was in a medical, rather than an investigative, setting; moreover, the fact that the officers might have suspected the defendant of having committed a murder did not render the statements at issue violative of Miranda, and thus subject to suppression. Jennings v. State, 282 Ga. 679, 653 S.E.2d 17, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 832 (2007).

Routine booking questions. — Asking the defendant in custody how the defendant injured the defendant's arm did not fall under the exception to Miranda for "routine booking questions." Franks v. State, 268 Ga. 238, 486 S.E.2d 594, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 425 (1997).

Question from intake officer was not a general greeting outside of Miranda. — With regard to a defendant's convictions for improper lane change, serious injury by vehicle while driving under the influence, and misdemeanor obstruction of an officer, the defendant obtained a reversal of the convictions based on the trial judge violating the defendant's right to be present at all stages of the proceeding by communicating with the jury inappropriately; however, for retrial purposes, it was also determined that, given the totality of the circumstances, the defendant was subjected to an "interrogation" in violation of the privilege against self-incrimination as a result of an intake officer asking the defendant how the defendant came to be at the police station. Accordingly, the response to the question was inadmissible for any purpose other than impeachment. Wells v. State, 297 Ga. App. 153, 676 S.E.2d 821, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 384 (2009).

Request to collect gunshot residue evidence after defendant invoked rights was not interrogation. — Detective's requests to collect evidence of gunshot residue from the defendant after the defendant invoked the defendant's right to counsel and to remain silent during an interview did not constitute renewed interrogation in violation of the defendant's rights, and the trial court erred in suppressing the defendant's subsequent statements. State v. Pauldo, 309 Ga. 130, 844 S.E.2d 829, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 447 (2020).

Circumstance of arrest. — Trial court did not err in admitting redacted videotape of two custodial interrogations into evidence, as statements on the tape about uncharged burglaries was admissible as a circumstance of defendant's arrest and statements about defendant's criminal record were voluntarily given. Oliver v. State, 276 Ga. 665, 581 S.E.2d 538, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 545 (2003).

Miranda played no part in the admissibility of field sobriety test results, notwithstanding the definition of arrest contained in O.C.G.A. § 17-4-1, as defendant was not under arrest for constitutional purposes where defendant failed to show any restraints comparable to those associated with formal arrest, defendant's statement that defendant knew the officer was going to "take her in" demonstrated defendant's apprehension, not the fact of an arrest, defendant was not informed that defendant's detention would not be temporary, and defendant's performance on the field sobriety tests did not support a claim that defendant was exposed to custodial interrogation at the scene. Evans v. State, 267 Ga. App. 706, 600

S.E.2d 671, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 720 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1683, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 883 (Ga. Sept. 27, 2004).

Statement responding to administrative inquiry. — When, after defendant was arrested, defendant was asked about defendant's employment, in the course of completing biographical information about defendant, defendant's response, before defendant was warned of defendant's Miranda rights, was admissible, because, while the question was not asked as part of a formal booking, it was part of an administrative processing which was not intended to elicit an incriminating response. English v. State, 260 Ga. App. 620, 580 S.E.2d 351, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 449 (2003).

Determination of custodial restraint. — There are several criteria for determining when custodial restraint is present: the subjective intent of the police; the subjective belief of the defendant; whether probable cause for arrest existed at the time of the interrogation; and whether the defendant was the focus of the investigation. These criteria are, of course, intended to facilitate rather than replace case-by-case analysis. Alderman v. Austin, 498 F. Supp. 1134, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15859 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 663 F.2d 558, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 15285 (5th Cir. 1981).

Interview in home. — Interview by a Child Protective Services Investigator and a detective from the sheriff's department at defendant's home was not a custodial situation such as would invoke the Miranda protections. Carroll v. State, 208 Ga. App. 316, 430 S.E.2d 649, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 517 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1144, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 872 (Ga. Sept. 20, 1993).

Single threshold inquiry of an officer as to what is happening is not an impermissible interrogation. Shy v. State, 234 Ga. 816, 218 S.E.2d 599, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1297 (1975).

While recognizing that Miranda warnings are not limited to station-house interrogations as long as there is some significant deprivation of an individual's freedom of action, a police officer may make a threshold inquiry to ascertain if there were any current danger to the officer or to others present at the scene. So long as the interrogation is not aimed at obtaining information to establish a suspect's guilt but is instead aimed at determining the nature of the situation upon the arrival of the officer on the scene, some initial inquiry may, under the circumstances, be permissible before Miranda warnings are given. Aldridge v. State, 247 Ga. 142, 274 S.E.2d 525, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1301 (1980).

Upon arrival at scene of suspected crime, and without first administering Miranda warnings, police officers may make initial inquiry solely for purpose of ascertaining whether or not there currently is any danger to them or to other persons who are present at the scene. Such questioning must not be "aimed at obtaining information to establish a suspect's guilt." State v. Overby, 249 Ga. 341, 290 S.E.2d 464, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1141 (1982).

Test for determining custody at traffic stop. — The test for determining whether a person is in custody at a traffic stop is if a reasonable person in the suspect's position would have thought the detention would not be temporary; police officers at the scene of a traffic stop may conduct a general on-the-scene investigation, which may even require that persons be temporarily detained, without such being classified as custodial interrogation. Carroll v. State, 203 Ga. App. 22, 416 S.E.2d 354, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 240 (1992).

Noncustodial, voluntary statement made during on-the-scene investigation. — A noncustodial, voluntary statement by the defendant to an officer simply making an on-the-scene investigation to find out what has happened, when the officer has no suspects, is always admissible against the maker without the defendant's having been advised of the rights against self-incrimination. Davis v. State, 135 Ga. App. 584, 218 S.E.2d 297, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1744 (1975); Brown v. State, 140 Ga. App. 160, 230 S.E.2d 128, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1383 (1976), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 819, 98 S. Ct. 58, 54 L. Ed. 2d 75, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2790 (1977).

On-the-scene questioning permissible absent counsel if not prolonged.

— Investigation by police officers at the scene on their arrival, and the defendant's statements to them, not being tainted by the overtones of coercion incident to prolonged illegal detention, are not objectionable because defendant did not at that time have counsel. Dukes v. State, 109 Ga. App. 825, 137 S.E.2d 532, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 1010 (1964).

On-the-scene inquiries in custodial institutions. — Same principles governing initial on-the-scene inquiries when crime scene is "on the streets" apply also when scene of crime is "behind bars" in a penal institution, jail or other custodial institution. State v. Overby, 249 Ga. 341, 290 S.E.2d 464, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1141 (1982).

Roadside questioning at routine stop not custodial situation. — When a violator is placed in custody or under arrest at a traffic stop the protection of Miranda arises; however, roadside questioning at a routine stop does not constitute such a custodial situation. Lebrun v. State, 255 Ga. 406, 339 S.E.2d 227, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 551 (1986); Brown v. State, 223 Ga. App. 364, 477 S.E.2d 623, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 1134 (1996), cert. denied, No. S97C0290, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 208 (Ga. Feb. 21, 1998).

Defendant not in custody prior to officers' decision to arrest. — The trial court's determination that the defendant was not in custody prior to the time of the officers' decision to arrest the defendant was not clearly erroneous and would not be disturbed on appeal because there was no evidence that the officer indicated to the defendant in any manner that the defendant was not free to leave or that the stop would be anything other than temporary. Carroll v. State, 203 Ga. App. 22, 416 S.E.2d 354, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 240 (1992).

Request that witnesses not leave. — Because, although all the witnesses had been requested not to leave while the sheriff was attempting to secure the crime scene, no one had been placed under arrest, and no one had been given any Miranda warnings, the defendant was not in custody nor was the defendant otherwise deprived of freedom of action in any significant way. Thus, the trial court did not err in allowing the defendant's response to a person from the sheriff's office into evidence. Parker v. State, 256 Ga. 363, 349 S.E.2d 379, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 884 (1986).

Supposed "victim" of robbery was not "in custody" until suspicion began to focus on the "victim" shortly after the "victim" implicated self with contradictory statements, at which time Miranda rights were given. United States v. Roark, 753 F.2d 991, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28174 (11th Cir. 1985).

Suspect in custody was required to be warned of rights prior to interrogation even though the interrogation involved an offense other than that for which the suspect was in custody. State v. Rogers, 173 Ga. App. 653, 327 S.E.2d 782, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2664 (1985).

Illegal detention as not excluding confession. — Even assuming that a juvenile suspect was illegally detained by juvenile authorities, the suspect's confession was admissible because proper safeguards (Miranda warnings, presence of parent) were present and because there was no evidence of intimidation or of purposeful and flagrant misconduct on the part of the juvenile authorities. Houser v. State, 173 Ga. App. 378, 326 S.E.2d 513, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2627 (1985).

Statements not made in context of "custodial interrogation". — None of the statements made by the defendant to the police officers who searched the defendant's apartment were made in the context of a "custodial interrogation," in that the officers did not have probable cause nor the subjective intent to arrest the defendant, and there was no evidence that the defendant believed the defendant did not feel free to leave rather than answer the questions the defendant was asked. Therefore, the statements were not required to be suppressed. United States v. Burke, 613 F. Supp. 576, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19407 (N.D. Ga. 1985), rev'd, 784 F.2d 1090, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 23122 (11th Cir. 1986).

When a defendant went to a police station to discuss the theft of tire rims from the defendant's vehicle, and later was confronted with questioning about the killing of the person who stole the rims, it was error to suppress the statements the defendant made before the defendant was confronted about the killing. The defendant was not in custody before being confronted with the killing. State v. Pye, 282 Ga. 796, 653 S.E.2d 450, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 794 (2007), overruled in part, State v. Abbott, 303 Ga. 297, 812 S.E.2d 225, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 173 (2018).

Because a defendant had come voluntarily to a police station for an interview and was not prevented from leaving or terminating the interview, the defendant was not in custody; thus, there was no violation of the defendant's fifth amendment right to counsel under the United States Supreme Court's decision in Edwards v. Arizona, 451 U.S. 477, 101 S.Ct. 1880, 68 L. Ed. 2d 378 (1981), which applied only to custodial interrogation. Petty v. State, 283 Ga. 268, 658 S.E.2d 599, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 252 (2008).

Where the defendant, who was not in custody at the time, volunteered an explanation as to why the defendant possessed a weapon without authority, no Miranda warning was necessary and the evidence was sufficient to show that the defendant shot self in a government building with a weapon that the defendant took from police custody, in violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-8-2 and 16-7-24(a); therefore, the trial court's findings were not clearly erroneous. McClendon v. State, 264 Ga. App. 174, 590 S.E.2d 189, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1429 (2003).

As the defendants voluntarily went to the police station, were not under formal arrest at any time during their interviews, and were told before the interview that the defendants were free to leave, a reasonable person in the defendants' situation would not have felt so restrained as to equate to a formal arrest. Therefore, Miranda warnings were not required. Carter v. State, 285 Ga. 394, 677 S.E.2d 71, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 167 (2009).

Confession after break in custody upheld. — Where there was a 21-month break in custody between the initial interrogation of the defendant, at which time the defendant expressed the defendant's desire to speak only through counsel, and the final interrogation, at which time the defendant confessed, there was no violation of the defendant's fifth and fourteenth amendment rights. State v. Bymes, 258 Ga. 813, 375 S.E.2d 41, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 32 (1989).

Because of the absence or dissipation of coercion once a suspect is released from custody, subsequent confessions obtained from even police initiated interrogation are admissible without violating the suspect's fifth amendment rights if there has been an intervening break in custody. Wilson v. State, 264 Ga. 287, 444 S.E.2d 306, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 456 (1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 988, 115 S. Ct. 486, 130 L. Ed. 2d 398, 1994 U.S. LEXIS 7892 (1994), overruled in part, Washington v. State, 276 Ga. 655, 581 S.E.2d 518, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 539 (2003).

Suspect need not be advised of right to stop questioning. — For a statement to be voluntary, arresting authorities are not required to advise the suspect that the suspect may stop the questioning at any time. Thomas v. State, 158 Ga. App. 668, 281 S.E.2d 646, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2363 (1981).

Inquiries for purpose of protecting officer and others. — A police officer in the course of investigating unusual behavior can make reasonable inquiries to dispel the officer's reasonable fears for the officer's safety and that of others. Shy v. State, 234 Ga. 816, 218 S.E.2d 599, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1297 (1975).

Miranda warnings contemplate an interrogation after the suspect is in custody and do not apply where investigation has not focused on suspect and where no incriminating statements have been made. Smith v. State, 236 Ga. 12, 222 S.E.2d 308, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 761, cert. denied, 96 S. Ct. 3224, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1219 (1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 932, 97 S. Ct. 339, 50 L. Ed. 2d 302, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 3422 (1976).

Investigation focused upon noncustodial defendant. — If the focus of investigation is upon the defendant, but the defendant is not in custody, the defendant's volunteered response is admissible in evidence. Chester v. State, 157 Ga. App. 191, 276 S.E.2d 684, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1730 (1981).

Deliberate delay of arrest to elicit information. — Where agents somewhat prolong a booking procedure, asking for more information than is strictly necessary, and deliberately create a relaxed atmosphere in the hope that defendant might let something slip, this is not such an overbearing custodial interrogation as to deprive the defendant of free choice in making a statement. Jenkins v. State, 123 Ga. App. 822, 182 S.E.2d 542, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 1401 (1971).

Police may not delay arrest of a suspect as a subterfuge to coerce the suspect into incriminating self. Shy v. State, 234 Ga. 816, 218 S.E.2d 599, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1297 (1975).

Error in giving warnings harmless when statement not in evidence. — Where no statement obtained while in custody is offered into evidence, any error in the timely giving of Miranda rights is harmless. Sheffield v. State, 235 Ga. 507, 220 S.E.2d 265, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 914 (1975).

Warning of right to withdraw waiver not required. — Miranda does not require officers to advise the individual that the individual may withdraw the waiver of constitutional rights at any time during the interrogation. Katzensky v. State, 228 Ga. 6, 183 S.E.2d 749, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 448 (1971).

Miranda warnings in no way inform a person of the person's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4, including the person's right to be released from unlawful custody following an arrest without a warrant or without probable cause. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1368 (1976).

Statement may be inadmissible under U.S. Const., amend. 4, even if voluntary under U.S. Const., amend. 5. — Even though proper Miranda warnings may have been given prior to a defendant's incriminatory statement and even though the statement may have been voluntary for purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 5, the statement is nonetheless inadmissible under the U.S. Const., amend. 4, if it is the product of an illegal seizure. Dupree v. State, 247 Ga. 470, 277 S.E.2d 18, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 753 (1981).

There is no per se rule that Miranda warnings in and of themselves suffice to cure a fourth amendment violation involved in obtaining inculpatory statements during custodial interrogation following a formal arrest on less than probable cause. In order to use such statements, the prosecution must show not only that the statements meet Fifth Amendment requirements (voluntariness), but also that the causal connection between the statements and the illegal arrest is sufficiently attenuated so as to purge the primary taint of the illegal arrest in light of the distinct policies and interests of the fourth amendment. Robinson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 741, 305 S.E.2d 381, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3272 (1983).

Warnings need not be repeated in subsequent interrogation. — In subsequent interrogations of a defendant, it is not necessary that the full Miranda warning be given again. Rather, it is sufficient if the first complete warning thereafter is reinforced by the authorities prior to each subsequent interrogation by reminding the defendant that the defendant previously was advised of the defendant's rights. Anglin v. State, 244 Ga. 1, 257 S.E.2d 513, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1080 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Welch v. State, 254 Ga. 603, 331 S.E.2d 573, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 781 (1985); Bragg v. State, 162 Ga. App. 264, 291 S.E.2d 112, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3118 (1982).

Because the defendant gave three statements on the day in question and the investigating officer fully informed the defendant of the defendant's Miranda rights (including the right to have an attorney appointed if the defendant so desired) prior to the giving of the first statement, in view of the continuing nature of the interrogation of the defendant (and the relatively short time span between the giving of the first Miranda warnings and the third statement), it was not necessary for the investigating officer to inform the defendant again that an attorney would be appointed to represent the defendant if the defendant was indigent and the defendant so desired. Akers v. State, 179 Ga.

App. 529, 346 S.E.2d 861, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2636 (1986).

It was not error to admit a defendant's statements to an expert appointed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1 to examine the defendant upon the defendant's assertion of an insanity defense because: (1) the state had a statutory right, under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1, to call the expert to rebut the testimony of the defendant's expert regarding the defendant's mental state at the time of the crimes charged; (2) the defendant had no sixth amendment right to counsel during the expert's examination or fifth amendment right requiring the repetition of the defendant's Miranda rights during the interview with the appointed expert; and (3) the defendant's counsel was aware of the psychiatric interview and chose not to attend. Walker v. State, 290 Ga. 467, 722 S.E.2d 72, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 134 (2012).

Warnings need not be repeated where questioning constitutes merely continued interrogation. — If a defendant is advised of the defendant's constitutional right prior to the defendant's first in-custody statement, further warning is not required prior to the taking of a second in-custody statement some seven hours later, if such questioning constitutes merely continued interrogation. Watson v. State, 227 Ga. 698, 182 S.E.2d 446, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 819 (1971).

Trial court did not clearly err in admitting defendant's custodial statement in redacted form because the court, after hearing the conflicting testimony, including testimony about defendant's intoxication, and after seeing the signed waiver of rights by defendant determined that defendant was properly advised of defendant's constitutional rights and that defendant's custodial statement met the criteria for admission. Wallace v. State, 267 Ga. App. 801, 600 S.E.2d 808, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 809 (2004).

Miranda is applicable to custodial interrogation and does not require that a defendant be given any warning at trial. Schiselman v. Trust Co. Bank, 246 Ga. 274, 271 S.E.2d 183, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1078 (1980).

Defendant's custodial statement was admissible as the defendant's statement was voluntarily given where an officer recited the defendant's Miranda rights to the defendant by memory one day and upon returning to the jail the next day to obtain the defendant's fingerprints, the defendant voluntarily began talking to the officer about the three woman whom the defendant was accused of raping and the officer then repeated from memory the defendant's Miranda rights, the defendant signed a waiver of the defendant's Miranda rights, and the defendant then gave a custodial statement. Collins v. State, 267 Ga. App. 784, 600 S.E.2d 802, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 813 (2004).

Recording conversations while defendant in jail. — Recordings of telephone conversations the defendant had with the defendant's mother while the defendant was in jail were properly admitted into evidence; the Miranda warnings against self-incrimination did not apply because there was no interrogation, and the defendant had no reasonable expectation of privacy in the calls under the fourth amendment. Preston v. State, 282 Ga. 210, 647 S.E.2d 260, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 477 (2007).

Knowing and voluntary statements made after receiving warnings are admissible. — If a defendant was properly advised and made aware of Miranda rights, the facts that thereafter while in custody the defendant knowingly and voluntarily elected to talk is no cause for complaint. Williams v. State, 155 Ga. App. 513, 271 S.E.2d 657, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2644 (1980).

Police not required to obtain waiver of right to remain silent prior to interrogation. — Police are not required to obtain from the accused a waiver of Miranda rights before beginning an interrogation; such a requirement is at odds with the principle that courts can infer a waiver of Miranda rights "from the actions and words of the person interrogated", and that any waiver, express or implied, may be contradicted at any time by an invocation of the rights to counsel and to remain silent. Hardman v. Shinseki, 363 Fed. Appx. 751, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 4379 (Fed. Cir. 2010).

Where defendant wishes to remain silent, interrogation must cease. —

Once Miranda warnings have been given, the subsequent procedure is clear. If the individual indicates in any manner, at any time prior to or during questioning, that the individual wishes to remain silent, the interrogation must cease. United States v. Morris, 491 F. Supp. 226, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13472 (S.D. Ga. 1980).

Accused's silence during an interrogation did not invoke the right to remain silent, because a suspect's Miranda right to counsel must be invoked "unambiguously", and the accused waived the right to remain silent when the accused knowingly and voluntarily made a statement to police. Once the state establishes that a Miranda warning was given and that it was understood by the accused, an uncoerced statement establishes an implied waiver, and the record clearly showed that the accused waived the right to remain silent: (1) the lack of any contention that the accused did not understand the rights indicates that the accused knew what was given up when the accused spoke; (2) the accused's answer to a question the interrogator asked about God was a "course of conduct indicating waiver" of the right to remain silent in that, had the accused wanted to remain silent, the accused could have said nothing in response or unambiguously invoked the accused's Miranda rights, thus ending the interrogation — that the accused made a statement nearly three hours after receiving a Miranda warning did not overcome the fact that the accused engaged in a course of conduct indicating waiver; and (3) there was no evidence that the statement was coerced, as the accused did not claim that police threatened or injured the accused or that the accused was fearful, the interrogation took place in a standard-sized room in the middle of the day, and there is no authority for the proposition that a three-hour interrogation is inherently coercive. Hardman v. Shinseki, 363 Fed. Appx. 751, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 4379 (Fed. Cir. 2010).

Defendant's statement that "I can stop the interrogatory" was not an unequivocal invocation of the defendant's fifth amendment right to re- main silent requiring that interrogation cease, but rather was an equivocal statement that did not require an officer to stop questioning the defendant. The rule in Davis v. United States, 512 U. S. 452, 114 S. Ct. 2350, 129 L. Ed.2d 362 (1994), that, if a suspect's statement is not an unambiguous or unequivocal request for counsel, officers have no obligation to stop questioning the suspect, also applies to invocations of the fifth amendment right to remain silent. Perez v. State, 283 Ga. 196, 657 S.E.2d 846, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 186 (2008).

Whether accused in custody is question of fact. — Miranda safeguards are required not where a suspect is simply taken into custody, but rather where a suspect in custody is subjected to interrogation. Whether or not the accused was in custody or under interrogation is a question of fact to be resolved by the trial court. Brenneman v. State, 200 Ga. App. 111, 407 S.E.2d 93, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 781 (1991).

Facts supported admission of statement. — Miranda warnings were not required for the admission of defendant's statement to a police sergeant as: (1) defendant was not under arrest at the time of the interview; (2) defendant was not prevented from leaving the interview; (3) defendant was not promised anything in return for a statement, nor threatened into making the statement; and (4) the sergeant acknowledged telling defense counsel that the sergeant was trying to gather enough evidence to put defendant in jail, but this did not make the statement inadmissible. Thomas v. State, 262 Ga. App. 492, 589 S.E.2d 243, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 883 (2003), cert. denied sub nom. State v. Hunnicutt, No. S03C1780, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 1034 (Ga. Nov. 17, 2003).

Interrogation must cease when an individual unequivocally asks for an attorney. Murray v. State, 155 Ga. App. 816, 273 S.E.2d 219, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2804 (1980); United States v. Webb, 633 F.2d 1140, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 21270 (5th Cir. 1981); Blige v. State, 203 Ga. App. 151, 416 S.E.2d 160, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 235 (1992).

An accused in custody, having expressed the desire to deal with the police only through counsel, is not subject to further interrogation by the authorities until counsel has been made available to the accused, unless the accused initiates further communication, exchanges, or conversations with the police. Cervi v. Kemp, 855 F.2d 702, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 11694 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1033, 109 S. Ct. 1172, 103 L. Ed. 2d 230, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1011 (1989); Allen v. State, 259 Ga. 63, 377 S.E.2d 150, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 112 (1989); Nobles v. State, 191 Ga. App. 594, 382 S.E.2d 637, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 750 (1989), overruled in part, Petty v. State, 283 Ga. 268, 658 S.E.2d 599, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 252 (2008); Cansler v. State, 261 Ga. 693, 409 S.E.2d 504, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 813 (1991).

Defendant's statement to a police officer — "I'll talk to you after I've talked to my lawyer" — was a clear and unequivocal assertion of the defendant's right to counsel, requiring that all interrogation should immediately have ceased. Allen v. State, 259 Ga. 63, 377 S.E.2d 150, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 112 (1989).

Individual has the right to cease talking and to request the presence of an attorney at any time during interrogation. Katzensky v. State, 228 Ga. 6, 183 S.E.2d 749, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 448 (1971).

Defendant's demand for counsel does not bar voluntary statements if the defendant spontaneously incriminates self after questioning has ceased. United States v. Webb, 633 F.2d 1140, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 21270 (5th Cir. 1981).

Request for counsel required. — Without an oral or written request the accused does not invoke a right to the presence of an attorney during custodial interrogation. Johnson v. State, 251 Ga. 62, 303 S.E.2d 7, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 705 (1983).

Defendant's statement to officers after the defendant was read the defendant's rights to "go ahead and run the lawyers" did not constitute an unambiguous or unequivocal request for counsel. Mincey v. Head, 206 F.3d 1106, 2000 U.S. App.

LEXIS 4092 (11th Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 926, 121 S. Ct. 1369, 149 L. Ed. 2d 297, 2001 U.S. LEXIS 2285 (2001).

Although a refusal to sign a waiver of rights form may indicate that the suspect is invoking the right to counsel, it is not conclusive proof that the suspect has invoked the right. Mincey v. Head, 206 F.3d 1106, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 4092 (11th Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 926, 121 S. Ct. 1369, 149 L. Ed. 2d 297, 2001 U.S. LEXIS 2285 (2001).

Defendant's right to speak with an attorney was not violated and defendant's custodial interrogation was admissible into evidence because defendant's comments during the interrogation indicated an intention on defendant's part to speak with a lawyer in the future and did not constitute a clear request for counsel; accordingly, the officer who was questioning defendant was not required to cease questioning defendant. Wallace v. State, 267 Ga. App. 801, 600 S.E.2d 808, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 809 (2004).

Refusal to sign waiver of counsel is not request for counsel. — Accused's refusal to sign a waiver of counsel form was not in effect an assertion of the accused's right to the presence of an attorney and a significant event sufficient to invoke Miranda v. Arizona, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 2817, 384 U.S. 436, 86 S. Ct. 1602, 16 L. Ed. 2d 694, 10 Ohio Misc. 9, 36 Ohio Op. 2d 237, 10 A.L.R.3d 974 (1966); Johnson v. State, 251 Ga. 62, 303 S.E.2d 7, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 705 (1983).

Effect of request for attorney on interrogation. — A fifth amendment right to counsel, like the sixth amendment right to counsel, may be waived by the accused; in either case, once a defendant requests an attorney, all police initiated interrogation is prohibited, and any waiver of the defendant's right to counsel for that police initiated interrogation is invalid, but the defendant may initiate further communications with the police. Housel v. State, 257 Ga. 115, 355 S.E.2d 651, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 745 (1987), cert. denied, 487 U.S. 1240, 108 S. Ct. 2915, 101 L. Ed. 2d 946, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3189 (1988).

Because the defendant asked for an attorney after the defendant's Miranda rights were read and the questioning was continued with no break in the interrogation of the defendant as a “suspect” and the questioning of the defendant as a “witness,” the defendant’s statement was involuntary and could not be used at trial to impeach the defendant. Linares v. State, 266 Ga. 812, 471 S.E.2d 208, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 256, cert. denied, 519 U.S. 997, 117 S. Ct. 491, 136 L. Ed. 2d 384, 1996 U.S. LEXIS 7059 (1996).

Equivocal request for counsel. — Because the defendant’s desires were expressed in an equivocal fashion, police officers’ efforts at clarification showed that the defendant did not intend to invoke the fifth amendment right to counsel by virtue of the defendant’s equivocal request, and the trial court did not err by admitting the defendant’s statement into evidence. Bryant v. State, 186 Ga. App. 142, 366 S.E.2d 810, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 275 (1988).

The rule in Davis v. United States, 512 U. S. 452, 114 S. Ct. 2350, 129 L. Ed.2d 362 (1994), that, if a suspect’s statement is not an unambiguous or unequivocal request for counsel, officers have no obligation to stop questioning the suspect, also applies to invocations of the fifth amendment right to remain silent. Perez v. State, 283 Ga. 196, 657 S.E.2d 846, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 186 (2008).

Question not rising to level of equivocal request for counsel. — Although the defendant asked a detective if the detective thought the defendant needed a lawyer, the defendant’s question did not rise to the level of an equivocal request for counsel. Byrd v. State, 261 Ga. 202, 403 S.E.2d 38, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 168 (1991).

Defendant’s comment concerning whether the defendant should ask for an attorney, made while the defendant was in the process of waiving the defendant’s Miranda rights, was not an equivocal request for counsel. Jackson v. State, 222 Ga. App. 843, 476 S.E.2d 615, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 965 (1996).

Request for attorney does not bar admission of subsequent statements. — If a defendant is arrested, advised of the defendant’s rights, makes an incriminating statement, is arraigned, at which time the defendant asks for an attorney, is later advised of the defendant’s rights again, and then makes another incriminating statement, the admission of the defendant’s second statement does not violate the defendant’s fifth and fourteenth amendment rights. The defendant, under these circumstances, has only indicated the defendant desires counsel in the sixth amendment sense, not that the defendant will deal with the police only through a lawyer. Collins v. Francis, 728 F.2d 1322, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 24501 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 963, 105 S. Ct. 361, 83 L. Ed. 2d 297, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 392 (1984).

Police may legitimately inquire whether a suspect has changed the suspect’s mind about speaking to them with or without an attorney. Johnson v. State, 251 Ga. 62, 303 S.E.2d 7, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 705 (1983).

Failure to cease questioning after phone call. — Defendant’s Miranda rights were not violated when investigating officers failed to cease their questioning after the defendant made a telephone call to the defendant’s brother from the jail, during which the defendant requested that the defendant’s brother obtain an attorney for the defendant. Payne v. State, 249 Ga. 354, 291 S.E.2d 226, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1073 (1982).

Entry of attorney into proceedings after defendant has waived rights. — Where the defendant was adequately advised of the defendant’s rights and signed a written waiver prior to commencing a lengthy taped statement, in the course of which the interrogators were advised that an attorney secured by the defendant’s parent had arrived and wanted to talk to the defendant, interrogators did not deny the defendant’s rights by failing to advise the defendant of the attorney’s presence. Blanks v. State, 254 Ga. 420, 330 S.E.2d 575, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 734 (1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1090, 106 S. Ct. 1479, 89 L. Ed. 2d 733, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 985 (1986).

Prohibition against interrogation applies when sixth amendment right to counsel asserted. — The bright-line rule that prohibits police-initiated interrogations after a defendant has asserted the defendant's fifth amendment right to counsel also applies when a defendant has asserted the defendant's sixth amendment right to counsel at an arraignment or similar proceeding. Collins v. Zant, 892 F.2d 1502, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 161 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 881, 111 S. Ct. 225, 112 L. Ed. 2d 180, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 4813 (1990).

Interrogation for other crimes. — After being given the Miranda warnings, the person under arrest may be interrogated about the commission of crimes other than the one for which the person has been arrested. Cantrell v. State, 237 Ga. 851, 230 S.E.2d 287, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1420 (1976).

Spontaneous admission made after invoking right to silence is admissible. — An admission made by a suspect in custody, after the suspect has invoked the privilege of silence, is voluntary within the meaning of Miranda, if it is made spontaneously, not in response to any question, during legitimate police questioning unrelated to the crime (booking procedure). Jenkins v. State, 123 Ga. App. 822, 182 S.E.2d 542, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 1401 (1971).

Spontaneous statement admissible. — If a statement is made by the defendant after the defendant is informed of the victim's death and is not as a result of any questioning, but is in the nature of a spontaneous statement, it is admissible. Eidson v. State, 167 Ga. App. 184, 305 S.E.2d 787, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3307 (1983).

An incriminating statement made by the defendant after the defendant was arrested and shown the defendant's indictment was a spontaneous exclamation not prompted by any question and was properly admitted into evidence. United States v. Suggs, 755 F.2d 1538, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28498 (11th Cir. 1985).

Statement defendant made to the police when defendant was arrested about a gun replica that the defendant owned, where the defendant was accused of raping women at gunpoint, was admissible because the arresting officers did not use the functional equivalent of questioning to elicit an incriminating response from the defendant, and the spontaneous statement by the defendant was not impermissibly tainted by an officer's earlier question. Collins v. State, 267 Ga. App. 784, 600 S.E.2d 802, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 813 (2004).

It was not error for the trial court to refuse to suppress the defendant's inculpatory statements made while being transported by officers from Maryland to Georgia; the evidence supported the trial court's findings that the inculpatory statements at issue, which had been made after the defendant was advised of the Miranda rights, were not the result of interrogation or questioning but were spontaneously uttered by the defendant. Stokes v. State, 281 Ga. 825, 642 S.E.2d 82, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 174 (2007), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Because the record failed to contain any indication that the defendant: (1) informed the officers of defendant's desire to end an interview; (2) wished to speak with counsel; or (3) wished to leave the station, and after the statements were made the defendant was driven home by an officer, the defendant was not in custody for purposes of Miranda; therefore, admission of these non-custodial statements was proper. Vaughn v. State, 282 Ga. 99, 646 S.E.2d 212, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 419 (2007).

Because the defendant's spontaneous outburst was voluntarily made and not the product of police interrogation, the evidence was not subject to a hearsay exception, Miranda warnings were not required, and the statement was admissible. Tennyson v. State, 282 Ga. 92, 646 S.E.2d 219, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 417 (2007).

Spontaneous conversation overheard. — Where a conversation was spontaneous and not in response to any interrogation or prodding by the person transporting defendants to the hospital, who overheard the conversation, there was no Miranda violation. Eady v. State, 182 Ga. App. 293, 355 S.E.2d 778, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2611 (1987), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Spontaneous, precustodial statements to investigating officers. — The finding that the defendant's statements were voluntary was authorized by testimony that the defendant made spontaneous, voluntary, precustodial statements to the two investigating officers at the scene of the crime, without any questioning, threats, or promises on their part; that these statements were interrupted by their giving the defendant the Miranda warnings, after which the defendant continued the statement; that the defendant had indicated that the defendant understood the Miranda warnings, but did not request an attorney; and that the defendant had made later, consistent custodial statements after having been advised again of the Miranda rights. Sanders v. State, 257 Ga. 239, 357 S.E.2d 66, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 836 (1987).

Defendant initiated conversation admissible. — Because the defendant initiated and asked for a meeting with a law enforcement officer at a restaurant, the defendant was not in custody under the Miranda rule and the statement the defendant made at the meeting was admissible. Hardin v. State, 269 Ga. 1, 494 S.E.2d 647, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 30 (1998).

Defendant's voluntary exclamation of "You got me" is not inadmissible because of a failure to give warnings required by the Escobedo and Miranda cases. Caito v. State, 130 Ga. App. 831, 204 S.E.2d 765, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1277 (1974); Kerretters v. State, 169 Ga. App. 832, 315 S.E.2d 46, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 2826 (1984).

Defendant could not raise an objection to the admission of defendant's spontaneous statement to police officers executing a search warrant that "you've got me" for the first time on appeal absent plain error. There was no plain error in admitting the statement as: (1) defendant was being detained under O.C.G.A. § 17-5-28, and was not under arrest; (2) defendant was not being interrogated, making Miranda warnings not required; (3) defense counsel cross-examined the officers on the statement; (4) the statement was admissible as a spontaneous statement; and (5) the statement was admissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-3 as a part of the res gestae. Zackery v. State, 262 Ga. App. 646, 586 S.E.2d 346, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 974 (2003).

Statements induced by trick are admissible if voluntary. — Statements of an incriminatory character by one accused of crime are admissible in evidence, if freely and voluntarily made, though made to an officer while in custody and induced by some trick, artifice, or deception. Jacobs v. State, 133 Ga. App. 812, 212 S.E.2d 468, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 2298 (1975).

Leading questions permissible. — A mature individual of normal intelligence, after being fully advised of the individual's constitutional rights and consenting to be interviewed without counsel, may, during short periods of questioning when not otherwise imposed upon, be asked leading questions. Moore v. Hopper, 389 F. Supp. 931, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12839 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

Burden of proof as to statements made in unlawful custody. — Each case is to be judged individually on its facts, and the burden is on the prosecution to show the admissibility of statements made by the defendant while in unlawful custody. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1368 (1976).

If defendant interrogated from time of illegal arrest until the defendant confesses, confession inadmissible. — If the causal connection between an illegal arrest and a confession is not broken by any intervening events, but a suspect is interrogated from the time of the defendant's arrival until the defendant confesses a short time later, the trial court errs by admitting the confession into evidence, and a conviction based solely on the confession cannot stand. Robinson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 741, 305 S.E.2d 381, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3272 (1983).

Waiver of rights at police station after arrest at home. — Defendant's statements made to the police were not the product of an illegal arrest and, therefore, inadmissible, because the arresting officer, with an arrest warrant in the officer's pocket, went to the defendant's house and convinced the defendant to go to the police station for further questioning, and when they arrived at the police station, the defendant was immediately advised of the defendant's rights and arrested, signed a written waiver of rights, and gave two statements to the police. There was no merit to the contention that the defendant should have been informed the defendant was being arrested while at home and before going to the police station. Phillips v. State, 258 Ga. 228, 368 S.E.2d 91 (1988).

Statements made to parties which are not law enforcement officers or agents of the state do not require Miranda warnings or trigger an accused's right to counsel. Berryhill v. State, 249 Ga. 442, 291 S.E.2d 685, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1146, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 981, 103 S. Ct. 317, 74 L. Ed. 2d 293 (1982).

That FBI was aware that the witness was visiting defendant and that they paid the witness' travel expenses for these visits, without more, did not make such witness an agent for the government, and, therefore, warnings were inapplicable to statements made by defendant to the witness, and defendant had no right to have counsel present during such visits. Harper v. State, 249 Ga. 519, 292 S.E.2d 389, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1156 (1982), superseded by statute as stated in Wilson v. State, 370 Ga. App. 399, 897 S.E.2d 597, 2024 Ga. App. LEXIS 22 (2024), superseded by statute as stated in Garrison v. State, 319 Ga. 711, 905 S.E.2d 629, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 178 (2024).

Miranda warnings are not a prerequisite to the admission of statements made by a defendant to persons other than law enforcement officers or their agents. Betha v. State, 251 Ga. 328, 304 S.E.2d 713, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 773 (1983).

"Affirmative misrepresentation" not shown. — Where a GBI agent told the defendant that the agent wanted to talk to the defendant about the theft of a truck and only later, after the defendant began talking, told the defendant that the agent knew the owner of the truck was dead, the agent's conduct did not amount to the kind of "affirmative misrepresentation" that would invalidate a suspect's waiver of the fifth amendment privilege. Christenson v. State, 261 Ga. 80, 402 S.E.2d 41, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 139, cert. denied, 502 U.S. 855, 112 S. Ct. 166, 116 L. Ed. 2d 130, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 4511 (1991).

Questioning by nonuniformed city clerk. — After the defendant walked into the city clerk's office looking for someone to surrender to after shooting two people, the defendant could not have believed reasonably that an unarmed, nonuniformed city clerk was a law enforcement officer, or that the defendant was in the clerk's custody, and Miranda did not apply to statements elicited by the clerk. Childs v. State, 257 Ga. 243, 357 S.E.2d 48, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 781, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 970, 108 S. Ct. 467, 98 L. Ed. 2d 406, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 5018 (1987).

Deputy's presence at social worker's interview of defendant. — The presence of a uniformed sheriff's deputy during the interview of defendant by a caseworker of the Department of Family and Children Services did not require the conclusion that defendant was in custody. Banther v. State, 182 Ga. App. 333, 355 S.E.2d 709, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2613 (1987).

Questioning of prison inmate regarding suspected crime is custodial. — Questioning an inmate, whether by peace officers or prison officials, where the thrust and purpose of the interrogation relates to a suspected crime for which criminal prosecution might ensue, is a custodial hearing, and requires a Miranda warning, in order to render any statements made therein admissible in a subsequent hearing. Grant v. State, 154 Ga. App. 758, 270 S.E.2d 42, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2375 (1980).

Statements made absent counsel not per se inadmissible. — It is not the law of this state that when a prisoner is known by police to be represented by counsel, anything the prisoner says to police in absence of counsel is per se inadmissible, whether "voluntary" or not. Pierce v. State, 235 Ga. 237, 219 S.E.2d 158, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 842 (1975).

Statement to prison warden without prior warnings is inadmissible. — A statement made to a warden concerning the location of a car known to have been stolen, which statement had the practical effect of a full confession, is inadmissible as a product of custodial interrogation without the prior warnings required under Miranda. Biddy v. State, 127 Ga. App. 212, 193 S.E.2d 31, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 836 (1972).

Statement in response to warden's suggestion that sentence might be lighter. — Evidence is inadmissible if a warden fails to give Miranda warnings and suggests that the defendant might receive a lighter sentence if the defendant reveals to the officer the location of a car the defendant had stolen and used in escaping. Biddy v. State, 127 Ga. App. 212, 193 S.E.2d 31, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 836 (1972).

Burden on prosecution to show procedural safeguards used in custodial interrogation. — The prosecution may not use statements stemming from custodial interrogation of the defendant unless it demonstrates the use of procedural safeguards effective to secure the privilege against self-incrimination. United States v. Bennett, 626 F.2d 1309, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 13478 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1092, 101 S. Ct. 888, 66 L. Ed. 2d 821, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 466 (1981); Chester v. State, 157 Ga. App. 191, 276 S.E.2d 684, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1730 (1981).

If interrogation continues without the presence of an attorney and a statement is taken, a heavy burden rests on the government to demonstrate that the defendant knowingly and intelligently waived the privilege against self-incrimination and the right to retain or appoint counsel. Colbert v. State, 124 Ga. App. 283, 183 S.E.2d 476, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 897 (1971).

Requesting explanation of presence pursuant to loitering statute not abrogation of right. — The offering of an opportunity in § 16-11-36 for someone suspected of loitering and prowling to explain their presence and conduct does not abrogate the right against self-incrimination. Bell v. State, 252 Ga. 267, 313 S.E.2d 678, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 671 (1984).

Response to police officer's answer to the defendant's own question. —

Because a statement, while "custodial," was not initiated by police officers, but rather, it was the defendant's response to an officer's answer to the defendant's own question, there was no error in admitting the statement. Delay v. State, 258 Ga. 229, 367 S.E.2d 806, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 206, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 850, 109 S. Ct. 132, 102 L. Ed. 2d 105, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 4092 (1988).

Because the undisputed evidence established that a juvenile defendant was informed of the right to have a parent present during an interview with police in which a custodial statement was obtained, but did not invoke that right, there was no error in allowing the juvenile defendant's statement into evidence. Green v. State, 282 Ga. 672, 653 S.E.2d 23, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 839 (2007), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023).

Although resulting in a defendant confessing to a murder, responses an arresting officer made to questions posed by the defendant did not result in a violation of the defendant's Miranda rights as the responses were not the product of a custodial interrogation and there was no evidence of a plan or design on the part of the police to interrogate the defendant without first advising the defendant of the defendant's rights under Miranda. Byrum v. State, 282 Ga. 608, 652 S.E.2d 557, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 780 (2007).

Letter voluntarily written by prisoner not product of "custodial interrogation". — A letter voluntarily written by a prisoner to a stranger to the proceedings which comes to the attention of the state through its power to maintain discipline in its detention facilities and not at the request of or by subterfuge of the state (i.e., not a custodial statement) is not the product of "custodial interrogation" and, thus, is a part of the work product of the state not subject to compelled discovery except to the extent that such a letter may be exculpatory and subject to disclosure under Brady v. Maryland, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 1615, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963); Franklin v. State, 166 Ga. App. 375, 304 S.E.2d 501, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3233 (1983).

Application of exclusionary rule. —

The exclusionary rule does not apply to evidence derived from a voluntary but Miranda-tainted statement. Wilson v. Zant, 249 Ga. 373, 290 S.E.2d 442, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1137, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1092, 103 S. Ct. 580, 74 L. Ed. 2d 940, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 4768 (1982), but see, Morgan v. State, 267 Ga. 203, 476 S.E.2d 747, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 885 (1996).

Questioning about failure to give information after invoking right to remain silent. — State impermissibly questioned the defendant as to whether after the defendant had invoked the right to remain silent, the defendant had shared certain information concerning the defendant's defense with law enforcement officers. Boivin v. State, 298 Ga. App. 411, 680 S.E.2d 415, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 560 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1768, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 533 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2009).

Error without injury beyond reasonable doubt. — In view of the compelling weight of the evidence against the defendant, if it was error to admit the incriminating statements made in response to interrogation carried on after the defendant had said the defendant would not answer questions, it was error without injury beyond reasonable doubt. United States v. Clavis, 956 F.2d 1079, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 5570 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 504 U.S. 990, 112 S. Ct. 2979, 119 L. Ed. 2d 597, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 3637 (1992), modified, 977 F.2d 538, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 29792 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 998, 113 S. Ct. 1619, 123 L. Ed. 2d 178, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 2360 (1993).

Error harmless. — Although the trial court erred in allowing the state to introduce defendant's custodial statement to police, the error was harmless because the record established beyond a reasonable doubt that it did not contribute to the guilty verdict where the eyewitness testimony was overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt of the crimes of which the defendant was convicted. Gardner v. State, 261 Ga. App. 10, 582 S.E.2d 7, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 518 (2003).

3. Waiver and Voluntariness
Generally

Volunteered statements of any kind are not barred by U.S. Const., amend. 5. Carnes v. State, 115 Ga. App. 387, 154 S.E.2d 781, 1967 Ga. App. LEXIS 1117, cert. denied, 389 U.S. 928, 88 S. Ct. 287, 19 L. Ed. 2d 279, 1967 U.S. LEXIS 363 (1967).

Admissibility of volunteered statements. — Any statement given freely and voluntarily without any compelling influences is admissible in evidence. Carnes v. State, 115 Ga. App. 387, 154 S.E.2d 781, 1967 Ga. App. LEXIS 1117, cert. denied, 389 U.S. 928, 88 S. Ct. 287, 19 L. Ed. 2d 279, 1967 U.S. LEXIS 363 (1967).

In a child molestation case, because the evidence of record showed that the officers immediately ceased their interrogation of the defendant when the defendant requested counsel and that it was the defendant who thereafter initiated further communication between them, the trial court was authorized to conclude both that the statements were made freely and voluntarily and that they were not elicited in violation of the defendant's right to counsel. Tatum v. State, 203 Ga. App. 892, 418 S.E.2d 152, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 572 (1992).

Statements admissible. — Statements the defendant made to police at the hospital and the police station were admissible because the defendant was not in custody at the hospital and, thus, no Miranda warnings were required, and the defendant voluntarily waived those rights at the police station. Schutt v. State, 292 Ga. 625, 740 S.E.2d 163, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 263 (2013).

Statements made prior to triggering of Miranda rights. — It did not appear as a matter of law from the evidence that Miranda rights were triggered by a detective's mere asking of the defendant's name, address and other preliminaries for booking purposes, where the defendant was being transported from the defendant's attorney's office, and where the defendant had surrendered into custody, to jail. Syfrett v. State, 210 Ga. App. 185, 435 S.E.2d 470, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS

Miranda warnings are not a prerequisite to the admission of evidence concerning voluntary statements not made in response to any form of custodial interrogation. Smith v. State, 264 Ga. 857, 453 S.E.2d 494, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 43 (1995).

No Miranda warnings were required before defendant made a statement, where it was made voluntarily, and was not made in response to police interrogation or while in police custody. Stevenson v. State, 264 Ga. 892, 453 S.E.2d 18, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 62 (1995).

Defendant properly waived the defendant's Miranda rights so that the defendant's subsequent statements were made voluntarily because the defendant spoke with police detectives and signed a written statement regarding the crimes committed by the defendant before the defendant was arrested. Furthermore, the officers who interviewed the defendant did not breach protocol because, when the officers had the defendant sign the form, the officers did not have to have the defendant separately initial each right that the defendant waived. Herbert v. State, 288 Ga. 843, 708 S.E.2d 260, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 258 (2011).

If defendant initiates communications with the police, the defendant has waived the defendant's Miranda rights. Ward v. State, 262 Ga. 293, 417 S.E.2d 130, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 441 (1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1085, 113 S. Ct. 1061, 122 L. Ed. 2d 366, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 977 (1993).

In a case in which the defendant, who had been stopped by a police officer, left the vehicle and approached a police officer in an unsteady manner, smelling of alcohol, the defendant's volunteered response to the officer's inquiry concerning the defendant's consumption of alcohol did not provoke the right of a custodial interrogation requiring Miranda procedural safeguards. Tibbs v. State, 207 Ga. App. 273, 427 S.E.2d 603, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 150 (1993).

Defendant's admission to ownership of a hat found at a robbery scene was properly admitted because the trial court found that defendant voluntarily initiated a discussion with a detective about the hat and that defendant waived the right to counsel before making a statement. Lawson v. State, 275 Ga. App. 334, 620 S.E.2d 600, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 959 (2005).

Statements made by the defendant in a second custodial interrogation were properly admitted because the investigator honored the defendant's original invocation of the right to remain silent by immediately stopping the interview and exiting the room; furthermore, in the four days between interviews, the defendant was not subjected to repeated efforts to wear down the defendant's resistance and make the defendant change the defendant's mind about invoking the right to remain silent, and because Miranda warnings were repeated before the second interview, and the defendant understood those rights. Griffin v. State, 280 Ga. 683, 631 S.E.2d 671, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 455 (2006), superseded by statute as stated in Ash v. State, 312 Ga. 771, 865 S.E.2d 150, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 680 (2021).

Because a police officer who heard the defendant's statement that the defendant shot after someone because the person took some marijuana from the defendant testified that the defendant uttered the statement spontaneously, and the police officer had not questioned or threatened the defendant, nor did anything to have coerced the defendant to have made the statement, the trial court's ruling that the defendant made the statement freely and voluntarily was not clearly erroneous. Johnson v. State, 287 Ga. App. 352, 651 S.E.2d 450, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 893 (2007).

It was not error to refuse to suppress the statements the defendant made during an interview with police because the defendant pointed to nothing in the record that showed the defendant had previously invoked the defendant's fifth amendment right to have counsel present during custodial interrogation; the fact that counsel was appointed for the defendant at a prior appearance before the trial court did not afford the defendant relief under the sixth amendment, and, furthermore, the interview was at the defendant's instigation. Dixon v. State, 294 Ga. 40, 751 S.E.2d 69, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 891 (2013).

Government must keep plea bargains and promises of immunity. — To protect the voluntariness of a waiver of rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5, where a plea, confession, or admission is based on a promise of a plea bargain or immunity, the government must keep its promise. United States v. Weiss, 599 F.2d 730, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 12820 (5th Cir. 1979).

That statement is voluntary does not preclude exclusion under fourth amendment. — Though statements by the defendant may be possibly voluntary under U.S. Const., amend. 5, it does not necessarily mean they were voluntary under U.S. Const., amend. 4, since they might be tainted by an illegal arrest and detention. In order for the causal chain, between the illegal arrest and the statements made subsequent thereto, to be broken, requires not merely that the statement meet U.S. Const., amend. 5's standard of voluntariness but that it be sufficiently an act of free will to purge the primary taint. Consideration of a statement's admissibility must be made in light of the distinct policies and interests of U.S. Const., amend. 4. Hill v. State, 140 Ga. App. 121, 230 S.E.2d 336, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1368 (1976).

Even though proper Miranda warnings may have been given prior to a defendant's making an incriminatory statement, and even though the statement may have been voluntary for purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 5, the statement is nonetheless inadmissible under the fourth amendment if it is the product of an illegal seizure. Green v. State, 168 Ga. App. 558, 309 S.E.2d 687, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3422 (1983).

Trial court does not err in admitting the defendant's confession obtained pursuant to the defendant's consent if there is nothing in the record to indicate that the confession was coerced or involuntary, and the fact that the defendant may have been illegally detained at the time the defendant made the defendant's statement does not render it inadmissible. Thompson v. State, 157 Ga. App. 600, 278 S.E.2d 62, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1927, aff'd, 248 Ga. 343, 285 S.E.2d 685, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 1012 (1981).

All evidence is not "fruit of the poisonous tree" simply because it would not have come to light but for the illegal actions of the police. The intervention of a clear act of free will on the part of the defendant can purge the evidence of its stigma. United States v. Strickland, 493 F.2d 182, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 8959 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 419 U.S. 801, 95 S. Ct. 9, 42 L. Ed. 2d 32, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 2206 (1974).

Waiver of privilege. — The third provision of U.S. Const., amend. 5, "nor shall [any person] be compelled in any Criminal Case to be a witness against himself," may be waived. Barkman v. Sanford, 162 F.2d 592, 1947 U.S. App. LEXIS 2149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 332 U.S. 816, 68 S. Ct. 155, 92 L. Ed. 393, 1947 U.S. LEXIS 1658 (1947).

The rights guaranteed under U.S. Const., amend. 5 and U.S. Const., amend. 6 are personal; if the defendant has chosen to waive the defendant's rights, and there has been no misconduct on the part of the investigating officers, the trial court does not err in admitting the defendant's statements. Stevens v. State, 247 Ga. 698, 278 S.E.2d 398, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 834 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 4712 (1983).

Because a witness in a civil proceeding refused to answer questions on grounds other than the witness' fifth amendment rights and was held in contempt by the trial court, the witness could not, following unsuccessful appeal of the contempt order, assert the privilege against self-incrimination as a ground for refusing to answer the questions because the witness had waived this privilege by failing to invoke it at the first opportunity. Cohran v. Carlin, 165 Ga. App. 141, 299 S.E.2d 738, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3086 (1983).

Defendant voluntarily waived the right to an attorney by initiating the interview at which the defendant's confession was obtained, following a prior request for counsel. Snipes v. State, 188 Ga. App. 366, 373 S.E.2d 48, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 1060 (1988).

Allowing a codefendant to give testimony regarding the substance of the defendant's prior testimony at a probation revocation hearing, after the defendant elected not to take the stand at trial, did not violate the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination, since the defendant waived the privilege by testifying voluntarily on the defendant's behalf at the prior hearing. Bobbitt v. State, 215 Ga. App. 131, 449 S.E.2d 674, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 1111 (1994).

Because there was evidence that could have authorized the exclusion of the defendant's statement based on lack of a knowing and understanding waiver of the defendant's Miranda rights, and because the trial court failed to make specific findings on the issue, a remand was necessary for the entry of findings on this issue. Livingston v. State, 267 Ga. App. 875, 600 S.E.2d 817, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 802 (2004).

By merely asking if an attorney was present, the defendant did not make an unambiguous request for counsel during a custodial interrogation; because a detective testified that the detective interviewed the defendant for only 35 to 40 minutes immediately after the defendant's arrest and that the defendant was able to understand the detective and respond appropriately to questions, and because the trial court heard the audiotape of the interview, the trial court did not err in finding that the defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived the right to counsel, and admission of the statement was not improper. Simon v. State, 279 Ga. App. 844, 632 S.E.2d 723, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 728 (2006).

Waiver must be knowing and voluntary. — A waiver of the fifth amendment right to counsel must be freely and voluntarily given, and must be knowingly and intelligently made. Buttrum v. Black, 721 F. Supp. 1268, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11272 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 908 F.2d 695, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 12655 (11th Cir. 1990).

Suspect can always make a spontaneous, voluntary statement which would be admissible at trial. Therefore, a defendant did not knowingly and intelligently waive the sixth amendment right to counsel by executing a Miranda waiver, as the defendant signed the waiver only after police erroneously told the defendant signing the waiver was a precondition to telling the defendant's "side of the story." State v. Darby, 284 Ga. 271, 663 S.E.2d 160, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 544 (2008).

Intoxication affecting voluntariness of waiver of Miranda rights. — Defendant's claim that defendant's waiver of Miranda rights was involuntary because defendant was intoxicated was rejected; an officer testified that defendant did not appear to be intoxicated, that defendant seemed to understand the officer's questions, and that defendant's answers were responsive to the officer's questions, and the trial court was entitled to believe this testimony. Smith v. State, 269 Ga. App. 17, 602 S.E.2d 921, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 1061 (2004).

Voluntariness of waiver depends on totality of circumstances. — Whether, after the Miranda warnings are given, the waiver of those rights was free and voluntary depends upon the totality of the circumstances. Miller v. State, 155 Ga. App. 587, 271 S.E.2d 719, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2689 (1980).

Defendant making statement after signing waiver. — Because the defendant, without any questioning by the detective, admitted committing the burglary at the residence where the defendant had been apprehended, seconds after having initialled a waiver form, the confession was admissible. Blige v. State, 203 Ga. App. 151, 416 S.E.2d 160, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 235 (1992).

The defendant's custodial statement was not secured in violation of the right to remain silent, because the defendant initially asserted the right to remain silent, and the evidence supported the finding that the interrogator ceased interrogation once the defendant invoked the right to remain silent and that, minutes later, the defendant waived this right by spontaneously and voluntarily initiating the conversation during which the defendant made the statement. Farley v. State, 234 Ga. App. 742, 507 S.E.2d 504, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1314 (1998).

Although defendant disputed many of the facts offered by a police detective and a federal agent regarding whether defendant was given Miranda warnings prior to defendant's statements to the detective and the agent and whether defendant's statements were made without bribery and coercion, the trial judge was the arbiter of the credibility of the witnesses at defendant's Jackson v. Denno hearing and ample testimony supported the trial court's conclusion that the statements were voluntarily given where the testimony of the detective and the federal agent indicated that the two custodial interviews each lasted about an hour, defendant was read Miranda warnings and executed a written waiver of rights form before giving each statement, and defendant was never threatened or promised any hope of benefit in exchange for the statements; since the trial court's factual and credibility findings were not clearly erroneous, its decision to admit the statements was upheld on appeal. Phanamixay v. State, 260 Ga. App. 177, 581 S.E.2d 286, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 363 (2003).

Defendant's videotaped statement made to police during a custodial interrogation was admissible because the defendant made the statement voluntarily after the defendant was advised of, and waived, the defendant's Miranda rights, and the defendant presented no evidence the statement was made under duress or coercion. McCoy v. State, 292 Ga. 296, 736 S.E.2d 425, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 16 (2013).

Defendant's custodial statement was admissible because the statement was made during questioning prompted by the defendant, after the defendant signed a written waiver of rights form. Smith v. State, 292 Ga. 620, 740 S.E.2d 158, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 258 (2013).

In deciding the admissibility of a statement during a Jackson-Denno hearing, the trial court must consider the totality of the circumstances and must determine the admissibility of the statement under the preponderance of the evidence standard. Fowler v. State, 246 Ga. 256, 271 S.E.2d 168, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1071 (1980).

Trial court is required to make findings as to voluntariness in determining the admissibility of a statement given to a second police officer after the first officer had advised the defendant of the defendant's rights. Jordan v. State, 207 Ga. App. 710, 429 S.E.2d 97, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 332 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C0964, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 589 (Ga. App. 30, 1993).

Privilege against self-incrimination can be waived in praesenti. Feig v. Feig, 246 Ga. 763, 272 S.E.2d 723, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1266 (1980).

Waiver of right to remain silent. — By making statements knowingly and voluntarily after being advised of constitutional rights, a party waives the right to remain silent. Pendergrass v. State, 245 Ga. 626, 266 S.E.2d 225, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 878 (1980).

Once Miranda warnings are given and a person in custody gives a statement to police without invoking the right to remain silent and without requesting an attorney, that person has in effect waived that person's rights. Barrs v. State, 202 Ga. App. 520, 414 S.E.2d 733, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 47 (1992).

Waiver of privilege in civil case did not mean waiver in criminal case. — In a civil wrongful death case against a doctor for prescriptions resulting in a drug overdose, and in which a parallel criminal case was pending, the trial court erred in staying the civil case based on the court's erroneous view that a waiver of the doctor's fifth amendment privilege in the civil case would result in a waiver in the criminal case. Remand was required for consideration under a correct view. Austin v. Nagareddy, 344 Ga. App. 636, 811 S.E.2d 68, 2018 Ga. App. LEXIS 117 (2018).

Ineffective invocation of right to remain silent. — Defendant's statement that the defendant "was reluctant to answer any question" did not constitute an equivocal invocation to right to remain silent since it was made before the defendant was in actual police custody. Manchester v. State, 226 Ga. App. 653, 487 S.E.2d 449, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 743 (1997).

Defendant's statement during questioning was admissible into evidence because the defendant made no more than an equivocal invocation of the defendant's right to remain silent, and the defendant did not articulate a desire to cut off questioning with sufficient clarity that a reasonable police officer in the circumstances would have understood the articulation to be an assertion of the right to remain silent. Thus, the interrogating officer had no obligation to stop questioning the defendant. Weaver v. State, 288 Ga. 540, 705 S.E.2d 627, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 94 (2011).

Defendant signed away the defendant's rights. — Any statements by the defendant after waiver documents were read to and executed by the defendant were knowingly and voluntarily given, as were the waivers of Miranda rights that preceded such statements. Rachell v. State, 210 Ga. App. 106, 435 S.E.2d 480, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1106 (1993).

Failure to sign waiver form. — Defendant's refusal to sign a Miranda waiver form was not an invocation of the right to remain silent or to counsel. Hunter v. State, 273 Ga. App. 52, 614 S.E.2d 179, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 406 (2005).

Waiver not established by response to further interrogation. — If an accused has invoked the right to have counsel present during custodial interrogation, a valid waiver of that right cannot be established by showing only that the accused responded to further police-initiated custodial interrogation even if the accused has been advised of the accused's rights. Cervi v. Kemp, 855 F.2d 702, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 11694 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1033, 109 S. Ct. 1172, 103 L. Ed. 2d 230, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1011 (1989).

Refusal to sign written waiver does not automatically invoke the accused's right to silence; whether a failure to sign a written waiver constitutes such an invocation depends upon the existing circumstances. Johnson v. State, 186 Ga. App. 801, 368 S.E.2d 562, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 519 (1988).

Waiver followed by subsequent assertion of right to counsel. — Defendant's assertion of the right to counsel rendered inadmissible any statement subsequently given by the defendant in violation of the defendant's rights, but did not have the effect of rendering inadmissible any previous statement which the defendant had already made pursuant to a valid waiver of the defendant's constitutional rights. Peebles v. State, 196 Ga. App. 176, 395 S.E.2d 640, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 855 (1990).

Defendant knowingly and intelligently waived the fifth amendment privilege, because, although the defendant had a dependent personality disorder, the defendant was not completely without the will to refuse the requests of others, even when under medication, and the defendant understood at least some of the consequences of the defendant's acts. United States v. Gaddy, 894 F.2d 1307, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 2295 (11th Cir. 1990).

Because defendant received Miranda warnings, waived them and then gave a statement to police, the fact that defendant was taking pain medication at the time did not negate the voluntary waiver of defendant's rights under Miranda, and as the findings on that issue by the trial court were not clearly erroneous, the denial of suppression of that statement was not disturbed. Moyer v. State, 275 Ga. App. 366, 620 S.E.2d 837, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 973 (2005), cert. denied, No. S06C0145, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 142 (Ga. Feb. 13, 2006), overruled in part, Vergara v. State, 283 Ga. 175, 657 S.E.2d 863, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 202 (2008).

Trial court properly admitted defendant's statement at trial with regard to defendant's conviction of felony murder and possession of a firearm in connection with the shooting death of another as the evidence supported the trial court's conclusion that defendant made a knowing, voluntary, and intelligent waiver of defendant's rights before making the statement to police; the evidence established that Georgia police officers went to the city in the state of Florida where defendant fled and had been arrested and, prior to the interview, defendant was read Miranda rights and agreed to speak with the officers after informing the officers that defendant understood defendant's rights. The evidence further showed that no promises or threats were made to defendant to get defendant to speak and at no time did defendant ask for the questioning to stop. Martinez v. State, 283 Ga. 122, 657 S.E.2d 199, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 131 (2008).

Waiver of privilege by juveniles. — Confessions and incriminating statements given outside the presence of the juvenile's parents will not be automatically excluded, because age alone is not determinative of whether a person can waive the person's rights. Instead, the question of waiver must be analyzed by a consideration of several factors. These are (1) age of the accused; (2) education of the accused; (3) knowledge of the accused as to both the substance of the charge . . . and the nature of the accused's rights to consult with an attorney and remain silent; (4) whether the accused is held incommunicado or allowed to consult with relatives, friends or an attorney; (5) whether the accused was interrogated before or after formal charges had been filed; (6) methods used in interrogation; (7) length of interrogations; (8) whether vel non the accused refused to voluntarily give statements on prior occasions; and (9) whether the accused has repudiated an extrajudicial statement at a later date. Riley v. State, 237 Ga. 124, 226 S.E.2d 922, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1170 (1976), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023).

Given an analysis of the Riley factors, and the fact that the juvenile defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived any constitutional rights due under Miranda, suppression of a custodial statement to law enforcement was not required. Green v. State, 282 Ga. 672, 653 S.E.2d 23, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 839 (2007), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023).

The admissibility of a juvenile's statement turns on whether the juvenile knowingly and voluntarily waived the juvenile's constitutional rights, and the state has a heavy burden in showing that a juvenile did so. Whether a juvenile has made a knowing and voluntary waiver of the juvenile's rights depends on the totality of the circumstances, with consideration given to nine specific factors. Smith v. State, 263 Ga. 363, 434 S.E.2d 465, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 646 (1993), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023).

A thirteen-year old defendant knowingly and intelligently waived the defendant's constitutional rights and made the defendant's statements freely and voluntarily where the trial court found that the defendant was fully informed of the defendant's rights and gave every indication, even under the defendant's own testimony, that the defendant understood those rights and understood the charges against the defendant; that the defendant showed throughout a willingness to speak with the police officers; that the defendant's statements were made in a non-coercive setting in the presence of one or both of the two adults with whom the defendant lived; and that no promise of benefit had been made to the defendant. Henry v. State, 264 Ga. 861, 452 S.E.2d 505, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 42 (1995), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023).

The trial court did not err in finding that a defendant made a knowing and intelligent waiver of the defendant's federal and state constitutional rights prior to giving a statement to police because a juvenile waiver-of-rights form was read in its entirety to, and signed by, the defendant and the defendant's parent, and neither the defendant nor the defendant's parent ever invoked the defendant's right to remain silent or asked that the questioning cease. Norris v. State, 282 Ga. 430, 651 S.E.2d 40, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 606 (2007), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023).

There are factual situations in which the privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 may be waived. Tyler v. United States, 404 F.2d 409, 1968 U.S. App. LEXIS 4456 (5th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 394 U.S. 917, 89 S. Ct. 1187, 22 L. Ed. 2d 450, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 2190 (1969).

Defendant's statement to the officer that the defendant would talk but would not sign anything, proved not only waiver of the right to remain silent but of the assistance of an attorney as well. Graves v. State, 180 Ga. App. 446, 349 S.E.2d 519, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2738 (1986).

Subsequent written acknowledgment. — Although the defendant had refused to sign a written acknowledgment that the defendant had been informed of the right to remain silent and right to representation, the defendant's subsequent acknowledgment in writing two hours later that the defendant had been informed of these rights supported the trial court's findings that the defendant's statement was freely and voluntarily given. Pierce v. State, 209 Ga. App. 366, 433 S.E.2d 641, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 883 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1648, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 962 (Ga. Oct. 12, 1993).

Waiver invalid notwithstanding earlier brief consultation with attorney. — Defendant's waiver of the right to counsel, made at a police-initiated interrogation after the defendant had invoked the defendant's right to counsel, was invalid, notwithstanding the fact that the defendant had earlier been allowed to consult with an attorney briefly on the afternoon of the defendant's interrogation. Roper v. State, 258 Ga. 847, 375 S.E.2d 600, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 54, cert. denied, 493 U.S. 923, 110 S. Ct. 290, 107 L. Ed. 2d 270, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 4958 (1989).

Voluntary inculpatory statements need not be suppressed. — If the defendant is admonished with Miranda warnings after the right to counsel attaches, and then voluntarily makes inculpatory statements, the statements need not be suppressed. Buttrum v. Black, 721 F. Supp. 1268, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11272 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 908 F.2d 695, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 12655 (11th Cir. 1990).

While defendant claimed an officer had promised defendant leniency in exchange for defendant's statement, the officer denied this; therefore, the trial court's denial of defendant's motion to suppress defendant's custodial statements on the grounds they were not voluntary was not clearly erroneous. Pennymon v. State, 261 Ga. App. 450, 582 S.E.2d 582, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 656 (2003).

Defendant's motion to suppress the custodial statement the defendant gave to the police was properly denied as: (1) the Miranda warnings were first read aloud to the defendant and then the defendant was allowed to read and initial each right and to sign the waiver form; (2) the defendant's parent was present during the interrogation; (3) the defendant's statement to the police was not the result of threats or intimidation; and (4) the interrogation tactics used, including alleged screaming and chair-kicking, were not more than were ordinarily employed. Peterson v. State, 280 Ga. 875, 635 S.E.2d 132, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 571 (2006).

Defendant's motion to suppress a videotaped statement was properly denied as the sixth amendment right to counsel was offense specific and counsel representing the defendant on unrelated charges did not have to be contacted prior to an interview about a murder; the defendant was advised of the defendant's fifth amendment right to counsel at the initiation of the questioning about the murder and executed a waiver of that right, and at a Jackson-Denno hearing, the defendant's inculpatory statement was found to have been made freely and voluntarily. McKinney v. State, 281 Ga. 92, 635 S.E.2d 153, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 582 (2006).

Because the evidence sufficiently showed that the defendant made a rational and intelligent choice to waive the rights outlined under Miranda and speak with police detectives on two separate and distinct occasions, the trial court did not err in denying a motion to suppress said statements. Starks v. State, 283 Ga. 164, 656 S.E.2d 518, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 29 (2008).

Statements the defendant made at the scene and the station during an interview were admissible, because the defendant received and waived Miranda warnings before making the incriminating statements, and the defendant's interrogators testified that the interrogators made no threats or promises and did not coerce the defendant in any way. Simmons v. State, 291 Ga. 664, 732 S.E.2d 65, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 739 (2012).

Voluntary inculpatory statements not suppressed even when defendant consumed Ecstasy. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to exclude a statement made to a detective because the statement was made while the defendant was under the influence of Ecstasy and was induced by the hope of a light sentence because the defendant never told the detective that the defendant had taken Ecstasy a few hours earlier and the detective credibly testified that no promise of leniency was made. Leonard v. State, 292 Ga. 214, 735 S.E.2d 767, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 968 (2012).

Courts not unaware of conflict in choosing between silence and explanation. — Whether or not a waiver of rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 is voluntary does not mean that courts do not recognize that defendants cannot be free from conflicting concerns, and cannot weigh the relative advantages of silence and explanation. United States v. White, 589 F.2d 1283, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16634 (5th Cir. 1979).

Waiver of privilege by codefendant appearing as witness. — If an accomplice has been separately indicted and has testified at the accomplice's own trial, the accomplice waives the privilege against self-incrimination when appearing as a witness at the defendant accomplice's trial. Lively v. State, 237 Ga. 35, 226 S.E.2d 581, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1137 (1976).

Party may invoke privilege at second trial even if waived at first trial. — On a second trial a party may decline to give evidence which would tend to incriminate that party, notwithstanding the fact that at a previous trial of the case the party waived the party's privilege of remaining silent as to these matters. Mallin v. Mallin, 227 Ga. 833, 183 S.E.2d 377, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 859 (1971).

Admissibility at trial of defendant's testimony at bail hearing. — Absent objections grounded on the fifth amendment at the bail hearing, the decision of defense counsel to bring the extraneous issue of guilt or innocence into the bail proceeding did not preclude, on fifth amendment grounds, the use at trial of incriminating testimony given at such hearing. Cowards v. State, 266 Ga. 191,

Burden of proof of waiver. — The burden rests upon the state to demonstrate clearly that the defendant knowingly and intelligently waived the privilege against self-incrimination. Smith v. State, 132 Ga. App. 491, 208 S.E.2d 351, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1725 (1974).

Statements overheard by arresting officers are not involuntary. — Evidence of statements made by the defendant in a conversation overheard by the arresting officers who had concealed themselves, as planned between them and the person with whom the defendant talked, does not amount to evidence given by the defendant involuntarily and without the advice of counsel, and is not coerced from the defendant in violation of the defendant's rights not to be compelled to be a witness against himself. Blackwell v. State, 113 Ga. App. 536, 148 S.E.2d 912, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1126 (1966).

Spontaneous statement while in custody before advisement of Miranda rights. — Trial court was not clearly erroneous in admitting the voluntary and spontaneous statements defendant made while riding in a police car after defendant's arrest before being advised of Miranda rights because the statements were not the result of an interrogation and an officer told defendant it would be in defendant's best interest to wait until getting to the police station before talking. Gresham v. State, 255 Ga. App. 625, 566 S.E.2d 380, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 717 (2002).

Voluntariness of relinquishing of evidence hidden in defendant's mouth. — Because the defendant had been stopped by officers, but was not under legal arrest, the defendant's action in opening the defendant's mouth when ordered to do so by officer, at which time officer removed from the defendant's mouth a chewing gum wrapper containing penciled entries for use in a numbers game, was voluntary and not the result of coercion so as to make the introduction of the wrapper, as a lottery ticket, inadmissible on the ground that it violated the constitutional inhibition against self-incrimination, as there was no explicit threat or show of force against the defendant. Nor can it be said, in the absence of coercion, that such evidence was inadmissible as violative of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Jones v. State, 90 Ga. App. 761, 84 S.E.2d 124, 1954 Ga. App. LEXIS 807 (1954).

Failure to inform defendant of the privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 in the civil context does not make testimony given in the civil case involuntary. United States v. White, 589 F.2d 1283, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16634 (5th Cir. 1979).

Because the transcript of proceedings and trial counsel's affidavit did not show that defendant was advised that a guilty plea would waive the privilege against self-incrimination and the right to confrontation, the trial court erred in denying defendant's habeas corpus petition. Green v. State, 279 Ga. 687, 620 S.E.2d 788, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 635 (2005), overruled on other grounds, Lejeune v. McLaughlin, 296 Ga. 291, 766 S.E.2d 803, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 938 (2014).

Uncounseled inculpatory testimony in a civil case given in ignorance of the privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 is not inadmissible in a subsequent criminal case. United States v. White, 589 F.2d 1283, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16634 (5th Cir. 1979).

Nonvoluntary statements. — Admission of a nonvoluntary statement although not a confession nor on its face incriminatory is a violation of due process. Platt v. State, 163 Ga. App. 776, 296 S.E.2d 113, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3250 (1982).

Hearing required only when fair question presented. — The requirement for a hearing on the issue of voluntariness of a statement applies only if the evidence presents a fair question as to its voluntariness. Watson v. State, 227 Ga. 698, 182 S.E.2d 446, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 819 (1971).

Statement admissible upon prima facie showing of voluntariness. — After the state made a prima facie showing of voluntariness, the court properly admitted the defendant's statement into evidence for the jury's consideration, and thereafter, the question of whether or not defendant's confession was freely and voluntarily given, without hope of benefit or fear of injury, became one of fact for determination by the jury. Simonton v. State, 151 Ga. App. 431, 260 S.E.2d 487, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2561 (1979).

Burden and standard of proof as to voluntariness. — The state must prove by a preponderance of the evidence considering the totality of the circumstances that a statement given by an accused was voluntary. Lawrence v. State, 235 Ga. 216, 219 S.E.2d 101, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 832 (1975).

There is no burden on state officials to prevent an accused from talking about the incident in question if the accused wishes to do so. Simply stated, they must not interrogate but they need not refuse to listen. Zubiadul v. State, 193 Ga. App. 235, 387 S.E.2d 431, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 1385 (1989).

Trial court's determinations on voluntariness of waiver must be accepted unless clearly erroneous. — If the trial court concludes that the accused had freely and voluntarily waived the rights to silence and an attorney and had chosen to give a statement, the appellate court must accept those factual determinations by the trial court unless those findings are shown to be clearly erroneous. Lawrence v. State, 235 Ga. 216, 219 S.E.2d 101, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 832 (1975); Fowler v. State, 246 Ga. 256, 271 S.E.2d 168, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1071 (1980).

If in a hearing conducted outside the presence of the jury the judge determines as trier of fact the issues of voluntariness, truthfulness and comprehension of a confession, the judge's findings will not be disturbed in the absence of obvious error; the question is not whether Miranda warnings have been repeated on every occasion when the defendant has been examined but whether the defendant understands the defendant's rights and acts in accordance with such understanding. Duke v. State, 158 Ga. App. 71, 279 S.E.2d 476, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2078 (1981).

Trial court's findings that the defendant was advised of the defendant's Miranda rights, that the defendant voluntarily waived those rights, and that the defendant voluntarily made statements to the police were clearly erroneous as to statements the defendant made prior to being advised of the defendant's Miranda rights because the trial court did not find the facts necessary to support those findings. Reaves v. State, 284 Ga. 181, 664 S.E.2d 211, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 622 (2008), overruled in part, Tatum v. State, 319 Ga. 187, 903 S.E.2d 109, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 137 (2024).

No requirement that questions imposed under F.R.Cr.P. 11(c)(3) be asked. — While the Constitution requires that the record indicate the voluntariness of any waiver of the rights of jury trial, confrontation, and nonself-incrimination, it does not require that a district judge go beyond these constitutional minima to ask the specific questions that F.R.Cr.P. 11(c)(3), 18 U.S.C. App., imposes as a prophylactic procedure. United States v. Caston, 615 F.2d 1111, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 18304 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 831, 101 S. Ct. 99, 66 L. Ed. 2d 36, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2760 (1980).

No error where admission without voluntariness hearing is harmless beyond reasonable doubt. — Where the case against the defendant is so overwhelming that any error in admitting an in-custody statement without first conducting a hearing out of the presence of the jury was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt, the admission of such statement in evidence without a hearing is not error. Harris v. Stynchcombe, 227 Ga. 763, 183 S.E.2d 205, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 835 (1971).

Absent proper objection and any evidence that defendant's in-custody statement is involuntary, its admission in evidence without a voluntariness hearing is not error. Harris v. Stynchcombe, 227 Ga. 763, 183 S.E.2d 205, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 835 (1971); Taylor v. State, 143 Ga. App. 881, 240 S.E.2d 236, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2548 (1977).

Where objection concerns failure to give Miranda warnings, not voluntariness, admission without voluntariness hearing not error. — If an objection to admission of a defendant's in-custody statement is on the ground of the alleged failure to apprise the defendant of the defendant's constitutional rights prior to taking the defendant's statement and does not reach the issue of the statement's voluntariness, the admission of such statement in evidence without a hearing as to its voluntariness is not error. Watson v. State, 227 Ga. 698, 182 S.E.2d 446, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 819 (1971).

Evidence from psychiatric interrogation in capital case. — The state may not use evidence from a psychiatric interrogation in a capital sentencing proceeding unless the defendant received proper Miranda warnings prior to the examinations. A defense request for competency and sanity evaluations does not permit the examining psychiatrist to testify on the issue of future dangerousness upon which the defendant never consented to being examined. Buttrum v. Black, 721 F. Supp. 1268, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11272 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 908 F.2d 695, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 12655 (11th Cir. 1990).

Murder defendant's voluntary in-custody statements to the defendant's parent, made without the benefit of Miranda warnings, were admissible, because defendant spoke freely to the parent, apparently with full knowledge of the consequences of revealing where the victim's body had been left. Buttersworth v. State, 260 Ga. 795, 400 S.E.2d 908, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 69 (1991).

Psychiatric evidence. — When, in support of a claim of mental retardation or illness, a capital defendant presents expert psychiatric evidence, then, at the very least, the prosecution may rebut this presentation with evidence from the reports of the examination that the defendant relied upon; the defendant has no fifth amendment privilege against the introduction of this psychiatric testimony by the prosecution for such a limited rebuttal purpose. Stephens v. State, 270 Ga. 354, 509 S.E.2d 605, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 1213 (1998).

Statement to psychiatrist. — Where defense counsel arranged for the defendant's examination by a psychiatrist, the defendant's incriminating statement made to the psychiatrist was freely and voluntarily given; the defendant was given Miranda warning at the time of the arrest and it was not necessary to remind the defendant that the defendant need not answer any of the psychiatrist questions before the examination. Hammock v. State, 210 Ga. App. 513, 436 S.E.2d 571, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1249 (1993).

4. Voluntariness of Confessions

What constitutes a confession. — A confession is a voluntary statement made by a person charged with the commission of a crime, wherein the accused acknowledges to be guilty of the offense charged. Such a statement will not suffice as a confession where only limited facts are admitted from which the jury would not be authorized to infer guilt. Jackson v. State, 225 Ga. 553, 170 S.E.2d 281, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 562 (1969).

Statement which does not confess guilt, though incriminating in nature, is an admission only. As such, it is not direct evidence of guilt, but only circumstantial evidence tending to prove the offense when considered with other evidence and may be used to justify a conviction. Thompson v. State, 151 Ga. App. 128, 258 S.E.2d 776, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2462 (1979).

Presumptively valid statement. — Defendant's statement to the police was presumptively valid because before making the statement, defendant was advised of defendant's Miranda rights, defendant understood those rights, defendant executed a waiver of rights form, and defendant did not invoke the right to have an attorney present during defendant's interview. Ray v. State, 273 Ga. App. 656, 615 S.E.2d 812, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 596 (2005), cert. denied, No. S05C1727, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 747 (Ga. Oct. 24, 2005).

Writing not required. — No law or authority requires a confession or admission to be reduced to writing. Hilliard v. State, 128 Ga. App. 157, 195 S.E.2d 772, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1423 (1973).

Test of voluntariness. — The appropriate standard in judging voluntariness is whether the confession was extracted by any sort of threats or violence, or obtained by any direct or implied promises, however slight, or by the exertion of any improper influences. United States v.

Morris, 491 F. Supp. 226, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13472 (S.D. Ga. 1980).

When evidentiary hearing required. — There must be an evidentiary hearing to properly determine the voluntariness of a confession. State v. Watson, 143 Ga. App. 785, 240 S.E.2d 194, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2502 (1977).

Both the defendant and the state are entitled to a resolution of voluntariness, which is resolved without receiving evidence or hearing testimony. State v. Watson, 143 Ga. App. 785, 240 S.E.2d 194, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2502 (1977).

Accused is entitled to a hearing on voluntariness by a body other than the one trying guilt or innocence. James v. State, 223 Ga. 677, 157 S.E.2d 471, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 659 (1967); Hilliard v. State, 128 Ga. App. 157, 195 S.E.2d 772, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1423 (1973).

Voluntariness determination must be reliable and clear-cut, including the resolution of disputed facts upon which the voluntariness issue may depend. United States v. James, 590 F.2d 575, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 17005 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 917, 99 S. Ct. 2836, 61 L. Ed. 2d 283, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 2336 (1979), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 917, 99 S. Ct. 2836, 61 L. Ed. 2d 283 (1979), overruled in part, United States v. Jesenik, No. 3:20-cr-228-SI, 2022 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 192543 (D. Or. Oct. 20, 2022).

Requirements where evidence regarding voluntariness genuinely in dispute. — If the evidence concerning the voluntariness of a confession gives rise to a disputed issue on which the minds of reasonable persons might disagree, it is the duty of the trial judge to hold a preliminary hearing of evidence on the subject outside the presence of the jury at which both sides should be offered an opportunity to present evidence. It may then be offered for jury consideration after, and only after, a definite ruling by the trial judge that the judge finds the confession to have been voluntarily made. A mere ruling that the judge finds the issue in dispute and will let it go to the jury is not sufficient. Cardell v. State, 119 Ga. App. 848, 168 S.E.2d 889, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 1277 (1969).

Proper analysis in determining the admissibility of a confession is threefold: first, whether the protective guidelines delineated in Miranda v. Arizona, 384 U.S. 436, 86 S. Ct. 1602, 16 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1960), to secure the privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against self-incrimination were scrupulously honored; second, whether defendant voluntarily, knowingly and intelligently waived the rights enumerated in the Miranda warnings, and third, whether defendant's eventual confession was the result of a voluntary decision. United States v. Morris, 491 F. Supp. 226, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13472 (S.D. Ga. 1980).

One who suffers some mental or emotional impairment can give a valid confession. Corn v. State, 240 Ga. 130, 240 S.E.2d 694, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1423 (1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 2255, 56 L. Ed. 2d 415 (1978).

The fact that the defendant may have suffered from mental deficiency or that the defendant was illiterate did not render the defendant incapable of making a valid confession. Coverson v. State, 162 Ga. App. 497, 292 S.E.2d 196, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2196 (1982); Frymyer v. State, 179 Ga. App. 391, 346 S.E.2d 573, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2623 (1986).

Mere showing of mental disability insufficient for exclusion. — A mere showing that one who confessed to a crime may have suffered from some mental disability is not a sufficient basis upon which to exclude the statement. Corn v. State, 240 Ga. 130, 240 S.E.2d 694, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1423 (1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 2255, 56 L. Ed. 2d 415 (1978).

Admissions made by defendant after defendant had been read Miranda rights and had waived them did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 5 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI, even if defendant was mentally ill as alleged; mental illness did not render a defendant incapable of making a voluntary statement. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 756, 620 S.E.2d 778, 2005

Ga. LEXIS 523 (2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 3608 (2006).

Mental ability and unfamiliarity with the criminal process are factors that weigh heavily against the voluntariness of a confession. Cooper v. Griffin, 455 F.2d 1142, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 11426 (5th Cir. 1972).

Defendant's claim that a statement to police was involuntary due to drug and alcohol impairment was properly rejected as the defendant admitted during the interview to consuming only two tranquilizers due to nervousness, and the interviewers testified that the defendant did not appear to be impaired and communicated with them in a lucid and coherent manner. Carter v. State, 285 Ga. 394, 677 S.E.2d 71, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 167 (2009).

Statement not rendered involuntary by lack of intelligence. — The fact that there was evidence that a criminal defendant ranked in the lower three percent of population in range of intelligence did not render the defendant's voluntary statement invalid or involuntary. In determining this issue, the court must consider the totality of the circumstances and decide to the preponderance of the evidence. Kerr v. State, 194 Ga. App. 604, 391 S.E.2d 449, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 281 (1990).

Voluntariness of confessions in counsel's absence. — Considering the totality of the circumstances, a confession may be shown to be voluntary, even though made in the absence of counsel, after counsel has been retained or appointed. Pierce v. State, 235 Ga. 237, 219 S.E.2d 158, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 842 (1975).

If defendant is aware of rights, and not under duress nor drugs or alcohol, confession is voluntary. — Because the evidence heard was sufficient to authorize the trial court to determine that the defendant was advised of the defendant's rights, that the defendant was not placed under any duress, that the defendant seemed to understand the defendant's rights, that the defendant was not under influence of drugs or alcohol and that the defendant seemed completely aware of what was going on around the defendant, the defendant's confession was voluntarily elicited and not in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 5 or U.S. Const., amend. 6. Simonton v. State, 151 Ga. App. 431, 260 S.E.2d 487, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2561 (1979).

Defendant's confessions to the murder of defendant's spouse made to police were voluntary: the defendant was 37 years old, could read and write, had graduated from high school, and was not under the influence of drugs or alcohol. Defendant accompanied police to the station voluntarily, was not handcuffed, and was free to leave at any time. Turner v. State, 287 Ga. 793, 700 S.E.2d 386, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 606 (2010).

Trial court did not err in concluding that the defendant made a knowing and voluntary waiver of the defendant's Miranda rights, despite the testimony of the defendant's expert witness to the contrary because: (1) the detective who interviewed the defendant testified that the defendant said that the defendant was not under the influence of alcohol or drugs; (2) the detective had experience in dealing with people under the influence of alcohol or drugs; (3) the detective saw no evidence that the defendant was under the influence of alcohol or drugs; (4) the defendant had no difficulty speaking or communicating; (5) the detective read the defendant the defendant's Miranda rights; and (6) the defendant said that the defendant understood each of the rights. Watkins v. State, 289 Ga. 359, 711 S.E.2d 655, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 474 (2011).

Waiver must be voluntary and cannot be presumed from silence after warnings given. — To be valid, a waiver of the privilege against self-incrimination must be made voluntarily, and may not be presumed simply from the silence of the accused after warnings are given or simply from the fact that a confession was in fact eventually obtained. United States v. Daniel, 441 F.2d 374, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 10911 (5th Cir. 1971); United States v. Morris, 491 F. Supp. 226, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13472 (S.D. Ga. 1980).

Use of threats or promises to coerce a criminal defendant to make a statement is contrary to O.C.G.A. § 24-3-50 and to U.S. Const., amend. 5. Young v. State, 243 Ga. 546, 255 S.E.2d 20, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 984 (1979).

Although the detective used descriptive language regarding how blood would be taken from defendant's arm, because it was common knowledge how a hospital drew blood from a patient, the detective's language did not convey any threat of bodily harm, and the detective's warning that the detective would arrest defendant if the defendant's blood matched that found at the victim's apartment was not a threat of personal harm and did not render defendant's statements to the detective involuntary; thus, defendant's statements to the detective were voluntary. Dyer v. State, 278 Ga. 656, 604 S.E.2d 756, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 937 (2004), cert. denied, 546 U.S. 845, 126 S. Ct. 95, 163 L. Ed. 2d 111, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 6380 (2005).

Employment of falsehood by a police officer, where calculated only to elicit the truth, is not alone enough to render a confession inadmissible. Jacobs v. State, 133 Ga. App. 812, 212 S.E.2d 468, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 2298 (1975).

False or deceptive statements by police do not render confession involuntary. — Confessions are not generally rendered inadmissible merely because they are obtained by fraud, deception, or trickery practiced upon the accused, provided the means employed are not calculated to procure an untrue statement and the confession is otherwise freely and voluntarily made. Moore v. Hopper, 389 F. Supp. 931, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12839 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

In questioning a mature criminal suspect of normal intelligence, who has been fully advised of the suspect's constitutional rights, falsely advising the suspect that the murder weapon has been found is insufficient in and of itself to render the otherwise free and voluntary confession inadmissible. Moore v. Hopper, 389 F. Supp. 931, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12839 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

The fact that state police falsely told the defendant, a mature individual of normal intelligence, during questioning of short duration that the defendant's associate had confessed, while relevant, was insufficient to make an otherwise voluntary confession inadmissible. Moore v. Hopper, 389 F. Supp. 931, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12839 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

Reissuance of Miranda warning after lapse of time. — Confession given less than four hours after the issuance of Miranda warnings was not inadmissible because of failure to reissue the warnings since the record reflected that the warnings given were complete and defendant understood them. Jarrell v. Balkcom, 735 F.2d 1242, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 21326 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1103, 105 S. Ct. 2331, 85 L. Ed. 2d 848, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 1823 (1985).

Trial court did not err in admitting statements made by defendant to police, wherein the defendant admitted involvement in a robbery, as defendant was Mirandized prior to the time that the defendant admitted the participation, and during a second interview a few days later, defendant was again properly Mirandized prior to giving a written statement admitting the involvement in the crime; Miranda warnings were not required when the officers conducted an initial noncustodial interview of defendant and further, the defendant did not confess to the crime at that time. Spradley v. State, 276 Ga. App. 842, 625 S.E.2d 106, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1382 (2005).

Defendant not in custody when statements made. — Although the defendant made two statements without having been given Miranda warnings, because the defendant voluntarily came to the police station for the first statement, and there was no indication that the defendant was under suspicion for the crime, that the defendant or the police believed that the defendant would be detained, or that the investigation had focused on the defendant, and, as to the second statement, the defendant's counsel did not suggest that the officer had probable cause to arrest the defendant, and the defendant did not testify that the defendant believed the defendant under restraint in leaving, there was no indication that the police had the intention of doing more than following up on the defendant's previous statements, and they freely released the defendant at the end of the questioning on the defendant's promise that the defendant would post a bond as a material witness, there was no error in failing to exclude the statements as the defendant was not in custody when they were made. Davis v. Kemp, 829 F.2d 1522, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 12938 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 929, 108 S. Ct. 1099, 99 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 996 (1988).

The uncontroverted evidence in the case clearly authorized the trial court to conclude that defendant was not in custody at the time the defendant's statement was made to the police, because the officer stated that the officer did not threaten or coerce the defendant in any way, promise the defendant anything, or give the defendant any reason to believe that the defendant was not free to go at any time, and that the defendant appeared to be coherent and understand what was going on around the defendant. Harrell v. State, 204 Ga. App. 738, 420 S.E.2d 631, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1007 (1992).

Because a reasonable person in the defendant's shoes would not have believed that the defendant's freedom was curtailed in a significant way when the defendant was first approached by the arresting officer, told about a shooting incident, and asked if the defendant had a gun, there was no error in the admission of the gun into evidence, given that the compulsive atmosphere requiring Miranda warnings was not present. Quinn v. State, 209 Ga. App. 480, 433 S.E.2d 592, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 927 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1661, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 1008 (Ga. Oct. 22, 1993).

Scope of initial investigation not exceeded. — An officer's inquiry did not exceed the scope of initial investigation and the defendant was properly notified of the defendant's constitutional rights where pursuant to receiving a search warrant, the officer went to the defendant's house and asked the defendant if the defendant had any cocaine in the house. When defendant admitted that the defendant did and produced the drug, the officer immediately advised the defendant of the defendant's rights, whereupon the defendant made more statements. Ford v. State, 205 Ga. App. 12, 421 S.E.2d 294, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1055 (1992).

Only in-custody statements by the accused give rise to the issues of voluntariness and the Miranda warnings. Carroll v. State, 203 Ga. App. 22, 416 S.E.2d 354, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 240 (1992).

Caseworker not law enforcement officer. — A Department of Family and Children Services caseworker was not responsible for advising the defendant of the defendant's Miranda rights because caseworker was not a law enforcement officer. Rucker v. State, 203 Ga. App. 358, 416 S.E.2d 871, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 417 (1992).

Interrogation by parent who is law enforcement officer. — The court would reject the contention that the questioning of a suspect by a parent who is a law enforcement officer is a per se custodial interrogation since such a holding would require the court to presume that law enforcement parents would place their parent-child relationship subordinate to their employer-employee relationship and that a law enforcement parent would automatically coerce a confession from his or her own child; such an issue must be resolved on a case-by-case basis, by viewing the totality of the circumstances, in order to determine if the law enforcement parent was acting as a parent or as an agent of the state when speaking with his or her arrested child. Cook v. State, 270 Ga. 820, 514 S.E.2d 657, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 309, cert. denied, 528 U.S. 974, 120 S. Ct. 419, 145 L. Ed. 2d 327, 1999 U.S. LEXIS 7225 (1999).

The trial court did not err by finding that a law enforcement officer acted as a parent and not as an agent of the state when the officer met with the officer's child, the defendant, who was a suspect in a murder investigation, where: (1) the parent was not part of the investigative team on the murders; (2) the defendant asked to see the parent at the same time the defendant requested an attorney; (3) the parent was not directed by any law enforcement agent connected with the defendant's case to speak to the defendant — the defendant made the request on the defendant's own initiative; (4) the parent's motive in speaking with the defendant was to urge the defendant to cooperate in the hope of getting a plea bargain; and (5) the interview involved hugging and crying by parent and child which is not typical of a police interrogation. Cook v. State, 270 Ga. 820, 514 S.E.2d 657, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 309 (1999).

Intimidation or coercion. — Statement of police officer during course of questioning, that "I want you to tell us the truth," did not constitute such coercion or intimidation as to render confession involuntary. Hester v. State, 164 Ga. App. 871, 298 S.E.2d 292, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2958 (1982).

Confession made under false representation of confidentiality. — The trial court erroneously admitted the defendant's confession, made after being advised of Miranda, as such was made in response to an unqualified false representation to the defendant that it would be kept confidential between the interviewing detective and the defendant. Spence v. State, 281 Ga. 697, 642 S.E.2d 856, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 241 (2007).

Detective's statement to defendant that the detective could not initiate discussion of crimes. — A detective's warning to a defendant who had called the detective on several occasions to ask for information and assistance that the detective could not initiate any discussion with the defendant about any crimes could not have been reasonably calculated to elicit incriminating admissions of criminal activity. Housel v. State, 257 Ga. 115, 355 S.E.2d 651, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 745 (1987), cert. denied, 487 U.S. 1240, 108 S. Ct. 2915, 101 L. Ed. 2d 946, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3189 (1988).

Resumption of recording after stopping tape during interview. — Although it would be better practice to keep the tape recorder running at all times during the interview with a prisoner, a gap in the tape does not prove lack of voluntariness of the prisoner's confession after the recorder was turned back on. Robinson v. State, 257 Ga. 194, 357 S.E.2d 74, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 798 (1987).

Defendant's mental condition not determinative of voluntariness of statements. — A defendant's mental condition, by itself and apart from its relation to official coercion, should never dispose of an inquiry into constitutional voluntariness of statements made to law enforcement officers. Wilson v. State, 257 Ga. 444, 359 S.E.2d 891, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 850 (1987).

Fact that defendant's ability to read and write was limited did not make the confession inadmissible. The question of whether or not the defendant was capable or incapable of making a knowing and intelligent waiver of rights is to be answered by the trial judge and will be accepted by an appellate court unless clearly erroneous. Newsome v. State, 180 Ga. App. 243, 348 S.E.2d 759, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2707 (1986).

Age of person being questioned. — Under Georgia statutes, those who have reached the age of 17 are no longer considered juveniles by Georgia's criminal justice system. Therefore, for purposes of Miranda, statements made by a person who is at least 17 years old are admissible if made voluntarily, without being induced by the hope of benefit or coerced by threats. Garlington v. State, 268 Ga. App. 264, 601 S.E.2d 793, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 887 (2004), cert. denied sub nom. Harrison v. State, No. S04C1874, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 864 (Ga. Sept. 27, 2004).

Giving defendant cigarettes and soft drinks. — Confession was not invalidated by fact that officers conducting interrogation gave defendant cigarettes and soft drinks. Coverson v. State, 162 Ga. App. 497, 292 S.E.2d 196, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2196 (1982).

Adequacy of suppression hearing. — Factual and credibility determinations as to the voluntariness of a confession are normally made at a suppression hearing and must be accepted by appellate courts unless such determinations are clearly erroneous. Hudson v. State, 171 Ga. App. 181, 319 S.E.2d 28, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 2962 (1984).

A federal habeas corpus petitioner is not precluded from claiming that the trial court failed to conduct an adequate hearing on the voluntariness of the petitioner's confession even though the petitioner had a full and fair opportunity to raise this claim in a state court proceeding. Jarrell v. Balkcom, 735 F.2d 1242, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 21326 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1103, 105 S. Ct. 2331, 85 L. Ed. 2d 848, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 1823 (1985).

Defendant-initiated discussions. — If a defendant initiates further discussions with the police and is not interrogated but volunteers a statement, the police may listen to that statement and use it against the defendant at trial, and because the record showed that the officer did not interrogate the defendant after the officer initiated discussions with the defendant but rather listened to the defendant's volunteered statement, the statement was admissible. Hopkins v. State, 263 Ga. 354, 434 S.E.2d 459, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 628 (1993).

Even though the defendant made a request for counsel, because the defendant initiated a conversation with police officers and intelligently waived the defendant's right to have counsel present, videotaping of the defendant's confession did not violate the defendant's fifth or sixth amendment rights. Mosher v. State, 268 Ga. 555, 491 S.E.2d 348, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 624 (1997).

Statement given to aid child molestation victim not coerced. — Statement of the defendant in a child molestation case was admissible despite the defendant's argument that the defendant was coaxed or cajoled into making the statement by being told that it would help the young victim and that it was therefore involuntary because it was made with the hope of benefiting the victim. Thomas v. State, 175 Ga. App. 873, 334 S.E.2d 903, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2897 (1985).

Finding of voluntariness must appear in record. — The trial judge need not make formal findings of fact or write an opinion, but it must clearly appear from the record that the judge made a primary finding of voluntariness before the confession was introduced into evidence before the jury. Hilliard v. State, 128 Ga. App. 157, 195 S.E.2d 772, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1423 (1973).

Finding of voluntariness must appear with unmistakable clarity. — Although the judge need not make formal findings of fact or write an opinion, the judge's conclusion that the confession is voluntary must appear from the record with unmistakable clarity. If there has been no ruling on the issue of voluntariness made with the required unmistakable clarity, remand with instruction to conduct a further hearing and make a determination of voluntariness may be appropriate. Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 633 (1981).

Once finding of voluntariness is made, voluntariness is a jury question. — Once the state has made a prima facie showing of voluntariness and the court has properly admitted a confession into evidence for the jury's consideration, the question of whether or not the confession was freely and voluntarily given, without hope of benefit or fear of injury, becomes one of fact for determination by the jury. Meyer v. State, 150 Ga. App. 613, 258 S.E.2d 217, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2228 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 952, 100 S. Ct. 1602, 63 L. Ed. 2d 788, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 1341 (1980).

Written confession unsigned and transcriber not present at trial is insufficient for exclusion. — The fact that a statement amounting to a confession by the defendant was unsigned and the fact that the stenographer who transcribed it was not present at the trial and did not testify as to its verity is not ground for excluding it from evidence. Freeman v. State, 230 Ga. 85, 195 S.E.2d 416, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 819 (1973).

Trial court's decision on voluntariness binding on appeal, unless clearly erroneous. — Once a trial judge has made a determination as to the voluntariness of a confession after a suppression hearing, such determination must be accepted by the appellate courts unless the judge's decision is clearly erroneous. Richardson v. State, 143 Ga. App. 846, 240 S.E.2d 217, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2533 (1977).

Factual and credibility determinations as to the voluntariness of a confession are normally made at a suppression hearing and must be accepted by appellate courts unless such determinations are clearly erroneous. Thomas v. State, 174 Ga. App.

A trial court's findings as to factual determinations and credibility relating to the admission of in-custody statements will be upheld on appeal unless clearly erroneous. Denton v. State, 186 Ga. App. 864, 368 S.E.2d 811, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 538 (1988).

Introduction of challenged confession without a determination of its voluntariness by the trial judge after an adequate hearing is unconstitutional. Clark v. Smith, 224 Ga. 766, 164 S.E.2d 790, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 943 (1968), rev'd, 403 U.S. 946, 91 S. Ct. 2279, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859, 1971 U.S. LEXIS 1475 (1971); Strickland v. State, 226 Ga. 750, 177 S.E.2d 238, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 670 (1970).

Inadmissible evidence of confession. — Because inadmissible evidence of a confession is offered and admitted, its admission constitutes reversible error, unless the jury is expressly instructed that the evidence is admitted for the purpose of impeachment only, whether or not a request to so charge be made, and whether or not any exceptions are made to the charge as given. Colbert v. State, 124 Ga. App. 283, 183 S.E.2d 476, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 897 (1971).

Inconsistent statement obtained in violation of Miranda admissible for impeachment. — A prior inconsistent statement of a criminal defendant is admissible for the limited purpose of impeaching trial testimony of the defendant even though the prior inconsistent statement would otherwise be inadmissible due to Miranda violations in defendant's trial. Hicks v. State, 256 Ga. 266, 347 S.E.2d 589, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 788 (1986).

Determination of voluntariness of statement used for impeachment unnecessary. — Since a prior statement is admissible for impeachment purposes even if in violation of Miranda, a Jackson v. Denno, 378 U.S. 368, 84 S. Ct. 1774, 12 L. Ed. 2d 908 hearing and finding of voluntariness is unnecessary. Tew v. State, 179 Ga. App. 369, 346 S.E.2d 833, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2634 (1986).

Case remanded where no determination of voluntariness. — Defendant's case was remanded for clarification as to the admissibility of any statements or confessions, where there was no actual ruling or finding in the record showing that the trial judge determined the voluntariness of defendant's confession. Hicks v. State, 255 Ga. 503, 340 S.E.2d 604, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 605 (1986).

Initial burden rests with defendant to present evidence challenging the legality of the confession. United States v. Morris, 491 F. Supp. 226, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13472 (S.D. Ga. 1980).

Burden of proof as to voluntariness of a confession is upon the state. Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 633 (1981).

Burden and standard of proof. — The standard the state is required to meet before the trial judge concerning the confession is to show that it was voluntary by a preponderance of the evidence considering the totality of the circumstances. Pierce v. State, 235 Ga. 237, 219 S.E.2d 158, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 842 (1975); Lee v. State, 154 Ga. App. 562, 269 S.E.2d 65, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2286 (1980); United States v. Morris, 491 F. Supp. 226, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13472 (S.D. Ga. 1980); Christian v. State, 190 Ga. App. 667, 379 S.E.2d 807, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 374 (1989).

Standard of proof for confession given after illegal seizure or consent to search. — In order for a confession given after an illegal seizure to be admissible in evidence, the government must prove two things: that the confession is voluntary for purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 5, and that the confession was not the product of the illegal seizure. The same requirements apply where the evidence has been obtained by means of a consent to search rather than a confession. United States v. Robinson, 625 F.2d 1211, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 13990 (5th Cir. 1980).

Conflict in evidence over Miranda issue. — Where the evidence bearing on the issue of whether or not the defendant was advised of the defendant's Miranda rights before making a custodial statement was in total conflict and it was apparent that the trial court simply believed the state's witnesses rather than appellant, this was not clearly erroneous. Hayes v. State, 203 Ga. App. 143, 416 S.E.2d 347, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 381 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0753, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 346 (Ga. Apr. 24, 1992).

Jury instruction regarding voluntariness not required absent request.

— Under established law of this state it is not necessary to give a charge on the subject of the voluntariness of a confession, unless there is a specific request for it. Welch v. State, 235 Ga. 243, 219 S.E.2d 151, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 846 (1975).

Test of validity of confession on appeal.

— Unless clearly erroneous, a trial court's findings as to factual determinations and credibility relating to the admissibility of a confession will be upheld on appeal. Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 633 (1981); Worthy v. State, 253 Ga. 661, 324 S.E.2d 431, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 513 (1985).

Admissibility of volunteered state- ments. — Codefendant's statement to the police was properly admitted into evidence as, although the codefendant invoked the right to counsel, the codefendant voluntarily confessed to the police after being asked five times whether the codefendant was sure that the codefendant wanted to talk to the police. Smith v. State, 269 Ga. App. 133, 603 S.E.2d 445, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 1007 (2004), cert. denied, No. S05C0089, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 1056 (Ga. Nov. 22, 2004).

Fruits of voluntary confession given after invoking right to counsel.

— Officer's statement to the defendant, given after the defendant invoked the right to counsel, in which the officer expressed the officer's knowledge of the request for a lawyer, urged the defendant not to say anything, and told the defendant that everyone should have the opportunity to bury their loved ones, as did the officer himself recently when the officer's father and brother died, was not calculated to procure an untrue statement, and because the defendant was not threatened with fear of injury nor promised hope of benefit, because there was no deception, nor did the police inject religion into the exchange, and because the officer's speech was not evidence of coercive police activity, which was a necessary predicate to the finding that the confession was involuntary, the police did not violate the defendant's fifth amendment right against coerced self-incrimination; therefore, while the defendant's statements themselves, in which the defendant confessed to killing the defendant's uncle and told the police where the defendant disposed of the body, were inadmissible based on the defendant's invocation of the right to counsel, the fruits of the statements were admissible. State v. Woods, 280 Ga. 758, 632 S.E.2d 654, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 480 (2006).

Involuntariness not shown. — Trial court properly refused to suppress a defendant's confession. The evidence enabled the trial court to find that the defendant's relative was present during most of the questioning, that the defendant was able to speak privately with the relative on occasion, that the defendant was not under the influence of drugs or alcohol, that the defendant was not threatened or offered any hope of benefits, and that the defendant was not handcuffed or otherwise restrained prior to confessing to participation in a shooting; furthermore, although the defendant claimed that the statement was not knowing and voluntary because of the defendant's limited intellect, the defendant was able to provide some involved explanations to police, a police interviewer saw no confusion about the defendant's rights, and the relative testified that the defendant never indicated that the defendant felt that the defendant had to talk to the police. Boseman v. State, 283 Ga. 355, 659 S.E.2d 364, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 298 (2008).

Defendant, aged 16 at the time of an interview in which defendant gave statements to police about a home invasion, failed to show that the statement was involuntary merely because it was given outside the presence of defendant's grandmother and uncle; defendant's relatives gave permission for defendant to be questioned, and the interview lasted only 35-45 minutes. Bowman v. State, 324 Ga. App. 734, 751 S.E.2d 532, 2013 Ga. App. LEXIS 930 (2013).

Defendant's statements during a second interview with police were voluntary and admissible as the investigator's statements did not concern a charge or sentence facing the defendant and did not constitute physical or mental torture. Turner v. State, 296 Ga. 394, 768 S.E.2d 458, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 1 (2015).

Voluntary confession found. — After the investigating officer testified that defendant was not under arrest when the defendant gave the statement, that the defendant was nonetheless advised of defendant's Miranda rights and appeared to understand those rights, and that the defendant was not threatened, coerced, or promised anything in exchange for the defendant's statement, the district court's decision that the statement was voluntary was not clearly erroneous. Escutia v. State, 277 Ga. 400, 589 S.E.2d 66, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 1005 (2003).

5. Voluntariness of Guilty Pleas

Standard for determining the validity of guilty pleas is whether the plea represents a voluntary and intelligent choice among the alternative courses of action open to the defendant. Caldwell v. Beard, 232 Ga. 701, 208 S.E.2d 564, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 1062 (1974).

Judge must be convinced that plea is voluntary. — Before accepting a guilty plea, a trial judge must be convinced that the defendant's decision is voluntary in the sense that it is made knowingly, intelligently, and not as a result of a coercion by the state or anyone else. Brown v. Jernigan, 622 F.2d 914, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15189 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 958, 101 S. Ct. 368, 66 L. Ed. 2d 224, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3794 (1980).

Plea that is intelligent and voluntary must be affirmatively shown. — It is error, plain on the face of the record, for a trial judge to accept a defendant's guilty plea without an affirmative showing that it is intelligent and voluntary. Purvis v. Connell, 227 Ga. 764, 182 S.E.2d 892, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 836 (1971), overruled on other grounds, Lejeune v. McLaughlin, 296 Ga. 291, 766 S.E.2d 803, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 938 (2014); Capps v. Ault, 229 Ga. 873, 195 S.E.2d 22, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 810 (1972).

An inmate did not make a guilty plea voluntarily, knowingly, and intelligently

Self-Incrimination (Cont'd)
5. Voluntariness of Guilty Pleas (Cont'd)

when the trial court did not advise the inmate of the federal privilege against compulsory self-incrimination, and trial counsel's testimony did not indicate the specific rights of which the inmate was advised. Arnold v. Howerton, 282 Ga. 66, 646 S.E.2d 75, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 396 (2007), overruled on other grounds, Lejeune v. McLaughlin, 296 Ga. 291, 766 S.E.2d 803, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 938 (2014), overruled in part, Green v. State, 318 Ga. 610, 898 S.E.2d 500, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 49 (2024).

Silence of record as to validity of plea. — If the record is silent on the question of whether or not the judge, who accepted the defendant's guilty plea, questioned the defendant to insure that the plea was knowingly and voluntarily entered, then there is no evidence in the record from which it can be determined whether the plea was valid and the sentence imposed is invalid and the detention is illegal. Capps v. Ault, 229 Ga. 873, 195 S.E.2d 22, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 810 (1972).

Determination of voluntariness where questioned in habeas corpus action. — Where the question of the voluntariness of a guilty plea is raised in a habeas corpus action, the court is authorized to and should either hold an evidentiary hearing to establish a record whereby it can be determined that a plea of guilty was freely and voluntarily entered or else rely on an adequate record established in a state habeas corpus hearing. Walker v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 213, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10733 (5th Cir. 1973).

Habeas court did not err in denying a petition for a writ of habeas corpus because the wording in the waiver of rights form adequately conveyed to the petitioner in a manner reasonably intelligible to the petitioner the core principles of the privilege against compulsory self-incrimination guaranteed by the fifth amendment, and it was apparent to any reasonable person that the information conveyed about the right against self-incrimination was pertinent to a knowing and intelligent waiver of that right at trial; a criminal defendant could not reasonably confuse his or her right to remain silent at trial, which is waived as the result of a knowing and intelligent decision to plead guilty to a charged offense, with his or her understanding of that right as it may have been conveyed to him or her in the separate context of custodial police interrogation pursuant to Miranda. Brown v. State, 290 Ga. 50, 718 S.E.2d 1, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 877 (2011).

Habeas court erred in granting the defendant's petition as the defendant's guilty plea was voluntarily and knowingly entered because the defendant's decision to plead guilty was not prompted by the trial court's decision to disallow the testimony of the defendant's expert witness and the defendant's imminent trial as that circumstance and the unavoidable pressure it produced did not render the plea involuntary; the defendant was fully informed of the nature of the charges and the consequences of the plea; and the defendant was deemed competent to stand trial and was advised by competent counsel with regard to the decision to plead guilty. Shepard v. Williams, 299 Ga. 437, 788 S.E.2d 428, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 463 (2016).

Waiver of other constitutional rights by pleading guilty. — Although by pleading guilty the defendant waives the right to a jury trial, the privilege against self-incrimination, and the right of confrontation, neither the Constitution nor any rule of criminal procedure requires express articulation and specific waiver of these rights before a guilty plea may be accepted. Brown v. Jernigan, 622 F.2d 914, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15189 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 958, 101 S. Ct. 368, 66 L. Ed. 2d 224, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3794 (1980).

Duty of counsel regarding guilty plea. — When a person indicates a desire to enter a guilty plea, the duty of counsel is limited to ascertaining whether the decision so to plead is voluntarily and knowingly made. Brown v. Jernigan, 622 F.2d 914, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15189 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 958, 101 S. Ct. 368, 66 L. Ed. 2d 224, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3794 (1980).

Extrinsic evidence did not support finding right against selfincrimination was knowingly, intelligently, or voluntarily waived. — Mere speculation that an appellant inmate had been informed of all three of the Boykin v. Alabama, 395 U.S. 238, 23 L. Ed. 2d 274 (1969) rights the inmate would be waiving by entering a guilty plea was insufficient to support a finding that extrinsic evidence showed that the inmate knowingly, intelligently, and voluntarily waived the inmate's right to self-incrimination, particularly in light of the fact that defense counsel testified during a hearing on the inmate's habeas petition that counsel did not recall what rights counsel might have discussed with the inmate but that it was not counsel's practice to get into the specifics of any particular right being waived. Denson v. Frazier, 284 Ga. 858, 672 S.E.2d 625, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 29 (2009), overruled in part, Green v. State, 318 Ga. 610, 898 S.E.2d 500, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 49 (2024).

Ordinarily, the mere erroneous prediction of sentence by counsel does not make a guilty plea involuntary, especially when counsel is retained by the defendant rather than appointed by the court. Lambert v. United States, 392 F. Supp. 113, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12810 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Lawyer's advice need not withstand retrospective examination in post-conviction hearing. — The requirement that a guilty plea be intelligently made is not a requirement that all advice offered by the defendant's lawyer withstand retrospective examination in a post-conviction hearing. Lambert v. United States, 392 F. Supp. 113, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12810 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Requirements for enhanced sentencing. — Because the defendant's sentence for aggravated assault was enhanced by the use of prior convictions based on guilty pleas during which the defendant was not asked required questions to determine the voluntariness of the pleas, the defendant's sentence had to be vacated and the matter remanded for resentencing, at which time the state would have the burden of proving the voluntariness of the guilty pleas before it could use the prior convictions to enhance the defendant's sentence. Carswell v. State, 263 Ga. App. 833, 589 S.E.2d 605, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1346 (2003).

Consideration of plea in sentencing. — For those who plead guilty, that fact itself is a consideration in sentencing, a consideration that is not present when one is found guilty by a jury. Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2349 (1980).

Avoidance of death penalty. — A plea of guilty entered to avoid a possible death penalty is not for that reason "compelled" within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Miller v. State, 237 Ga. 823, 229 S.E.2d 648, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1406 (1976).

When guilty plea is not intelligently and voluntarily entered. — If a guilty plea is not intelligently and voluntarily entered, sentence imposed is invalid and detention is illegal. Capps v. Ault, 229 Ga. 873, 195 S.E.2d 22, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 810 (1972).

Guilty plea properly entered. — Although defendant contended that the trial court erred by denying defendant's motion for an out-of-time appeal, and argued that the language used by the prosecutor in informing defendant of defendant's rights at the guilty plea hearing failed to convey to defendant that the defendant would be waiving defendant's privilege against compulsory self-incrimination, that contention was belied by the transcript, which revealed that, at the guilty plea hearing, the assistant district attorney adequately conveyed to appellant the core principles of the privilege against compulsory self-incrimination guaranteed by the fifth amendment. To the extent defendant distinguished the "right to remain silent" as separate from the privilege against self-incrimination, that right was not one of the enumerated rights that had to be explained to a defendant during a Boykin colloquy; moreover, nothing in Uniform Superior Court Rule 33.8, which set forth the procedure for trial courts to follow before accepting a plea of guilty, required a defendant to be informed of that right, and thus, defendant's guilty plea was not rendered invalid for that reason. Adams v. State, 285 Ga. 744, 683 S.E.2d 586, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 480 (2009).

5. Voluntariness of Guilty Pleas (Cont'd)

Sentencing guidelines. — United States Sentencing Guideline § 3 E1.1(b)(2), which instructs the court to reduce a defendant's sentence for "timely notifying authorities of his intention to plead guilty," is not unconstitutional on its face. United States v. McConaghy, 23 F.3d 351, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 15009 (11th Cir. 1994).

6. Silence of the Accused

Prearrest silence. — Prosecutor's comment on the defendant's failure to respond to a police officer's initial questioning prior to arrest was not improper where the defendant did not take the stand in the defendant's own defense and was not, therefore, improperly confronted with the defendant's prearrest silence. Edwards v. State, 219 Ga. App. 239, 464 S.E.2d 851, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 1007 (1995), cert. dismissed, No. S96C0574, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 398 (Ga. Mar. 8, 1996).

Although the evidence was sufficient to show that defendant stalked the victim and obstructed an officer by fleeing in violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-5-91(a) and 16-10-24(a), defendant had a constitutional right to stand silent during a police officer's questioning; as a result, the evidence was insufficient to support a conviction for obstruction of an officer based on defendant's silence. Johnson v. State, 264 Ga. App. 889, 592 S.E.2d 507, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1593 (2003).

Defendant's claim that counsel was ineffective for failing to lodge a general objection under the fifth amendment to 18 questions that led to testimony regarding the defendant's failure to come forward to law enforcement concerning the victim's murder was without merit because the fifth amendment did not per se exclude testimony concerning a defendant's prearrest failure to come forward. Jackson v. State, 306 Ga. 266, 830 S.E.2d 99, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 443 (2019).

Rules requiring defendant to answer court questions regarding satisfaction with counsel not violative of right to silence. — Georgia's Unified Appeal Procedure, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-36, setting forth rules promulgated by the Georgia Supreme Court that prescribed procedures to be utilized in death penalty cases by the trial court, defense counsel, and the prosecutor prior to, during, and after trial, did not violate a state death row inmate's right to silence by requiring the inmate to answer the court's questions about the inmate's satisfaction with defense counsel and the manner in which the inmate's defense was being conducted. Ford v. Schofield, 488 F. Supp. 2d 1258, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 34958 (N.D. Ga. 2007), aff'd, 546 F.3d 1326, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 22318 (11th Cir. 2008).

Evidence of defendant's silence must be excluded, and may not be used against the defendant. — Evidence as to the defendant's silence at the time of the defendant's arrest should be excluded when objected to, since the defendant is then entitled to remain silent, and the prosecution may not use against the defendant the fact that the defendant stood mute or claimed the privilege. Lowe v. State, 136 Ga. App. 631, 222 S.E.2d 50, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1446 (1975); Smith v. State, 140 Ga. App. 385, 231 S.E.2d 83; Kitchens v. State, 150 Ga. App. 707, 258 S.E.2d 544, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2348 (1979).

Testimony in violation of defendant's rights. — Testimony to the effect that a defendant made no statements to the police when arrested, violates the defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5. DeBerry v. State, 241 Ga. 204, 243 S.E.2d 864, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 923 (1978); Gibbs v. State, 217 Ga. App. 614, 458 S.E.2d 407, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 535 (1995).

Harmless error. — Because an agent's improper reference during testimony to the defendant's invocation of the right to remain silent was made gratuitously and not in response to a specific question, because the state did not highlight the statement for the jury or suggest any inference that could be drawn from the defendant's invocation, and, because after several more questions, the trial court removed the jury from the courtroom, but no further reference was made to the improper statement, it was unlikely that the statement had an impact on the verdict; the evidence was strong, when juxtaposed with the likely impact of the statement, and, thus, the improper statement was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Kania v. State, 280 Ga. App. 356, 634 S.E.2d 146, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 853 (2006).

Use of the accused's silence in the presence of law officers is prohibited for impeachment purposes. Clark v. State, 237 Ga. 901, 230 S.E.2d 277, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1439 (1976).

Use of accused's silence violates due process. — The use for impeachment purposes of the accused's silence at the time of arrest, and after the defendant had received Miranda warnings which advised the defendant of the defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 5 to remain silent, violates the due process clause of the federal Constitution. Clark v. State, 237 Ga. 901, 230 S.E.2d 277, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1439 (1976).

Rule of Doyle v. Ohio, 426 U.S. 610 (1976) will not be applied retroactively to habeas corpus or other post appeal attack for a conviction prior to June 17, 1976, that date on which Doyle v. Ohio, was decided, which held that use of the accused's silence at time of arrest, after receiving Miranda warnings, violated the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Clark v. State, 237 Ga. 901, 230 S.E.2d 277, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1439 (1976).

Evidence of defendant's silence requiring reversal. — To reverse a conviction, evidence which is introduced of the defendant's election to remain silent must point directly at the substance of the defendant's defense or otherwise substantially prejudice the defendant in the eyes of the jury. Duck v. State, 250 Ga. 592, 300 S.E.2d 121, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1010 (1983).

Officer testifying that defendant invoked right to remain silent. — Where a detective testified that after reading the defendant's rights the officer asked the defendant whether the defendant wanted to talk and the defendant checked the "No" box on the waiver form, the trial court did not err in allowing the detective to testify that the defendant invoked the constitutional right to remain silent given that the defendant was found inside the burglarized residence with items stolen from the residence in the defendant's pockets, and the defendant subsequently confessed to committing the burglary. Blige v. State, 203 Ga. App. 151, 416 S.E.2d 160, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 235 (1992).

Comment by the prosecutor cuts down on the privilege against self-incrimination by making its assertion costly. Gosha v. State, 239 Ga. 37, 235 S.E.2d 527, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 803 (1977).

Testimony that was an improper comment on a defendant's silence or failure to come forward was an impropriety but did not automatically require reversal. Bruce v. State, 268 Ga. App. 677, 603 S.E.2d 33, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 930 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C2046, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 976 (Ga. Oct. 25, 2004).

Prosecutorial comment on defendant's silence is error. — It is error for a prosecutor to comment to a jury about a criminal defendant's failure to take the witness stand in the defendant's own behalf, or the defendant's failure to answer a particular question which would violate the defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against self-incrimination. Sharp v. United States, 410 F.2d 969, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 12517 (5th Cir. 1969).

In a case in which ineffective assistance of counsel was claimed due to counsel's failure to object to a comment in the prosecutor's closing argument that the defendant could have given the defendant's version of the facts of a domestic dispute to the police, the appellate court improperly relied on exclusions to comments on a defendant's silence in Morrison v. State, 554 S.E.2d 190 (2001); the court overruled Morrison based on the bright-line rule in Mallory v. State, 409 S.E.2d 839 (1991), that, with reference to former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-36 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-8-801), comment upon a defendant's silence or failure to come forward was far more prejudicial than probative. Reynolds v. State, 285 Ga. 70, 673 S.E.2d 854, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 60 (2009).

Prosecution is not permitted to comment on defendant's failure to testify. Gosha v. State, 239 Ga. 37, 235 S.E.2d 527, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 803 (1977); United States v. Chandler, 586 F.2d 593,

1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 6818 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 927, 99 S. Ct. 1262, 59 L. Ed. 2d 483, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 948 (1979).

Prosecutor's comment that not one witness disputed state's witnesses. — Prosecutor's assertion that "not one witness came in here to dispute anything that the state's witnesses said" was commenting on defendant's failure to present evidence, not defendant's right to remain silent. Brown v. State, 278 Ga. 544, 604 S.E.2d 503, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 947 (2004).

Comment by court. — Trial court's reference to the lack of cross-examination of the second defendant's statement did not deprive the second defendant of the right not to testify because the statements in the trial court's order were made in passing and in the context of the court's assessment of the credibility of the second defendant's own self-serving statement to law enforcement and how that statement should be judged against the other evidence presented at trial; and the statements were part of the trial court's explanation of why the court gave more weight to the accomplice witness's testimony, which had been subjected to cross-examination by defense counsel and which was corroborated by other evidence presented at trial. Pender v. State, 311 Ga. 98, 856 S.E.2d 302, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 87 (2021).

Remarks that do not imply to the jury that defendant's failure to testify should be construed against the defendant do not constitute cause for a new trial. See Lackey v. State, 135 Ga. App. 632, 218 S.E.2d 648, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1764 (1975).

Comment on the defendant's refusal to respond to cross-examination. — If the defendant testifies in the defendant's own behalf as to sentence, but refuses to respond to the state's cross-examination, asserting the defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 5, the state's comment on this is not an instance in which the state commented on a failure of a defendant to testify in the defendant's own behalf. Brown v. State, 247 Ga. 298, 275 S.E.2d 52, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 683

(1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 882, 102 S. Ct. 366, 70 L. Ed. 2d 192 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. Zant, 249 Ga. 373, 290 S.E.2d 442, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1137 (1982).

Comment did not warrant habeas corpus where evidence strong. — Prosecutor's comment on the defendant's failure to testify violated the defendant's fifth amendment right but did not warrant habeas corpus relief, because it could be said beyond a reasonable doubt, that absent the unconstitutional comment, given the strong evidence of the state, the jury would have found defendant guilty. Buttrum v. Black, 721 F. Supp. 1268, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11272 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 908 F.2d 695, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 12655 (11th Cir. 1990).

Testimony that defendant refused to give, or sign, written statement not improper. — A detective's testifying that the defendant refused to give a written statement and to sign the detective's written memorandum of the defendant's oral statement does not constitute an improper comment on the defendant's right to remain silent. Bethea v. State, 251 Ga. 328, 304 S.E.2d 713, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 773 (1983).

Reference to the defendant's pre-trial statements. — Prosecutor's argument in response to defendant's argument about the defendant's pretrial statements did not constitute an improper comment about defendant's failure to testify, and did not infringe on the defendant's fifth amendment right against self-incrimination. Christenson v. State, 261 Ga. 80, 402 S.E.2d 41, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 139, cert. denied, 502 U.S. 855, 112 S. Ct. 166, 116 L. Ed. 2d 130, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 4511 (1991).

Prosecutor's reference to defendant's right to have psychiatrist not testify was not a violation of defendant's right against self-incrimination. Willett v. State, 223 Ga. App. 866, 479 S.E.2d 132, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 1304 (1996), cert. denied, No. S97C0536, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 394 (Ga. Apr. 11, 1997).

Permissible references to failure to testify. — Prosecuting attorney's statements during closing argument that the defense presented no evidence to rebut the proof adduced by the state did not constitute reversible error under the self-incrimination clause because the state did not comment that the defendant could have denied, explained, or otherwise disputed the state's case against the defendant, but rather merely commented on the failure to present any evidence in defense. Smith v. State, 170 Ga. App. 673, 317 S.E.2d 626, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 1980 (1984).

Prosecutor's statement during closing argument that "We don't know which the defendant had which gun. The only person who can tell us that is [the defendant]" was permissible because, although an indirect reference to defendant's silence, it was not manifestly intended to be, nor would a jury construe it as such, a comment on silence, but rather was an objective evaluation of the state of the evidence when taken in context. Solomon v. Kemp, 735 F.2d 395, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 21632 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1181, 105 S. Ct. 940, 83 L. Ed. 2d 952, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 2986 (1985).

To reverse for improper comment by the prosecutor, a court must find one of two things: that the prosecutor's manifest intention was to comment upon the accused's failure to testify or that the remark was of such character that the jury would naturally and necessarily take it to be a comment on the failure of the accused to testify. However, if there is another equally plausible explanation for the prosecutor's statement, a court cannot conclude that it was intended to comment on defendant's failure to testify or that the jury would naturally take it to be such a comment. Day v. State, 203 Ga. App. 186, 416 S.E.2d 548, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 465 (1992).

Although the defendant did not testify at trial and contended that under the circumstances a portion of the state's closing argument could be viewed as an improper comment on the defendant's failure to do so, the jury could reasonably have interpreted the state's attorney's comment as a reference to the omission of certain evidence rather than as a reference to the defendant's failure to testify. Day v. State, 203 Ga. App. 186, 416 S.E.2d 548, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 465 (1992).

State did not engage in prosecutorial misconduct when it commented on the defendant's lack of remorse as the state's comments were aimed at the defendant's lack of emotion, not the defendant's right to remain silent; the state also did not violate the golden rule by inviting the jurors to "speak for the victim by letting her killer know that you're not going to let him get away with it" as the state did not ask the jurors to put themselves in the victim's place at the time the crime was committed. Watson v. State, 278 Ga. 763, 604 S.E.2d 804, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 999 (2004), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Evidence of failure to answer insurance company inquiry. — Because, in a drug prosecution, the prosecution presented, in its case in chief, evidence that the defendant had failed to respond to a request by the insurance company for a statement as to the defendant's involvement in the use and damage of an aircraft involved in the alleged drug smuggling, its introduction did not violate the self-incrimination and due process clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 5 even though the defendant did not intend to testify on the defendant's own behalf and objected that the evidence improperly enabled the prosecution to comment on the defendant's silence and allowed the jury to infer guilt therefrom. United States v. Nabors, 707 F.2d 1294, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 26494 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1021, 104 S. Ct. 1271, 79 L. Ed. 2d 677, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 1037 (1984).

Evidence that defendant requested attorney. — Defendant's fifth amendment rights were not violated by the admission of a police officer's testimony that did not focus on the defendant's silence or suggest that the defendant had asserted the right to remain silent, but simply related, in the course of a lengthy narrative, that the defendant requested an attorney. Duck v. State, 250 Ga. 592, 300 S.E.2d 121, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1010 (1983).

Defense counsel may comment on codefendants' silence only to avoid prejudice to client. — The right to comment on a codefendants' silence exists only if defense counsel has a clear duty to make the argument in order to avoid prejudicing defense counsel's client; the duty does not arise unless the defenses set forth by the codefendants are truly antagonistic, and then the appropriate remedy is severance. United States v. Johnson, 713 F.2d 633, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 24460 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1081, 104 S. Ct. 1447, 79 L. Ed. 2d 766, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 1356 (1984).

A defendant's attorney has a clear duty to comment on a codefendant's silence only if those comments are necessary to avoid real prejudice to the defendant. Real prejudice occurs only if the defenses offered by the defendant and the codefendant are antagonistic and mutually exclusive. If the defendants' defenses are not sufficiently antagonistic to require severance, a defendant's attorney does not need to comment on the codefendant's silence to avoid real prejudice to the defendant and the district court does not abuse its discretion in denying the defendant's motion for severance. United States v. Graziano, 710 F.2d 691, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25570 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 937, 104 S. Ct. 1910, 80 L. Ed. 2d 459, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 1813 (1984).

Fact-finder's consideration of the accused's demeanor in reaction to the testimony of others, even when the accused does not take the stand, does not violate the fifth amendment to the United States Constitution. In re M.E.H., 180 Ga. App. 591, 349 S.E.2d 814, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2753 (1986).

Comments based on courtroom observation of a defendant's demeanor do not infringe on the defendant's fifth amendment rights. Christenson v. State, 261 Ga. 80, 402 S.E.2d 41, 1991 Ga.

LEXIS 139, cert. denied, 502 U.S. 855, 112 S. Ct. 166, 116 L. Ed. 2d 130, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 4511 (1991).

Closing argument by defendant who did not testify on own behalf. — Because the defendant made a closing argument in the defendant's own behalf, during which the defendant made certain unsworn statements, at which point the judge interrupted to instruct the jury that the defendant, having not testified during the trial, cannot testify now, such remarks did not infringe the defendant's right to remain silent. Green v. Zant, 738 F.2d 1529, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 20071 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1098, 105 S. Ct. 607, 83 L. Ed. 2d 716, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 471 (1984).

No rule requires grant of new trial. — There is no ironclad rule that any reference, even unwitting or harmless, to an accused's silence at time of arrest requires the grant of a new trial. Smith v. State, 140 Ga. App. 385, 231 S.E.2d 83.

Instruction on inference of guilt from possession of stolen property. — An instruction stating that guilt of the defendant can be inferred from possession of recently stolen property unaccounted for by the defendant cannot properly be construed as a comment on the defendant's failure to testify. Horton v. State, 228 Ga. 690, 187 S.E.2d 677, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 886 (1972).

Failure to recharge jury on inference of guilt from silence. — Where during deliberations a juror sent a note asking for an answer from defendant about why the defendant was on the burglary victim's property on the morning of the burglary, the failure to recharge the jury that the defendant was not required to testify and that the jury should not make any adverse inferences against defendant for not testifying did not violate defendant's right against self-incrimination where neither the jury nor defendant requested such a recharge. Lovelace v. State, 262 Ga. App. 690, 586 S.E.2d 386, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 991 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1862, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 47 (Ga. Jan. 12, 2004).

Prosecutor's statement that only two people knew what went on in the room where an assault occurred, the victim and defendant, did not violate defendant's rights against self-incrimination. Neal v. State, 198 Ga. App. 518, 402 S.E.2d 114, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 140 (1991).

Refusal to testify is insufficient to support summary judgment. — Adverse inference may be drawn against a party in a civil action when the party refuses to testify in response to probative evidence offered against them. This adverse inference, however, is insufficient by itself to allow summary judgment to be entered against a party. However the additional testimony and affidavits of the court may authorize the granting of summary judgment as a matter of law. SEC v. Scherm, 854 F. Supp. 900, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20035 (N.D. Ga. 1993).

Determining meaning of prosecutor's comment. — To determine whether a prosecutor intended to comment on a defendant's failure to testify, courts must examine the comment in context, and merely describing the circumstantial nature of the case did not violate the defendant's fifth amendment right to remain silent. Baxter v. Thomas, 45 F.3d 1501, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 2400 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 946, 116 S. Ct. 385, 133 L. Ed. 2d 307, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 7258 (1995).

No improper comment on right to remain silent by informing jury of defendant's request to terminate interview. — State did not improperly comment on the defendant's pre-arrest right to remain silent because informing the jury of the defendant's termination of a custodial interview and invocation of the right to counsel did not amount to an improper comment on the right to remain silent warranting the reversal of the defendant's conviction. McClarín v. State, 289 Ga. 180, 710 S.E.2d 120, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 288 (2011), cert. denied, 565 U.S. 1117, 132 S. Ct. 1004, 181 L. Ed. 2d 745, 2012 U.S. LEXIS 200 (2012).

7. Testimony and Cross-Examination

Invoking privilege by witness. — Where a witness testifies under oath that the witness' answer to any question asked of the witness would incriminate the witness and comes within the constitutional immunities guaranteed to the witness, the court can demand no further testimony of the fact. Interstate Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Wilmont, 123 Ga. App. 337, 180 S.E.2d 913, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 1216 (1971).

Where a defense witness states the witness' name and thereafter claims the fifth amendment, the trial court does not commit error in denying the defendant's motion to require the state to disclose the witness's criminal record to impeach the witness. Howard v. State, 251 Ga. 586, 308 S.E.2d 167, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 923 (1983).

Testimony of the defendant's half-sibling that the half-sibling, rather than the defendant, executed a robbery was properly rejected upon half-sibling's subsequent invocation of the half-sibling's fifth amendment rights. Kelly v. State, 209 Ga. App. 789, 434 S.E.2d 743, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 992 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1815, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 1128 (Ga. Dec. 3, 1993).

In a prosecution for stalking, it was not error for the trial court to refuse to compel the complaining witness to answer a question on cross-examination when the witness invoked the privilege against self-incrimination. Robinson v. State, 216 Ga. App. 816, 456 S.E.2d 68, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 286 (1995), cert. denied, No. S95C1069, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 619 (Ga. May 19, 1995).

Trial court did not engage in the required analysis for a witness asserting a fifth amendment privilege, but merely declared that answering the questions concerning knowledge of the court's order regarding removing a child from a parent's home would not incriminate the witness; at a minimum, such knowledge would establish a link in the chain of evidence needed to prove the witness was in contempt of that order and the trial court's finding of contempt based on the witness's refusal to answer the question was improper. In re Tidwell, 279 Ga. App. 734, 632 S.E.2d 690, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 685 (2006).

Trial court did not err under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4 in denying a defendant's motion to sever the defendant's trial for cruelty to a child and other offenses from that of a codefendant because the defendant did not establish that, if severance were granted, the defendant would have been able to call the codefendant to testify about a letter without the codefendant invoking rights under the fifth amendment to the United States Constitution; even if such questioning could have been conducted, the defendant did not show harm caused by its absence because it was uncontroverted that the codefendant wrote the letter at issue and there was no showing that the codefendant's testimony would have exculpated the defendant. White v. State, 281 Ga. 276, 637 S.E.2d 645, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 961 (2006).

Hearing to determine if testimony would incriminate witness. — In a criminal prosecution, where the state's attorney ceased the questioning of a witness immediately when it became clear that the witness was invoking the witness' fifth amendment right, it was not necessary for the court to hold a hearing as to whether testimony the state sought to elicit would incriminate the witness. Bolar v. State, 216 Ga. App. 195, 453 S.E.2d 790, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 71 (1995).

Privilege invoked remains invoked throughout. — The fifth amendment privilege cannot be invoked to oppose discovery and then tossed aside to support a party's assertions. Therefore, the defendant may not use any evidence that the defendant has withheld by the defendant's invocation of the defendant's testimonial privilege but the defendant is free, of course, to use any other outside discovered evidence. SEC v. Zimmerman, 854 F. Supp. 896, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9792 (N.D. Ga.), dismissed sub nom. SEC v. Scherm, 854 F. Supp. 900, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20035 (N.D. Ga. 1993).

Criminal defendant must consent to cross-examination. — No cross-examination of a criminal defendant may take place unless the defendant first consents thereto. Wright v. State, 113 Ga. App. 436, 148 S.E.2d 333, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1087 (1966).

Upon taking stand, defendant waives privilege. — Once a defendant voluntarily takes the witness stand in the defendant's own defense, the defendant waives the defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 5 and becomes obligated, as any other witness, to answer all relevant questions. United States v. Brannon, 546 F.2d 1242, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10057 (5th Cir. 1977).

Having elected to testify, a defendant becomes obligated on cross-examination to answer all proper and relevant questions. Dickey v. State, 240 Ga. 634, 242 S.E.2d 55, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 743 (1978), overruled in part, Duckworth v. State, 268 Ga. 566, 492 S.E.2d 201, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 713 (1997).

A defendant who takes the stand waives the privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against self-incrimination at least to the extent of cross-examination relevant to the issues raised by the defendant's testimony. United States v. Dooley, 587 F.2d 201, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 17874 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 949, 99 S. Ct. 1430, 59 L. Ed. 2d 639, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 1132 (1979).

The defendant in a criminal case who elects to take the stand in the defendant's own defense is subject to cross-examination and impeachment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-82. Norwood v. State, 202 Ga. App. 782, 415 S.E.2d 521, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 204 (1992).

Because, during direct examination, the defendant voluntarily testified about the defendant's statements to the police, the defendant waived the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination, and the state could properly question the defendant about the statements on cross-examination. Fairbanks v. State, 225 Ga. App. 666, 484 S.E.2d 693, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 377 (1997), cert. denied, No. S97C1126, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 767 (Ga. Sept. 5, 1997).

Waiver is complete, not partial. — A defendant in a criminal case who voluntarily testifies in the defendant's own behalf, waives completely the defendant's privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 5 and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI). Furthermore, when a defendant voluntarily takes the stand in the defendant's own behalf and testifies as to the defendant's guilt or innocence as to a particular offense, the defendant's waiver is not partial. Having once cast aside the cloak of immunity, the defendant may not resume it at will, whenever cross-examination may be inconvenient or embarrassing. Leonard v. State, 146 Ga. App. 439, 246 S.E.2d 450, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 2395 (1978).

An accused has the choice, after weighing the advantage of the privilege against self-incrimination against the advantage of putting forward the defendant's version of the facts and the defendant's reliability as a witness, not to testify at all. The defendant cannot reasonably claim that U.S. Const., amend. 5 gives the defendant not only this choice but also, if the defendant elects to testify, an immunity from cross-examination on the matters the defendant has put in dispute. Dickey v. State, 240 Ga. 634, 242 S.E.2d 55, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 743 (1978), overruled in part, Duckworth v. State, 268 Ga. 566, 492 S.E.2d 201, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 713 (1997).

Waiver of privilege where cross-examination precedes testimony. — If a defendant is fully apprised of the rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 by the trial judge and by the defendant's attorney prior to the defendant's taking the stand for cross-examination, even where the defendant is cross-examined before the defendant testifies, any objection to the procedure must be considered as waived at the trial. Everett v. State, 238 Ga. 80, 230 S.E.2d 882, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1107 (1976).

Information to be volunteered by prosecution. — Prosecution would have had to volunteer the existence of testimony by codefendant that defendant was innocent of the arson if codefendant's counsel refused to impart information to defendant's counsel because codefendant claimed the protection of the fifth amendment and such statement on codefendant's willingness to testify were not otherwise discoverable by defendant's counsel. United States v. Yizar, 956 F.2d 230, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 4507 (11th Cir. 1992).

Court's discretion to exclude wit- ness. — If it appears that a witness (other than the defendant) intends to claim the privilege as to essentially all questions, the court may, in its discretion, refuse to allow the witness to take the stand. King v. State, 202 Ga. App. 817, 415 S.E.2d 684, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 187 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0658, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 314 (Ga. Apr. 9, 1992).

Defendant's testimony may be impeached by earlier statement. — When a defendant gives one version of the defendant's location for the time of the offense to the police and then gives the jury a different version, the earlier statement of the defendant is admissible for purposes of impeachment of the defendant's sworn testimony at trial. Wilson v. State, 145 Ga. App. 315, 244 S.E.2d 355, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 3264 (1978).

When cross-examination of a testifying criminal defendant may be limited. — A criminal defendant who takes the stand to testify in the defendant's own behalf can be cross-examined and impeached as any other witness, unless under the particular circumstances of the case specific questions should be excluded because their probative value on the issue of the defendant's credibility is so negligible as to be far outweighed by their possible impermissible impact on the jury. Sharp v. United States, 410 F.2d 969, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 12517 (5th Cir. 1969).

Cross-examination may be limited to exclude irrelevant testimony. — Cross-examination of a witness is not unreasonably limited by the witness' refusal under U.S. Const., amend. 5 to tell where the witness obtained the goods which the witness sold to the defendant, since the source of the goods is irrelevant to a charge of passing counterfeit currency, for which the defendant was being tried. United States v. Ginn, 455 F.2d 980, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 11262 (5th Cir. 1972).

Neither testifying defendant, nor the codefendant, may invoke privilege as to cross-examination of defendant. — If the defendant does not invoke the right against self-incrimination while testifying, the defendant has no right to invoke this privilege on cross-examination in same area, nor does the defendant's codefendant have standing to invoke this privilege, however, incriminating the defendant's codefendant's testimony may be. Sullivan v. State, 144 Ga. App. 256, 241 S.E.2d 42, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2662 (1977).

Witness's testimony admissible, even if privileged as to witness, where little danger of prejudice. — If the privilege against self-incrimination has been invoked by a witness as to purely collateral matters bearing on witness credibility, there is little danger of prejudice to the defendant and, therefore, the witness' testimony may be used against the defendant. Emmett v. State, 232 Ga. 110, 205 S.E.2d 231, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 882 (1974); Buford v. State, 162 Ga. App. 498, 291 S.E.2d 256, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2197 (1982).

Striking of testimony where cross-examination hampered by invoking of privilege. — If a witness by invoking the privilege of self-incrimination precludes inquiry into the details of the witness' direct testimony, there may be a substantial danger of prejudice because the defense is deprived of the right to test the truth of the witness' direct testimony and, therefore, that witness' testimony should be stricken in whole or in part. Emmett v. State, 232 Ga. 110, 205 S.E.2d 231, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 882 (1974).

Defendant improperly required to testify to present evidence of violence by victim. — Because the state's evidence established a prima facie case of justification through the defendant's statement, in which the defendant claimed to have shot the victim out of self-defense, it was error to refuse to admit evidence of violence by the victim toward a third party unless the defendant testified. The error, which implicated the fifth amendment, was not harmless because when the defendant took the stand, the state was able on cross-examination to undermine the defense by showing that the defendant had been able to disarm the victim in the past by using the defendant's military training. Williams v. State, 298 Ga. App. 151, 679 S.E.2d 377, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 607 (2009).

Defendant's remedy where witness invokes privilege on cross-examination. — If a witness validly claims the privilege against self-incrimination, the defendant's only relief is a motion to strike that portion of the direct testimony with regard to which the confrontation right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 is lost. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d 819, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20902 (5th Cir. 1981).

When prosecutorial comment on failure to testify allowed. — Where the defendant testifies in the defendant's own behalf, there is no violation of U.S. Const., amend. 5 when the district attorney comments upon the defendant's failure, when testifying, to explain or deny the testimony of particular witnesses. Gosha v. State, 239 Ga. 37, 235 S.E.2d 527, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 803 (1977).

O.C.G.A. § 17-7-28 and former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-5-506), regarding comment on the defendant's failure to testify, are applicable only where the defendant fails to testify. Gosha v. State, 239 Ga. 37, 235 S.E.2d 527, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 803 (1977).

Civil defendant not entitled to question-by-question advice as to invoking this privilege. — In deciding whether to invoke the protection of U.S. Const., amend. 5, a defendant in a civil action is not entitled to the advice of the defendant's attorney on a question-by-question basis while testifying, once having been advised of the scope of the privilege and the manner of its invocation. Page v. Page, 235 Ga. 131, 218 S.E.2d 859, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 804 (1975).

No need to advise defendant of rights. — Because the defendant did not testify and was not cross-examined, there was no harm in the trial court's failure to advise the defendant of the defendant's right not to be compelled to testify under oath. Coonce v. State, 171 Ga. App. 20, 318 S.E.2d 763, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 2085 (1984).

Expert testimony on atomic absorption test for gunpowder. — It was not an abuse of the defendant's constitutional right against self-incrimination for the trial court to permit an expert witness to testify that the atomic absorption test for gunpowder that was performed on defendant's hand was verifiably certain and for the trial court to admit the test results into evidence. Jones v. State, 277 Ga. 36, 586 S.E.2d 224, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 722 (2003).

Compelled pretrial psychiatric and psychological examinations do not violate the right against self-incrimination where the defendant moves to obtain a private examination and the state examines the defendant only to be in position to rebut, should the defendant choose to present testimony concerning the defendant's private examination. Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 945, 104 S. Ct. 1930, 80 L. Ed. 2d 475, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 232 (1984).

State is bound to inform prospective witness of possible consequences of admitting under oath that the witness sold drugs, instead of the defendant who was jointly indicted with the witness for violating the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. § 801 et seq.). This duty included notifying the witness that the criminal law would be enforced to the full extent against those who violated it. Murray v. State, 157 Ga. App. 596, 278 S.E.2d 2, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1926 (1981).

Decision of whether to invoke privilege may be left to witness. — The trial court's instructions to the witness are not erroneous and prejudicial where the trial court advises such witness of the witness' rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 and leaves the decision of whether or not to invoke the privilege entirely to the witness and, where the trial court's instructions did not have the effect of advising the prospective witness that the witness did not have to testify, but rather, did have the effect of advising the witness that the witness had the right not to answer any question that might incriminate the witness. Murray v. State, 157 Ga. App. 596, 278 S.E.2d 2, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1926 (1981).

Invoking of privilege in presence of jury. — Defendant did not have the right to call a witness in order to have the witness assert the fifth amendment privilege in the presence of the jury. Sweat v. State, 226 Ga. App. 88, 485 S.E.2d 259, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 517 (1997).

Codefendant cannot be compelled to testify. — The defendant is not unfairly deprived of favorable testimony when the trial court, at the state's suggestion, advises an unrepresented codefendant of the codefendant's constitutional rights as a witness and, after the trial court advises the codefendant of those rights and appoints counsel for the codefendant, the codefendant chooses not to testify. Neither the trial court, the state, nor a codefendant can compel another codefendant to testify in favor of a calling codefendant, for to do so violates those very constitutional protections. In re J.S.S., 168 Ga. App. 340, 308 S.E.2d 855, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2768 (1983).

Once-unavailable testimony of codefendant who took fifth amendment does not constitute "newly discovered" evidence within the meaning of Rule 33 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. First, the substance of the testimony is not in fact new evidence, since it was always known by the defendant seeking a retrial. Second, and equally important, the once-unavailable defendant who now seeks to exculpate the codefendant lacks credibility, since the defendant has nothing to lose by testifying untruthfully regarding the alleged innocence of the defendant seeking a retrial. United States v. Carlin, 573 F. Supp. 44, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13170 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 1480, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 22411 (11th Cir. 1984).

Rights against self-incrimination were not violated by admission of psychiatrist's testimony relating solely to the defendant's ability to understand the defendant's rights. Marlowe v. State, 187 Ga. App. 255, 370 S.E.2d 20, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 629 (1988).

Questions by judge. — In armed robbery prosecution, the trial judge's asking the defendant what comments, if any, the defendant made in response to a report the defendant was driving a stolen car, after the defendant had been arrested and warned of the defendant's Miranda rights, exceeded constitutional bounds and required reversal. Phillips v. State, 165 Ga.

App. 235, 299 S.E.2d 138, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3140 (1983).

Instructions concerning prior inconsistent statements. — It is the better practice for the trial court expressly to explain to the jury the limited purpose for the admission of prior inconsistent statements, at the time such testimony is admitted, but there is no authority which holds that the failure so to instruct at that particular time in the trial is reversible error. Moore v. State, 160 Ga. App. 870, 288 S.E.2d 585, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2987 (1982).

Where prior inconsistent statements are used to impeach trial statements, a limiting instruction is required even absent a request. The significance of not so limiting the jury's consideration would be to allow a Miranda-violating statement to be used as substantive evidence. However, where the statement is found by the trial court not to have been obtained in violation of the defendant's rights against self-incrimination, the court need not give a limiting instruction absent defendant's request. Fussell v. State, 187 Ga. App. 134, 369 S.E.2d 511, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 563 (1988).

Use of post-arrest silence harmless error. — Use of the defendant's post-arrest silence to impeach the defendant's testimony, even assuming that such use was error, was harmless considering the strength of the evidence supporting the conviction. See Bennett v. State, 254 Ga. 162, 326 S.E.2d 438, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 796 (1985).

Codefendant who had entered a guilty plea and had invoked the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination was not required to testify, where the codefendant's motion to set aside the codefendant's guilty plea and the codefendant's motion for a new trial were pending before the court. Duvall v. State, 259 Ga. 801, 387 S.E.2d 880, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 27 (1990).

Requiring the defendant to testify as to sound of the defendant name. — Defendant's fifth and sixth amendment rights were not violated by requiring the defendant to testify about the sound of the defendant's name. Werts v. State, 196 Ga. App. 452, 395 S.E.2d 922, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 913 (1990).

Defendant who entered plea of nolo contendere could not be forced to testify in the sentencing hearing. Fuller v. State, 244 Ga. App. 618, 536 S.E.2d 296, 2000 Ga. App. LEXIS 811 (2000).

Harmless error. — Any error in allowing a state's witness to invoke U.S. Const., amend. 5 in regard to a statement the witness had made to a security officer about shoplifting was harmless, because the officer was questioned extensively about the statement. Jenkins v. State, 260 Ga. 231, 391 S.E.2d 397, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 183 (1990).

Defendant's right to testify not violated. — Defendant's constitutional right to testify in the defendant's own behalf was not violated. The trial court established that the defendant knew that the defendant had the right to testify if the defendant wanted to but elected not to after consulting with defense counsel. Branford v. State, 299 Ga. App. 890, 685 S.E.2d 731, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1018 (2009).

8. Immunized Testimony

Defendant who gives testimony under a promise of immunity is entitled to the exclusion of any use of that testimony against the defendant. Corson v. Hames, 239 Ga. 534, 238 S.E.2d 75, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1236 (1977); United States v. Weiss, 599 F.2d 730, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 12820 (5th Cir. 1979).

Effect of grant of immunity. — Trial court's grant of an order of immunity pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-28(a) removed any right of the witness to invoke the privilege against self-incrimination. Willard v. State, 244 Ga. App. 469, 535 S.E.2d 820, 2000 Ga. App. LEXIS 743 (2000).

Immunity must be as extensive as privilege replaced. — A person may decline to answer self-incriminating questions based on the constitutional privilege against self-incrimination until it is shown that the person has been granted an immunity that is as extensive in scope as the privilege it replaces. Powell v. Allen, 140 Ga. App. 186, 230 S.E.2d 343, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1396 (1976), overruled on other grounds, Corson v. Hames, 141 Ga. App. 751, 234 S.E.2d 412, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2065 (1977).

Immunity granted in exchange for compelled testimony must be sufficiently broad to protect witness to extent of the fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination. State v. Hanson, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1190 (1982).

At minimum, the state must grant unconditional use and derivative use immunity to a witness in order to remove the privilege not to testify in a self-incriminating manner. Corson v. Hames, 239 Ga. 534, 238 S.E.2d 75, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1236 (1977).

State may not condition immunity given in an order to compel testimony on "full," "complete," and "truthful" testimony "in every particular." Corson v. Hames, 239 Ga. 534, 238 S.E.2d 75, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1236 (1977).

No common-law transactional immunity exists in Georgia in the sense of the protection of a witness who gives up a valuable right. State v. Hanson, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1190 (1982).

No derivative use of immunized testimony where others' testimony not induced thereby. — No derivative use was made by federal prosecutors of the defendant's state grand jury testimony under a grant of immunity where, although the fact that the defendant had testified was one of several factors in the decision of other individuals to pursue or accelerate negotiations with the federal prosecutors, the analysis and evaluation in making those decisions did not involve any participation or influence by the federal prosecutors or any knowledge of the contents of the defendant's testimony, and where, in negotiating and obtaining the cooperation and testimony of those other individuals, the federal prosecutors did not make any use of the fact that the defendant had testified. United States v. Jones, 590 F. Supp. 233, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14883 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Defendant cannot compel state into entering immunity agreement. — If the state does not wish to compel a defendant to testify, it is up to the defendant to decide whether the defendant wishes to exercise or waive the fifth amendment right, and the defendant cannot compel the state to enter into an immunity agreement when it has no interest in doing so. Hayes v. State, 168 Ga. App. 94, 308 S.E.2d 227, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3377 (1983).

Limitation on promise to forego prosecution. — A promise to forego prosecution must be limited to prosecution as to specific crimes or transactions. State v. Hanson, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1190 (1982).

Matters to be specified in promise to forego prosecution. — A valid promise to forego prosecution based on prosecutorial discretion rather than on § 24-9-28 must, first, contain a description of the crimes or transactions in regard to which an individual is excused from prosecution, and, secondly, the prosecutor must obtain court approval of an agreement to forego prosecution. State v. Hanson, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1190 (1982).

Defendant's statements pursuant to informal, oral understandings immunized. — Statements made by the defendant pursuant to informal, oral "understandings" that what the defendant said could not be used against the defendant, while made prior to any formal written agreement, were "immunized," i.e., given pursuant to an equitable grant of immunity. This immunity was coextensive with the defendant's fifth amendment privilege, i.e., use and derivative use immunity, and the burden was on the government in a later prosecution to show the government's evidence derived from sources wholly independent from the defendant's statements. The government failed to carry this burden, as it could not establish that its questioning of potential witnesses was not "focused" by the information provided by the defendant, nor that the information provided was not used to confirm the truthfulness of what was being told by these witnesses. United States v. Carpenter, 611 F. Supp. 768, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18796 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

Immunity not available where no

constitutional right forfeited. — Because the defendant neither engaged in a plea bargain nor was compelled to testify but apparently gave information in exchange for dismissal of charges against the defendant and a promise of the prosecutor not to prosecute the defendant for any crimes committed prior to September, 1980, the defendant gave up no constitutional right, and was not entitled to immunity for purpose of constitutional protection. State v. Hanson, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1190 (1982).

Government's burden, once the defendant who testified before grand jury under grant of immunity was prosecuted for matters related to the defendant's testimony, was to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the evidence presented to the second grand jury, which indicted the defendant, and ultimately the evidence used at trial, was derived from legitimate independent sources. The government was not required to demonstrate by the preponderance of the evidence that the decision to seek indictment was not induced by the content of the immunized testimony. Further, it was not improper for the court, in deciding whether the government met its burden of proof, to consider, in camera, evidence presented before the grand juries, included the defendant's immunized testimony. United States v. Byrd, 765 F.2d 1524, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 20643 (11th Cir. 1985).

Convicted defendant may be required to provide information about other involved persons. — O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(e)(2), regarding reduced sentences for those convicted of drug trafficking, does not compel a defendant to exchange the defendant's fifth amendment rights for a chance at a reduced sentence, as it only requires the defendant to provide information about other persons involved in the same crime for which the defendant has already been convicted. Brugman v. State, 255 Ga. 407, 339 S.E.2d 244, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 533 (1986).

Immunity not forfeited by perjury or false swearing. — An immunity given to compel testimony over U.S. Const., amend. 5's objection may not constitutionally be forfeited because of perjury or false swearing in that testimony. Corson v. Hames, 239 Ga. 534, 238 S.E.2d 75, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1236 (1977).

9. Physical and Other Nontestimonial Evidence

Only evidence of testimonial nature is protected. — The privilege against self-incrimination protects an accused only from being compelled to testify against self or otherwise provide the prosecution with evidence of testimonial nature. Bonaparte v. Smith, 362 F. Supp. 1315, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14966 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 484 F.2d 956, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 7872 (5th Cir. 1973).

Evidence of a noncommunicative nature may be taken from the defendant without violating any right under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against self-incrimination. Bonaparte v. Smith, 362 F. Supp. 1315, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14966 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 484 F.2d 956, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 7872 (5th Cir. 1973).

Miranda protects only testimonial evidence, not noncompulsive physical evidence. Tiller v. State, 238 Ga. 67, 230 S.E.2d 874, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1096 (1976).

What nontestimonial evidence not protected generally. — Fifth amendment offers no protection against compulsion to submit to fingerprinting, photographing or measurements, to write or speak for identification, to appear in court, to stand, to assume a stance, to walk, or to make a particular gesture. Bonaparte v. Smith, 362 F. Supp. 1315, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14966 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 484 F.2d 956, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 7872 (5th Cir. 1973).

Self-incrimination protections of U.S. Const., amend. 5 do not apply to "nontestimonial" evidence such as handwriting samples, blood tests, and voice identifications. Calley v. Callaway, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 851 (1976).

Handwriting sample refusal admis-

sible. — Trial court properly allowed government to introduce and comment upon evidence of inmate's repeated refusals to provide handwriting exemplars in a prosecution for tax fraud, as the jury could interpret refusals as evidence of a guilty conscience. United States v. Stone, 9 F.3d 934, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 33323 (11th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 833, 115 S. Ct. 111, 130 L. Ed. 2d 58, 1994 U.S. LEXIS 5769 (1994).

Merely exhibiting one's self for observation by witnesses involves no compulsion to give evidence of a testimonial nature. Bonaparte v. Smith, 362 F. Supp. 1315, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14966 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 484 F.2d 956, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 7872 (5th Cir. 1973).

Appearance in a police line-up is evidence of a noncommunicative nature and such may be obtained without violating rights against self-incrimination. Bonaparte v. Smith, 362 F. Supp. 1315, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14966 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 484 F.2d 956, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 7872 (5th Cir. 1973).

Voluntary consent to a line-up does not violate rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against self-incrimination, since the line-up process involves no compulsion of the accused to give evidence of a testimonial nature against the accused. Disby v. State, 238 Ga. 178, 231 S.E.2d 763, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 948 (1977).

Requiring a defendant to appear in a line-up and to repeat words similar to those used at the scene of a bank robbery does not violate rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 against self-incrimination. Schmidt v. United States, 380 F.2d 22, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 5755 (5th Cir. 1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 908, 88 S. Ct. 830, 19 L. Ed. 2d 876, 1968 U.S. LEXIS 2672 (1968).

Use of defendant's voice for identification. — Mere use of the defendant's voice as an identifying physical characteristic does not involve or amount to compelling of the defendant to give evidence against the defendant having a testimonial significance. Bradford v. State, 118 Ga. App. 457, 164 S.E.2d 264, 1968 Ga. App. LEXIS 1429 (1968), cert. denied, 394 U.S. 1020, 89 S. Ct. 1644, 23 L. Ed. 2d 46, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 1754 (1969).

Requiring a suspect to give a voice exemplar for identification purposes does not violate the privilege against self-incrimination. Davis v. State, 158 Ga. App. 549, 281 S.E.2d 305, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2303 (1981).

Defendant's consent to use of the defendant's voice in a voice lineup was not required since requiring a suspect to give a voice exemplar does not violate the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination. Campbell v. State, 228 Ga. App. 258, 491 S.E.2d 477, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 1104 (1997).

Voluntarily speaking into telephone for identification purposes. — Where the defendant and three others were requested by investigating officers to speak into a telephone for the purpose of identifying, by voice, which of the four had made obscene telephone calls, and where the suspects complied, the situation did not amount to a critical stage of the defendant's prosecution and the defendant was neither entitled to receive warning of the defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 or U.S. Const., amend. 6, nor were the defendant's rights violated. Bradford v. State, 118 Ga. App. 457, 164 S.E.2d 264, 1968 Ga. App. LEXIS 1429 (1968), cert. denied, 394 U.S. 1020, 89 S. Ct. 1644, 23 L. Ed. 2d 46, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 1754 (1969).

Voluntary submitting of self for purposes of identification. — The essential element in the provision against self-incrimination is that no one shall be compelled to give evidence tending to incriminate oneself. The provision is not applicable where the defendant voluntarily submits the defendant for the purpose of others identifying him. Whippler v. State, 218 Ga. 198, 126 S.E.2d 744, 1962 Ga. LEXIS 465 (1962), cert. denied, 375 U.S. 960, 84 S. Ct. 446, 11 L. Ed. 2d 318, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 51 (1963).

Actions of a defendant which are inconsistent with innocence are admissible without regard to the fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination. United States v. Nabors, 707 F.2d 1294, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 26494 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1021, 104 S. Ct. 1271, 79 L. Ed. 2d 677, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 1037 (1984).

Self-Incrimination (Cont'd)9. Physical and Other*Nontestimonial Evidence (Cont'd)

Lack of surprise at accusation. — Where a police officer, who had advised the defendant of the defendant's Miranda rights and then told the defendant that the officer would not arrest the defendant at that moment but would take out a warrant for the defendant's arrest for growing and possessing marijuana, was asked by the district attorney whether the defendant had registered any emotional or facial surprise or other manifestation of emotion, and the officer stated the defendant remained neutral in expression and actions, there was no Miranda violation under the circumstances. Gravley v. State, 181 Ga. App. 400, 352 S.E.2d 589, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2832 (1986).

Defendant does not have right to refuse to speak at a post-indictment lineup. Jenkins v. State, 167 Ga. App. 840, 308 S.E.2d 14, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3362 (1983).

Defendant ordered to stand in jury's presence. — Although the defendant was ordered to take the stand in the presence of the jury, since the defendant neither testified nor invoked the fifth amendment privilege to remain silent, the defendant's constitutional rights were not violated. Turner v. State, 162 Ga. App. 806, 293 S.E.2d 67, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3172 (1982).

Photographs of defendant. — In a prosecution for murder and armed robbery, admission of photographs of defendant and a portion of defendant's right hand did not violate defendant's right against self-incrimination. Rivers v. State, 265 Ga. 694, 461 S.E.2d 205, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 713 (1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1177, 116 S. Ct. 1274, 134 L. Ed. 2d 220, 1996 U.S. LEXIS 1850 (1996).

Photographing defendant's upper body. — Requiring a defendant to strip down to the waist and be photographed neither compelled the defendant to be a witness against the defendant nor compelled the defendant to give testimony tending in any manner to be self-incriminating. Ingram v. State, 253 Ga. 622, 323 S.E.2d 801, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 1039 (1984), cert. denied, 473 U.S. 911, 105 S. Ct. 3538, 87 L. Ed. 2d 661, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 3073 (1985).

Photographing baseball cap. — Defendant's due process rights were not violated when the trial court admitted into evidence photographs of a baseball cap defendant allegedly wore on the night of the crime because the lost cap was not constitutionally material, and as far as the state knew at the time the cap disappeared, the cap was more likely to be inculpatory of the defendant since there was no apparent reason for the police to think that the cap would tend to exonerate rather than further inculcate the defendant; there was also no evidence that the state acted in bad faith, and even if it was assumed that the state's handling of the cap indicated careless, shoddy, and unprofessional investigatory procedures, it did not indicate that the police in bad faith attempted to deny the defendant access to evidence that the police knew would be exculpatory. Johnson v. State, 289 Ga. 106, 709 S.E.2d 768, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 286 (2011).

Field sobriety test results are not inadmissible because they are not evidence of a testimonial or communicative nature. Coates v. State, 216 Ga. App. 93, 453 S.E.2d 35, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 1425 (1994).

Polygraph test as prerequisite to probation. — A condition requiring the probationer to submit to polygraph tests does not violate a defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5, and that the condition may be imposed, in the discretion of the trial judge, with no more than a general finding of the court that it is reasonably necessary to accomplish the purpose of probation. Mann v. State, 154 Ga. App. 677, 269 S.E.2d 863, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2339 (1980).

Donning of apparel to facilitate identification. — U.S. Const., amend. 5's privilege against self-incrimination offers no protection against compulsion to don an item of apparel worn by the person committing the offense in order to facilitate identification. United States v. Roberts, 481 F.2d 892, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8743 (5th Cir. 1973).

Use of police forms as handwriting

exemplars. — Use of “personal history forms” which the defendant is instructed to complete following arrest as handwriting exemplars violates none of the defendant’s rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 or U.S. Const., amend. 6. United States v. Walker, 453 F.2d 1205, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 11895 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 407 U.S. 910, 92 S. Ct. 2432, 32 L. Ed. 2d 683, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 2231 (1972).

Admissibility of fingerprint evidence is well established. Grimes v. United States, 405 F.2d 477, 1968 U.S. App. LEXIS 4595 (5th Cir. 1968).

Fingerprints taken in absence of counsel. — Constitutional rights are not denied because fingerprints are taken in the absence of counsel. Ward v. United States, 486 F.2d 305, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 7462 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 416 U.S. 990, 94 S. Ct. 2398, 40 L. Ed. 2d 768, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 270 (1974).

Removal of a substance from the body through a minor intrusion is not self-incriminating within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Strong v. State, 231 Ga. 514, 202 S.E.2d 428, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 764 (1973), cert. denied, 416 U.S. 994, 94 S. Ct. 2408, 40 L. Ed. 2d 773, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 317 (1974), overruled in part, Williams v. State, 296 Ga. 817, 771 S.E.2d 373, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 197 (2015), overruled in part, Olevik v. State, 302 Ga. 228, 806 S.E.2d 505, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 898 (2017).

Taking of blood for tests is but a minor intrusion upon one’s body so as not to cause the person to be a witness against oneself within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Williams v. State, 145 Ga. App. 81, 243 S.E.2d 614, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 1872 (1978).

The compelled taking of a blood sample does not violate a defendant’s constitutional privilege against self-incrimination. Welch v. State, 254 Ga. 603, 331 S.E.2d 573, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 781 (1985).

Results of breathalyzer and intoximeter tests not incriminating state-ments. — Constitutional privilege against self-incrimination does not apply to noncommunicative acts such as an intoximeter test. Purvis v. State, 129 Ga. App. 208, 199 S.E.2d 366, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 944 (1973).

Evidence of the defendant’s refusal to take a breath test did not need to be excluded, simply because the officer did not advise the defendant of the defendant’s rights. Lankford v. State, 204 Ga. App. 405, 419 S.E.2d 498, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 879 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C1162, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 675 (Ga. July 16, 1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1051, 113 S. Ct. 972, 122 L. Ed. 2d 127, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 93 (1993).

Because defendant was not compelled by the state to submit to a breath test after arrest, the admission at trial of the test results did not violate the defendant’s right against self-incrimination. Fantasia v. State, 268 Ga. 512, 491 S.E.2d 318.

Admission of breath test results did not violate the defendant’s fifth and fourteenth amendment rights even though the defendant was in custody and no Miranda warnings were given; the results obtained from a chemical breath test, like the results obtained from a sobriety test or a blood test, are not evidence of a testimonial or communicative nature. Scanlon v. State, 237 Ga. App. 362, 514 S.E.2d 876, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 386 (1999).

Hair samples. — The obtaining of hair samples after lawful arrest, where the means employed are reasonable, is not a violation of appellant’s constitutional rights. Grimes v. United States, 405 F.2d 477, 1968 U.S. App. LEXIS 4595 (5th Cir. 1968).

Removal of bullet from defendant’s body. — Constitutional rights of the defendant are not violated by the state in requiring the removal of a bullet from the defendant’s body. Creamer v. State, 229 Ga. 511, 192 S.E.2d 350, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 668 (1972), cert. dismissed, Creamer v. Georgia, 410 U.S. 975, 93 S. Ct. 1454, 35 L. Ed. 2d 709, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 3120 (1973).

Lifting of gunshot residue from defendant’s person. — Testimony of an expert concerning swabbing procedure used to lift gunshot residue from the hands of the accused, its physical results, and the expert’s opinion based on those results does not violate the privilege of the accused against self-incrimination. Strickland v. State, 247 Ga. 219, 275 S.E.2d 29, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 629, cert.

denied, 454 U.S. 882, 102 S. Ct. 365, 70 L. Ed. 2d 192 (1981).

Physical dexterity tests and alphabet test are not inadmissible under the fifth amendment of the United States Constitution because they were not evidence of a testimonial or communicative nature. Hughes v. State, 259 Ga. 227, 378 S.E.2d 853, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 187, cert. denied, 493 U.S. 890, 110 S. Ct. 234, 107 L. Ed. 2d 185, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 4847 (1989).

Production of bodily fluid samples is not communicative or testimonial in nature and thus does not implicate a defendant's privilege against self-incrimination. Green v. State, 194 Ga. App. 343, 390 S.E.2d 285, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 98 (1990), aff'd, No. S90G0665, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 457 (Ga. Dec. 3, 1990).

Teacher's right to remain silent was not violated by a school policy requiring drug testing when circumstances reasonably support a suspicion that an employee may have violated the policy. Hearn v. Board of Pub. Educ., 191 F.3d 1329, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 24841 (11th Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 529 U.S. 1109, 120 S. Ct. 1962, 146 L. Ed. 2d 794, 2000 U.S. LEXIS 3197 (2000).

Blood and urine sample admissible. — Admitting the results of blood and urine analysis into evidence in the defendant's felony murder trial did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 5, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI, or former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(a) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-5-506) because the removal of a substance from the body through a minor intrusion did not cause the defendant to be a witness against oneself within the meaning of the fifth amendment and similar provisions of Georgia law. Bowling v. State, 289 Ga. 881, 717 S.E.2d 190, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 823 (2011).

Obtaining blood, hair and saliva samples from an accused represents "minor intrusions" that do not cause the person to be a witness against oneself within the meaning of the constitution. Calloway v. State, 199 Ga. App. 272, 404

S.E.2d 811, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 444 (1991), overruled in part, State v. Burns, 306 Ga. 117, 829 S.E.2d 367, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 400 (2019).

Evidence of victim's prior violent acts. — Defendant was properly denied the right to a new trial under O.C.G.A. § 5-5-23 based on defendant's claim that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance of counsel, as defendant failed to show that the outcome of defendant's criminal trial would have differed if defendant's trial counsel had acted in another manner; moreover, defendant's claims lacked merit, in that defendant's constitutional right, under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I and U.S. Const., amend. 5, to present evidence of the victim's prior violent acts was contingent upon defendant's showing that the evidence was relevant to defendant's claim of justification, which the defendant failed at showing because there was an eyewitness and medical evidence that defendant shot the victim numerous times in the back. Robinson v. State, 277 Ga. 75, 586 S.E.2d 313, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 716 (2003).

Failure to object to search warrant affidavit from which DNA obtained. —

With regard to defendant's convictions for rape and other crimes, the trial court did not err by concluding that defendant's trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to a search warrant affidavit that led to the police obtaining a DNA swab from defendant, despite defendant's voluntary statement to the detectives being elicited in violation of Miranda and case law, as the search warrant could be predicated on defendant's voluntary but unlawfully obtained statements. Brown v. State, 292 Ga. App. 269, 663 S.E.2d 749, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 651 (2008).

Use of previous convictions. — In a defendant's prosecution for malice murder and armed robbery, the trial court did not err in failing to instruct the jury without request that the jurors limit the jurors' consideration of the defendant's prior convictions to the purpose of impeachment only under former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a) (see O.C.G.A. § 24-6-609) as information regarding the defendant's prior convictions was not obtained in violation of the defendant's constitutional rights against self-incrimination under U.S. Const., amend. 5. Phillips v. State, 285 Ga. 213, 675 S.E.2d 1, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 44 (2009).

Sex offender registration requirement for illegal aliens. — As for defendant's argument that registering as a sex offender would have exposed the defendant to prosecution for reentry of a previously removed alien under 8 U.S.C. § 1326, the court found no fifth amendment violation because defendant could not show that anything the defendant would have been required to provide under Georgia's sex offender statute would have confronted the defendant with a substantial hazard of self-incrimination (there were no nationality, visa, or other immigration details required to be submitted); the cases defendant cited in support of defendant's fifth amendment argument were distinguishable because those cases imposed a disclosure requirement largely designed to discover involvement in criminal activities, and the Sex Offender Registration Notification Act, O.C.G.A. § 24-42-1-12, was not designed to uncover criminal behavior, but was instead intended to protect the public from sex offenders by tracking their interstate movement. United States v. Simon-Marcos, 363 Fed. Appx. 726, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 2319 (11th Cir. 2010).

Audiotape. — Defendant was not denied due process on the ground that the prosecution withheld an audiotape because the defendant did not show that the state, either purposefully or through oversight or neglect suppressed the audiotape, much less that any earlier notice of the existence of the audiotape would have actually benefitted the defendant or that any alleged delay deprived the defendant of a fair trial. Nations v. State, 290 Ga. 39, 717 S.E.2d 634, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 866 (2011).

Due Process

1. In General

Applicability. — It is axiomatic that the fifth amendment due process clause applies only to the federal government, while the fourteenth amendment due process clause applies to the states. Mindler v. Clayton County, 831 F. Supp. 856, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12129 (N.D. Ga. 1993).

Due process considerations generally. — Identification of the specific dictates of due process generally requires consideration of three distinct factors: first, the private interest that will be affected by the official action; second, the risk of an erroneous deprivation of such interest through the procedures used, and probable value, if any, of additional or substitute procedural safeguards; and finally, the government's interest, including the function involved and the fiscal and administrative burdens that the additional or substitute procedural requirement would entail. Tucker v. Caldwell, 608 F.2d 140, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 9838 (5th Cir. 1979); Greenwood Utils. Comm'n v. Schlesinger, 515 F. Supp. 653, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18476 (M.D. Ga. 1981).

Where a rule of conduct applies to more than a few people, it is impracticable that every one should have a direct voice in its adoption. General statutes within the state power are passed that affect the person or property of individuals, sometimes to the point of ruin, without giving them a chance to be heard. Their rights are protected in the only way that they can be in a complex society, by their power, immediate or remote, over those who make the rule. Bowles v. Willingham, 321 U.S. 503, 64 S. Ct. 641, 88 L. Ed. 892, 28 Ohio Op. 180, 1944 U.S. LEXIS 1202 (1944).

Equal protection concepts are embodied in the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Winnigham v. United States Dep't of HUD, 512 F.2d 617, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 14863 (5th Cir. 1975).

Basic concepts of equal protection apply to the federal government through the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5. United States v. Hawes, 529 F.2d 472, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 12134 (5th Cir. 1976).

No federal question raised by dismissed federal employee's Bivens theory claim. — Because the plaintiff, a dismissed federal employee, asserted various fourth, fifth, and sixth amendment claims against the plaintiff's superiors under a Bivens theory (see Bivens v. 6 Unknown Narcotics Agents, 403 U.S. 388, 91 S. Ct. 1999, 29 L. Ed. 2d 619 (1971), the court found no federal question because Congress had established an elaborate remedial scheme for dismissed federal employees. Metz v. McKinley, 583 F. Supp. 683, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19160 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 747 F.2d 709, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 17517 (11th Cir. 1984).

U.S. Const., amend. 5 and U.S. Const., amend. 4, provide protection against all governmental invasions of the sanctity of a person's home and privacies of life. Smith v. Price, 446 F. Supp. 828, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13884 (M.D. Ga. 1977), rev'd, 616 F.2d 1371, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 17470 (5th Cir. 1980).

Fifth and fourteenth amendment restraints essentially same. — The restraint imposed upon legislation by the due process clause of the fifth and fourteenth amendments is essentially the same. DeLaigle v. Federal Land Bank, 568 F. Supp. 1432, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14993 (S.D. Ga. 1983).

Relationship of presumptions to due process. See Williamson v. State, 248 Ga. 47, 281 S.E.2d 512, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 906 (1981).

Requirements of due process apply only to denial of property or liberty rights protected by the Constitution. NAACP v. United States Postal Serv., 398 F. Supp. 562, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11572 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Property interests, for due process purposes, are not created by the Constitution but by existing rules or understandings that stem from an independent source such as state law. NAACP v. United States Postal Serv., 398 F. Supp. 562, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11572 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Protections of U.S. Const., amend. 5 may be invoked in civil as well as criminal actions. Page v. Page, 235 Ga. 131, 218 S.E.2d 859, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 804 (1975).

While the power of Congress to investigate for legislative purposes is inherent, it is not unlimited, and is always subject to the limitations imposed by the individual guarantees of the Bill of Rights. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

General welfare acts as limit on individual rights. — While the maxim salus populi suprema lex cannot be used as a mere pretext for the curtailment of constitutional safeguards still, where it does apply it acts as a limitation on the rights of the individual which otherwise would be beyond the power of the General Assembly to regulate or circumscribe. Ingram v. State, 193 Ga. 565, 19 S.E.2d 493, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 447 (1942).

Termination of protected interests in emergencies. — In emergency situations, the government may terminate a protected interest without affording any protections other than the right to a hearing before the termination becomes final. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Judicial emergency from COVID. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by declaring a mistrial based on manifest necessity or in denying the defendant's plea in bar because of the COVID-related judicial emergency, the 30-day prohibition on jury service in the county, and the potentially COVID-related health concerns among the trial's participants. Hightower v. State, 315 Ga. 399, 883 S.E.2d 335, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 6 (2023).

Where only property rights are involved, mere postponement of judicial inquiry is not a denial of due process, if the opportunity given for the ultimate judicial determination of the liability is adequate. Bowles v. Willingham, 321 U.S. 503, 64 S. Ct. 641, 88 L. Ed. 892, 28 Ohio Op. 180, 1944 U.S. LEXIS 1202 (1944).

For the government to compel one to commit an act at one's own peril without any warning of possible criminal consequences violates due process. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Counties are not persons as against the state within the meaning of the constitutional provision guaranteeing due process to all persons. Bibb County v. Hancock, 211 Ga. 429, 86 S.E.2d 511, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 347 (1955).

Commerce power is subject to the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5. United States v. Hawes, 529 F.2d 472, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 12134 (5th Cir. 1976).

Waivers of constitutional rights not only must be voluntary but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences. United States v. Gearin, 496 F.2d 691, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 7058 (5th Cir. 1974).

Age and education as bearing on effectiveness of waiver. — The mere fact that a defendant is 21 years old with a sixth grade education does not lead to the conclusion that the defendant was incapable of knowingly, voluntarily, and intelligently waiving the defendant's constitutional rights. Gates v. State, 244 Ga. 587, 261 S.E.2d 349, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1340 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 938, 100 S. Ct. 1332, 63 L. Ed. 2d 772 (1980).

Fifth amendment inapplicable to age discrimination. — Insofar as a plaintiff's allegations can be read as encompassing an age discrimination ingredient, U.S. Const., amend. 5 has no application. Favors v. Ruckelshaus, 569 F. Supp. 363, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15947 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Jurisdiction over due process questions as between Court of Appeals and Supreme Court. — Jurisdiction of a case which ordinarily is in the Court of Appeals is not conferred on the Supreme Court by a statement in the bill of exceptions, following an assignment of error, that said ruling is contrary to law, contrary to Ga. Const. 1877, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. I), and violative of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Chastain v. Alford, 191 Ga. 677, 13 S.E.2d 769, 1941 Ga. LEXIS 359 (1941), transferred, 67 Ga. App. 316, 20 S.E.2d 150, 1942 Ga. App. LEXIS 402 (1942).

Test for personal jurisdiction in federal question case. — To determine the question of personal jurisdiction in a federal question case with nationwide service of process, the court must apply a two-pronged test. First, the court must determine whether the defendant "purposefully availed" itself of the protection of the federal law, in other words do the requisite national contacts exist? Then, the defendant will have the opportunity to establish a compelling case that exercising jurisdiction would offend "notions of fair play or substantial justice." Duckworth v. Medical Electro-Therapeutics, Inc., 768 F. Supp. 822, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8993 (S.D. Ga. 1991).

In a federal securities fraud action, the defendants purposefully availed themselves of the protection of the federal laws, in that they resided in the United States and, by exchanging securities, they should have had fair warning that they may have been haled into federal court to defend themselves in such an action. Thus, the defendants had the requisite national contacts to justify the exercise of personal jurisdiction over them. Duckworth v. Medical Electro-Therapeutics, Inc., 768 F. Supp. 822, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8993 (S.D. Ga. 1991).

Jurisdiction over nonresidents. — Jurisdiction over a nonresident exists if the nonresident has purposefully done some act or consummated some transaction in the forum state, if the claim arises from or is connected with the act or transaction, and if the exercise of jurisdiction by the courts of the forum state does not offend traditional fairness and substantial justice. Bailey v. London Marina, Inc., 151 Ga. App. 73, 258 S.E.2d 738, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2430 (1979).

The federal district court's exercise of personal jurisdiction did not offend the constitutional restrictions of the due process clause where defendant's alleged contacts with Georgia satisfied the requirement of a single, purposeful arguably commercial contact of some benefit to defendant. Thermo-Cell S.E., Inc. v. Technetic Indus., Inc., 605 F. Supp. 1122, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21329 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

Although South Carolina defendants met the requirements of Georgia's long-arm statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-10-91, the defendants did not deliberately engage in significant activities in Georgia and did not have fair warning that the defendants might be haled into court in Georgia simply by hiring Georgia lawyers to handle litigation that occurred in Massachusetts. Therefore, the defendants were not subject to suit in Georgia by a company that provided expert witness and consulting services to the defendant in the Massachusetts litigation. Schmidt v. JPS Indus., No. 1:09-CV-3584-JEC, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35284 (N.D. Ga. Mar. 31, 2011).

Jurisdiction to review agency's denial of attorney's fees. — While a federal court has no subject matter jurisdiction to review the reasonableness of an award of attorney's fees in connection with a claim for social security benefits, it does have subject matter jurisdiction over claims that the denial by the Secretary of Health and Human Services of the attorney's fees agreed upon between the attorney and the claimant constitutes a denial of due process and an interference with contract. Siler v. Heckler, 578 F. Supp. 744, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11285 (N.D. Ga. 1983), dismissed, 583 F. Supp. 1110, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17198 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Rule that the United States may not be sued without its consent is all embracing. Lynch v. United States, 292 U.S. 571, 54 S. Ct. 840, 78 L. Ed. 1434, 1934 U.S. LEXIS 969 (1934), overruled in part, Pro-Eco v. Board of Comm'rs, 57 F.3d 505, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 14338 (7th Cir. 1995).

Withdrawal of consent to sue United States. — Although the United States may give consent to sue, Congress retains the power to withdraw the consent at any time. Consent to sue the United States is a privilege accorded, not the grant of a property right protected by U.S. Const., amend. 5. The consent may be withdrawn, although given after much deliberation and for a pecuniary consideration. Lynch v. United States, 292 U.S. 571, 54 S. Ct. 840, 78 L. Ed. 1434, 1934 U.S. LEXIS 969 (1934), overruled in part, Pro-Eco v. Board of Comm'rs, 57 F.3d

Procedural due process imposes restraints on governmental decisions that deprive individuals of liberty or property interests within the meaning of the due process clause. Griffin v. Califano, 448 F. Supp. 430, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12169 (N.D. Ga. 1977).

Governmental deprivation of property or liberty interests requires procedural safeguards. — The constitutional guarantee of procedural due process applies to governmental deprivation of a legitimate property or liberty interest within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 5 or U.S. Const., amend. 14, and requires that any such deprivation be accompanied by minimum procedural safeguards, including some form of notice and a hearing. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Deprivation of any property or entitlement by state or federal officials, without notice and opportunity for prior hearing may violate procedural due process. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Seizure invalid without notice. — Where it was undisputed that the defendant received neither notice nor a hearing before issuance of the warrants seizing defendant's property and it was also undisputed that the government neither alleged nor established the existence of exigent circumstances that might have allowed ex parte seizure of the properties, there was no question that the warrants were invalid and that the seizure of the properties therefore violated defendant's fifth amendment right to due process. United States v. 2751 Peyton Woods Trail, 66 F.3d 1164, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 28949 (11th Cir. 1995).

Impairment of vested rights prohibited. — Due process clauses of the state and federal constitutions prohibit the enactment of a law which would impair vested rights. Villyard v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 204 Ga. 517, 50 S.E.2d 313, 1948 Ga. LEXIS 471 (1948).

Notice must be reasonably calculated to inform. — The notice required in any particular situation is that which is reasonably calculated to inform interested parties of the action to be taken and of their opportunity to present objections. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Due process requires notice reasonably calculated, under all the circumstances, to apprise interested parties of the pendency of the action and afford them an opportunity to present their objections. Douglas v. United States, 562 F. Supp. 593, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19948 (S.D. Ga. 1983).

Orally given notice may be sufficient. — Full due process notice can be afforded by telephone, and U.S. Const., amend. 5 does not demand that all pretermination notice be in writing. However, not every oral pretermination notice will be constitutionally sound, for there may be individual situations in which inadequate notice is given, in writing as well as orally, and the matter must be considered a factual question to be decided on a case-by-case basis. Williams v. Weinberger, 360 F. Supp. 1349, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13039 (N.D. Ga. 1973), aff'd, 494 F.2d 1191, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 8376 (5th Cir. 1974).

When notice by publication sufficient. — Notice by publication is sufficient only if the party bringing the action cannot by due diligence ascertain either the names or whereabouts of those likely to oppose the action. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Although plaintiff claimed never to have received any notice from the Postal Service regarding receipt of certified or registered mail, the forfeiture was allowed to stand, as adequate notice was given by the publication of the notice in a newspaper of general circulation. Coggins v. United States, 860 F. Supp. 845, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11008 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 53 F.3d 1287, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 10115 (11th Cir. 1995).

Due process requires a competent and impartial tribunal in administrative hearings and in trials to a judge. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Due process is denied by circumstances that create the likelihood or the appearance of bias, even if no showing of actual bias in the tribunal. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Hearing must be granted only before one is finally deprived of one's property. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Legislative acts adjusting burdens and benefits of economic life include a presumption of constitutionality, and the burden is on one complaining of a due process violation to establish that the Legislature has acted in an arbitrary and irrational way. Hall v. Landmark Fin. Corp., 13 B.R. 205, 1981 Bankr. LEXIS 3233 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981).

Notice must be given and a judicial determination made before a debtor's rights can constitutionally be terminated. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

No right to hearing where direct contempt committed in court's presence. — Where direct contempt is committed in the presence of the court, the offender is not entitled as a matter of right to a hearing before the court. The court may act on its own knowledge of the facts and proceed to impose punishment for the contempt, or it may in its discretion allow a hearing. The refusal to allow a hearing does not deprive the defendant of the due process of law guaranteed by the state and federal constitutions. Martin v. Waters, 151 Ga. App. 149, 259 S.E.2d 153, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2474 (1979).

If an act of criminal contempt is not committed in the court's immediate presence, due process requires that the accused be given an opportunity to be heard. Martin v. Waters, 151 Ga. App. 149, 259 S.E.2d 153, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2474 (1979).

power by fining a county for operating its jail in violation of prior court orders, where the county was deprived of its due process right to show cause why it should not be held in contempt. Mercer v. Mitchell, 908 F.2d 763, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 13407 (11th Cir. 1990).

That an oral hearing is not held on reconsideration of a motion for summary judgment is not a denial of due process. Bon Air Hotel, Inc. v. Time, Inc., 426 F.2d 858, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 9387 (5th Cir. 1970).

Pretermination notice and hearing required except in emergencies. — Except in emergency situations, due process requires that when a state seeks to terminate a protected interest, it must afford notice and opportunity for a hearing appropriate to the nature of the case before the termination becomes effective. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Constitutional doctrine of separation of powers may not limit an individual's right to a fair hearing of the individual's case and the individual's right to present the individual's defense. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

When congressional inquiry and a criminal prosecution cross paths, congressional privilege is not absolute, and Congress must accommodate the public interest in legitimate legislative inquiry with the public interest in securing the witness a fair trial. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Due process permits states wide latitude. — Due process clause has always been interpreted as permitting the states wide latitude in fashioning rules of evidence and procedure. Bassett v. Smith, 464 F.2d 347, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 8374 (5th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 410 U.S. 991, 93 S. Ct. 1509, 36 L. Ed. 2d 190, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 3115 (1973).

Congress may not abrogate federal contractual obligations. — Rights against the United States arising out of a contract with it are protected by U.S. Const., amend. 5, so that Congress is without power to reduce expenditures by abrogating contractual obligations of the United States. Lynch v. United States, 292 U.S. 571, 54 S. Ct. 840, 78 L. Ed. 1434, 1934 U.S. LEXIS 969 (1934), overruled in part, Pro-Eco v. Board of Comm'rs, 57 F.3d 505, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 14338 (7th Cir. 1995). But see Connolly v. Pension Ben. Guaranty Corp., 475 U.S. 211, 106 S. Ct. 1018, 89 L. Ed. 2d 166, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 10 (1986).

Notice to creditors. — Due process under the fifth amendment to the United States Constitution prevents actions taken against the interests of a creditor without notice. In re Hamilton, 179 B.R. 749, 1995 Bankr. LEXIS 400 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1995).

Under the bankruptcy power Congress has authority to impair the obligation of contracts, but may do so, only when property is not, contrary to U.S. Const., amend. 5, taken without due process of law. In re Philibosian, 19 F. Supp. 787, 1937 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1730 (D. Ga. 1937).

Discharge of unsecured debt in bankruptcy not a violation of due process. — An unsecured note is property, whose value rests wholly in the debtor's obligation to pay it and in the right to seize the holder's property to satisfy a judgment on the note. The holder may be deprived of the holder's property by a process of bankruptcy resulting in the bankrupt's discharge without any payment, and due process of law is not lacking. In re Philibosian, 19 F. Supp. 787, 1937 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1730 (D. Ga. 1937).

Secured creditor may not be deprived of security, but that is due to a limitation in the bankruptcy power, not a result of due process. It is not clear that to deprive a secured creditor of creditor's security through a bankruptcy deprives the secured creditor of property any more than to deprive the unsecured creditor of the unsecured creditor's debt does or that the process of bankruptcy is any less a due process of law in the one case than in the other. The true reason why bankruptcy may not nullify a security is not U.S. Const., amend. 5 but the fact that it never has. It lies in the limitations inherent in the bankruptcy power. In re Philibosian, 19 F. Supp. 787, 1937 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1730 (D. Ga. 1937).

Provisions for discharge in bankruptcy of alimony and support debts violate due process. — By providing the benefit of dischargeability of alimony and support debts owed by wives, but not those owed by husbands, 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(5) violates the equal protection component of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Crist v. Crist, 632 F.2d 1226, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11355 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 2321, 68 L. Ed. 2d 844, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 2085 (1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 819, 102 S. Ct. 100, 70 L. Ed. 2d 90, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3150 (1981).

Bankruptcy power is subject to U.S. Const., amend. 5, and under the bankruptcy power Congress may discharge the debtor's personal obligation, because, unlike the states, it is not prohibited from impairing the obligation of contracts. Jenkins v. Northwest Ga. Bank, 11 B.R. 958, 1981 Bankr. LEXIS 3477 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981); Hall v. Landmark Fin. Corp., 13 B.R. 205, 1981 Bankr. LEXIS 3233 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981); ITT Indus. Credit Co. v. Scarboro, 13 B.R. 439, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15964 (M.D. Ga. 1981).

"Contacts" with forum state not germane to Bankruptcy Act. — As federal district courts have personal jurisdiction in federal bankruptcy actions over any person with minimum contacts with the United States, and as the federal Bankruptcy Act (T. 11, U.S.C.) permits nationwide service of process, a federal district court had ancillary personal jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant in a "non-core," related bankruptcy proceeding. This was true even though the defendant lacked minimum contacts with the forum state. Chemical Bank v. Grigsby's World of Carpet, Inc. (In re WWG Indus., Inc.), 44 B.R. 287, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21671 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

The minimum contacts analysis applicable in a federal bankruptcy proceeding requires only that the defendant be within the territorial boundaries of the United States. Wallace v. Milrob Corp. (In re Rusco Indus., Inc.), 104 B.R. 548, 1989 Bankr. LEXIS 1247 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1989).

While U.S. Const., amend. 5 forbids destruction of a contract it does not prohibit bankruptcy legislation affecting creditor's remedy for its enforcement against debtor's assets, or the measure of the creditor's participation therein, if the statutory provisions are consonant with a fair, reasonable, and equitable distribution of those assets. ITT Indus. Credit Co. v. Scarboro, 13 B.R. 439, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15964 (M.D. Ga. 1981).

There is a significant difference between property interest and contract as respects exertion of bankruptcy power, since the Constitution does not forbid impairment of the obligation of the latter. ITT Indus. Credit Co. v. Scarboro, 13 B.R. 439, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15964 (M.D. Ga. 1981).

Although provisions of Bankruptcy Code (T. 11, U.S.C.) ultimately impair obligation of contracts, this impairment alone does not constitute denial of due process. In re Scales, 10 B.R. 981, 1981 Bankr. LEXIS 3761 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981); In re Colston, 11 B.R. 251, 1981 Bankr. LEXIS 3753 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1981).

While creditors are required to pay fee to file complaint initiating adversary proceeding in court, debtors are not required to pay. This policy does not unfairly discriminate against creditors in violation of the equal protection guarantees of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Maddox v. Southern Dist. Co., 34 B.R. 801, 1982 Bankr. LEXIS 3952 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1982).

Farming bankruptcy provisions constitutional. — Chapter 12 of the Bankruptcy Code (11 U.S.C. § 1201 et seq.), designed specifically for farmers and intended to meet a perceived crisis in the agricultural community, does not, on its face, violate the taking and due process clauses of the fifth amendment and therefore does not exceed the bankruptcy powers of Congress. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Bullington, 89 B.R. 1010, 1988 U.S. Dist.

Due Process (Cont'd)

LEXIS 13568 (M.D. Ga. 1988), aff'd, 878 F.2d 354, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 10635 (11th Cir. 1989).

Foreclosure and equity of redemption. — Although state law prescribes the method for conducting a foreclosure, a mortgagor's equity of redemption rights constitute property protected by the due process clause of the fifth amendment. Foster v. F & M Bank, 105 B.R. 746, 1989 Bankr. LEXIS 1681 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1989).

Forfeiture of property. — Due process is violated when a claimant is deprived of the claimant's property for an unreasonable amount of time prior to a hearing on the merits, not when there is a delay that postpones the seizure of the property. Nnadi v. Richter, 976 F.2d 682, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 28475 (11th Cir. 1992).

Congress does not have an unlimited right to tax the citizenry. A federal statute passed under the taxing power may be so arbitrary and capricious as to violate the due process of law clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Fears v. United States, 386 F. Supp. 1223, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14379 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, Esparza-Nevarez v. U. S., 518 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Constitutional challenge to tax based on distribution of benefit. — It is not a constitutional defense to a tax that the taxpayer is not directly benefited from a tax or is less benefited than others who pay the same or less tax. Fears v. United States, 386 F. Supp. 1223, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14379 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, Esparza-Nevarez v. U. S., 518 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

When withholding of taxes for social welfare barred. — U.S. Const., amend. 5 bars the withholding of taxes to support a social welfare program only if the statute manifests a patently arbitrary classification, utterly lacking in rational justification. Fears v. United States, 386 F. Supp. 1223, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14379 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, Esparza-Nevarez v. U. S., 518 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Cutoff of taxpayer's right to hearing on assessment violates due process where not due to own action. —

Allowing the rights of a taxpayer to a hearing on the assessment of the taxpayer's property to be cut off by passage of time or the independent action of other parties would be violative of due process, unless caused by culpable or negligent conduct on the part of the taxpayer. Ward v. Landrum, 140 Ga. App. 497, 231 S.E.2d 347, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1533 (1976).

Taxpayer estopped from protesting paving assessments as confiscatory where he fails to timely object. —

Where a city has obtained jurisdiction to make an assessment against an abutting property owner's property for the purpose of paving a street, and all the provisions and requirements of the special act authorizing such assessment have been complied with by the city, and the abutting property owner has been given fair opportunity to object to the street improvement and the assessment against the property therefor, but fails to object and then stands by and sees the street paving improvements made at expense to the city, without entering any objection thereto, the property owner is then estopped to raise the question that the assessment was confiscatory and void in that it deprived the property owner of the property in violation of the due process clause of the state and federal Constitutions, although under the facts of the case this point would have been good and could have been sustained had it been raised in time. City of Waycross v. Harrell, 59 Ga. App. 615, 1 S.E.2d 681, 1939 Ga. App. LEXIS 373 (1939).

Constitutionality of license or occupation tax on food, entertainment, or lodging facilities. —

Act approved March 29, 1937, Ga. L. 1937, p. 624 (now repealed), providing that no person should establish a public dance hall, boxing or wrestling arena, or amusement place, tourist camps, and barbecue stands, for money or profit, outside the limits of incorporated towns or cities of a certain minimum population without first obtaining the permission of the commissioners or other authority in charge of such counties, and conferring authority on them to grant or refuse such permission for such time or under such regulations as they might deem proper for the public good, to levy a license or occupational tax on the same and to provide punishment for a violation of the act was not violative of the due process and equal protection clauses of the state and federal Constitutions, nor of Ga. Const. 1877, Art. III, Sec. I, Para. I (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. I, Para. I), vesting legislative power in the General Assembly. Ingram v. State, 193 Ga. 565, 19 S.E.2d 493, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 447 (1942).

All property is held subject to the police power of the state. The due process clauses are not intended to limit the right of the state to properly exercise the police power in the enhancement of public safety. The police power has never been surrendered by the states and to the exercise of police power, all rights of natural persons and corporations are subject. McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1136 (1966).

Damages cannot be recovered for expenses incurred obeying a police regulation enacted for the common welfare and safety of the public. McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1136 (1966).

Residency requirements for licensing. — It is not an unreasonable exercise of the police power to require that a licensee, whether as an individual or as a member of a partnership, must have been a resident of the county for one year preceding the application for license. There is a reasonable basis for distinction between wholesale and retail dealers, and the residence requirement as to retail dealers is not unfairly discriminatory because it does not apply to wholesale dealers. Bonner v. Maddox, 227 Ga. 598, 182 S.E.2d 122, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 787 (1971).

Benefits conferred by the government cannot be conditioned on the relinquishment of constitutional rights. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Waiver of due process as condition on government privilege or benefits.

— When the government extends privileges or benefits to its citizens, the individual has little or no meaningful choice but to accept the benefits on whatever conditions the government chooses to impose. It would make no sense to allow the government to exact prospective due process waivers as a matter of course. The individual has no real choice but to submit to the waiver, and, if waiver were possible, due process protections would be quickly and thoroughly erased. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

The state cannot condition the granting of even a privilege upon the renunciation of the constitutional right to procedural due process. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Property interest in benefits. — To have a property interest in a benefit, a person clearly must have more than an abstract need or desire for it. The person must have more than a unilateral expectation of it. Sims v. Fox, 505 F.2d 857, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 5439 (5th Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1011, 95 S. Ct. 2415, 44 L. Ed. 2d 678, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 1903 (1975).

Due process challenges to statutory classification in the social welfare area. — If the goals sought by legislation are legitimate, and the classification adopted is rationally related to the achievement of those goals, then such action of Congress is not so arbitrary as to violate the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Fears v. United States, 386 F. Supp. 1223, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14379 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, Esparza-Nevarez v. U. S., 518 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

The test for a statutory classification in the social welfare area challenged under the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5 is the same as the standard under the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, that is, if the classification does not implicate a constitutionally-suspect class or a fundamental constitutional right, the classification is constitutional if it is rationally related to furthering a legitimate state interest. Bussey v. Harris,

Due Process (Cont'd)

611 F.2d 1001, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 20541 (5th Cir. 1980).

Equal protection under such statutory classifications. — A statutory classification in the area of social welfare is consistent with the equal protection clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 5 and U.S. Const., amend. 14, if it is rationally based and free from invidious discrimination. Fears v. United States, 386 F. Supp. 1223, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14379 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, Esparza-Nevarez v. U. S., 518 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Congress is not constitutionally obligated to solve all social problems at one time. It may select one phase of one field and apply a remedy there, neglecting the others. Winningham v. United States Dep't of HUD, 512 F.2d 617, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 14863 (5th Cir. 1975).

In economics and social welfare, a statute is not unconstitutional merely because its classifications are imperfect. Winningham v. United States Dep't of HUD, 512 F.2d 617, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 14863 (5th Cir. 1975).

Underinclusion in statutory classification scheme in social welfare area. — In a statutory classification scheme in the social welfare area, if the classification neither implicates a constitutionally-suspect class nor a fundamental constitutional right, underinclusion that is not irrational does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 5 because equal protection does not require that all evils of the same genus be eradicated or none at all. Bussey v. Harris, 611 F.2d 1001, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 20541 (5th Cir. 1980).

Where an unconstitutional deprivation of a government benefit is alleged, there must be a three-part inquiry to determine: whether the programs involve sufficient government action to invoke federal constitutional protections, whether the private interest involved is a property or liberty interest within the meaning of the due process clause, and after balancing the various interests involved, what procedure is appropriate for the protection of the private interest. Bloodworth v. Oxford Village Townhouses,

Inc., 377 F. Supp. 709, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7817 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Liability under federal civil rights statute. — Because a plaintiff in a civil rights case prosecuted under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging excessive force used in an arrest may receive compensatory damages for such things as physical pain and suffering and mental and emotional anguish, and because such a plaintiff whose constitutional rights are violated is entitled to receive nominal damages even if the plaintiff fails to produce any evidence of compensatory damages, the district court erred in granting judgment to defendant officers as a matter of law. Slicker v. Jackson, 215 F.3d 1225, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 14355 (11th Cir. 2000).

Burden is on the one complaining of a due process violation by a regulatory agency to establish that the agency has acted in an arbitrary and irrational way. A regulation is valid if it has a rational basis. Springdale Convalescent Ctr. v. Mathews, 545 F.2d 943, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10436 (5th Cir. 1977).

Homosexual couple did not have constitutional rights violated when bankruptcy court ruled that 11 U.S.C.A. § 302 did not apply to them as they were not legally married. Bone v. Allen, 186 B.R. 769, 1995 Bankr. LEXIS 1446 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1995).

No right to trial where dispute of material fact not shown. — No constitutional right to a trial exists when after notice and a reasonable opportunity a party fails to make a rule-required demonstration that some dispute of material fact exists which a trial could resolve. Oglesby v. Terminal Transp. Co., 543 F.2d 1111, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 5855 (5th Cir. 1976).

Rules of the Department of Medical Assistance (now Department of Community Health) as to Medicaid abortions. — The rules promulgated by the Department of Medical Assistance (now Department of Community Health) restricting reimbursement to Medicaid enrollees for medically necessary abortions are inconsistent with Title XIX of the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. § 1396 et seq., and because the plaintiff classes will suffer irreparable injury for which there is no adequate legal remedy, the defendants, their agents and employees, must be permanently enjoined from refusing to provide Medicaid reimbursement to the members of the plaintiff classes for the provision of all medically necessary abortions. Doe v. Busbee, 481 F. Supp. 46, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8107 (N.D. Ga. 1979).

The restrictions on reimbursement for abortions contained in this state's rules amount to a denial or reduction of a required service to an otherwise eligible recipient solely because of that eligible recipient's condition, that is, pregnancy, and furthermore, these restrictions are not based on medical necessity or utilization control procedures nor is any contention made by the defendants in this action that the abortions sought by the plaintiffs were not medically necessary or presented utilization control problems; therefore, under 42 C.F.R. § 440.230(c) the Georgia Department of Medical Assistance (now Department of Community Health) must provide reimbursement for these medically necessary abortions. Doe v. Busbee, 481 F. Supp. 46, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8107 (N.D. Ga. 1979).

Protective services in event of medical emergency. — Federal constitutional law does not require a state to provide its citizens with protective services in the event of medical emergencies. Even if the state undertakes to provide protective services in medical emergency services, its failure to render same in a proper manner or in violation of state law does not violate the due process clause of the United States Constitution, unless the state created the medical emergency or the person was in state custody or control at the time of the emergency. Hendon v. DeKalb County, 203 Ga. App. 750, 417 S.E.2d 705, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 617 (1992).

Differences in amounts paid for federal retirement benefits. — The fact that railroad employees pay a greater amount for retirement benefits under a federal pension plan than under federal Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. § 401 et seq., is not a denial of equal protection. Fears v. United States, 386 F. Supp. 1223, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14379 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, Esparza-Nevarez v. U. S., 518 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Tenants in federally-subsidized public housing project are entitled, under U.S. Const., amend. 5, to limited procedural due process safeguards, before a rent increase is approved, because such tenants have a sufficient property interest in low-cost housing to entitle them to some due process protection. Dew v. McLendon Gardens Assocs., 394 F. Supp. 1223, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12302 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Only private associations have the right to obtain a waiver of notice and hearing before depriving a member of a valuable right. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Due process inapplicable without state action. — The constitutional limitations imposed by due process requirements for the taking of property and liberty were not implicated by a public utility's actions as a private actor in terminating plaintiff's employment pursuant to the positive results of a urinalysis drug screening test, as defendant was under no governmental compulsion in administering the test. Parker v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 818 F. Supp. 345, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4975 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

Applicability of due process requirements to private sector. — Constitutional due process requirements are applicable in some situations to persons and organizations in the private sector. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Applicability of due process requirements to private companies. — There can be such an interdependence between the federal government and private companies so as to subject the actions of the private companies to the procedural due process mandated by U.S. Const., amend. 5. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Test is interdependence between governmental and private bodies. — In determining whether the due process mandates are applicable to private bodies, the initial question is whether the state or the federal government has become so involved in the conduct of these otherwise private bodies that their activities are also the activities of these governments and performed under their aegis without the private body necessarily becoming either their instrumentality or agent in a strict sense. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Due Process (Cont'd)

Company level disciplinary hearing. — There is no independent legal right to counsel or other aspects of due process at a company level disciplinary hearing. Clark v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 332 F. Supp. 380, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9091 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Permanent or classified state employee has sufficient property interest in the job to warrant due process protection, even though such protection may not include the right to a pretermination hearing. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Government employee may not be deprived of the property or liberty interest in continued government employment absent due process. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Procedural due process does not entitle a public employee to a full evidentiary hearing prior to discharge. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Post-termination hearing is sufficient to protect interests of a discharged government employee meriting due process protection, whether those interests are in the nature of property or liberty. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Adequate pretermination procedures for public employees need not include a full, evidentiary hearing, provided an employee is protected by a timely and effective post-discharge hearing procedure. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Immediate discharge of employees in exceptional cases. — Adequate pretermination procedures for public employees may contain some provision for exceptional cases warranting an immediate discharge. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Termination of state employees without specific charges and other predetermination protections violates due process. — A statutory and regulatory scheme governing the termination of classified state employees covered by the State Merit System is unconstitutional if it fails to provide a list of specific charges prior to termination and in failing to provide for a pretermination hearing or other meaningful opportunity to protect employees' interests before termination. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Retaliatory dismissal of teachers who speak out regarding school funding, and other issues. — Whether a school system requires additional funds is a matter of legitimate public concern on which the judgment of the school administration, including the school board, cannot, in a society that leaves such questions to popular vote, be taken as conclusive. On such a question free and open debate is vital to informed decision-making by the electorate. Teachers, as a class, are the members of the community most likely to have informed and definite opinions as to how funds allotted to the operation of the schools should be spent. Accordingly, it is essential that they be able to speak out freely on such questions without fear of retaliatory dismissal. Lindsey v. Board of Regents, 607 F.2d 672, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 10128 (5th Cir. 1979).

Student cannot be suspended without a hearing complying with due process, regardless of a purported waiver in the school board's regulations. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Student suspension procedures. — Students facing temporary suspension have interests qualifying for protection of the due process clause, and due process requires, in connection with a suspension of ten days or less, that the student be given oral or written notice of the charges against the student and, if the student denies them, an explanation of the evidence the authorities have and an opportunity to present the student's side of the story. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Involuntary committal to mental hospital. — Due process requires a clear and convincing standard of proof in a civil proceeding to commit an individual to a mental hospital involuntarily. Pitts v. State, 151 Ga. App. 691, 261 S.E.2d 435, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2752 (1979).

Continuing presumption of insanity. — Because the defendant in a hearing for release from a hospital had been examined three separate times to determine mental competency in relation to a criminal trial, and there had been a judicial determination that the defendant was not mentally responsible for the crimes and apparently not competent to stand trial, there existed a continuing presumption of insanity at the time of the release hearing. Pitts v. State, 151 Ga. App. 691, 261 S.E.2d 435, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2752 (1979).

Federal drug sentencing statute constitutional. — The Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 (21 U.S.C. § 841 et seq.) worked no violation of due process in fixing the punishment for cocaine base offenses substantially higher than similar offenses involving other forms of cocaine, as it had a rational purpose for doing so in attempting to reduce greater risks and dangers distinguishing the drugs, and as it was not proven to adversely impact on non-whites. United States v. Mosley, 808 F. Supp. 1572, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20964 (N.D. Ga. 1992), aff'd, 51 F.3d 1050, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 6641 (11th Cir. 1995).

Military tribunals not unconstitutional but jurisdiction narrowly limited. — Although trial by a military tribunal deprives one of trial by jury and other constitutional rights, it is not unconstitutional. However, military jurisdiction is restricted to the narrowest limits consistent with the power granted Congress in U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII. Torres v. Connor, 329 F. Supp. 1025, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10615 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

In the military judicial system, improper command influence violates impartial hearing requirements under U.S. Const., amend. 5. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Fixing of a minimum wage is within the legislative power and is not a denial of due process under U.S. Const., amend. 5 or U.S. Const., amend. 14. United States v. Darby, 312 U.S. 100, 61 S. Ct. 451, 85 L. Ed. 609, 1941 U.S. LEXIS 1222 (1941), overruled in part, Palotai v. University of Maryland College Park, 959 F. Supp. 714, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9930 (D. Minimum wages not unconstitutional. — Establishment of minimum wages by the Fair Labor Standards Act, 29 U.S.C. § 201 et seq., is not arbitrary or capricious or an unreasonable interference with liberty of contract in violation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Morgan v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 32 F. Supp. 617, 1940 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3158 (D. Ga. 1940).

Indemnification for past discrimination. — Although statutes which indemnify women for past discrimination have been approved, more than blanket declaration of this objective is required as justification for gender-based distinctions. With regard to the constitutionality of gender-based classifications, it must be ascertained whether women have in fact been significantly discriminated against in the sphere to which the statute applied a sex-based classification. Crist v. Crist, 632 F.2d 1226, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11355 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 986, 101 S. Ct. 2321, 68 L. Ed. 2d 844, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 2085 (1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 819, 102 S. Utility rates as constitutionally protected property rights. — Utility customers must show they have a legal entitlement to or a vested right in the utility rates being charged before any proposed increase, before they can claim any property rights protected by the United States Constitution. Georgia Power Project v. Georgia Power Co., 409 F. Supp. 332, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15922 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Utility customers have no sufficient property interest in a given utility rate increase to invoke the procedural protections of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Georgia Power Project v. Georgia Power Co., 409 F. Supp. 332, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15922 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

The fact that utility customers have an interest in lower electric rates, an interest which they share with all consumers, does not mean that they have a sufficient property interest in lower rates to invoke constitutional due process protection. Their interest is much too general; that is, their interest is shared by practically everyone. In this sense their interest is somewhat abstract. However, the simple fact that an interest is shared by everyone does not automatically mean that it is not deserving of constitutional protection. Nevertheless most of the United States Supreme Court cases in this area involve either individual claims of entitlement of identifiable classes for whom a benefit was specifically intended. Georgia Power Project v. Georgia Power Co., 409 F. Supp. 332, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15922 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Governmental attack on one's reputation may infringe constitutionally protected liberty. First, governmental degradation of one's standing in one's community may be denial of liberty and, second, governmental communication of derogatory information to employers may be an attack on liberty. Sims v. Fox, 505 F.2d 857, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 5439 (5th Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1011, 95 S. Ct. 2415, 44 L. Ed. 2d 678, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 1903 (1975).

Liberty is not infringed by the mere presence of derogatory information in confidential files. Sims v. Fox, 505 F.2d 857, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 5439 (5th Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1011, 95 S. Ct. 2415, 44 L. Ed. 2d 678, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 1903 (1975).

Scheme for regulating practice of dentistry not unconstitutional. — The contention that former Code 1933, §§ 84-701 and 84-702 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 43-11-2 and 43-11-17) are unconstitutional because they violate the due process clauses of the Constitution of the United States and the privileges and immunities clauses thereof, as set forth in U.S. Const., amends. 5 and 14 and likewise violates the due process clause of the Constitution of Georgia is without merit. Hortman v. Yarbrough, 214 Ga. 693, 107 S.E.2d 202, 1959 Ga. LEXIS 312 (1959).

Classification of substance as narcotic, where evidence exists to the contrary. — The classification of cocaine by the General Assembly as a narcotic drug, when there is scientific evidence to the contrary, does not violate the due process and equal protection clauses of the United States and Georgia Constitutions. Robinson v. State, 244 Ga. 15, 257 S.E.2d 523, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1082 (1979).

Due process does not bar taping of incident by police. — There is no due process bar under U.S. Const., amend. 5 to conviction because of electronic taping of an incident by police officers who anticipated the offense. Cross v. Georgia, 581 F.2d 102, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 8747 (5th Cir. 1978).

Right to wear one's hair as one sees fit has not been found to be within the periphery of any of the specific constitutional rights. Ashley v. City of Macon, 377 F. Supp. 540, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12602 (M.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 505 F.2d 868, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16769 (5th Cir. 1975).

Act which abrogates requirements that obligations be paid in gold is not unconstitutional. — 31 U.S.C. § 463, providing for discharge, by payment in legal tender, of obligations for payment in gold or any particular coin or currency, or in money of the United States measured thereby, of the then standard weight and fineness, is not unconstitutional as in violation of U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, as the exercise of a power not delegated to the Congress, nor in violation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5 or U.S. Const., amend. 10. Smith v. Bukofzer, 180 Ga. 585, 180 S.E. 358, 1935 Ga. LEXIS 493 (1935).

Decision by the United States Postal Service to move its postal operations to a different building does not deprive any class of plaintiffs of property or liberty, and, consequently, notice and hearing are not constitutionally mandated. NAACP v. United States Postal Serv., 398 F. Supp. 562, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11572 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Section 717 of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C., § 2000e-16, is the exclusive, preemptive, administrative, and judicial remedy for the redress of federal employment discrimination, but is not a remedy for the denial of due process not based on race (or any of the other proscribed classes). Grier v. Headquarters, United States Army Forces Command, 574 F. Supp. 183, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11510 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

United States Constitution does not create property interests; rather, they are created and their dimensions are defined by existing rules or understandings that stem from an independent source such as state law. Winkler v. County of DeKalb, 648 F.2d 411, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 12139 (5th Cir. 1981).

Mutually recognized entitlement will receive constitutional protection, although a unilateral expectation of a benefit does not rise to the level of a protected interest. Winkler v. County of DeKalb, 648 F.2d 411, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 12139 (5th Cir. 1981).

There is no constitutionally protected right to government employment. Favors v. Ruckelshaus, 569 F. Supp. 363, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15947 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Government employer may withhold promotion, require performance of added duties. — A government agency does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 5 by: (1) withholding a promotion; or (2) requiring an employee to perform certain duties without added compensation. Favors v. Ruckelshaus, 569 F. Supp. 363, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15947 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Discharge of FBI agent. — Discharged Federal Bureau of Investigation agent did not have a protectable property right in the agent's job. Painter v. FBI, 537 F. Supp. 232, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11742 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 694 F.2d 255, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 23198 (11th Cir. 1982).

No property right in social security. — Recipients have no constitutionally protected property interest against a direct or an indirect diminution by Congress of their old age, survivors, and disability benefits under the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. § 301 et seq. Oliver v. Ledbetter, 821 F.2d 1507, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 8197 (11th Cir. 1987).

Social security benefits of child affecting sibling's right to welfare not unconstitutional. — The regulations and policy requiring that old age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits received by children must be included in calculating their coresident siblings' eligibility for assistance under the aid to families with dependent children program do not deny them substantive due process by imposing a financial burden on a sibling who bears no financial responsibility for brothers or sisters, nor by depriving the sibling of property to which the sibling is entitled, without just compensation in violation of the fifth and fourteenth amendments, nor are the siblings deprived of procedural due process when a sibling is denied property to which the sibling is legally entitled without a hearing. *Oliver v. As such, "clear and convincing evidence," not "legal preponderance," required to authorize sterilization. — The seriousness of an individual's interest at stake in a state initiated sterilization proceeding is such that due process requires "clear and convincing evidence" to authorize the sterilization of an individual. The standard of a "legal preponderance" set by former O.C.G.A. § 31-20-

Deportable aliens. — Prior to the rendering of a final order of removal, deportable aliens enjoy greater constitutional procedural due process rights than do aliens who are first seeking entry to this country. Sengchanh v. Lanier, 89 F. Supp. 2d 1356, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7272 (N.D. Ga. 2000).

A deportable alien's detention cannot be excessive and such a determination requires a fact specific analysis, including consideration of the length of the alien's likely detention, the likelihood of deportation, the potential length of future detention, the likelihood of flight, and the danger to the community posed by the alien if he or she is released. Sengchanh v. Lanier, 89 F. Supp. 2d 1356, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7272 (N.D. Ga. 2000).

Failure to notify of certification of class action. — Court's failure to notify plaintiffs with claims pending against the alleged tortfeasor in several different states, of the certification of a mandatory class in a mass tort case hearing, violated due process. In re Temple, 851 F.2d 1269, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 10725 (11th Cir. 1988).

Lack of discretion in hearing officer's powers not denial of due process. — Licensee was not denied due process and equal protection in the Department of Public Safety hearing simply because the hearing officer had no authority or discretion to reinstate an habitual violator. Hardison v. Booker, 179 Ga. App. 693, 347 S.E.2d 681, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2011 (1986).

Intimidation tactics used by police. — Even though interrogating police officers threatened to charge a witness with murder, threatened to lynch him, put words in the witness' mouth, and told the witness that the witness was headed for eternal damnation, and subjected another witness to similar treatment, there was no evidence of physical abuse or threats or improper inducements or promises in exchange for a statement implicating the defendant, and police misconduct was not so egregious as to constitute a violation of defendant's due process rights. Wilcox v. Ford, 813 F.2d 1140, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 4420 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 925, 108 S. Ct. 287, 98 L. Ed. 2d 247, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 4561 (1987).

Police use of gunfire against suspect armed with knife was not constitutionally excessive, because the suspect had just stabbed several people and refused to respond to the officers' demands to surrender. O'Neal v. DeKalb County, 850 F.2d 653, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 9980 (11th Cir. 1988).

White male who had been discriminated against in an application for the directorship of a city cyclorama had no substantive due process claims against the city because no property interest in obtaining city positions was created by the city code providing for appointment without regard to political affiliation. Walters v. City of Atlanta, 803 F.2d 1135, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 33404 (11th Cir. 1986).

At-will employee denied due process. — Because a terminated university registrar was an at-will employee, the registrar had no property interest in the registrar's job and no due process claim. Moreover, by appealing directly to an administrative law judge, the registrar was afforded a full and fair hearing, fulfilling state and federal due process requirements. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga. v. Hogan, 298 Ga. App. 454, 680 S.E.2d 518, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 692 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C2030, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 57 (Ga. Jan. 24, 2011).

Unlawful intrusion on lawful powers of court. — Regulations purporting to excuse compliance with a judgment and order of the federal district court which is "subject to review . . . by a higher reviewing authority" was invalid insofar as it might conflict with the order in the case or affect the jurisdiction of the court to fashion a remedy in the matter. Charter Medical Corp. v. Heckler, 604 F. Supp. 638, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21462 (M.D. Ga. 1985).

Utilize administrative arena to assert claim not federal courts. — A claim by federally employed pilots against their supervisors in their individual capacities for alleged deprivation of property — revocation of their pilot certificates — without due process failed, for the reason that the pilots had available to them administrative arenas in which to assert their claims. Wells v. FAA, 755 F.2d 804, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28397 (11th Cir. 1985).

Disbarment proper following sufficient notice. — Attorney was properly served with notice and afforded due process of law where at least six notices were placed in the attorney's post office box as the last address that the attorney listed with the membership department of the State Bar after the attorney's failure to inform the State Bar of the attorney's new address. In re Bishop, 264 Ga. 241, 442 S.E.2d 734, 1994 Ga. Discipline of attorney under rule governing signing of papers. — Attorneys and clients facing possible discipline under Fed. R. Civ. P. 11, regarding signing of pleadings, motions, and other papers, have interests qualifying for protection under the due process clause of the fifth amendment, and procedural due process requires notice and an opportunity to be heard before any governmental deprivation of a property interest. Donaldson v. Clark, 819 F.2d 1551, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 7981 (11th Cir. 1987), overruled in part, *Mars Steel Corp. v. Fla. Feb. 21, 2016).

Procedure for imposing monetary sanction under civil procedure rule. — Nothing in the text of Fed. R. Civ. P. Rule 11, regarding signing of pleadings, motions, and other papers, or in the Advisory Committee note, indicates that due process requires a court to follow the procedures called for by Fed. R. Crim. P. Rule 42(b) for criminal contempt proceedings before it can impose a monetary sanction pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 11. Donaldson v. Clark, 819 F.2d 1551, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 7981 (11th Cir. 1987), overruled in part, *Mars Steel Corp. v. Claims against municipalities. — Since right to sue municipality is statutory, the Legislature may attach notice-of-claim requirement as precondition to maintenance of such suit. Shoemaker v. Aldmor Mgt., Inc., 249 Ga. 430, 291 S.E.2d 549, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 855 (1982).

Standing. — It is not necessary that a party first expose oneself to actual arrest or prosecution to be entitled to challenge a statute that the party claims deters the exercise of the party's constitutional rights. American Booksellers Ass'n v. McAuliffe, 533 F. Supp. 50, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17134 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Surviving relatives have no constitutionally protected due process right in a decedent's body. Georgia Lions Eye Bank, Inc. v. Lavant, 255 Ga. 60, 335 S.E.2d 127, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 934 (1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1084, 106 S. Ct. 1464, 89 L. Ed. 2d 721, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 906 (1986).

License revocation. — Pharmacist whose license had been properly revoked had no protectable property right in reinstatement of that license. Hicks v. Georgia State Bd. of Pharmacy, 553 F. Supp. 314, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16537 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Doctor's staff privileges may be suspended before hearing. — Doctor was not denied due process when the doctor's hospital staff privileges were suspended prior to a hearing since the protection of human health and life is a valid governmental and medical interest permitting summary action preceding a hearing. Richards v. Emanuel County Hosp. Auth., 603 F. Supp. 81, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21753 (S.D. Ga. 1984).

Question of doctor's competency may be referred to panel of doctors. — Hospital's offer to submit the question of doctor's competence to serve on the medical staff to a panel of three doctors not on the staff did not violate due process requirements, even assuming that the procedure was not part of the bylaws of the hospital. Richards v. Emanuel County Hosp. Auth., 603 F. Supp. 81, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21753 (S.D. Ga. 1984).

Property interest. — While absence of a contractual right to employment does not preclude the existence of a property interest, plaintiff must show a mutually recognized entitlement, as opposed to a unilateral expectation of a benefit, to establish the existence of a property interest. Durham v. Jones, 698 F.2d 1179, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 30314 (11th Cir. 1983).

Tickets for traffic violations. — It is neither feasible nor constitutionally mandated for a city to provide notice and an opportunity to be heard prior to ticketing an illegally parked car. Armstrong v. Mayor of Savannah, 250 Ga. 121, 296 S.E.2d 690, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1222 (1982).

Motorcycle helmet law. — O.C.G.A. § 40-6-315 does not violate due process on grounds that a motorcyclist cannot determine whether the motorcyclist is meeting the headgear requirements of the statute. ABATE of Ga., Inc. v. Georgia, 137 F. Supp. 2d 1349, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4161 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 264 F.3d 1315, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 20378 (11th Cir. 2001).

The motorcycle helmet law, O.C.G.A. § 40-6-315, does not require that the Georgia Board of Public Safety issue a list approving specific types of headgear and, therefore, the failure of the board to publish a list of approved headgear and eye-protective devices did not violate the plaintiff's rights under the first, fifth, and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. ABATE of Ga., Inc. v. Georgia, 264 F.3d 1315, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 20378 (11th Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 536 U.S. 924, 122 S. Ct. 2592, 153 L. Ed. 2d 781, 2002 U.S. LEXIS 4502 (2002).

Maritime attachment procedures. — In relation to the issuance of a writ of attachment by a federal court against bankers and stores located aboard a vessel, procedural due process did not require the posting of a preattachment bond, nor a preattachment ex parte hearing. A prompt post-garnishment hearing before a judge provided the maritime debtor with the procedure the debtor was due. Schiffahrtsgesellschaft Leonhardt & Co. v. A. Bottacchi S.A. de Navegacion, 773 F.2d 1528, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 21852 (11th Cir. 1985).

Right to travel is a privilege of national citizenship, and an aspect of liberty that is protected by the due process clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 5 and U.S. Const., amend. 14. Jones v. Helms, 452 U.S. 412, 101 S. Ct. 2434, 69 L. Ed. 2d 118, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 124 (1981).

Warrantless arrest upon reasonable information that accused charged with serious crime constitutionally justified. — Section 17-13-34, which authorizes a warrantless arrest by officers in this state upon reasonable information that an accused is charged in the courts of a state with a crime punishable by death or imprisonment for more than a year, is justified under the fourth, fifth, and fourteenth amendments, in that it is based upon a standard that comports with the constitutional standard of probable cause as set forth in Beck v. Ohio, 1964 U.S. LEXIS 151, 379 U.S. 89, 85 S. Ct. 223, 13 L. Ed. 2d 142, 3 Ohio Misc. 71, 31 Ohio Op. 2d 80 (1964); Ledesma v. State, 251 Ga. 487, 306 S.E.2d 629, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 797 (1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1069, 104 S. Ct. 975, 79 L. Ed. 2d 213, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 771 (1984).

Person who has committed an offense against the laws of Georgia may be stopped at its borders and temporarily deprived of the freedom to travel elsewhere within or without the state. Jones v. Helms, 452 U.S. 412, 101 S. Ct. 2434, 69 L. Ed. 2d 118, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 124 (1981).

Permissive or rebuttable presumption that contraband found in a house belongs to the husband by virtue of the husband's statutory status as head of the household cannot withstand due-process scrutiny. Knighton v. State, 248 Ga. 199, 282 S.E.2d 102, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 960 (1981).

Government involvement in criminal schemes, where outrageous, offends due process, but to amount to a constitutional violation, the law enforcement techniques must be so outrageous that they are fundamentally unfair and shocking to the universal sense of justice, mandated by the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment. United States v. Mulherin, 710 F.2d 731, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25429 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 964, 104 S. Ct. 402, 78 L.

Ed. 2d 343, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 2311 (1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1034, 104 S. Ct. 1305, 79 L. Ed. 2d 703, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 1214 (1984); 465 U.S. 1034, 104 S. Ct. 1305, 79 L. Ed. 2d 703 (1984).

Outrageous government conduct in course of investigation. — The government did not employ unconscionable conduct in the course of its investigation in violation of the defendant's rights under the due process clause by exploiting the defendant's severe financial problems and inducing the defendant to engage in fraudulent schemes despite the defendant's repeated insistence on legitimate business practices where the stipulated facts demonstrated not only that defendant had a predisposition to engage in the illegal activity but that the defendant played a significant role in the enterprise as well. United States v. Puett, 735 F.2d 1331, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 20640 (11th Cir. 1984).

Constitutional for informant to suggest illegal activity where defendant obtains necessary equipment. — Government conduct falls far short of a due process violation if, although a confidential government informant suggests an illegal activity and gives advice, it is the defendant who obtains the necessary equipment and supplies for the activity. United States v. Mulherin, 710 F.2d 731, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25429 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 964, 104 S. Ct. 402, 78 L. Ed. 2d 343, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 2311 (1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1034, 104 S. Uncertain time of commencement of sentence. — Sentences given to two defendants, which were to be consecutive to their release from detention as illegal aliens, were not illegal despite the uncertainty as to when the exact date the sentences were to begin. United States v. Buide-Gomez, 744 F.2d 781, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 17511 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1059, 105 S. Ct. 1774, 84 L. Ed. 2d 833, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 1493 (1985).

but not on location of permissible venues. Clement v. Pehar, 575 F. Supp. 436, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14806 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Fifth amendment imposes limitations upon obtaining personal jurisdiction in federal question case. — To apply the test of amenability to personal jurisdiction in a federal question case, the test of constitutionality, the appropriate inquiry lies with the due process of law clause of the fifth amendment. While the limitations imposed in the fifth amendment are similar to those imposed upon the state courts under the fourteenth amendment, they are not necessarily identical. Vest v. Waring, 565 F. Supp. 674, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16589 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Federal court may exercise in personam jurisdiction where conspiracy arose within Georgia. — In an action under the federal antitrust laws, it is sufficient for a federal court in Georgia to find, for purposes of exercising in personam jurisdiction over nonresident defendants, that if a conspiracy did or does exist, it appears to have had its genesis at a meeting occurring within the state of Georgia. Vest v. Waring, 565 F. Supp. 674, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16589 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Court approved notice not required in class action where individual opts into action. — While court approved notice to potential plaintiffs is necessary in a class action since class members will be bound by any judgment unless they opt out of the action, court involvement was not required in an action in which the only way an individual would be bound was if he or she affirmatively chose to opt into the action. Goerke v. Commercial Contractors & Supply Co., 600 F. Supp. 1155, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21446 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Notice of levy given to a savings and loan association is sufficient to apprise persons claiming an interest in the account of a levy on that account under 26 U.S.C. §§ 6532(c) and 7426(a). Douglas v. United States, 562 F. Supp.

593, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19948 (S.D. Ga. 1983).

IRS is under no duty, constitutional or otherwise, to notify every person claiming an interest in property levied upon. Douglas v. United States, 562 F. Supp. 593, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19948 (S.D. Ga. 1983).

Government exclusion of independent journalists from prisons upheld.

— Given a prison's obvious need to maintain security and order, and the need for administrative ease in implementing visitor regulations, the federal government had a rational basis for defining "representatives of the news media" so as to exclude independent journalists not affiliated with a federally recognized and licensed media organization from conducting interviews with prisoners. Jersawitz v. Hanberry, 610 F. Supp. 535, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20300 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 783 F.2d 1532, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22825 (11th Cir. 1986).

Zoning. — Failure to scrutinize a rezoning application in light of the character of the land in question and the impact of the zoning decision upon the property owner's rights amounts to a denial of due process. Sellars v. Cherokee County, 254 Ga. 496, 330 S.E.2d 882, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 807 (1985).

Peanut farmers did not have protected property interest in peanut quota allotments under the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981, 7 U.S.C. § 1351 et seq., 9 U.S.C. § 9097 et seq., and other provisions. Under the act, which created and defined quota rights, the farmers were entitled to their 1981 quota allotments as adjusted by the 1984 regulations of the secretary of agriculture, which amounted to a nominal allotment or none at all. Callaway v. Block, 763 F.2d 1283, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30698 (11th Cir. 1985).

Due process clause inhibits government, not private persons. — The provisions of the federal due process clause are inhibitions upon the power of government and its agencies rather than upon the freedom of action of private persons. DeLaigle v. Federal Land Bank, 568 F. Supp. 1432, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14993 (S.D. Ga. 1983).

Hospital's actions not federal or state action subject to due process. —

Private, operated-for-profit hospital's decision to change bylaws so as to allow only doctors eligible for membership in the American Medical and Dental Associations (AMA and ADA) to obtain medical staff privileges and thus denying defendants continued staff privileges because they were doctors of podiatric medicine ineligible for membership in the AMA or ADA was neither state nor federal action subject to scrutiny under the due process or equal protection clauses of the federal Constitution merely because the hospital derived 55 percent of its income from federal Medicaid and Medicare funds, was licensed by the state and was regulated as a certified provider under the medicare and Medicaid programs. Todd v. Physicians & Surgeons Community Hosp., 165 Ga. App. 656, 302 S.E.2d 378, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3175 (1983).

Federal land bank private corporation, not government agency. — The heavy regulation of federal land banks does not transform these entities into governmental agencies. Therefore, a federal land bank is a private corporation without sufficient governmental involvement to support a cause of action under the federal due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5. DeLaigle v. Federal Land Bank, 568 F. Supp. 1432, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14993 (S.D. Ga. 1983).

Statute of limitations of Securities Exchange Act. — Federal Securities Exchange Act statute, 15 U.S.C. § 78u-5, specifying that the limitation period for certain civil actions commenced on or before June 19, 1991 shall be the limitation period provided by the laws applicable in the jurisdiction, including principles of retroactivity, as such laws existed on June 19, 1991, and reinstating certain dismissed actions, did not violate due process, even though it had an effect on pending litigation, nor did it violate equal protection since it did not affect a fundamental right or discriminate on the basis of a suspect classification and was rationally related to furthering its purpose of reinstating those causes of action that were timely when filed but which had been subsequently rendered untimely by a Supreme Court decision. Henderson v. Scientific-Atlanta, Inc., 971 F.2d 1567, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 21098 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 828, 114 S. Ct. 95, 126 L. Ed. 2d 62, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 5146 (1993).

Sufficiency of indictment. — Defendant could not have been convicted of aggravated assault based on a codefendant's beating of the victim because the defendant's indictment gave defendant no notice that defendant could be charged with and convicted of aggravated assault of the victim based on any method other than with the shotgun with which defendant shot the victim after the codefendant beat the victim. Petty v. Smith, 279 Ga. 273, 612 S.E.2d 276, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 303 (2005).

2. Vagueness and Other Issues with Statutes

Statute should sufficiently warn of proscribed conduct. — So as not to be vague, indefinite, and uncertain so that U.S. Const., amend. 5 is violated, the language of the statute should convey sufficiently definite warning as to the proscribed conduct when measured by common understanding and practices. United States v. Fabro, Inc., 206 F. Supp. 523, 1962 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3766 (M.D. Ga. 1962).

Language of a statute must convey a sufficiently definite warning as to the proscribed conduct when measured by common understanding and practices. Johnson v. State, 246 Ga. 126, 269 S.E.2d 18, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 987 (1980).

Laws must give fair warning of what is proscribed, provide standards to see that they are not arbitrarily and discriminatorily applied, and be explicit enough to avoid a chilling effect. United States v. Irving, 509 F.2d 1325, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 14271 (5th Cir. 1975).

Void for vagueness. — It is a basic principle of due process that an enactment is void for vagueness if its prohibitions are not clearly defined. United States v. Irving, 509 F.2d 1325, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 14271 (5th Cir. 1975).

Vagueness challenges to statutes not involving first amendment. — Vagueness challenges to statutes which do not involve freedoms under U.S. Const.,

amend. 1, must be examined in light of facts of the case at hand. Hardison v. Shepard, 246 Ga. 196, 269 S.E.2d 458, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1043 (1980); State v. Hudson, 247 Ga. 36, 273 S.E.2d 616, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 601 (1981).

If a statute that does not involve freedoms under U.S. Const., amend. 1, is alleged to violate due process and equal protection, and if, from the record, it is impossible to determine the nature of the conduct giving rise to the charge under the statute, such statute cannot be declared void for vagueness on its face. State v. Hudson, 247 Ga. 36, 273 S.E.2d 616, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 601 (1981).

Application of due process with respect to vagueness and uncertainty is not applied as strictly to civil statutes as to those penal in nature. The rule is that a statute may be too vague and uncertain to be capable of enforcement as a penal statute and yet may be sufficiently certain to set forth a rule of civil conduct. Campbell v. J.D. Jewell, Inc., 221 Ga. 543, 145 S.E.2d 569, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1965).

Certainty and definiteness of statutes penal in nature. — Even in statutes penal in nature, due process only requires that they be of such certainty and definiteness as would enable a person of ordinary intelligence to comprehend that the particular act the person proposes to do is forbidden by the statute. Campbell v. J.D. Jewell, Inc., 221 Ga. 543, 145 S.E.2d 569, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1965).

Doctrine of vagueness is anchored in due process clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 5 and U.S. Const., amend. 14. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 515 F. Supp. 176, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16808 (N.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 673 F.2d 1225, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19863 (11th Cir. 1982).

Purpose of striking down statutes which are "vague" is to prevent the arbitrary enforcement of laws that fail to give officials or the public any notice of what is prohibited. American Booksellers Ass'n v. McAuliffe, 533 F. Supp. 50, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17134 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Statutes should be construed as constitutional whenever possible; in certain situations, for example, the court may imply a missing mens rea element in a statute to give the statute constitutional viability. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 515 F. Supp. 176, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16808 (N.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 673 F.2d 1225, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19863 (11th Cir. 1982).

Certain amount of vagueness must be tolerated in law-making due to inherent imprecision in language; all that due process requires is that the law give sufficient warning to enable a person to conform his or her conduct in accordance with the law and to guard against discriminatory enforcement. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 515 F. Supp. 176, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16808 (N.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 673 F.2d 1225, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19863 (11th Cir. 1982).

Reliance on case law and regulations not tracking statute. — The fact that an insurer did not comply with a statutory provision and relied on precedent construing other statutes and on regulations that did not track with the statute did not make O.C.G.A. § 33-34-5 (repealed), relating to optional motor vehicle insurance coverage, unconstitutionally vague. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Bates, 542 F. Supp. 807, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13187 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Criminal statutes. — A criminal statute is not unconstitutionally vague if it defines the criminal offense with sufficient definiteness that ordinary people can understand what conduct is prohibited and in a manner that does not encourage arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement. Due process is violated, however, when persons of ordinary intelligence must guess at a statute's meaning. United States v. Moody, 977 F.2d 1420, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 25576 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 944, 113 S. Ct. 1348, 122 L. Ed. 2d 730, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 1620 (1993).

Pay-day lender statutes. — The trial court did not err in rejecting both the defendants' equal protection and vagueness challenges to O.C.G.A. § 16-17-1 et seq., after they were charged with violating O.C.G.A. § 16-17-2, as both the defendants, as in-state lenders, were not similarly situated with out-of-state banks designated in O.C.G.A. § 16-17-2(a)(3), and hence were subject to state regulation restricting high interest rates on loans, whereas the out-of-state banks were not; the Georgia legislature had a rational basis for creating a class based on those in-state payday lenders who were subject to state regulation, and moreover the prohibition against payday loans in whatever form transacted, was sufficiently definite to satisfy due process standards. Glenn v. State, 282 Ga. 27, 644 S.E.2d 826, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 346 (2007).

Unconstitutionality of in personam forfeiture provision. — In personam forfeiture provision of the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-14-7(m) provides for criminal in personam forfeiture prior to indictment or conviction, despite the labeling of such a proceeding by the Georgia legislature as being civil in nature and, because an in personam forfeiture defendant must accordingly be afforded all of the constitutional safeguards due a criminal defendant, Georgia's civil procedure rules, which § 16-14-7(m) expressly utilizes, are not adequate to protect an in personam forfeiture defendant's constitutional right. Therefore, § 16-14-7(m) is unconstitutional because the law deprives in personam forfeiture defendants of the safeguards of criminal procedure guaranteed by the United States and Georgia Constitutions. Cisco v. State, 285 Ga. 656, 680 S.E.2d 831, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 317 (2009).

Penal statute must be sufficiently explicit to inform those who are subject to it as to what conduct will render them liable to its penalties. If persons of common intelligence must guess at the meaning of a statute, the statute violates due process of law. United States v. Hawes, 529 F.2d 472, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 12134 (5th Cir. 1976).

Flag burning falls within the range of acts proscribed by Code 1933, § 26-2803 (see O.C.G.A. § 50-3-9) and as defendants cannot say they did not have notice that their acts were in violation of the law it is not in violation of the due process provision of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Monroe v. State, 250 Ga. 30, 295 S.E.2d 512, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1217 (1982).

Absent some qualification on "bias or prejudice," O.C.G.A. § 17-10-17 is left so vague that persons of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application and, thus, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-17 is too vague to justify the imposition of enhanced criminal punishment for its violation; also, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-17 may not be upheld because it impermissibly delegates basic policy matters to policemen, judges, and juries for resolution on an ad hoc and subjective basis, with the attendant dangers of arbitrary and discriminatory applications; therefore, the sentence enhancement that defendants selected their victims because of racial bias and prejudice violated defendants' due process rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1, 5, 8, and 14 and the corresponding state constitutional provisions and accordingly defendants' sentence enhancements were reversed. Botts v. State, 278 Ga. 538, 604 S.E.2d 512, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 946 (2004).

New criminal statutes that punish a novel offense that has no established bounds are particularly susceptible to void for vagueness challenge. High Oil Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 515 F. Supp. 176, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16808 (N.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 673 F.2d 1225, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19863 (11th Cir. 1982).

Due process has two requirements: (1) laws must provide fair notice to persons of ordinary intelligence of the precise conduct proscribed; and (2) laws must provide standards and guidance to law enforcement officers, judges, and juries, to prevent arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement. High Oil Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 515 F. Supp. 176, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16808 (N.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 673 F.2d 1225, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19863 (11th Cir. 1982).

Law is void on its face if it is so vague that persons of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, as a matter of due process. Purple Onion, Inc. v. Jackson, 511 F. Supp. 1207, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11396 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Due Process (Cont'd)2. Vagueness and Other Issues with Statutes (Cont'd)

Term “substantial assistance” in O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(e)(2), reducing sentences for those convicted of drug trafficking, is not too vague for persons of ordinary intelligence to understand. Brugman v. State, 255 Ga. 407, 339 S.E.2d 244, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 533 (1986).

Statutory definition of “mentally ill” sufficient. — While the definition of “mentally ill” in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 is not a model of specificity, the definition is sufficient to inform the jury of the meaning of a verdict of guilty but mentally ill and is not so vague as to violate due process. Cooper v. State, 253 Ga. 736, 325 S.E.2d 137, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 560 (1985).

Sodomy statute. — Claim of defendant that state sodomy statute violates due process and equal protection because it is selectively enforced against unmarried persons, and because “victims” are not prosecuted for engaging in the consensual conduct, failed where defendant did not establish the actual manner of enforcement. King v. State, 265 Ga. 440, 458 S.E.2d 98, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 365 (1995), overruled in part, Powell v. State, 270 Ga. 327, 510 S.E.2d 18, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 1148 (1998).

Loitering statute not void for vagueness. — The prohibition of loitering and prowling in the total context of O.C.G.A. § 16-11-36 is not void for vagueness insofar as it is limited to activity that amounts to a threat to the safety of persons or property. Bell v. State, 252 Ga. 267, 313 S.E.2d 678, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 671 (1984).

Ordinance revoking license for drug or alcohol law violation not void. — City ordinance that includes as grounds for revocation of a license the violation of federal, state, or local law relating to drugs or alcoholic beverages was not unconstitutional for vagueness. Bryant v. Mayor, 252 Ga. 76, 311 S.E.2d 174, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 576 (1984).

Teaching contract renewal denied. — Fact that law providing grounds for terminating or suspending teachers’ or principals’ contracts could be construed as excluding some crimes as a basis for non-renewal but not others does not in and of itself render it vague or overbroad, so as to deprive plaintiff whose contract was not renewed, due to the plaintiff’s convictions for submitting false documents to the IRS, of due process. Logan v. Warren County Bd. of Educ., 549 F. Supp. 145, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15240 (S.D. Ga. 1982).

Business license tax. — A catchall category of “agent or agency not specifically mentioned” following a list of specifically covered occupations was sufficient description to include the occupation of using a talking cat to obtain economic benefits on the streets of the city. Miles v. City Council, 551 F. Supp. 349, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15801 (S.D. Ga. 1982), aff’d, 710 F.2d 1542, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25215 (11th Cir. 1983).

“Place of amusement” not vague and indefinite. — The words “place of amusement” in former act forbidding establishment of certain businesses outside municipal limits without obtaining a license from municipal authorities was not so vague and indefinite that the same could not be made the basis of a criminal prosecution. Ingram v. State, 193 Ga. 565, 19 S.E.2d 493, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 447 (1942).

Federal drug sentencing statute not unconstitutionally vague. — The federal Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1986 (21 U.S.C. § 841 et seq.) is not unconstitutionally vague — the term “cocaine base” encompasses “crack cocaine” and the statute gives a person of ordinary intelligence a reasonable opportunity to know what is prohibited. United States v. Mosley, 808 F. Supp. 1572, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20964 (N.D. Ga. 1992), aff’d, 51 F.3d 1050, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 6641 (11th Cir. 1995).

Marijuana statute did not create mandatory presumption of guilt. — O.C.G.A. § 16-13-2(b) did not violate due process by creating a mandatory presumption of guilt. The court interpreted it, as it had before, to render it valid and to carry out the legislative intent of establishing that possession of an ounce or less of marijuana was a misdemeanor. In the Interest of D.H., 285

Ga. 51, 673 S.E.2d 191, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 3 (2009).

Trial court did not err in granting a city summary judgment in a lessee's declaratory judgment action seeking an order declaring that City of Forest Park, Ga., Ordinance § 9-8-45 was unconstitutional because the ordinance was sufficiently definite so that a person of ordinary intelligence need not guess at its meaning; although the lessee contended that the phrase "without limitation of the generality of the foregoing" opened the definition of "public sidewalk" to include any space that the city later wished to assert fell under the ordinance, the specification of parking spaces and other areas intended for public travel did not permit the interpretation the lessee contended. Braley v. City of Forest Park, 286 Ga. 760, 692 S.E.2d 595, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 268 (2010).

Municipal beer license ordinance.

— Municipal beer license ordinance, prohibiting the granting of beer or wine licenses to businesses located within 100 yards of a church, violated plaintiff's due process rights because it gave no notice that a person's past misdemeanor convictions could be used as a basis for denial, and because under the specific facts of the case, its language was distorted to apply to the run-down remnants of a building, not a functioning church. Gates v. Chadwick, 812 F. Supp. 1233, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1657 (M.D. Ga. 1993).

Loitering ordinance void for vagueness. — Ordinance on loitering or prowling that followed the language of O.C.G.A. § 16-11-36, but added "circumstances which cause a justifiable and reasonable alarm or immediate concern that such person is involved in unlawful drug activity" was void for vagueness. Johnson v. Athens-Clarke County, 272 Ga. 384, 529 S.E.2d 613, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 383 (2000).

Statute relating to prescription forms signed in blank not unconstitutionally vague as applied. — O.C.G.A. § 16-13-41(h) was not unconstitutionally vague as applied to a defendant, a physician, who was charged with violating O.C.G.A. § 16-13-42(a)(1) by improperly providing 33 signed prescription forms in blank to the defendant's nurse practitioner in violation of § 16-13-41(h) as that provision broadly included possession of a document by any person other than the one whose signature appeared thereon; thus, a physician's staff member could not be excluded. Raber v. State, 285 Ga. 251, 674 S.E.2d 884, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 95 (2009).

Registration of address change by convicted sex offender. — Trial court did not err in revoking a convicted sexual offender's probation for failing to register an address change when the offender moved into a motel because O.C.G.A. § 42-1-12 was not unconstitutionally vague in failing to define the term "temporary residence". The offender did not find the term "temporary residence" vague since the offender had reported changes of address at least four times, and under common understanding of the term, "temporary residence" was not unconstitutionally vague; nor does the statute's use of the term "temporary residence" in any way authorize and encourage arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement, but rather, § 42-1-12(a)(16) sets forth in considerable detail the information that must be reported by a sexual offender, and nothing in it encourages arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement. Dunn v. State, 286 Ga. 238, 686 S.E.2d 772, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 736 (2009).

Registration requirements for homeless sex offenders unconstitutionally vague. — Address registration requirement of O.C.G.A. § 42-1-12 is unconstitutional under the due process clause of the United States and Georgia constitutions on vagueness grounds as applied to homeless sex offenders who possess no street or route address for their residence. Santos v. State, 284 Ga. 514, 668 S.E.2d 676, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 849 (2008).

O.C.G.A. § 40-6-120 was unconstitutionally vague. — In light of the conflict in the language of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-120(a)(2), a person of common intelligence could not determine with reasonable definiteness that the statute prohibits the making of a left turn into the right lane of a multi-lane roadway. Accordingly, § 40-6-120(a)(2) is too vague to be enforced against a driver of a vehicle making a left turn into a multi-lane roadway that lacks official traffic-control devices directing the driver into which lane to turn and is, therefore, unconstitutional under the due process clauses of the Georgia and United States Constitutions. McNair v. State, 285 Ga. 514, 678 S.E.2d 69, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 298 (2009).

3. Pretrial Criminal Proceedings

Preaccusation delay cases. — Due process considerations under U.S. Const., amend. 5 govern preaccusation delay cases. United States v. Blevins, 593 F.2d 646, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15260 (5th Cir. 1979).

Trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment on the ground that the more than 11-year delay between the rape and murder in November 2009 and defendant's arrest in March 2020 violated his right to due process because the record did not indicate that the delay was deliberate and designed to give the state a tactical advantage. Part of the delay was the result of the state's inaction, part of the delay was the result of the state's belief that it did not have probable cause to proceed, and part of the delay was caused by unknown reasons. Kimbrow v. State, 317 Ga. 442, 893 S.E.2d 678, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 223 (2023).

Rights of defendants against excessive preaccusation delay are protected by the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5. United States v. Nixon, 634 F.2d 306, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20934 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 828, 102 S. Ct. 120, 70 L. Ed. 2d 103, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3238 (1981).

When prosecution follows investigative delay, a defendant is not deprived of due process, even if the defendant's defense might have been prejudiced by the lapsed time. United States v. Nixon, 634 F.2d 306, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20934 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 828, 102 S. Ct. 120, 70 L. Ed. 2d 103, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3238 (1981).

When preaccusation delay merits dismissal. — Under the due process clause, dismissal for preaccusation delay is required when it is shown that such delay caused substantial prejudice to defendant's rights to a fair trial and that the delay was an intentional device to gain tactical advantage over the accused. United States v. Nixon, 634 F.2d 306, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20934 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 828, 102 S. Ct. 120, 70 L. Ed. 2d 103, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3238 (1981).

Proof of prejudice from preaccusation delay is a necessary but not sufficient element of a due process claim. United States v. Pitts, 569 F.2d 343, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 12192 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 959, 98 S. Ct. 3076, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1125, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2219 (1978).

Due process inquiry must consider the reasons for the delay as well as the prejudice to the accused. United States v. Pitts, 569 F.2d 343, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 12192 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 959, 98 S. Ct. 3076, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1125, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2219 (1978); United States v. Blevins, 593 F.2d 646, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15260 (5th Cir. 1979).

What constitutes irreparable prejudice from preaccusation delay. — Denial of the right under U.S. Const., amend. 5 to due process of law because preaccusation delay irreparably prejudiced one's ability to prepare one's defense is shown when substantial prejudice resulted from the delay and the delay was an intentional device to obtain a tactical advantage over the accused. United States v. Byrum, 540 F.2d 833, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 6657 (5th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 1076, 97 S. Ct. 819, 50 L. Ed. 2d 796, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 561 (1977).

Where claim based on preindictment delay, actual prejudice must be shown. — A claim by a defendant that preindictment delay deprives him of due process in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 5 requires a showing of actual prejudice. United States v. Edwards, 577 F.2d 883, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 9854 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 968, 99 S. Ct. 458, 58 L. Ed. 2d 427, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 3851 (1978).

To establish a due process violation based on preindictment delay, a defendant must show that the reason for the delay “violates our fundamental conceptions of justice”. The defendant must show that the defendant suffered substantial prejudice and that the delay was the product of deliberate action by the government to gain a tactical advantage. United States v. Hayes, 40 F.3d 362, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 35561 (11th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 812, 116 S. Ct. 62, 133 L. Ed. 2d 24, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 5376 (1995).

No actual prejudice shown due to 24-year delay. — Defendant’s fifth and fourteenth amendment due process rights were not violated by the 24-year delay between the crimes and the indictment as defendant failed to show actual prejudice; that the defense was weakened by the absence of witnesses who had died or could not be found and by the faded memories of witnesses who testified did not satisfy the actual prejudice prong of the Wooten test. Jackson v. State, 279 Ga. 449, 614 S.E.2d 781, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 436 (2005).

Post-arrest delay covered by U.S. Const., amend. 6. — Delay which occurs between commission of an offense and arrest or indictment may violate the right to due process under U.S. Const., amend. 5. If, however, the delay occurs between arrest or indictment and trial, the controlling constitutional provision is guarantee under U.S. Const., amend. 6 of the right to a speedy trial. United States v. Smith, 65 F.R.D. 464, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11349 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Due process considerations under U.S. Const., amend. 5 apply to oppressive prearrest and preindictment delay, but the more specific guarantees of U.S. Const., amend. 6 apply to post-arrest delay. United States v. Traylor, 578 F.2d 108, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 9652 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1074, 99 S. Ct. 848, 59 L. Ed. 2d 41, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 333 (1979).

Due process requires notice sufficient to prepare defense. — Notice of criminal charges with such specificity so as to allow the accused to defend against those charges is an inherent ingredient of due process of law. Calley v. Callaway, 382

F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev’d, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Because the defendant was charged by indictment with crimes against a minor victim who was identified by initials only, the court found that such was insufficient because the defendant was entitled to be charged by an indictment in perfect form; failure to identify the victim with a full name, if known, violated the defendant’s constitutional rights to due process under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I and U.S. Const., amend. 5, as well as defendant’s double jeopardy rights under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII and U.S. Const., amend. 5. Sellers v. State, 263 Ga. App. 144, 587 S.E.2d 276, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1144 (2003).

Failure to hold commitment hearings. — Although the commitment hearing is a “critical stage” of criminal procedure entitling a defendant to counsel, failure to hold such a hearing does not constitute a deprivation of a defendant’s constitutional rights. State v. Godfrey, 204 Ga. App. 58, 418 S.E.2d 383, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 677 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C1011, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 495 (Ga. June 10, 1992).

Fact of one-on-one show-up, without more, does not necessarily violate due process. Goswick v. State, 150 Ga. App. 279, 257 S.E.2d 303, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2179 (1979); Belcher v. State, 159 Ga. App. 146, 282 S.E.2d 760, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2528 (1981).

Although one-on-one showups are inherently suggestive the identification need not be excluded as long as the identification is reliable notwithstanding any suggestive procedure under all the circumstances, including consideration of the opportunity of the witness to view the criminal at the time of the crime, the witness’s degree of attention, the accuracy of the witness’s prior description of the criminal, the level of certainty demonstrated by the witness at the confrontation, and the length of time between the crime and the confrontation. Thus, the trial court did not err in denying defendant’s motion to suppress an out-of-court showup identification by the manager of a store who identified defendant as the shoplifter of several store items given that: (1) the manager had a good opportunity to view defendant in the store parking lot as defendant was leaving with the items; (2) the manager quickly gave a physical identification to another store and defendant was soon observed in an apparent attempt to shoplift at the other store; and (3) the manager from the first store then positively identified defendant for the police at the scene within 30 minutes of the original shoplifting incident, all of which indicated that the identification was reliable. Horne v. State, 260 Ga. App. 640, 580 S.E.2d 644, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 447 (2003).

Due process test applicable to show-ups is likelihood of misidentification. — The due process test to be applied to a show-up, (as distinguished from a line-up) is the likelihood of misidentification. The factors to be considered in evaluating the likelihood of misidentification include the opportunity of the witness to view the criminal at the time of the crime, the witness' degree of attention, the accuracy of the witness' prior description of the criminal, and the level of certainty demonstrated by the witness at the confrontation. Yancey v. State, 232 Ga. 167, 205 S.E.2d 282, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 895 (1974).

One-on-one show-up not necessarily a violation of due process. — A claimed violation of due process in the conduct of a pretrial confrontation depends on the totality of the circumstances. A one-on-one show-up, without more, does not necessarily violate due process. The primary evil to be avoided is the substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. Daniel v. State, 150 Ga. App. 798, 258 S.E.2d 604, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2382 (1979).

Validity of showing suspects and photos singly depends on circumstances. — Although the practice of showing suspects and photos of suspects singly to a witness for purposes of identification has been widely condemned, a claimed violation of due process of law in the conduct of pretrial confrontation depends on the circumstances. Goswick v. State, 150 Ga. App. 279, 257 S.E.2d 303, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2179 (1979); Coleman v. State, 150 Ga. App. 380, 258 S.E.2d 12, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2323 (1979).

One-person show-up after photographic identification by victim. —

Appellant is not denied due process by a one-person show-up shortly after the victim selected the appellant's photograph as that of the person who robbed the victim, where the one-person show-up was conducted in a room at the police station within approximately one and one-half hours after the robbery. Coleman v. State, 150 Ga. App. 380, 258 S.E.2d 12, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2323 (1979).

Accidental pretrial confrontation.

— If a pretrial confrontation is accidental and not so arranged by the authorities as to make resulting identification virtually inevitable, there is no denial of due process. Herron v. State, 155 Ga. App. 791, 272 S.E.2d 756, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2792 (1980).

Selection system whereby the grand jury foreman is selected from the membership of each grand jury, and the grand jury selects its own foreman, rather than for him or her to be appointed by the superior court judge provides no ground for reversal of a conviction obtained by a properly constituted traverse jury. Wright v. State, 179 Ga. App. 325, 346 S.E.2d 361, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2613 (1986).

Knowing and intelligent waiver of rights. — Trial court did not err in finding that the defendant, although mentally retarded, gave a knowing and intelligent waiver of the defendant's rights. Worthy v. State, 253 Ga. 661, 324 S.E.2d 431, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 513 (1985).

Failure of defendant to offer evidence where prejudicial delay alleged. — Preindictment delay did not deny the defendant due process of law where the defendant offered no evidence in support of the defendant's theory of why the charges were dropped before the preliminary hearing, or contrary to the government's theory. United States v. Puett, 735 F.2d 1331, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 20640 (11th Cir. 1984).

Mere fact that police officer handed photographs to victim for identification did not render the photographic identification procedure impermissibly suggestive. Whitfield v. State, 176 Ga. App. 476, 336 S.E.2d 356, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2895 (1985).

A “show-up” identification where the defendant was returned to convenience store the defendant had attempted to rob for identification purposes conducted immediately after the arrest was not unduly suggestive and testimony concerning this identification need not have been excluded upon objection. Manora v. State, 179 Ga. App. 791, 347 S.E.2d 727, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2008 (1986).

Photo spreads were not so impermissibly suggestive as to result in a substantial likelihood of misidentification because the defendant was only an arm’s length away from the victim when the defendant assaulted the victim; the light was good; the victim’s attention was focused on the defendant; and the victim accurately described defendant immediately after the attack. Dudley v. State, 179 Ga. App. 252, 345 S.E.2d 888, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2603 (1986).

Fact that defendant’s picture was the only one to appear in two photo spreads shown to the victim does not demonstrate that the spreads were impermissibly defective, especially since the two photographs of defendant were different. Dudley v. State, 179 Ga. App. 252, 345 S.E.2d 888, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2603 (1986).

Isolation of defendants in lineup by age, weight, and height did not taint identification. — Though the evidence supported the defendant’s contentions that the ages, weights, and heights of the persons in the lineup were different and that the dress and complexions could also have helped to isolate the two defendants, the victim based the lineup (and in-court) identification of the two defendants upon their facial characteristics and the traumatic exposure to each of them the victim had experienced a matter of twenty minutes before so that there was no improper suggestion of identity nor other improper procedures followed by the police to taint the results of the pre-indictment lineup. Kennedy v. State, 179 Ga. App. 587, 347 S.E.2d 604, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2651 (1986).

Identification not tainted by defendant’s wearing of prison garb. — Victim’s identification testimony was not tainted simply because the victim saw the defendant dressed in prison garb at the preliminary hearing especially since the observation of the defendant at the preliminary hearing was not a confrontation and the victim had previously identified the defendant positively from photographs. Dudley v. State, 179 Ga. App. 252, 345 S.E.2d 888, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2603 (1986).

Identification procedure not overly suggestive. — Photographic array was not impermissibly suggestive. The people in the lineup had facial features similar to the defendant’s, and at least three had slanted eyes; the fact that the defendant’s picture was smaller, lighter in color, grainier, and less focused and the fact the defendant’s head was more tilted did not make the array impermissibly suggestive; and the defendant failed to explain how the “full-face” lineup conducted here (as opposed to a lineup obscuring all facial features other than the eyes) was impermissibly suggestive. Pinkins v. State, 300 Ga. App. 17, 684 S.E.2d 275, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1026 (2009).

Trial court did not err by admitting evidence of the second victim’s pre-trial identification of the defendant based on an impermissibly suggestive photographic lineup because the defendant’s claim that the second victim was under the influence of prescription pain medications when the second victim identified the defendant in the photographic lineup did not establish that the identification procedure was impermissibly suggestive; the photo array consisted of photographs of the defendant and five other males of similar age and similar physical characteristics and facial features; and the videotape evidence showed that the second victim’s identification of the defendant was unequivocal and not influenced by the officers’ words or actions. Blackmon v. State, 300 Ga. 35, 793 S.E.2d 69, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 703 (2016).

How likelihood of misidentification evaluated. — The factors to be considered in evaluating the likelihood of misidentification, in order to determine whether an alleged criminal's due process guarantee of a fair trial has been violated, include the opportunity of the victim to view the criminal at the time of the crime, the witness' degree of attention, the accuracy of a witness' prior description of the criminal, the level of certainty demonstrated by a witness at a confrontation, and the length of time between the crime and the confrontation. Carter v. State, 157 Ga. App. 445, 278 S.E.2d 93, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1981).

Discriminatory use of peremptory challenges not shown. — Where all of the juries relied on by defendant to show a systematic exclusion of blacks from petit juries were composed of at least 25% black jurors with the exception of one jury which had only one black juror, the State used all of its peremptory challenges in only four of the ten cases, and there were no cases involving all-white juries, defendant failed to establish a constitutional denial of due process and the right to a fair trial through the discriminatory use of peremptory challenges. Patterson v. State, 176 Ga. App. 784, 338 S.E.2d 283, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2911 (1985).

Denial of defendant's motion for severance did not deny due process. Short v. State, 256 Ga. 165, 345 S.E.2d 340, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 755 (1986); Short v. State, 256 Ga. 172, 345 S.E.2d 344, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 758 (1986).

Without a high likelihood of prejudice, due process does not mandate severance of a charge requiring proof of a prior conviction from other counts in a criminal indictment. United States v. Jiminez, 983 F.2d 1020, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 2271 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 925, 114 S. Ct. 330, 126 L. Ed. 2d 276, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 6511 (1993).

Requiring counsel in joint case to make opening statements at same time not error. — The trial court did not err in ruling that both defense counsel in joint case for theft would have to make their opening statements at the same point in the trial; i.e., either prior to the presentation of the state's case or at its conclusion. Manora v. State, 179 Ga. App. 791, 347 S.E.2d 727, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2008 (1986).

Presence at bench conferences. — Defendant's right to be present was not violated due to the defendant's absence from 13 bench conferences as 12 conferences involved only legal arguments regarding objections and trial procedure, the defendant's absence from which did not violate the right to be present, and the defendant waived the right at the remaining conference by failing to voice any objection to the defendant's absence, either directly or through counsel. Heywood v. State, 292 Ga. 771, 743 S.E.2d 12, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 292 (2013).

4. Criminal Trials

Requirement that a court protect an accused person who appears before it is fundamental to due process of law. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Waiver of right to due process. — The fourth provision of U.S. Const., amend. 5, "nor [shall any person] be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law," allows, but does not require, a person to defend one's rights, hence one may waive them. Barkman v. Sanford, 162 F.2d 592, 1947 U.S. App. LEXIS 2149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 332 U.S. 816, 68 S. Ct. 155, 92 L. Ed. 393, 1947 U.S. LEXIS 1658 (1947).

Proof that selective prosecution violates equal protection guarantees. — Though selective prosecution, if based on improper motives, can violate constitutional guarantees of equal protection, selective enforcement in and of itself is not a constitutional violation. Therefore, to support a defense of selective prosecution, one must establish that others similarly situated have not generally been prosecuted and that the government's discriminatory selection of a person is invidious, or in bad faith — that is, based on constitutionally impermissible considerations, such as race or religion. United States v. Lichenstein, 610 F.2d 1272, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 20875 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 2991, 64 L. Ed. 2d 856, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2358 (1980).

Constitutional right to a jury trial may be waived by proceeding to trial without demanding a jury. Clarke v. Cobb, 195 Ga. 633, 24 S.E.2d 782, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 531 (1943).

Defendant need not personally waive the defendant's right to a jury trial in order to preserve due process. Little v. Stynchcombe, 227 Ga. 311, 180 S.E.2d 541, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 683 (1971).

Defendant in a misdemeanor case can waive trial by jury. — There is no reason why a prisoner in a case of this kind should not have the right to be tried by a conscientious and intelligent judge, if the prisoner prefers it, as well as the right to be tried by a jury. Clarke v. Cobb, 195 Ga. 633, 24 S.E.2d 782, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 531 (1943).

Right to testify versus right to counsel. — Where federal district court presented the defendant with a choice: either to proceed with counsel with the caveat that the defendant could be kept off the witness stand, if the attorney so desired, or to proceed pro se, the defendant was impermissibly forced to choose between two constitutional rights: the right to testify and the right to counsel. United States v. Scott, 909 F.2d 488, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 14361 (11th Cir. 1990).

Defendant entitled to opportunity to disprove intent. — Due process requires that, if one of the elements of the charged crime requires proof of specific intent, the defendant must be given the opportunity to disprove the government's contention. United States v. Hill, 750 F. Supp. 524, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14990 (N.D. Ga. 1990).

Waiver of defendant's right to testify. — A criminal defendant has a fundamental constitutional right to testify in his or her own behalf at trial. This right is personal to the defendant and cannot be waived either by the trial court or by defense counsel. United States v. Teague, 953 F.2d 1525, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 2612 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 842, 113 S. Ct. 127, 121 L. Ed. 2d 82, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 4976 (1992).

Use of handcuffs in transporting defendant not prohibited. — The Constitution does not prohibit the official in charge of an accused from deciding that handcuffs are necessary for a safe and orderly transportation to the courtroom. Allen v. Montgomery, 728 F.2d 1409, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 23804 (11th Cir. 1984).

Refusal to sever trials. — Trial court did not deprive the first and second defendants of due process under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I and U.S. Const., amend. 5 in failing to sever, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4, their trials in a case involving the three defendants, who were allegedly involved in a conspiracy; because each defendant was implicated by each defendant's own statement, the defendants failed to show how they were prejudiced by the joint trial, and there was no showing of antagonistic defenses. Brooks v. State, 281 Ga. 14, 635 S.E.2d 723, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 603 (2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1215, 127 S. Ct. 1266, 167 L. Ed. 2d 91, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2212 (2007).

Due process requires a fair trial before a fair and impartial judge. Cross v. Georgia, 581 F.2d 102, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 8747 (5th Cir. 1978).

Only when a judge's conduct strays from neutrality is a defendant thereby denied a fair trial as required by the Constitution. United States v. Bartlett, 633 F.2d 1184, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 21139 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 820, 102 S. Ct. 101, 70 L. Ed. 2d 91, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3156 (1981).

Judge is not a mere moderator, and has an obligation and duty to question witnesses and comment on evidence when necessary. The judge may elicit facts not yet adduced or clarify those previously presented and the judge may maintain the pace of the trial by interrupting and curtailing counsel's examinations as a matter of discretion. United States v. Bartlett, 633 F.2d 1184, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 21139 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 820, 102 S. Ct. 101, 70 L. Ed. 2d 91, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3156 (1981).

Threat by court to remove unruly defendant. — No rights under the fifth and sixth amendments to the Constitution of the United States were violated where after several outbursts on the defendant's part, the trial court informed the defendant, outside the jury's presence, that the defendant would be removed from the courtroom if the defendant again engaged in such unseemly behavior. Russell v. State, 181 Ga. App. 665, 353 S.E.2d 565, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2564 (1987).

Competency requirement. — Due process requires that no person be convicted of a crime while incompetent to stand trial. United States v. Swanson, 572 F.2d 523, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 11310 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 849, 99 S. Ct. 152, 58 L. Ed. 2d 152, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2914 (1978).

Presently incompetent defendant may never be able to stand trial and may have to be released. United States v. Swanson, 572 F.2d 523, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 11310 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 849, 99 S. Ct. 152, 58 L. Ed. 2d 152, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2914 (1978).

Determination of competency of amnesiac defendant. — Although the competency determination cuts to the heart of the trial process, the standard for determining the competency of an amnesiac defendant must remain flexible. Because nonpathological amnesia may be difficult to ascertain, the trial judge is in the best position to make a determination between allowing amnesia to become an unjustified haven for a defendant and, on the other hand, requiring an incompetent person to stand trial. United States v. Swanson, 572 F.2d 523, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 11310 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 849, 99 S. Ct. 152, 58 L. Ed. 2d 152, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2914 (1978).

Defendant can be barred from raising the issue of insanity as a defense if the defendant does not submit to an examination by a court-designated psychiatrist. Empowering the court to order a psychiatric examination concerning the insanity defense does not violate per se the defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5. United States v. Leonard, 609 F.2d 1163, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 21341 (5th Cir. 1980).

Facts related in a psychiatric examination are not admissible on the issue of guilt and the only purpose for which the statements can be admitted is to determine the issue of sanity. United States v. Leonard, 609 F.2d 1163, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 21341 (5th Cir. 1980).

Indication by state of witnesses to be called is adequate substitute for purging of list. — The failure of the state to purge its list of over 500 witnesses of the names of those persons who do not testify in a felony murder case does not constitute the denial of the effective assistance of counsel in the preparation of accused's defense nor the deprivation of due process of law, where the state voluntarily reduces the number of witnesses which might be called on direct examination to 40 by placing a check mark beside the names to be called. Emmett v. State, 232 Ga. 110, 205 S.E.2d 231, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 882 (1974).

When doctrine of inherent prejudice applies. — The doctrine of inherent prejudice, in regard to the accused's right to a fair trial applies when, because of the circumstances, there is such a high probability that prejudice will result that the procedure is deemed inherently lacking in due process, and in such cases, no showing of identifiable prejudice is necessary. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Evidence against defendant must come from witnesses in public courtroom. — The individual's right to a fair trial, whether it be in a civilian court or in a military court, requires, in the constitutional sense, that the evidence developed against a defendant comes from the witness stand in a public courtroom where there is full judicial protection of the defendant's right of confrontation, cross-examination, and counsel. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Fact-finder's conclusions should be induced only by evidence and argument in open court, not by any outside influence, whether of private talk or public print. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Burden on prosecution to protect against prejudicial news coverage. — Although the right of a free press embodied in U.S. Const., amend. 1, is guaranteed, the individual's right to a fair trial guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 5's due process clause and in the other individual provisions of the Bill of Rights is absolute. Where prejudicial news coverage is present, the burden is on the government to protect the rights of the defendant. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Defendant has right to expect protection from prejudicial news coverage. — Although the government has no authority to restrain the reporting of the press, nor to dictate what it does or does not report, a person accused of crime has the right to expect the government and its judicial officers to protect the defendant from massive and prejudicial publicity surrounding the case. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Conviction secured, in whole or in part, by use of information secured from nonjudicial sources obviously constitutes a denial of due process of law in its most rudimentary conception. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

To deny the accused the right to impugn a witness's testimony is to deny the opportunity for cross-examination, and the denial of the right to cross-examine denies due process. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Plea that is intelligent and voluntary must be affirmatively shown. — The state did not violate a defendant's due process rights or suborn perjury by having a shooting victim testify at defendant's aggravated assault trial that defendant had shot the victim, even though the victim had previously testified in another proceeding that another person had shot the victim, because there was no showing that the victim's trial testimony was untrue or that the state knew the testimony was untrue. Arnold v. State, 301 Ga. App. 714, 688 S.E.2d 656, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1428 (2009).

Order compelling psychiatric examination. — Trial court's order to compel psychiatric examination did not violate the petitioner's privilege against self-incrimination under the fifth and fourteenth amendments because, among other things, the petitioner's counsel both received ample notice of the state's intention to seek a psychiatric examination and had ample opportunity to confer with the petitioner to inform the petitioner of the right against self-incrimination and because prior to trial there had been indications that the petitioner might present a defense of insanity or diminished capacity. Presnell v. Zant, 959 F.2d 1524, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 6897 (11th Cir. 1992).

Appointment of psychiatrist to assist in defense. — When a criminal defendant makes an ex parte showing that the defendant's sanity is likely to be a significant factor in the defendant's defense, the defendant must be provided with a psychiatrist to assist in the defense. Lindsey v. State, 254 Ga. 444, 330 S.E.2d 563, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 724 (1985).

For interpretation of Ake v. Oklahoma, 470 U.S. 68, 105 S. Ct. 1087, 84 L. Ed. 2d 53 (1985) regarding procedure to be followed in providing psychiatric assistance to criminal defendants, see Lindsey v. State, 254 Ga. 444, 330 S.E.2d 563, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 724 (1985).

Trial court is under no constitutional or statutory duty to appoint state paid psychiatrist to evaluate a defendant even though special plea of insanity has been filed. Blankenship v. State, 247 Ga. 590, 277 S.E.2d 505, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 801 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993), cert. denied, 545 U.S. 1150, 125 S. Ct. 2964, 162 L. Ed. 2d 906, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 5192 (2005).

Due Process (Cont'd)*4. Criminal Trials (Cont'd)

Psychiatric testimony in rebuttal of defendant's psychiatric evidence. — Because the defendant expressly consented to examinations by the state psychiatrist and psychologist, and because their testimony was used by the state only in rebuttal to the defendant's psychiatric and psychological testimony, defendant's fifth amendment rights were not violated by admission of their testimony as to statements made by the defendant during their examinations of the defendant. Speights v. State, 163 Ga. App. 738, 294 S.E.2d 650, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3245 (1982).

Improper psychiatric testimony as to criminal responsibility. — A psychiatrist's reference during the psychiatrist's testimony to the defendant's "criminal responsibility" violated fifth amendment rights, as the psychiatrist based the diagnosis on the substance of disclosures made during a custodial interrogation, but the admission of the testimony was harmless error because no reasonable doubt existed that the defendant would have otherwise been found guilty and because the testimony was at worse redundant, as the defendant, who was presumed sane under Georgia law, never raised the insanity defense. Cape v. Francis, 741 F.2d 1287, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 19031 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 911, 106 S. Ct. 281, 88 L. Ed. 2d 245, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 4056 (1985).

Privilege of evaluation made by court-funded psychiatrist. — Criminal defendant who requested funds for hiring a psychiatrist was not denied due process where court granted funds but reserved ruling on the question of whether the evaluation would be privileged, prompting the defendant to hire a psychiatrist out of the defendant's own funds to assure privilege, since the defendant abandoned the matter by not presenting authority supporting the privilege and by failing to evoke a ruling of law from the court. Crawford v. State, 254 Ga. 435, 330 S.E.2d 567, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 732 (1985).

Prosecution need not state reasons for refusing to stipulate to admission of polygraph evidence. — Since the Georgia Supreme Court has left intact the general rule of inadmissibility of polygraph evidence but has merely recognized a party's right, within that rule, to waive objection to otherwise inadmissible evidence, no substantive right to introduce polygraph evidence has been created in Georgia; and no written statement of reasons for a prosecutor's refusal to stipulate to the admission of polygraph evidence is constitutionally required as a matter of due process as a safeguard against arbitrariness. Jones v. Weldon, 690 F.2d 835, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 24455 (11th Cir. 1982).

Absence of the defendant at the jury view of a crime scene, when made for the purpose of better understanding the evidence and not introducing new evidence, is not a denial of due process. Forney v. State, 255 Ga. 316, 338 S.E.2d 252, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 492 (1986).

Absence of defendant from evidentiary hearing. — Defendant's exclusion from an evidentiary hearing on the defendant's motion for new trial did not violate the defendant's rights to confrontation or due process. United States v. Boyd, 131 F.3d 951, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 35641 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 892, 119 S. Ct. 211, 142 L. Ed. 2d 173, 1998 U.S. LEXIS 5923 (1998).

Juror's contact with victim's brother not prejudicial. — Because, during the trial, one of the jurors gave the trial judge a note in which the juror informed the judge that the juror worked with the victim's sibling about eight years before trial; that the juror spoke with the victim's sibling before the trial began and exchanged pleasantries; that the juror inquired what the sibling was doing at the courthouse and the sibling replied "that boy shot my sister;" that no one else was aware of the exchange; that the exchange would not influence the juror's decision; and that the juror would base the juror's decision in the case on the evidence, and because the juror was admonished not to tell the other jurors what transpired, the defendant was not prejudiced by the communication. Dudley v. State, 179 Ga. App. 252, 345 S.E.2d 888, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2603 (1986).

Presumption concerning willful acts. — Instructions charging that the acts of a person of sound mind and discretion are presumed to be a product of a person's will, but such presumption may be rebutted and that a person of sound mind and discretion is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of the person's acts, but the presumption may be rebutted create an unconstitutional burden-shifting presumption with respect to the element of intent. Boswell v. State, 176 Ga. App. 855, 338 S.E.2d 62, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2912 (1985).

A charge, in a homicide and burglary prosecution, that there is a rebuttable presumption that a person of sound mind and discretion intends the natural and probable consequences of the person's acts, was unconstitutionally burden-shifting, notwithstanding an additional charge that criminal intent is not presumed. This error did not require a reversal of the defendant's convictions, because the defense raised the question of whether the defendant participated in the acts causing the victim's death but did not create any material issue on the question of whether the defendant intended the consequences of the defendant's acts. Williams v. Kemp, 255 Ga. 380, 338 S.E.2d 669, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 512, cert. denied, 478 U.S. 1022, 106 S. Ct. 3341, 92 L. Ed. 2d 744, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 2867 (1986).

Videotaping. — The state's failure to videotape a defendant's statement so that the jury can evaluate the defendant's condition while making the statement is not a denial of due process, even though the police videotaped the murder scene where the statement was made. Patterson v. State, 258 Ga. 592, 372 S.E.2d 809, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 422 (1988).

Delay in bringing indictment. — Defendant's fifth amendment due process rights and sixth amendment right to a speedy trial were not violated through the bringing of an indictment against him in 1992 for criminal conduct that occurred in 1987. United States v. Lockett, 867 F. Supp. 1044, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16441 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 70 F.3d 126, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 32870 (11th Cir. 1995).

Trial court properly denied a defendant's motion to dismiss the indictments due to a speedy trial violation with regard to burglary and murder charges as the defendant's contentions regarding fading memories, alone, did not demonstrate prejudice to the defendant's defense and the record supported a finding that any delay was attributable to the ongoing investigation of the crime which, at times, was complicated by such things as recanted testimony by certain witnesses. Ultimately, the defendant failed to show that the delay was the result of a deliberate action by the state to gain a tactical advantage. Bunn v. State, 284 Ga. 410, 667 S.E.2d 605, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 821 (2008).

Delay solely by state authorities. — The fifth, sixth, and fourteenth amendments did not bar a federal prosecution because any arguably improper or unconstitutional delay in the prosecution was occasioned solely by Georgia authorities; there was no basis here for imputing Georgia's dilatory conduct to the United States or to the federal prosecution. United States v. Boone, 959 F.2d 1550, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 8909 (11th Cir. 1992).

Ten-year delay. — Defendant's due process rights were not violated by the ten-year delay between trial and appeal because the errors the defendant allegedly would have raised on appeal were without merit. Whitaker v. State, 291 Ga. 139, 728 S.E.2d 209, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 493 (2012).

Fourteen-year delay between arrest and trial for murder did not violate defendant's due process rights since defendant was not prejudiced by the passage of time, nor was there any evidence to indicate that the delay was designed by the prosecution. Wooten v. State, 262 Ga. 876, 426 S.E.2d 852, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 305, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 853, 114 S. Ct. 156, 126 L. Ed. 2d 117, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 5505 (1993).

State did not violate defendant's speedy trial rights, and, thus, defendant's double jeopardy rights were not implicated where defendant was arrested on a charge of DUI—less safe driver and defendant was not tried for 14 years because defendant failed to appear for the trial scheduled a few weeks after defendant's arrest for that offense; any delay in bringing defendant to trial was defendant's own fault because defendant had notice of when that trial was to take place and did not show up. Smith v. State, 260 Ga. App. 403, 579 S.E.2d 829, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 374 (2003).

Twenty-year delay. — Defendant failed to establish a due process violation for a 20-year delay in the prosecution of a murder case against the defendant because the defendant failed to show either that the delay actually prejudiced the defense or that the prosecution deliberately delayed the case to gain a tactical advantage, both of which showings were needed to prevail on that claim; while several witnesses died in the intervening years and some evidence was missing, this hindered the prosecution as much as the defendant. Holton v. State, 280 Ga. 843, 632 S.E.2d 90, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 450, cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1078, 127 S. Ct. 737, 166 L. Ed. 2d 563, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 9266 (2006).

Trial calendar. — Where defendant had actual knowledge of the pendency of the case, the publication of the trial calendar in the county's legal organ constituted sufficient notice of the trial date, so as to satisfy due process. Carson v. Morris, 164 Ga. App. 732, 297 S.E.2d 513, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3342 (1982).

When conviction based upon in-court identification which follows pretrial identification set aside. — A conviction based upon an in-court identification following a pretrial identification will be set aside on that ground only if the pretrial identification procedure was so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. Herron v. State, 155 Ga. App. 791, 272 S.E.2d 756, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2792 (1980).

In-court identification by witness previously exposed to suggestive photographic array. — A conviction based on a witness' in-court identification of the defendant, when the witness has been previously exposed to a suggestive photographic array, will be set aside on that ground only if the photographic identification procedure was so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. The central question is whether, under the totality of the circumstances, the identification is reliable even though a pretrial identification procedure was suggestive. Stroud v. State, 246 Ga. 717, 273 S.E.2d 155, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1273 (1980).

In-court identification where there has been a one-on-one show-up. — As a general rule, the one-on-one confrontation between the eyewitness and the suspect before a trial has been condemned. However, the appellate courts have consistently upheld the admission of in-court identifications when prior one-on-one show-ups are reasonably and fairly conducted at or near the time of the offense. Arnold v. State, 155 Ga. App. 782, 272 S.E.2d 751, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2789 (1980); Perkins v. State, 216 Ga. App. 118, 453 S.E.2d 135, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 36 (1995).

Criminal defendant is deprived of due process if a conviction is founded, in whole or in part, upon an involuntary confession, without regard for the truth or falsity of the confession, and even though there is ample evidence aside from the confession to support the conviction. Equally clear is the defendant's constitutional right at some stage in the proceeding to object to the use of the confession and to have a fair hearing and a reliable determination on the issue of voluntariness, a determination uninfluenced by the truth or falsity of the confession. James v. State, 223 Ga. 677, 157 S.E.2d 471, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 659 (1967).

Coercive police force in obtaining confession. — Coercive police activity is a necessary predicate to the finding that a confession is not "voluntary" within the meaning of the due process clause. United States v. Moody, 977 F.2d 1425, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 29012 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1052, 113 S. Ct. 1948, 123 L. Ed. 2d 653, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 3043 (1993).

Effect in rape prosecution of statement admitting intercourse but not use of force. — Because, in a rape case, the accused made a statement that admitted the intercourse but fell short of admitting that the intercourse was accomplished by means of force and against the will of the victim or prosecutrix, such statement was insufficient to amount to a confession of rape, since force is an essential element of the crime of rape. However, if the statement in question clearly makes out a case of conspiracy between the defendant on trial and other individuals charged with the commission of the same crime at the same time and place, and if, from all reasonable inferences and deductions that may be drawn from the statement, it is apparent that all the participants in the crime were exercising and using force or threats of force upon the victim, the defendant, being a participant in the conspiracy, is equally chargeable under the facts related in the statement with the force exerted upon the victim by means of threats of violence and bodily harm visited upon the victim by the defendant's coconspirators even though the defendant may not have admitted in the defendant's statement to have personally exerted any such force and violence upon the victim. Jackson v. State, 225 Ga. 553, 170 S.E.2d 281, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 562 (1969).

That exclusionary sperm test not performed is not grounds for reversing rape conviction. — In a rape trial, the fact that an exclusionary sperm test is not performed (which test purportedly classifies sperm into particular blood groupings for identification purposes) is not grounds for reversal, neither does due process require the performance of the test. Gray v. State, 151 Ga. App. 684, 261 S.E.2d 402, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2748 (1979).

Denial of use immunity to defense witnesses. — Defendant's compulsory process rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and equal protection and due process rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 are not violated by denial of use immunity to defense witnesses if such immunity is not requested by the defendant in the trial court and no prejudice would have resulted had a request been made and denied; nor are such rights violated if the defendant fails to demonstrate that a grant of immunity is required to preserve fundamental fairness in the trial. United States v. Cohen, 631 F.2d 1223, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11723 (5th Cir. 1980).

Statement of a witness that an arrest was made under a warrant is not proof that it was legal. Marshall v. State, 130 Ga. App. 572, 203 S.E.2d 885, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1180 (1974).

Witness' conclusion is not proper proof that a given paper is a warrant.

— The conclusion of a witness that a given paper is a warrant under which an arrest may legally be made is not proper proof that such a paper is in fact a warrant by virtue of which a legal arrest has been made, so as to authorize the admission of evidence obtained by means of an arrest under such paper or alleged warrant. Marshall v. State, 130 Ga. App. 572, 203 S.E.2d 885, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1180 (1974).

Defendants who are not convicted on charges under which they were placed in custody does not negate probable cause for that arrest. United States v. Gidley, 527 F.2d 1345, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 12513 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 841, 97 S. Ct. 116, 50 L. Ed. 2d 110, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 2671 (1976).

Accused is entitled to assistance of counsel at all stages of the trial, including sentencing, and if counsel for accused is not present when the accused is sentenced to be executed, the constitutional right to the assistance of counsel at all stages of the proceedings is violated. Coates v. Lawrence, 46 F. Supp. 414, 1942 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2548 (D. Ga.), aff'd, 131 F.2d 110, 1942 U.S. App. LEXIS 2727 (5th Cir. 1942).

Mere participation of special prosecutor is not sufficient grounds to show denial of due process, without some additional showing of a violation of the rules relating to prosecuting attorneys. There is no constitutional prohibition against the use of special prosecutors, and so long as the criminal district attorney retains control and management of the prosecution, the special prosecutor is not guilty of conduct prejudicial to the defendant, and the rights of the defendant are duly observed, no reason exists why such settled practice, in and of itself, should cause the reversal of a case. Woods v. Linahan, 648 F.2d 973, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 12094 (5th Cir. 1981).

Knowing prosecutorial use of false evidence or perjured testimony violates due process. — The knowing use by the prosecution of false evidence or perjured testimony which is material to the issues in a criminal trial is a denial of due process. A conviction obtained by the use of such evidence cannot be permitted to stand. The same rule applies if the prosecution, although not actively soliciting false evidence, passively, but knowingly, allows it to go uncorrected or allows it to be presented with a materially false impression. The same result may obtain even though the false nature of the evidence concerns only the credibility of an important witness, rather than the ultimate issue of guilt or innocence. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d 819, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20902 (5th Cir. 1981).

Conviction of a crime following a trial in which perjured testimony on a material point is knowingly used by the prosecution is an infringement on the accused's fifth and fourteenth amendment rights to due process of law. Kitchens v. State, 160 Ga. App. 492, 287 S.E.2d 316, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 3238 (1981).

It is sufficient to show that police officers acting in behalf of the state in connection with the prosecution had knowledge of the perjured character of the testimony given by a witness for the state. Kitchens v. State, 160 Ga. App. 492, 287 S.E.2d 316, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 3238 (1981).

Admission of coconspirator's prior statement proper. — Defendant was not denied due process when the trial court admitted hearsay testimony of a detective regarding statements made by a coconspirator after coconspirator denied remembering the crime or giving the police any information; the testimony was admissible as substance evidence under the prior inconsistent statement exception to the hearsay rule. Robinson v. State, 278 Ga. 31, 597 S.E.2d 386, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 469 (2004).

Perjured testimony disclosed at trial. — Conviction did not need to be reversed for use of perjured testimony as inconsistencies and discrepancies were disclosed at trial and available as a basis for attacking the credibility of the state's witnesses. Cammon v. State, 269 Ga. 470, 500 S.E.2d 329, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 520 (1998).

Prosecutorial use of false or perjured testimony which prosecution neither knows nor believes to be such. — Due process is not implicated by the prosecution's introduction or allowance of false or perjured testimony, unless the prosecution actually knows or believes the testimony to be false or perjured. It is not enough that the testimony is challenged by another witness or is inconsistent with prior statements. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d 819, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20902 (5th Cir. 1981).

Where the prosecutor knows that false or perjured testimony will be elicited on cross-examination of a government witness, and also knows that the assertion of a privilege during the defendant's case will prevent the defense from challenging the testimony, the prosecutor's failure to notify the defendant of the anticipated claim of privilege in advance of the defendant's attempt to elicit the false or perjured responses may constitute passive but knowing action which allows false or perjured testimony to be presented with a materially false impression. If so, the government will be treated as if it introduced the false or perjured testimony itself, and the defendant's right to due process of law will likely be implicated. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d 819, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20902 (5th Cir. 1981).

Prosecutorial vindictiveness. — Where permitting reindictment of a defendant would chill the defendant's exercise of procedural rights to a greater extent than forbidding reindictment would infringe upon the prosecutor's exercise of independent discretion, the reasonable apprehension of vindictiveness, without a showing of actual retaliatory motive, is sufficient to establish a due process violation. United States v. Spence, 719 F.2d 358, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 15503 (11th Cir. 1983).

The government's decision to indict a defendant on additional charges, following the reversal of a lesser charge on appeal, was free of vindictiveness, under the following circumstances: (1) the initial indictment was based on the defendant's agreement to plead guilty to a single count carrying a possible 15-year sentence; (2) that indictment was not superseded by a larger indictment, following the defendant's refusal to plead guilty, due to an agreement to allow the defendant to litigate the validity of the search leading to the indictment and to preserve that issue for appeal; and (3) the government's motive in reindicting the defendant was not to punish the defendant for the defendant's successful appeal, but to make sure the defendant received a sentence commensurate with the defendant's criminal activity. United States v. Taylor, 749 F.2d 1511, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 27472 (11th Cir. 1985).

Presumption of vindictiveness did not apply. — When the defendant was convicted of aggravated assault, burglary, theft by taking, and carrying a concealed weapon, the trial court properly imposed a 111-year sentence of imprisonment, which was within the statutory limits and which was the maximum possible. The presumption of vindictiveness was absent when a trial court imposed a greater penalty after trial than the court would have after a guilty plea; furthermore, the trial court explained that the court imposed the sentence because the defendant's actions were life-threatening, because the jury convicted the defendant of entering the dwelling with intent to commit murder, because the defendant's actions against one victim, the defendant's parent, had escalated from the defendant's previous misdemeanor crimes against the parent, and because the defendant displayed no remorse. Townes v. State, 298 Ga. App. 185, 679 S.E.2d 772, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 637 (2009).

Fingerprint evidence alone, under proper circumstances, can be sufficient to sustain a conviction for an offense like burglary against a constitutional attack on the sufficiency of evidence. Duncan v. Stynchcombe, 704 F.2d 1213, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 28180 (11th Cir. 1983).

Evidence outside record on appeal.

— Although appellate court considered evidence outside the record in affirming murder conviction, there was no prejudice to defendant, as on appeal from habeas proceeding, court could disregard such evidence and re-review record to determine if jury was authorized to find that state had met its burden, and defendant could re-argue sufficiency of the evidence. Zant v. Nelson, 250 Ga. 152, 296 S.E.2d 590, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1228 (1982), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1056, 103 S. Ct. 1507, 75 L. Ed. 2d 936 (1983).

Evidence of another criminal act is admissible to show motive, intent, plan, identity, bent of mind and course of conduct, where the state shows that the accused was the perpetrator of the other criminal act and that there is a sufficient similarity between the other criminal act and the crime charged. Dudley v. State, 179 Ga. App. 252, 345 S.E.2d 888, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2603 (1986).

Evidence of unreported similar crimes admissible. — The trial court did not err in allowing in evidence the testimony of the defendant's former spouse as to the defendant's alleged assaults upon the spouse, even though the spouse never reported these crimes to the police, because the evidence of these independent crimes was sufficiently similar to the crimes charged as well as relevant to the issues at trial to warrant its admission. Lewis v. State, 179 Ga. App. 121, 346 S.E.2d 70, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 1831 (1986).

Evidence of crimes for which defendant acquitted. — The trial court committed harmless error in admitting the testimony of a witness who swore that appellant had kidnapped, raped, and sodomized the witness some ten days prior to the crimes in the case at bar, though defendant had been tried and acquitted of these earlier crimes because there was properly admitted evidence of independent offenses in addition to evidence of the erroneously admitted acquittal. Lewis v. State, 179 Ga. App. 121, 346 S.E.2d 70, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 1831 (1986).

Testimony by the victim that the victim waited until the victim heard that the defendant was in jail before reporting the crimes to the police, testimony was properly admitted as explaining the victim's conduct in waiting several days before reporting the crimes, notwithstanding any potential prejudice to the defendant. Lewis v. State, 179 Ga. App. 121, 346 S.E.2d 70, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 1831 (1986).

Erroneous admission of a statement obtained in violation of the Miranda rule was harmless error, where there were no coercive police tactics inherently offensive to due process and no reasonable chance that the error contributed to the verdict. Metheny v. State, 197 Ga. App. 882, 400 S.E.2d 25, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1514 (1990).

Exclusion of confession. — Although not every denial of a motion for continuance to obtain witnesses will violate an accused's right to compulsory process, and not every exclusion of hearsay testimony will violate an accused's right to due process, when there is a confession and the circumstances present a compelling case of the reliability and important relevance of the excluded testimony, the trial of such a case without the confession being made known to the jury fails to provide due process of the law. Wilkerson v. Turner, 693 F.2d 121, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 23576 (11th Cir. 1982).

Admission of breath test results. — Trial court properly denied the defendant's amended motion for a new trial, holding that the administration of breath tests pursuant to Ga. Comp. R. & Regs. 92-3-.06(12)(b) did not violate the due process clause under both U.S. Const., amend. 5 or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I, given that: (1) said claim was raised for the first time at the same time as the new trial motion, and was thus untimely; (2) the defendant had an alternative remedy under the Georgia Administrative Procedure Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-13-1; (3) the defendant failed to show that the Division of Forensic Sciences (DFS) eliminated meaningful procedures for conducting breath tests when it promulgated the rule; and (4) the techniques and methods approved by DFS were sufficient to ensure fair and accurate testing. Palmaka v. State, 280 Ga. App. 761, 634 S.E.2d 883, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 939 (2006), cert. denied, No. S06C2108, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 914 (Ga. Oct. 30, 2006).

Retaliatory prosecutorial increase in charges. — Once a prosecutor exercises the discretion to bring certain charges against a defendant, neither the prosecutor nor a successor may, without explanation, increase the number of or severity of those charges in circumstances that suggest that the increase is retaliation for the defendant's assertion of a statutory or constitutional rights. Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 11780 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 590 (1978).

Reindictment of a defendant violates due process whenever a prosecutor adds new charges merely to retaliate against the defendant for exercising statutory or constitutional rights. United States v. Spence, 719 F.2d 358, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 15503 (11th Cir. 1983).

Increasing time served on remand. — On remand, it was error for the trial court to increase the amount of time the defendant was to serve and to threaten to increase the time once again if the defendant took another appeal. Due process required that vindictiveness play no part in the sentence a defendant received. Schlanger v. State, 297 Ga. App. 785, 678 S.E.2d 190, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 530 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1542, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 127 (Ga. Feb. 1, 2010).

Proof requirements in proceedings of State Bar of Georgia. — The requirement of proof beyond a reasonable doubt by former Rule 4-215(f) (Rule 4-221(e)) of the State Bar of Georgia does not convert the disciplinary proceeding into a criminal one. The exclusion of reasonable doubt means no more than that the jury or trier of fact must be clearly satisfied. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 783 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 90 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 1857 (1970).

Proof of venue is an essential element in proving guilt in a criminal case. Jones v.

State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

Venue in conspiracy prosecutions.

— Venue in a conspiracy prosecution is properly laid either in the jurisdiction where the conspiracy was formed or in any jurisdiction wherein a conspirator committed an overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

Where overt acts are alleged to have been committed in more than one jurisdiction, it is essential in a conspiracy prosecution that the jury be properly instructed as to venue. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

Validity of presumptions in prosecutions under former Code 1933, § 26-1808.1 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-8-15). — Whether presumption of former Code 1933, § 26-1808.1 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-8-15), dealing with conversion of certain payments, that failure to pay for material or labor is prima facie evidence of intent to defraud is constitutionally invalid, depends upon whether the jury in a particular case, after instructions, interprets presumption as burden-shifting or conclusive rather than permissive only. State v. Hudson, 247 Ga. 36, 273 S.E.2d 616, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 601 (1981).

Burden of proving entrapment.

— In a prosecution for conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute cocaine, the defendant was not entitled to have the jury instructed as to the defense of entrapment where the defendant failed to meet the burden of producing evidence to establish government misconduct. United States v. Lockett, 867 F. Supp. 1044, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16441 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 70 F.3d 126, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 32870 (11th Cir. 1995).

5. Jury Selection and Instructions

Due process governs jury composition, even where not constitutionally compelled. — If a state chooses, quite apart from constitutional compulsion, to use a grand or petit jury, due process imposes limitations on the composition of that jury. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S.

Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Duties of jury selection officials.

— There is an affirmative duty imposed by the Constitution upon the jury selection officials, the jury commissioner, and clerk of court, to know the availability of potentially qualified persons within significant elements of the community, including those which have been the object of state discrimination, to develop and use a system that will result in a fair cross section of qualified persons in the community being placed on the jury rolls, and to follow a procedure which will not operate to discriminate in the selection of jurors on racial grounds. Mobley v. United States, 379 F.2d 768, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 5810 (5th Cir. 1967).

Protection from jurors incapable of rendering impartial verdict.

— The due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5 protects a defendant from jurors who are actually incapable of rendering an impartial verdict, based on the evidence and the law. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Juries must be drawn from a fair cross section of the community.

— It is part of the established tradition in the use of juries as instruments of public justice that the jury be a body truly representative of the community. Mobley v. United States, 379 F.2d 768, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 5810 (5th Cir. 1967).

Pursuit of juror competency must not prevent fair cross section.

— In compiling jury lists, both the need for competency and for a fair cross section of the community are important elements but the desire for competency must not be pursued to the extent that it prevents a fair cross section and any attempt to gain competent jurors that would result in a less representative cross section than one drawn from the statutorily qualified pool would destroy the right to serve on juries. Mobley v. United States, 379 F.2d 768, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 5810 (5th Cir. 1967).

Jury lists need not exactly reflect racial make-up of population.

— The Constitution does not require an exact proportion between the percentage of blacks in the population and those on jury lists. Mobley v. United States, 379 F.2d 768, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 5810 (5th Cir. 1967).

Constitution does not require that any particular panel of jurors in a criminal trial include members of the defendant's race. Mobley v. United States, 379 F.2d 768, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 5810 (5th Cir. 1967).

Decided, unexplained, long-term variations are sufficient proof of systematic exclusion. — Very decided variations in proportions of blacks and whites on jury lists from racial proportions in the population, which variations are not explained and are long continued, furnish sufficient evidence of systematic exclusion from jury service. Mobley v. United States, 379 F.2d 768, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 5810 (5th Cir. 1967).

Exclusion of blacks injures potential jurors as well as defendants. — The exclusion of blacks from jury service injures not only defendants, but also other members of the excluded class. It denies the class of potential jurors the privilege of participating equally in the administration of justice, and it stigmatizes the whole class, even those who do not wish to participate. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Effect of systematic exclusion from jury venire of members of defendant's race. — A conviction of a black person cannot stand if the petit jury is drawn from a jury venire that systematically and arbitrarily excludes blacks, for such constitutes a denial of due process and equal protection of the laws. Mobley v. United States, 379 F.2d 768, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 5810 (5th Cir. 1967).

Exclusion of persons not of defendant's race. — If blacks are systematically excluded from a white defendant's grand and petit juries, then the defendant is indicted and convicted by tribunals that fail to satisfy the elementary requirements of due process, and neither the indictment nor the conviction can stand.

Ferguson v. Dutton, 477 F.2d 121, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10984 (5th Cir. 1973).

Exclusion of discernible classes from jury service. — The exclusion of a discernible class from jury service injures not only those defendants who belong to the excluded class, but other defendants as well, in that it destroys the possibility that the jury will reflect a representative cross section of the community. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Exclusion of occupational categories. — A state may exclude certain occupational categories from jury service on the bona fide ground that it is for the good of the community that their regular work should not be interrupted. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Lowering of minimum jury service age to 18 not constitutionally required. — A jury list which excludes all people 18 to 21 years of age does not deny the defendant the right to a public trial and due process of law, despite the lowering of the minimum age for federal jurors to 18 by 28 U.S.C. § 1865. United States v. Dukes, 479 F.2d 324, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9697 (5th Cir. 1973).

Defendant's standing to attack jury selection system. — Whatever the criminal defendant's race, the defendant has standing to challenge the system used to select the grand or petit jury, on the ground that it arbitrarily excludes from service the members of any race, and thereby denies the defendant due process of law. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Burden of proof in attack on jury selection procedure. — The burden of proof is on the person attacking a jury selection procedure to show the existence of purposeful discrimination. Purposeful discrimination may not be assumed or merely asserted, it must be proven. Mobley v. United States, 379 F.2d 768, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 5810 (5th Cir. 1967).

Replacing one juror with an alternate juror after out-of-court contact between the juror and defense counsel did not violate a murder defendant's constitutional rights to due process and trial by an impartial jury, where the trial court had a sound basis for exercising its discretion to discharge the juror. Miller v. State, 261 Ga. 679, 410 S.E.2d 101, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 939 (1991).

Improper communication with jury. — Trial court erred in communicating with the jury outside the presence of appellant and appellant's counsel where it denied jury's request to see transcript of an eyewitness' statements to police in writing without notifying or consulting either side. Burtts v. State, 269 Ga. 402, 499 S.E.2d 326, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 439 (1998).

In capital cases, the jury should pass upon the case free from external causes tending to disturb the exercise of deliberate unbiased judgment. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Jurors need not be totally ignorant of the facts and issues involved in a case and the mere existence of a preconceived notion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused is not, in itself, sufficient to rebut the presumption of impartiality if the juror can lay aside the juror's impression and render a verdict based only on the evidence presented in court. However, this general rule does not foreclose inquiry whether, in a given case, the application of the rule works as a deprivation of liberty without due process. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Juror's statement that the juror can lay aside already formed impressions. — The rule that it is sufficient for juror to state that the juror can lay aside the juror's impressions and render a verdict based only on the evidence does not close inquiry to determine whether in a given case the application of the rule deprives a defendant of due process. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Disclosure to jury of agreement between prosecutor and accomplice. —

Due process mandates that the jury be informed of any understanding or agreement reached between the prosecutor and an alleged accomplice, on whose testimony the state's case depends. Williams v. State, 151 Ga. App. 683, 261 S.E.2d 430, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2747 (1979).

There was no denial of due process or confrontation rights where the trial court ruled improper a question by defense counsel on cross-examination that presumed the existence of an unprovable "deal" between the state and the witness; the court did not preclude all inquiry on a subject with respect to which the defendant was entitled to reasonable cross-examination. Watkins v. State, 264 Ga. 657, 449 S.E.2d 834, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 898 (1994).

Disclosure to jury of nolle prosequi agreement. — Where the jury is made aware of a nolle prosequi agreement between defendant and the prosecutor by the prosecutor's disclosure of the agreement, the requirements of due process are satisfied. Williams v. State, 151 Ga. App. 683, 261 S.E.2d 430, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2747 (1979).

If a case has been submitted to the jury on several alternative theories, one of which is unconstitutional, a general verdict of guilty which does not indicate it was based upon one of the constitutional theories must be set aside. Crawford v. State, 254 Ga. 435, 330 S.E.2d 567, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 732 (1985); 257 Ga. 681, 362 S.E.2d 201 (1987).

Where jury was charged on both malice murder and felony murder and returned a general "guilty" verdict, the conviction required reversal where the indictment did not allege facts which would put the defendant on notice that he would be required to defend against the felony-murder charge at trial. Crawford v. State, 254 Ga. 435, 330 S.E.2d 567, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 732 (1985); 257 Ga. 681, 362 S.E.2d 201 (1987).

Jury charge as to standard of proof for alibi defense. — The remote possibility that an alibi charge stating that the defendant must establish the defendant's alibi to the reasonable satisfaction of the jury may have affected the integrity of the fact-finding process in the trials in which it was given is outweighed by considerations of reliance upon prior law and of the potential impact upon the administration of justice. Accordingly, the rule will be applied only to trials conducted after December 16, 1968, the date on which Johnson v. Bennett, 393 U.S. 253, 89 S. Ct. 436, 21 L. Ed. 2d 415 (1968) and Bennett v. Stump, 393 U.S. 1001, 89 S. Ct. 483, 21 L. Ed. 2d 466 (1968) were decided. Bassett v. Smith, 464 F.2d 347, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 8374 (5th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 410 U.S. 991, 93 S. Ct. 1509, 36 L. Ed. 2d 190, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 3115 (1973).

A charge to the jury requiring that a defendant presenting alibi evidence must establish the defendant's alibi to the reasonable satisfaction of the jury, violates due process because such a highly ambiguous and contradictory charge might lead the jury to an erroneous belief that it is free to apply a lesser standard of proof to an essential element of the crime, that is, the defendant's presence. Bassett v. Smith, 464 F.2d 347, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 8374 (5th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 410 U.S. 991, 93 S. Ct. 1509, 36 L. Ed. 2d 190, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 3115 (1973).

Charge as to jury presumptions and inferences. — Charge telling jury that they were entitled to make certain presumptions or draw certain inferences from the evidence, not that the law required them to do so, did not violate due process. Freeman v. State, 183 Ga. App. 264, 358 S.E.2d 623, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2689 (1987), cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905.

Charge as to conflict in testimony. — A trial court's charge to the jury that any conflict in the testimony of witnesses should, if possible, be settled "without believing that the witnesses made a false statement" is not unconstitutionally burden shifting nor violative of the fifth amendment privilege against self-incrimination. Madyun v. State, 188 Ga. App. 253, 372 S.E.2d 655, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 968 (1988).

Recharge instruction constitutional. — The trial court did not err in recharging the jury on malice murder and not on manslaughter, since the instruction was limited to the specific point raised by the jury's inquiry and was followed by a general statement disclaiming any instructional emphasis. Williams v. State, 263 Ga. 135, 429 S.E.2d 512, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 459 (1993).

Instruction as to implication of malice in murder prosecution. — A trial court's jury instruction in a murder prosecution that malice shall be implied where no considerable provocation appears and where all the circumstances of the killing show an abandoned and malignant heart, in view of the strong circumstantial evidence that preceded it, could not have been interpreted by the jury as changing the reasonable-doubt burden of proof they were initially told that the prosecution had to meet. Lamb v. Jernigan, 683 F.2d 1332, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 16432 (11th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1024, 103 S. Ct. 1276, 75 L. Ed. 2d 496, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 4094 (1983).

Instructions as to mitigating circumstances need not necessarily accompany those for aggravating circumstances. — The portion of former Code 1933, § 27-2534.1 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30) that requires the trial court to give in writing to the jury the statutory instructions as to mitigating or aggravating circumstances does not violate due process and equal protection under U.S. Const., amend. 5 or U.S. Const., amend. 14, and without a concurrent right to send written instructions to the jury as to mitigating circumstances, the aggravating circumstances are not prejudicially emphasized, because the written material furnished to the jury is purely of a procedural nature and amounts to nothing more than a written formulation of the jury's potential verdicts. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1336 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993), overruled in part, McClellan v. State, 274

Instruction as to burden of proof on issue of insanity. — Where the court's charge includes instruction as to insanity but places the burden of proof as to each essential element of the crime, including intent, upon the state beyond a reasonable doubt, it is not a denial to the defendant of due process of law for the court not to instruct the jury specifically, absent a request, as to any burden of proof regarding sanity. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1370 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977).

Curative instruction to jury to disregard testimony. — Because the trial judge, after the witness relied upon U.S. Const., amend. 5 when counsel for the defendant began to cross-examine the witness, instructed the jury that the witness' evidence was not admissible and that "you should not let what this witness has said up to this point have any bearing on the verdict you make in this case," there was no error harmful to the defendant. Especially is this true since counsel made no motion for mistrial or request for additional instructions to the jury. Smith v. State, 120 Ga. App. 613, 171 S.E.2d 755, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 880 (1969).

Superior court did not err in failing to dismiss the indictment on the ground that the delay in the defendant's arrest and indictment violated the defendant's rights to due process under the fifth and fourteenth amendments and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I because neither actual prejudice nor deliberate adverse action on the part of the state had been shown; the defendant was not in custody during the period in question. Higgenbottom v. State, 290 Ga. 198, 719 S.E.2d 482, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 944 (2011).

Discriminatory intent not shown. — Trial court did not err when it did not uphold defendant's challenge to the state's exercise of its peremptory strikes to remove two African-American individuals from the venire; not only was defendant's challenge untimely because it was made after the jury was selected and sworn, but, also, defendant did not carry defendant's burden of showing the state's exercise of its peremptory strikes was motivated by discriminatory intent. Oliver v. State, 276 Ga. 665, 581 S.E.2d 538, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 545 (2003).

In a Batson challenge, the trial court found that defendant made a prima facie showing of racial discrimination and proceeded to an evaluation of the state's explanations for its strikes against two African-American members of the jury venire, but the state's explanations that: (1) it struck the first prospective juror because that juror's answers did not relate to the questions asked of the juror and were not well articulated, leading the prosecutor to suspect that the juror possessed limited intelligence; and (2) it struck the second juror because the second juror's perceptions of an incident at a water fountain with another juror and the second juror's decision to report it indicated undue attention to issues of race, and that it would have struck any potential juror who reported such an incident, regardless of that juror's race were race neutral and did not show any discriminatory intent. Roberts v. State, 278 Ga. 541, 604 S.E.2d 500, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 948 (2004).

Trial court was not clearly erroneous in finding that the state gave race-neutral reasons for its peremptory strikes of African-American jurors and that those reasons were not a pretext for purposeful discrimination; thus, defendant's Batson claim failed. Wicks v. State, 278 Ga. 550, 604 S.E.2d 768, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 916 (2004).

Juror beginning deliberations before close of evidence. — Trial court did not err in denying a defendant's motion for a mistrial based upon the allegation that one or more jurors had begun deliberating before the close of the evidence. While the record showed that at least one juror had begun thinking about the case, there was no evidence that any deliberation of the case had begun; moreover when the jury reentered the courtroom, the trial court gave a curative instruction. Boone v. State, 293 Ga. App. 654, 667 S.E.2d 880, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1041 (2008).

6. Assistance of Counsel

What due process requires as to

representation by counsel. — If, as in this state, the law requires the appointment of counsel for indigent persons, and certainly in a capital case, if the defendant is unable to engage a lawyer and is incapacitated by ignorance, illiteracy, physical disability, or the like, to adequately make the defendant's own defense, due process of law requires that the court assign counsel for the defendant, competent to serve, and who shall give more than casual or perfunctory service to the prisoner. Lip service only will not do. And the constitution also requires that a fair opportunity shall be afforded such counsel to consult the client and to prepare a defense against the charge. Coates v. Lawrence, 46 F. Supp. 414, 1942 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2548 (D. Ga.), aff'd, 131 F.2d 110, 1942 U.S. App. LEXIS 2727 (5th Cir. 1942).

Comparison of right under fifth and sixth amendments. — The events triggering the attachment of a right to counsel under the fifth amendment differ from those which trigger the attachment under the sixth amendment, but once attached, either right may be waived in an essentially identical manner and subject to the same limitations. Housel v. State, 257 Ga. 115, 355 S.E.2d 651, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 745 (1987), cert. denied, 487 U.S. 1240, 108 S. Ct. 2915, 101 L. Ed. 2d 946, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3189 (1988).

Four-month delay in appointment of counsel is not, ipso facto, a denial of effective assistance of counsel, if the appellant is appointed counsel at arraignment, and granted a continuance to allow adequate preparation time. Wells v. State, 151 Ga. App. 416, 260 S.E.2d 374, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2553 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Copeland v. State, 160 Ga. App. 786, 287 S.E.2d 120, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 1687 (1982).

If person is in no way compelled to forego right to counsel, no constitutional right is violated. — If the petitioner is not forced to go to trial without counsel; and does not ask for counsel; and is not denied the opportunity to procure counsel; and nothing done by the trial court forbids the petitioner's securing counsel or obtaining the benefit thereof, there is no denial, or even an abridgment, of any right secured to the petitioner by the federal or state Constitutions. Clarke v. Cobb, 195 Ga. 633, 24 S.E.2d 782, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 531 (1943).

An application for appointment of counsel prior to the initiation of an adversarial judicial proceeding against defendant did not constitute the invocation of the right to counsel for fifth amendment purposes. Turner v. State, 267 Ga. 149, 476 S.E.2d 252, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 728 (1996), overruled in part, Byrd v. State, 314 Ga. 21, 875 S.E.2d 643, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 178 (2022).

The mere completion of an application to obtain appointed counsel, without more, is not sufficient to invoke the fifth amendment right to counsel. Beck v. State, 235 Ga. App. 707, 510 S.E.2d 368, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1596 (1998).

Ineffective assistance not shown. — Because the evidence showed that the defendant's counsel discussed with the defendant the right to testify and advised against it, and the defendant never affirmatively asked to testify, the defendant failed to demonstrate that counsel erroneously deprived the defendant of the choice to testify and that counsel's deficiency in this regard deprived the defendant of a fair trial. Mobley v. State, 264 Ga. 854, 452 S.E.2d 500, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 41 (1995); Barron v. State, 264 Ga. 865, 452 S.E.2d 504, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 35 (1995).

Improper denial of the right to counsel of choice violates Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI, (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV), and former Code 1933, § 27-403 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-24), and abrogates the right of procedural due process. Johnson v. State, 139 Ga. App. 829, 229 S.E.2d 772, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2014 (1976).

Accused has right to retain counsel, regardless of offense. — Without regard to the grade or seriousness of crimes, U.S. Const., amend. 5 requires, if a person accused of crime procures counsel, that the court shall permit such counsel to represent and assist the accused, but it does not require the court to furnish counsel. It is implied that reasonable opportunity shall be afforded to obtain counsel. Sanford v. Robbins, 115 F.2d 435, 1940 U.S. App. LEXIS 2894 (5th Cir. 1940), cert. denied, 312 U.S. 697, 61 S. Ct. 737, 85 L. Ed. 1132, 1941 U.S. LEXIS 862 (1941).

Constitutional guarantees of counsel of choice may be waived by action or declaration. Johnson v. State, 139 Ga. App. 829, 229 S.E.2d 772, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2014 (1976).

An accused who expresses a desire to deal with the police only through counsel is not subject to further interrogation by the authorities until counsel has been made available to him, unless the accused himself initiates further communication, exchanges or conversations with the police. Barksdale v. State, 161 Ga. App. 155, 291 S.E.2d 18, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 3248 (1981).

Improper interrogation. — Law enforcement authorities violated the defendant's right to counsel when they interrogated the defendant knowing that the defendant had previously requested and consulted with an attorney. Gissendaner v. State, 269 Ga. 495, 500 S.E.2d 577, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 565 (1998).

While non-custodial and custodial statements were properly admitted, as not vitiating the defendant's constitutional rights once defendant invoked the right to counsel, a subsequent interview initiated by police violated this right; as a result, cocaine seized through information obtained from the interview had to be suppressed as fruit of the poisonous tree. Vergara v. State, 283 Ga. 175, 657 S.E.2d 863, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 202 (2008), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023).

Waiver. — When an accused has invoked the right to have counsel present during custodial interrogation, a valid waiver of that right cannot be established by showing only that the defendant responded to further police-initiated custodial interrogation even if the defendant has been advised of the defendant's rights. Barksdale v. State, 161 Ga. App. 155, 291 S.E.2d 18, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 3248 (1981).

No invocation of right to lawyer. — Neither the defendant's refusal to sign a waiver nor the defendant's attempt to make a "deal" with the defendant's interrogator was an invocation of the defendant's right to a lawyer so that the interview with the defendant should not have taken place. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 281, 368 S.E.2d 742, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 276 (1988), cert. denied, 492 U.S. 925, 109 S. Ct. 3261, 106 L. Ed. 2d 606, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 3313 (1989).

Because the defendant did not request the presence of an attorney at any time, merely inquired about when in the future the defendant could see a lawyer, and initialed and signed the waiver form that the defendant understood the defendant's rights, the fifth amendment right to counsel was not invoked. Beck v. State, 235 Ga. App. 707, 510 S.E.2d 368, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1596 (1998).

Effect of execution of eligibility form for court appointed counsel. — Defendant's execution of an "eligibility affidavit form," essentially a financial statement made for the purpose of informing the county indigent defense program of an accused's financial condition, constituted a request for court-appointed counsel once judicial proceedings were initiated and did not constitute an invocation of the right to counsel for fifth amendment purposes; thus, a statement given to police while in custody was not taken in violation of the defendant's constitutional rights because at the time the defendant completed the form, no adversarial criminal proceeding had been initiated against the defendant and no sixth amendment concerns had come into play; reversing Hatcher v. State, 212 Ga. App. 46, 441 S.E.2d 672. State v. Hatcher, 264 Ga. 556, 448 S.E.2d 698, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 836 (1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1038, 115 S. Ct. 1405, 131 L. Ed. 2d 291, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 2307 (1995).

Determination as to whether waiver intelligent. — The determination as to an intelligent waiver of the right to counsel must depend, in each case, upon the particular facts and circumstances surrounding the case. Johnson v. State, 139 Ga. App. 829, 229 S.E.2d 772, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2014 (1976).

Obligation not to reject "the cause of the defenseless". — Lawyers undertake certain professional obligations over and above those demanded of some of the other professions, among them being never to reject, for a consideration personal to themselves, the cause of the defenseless. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966).

Judge's request that an attorney represent an indigent criminal is tantamount to a demand with which the attorney must necessarily comply. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966).

Compensation for services not constitutionally required. — An attorney's professional services, work product, and necessary out-of-pocket expenses in providing competent representation are not required by the Constitution to be compensated. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966).

Court's failure to make effective appointment violates due process. — The necessity of counsel is so vital and imperative that the failure of the trial court to make an effective appointment of counsel is likewise a denial of due process within the meaning of U.S. Const., amends. 5 and 14. Bridwell v. Aderhold, 13 F. Supp. 253, 1935 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1098 (D. Ga. 1935), aff'd, 92 F.2d 748, 1937 U.S. App. LEXIS 4689 (5th Cir. 1937).

Counsel has broad discretion in conduct of trial. — In the conduct of a trial, broad latitude of advice, direction, and policy in the interest of the client is essentially vested in counsel. Counsel often waive apparently important points in the bona fide belief that, on the whole, greater advantage will be gained indirectly than might have been gained directly by insisting on them, and such a waiver either express or implied would ordinarily not tend to show incompetency.

No lawyer is infallible, and the constitutional guaranties of the benefit of counsel, and of due process, do not contemplate such infallibility. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 193 Ga. 661, 19 S.E.2d 499, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 449, cert. denied, 317 U.S. 626, 63 S. Ct. 36, 87 L. Ed. 506, 1942 U.S. LEXIS 274 (1942).

Due process violated by deficient performance of counsel. — The due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5 is violated whenever the performance of counsel, whether retained or appointed, is so deficient as to render the proceedings fundamentally unfair. United States v. Alvarez, 580 F.2d 1251, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 8749 (5th Cir. 1978).

Defendant's due process rights were violated where throughout the state and federal habeas proceedings the defendant was induced to plead guilty by the defendant's counsel's erroneous advice that the plea bargain would enable the defendant to serve the federal and state sentences concurrently. Thus, the attorney provided ineffective assistance to the defendant as the guilty plea was not knowing, intelligent and voluntary. Finch v. Vaughn, 67 F.3d 909, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 30983 (11th Cir. 1995).

Counsel's errors not necessarily a denial of due process. — That attorneys do not move for a continuance and obtain a longer time to prepare the case, because they allow irrelevant or otherwise illegal evidence to be admitted without objection, that they rely solely on the statement of the defendant to the jury without introducing testimony, and that they themselves do not actively pursue a motion for new trial are not matters which would constitute a denial of the right to due process, but at most would amount to alleged negligence or errors of judgment. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 193 Ga. 661, 19 S.E.2d 499, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 449, cert. denied, 317 U.S. 626, 63 S. Ct. 36, 87 L. Ed. 506, 1942 U.S. LEXIS 274 (1942).

Counsel's conflict of interest violates right to counsel, even absent showing of prejudice. — An accused, whether represented by appointed or retained counsel, is deprived of the right to effective assistance of counsel under U.S. Const., amend. 5 and U.S. Const., amend.

6, even in the absence of a showing of prejudice, when the accused's attorney operates under an actual conflict of interest. United States v. Alvarez, 580 F.2d 1251, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 8749 (5th Cir. 1978).

Absence of counsel during subsequent jury poll. — Where defense counsel is present at the first poll of the jury and fails to apprise the court of any defect in the polling procedure, absence of defense counsel at the post-sentence poll, held after realization that two jurors had inadvertently not been polled, of two jurors inadvertently omitted in original poll is not violative of any appellant's constitutional rights to counsel or due process. Hargett v. State, 151 Ga. App. 532, 260 S.E.2d 406, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2624 (1979).

Defendant not denied assistance of counsel where co-counsel present and defendant uninjured. — If none of the statutory requirements necessary for the granting of a continuance are put forth by co-counsel when the case is called, and there is no showing that the defendant was injured by the absence of the defendant's lead counsel, there is no merit in the complaint that the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for continuance because of the absence of counsel and that the defendant has been denied the sixth amendment right to counsel and the fifth amendment right to due process as guaranteed by the state and federal constitutions. Blair v. State, 166 Ga. App. 434, 304 S.E.2d 535, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2201 (1983).

Where a preliminary hearing is held in the absence of defendant's counsel, the reviewing court must reverse if it determines that the lack of counsel might have contributed to the conviction. Mitchell v. State, 173 Ga. App. 560, 327 S.E.2d 537, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2654 (1985).

Waiver of right to counsel at plea hearing. — A judge must be present before a defendant may waive the constitutional right to be represented by counsel at a plea hearing. Penney v. Vaughn, 870 F. Supp. 1093, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17963 (M.D. Ga. 1994).

Abandonment of appeal without notice and without defendant's con- sent. — Counsel's abandonment of a criminal appeal, without notice and without the defendant's consent, deprives the defendant of right to counsel and right to appeal. Chapman v. United States, 469 F.2d 634, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6938 (5th Cir. 1972).

Notice of right to rehearing under former Rule 33 (Rule 48) of Georgia Court of Appeals. — Even if appointed counsel is not required to file a petition for rehearing under former Rule 33 (now Rule 48) of the Georgia Court of Appeals, a defendant is denied due process if that court fails to notify the defendant adequately of the right to file the petition pro se. Moye v. Highsmith, 460 F.2d 1388, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 9047 (5th Cir. 1972), overruled in part, Galtieri v. Wainwright, 545 F.2d 942, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 14539 (5th Cir. 1977).

7. Discovery, Compulsory Process, and Suppression of Evidence

Criminal Procedure Discovery Act constitutional. — Because the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act (O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq.) provides for reciprocal discovery in criminal felony cases with any imbalance favoring the defendant, it does not violate the due process clause of the United States or Georgia Constitutions. State v. Lucious, 271 Ga. 361, 518 S.E.2d 677, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 587 (1999).

Withholding or suppression by the prosecution of evidence material to guilt or punishment is violative of due process. United States v. D'Antignac, 628 F.2d 428, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 13010 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 967, 101 S. Ct. 1485, 67 L. Ed. 2d 617, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 1127 (1981).

Presence of defendant's material witnesses may be required. — Right of the criminal defendant to compulsory process under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and the right to due process under U.S. Const., amend. 5 are sufficiently pervasive to require the presence of material witnesses in defendant's behalf. Wingfield v. State, 159 Ga. App. 69, 282 S.E.2d 713, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2492 (1981).

Omitted evidence must create a reasonable doubt of guilt that did not otherwise exist in order to justify a new trial. United States v. D'Antignac, 628 F.2d 428, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 13010 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 967, 101 S. Ct. 1485, 67 L. Ed. 2d 617, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 1127 (1981).

No statutory authority for discovery in criminal cases exists in this state. Brooks v. State, 141 Ga. App. 725, 234 S.E.2d 541, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2061 (1977).

Due process requires that the state not suppress evidence in its files that may be favorable to the accused. Brooks v. State, 141 Ga. App. 725, 234 S.E.2d 541, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2061 (1977).

Defendant has no pretrial discovery rights in state prosecution. — A defendant does not, as a matter of right, have the right to discover evidence, from a district attorney or other prosecuting officer of the state, documentary or otherwise, for use by the defendant or defense counsel before trial. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

Prosecution need not actively seek material not within its file. — There is no provision of Georgia law providing for discovery in criminal cases, and the due process requirements stated in Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963), and its progeny do not compel the prosecution to actively seek material which is not within its file in order to provide such to the defense. Honrine v. State, 177 Ga. App. 490, 339 S.E.2d 768, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2427 (1986).

State is under no requirement to conduct investigation on behalf of a defendant. Dalton v. State, 251 Ga. 641, 308 S.E.2d 835, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 950 (1983).

Exculpatory evidence delayed. — Defendant's fifth amendment rights were not violated when the defendant did not receive a copy of an exculpatory witness' statement until after indictment and following the defendant's second attorney's discovery motion. Defendant failed to prove how the outcome of the case would have been any different if defendant had been supplied the exculpatory statement at an earlier date. Rock v. Lowe, 893 F. Supp. 1573, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16088 (S.D. Ga. 1995), aff'd, 79 F.3d 1161, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 4579 (11th Cir. 1996).

Defendant's due process rights were not violated when the state crime lab lost a condom found 150 feet from the crime scene before the bodily fluids in the condom could be tested because the defendant failed to show both: (1) that it was apparent that the condom, which was found in a location frequented by prostitutes, would contain evidence of exculpatory value; and (2) that the state acted in bad faith in losing the condom, which occurred before the defendant was arrested and identified as a suspect. Sharp v. State, 286 Ga. 799, 692 S.E.2d 325, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 273 (2010).

Evidence not destroyed but transferred. — Defendant's due process rights were not violated by the state's turning over of a vehicle to codefendant's insurance company since the state did not destroy or fail to preserve the alleged exculpatory evidence. King v. State, 262 Ga. App. 37, 584 S.E.2d 652, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 834 (2003).

Defendant has burden of showing favorable information improperly withheld, denying defendant fair trial. — In a criminal case, in order to establish a due process violation based on denial of a Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963) motion for discovery of exculpatory material, the defendant has the burden of showing that any of the information allegedly withheld improperly was favorable to the defense, and that the withholding in any way denied the defendant a fair trial. Lewis v. State, 166 Ga. App. 428, 304 S.E.2d 531, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3237 (1983).

If the police lose evidence, no statutory or constitutional violation occurs. A Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963) violation occurs only when the state withholds exculpatory information in its possession from the defendant, and if the state does not withhold any information, but the police lose it, there is no error under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 (repealed), which entitles the defendant to copies of scientific reports possessed by the state. Dawson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 515, 304 S.E.2d 570, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3246 (1983).

Evidence favorable to accused. — The prosecution is required to turn over to the defense evidence which is favorable to the accused and material to guilt or punishment. Stroud v. State, 246 Ga. 717, 273 S.E.2d 155, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1273 (1980).

Due process considerations enter only if state purposefully suppresses evidence. — Due process considerations are not relevant to a discussion of a case where it had not been argued that the state purposefully suppressed evidence favorable to the accused. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

Requested material favorable to accused. — Pretrial discovery in favor of defendants is not required by considerations of due process in the absence of a showing that the evidence denied disclosure of by the prosecution upon request was materially favorable to the accused either as direct or impeaching evidence. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

Refusal to compel discovery not error where materials sought are not exculpatory. — Where none of the materials sought for inspection were exculpatory in nature, the trial court does not err in refusing to compel discovery pursuant to defendant's notices to produce any subpoenas. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

Where defendant's conviction or acquittal is dependent upon the identification of the substance as contraband, due process of law requires that analysis of the substance not be left completely within the province of the state, but the defendant does not have an absolute, unqualified right to examine such evidence. Emmett v. State, 243 Ga. 550, 255 S.E.2d 23, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 986 (1979).

Nondisclosure of statements made under hypnosis not denial of due process where inadmissible. — The refusal to disclose to the defendant the statements made to a psychologist by a prosecution witness during hypnotic sessions did not deny the defendant due process of law nor effective assistance of counsel because such statements were inadmissible at trial. Creamer v. State, 232 Ga. 136, 205 S.E.2d 240, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 886 (1974).

Government's duty to disclose in federal cases. — The government in a federal prosecution has an affirmative duty under the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5 to make available to an accused at the appropriate time, well in advance of trial, information which would be favorable to the accused as either direct or impeaching evidence. United States v. Houston, 339 F. Supp. 762, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14645 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Suppression of evidence requested by accused. — The suppression by the prosecution of evidence favorable to an accused, who has requested such evidence, violates due process where the evidence is material either to guilt or to punishment, irrespective of the good faith or bad faith of the prosecution. Calley v. Callaway, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 851 (1976); United States v. Anderson, 574 F.2d 1347, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 10678 (5th Cir. 1978).

Exculpatory evidence includes evidence useful for impeachment. — Disclosure of material evidence favorable in the sense of mitigation or exculpation also requires the prosecution to disclose evidence important and useful for impeachment purposes. Calley v. Callaway, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 851 (1976).

Furnishing to defendant in federal case of list of persons with information about case. — The prosecution, in federal court, must disclose to an accused before trial, upon timely request, the names and addresses of persons known to the government who have information about the accused or about the facts of the case. United States v. Houston, 339 F. Supp. 762, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14645 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Knowing prosecutorial use of false evidence or perjured testimony. —

The knowing use by the prosecution of false evidence or perjured testimony which is material to the issues in a criminal trial is a denial of due process. A conviction obtained by use of such evidence cannot be permitted to stand. United States v. Anderson, 574 F.2d 1347, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 10678 (5th Cir. 1978).

Failure to disclose plea bargaining negotiations with key prosecution witness. —

Failure of government to disclose to the defense and to the trial jury the existence of plea bargaining negotiations with a key witness deprives a defendant of due process of law under U.S. Const., amend. 5. United States v. Fontenot, 483 F.2d 315, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8351 (5th Cir. 1973).

Right to offer testimony and to compel witness' attendance is, in essence, the right to present a defense, and a fundamental element of due process of law. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Grant of subpoena of witness on relevant issue is mandatory. — Once it is established that a defendant's subpoena of a witness is relevant on any issue, it should be granted as mandated by the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5 and the compulsory process provision of U.S. Const., amend. 6. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Compulsory process applies to relevant and material witnesses, and nonfrivolous request should be granted. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Neither cumulativeness of testimony nor inconvenience grounds for denial of compulsory process. —

The right of a defendant to have compulsory process may not be sidestepped merely because of inconvenience, or because the court considers the witness' testimony cumulative. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

For circumstances indicating relevancy of witness' testimony, thus entitling defendant to have them subpoenaed. —

See Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Technical violations of procedure should not be allowed to emasculate the efficacy of constitutionally required compulsory process. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Defense need not always comply with every technical procedural requirement before being entitled to compulsory process. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Generalized assertion of privilege

yields to a demonstrated, specific need for evidence in a pending criminal trial. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Right to independent drug analysis. —

A defendant in a drug prosecution has a due process right to have an expert of the defendant's choosing perform an independent analysis on the seized substance. United States v. Nabors, 707 F.2d 1294, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 26494 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1021, 104 S. Ct. 1271, 79 L. Ed. 2d 677, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 1037 (1984); United States v. Lockett, 867 F. Supp. 1044, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16441 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 70 F.3d 126, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 32870 (11th Cir. 1995).

Effect of government's destruction of materials seized in drug case. —

The mistaken destruction of material seized in a drug case, so that the defendant cannot examine it, does not per se require the exclusion of testimony as to the nature of the material by the government witness who tested it. United States v. Nabors, 707 F.2d 1294, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 26494 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1021, 104 S. Ct. 1271, 79 L. Ed. 2d 677, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 1037 (1984); United States v. Lockett, 867 F. Supp. 1044, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16441 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 70 F.3d 126, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 32870 (11th Cir. 1995).

Without discounting the right of defendants in a drug prosecution to examine the material they are charged with possessing, the material has been destroyed in spite of the government's good faith attempt to preserve it, testimony as to the nature of the material need not be suppressed absent some showing that the testing of the material by another expert would have been reasonably likely to produce evidence favorable to the defendant. United States v. Nabors, 707 F.2d 1294, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 26494 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 465 U.S. 1021, 104 S. Ct. 1271, 79 L. Ed. 2d 677, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 1037 (1984); United States v. Lockett, 867 F. Supp. 1044, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16441 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 70 F.3d 126, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 32870 (11th Cir. 1995).

Failure to hold in camera inspection not error where no request filed. —

The trial court did not err in not requiring that the state present for inspection its entire file following defendant's motion and in not conducting an in camera inspection of the state's file prior to trial, where defendant did not file a separate request for in camera inspection. Swann v. State, 256 Ga. 254, 347 S.E.2d 555, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 815 (1986).

Evidence of a tape recording in which the victim had called a telephone operator after an attack, and that the operator had in turn called the police was relevant to illustrate the time span between discovery of the crime and police arrival on the scene. This fact was material, because it bore on the issue of whether or not the perpetrator had an opportunity to leave the scene. Catchings v. State, 256 Ga. 241, 347 S.E.2d 572, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 809 (1986).

Defendant's due process rights are not violated when district judge refers motion to suppress to a magistrate, reviews the record of the hearing before the magistrate, and adopts the magistrate's recommendations. United States v. Elsoffer, 644 F.2d 357, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 13843 (5th Cir. 1981).

Government may not invoke privilege as to anything material to defense. — Since the government which prosecutes an accused also has the duty to protect the defendant's constitutional rights, it may not undertake prosecution and then invoke its governmental privileges to deprive the accused of anything which might be material to the accused's defense. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Limits on exercise of presidential privilege of confidentiality. — The assertion of presidential privilege must yield to the need for evidence in a pending criminal trial and the fundamental demands of due process of law in the fair administration of justice. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

There is no presidential privilege to withhold evidence that is demonstrably relevant in a criminal trial because of the guarantee of due process of law and the necessity to protect the basic function of the courts. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Absent a claim of need to protect military, diplomatic, or sensitive national security secrets, the right under U.S. Const., amend. 6, to compulsory process and the right under U.S. Const., amend. 5 to due process of law require the presidential privilege as to confidential communications to give way where the district court determines after in-camera inspection that the material is relevant and admissible in a criminal trial. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d 819, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20902 (5th Cir. 1981).

Limits on exercise of legislative privilege of confidentiality. — The legislative branch is not entitled to invoke the privilege of confidentiality at the expense of the individual accused's right to evidence at the accused's criminal trial. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

In-court identification. — Even assuming that the pre-trial identification procedures were improperly suggestive, a victim's and a witness's in-court identifications were admissible because they were based on their independent recollections of the incident since the victim testified in court that the victim was 100 percent certain the defendant was the robber and that the victim's identification of the defendant was based on recognizing the defendant from the incident and the witness testified that the witness was certain the defendant was the person running with the gun on the day of the incident. Boatwright v. State, 281 Ga. App. 560, 636 S.E.2d 719, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1167 (2006).

Taped phone conversation admissible. — Because the defendant was not in police custody at the time of the defendant's secretly taped telephone conversation with a coconspirator, the defendant's fifth amendment rights were not implicated. Thorpe v. State, 285 Ga. 604, 678 S.E.2d 913, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 390 (2009).

8. Sentencing

Sentencing structure constitutional. — Statute outlining a sentencing structure that punished individuals convicted of possessing marijuana plants in proportion to the number of plants seized, regardless of the actual weight of marijuana obtainable from those plants, was constitutional. United States v. Osburn, 955 F.2d 1500, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 5049 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 878, 113 S. Ct. 223, 121 L. Ed. 2d 160, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 5919 (1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 901, 113 S. Ct. 290, 121 L. Ed. 2d 215, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 6277 (1992).

Imposition by jury of higher sentence upon reconviction. — When a jury imposes a higher sentence on reconviction this is not a violation of due process so long as the jury is not informed of the prior sentence. Shields v. State, 147 Ga. App. 96, 248 S.E.2d 171, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 2789 (1978).

Sanctions in a disbarment proceeding are not criminal in nature. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 783 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 90 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 1857 (1970).

No presumption of innocence at sentencing phase of trial. — If a defendant testifies during the sentencing phase of the trial, and when cross-examined about the defendant's participation in the crimes charged, the defendant elects to stand on the defendant's right against self-incrimination, the defendant, having already been convicted of crimes, has no presumption of innocence. The defendant stands before the sentencing jury as a convicted criminal. Brown v. State, 247 Ga. 298, 275 S.E.2d 52, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 683 (1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 882, 102 S. Ct. 366, 70 L. Ed. 2d 192 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. Zant, 249 Ga. 373, 290 S.E.2d 442, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1137 (1982).

Federal sentencing guidelines constitutional. — The career offender scheme of using a defendant's criminal record in considering both the defendant's offense level and the defendant's criminal history under the federal sentencing guidelines does not violate due process or equal protection. United States v. Johns, 984 F.2d 1162, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 3542 (11th Cir. 1993).

Sentencing compliant with Sentencing Guidelines. — A defendant's due process rights are violated only when a judge-decided fact actually increases a defendant's sentence beyond the prescribed statutory maximum penalty for the convicted crime and has no application to, or effect on, cases where a defendant's sentence falls at or below that maximum penalty; thus, there can be no due process violation in connection with either mandatory minimum sentences or Sentencing Guidelines calculations, when in either case the ultimate sentence imposed does not exceed the prescribed statutory maximum penalty. United States v. Sanchez, 269 F.3d 1250, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 22406 (11th Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 942, 122 S. Ct. 1327, 152 L. Ed. 2d 234, 2002 U.S. LEXIS 1763 (2002).

9. Appeals and Habeas Corpus

There is no constitutional right to an appeal. Brown v. State, 177 Ga. App. 146, 338 S.E.2d 718, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2953 (1985) (but see Chapman v. United States, 469 F.2d 634 (5th Cir. 1972)).

There is no constitutional right to bond pending appeal, but once a state undertakes to establish a system for prisoners to be released on bail pending appeal, it must not violate equal protection or due process guarantees. Browning v. State, 254 Ga. 478, 330 S.E.2d 879, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 806 (1985).

Impeachment evidence involving evidence from codefendant. — State death row inmate's federal habeas petition was denied because the prosecutor did not fail to disclose under Giglio that the prosecutor had promised a codefendant to write a favorable letter to the parole board as part of a plea agreement because the prosecutor did not decide to do so until after the codefendant testified. Ford v. Schofield, 488 F. Supp. 2d 1258, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 34958 (N.D. Ga. 2007), aff'd, 546 F.3d 1326, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 22318 (11th Cir. 2008).

Appeal from a district court's judgment of conviction in a criminal case is a matter of right, and abridgement of this right is incompatible with the most basic concept of due process. Chapman v. United States, 469 F.2d 634, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6938 (5th Cir. 1972).

Waiver of right to appeal criminal conviction not assumed unless the facts clearly support such an assumption. Chapman v. United States, 469 F.2d 634, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6938 (5th Cir. 1972).

Indigent may not be denied appellate review for want of transcript. — Equal protection and due process require that an indigent defendant, unable to pay the cost of recording and transcribing the proceedings, may not be denied adequate and effective appellate review accorded to all who have the money to pay these costs. Harm arises when, due to the absence of a transcript or an effective alternative, an enumeration of error raised by an indigent defendant cannot be adequately and effectively reviewed by the appellate courts. Sales v. State, 152 Ga. App. 635, 263 S.E.2d 519, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 3073 (1979).

Availability and purchase of transcript for indigent. — The purchase of a complete court reporter's transcript for indigent defendants is not required in all instances, but the burden which rests upon the state is to afford the indigent defendant a record of sufficient completeness to permit proper consideration of the contentions of error. Sales v. State, 152 Ga. App. 635, 263 S.E.2d 519, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 3073 (1979).

Delay in filing transcript. — Defendant was not deprived of defendant's due process rights by a seven-month delay in the filing of the transcript as defendant did not show that the delay impacted defendant's ability to adequately present defendant's appeal or impaired any defense that defendant might have had. Carter v. State, 267 Ga. App. 520, 600 S.E.2d 637, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 702 (2004).

Delay in motion for new trial. — Delay in resolving the defendant's motion for new trial did not violate defendant's right to due process because the defendant failed to offer the specific evidence required to show that the delay prejudiced the defendant's appeal or that the result of the appeal would have been different but for the delay; although the trial exhibits were not in the record, the defendant failed to explain how the absence of the trial exhibits impaired the defendant's ability to assert claims on appeal, while the defendant asserted that the defendant could have raised a challenge on appeal to the trial court's denial of the defendant's pre-trial motion for change of venue, the defendant failed to specify how the delay in proceedings harmed the defendant's ability to make such a claim, particularly given that voir dire was transcribed fully in the record, and the defendant made the bare assertion that it was impossible to investigate potential claims for ineffective assistance of trial counsel without identifying any reasonably viable ineffectiveness claims that could have been raised and without indicating whether any efforts had been made to contact trial counsel in that regard. Owens v. State, 286 Ga. 821, 693 S.E.2d 490, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 331 (2010), cert. denied, 562 U.S. 866, 131 S. Ct. 156, 178 L. Ed. 2d 93, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 6512 (2010), overruled in part, Shelton v. Lee, 299 Ga. 350, 788 S.E.2d 369, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 452 (2016).

Standard for evaluation of evidence on appeal. — The standard by which the evidence in a state criminal trial must be evaluated on appeal to determine whether petitioner has been accorded constitutional due process has been formulated by the Supreme Court of the United States to require, instead of determining whether or not there is "any evidence" to support petitioner's conviction, that a court on appeal must go further and satisfy itself that the evidence in the record could reasonably support a finding of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. The question, therefore, is not a question of the presence of evidence in the record but of the sufficiency of that evidence. Holloway v. McElroy, 474 F. Supp. 1363, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10243 (M.D. Ga. 1979), aff'd, 632 F.2d 605, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11507 (5th Cir. 1980).

When federal review of jury charge appropriate. — Federal review of a jury charge is appropriate only where it operates in an oppressive and arbitrary manner so as to render the trial fundamentally unfair. Bassett v. Smith, 464 F.2d 347, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 8374 (5th Cir.

Proof of jury prejudice. — General rule is that a defendant has the burden on appeal of proving actual jury prejudice if a conviction is to be reversed on grounds of prejudicial publicity. The requirement of showing actual prejudice may not be necessary in extreme circumstances where there has been inherently prejudicial publicity such as to make the possibility of prejudice highly likely or almost unavoidable. Calley v. Callaway, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 851 (1976).

Detailed explanations of the consequences of failure to proceed with an administrative appeal are not required with regard to notice of the right to appeal after criminal convictions, nor after prison disciplinary proceedings. Lane v. Hanberry, 593 F.2d 648, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15261 (5th Cir. 1979).

Notice and hearing as to revocation of appeal bail bond. — Due process requirements of U.S. Const., amends. 5 and 14, mandate notice and an evidentiary hearing upon the trial court's decision to revoke an appeal bail bond. Riggins v. State, 134 Ga. App. 941, 216 S.E.2d 723, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 2224 (1975).

Sole function of habeas corpus is to provide relief from unlawful imprisonment or custody, and it cannot be used for any other purpose. Cook v. Hanberry, 592 F.2d 248 (5th Cir.), supplementary opinion, 596 F.2d 658 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 932, 99 S. Ct. 2866, 61 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1979).

Habeas corpus not available to prisoners complaining only of mistreatment during their legal incarceration. — The relief from such unconstitutional practices, if proved, is in the form of equitably imposed restraint, not freedom from otherwise lawful incarceration. Cook v. Hanberry, 592 F.2d 248 (5th Cir.), supplementary opinion, 596 F.2d 658 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 932, 99 S. Ct. 2866, 61 L. Ed. 2d 301 (1979).

No right to habeas corpus for denial of jury trial, where jury not demanded. — A person in custody under a sentence in a misdemeanor case is not entitled to be discharged on writ of habeas corpus on the ground that the person was denied the right to be tried by a jury, merely because the trial judge determined the case without a jury. The act governing the procedure of the court in which the person was tried containing a provision that a jury trial be had when demanded by the accused, but no demand therefor having been made. Clarke v. Cobb, 195 Ga. 633, 24 S.E.2d 782, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 531 (1943).

Reliance on record in habeas corpus proceeding. — A federal habeas court may rely on the record in the state court in lieu of an independent hearing if the state court proceedings were full and fair. Farmer v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 22, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10932 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 868, 94 S. Ct. 178, 38 L. Ed. 2d 117, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 820 (1973).

Inference of deliberate by-pass of state remedies. — The dismissal of an appeal to the Georgia Supreme Court from the denial of a petition for habeas corpus for failure to comply with the Supreme Court's rules does not in and of itself support an inference of a deliberate by-pass of state remedies. Johnson v. Smith, 449 F.2d 127, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 7739 (5th Cir. 1971).

Burden of proof as to by-pass of state remedies. — In a federal habeas corpus action the burden of establishing the absence of a deliberate by-pass of state remedies is on the prisoner. Bonaparte v. Smith, 448 F.2d 385, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 8023 (5th Cir. 1971).

Denial of a motion of autrefois acquit is directly appealable, unless found to be frivolous. Lewis v. State, 179 Ga. App. 121, 346 S.E.2d 70, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 1831 (1986).

A post-trial declaration by a state witness that the witness' former testimony was false is not cause for a new trial. Pryor v. State, 179 Ga. App. 293, 346 S.E.2d 104, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2621 (1986).

Admission of colloquy from first trial. — Defendant failed to demonstrate plain error in the admission of the colloquy from the first trial, citing no legal authority that supported the novel argument that the admission of the colloquy violated the defendant's rights under the fifth amendment and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI, because the evidence enabled the jury to unfavorably contrast the defendant's election to testify at the first trial with the defendant's election not to do so at the second trial. Thomas v. State, 354 Ga. App. 815, 841 S.E.2d 458, 2020 Ga. App. LEXIS 223 (2020).

Trial court's amendment of a sentence to clarify that the sentence is to run consecutively with a prior life sentence constitutes a denial of the defendant's double jeopardy rights, where O.C.G.A. § 17-10-10 provides that sentences are presumed to run concurrently with preexisting sentences and the defendant has already begun serving the latest sentence prior to the court's amendment of the sentence. Schamber v. Newsome, 696 F. Supp. 1506, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11619 (N.D. Ga. 1988).

10. Probation and Parole

Due process applies to revocations of probation, since revocation of probation results in loss of liberty. United States v. Cornwell, 625 F.2d 686, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 14149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1066, 101 S. Ct. 794, 66 L. Ed. 2d 610, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 4411 (1980).

Probationer is entitled to notice and hearing when petition filed to revoke probation. United States v. Cornwell, 625 F.2d 686, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 14149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1066, 101 S. Ct. 794, 66 L. Ed. 2d 610, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 4411 (1980).

Notice and hearing required before revocation or suspension of probation. — To deprive a defendant of liberty upon the theory that the defendant violated any of the rules and regulations prescribed in a suspended or probated sentence without giving the defendant notice and opportunity to be heard upon the question of whether or not the defendant violated such rules and regulations, would be to violate one of the fundamentals of jurisprudence that a person shall not be deprived of liberty without due process of law, which includes notice and opportunity to be heard. Lester v. Foster, 207 Ga. 596, 63 S.E.2d 402, 1951 Ga. LEXIS 476 (1951).

Notice and opportunity for hearing required before probation period extended. — District courts shall provide notice to probationers of proposed extensions and advise probationers that they have a right to a hearing before the court acts. United States v. Cornwell, 625 F.2d 686, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 14149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1066, 101 S. Ct. 794, 66 L. Ed. 2d 610, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 4411 (1980).

Notice of substantive aspects of sentencing laws not required. — The constitution does not require the sentencing court or the probation department to inform a defendant of the substantive aspects of the sentencing laws. United States v. Simpson, 904 F.2d 607, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 10478 (11th Cir. 1990).

Defendant was not denied due process under the fifth amendment when neither the district court nor the probation officer informed the defendant that sentence might be favorably adjusted under federal sentencing guidelines for the defendant's acceptance of responsibility. United States v. Simpson, 904 F.2d 607, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 10478 (11th Cir. 1990).

Effect of grand jury findings on revocation of probation. — Even if grand jury entered a "No Bill" as to charge against a defendant of criminal damage to property in the second degree (the trial judge in the hearing as to the revocation of probation finding "criminal trespass"), there is no violation of the due process guarantee bestowed upon defendant by U.S. Const., amend. 5 or U.S. Const., amend. 14, or Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I., Para. I). Mingo v. State, 155 Ga. App. 284, 270 S.E.2d 700, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2558 (1980).

Condition of probation which invades right to personal self-expression and which is not related directly to rehabilitation, cannot meet the test of reasonableness. Inman v. State, 124 Ga. App. 190, 183 S.E.2d 413, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 866 (1971), overruled in part, Pittman v. State, 366 Ga. App. 372, 883 S.E.2d 56, 2023 Ga. App. LEXIS 10 (2023).

Condition precluding contact between perpetrator of sexual crime and victim. — Imposition as a condition of probation that the defendant, who was convicted of aggravated child molestation, have no direct or indirect contact with the defendant's seven-year-old child until the child reaches the age of majority, was within the discretion of the court and was not a violation of the defendant's constitutional rights. Tuttle v. State, 215 Ga. App. 396, 450 S.E.2d 863, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 1247 (1994).

Requiring the defendant to wear a short haircut as a condition of probation is violative of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Inman v. State, 124 Ga. App. 190, 183 S.E.2d 413, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 866 (1971), overruled in part, Pittman v. State, 366 Ga. App. 372, 883 S.E.2d 56, 2023 Ga. App. LEXIS 10 (2023).

Special parole term provision of the federal comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act, 21 U.S.C. § 801 et seq., does not violate the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5. United States v. Lockley, 590 F. Supp. 1215, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24011 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Requirement that a probationer submit to psychological stress evaluation examinations does not violate the probationer's fifth amendment rights since the main function of such evaluation appears to be the added psychological factor that, if the probationer fails to tell the truth, the probationer will be detected. Such a function is permissible. Owens v. Kelley, 681 F.2d 1362, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 16816 (11th Cir. 1982).

Denial or revocation of parole to detained aliens constitutes part of the admission process and, therefore, does not involve any constitutional rights. Fernandez-Roque v. Smith, 734 F.2d 576, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 21962 (11th Cir. 1984).

Revocation of probation, premised upon failure to timely pay court-or- dered restitution, does not violate due process and equal protection. Wilson v. State, 155 Ga. App. 825, 273 S.E.2d 210, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2806 (1980).

"Slight evidence" rule in probation revocation proceedings. — Where the defendant receives written notice of the claimed violation of probation, the disclosure of the evidence against the defendant, an opportunity to be heard in person and to present witnesses and document evidence, the right to confront and cross-examine adverse witnesses, heard by a neutral and detached judicial officer with a written statement by the fact-finder as to the evidence relied on and reasons for revoking probation, application of the "slight evidence" rule does not deny the defendant due process and equal protection. Mingo v. State, 155 Ga. App. 284, 270 S.E.2d 700, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2558 (1980).

Due process requires that an individual on parole be afforded a hearing before the parole is revoked. United States v. Cornwell, 625 F.2d 686, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 14149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1066, 101 S. Ct. 794, 66 L. Ed. 2d 610, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 4411 (1980).

Parole revocations do not require full panoply of defendant's rights. — Revocation of parole is not part of a criminal prosecution and thus the full panoply of rights due a defendant in such a proceeding does not apply. Revocation deprives an individual, not of the absolute liberty to which every citizen is entitled, but only of the conditional liberty properly dependent on observance of special parole restrictions. Mingo v. State, 155 Ga. App. 284, 270 S.E.2d 700, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2558 (1980); Christian v. State, 164 Ga. App. 612, 298 S.E.2d 325, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3333 (1982).

No violation for refusal of application, interview. — Defendant's due process rights were not violated by parole board's refusal to consider the defendant's application or to grant a personal interview where such decisions were in accord with then-existing common law (pre-Akins) and parole regulations. Lemley v. Bowers, 813 F. Supp. 814, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20712 (N.D. Ga. 1992).

No liberty interest in parole. — The current Georgia parole system does not give rise to a liberty interest. Accordingly, there is no right to procedural due process. Greene v. Georgia Pardons & Parole Bd., 807 F. Supp. 748, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17695 (N.D. Ga. 1992).

Prisoner is not entitled to statement of reasons for denial of parole under U.S. Const., amend. 5. Mitchell v. Sigler, 389 F. Supp. 1012, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14051 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Refusal of parole board to allow inmate to examine the inmate's file does not assume the proportions of a deprivation of the inmate's rights under the Constitution or the laws of the United States. Jackson v. Reese, 608 F.2d 159, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 9841 (5th Cir. 1979).

Traffic violation not grounds for revocation without hearing. — Failure to hold a hearing prior to revocation of parole after forfeiture of bond arising from a traffic violation, which under former Code 1933, § 24-310a (see O.C.G.A. § 40-13-58) is construed as an admission of guilt, is a denial of due process of law, since under former Code 1933, § 24-312a (see O.C.G.A. § 40-13-60) traffic violations are not misdemeanors, and therefore do not fall within the exceptions under former Code 1933, § 77-591 (see O.C.G.A. § 42-9-51) to the requirement of a hearing before revocation. Duncan v. Ricketts, 232 Ga. 89, 205 S.E.2d 274, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 874 (1974).

When delay in obtaining parole revocation hearing merits release. — There must be a showing of both unreasonable delay and prejudice before a person is entitled to release from custody because of a delay in obtaining a final parole revocation hearing. Beck v. Wilkes, 589 F.2d 901, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16855 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 845, 100 S. Ct. 90, 62 L. Ed. 2d 58, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 2774 (1979).

Proof beyond a reasonable doubt not required for parole revocation. — The benefit and protection afforded under the due process and equal protection clauses of the state and federal Constitutions are not in anywise violated by the fact that the establishment of a defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt is not necessary to justify the revocation of a sentence of probation. Mingo v. State, 155 Ga. App. 284, 270 S.E.2d 700, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2558 (1980).

11. Prisoners

Prisoner who receives a harsher sentence than other prisoners of the class may be the subject of unconstitutional discrimination, but if the prisoner is treated as any other military prisoner who is confined in a federal prison, being subject to the advantages and disadvantages of the civilian prison, there is no violation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Bates v. Wilkinson, 267 F.2d 779, 1959 U.S. App. LEXIS 3604 (5th Cir. 1959).

Deliberate indifference to prisoner's health care needs. — Sheriff's knowledge of prisoner's need for medical care and the intentional refusal to provide that care constituted "deliberate indifference," and the sheriff lost the entitlement to qualified immunity to suit under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for violating the prisoner's fifth, eighth and fourteenth amendment rights. Harris v. Coweta County, 21 F.3d 388, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 12394 (11th Cir. 1994).

Advice of counsel during interrogation while incarcerated. — If a defendant has been confined in a cell for nearly three months and interrogation is directed at obtaining evidence to be used in prosecuting the defendant, this is a time when legal advice is critical to the defendant and there is, therefore, a duty of the interrogators to determine if the defendant has counsel and whether the defendant wants counsel present during the interrogation. Breach of this duty violates U.S. Const., amends. 5 and 6. Clifton v. United States, 341 F.2d 649, 1965 U.S. App. LEXIS 6537 (5th Cir. 1965).

Regulations prohibiting inmate assistance in drafting pro se legal papers. — Prison regulation prohibiting inmate assistance in the drafting of pro se legal papers constituted a deprivation of due process of law, where no reasonable alternative was available to furnish legal advice. Williams v. United States Dep't of Justice, 433 F.2d 958, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 6790 (5th Cir. 1970).

Visitation privileges. — The language of prison visitation regulations did not create a protected liberty interest in visitation privileges under the fifth amendment right to due process. Caraballo-Sandoval v. Honsted, 35 F.3d 521, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 28437 (11th Cir. 1994).

Denial of right to make outgoing telephone calls. — Due process is not denied if a defendant is prohibited from making outgoing telephone calls after conviction, if the defendant is granted the right to a hearing upon the ruling and if the defendant has failed to show in what manner access to counsel is unduly restricted, or to show any harm flowing from the alleged restriction. Wilson v. State, 151 Ga. App. 501, 260 S.E.2d 527, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2584 (1979).

Depriving a prisoner of the use of certain of the prisoner's belongings for a week and one pair of the prisoner's shoes permanently did not amount to an independent constitutional tort, depriving the prisoner of substantive due process. Vincent v. Lynch, 626 F. Supp. 801, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12361 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

Right to written statement as to discipline of prisoner. — Constitutional due process requires state prison authorities to provide to a prisoner a written statement by the fact-finders as to evidence relied on and reasons for disciplinary action taken against a prisoner by prison authorities. Mitchell v. Sigler, 389 F. Supp. 1012, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14051 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Delay in extradition. — A U.S. citizen accused of committing a crime in another nation has no due process right under the United States Constitution to a speedy extradition, such that a foreign government's delay of over 17 years in seeking extradition on charges of criminal negligence causing death and leaving the scene of an accident was not constitutionally offensive. Martin v. Warden, Atlanta Pen., 993 F.2d 824, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 14758 (11th Cir. 1993).

Due process clause does not protect a duly convicted prisoner against transfer to another institution within a state prison system. Atkinson v. Hanberry, 589 F.2d 917, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16857 (5th Cir. 1979).

Transfer of prisoner to less desirable institution. — Absent a right or justifiable expectation created by state law, transfer of a state prisoner to a less desirable institution within the state prison system does not amount to a deprivation of liberty within the meaning of the due process clause, since whatever expectation a prisoner may have in remaining at a particular prison so long as the prisoner behaves is too ephemeral and insubstantial to trigger procedural due process protections, as long as prison officials have discretion to transfer the prisoner for whatever reason or for no reason at all. Atkinson v. Hanberry, 589 F.2d 917, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16857 (5th Cir. 1979).

Pretrial detainees. — Whether a pretrial detainee may press a claim of excessive force under the fourth amendment remains open. It is clear, however, that the due process clause protects a pretrial detainee from the use of excessive force that amounts to punishment. Wright v. Whiddon, 951 F.2d 297, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 300 (11th Cir. 1992).

Only U.S. Const., amend. 5 limits the federal power of eminent domain. Georgia Power Co. v. 54.20 Acres of Land, 563 F.2d 1178, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 5871 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 907, 99 S. Limits on sovereign's rights in property of citizens. — The right of the sovereign in the property of the citizen is hedged by two fundamental safeguards: the taking must be for a public purpose and it must be attended by just and adequate compensation. This includes every species of property in which the individual has a right of ownership, whether real or personal, corporeal or incorporeal. Weiner

v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966).

Factors in takings inquiry. — The United States Supreme Court has identified three factors that have particular significance in a taking inquiry: (1) the economic impact of the regulation on the claimant; (2) the extent to which the regulation has interfered with distinct investment-backed expectations; and (3) the character of the governmental action. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Ford Motor Credit Corp., 30 F.3d 1384, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 23827 (11th Cir. 1994).

Character of invasion, not resultant damage, determines whether there is a taking. — It is the character of the invasion, not the amount of damage resulting from it, so long as the damage is substantial, that determines the question whether it is a taking. Cheves v. Whitehead, 1 F. Supp. 321, 1932 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1727 (D. Ga. 1932), rev'd, 67 F.2d 316, 1933 U.S. App. LEXIS 4450 (5th Cir. 1933).

Invasion "compatible" with other occupations allowed by owner. — Congress does not have the constitutional power to authorize a permanent physical occupation of an owner's private property for which the owner need not be compensated, even when the property owner has privately allowed other occupations which are "compatible" with a government-sanctioned invasion. Cable Holdings of Ga., Inc. v. McNeil Real Estate Fund VI, Ltd., 953 F.2d 600, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 1641 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 862, 113 S. Ct. 182, 121 L. Ed. 2d 127, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 5279 (1992).

Predeprivation procedures. — The due process clause mandates provision of a predeprivation notice and hearing even when the seizure of real property is not physically intrusive. United States v. 408 Peyton Rd., 162 F.3d 644, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 30833 (11th Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1089, 119 S. in connection with the seizure of real property that does not involve physical control, but the property is found to be subject to forfeiture after the process due has been afforded, the proper remedy is that the government should return any rents received or other proceeds realized from the property during the period of illegal seizure. United States v. 408 Peyton Rd., 162 F.3d 644, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 30833 (11th Cir. 1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1089, 119 S. Any situation concerning a deprivation must be viewed in context with the goals of the deprivation, the necessity of the deprivation, the onerous nature of the deprivation, or lack thereof, and the overall equities involved. Joyner v. Golden Dome Inv. Co., 7 B.R. 596, 1980 Bankr. LEXIS 4084 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1980).

That a liberty cannot be inhibited without due process does not mean that it can under no circumstances be inhibited, which can be said of a deprivation of property. Joyner v. Golden Dome Inv. Co., 7 B.R. 596, 1980 Bankr. LEXIS 4084 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1980).

Taking must be by a legally authorized body in order to be compensable. — While private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation, the taking or damaging referred to must be by some authority empowered by law to do those acts. Before recovery can be had against a county for taking or damaging private property, it must be shown that the proper authorities of the county were responsible for the taking or damaging, or that they ratified it after the property was so taken or damaged. Watkins v. Cobb County Comm'n, 135 Ga. App. 324, 217 S.E.2d 298, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1663 (1975).

Where no property obtained, federal civil rights conspiracy action cannot be maintained. — To maintain successfully a conspiracy action to take property without just compensation under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, there must have been an actual denial of due process. Where no property is obtained at all, the civil rights conspiracy is not complete. Also, where no property is taken, there is no issue respecting the rights attendant to “pre” or “post” deprivation hearings. Stone Mt. Game Ranch, Inc. v. Hunt, 570 F. Supp. 238, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15846 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff’d, 746 F.2d 761, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16791 (11th Cir. 1984).

What is unconstitutional taking. — Definitionally, the concept of an unconstitutional taking does not turn on which public agency deprived a private party of the use of the party’s property, but rather, turns on the fact of deprivation for public use. Fountain v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 678 F.2d 1038, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18222 (11th Cir. 1982).

Punitive damages law. — Paragraph (e)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1, requiring that 75 percent of punitive damages awarded in a product liability action be paid into the state treasury, does not constitute a “taking” under the fifth and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. Mack Trucks, Inc. v. Conkle, 263 Ga. 539, 436 S.E.2d 635, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 800 (1993); State v. Moseley, 263 Ga. 680, 436 S.E.2d 632, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 799 (1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1107, 114 S. Ct. 2101, 128 L. In determining whether procedures used in deprivation of property comport with due process, the court must consider: the private interest affected by the government’s action; the risk of an erroneous deprivation of such interest through the procedures used; and, the government’s interest, including the function involved and the administrative and fiscal burdens that the additional procedural requirement would entail. Roadway Express, Inc. v. Brock, 624 F. Supp. 197, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13795 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff’d in part and rev’d in part, 481 U.S. 252, 107 S. Ct. 1740, 95 L. Ed. 2d 239, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 1814 (1987).

As long as the procedure used to take a condemnee’s property is in accordance with the law the condemnee has no ground of complaint because another procedure, also authorized by law, was not used. Collins v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 163 Ga. App. 168, 291 S.E.2d 742, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2436 (1982).

Exhausting state procedures as prerequisite to § 1983 action. — So long as the state provides an adequate procedure for obtaining just compensation, the aggrieved landowner may not claim a denial of just compensation until he/she has exhausted the state procedures for compensation. The nature of the constitutional right, therefore, requires that a property owner first utilize procedures under state law for obtaining compensation before he/she can bring a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action. East-Bibb Twiggs Neighborhood Ass'n v. Macon-Bibb Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 662 F. Supp. 1465, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5379 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

Federal district court properly dismissed property owners' due process and taking claims regarding a landfill permit as "not ripe," where the owners had not exhausted the process leading toward "just compensation" because they failed to seek compensation through state law procedures. East-Bibb Twiggs Neighborhood Ass'n v. Macon Bibb Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 896 F.2d 1264, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 20805 (11th Cir. 1989).

Exhausting state procedures as prerequisite to fifth amendment claim. — Where plaintiff failed to file an inverse condemnation claim in the state court and, where the federal court had not ruled on the inverse condemnation claim plaintiff filed therein, plaintiff's fifth amendment takings claim was not ripe for adjudication. Speer v. Miller, 864 F. Supp. 1294, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13460 (N.D. Ga.), amended, 864 F. Supp. 1294 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

Landowner's just compensation claims based upon adverse zoning and land use decisions made by county officials were not ripe for review where landowners had not exhausted state procedures in seeking compensation, including the remedy of inverse condemnation. James Emory, Inc. v. Twiggs County, 883 F. Supp. 1546, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6403 (M.D. Ga. 1995).

Excessive damages. — In an action against a truck manufacturer, a punitive damages award of $2 million was not so excessive as to violate the due process clauses of the Georgia and United States Constitutions, the eighth amendment of the United States Constitution, and the excessive fines clause of the Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII. Mack Trucks, Inc. v. Conkle, 263 Ga. 539, 436 S.E.2d 635, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 800 (1993).

Inverse condemnation suit as remedy. — If official authorities act on behalf of the state so as to take private property for public use without just compensation, even if they are acting outside of the scope of their official powers, they have violated the fifth and fourteenth amendments and are subject to an inverse condemnation suit. Fountain v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 678 F.2d 1038, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18222 (11th Cir. 1982).

Normally, an official taking of private property occurs when a governmental body exercises its eminent domain power in a condemnation proceeding. The state can, however, deprive an individual of the individual's property without instituting formal condemnation proceedings to force the transfer of title, and in those instances the party deprived of the property may bring an inverse condemnation action to compel payment of just compensation for the property seized or impaired. Fountain v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 678 F.2d 1038, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18222 (11th Cir. 1982).

If validity of legislative classification for zoning purposes is fairly debatable, legislative judgment must be allowed to control. DeKalb County v. Chamblee Dunwoody Hotel Partnership, 248 Ga. 186, 281 S.E.2d 525, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 909 (1981).

Effect of proof of more profitable use. — Proof that developer is simply being deprived of more profitable use of property is not enough to declare zoning unconstitutional. Ohoopee Land Dev. Corp. v. Mayor of Wrightsville, 248 Ga. 96, 281 S.E.2d 529, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 910 (1981).

Fact that property currently has no economic return to owners is immaterial in determining constitutionality of zoning. By definition, undeveloped property never offers owners any economic return. But landowners may not decline to develop land in permissible manner and concurrently use fact that land is undeveloped to show that permitted use is unconstitutional. DeKalb County v. Chamblee Dunwoody Hotel Partnership, 248 Ga. 186, 281 S.E.2d 525, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 909 (1981).

Claim of attempt to depress value of land. — Landowner's claim that prospective condemnors deprived the landowner of just compensation when they publicized their interest in the land in an attempt to depress its value failed to state a claim for violation of fifth amendment rights. Saffold v. Carter, 739 F. Supp. 1541, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19303 (S.D. Ga. 1990).

Contractual right of employer under collective bargaining agreement to discharge an employee for cause constituted a property interest protected by the fifth amendment. Brock v. Roadway Express, Inc., 481 U.S. 252, 107 S. Ct. 1740, 95 L. Ed. 2d 239, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 1814 (1987).

Bankruptcy. — Although the United States Constitution grants Congress the power to establish bankruptcy laws, U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 4, that power is subject to the fifth amendment, which proscribes taking private property for public use without just compensation. GMAC v. Johnson, 145 B.R. 108, 1992 Bankr. LEXIS 1386 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1992), rev'd, 165 B.R. 524, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3431 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Security interests are property rights within the protection of the fifth amendment. Armstrong v. United States, 364 U.S. 40, 80 S. Ct. 1563, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1554 (1960), and the bankruptcy system is a "public use" within the ambit of the fifth amendment. GMAC v. Johnson, 145 B.R. 108, 1992 Bankr. LEXIS 1386 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1992), rev'd, 165 B.R. 524, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3431 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Valuation of secured creditor's collateral as of the date of confirmation rather than as of the date of the bankruptcy petition did not constitute an unconstitutional taking caused by depreciation of the secured creditor's collateral since the creditor is entitled to a priority expense claim, a "superpriority" payable ahead of all other administrative expense claims to the extent of the failure of adequate protection. GMAC v. Johnson, 145 B.R. 108, 1992 Bankr. LEXIS 1386 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1992), rev'd, 165 B.R. 524, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3431 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Inapplicable to bankruptcies. — Since 11 U.S.C. § 101 et seq. does not contemplate the taking of an interest for use by the public, it does not fit within the final clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5 prohibiting the taking of private property for public use without just compensation. Joyner v. Golden Dome Inv. Co., 7 B.R. 596, 1980 Bankr. LEXIS 4084 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1980).

The impairment or modification of contract rights under the bankruptcy power granted under U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 4 is not prohibited by U.S. Const., amend. 5. In re Bullington, 80 B.R. 590, 1987 Bankr. LEXIS 1948, 1987 Bankr. LEXIS 2104 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1987), aff'd, 89 B.R. 1010, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13568 (M.D. Ga. 1988).

The application of 11 U.S.C. § 522(f), as to avoidance of liens impairing exempt property, to debtor's contract with creditor is not an unconstitutional taking of property violative of the fifth amendment. Caruthers v. Fleet Fin., Inc., 87 B.R. 723, 1988 Bankr. LEXIS 825 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1988).

Although the Supreme Court has indicated that 11 U.S.C. § 522(f)(2) may not be applied retroactively to destroy property rights that existed before the Bankruptcy Code was enacted, § 522 may be applied to a security interest on a loan made prior to the enactment of the Bankruptcy Code if a new security interest is created by a novation after the enactment date. South Atl. Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Jones, 87 B.R. 738, 1988 Bankr. LEXIS 830 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1988).

Chapter 12 of the Bankruptcy Code (11 U.S.C. § 1201 et seq.), designed specifically for farmers and intended to meet a perceived crisis in the agricultural community, does not, on its face, violate the taking and due process clauses of the fifth amendment and, therefore, does not exceed the bankruptcy powers of Congress. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Bullington, 89 B.R. 1010, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13568 (M.D. Ga. 1988), aff'd, 878 F.2d 354, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 10635 (11th Cir. 1989).

Chapter 12 of the federal bankruptcy code, which was enacted to provide special relief for family farmers, does not operate as an unconstitutional taking of a secured creditor's property. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Bullington, 878 F.2d 354, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 10635 (11th Cir. 1989).

Extent of protection afforded to secured creditor. — The takings clause of the fifth amendment protects the secured creditor only to the extent of the value of the collateral. Travelers Ins. Co. v. Bullington, 878 F.2d 354, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 10635 (11th Cir. 1989).

Waiver of right to just compensation. — Under the fifth provision of U.S. Const., amend. 5, "nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation;" one may give one's property for public use and waive the provision. Barkman v. Sanford, 162 F.2d 592, 1947 U.S. App. LEXIS 2149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 332 U.S. 816, 68 S. Ct. 155, 92 L. Ed. 393, 1947 U.S. LEXIS 1658 (1947).

Defendant must show a taking without opportunity to be heard. — In order to show a violation of the procedural aspect of U.S. Const., amend. 5, the defendant must establish that its property interest has been invaded by the government without a meaningful opportunity for it to voice its objection or show the invalidity of the justification of the invasion. Joyner v. Golden Dome Inv. Co., 7 B.R. 596, 1980 Bankr. LEXIS 4084 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1980).

Delay in the judicial determination of property rights is not uncommon where it is essential that governmental needs be immediately satisfied. Bowles v. Willingham, 321 U.S. 503, 64 S. Ct. 641, 88 L. Ed. 892, 28 Ohio Op. 180, 1944 U.S. LEXIS 1202 (1944).

Evidence considered by superior court on appeal in rate cases. — Where a public utility has followed all administrative procedures to obtain a rate increase, and a final order is entered against the utility for which no appeal is provided, and where the case, filed in superior court as de novo proceedings, raises the constitutional question of confiscation, the trial court is authorized to consider all evidence bearing on the question. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n v. General Tel. Co., 227 Ga. 727, 182 S.E.2d 793, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 824 (1971), superseded by statute as stated in Georgia Public Service Com. v. Southern Bell, 254 Ga. 244, 327 S.E.2d 726, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 667 (1985).

Claims dismissed where owners failed to use state procedures. — Property owners' due process and taking claims were properly dismissed, where the owners had not sought compensation through the procedures the state has provided for doing so. The fifth amendment does not proscribe the taking of property; it proscribes taking without just compensation. East-Bibb Twiggs Neighborhood Ass'n v. Macon Bibb Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 896 F.2d 1264, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 20805 (11th Cir. 1989).

Ripeness of claim. — A fifth amendment claim for just compensation is not ripe until the plaintiff has sought compensation through available state law channels. Saffold v. Carter, 739 F. Supp. 1541, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19303 (S.D. Ga. 1990).

Criminal forfeiture proceedings. — The fifth amendment generally prohibits the deprivation of property without a prior hearing, but one exception to the need for a prior hearing exists when the government seizes items subject to forfeiture. United States v. Bissell, 866 F.2d 1343, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 2490 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 876, 110 S. Ct. 213, 107 L. Ed. 2d 166, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 4311 (1989), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 849, 110 S. Delay of a post-restraint hearing in a criminal forfeiture case until trial was reasonable, where probable cause determinations provided a significant check on the government's power to restrain legitimate, nonindicted assets. *United States v. Transfer of excess reserves in guaranteed student loan program. — The 1987 amendments to the federal Higher Education Act of 1965, 20 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq., which required the transfer of excess reserves held by guarantors participating in the guaranteed student loan program to the United States Department of Education, did not amount to a “taking” of a state-created guaranty agency’s contractual rights nor violate the equal protection component of the fourteenth amendment. Georgia Student Fin. Comm’n v. Cavazos, 741 F. Supp. 899, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8536 (N.D. Ga. 1990).

Statute regulating political contributions constitutional. — O.C.G.A. § 21-5-30.1(b) does not work an unconstitutional privation of property where regulated insurer could disseminate information for nonpolitical purposes and its employees could contribute freely in their own private, individual capacities. Gwinn v. State Ethics Comm’n, 262 Ga. 855, 426 S.E.2d 890, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 318 (1993).

Declaratory relief proper where refusal to allow entry constituted breach of peace. — Power company was properly granted declaratory relief and an injunction was properly granted against the property owners who would not permit the power company access to their land to conduct surveys for a planned electrical transmission line because the power company, as the condemning body, had the right to survey and the property owners’ express refusal to allow access presented an actual risk of a breach of the peace that was alleviated by the entry of the declaratory judgment. Bearden v. Ga. Power Co., 262 Ga. App. 550, 586 S.E.2d 10, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 814 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1804, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 30 (Ga. Jan. 12, 2004).

2. Compensable Takings

Inconvenience or damage suffered must become extensive or oppressive before a taking, compensable under U.S. Const., amend. 5, will be found. Scarlett v. City of Atlanta, 306 F. Supp. 1049, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9177 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

Attack on reputation and community standing. — A liberty interest within the meaning of the fifth amendment can be lost when one’s “good name, reputation, honor, and community standing” are falsely attacked. Painter v. FBI, 537 F. Supp. 232, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11742 (N.D. Ga.), aff’d, 694 F.2d 255, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 23198 (11th Cir. 1982).

Assertion by plaintiff that “mere firing” has damaged the plaintiff’s reputation and has foreclosed employment opportunities is not sufficient to establish a liberty interest triggering the requirements of due process. Painter v. FBI, 537 F. Supp. 232, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11742 (N.D. Ga.), aff’d, 694 F.2d 255, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 23198 (11th Cir. 1982).

Acts which constitute taking. — Acquisition of title is not essential to taking, nor is total destruction of value essential. Impairment of value is sufficient. Cheves v. Whitehead, 1 F. Supp. 321, 1932 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1727 (D. Ga. 1932), rev’d, 67 F.2d 316, 1933 U.S. App. LEXIS 4450 (5th Cir. 1933).

Denial of future profits does not amount to the permanent appropriation of a lessee’s assets for the government’s use. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Ford Motor Credit Corp., 30 F.3d 1384, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 23827 (11th Cir. 1994).

Economic impact. — Where, after the Resolution Trust Corporation’s repudiation of failed bank’s equipment lease, lessee’s leased property was returned to lessee the repudiation of the lease deprived lessee only of its future rents, any economic impact on lessee of limiting damages to accrued rent would not be of the nature protected by the takings clause. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Ford Motor Credit Corp., 30 F.3d 1384, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 23827 (11th Cir. 1994).

Investment-backed expectations. — Where lessee could not reasonably have formed an expectation that it would be entitled to all future rent payments contemplated under the leases regardless of the fortunes of the lessor bank, which ultimately failed, no reasonable investment-backed expectation was affected by the Resolution Trust Corporation's repudiation of the leases upon taking over the bank. Resolution Trust Corp. v. Ford Motor Credit Corp., 30 F.3d 1384, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 23827 (11th Cir. 1994).

Subsequent loss in property value may be an essential factor in determination of a taking. Scarlett v. City of Atlanta, 306 F. Supp. 1049, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9177 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

When taking by interference compensable. — In an action in which a taking by interference is asserted, the issue for decision is whether or not the interference with plaintiff's property is so substantial as to be a taking, and thus compensable under U.S. Const., amend. 5, or of such a lesser character as to make the interference only a consequential damage. Scarlett v. City of Atlanta, 306 F. Supp. 1049, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9177 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

In an action in which a taking by interference is asserted, a court will look to the evidence to see the extent of the interference, and if it is so great as to constitute a wholly unreasonable and substantially destructive interference with the property involved, a taking will be found. Scarlett v. City of Atlanta, 306 F. Supp. 1049, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9177 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

Impairment shared by general public. — Reconstruction of a highway which reduced visibility of landowner's billboard to traffic did not constitute an unconstitutional taking of property because the impairment was shared by the public in general and was not compensable. Moreton Rolleston, Jr. Living Trust v. DOT, 242 Ga. App. 835, 531 S.E.2d 719, 2000 Ga. App. LEXIS 360 (2000), cert. denied, No. S00C1160, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 556 (Ga. June 30, 2000).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a city in a property owner's inverse condemnation claim under U. S. Const., amend. 5, arising from the city's requirement that an outstanding bill for water service on the property be paid prior to providing further water service as the city did not force the owner to bear a public burden which should have been borne by the public as a whole. Solid Equities, Inc. v. City of Atlanta, 308 Ga. App. 895, 710 S.E.2d 165, 2011 Ga. App. LEXIS 314 (2011).

Destruction or loss of a business being operated upon the condemned property requires compensation where the land is shown to be unique. Hinson v. DOT, 135 Ga. App. 258, 217 S.E.2d 606, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1639 (1975).

Whether the land is unique and requires compensation under U.S. Const., amend. 5 is a jury question. Hinson v. DOT, 135 Ga. App. 258, 217 S.E.2d 606, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1639 (1975).

Condemnor taking a right of flowage acquires only an easement in the land flowed. Cheves v. Whitehead, 1 F. Supp. 321, 1932 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1727 (D. Ga. 1932), rev'd, 67 F.2d 316, 1933 U.S. App. LEXIS 4450 (5th Cir. 1933).

Exercise of federal regulatory authority over lands below ordinary high water mark is not an invasion of compensable property rights, since the flow of a navigable stream is in no sense private property. Thus, there is "no taking" in such a case. United States v. Lewis, 355 F. Supp. 1132, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14562 (S.D. Ga. 1973).

Low altitude flights, under certain circumstances, may constitute a taking. Scarlett v. City of Atlanta, 306 F. Supp. 1049, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9177 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

The interference by low altitude flights with the use and enjoyment of the land must be direct, immediate, and substantial, not merely consequential, and this is a matter of degree. Scarlett v. City of Atlanta, 306 F. Supp. 1049, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9177 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

No property right that could be accorded protection under U.S. Const., amend. 5 exists in the maintenance of a certain school in a certain location. The location of public schools is a matter in which no citizen has a personal right any more than the citizen would in the location of any other public facility. Wallis v. Blue, 263 F. Supp. 965, 1967 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11012 (N.D. Ga. 1967).

Taking of Private Property for Public Use (Cont'd)

2. Compensable Takings (Cont'd)

an educational institution for the benefit of students and persons connected with the school, by the Board of Regents of the University System, does not constitute the taking, by the state, of private property without due process of law, in violation of Ga. Const. 1945, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. I) and U.S. Const., amend. 5. Villyard v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 204 Ga. 517, 50 S.E.2d 313, 1948 Ga. LEXIS 471 (1948).

Retroactive application of a federal statute that applied only to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in its corporate capacity, and that was amended in 1989 to extend its applicability to "a receiver of any insured depository institution," did not constitute a taking prohibited by the fifth amendment, since the statute promotes the common good and the owner failed to safeguard the owner's interests. Muller v. Resolution Trust Corp., 148 B.R. 650, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18474 (S.D. Ga. 1992), aff'd, 7 F.3d 241 (11th Cir. 1993).

Outdoor Advertising Control Act is a proper exercise of the police powers, as it provides for compensation for property rights in signs which were lawfully in existence on its effective date. DOT v. Shiflett, 251 Ga. 873, 310 S.E.2d 509, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 536 (1984).

County issuance of building permit for land unable to support septic system not taking. — The issuance of a building permit by the county for land it either knew or should have known would not support a septic system may have given rise to an action under state law, but was not a "taking" under the fifth amendment, nor was it such an abuse of governmental power sufficient to raise the tort alleged to the stature of a substantive due process violation. Since the county could have been sued for this type of injury, a claim of denial of procedural due process was foreclosed. Rymer v. Douglas County, 764 F.2d 796, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30803 (11th Cir. 1985).

Issuance of license for building a private dock not a taking for public use. — Landowners' takings claims, which turned on their allegation that their property was diminished in value by the Department of Natural Resource's issuance of a license to their neighbors to build a private dock, failed because such a license was not a taking of the owners' property by the state for public use: the license was granted to a private party for the lawful construction of a private dock. Hitch v. Vasarhelyi, 302 Ga. App. 381, 691 S.E.2d 286, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 133 (2010), cert. denied, No. S10C1029, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 577 (Ga. July 12, 2010).

Preventing acceleration of note upon default. — That Congress allows a court to prevent a creditor from taking advantage of a provision in a note allowing acceleration upon default does not create a "taking" within the meaning of the fifth amendment where, by a cure and reinstatement, the parties are returned to their original, predefault status and the provision remains part of the contract. In re Rainbow Forest Apts., 33 B.R. 576, 1983 Bankr. LEXIS 5402 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1983).

Release of state lien not compensable. — The state began proceedings to condemn certain property, pursuant to the provisions of the Georgia Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations (RICO) Act (O.C.G.A. § 16-14-7), but subsequently filed a release of its RICO lien. There was no cognizable claim under the theory that private property was taken or damaged for public purposes without just and adequate compensation being first paid. The state did not apply any of the property to public use during the period it was in the state's possession and, even assuming arguendo that the seizure resulted in a violation of state and/or federal constitutional rights, there was no basis upon which the state itself, as opposed to its officers, could be held liable for monetary damages on the basis of it. Kelleher v. State, 187 Ga. App. 64, 369 S.E.2d 341, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 570 (1988).

Inverse condemnation claims for money damages. — The recent Supreme Court case of First Evangelical Lutheran Church v. County of Los Angeles, 482 U.S. 304, 107 S. Ct. 2378, 96 L. Ed. 2d 250

(1987), requires that the state recognize an inverse condemnation claim for money damages because a zoning regulation amounts to a taking First English Evangelical Lutheran Church v. County of Los Angeles, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 2606, 482 U.S. 304, 107 S. Ct. 2378, 96 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1987); East-Bibb Twiggs Neighborhood Ass'n v. Macon-Bibb Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 662 F. Supp. 1465, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5379 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

No compensable temporary taking. — Since property owner was not deprived of all use of property, the property owner did not suffer a compensable temporary taking under the fifth amendment to the United States Constitution. Powell v. City of Snellville, 275 Ga. 207, 563 S.E.2d 860, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 440 (2002).

3. Scope of Taking

“Taken” in tort recovery action. — Since, when a tort recovery was obtained by recipients of Medicaid benefits, the assignment in favor of the health department had already been made, the property of the recipient to that extent was not “taken” for purposes of the fifth amendment. Richards v. Ga. Dep’t of Cmty. Health, 278 Ga. 757, 604 S.E.2d 815, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 993 (2004).

There must be an appropriation by the government of an interest in property. — For the taking of property to come within U.S. Const., amend. 5, it must be the direct or indirect result of an actual appropriation of tangible property by the government for public use, in some way depriving the owner of a monetizable interest in the property. Joyner v. Golden Dome Inv. Co., 7 B.R. 596, 1980 Bankr. LEXIS 4084 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1980).

Partial taking includes only that which is fairly necessary. — If less than the whole has been taken and paid for, such a right or interest will be deemed to pass as is necessary fairly to effectuate the purpose of the taking. Cheves v. Whitehead, 1 F. Supp. 321, 1932 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1727 (D. Ga. 1932), rev’d, 67 F.2d 316, 1933 U.S. App. LEXIS 4450 (5th Cir. 1933).

Where the interest to be taken is not expressly stated, the condemnor is presumed to take no greater interest than an easement, where an easement is sufficient to satisfy the purposes of the taking. Cheves v. Whitehead, 1 F. Supp. 321, 1932 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1727 (D. Ga. 1932), rev’d, 67 F.2d 316, 1933 U.S. App. LEXIS 4450 (5th Cir. 1933).

Regulatory repeal of artificial value. — The application of the Negotiated Rates Act of 1993, Pub.L. 103-180, does not take a property right of a trucking company in violation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5. Unlike the case in which a regulation reduces the utility of property to such an extent that it is rendered valueless, the repeal of a regulation that imposed an artificial value does not violate this regulation. Allen v. National Enquirer, Inc. (In re TSC Express Co.), 187 B.R. 29, 1995 Bankr. LEXIS 1298 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1995).

Regulatory taking of property without just compensation was not shown since the development associations, who made a facial challenge to the tree ordinance, failed to show that they were deprived of all economically viable use of their land. Greater Atlanta Homebuilders Ass’n v. DeKalb County, 277 Ga. 295, 588 S.E.2d 694, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 935 (2003).

4. Compensation

Condemnee also entitled to damages and expenses caused by proceedings. — The just compensation provision is susceptible to no construction except that the condemnnee is entitled to be compensated for all damages to the condemnnee’s property and expense caused by the condemnation proceedings. Such damages and expenses are separate and distinct items from the amount which the condemnnee was entitled to recover as the actual value of the condemnnee’s building. Luther v. DeKalb County, 131 Ga. App. 25, 205 S.E.2d 70, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1312 (1974).

Evidence of expected damage. — Condemnee may not introduce evidence of expected damage to its business as part of its claim for consequential damages. Richmond County v. 0.153 Acres of Land, 208 Ga. App. 208, 430 S.E.2d 47, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 464 (1993), cert. denied, No.

4. Compensation (Cont'd)

S93C1111, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 942 (Ga. Oct. 5, 1993).

Lessee recovery for partial loss. — A lessee-operator of a business upon the condemned property may be entitled to an award for partial loss of business, separate from the award to the owner for consequential damage to the real property. Richmond County v. 0.153 Acres of Land, 208 Ga. App. 208, 430 S.E.2d 47, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 464 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1111, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 942 (Ga. Oct. 5, 1993).

Use of tax assessor data to determine value. — In the Rails-to-Trails takings action, the plaintiffs were entitled to just compensation pursuant to the fifth amendment based on the diminution in value between the “before” and “after” conditions. Although determination of the remaining property rights was a question of law, determining the value was a question of fact, and any nominal property rights in the burdened land could not affect the just compensation analysis because the rights had no pecuniary value. In determining property value, the court considered tax assessor data because it is verified data and data maintained by the tax assessors is more reliable than data provided by parties to a transaction several years after the fact. Hardy v. United States, No. 14-388L, 141 Fed. Cl. 1, 2018 U.S. Claims LEXIS 1701 (Fed. Cl. Dec. 14, 2018).

Valuation date for purposes of just and adequate compensation. — When private property is condemned for public use, the owner is entitled to receive just and adequate compensation as of the date of the taking, not as of the date of the announcement of the taking, and the value of the property should be fixed at the time of its taking. R.E. Adams Properties, Inc. v. City of Gainesville, 125 Ga. App. 800, 189 S.E.2d 114, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1477 (1972).

A jury is not free to determine on the evidence that some date prior to the initiation of condemnation proceedings, but after the announcement of the intent to condemn, is the date of taking for the purposes of just and adequate compensation. R.E. Adams Properties, Inc. v. City of Gainesville, 125 Ga. App. 800, 189 S.E.2d 114, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1477 (1972).

Market value not just compensation where business will not survive taking. — If the property must be duplicated for the business to survive, and if there is no substantially comparable property within the area, then the loss of the forced seller is such that market value does not represent just and adequate compensation to him. Hinson v. DOT, 135 Ga. App. 258, 217 S.E.2d 606, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1639 (1975).

Appeal from excess award. — Under the mandate of the Constitution, that private property cannot be taken or damaged for public use without first paying just and adequate compensation to the owner, the payment of the amount of a jury verdict in excess of the prior appraisal by assessors, or special master, is a condition precedent to a valid appeal from such verdict and the judgment based thereon. City of Gainesville v. Loggins, 224 Ga. 114, 160 S.E.2d 374, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 682 (1968), superseded by statute as stated in Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth. v. Leibowitz, 217 Ga. App. 391, 457 S.E.2d 827, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 453 (1995).

5. Exercise of Police Power

Constitutional considerations which hedge in government's right of eminent domain do not apply to police power, and the citizen whose property is taken or destroyed is helpless before it. However, the authorization of government by its police power to take the property of its citizens without compensation can be invoked only in the face of compelling necessity, and it extends no further than the emergency which creates it. Horne v. City of Cordele, 140 Ga. App. 127, 230 S.E.2d 333, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1369 (1976).

Destruction of private property pursuant to exercise of police power is not compensable. — Laws enacted in pursuance of police power to benefit the health of the public, which may result in the destruction of private property, and which do not provide for any payment therefor to the owner, are not violative of the constitutional inhibition against taking private property for a public use without compensation. Irvin v. Woodliff, 125 Ga. App. 214, 186 S.E.2d 792, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 784 (1971).

Uncompensated destruction of property which exceeds the immediate necessity of the occasion is an unconstitutional exercise of police power. Horne v. City of Cordele, 140 Ga. App. 127, 230 S.E.2d 333, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1369 (1976).

Ordinance permitting demolition of dilapidated structure posing health or safety hazard. — An ordinance that permits destruction of property within the boundaries of the municipality, without just compensation to the owner and without giving the owner an opportunity to repair it and thus bring it up to minimum standards, merely on the ground that its dilapidation makes it a health or safety hazard, is unconstitutional and void. Horne v. City of Cordele, 140 Ga. App. 127, 230 S.E.2d 333, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1369 (1976).

Ordinance permitting demolition of structure where cost of repair exceeds its value. — Any ordinance which authorizes demolition of a structure within the city without compensation to the owner merely because the cost of repair exceeds the value of the structure or any percentage thereof, without first allowing opportunity to repair (and, if necessary, providing for discovery of the criteria which must be met to bring the structure up to a minimum standard) is unconstitutional and void. Horne v. City of Cordele, 140 Ga. App. 127, 230 S.E.2d 333, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1369 (1976).

6. Zoning

Zoning is subject to the constitutional prohibition against taking private property without just compensation. Barrett v. Hamby, 235 Ga. 262, 219 S.E.2d 399, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 850 (1975).

It suffices to void the zoning that the damage to the owner is significant and is not justified by the benefit to the public. Barrett v. Hamby, 235 Ga. 262, 219 S.E.2d 399, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 850 (1975).

It is not necessary that the property be totally useless for the purposes classified in order for unlawful confiscation to occur, requiring that the zoning be voided. Barrett v. Hamby, 235 Ga. 262, 219 S.E.2d 399, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 850 (1975).

Balance between right to use property and police power in zoning. — As the individual's right to the unfettered use of one's property confronts the police power under which zoning is done, the balance the law strikes is that a zoning classification may only be justified if it bears a substantial relation to the public health, safety, morality or general welfare. Lacking such justification, the zoning may be set aside as arbitrary or unreasonable. As these critical interests are balanced, if the zoning regulation results in relatively little gain or benefit to the public while inflicting serious injury or loss on the owner, such regulation is confiscatory and void. Barrett v. Hamby, 235 Ga. 262, 219 S.E.2d 399, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 850 (1975).

Under police powers, state may zone to prevent certain future use, without compensation. — The police power of the state to zone property to prevent its use for certain purposes in the future, as distinguished from the taking or damaging in respect to a use already in existence, is not open to question, and does not require the payment of any compensation. National Adv. Co. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 230 Ga. 119, 195 S.E.2d 895, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 830 (1973).

Denial of an application to rezone a lot from residential use to commercial use is not an unconstitutional taking of property. Westbrook v. Board of Adjustment, 245 Ga. 15, 262 S.E.2d 785, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 667 (1980).

A county board's refusal to rezone property from residential to commercial use did not constitute a taking, where the plaintiff had no legitimate expectation that the property would be rezoned for office development as sought. Habersham at Northridge v. Fulton County, 632 F. Supp. 815, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17441 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 791 F.2d 170, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 25038 (11th Cir. 1986).

Where landowner's property had been rezoned, the landowner did not suffer a taking that deprived the landowner of all use of the property when the board of commissioners refused to grant the landowner's application for rezoning, and the taking was not compensable. The landowner still had possession and use of the land where the landowner could have built in accordance with the existing zoning or applied for a different type of zoning. Cobb County v. McColister, 261 Ga. 876, 413 S.E.2d 441, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 169 (1992).

Regulation of use of property. — A zoning ordinance does not exceed the police power simply because it restricts the use of property, diminishes the value of property, or imposes costs in connection with the property. Parking Ass'n v. City of Atlanta, 264 Ga. 764, 450 S.E.2d 200, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1994), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1116, 115 S. Ct. 2268, 132 L. Ed. 2d 273, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 3621 (1995).

A zoning ordinance requiring curbs, landscaping, and trees in surface parking lots did not constitute a per se taking by another, but merely regulated the use of the property. Parking Ass'n v. City of Atlanta, 264 Ga. 764, 450 S.E.2d 200, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1994), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1116, 115 S. Ct. 2268, 132 L. Ed. 2d 273, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 3621 (1995).

Appearance before local zoning board prerequisite. — When a landowner alleged having a vested right in the manner in which the owner's property had been zoned, which would have allowed the owner to build the owner's proposed project, the owner was obligated to bring that claim before the local zoning authority before a trial court had jurisdiction to consider it. Since the owner had not brought that claim before the zoning authority, the owner's petition for a writ of mandamus to compel that authority to issue the owner the permit desired was properly dismissed. Cooper v. Unified Gov't of Athens-Clarke County, 277 Ga. 360, 589 S.E.2d 105, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 996 (2003).

Plaintiff has burden of showing that the zoning is unconstitutional. — The plaintiff has the burden of showing that the zoning under attack is so detrimental to the plaintiff, and so insubstantially related to the public health, safety, morality and welfare, as to amount to an unconstitutional taking, that is, an arbitrary confiscation of the property without compensation by the governing authority. Hubert Realty Co. v. Cobb County Bd. of Comm'rs, 245 Ga. 236, 264 S.E.2d 179, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 754 (1980); City of Atlanta Bd. of Zoning Adjustment v. Midtown N., Ltd., 257 Ga. 496, 360 S.E.2d 569, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 1030 (1987); Jones v. City of Atlanta, 257 Ga. 727, 363 S.E.2d 254, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 7 (1988).

Ripeness of claim that zoning effects taking. — A claim that a zoning regulation effects a taking of property is not ripe until the government entity charged with implementing the regulation has reached a final decision regarding the application of the regulation to the property at issue. Calibre Spring Hill, Ltd. v. Cobb County, 715 F. Supp. 1577, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7926 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

General Consideration

Rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to counsel, compulsory process, and jury trial are fundamental rights that the courts should safeguard with meticulous care and award to the accused, whether requested or not, unless waived by the accused in a manner showing accused's express and intelligent consent. Bridwell v. Aderhold, 13 F. Supp. 253, 1935 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1098 (D. Ga. 1935), aff'd, 92 F.2d 748, 1937 U.S. App. LEXIS 4689 (5th Cir. 1937).

Rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 are not limited to cases involving capital offenses. — Rights to assistance of counsel, compulsory process for obtaining witnesses and trial by jury are not limited to cases where the accused is charged with a capital offense. Bridwell v. Aderhold, 13 F. Supp. 253, 1935 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1098 (D. Ga. 1935), aff'd, 92 F.2d 748, 1937 U.S. App. LEXIS 4689 (5th Cir. 1937).

No federal question raised by dismissed federal employee's Bivens theory claim. — Where plaintiff, a dismissed federal employee, asserted various fourth, fifth, and sixth amendment claims against the plaintiff's superiors under the Bivens theory (see Bivens v. 6 Unknown Narcotics Agents, 403 U.S. 388, 91 S. Ct. 1999, 29 L. Ed. 2d 619 (1971)), the court found no federal question because Congress had established elaborate remedial scheme for dismissed federal employees. Metz v. McKinley, 583 F. Supp. 683, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19160 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 747 F.2d 709, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 17517 (11th Cir. 1984).

Rights guaranteed under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and U.S. Const., amend. 5 are personal. Stevens v. State, 247 Ga. 698, 278 S.E.2d 398, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 834 (1981), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1213, 103 S. Ct. 3551, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1398, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 4712 (1983).

Determination of harm based on United States Supreme Court standards. — The determination of harm caused by a violation of a federal constitutional right has to be made based on United States Supreme Court standards and not state standards. Alexander v. State, 236 Ga. App. 142, 511 S.E.2d 249, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 77 (1999).

Duty of appellate courts to protect constitutional rights. — U.S. Const., amend. 6 combines with Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI) to assure that every person charged with offending the laws of this state shall have a public and speedy trial by an impartial jury and appellate courts must independently review the relevant trial court record in each case to ensure compliance with these constitutional dictates. Brooks v. State, 244 Ga. 574, 261 S.E.2d 379, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1338 (1979), vacated in part, 446 U.S. 961, 100 S. Ct. 2937, 64 L. Ed. 2d 821 (1980).

Violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6 stands as a jurisdictional bar to a valid conviction and sentence. Calley v. Callaway, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 851 (1976).

Remedies should be tailored to the injury suffered from the constitutional violation alleged and should not unnecessarily result in dismissal of the indictment where the criminal proceeding can proceed with full recognition of defendant's right to a fair trial. Jordan v. State, 247 Ga. 328, 276 S.E.2d 224, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 692 (1981).

Requirements of jury trial generally. — Trial by jury in a criminal case requires, at the very least, that the evidence developed against a defendant comes from the witness stand in a public courtroom where there is full judicial protection of the defendant's right of confrontation, of cross-examination, and of counsel. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Right of accused to be present at trial. — On a trial for a capital offense, it is the right of the accused to be present at all stages of the proceeding, and it is the duty of the court to see that the accused is present when any charge is delivered to the jury. If the defendant is absent without knowledge of a charge or recharge to the jury, and without any consent or waiver with reference thereto, such procedure requires a new trial. The presence of the counsel is no substitute for that of the accused on trial. Rider v. State, 195 Ga. 656, 25 S.E.2d 304, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 547 (1943).

The general right of one accused of a felony to be present during the course of the trial does not extend to postverdict procedures such as a motion for new trial, at which only questions of law, not questions of fact, are determined. Dobbs v. State, 245 Ga. 208, 264 S.E.2d 18, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 744, cert. denied, 446 U.S. 913, 100 S. Ct. 1845, 64 L. Ed. 2d 267 (1980).

Physical restraints on prisoner during trial. — When physical restraints are necessary and are observed by the jury in a criminal case, the trial court must instruct the jury that the use of physical restraints on the defendant has no bearing on the defendant's guilt or innocence and should not be considered by them during their deliberations. Allen v. State, 248 Ga. App. 79, 545 S.E.2d 629, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 172 (2001).

Intoxication affecting voluntariness of waiver of Miranda rights. — Defendant's claim that defendant's waiver of Miranda rights was involuntary because defendant was intoxicated was rejected; an officer testified that defendant did not appear to be intoxicated, that defendant seemed to understand the officer's questions, and that defendant's answers were responsive to the officer's questions, and the trial court was entitled to believe this testimony. Smith v. State, 269 Ga. App. 17, 602 S.E.2d 921, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 1061 (2004).

Mental disability affecting voluntariness of waiver of Miranda rights.

— Defendant's claim that defendant's waiver of defendant's Miranda rights was involuntary because defendant had a mental disability and had only an eighth grade education was rejected, as an officer testified that defendant said defendant understood defendant's rights, that defendant seemed to understand the officer's questions, and that defendant answered the questions appropriately. Smith v. State, 269 Ga. App. 17, 602 S.E.2d 921, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 1061 (2004).

Court required to make findings on Mandarin Chinese speaker's competency to stand trial without interpreter. — Trial court erred in denying a defendant's motion for new trial based on the defendant's contention that the defendant did not understand the proceedings because an interpreter was not provided to the defendant without making findings; there was sufficient evidence to raise a question as to whether the defendant, whose native language was Mandarin Chinese, was competent to be tried without an interpreter, and the trial court was required to make findings as to the defendant's competency on the record. Ling v. State, 288 Ga. 299, 702 S.E.2d 881, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 890 (2010).

Limits on investigative powers of Congress. — While the power of Congress to investigate for legislative purposes is inherent, it is not unlimited, and is always subject to the limitations imposed by the individual guarantees of the Bill of Rights. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Judge is not a mere moderator, and the judge has an obligation and duty to question witnesses and comment on the evidence when necessary. United States v. Bartlett, 633 F.2d 1184, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 21139 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 820, 102 S. Ct. 101, 70 L. Ed. 2d 91, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3156 (1981).

A trial judge may elicit facts not yet adduced or clarify those previously presented and the judge may maintain the pace of the trial by interrupting and curtailing counsel's examinations as a matter of discretion. United States v. Bartlett, 633 F.2d 1184, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 21139 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 820, 102 S. Ct. 101, 70 L. Ed. 2d 91, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3156 (1981).

Only when a judge's conduct strays from neutrality is a defendant thereby denied a fair trial as required by the Constitution. United States v. Bartlett, 633 F.2d 1184, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 21139 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 820, 102 S. Ct. 101, 70 L. Ed. 2d 91, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3156 (1981).

Duty of judge and prosecutor to provide fair trial. — Trial judges and prosecutors have the responsibility to see that the defendant receives a fair trial. Dean v. State, 247 Ga. 724, 279 S.E.2d 217, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 840 (1981).

A judge's comments must be studied in the context of the entire proceeding and only if, taken as a whole, those comments are so prejudicial as to amount to a denial of a fair trial will the Constitution require a new trial. Allen v. Montgomery, 728 F.2d 1409, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 23804 (11th Cir. 1984).

Substitution of judges. — Holding that midtrial substitution of judges is an error subject to harmless error analysis and not a structural defect is not contrary to clearly established federal law as determined by the U.S. Supreme Court. McIntyre v. Williams, 216 F.3d 1254, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 15338 (11th Cir. 2000).

Miranda warnings need not be given in advance of general on-the-scene questioning as to facts surrounding a crime or other general questioning of citizens in the fact-finding process in order for answers to those questions to be admissible as evidence. Brown v. State, 140 Ga. App. 160, 230 S.E.2d 128, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1383 (1976), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 819, 98 S. Ct. 58, 54 L. Ed. 2d 75, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2790 (1977).

Card from which rights read. — There is no requirement that the state introduce the card from which Miranda rights are read by the officers to the defendant. James v. State, 230 Ga. 29, 195 S.E.2d 448, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 796 (1973).

Waiver of Miranda rights. — Where there was evidence which could have authorized the exclusion of defendant's statement based on lack of a knowing and understanding waiver of defendant's Miranda rights, and where the trial court failed to make specific findings on issue, a remand was necessary for the entry of findings on this issue. Livingston v. State, 267 Ga. App. 875, 600 S.E.2d 817, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 802 (2004).

Obtaining sample of defendant's handwriting. — Use of personal history forms which defendant is instructed to complete following arrest as handwriting exemplars violates none of the defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 or U.S. Const., amend. 5. United States v. Walker, 453 F.2d 1205, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 11895 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 407 U.S. 910, 92 S. Ct. 2432, 32 L. Ed. 2d 683, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 2231 (1972).

While defense needs for independent analysis of drugs used as evidence and expert testimony about the accuracy of tests made on such drugs may be a constitutionally protected right in other jurisdictions, there is no authority in this state or under the federal Constitution for such a rule. Butler v. State, 134 Ga. App. 131, 213 S.E.2d 490, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1932 (1975).

Habeas corpus case is not a criminal prosecution and, thus, does not fit under U.S. Const., amend. 6. Croker v. Smith, 225 Ga. 529, 169 S.E.2d 787, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 555 (1969).

Military jurisdiction narrowly limited. — Although trial by a military tribunal deprives one of trial by jury and other constitutional rights, it is not unconstitutional. However, military jurisdiction is restricted to the narrowest limits consistent with the power granted Congress in U.S. Const., Art. I, Sec. 8, Cl. 14. Torres v. Connor, 329 F. Supp. 1025, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10615 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Burden of showing constitutional error harmless upon state. — Regarding constitutional errors, the burden of showing that the error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt is upon the state. Henderson v. State, 251 Ga. 398, 306 S.E.2d 645, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 830 (1983).

Defense counsel cannot invoke defendant's rights without consulting defendant. — Defense counsel, acting on counsel's own and without having consulted the defendant, is not empowered to invoke the defendant's personal rights under the fifth and Sixth Amendments. Edwards v. State, 167 Ga. App. 681, 307 S.E.2d 264, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3339 (1983).

Requirement that a warrant be issued by an impartial magistrate was not violated when a search warrant, otherwise proper, was issued by a magistrate who was of feeble mind and memory. Daitch v. State, 168 Ga. App. 830, 310 S.E.2d 703, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3444 (1983).

U.S. Const., amend. 6 does not require preliminary showing of relevance or need before enforcement of grand jury subpoena to testify. In re Grand Jury Investigation, 769 F.2d 1485, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 26364 (11th Cir. 1985).

Right of accused to be present at trial. — Because the defendant's own conduct made the progress of the trial practically impossible in the defendant's continued presence, it was not an abuse of the court's discretion to remove the defendant from the courtroom. Simmons v. State, 161 Ga. App. 527, 288 S.E.2d 868, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3054 (1982).

Because the basis of the right to be present at trial is the constitutional mandate to provide an opportunity to defend oneself, due process requires that the defendant be personally present to the extent that a fair and just hearing would be thwarted by the defendant's absence, and to that extent only. Finney v. Zant, 709 F.2d 643, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25936 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled in part, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22736 (11th Cir. 1986).

A criminal defendant's constitutional right to be present at trial does not include a concomitant right of absence. Tilley v. State, 201 Ga. App. 360, 411 S.E.2d 100, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1338 (1991).

Where the defendant voluntarily is absent from trial, the trial court may direct that a plea of not guilty be entered and proceed with the trial. Croy v. State, 168 Ga. App. 241, 308 S.E.2d 568, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3386 (1983).

Defendant's absence from courtroom during discussions about juror.

— Defendant's constitutional rights were not violated when the defendant was allegedly absent from the courtroom when the attorneys were having a discussion with the trial judge about the possibility of replacing a juror because the trial court conducted the trial properly by making sure the defendant was present when necessary; the record did not mention the exact moment the defendant entered the courtroom between the time the trial court ordered the defendant to be brought into the courtroom and the time the recess was concluded, but the absence of that information did not prove that the defendant was not in the court room at the time discussions were had about the missing juror. Milnavicius v. State, 290 Ga. 374, 721 S.E.2d 843, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 74 (2012).

Trial court is empowered to order a criminal defendant's personal appearance when it is necessary to properly conduct the trial. This is especially true where identification of the defendant by a witness is contemplated by the prosecution. Tilley v. State, 201 Ga. App. 360, 411 S.E.2d 100, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1338 (1991).

Alibi defense notice. — Defendant, whose evidence was the sole evidence in support of an alibi defense, was required to file an intention to offer said defense under O.C.G.A. § 17-16-5(a), even when the state was aware that the defendant claimed to be elsewhere on the day of the crime, and such did not affect the defendant's right to testify under the sixth amendment; moreover, any prejudice to the state was irrelevant, because the statute provided no exception for such prior knowledge, and because common sense dictated that the mere claim to be elsewhere when confronted by authorities was a far cry from intending to present the legal defense of alibi. State v. Charbonneau, 281 Ga. 46, 635 S.E.2d 759, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 654 (2006).

Preference for resolving cases on nonconstitutional grounds. — Courts should not decide a case on constitutional grounds when it can be resolved on statutory and general law grounds. United States v. Northside Realty Assocs., 510 F. Supp. 668, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11248

(N.D. Ga.), rev'd, 659 F.2d 590, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 16765 (5th Cir. 1981).

Failure to voice objection. — The refusal to grant a mistrial, on the grounds that the state's cross-examination of a witness was improper, is not an abuse of discretion where the defendant failed to voice an objection during the questioning. Kirk v. State, 168 Ga. App. 226, 308 S.E.2d 592, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2734 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 133, 311 S.E.2d 821, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 608 (1984).

An arrest scene identification was justified where the police were in "hot pursuit" of suspects and needed to quickly ascertain if the persons apprehended were the actual perpetrators. McGhee v. State, 253 Ga. 278, 319 S.E.2d 836, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 901 (1984).

Requiring defendant to testify as to sound of the defendant's name. — Defendant's fifth and sixth amendment rights were not violated by requiring the defendant to testify about the sound of the defendant's name. Werts v. State, 196 Ga. App. 452, 395 S.E.2d 922, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 913 (1990).

Refusal to allow evidence of defendant's mental faculties. — Where a defendant had suffered organic brain damage as a result of an auto accident, the defendant was not deprived of the defendant's sixth amendment right to defend oneself and develop substantive evidence at trial by the court's refusal to allow the defense to present evidence pertaining to the defendant's mental faculties, relevant to the issue of intent and the defenses of entrapment and coercion, and by a charge to the jury on guilty but mentally ill. Holder v. State, 194 Ga. App. 790, 391 S.E.2d 808, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 309 (1990).

Conspiracy indictment. — In a prosecution for conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute cocaine, defendant's sixth amendment right was not violated by holding the defendant accountable for the overall measure of drugs, not simply the quantity submitted into evidence. United States v. Lockett, 867 F. Supp. 1044, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16441 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 70 F.3d 126, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 32870 (11th Cir. 1995).

Indictments generally. — There is no right to a speedy indictment. Griffin v. State, 282 Ga. 215, 647 S.E.2d 36, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 482 (2007), overruled in part, Garza v. State, 284 Ga. 696, 670 S.E.2d 73, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 865 (2008).

Statements made after arrest. — State death row inmate's federal habeas petition was denied because the inmate's right against self-incrimination was not abridged during custodial interrogation by police; under the federal constitutional standards applicable at the time of trial, the state courts properly found that the inmate had reinitiated the inmate's in-custody conversation with police after equivocally requesting an attorney. Ford v. Schofield, 488 F. Supp. 2d 1258, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 34958 (N.D. Ga. 2007), aff'd, 546 F.3d 1326, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 22318 (11th Cir. 2008).

Waiver of right to be present at trial. — Defendant waived the constitutional right to be present during portion of voir dire and on the second day of the trial where the defendant was free on bail and failed to make sufficient arrangements to attend. Winfield v. State, 210 Ga. App. 849, 437 S.E.2d 849, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1368 (1993).

Prosecutor's conduct. — Defendant was not denied defendant's sixth amendment right to a fair trial because of prosecutorial misconduct where an investigator testified that the investigator found a shotgun in defendant's apartment, the prosecutor produced the shotgun and asked the deputy to secure it; defense counsel requested no further relief and never raised the issue of prosecutorial misconduct in the trial court. Fairclough v. State, 276 Ga. 602, 581 S.E.2d 3, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 477 (2003).

Defense counsel was not ineffective in stipulating to negative scientific test results because the test results were not inconsistent with the defendant's defense. Chance v. State, 291 Ga. 241, 728 S.E.2d 635, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 580 (2012).

Deportation consequence. — Judgment finding that the defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel for counsel's alleged failure to advise of deportation consequences for a destruction of property offense was reversed because the defendant's date of admission was not within five years of the date of the commission of the crime in 2002; thus, the defendant failed to prove that the defendant was deportable by virtue of having committed a crime of moral turpitude. State v. Addaquay, 302 Ga. 412, 807 S.E.2d 413, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 939 (2017).

Speedy and Public Trial

1. In General

Speedy trial standards are the same under federal and state constitutions. — The same standards for deciding claims of denial of a speedy trial are used whether the claim is based on U.S. Const., amend. 6 or Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI). Fleming v. State, 240 Ga. 142, 240 S.E.2d 37, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1424 (1977).

All defendants are entitled to the fundamental right to a speedy trial. United States v. Dyson, 469 F.2d 735, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6828 (5th Cir. 1972).

Speedy trial is a fundamental constitutional right, not a privilege. Blevins v. State, 113 Ga. App. 702, 149 S.E.2d 423, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1179 (1966); Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461, 1967 Ga. App. LEXIS 914 (1967).

Right to speedy trial is a fundamental right that applies to the states through U.S. Const., amend. 14. Harris v. Hopper, 236 Ga. 389, 224 S.E.2d 1, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 885 (1976).

Essential ingredient of the right to speedy trial is orderly expedition and not mere speed. Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461, 1967 Ga. App. LEXIS 914 (1967).

Right to a speedy trial is intended to avoid oppression and prevent delay by imposing on the courts and on the prosecution an obligation to proceed with reasonable dispatch. Blevins v. State, 113 Ga. App. 702, 149 S.E.2d 423, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1179 (1966).

Right to a speedy trial secures rights to a defendant, but does not preclude the rights of public justice. Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461, 1967 Ga. App. LEXIS 914 (1967).

It is a unique right endemic to both the government and the accused. United States v. Dyson, 469 F.2d 735, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6828 (5th Cir. 1972).

Unlike other constitutional rights, both society and the defendant have a potential interest in either having a speedy trial or delaying any trial. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Accused's interests in speedy trial. — The interests of an accused protected by the right to speedy trial are: to prevent oppressive pretrial incarceration; to minimize anxiety and concern of the accused; and to limit the possibility that the defense will be impaired. Blevins v. State, 113 Ga. App. 702, 149 S.E.2d 423, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1179 (1966); Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461, 1967 Ga. App. LEXIS 914 (1967); Sanders v. State, 132 Ga. App. 580, 208 S.E.2d 597, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1749 (1974); State v. Fields, 137 Ga. App. 726, 224 S.E.2d 829, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2585 (1976); Simpson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 814, 258 S.E.2d 634, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2388 (1979); State v. Hight, 156 Ga. App. 246, 274 S.E.2d 638, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3016 (1980).

Defendant's speedy trial interests do not per se outweigh those of society. — Under the analysis made by the United States Supreme Court in Barker v. Wingo, 407 U.S. 514, 92 S. Ct. 2182, 33 L. Ed. 2d 101 (1972), it cannot be said that the ultimate responsibility of the state to provide a speedy trial is such that the state's unexcused failure to provide it creates a presumption of deprivation of the right or a burden on the state to prove otherwise. To the contrary, the plain tenor of Barker seems to be that society's interest in bringing the criminal defendant to trial is not per se outweighed by the individual's right to speedy trial. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Reasons-for-delay factor should have weighed against the state. — In considering the defendant's speedy trial claim, the trial court erred by weighing the reasons-for-delay factor neutrally because the defendant never requested a delay of trial and the record showed that the reasons for the delay were solely attributable to the state due to the need to collect evidence and to provide timely trials to other cases; thus, the factor should have been weighed against the state. Redding v. State, 318 Ga. 225, 897 S.E.2d 801, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 27 (2024).

Dead-docketing a case. — Placing a case upon the dead docket constitutes neither a dismissal nor a termination of the prosecution in the accused's favor. Consequently, the fact that a case is placed on the dead docket does not affect the constitutional right to a speedy trial. Hayes v. State, 298 Ga. App. 338, 680 S.E.2d 182, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 703 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1736, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 540 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2009).

Factors to be considered in speedy trial determinations. — In determining whether the right to speedy trial has been violated, a court is required to consider four factors: length of the delay, the reasons for the delay, the accused's assertion of the accused's right, and prejudice to the accused. Johnson v. Smith, 227 Ga. 611, 182 S.E.2d 101, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 796 (1971); Hughes v. State, 228 Ga. 593, 187 S.E.2d 135, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 858 (1972); Mays v. State, 229 Ga. 609, 193 S.E.2d 825, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 699 (1972); United States v. Dyson, 469 F.2d 735, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6828 (5th Cir. 1972); Hall v. State, 131 Ga. App. 786, 206 S.E.2d 644, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1555 (1974); Sanders v. State, 132 Ga. App. 580, 208 S.E.2d 597, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1749 (1974); Boyd v. State, 133 Ga. App. 395, 211 S.E.2d 22, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1083 (1974); *United States v. The party seeking to close the hearing must advance an overriding interest that is likely to be prejudiced, the closure must be no broader than necessary to protect that interest, the trial court must consider reasonable alternatives to closing the proceeding, and it must make findings adequate to support the closure. Ayers v. State, 181 Ga. App. 244, 351 S.E.2d 692, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2817 (1986); McClanahan v. State, 196 Ga. App. 737, 397 S.E.2d 24, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1060 (1990), overruled in part, Wilson v. State, 277 Ga. 195, 586 S.E.2d 669, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 775 (2003).

Dismissal of an indictment on speedy trial grounds was in error, and remand was appropriate because the trial court erred in the court's key factual findings regarding the defendant's anxiety and concern and actual impairment to the defense and, additionally, the trial court attributed only eight months of delay to the State of Georgia, without addressing the reasons for the nearly eight additional years of delay, including a year of delay caused, apparently deliberately, when the defendant became a fugitive. Moreover, the trial court did not properly balance the factors so that the intermediate appellate court could not properly affirm the judgment. State v. Porter, 288 Ga. 524, 705 S.E.2d 636, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 93 (2011).

Order denying the defendant's speedy trial claim noted that the 14-month delay was presumptively prejudicial, but failed to address any of the other Barker v. Wingo, 407 U.S. 514, 92 S. Ct. 2182, 33 L.

Ed. 2d 101 (1972) factors; further, there was no evidence that a hearing was held. Therefore, remand was required for the trial court's entry of findings of fact and conclusions. McDougler v. State, 323 Ga. App. 828, 748 S.E.2d 475, 2013 Ga. App. LEXIS 756 (2013).

It is necessary for the trial court to consider and weigh each of these factors in determining the speedy trial issue. State v. Fields, 137 Ga. App. 726, 224 S.E.2d 829, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2585 (1976).

Defendant's conduct must be balanced against prosecution's conduct.

— Whether a defendant has been denied the right to a speedy trial is determined by a balancing test, weighing the conduct of the prosecution with that of the defendant. Boyd v. State, 133 Ga. App. 395, 211 S.E.2d 22, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1083 (1974); United States v. Edwards, 577 F.2d 883, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 9854 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 968, 99 S. Ct. 458, 58 L. Ed. 2d 427, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 3851 (1978).

Court did not err in denying motion to dismiss on speedy trial grounds because, although the initial delay was attributable to the state, after the indictment was filed the state moved with reasonable promptness, and defendant filed a defense motion only weeks before the trial date. Chappell v. State, 272 Ga. App. 1, 611 S.E.2d 157, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 213 (2005).

Balancing test is a delicate, sensitive process, and each case must rely upon its own circumstances. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Premature demand for speedy trial. — Although defendant filed a speedy trial demand prematurely, defendant nonetheless placed all parties on notice that a speedy trial was wanted and, in considering defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal on constitutional grounds, the trial court weighed this factor in defendant's favor. State v. Bazemore, 249 Ga. App. 584, 549 S.E.2d 426, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 567 (2001).

Given defendant's premature speedy trial demand, made after defendant's arrest, but before the grand jury indictment was filed, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal. Roberts v. State, 263 Ga. App. 472, 588 S.E.2d 242, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1099 (2003), aff'd, 278 Ga. 610, 604 S.E.2d 781, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 990 (2004).

Relevant time period for measuring delay. — The relevant period of time in determining the right to a speedy trial is that between the indictment, or institution of prosecution, and the trial. United States v. Durham, 413 F.2d 1003, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 11903 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 396 U.S. 839, 90 S. Ct. 100, 24 L. Ed. 2d 89, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 951 (1969).

Unless the defendant has been held in custody by the state, the relevant period of time in measuring the length of delay as a denial of the right to a speedy trial is that between the indictment or institution of prosecution by information, etc., and the trial, not the preindictment delay. Sanders v. State, 132 Ga. App. 580, 208 S.E.2d 597, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1749 (1974).

Delay in trying a case is to be determined from the date of arrest or of indictment, whichever comes first. Cravey v. State, 147 Ga. App. 29, 248 S.E.2d 13, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1978).

Effect of state delay on federal prosecution. — The fifth, sixth, and fourteenth amendments did not bar a federal prosecution because any arguably improper or unconstitutional delay in the prosecution was occasioned solely by Georgia authorities; there was no basis here for imputing Georgia's dilatory conduct to the United States or to the federal prosecution. United States v. Boone, 959 F.2d 1550, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 8909 (11th Cir. 1992).

Right to speedy trial applies to a person who is at large on bail, since, in addition to protecting an accused against prolonged incarceration, the right also serves other purposes which are applicable whether the defendant is on bail or not. Blevins v. State, 113 Ga. App. 702, 149 S.E.2d 423, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1179 (1966).

Right to a speedy trial has no application to delays resulting from a find- ing of incompetency. Gibbs v. State, 235 Ga. 480, 220 S.E.2d 254, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 908 (1975), cert. denied, 424 U.S. 924, 96 S. Ct. 1134, 47 L. Ed. 2d 333, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 625 (1976).

Delay in ruling on new trial motion. — Trial judge's delay in ruling on the new trial motion after conviction of the accused is not a denial of the constitutional right to a speedy trial where the delay does not deprive the accused of the opportunity to serve the sentence concurrently with another sentence imposed in a separate trial. Herring v. Ault, 230 Ga. 398, 197 S.E.2d 354, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 928 (1973).

Delay in sentencing may violate speedy trial protections. — Unreasonable delay in sentencing may constitute a violation of a defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to a speedy trial. United States v. Campbell, 531 F.2d 1333, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 8890 (5th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 851, 98 S. Ct. 164, 54 L. Ed. 2d 121, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 3167 (1977).

Accused entitled to speedy sentence where formal trial waived. — The accused who wishes to waive a formal trial is entitled also to secure, if the accused desires, a speedy sentence, in which situation the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure will implement or augment U.S. Const., amend. 6 in providing for a speedy trial to an accused who seeks, by way of a trial, nothing more than the prompt imposition of such sentence as the court deems appropriate to the offense. Barkman v. Sanford, 162 F.2d 592, 1947 U.S. App. LEXIS 2149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 332 U.S. 816, 68 S. Ct. 155, 92 L. Ed. 393, 1947 U.S. LEXIS 1658 (1947).

Right to a speedy trial does not apply in probation revocation proceedings, since they are not criminal proceedings. United States v. Jackson, 590 F.2d 121, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16770 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 912, 99 S. Ct. 2012, 60 L. Ed. 2d 385, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 1595 (1979).

Right to a speedy trial does not apply to parole revocation. — The right to a speedy trial is not applicable to parole revocation proceedings. Moultrie v. Georgia, 464 F.2d 551, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 8333 (5th Cir. 1972).

Delay of parole revocation hearing pending incarceration in another state. — Although Georgia law requires a parole revocation hearing (see O.C.G.A. § 42-9-5), where a person has committed a crime in another state, has been convicted, and is incarcerated in that state, it is not unconstitutional to delay the parole revocation hearing until expiration of that later sentence. Moultrie v. Georgia, 464 F.2d 551, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 8333 (5th Cir. 1972).

Speedy trial rights not forfeited by incarceration for another offense. — Merely because an individual charged with a criminal offense is serving a prison term for another offense does not mean that the individual forfeits the right to a speedy trial for the pending charge. Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461, 1967 Ga. App. LEXIS 914 (1967); United States v. Duke, 527 F.2d 386, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 12729 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 426 U.S. 952, 96 S. Ct. 3177, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1190, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 2184 (1976).

Incarceration for a separate offense pending trial does not, ipso facto, show that the delay is unoppressive but it may where no anxiety or prejudice is shown. State v. Fields, 137 Ga. App. 726, 224 S.E.2d 829, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2585 (1976).

Trial court has no power to consider a claim of denial of speedy trial as to warrants issued in other judicial circuits. Garrett v. Arrington, 245 Ga. 47, 262 S.E.2d 808, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 683, cert. denied, 446 U.S. 968, 100 S. Ct. 2948, 64 L. Ed. 2d 828, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 1854 (1980).

Differing terms of court. — O.C.G.A. §§ 15-6-3(15.1) and 17-7-171 did not combine to deprive a criminal defendant of equal protection of the law by permitting the county of the defendant's adjudication to operate with only two terms of court, while other similar-sized counties operate with more terms of court. Although the defendant may have had to wait months longer for the trial than similarly situated defendants in other counties, the presumptive validity of the statutes stood. Henry v. State, 263 Ga. 417, 434 S.E.2d 469, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 643 (1993).

Same considerations which require a speedy trial for an unincarcerated person apply to one imprisoned by another sovereign. Lawrence v. Blackwell, 298 F. Supp. 708, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8993 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

That a defendant is confined in another jurisdiction, or another state, is not dispositive of a speedy trial issue. Sassoon v. State, 138 Ga. App. 172, 225 S.E.2d 732, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2096 (1976).

Claim by incarcerated defendant of denial of speedy trial by another jurisdiction. — A defendant who is being held by one jurisdiction cannot force the officials of another judicial circuit in which the defendant is wanted to travel to the jurisdiction in which the defendant is incarcerated to test the continuing validity of their charges against the defendant by raising the claim that the defendant is being denied a speedy trial. Garrett v. Arrington, 245 Ga. 47, 262 S.E.2d 808, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 683, cert. denied, 446 U.S. 968, 100 S. Ct. 2948, 64 L. Ed. 2d 828, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 1854 (1980).

Speedy indictment claim waived by entry of guilty plea. — A speedy indictment claim, like other nonjurisdictional defects in pretrial proceedings, is waived by the entry of a voluntary and intelligent guilty plea. Harris v. Hopper, 236 Ga. 389, 224 S.E.2d 1, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 885 (1976).

Guilty plea waives speedy trial defense. — Having fully and voluntarily entered a plea of guilty, a criminal defendant cannot raise as a defense the right to a speedy and public trial because in the case of a plea of guilty, a guilty plea waives any defense known and unknown. Mason v. Banks, 242 Ga. 292, 248 S.E.2d 664, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1179 (1978).

Appeal from denial of motion for speedy trial. — The refusal by a superior court to grant to a defendant in a criminal case not affecting the defendant's life a written motion for a speedy trial pursuant to the defendant's constitutional right thereto is a judgment appealable to the Court of Appeals under former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34). Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461, 1967 Ga. App. LEXIS 914 (1967).

Defendant may not raise the issue of speedy trial on appeal, unless such issue was first raised at trial. Moore v. State, 141 Ga. App. 245, 233 S.E.2d 236, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 1854 (1977).

Remedy for violations of right. — In light of the policies which underlie the right to a speedy trial, dismissal must remain the only possible remedy. Hall v. State, 131 Ga. App. 786, 206 S.E.2d 644, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1555 (1974).

Constitutional speedy trial questions involve issues of fact that should be resolved by a court having jurisdiction of the criminal prosecution. Garrett v. Arrington, 245 Ga. 47, 262 S.E.2d 808, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 683, cert. denied, 446 U.S. 968, 100 S. Ct. 2948, 64 L. Ed. 2d 828, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 1854 (1980).

Right of a speedy trial is necessarily relative. It is consistent with delays and depends upon circumstances. Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461, 1967 Ga. App. LEXIS 914 (1967).

Each case involving the right to a speedy trial must be analyzed on an ad hoc basis, upon its own particular facts and circumstances. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Delay due to mental health issues. — Trial court abused its discretion in granting defendant's motion to dismiss as there was no evidence that the state caused any delay and defendant's speedy trial right was not violated where defendant was indicted more than one year after the incident, but was not arrested until a year after the incident, defendant was out on bond, so defendant's indictment four months after defendant's arrest was timely, defendant had legal counsel two months after the indictment, defendant's protestations of innocence were not a basis for finding a speedy trial violation, and the state's acquiescence in defendant's attempt for a mental health placement and the resultant delay did not constitute a speedy trial violation. State v. Byrd, 266 Ga. App. 121, 596 S.E.2d 426, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 316 (2004).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting the defendants' motions to dismiss the charges filed against them because the court was authorized to find that, as the result of the state's negligence, both of the defendants were subjected to an extraordinarily long delay in being brought to trial, that they were not dilatory in asserting their right to a speedy trial, and that, as a result of the delay, their ability to defend against the belated murder charge was prejudiced. State v. White, 282 Ga. 859, 655 S.E.2d 575, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 5 (2008).

Length-of-delay factor should have weighed against state. — In considering the defendant's speedy trial claim, the trial court erred by weighing the length-of-delay factor neutrally because, after finding that the delay of 25 months was uncommonly long, the court should have weighed the factor against the state, rather than examining the reasons for the delay. Redding v. State, 318 Ga. 225, 897 S.E.2d 801, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 27 (2024).

Defendant's right to speedy trial was not violated under the following facts: (1) The length in delay in the case, from the time of arrest, was only six weeks, due to a crime lab analysis of the substance seized, which eventually produced exculpatory evidence; and (2) the defendant did not assert the defendant's rights, and the defendant was clearly not prejudiced, since the net effect of the delay was dismissal of the charges. Lambert v. McFarland, 612 F. Supp. 1252, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22707 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Defendant's right to a speedy trial was not violated by a 21-month delay between the defendant's indictment and trial because: (1) the defendant was convicted on other indictments during this period and was being held under those convictions pending the defendant's appeals; and (2) a period of only eight days elapsed between the defendant's assertion of the defendant's right and the trial. Mincey v. State, 257 Ga. 500, 360 S.E.2d 578, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 918 (1987).

A two-year delay between commission of the crime and the beginning of trial is not unconstitutional where some of the delay was due to separate trials of codefendants, the defendant did not assert the defendant's speedy trial right until just before trial, and the only prejudice due to the delay was to the state. Harrison v.

State, 257 Ga. 528, 361 S.E.2d 149, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 939 (1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 982, 108 S. Ct. 1281, 99 L. Ed. 2d 492, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 1507 (1988).

Notwithstanding the fact that there was a delay of 22 months and that defense counsel attempted to have the defendant brought to the county for purposes of entering a guilty plea, because the defendant and the defendant's competent counsel did not assert a right to a speedy trial, especially in the time period from the defendant's release from incarceration until the case was on the trial calendar, and further because the defendant was not prejudiced by the failure to bring the case to trial, the defendant's motion to acquit was denied. Coggins v. State, 188 Ga. App. 455, 373 S.E.2d 269, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 1095 (1988).

A delay of nearly one year between remittitur of defendant's case to the trial court and defendant's trial did not violate speedy trial rights. Chambers v. State, 213 Ga. App. 414, 444 S.E.2d 820, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 633 (1994), cert. denied, No. S94C1461, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 1014 (Ga. Sept. 16, 1994).

Even though a five-year delay in defendant's trial was partially attributable to the state, the complex nature of the crime and the defendant's own failure to assert the defendant's rights also contributed significantly to the delay; thus, the delay did not impair the defendant's ability to defend against the charges. Daughenbaugh v. State, 225 Ga. App. 7, 482 S.E.2d 517, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 285 (1997).

A one year delay in trial following filing of demand for speedy trial did not violate defendant's rights. Boone v. State, 229 Ga. App. 379, 494 S.E.2d 100.

A 22-month delay in the defendant's trial did not violate the defendant's rights based on the absence of the state's primary witness for several months, the defendant's refusal to cooperate with counsel, the defendant's request for a continuance, and the defendant's failure to show that the defendant was prejudiced. Jackson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 187, 498 S.E.2d 780, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 391 (1998).

Defendant's right to speedy trial was not violated notwithstanding that the defendant was arrested in April 1992 and not tried until September 1996, and the defendant was incarcerated while awaiting trial, because (1) the record revealed that much of the delay was attributable to the defense in that the defendant repeatedly announced that the defendant's experts were not ready for scheduled hearings or trial, and the defendant asked for a delay in the proceedings so that plea negotiations could be conducted; (2) the defendant did not assert the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial until May 1996, and the defendant never asserted the defendant's statutory right to a speedy trial; and (3) the defendant did not bring forth evidence that the delay impaired the defendant's defense. Pruitt v. State, 270 Ga. 745, 514 S.E.2d 639, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 311, cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1006, 120 S. Ct. 502, 145 L. Ed. 2d 388, 1999 U.S. LEXIS 7568 (1999).

Defendant's right to a speedy trial was not violated because defendant did not file a statutory demand for speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 and the delay was partially attributable to defendant. Manning v. State, 250 Ga. App. 187, 550 S.E.2d 762, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 724 (2001).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal based on defendant's claim that the state violated defendant's sixth amendment speedy trial right because any prejudice that defendant suffered from the 14 years it took to bring defendant to trial was caused by defendant; indeed, the sole reason for the lengthy delay was that defendant failed to appear for the trial set for a few weeks after defendant's arrest, even though defendant had notice about when that trial was to take place. Smith v. State, 260 Ga. App. 403, 579 S.E.2d 829, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 374 (2003).

Defendant's speedy trial right under the sixth amendment and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI(a) were not violated when the defendant was arrested in 1998, indicted in 1999, and tried in 2004. Part of the delay was caused by the defendant's mistaken release; defense counsel shared responsibility for the delay; the defendant had not asserted the right to a speedy trial until the day before the commencement of the defendant's first trial; there was no oppressive pretrial incarceration because the defendant had been incarcerated for only four or five months; and the death of a witness was not prejudicial because the witness's identification of a person fleeing the crime scene as someone other than the defendant did not preclude the possibility that the defendant was the other person seen running from the scene and because counsel evidently regarded the deceased witness's observations as harmful to the defense. Smith v. State, 284 Ga. 17, 663 S.E.2d 142, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 542 (2008).

Four-year delay in bringing a defendant to trial did not violate the defendant's sixth amendment right to a speedy trial since: (1) the delay was due in part to both sides' interlocutory appeals; (2) the state did not deliberately delay the trial to hamper the defense; (3) the defendant waited until less than three weeks before trial to assert the speedy trial claims; and (4) the testimony of two witnesses who died before the trial would have been more favorable to the state than to the defendant, and the state agreed to stipulate to the witnesses' testimony. Layman v. State, 284 Ga. 83, 663 S.E.2d 169, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 528 (2008).

There was no violation of the defendant's constitutional speedy trial rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI(a), as a delay in bringing defendant to trial due to a backlog in the court system was not shown to have caused any prejudice to the defendant, and the defendant failed to timely assert the right to a speedy trial. Thomas v. State, 296 Ga. App. 231, 674 S.E.2d 96, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 187 (2009).

Defendant's constitutional speedy trial right was not violated by delays ranging from two to five years. The primary reason for the delay was the defendant's cooperation in another inmate's case, to which the defendant agreed; the defendant waited several years to assert the speedy trial right; and there was no prejudice to the defendant, who was already serving a lengthy federal prison sentence. Marshall v. State, 286 Ga. 446, 689 S.E.2d 283, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 118 (2010).

Three and a half year delay in bringing a capital case to trial was not caused solely by the state. Although funding ran out to pay the defendant's preferred attorneys, there were experienced public defenders available; the defendant's refusal to cooperate with the public defenders impeded the case, as did the defendant's preferred counsel's attempts to be re-assigned to the case when they knew there was no money to pay them. Weis v. State, 287 Ga. 46, 694 S.E.2d 350, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 277, cert. denied, 562 U.S. 850, 131 S. Ct. 100, 178 L. Ed. 2d 63, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 5992 (2010).

Although there was a presumption of prejudice due to the four-year delay with respect to a defendant's speedy trial rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI(a), there was no violation thereof upon analysis of the four factors; the reason for the delay was due to the defendant's counsel, the defendant did not file a timely demand for a speedy trial, and the defendant did not show prejudice. Brewington v. State, 288 Ga. 520, 705 S.E.2d 660, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 100 (2011).

As two defendants' speedy trial time from the date of the defendants' mistrial through to the date the defendants' second dismissal motion was denied was only a little over three months, there was no presumption of prejudice and the defendants' speedy trial rights were not violated under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI(a). Brewington v. State, 288 Ga. 520, 705 S.E.2d 660, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 100 (2011).

There was no abuse of the superior court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss based on alleged violations of the defendant's constitutional rights to a speedy trial because the superior court expressly found that there was no evidence that the delay was the result of any intentional or deliberate action by the state to hamper the defense and that once the case appeared on a trial calendar, the defendant lengthened the delay by seeking and obtaining a continuance; even if the state's failure to explain with specificity the state's role in the delay so as to result in a finding of negligence, when a delay was caused by the mere negligence of the state, that was relatively benign, and therefore, that factor had to be weighed only slightly against the state. Higgenbottom v. State, 290 Ga. 198, 719 S.E.2d 482, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 944 (2011).

Defendant's right to a speedy trial was not violated because at most the delay could be attributed to negligence on the part of the state, which was generally considered to be relatively benign; the state did not deliberately attempt to delay trial in order to hamper the defendant's defense or to gain a tactical advantage. Williams v. State, 290 Ga. 24, 717 S.E.2d 640, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 865 (2011).

Prosecutions following dismissal of original complaint. — Speedy trial guarantees focus only on pending criminal prosecutions and not on prosecutions following the dismissal of the original complaint. United States v. Puett, 735 F.2d 1331, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 20640 (11th Cir. 1984).

Delay in transmitting the record of appeal after the defendant's conviction was not a violation of the defendant's federal and state constitutional rights to a speedy trial. Crosby v. State, 188 Ga. App. 191, 372 S.E.2d 471, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 936 (1988).

Right to public trial is subject to other considerations. — The right to a public trial has uniformly been held to be subject to the inherent power of the court to preserve order and decorum in the courtroom, to protect the rights of parties and witnesses, and generally to further the administration of justice. Lowe v. State, 141 Ga. App. 433, 233 S.E.2d 807, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 1941 (1977).

Partial closure of courtroom. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by partially closing the courtroom during the victims' testimonies because the trial court limited the closure by allowing the defendant, the attorneys for the defense and the state, immediate families or guardians of the victims, immediate families or guardians of the defendant, the attorneys' employees, officers of the court, sheriff's deputies, and any members of the press to remain in the courtroom, which was acceptable pursuant to the sixth amendment. Pate v. State, 315 Ga. App. 205, 726 S.E.2d 691, 2012 Ga. App. LEXIS 344 (2012), cert. denied, No. S12C1308, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 1027 (Ga. Oct. 1, 2012).

Exclusion of certain persons from courtroom. — Where defendant was charged with, inter alia, child molestation, and the trial court, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-54, excluded certain individuals from the courtroom when the victims testified, this was distinguished from a total closure of the courtroom and did not require as rigorous a level of constitutional scrutiny, and defendant's right to a public trial was not violated. Hunt v. State, 268 Ga. App. 568, 602 S.E.2d 312, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 964 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1977, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 901 (Ga. Oct. 12, 2004).

When a defendant claimed that the defendant's sixth amendment right to a public trial had been violated by the exclusion of the defendant's family from the courtroom during voir dire, the trial court was authorized to weigh the credibility of witnesses and to find as fact that bailiffs and court officials did not bar the defendant's family from the courtroom at that time. Moreover, the defendant had waived the issue by not bringing the matter to the trial court's attention when the defendant learned of it, which was before the jury was struck, thereby foreclosing the trial court's ability to rectify the matter with a new jury pool or in any other way. Craven v. State, 292 Ga. App. 592, 664 S.E.2d 921, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 820 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1939, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 935 (Ga. Oct. 27, 2008).

Right to public trial denied when trial held in county jail. — Defendant was denied the right to a public trial under the sixth amendment of the United States Constitution and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI(a) when the defendant's trial was held in a county jail because the produced un rebutted evidence that jail authorities excluded from the jail courtroom the defendant's brother, a member of the public who wanted to attend the trial; the closure of the courtroom to the brother was neither brief nor trivial as the brother was kept out of the courtroom during the entire trial, which involved criminal charges brought against the defendant in regard to a family member, and the trial court, by deciding to hold the defendant's trial in a facility where the public's access was governed exclusively by the jail authorities, failed in the court's obligation to take reasonable measures to accommodate public attendance at the trial. Purvis v. State, 288 Ga. 865, 708 S.E.2d 283, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 248 (2011).

Exclusion of spectators because of witness's fear of harm. — There is no abuse of discretion of the court in the exclusion of spectators during the testimony of a witness who is in fear of possible harm because of testimony to be given. Lowe v. State, 141 Ga. App. 433, 233 S.E.2d 807, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 1941 (1977).

Right to fair trial versus rights of public to gain access to hearings in criminal cases. See R.W. Page Corp. v. Lumpkin, 249 Ga. 576, 292 S.E.2d 815, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1165 (1982).

Right to fair trial denied. — The evidence below supported the habeas court's findings that (1) in failing to seek a continuance the defendant's counsel rendered ineffective assistance at the defendant's trial; and (2) counsel's ineffectiveness so prejudiced the defendant's case that the defendant was effectively denied the right to a fair trial as guaranteed by the sixth and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. Turpin v. Bennett, 272 Ga. 57, 525 S.E.2d 354, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 22 (2000).

Right to public trial not denied by temporary closing of courtroom for child victim's testimony. — In a child molestation case, the trial court did not deny the defendant the sixth amendment right to a public trial when the court cleared the courtroom for the testimony of the 17-year-old victim in light of the victim's fragile emotional and psychological history and the fact that the courtroom was immediately reopened after the victim testified. Mullis v. State, 292 Ga. App. 218, 664 S.E.2d 271, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 736 (2008).

By failing to challenge the constitutionality of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-54 until after the child victim testified, the defendant waived the right to argue on appeal that the statute violated the defendant's constitutional right to a public trial. Craven v. State, 292 Ga. App. 592, 664 S.E.2d 921, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 820 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1939, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 935 (Ga. Oct. 27, 2008).

Closed hearing on motion to suppress. — Sixth amendment right to a public trial was violated where trial court closed entire hearing on motion to suppress and failed both to consider reasonable alternatives to closing the proceedings and to make findings adequate to support the closure. Waller v. Georgia, 467 U.S. 39, 104 S. Ct. 2210, 81 L. Ed. 2d 31, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 86 (1984).

Effect of court order on resentencing. — The state was not barred from subjecting the defendant to a second capital sentencing trial approximately one year and eight months after the last judicial activity by the federal district court's 1988 order that "petitioner within 180 days after this order becomes final by failure to appeal or by mandate of the circuit Court of Appeals shall be afforded a new sentencing phase trial, failing which upon motion a writ of habeas corpus discharging [the defendant] from custody shall issue." Moore v. Zant, 972 F.2d 318, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 20476 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1007, 113 S. Ct. 1650, 123 L. Ed. 2d 271, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 2469 (1993).

2. Attachment of Right

United States Const., amend. 5 applies before arrest or indictment, but U.S. Const., amend. 6 applies afterwards. — Delay that occurs between commission of an offense and arrest or indictment may violate the right to due process under U.S. Const., amend. 5. If, however, the delay occurs between arrest or indictment and trial the controlling constitutional provision is U.S. Const., amend. 6's guarantee of the right to a speedy trial. United States v. Smith, 65 F.R.D. 464, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11349 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Due process considerations under U.S. Const., amend. 5 apply to oppressive prearrest and preindictment delay, but the more specific guarantees of U.S. Const., amend. 6 apply to postarrest delay. United States v. T aylor, 578 F.2d 108, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 9652 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1074, 99 S. Ct. 848, 59 L. Ed. 2d 41, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 333 (1979).

Where the delay in bringing a defendant to trial occurs in the investigative stage before either arrest or indictment, due process, not sixth amendment, standards apply. Andrews v. State, 175 Ga. App. 22, 332 S.E.2d 299, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2768 (1985).

Constitutional right attaches upon arrest, while statutory rights attach upon indictment. — Although O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-170 and 17-7-171 prescribe a means of asserting one's right to a speedy trial after indictment, there is a right to a speedy trial under U.S. Const., amend. 6, which attaches at arrest and can be asserted thereafter. Haisman v. State, 242 Ga. 896, 252 S.E.2d 397, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 766 (1979); Glidewell v. State, 169 Ga. App. 858, 314 S.E.2d 924, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 2829 (1984).

Over and above the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, the Sixth Amendment rights to speedy trial attach upon arrest. Andrews v. State, 175 Ga. App. 22, 332 S.E.2d 299, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2768 (1985).

Unlike the statutory protections conferred by O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-170 and 17-7-171 that attach with formal indictment or accusation, the sixth amendment provides constitutional protection over and above the statutory provisions and under that amendment, the right to a speedy trial attaches upon arrest and can be asserted thereafter; a trial court properly denied defendant's statutory speedy trial demand where no indictment was filed, but improperly overlooked or failed to consider defendant's constitutional speedy trial demand, and thus, the trial court's judgment was vacated and the case was remanded with direction to the trial court to address defendant's constitutional claims. Smith v. State, 266 Ga. App. 529, 597 S.E.2d 414, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 158 (2004).

Former Code 1933, § 27-1901 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170) is not regarded as affording guidelines in relation to the federal constitutional provisions guaranteeing the right to a speedy trial, being limited to and in a proper case applicable only to the state right. Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461, 1967 Ga. App. LEXIS 914 (1967).

Question of speedy indictment is an aspect of the right to speedy trial. Harris v. Hopper, 236 Ga. 389, 224 S.E.2d 1, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 885 (1976).

Applicability of speedy trial provision. — Speedy trial provision of U.S. Const., amend. 6 has no application until the putative defendant in some ways becomes an accused. United States v. Duke, 527 F.2d 386, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 12729 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 426 U.S. 952, 96 S. Ct. 3177, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1190, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 2184 (1976); Gaylor v. State, 139 Ga. App. 370, 228 S.E.2d 390, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1813 (1976).

Defendant's fifth amendment due process rights and sixth amendment right to a speedy trial were not violated through the bringing of an indictment against the defendant in 1992 for criminal conduct that occurred in 1987. United States v. Lockett, 867 F. Supp. 1044, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16441 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 70 F.3d 126, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 32870 (11th Cir. 1995).

Defendant's claim of a preindictment and prearrest delay does not invoke the protections of U.S. Const., amend. 6. Gaylor v. State, 139 Ga. App. 370, 228 S.E.2d 390, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1813 (1976).

Confinement in administrative segregation is not an arrest or an accusal for purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 6. United States v. Blevins, 593 F.2d 646, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15260 (5th Cir. 1979).

Speedy trial provisions do not require the government to discover, investigate, and accuse any person within any particular period of time. Gaylor v. State, 139 Ga. App. 370, 228 S.E.2d 390, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1813 (1976).

Preindictment or prearrest delay not a denial of speedy trial. — If the delay to which complaint is made occurred prior to indictment or arrest, there is no denial of the right to a speedy trial. Armour v. State, 140 Ga. App. 196, 230 S.E.2d 346, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1402 (1976).

Due process standards apply to preindictment delay. — Where a post-arrest, preindictment delay occurs in the investigative stage before either arrest or indictment, due process, not U.S. Const., amend. 6, standards apply. Haisman v. State, 242 Ga. 896, 252 S.E.2d 397, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 766 (1979); State v. Hight, 156 Ga. App. 246, 274 S.E.2d 638, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3016 (1980).

Statute of limitations is primary protection against preaccusation delay. — The primary guarantee against prosecutorial delay in seeking an indictment being the applicable statute of limitations, the government has no duty to discover, investigate, and accuse any person within any particular period of time. A case can be dismissed for preaccusation delay, but only if the defense shows actual prejudice and demonstrates that the delay was an intentional device by the prosecution to gain a tactical advantage. United States v. Duke, 527 F.2d 386, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 12729 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 426 U.S. 952, 96 S. Ct. 3177, 49 L. Ed. 2d 1190, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 2184 (1976).

When speedy trial protections are engaged. — It is either a formal indictment or information or else the actual restraints imposed by arrest and holding to answer a criminal charge that engage particular protections of the speedy trial provisions of U.S. Const., amend. 6. Dillingham v. United States, 423 U.S. 64, 96 S. Ct. 303, 46 L. Ed. 2d 205, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 97 (1975); Hall v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 625, 216 S.E.2d 839, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1206 (1975); Harris v. Pitts, 569 F.2d 343, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 12192 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 959, 98 S. Ct. 3076, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1125, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2219 (1978); Haisman v. State, 242 Ga. 896, 252 S.E.2d 397, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 766 (1979); Simpson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 814, 258 S.E.2d 634, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2388 (1979); *United States v. Time is not to be measured from the time of initial arrest but from the time the petitioner is accused of the crime he is challenging. United States v. Nixon, 634 F.2d 306, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20934 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 828, 102 S. Ct. 120, 70 L. Ed. 2d 103, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3238 (1981).

The speedy trial clause does not attach at the time of an earlier arrest simply because the indictment for the present offense arises from the same activities that formed the basis of the earlier arrest. United States v. Derose, 74 F.3d 1177, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 2198 (11th Cir.), modified, No. 94-8730 (11th Cir. 1996).

But if crimes for which a defendant is ultimately prosecuted really only gild the charge underlying the defendant's initial arrest and the different accusatorial dates between them are not reasonably explicable, the initial arrest may well mark the speedy trial provision's applicability as to prosecution for all the interrelated offenses. United States v. Nixon, 634 F.2d 306, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20934 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 828, 102 S. Ct. 120, 70 L. Ed. 2d 103, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3238 (1981).

Dismissal of indictment as tolling speedy trial requirements. — Dismissing an indictment does not toll the speedy trial calendar when the next indictment is for precisely the same offense and the same transaction. United States v. Nixon, 634 F.2d 306, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20934 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 828, 102 S. Ct. 120, 70 L. Ed. 2d 103, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3238 (1981).

3. Burden of Requesting and Providing Speedy Trial

Assertion of right is a consideration in determining violation of right to speedy trial. — U.S. Const., amend. 6 is an independent guaranty of the right to a speedy trial, and the defendant's assertion or failure to assert the defendant's statutory right under former Code 1933, § 27-1901 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170) is simply one of the factors to be considered in determining whether the right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 has been impinged. Sanders v. State, 132 Ga. App. 580, 208 S.E.2d 597, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1749 (1974).

Former Code 1933, § 27-1901 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170) may prescribe a means of asserting one's right to a speedy trial after indictment, the accused has a right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to a speedy trial, which right attaches at arrest and can be asserted thereafter. Defendant's preindictment failure to assert this right will be weighed against the defendant. State v. Hight, 156 Ga. App. 246, 274 S.E.2d 638, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3016 (1980).

Although a pretrial delay of over five years in a child molestation case was uncommonly long and was mostly attributable to the negligence of the state, the defendant's failure to file a statutory demand for speedy trial and the delay of five years, and 21 calendar calls, in asserting the defendant's right weighed heavily against the defendant. Denial of the defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment was proper. Stewart v. State, 310 Ga. App. 551, 713 S.E.2d 708, 2011 Ga. App. LEXIS 609 (2011).

While an accused has no responsibility to assert the right to a speedy trial, the assertion of or failure to assert that right is a factor to be considered in an inquiry into the deprivation of the right. The defendant's assertion of that right would be entitled to strong evidentiary weight in determining whether the defendant has been deprived of the right. The failure to assert the right to a speedy trial would make it difficult to prove that the defendant was denied that right. Powell v. State, 143 Ga. App. 684, 239 S.E.2d 560, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2463 (1977).

Although defendant has no duty to bring the case to trial, failure to assert the right will make it difficult for a defendant to prove that the defendant was denied a speedy trial. United States v. Edwards, 577 F.2d 883, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 9854 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 968, 99 S. Ct. 458, 58 L. Ed. 2d 427, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 3851 (1978).

Regardless of the procedures mandated for a statutory demand for speedy trial, under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(a), a defendant has the right to assert a constitutional speedy trial demand any time after arrest. Hester v. State, 268 Ga. App. 94, 601 S.E.2d 456, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 856 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1830, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 875 (Ga. Sept. 27, 2004).

Trial court erred in declining to find a defendant's failure to assert the speedy trial right weighed against the defendant as the defendant was represented by counsel. State v. Thaxton, 311 Ga. App. 260, 715 S.E.2d 480, 2011 Ga. App. LEXIS 689 (2011).

Accused has some duty to alleviate stress of waiting for trial. — Although it is true that an accused who suffers emotional stress while awaiting the disposition of the charges against the accused is inherently prejudiced, the accused has some obligation to attempt to alleviate this stress by requesting a speedy trial or filing a statutory demand for trial pursuant to § 17-7-170. Cravey v. State, 147 Ga. App. 29, 248 S.E.2d 13, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1978).

In a capital case, where a pro se defendant filed what was claimed to be a statutory speedy trial demand but that actually invoked the sixth amendment speedy trial provisions, the statutory right to a speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-170 was not properly asserted. Bonakies v. State, 263 Ga. App. 812, 589 S.E.2d 573, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1140 (2003), cert. dismissed, No. S04C0560, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 203 (Ga. Mar. 1, 2004).

promptly brought to trial. State v. Fields, 137 Ga. App. 726, 224 S.E.2d 829, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2585 (1976).

Where no reason appears for a delay in bringing an accused to trial, a court must treat the delay as caused by the negligence of the state in bringing the case to trial. Hester v. State, 268 Ga. App. 94, 601 S.E.2d 456, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 856 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1830, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 875 (Ga. Sept. 27, 2004).

Duty to provide a speedy trial does not impose a paramount legal burden on the state, but is simply the logical syntactical reconciliation of the two rights: since society has the right to try the defendant and the defendant has the right to be tried quickly, if society tries the defendant, it must do so quickly, particularly if the defendant has asserted the right; but since both parties do stand alike at the beginning, when both parties stand alike in their respective failures to provide and assert the right to speedy trial, then because of the peculiar nature of the individual's right to speedy trial as one whose deprivation can definitely work to the defendant's advantage, the weight of the equities generally lies naturally with society and its right to try the criminal defendant. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Constitutional right of defendant charged with vehicular homicide and hit and run to a speedy trial was violated when defendant was not indicted for three years, without explanation, and two additional years of delay between defendant's indictment and a possible trial were attributable to the state, despite defendant's five-year delay in demanding a speedy trial because defendant's delay was mitigated by the delay in indicting the defendant and by the delay in appointing counsel for the defendant until the statutory time for demanding a speedy trial, under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170(a). Hester v. State, 268 Ga. App. 94, 601 S.E.2d 456, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 856 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1830, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 875 (Ga. Sept. 27, 2004).

Defendant is held to have some responsibility to assert a speedy trial claim even though it is the state's duty to bring the defendant to trial. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Weighing the state's negligent delay in bringing defendant to trial against defendant's failure to timely assert a sixth amendment right to a speedy trial and defendant's failure to show that the delay impaired the defense, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment. Smith v. State, 275 Ga. 261, 564 S.E.2d 441, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 482 (2002).

Defendant's rights to a speedy trial may be implemented by a written demand for trial under former Code 1933, § 27-1901 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170). Underhill v. State, 129 Ga. App. 65, 198 S.E.2d 703, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 879 (1973).

Noncompliance with statutory procedures for demanding speedy trial. — Where the defendant is not within the purview of the provisions relating to demand for trial by persons serving a term of imprisonment in a Georgia penal institution (see O.C.G.A. § 42-6-3), nor does the record show compliance with former Code 1933, §§ 27-1901, 27-2001, or 27-2002 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 17-7-170, 17-8-21, or 17-8-33), the defendant is not denied the right to a speedy trial within the meaning of Ga. Const. 1945, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. V (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI, XIV) or U.S. Const., amend. 6 when the trial is delayed after the defendant withdraws the guilty plea. Butler v. State, 126 Ga. App. 22, 189 S.E.2d 870, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1031 (1972).

While the burden is on defendant to protect the defendant's statutory rights for a speedy trial, by making a timely demand for trial under former Code 1933, § 27-1901 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170), his failure in doing so does not, of itself, work a waiver of rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6. Sanders v. State, 132 Ga. App. 580, 208 S.E.2d 597, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1749 (1974).

Defendant's direct appeal from the denial of a speedy trial motion to dismiss lay given the state of Georgia law; however, the motion was properly denied because defendant, who had been incarcerated in the interim period, was equally responsible for the pretrial delay, never asserted the right to trial, never requested disposition of the subject offenses, suffered no prejudice, and did not suffer oppressive pretrial incarceration. Lamar v. State, 262 Ga. App. 735, 586 S.E.2d 416, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1005 (2003).

Motion to dismiss or quash indictment is not assertion of right to speedy trial. — Motion to dismiss or quash indictment for denial of speedy trial, which did not request an immediate trial, is not a demand for trial and is not an assertion of the right to speedy trial. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

State's duty upon assertion of speedy trial right. — There is a duty on the state to make a diligent, good-faith effort to bring the accused before the appropriate state court for trial, provided the accused has made a sufficient demand for a trial, in order not to violate the speedy trial requirement of U.S. Const., amend. 6. May v. Georgia, 409 F.2d 203, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 13171 (5th Cir. 1969).

The state has a duty, under the sixth amendment as made applicable by the fourteenth amendment, to make a diligent, good-faith effort to bring defendants to trial in Georgia notwithstanding trial and incarceration for a federal offense in another state; where the state timely initiated a request for the appellant's release, especially after the date when the appellant filed a demand to dismiss or for immediate trial, the state satisfied its duty. Obiozor v. State, 213 Ga. App. 523, 445 S.E.2d 553, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 638 (1994).

Error in applying the speedy trial test. — Trial court erred in granting defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment on speedy trial grounds as the trial court miscalculated the length of the delay; improperly considered the state's pre-indictment, pre-arrest inaction for purposes of evaluating the reasons for the delay; failed to weigh the defendant's assertions of the right to speedy trial; and erred in finding that the defense was substantially impaired by the death of the defendant's sister. State v. Gay, 321 Ga. App. 92, 741 S.E.2d 217, 2013 Ga. App. LEXIS 327 (2013).

Insufficient evidence to show denial of speedy trial. — Constitutional right to a speedy trial did not require granting of defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal where, inter alia, all but a couple of months of the time defendant was incarcerated before trial was attributable to service of other sentences, there was no evidence of defendant's anxiety and concern, and there was no evidence that defendant's defense was impaired as none of the witnesses who testified at the first trial were allegedly unavailable. Weldon v. State, 262 Ga. App. 782, 586 S.E.2d 452, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1024 (2003).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was denied as defendant failed to obtain defendant's lawyer's testimony as to why defendant failed to tender the police report to impeach a detective's testimony; defendant failed to carry the burden of establishing that the purported deficiency in trial counsel's representation was indicative of ineffectiveness and was not an example of a conscious and deliberate trial strategy. McPetrie v. State, 263 Ga. App. 85, 587 S.E.2d 233, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1118 (2003), overruled in part, McClure v. State, 306 Ga. 856, 834 S.E.2d 96, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 643 (2019).

Superior court abused its discretion in dismissing an indictment on speedy trial grounds, despite a five-year delay in bringing the defendant to trial, which was held to be excessively long and not to be excused; however, because the delay was caused by the state's negligence or other court-related circumstances which were not to be weighed heavily against the state, given the defendant's failure to assert a speedy trial violation or show prejudice from the same, dismissal of the indictment was reversed. State v. Giddens, 280 Ga. App. 586, 634 S.E.2d 526, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 904 (2006).

That a defendant never asserted a statutory right to a speedy trial, agreed to some continuances, never objected to others, and never acted on the trial court's invitation to file an out-of-time speedy trial demand, established that the defendant did not timely and vigilantly assert the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial. Therefore, the defendant's motion to dismiss on speedy trial grounds was properly denied. Bowling v. State, 285 Ga. 43, 673 S.E.2d 194, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 47 (2009).

There was no abuse of the superior court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss based on alleged violations of the defendant's constitutional rights to a speedy trial because the defendant did not make an unusual showing of anxiety and concern, which were always present to some extent during the pendency of a criminal prosecution. Higgenbottom v. State, 290 Ga. 198, 719 S.E.2d 482, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 944 (2011).

4. Prejudice from Delay

Where no trial demand, only question presented is whether pretrial delay constitutional. — Where the defendant files no demand for trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170, the only question presented is whether the delay between the defendant's arrest and the commencement of the defendant's trial is a violation of the defendant's sixth amendment right to a speedy trial. Mullins v. State, 167 Ga. App. 670, 307 S.E.2d 61, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2573 (1983).

Length of the delay is the threshold triggering mechanism. — No inquiry into the other factors is required unless there has been a delay of such length as to be presumptively prejudicial. United States v. Hill, 622 F.2d 900, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15192 (5th Cir. 1980).

Absence of prejudice does not by itself preclude a finding of a speedy trial violation, but balanced against factors that themselves only weakly support a speedy trial violation, the absence of prejudice is dispositive. Glidewell v. Burden, 822 F.2d 1027, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 9929 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1018, 108 S. Ct. 727, 98 L. Ed. 2d 676, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 47 (1988).

Effect of delay depends on circumstances. — Whether a delay between indictment and trial violates the constitutional right to a speedy trial depends on the circumstances. Hughes v. State, 228 Ga. 593, 187 S.E.2d 135, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 858 (1972).

Defendant is required to show more than a mere claim of prejudice in the right to a speedy trial. Collins v. State, 154 Ga. App. 651, 269 S.E.2d 509, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2327 (1980).

Denial of speedy trial may work to a defendant's advantage, and therefore there is no per se prejudice to a defendant from delay. Harris v. Hopper, 236 Ga. 389, 224 S.E.2d 1, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 885 (1976); Dansby v. State, 140 Ga. App. 104, 230 S.E.2d 64, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1362 (1976); Natson v. State, 242 Ga. 618, 250 S.E.2d 420, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1303 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 925, 99 S. Ct. 2036, 60 L. Ed. 2d 399, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 1667 (1979); State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Kinds of prejudice which may result from delay. — A defendant might be prejudiced by a delay in being brought to trial by lengthy pretrial incarceration, by a substantial impairment of the defendant's defense, and by being subjected to public scorn and personal anxiety. United States v. Dyson, 469 F.2d 735, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6828 (5th Cir. 1972); United States v. Hill, 622 F.2d 900, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15192 (5th Cir. 1980).

Constitutional right of defendant charged with vehicular homicide and hit and run to a speedy trial was violated when defendant was not indicted for three years, without explanation, and two additional years of delay between defendant's indictment and a possible trial were attributable to the state, as defendant showed actual prejudice due to the intervening death of an exculpatory witness, and the trial court's ruling that the preservation of this witness's statement in writing eliminated any prejudice ignored the dry impact of such written testimony as compared to a live witness. Hester v. State, 268 Ga. App. 94, 601 S.E.2d 456, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 856 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1830, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 875 (Ga. Sept. 27, 2004).

Death of a witness impacting speedy trial rights. — There was no abuse of the superior court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss based on alleged violations of the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial because the defendant failed to show that the superior court was in error in finding that the defendant made no showing of actual prejudice to the defense due to the death of the doctor who performed the autopsy on the victim; any impact on the case by the doctor's death existed prior to the attachment of the defendant's constitutional rights to a speedy trial, and the state was willing to stipulate to the admission of the doctor's autopsy report. Higgenbottom v. State, 290 Ga. 198, 719 S.E.2d 482, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 944 (2011).

Substantial actual prejudice must be shown as to postarrest, preindictment delay. — While postarrest, preindictment delay is within the scope of the speedy trial guarantee, a substantial showing of actual prejudice is required to establish a violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6. United States v. Zane, 489 F.2d 269, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 6380 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 416 U.S. 959, 94 S. Ct. 1975, 40 L. Ed. 2d 310, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 468 (1974); United States v. Traylor, 578 F.2d 108, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 9652 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1074, 99 S. Ct. 848, 59 L. Ed. 2d 41, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 333 (1979).

Delay must be shown to be purposeful, oppressive, or prejudicial. — To sustain a prisoner's contention that there was a violation of the constitutional right to a speedy trial, not only must delay be shown, but that such delay was purposeful, oppressive, or prejudicial. Johnson v. Smith, 227 Ga. 611, 182 S.E.2d 101, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 796 (1971); Hughes v. State, 228 Ga. 593, 187 S.E.2d 135, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 858 (1972); Crapse v. State, 180 Ga. App. 321, 349 S.E.2d 190, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2728 (1986).

Incarceration during the delay was oppressive and produced debilitating anxiety. — Dismissal of malice murder and arson case for a constitutional speedy trial violation was affirmed because, in the four-year delay in bringing the case to trial after earlier convictions were reversed on appeal, the defendant's eight-month incarceration during the delay was oppressive and produced debilitating anxiety, because two defense witnesses had died during the delay, because another defense witness, the defendant's parent, had developed dementia and other ailments related to age, because the burned house had been destroyed, and where the defendant's failure to assert the defendant's speedy trial right earlier was due to the representations of the state concerning a new arson expert. State v. Carr, 278 Ga. 124, 598 S.E.2d 468, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 527 (2004).

Unexcused denial of assertion of speedy trial right is prejudice per se. — Upon defendant's bona fide assertion of the right to a speedy trial, the unexcused denial of it by the state is generally prejudice per se. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Prejudice must be shown. — Since mere delay, even if unexcused, does not alone prejudice the defendant's ability to defend, and since the defendant may be only too delighted to have the trial delayed, before the defendant is held deprived of the right to a speedy trial and there ensues the unsatisfactorily severe remedy of dismissal of the indictment with the serious consequence that a defendant who may be guilty of a serious crime will go free, without having been tried, the defendant must show some actual substantial prejudice to the defendant. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Claim that defense counsel was ineffective for failing to prevent a letter written by a jailhouse informant from going into the jury room during deliberations failed because the defendant failed to show that there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different since the contents of the letter were not particularly harmful to the defendant. Young v. State, 292 Ga. 443, 738 S.E.2d 575, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 148 (2013).

Even assuming counsel's failure to object to testimony that a photo lineup made up of photos of persons who had been arrested constituted deficient performance, the defendant failed to show prejudice because there was other testimony of the defendant's bad character admitted without objection. Thornton v. State, 292 Ga. 796, 741 S.E.2d 641, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 328 (2013).

Pretermitted whether trial counsel was deficient for failing to object to a question propounded by the prosecutor in which the defendant contended the prosecutor stated the prosecutor's opinion of the defendant's guilt, because an objection to the prosecutor's question as posed would not have changed the outcome of the case given the substantial evidence of the defendant's guilt, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim was without merit. Thompson v. State, 294 Ga. 693, 755 S.E.2d 713, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 173 (2014).

Unexcused delay is prima facie prejudicial. — Where the delay in bringing a defendant to trial is not only excessive, but the result of unexcused inaction or misconduct by the government, it is prima facie prejudicial, and the burden then shifts to the government to demonstrate that defendant has not been prejudiced by the delay. United States v. Dyson, 469 F.2d 735, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6828 (5th Cir. 1972).

To constitute prejudice, faded memory must affect material fact in issue. — Although faded memory may result in prejudice, in order to prejudice the defense to the extent necessary to constitute a speedy trial violation, the faded memory must substantially relate to a material fact in issue. United States v. Edwards, 577 F.2d 883, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 9854 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 968, 99 S. Ct. 458, 58 L. Ed. 2d 427, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 3851 (1978).

For one already in custody, the event triggering scrutiny is the indictment. The defendant demonstrates a violation of the right to a speedy trial only if the defendant can show that the delay prior to accusal caused substantial prejudice to the right to a fair trial and that the delay was an intentional device to gain tactical advantage over the accused. United States v. Manetta, 551 F.2d 1352, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 13418 (5th Cir. 1977).

Extraordinary delay, without reason shown by the record, is overcome when no prejudice is shown and the petitioner did not want a speedy trial. Hall v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 625, 216 S.E.2d 839, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1206 (1975).

Where delay primarily caused by defendant, speedy trial rights not violated. — There is no violation of due process in respect to a speedy trial when substantially all of the delay in bringing the defendant to trial appears to be directly or indirectly attributable to the conduct of the defendant. Mays v. State, 229 Ga. 609, 193 S.E.2d 825, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 699 (1972).

Delay caused by negligence or overcrowding of courts. — Under U.S. Const., amend. 6, reasons for delay, such as negligence or overcrowded courts, should be weighed less heavily against the government than deliberate delay for the purpose of hampering the defense. State v. Fields, 137 Ga. App. 726, 224 S.E.2d 829, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2585 (1976).

While a deliberate attempt by the prosecution to delay the trial in order to hamper the defense is weighed heavily against the government, an overcrowded docket is considered to be a more neutral reason although it cannot be overlooked. Collins v. State, 154 Ga. App. 651, 269 S.E.2d 509, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2327 (1980).

Dead docket device may not be used to delay the trial over the defendant's objection. Where mere lapse of time, less than that set out in the statute of limitations, is involved, and the defendant has not objected to the case being dead docketed, and has made no demand for early trial, it will take a showing of prejudice to the defendant's interests or oppressive and harassing tactics by the government to justify a finding of encroachment on the constitutional right to a speedy trial. Three such interests have been identified: prevention of oppressive pretrial incarceration; minimizing anxiety and concern of the accused; and limiting the possibility that the defense will be impaired. Underhill v. State, 129 Ga. App. 65, 198 S.E.2d 703, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 879 (1973).

Right to a speedy trial has not been abridged where the delay is not excessive, the delay was not deliberate so as to hamper the defense, defendant did not assert right to a speedy trial during the delay, and where defendant's interest has not been prejudiced. State v. Weeks, 136 Ga. App. 637, 222 S.E.2d 117, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1447 (1975).

Where the defendant is not in confinement, does not demand trial, has shown no actual prejudice, and the record does not demonstrate the delay is deliberate or taken for purpose of tactical advantage over the defendant, a delay of approximately 23 months between arrest and indictment did not violate defendant's right to a speedy trial. State v. Hight, 156 Ga. App. 246, 274 S.E.2d 638, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3016 (1980).

Delay attributable to hiring four different counsel. — Defendant's right to a speedy trial was not violated, where although the delay was approximately 22 months, much of that was attributable to the defendant's hiring and discharging four different counsel prior to the final appointment, the defendant did not assert the defendant's demand for trial until almost a year after indictment, and trial commenced ten months thereafter. Lynott v. State, 198 Ga. App. 688, 402 S.E.2d 747, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 265 (1991).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss an indictment on constitutional speedy trial grounds because the court applied the proper framework for analyzing the speedy trial issue, and the evidence supported the trial court's findings that the two years prior to indictment were used for investigation and that the defendant did not experience any unusual anxiety and concern beyond that which necessarily accompanied serious pending charges; the trial court's finding of no oppressive pretrial incarceration was correct because the defendant was released on bond less than three weeks after the defendant's arrest, and the delay, though long, was reasonable under the circumstances and in light of the scientific evidence involved. Sweatman v. State, 287 Ga. 872, 700 S.E.2d 579, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 636 (2010).

Indictment sealed beyond limitations period not automatically prejudicial. — The court improperly dismissed the indictment, which was returned against the defendant in October, 1982, but which remained sealed beyond the limitations period, until February 1984, when the defendant was taken into custody. Although the government did not seriously attempt to find the defendant, the defendant was not impaired in asserting the right to a speedy trial and, consequently, had to show actual prejudice. That the indictment was sealed beyond the limitation period could be figured into the prejudice decision, but that fact alone did not dictate a finding of prejudice. United States v. Mitchell, 769 F.2d 1544, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 21497 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1066, 106 S. Ct. 819, 88 L. Ed. 2d 792, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 2455 (1986), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1028, 106 S. Dismissal of indictment for preindictment delay. — Since an applicable statute of limitations does not fully define accused's rights with respect to the events occurring prior to indictment, due process would require dismissal of the indictment if it were shown at trial that preindictment delay caused substantial prejudice to accused's rights to a fair trial and that the delay was an intentional device to gain tactical advantage over the accused. State v. Hight, 156 Ga. App. 246, 274 S.E.2d 638, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3016 (1980).

Dismissal is required for prearrest or preindictment delay under the due process clause when it is shown that the delay caused actual substantial prejudice to defendant's right to a fair trial and that the delay was an intentional device to gain a tactical advantage. Hammond v. State, 157 Ga. App. 647, 278 S.E.2d 188, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1951 (1981).

Reason for delay. — Because of extreme delay (seven years) in bringing case to trial, state's lack of any apparent, articulable reason for delay, and consequent impairment of appellant's case, appellant's sixth amendment due process right was violated by deprivation of a speedy trial. Lett v. State, 164 Ga. App. 584, 298 S.E.2d 541, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3329 (1982).

Defendant was denied the right to counsel of defendant's own choosing and obtained a reversal of defendant's conviction for aggravated assault, aggravated battery, and possession of a firearm, as a result of the trial court judge denying defendant's motion for a continuance, which was grounded on the fact that defendant's retained counsel was hospitalized the trial court failed to make an inquiry as to whether the absence of defense counsel was attributable to defendant and merely stated that because appointed counsel was in the courtroom, defendant was adequately represented. Turman v. State, 272 Ga. App. 570, 613 S.E.2d 126, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 237 (2005).

When defendant was one of the people indicted in a multiple-murder case in which the state sought capital punishment, defendant did not show that a 38-month delay between defendant's indictment and trial was "presumptively prejudicial," because it was necessary for each co-indictee to be tried separately, and this triggered the state's statutory right, under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4, to elect which defendant to try first; therefore, when the state elected to try defendant co-indictee first, defendant's case was prosecuted with the promptness customary for death penalty cases involving multiple defendants, and the trial court did not have to balance the factors considered in deciding whether defendant's right to a speedy trial was violated, given the lack of presumptive prejudice. Wimberly v. State, 279 Ga. 65, 608 S.E.2d 625, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 109 (2005).

When defendant, who was initially indicted for the burglary of victims who died when their house burned down, later admitted involvement in their deaths, resulting in a new indictment for murder, arson, and other offenses, as well as the original burglary, while a 62-month delay after the new indictment was presumptively prejudicial, as was the delay of another year after the original indictment, the lack of the state's deliberate act causing the delay, defendant's withdrawal of defendant's speedy trial demand, and the lack of a showing that defendant's defense was impaired by the delay indicated that it was not error to deny defendant's motion to dismiss the indictments. Williams v. State, 279 Ga. 106, 610 S.E.2d 32, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 135 (2005).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment against him because defendant never filed an effective statutory demand for a speedy trial and, as to defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial, the 68-month delay was presumed prejudicial, but defendant prolonged the proceedings due to defendant's own issues with retaining counsel, including defendant's original counsel obtaining various leaves of absences due to illness and defendant's unsuccessful efforts to retain other private counsel. Henderson v. State, 290 Ga. App. 427, 662 S.E.2d 652, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 328 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1274, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 610 (Ga. June 16, 2008).

Defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial was not violated even though delay was for two years, three months, and ten days, of which the defendant was incarcerated, where there was no evidence that a deliberate attempt to delay the trial in order to hamper the defense was shown, to a considerable extent the delay was attributable to the defense, the defendant did not assert in the criminal case the constitutional right to a speedy trial, and the defendant's only assertion of prejudice was the death of a character witness. Perry v. Mitchell, 253 Ga. 593, 322 S.E.2d 273, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 1019 (1984).

Vague assertions of faded memory and lost witnesses without connecting the loss to any material fact in issue will not satisfy the requirement that actual prejudice be demonstrated to establish a violation of the right to a speedy trial. United States v. Burke, 673 F. Supp. 1574, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 28482 (N.D. Ga. 1986), aff'd, 856 F.2d 1492, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 13983 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 492 U.S. 908, 109 S. Ct. 3222, 106 L. Ed. 2d 571, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 3245 (1989).

Denial of defendant's motion to dismiss for an alleged violation of defendant's speedy trial right based on a more than three-year delay after defendant's initial arrest was proper where there was no deliberate attempt to delay the trial to hamper the defense, where defendant was incarcerated for a few days and then released on bond, where defendant's burdens of mental anguish and defendant's claim that the case hurt defendant economically fell short of establishing an unusual showing that balanced this factor significantly in defendant's favor, where, since, in criminal cases, a child was automatically competent to testify as to molestation, defendant showed no prejudice by defendant's assertion that the child victims were more vulnerable to a competency challenge when they were younger, where defendant's speculation that the people who had moved out of state might have been alibi witnesses fell short of "specific evidence" to weight this factor in defendant's favor, and where defendant failed to assert timely speedy trial rights and failed to show that defendant's defense was impaired. Watkins v. State, 267 Ga. App. 684, 600 S.E.2d 747, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 760 (2004).

Presumption of prejudice raised by the state's 25-month delay in bringing defendant's case to trial was sufficiently rebutted as the loss of a witness did not prevent defendant from asserting an alibi defense and defendant was partially responsible for the loss of the witness as defendant waited 15 months after the indictment to assert defendant's speedy trial rights. Salahuddin v. State, 277 Ga. 561, 592 S.E.2d 410, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 65 (2004).

Trial court's denial of defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal on constitutional speedy trial grounds was proper because, while the first two Barker factors weighed in favor of defendant, defendant did not assert constitutional rights until trial was imminent, despite ample time to do so, defendant did not show that the defense was impaired by the 29-month delay between arrest and trial, defendant did not show any prejudice from the delay, there was no evidence that the delay was the result of a deliberate attempt by the state to hamper the defense, and defendant had been released on bond on the same day as the arrest. Nusser v. State, 275 Ga. App. 896, 622 S.E.2d 105, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1139 (2005).

Because the short delay attributable to the state did not have any demonstrable harmful effect on the defense against two murder charges and because defendant was dilatory in formally asserting the right to a speedy trial under the sixth amendment and the Georgia Constitution, the trial court correctly denied defendant's motion to dismiss the indictments. Scandrett v. State, 279 Ga. 632, 619 S.E.2d 603, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 511 (2005).

Trial court did not err by denying a defendant's motion to dismiss based on an alleged violation of the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial because the various appeals by the defendant and the state constituted valid reasons for significant periods of delay in the trial, part of the delay was inherent since the case involved a death penalty prosecution, there was no evidence of a deliberate attempt by the state to delay the trial in order to hamper the defense, and the trial court was authorized to conclude that there had not been any impairment to the defense. Griffin v. State, 282 Ga. 215, 647 S.E.2d 36, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 482 (2007), overruled in part, Garza v. State, 284 Ga. 696, 670 S.E.2d 73, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 865 (2008).

Speedy trial rights not violated. — Three defendants failed to carry the burden of establishing that a 14-month delay in bringing defendants to trial was presumptively prejudicial and, therefore, violated defendants' right to a speedy trial, because the peculiar circumstances of the case authorized a finding that the case was being prosecuted with the promptness customary for a complex drug trafficking case involving multiple defendants. Defendants failed to show that such a delay was presumptively prejudicial under the circumstances of the case: (1) the case was more akin to a complex conspiracy charge, as opposed to an ordinary street crime, since the indictment charged 11 people with the serious offense of trafficking in cocaine; (2) defendants acknowledged in the trial court and in appellate briefs that there was a massive amount of evidence for discovery, including thousands of documents, thousands of telephone records, and hundreds of hours of taped conversations; and (3) there was also a federal investigation of the drug operation going on at the same time as the state investigation. Lawrence v. State, 289 Ga. App. 698, 658 S.E.2d 144, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 132 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1086, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 467 (Ga. June 2, 2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1084, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 486 (Ga. June 2, 2008).

With regard to defendant's convictions for theft by taking and on two counts of violation of oath by a public officer, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion to dismiss based on a violation of defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial as no violation was established since some delay was attributable to defendant and defendant never filed a statutory demand for a speedy trial; defendant did not show any evidence that the state deliberately delayed the trial in order to hamper the defense; and defendant did not show that the delay impaired the defense. Brandenburg v. State, 292 Ga. App. 191, 663 S.E.2d 844, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 748 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1796, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 921 (Ga. Oct. 6, 2008).

Defendant's motion to dismiss an indictment based on a violation of the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial was properly denied as the defendant failed to show prejudice. There was no evidence that the defendant was subjected to substandard conditions in jail before release on bond, and the defendant failed to make any real showing of harm to the defense due to alleged changes in a defense witness's testimony and the destruction of certain physical evidence. Bowling v. State, 285 Ga. 43, 673 S.E.2d 194, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 47 (2009).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by concluding that the presumption of prejudice arising from any delay in bringing the defendant to trial was insufficient for the defendant to prevail on the defendant's speedy trial claim because the defendant never filed a statutory speedy trial demand and only raised the speedy trial issue in defendant's October 24, 2008 motion to dismiss the indictment, and the defendant did not show anything oppressive relating to the defendant's pretrial incarceration or release on bond; there is no abuse of discretion in the trial court's determination that there was no prejudice caused by the unavailability of witnesses after the trial court specifically found that the witnesses' recorded sworn testimony from the first trial is still available, and there was a thorough and sifting cross-examination done at the first trial. Jakupovic v. State, 287 Ga. 205, 695 S.E.2d 247, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 385 (2010).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court denied the first defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment on speedy trial grounds when although the delay in the instant case triggered a threshold finding of presumptive prejudice, while the final few weeks of delay could have been avoided had the state alerted the court to the fact that the victim was subject to a federal subpoena in Florida, the state did not deliberately attempt to hamper the defense in that regard. Moreover, the first defendant waited more than three years after the defendant's arrest to assert the defendant's demand, and the first defendant's alibi defense was not impaired as a result of the delay because defendant's alleged alibi witness was still available and capable of giving testimony. Brown v. State, 287 Ga. 892, 700 S.E.2d 407, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 629 (2010).

Although defendant contended the trial court should have dismissed the charges against the defendant because the defendant was denied the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI, the record revealed no basis for granting such a motion because the record showed that any delay in bringing the case to trial was primarily attributable to defendant and that any resulting prejudice worked to the defendant's benefit, factors which weighed against defendant and defeated any contention that the defendant was deprived of the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial. Zeger v. State, 306 Ga. App. 474, 702 S.E.2d 474, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 969 (2010).

Prejudice shown. — Trial court erred in denying defendant's motion to dismiss which alleged a speedy trial violation, as the delay in bringing defendant to trial was prejudicial, especially when, after an assertion of the right, a trial did not immediately ensue, but an additional seven months had passed before a ruling on the claim, and in the interim, an alleged material defense witness died. Hardeman v. State, 280 Ga. App. 168, 633 S.E.2d 595, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 783 (2006), cert. denied, No. S06C1840, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 918 (Ga. Oct. 30, 2006).

Renewed motion for discharge and acquittal by the defendant was properly granted upon a determination that the defendant's constitutional speedy trial rights were violated under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI, as the delay of almost four years in bringing the defendant to trial was presumptively prejudicial, and the remaining Barker-Doggett factors weighed in the defendant's favor; only a small portion of the delay was attributable to the defendant and the defendant timely asserted the right to a speedy trial. State v. Reid, 298 Ga. App. 235, 679 S.E.2d 802, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 646 (2009).

Defendant was denied defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial and to due process based on the state's intentional act of trading discovery responses for a speedy trial right, and the resulting prejudice from the disappearance of a material witness. The trial court therefore abused the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal. Ditman v. State, 301 Ga. App. 187, 687 S.E.2d 155, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1342 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0539, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 243 (Ga. Mar. 15, 2010).

Trial court abused the court's discretion by concluding that the defendant did not show sufficient prejudice from the delay to support a constitutional speedy trial claim because 33 months of a 35-month delay in trial was attributable to the state, and because the defendant established that during the delay witnesses with material testimony had become unavailable by leaving the country. Davis v. State, 301 Ga. App. 155, 687 S.E.2d 180, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1348 (2009).

Speedy trial rights were violated when the defendant was brought to trial more than 53 months after being indicted, an uncommonly long delay that weighed against the state. The delay occasioned by the prosecuting attorney's announcement that the state intended to seek the death penalty, made on the day the case was set for trial for the tenth time, weighed more heavily against the state; while the defendant did not assert the right to a speedy trial until almost four years after the indictment, the defendant's late assertion was somewhat mitigated by the defendant's repeated insistence that the state comply with the state's discovery obligations; and the defendant suffered actual prejudice as a result of the defendant's inability to show the extent to which evidence tampering occurred, due to an officer's inability to recall important details of the investigation. State v. Buckner, 292 Ga. 390, 738 S.E.2d 65, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 109 (2013).

Sentencing compliant with Sentencing Guidelines. — A defendant's due process rights are violated only when a judge-decided fact actually increases a defendant's sentence beyond the prescribed statutory maximum penalty for the convicted crime and has no application to, or effect on, cases where a defendant's sentence falls at or below that maximum penalty; thus, there can be no due process violation in connection with either mandatory minimum sentences or Sentencing Guidelines calculations, when in either case the ultimate sentence imposed does not exceed the prescribed statutory maximum penalty. United States v. Sanchez, 269 F.3d 1250, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 22406 (11th Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 942, 122 S. Ct. 1327, 152 L. Ed. 2d 234, 2002 U.S. LEXIS 1763 (2002).

5. Waiver

Determination of waiver generally.

Speedy and Public Trial (Cont'd)*5. Waiver (Cont'd)

— In the context of U.S. Const., amend. 6 waiver must be determined by applying federal constitutional law. Clarke v. Zant, 247 Ga. 194, 275 S.E.2d 49, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 681 (1981).

Determination of voluntariness of waiver. — While the Constitution requires that the record indicate the voluntariness of any waiver of the rights of jury trial, confrontation, and against self-incrimination, it does not require that a district judge go beyond these constitutional minima to ask the specific questions that F.R.Cr.P. 11(c)(3) imposes as a prophylactic procedure. United States v. Caston, 615 F.2d 1111, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 18304 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 831, 101 S. Ct. 99, 66 L. Ed. 2d 36, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2760 (1980).

Factors bearing on waiver of constitutional rights. — Mental deficiency, age, and lack of familiarity with the criminal process are important factors to be considered in determining whether there has been a waiver of constitutional rights. Cooper v. Griffin, 455 F.2d 1142, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 11426 (5th Cir. 1972).

Form of waiver of trial unimportant. — Defendant's consent to waive the right to trial need not be in a particular, ritualistic form, since form is unimportant. Griggs v. State, 159 Ga. App. 219, 283 S.E.2d 77, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2553 (1981).

6. Length of Delay

Delay measured from time of arrest. — For purposes of speedy trial the Supreme Court begins to count from the date of arrest, if that precedes indictment. The time from arrest to indictment is added to time from indictment to trial. Harris v. Hopper, 236 Ga. 389, 224 S.E.2d 1, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 885 (1976).

As a defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal complained of a 15-month delay that occurred after the date that the defendant was arrested, a speedy trial analysis had to be conducted based on standards pursuant to U.S. Const., amend. 6. State v. Thaxton, 311 Ga. App. 260, 715 S.E.2d 480, 2011 Ga. App. LEXIS 689 (2011).

Delay measured from date of indictment if no prior arrest. — Under U.S. Const., amend. 6, the clock begins to tick upon indictment, when no prior arrest on the alleged offense is involved. In particular, the date of the indictment is the crucial date for a prisoner already incarcerated on a prior offense. United States v. Hill, 622 F.2d 900, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15192 (5th Cir. 1980).

Mere passage of time is not enough, without more, to constitute a denial of speedy trial due process. Hughes v. State, 228 Ga. 593, 187 S.E.2d 135, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 858 (1972); Sanders v. State, 132 Ga. App. 580, 208 S.E.2d 597, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1749 (1974); State v. Fields, 137 Ga. App. 726, 224 S.E.2d 829, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2585 (1976); Dansby v. State, 140 Ga. App. 104, 230 S.E.2d 64, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1362 (1976); Fleming v. State, 240 Ga. 142, 240 S.E.2d 37, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1424 (1977); Simpson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 814, 258 S.E.2d 634, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2388 (1979); Collins v. State, 154 Ga. App. 651, 269 S.E.2d 509, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2327 (1980).

There is no specific number of days or months within which a defendant must be tried. Harris v. Hopper, 236 Ga. 389, 224 S.E.2d 1, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 885 (1976); Dansby v. State, 140 Ga. App. 104, 230 S.E.2d 64, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1362 (1976); Natson v. State, 242 Ga. 618, 250 S.E.2d 420, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1303 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 925, 99 S. Ct. 2036, 60 L. Ed. 2d 399, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 1667 (1979); State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

For purposes of determining when the right to speedy trial attaches the basis for the arrest is critical. United States v. Nixon, 634 F.2d 306, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20934 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 828, 102 S. Ct. 120, 70 L. Ed. 2d 103, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3238 (1981).

An eight-month delay between accusation and arrest and trial is insufficient to merit a sixth amendment speedy trial violation inquiry. A preaccusation delay approaching one year is the point at which courts deem the delay presumptively prejudicial and unreasonable enough to trigger the sixth amendment inquiry.

United States v. Derose, 74 F.3d 1177, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 2198 (11th Cir.), modified, No. 94-8730 (11th Cir. 1996).

Nine-month delay. — The Supreme Court determined that defendant was not prejudiced by a seven-year trial delay and the subsequent nine month delay in bringing defendant to trial and the consequential inability to locate witnesses did not justify granting defendant's motion to dismiss since defendant lacked diligence in finding the witnesses and no prejudice resulted. Brannen v. State, 262 Ga. App. 719, 586 S.E.2d 383, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 992 (2003).

Nine-month delay between a defendant's indictment for murder and the defendant's filing of a motion to dismiss the indictment on constitutional grounds was not a speedy trial violation under the sixth amendment as the defendant filed no demand for a speedy trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-171; did not raise the speedy trial issue for nine months; was imprisoned on other charges during those nine months; and showed no prejudice from the delay. Jones v. State, 284 Ga. 320, 667 S.E.2d 49, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 751 (2008).

Nine-month delay between arrest and trial cannot be dismissed as trivial, but this length of delay cannot alone constitute a speedy trial violation. Glidewell v. Burden, 822 F.2d 1027, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 9929 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1018, 108 S. Ct. 727, 98 L. Ed. 2d 676, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 47 (1988).

The passage of nine months between the date a speeding charge was made and the date of trial was not alone sufficient to establish a violation of the right to a speedy trial where there was no evidence that the state delayed the trial to gain a tactical advantage, five months passed between the charge and the defendant's assertion of the right to a speedy trial, and, since the defendant was not incarcerated, there was no prejudice to the defendant. Nairon v. State, 215 Ga. App. 76, 449 S.E.2d 634, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 1104 (1994), cert. denied, No. S95C0361, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 288 (Ga. Feb. 17, 1995).

Ten-month delay between arrest and dismissal of charges. — Ten-month delay between the defendant's arrest for child molestation and the dismissal of the charges, did not violate the defendant's right to a speedy indictment, because the defendant had not filed a demand for a speedy indictment, and did not claim or demonstrate that the defense was impaired by the delay. State v. Auerswald, 198 Ga. App. 183, 401 S.E.2d 27, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1569 (1990).

11-month delay. — Defendant's plea in bar, wherein the defendant claimed that the defendant was denied the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial, pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI and U.S. Const., amend. 6, was properly denied since the trial court found that the delay of 11 months from the time that the accusation was filed until the parties were ready for trial was not excessive, some of the delay was attributable to the defendant, and the state had provided adequate explanations for its delay, and further, there was no prejudice shown. The court noted that although the state nol prossed the charges by accusation just hours before the defendant filed a demand for a speedy trial, such put the state on notice and therefore, it was not significant that the defendant did not file another demand for a speedy trial after charges were filed by grand jury indictment against the defendant. Shuler v. State, 263 Ga. App. 124, 587 S.E.2d 269, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1134 (2003), cert. denied, No. S04C0142, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 97 (Ga. Jan. 20, 2004).

Delay of twelve months and ten days. — Trial court did not err when the court denied the defendant's motion to dismiss based on a purported violation of defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial because the circumstances of the case warranted a finding that the twelve-month, ten-day delay between the defendant's indictment and the filing of defendant's motion to dismiss was not presumptively prejudicial. The defendant was serving a sentence on an unrelated charge in Mississippi when the indictment was returned, a requisition warrant had to be obtained from the Mississippi governor, which process was initiated within a month of the defendant's indictment and took three months before the warrant was issued, and the defendant was brought to Georgia two months after the warrant issued and was arraigned approximately two months later. Rogers v. State, 286 Ga. 387, 688 S.E.2d 344, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 68 (2010).

13-month delay. — Trial court properly denied a murder defendant's motion to dismiss an indictment on speedy trial grounds. Although the court found that the 13-month delay was caused by the state's negligence, the court also found that the defendant had not timely asserted the defendant's speedy trial right and that the defendant had not shown that the delay impaired the defense. Hassel v. State, 284 Ga. 861, 672 S.E.2d 627, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 28 (2009).

Passage of 16 months after indictment before trial does not represent a denial of speedy trial, absent evidence of prejudice to defendant from delay, and absent any purposeful or oppressive delay on the part of the prosecution, particularly, in the absence of a demand for trial. Sassoon v. State, 138 Ga. App. 172, 225 S.E.2d 732, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2096 (1976).

17-month delay. — Trial court did not err in refusing to dismiss defendant's case for a speedy trial violation as: (1) five to six months of the 17-month delay was due to defendant's motion for a continuance; (2) the state gave reasons for the remaining 11 or 12 months of the delay and reasons for the decision to reindict defendant; (3) there was no proof that the state intentionally delayed prosecution to impair the defense; (4) defendant did not file a speedy trial demand until 14 months after defendant's arrest; and (5) defendant did not present any evidence that defendant's defense was impaired due to the delay, nor did defendant show that defendant had to endure some burden beyond those that necessarily attended imprisonment. Lopez v. State, 267 Ga. App. 178, 598 S.E.2d 898, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 563 (2004).

Seventeen-month delay in the defendant's trial did not violate the defendant's constitutional rights because the defendant failed to assert either the defendant's statutory or constitutional right to a speedy trial and there was no evidence of a lengthy pretrial incarceration. Jernigan v. State, 239 Ga. App. 65, 517 S.E.2d 370, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 711 (1999).

No undue prejudice shown from 20-month delay. — Defendant's sixth amendment speedy trial rights were not violated as the 20-month delay between defendant's arrest and the assertion of defendant's speedy trial right was not presumptively prejudicial because the case was a multi-defendant prosecution for the murder of a police officer 24 years earlier involving vigorous litigation of a broad range of defense motions, which was less than a complex conspiracy charge, but more than an ordinary street crime further, the reasons for the delay were essentially neutral, the timeliness of the assertion of the right to a speedy trial weighed against defendant, and no undue prejudice associated with the delay was shown. Jackson v. State, 279 Ga. 449, 614 S.E.2d 781, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 436 (2005).

23-month delay presumptively prejudicial. — Pursuant to U.S. Const., amend. 6, a delay from the defendant's arrest until the grant of the defendant's speedy trial motion was approximately 23 and a half months, such that it was presumptively prejudicial, which triggered the application of the Barker balancing test. State v. Thaxton, 311 Ga. App. 260, 715 S.E.2d 480, 2011 Ga. App. LEXIS 689 (2011).

Two-year undeliberate delay constitutional where defendant did not assert right and defense unimpaired. — There is no denial of the sixth amendment right to a speedy trial where the length of delay between arrest and trial is almost two years, but the defendant has not shown that the prosecution deliberately delayed the trial for tactical advantage, that the defendant asserted the defendant's statutory right prior to trial, that the defendant asserted the defendant's constitutional right prior to appeal, or that the defendant's defense was impaired by the delay. Getz v. State, 251 Ga. 462, 306 S.E.2d 918, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 858 (1983).

Two year delay not prejudicial. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court denied the second defendant's motion to dismiss on constitutional speedy trial grounds because although the two-year delay was presumptively prejudicial, the majority of the delay was due to the circumstances of the case, the second defendant's two-year delay in asserting the defendant's right to a speedy trial weighed heavily against the defendant, and the defendant offered no specific evidence of any prejudice to the defendant's defense resulting from the delay. Brown v. State, 287 Ga. 892, 700 S.E.2d 407, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 629 (2010).

A 25-month delay from arrest to trial. — was troubling; however, the prejudice to defendant was not of constitutional magnitude where the defendant failed to show that undue anxiety or concern was suffered attendant to defendant's incarceration and offered no evidence as to the specific manner in which defendant's defense was impaired. Mullinax v. State, 273 Ga. 756, 545 S.E.2d 891, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 312 (2001).

Delay of more than two years. — With regard to a defendant being indicted for malice murder and other crimes, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment on speedy trial grounds as, although the delay of two years, two months, and 23 days in bringing the defendant to trial was presumptively prejudicial, the record supported the trial court's factual conclusion that the defendant failed to establish oppressive pretrial incarceration or anxiety and concern beyond that which necessarily attended confinement in a penal institution, and the defendant failed to present any specific evidence that the defendant's ability to defend had been impaired. Ruffin v. State, 284 Ga. 52, 663 S.E.2d 189, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 550 (2008), cert. denied, 555 U.S. 1181, 129 S. Ct. 1330, 173 L. Ed. 2d 603, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 1551 (2009).

26-month delay. — A defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial was not violated despite a 26-month delay between the defendant's arrest and the filing of a motion to dismiss the indictment for aggravated battery and aggravated assault, because the defendant did not assert the speedy trial right for 26 months, was free on bond the whole time, and showed no prejudice from the delay, despite the razing of the crime scene. Williams v. State, 300 Ga. App. 797, 686 S.E.2d 407, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1275 (2009).

A 27-month delay did not violate defendant's right to a speedy trial because of defendant's own delay in asserting the right and defendant's failure to show prejudice to the defense. McKinney v. State, 250 Ga. App. 22, 549 S.E.2d 164, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 561 (2001), cert. denied, No. S01C1453, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 954 (Ga. Nov. 30, 2001).

A 27-month delay between the defendant's arrest and the date the defendant filed a motion to dismiss did not violate the right to a speedy trial where the state's primary reason for delay was to wait for several significant appellate court decisions, the defendant did not assert the defendant's statutory or constitutional right during the period of the delay, the defendant did not demonstrate any isolated or distinct oppressiveness, anxiety, or concern the defendant suffered due to incarceration, and the sole example of impairment of evidence, the memory lapses of police officers, worked to the defendant's advantage. Howard v. State, 215 Ga. App. 343, 450 S.E.2d 824 (1994).

Where the delay is 27 months since arrest and 24 months since indictment, this is too long to amount to a speedy trial. State v. King, 137 Ga. App. 26, 222 S.E.2d 859, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1196 (1975).

28-month delay. — Defendant's late assertion of defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial weighed heavily against the defendant as did the defendant's failure to show prejudice from the 28-month delay, which was not attributable to any improper motive by the state as an investigator died and the prosecutor had 10 weeks' maternity leave; thus, defendant's motion to dismiss was properly denied. Ferguson v. State, 303 Ga. App. 341, 693 S.E.2d 578, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 355 (2010).

A thirty-month delay in the trial of the defendant's case did not violate the defendant's constitutional right where, even though the delay was partly attributable to the state's negligence, defendant did not assert the defendant's rights until trial was imminent, and failed to show prejudice. Thomas v. State, 233 Ga. App. 224, 504 S.E.2d 59, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 932 (1998).

Speedy and Public Trial (Cont'd)

30-month delay. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in rejecting the defendant's speedy-trial claim under the sixth amendment based on the court's careful application of the relevant factors, which included determinations that the defendant was responsible for some portion of the 30-month delay, the defendant did not assert a right to a speedy trial promptly, and the defendant failed to establish any actual prejudice resulting from the delay. Davis v. State, 315 Ga. 252, 882 S.E.2d 210, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 323 (2022).

32-month delay. — With regard to charges of aggravated child molestation, child molestation, and rape, a trial court did not err in denying a defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal since although the 32 month passage of time between the defendant's arrest and the filing of the motion for discharge was presumed prejudicial and more than half of the delay was attributable to the state, the defendant waited 32 months to file the motion and failed to show any prejudice arising from the delay. The defendant failed to explain what physical evidence was affected by the passage of time and merely made a generalized statement that memories fade over time. Wofford v. State, 299 Ga. App. 129, 682 S.E.2d 125, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 518 (2009).

Length of delay was at least two years but less than three years. — There was no violation of the defendant's speedy trial rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6, where there was a 26-month delay between the defendant's arrest and the defendant's motion to dismiss; the delay was mostly attributable to the defendant; the defendant did not assert the defendant's right to a speedy trial until 26 months after the defendant was arrested, and the defendant failed to make a specific showing that the defense was prejudiced by the delay. Williams v.

State, 260 Ga. App. 290, 581 S.E.2d 326, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 354 (2003).

Three year delay. — There was no speedy trial violation under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI(a). Although the delay of over three years was presumptively prejudicial, it was primarily attributable to the defendant; the defendant delayed in asserting the constitutional right to a speedy trial; and the defendant's generalized statements, along with the fact that the record did not show that trial counsel attempted to locate the physician who examined the victim, did not suffice to show prejudice. Robinson v. State, 298 Ga. App. 164, 679 S.E.2d 383, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 636 (2009).

40-month delay was not prejudicial. — In a defendant's motion for acquittal based upon a speedy trial violation under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI(a), although the delay of 40 months raised a presumption of prejudice, no evidence supported defendant's claim of anxiety and concern over the charges nor the defendant's claims that the defendant was unable to produce two witnesses who would have provided information material to the defendant's defense. In the absence of prejudice, the defendant's motion for acquittal was properly denied. Lynch v. State, 300 Ga. App. 723, 686 S.E.2d 268, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1174 (2009).

Forty-one-month delay. — Denial of defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment against defendant was not an abuse of discretion since defendant suffered no impairment to defendant's defense and defendant waited 41 months before asserting defendant's federal and state constitutional rights to a speedy trial. Coney v. State, 259 Ga. App. 525, 578 S.E.2d 193, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 180 (2003).

45-month delay. — While a majority of the delay in bringing defendant to trial was attributable to the state, and defendant did not assert any right to a speedy trial until approximately 45 months after the date of arrest, after balancing all four factors set out in Barker v. Wingo, any delay in bringing defendant to trial did not violate the right to a speedy trial, no actual anxiety or concern on defendant's part was shown, and the testimony that two alleged material defense witnesses would have presented would have either been cumulative or not material. Ingram v. State, 280 Ga. App. 467, 634 S.E.2d 430, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 773 (2006), cert. denied, No. S06C2016, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 915 (Ga. Oct. 30, 2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1009, 128 S. Ct. 531, 169 L. Ed. 2d 371, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 11971 (2007).

45-month delay presumptively prejudicial. — For purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI(a), a delay of three years and nine months from the date of the defendant's arrest and the date of the defendant's scheduled trial was presumptively prejudicial. State v. Reid, 298 Ga. App. 235, 679 S.E.2d 802, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 646 (2009).

Three year and nine month delay. — Defendant's indictment for armed robbery was properly dismissed on speedy trial grounds after a delay of three years and nine months because the defendant's ability to prepare defendant's defense was impaired by lost hospital records, missing 9-1-1 calls, and other missing evidence. State v. Ivory, 304 Ga. App. 859, 698 S.E.2d 340, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 623 (2010).

Four year delay. — State's four-year delay in bringing a cocaine trafficking case against the defendant violated a defendant's constitutional speedy trial right. The state's investigation was complete at the time of the indictment, and the trial court found that the state delayed the trial to gain a tactical advantage and to harass the defendant. State v. Shirley, 311 Ga. App. 141, 714 S.E.2d 636, 2011 Ga. App. LEXIS 572 (2011).

54-month delay. — Trial court erred by denying a defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment on speedy trial grounds, which charged the defendant with the crimes of aggravated assault, aggravated battery, and cruelty to children, as the 54-month delay at issue was substantial and longer than delays that the Georgia Supreme Court has described as egregious and deplorable; the evidence showed that the delay resulted from a deliberate, strategic decision by the state since the state chose to dead-docket the case; and the defendant asserted the right to a speedy trial in due course. The trial court erred in several respects in the court's legal analysis of the defendant's constitutional speedy trial claim, namely: by failing to weigh the length of the delay as part of the court's balancing analysis and by failing to adequately address the reasons for that delay; by abusing the court's discretion in finding that the defendant's three-to-four month delay in asserting the right to a speedy trial should be weighed against the defendant; and by finding that the defendant was required to present additional evidence of actual prejudice caused by the state's conduct. Hayes v. State, 298 Ga. App. 338, 680 S.E.2d 182, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 703 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1736, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 540 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2009).

Five year delay. — Court of appeals erred in determining, apparently from the court's own review of the record, that the speedy trial factor of whether, in due course, the defendant asserted his or her right to a speedy trial would be weighed against the defendant based on the more than five year delay from the defendant's arrest to the defendant's assertion of the right; a delay of over five years typically would warrant the speedy trial factor of whether, in due course, the defendant asserted his or her right to a speedy trial being weighed heavily against the defendant, and if the factor is to be weighed differently based on the particular circumstances of the case, that exercise of discretion is committed to the trial court, not the appellate courts. State v. Pickett, 288 Ga. 674, 706 S.E.2d 561, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 142 (2011).

Five year delay not prejudicial. — Trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that a defendant failed to show a constitutional violation of the defendant's right to a speedy trial and by denying the defendant's motion for discharge and acquittal with regard to the defendant's convictions for sexual assault as the defendant never filed a speedy trial demand; there was no evidence nor finding by the trial court that the state intentionally delayed the trial to impair the defendant's defense; the defendant's failure to assert either a statutory or constitutional right to a speedy trial was entitled to strong evidentiary weight against the defendant; and the fact that the defendant never filed a speedy trial demand suggested that the defendant was not suffering anxiety or stress from the delay. The reviewing court noted that the five year delay in bringing the defendant to trial was solely based on requests from defense counsel due to illness, death in the family, or death of an expert witness. Disharoon v. State, 288 Ga. App. 1, 652 S.E.2d 902, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 1123 (2007).

A nearly 5 ½ year delay between indictment and trial was presumptively prejudicial and warranted inquiry into the other factors that go into determining whether a criminal defendant has been deprived of the defendant's right to a speedy trial. Crapse v. State, 180 Ga. App. 321, 349 S.E.2d 190, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2728 (1986).

Prosecutorial neglect in five and a half year delay. — Where reason for five and one-half year delay in trial is simple prosecutorial neglect, but the only prejudice shown by the defendant is that one of two alibi witnesses, whose testimony would be merely cumulative, has died, and the defendant, although the defendant has filed a motion to dismiss the indictment, never asked for a trial, the defendant is not denied the constitutional right to a speedy trial. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Presumptive prejudice that arose from a delay of over five years in a defendant's trial was insufficient for the defendant to prevail on a sixth amendment speedy trial claim, and the denial of the defendant's motion to dismiss was proper because there was no demonstrable prejudice to the defense and the defendant was dilatory in asserting the right to a speedy trial. Harris v. State, 284 Ga. 455, 667 S.E.2d 361, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 750 (2008).

Six-year delay. — While the nearly six year delay in bringing the defendant to trial was presumptively prejudicial, the defendant's speedy trial rights were not violated because the defendant waited over four years to assert the right and failed to show prejudice due to the delay. Gray v. State, 347 Ga. App. 235, 817 S.E.2d 723, 2018 Ga. App. LEXIS 479 (2018), cert. denied, No. S19C0214, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 271 (Ga. Apr. 15, 2019).

Seven-year delay. — Defendant's speedy trial right was violated by the seven-year delay between arrest and the time the case was called for a final hearing, even though defendant was released on bond at the preliminary hearing and did not assert a speedy trial right until after the case was called for a final plea hearing. State v. Sutton, 273 Ga. App. 84, 614 S.E.2d 206, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 416 (2005).

Speedy trial right was not violated by seven-year delay between defendant's indictment and trial, after the court weighed a number of factors, including the fact that the defendant had left for India at the time of the indictment and the government did not know of the defendant's location but made reasonable efforts to find the defendant. United States v. Bagga, 782 F.2d 1541, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22516 (11th Cir. 1986).

Eight year delay. — Trial court did not err in determining that the defendant's right to a speedy trial was violated as the eight-year passage of time before the case was restored to the trial calendar raised a presumption of prejudice, most of the delay was attributable to the state, the defendant's delay in asserting the right was mitigated by the fact that the defendant had no counsel and a limited education, and the delay impaired the ability to put on a defense. State v. Alexander, 295 Ga. 154, 758 S.E.2d 289, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 351 (2014).

Nine-year delay. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court denied the defendant's claim that the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial was violated because neither the defendant nor the defendant's initial attorney made themselves aware of the actual status of the case between 1998 and 2005, and the defendant failed to keep the defendant's address up to date with the trial court such that the court was unable to send the notice for the arraignment to the defendant's home address; the defendant never made a speedy trial demand during the nine years that passed between the arrest and trial, the defendant was not subjected to oppressive pre-trial incarceration and did not suffer any unusual anxiety or concern because the defendant was not actually incarcerated for most of the nine years in question, and the defendant also was not prejudiced by lost evidence. Rafi v. State, 289 Ga. 716, 715 S.E.2d 113, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 674 (2011).

Ten year delay between trial and appeal. — Defendant's due process rights were not violated by the ten-year delay between trial and appeal because the errors the defendant allegedly would have raised on appeal were without merit. Whitaker v. State, 291 Ga. 139, 728 S.E.2d 209, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 493 (2012).

Fourteen-year delay between arrest and trial for murder did not violate the defendant's right to a speedy trial where the defendant's liberty had not been restrained nor was the defendant's life disrupted, and where case was decided on superseding due process grounds. Wooten v. State, 262 Ga. 876, 426 S.E.2d 852, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 305, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 853, 114 S. Ct. 156, 126 L. Ed. 2d 117, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 5505 (1993).

Failure to consider entire time of delay. — Trial court abused the court's discretion in denying the defendant's plea in bar because the trial court considered only 19 of the 55 months of delay between the defendant's arrest and the denial of the defendant's plea in bar, with the result that the court could not properly exercise the court's discretion as to whether the defendant's constitutional right to a speedy trial was violated. Singleton v. State, 317 Ga. App. 637, 732 S.E.2d 312, 2012 Ga. App. LEXIS 784 (2012).

Defendant cannot compel court to try the defendant without a jury. — A defendant who is charged with a felony and who waives the right for a jury trial and demands trial by the court without a jury, cannot compel the court to so try the defendant. It is not error for the court to overrule such demand. Palmer v. State, 195 Ga. 661, 25 S.E.2d 295, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 546 (1943).

Before a defendant could effectively waive the right to a jury trial and demand a bench trial, the state's consent had to be obtained, in addition to the trial court's agreement to conduct a bench trial pursuant to the defendant's demand. Zigan v. State, 281 Ga. 415, 638 S.E.2d 322, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 1032 (2006).

Purposes which govern size of jury. — U.S. Const., amend. 6 mandates a jury only of sufficient size to promote group deliberation, to insulate members from outside intimidation, and to provide a representative cross section of the community. Ballew v. Georgia, 435 U.S. 223, 98 S. Ct. 1029, 55 L. Ed. 2d 234, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 68 (1978).

Jury of fewer than six persons deprives a defendant of the right to trial by jury. Ballew v. State, 145 Ga. App. 829, 245 S.E.2d 169, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 2153, cert. denied, 436 U.S. 962, 98 S. Ct. 3083, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1129, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2251 (1978).

Requiring only nine votes of a 12-member jury to convict in a felony trial does not violate due process guarantee by diluting the reasonable doubt standard. Ballew v. Georgia, 435 U.S. 223, 98 S. Ct. 1029, 55 L. Ed. 2d 234, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 68 (1978).

Nothing in the federal Constitution requires states to provide a jury of 12 in the trial of criminal cases, though it does require federal courts to have that number. Trial by jury in a federal court means a trial by jury as understood and applied at common law, and includes all the essential elements as they were recognized in this country and England when the Constitution was adopted. Among those elements was a jury composed of 12 persons, neither more nor less. Coates v. Lawrence, 46 F. Supp. 414, 1942 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2548 (D. Ga.), aff'd, 131 F.2d 110, 1942 U.S. App. LEXIS 2727 (5th Cir. 1942).

States have wide leeway in dividing responsibility between judge and jury in criminal cases. — If a state concludes that jury sentencing is preferable, nothing in the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 intrudes upon that choice. Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 66 (1973).

Sentencing by court after conviction by jury. — If the jury finds the appellant was guilty of the offense charged, the fact that the trial court fixed the sentence does not deprive the appellant of the right to trial by jury. Bowman v. State, 231 Ga. 220, 200 S.E.2d 880, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 650 (1973).

Jury is permitted to increase sentence on retrial, although this may force the defendant either to waive a jury trial in the second trial or to plead guilty so that the trial judge could not increase the sentence without violating the right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to a jury trial. Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 455 F.2d 640, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 11400 (5th Cir. 1972), aff'd, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 66 (1973).

Trial by jury in a criminal case may be waived. Brown v. Zerbst, 99 F.2d 745, 1938 U.S. App. LEXIS 2977 (5th Cir. 1938), cert. denied, 305 U.S. 661, 59 S. Ct. 365, 83 L. Ed. 429, 1939 U.S. LEXIS 905 (1939).

Constitutional right to a jury trial may be waived by proceeding to trial without demanding a jury. Clarke v. Cobb, 195 Ga. 633, 24 S.E.2d 782, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 531 (1943).

Defendant in a misdemeanor case can waive trial by jury. — There is no reason why a prisoner in a case of this kind should not have the right to be tried by a conscientious and intelligent judge, if he prefers it, as well as the right to be tried by a jury. Clarke v. Cobb, 195 Ga. 633, 24 S.E.2d 782, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 531 (1943).

Trial of misdemeanor traffic offenses in municipal court. — The power of municipal courts to try and dispose of misdemeanor traffic offenses is conditioned upon the defendant's waiver of the right to a jury trial. Kolker v. State, 260 Ga. 240, 391 S.E.2d 391, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 177 (1990).

Defendant's waiver need not be in a particular, ritualistic form. Little v. Smith, 347 F. Supp. 427, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11928 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Personal waiver of jury trial. — It is not necessary for the preservation of due process that a defendant personally waive the right to a jury trial. Little v. Stynchcombe, 227 Ga. 311, 180 S.E.2d 541, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 683 (1971).

Although a jury trial may constitutionally be waived, the defendant must personally and intelligently participate in the waiver. Griggs v. State, 159 Ga. App. 219, 283 S.E.2d 77, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2553 (1981) (but see Little v. Stynchcombe, 227 Ga. 311, 180 S.E.2d 541 (1971)).

Defendant's waiver of the right to trial by jury was knowingly made by the defendant and with the defendant's personal and intelligent participation, where it could be inferred from the joint participation in the waiver by both the defendant and the defendant's counsel that this was a matter that they had discussed. White v. State, 197 Ga. App. 162, 398 S.E.2d 35, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1222 (1990).

Defendant waived the right to a jury trial, where the defendant consulted with the defendant's attorney and made an intelligent and knowing decision to waive the right and made no objection to the proceeding until after the defendant received an unfavorable verdict. McCollum v. State, 201 Ga. App. 493, 411 S.E.2d 328, cert. denied, 1991 LEXIS 1015 (1991), 507 U.S. 916, 113 S. Ct. 1271, 122 L. Ed. 2d 666 (1993), overruled on other grounds, 282 Ga. App. 482, 654 S.E.2d 628 (2007).

A criminal defendant must personally and intelligently participate in the waiver of the constitutional right to a trial by jury. Payne v. State, 217 Ga. App. 386, 460 S.E.2d 297, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 423 (1995).

A trial court did not err by finding that defendant made a personal, knowing, and intelligent waiver of the right to a jury trial with regard to defendant's convictions for aggravated child molestation and two counts of child molestation after a bench trial because, before trial began, defense counsel stated that defendant wished to waive the jury trial right and proceed with a bench trial, and the trial court questioned defendant, who confirmed that defendant wanted a bench trial and that defendant understood the choice. Further, at the hearing on defendant's motion for a new trial, defendant testified that defendant discussed the matter at length with defense counsel before trial and stated that defendant wanted the judge, not a jury, to decide defendant's fate. Brumbelow v. State, 289 Ga. App. 520, 657 S.E.2d 603, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 141 (2008).

Absence of written assent signed by the defendant and of categorical oral assent will not invalidate waiver. Little v. Smith, 347 F. Supp. 427, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11928 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Waiver must be deliberately and understandingly made with the consent of the prosecution and the court. Irvin v. Zerbst, 97 F.2d 257, 1938 U.S. App. LEXIS 3754 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 303 U.S. 637, 58 S. Ct. 527, 82 L. Ed. 1098, 1938 U.S. LEXIS 246 (1938), cert. denied, 305 U.S. 597, 59 S. Ct. 97, 83 L. Ed. 379, 1938 U.S. LEXIS 706 (1938).

Court must decide whether the defendant intelligently agreed to a trial without jury in determining validity of waiver. Little v. Smith, 347 F. Supp. 427, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11928 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

When the purported waiver of the right is questioned, the state bears the burden of showing the waiver was made both intelligently and knowingly, either (1) by showing on the record that the defendant was cognizant of the right being waived; or (2) by filling a silent or incomplete record through the use of extrinsic evidence which affirmatively shows that the waiver was knowingly and voluntarily made. Pahnke v. State, 203 Ga. App. 88, 416 S.E.2d 324, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 394 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0722, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 337 (Ga. Apr. 24, 1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 895, 113 S. Ct. 273, 121 L. Ed. 2d 201, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 6187 (1992); 506 U.S. 895, 113 S. Ct. 273, 121 L. Ed. 2d 201 (1992).

Defendant's waiver was knowing and intelligent. — Because the record affirmatively showed that the defendant was aware of the right to a jury trial because the defendant personally filed a written pro se demand for trial by jury reciting that right and the trial judge reminded the defendant that the defendant was entitled to a trial by jury and asked the defendant if the defendant wanted a jury or nonjury trial and the defendant elected to have a nonjury trial, the defendant personally made a knowing and intelligent waiver of the right to a jury trial. Pahnke v. State, 203 Ga. App. 88, 416 S.E.2d 324, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 394 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0722, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 337 (Ga. Apr. 24, 1992), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 895, 113 S. Ct. 273, 121 L. Ed. 2d 201, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 6187 (1992); 506 U.S. 895, 113 S. Ct. 273, 121 L. Ed. 2d 201 (1992).

Evidence supported a trial court's finding that a defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived the defendant's right to a jury trial as the defense counsel testified that: (1) the defense counsel explained to the defendant on several occasions the defendant's right to a jury trial and the ramifications of that right; (2) the counsel explained the difference between a jury trial and a bench trial and recommended that the defendant waive that right in favor of a bench trial and take the defendant's chances with an appeal of the denial of a motion to suppress; and (3) the defendant indicated to the counsel that the defendant understood the defendant's rights and the strategy and affirmatively agreed to go forward with a bench trial. Fleming v. State, 282 Ga. App. 373, 638 S.E.2d 769, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1282 (2006).

Defendant did not knowingly, intelligently, and voluntarily waive jury trial. — Upon a withdrawal of opposition by the state, because an inmate was not advised of the constitutional right to a jury trial, and the court could find no extrinsic evidence in the record to conclude that the inmate knowingly, intelligently, and voluntarily waived the right to a jury trial on the state drug charges at issue, an order denying habeas relief was reversed, and the case was remanded. Sutton v. Sanders, 283 Ga. 28, 656 S.E.2d 796, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 42 (2008), overruled in part, Green v. State, 318 Ga. 610, 898 S.E.2d 500, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 49 (2024).

There is no requirement of an "in court" waiver of right of jury trial. Wooten v. State, 162 Ga. App. 719, 293 S.E.2d 11, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3161 (1982).

Defendant's right to risk greater sentence in jury trial. — Where the government has not voluntarily reduced the charges, it is unfair to the defendant, who prefers to risk a potentially greater sentence in order to be tried by a jury of peers, to deny the defendant the right to a jury trial. United States v. O'Connor, 660 F. Supp. 955, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4432 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

Effect of possibility of consecutive sentences. — Where defendant has been charged with "driving under the influence" and "reckless driving," each of which is a "petty" offense as that term is defined in 18 U.S.C. § 1(3), but, because a magistrate is authorized to impose consecutive sentences pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3584(a), the defendant is exposed to a potential penalty of one year's imprisonment, a $1,000.00 fine, and two $25.00 assessments, as the defendant faces a potential sentence of over six months' imprisonment and over a $500.00 fine under these circumstances, the defendant has a constitutional right to a jury trial. United States v. O'Connor, 660 F. Supp. 955, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4432 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

No right to jury trial in equal employment opportunity cases. — There is no right to a jury trial in cases arising under the equal employment opportunity provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Mitchell v. Alex Foods, Inc., 572 F. Supp. 825, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12656 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

No right to jury trial on issues of back pay and lost benefits. — There is no right to a jury trial on the issue of back pay under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 or for the recovery of “lost pension, social security, experience and training opportunities and other lost benefits”; such relief is equitable in nature. Mitchell v. Alex Foods, Inc., 572 F. Supp. 825, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12656 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Probate court. — Probate court did not err by failing to conduct a jury trial on the construction of a decedent’s will as the decedent’s will was unambiguous and no issues of fact remained; further, the corporation challenging the construction was not authorized under Georgia law to serve as a corporate trustee. Chattowah Open Land Trust, Inc. v. Jones, 281 Ga. 97, 636 S.E.2d 523, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 839 (2006).

Test for fair trial. — To support a finding that the petitioner did not receive a fair trial, the petitioner must show: (1) that setting of trial was inherently prejudicial; or (2) that jury selection process showed actual prejudice to degree that rendered fair trial impossible. Kesler v. State, 249 Ga. 462, 291 S.E.2d 497, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1147 (1982).

Impanelling of fair and impartial jurors, when demonstrated on voir dire, makes it particularly difficult to show that setting of trial was inherently prejudicial. Kesler v. State, 249 Ga. 462, 291 S.E.2d 497, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1147 (1982).

Trial court did not deprive the defendant of a fair and impartial jury pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI and U.S. Const., amend. 6 in refusing to transfer venue of the murder case due to pretrial publicity; many of the prospective jurors were unaware of the publicity surrounding the crimes due to the 14-year gap between the crimes and trial, and no remaining venire persons expressed a fixed opinion regarding the defendant’s guilt based upon exposure to media coverage. Denny v. State, 281 Ga. 114, 636 S.E.2d 500, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 842 (2006).

Shock sleeve use did not impact fair trial. — Defendant’s sixth amendment right to a fair trial was not violated by the trial court’s order that the defendant appear at trial wearing an electronic shock device as a security measure because there was no evidence that the shock sleeve was apparent to the jury; the defendant failed to show that the defendant suffered any harm arising from adverse jury partiality created by the shock sleeve or that the trial court abused the court’s discretion in finding a necessity for the sleeve to be worn; and at no time during the course of the trial did the defendant claim that the defendant feared that the defendant would be shocked by accident and that the defendant’s fear interfered with the defendant’s ability to focus on the trial. Weldon v. State, 297 Ga. 537, 775 S.E.2d 522, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 537 (2015).

Remand to trial court. — Where record indicated that valid waiver of the right to jury trial may have occurred but did not reflect whether defendant personally, knowingly, voluntarily, and intelligently participated in such waiver, case was remanded to trial court for hearing on that issue. Wooten v. State, 162 Ga. App. 719, 293 S.E.2d 11, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3161 (1982).

Right not violated in death penalty case. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30, enumerating the statutory aggravating factors in a death penalty case, was not unconstitutional under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI as applied in defendant’s case; the jury found beyond a reasonable doubt the existence of the statutory aggravating circumstances, there was no requirement that the jury find non-statutory aggravating factors beyond a reasonable doubt, and the non-statutory aggravating evidence presented by the state was reliable and admissible. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 756, 620 S.E.2d 778, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 523 (2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 3608 (2006).

No violation found. — On appeal, the defendant failed to show an entitlement to a new trial based on the actions of a dismissed juror, as the juror did not participate in the verdicts, and the ever-watchful trial judge, by conducting individual voir dire of the jurors who did return the guilty verdicts, properly determined that the dismissed juror had no effect on the jury's deliberations. Inman v. State, 281 Ga. 67, 635 S.E.2d 125, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 569 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 828, 128 S. Ct. 42, 169 L. Ed. 2d 40, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 9143 (2007).

Unanimous verdict required. — Under U.S. Const., amend. 6 a criminal defendant has a right to a unanimous jury verdict, but there can be a waiver by the defendant of this right. Glass v. State, 250 Ga. 736, 300 S.E.2d 812, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1028 (1983).

Improper excusal of lone juror holding out for acquittal. — The trial judge's failure to make a reliable determination of whether, in the final moments of jury deliberations, the lone juror to reserve a reasonable doubt as to the defendant's guilt, who was reported by the jury foreman to be "extremely nervous," was actually incapacitated, the judge's failure to ensure that the juror understood the juror's right to adhere to the juror's view that the defendant should be acquitted, and the juror's failure, upon excusing that juror and replacing the juror with an alternate juror, to instruct the reconstituted jury to begin anew deprived the defendant of the constitutional right to a trial by a fair and impartial jury and deprived the defendant of the due process right to a fair trial. Peek v. Kemp, 746 F.2d 672, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28171 (11th Cir. 1985).

Improper judicial determination in prosecution for failure to file tax return. — In a prosecution for willful failure to file income tax returns, trial court erred in directing the jury that, as a matter of law, the documents filed by the defendant were not returns. United States v. Goetz, 746 F.2d 705, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16787 (11th Cir. 1984).

Juror misconduct by driving to crime scene. — Habeas court did not err by concluding that the defendant showed that the juror's improper drive test during deliberations, conducted to see whether the defendant could have been physically present at the time and place the victim was shot, caused the defendant actual prejudice because the evidence at trial called into question whether the defendant could have been physically present when the victim was shot, the day after the drive test the jury voted to convict the defendant of felony murder and other crimes, and the drive test "proved" to at least the juror who conducted the test that the defendant could have been physically present when the victim was shot. Ballinger v. Watkins, 315 Ga. 369, 882 S.E.2d 312, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 318 (2022).

Juror may impeach verdict based on juror misconduct. — One recognized exception to the rule that a juror may not impeach the verdict is juror misconduct where the jurors, in effect, become unsworn witnesses against the defendant in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6. Moore v. State, 179 Ga. App. 125, 345 S.E.2d 631, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2594 (1986).

Statutory aggravating circumstances. — Georgia death penalty statutes were not unconstitutional under the sixth amendment, as the jury had to find beyond a reasonable doubt the statutory aggravating circumstances necessary to make a defendant eligible for the death penalty, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30; there was no requirement that non-statutory aggravating evidence be proven beyond a reasonable doubt. Nance v. State, 280 Ga. 125, 623 S.E.2d 470, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 855 (2005), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 868, 127 S. Ct. 168, 166 L. Ed. 2d 119, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 6966 (2006).

2. Selection of Jurors*a. In General

Constitution requires that grand and petit juries be selected at random from a fair cross section of the community in the district or division wherein the court convenes. United States v. Rosenthal, 482 F. Supp. 867, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8450 (M.D. Ga. 1979).

Grand jury must be drawn from fair cross section. — The right to trial by an impartial jury includes the right to be indicted by a grand jury composed of members drawn from a source representing a fair cross section of the community. United States v. Cross, 516 F. Supp. 700, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14241 (M.D. Ga. 1981), rev'd, 708 F.2d 631, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 26231 (11th Cir. 1983).

There is no requirement that the jury list include the name of every citizen of the county eligible for jury service. This list must include a fair cross-section of the eligible members of the community, not every eligible member of the community. Lipham v. State, 257 Ga. 808, 364 S.E.2d 840, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 58, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 873, 109 S. Ct. 191, 102 L. Ed. 2d 160, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3422 (1988).

U.S. Const., amend. 6 guarantees a defendant's right to a jury selected from a representative cross-section of the community. This requirement does not, however, extend to petit juries. United States v. Rodriguez-Cardenas, 866 F.2d 390, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 1798 (11th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 1069, 110 S. Ct. 1110, 107 L. Ed. 2d 1017, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1021 (1990).

Fair cross-section representation requirement not applicable to grand jury foreperson. — Although the composition of a grand jury or petit jury venire may be challenged under the sixth amendment's guarantee of a right to be tried by a group drawn from a source representing a fair cross-section of the community, this requirement does not extend to the office of grand jury foreperson because one person alone cannot represent the divergent views, experience, and ideas of the distinct groups which form a community. United States v. Sneed, 729 F.2d 1333, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 23511 (11th Cir. 1984).

Right to have a jury venire represent a fair cross section of the community is protected by U.S. Const., amend. 6's guarantee of trial by an impartial jury. Gibson v. Zant, 705 F.2d 1543, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 27257 (11th Cir. 1983); Davis v. Zant, 721 F.2d 1478, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 14182 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1143, 105 S. Ct. 2689, 86 L. Ed. 2d 706, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 2147 (1985).

No constitutional guarantee of representative cross-section in particular case. — The fact that the jury panel in a particular case actually contained a lower percentage of black persons is not especially significant. There is no constitutional guarantee that the grand or petit juries impanelled in a particular case will constitute a representative cross-section of the entire community. Truitt v. State, 212 Ga. App. 286, 441 S.E.2d 800, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 265 (1994).

Unified Appeal Procedure ensuring fair cross section. — Unified Appeal Procedure provides a statewide procedure for creating and evaluating jury source lists, and that method was designed to promote adequate representation of cognizable groups through the use of a comprehensive and objective standard. Although in some instances, that procedure may create temporary, self-rectifying anomalies as Decennial Census reports grow old, the ill done by those temporary anomalies is outweighed by the other benefits of the procedure. Thus, a continued adherence to the requirements of the Unified Appeal Procedure regarding the balancing of cognizable groups to match the most-recent Decennial Census is justified by a sufficiently-significant state interest. Finally, a fair cross-section is also guaranteed by O.C.G.A. § 15-12-40 under standards "comparable if not identical" to sixth amendment standards. Williams v. State, 287 Ga. 735, 699 S.E.2d 25, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 482 (2010), superseded by statute as stated in Ellington v. State, 292 Ga. 109, 735 S.E.2d 736, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 965 (2012).

Motion to dismiss a murder indictment on the ground that the grand jury was drawn from a grand jury pool that systematically underrepresented blacks and overrepresented whites, in violation of the sixth and fourteenth amendments, based on the selection process known as "forced balancing" the grand jury pool to the most recent decennial census for the county, was properly denied under the law in effect as of November 2010, before the Jury Composition Reform Act of 2011, Ga. L. 2011, p. 59, § 1-1/HB 415, took effect. Franklin v. State, 303 Ga. 165, 810 S.E.2d 118, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 135 (2018).

Failure to show actual underrepresentation of a claimed cognizable group. — Supreme Court of Georgia found no need to address the trial court's finding regarding whether Hispanic persons were a cognizable group in Cobb County in order to decide the defendant's jury composition claim, because: (1) the defendant failed to show any actual under-representation of Hispanic persons; (2) a slight over-representation of Hispanic persons who were citizens, in comparison to the total county population, was shown by the evidence; and (3) the defendant's own expert belied the defendant's claim of under-representation. Rice v. State, 281 Ga. 149, 635 S.E.2d 707, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 600 (2006).

Defendant's argument that Hispanic persons were misrepresented in the composition of the grand and traverse jury pools in violation of the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments and O.C.G.A. § 15-12-40 was rejected because the defendant failed to show any actual misrepresentation of this group: defendant's own expert witness testified that when using 2000 Census data, absolute disparity figures for Hispanics were under the five percent threshold, although when adjusted to account for the citizenship rate of Hispanic persons, the absolute disparity figure showed over-representation by 6.12 percent for the grand jury list. Thus, the absolute disparity figures were well within constitutional requirements of 10 percent. Foster v. State, 288 Ga. 98, 701 S.E.2d 189, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 814 (2010).

Defendant failed to show that the master list used to summon jurors violated the fair cross-section requirement in that African-Americans were under-represented because defendant failed to show any under-representation, as defendant's expert testified that the expert could not provide the data needed regarding racial disparity in order to make a constitutional claim. Moody v. State, 316 Ga. 490, 888 S.E.2d 109, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2023), cert. denied, 144 S. Ct. 697, 217 L. Ed. 2d 391, 2024 U.S. LEXIS 490 (2024).

Due process limits apply even where jury not constitutionally required. — If a state chooses, quite apart from constitutional compulsion, to use a grand or petit jury, due process imposes limitations on the composition of that jury. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Whether class is identifiable and distinct is threshold question. — A threshold question that must be answered by the defendant is whether the particular class constitutes an identifiable and distinct class for purposes of a jury challenge based on the U.S. Const., amend. 14. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

State precluded from deliberate and systematic exclusion. — Constitution requires that the state not deliberately and systematically exclude identifiable and distinct groups from its jury lists. Campbell v. State, 240 Ga. 352, 240 S.E.2d 828, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1498 (1977), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 882, 99 S. Ct. 219, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978); 439 U.S. 882, 99 S. Ct. 218, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978).

Violation requires systematic exclusion or discrimination opportunity. — The defendant's allegations that the venire from which the grand and petit juries were drawn was unconstitutionally composed because both women and African-Americans were underrepresented did not establish a prima facie violation of either the sixth amendment or the fourteenth amendment, because there was no showing that the underrepresentation was due to systematic exclusion of the groups in the jury-selection process or that the venire was selected under a practice providing an opportunity for discrimination. Cunningham v. Zant, 928 F.2d 1006, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 4864 (11th Cir. 1991).

Selection procedures, not actual composition, determine constitutionality. — In determining whether there has been a denial of the defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to have jury venires selected from fairly representative cross sections of the community, and in determining whether the defendant's rights under the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 have been violated because members of the defendant's race have been deliberately excluded from the jury lists, the inquiry concerns the procedures for compiling the jury lists and not the actual composition of the grand or traverse jury in a particular case. Patterson v. Balkcom, 245 Ga. 563, 266 S.E.2d 179, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 855 (1980).

It is the pool of jurors from which the jury sent to be voir dired is drawn that must be representative of the community, not the individual panel sent to a courtroom for voir dire purposes. Prine v. State, 237 Ga. App. 679, 515 S.E.2d 425, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 443 (1999).

State's challenge of defense counsel's use of peremptory challenges was proper since the trial court was authorized to disbelieve the facially race-neutral reasons for striking certain jurors, or to conclude that the stated grounds, some being whimsical or fanciful, were not neutrally applied. McKibbons v. State, 216 Ga. App. 389, 455 S.E.2d 293, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 173 (1995), cert. denied, No. S95C0997, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 739 (Ga. May 25, 1995).

Mere geographical imbalance, absent evidence that an identifiable and cognizable segment of the community has been systematically excluded or underrepresented by reason of such imbalance, does not violate the statutory and constitutional requirements that the jury panel represent a fair cross section of the community. United States v. Rosenthal, 482 F. Supp. 867, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8450 (M.D. Ga. 1979).

Defendant entitled to panel of qualified jurors, not panel of preferred jurors. Smith v. State, 245 Ga. 205, 264 S.E.2d 15, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 743 (1980).

Defendant not constitutionally entitled to venire or jury roll of any particular composition. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012); Campbell v. State, 240 Ga. 352, 240 S.E.2d 828, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1498 (1977), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 882, 99 S. Ct. 219, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978); Mann v. Cox, 487 F. Supp. 147, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9894 (S.D. Ga. 1979).

Deliberate and systematic exclusion not permitted. — Equal protection and due process clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 14 and U.S. Const., amend. 6 require that the state not deliberately and systematically exclude identifiable and distinct groups from their jury lists. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

Representative cross section in a particular case not guaranteed. — There is no constitutional guarantee that grand or petit juries, impaneled in a particular case, will constitute a representative cross section of the entire community. Campbell v. State, 240 Ga. 352, 240 S.E.2d 828, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1498 (1977), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 882, 99 S. Ct. 219, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978); Smith v. State, 151 Ga. App. 697, 261 S.E.2d 439, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2754 (1979).

Gross and unexplained disparity may alone be sufficient to demonstrate discrimination. Talley v. State, 120 Ga. App. 365, 170 S.E.2d 444, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 781 (1969).

Restricting jury service to only special groups or excluding identifiable segments playing major roles in the community cannot be squared with the constitutional concept of jury trial. Julian v. State, 134 Ga. App. 592, 215 S.E.2d 496, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 2099 (1975).

State may exclude certain occupational categories from jury service on the bona fide ground that it is for the good of the community that their regular work should not be interrupted. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Use of voter registration lists for jury selection. — Voter registration lists may be used as the sole source of names for jury duty unless it results in the systematic exclusion of a cognizable group or class of qualified citizens. However, those who do not choose to register, such as Jehovah's Witnesses, cannot be considered a cognizable group. United States v. Dangler, 422 F.2d 344, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 5706 (5th Cir. 1970).

Defendant may complain of the exclusion from the jury of a distinct class to which the defendant does not belong. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

Exclusion of discernible class from jury service injures not only those defendants who belong to excluded class, but other defendants as well, in that it destroys the possibility that the jury will reflect a representative cross section of the community. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Right to challenge improperly composed jury. — Criminal defendants in state courts have the right to challenge, under U.S. Const., amend. 6, petit juries not selected from a fair cross section of the community. Wilson v. State, 250 Ga. 630, 300 S.E.2d 640, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1019, cert. denied, 464 U.S. 865, 104 S. Ct. 199, 78 L. Ed. 2d 174, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 5341 (1983).

Test for an attack on a traverse jury is two-fold: first, the defendant must prove that the group is a cognizable group; and, second, the defendant must show that the group has been consistently under-represented. Potts v. State, 259 Ga. 812, 388 S.E.2d 678, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 54 (1990).

Reindictment not required for certain grand juries declared unconstitutional. — States do not have to reconstitute grand juries and reindict prisoners who have been indicted by a grand jury drawn prior to Taylor v. Louisiana, 419 U.S. 522, 95 S. Ct. 692, 42 L. Ed. 2d 690 (1975), which declared that Georgia's "opt-out" law for women rendered its juries unconstitutional. Young v. Zant, 727 F.2d 1489, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 24727 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1009, 105 S. Ct. 1371, 84 L. Ed. 2d 390, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 1222 (1985).

Jurors who appeared in panel for previous trial of defendant. — The fact that a panel of jurors may have included the names of certain jurors who had appeared in a panel presented in a previous trial of the defendant and who had been peremptorily challenged by the defendant does not constitute a good ground of challenge to the array. Cady v. State, 198 Ga. 99, 31 S.E.2d 38, 1944 Ga. LEXIS 367 (1944).

If a juror is impaneled to try a defendant for a criminal offense and is peremptorily challenged by the defendant, the juror is not so disqualified that the juror can not again be impanelled at a subsequent trial for the same offense under the same indictment, on the grounds that the defendant would thereby be deprived of the defendant's full 20 strikes, or because it would deny the defendant's constitutional right of a fair and impartial trial and equal protection of the laws. Cady v. State, 198 Ga. 99, 31 S.E.2d 38, 1944 Ga. LEXIS 367 (1944).

Reinstatement of improperly challenged jurors. — When a Batson challenge results in a finding that jury selection was not racially neutral and when the jurors remain unaware of the party who struck them, reinstating improperly challenged jurors does not abridge the defendant's right to a fair and impartial jury. Brown v. State, 218 Ga. App. 469, 462 S.E.2d 420, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 759 (1995).

Right to conduct private voir dire on sensitive issues. — Defendant's right to a public trial was not violated by the trial court's conduct of certain portions of voir dire in a private jury room rather than in open court because the defendant's counsel agreed that jurors should have a private opportunity to answer questions of a sensitive nature, including jurors' attitudes toward homosexuality and jurors' prior arrests, and the right to a public trial gave way to the right for a fair trial. State v. Abernathy, 289 Ga. 603, 715 S.E.2d 48, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 550 (2011).

Juvenile defendant not entitled to jury determination of life without possibility of parole. — Georgia defendant convicted of murder committed when the defendant was a juvenile did not have a federal constitutional right under the sixth amendment to have a jury make the determination required by the eighth amendment of whether the defendant was irreparably corrupt or permanently incorrigible before the defendant was sentenced to serve life without the possibility of parole. Raines v. State, 309 Ga. 258, 845 S.E.2d 613, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 473 (2020), cert. denied, 141 S. Ct. 2676, 210 L. Ed. 2d 836, 2021 U.S. LEXIS 2720 (2021).

Necessity of prejudice from unconstitutionally composed jury pool. — If challenged prior to trial, a movant is not required to demonstrate prejudice flowing from an unconstitutionally composed jury pool because prejudice is presumed. Birt v. Montgomery, 709 F.2d 690, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 24721 (11th Cir. 1983).

On collateral attack in federal court, when the challenge has been waived under state law, the burden of demonstrating prejudice resulting from underrepresentation is much greater than the presumption accorded the violation when raised prior to trial. Birt v. Montgomery, 709 F.2d 690, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 24721 (11th Cir. 1983).

Burden is on defendant to prove discrimination. — The burden is upon the defendant to demonstrate that a particular class was the subject of discrimination in the jury selection procedures. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308

S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

Disparity between representation in population and juries insufficient where bias in selection not shown. — Absent proof that selection procedures are biased, proof of disparity between racial percentages in the population and on the juries is not sufficient to shift the burden of explanation to the state. Wright v. Smith, 474 F.2d 349, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11616 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 853, 94 S. Ct. 149, 38 L. Ed. 2d 102, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 672 (1973).

The trial court did not err by ruling that the composition of the grand and traverse jury pools did not violate the Constitution, O.C.G.A. § 15-12-40, and the Unified Appeal Procedure where, in a comparison of the 1990 Census numbers for Hispanics in the county with the percentage of Hispanics on the jury lists, it was shown that the absolute disparities were within the legal limit. Morrow v. State, 272 Ga. 691, 532 S.E.2d 78, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 492 (2000), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 944, 121 S. Ct. 1408, 149 L. Ed. 2d 350, 2001 U.S. LEXIS 2523 (2001).

To establish a prima facie case of jury discrimination the complainant must show that an opportunity for discrimination existed from the source of the jury list and that use of the infected source produced a significant disparity between the percentages found present in the source and those actually appearing on the grand and traverse jury panels. Campbell v. State, 240 Ga. 352, 240 S.E.2d 828, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1498 (1977), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 882, 99 S. Ct. 219, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978); 439 U.S. 882, 99 S. Ct. 218, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978).

In order to establish a prima facie violation of the fair cross section requirement, the defendant must show that the group alleged to be excluded is a distinctive group in the community; that the representation of this group in venires from which juries are selected is not fair and reasonable in relation to the number of such persons in the community; and that this underrepresentation is due to systematic exclusion of the group in the jury selection process. United States v. Rosenthal, 482 F. Supp. 867, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8450 (M.D. Ga. 1979); United States v. Butler, 611 F.2d 1066, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 20486 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 830, 101 S. Ct. 97, 66 L. Ed. 2d 35, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2748 (1980).

Defendant must establish the following elements to demonstrate a prima facie violation of the fair cross-section requirement: (1) that the group alleged to be excluded is a “distinctive” group in the community; (2) that the representation of this group in venirees from which juries are selected is not fair and reasonable in relation to the number of such persons in the community; and (3) that this underrepresentation is due to systematic exclusion of the group in the jury-selection process. United States v. Tuttle, 729 F.2d 1325, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 23513 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1192, 105 S. Ct. 968, 83 L. Ed. 2d 972, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 736 (1985).

Defendant had burden of showing discrimination based on fair cross section requirement. — Although the defendant argued that the defendant was denied a fair trial because the jury array was selected in a manner that deprived the defendant of a fair cross-section of the community, the defendant failed to meet the defendant’s burden because the defendant did not present any evidence of systematic or purposeful discrimination as the lack of information regarding the race of the jurors did not show that the composition of the array amounted to discrimination by random process; and because the state did not fail to show a fair cross-section as the defendant, not the state, bore the burden of proof on that issue; thus, the lack of information upon which the defendant relied proved nothing, and the defendant could not prevail. Grant v. State, 305 Ga. 170, 824 S.E.2d 255, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 102 (2019), overruled in part, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Factors for determining discrimi- nation in jury selection. — There is a progression of legal exercises leading to the conclusion of discrimination in jury selection: The first is the right to rely on the fact that peremptory strikes offer the prosecution a potential tool for discrimination. Second, the defendant must show membership in a racially cognizable group and that the prosecution used peremptory strikes to remove persons of the defendant’s race from the jury. Then the defendant is burdened with showing that these facts and other relevant circumstances raise an inference of the prosecution’s racial motive in the use of peremptory strikes. Aldridge v. State, 258 Ga. 75, 365 S.E.2d 111, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 149 (1988).

Disparities insufficient to support inference of purposeful discrimination. — An absolute disparity of less than 5 percent between the black percentage of the jury pools and the black percentage of the community and a comparative disparity (absolute disparity divided by the black percentage of the community) of 28 percent was insufficient to support an inference of purposeful discrimination, where the jurors were randomly selected from the list of registered voters. Cook v. State, 255 Ga. 565, 340 S.E.2d 843, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 607, cert. denied, 479 U.S. 871, 107 S. Ct. 241, 93 L. Ed. 2d 166, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 4139 (1986).

Where the testimony was that blacks were underrepresented by 1.9 percent absolute and 47.9 percent comparative on the grand jury list, and by 1.2 percent absolute and 30.9 percent comparative on the traverse jury list, the comparative disparities shown, although not irrelevant, were insufficient to establish any constitutional violation. Jefferson v. State, 256 Ga. 821, 353 S.E.2d 468, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 634 (1987); 511 U.S. 1046, 114 S. Ct. 1577, 128 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1994).

Recent and long-time registered voters not distinct and identifiable groups. — Defendant failed to establish prima facie that those who were more recently registered voters and those who had been registered for a longer period were distinct and identifiable groups in the community. Larmon v. State, 256 Ga. 228, 345 S.E.2d 587, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 757 (1986).

Fact that jurors' names were in alphabetical order or their residences were on the same street did not cause substantial underrepresentation of any distinct and identifiable group in the community. Larmon v. State, 256 Ga. 228, 345 S.E.2d 587, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 757 (1986).

Fact that the names on the master jury list were originally obtained from geographical voting districts would not result in a nonrandom geographical pattern. Larmon v. State, 256 Ga. 228, 345 S.E.2d 587, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 757 (1986).

It would be desirable if jury lists contained no alphabetical, geographical, or numerical patterns. — Therefore, it is strongly suggested that trial courts take steps to totally randomize the juror selection process. Larmon v. State, 256 Ga. 228, 345 S.E.2d 587, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 757 (1986).

Where there was no challenge to the initial programmed randomness of selecting jurors from a scan of the entire list of registered voters, defendant was not entitled to an additional final computer printout comprised of another entirely random arrangement of the previously randomly selected individuals. Larmon v. State, 177 Ga. App. 763, 341 S.E.2d 237, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2462 (1986).

To assert a trial jury composition challenge collaterally in federal court when such right has been waived under state law, requires the petitioner to demonstrate both cause for the failure to challenge and actual prejudice. Birt v. Montgomery, 709 F.2d 690, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 24721 (11th Cir. 1983).

Replacement of ill juror not unconstitutional. — Although the erroneous replacement of a juror may under some circumstances deprive a defendant of the right to have the trial completed by a particular tribunal, the sixth amendment right to a fair, impartial and representative jury, and the due process rights grounded in the entitlement to procedures mandated by state law, the defendant was not denied any such rights as a result of the replacement of a juror who, the record showed, was too ill to continue in the deliberations. Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d

Ill defendant during voir defendant and subsequent waiver of rights. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying a defendant's motion for a new trial based on the defendant vomiting in front of the jury during voir dire when the trial was commenced after a two day delay that was granted to the defendant after indicating an illness prevented the defendant's presence at trial. The trial court properly found that the alleged ill defendant waived the right to be present by repeatedly delaying the start of trial with the malingering conduct and by failing to object when defense counsel, in the defendant's presence, specifically requested that the trial court remove the defendant from the courtroom before bringing the jury panel back. Smith v. State, 284 Ga. 599, 669 S.E.2d 98, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 866 (2008).

Presence of defendant during voir dire of jury. — Defendant's absence during the voir dire of prospective jurors did not violate defendant's sixth amendment right to confront and cross-examine witnesses. Goodroe v. State, 224 Ga. App. 378, 480 S.E.2d 378, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 82 (1997), cert. denied, No. S97C0791, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 489 (Ga. May 2, 1997).

Disruptive outbursts affecting defendant's right to be present. — Since defendant continued with disruptive, vocal outbursts after twice being removed from the trial court during jury selection, the third and final removal of defendant for the remainder of the jury selection process was not error because defendant failed to heed the trial court's warnings to control oneself and, thereby, waived defendant's right to be present during jury selection. Lovelace v. State, 262 Ga. App. 690, 586 S.E.2d 386, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 991 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1862, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 47 (Ga. Jan. 12, 2004).

Right to public trial not denied when jurors questioned in chambers in presence of defendant and counsel. — Defendant's sixth amendment right to a public trial was not violated when a number of potential jurors were questioned privately in chambers during voir dire because the potential jurors were questioned in the presence of the defendant and defense counsel. Johnson v. State, 293 Ga. 641, 748 S.E.2d 896, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 716 (2013).

Improper voir dire examination restricted. — The trial court did not violate Uniform Superior Court Rule 10.1, O.C.G.A. § 15-12-133, the sixth and fourteenth amendments, or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I and XI, by restricting improper voir dire examination of prospective jurors concerning racial bias, pretrial publicity, and self-defense. Walker v. State, 258 Ga. 443, 370 S.E.2d 149, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 304 (1988), overruled in part, Carter v. State, 298 Ga. 867, 785 S.E.2d 274, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 257 (2016).

Batson challenge not preserved. — Defendant failed to preserve defendant's Batson claim for review where, following the initial Batson challenge, defendant and the state agreed to the seating on the jury of a woman and an African-American, and defendant did not object when the African-American was later removed due to the African-American's failure to disclose a recent arrest. Carter v. State, 267 Ga. App. 520, 600 S.E.2d 637, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 702 (2004).

Race-neutral explanation for peremptory strikes. — Appeals court rejected the defendant's claim that the state committed a Batson violation in peremptorily striking two jurors, as: (1) the state's reasons in striking the first juror appeared concrete and race-neutral and any question of doubt was decided in favor of the state, given the great deference to the determination that the state's reason was not so wholly fantastic as to be pretextual; and (2) a second juror was properly stricken based on evidence that the juror worked nights, appeared to be extremely fatigued, and actually slept through portions of the voir dire. Woolfolk v. State, 282 Ga. 139, 644 S.E.2d 828, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 359 (2007).

Standard of review of trial courts'

rulings. — Wainwright v. Witt, 469 U.S. 412, 105 S. Ct. 844, 83 L.Ed.2d 841 (1985) is not controlling authority as to the standard of review to be applied by state appellate courts reviewing trial courts' rulings on jury selection. Greene v. Georgia, 519 U.S. 145, 117 S. Ct. 578, 136 L. Ed. 2d 507, 1996 U.S. LEXIS 7648 (1996).

Although defendant contended that defendant's sixth amendment right to trial by an impartial jury was violated, to establish a denial of the defendant's right to an impartial jury, a defendant had to show either actual juror partiality or circumstances inherently prejudicial to that right. Such a showing could not be made by speculation, and the record reflected that voir dire was not transcribed because there were no objections and no motions; therefore, defendant waived the right to complain on appeal about any purported irregularity during voir dire. Bynum v. State, 300 Ga. App. 163, 684 S.E.2d 330, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1111 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0225, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 300 (Ga. Mar. 29, 2010), overruled in part, Martin v. McLaughlin, 298 Ga. 44, 779 S.E.2d 294, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 793 (2015).

Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to raise a Batson challenge because the defendant failed to show that a Batson challenge would have been successful since the defendant neither called the state's prosecutors to testify at the motion for new trial hearing nor sought out or attempted to introduce their notes regarding the striking of jurors prior to trial; only the state attempted to elicit that information during the state's cross-examination of trial counsel, and the resulting testimony indicated that the state did have race-neutral reasons for using the state's peremptory strikes. Stokes v. State, 289 Ga. 702, 715 S.E.2d 81, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 670 (2011).

b. Race

Representation of defendant's race or other groups not guaranteed. — The proposition that a defendant in a criminal case is entitled to a proportionate number of the defendant's race on the jury that tries the defendant, or that the venire or jury lists accurately reflect the proportionate strength of every identifiable group is not law, since the challenger must establish by satisfactory evidence purposeful racial discrimination, even if the figures are not proportionate. Talley v. State, 120 Ga. App. 365, 170 S.E.2d 444, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 781 (1969).

Defendant in a criminal case is not constitutionally entitled to demand a proportionate number of the defendant's race on the jury that tries the defendant nor on the venire or jury roll from which petit jurors are drawn, and neither the jury roll nor the venire need be a perfect mirror of the community or accurately reflect the proportionate strength of every identifiable group. United States v. Rosenthal, 482 F. Supp. 867, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8450 (M.D. Ga. 1979).

Whatever a criminal defendant's race, the defendant has standing to challenge the system used to select the grand or petit jury, on the ground that it arbitrarily excludes from service the members of any race, and thereby denies the defendant due process of law. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Exclusion of blacks from jury service injures not only defendants, but also other members of the excluded class. It denies the class of potential jurors the privilege of participating equally in the administration of justice, and it stigmatizes the whole class, even those who do not wish to participate. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

In order to make a prima facie showing of systematic exclusion of blacks from juries, a defendant has the burden of proving, first, that the opportunity for racial discrimination existed by reason of the use of a racially biased source of potential jurors, and, second, that the use of such an infected source produced a significant disparity between the percentages of blacks in the source and the percentage on the grand jury and petit jury panels. Wright v. Smith, 474 F.2d 349, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11616 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 853, 94 S. Ct. 149, 38 L. Ed. 2d 102, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 672 (1973).

In order to establish a prima facie case of discrimination, the defendant must demonstrate that there exists a substantial disparity between the proportion of blacks chosen for jury duty and the proportion of blacks in the eligible population, and that the selection procedures themselves are not racially neutral. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

Statistical evidence establishing that blacks are underrepresented, together with evidence that the jury selection procedures are not racially neutral, establishes a prima facie case of invidious racial discrimination thus shifting the burden of proof to the state. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

Random selection producing no black jurors. — The fact that no blacks were on the grand jury that indicted the defendant did not raise a prima-facie case of discrimination where only two percent of the residents of the county were black and the county clerk testified that 15 of the 727 (2%) names placed in the grand jury box were black, but that none of those 15 names were randomly drawn by the Superior Court in open court. Wigfall v. State, 257 Ga. 585, 361 S.E.2d 376, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 954 (1987).

Both black persons and women constitute recognizable, distinct classes for purposes of challenges based on allegations of discriminatory selection of juries and that jury venires do not represent a fair cross section of the community. Gibson v. Zant, 705 F.2d 1543,

Use of peremptory strikes to exclude blacks. — The defendant was not denied due process of the law on the ground that the state used all of its peremptory strikes to exclude blacks from a petit jury. Avery v. State, 174 Ga. App. 116, 329 S.E.2d 276, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2698 (1985).

Where all of the juries relied on by defendant show a systematic exclusion of blacks from petit juries were composed of at least 25 percent black jurors with the exception of one jury which had only one black juror, the state used all of its peremptory challenges in only four of the ten cases, and there were no cases involving all-white juries, defendant failed to establish a constitutional denial of due process and the right to a fair trial through the discriminatory use of peremptory challenges. Patterson v. State, 176 Ga. App. 784, 338 S.E.2d 283, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2911 (1985).

When a prosecutor uses peremptory challenges to strike all black veniremen from a jury, the defendant is deprived of equal protection; and, unless the prosecutor can present a racially neutral explanation for the elimination of racially discrete jurors through peremptory challenges, a “guilty” verdict arrived at by the jury is subject to reversal and remand. Hamilton v. State, 181 Ga. App. 279, 351 S.E.2d 705, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2823 (1986).

Trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion in ruling that the defendant failed to establish a case of unconstitutional race-based discrimination by the prosecution using three of the prosecution’s eight peremptory strikes against African-Americans. The reasons offered for the three strikes were race neutral and not pretextual. Watkins v. State, 289 Ga. 359, 711 S.E.2d 655, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 474 (2011).

Use of “comparative disparity” standard to show underrepresentation of blacks and women. — The defendant, who relied on the “comparative disparity” standard to show unconstitutional underrepresentation of blacks and women, as opposed to white males, on the grand and traverse juries, and not on the “absolute disparity” produced by the jury selection process, in relation to the number of such persons in the community, failed to carry this burden of proof. Godfrey v. Francis, 613 F. Supp. 747, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18352 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff’d, 836 F.2d 1557, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 453 (11th Cir. 1988).

Systematic exclusion of blacks and women indicated. — For purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 6’s right to a jury composed of a representative segment of the community, the disparities of blacks and women on county traverse jury lists over a period of time indicates a systematic exclusion of these two groups. Birt v. Montgomery, 709 F.2d 690, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 24721 (11th Cir. 1983).

White person has standing to attack the systematic exclusion of black persons from grand and petit jury service. Gibbs v. State, 235 Ga. 480, 220 S.E.2d 254, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 908 (1975), cert. denied, 424 U.S. 924, 96 S. Ct. 1134, 47 L. Ed. 2d 333, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 625 (1976).

Underrepresentation of whites. — Because defense counsel put forward no evidence of the racial composition of the population of the county in which the defendant was tried, other than to state, “my client, being white, and we only have one white female juror out of the entire panel, I think it’s just not a good cross section and it’s not representative,” the defendant failed to meet the defendant’s burden to establish prima facie that a distinct and identifiable group in the community was substantially under represented on the jury venire being challenged. Prine v. State, 237 Ga. App. 679, 515 S.E.2d 425, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 443 (1999).

Defendant’s use of peremptory strikes to exclude Caucasians. — Trial court’s finding that defense counsel’s explanation for a prima facie racially discriminatory peremptory strike was pretextual was not clear error based on defense counsel’s demeanor while explaining the strike, counsel’s misstating what the juror's response was during voir dire, counsel's failure to excuse similarly situated jurors, and counsel's exercise of 11 of 12 strikes against Caucasians. Nelson v. State, 271 Ga. App. 870, 611 S.E.2d 147, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 192 (2005).

c. Sex

Exclusion of women as a class. — It is not tenable to hold that women as a class may be excluded or given automatic exemptions based solely on sex if the consequence is that criminal jury venires are almost totally male. Zirkle v. State, 235 Ga. 289, 219 S.E.2d 389, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 857 (1975).

Exclusion of women. — In county where by tradition the grand jurors had selected their forepersons, fact that no woman had served as a foreperson of a county grand jury during the preceding ten years did not prove discrimination in selection of grand jurors and forepersons. Moss v. State, 250 Ga. 368, 297 S.E.2d 459, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1253 (1982).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in ruling that the defendant failed to establish a prima facie case of discriminatory purpose based on gender by the prosecution using seven of the prosecution's eight peremptory strikes against women. Watkins v. State, 289 Ga. 359, 711 S.E.2d 655, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 474 (2011).

Underrepresentation of women. — Petitioner established a violation of the Sixth Amendment's fair-cross-section requirement, notwithstanding jury commissioners' good faith belief that 39.36 percent representation of women on the master jury list "was in the ballpark guidelines that the Supreme Court would allow." Berryhill v. Zant, 858 F.2d 633, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 13498 (11th Cir. 1988).

Both black persons and women constitute recognizable, distinct classes for purposes of challenges based on allegations of discriminatory selection of juries and that jury venires do not represent a fair cross section of the community. Gibson v. Zant, 705 F.2d 1543, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 27257 (11th Cir. 1983).

Use of "comparative disparity" standard to show underrepresenta- tion of blacks and women. — The defendant, who relied on the "comparative disparity" standard to show unconstitutional underrepresentation of blacks and women, as opposed to white males, on the grand and traverse juries, and not on the "absolute disparity" produced by the jury selection process, in relation to the number of such persons in the community, failed to carry this burden of proof. Godfrey v. Francis, 613 F. Supp. 747, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18352 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 836 F.2d 1557, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 453 (11th Cir. 1988).

Systematic exclusion of blacks and women indicated. — For purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 6's right to a jury composed of a representative segment of the community, the disparities of blacks and women on county traverse jury lists over a period of time indicates a systematic exclusion of these two groups. Birt v. Montgomery, 709 F.2d 690, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 24721 (11th Cir. 1983).

d. Age

Exclusion of homemakers with children 14 years of age or under. — Former Code 1933, § 59-112 (see O.C.G.A. § 15-12-1), which authorizes the trial judge to excuse a juror who is a homemaker with children 14 years of age or under does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 6 or U.S. Const., amend. 14, since a state may have an important interest in assuring that those members of the family responsible for the care of children are available to do so. Willis v. State, 243 Ga. 185, 253 S.E.2d 70, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 847, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 178, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Eighteen-to-21-year-olds not distinct group. — Assuming that 18-to-21-year-olds were excluded from the jury pool in a criminal case, this does not establish even a prima facie violation of the fair-cross-section requirement, because persons falling into this age range do not constitute a "distinctive" or cognizable group. House v. Balkcom, 562 F. Supp. 1111, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17753 (N.D. Ga. 1983), rev'd, 725 F.2d 608, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25536 (11th Cir. 1984).

18-to-23-year-olds not distinct group. — Defendant failed to demonstrate that persons between ages of 18 and 23 constituted “distinct and identifiable group in the community” for purposes of challenge to composition of jury. See Mincey v. State, 251 Ga. 255, 304 S.E.2d 882, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 768, cert. denied, 464 U.S. 977, 104 S. Ct. 414, 78 L. Ed. 2d 352 (1983).

Young persons age 18 to 24 were not a cognizable group which had to be represented on defendant’s jury for sixth amendment purposes. Potts v. State, 259 Ga. 812, 388 S.E.2d 678, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 54 (1990).

The defendant was not entitled to have the indictment quashed because the list of potential grand jurors was drawn from the 1980 census instead of the 1990 census, notwithstanding defendant’s assertion that the use of the 1980 census resulted in the underrepresentation of the 18 to 24 age group in the grand jury pool, since such group was not cognizable for purposes of grand jury selection. Swanson v. State, 248 Ga. App. 551, 545 S.E.2d 713, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 339 (2001), cert. denied, No. S01C0997, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 651 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2001).

Eighteen-to-29-year-olds not cognizable group. — Petitioner failed to establish that young adults aged 18 to 29 constituted a cognizable group in the petitioner’s attempt to show underrepresentation of young adults in the jury pool, because the group was not defined and the petitioner did not prove that the views held by adults aged 18 to 29 could not be represented by other members of the community. Willis v. Kemp, 838 F.2d 1510, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 1792 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1059, 109 S. Ct. 1328, 103 L. Ed. 2d 596, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1184 (1989).

Overrepresentation of persons under 25. — Defendant’s challenge of the jury array based on overrepresentation of persons under 25 years of age failed to establish the significant underrepresentation of persons 25 and over and failed to show that the underrepresented group was cognizable. Anthony v. State, 213 Ga. App. 303, 444 S.E.2d 393, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 581 (1994).

Underrepresentation of young persons on grand jury list did not violate the requirement that the grand jury be drawn from a fair cross section of the community; the underrepresentation was explained by the jury commissioner’s compliance with the legal requirement that only a limited number of the most experienced persons on the traverse jury list be selected for inclusion on the grand jury list. Parks v. State, 254 Ga. 403, 330 S.E.2d 686, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 711 (1985).

Eighteen-to-30-year-old persons are not a cognizable class for the purpose of a challenge to the array of the traverse jury. Davis v. State, 241 Ga. 376, 247 S.E.2d 45, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1363 (1978).

Lowering of minimum jury service age to 18 not constitutionally required. — Jury list which excludes all people 18 to 21 years of age does not deny defendant the right to a public trial and due process of law, despite the lowering of the minimum age for federal jurors to 18 by 26 U.S.C. § 1865. United States v. Dukes, 479 F.2d 324, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9697 (5th Cir. 1973).

3. Jurors Views on Death Penalty

“Death-qualified” jury procedure does not violate the constitutional right to a jury trial. Chenault v. Stynchcombe, 581 F.2d 444, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 8655 (5th Cir. 1978).

When the defendant received a sentence of life without parole, not a death sentence, the defendant could not complain of the death-penalty qualification of the jurors; moreover, the death penalty qualification of prospective jurors was clearly authorized. Stokes v. State, 281 Ga. 825, 642 S.E.2d 82, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 174 (2007), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Exclusion of death penalty opponents does not violate due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. — Questioning of jurors and exclusion of those opposed to the death penalty does not violate the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Corn v. State, 240 Ga. 130, 240 S.E.2d 694, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1423 (1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 2255, 56 L. Ed. 2d 415 (1978).

Standard for disqualifying a prospective juror in a capital punishment case is whether the juror's views on capital punishment would prevent or substantially impair the performance of the juror's duties as a juror in accordance with the juror's instructions and the juror's oath. Alderman v. State, 254 Ga. 206, 327 S.E.2d 168, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 651, cert. denied, 474 U.S. 911, 106 S. Ct. 282, 88 L. Ed. 2d 245, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 5001 (1985).

Juror excused because of capital punishment views. — Where defendant argues that the exclusion of certain venire-persons from the jury panel for cause violated the sixth amendment right to be tried before an impartial jury, the appropriate standard is that a juror can be excluded for cause because of his or her views on capital punishment if the juror's views would prevent or substantially impair the performance of the juror's duties as a juror in accordance with the juror's instructions and the juror's oath. Stephens v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 642, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 5265 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 872, 109 S. Ct. 189, 102 L. Ed. 2d 158, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3631 (1988).

Trial court's disqualification of a juror for cause based upon the juror's opposition to the imposition of the death penalty was not an abuse of discretion as: (1) the juror initially indicated that the juror was open to considering the death penalty as a sentencing option, but almost immediately into voir dire the juror vacillated and repeatedly stated that the juror did not know whether the juror could vote for the death penalty; (2) after extensive questioning by the trial court, the juror stated that the death penalty was against the juror's nature and indicated that the juror did not think the juror could vote for it, regardless of the circumstances; and (3) in finding the juror unqualified, the trial court relied in large part on the juror's demeanor, noting the juror's "body language" and the fact that, although the juror had indicated a couple of times that the juror might consider the death penalty, the juror "seemed to struggle with it." Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 652 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 9247 (2007).

Death-scrupled jurors do not constitute a recognizable class, representation of which is necessary on the guilt phase to grant a valid cross section of the community. Porter v. State, 237 Ga. 580, 229 S.E.2d 384, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1310 (1976), cert. denied, 430 U.S. 956, 97 S. Ct. 1603, 51 L. Ed. 2d 806, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 1395 (1977).

Defendant has no right to have capital punishment objectors serve in the guilt determination phase of trial as part of the cross section of the community to which the defendant is entitled. Corn v. State, 240 Ga. 130, 240 S.E.2d 694, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1423 (1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 2255, 56 L. Ed. 2d 415 (1978).

Exclusion of capital punishment objectors does not deprive defendant of fair cross section. — Exclusion of jurors opposed to capital punishment from the guilt-innocence phase of the trial does not deprive the defendant of a trial by a jury reflecting a fairly representative cross section of the community. Hawes v. State, 240 Ga. 327, 240 S.E.2d 833, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1496 (1977).

The exclusion of jurors who indicated that they would not under any circumstances impose the death penalty did not violate the defendant's right to an impartial, community-representative jury. McCleskey v. Kemp, 753 F.2d 877, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28073 (11th Cir. 1985), aff'd, 481 U.S. 279, 107 S. Ct. 1756, 95 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 1817 (1987).

Excusing jurors who profess inability to impose death penalty under any circumstances. — Where an interrogation of venire persons revealed that each candidate could not have, under any circumstances conceivable at that time, imposed the death penalty upon the defendant, they were permissibly dismissed from the venire. Johnson v. Kemp, 585 F. Supp. 1496, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17338 (S.D. Ga. 1984), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 759 F.2d 1503, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 29570 (11th Cir. 1985).

No error in failure to dismiss juror not irrevocably committed to death penalty. — It is not error for the court to fail to dismiss a juror where the juror is not so biased or irrevocably committed to the death penalty that the juror would ignore the court's instructions pertaining to the jury's sentence recommendation and impose the death penalty under all circumstances in which a murder conviction would be returned. Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 945, 104 S. Ct. 1930, 80 L. Ed. 2d 475, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 232 (1984).

Jury improperly selected where persons not irrevocably committed to death penalty systematically excluded. — A jury is improperly selected where persons who do not make it unmistakably clear that they will automatically vote against capital punishment are systematically excluded from the jury, in violation of the sixth, eighth and fourteenth amendments. Potts v. Zant, 575 F. Supp. 374, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20217 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 526, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 22119 (11th Cir. 1984).

Juror may not be excused for mere general scruples or opposition to the death penalty. — The venireman who is excused must make it unmistakably clear that they would automatically vote against the imposition of capital punishment without regard to any evidence that might be developed at the trial of the case before them, or that their attitude toward the death penalty would prevent them from making an impartial decision as to the defendant's guilt. Mason v. Balkcom, 487 F. Supp. 554, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12269 (M.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 669 F.2d 222, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 21374 (5th Cir. 1982).

Inquiry on voir dire as to opposition to death penalty not unconstitutional. — Allowing prospective jurors to be asked on voir dire whether they are conscientiously opposed to capital punishment does not deny a defendant an impartial jury in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6 and U.S. Const., amend. 14. Collins v. State, 243 Ga. 291, 253 S.E.2d 729, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 893 (1979), vacated in part, 446 U.S. 961, 100 S. Ct. 2936, 64 L. Ed. 2d 820 (1980).

Failure to determine juror's beliefs as to death penalty. — A trial judge's failure, during voir dire, to determine whether a prospective juror harbors not only an abstract belief against capital punishment, but also beliefs that would preclude the juror from voting the death penalty under any circumstances does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 6 and U.S. Const., amend. 14, where the juror is an alternate who never participates in any phase of the trial. Smith v. Whisman, 431 F.2d 1051, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 7315 (5th Cir. 1970).

Excuse of death-scrupled jurors from murder and rape proceedings. — The right of an accused to a trial by an impartial jury, guaranteed by the state and federal Constitutions, means the right to a jury impartial as between the state and the accused on the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused. The crime of rape in this state may be punished by death, and a person accused of such crime has no constitutional right to have jurors trying the case who have conscientious scruples against the infliction of a punishment prescribed by the law. Massey v. State, 222 Ga. 143, 149 S.E.2d 118, 1966 Ga. LEXIS 421 (1966).

Where jurors are disqualified in a murder and rape proceeding because of their reservations about capital punishment, they are properly excused for cause, and the defendant is not deprived of the right to a jury selected from a representative cross section of the community. Bowen v. State, 244 Ga. 495, 260 S.E.2d 855, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1308 (1979), cert. denied, 446 U.S. 970, 100 S. Ct. 2952, 64 L. Ed. 2d 831 (1980).

Juror's inability fairly to consider a life sentence is just as disqualifying as an inability fairly to consider a death sentence. Skipper v. State, 257 Ga. 802, 364 S.E.2d 835, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 66 (1988).

4. Impartiality of Jurors

Unlike U.S. Const., amend. 6, U.S. Const., amend. 5 does not expressly require impartiality. — U.S. Const., amend. 6 expressly provides that the trial jury in a criminal case must be impartial. No such requirement in respect to grand juries is found in U.S. Const., amend. 5, which contains the guaranty against prosecutions for infamous crimes unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury. Creamer v. State, 150 Ga. App. 458, 258 S.E.2d 212, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2259 (1979).

Conclusions reached by the fact-finder should be induced only by evidence and argument in open court, and not by any outside influence, whether of private talk or public print. A conviction secured, in whole or in part, by use of information secured from nonjudicial sources obviously constitutes a denial of due process of law in its most rudimentary conception. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

The requirement that a jury's verdict must be based upon the evidence developed at the trial goes to the fundamental integrity of all that is embraced in the constitutional concept of trial by jury. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Juror's conversation with a state's witness did not prejudice defendant's right to a fair trial such that the jury's verdict should be set aside where the witness asked the juror what time the trial was to resume, and the juror testified that the juror did not form an opinion as to defendant's guilt or innocence due to the conversation. Terrell v. State, 268 Ga. App. 173, 601 S.E.2d 500, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 866 (2004).

After one prospective juror made a comment that the defendant killed redheads and that juror was later excused, the trial court did not violate the defendant's right to an impartial jury under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI and U.S. Const., amend. 6 in refusing to excuse other prospective jurors. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 756, 620 S.E.2d 778, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 523 (2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 3608 (2006).

Jury free of external influences especially important in capital cases. — In capital cases, the jury should pass upon the case free from external causes tending to disturb the exercise of deliberate unbiased judgment. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Accused has right to expect protection from massive and prejudicial publicity. — While the government has no authority to restrain the reporting of the press, nor to dictate what it does or does not report, a person accused of crime has the right to expect the government and its judicial officers to protect the defendant from massive and prejudicial publicity surrounding the case. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Government has burden of providing protection. — Although the right of a free press embodied in U.S. Const., amend. 1 is guaranteed, the individual's right to a fair trial guaranteed by the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5 and in the other individual provisions of the Bill of Rights is absolute, and if prejudicial news coverage is present, the burden is on the government to protect the rights of the defendant. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Doctrine of inherent prejudice. — The doctrine of inherent prejudice, in regard to the accused's right to a fair trial applies if, because of the circumstances, there is such a high probability that prejudice will result so that the procedure is deemed inherently lacking in due process, and in such cases, no showing of identifiable prejudice is necessary. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Extrajudicial knowledge is measured in terms of totality of circumstances. — Juror's extrajudicial knowledge regarding an appellant's present crime represents a serious potential for prejudice to that appellant's right to an impartial jury, but such potential can be discounted under U.S. Const., amend. 6 if review of the pretrial publicity and total voir dire fails to demonstrate that the totality of the circumstances were inherently prejudicial. Brooks v. State, 244 Ga. 574, 261 S.E.2d 379, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1338 (1979), vacated in part, 446 U.S. 961, 100 S. Ct. 2937, 64 L. Ed. 2d 821 (1980).

Extrajudicial knowledge impeached verdict. — Defendant's right to confrontation was violated when a juror gathered extra-judicial information on a key issue in the case and relayed it to the other jurors; since the verdict became unanimous only after the introduction of the improper evidence, there was a reasonable possibility that the juror's misconduct contributed to defendant's conviction. Hammock v. State, 277 Ga. 612, 592 S.E.2d 415, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 69 (2004).

Qualified jurors need not be totally ignorant of facts and issues involved in order to guarantee that a defendant has a panel of impartial, indifferent jurors. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Preconceived notion as to guilt or innocence, without more, does not rebut presumption of impartiality. — The mere existence of a preconceived notion as to the guilt or innocence of an accused, without more, is not sufficient to rebut the presumption of a prospective juror's impartiality. Rather, a juror's impartiality is sufficient if the juror can lay aside this impression or opinion and render a verdict based on the evidence presented in court. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975); Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 910, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 3232 (1979).

No evidence prospective juror prejudged case. — When a prospective juror indicated that the prospective juror would expect a defendant to testify and would do the juror's best to follow the law if the court instructed the jury that no inference was to be drawn from the fact that the defendant chose not to testify, there was no error in the trial court's refusal to strike the prospective juror for cause, because nothing showed that the prospective juror had prejudged any issue in the case. Johnson v. State, 291 Ga. 621, 732 S.E.2d 266, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 744 (2012).

General rule regarding presumption of impartiality does not foreclose inquiry as to whether, in a given case, the application of the rule works as a deprivation of liberty without due process. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Constitutional test of impartiality does not turn on subjective declarations of individual jurors. Hutcheson v. State, 246 Ga. 13, 268 S.E.2d 643, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1000 (1980).

Circumstances inherently prejudicial to right to impartial jury can impeach a juror's declaration of impartiality. Brooks v. State, 244 Ga. 574, 261 S.E.2d 379, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1338 (1979), vacated in part, 446 U.S. 961, 100 S. Ct. 2937, 64 L. Ed. 2d 821 (1980).

Juror's assertion of impartiality does not close inquiry. — The rule that it is sufficient for the juror to state that the juror can lay aside the juror's impressions and render a verdict based only on the evidence does not close inquiry to determine whether, in a given case, the application of the rule deprives a defendant of due process. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Juror's assurances that the juror is equal to this task cannot be dispositive of the accused's rights, and it remains open to the defendant to demonstrate the actual existence of such an opinion in the mind of the juror as will raise the presumption of partiality. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 910, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 3232 (1979).

Excuse of jurors for partiality as measure of prejudice from pretrial publicity. — Corroboration for a court's belief that pretrial publicity has not been inherently prejudicial can be found in the percentage of prospective jurors excused for partiality regarding the accused's guilt. Brooks v. State, 244 Ga. 574, 261 S.E.2d 379, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1338 (1979), vacated in part, 446 U.S. 961, 100 S. Ct. 2937, 64 L. Ed. 2d 821 (1980).

Where only 4 percent of prospective jurors are excused for partiality regarding the defendant's guilt, pretrial publicity surrounding the defendant's case has not created a community bias inherently prejudicial to the appellant's right to an impartial jury. Brooks v. State, 244 Ga. 574, 261 S.E.2d 379, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1338 (1979), vacated in part, 446 U.S. 961, 100 S. Ct. 2937, 64 L. Ed. 2d 821 (1980).

Precautions taken to minimize effect of pretrial publicity. — Where in a publicized murder case, in light of the possibility of prejudice, the trial court grants extensive individual voir dire of prospective jurors outside the presence of the others, and grants each of defendant's motions to strike jurors for cause, leaving a panel of 50 prospective jurors, some of whom admitted to a vague knowledge of the crimes, but none could recall details and each specifically stated an ability to weigh the evidence impartially, there is no prejudicial pretrial publicity which would outweigh the stated impartiality of the prospective jurors. Gates v. State, 244 Ga. 587, 261 S.E.2d 349, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1340 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 938, 100 S. Ct. 1332, 63 L. Ed. 2d 772 (1980).

Statement in indictment as to previous convictions. — Defendant is not denied a fair trial by an impartial jury by listing in the indictment a number of previous convictions of burglary and other crimes. Croker v. Smith, 225 Ga. 529, 169 S.E.2d 787, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 555 (1969).

Presence of a bereaved parent at the prosecutor's table during trial of one accused of murdering the parent's child surely must have an impact on a jury and cannot be said to be harmless with regard to the defendant's right to have a fair trial. Walker v. State, 132 Ga. App. 476, 208 S.E.2d 350, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1722 (1974).

Jurors exposed to anti-drunk driv- ing poster during DUI trial. — Defendant, charged with driving under the influence, was not deprived of a fair trial, where the six empaneled jurors who were exposed to an anti-drunk driving poster responded affirmatively when they were asked by defense counsel, "can you dismiss that poster from your minds and say to me with absolute certainty that it has no bearing on your minds and would have no bearing on this case?" Bryant v. State, 201 Ga. App. 305, 410 S.E.2d 778, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1321 (1991), cert. denied, No. S92C0095, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 897 (Ga. Nov. 1, 1991).

Reseating jurors who are aware of striking party. — Since the jurors who were reseated had previously been struck in their presence, and there had been no waiver of the right to object to the reseating of such jurors, it was improper to reseate these jurors who were aware of the party who struck them. As such, the convictions of the defendants must be reversed and a new trial ordered. Gaines v. State, 258 Ga. App. 902, 575 S.E.2d 704, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 1551 (2002), cert. denied, No. S03C0635, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 465 (Ga. Apr. 29, 2003).

Replacing one juror with an alternate after out-of-court contact between the juror and defense counsel did not violate a murder defendant's constitutional rights to due process and trial by an impartial jury, where the trial court had a sound basis for exercising its discretion to discharge the juror. Miller v. State, 261 Ga. 679, 410 S.E.2d 101, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 939 (1991).

Juror communication with witnesses. — Where a juror in the course of a criminal trial improperly communicates to a witness that the defendant is going to be acquitted unless the state shores up its case in a certain manner, and this information is relayed to the prosecution, the defendant has been denied the fundamental right to a fair trial. Jones v. State, 247 Ga. 268, 275 S.E.2d 67, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 690, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 817, 102 S. Ct. 94, 70 L. Ed. 2d 86, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3120 (1981).

tion process, which stated that “there’s nothing wrong with chit chat” between the jurors, coupled with a lengthy admonition by the court that the jurors should refrain from reaching a decision until all the evidence was submitted, closing arguments concluded, and after the charge of the court, did not constitute plain error requiring a reversal of the conviction. United States v. Meester, 762 F.2d 867, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30160 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1024, 106 S. Ct. 579, 88 L. Ed. 2d 562, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 4827 (1985).

Examination of jurors on actions of one juror. — Defendant’s claim that the defendant’s trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to request that the trial court examine the remaining jurors whether the jurors had been affected by a juror after the juror had been removed was unsupported, and the defendant could not show prejudice or harm because there was no error on which to premise the claim of ineffective assistance; the defendant did not request that the trial court question the remaining jurors, and the juror’s responses clearly indicated that the juror’s statement to the other jurors about the juror’s conflict was exceedingly minimal and that the others had no reaction to the statement. Sharpe v. State, 288 Ga. 565, 707 S.E.2d 338, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 276 (2011).

Fact that two or more jurors visited the crime scene and related information about their observations to the rest of the jurors during their deliberations did not constitute reversible error where there was nothing to indicate that any of the jurors changed their minds because of the extra-record information. Moore v. State, 179 Ga. App. 125, 345 S.E.2d 631, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2594 (1986).

Right to impartial jury violated where significant possibility of juror prejudice. — The trial court’s failure to conduct a voir dire (or to allow defense counsel to make relevant inquiries to the panel members) after the events of the weekend preceding the trial, involving a protest march against the death penalty, prison conditions and the indictment of six black inmates for mutiny and murder, counter protests, and extensive publicity, all of which raised a significant possibility of juror prejudice, violated the defendant’s right to an impartial jury. Jordan v. Lippman, 763 F.2d 1265, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30697 (11th Cir. 1985).

Because an average person in a juror’s position as the spouse of a volunteer worker at the district attorney’s office would have been partial to the prosecutor’s case, although the spouse was replaced by an alternate juror after only three state witnesses had testified, the possibility of a taint already created in the jury panel was not cured; the petition for writ of habeas corpus was granted. Nichols v. Thomas, 788 F. Supp. 570, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4156 (N.D. Ga. 1992).

Where bias appears low despite publicity and defendant’s confession admitted, prejudice may be discounted. — In a murder trial, a two and one-half month period between the publicity and the trial, a low level of community bias as reflected in the total voir dire, and the admission into evidence of the defendant’s confessions permit a court to discount the potential for prejudice admittedly present in the extrajudicial knowledge of the selected jurors in the case, and to find that the totality of circumstances surrounding the defendant’s trial are not inherently prejudicial to the defendant’s right to an impartial jury. Brooks v. State, 244 Ga. 574, 261 S.E.2d 379, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1338 (1979), vacated in part, 446 U.S. 961, 100 S. Ct. 2937, 64 L. Ed. 2d 821 (1980).

Actual or inherent prejudice must be shown. — Under U.S. Const., amend. 6, in order for an appellant to establish the denial of the right to an impartial jury, the appellant must show either actual juror partiality or circumstances inherently prejudicial to that right. Brooks v. State, 244 Ga. 574, 261 S.E.2d 379, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1338 (1979), vacated in part, 446 U.S. 961, 100 S. Ct. 2937, 64 L. Ed. 2d 821 (1980); Jones v. State, 157 Ga. App. 163, 276 S.E.2d 674, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1753 (1981).

Elements of proof of pretrial publicity. — Under the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, where pretrial publicity is at issue, to find that the defendant did not receive a fair trial, the defendant must show that the setting of the trial was inherently prejudicial or that the jury selection process showed actual prejudice to a degree that rendered a fair trial impossible. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1370 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977); Young v. State, 237 Ga. 852, 230 S.E.2d 287, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1421 (1976); Taft v. State, 154 Ga. App. 566, 269 S.E.2d 69, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2287 (1980).

Burden of proof of prejudice from prejudicial publicity. — The general rule is that a defendant has the burden on appeal of proving actual jury prejudice if a conviction is to be reversed on grounds of prejudicial publicity. The requirement of showing actual prejudice may not be necessary in extreme circumstances where there has been inherently prejudicial publicity such as to make the possibility of prejudice highly likely or almost unavoidable. Calley v. Callaway, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 851 (1976).

To find the existence of actual prejudice from pretrial publicity, two basic prerequisites must be satisfied. First, it must be shown that one or more jurors who decided the case entertained an opinion, before hearing the evidence adduced at trial, that the defendant was guilty. Second, these jurors, it must be determined, could not have laid aside these performed opinions and rendered a verdict based on the evidence presented in court. Coleman v. Zant, 708 F.2d 541, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 26880 (11th Cir. 1983).

Prejudice is presumed from pretrial publicity when: (1) pretrial publicity is sufficiently prejudicial and inflammatory; and (2) the prejudicial pretrial publicity saturated the community where the trials were held. Coleman v. Zant, 708 F.2d 541, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 26880 (11th Cir. 1983).

Media access to evidence. — Until the appeal process is completed, the media may not have access to the electronically produced evidence that the police acquired during their investigation and trial of the case, such as a videotaped statement by the defendant, as this may prejudice defendant's future rights to a fair trial. In re Pac. & S. Co., 257 Ga. 484, 361 S.E.2d 159, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 941 (1987).

Prejudicial pretrial publicity requires change of venue. — When prejudicial pretrial publicity or an inflamed community atmosphere precludes seating an impartial jury, due process requires the trial court to grant a defendant's motion for a change of venue. Coleman v. Zant, 708 F.2d 541, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 26880 (11th Cir. 1983).

Pretrial publicity did not require change of venue. — Trial counsel's failure to seek a change of venue on the ground of pretrial publicity as ineffective assistance of counsel failed since the only pretrial publicity shown in the record was a single newspaper article published the week before trial since there was no evidence that the trial's setting was inherently prejudicial or that the jury selection process showed actual prejudice. Williams v. State, 277 Ga. 853, 596 S.E.2d 597, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 412 (2004).

Defendant may ask jurors whether family members worked for law enforcement agencies. — The trial court errs in limiting voir dire of the jurors by refusing to allow the defendant to ask the panel whether members of the jurors' immediate families had ever worked for law enforcement agencies. Henderson v. State, 251 Ga. 398, 306 S.E.2d 645, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 830 (1983).

Presence of guards at trial. — Although a defendant is entitled to trial free of the partiality which the presence of an excessive number of guards may create, special circumstances may make the presence of a number of guards necessary. Zant v. Gaddis, 247 Ga. 717, 279 S.E.2d 219, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 841, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1037, 102 S. Ct. 579, 70 L. Ed. 2d 483, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4458 (1981).

Employee of jail as juror. — An employee of the jail where the defendant was housed pending trial should have been stricken as a juror for cause because of the employee's special knowledge. Kier v. State, 263 Ga. App. 347, 587 S.E.2d 841,

2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1209 (2003), overruled in part, Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 685 (2018), overruled in part as stated in Crawford v. State, 371 Ga. App. 507, 901 S.E.2d 340, 2024 Ga. App. LEXIS 177 (2024).

Court's threat to remove unruly defendant. — No rights under the fifth and Sixth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States were violated where after several outbursts on the defendant's part, the trial court informed the defendant, outside the jury's presence, that the defendant would be removed from the courtroom if the defendant again engaged in such unseemly behavior. Russell v. State, 181 Ga. App. 665, 353 S.E.2d 565, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2564 (1987).

Admonition of counsel did not deprive defendant of fair trial. — Because there was no evidence that the jury heard the trial court's comment to trial counsel during a bench conference or was influenced by the comment, the defendant failed to prove that the admonition deprived the defendant of a fair trial. Newkirk v. State, 290 Ga. 581, 722 S.E.2d 760, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 196 (2012).

As matter of public policy, juror cannot be heard to impeach the verdict, either by way of disclosing the incompetency or misconduct of fellow jurors, or by showing the juror's own misconduct or disqualification from any cause. The only exception to the firm application of this rule is if protections provided a criminal defendant by the sixth amendment are applicable. Lozynsky v. Hairston, 168 Ga. App. 276, 308 S.E.2d 605, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2749 (1983).

Failure to discredit inmate witness. — Defendant's trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to discredit the veracity of an inmate witness who testified to the defendant's jailhouse confession because at trial, the inmate witness appeared in prison clothes, and the state elicited testimony from the inmate that the inmate was a convicted felon; since the evidence was properly before the jury, it could not be shown that the omission was an unreasonable tactical move that no competent attorney in the same situation would have made. Brown v. State, 289 Ga. 259, 710 S.E.2d 751, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 376, cert. denied, 565 U.S. 989, 132 S. Ct. 524, 181 L. Ed. 2d 368, 2011 U.S. LEXIS 7832 (2011).

Outside research shared with fellow jurors. — Defendant's rights to be present and to trial by a fair and impartial jury were violated when, during deliberations, a juror shared with fellow jurors legal definitions, which the juror found by using the Internet search engine Google®, and at least one such definition was incompatible with an affirmative defense the defendant pursued at trial, the defense of habitation, as it pertained to motor vehicles. Chambers v. State, 321 Ga. App. 512, 739 S.E.2d 513, 2013 Ga. App. LEXIS 316 (2013), cert. denied, No. S13C1181, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 747 (Ga. Sept. 23, 2013).

No evidentiary hearing as to likelihood of nondeath-qualified juries to convict. — A defendant is not entitled to an evidentiary hearing with regard to the contention that death-qualified juries are more likely to convict than nondeath-qualified juries. Mincey v. State, 251 Ga. 255, 304 S.E.2d 882, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 768, cert. denied, 464 U.S. 977, 104 S. Ct. 414, 78 L. Ed. 2d 352 (1983).

Rebuttal of prejudice presumed from publicity. — Prejudice presumed by evidence of inflammatory pretrial publicity was rebutted by an examination of the voir dire which showed that the jury actually empaneled was not so infected by the publicity that the jurors could not lay aside any preconceived opinions about the case and render a verdict solely upon the evidence. Buttrum v. Black, 721 F. Supp. 1268, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11272 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 908 F.2d 695, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 12655 (11th Cir. 1990).

When jury's verdict may be impeached. — The rule that jurors cannot impeach their own verdict is inapplicable where jurors intentionally gather extrajudicial evidence that is highly prejudicial to the accused, and then communicate that information to other jurors in a closed jury room, since, under these circumstances, the juror making such statements essentially becomes an unsworn witness against the defendant in violation of the sixth amendment. Satterwhite v. State, 235 Ga. App. 687, 509 S.E.2d 97, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1465 (1998), cert. denied, No. S99C0460, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 415 (Ga. Apr. 30, 1999).

Counsel was not ineffective for not attempting to strike for cause a juror who worked as a security officer and who had twice been a robbery victim. As the juror stated that the juror could be fair and impartial, the circumstances did not require the trial court to strike the prospective juror for cause, and the defendant did not demonstrate that the trial court would have struck the prospective juror had counsel so moved. Crane v. State, 294 Ga. App. 321, 670 S.E.2d 123, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1178 (2008).

Nature and Cause of Accusation

Statutes should sufficiently warn of proscribed conduct. — So as not to be vague, indefinite and uncertain so that U.S. Const., amend. 6 is violated, the language of a statute should convey sufficiently definite warning as to the proscribed conduct when measured by common understanding and practices. United States v. Fabro, Inc., 206 F. Supp. 523, 1962 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3766 (M.D. Ga. 1962).

U.S. Const., amend. 6 provides that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation. Sutton v. United States, 157 F.2d 661, 1946 U.S. App. LEXIS 2766 (5th Cir. 1946); United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15556 (5th Cir. 1979).

Validity of an indictment to be determined by reading it as a whole. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15556 (5th Cir. 1979).

Trial court did not err by denying a defendant's motion to quash an indictment, based on Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000), and Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002), because the face of the indictment did not contain the statutory aggravators for the death penalty; the state was not required to list the statutory aggravators in the indictment. Thomason v. State, 281 Ga. 429, 637 S.E.2d 639, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 927 (2006).

Whether an indictment sufficiently charges a crime is question of law, not of fact. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15556 (5th Cir. 1979).

Where the language of the indictment did not track the exact language of the assault statute, but did allege that the defendant "maliciously" struck the victim, it properly alleged the necessary element of intent since, given the circumstances of the case whereby the victim did not see the defendant strike the victim, it would have been difficult to conclude that the victim was placed in reasonable apprehension of being injured violently. Gamble v. State, 235 Ga. App. 777, 510 S.E.2d 69, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1558 (1998), cert. denied, No. S99C0524, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 339 (Ga. Apr. 9, 1999).

Indictments are read for their clear meaning, and convictions will not be reversed because of minor deficiencies which do not prejudice the accused. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15556 (5th Cir. 1979).

Sufficiency of an indictment is to be tested by practical rather than technical considerations, and the test of sufficiency is not whether the indictment could have been more artfully or precisely drawn, but whether it states the elements of the offense intended to be charged and adequately apprises the defendant of that which the defendant must be prepared to meet. United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15556 (5th Cir. 1979).

Criteria for testing sufficiency of indictment. — The two criteria by which the sufficiency of an indictment is to be tested are whether the facts stated show the essential elements of the offense and whether the facts alleged are sufficient to permit the defendant to plead former jeopardy in a subsequent prosecution. Sutton v. United States, 157 F.2d 661, 1946 U.S. App. LEXIS 2766 (5th Cir. 1946); Marshall v. State, 127 Ga. App. 805, 195 S.E.2d 469, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1024 (1972); Calley v. Callaway, 519 F.2d 184,

Nature and Cause of Accusation (Cont'd)

1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 911, 96 S. Ct. 1505, 47 L. Ed. 2d 760, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 851 (1976); United States v. Contris, 592 F.2d 893, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15556 (5th Cir. 1979).

Introduction of a nontestifying joint offender's confession to show the defendant's involvement in the crimes violates the defendant's constitutional right to confrontation. Brooks v. State, 271 Ga. 698, 523 S.E.2d 866, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 960 (1999).

Use in indictment of trade name which does not designate individual nor import a corporation. — An indictment containing a trade name which does not designate an individual nor import a corporation is not void where it satisfies the requisites of informing the defendant with reasonable certainty of the nature of the accusation for defense purposes and does not subject defendant to possibility of double jeopardy, particularly where the trade name is unique to the area and the accused's dealings have been in such trade name. Marshall v. State, 127 Ga. App. 805, 195 S.E.2d 469, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1024 (1972).

Effect of error in indictment as to date of offense. — A defendant is not deprived of any constitutional right by reason of the fact that the indictment charged one date, whereas the crime actually occurred shortly before midnight on the date before, where no alibi evidence is offered, nor any continuance requested on the ground of surprise that the evidence showed the commission of the crime on a date different from that shown in the indictment, and that additional time would be needed to procure alibi testimony to account for the appellant's whereabouts on that date. Carmichael v. State, 228 Ga. 834, 188 S.E.2d 495, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 926 (1972).

Omission of the word "criminal" in a notice of contempt proceeding is not fatal where the notice fully describes the conduct charged, where there is no showing that the contemnor is prejudiced by the failure to clearly denominate the nature of the contempt proceeding, and where the contemnor is accorded all rights due a defendant in a criminal contempt proceeding. Schiselman v. Trust Co. Bank, 246 Ga. 274, 271 S.E.2d 183, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1078 (1980).

Contempt motion seeking other sanctions and relief "as may be appropriate". — Where a person is on notice that the person is being tried for contempt and the movant seeks such other sanctions as are appropriate to ensure the enforcement and the observance of the court's order or seeks such other relief as may be appropriate, the contemnor is on notice that the proceeding is both civil and criminal in nature and that criminal sanctions may be imposed in an appropriate case. Schiselman v. Trust Co. Bank, 246 Ga. 274, 271 S.E.2d 183, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1078 (1980).

Purpose of commitment hearing. — The purpose of a commitment hearing is simply to determine whether there is probable cause to believe the accused guilty of the crime charged, and if so, to bind the accused over for indictment by the grand jury. Douglas v. State, 132 Ga. App. 694, 209 S.E.2d 114, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1790 (1974).

Hearing unnecessary once indictment returned. — Once an indictment has been returned, the necessity for a commitment hearing has been eliminated. Douglas v. State, 132 Ga. App. 694, 209 S.E.2d 114, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1790 (1974).

Holding of a commitment hearing is not a requisite to a trial for commission of a felony. Douglas v. State, 132 Ga. App. 694, 209 S.E.2d 114, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1790 (1974).

When failure to hold hearing harmless. — Since the purpose of the commitment hearing is to determine whether there is probable cause to hold the accused for trial, the subsequent indictment, trial and conviction of the accused render the omission of the hearing harmless. Douglas v. State, 132 Ga. App. 694, 209 S.E.2d 114, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1790 (1974).

Alleged loss of discovery occasioned by the failure to conduct a commitment hearing is not a legally recognizable basis for reversal. Williams v.

State, 157 Ga. App. 168, 276 S.E.2d 852, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1756 (1981).

Criminal Procedure Discovery Act constitutional. — Pretrial discovery provisions of the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act (O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq.) do not implicate or infringe upon the confrontation clause that guarantees only the right to confront and cross-examine those individuals called to testify against a defendant at trial. State v. Lucious, 271 Ga. 361, 518 S.E.2d 677, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 587 (1999).

Confrontation of Witnesses

Rights guaranteed to defendant. — The confrontation clause of U.S. Const., amend. 6, as applicable to the states through the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, guarantees the defendant in a criminal trial both the general right to cross-examine witnesses against the defendant and the more specific right to cross-examine a key state's witness concerning pending criminal charges against the witness. Hines v. State, 249 Ga. 257, 290 S.E.2d 911, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1133 (1982); Byrd v. State, 262 Ga. 426, 420 S.E.2d 748, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 770 (1992); Beam v. State, 265 Ga. 853, 463 S.E.2d 347, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 891 (1995).

The state has no right to ask leading questions of a co-indictee who has refused to testify, since such questioning is tantamount to the state testifying on behalf of a recalcitrant witness and serves to abrogate a defendant's fundamental right to confront, question and secure answers from the defendant's accusers. Alexander v. State, 236 Ga. App. 142, 511 S.E.2d 249, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 77 (1999).

Where deceased murder victim's hearsay statements were not remotely similar to prior testimony at a preliminary hearing or police interrogation, because they were made in a conversation with a friend, before the commission of any crime, and without any reasonable expectation that they would be used at a later trial, the hearsay statements were not "testimonial," and indicia of reliability other than the opportunity for cross-examination were constitutionally permissible considerations in applying the necessity exception to Georgia's hearsay rule. Demons v. State, 277 Ga. 724, 595 S.E.2d 76, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 274 (2004).

Confrontation in a criminal trial really means the right to ask questions and secure answers from the witness confronted. Lingerfelt v. State, 235 Ga. 139, 218 S.E.2d 752, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 806 (1975).

No confrontation violation when statements not testimonial. — Admission of statements that the victim made to a police investigator regarding the victim's fear of the defendant on the day that the victim was murdered did not violate the defendant's right to confrontation because the statements were not testimonial when the victim was not reporting a crime to the police officer or building a case against the defendant, the victim was merely seeking advice from a knowledgeable friend, who happened to be a police officer. Breedlove v. State, 291 Ga. 249, 728 S.E.2d 643, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 579 (2012).

Statement by a deceased accomplice to a witness regarding the accomplice's cell phone service was properly admitted into evidence because the statement was not testimonial in nature and, thus, not barred by the Confrontation Clause. Marchman v. State, 299 Ga. 534, 787 S.E.2d 734, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 421 (2016).

Co-defendant's jailhouse statements to a fellow inmate to get advice about the co-defendant's false alibi did not violate the defendant's right to confrontation because the statements were not made to establish evidence for use in a future prosecution. Hampton v. State, 308 Ga. 797, 843 S.E.2d 542, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 356 (2020).

Admission of a murder victim's and the victim's fiancée's statements to police as the victim lay bleeding in the street after a shooting was not prohibited by the Confrontation Clause, although the victim died, because the statements were non-testimonial in that the statements were not intended to prove a past fact but to describe current circumstances that required immediate police action. The statements were admissible under the excited utterance and present sense impression exceptions to the hearsay rule. Varner v.

Confrontation of Witnesses (Cont'd)

State, 306 Ga. 726, 832 S.E.2d 792, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 593 (2019).

Co-defendant's statement not offered for the truth.— Defendant's confrontation clause challenge to a co-defendant's affidavit that was found in his cell was rejected because the co-defendant's attempt to establish an alibi for himself in the affidavit was not presented to show its truth but rather to show that the co-defendant was shifting his story and creating a new narrative to exculpate himself. Campbell v. State, 320 Ga. 333, 907 S.E.2d 871, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 247 (2024).

Right is to confront witnesses, not accuser.— The defendant's constitutional right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 is the right to be confronted with the witnesses testifying against the defendant, not by the accuser, which in criminal cases, is the state or the people. Brown v. State, 147 Ga. App. 638, 249 S.E.2d 689, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 2878 (1978).

Applicability of confrontation of witnesses provision.— When a buyer claiming that the buyer was fraudulently sold real estate argued, on appeal, that the trial court's summary dismissal of the buyer's complaint under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-12(b)(6) and 9-11-56 deprived the buyer of the right to confront witnesses, this claim had no merit because the right to confront witnesses only applied to criminal proceedings. Crane v. Samples, 267 Ga. App. 895, 600 S.E.2d 624, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 680 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1719, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 781 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1719, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 789 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2004).

Admission of witness's prior statements to police identifying defendant as the shooter of a victim did not violate defendant's right to confront the witnesses under the sixth amendment; despite the fact that the witnesses claimed at trial that they did not recall many of the facts surrounding the incident and did not identify defendant as the shooter at trial, defendant was not precluded from cross-examining them. Robinson v. State, 271 Ga. App. 584, 610 S.E.2d 194, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 109 (2005).

Because a life estate claimant filed a civil action which resulted in summary judgment against the claimant, the argument on appeal that the claimant's sixth amendment confrontation rights were violated lacked merit, as the sixth amendment only applied to criminal actions. Crane v. Poteat, 275 Ga. App. 669, 621 S.E.2d 501, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1000 (2005), cert. denied, No. S06C0260, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 180 (Ga. Feb. 27, 2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 830, 127 S. Ct. 52, 166 L. Ed. 2d 51, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 5965 (2006).

Because a hearsay statement made by the defendant's late sibling to the defendant's spouse about the defendant's conduct and statements made immediately after the shooting at issue was not testimonial in nature, it did not implicate the confrontation clause of the federal and state constitution. Holton v. State, 280 Ga. 843, 632 S.E.2d 90, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 450, cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1078, 127 S. Ct. 737, 166 L. Ed. 2d 563, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 9266 (2006).

Because a preliminary hearing was ordinarily a much less searching exploration into the merits of a case than a trial, simply because its function was the more limited one of determining whether probable cause exists to hold the accused for trial, an accused did not have a constitutional right to confrontation, as said right applied only to trials. Gresham v. Edwards, 281 Ga. 881, 644 S.E.2d 122, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 303 (2007), overruled in part, Brown v. Crawford, 289 Ga. 722, 715 S.E.2d 132, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 658 (2011).

Statements a deceased witness made to police at a murder scene were to assist the police in an ongoing emergency and were nontestimonial; therefore, the confrontation clause was not applicable. Although 20 minutes had elapsed between the witness's discovery of the body and the statements to police, the statements were admissible under the excited utterances exception to the hearsay rule, O.C.G.A. § 24-8-803(2), because the witness was still traumatized. McCord v. State, 305 Ga. 318, 825 S.E.2d 122, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 141 (2019).

No plain error from non-testifying witnesses.— Defendant failed to show that the trial court plainly erred and violated the defendant's confrontation clause rights by admitting testimony that police got information critical to their investigation from two non-testifying witnesses because the defendant did not show that the alleged error in admitting testimony implying statements from non-testifying witnesses was clear and obvious under controlling precedent. Burke v. State, 320 Ga. 706, 911 S.E.2d 575, 2025 Ga. LEXIS 16 (2025).

Confrontation clause is not offended by testimony from physician.— Defendant's right of confrontation was not violated when a physician was allowed to testify about the testing and evaluation of defendant conducted by two resident trainees and was then permitted to testify that defendant did not exhibit signs of brain damage or disorder because the physician used the facts contained in the trainees' testing and evaluation, including factual data they collected, to inform his expert opinion as to whether defendant had malingered on the state's tests and to inform his opinions regarding the defendant's mental conditions. Moody v. State, 316 Ga. 490, 888 S.E.2d 109, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2023), cert. denied, 144 S. Ct. 697, 217 L. Ed. 2d 391, 2024 U.S. LEXIS 490 (2024).

Confrontation Clause does not apply to inanimate things.— Trial court did not violate the defendant's right to confront the defendant's accusers by admitting the shell casing recovered from the back seat of the silver car in the driveway that ballistics testing showed was fired from the gun used to shoot the victim because the Confrontation Clause applied only to testimonial statements, not to inanimate things. Walker v. State, 308 Ga. 749, 843 S.E.2d 561, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 354 (2020), overruled in part, Johnson v. State, 315 Ga. 876, 885 S.E.2d 725, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 62 (2023).

Allowing testimony by video-conference not plain error.— Defendant failed to show plain error in allowing the medical examiner to testify remotely via video-conference, alleging deprivation of the right to a face-to-face confrontation in violation of the defendant's right to confrontation, because the record showed that the error alleged was affirmatively waived when the defendant consented to the medical examiner's remote testimony. Holloway v. State, 320 Ga. 668, 911 S.E.2d 554, 2025 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2025).

Video of drug transaction with no audio did not contain testimonial statements.— Video recording presumed to have no discernible audio, which depicted a now-deceased confidential informant purchasing a small bag of suspected methamphetamine from the defendant, did not contain testimonial statements prohibited by the Confrontation Clause because the recording, which depicted a person handing money to another and taking possession of a physical object in return, did not depict any nonverbal statements and was not intended to be an assertion. State v. Gilmore, 312 Ga. 289, 862 S.E.2d 499, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 592 (2021).

O.C.G.A. § 16-5-9 violated confrontation right.— O.C.G.A. § 16-15-9 was declared unconstitutional on the statute's face under the Sixth Amendment's confrontation clause to the extent that the statute authorized the admission of the convictions of non-testifying non-parties as evidence of a criminal street gang; the exclusion of other alleged gang members' convictions in the defendant's trial was upheld. State v. Jefferson, 302 Ga. 435, 807 S.E.2d 387, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 931 (2017).

No right to confront co-defendants during their plea hearings.— Defendant's constitutional right to confront and cross-examine the co-defendants was not violated because the co-defendants were giving testimony in their own plea colloquies; the defendant did not have the right to confront the co-defendants during their plea hearings; and the defendant was advised that the defendant would have the right to confront and cross-examine the co-defendants during the defendant's trial. Houston v. State, 302 Ga. 35, 805 S.E.2d 34, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 777 (2017), overruled in part, Collier v. State, 307 Ga. 363, 834 S.E.2d 769, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 708 (2019).

Introduction of extrinsic evidence that did not raise inference of defendant's innocence.— When the defendant was convicted of malice murder and other crimes in the shooting death of a 13-month-old child and the shooting of the child's mother, the defendant's rights to confront the witnesses against the defendant and to present a defense were not violated by barring the defendant from introducing extrinsic evidence about the parents' history of addiction and family violence because the extrinsic evidence would have cast only a bare suspicion on the child's parents or raised a conjectural inference that one or both of them might be the guilty parties; and the evidence would not have raised a reasonable inference that the defendant was innocent. Elkins v. State, 306 Ga. 351, 830 S.E.2d 217, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 451 (2019).

Limited scope to relevant evidence.

— The confrontation clause does not confer upon criminal defendants a right to impeach a witness for an out-of-court statement never introduced into evidence. Jones v. Goodwin, 982 F.2d 464, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 847 (11th Cir. 1993).

The Sixth Amendment's confrontation clause allows for appropriate limitations on defendant's right to inquire into an adverse witness's potential bias. Trial courts have considerable latitude to reasonably limit such cross-examination out of concerns about harassment, prejudice, confusion of the issues, witness safety, or questioning that is repetitive or only marginally relevant. Hewitt v. State, 277 Ga. 327, 588 S.E.2d 722, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 955 (2003).

With regard to a defendant's trial and ultimate conviction on charges of malice murder, armed robbery, and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in limiting the scope of the defendant's cross-examination of the testifying victims regarding the immigration status of the victims; the immigration status of the victims was not an issue relevant to the matter being tried, namely whether the defendant committed the crimes charged. Junior v. State, 282 Ga. 689, 653 S.E.2d 481, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 853 (2007).

Purpose. — The mission of the confrontation clause is to advance a practical concern for the accuracy of the truth-determining process in criminal trials by assuring that the trier of fact has a satisfactory basis for evaluating the truth of a statement. Dutton v. Evans, 400 U.S. 74, 91 S. Ct. 210, 27 L. Ed. 2d 213, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 2 (1970).

The accused's right to confront the witnesses against the accused is essential for three basic reasons: (1) it ensures that the witness will give statements under oath, thus impressing the witness with the seriousness of the matter and guarding against the lie by the possibility of a penalty for perjury; (2) it forces the witness to submit to cross-examination, the greatest legal engine ever invented for the discovery of truth; and (3) it permits the jury that is to decide the defendant's fate to observe the demeanor of the witness in making the statement, thus aiding the jury in assessing the witness's credibility. Harrell v. State, 241 Ga. 181, 243 S.E.2d 890, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 915 (1978).

The exposure of a witness's motivation in testifying is a proper and important function of the constitutionally protected right of cross-examination. Hines v. State, 249 Ga. 257, 290 S.E.2d 911, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1133 (1982).

Main and essential purpose of confrontation is to provide the opportunity for cross-examination. Hawkins v. State, 175 Ga. App. 606, 333 S.E.2d 870, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2165 (1985).

Confrontation rights are personal to the accused. State v. Phillips, 247 Ga. 246, 275 S.E.2d 323, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 669 (1981).

Right is fundamental and obligatory on the states. — Right of an accused under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to confront the witnesses against the defendant is a fundamental right made obligatory on the states by U.S. Const., amend. 14. Dutton v. Evans, 400 U.S. 74, 91 S. Ct. 210, 27 L. Ed. 2d 213, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 2 (1970); Lingerfelt v. State, 235 Ga. 139, 218 S.E.2d 752, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 806 (1975); Park v. Huff, 506 F.2d 849, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16511 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 824, 96 S. Ct. 38, 46 L. Ed. 2d 40, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 2328 (1975).

Government need not immunize

witnesses for defense. — The government has no duty under the sixth amendment or otherwise to immunize witnesses for the benefit of the defense. Rather, the government's power to grant immunity is a discretionary matter which a defendant has no right to subject to judicial review. United States v. Georgia Waste Sys., 731 F.2d 1580, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 22534 (11th Cir. 1984).

Appearance of immunized witness. — Defendants were not deprived of their right to effective cross-examination on the basis of the state's creation of an "unfavorable inference" through the appearance on the witness stand of a witness who had been granted immunity pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-9-28(a) and who refused to testify. Willard v. State, 244 Ga. App. 469, 535 S.E.2d 820, 2000 Ga. App. LEXIS 743 (2000).

Although a trial court erred in allowing the prosecution, in the presence of the jury, to propound a series of leading questions to a murder and armed robbery co-indictee who remained mute even though the co-indictee was granted immunity, the error was harmless in light of the testimony from three eyewitnesses and other direct and circumstantial evidence; in light of the evidence and the fact that the prosecutor's questioning itself was not evidence and the fact that it added nothing of material value to the evidence properly presented, the state carried its burden of showing beyond a reasonable doubt that the error did not contribute to the verdict against the defendant. Horne v. State, 281 Ga. 799, 642 S.E.2d 659, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 240 (2007).

Defendant must see witnesses testify. — When a defendant complained that the trial court did not allow defendant to sit where defendant could view witnesses against defendant as they were testifying, it was error to hold that defendant's right to confrontation did not require that defendant be able to see witnesses as they testified. Richardson v. State, 276 Ga. 639, 581 S.E.2d 528, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 544 (2003).

Defendant has no right to appear before grand jury. — A court does not err in refusing to allow the defendant or defense counsel to appear before the grand jury to present evidence and to cross-examine witnesses. The defendant is not on trial at this stage of the proceedings and therefore this refusal denies the defendant neither the right of confrontation, nor equal protection of the laws. Jackson v. State, 225 Ga. 790, 171 S.E.2d 501, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 647 (1969), rev'd, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S. Ct. 2726, 33 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1972).

Exclusion of defendant from evidentiary hearing. — Defendant's exclusion from an evidentiary hearing on a motion for new trial did not violate defendant's right to confrontation or due process. United States v. Boyd, 131 F.3d 951, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 35641 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 892, 119 S. Ct. 211, 142 L. Ed. 2d 173, 1998 U.S. LEXIS 5923 (1998).

The right to confrontation at a parole revocation hearing is less stringent than the sixth amendment's confrontation guarantee in a criminal trial. Evidence that would violate the sixth amendment or would be inadmissible hearsay if presented at a criminal trial may, in proper circumstances, be considered at a parole or probation revocation hearing without violating the due process right to confrontation. Williams v. Lawrence, 273 Ga. 295, 540 S.E.2d 599, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 37 (2001).

Privilege against self-incrimination may not be overridden by the right of confrontation. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d 819, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20902 (5th Cir. 1981).

Remedy where confrontation right must yield to privilege against self-incrimination. — If a witness validly claims the privilege against self-incrimination, the defendant's only relief is a motion to strike that portion of the direct testimony with regard to which the confrontation right is lost. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d 819, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20902 (5th Cir. 1981).

No right to pretrial disclosure. — The confrontation clause only protects a defendant's trial rights, and does not compel the pretrial production of information that might be useful in preparing for trial. Aguilar v. State, 202 Ga. App. 62, 413 S.E.2d 245, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1656 (1991).

Confrontation of Witnesses (Cont'd)

State's witness not required to submit to a pre-trial interview. — The state may not deny defendant access to a witness material to the defense, but a witness cannot be compelled to submit to a pre-trial interview. Sosebee v. State, 190 Ga. App. 746, 380 S.E.2d 464, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 411, cert. denied, 493 U.S. 933, 110 S. Ct. 323, 107 L. Ed. 2d 313, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 5002 (1989).

When the witness is a child, it is permissible for the legal custodian to decide whether the child will be made available to defense counsel for a pre-trial interview. Kelly v. State, 197 Ga. App. 811, 399 S.E.2d 568, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1480 (1990).

Right of cross-examination is included in the right of a criminal defendant to confront the witnesses against the defendant. Lingerfelt v. State, 235 Ga. 139, 218 S.E.2d 752, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 806 (1975).

Harmless error in admission of codefendant's statement. — Although the trial court erred by admitting a codefendant's statement to police, that error was harmless because the statement was cumulative of other properly admitted evidence; the defendant's own taped statement established the same set of facts set forth in the codefendant's statement, and the defendant admitted to exchanging angry words with the victim and to shooting the victim. Jackson v. State, 291 Ga. 22, 727 S.E.2d 106, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 365 (2012).

Codefendant's trial should have been severed for exculpatory statements. — Trial court erred in denying a codefendant's motion to sever the trial from the defendant's trial because the codefendant was not allowed to introduce the exculpatory portions of the statements that explained the excerpted admissions introduced by the state, which supported the codefendant's antagonistic defense that the codefendant was present at the robberies due to coercion by the defendant. To avoid potential Bruton issues, the state introduced only those portions of the codefendant's 9-1-1 calls or custodial statements made establishing that the codefendant was at the scene of two robberies, that the codefendant's vehicles were used, and that the codefendant sent police to a motel room to investigate the robberies, but refused the additional portions of the statements that tended to support the codefendant's defense that the codefendant was coerced into participating in the crimes. Bowe v. State, 288 Ga. App. 376, 654 S.E.2d 196, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 1202 (2007), cert. dismissed, No. S08C0548, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 318 (Ga. Mar. 31, 2008).

Although the admission of a victim's statements to a deputy violated the defendant's sixth amendment rights as the defendant was not able to cross-examine the victim, the error was harmless as to the defendant's aggravated assault and battery convictions in light of the photographs of the victim's injuries and the defendant's admission that the defendant grabbed the victim around the neck and that the defendant might have hit the victim in the face. Miller v. State, 273 Ga. App. 761, 615 S.E.2d 843, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 612 (2005).

Admission of a victim's statements to a deputy violated the defendant's sixth amendment rights as the defendant was not able to cross-examine the victim; as the victim's statements were the only real evidence supporting the terroristic threats and obstructing a person making an emergency call convictions, those convictions were reversed. Miller v. State, 273 Ga. App. 761, 615 S.E.2d 843, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 612 (2005).

Right of cross-examination inherent in right of confrontation. — Inherent in the right of confrontation, and in the compulsory process concomitant therewith, is the right to cross-examine the witnesses against the accused. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Defendant should have been allowed to impeach the credibility of a prosecution witness by cross-examination directed at possible bias in favor of the state resulting from the witness's probationary status as a juvenile delinquent, notwithstanding that such impeachment would conflict with the state's asserted interest in preserving the confidentiality of juvenile delinquency proceedings. Since defendant was denied the sixth amendment right of confrontation, defendant was entitled to a new trial. Mangum v. State, 274 Ga. 573, 555 S.E.2d 451, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 897 (2001).

Trial court did not plainly err in granting the state's motion to exclude evidence of the victim's drug dealing and drug use as the jury heard testimony from multiple witnesses and the defendant that the victim tended toward violence and frequently directed that violence at the defendant; and, whether the victim's drug use exacerbated such violence would be of marginal value to a jury that was aware of the victim's violence toward the defendant. Thus, the trial court did not violate the defendant's right to present a full and fair defense by excluding evidence of the victim's drug use and related criminal history. Martin v. State, 306 Ga. 747, 833 S.E.2d 122, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 604 (2019).

Former jurors as witnesses. — Testimony, in the defendant's second murder trial, given by two witnesses who had been jurors in the defendant's first murder trial, that the jurors heard the defendant make an admission of guilt while exiting the courtroom during the first trial, did not offend the confrontation clause; the trial court did not limit or restrict the defendant in cross-examination of the witnesses in any way, and the testimony did not suggest that there was a prior trial on the merits or that the witnesses had participated in such a trial. Slakman v. State, 280 Ga. 837, 632 S.E.2d 378, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 454 (2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1218, 127 S. Ct. 1273, 167 L. Ed. 2d 95, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2249 (2007).

Restriction of cross-examination. — The trial court did not impermissibly restrict cross-examination of a witness where the jury heard counsel's direct question on whether the witness's testimony at trial was related to the pending charges against the witness and barring inquiry into the nature of the pending charges did not impair the defense from providing the jury with sufficient information on the witness's motives and biases. Watkins v. State, 276 Ga. 578, 581 S.E.2d 23, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 486 (2003).

Because a witness had no specific bias and the witness's history of past speeding tickets was irrelevant, the trial court did not abuse its discretion by restricting defendant's cross-examination of the witness. Brittian v. State, 274 Ga. App. 863, 619 S.E.2d 376, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 851 (2005).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by refusing to allow any cross-examination of an investigator as to that part of the defendant's custodial statement in which the defendant identified a codefendant as the individual to whom the defendant rented a panel van used as a methamphetamine lab. Inasmuch as the defendant did not testify, the admission of the defendant's custodial statement implicating the codefendant was barred by Bruton. Boone v. State, 293 Ga. App. 654, 667 S.E.2d 880, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1041 (2008).

Trial court did not violate the appellant's confrontation rights by preventing cross-examination of a witness about unrelated pending felony charges as the record showed no such violation given the trial court's ruling declining to prohibit the appellant from asking any questions about the pending charges, and the questions that defense counsel and the prosecutor then asked about those charges. Carston v. State, 310 Ga. 797, 854 S.E.2d 684, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 19 (2021).

Restriction of cross-examination was not harmless error. — Witness who was under commitment to the Department of Juvenile Justice was subject to the allegation that the witness was shading testimony in favor of the state; the trial court's restriction of defendant's cross-examination of two state's witnesses was not a harmless error where the state's case relied primarily on these witnesses. Wright v. State, 279 Ga. 498, 614 S.E.2d 56, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 414 (2005).

Cross examination of surrogate medical examiner adequate. — Trial court did not err in allowing a surrogate medical examiner to testify about the post-mortem examination of the victim because under a plain error standard of review there was no Confrontation Clause violation since the complaining defendant was permitted to cross-examine the medical examiner. Kemp v. State, 303 Ga. 385, 810 S.E.2d 515, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 107 (2018).

Counsel adequately prepared defendant for cross examination. — Defendant failed to support the claim that trial counsel did not adequately prepare the defendant to be cross-examined at trial because counsel testified that counsel met with the defendant in jail and discussed what the defendant was going to say on the stand and how to deal with “troublesome areas”; the defendant admitted that counsel told the defendant that the defendant would be cross-examined by the district attorney. Funes v. State, 289 Ga. 793, 716 S.E.2d 183, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 713 (2011).

To deny the accused the right to impugn a witness’s testimony is to deny the accused cross-examination, and the denial of the right to cross-examine denies the accused due process. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev’d, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

It is reversible error to preclude cross-examination of an accomplice regarding the deal the accomplice has reached with the state, including the disparity between the sentence the state will recommend in exchange for the accomplice’s cooperation and the sentence the accomplice would have received without that cooperation. Vogleson v. State, 250 Ga. App. 555, 552 S.E.2d 513, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 822 (2001), aff’d, 275 Ga. 637, 571 S.E.2d 752, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 967 (2002).

Cross-examination as to general propensity for truthfulness. — U.S. Const., amend. 6 does not guarantee the defendant a right to inquire on cross-examination into incidents that would impeach the witness’s general propensity for truthfulness. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d 819, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20902 (5th Cir. 1981).

Right to confrontation not violated by limiting cross-examination on former charges. — In a case in which defendant was on trial for, inter alia, an aggravated assault against the girlfriend of defendant’s friend and the malice murder of another resident of the friend’s home, the trial court did not err or violate defendant’s sixth amendment right of confrontation by preventing defendant from cross-examining the victim about a warrant for the victim’s arrest, which, although outstanding at the time of the murder, was no longer pending at the time of trial, as the charge was no longer relevant to show the victim’s possible bias. George v. State, 276 Ga. 564, 580 S.E.2d 238, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 367 (2003).

In the defendant’s murder trial, the trial court did not err in excluding an eyewitness’s first offender plea to forgery because the eyewitness had completed the eyewitness’s probation and been discharged; even if a first offender plea was probative of bias in favor of the state, the defendant made no proffer explaining a relationship between the witness’s prior discharge and the eyewitness’s testimony in the defendant’s case. Jones v. State, 305 Ga. 653, 827 S.E.2d 254, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 235 (2019).

Indictment not competent method for impeaching a witness. — The trial court did not err when it refused to allow an indictment against the victim for a crime allegedly committed subsequent to the crime at issue to go to the jury room with the rest of the exhibits since an indictment generally is not a competent method for impeaching a witness. Medina v. State, 247 Ga. App. 821, 545 S.E.2d 366, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 131 (2001), cert. denied, No. S01C0832, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 563 (Ga. June 25, 2001).

“Forgetful witness.” — The sixth amendment is satisfied if a defendant is given the opportunity to cross-examine a forgetful witness about the witness’s bias, the witness’s lack of care and attentiveness, and even the very fact that the witness has a bad memory. Brown v. State, 266 Ga. 723, 470 S.E.2d 652, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 246 (1996).

Prior thorough cross-examination of a witness unavailable at a trial adequately satisfies the confrontation requirement of U.S. Const., amend. 6. United States v. Mobley, 421 F.2d 345, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 11182 (5th Cir. 1970).

Defendant's right to cross-examine a witness at trial was not abridged where the witness testified at the defendant's preliminary hearing, but was subsequently killed and unavailable to testify at the defendant's trial. The record showed that the defense counsel extensively cross-examined the witness at the preliminary hearing with regard to the issue of identification. Hosick v. State, 262 Ga. 432, 421 S.E.2d 65, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 776 (1992).

Although the defendant's opportunity to cross-examine a witness who later died was not ideal, given that the defendant had only six days' notice of the hearing, sufficient opportunity to cross-examine the witness was afforded, and any lack of cross-examination was the result of a waiver of that opportunity; thus, the witness's deposition was properly admitted at trial. Rice v. State, 281 Ga. 149, 635 S.E.2d 707, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 600 (2006).

Waiver by earlier guilty plea. — Officers who interviewed the defendant's earlier victims within hours after they had been raped, properly testified from reports from these initial interviews, since the defendant, by pleading guilty to the earlier crimes, waived the earlier opportunity to cross-examine those victims. Moore v. State, 207 Ga. App. 412, 427 S.E.2d 779, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 200 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C0856, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 579 (Ga. Apr. 15, 1993).

Where defendant in a prosecution for rape and aggravated sodomy pled guilty to a prior charge of aggravated sexual assault, it was not error to admit evidence of the prior victim's testimony and the testimony of a witness who arrived shortly after that assault. McBee v. State, 228 Ga. App. 16, 491 S.E.2d 97, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 1026 (1997), cert. denied, No. S97C2024, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 227 (Ga. Feb. 6, 1998), overruled on other grounds, George v. State, 312 Ga. 801, 865 S.E.2d 127, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 679 (2021).

Because the defendant admitted the commission of armed robbery of a witness as described in the indictment, the defendant waived the right to challenge the witness's statements regarding the incident; therefore, the admission of the evidence did not violate the right of confrontation, and there was no error in admitting the statements under the necessity exception of O.C.G.A. § 24-3-1(b). Johnson v. State, 247 Ga. App. 157, 543 S.E.2d 439, 2000 Ga. App. LEXIS 1446 (2000), overruled in part, Owens v. State, 271 Ga. App. 365, 609 S.E.2d 670, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 44 (2005).

Confrontation claim waived. — Defendant waived any claim that the state's explanation of the absence of an expected witness infringed the defendant's sixth amendment right to confront the witnesses against the defendant as the defendant failed to raise the issue either at trial or on appeal. Clemons v. State, 265 Ga. App. 825, 595 S.E.2d 530, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 148 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1128, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 505 (Ga. June 7, 2004).

Because defendant objected to the introduction of the codefendant's statement to police on relevance and impermissible character evidence grounds but not based on a sixth amendment violation, defendant waived the argument that introduction of the statement deprived defendant of the sixth amendment confrontation right. Vincent v. State, 276 Ga. App. 415, 623 S.E.2d 255, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1265 (2005).

Defendant failed to make a contemporaneous objection on confrontation grounds to a state forensic biologist's testimony regarding the biologist's comparison of DNA profiles prepared by another lab to conclude that defendant's blood matched blood found at the scene of a murder and robbery; therefore, the error was not preserved for review. Moore v. State, 294 Ga. 682, 755 S.E.2d 703, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 169 (2014).

Rationale for exception. — An exception to the confrontation requirement is where a witness is unavailable and has given testimony at previous judicial proceedings against the same defendant, which witness was subject to cross-examination by that defendant. This exception has been explained as arising from necessity and has been justified on the ground that the right of cross-examination initially afforded provides substantial compliance with the purposes behind the confrontation requirement. United States v.

Mobley, 421 F.2d 345, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 11182 (5th Cir. 1970).

Where testimony of now-deceased witness from another trial is introduced, the rights of the accused to confrontation and the opportunity to have a jury assess the demeanor and credibility of a witness are satisfied where in a former trial, the witness was under oath and thoroughly examined on both direct and cross-examination. United States v. Mobley, 421 F.2d 345, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 11182 (5th Cir. 1970).

Because defendant had no opportunity to confront a deceased witness at an accomplice's trial, the trial court erred in admitting the witness's statements at defendant's trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-3-10; in addition, the statements were testimonial and violated defendant's confrontation rights. Willingham v. State, 279 Ga. 886, 622 S.E.2d 343, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 849 (2005).

Right to Confrontation

Out of court statement by deceased individual. — Trial court did not err in denying the state's motion in limine to admit a witness's out-of-court statement by reason of necessity based on the witness now being dead as admission of the witness's statement would violate the Confrontation Clause because the witness's statement was testimonial and the defendants had no prior opportunity for cross-examination — both of the qualities of a statement that entitled the defendants to confront the witness. State v. Stephens, 307 Ga. 615, 837 S.E.2d 830, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 12 (2020).

Admission of deceased witness's prior testimony. — Trial court did not abuse its discretion by admitting the deceased witness's prior testimony because the witness was unavailable and defendant had a prior opportunity for cross-examination during his first trial. Kennebrew v. State, 317 Ga. 324, 893 S.E.2d 96, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 199 (2023).

No prejudice due to deceased witness. — Trial court did not err by rejecting the defendant's claim that the state violated the defendant's sixth amendment right to a speedy trial because the length of delay between entry of the order granting the defendant a new trial and the start of the defendant's fourth trial was one year and seven months, the record did not suggest any deliberate delay to hamper the defense, the reasons for the delay were the filing of numerous defense motions and the recusal of two judges, and prejudice due to the death of a witness could not be attributed to the delay as the witness died 11 months before the new trial was granted. Palmer v. State, 318 Ga. 511, 899 S.E.2d 192, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 61 (2024).

Victim's non-testimonial statement.

— Admission of a hearsay statement made by a murder victim before the victim's death, in which, upon seeing the defendant at the victim's home, the victim said to the victim's friend, "What is he doing here? He's not supposed to know where we live," did not violate the defendant's right to confront the absent declarant because the statement in question was not a "testimonial" statement. Griffin v. State, 280 Ga. 683, 631 S.E.2d 671, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 455 (2006), superseded by statute as stated in Ash v. State, 312 Ga. 771, 865 S.E.2d 150, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 680 (2021).

In a malice murder prosecution, the victim's statement to a friend that the defendant said that the defendant was going to kill the victim was admissible under the necessity exception to the hearsay rule as the victim was unavailable and the statements had sufficient indicia of reliability. As the statements were not testimonial, there was no Confrontation Clause violation. Smith v. State, 284 Ga. 304, 667 S.E.2d 65, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 753 (2008).

Trial court properly admitted hearsay statements made by a murder victim to the victim's mother and to the victim's friend regarding prior physical abuse by the defendant in defendant's murder trial because none of the out-of-court statements by the victim recounted at trial were even arguably testimonial as the United States Supreme Court had used that term in the court's recent confrontation clause jurisprudence. Brown v. State, 288 Ga. 364, 703 S.E.2d 609, 2010 Ga.

Defendant's right to confrontation was not violated because an officer responded to the prior victim's 9-1-1 call within a few minutes and found the prior victim to still be "shaken up" from the prior victim's confrontation with the burglar, and the burglar, who had just left the scene armed with a knife, was still in the immediate vicinity. Thus, while the prior victim was no longer being immediately threatened, the armed perpetrator was still on the loose, and thus continued to pose a serious potential threat to the prior victim and the neighbors. When a court must determine whether the Confrontation Clause bars the admission of a statement at trial, the court should seek to ascertain, if possible, the primary purpose of the interrogation by objectively evaluating the statements and actions of the parties to the encounter in light of the circumstances in which the interrogation occurs. Philpot v. State, 309 Ga. App. 196, 709 S.E.2d 831, 2011 Ga. App. LEXIS 246 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1258, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 751 (Ga. Oct. 3, 2011).

Similar transaction hearing was sufficient even though, instead of calling a witness to testify, the state merely proffered a summary of a witness's testimony; the state introduced no hearsay evidence during trial, and the defendant had ample opportunity to cross-examine the similar transaction witness then. Ellis v. State, 282 Ga. App. 17, 637 S.E.2d 729, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1217 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0324, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 66 (Ga. Jan. 22, 2007), overruled in part, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Use of transcript from preliminary hearing where witness at hearing unavailable. — Where witness from preliminary hearing was not available at time of trial, having had escaped from prison, defendant's right of confrontation is not violated by admission of transcript of witness's testimony at defendant's preliminary hearing, at which defendant was represented by counsel and witness was cross-examined. Stidem v. State, 246 Ga. 637, 272 S.E.2d 338, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1232 (1980).

Admission of videotape of unavailable witness permitted. — Trial court's admission of part of a videotape involving the defendant's interview with a detective who was unavailable at trial, which the trial court earlier had said it would exclude, was not an abuse of discretion and did not violate the defendant's right to confrontation; the trial court admitted it because defense counsel "opened the door" to its admission by asking about it on direct examination, and any error in admitting it was harmless because the detective's comments about a theory that the spouse might have committed suicide were favorable to the defendant and any inference that the defendant shot the defendant's spouse was supported by other evidence. Rowe v. State, 276 Ga. 800, 582 S.E.2d 119, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 549 (2003).

Admission of a victim's videotaped statement did not violate the Confrontation Clause as defense counsel posed no questions after the victim testified about the video, only questioning the victim about other topics. Pierce v. State, 302 Ga. 389, 807 S.E.2d 425, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 940 (2017).

Admission of videotape harmless error. — Trial court's admission of the videotaped testimony of a witness who could not be located for defendant's criminal trial was a violation of the rights under the confrontation clause because it constituted impermissible testimonial evidence; however, the error was harmless because there was no reasonable probability that it contributed to the verdict, as the testimony was cumulative of other properly admitted evidence. Copprue v. State, 279 Ga. 771, 621 S.E.2d 457, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 723 (2005).

Admission of 9-1-1 call. — Defendant's motion in limine to exclude evidence of a 9-1-1 call and the defendant's motion for a directed verdict were properly denied as the 9-1-1 call was not testimonial since it was not premeditated and was made to prevent or stop a crime; under Georgia law, 9-1-1 statements were admissible as part of the res gestae or as an excited utterance and the confrontation clause and Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36 (2004), were inapplicable. Kimbrell v. State, 280 Ga.

In defendant's convictions on one count of simple assault and two counts of battery, trial court properly determined that audiotape of 9-1-1 call made by the victim was nontestimonial in nature as the caller advised that the caller had been hit, had a swollen face, was experiencing serious bleeding and the call was made with such immediacy after the attack that, upon the officer's arrival, the caller was scared and crying, and blood was running down the caller's chin, shirt, and pants; thus, trial court properly found that the call was nontestimonial in nature in that it was made to seek assistance in a situation involving immediate danger. Thompson v. State, 291 Ga. App. 355, 662 S.E.2d 135, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 446 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1547, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 710 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2008).

Allowing a jury to hear an audiotape of two 9-1-1 calls made by bystanders to report a shooting was proper because, inter alia, as the calls were made while the incident was ongoing, the perpetrator was at large, and the nature of the operator's questions were to assist the police in meeting an ongoing emergency, the statements were nontestimonial, and the confrontation clause was not implicated. Glover v. State, 285 Ga. 461, 678 S.E.2d 476, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 289 (2009).

Detective's recorded statements of interview with defendant. — Trial court did not err in admitting the detective's recorded statements from an interview with the defendant and by denying the defendant's motion for a mistrial because the detective's references to two witnesses who identified the defendant did not violate the Confrontation Clause as the detective's statements were not hearsay because the statements clearly were not meant to establish as true that others had implicated the defendant, but were simply a part of an interrogation technique as the detective's statements were clearly designed to convince the defendant to speak, rather than to provide the defendant — or the jury — true accounts of witness statements. Myrick v. State, 306 Ga. 894, 834 S.E.2d 542, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 669 (2019).

Admission of hearsay. — Because hearsay testimony was cumulative of other properly admitted evidence, its admission, even if erroneous, was harmless; thus, defendant's contention of a Crawford violation lacked merit. Buttram v. State, 280 Ga. 595, 631 S.E.2d 642, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 405 (2006).

The admission of an informant's testimony regarding knowledge of the defendant's participation in the victim's murder did not amount to inadmissible hearsay and did not violate the Confrontation Clause, as the hearsay was cumulative of admissible evidence adduced at trial and, in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt, there was no reasonable possibility that the confrontation violation contributed to the guilty verdict. Warren v. State, 283 Ga. 42, 656 S.E.2d 803, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 28 (2008).

Admission of testimonial statements. — Statements of the victim and the victim's friend were testimonial under Crawford and thus were inadmissible hearsay because the defendant had not had the prior opportunity to cross-examine the victim or the friend, who did not testify at trial. The primary purpose of the victim's identification of the defendant at the crime scene was to establish past facts with a view to future prosecution, and the friend was effectively being a witness against the defendant when the friend said that a knife was in the yard and that the defendant was the one who stabbed the victim. Cuyuch v. State, 284 Ga. 290, 667 S.E.2d 85, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 732 (2008), superseded by statute as stated in Rosser v. State, 308 Ga. 597, 842 S.E.2d 821, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2020).

Supreme court cautioned the trial court regarding hearsay statements of an alleged victim because the statements the alleged victim made to a police officer complaining of an alleged attack by the defendant were inadmissible if the defendant objected to them, and the affidavit testimony the alleged victim gave in connection with the victim's judicial complaint of domestic abuse was also hearsay, was testimonial in nature, and was inadmissible if objected to by the defendant; statements alleging that a criminal act has been committed that are made in response to a police officer's questions during a time when there is no longer an ongoing emergency are testimonial in nature, and it is a violation of the confrontation clause of the sixth amendment to admit hearsay accounts of them over a defendant's objection where the defendant has had no previous opportunity for cross-examination. Pope v. State, 286 Ga. 1, 685 S.E.2d 272, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 628 (2009).

Sixth amendment rights of the defendants to confront the witnesses against the defendants were violated when the trial court allowed a Florida judge to testify as to the contents of three petitions for temporary protective injunctions that were filed in the judge's court when two of the petitions were filed by the decedent before the decedent's death and one of the petitions was filed by one of the defendants. This constituted reversible error as to the defendant who was implicated in the petitions, but constituted harmless error as to the other defendant who was not mentioned in the petitions. Miller v. State, 289 Ga. 854, 717 S.E.2d 179, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 827 (2011).

Trial court erred in admitting testimony relating to the codefendant's initial, non-custodial statement to police on the day of the murder because the statement was testimonial in nature and the defendant had no opportunity to examine the codefendant. Colton v. State, 292 Ga. 509, 739 S.E.2d 380, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 199 (2013).

Counsel not ineffective for failing to object to nontestimonial statements. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the testimony of a former girlfriend of the first defendant and the first defendant's mother in which they recounted statements the first defendant made to them that implicated the second defendant because the statements did not violate the second defendant's right to confrontation as the statements were not testimonial in nature because the statements were not a product of interrogation by law enforcement officers during an investigation intended to produce evidence for a criminal prosecution. Haney v. State, 305 Ga. 785, 827 S.E.2d 843, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 322 (2019).

Questioning of witness about similar transactions allegedly involving defendant. — It violated the Sixth Amendment's confrontation clause to ask a witness about a statement that the witness had made that implicated the defendant in two similar-transaction robberies. Despite the fact that limiting instructions were given, the procedure placed before the jury the content of the witness's statement, allowing the jury to infer that since the defendant committed the other robberies with the witness, the defendant committed the one at issue; furthermore, the error was not harmless because the witness was the only person who could connect the defendant to the two previous armed robberies. Deloatch v. State, 296 Ga. App. 65, 673 S.E.2d 576, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 123 (2009).

Control of the cross-examination of a witness is to a great degree within the discretion of the trial court and will not be controlled unless abused. Eades v. State, 232 Ga. 735, 208 S.E.2d 791, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 1075 (1974).

Trial court did not err when it limited the cross-examination of one detective concerning the other detective's interview with the defendant about how the other detective formed opinions and impressions regarding the other detective's theory regarding how defendant's spouse was killed, as the defendant's sixth amendment right to cross-examine the detective was not abridged by the limitation since the defendant was trying to ask about matters that were beyond the detective's knowledge. Rowe v. State, 276 Ga. 800, 582 S.E.2d 119, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 549 (2003).

Defendant's cross-examination of an arresting officer was not unduly restricted when defendant was not allowed to ask the officer at trial if the officer's testimony at a suppression hearing satisfied the requirements for establishing the admissibility of the fruits of a pat-down search, as that legal determination was the province of the court, had previously been addressed by the court, and was not an issue for the jury. Mohamed v. State, 276 Ga. 706, 583 S.E.2d 9, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 604 (2003).

Because the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in regulating cross-examination by instructing defense counsel to be clear with counsel's question, the defendant's constitutional right of confrontation was not violated. Baker v. State, 293 Ga. 811, 750 S.E.2d 137, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 858 (2013).

Although it is better that cross-examination should be too free than too restricted, this right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination must be tempered and restricted so as not to infringe on privileged areas or wander into the realm of irrelevant testimony. Eades v. State, 232 Ga. 735, 208 S.E.2d 791, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 1075 (1974).

While the scope of cross-examination is within the discretion of the trial judge, this discretionary authority to limit cross-examination comes into play only after there has been permitted as a matter of right sufficient cross-examination to satisfy U.S. Const., amend. 6. United States v. Elliott, 571 F.2d 880, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 11547 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 953, 99 S. Ct. 349, 58 L. Ed. 2d 344, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 3715 (1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 953, 99 S. Ct. 349, 58 L. Ed. 2d 344 (1978).

Abuse of discretion in preventing all inquiry on subject. — While the extent of cross-examination is within the sound discretion of the trial court, cutting off all inquiry on a subject with respect to which the defense was entitled to a reasonable cross-examination is an abuse of discretion. Byrd v. State, 262 Ga. 426, 420 S.E.2d 748, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 770 (1992).

Limitation of cross-examination must not prejudice right to test truthfulness. — A defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to confront the witnesses against the defendant is not violated in all cases in which cross-examination is limited. The question in each case must finally be whether the defendant's inability to make the inquiry creates a substantial danger of prejudice by depriving the defendant of the ability to test the truth of the witness's direct testimony. If the defendant has, so much of the direct testimony as cannot be subjected to sufficient inquiry must be struck. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d

Confrontation clause is not offended when the defendant at trial waives objection to the use of prior sworn testimony of an inaccessible state witness and therefore cannot claim the waiver was error for the first time on appeal. Riley v. State, 237 Ga. 124, 226 S.E.2d 922, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1170 (1976), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023).

In a criminal trial with regard to a defendant's contention on appeal that a Crawford violation occurred as a result of the trial court refusing to sever the defendant's trial from the codefendant's trial, no reversible error was shown as the out-of-court statement at issue, namely that the codefendant called and said that the codefendant's vehicle had been used in an armed robbery, did not implicate the defendant as the state offered that evidence to show that the codefendant was involved, but that statement did not implicate the defendant's guilt. Further, on cross examination, the defendant's attorney asked the officer if that phone call directed police to the motel room where the defendant was found and arrested, which the officer answered in the affirmative, therefore, the defendant elicited the testimony and, likewise, two other complained of statements were either elicited by the defendant or never objected to at trial. Bowe v. State, 288 Ga. App. 376, 654 S.E.2d 196, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 1202 (2007), cert. dismissed, No. S08C0548, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 318 (Ga. Mar. 31, 2008).

Where a co-indictee's confession implicating the defendant in armed robberies was corroborated by a number of witnesses who positively identified the defendant as the perpetrator of each armed robbery, the defendant had the opportunity to challenge the reliability of the co-indictee's effort to implicate the defendant in the crimes through leading questions posed by defense counsel's cross-examination, and thus to the extent that the co-indictee's refusal to respond to questioning deprived the defendant of the constitutional right to confront the co-indictee, the constitutional violation was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt.

Alexander v. State, 236 Ga. App. 142, 511 S.E.2d 249, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 77 (1999).

Note-passing inmate was properly permitted to relate to the jury statements made by other inmates when they were discussing what to do about the possibility the victim was going to tell the authorities about their effort to escape as the co-conspiratorial statements were made during the pendency of the conspiracy and they were presumed to be sufficiently reliable to satisfy the confrontation clause's requirement of trustworthiness; the admission of the statements was not at odds with Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36 (2004), because statements admissible pursuant to the hearsay exception permitting the use of statements made in furtherance of a conspiracy were not testimonial. McKinney v. State, 281 Ga. 92, 635 S.E.2d 153, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 582 (2006).

Murder victim's statements to neighbors, paramedics, and an officer identifying the defendant as the shooter were nontestimonial as the statements were made while the incident was still ongoing and the perpetrator was at large. Thus, the confrontation clause was not implicated, and the admission of the statements under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-803), the res gestae exception to the hearsay rule, did not violate the defendant's sixth amendment rights. Thomas v. State, 284 Ga. 540, 668 S.E.2d 711, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 850 (2008).

Trial court did not err by admitting incriminating statements a codefendant made to witnesses because the codefendant's statements were made during the pendency of the conspiracy and were admissible against the defendant under the coconspirator exception to the hearsay rule, former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-801); the admission of the codefendant's statements to lay witnesses during the concealment phase of the conspiracy did not violate the confrontation clause because the codefendant's statements were not testimonial. Allen v. State, 288 Ga. 263, 702 S.E.2d 869, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 891 (2010), cert. denied, 563 U.S. 1038, 131 S.

Right to cross-examine witness as to recent arrest. — Even though the trial court erred in refusing to allow defendant to pursue the topic of the witness's recent arrest, the error was harmless where the witness otherwise was subjected to a thorough and sifting cross-examination. Garcia v. State, 267 Ga. 257, 477 S.E.2d 112, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 906 (1996).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion or deny the defendant the right of confrontation guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 6 by precluding the defendant from cross-examining a witness offered by the state regarding the facts underlying criminal charges that were pending against the witness, as there was no indication in the record that those underlying facts were relevant or would have exposed any bias or motive of the witness; even if the limitation on such cross-examination were erroneous, any error was harmless, as the witness did not implicate the defendant or otherwise show bias for the state, and the evidence of the defendant's guilt was overwhelming. Brown v. State, 276 Ga. 192, 576 S.E.2d 870, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 121 (2003).

Cross-examination with over-age convictions. — Based on the slight probative value of over-age convictions, the fact that former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-6-609) permits use of such convictions on a showing of specific facts and circumstances establishing the probative value of the particular conviction, and the fact that former § 24-9-84.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-6-609) does not preclude all inquiry on a subject with respect to which a defendant is entitled to a reasonable cross examination, that section is not unconstitutional as a violation of the confrontation clause. Hinton v. State, 280 Ga. 811, 631 S.E.2d 365, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 390 (2006).

Cross-examination as to agreement between witness and state. — There was no denial of due process or confrontation rights where the trial court ruled improper a question by defense counsel on cross-examination that presumed the existence of an unprovable “deal” between the state and the witness; the court did not preclude all inquiry on a subject with respect to which the defendant was entitled to reasonable cross-examination. Watkins v. State, 264 Ga. 657, 449 S.E.2d 834, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 898 (1994).

Where defendant failed to prove either that there had been a deal or that the witness had any expectation of a deal, the trial court did not impermissibly abridge defendant’s sixth amendment rights by limiting defendant’s cross-examination concerning charges against the witness. Wright v. State, 266 Ga. 887, 471 S.E.2d 883, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 485 (1996).

Defendant was denied the constitutional right to confrontation when a case agent was allowed to state that no deal had been reached with a confidential informant without being cross-examined; however, the error was not reversible because no prejudice was shown where the confidential informant testified at trial and was thoroughly cross-examined concerning the motives for testifying against defendant and where no evidence was presented regarding a deal with the confidential informant. Garrison v. State, 260 Ga. App. 788, 581 S.E.2d 357, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 489 (2003).

A defendant’s right to cross-examine an accomplice witness regarding parole was irrelevant on the question of the witness’s potential bias in testifying favorably for the state because there was no evidence of any deal between the witness and the state regarding parole. In addition, the authority to grant parole rested with the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, and not the office of the district attorney. Hewitt v. State, 277 Ga. 327, 588 S.E.2d 722, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 955 (2003).

Trial court violated the defendant’s sixth amendment right of confrontation because it granted the state’s motion in limine and restricted the defendant’s cross-examination of the defendant’s accomplice as to the accomplice motivation in testifying for the state, including the accomplice’s recommended sentence if the accomplice cooperated with the state and the accomplice’s sentence without that cooperation. The error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt, however, in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant’s guilt, even without the accomplice’s testimony, including a victim’s identification of the defendant as the person who robbed and abducted the victim, personal papers at the apartment where the victim was held belonged to the defendant and a first victim, and the recovery of the first victim’s jacket from the defendant’s friend’s home, in the location disclosed by the defendant. Thompson v. State, 266 Ga. App. 29, 596 S.E.2d 205, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 290 (2004).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in precluding the defendant from asking the defendant’s cousin, who was jointly indicted with the defendant and testified against the defendant, about the specific sentences the cousin would face if convicted because the cousin had no deal regarding the cousin’s charges or sentences with the state in exchange for testimony; the trial court permitted a sweeping cross-examination, limiting only questions about the specific sentences that the cousin could face, and the defendant was allowed to elicit that the cousin was charged with the same murder, the same aggravated assault, and the same attempted armed robbery as the defendant and that those charges were still pending. The defendant also cross-examined the cousin regarding whether the cousin hoped to gain favorable treatment on the charges due to the testimony, and in response, the cousin admitted several times that although there was no deal with the state, the cousin hoped the charges would be dismissed because of the cousin’s testimony, which was a benefit far greater than any sentence reduction. Howard v. State, 286 Ga. 222, 686 S.E.2d 764, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 729 (2009).

Trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion in prohibiting the defendant’s cross-examination of a witness regarding the witness’s first offender plea in order to show bias and a motive to testify favorable to the state because there was no evidence showing the connection between the witness’s first offender status and the witness’s desire to shade the witness’s testimony to curry favor with the state; the defendant had to present facts in addition to the existence of two first offender pleas to support the defendant's efforts to impeach the witness for bias. Sanders v. State, 290 Ga. 445, 721 S.E.2d 834, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2012).

Following a guilty verdict that two defendants participated in criminal street gang activity, the trial court erred in denying the defendants' motion for new trial under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963), based on the state's failure to disclose evidence of payments to the state's chief witness; the witness was the only witness to testify that one defendant was the shooter and that the defendant was a member of the gang. McClendon v. State, 347 Ga. App. 542, 820 S.E.2d 167, 2018 Ga. App. LEXIS 557 (2018).

Cross-examination as to potential bias of state's witness. — The sixth amendment does not afford the defendant in a criminal proceeding an absolutely unfettered right to cross-examine the state's witnesses as to their potential bias. Shaw v. State, 201 Ga. App. 456, 411 S.E.2d 537, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1436 (1991), overruled in part, Green v. State, 254 Ga. App. 881, 564 S.E.2d 731, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 414 (2002).

A trial court's restriction of the pursuit of cross examination as to the potential bias of a state's witness, even if erroneous, may yet be harmless. Shaw v. State, 201 Ga. App. 456, 411 S.E.2d 537, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1436 (1991), overruled in part, Green v. State, 254 Ga. App. 881, 564 S.E.2d 731, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 414 (2002).

Precluding a line of questioning by defense counsel purporting to show motive for false testimony on behalf of the government witness erroneously limited defendant's right to cross-examine guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment since the witness may have been motivated by an effort to prevent an investigation into the witness's child's arrest in another case. United States v. Lankford, 955 F.2d 1545, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 5256 (11th Cir. 1992).

Cross-examination of victim-witness's pending criminal charges was needed to inquire of any desire to influence their disposition by assisting the state in prosecution. Hurston v. State, 206 Ga. App. 570, 426 S.E.2d 196, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1694 (1992).

Although the trial court erred in refusing to allow the defense to cross-examine the defendant's friend concerning possible bias in favor of the state based on the friend's first-offender status, the error was harmless given the overwhelming evidence against defendant. Melson v. State, 263 Ga. App. 647, 588 S.E.2d 822, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1283 (2003).

Trial court erred by denying codefendants any chance to proffer evidence that the victim's friend was aware of the disparity in the sentence the friend received under a plea agreement and the sentence the friend would have received if the friend had been convicted of murder and by summarily excluding any evidence of the friend's parole because the disparity, eligibility for parole after 30 years of incarceration versus two years served before eligibility, could have provided the friend with bias in favor of or motivation to assist the state; however, the error was harmless because the defendant and the codefendants were allowed to extensively cross-examine the friend about potential bias flowing from the plea deal with the state. Manley v. State, 287 Ga. 338, 698 S.E.2d 301, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 317 (2010).

Because parole eligibility is not irrelevant to a witness's potential bias, to the extent that Hewitt v. State, 277 Ga. 327 (2003), Mikell v. State, 286 Ga. 434 (2010) or other cases which rely on them, can be read to state that a trial court will never err by prohibiting cross-examination on parole eligibility because it is irrelevant to the question of a witness's potential bias, they are hereby overruled. Manley v. State, 287 Ga. 338, 698 S.E.2d 301, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 317 (2010).

Confrontation of medical examiner.

— Trial court did not violate the defendant's right to confrontation when the court restricted the defendant's questioning of the medical examiner who conducted the victim's autopsy because evidence that the medical examiner was disciplined for telling an inappropriate joke was, at best, marginally relevant to the issue of the medical examiner's potential bias in favor of the state. Summerville

v. State, 320 Ga. 60, 907 S.E.2d 604, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 240 (2024).

Defendant's right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination of the state's key witness was not violated, where the trial court appropriately exercised its sound discretion to determine the extent of cross-examination when the questions left the area of the witness's belief of personal benefit and went to the fact underlying a pending charge against the witness. Baptiste v. State, 190 Ga. App. 451, 379 S.E.2d 165, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 276 (1989).

Government informant. — Where the accused makes a credible initial showing that the informant may have been mistaken as to the name of the person selling drugs to undercover police officers on the occasion in question, the police privilege against revealing the name of its informant must yield to a defendant's fundamental right to a fair trial. Wilson v. State, 209 Ga. App. 436, 433 S.E.2d 703, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 899 (1993).

Refusal to order the identification of a reliable confidential informant did not violate defendant's right to confrontation because the informant was not a witness to the crime for which defendant was charged. Brown v. State, 229 Ga. App. 87, 493 S.E.2d 230, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 1354 (1997).

Defendant was not denied the right to confront defendant's accusers when the state was not required to reveal the identity of the confidential informant since the identity of the confidential informant bore no relation to defendant's guilt or innocence. Baggs v. State, 265 Ga. App. 282, 593 S.E.2d 734, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 90 (2004).

Admission of detective's testimony regarding statements made by a police informant. — Defendant's right to confrontation was not violated by admission of the testimony of a narcotics detective regarding statements made by a police informant and which the detective heard via an audio transmitter during a drug buy, although the informant died prior to trial, because the testimony was not hearsay; the statements were incriminating admissions, and the informant's statements were not testimonial in nature because, although overheard by the police, the statements were not made to the police. Smith v. State, 302 Ga. App. 128, 690 S.E.2d 449, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 55 (2010), cert. denied, No. S10C0870, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 438 (Ga. June 1, 2010).

Curtailling of cross-examination where insufficient foundation laid. — Where the defendant fails in the defendant's efforts to lay a foundation for a specific defense theory and this line of questioning is overruled, the trial court does not err in sustaining the state's objection to the defendant's question to a witness regarding the alleged homosexuality of the victim. Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 633 (1981).

Affidavits of absent witnesses cannot be admitted in evidence at criminal trials because doing so violates the right of defendants to confront witnesses against them. Adams v. State, 217 Ga. App. 706, 459 S.E.2d 182, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 598 (1995), cert. denied, No. S95C1707, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 1094 (Ga. Oct. 13, 1995).

U.S. Const., amend. 6 does not require admission of all character evidence probative of truthfulness of witness even though evidence may be of help to jury. United States v. Cohen, 631 F.2d 1223, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11723 (5th Cir. 1980).

Denial of cross-examination where exhibits constitute highest and best evidence. — Because defense counsel attempted to cross-examine the state's witnesses as to whether certain accusations or traffic citations which had been admitted in evidence contained a driving under the influence charge, and because each time the state successfully objected that the exhibits themselves would be the highest and best evidence, the defendant was not denied due process, equal protection or the right to cross-examine witnesses. Ferrell v. State, 149 Ga. App. 405, 254 S.E.2d 404, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 1873 (1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1021, 100 S. Ct. 679, 62 L. Ed. 2d 653, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 365 (1980).

Indicia of reliability must be present where no confrontation of de- clarant. — In cases involving a defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to confrontation, the focus of concern is to ensure that there are indicia of reliability which have been widely viewed as determinative of whether a statement may be placed before the jury though there is no confrontation of the declarant, and to afford the trier of fact a satisfactory basis for evaluating the truth of the prior statement. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 910, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 3232 (1979).

What indicia of reliability viewed as determinative. — Those indicia of reliability which have been viewed as determinative of whether a statement may be placed before the jury though there is no confrontation of the declarant are that the statement was nonnarrative; that the declarant is shown by the evidence to know whereof the declarant speaks; that the witness is not apt to be proceeding on faulty recollection; and that the circumstances show that declarant had no apparent reason to lie to the witness. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 910, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 3232 (1979).

Admission of hearsay where indicia of reliability present. — Where three of the indicia of reliability are present, the admission of hearsay testimony concerning the individual's statements incriminating both the individual and the defendant does not violate the defendant's confrontation rights under the state and federal Constitutions. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 910, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 3232 (1979).

Admission of the defendants' hearsay statements as statements made by coconspirators under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-5 did not violate the confrontation clause of U.S. Const., amend. 6, as the statements were reliable, and the statements were not testimonial in nature; each statement corroborated the other statements and the physical evidence, and each of the defendants implicated himself or herself in their statement. Brooks v. State, 281

Admission of child molestation victims' out-of-court statements did not violate right to confrontation, where the statements bore sufficient "indicia of reliability." Smith v. State, 199 Ga. App. 378, 405 S.E.2d 78, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 487 (1991), cert. denied, No. S91C1010, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 761 (Ga. May 15, 1991).

With regard to defendant's trial and conviction for child molestation, the trial court did not err by allowing the admission of the victim's hearsay statements as defense counsel had subpoenaed the victim and announced that defense counsel intended to call the victim as a trial witness; although the victim ultimately was not called to testify, the record established that the victim was present and available for cross-examination, and therefore, there was no Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36, 124 S. Ct. 1354, 158 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2004), violation presented in the case. Williams v. State, 290 Ga. App. 841, 660 S.E.2d 740, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 228 (2008), overruled in part, Hatley v. State, 290 Ga. 480, 722 S.E.2d 67, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 137 (2012), overruled in part as stated in Wadley v. State, 317 Ga. App. 333, 730 S.E.2d 536, 2012 Ga. App. LEXIS 658 (2012).

Non-testifying victim's statements pertinent to medical treatment. —

With regard to a defendant's trial and conviction for aggravated sodomy and simple battery involving the sexual assault of an inmate upon an inmate, the trial court did not violate the defendant's rights under the Confrontation Clause by admitting the statements made by the victim to the physician and the nurse who treated the victim for the injuries received because the statements were admissible under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-803), the medical diagnosis or treatment exception, and did not fall within any class of testimonial statement. In particular, no objective witness would reasonably conclude that the statements were made under such circumstances that the statement would be available for use at a later trial.

Thomas v. State, 288 Ga. App. 602, 654 S.E.2d 682, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 1259 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0725, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 471 (Ga. May 19, 2008).

Review of psychiatric records of witness. — Defendant's Sixth Amendment rights were not violated by a trial court's failure to conduct an in camera review of psychiatric records relating to an eyewitness to the defendant's crimes because defense counsel admitted to the trial court that there were no known psychiatric records pertaining to the eyewitness. Byrum v. State, 282 Ga. 608, 652 S.E.2d 557, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 780 (2007).

Blood test results in defendant's medical records were not testimonial. — In the defendant's vehicular homicide prosecution, the admission of testimony regarding the defendant's blood-test results contained in the defendant's medical records did not violate the Confrontation Clause; the medical records were not testimonial in nature because the circumstances surrounding their creation objectively indicated that the records were prepared with a primary purpose of facilitating the defendant's medical care after the defendant was struck by the same vehicle that killed the victim. Hartzler v. State, 332 Ga. App. 674, 774 S.E.2d 738, 2015 Ga. App. LEXIS 379 (2015).

Constitutional right to confrontation does not require that all hearsay be excluded from evidence in criminal cases. Littles v. Balkcom, 245 Ga. 285, 264 S.E.2d 219, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 767 (1980); Ewald v. State, 156 Ga. App. 68, 274 S.E.2d 31, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2881 (1980).

A witness can testify as to what the witness has heard without violating the confrontation clause if subject to cross-examination. Littles v. Balkcom, 245 Ga. 285, 264 S.E.2d 219, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 767 (1980); Ewald v. State, 156 Ga. App. 68, 274 S.E.2d 31, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2881 (1980).

Hearsay exceptions must comport with right of confrontation. — While U.S. Const., amend. 6 does not prevent creation of new exceptions to the hearsay rule based upon real necessity and adequate guarantees of trustworthiness, it does embody those requirements as essential to all exceptions to the rule, present or future. To hold otherwise would be to hold that Congress could abolish the right of confrontation by making unlimited exceptions to the hearsay rule. Matthews v. United States, 217 F.2d 409, 1954 U.S. App. LEXIS 3136 (5th Cir. 1954).

Hearsay exception satisfied confrontation clause. — Hospital record showing blood test results was properly admitted as a business records exception to the hearsay rule and bore an "indicia of reliability" sufficient to satisfy the confrontation clause. Dixon v. State, 227 Ga. App. 533, 489 S.E.2d 532, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 841 (1997).

Trial court did not err in admitting two statements the victim made regarding defendant's kidnapping of the victim, pursuant to the res gestae exception to the hearsay rule, as the victim was still under the influence of defendant's criminal act, and the state and federal courts have previously determined that admission of res gestae evidence did not violate a defendant's right to confront defendant's accuser. White v. State, 265 Ga. App. 117, 592 S.E.2d 905, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 27 (2004).

In a defendant's prosecution for, inter alia, felony murder, the introduction of a second inmate's statement that the defendant and the second inmate did not mean to kill a third inmate did not violate the defendant's Sixth Amendment confrontation rights because the voluntary statement, which was made shortly after the third inmate was found in the defendant's cell, was admissible pursuant to the res gestae exception to the rule against hearsay under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-803). Butler v. State, 284 Ga. 620, 669 S.E.2d 118, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 856 (2008).

Trial court did not err in allowing the victim's cousin and the cousin's girlfriend to testify at trial about prior difficulties between the victim and the defendant pursuant to the necessity exception to the rule excluding hearsay, and the testimony did not violate the defendant's right to confrontation because the trial court concluded the proffered testimony of the witnesses was reliable and trustworthy as it found the victim was like a sibling to the witnesses; and because any alleged harm from the admission of that testimony was mitigated by the fact that both witnesses testified that the victim and the defendant continued to be friends in spite of their prior difficulties. Thompson v. State, 294 Ga. 693, 755 S.E.2d 713, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 173 (2014).

Admission of hearsay evidence not harmless error. — Because the evidence against the defendant was not overwhelming, admission of the officer's testimony that the witness told the officer that defendant sold the witness drugs was hearsay that violated the defendant's right to a fair trial, and was therefore not harmless error. Welch v. State, 231 Ga. App. 74, 498 S.E.2d 555, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 330 (1998).

Admission of prior inconsistent statements as affirmative evidence does not violate the confrontation clause of U.S. Const., amend. 6, because the declarant is testifying as a witness at the trial and therefore subject to full and effective cross-examination. United States v. Hill, 481 F.2d 929, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8651 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1115, 94 S. Ct. 847, 38 L. Ed. 2d 742, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 1895 (1973).

Out-of-court statements. — The confrontation clause is not violated by admitting a declarant's out-of-court statement as long as the declarant is testifying as a witness and subject to full cross-examination. Durham v. State, 240 Ga. 203, 240 S.E.2d 14, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1446 (1977); Andrews v. State, 156 Ga. App. 734, 275 S.E.2d 782, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3185 (1980).

Because defendant was provided a full opportunity for confrontation regarding the victim's prior out-of-court statements, the trial court did not err in admitting a police investigator's hearsay evidence. Gartrell v. State, 272 Ga. App. 726, 613 S.E.2d 226, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 376 (2005).

As a witness's statement in response to police questioning was testimonial and the defendant did not have a prior opportunity to cross-examine the witness about the contents of the statement, the statement's admission erroneously infringed upon the defendant's right to confront the witnesses against the defendant; however, the witness was located and brought to court the day after the statement was read and the defendant chose not to cross-examine the witness. Thus, the error in admitting the statement was cured and the error was not grounds for reversal. Lott v. State, 281 Ga. App. 373, 636 S.E.2d 102, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1106 (2006).

Cellmate's testimony. — Cellmate's testimony regarding incriminating statements the defendant allegedly made did not violate the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel because the cellmate did not have any agreement with the lead detective and had not been promised any payment, lenient treatment, or other help in return for any evidence that the cellmate could produce; what the cellmate hoped to get for the testimony went to the cellmate's credibility, not to the admissibility of the cellmate's testimony, and there was no evidence that the cellmate deliberately elicited the incriminating statements from the defendant. Higuera-Hernandez v. State, 289 Ga. 553, 714 S.E.2d 236, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 560 (2011).

Defendant's confrontation clause challenge to a co-defendant's statement to the defendant's cellmate about one of the murders was rejected because the statement was not testimonial as the cellmate described the conversation as the co-defendant trying to feel the cellmate out to see what the cellmate could tell the defendant. Campbell v. State, 320 Ga. 333, 907 S.E.2d 871, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 247 (2024).

Codefendant's custodial statement. — Introduction of a codefendant's custodial statement, which was redacted to eliminate the defendant's name and was read into evidence at trial, violated the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to confrontation because despite the redaction, the codefendant's statement, taken in context, obviously referred to the defendant; there was no instruction given for the jury to consider the statement only against the statement's maker, and because the defendant had no opportunity to cross-examine the defendant's inculpatory statements against the defendant, the defendant's Sixth Amendment rights were violated. Ardis v. State, 290 Ga. 58, 718 S.E.2d 526, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 862 (2011).

Victim's statements to officer and paramedic. — The admission of statements by the deceased victim to an officer and to a paramedic that the defendant had struck the victim in the head did not violate the Confrontation Clause. The primary purpose of the officer's interrogation was to meet an ongoing emergency, and the statement to the paramedic was made during an initial examination and was not testimonial. Hester v. State, 283 Ga. 367, 659 S.E.2d 600, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 297 (2008).

Provision of O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 permitting evidence of a victim's out-of-court statements does not violate the confrontation clause. Fuller v. State, 211 Ga. App. 104, 438 S.E.2d 183, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1442 (1993).

Violation of due process of law in conducting a confrontation depends on the totality of the surrounding circumstances. Baier v. State, 124 Ga. App. 334, 183 S.E.2d 622, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 913 (1971).

On-the-scene confrontations and identifications. — Although a conventional line-up viewing is normally the appropriate procedure, nevertheless, prompt, on-the-scene confrontations and identifications, though inherently suggestive because of the representation of a single suspect, are permissible in aiding a speedy police investigation and that where possible doubts as to identification need to be resolved promptly, such on-the-spot identifications promote fairness by enhancing the accuracy and reliability of identification, thereby permitting expeditious release of innocent subjects. Bennefield v. Brown, 228 Ga. 705, 187 S.E.2d 865, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 890 (1972); Flores v. State, 228 Ga. App. 152, 491 S.E.2d 86, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 983 (1997).

Suggestive pretrial identification procedures taint courtroom identification. — Pretrial identification procedures which include an impermissibly suggestive photographic confrontation, followed by a suggestive in person confrontation at a critical stage of the proceedings conducted without counsel, disclose an inextricably related identification process making it impossible to determine that the courtroom identification is untainted thereby and had an independent origin in the face-to-face confrontation by the eyewitness at the scene of the burglary. Baier v. State, 124 Ga. App. 334, 183 S.E.2d 622, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 913 (1971).

Per se exclusionary rule does not apply to confrontations occurring before the initiation of adversary judicial criminal proceedings, whether by way of formal charge, preliminary hearing, indictment, information, or arraignment. Mitchell v. Smith, 229 Ga. 781, 194 S.E.2d 414, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 773 (1972).

Videotape statements admissible since testifying. — Since both of defendant's accomplices testified and were cross-examined at trial, any Sixth Amendment right to confrontation concerns regarding the admission into evidence at trial of the statements defendant and one accomplice made on a videotape while being arrested were satisfied. Heard v. State, 257 Ga. App. 505, 571 S.E.2d 524, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 1200 (2002).

Defendant's right of confrontation was not violated by the admission of a videotaped statement of a witness, who did not remain silent at the trial, and completely denied making any statement to the police regarding the murder. Wilson v. State, 277 Ga. 114, 587 S.E.2d 9, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 777 (2003).

Use of a photo suggestive of criminal conduct during an investigation does not make identification testimony possibly affected by the photo per se inadmissible. United States v. Axtman, 589 F.2d 196, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 17083 (5th Cir. 1979).

Where the suspect is already in custody for other reasons, and only three pictures are used for the witness to choose from, two of which depict the suspect, and one which has been altered in a manner which might suggest that it depicted the suspect, the photographic identification procedure is so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. Baier v. State, 124 Ga. App. 334, 183 S.E.2d 622, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 913 (1971).

Exhibition of pictures of members of a line-up, including that of the defendant, to a witness for identification purposes does not violate the defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and work a per se exclusion of the identification. Creamer v. State, 229 Ga. 704, 194 S.E.2d 73, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 744 (1972).

In-court identification admissible if independent from illegal pretrial identification. — Notwithstanding any illegality in the pretrial identification procedures, in-court identification by a witness may nevertheless be admitted so long as it has an independent origin from the illegal identification procedure. Foster v. State, 156 Ga. App. 672, 275 S.E.2d 745, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3166 (1980).

Conviction based on eyewitness identification at trial following a pretrial identification by photograph will be set aside only if the photographic identification procedure was so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification; furthermore, even if a pre-trial identification is tainted, an in-court identification is not constitutionally inadmissible if it does not depend upon the prior identification but has an independent origin. Taylor v. State, 203 Ga. App. 210, 416 S.E.2d 554, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 470 (1992).

Where the victim observed defendant at the scene and gave a detailed description to the police immediately following the robbery, the victim's identification had an independent origin other than the photo identification; therefore, the court found no error with the trial court's admission of the photographic identification. Taylor v. State, 203 Ga. App. 210, 416 S.E.2d 554, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 470 (1992).

Per se rule applies to illegal line-up identification itself. — While an illegality in the pretrial identification procedure does not automatically prevent the witness from also identifying the defendant during the trial, a per se rule of exclusion does apply to evidence of the illegal line-up identification itself. Foster v. State, 156 Ga. App. 672, 275 S.E.2d 745, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3166 (1980).

Codefendant's confession inadmissible where codefendant does not take stand. — Evidence of the confession of one codefendant, which confession implicates another, cannot be admitted where the confessor does not take the stand and is not available for cross-examination. Collins v. State, 144 Ga. App. 102, 240 S.E.2d 597, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2597 (1977); Cape v. State, 144 Ga. App. 193, 240 S.E.2d 736, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2631 (1977); Munford v. Seay, 241 Ga. 223, 244 S.E.2d 857, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 990 (1978); Sewell v. State, 153 Ga. App. 177, 264 S.E.2d 708, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 1732 (1980).

Defendant was deprived of right to confrontation by admission into evidence of the codefendant's confession implicating the defendant where the codefendant did not take the stand, and where evidence against the defendant was not so overwhelming as to render any error harmless. Hamilton v. State, 162 Ga. App. 620, 292 S.E.2d 473, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3152 (1982).

Admission of co-conspirator's statement. — In cases involving a co-conspirator exception to the hearsay rule, the admission of the statement of a co-conspirator does not violate the confrontation clause if the statement and the circumstances surrounding it contain sufficient "indicia of reliability." Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1026 (1983); Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1026 (1983); Hunter v. State, 179 Ga. App. 368, 347 S.E.2d 2, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2631 (1986).

Where the four factors indicative of reliability identified by the United States Supreme Court are present in the case, a demonstration of the unavailability of the co-conspirator is not required and the defendant's Sixth Amendment confrontation rights are not violated by introduction of testimony regarding the co-conspirator's declarations. Hunter v. State, 179 Ga. App. 368, 347 S.E.2d 2, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2631 (1986).

Testimony by an undercover police officer as to a statement made by a co-con-spirator during the pendency of the criminal project was not inadmissible simply because the co-conspirator was not available for cross-examination since, after the fact of conspiracy is proved, the declarations of any one of the conspirators during the pendency of the project is admissible against all. Clark v. State, 236 Ga. App. 153, 510 S.E.2d 907, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 37 (1999), cert. denied, No. S99C0722, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 404 (Ga. Apr. 30, 1999).

Admission of codefendant's statements made during the concealment phase of a conspiracy did not violate the confrontation clause as there were sufficient indicia of reliability because the codefendant had personal knowledge of the identities and roles of the participants, the possibility that codefendant's statements were based on faulty recollection was remote because the statements concerned direct involvement in a murder, it was unlikely that codefendant misrepresented defendant's involvement in the crimes, and the statements were against codefendant's penal interest. Shelton v. State, 279 Ga. 161, 611 S.E.2d 11, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 232 (2005).

Statements by the defendant's co-conspirator to a third person regarding the defendant's actions during the criminal project and during the concealment phase bore sufficient indicia of reliability to be admissible in defendant's criminal trial, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-3-5, and any objection on the grounds of the confrontation clause under U.S. Const., amend. 6 or on hearsay grounds would have lacked merit; reliability factors included that there was no express statement of past facts and the declarant spoke of matters based on first hand knowledge on the same day that they had occurred. Redwine v. State, 280 Ga. 58, 623 S.E.2d 485, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 863 (2005).

Statement by a co-conspirator to a witness had sufficient indicia of reliability, and its admission did not violate the confrontation clause; while the statement was an assertion of past facts, by the co-conspirator's admission that the co-conspirator committed the crime, the co-conspirator had personal knowledge of the other perpetrators, the possibility that the co-conspirator's recollection of the incident was faulty was remote in light of the heinousness of the crime and the co-conspirator's description that it was the best time the co-conspirator had ever had, and there was no reason for the co-conspirator to misrepresent the defendants' involvement in the crime, because the co-conspirator and the other defendants were friends; furthermore, two of the co-conspirator's statements were against the co-conspirator's own penal interest, which also weighed in favor of reliability. Dickerson v. State, 280 Ga. App. 29, 633 S.E.2d 367, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 739 (2006), cert. denied, No. S06C1876, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 860 (Ga. Oct. 16, 2006).

Admission of a co-conspirator's hearsay statement that defendant was the "triggerman" in a robbery violated the confrontation clause, and could not be deemed harmless error, where the hearsay lacked sufficient indicia of reliability: The statement was not res gestae, was not given under oath, was not against penal interest, and was exculpatory. Horton v. Zant, 941 F.2d 1449, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 20577 (11th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 952, 112 S. Ct. 1516, 117 L. Ed. 2d 652, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 1943 (1992).

Admission of a nontestifying codefendant's statement with the names of codefendants redacted and replaced by blanks violated Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123, 88 S. Ct. 1620, 20 L. Ed. 2d 476 (1968). McDonald v. State, 210 Ga. App. 689, 436 S.E.2d 811, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1307 (1993).

Admission into evidence of codefendant's prior videotaped statement as a prior inconsistent statement or under the necessity exception to the hearsay rule was error where the codefendant was present at the trial, but refused to testify. Barksdale v. State, 265 Ga. 9, 453 S.E.2d 2, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 69 (1995).

In defendant's trial on charges alleging that defendant and two codefendants robbed and killed a person in 1986, the trial court did not violate defendant's rights under the confrontation clause by admitting statements which defendant's codefendants made, even though the code-fendants did not testify, because those statements were properly redacted before they were admitted and the jury was properly instructed on their use. Ingram v. State, 277 Ga. 46, 586 S.E.2d 221, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 724 (2003).

Admission of a statement by codefendant to the police investigator violated defendant's right to confrontation because defendant and codefendant were jointly tried, codefendant's statement was used to implicate defendant in the crime, and codefendant did not take the stand to face cross-examination. Sharber v. State, 268 Ga. App. 365, 601 S.E.2d 732, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 849 (2004).

Admission of a nontestifying codefendant's statement did not violate defendant's right to confrontation because the statement was redacted to remove any reference to defendant; as nothing in the statement pointed directly at defendant as a participant in the crime, the statement was not inculpatory, and the court did not err in admitting it. Dunbar v. State, 271 Ga. App. 753, 610 S.E.2d 702, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 161 (2005).

With regard to the defendant's conviction for malice murder, the trial court violated a defendant's right to confrontation by admitting two prior inconsistent statements of a codefendant after the codefendant refused to testify and shut down during direct examination, therefore, the defendant was unable to cross-examine the codefendant. However, the error were harmless beyond a reasonable doubt based on the defendant's admission to assisting in the killing and being with the codefendant at the time of the killing. Soto v. State, 285 Ga. 367, 677 S.E.2d 95, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 172 (2009).

Admission of a nontestifying codefendant's statement that listed all the other participants in the crime and substituted "a fourth person" and similar references obviously referred to the defendant and implicated the defendant in the crimes, and therefore admission of the statement was error. The error was harmless, however, because most of the statement was entirely cumulative of the defendant's own testimony and the defendant's statement to police. Laye v. State, 312 Ga. App. 862, 720 S.E.2d 233, 2011 Ga. App. LEXIS

Admission of a statement by the defendant's brother at a joint trial did not violate the defendant's right to confrontation because the jury was instructed only to consider the statement against the brother and the statement did not mention or implicate the defendant. Teasley v. State, 293 Ga. 758, 749 S.E.2d 710, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 794 (2013).

Nontestifying codefendant's statement. — Unless the statement is otherwise directly admissible against the defendant, the confrontation clause is violated by the admission of a nontestifying codefendant's statement which inculcates the defendant by referring to the defendant's name or existence, regardless of the existence of limiting instructions. Collins v. State, 242 Ga. App. 450, 529 S.E.2d 412, 2000 Ga. App. LEXIS 155 (2000).

In a joint trial where neither defendant testified, the second defendant was entitled to a new trial based on the admission of the first defendant's statement against the second defendant because a Bruton violation occurred and the only evidence directly identifying the second defendant as one of the people at the victim's door in a shooting incident was the first defendant's statement. Meadows v. State, 264 Ga. App. 160, 590 S.E.2d 173, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1426 (2003).

No Bruton violation if statements not inculpatory. — Defendant's custodial statements that the defendant was not present and that the defendant had an alibi did not inculcate codefendants. It followed that the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying motions for mistrial on Bruton grounds. Metz v. State, 284 Ga. 614, 669 S.E.2d 121, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 861 (2008), overruled in part, State v. Kelly, 290 Ga. 29, 718 S.E.2d 232, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 860 (2011).

Any Bruton violation harmless. — Evidence that the first defendant's statement about not knowing the accomplice was false was overwhelming because the defendant eventually admitted to knowing the accomplice, and a witness testified about the first defendant's and the accomplice's roles in the shootings, including instances in which the two were together; thus, the prejudicial effect of the accomplice's statement to the police was minimal by comparison, and the Bruton violation was harmless. Pender v. State, 311 Ga. 98, 856 S.E.2d 302, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 87 (2021).

Trial court's admission of the redacted diagram or the detective's limited testimony about the second defendant's statements avoided a Bruton violation because neither the diagram nor the second defendant's statements, considered in total, directly implicated the first defendant in any crime or placed the first defendant in the truck during the first victim's shooting. Pender v. State, 311 Ga. 98, 856 S.E.2d 302, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 87 (2021).

Confession of co-indictee. — The admission of evidence of a co-indictee's confession, made outside the defendant's presence to a police officer after the defendant's arrest was error. It violated the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to confront and cross-examine witnesses against the defendant, as well as the provision of O.C.G.A. § 24-3-52. Crawford v. State, 203 Ga. App. 215, 416 S.E.2d 820, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 472 (1992).

Where the statement of a coactor after a crime occurs is merely cumulative of other undisputed evidence in the case and does not directly incriminate the defendant, any error in its admission in high probability does not affect the verdict and is harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Harris v. State, 168 Ga. App. 458, 309 S.E.2d 431, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2812 (1983).

Accomplice's conversation with witness. — Where a police officer testified as to a conversation with the alleged accomplice and what the officer did as a result of that conversation but did not testify as to what the accomplice in fact specifically told the officer about the defendant, there was no violation of the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to confrontation. Goff v. State, 165 Ga. App. 79, 299 S.E.2d 149, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3113 (1983).

Since substantial risk exists that instructions to jury will not be effective. — Because of the substantial risk, despite instructions to the contrary, that a jury shall look to incriminating extrajudicial statements in determining a defendant's guilt, admission of the confession of a codefendant in a joint trial violates the defendant's right of cross-examination secured by the confrontation clause of U.S. Const., amend. 6. Rachel v. State, 247 Ga. 130, 274 S.E.2d 475, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 638 (1981).

Admission of codefendant's confession is harmful error. — The admission of the confession of codefendant who did not take the stand in the joint trial is harmful error under Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123, 88 S. Ct. 1620, 20 L. Ed. 2d 476 (1968). The admission of the confession without an opportunity for cross-examination violated defendant's guarantee of confrontation of witnesses against the defendant under U.S. Const., amend. 6. Rachel v. State, 247 Ga. 130, 274 S.E.2d 475, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 638 (1981).

Right of confrontation not violated where defendant's own confession supports it. — Although evidence of the confession of the codefendant implicating the defendant cannot be admitted against that defendant at joint trial where the codefendant does not take stand and is not available for cross-examination, where the testimony presented in the codefendant's confession is supported by the complaining defendant's own confession, there is no violation of the appellant's right of confrontation. Butler v. State, 156 Ga. App. 89, 274 S.E.2d 104, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2889 (1980).

Where the defendant's own pre-trial statement admitting the defendant's own guilt was identical to the codefendant's statement, the defendant failed to show how the denial of the motion to sever was a denial of due process. Dennard v. State, 263 Ga. 453, 435 S.E.2d 26, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 658 (1993), overruled in part, Sanders v. State, 281 Ga. 36, 635 S.E.2d 772, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 638 (2006).

Admission of codefendant's statement harmless. — Because the appellant had also confessed, making the incriminating statement of the codefendants merely cumulative, its admission in violation of the Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123, 88 S. Ct. 1620, 20 L. Ed. 2d 476 (1968), rule was harmless. Rachel v. State, 247 Ga. 130, 274 S.E.2d 475, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 638 (1981).

Admission of codefendant's statement to the fellow prisoners referring to a robbery and a shooting by "one of the guys" did not violate defendant's federal or state rights to confront witnesses and did not mandate that defendant be tried separately as the statement did not inculpate defendant. Sampson v. State, 279 Ga. 8, 608 S.E.2d 621, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 107 (2005).

Admission of codefendant's statement is harmless where defendant not inculpated by it. — Where the confession of the codefendant was found to inculpate only the declarant and not the defendant, its admission in violation of Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123, 88 S. Ct. 1620, 20 L. Ed. 2d 476 (1968), is harmless. Rachel v. State, 247 Ga. 130, 274 S.E.2d 475, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 638 (1981).

Severance of defendants. — Neither codefendant was entitled to a severance where Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123 88 S. Ct. 1620, 20 L. Ed. 2d 476 (1968) did not apply, since the codefendants' statements did not directly incriminate each other, and the trial court gave limiting instructions as to the use of such evidence. Bruton only excludes statements by a non-testifying codefendant that directly inculpate the defendant, and Bruton is not violated if a codefendant's statement does not incriminate the defendant on its face and only becomes incriminating when linked with other evidence introduced at trial. Moss v. State, 275 Ga. 96, 561 S.E.2d 382, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 245 (2002).

Defendant lacked standing to complain of a trial court's decision to sever defendant's trial from defendant's co-indictees at the request of the state based on the fact that defendant's statement to police could not have been redacted so as to delete defendant's implication of the other offenders, and the admission of the statement would have been precluded if the other offenders were tried jointly with defendant; defendant also failed to show harm, as defendant was acquitted of the charges to which the statements of the co-indictees related. Rhodes v. State, 267 Ga. App. 673, 601 S.E.2d 139, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 754 (2004).

When a defendant charged with malice murder, felony murder, and cruelty to children argued that the trial court violated the Sixth Amendment confrontation rights by not severing the defendant's trial from that of a codefendant, the court held that even if admission of the codefendant's statements was error, it was harmless; some of the complained-of statements were cumulative of other properly admitted evidence, and other statements were not an important element in the state's case, given the showing that the victim never suffered unusual injuries before moving in with the defendant and that the victim's severe injuries occurred when the defendant was the victim's sole adult caretaker. Collum v. State, 281 Ga. 719, 642 S.E.2d 640, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 229 (2007).

As neither defendant implicated the other in their statements to police, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying their motions to sever their cases on grounds of a violation of Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123 (1968). Carter v. State, 285 Ga. 394, 677 S.E.2d 71, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 167 (2009).

Where the evidence contained in the confession is found to be merely cumulative, its admission in violation of Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123, 88 S. Ct. 1620, 20 L. Ed. 2d 476 (1968), is harmless. Rachel v. State, 247 Ga. 130, 274 S.E.2d 475, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 638 (1981).

When codefendant's inculpatory statement admissible. — An admission of an inculpatory statement made by accused's codefendant did not violate the accused's right of confrontation where the statement was not received until all references to the accused were deleted, and where the accused had a full opportunity to cross-examine codefendant when the codefendant took the stand to deny making the inculpatory statement. United States v. Sims, 434 F.2d 258, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 6476 (5th Cir. 1970).

Evidence of a codefendant's statements did not violate defendant's rights under the confrontation clause since it was not admitted for its truth, but for the limited purpose of showing context and voluntariness. Cargill v. Turpin, 120 F.3d 1366, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 22315 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1080, 118 S. Ct. 1529, 140 L. Ed. 2d 680, 1998 U.S. LEXIS 2642 (1998).

Codefendant's statement meets the standard for admissibility under the confrontation clause when it does not refer to the existence of the defendant and is accompanied by instructions limiting its use to the case against the confessing codefendant. Rooks v. State, 238 Ga. App. 177, 518 S.E.2d 179, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 763 (1999).

Trial court did not err in allowing the state to introduce a codefendant's out-of-court statement without redacting the statement, and in allowing the state to cross-examine the codefendant using the name of the defendant's two alleged accomplices because, once the codefendant took the stand and answered questions concerning the codefendant's statement, even if the codefendant denounced or recanted that statement, the codefendant was subject to cross-examination. Boone v. State, 250 Ga. App. 133, 549 S.E.2d 713, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 540 (2001).

Codefendant's inculpatory statement inadmissible. — In a trial against three alleged co-conspirators the introduction in evidence of two defendants' incriminating statements denied the third defendant the right to be confronted by these persons and to subject them to cross-examination, where the statements are crucial to the case against the third defendant, their impact is devastating, and there is not sufficient indicia of reliability to excuse confrontation by the declarants. Knowles v. State, 246 Ga. 378, 271 S.E.2d 615, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1116 (1980).

Admissibility of co-conspirator's declarations under former Code 1933, § 38-306 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-3-5). — Even though an alleged accomplice does not appear at the defendant's trial, the accomplice's statement can be placed before the jury under former Code 1933, § 38-306 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-3-5) without violating the due process or confrontation clauses, if the statement meets certain indicia of reliability, including the fact that it was offered spontaneously and was against the accomplice's penal interest. Spivey v. State, 138 Ga. App. 298, 226 S.E.2d 104, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2139, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 921, 97 S. Ct. 317, 50 L. Ed. 2d 288, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 3317 (1976).

The duration of the conspiracy includes its concealment phase, and the application of former Code 1933, § 38-306 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-3-5) is not subject to objection as a denial of confrontation. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 910, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 3232 (1979).

Admission of co-conspirator's statement against defendant after conspiracy has ended. — Where the statement of the codefendant is made in front of the defendant, the defendant has been arrested, the fact of the choate crime has been revealed, and there is absolutely no showing by the state that a conspiracy to cover up the crime still exists, the criminal project is not still pending, it has been completed, and the introduction of the statements of the codefendant through the testimony of the detective before whom the statement is made violates former Code 1933, § 38-414 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-3-52) and violates the defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to confrontation. Price v. State, 239 Ga. 439, 238 S.E.2d 24, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1199 (1977).

Admission of non-testifying co-indictee's refusal to testify harmless error as no prejudice shown. — With regard to defendant's trial for felony murder and other crimes, trial court did not commit reversible error by holding co-indictee in contempt for refusing to testify after invoking the Fifth Amendment and then recalling the jurors and informing them that co-indictee had pled guilty to various offenses, refused to cooperate with state despite an offer of immunity, and that co-indictee had been held in contempt for that refusal. Hendricks v. State, 283 Ga. 470, 660 S.E.2d 365, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 351 (2008).

Statements made to witness by defendant's co-conspirator in defendant's presence. — Where a witness and defendant visited incarcerated co-conspirator and where the co-conspirator gave witness a message written down on a pad which read “don’t identify him” (allegedly referring to the defendant), the written message and testimony were admissible and did not violate defendant’s confrontation rights. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 910, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 3232 (1979).

Testimony of witness whose name is not on indictment. — Constitutional right of accused to be confronted with witnesses is not violated because a witness, whose name does not appear on the indictment, is sworn as a witness for the state and testifies against the accused, where there is no demand for a list of the witnesses whose names appear on the indictment, and no objection is made to the witness testifying. McCoy v. State, 74 Ga. App. 889, 41 S.E.2d 830, 1947 Ga. App. LEXIS 726 (1947).

Failure of witness to appear where defendant seeks neither subpoena nor continuance. — Where a witness for the prosecution does not appear, apparently for medical reasons, the failure of this witness to appear does not violate the defendant’s right to confront witnesses where there is nothing in the record to show that the defendant ever placed the witness under subpoena or that, if the defendant did, a continuance or other relief from the failure to appear was requested. Glover v. State, 149 Ga. App. 369, 254 S.E.2d 492, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 1852 (1979).

Failure to subpoena witnesses as ineffective assistance. — Defendant failed to establish that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to subpoena a witness because the defendant failed to carry the burden of showing that if the witness had testified at trial, there was a reasonable probability the result of the trial would have been different; the defendant did not specify which witnesses counsel failed to subpoena. Glass v. State, 289 Ga. 542, 712 S.E.2d 851, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 557 (2011).

Failure to produce informant to testify. — A defendant is not unconstitutionally deprived of the right to confront a witness against the defendant because the state does not produce an informant to testify. The informant, unless called, cannot be termed a “witness” against the defendant. McAllister v. Brown, 555 F.2d 1277, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 12440 (5th Cir. 1977).

State’s failure to call witness on its list did not deny the defendant’s sixth amendment rights because, under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-191, the defendant could have subpoenaed the witness if deemed necessary to the defendant for impeachment purposes. Johnson v. State, 232 Ga. App. 717, 503 S.E.2d 603, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 830 (1998).

No right of confrontation as to tipster who neither participates in nor witnesses offense. — Where the state proves to the court’s satisfaction that the informer is a pure tipster, who neither participated in nor witnessed the offense, any evidence the informer might offer would be hearsay and inadmissible. Thus the trial court’s ruling that the jury could not hear the officer’s recitation of the tipster’s information, does not violate the defendant’s civil rights under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 nor the constitutional right to confront witnesses against the defendant. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 910, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 3232 (1979).

Identification of state “decoy” used to purchase contraband. — When the state uses a “decoy” (the purchaser in an illegal sale of contraband), the decoy is a material witness to the offense and the decoy’s testimony would be pertinent to the defense of entrapment, but, by disclosing the decoy’s identity to the defendant, the state fulfilled its obligation of confrontation. Wilson v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 859, 218 S.E.2d 573, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1307 (1975).

Failure to disclose identity of intermediary between informer and government. — Refusal to disclose the identity of an intermediary or messenger whose sole mission was to inform the government agent of the informer's wish to talk with the agent is not a violation of the right to confrontation under U.S. Const., amend. 6. United States v. Newsome, 432 F.2d 51, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 7136 (5th Cir. 1970).

Recording of victim's radio voice transmission. — The appellant's constitutional right of cross-examination and confrontation of witnesses under U.S. Const., amend. 6, Ga. Const. 1945, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. III (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I), and Ga. Const. 1945, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. V (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI, XIV), are not violated where a court allows as evidence the recorded radio voice transmission of a deceased victim made while proceeding to the scene of the homicide, where it is allowed only for the purposes of explaining conduct to the satisfaction of the jury and not for the purpose of proving any fact. Callahan v. State, 229 Ga. 737, 194 S.E.2d 431, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 760 (1972).

Business record exception is an exception to the hearsay rule, and not a general exception to the confrontation clause. Adams v. State, 217 Ga. App. 706, 459 S.E.2d 182, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 598 (1995), cert. denied, No. S95C1707, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 1094 (Ga. Oct. 13, 1995).

Telephone records as business records and counsel's objection without merit. — Although the defendant claimed that trial counsel was ineffective in permitting the admission of certain phone records, trial counsel did object to admission of the records, but the trial court overruled the objection; the evidence showed that the records were maintained in computer storage as business records, and the trial court therefore did not err in admitting the records under the business records exception to the hearsay rule. The defendant thus failed to demonstrate deficient performance and, in any event, due to the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt, no prejudice was shown. Washington v. State, 285 Ga. 541, 678 S.E.2d 900, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 311 (2009).

Summary of business records. — In a case where a summary of business records is properly admitted and the figures so introduced are relied upon by another witness, there is ordinarily no violation of defendant's right of confrontation. Stewart v. State, 246 Ga. 70, 268 S.E.2d 906, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 970 (1980).

Admissibility of inspection certificates on breath testing devices. — O.C.G.A. § 40-6-392 does not offend a defendant's right of confrontation because the admissibility of inspection certificates on breath testing devices, as provided by subsection (f) of that section, is based on the hearsay exception for business records. Brown v. State, 268 Ga. 76, 485 S.E.2d 486, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 279 (1997); Jackson v. State, 233 Ga. App. 568, 504 S.E.2d 505, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 971 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1805, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 1235 (Ga. Dec. 4, 1998).

Admitting into evidence inspection certificates for Intoxilyzer 5000 without testimony from the individual who actually tested the machine was not a denial of defendant's right to confrontation. Kollman v. State, 231 Ga. App. 630, 498 S.E.2d 745, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 82 (1998).

Admission of self-authenticating certificates of inspection for the Intoxilyzer 5000 used to test defendant's breath was proper, as the certificates were required by O.C.G.A. § 40-6-392(f), they qualified as business records under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-14, and they did not violate defendant's confrontation rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6. Neal v. State, 281 Ga. App. 261, 635 S.E.2d 864, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1068 (2006).

In a defendant's prosecution for driving under the influence under O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391, the inspection certificate for the instrument used to conduct the defendant's breath test under O.C.G.A. § 40-6-392(f) was properly admitted because it was not testimonial hearsay and did not violate the defendant's rights of confrontation; it was a business record that was not made in an investigatory or adversarial setting or generated in anticipation of the prosecution of a particular defendant. Rackoff v. State, 281 Ga. 306, 637 S.E.2d 706, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 978 (2006).

Inspection certificates admissible

under Melendez-Diaz. — Testing certificates for a breath-testing machine were properly admitted into evidence in a defendant's trial for driving under the influence (less safe and per se) under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-14 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-803) and O.C.G.A. § 40-6-392(f). The documents did not come within Melendez-Diaz v. Massachusetts, 557 U.S. 305, 129 S. Ct. 2527, 174 L. Ed. 2d 314 (2009). Ritter v. State, 306 Ga. App. 689, 703 S.E.2d 8, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 888 (2010).

Admission of breath test not in error. — There was adequate foundation to admit printouts of test results from defendant's breath test as business records under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-14(b), in that it was in the regular course of the trooper's business to perform such a test, and these printouts were the result of one of those tests conducted in the regular course of the trooper's duties; consequently, there was no violation of defendant's right of confrontation. Sisson v. State, 232 Ga. App. 61, 499 S.E.2d 422, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 574 (1998), overruled in part, State v. Turnquest, 305 Ga. 758, 827 S.E.2d 865, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 320 (2019).

Jury view in absence of defendant not a violation of confrontation rights. — A jury view of the premises, relevant to a case, made for the purpose of enabling the jury to better understand the testimony and not made for the purpose of allowing the jury to see evidence introduced in the case, which view is conducted without the presence of the defendant, does not violate the defendant's right of confrontation. Jordan v. State, 247 Ga. 328, 276 S.E.2d 224, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 692 (1981).

Jury view in absence of defendant not a violation of due process. — A jury view of a crime scene in the absence of the accused is not a denial of due process under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Jordan v. State, 247 Ga. 328, 276 S.E.2d 224, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 692 (1981).

Jurors who made an unauthorized visit to the scene of the crime and then presented their findings to the other jurors became, in a real sense, unsworn witnesses against the appellant in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6.

Watkins v. State, 237 Ga. 678, 229 S.E.2d 465, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1352 (1976).

Waiver of confrontation rights is not necessarily precluded by the failure of the trial court to specifically inform the accused of the accused's right to be present. State v. Phillips, 247 Ga. 246, 275 S.E.2d 323, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 669 (1981).

Validity of counsel's waiver of right of confrontation. — In order for the waiver by counsel of defendant's right of confrontation to be binding on the defendant, it must be made in the defendant's presence or by the defendant's express authority, or be subsequently acquiesced in by the defendant. State v. Phillips, 247 Ga. 246, 275 S.E.2d 323, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 669 (1981).

Waiver by defendant absent from trial while free on bail. — Confrontation rights are personal to the accused and are waived when the accused is free on bail and voluntarily absents oneself from the trial. Byrd v. Ricketts, 233 Ga. 779, 213 S.E.2d 610, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1440, cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1011, 95 S. Ct. 2636, 45 L. Ed. 2d 675, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 2028 (1975).

Defendant may waive the right to confrontation by voluntarily absenting oneself from the proceedings after the trial begins. The trial begins when jeopardy attaches. Pollard v. State, 175 Ga. App. 269, 333 S.E.2d 152, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2795 (1985); Loper v. State, 191 Ga. App. 515, 382 S.E.2d 212, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 673 (1989).

Waiver of confrontation by defendant's absence during cross-examination. — A defendant in custody may waive the right to confrontation when the defendant removes self from the courtroom during cross-examination of a prosecution witness. State v. Phillips, 247 Ga. 246, 275 S.E.2d 323, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 669 (1981).

Trial court erred in removing defendants from the courtroom during the testimony, out of the presence of the jury, of rebuttal witnesses for the state. Perry v. State, 216 Ga. App. 749, 456 S.E.2d 89, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 299 (1995).

Loss of right to be present at trial through disruptive behavior. — A defendant can lose the right to be present at trial if, after being warned by the judge that the defendant will be removed if the defendant continues the disruptive behavior, the defendant nevertheless insists on acting in a manner so disorderly, disruptive, and disrespectful of the court that the trial cannot be carried on with the defendant in the courtroom. Once lost, the right to be present can, of course, be reclaimed as soon as the defendant is willing to act consistently with the decorum and respect inherent in the concept of courts and judicial proceedings. State v. Phillips, 247 Ga. 246, 275 S.E.2d 323, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 669 (1981).

Defendant lost the right to be present at trial when the defendant became so disorderly, disruptive, and disrespectful to the court that the trial could not be carried on with the defendant in the courtroom. Raymond v. State, 168 Ga. App. 487, 309 S.E.2d 669, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3411 (1983).

Although the defendant engages in flagrant acts of violence, disobedience and disruptive conduct, it is error to bar the defendant from the courtroom without giving the defendant the opportunity to remain, at the first instance, upon the defendant's agreement to act in a proper manner and to refrain from any similar conduct. Fletcher v. State, 168 Ga. App. 521, 309 S.E.2d 824, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3413 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 498, 314 S.E.2d 888, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 743 (1984).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in proceeding with the trial in the defendant's absence because of the defendant's bizarre and disruptive behavior during the trial. Weaver v. State, 288 Ga. 540, 705 S.E.2d 627, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 94 (2011).

Voluntarily absent defendant. — Defendant's right to confront witnesses under U.S. Const., amend. 6 was violated after the trial judge ordered that the burglary trial proceed in defendant's absence when defendant disappeared before jeopardy attached and before the jury was sworn. Stacey v. State, 254 Ga. App. 461, 562 S.E.2d 806, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 401 (2002).

Inability to confront witnesses does not deny fair trial where no conviction results. —

Defendant was not denied a fair trial, where the defendant was unable to confront the witnesses against the defendant on the charges, because the defendant was not convicted of such charges and, therefore, it was difficult to envision how the defendant could have been harmed by the absence of the witnesses. Gilmore v. State, 157 Ga. App. 376, 277 S.E.2d 749, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1826 (1981).

Trial judges retain wide latitude to impose reasonable limits on such cross-examination based on concerns about, among other things, harassment, prejudice, or interrogation that is repetitive or only marginally relevant. Johnson v. State, 258 Ga. 504, 371 S.E.2d 651, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 370 (1988).

Prior out-of-court consistent statements of a witness are admissible where the witness is present in court, under oath, and subject to cross-examination. Tew v. State, 179 Ga. App. 369, 346 S.E.2d 833, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2634 (1986).

Admission of hearsay not automatic violation of confrontation clause. — A finding that the admitted statements are hearsay does not necessarily require a finding that the confrontation clause has been violated. Williams v. Melton, 733 F.2d 1492, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 21768 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1073, 105 S. Ct. 567, 83 L. Ed. 2d 508, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 4654 (1984).

Admission of homicide victim's statements harmful error. — Habeas petitioner was granted a motion for a new trial based upon the trial court's admission of a homicide victim's statements to a physician because the statements fell under no exception to the hearsay rule and offered a noncumulative, unimpeachable account of central details of the incident, which could have resulted in the defendant's conviction for murder without affording the defendant the right to properly confront the source of the statements. Howard v. Gavin, 810 F. Supp. 1269, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 432 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

Cross-examination improperly limited. — Trial judge's exclusion of extrinsic evidence of important government witness's prior inconsistent failure to implicate defendant was constitutional error warranting reversal as it impeded investigation of a witness's credibility through the exposure of the witness's potential bias and motivation. United States v. Sheffield, 992 F.2d 1164, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 13191 (11th Cir. 1993).

Res gestae exception may violate right to confrontation. — The res gestae exception can be applied in an unconstitutional manner; it is necessary to examine the indicia of reliability of evidence sought to be introduced under that exception to ensure that the defendant's sixth amendment rights to confrontation will not be violated by introduction of the evidence. Williams v. Melton, 733 F.2d 1492, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 21768 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1073, 105 S. Ct. 567, 83 L. Ed. 2d 508, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 4654 (1984).

Res gestae exception does not violate right to confrontation where indicia of reliability are established. — The admission of hearsay evidence if the witness is unavailable, under the res gestae exception (§ 24-3-3), did not violate the confrontation rights of the defendant because there was substantial circumstantial evidence that provided the indicia of reliability needed by the jury to evaluate the truth of hearsay declarations. Williams v. Melton, 733 F.2d 1492, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 21768 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1073, 105 S. Ct. 567, 83 L. Ed. 2d 508, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 4654 (1984).

U.S. Const., amend. 6 restricts the use of otherwise admissible hearsay in two ways. First, the prosecution must show that the out-of-court declarant is unavailable for trial. Second, where the declarant is shown to be unavailable, a hearsay statement may be used only if the circumstances provide sufficient indicia of reliability from which the jury can evaluate the truth. Williams v. Melton, 733 F.2d 1492, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 21768 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1073, 105 S. Ct. 567, 83 L. Ed. 2d 508, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 4654 (1984).

The confrontation clause does not require the exclusion of hearsay testimony if it is shown that the declarant is unavailable to testify and that the out-of-court statement bears adequate "indicia of reliability." Williams v. State, 202 Ga. App. 82, 413 S.E.2d 256, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1667 (1991).

Amendment violated only when hearsay declarant unavailable at trial. — U.S. Const., amend. 6 is violated only when the out-of-court hearsay statement is that of a declarant who is unavailable at trial for full and effective cross-examination. Campbell v. State, 158 Ga. App. 616, 281 S.E.2d 352, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2338 (1981).

Calling of alleged child abuse victim to stand. — O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 (admissibility of child-victim's statement) is not constitutionally deficient. The defendant need not be placed in the position of calling the alleged victim to the stand in order to exercise the defendant's rights under the sixth amendment. Rather, the court will call the alleged victim at the request of either party, informing the jury that it is the court that has called the child and that both parties will have an opportunity to examine the child. Eberhardt v. State, 257 Ga. 420, 359 S.E.2d 908, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 891 (1987), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 1069, 108 S. Ct. 1036, 98 L. Ed. 2d 999, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 934 (1988).

Where the victim had been called by the state and defendant had an opportunity to cross-examine without having to call the victim to the stand, the application of O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16, governing testimony as to a child's description of sexual contact or physical abuse did not violate the defendant's right to due process to confront the witness. Lawhorn v. State, 257 Ga. 780, 364 S.E.2d 559, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 44 (1988).

Seating of child-molestation victims. — The mere fact that the trial court used its discretion in allowing child-molestation victims to sit at an angle where they would not have to directly face the defendant in no way violated the constitutional right to confrontation, because the defendant had the full opportunity to confront each victim with a thorough and sifting cross-examination and to expose each victim to the court and jury. Ortiz v. State, 188 Ga. App. 532, 374 S.E.2d 92, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 1125 (1988).

Introduction in evidence of the molestation victim's tape recorded statement did not violate the confrontation clause of the sixth amendment to the United States Constitution where the victim's veracity was put in issue by defendant's denial that any molestation ever took place, by evidence contradicting the victim's testimony and by cross-examination concerning prior conflicting testimony and statements. Patterson v. State, 180 Ga. App. 194, 348 S.E.2d 578, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2694 (1986).

The admission of videotapes in child molestation cases does not infringe upon a defendant's sixth amendment right to confront witnesses, where the child victim testified. Frazier v. State, 195 Ga. App. 109, 393 S.E.2d 262, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 428 (1990), cert. denied, No. S90C1024, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 756 (Ga. May 16, 1990).

Victim with multiple personality disorder. — The court rejected the defendant's contention that the introduction of testimony by the victim's alternate personalities constituted a violation of defendant's right of confrontation where: (1) the trial court gave defense counsel the opportunity to cross-examine the victim's host personality as well as the victim's alternate personalities; (2) the court offered defense counsel the option of attempting to summon alternate personalities directly or of relying on the assistance of the prosecutor; and (3) with the exception of cross-examination of the host personality, each of these opportunities was strategically refused by defense counsel. Dorsey v. Chapman, 262 F.3d 1181, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 18749 (11th Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 535 U.S. 1000, 122 S. Ct. 1567, 152 L. Ed. 2d 489, 2002 U.S. LEXIS 2558 (2002).

Child victim's statement or testimony. — Former Child Hearsay Statute, former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-820), as construed by the supreme court in Sosebee v. State, 257 Ga. 298 (1987) and in other appellate cases, cannot pass constitutional muster because the statute failed to put the onus on the prosecution to put the child victim on the witness stand to confront the defendant, and any cases suggesting the contrary were hereby overruled; however, the statute could be construed to survive a Confrontation Clause attack because the right of confrontation could be satisfied by construing the statute to require pretrial notice of the state's intent to use a child victim's hearsay statements. Hatley v. State, 290 Ga. 480, 722 S.E.2d 67, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 137 (2012).

Former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-820) required the prosecution to notify the defendant within a reasonable period of time prior to trial of the statute's intent to use a child victim's hearsay statements and to give the defendant an opportunity to raise a confrontation clause objection; if the defendant objects, and the state wishes to introduce hearsay statements under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16, the state must present the child witness at trial; if the defendant did not object, the state could introduce the child victim's hearsay statements subject to the trial court's determination that the circumstances of the statements provide sufficient indicia of reliability, and the trial court should take reasonable steps to ascertain, and put on the record, whether the defendant waived the defendant's right to confront the child witness. Hatley v. State, 290 Ga. 480, 722 S.E.2d 67, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 137 (2012).

Defendant's right of confrontation was not violated by the introduction of the victim's hearsay statements under the former Child Hearsay Statute, O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-820), because the victim's statements to the victim's mother were non-testimonial, whereas the victim's statement to the forensic interviewer, made several weeks after the crimes, was testimonial; but even if the victim's statement to the forensic examiner, and the statements made by the victim and the victim's mother to the police were admitted erroneously, the errors were harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. The victim's statement to the forensic interviewer was the same as the victim's statement to the victim's mother, and the statements made by the victim and the victim's mother to police were cumulative of the victim's statement to the victim's mother, as well as the mother's testimony and the forensic evidence properly admitted against the defendant. Hatley v. State, 290 Ga. 480, 722 S.E.2d 67, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 137 (2012).

Child's description of sexual contact or physical abuse. — O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16, governing testimony as to a child's description of sexual contact or physical abuse, does not violate the constitutional right to confrontation. Rayburn v. State, 194 Ga. App. 676, 391 S.E.2d 780, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 252 (1990), cert. denied, No. S90C0811, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 693 (Ga. Apr. 25, 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 969, 111 S. Ct. 434, 112 L. Ed. 2d 417, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 5707 (1990).

Child witness's unresponsiveness to a number of questions as put by defendant did not constitute a deprivation of defendant's constitutional confrontation right so as to require that the witness's out-of-court statements be stricken, where defendant was not denied the right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination of a witness who appeared to answer as well as she was capable of answering. Bright v. State, 197 Ga. App. 784, 400 S.E.2d 18, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1497 (1990).

Child witness seated with back to defendant. — Testimony by a six-year-old victim who was allowed to testify facing the jury with the victim's back to the defendant so that the defendant could not look the victim in the eye did not violate the constitutional right to confront witnesses against the defendant because the defendant had the opportunity to, and did, thoroughly cross-examine the witness. Atwell v. State, 204 Ga. App. 187, 419 S.E.2d 77, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 740 (1992).

Not all witnesses need testify. — Defendant was not deprived of the sixth amendment right of confrontation by the state's failure to call one of two police officers who had witnessed a drug offense, where the officer did not testify, nor was any reference made at trial to the contents of any prior statement made by the officer. Jacobs v. State, 201 Ga. App. 57, 410 S.E.2d 320, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1182 (1991).

Hearsay statement of defendant's former spouse properly admitted. —

Admission of a Georgia Bureau of Investigation agent's testimony regarding a statement by defendant's former spouse implicating the defendant in a killing did not violate the defendant's right of confrontation, because the former spouse remarried the defendant before refusing to testify at the trial, and there was a "necessity" that the finder of fact be acquainted with the statement of the only eyewitness to the homicide. Higgs v. State, 256 Ga. 606, 351 S.E.2d 448, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 541 (1987).

Admission of a spouse's hearsay statement against the defendant improper. —

In a murder trial, admission of a spouse's out-of-court statement, ruled not to be a confession, violated the defendant's rights under the confrontation clause; however, and since the remaining evidence against the defendant was so strong that the admission of the spouse's statement was harmless error, the judge's instruction to the jury to disregard the statement was sufficient to cure any error, so that the defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied. Ballard v. State, 252 Ga. 53, 311 S.E.2d 453, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 587 (1984).

Testimony by codefendant which favors defendant. —

Where a codefendant takes the stand and denies making an alleged out-of-court statement implicating the other defendant, and proceeds to testify favorably to the codefendant, that defendant has been denied no rights protected by U.S. Const., amend. 6 and U.S. Const., amend. 14. Campbell v. State, 158 Ga. App. 616, 281 S.E.2d 352, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2338 (1981).

The application of former Code 1933, § 38-306 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-3-5) in that, at trial, witnesses were permitted, over a hearsay objection, to testify as to the statements made to them by a deceased person, did not deprive the defendant of the constitutional rights to confrontation under U.S. Const., amend. 6 because the state's evidence was sufficient to prima facie show a conspiracy between the deceased and the defendant and because the statements made by the deceased were made during the concealment stage of the conspiracy. Timberlake v. State, 158 Ga. App. 125, 279 S.E.2d 283, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2102 (1981).

Officer's testimony explaining the officer's actions. — Police officer's reference to an interview with a codefendant did not violate the defendant's right to confrontation, because the reference merely explained the officer's subsequent actions, and no evidence was presented of any statement or confession of the codefendant that implicated the defendant. McNeal v. State, 196 Ga. App. 244, 395 S.E.2d 660, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 893 (1990).

Fact that the defendant and the defendant's car matched an informant's descriptions was not offered by the state to establish the truth of those matters, but, rather, it was offered for the limited purpose of explaining why the officer went to the specific parking lot and approached the defendant's car; the officer's testimony referenced the informant's tip only to the extent necessary to provide context or background information, and thus there was no confrontation clause violation. Little v. State, 280 Ga. App. 60, 633 S.E.2d 403, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 749 (2006).

Detective's statements. — Detective's testimony about the existence of a codefendant's statement as evidence against a defendant did not, standing alone, directly incriminate the defendant. Therefore, the defendant's right to confrontation was not violated. Ham v. State, 303 Ga. App. 232, 692 S.E.2d 828, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 320 (2010), cert. denied, No. S10C1275, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 760 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2010), overruled in part, Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 685 (2018).

Police detective's testimony did not violate the defendant's right to confrontation because the statement which the detective recounted was made by the defendant rather than by the codefendant as the defendant asserted. Herbert v. State, 288 Ga. 843, 708 S.E.2d 260, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 258 (2011).

Hearsay testimony of police officers. — Admission of hearsay testimony of police officers recounting the confessions of purported co-conspirators who did not testify violated defendant's constitutional right to confront witnesses. Livingston v. State, 268 Ga. 205, 486 S.E.2d 845, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 421 (1997).

Investigator's testimony about information received from silent witnesses did not serve to implicate defendant in the crime and the admission of the testimony did not violate defendant's confrontation rights. Jenkins v. Byrd, 103 F. Supp. 2d 1350, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8944 (S.D. Ga. 2000), aff'd, 273 F.3d 397, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 28492 (11th Cir. 2001).

The trial court properly rejected a pre-trial detainee's petition for habeas relief on grounds that the detainee's constitutional right to confront witnesses was abridged when a detective investigating the charges was permitted to give hearsay testimony at the detainee's preliminary hearing, as the detainee's constitutional right to confrontation applied only to trials, and not to a preliminary hearing, and the hearing involved a more limited scope of determining whether probable cause existed to hold an accused for trial. Gresham v. Edwards, 281 Ga. 881, 644 S.E.2d 122, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 303 (2007), overruled in part, Brown v. Crawford, 289 Ga. 722, 715 S.E.2d 132, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 658 (2011).

Even though a witness's statements to an officer that the witness was afraid of defendant, to which the officer testified at trial, were testimonial in nature and thus were subject to exclusion pursuant to the Confrontation Clause protections set forth in Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36 (2004); admission of this testimony was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt because it was cumulative of other admissible evidence. Bell v. State, 294 Ga. 443, 754 S.E.2d 327, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 100 (2014).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to an agent's hearsay testimony that the agent had talked to witnesses that had placed a gun in the defendant's hand as the defendant did not show that the agent's testimony likely affected the outcome of the trial because the eyewitnesses placed the defendant at the scene of the crime, and one saw the defendant with a gun shooting the victim; and the defendant admitted to being present at the scene of the crime and that the defendant lost items at the scene that matched items recovered next to the murdered victim. Grant v. State, 305 Ga. 170, 824 S.E.2d 255, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 102 (2019), overruled in part, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Court cannot prohibit cross-examination of prosecution witnesses as to motive. — The trial court errs in granting a motion in limine to prohibit the cross-examination of key prosecution witnesses on their motives in testifying. Owens v. State, 251 Ga. 313, 305 S.E.2d 102, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 766 (1983).

Trial court abused its discretion when it did not permit defense counsel to question a state witness testifying in exchange for a prison time reduction about the witness's belief on the time the witness was avoiding by testifying and such error was not harmless. State v. Vogleson, 275 Ga. 637, 571 S.E.2d 752, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 967 (2002).

Cross-examination of codefendants. — Trial court did not commit error by disallowing any testimony regarding the mandatory minimum sentence for armed robbery, thus restricting the defendant's right to a full cross-examination of codefendants to reveal their motive to lie; the court merely restricted the defendant from asking questions couched in terms of mandatory minimum sentence and the defendant was free to question codefendants as to their understanding of the possible sentence as long as the jury was not informed of the mandatory minimum sentence. Ross v. State, 231 Ga. App. 506, 499 S.E.2d 351, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 377 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1147, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 775 (Ga. Sept. 8, 1998), overruled on other grounds, by Vogleson v. State, 250 Ga. App. 555, 552 S.E.2d 513, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 822 (2001).

Reference to "they" including codefendant. — Denial of a motion to sever was appropriate because the first defendant, in either of the defendant's statements, did not name or inculpate the second defendant. A reference to "they," standing alone, did not directly implicate the second defendant in the crimes and the remainder of the first defendant's remarks referred only to the first defendant. Nelms v. State, 285 Ga. 718, 681 S.E.2d 141, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 448 (2009), cert. denied, 558 U.S. 1127, 130 S. Ct. 1089, 175 L. Ed. 2d 910, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 355 (2010).

Interest in protecting confidentiality of juvenile offender's record cannot require yielding of so valuable a constitutional right as effective cross-examination for bias of adverse witness. Arnold v. State, 163 Ga. App. 10, 293 S.E.2d 501, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3180 (1982).

Reference to unidentified person rather than defendant. — Admitting the co-defendant's out-of-court statement did not violate the Confrontation Clause under Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123 (1968), because it did not, standing alone, directly implicate the other co-defendant. Henderson v. State, 317 Ga. 66, 891 S.E.2d 884, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 179 (2023).

Inability to conduct meaningful cross-examination. — Calling a witness who had notified the court that the witness would not answer any questions to avoid self-incrimination and asking that witness leading questions suggesting the guilt of the defendant deprives the defendant of the right of confrontation as the defendant cannot conduct any meaningful or counteractive cross-examination. Lawrence v. State, 257 Ga. 423, 360 S.E.2d 716, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1987).

Discretion of trial court. — The extent of cross-examination with respect to an appropriate subject of inquiry is within the sound discretion of the trial court. Hines v. State, 249 Ga. 257, 290 S.E.2d 911, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1133 (1982).

The trial court may exercise a reasonable judgment in determining when the subject is exhausted, but, where the trial court cuts off in limine all inquiry on a subject with respect to which the defense is entitled to a reasonable cross-examination, this is an abuse of discretion and prejudicial error. Hines v. State, 249 Ga. 257, 290 S.E.2d 911, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1133 (1982).

Trial judges retain wide latitude insofar as the confrontation clause is concerned to impose reasonable limits on such cross-examination based on concerns about, among other things, harassment, prejudice, confusion of the issues, the witness's safety, or interrogation that is repetitive or only marginally relevant. Shaw v. State, 201 Ga. App. 456, 411 S.E.2d 537, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1436 (1991), overruled in part, Green v. State, 254 Ga. App. 881, 564 S.E.2d 731, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 414 (2002).

No right to participate in post-trial examination of confidential informant. — Defendant's sixth amendment confrontation right was not violated by the defendant's and/or defense counsel's exclusion from a post-trial, in camera examination of a confidential informant. Ponder v. State, 197 Ga. App. 21, 397 S.E.2d 596, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1170 (1990).

Error for court to prohibit cross-examination of warrant affiant. — At a hearing on a motion to suppress, where the state introduces the affidavit upon which a search warrant has been based, it is error for the trial court to totally prevent cross-examination of the affiant by defense counsel. Miller v. State, 169 Ga. App. 552, 314 S.E.2d 120, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 1634 (1984).

Disclosure of evidence favorable to defendant. — The Supreme Court's decision in Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963), does not establish an inflexible principle that requires the disclosure of informants' identities or of all evidence, but only that which is favorable to a defendant if the evidence is material to guilt or punishment. Henderson v. State, 162 Ga. App. 320, 292 S.E.2d 77, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3122 (1982).

Even absent a motion under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963), the prosecutor is under a duty to disclose clearly exculpatory evidence to the defense. Osborn v. State, 161 Ga. App. 132, 291 S.E.2d 22, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3019 (1982).

If the defense specifically requests disclosure of exculpatory evidence and then requests an in camera inspection because of dissatisfaction with the state's response, the trial court is under a duty to conduct the inspection. Osborn v. State, 161 Ga. App. 132, 291 S.E.2d 22, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3019 (1982).

Because the defendant failed to present any evidence that the state was in possession of, and failed to disclose, exculpatory information from the telephone tip line, the defendant's claim that the trial court violated the defendant's rights under Brady and the sixth amendment failed. Reed v. State, 314 Ga. 534, 878 S.E.2d 217, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 237 (2022).

Prosecution need not seek out information for defendant. Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963), which proscribed the suppression of evidence favorable to an accused by the prosecution, does not impose an affirmative obligation on the prosecution to seek out information for the defense, even if such information is more accessible to the prosecution than to the defense. Hines v. State, 249 Ga. 257, 290 S.E.2d 911, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1133 (1982).

Where information as to prior convictions is not known to the prosecution nor in its file, denial of defendant's motion for disclosure of state witness's prior convictions does not amount to suppressing of evidence. Hines v. State, 249 Ga. 257, 290 S.E.2d 911, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1133 (1982).

Admission of interlocking confessions with proper limiting instructions conforms to requirements of U.S. Const., amends. 6 and 14. Tatum v. State, 249 Ga. 422, 291 S.E.2d 701, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1152 (1982).

Confessions or incriminating statements of codefendants must be interlocking to a substantial degree inasmuch as juries are expected to heed limiting instructions; slight disparities in statements of codefendants rarely, if ever, will be so prejudicial as to require exclusion. Tatum v. State, 249 Ga. 422, 291 S.E.2d 701, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1152 (1982).

Admission of custodial statements made by codefendants who did not testify at trial in which the phrase "another person" was substituted for the names of the defendants violated the right of confrontation. Kesler v. State, 215 Ga. App. 553, 451 S.E.2d 496, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 1305 (1994), cert. denied, No. S95C0592, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 398 (Ga. Mar. 17, 1995), cert. denied, No. S95C0590, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 400 (Ga. Mar. 17, 1995). But see Hanifa v. State, 269 Ga. 797, 505 S.E.2d 731, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 896 (1998), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023).

Victim's statement to assistant D.A. was testimonial. — Murder victim's statement to an assistant district attorney, an officer of the state, was testimonial in nature; because the victim was unavailable, admission of the hearsay statement violated the defendant's right to confrontation. Lindsey v. State, 282 Ga. 447, 651 S.E.2d 66, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 581 (2007).

Verified petition seeking a protective order from the defendant, filed by the murder victim 11 days before the victim's death, was testimonial in nature and the petition's admission violated the defendant's right to confrontation, but any error was harmless given the testimony of seven police officers regarding eight calls for domestic violence at the home of the defendant and the victim. Brown v. State, 288 Ga. 404, 703 S.E.2d 624, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 844 (2010).

Denial of access to witness's letter. — Where a letter contained nothing of an exculpatory or impeaching nature, the district court did not err in finding that the author's "testimony at trial closely tracks the information divulged in the letter," and it was evident from the record that the denial of access to the letter did not restrict the scope of defendant's cross-examination of its author, the state was under no obligation to make the letter accessible to the defense, and the trial court's refusal to order otherwise did not deprive defendant of a fair trial. Hardin v. Black, 845 F.2d 953, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6862 (11th Cir. 1988).

Codefendant's statement. — Admission of codefendant's extrajudicial statement held not to be reversible error. See Hope v. State, 164 Ga. App. 665, 297 S.E.2d 88, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3339 (1982).

Codefendant's confession admissible where codefendant is available for cross-examination. — The rule enunciated in Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123, 88 S. Ct. 1620, 20 L. Ed. 2d 476 (1968), that admission of a codefendant's confession violates the confrontation clause despite omitting instructions, is inapplicable where a codefendant, the declarant, testified at trial and was available for cross-examination. Fain v. State, 165 Ga. App. 188, 300 S.E.2d 197, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3128 (1983).

Admission of statements made by codefendant to witnesses. — Where the defendant in a murder trial contended that there were two violations of Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123, 88 S. Ct. 1620, 20 L. Ed. 2d 476 (1968), i.e., a witness's testimony that the codefendant told the witness, after the homicide, that "someone named Mark" committed the crime, and the police radio operator's testimony that the codefendant had identified a third person as one who had helped with killing the codefendant's spouse, it was held that the witness's testimony was admissible because the witness was a co-conspirator and the statement was made during the concealment phase of the conspiracy, and the radio operator's testimony was admissible because it made no reference whatsoever to the defendant, hence did not implicate the defendant in a Bruton sense. Langley v. State, 258 Ga. 251, 368 S.E.2d 316, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 224 (1988).

Testimony of polygraph examiner. — Failure of the codefendant to take the stand could not block opinion testimony of a polygraph examiner that the examiner thought the codefendant was lying when the codefendant denied presence or assistance in robbery, and the witness was subject to cross-examination. Martin v. State, 162 Ga. App. 703, 292 S.E.2d 864, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3160 (1982).

No right to cross-examine defendant's own translator. — With regard to various drug-related convictions, defendant's sixth amendment right to confrontation was not violated by the trial court refusing to allow defendant to cross-examine defendant's Spanish translator after defendant's tape-recorded statement was played before the jury and defendant asserted that certain statements were translated incorrectly as, under the language conduit rule, the translator's statements were defendant's own and, therefore, defendant had no right to, in essence, confront defendant. Hernandez v. State, 291 Ga. App. 562, 662 S.E.2d 325, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 573 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1631, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 763 (Ga. Sept. 22, 2008), overruled on other grounds, Williams v. Harvey, 311 Ga. 439, 858 S.E.2d 479, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 256 (2021).

Trial court did not err in finding that the defendant failed to meet the defendant's burden of showing that the performance of the defendant's attorneys was deficient because the defendant's counsel recognized the need for interpreters and secured the interpreters; the defendant, who spoke only Spanish, had ample opportunity to inform counsel or the trial court of any problems with the interpreters, and the fact that the defendant did not do so hampered the defendant in meeting the defendant's burden to show that counsel's performance in securing interpreters to assist the defendant was inadequate. Pineda v. State, 288 Ga. 612, 706 S.E.2d 407, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 154 (2011).

Availability of drug samples where notes as to test results destroyed. — In a prosecution for possession of a controlled substance, the testimony of a chemist about the nature of the substance involved was admissible despite the destruction of the witness's notes because the drug samples were themselves available for the defendant to obtain the defendant's own analysis. United States v. Vaughn, 736 F.2d 665, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 20452 (11th Cir. 1984).

Evidentiary prerequisite of certified record of witness's prior conviction. — Trial court did not impermissibly limit defendant's confrontation rights by holding that defendant could not submit evidence of or question a witness concerning a prior conviction without introducing a certified record of the conviction. Kimbrough v. State, 254 Ga. 504, 330 S.E.2d 875, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 804 (1985) (murder conviction); Mincey v. State, 257 Ga. 500, 360 S.E.2d 578, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 918 (1987) (armed robbery conviction).

Waiver of the right to confrontation cannot be presumed from a silent record; the record must show a knowing, intelligent, and voluntary waiver made with the accused's consent. Aaron v. State, 172 Ga. App. 700, 324 S.E.2d 564, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 3082 (1984).

Short absence of defendant not denial of right. — Defendant's right to confrontation of witness was not violated during a short absence when the defendant went to the restroom, because there was no indication in the record that the defendant's absence was of any significance and the defendant's attorney were present at all times. Finney v. Zant, 709 F.2d 643, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25936 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled in part, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22736 (11th Cir. 1986).

Required procedure for ordering defendant from courtroom after an initial disruptive incident. — Where a defendant, who had not been given a warning prior to being removed from the courtroom because of disruptive behavior, is subsequently brought before the court and evidences no disruptive behavior, the court must inquire as to the defendant's state of mind or warn the defendant of the consequences of further misconduct and inform the defendant that by proper conduct the defendant can regain the right to be present. State v. Fletcher, 252 Ga. 498, 314 S.E.2d 888, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 743 (1984).

Parents were denied due process in a termination of parental rights proceeding, where they were excluded from an observation room during an interview of their children, even though the parents' attorneys were present in the room, from which location no one would have been seen or heard by the children. In re M.S., 178 Ga. App. 380, 343 S.E.2d 152, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2532 (1986).

In defendant's prosecution for child cruelty, there was no sixth amendment violation because the mere fact that defendant was unable to ask a live-in paramour, who had not been charged in the case, about possible punishment for child cruelty on cross-examination did not diminish defendant's attempt to show the paramour's motive for testifying for the state. Bosnak v. State, 263 Ga. App. 313, 587 S.E.2d 814, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1194 (2003).

Prejudice held to require new sentencing hearing. — Prejudice from admission of testimony in violation of murder defendant's sixth amendment right of confrontation did not sufficiently infect the guilt-innocence phase to require a new trial but did require a new sentencing hearing, where the testimony portrayed the defendant not as a dominated follower of the defendant's spouse in the crime, but as a willing participant in a plan of perverse sexual activity that ultimately led to the death of the victim. Buttrum v. Black, 721 F. Supp. 1268, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11272 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 908 F.2d 695, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 12655 (11th Cir. 1990).

Defendant's confrontation rights not violated. — Preventing defense counsel from cross-examining a witness as to numerous allegedly unfounded 9-1-1 calls the witness made over the past several years did not violate defendant's rights under the confrontation clause for effective cross-examination as there was no showing that these alleged 9-1-1 calls were relevant to any issue in the case. Phyfer v. State, 259 Ga. App. 356, 577 S.E.2d 56, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 96 (2003), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Trial court did not express an opinion in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 or of an inmate's rights to confrontation or a fair and impartial jury when it explained to those in the courtroom during jury deliberations in the inmate's trial on drug and weapons offenses that it had received two notes from the jury describing a communication received by a juror that offered the juror a bribe in exchange for changing the juror's vote to not guilty; the trial court's comment did not suggest that the inmate had directed the bribery attempt because it merely reviewed the jurors' notes and did not go beyond them, and it added nothing to that which the jurors already knew. Greer v. Thompson, 281 Ga. 419, 637 S.E.2d 698, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 983 (2006).

Because a deceased witness was unavailable for trial, and the defendant was afforded an adequate opportunity to cross-examine the witness at a sentencing trial held before the defendant withdrew a guilty plea, the admission of the witness's prior testimony at the defendant's guilt/innocence trial would not violate the confrontation clause. Martin v. State, 284 Ga. 504, 668 S.E.2d 685, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 845 (2008).

There was no violation of a defendant's sixth amendment right to confrontation when the defendant declined to cross-examine a codefendant who had refused to answer certain questions on direct examination. No effort was made by defense counsel to ascertain whether the codefendant would continue the codefendant's refusal to answer certain questions or would offer testimony in explanation of the codefendant's prior trial testimony or in exculpation of the defendant. Green v. State, 298 Ga. App. 17, 679 S.E.2d 348, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 566 (2009).

Admitting testimony of a supervisor who did not do every step of DNA testing did not violate the defendants' rights to confrontation because the supervisor performed every step of the test except for only being present when another technician only put test samples and controls into a scientific instrument used to complete a single step of the testing. Disharoon v. State, 291 Ga. 45, 727 S.E.2d 465, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 439, cert. denied, 568 U.S. 1052, 133 S. Ct. 767, 184 L. Ed. 2d 507, 2012 U.S. LEXIS 9236 (2012).

Detectives' statements in a video recording that the defendant's co-conspirators had already given the defendant up were clearly not meant to establish as true that others had implicated the defendant, but were simply a part of an interrogation technique that did not violate the Confrontation Clause as the detectives did not identify the co-conspirators, and no substance of any supposed statements was placed before the jury by the detectives' reference. Allen v. State, 296 Ga. 785, 770 S.E.2d 824, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 191 (2015).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to object to the admission of the codefendant's statement on a Confrontation Clause ground because the co-defendant's statement which was made to a witness who was a fellow jail inmate and inculpated the co-defendant as well as the defendant and a second co-defendant was clearly not intended for use in a future prosecution and thus could not be classified as testimonial. Franklin v. State, 298 Ga. 636, 784 S.E.2d 359, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 237 (2016).

Defendant's right to confrontation was not violated when the court allowed a medical examiner to testify about the results of a toxicology screen conducted by another individual as the report was not admitted into evidence but used by the examiner to develop an opinion that the victim died of the victim's injuries. Taylor v. State, 303 Ga. 225, 811 S.E.2d 286, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 147 (2018).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object that the admission of the adult son's out-of-court statement violated the defendant's rights under the confrontation clause as it was highly probable that the admission of the son's statement through the officer did not contribute to the verdict based on the defendant's actions of following the victim from room to room as the victim attempted to flee and firing a gun at least eight times, hitting the victim six times. Clarke v. State, 308 Ga. 630, 842 S.E.2d 863, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 331 (2020).

Defendant's claim that the trial court's interjections interfered with the defendant's sixth amendment right to confrontation and the defendant's statutory right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination failed because the interjections did not hinder the defendant's attempts to test a witness's credibility and, thus, did not amount to an abuse of discretion. Barton-Smith v. State, 309 Ga. 799, 848 S.E.2d 384, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 597 (2020).

Harmless error. — In a prosecution for false imprisonment and battery of the defendant's estranged spouse, because the spouse refused to testify at trial, the spouse's statements given to deputies who had initially arrived at the crime scene in response to the spouse's 9-1-1 calls were testimonial and their admission infringed upon the defendant's right to confront the witness; however, the 9-1-1 calls themselves were not testimonial, were not prohibited by the confrontation clause, and were admissible as part of the res gestae or as an excited utterance, and since other evidence supported the conviction, admission of the statements given to the deputies was harmless error. Pitts v. State, 272 Ga. App. 182, 612 S.E.2d 1, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 50 (2005), aff'd, 280 Ga. 288, 627 S.E.2d 17, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 159 (2006).

Admission of a first witness's statement and audiotaped interview under the necessity exception to the hearsay rule violated the Confrontation Clause, but the error was harmless, as: (1) the jury was properly instructed on attempted impeachment; (2) the fact that a second witness told a police officer that the second witness knew nothing about the motel murder was not inconsistent with the second witness's testimony that the defendant said the defendant had killed a man; (3) although a third witness testified that the events related in the third witness's videotaped interview were fabricated, there was considerable reason not to credit that portion of the third witness's testimony; (4) additional evidence demonstrated the defendant's guilt, and corroborated the evidence that was the subject of the attempted impeachment; and (5) the defendant's claim that the jury could have taken the first witness's audiotape as corroboration of the "impeached" testimony was rejected. Richard v. State, 281 Ga. 401, 637 S.E.2d 406, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 936 (2006).

Because the state's evidence in support of its charges was overwhelming, even if the trial court erred in permitting a witness to testify regarding statements made to the witness by the victim, the error was harmless. Thus, no violation of the defendant's confrontation rights occurred. Debro v. State, 282 Ga. 880, 655 S.E.2d 804, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2008).

In a defendant's prosecution for malice murder and cruelty to children, while the trial court erred in admitting evidence that the five-year-old victim on a prior occasion had stated to a military police officer that the defendant had caused a bruise on the victim's face because such statements were testimonial and violated the defendant's right to confrontation under U.S. Const., amend. 6, any error was harmless based on overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt due to the defendant's admission that the defendant shook the victim, striking the victim's head on the railing of a bunk bed. Wright v. State, 285 Ga. 57, 673 S.E.2d 249, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 102 (2009).

Even if the expert's testimony that the expert's work had been successfully peer reviewed violated the Confrontation Clause, the error was harmless because the evidence presented at trial identifying the first defendant as one of the assailants and detailing the first defendant's involvement in the crimes was strong; and the identification of the caliber of bullets was not a significant issue in the first defendant's case. Pender v. State, 311 Ga. 98, 856 S.E.2d 302, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 87 (2021).

Cumulative or harmless statement.

— Though testimony from an investigating agent relating to statements made by a murder victim's step-parent shortly after the murder were improperly admitted at the defendant's trial for malice murder, the trial court's error in admitting the statements into evidence was harmless, because the hearsay portion of the agent's testimony was cumulative of other admissible evidence. Gay v. State, 279 Ga. 180, 611 S.E.2d 31, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 238 (2005).

While the Supreme Court of Georgia agreed with the defendant that the use of hearsay testimony denied the defendant's right to confrontation, said error was harmless in light of the fact that the hearsay was cumulative of testimony already supplied by three other witnesses. Lynch v. State, 280 Ga. 887, 635 S.E.2d 140, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 587 (2006).

In a defendant's prosecution for, inter alia, felony murder, the defendant's sixth amendment right to confrontation was violated by the prosecutor's statement, after a demonstration during which the prosecutor poured bleach on the prosecutor's hands, that the prosecutor's hands were not stinging yet, made in response to the defendant's claim that the defendant did not pour bleach on the defendant's hands immediately after the shooting incident to remove gunshot residue. The defendant was not entitled to a new trial on that basis, however, because the improper bleach evidence was collateral and significant evidence of the defendant's guilt, including an admission that the defendant did not mean to shoot the victim, had been presented. Sumlin v. State, 283 Ga. 264, 658 S.E.2d 596, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 253 (2008).

Trial court did not err in allowing one of the state's witnesses to testify that another state witness told him immediately before the shooting that the witness had seen the defendant get a gun from the car in which the defendant was a passenger that night because the admission of the statement did not violate the defendant's sixth amendment right to confrontation since the statement was not testimonial in nature; because the statement was cumulative of other admissible evidence that the defendant had a gun at the time of the shooting, most significantly, the defendant's own testimony that the defendant was in fact the shooter, admission of the statement, even if erroneous, was clearly harmless. Anderson v. State, 286 Ga. 57, 685 S.E.2d 716, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 676 (2009).

No violation of rule of sequestration.

— Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a jury charge on the violation of the rule of sequestration because there was no violation of the rule; even assuming that trial counsel's failure to request such a charge constituted deficient performance, the defendant could not demonstrate prejudice in light of the overwhelming evidence substantiating the defendant's guilt. Dockery v. State, 287 Ga. 275, 695 S.E.2d 599, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 472 (2010).

Defendant failed to establish that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to move for a mistrial regarding a violation of the rule of sequestration because there was no evidence as to which witnesses violated the rule and whether the witnesses actually testified or spoke about the witnesses' testimony; the defendant did not show that the outcome of the trial would have been different if counsel called an expert to assist the jury in understanding eyewitness identifications. Glass v. State, 289 Ga. 542, 712 S.E.2d 851, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 557 (2011).

Unavailable witnesses. — Defendant's right to a speedy trial was not violated because the defendant made no challenge to the finding that the defense's failed to show diligence in attempting to locate certain witnesses, i.e., that the witnesses were unavailable to the defendant. Williams v. State, 290 Ga. 24, 717 S.E.2d 640, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 865 (2011).

Compulsory Process

Right to offer testimony of witnesses and to compel their attendance is, in essence, the right to present a defense, and a fundamental element of due process of law. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Subpoena, if relevant on any issue, is constitutionally mandated. — Once it is established that a defendant's subpoena of a witness is relevant on any issue, it should be granted as mandated by the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5, and the compulsory process provision of U.S. Const., amend. 6. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Right not violated when subpoenas issued. — Defendant's claim that the right to compulsory process was circumvented when the trial court granted the state's motion to quash subpoenas issued to a judge, a probation officer, and a drug-court coordinator failed because the subpoenas were issued and served on the witnesses who, in fact, appeared and whose testimony was proffered outside the presence of the jury. Poole v. State, 291 Ga. 848, 734 S.E.2d 1, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 858 (2012).

Compulsory process applies to those witnesses who are relevant and material, and if the request is not frivolous in nature it should be granted. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

The right of a criminal defendant under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to compulsory process and the right under U.S. Const., amend. 5 to due process are sufficiently pervasive to require the presence of material witnesses in defendant's behalf. Wingfield v. State, 159 Ga. App. 69, 282 S.E.2d 713, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2492 (1981).

Right of a defendant to have compulsory process may not be sidestepped merely because of inconvenience. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Right to have compulsory process may not be sidestepped because the court considers the witness's testimony cumulative. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Right to compulsory process is not a guarantee by the state that the witness requested will in fact appear at trial, but only relates to the issuance of the process. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 1820 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Davenport v. State, 289 Ga. 399, 711 S.E.2d 699, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 502 (2011).

Out-of-state witnesses. — A party requesting the presence of an out-of-state witness does not have an absolute right to obtain the witness. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 1820 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Davenport v. State, 289 Ga. 399, 711 S.E.2d 699, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 502 (2011).

Out of state corporation. — Court of appeals erred when the court concluded that a request under the former Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without the State in Criminal Proceedings, former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-90 et seq. (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-13-90), that an out-of-state corporation be required to produce purportedly material evidence in the corporation's possession had to be accompanied by the identification as a material witness of the corporate agent through which the corporation was to act because if the certificate of materiality was issued by the Georgia court, it was for the Kentucky corporation to identify the human agent through whom the corporation would act, perhaps in conjunction with the hearing that would be held in Kentucky upon receipt of the Georgia certificate of materiality. Yeary v. State, 289 Ga. 394, 711 S.E.2d 694, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 501 (2011).

Use of federal convictions. — Trial court properly imposed recidivist punishment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 based on the defendant's prior federal conviction for conspiracy to transport stolen goods in interstate commerce, 18 U.S.C. §§ 371 and 2314, because the conviction's elements matched felony conspiracy to commit a crime under Georgia law as defined in O.C.G.A. § 16-4-8. Nordahl v. State, 306 Ga. 15, 829 S.E.2d 99, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 389 (2019).

Witnesses who cannot be located within state's jurisdiction. — Neither the state nor federal Constitution obligates the state to compel the attendance of witnesses who cannot be located within its jurisdiction. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 1820 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Davenport v. State, 289 Ga. 399, 711 S.E.2d 699, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 502 (2011).

Diligence in requesting witness. — Court's refusal to issue a writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum to secure the presence of a witness imprisoned in another county constituted a denial of the appellant's constitutional right to compulsory process because the evidence did not establish that appellant's counsel failed to exercise due diligence in seeking issuance of the writ. Jackson v. State, 184 Ga. App. 133, 360 S.E.2d 907, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2173 (1987).

Continuance requested to obtain witnesses. — Denial of a continuance requested by the defendant in order to obtain the presence at trial of a material witness was reversible error with respect to the defendant's conviction for possession of a weapon where the defendant denied possession and the witness's testimony was relevant to that issue. Jackson

v. State, 184 Ga. App. 133, 360 S.E.2d 907, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2173 (1987).

Denial of a continuance requested by the defendant in order to obtain the presence at trial of a material witness was harmless error with respect to the defendant's conviction for trafficking in cocaine where the defendant readily admitted that the defendant was in possession of cocaine. Jackson v. State, 184 Ga. App. 133, 360 S.E.2d 907, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2173 (1987).

Government is under no duty to call witnesses even if they are informers. United States v. Tatum, 496 F.2d 1282, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 7658 (5th Cir. 1974).

Constitution does not require police to provide a defendant with all police investigatory work, and the mere possibility that an undisclosed item of information might have helped the defendant or might have affected the outcome of a trial, is not sufficient under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963). Whitaker v. State, 246 Ga. 163, 269 S.E.2d 436, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1030 (1980).

Subpoenas of informants not required where testimony neither exculpatory nor material. — A trial court's refusal to require the state to identify and produce an informant does not wrongfully deprive a defendant of the right to cross-examine witnesses, when the defendant makes no showing of, and does not in any way call in issue, any favorability or materiality of the informant's testimony to the defense. Bennett v. State, 153 Ga. App. 21, 264 S.E.2d 516, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 1656 (1980).

Generalized assertion of privilege yields to a demonstrated, specific need for evidence in a pending criminal trial. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Materiality to defense must be weighed against privilege. — The trial judge must conduct a hearing on the merits of the Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1962) motion and if the judge finds the evidence material under Brady, the judge must weigh it against the state's privilege under Roviaro v. United States, 353 U.S. 53, 77 S. Ct. 623, 1 L. Ed. 2d 639 (1956). Davidson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 457, 274 S.E.2d 807, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3066 (1980).

Governmental privilege must not deny defendant of anything material to the defense. — Since the government that prosecutes an accused also has the duty to protect the defendant's constitutional rights, it may not undertake prosecution and then invoke its governmental privileges to deprive the accused of anything that might be material to the defense. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd on other grounds, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied 425 U.S. 911, 96 S.Ct. 1505, 47 L.Ed. 2d 760, (1976).

Absolute privilege against disclosure in every case involving an informer is impermissible where a Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1962) motion is made, but this error can be cured by a post-trial hearing before the judge in the trial court. Davidson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 457, 274 S.E.2d 807, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3066 (1980).

Constitutional doctrine of separation of powers may not limit an individual's right to a fair hearing and to present a defense. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Duty of disclosure of evidence obtained by Congress is to be governed by the same rules as applied to the other branches. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Legislative branch may not invoke the privilege of confidentiality at the expense of the accused's right to evidence. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Competing public interests must be accommodated. — When a congressional inquiry and a criminal prosecution cross paths, congressional privilege is not absolute, and Congress must accommodate the public interest in legitimate legislative inquiry with the public interest in securing the witness a fair trial. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Assertion of presidential privilege must yield to the need for evidence in a pending criminal trial and the fundamental demands of due process of law in the fair administration of justice. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

When presidential privilege must yield. — Absent a claim of need to protect military, diplomatic, or sensitive national security secrets, the right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to compulsory process and U.S. Const., amend. 5, right to due process of law require the presidential privilege as to confidential communications to give way where the district court determines after in camera inspection that the material is relevant and admissible in a criminal trial. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d 819, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20902 (5th Cir. 1981).

Suppression by the prosecution of evidence favorable to an accused despite a request for it violates due process where the evidence is material either to guilt or to punishment. The evidence is material if it is of sufficient significance to result in the denial of the defendant's right to a fair trial if not disclosed. Davidson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 457, 274 S.E.2d 807, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3066 (1980).

Right to testimony of immunized witnesses. — It is difficult to extrapolate from the sixth amendment guarantee of compulsory process a right to the testimony of an immunized witness. Dampier v. State, 249 Ga. 299, 290 S.E.2d 431, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1140 (1982).

Denial of use immunity to defense witnesses. — Defendant's compulsory process rights under U.S. Const., amend.

6 and equal protection and due process rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5, were not violated by denial of use immunity to defense witnesses where such immunity was not requested by the defendant in the trial court for one of the witnesses and no prejudice would have resulted had a request been made and denied; and with regard to other witnesses, defendant failed to demonstrate that a grant of immunity was required to preserve fundamental fairness in the trial. United States v. Cohen, 631 F.2d 1223, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11723 (5th Cir. 1980).

Failure to grant immunity to a defendant for exculpatory testimony. — Rights to compulsory process of other defendants are not violated by the trial court's failure to grant immunity to a particular defendant for the defendant's alleged exculpatory testimony. United States v. Herbst, 641 F.2d 1161, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 14501 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 851, 102 S. Ct. 292, 70 L. Ed. 2d 141, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3506 (1981).

State statutes that violate U.S. Const., amend. 6. — U.S. Const., amend. 6 is violated by a state statute that disqualifies persons charged as principals, accomplices or accessories in the same crime from testifying in behalf of one another, while permitting such persons to testify in behalf of the prosecution. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d 819, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20902 (5th Cir. 1981).

Common-law privilege for confidential marital communications. — U.S. Const., amend. 6 overrides the common-law privilege for confidential marital communications if the defendant seeks to introduce the testimony of the witness's spouse to the effect that the witness had confessed to the crime. United States v. Brown, 634 F.2d 819, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20902 (5th Cir. 1981).

Testimony of witness who is in violation of sequestration rules. — Where witnesses in a criminal case have been sequestered, and the defendant thereafter seeks to call as a witness a person who has remained in the courtroom, the testimony of such witness is admissible over objection by the state. Jordan v. State, 247 Ga. 328, 276 S.E.2d 224, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 692 (1981).

Admission of lie detector test results. — Requiring the defendant to obtain an express stipulation of the parties in order for lie detector test results to be admissible does not violate the defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to call witnesses in defense. Jones v. State, 156 Ga. App. 543, 275 S.E.2d 119, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3117 (1980).

Witness testimony based upon ex parte statements. — It is error to make a determination that a prospective witness is incompetent to testify on the basis of ex parte statements. Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 633 (1981).

Denial of continuance where defendant not diligent in securing witness attendance. — A continuance requested by the defendant in order to obtain the presence at trial of a material witness is properly denied if the defendant has not been diligent in attempting to procure the attendance of the absent witness. Burney v. State, 244 Ga. 33, 257 S.E.2d 543, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1093 (1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 970, 100 S. Ct. 463, 62 L. Ed. 2d 385, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 3895 (1979), superseded by statute as stated in Nelms v. Georgian Manor Condominium Asso., 253 Ga. 410, 321 S.E.2d 330, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 959 (1984).

Evidence may not be excluded as a discovery sanction. — The compulsory process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 6 forbids the exclusion of otherwise admissible evidence solely as a sanction to enforce discovery rules or orders against criminal defendants. United States v. Davis, 639 F.2d 239, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19336 (5th Cir. 1981), overruled in part as stated in, United States v. Wills, 40 F.4th 330, 2022 U.S. App. LEXIS 19384 (5th Cir. 2022), overruled in part as stated in, United States v. Quintanilla, 114 F.4th 453, 2024 U.S. App. LEXIS 22154 (5th Cir. 2024).

Exclusion of evidence or witnesses as sanction against defendant. — The compulsory process clause forbids the exclusion of otherwise admissible evidence solely as a sanction to enforce discovery rules or orders against criminal defendants. United States v. Davis, 639 F.2d 239, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19336 (5th Cir.

Compulsory Process (Cont'd)

1981), overruled in part as stated in, United States v. Wills, 40 F.4th 330, 2022 U.S. App. LEXIS 19384 (5th Cir. 2022), overruled in part as stated in, United States v. Quintanilla, 114 F.4th 453, 2024 U.S. App. LEXIS 22154 (5th Cir. 2024).

The exclusion of witnesses is an impermissible sanction for the violation of a pretrial discovery order when imposed upon a criminal defendant. United States v. Davis, 639 F.2d 239, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19336 (5th Cir. 1981), overruled in part as stated in, United States v. Wills, 40 F.4th 330, 2022 U.S. App. LEXIS 19384 (5th Cir. 2022), overruled in part as stated in, United States v. Quintanilla, 114 F.4th 453, 2024 U.S. App. LEXIS 22154 (5th Cir. 2024).

Exclusion of evidence must be balanced against right to compulsory process. — The exclusion of otherwise admissible evidence or testimony sought to be presented by a criminal defendant must be weighed against the right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in the defendant's favor. United States v. Davis, 639 F.2d 239, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19336 (5th Cir. 1981), overruled in part as stated in, United States v. Wills, 40 F.4th 330, 2022 U.S. App. LEXIS 19384 (5th Cir. 2022), overruled in part as stated in, United States v. Quintanilla, 114 F.4th 453, 2024 U.S. App. LEXIS 22154 (5th Cir. 2024).

Exclusion of cumulative evidence under Fed. R. Evid. 403. — Exclusion of otherwise admissible evidence or testimony sought to be presented by a criminal defendant, pursuant to Rule 403, Fed. R. Evid., pertaining to exclusion of cumulative evidence, must be weighed against the right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in the defendant's favor. United States v. Davis, 639 F.2d 239, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19336 (5th Cir. 1981), overruled in part as stated in, United States v. Wills, 40 F.4th 330, 2022 U.S. App. LEXIS 19384 (5th Cir. 2022), overruled in part as stated in, United States v. Quintanilla, 114 F.4th 453, 2024 U.S. App. LEXIS 22154 (5th Cir. 2024).

Technical violations of procedural requirements for compulsory process. — It is not always necessary that the defense comply with every technical procedural requirement before being entitled to compulsory process. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Technical violations of procedure should not be allowed to emasculate the efficacy of the constitutionally required compulsory process. Calley v. Callaway, 382 F. Supp. 650, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6592 (M.D. Ga. 1974), rev'd, 519 F.2d 184, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12794 (5th Cir. 1975).

Right to Counsel*1. In General

Purpose of U.S. Const., amend. 6 is to protect an accused from conviction resulting from the accused's own ignorance of the accused's rights. Adkins v. Sanford, 120 F.2d 471, 1941 U.S. App. LEXIS 3494 (5th Cir. 1941); Kent v. Sanford, 121 F.2d 216, 1941 U.S. App. LEXIS 3189 (5th Cir. 1941), cert. denied, 315 U.S. 799, 62 S. Ct. 622, 86 L. Ed. 1200, 1942 U.S. LEXIS 965 (1942).

The right to be heard would be, in many cases, of little avail if it did not comprehend the right to be heard by counsel. Johnson v. Zerbst, 304 U.S. 458, 58 S. Ct. 1019, 82 L. Ed. 1461, 1938 U.S. LEXIS 896 (1938), overruled in part as stated in Wilkins v. Bowersox, 145 F.3d 1006, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 11798 (8th Cir. 1998), overruled in part as stated in United States v. Leon-Delfis, 203 F.3d 103, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 2259 (1st Cir. 2000), overruled in part as stated in United States v. Russell, 205 F.3d 768, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 3103 (5th Cir. 2000).

The right to counsel embodies a realistic recognition of the obvious truth that the average defendant does not have the professional legal skill to protect the defendant when brought before a tribunal with power to take the defendant's life or liberty. McBryar v. McElroy, 510 F. Supp. 706, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12844 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

The purpose of the sixth amendment counsel guarantee, and hence the purpose of invoking it is to protec(t) the unaided layman at critical confrontations with an expert adversary, the government, after the adverse positions of government and defendant have solidified with respect to a particular alleged crime. Phillips v. State, 204 Ga. App. 698, 420 S.E.2d 316, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 954 (1992).

Breakdown in the public defender system. — Trial court's finding that there had been a breakdown in the public defender system based on a lack of funding for the defense of a capital murder case was vacated because it did not address alternatives to funding and investigation costs and it did not employ the Barker v. Wingo speedy trial balancing test, of which a breakdown in the system, if found, was only one factor. Phan v. State, 287 Ga. 697, 699 S.E.2d 9, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 503 (2010).

Appointment of counsel for a motion to withdraw a guilty plea. — Habeas court properly denied an inmate's motion to withdraw the inmate's guilty plea based on the claim that the inmate's sixth amendment right to counsel was violated when counsel was not appointed on the inmate's behalf during the hearing on the inmate's motion to withdraw the inmate's guilty plea; the new criminal procedure rule imposing an obligation on the state to appoint counsel for a motion to withdraw a guilty plea merely clarified and extended the scope of a well-settled principle of criminal procedure, a defendant's right to representation at critical stages of a prosecution. Accordingly, the rule could not be applied retroactively to the inmate. Carter v. Johnson, 278 Ga. 202, 599 S.E.2d 170, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 551 (2004).

Presence of counsel is a necessity in criminal trials and is essential to fair trials. Lee v. Stynchcombe, 347 F. Supp. 1076, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11943 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Persons charged with serious criminal offenses have a right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and U.S. Const., amend. 14, to assistance of counsel in their defense. Shepherd v. Jordan, 425 F.2d 1174, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 9686 (5th Cir. 1970).

Indigency required. — Because the defendant was not indigent, the defendant had no right to court appointed counsel. Everman v. State, 203 Ga. App. 350, 416 S.E.2d 861, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 413 (1992).

Defendant's right to counsel is not superior to state's right to try the defendant for a criminal offense and does not include the right to manipulate, whether consciously or capriciously, the state's attempt in good course to prosecute the defendant. Mock v. State, 163 Ga. App. 320, 293 S.E.2d 525, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3203 (1982).

No subversion of judicial process. — The sixth amendment right to counsel does not give an accused the right to subvert the judicial process. United States v. Stuckey, 917 F.2d 1537, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 19937 (11th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1091, 111 S. Ct. 972, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1058, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 1053 (1991).

Comparison of right under fifth and sixth amendments. — The events triggering the attachment of a right to counsel under the fifth amendment differ from those which trigger the attachment under the sixth amendment, but once attached, either right may be waived in an essentially identical manner, and subject to the same limitations. Housel v. State, 257 Ga. 115, 355 S.E.2d 651, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 745 (1987), cert. denied, 487 U.S. 1240, 108 S. Ct. 2915, 101 L. Ed. 2d 946, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3189 (1988).

The sixth amendment right to counsel does not depend upon a request by the defendant, although a request for counsel is an important fact if questions arise concerning whether a defendant has waived the right to counsel. State v. Simmons, 260 Ga. 92, 390 S.E.2d 43, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 138 (1990).

Admission of defendant's statement to a police officer concerning an attempted burglary was proper under the fifth amendment as defendant had only invoked the right to counsel under the sixth amendment in connection with unrelated charges in Fulton County; the defendant never invoked the fifth amendment right for counsel to be present during questioning in connection with the attempted burglary in Henry County. Smith v. State, 273 Ga. App. 107, 614 S.E.2d 219, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 423 (2005).

Denial of counsel violates U.S. Const., amend. 14. Walker v. State, 194 Ga. 727, 22 S.E.2d 462, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 646 (1942), superseded by statute as stated in Carter v. State, 93 Ga. App. 12, 90 S.E.2d 672, 1955 Ga. App. LEXIS 462 (1955).

Violation of right to counsel is not harmless error. — The constitutional right to the assistance of counsel is a right so basic to a fair trial that its infraction cannot be treated as harmless error. The right to have the assistance of counsel is too fundamental and absolute to allow courts to indulge in nice calculations as to the amount of prejudice arising from its denial. Johnson v. Hopper, 639 F.2d 236, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19339 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1010, 102 S. Ct. 548, 70 L. Ed. 2d 412, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4351 (1981).

Right to counsel in all prosecutions. — Right to private counsel attached in all criminal prosecutions— not merely those resulting in imprisonment or fine; the defendant did not knowingly and intelligently waive the right to counsel because there was no evidence of relinquishment of the right. Barnes v. State, 261 Ga. App. 112, 581 S.E.2d 727, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 559 (2003).

Right to counsel for misdemeanor prosecutions. — Although the right to counsel extends to misdemeanor prosecutions where imprisonment may result (Argersinger v. Hamlin, 407 U.S. 25, 92 S. Ct. 2006, 32 L. Ed. 2d 530 (1972)), the Georgia Supreme Court has interpreted Argersinger as requiring that a defendant in a misdemeanor criminal prosecution be entitled to counsel only where the defendant is sentenced to actual imprisonment. Capelli v. State, 203 Ga. App. 79, 416 S.E.2d 136, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 373 (1992), overruled in part, Barnes v. State, 275 Ga. 499, 570 S.E.2d 277, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 825 (2002).

If the accused is on trial in federal court without counsel, unless the accused has waived the right to counsel, the trial is void. Bisson v. Howard, 224 F.2d 586, 1955 U.S. App. LEXIS 4125 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 350 U.S. 916, 76 S. Ct. 201, 100 L. Ed. 803, 1955 U.S. LEXIS 80 (1955).

Right not extended to participants in civil disputes. — The constitution provides for effective assistance of counsel for one charged with a criminal offense, not participants in a civil dispute. Calhoun v. Maynard, 196 Ga. App. 219, 395 S.E.2d 645, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 845 (1990); Finch v. Brown, 216 Ga. App. 451, 454 S.E.2d 807, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 171 (1995); Bergmann v. McCullough, 218 Ga. App. 353, 461 S.E.2d 544, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 718 (1995), cert. denied, No. S95C1942, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 1195 (Ga. Nov. 9, 1995), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1141, 116 S. Ct. 1433, 134 L. Ed. 2d 555, 1996 U.S. LEXIS 2517 (1996).

Right not extended to deportation hearing. — Although an alien has a statutory right to counsel at the alien's own expense pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1252(b)(4), there is no sixth amendment right to appointed counsel at a deportation hearing. United States v. Qadeer, 953 F. Supp. 1570, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 830 (S.D. Ga. 1997).

Right to counsel versus right to testify. — Because the federal district court presented the defendant with a choice: either to proceed with counsel with the caveat that the defendant could be kept off the witness stand, if the defendant's attorney so desired, or to proceed pro se, the defendant was impermissibly forced to choose between two constitutional rights: the right to testify and the right to counsel. United States v. Scott, 909 F.2d 488, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 14361 (11th Cir. 1990).

Defense counsel was not ineffective in resting the defense case without calling the defendant to the stand, despite the defendant's repeated indications that the defendant wanted to testify, where the defendant was advised of the defendant's right to testify, was advised that the defendant should not exercise that right, and did not protest. United States v. Teague, 953 F.2d 1525, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 2612 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 842, 113 S. Ct. 127, 121 L. Ed. 2d 82, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 4976 (1992).

The district court committed no error in allowing the defendant to testify against the desires of defense counsel and in refusing to question the defendant at length about the defendant's decision. United States v. Moody, 977 F.2d 1425, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 29012 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1052, 113 S. Ct. 1948, 123 L. Ed. 2d 653, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 3043 (1993).

Allegation of mere lack of counsel insufficient to show denial thereof. —

In a habeas corpus petition, allegations to the effect that the defendant entered a plea of guilty to an indictment for a felony offense "without the advice of counsel" are insufficient to charge that the defendant was denied the constitutional right of the privilege and benefit of counsel, since the petition failed to allege that the defendant was unable to employ counsel or that the defendant desired or made any request for counsel or that the court declined to appoint counsel to represent the defendant. White v. Grimes, 216 Ga. 335, 116 S.E.2d 561, 1960 Ga. LEXIS 462 (1960).

Right to counsel where liberty at stake. —

A defendant in a criminal prosecution that may result in deprivation of the defendant's liberty is entitled to the assistance of counsel as guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 6. Blue v. State, 144 Ga. App. 378, 241 S.E.2d 36, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2703 (1977).

Right to adequate representation is afforded to defendant, not counsel. —

The right to adequate representation is a right afforded to the defendant and not a palliative afforded to counsel simply to allow counsel the highest and best opportunity to prepare a defense. Standridge v. State, 158 Ga. App. 482, 280 S.E.2d 850, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2263 (1981).

There is no sixth amendment guarantee of "meaningful relationship" between accused and defense counsel. Turner v. State, 199 Ga. App. 836, 406 S.E.2d 512, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 716 (1991).

Relationship required for ineffective assistance claim. —

Dismissal of a spouse's legal malpractice claim against an attorney arising out of the attorney's representation of the other spouse and their child in three appeals was proper under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) and did not violate the spouse's sixth and seventh amendment rights, as there was no attorney-client relationship between the spouse and the attorney. Crane v. Albertelli, 264 Ga. App. 910, 592 S.E.2d 684, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1611 (2003), cert. denied, No. S04C0764, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 350 (Ga. App. 27, 2004), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 981, 125 S. Ct. 481, 160 L. Ed. 2d 359, 2004 U.S. LEXIS 7445 (2004).

Denial of a requested continuance, after an attorney volunteered to assume the representation of an accused who had been told the accused was not eligible for appointed counsel, was a denial of assistance of counsel. Butler v. State, 198 Ga. App. 217, 401 S.E.2d 43, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1576 (1990), cert. denied, No. S91C0518, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 455 (Ga. Jan. 31, 1991).

No right to acquiesce in the ineffective assistance in order to build error. —

There is no right, constitutional or otherwise, to acquiesce in the ineffective assistance of counsel at trial in order to build error into the record. Sliger v. State, 248 Ga. 316, 282 S.E.2d 291, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 967 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 945, 102 S. Ct. 1442, 71 L. Ed. 2d 657, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 896 (1982).

Indigent defendant's right to counsel. —

An accused who is unable by reason of poverty to employ counsel is entitled to be defended in all the accused's rights as fully and to the same extent as is an accused who is able to employ the accused's own counsel to represent the accused. Bridwell v. Aderhold, 13 F. Supp. 253, 1935 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1098 (D. Ga. 1935), aff'd, 92 F.2d 748, 1937 U.S. App. LEXIS 4689 (5th Cir. 1937).

Lack of counsel for indigent persons being tried for crimes is a deprivation of their constitutional rights. Sims v. Balkcom, 220 Ga. 7, 136 S.E.2d 766, 1964 Ga. LEXIS 432 (1964).

The courts have uniformly adopted the practice of assigning counsel to represent indigent criminals in all cases when they were unable to employ counsel to represent them. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966) (For comment, see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 477 (1967)).

Indigent defendant in a criminal case is entitled to the assistance of an attorney. Phillips v. Smith, 300 F. Supp. 130, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8396 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

An impoverished defendant who is unable to employ or arrange for counsel must be afforded an attorney when the defendant requests it in order to meet the constitutional guarantee and to afford due process. Perry v. State, 120 Ga. App. 304, 170 S.E.2d 350, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 752 (1969).

The right to counsel, guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 6 and applicable to the states by virtue of U.S. Const., amend. 14, includes the right to appointed counsel if the defendant is indigent. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975).

As to inadequacy of "Declaration of Indigency" form indirectly denying the defendant the right to appointed counsel, see Stapp v. State, 249 Ga. 289, 290 S.E.2d 439, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1138 (1982).

U.S. Const., amend. 6 guarantees to the nonindigent the right to the effective assistance of retained counsel. Goodwin v. Smith, 439 F.2d 1180, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 11484 (5th Cir. 1971).

Distinction between retained and court-appointed counsel as to the degree of protection due to criminal defendants has been abolished. Kemp v. Leggett, 635 F.2d 453, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20661 (5th Cir. 1981).

Right to counsel in felony cases. — It is unconstitutional to try a person on a state felony charge unless the person has the assistance of counsel or has validly waived it. Wren v. United States Bd. of Parole, 389 F. Supp. 938, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13700 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

The right to appointed counsel in misdemeanor cases arises only when a defendant is actually sentenced to a term of imprisonment. Peters v. State, 210 Ga. App. 211, 435 S.E.2d 731, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1122 (1993).

Classification of offense as petty or serious. — The length of the maximum sentence authorized by a statute proscribing criminal conduct determines the classification of an offense as petty or serious, and to do so all charges against an accused must be cumulated in measuring the possible sentence which could be imposed for the purpose of calculating whether the offense is petty or serious, and where an offense is classified as serious, counsel must be furnished. Shepherd v. Jordan, 425 F.2d 1174, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 9686 (5th Cir. 1970).

Loss of jurisdiction through failure to appoint counsel. — Unless an accused has intelligently and effectively waived the right to counsel, U.S. Const., amend. 6 stands as a jurisdictional bar to a valid conviction and sentence depriving the accused of the accused's life or the accused's liberty. Johnson v. Zerbst, 304 U.S. 458, 58 S. Ct. 1019, 82 L. Ed. 1461, 1938 U.S. LEXIS 896 (1938), overruled in part as stated in Wilkins v. Bowersox, 145 F.3d 1006, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 11798 (8th Cir. 1998), overruled in part as stated in United States v. Leon-Delfis, 203 F.3d 103, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 2259 (1st Cir. 2000), overruled in part as stated in United States v. Russell, 205 F.3d 768, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 3103 (5th Cir. 2000); Boruff v. United States, 310 F.2d 918, 1962 U.S. App. LEXIS 3410 (5th Cir. 1962), superseded by statute as stated in Nelson v. Foti, 707 F.2d 170, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 26798 (5th Cir. 1983).

A court's jurisdiction at the beginning of trial may be lost in the course of the proceedings due to failure to complete the court, as U.S. Const., amend. 6 requires, by providing counsel for an accused who is unable to obtain counsel, who has not intelligently waived this constitutional guaranty, and whose life or liberty is at stake. If this requirement of U.S. Const., amend. 6 is not complied with, the court no longer has jurisdiction to proceed. Reid v. Sanford, 42 F. Supp. 300, 1941 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2427 (D. Ga. 1941).

Lack of counsel is a fatal defect unless cured by a showing that the defendant intelligently and voluntarily waived the right thereto. Anything less is not waiver. Phillips v. Smith, 300 F. Supp. 130, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8396 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Psychiatric examination. — Defendant's suppression motion was properly denied as to the defendant's psychiatric examination by a state's expert as the defendant's counsel knew of the time, place, scope, and nature of the examination, but chose not to attend; the examination did not violate the defendant's fifth or sixth amendment rights. Durham v. State, 281 Ga. 208, 636 S.E.2d 513, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 832 (2006).

Re-sentencing. — Defendant's re-sentencing without court-appointed counsel to represent the defendant was affirmed as the trial court was simply instructed to merge the defendant's armed robbery conviction into the defendant's felony murder conviction; as the trial court had no discretion in the matter and its re-sentencing of the defendant was a ministerial act, the re-sentencing was proper. Robertson v. State, 280 Ga. 885, 635 S.E.2d 138, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 585 (2006).

Habeas corpus proceedings. — Georgia is not constitutionally required to provide counsel in death penalty habeas corpus proceedings in order to ensure the fundamental fairness of Georgia's death penalty procedures and meaningful access to the courts. Gibson v. Turpin, 270 Ga. 855, 513 S.E.2d 186, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 170 (1999).

Right to counsel if defendant is sentenced to probation. — Rule announced in Alabama v. Shelton, 535 U.S. 654 (2002) that absent a knowing and intelligent waiver of the right to counsel, no indigent person may be sentenced to a probated or suspended prison term unless the person was represented by counsel at the person's trial, was required to be applied retroactively to a habeas petitioner who had been sentenced to probation. Alford v. State, 287 Ga. 105, 695 S.E.2d 1, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 320 (2010).

There is no right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to be represented by a nonattorney. United States v. Bertolini, 576 F.2d 1133, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 10026 (5th Cir. 1978); United States v. Anderson, 577 F.2d 258, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 9933 (5th Cir. 1978); Pfeiffer v. State, 173 Ga. App. 374, 326 S.E.2d 562, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2626 (1985); Lebrun v. State, 255 Ga. 406, 339 S.E.2d 227, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 551 (1986); Cruickshank v. State, 258 Ga. 544, 372 S.E.2d 223, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 391 (1988).

While an accused has a right to representation by an attorney and to represent oneself, there is no right to be represented by a non-lawyer third party. Mercier v. State, 203 Ga. App. 494, 417 S.E.2d 430, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 532 (1992).

No right to chosen counsel. — Although the sixth amendment guarantees every defendant aid of an attorney, that attorney need not be counsel of defendant's choosing. Kesler v. State, 249 Ga. 462, 291 S.E.2d 497, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1147 (1982).

Qualified right to counsel of choice. — The sixth amendment comprehends a qualified right to select and be represented by counsel of choice. The right to counsel of choice belongs solely to criminal defendants possessing legitimate, uncontested assets, and a defendant may not insist on representation by an attorney the defendant cannot afford. United States v. Bissell, 866 F.2d 1343, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 2490 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 876, 110 S. Ct. 213, 107 L. Ed. 2d 166, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 4311 (1989), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 849, 110 S. Ct. 146, 107 L. Ed. 2d 104, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 4355 (1989).

Standing. — Even if the Drug Enforcement Administration agents' actions violated a co-conspirator's right to counsel, defendant had no standing to assert this claim; defendants do not have standing to assert in their own defense the denial of constitutional rights to others. United States v. Sims, 845 F.2d 1564, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 7103 (11th Cir. 1988).

Defendant may either represent self or have an attorney. That is all U.S. Const., amend. 6 requires. United States v. Anderson, 577 F.2d 258, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 9933 (5th Cir. 1978).

No distinction between retained and appointed counsel, where counsel is denied. — Unless a defendant charged with a serious offense has counsel able to invoke the procedural and substantive safeguards that distinguish the system of justice, a serious risk of injustice infects the trial itself and, when a state obtains a criminal conviction through such a trial, it is the state that unconstitutionally deprives the defendant of the defendant's liberty. Thus, since the state's conduct of a criminal trial itself implicates the state in the defendant's conviction, there is no basis for drawing a distinction between retained and appointed counsel that would deny equal justice to defendants who must choose their own lawyers. McBryar v. McElroy, 510 F. Supp. 706, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12844 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Right of an accused to communicate with someone who will contact an attorney is not included in the right to counsel. Meyer v. State, 150 Ga. App. 613, 258 S.E.2d 217, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2228 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 952, 100 S. Ct. 1602, 63 L. Ed. 2d 788, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 1341 (1980).

Suspect in custody was required to be warned of rights prior to interrogation even though the interrogation involved an offense other than that for which the suspect was in custody. State v. Rogers, 173 Ga. App. 653, 327 S.E.2d 782, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2664 (1985).

Effect of request for attorney on interrogation. — A sixth amendment right to counsel, like a fifth amendment right to counsel, may be waived by the accused; in either case, once a defendant requests an attorney, all police-initiated interrogation is prohibited, and any waiver of the defendant's right to counsel for that police-initiated interrogation is invalid, but the defendant may initiate further communications with the police. Housel v. State, 257 Ga. 115, 355 S.E.2d 651, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 745 (1987), cert. denied, 487 U.S. 1240, 108 S. Ct. 2915, 101 L. Ed. 2d 946, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3189 (1988).

Law enforcement authorities violated the defendant's right to counsel when they interrogated the defendant knowing that the defendant had previously requested and consulted with an attorney. Gissendan v. State, 269 Ga. 495, 500 S.E.2d 577, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 565 (1998).

While non-custodial and custodial statements were properly admitted, as not vitiating the defendant's constitutional rights once defendant invoked the right to counsel, a subsequent interview initiated by police violated this right; as a result, cocaine seized through information obtained from the interview had to be suppressed as fruit of the poisonous tree. Vergara v. State, 283 Ga. 175, 657 S.E.2d 863, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 202 (2008), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023).

A defendant signed a Miranda waiver, but then requested counsel. The defendant's subsequent statements to another officer, who knew of the waiver but not of the defendant's request for counsel, were inadmissible as the officer initiated the conversation by explaining the preliminary hearing process, and this conversation did not fall within the "booking exception" to Miranda or serve any other administrative function. State v. Darby, 284 Ga. 271, 663 S.E.2d 160, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 544 (2008).

Request must be clear. — Defendant's statements, which did not clearly request counsel, did not prohibit defendant's further questioning or the suppression of subsequent statements on sixth amendment grounds. Fitz v. State, 275 Ga. 349, 566 S.E.2d 668, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 587 (2002).

Statement obtained without violation of rights. — Defendant's motion to suppress a videotaped statement was properly denied as the sixth amendment right to counsel was offense specific and counsel representing the defendant on unrelated charges did not have to be contacted prior to an interview about a murder; the defendant was advised of the defendant's fifth amendment right to counsel at the initiation of the questioning about the murder and executed a waiver of that right, and at a Jackson-Denno hearing, the defendant's inculpatory statement was found to have been made freely and voluntarily. McKinney v. State, 281 Ga. 92, 635 S.E.2d 153, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 582 (2006).

Sentencing guidelines. — United States Sentencing Guideline § 3 E1.1(b)(2), which instructs the court to reduce a defendant's sentence for "timely notifying authorities of his intention to plead guilty," is not unconstitutional on its face. United States v. McConaghy, 23 F.3d 351, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 15009 (11th Cir. 1994).

Obtaining incriminating evidence through wired codefendant violates constitution. — The defendant was denied the assistance of counsel guaranteed by the sixth amendment, where law enforcement officers sought to obtain incriminating information from the defendant through the use of a codefendant's undisclosed body wire transmitter while the defendant was under indictment and after the defendant had exercised the sixth amendment right to counsel. Brown v. State, 199 Ga. App. 18, 404 S.E.2d 154, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 341 (1991).

Applicable standard for ineffective assistance of counsel is found in the two-pronged Strickland analysis (Strickland v. State, 257 Ga. 230, 357 S.E.2d 85 (1987)); in the absence of one or both prongs, the federal and the Georgia Constitutions authorize a finding that a defendant's sixth amendment right to counsel has not been abridged. Gordillo v. State, 255 Ga. App. 73, 564 S.E.2d 486, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 479 (2002).

Presumption as to discharge of duties regarding right to counsel. — If any presumption is to be indulged in as a result of silence regarding counsel for the defendant in the record of a state criminal offense, it should be presumed that the court discharged its state and federal duties to the defendant, including those relating to the defendant's right, if any, to the assistance of counsel. White v. Grimes, 216 Ga. 335, 116 S.E.2d 561, 1960 Ga. LEXIS 462 (1960).

Where the record of the trial does not affirmatively show in a felony case that the accused person of mature age was denied the benefit of counsel, it must be presumed that the trial judge did the judge's duty and that the accused was not denied the right to counsel. White v. Grimes, 216 Ga. 335, 116 S.E.2d 561, 1960 Ga. LEXIS 462 (1960).

Requiring defendant to indicate lead counsel not error. — It was not error to require a defendant in a criminal case to designate either the defendant or the defendant's attorney as lead counsel where the defendant was not denied the right to participate as co-counsel or required to elect whether to defend self or permit appointed counsel to defend the defendant. Garvey v. State, 176 Ga. App. 268, 335 S.E.2d 640, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2854 (1985).

Defendant not denied assistance of counsel where co-counsel present and defendant uninjured. — Where none of the statutory requirements necessary for the granting of a continuance are put forth by co-counsel when the case was called, and there is no showing that the defendant was injured by the absence of the defendant's lead counsel, there is no merit in the complaint that the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for continuance because of the absence of counsel and that the defendant has been denied the defendant's sixth amendment right to counsel and the defendant's fifth amendment right to due process as guaranteed by the state and federal constitutions. Blair v. State, 166 Ga. App. 434, 304 S.E.2d 535, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2201 (1983).

Where the defendant moves for a continuance on the ground that the defendant's lead counsel is absent, and the motion is denied, the defendant is not denied the right to counsel where the defendant is represented by another attorney, the defendant's original counsel of record. Myrick v. State, 168 Ga. App. 223, 308 S.E.2d 563, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2732 (1983).

Defendant not denied assistance of counsel where co-counsel disqualified by court. — Defendant was not deprived of the sixth amendment right to counsel of the defendant's choice by the trial judge's disqualification of the defendant's co-counsel, where the defendant had told the judge that the defendant wanted to keep the defendant's other counsel "because he's familiar with me and my case." United States v. Stuckey, 917 F.2d 1537, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 19937 (11th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1091, 111 S. Ct. 972, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1058, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 1053 (1991).

Collateral use in later trials of convictions obtained in violation of right to counsel. — Prior convictions obtained in violation of a defendant's right to appointed counsel where the defendant is indigent cannot be introduced for collateral use in subsequent trials, such as for the purpose of imposing a recidivist sentence. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975).

Gideon v. Wainwright, 372 U.S. 335, 83 S. Ct. 792, 9 L. Ed. 2d 799 (1963), has a retroactive effect where records of prior convictions obtained in violation of its standards are introduced for collateral use in subsequent trials, and such convictions, even though obtained prior to Gideon v. Wainwright, 372 U.S. 335, 83 S. Ct. 792, 9 L. Ed. 2d 799 (1963) cannot be used for the purpose of imposing a recidivist sentence. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975).

The sixth amendment prohibits the use for enhancement of a sentence of a conviction obtained in a proceeding in which defendant lacked the assistance of counsel. Greene v. United States, 880 F.2d 1299, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 12362 (11th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1018, 110 S. Ct. 1322, 108 L. Ed. 2d 498, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1233 (1990).

No federal constitutional right to counsel exists at a pre-indictment lineup. Phillips v. State, 204 Ga. App. 698, 420 S.E.2d 316, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 954 (1992).

Identification at post-indictment arraignment calendar was not a violation of defendant's right to counsel where it was not a formal line-up, where the identification was incidental to the informal interview of a witness and where the in-court identification was reliable. Robinson v. State, 164 Ga. App. 379, 296 S.E.2d 225, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3305 (1982).

Defendant was not entitled to free counsel at the arraignment, where it appeared that the defendant was at liberty, employable and college-educated, and that there was ample time before the case would be set for trial. Boles v. State, 178 Ga. App. 508, 343 S.E.2d 729, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2542 (1986).

Right of persons who plead guilty.

— The right to the assistance of counsel applies to an accused who must decide whether to plead guilty as well as to an accused who stands trial. Colson v. Smith, 438 F.2d 1075, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 12269 (5th Cir. 1971).

The threshold right to the assistance of counsel is no less momentous to an accused who must decide whether to plead guilty than to an accused who stands trial. McBryar v. McElroy, 510 F. Supp. 706, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12844 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Assistance of counsel in entry of plea.

— A defendant, who was sentenced as a recidivist to life imprisonment without the possibility of parole, failed to show that defense counsel was ineffective for failing to inform defendant that defendant would likely receive a mandatory sentence of life without parole if defendant rejected a plea offer because defendant failed to show that, when defendant rejected the plea, defendant was amenable to the offer made by the state. Carson v. State, 264 Ga. App. 763, 592 S.E.2d 161, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1497 (2003), cert. denied, No. S04C0746, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 363 (Ga. App. 27, 2004).

Court shall not accept a plea of guilty without first addressing the defendant personally and determining that the plea is made voluntarily with understanding of the nature of the charge and the consequences of the plea. The court shall not enter a judgment upon a plea of guilty unless it is satisfied that there is a factual basis for the plea. Purvis v. Connell, 227 Ga. 764, 182 S.E.2d 892, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 836 (1971), overruled on other grounds, Lejeune v. McLaughlin, 296 Ga. 291, 766 S.E.2d 803, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 938 (2014).

Guilty plea freely and voluntarily entered.

— Because a trial judge informed defendant of the charges as well as the possible penalties for conviction on those charges, defendant's guilty plea was freely and voluntarily entered. Hart v. State, 272 Ga. App. 754, 613 S.E.2d 107, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 179 (2005), cert. denied, No. S05C1327, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 601 (Ga. Sept. 19, 2005).

Use of statements where counsel

denied when made. — Neither inculpatory statements nor exculpatory statements such as alibis may be used against an accused if the accused was denied counsel when the statements were made. Echols v. Caldwell, 334 F. Supp. 1356, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10331 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Statements to police in absence of counsel by defendant who has counsel. — Where a defendant is known by police to be represented by counsel, it is not the case that anything the defendant says to police in absence of counsel is per se inadmissible, whether “voluntary” or not. Pierce v. State, 235 Ga. 237, 219 S.E.2d 158, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 842 (1975).

Suspect voluntarily speaking to police. — Nothing in the sixth amendment prevents a suspect charged with a crime and represented by counsel from voluntarily choosing, on the suspect’s own, to speak with police in the absence of an attorney. Starks v. State, 262 Ga. 244, 416 S.E.2d 520, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 428 (1992).

Defendant acting on advice of deputy sheriff rather than counsel. — Defendant’s right to counsel was not violated because a sheriff’s deputy, without the knowledge of the defendant’s trial counsel, advised the defendant to go to trial. Hammonds v. State, 218 Ga. App. 423, 461 S.E.2d 589, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 731 (1995).

When conversations with counsel have been overheard, the constitutionality of the conviction depends on whether the overheard conversations have produced, directly or indirectly, any of the evidence offered at trial. United States v. Kilrain, 566 F.2d 979, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 12841 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 819, 99 S. Ct. 80, 58 L. Ed. 2d 109, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2567 (1978).

Pretrial detainees are denied meaningful access to their counsel in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6 if, in the facilities provided for attorney-client conferences, conversation is difficult and privacy is impossible, as where the facilities provided by the prison for attorney-client conferences are partitioned rooms in which the attorney and client, in order to engage in conversation at all, have to converse at a level loud enough to be overheard by other prisoners and prison employees. Wright v. State, 250 Ga. 570, 300 S.E.2d 147, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 588 (1983).

Electronic surveillance of suspect not in custody. — The rights to remain silent and to have the assistance of counsel do not apply to electronic surveillance of a suspect who is not in custody. Granese v. State, 232 Ga. 193, 206 S.E.2d 26, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 905 (1974).

Statements of defendant overheard by concealed officers. — Evidence of statements made by the defendant in a conversation overheard by the arresting officers who had concealed themselves, as planned between them and the person with whom the defendant talked, does not amount to evidence given by the defendant involuntarily and without the advice of counsel, and is not coerced from the defendant in violation of the defendant’s rights not to be compelled to be a witness against himself. Blackwell v. State, 113 Ga. App. 536, 148 S.E.2d 912, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1126 (1966).

Government deliberately violated the defendant’s Sixth Amendment right to counsel when it surreptitiously recorded the defendant’s telephone conversations with a government informant following the defendant’s indictment and during the period of the defendant’s pretrial detention. United States v. Terzado-Madruga, 897 F.2d 1099, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 4655 (11th Cir. 1990).

Jailhouse informants. — To prove a Sixth Amendment violation in a jailhouse informant case, a defendant must show that the informant was a government agent and that the informant deliberately elicited incriminating statements from the defendant. Baxter v. Thomas, 45 F.3d 1501, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 2400 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 946, 116 S. Ct. 385, 133 L. Ed. 2d 307, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 7258 (1995).

Jailhouse informant’s contacts with the defendant did not give rise to a constitutional violation of the defendant’s right to counsel because all three detectives who interviewed the informant testified unequivocally that the informant initiated all contacts with them; that they did not instruct the informant to get information from the defendant or request that the informant do so; and that they made no promises and offered no benefits in exchange for information regarding the defendant; thus, the informant's testimony regarding the defendant's jailhouse statements about the defendant's case, about African-Americans, and about inter-racial dating was properly not suppressed. Rai v. State, 297 Ga. 472, 775 S.E.2d 129, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 505 (2015).

Trial court did not err by admitting the testimony of a jailhouse informant over defendant's objection because absent an actual agreement between the informant and the state to obtain information on behalf of the state, defendant could not show that the informant was an agent for the state. Bates v. State, 317 Ga. 809, 896 S.E.2d 581, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 262 (2023).

Interrogation of a witness known to be represented by counsel in another case is permitted. Drake v. State, 245 Ga. 798, 267 S.E.2d 237, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 940 (1980).

Although Massiah v. United States, 377 U.S. 201, 84 S. Ct. 1199, 12 L. Ed. 2d 246 (1964), stands for the proposition that it violates the accused's right to counsel for the police to interview the accused outside the defense attorney's presence once it is known the accused is represented by counsel, that decision does not prohibit questioning where the investigation concerns an offense separate from that in which the accused is known to be represented by counsel. Spence v. State, 252 Ga. 338, 313 S.E.2d 475, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 665 (1984).

Payment for expert witnesses for indigents. — Defense counsel is not required to pay out of counsel's own pocket for expert psychiatric witnesses for an indigent defendant. Bowden v. Zant, 244 Ga. 260, 260 S.E.2d 465, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1207 (1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1103, 100 S. Ct. 1068, 62 L. Ed. 2d 788 (1980).

The exact parameters of an indigent defendant's constitutional right to expert assistance in the preparation of the defense have not yet been fully developed. The right to counsel is an expanding concept in a developing jurisprudence in the sense that new areas are being brought within its scope as they are reached factually. Blake v. Zant, 513 F. Supp. 772, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13559 (S.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 984 F.2d 1129, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 2267 (11th Cir. 1993).

A defendant does not have a right to effective assistance of an expert witness which is distinct from the right to effective assistance of counsel. Turpin v. Bennett, 270 Ga. 584, 513 S.E.2d 478, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 178 (1999).

Right to have psychiatrist examine defendant. — Where the defendant has twice been committed to a mental institution, the right to have a psychiatrist appointed to examine the defendant is a right cognate to the effective assistance of counsel under U.S. Const., amend. 6. United States ex rel. Huguley v. Martin, 325 F. Supp. 489, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14132 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Defendant does not have constitutional right to counsel during state's psychiatric examination. Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 945, 104 S. Ct. 1930, 80 L. Ed. 2d 475, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 232 (1984).

Advance notice and opportunity to consult concerning defendant's psychiatric examination. — While there was no constitutional violation due to defense counsel's absence from the defendant's psychiatric examination, the conviction and sentencing had to be vacated as a result of the lack of advance notice to counsel and of the lack of the opportunity to consult. Godfrey v. Francis, 613 F. Supp. 747, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18352 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 836 F.2d 1557, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 453 (11th Cir. 1988).

Refusal to disclose to defendant the statements made to a psychologist by a prosecution witness during hypnotic sessions does not deny the defendant due process of law nor effective assistance of counsel because such statements are inadmissible at trial. Creamer v. State, 232 Ga. 136, 205 S.E.2d 240, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 886 (1974).

Denial of appellant's request to use an unofficial court reporter at the appellant's expense does not deprive the appellant of the constitutional right to a fair trial. Estep v. State, 129 Ga. App. 909, 201 S.E.2d 809, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1194 (1973).

Right to consultation with counsel during recess. — Where defendant had completed the defendant's direct testimony, an order prohibiting consultation with the doctor's counsel about the defendant's ongoing testimony during a weekend recess did not violate the defendant's right to assistance of counsel since the defendant and the defendant's counsel did not indicate a desire to consult over the weekend and no objection to the order was made at the time. Parker v. State, 220 Ga. App. 303, 469 S.E.2d 410, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 179 (1996).

Consideration of person's prior uncounseled convictions for driving under the influence in determining an appropriate sentence for a subsequent conviction does not violate any constitutional right to counsel because the driving under the influence statute (O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391) is not an enhanced penalty statute since it neither increases the maximum confinement authorized nor converts a misdemeanor offense into a felony. Moore v. State, 181 Ga. App. 548, 352 S.E.2d 821, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2545, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 904, 108 S. Ct. 247, 98 L. Ed. 2d 204, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 4268 (1987).

Any contention concerning the violation of the constitutional right of counsel should be made at the earliest practicable moment. Smith v. State, 255 Ga. 654, 341 S.E.2d 5, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 624 (1986).

Denial of right must be raised in trial court. — From the date this opinion is published in the official advance sheets any ineffective counsel challenge will be deemed waived if the new attorney files an amended motion for new trial and does not raise the issue before the trial court so that the challenge can be heard at the earliest practicable moment, i.e., during the hearing on the amended motion, and such cases will no longer be remanded. Thompson v. State, 257 Ga. 386, 359 S.E.2d 664, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 856 (1987).

Defendant's diligence in obtaining counsel. — Where trial of defendant had been continued in order to accommodate defendant's request to obtain different counsel and defendant had been told when the case would be tried and warned of the dangers of proceeding without counsel and the defendant appeared without counsel on the date set, before proceeding to trial the court should have made inquiry as to whether defendant's failure to obtain counsel was attributable to the defendant's own lack of diligence. Hasty v. State, 210 Ga. App. 722, 437 S.E.2d 638, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1334 (1993).

Evidence that defendant made numerous unsuccessful attempts to retain counsel and that the defendant's inability to do so was because of lack of funds demanded a finding of due diligence as a matter of law. Hasty v. State, 215 Ga. App. 155, 450 S.E.2d 278, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 1156 (1994).

Incriminating statements not obtained in violation of right to counsel. See United States v. Kelly, 749 F.2d 1541, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 27493 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 472 U.S. 1029, 105 S. Ct. 3506, 87 L. Ed. 2d 636, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 2316 (1985).

Advice concerning testimony by accused. — Despite defendant's contentions that defendant's trial counsel was ineffective in not advising the defendant in any meaningful way about the decision of whether to testify, defendant failed to show any error; furthermore, when asked by the court about whether or not defendant wished to testify, defendant stated that defendant understood defendant's right, had discussed the matter with counsel, and decided in the end not to do so. Sims v. State, 278 Ga. 587, 604 S.E.2d 799, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 998 (2004).

Admission of non-privileged attorney-client communications. — Defendant's claim of violation of the right to counsel was without merit because the defendant was charged in a one count indictment with failure to appear to begin serving a lawfully imposed sentence and the trial court denied the defendant's motion in limine to prevent the admission of testimony by the defendant's former attorney that the attorney had informed the defendant of the proper surrender date on the ground that such a communication was not protected by the attorney-client privilege. United States v. Innella, 821 F.2d 1566, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 9718 (11th Cir. 1987).

Right with regard to videotaped statement. — Defendant's invocation of the right to counsel with regard to a videotaped statement was an invocation of a limited right only, which the police were required to honor to no greater extent than the express limits of the reservation. Ford v. State, 257 Ga. 461, 360 S.E.2d 258, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 1032 (1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 943, 108 S. Ct. 1124, 99 L. Ed. 2d 285, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 1145 (1988).

Conversation with government informant. — Regardless of who initiates the conversation, the Sixth Amendment is violated whenever a government informant actively engages a defendant in conversation that is likely to elicit incriminating statements about the defendant's upcoming trial. United States v. Terzado-Madruga, 897 F.2d 1099, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 4655 (11th Cir. 1990).

In order to establish a prisoner's claim that the state violated the prisoner's right to counsel by using jailhouse informants deliberately to elicit incriminating information from the prisoner in the absence of counsel, the prisoner must show (1) that a fellow inmate was a government agent; and (2) that the inmate deliberately elicited incriminating statements from the prisoner. Depree v. Thomas, 946 F.2d 784, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 26153 (11th Cir. 1991).

Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel when trial counsel's objection was not made contemporaneously to testimony because despite counsel failing to object contemporaneously, the trial court acknowledged the objection by admonishing the prosecutor not to ask any more questions regarding the defendant's incarceration; thus, even if counsel was deficient for the delayed objection, the defendant was not prejudiced thereby. Kitchens v. State, 289 Ga. 242, 710 S.E.2d 551, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 429 (2011).

Burden and standard of proof of lack of benefit of counsel. — When an accused pleads guilty to criminal offenses and afterwards seeks release from prison on the ground that the accused did not at the time they were imposed upon the accused have the benefit of counsel, the accused has the burden of establishing that contention by a preponderance of the evidence. Cobb v. Dutton, 222 Ga. 11, 148 S.E.2d 399, 1966 Ga. LEXIS 384 (1966).

The burden in a habeas corpus proceeding is on the petitioner to demonstrate that the petitioner was unaware of the disadvantages to be encountered by lack of counsel. Taylor v. Hopper, 596 F.2d 1284, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 13939 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1083, 100 S. Ct. 1039, 62 L. Ed. 2d 768, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 800 (1980).

Denial of a requested continuance, after an attorney volunteered to assume the representation of an accused who had been told the accused was not eligible for appointed counsel, was denial of counsel. Butler v. State, 198 Ga. App. 217, 401 S.E.2d 43, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1576 (1990), cert. denied, No. S91C0518, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 455 (Ga. Jan. 31, 1991).

Response to deadlocked jury. — Even if the failure of the trial court to inform defense counsel of the contents of a note from a deadlocked jury and to seek comment on or input in the formulation of the trial court's response was a violation of the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel, any error was harmless because the ensuing Allen charge, though partly inaccurate, was otherwise balanced and fair and, thus, did not constitute reversible error. Lowery v. State, 282 Ga. 68, 646 S.E.2d 67, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 400, cert. denied, 552 U.S. 999, 128 S. Ct. 508, 169 L. Ed. 2d 355, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 11917 (2007).

Federal abstention. — The court of appeals abstained from exercising its equitable jurisdiction to hear a class action claim that Georgia's indigent defense system was inherently incapable of providing constitutionally adequate services and that the system therefore violated the sixth, eighth, and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. Luckey v. Miller, 976 F.2d 673, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 28489 (11th Cir. 1992).

No ineffective assistance based on witness's ten year old conviction. —

Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the trial court's exclusion of a state witness's conviction without conducting the balancing test required by former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-6-609) because the defendant made no showing that the prior conviction would have been admitted notwithstanding the stringent limitations in former § 24-9-84.1(b) on the use of a conviction more than ten years old. Chance v. State, 291 Ga. 241, 728 S.E.2d 635, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 580 (2012).

2. Attachment of Right

a. In General

Stages at which right attaches generally. — It is the right of a defendant to have counsel with the defendant at every stage during the trial of a case. Coates v. Lawrence, 46 F. Supp. 414, 1942 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2548 (D. Ga.), aff'd, 131 F.2d 110, 1942 U.S. App. LEXIS 2727 (5th Cir. 1942); Leverette v. State, 104 Ga. App. 743, 122 S.E.2d 745, 1961 Ga. App. LEXIS 786 (1961).

The mandate of U.S. Const., amend. 6 that every accused in a criminal prosecution has the right to the assistance of counsel for the defense at every critical stage of the case as an essential component of due process in a trial in a state court compels every agency of government concerned with the operation of the courts to acknowledge the necessity for and implement the means by which this necessary public purpose must be accomplished. The provisions of the state Constitution make the same demand. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966).

An accused requires the guiding hand of counsel at every step in the proceedings against the accused. Phillips v. Smith, 300 F. Supp. 130, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8396 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

The accused's right to counsel includes the benefit of counsel at all the critical stages of the case and sufficiently prior to the trial for adequate preparation. Rose v. State, 128 Ga. App. 370, 196 S.E.2d 683, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1482 (1973).

Attachment of right in felony cases generally.

— The right of a person accused of a felony to the aid of counsel at all critical stages of proceedings designed to bring the accused to trial is fundamental and must be protected by the state. This doctrine requires counsel at least at the stage of arraignment in noncapital cases as well as in capital felony cases. Blake v. State, 109 Ga. App. 636, 137 S.E.2d 49, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 940, cert. denied, 379 U.S. 924, 85 S. Ct. 281, 13 L. Ed. 2d 337, 1964 U.S. LEXIS 180 (1964).

The right of a person accused of a felony to the aid of counsel at all critical stages of criminal proceedings, before trial, and prosecute an appeal provided by state law, is fundamental and must be protected by the state. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966) (For comment, see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 477 (1967)).

A person charged with a felony in a state court has an unconditional and absolute constitutional right to a lawyer. This right attaches at the pleading stage of the criminal process, and may be waived only by voluntary and knowing action. Boyd v. Dutton, 405 U.S. 1, 92 S. Ct. 759, 30 L. Ed. 2d 755, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 93 (1972).

At the very least, every person charged with a felony has an unconditional and absolute constitutional right to have available the services of an attorney at every stage of the trial. Bradley v. State, 135 Ga. App. 865, 219 S.E.2d 451, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1853 (1975).

When right commences. — Right to counsel under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and U.S. Const., amend. 14, attaches only at or after the time that adversary judicial proceedings have been initiated against a person. West v. State, 229 Ga. 427, 192 S.E.2d 163, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 632 (1972).

Right to counsel attaches only after the onset of formal prosecutorial proceedings. Mitchell v. Smith, 229 Ga. 781, 194 S.E.2d 414, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 773 (1972); Hicks v. State, 256 Ga. 266, 347 S.E.2d 589, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 788 (1986).

counsel at a revocation proceeding because it was not a stage of a criminal prosecution, and only had a more limited due process right to counsel under U.S. Const., amend. 14; trial court's flawed reasoning for refusing to appoint counsel for the defendant in a probation revocation proceeding was harmless because the defendant admitted to having committed another crime, did not claim any reasons justifying or mitigating the violations, capably spoke for the defendant, and failed to show a lack of fundamental fairness. Banks v. State, 275 Ga. App. 326, 620 S.E.2d 581, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 968 (2005).

Effect of execution of eligibility form for court-appointed counsel. — Defendant's execution of an "eligibility affidavit form," essentially a financial statement made for the purpose of informing county indigent defense program of an accused's financial condition, constituted a request for court-appointed counsel once judicial proceedings were initiated and did not constitute an invocation of the right to counsel for Fifth Amendment purposes; thus, a statement given to police while in custody was not taken in violation of defendant's constitutional rights because at the time the defendant completed the form, no adversarial criminal proceeding had been initiated against the defendant and no Sixth Amendment concerns had come into play. State v. Hatcher, 264 Ga. 556, 448 S.E.2d 698, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 836 (1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1038, 115 S. Ct. 1405, 131 L. Ed. 2d 291, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 2307 (1995).

An application for appointment of counsel prior to the initiation of an adversarial judicial proceeding against defendant did not constitute the invocation of the right to counsel for fifth amendment purposes. Turner v. State, 267 Ga. 149, 476 S.E.2d 252, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 728 (1996), overruled in part, Byrd v. State, 314 Ga. 21, 875 S.E.2d 643, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 178 (2022).

Defendants' right to counsel is not superior to state's right to try the defendant. — The sixth amendment right to counsel attaches only at or after the initiation of adversary judicial proceedings against the defendant. Buttrum v. Black, 721 F. Supp. 1268, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11272 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 908 F.2d 695, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 12655 (11th Cir. 1990).

Indigents must be furnished counsel at every critical stage of criminal proceedings, including the first appeal, under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and U.S. Const., amend. 14. Thornton v. Ault, 233 Ga. 172, 210 S.E.2d 683, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 712 (1974).

Indigents must be informed of the right to counsel during any critical stage preceding trial. — What will be a critical stage will vary from case to case and circumstance to circumstance. Lumpkin v. Smith, 309 F. Supp. 1325, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12841 (N.D. Ga. 1970), rev'd, 439 F.2d 1084, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 11311 (5th Cir. 1971).

No attorney required where request ambiguous. — Defendant's motion to suppress inculpatory custodial statements that defendant made after the defendant was informed of the defendant's Miranda rights and signed a waiver of the defendant's rights was properly denied where the defendant did not unequivocally request an attorney and any ambivalent statements made by the defendant were not deemed assertions of the defendant's right; there was no constitutional requirement under U.S. Const., amend. 6 for the detective to ask clarifying questions following the defendant's ambiguous request for the attorney. Braham v. State, 260 Ga. App. 533, 580 S.E.2d 256, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 326 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1136, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 768 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2003).

Denial of defendant's suppression motion as to defendant's videotaped statement was proper as the statement was ambiguous as to whether defendant invoked defendant's right to counsel and after the disputed invocation of defendant's right to counsel, defendant agreed to answer questions; the trial court's interpretation of the disputed statement was not clearly erroneous, and even if the admission of the videotaped statement was in error, it would not warrant reversal because the statement was cumulative of other evidence. Christopher v. State, 262 Ga. App. 257, 585 S.E.2d 107, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 761 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1545, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 927 (Ga. Oct. 20, 2003).

Assertion by accused of right. — If an accused asserts the right to counsel during custodial interrogation, the accused is not subject to further interrogation by the authorities until counsel has been made available to the accused, unless the accused initiates further communications, exchanges, or conversations with the police. Ford v. State, 257 Ga. 461, 360 S.E.2d 258, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 1032 (1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 943, 108 S. Ct. 1124, 99 L. Ed. 2d 285, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 1145 (1988).

Because the defendant advised a justice of the peace that the defendant would get the defendant's own attorney rather than have the state appoint one for the defendant, the defendant thereby "asserted" the defendant's right to counsel, and any waiver of the right to counsel for a subsequent police-initiated interrogation was invalid. Fleming v. Kemp, 837 F.2d 940, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 1019 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1028, 109 S. Ct. 1764, 104 L. Ed. 2d 200, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1986 (1989).

No need to appoint counsel where defendant pleads guilty. — There is no necessity for the court to appoint an attorney to represent a defendant when the defendant intelligently pleads guilty to an indictment which the defendant understands. Adkins v. Sanford, 120 F.2d 471, 1941 U.S. App. LEXIS 3494 (5th Cir. 1941).

Validity of regulation barring inmates from giving each other legal assistance. — Unless and until the state provides some reasonable alternative to assist inmates in the preparation of petitions for post-conviction relief, it may not validly enforce a regulation barring inmates from furnishing such assistance to other prisoners. Lepiscopo v. United States, 469 F.2d 650, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6504 (5th Cir. 1972).

Prison's requirement that a paralegal who interviews prisoners be em- ployed by an attorney is not an unjustifiable restriction on the right of access to the courts. Reed v. Evans, 455 F. Supp. 1139, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15960 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 592 F.2d 1189, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15889 (5th Cir. 1979).

Proceedings before selective service board. — There is no right to counsel under U.S. Const., amend. 6 in the noncriminal administrative proceedings before the selective service board. Camp v. United States, 413 F.2d 419, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 11733 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 396 U.S. 968, 90 S. Ct. 451, 24 L. Ed. 2d 434, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1969).

Company level disciplinary hearing. — There is no independent legal right to counsel or other aspects of due process at a company level disciplinary hearing. Clark v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 332 F. Supp. 380, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9091 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

b. Pre-Trial

Right to counsel does not arise until adversary judicial proceedings are commenced. Brown v. State, 181 Ga. App. 130, 351 S.E.2d 520, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2348 (1986).

The right to counsel attaches only at or after formal adversary proceedings. McCounly v. State, 191 Ga. App. 266, 381 S.E.2d 552, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 554 (1989).

Where a custodial interrogation took place prior to any adversarial proceedings being initiated, the Sixth Amendment right to counsel had not attached. Beck v. State, 235 Ga. App. 707, 510 S.E.2d 368, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1596 (1998).

Charges not pending. — There was no violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6 with respect to the admission of written and recorded statements made by the defendant to a police officer regarding the investigation of an alleged hit-and-run accident, which were later determined to be false, as there were no charges yet pending against the defendant and the statements were made in a non-custodial interview, such that the right to counsel had not yet attached; there was accordingly no ineffectiveness of counsel for failing to seek suppression of the statements. Harvill v. State, 296 Ga. App.

453, 674 S.E.2d 659, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 237 (2009).

What constitutes custodial interrogation. — The custodial interrogation which requires investigating officers to advise the person interrogated of constitutional rights to counsel and against self-incrimination is that interrogation which occurs after the investigation has focused on an accused. Boutwell v. State, 256 Ga. 63, 344 S.E.2d 222, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 711 (1986).

Non-custodial polygraph examination. — Stipulation permitting the admissibility of polygraph examination results was valid though secured without advice of counsel since defendant was not in custody for Miranda purposes at the time the stipulation was obtained or the test administered. Brown v. State, 209 Ga. App. 314, 433 S.E.2d 321, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 844 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1591, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 530 (Ga. Feb. 18, 1994).

Mere verbal arrest does not constitute an “adversary judicial proceeding” and, therefore, does not trigger U.S. Const., amend. 6’s right to counsel. Jarrell v. Balkcom, 735 F.2d 1242, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 21326 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1103, 105 S. Ct. 2331, 85 L. Ed. 2d 848, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 1823 (1985).

Adversarial judicial proceedings do not commence with the issuance of an arrest warrant, because an arrest warrant is issuable in an ex parte proceeding. Ford v. State, 256 Ga. 375, 349 S.E.2d 361, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 853 (1986).

Bright-line rule that prohibits police-initiated interrogations after a defendant has asserted the Fifth Amendment right to counsel also applies when a defendant has asserted the Sixth Amendment right to counsel at an arraignment or similar proceedings. Collins v. Zant, 892 F.2d 1502, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 161 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 881, 111 S. Ct. 225, 112 L. Ed. 2d 180, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 4813 (1990).

Right to counsel during investiga- tive stage of proceedings. — U.S. Const., amend. 6 does not give to the accused the absolute right to the services of a lawyer during the investigative stage of the proceedings against the accused. Sims v. State, 221 Ga. 190, 144 S.E.2d 103, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 416 (1965), rev’d, 385 U.S. 538, 87 S. Ct. 639, 17 L. Ed. 2d 593, 1967 U.S. LEXIS 2451 (1967).

Defendant was not deprived of counsel in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 when defendant made statements to police in the murder case after the defendant had been assigned counsel on a theft charge that occurred in a different county hours after the murder; the appointment of counsel in the theft case did not extend to the murder case, as they were not closely related, and the theft involved different victims from the murder, occurred well after the murder, and occurred at a different location than the murder. Chenoweth v. State, 281 Ga. 7, 635 S.E.2d 730, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 596 (2006).

U.S. Const., amend. 6 guarantees the right to counsel at a critical pre-trial confrontation where the results might well determine the fate of an accused and where the absence of counsel might derogate from the accused’s right to a fair trial. Baier v. State, 124 Ga. App. 334, 183 S.E.2d 622, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 913 (1971).

Pretrial, post-indictment corporeal identification is a critical stage in a criminal prosecution at which U.S. Const., amend. 6 entitles the accused to the presence of counsel. Foster v. State, 156 Ga. App. 672, 275 S.E.2d 745, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3166 (1980).

To require a line-up in the absence of counsel and in the absence of an intelligent waiver violates U.S. Const., amend. 6. Schmidt v. United States, 380 F.2d 22, 1967 U.S. App. LEXIS 5755 (5th Cir. 1967), cert. denied, 390 U.S. 908, 88 S. Ct. 830, 19 L. Ed. 2d 876, 1968 U.S. LEXIS 2672 (1968); Ford v. State, 227 Ga. 279, 180 S.E.2d 545, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 670 (1971).

Defendant does not have a right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to counsel at a preindictment line-up. Disby v.

State, 238 Ga. 178, 231 S.E.2d 763, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 948 (1977); Thornton v. State, 238 Ga. 160, 231 S.E.2d 729, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 940 (1977); Young v. State, 243 Ga. 546, 255 S.E.2d 20, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 984 (1979); Johnson v. State, 153 Ga. App. 398, 265 S.E.2d 331, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 1820 (1980); Davis v. State, 155 Ga. App. 511, 271 S.E.2d 648, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2936 (1985); Snider v. State, 200 Ga. App. 12, 406 S.E.2d 542, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 766 (1991); Campbell v. State, 206 Ga. App. 456, 426 S.E.2d 45, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1675 (1992).

Where, at the time a witness observed the defendant in a physical lineup, adversarial criminal proceedings had not begun, defendant was not entitled to counsel at the lineup proceeding. Lee v. State, 165 Ga. App. 549, 301 S.E.2d 906, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3168 (1983).

The defendant does not have the right to have counsel present at the lineup if the lineup takes place prior to indictment and, therefore, prior to the commencement of adversary judicial proceedings. Harris v. State, 168 Ga. App. 159, 308 S.E.2d 406, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3381 (1983).

Where defendant enumerated as error the failure of the state to provide the defendant with counsel at the physical lineup, it was held that the right to counsel attaches only to corporeal identifications conducted at or after the initiation of adversary judicial criminal proceedings—whether by way of formal charge, preliminary hearing, indictment, information, or arraignment—because the initiation of such proceedings marks the commencement of the “criminal prosecutions” to which alone the explicit guarantees of the Sixth Amendment are applicable. Houston v. State, 187 Ga. App. 335, 370 S.E.2d 178, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 679 (1988).

Defendant, who had been charged with crimes against a first victim, but who had not been charged with crimes committed on second and third victims, did not have any right to counsel at a lineup at which the defendant was identified by the second and third victims. Ferguson v. State, 211 Ga. App. 218, 438 S.E.2d 682, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1483 (1993).

Defendant has a constitutional right to have counsel present at a post-indictment line-up. Philpot v. State, 128 Ga. App. 243, 196 S.E.2d 358, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1449 (1973).

Presence of counsel at a line-up at or after the beginning of adversary judicial proceedings is required. Godbee v. State, 232 Ga. 259, 206 S.E.2d 432, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 924 (1974).

Presence of counsel not required during investigatory stages of the case. Godbee v. State, 232 Ga. 259, 206 S.E.2d 432, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 924 (1974); Jones v. State, 232 Ga. 771, 208 S.E.2d 825, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 1085 (1974), cert. denied, 419 U.S. 1115, 95 S. Ct. 795, 42 L. Ed. 2d 814, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 311 (1975).

Failure to provide counsel in a line-up held prior to either an indictment or commitment hearing is not error. Painter v. State, 237 Ga. 30, 226 S.E.2d 578, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1136 (1976).

Failure to provide counsel in a line-up held prior to either an indictment or commitment hearing does not invalidate a conviction. Hunt v. Hopper, 232 Ga. 53, 205 S.E.2d 303, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 858 (1974).

Where the line-up is the result of a witness's prior identification, any error in not appointing counsel to be present is harmless. Philpot v. State, 128 Ga. App. 243, 196 S.E.2d 358, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1449 (1973).

Request for consent to search. — Because a request for a consent to search is not a trial-like confrontation where the absence of counsel poses a threat of substantial prejudice to the accused like that posed by the absence of counsel at a pretrial lineup, or a pretrial interrogation, but is instead more analogous to a request for other types of physical evidence, such as handwriting exemplars and blood samples, a consent to search situation is not a critical stage of the proceedings against an accused to which the right of counsel attaches. United States v. Hidalgo, 7 F.3d 1566, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 30960 (11th Cir. 1993).

Absence of counsel from pretrial photographic identification. — A defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 are not violated because defense counsel is not present at a pretrial photographic identification. Morrison v. State, 129 Ga. App. 558, 200 S.E.2d 286, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1051 (1973); United States v. Gidley, 527 F.2d 1345, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 12513 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 841, 97 S. Ct. 116, 50 L. Ed. 2d 110, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 2671 (1976).

Out-of-court photographic identification in defendant's absence. — There is no established constitutional right to counsel at an out-of-court photographic identification where the defendant is not present. Carter v. State, 157 Ga. App. 445, 278 S.E.2d 93, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1981).

Preindictment photographic identification does not require presence of counsel. Carter v. State, 157 Ga. App. 445, 278 S.E.2d 93, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1981).

No right during appearance of witness before grand jury. — A witness has no constitutional or legal right to have counsel with the witness when the witness appears before a grand jury. In re Earnest, 90 F.R.D. 698, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13293 (M.D. Ga. 1981).

Constitutional rights are not denied where fingerprints are taken in the absence of counsel. Ward v. United States, 486 F.2d 305, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 7462 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 416 U.S. 990, 94 S. Ct. 2398, 40 L. Ed. 2d 768, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 270 (1974).

Taking of fingerprints is not a critical stage at which the accused is entitled to the presence of counsel. Wilson v. State, 158 Ga. App. 174, 279 S.E.2d 345, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2115 (1981).

Psychiatric examination where insanity defense not put forth. — The defendant was not deprived of the right to counsel at a "critical stage" of the proceedings against the defendant, a psychiatric examination, where the psychiatrist's later trial testimony was merely a comment on the defendant's sanity at the time of the crime, a legal presumption which the defendant never rebutted through the use of the insanity defense. Cape v. Francis, 741 F.2d 1287, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 19031 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 911, 106 S. Ct. 281, 88 L. Ed. 2d 245, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 4056 (1985).

Defendant's first-appearance hearing before a magistrate was not a critical stage of prosecution within the context of the Sixth Amendment right to counsel, and the defendant was therefore not entitled to the presence of counsel at the hearing. State v. Simmons, 260 Ga. 92, 390 S.E.2d 43, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 138 (1990).

Voice identification procedure. — Where the defendant and others are requested by investigating officers to speak into a telephone for the purpose of identifying by the defendant's voice which of them had made obscene telephone calls, and where the suspects comply, the situation does not amount to a critical stage of the defendant's prosecution and the defendant is neither entitled to receive warning of the defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 or U.S. Const., amend. 5, nor are the defendant's rights violated. Bradford v. State, 118 Ga. App. 457, 164 S.E.2d 264, 1968 Ga. App. LEXIS 1429 (1968), cert. denied, 394 U.S. 1020, 89 S. Ct. 1644, 23 L. Ed. 2d 46, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 1754 (1969).

Preindictment voice identification procedure conducted in the absence of counsel does not violate a defendant's rights under the defendant. Evans v. State, 235 Ga. 396, 219 S.E.2d 725, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 892 (1975); Arnold v. State, 155 Ga. App. 569, 271 S.E.2d 702, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2678 (1980).

Even if trial counsel was ineffective for failing to listen to a 9-1-1 tape prior to trial, given the overwhelming evidence supporting the defendant's convictions, particularly the eyewitness testimony, the defendant failed to show that there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different but for counsel's error. Thus, this ineffectiveness claim failed. Taylor v. State, 295 Ga. App. 689, 673 S.E.2d 7, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 10, aff'd, 286 Ga. 328, 687 S.E.2d 409, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 678 (2009).

Substitution of other counsel for suspect's own counsel at line-up. —

Although the right to counsel at a line-up usually means a right to the suspect's own counsel, provision for substitute counsel may be justified on the ground that the substitute counsel's presence may eliminate the hazards which render the line-up a critical stage for the presence of the suspect's own counsel. Summerville v. State, 226 Ga. 854, 178 S.E.2d 162, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 713 (1970).

Immediacy and definiteness of an identification based on a description given within an hour of the crime can be sufficient to purge an in-court identification by a witness of the primary taint of line-up where the defendant is exhibited without benefit of counsel. Powers v. State, 126 Ga. App. 113, 189 S.E.2d 893, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1068 (1972).

Failure to provide counsel at a probable cause hearing may not be raised after conviction by petitioners for writ of habeas corpus. State v. Houston, 234 Ga. 721, 218 S.E.2d 13, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1239 (1975).

Commitment hearing is a critical stage of criminal proceedings and the defendant is entitled to counsel. State v. Houston, 234 Ga. 721, 218 S.E.2d 13, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1239 (1975).

Preliminary hearing is a critical stage of the state's criminal process at which the accused is as much entitled to aid of counsel as at the trial itself. State v. Houston, 134 Ga. App. 36, 213 S.E.2d 139, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1895, aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 234 Ga. 721, 218 S.E.2d 13, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1239 (1975); Middlebrooks v. State, 135 Ga. App. 411, 218 S.E.2d 110, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1684 (1975), rev'd, 236 Ga. 52, 222 S.E.2d 343, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 766 (1976).

Indigent defendant's constitutional rights are violated if the defendant is denied appointed counsel at the preliminary hearing and the defendant suffers prejudice on the trial of the defendant's case as a result. Dismuke v. State, 127 Ga. App. 835, 195 S.E.2d 259, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1659 (1973).

Waiver of right to counsel at preliminary hearing. — A defendant waives any objection to the court's failure to appoint counsel to represent the defendant at a preliminary hearing by the counsel's failure to object to such failure before or during the trial. Strickland v. United States, 447 F.2d 1341, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 8402 (5th Cir. 1971).

Arraignment is a critical stage in a criminal case. — The absence or lack of counsel at such time is a violation of the right of the accused to due process. In such cases courts do not stop to determine whether prejudice resulted. Phillips v. Smith, 300 F. Supp. 130, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8396 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Interrogation of incarcerated defendant. — Where a defendant has been confined in a cell for nearly three months and interrogation is directed at obtaining evidence to be used in prosecuting the defendant, this is a time when legal advice is critical to the defendant and there is, therefore, a duty of the interrogators to determine if the defendant has counsel and whether the defendant wants counsel present during the interrogation. Breach of this duty violates U.S. Const., amend. 6 and U.S. Const., amend. 5. Clifton v. United States, 341 F.2d 649, 1965 U.S. App. LEXIS 6537 (5th Cir. 1965).

Statements made to parties which are not law enforcement officers or agents of the state do not trigger an accused's right to counsel. Berryhill v. State, 249 Ga. 442, 291 S.E.2d 685, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1146, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 981, 103 S. Ct. 317, 74 L. Ed. 2d 293 (1982).

Statements to witness visiting defendant. — That FBI was aware that the witness was visiting the defendant and paid the witness's travel expenses for these visits, without more, did not make such witness an agent for the government, and, therefore, the defendant had no right to have counsel present during such visits. Harper v. State, 249 Ga. 519, 292 S.E.2d 389, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1156 (1982), superseded by statute as stated in Wilson v. State, 370 Ga. App. 399, 897 S.E.2d 597, 2024 Ga. App. LEXIS 22 (2024), superseded by statute as stated in Garrison v. State, 319 Ga. 711, 905 S.E.2d 629, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 178 (2024).

Circumstances under which the government obtained statements from the defendant were not the functional equivalent of government interrogation, where the statements occurred because the defendant's relative, in a private capacity, urged the defendant to speak and the defendant agreed. United States v. Gaddy, 894 F.2d 1307, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 2295 (11th Cir. 1990).

Right extends to stages when guilty plea might be entered. — U.S. Const., amend. 6's guarantee of counsel has been extended to the earlier stages of criminal proceedings when a guilty plea might be entered. McBryar v. McElroy, 510 F. Supp. 706, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12844 (N.D. Ga. 1981) (but see Adkins v. Sanford, 120 F.2d 471 (5th Cir. 1941)).

Right to counsel at hearings on motion to withdraw a guilty plea. — Defendant was entitled to a re-hearing on the defendant's motion to withdraw a guilty plea where no inquiries or findings were made by the trial judge as to the defendant's right to or waiver of counsel under the U.S. Const., amend. 6 at the motion hearings. Horne v. State, 254 Ga. App. 207, 561 S.E.2d 491, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 311 (2002).

The trial court held a hearing on defendant's motion to withdraw a guilty plea, but did not appoint an attorney to represent defendant or inform defendant of the right to counsel; thus, defendant's constitutional right to counsel during the plea proceedings was denied. Kennedy v. State, 267 Ga. App. 314, 599 S.E.2d 290, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 628 (2004).

Transfer hearings under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501 (see O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2) are critically important proceedings affecting important rights of the juvenile. While hearing need not conform with all of the requirements of a criminal trial or even of the usual administrative hearing, the hearing must measure up to the essentials of due process and fair treatment. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3067 (1980).

Right to inspect juvenile's records and files in former Code 1933, § 24A-2501 (see O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2) trans- fer proceeding. — While former Code 1933, §§ 24A-3501 and 24A-3502 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-79 and 15-11-82) both require the consent of the court to inspect a juvenile's records and files, a juvenile's right to effective assistance of counsel limits the court's discretion to withhold such consent from counsel representing the juvenile in a critically important transfer proceeding under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501 (see O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2). R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3067 (1980).

Not only are a juvenile and the juvenile's counsel entitled to know what information in the juvenile's records and files the court relied upon in its adverse decision to transfer jurisdiction from the juvenile court, but they are also entitled to view those records and files considered but not relied upon by the juvenile judge. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3067 (1980).

No right to be present at government's pretrial conference with witnesses. — Counsel for the defendant has no right to be present when counsel for the government holds pretrial conferences with prospective witnesses. United States v. Ervin, 436 F.2d 1331, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 12329 (5th Cir. 1971).

Preliminary juror orientation. — The preliminary juror orientation session was not a "stage of the trial" or a "critical stage of the proceedings," such as would require reversal based solely upon the absence of the appellant or the appellant's counsel. Bowden v. State, 202 Ga. App. 802, 415 S.E.2d 527, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 182 (1992).

Evidentiary suppression hearing. — Defendant can waive the right to be present at a suppression hearing and that right can be waived by the defendant's counsel if the waiver is made in defendant's presence, or with the defendant's express authority, or if the defendant subsequently acquiesces to the waiver made by counsel. McGinnis v. State, 208 Ga. App. 354, 430 S.E.2d 618, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 497 (1993).

DUI tests. — There is no right to have counsel present when a person is asked to submit to a chemical test and when the person is asked to comply with the implied consent law. Bowman v. Palmour, 209 Ga. App. 270, 433 S.E.2d 380, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 843 (1993).

In a prosecution for driving under the influence under O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391, a defendant is not entitled to the advice of counsel before deciding whether to submit to a breath test under the Georgia Implied Consent Law; the right to counsel under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV does not come into play until the proceedings reach a critical stage, and the breath test is not such a stage because it does not signal the beginning of a formal adversary hearing and because a lawyer can add little to the warnings required from the officer administering the test by O.C.G.A. § 40-6-392(a)(4). Rackoff v. State, 281 Ga. 306, 637 S.E.2d 706, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 978 (2006).

c. Trial

Admission of defendant's statements to experts. — It was not error to admit a defendant's statements to an expert appointed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1 to examine the defendant upon the defendant's assertion of an insanity defense because: (1) the state had a statutory right, under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130.1, to call the expert to rebut the testimony of the defendant's expert regarding the defendant's mental state at the time of the crimes charged; (2) the defendant had no Sixth Amendment right to counsel during the expert's examination or Fifth Amendment right requiring the repetition of the defendant's Miranda rights during the interview with the appointed expert; and (3) the defendant's counsel was aware of the psychiatric interview and chose not to attend. Walker v. State, 290 Ga. 467, 722 S.E.2d 72, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 134 (2012).

When courtroom identification by witness who made pretrial identification in absence of counsel is admissible. — Courtroom identification by a witness to whom the accused is exhibited in the absence of counsel before trial must be excluded unless it can be established that the evidence had an independent origin or that the error in admitting the identification was harmless. Baier v. State, 124 Ga. App. 334, 183 S.E.2d 622, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 913 (1971); Carmichael v. State, 228 Ga. 834, 188 S.E.2d 495, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 926 (1972); Powers v. State, 126 Ga. App. 113, 189 S.E.2d 893, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1068 (1972); Gates v. State, 229 Ga. 796, 194 S.E.2d 412, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 776 (1972); Mitchell v. Smith, 229 Ga. 781, 194 S.E.2d 414, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 773 (1972).

Permitting appointed counsel to leave the courtroom during the state's argument does not deprive a defendant of the right to counsel in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6 where no actual prejudice is shown. Bryant v. Caldwell, 484 F.2d 65, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 7871 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 415 U.S. 981, 94 S. Ct. 1572, 39 L. Ed. 2d 878, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 927 (1974).

Absence of an attorney from the courtroom when the verdict is returned and sentence imposed has no effect whatever upon the right of the defendant to move for a new trial or to appeal from the judgment and does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 6. Kent v. Sanford, 121 F.2d 216, 1941 U.S. App. LEXIS 3189 (5th Cir. 1941), cert. denied, 315 U.S. 799, 62 S. Ct. 622, 86 L. Ed. 1200, 1942 U.S. LEXIS 965 (1942).

Right of counsel to be present and to poll the jury upon the return of the verdict is a material right, and in the absence of a waiver by the defendant or defense counsel, or at least of the implied waiver resulting from voluntarily absenting oneself in such manner as not to be easily located, a new trial should be granted. Duke v. State, 104 Ga. App. 494, 122 S.E.2d 127, 1961 Ga. App. LEXIS 727 (1961).

Absence of counsel during subsequent jury poll. — Where defense counsel is present at the first poll of the jury and fails to apprise the court of any defect in the polling procedure, absence of defense counsel at the post-sentence poll, held after realization that two jurors had inadvertently not been polled, of two jurors inadvertently omitted in original poll is not violative of any of appellant's constitutional rights to counsel or due process. Hargett v. State, 151 Ga. App. 532,

260 S.E.2d 406, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2624 (1979).

Effect of probated sentence on right to counsel. — Appellate court erred in affirming trial court's conviction of defendant on driving on a revoked license charge on the ground that defendant was not entitled to appointed counsel since defendant was not actually given a prison sentence but was instead given a probated sentence as the right to counsel was triggered when defendant, who was indigent, was given a probated or suspended sentence. Barnes v. State, 275 Ga. 499, 570 S.E.2d 277, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 825 (2002).

Presence of counsel at sentencing.

— Accused is entitled to the assistance of counsel at sentence, and if counsel for the accused is not present when the accused is sentenced to be executed, the constitutional right to the assistance of counsel at all stages of the proceedings is violated. Coates v. Lawrence, 46 F. Supp. 414, 1942 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2548 (D. Ga.), aff'd, 131 F.2d 110, 1942 U.S. App. LEXIS 2727 (5th Cir. 1942).

At a presentence hearing, proof that defendant was represented by counsel at trials resulting in prior convictions is not required as a condition for the prima facie right to introduce the record of those convictions. Philpot v. State, 128 Ga. App. 243, 196 S.E.2d 358, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1449 (1973).

Absence of counsel during jury charge. — The defendant is not denied the Sixth Amendment right to counsel by the court, after inquiring into the jury's numerical breakdown, recharging the jury as to the desirability of reaching a verdict outside the presence of the defendant's counsel, where counsel is voluntarily absent from the courtroom, the charge is brief, counsel fails to demonstrate any error in the charge given, and opportunity is afforded counsel to object to the charge and perfect the record in any manner counsel sees fit. Millwood v. State, 166 Ga. App. 292, 304 S.E.2d 103, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3225 (1983).

Consultation with defendant during cross-examination properly refused.

— Where, during the state's cross-examination of the defendant, the prosecutor paused to refer to the prosecutor's notes and, as the prosecutor did, the defense attorney requested to consult with the defendant, but the court refused counsel's request, and the prosecutor immediately resumed the questioning, there was neither infringement of defendant's right to counsel nor abuse of discretion by the trial judge. Robinson v. State, 258 Ga. 279, 368 S.E.2d 513, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 240 (1988).

Sentencing of an accused is a critical stage and counsel must be present.

Phillips v. Smith, 300 F. Supp. 130, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8396 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Lack of counsel after the death sentence is imposed deprives the accused of the vital constitutional right to counsel and renders the trial and sentence void. Sims v. Balkcom, 220 Ga. 7, 136 S.E.2d 766, 1964 Ga. LEXIS 432 (1964).

Habeas corpus petitioner who was sentenced to death was entitled to a new sentencing trial because petitioner received ineffective assistance of counsel in the sentencing phase of petitioner's trial when petitioner's counsel did not present available mitigation evidence from expert and lay witnesses or pursue other such evidence that was available through the exercise of reasonable diligence. Head v. Thomason, 276 Ga. 434, 578 S.E.2d 426, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 278 (2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 957, 124 S. Ct. 409, 157 L. Ed. 2d 294, 2003 U.S. LEXIS 7586 (2003), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Proceeding to revoke a probated sentence is not a criminal proceeding.

Dutton v. Willis, 223 Ga. 209, 154 S.E.2d 221, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 468 (1967).

There is no right to counsel at probation revocation hearing.

Dutton v. Willis, 223 Ga. 209, 154 S.E.2d 221, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 468 (1967); Reece v. Pettijohn, 229 Ga. 619, 193 S.E.2d 841, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 705 (1972); Mercer v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 620, 212 S.E.2d 799, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1392 (1975) (For comment, see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 325 (1975)).

A probationer has no sixth amendment right to counsel at a revocation proceeding, but has only a more limited due process right to counsel under the fourteenth amendment. Vaughn v. Rutledge, 265 Ga. 773, 462 S.E.2d 132, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 801 (1995).

A probationer has no sixth amendment right to counsel at a revocation proceeding because it is not a stage of a criminal prosecution. Kitchens v. State, 234 Ga. App. 785, 508 S.E.2d 176, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1359 (1998).

A proceeding to revoke a probated sentence of one convicted of a criminal offense is not a criminal proceeding, and the failure of the court to supply a probationer with counsel is not a denial of the right to counsel unless a statute provides for benefit of counsel at such a hearing. Dutton v. Willis, 223 Ga. 209, 154 S.E.2d 221, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 468 (1967).

States must protect prisoner's right of access to the courts by providing prisoners with adequate law libraries or adequate assistance from persons trained in the law. State v. Davis, 246 Ga. 200, 269 S.E.2d 461, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1044, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1057, 101 S. Ct. 631, 66 L. Ed. 2d 511 (1980).

Offering to appoint counsel fully satisfies the requirement that prisoners may not be denied effective access to the courts. — Neither the government nor the prison officials are required to allow prisoners to pick and choose the means of access most convenient to them, irrespective of the burden this places on prison administration, expense, and discipline. Lee v. Stynchcombe, 347 F. Supp. 1076, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11943 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

A prisoner has the right to waive representation by counsel, and having knowingly exercised that right, the prisoner cannot claim that the prisoner has been denied due process or the equal protection of the laws. Lee v. Stynchcombe, 347 F. Supp. 1076, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11943 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Effect of criminal charges in multiple jurisdictions. — Admission of the defendant's statement to a police officer concerning an attempted burglary was proper under the Sixth Amendment as the defendant had only invoked the Sixth Amendment right to counsel in connection with unrelated charges in Fulton County; the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel had not attached when the defendant was interviewed on the attempted burglary in Henry County. Smith v. State, 273 Ga. App. 107, 614 S.E.2d 219, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 423 (2005).

3. Appointment, Retention, and Dismissal

Extent of amendment's protection.

— U.S. Const., amend. 6 generally protects a defendant's decision to select a particular attorney. State v. Fleming, 245 Ga. 700, 267 S.E.2d 207, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 904 (1980).

Due process requires reasonable opportunity to retain counsel of choice. — Due process requirements guarantee to a defendant unable to employ counsel the right to have counsel appointed by the court, but no less do they entitle an accused who is able to employ counsel a reasonable opportunity to obtain representation of the defendant's choice, and the defendant is not compelled to accept court-appointed defenders instead of an attorney in whom the defendant reposes greater confidence, merely to speed the trial by a day or two. Foote v. State, 136 Ga. App. 301, 220 S.E.2d 786, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1333 (1975).

Constitution requires opportunity to consult and prepare defense. — The Constitution requires that a fair opportunity shall be afforded such counsel to consult the client and to prepare a defense against the charge. Coates v. Lawrence, 46 F. Supp. 414, 1942 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2548 (D. Ga.), aff'd, 131 F.2d 110, 1942 U.S. App. LEXIS 2727 (5th Cir. 1942).

Indigency as prerequisite to right. — Because the defendant did not meet the standard for indigency, the court had no obligation to appoint counsel for the defendant notwithstanding the defendant's efforts to obtain representation. Everman v. State, 203 Ga. App. 350, 416 S.E.2d 861, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 413 (1992).

There was no violation of the defendant's right to counsel under U.S. Const.,

3. Appointment, Retention, and Dismissal (Cont'd)

amend. 6 because the defendant did not provide any evidence to show that the defendant lacked the financial resources to retain a lawyer, such that the trial court was not required to provide appointed counsel. Harvill v. State, 296 Ga. App. 453, 674 S.E.2d 659, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 237 (2009).

Knowing waiver of appointed counsel. — Defendant's claim that the defendant did not knowingly waive the rights under Miranda because a detective misled the defendant about the right to an attorney lacked merit because the detective's statement that "you get appointed with a lawyer when you are charged with something" was accurate insofar as an accused may be appointed a lawyer once charged with a crime under case law interpreting the Sixth Amendment and the record showed that the detective properly advised the defendant and the defendant did not unambiguously invoke the defendant's right to counsel. Young v. State, 309 Ga. 529, 847 S.E.2d 347, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 539 (2020).

Arbitrary dismissal of defendant's counsel of choice. — While the right to select a particular person as counsel is not an absolute right, the arbitrary dismissal of a defendant's attorney of choice violates a defendant's right to counsel. State v. Fleming, 245 Ga. 700, 267 S.E.2d 207, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 904 (1980).

Defendant has no constitutional right to pick or choose a court-appointed attorney, but is entitled to have the appointed attorney render reasonably effective assistance. Lepiscopo v. United States, 469 F.2d 650, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6504 (5th Cir. 1972); Harris v. State, 138 Ga. App. 388, 226 S.E.2d 462, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2173 (1976); Fleming v. State, 246 Ga. 90, 270 S.E.2d 185, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 977, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 904, 101 S. Ct. 278, 66 L. Ed. 2d 136, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3545 (1980).

A criminal defendant is not entitled to have counsel of the defendant's choosing appointed. Graham v. State, 172 Ga. App. 660, 324 S.E.2d 518, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 3077 (1984).

Although U.S. Const., amend. 6 guarantees every defendant aid of an attorney, that attorney need not be counsel of the defendant's choosing. Robinson v. State, 182 Ga. App. 423, 356 S.E.2d 55, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2612 (1987).

An indigent defendant has no right to compel the trial court to appoint an attorney of the defendant's own choosing. Where the attorney whose assistance the defendant sought was not a member of the bar of this state, neither the attorney nor the defendant had a constitutional right to demand that the attorney be allowed to represent the defendant. It was, rather, a matter governed by the trial court's sound exercise of discretion. Lipham v. State, 257 Ga. 808, 364 S.E.2d 840, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 58, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 873, 109 S. Ct. 191, 102 L. Ed. 2d 160, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3422 (1988).

Where the defendant requested that the court discharge the defendant's appointed counsel and appoint another, the court did not err when it determined that counsel had prepared adequately to defend the defendant and told the defendant that the defendant could either continue with the current counsel or continue pro se. Battle v. State, 234 Ga. App. 143, 505 S.E.2d 573, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1173 (1998).

Appointment of attorney is left to the sound discretion of the court. Fleming v. State, 246 Ga. 90, 270 S.E.2d 185, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 977, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 904, 101 S. Ct. 278, 66 L. Ed. 2d 136, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3545 (1980).

Defendant entitled to choose counsel of the defendant's choice. — U.S. Const., amend. 6, while not providing an absolute right, guarantees a defendant a fair opportunity to secure counsel of the defendant's choice. Birt v. Montgomery, 709 F.2d 690, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 24721 (11th Cir. 1983).

Discharge of appointed attorney in mid-trial. — Defendant did not have an absolute right to discharge appointed counsel in mid-trial and demand that the trial court either appoint the defendant another attorney or allow the defendant to hire another attorney. Cotton v. State, 223 Ga. App. 288, 477 S.E.2d 425, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 1133 (1996).

Request by a trial judge that an attorney represent an indigent defendant is tantamount to a demand with which the attorney must necessarily comply, but the attorney's professional services, work product, and necessary out-of-pocket expenses in providing competent representation are not required by the Constitution to be compensated. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966) (For comment, see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 477 (1967)).

A court may issue a valid order compelling a lawyer to represent an indigent. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966) (For comment, see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 477 (1967)).

Appointment of counsel to assist retained counsel. — It is not a denial of due process for a trial court to appoint and tender to a defendant additional counsel to assist the regularly employed counsel of defendant's own selection. Andrews v. Robertson, 145 F.2d 101, 1944 U.S. App. LEXIS 2410 (5th Cir. 1944), cert. denied, 324 U.S. 874, 65 S. Ct. 1013, 89 L. Ed. 1427, 1945 U.S. LEXIS 2238 (1945).

Because a murder defendant's retained counsel had an almost total lack of criminal trial experience, the trial court acted within its discretion to require the defendant either to retain a more experienced attorney or accept the appointment of one. Lynd v. State, 262 Ga. 58, 414 S.E.2d 5, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 179, cert. denied, 506 U.S. 958, 113 S. Ct. 420, 121 L. Ed. 2d 342, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 6887 (1992).

Because a defendant failed to argue or show actual prejudice by the trial court's requirement that the defendant's previously appointed attorney remain present at the defense table after retaining new counsel only one week prior to trial, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to withdraw the guilty plea entered to possessing cocaine and speeding. Cole v. State, 284 Ga. App. 246, 643 S.E.2d 733, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 59 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1066, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 514 (Ga. June 25, 2007).

Trial court's order that only one attorney argue for the state and one attorney for appellant does not violate an appellant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and U.S. Const., amend. 14. Willis v. State, 243 Ga. 185, 253 S.E.2d 70, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 847, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 178, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Appointment of counsel where defendant unable to retain desired counsel. — After being afforded a continuance to obtain counsel, a defendant cannot reject appointed counsel and insist that the preliminary hearing be further delayed while the defendant tries to obtain the services of one particular, prominent attorney who has not agreed to take the case. Eiland v. State, 246 Ga. 112, 268 S.E.2d 922, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 981 (1980).

Where competent counsel is provided for a defendant who is financially unable to employ an attorney, the defendant is not denied effective assistance of counsel. Willingham v. State, 134 Ga. App. 144, 213 S.E.2d 516, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1935 (1975).

If the defendant advises appointed counsel that the defendant has employed another attorney, the defendant becomes responsible for the lack of preparation, if any, in the handling of the case when it is tried. Tootle v. State, 135 Ga. App. 840, 219 S.E.2d 492, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1845 (1975).

Trial judge does not have a duty to attempt to force unwanted counsel upon a defendant who has resolutely declared a purpose to dismiss that counsel. Taylor v. Hopper, 596 F.2d 1284, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 13939 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1083, 100 S. Ct. 1039, 62 L. Ed. 2d 768, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 800 (1980).

Court failed to make finding of indigency or diligence. — Where it appeared that the trial court never inquired into defendant's indigence or diligence in securing counsel, and did not exercise its discretion, the case would be remanded for such purpose. Livingston v. State, 221 Ga. App. 563, 472 S.E.2d 317, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 559 (1996).

Trial court did not err in refusing to allow a nonlawyer to represent defendant at trial. Robinson v. State, 182 Ga. App. 423, 356 S.E.2d 55, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2612 (1987).

Refusal to appoint lawyers who had previously represented defendant. — Trial court abused its discretion in refusing to appoint the two lawyers who had previously represented defendant and appointing new local counsel for the retrial of defendant's capital case. Amadeo v. State, 259 Ga. 469, 384 S.E.2d 181, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 405 (1989).

Failure to timely obtain counsel despite opportunity to do so. — If the accused has means to employ counsel, and is out upon bond, and has opportunity to secure counsel, and neglects or refuses to do so, the court is under no obligation or duty to appoint counsel to represent the defendant. Clarke v. Cobb, 195 Ga. 633, 24 S.E.2d 782, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 531 (1943).

The defendant must be afforded benefit of counsel, and this includes time sufficient for counsel to prepare for trial, but where the defendant is apprised of the charge at a previous term of court and fails and neglects to procure counsel or ask the court to do so for the defendant there is no error in refusing a request for additional time on the ground that the counsel has had insufficient time to prepare the defense. It is the defendant's duty to employ an attorney to aid in the preparation of the defense sufficiently in advance of the trial of the case. Duke v. State, 104 Ga. App. 494, 122 S.E.2d 127, 1961 Ga. App. LEXIS 727 (1961).

Request for continuance to obtain counsel. — The facts of a particular case determine whether or not the denial of a request for continuance to obtain counsel is a violation of a person's guarantee under U.S. Const., amend. 6. United States v. Casey, 480 F.2d 151, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9451 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1045, 94 S. Ct. 550, 38 L. Ed. 2d 336, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 1536 (1973).

When continuance to obtain counsel may be denied. — It is not error for the trial court to refuse to grant a continuance in order to obtain the services of counsel where the defendant had ample time to employ counsel, had made no real attempt to employ counsel prior to trial, was represented by appointed counsel and there was no evidence in the record that defendant's appointed counsel had inadequate time to prepare for trial. Miller v. State, 156 Ga. App. 469, 274 S.E.2d 818, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3071 (1980).

A court does not abuse its discretion in requiring the appointed counsel to proceed with the trial of the case where counsel is the only counsel recognized by the court as representing the defendant, and there is no direct evidence that any other counsel is privately employed to represent defendant in the case. Arnold v. State, 156 Ga. App. 248, 274 S.E.2d 640, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3017 (1980).

A defendant will not be permitted to use the change of counsel as a dilatory tactic in requesting a continuance. Standridge v. State, 158 Ga. App. 482, 280 S.E.2d 850, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2263 (1981).

A defendant by the defendant's own misconduct, may, by repeated continuances giving rise to a valid conclusion that delay is the actual motivation, ultimately forfeit the right to yet another delay solely for the purpose of allowing the final counsel the opportunity to make trial preparations. Standridge v. State, 158 Ga. App. 482, 280 S.E.2d 850, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2263 (1981).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for a continuance to select defendant's own counsel; defendant's court-appointed counsel was ready for trial, and defendant did not express any interest in retaining defendant's own counsel during the six months preceding trial. Flowers v. State, 275 Ga. 592, 571 S.E.2d 381, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 925 (2002).

Where the discharge of counsel is untimely and designed as a dilatory tactic, counsel's appointment does not contribute to the defendant's conviction and is therefore constitutionally harmless. Harris v. State, 138 Ga. App. 388, 226 S.E.2d 462, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2173 (1976).

Right to discharge appointed counsel and have another appointed. — An indigent criminal defendant does not have an absolute right to discharge one court-appointed counsel and have another substituted in former counsel's place. A request of this sort addresses itself to the sound discretion of the trial court. Garrett v. State, 159 Ga. App. 27, 282 S.E.2d 683, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2468 (1981).

A criminal defendant is not entitled to the appointment of another attorney as a matter of right whenever the defendant expresses dissatisfaction with the present attorney. Todd v. State, 261 Ga. 766, 410 S.E.2d 725, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 982 (1991), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 838, 113 S. Ct. 117, 121 L. Ed. 2d 73, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 5878 (1992).

Just because defendant experienced distrust or loss of confidence in the appointed counsel did not entitle defendant to new counsel or show that counsel could not provide defendant with effective representation. Middlebrooks v. State, 255 Ga. App. 541, 566 S.E.2d 350, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 679 (2002).

In defendant's convictions for armed robbery, kidnapping, and aggravated assault in connection with robbery of a fast food restaurant, trial court did not err by refusing to appoint new trial counsel after defendant made it known that defendant was dissatisfied with trial counsel and had filed a bar complaint against trial counsel; trial court gave defendant choice between keeping current trial counsel or proceeding pro se, and defendant chose to proceed with current counsel. Holsey v. State, 291 Ga. App. 216, 661 S.E.2d 621, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 445 (2008).

Capital murder defendant failed to show that the trial court abused the court's discretion in allowing the defendant's appointed counsel to remain on the defendant's case to litigate the defendant's mandatory appeal despite the defendant's request for new counsel; defendant's only complaint regarding counsel was that the defendant wanted to forego the motion for new trial and proceed as quickly as possible with the mandatory direct appeal, and the defendant stated that the defendant did not intend to work with any attorney in filing that appeal. Ford v. Tate, 307 Ga. 383, 835 S.E.2d 198, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 725 (2019), cert. denied, 141 S. Ct. 139, 207 L. Ed. 2d 1082, 2020 U.S. LEXIS 3336 (2020).

An indigent defendant does not have right to change or refuse court-appointed counsel. See Cobble v. State, 199 Ga. App. 29, 404 S.E.2d 134, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 362 (1991), cert. denied, No. S91C0883, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 709 (Ga. May 15, 1991).

Sentencing before appointment of substitute counsel. — Even though sentencing occurred after the district court's grant of defendant's motion for substitute counsel but before appointment of substitute counsel, defendant was adequately represented by counsel, since all parties believed at the time of the sentencing hearing that the assistant public defender was still defendant's counsel; the assistant public defender acted like the defendant's counsel, and the district court treated the assistant public defender like the defendant's counsel. Poole v. United States, 832 F.2d 561, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 15234 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 817, 109 S. Ct. 54, 102 L. Ed. 2d 33, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3389 (1988).

Delay due to illness of counsel. — The right to be represented by a particular attorney is not absolute when it would unduly delay and require the adjournment of a trial because of counsel's illness. Fleming v. State, 246 Ga. 90, 270 S.E.2d 185, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 977, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 904, 101 S. Ct. 278, 66 L. Ed. 2d 136, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3545 (1980).

State court may not deny a defendant the counsel of the defendant's choice. — A state court has no right under the Constitution to deny a defendant the right to counsel of the defendant's own choosing. Andrews v. Robertson, 145 F.2d 101, 1944 U.S. App. LEXIS 2410 (5th Cir. 1944), cert. denied, 324 U.S. 874, 65 S. Ct. 1013, 89 L. Ed. 1427, 1945 U.S. LEXIS 2238 (1945).

A defendant's right to counsel of the defendant's choice is not absolute and must yield to the higher interest of the effective administration of the courts. The right is specifically limited by the trial court's power and responsibility to regulate the conduct of attorneys who practice before it. United States v. Kitchin, 592 F.2d 900, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15558 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 843, 100 S. Ct. 86, 62 L. Ed. 2d 56, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 2752 (1979).

3. Appointment, Retention, and Dismissal (Cont'd)

Failure to procure counsel after repeated urgings to do so. — Because the defendant was repeatedly urged by the trial court to retain counsel and the defendant's sole attempt to acquire representation by counsel terminated in counsel's voluntary withdrawal from the case, after which the defendant made no further efforts to obtain legal assistance, the trial court did not deny the defendant the defendant's constitutional right to counsel. DeShazor v. Board of Dirs., 157 Ga. App. 491, 277 S.E.2d 779, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1879 (1981).

Trial court did not err in directing the defendant's attorney to remain during trial, where the defendant did not request to proceed pro se and did not indicate that the defendant intended to employ a licensed attorney to represent the defendant at trial. Robinson v. State, 182 Ga. App. 423, 356 S.E.2d 55, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2612 (1987).

Because a defendant failed to show that appointed counsel could not provide the defendant effective representation, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the defendant's motion to replace counsel three months before the start of trial, despite the defendant's allegations that appointed counsel screamed at and insulted the defendant, lied to the defendant, failed to relay to the defendant a threat made against the defendant's family by a codefendant, and used false methods of persuasion in an attempt to get the defendant to accept the state's plea offer. Kollie v. State, 301 Ga. App. 534, 687 S.E.2d 869, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1344 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0531, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 444 (Ga. June 1, 2010).

Representation by out-of-state counsel. — A defendant, although guaranteed the right to counsel by both the federal and state Constitutions has no guarantee that the defendant can be represented by out-of-state counsel. Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 494, 277 S.E.2d 781, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1880 (1981).

U.S. Const., amend. 6 should not be interpreted to allow a defendant to sanction a lawyer's breach of ethical duties, when such duties serve the public interest as well as the client's. Fleming v. State, 246 Ga. 90, 270 S.E.2d 185, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 977, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 904, 101 S. Ct. 278, 66 L. Ed. 2d 136, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3545 (1980).

U.S. Const., amend. 6 should not be interpreted to allow a defendant to use it as a manipulative or subversive device. — The freedom to choose one's counsel may not be used as a device to manipulate or subvert the orderly procedure of the courts or the fair administration of justice. United States v. Casey, 480 F.2d 151, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9451 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1045, 94 S. Ct. 550, 38 L. Ed. 2d 336, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 1536 (1973).

When attorney may be disqualified for improper conduct. — An attorney may be disqualified from representing a client only if there is a reasonable possibility that some specifically identifiable impropriety actually occurred and, in light of the interests underlying the standards of ethics, the social need for ethical practice outweighs the party's right to counsel of the party's choice. United States v. Kitchin, 592 F.2d 900, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15558 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 843, 100 S. Ct. 86, 62 L. Ed. 2d 56, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 2752 (1979).

Improper conduct of attorney. — Determination of whether the defendant's right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 overrides the danger posed by improper conduct of the defendant's attorney is committed to the trial court's discretion. United States v. Kitchin, 592 F.2d 900, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15558 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 843, 100 S. Ct. 86, 62 L. Ed. 2d 56, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 2752 (1979).

Disqualification of defense counsel where former prosecutor now in private practice with defense counsel. —

Because a former assistant United States attorney involved in the development of a criminal action against the defendant prior to leaving a position for private practice with the defendant's counsel of record, the United States is entitled to the disqualification of the defendant's counsel, because the danger to the confidentialiality of the government's communications and the danger to public trust in the lawyer-client relationship outweigh the defendant's right to counsel of the defendant's own choice. United States v. Kitchin, 592 F.2d 900, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15558 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 843, 100 S. Ct. 86, 62 L. Ed. 2d 56, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 2752 (1979).

Suspension of attorney from practice of law does not violate constitutional rights of clients, since right to counsel does not mean right to counsel of one's own choosing in every situation. In re Stoner, 246 Ga. 581, 272 S.E.2d 313, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1208 (1980).

Ineffective representation. — Defendant should have been allowed to withdraw defendant's guilty plea to serious injury by vehicle as defense counsel's failure to prepare and investigate the case, including failing to investigate the defendant's claim that another person may have been driving the vehicle at the time of the collision, and the counsel's performance at the plea hearing, in which counsel stated that the defendant was driving the vehicle, demonstrated a complete lack of advocacy so as to deny defendant the Sixth Amendment right to counsel. Heath v. State, 258 Ga. App. 612, 574 S.E.2d 852, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 1525 (2002), rev'd, 277 Ga. 337, 588 S.E.2d 738, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 943 (2003).

Court of appeals erred in deferring to public defender's own policy not to appoint new counsel for purposes of appeal and denying indigent defendant's request to raise an ineffectiveness claim as part of a new trial motion as defendant was constitutionally entitled to appointment of conflict-free counsel to represent him on appeal. Garland v. State, 283 Ga. 201, 657 S.E.2d 842, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 190 (2008).

4. Conflicts of Interest and Joint Representation

Where a constitutional right to counsel exists, there is a correlative right to representation that is free from conflicts of interest. Wood v. Georgia, 450 U.S. 261, 101 S. Ct. 1097, 67 L. Ed. 2d 220, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 76 (1981).

Conflict of interest violates defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and U.S. Const., amend. 5. —

An attorney, whether retained or appointed, laboring under an actual conflict of interest in the representation of an accused, fails to accord the accused effective assistance of counsel as guaranteed by the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5 and U.S. Const., amend. 6. United States v. Alvarez, 580 F.2d 1251, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 8749 (5th Cir. 1978).

Constitutional infirmities found in multiple representation of codefendants may violate U.S. Const., amend. 6 or the due process clause. For that reason, relief can be granted. Dean v. State, 247 Ga. 724, 279 S.E.2d 217, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 840 (1981).

Conflict may impair effectiveness of otherwise competent counsel. — The right under U.S. Const., amend. 6 to counsel implies much more than a minimum level of professional competence. Even otherwise competent trial lawyers may sometimes find themselves in a position in which they are unable to render effective assistance of counsel. Thus, where defense counsel in a criminal trial represents one of several clients with conflicting interests, counsel's effectiveness as a vigorous advocate for a particular defendant may be impaired by counsel's commitment to other clients. United States v. Alvarez, 580 F.2d 1251, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 8749 (5th Cir. 1978).

Trial court abused its discretion in denying an assigned public defender's motion to withdraw as counsel for the indigent criminal defendant pursuant to Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 4.3, as the defendant's anticipated filing of a federal action against the public defender and the public defender's office presented a potential conflict of interest that was sufficient to bar further representation under Ga. St. Bar R. 4-102(d):1.7; failure to allow withdrawal in such a situation could violate the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance of counsel, which included representation without conflicts. Odum v. State, 283 Ga. App. 291, 641 S.E.2d 279, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 42 (2007).

Conflict of interest cognizable on habeas corpus. — An inmate's claim that trial counsel had a conflict of interest was a Sixth Amendment claim and thus was cognizable on habeas corpus. Gibson v. Head, 282 Ga. 156, 646 S.E.2d 257, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 431 (2007).

Actual conflict adversely affecting attorney's performance required for habeas corpus relief. Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 104 S. Ct. 2052, 80 L. Ed. 2d 674 (1984), arguably requires a two-pronged showing to justify habeas relief on account of an attorney's conflict of interest: Not only (1) that there was an actual conflict of interest, but also (2) that the conflict of interest adversely affected the attorney's performance. Anglin v. Green, 639 F. Supp. 490, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23503 (S.D. Ga. 1986), aff'd, 853 F.2d 930, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 8883 (11th Cir. 1988).

Court may not impair right to counsel by ordering simultaneous representation of conflicting interests. — The assistance of counsel guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 6 contemplates that such assistance be unimpaired by a court order requiring one lawyer to simultaneously represent conflicting interests. White v. United States, 396 F.2d 822, 1968 U.S. App. LEXIS 6393 (5th Cir. 1968).

Representation of brothers not a conflict. — Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel based on a conflict of interest due to counsel's joint representation of him and his brother because their defenses were not antagonistic, as they refused to testify against each other, plea deals were not available to either of them, and their statements were not contradictory. Adams v. State, 317 Ga. 342, 893 S.E.2d 85, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 197 (2023).

Mere physical presence of an attorney does not fulfill U.S. Const., amend. 6's guarantee when the advocate's conflicting obligations have effectively sealed the advocate's lips on crucial matters. Johnson v. Hopper, 639 F.2d 236, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19339 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1010, 102 S. Ct. 548, 70 L. Ed. 2d 412, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4351 (1981).

No conflict of interest for failing to call previous client to testify. — Defendant failed to show that trial counsel operated under an actual conflict of interest by stipulating to where the murder weapon was found instead of calling a former client as a witness because the former client's testimony would not have benefited the defense. Burke v. State, 320 Ga. 706, 911 S.E.2d 575, 2025 Ga. LEXIS 16 (2025).

No conflict of interest due to prior representation of victim. — Defendant's right to the effective assistance of counsel was not violated due to trial counsel's previous representation of a victim in an unrelated criminal matter because there was no actual conflict since there was no evidence that counsel had any pecuniary interest in receiving future business from the victim, there was no evidence counsel obtained privileged information from the victim that prevented counsel from conducting a thorough cross-examination of the victim at trial, and counsel's decisions regarding the scope and extent of counsel's cross-examination of the victim and how best to present evidence of a relationship between the victim and the murder victim were objectively reasonable under the circumstances. Moss v. State, 312 Ga. 202, 862 S.E.2d 309, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 578 (2021).

Amendment implicated when defense attorney is in situation inherently conducive to divided loyalties. Johnson v. Hopper, 639 F.2d 236, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19339 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1010, 102 S. Ct. 548, 70 L. Ed. 2d 412, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4351 (1981).

Attorney's representations as to conflict are to be seriously considered. — The representations of an attorney, as an officer of the court, that the attorney perceives a potential conflict should be given very serious consideration. Johnson v. Hopper, 639 F.2d 236, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19339 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1010, 102 S. Ct. 548, 70 L. Ed. 2d 412, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4351 (1981).

Joint representation of codefendants is not a per se violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6. — An actual, not merely hypothetical or speculative, conflict must be demonstrated before it can be said that an accused has been deprived of effective assistance of counsel. United States v. Alvarez, 580 F.2d 1251, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 8749 (5th Cir. 1978).

Multiple representation is not per se unconstitutional. Dean v. State, 247 Ga. 724, 279 S.E.2d 217, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 840 (1981).

Single representation of multiple defendants raises no per se presumption of conflict of interest or prejudice. Hamilton v. State, 255 Ga. 468, 339 S.E.2d 707, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 567 (1986).

Attorney as a witness. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by disqualifying defendant's attorney because, although the state ultimately did not call the attorney as a witness, when the trial court ruled on the attorney's ability to serve as defense counsel the court expected the attorney to be called as a witness, and evidence of the attorney's involvement with the charged crimes was presented at trial. Defendant's willingness to waive the conflict did not allow for the attorney's representation because the attorney potentially would have been faced with impeaching one client or providing ineffective assistance of counsel to the other client. Campbell v. State, 320 Ga. 333, 907 S.E.2d 871, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 247 (2024).

Right not violated when defendant discharged fourth court-appointed attorney. — Defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel was not violated when the trial court refused to continue the defendant's child molestation trial when the defendant attempted to discharge the fourth appointed attorney the defendant had been assigned on the day of trial. The trial court gave the defendant warnings of the dangers of proceeding pro se, the defendant proceeded the first day with standby counsel, and after the first day, the defendant again had full representation. Cain v. State, 310 Ga. App. 442, 714 S.E.2d 65, 2011 Ga. App. LEXIS 584 (2011).

No simultaneous right to counsel and pro se representation. — Defendant does not have a right to simultaneous representation by counsel and self-representation. Snell v. State, 203 Ga.

App. 27, 416 S.E.2d 360, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 238 (1992).

Trial court did not err in finding that the defendant knowingly, voluntarily, and intelligently waived the defendant's right to have a lawyer represent the defendant at trial because the record authorized the trial court to conclude that the defendant's expression of dissatisfaction with the defendant's third lawyer on the day of trial was a dilatory tactic that was the functional equivalent of a knowing and voluntary waiver of appointed counsel, and after the defendant indicated the defendant's desire to proceed pro se, the extensive colloquy between the defendant and the trial court established that the defendant made a knowing and intelligent waiver of the defendant's right to counsel; the defendant did not explain how the knowledge that the defendant could face lesser punishment than the defendant believed would have made the defendant less inclined to waive counsel and the record demonstrated that the defendant was aware of the dangers of self-representation and nevertheless made a knowing and intelligent waiver. Walker v. State, 288 Ga. 174, 702 S.E.2d 415, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 852 (2010).

Conflict of interest not automatically established. — The mere fact that one lawyer represents more than one co-defendant does not automatically establish a conflict of interest. Johnson v. Hopper, 639 F.2d 236, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19339 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1010, 102 S. Ct. 548, 70 L. Ed. 2d 412, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4351 (1981).

Conflict presumed when attorney represents defendants over objection. — There is a presumptive conflict of interest when one attorney is required to represent multiple defendants over their objection; however, if the defendants do not object to the multiple representation by the attorney until after trial, there is no benefit of a presumption and the defendants must show that an actual conflict of interest existed that impaired their attorney's performance on their behalf. Rautenberg v. State, 178 Ga. App. 165, 342 S.E.2d 355, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2506 (1986).

criminal conviction amply supported by competent evidence. Montgomery v. State, 156 Ga. App. 448, 275 S.E.2d 72, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3062 (1980); Brown v. State, 247 Ga. 298, 275 S.E.2d 52, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 683 (1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 882, 102 S. Ct. 366, 70 L. Ed. 2d 192 (1981), overruled in part, Wilson v. Zant, 249 Ga. 373, 290 S.E.2d 442, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1137 (1982), but see, Morgan v. State, 267 Ga. 203, 476 S.E.2d 747, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 885 (1996).

Duty of court to determine adequacy. — When defendants make timely objections to joint representation, they need not show an actual conflict of interest when a trial court fails to inquire adequately into the basis of the objection. In such circumstances the trial court has failed to discharge its constitutional duty to determine whether the defendants are receiving adequate assistance of counsel; reversal, therefore is automatic. Hamilton v. Ford, 969 F.2d 1006, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 19328 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 1000, 113 S. Ct. 1625, 123 L. Ed. 2d 183, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 2391 (1993).

Whenever a trial court improperly requires joint representation over timely defense objection, reversal is automatic. Fleming v. State, 246 Ga. 90, 270 S.E.2d 185, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 977, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 904, 101 S. Ct. 278, 66 L. Ed. 2d 136, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3545 (1980); Wilson v. State, 257 Ga. 352, 359 S.E.2d 661, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 864 (1987).

Whenever a defendant establishes the lawyer's unconstitutional multiple representation, that is, where an actual conflict of interest is objected to before or during trial, prejudice need not be demonstrated. Dean v. State, 247 Ga. 724, 279 S.E.2d 217, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 840 (1981).

Actual conflict must be shown where defendant fails to object at trial. — In order to establish a constitutional violation of right to effective assistance of counsel in a noncapital case, a defendant who raises no objection at trial must demonstrate that an actual conflict of interest adversely affected the defendant's lawyer's performance. Until a defendant shows that the defendant's counsel actively represents conflicting interests, the defendant has not established the constitutional predicate for the defendant's claim of ineffective assistance. Munford v. Seay, 241 Ga. 223, 244 S.E.2d 857, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 990 (1978); Fleming v. State, 246 Ga. 90, 270 S.E.2d 185, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 977, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 904, 101 S. Ct. 278, 66 L. Ed. 2d 136, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3545 (1980); Montgomery v. State, 156 Ga. App. 448, 275 S.E.2d 72, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3062 (1980); Acierno v. State, 176 Ga. App. 600, 337 S.E.2d 39, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2929 (1985).

In order to establish a violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6, a defendant who raised no objection at trial must demonstrate that an actual conflict of interest adversely affected the lawyer's performance. Dean v. State, 247 Ga. 724, 279 S.E.2d 217, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 840 (1981); Keen v. State, 164 Ga. App. 81, 296 S.E.2d 91, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3279 (1982).

In order to establish a violation of the Sixth Amendment, a defendant who raised no objection at trial must demonstrate that an actual conflict of interest adversely affected the lawyer's performance. "Actual conflict" means more than the bare possibility that a conflict might have developed. Kennedy v. State, 177 Ga. App. 543, 340 S.E.2d 204, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2433 (1986); Stephens v. State, 214 Ga. App. 183, 447 S.E.2d 26, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 819 (1994), cert. denied, No. S94C1802, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 1195 (Ga. Nov. 18, 1994), cert. denied, No. S94C1803, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 1196 (Ga. Nov. 18, 1994).

When conflict of interest is raised in a post-conviction proceeding, the petitioner must show actual conflict that caused defense counsel's performance to be adversely affected. Wharton v. Thomas, 256 Ga. 76, 343 S.E.2d 694, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 701 (1986).

The fact that both defendants were represented by the same counsel does not by itself constitute a ground for reversal. A defendant who raises no objection at trial must demonstrate that an actual conflict of interest existed that adversely affected the attorney's performance. Lawrence v. State, 187 Ga. App. 211, 369 S.E.2d 531, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 557 (1988).

Defendant failed to show that the defendant's attorney impaired the defendant's defense for the benefit of the defendant's spouse's or that an actual conflict of interest existed, where there was no evidence that the defendant and the defendant's spouse had inconsistent defenses or that another plausible strategy was available to trial counsel. United States v. Solomon, 856 F.2d 1572, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 14001 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1070, 109 S. Ct. 1352, 103 L. Ed. 2d 820, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1257 (1989).

In order to establish a violation of the Sixth Amendment, a defendant who raised no objection at trial must demonstrate that an actual conflict of interest adversely affected the lawyer's performance. Dill v. State, 193 Ga. App. 213, 387 S.E.2d 424, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 1406 (1989).

Defendant failed to show how, because the lawyer's partner had been related by marriage to the victim's parent and represented the victim's parent in the probate of the victim's estate, such conflict caused divided loyalties, compromised the attorney's representation of the defendant, or influenced the defendant's decision to plead guilty. Jackson v. State, 271 Ga. 705, 523 S.E.2d 871, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 958 (1999).

Speculative conflict is insufficient.

— The mere fact that one lawyer represents more than one codefendant does not automatically establish a conflict of interest, an actual rather than a speculative conflict of interest must be shown before the constitutional guarantee of effective assistance of counsel is implicated. Such a constitutional implication occurs when a defense attorney is placed in a situation inherently conducive to divided loyalties. Johnson v. Hopper, 639 F.2d 236, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19339 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1010, 102 S. Ct. 548, 70 L. Ed. 2d 412, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4351 (1981).

A conflict of interest by an attorney must be actual rather than merely speculative to support relief and not every conceivable conflict is so egregious as to amount to violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6. Even joint representation of codefendants need not be a per se constitutional violation. Blake v. Zant, 513 F. Supp. 772, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13559 (S.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 984 F.2d 1129, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 2267 (11th Cir. 1993).

For a conflict of interest to cause representation to fail U.S. Const., amend. 6's standards, the Eleventh Circuit requires that the conflict be actual, not speculative. Baty v. Balkcom, 661 F.2d 391, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 15986 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 1011, 102 S. Ct. 2307, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1308, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 2395 (1982).

Actual rather than speculative conflict of interest must be shown before the constitutional guarantee of effective assistance of counsel is implicated. Johnson v. Hopper, 639 F.2d 236, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19339 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1010, 102 S. Ct. 548, 70 L. Ed. 2d 412, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4351 (1981).

New counsel to handle ineffective counsel claim. — Defendant was entitled to new counsel to represent the defendant on the defendant's ineffective counsel claim, and the trial court erred in appointing a member of the same public defender's office as the defendant's trial attorney. Kennebrew v. State, 267 Ga. 400, 480 S.E.2d 1, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 917 (1996).

What constitutes actual conflict. — An actual conflict exists if counsel's introduction of probative evidence or plausible arguments that would significantly benefit one defendant would damage the defense of another defendant whom the same counsel is representing. Baty v. Balkcom, 661 F.2d 391, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 15986 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 1011, 102 S. Ct. 2307, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1308, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 2395 (1982).

In representing codefendants, an actual conflict of interest exists if counsel's introduction of probative evidence or plausible arguments that would significantly benefit one defendant would damage the defense of another defendant whom the same counsel is representing. United

Representation of codefendant seeking different results constitutes an actual conflict. — Since the same attorney represented two codefendants, siblings who were indicted for murder, one of whom wanted to proceed to trial and the other desiring to plead guilty, an obvious conflict of interest arose. Where the sibling who contended to be innocent pled guilty, because the state offered a plea agreement whereby it would not seek the death penalty only if both siblings pled guilty, that sibling was denied the right to effective assistance of counsel. Ford v. Ford, 749 F.2d 681, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 31595 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 909, 106 S. Ct. 278, 88 L. Ed. 2d 243, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 4049 (1985).

Failure of a trial attorney representing multiple codefendants to adopt a strategy of shifting blame among the defendants may well give rise to an actual conflict of interest, but to do so the strategy must have been an option realistically available to trial counsel. United States v. Mers, 701 F.2d 1321, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 29538 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 991, 104 S. Ct. 482, 78 L. Ed. 2d 679, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 2462 (1983).

Actual conflict in plea bargaining efforts. — The trial attorney who represented the defendant and the codefendant, who successfully worked out a plea bargain for the codefendant, which required that the codefendant testify for the state in the criminal case against the defendant, but which plea bargain never materialized, labored under an actual conflict of interest that adversely affected the attorney's performance, since the attorney was precluded from effective plea bargaining on behalf of the defendant. Ruffin v. Kemp, 767 F.2d 748, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 21117 (11th Cir. 1985).

When counsel representing multiple defendants negotiates a plea bargain conditioned upon more than one pleading guilty, that attorney has suffered a conflict of interest that per se adversely affects the representation of each defendant affected. A showing that a defendant was allowed to plead guilty upon the condition that another defendant represented by the same attorney also plead guilty is a per se showing of ineffective assistance of counsel that rises to the level of an unconstitutional deprivation of the right to counsel. Tarwater v. State, 259 Ga. 516, 383 S.E.2d 883, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 550 (1989).

No conflict in plea bargaining efforts. — Joint representation did not prevent effective plea bargaining on behalf of either of two defendants, where a deal could not be negotiated for one defendant because the defendant refused to testify against the other defendant, and the state was unwilling to bargain with the other defendant. Smith v. Newsome, 876 F.2d 1461, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 8885 (11th Cir. 1989).

Actual conflict in immunity agreement. — An actual conflict of interest, in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6, occurred when the defendant's pretrial counsel, while representing two persons under suspicion for a murder, reached an informal understanding with the prosecutor that the other client would not be prosecuted in exchange for the other client's testimony against the defendant. Burden v. Zant, 24 F.3d 1298, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 14952 (11th Cir. 1994).

Conflict of interest from joint representation must be actual to warrant reversal. — To warrant reversal, a conflict of interest brought about by an attorney's representation of multiple codefendants must be actual rather than hypothetical. United States v. Mers, 701 F.2d 1321, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 29538 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 991, 104 S. Ct. 482, 78 L. Ed. 2d 679, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 2462 (1983).

Defendant who shows that a conflict of interest actually affected the adequacy of the representation need not demonstrate prejudice in order to obtain relief. United States v. Alvarez, 580 F.2d 1251, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 8749 (5th Cir. 1978); Fleming v. State, 246 Ga. 90, 270 S.E.2d 185, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 977, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 904, 101 S. Ct. 278, 66 L. Ed. 2d 136, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3545 (1980).

Since where an attorney is confronted with a conflict of interest between codefendants prejudice must be presumed and, except under the most extraordinary circumstances, the error cannot be considered harmless and reversal would be automatic. Johnson v. Hopper, 639 F.2d 236, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19339 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1010, 102 S. Ct. 548, 70 L. Ed. 2d 412, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4351 (1981).

Judge's knowledge of conflict need not be shown. — Ineffective representation by a lawyer laboring under a conflict of interest renders the trial fundamentally unfair whether the judge knew of the conflict or not. Unlike most due process cases under U.S. Const., amend. 14, no state action in the form of a state official's knowledge of the wrongdoing need be shown. A deprivation of due process results when the judgment reached in such a trial is enforced. Johnson v. Hopper, 639 F.2d 236, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19339 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1010, 102 S. Ct. 548, 70 L. Ed. 2d 412, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4351 (1981).

Disqualification of an attorney from representing codefendants must be raised prior to trial, otherwise any disqualification could result in manufactured error. Brown v. State, 247 Ga. 298, 275 S.E.2d 52, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 683 (1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 882, 102 S. Ct. 366, 70 L. Ed. 2d 192 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. Zant, 249 Ga. 373, 290 S.E.2d 442, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1137 (1982).

Failure to provide separate counsel after notice of conflict is error. — Error will result only if a judge, after notice of potential conflict between codefendants, does not undertake to ensure that each defendant is represented by separate counsel. Stevenson v. State, 143 Ga. App. 813, 240 S.E.2d 123, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2516 (1977).

Representation of multiple defendants. — Single defense counsel cannot effectively represent multiple defendants with conflicting interests. Collins v. State, 144 Ga. App. 102, 240 S.E.2d 597, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2597 (1977).

Trial counsel was not ineffective because counsel initially represented second defendant as well as third defendant where counsel withdrew from representing both defendants after counsel sensed a potential conflict. Baggs v. State, 265 Ga. App. 282, 593 S.E.2d 734, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 90 (2004).

Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel based on the fact that defendant and codefendant were represented by different attorneys from the same public defender's office; reversal was not required as no actual conflict of interest developed and defendant did not show that the fact that the attorneys were from the same office adversely affected the attorney's performance. Burns v. State, 274 Ga. App. 687, 618 S.E.2d 600, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 667 (2005), aff'd, 281 Ga. 338, 638 S.E.2d 299, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 1026 (2006).

Upon a review of the specific statements identified by the defendant supporting a conflict of interest claim between the defendant and the codefendant, who were represented by two separate attorneys with the public defender's office, no evidence of antagonism was found, as the specific statements identified merely amounted to mutual expressions of indifference over the outcome of the criminal charges and not "finger pointing" as alleged by the defendant's counsel; hence, counsel from the same public defender's office were not automatically disqualified from their respective representations. Burns v. State, 281 Ga. 338, 638 S.E.2d 299, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 1026 (2006).

Counsel representing prosecution witness raises potential conflict. — The rules governing alleged conflicts arising from joint representation of codefendants apply with equal force to alleged conflicts arising from defense counsel's representation of a prosecution witness in unrelated matters. Mitchell v. State, 261 Ga. 347, 405 S.E.2d 38, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 308 (1991).

Representation of persons with inconsistent interests. — A defendant's right to the effective assistance of counsel under U.S. Const., amend. 6 is violated if over the defendant's objection the defendant is represented by an attorney also charged with the representation of a codefendant whose interests are inconsistent with the defendant's, but to justify separate counsel, the conflict may not be merely theoretical or speculative, but must have some substantial basis in fact. Davis v. State, 129 Ga. App. 796, 201 S.E.2d 345, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1161 (1973); United States v. Johnson, 569 F.2d 269, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 12263 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 437 U.S. 906, 98 S. Ct. 3096, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1137, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2307 (1978).

Simultaneous representation of county and criminal defendant. — An actual conflict of interest would arise from defense counsel's simultaneous representation of the defendant and Jones County, because it was counsel's duty to defend against suits challenging the constitutionality of the county jury commission's procedures in selecting grand and traverse jury pools, which situation arose in litigation occurring at the same time that the defendant was being tried in Jones County. Westbrook v. Zant, 743 F.2d 764, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 18386 (11th Cir. 1984).

Trial counsel did not labor under a conflict of interest because counsel's representation of the state in a guilty plea entered almost five years before the crimes at issue did not fall within the parameters of the Sixth Amendment, and even assuming the existence of an actual conflict of interest, the defendant would be required to demonstrate that the conflict significantly affected counsel's performance, which the defendant failed to do; the record supported the trial court's finding that trial counsel did not remember counsel's work for the state against the defendant until after the jury verdict had been rendered, and the defendant did not allege that counsel's performance at sentencing was affected by the discovery of that information. Lanier v. State, 288 Ga. 109, 702 S.E.2d 141, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 815 (2010).

Representation by court's law clerk. — Defendant's appointed counsel represented defendant in same court in which counsel was a full time law clerk; therefore, an actual conflict of interest existed warranting reversal of defendant's convictions. Sallie v. State, 269 Ga. 446, 499 S.E.2d 897, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 518 (1998).

Simultaneous representation of defendant and state's witness. — No conflict of interest stemmed from an attorney's simultaneous representation of both a capital defendant and a state's witness charged with a noncapital offense arising out of the events at issue in the capital trial. Zant v. Hill, 262 Ga. 815, 425 S.E.2d 858, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 217, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 931, 114 S. Ct. 342, 126 L. Ed. 2d 307, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 6564 (1993).

Prior employment in public defender's office. — Trial court erred in granting a new trial based on ineffective assistance of counsel due to counsel's prior employment in a public defender's office where another attorney had briefly represented the state's key witness against the defendant because the defendant failed to show how the conflict of interest compromised the attorney's representation of the defendant. State v. Abernathy, 289 Ga. 603, 715 S.E.2d 48, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 550 (2011).

Counsel seeking election as prosecutor. — A defendant may wish to proceed with counsel holding other, even prosecutorial, offices because of perceived benefits to the defendant. Jones v. Ivory, 255 Ga. 20, 334 S.E.2d 666, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 857 (1985) (defendant knew of counsel's campaign for office of district attorney).

Joint representation at committal hearing harmless. — Even if an accused was technically denied the Sixth Amendment right to counsel at a "committal hearing" because counsel who represented the codefendants had not in fact agreed to represent the accused, this denial was harmless error beyond a reasonable doubt because the evidence produced during the hearing was nothing more than an inventory of the completed investigation and nothing more than would have been revealed by the usual voluntary, informal discovery conference. Fleming v. Zant, 560 F. Supp. 525, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18252 (M.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 748 F.2d

Where defendants agree to one counsel, any error deemed induced and impermissible. — Where a group of defendants confirm that they have discussed the case thoroughly with their counsel, and each states that there are no conflicts of interest, and each of them also states that they are satisfied to proceed with one counsel representing all of them, if any error occurs, it is induced by the defendants' statements and induced error is impermissible. Accordingly, it is not error under the circumstances to allow one attorney to represent all of the defendants, and the multiple representation does not result in ineffective assistance of counsel. Shirley v. State, 166 Ga. App. 456, 304 S.E.2d 468, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2210 (1983).

Partners representing defendant and codefendant. — Appointment of two partners to represent defendant and the defendant's co-indictee in their respective murder trials did not infect the representation by defendant's counsel so as to constitute an active representation of competing interests, because counsel's decision not to make a "lesser culpability" argument on appeal was in no way attributable to the partnership. Burger v. Kemp, 483 U.S. 776, 107 S. Ct. 3114, 97 L. Ed. 2d 638, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 3047 (1987).

Trial court did not err in finding that the defendant received adequate representation at trial, although the defendant's trial attorney had represented the state's informant in unrelated matters before and after trial. Dill v. State, 193 Ga. App. 214, 387 S.E.2d 425, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 1413 (1989).

Where codefendants assert antagonistic defenses, but the trial judge denies the defendant's motion for separate trial, defendant is not denied the right to effective counsel or to confront the witnesses, despite codefendants' ability to assert the privilege against self-incrimination on cross-examination in a joint trial, unless defendant can show that the defendant is prejudiced. Cain v. State, 235 Ga. 128, 218 S.E.2d 856, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 803 (1975).

Minor inconsistencies in the accounts related by codefendants to counsel, as their individual versions of what actually occurred, will not necessarily create a conflict which justifies separate counsel. Davis v. State, 129 Ga. App. 796, 201 S.E.2d 345, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1161 (1973).

Attorney's representations as to existence of conflict. — The representations of an attorney, as an officer of the court, that the attorney perceives a potential conflict should be given very serious consideration. Johnson v. Hopper, 639 F.2d 236, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19339 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1010, 102 S. Ct. 548, 70 L. Ed. 2d 412, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4351 (1981).

Professional judgment of counsel as to need for separate counsel. — Where failure of appointed counsel to ask for separate representatives for each of the accused occurs, it must be assumed to have stemmed from their professional judgment that it was better not to get into an antagonistic fight with codefendants and there is no failure to provide counsel such as would deprive a criminal court, even under our civil jurisprudence, of jurisdiction to proceed to judgment and sentence. Bisson v. Howard, 224 F.2d 586, 1955 U.S. App. LEXIS 4125 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 350 U.S. 916, 76 S. Ct. 201, 100 L. Ed. 803, 1955 U.S. LEXIS 80 (1955).

Where defense counsel has it within counsel's power to void a proceeding against counsel's client and, because of counsel's representation of another is not completely free to exercise this power, counsel most assuredly has a directly conflicting interest. Collins v. State, 144 Ga. App. 102, 240 S.E.2d 597, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2597 (1977).

Conflict where defense counsel also represents a witness. — The reason a conflict of interest exists in a situation in which defense counsel is simultaneously representing a witness, even though the witness is not a codefendant at trial, is that defense counsel might not be vigorous enough in cross-examination of such a witness. Lemley v. State, 245 Ga. 350, 264 S.E.2d 881, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 793 (1980).

Counsel's affiliations. — The defendant was not denied the right to counsel in the defendant's capital murder prosecution based on allegations that the defendant's attorneys had conflicts of interest in that they had co-hosted a fund-raising event with the county district attorney and county solicitor general, and that the attorneys were co-owners of an office building with another attorney who had contracted with the district attorney to collect child support for the county. Henry v. State, 269 Ga. 851, 507 S.E.2d 419, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 812 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1118, 119 S. Ct. 1768, 143 L. Ed. 2d 798, 1999 U.S. LEXIS 3321 (1999).

Failure to raise issue because of agreement by public defender's office. — An inmate had been denied effective assistance of counsel under the Sixth Amendment and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV based on an actual conflict of interest because both trial and appellate counsel did not diligently pursue a jury array issue based on an agreement that the public defender's office had with superior court judges, despite their belief that the issue was a strong one. The attorneys' duties to their employer, the public defender's office, directly conflicted with their duties of loyalty and zealous advocacy to their client under Ga. St. Bar R. 4-102(d):1.7, and the conflict significantly affected the representation the inmate received. Edwards v. Lewis, 283 Ga. 345, 658 S.E.2d 116, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 187 (2008).

That appellant is jointly indicted and tried with a codefendant who is additionally alleged in the indictment to have been convicted of prior similar offenses, where the indictment is read to the jury during the guilt determination phase of the trial, and where both defendants are represented by the same attorney, is not in itself prejudicial to appellant to an extent requiring reversal of the conviction. Davis v. State, 129 Ga. App. 796, 201 S.E.2d 345, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1161 (1973).

Where the death penalty is sought against any one defendant, the defendant and the codefendants must be provided with separate and independent counsel. Fleming v. State, 246 Ga. 90, 270 S.E.2d 185, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 977, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 904, 101 S. Ct. 278, 66 L. Ed. 2d 136, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3545 (1980).

Penalty may be imposed despite joint representation, if no prejudice shown. — Where there is no timely defense objection nor is there any objection by the state, and no material prejudice has been demonstrated, the fact that the appellant's attorney is appointed to represent both the appellant and the appellant's codefendants does not prevent imposition of the death penalty. Brown v. State, 247 Ga. 298, 275 S.E.2d 52, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 683 (1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 882, 102 S. Ct. 366, 70 L. Ed. 2d 192 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. Zant, 249 Ga. 373, 290 S.E.2d 442, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1137 (1982).

Representation of codefendants in death penalty cases. — In Fleming v. State, 246 Ga. 90, 270 S.E.2d 185 (1980), the Supreme Court of Georgia, by the authority of its supervisory power over the bar of this state, created a broad rule in cases in which the death penalty is sought. Under the rule of Fleming, the same attorney shall not represent codefendants in cases in which the death penalty is sought. Fleming v. State was decided June 9, 1980, and, in that it is based on the court's supervisory power, is prospective only. Brown v. State, 247 Ga. 298, 275 S.E.2d 52, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 683 (1981), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 882, 102 S. Ct. 366, 70 L. Ed. 2d 192 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Wilson v. Zant, 249 Ga. 373, 290 S.E.2d 442, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1137 (1982).

Trial court need not advise a defendant of the right to separate counsel in the event of a conflict of interest between codefendants, where there is neither objection, claim, nor notice to the court of any alleged conflict between the interests of the defendants. United States v. Boudreaux, 502 F.2d 557, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 6525 (5th Cir. 1974).

Procedure upon motion for separate counsel. — If a trial counsel who has been appointed to represent two or more criminal defendants makes a timely motion to have separate counsel appointed, the trial court must either appoint separate counsel or take adequate steps to determine if the risk of a conflict of interests is too remote to warrant separate counsel. Lemley v. State, 245 Ga. 350, 264 S.E.2d 881, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 793 (1980).

Waiver of right to separate counsel.

— The right to separate appointed counsel where multiple defendants have conflicting interests is a right the defendant is entitled to waive. Collins v. State, 144 Ga. App. 102, 240 S.E.2d 597, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2597 (1977).

Inquiry as to attorneys' fees.

— Where the record clearly indicated that lawyers representing codefendants in this case also represented codefendants in a previous case and that the defendant provided fees to all counsel in the previous case even though the defendant was not a party in the previous case, the appearance of impropriety and possible conflicts of interest were pervasive, thereby warranting the district court to inquire as to the source of attorney's fees. United States v. Sims, 845 F.2d 1564, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 7103 (11th Cir. 1988).

Joint representation when one defendant pays all fees. — Habeas court did not err in granting the appellee's petition for writ of habeas corpus because there was no error in the habeas court's finding of an actual conflict of interest that adversely affected plea counsel's performance since the fact that the codefendant alone was paying counsel's fees created a strong incentive for counsel to prioritize the codefendant's interests in the matter over the appellee's interest, and counsel not only failed to pursue an alternative defense theory on behalf of the appellee, counsel failed even to recognize the possibility that one could exist; even though the appellee and the codefendant pursued a unified defense in that their accounts of the incident were consistent, the record reflected that the appellee was the less culpable of the two in the crime, as it appeared that the appellee's participation was limited to the role of a passive witness who happened to be driving when the codefendant initiated the brief, apparently unpremeditated interaction with the victim. State v. Mamedov, 288 Ga. 858, 708 S.E.2d 279, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 254 (2011).

Defense counsel, not court, initiates inquiry. — Nothing in the legal precedents suggest that this provision requires state courts themselves to initiate inquiries into the propriety of multiple representation in every case. Defense counsel have an ethical obligation to avoid conflicting representations and to advise the court promptly when a conflict of interest arises during the course of trial. Craddock v. State, 173 Ga. App. 133, 325 S.E.2d 804, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 3104 (1984).

Right to counsel not violated by attorney's internal investigation.

— Attorneys from a law firm conducting an internal investigation for the corporation did not violate the defendant employee's constitutional right to counsel. The attorneys were not acting as de facto government agents during their internal investigation of the defendant's employer, and, in addition, the attorneys indeed advised the defendant of the defendant's rights. Therefore, the defendant's statement which tended to inculcate the defendant violated no duty or privilege and was admissible. United States v. Calhoun, 859 F. Supp. 1496, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10991 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 97 F.3d 518, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 26962 (11th Cir. 1996).

No ineffective assistance of counsel for conflict of interest in representing rape codefendants where testimony of one was subsequently helpful to other on issue of consent. Yeck v. Goodwin, 985 F.2d 538, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 4229 (11th Cir. 1993).

No conflict of interest. — Record belied any assertion that trial counsel had any divided loyalties between the defendant and a man who had been a suspect in the murder and testified as a state's witness at trial or that counsel represented the man in any way during the defendant's trial because counsel actually targeted the man as one of the people other than the defendant who had actually committed the murder. Wheeler v. State, 290 Ga. 817, 725 S.E.2d 580, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 333 (2012).

Defendant did not establish a successful ineffective assistance of counsel claim based on a conflict of interest because the fact that attorneys from one public defender's office were representing the defendant and the accomplice was not sufficient, standing alone, to show an impermissible conflict of interest; nothing in the record indicated that counsel bypassed any meritorious defenses, that the accomplice's plea bargain was negotiated at the expense of the defendant, or that counsel's ability to cross-examine the accomplice was constrained; and there was no evidence that the defendant's counsel shared any privileged or confidential information with or obtained such information from the attorney representing the accomplice. Williams v. State, 302 Ga. 404, 807 S.E.2d 418, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 936 (2017).

Defendant's right to conflict-free counsel at trial was not violated as the defendant did not show any actual conflict that adversely affected the co-counsel's performance because the concern about simultaneous conflicting representations dissipated when the state announced that it would not call another criminal defendant represented by co-counsel as a witness at the defendant's trial; lead counsel zealously defended the defendant; and lead counsel confirmed that both lead counsel and co-counsel represented the defendant's best interests and that co-counsel was helpful in preparing for trial. Tanner v. State, 303 Ga. 203, 811 S.E.2d 316, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 141 (2018).

5. Duties and Effectiveness of Counsel

Right to counsel is the right to effective counsel. Harrell v. State, 139 Ga. App. 556, 228 S.E.2d 723, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1884 (1976), overruled in part, Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982); Jones v. State, 243 Ga. 820, 256 S.E.2d 907, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1079, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 957, 100 S. Ct. 437, 62 L. Ed. 2d 329 (1979).

The guarantee of the assistance of counsel to a criminal defendant requires that such representation must be effective.

Beavers v. Balkcom, 636 F.2d 114, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20401 (5th Cir. 1981).

A defendant is entitled not to perfect representation but to reasonably effective assistance. Foreman v. State, 200 Ga. App. 400, 408 S.E.2d 178, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 988 (1991).

Defense counsel's failure to reserve exceptions to the jury charge was a conscious decision, was a matter of trial strategy, and did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel as, although defense counsel was not asked why counsel did not object to the omission of a previously-requested charge on impeachment by crime of moral turpitude, the record showed that defense counsel felt that the witness had been impeached by other means. Botelho v. State, 268 Ga. App. 129, 601 S.E.2d 494, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 862 (2004).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claim failed where trial counsel's decision not to challenge the search of defendant's residence was based on the fact that the lessor, a person other than defendant, had given permission to search the home; thus, counsel felt counsel did not have standing or sufficient ground to challenge the search. In addition, defendant failed to demonstrate how a motion challenging the search warrant would have been successful and, thus, failed to show prejudice. Allen v. State, 268 Ga. App. 519, 602 S.E.2d 250, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 961 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1943, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 896 (Ga. Oct. 12, 2004), overruled in part, Harris v. State, 322 Ga. App. 87, 744 S.E.2d 82, 2013 Ga. App. LEXIS 458 (2013), overruled on other grounds, Hillman v. Johnson, 297 Ga. 609, 774 S.E.2d 615, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 489 (2015).

Pending disciplinary action not ineffective assistance per se. — Trial counsel was not ineffective per se due to the fact that there was a pending disciplinary action against counsel at the time of trial or due to the subsequent surrender of counsel's license to practice law. Simmons v. State, 291 Ga. 705, 733 S.E.2d 280, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 775 (2012).

Physical presence alone fails to satisfy the mandate of U.S. Const., amend. 6. — The right to counsel means no less than the right to effective counsel.

United States v. Woods, 487 F.2d 1218, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 6600 (5th Cir. 1973).

Effective assistance is that which assures due process. — Effective assistance does not mean that a defendant is entitled to have the best counsel appointed, or any particular counsel, but it does mean that the defendant must have such assistance as will assure the defendant due process of law. Hawes v. State, 240 Ga. 327, 240 S.E.2d 833, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1496 (1977).

Due process of law requires that the court-appointed counsel be competent to serve and give more than casual or perfunctory service. Lip service only will not do. Coates v. Lawrence, 46 F. Supp. 414, 1942 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2548 (D. Ga.), aff'd, 131 F.2d 110, 1942 U.S. App. LEXIS 2727 (5th Cir. 1942).

Effective representation involves more than courtroom conduct by the advocate. — Counsel must conduct appropriate investigations, both factual and legal, to determine what matters of defense can be developed. This means that in most cases a defense attorney should interview not only the defense's own witnesses but also those that the government intends to call, when they are accessible. Harrell v. State, 139 Ga. App. 556, 228 S.E.2d 723, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1884 (1976), overruled in part, Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982).

Counsel must be acquainted with law and facts. — An attorney cannot render reasonably effective assistance unless the attorney has become acquainted with the law and facts of the case. United States v. Woods, 487 F.2d 1218, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 6600 (5th Cir. 1973).

Counsel must evaluate defenses and discuss case with client. — Constitutionally effective counsel must make an informed evaluation of possible defenses and have a meaningful discussion of the case with the client. Dixon v. Balkcom, 614 F.2d 1067, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 18928 (5th Cir. 1980).

Evaluating defenses and discussing the case with the client are the cornerstones of the effective assistance of counsel. Beavers v. Balkcom, 636 F.2d

114, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 20401 (5th Cir. 1981).

Counsel must provide client the basis for informed choice. — Effective assistance of counsel embodies a requirement that the defendant be afforded an understanding of the law in relation to the fact, and counsel's advice must permit the accused to make an informed and conscious choice. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Assistance of counsel in determining how to plead. — A defendant is entitled to effective assistance of counsel in determining how to plead and in making the plea, and can attack the conviction collaterally if the defendant is not given this right. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Trial court erred in convicting defendant of incest, O.C.G.A. § 16-6-22; at a guilty plea hearing, the prosecutor alleged that defendant had sexual intercourse with the defendant's step-sibling, and sexual intercourse between step-siblings was not included in the crime of incest under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-22(a)(3). Further, the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel at the plea hearing pursuant to U.S. Const., amend. 6, because if counsel had informed the defendant that the state could not as a matter of law prove the offense of incest because the defendant's relationship to the victim was not included within the statutory scheme for such offense, the defendant would not have pled guilty and would have insisted on going to trial. Shabazz v. State, 259 Ga. App. 339, 577 S.E.2d 45, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 102 (2003), overruled in part, Adams v. State, 285 Ga. 744, 683 S.E.2d 586, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 480 (2009).

Failure to advise on withdrawal of plea. — Defendant's conviction based on a guilty plea was properly set aside because the defendant did not waive a statutory right to withdraw the guilty plea at any time prior to sentencing as there was no indication in the sentencing transcript that such a waiver was made; no reasonable attorney providing constitutionally effective representation would fail to inform the defendant of an absolute statutory right to withdraw a plea when the attorney had obtained new information that changed the attorney's assessment of the defendant's case and had not yet fully discussed that information and its relevance with the defendant; and there was prejudice as the defendant would have withdrawn the guilty plea prior to sentencing and continued with trial. Nelson v. Wilkey, 309 Ga. 203, 845 S.E.2d 566, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 468 (2020).

U.S. Const., amend. 6 guarantees neither successful counsel, nor the best counsel available, nor counsel free from tactical errors or errors of judgment. Pitts v. Hopper, 402 F. Supp. 119, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11588 (N.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 520 F.2d 941 (5th Cir. 1975).

Right to plan defense in private. — Effective assistance of counsel involves the right of counsel and the client to plan defense strategy and tactics in private and independent of interference by the court. Harrell v. State, 139 Ga. App. 556, 228 S.E.2d 723, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1884 (1976), overruled in part, Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982).

Use of a private investigator who assists in the preparation of the defense as a paid informant for the FBI, does not by itself constitute a denial of a fundamental right to a fair trial and effective assistance of counsel. United States v. Zarzour, 432 F.2d 1, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 7231 (5th Cir. 1970).

Intrusion by the government upon the confidential relationship between a criminal defendant and the defendant's attorney, either through surreptitious electronic means or through an informant, is a violation of the right to counsel under U.S. Const., amend. 6. United States v. Zarzour, 432 F.2d 1, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 7231 (5th Cir. 1970).

Determination as to whether such investigator has given prosecution

information about defense. — When private investigator hired to assist in preparation of accused's defense is an informant for the FBI, an in camera inspection of the government's files should be made to determine whether any information concerning the accused's case was transmitted to the prosecution in violation of the accused's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and to order disclosure of such information to the accused. United States v. Zarzour, 432 F.2d 1, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 7231 (5th Cir. 1970).

No right to gender preference. — There was no showing that defendant was not provided with reasonably effective assistance of counsel just because the defendant was denied a request for a male defense attorney in a prosecution for rape and kidnapping. Johnson v. State, 208 Ga. App. 453, 430 S.E.2d 821, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 599 (1993).

Failure to make effective appointment violates U.S. Const., amends. 5 and 14. — The necessity of counsel is so vital and imperative that the failure of the trial court to make an effective appointment of counsel is likewise a denial of due process within the meaning of U.S. Const., amends. 5 and 14. Bridwell v. Aderhold, 13 F. Supp. 253, 1935 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1098 (D. Ga. 1935), aff'd, 92 F.2d 748, 1937 U.S. App. LEXIS 4689 (5th Cir. 1937).

Judges should maintain proper standards of performance by attorneys. — If the right to counsel guaranteed by the United States Constitution is to serve its purpose, defendants cannot be left to the mercies of incompetent counsel, and judges should strive to maintain proper standards of performance by attorneys who are representing defendants in criminal cases in their courts. McBryar v. McElroy, 510 F. Supp. 706, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12844 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

There is presumption that legal services are performed in a skillful manner and the presumption may be overcome only by competent expert testimony showing that such services were not performed in an ordinarily skillful manner. Gottschalk v. State, 160 Ga. App. 769, 287 S.E.2d 107, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 1682 (1982).

Presumption regarding perfor- mance of counsel. — There is a strong presumption that trial counsel's performance falls within the wide range of professional assistance, and that any challenged action by trial counsel might be considered sound trial strategy. Ferrell v. State, 261 Ga. 115, 401 S.E.2d 741, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 140, cert. denied, 502 U.S. 927, 112 S. Ct. 343, 116 L. Ed. 2d 282, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 6246 (1991).

There is a strong presumption that counsel's conduct falls within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance. Stevens v. State, 199 Ga. App. 563, 405 S.E.2d 713, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 592 (1991).

Counsel has a duty to make reasonable investigations, however, the defendant must overcome the presumption that, under the circumstances the challenged action might be considered sound trial strategy. Carver v. State, 203 Ga. App. 197, 416 S.E.2d 810, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 469 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0852, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 380 (Ga. Apr. 30, 1992).

In evaluating an attorney's performance for purposes of considering a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel, there is a strong presumption that counsel's conduct falls within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance. Horne v. State, 260 Ga. App. 640, 580 S.E.2d 644, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 447 (2003).

In a prosecution for false imprisonment, aggravated assault, and aggravated battery, defendant failed to establish that the alleged deficient performance of the trial council prejudiced the defense; the assistance rendered by defendant's trial counsel fell within the broad range of reasonably effective assistance which members of the bar in good standing are presumed to render. Grier v. State, 276 Ga. App. 655, 624 S.E.2d 149, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1143 (2005), cert. denied, No. S06C0754, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 329 (Ga. Apr. 25, 2006).

No ineffectiveness of counsel was shown in a defendant's malice murder trial by the trial counsel's purported bolstering of the testimony of a detective who was a prosecution witness; when, after pointing out inconsistencies and contradictions in the testimony of a witness whose statements the detective had relied upon in concluding that the defendant was responsible for the murder, the trial counsel asked the detective whether, in light of those matters, the detective believed the witness, the trial counsel was engaging in trial strategy intended to undermine the testimony of the witness rather than seeking to bolster that testimony. Green v. State, 281 Ga. 322, 638 S.E.2d 288, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 992 (2006).

With regard to defendant's convictions for aggravated child molestation and two counts of child molestation after a bench trial, because defendant failed to call trial counsel at the hearing on defendant's motion for a new trial, defendant was unable to establish that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel at trial based on trial counsel: (1) failing to adequately investigate the case; (2) failing to present an interview report as evidence; and (3) failing to object to hearsay testimony regarding the victims' abuse allegations; therefore, the presumption remained that trial counsel strategically elected not to offer the interview report as evidence. Further, even if the child victim's statements were not admissible under the child hearsay statute, there was no ineffective assistance since defendant confirmed the statements through his own trial testimony. Brumbelow v. State, 289 Ga. App. 520, 657 S.E.2d 603, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 141 (2008).

When issue must be raised. — Any contention concerning a violation of the constitutional right of effective assistance of counsel must be made at the earliest practicable moment, and the counsel whose proficiency is under attack should be given an opportunity to be heard. Lynn v. State, 181 Ga. App. 461, 352 S.E.2d 602, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2829 (1986).

The proceeding in which an out-of-time appeal is sought is the proper time to raise the issue of ineffective assistance of counsel. Ponder v. State, 260 Ga. 840, 400 S.E.2d 922, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 95 (1991), overruled in part, Kelly v. State, 311 Ga. 827, 860 S.E.2d 740, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 470 (2021).

A claim of ineffective assistance of counsel may not be asserted in an out-of-time appeal unless appellate counsel pursues a motion for new trial, subsequent to the grant of the out-of-time appeal, in which the issue is raised and resolved by means of an evidentiary hearing. Ponder v. State, 260 Ga. 840, 400 S.E.2d 922, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 95 (1991), overruled in part, Kelly v. State, 311 Ga. 827, 860 S.E.2d 740, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 470 (2021).

Habeas corpus petitioner's claim of ineffective assistance of trial counsel was waived, because the petitioner's appellate counsel, who was not the petitioner's trial counsel, failed to assert it on direct appeal, and the petitioner failed to demonstrate cause for the failure to raise the claim and prejudice arising therefrom. White v. Kelso, 261 Ga. 32, 401 S.E.2d 733, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 133 (1991).

If there is new counsel appointed or retained, the new counsel must raise the ineffectiveness of previous counsel at the first possible instance in the legal proceedings. Ryan v. Thomas, 261 Ga. 661, 409 S.E.2d 507, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 829 (1991).

Raising issue of ineffectiveness by law firm member. — A member of a law firm may not, by his or her failure to raise an ineffective assistance claim against a fellow member of the firm, bar the rights of a defendant to ever raise that issue. To hold otherwise would permit one member of the firm to shield a fellow member against accusations of ineffectiveness at the expense of the rights of the defendant. Ryan v. Thomas, 261 Ga. 661, 409 S.E.2d 507, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 829 (1991).

Raising issue of ineffectiveness by public defender's office. — Attorneys in a public defender's office are to be treated as members of a law firm for the purposes of raising claims of ineffective assistance of counsel. As such, different attorneys from the same public defenders office are not to be considered "new" counsel for the purpose of raising ineffective assistance claims under White v. Kelso, so that a defendant's right to raise such a claim may not be barred by the failure of a succession of attorneys from the same public defender's office to raise it. Ryan v. Thomas, 261 Ga. 661, 409 S.E.2d 507, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 829 (1991).

Failure to raise a claim of ineffectiveness of counsel by motion for new trial before appeal, when there was an adequate opportunity to do so, was a procedural bar to raising the claim at a later date; overruling Sixayaketh v. State, 261 Ga. 690, 410 S.E.2d 113 (1991); Dozier v. State, 217 Ga. 835, 459 S.E.2d 463 (1995); King v. State, 208 Ga. App. 77, 430 S.E.2d 640 (1993). Glover v. State, 266 Ga. 183, 465 S.E.2d 659, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 28 (1996); Clay v. State, 232 Ga. App. 541, 502 S.E.2d 267, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 649 (1998).

Appellant's new appellate counsel who participated in a motion for new trial, but did not raise the issue of the effectiveness of appellant's trial counsel, barred appellant from asserting this argument. Smith v. State, 263 Ga. 224, 430 S.E.2d 579, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 508 (1993).

Defendant could claim ineffective assistance of counsel at the defendant's motion for new trial for the first time on appeal, since the attorney was initially retained to represent the defendant at the motion and, therefore, the claim was presented at the earliest practicable moment. Rucker v. State, 268 Ga. 406, 489 S.E.2d 844, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 583 (1997).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim was waived as defendant's original post-conviction counsel moved for a new trial, but did not raise an ineffective assistance of trial counsel claim; defendant's claim that defendant's original post-conviction counsel was deficient in failing to raise an ineffective assistance claim below had to be addressed in a habeas corpus proceeding. Mullins v. State, 267 Ga. App. 393, 599 S.E.2d 340, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 663 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1634, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 680 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2004).

Defendant's case was remanded for an evidentiary hearing on the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims as it was not clear when the defendant took over the defendant's own representation and the defendant's appeal might have been the defendant's first opportunity to raise the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims, and as the defendant's claims could not be resolved by examining the appellate record. Carter v. State, 267 Ga. App. 520, 600 S.E.2d 637, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 702 (2004).

Failure to cite to law or record. — Because defendant failed to provide any citations to either the law or the record, let alone an application of authority to that record amounting to legal argument, in support of an ineffective assistance of counsel assertion, this issue was deemed abandoned on appeal. Gore v. State, 272 Ga. App. 156, 611 S.E.2d 764, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 243 (2005).

Trial court's denial of the defendant's new trial motion was proper because the defendant did not raise the issue of the trial counsel's ineffectiveness at the first available opportunity, as the defendant's having filed a notice of appeal divested the trial court of jurisdiction over such a motion, and moreover, the motion was untimely filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-5-40(a); there was no evidence that overcame the presumption of effective assistance of counsel pursuant to U.S. Const., amend. 6, as defendant could not substantiate the allegations solely from the record and he declined the opportunity to have the counsel testify. Carter v. State, 275 Ga. App. 846, 622 S.E.2d 60, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1122 (2005).

As the defendant was represented during the motion for new trial following criminal conviction by one of the two counsel who had assisted the defendant before and during the trial, and the claim of ineffective assistance of counsel under U.S. Const., amend. 6 was not raised in the motion or at the hearing, new appellate counsel raised the claim at the earliest practicable time by noting it in the direct appeal; thus, a remand was proper in order to have a hearing on the claim. Warren v. State, 281 Ga. App. 490, 636 S.E.2d 671, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1085 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0095, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 1007 (Ga. Nov. 20, 2006).

Defendant's claim that counsel was ineffective for not raising the issue of the validity of the defendant's prior convictions was procedurally barred because the defendant had not raised the issue in the defendant's motion for new trial. The defendant could not resuscitate the issue by raising the issue under the guise of an ineffective assistance of appellate counsel claim. McGlocklin v. State, 292 Ga. App.

162, 664 S.E.2d 552, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 721 (2008).

Ineffective counsel may not be asserted in out-of-time appeal. — A claim of ineffective assistance of counsel may not be asserted in an out-of-time appeal unless appellate counsel pursues a motion for new trial, subsequent to the grant of the out-of-time appeal, in which the issue is raised and resolved by means of an evidentiary hearing. Holt v. State, 205 Ga. App. 40, 421 S.E.2d 131, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1065 (1992).

Effectiveness issue not addressed for first time on appeal. — The issue of effectiveness of counsel is not to be addressed for the first time on appeal. Smith v. State, 186 Ga. App. 303, 367 S.E.2d 573, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 376 (1988).

The right to claim ineffective assistance of counsel is waived by the failure to raise it at the trial level, i.e., at the "earliest practicable moment." Battle v. State, 195 Ga. App. 542, 394 S.E.2d 788, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 638 (1990).

There is no indication from the record that the issue of ineffective assistance of counsel was ever raised in the trial court where appellate counsel had ample opportunity to raise the issue before the trial court. Over 15 months elapsed between the appointment of appellate counsel and the hearing on the motion for new trial during which appellate counsel could have raised this argument. Thus, having failed to do so, appellant is barred from asserting this argument here. Martin v. State, 204 Ga. App. 782, 420 S.E.2d 645, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1012 (1992).

Waiver of claim of ineffective assistance. — A defendant does not waive the claim of ineffective assistance of counsel by responding to trial court's inquiries pursuant to paragraphs (a)(7) and (b)(4) of the Unified Appeal Procedure under Rule 34.3 by silence or expression of one or more objections to the defendant's counsel's performance. Grace v. State, 262 Ga. 485, 422 S.E.2d 176, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 917 (1992).

Because the defendant failed to raise an ineffective assistance of counsel claim at the first practicable opportunity, specifically when newly appointed counsel filed an amended motion for a new trial, the claim was waived. Simmons v. State, 281 Ga. 437, 637 S.E.2d 709, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 977 (2006).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim based on appointed counsel's failure to file any motions or to appear at any hearing or trial was waived; further, appointed counsel made an appearance and retained counsel entered an appearance a month later, the defendant was never unrepresented, and the defendant was not prejudiced by appointed counsel's inaction. Ellis v. State, 282 Ga. App. 17, 637 S.E.2d 729, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1217 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0324, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 66 (Ga. Jan. 22, 2007), overruled in part, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim based on trial counsel's failure to object when the state called witnesses who were not "properly placed on the witness list" was waived; all of the witnesses' names were included in investigative reports given to the defendant, one witness was included in the second additional list under her maiden name, and trial counsel interviewed two other witnesses. The defendant was not surprised by the witnesses and trial counsel's failure to object to their testimony did not so prejudice the defense that the defendant was deprived of a fair trial. Ellis v. State, 282 Ga. App. 17, 637 S.E.2d 729, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1217 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0324, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 66 (Ga. Jan. 22, 2007), overruled in part, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Defendant abandoned claims of insufficient investigation and trial preparation when those claims were merely general and bald assertions, unsupported by argument or citation of authority; as for the defendant's other claims, a failure to make meritless objections could not support an ineffective assistance of counsel claim. Sampson v. State, 282 Ga. 82, 646 S.E.2d 60, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 404 (2007).

Rules of practice governing pro se counsel. — Post-judgment practice involves strict compliance with rules of practice and procedure, and pro se parties are generally bound by the same rules of practice and procedure as a lawyer. Weber v. State, 203 Ga. App. 356, 416 S.E.2d 868, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 416 (1992), overruled in part, Allen v. Daker, 311 Ga. 485, 858 S.E.2d 731, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 264 (2021).

Pro se defendants have no ineffective assistance of counsel claim. — Because the defendant elected to handle the defendant's own representation, the defendant could not assert a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel. Daughtry v. State, 225 Ga. App. 45, 482 S.E.2d 532, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 288 (1997).

Distinction exists between lack of effective assistance and denial of that right. — There is a distinction to be made between the lack of effective assistance of competent counsel and being denied the right to have the effective assistance of competent counsel. It is the latter that opens a judgment to challenge by habeas corpus. Johnson v. Smith, 295 F. Supp. 835, 1968 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7690 (N.D. Ga. 1968), aff'd, 414 F.2d 645, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 11569 (5th Cir. 1969).

There is a distinction between retained and appointed counsel, for purposes of gauging counsel's effectiveness. Allen v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 642, 217 S.E.2d 156, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1213 (1975).

Standard for appointed counsel is more stringent than for retained counsel. Allen v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 642, 217 S.E.2d 156, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1213 (1975).

Test for asserting ineffective assistance of counsel claim. — When a defendant asserts a claim of ineffective assistance, the test is whether there is a reasonable probability the jury would have reached a different verdict, absent the error of counsel. Gross v. State, 262 Ga. 232, 416 S.E.2d 284, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 515 (1992).

Defendant did not show that the trial counsel performed deficiently and that any alleged deficient performance prejudiced the defense, and, thus, did not establish ineffective assistance of counsel, as: (1) the trial court's alleged failure to give a curative instruction regarding a remark a witness made that bolstered the victim's credibility was not error since defense counsel had asked the question to which the remark was made and did not object, which meant defendant could not challenge the failure to give the instruction as error; and (2) the victim's comment to a witness shortly after having sex with defendant was admissible as res gestae evidence and, thus, defense counsel could not be ineffective for failing to object to it. Drummond v. State, 275 Ga. App. 86, 619 S.E.2d 784, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 885 (2005).

In determining prejudice on an ineffective assistance of counsel claim under Strickland, a defendant has to show that there was a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different; Georgia cases that deviated from that standard by eliminating the reasonable probability language, thereby putting a more stringent burden on the defendant, are thus disapproved. Miller v. State, 285 Ga. 285, 676 S.E.2d 173, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 143 (2009).

To determine effectiveness, totality of circumstances must be examined. — Claims of ineffective assistance of counsel require the court to inquire into the actual performance rendered by counsel based on the totality of the circumstances. Young v. Zant, 506 F. Supp. 274, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16535 (M.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd in part, 677 F.2d 792, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19269 (11th Cir. 1982).

Effective counsel need not be errorless counsel, nor should counsel be judged ineffective by hindsight; the appropriate methodology for determining whether there has been effective assistance is to examine the totality of the circumstances in the record. Dodd v. Williams, 560 F. Supp. 372, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18612 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Habeas court erred by reversing a defendant's death sentence imposed for a murder based on the defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel for trial counsel's failure to present evidence of the defendant's mental health status and for failing to present other mitigation evidence as, considering the combined effect of trial counsel's various professional deficiencies, as a matter of law, there was no possibility that absent trial counsel's professional deficiencies a reasonable probability existed that a different outcome would have occurred. Schofield v. Cook, 284 Ga. 240, 663 S.E.2d 221, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 545 (2008).

Measure of reasonable effectiveness at time of service. — Appellant was not denied effective assistance of counsel because appointed counsel conducted extensive cross-examination, made appropriate objections to the presentation of the state's case in chief, and was faced with overwhelming evidence of the appellant's guilt through the testimony of numerous eyewitnesses. The effectiveness of counsel cannot be measured fairly by the results of a criminal trial or appeal, but is measured upon the reasonable effectiveness of counsel at the time the services were rendered. White v. State, 174 Ga. App. 443, 330 S.E.2d 381, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2714 (1985).

The effectiveness of counsel cannot be measured fairly by the results of a criminal trial or appeal, but upon the reasonable effectiveness of counsel at the time the services were rendered. Keese v. State, 174 Ga. App. 739, 331 S.E.2d 88, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2747 (1985); Gross v. State, 262 Ga. 232, 416 S.E.2d 284, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 515 (1992).

Performance reviewed in light of type of proceeding. — The rules laid down in Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 104 S. Ct. 2052, 80 L. Ed. 2d 674 (1984), provide the appropriate framework for evaluating a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel in the context of a probation revocation hearing, but the court must review counsel's performance in light of the particular type of proceeding involved. United States v. Wren, 682 F. Supp. 1237, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2419 (S.D. Ga. 1988).

Actions of counsel assessed in context of information reasonably available at time. — In assessing counsel's conduct, the habeas corpus court must view counsel's actions in the context of the information that was reasonably available to counsel at the time of the defendant's trial. Mitchell v. Hopper, 564 F. Supp. 780, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16411 (S.D. Ga.

1983), aff'd, 762 F.2d 886, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30164 (11th Cir. 1985).

Whether counsel has rendered adequate assistance is a mixed question of fact and law requiring application of legal principles to the historical facts of the case. Birt v. Montgomery, 709 F.2d 690, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 24721 (11th Cir. 1983).

Question of fact and law. — Whether defense counsel has rendered adequate assistance is a mixed question of fact and law that requires the application of legal principles to the historical facts of the case. Young v. Zant, 677 F.2d 792, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19269 (11th Cir. 1982).

Absent a clearly erroneous determination, the Court of Appeals will defer to the district court's findings on such primary facts as what the attorney did or did not do during the course of the trial, but the Court of Appeals will apply its own judgment to the question of whether that conduct constituted ineffective assistance. Young v. Zant, 677 F.2d 792, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19269 (11th Cir. 1982).

Claim cannot be raised by counsel who participated in trial. — Defense counsel was precluded from presenting a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel concerning a trial in which counsel participated due to the ethical prohibition against a lawyer acting as a witness. Tweedell v. State, 218 Ga. App. 518, 462 S.E.2d 181, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 780 (1995).

Defense counsel is precluded from presenting a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel concerning a trial in which counsel participated, due to the ethical prohibition against a lawyer acting as a witness. Harrison v. State, 201 Ga. App. 577, 411 S.E.2d 738, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1523 (1991), cert. denied, No. S92C0220, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 1000 (Ga. Nov. 21, 1991).

Trial strategy in referring to defendant as drug dealer. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in deliberately characterizing the defendant as a drug dealer because it was trial counsel's strategy to present to the jury a credible alternative explanation for what the defendant was doing at the time of the murder and also to preempt or blunt the effect of the evidence of drugs and drug paraphernalia found in the search of the defendant's home. Babbage v. State, 296 Ga. 364, 768 S.E.2d 461, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 2 (2015).

Trial strategy. — There is a strong presumption that trial counsel's performance falls within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance and any challenged action by trial counsel might be considered sound trial strategy. Stephens v. State, 265 Ga. 120, 453 S.E.2d 443, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 72 (1995).

Trial strategy on number of objections to hearsay evidence. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to object to every instance of hearsay because such was made as a strategic decision not to object in order to avoid alienating a jury that would ultimately determine whether to impose a death sentence upon defendant; moreover, defendant failed to show that any prejudice resulted by counsel's conduct. Buttram v. State, 280 Ga. 595, 631 S.E.2d 642, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 405 (2006).

Defendant failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel based on trial counsel's failure to object to certain hearsay because defense counsel testified at the hearing on the motion for new trial that the decision not to raise numerous objections, including objections to hearsay, was a tactical one; because defense counsel believed that most of the evidence was consistent with the defense, counsel chose to follow a strategy of allowing the jury to focus on that defense, rather than a strategy of disrupting the flow of the testimony with numerous technical objections, and stated further that defense counsel was "not a big fan of objecting to hearsay anyway. If you catch it too late and then stand up, then they get to hear it two or three times." Kania v. State, 280 Ga. App. 356, 634 S.E.2d 146, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 853 (2006).

Trial strategy on DNA evidence. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in handling the DNA evidence as: (1) counsel stipulated to the DNA evidence as part of its strategy to reduce the number of state's witnesses; (2) the defendant remembered having sexual relations with the defendant's spouse; (3) counsel discussed the chain of custody with the state and was satisfied that the chain of custody could be established; and (4) in light of the overwhelming evidence against the defendant, the defendant failed to establish that the results of the proceeding would have been different if the lawyer had not stipulated as to the DNA evidence. Furthermore, evidence of the sexual history of the defendant's spouse was properly excluded under the Georgia Rape Shield Statute, O.C.G.A. § 24-2-3, as the defendant was charged with the aggravated assault of the defendant's spouse in conjunction with a rape charge; trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to argue that evidence of the prior sexual history of the defendant's spouse was admissible. Osterhout v. State, 266 Ga. App. 319, 596 S.E.2d 766, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 363 (2004).

Trial strategy on witness testimony.

— Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel because counsel failed to subpoena two witnesses as the witnesses were present at trial and counsel and the defendant decided that the witnesses would not be called because the information they would have provided elicited during the cross-examination of a state's witness; the failure to call the witnesses was a reasonable strategic decision that did not constitute deficient performance. McKinney v. State, 281 Ga. 92, 635 S.E.2d 153, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 582 (2006).

Counsel was not ineffective under the Sixth Amendment for not objecting when a witness testified that the witness did not believe that a defendant gave the victim a "chopper" to commit a robbery. Reasonable decisions as to whether to raise a specific objection were ordinarily matters of trial strategy; moreover, even if counsel had been successful in excluding the statement, other witnesses contradicted the defendant's account of the victim's disappearance, asserting that it was a bogus cover story. Anderson v. State, 285 Ga. 496, 678 S.E.2d 84, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 295 (2009).

Trial counsel's performance was not deficient because trial counsel testified that counsel received and reviewed discovery material provided by the district attorney and viewed the crime scenes, that counsel's investigator interviewed witnesses who gave statements to police, that counsel met with the defendant approximately six times in the months before trial, and that counsel ascertained that family members were willing to be alibi witnesses for the defendant, but counsel elected not to have the family members testify since the defendant acknowledged being at the crime scenes. Haynes v. State, 287 Ga. 202, 695 S.E.2d 219, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 392 (2010).

Trial counsel's failure to object to the officer's testimony regarding statements made by a witness who did not testify did not amount to ineffective assistance because the decision was strategically made so as not to draw attention to the testimony. Durham v. State, 292 Ga. 239, 734 S.E.2d 377, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 953 (2012).

A witness's passing references to the defendant's record did not put the defendant's character in issue, and even if it did, defense counsel's decision not to object was an informed strategic decision, not ineffective assistance. McKenzie v. State, 284 Ga. 342, 667 S.E.2d 43, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 742 (2008).

Trial strategy on accident defense.

— Defense counsel's decision to pursue an accident defense was an informed strategic choice and was not ineffective assistance of counsel as the decision was not due to a misunderstanding of the law or the facts of the case; rather, counsel consulted with the defendant and learned that the defendant contended that the gun accidentally discharged. There was no evidence that the defendant pointed the gun at the victim before the shooting occurred and there was no dispute as to how the fatal injury was inflicted. Mayberry v. State, 281 Ga. 144, 635 S.E.2d 736, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 646 (2006).

Trial strategy on severance. — In a trial for malice murder, felony murder, and cruelty to children, a defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel because the defendant's attorney failed to move to sever the defendant's trial from that of the defendant's codefendant and failed to object to the prosecutor's allegedly improper closing argument; trial counsel testified that counsel did not seek a severance so that the jury would focus its outrage on the codefendant rather than the defendant, and the prosecutor's use of phrases such as "I think" and "I know" did not amount to an impermissible statement of personal opinion. Jackson v. State, 281 Ga. 705, 642 S.E.2d 656, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 243 (2007).

Trial strategy on questioning jurors. — When the defendant was on trial for murdering the defendant's paramour, as defense counsel decided not to further question a prospective juror, who had strong feelings about domestic violence, in order to avoid tainting the remaining jurors, this was a reasonable strategic decision that did not constitute ineffective assistance. Cade v. State, 289 Ga. 805, 716 S.E.2d 196, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 717 (2011).

Trial strategy on opening statement. — Trial counsel's decisions not to object to an opening statement that set forth admissible evidence or object to the admissibility of letters written by defendant was reasonable trial strategy that was not deficient performance. Poole v. State, 291 Ga. 848, 734 S.E.2d 1, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 858 (2012).

Trial strategy on cross-examination. — Defendant's trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to cross-examine the victim of defendant's attempted armed robbery as to the victim's disciplinary record at the fast-food restaurant where the crime was committed in order to show that the victim had a reason to fabricate the crime, as the decision not to cross-examine was one of trial strategy and defendant failed to show prejudice. Silver v. State, 276 Ga. App. 801, 625 S.E.2d 81, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1372 (2005).

Trial counsel's decision not to impeach a witness and to develop that witness as a suspect in the murder for which defendant was on trial, as part of the strategy to preserve the right to final argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71, did not amount to deficient performance. Eason v. State, 283

Ga. 116, 657 S.E.2d 203, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 132 (2008).

Trial strategy on admissions. — As it was a trial strategy for defendant's counsel to admit that the defendant violated the defendant's probation from a prior conviction, but that defendant was not on trial for the violation of probation and the state had failed to prove the other offense, and that theory was not patently unreasonable, there was no ineffective assistance of counsel. Copeland v. State, 276 Ga. App. 834, 625 S.E.2d 100, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1381 (2005).

State death row inmate's federal habeas corpus petition was denied where trial counsel was not ineffective for introducing as mitigation evidence at the sentencing phase an independent mental health expert's opinion that the inmate suffered from antisocial personality disorder; although that testimony could be a "two-edged sword," counsel's strategy was to emphasize that the inmate's poor impulse control, which led to the murder of a woman and a child, were not the inmate's fault and that the inmate did not act with premeditation. Ford v. Schofield, 488 F. Supp. 2d 1258, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 34958 (N.D. Ga. 2007), aff'd, 546 F.3d 1326, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 22318 (11th Cir. 2008).

Defendant's numerous claims of ineffective assistance of counsel were rejected as the way counsel handled the defense was part of a reasonable trial strategy, even though the defendant claimed that counsel should have: (1) conducted a more in depth voir dire; (2) called the experts who prepared allegedly exculpatory laboratory reports; (3) examined the alibi witnesses about their prior criminal histories; (4) presented evidence to counter the state's evidence of robbery as a motive; and (5) interviewed the defendant's Army friend to determine that a discharge against that individual was dishonorable; even if counsel had undertaken these steps, the outcome would not have changed. Tolbert v. State, 282 Ga. 254, 647 S.E.2d 555, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 487 (2007).

Trial strategy on alibi defense. — Counsel was not ineffective for presenting an alibi defense when the defendant contended before trial that the defendant was at home when the crime occurred; counsel's decision was a reasonable trial tactic and did not amount to ineffectiveness because the defendant and the defendant's present counsel questioned its efficacy. Johnson v. State, 282 Ga. 235, 647 S.E.2d 48, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 474 (2007).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for not emphasizing that no blood was found in the rooming house where a murder defendant and the victim lived; defense counsel had established the absence of forensic evidence, which would include blood evidence, inside the house, and had emphasized this during closing argument, and it could not be said that counsel was ineffective simply because another attorney might have placed more or a different emphasis on the evidence. Jones v. State, 282 Ga. 306, 647 S.E.2d 576, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 526 (2007).

Trial strategy on impeachment. — With regard to defendant's convictions for malice murder and other crimes, defendant failed to show that defense counsel was ineffective for failing to impeach four witnesses' testimony by the witnesses' convictions as such impeachment would have caused defense counsel to lose the right to make the final closing argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71. Adams v. State, 283 Ga. 298, 658 S.E.2d 627, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 240 (2008).

In a felony murder prosecution, defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to testimony about the ballistics findings made by a crime lab on grounds of hearsay and the state's failure to supply the ballistics report in discovery. As the overall defense strategy was that the defendant did not commit the crimes, the specifics of the crimes were less material. McKenzie v. State, 284 Ga. 342, 667 S.E.2d 43, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 742 (2008).

Decision not to object to the admission of a codefendant's guilty plea could have been the result of reasonable trial strategy; since the defendant did not call the defendant's trial counsel to testify at the hearing on the motion for new trial, and in the absence of evidence to the contrary, counsel's decisions were presumed to be strategic and thus insufficient to support an ineffective assistance of counsel claim. In any event, the evidence of the defendant's guilt was overwhelming, there was no reasonable probability the outcome would have been more favorable had counsel done the things the defendant claimed that counsel should have, and no prejudice was shown. Washington v. State, 285 Ga. 541, 678 S.E.2d 900, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 311 (2009).

Counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the state's opening comment that the defendant's story was "ludicrous" and "crazy." Counsel testified that counsel did not object because the statement was not evidence and because objecting could bring attention to the comments; this was a conscious and deliberate trial strategy. Raymond v. State, 298 Ga. App. 549, 680 S.E.2d 598, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 735 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1791, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 47 (Ga. Jan. 12, 2010).

An armed robbery defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to fingerprint evidence, because the theory of defense was that defendant was present in the store, but that the crime was not an armed robbery. Defense counsel's decision not to call two witnesses was also supported by counsel's trial tactics and strategy. Crawford v. State, 302 Ga. App. 782, 691 S.E.2d 660, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 230 (2010).

Although defendant contended defendant's trial counsel was ineffective because the defendant chose to pursue a theory of defense in which the defendant argued that the defendant was unaware that the defendant was being arrested and, thus, could not have knowingly resisted, instead of pursuing a defense in which the defendant argued that defendant legally resisted an unlawful arrest, counsel's decision as to which theory of defense to pursue is a matter of strategy and tactics; and, as a general rule, matters of tactics and strategy, whether wise or unwise, did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel. Defendant had not shown that counsel's strategy was so patently unreasonable that no competent attorney would have chosen that strategy. Zeger v. State, 306 Ga. App. 474, 702 S.E.2d 474, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 969 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective because the defendant failed to show trial counsel's alleged inadequate preparation or communication with the defendant; counsel did object to the co-defendant's out of court statements because counsel believed that some of the things that the co-defendant said would actually help the defendant; and counsel submitted a written supplemental charge of voluntary manslaughter, which was rejected because the evidence did not support the charge of voluntary manslaughter. Browder v. State, 294 Ga. 188, 751 S.E.2d 354, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 963 (2013).

Trial strategy on officer's testimony.

— Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the alleged hearsay testimony of an officer that allegedly violated the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to confrontation because it was counsel's strategic decision not to object to the testimony as counsel spoke with the defendant's relatives in New York, and they knew nothing about a murder, robbery, or anything else, only that the defendant had asked to come visit them; counsel did not object to the statement as counsel believed it to be innocent in nature and did not believe the testimony was harmful; and, given the overwhelming evidence presented, the defendant could not show that the outcome of the trial would have been different had the testimony been excluded. Sullivan v. State, 301 Ga. 37, 799 S.E.2d 163, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 244 (2017).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for agreeing not to pursue severance of the cruelty to children count and the June 14, 2015 aggravated assault counts from the murders counts because it benefited defendant by securing the state's agreement to sever the count of aggravated assault of five people on May 25, 2015. Riley v. State, 321 Ga. 112, 913 S.E.2d 559, 2025 Ga. LEXIS 51 (2025).

Right to remain silent was trial tactic. — Defendant failed to meet the burden of showing ineffective assistance during his criminal trial, as defendant failed to show that the evidence elicited from a police detective affected the outcome of the trial, and counsel's decision not to object to testimony that defendant had invoked the right to remain silent was a trial tactic. Dunson v. State, 275 Ga. App. 515, 621 S.E.2d 525, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1019 (2005).

Failure to pursue voluntary intoxication defense. — Because declining to spend time and energy delving into murder defendant's drug use was a reasonable course, defense counsel performed in a way that was constitutionally acceptable when they did not investigate and did not present evidence of PCP's effects. Rogers v. Zant, 13 F.3d 384, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 2198 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 899, 115 S. Ct. 255, 130 L. Ed. 2d 175, 1994 U.S. LEXIS 6712 (1994).

Admission of defendant's guilt.

— Counsel's admission to the jury during opening and closing arguments that defendant caused the victim's death, made in order to maintain credibility with the jury for the purpose of avoiding the death sentence, did not constitute representation which fell below an objective standard of reasonableness. Parker v. Turpin, 60 F. Supp. 2d 1332, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18591 (N.D. Ga. 1999), aff'd, 244 F.3d 831, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 3942 (11th Cir. 2001).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in making opening statements in which trial counsel, notwithstanding defendant's pleas of not guilty, effectively admitted defendant's guilt as to the terroristic threats and battery charges. Mallon v. State, 266 Ga. App. 394, 597 S.E.2d 497, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 384 (2004).

Trial court's finding that defendant received effective assistance of counsel was not clearly erroneous as there was evidence that defense counsel advised defendant of the 10-year mandatory minimum sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, and defendant failed to show error or prejudice from the state's reading of preliminary instructions to the jury. Richardson v. State, 265 Ga. App. 711, 595 S.E.2d 565, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 236 (2004), overruled in part, Brown v. State, 290 Ga. 865, 725 S.E.2d 320, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 348 (2012).

Failure to challenge indictment.

— Despite an inmate's claim to the contrary in a petition for habeas relief, trial counsel was not ineffective in not contesting the failure of the indictment to state venue, by inducing the inmate's guilty plea, in failing to advise the inmate of the inmate's Boykin rights, by failing to object to the prosecutor's conduct at the plea hearing, and by failing to advise the inmate about parole eligibility. Wright v. Hall, 281 Ga. 318, 638 S.E.2d 270, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 990 (2006).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to challenge the felony murder count of an indictment because the indictment contained sufficient facts to put the defendant on notice that the defendant was accused of the death of the victim as a result of an aggravated assault when the indictment alleged a specific offensive use of the defendant's hands and feet and that when the defendant's hands and feet were used in a particular way they were objects which were likely to and actually did result in serious bodily injury; the absence of self-defense, like general intent, did not have to be expressly alleged in an indictment, and even if some such allegation were necessary, language in the indictment asserting that defendant acted unlawfully and contrary to the laws of the state, the good order, peace and dignity thereof was sufficient. Lizana v. State, 287 Ga. 184, 695 S.E.2d 208, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 404 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to demur to the fatally flawed felony murder counts in the indictment because the defendant did not demonstrate prejudice as the defendant failed to show that the state would not have simply re-indicted the defendant after dismissal of the original indictment; and the state faced no imminent deadlines on the murder counts. Martin v. State, 306 Ga. 747, 833 S.E.2d 122, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 604 (2019).

Failure to object to testimony of cell mate regarding co-indictee's statements. — Second defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the testimony of the detective who interviewed the co-indictee's cell mate and for failing to object to the evidence concerning the co-indictee's statements to the cell mate because all of the defendants had a continuing objection regarding the admission of any evidence of the co-indictee's statements to the cell mate, and that objection encompassed the testimony of the detective who interviewed the cell mate, and any objection based on the Confrontation Clause would have been without merit as the statements were not testimonial because the co-indictee made the statements to the cell mate and not to police. Grimes v. State, 296 Ga. 337, 766 S.E.2d 72, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 922 (2014).

Failure to object to testimony of family member of defendant. — Trial counsel's failure to object to testimony by the defendant's son as to the defendant's racism and desire for the defendant's children to have traditional Indian marriages did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel insofar as the son's opinion in that regard was a mental deduction from facts which were within the son's knowledge and to which the son testified; and, even assuming the testimony was improper, there was no prejudice insofar as the son attempted in the son's testimony to disavow the past characterizations of the defendant as racist, and the evidence was cumulative of other testimony regarding the defendant's racist beliefs. Rai v. State, 297 Ga. 472, 775 S.E.2d 129, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 505 (2015).

Treatment of hearsay statements. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the admission of the victim's hearsay statements to the extent that they expressed the victim's opinions regarding the defendant's racial and cultural bias because trial counsel's vigorous efforts to exclude the totality of the victim's hearsay statements as ineligible for admission under the necessity exception were successful in large measure and greatly narrowed the scope of the hearsay evidence that was ultimately admitted; and the defendant could not establish prejudice from that testimony as it was cumulative of other evidence the state adduced regarding the defendant's racial and cultural bias, including, but not limited to, the damning testimony by the jailhouse informant. Rai v. State, 297 Ga. 472, 775 S.E.2d 129, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 505 (2015).

Matters of strategy. — Because the trial court did not commit reversible error when it granted the state's motion in limine, permitted a police officer to explain the officer's conduct under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-2, and allowed the state to introduce evidence of defendant's prior misdemeanor convictions under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(b) and O.C.G.A. § 24-2-2, defendant failed to show that counsel's trial strategies constituted ineffective assistance. Harris v. State, 279 Ga. 522, 615 S.E.2d 532, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 446 (2005).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for opening the door to allow the state to introduce evidence of a defendant's past juvenile adjudication for child molestation as: (1) trial counsel was aware of the defendant's juvenile adjudication prior to the trial and made a strategic decision to call a witness to testify regarding the defendant's good character; (2) the witness consistently testified that the witness knew nothing about such an incident; (3) in light of the witness's lack of knowledge and the state's failure to introduce a certified copy of the prior juvenile adjudication, trial counsel successfully objected to the state making any mention of the prior adjudication during its closing argument, and the trial court gave a special limiting instruction to ensure that the jury would not consider any impeachment evidence in making its determination. Redman v. State, 281 Ga. App. 605, 636 S.E.2d 680, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1099 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0189, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 1002 (Ga. Nov. 20, 2006).

Because the defendant: (1) failed to show prejudice by trial counsel's failure to call certain witnesses at trial; (2) failed to raise allegations of ineffectiveness regarding the state's grant of immunity to a witness and regarding the admission of an audiotape; and (3) abandoned any error regarding the admission of a videotape of the crime scene, the defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective. McNeal v. State, 281 Ga. 427, 637 S.E.2d 375, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 822 (2006).

No ineffectiveness of counsel was shown in a defendant's malice murder trial by three instances of asserted errors by the defendant's trial counsel which the defendant contended resulted from lack of understanding of the law on the part of the trial counsel; the defendant did not show that the trial counsel's alleged failure to object to the admission of certain evidence, to make a proper challenge to the jury venire, or to follow proper procedure in obtaining funds for an investigator had any negative impact on the defense, and therefore the defendant failed to show that but for the deficient performance, the outcome of the trial would have been different. Green v. State, 281 Ga. 322, 638 S.E.2d 288, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 992 (2006).

In a defendant's appeal of convictions for murder, felony murder, and aggravated assault, the defendant failed to rebut the presumption that defense counsel's conduct fell within the range of reasonable professional assistance as to defense counsel introducing the fact that the defendant was on probation at the time of the murder, which defense counsel chose to do in order to offer an explanation to the jury of why the defendant was afraid to report the victim's death to the police; even though a different attorney might have chosen a different trial strategy, that did not equate to ineffective assistance of counsel. Warbington v. State, 281 Ga. 464, 640 S.E.2d 11, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 7 (2007).

Trial court did not clearly err in determining that counsel's decision not to use a witness's pre-trial testimony was proper, and not evidence of counsel's ineffectiveness, when there was an available witness who could testify that that testimony was perjured, as such was not an unreasonable decision no competent attorney would make under the circumstances presented. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 521, 640 S.E.2d 274, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 32 (2007).

A defendant did not show that trial counsel was ineffective with regard to a witness, and counsel's actions were the result of a reasonable trial strategy; a component of the defense was that an investigator was persecuting the defendant because the defendant had rebuffed the investigator's sexual advances, and trial counsel did not wish to ask the witness about a discussion with the investigator because it would emphasize to the jury that at an earlier stage in the investigation than suited this theory, the investigator had information implicating the defendant. Conway v. State, 281 Ga. 685, 642 S.E.2d 673, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 234 (2007).

A defendant failed to establish that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel where defense counsel's decision not to seek a severance of certain theft by receiving and drug charges from the defendant's prosecution on malice murder and armed robbery charges, and counsel's decision not to present the defendant's mother as an alibi witness due to a prior inconsistent statement, were both reasonable tactical decisions. Horne v. State, 281 Ga. 799, 642 S.E.2d 659, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 240 (2007).

Trial court did not err by denying a defendant's motion for a new trial based on the defendant's contention that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel regarding convictions for aggravated sexual battery and child molestation involving the defendant's eight-year-old child as the trial transcript confirmed that trial counsel attempted to use the allegations that the defendant had abused siblings in the past in an effort to impeach or discredit the young victim on the premise that the young victim received the information from the other parent, which was trial strategy that did not amount to ineffective assistance. Dyer v. State, 295 Ga. App. 495, 672 S.E.2d 462, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 22 (2009).

Defendant's claim that trial counsel's failure to preserve an issue constituted ineffective assistance of counsel was without merit because trial counsel's testimony showed that counsel pursued the reasonable strategy, however mistaken it could appear with hindsight, of placing the damaging information before the jury through the defendant's direct testimony, rather than risk having the information extracted from the defendant on cross-examination. Collier v. State, 288 Ga. 756, 707 S.E.2d 102, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 178 (2011).

Based on trial counsel's testimony regarding pre-trial consultations with a trauma nurse and a physician, both of whom discounted the suggested alternative explanation for the victim's initial brain injury, trial counsel's strategic decision not to continue hunting for a defense expert, but instead to challenge the state's experts on cross-examination, was not unreasonable and did not constitute deficient performance. Brown v. State, 292 Ga. 454, 738 S.E.2d 591, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 152 (2013).

Defendant's claim that a conflict existed between trial counsel/appellate counsel and defense testimony lacked merit, as defendant provided no support for his proposition that an alleged conflict based on his counsels' strategy rose to the level of an actual conflict of interest for the purposes of the Sixth Amendment. Mahdi v. State, 312 Ga. 466, 863 S.E.2d 133, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 620 (2021).

Tactical decisions by trial counsel.

— Counsel's "all-or-nothing" defense to rape charge (denial of the charge) was presumed to be a strategic decision and therefore not evidence of unprofessional conduct or ineffective assistance. Scott v. State, 223 Ga. App. 479, 477 S.E.2d 901, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 1207 (1996).

Trial counsel were not ineffective for failing to object to the cross-examination of the defendant's psychologist that brought out instances of the psychologist's past professional misconduct, where the attorneys made the tactical decision that the prosecutor was hurting the state's case by picking on the witness. Henry v. State, 269 Ga. 851, 507 S.E.2d 419, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 812 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1118, 119 S. Ct. 1768, 143 L. Ed. 2d 798, 1999 U.S. LEXIS 3321 (1999).

Defense counsel's failure to object to a rape victim's fiancé's testimony about how the fiancé tried to help the victim overcome the victim's drug addiction was part of counsel's trial strategy to portray the victim as an addict who willingly exchanged sexual favors for drugs; defendant's claim of ineffective assistance therefore failed. Brown v. State, 260 Ga. App. 77, 579 S.E.2d 87, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 317 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C0934, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 565 (Ga. June 9, 2003).

Trial court did not clearly err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial based on a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel where defendant alleged that a prospective witness told counsel that a child victim said that nothing happened, and trial counsel testified that the prospective witness advised the counsel that a child victim would not testify against defendant because the witness was afraid of defendant, and that the witness's testimony was not necessary; deciding which defense witnesses are to be called is a matter of trial strategy and tactics, and tactical errors do not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel. Tanner v. State, 259 Ga. App. 94, 576 S.E.2d 71, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 25 (2003).

Defendant's 16 challenges to trial counsel's assistance were rejected as they were decisions made after thorough investigation and client consultation, and all involved trial strategy; the decisions concerned: (1) which witnesses to call; (2) whether to put on evidence so as to preserve the final word in closing argument; (3) how to conduct cross-examinations; (4) what motions to file; and (5) what objections to make. Rowe v. State, 263 Ga. App. 367, 587 S.E.2d 781, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1149 (2003).

Felony murder conviction for the defendant shooting the victim following a prolonged argument concerning an attempted drug sale was affirmed because the defendant failed to prove that defense counsel was ineffective because defense counsel's decision not to enlarge a photograph of defendant's claimed wound and introduce it into evidence was a reasonable strategic or tactical decision nor was counsel's failure to subpoena a detective in order to obtain a diagram of the crime scene ineffective as the information that the defendant sought to obtain and introduce into evidence was submitted into evidence by the testimony of other witnesses and a videotape of the crime scene. Sellers v. State, 277 Ga. 172, 587 S.E.2d 35, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 833 (2003).

Counsel's decision not to use evidence of appellant's purported cocaine intoxication that conflicted with appellant's plea of not guilty was a matter of trial strategy within the exclusive province of the lawyer after consultation with the client, and fell within the bounds of reasonable professional conduct. The trial court did not err when it determined that trial counsel's decision not to use the psychiatric evidence did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel. Prince v. State, 277 Ga. 230, 587 S.E.2d 637, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 893 (2003).

Defendant convicted of aggravated assault did not show that defense counsel provided ineffective assistance by: (1) failing to object to the admission of defendant's prior convictions after defendant placed defendant's character in issue; (2) failing to object to the admission, at sentencing, of defendant's prior convictions, which had been used at trial for impeachment, as the convictions were properly admitted; and (3) making a strategic decision not to request a jury instruction on the defense of accident, which defendant did not raise until defendant's own testimony, and any ineffective assistance arising from counsel's failure to investigate defendant's prior guilty pleas used to enhance defendant's sentence, which may have been involuntary, was rendered moot by the vacation of defendant's sentence. Carswell v. State, 263 Ga. App. 833, 589 S.E.2d 605, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1346 (2003).

Trial court properly denied defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel since defense counsel met with defendant seven times, disagreed with defendant's assertion that certain defense witnesses were improperly dressed for court, rejected certain witnesses to avoid entering into evidence defendant's prior convictions, and made several other tactical decisions about the conduct of defendant's defense. Anderson v. State, 264 Ga. App. 362, 590 S.E.2d 729, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1396 (2003).

Defendant did not show defendant was deprived of effective assistance of counsel because defense counsel did not call two character witnesses as counsel said the two witnesses would only have offered character evidence, the state could easily have discredited their testimony, counsel did not want to lose closing argument by introducing evidence other than defendant's testimony, and the decision not to call these witnesses was trial strategy. Martin v. State, 266 Ga. App. 392, 597 S.E.2d 445, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 302 (2004).

Trial counsel's use of a videotaped police interview did not constitute ineffective assistance but was a tactical decision made to support the defense theory. Robinson v. State, 278 Ga. 31, 597 S.E.2d 386, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 469 (2004).

Where the defendant asserted that the defendant was denied effective assistance of trial counsel in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 because trial counsel failed to call witnesses who gave testimony at the hearing on the defendant's motion for a new trial that contradicted testimony for the state with regard to the timing of the defendant's arrest, the argument failed; defense counsel did not call the witnesses as a matter of trial strategy after defense counsel interviewed the witnesses and determined that their testimony was cumulative and potentially harmful to the defendant. Furthermore, the defendant's assertion that the defendant was denied effective assistance of trial counsel based on trial counsel's failure to call witnesses who would have testified that the defendant told the owner of the vehicle where the vehicle could have been found after the defendant had allegedly stolen the vehicle, was not error as the witnesses' testimony would have been inadmissible hearsay under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-1. Sexton v. State, 268 Ga. App. 736, 603 S.E.2d 66, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 1011 (2004).

Defendant argued that counsel was ineffective for failing to present evidence in support of defendant's coercion defense, failing to sever the trial from the codefendant, and failing to voir dire certain parties; however, all these claims either lacked merit or were part of counsel's trial strategy thereby making counsel's services effective. Treadwell v. State, 272 Ga. App. 508, 613 S.E.2d 3, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 148 (2005), cert. denied, No. S05C1267, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 612 (Ga. Sept. 19, 2005).

Defendant's counsel was not ineffective in defendant's criminal trial, as the decision to waive opening argument was a tactical decision, the decision not to request jury charges was based on counsel's determination that the applicable law was adequately covered, counsel's failure to interview one witness was not shown to have prejudiced defendant's case, and there was no showing that a request for a continuance would have been necessary; tactical trial decisions did not constitute ineffective assistance. Polk v. State, 275 Ga. App. 467, 620 S.E.2d 857, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 999 (2005).

Because a defendant had not questioned trial counsel at the hearing on the motion for new trial about counsel's alleged failure to object to certain comments, any decision not to object was presumed to be a strategic one that did not amount to ineffective assistance. John v. State, 282 Ga. 792, 653 S.E.2d 435, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 719 (2007).

Errors of judgment and tactical errors do not constitute denial of effective assistance of counsel. Harrell v. State, 139 Ga. App. 556, 228 S.E.2d 723, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1884 (1976), overruled in part, Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982); Bishop v. State, 155 Ga. App. 611, 271 S.E.2d 743, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2702 (1980); Hudson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 281, 274 S.E.2d 675, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3032 (1980), overruled in part, Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982); McCloud v. State, 174 Ga. App. 672, 331 S.E.2d 54, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 1923 (1985); Brenneman v. State, 200 Ga. App. 111, 407 S.E.2d 93, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 781 (1991).

Because the appellant's counsel negotiated a favorable pretrial agreement that the appellant rejected, conducted extensive and appropriate cross-examination of state witnesses, presented witnesses on the appellant's behalf, in addition to the appellant's testimony, made an opening statement and closing argument and there was overwhelming evidence against the appellant, including a positive identification and the appellant's confession, the attorney did an excellent job in representing the appellant; errors of judgment and tactical errors do not constitute denial of effective assistance of counsel. Moore v. State, 174 Ga. App. 460, 330 S.E.2d 397, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2716 (1985).

Errors of judgment and tactical errors do not establish ineffective assistance. Clarrington v. State, 178 Ga. App. 663, 344 S.E.2d 485, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2554 (1986).

Record did not show that counsel's decisions concerning the extent of counsel's voir dire examination and whether or not to interpose challenges were not reasonable tactical decisions. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 281, 368 S.E.2d 742, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 276 (1988), cert. denied, 492 U.S. 925, 109 S. Ct. 3261, 106 L. Ed. 2d 606, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 3313 (1989).

Decisions as to what objections to make and when to make them are matters within the trial counsel's discretion, and the strategic choices of counsel do not establish ineffective assistance, even if in hindsight these strategic choices are proven to be erroneous. Jones v. Kemp, 706 F. Supp. 1534, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1682 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Defendant, charged with aggravated assault, was not prejudiced by counsel's pursuit of an insanity defense at trial, rather than one of self-defense, where none of the witnesses other than defendant gave any indication that defendant was defending self in the incident. Prohitt v. State, 191 Ga. App. 5, 381 S.E.2d 83, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 468 (1989).

Trial strategy and tactics do not equate with ineffective assistance of counsel. Lee v. State, 199 Ga. App. 246, 404 S.E.2d 598, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 429 (1991), cert. denied, No. S91C0990, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 735 (Ga. May 22, 1991).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to require the court reporter to take down certain portions of the trial, failing to question witnesses further, refusing to accept the trial court's offer to give a limiting instruction on deposition testimony, failing to object to certain testimony, and failing to preserve pretrial interviews with a key witness, as each alleged deficiency was a strategic or tactical decision. Herndon v. State, 235 Ga. App. 258, 509 S.E.2d 142, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1486 (1998).

Defendant failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel because defense counsel's failure to object to the admission of a witness's pretrial statement to police was not ineffective assistance of counsel as admission of the statement was proper; the defendant also failed to show that defense counsel's failure to object to opinion evidence given by police officers was not the result of a reasonable trial strategy on counsel's part, or that the result of the trial would have been different had counsel objected. Finally, the defendant failed to show that defense counsel's cooperating in the introduction of a witness's prior testimony was anything other than a decision made in the reasonable exercise of professional judgment. Cummings v. State, 280 Ga. 831, 632 S.E.2d 152, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 464 (2006).

Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 for failing to object when the state allegedly presented the hearsay statements of a nontestifying codefendant to a second codefendant and to an acquaintance of the defendant's that inculpated the declarant in the offenses; the defendant was unable to prove that the defendant was prejudiced, as the strength of the evidence against the defendant included the defendant's statements to the codefendant, an acquaintance and to the police admitting to shooting the victim, and the evidence included the murder weapon that was recovered from the defendant. Chenoweth v. State, 281 Ga. 7, 635 S.E.2d 730, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 596 (2006).

Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 for failing to object to the trial court's questions concerning juror bias; trial counsel had no obligation to object, as the trial court's general questions to each of the allegedly biased jurors were not improper. Chenoweth v. State, 281 Ga. 7, 635 S.E.2d 730, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 596 (2006).

Counsel was not ineffective where tactics used were for trial strategy. —

Trial tactics which had the effect of revealing to the jury the defendant's prior criminal record do not establish ineffective assistance of counsel. Williams v. State, 202 Ga. App. 494, 414 S.E.2d 716, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 60 (1992).

Failure to obtain defendant civilian clothes via a request for a continuance was construable as sound trial strategy and not ineffective assistance of counsel. Walker v. State, 210 Ga. App. 139, 435 S.E.2d 259 (1993).

At the new trial hearing, both defense counsels testified that they discussed their trial strategy with the defendant who agreed with their ultimate tactics. The appellate court should not second guess those decisions and defendant was not entitled to a new trial based on ineffective assistance of counsel. Nihart v. State, 227 Ga. App. 272, 488 S.E.2d 740, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 880 (1997).

Trial counsel's questioning of investigator to show investigator's bias against defendant was not ineffective assistance even though it divulged defendant's previous arrest by the inspector and defendant's refusal to give a statement when arrested. Ross v. State, 231 Ga. App. 793, 499 S.E.2d 642, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 288 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1171, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 789 (Ga. Sept. 8, 1998).

Defendant failed to prove that defendant was prejudiced by the absence of certain evidence, as the evidence did not go to whether the defendant, in fact, assaulted the victim. Furthermore, defense counsel's failure to object to allegedly improper statements during closing argument was a matter of trial strategy and did not prejudice the defendant. Clonts v. State, 260 Ga. App. 143, 579 S.E.2d 1, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 1621 (2002), cert. denied, No. S03C1066, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 887 (Ga. Oct. 6, 2003).

Defendant's conviction for molesting the defendant's minor child as part of Wiccan sexual rituals had to be affirmed, even though the defendant argued that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel, as the defendant did not provide the appellate court with evidence that any of the deficiencies the defendant alleged, even if assumed to be true, actually prejudiced the defendant's coercion defense in any way; too, the bulk of the defendant's allegations involved issues of trial strategy, which could not serve as the basis for the reversal of the defendant's conviction. Laymon v. State, 261 Ga. App. 488, 583 S.E.2d 165, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 666 (2003).

Where defendant's trial counsel failed to interview an eyewitness, met with defendant three times before trial, failed to request a curative instruction that the jury was not to infer guilt from defendant's disruptive behavior in the courtroom, failed to move for a mistrial, and failed to request a charge on the lesser included offense of possession of stolen property at defendant's burglary trial, such were matters of trial strategy that the court refused to second-guess and, therefore, ineffective assistance of counsel was not shown. Lovelace v. State, 262 Ga. App. 690, 586 S.E.2d 386, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 991 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1862, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 47 (Ga. Jan. 12, 2004).

Where defense counsel informed the trial court that counsel and defendant had agreed, as a matter of trial strategy, not to call character witnesses in case the state had any character impeachment witnesses, defendant's claim that this was ineffective assistance was rejected; decisions about which witnesses to call were a matter of trial strategy. Weathersby v. State, 263 Ga. App. 341, 587 S.E.2d 836, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1207 (2003).

Defendant did not show the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel when defendant's trial counsel did not subpoena two alibi witnesses, because the testimony of these witnesses would have been cumulative of witnesses who testified, so defendant did not show that defendant was prejudiced by counsel's actions. Jefferies v. State, 267 Ga. App. 694, 600 S.E.2d 753, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 758 (2004).

Because defense counsel's trial strategy, tactics, and tactical errors did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel and because defendant did not establish that the deficiency prejudiced the defense, the trial court's denial of defendant's motion for a new trial was not clearly erroneous. Ford v. State, 272 Ga. App. 798, 613 S.E.2d 234, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 377 (2005).

Defendant failed to prove ineffective assistance of counsel, in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6, because counsel's decision not to seek severance of an offense in the defendant's multi-count criminal trial and the decision not to call the defendant's spouse as a witness, were matters which were within the counsel's trial strategy and did not constitute ineffectiveness; the prosecutor's closing arguments were within the wide latitude given for that purpose, and a failure to object thereto was also not ineffectiveness. Level v. State, 273 Ga. App. 601, 615 S.E.2d 640, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 581 (2005).

Defendant failed to establish that defense counsel's failure to object to a prosecutor's questions about specific instances of misconduct was ineffective assistance since trial counsel testified that, knowing that the state had no evidence of prior crimes to introduce, defense counsel's trial strategy was to show that the type of acts for which the defendant stood accused were "totally out of character," and since counsel further testified that the counsel did not object to the two questions at issue because defense counsel believed that the door to that line of questioning had been opened and because the state possessed no evidence that could be introduced to harm the defendant. Harris v. State, 279 Ga. App. 570, 631 S.E.2d 772, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 645 (2006).

Defendant failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel based on counsel's decision to not put up evidence because trial counsel testified that, as agreed to by the defendant, it was defense counsel's strategy to not put up evidence in order to preserve the right to closing argument; with regards to the defendant's accusations that a county solicitor general had some motive to commit the murders at issue, defense counsel also testified that defense counsel believed that it would not be productive to attempt to blame an elected official on the basis of weak evidence and supposition. Griffin v. State, 280 Ga. 683, 631 S.E.2d 671, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 455 (2006), superseded by statute as stated in Ash v. State, 312 Ga. 771, 865 S.E.2d 150, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 680 (2021).

Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 for failing to object when the state placed the defendant's character at issue by introducing evidence of the defendant's use of crack cocaine after the crime; the state presented evidence that the defendant acted erratically after the crime, suggesting nervousness about the defendant's involvement in the crime, and the defendant and defense counsel strategically chose not to object to the crack cocaine evidence because it provided an alternative reason for the defendant's nervous behavior. Brooks v. State, 281 Ga. 14, 635 S.E.2d 723, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 603 (2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1215, 127 S. Ct. 1266, 167 L. Ed. 2d 91, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2212 (2007).

Trial counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 for failing to join the objection tendered by the codefendant's counsel to the prosecutor's closing argument that allegedly improperly shifted the burden of proof to the three defendants; trial counsel's decision not to add an objection on top of the codefendant's objection was neither deficient performance nor prejudicial, as the trial counsel had already objected once, the codefendant's objection to the statement had already been overruled, and the trial counsel testified that the trial counsel was prepared to argue extensively about the burden of proof and the judge's instructions on the burden of proof during the trial counsel's closing argument. Brooks v. State, 281 Ga. 14, 635 S.E.2d 723, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 603 (2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1215, 127 S. Ct. 1266, 167 L. Ed. 2d 91, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2212 (2007).

Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel due to counsel's failure to object to testimony concerning the defendant's initial statement denying knowledge of a murder as counsel testified that counsel did not object because the testimony bolstered the defense theory that the initial statement was true and that the defendant had given a subsequent inculpatory statement only after being threatened by a co-indictee; the decision was a reasonable strategic decision and did not constitute deficient performance. McKinney v. State, 281 Ga. 92, 635 S.E.2d 153, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 582 (2006).

Supreme Court of Georgia rejected the defendant's five ineffective assistance of counsel claims as lacking merit because the defendant failed to show that trial counsel's trial tactics and investigation were deficient, counsel explained that choices as to when and when not to object were part of the overall defense trial strategy, the defendant failed to show prejudice by permitting the state to elicit speculation that the person who killed the victim could be the person who called an anonymous tip line to suggest various suspects, and any claims not raised in the defendant's motion for a new trial were waived. Lynch v. State, 280 Ga. 887, 635 S.E.2d 140, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 587 (2006).

A murder defendant did not show ineffective assistance of counsel; trial counsel chose not to call two eyewitnesses because counsel did not consider their testimony strong enough to justify the loss of the right to conclude closing argument, which was a well recognized trial tactic at the time. Cooper v. State, 281 Ga. 760, 642 S.E.2d 817, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 245 (2007).

Because the defendant's trial counsel was not ineffective in presenting a defense and requesting jury instructions on the defendant's claim of innocence, and was authorized to forego objection to a challenged portion of the state's closing argument, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims lacked merit and did not warrant a new trial. King v. State, 282 Ga. 505, 651 S.E.2d 711, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 712 (2007).

With regard to defendant's conviction for armed robbery and other crimes, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for new trial when the court found that defendant did not carry the burden of showing ineffective assistance based on defense counsel failing to object to the introduction into evidence of the guilty plea of the gunman/co-indictee and further failed to request a limiting instruction thereon as the evidence supported the trial court's findings that those decisions were strategic and not patently unreasonable. Trial counsel testified at the motion for a new trial hearing that the guilty plea of the gunman was important to the defense strategy of placing all the blame on the gunman as well as showing the jury that defendant would serve a lengthy sentence if the jury found the defendant guilty. Sillah v. State, 291 Ga. App. 848, 663 S.E.2d 274, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 657 (2008).

Defendant did not show that trial counsel was ineffective for not requesting certain charges as these would have been inconsistent with the defendant's "mere presence" defense. Thus, the trial court properly found that this was a strategic decision made in the exercise of reasonable professional judgment. Whitley v. State, 293 Ga. App. 605, 667 S.E.2d 447, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1026 (2008).

Counsel's failure to seek severance of the defendant's trial from that of the driver of a car in which drugs were found did not constitute ineffective assistance. Trial counsel testified that counsel wanted the driver in the case so that counsel could "blame the drugs on" the driver, and this strategic decision did not constitute deficient performance. Gresham v. State, 295 Ga. App. 449, 671 S.E.2d 917, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 9 (2009).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the admission into evidence of a video statement by a witness because the defense wished the jury to view the witness's statement, and counsel did not believe that the defense would be successful in attempting to admit into evidence only certain portions of the statement; that was a matter of trial strategy and tactics, which had not been shown to be unreasonable so as to form a basis for a claim of counsel's ineffectiveness. Nations v. State, 290 Ga. 39, 717 S.E.2d 634, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 866 (2011).

Defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of trial counsel lacked merit because trial counsel's strategy and tactics, including refraining from objecting to certain hearsay statements, were reasonable and the defendant failed to overcome the strong presumption that counsel's conduct falls within the broad range of reasonable professional conduct. Green v. State, 291 Ga. 579, 731 S.E.2d 359, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 695 (2012).

Trial tactics used after consultation with client. — Activities that are properly described as trial tactics that are within the exclusive province of the lawyer after consultation with the client do not equate to ineffective assistance of counsel. Warner v. State, 155 Ga. App. 495, 271 S.E.2d 636, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2633 (1980); Scott v. State, 157 Ga. App. 608, 278 S.E.2d 49, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1931 (1981).

Trial counsel who consulted with defendant and acted pursuant to an informed strategic choice which comported with defendant's feelings about the defense was not ineffective. Van Alstine v. State, 263 Ga. 1, 426 S.E.2d 360, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 264 (1993).

Trial counsel's compliance with the client's instructions not to contact family members was reasonable because counsel feared that if counsel did not, counsel would lose the defendant's cooperation in the defense strategy. Hance v. Zant, 981 F.2d 1180, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 177 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 920, 114 S. Ct. 317, 126 L. Ed. 2d 263, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 6431 (1993).

Defense counsel did not give ineffective assistance of counsel in failing to call certain witnesses as which witnesses to call was in the exclusive province of the attorney, after consultation with the client; defense counsel conferred with defendant after counsel indicated that counsel wanted to call defendant's accomplices as witnesses and explained to defendant that defendant had the right to testify, defendant testified, and the only further mention of the witnesses was by the trial judge, who directed that the witnesses be brought to the courtroom, after which the defense rested, without calling the witnesses. Reynolds v. State, 267 Ga. App.

148, 598 S.E.2d 868, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 550 (2004).

Disagreement, in retrospect, with trial tactics. — The fact that the defendant's attorney made decisions during the trial with which the defendant and the defendant's current counsel now disagree, does not require a finding that the original representation of defendant was so inadequate as to amount to a denial of effective assistance of counsel. Harrell v. State, 139 Ga. App. 556, 228 S.E.2d 723, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1884 (1976), overruled in part, Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982).

Commission by retained counsel of acts which may retrospectively appear to be errors of judgment, if made in good faith, do not constitute a denial of effective representation. Harrell v. State, 139 Ga. App. 556, 228 S.E.2d 723, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1884 (1976), overruled in part, Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982).

Where trial counsel sufficiently investigates the facts of the case, adequately researches the law, and presents the case in a competent and reasonably effective manner and then in counsel's reasoned judgment determines that the assertion of a particular defense could prove disadvantageous to the defense, such decision is a matter of trial tactics and strategy left to the discretion of trial counsel. The fact that appellate counsel now disagrees with trial counsel's decisions and would have handled the appellant's case differently does not require a finding that trial counsel's representation of him was so inadequate as to amount to ineffective assistance of counsel. Berryhill v. Ricketts, 242 Ga. 447, 249 S.E.2d 197, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1247 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 967, 99 S. Ct. 2418, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1073 (1979).

The standard of effectiveness of counsel is not to be judged by hindsight with reference to trial tactics, even though another lawyer or other lawyers might have conducted the trial differently. Gottschalk v. State, 160 Ga. App. 769, 287 S.E.2d 107, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 1682 (1982).

Complaint as to tactics must raise question of loyalty, integrity, or competence. — Where the defendant's appellate complaint relates to tactical judgments made by trial counsel and, in the absence of a showing that the trial counsel's loyalty, integrity, or best use of counsel's ability is questioned, a new trial will not be granted on the ground that the defendant was not afforded competent representation. Bishop v. State, 155 Ga. App. 611, 271 S.E.2d 743, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2702 (1980).

Tactical decision is question of fact; reasonableness of tactic a question of law. — The question of whether a decision by counsel was a tactical one is a question of fact. However, whether a tactic was reasonable is a question of law. Horton v. Zant, 941 F.2d 1449, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 20577 (11th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 952, 112 S. Ct. 1516, 117 L. Ed. 2d 652, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 1943 (1992).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for allowing a portion of a videotaped interview showing the defendant invoking the defendant's right to counsel to be shown to the jury because the trial court gave counsel the option to withdraw counsel's objection and allow the video to be played or accept the state's offer not to play the remainder of the video; and counsel's decision that it was best that the jury hear the whole interview rather than cut it off in the middle was not unreasonable trial strategy, especially given the equivocal nature of the defendant's reference to a lawyer and the defendant's continued cooperation with police. Grant v. State, 305 Ga. 170, 824 S.E.2d 255, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 102 (2019), overruled in part, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Failure to seek redaction of video. — Even assuming that trial counsel's failure to seek the redaction of the video making reference to the defendant's probation was deficient, there was no prejudice because, in the defendant's own direct testimony, the defendant used the defendant's probation as part of the defense, explaining that the defendant's probation (and the consequence for violating the terms of probation) was a reason that the defendant would not have been involved with someone planning to commit a crime. Grant v. State, 305 Ga. 170, 824 S.E.2d 255, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 102 (2019), overruled in part, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Withdrawal of request to charge on justification. — In a malice murder trial, trial counsel, who relied on a defense of lack of malicious intent, was not ineffective for withdrawing a request to charge on justification. Self-defense was supported by only slight evidence at best, and such a defense might have risked alienating the jury; moreover, defense counsel reasonably concluded that if the defendant sought a charge on self-defense, the state would request a charge on voluntary manslaughter. Muller v. State, 284 Ga. 70, 663 S.E.2d 206, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 530 (2008).

Objection to testimony not required. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for objecting to the State's requested jury instruction that an accomplice's testimony had to be corroborated because it was consistent with an objectively reasonable defense strategy of avoiding labeling the witness, who was not charged with any crime in connection with the shooting, as an accomplice, which would have undermined defendant's claim that he was surprised to encounter the victim that night. Rayton v. State, 314 Ga. 29, 875 S.E.2d 708, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 170 (2022).

Failure to request certain instructions. — Although the defendant's counsel failed to secure a transcript of the defendant's daughter's juvenile court proceeding, wherein the daughter claimed sole responsibility for having shoplifted various items from a store, it was not shown that such a transcript or a jury charge on the daughter's prior consistent statements would have caused the jury to reject the testimony of the store's asset protection agent that he observed the defendant tear packaging off items of merchandise in her shoplifting trial; accordingly, there was no ineffective assistance of the defendant's counsel in violation of the Sixth Amendment and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV, and the failure of the trial court to have given the jury prior consistent statement jury instructions under O.C.G.A. § 5-5-24(b) was not harmful error. Tucker v. State, 282 Ga. App. 807, 640 S.E.2d 310, 2006

Ga. App. LEXIS 1421 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0617, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 272 (Ga. Mar. 26, 2007).

Because the trial court thoroughly instructed the jury that it was the arbiter of each witness's credibility and that it should give consideration to each witness's interest or lack thereof in the outcome of the case, no other instructions were necessary, as this charge adequately covered the possible motive, interest, or bias of a state witness; thus, counsel was under no obligation to request an additional instruction regarding motive, interest, or bias. Lee v. State, 281 Ga. 776, 642 S.E.2d 835, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 256 (2007).

Defendant's contention on appeal that defense counsel was ineffective for failing to timely request a charge on bare suspicion or to object to the trial court's refusal to give the charge once requested failed because defendant was not entitled to such a charge. Additionally, the charges that the trial court gave on presumption of innocence and reasonable doubt embodied all the elements of a bare suspicion charge, rendering such a charge unnecessary. Range v. State, 289 Ga. App. 727, 658 S.E.2d 245, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 184 (2008).

Evidence was insufficient to establish a reasonable probability that the jury would have found defendant guilty of voluntary manslaughter and thus trial counsel was not ineffective in requesting this instruction since the evidence demonstrated that the victim and defendant were in rival gangs; that the victim and others drove into an apartment complex to pick up a friend; that an occupant in the victim's vehicle poked a gun out of a window; and that defendant and the defendant's codefendant shot at the vehicle, killing the victim and wounding others. Hung v. State, 284 Ga. 796, 671 S.E.2d 811, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 21 (2009).

Trial court did not err by denying a defendant's motion for a new trial based on the defendant's contention that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel regarding convictions for aggravated sexual battery and child molestation involving the defendant's eight-year-old child, since despite trial counsel acknowledging that trial counsel failed to move for a mistrial or request a curative instruction after the state questioned the defendant about a prior act of sodomy on a 14-year-old, trial counsel's objection to the evidence was sustained. Thus, the jury heard no evidence concerning the circumstances giving rise to the sodomy charge and, further, heard no evidence refuting or contradicting the defendant's testimony that the defendant was acquitted of that charge. Dyer v. State, 295 Ga. App. 495, 672 S.E.2d 462, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 22 (2009).

Prior inconsistent statement of a witness who took the stand and who was subject to cross-examination was admissible as substantive evidence. Thus, because the defendant, who testified at trial, was not entitled to a limiting instruction as to the use of the defendant's prior inconsistent statements, counsel was not ineffective for failing to request the instruction; likewise, the defendant's claim that counsel was ineffective for failing to object to the state's closing argument telling the jurors that the jurors could consider this testimony as substantive evidence also failed. Gregory v. State, 297 Ga. App. 245, 676 S.E.2d 856, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 413 (2009).

There was no ineffectiveness of the defendant's counsel for failing to request a jury charge on entrapment with respect to a charge of making false statements as there was no evidence that a state agent originated the idea for making a false statement. Harvill v. State, 296 Ga. App. 453, 674 S.E.2d 659, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 237 (2009).

As the defendant was not convicted of the charged offense of aggravated stalking, there was no ineffectiveness by counsel's failure to seek a directed verdict on that charge due to lack of evidence because the defendant could not show any harm therefrom; further, the trial court was authorized to charge the jury on the lesser-included offense of stalking, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-90(a)(1), based on the trial court's discretion. Harvill v. State, 296 Ga. App. 453, 674 S.E.2d 659, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 237 (2009).

In a defendant's criminal prosecution for, inter alia, felony murder, defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a jury charge on a witness testifying pursuant to a grant of immunity because the witness at issue was never charged, arrested, or prosecuted as to the events forming the basis of the instant case. Watkins v. State, 285 Ga. 107, 674 S.E.2d 275, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 138 (2009), cert. denied, 558 U.S. 1121, 130 S. Ct. 1070, 175 L. Ed. 2d 900, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 323 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective by failing to request a limiting instruction regarding the jury's consideration of evidence of the defendant's prior felony convictions because assuming deficient performance in the failure to request a limiting instruction, the defendant did not establish prejudice therefrom; the defendant failed to show that the outcome of defendant's trial would have been different had the jury been told the jury was to consider the prior convictions only for the purposes of establishing the predicate offenses of the counts in which the convictions were described. Higginbotham v. State, 287 Ga. 187, 695 S.E.2d 210, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 405 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a jury charge on immunity granted to a witness because the transcript revealed that the witness was questioned regarding the grant of immunity and was thoroughly cross-examined regarding the witness's motives for testifying; that questioning and the general jury instructions on witness credibility that were given were sufficient to apprise the jury of any negative inferences the jury could draw from the immunity arrangement involving this witness. Dockery v. State, 287 Ga. 275, 695 S.E.2d 599, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 472 (2010).

Trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object to the prosecutor's characterization of the defendant as a "thug" during closing argument because the prosecution was afforded wide latitude in closing argument, and the characterization was based on reasonable inferences drawn from the evidence. Dockery v. State, 287 Ga. 275, 695 S.E.2d 599, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 472 (2010).

Defendant failed to show that his trial counsel was ineffective for failing to request an accomplice-corroboration charge because he failed to show that slight evidence supported an inference that defendant and the other man were accomplices to the charge of possession of marijuana with the intent to distribute. Reese v. State, 317 Ga. 189, 891 S.E.2d 835, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 173 (2023).

Defendant failed to show that his trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object to an allegedly improper sequential jury instruction because he did not show under existing precedent that the instruction was clearly improper, as the trial court did not expressly prohibit the jury from considering the lesser included offenses until after it reached a unanimous verdict on the indicted offenses. Reese v. State, 317 Ga. 189, 891 S.E.2d 835, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 173 (2023).

Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to request a jury instruction on justification because counsel's choice to rely solely on the defense of accident was not patently unreasonable, given that defendant repeatedly stated that her foster child's death was an accident caused by poor performance of the Heimlich maneuver and CPR during a choking incident, and the statements were supported by a doctor's testimony. Rosenbaum v. State, 320 Ga. 5, 907 S.E.2d 593, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 229 (2024).

Failure to request instruction on involuntary intoxication. — Trial counsel's failure to request a jury instruction on involuntary intoxication did not amount to ineffective assistance in violation of the Sixth Amendment because there was no persuasive evidence on that point; to the contrary, the evidence tended to show that the defendant was much more sober than the victim. Hills v. State, 306 Ga. 800, 833 S.E.2d 515, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 631 (2019).

Trial strategy on jury instructions. — Because trial counsel's failure to request an adequate charge on the limits to consideration of the defendant's prior conviction for felony firearms possession did not raise a reasonable probability that but for counsel's deficient performance, the outcome of the trial would have been different, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim failed. Holsey v. State, 281 Ga. 177, 637 S.E.2d 32, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 891 (2006).

Defendant's claim that trial counsel offered ineffective assistance for not objecting to the trial court's failure to recharge the jury after the jury requested written definitions of the charges lacked merit because the decision was based on counsel's strategic decision that such a request only made the jury more inclined to convict the defendant rather than acquit the defendant. Lake v. State, 293 Ga. 56, 743 S.E.2d 414, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 447 (2013).

Failure to request jury charge on proximate causation. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a jury charge on proximate causation as the jury charge was sufficient to inform the jury that, in order to convict the defendant of felony murder, the jury had to determine that the defendant caused or was a party with the codefendant in causing the victim's death during the escape phase of the underlying felonies. Pennie v. State, 292 Ga. 249, 736 S.E.2d 433, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 25 (2013).

Failure to request lesser-included offense instruction. — In a murder prosecution, the appeals court rejected the defendant's claims that trial counsel was ineffective in failing to pursue a battered woman syndrome defense and by failing to request a jury instruction on the lesser offense of voluntary manslaughter, as: (1) the evidence showed that the defendant, after consultation with counsel, instead chose to focus exclusively on the defense of justification; (2) the evidence did not support a voluntary manslaughter charge; and (3) the defendant did not want the trial court to charge on manslaughter. Moreover, because appellate counsel did not ask trial counsel about the decision not to seek the manslaughter instruction, that decision was presumed to be a strategic. Ballard v. State, 281 Ga. 232, 637 S.E.2d 401, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 935 (2006).

Defendant failed to establish that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel because trial counsel erroneously acceded to a simple assault charge and failed to request a jury charge on battery because the jury's finding of guilt on aggravated assault necessarily required a finding that defendant used defendant's hands in a way that did or was likely to result in serious bodily injury, which required the jury to reject the opportunity to find mere violent injury, which would have been the basis for a simple assault. Accordingly, the trial court was authorized to find that defendant failed to meet the burden to show that defendant's defense was so prejudiced that there was a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different. Armstrong v. State, 292 Ga. App. 145, 664 S.E.2d 242, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 715 (2008).

Because trial counsel made a reasonable decision to pursue an all-or-nothing defense strategy based on counsel's review of the evidence, the appellate court found no merit in the defendant's claim that trial counsel provided ineffective assistance due to counsel's failure to request a charge on misdemeanor obstruction as a lesser included offense of felony obstruction of an officer. Ingram v. State, 317 Ga. App. 606, 732 S.E.2d 456, 2012 Ga. App. LEXIS 773 (2012).

Failure to object to pre-trial instruction. — Trial court did not err in finding that trial counsel were not deficient in failing to object to a pre-trial instruction that was given to the jury pool because the pre-trial instruction was proper, and trial counsel found it advantageous; the pre-trial charge, as a whole, did not shift the burden of proof to the defendant, and one of the defendant's trial counsel testified that counsel believed that the defendant actually benefitted from the instruction because it sounded as if it were in defendant's favor and that the giving of the instruction aided the defendant in effectively questioning the jurors regarding their viewpoints on the law during voir dire. Bridges v. State, 286 Ga. 535, 690 S.E.2d 136, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 87 (2010).

Failure to argue rule of completeness. — Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective by not arguing the rule of completeness, former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-38 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-822), as a means to get the defendant's entire post-stabbing statement into evidence because there were discrepancies between the defendant's trial testimony and the account of a witness regarding a statement the defendant allegedly made on the night of the stabbing; therefore, an acquittal would not likely have resulted had the jury heard the witness's testimony in its entirety. Carruth v. State, 290 Ga. 342, 721 S.E.2d 80, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 24 (2012).

Withdrawing by counsel on instruction on self defense or accident. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for withdrawing jury instructions on the defenses of accident and self-defense because no evidence was elicited at trial that would support a defense of accident or self-defense. Jones v. State, 287 Ga. 770, 700 S.E.2d 350, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 600 (2010).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claims are usually not considered on direct appeal because a district court normally has not had the opportunity to conduct an evidentiary hearing or to render findings of fact. United States v. Badolato, 701 F.2d 915, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 29181 (11th Cir. 1983).

Where the issue of ineffectiveness of counsel is raised for the first time on appeal, the case must be remanded to the trial court for an evidentiary hearing on the claim. Holt v. State, 205 Ga. App. 40, 421 S.E.2d 131, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1065 (1992); Turner v. State, 210 Ga. App. 328, 436 S.E.2d 66, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1152 (1993).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claim may be raised for the first time in the direct appeal if the direct appeal marks the first appearance of new counsel but, where new counsel amends a motion for new trial without raising the issue of ineffective assistance so that it may be heard in the trial court, the issue is waived. Holt v. State, 205 Ga. App. 40, 421 S.E.2d 131, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1065 (1992).

Applicability of “reasonably effective assistance” standard. — The “reasonably effective assistance” standard is applicable to the pretrial as well as the trial phase. House v. Balkcom, 562 F. Supp. 1111, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17753 (N.D. Ga. 1983), rev'd, 725 F.2d 608, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25536 (11th Cir. 1984).

Standard inappropriate in civil suit seeking prospective relief. — The “ineffective assistance of counsel” standard as set forth in Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 104 S. Ct. 2052, 80 L. Ed. 2d 674 (1984) is inappropriate for a civil suit seeking prospective relief, where the plaintiff's burden is to show “the likelihood of substantial and immediate irreparable injury, and the inadequacy of remedies at law.” Luckey v. Harris, 860 F.2d 1012, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 15659 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 957, 110 S. Ct. 2562, 109 L. Ed. 2d 744, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 2766 (1990).

Question of ineffectiveness of counsel divides itself into two parts: First the defendant must show that counsel's performance was deficient. This requires showing that counsel made errors so serious that counsel was not functioning as the counsel guaranteed the defendant by U.S. Const., amend. 6. Second, the defendant must show that the deficient performance prejudiced the defense. This requires showing that counsel's errors were so serious as to deprive the defendant of a fair trial, a trial whose result is reliable. Kornegay v. State, 174 Ga. App. 279, 329 S.E.2d 601, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2705 (1985).

There are two components to the claim of ineffective assistance of counsel: Deficient performance and prejudice resulting from such deficient performance; neither exists in the instant case. Manus v. State, 180 Ga. App. 658, 350 S.E.2d 41, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2765 (1986).

To establish ineffective assistance of counsel the defendant must show both that counsel's performance was deficient and that this deficiency prejudiced the defense. Brock v. State, 183 Ga. App. 277, 358 S.E.2d 613, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2694 (1987); Gross v. State, 262 Ga. 232, 416 S.E.2d 284, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 515 (1992); Taylor v. State, 203 Ga. App. 210, 416 S.E.2d 554, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 470 (1992).

In order to prevail on an ineffective-assistance claim, a convicted defendant must show: (1) that counsel's performance was deficient, i.e., that counsel's performance was not reasonable under all the circumstances; and (2) that this deficient performance prejudiced the defense, i.e., that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different. Johnson v. State, 199 Ga. App. 67, 404 S.E.2d 139, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 360 (1991), cert. denied, No. S91C0925, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 697 (Ga. May 15, 1991).

Joint representation not ineffective. — The burden is on the defendant claiming ineffectiveness of counsel to establish (1) the attorney's representation in specified instances fell below an objective standard of reasonableness and (2) there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different. Day v. State, 203 Ga. App. 186, 416 S.E.2d 548, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 465 (1992).

Trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel under the Sixth Amendment where: (1) trial counsel jointly represented defendants, a husband and a wife; (2) the trial court questioned defendants about the joint representation and they testified that they understood the potential problems with joint representation; (3) any error was induced by defendants; (4) there was no evidence that defendant husband would have been offered a better deal if he had testified against defendant wife; and (5) defendant wife's argument that trial counsel was unable to argue that the methamphetamine in the safe belonged to defendant husband completely ignored defendant wife's testimony that she put the methamphetamine in the safe and that her husband was lying to protect her, and the notes about the various drug sales. Christopher v. State, 262 Ga. App. 257, 585 S.E.2d 107, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 761 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1545, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 927 (Ga. Oct. 20, 2003).

Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel based on trial counsel's representation of both defendant and his brother because there was no actual conflict of interests, as they refused to incriminate each other, would not testify against each other, and their defenses could be presented in a way that was not antagonistic: the brother was drunk and asleep in the back seat when defendant, the driver, was unwittingly made a participant in the shooting when the shooter fired at the victim as defendant passed the victim's car. Adams v. State, 318 Ga. 105, 897 S.E.2d 396, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 8 (2024).

Trial counsel's joint representation of both defendant and her husband did not give rise to a conflict of interest because any potential conflict of interest was waivable, the evidence showed that defendant waived her right to conflict-free counsel, and her waiver was knowing, voluntary, and intelligent. Defendant had received more than two years of legal training, she executed a written waiver, and each co-defendant had consulted with independent counsel. Rosenbaum v. State, 320 Ga. 5, 907 S.E.2d 593, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 229 (2024).

Standard for determining effectiveness of counsel applies equally to both appointed and retained counsel. Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982).

Test for relief from conviction on grounds of inadequate counsel. — It is the general rule that relief from a final conviction on the ground of incompetent or ineffective counsel under U.S. Const., amend. 6 will be granted only when the trial is a farce, or a mockery of justice, or is shocking to the conscience of the reviewing court, or the purported representation is only perfunctory, in bad faith, a sham, a pretense, or without adequate opportunity for a conference and preparation. Lawyers are not required to be infallible. The ability and faithfulness of an attorney is not to be judged by whether the attorney won or lost the verdict. Mitchell v. Smith, 229 Ga. 781, 194 S.E.2d 414, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 773 (1972); Bonaparte v. Smith, 362 F. Supp. 1315, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14966 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 484 F.2d 956, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 7872 (5th Cir. 1973); Sewell v.

State, 130 Ga. App. 740, 204 S.E.2d 524, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1246 (1974); Beavers v. State, 132 Ga. App. 94, 207 S.E.2d 550, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1610 (1974).

The benchmark for judging any claim of ineffectiveness must be whether counsel's conduct so undermined the proper functioning of the adversarial process that the trial cannot be relied on as having produced a just result. Jones v. State, 177 Ga. App. 531, 339 S.E.2d 786, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2421 (1986).

Right to the effective assistance of counsel is the right of the accused to require the prosecution's case to survive the crucible of meaningful adversarial testing, and when a true adversarial criminal trial has been conducted — even if defense counsel may have made demonstrable errors — the kind of testing envisioned by the Sixth Amendment has occurred, but if the process loses its character as a confrontation between adversaries, the constitutional guarantee is violated. Heath v. State, 268 Ga. App. 235, 601 S.E.2d 758, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 893 (2004).

Test with regard to guilty plea. — To show ineffective assistance of counsel, a defendant who pleads guilty must show that defendant's counsel erred and that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's errors, the defendant would not have pled guilty and would have insisted on going to trial. Johnson v. State, 260 Ga. App. 897, 581 S.E.2d 407, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 520 (2003).

In a case in which defendant sought to withdraw defendant's guilty plea after sentencing based on, inter alia, defense counsel's ineffectiveness in allegedly giving defendant confusing advice about the sentence and in allegedly failing to inform defendant that defendant had the opportunity to withdraw defendant's guilty plea prior to sentencing, the trial court did not clearly err in finding that the evidence of ineffective assistance of counsel was insufficient to justify allowing defendant to withdraw defendant's guilty plea, as the record clearly showed that defendant was well aware of the trial court's intention to sentence defendant to 20 years in prison and that defense counsel had informed defendant that defendant could withdraw defendant's guilty plea prior to sentencing if defendant did not want to accept the intended sentence. Johnson v. State, 260 Ga. App. 897, 581 S.E.2d 407, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 520 (2003).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that defendant's trial counsel was not ineffective at defendant's plea hearing and in denying defendant's plea withdrawal motion. There was not a reasonable probability that, but for the attorney's failure to challenge a Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 33.9 violation, the result of the guilty plea hearing would have been different, because a sufficient factual basis existed from the testimony at the plea hearing and a prior bond hearing to support the plea. Bielen v. State, 265 Ga. App. 865, 595 S.E.2d 543, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 196 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1103, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 510 (Ga. June 7, 2004).

Defendant's motion to withdraw the guilty pleas because the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel at a guilty plea hearing since defense counsel misinformed the defendant regarding the amount of time the defendant would serve in prison was properly rejected by the trial court because: (1) the counsel correctly informed the defendant that the defendant would not be eligible for parole consideration for at least 20 years and the counsel denied telling the defendant that the defendant would serve no more than 20 years; (2) the trial court clearly explained the defendant's sentence to the defendant at the plea hearing, including the fact that the defendant would not be eligible to be considered for parole for at least 20 years and that because of the violent nature of the defendant's crimes the defendant likely would spend the rest of the defendant's life in prison; and (3) the trial court emphasized to the defendant that neither the defendant's counsel nor the district attorney could make any certification to the defendant concerning the defendant's eligibility for parole; even assuming the counsel provided erroneous advice about the time the defendant would serve in prison, the defendant was informed of the correct sentence prior to the entry of the defendant's plea and the defendant could not show prejudice. Rios

v. State, 281 Ga. 181, 637 S.E.2d 20, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 890 (2006).

Defendant failed to establish that the defendant received ineffective assistance in defense counsel's advice to plead guilty because the defendant's trial counsel testified that after the conviction in a first trial, it was counsel's best professional recommendation that the defendant plead guilty in the second case, as the second case was a lot worse than the first and that, if the defendant went to trial in the second case, the defendant was potentially facing a much longer sentence, but as a consequence of the plea, the defendant's maximum aggregate sentence in both cases was 15 years, with 13 to serve; moreover, the defendant's testimony demonstrated that the defendant understood that by pleading guilty, the defendant would not have to serve a longer sentence. Hollman v. State, 280 Ga. App. 53, 633 S.E.2d 395, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 746 (2006).

Trial court did not err by denying a defendant's motion to withdraw the defendant's guilty plea due to ineffective assistance of the counsel representing the defendant at the plea hearing as: (1) the counsel met with the defendant several times prior to the plea hearing, reviewed the district attorney's file, and discussed with the defendant the evidence the state intended to present against the defendant; (2) the counsel moved to suppress the defendant's statements to the police and discussed the options available with the defendant after the motion was denied, including the state's offer of a plea recommendation; and (3) the defendant failed to show how additional communication with the counsel would have changed the defendant's decision to enter a guilty plea. Rios v. State, 281 Ga. 181, 637 S.E.2d 20, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 890 (2006).

Defendant failed to show that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel with regard to being coerced or deceived by counsel as to length of sentence that could be imposed, and trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion to withdraw guilty plea entered into, because record did not support defendant's claim that counsel deceived him about the length of the sentence as defendant was advised of the maximum possible sentence and was told that there was no guarantee as to length of sentence that would be imposed. Brantley v. State, 290 Ga. App. 764, 660 S.E.2d 846, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 409 (2008).

It was error to deny an inmate's habeas petition when the only evidence of record, the inmate's affidavit, indicated that counsel gave erroneous advice that adversely affected the decision of the inmate, who entered into a negotiated plea, not to go to trial. Without a finding that counsel gave proper advice or that the inmate lacked credibility, the evidence did not support the conclusion that counsel was not deficient. Garrett v. State, 284 Ga. 31, 663 S.E.2d 153, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 534 (2008).

With regard to defendant's conviction for pimping, defendant failed to establish that defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel as a result of defense counsel allegedly failing to advise defendant as to the consequences of a guilty plea as defendant failed to show how further consultation with defense counsel would have impacted the decision to enter a guilty plea and defendant failed to show how, but for counsel's performance, defendant would not have pled guilty and proceeded to trial. Burroughs v. State, 292 Ga. App. 580, 665 S.E.2d 4, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 677 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1930, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 930 (Ga. Oct. 27, 2008).

Where a defendant contends that the defendant went to trial instead of pleading guilty because of counsel's deficient representation, the defendant is entitled to relief if there is at least an inference from the evidence that the defendant would have accepted a plea. However, simply because such an inference can be drawn even where the evidence is disputed or unclear on this question does not mean that a trial court is required to do so in cases where the evidence is disputed. Cleveland v. State, 285 Ga. 142, 674 S.E.2d 289, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 72 (2009).

Defendant failed to show that the defendant's plea counsel was ineffective for affirming the trial court's incorrect statement of the law as to the minimum sentence applicable to the defendant's child molestation plea because the defendant failed to show that the defendant would have pled not guilty and gone to trial had the defendant known the true minimum was five years, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4. Roseborough v. State, 311 Ga. App. 456, 716 S.E.2d 530, 2011 Ga. App. LEXIS 755 (2011).

Defendant's allegations of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because the court credited trial counsel's testimony that trial counsel fully explained the evidence and the strength of the state's case to the defendant, conveyed all plea bargain offers from the state to the defendant, and the defendant rejected those offers. Butler v. State, 319 Ga. App. 350, 734 S.E.2d 567, 2012 Ga. App. LEXIS 985 (2012).

Counsel's ineffectiveness in dealing with defendant's competency issues.

— Habeas court's order denying the petitioner's claim that the petitioner was entitled to a new sentencing trial was reversed and the petitioner's death sentence was vacated because trial counsel performed deficiently by failing to sufficiently develop mitigating evidence from non-experts, and there was a reasonable probability that the jury would have reached a different outcome in the sentencing phase of the petitioner's trial if the additional evidence habeas counsel obtained had been presented at trial; trial counsel failed to fully investigate whether the petitioner had suffered one or more brain injuries prior to the petitioner's crimes, unduly limiting counsel's interviews of the petitioner's family and friends to an unreasonably narrow range of persons, and there was additional evidence from non-experts concerning the petitioner's traumatic childhood and the petitioner's change in behavior and apparent mental distress following two head injuries. Perkins v. Hall, 288 Ga. 810, 708 S.E.2d 335, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 255 (2011), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Standard in capital cases. — A defendant is entitled to an attorney likely to render and, in fact, rendering reasonably effective assistance, whether that attorney be retained or court-appointed. This standard is to be applied with particular care in capital cases. Blake v. Zant, 513 F. Supp. 772, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13559 (S.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 984 F.2d 1129, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 2267 (11th Cir. 1993).

In context of challenge to guilty plea, in order to satisfy the "prejudice" requirement, the defendant must show that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's errors, the defendant would not have pleaded guilty and would have insisted on going to trial. Tahamtani v. Lankford, 846 F.2d 712, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 7702 (11th Cir. 1988) (standard not met).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in disregarding defendant's testimony that defendant's appointed attorney misled defendant and in refusing to allow defendant to withdraw defendant's plea because: (1) defendant's counsel was not ineffective because: (a) counsel stated that defendant determined that the plea and the resulting sentence to be served concurrently with what defendant already had was better than going to trial; (b) counsel expressly stated that counsel made no threats or promises to induce the client's plea; and (c) counsel testified that before completing the plea, the attorney continuously advised defendant of the status of the witnesses against the counsel; (2) defendant's plea was voluntary and knowingly entered because defendant understood the charges, the sentence, and plea consequences; and (3) there was a factual basis for the plea. Hill v. State, 267 Ga. App. 357, 599 S.E.2d 307, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 634 (2004).

Defendant could not argue that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel because of defense counsel's failure to object to a breach of the terms of the plea agreement by the state, as the record showed that the state did not breach the plea agreement; accordingly, defense counsel was not required to raise a meritless objection concerning the terms of the agreement. Pitts v. State, 265 Ga. App. 633, 595 S.E.2d 322, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 144 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1017, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 434 (Ga. May 24, 2004), overruled in part, Collier v. State, 307 Ga. 363, 834 S.E.2d 769, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 708 (2019).

Prejudice component of a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel in cases involving withdrawal of guilty pleas may be satisfied by showing that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's errors, the defendant would not have pleaded guilty and would have insisted on going to trial. Heath v. State, 268 Ga. App. 235, 601 S.E.2d 758, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 893 (2004).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion to withdraw the defendant's guilty plea based on ineffective assistance under the Sixth Amendment. The record showed that trial counsel, who obtained discovery materials, investigated the case, spoke to the victim and other eyewitnesses, and met with the defendant, was adequately prepared to try the case; moreover, the defendant did not show that additional trial preparation would likely have changed reasonable counsel's advice regarding the guilty plea or the outcome of a trial. Hammett v. State, 297 Ga. App. 235, 676 S.E.2d 880, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 404 (2009).

Defendant, who sought to withdraw an Alford plea, did not show that the defendant misunderstood the state's recommendation concerning credit for time served or that counsel failed to listen to the defendant, much less that the defendant would have insisted on going to trial had the defendant been counseled properly. Thus, the defendant failed to prove that plea counsel was ineffective on this ground. Skinner v. State, 297 Ga. App. 828, 678 S.E.2d 526, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 547 (2009).

Trial court properly denied a defendant's motion to withdraw a guilty plea to voluntary manslaughter. Pretermitted whether counsel's performance was deficient, the defendant failed to establish a reasonable probability that the defendant would have insisted on a trial if the defendant had always known the defendant could be sentenced to serve 15 years instead of ten years; furthermore, the defendant would have been tried for felony murder had the defendant gone to trial. Johnson v. State, 298 Ga. App. 197, 679 S.E.2d 763, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 634 (2009).

Defendant failed to show deficient performance on the part of defense counsel as defense counsel testified defense counsel correctly advised the defendant that the defendant would not be eligible for parole until the defendant served 30 years of the life sentence and did not tell the defendant that the defendant could withdraw the plea at any time, testimony which the trial court credited. Arnold v. State, 292 Ga. 95, 734 S.E.2d 382, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 961 (2012).

Plea deals. — Because the defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to properly advise the defendant regarding a plea offer, and counsel was not required make meritless objections to the admission of testimony and evidence, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim failed. Hunter v. State, 281 Ga. 526, 640 S.E.2d 271, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 44 (2007).

Defendant failed to establish that defendant received ineffective assistance of trial counsel with regard to defendant's drug-related convictions as, although defendant successfully met the burden of showing that defense counsel's representation fell below an objective standard of reasonableness due to defense counsel failing to advise defendant about all of the evidence in the state's case against defendant due to defense counsel failing to examine the state's open file, defendant failed to establish but for defense counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different, namely that defendant would not have accepted the state's plea offer. Cleveland v. State, 290 Ga. App. 835, 660 S.E.2d 777, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 325 (2008), aff'd, 285 Ga. 142, 674 S.E.2d 289, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 72 (2009).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion to withdraw defendant's guilty plea to possession of cocaine and possession of tools for the commission of a crime charges as defendant failed to show that the plea was not knowingly, intelligently, and voluntarily entered as the colloquy of the trial court indicated that defendant was properly questioned and that defendant's responses established that the plea and circumstances were understood and that defendant was satisfied with trial counsel. Further, the defendant failed to establish that defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel based on trial counsel purportedly not explaining that the state was incapable of meeting its burden on a trafficking charge, causing defendant to believe that the reduced charges were a part of a negotiated plea agreement, as defendant testified that defendant informed trial counsel that defendant would take a plea if the trafficking offense was reduced. Franklin v. State, 291 Ga. App. 267, 661 S.E.2d 870, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 456 (2008).

Habeas corpus petitioner failed to prove that trial counsel's performance was professionally deficient because trial counsel did not fail in the duty to offer the petitioner informed advice regarding the state's plea agreement offer; the petitioner admitted that the petitioner never told trial counsel that the petitioner wished to plead guilty, and trial counsel did not act in an unreasonable or professionally deficient manner in concluding that the petitioner had decided to let the petitioner's father speak for the petitioner and wished to reject the state's offer. Cammer v. Walker, 290 Ga. 251, 719 S.E.2d 437, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 938 (2011).

Standard for judging counsel's effectiveness in petty offense cases. — Even while extending the right of counsel to indigents for petty offenses, the United States Supreme Court has obliquely acknowledged that the enormous volume of minor cases will continue to result in hurried and inadequate prosecution, defense, and determination. The Georgia Court of Appeals cannot presume to set standards of representation in these circumstances but must accept adequacy prima facie in the absence of a showing either that counsel's loyalty or integrity were in question, or that the trial was a farce or mockery of justice. Campbell v. State, 128 Ga. App. 74, 195 S.E.2d 664, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1395 (1973).

Test is not whether ablest or most skillful attorneys were appointed. — The question of whether the accused has been deprived of the aid and benefit of counsel depends not on whether the ablest or most skillful attorneys were appointed for the accused, but on whether the attorneys actually appointed were so ignorant, inexperienced, or grossly lacking in appreciation of their responsibility as to amount to virtually no representation upon the trial. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 193 Ga. 661, 19 S.E.2d 499, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 449, cert. denied, 317 U.S. 626, 63 S. Ct. 36, 87 L. Ed. 506, 1942 U.S. LEXIS 274 (1942).

Test of representation is whether defendant was denied effective assistance of counsel, which means representation so lacking in competence that it becomes the duty of the court or the district attorney to observe it and correct it. Mitchell v. Smith, 229 Ga. 781, 194 S.E.2d 414, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 773 (1972).

Mere subjective lack of confidence in the attorney by a defendant is not sufficient to render the assistance provided by counsel ineffective under U.S. Const., amend. 6. *United States v. Attorneys are officers of the court and are presumed to do as the law and their duty require them. — When an attorney is appointed by the court to defend a person accused of crime who is unable to employ counsel, it is to be presumed that the attorney will discharge the attorney's full duty in the premises. *Wilcoxon v. Broad discretion must be granted trial courts on matters of continuances, and only unreasoning and arbitrary insistence upon expeditiousness in the face of justifiable request for delay would violate the right to assistance of counsel. *Bennett v. Testimony of defendants and their trial counsel. — When the issue of whether defendants were denied effective assistance of counsel has been raised in a motion for new trial, defendants' trial counsel, who was a different attorney than their appellate counsel, should be allowed to testify as to attorney's conduct of the trial, and defendants should also be allowed to testify and/or present evidence on this issue. Martin v. State, 185 Ga. App. 145, 363 S.E.2d 765, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2853 (1987).

When a trial counsel is unavailable for a hearing on a claim of ineffective counsel, the trial court shall decide the issue on the record of the case proceedings and other available evidence. Bowman v. State, 222 Ga. App. 893, 476 S.E.2d 608, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 937 (1996), cert. denied, No. S97C0171, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 262 (Ga. Jan. 31, 1997).

Failure of appellate counsel to challenge state's use of peremptory challenges. — Appellate counsel was ineffective in failing to ask the state supreme court to set aside the petitioner's conviction on the ground that petitioner was denied right to equal protection where the state used nine out of ten peremptory challenges to exclude blacks from the jury in the petitioner's trial for malice murder and it was clear that such a claim would have succeeded on appeal. Eagle v. Linahan, 268 F.3d 1306, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 21767 (11th Cir.), sub. op., 279 F.3d 926, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 29395 (11th Cir. 2001).

Failure to file notice of appeal. —

Trial court erred in summarily denying the defendant's pro se motion for an out-of-time appeal without holding a hearing because, with respect to the defendant's claim that the defendant's right to appeal was frustrated by the ineffectiveness of the defendant's motion-to-withdraw counsel, the appellate court could not determine whether the defendant's counsel performed deficiently in failing to file a notice of appeal as the trial court failed to hold an evidentiary hearing on the issue; on remand, the defendant had to show that there was a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's deficient failure to consult with the defendant about an appeal, the defendant would have timely appealed. Blackwell v. State, 306 Ga. 577, 832 S.E.2d 352, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 512 (2019).

Remand of claim. — A defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel may be remanded for further consideration even though the claim is not raised in a motion for a new trial where the instant case is not pending in a trial court subsequent to the Georgia supreme court's decision in Thompson v. State, 255 Ga. 654, 341 S.E.2d 5 (1986) which prevents a remand of an ineffective assistance of counsel claim which is raised for the first time on appeal. Foote v. State, 184 Ga. App. 900, 363 S.E.2d 180, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2840 (1987).

Where a defendant is represented on appeal by counsel other than trial counsel, and no motion for a new trial was filed, the case may be remanded for a hearing and appropriate findings concerning a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel. Thompson v. State, 186 Ga. App. 471, 367 S.E.2d 320, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 332 (1988); Brady v. State, 207 Ga. App. 451, 428 S.E.2d 373, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 215 (1993).

Where the failure of trial counsel to object to the alleged improper closing argument of counsel for the state is urged in support of the appellant's enumeration of error, which raises the ineffective-assistance-of-counsel claim, but the appellant is represented on appeal by different counsel than at trial, the case will be remanded to the trial court for a hearing and appropriate findings concerning the issue of ineffective assistance of counsel. Green v. State, 187 Ga. App. 373, 370 S.E.2d 348, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 675 (1988).

Defendant's claim of ineffective assistance was correctly denied, where on remand to the trial court for a hearing on the effectiveness of trial counsel, defendant merely reasserted deficiencies in trial counsel's performance, but did not attempt to establish that those claimed deficiencies prejudiced the defense. Murray v. State, 262 Ga. 435, 420 S.E.2d 752, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 783 (1992).

The lack of any hearing before the trial court concerning counsel's effectiveness required remand of case for an evidentiary hearing on the asserted claims of ineffective assistance of counsel. *Wright v. Trial court committed reversible error when it did not address a defendant's claim that defense counsel failed to support post-conviction remedies, deliberately foregoing a direct appeal for four years without the defendant's consent, because that ground was closely connected to the defendant's repeated effort to obtain appellate counsel and as such, a hearing was required; moreover, the defendant was entitled to rely on the fact that a hearing on the motion was scheduled, and as a result, no action was taken to waive or abandon a right to a hearing. *Jones v. show that a jury challenge claim would have been meritorious. Burden v. Zant, 690 F. Supp. 1040, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6921 (M.D. Ga. 1988), aff'd, 903 F.2d 1352, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 8719 (11th Cir. 1990), aff'd, 975 F.2d 771, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 24856 (11th Cir. 1992), rev'd, 24 F.3d 1298, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 14952 (11th Cir. 1994).

A defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel as: (1) a hearsay objection to statements the defendant made during an argument and to testimony that the defendant stated that the defendant should have killed the other witnesses would have been futile as the statements were not offered for the truth of the matter asserted; (2) a hearsay objection to a witness's testimony as to the defendant's statements during a van ride would also have been futile as the statements were admissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-3; and (3) counsel's strategic decision to attack certain testimony through cross-examination was not ineffective assistance of counsel. Johnson v. State, 281 Ga. 229, 637 S.E.2d 393, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 928 (2006).

Inexperience does not constitute ineffectiveness per se: a defendant who relies on allegations of counsel's inexperience in support of an ineffective-assistance-of-counsel claim must still make the two-part showing of deficient performance and prejudice. Burden v. Zant, 903 F.2d 1352, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 8719 (11th Cir. 1990), rev'd in part, 498 U.S. 433, 111 S. Ct. 862, 112 L. Ed. 2d 962, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 664 (1991).

Claim that trial counsel was ineffective due to inexperience failed, as during the three years counsel practice law, counsel's practice was almost exclusively criminal defense, counsel had tried 16 cases, and co-counsel had been practicing law for approximately 18 years at the time of trial and had handled about 10 criminal jury trial. Simmons v. State, 291 Ga. 705, 733 S.E.2d 280, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 775 (2012).

Attorney's performance need not be ideal in every strategic or substantive particular. Blake v. Zant, 513 F. Supp. 772, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13559 (S.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 984 F.2d 1129, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 2267 (11th Cir. 1993).

Whenever a defendant selects the defendant's own counsel, that counsel truly represents the defendant and no mistake or error of counsel, made in good faith and with earnest and honest purpose to serve the client, can be made the basis of a claim of reversible error. Donaldson v. State, 180 Ga. App. 879, 350 S.E.2d 849, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2792 (1986).

Inadequate preparation of counsel is one ground for finding a violation of the right to effective counsel. Baty v. Balkcom, 661 F.2d 391, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 15986 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 1011, 102 S. Ct. 2307, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1308, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 2395 (1982).

The total failure of trial preparation required a disposition that there was evidence of ineffectiveness so pervasive that a particularized inquiry into prejudice would be unguided speculation. Cochran v. State, 262 Ga. 106, 414 S.E.2d 211, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 215 (1992).

Where counsel was appointed to the case approximately two weeks before the defendant's trial was scheduled to begin, the counsel had only a short period of time in which to prepare for the case, the counsel had duties in other courts, and a family illness occupied a great deal of the counsel's out-of-court time, the defendant was not given effective assistance of counsel. Cochran v. State, 262 Ga. 106, 414 S.E.2d 211, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 215 (1992).

Defendant did not show defense counsel provided ineffective assistance because counsel was not prepared for trial, as the defendant did not point to any instances in the record that reflected counsel's lack of preparedness. Furthermore, defense counsel's decision to not move for a mistrial after the prosecutor asked the defendant why the defendant's sibling shot the defendant was not ineffective as counsel's decision was within the ambit of trial strategy and counsel's decision was not outside the wide range of reasonable professional conduct. Berry v. State, 262 Ga. App. 375, 585 S.E.2d 679, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 918 (2003).

Trial counsel's failure to promptly interview restaurant employees did not amount to ineffective assistance as the purported witnesses alleged that they knew nothing and defendant failed to make a proffer about what they might have said if interviewed earlier. Robinson v. State, 278 Ga. 31, 597 S.E.2d 386, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 469 (2004).

Defendant failed in the burden of showing that the trial counsel was ineffective due to the failure to adequately prepare for trial and failure to file a suppression motion regarding a one-on-one showup identification, as defendant's failure to be up front with counsel deprived the counsel of an opportunity to effectively cross-examine a witness, and counsel's decision not to file a suppression motion was part of the trial strategy, and thus was not second-guessed on appeal. Johnson v. State, 272 Ga. App. 881, 614 S.E.2d 128, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 386 (2005).

Defendant failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel based on an alleged failure to consult adequately with the defendant because defense counsel testified to extensive telephone conversations with the defendant regarding the case, and several meetings; further, the defendant advanced nothing that suggested that further meetings would have produced a different result at trial. Phillips v. State, 280 Ga. 728, 632 S.E.2d 131, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 471 (2006).

Appeals court rejected defendant's claims that trial counsel was ineffective: (1) for failing to move to sever the trial from a codefendant's; (2) for failing to call as a witness a certain individual who would have provided evidence that was crucial to the defense; and (3) because counsel was ill-prepared for trial, as the overwhelming evidence of guilt would not have changed the outcome of the trial; thus, defendant failed to prove that the defendant was prejudiced by these allegations. Jenkins v. State, 279 Ga. App. 897, 633 S.E.2d 61, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 733 (2006).

Defendant failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance from defense counsel's alleged inadequate preparation based on counsel's failure to search, find, and interview numerous witnesses who could have impeached the testimony of the state's witnesses because the defendant did not identify these witnesses and made no proffer of the expected testimony; moreover, although the defendant complained that defense counsel failed to take sworn statements from the prosecution's witnesses, the defendant did not state what these statements may have revealed, other than the defendant's hope that these statements would have cleared up confusion about what occurred, which was insufficient to establish that a probability existed that the result of the trial might have been different if counsel had done so. Johnson v. State, 280 Ga. App. 341, 634 S.E.2d 134, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 851 (2006), overruled in part, Kimbrough v. State, 300 Ga. 516, 796 S.E.2d 694, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 48 (2017).

Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 for failure to request a continuance to locate potential exculpatory witnesses; the defendant failed to show prejudice, as the defendant did not show that the testimony of such witnesses would have been relevant and favorable. Wells v. State, 281 Ga. 253, 637 S.E.2d 8, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 823 (2006).

On remand, a Georgia trial court properly found that the defendant did not receive the ineffective assistance of trial counsel, as the record clearly showed that counsel: (1) met with the defendant to prepare for trial and go over discovery; (2) met with the prosecutor to discuss the case; (3) discussed legal issues and possible defenses with the defendant; and (4) properly decided to withhold copies of documents from the defendant, who was incarcerated, out of an abundance of caution that other inmates would steal them, learn the details of the case, and then offer to testify against the defendant in order to receive preferable treatment. Williams v. State, 281 Ga. 196, 637 S.E.2d 25, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 880 (2006).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim based on first appellate counsel's failure to properly research the issues for the motion for new trial and to present evidence necessary for the trial court to make a reasonable determination of whether there was error in the trial sufficient to merit a new trial was rejected as appointed counsel's failure to act and all of the defendant's counsels' failure to pursue pretrial motions did not constitute ineffective assistance and the defendant failed to cite any authority as to the other seven issues the defendant claimed were not properly presented; the only means by which the defendant could pursue a claim challenging the effectiveness of first appellate counsel was through a habeas corpus proceeding. Ellis v. State, 282 Ga. App. 17, 637 S.E.2d 729, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1217 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0324, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 66 (Ga. Jan. 22, 2007), overruled in part, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Although a defendant asserted that certain statements by trial counsel about inadequate time to review discovery materials provided by the prosecution indicated that the trial counsel was insufficiently prepared for the defendant's malice murder trial, no ineffective assistance of counsel was shown; the trial court noted on the motion for a new trial that the record showed that trial counsel had reviewed the material provided by the prosecution, had investigated the case, had filed and argued pre-trial motions, and had adequate time to prepare for trial, and the defendant did not point out any occurrence at trial that demonstrated a lack of preparation. Green v. State, 281 Ga. 322, 638 S.E.2d 288, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 992 (2006).

There was no merit to the defendant's argument that because counsel did not have time to prepare for trial, the defendant had experienced a constructive denial of counsel under the Sixth Amendment. Counsel was already familiar with the case when counsel took it over from an attorney whom counsel supervised; counsel had access to the trial preparation work done by the original attorney; counsel met with the defendant before trial; and counsel indicated to the trial court that counsel was ready to proceed to trial.

Claim that counsel performed deficiently by failing to adequately prepare for trial and failing to investigate potential witnesses failed because two of the witnesses the defendant claimed should have been interviewed testified at trial and a third was interviewed but it was determined that the third witness's testimony would not have established an alibi defense. App. 536, 301 S.E.2d 894, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 1937 (1983).

U.S. Const., amend. 6 guarantees criminal defendants the right to counsel reasonably likely to render and rendering reasonably effective assistance given the totality of the circumstances. Birt v. Montgomery, 709 F.2d 690, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 24721 (11th Cir. 1983); United States v. Johnson, 709 F.2d 639, 1983 U.S.

App. LEXIS 25934 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1010, 104 S. Ct. 531, 78 L. Ed. 2d 713, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 2669 (1983).

The right to effective counsel does not mean errorless counsel, nor does it mean counsel adjudged ineffective by hindsight, but counsel reasonably likely to render and rendering reasonably effective assistance. Jackson v. State, 167 Ga. App. 509, 306 S.E.2d 757, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2531 (1983).

Good faith errors of retained counsel not ordinarily reversible error. — Ordinarily, if the defendant selects the defendant's own counsel, that counsel truly represents the defendant and no mistake or error of counsel, made in good faith and with earnest and honest purpose to serve the client, can be made the basis of claim of a reversible error. Irby v. State, 156 Ga. App. 761, 275 S.E.2d 391, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3191 (1980).

Good faith errors of appointed counsel are normally insufficient to justify granting a motion to vacate sentence. Walker v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 213, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10733 (5th Cir. 1973).

Honest mistake of retained counsel not basis of claim of error. — Whenever a defendant selects the defendant's own counsel, that counsel truly represents the defendant and no mistake or error of counsel, made in good faith and with earnest and honest purpose to serve the client, can be made the basis of a claim of reversible error. Scott v. State, 178 Ga. App. 844, 344 S.E.2d 764, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2570 (1986).

Significant misleading statements of counsel can rise to a level of denial of due process of law and result in a vitiation of the judicial proceeding because of ineffective assistance of counsel. Walker v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 213, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10733 (5th Cir. 1973).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for new trial, because: (1) trial counsel's failure to object to a mock Christmas gift that was entered into evidence was part of counsel's strategy to attack the victim's credibility and veracity, and thus was not ineffective assistance of counsel; (2) because it was necessary for trial counsel, as part of the trial strategy, to raise the issue of the victim's veracity, trial counsel could not subsequently object to the victim's prior consistent statement, which was entered to verify the victim's testimony; (3) trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to file a motion to sever the charges, as the decision was presumed to be strategic; and (4) trial counsel's failure to reserve objections to the jury charge, without a showing of deficient performance and prejudice to the defense, was not ineffective assistance. However, trial counsel's failure to object to opinion testimony about the victim's veracity or request that it be stricken constituted deficient performance, but the testimony was not so significant as to have contributed to the jury's verdict. Mealor v. State, 266 Ga. App. 274, 596 S.E.2d 632, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 162 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1281, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 770 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2004).

Defendant failed to demonstrate that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by mistakenly referring to the night of the murder as August 30 rather than September 1, 2006 during the direct examination of the host of a barbecue because the transcript of defense counsel's complete questioning of the host and the host's responsive testimony made clear that both were operating under the premise that the event of the barbecue took place on the day of the murder, which was unquestionably September 1, 2006, and thus, the jury was aware that the host was testifying in an attempt to establish an alibi for the defendant; there was not a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's mistake, the outcome of the defendant's trial would have been different because it was plain that the host was testifying about the night of the murder, and the host's testimony fell well short of establishing an alibi for the defendant for other reasons. Smiley v. State, 288 Ga. 635, 706 S.E.2d 425, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 164 (2011).

Counsel's decision not to seek suppression of evidence. — Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims lacked merit, as: (1) trial counsel's decisions not to seek suppression of a bloody jacket seized from the defendant's home was strategic, and not to challenge, were strategic; and (2) the defendant failed to show a reasonable likelihood that the outcome of the trial would have been different had counsel objected to evidence of the victim's good character or evidence of the defendant's bad character. Parker v. State, 281 Ga. 490, 640 S.E.2d 44, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 19 (2007).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for not seeking to suppress the evidence seized in the search of the defendant's home based upon the alleged insufficiency of the search warrant affidavit; there was no showing that the information in support of the warrant was patently false or that there was any intent to misled the judge in seeking the search warrant. Bryant v. State, 282 Ga. 631, 651 S.E.2d 718, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 718 (2007).

Trial counsel did not perform deficiently by failing to renew the motion to suppress after evidence was presented at trial because there was no evidence that a renewed motion would have been granted or that the defendant suffered prejudice as a result of counsel's performance. Gibson v. State, 290 Ga. 6, 717 S.E.2d 447, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 721 (2011).

Defendant failed to show that his trial counsel was ineffective for failing to file a motion to suppress a key ring and shell casings recovered from his yard because he failed to show that such a motion would have been successful, as no evidence was admitted regarding the exact distance between defendant's house and the area of his yard where the items were found, and defendant did not offer evidence about what the relevant area of his yard was used for. Reese v. State, 317 Ga. 189, 891 S.E.2d 835, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 173 (2023).

Tactical decision not to secure additional evaluations. — Defendant received effective assistance of counsel where defense counsel made a strategic decision not to obtain an additional psychiatric evaluation based on defense counsel's review of the psychiatric records and counsel's conversations with defendant; there was no evidence that defendant's sanity at the time of the charged offense would be a significant factor at trial since: (1) defendant had repeatedly been diagnosed with depressive disorder, which did not support a mental incapacity defense; (2) the only evidence that defendant had a condition that could have supported a mental incapacity defense came from an expert witness that the trial court found not to be credible; and (3) defendant insisted that the victim's death was the result of self-defense. Coker v. State, 262 Ga. App. 320, 585 S.E.2d 221, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 905 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1697, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 979 (Ga. Nov. 10, 2003).

Attorneys do not become incompetent because of a single act even though it may have been a mistake in judgment. Hudson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 281, 274 S.E.2d 675, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3032 (1980), overruled in part, Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982).

In a prosecution for rape and murder, the court determined that even assuming that the defendant's trial counsel should have discovered and used certain impeachment evidence to attack the testimony of two witnesses, the state habeas court's conclusion that counsel's failure to do so did not prejudice the defendant's sentence was objectively reasonable. Brown v. Head, 272 F.3d 1308, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 24505 (11th Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 978, 123 S. Ct. 476, 154 L. Ed. 2d 338, 2002 U.S. LEXIS 7877 (2002).

Effectiveness of counsel cannot be measured by the result reached at trial. Harrell v. State, 139 Ga. App. 556, 228 S.E.2d 723, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1884 (1976), overruled in part, Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982); Hudson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 281, 274 S.E.2d 675, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3032 (1980), overruled in part, Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982).

A defendant cannot retain the defendant's selected counsel and seemingly acquiesce in counsel's tactics, only to have judgment set aside on alleged incompetence of counsel if outcome of trial is unfavorable. Harrell v. State, 139 Ga.

App. 556, 228 S.E.2d 723, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1884 (1976), overruled in part, Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982).

Standard of effectiveness of counsel is not to be judged by hindsight nor by result that appellant was convicted. Spangler v. State, 162 Ga. App. 624, 292 S.E.2d 461, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2266 (1982); Waites v. State, 178 Ga. App. 333, 343 S.E.2d 115, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 1670 (1986).

Effectiveness of counsel cannot be fairly measured by results of trial, but upon reasonable effectiveness of counsel's services at time they were rendered. Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982).

That appointed counsel is a highly respected attorney does not establish counsel's effectiveness in a particular case. Walker v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 213, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10733 (5th Cir. 1973).

Shortness of time spent with a client alone does not suffice to show ineffective representation. Walker v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 213, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10733 (5th Cir. 1973).

Defendant did not show defendant was deprived of effective assistance of counsel because defense counsel allegedly did not adequately meet with defendant or prepare for trial because there was no specified amount of time counsel had to spend with defendant, counsel met with defendant at critical stages of the defense and before trial and presented discovery to defendant for review, defendant participated in jury selection and was allowed to meet with counsel before the start of trial, and, even if counsel's performance was deficient, defendant did not show the trial's outcome would have been different if counsel had spent more time with the defendant. Martin v. State, 266 Ga. App. 392, 597 S.E.2d 445, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 302 (2004).

Attempt to withdraw does not show ineffectiveness. — The mere fact that defendant's counsel attempted to withdraw from the case (after defendant voiced dissatisfaction with counsel when the case was called for trial) did not demonstrate deficient performance. Middlebrooks v. State, 208 Ga. App. 23, 430 S.E.2d 163, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 430 (1993).

Membership of the bar in good standing is prima facie proof of competency as an attorney. Hill v. Balkcom, 213 Ga. 58, 96 S.E.2d 589, 1957 Ga. LEXIS 301 (1957); Suits v. State, 150 Ga. App. 285, 257 S.E.2d 306, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2181 (1979), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020); Chapman v. State, 154 Ga. App. 532, 268 S.E.2d 797, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2271 (1980); Hudson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 281, 274 S.E.2d 675, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3032 (1980), overruled in part, Spence v. State, 163 Ga. App. 198, 292 S.E.2d 908, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3193 (1982).

Impact of bar membership. — Membership of the bar in good standing is prima facie proof that counsel's presentation meets due process requirements. Hill v. Balkcom, 213 Ga. 58, 96 S.E.2d 589, 1957 Ga. LEXIS 301 (1957).

Commissioned officer admitted to practice before courts-martial, is a competent attorney within the purview of U.S. Const., amend. 6. Altmayer v. Sanford, 148 F.2d 161, 1945 U.S. App. LEXIS 2416 (5th Cir. 1945).

Defendants have duty to notify the courts of an inadequacy in the assistance of counsel, and the judiciary is not required to monitor all cases to insure that counsel are using due diligence in prosecuting their client's appeals. Chapman v. United States, 469 F.2d 634, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6938 (5th Cir. 1972).

Defendant's required showing of deficient performance prejudicing defense. — To prove ineffective assistance of counsel, a defendant is required to show that counsel's performance was deficient and that this deficient performance prejudiced defendant's defense. A trial court's determination with respect to counsel's effectiveness will be upheld on appeal unless clearly erroneous. Davis v. State, 264 Ga. App. 128, 589 S.E.2d 700, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1414 (2003).

With regard to a defendant's conviction for armed robbery and other crimes, the defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of counsel from failure to: (1) adequately prepare the defendant for trial; (2) keep the defendant adequately updated with respect to issues relevant to the defense; and (3) discuss post-trial motions; the defendant failed to meet the burden of proving that any such alleged deficiency prejudiced the defendant in any manner. Defense counsel's failure to file a written motion to sever would have been pointless, as the trial court had considered the defense's oral motion; there was no evidence in the record that other witnesses existed that could have been called on the defendant's behalf; and trial counsel did not represent the defendant with regard to the defendant's motion for a new trial, therefore, the alleged failure of trial counsel to prepare the defendant for the motion for new trial hearing could not have constituted ineffective assistance of counsel. Grant v. State, 289 Ga. App. 230, 656 S.E.2d 873, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 54 (2008).

Defendant's refusal to cooperate. — A defendant may not refuse to cooperate with appointed counsel and then claim that the defendant was not effectively represented. Jefferson v. State, 209 Ga. App. 859, 434 S.E.2d 814, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1012 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1852, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 203 (Ga. Jan. 6, 1994).

Defendant failed to make a case for the ineffective assistance of trial counsel because trial counsel could hardly be found to be deficient for not considering the defendant as a key witness in the defendant's own defense and for having to move forward with defendant's defense without the defendant's cooperation; trial counsel testified that counsel went to the jail to visit the defendant perhaps two or three times and then ceased to do so because the defendant refused to answer most of counsel's questions, would not give counsel defendant's version of events, would not help with the defense, and told counsel that the defendant did not want to talk to counsel. Sanford v. State, 287 Ga. 351, 695 S.E.2d 579, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 395 (2010), cert. denied, 562 U.S. 1237, 131 S. Ct.

Advisement of the right not to testify. — Defendant's claim that counsel provided ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to adequately advise the defendant of the defendant's right not to testify failed as the defendant did not rebut the presumption that counsel acted as an effective legal representative and properly advised the defendant of the defendant's rights since there was no testimony that counsel failed to inform the defendant of the defendant's constitutional rights or the risks of testifying. Mayberry v. State, 281 Ga. 144, 635 S.E.2d 736, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 646 (2006).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for interfering with the defendant's right to testify at trial as: (1) counsel informed the defendant that, although the defendant had an absolute right to testify, counsel believed that it was in the defendant's interest not to testify for strategic reasons; and (2) based on the reasonable advice of counsel, the defendant voluntarily chose not to testify. Dixon v. State, 285 Ga. 312, 677 S.E.2d 76, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 154 (2009), overruled in part, Whitehead v. State, 287 Ga. 242, 695 S.E.2d 255, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 412 (2010).

Although defendant's three attorneys disagreed as to whether defendant should testify at trial, the attorneys presented their advice to defendant, and defendant made the decision not to testify; consequently, the attorney's advice did not in any way violate defendant's Sixth Amendment right to effective counsel. Spencer v. State, 287 Ga. 434, 696 S.E.2d 617, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 489 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for advising the defendant not to testify because the defendant acknowledged that counsel told the defendant that the defendant would cause more damage to the defendant's case if the defendant testified and acknowledged trusting counsel thereby choosing not to testify; even assuming that trial counsel did advise the defendant that the defendant could be impeached by certain evidence and that such advice was incorrect, the defendant did not show that the defendant was prejudiced thereby because the defendant never said what the defendant's testimony would have been had the defendant testified at trial. Johnson v. State, 290 Ga. 382, 721 S.E.2d 851, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 78 (2012).

Failure to call defendant to testify.

— Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to call the defendant to testify because the defendant made the decision not to testify with a complete understanding of the defendant's rights, and trial counsel testified that counsel advised the defendant that it was up to the defendant whether to testify and that counsel advised against given the defendant's prior felony convictions and belief that the testimony the defendant wished to present was, to a certain extent, contrary to the defense theory. Thornton v. State, 292 Ga. 796, 741 S.E.2d 641, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 328 (2013).

Factors considered where inadequate representation alleged.

— When inadequate representation is alleged, the critical factual inquiry ordinarily relates to whether the defendant had a defense which was not presented; whether trial counsel consulted sufficiently with the accused, and adequately investigated the facts and the law; whether the omissions charged to trial counsel resulted from inadequate preparation rather than from unwise choices of trial tactics and strategy. Hawes v. State, 240 Ga. 327, 240 S.E.2d 833 (1977). But see Stewart v. State, 232 Ga. App. 565, 502 S.E.2d 502, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 747 (1998).

In determining reasonably effective assistance of counsel, critical factual inquiry relates to whether a defense was not presented, sufficiency of counsel's consultation with defendant and adequacy of investigation into facts and law and whether errors alleged resulted from inadequate trial preparation rather than from unwise choices of strategy and trial tactics. Hall v. State, 162 Ga. App. 713, 293 S.E.2d 862, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2307 (1982).

Where inadequate representation of counsel is alleged, the reviewing court normally considers whether the defendant had a defense which was not presented; whether trial counsel consulted with the accused and adequately investigated the facts and the law; and whether the omissions charged to trial counsel resulted from inadequate preparation, rather than from unwise trial tactics. Ealy v. State, 251 Ga. 426, 306 S.E.2d 275, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 821 (1983).

Burden and standard of proof of denial of benefit of counsel. — The burden is on the applicant to sustain the contention that the applicant was denied the benefit of counsel. In order to sustain such contention, it is incumbent upon the applicant to show that the applicant was virtually unrepresented. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 193 Ga. 661, 19 S.E.2d 499, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 449, cert. denied, 317 U.S. 626, 63 S. Ct. 36, 87 L. Ed. 506, 1942 U.S. LEXIS 274 (1942).

For relief, a petitioner must show that the petitioner's counsel was in fact ineffective, that counsel's conduct was not within the range of competence demanded of attorneys in criminal cases. A petitioner then has the additional burden of proving that the petitioner's counsel's ineffectiveness caused actual and substantial prejudice in the petitioner's case. Mitchell v. Hopper, 564 F. Supp. 780, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16411 (S.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 762 F.2d 886, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30164 (11th Cir. 1985).

In order to be entitled to habeas corpus relief on a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel, the petitioner must establish by a preponderance of the evidence: (1) that based upon the totality of circumstances in the entire record the petitioner's counsel was not "reasonably likely to render" and in fact did not render "reasonable effective assistance"; and (2) that ineffectiveness of counsel resulted in actual and substantial disadvantage to the course of the petitioner's defense. Even if the petitioner meets this burden, habeas corpus relief may still be denied if the state can prove that in the context of all the evidence it remains certain beyond a reasonable doubt that the outcome of the proceedings would not have been altered but for the ineffectiveness of counsel. McCleskey v. Zant, 580 F. Supp. 338, 1984

U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19860 (N.D. Ga. 1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 753 F.2d 877, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28073 (11th Cir. 1985).

Because of the presumption that a lawyer is competent, the burden falls upon a defendant to demonstrate a constitutional deprivation of right to counsel. Kervin v. State, 178 Ga. App. 601, 344 S.E.2d 441, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2552 (1986).

In determining whether there has been actual ineffective assistance of counsel, thereby requiring the reversal of the defendant's conviction, the defendant must show both that trial counsel's performance was deficient and that this deficiency prejudiced the defense. Tutton v. State, 179 Ga. App. 462, 346 S.E.2d 898, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2632 (1986).

Defendant bears the burden to show that counsel's performance was deficient and that the deficient performance prejudiced the defense. Webb v. State, 178 Ga. App. 725, 344 S.E.2d 660, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2553 (1986); Askin v. State, 178 Ga. App. 810, 344 S.E.2d 699, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2564 (1986); Parisie v. State, 178 Ga. App. 857, 344 S.E.2d 727, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2565 (1986), overruled in part, Willis v. State, 304 Ga. 686, 820 S.E.2d 640, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 685 (2018); Scott v. State, 178 Ga. App. 844, 344 S.E.2d 764, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2570 (1986); Bradley v. State, 178 Ga. App. 894, 344 S.E.2d 772, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2586 (1986).

In order to prevail on an ineffectiveness claim, a convicted defendant must show: (1) that counsel's performance was deficient, i.e., that counsel's performance was not reasonable under all the circumstances; and (2) that this deficient performance prejudiced the defense, i.e., that there is a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different. Jones v. State, 180 Ga. App. 706, 350 S.E.2d 309, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2254 (1986); Rhinehart v. State, 181 Ga. App. 507, 352 S.E.2d 823, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2542 (1987).

The burden is on the defendant to show both that trial counsel's performance was deficient and that the deficient performance prejudiced the defense. Brown v.

State, 257 Ga. 277, 357 S.E.2d 590, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 820 (1987).

Because trial counsel's actions involved strategic decisions or failed to harm defendant and defendant could only pursue a claim against appellate counsel through a habeas corpus proceeding, defendant did not carry the burden of proving ineffective assistance. Miller v. State, 273 Ga. App. 171, 614 S.E.2d 796, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 402 (2005).

Burden of demonstrating a constitutional violation rests upon the defendant, and in the absence of a showing to the contrary it will be assumed that trial counsel put aside any personal animosity toward defendant arising from the collapse of the economic arrangements between defendant and trial counsel and rendered reasonably effective assistance. Brown v. State, 180 Ga. App. 361, 349 S.E.2d 250, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2721 (1986).

Prejudice must be shown. — A defendant claiming ineffective assistance of counsel must establish that the attorney's alleged failure resulted in some degree of prejudice to the defendant. United States v. Costa, 691 F.2d 1358, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 23916 (11th Cir. 1982).

Prejudice is required for habeas corpus relief based on ineffective assistance of counsel. United States v. Lagrone, 727 F.2d 1037, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 24426 (11th Cir. 1984).

Because the defendant did not assert a possessory interest in a car in which the defendant was a passenger or in items seized from the car, the defendant failed to show standing to contest the admissibility of those items, and since it was also unclear what was known to the officer at time of the defendant's arrest, the defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance based on counsel's failure to file a motion to suppress those items. Callahan v. State, 280 Ga. App. 323, 634 S.E.2d 102, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 847 (2006), cert. denied, No. S06C1973, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 861 (Ga. Oct. 16, 2006), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel due to counsel's failure to object to hearsay testimony of a note-passing inmate as the hearsay statements fell within the exception permitting hearsay statements made by co-conspirators during the pendency of the conspiracy; the failure to object did not constitute deficient performance. McKinney v. State, 281 Ga. 92, 635 S.E.2d 153, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 582 (2006).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in requesting an inapplicable impeachment charge as the improper language was a mere passing reference in a lengthy instruction and the defendant could not show a reasonable probability that trial counsel's performance changed the outcome of the trial. Miller v. State, 281 Ga. App. 354, 636 S.E.2d 60, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1100 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0087, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 106 (Ga. Jan. 8, 2007).

Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 in failing to argue at trial and on appeal that the inmate's statutory rape and incest convictions should have merged into the inmate's rape conviction as a matter of fact since all of the crimes arose out of the same incident, as the crimes of statutory rape and incest were not established by proof of the same or less than all the facts required to establish the crime of rape; the inmate's convictions of statutory rape under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-3 and incest under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-22 were not included pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-1-6(1) in the rape conviction under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-1, as statutory rape, which required evidence as to the victim's age and that the victim was not the inmate's spouse, and incest, which required proof of the victim's relation to the inmate, had elements not required for rape. Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 840 (2006).

Defendant did not meet the defendant's burden of showing prejudice to support the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim as the defendant did not proffer an alleged alibi witness's testimony at the hearing on the defendant's new trial motion. Boatwright v. State, 281 Ga. App. 560, 636 S.E.2d 719, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1167 (2006).

In a malice murder prosecution, trial counsel was not required to object when a witness testified about an encounter a few days before the victim was killed in which the defendant held a gun to the head of a friend of the victim, as the testimony amounted to evidence of prior difficulties between defendant and the victim, and was admissible without notice and a hearing pursuant to Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 31.3; hence, counsel could not be deemed ineffective for a failure to voice an objection to that evidence. Sims v. State, 281 Ga. 541, 640 S.E.2d 260, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 47 (2007).

Assuming that defense counsel was deficient for not having knowledge of the contents of the defendant's cell phone records, the defendant could not show the required prejudice in light of the overwhelming evidence establishing the defendant's guilt. Swanson v. State, 282 Ga. 39, 644 S.E.2d 845, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 351 (2007).

Absent any prejudice from counsel's alleged ineffectiveness for failing to object to the state's introduction of hearsay and evidence of prior abuse committed by the defendant against the victim and the victim's mother, and for counsel's failure to move for a mistrial, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim lacked merit. Johnson v. State, 281 Ga. 770, 642 S.E.2d 827, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 255 (2007).

An inmate seeking habeas corpus had not shown prejudice by the alleged deficiencies of trial counsel, and even if trial counsel had failed to provide certain records to a psychologist, the psychologist, upon seeing the records, had reaffirmed the psychologist's original opinion that the inmate was not mentally retarded; the additional mitigation evidence cited by the inmate would not have made a significant contribution in light of the evidence trial counsel actually presented. Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 182 (2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1070, 128 S. Ct. 728, 169 L. Ed. 2d 569, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 12856 (2007), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Trial counsel was not ineffective as: (1) the defendant failed to support an assertion that trial counsel was ineffective in failing to listen to an audiotape of the defendant's second interview with the Georgia Bureau of Investigation prior to trial; (2) counsel's off-hand comment as to hindsight was insufficient to support an inference of deficient performance; and (3) the defendant failed to show that prejudice resulted from counsel's alleged deficiency. Sturgis v. State, 282 Ga. 88, 646 S.E.2d 233, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 414 (2007).

Even if trial counsel was ineffective for failing to challenge the jury array on the basis that the array was tainted by the comments of a juror who was excused after stating that the juror thought the defendant was "guilty in 2003," when the crimes occurred, there was no prejudice because the juror's opinion was based solely on media reports, not on any personal knowledge of the defendant; where a prospective juror's comments did not link a defendant with criminal activity, or characterize the defendant as a criminal, the entire jury panel did not have to be excused. Edwards v. State, 282 Ga. 259, 646 S.E.2d 663, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 399 (2007).

Because there was significant evidence refuting the defendant's claim of self-defense, the defendant had not shown prejudice even if trial counsel was deficient for failing to object to the prosecutor's comment on the defendant's silence, for failing to object to the prosecutor's comment in opening about the evidence the defendant was anticipated to present at trial, and for failing to object to an alleged "golden rule" argument. Jackson v. State, 282 Ga. 494, 651 S.E.2d 702, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 720 (2007).

Because a felony murder conviction merged with a malice murder conviction, the defendant had not shown prejudice from trial counsel's failure to object to the felony murder jury charge; furthermore, defendant had not shown prejudice by the making of a statement that was not introduced at trial. John v. State, 282 Ga. 792, 653 S.E.2d 435, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 719 (2007).

Defendant argued that defense counsel was ineffective in cross-examining a state's witness and in failing to call a witness to undermine the testimony of the state's witness. The defendant failed to show prejudice; as eyewitnesses testified that the defendant ordered an aggravated assault on the victim and assisted in murdering the victim, any deficiencies of counsel were unlikely to have affected the verdict. Wilcox v. State, 284 Ga. 414, 667 S.E.2d 603, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 831 (2008).

Because the defendant did not show that there was a reasonable probability that the outcome would have been different if counsel had objected to a reference to a codefendant's guilty plea during the state's opening, the court did not have to determine whether counsel was deficient; furthermore, the jury was charged that opening statements were not evidence. Wilcox v. State, 297 Ga. App. 201, 677 S.E.2d 142, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 95 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1285, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 342 (Ga. June 1, 2009).

Defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because the defendant pointed to no change in the law or facts or loss of material evidence that would have raised a reasonable probability that the outcome of the appeal would have been different but for the counsel's delay in pursuing a motion for a new trial. Simmons v. State, 291 Ga. 664, 732 S.E.2d 65, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 739 (2012).

When prejudice presumed. — In some cases, prejudice from the ineffective assistance of counsel may be presumed, including those instances in which there has been an actual or constructive denial of the assistance of counsel altogether. Heath v. State, 268 Ga. App. 235, 601 S.E.2d 758, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 893 (2004).

Necessity of showing of prejudice and disadvantage from counsel's ineffectiveness. — Under the law of the Eleventh Circuit, if the court finds that counsel's representation was not merely deficient or inadequate in many or most respects, but was functionally equivalent in every respect to having no representation at all, then it is not necessary for a habeas applicant to show that the applicant was prejudiced by counsel's failings. House v. Balkcom, 562 F. Supp. 1111, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17753 (N.D. Ga. 1983),

rev'd, 725 F.2d 608, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25536 (11th Cir. 1984).

In a case where counsel's representation is below proper standards in certain respects, but where the representation was not the functional equivalent of no representation, the relevant standard requires the habeas applicant to demonstrate that counsel's failings worked to the applicant's "actual and substantial disadvantage"; if the applicant is successful in making this showing, the writ must be granted unless the state proves that counsel's ineffectiveness was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. House v. Balkcom, 562 F. Supp. 1111, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17753 (N.D. Ga. 1983), rev'd, 725 F.2d 608, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25536 (11th Cir. 1984).

A habeas petitioner has the burden of persuasion to demonstrate that the ineffective assistance of counsel created not only a possibility of prejudice, but that it worked to the petitioner's actual and substantial disadvantage. Fleming v. Zant, 560 F. Supp. 525, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18252 (M.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 748 F.2d 1435, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16373 (11th Cir. 1984); Spradlin v. State, 262 Ga. App. 897, 587 S.E.2d 155, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1065 (2003), cert. denied, No. S04C0055, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 40 (Ga. Jan. 12, 2004).

Even assuming that trial counsel's performance was deficient, appellant failed to show that a reasonable probability existed that such performance would have prejudiced the appellant's defense. Robinson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 368, 498 S.E.2d 579, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 452 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1130, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 765 (Ga. June 26, 1998).

Defendant's claims of ineffective assistance of counsel lacked merit as some of the alleged errors were strategic decisions which could not be the basis for such a claim and there was no evidence that absent the alleged errors by counsel that the outcome of the trial would have been different. Pinson v. State, 266 Ga. App. 254, 596 S.E.2d 734, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 348 (2004).

Defendant failed to show that anything that defense counsel would have done differently or how an earlier disclosure of Brady information would have affected the outcome of the trial, and thus failed to show that the failure to object on Brady grounds constituted deficient performance or that the defendant was prejudiced thereby. Callahan v. State, 280 Ga. App. 323, 634 S.E.2d 102, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 847 (2006), cert. denied, No. S06C1973, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 861 (Ga. Oct. 16, 2006), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim was properly rejected by the trial court, given evidence that: (1) counsel did not stipulate as to the weight of the marijuana seized; (2) counsel's failure to file a suppression motion did not constitute per se ineffective assistance of counsel, and defendant failed to show that the challenged evidence would have been suppressed had the motion been filed; (3) defendant's decision not to testify was defendant's own; and (4) a continuing witness objection would not have changed the outcome of the trial. Parnell v. State, 280 Ga. App. 665, 634 S.E.2d 763, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 648 (2006).

Defendant could not establish that defendant's trial counsel was deficient for failing to object to inadmissible evidence concerning other bad acts because trial counsel objected to the admission of the evidence and obtained a ruling from the trial court, and regardless of the format of trial counsel's objections, the allegations were made with sufficient specificity for the trial court to identify their precise basis since they specifically pointed out how the proposed evidence violated some established rule of evidence or procedure; even if counsel's performance was deficient, the defendant did not show there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different but for counsel's purported omission because there was overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt. Ellis v. State, 287 Ga. 170, 695 S.E.2d 35, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 398 (2010).

Trial counsel's deficient performance in failing to object to a jury charge was not prejudicial because the trial court admitted having erred and went on to conclude that the error was harmless in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt. Higginbotham v. State, 287 Ga. 187, 695 S.E.2d 210, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 405 (2010).

Insufficient showing of prejudice on issue of defendant's silence. — Defendant's claim that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance not objecting to pervasive comments on the defendant's pre-arrest silence failed because the defendant made an insufficient showing of prejudice; there was strong evidence of the defendant's guilt of felony murder, including that it was undisputed that the defendant was the only adult caring for the victim when the victim received mortal injuries and that the defense that the victim fell from the bed was not supported by the medical evidence. Whitaker v. State, 291 Ga. 139, 728 S.E.2d 209, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 493 (2012).

Suppression of identification. — Trial counsel was not ineffective by failing to seek suppression of the identification evidence or attack the reliability of the same on grounds that such was impermissibly suggestive, as: (1) the showup was preceded by a photo array against which no attack was made; and (2) counsel's strategy in handling the state's failure to elicit in-court identification testimony from a particular witness was reasonable. Brooks v. State, 281 Ga. 514, 640 S.E.2d 280, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 49 (2007).

With regard to a defendant's convictions for child molestation, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a new trial as the defendant failed to show that the defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel as a result of trial counsel failing to move to suppress the photographic lineup evidence wherein the two victims identified the defendant as the perpetrator. The reviewing court agreed with the trial court that the photographic lineup was not impermissibly suggestive since the lineup depicted six black and white photographs of men of similar race, age, hairstyle, and complexion; thus, the defendant failed to prove that there would have been any merit to the motion to suppress. Mohammed v.

State, 295 Ga. App. 514, 672 S.E.2d 483, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 25 (2009).

Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective by failing to move to suppress identification evidence and testimony because the admission of a deceased victim's identification statement was made the subject of a motion in limine filed by trial counsel and, thus, there could be no error as counsel did not fail to seek the exclusion of the admission of the victim's identification; the victims' identification of the defendant was merely one of the credibility of eyewitnesses to the incident, which had to be resolved by the trier of fact. Gandy v. State, 290 Ga. 166, 718 S.E.2d 287, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 933 (2011).

Witness testifying to defendant's gang involvement was not ineffective assistance. — Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel due to trial counsel's failure to object when a witness testified that the defendant spent time with an alleged gang because there was no prejudice in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt; several other eyewitnesses testified that the defendant shot the victim, and the defendant failed to show that but for counsel's failure to object, the outcome of the trial would have been any different. Kitchens v. State, 289 Ga. 242, 710 S.E.2d 551, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 429 (2011).

Defendant will be relieved of defendant's burden to establish prejudice stemming from counsel's errors in three instances: (1) an actual or constructive denial of counsel; (2) government interference with defense counsel; and (3) counsel that labors under an actual conflict of interest that adversely affects counsel's performance. Heath v. State, 268 Ga. App. 235, 601 S.E.2d 758, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 893 (2004).

Truth of allegation that counsel violated ethical considerations, directory rules, and disciplinary standards would not automatically relieve appellant of the burden to show harm resulting from the alleged misconduct. Robinson v. State, 210 Ga. App. 278, 435 S.E.2d 718, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1130 (1993).

Attorney's acts of professional misconduct in unrelated matters and cases did not establish inadequacy or prejudice. White v. State, 267 Ga. 523, 481 S.E.2d 804, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 65 (1997).

Suspension from practice of law. —

An attorney suspended from the practice of law for failure to comply with state bar administrative regulations does not render ineffective assistance of counsel under either the United States or Georgia Constitution when representing a criminal defendant. Cornwell v. Dodd, 270 Ga. 411, 509 S.E.2d 919, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 11 (1999).

Trial counsel's failure to disclose to the defendant a previous six-month suspension from the practice of law did not support a finding of ineffective assistance because the suspension occurred more than 13 years earlier and concerned the handling of trust accounts that were unrelated to representation of criminal defendants. Durham v. State, 292 Ga. 239, 734 S.E.2d 377, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 953 (2012).

Administrative suspension. — Defendant did not show that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel, despite the fact that defendant's counsel was under the state bar's administrative suspension at the time defendant was being tried, as the suspension was for failing to timely respond to an inquiry and did not show that counsel provided ineffective assistance in representing defendant; since defendant did not show any other evidence that defense counsel provided ineffective assistance, defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim had to fail. Zinnamon v. State, 261 Ga. App. 170, 582 S.E.2d 146, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 567 (2003).

Attorney is effective if the assumptions upon which the attorney bases the defense strategy are reasonable and the attorney's choices on the basis of those assumptions are reasonable. *Mitchell v. Advice as to interrogation prior to adversary proceedings. —

Sixth amendment claim as to advice given by counsel to defendant with respect to the police interrogation occurring prior to the initiation of adversary judicial proceedings was without merit, because the right does not attach to pre-adversarial interrogations. Ford v. State, 256 Ga. 375, 349 S.E.2d 361, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 853 (1986).

Initiation of statement by defendant. —

Trial court did not err in failing to suppress a statement the defendant made to the police because the statement was made during the course of a subsequent interview that the defendant initiated and was admissible; the defendant contacted the case detective and requested a meeting, the detective met with the defendant and again advised the defendant of the defendant's right to counsel, and the defendant waived the defendant's right to counsel and made an incriminating statement. Haynes v. State, 287 Ga. 202, 695 S.E.2d 219, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 392 (2010).

Failure to obtain information concerning police interrogation of defendant. —

Counsel did not provide reasonably effective assistance to defendant where they failed to interview or otherwise obtain information concerning defendant's interrogation by police officers. House v. Balkcom, 562 F. Supp. 1111, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17753 (N.D. Ga. 1983), rev'd, 725 F.2d 608, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25536 (11th Cir. 1984).

Allowing second confession. — Because the defendant had already confessed to the district attorney, the defendant's subsequent confession to the police after brief consultation with the defendant's public defender did not show ineffective assistance of counsel; counsel might have felt it would present the obvious remorse of the defendant. Stewart v. State, 262 Ga. 894, 426 S.E.2d 367, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 292 (1993).

Defendant's right to effective assistance of counsel not violated by pre-indictment delay. United States v. Jorge-Salon, 734 F.2d 789, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 21421 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 869, 105 S. Ct. 215, 83 L. Ed. 2d 145, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 3773 (1984).

Inquiry into counsel's failure to challenge jury arrays required. — Where a defendant claimed ineffective assistance of counsel based on counsel's failure to pursue defendant's requests to challenge the arrays of the grand and traverse juries and to secure the presence of certain defense witnesses, trial court's summary overruling of defendant's motions for change of counsel without a hearing or any further inquiry was error. Heard v. State, 173 Ga. App. 543, 327 S.E.2d 767, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 1612 (1985).

Failure to object to limitations on voir dire. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to limitations on voir dire because the defendant was nevertheless able to adequately explore any inclination or bias that might have derived from strong feelings that prospective jurors had about individuals involved in the sale of illegal drugs. Ellis v. State, 292 Ga. 276, 736 S.E.2d 412, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 17 (2013).

Failure to challenge jury array. — Defense counsel's failure to challenge the grand jury array did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel, even though a codefendant's attorney successfully challenged the array because of an insufficient representation of women. Fleming v. Zant, 560 F. Supp. 525, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18252 (M.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 748 F.2d 1435, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16373 (11th Cir. 1984).

Neither defense counsel's failure to timely challenge the composition of the grand jury nor counsel's tactical decision not to challenge the traverse jury array results in the denial of the defendant's sixth and fourteenth amendment rights to effective assistance of counsel. Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 945, 104 S. Ct. 1930, 80 L. Ed. 2d 475, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 232 (1984).

Assuming defense counsel's performance was deficient during defendant's trial for aggravated assault and criminal trespass for failing to object to the trial court's failure to ask the qualifying voir dire questions that are required by O.C.G.A. § 15-12-164(a), defendant failed to show that the outcome of the trial would have been different had the trial court asked the statutory questions as the prosecutor asked the potential jurors whether they were acquainted with the defendant or the victim, and if so, whether they could remain impartial. Since the potential jurors indicated no bias and defendant did not contend that any juror was, in fact, biased or prejudiced, defendant failed to show ineffective assistance of trial counsel. Burnette v. State, 291 Ga. App. 504, 662 S.E.2d 272, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 550 (2008), overruled in part, McClure v. State, 306 Ga. 856, 834 S.E.2d 96, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 643 (2019).

Failure to challenge juror for cause. — Defendant did not overcome the strong presumption that trial counsel's failure to seek a juror's removal for cause constituted reasonable professional assistance because the defendant did not question trial counsel at the motion for a new trial hearing about counsel's decision-making with regard to this issue, and the trial transcript showed that the juror did not meet the qualification for dismissal for cause. Higginbotham v. State, 287 Ga. 187, 695 S.E.2d 210, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 405 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to move to strike three prospective jurors for cause, all of whom said the jurors had strong feelings about individuals involved in the sale of illegal drugs, because the jurors all indicated the jurors could try to judge the case based upon the court's instructions and the evidence. Ellis v. State, 292 Ga. 276, 736 S.E.2d 412, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 17 (2013).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to move to strike for cause a former FBI agent, who had spent nine years assigned to a bank robbery squad and had been a victim in a pending armed robbery prosecution for which the district attorney prosecuting the defendant was responsible, as the prospective juror said that the prospective juror could be fair and impartial. Ellis v. State, 292 Ga. 276, 736 S.E.2d 412, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 17 (2013).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to persuade the trial court to strike for cause a prospective juror who was a corrections officer at a federal penitentiary and who was not a sworn police officer with arrest powers because no evidence was ever produced, either at trial, or during the hearing on the motion for new trial, that the prospective juror could have been struck for cause. Allen v. State, 296 Ga. 785, 770 S.E.2d 824, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 191 (2015).

Counsel's representation of county in another case's jury composition challenge. — Defendant would be entitled to have conviction overturned on ground of ineffective assistance of counsel upon proof that defense counsel, who had not raised a question as to the grand jury's composition, was actively involved in county's defense to constitutional challenge of grand jury composition in another case. Westbrook v. Zant, 704 F.2d 1487, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 27982 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled in part, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22736 (11th Cir. 1986).

Allowing sentencing sheet to go to jury room. — Any error by counsel in allowing the sentencing sheet for similar transaction evidence to go out with the jury was harmless as the evidence of guilt was overwhelming. Gregory v. State, 297 Ga. App. 245, 676 S.E.2d 856, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 413 (2009).

Failure to ensure defendant's presence at an in-chamber hearing. — With regard to a defendant's conviction for malice murder, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a new trial based on a claim that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object to a juror remaining on the panel after a brief encounter with one of the state's witnesses and the failure to insist that defendant be allowed to personally participate in the in-chambers hearing on the issue. The decision to allow the juror to remain on the panel was a reasonable tactical decision made after a hearing was held on the issue and no harm was established by the defendant not being present during the in-chambers hearing on the issue as a result of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt. Peterson v. State, 284 Ga. 275, 663 S.E.2d 164, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 522 (2008).

Effective assistance requires pre-trial investigation. — It is beyond dispute that effective assistance of counsel requires some degree of pretrial investigation. McCleskey v. Zant, 580 F. Supp. 338, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19860 (N.D. Ga. 1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 753 F.2d 877, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28073 (11th Cir. 1985).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for alleged failure to conduct pretrial investigation which was the result of reasoned tactical decisions because counsel did visit the scene of the crime, spoke with defendant and the defendant's family, gained limited access to defendant's file, viewed the autopsy report, and received scientific reports. Solomon v. Kemp, 735 F.2d 395, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 21632 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1181, 105 S. Ct. 940, 83 L. Ed. 2d 952, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 2986 (1985).

The failure of defense counsel to prepare and investigate an insanity defense was, at best, a failure to perform investigatory duties rather than a fundamental breakdown of the adversarial process such that prejudice would be presumed, as the only evidence produced was that the defendant informed the trial attorneys that a psychiatrist who had cared for the defendant had told the defendant that the defendant was on the verge of insanity and that the defendant became temporarily insane when the defendant consumed alcohol. Chadwick v. Green, 740 F.2d 897, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 19019 (11th Cir. 1984).

Defendant's counsel did not render ineffective assistance for a failure to interview two witnesses in defendant's criminal trial, as defendant submitted no evidence to show how any information possessed by those witnesses would have helped in the defense. Andrews v. State, 275 Ga. App. 426, 620 S.E.2d 629, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 991 (2005).

Scope of counsel's duty to investigate should be narrowly circumscribed by the specific facts revealed to counsel by the client. House v. Balkcom, 562 F. Supp. 1111, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17753 (N.D. Ga. 1983), rev'd, 725 F.2d 608, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25536 (11th Cir. 1984).

Counsel must investigate plausible defenses. — The failure to conduct a reasonably substantial investigation into a defendant's one plausible line of defense is not a permissible trial strategy. United States v. Badolato, 701 F.2d 915, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 29181 (11th Cir. 1983).

Counsel fully investigated case. — Defendant failed to meet the defendant's burden of proving deficient performance on the ground that defendant's trial counsel failed to investigate an additional suspect because counsel testified that counsel investigated every person who could have been connected to the case and that counsel also investigated relevant phone records and police files that could have revealed other suspects in the victim's murder; despite counsel's efforts, counsel was unable to connect any additional suspect to the shooting. Jennings v. State, 288 Ga. 120, 702 S.E.2d 151, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 816 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to adequately investigate the case, consult with the defendant, or prepare for trial because counsel met with the defendant several times prior to and during trial, shared with the defendant the state's discovery materials and explained to the defendant the proposed trial strategy, and, in coordination with a private investigator, interviewed witnesses, visited the crime scene, and otherwise investigated the case; furthermore, the defendant failed to establish prejudice as the defendant did not proffer any specific evidence that trial counsel would have uncovered or alternative strategies counsel would have pursued had counsel investigated more thoroughly. Babbage v. State, 296 Ga. 364, 768 S.E.2d 461, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 2 (2015).

Failure to research or investigate. — As evidence showed that a doctor asked defense counsel about the effect of a nolo plea to sexual battery on the doctor's future participation in federal health care programs, and that counsel responded with affirmative misrepresentations, which were caused by counsel's failure to perform basic research, the habeas court properly allowed the doctor to withdraw the doctor's plea. State v. Patel, 280 Ga. 181, 626 S.E.2d 121, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 76 (2006).

Defendant was not entitled to a new trial based on counsel's ineffectiveness because defendant gave counsel no information (in support of defendant's self-defense claim) to conduct an investigation of the victims' alleged prior violent acts. Moreno-Rivera v. State, 291 Ga. 336, 729 S.E.2d 366, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 644 (2012).

Defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because the defendant offered no evidence to prove that if counsel had conducted more investigation counsel would have discovered evidence favorable to the defense. Zamora v. State, 291 Ga. 512, 731 S.E.2d 658, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 688 (2012).

Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to investigate the possibility that a variety of different bullet fragments and shell casings were habitually found at the stretch of the road where the shooting took place because it was a reasonable strategic decision, as counsel consistently argued that the shooters fired two guns and that defendant and defendant's brother were not involved and counsel testified that arguing that some other, unknown party was the shooter based on shell casings found along the road would be a last resort. Adams v. State, 318 Ga. 105, 897 S.E.2d 396, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 8 (2024).

Failure to adequately research law. — Where prior cases supported a defense that defendant's consent to a blood test allowed the state to use the sample only to prosecute the offense of driving with a controlled substance in the defendant's urine, not for a possession charge, counsel was ineffective in not raising that issue. Turpin v. Helmecci, 271 Ga. 224, 518 S.E.2d 887, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 580 (1999).

Failure to request preliminary hearing. — The defendant was not entitled to the reversal of the defendant's conviction based on the defendant's trial counsel's failure to request a preliminary hearing since it could not be determined, without trial counsel's testimony, whether the decision was a trial tactic. McClarity v. State, 234 Ga. App. 348, 506 S.E.2d 392, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1158 (1998), cert. denied, No. S99C0076, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 65 (Ga. Jan. 15, 1999).

Criminal Procedure Discovery Act constitutional. — Reciprocal discovery provisions of the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act (O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq.) do not violate the right to effective representation of counsel by denying defendant the benefit of counsel's judgment of whether and when to reveal aspects of defendant's case to the state. State v. Lucious, 271 Ga. 361, 518 S.E.2d 677, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 587 (1999).

Discovery requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4 relating to the presentence hearing did not violate a defendant's right to effective assistance of counsel; counsel may freely investigate for mitigating evidence, knowing that the identity of any potentially harmful witness resulting from that investigation need only be produced to the state in reciprocal discovery should the defense decide to call that witness at the presentence hearing. Muhammad v. State, 282 Ga. 247, 647 S.E.2d 560, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 489 (2007).

It is reasonable to expect a defendant's attorney to conduct an investigation to determine the facts upon which all future decisions will be made, and this is especially true where the defendant, because of trauma, has no memory of the event; under such a circumstance, a lawyer is duty-bound to investigate so that the lawyer can properly advise a client. Heath v. State, 268 Ga. App. 235, 601 S.E.2d 758, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 893 (2004).

Failure regarding discovery. — The defendant was not entitled to the reversal of the defendant's conviction based on the defendant's trial counsel's failure to make any discovery motions since, absent trial counsel testimony to the contrary, such choice was presumed to be strategic.

McClarity v. State, 234 Ga. App. 348, 506 S.E.2d 392, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1158 (1998), cert. denied, No. S99C0076, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 65 (Ga. Jan. 15, 1999).

The defendant was not entitled to the reversal of the defendant's conviction based on the defendant's trial counsel's failure to request informal discovery where the record showed that counsel asked the state's attorney several questions about the file and since, absent trial counsel's testimony, the court could not further evaluate the issue. McClarity v. State, 234 Ga. App. 348, 506 S.E.2d 392, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1158 (1998), cert. denied, No. S99C0076, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 65 (Ga. Jan. 15, 1999).

In a defendant's malice murder trial, a failure by the defendant's trial counsel to comply with reciprocal discovery procedures which resulted in a trial court ruling precluding the defendant from impeaching a witness by introducing certified copies of the felony convictions of the witness did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel; although the failure had to be considered deficient performance, it produced no prejudice because evidence of the criminal history of the witness was introduced by other means and the jury was instructed on the law of impeachment. Green v. State, 281 Ga. 322, 638 S.E.2d 288, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 992 (2006).

Time spent with client. — Defendant failed to establish that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to confer meaningfully with the defendant because the defendant did not specifically describe how additional communications with counsel could have changed the outcome of the trial; there exists no magic amount of time which counsel must spend in actual conference with a client. Glass v. State, 289 Ga. 542, 712 S.E.2d 851, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 557 (2011).

Failure to investigate lines of defense can support an ineffective assistance of counsel claim. Collins v. Francis, 728 F.2d 1322, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 24501 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 963, 105 S. Ct. 361, 83 L. Ed. 2d 297, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 392 (1984).

Counsel has rendered effective assistance even though counsel decided not to pursue a particular line of defense without substantial investigation, so long as the decision was reasonable under the circumstances. Baines v. State, 201 Ga. App. 354, 411 S.E.2d 95, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1341 (1991).

Defendant's argument that defense counsel was ineffective on general grounds was not supported by citations to the record, and it was not the appellate court's duty to cull the record in search of error; defendant's argument that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to investigate the fingerprint evidence and failing to obtain an independent fingerprint expert was rejected for failure to show harm. Gary v. State, 259 Ga. App. 136, 575 S.E.2d 903, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 11 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C0893, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 515 (Ga. May 5, 2003).

Failure to pursue sleepwalking defense. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to assert a sleepwalking defense since the decision was based on counsel's belief that the jury was more likely to believe a defense based on the accidental discharge of a defective weapon. Smith v. State, 292 Ga. 620, 740 S.E.2d 158, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 258 (2013).

Failure to obtain evidence. — Since both the defendant and the ex-wife testified that they had a phone conversation on the day of the stalking and burglary incident, but disagreed as to what was said in the conversation, and the defendant's cell phone records would not have reflected the substance of the conversation, the admission of the records would have had no impact on the issue of credibility, and the failure of defense counsel to obtain the phone records did not amount to ineffective assistance. Bray v. State, 294 Ga. App. 562, 669 S.E.2d 509, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1234 (2008).

Defendant failed to show that he was prejudiced by trial counsel's failure to obtain certification of medical records from the time of his incarceration and preventing their admission because defendant did not admit the records at the motion for new trial stage and he did not point to anything contained in the records that would have been useful to him that the jury did not hear at trial, as two doctors testified about the contents of the records.

King v. State, 316 Ga. 611, 889 S.E.2d 851, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 130 (2023).

Failure to introduce evidence. — Although the defendant claimed that the defense attorney failed to introduce evidence that would have allowed the jury to understand the reasonable nature of the defendant's allegedly fearful state of mind with regard to the shooting victim, the defendant's attorney was able to elicit testimony from the defendant about the defendant's belief that the victim was dangerous. Therefore, the defendant did not prevail on the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim because the defendant could not show that a reasonable probability existed that, but for counsel's errors in allegedly failing to introduce the evidence, the outcome at trial would have been more favorable. Render v. State, 288 Ga. 420, 704 S.E.2d 767, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 9 (2011).

Failure to move for change of venue. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to move for a change of venue where the record showed that the decision was based on sound trial strategy and, even if the parties had agreed to change venue to a particular county, the trial court would have determined venue. Hammond v. State, 264 Ga. 879, 452 S.E.2d 745, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 23, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 829, 116 S. Ct. 100, 133 L. Ed. 2d 54, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 5611 (1995).

An alleged failure of a defendant's trial counsel to present evidence in support of a motion for a change of venue in defendant's prosecution for malice murder did not demonstrate that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel; the defendant presented no evidence post-trial to suggest that the trial's setting was inherently prejudicial or that the jury selection process showed actual prejudice to a degree that rendered a fair trial impossible, and since a complete failure to make a motion for change of venue would not have constituted ineffective assistance of counsel under those circumstances, the failure to support the motion adequately likewise did not show ineffectiveness under those circumstances. Green v. State, 281 Ga. 322, 638 S.E.2d 288, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 992 (2006).

Counsel's failure to object to appointed judge. — Defendant's claim that an order appointing a senior judge to preside over defendant's trial was insufficient under O.C.G.A. § 15-1-9.2(b) was not timely filed given it was filed after the motion for a new trial. Furthermore, counsel's failure to object to the appointment of the judge did not deny defendant effective assistance of counsel. Strozier v. State, 277 Ga. 78, 586 S.E.2d 309, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 718 (2003).

Failure to object to appointment of magistrate. — Defendant failed to meet the burden of establishing that defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel for trial counsel's failure to object to the alleged improper appointment of a chief magistrate who presided over the trial, sitting by designation following a request for judicial assistance by the superior court judge assigned to the case, since defendant failed to show that defendant was denied a fair trial by virtue of the appointment. Further, trial counsel testified at defendant's hearing on a motion for a new trial that trial counsel thought it would benefit defendant to have the particular magistrate preside over the trial rather than a superior court judge, which established that the failure to object to the appointment was a matter of trial strategy or tactics, which was not a basis for an ineffective assistance of counsel claim. Mazza v. State, 292 Ga. App. 168, 664 S.E.2d 548, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 723 (2008).

Failure to object to compliance with rules. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the state's failure to comply with Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 31.1 and 31.3 as the detective's testimony regarding the fact that the defendant, an accomplice, and the victim were suspected of murdering the victim's husband, was admissible as relevant to the defendant's motive to kill the victim. Goodman v. State, 293 Ga. 80, 742 S.E.2d 719, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 503 (2013).

Failure to object to pretrial showup. — Although it may have been better practice to move to exclude evidence regarding the pretrial showup and to object to the in-court identification, since neither strategy would have changed the result, neither omission may be deemed conclusive evidence of ineffectiveness on the part of counsel. Holbrook v. State, 209 Ga. App. 301, 433 S.E.2d 616, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 850 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1545, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 912 (Ga. Oct. 5, 1993).

Failure to object to identification of defendant. — Defendant failed to show that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to object to an in-court identification of the defendant by the aggravated assault victim because the defendant neither asked trial counsel why no objection was made to the in-court identification nor made any showing that the identification would have been suppressed had an objection been made; the defendant made no affirmative showing that the purported deficiency in counsel's representation was indicative of ineffectiveness as opposed to being an example of a conscious, deliberate, and reasonable trial strategy. Newsome v. State, 288 Ga. 647, 706 S.E.2d 436, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 155 (2011).

Failure to object to photographs. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to two photographs of the defendant holding a gun, which the defendant had posted on social media, because trial counsel thoroughly attacked the photographs on cross-examination, pointing to their age and the fact that the firearms in the pictures could not be linked to the weapon used to kill the first victim; and the defendant could not show that, had counsel objected, the photographs would have been excluded. Sullivan v. State, 301 Ga. 37, 799 S.E.2d 163, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 244 (2017).

Defendant failed to show prejudice due to trial counsel's failure to object to the introduction of photographs taken while a search warrant was executed on defendant's home because the probative value of the photographs, which showed the location of some of the evidence ultimately linked to the crimes charged, was not substantially outweighed by any unfair prejudice attributable to the other guns and ammunition depicted in the photographs, given that evidence that defendant possessed guns and ammunition did not impute to defendant generally bad character. Adams v. State, 318 Ga. 105, 897 S.E.2d 396, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 8 (2024).

Failure to object to police officer's testimony. — Trial counsel was not deficient for failing to object to police officers' testimony regarding the defendant's arrest because there could have been no prejudice to the defendant by the testimony; there was ample and undisputed evidence that the defendant had consumed a substantial amount of alcohol prior to the shooting and the defendant's flight from the crime scene. Nations v. State, 290 Ga. 39, 717 S.E.2d 634, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 866 (2011).

Failure to object to testimony of GBI agent. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the testimony of a GBI Agent because counsel made a strategic decision not to object to the testimony, and that strategy was reasonable. Wheeler v. State, 290 Ga. 817, 725 S.E.2d 580, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 333 (2012).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the victim's brother's testimony on the ground that the state failed to put the brother on the witness list as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-16-3 because the defendant failed to show that if counsel had objected the outcome of the trial would have been different; the defendant offered no evidence at the motion for new trial hearing to show how the defendant could have benefitted from a continuance before the brother was permitted to testify; or that the state acted in bad faith in leaving the brother off the witness list. Charleston v. State, 292 Ga. 678, 743 S.E.2d 1, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 300 (2013).

Failure to object to charge on transferred intent. — Trial counsel performed deficiently by failing to object to the giving of a charge on transferred intent and the prosecutor's closing argument addressing the inapplicable principles of transferred intent because the charge was not adjusted to the evidence since there was no evidence that the defendant was intending to shoot any other person when the defendant shot the victim so as to bring the case within the typical "innocent bystander" scenario in which the doctrine of transferred intent was applied; however, in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt, it was highly probable that the charge did not contribute to the verdict, and the defendant failed to show the requisite prejudice in that there was no reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different had trial counsel objected to the prosecutor's argument and the trial court's charge. Boatright v. State, 289 Ga. 597, 713 S.E.2d 829, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 511 (2011).

Failure to contest validity of indictment. — Defendant was not prejudiced by the failure of the defendant's trial counsel to contest the validity of an indictment, where the indictment was not void as a matter of law. Hammock v. State, 201 Ga. App. 614, 411 S.E.2d 743, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1520 (1991), cert. denied, No. S92C0208, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 1021 (Ga. Dec. 4, 1991).

Defendant's counsel provided ineffective assistance under U.S. Const., amend. 6 because the counsel failed to file a timely demurrer to the burglary count of an indictment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1, which was fatally defective because it did not specify an underlying felony, and the requirement could not be imputed because there was no specific incorporation by reference and this failure contributed to defendant's conviction on a void count. Polk v. State, 275 Ga. App. 467, 620 S.E.2d 857, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 999 (2005).

Defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the indictment as a whole because it was allegedly not received in open court, as there was no evidence that the indictment had not been returned in open court, it bore the signature of the grand jury foreperson, and the minutes of the criminal court docket showed that the indictment was filed. Polk v. State, 275 Ga. App. 467, 620 S.E.2d 857, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 999 (2005).

Because the record showed that the victim could not recall the exact dates when the events alleged in the indictment occurred, the state was not able to identify a specific date for the offenses, and the defendant offered no other evidence that the indictment was imperfect in form or substance or that the defendant's ability to present a defense was impaired, the defendant failed to establish that a special demurrer would have been successful or that defense counsel's failure to file such pleading before trial affected the outcome of the proceedings; therefore, the defendant's ineffective assistance claim lacked merit. Berman v. State, 279 Ga. App. 867, 632 S.E.2d 757, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 707 (2006).

Defense counsel's performance was deficient in failing to challenge the defendant's charge of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon on the basis that the indictment erroneously alleged that the crime was committed on a date after the indictment was issued; since this was the second time the defendant had been indicted for that offense, if trial counsel had timely challenged that count, any future prosecution for that crime would have been barred, and thus prejudice to the defendant was shown. Langlands v. State, 280 Ga. 799, 633 S.E.2d 537, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 490 (2006), modified in part, 282 Ga. 103, 646 S.E.2d 253, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 420 (2007).

Failure to argue double jeopardy claim. — Counsel did not err in failing to argue a frivolous double jeopardy claim. Jackson v. United States, 976 F.2d 679, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 28484 (11th Cir. 1992).

Failure to raise claim concerning effective date of amendment. — Failure to argue that amendments requiring five years of additional prison time were not in effect when defendant committed the crime did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel since the amendments took effect on the enactment date for the entire act, over three years earlier. Jackson v. United States, 976 F.2d 679, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 28484 (11th Cir. 1992).

Failure of counsel to request a continuance. — It obviously is not ineffective for counsel to fail to request a continuance for delay only. Chandler v. State, 204 Ga. App. 512, 419 S.E.2d 751, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 893 (1992).

The defendant was not entitled to the reversal of a conviction based on trial counsel's failure to request a continuance after learning on the morning of trial that a videotape of the incident at issue would be introduced since such choice was presumed to be strategic. McClarity v. State, 234 Ga. App. 348, 506 S.E.2d 392, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1158 (1998), cert. denied, No. S99C0076, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 65 (Ga. Jan. 15, 1999).

Defendant failed to show that the counsel rendered ineffective assistance, in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6, after the counsel failed to request a continuance upon learning the identity of a confidential informant who had conducted controlled drug buys on the first day of defendant's criminal trial, as defendant failed to show prejudice by the mere speculation as to what might have been uncovered by further investigation of the informant. Brown v. State, 274 Ga. App. 302, 617 S.E.2d 227, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 726 (2005), cert. denied, No. S05C1902, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 734 (Ga. Oct. 24, 2005).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a continuance to review evidence and have the evidence tested by the defendant's own expert because the defendant presented no evidence at the motion for new trial hearing to support the defendant's bald assertion that there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the proceeding would have been different had counsel sought a continuance or independent expert testing; even assuming that the defendant could properly raise a claim of ineffectiveness against counsel, the trial court did not err in denying the motion for new trial on that ground. Walker v. State, 288 Ga. 174, 702 S.E.2d 415, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 852 (2010).

Decision by trial counsel not to move for a continuance after an alibi witness did not appear and could not be located to testify on the defendant's behalf did not show the counsel's ineffectiveness because trial counsel testified that the alibi witness indicated by telephone that the witness did not want to testify and that defense counsel would not like what the witness had to say if counsel forced the witness to testify, and the trial court was authorized to credit counsel's testimony regarding the alibi witness; because trial counsel's investigation revealed that the supposed alibi witness was reluctant, unfavorable, and possibly prepared to commit perjury, the decision not to call such a witness was a reasonable exercise of professional judgment, and the tactical decision to proceed without the alibi witness's testimony was made after consultation with the defendant, who confirmed on the record that counsel agreed with the decision not to request a continuance. Reeves v. State, 288 Ga. 545, 705 S.E.2d 159, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 101 (2011).

Failure to request a continuance. — Trial court did not err when the court denied the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim because counsel testified that counsel attempted to produce evidence of specific acts of violence by the victim against third persons but because of lack of time was not able to do so; counsel further testified that counsel did not strenuously pursue a continuance for more time to gather such evidence because of the age of the case and because counsel believed such motion for continuance would be unsuccessful. Rafi v. State, 289 Ga. 716, 715 S.E.2d 113, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 674 (2011).

Failure to request bifurcated trial. — Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 for failure to request a bifurcated trial on felony murder in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-1 and on possession of a firearm by a convicted felon in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-11-131; because the possession count was a predicate offense for the felony murder count, the prior conviction that was admitted into evidence was relevant to the felony murder count, and it was not necessary to sever the possession count. Wells v. State, 281 Ga. 253, 637 S.E.2d 8, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 823 (2006).

Trial counsel's failure to move to have the charge of possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony tried separately did not amount to ineffective assistance as the possession charge was an underlying felony for the felony murder counts and, therefore, bifurcation was not authorized. Leonard v. State, 292 Ga. 214, 735 S.E.2d 767, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 968 (2012).

Failure to pursue insanity defense. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to pursue an insanity defense as: (1) nothing in the hospital's evaluation of defendant supported an insanity defense; (2) defendant never claimed that defendant was insane, only that defendant could not remember; (3) the sentencing court stated that defendant was evaluated twice, and that the reports contained no indication that defendant did not have the capacity to distinguish between right and wrong at the time of the crimes; (4) defendant failed to present evidence at defendant's new trial hearing regarding defendant's mental capacity that would support the feasibility of an insanity defense; and (5) defendant did not show that counsel unreasonably failed to inquire into defendant's mental state or that there was a likelihood that such an evaluation would have affected the outcome of the trial. Osterhout v. State, 266 Ga. App. 319, 596 S.E.2d 766, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 363 (2004).

Because: (1) the record did not demonstrate that the defendant's sanity or competency was or should have been a significant issue at trial; and (2) the defendant failed to support an assertion a competency should have been raised, the defendant failed to prove the prejudice prong of an ineffective assistance of counsel claim due to counsel's failure to request an independent psychiatric examination. Thus, a new trial on this ground was unwarranted. Jennings v. State, 282 Ga. 679, 653 S.E.2d 17, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 832 (2007).

Defendant failed to show that the counsel was ineffective in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6 for a failure to pursue a request for a psychological examination, an insanity defense under O.C.G.A. § 16-3-2, and failure to assert that defendant was not competent to stand trial under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130 in a criminal trial arising from multiple offenses, including murder, as there was nothing in the defendant's psychological history or in counsels' interactions with the defendant which suggested that there was a problem with the defendant's sanity or competency. Redwine v. State, 280 Ga. 58, 623 S.E.2d 485, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 863 (2005).

Defendant was not erroneously denied a new trial on grounds that trial counsel was ineffective, as the evidence, via trial counsel's testimony, showed that: (1) counsel, after gathering the defendant's medical history and interviewing the defendant's medical provider, did not believe the defendant was insane; and (2) counsel, after consulting with the defendant and gaining an approval, made a strategic decision not to pursue a mental health defense, opting instead to pursue a claim of self-defense. Radford v. State, 281 Ga. 303, 637 S.E.2d 712, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 969 (2006).

Trial counsel's strategic decisions in representing the defendant did not amount to ineffectiveness, as: (1) the defendant's own self-serving general statements regarding a purported psychological condition at the time of the offense were insufficient to substantiate any claim of a mental condition which would have provided a possible defense; (2) counsel's determination to rely exclusively on the prior difficulties between the defendant and the victim proved no deficiency; and (3) no ineffectiveness resulted by counsel's failure to object to the prosecutor's alleged improper remarks during closing argument. Nichols v. State, 281 Ga. 483, 640 S.E.2d 40, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 18 (2007).

Failure to request competency hearing. — Habeas court correctly concluded that ineffective assistance of trial counsel could not be used to excuse the procedural default of the petitioner's claim that the petitioner was mentally incompetent during trial because the information that trial counsel then had available to them, including the information that trial counsel unreasonably failed to obtain, would not have led constitutionally effective counsel to pursue a claim of incompetence to stand trial and would not be reasonably probable to have resulted in a finding that the petitioner was incompetent had such a plea been pursued; the petitioner failed to prove that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance regarding the petitioner's competence to stand trial because trial counsel withdrew the petitioner's plea of incompetence only after satisfying themselves that counsel was able to communicate effectively with the petitioner, and the trial court had an extensive opportunity to observe the petitioner in pre-trial and trial proceedings and to interact directly with the petitioner, and the court did not see sufficient indications of incompetence to pursue further evaluation. Perkins v. Hall, 288 Ga. 810, 708 S.E.2d 335, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 255 (2011), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Failure to obtain psychological evaluation of defendant. — With regard to a defendant's conviction for statutory rape and two counts of child molestation involving a stepchild, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim as a result of failure to have the defendant evaluated for mental illness and incompetence before trial or before sentencing was rejected because defense counsel testified at the defendant's motion for a new trial hearing that: (1) defense counsel did not know of the defendant's alleged prior history of psychiatric problems; (2) the defendant appeared to understand the communications that defense counsel had with the defendant; and (3) defense counsel did not explore the need for a psychological evaluation of the defendant because defense counsel did not see it as an issue. Haygood v. State, 289 Ga. App. 187, 656 S.E.2d 541, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 42 (2008).

Defendant's trial counsel performed deficiently in not seeking expert assistance in evaluating the defendant's mental condition at the time of the shooting and at the time of trial because the defendant was hospitalized in 1996 after stabbing the same man that the defendant murdered; and, in 1996, the defendant reported hearing a voice telling the defendant to kill for which the defendant received antipsychotic medication; however, counsel's deficient performance was not prejudicial as the defendant did not show that the jury would have returned a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity because the defendant did not receive any diagnosis of or treatment for mental illness for more than a decade before the current crimes. Scott v. State, 301 Ga. 573, 802 S.E.2d 211, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 544 (2017).

Failure to adequately prepare witnesses. — Defendant was sentenced to death for murder. Defense counsel was not ineffective in failing to properly prepare mitigation witnesses for their testimony as it was reasonable for counsel not to rehearse the witnesses' testimony with them as counsel reasonably chose not to overly prepare them so that their testimony would come across as sincere. Whatley v. Terry, 284 Ga. 555, 668 S.E.2d 651, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 824 (2008), cert. denied, 556 U.S. 1248, 129 S. Ct. 2409, 173 L. Ed. 2d 1316, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 3757 (2009).

Failure to contact alibi witnesses. — Defense counsel's failure to contact alibi witnesses and to object to illegally obtained evidence was prejudicial, because the evidence against the defendant was not overwhelming and a reasonable probability existed that the presence of the alibi witnesses would have affected the result. Richardson v. State, 189 Ga. App. 113, 375 S.E.2d 59, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 1309 (1988).

Defendant's representation was not ineffective for failure to interview possible alibi witnesses or to call them to testify at trial where the record indicated that counsel did investigate the possibility of an alibi defense and that, under the circumstances, counsel made a tactical decision that an alibi defense would not be feasible. McCoy v. Newsome, 953 F.2d 1252, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 1108 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 504 U.S. 944, 112 S. Ct. 2283, 119 L. Ed. 2d 208, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 3196 (1992).

Court's finding that defendant received effective assistance of counsel was not clearly erroneous where defendant did not overcome the presumption that counsel's failure to call alibi witness was made in the exercise of reasonable professional judgment. Jackson v. State, 209 Ga. App. 217, 433 S.E.2d 655, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 810 (1993).

Trial counsel's performance was not constitutionally flawed because counsel could not be ineffective for failing to interview and call a potential alibi witness of whom counsel was not informed, and the trial court was authorized to credit counsel's testimony regarding the alibi witnesses whose names counsel was given; the defendant did not show that the testimony of the alibi witnesses would have been relevant and favorable because neither alleged alibi witness testified at the hearing on the motion for new trial. McIlwain v. State, 287 Ga. 115, 694 S.E.2d 657, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 318 (2010), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Failure to present alibi witnesses. — Although defendant discussed potential alibi witnesses with the attorney and attempted to contact and interview those witnesses, none of the witnesses were able to provide defendant with an alibi at the time of a robbery, and accordingly, counsel made a tactical decision not to call any witnesses on defendant's behalf; such was not ineffective assistance. Todd v. State, 275 Ga. App. 459, 620 S.E.2d 666, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 992 (2005).

Defendant failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel based on counsel's failure to present an alibi witness because counsel testified that counsel thought the jury would believe that the alibi witness, the defendant's sibling, was lying for the defendant, and because counsel did not call the sibling in order to preserve the right to final closing argument. Walker v. State, 280 Ga. App. 457, 634 S.E.2d 93, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 743 (2006), cert. denied, No. S06C2003, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 799 (Ga. Oct. 2, 2006).

In a malice murder prosecution, as the defendant did not give defense counsel the correct phone number for an alleged alibi witness until trial was underway, and the witness was out of state and counsel was unable to convince the witness to appear voluntarily, counsel did not provide ineffective assistance. Marshall v. State, 285 Ga. 351, 676 S.E.2d 201, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 148 (2009).

Right to Counsel (Cont'd)*5. Duties and Effectiveness of Counsel (Cont'd)*Failure to present alibi evidence. —

Defendant failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel based on defense counsel's strategy in not presenting evidence that the defendant was at the defendant's mother's home on the night of the crime as an alibi defense because counsel testified that although the defendant offered multiple alibi defenses, defendant did not tell counsel that the defendant was at the mother's home on the night of the murder, that counsel did not consider the defendant's mother a good source of defense evidence because the mother's extensive history of substance abuse presented a major obstacle to the mother's credibility, and that counsel believed that the defendant's fiancé was not credible because the fiancé had previously posed as a reporter conducting interviews about the murder and counsel believed there was a high probability of that fact damaging the defendant's defense; counsel also testified that counsel did not want to introduce any evidence in order to preserve the right to opening and closing argument, which was a valid trial strategy. Phillips v. State, 280 Ga. 728, 632 S.E.2d 131, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 471 (2006).

Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel, and claims that the counsel was ineffective by failing to: (1) offer testimony of certain alibi witnesses; (2) adequately consult with the defendant prior to trial; and (3) move to sever the trial from that of the codefendants were rejected, given that the defendant never provided counsel with any alibi witnesses, a claim that counsel failed to consult with the defendant was unfounded, and counsel's strategy to have the codefendants tried together was sound. Adkins v. State, 280 Ga. 761, 632 S.E.2d 650, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 477 (2006).

Strategy not to call eyewitness. —

Because the defendant's trial counsel testified that counsel did not call an eyewitness to the incident that led to the charges that the defendant committed aggravated assault of a peace officer and four counts of felony obstruction of an officer because interviews with the eyewitness revealed evidence that would have been detrimental to the defendant's claim that the defendant acted in self-defense, the omission of this testimony did not constitute ineffective trial strategy. Carver v. State, 203 Ga. App. 197, 416 S.E.2d 810, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 469 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0852, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 380 (Ga. Apr. 30, 1992).

No ineffective counsel through examination of witnesses. — Defense counsel was not ineffective in asking the codefendant's father if the father told the defendant to hide a gun because defense counsel testified that the testimony was used to shift responsibility to the codefendant; counsel's examination of the father was cumulative of prior testimony elicited by the prosecutor. Chance v. State, 291 Ga. 241, 728 S.E.2d 635, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 580 (2012).

Failure to impeach witness. — Under the First Offender Act, O.C.G.A. § 42-8-60 et seq., the trial court properly prohibited a defendant from impeaching a witness with a forgery offense. The defendant cited no authority in support of the argument that this violated the defendant's rights under the confrontation clause of the Sixth Amendment, and the court had held that impeachment to show a general lack of trustworthiness based on a prior criminal conviction was not guaranteed by the confrontation clause. Butler v. State, 285 Ga. 518, 678 S.E.2d 92, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 296 (2009).

Trial court did not err in finding that ineffective assistance of counsel had not been proven when trial counsel failed to impeach a witness with evidence of charges pending against the witness because the defendant failed to establish that the outcome of the defendant's trial would have been different had the witness been impeached; there were eyewitness identifications of defendant as the shooter, evidence that defendant had been looking for the victim and believed the victim had robbed the defendant, and evidence that the defendant had been shot. Allen v. State, 286 Ga. 392, 687 S.E.2d 799, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 82 (2010).

Defendant failed to establish that the defendant received ineffective assistance of trial counsel due to counsel's failure to provide the state with written notice of the defendant's intent to use evidence of a witness's prior conviction for impeachment purposes pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-6-609) because even if the conviction had been admitted and the jury had disregarded the witness's testimony, there remained evidence sufficient to convict the defendant; the witness's trial testimony conflicted with the witness's prior statements, and the witness admitted on the stand being a crack dealer. Lanier v. State, 288 Ga. 109, 702 S.E.2d 141, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 815 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to highlight the inconsistencies between a prior victim's trial testimony and the victim's account of a shooting as reported to police immediately after the victim was shot because although trial counsel testified that counsel recalled that the account in the police report was inconsistent with the victim's trial testimony, appellate counsel never inquired as to why trial counsel chose not to use the police report to impeach the state's pre-trial proffer or the victim's trial testimony; in the absence of any evidence on the issue, it was presumed that trial counsel made a reasonable strategic decision not to pursue that mode of impeachment. Johnson v. State, 289 Ga. 22, 709 S.E.2d 217, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 261 (2011).

Failure to present cumulative evidence. — Although trial counsel could have further impeached codefendants with certified copies of their felony convictions, any such deficiency in counsel's performance could not have prejudiced defendant because the jury was already aware of the disreputable character of these witnesses by virtue of their own testimony on the stand. Ross v. State, 231 Ga. App. 793, 499 S.E.2d 642, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 288 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1171, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 789 (Ga. Sept. 8, 1998).

Failure to introduce medical evidence. — Defendant did not receive effective assistance of counsel when defendant provided counsel medical records showing that defendant suffered from "confusional migraines," which could render defendant unable to form the requisite criminal intent, but counsel did not investigate the condition, nor was evidence of it, which was defendant's only defense, offered, and defendant was prejudiced because other evidence showed defendant was suffering from this condition at the time of defendant's alleged crime. Guzman v. State, 260 Ga. App. 689, 580 S.E.2d 654, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 457 (2003).

Trial court properly rejected the defendant's claim that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to introduce into evidence two medical evaluation documents, which the defendant alleged would have contradicted statements witnesses gave to the police, because it was mere speculation that the witnesses' statements were inconsistent with the medical reports; it was impossible for the defendant to show there was a reasonable probability the results of the proceedings would have been different but for counsel's alleged error. McClarín v. State, 289 Ga. 180, 710 S.E.2d 120, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 288 (2011), cert. denied, 565 U.S. 1117, 132 S. Ct. 1004, 181 L. Ed. 2d 745, 2012 U.S. LEXIS 200 (2012).

Lab analyst not available to testify.

— Testimony of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation analyst relating the factual assertions in an absent lab analyst's report violated the confrontation clause because the defendant had no opportunity to cross-examine the analyst who performed the testing before or at trial. Watkins v. State, 320 Ga. 862, 912 S.E.2d 574, 2025 Ga. LEXIS 32 (2025).

Failure to obtain service of diabetes expert. — See Collier v. Turpin, 177 F.3d 1184, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 5900 (11th Cir. 1999).

Counsel were not ineffective in failing to take photographs to memorialize the bruises defendant contends he received at the hands of the police, where the evidence shows that if photographs had been taken, they would not have materially assisted the judge and the jury in determining the voluntariness of his confession, since police photographs showed only insignificant marks. House v. Balkcom, 562 F. Supp. 1111, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17753 (N.D. Ga. 1983), rev'd, 725 F.2d 608, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25536 (11th Cir. 1984).

Failure to hire polygrapher. — Defendant failed to establish a claim that defense counsel was ineffective based on the fact that defense counsel did not hire a defense polygraph examiner to rebut the state's examiner because, at the motion for new trial hearing, the defendant's trial defense counsel testified that this was a matter of trial strategy to preserve the right to closing argument; defense counsel was prepared to and did cross-examine the state's expert to bring out the points defense counsel wanted to raise and felt the value of putting on a defense expert was outweighed by retaining the right to close. Johnson v. State, 280 Ga. App. 341, 634 S.E.2d 134, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 851 (2006), overruled in part, Kimbrough v. State, 300 Ga. 516, 796 S.E.2d 694, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 48 (2017).

Use of blood spatter experts. — In a murder prosecution, defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to properly interview a blood spatter expert before calling the expert as a witness. The expert's discussions with counsel provided support for the defendant's claim that the shooting was accidental, but at trial, the expert's testimony differed from the information relayed to counsel over the phone, and defense counsel was surprised by the testimony, which aided the prosecution. Watkins v. State, 285 Ga. 355, 676 S.E.2d 196, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 163 (2009).

Failure to object to presence of interpreters in jury room. — With regard to two defendants' convictions for murder, the defendants failed to show that the defendants received ineffective assistance of counsel based on the defendants' respective trial counsel failing to object to the presence of two sign language interpreters in the jury room as the trial court had the two interpreters take an oath swearing that, during jury deliberations, the interpreters would merely interpret and not interject the interpreters' personal opinions, conclusions, or comments. The defendants failed to present a shred of evidence that the interpreters did anything other than comply fully with the oath taken and that trial counsel had any reasons to suspect the interpreters did otherwise. Smith v. State, 284 Ga. 599, 669 S.E.2d 98, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 866 (2008).

Failure to object to use of single interpreter. — There was no ineffectiveness of the defendant's trial counsel for failing to seek separate interpreters for the defendant and a codefendant during their criminal trial as there was no showing that the defendant's rights were impinged by the use of a single interpreter. Hung v. State, 284 Ga. 796, 671 S.E.2d 811, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 21 (2009).

Failure to obtain admission of polygraph evidence. — Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel due to an attorney's failure to obtain a stipulation from the state permitting the admission of the results of a polygraph test, in a case in which the attorney had not entered the attorney's appearance in the case, because the defendant did not show that the state was willing to enter into a stipulation to authorize the admission of the polygraph results and the defendant did not show that the attorney's performance was deficient or that the defendant suffered any prejudice from the inaction. McKinney v. State, 281 Ga. 92, 635 S.E.2d 153, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 582 (2006).

Failure to object to impermissible questions/comments on defendant's pre-arrest silence from prosecution. — With regard to a defendant's convictions for malice murder, felony murder, aggravated assault, and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony, although the defendant's trial counsel was deficient for failing to object to the prosecutor's impermissible questions and comments relating to the defendant's pre-arrest silence regarding the defendant's failure to contact the police to inform the police of the alleged accidental shooting, the defendant was not prejudiced by the deficiency based on the overwhelming evidence of guilt, including eyewitness accounts and evidence that the deceased victim was unarmed, which negated the defendant's accidental shooting and self-defense theories. Thomas v. State, 284 Ga. 647, 670 S.E.2d 421, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 1027 (2008).

Failure to object to evidence after trial completed. — Even if a decision with regard to similar transaction evidence had the effect that the defendant claimed it did, it could not be used to support an ineffective assistance of counsel claim based on failure to object because it was decided after the defendant's trial was completed. Failure to make a meritless objection did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel. Walley v. State, 298 Ga. App. 483, 680 S.E.2d 550, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 714 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1728, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 603 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2009).

Failure to object to physical evidence. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to object to testimony that a gun and ammunition, which were not alleged to be the murder weapon, were seized from the defendant's home and to the introduction of those items into evidence because the evidence was relevant and probative of the charge of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, and an objection to the admissibility would have been fruitless. Ardis v. State, 290 Ga. 58, 718 S.E.2d 526, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 862 (2011).

Failure to file motion to suppress evidence. — Defense counsel's failure to make a motion to suppress on the grounds that warrants were issued without probable cause was neither deficient nor prejudicial and did not render counsel's assistance ineffective. Davis v. State, 209 Ga. App. 755, 434 S.E.2d 752, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1006 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1716, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 1035 (Ga. Oct. 29, 1993).

Defendant's counsel committed prejudicial error in failing to pursue a motion to suppress or otherwise object to the admission of evidence illegally seized on the day of defendant's arrest. Jefferson v. State, 217 Ga. App. 747, 459 S.E.2d 173, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 589 (1995), cert. denied, No. S95C1729, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 1086 (Ga. Oct. 13, 1995).

Defendant did not show defendant was deprived of the effective assistance of counsel because defense counsel did not move to suppress evidence of prior difficulties between defendant and the victim, as such a motion would have been denied. Martin v. State, 266 Ga. App. 392, 597

Defendant's claim that trial counsel was ineffective in failing to move to suppress defendant's post-arrest statement was without merit as trial counsel viewed the statement as exculpatory and failed to make the motion as part of counsel's trial strategy. Ogden v. State, 266 Ga. App. 399, 597 S.E.2d 491, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 386 (2004).

Malice murder and accompanying life sentence were upheld on appeal because counsel was not ineffective for failing to make a motion to suppress defendant's two statements; attempting to suppress the first statement would have been futile because defendant was not under arrest and not subject to a custodial interrogation, and the second statement was made after a waiver of Miranda rights. Wiggins v. State, 280 Ga. 627, 632 S.E.2d 80, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 408 (2006).

Trial counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 for failing to object to a witness's hearsay testimony that the codefendant told the witness that the three defendants acted together in carrying out the robbery and murder; this testimony was properly admitted as a statement by a coconspirator under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-5. Brooks v. State, 281 Ga. 14, 635 S.E.2d 723, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 603 (2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1215, 127 S. Ct. 1266, 167 L. Ed. 2d 91, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2212 (2007).

Because there was nothing improper in a statement the trial court made to the panel during voir dire, counsel did not perform deficiently by failing to object to the statement, and counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to properly admitted similar transaction evidence. Edwards v. State, 282 Ga. 259, 646 S.E.2d 663, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 399 (2007).

With regard to defendant's conviction for trafficking in methamphetamine, defendant failed to establish that defense counsel was ineffective for failing to pursue a motion to suppress the evidence found in defendant's room as the evidence showed that a preliminary motion to suppress was filed and that trial counsel concluded that, based on the Fourth

Amendment waivers of defendant and others involved, pursuit of the motion would have been fruitless. Corn v. State, 290 Ga. App. 792, 660 S.E.2d 782, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 342 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1356, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 712 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2008).

Defendant had not shown that counsel was ineffective for failing to attempt to suppress the defendant's videotaped statement: even if the defendant had sufficiently articulated a desire to have counsel present, the defendant had waived the right by initiating discussion with police without any further prompting or interrogation by them; furthermore, the videotape supported the conclusion that the defendant was not prevented by any intoxication from knowingly waiving the defendant's Miranda rights and giving a voluntary statement. Stanley v. State, 283 Ga. 36, 656 S.E.2d 806, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 26 (2008).

Counsel was not ineffective for failing to file a motion to suppress a holster when the admission of the holster did not violate the fourth amendment. The information in an affidavit contained sufficient information for the magistrate to come to the commonsense conclusion that evidence of contraband could be found at the defendant's apartment, and an officer saw the holster in plain view in an area in which the officer had a right to be while searching for contraband. Cobb v. State, 283 Ga. 388, 658 S.E.2d 750, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 258 (2008).

Defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel with regard to defendant's trial and conviction for aggravated assault and drug possession as a result of trial counsel's failure to move to suppress the test results of defendant's urine and blood, and evidence of a tube of cocaine found in the vehicle which defendant was driving, as the bodily fluids were unlawfully obtained from defendant while unconscious and without a warrant, and there was evidence affirmatively showing that persons other than defendant had equal opportunity to possess the cocaine that was found on the floor of the vehicle. Coney v. State, 290 Ga. App. 364, 659 S.E.2d 768, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 318 (2008).

With regard to defendant's conviction for robbery by sudden snatching, defendant failed to establish that defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel for failing to file a motion to suppress based on the patrol officer having no articulable suspicion to stop defendant pursuant to the purported generic car description that was broadcast as defendant failed to make a strong showing that the motion to suppress would have been granted on the asserted ground. Cray v. State, 291 Ga. App. 609, 662 S.E.2d 365, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 582 (2008).

With regard to defendant's conviction for possession of marijuana with the intent to distribute, even if defendant had not waived the issue of defense counsel being ineffective for failing to file a motion to suppress, the challenge was meritless since the search warrant properly named the package the police sought to seize, which defendant picked up at a mailing store, and the warrant did not need to name defendant's vehicle, which defendant entered into with the package. Ferguson v. State, 292 Ga. App. 7, 663 S.E.2d 760, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 676 (2008).

With regard to defendant's convictions for possessing cocaine with the intent to distribute, possessing a firearm during the commission of a crime, and numerous other crimes, defendant failed to establish that defense counsel was ineffective for failing to file a motion to suppress with regard to challenging the contraband evidence obtained after the police attempted to stop defendant's vehicle for failing to maintain the traffic lane, which was a valid basis for making a traffic stop. As such, there was no basis to file a motion to suppress the contraband discovered in defendant's vehicle after the stop. Ray v. State, 292 Ga. App. 575, 665 S.E.2d 345, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 671 (2008).

With regard to defendant's conviction for distributing cocaine, defendant failed to establish that defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel based on defense counsel failing to move to suppress the evidence obtained during a traffic stop as the motion to suppress would have been futile as the evidence showed that the officer had reasonable suspicion if not probable cause to stop the vehicle based on carefully constructing an orchestrated buy and using a confidential informant. Beck v. State, 292 Ga. App. 472, 665 S.E.2d 701, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 714 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1863, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 922 (Ga. Oct. 6, 2008).

Because the defendant failed to demonstrate the existence of a meritorious Fourth Amendment argument, there was no merit to the argument that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to file a motion to suppress or motion in limine to exclude the evidence obtained from a search of the defendant's apartment. Williams v. State, 284 Ga. 849, 672 S.E.2d 619, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 17 (2009).

Defendant's armed robbery conviction was upheld on appeal as the defendant failed to show that the defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel as a result of trial counsel failing to move to suppress items found in the defendant's vehicle shortly after the robbery linking the defendant to the crime. The defendant failed to prove that the damaging evidence would have been suppressed if the motion had been made. Williams v. State, 295 Ga. App. 639, 673 S.E.2d 30, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 55 (2009).

Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to file a second motion to suppress until the morning of trial, and thus failing to secure a transcript of the hearing on the motion because trial counsel thoroughly cross-examined the arresting detective, who admitted that the detective had previously testified to three different versions of the defendant's alleged statement; therefore, even assuming that trial counsel was deficient by failing to secure a transcript before trial to impeach the detective, the deficiency did not prejudice the defendant since the arresting detective admitted to the detective's contradictory statements and, thus, the inconsistencies were known to the jury even though the prior inconsistent testimony was not read verbatim into the record. Cannon v. State, 288 Ga. 225, 702 S.E.2d 845, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 607 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to move to suppress evidence found during a search of the defendant's father's home because, even if the appellate court disregarded the allegedly incorrect statements about the defendant being positively identified as a perpetrator, the affidavit in support of the search warrant accurately stated that an eyewitness had positively identified the codefendant as a murder suspect and that the codefendant was apprehended in the residence the state desired to search. Therefore, the search was conducted pursuant to a valid warrant and the evidence was admissible. Charleston v. State, 292 Ga. 678, 743 S.E.2d 1, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 300 (2013).

Failure to submit written motions to suppress excused where court entertains oral motions. — The failure to submit any written motions to suppress certain lineup identification evidence does not support the defendant's allegation of ineffective legal representation at trial where the trial court entertained such motions made orally and conducted a hearing thereon outside the presence of the jury. Aparicio v. State, 166 Ga. App. 793, 305 S.E.2d 649, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3275 (1983).

Delay in filing of motion. — Tactical decision to delay the filing of a potentially meritorious suppression motion in order later to obtain more favorable habeas review was objectively unreasonable. Huynh v. King, 95 F.3d 1052, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 24900 (11th Cir. 1996).

Failure to exclude cross-examination as to previous injuries of child victim constitutional. — In a prosecution for killing a child, the failure of trial court to rule on a motion to exclude cross-examination by the state of the defendant concerning previous injuries to the child in question does not deny the defendant effective assistance of counsel. Bethea v. State, 251 Ga. 328, 304 S.E.2d 713, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 773 (1983).

Failure to limit cross examination of defendant. — Defendant could not show that trial counsel performed deficiently by failing to object to the prosecutor's alleged "testimony" because the record did not support the defendant's assertion that the prosecutor, in posing leading questions to the defendant during cross-examination, “testified” against the defendant. Boatright v. State, 289 Ga. 597, 713 S.E.2d 829, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 511 (2011).

Failure to object to search warrant affidavit from which DNA obtained. — With regard to defendant’s convictions for rape and other crimes, the trial court did not err by concluding that defendant’s trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to a search warrant affidavit that led to the police obtaining a DNA swab from defendant, despite defendant’s voluntary statement to the detectives being elicited in violation of Miranda and case law, as the search warrant could be predicated on defendant’s voluntary but unlawfully obtained statements. Brown v. State, 292 Ga. App. 269, 663 S.E.2d 749, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 651 (2008).

Failure to object to nurse’s testimony. — Because the defendant’s counsel did not object to a nurse’s testimony summarizing what the victim had told the nurse about the victim’s rape by defendant, this was not ineffective assistance of counsel because the victim’s veracity was at issue, the victim was present at trial, under oath, and subject to cross-examination, and the nurse’s testimony amounted to a prior consistent out-of-court statement, which was admissible. Johnson v. State, 268 Ga. App. 1, 601 S.E.2d 392, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 835 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1735, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 665 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2004).

Because the state’s questions to a witness were not leading, had answers that were obvious, or were answered by the witness or other witnesses, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object. Capers v. State, 273 Ga. App. 427, 615 S.E.2d 126, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 374 (2005), cert. denied, No. S05C1592, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 546 (Ga. Sept. 19, 2005).

Failure to object to DNA evidence. — With regard to a defendant’s conviction for statutory rape and two counts of child molestation involving a stepchild, the defendant’s ineffective assistance of counsel claim as a result of failure to object to the state’s DNA evidence was rejected because the defendant failed to show prejudice in that the outcome of the trial would have been no different had the DNA evidence not been admitted. The defendant’s conclusory assertion that the conviction was largely based upon the DNA evidence was contradicted by the totality of the evidence in the record in that: (1) the jury heard direct evidence from the victim that the defendant forced the victim to engage in sex with the defendant over a period of years; (2) the victim testified that the defendant fathered the victim’s twins; and (3) the victim’s mother testified as to the victim’s prior consistent outcry statements, which the mother initially did not believe. Haygood v. State, 289 Ga. App. 187, 656 S.E.2d 541, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 42 (2008).

Failure to object to psychologist’s testimony. — A defendant’s conviction for child molestation and related charges was upheld on appeal, and the trial court properly denied the defendant’s motion for remand, as the defendant failed to show ineffective assistance of counsel as a result of defense counsel failing to object to the bolstering testimony of a child psychologist. The defendant failed to show how defense counsel’s strategy, which resulted in leading the expert to qualify the prior bolstering testimony on cross-examination, was unreasonable, as well as failed to show a likelihood that an objection would have led to a different trial outcome necessitating remand. Al-Attawy v. State, 289 Ga. App. 570, 657 S.E.2d 552, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 81 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1039, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 503 (Ga. June 2, 2008).

Although defendant’s trial counsel’s performance fell below objective standard of reasonableness under the first prong of the Strickland ineffective assistance of counsel test, error however was harmless because although defendant’s trial counsel performed deficiently in failing to raise a hearsay objection to admission of victim’s statements contained in the videotaped interview, defendant did not show that trial counsel’s error prejudiced the defense since statements made by the victim during the videotaped interview were merely cumulative of testimony victim had offered at trial and for which victim was cross-examined by trial counsel. Forde v. State, 289 Ga. App. 805, 658 S.E.2d 410, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 206 (2008).

With regard to convictions for aggravated assault and related crimes, defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object or move for a mistrial when a security officer commented on defendant's pre-arrest silence, namely that defendant did not speak up as to owning the type of vehicle used to perpetrate the crimes; even if testimony on defendant's pre-arrest silence had been objectionable, defendant failed to show any prejudice since other evidence showed that defendant drove to police station in defendant's truck and consented to search of that vehicle. Gibson v. State, 291 Ga. App. 183, 661 S.E.2d 850, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 436 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1442, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 677 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2008).

Defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of counsel; counsel's failure to object to hearsay testimony about a statement by a non-testifying witness was not ineffective assistance because the statement's admission was harmless error, the failure to object to hearsay testimony as to venue was not ineffective assistance because admissible evidence established venue, and the failure to make a chain of custody objection was not ineffective assistance because the objection would have been fruitless. White v. State, 283 Ga. 566, 662 S.E.2d 131, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 442 (2008).

With regard to defendant's convictions for child molestation and aggravated sexual battery, the trial court properly rejected defendant's contention that defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel for defense counsel's failure to object to the admission of an indictment evidencing defendant's guilty plea to a prior conviction as such evidence was admissible, and the judgment entered thereon, as a complete record of a witness's criminal conviction for purposes of impeachment. Further, pretermittting whether defense counsel's failure to object to the additional document admitted constituted deficient performance, defendant failed to show prejudice from the alleged deficiency as defendant had already admitted to prior convictions during direct examination. Daniel v. State, 292 Ga. App. 560, 665 S.E.2d 696, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 681 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1931, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 891 (Ga. Oct. 27, 2008).

Failure to object to recorded testimony. — With regard to defendant's conviction for distributing cocaine, the defendant failed to establish that the defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel based on defense counsel failing to object to the admission of a recorded conversation between defendant and a confidential informant on Sixth Amendment/right to confrontation grounds. Even if the recorded conversation was objectionable as a violation of defendant's constitutional rights under the confrontation clause, trial counsel testified to various strategic reasons for keeping the confidential informant out of the courtroom at the hearing on defendant's motion for a new trial. As such, since that strategy was not patently unreasonable, the trial court did not err in finding that trial counsel's actions in that regard fell within the broad range of reasonable professional conduct. Beck v. State, 292 Ga. App. 472, 665 S.E.2d 701, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 714 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1863, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 922 (Ga. Oct. 6, 2008).

Failure to object to testimony of military police. — In a defendant's prosecution for malice murder and cruelty to children, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to testimony by military police regarding the investigation of a prior difficulty between the defendant and the five-year-old victim as trial counsel had raised a continuing objection to all testimony and evidence regarding prior difficulties and made a specific objection immediately prior to the officers' consecutive testimony. Wright v. State, 285 Ga. 57, 673 S.E.2d 249, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 102 (2009).

Defendant did not show that trial counsel was ineffective. Defense counsel's failure to object to hearsay because counsel knew that the statements would be corroborated by the defendant's testimony later in the trial was trial strategy; counsel's failure to object to statements that counsel thought would be admissible as part of the res gestae was reasonable trial strategy; counsel believed that certain testimony was not hearsay and would also work to the defendant's benefit; counsel chose not to object to prior consistent testimony of the victim because counsel believed that the testimony showed that some of the victim's testimony was inconsistent and thus would undermine the victim's credibility; and contrary to the defendant's contention, certain testimony did not show that the defendant had a prior criminal history. Abernathy v. State, 299 Ga. App. 897, 685 S.E.2d 734, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1020 (2009).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object when the state asked the arresting officer if the defendant made a statement while in custody. The testimony was not given to prove the defendant's guilt or innocence, but could be characterized as a narrative recitation of the events surrounding the defendant's arrest by the authorities. Hardy v. State, 301 Ga. App. 115, 686 S.E.2d 789, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1078 (2009).

Trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance by failing to object to the arresting detective's testimony about what a witness told the defendant just prior to a shooting because although the testimony was inadmissible hearsay since the state failed to lay a proper foundation for the admission of a prior inconsistent statement by not asking the witness about the witness's statement, the defendant failed to show a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different if counsel had objected to the testimony; four eyewitnesses other than the witness testified that those witnesses saw the defendant shoot the victim, and the witnesses independently picked the defendant out of a photographic lineup. Cannon v. State, 288 Ga. 225, 702 S.E.2d 845, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 607 (2010).

Failure to object to prosecutorial misconduct. — Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to object to alleged prosecutorial misconduct, the prosecutors questioning of the defendant upon the defendant's post-arrest silence, as any objection would have been overruled, since the defendant opened the door to that line of questioning, and counsel could not be ineffective for failing to make a meritless objection. Doyle v. State, 291 Ga. 729, 733 S.E.2d 290, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 781 (2012).

Failure to object to defendant's demeanor. — Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to evidence that the defendant was angry at the victim because the victim failed to pay the defendant for drugs and started buying from another supplier as the evidence was relevant to motive and, thus, admissible. Griffin v. State, 292 Ga. 321, 737 S.E.2d 682, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 67 (2013).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object when an investigator testified that the defendant killed the victim or when a medical examiner testified that the death was a homicide as the identity of the person who caused the victim's death and the fact that the death was a homicide were not disputed; thus, the failure could not have affected the outcome of the trial. Butler v. State, 292 Ga. 400, 738 S.E.2d 74, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 111 (2013).

Failure to object to admission of cocaine field test. — With regard to defendant's appeal of a conviction for possessing cocaine, defendant's argument that defense counsel was ineffective in failing to object to the admission of a cocaine field test was meritless since significant evidence other than the field test supported the jury's verdict based on the officers finding a residue-laden scale commonly used to measure cocaine on defendant's person; following arrest, defendant displayed the same physical symptoms seen in persons who had swallowed cocaine when confronted by police; defendant had admitted to two people — an officer and a nurse — to swallowing the cocaine; and on two prior occasions leading to drug convictions, defendant attempted to discard cocaine to avoid detection by authorities. Moreover, defense counsel successfully undermined the field test, establishing through the state's own expert that the test was merely presumptive and lacked scientific certainty. Hinton v. State, 292 Ga. App. 40, 663 S.E.2d 401, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 689 (2008).

Failure to object to toxicologist report's inadmission. — In a murder prosecution in which the defendant claimed self-defense, a forensic toxicologist testified for the defense that the victim's blood tested positive for a metabolite of cocaine and that paranoia and aggressiveness were side effects of cocaine use. The defendant's claim that counsel was ineffective for withdrawing a request to admit the toxicologist's lab report into evidence failed as the results of the report were read into the record, the toxicologist's testimony was more extensive than the report, and the defendant's assertion that admission of the report would have altered the outcome of the trial was mere speculation. Timmreck v. State, 285 Ga. 39, 673 S.E.2d 198, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 49 (2009).

Failure to object to expert testimony. — Defendant failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel based on counsel's failure to object to an agent's testimony regarding what the agent believed to be a marijuana stalk in a burn pile because expert testimony based on scientific tests was not necessarily required to establish that a substance was marijuana if the identifying witness had the requisite training in the narcotics field; additionally, defense counsel testified that counsel did not think it was all that helpful to focus on the stalk because it may have emphasized that the substance was marijuana before it got burned. Kania v. State, 280 Ga. App. 356, 634 S.E.2d 146, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 853 (2006).

The defendant's trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to object when a medical examiner testified that the victim's death was a homicide and not an accident, and despite the defendant's contrary claim, the testimony was not an expression of the witness's opinion on the ultimate issue in the case, as: (1) counsel did not consider the testimony objectionable because there was no dispute that the "manner" of the victim's death was a homicide, and such tactic was not unreasonable; (2) the ultimate issue for the jury to determine was whether the defendant acted with malice in response to the victim's provocation, or whether self-defense was an issue; (3) counsel testified that an objection would have been in order had the medical examiner invaded the province of the jury by expressing the opinion that the homicide was a murder; and (4) the defendant failed to show any prejudice by the testimony presented. Berry v. State, 282 Ga. 376, 651 S.E.2d 1, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 529 (2007).

Defense counsel was ineffective for failing to object to an expert's inadmissible hearsay testimony that a holster was designed for a .45 caliber pistol, which was based on the expert's conversation with a representative of the holster's manufacturer. The testimony was prejudicial, as it was the only evidence connecting the defendant to a .45 pistol and it buttressed the testimony of the state's key witness, whose credibility was a serious issue. Cobb v. State, 283 Ga. 388, 658 S.E.2d 750, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 258 (2008).

Defendant unsuccessfully contended that defendant's trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to object to an FBI agent's testimony that the crime scene appeared to have been staged and that, based on this scene, burglary was an unlikely motive; furthermore, even if trial counsel had objected to this testimony, there was no reasonable probability that the outcome of defendant's trial would have been different, given the overwhelming nature of the evidence against the defendant. Bridges v. State, 286 Ga. 535, 690 S.E.2d 136, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 87 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to an investigator's opinion testimony about the proper administration of CPR measures as the investigator was impliedly accepted as such by the trial court and, thus, any objection would have been futile. Butler v. State, 292 Ga. 400, 738 S.E.2d 74, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 111 (2013).

Harmless testimony from detective. — Defendant's convictions for murder and other crimes was upheld because the detective's testimony that an unnamed key witness made an identification, without specifying whom the key witness identified, was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt because the evidence of the defendant's guilt was overwhelming, including eyewitness identification, cell phone records, and the defendant's connection to a car near the crime scene. Kingdom v. State, 321 Ga. 363, 914 S.E.2d 778, 2025 Ga. LEXIS 70 (2025).

Failure to object to testimony of crime scene investigator. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to limit the trial testimony of the prosecution's blood spatter expert because counsel consulted with a qualified expert and counsel's consultations gave counsel no basis for objecting to the conclusion reached by the prosecution's expert as the expert consulted reached the same conclusion as the prosecution's expert. Yancey v. State, 292 Ga. 812, 740 S.E.2d 628, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 372 (2013).

Trial counsel's failure to object to testimony from a crime scene investigator was not deficient because the opinion about the victim's physical positioning was within the bounds of a crime scene reconstructionist expert. Vanstavern v. State, 293 Ga. 123, 744 S.E.2d 42, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 495 (2013).

Expert testimony as to tests performed by others. — There was no merit to the defendant's argument that because a lab worker actually conducted the testing on a substance that a forensic chemist testified was cocaine, the defendant had been denied the Sixth Amendment right to confrontation. The chemist testified that the worker was acting under the chemist's direction and that the chemist reviewed the test results; therefore, the chemist's test was proper because the chemist arrived at the chemist's own independent conclusion that the substance was cocaine. Reddick v. State, 298 Ga. App. 155, 679 S.E.2d 380, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 620 (2009).

Failure to object to use of "victim." — Trial court's ruling that it was highly unlikely that a reasonable probability existed that the outcome of the defendant's case would have been different but for defense counsel's failure to object to the use of the word "victim", when referring to the victim, was not clearly erroneous; moreover, defense counsel testified that the defense theory was to show that the prosecution was on a witch hunt against the defendant and not objecting to the state's use of the word "victim" reinforced that strategy of showing that the state was "paranoid." This was a matter of tactics and strategy, and whether wise or unwise did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel. Johnson v. State, 280 Ga. App. 341, 634 S.E.2d 134, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 851 (2006), overruled in part, Kimbrough v. State, 300 Ga. 516, 796 S.E.2d 694, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 48 (2017).

Failure to object to comment on victim's credibility. — Defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of counsel with regard to defendant's trial and conviction for child molestation based on trial counsel's failure to object to certain testimony by the investigating officer that commented upon the victim's credibility as, even though trial counsel did not object, the trial court gave a curative instruction that specifically informed the jury to disregard the officer's testimony commenting on the victim's credibility, which was adequate to correct any harm. Williams v. State, 290 Ga. App. 841, 660 S.E.2d 740, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 228 (2008), overruled in part, Hatley v. State, 290 Ga. 480, 722 S.E.2d 67, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 137 (2012), overruled in part as stated in Wadley v. State, 317 Ga. App. 333, 730 S.E.2d 536, 2012 Ga. App. LEXIS 658 (2012).

Failure to present evidence of victim's violent act. — When the defendant presented a prima facie case of justification, counsel was ineffective in not introducing evidence of a prior act of violence by the victim based on counsel's mistaken belief that such an act had to have occurred prior to the act being tried in order to be admissible. The error was not harmless, as the assault, which like the charged crime involved an assault with a gun upon a man leaving the residence of the victim's ex-spouse, was highly relevant to the sole defense of justification. Bennett v. State, 298 Ga. App. 464, 680 S.E.2d 538, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 694 (2009).

Conceding to reliability of a child victim's hearsay testimony. — Defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of counsel with regard to defendant's trial and conviction for child molestation based on trial counsel's failure to object and conceding to the issue of reliability for the admission of the child victim's hearsay testimony as: (1) defendant failed to point to any evidence indicating that the victim's statements were unreliable since the statements were videotaped at a neutral location in a room alone with a professional forensic interviewer; (2) the forensic interviewer testified that the victim was very bright and articulate and did not appear to be coached; (3) the victim's videotaped statements were spontaneous, voluntary, and not coerced; (4) the victim's videotaped statements were consistent with other out-of-court statements; and (5) significantly, the victim's statements were consistent with defendant's statements to police. Williams v. State, 290 Ga. App. 841, 660 S.E.2d 740, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 228 (2008), overruled in part, Hatley v. State, 290 Ga. 480, 722 S.E.2d 67, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 137 (2012), overruled in part as stated in Wadley v. State, 317 Ga. App. 333, 730 S.E.2d 536, 2012 Ga. App. LEXIS 658 (2012).

Counsel did not concede guilt by offering alternative theory. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for arguing an alternative theory of insanity based on chronic traumatic encephalopathy (CTE) to support acquittal as counsel did not concede guilt and did not override the defendant's objective of maintaining innocence. Riley v. State, 321 Ga. 112, 913 S.E.2d 559, 2025 Ga. LEXIS 51 (2025).

Introduction of the defendant's criminal history was proper as a tactical measure where it was done as an explanation of the defendant's sole defense that the defendant obtained contraband to aid the state. Fountain v. State, 231 Ga. App. 700, 500 S.E.2d 614, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 515 (1998).

Introduction of prior conviction. — Counsel was not ineffective by failing to object to introduction of defendant's prior conviction to because that conviction had been properly obtained and was not subject to attack. Watkins v. State, 206 Ga. App. 575, 426 S.E.2d 26, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1701 (1992), cert. denied, No. S93C0490, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 278 (Ga. Feb. 25, 1993).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object when a witness read into the record a letter the witness received from the jailhouse informant because it was a reasonable trial strategy to introduce the letter so that defense counsel could refute the informant's claims on more than one occasion. Young v. State, 292 Ga. 443, 738 S.E.2d 575, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 148 (2013).

Failure to make meritless objection. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to raise a constitutional challenge to O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(e) based on the statute's allowance of a conviction for trafficking in methamphetamine if a defendant possessed 28 grams or more, regardless of the purity of the methamphetamine mixture, while O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(a) only allowed a conviction for trafficking in cocaine if the mixture of cocaine had a purity of at least 10 percent; the proposed challenge was not supported by the evidence as the state's expert testified that 56.2 grams of the 79.0 grams of the substance tested was positive for methamphetamine, and there was no proffer or evidence as to the purity of the mixture or any allegation by defendants that the substance was not methamphetamine. Christopher v. State, 262 Ga. App. 257, 585 S.E.2d 107, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 761 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1545, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 927 (Ga. Oct. 20, 2003).

Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel where counsel did not request a misidentification charge, despite misidentification being defendant's sole defense, because the jury charge as a whole correctly and thoroughly instructed the jury on such issues as the presumption of innocence, reasonable doubt, burden of proof, credibility of witnesses, and impeachment of witnesses, and where there was overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt. Brown v. State, 260 Ga. App. 627, 580 S.E.2d 348, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 442 (2003), overruled in part, George v. State, 312 Ga. 801, 865 S.E.2d 127, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 679 (2021).

Defendant's claim that defendant was denied effective assistance of counsel failed where counsel's failure to ask for a curative instruction because of the admission of testimony by a co-conspirator was not an error as the testimony was admissible under the co-conspirator exception to the hearsay rule, and counsel's failure to object and request a mistrial following certain comments by the assistant district attorney during closing arguments did not amount to ineffective assistance since the gravamen of the argument was to urge the jury to find from the inconsistencies that a witness had lied. Robinson v. State, 278 Ga. 31, 597 S.E.2d 386, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 469 (2004).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to make a meritless objection based on the state's expert's testimony as to the source of the DNA on a sock, as the possible mechanisms by which epithelial cells ended up on a sock were beyond the ken of the average layman; since the evidence at issue was admissible, defendant's trial counsel was not required to object. Eley v. State, 266 Ga. App. 45, 596 S.E.2d 660, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 295 (2004), overruled in part, State v. Burns, 306 Ga. 117, 829 S.E.2d 367, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 400 (2019).

Defendant's conviction for child molestation was affirmed because defendant did not carry defendant's burden of showing that defendant's counsel rendered ineffective assistance as the record showed that counsel adequately prepared for trial, defendant was advised of the possible sentence during plea bargaining, and counsel allowed character evidence in as part of a reasonable trial strategy. Kimmons v. State, 267 Ga. App. 790, 600 S.E.2d 783, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 792 (2004).

Failure to object to prior acts against victim. — Defendant's counsel did not render ineffective assistance under the Strickland standard, as evidence of defendant's prior acts towards the victim were admissible in defendant's trial, arising from other acts against the same victim, such that counsel's failure to object to the admission of such evidence was not a deficiency. Andrews v. State, 275 Ga. App. 426, 620 S.E.2d 629, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 991 (2005).

Trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV by failing to object when the trial court allowed a partition to be placed between the defendant and the child victim, allegedly in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV, when they testified in the molestation case; the defendant waived the confrontation claim since the defendant arranged for the partition in order to head off the state's request for testimony via closed-circuit television pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-55, and defense counsel's failure to object, therefore, could not be challenged because this fell into the realm of strategy. Zepp v. State, 276 Ga. App. 466, 623 S.E.2d 569, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1285 (2005), cert. denied, No. S06C0610, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 224 (Ga. Mar. 27, 2006), overruled in part, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 182 (2007), overruled in part, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Defendant failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance of trial counsel in the defendant's trial for the murder of the defendant's spouse based on counsel's failure to object to evidence that the defendant held an accidental death policy in the amount of $243,750, payable to the defendant in the event of the spouse's accidental death and to evidence showing that the defendant inquired into the spouse's compensation and death benefits available through the spouse's employer; there was independent evidence directly relating the existence of the insurance policies and death benefits to the defendant's financial motive for the murder; financial gain from the defendant's marriage to the spouse, clearly including the spouse's insurance and employment benefits, and the prevention, at all costs, of the loss of such financial gain by virtue of a divorce, provided a compelling motive for the murder, and thus, such evidence was admissible and any attempt to exclude the evidence would have been unsuccessful. Slakman v. State, 280 Ga. 837, 632 S.E.2d 378, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 454 (2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1218, 127 S. Ct. 1273, 167 L. Ed. 2d 95, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2249 (2007).

Two defendants' attorneys were not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 for failing to object to the trial court's decision to replace a juror who was late to court with one of the alternate jurors who was fully qualified to sit on the jury under O.C.G.A. § 15-12-169; the juror's tardiness was a sound basis for dismissal under O.C.G.A. § 15-12-172. Brooks v. State, 281 Ga. 14, 635 S.E.2d 723, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 603 (2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1215, 127 S. Ct. 1266, 167 L. Ed. 2d 91, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 2212 (2007).

No ineffectiveness of counsel was shown in a defendant's malice murder trial by the failure of the defendant's trial counsel to object to the introduction of a prior consistent statement of a witness whose motivation for testifying against the defendant had been vigorously examined in cross-examination; such an objection would have been futile because the veracity of the witness was placed in issue by the cross-examination, rendering the prior consistent statement admissible, and therefore no ineffectiveness of counsel was shown. Green v. State, 281 Ga. 322, 638 S.E.2d 288, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 992 (2006).

Failure to object to notebook with song lyrics. — In a case wherein the defendant was convicted of murder and other related crimes, because the defendant was unable to establish that the trial court's admission of a notebook containing song lyrics would have constituted an abuse of discretion had trial counsel voiced an objection, there existed no merit in the defendant's allegation that the defendant was provided ineffective assistance of counsel for the failure of defense counsel to object. Castillo v. State, 281 Ga. 579, 642 S.E.2d 8, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 127 (2007).

When it would have been meritless for defense counsel to object to portions of the state's closing argument and to reserve objections to the jury charge, the failure to make the objections did not support a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel.

Sampson v. State, 282 Ga. 82, 646 S.E.2d 60, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 404 (2007).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claims regarding the defendant's initial post-trial counsel's performance lacked merit, as counsel was neither professionally deficient nor prejudicial because: (1) the defendant waived any right to be present at the two juror interviews; (2) no deficiency could result from counsel's failure to raise meritless objections; and (3) the trial court specifically found that the defendant adequately understood the nature of the charges, and comprehended the proceedings, despite being under the influence of prescribed anti-depressants, and was capable of aiding the defense. Hampton v. State, 282 Ga. 490, 651 S.E.2d 698, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 723 (2007).

Defense counsel did not perform deficiently when defense counsel failed to make a meritless objection to the evidence of the defendant's conviction for giving false information that was less than 10 years old as former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(a)(3) and (b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-6-609) authorized the admission of convictions 10 years old or less for crimes involving dishonesty or making a false statement, and the trial court did not have to weigh the probative value of the old conviction against the prejudicial effect since the conviction at issue was less than 10 years old. Habersham v. State, 289 Ga. App. 718, 658 S.E.2d 253, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 190 (2008).

There was no ineffectiveness of the defendant's trial counsel for failing to object to questions posed to a codefendant and for failing to object to the prosecutor's closing argument as the testimony and comments by the prosecutor did not suggest to the jury that the defendant was unable to produce an alibi witness; further, the questions were proper, as were the prosecutor's remarks. Hung v. State, 284 Ga. 796, 671 S.E.2d 811, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 21 (2009).

Failure to object to testimony on "cycle of violence." — In a prosecution for the murder of the defendant's romantic companion, defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to cross-examination of the defendant about "the cycle of violence" that occurred in some domestic relationships. As there was evidence that the defendant assaulted the victim in the past, the question was proper and an objection would have been meritless. Watkins v. State, 285 Ga. 355, 676 S.E.2d 196, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 163 (2009).

Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to object, request a limiting instruction, or move for a mistrial in response to the testimony of the victim's cousin regarding an altercation between the victim and the defendant on the night before the shooting because the testimony was admissible under the necessity exception to hearsay as a prior difficulty, showing the defendant's motive, intent, and bent of mind; trial counsel was not deficient for failing to raise a meritless objection. Evans v. State, 288 Ga. 571, 707 S.E.2d 353, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 92 (2011).

Failure to object to investigator's testimony. — Defendants' trial counsel was not ineffective for having failed to object on hearsay grounds to an investigator's testimony regarding the reasons why the victim's sibling and the sibling's spouse could not come to court to testify because the defendant suffered no harm from the admission of the testimony as the testimony had nothing to do with either the charged offenses or with the defendant as the alleged perpetrator of the alleged crimes. Adel v. State, 290 Ga. 690, 723 S.E.2d 666, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 286 (2012).

Failure to object to hearsay testimony of emergency room physician. — With regard to a defendant's convictions for aggravated sodomy, rape, and other related crimes, trial counsel's decision not to object to hearsay testimony of the emergency room physician who treated the victim did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel as the physician's testimony was admissible under the hearsay exception set forth in former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-803) since the challenged statements related to the cause of the victim's injuries and were made for the purpose of the victim's diagnosis and treatment. As a result, the trial court did not err in admitting the statements and, therefore, since the statements were admissible, there was no merit to the defendant's contention that the defendant's trial counsel's failure to object to the hearsay testimony was ineffective assistance. Greene v. State, 295 Ga. App. 803, 673 S.E.2d 292, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 134 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C0862, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 259 (Ga. Apr. 28, 2009).

Defendant could not establish that the trial court's admission of a witness's testimony would have constituted an abuse of discretion had trial counsel voiced an objection because the evidence was admissible under the necessity exception to the hearsay rule, subject to the trial court's discretion. White v. State, 289 Ga. 511, 712 S.E.2d 834, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 565 (2011).

Ineffective assistance based on unforeseen damaging testimony. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to challenge the decision of the codefendant's to call a witness because trial counsel made a strategic decision, based on a pre-trial investigation, not to challenge the codefendant's decision to call the witness; the fact that the witness gave unforeseen damaging testimony did not justify an after the fact adjudication of deficient performance. Mathis v. State, 291 Ga. 268, 728 S.E.2d 661, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 625 (2012).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to make certain objections. — Counsel testified that counsel failed to make certain objections during opening and closing and in regard to witness bolstering for strategic reasons and that counsel decided after extensive discussion not to call the defendant as a witness because counsel believed the potential downside was overwhelming. Rawls v. State, 315 Ga. App. 891, 730 S.E.2d 1, 2012 Ga. App. LEXIS 466 (2012).

Defendant failed to show that counsel was ineffective for failing to object to an alleged golden rule violation because there was no such violation, as the prosecutor did not ask the jurors to place themselves in the victim's position. King v. State, 316 Ga. 611, 889 S.E.2d 851, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 130 (2023).

Defendant failed to show that he was prejudiced by trial counsel's failure to object to the alleged misstatements about the definition of voluntary intoxication and not requesting a clarifying instruction about the interaction between voluntary intoxication and insanity because the theory of the defense at trial was that defendant was temporarily insane and that he was not voluntarily intoxicated. King v. State, 316 Ga. 611, 889 S.E.2d 851, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 130 (2023).

Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object to hearsay testimony of a witness because counsel's cross-examination of the witness effectively undermined the witness's testimony that she heard neighbors say that defendant shot the victim. The witness admitted that she could not identify the people she saw running after hearing gunshots and she did not know defendant. Burke v. State, 320 Ga. 706, 911 S.E.2d 575, 2025 Ga. LEXIS 16 (2025).

Defendant failed to show he was prejudiced due to trial counsel's failure to object to questions the state asked defendant on cross-examination about whether the police "believed very strongly" that defendant killed the victim based on interviews they had done because defendant's responses were merely cumulative of the officers' testimony that the police had identified defendant as the primary suspect soon after their interviews. Burke v. State, 320 Ga. 706, 911 S.E.2d 575, 2025 Ga. LEXIS 16 (2025).

Counsel not ineffective for failing to object to admission of party opponent. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the introduction of an audio recording of a telephone conversation between the second defendant and the second defendant's girlfriend, which included the second defendant telling the girlfriend that the girlfriend did not have to allow police to search the home, and the girlfriend could be heard describing the substance of a news report about the murder, because the second defendant's statements on the recording were admissions of a party opponent. Haney v. State, 305 Ga. 785, 827 S.E.2d 843, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 322 (2019).

Counsel did not perform deficiently by not making an objection to the affidavit of the appellant because the affidavit, written by the appellant, was hearsay, but it was nevertheless admissible as an admission by a party-opponent and such an admission by a defendant generally was not subject to the Confrontation Clause. Reed v. State, 307 Ga. 527, 837 S.E.2d 272, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 837 (2019).

Motions to sever trial of defendants. — In a case wherein the defendant was convicted of murder and other related crimes, even assuming that defense counsel's failure to object to the rescission of a severance order constituted deficient performance, it was not an abuse of the trial court's discretion to deny the motion to sever since the number of defendants tried together was not so great as to create confusion of the evidence, the law applicable to each defendant was substantially the same, and there was no showing the jury was confused. Castillo v. State, 281 Ga. 579, 642 S.E.2d 8, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 127 (2007).

Because the charge that was given was adjusted to the evidence and was not erroneously incomplete, defense counsel was not ineffective in failing either to object or to request a more expansive instruction. Roper v. State, 281 Ga. 878, 644 S.E.2d 120, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 299 (2007).

Because the defendant's counsel was not ineffective in failing to make a meritless objection and could not be held to a duty to anticipate changes in the law regarding the use of a nolo plea to impeach a witness, allegations of ineffective assistance of counsel lacked merit. Martin v. State, 281 Ga. 778, 642 S.E.2d 837, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 257 (2007).

In a defendant's prosecution for malice murder and cruelty to children, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to move to sever the defendant's trial from that of the codefendant, the parent of the five-year-old victim, as such a decision was a matter of trial strategy and trial counsel was able to cross-examine the parent as to any hearsay statements regarding the defendant's prior difficulties with the victim. Wright v. State, 285 Ga. 57, 673 S.E.2d 249, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 102 (2009).

Failure to object to admissible evidence does not constitute ineffective assistance to counsel. United States v. Costa, 691 F.2d 1358, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 23916 (11th Cir. 1982).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to introduction of evidence that the murder victim had life insurance naming the defendant as beneficiary, where the required nexus was shown between the crime charged and the existence of the insurance. Bagwell v. State, 270 Ga. 175, 508 S.E.2d 385, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 1007 (1998), superseded by statute as stated in Ballin v. State, 307 Ga. 494, 837 S.E.2d 343, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 832 (2019).

Defense counsel was not ineffective in failing to file a motion to suppress the gun and knitted caps found in the car, as defendant, a passenger, lacked standing to contest the search of the car; further, the caps were found in a search of the car incident to a lawful arrest. Patterson v. State, 259 Ga. App. 630, 577 S.E.2d 850, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 210 (2003).

Inmate's trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the introduction of evidence of other "similar crimes" since there was no reasonable probability that, had defense counsel objected and the "similar crime" issue been addressed on appeal, the trial court's ruling would have been reversed and a new trial ordered; thus, the inmate was not prejudiced by said failure. Walker v. Houston, 277 Ga. 470, 588 S.E.2d 715, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 956 (2003).

Defendant failed to show that counsel provided ineffective assistance in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. 1, Para. XIV, based on counsel's failure to have objected to evidence regarding the chain of custody of drugs that were seized from the crime scene, as the evidence showed that the police placed the drugs in a tamper-proof identifiable container and that the crime lab technician who tested it received it in the same container, and there was no indication that there had been any tampering or substitution. Reason v. State, 283 Ga. App. 608, 642 S.E.2d 236, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 136 (2007).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to pre-autopsy photographs of murder victims; each of the photographs was relevant to some point of a forensic pathologist's testimony, and thus the photographs were admissible. Conway v. State, 281 Ga. 685, 642 S.E.2d 673, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 234 (2007).

With respect to presenting chemical testing evidence and pursuing the state's undisclosed chemical test results, counsel's failure to present or pursue such evidence did not affect the outcome at trial, and counsel's performance was not ineffective. The chemical test was consistent with evidence that the state had already presented to the jury; accordingly, the undisclosed evidence was not outcome determinative. Morris v. State, 284 Ga. 1, 662 S.E.2d 110, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 424, cert. denied, 555 U.S. 1074, 129 S. Ct. 731, 172 L. Ed. 2d 734, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 8985 (2008).

In a malice murder prosecution, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in admitting testimony concerning the violent relationship between the defendant and the victim (the defendant's paramour) as the testimony qualified as prior difficulties or similar transaction evidence. Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to such testimony as the objection would have been overruled. Smith v. State, 284 Ga. 304, 667 S.E.2d 65, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 753 (2008).

Any error by counsel in failing to object to the contents of a 9-1-1 call was cumulative of admissible evidence and therefore harmless. Eller v. State, 294 Ga. App. 77, 668 S.E.2d 755, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1108 (2008).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the testimony of the fire chief and the victim's boyfriend about what they overheard on speaker phone on the way to the hotel after the fire, because the testimony was admissible and thus, could not support such a claim. Crawford v. State, 318 Ga. App. 270, 732 S.E.2d 794, 2012 Ga. App. LEXIS 807 (2012), cert. denied, No. S13C0412, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 178 (Ga. Feb. 18, 2013).

Failure to object to admission of life insurance. — Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to object to the state's evidence regarding life insurance policies covering the defendant's spouse because there was a nexus between the life insurance and the spouse's murder when independent evidence directly related the existence of the insurance policies to the defendant's motive for murder; the defendant asked the defendant's employer about insurance proceeds on the day the murder was discovered, the defendant made it clear to others that the defendant wanted and needed the insurance money, and the defendant explained to fellow inmates that, as a result of the defendant's commission of the murder, the defendant would be receiving a large sum in insurance proceeds. Bridges v. State, 286 Ga. 535, 690 S.E.2d 136, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 87 (2010).

Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to object to testimony concerning incriminating statements the defendant made to a jail cell informant because the testimony was merely cumulative of the admissible testimony of two other fellow inmates; therefore, the defendant failed to show the requisite prejudice to support defendant's claim of ineffective assistance, and the trial court did not err in the court's determination that had trial counsel objected to the testimony, there was not a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different. Bridges v. State, 286 Ga. 535, 690 S.E.2d 136, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 87 (2010).

Trial strategy and tactics regarding defense witnesses. — The determination as to which defense witnesses will be called is a matter of trial strategy and tactics. Scapin v. State, 204 Ga. App. 725, 420 S.E.2d 385, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 959 (1992).

Where the defendant's trial counsel's decision to not call a witness at trial was clearly strategic, because the witness was a crack addict and the trial counsel did not believe that the witness would withstand cross-examination, the appellate court was not required to find that trial counsel was deficient just because the defendant and defendant's appellate attorney presently disagreed with the trial counsel's decision. Shields v. State, 264 Ga. App. 232, 590 S.E.2d 217, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1451 (2003).

In defendant's convictions for armed robbery, kidnapping, and aggravated assault in connection with robbery of a fast food restaurant, defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective by failing to call three acquaintances as defense witnesses, as two of the witnesses had informed trial counsel that defendant had admitted to them that defendant was involved in the crimes; thus, defendant failed to show that trial counsel's strategy of not calling the witnesses (whose testimony would have been harmful) was patently unreasonable. Holsey v. State, 291 Ga. App. 216, 661 S.E.2d 621, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 445 (2008).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to a lead investigator's references to a tip the investigator received from an unnamed source implicating the defendant in a shooting because counsel did object to at least one of the investigator's references to the tip and to two questions bearing the potential to elicit responses regarding the substance of the tip; because none of the investigator's references to the tip constituted reversible error, any failure of counsel to object in certain of those instances could not give rise to an ineffectiveness claim. Johnson v. State, 289 Ga. 22, 709 S.E.2d 217, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 261 (2011).

Decisions on witnesses and motions province of lawyer, after consulting client. — The decisions as to what witnesses to call and what motions to file are the exclusive province of the lawyer after consultation with the client. Jackson v. State, 167 Ga. App. 509, 306 S.E.2d 757, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2531 (1983).

Failure to make a motion unwarranted in law is not ineffective assistance of counsel. McCleskey v. Zant, 580 F. Supp. 338, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19860 (N.D. Ga. 1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 753 F.2d 877, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28073 (11th Cir. 1985).

Failure to introduce evidence. — Defense counsel made an informed decision not to focus on the issue of defendant's proper residence, and as such did not constitute grounds for a new trial based upon a charge of ineffective assistance of counsel. Watts v. State, 223 Ga. App. 412, 477 S.E.2d 852, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 1135 (1996).

5. Duties and Effectiveness of Counsel (Cont'd)

Claim of ineffective assistance based on counsel's failure to introduce and use medical records to show inconsistent statements of the victim was not supported where the records had neither exculpatory nor impeachment value. Brown v. State, 226 Ga. App. 238, 486 S.E.2d 385, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 543 (1997), cert. denied, No. S97C1343, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 855 (Ga. Oct. 3, 1997).

Defendant did not demonstrate prejudice from trial counsel's failure to call an expert witness to testify on DNA analysis; the defendant failed to introduce any evidence that the defendant could have called an expert witness who would have testified that the crime lab's testing results were unreliable and counsel did employ an expert whose report said the expert had nothing to add to the lab's report. Ross v. State, 231 Ga. App. 793, 499 S.E.2d 642, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 288 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1171, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 789 (Ga. Sept. 8, 1998).

Counsel was not ineffective for failing to present evidence of the defendant's prior consistent statements, as this was a matter of considered trial strategy and tactics, and was not due to counsel's failure to adequately prepare. Furthermore, in a rape prosecution, counsel was not ineffective for not objecting to the state's cross-examining defendant on the defendant's failure to state to police, as the defendant did at trial, that the defendant had consensual sex with the victim, as such an objection would have been meritless. Munn v. State, 263 Ga. App. 821, 589 S.E.2d 596, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1330 (2003), cert. denied, No. S04C0464, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 230 (Ga. Mar. 1, 2004).

In circumstances in which a trial court found that defense counsel was ineffective for failing to present evidence which supported the defendant's justification defense, it was illogical to grant a new trial for charges of murder and aggravated assault, but not for possession of a firearm in the commission of a crime; the jury could have acquitted the defendant of the possession charge on the basis of justification. Langlands v. State, 280 Ga. 799, 633 S.E.2d 537, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 490 (2006), modified in part, 282 Ga. 103, 646 S.E.2d 253, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 420 (2007).

Defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel relating to charges arising from a fatal accident which occurred at an intersection controlled by a traffic light, based on the defense counsel's failure to introduce county department of transportation reports which showed, inter alia, that four days before the collision there had been a report that the traffic signals at this intersection were showing "green all 4 ways;" while witnesses testified that the victims had a green light when they entered the intersection, the defendant claimed the defendant, also, had a green light; the fact that there had been equipment malfunctions at this intersection, and reports of the signals holding green all four ways less than a week before this accident, was certainly relevant to the defense. Gibson v. State, 280 Ga. App. 435, 634 S.E.2d 204, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 872 (2006), cert. denied, No. S06C2023, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 871 (Ga. Oct. 16, 2006).

Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 because defense counsel relied on the testimony of a licensed professional counselor to testify regarding the insanity defense relied upon by the defendant; while the defendant claimed that the defendant would have been able to convince the jury that the defendant was insane if defense counsel had sought the expertise of a licensed psychologist or psychiatrist, this argument failed, as an insanity defense did not require the expert testimony of a psychologist or psychiatrist, and the witness had conducted forensic evaluations, sometimes at the request of a court, more than 25 times, and the witness had been qualified as an expert in forensic counseling between eight and 10 times. Perez v. State, 281 Ga. 175, 637 S.E.2d 30, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 885 (2006).

Defendant had not shown ineffective assistance of counsel, as counsel's failure to attempt to introduce into evidence additional photographs was not deficient performance when counsel testified that the state's photographs fairly illustrated the area in question and the defendant did not show anything to the contrary; counsel explained that a certain witness had not been called because the witness was clearly hostile toward the defendant, the defendant's claim that counsel should have introduced certain evidence rested on mere speculation, and the evidence showing the child victim walking through a store would have belied the defendant's assertion that the child had already been significantly injured before being left in the defendant's care. Banta v. State, 282 Ga. 392, 651 S.E.2d 21, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 588 (2007).

Defendant, who sought to withdraw a guilty plea, failed to show that counsel was ineffective for failing to introduce at a Jackson-Denno hearing evidence of the defendant's mental health evaluations; thus, the defendant's motion to withdraw the plea was properly denied. The evaluations were not yet available at the time of the hearing, and neither addressed the issue of the defendant's competence at the time the defendant gave the incriminating statement. Robertson v. State, 297 Ga. App. 228, 676 S.E.2d 871, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 409 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1300, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 406 (Ga. June 29, 2009).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to obtain either an independent test of the blood on the defendant's shoes or an independent review of the lab's practices and procedures because defense counsel did not produce a DNA expert who would testify that the state's DNA evidence was defective, and the defendant's unfounded speculation as to the potential for a test result different from that introduced at trial did not constitute a showing of professionally deficient performance by counsel. Lanier v. State, 288 Ga. 109, 702 S.E.2d 141, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 815 (2010).

Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of trial counsel, despite any deficient performance in counsel's lack of diligence in obtaining witness three's (W3) testimony at trial as the outcome of the trial would not have been different if W3's pre-trial testimony had been admitted since it: (1) would have contradicted the defendant's testimony that witness one

(W1) told the victim not to stab the defendant; (2) would have corroborated witnesses one's (W1) and two's (W2) testimony that they did not see the victim stab the defendant; and (3) would not have established that W1 and W2 saw the victim with a knife during the altercation. Hill v. State, 291 Ga. 160, 728 S.E.2d 225, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 500 (2012).

Inadequate preparation of expert witness. — Trial counsel were not ineffective for failing to sufficiently prepare a medical expert, even though the expert was unable while testifying to recall a portion of the statement defendant made to police, where the statement was over 90 pages in length, and counsel testified that they had gone over everything with the expert "from A to Z." Henry v. State, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 812, 269 Ga. 851, 507 S.E.2d 419 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1118, 119 S. Ct. 1768, 143 L. Ed. 2d 798 (1999).

Failure to call expert witness. — Defense counsel was not ineffective, notwithstanding the contention that counsel failed to call a psychiatrist retained by the defense and failed to request a continuance when it became apparent that the psychiatrist would not be available to testify since: (1) the psychiatrist never submitted a report to defense counsel expressing an unequivocal opinion that the defendant met the standard of legal insanity and acknowledged that jurors might have some difficulty accepting as a viable defense the psychiatrist's diagnosis that the defendant experienced a "dissociative reaction"; and (2) by the time defense counsel discovered that the expert was unavailable, numerous other witnesses had already made arrangements to travel significant distances in order to testify for the defense; and (3) defense counsel decided to proceed and to attempt to develop the issue of the client's mental condition through the testimony of the court-appointed psychologist and lay witnesses. Ucak v. State, 273 Ga. 536, 544 S.E.2d 133, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 202 (2001).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for not having retained an independent expert witness to review the physical evidence; the expert that counsel retained for the motion for new trial testified that there was nothing in the evidence that "precluded” the victim’s torso from being 12 to 18 inches off the sofa when the first bullet struck him, but that in any event, the victim was seated, leaning against the back of the sofa, when the third shot was fired into the victim’s mouth from a distance of an inch or two; the evidence showed that the shooting was done with malice, not in self-defense, nor as the result of some provocation. Cooper v. State, 279 Ga. 189, 612 S.E.2d 256, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 243 (2005).

Defendant’s trial counsel was not ineffective on the basis that counsel did not attempt to have a defense reconstruction specialist testify, as counsel explained that counsel considered whether another expert was needed, but believed that an officer provided the information which counsel needed to support the sole defense of misfortune or accident, i.e., that the victim was standing in the middle of the road and it was very dark. Defense counsel further stated that the decision not to seek funds for and hire a reconstruction expert was one of trial tactics because the state’s expert provided the needed facts. Corbett v. State, 277 Ga. App. 715, 627 S.E.2d 365, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 118 (2006), cert. denied, No. S06C1253, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 710 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2006).

Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel because trial counsel failed to call an expert witness regarding child sexual abuse syndrome as counsel explained that counsel did not employ an expert witness regarding child sexual abuse syndrome because, in counsel’s opinion, it was inapplicable. Tadic v. State, 281 Ga. App. 58, 635 S.E.2d 356, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 996 (2006).

With regard to a defendant’s convictions on six counts of first degree vehicular homicide and other crimes, the defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of counsel with regard to defense counsel failing to call a particular witness to testify that the defendant was not driving the vehicle as defense counsel presented seven witnesses who testified that the defendant was not driving the vehicle at issue. Furthermore, defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of counsel with regard to defense counsel failing to hire an accident reconstruction expert as it was a reasonable strategic decision not to challenge the cause and manner of the accident. Davis v. State, 293 Ga. App. 799, 668 S.E.2d 290, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1076 (2008).

Defendant’s argument that counsel was ineffective for not calling a DNA expert was meritless. The defendant did not produce an expert to testify that the state’s DNA evidence was defective, and unlike the case relied upon by the defendant, the DNA evidence was not the sole link between the defendant and the crimes. Williams v. State, 284 Ga. 849, 672 S.E.2d 619, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 17 (2009).

In a rape and aggravated sodomy case, the trial court properly rejected the defendant’s claim that trial counsel was ineffective for not introducing evidence on the adult victim’s mental capacity to consent. Because the defendant failed to proffer the testimony of an uncalled witness, the defendant could not prove that there was a reasonable probability that the trial would have ended differently; furthermore, counsel gave a reasonable explanation for not introducing expert testimony in that counsel believed that the victim might have the capacity to consent and that counsel believed that expert testimony on the issue would not sway the jury. Ravon v. State, 297 Ga. App. 643, 678 S.E.2d 107, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 498 (2009).

Failure to object to DNA evidence.

— Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to obtain an independent DNA analysis to challenge the state’s findings because counsel’s strategy in challenging the state’s version of events was reasonable; the strategy was not rendered unreasonable just because another attorney could have approached the case under a different theory that would have required an independent DNA analysis. Wheeler v. State, 290 Ga. 817, 725 S.E.2d 580, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 333 (2012).

Reasonable tactical decision not to call expert witness. — Attorney’s decision not to call a defense expert to challenge the blood stain on defendant’s boot was a deliberate tactical decision. The fact that the blood on the boots matched that of the victim was consistent with the defense's theory of the case, and the decision not to call expert witnesses concerning the blood stain was reasonable. Williams v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 1276, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6460 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed, 489 U.S. 1094, 109 S. Ct. 1579, 103 L. Ed. 2d 931, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1647 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1090, 110 S. Ct. 1836, 108 L. Ed. 2d 965, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1953 (1990).

Trial counsel's failure to call expert witness did not constitute ineffective assistance where this testimony was not considered necessary and where decision was a reasonable trial tactic. Smith v. State, 207 Ga. App. 290, 428 S.E.2d 95, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 160 (1993).

Because the jury was fully aware of the fact that hair and fiber samples did not yield any match to defendant, counsel's failure to call an expert witness on that subject was not ineffective assistance. Ross v. State, 231 Ga. App. 793, 499 S.E.2d 642, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 288 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1171, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 789 (Ga. Sept. 8, 1998).

It was not professionally unreasonable for counsel not to investigate the possibility of rebuttal testimony from an expert pathologist on the evidence of rape. Parker v. Turpin, 60 F. Supp. 2d 1332, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18591 (N.D. Ga. 1999), aff'd, 244 F.3d 831, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 3942 (11th Cir. 2001).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to obtain and use at trial the services of an expert in the field of domestic violence because counsel did not believe it advisable to employ an expert witness to evaluate the defendant and to testify concerning battered person syndrome or other psychiatric disorders as the defendant's history was replete with violent tendencies that predated the defendant's relationship with the victim, and made the defendant look really bad; and an expert's testimony attributing the defendant's violent response to the defendant's history with the victim could have opened the door to the state's adducing rebuttal evidence of the defendant's violent tendencies that trial counsel sought to have excluded. Martin v. State, 306 Ga. 747, 833 S.E.2d 122, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 604 (2019).

No duty to present cumulative expert testimony. — Where transcript indicated that jury was fully aware that latent prints lifted from crime scenes did not match defendant by virtue of investigator's testimony, defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel because counsel did not call an expert to show such evidence. Ross v. State, 231 Ga. App. 793, 499 S.E.2d 642, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 288 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1171, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 789 (Ga. Sept. 8, 1998).

Failure to investigate, interview, or subpoena not prejudicial. — While defense trial counsel may have been ineffective, there was no prejudice from trial counsel's failure to investigate leads, interview alibi witnesses, or subpoena witnesses where the testimony at a hearing on a motion for a new trial showed that there was little if any material value to the defense that would have been produced by investigation, interview, or subpoena. Davenport v. State, 172 Ga. App. 848, 325 S.E.2d 173, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 3091 (1984).

Defense counsel's failure to interview all of the known witnesses and failure to obtain the complete state witness list did not fall below the standard of effective assistance of counsel, in light of the alibi asserted so vehemently by the defendant, which was supported by several family witnesses interviewed by counsel. Mulligan v. Kemp, 771 F.2d 1436, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 26358 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 480 U.S. 911, 107 S. Ct. 1358, 94 L. Ed. 2d 529, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 1037 (1987).

The evidence of record was not sufficient to compel a finding that trial counsel's performance was deficient or that any deficiency of trial counsel prejudiced the defense because the trial counsel did not call the defendant's physician to testify regarding a heart condition, which the defendant felt could help explain the defendant's behavior at the time the defendant was arrested for failure to maintain the defendant's lane and driving under the influence. Scapin v. State, 204 Ga.

App. 725, 420 S.E.2d 385, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 959 (1992).

No ineffective assistance for failure to call witness where it was never asserted that this witness would provide defendant with an alibi or any other defense. Smith v. State, 209 Ga. App. 540, 433 S.E.2d 694, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 897 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1712, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 954 (Ga. Oct. 12, 1993).

Because defendant failed to show that but for the counsel's failure to interview certain witnesses, including the victim, the outcome would have been different, the defendant failed to meet the burden of showing that the counsel provided ineffective assistance; counsel observed the witnesses in preliminary hearing matters, reviewed the videotape of the victim, and felt prepared to commence the trial, and there was a lot of hostility between the witnesses and defendant. Osmer v. State, 275 Ga. App. 506, 621 S.E.2d 519, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1011 (2005), cert. dismissed, No. S06C2129, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 897 (Ga. Oct. 30, 2006).

Because trial counsel's strategic decision not to call a close family friend as a witness, who could have rebutted the state's evidence that the defendant was controlling, was supported by testimony that the witness would not have added anything to the defense and might have diluted the defendant's voluntary manslaughter theory, counsel was not ineffective in failing have the witness testify. Johnson v. State, 282 Ga. 96, 646 S.E.2d 216, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 418 (2007).

Failure to interview witnesses. — Defendant failed to establish that the defendant suffered prejudice due to defense counsel's failure to interview the defendant's co-indictees prior to trial because the defendant made no attempt to detail what information could have been revealed pre-trial if counsel interviewed the co-indictees and how such information would have been helpful to the defendant's defense; defense counsel thoroughly cross-examined both co-indictees and impeached one of the co-indictees with the co-indictee's various prior inconsistent statements to police investigators. Moore v. State, 288 Ga. 187, 702 S.E.2d 176, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 853 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to conduct a pre-trial interview of an eyewitness when trial counsel testified that counsel twice went to the witness's house to try to speak with the witness but did not get a chance. Durham v. State, 292 Ga. 239, 734 S.E.2d 377, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 953 (2012).

Failure to call witness was tactical decision. — With regard to a defendant's conviction for malice murder, the defendant failed to establish that the defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of trial counsel as a result of trial counsel failing to call certain additional witnesses since at the hearing on the defendant's motion for a new trial, trial counsel testified that various tactical reasons existed for not calling the various additional witnesses. Ventura v. State, 284 Ga. 215, 663 S.E.2d 149, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 527 (2008).

Failure to call witness not ineffective assistance. — Defendant, who claimed that counsel was ineffective, did not show that the outcome of the trial would have been different had a certain eyewitness testified. Because the eyewitness stated that the eyewitness did not see who fired the shots in question, because other witnesses testified consistently with the eyewitness's pretrial statement that the defendant had been wrestled to the ground, and because those witnesses added that they saw the defendant fire a gun despite being wrestled to the ground, the defendant did not show that if the eyewitness had testified at trial, there was a reasonable probability that the result would have been different. Savior v. State, 284 Ga. 488, 668 S.E.2d 695, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 847 (2008).

Defendant claimed that trial counsel was ineffective in failing to secure the presence of the defendant's father to testify at trial; however, the defendant did not call the father as a witness at the motion for new trial hearing, and without a proffer, was not able to show that trial counsel performed deficiently in not calling the father as a witness at trial. In any event, the evidence of the defendant's guilt was overwhelming, so no prejudice was shown. Washington v. State, 285 Ga. 541, 678 S.E.2d 900, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 311 (2009).

Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel when defendant's trial counsel failed to call additional witnesses because the defendant did not identify in the defendant's brief, nor did the defendant call to testify at the motion for new trial hearing, any witnesses who could have allegedly added the "material evidence" that the defendant claimed was missing from the defendant's defense. Jennings v. State, 288 Ga. 120, 702 S.E.2d 151, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 816 (2010).

Defendant failed to show that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel because the defendant did not show that the defendant was prejudiced by counsel's performance in that counsel did not call an alibi witness to testify at the hearing on the defendant's motion for new trial or provide a legally recognized substitute for the witness's testimony; the defendant made no affirmative showing that the purported deficiency in counsel's representation was indicative of ineffectiveness as opposed to being an example of a conscious, deliberate, and reasonable trial strategy. Newsome v. State, 288 Ga. 647, 706 S.E.2d 436, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 155 (2011).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to call the codefendant as a witness because the codefendant was not a consistent witness. Simmons v. State, 289 Ga. 773, 716 S.E.2d 165, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 709 (2011).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because the defendant could not show prejudice as a result of counsel's failure to subpoena a witness to testify that another individual committed the alleged offenses when the defendant failed to call the witness at a motion for a new trial or present a legally acceptable substitute to substantiate the claim that the witness would have been forthcoming. Grell v. State, 291 Ga. 615, 732 S.E.2d 741, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 741 (2012).

Adequate cross-examination of co-defendant's intent to obtain plea deal. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to adequately cross-examine a codefendant regarding the co-defendant's intention to obtain a plea deal from the state in exchange for the co-defendant's testimony because the transcript revealed that counsel thoroughly cross-examined the co-defendant on that topic; and the cross-examination of a witness was most often grounded in matters of trial tactics and strategy and, in those instances, provided no basis for finding counsel's performance deficient. Sullivan v. State, 301 Ga. 37, 799 S.E.2d 163, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 244 (2017).

Examination of witness on plea deal. — Given the lack of evidence of a deal between an accomplice witness and the state, trial counsel was not deficient in failing to cross-examine the witness about whether a deal existed; furthermore, counsel's representation did not fall outside of the broad range of reasonable professional conduct because counsel did not ask the witness whether the witness had a hope of benefitting from the witness's testimony. Even assuming arguendo that trial counsel was deficient in failing to cross-examine the witness about whether the witness held any hope of benefit, the defendant did not shown prejudice; the statement the witness initially gave to the police was consistent in material respects with the witness's trial testimony, and both statements were also corroborative of the victim's trial testimony. Varnier v. State, 297 Ga. App. 799, 678 S.E.2d 515, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 549 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1545, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 588 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2009).

Eventual testimony and cross-examination vitiates charge of harmfulness. — Defense counsel's failure to object to testimony of accomplice at time of introduction was not harmful because accomplice eventually testified at hearing and was subject to cross-examination; and as such the testimony objected to on appeal was cumulative of accomplice's in-court testimony. In re J.B., 223 Ga. App. 429, 477 S.E.2d 874, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 1179 (1996).

such witnesses is made by the defendant and counsel's advice is reasonable under the circumstances. Mitchell v. Hopper, 564 F. Supp. 780, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16411 (S.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 762 F.2d 886, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30164 (11th Cir. 1985).

Offer to obtain witnesses declined by defendant. — Where the record established sufficient time, opportunity, and offer of assistance by the court and counsel to obtain witnesses, which offer was declined by defendant in court, the record did not support appellate counsel's claim of ineffectiveness of the trial defense counsel. Alexander v. State, 186 Ga. App. 787, 368 S.E.2d 550, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 517 (1988).

Obligation not to produce false or misleading evidence. — Defendant's claim that the defendant's attorney should have hired a hand-writing expert to show that the defendant did not write a threatening note the victim received was rejected while the record reflected that the defendant told the attorney that the defendant wrote the note. In light of this admission, the attorney's decision not to produce contrary testimony merely fulfilled the ethical obligation to refrain from producing false or misleading evidence. Williams v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 1276, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6460 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed, 489 U.S. 1094, 109 S. Ct. 1579, 103 L. Ed. 2d 931, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1647 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1090, 110 S. Ct. 1836, 108 L. Ed. 2d 965, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1953 (1990).

Hiring of black investigator to talk to black witnesses. — Denial of defendant's motion for funds to hire a black investigator who "might" be able to interview black witnesses who had been unwilling to talk to counsel did not prevent counsel from rendering reasonable effective assistance, where counsel was later able to interview many of these witnesses prior to trial. Williams v. State, 257 Ga. 311, 357 S.E.2d 578, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 827 (1987).

Guilty plea does not relieve counsel of the responsibility to investigate potential defenses so that the defendant has an informed choice; counsel must assist actually and substantially in the defendant's decision whether to plead guilty, so that the decision is made knowingly and voluntarily, though counsel's advice need not be errorless and need not involve every conceivable defense. Dodd v. Williams, 560 F. Supp. 372, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18612 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Counsel does not have to present all available mitigating circumstance evidence in general, or all mental illness mitigating evidence in particular, in order to render effective assistance of counsel. Waters v. Thomas, 46 F.3d 1506, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 3889 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 856, 116 S. Ct. 160, 133 L. Ed. 2d 103, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 6000 (1995).

Failure to investigate and present mitigating evidence in death penalty case. — In a death penalty case, a habeas court properly found that trial counsel was deficient in investigating and presenting mitigating evidence regarding an inmate's childhood abuse and neglect and the inmate's history of substance abuse and depression. The inmate suffered prejudice because the evidence that should have been presented, showing that the inmate's history of abuse and neglect had led to the inmate's major depression and the inmate's early exposure to alcohol and drugs, would have greatly undermined the state's argument that the inmate had freely chosen a life of addiction. Hall v. McPherson, 284 Ga. 219, 663 S.E.2d 659, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 551 (2008).

Mitigation strategy adopted by counsel at sentencing was not unreasonable under the circumstances. Turpin v. Mobley, 269 Ga. 635, 502 S.E.2d 458, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 750 (1998).

Failure to present psychiatric evidence at culpability stage. — Because there was no evidence that through reasonable diligence counsel could have obtained an expert to testify favorably on the mental illness defense, defendant was not prejudiced by any alleged error of counsel in failing to present psychiatric evidence during the culpability stage. Parker v. Turpin, 60 F. Supp. 2d 1332, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18591 (N.D. Ga. 1999), aff'd, 244 F.3d 831, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 3942 (11th Cir. 2001).

Failure to present psychiatric evaluation at sentencing hearing. —

Where, although trial counsel was aware well in advance of trial that the defendant had spent at least a brief period of time in a mental hospital shortly before the shooting, and that for some reason a psychiatric evaluation had already been ordered, counsel completely ignored the possible ramifications of those facts as regards the sentencing proceeding. This omission denied the defendant reasonably competent representation at the penalty phase, and the resulting prejudice was clear, as the only testimony the jury heard at sentencing concerning the defendant's mental history and condition, including the bizarre behavior the defendant occasionally exhibited, was that which was presented by the defendant's parent. Stephens v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 642, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 5265 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 872, 109 S. Ct. 189, 102 L. Ed. 2d 158, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3631 (1988).

Failure to present psychiatric testimony at sentencing. — Absent a showing that testimony concerning the defendant's psychiatric condition was available and that, had it been requested, it could have materially affected the defendant's sentence, the trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion for new trial on the basis that the defendant's trial counsel was ineffective because counsel failed to offer testimony during the sentencing phase concerning the defendant's psychiatric condition. Gilbert v. State, 209 Ga. App. 483, 433 S.E.2d 664, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 926 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1645, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 886 (Ga. Oct. 5, 1993).

Defendant was sentenced to death for murder. Defense counsel was not ineffective for allegedly failing to obtain mental health reports as the defendant would not have been prejudiced by any such failure because those reports contained material that would have been damaging to the defendant's mitigation case, including statements that the defendant lacked remorse. Whatley v. Terry, 284 Ga. 555, 668 S.E.2d 651, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 824 (2008), cert. denied, 556 U.S. 1248, 129 S. Ct. 2409, 173 L. Ed. 2d 1316, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 3757 (2009).

Failure of the state to provide an indigent defendant with a psychiatric examination so materially interfered with the defendant's ability "to require the prosecution's case to survive the crucible of meaningful adversarial testing" as to raise a presumption that the defendant's counsel could not have been able to provide effective assistance. Blake v. Kemp, 758 F.2d 523, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 29146 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 998, 106 S. Ct. 374, 88 L. Ed. 2d 367, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 4541 (1985).

Psychological evaluation is not required in every death penalty case, and because counsel had ample opportunity to assess the defendant's state of mind, counsel's conclusion that further investigation into the defendant's mental state would be fruitless was entirely reasonable under the circumstances. Mitchell v. Hopper, 564 F. Supp. 780, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16411 (S.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 762 F.2d 886, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30164 (11th Cir. 1985).

Instruction on "mere association" not ineffective assistance of counsel.

— Defendant's claims of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because the defendant failed to show that the state could not have provided additional foundational support for the admission of cell phones if counsel had objected to their admission for failure to authenticate and trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to request a jury instruction on "mere association" where the charge, as a whole, was an accurate statement of the applicable law and the "mere association" charge would have added little, if any, to the instructions given. Vivian v. State, 312 Ga. 268, 862 S.E.2d 138, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 569 (2021).

Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel. —

Although defendant claimed that defense counsel: (1) allegedly met with defendant only three times prior to defendant's felony murder trial; (2) did not seek the help of an investigator; (3) failed to subpoena witnesses who would have testified on defendant's behalf; (4) neglected to inform the trial court that defendant had conflicts with two prospective jurors; and (5) failed to have defendant testify at a Jackson-
