Denno hearing, defendant failed in defendant's burden of establishing defendant's claim of ineffective assistance, as the trial court's credibility determinations on the issue were binding if not clearly erroneous, and the trial court found that defense counsel was not deficient after hearing testimony from defense counsel that defense counsel met with defendant numerous times, investigated the case personally, contacted the witnesses suggested by defendant and did not find them helpful, sought other witnesses, did not recall being told of conflicts with potential jurors, and did not call defendant at the Jackson v. Denno hearing because of a strategic decision to avoid giving the prosecution further "ammunition." Salysers v. State, 276 Ga. 568, 580 S.E.2d 240, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 378 (2003).

Failure to raise mental illness pre-trial. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to raise the issue of mental illness prior to trial, and in failing to present evidence of it at trial where the defendant was examined by both a state psychologist and an independent psychologist, neither of whom found the defendant incompetent to stand trial. Hosick v. State, 262 Ga. 432, 421 S.E.2d 65, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 776 (1992).

Selection of psychiatrist by counsel. — Selecting the only cooperative although not entirely favorable psychiatrist, as opposed to none, was not deficient. Hance v. Zant, 981 F.2d 1180, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 177 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 920, 114 S. Ct. 317, 126 L. Ed. 2d 263, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 6431 (1993).

Counsel's advice on testifying by defendant. — Because the evidence showed that the defendant's counsel discussed with the defendant the right to testify and advised against it, and defendant never affirmatively asked to testify, defendant failed to demonstrate that counsel erroneously deprived the defendant of the choice to testify and that counsel's deficiency in this regard deprived the defendant of a fair trial. Mobley v. State, 264 Ga. 854, 452 S.E.2d 500, 1995

Ga. LEXIS 41 (1995); Barron v. State, 264 Ga. 865, 452 S.E.2d 504, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 35 (1995).

Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel at a trial for rape and aggravated sodomy because there was no basis to request a continuance or disallowance of a colposcope printout, which showed the victim's anal bruising, based on the state's failure to produce the printout before trial because: (1) defendant already had the assistant's examination report, which mentioned the picture; (2) defendant's counsel was permitted to interview the assistant before the assistant's testimony; (3) the day of the trial was the first time that the prosecutor saw the picture; (4) there was no bad faith by the state; and (5) the printout was cumulative of other testimony. Furthermore, defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to notify defendant of the added sodomy charge because defendant, who had a prior rape conviction, was already facing a mandatory life without parole sentence upon conviction of rape, regardless of the sodomy charge. McMorris v. State, 263 Ga. App. 630, 588 S.E.2d 817, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1280 (2003).

Counsel's failure to request broad jury instruction on justification. —

Defendant did not show that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel when defendant's trial counsel did not request a broader jury instruction on justification that would have stated that a victim's threats and menaces could justify a defendant's use of deadly force, as the justification charge the trial court gave the jury was adequate; moreover, since defendant's trial counsel did not testify at defendant's motion for a new trial, defendant did not show why defendant's counsel did not request a broader charge, and, thus, defendant did not overcome the presumption that the attorney's conduct was within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance because the attorney might have had several legitimate reasons for not requesting a broader charge, which also meant defendant could not show one required component of ineffectiveness, that the attorney's representation was deficient. Garrett v. State, 276 Ga. 556, 580 S.E.2d 236, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 374 (2003).

Defendant's counsel was not ineffective in defendant's shoplifting case for: (1) not viewing a videotape of defendant's consent to a search of defendant's vehicle; and (2) failing to subpoena witnesses or documents from the store to challenge the pricing and identification of the shoplifted items. Given that: (1) the decision not to view the videotape was a matter of trial strategy based upon counsel's knowledge that the videotape was defective and that the tape would not have been useful because the store manager saw defendant place the items in the trunk of defendant's car such that the police had probable cause to search the car even without defendant's valid consent, which, also meant that, even if counsel erred, the error did not prejudice defendant because a suppression motion would not have been successful; and (2) counsel investigated and interviewed witnesses and determined that the value of the merchandise was irrelevant due to defendant's criminal history and also made the strategic decision not to introduce evidence regarding pricing and valuation, as that would have eliminated counsel's right to present the opening and concluding remarks during closing argument. Horne v. State, 260 Ga. App. 640, 580 S.E.2d 644, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 447 (2003).

Counsel's failure to request charge on impeachment of witness. — Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel where the attorney did not request a charge on impeachment of a witness by a prior conviction of a crime of moral turpitude in light of the overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt, even if the convicted witness's testimony had been discounted. Holt v. State, 260 Ga. App. 826, 581 S.E.2d 257, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 482 (2003).

Trial court's determination that the defendant received effective assistance of counsel was not clearly erroneous because: (1) defense counsel failed to object to hearsay evidence that was cumulative, and therefore harmless, as the defendant failed to show that but for the alleged deficiency, the outcome of the proceedings would have been different; and (2) defense counsel failed to object to the defendant's spouse's testimony at the presentencing hearing, as there was no showing that the improper evidence prejudiced the defendant. Ingram v. State, 262 Ga. App. 304, 585 S.E.2d 211, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 914 (2003).

Counsel's communication on plea deal and other preliminary matters.

— In a case where defendant was convicted of selling cocaine and obstruction of an officer, defendant failed to establish that counsel was ineffective, because trial counsel insisted that counsel communicated a plea to defendant and that defendant was "adamant" on not accepting the plea, and the record revealed that trial counsel had several meetings with the defendant, conducted discovery, filed pre-trial motions, and spoke with most of the state's witnesses. Trammell v. State, 262 Ga. App. 786, 586 S.E.2d 693, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1021 (2003).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in counsel's cross-examination of a rape victim, after the victim changed the victim's testimony as: (1) the trial counsel thoroughly cross-examined the victim regarding the changed testimony; (2) the trial counsel pointed out that the victim had testified just minutes before that the victim had talked to the victim's spouse about the victim's testimony; and (3) the trial counsel argued to the jury that the victim's changed testimony was suspect. Furthermore, trial counsel was not ineffective in opening the door to the admission of character evidence by cross-examining a detective who executed a search warrant as to whether defendant lived in the room searched as the examination was a matter of sound trial strategy. Johnson v. State, 263 Ga. App. 443, 587 S.E.2d 775, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1138 (2003).

Failure to object to 9-11 comments from prosecutor. — Defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the prosecutor's reference to the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks; there was no evidence in the record as to trial counsel's perspective because trial counsel did not testify at the hearing on the motion for new trial, and while the appellate court did not condone the analogy's use so soon after the 9-11 tragedy, it could not conclude that but for trial counsel's failure to object to its use, the jury would have acquitted defendant. Chalvatzis v. State, 265 Ga. App. 699, 595 S.E.2d 558, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 242 (2004).

Failure to object to references to drug use. — When defendant's counsel did not object to references to defendant's alleged drug use, this was not ineffective assistance of counsel because the references were relevant to defendant's argument with the victim when the crimes with which defendant was charged occurred and to whether the victim was afraid of defendant, so they were relevant to the credibility of both defendant and the victim, on which the case ultimately turned. Johnson v. State, 268 Ga. App. 1, 601 S.E.2d 392, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 835 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1735, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 665 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2004).

Evidence supported the trial court's conclusion that defendant's trial counsel rendered effective assistance because: (1) counsel did not err in not moving for a directed verdict because the evidence sufficed to sustain defendant's conviction for possession-of-a-firearm-by-a-convicted-felon charge; (2) counsel's failure to object to the trial court's failure to recharge the jury in the second phase of the bifurcated trial was harmless error; (3) counsel's failure to object to detective's testimony regarding citizens' complaints about a drug dealer was appropriate trial strategy because counsel did not want to call more attention to the statement; and (4) counsel's failure to object to the prosecutor's closing argument statements was not deficient performance as each of the prosecutor's statements was a reasonable inference drawn from the evidence. Ballard v. State, 268 Ga. App. 55, 601 S.E.2d 434, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 840 (2004).

Failure to object to opinion testimony. — Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for new trial, because, although trial counsel's failure to object to opinion testimony about the victim's veracity or request that it be stricken constituted deficient performance, the testimony was not so significant as to have contributed to the jury's verdict. Accordingly, defendant failed to demonstrate that but for counsel's failure to object or move to strike, a reasonable probability exists that the result of the trial would have been different. Mealor v. State, 266 Ga. App. 274, 596 S.E.2d 632, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 162 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1281, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 770 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2004).

Counsel's questioning on foundation. — Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim was rejected where defense counsel objected to a specific question on the basis of foundation, and then informed the trial court what the proper foundation would be for the introduction of the sought-after testimony; it was not error to interpose a foundational objection in a manner consistent with the ability to secure appellate review of the trial court's ruling. McCullough v. State, 268 Ga. App. 445, 602 S.E.2d 181, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 942 (2004).

Counsel for convicted child molester: (1) adequately investigated; (2) employed a recognized trial tactic of not calling expert and other witnesses to testify that child's testimony was based on dreams or family background and not reality in order to preserve the final word in closing argument; and (3) was not shown to have engaged in performance that affected the outcome of the trial by not objecting to testimony under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-36 regarding to the defendant's failure to respond to the state's investigator, and under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85(b), by not requesting a special instruction regarding the child's alleged false swearing. Bruce v. State, 268 Ga. App. 677, 603 S.E.2d 33, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 930 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C2046, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 976 (Ga. Oct. 25, 2004).

Prejudice to defendant not shown by counsel's actions. — Defendant failed to show that the counsel rendered ineffective assistance, in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6, on the basis that the counsel did not object when one of the victims testified that defendant stabbed the victim on purpose and not by accident, as there was no support for the proposition that such a statement was inadmissible opinion testimony under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-65; even if it were deemed inadmissible, no prejudice was shown to defendant. Brown v. State, 275 Ga. App. 99, 619 S.E.2d 789, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 899 (2005), cert. denied, No. S06C0003, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 53 (Ga. Jan. 17, 2006).

Defendant failed to show that the counsel rendered ineffective assistance under the Strickland standard in defendant's criminal trial, as counsel's performance during trial was not shown to be deficient; moreover, defendant's claims that the counsel sought money in order to make a deal with the district attorney, that the counsel failed to file certain motions requested by defendant, and that counsel failed to provide a list of witnesses in a timely manner, were specifically denied by the counsel in open court and further, defendant failed to show any prejudice resulted from the alleged failures of the counsel. Isaac v. State, 275 Ga. App. 254, 620 S.E.2d 483, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 942 (2005).

Failure to explore victim's dangerous propensity. — In a prosecution of defendant for the murder of the defendant's mother's boyfriend, defense counsel failure to investigate the victim's violent nature was not ineffective; the jury was given considerable information concerning the victim's violent nature, that the victim had beaten defendant's mother, and had consumed cocaine; even with further investigation, the outcome of the trial would not have changed; the jury rejected both the justification defense and the lesser charge because there was overwhelming evidence that defendant committed malice murder. Cooper v. State, 279 Ga. 189, 612 S.E.2d 256, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 243 (2005).

Because, inter alia, defendant's counsel requested a full and complete recodation of the trial, there was no evidence that a change of venue was warranted, counsel thoroughly investigated the case, and there was no evidence of prosecutorial misconduct, defendant failed to demonstrate any deficiency by trial counsel or that defendant was prejudiced thereby. Hampton v. State, 279 Ga. 625, 619 S.E.2d 616, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 520 (2005).

Counsel's failure to anticipate change in law. — Because the U.S. Supreme Court case of Crawford had not yet been decided when defendant's criminal trial was held, defendant's counsel could not have been deemed ineffective under U.S. Const., amend. 6 for failing to anticipate a change in the law and make such an argument with respect to the admissibility of a deceased witness's statement; rather, the statement was properly admitted under the necessity exception to the hearsay rule, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-3-1(b), as there was no indication that the statement was not accompanied by indicia of reliability, and in any event, admission thereof was harmless because it was cumulative of other evidence admitted in the trial. Redwine v. State, 280 Ga. 58, 623 S.E.2d 485, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 863 (2005).

Statements by defendant's co-conspirator to a third person regarding defendant's actions during the criminal project bore sufficient indicia of reliability to be admissible in defendant's criminal trial, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-3-5, and any objection on the grounds of the confrontation clause under U.S. Const., amend. 6 or on hearsay grounds would have lacked merit; accordingly, defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the admission thereof. Redwine v. State, 280 Ga. 58, 623 S.E.2d 485, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 863 (2005).

Despite the defendant's claims that trial counsel failed to: (1) discuss the possibility of a plea or engage in plea negotiations with the state; (2) advise defendant of the consequences of being sentenced as a recidivist; and (3) advise defendant of the consequences of a speedy trial demand, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims failed because the record showed that the state never made a plea offer and the defendant failed to show that the outcome of the trial would have been different but for trial counsel's alleged remaining errors. Cater v. State, 280 Ga. App. 891, 635 S.E.2d 246, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 973 (2006), cert. denied, No. S06C2148, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 910 (Ga. Oct. 30, 2006).

Because trial counsel was not ineffective in: (1) failing to seek suppression of criminal acts which took place in other jurisdictions and to which the defendant was connected because they were part of the crime spree that began with the murder of the victim, as such was admissible; (2) failing to seek a mistrial when an objection to the state's opening statement, although overruled, had some merit; (3) failing to object to jury instructions on mere presence and parties to a crime, as the charges were correct statements of the law and supported by the evidence; (4) making statements in closing argument that were actually in furtherance of the defense's theory of the case; (5) entering into a stipulation with the prosecutor; and (6) failing to move for a directed verdict of acquittal, as the evidence supported the defendant's convictions, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims lacked merit. Pruitt v. State, 282 Ga. 30, 644 S.E.2d 837, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 347 (2007).

Counsel's advice on plea deal not ineffective. — Trial counsel's trial tactics and strategy could not form the basis of an ineffective assistance of counsel claim. Moreover, although the defendant initially wanted to accept a plea offer, when the defendant decided to go to trial instead, an ineffective assistance of counsel claim attached to said decision lacked merit, as the defendant failed to show that counsel's advice in this regard was insufficient or erroneous. Starks v. State, 283 Ga. 164, 656 S.E.2d 518, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 29 (2008).

Counsel's decision on use of pre-trial statement. — A defendant had not shown that counsel was ineffective for putting a witness's pretrial statement into evidence. Counsel testified that the statement was put into evidence so that the jury could see the inconsistencies between it and the witness's testimony in court, and the portion of the statement describing the defendant as the individual who stabbed the victim in the chest merely echoed the witness's trial testimony. Stanley v. State, 283 Ga. 36, 656 S.E.2d 806, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 26 (2008).

Counsel's treatment of eyewitness statement. — Defendant had not shown that counsel was ineffective for not seeking to strike certain eyewitness testimony: it was clear that the eyewitness's statement that the victim had died because the defendant stabbed the victim in the chest was not expert testimony, and any error was nonprejudicial in light of the overwhelming evidence that the defendant inflicted the stab wound to the victim's chest and the uncontradicted evidence that the victim died as the result of that wound. Stanley v. State, 283 Ga. 36, 656 S.E.2d 806, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 26 (2008).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims lacked merit because the defendant failed to: (1) show prejudice resulting from counsel's alleged ineffectiveness by failing to impeach two witnesses on cross-examination with prior statements they made; and (2) make and, in all likelihood, could not have made, a strong showing that the identification testimony would have been suppressed had trial counsel so moved. Rivers v. State, 283 Ga. 1, 655 S.E.2d 594, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 10 (2008).

Defendant had not shown ineffective assistance of counsel because it was not unreasonable for counsel to allow defendant's statement to come into evidence, as it allowed counsel to place defendant's version of events before the jury without subjecting defendant to cross-examination; further, chain of custody objection would not have been meritorious, it was not improper for an officer to come to the defendant's house to investigate information received from an anonymous tip, it was highly probable that erroneous testimony did not contribute to the verdict, and defendant had not shown how further cross-examination of a certain witness would have produced a different result. Felton v. State, 283 Ga. 242, 657 S.E.2d 850, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 191 (2008).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel argument failed. The fact that trial counsel did not introduce every single piece of evidence at a Jackson-Denno hearing that another lawyer might have introduced did not require a finding of inadequate representation, and the defendant had not shown that additional evidence would have altered the outcome of the trial; counsel could not be faulted for seeking funds for an expert when the expert's testimony would have been inadmissible; and the defendant's assertions that trial counsel failed to impeach a witness and to consult with the defendant about lesser included charges were belied by the record. Allen v. State, 283 Ga. 304, 658 S.E.2d 580, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 251 (2008), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion to withdraw a guilty plea to a charge of malice murder, because sufficient evidence was presented to support a finding that: (1) counsel did not render ineffective assistance in advising the defendant as to said plea; (2) counsel attempted, albeit unsuccessfully to pursue a voluntary manslaughter defense and plea deal with the state; (3) the defendant was generally competent at the time of the murder; (4) a statement by a proposed expert witness in support of said defense would have been inadmissible as an opinion on the ultimate issue and could not, in any event, have helped the defendant's case; and (5) the viability of any type of voluntary manslaughter defense was highly unlikely. Trauth v. State, 283 Ga. 141, 657 S.E.2d 225, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 145 (2008).

There was no merit to a defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims. A motion to suppress incriminating letters would have been meritless because the defendant's friend willingly handed the letters over to police and the letters were not discovered as a result of an illegal search; counsel did not have a witness testify because counsel did not believe that the witness was credible; and given the fact that the defendant would have been subject to extensive and potentially damaging cross-examination about the letters had the defendant testified, counsel was not deficient in advising the defendant not to testify and the defendant had not been prejudiced by not testifying. Lockheart v. State, 284 Ga. 78, 663 S.E.2d 213, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 541 (2008).

Defendant did not show ineffective assistance of counsel when there was no evidence that recusal of the trial judge was warranted and there was no evidentiary support for the defendant's claim that trial counsel did not adequately involve the defendant in the pretrial and trial proceedings. Furthermore, the defendant did not show how the alleged deficiencies would have affected the outcome of the trial. Allen v. State, 284 Ga. 310, 667 S.E.2d 54, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 738 (2008).

Defendant did not demonstrate that counsel's failure to call certain witnesses at trial or to investigate and present expert testimony on eyewitness identification constituted deficient performance. Although the defendant asserted in a new trial motion that certain witnesses had material evidence relating to the case, at the new trial hearing the defendant neither identified these witnesses nor put forward any evidence as to the testimony the witnesses would have given. Crane v. State, 294 Ga. App. 321, 670 S.E.2d 123, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1178 (2008).

Defendant did not prove that trial counsel was ineffective when the defendant did not cite to any facts in the record to support the claim, when the defendant failed to present any admissible evidence regarding what an alleged alibi witness would have said if counsel had called the witness to testify at trial, and when contrary to the defendant's claim, counsel cross-examined the victim about past drug convictions. Moreover, even if counsel was ineffective, the evidence of the defendant's guilt was overwhelming, so the defendant did not show prejudice. Rouse v. State, 295 Ga. App. 61, 670 S.E.2d 869, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1346 (2008).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim based on counsel's failure to strike a juror and to make certain objections failed. The juror stated that the juror did not think the juror would be biased against the defendant and would try to base the juror's decision solely on the evidence; incriminating statements by the defendant were admissible as an exception to the hearsay rule as admissions against interest; a physician who testified that the victim's demeanor was consistent with that of a sexual assault victim was not bolstering the victim's testimony; even if trial counsel erred in failing to object to the prosecutor's statement that trial counsel should make the defendant show the defendant's teeth, no prejudice had been shown given counsel's rebuttal in closing and the significant evidence of guilt; and the prosecutor was not offering the prosecutor's personal belief about the veracity of an eyewitness and the victim, but instead was arguing that based on the facts and reasonable inferences drawn therefrom, the jury should conclude that those witnesses were telling the truth. Brown v. State, 293 Ga. App. 564, 667 S.E.2d 410, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1010 (2008).

As a defendant failed to show that but for defense counsel's failure to review the state's file, it was reasonably probable the defendant would have accepted the state's plea offer, the defendant was not entitled to new trial based on ineffective counsel. As the defendant had continued to deny involvement in the crime in the face of overwhelming evidence of guilt, it strained credulity for the defendant to assert that the defendant would have ever pled guilty. Cleveland v. State, 285 Ga. 142, 674 S.E.2d 289, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 72 (2009).

Counsel was not ineffective under the Sixth Amendment with regard to questioning of two witnesses. Contrary to the defendant's argument, the first witness had not seen a statement that the defendant claimed counsel should have asked the witness about; counsel's cross-examination of the second witness was extensive and thorough; and the defendant's claim that the second witness exonerated one defendant and implicated the other did not withstand scrutiny, as the witness's trial testimony implicated both defendants. Anderson v. State, 285 Ga. 496, 678 S.E.2d 84, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 295 (2009).

Because the defendant failed to offer proof at a motion for a new trial hearing that the defendant's trial counsel was ineffective, in that counsel failed to elicit sufficient testimony from an expert at a hearing about the defendant's mental abilities and condition when the defendant made a statement to the police, the defendant failed to demonstrate prejudice and the defendant's claim of ineffective assistance was properly denied. Watkins v. State, 289 Ga. 359, 711 S.E.2d 655, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 474 (2011).

Defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because counsel could not be ineffective for failing to object to testimony that did not affect the outcome of the trial, nor was counsel deficient in eliciting an arresting officer's testimony that the officer had heard over the police radio that the defendant was armed with a gun and prepared to use the gun as the question was designed to show that the officer was being overly dramatic, which it did and was not a patently unreasonable tactic. Westbrook v. State, 291 Ga. 60, 727 S.E.2d 473, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 441 (2012).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel lacked merit because the defendant failed to prove that trial counsel advised defendant that the defendant's juvenile record could be used to impeach the defendant or to show prejudice from trial counsel's failure to impeach a detective's testimony regarding the defendant's failure to raise an alibi defense in the defendant's interview with police. Cartwright v. State, 291 Ga. 498, 731 S.E.2d 353, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 683 (2012).

Defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because, inter alia, the evidence showed that trial counsel adequately investigated the case, conferred with a well known ballistics expert, but concluded that such expert opinion would not be helpful. Faniel v. State, 291 Ga. 559, 731 S.E.2d 750, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 700 (2012).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed, as counsel presented mitigation witnesses and conducted a reasonable investigation as to mitigating circumstances to present at sentencing; counsel was not ineffective for failing to develop and present evidence of the victim's methamphetamine use at the time of the crimes to explain the victim's behavior, because the only evidence of such use was from two to three days prior to the incident and thus, would have been irrelevant and inadmissible; and counsel was not ineffective for failing to present the testimony of the victim's girlfriend regarding a recent altercation between the victim and the victim's cousin, as the girlfriend testified at the motion for a new trial that no such fight occurred, only a scuffle in which the victim was not hit. Barrett v. State, 292 Ga. 160, 733 S.E.2d 304, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 798 (2012), cert. denied, 571 U.S. 834, 134 S. Ct. 71, 187 L. Ed. 2d 56, 2013 U.S. LEXIS 5600 (2013).

As the defendant had decided to turn himself in and had already revealed to a law enforcement officer that the defendant had killed the victim, claiming self defense, and that the defendant had attempted to conceal the body, trial counsel's decision to permit the defendant to cooperate in the interrogations and searches did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel. Woods v. State, 291 Ga. 804, 733 S.E.2d 730, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 844 (2012).

Trial counsel's failure to convince the trial court to admit statements about the involvement of others and failure to make objection to the admission of a recorded statement did not amount to ineffective assistance because the arguments and objections sought were meritless. Bradley v. State, 292 Ga. 607, 740 S.E.2d 100, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 259 (2013).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to offer a "timeline" to show that the defendant's girlfriend delayed taking the victim to the hospital because the girlfriend never provided exact times in her testimony and nothing indicated that any delay in seeking medical treatment contributed to the victim's death. Jones v. State, 292 Ga. 593, 740 S.E.2d 147, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 260 (2013).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to move to redact the portion of the autopsy report that said the manner of death was homicide because it was undisputed that the victim was killed by someone and the ultimate issue for the jury was whether the defendant was the killer. Young v. State, 292 Ga. 443, 738 S.E.2d 575, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 148 (2013).

Defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because the defendant failed to show either professional deficiencies by counsel or prejudice in regard to the defendant's complaints about a jury instruction on "no duty to retreat," the alleged criminal history of a witness, and the detective's alleged bolstering of a witness's testimony, claims for which the supreme court found no support. Hoffler v. State, 292 Ga. 537, 739 S.E.2d 362, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 206 (2013).

Defense counsel could not have been ineffective for failing to demand the trial court extend use immunity to a defense witness who invoked the Fifth Amendment right to remain silent as there was not current Georgia authority for such action. Ward v. State, 292 Ga. 637, 740 S.E.2d 112, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 266 (2013).

Counsel was not ineffective for failing to advocate for the defendant to have makeup, a wig, and personal grooming tools to enable the defendant to look nicer at trial because it was a reasonable trial strategy for counsel to want to present the defendant in a way that made the defendant look like a psychologically defeated and traumatized young woman who had been victimized by an abusive and violent husband. Schutt v. State, 292 Ga. 625, 740 S.E.2d 163, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 263 (2013).

Defendant's claims of ineffective assistance of counsel failed, as, inter alia, counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to an agent's testimony that the agent's investigation led the agent to believe that the defendant killed the victim as the defendant did not inquire into the reason for such failure and failed to overcome the presumption that counsel's actions fell within the broad range of reasonable professional conduct. Nor was counsel ineffective for failing to object to the district attorney's opening statement, closing argument, or other alleged misconduct as the jury was instructed that the opening statement was not evidence, the prosecutor drew reasonable inferences from the evidence in closing argument, and any factual issues were for the jury. Hall v. State, 292 Ga. 701, 743 S.E.2d 6, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 303 (2013).

Trial counsel could not be ineffective for failing to object to a jury instruction that did not affect the outcome of the trial or for failing to object to testimony, a tactical decision. Gaither v. State, 321 Ga. App. 643, 742 S.E.2d 158, 2013 Ga. App. LEXIS 362 (2013).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because cell phone records and a 9-1-1 call log were cumulative of other testimony and thus, the defendant was not prejudiced by counsel's failure to object to their admission; the prejudicial effect of a misstatement in counsel's opening statement was mitigated by the trial court charging the jury that opening statements were not evidence; counsel was not ineffective for failing to make a meritless object to the admission of a witness's prior consistent statement, admissible because the witness's veracity was placed at issue; and the failure to request a charge on self-defense did not amount to ineffective assistance when the evidence did not support such a charge and it would have been inconsistent with the defense theory. Williams v. State, 292 Ga. 844, 742 S.E.2d 445, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 379 (2013).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for inadvertently opening the door to the state's question about the defendant's silence in trial counsel's attempt to highlight the accomplice's behavior of giving multiple versions of an event in an effort to point fingers at everyone except the accomplice personally. Goodman v. State, 293 Ga. 80, 742 S.E.2d 719, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 503 (2013).

Defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because the defendant failed to show what evidence might have been revealed if counsel had cross-examined the defendant's cousin about an unrelated indictment to show any bias the cousin might have had to color the cousin's testimony in favor of the state and how it would have produced a different result. Mathis v. State, 293 Ga. 35, 743 S.E.2d 393, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 440 (2013).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because the defendant made no showing that the defendant's text requests for the victim's mother to call the defendant as soon as possible harmed the defendant's case, and counsel's decision not to call an expert, after a pediatrician concluded that the victim's injuries could have been caused by CPR, was a reasonable, strategic decision. Holloman v. State,

Claim of ineffective assistance failed because the defendant failed to prove that the outcome would have been different if counsel had moved to redact from the indictment a charge that the defendant violated the Georgia Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-14-1 et seq., though a pattern of criminal activity in furtherance of a pimping enterprise, and testimony regarding events leading up to the arrest of the defendant and another allowed counsel to argue that the weapon did not belong to the defendant but to the other individual. Holmes v. State, 293 Ga. 229, 744 S.E.2d 701, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 557, cert. denied, 571 U.S. 1096, 134 S. Ct. 787, 187 L. Ed. 2d 598, 2013 U.S. LEXIS 8844 (2013).

Trial counsel's decision not to cross-examine two witnesses about certain criminal charges did not amount to ineffective assistance because it could not be said that no reasonable attorney would have decided against attempting to ask about the charges given their limited probative value to show bias and the cross-examination that counsel did conduct. Romer v. State, 293 Ga. 339, 745 S.E.2d 637, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 600 (2013).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claims failed based on unavailability of records, the defendant's failure to show prejudice from counsel's decisions, the defendant's failure to show that strategic decisions were unreasonable, the defendant's failure to show that counsel's cross-examination was deficient, and the fact that counsel did, but was not required to provide the defendant, with discovery prior to trial. Lee v. State, 318 Ga. 412, 897 S.E.2d 856, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 31 (2024).

Counsel at the defendant's resentencing trial was not ineffective in allegedly failing properly to investigate, prepare and present evidence of the defendant's mental condition and family background. The defendant did not demonstrate a reasonable probability that, if adduced at trial, the psychiatric and background evidence presented in the habeas proceeding would have caused the sentencer to conclude that the balance of aggravating and mitigating circumstances did not warrant death. Hance v. Kemp, 258 Ga. 649, 373 S.E.2d 184, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 417 (1988), cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1012, 109 S. Ct. 1658, 104 L. Ed. 2d 172, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1679 (1989).

Psychiatric testimony that defendant legally sane. — Alleged lack of a “meaningful” psychiatric examination did not render the defendant’s counsel ineffective insofar as the presentation of a defense of mental illness was concerned, because the defendant called as a witness the examining psychiatrist, who expounded upon the psychiatrist’s written report and testified that the psychiatrist had concluded that the defendant was legally sane, although suffering from schizophrenia. Heflin v. State, 183 Ga. App. 149, 358 S.E.2d 298, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2683 (1987).

Denial of motion for psychiatric assistance. — Where the record disclosed no evidence that the defendant’s sanity at the time of the offenses charged would be a significant factor at trial nor even that the defendant’s mental condition was seriously in question, there was no abuse of discretion in the trial court’s denial of the defendant’s “motion for psychiatric assistance,” and the defendant also suffered no deprivation of effective assistance of counsel resulting from the trial court’s denial of the defendant’s motion. Davidson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 557, 359 S.E.2d 372, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2725 (1987), cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905.

“Spare him for science” argument. — The contention that use of the “spare him for science” argument constitutes ineffective assistance of counsel finds no support. Waters v. Thomas, 46 F.3d 1506, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 3889 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 856, 116 S. Ct. 160, 133 L. Ed. 2d 103, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 6000 (1995).

Defendant’s failure to testify on the defendant’s own behalf could not be attributed to the defendant’s trial counsel who was not ineffective therefore. Rachell v. State, 210 Ga. App. 106, 435 S.E.2d 480, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1106 (1993).

Failure to allow defendant to testify. — Defendant’s claim that trial counsel’s failure to call the defendant as a witness despite the defendant’s insistence that the defendant testify, constituted ineffective assistance of counsel, and, as it was raised for the first time on appeal, warranted remand. Robbins v. State, 207 Ga. App. 556, 428 S.E.2d 450, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 257 (1993).

Trial counsel’s decision not to call the defendant and the defendant’s alibi witness did not fall below standard of reasonableness. Phillips v. State, 233 Ga. App. 557, 504 S.E.2d 762, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1023 (1998).

Where counsel had sound strategic reasons for advising a defendant not to testify at defendant’s murder trial, and defendant was aware that defendant could testify despite counsel’s advice but never requested to do so, counsel was not ineffective for refusing to allow defendant to testify. Furthermore, defendant’s contention that counsel improperly failed to investigate the murder case and call essential witnesses was rejected since no prejudice to defendant was shown from the alleged ineffective assistance of counsel and since defendant made no proffer as to what a thorough investigation would have uncovered or what the allegedly essential witnesses would have said. Domingues v. State, 277 Ga. 373, 589 S.E.2d 102, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 1000 (2003).

Defendant’s claim that counsel was ineffective for advising defendant not to testify on defendant’s own behalf was without merit because defendant made this decision on defendant’s own after being advised by counsel. Simpson v. State, 277 Ga. 356, 589 S.E.2d 90, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 997 (2003).

Defendant’s trial counsel was not ineffective in the criminal trial in refusing to allow defendant to testify, as counsel ultimately left the decision to defendant and defendant decided against testifying, and it was not in defendant’s best interest to testify because the defendant’s version of events would have put the defendant in the vicinity of the crime; defendant failed to establish that the counsel prevented the defendant from testifying, and the defendant could not complain of the election to follow the reasonable tactical advice of the lawyer. Todd v. State, 275 Ga. App. 459, 620 S.E.2d 666, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 992 (2005).

In a malice murder trial, trial counsel was not ineffective in advising the defendant not to testify even though only the defendant could have supplied the details surrounding the shooting, given the weakness of the state's case, the trial court's permission to argue justification without using the word, the defendant's reluctance to testify, the belief that the state's rebuttal witnesses would be very hostile, and the desire to eliminate the possibility of a voluntary manslaughter instruction. Muller v. State, 284 Ga. 70, 663 S.E.2d 206, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 530 (2008).

In a defendant's prosecution for, inter alia, felony murder, defense counsel's opening statement that the defendant would testify to explain why the defendant carried a gun was not ineffective assistance for causing a negative inference when the defendant did not testify as defense counsel used proper strategy in not having the defendant testify after concluding that the state failed to carry the state's burden during trial. Watkins v. State, 285 Ga. 107, 674 S.E.2d 275, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 138 (2009), cert. denied, 558 U.S. 1121, 130 S. Ct. 1070, 175 L. Ed. 2d 900, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 323 (2010).

Failure to call accused's relative as witness. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to call any witnesses in defendant's defense, especially because counsel believed those potential witnesses would not have helped the defense, counsel wished to preserve the right to opening and closing argument, and the witness's testimony could be suspect due to their relationship to defendant. Sims v. State, 278 Ga. 587, 604 S.E.2d 799, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 998 (2004).

Failure to interview or otherwise obtain information from any of the state's witnesses listed on the indictment falls below the standard required of reasonably effective counsel. House v. Balkcom, 562 F. Supp. 1111, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17753 (N.D. Ga. 1983), rev'd, 725 F.2d 608, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25536 (11th Cir. 1984).

Calling of character witnesses. —

Defense counsel's decision during the sentencing phase to present some character witnesses and to exclude others notwithstanding their willingness to testify was a tactical decision, reasonable under the circumstances. Solomon v. Kemp, 735 F.2d 395, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 21632 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1181, 105 S. Ct. 940, 83 L. Ed. 2d 952, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 2986 (1985).

Failure to call character witness. — Failure to call character witness was a legitimate trial tactic designed to rely upon defendant's own testimony to raise the good character defense and did not result in ineffective assistance. Avans v. State, 207 Ga. App. 329, 427 S.E.2d 826, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 203 (1993).

Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel by defendant's attorney's failure to call witnesses to testify to the nature of defendant's acquaintance with the victim and to impeach the victim's testimony that the victim had never "partied" or smoked marijuana with defendant as: (1) the proffered testimony went merely to the details of the admitted acquaintance between defendant and the victim before the incident, not to the facts surrounding the incident itself or the charges against defendant; (2) the only purpose of the evidence was to impeach the victim's testimony regarding how well the victim knew defendant, an issue on which trial counsel cross-examined the victim; and (3) defendant was not prejudiced by the absence of the evidence. Joyner v. State, 267 Ga. App. 309, 599 S.E.2d 286, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 631 (2004).

Defendant did not show ineffective assistance when trial counsel used a third party's confession to challenge the thoroughness of the police investigation, but instead focused on challenging the voluntariness of the defendant's taped statement. The defendant did not show that this strategic decision was an unreasonable one or that the defense was prejudiced by counsel's decision not to call the third party based on counsel's assessment that the party lacked credibility. Boseman v. State, 283 Ga. 355, 659 S.E.2d 364, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 298 (2008).

Calling one good clean witness in- stead of numerous witnesses. — Defendant failed to demonstrate that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to call additional witnesses because the defendant failed to overcome the strong presumption that counsel's tactical decision to forego putting the subject witnesses on the stand was within the broad range of reasonable professional conduct; trial counsel testified that counsel decided not to present the other witnesses because counsel thought that the witnesses would not "stand up well to cross-examination," that the jury would perceive variances in the testimony, that counsel was worried about credibility issues, and that counsel thought the defendant's "best chance" at establishing an alibi was with "one good clean witness." Smiley v. State, 288 Ga. 635, 706 S.E.2d 425, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 164 (2011).

Failure to present self-serving testimony of client. — Failure to present self-serving testimony of the defendant, a grandparent, and a neighbor did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel at the defendant's trial for child molestation, because graphic testimony of the young victims and the strongly corroborative testimony of the parent of one of them made it unlikely that the outcome of the trial would have been affected. Ray v. State, 183 Ga. App. 57, 357 S.E.2d 877, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2677 (1987).

Failure to present character evidence. — Counsel's failure to present character evidence at the mitigation phase of a capital case did not deprive the defendant of the defendant's right to reasonable representation. Stanley v. Zant, 697 F.2d 955, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 30642 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1219, 104 S. Ct. 2667, 81 L. Ed. 2d 372, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 2427 (1984).

It was reasonable for the attorney of a defendant convicted of murder to assume that the presentation of any character evidence at the sentencing hearing might motivate the state to introduce the defendant's prior conviction when it might not introduce it otherwise, even though it had the right to present the conviction in the absence of mitigating character witnesses, and to assume that the conviction would substantially outweigh any testimony as to good character. Mitchell v. Kemp, 762 F.2d 886, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30164 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 483 U.S. 1026, 107 S. Ct. 3248, 97 L. Ed. 2d 774, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 2931 (1987).

Counsel's decision not to place defendant's character in issue was a matter of trial tactics. Owens v. State, 207 Ga. App. 153, 427 S.E.2d 529, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 110 (1993).

Presentment of character evidence. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in offering evidence of good character, considering the overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt. Hayes v. State, 263 Ga. 15, 426 S.E.2d 557, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 270 (1993).

Failure to counter witness's testimony. — Defendant demonstrated no deficiency in counsel's representation for failure to counter minister's testimony regarding defendant's church attendance. Etheridge v. State, 210 Ga. App. 96, 435 S.E.2d 292, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1040 (1993).

Failure to object to bolstering. — Defendant failed to prove that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object to an investigator's testimony allegedly bolstering testimony of the defendant's girlfriend because there were several reasons a lawyer might not have objected, including not wanting to signal to the jury that defense counsel was worried about the testimony. Jones v. State, 292 Ga. 593, 740 S.E.2d 147, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 260 (2013).

Failure to meet notice requirements for admission of acts of violence by victim. — In a prosecution for malice murder, failure of defendant's counsel to meet the notice requirements for the admission of specific acts of violence by the victim was sufficient to support defendant's motion for a new trial on the basis of ineffective assistance of counsel. Johnson v. State, 266 Ga. 380, 467 S.E.2d 542.

Failure of counsel to file timely or sufficient notice of specific acts of violence by the victim did not fall below an objective standard of reasonableness where neither defendant nor an investigator were able to produce viable evidence. Ball v. State, 232 Ga. App. 107, 501 S.E.2d 281.

Decision of defense counsel not to seek an autopsy of the murder victim to identify the murder weapon was a reasonable, tactical one. Willis v. Newsome, 771 F.2d 1445, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 23274 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1050, 106 S. Ct. 1273, 89 L. Ed. 2d 581, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 635 (1986).

Failure to object to clearing of courtroom for young victim's testimony. — With regard to defendant's convictions on two counts of cruelty to children in the first degree and one count of aggravated battery, defendant failed to establish that defense counsel was ineffective for failing to object to the clearing of the courtroom when the child victim testified as defense counsel testified at the new trial hearing that defense counsel did not object to the closing of the courtroom because defense counsel recognized that the victim was very young and defense counsel believed it to be appropriate under the circumstances. As a result, defense counsel's decision not to object clearly constituted an exercise of reasonable professional judgment. Glover v. State, 292 Ga. App. 22, 663 S.E.2d 772, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 702 (2008).

Failure to make motion for directed verdict of acquittal not ineffective. — Defendant's contention that the defendant did not receive effective assistance of counsel because counsel made no motion for a directed verdict of acquittal based on insufficiency of the evidence was without merit. Galloway v. State, 165 Ga. App. 536, 301 S.E.2d 894, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 1937 (1983).

Defense counsel's failure to move for a directed verdict did not constitute ineffective assistance because the evidence presented was sufficient to sustain defendant's conviction for armed robbery; therefore, defendant was not entitled to a directed verdict and counsel's failure to move for the same did not entitle defendant to a new trial. The failure of counsel to pursue a meritless motion did not constitute ineffective assistance of trial counsel. Range v. State, 289 Ga. App. 727, 658

Counsel's failure to object to the prosecutor's comments on the ground that the prosecutor improperly commented on the defendant's exercise of the defendant's right to remain silent by remarking on the defendant's failure to testify at trial did not amount to deficient performance because the challenged remarks were not improper; the prosecutor made the comments while seeking to persuade the jury that the defendant's statements and behavior shortly after the crimes were inconsistent with the defendant's theory of self-defense, and the remarks were not intended to comment on the defendant's failure to testify or would have been received as such by the jury. Lacey v. State, 288 Ga. 341, 703 S.E.2d 617, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 842 (2010).

Failure to except to jury charges. — No ineffective assistance of counsel where defendant failed to establish with reasonable probability that allegedly erroneous jury instructions would have affected the result of the trial. Peavy v. State, 262 Ga. 782, 425 S.E.2d 654, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 200 (1993); Davis v. State, 209 Ga. App. 187, 433 S.E.2d 366, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 821 (1993).

The defendant was not entitled to the reversal of the defendant's conviction based on the defendant's trial counsel's failure to submit jury charges regarding the limited scope of admission of similar transactions because the court covered the issue in its charge and the defendant failed to show prejudice. McClarity v. State, 234 Ga. 348, 506 S.E.2d 392.

Defense counsel's failure to object to instructions on kidnapping with bodily injury and unanimity did not deprive defendant of a fair sentencing hearing nor did the instruction jeopardize the reliability of the sentencing recommendation. Parker v. Turpin, 60 F. Supp. 2d 1332, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18591 (N.D. Ga. 1999), aff'd, 244 F.3d 831, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 3942 (11th Cir. 2001).

Defendant did not show defendant was deprived of the effective assistance of counsel because defense counsel did not make certain objections or request certain jury charges, as defendant did not show that this prejudiced defendant's defense, and counsel's decisions in this area were a matter of trial strategy. Martin v. State, 266 Ga. App. 392, 597 S.E.2d 445, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 302 (2004).

Defendant failed to meet the burden to show that the counsel rendered ineffective assistance at trial, pursuant to the Strickland standard under U.S. Const., amend. 6, as the failure to request instructions was shown to be a trial strategy, for which no prejudice was shown, and there was no need to object to an instruction which was a correct statement of the law and was supported by the evidence; further, appellate counsel was not shown to be ineffective because no prejudice was shown and because certain issues which were not raised in defendant's new trial motion, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-5-23, were procedurally barred from review on appeal. Godfrey v. State, 274 Ga. App. 237, 617 S.E.2d 213, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 722 (2005).

Failure to object to jury pool. — Claim that trial counsel rendered constitutionally ineffective assistance failed as the defendant could not show that any competent attorney would have decided not to object further to the composition of the jury pool. Leslie v. State, 292 Ga. 368, 738 S.E.2d 42, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 107 (2013).

Failure to object to jury charge. Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the trial court's inclusion of a simple assault charge after the charge conference at which the trial court stated that the charge would not be given, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 5-5-24(b), as the jury found defendant guilty of simple assault on one of the aggravated assault charges, so defendant failed to show how the failure to object prejudiced defendant's defense. Osterhout v. State, 266 Ga. App. 319, 596 S.E.2d 766, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 363 (2004).

Defense counsel's decision not to object to testimony about defendant's failure to tell a police officer that defendant was on the scene to pick up defendant's friends, including both what defendant said and what defendant did not say, was a matter of trial strategy and was not ineffective assistance of counsel; defense counsel thought that the testimony was helpful to defendant because it tended to show defendant's ignorance of the codefendants' intent to commit a crime. Botelho v. State, 268 Ga. App. 129, 601 S.E.2d 494, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 862 (2004).

Because an erroneous jury instruction on an offense of aggravated child molestation violated an inmate's due process rights by allowing the jury to convict in a manner not charged in the indictment, and the inmate's trial counsel was ineffective in failing to object to the instruction, the inmate was properly granted habeas relief. Hall v. Wheeling, 282 Ga. 86, 646 S.E.2d 236, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 413 (2007).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to request charges on voluntary manslaughter, self-defense, and accident as such instructions were contrary to the defense strategy based on the defendant's testimony of contending that the defendant did not have a gun in the defendant's hands until the fighting and shooting were finished. Savior v. State, 284 Ga. 488, 668 S.E.2d 695, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 847 (2008).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to an instruction that if the jury found the defendant was not guilty of armed robbery, the jury could not find the defendant guilty of possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony, O.C.G.A. § 16-11-106(b). As the commission of the underlying felony was an essential element of § 16-11-106(b), the instruction was a correct statement of the law. Soloman v. State, 294 Ga. App. 520, 669 S.E.2d 430, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1175 (2008).

With regard to a defendant's convictions for aggravated sodomy, rape, and other related crimes, trial counsel's decision not to object to the jury charge on kidnapping with bodily injury did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel as the trial court employed the language of the relevant statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-40, and instructed the jury that the offense of kidnapping with bodily injury occurs when a person abducts "or" steals away any person. The fact that the indictment charged the defendant with abducting "and" stealing away the victim did not require trial counsel to object to the jury charge as the statute provided only one way in which kidnapping can be committed, namely by abducting or stealing away the victim, and the jury charge using the statutory language was appropriate, even though the indictment used the conjunctive. Greene v. State, 295 Ga. App. 803, 673 S.E.2d 292, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 134 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C0862, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 259 (Ga. Apr. 28, 2009).

In a malice murder prosecution, defense counsel was not ineffective for not reserving objections to the trial court's jury charge generally as this procedure was not allowed under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58. Marshall v. State, 285 Ga. 351, 676 S.E.2d 201, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 148 (2009).

Defendant was not denied effective assistance of trial counsel due to counsel's failure to object to an allegedly sequential jury instruction and to attempt to exclude an allegedly prejudicial charge on adultery because the trial court's charge was not improperly sequential, and counsel could not be considered professionally deficient for failing to object to the charge; the charge on adultery did not prevent the jurors from considering adultery as provocation for a verdict of voluntary manslaughter because the trial court specifically charged the jury that they could consider voluntary manslaughter if it was shown by the evidence that the killing was done by the defendant without malice and not in the spirit of revenge but under a violent, sudden impulse of passion created in the mind of the defendant by ongoing adultery or recent discovery of past adultery. Loadholt v. State, 286 Ga. 402, 687 S.E.2d 824, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 84 (2010).

Although the defendant claimed that the defense attorney failed to object to a portion of the charge to the jury regarding the defense of justification, the existence of a mere verbal inaccuracy in the jury instruction, resulting from a palpable slip of the tongue and which could not have misled or confused the jury, did not provide a basis for reversal of the conviction. Therefore, the defendant did not prevail on the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim because the defendant could not show that a reasonable probability existed that, but for counsel's errors the outcome at trial would have been more favorable. Render v. State, 288 Ga. 420, 704 S.E.2d 767, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 9 (2011).

Because no reversible error occurred with respect to the instruction that the jury could consider the intelligence of the witnesses to decide the witnesses credibility, the codefendant could not succeed on the alternative claim that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance in failing to object to that instruction. Howard v. State, 288 Ga. 741, 707 S.E.2d 80, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 179 (2011).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to bring errors in the jury charges to the trial court's attention because the complained of jury charges were proper, and trial counsel's conduct fell well within the broad range of reasonable professional conduct; there is no reasonable likelihood of a different outcome had trial counsel raised the arguments the defendant asserted counsel should have raised. Davis v. State, 290 Ga. 757, 725 S.E.2d 280, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 332 (2012).

Trial counsel was not ineffective because, at the time of the defendant's trial, the appellate court had held that a charge similar to the one given in the defendant's case was not a "presumption-of-truthfulness" instruction like the charge disapproved in the case law and was a permissible charge. Reed v. State, 314 Ga. 534, 878 S.E.2d 217, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 237 (2022).

Failure to object to opening or closing argument. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object during opening statements when the prosecutor referred to the victim as a "nice kid" because the jury was instructed that opening statements were not evidence; the isolated comment was contradicted by actual evidence that the victim was a drug dealer and accused child molester; and there was no reasonable probability that the result of the defendant's trial would have been different had counsel responded to the remark differently given the strength of the evidence against the defendant. Babbage v. State, 296 Ga. 364, 768 S.E.2d 461, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 2 (2015).

Counsel not ineffective for failing to object to prosecutor's closing arguments. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object when the prosecutor told the jury during closing arguments that defendant's own testimony precluded a self-defense verdict because the prosecutor's view of the evidence that defendant traveled to Atlanta to kill the victim was a reasonable inference based on the evidence, including evidence that defendant had recently said that he was going to have to kill the victim because he was in fear for his family and his livelihood due to the victim's threats. Rayton v. State, 314 Ga. 29, 875 S.E.2d 708, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 170 (2022).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object when the prosecutor told the jury during closing arguments that defendant's own testimony precluded a self-defense verdict because the prosecutor's view of that the law precluded defendant from claiming self-defense because he traveled to Atlanta for the purpose of buying cocaine was a fair paraphrase of applicable law that the trial court charged the jury and was supported by defendant's own testimony and other evidence at trial. Rayton v. State, 314 Ga. 29, 875 S.E.2d 708, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 170 (2022).

Failure to object to closing arguments. — Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object to burden-shifting during the prosecutor's closing argument because it did not shift the burden of proof to defendant as the remarks were made in rebuttal of defendant's closing argument that there was reasonable doubt without a particular witness's testimony and explained why the state chose not to call the witness. Burke v. State, 320 Ga. 706, 911 S.E.2d 575, 2025 Ga. LEXIS 16 (2025).

Failure of defense counsel to object to unconstitutional burden-shifting jury charge on intent, standing alone, did not constitute error so serious that counsel was not functioning as the "counsel" guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 6. Carter v. Montgomery, 769 F.2d 1537, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 21496 (11th Cir. 1985).

Failure to request limiting instruction. — Trial counsel's action in failing to request limiting instructions as to "bad character" evidence could have been strategic, so as not to highlight the evidence, and was thus presumed strategic, rather than deficient, in the absence of testimony to the contrary; since defense counsel did not testify at the motion for new trial, the defendant failed to show that any purported deficiencies in the defendant's representation amounted to ineffective assistance. Tarver v. State, 280 Ga. App. 89, 633 S.E.2d 415, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 756 (2006).

Trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel in failing to request a jury instruction on specific forcible felonies since even assuming that trial counsel was deficient, the defendant could not show prejudice as the trial court charged the jury on the presumption of innocence, reasonable doubt, the burden of proof, and the defense of justification, including the definition of a forcible felony; the jury was fairly informed as to when a homicide was justified and there was not a reasonable probability that the jury would have reached a different result if an instruction on specific forcible felonies had also been given. Lott v. State, 281 Ga. App. 373, 636 S.E.2d 102, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1106 (2006).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a jury instruction on accessory after the fact because regardless of whether any evidence would have authorized the jury to conclude that the defendant's connection with the crime of murder charged in the bill of indictment was that of an accessory after the fact, the trial court would not have been authorized to give any charge on accessory after the fact when the defendant was not indicted for both murder and hindering the apprehension of a criminal or any other offense in the nature of an obstruction of justice. Vergara v. State, 287 Ga. 194, 695 S.E.2d 215, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 402 (2010).

Failure to request charge on lesser-included offense. — Since no instruction on lesser included offenses was required, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to request such an instruction; also, in light of the attack on a detective's techniques in interviewing an alleged child victim of molestation made by trial counsel in cross-examination and closing argument, the defendant failed to show that there would have been a different outcome had counsel requested funds and called an expert witness similarly to attack those techniques, and failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance in this regard; finally, trial counsel's decision to not call two witnesses was based on sound strategy and the defendant failed to show prejudice from the failure. Tyler v. State, 279 Ga. App. 809, 632 S.E.2d 716, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 700 (2006), cert. denied, No. S06C1818, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 810 (Ga. Oct. 2, 2006), overruled in part, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 182 (2007), overruled in part, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Failure to file motion to suppress evidence. — The mere failure to file a motion to suppress evidence does not constitute per se ineffective assistance of counsel. Ponder v. State, 201 Ga. App. 388, 411 S.E.2d 119, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1342 (1991).

With regard to defendant's convictions for aggravated assault and related crimes, defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to file motion to suppress victim's pre-trial photographic lineup and subsequent in-court identifications of defendant, as there was no basis upon which trial counsel could have successfully moved to have the identifications suppressed since the photographic lineup was not shown to have been unduly suggestive and in-court identification was unquestionably admissible; thus, there was no possibility that suppression motion would have been successful. Gibson v. State, 291 Ga. App. 183, 661 S.E.2d 850, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 436 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1442, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 677 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2008).

Failure to pursue lesser-included offense. — Trial counsel's failure to request a charge on lesser-included offenses could be considered as a trial tactic legitimately providing effective assistance of counsel. Sydenstricker v. State, 209 Ga. App. 418, 433 S.E.2d 644, 1993 Ga. App.

LEXIS 920 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1669, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 961 (Ga. Oct. 12, 1993).

Counsel's failure to request charge of mistake of fact. — Defense counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to request a charge of mistake of fact under O.C.G.A. § 16-3-5 since the charge was not supported by the evidence as defendant testified that defendant was totally unaware of any of the codefendants' plans for breaking or entering the house; thus, the defense was a lack of knowledge of the crime, not that the defendant knew they had broken into the victim's house, but believed that they were authorized to do so, and the trial court charged the jury on mere presence, mere association, and the requirement that the state prove beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant knew that a crime was being committed. Botelho v. State, 268 Ga. App. 129, 601 S.E.2d 494, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 862 (2004).

Failure to request charge on mutual combat. — Trial counsel did not perform deficiently by failing to request a charge on mutual combat because there was no evidence of a mutual intention to fight; at trial, the defendant presented the defense of accident and asserted that the defendant lacked any intention to shoot the victim, but there was no evidence reflected that the defendant and the victim mutually agreed to fight each other. Boatright v. State, 289 Ga. 597, 713 S.E.2d 829, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 511 (2011).

Failure to question jurors deliberating too soon. — Where, during a recess at the guilt phase of the trial, the court received a note from one of the jurors that some deliberation had begun and the court instructed the jury not to begin its deliberations until it had heard all of the evidence and had been instructed by the court on the law, but defense counsel did not ask the court to question the jurors to determine if any of them had formed fixed and unyielding opinions at this point, counsel's inaction here simply did not fall outside the wide range of reasonable professional assistance. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 281, 368 S.E.2d 742, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 276 (1988), cert. denied, 492 U.S. 925, 109 S. Ct. 3261,

Failure of counsel to poll the jury did not constitute ineffective assistance where there was nothing in the record to indicate that any juror was uncertain of the verdict. United States v. Costa, 691 F.2d 1358, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 23916 (11th Cir. 1982).

A jury sent a question to the trial court, but before the court could respond, the jury reached a verdict. The defendant's trial counsel was not ineffective for not demanding that the jury be polled; moreover, the defendant failed to show it was reasonably probable that had the jury been polled, a problem with the verdict would have become apparent. Soloman v. State, 294 Ga. App. 520, 669 S.E.2d 430, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1175 (2008).

Failure to request mistrial not ineffective assistance. — Where the prosecutor asked an isolated, prejudicial question expressing an opinion as to a witness's credibility, a prompt and properly worded instruction by the judge to the jury cured and rendered harmless any prejudice arising from the question. Therefore, defense counsel's informed decision to forego requesting a mistrial fell within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance defense attorneys are supposed to provide. Truitt v. Jones, 614 F. Supp. 1342, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19013 (S.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 791 F.2d 940, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 25392 (11th Cir. 1986).

Where the defendant's counsel objected to an improper argument by the prosecutor based on O.C.G.A. § 17-8-76 and the trial court sustained the objection and instructed the jury accordingly, counsel's failure to move for a mistrial did not constitute ineffective assistance since the defendant was not deprived of a fair sentencing trial. Hammond v. State, 264 Ga. 879, 452 S.E.2d 745, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 23, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 829, 116 S. Ct. 100, 133 L. Ed. 2d 54, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 5611 (1995).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to object or move for a mistrial with respect to the trial court's direction that a witness be allowed to finish the witness's answer as any objection or motion for mistrial would have been without merit;

the failure to raise a meritless objection cannot constitute ineffective assistance of counsel. Patterson v. State, 259 Ga. App. 630, 577 S.E.2d 850, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 210 (2003).

Counsel for a defendant was not shown to have been ineffective in the defendant's criminal trial when counsel failed to seek a mistrial upon the admission of testimony that the defendant had committed prior sexual abuse on a family member as the jury was admonished to ignore the remark and the jury was given a curative instruction, and counsel chose not to seek a mistrial as a matter of trial strategy. Carroll v. State, 292 Ga. App. 795, 665 S.E.2d 883, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 865 (2008).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to move for a mistrial or request a curative instruction when the State of Georgia showed the jury two photographs of the murder victim's body at the crime scene, which the trial court had previously ordered the state not to show on the ground that the photographs were duplicative of other photographs. Given that the two photographs did not show the jury more than other crime scene photographs, and given the strength of the evidence against the defendant, the defendant failed to show that, even if the trial counsel had moved for a mistrial or requested a curative instruction, there was a reasonable probability that the trial court would have granted a mistrial or that the outcome of the trial otherwise would have been different. Watkins v. State, 289 Ga. 359, 711 S.E.2d 655, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 474 (2011).

Objecting to a mistrial. — No ineffective assistance proven by defense counsel's objection to a mistrial where counsel explained that counsel thought the detective's inconsistency, exposed upon cross-examination, could be helpful in establishing reasonable doubt as to the defendant's guilt. Coney v. State, 209 Ga. App. 9, 432 S.E.2d 812, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 726 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1458, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 919 (Ga. Oct. 5, 1993).

No prejudice from error on limits for closing argument. — While the defendant met the burden of showing trial counsel's deficient performance based on a misimpression that counsel was entitled to only one hour to make a closing argument, instead of two as permitted by O.C.G.A. § 17-8-73, the defendant failed to show that but for said error, trial counsel could have convinced the jury that defendant was innocent of the crimes charged. Hardeman v. State, 281 Ga. 220, 635 S.E.2d 698, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 485 (2006).

Counsel not ineffective for failing to object to duplicative testimony.

— First defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the testimony of the first defendant's mother and the detective about the car used during the robbery and murder as the car was identified through other evidence, and their testimony about the car was duplicative of admissible testimony. Haney v. State, 305 Ga. 785, 827 S.E.2d 843, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 322 (2019).

Failure to pursue appeal. — Habeas court's order denying an inmate's verified petition, which asserted that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance, was reversed, as the allegations contained in said petition served as sufficient evidence to support the inmate's claim that counsel failed to file a notice of appeal after being instructed by the inmate to do so. Rolland v. Martin, 281 Ga. 190, 637 S.E.2d 23, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 877 (2006).

Failure to produce independent medical testimony. — The mere possibility that another medical expert might draw conclusions different from those drawn by the State's witnesses did not sufficiently support the suggestion that defense counsel was ineffective in failing to produce independent medical testimony. Pugh v. State, 250 Ga. 668, 300 S.E.2d 504, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1024 (1983).

Failure to advise regarding nature of rights waived.

— Where the record does not affirmatively reflect that the defendant's counsel adequately advised the defendant concerning the nature of the rights the defendant waived and the effect thereof, and since the record is silent on this matter and the defendant has challenged the effectiveness of counsel, the court could not presume, that the defendant received adequate advice and counsel from the defendant's attorney. Watt v. State, 204 Ga. App. 839, 420 S.E.2d 769, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1022 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C1310, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 758 (Ga. Sept. 11, 1992).

Failure to advise defendant of prosecution as recidivist.

— A trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for new trial on the grounds of ineffective assistance of counsel with regard to the defendant's drug-related convictions, based on defense counsel failing to advise defendant that the state intended to prosecute defendant as a recidivist since defendant did not testify that defendant would have accepted a plea offer had defendant known that defendant was facing the prospect of being sentenced as a recidivist; thus, defendant failed to show that counsel's alleged deficiency affected the end result of the case. Furthermore, defendant did not show in the record that the state made or was amenable to any plea negotiations. Heard v. State, 291 Ga. App. 550, 662 S.E.2d 310, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 568 (2008).

Raising issue of parole. — Counsel was not ineffective by raising the issue of defendant's possible eligibility for parole if given a life sentence rather than the death penalty because, by addressing the issue directly, counsel was able to answer questions which, in all probability, inevitably arise during the jury's deliberations of a death case. Parker v. Turpin, 60 F. Supp. 2d 1332, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18591 (N.D. Ga. 1999), aff'd, 244 F.3d 831, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 3942 (11th Cir. 2001).

Failure to advise defendant regarding ineligibility for parole.

— The failure of trial counsel to advise the defendant that no portion of the defendant's 15-year sentence could be served on parole did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel. Williams v. Duffy, 270 Ga. 580, 513 S.E.2d 212, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 177 (1999), overruled, Alexander v. State, 297 Ga. 59, 772 S.E.2d 655, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 293 (2015).

Incorrect advice regarding eligibility for parole leading to guilty plea.

— Defense counsel was ineffective since counsel incorrectly advised the defendant that eligibility for parole would be after serving ten years in prison. Defendant would not have accepted a negotiated plea if counsel had correctly advised defendant of the requirement to serve the entire 20 years in prison on a kidnapping charge. Crabbe v. State, 248 Ga. App. 314, 546 S.E.2d 65, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 265 (2001).

A defendant was properly allowed to withdraw a guilty plea to armed robbery, and the probation revocation that this plea triggered was properly reversed, as counsel had been ineffective in wrongly advising the defendant that the defendant would be eligible for parole if a guilty plea was entered. Instead, under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7(b)(2), the defendant's second conviction for a serious violent felony mandated a sentence of life imprisonment without the possibility of parole. Tillman v. Gee, 284 Ga. 416, 667 S.E.2d 600, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 803 (2008).

Failure to give correct advice on mandatory minimum sentence. — It was proper to deny a defendant's motion for new trial based on ineffective assistance. There were opposing arguments, each supported by the record, as to whether the defendant would have pled guilty had counsel correctly informed the defendant of the mandatory minimum sentence, which presented factual matters primarily for resolution by the trial court. Childrey v. State, 294 Ga. App. 896, 670 S.E.2d 536, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1339 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0520, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 106 (Ga. Mar. 9, 2009).

Order of the habeas court vacating the defendant's convictions based on ineffective assistance of trial and appellate counsel was vacated because the habeas court was required to make a finding based on evidence in the record as to whether the defendant would have accepted the state's plea offer if the defendant had been afforded effective assistance of trial counsel who adequately informed the defendant that the defendant would face a mandatory life sentence upon conviction of the kidnapping charge. Gramiak v. Beasley, 304 Ga. 512, 820 S.E.2d 50, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 653 (2018).

Failure to provide service within expected range of competency. — If defense counsel is so ill-prepared that counsel fails to understand the client's factual claims or the legal significance of those claims or that counsel fails to understand the basic procedural requirements applicable in court, the Court of Appeals has held that counsel fails to provide service within the range of competency expected of members of the criminal defense bar. Young v. Zant, 677 F.2d 792, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19269 (11th Cir. 1982).

Public defender assisting. — Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel based on fact that public defender was appointed for arraignment only and thereafter when defendant had failed to employ his own counsel he was instructed to represent himself with assistance of public defender. Durden v. State, 165 Ga. App. 48, 299 S.E.2d 107, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 1760 (1983).

If defense counsel does not adequately investigate the matter of an insanity defense, does not adequately inform and advise the client as to the advisability of utilizing such a defense, and did not raise and press the issue of disqualification of the judge, due process and adequate representation by counsel are lacking. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Defendant unrepresented until 15 minutes before trial. — Indigent defendant, who was charged with misdemeanor theft by receiving, was denied effective assistance of counsel, because the defendant was only able to retain an attorney 15 or 20 minutes before trial, after the defendant's parent agreed to "come up" with the money for the attorney's fee. Lowrance v. State, 183 Ga. App. 421, 359 S.E.2d 196, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 1999 (1987).

Counsel appointed seven days before trial. — Where counsel, appointed seven days before trial, moved unsuccessfully for a continuance, interviewed the defendant, examined the scene of the crime, contacted witnesses and observed the trial of the codefendant, and to some extent chose to forego filing certain motions and pursuing certain areas of inquiry, but these choices were reasonable strategic decisions given the time constraints of the situation, counsel's assistance in this area was effective. Davis v. Kemp, 829 F.2d 1522, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 12938 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 929, 108 S. Ct. 1099, 99 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 996 (1988).

Time allowed for preparation. —

When counsel was appointed to represent a defendant charged with rape, assault, possession of a knife during the commission of a crime, and cruelty to children on the Friday before the week trial was scheduled to begin, and was given a one-week continuance, counsel should have had more time to prepare, given the gravity of the charges, but defendant showed no prejudice from counsel's short preparation time, as it was not shown that any of the things counsel would have done, given more time, would have resulted in evidence favorable to defendant or a different result of the trial in which he was found guilty. Johnson v. State, 268 Ga. App. 1, 601 S.E.2d 392, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 835 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1735, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 665 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2004).

Representation at different stages by counsel from same public defender's office. — Even though the defendant was represented by counsel employed by the same public defender's office, both when the defendant negotiated a guilty plea and at the hearing on the defendant's motion to withdraw the plea, there was no conflict of interest requiring appointment of a private attorney to assert a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel as the basis for withdrawal of the plea. Boyette v. State, 217 Ga. App. 593, 458 S.E.2d 397, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 529 (1995).

Determination of whether the assistance rendered by counsel is reasonably effective is not to be based solely upon counsel's performance at trial; there must be consideration of the "totality of circumstances," which encompasses the quality of counsel's assistance from time of appointment or retention through appeal. Fleming v. Zant, 560 F. Supp. 525, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18252 (M.D. Ga.

Absence of counsel during state's argument. — Under no theory can it be maintained that it is error to permit appointed counsel to leave the courtroom during the state's argument and thereby depriving the defendant of the right of counsel under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and U.S. Const., amend. 14. Bryant v. State, 229 Ga. 60, 189 S.E.2d 435, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 499 (1972).

Counsel has broad discretion in conduct of trial. — In the conduct of a trial, broad latitude of advice, direction, and policy in the interest of the client is essentially vested in counsel. Counsel often waive apparently important points in the bona fide belief that, on the whole, greater advantage will be gained indirectly than might have been gained directly by insisting on them, and such a waiver either express or implied would ordinarily not tend to show incompetency. No lawyer is infallible, and the constitutional guarantees of the benefit of counsel, and of due process, do not contemplate such infallibility. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 193 Ga. 661, 19 S.E.2d 499, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 449, cert. denied, 317 U.S. 626, 63 S. Ct. 36, 87 L. Ed. 506, 1942 U.S. LEXIS 274 (1942).

Counsel's handling of case in retrospect. — While other lawyers, had they represented the defendant, might have conducted the defense in a different manner, and might have exercised different judgments, the fact that the attorney chose to try the defendant's case in the manner in which it was tried and made certain decisions as to the conduct of the defense with which the defendant and the defendant's presently employed attorneys now disagree, does not require a finding that counsel's representation of the defendant was so inadequate as to amount to a denial to the defendant of the effective assistance of counsel. Johnson v. Caldwell, 228 Ga. 776, 187 S.E.2d 844, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 906 (1972); Chapman v. State, 154 Ga. App. 532, 268 S.E.2d 797, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2271 (1980); Lewis v. State, 246 Ga. 101, 268 S.E.2d 915, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 979 (1980).

That the case could have been tried differently on behalf of the defendant does not mean that the defendant failed to receive a vigorous and competent defense. Fegan v. State, 154 Ga. App. 791, 270 S.E.2d 211, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2392 (1980); Jordan v. State, 177 Ga. App. 637, 340 S.E.2d 269, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2453 (1986).

The fact that another attorney may have handled defendant's defense differently is not indicative of trial counsel's ineffective assistance. Hammond v. State, 157 Ga. App. 647, 278 S.E.2d 188, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1951 (1981).

Although another lawyer may have conducted the defense in a different way, asked different questions, and made different objections, etc., the fact that the defendant's counsel made decisions during the trial with which the defendant and the defendant's current counsel now disagree does not require a finding that the original representation of the defendant was so inadequate as to amount to a denial of effective assistance of counsel. Cherry v. State, 178 Ga. App. 483, 343 S.E.2d 510, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2544 (1986).

The fact that the case could have been tried differently on behalf of the defendant does not mean that the defendant failed to receive a vigorous and competent defense. Sleeth v. State, 201 Ga. App. 324, 411 S.E.2d 79, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1372 (1991).

Attorney's "silent trial" tactic in representing a defendant was not so defective as to entitle the defendant to constitutional relief without a showing that the attorney's conduct prejudiced the defendant. Warner v. Ford, 752 F.2d 622, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28066 (11th Cir. 1985).

Communication with client as to plea options. — Objective professional standards dictated that the defendant's counsel, under the circumstances, should have communicated the opportunity to plead guilty to voluntary manslaughter for a long-term sentence rather than go to trial on a murder indictment and risk a life sentence. However, because there was no inference from the evidence that the defendant would have accepted the offer as made or something similar, (the unmistakable conclusion was that she would not have accepted or even considered the offer to plead guilty to voluntary manslaughter), the evidence supported a finding that counsel was reasonably effective. Lloyd v. State, 258 Ga. 645, 373 S.E.2d 1, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 418 (1988).

Defendant would be entitled to relief for ineffective assistance of counsel if the defendant demonstrated that the defendant would have accepted a plea bargain absent counsel's errors. Muff v. State, 210 Ga. App. 309, 436 S.E.2d 47, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1184 (1993).

Ineffective assistance was not shown by failure of counsel to properly inform the defendant of the statutory ramifications of a guilty plea because there was evidence that, before the defendant entered a guilty plea, the defendant was informed of the specific consequences by the defendant's parole officer and repetition of that information by counsel would not have altered the defendant's decision to enter the plea of guilty. Pendley v. State, 217 Ga. App. 394, 457 S.E.2d 681, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 454 (1995).

Counsel not ineffective if actions come within ambit of trial tactics and strategy. — Counsel's decision to have the defendant display the defendant's teeth to the jury and then agreeing to the state's cross-examination of the defendant on the issue of the defendant's teeth; counsel's handling of a motion to suppress identification testimony; and counsel's failure to object to certain hearsay testimony came within the ambit of trial tactics and strategy and fell within the range of reasonably effective assistance. Heard v. State, 177 Ga. App. 802, 341 S.E.2d 459, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2469 (1986).

Counsel's stipulation of nonuse of a tape recording obtained in a surveillance was not constitutionally infirm assistance of counsel, where there was no showing that the tape was relevant to the determination of guilt or innocence, much less that it was favorable to defendant. McCarthy v. State, 196 Ga. App. 839, 397 S.E.2d 178, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1129 (1990).

When defendant's counsel did not object to an officer's testimony which bolstered the victim, this was not ineffective assistance of counsel because the officer's statements were elicited by counsel's line of questioning, which was not an unreasonable trial strategy, because it was consistent with counsel's announced trial strategy of trying to brand the victim as a liar. Johnson v. State, 268 Ga. App. 1, 601 S.E.2d 392, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 835 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1735, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 665 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2004).

Because defendant's claim that statements were made in the hope of receiving benefits was found to lack merit, based on the defendant's contradictory testimony by the lead counsel's regarding a plea agreement, there was no showing that the counsel was ineffective in allowing those statements to have been admitted in defendant's criminal trial; further, allowing the statements was a reasonable strategic decision after a plea agreement requiring defendant to testify truthfully had been previously made. Redwine v. State, 280 Ga. 58, 623 S.E.2d 485, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 863 (2005).

Allegation that counsel was ineffective in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for failing to object on Sixth Amendment confrontation grounds to the admission of the codefendant's statement to police implicating defendant in a burglary failed; defense counsel's failure to raise the Sixth Amendment issue was a strategic decision, based on defendant's desire to be tried with the codefendants and to present a unified front. Vincent v. State, 276 Ga. App. 415, 623 S.E.2d 255, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1265 (2005).

Failure to use battered woman syndrome defense. — Counsel's decision not to pursue a defense based on the battered woman syndrome was a reasonable choice of trial strategy. Lewis v. State, 265 Ga. 451, 457 S.E.2d 173, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 368, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 964, 116 S. Ct. 418, 133 L. Ed. 2d 335, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 7436 (1995).

Where trial counsel investigated battered woman syndrome and determined that assertion of the syndrome defense was unrealistic, such decision did not equate to ineffective assistance of counsel. Smith v. State, 231 Ga. App. 677, 499

S.E.2d 663, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 319 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1172, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 788 (Ga. Sept. 8, 1998).

Failure to research mitigating evidence constitutes ineffective assistance. — Defense counsel's performance during the sentencing phase of the defendant's capital trial, by failing to conduct a reasonable search for mitigation evidence, which would have uncovered numerous mitigation witnesses, and by failing to offer the client's clean criminal record, resulted in no evidence being offered and amounted to ineffective assistance of counsel. Johnson v. Kemp, 615 F. Supp. 355, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17016 (S.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 781 F.2d 1482, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 21524 (11th Cir. 1986).

Counsel's failure to investigate and present mitigating evidence fell below an objective standard of reasonableness under prevailing professional norms. Thomas v. Kemp, 796 F.2d 1322, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 27515 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 996, 107 S. Ct. 602, 93 L. Ed. 2d 601, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 5061 (1986).

Trial attorneys' performance during the sentencing phase of the defendant's murder trial was unreasonable in light of prevailing professional norms, because they failed to investigate and present mitigating evidence, and one of the attorneys attacked the client's character and separated said attorney from the client. Horton v. Zant, 941 F.2d 1449, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 20577 (11th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 952, 112 S. Ct. 1516, 117 L. Ed. 2d 652, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 1943 (1992).

Failure to search for mitigating circumstances in client's background. — Counsel's decision not to mount an all-out investigation into a murder defendant's background in search of mitigating circumstances was supported by reasonable professional judgment, because there was a reasonable basis for counsel's strategic decision that an explanation of defendant's history would not have minimized the risk of the death penalty. Burger v. Kemp, 483 U.S. 776, 107 S. Ct. 3114, 97 L. Ed. 2d 638, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 3047 (1987).

Because defendant's trial and appellate counsel did not investigate after being notified of defendant's history of mental problems, the habeas court properly concluded that they were ineffective and that defendant was prejudiced thereby. Martin v. Barrett, 279 Ga. 593, 619 S.E.2d 656, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 526 (2005).

Failure to put on mitigating evidence at a sentencing hearing, etc. Failure to put on mitigating evidence at a sentencing hearing is not per se ineffective. Davis v. Kemp, 829 F.2d 1522, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 12938 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 929, 108 S. Ct. 1099, 99 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 996 (1988).

Trial court erred in concluding that the defendant was denied effective assistance of counsel in the sentencing phase as to the presentation of mitigation evidence as a reasonable lawyer might reasonably have concluded that the mitigating value of the testimony family members might have given was less than the potential downside of such testimony, which conflicted with expert testimony. State v. Worsley, 293 Ga. 315, 745 S.E.2d 617, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 597 (2013).

Failure to present character during sentencing phase. — In a prosecution for armed robbery and felony murder, defense counsels were ineffective in the sentencing phase of the trial where (1) despite their acknowledgment that the sentencing phase was the most important part of the trial, defense counsels' examination of the witnesses was minimal and they sought to elicit very little relevant evidence about the defendant's character; (2) with respect to a number of witnesses, defense counsel sought only their opinion of the defendant's reputation for truth and veracity, which was a matter wholly irrelevant to the issue before the jury; and (3) even when defense counsel departed from the truth-and-veracity line of questioning, the testimony elicited was of a nature that could not reasonably have aided the jury in its sentence determination. Collier v. Turpin, 177 F.3d 1184, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 5900 (11th Cir. 1999).

Failure to obtain psychiatric assistance. — Trial counsel was ineffective in counsel's failure to obtain an independent psychiatric or psychological examination of a murder defendant, where defendant's competence and sanity were not only significant factors at the trial, but the only issues. Curry v. Zant, 258 Ga. 527, 371 S.E.2d 647, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 360 (1988).

Where it is clear from the record already before the court that trial counsel's failure to seek additional psychiatric assistance or otherwise further investigate the petitioner's mental condition before trial for the purpose of presenting an insanity or other diminished responsibility defense at trial did not deny the petitioner the effective assistance of counsel in the guilt phase of the trial, evidence of the petitioner's reduced mental capacity could in no way effect the conclusion in this regard and was not entitled to an evidentiary hearing in the district court to support the defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel in the guilt phase of the defendant's trial. Stephens v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 642, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 5265 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 872, 109 S. Ct. 189, 102 L. Ed. 2d 158, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3631 (1988).

Defendant who was convicted of voluntary manslaughter did not show that defense counsel provided ineffective assistance because counsel did not challenge the judgment of medical personnel that the defendant was competent to stand trial. Morton v. State, 265 Ga. App. 421, 594 S.E.2d 664, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 136 (2004).

Failure to obtain mitigating testimony. — Because none of the prospective witnesses who the defendant claimed should have been called in mitigation testified at the hearing on the motion for new trial, and the record did not show what they might have testified, the defendant failed to show that their testimony probably would have resulted in a different verdict. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 281, 368 S.E.2d 742, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 276 (1988), cert. denied, 492 U.S. 925, 109 S. Ct. 3261, 106 L. Ed. 2d 606, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 3313 (1989).

Defendant's claim that attorney inadequately investigated and presented mitigating evidence in sentencing hearing, etc. Defendant's claim that attorney inadequately investigated and presented mitigating evidence in sentencing hearing was rejected where, although defendant later produced nine affidavits of persons who stated that they would have gladly testified on defendant's behalf had they been asked, a review of the affidavits indicates that they contained statements by friends and relatives which were substantially similar to the evidence attorney presented at the hearing. Consequently, these affidavits alone were insufficient to rebut the strong presumption that attorney's conduct fell within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance. Williams v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 1276, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6460 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed, 489 U.S. 1094, 109 S. Ct. 1579, 103 L. Ed. 2d 931, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1647 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1090, 110 S. Ct. 1836, 108 L. Ed. 2d 965, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1953 (1990).

Defendant was sentenced to death for murder. Counsel's investigation into the defendant's abuse at the hands of relatives was not deficient, because the defense investigator contacted the relatives' child, who testified at trial, and the defendant told counsel and testified at trial that the defendant had an ideal childhood while living with the relatives. Whatley v. Terry, 284 Ga. 555, 668 S.E.2d 651, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 824 (2008), cert. denied, 556 U.S. 1248, 129 S. Ct. 2409, 173 L. Ed. 2d 1316, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 3757 (2009).

Timing of testimony. — Even if none of the medical experts giving testimony knew that the trial counsel intended that he or she testify as to mitigating circumstances during the guilt phase, and not the penalty phase of the trial, that fact would not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel. Waters v. Thomas, 46 F.3d 1506, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 3889 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 856, 116 S. Ct. 160, 133 L. Ed. 2d 103, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 6000 (1995).

Mere waiver of an opening statement can be characterized as a trial tactic which cannot be equated to the ineffective assistance of counsel. Warner v. State, 155 Ga. App. 495, 271 S.E.2d 636, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2633 (1980).

The failure of a defendant's counsel to make an opening statement did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel. United States v. Costa, 691 F.2d 1358, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 23916 (11th Cir. 1982).

Failure to object to order of arguments. — Since defendant did not have a "constitutional privilege" to both present evidence in his defense and open and conclude the closing arguments of the guilt/innocence phase of trial, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object the order of closing arguments set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71. Hammond v. State, 264 Ga. 879, 452 S.E.2d 745, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 23, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 829, 116 S. Ct. 100, 133 L. Ed. 2d 54, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 5611 (1995).

Because the jury was informed of a stipulation and were read the contents of the victim's post-mortem toxicology reports, the trial court properly limited defense counsel's closing arguments; defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to ask that closing argument be reported or for failing to request a jury charge on manslaughter, since defendant claimed that the shooting was accidental. Williams v. State, 279 Ga. 600, 619 S.E.2d 649, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 522 (2005).

Duty of counsel where defendant indicates desire to plead guilty. — When a person indicates a desire to enter a guilty plea, the duty of counsel is limited to ascertaining whether the decision so to plead is voluntarily and knowingly made. Brown v. Jernigan, 622 F.2d 914, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15189 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 958, 101 S. Ct. 368, 66 L. Ed. 2d 224, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3794 (1980).

Same duty is not owed by appointed counsel to an accused who pleads guilty as to one who decides to go to trial. Walker v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 213, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10733 (5th Cir. 1973).

Advice regarding plea must be competent. — The advice of counsel to a defendant entering a guilty plea must be within the range of competence demanded of attorneys in criminal cases. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Reasonably effective assistance is an easier standard to meet in the context of a guilty plea than in a trial, but counsel still must render competent service. It is the lawyer's duty to ascertain if the plea is entered voluntarily and knowingly. He must actually and substantially assist his client in deciding whether to plead guilty. It is his job to provide the accused an understanding of the law in relation to the facts. The advice he gives need not be perfect, but it must be reasonably competent. His advice should permit the accused to make an informed and conscious choice. In other words, if the quality of counsel's service falls below a certain minimum level, the client's guilty plea cannot be knowing and voluntary because it will not represent an informed choice. McBryar v. McElroy, 510 F. Supp. 706, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12844 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Defendant's due process rights were violated where throughout the state and federal habeas proceedings the defendant was induced to plead guilty by defendant's counsel's erroneous advice that the plea bargain would enable defendant to serve the federal and state sentences concurrently. Thus, the attorney provided ineffective assistance to defendant as the guilty plea was not knowing, intelligent and voluntary. Finch v. Vaughn, 67 F.3d 909, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 30983 (11th Cir. 1995).

Advice to plead guilty. — Defendant's guilty plea was the result of ineffective assistance of counsel in that counsel's advice was based upon an incorrect understanding of the law, as the defendant could not have been convicted, as counsel alleged, of aggravated assault; further, the result of the defendant's guilty plea was that the defendant received a harsher sentence than the defendant would have been received had the defendant gone to trial and been convicted. Petty v. Smith, 279 Ga. 273, 612 S.E.2d 276, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 303 (2005).

Where counsel has induced defendant to plead guilty on patently erro- neous advice, the defendant has been denied the effective assistance of counsel, as well as due process. Walker v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 213, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10733 (5th Cir. 1973).

After an inmate's counsel affirmatively misinformed the inmate that if the inmate entered a plea of guilty to a first offender offense of violating the Georgia Controlled Substances Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-13-20 et seq., that such would not impair the inmate's ability to become a lawyer, nor would it impact the inmate's immigration status, the trial court erred in denying the inmate's petition for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-14-5 because under the Strickland analysis, the inmate's counsel was ineffective, as the inmate had graduated law school and passed the Bar, but the inmate's admission was held up due to the conviction, and deportation proceedings had been commenced against the inmate. Thus, since the inmate relied upon a lawyer's misinformation about collateral consequences stemming from a guilty plea, the inmate had grounds to argue that counsel provided ineffective representation pursuant to U.S. Const., amend. 6, and such claims are to be analyzed under the two-part Strickland test. Rollins v. State, 277 Ga. 488, 591 S.E.2d 796, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 1 (2004).

Duty to determine voluntariness of guilty plea. — Because a guilty plea is an admission of all the elements of a formal criminal charge, it cannot be truly voluntary unless the defendant possesses an understanding of the law in relation to the facts, which is the function of the accused's appointed counsel. Walker v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 213, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10733 (5th Cir. 1973).

The requirement that a guilty plea must be intelligently made is not a requirement that all advice offered by the defendant's lawyer withstand retrospective examination in a post-conviction hearing. Lambert v. United States, 392 F. Supp. 113, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12810 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

It is the defendant's lawyer's duty to ascertain whether a plea of guilty is entered voluntarily and knowingly. Carbo v. United States, 581 F.2d 91, 1978 U.S. App.

LEXIS 8774 (5th Cir. 1978); Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Counsel must actually and substantially assist the defendant in deciding whether to plead guilty by providing an understanding of the law in relation to the facts. Counsel's advice need not be perfect but it must be reasonably competent so as to permit the accused to make an informed and conscious choice. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Because defendant was advised by the court and trial counsel of the rights and the consequences of pleading guilty, the plea proceedings complied with Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 33 and established that the guilty plea was knowing and voluntary; because counsel's actions fell well within the wide range of reasonable professional conduct, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion to withdraw the guilty plea. Jones v. State, 268 Ga. App. 723, 603 S.E.2d 73, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 1004 (2004).

Examination of plea where imprisonment or death at stake. — What is at stake for an accused facing death or imprisonment demands utmost solicitude of which courts are capable in canvassing the matter with the accused to make sure the accused has a full understanding of what the plea connotes and of its consequence, and forestalls the spin-off of collateral proceedings that seek to probe murky memories. Phillips v. Smith, 300 F. Supp. 130, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8396 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Basis for attack on plea. — A defendant's plea of guilty, based on reasonably competent advice, is not open to attack on the ground that counsel may have misjudged the admissibility of a confession. In such a case, a defendant's only recourse is to attack the voluntary and intelligent character of the plea, which may in some instances include an attack on the competence of counsel. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Dispute of attorney's authority to enter guilty plea must be timely. — It would be trifling with the trial court to allow the client, after keeping silent in the presence of the court while the attorney entered a plea of guilty in the client's behalf and the court acting thereon imposed the sentence, to deny thereafter the authority of the attorney to enter the plea or to deny approval of such action by attorney. Had the defendant had any objection, he should have made it known at the time and before the court acted thereon. Cobb v. Dutton, 222 Ga. 11, 148 S.E.2d 399, 1966 Ga. LEXIS 384 (1966).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion to withdraw the plea, because defendant's appointed counsel had conducted a sufficient investigation of the case to determine that defendant had a viable defense and to advise defendant to adhere to the nolo contendere plea defendant had entered. Hopkins v. State, 274 Ga. App. 872, 619 S.E.2d 368, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 847 (2005).

Counsels' failure to acquaint themselves with Georgia's presentence hearing law falls below the standard required of reasonably effective counsel and requires that the death sentence be set aside. House v. Balkcom, 562 F. Supp. 1111, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17753 (N.D. Ga. 1983), rev'd, 725 F.2d 608, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25536 (11th Cir. 1984).

Counsel's failure to research the clear statutory law regarding the admissibility of prior convictions in capital sentencing trials in Georgia is not ineffective assistance where counsel's position is that since the state had not given counsel "proper" notice prior to trial of statutory aggravating circumstances, no evidence of such circumstances could be offered, and where any misconception that counsel had concerning the law on the admissibility of prior convictions did not affect the defendant's decision not to take the stand. Mitchell v. Hopper, 564 F.

Supp. 780, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16411 (S.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 762 F.2d 886, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30164 (11th Cir. 1985).

Counsel's failure to research the clear statutory law regarding the requirement of actual — but not written — notice of aggravating circumstances, and his reliance on a strict construction of the statutory notice requirement, does not amount to ineffective assistance, where the law of Georgia was not clear on this point at the time of the trial. Mitchell v. Hopper, 564 F. Supp. 780, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16411 (S.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 762 F.2d 886, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30164 (11th Cir. 1985).

Presentation of evidence in capital murder sentencing hearing. — No lawyer can foretell what will or will not convince 12 jurors to have mercy and give a sentence of life instead of death in a murder case; all a constitutionally effective lawyer can be required or expected to do is to make the informed decision of what mitigating evidence, if any, should be presented and how or through what witnesses it can most effectively be presented. Fleming v. Zant, 560 F. Supp. 525, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18252 (M.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 748 F.2d 1435, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16373 (11th Cir. 1984).

Failure to dispute the amount of restitution ordered as a condition of probation may have been an error, but that of itself would not constitute ineffective assistance. Johnston v. State, 165 Ga. App. 792, 302 S.E.2d 708, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2020 (1983).

Counsel were less than reasonably effective in failing to file a motion for a new trial based on newly discovered evidence that murder victim was seen alive after being seen in the defendant's vicinity. House v. Balkcom, 725 F.2d 608, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25536 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 870, 105 S. Ct. 218, 83 L. Ed. 2d 148, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 3789 (1984).

Improper conflict of interest not found. — The fact that, more than three years before the defendant's trial, the defendant's attorney had represented a prosecution witness in an unrelated criminal matter did not create an improper conflict of interest. Hill v. State, 269 Ga. 23, 494 S.E.2d 661, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 39 (1998).

Preparation of defendant as a witness. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in counsel's preparation of the defendant as a witness where trial counsel met with the defendant and discussed the questions counsel would ask the defendant in a general way, and the defendant did not show that but for counsel's failure to prepare the defendant there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different. Mallon v. State, 266 Ga. App. 394, 597 S.E.2d 497, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 384 (2004).

Mental incompetency. — Trial court erred by refusing to conduct a hearing or to rule on defendant's motion for a new trial based upon its finding that defendant was, at that time, mentally incompetent and unable to assist counsel in challenging the conviction, as defendant's current mental incompetence provided no logical basis to delay a post-conviction proceeding to address whether defendant was incompetent at trial, whether the trial court should have been on notice of defendant's incompetency and conducted a hearing during trial, or whether trial counsel was ineffective for failing to timely raise the competency issue. Florescu v. State, 276 Ga. App. 264, 623 S.E.2d 147, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1226 (2005).

Waiver of jury trial. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in advising defendant to waive defendant's right to a jury trial based on the unpleasant photographs of the victim as defendant seemed to grasp the reason for the advice, which was also given in the presence of defendant's father, and was given both before and after defendant began treatment for defendant's bipolar disorder. Mallon v. State, 266 Ga. App. 394, 597 S.E.2d 497, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 384 (2004).

On a claim that trial counsel was ineffective in advising a defendant to waive the right to a jury trial, the proper inquiry is whether the defendant has demonstrated a reasonable probability that the outcome of the proceeding would have been different had the defendant not waived the right to a jury trial on advice of counsel. Given the strength of the evidence against the defendant, the defendant failed to demonstrate a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different if tried before a jury; accordingly, the defendant's claim that counsel was ineffective in advising the defendant to waive a jury trial failed. Hendrix v. State, 284 Ga. 420, 667 S.E.2d 597, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 811 (2008).

Failure to object to rulings belied by record. — Defendant failed to prove ineffective assistance during a criminal trial, as a police officer's testimony that the defendant said that the defendant slept with the defendant's child was met with a vigorous defense, including a successful directed verdict motion on one count, by the defendant's trial counsel; the defendant's claim that the trial counsel failed to object when the trial court ruled that the defendant's silence when asked whether the defendant slept in the same bed as the child, constituted an admission that was contradicted by the clear evidence of the trial proceedings contained in the record. Allen v. State, 275 Ga. App. 826, 622 S.E.2d 54, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1118 (2005).

Counsel present at all critical stages. — Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel where counsel was appointed approximately three months prior to trial and was present at all "critical stages" of the case. Ramsey v. State, 183 Ga. App. 48, 357 S.E.2d 869, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 1869 (1987), cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905.

Futile objections not required. — Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel at a trial for aggravated child molestation because it would have been futile to object to the 10-year old victim's videotaped statement, which was admissible under the exception in O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 for a child's statement of sexual abuse, since there was sufficient indicia of reliability and the child was available to testify at trial. Campos v. State, 263 Ga. App. 119, 587 S.E.2d 264, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1136 (2003).

Because variances in the pronunciation and spelling of proper names were immaterial, an objection based on such variances would have been futile and trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object. Walker v. State, 280 Ga. App. 457, 634 S.E.2d 93, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 743 (2006), cert. denied, No. S06C2003, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 799 (Ga. Oct. 2, 2006).

Failure to object to aggravating evidence. — Because, at the sentencing phase of the trial, the state offered in aggravation an indictment and the defendants' plea of guilty to the indictment, and the sentence imposed under the Georgia First Offender Act, O.C.G.A. § 42-8-60 et seq., for the offenses of entering an automobile and theft by taking, and the defendant's lawyer did not object to this evidence, since evidence in aggravation is not limited to convictions, and reliable information tending to show a defendant's general bad character is admissible in aggravation, failure to object was not ineffective assistance. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 281, 368 S.E.2d 742, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 276 (1988), cert. denied, 492 U.S. 925, 109 S. Ct. 3261, 106 L. Ed. 2d 606, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 3313 (1989).

That defendant's lawyer objected to damaging testimony of state's witnesses was not deficient, even if the objections lacked merit. The defendant's case could not have been prejudiced by this attempt. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 281, 368 S.E.2d 742, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 276 (1988), cert. denied, 492 U.S. 925, 109 S. Ct. 3261, 106 L. Ed. 2d 606, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 3313 (1989).

Failure to impeach witness. — Defendant failed to demonstrate a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel based on counsel's failure to impeach an eyewitness with prior inconsistent statements since counsel testified that the witness was very argumentative and that the counsel questioned the witness as well as possible, and since counsel did impeach the witness with the prior statement in several respects; that counsel may not have impeached the witness in every respect did not show that counsel's performance fell outside the broad range of reasonable professional conduct. In any event, the exploration of additional inconsistencies in the witness's testimony would not have changed the outcome of the trial. Sims v. State, 280 Ga. 606, 631 S.E.2d 656, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 394 (2006).

With regard to defendant's convictions for first degree arson, criminal damage to property in the second degree, threatening a witness in an official proceeding by unlawfully causing economic harm to a family member, and use of intimidation with the intent of influencing a witness to change the witness's testimony in an official proceeding, defendant was not denied the right to legal representation free from conflicts of interest because defendant's attorney also represented codefendant as defendant's alibi defense was not inconsistent with codefendant's, rather, the alibis were corroborative of each other and mutually supportive since defendant and codefendant both stated that each returned to codefendant's house without incident and defendant thereafter went to defendant's parent's house. The defenses were synergistic rather than antagonistic, and the representation by the same attorney did not give rise to any conflict of interest, potential or actual. Shelnutt v. State, 289 Ga. App. 528, 657 S.E.2d 611, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 144 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C0977, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 518 (Ga. June 2, 2008).

With regard to defendant's conviction for arson and other related crimes, defendant failed to establish that defense counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to impeach a witness with evidence that the witness previously had committed arson as instances of specific misconduct cannot be used to impeach a witness's character or veracity unless the misconduct resulted in the conviction of a crime involving moral turpitude, and the proper method of proving such a conviction was by the introduction of a certified copy of the conviction. Since no conviction existed, defense counsel could not be charged with deficient performance in failing to attempt to introduce inadmissible evidence. Shelnutt v. State, 289 Ga. App. 528, 657 S.E.2d 611, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 144 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C0977, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 518 (Ga. June 2, 2008).

Trial counsel did not fail to adequately question and impeach the state's witness because counsel did not question the witness about potential deals, favorable treatment, or why the witness was handcuffed since the witness was arrested on a material witness warrant and had no pending cases about which to make a deal; the defendant could not show prejudice because the state had already elicited from the witness information about prior drug convictions and that the witness was jailed the preceding day for failing to appear to testify in the defendant's case. Johnson v. State, 290 Ga. 382, 721 S.E.2d 851, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 78 (2012).

Trial counsel's decision not to impeach a witness with a prior criminal history was not patently unreasonable in light of counsel's testimony that counsel impeached the witness by showing inconsistencies between the witness's testimony and a prior statement to police. Romer v. State, 293 Ga. 339, 745 S.E.2d 637, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 600 (2013).

State's barrage of questions to a non-testifying co-indictee violated defendant's right. — In a defendant's trial for trafficking in methamphetamine, trial counsel provided ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to object to a prosecutor's litany of suggestive questions to a co-indictee, who refused to answer any of the questions, and to admission of the co-indictee's guilty plea. The impression left by the questions undermined the defense theory and suggested that the defendant had threatened the co-indictee; the impression was too powerful to be overcome by a jury instruction that questions by the attorneys were not evidence. Cabrera v. State, 303 Ga. App. 646, 694 S.E.2d 720, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 387 (2010).

Closing argument implying, but not expressly conceding, guilt. — If guilt was to some degree implied in what defense counsel said in the closing argument, it was a weak implication at best, and arguably unavoidable in light of the overwhelming evidence. There was no express concession of guilt. Consequently, the defendant was unable to show that counsel's "errors" were so serious that the defendant was deprived of a fair trial. Messer v. Kemp, 760 F.2d 1080, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30003 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1088, 106 S. Ct. 864, 88 L. Ed. 2d 902, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 1173 (1986).

Initial doubt cast on counsel's effectiveness. — Defendant's allegations that trial counsel did not interview the prosecution witnesses, call defense witnesses the defendant requested, conduct basic investigation, or make discovery demands; and that the defendant, not the defendant's counsel, subpoenaed the government witnesses' criminal records, were sufficient to cast initial doubt on the effectiveness of counsel, especially since the federal Court of Appeals had also noted that the defendant's trial counsel could have discovered that the codefendant had made statements favorable to the defendant's defense if it had conducted appropriate discovery. United States v. Yizar, 956 F.2d 230, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 4507 (11th Cir. 1992).

Counsel ineffective in capital murder case, but no prejudice present. — Trial counsel, in a capital murder case, who did not file a notice of appeal, filed a brief only after the Georgia Supreme Court threatened to impose sanctions, which brief included only five pages of argument, failed to attend oral arguments, and failed to heed a court request that counsel file a supplemental brief was woefully inadequate and likely ineffective, but no prejudice accrued as the federal court later remedied the only constitutional deficiency of the trial. Morgan v. Zant, 743 F.2d 775, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 18388 (11th Cir. 1984), overruled in part, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22736 (11th Cir. 1986).

Failure to honor requests. — Where defendant had no right to have voir dire and closing arguments fully recorded, trial counsel's failure to request such did not result in ineffective assistance. Anderson v. State, 206 Ga. App. 354, 426 S.E.2d 6, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1633 (1992).

Failure to redact defendant's name from records of prior convictions used to impeach witnesses. — Because the defense counsel introduced certified copies of convictions of state's witnesses to impeach them, but failed to redact the portion that implicated defendant as a participant in those crimes, which were identical or incidental to the crimes for which defendant was on trial, counsel's performance was deficient; as the main evidence against defendant was the testimony from those witnesses and there was no physical evidence that linked defendant to the crimes, the fact that defendant was involved with those same defendants in prior similar crimes could have led the jury to conclude that the same pattern was being repeated, and there was a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's ineffective assistance, the outcome of the trial would have been different, and defendant was entitled to a new trial pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-5-25. Whitaker v. State, 276 Ga. App. 226, 622 S.E.2d 916, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1212 (2005).

Failure to request instructions on lesser offense. — Defendant was not denied ineffective assistance of counsel by counsel's failure in aggravated assault trial to request jury instructions on the lesser offenses of pointing a pistol at another or reckless conduct. Fambro v. State, 164 Ga. App. 359, 297 S.E.2d 111, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2800 (1982).

Defendant's counsel was entitled to rely on defendant's claim that defendant was not present when a victim was killed, counsel acted reasonably when counsel decided to defend charges of malice murder and felony murder by attacking the credibility of defendant's co-conspirators and when counsel decided not to ask that the jury be instructed on voluntary manslaughter as a lesser included offense of murder; furthermore, the trial court did not err because it did not give the jury an instruction on voluntary manslaughter, sua sponte. Sparks v. State, 277 Ga. 72, 586 S.E.2d 645, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 732 (2003).

Defendant's trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to request jury instruction on reckless conduct as lesser-included offense of aggravated assault as there was no evidence that would support a finding that defendant's driving a vehicle directly at a deputy and not stopping at a police roadblock was criminally negligent rather than intentional; further, trial counsel testified that the decision to not request a jury charge on the lesser included offense was a matter of trial strategy to pursue an all or nothing defense for the aggravated assault charge. Taul v. State, 290 Ga. App. 288, 659 S.E.2d 646, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 212 (2008).

In a malice murder prosecution, defense counsel was not ineffective in failing to request an instruction on voluntary manslaughter as the defendant was fully advised on this issue and decided to pursue an “all or nothing” strategy and rely solely on self-defense. Brown v. State, 285 Ga. 324, 676 S.E.2d 221, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 146 (2009).

Court’s failure to charge language of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131(b)(3)(A) (proceedings upon plea of insanity), by failing to include the phrase “if ever” when explaining when a court is allowed to release a defendant from a mental health facility, was not reversible error, nor did it deprive the defendant of a fair trial or effective assistance of counsel. The charge given specified that the court would retain control over the defendant’s release and did not imply that the court would be required at some point to order his release. Levin v. State, 222 Ga. App. 123, 473 S.E.2d 582, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 776 (1996).

Dispensing with lesser-included offense charge. — A defendant was not denied the effective assistance of counsel where the defendant’s attorney made a reasonable tactical decision to dispense with a lesser-included offense charge and there was no evidence that a lack of consultation with the defendant, if any, either reflected a lack of investigation or caused an unknowing waiver of a constitutional right by the defendant. Maynor v. Green, 547 F. Supp. 264, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15861 (S.D. Ga. 1982).

Erroneous sentence estimate by defense counsel. — The United States Constitution does not guarantee every criminal defendant the assistance of perfect, errorless counsel, or counsel judged by hindsight, nor will the court grant habeas relief upon a mere showing that the defense counsel’s strategy foundered. Even an erroneous sentence estimate by defense counsel does not vitiate the voluntariness of the defendant’s plea. McBryar

v. McElroy, 510 F. Supp. 706, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12844 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Defendant must live with a plea if advised by competent counsel. —

When the system of competent counsel advising a defendant about a plea of guilty functions satisfactorily, it is both fair and reasonable to expect that defendant who has made the choice and received whatever benefits flow therefrom be required to live by that choice. In any particular case in which the system fails, however, it is the court’s duty to supply relief. McBryar v. McElroy, 510 F. Supp. 706, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12844 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Plea based on ineffective assistance. — Where petitioner does not receive the effective assistance of counsel the plea of guilty is consequently not intelligent and voluntary. McBryar v. McElroy, 510 F. Supp. 706, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12844 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Habeas court was clearly erroneous in denying defendant’s petition for a writ of habeas corpus and in finding that defendant received effective assistance of counsel where: (1) trial counsel testified that counsel did not know of a potentially exculpatory witness disclosed by the state at the plea hearing; (2) as counsel was not aware of the witness, counsel’s failure to explore the possible defense could not have been a matter of trial strategy; (3) the plea transcript showed counsel’s apparent anger at defendant for initially denying defendant’s guilt and thwarting the plea proceedings, which raised questions about the voluntariness of the pleas; and (4) there was a reasonable probability that, had defendant been advised of the serious problems with the state’s case against defendant, including the existence of the potentially exculpatory witness, defendant would have insisted on going to trial. Heyward v. Humphrey, 277 Ga. 565, 592 S.E.2d 660, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 67 (2004).

Because defense counsel went over the voluntary manslaughter statute with defendant and explained intent to defendant, defendant failed to show that counsel was ineffective; because defendant’s plea was freely and voluntarily made, the trial court did not err in denying defendant’s motion for new trial. Howard v.

State, 274 Ga. App. 861, 619 S.E.2d 363, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 844 (2005).

Failure to pursue appeal constitutes ineffective assistance. — Defendant was denied effective assistance of counsel where trial counsel wrote the defendant that counsel would “prepare a brief and submit it to the Court of Appeals” if new trial was not granted but failed to pursue the appeal and failed to inform the defendant of status of appeal despite the defendant’s repeated written inquiries. Webb v. State, 254 Ga. 130, 327 S.E.2d 224, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 635 (1985).

Because the defendant did not consent to foregoing an appeal of defendant’s conviction, the failure of counsel to protect the defendant’s right to appeal by filing a timely notice of appeal or by obtaining an extension of time constituted ineffectiveness. Glass v. State, 248 Ga. App. 91, 545 S.E.2d 360, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 122 (2001).

Ineffective assistance will justify reversing judgment only if deficiencies were reasonably likely to have altered the verdict. Uren v. State, 174 Ga. App. 804, 331 S.E.2d 642, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 1963 (1985).

Drug use by counsel. — Defendant failed to show that the defendant’s attorney’s representation fell below an objective standard of reasonableness, where there was no specific evidence that the attorney’s drug use or dependency impaired the attorney’s actual conduct at trial. Kelly v. United States, 820 F.2d 1173, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 8433 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 966, 108 S. Ct. 458, 98 L. Ed. 2d 398, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 4965 (1987).

Tiredness of counsel. — Continuing court until 11:00 p.m. on one day of trial did not sufficiently fatigue defendant’s trial counsels to result in the provision of ineffective assistance. Hill v. State, 263 Ga. 37, 427 S.E.2d 770, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 315, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 950, 114 S. Ct. 396, 126 L. Ed. 2d 344, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 6773 (1993).

Refusal to withdraw as trial counsel after defendant filed bar com- plaint. — In defendant’s convictions for armed robbery, kidnapping, and aggravated assault in connection with robbery of a fast food restaurant, defendant failed to show trial counsel performed deficiently by failing to withdraw as counsel despite existence of conflict of interest created by defendant having filed a bar complaint against trial counsel; evidence supported trial court’s determination that defendant failed to carry the burden of proving that trial counsel’s refusal to withdraw constituted ineffective assistance. Holsey v. State, 291 Ga. App. 216, 661 S.E.2d 621, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 445 (2008).

Community pressure claim invalid.

— Petitioner’s claim asserting that trial counsel’s representation was “chilled” by community pressure and news coverage, did not state a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel under Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 104 S.Ct. 2052, 80 L.Ed.2d 674 (1984). Givens v. Green, 12 F.3d 1041, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 1473 (11th Cir. 1994).

Conflict of interest. — Even though circumstances surrounding defense attorney’s representation of defendant in the pre-trial stage were sufficient to create a substantial risk of a conflict of interest because the attorney’s professional colleagues in the public defender’s office were representing defendant’s codefendants, and those codefendants were the persons whom defendant blamed for the crime, defendant failed to show that the attorney performed in a manner that in any way reflected the divided loyalties of the defense attorney’s office. Reynolds v. Chapman, 253 F.3d 1337, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 13493 (11th Cir. 2001).

Defendant was entitled to habeas relief on the basis that defendant’s attorney labored under a conflict of interest in the immediate post-trial stage of defendant’s case because the attorney represented defendant and the codefendant, both of whom had spent the entire trial attempting to foist blame on the other, and the conflict had an effect upon the representation that defendant received. Reynolds v. Chapman, 253 F.3d 1337, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 13493 (11th Cir. 2001).

Violation of attorney-client privi- lege not found. — Defendant was not entitled to relief because trial counsel allegedly violated the attorney-client privilege by giving the state a copy of a list of witnesses and a summary of their testimony that defendant had prepared; counsel provided the list as part of the reciprocal discovery process, and defendant failed to show how the outcome of this case would have been different if defense counsel had not provided this list. Weathersby v. State, 263 Ga. App. 341, 587 S.E.2d 836, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1207 (2003).

Failure to strike jurors allegedly related to victim. — Petitioner was entitled to an evidentiary hearing on the petitioner's claim that counsel's failure to strike jurors allegedly related to the victim constituted ineffective assistance of counsel. Assuming that counsel knew or had reason to know that the jury was composed in part of persons disqualifiable under Georgia law, and had no reasonable basis for failing to strike these jurors, counsel's performance at the voir dire would fall outside the range of professionally competent assistance. Smith v. Gearing, 888 F.2d 1334, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 17458 (11th Cir. 1989).

Ineffectiveness in voir dire not shown. — Defendant contended that counsel improperly failed to require voir dire to be recorded; however, no prejudice to defendant was shown from the alleged ineffective assistance of counsel since defendant did not assert that anything harmful or prejudicial transpired during voir dire. Domingues v. State, 277 Ga. 373, 589 S.E.2d 102, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 1000 (2003).

When the defendant alleged defense counsel was deficient during the voir dire of two jurors regarding the jurors' possible bias, as the defendant failed to show that, if the jurors had been further questioned, it would have become apparent that the jurors either had a fixed opinion about guilt or could not decide the case based on the evidence and instructions; the defendant failed to satisfy the prejudice prong of the ineffectiveness claim. Cade v. State, 289 Ga. 805, 716 S.E.2d 196, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 717 (2011).

Effectiveness of pretrial investiga- tion. — Although counsel has the duty to conduct pre-trial investigation, the standard for evaluating the effectiveness of counsel's pretrial investigation is reasonableness under the circumstances. Greene v. United States, 880 F.2d 1299, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 12362 (11th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1018, 110 S. Ct. 1322, 108 L. Ed. 2d 498, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1233 (1990).

Habeas court properly denied habeas petition based on ineffective assistance of trial counsel where although it was error to rule against appellant on ground that appellant, who had pleaded guilty to drug possession charges, had expressed satisfaction with trial counsel at a plea hearing, habeas court had also ruled against appellant on the ground that it did not find that appellant's testimony regarding attorney's performance was credible. Jackson v. State, 283 Ga. 462, 660 S.E.2d 525, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 342 (2008).

Death sentence vitiated by counsel's failure to present mitigating evidence. — Petitioner's death sentence could not stand, in view of trial counsel's failure to present mitigating evidence at the penalty phase of petitioner's trial for murder, combined with a closing argument that did not even constitute an adequate plea for mercy. Mathis v. Zant, 704 F. Supp. 1062, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 752 (N.D. Ga.), amended in part, 708 F. Supp. 339, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2444 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Vacation of a death sentence was warranted where defendant's trial counsel was deficient in the conduct of the sentencing phase due to inadequate investigation and presentation of the mitigation case. Turpin v. Christenson, 269 Ga. 226, 497 S.E.2d 216, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 377, cert. denied, 525 U.S. 869, 119 S. Ct. 163, 142 L. Ed. 2d 133, 1998 U.S. LEXIS 5596 (1998).

Failure to object to improper arguments by prosecution. — Where appellant urges that the trial court erred in finding that trial counsel had afforded the defendant effective assistance despite counsel's failure to object in several instances to allegedly improper argument by counsel for the State, when the totality of the representation was adequate even assuming that one or more of appellant's cited instances would constitute improper argument, the failure of appellant's trial counsel to object would not warrant the grant of a new trial when the totality of the representation was adequate. Green v. State, 191 Ga. App. 807, 383 S.E.2d 134, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 807 (1989).

There was no reasonable probability that the result of the proceeding would have been different but for counsel's failure to call expert witnesses on the issues of fingerprints, fibers and hair. Ross v. State, 231 Ga. App. 793, 499 S.E.2d 642.

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object and move for a mistrial during closing argument when the prosecutor said that the jury had an opportunity to define what was acceptable in the community; read in context, the prosecutor appropriately urged the jury to speak on behalf of the community and rid the community of robbers and murderers. Furthermore, counsel was not ineffective because the defendant did not testify, as the evidence showed that counsel and the defendant discussed whether the defendant should testify, that counsel informed the defendant that the decision was the defendant's to make, and that the defendant decided not to testify. Gibson v. State, 283 Ga. 377, 659 S.E.2d 372, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 303 (2008).

Failure to object to opening or closing argument. — Because the trial result would not have been different if counsel had objected to the prosecutor's argument, defendant failed to show that counsel was ineffective. Hunter v. State, 273 Ga. App. 52, 614 S.E.2d 179, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 406 (2005).

Defendant failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel based on counsel's failure to object to the state's closing argument, in which the prosecutor incorrectly stated that the burden of proof was on the defendant because defense counsel testified that counsel did not object because counsel knew that the trial court would instruct the jury that the attorney's argument was not evidence, and then would tell the jury that the state had the burden of proof; additionally, the trial judge instructed the jury that the state had the burden of proof and that the burden never shifted to the defendant. Kania v. State, 280 Ga. App. 356, 634 S.E.2d 146, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 853 (2006).

Prosecutor's remark was unlikely to be interpreted as a comment on the defendant's failure to testify and was not intended to comment on the defendant's decision not to testify, but was instead intended to address, albeit inartfully, the defendant's closing argument challenging the veracity and motives of those witnesses who were involved in the subject crimes. Thus, the failure of trial counsel to object to the remarks did not constitute deficient performance. Rosser v. State, 284 Ga. 335, 667 S.E.2d 62, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 752 (2008).

Even assuming that the prosecutor's request that the jury not turn the defendant loose on the streets was an improper comment on the defendant's future dangerousness, and that defense counsel's failure to object constituted deficient performance, in light of evidence that the defendant confessed to a murder to an accomplice, a cellmate, and an officer, the assumed deficient performance created little, if any, actual prejudice. Patterson v. State, 285 Ga. 597, 679 S.E.2d 716, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 396 (2009), cert. denied, 558 U.S. 1117, 130 S. Ct. 1051, 175 L. Ed. 2d 892, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 296 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object and/or to move for a mistrial due to a statement the assistant district attorney made during closing argument because the defendant did not demonstrate that any statement by the prosecution was not a reasonable inference from the evidence; the defendant did not show that but for a lack of objection or moving for a mistrial, there was the reasonable probability that the outcome of the defendant's trial would have been different. Sanford v. State, 287 Ga. 351, 695 S.E.2d 579, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 395 (2010), cert. denied, 562 U.S. 1237, 131 S. Ct. 1514, 179 L. Ed. 2d 336, 2011 U.S. LEXIS 1697 (2011).

Counsel was not deficient in failing to object to the prosecutor's victim impact argument during opening statement because negative characterizations of the victim were proper since the characterizations were relevant to evidence later offered to explain the context in which the drug-related crimes occurred, and the prosecutor's allusion to the fact that the victim was no longer alive was relevant to the murder charge; a witness's testimony and photographs of the witness's injuries were directly relevant and admissible to prove the charge against the defendant of committing aggravated assault on the witness. Lacey v. State, 288 Ga. 341, 703 S.E.2d 617, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 842 (2010).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant a new trial on the ground that the defendant's trial counsel's failure to object to the prosecutor's statement during closing argument amounted to ineffective assistance because the defendant could not demonstrate that the deficiency in trial court's performance prejudiced the defendant; the evidence of the defendant's guilt was overwhelming, and there was no reasonable probability that the outcome of the defendant's trial would have been more favorable had trial counsel objected, even successfully, to the prosecutor's statement in argument. Jones v. State, 288 Ga. 431, 704 S.E.2d 776, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 11 (2011).

Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object to the prosecutor's improper argument because even assuming that an objection to the offending argument would have had merit, the defendant did not show a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different had counsel made the objection. Jeffers v. State, 290 Ga. 311, 721 S.E.2d 86, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 9 (2012).

Failure to object to reference to redacted count of indictment. — Trial counsel's decision not to move for a mistrial when the trial court mentioned the redacted count of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon did not amount to ineffective assistance because the decision was based on counsel's belief that the single mention would not have any influence on the jury and the fact that the trial court gave an adequate curative instruction. Vanstavern v. State, 293 Ga. 123, 744 S.E.2d 42, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 495 (2013).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to object or request a mistrial when a witness made reference to the defendant's prior incarceration because counsel's decision not to draw attention to that remark by making an objection neither constituted deficient performance nor, given the weight of the evidence against the defendant, resulted in any prejudice. Babbage v. State, 296 Ga. 364, 768 S.E.2d 461, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 2 (2015).

Failure to introduce star witness's prior inconsistent testimony. — Attorney's failure to impeach the star witness by introducing the witness's prior inconsistent testimony constituted ineffective assistance of counsel, because such failure sacrificed an opportunity to greatly weaken the witness's inculpatory testimony. Nixon v. Newsome, 888 F.2d 112, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 16991 (11th Cir. 1989).

Failure to seek financial assistance for an investigator. — Unless the defendant can demonstrate that the defendant has been injured by the defense attorney's failure to seek financial assistance from the court for an investigator, such failure cannot constitute ineffective assistance of counsel. Herndon v. State, 235 Ga. App. 258, 509 S.E.2d 142, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1486 (1998).

Defendant must show retained counsel's acts deprived trial of fundamental fairness. — Whenever the actions of retained counsel operate to deprive the trial of fundamental fairness, then the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 has been violated, notwithstanding any kind of specific involvement by a particular state official. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979); United States v. Cowart, 590 F.2d 603, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16552 (5th Cir. 1979).

State involvement through knowledge of responsible state official. — If retained counsel's actions in representing the defendant do not violate fundamental fairness, but are challenged as less than reasonably effective in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6, state involvement through actual or constructive awareness of the error by the judge, prosecutor, or other responsible official who could have corrected it, must be shown. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979); United States v. Cowart, 590 F.2d 603, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16552 (5th Cir. 1979).

For a discussion of trial tactics which did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel, see Adams v. Balkcom, 688 F.2d 734, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 24941 (11th Cir. 1982).

What action by counsel constitutes effective assistance. — Where counsel makes three motions for a mistrial, participates in the question of a possible juror disqualification, moves for a directed verdict on one count of the indictment, tries to get the court to accept appellant's guilty plea and presents argument during the sentencing hearing, at which hearing the judge informs counsel that the judge is persuaded somewhat by counsel's argument and sentences appellant to a lesser sentence than the judge originally planned, counsel's representation of appellant is not so inadequate as to amount to a denial of effective assistance of counsel. Warner v. State, 155 Ga. App. 495, 271 S.E.2d 636, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2633 (1980).

Where the attorney submits an affidavit stating that the attorney has investigated the case prior to trial by interviewing several witnesses, has performed all legal research felt necessary to represent the appellant, has entered into plea negotiations with the district attorney's office, and has conferred privately with the appellant at great length before the case is called, and where at the close of the state's case, the trial court appoints an additional attorney to assist with the defense, grants a one-week recess to allow time to secure witnesses, and indicates the state would pay the expenses, and also grants the appellant leave to file any motions deemed desirable, no support exists for the claim of ineffective assistance of counsel.

Clayton v. State, 156 Ga. App. 285, 274 S.E.2d 682, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3035 (1980).

Where record indicated that trial defense counsel was familiar with facts of case; vigorously cross-examined all witnesses, made objections and was sustained on some, one of which kept out evidence prejudicial to defendant; moved for directed verdict on several grounds, and made final argument, defendant was not denied reasonably effective assistance of counsel. Beecher v. State, 164 Ga. App. 54, 296 S.E.2d 374, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3275 (1982).

Despite a lack of experience in capital cases, court-appointed counsel rendered reasonably effective assistance where counsel (a) moved to sever for purposes of trial the four count indictment; (b) demanded a list of witnesses; (c) demanded the appointment of an expert at state expense; (d) conducted discovery; (e) objected to introduction of certain evidence at trial; (f) cross-examined the state's witnesses; and (g) presented witnesses and evidence on behalf of the appellant's case. Jackson v. State, 249 Ga. 751, 295 S.E.2d 53, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1195 (1982).

Trial counsel's alleged failure to file motions to suppress, to conduct adequate voir dire, to give opening statement and to make certain objections did not amount to ineffective assistance where the record showed that counsel had filed several pre-trial motions and orally presented several more, and succeeded in getting material fingerprint evidence excluded and otherwise handicapping the prosecution. Jamison v. State, 164 Ga. App. 63, 295 S.E.2d 203, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3277 (1982).

The decision to stipulate to the insured status of banks which defendant was charged with robbing was more a tactical decision than an infringement on an "inherently personal right of fundamental importance," regarding which any decision by counsel would require the client's consent. Poole v. United States, 832 F.2d 561, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 15234 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 817, 109 S. Ct. 54, 102 L. Ed. 2d 33, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3389 (1988).

Defense counsel did not render ineffective assistance in permitting the defendant to submit to a three-hour interrogation in which the defendant incriminated the defendant several times, because counsel had agreed to the interrogation in the hope of obtaining some benefit for the defendant in return for information regarding an accomplice. Bowley v. State, 261 Ga. 278, 404 S.E.2d 97, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 213 (1991).

Defense counsel's error in not challenging the sufficiency of the evidence underlying the defendant's armed robbery conviction was not sufficient to show that counsel was generally ineffective, where any errors were extremely unlikely to have affected the jury's verdict on the question of guilt or innocence. Lobosco v. Thomas, 928 F.2d 1054, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 6008 (11th Cir. 1991).

Defendant showed no prejudice by defense counsel's performance in failing to object to allegedly patently objectionable questions, failing to question prosecution witnesses about a civil suit they brought against defendant and failing to adequately lay out defendant's theory of defense. Rogers v. State, 210 Ga. App. 164, 435 S.E.2d 457, 440 S.E.2d 266, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1076 (1993).

Defendant showed no prejudice by defense counsel's performance because defendant was informed by counsel that the defendant had a right to explain the defendant's cross-examination answers. Stephens v. State, 210 Ga. App. 77, 435 S.E.2d 463, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1036 (1993).

Where the trial court found that trial counsel and the team of paraprofessionals counsel led spent an inordinate amount of time preparing for trial; that the defendant took over the defendant's representation during the presentation of the state's case; and that the motions suggested by the defendant would have been denied had they been filed, counsel's professional assistance was reasonable. Yizar v. State, 263 Ga. 312, 431 S.E.2d 114, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1993).

Failure to call defendant to stand was a reasonable trial strategy not amounting to ineffective assistance as was trial counsel's extensive cross-examination which focused on one particular witness who had identified defendant. Evans v. State, 207

Ga. App. 358, 427 S.E.2d 837, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 188 (1993).

Counsel was not ineffective for introducing in evidence the defendant's videotaped statement to police without redacting portions after the defendant invoked the right to counsel and asked God to have mercy on the defendant's soul as it did not amount to an improper comment on the right to remain silent, but showed invocation of the right to counsel after giving a lengthy statement. Martin v. State, 290 Ga. 901, 725 S.E.2d 313, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 357 (2012).

District court properly denied relief on ineffectiveness of counsel claim. — See McCleskey v. Kemp, 753 F.2d 877, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28073 (11th Cir. 1985), aff'd, 481 U.S. 279, 107 S. Ct. 1756, 95 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 1817 (1987).

Ineffective counsel established. — The haphazard defense, the failure to develop strategy of any consequence and absence of counsel during crucial portions of the trial constituted ineffective counsel. House v. Balkcom, 725 F.2d 608, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25536 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 870, 105 S. Ct. 218, 83 L. Ed. 2d 148, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 3789 (1984).

Habeas court erred in granting the petitioner's application for habeas corpus relief because it should not have reached the petitioner's claims of ineffective assistance since those claims had been waived; the petitioner never claimed that appellate counsel committed ineffective assistance by failing to timely raise claims that trial counsel was ineffective. Tompkins v. Hall, 291 Ga. 224, 728 S.E.2d 621, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 573 (2012).

Habeas court erred in granting the petitioner's application for habeas corpus relief because the petitioner could not show that but for the errors of appellate counsel, the outcome of the appeal would have been different in reasonable probability; irrespective of any contention that there was ineffective assistance, the petitioner remained a fugitive from justice, and the petitioner's appeal would have been dismissed. Tompkins v. Hall, 291 Ga. 224, 728 S.E.2d 621, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 573 (2012).

Failure to seek to redact portion of

prior plea. — Trial counsel was ineffective in failing to seek to redact the portion of a defendant's first offender plea that related to carrying a concealed weapon. The plea to carrying a concealed weapon, a misdemeanor, was not an element of the current charge of the possession of a firearm by a first offender probationer under O.C.G.A. § 16-11-131(b). Cobb v. State, 283 Ga. 388, 658 S.E.2d 750, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 258 (2008).

Because a defendant, charged with murder, rape and burglary, among other crimes, was represented at trial by two attorneys, each of whom actively participated in the defense, and each attorney espoused a defense at odds with that of the other, causing a discernible split within the ranks of the defense team that prevented counsel from, among other things, effective performance of the duty to assist petitioner in the decision whether to testify in the defendant's own defense, the defendant did not receive the effective assistance of counsel guaranteed the defendant by the constitution. Ross v. Kemp, 260 Ga. 312, 393 S.E.2d 244, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 286 (1990).

The defendant was denied effective assistance of trial counsel, where counsel had no particular strategy for selecting a jury, was confused about applicable rules of evidence, and failed to question witnesses about prior inconsistent statements. Wilson v. State, 199 Ga. App. 900, 406 S.E.2d 293, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 703 (1991).

Trial counsel's deficient performance in failing to present the sentencing jury with any evidence regarding the defendant's mental retardation, the defendant's socioeconomic background, the defendant's reputation as a good worker, and the defendant's positive reputation as a member of the defendant's community prejudiced the defendant's ability to receive an individualized sentence. Cunningham v. Zant, 928 F.2d 1006, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 4864 (11th Cir. 1991).

Trial court's finding that the performance of the defendant's attorney in a rape/child molestation case was not deficient was clearly erroneous, where defense counsel failed to object to similar transaction evidence, questions about the defendant's prior visits to the sex crime unit and questions regarding whether the defendant had sex with two underaged juveniles. Bryant v. State, 204 Ga. App. 856, 420 S.E.2d 801, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1029 (1992).

Counsel was ineffective because the defendant's trial counsel failed to make minimal inquiries that would have revealed that the arrest of the defendant was predicated on warrants issued without any showing of probable cause before the issuing magistrate; the warrants for the defendant's arrest were apparently issued solely on the basis of the attached affidavits that, although satisfying the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-4-41, did not supply the magistrate with sufficient judgment that probable cause existed for the issuance of the warrants. Pitts v. State, 209 Ga. App. 47, 432 S.E.2d 643, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 741 (1993).

When defendant showed that defense counsel, when informed that defendant had no recollection of the incident from which the charge of serious injury by vehicle arose, but that a co-worker may have been driving the involved vehicle, made no effort to locate the co-worker and, although unfamiliar with the elements of the offense, advised defendant's client to plead guilty, made no effort to determine if the evidence established those elements, and, rather than preserving a meaningful adversarial atmosphere, vilified the client before the court, defendant established that defendant was prejudiced by counsel's deficiencies such that, if not for those deficiencies, defendant would not have pled guilty. The record supported a finding that there was a reasonable probability that, had the case been investigated, and a determination made that the co-employee was driving, defendant, who did not know who was driving, would have insisted on going to trial, especially as the evidence did not suit the elements of the crime as to some charges. Heath v. State, 268 Ga. App. 235, 601 S.E.2d 758, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 893 (2004).

Petitioner's appellate counsel was ineffective by: (1) allowing thirty-three months to pass without making any attempt to obtain a hearing on a motion for new trial; (2) losing the petitioner's case file; and (3) failing to ask that the motion for new trial hearing be transcribed, which resulted in an insufficient record to support a potentially meritorious appellate claim. White v. Smith, 281 Ga. 271, 637 S.E.2d 686, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 963 (2006).

Failure to object to shackling during sentencing. — A defendant was sentenced to death for murder. The defendant argued trial counsel was ineffective in failing to object to the defendant's visible shackling during the sentencing phase of the trial; the defendant was not entitled to relief as there was no showing that there was a reasonable probability that the shackling affected the outcome of the trial. Whatley v. Terry, 284 Ga. 555, 668 S.E.2d 651, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 824 (2008), cert. denied, 556 U.S. 1248, 129 S. Ct. 2409, 173 L. Ed. 2d 1316, 2009 U.S. LEXIS 3757 (2009).

Strategic decisions did not result in ineffective assistance. — Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel when defendant's trial counsel failed to object to testimony by the victim's parent that placed the defendant's character in issue because counsel made a reasonable strategic decision not to object to the parent's passing reference to the defendant as "bad news" and the parent's testimony that the parent had seen the defendant "at the jail" where the parent worked; counsel wanted the jury to see that the parent hated the defendant and believed that the parent's testimony would show that the parent was simply biased against the defendant. Jennings v. State, 288 Ga. 120, 702 S.E.2d 151, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 816 (2010).

State, 269 Ga. App. 242, 603 S.E.2d 669, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 1056 (2004), cert. denied, No. S05C0088, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 1061 (Ga. Nov. 22, 2004).

Defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel was properly dismissed because the defendant's trial counsel discussed the advantages and disadvantages of presenting such evidence with the defendant and it was mutually decided as a matter of trial strategy that neither the defendant nor the codefendant would be called to testify and because there was no reasonable probability that the result of the proceeding would have been different had these witnesses been called. Robinson v. State, 203 Ga. App. 759, 417 S.E.2d 404, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 618 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0913, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 460 (Ga. June 4, 1992).

In a child molestation case, where, during the trial, the state made a request to introduce similar transaction evidence of which the defense had not received the required notice, it was not ineffective assistance of counsel for defense counsel to refuse continuance because defense counsel indicated the counsel was not actually surprised by the testimony and was aware of the previous interviews and video tapes of alleged victim of uncharged offenses and the decision was part of a valid trial strategy. Penaranda v. State, 203 Ga. App. 740, 417 S.E.2d 683, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 614 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0967, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 465 (Ga. June 4, 1992).

Where defense counsel did not object to the opinion testimony of a psychiatric resident and county social worker regarding whether the alleged victim was sexually molested but did discredit their testimonies on cross, defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel. Penaranda v. State, 203 Ga. App. 740, 417 S.E.2d 683, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 614 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0967, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 465 (Ga. June 4, 1992).

Where the trial record indicates that trial counsel conducted thorough and sifting cross-examinations of the state's witnesses, timely interposed objections, presented evidence on defendant's behalf and made strong arguments to the jury, there was no showing of a reasonable probability that, but for trial counsel's alleged deficiencies, the result of the proceeding would have been different. Taylor v. State, 203 Ga. App. 210, 416 S.E.2d 554, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 470 (1992).

Defendant's attorney did not act deficiently in making tactical decisions not to present testimony from certain witnesses, where the attorney explained that the attorney chose not to present psychiatric testimony because the attorney concluded that the doctor's testimony would be more harmful than helpful and failure to call the defendant's relatives to impeach the state's primary witness was similarly a tactical decision made during the trial. Gross v. State, 262 Ga. 232, 416 S.E.2d 284, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 515 (1992).

Asserted counsel's failure to request charge on circumstantial evidence, to request charge on manslaughter, to request curative instructions and to adequately investigate the case did not give rise to an ineffective assistance claim where there was not reasonable probability that but for these alleged errors the result of the proceeding would have been different. Barner v. State, 263 Ga. 365, 434 S.E.2d 484, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 648 (1993).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for not attempting to suppress evidence found in the defendant's home as a result of a search warrant as counsel chose, instead, to challenge a prior patdown search of the defendant which led to the granting of the search warrant on the theory that a successful challenge to the patdown would have led to the exclusion of the evidence found in the defendant's home, as well. Sikes v. State, 247 Ga. App. 855, 545 S.E.2d 73, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 80 (2001).

In a prosecution for murder in which the evidence of guilt was overwhelming, the defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel since: (1) the defendant maintained that, despite an entry of a plea of not guilty and defendant's desire to seek a verdict of not guilty, trial counsel pursued a strategy to obtain a guilty but mentally ill verdict, requiring defendant to give false testimony in which defendant admitted to committing the crimes; (2) trial counsel knew that the defendant's proposed version of the events at issue was untrue and believed presentation of it would have offended the intelligence of the jury and cost the lawyers all of their credibility with the jury resulting in the return of a death sentence; and (3) trial counsel testified that after explaining to the defendant why it was best to do as counsel suggested "there was no disagreement after that." Hicks v. Scott, 273 Ga. 348, 541 S.E.2d 634, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 53 (2001).

The defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of counsel based on a conflict of interest of his attorney arising from the attorney's prior representation of a witness (defendant's former spouse) in a civil action against the defendant to modify child custody since the witness's assertion of attorney-client privilege would have prevented any attorney, and not just defense counsel, from asking the witness about statements the witness had made to the witness's attorney during that prior representation. Turner v. State, 273 Ga. 340, 541 S.E.2d 641, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 58, cert. denied, 534 U.S. 838, 122 S. Ct. 93, 151 L. Ed. 2d 54, 2001 U.S. LEXIS 5836 (2001).

The defendant failed to satisfy the prejudice prong of the Sixth Amendment analysis with regard to defendant's claim that defense counsel's performance was deficient in the sentencing proceeding as the scale was so heavily weighted with aggravating evidence that there was no reasonable probability that the defendant's sentence would have been different if defense counsel had performed in a different manner. Moon v. Head, 285 F.3d 1301, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 4302 (11th Cir. 2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1124, 123 S. Ct. 863, 154 L. Ed. 2d 807, 2003 U.S. LEXIS 121 (2003).

Defendant did not overcome the strong presumption that trial counsel's conduct fell within the broad range of reasonable professional conduct in using a good character defense where defendant did not obtain testimony from defendant's trial counsel at defendant's motion for new trial; defendant made no affirmative showing that the purported evidentiary deficiencies in the trial counsel's representation were indicative of ineffectiveness and were not examples of a conscious and deliberate trial strategy. Parnell v. State, 260 Ga. App. 213, 581 S.E.2d 263, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 249 (2003).

Trial court's determination that defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel was not clearly erroneous, as defendant did not show anything defendant's trial counsel did or failed to do that was objectionable or that would have changed the outcome of defendant's case. Dorsey v. State, 261 Ga. App. 181, 582 S.E.2d 158, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 569 (2003).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial on the ground that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel as defendant did not show that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel, especially since defendant's trial counsel did not testify at defendant's motion for a new trial and, thus, defendant didn't overcome the presumption that defendant's trial counsel's conduct fell within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance; moreover, defendant did not show defendant's trial counsel was ineffective for failing to present an insanity defense, as the trial court's finding that defendant was not insane at the time the defendant committed the crimes, but was voluntarily under the influence of cocaine, was not clearly erroneous. Gardner v. State, 261 Ga. App. 188, 582 S.E.2d 167, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 585 (2003).

Trial court's denial of defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim was not clearly erroneous, as the record showed that trial counsel's decisions were either strategic in nature or the result of defendant's insistence; accordingly, defendant did not show that trial counsel was inadequately prepared or that trial counsel otherwise rendered ineffective assistance. Cummings v. State, 261 Ga. App. 281, 582 S.E.2d 231, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 611 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1353, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 811 (Ga. Sept. 22, 2003), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 824, 125 S. Ct. 40, 160 L. Ed. 2d 35, 2004 U.S. LEXIS 5717 (2004).

Defendant did not show that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel when trial counsel did not request a limiting instruction when the state introduced evidence that defendant had previously been convicted for possession of cocaine with intent to distribute; although defendant wanted that instruction to say that such evidence was limited to a firearms charge against defendant, and should not be considered in connection with the other charge against defendant of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, the trial court was not required to give that instruction because such evidence was admissible to show defendant's identity, and, thus, trial counsel was not ineffective for not requesting that instruction. Laye v. State, 261 Ga. App. 327, 582 S.E.2d 505, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 619 (2003).

Trial court did not commit clear error in denying defendant's motion to withdraw defendant's guilty plea, as defendant did not show that defense counsel rendered ineffective assistance of counsel and caused defendant's plea of guilt to first-degree homicide by vehicle to be entered unknowingly and involuntarily; indeed, the record showed that defense counsel properly prepared defendant's case and advised defendant even though the trial court entered a slightly longer sentence than defendant had expected, and as a result, defendant entered defendant's plea knowing the nature of the charges and consequences of the plea. David v. State, 261 Ga. App. 468, 583 S.E.2d 135, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 609 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1430, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 881 (Ga. Oct. 6, 2003).

Defendant did not show that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel when trial counsel did not object to the testimony of an officer who stated that the officer believed defendant was the driver of the van involved in the accident, as trial counsel's decision not to object to testimony that had already been introduced through another witness, but, instead, to attack it on the cross-examination of the officer was a matter of trial tactics and strategy, and did not show that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel.

Lanning v. State, 261 Ga. App. 480, 583 S.E.2d 160, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 665 (2003).

Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel when defendant's trial counsel called alibi witnesses who in pretrial interviews told stories that were consistent with defendant's story that defendant was not present at the time of the purse snatchings for which defendant was on trial, but who on cross-examination told stories that were inconsistent, often conflicting, and harmful to defendant's alibi; the decision to call such witnesses involved a matter of trial strategy and did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel. Browne v. State, 261 Ga. App. 648, 583 S.E.2d 496, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 733 (2003).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim, as even assuming that defendant's counsel did not object to the admission of certain physical and hearsay evidence, defendant failed to establish the existence of a reasonable probability that the outcome of defendant's trial would have been different had defense counsel objected, especially since the evidence of defendant's guilt was overwhelming. Ferguson v. State, 262 Ga. App. 28, 584 S.E.2d 618, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 658 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1592, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 908 (Ga. Oct. 20, 2003).

Defendant did not show that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel, even though defendant alleged that defense counsel failed to impeach a witness using a purported prior inconsistent statement, that defense counsel did not present a defense of coercion based on the fact that defendant's crimes were committed with another man, and that defense counsel did not call character witnesses, as the trial court's finding on denying defendant's motion for a new trial that the alleged actions all involved strategic decisions by defense counsel was not clearly erroneous. Washington v. State, 276 Ga. 655, 581 S.E.2d 518, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 539 (2003).

Defendant did not show that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel when trial counsel asked defendant at trial about a prior conviction, when trial counsel did not attempt to exclude evidence that right before the crime was committed that defendant was using marijuana, and when trial counsel did not redact part of a first statement about whether defendant would take a polygraph test, as defendant did not show that trial counsel's actions, which involved strategic decisions, prejudiced defendant. Collins v. State, 276 Ga. 726, 583 S.E.2d 26, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 606 (2003).

Defendant failed to meet defendant's burden of showing that defendant's trial counsel was deficient for failing to inform defendant that counsel filed a motion in limine the day defendant entered a guilty plea, because the motion would not have excluded testimony that went to the essential elements of the crimes with which defendant was charged, and counsel on numerous prior occasions had told defendant that counsel planned to file the motion. Jones v. State, 265 Ga. App. 584, 594 S.E.2d 761, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 194 (2004).

Trial court properly denied defendant's motion for a new trial as defense counsel did not give ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to request a Jackson-Denno hearing as there was no basis to object to the introduction of defendant's statement to an investigator as: (1) defendant was not under arrest at the time of the statement, nor would a reasonable person have understood that the person was under arrest; (2) there was no evidence that the officer sent to ensure that defendant did not leave the hospital before the investigator arrived had any contact with defendant; (3) that defendant was in pain or taking pain medication did not render defendant's statement involuntary; and (4) defendant failed to show that defendant was prejudiced by the failure to request the hearing. Alwin v. State, 267 Ga. App. 236, 599 S.E.2d 216, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 562 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1581, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 689 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2004).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim failed as defendant failed to show that defendant was prejudiced by counsel's failure to admit a copy of the book-in sheet, which showed that defendant was not wearing a white cap when defendant was booked; although the victim testified that the assailant was wearing a white cap at the time of the crime, the fact that defendant was not wearing a white cap when defendant was booked did not indicate that defendant was not wearing a white cap at the time of the crime. Lawrence v. State, 267 Ga. App. 515, 600 S.E.2d 444, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 701 (2004).

Defense counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel in failing to request a charge on individual determination of guilt as the trial court charged the jury that, although four individuals were indicted together, the jury was only to consider the case against defendant. Botelho v. State, 268 Ga. App. 129, 601 S.E.2d 494, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 862 (2004).

Applying the Strickland standard, the supreme court found no merit in defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim, as a review of the transcript of the hearing on defendant's motion for new trial revealed that trial counsel met and communicated with defendant numerous times in the months before trial and consulted with defendant on all possible defenses; defendant failed to present any evidence of how further cross-examination of witnesses or the submission of additional photographs of the crime scene would have been necessary or beneficial to the defense. Jackson v. State, 277 Ga. 592, 592 S.E.2d 834, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 139 (2004).

Trial counsel's failure to object when the court gave jury instructions before closing arguments did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel where trial counsel explained the process to defendant and defendant agreed to the reversal of the usual process. Williams v. State, 277 Ga. 853, 596 S.E.2d 597, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 412 (2004).

Counsel's failure to object or move in limine to exclude testimony that defendant "always" carried a gun, evidence that defendant alleged constituted bad character evidence, did not amount to ineffective assistance since the evidence did not have the prejudicial effect attributed to it by defendant. Williams v. State, 277 Ga. 853, 596 S.E.2d 597, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 412 (2004).

Counsel's failure to object when the state asked a police officer whether the "stories" defendant told made sense in light of other evidence did not amount to ineffective assistance since the question and its negative response were not prejudicial to defendant in light of defendant's own testimony in which defendant referred to defendant's several different statements to the police as "stories." Williams v. State, 277 Ga. 853, 596 S.E.2d 597, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 412 (2004).

Where defendant did not prove that trial counsel failed to investigate defendant's mental state or move for a directed verdict, defendant did not prove that defendant was prejudiced by counsel's actions. Hightower v. State, 278 Ga. 39, 597 S.E.2d 362, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 457 (2004).

Defendant's claims of ineffective assistance of counsel, alleging a failure to request a mistrial or curative instructions when defendant's sister testified as to defendant's character, a failure to object to testimony of an officer who had an arrest warrant for defendant and allegedly testified on the ultimate issue in the case, and a failure to object to improper statements by the prosecutor during closing arguments failed where defendant failed to show prejudice as a result of any of the alleged errors made by trial counsel. Fulton v. State, 278 Ga. 58, 597 S.E.2d 396, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 456 (2004).

Trial court properly found that defense counsel was not ineffective by failing to present a pre-trial plea in bar claim to bar the entry of two separate convictions and sentences in a prosecution of both armed robbery and hijacking a motor vehicle offenses, as defendant's argument that the double jeopardy clause prohibited the imposition of separate sentences lacked merit insofar as defendant failed to adequately show how O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1(d) violated defendant's double jeopardy rights. Holman v. State, 272 Ga. App. 890, 614 S.E.2d 124, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 389 (2005), cert. denied, No. S05C1295, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 606 (Ga. Sept. 19, 2005).

Because a child victim testified of defendant's sexual abuse and that defendant showed the victim "pictures or movies in which people didn't have any clothes on," the trial court properly admitted the videotapes and determined that a psychotherapist's testimony was admissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16; consequently, defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective. Johnson v. State, 274 Ga. App. 69, 616 S.E.2d 848, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 671 (2005), cert. denied, No. S05C1834, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 696 (Ga. Oct. 11, 2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 3611 (2006), overruled in part, Miller v. State, 285 Ga. 285, 676 S.E.2d 173, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 143 (2009).

Because trial counsel met with defendant personally on several occasions, thoroughly interviewed defendant, exchanged correspondence with defendant either by mail or by telephone, discussed discovery in depth with defendant personally after mailing it to defendant in advance and giving defendant the opportunity to ask questions, and detailed the steps counsel took in preparing defendant's case for trial defendant failed to carry the burden of showing that trial counsel's handling of the case was outside the bounds of reasonable professional conduct, and the trial court properly rejected defendant's claims of ineffective assistance of counsel. Mitchell v. State, 279 Ga. 158, 611 S.E.2d 15, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 233 (2005).

Because defendant failed to support the proposition that defendant would have to serve 20 years before being considered for parole, defendant failed to show that counsel was ineffective. Seabolt v. State, 279 Ga. 518, 616 S.E.2d 448, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 450 (2005).

Because the state proved venue through testimony that the address of the crime scene was in a specific county and because counsel's actions were within the bounds of reasonable professional conduct, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion for a new trial. Henry v. State, 279 Ga. 615, 619 S.E.2d 609, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 504 (2005).

Defendant failed to show that defendant's counsel rendered ineffective assistance, as the fact that defendant's counsel only visited defendant one time while defendant was incarcerated did not show that counsel was not adequately prepared because there was evidence that they frequently corresponded by letters and had many phone calls. Copeland v. State, 276 Ga. App. 834, 625 S.E.2d 100, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1381 (2005).

Although defendant's trial counsel failed to request a limiting instruction as to similar transaction evidence in defendant's criminal trial, as the trial court gave that instruction in its final charge to the jury, defendant was unable to show that but for counsel's deficiency, the outcome of the trial would have been different; accordingly, defendant did not show that defendant's counsel was ineffective. Copeland v. State, 276 Ga. App. 834, 625 S.E.2d 100, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1381 (2005).

Counsel was not ineffective for failing to make a motion for a change of venue because the defendant had not shown that the jury pool was biased and because the trial court itself had found that not making such a motion was wise as no jury in the county had sentenced a defendant to death; counsel made a tactical decision to refrain from a Batson challenge, no prejudice was shown by admission of certain testimony, the defendant had not shown that testimony of one of the defendant's relatives would have been relevant and favorable to defendant, and the record did not establish that trial counsel was aware of a viable alibi defense via the defendant's former girlfriend and the girlfriend's siblings. Stokes v. State, 281 Ga. 825, 642 S.E.2d 82, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 174 (2007), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

When a witness had originally given a statement that supported the defendant's self-defense claim, but later recanted this statement, defense counsel was not ineffective for calling the witness; the defendant had insisted that the witness be called, and doing so at least allowed the jury to hear the witness's original statement, and furthermore there was no evidence that a change of venue would have been granted or that defense counsel was unprepared for trial. Shelton v. State, 281

Defendants' ineffective assistance of counsel claims failed where although defendants claimed that counsel was ineffective for failing to rebut testimony that a driver's death could not have been prevented by a seat belt, defendants had not shown that such rebuttal evidence existed; counsel was also not ineffective for failing to seek a directed verdict of acquittal because the evidence was sufficient to support defendants' convictions, defendants were not prejudiced by counsel's failure to request a charge on proximate cause because there was no evidence that the driver's death could have been avoided by a seat belt, defendants by not questioning counsel's reasons for not requesting certain charges had not overcome the presumption that counsel acted reasonably, no curative need had arisen to give a charge on one defendant's right not to testify, and a Jackson-Denno hearing was not required because incriminating statements made by one defendant were not made during police interrogation, but to a nurse treating him at a hospital. Mitchell v. State, 282 Ga. 416, 651 S.E.2d 49, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 586 (2007).

A defendant who claimed that defense counsel failed to discuss "important issues" with the defendant, but who did not identify the issues in the defendant's brief or testify at the new trial hearing about what might have been discussed, did not show ineffective assistance of counsel. Furthermore, counsel was not ineffective for failing to make objections that would have been fruitless. Judkins v. State, 282 Ga. 580, 652 S.E.2d 537, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 776 (2007).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claims regarding the defendant's initial post-trial counsel's performance lacked merit, as counsel was neither professionally deficient nor prejudicial because: (1) the defendant waived any right to be present at the two juror interviews; (2) no deficiency could result from counsel's failure to raise meritless objections; and (3) the trial court specifically found that the defendant adequately understood the nature of the charges, comprehended the proceedings, despite being under the influence of prescribed anti-depressants, and was capable of aiding the defense. Hampton v. State, 282 Ga. 490, 651 S.E.2d 698, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 723 (2007).

Court of appeals rejected the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim, because, even if: (1) the arrest warrant had been excluded; (2) two witnesses had been cross-examined regarding their identification of the defendant as the shooter, and (3) the non-testifying eyewitnesses' statements had not been relayed to the jury by the police officer, there was no reasonable probability that the defendant would have been acquitted of both crimes. Bradley v. State, 283 Ga. 45, 656 S.E.2d 842, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 30 (2008).

Because the trial court was entitled to believe counsel's testimony at the hearing on the motion for new trial that counsel advised the defendant of the right to testify at trial and that counsel met numerous times with the defendant, with ample opportunity to discuss all aspects of the case with counsel, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim in support of a motion for a new trial had to be rejected. Warren v. State, 283 Ga. 42, 656 S.E.2d 803, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 28 (2008).

Despite the defendant's twenty-one ineffective assistance of counsel claims, the Supreme Court of Georgia analyzed only five of these claims, and found that the defendant failed to show prejudice due to counsel's failure to ask for a continuance, and that the remaining four claims addressed lacked merit. Moreover, the court declined to analyze the deficient performance prong of the defendant's remaining claims of ineffectiveness, as the defendant could not show how any of those deficiencies were prejudicial. Ruffin v. State, 283 Ga. 87, 656 S.E.2d 140, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 18 (2008).

Because the defendant failed to show that any prejudice resulted from trial counsel's alleged ineffectiveness in failing to discover and introduce the criminal record of one of the witnesses for the prosecution for impeachment purposes, the defendant's convictions were upheld on appeal. Rivers v. State, 283 Ga. 108, 657 S.E.2d 210, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 149 (2008).

Defendant had not shown ineffective assistance of counsel where, on a motion for a change of venue, defendant had not shown how live evidence or a citizen survey could have accomplished any more than the introduction in evidence of existing pretrial publicity or voir dire, and counsel's failure to prepare defendant for testimony before date of trial was not deficient performance because defendant did not indicate until the morning of trial that defendant wished to testify, defendant had not proffered evidence as to what a more thorough investigation would have uncovered, and Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 31.3 did not entitle a defendant to evidentiary hearing with live witnesses to determine the admissibility of similar transaction evidence. Harvey v. State, 284 Ga. 8, 660 S.E.2d 528, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 352 (2008).

Defendant did not show that counsel was ineffective as the trial court found that if a witness that counsel failed to locate had testified, the testimony would not have been helpful in light of the witness's demeanor and credibility problems; counsel made a good faith effort to find another witness but had limited information about the witness; counsel's failure to timely notify the state of a witness's testimony was not prejudicial because the testimony would not have been helpful to the defendant and would not have been admissible at trial; and counsel was not ineffective for requesting charges on both accident and self-defense because both were warranted. Hudson v. State, 284 Ga. 595, 669 S.E.2d 94, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 860 (2008).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to conduct a more extensive cross-examination of a codefendant as counsel testified that counsel did not consider the codefendant to be a believable witness, the weight of the evidence was clearly against the codefendant, and counsel's strategy was to try to keep the defendant in the background and avoid responsibility for the crimes. Freeman v. State, 284 Ga. 830, 672 S.E.2d 644, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 12 (2009).

Defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of counsel based on counsel's failure to object, request further curative instructions, or move for mistrial after the jury discovered unrelated shell casings and bullets in an evidence bag containing the victim's clothes because, although the defendant argued that the two gunpowder particles found on the shirt could have been deposited by the unrelated cartridges in the evidence bag, a firearms expert refuted this claim, and the defendant offered no evidence to the contrary. Thus, the defendant's theory that the extraneous cartridges may have contaminated the shirt was pure speculation and was insufficient to establish the prejudice prong of Strickland. Glover v. State, 285 Ga. 461, 678 S.E.2d 476, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 289 (2009).

Habeas court erred in granting a petitioner a new sentencing trial based on trial counsel's ineffectiveness because the absence of the deficiencies in trial counsel's performance would not in reasonable probability have resulted in a different outcome in either the guilt or innocence phase of the petitioner's trial when although trial counsel performed well below basic professional standards by choosing not to discuss issues other than guilt and innocence with the petitioner and the petitioner's family, there was no reasonable probability that a reasonable investigation of the petitioner's background would have led to counsel's having access to the type of specialized neuropsychological testimony that the petitioner presented in the habeas court; evidence of the petitioner's moderate slowness would not have had a significant effect on the jury's sentencing phase deliberations, particularly in light of the evidence showing that the petitioner functioned normally in society apart from the petitioner's criminal behavior, and new evidence of the petitioner's subtle neurological impairments, even when considered together with the other mitigating evidence that was or should have been presented at trial, would not in reasonable probability have changed the outcome of the sentencing phase if that evidence had been presented at trial. Hall v. Lance, 286 Ga. 365, 687 S.E.2d 809, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 69, cert.

Defendant failed to meet defendant's burden of showing deficient performance and prejudice from trial counsel's actions because trial counsel's decisions to not give an opening statement and to not cross-examine the state's witnesses were reasonable trial strategies and did not amount to ineffective assistance; at the hearing on the defendant's motion for new trial, counsel testified that counsel made a strategic decision not to give an opening statement in order to "leave the door open" for counsel to pursue whatever strategy would turn out to be the most advantageous for the defendant after hearing the evidence that the state would present, and the defendant failed to show what favorable evidence could have been elicited from the witnesses who were not cross-examined by defendant's trial attorney. Lawrence v. State, 286 Ga. 533, 690 S.E.2d 801, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 65 (2010).

Trial counsel did not perform deficiently by failing to object to the trial court's instruction on possession of a firearm by a convicted felon when the defendant was charged with use of a firearm by a convicted felon because there was no need for counsel to object to the charge since the district attorney immediately advised the trial court of the error, and the jury was recalled and given instructions with regard to the crime as charged. Higginbotham v. State, 287 Ga. 187, 695 S.E.2d 210, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 405 (2010).

Defendant's trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance because none of the alleged failures on the part of trial counsel, who was the chief assistant public defender with more than 20 years of criminal experience and 100 jury trials, were so serious as to deprive the defendant of a fair trial, a trial whose result was reliable; even if it could be said that trial counsel was deficient in counsel's performance, the defendant failed to show that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different. Gresham v. State, 289 Ga. 103, 709 S.E.2d 780, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 291 (2011).

Trial court did not err when the court denied the portion of the codefendant's motion for new trial alleging ineffective assistance of trial counsel because the alleged deficiencies in trial counsel's performance were either without factual basis or were decisions made as matters of trial strategy; trial counsel did not speak with the deputy medical examiner who performed the autopsy before trial because the autopsy report was favorable to the codefendant's version of events, and trial counsel testified counsel did not ask for a jury instruction on voluntary manslaughter because it would have required an admission that the codefendant had committed an unlawful act. Smith v. State, 290 Ga. 428, 721 S.E.2d 892, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 85 (2012).

Because the defendant did not seek a hearing on the motion for a new trial or present evidence in support of the claim that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to redact bad character evidence from a witness's testimony, the defendant failed to show that trial counsel was deficient in the handling of the evidence or that there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different if the testimony had been excluded. Newkirk v. State, 290 Ga. 581, 722 S.E.2d 760, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 196 (2012).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because trial counsel understood the significance of gunpowder travel testimony, but chose not to concentrate on it because counsel did not think that the distance between the defendant and the victim was significant, and the evidence showed that the defendant intentionally grabbed the pistol and fired the pistol, creating a foreseeable risk of death that was inherently dangerous. Harris v. State, 291 Ga. 175, 728 S.E.2d 178, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 447 (2012).

Inmate was not entitled to habeas relief based on alleged ineffective assistance of counsel because, inter alia, no prejudice resulted from trial counsel's failure to retain an expert with greater expertise in police interrogation tactics and the possibility of a false confession, because the question of whether someone might be persuaded to give a false confession through persuasive interrogation techniques was "not beyond the ken of the average juror," and any deficient performance by trial counsel in failing to disclose a psychologist's testimony regarding whether the inmate's lack of emotion at the scene was due to a personality disorder was not significantly prejudicial. Humphrey v. Riley, 291 Ga. 534, 731 S.E.2d 740, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 696 (2012).

Failure to object to jury instructions. — Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel when his trial counsel failed to assert his right to address the jury after the trial court charged the jury on parties to a crime because the trial court properly instructed the jury on parties to a crime; a witness's testimony establishing that another person could have been involved in the crime authorized the trial court to charge the jury on parties to a crime. Jennings v. State, 288 Ga. 120, 702 S.E.2d 151, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 816 (2010).

Failure to move for severance. — Trial counsel's failure to renew a motion to sever did not constitute deficient performance because the strategic decision fell within the wide latitude of presumptively reasonable conduct engaged in by trial attorneys; counsel testified that counsel did not renew the motion to sever because counsel had impeached the codefendant on cross-examination and believed that the trial court would not grant severance at that stage of the proceedings. Glass v. State, 289 Ga. 706, 715 S.E.2d 85, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 673 (2011).

Defendant failed to show either that trial counsel performed deficiently in failing to request a bifurcated trial on the charge alleging possession of firearm by a convicted felon or that the defendant was prejudiced because trial counsel chose as part of the trial strategy not to seek bifurcation, and due to the lack of evidence, the trial court granted a directed verdict on the firearm possession count. Newkirk v. State, 290 Ga. 581, 722 S.E.2d 760, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 196 (2012).

Failure to file timely appeal. — The trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for an out-of-time appeal, as the motion failed to show any meritorious ground, and the defendant's failure to timely file an appeal did not result from the ineffective assistance of trial counsel, as it was apparent from the transcript of the plea hearing that the issues sought to be raised in the out-of-time appeal completely lacked merit. Hicks v. State, 281 Ga. 836, 642 S.E.2d 31, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 119 (2007).

The appeals court rejected the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim, based on trial counsel's failure to move for mistrial or seek the removal of a juror who became nauseated during the state's cross-examination of the defendant and left the courtroom with the bailiff, but who thereafter indicated a willingness to continue and was allowed to remain on the jury, as: (1) nothing showed either that the juror was rendered unable by illness to continue or that anything improper occurred while the juror was separated from the others during the juror's temporary illness; (2) the defendant failed to show any prejudice by the lack of an inquiry; and (3) the defendant was not entitled to a presumption of prejudice due to an irregularity in the conduct of a juror. Jones v. State, 282 Ga. 47, 644 S.E.2d 853, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 354 (2007).

Evidentiary hearing as to claim of ineffective assistance. — If a post-conviction defendant has requested an evidentiary hearing regarding ineffectiveness of trial counsel, but has not had an opportunity for one, the defendant is not barred from proceeding with this claim, and a claim of ineffectiveness of post-conviction counsel. Yizar v. State, 262 Ga. 33, 413 S.E.2d 448, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 167 (1992), overruled in part, Wilson v. State, 277 Ga. 195, 586 S.E.2d 669, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 775 (2003).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for allowing co-counsel to give the closing argument; lack of experience alone could not constitute grounds for an ineffective assistance of counsel claim, and upon questioning by the trial court, the defendant expressly agreed that the defendant was "comfortable" with the decision to allow co-counsel to handle closing. Cooper v. State, 281 Ga. 760, 642 S.E.2d 817, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 245 (2007).

Trial court's finding upheld unless clearly erroneous. — A trial court's finding that a defendant has been afforded effective assistance of counsel must be upheld unless that finding is clearly erroneous. Timberlake v. State, 200 Ga. App. 64, 406 S.E.2d 537, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 754 (1991), cert. denied, No. S91C1324, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 599 (Ga. Sept. 3, 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1106, 112 S. Ct. 1200, 117 L. Ed. 2d 440, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 1351 (1992).

Failure to object to admission of dying declaration. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to challenge the admission of testimony regarding the victim's dying declaration because the statement satisfied the requirements for admission of a dying declaration under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-804); the defendant identified no valid basis for objection. Mathis v. State, 291 Ga. 268, 728 S.E.2d 661, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 625 (2012).

Prosecutor's action was not inappropriate. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object during closing arguments when the state commented on the defendant's right to remain silent and failure to come forward because the prosecutor did not act inappropriately; the defendant initially placed the evidence before the jury that the defendant fled and did not go to police after the shooting. Kendrick v. State, 290 Ga. 873, 725 S.E.2d 296, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 350 (2012).

Right to be present at bench conference. Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the defendant's absence at the bench conferences as the defendant made no attempt to show that the defendant had a right to be present at any of the identified bench conferences except the one bench conference during voir dire in which the prospective juror with the medical condition was questioned; and, even if the appellate court were to assume that the defendant's trial counsel performed deficiently in waiving the defendant's presence at that conference, the defendant failed to show that the defendant's counsel's waiver caused the defendant any prejudice. Reed v. State, 314 Ga. 534, 878 S.E.2d 217, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 237 (2022).

Missing portions of transcript. Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to ensure a complete transcription of the defendant's trial, in particular the unrecorded bench conferences, because, even if the appellate court assumed that trial counsel was deficient in that regard, the defendant failed to show any prejudice resulting from the missing portions of the transcript in the defendant's ability to prepare the defendant's appeal; and the defendant could not show a reasonable probability that the incomplete transcript affected the outcome of the trial, as required to establish a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel. Reed v. State, 314 Ga. 534, 878 S.E.2d 217, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 237 (2022).

6. Waiver

Right to counsel of choice may be waived. — Just as other constitutional and statutory rights may be waived intelligently by an accused, so too, the constitutional guarantees of the benefit of counsel of choice may be waived by action or declaration. Williams v. Gooding, 226 Ga. 549, 176 S.E.2d 64, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 591 (1970); Bradley v. State, 135 Ga. App. 865, 219 S.E.2d 451, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1853 (1975); Phipps v. State, 200 Ga. App. 18, 406 S.E.2d 493, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 741 (1991); Singleton v. State, 240 Ga. App. 240, 522 S.E.2d 734, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 1251 (1999), vacated in part, 243 Ga. App. 429, 533 S.E.2d 457, 2000 Ga. App. LEXIS 474 (2000).

"Waiver" defined. — In determining whether or not an accused has adequately waived the right to counsel and elected to exercise the constitutional right to self-representation, the courts will apply the standard that a waiver is ordinarily an intentional relinquishment of a known right or privilege. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975); Clarke v. Zant, 247 Ga. 194, 275 S.E.2d 49, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 681 (1981).

Effect of waiver. — A defendant who has knowingly waived the right to counsel could not later complain of a lack of counsel when the defendant determines that the court's warnings were valid. Reviere v. State, 231 Ga. App. 329, 498 S.E.2d 332.

Strict standard must be applied to waiver of counsel whether at trial or in pretrial proceedings. Clarke v. Zant, 247 Ga. 194, 275 S.E.2d 49, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 681 (1981).

Constitutional waiver requires more than a comprehension of rights; there must also be a relinquishment of rights. Clarke v. Zant, 247 Ga. 194, 275 S.E.2d 49, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 681 (1981).

Establishing valid waiver. — When an accused has invoked the right to have counsel present during custodial interrogation, a valid waiver of that right cannot be established by showing only that the accused responded to further police-initiated custodial interrogation even if the accused has been advised of the accused's rights. Barksdale v. State, 161 Ga. App. 155, 291 S.E.2d 18, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 3248 (1981).

Pretrial hearing is preferred procedure for determining waiver. — Although a pretrial hearing is the preferred procedure to determine waiver of the right to counsel, the failure to hold such a hearing is not itself constitutional error. As long as the record establishes that the defendant understood the risks of self-representation and freely chose to face them, the waiver may be valid. Strozier v. Newsome, 926 F.2d 1100, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 4303 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 930, 112 S. Ct. 350, 116 L. Ed. 2d 289, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 6182 (1991).

To avoid ambiguity in direct appeals and collateral challenges, the state or federal trial court should conduct a searching pretrial inquiry to determine whether a waiver is knowing and intelligent. Strozier v. Newsome, 926 F.2d 1100, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 4303 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 930, 112 S. Ct. 350, 116 L. Ed. 2d 289, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 6182 (1991).

Overall trial record indicated that the combination of advice from lawyers and the trial judge before trial sufficiently informed the defendant of the disadvantages of self-representation so that the defendant's choice to proceed pro se was knowing and intelligent. Strozier v. Newsome, 926 F.2d 1100, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 4303 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 930, 112 S. Ct. 350, 116 L. Ed. 2d 289, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 6182 (1991).

Evidentiary hearing was required to determine whether the defendant had knowingly, voluntarily and intelligently waived the right to counsel, where the defendant stated before the trial court that the defendant thought the defendant had counsel but the attorney the defendant thought was representing the defendant was not present, and the court required the defendant to proceed pro se without further questioning. Smith v. State, 231 Ga. App. 68, 498 S.E.2d 561, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 344 (1998), overruled, Mullins v. State, 270 Ga. 450, 511 S.E.2d 165, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 47 (1999).

Waiver must be knowing and intelligent. — An accused may waive the right to counsel, provided the accused is capable of doing so and it appears that the accused did so knowingly and intelligently. Blake v. State, 109 Ga. App. 636, 137 S.E.2d 49, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 940, cert. denied, 379 U.S. 924, 85 S. Ct. 281, 13 L. Ed. 2d 337, 1964 U.S. LEXIS 180 (1964); Brown v. State, 122 Ga. App. 570, 177 S.E.2d 801, 1970 Ga. App. LEXIS 953 (1970); Cooper v. Griffin, 455 F.2d 1142, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 11426 (5th Cir. 1972); United States v. Shea, 508 F.2d 82, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16091 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 847, 96 S. Ct. 87, 46 L. Ed. 2d 69, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 2551 (1975); Fleming v. State, 246 Ga. 90, 270 S.E.2d 185, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 977, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 904, 101 S. Ct. 278, 66 L. Ed. 2d 136, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3545 (1980); Redd v. State, 264 Ga. 399, 444 S.E.2d 776, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 461 (1994).

When a defendant pleads not guilty and proceeds to trial without benefit of counsel, the state must show the decision to proceed pro se was made knowingly and intelligently. Kirkland v. State, 202 Ga. App. 356, 414 S.E.2d 502, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1776 (1991); Wilson v. State, 230 Ga. App. 74, 495 S.E.2d 330, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 1528 (1997).

Because the record contained nothing showing that the defendant was made aware of the right to counsel or of the dangers of proceeding without counsel, the court was unable to conclude that the defendant validly chose to proceed pro se after voluntarily and knowingly waiving the right to counsel, especially as the trial transcript showed that, acting as the defendant's own counsel, the defendant failed to do anything at the trial to defend against the charges. Heard v. State, 236 Ga. App. 625, 513 S.E.2d 35, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 274 (1999).

Defendant made a knowing and voluntary waiver of the right to be represented by counsel, pursuant to U.S. Const., amend. 6, where trial counsel sought withdrawal, the defendant agreed on the record with such an action and indicated that the defendant wanted to hire the defendant's own counsel, and that until such time, the defendant wished to proceed pro se; the record clearly reflected that prior to releasing appointed counsel, the trial court admonished the defendant of the dangers of self-representation, that the defendant indicated that the defendant understood, and the defendant signed a waiver of the defendant's right to counsel on the face of the indictment. Phillips v. State, 267 Ga. App. 733, 601 S.E.2d 147, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 769 (2004).

Because the record showed that the defendant reinitiated further communication with police and made a knowing and intelligent waiver of any right to counsel previously invoked, the record did not support the defendant's claim that the investigators' accommodation of the defendant's request to speak to the defendant's wife in some way undermined the rule in Edwards v. Arizona, 451 U.S. 477, 101 S.Ct. 1880, 68 L. Ed. 2d 378 (1981) by prompting the defendant's request to reinitiate contact with the police. Rivera v. State, 282 Ga. 355, 647 S.E.2d 70, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 486 (2007).

Waiver must be made with an apprehension of the nature of the charges, the statutory offenses included within them, the range of allowable punishment thereunder, possible defenses to the charges and circumstances in mitigation thereof, and all other facts essential to a broad understanding of the matter in order to be valid. Gann v. Gough, 79 F. Supp. 912, 1948 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2396 (D. Ga.), rev'd, 170 F.2d 473, 1948 U.S. App. LEXIS 2667 (5th Cir. 1948); Campbell v. State, 128 Ga. App. 74, 195 S.E.2d 664, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1395 (1973); Blue v. State, 144 Ga. App. 378, 241 S.E.2d 36, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2703 (1977); Rogers v. State, 156 Ga. App. 466, 274 S.E.2d 815, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3069 (1980).

Waiver depends on facts and circumstances of the case. — The determination of whether there has been an intelligent waiver of right to counsel must depend, in each case, upon the particular facts and circumstances surrounding that case, including the background, experience, and conduct of the accused. Bradley v. State, 135 Ga. App. 865, 219 S.E.2d 451, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1853 (1975); United States v. White, 617 F.2d 1131, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 17212 (5th Cir. 1980); Clarke v. Zant, 247 Ga. 194, 275 S.E.2d 49, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 681 (1981).

Absent any showing that a petitioner is aware of the right to appointed counsel, if the defendant is in fact indigent, it cannot be said that the defendant intentionally abandoned or waived that right. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975).

Judge must make penetrating and comprehensive examination of circumstances. — A judge can make certain that an accused's professed waiver of counsel is understandingly and wisely made only from a penetrating and comprehensive examination of all the circumstances under which such a plea is tendered. Phillips v. Smith, 300 F. Supp. 130, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8396 (S.D. Ga. 1969); Campbell v. State, 128 Ga. App. 74, 195 S.E.2d 664, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1395 (1973); Blue v. State, 144 Ga. App. 378, 241 S.E.2d 36, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2703 (1977); Rogers v. State, 156 Ga. App. 466, 274 S.E.2d 815, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3069 (1980).

Trial judge cannot rely solely upon an assumption that the solicitor has done everything necessary to determine whether waiver is knowing and intelligent. Campbell v. State, 128 Ga. App. 74, 195 S.E.2d 664, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1395 (1973).

Trial judge has the serious and weighty responsibility of determining whether there is an intelligent and competent waiver by the accused. Clarke v. Zant, 247 Ga. 194, 275 S.E.2d 49, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 681 (1981).

Right cannot be waived unless an offer of counsel has been made. Blake v. State, 109 Ga. App. 636, 137 S.E.2d 49, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 940, cert. denied, 379 U.S. 924, 85 S. Ct. 281, 13 L. Ed. 2d 337, 1964 U.S. LEXIS 180 (1964).

No valid waiver. — Trial court's decision that defendant's custodial statements were not admissible when made after defendant invoked defendant's right to counsel, but an officer continued to speak to defendant, as the officer repeatedly questioned defendant about defendant's attorney and stressed that, once defendant obtained counsel, the officer "really needed" to talk to defendant, and, therefore, defendant had not validly waived counsel when defendant made the statements, was not clearly erroneous. State v. Langlands, 276 Ga. 721, 583 S.E.2d 18, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 602 (2003).

State failed to prove a valid waiver of the right to counsel, and a trial court erred in allowing the defendant to proceed pro se since the trial court never informed the defendant of the dangers of proceeding without counsel; appointed stand-by counsel sat through the trial with the defendant, but provided no assistance during the trial, and, before trial, potentially made things worse by failing to voir dire any potential jurors and by failing to object to the defendant being visibly handcuffed and shackled during the trial or even to request a curative instruction that the restraints should not have been considered evidence of defendant's guilt, so there was no reason to conclude that the conviction was independent of the defendant's decision to proceed pro se. Davis v. State, 279 Ga. App. 628, 631 S.E.2d 815, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 660 (2006).

Suspect can always make a spontaneous, voluntary statement which would be admissible at trial. Therefore, a defendant did not knowingly and intelligently waive the Sixth Amendment right to counsel by executing a Miranda waiver as the defendant signed the waiver only after police erroneously told the defendant that signing the waiver was a precondition to telling the defendant's "side of the story." State v. Darby, 284 Ga. 271, 663 S.E.2d 160, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 544 (2008).

State did not show that the defendant made a knowing and intelligent waiver of the right to counsel. There was no evidence that the defendant was adequately informed of the nature of the charges, the possible punishments the defendant faced, the dangers of proceeding pro se, and other circumstances that might affect the defendant's ability to adequately represent the defendant's own self; furthermore, the absence of a trial transcript prevented any consideration of whether the failure to obtain a knowing and voluntary waiver was harmless. Cook v. State, 297 Ga. App. 701, 678 S.E.2d 160, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 542 (2009).

If the trial court merely ascertains that appellant is going to proceed pro se but it does not ascertain that appellant is aware of the right to counsel, there has not been an intelligent and knowing waiver of the right of counsel. Rogers v. State, 156 Ga. App. 466, 274 S.E.2d 815, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3069 (1980).

Express statement that an individual does not want a lawyer is not required to show that the individual waived the right to have one present. All that the prosecution must show is that the defendant was effectively advised of the defendant's rights and that the defendant then intelligently and understandingly declined to exercise them. United States v. Daniel, 441 F.2d 374, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 10911 (5th Cir. 1971).

Defendant's rejection of public defender. — The trial court was authorized to find that the defendant's rejection of the assistance of a public defender, coupled with the defendant's insistence upon the appointment of counsel of the defendant's own choosing, was the functional equivalent of a knowing and voluntary waiver of counsel, and, in this situation, the trial court could proceed to trial with the defendant acting pro se. Mercier v. State, 203 Ga. App. 494, 417 S.E.2d 430, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 532 (1992).

Knowing and intelligent waiver of appointed counsel can never be lightly presumed; on the contrary, the presumption is against waiver. Campbell v. State, 128 Ga. App. 74, 195 S.E.2d 664, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1395 (1973).

Presumption is against waiver of the benefit of counsel, which must be done voluntarily, knowingly and intelligently. Rose v. State, 128 Ga. App. 370, 196 S.E.2d 683, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1482 (1973); Blue v. State, 144 Ga. App. 378, 241 S.E.2d 36, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2703 (1977).

Presumption against waiver of benefit of counsel is a strong one. Phillips v. Smith, 300 F. Supp. 130, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8396 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Presumption against waiver of the right to assistance of counsel must be overcome and clearly shown by the record. Blue v. State, 144 Ga. App. 378, 241 S.E.2d 36, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2703 (1977).

Presumption of waiver from a silent record is impermissible. Purvis v. Connell, 227 Ga. 764, 182 S.E.2d 892, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 836 (1971), overruled on other grounds, Lejeune v. McLaughlin, 296 Ga. 291, 766 S.E.2d 803, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 938 (2014).

Whether there is a proper waiver should be clearly determined by the trial court, and it would be fitting and appropriate for that determination to appear upon the record. Johnson v. Zerbst, 304 U.S. 458, 58 S. Ct. 1019, 82 L. Ed. 1461, 1938 U.S. LEXIS 896 (1938), overruled in part as stated in Wilkins v. Bowersox, 145 F.3d 1006, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 11798 (8th Cir. 1998), overruled in part as stated in United States v. Leon-Delfis, 203 F.3d 103, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 2259 (1st Cir. 2000), overruled in part as stated in United States v. Russell, 205 F.3d 768, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 3103 (5th Cir. 2000); Clarke v. Zant, 247 Ga. 194, 275 S.E.2d 49, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 681 (1981).

It is the responsibility of the court to clearly determine whether there has been a proper waiver. The trial judge must investigate as long and as thoroughly as the circumstances of the case before the judge demand. Campbell v. State, 128 Ga. App. 74, 195 S.E.2d 664, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1395 (1973); Rogers v. State, 156 Ga. App. 466, 274 S.E.2d 815, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3069 (1980).

New counsel cannot waive by filing notice of appeal. — Decisions holding that the issue of the effectiveness of trial counsel has been waived if new counsel elects to file a direct notice of appeal rather than a motion for new trial, are contrary to the controlling authority of the Supreme Court and are hereby overruled. King v. State, 208 Ga. App. 77, 430 S.E.2d 640, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 418 (1993).

It must be affirmatively shown that the court furnished the accused with the necessary information upon which the accused could make a voluntary, knowing, and intelligent decision regarding the right to counsel. Rose v. State, 128 Ga. App. 370, 196 S.E.2d 683, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1482 (1973).

Although no “magic words” regarding specific risks or benefits are necessary to prove a waiver, the totality of the evidence in the record must show that the trial court provided sufficient information, assistance, and support to allow defendant to make a truly informed decision to knowingly relinquish the right to counsel. Hamilton v. State, 233 Ga. App. 463, 504 S.E.2d 236, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 925 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1780, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 1190 (Ga. Nov. 20, 1998).

Trial judge must make a clear record of a proper waiver. Phillips v. Smith, 300 F. Supp. 130, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8396 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Defendant was improperly denied assistance of counsel at trial, where the transcript revealed only that at the beginning of the trial the judge informed the jury that defendant had chosen to proceed pro se, and the record was devoid of any evidence that the trial court either informed the defendant of the perils of proceeding pro se or made a finding that the defendant had knowingly and intelligently waived the right to counsel. Black v. State, 194 Ga. App. 660, 391 S.E.2d 432, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 286 (1990), cert. denied, No. S90C0803, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 769 (Ga. Apr. 5, 1990).

Determination of waiver should appear on record. — While an accused may waive the right to counsel, whether there is a proper waiver should be clearly determined by the trial court, and it would be fitting and appropriate for that determination to appear upon the record. Butler v. State, 198 Ga. App. 217, 401 S.E.2d 43, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1576 (1990), cert. denied, No. S91C0518, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 455 (Ga. Jan. 31, 1991).

Where the record reflected only defendant's request for an attorney or silence, there was not an adequate waiver of the right to counsel. Butler v. State, 198 Ga. App. 217, 401 S.E.2d 43, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1576 (1990), cert. denied, No. S91C0518, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 455 (Ga. Jan. 31, 1991).

When an indigent criminal defendant elects to waive the right to counsel and proceed pro se during post-conviction proceedings, the record should reflect a finding on the part of the trial court that the defendant has validly chosen to proceed pro se. The record should also show that this choice was made after the defendant was made aware of the right to counsel and the dangers of proceeding without counsel. Carver v. State, 198 Ga. App. 676, 403 S.E.2d 230, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 248 (1991).

What record must show. — The record must disclose that the defendant voluntarily, knowingly, and intelligently waived counsel and in doing so the defendant must be advised of the right to counsel, if the defendant cannot afford counsel, and the consequences of the defendant's refusal to accept counsel. Purvis v. Connell, 227 Ga. 764, 182 S.E.2d 892, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 836 (1971), overruled on other grounds, Lejeune v. McLaughlin, 296 Ga. 291, 766 S.E.2d 803, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 938 (2014); Walker v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 213, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10733 (5th Cir. 1973); Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975); Blue v. State, 144 Ga. App. 378, 241 S.E.2d 36, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2703 (1977); Rogers v. State, 156 Ga. App.

466, 274 S.E.2d 815, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3069 (1980); Miller v. State, 156 Ga. App. 469, 274 S.E.2d 818, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3071 (1980).

When an indigent criminal defendant elects to waive the right to counsel and proceed pro se during post-conviction proceedings, the record should reflect a finding on the part of the trial court that the defendant has validly chosen to proceed pro se and the record should also show that this choice was made after the defendant was made aware of the right to counsel and the dangers of proceeding without counsel. Weber v. State, 203 Ga. App. 356, 416 S.E.2d 868, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 416 (1992), overruled in part, Allen v. Daker, 311 Ga. 485, 858 S.E.2d 731, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 264 (2021).

There is no “magic language” a trial judge must use in explaining the implications of a defendant’s waiver of the right to counsel; rather, the judge’s dialogue with the defendant and the determination as to waiver depend on the circumstances of the case. Reviere v. State, 231 Ga. App. 329, 498 S.E.2d 332, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 401 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1131, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 832 (Ga. Sept. 14, 1998).

Waiver deemed invalid. — Defendant’s assault conviction was reversed, where nothing in the record showed that the defendant was advised of the right to counsel before announcing the defendant was ready for trial or that an attorney would be appointed by the court to represent the defendant if the defendant could not afford counsel, and the trial court did not determine whether the defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived the right to counsel. Cain v. State, 201 Ga. App. 317, 411 S.E.2d 92, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1340 (1991).

Because the defendant apparently did not understand the consequences, dangers, and permanency of waiving the right to counsel at the time the defendant sought dismissal of court appointed counsel, and the defendant was then unable to obtain counsel despite diligent efforts, the defendant had not waived the right to appointed counsel and a new trial was warranted. Hasty v. State, 215 Ga. App. 155, 450 S.E.2d 278, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 1156 (1994).

The state failed to show that the defendant voluntarily relinquished the right to counsel since the defendant’s trial apparently was not reported, and the hearing transcript on the defendant’s motion for supersedeas bond contained only a statement by the prosecutor which was insufficient to show that the trial court met its heavy burden of ensuring that the defendant knowingly relinquished the right to counsel. Spears v. State, 247 Ga. App. 626, 545 S.E.2d 36, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 64 (2001).

There was nothing in the record showing that the trial court made defendant aware of the dangers of self-representation prior to trial, nor did defendant’s background, experience, or conduct of the trial show defendant was aware of the dangers and capable of making a valid waiver of counsel. When defendant tried the case on defendant’s own, the defendant raised bizarre, ineffective defenses and made an incoherent mess of the case; thus, the appellate court concluded that there was no valid waiver of counsel and defendant was entitled to a new trial. Ross v. State, 258 Ga. App. 346, 574 S.E.2d 406, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 1454 (2002).

Claims of ineffective assistance were not properly before the court on appeal because they were not raised as ineffective assistance claims in the defendant’s motion for new trial. Bryant v. State, 282 Ga. 631, 651 S.E.2d 718, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 718 (2007).

Waiver must be made knowingly and intelligently. — Defendant’s waiver of defendant’s right to counsel was found to be inadequate where the state did not meet its heavy burden of showing that defendant made a knowing, voluntary, free, and intelligent decision to represent oneself in defendant’s trial for aggravated assault and false imprisonment; although the trial court engaged defendant in a colloquy about self-representation, there was no showing that defendant was made aware of the dangers of self-representation in that defendant’s defense was confused and convoluted and defendant was unfamiliar with the evidentiary rules, which limited defendant’s ability to defend oneself. Banks v. State, 260 Ga. App.

Factors to consider in determining whether juvenile's waiver of counsel is voluntary. — There are several factors to be considered among the totality of the circumstances in determining whether a juvenile's waiver of counsel was made knowingly and voluntarily: (1) age of the accused; (2) education of the accused; (3) knowledge of the accused as to both the substance of the charge and the nature of the accused's rights to consult with an attorney and remain silent; (4) whether the accused is held incommunicado or allowed to consult with relatives, friends, or an attorney; (5) whether the accused was interrogated before or after formal charges had been filed; (6) methods used in interrogations; (7) length of interrogations; (8) whether vel non the accused refused to voluntarily give statements on prior occasions; and (9) whether the accused has repudiated an extrajudicial statement at a later date. Howe v. State, 250 Ga. 811, 301 S.E.2d 280, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 627 (1983), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023) (burden of showing understanding waiver met).

Question of a voluntary and knowing waiver of the right of a juvenile to counsel depends on the totality of the circumstances. Howe v. State, 250 Ga. 811, 301 S.E.2d 280, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 627 (1983), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023) (burden of showing understanding waiver met).

State has a heavy burden in showing that a juvenile did understand and waive the juvenile's rights. See Howe v. State, 250 Ga. 811, 301 S.E.2d 280, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 627 (1983), overruled in part, Clark v. State, 315 Ga. 423, 883 S.E.2d 317, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 13 (2023) (burden of showing understanding waiver met).

Where Miranda warnings are given and the defendant acknowledges the defendant understands them, and on cross-examination on trial, the defendant affirmatively acknowledges that the defendant knew the defendant had the right to counsel when previously interviewed, this course of conduct clearly shows a waiver of the presence of retained counsel. Williams v. State, 244 Ga. 485, 260 S.E.2d 879, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1304 (1979).

Statements to police in absence of counsel. — Any statements given to police, by a defendant, prior to consultation with the defendant's attorney would, in the absence of a subsequent waiver, be inadmissible, but where a defendant voluntarily gives statements to police without the defendant's attorney present after being informed that the attorney had been appointed to represent the defendant, the statements would be admissible because the accused would have waived the right to have the attorney present. Berryhill v. Ricketts, 242 Ga. 447, 249 S.E.2d 197, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1247 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 967, 99 S. Ct. 2418, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1073 (1979).

Defendant initiated conversations. — Even though the defendant made a request for counsel, because the defendant initiated a conversation with police officers and intelligently waived the right to have counsel present, videotaping of the defendant's confession did not violate the defendant's fifth or Sixth Amendment rights. Mosher v. State, 268 Ga. 555, 491 S.E.2d 348, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 624 (1997).

A defendant had knowingly and intelligently waived the defendant's right to counsel in speaking to an investigator and to an assistant district attorney (ADA) outside the presence of the defendant's attorney; the defendant had initiated these conversations and had insisted on talking after being reminded by the investigator and the ADA that they could not discuss the case in the absence of the defendant's attorney. Davis v. State, 281 Ga. 871, 644 S.E.2d 113, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 296 (2007).

When after the defendant had requested an attorney, he initiated further discussions with police, was re-apprised of the Miranda rights in full, and signed a written waiver prior to giving a statement, the taint of a prior Edwards violation with regard to two earlier statements was overcome and the last statement was properly admitted into evidence; furthermore, the trial court had considered conflicting expert testimony in conjunction with other evidence of the defendant's intelligence and had concluded that the defendant understood the defendant's rights and the consequences of waiving them. Height v. State, 281 Ga. 727, 642 S.E.2d 812, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 233 (2007).

It was not error to refuse to suppress the statements the defendant made during an interview with police because the defendant pointed to nothing in the record that showed the defendant had previously invoked the defendant's Fifth Amendment right to have counsel present during custodial interrogation; the fact that counsel was appointed for the defendant at a prior appearance before the trial court did not afford the defendant relief under the Sixth Amendment, and, furthermore, the interview was at the defendant's instigation. Dixon v. State, 294 Ga. 40, 751 S.E.2d 69, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 891 (2013).

Government-initiated conversations invalidating waiver. — Once a criminal defendant invokes the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel, the defendant's subsequent waiver of that right, even if knowing and voluntary, is presumptively invalid if secured pursuant to government-initiated conversation, and statements obtained in violation of that rule may not be admitted in the state's case-in-chief. Starks v. State, 262 Ga. 244, 416 S.E.2d 520, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 428 (1992).

Waiver invalid notwithstanding earlier brief consultation with attorney. — Defendant's waiver of the defendant's right to counsel, made at a police-initiated interrogation after the defendant had invoked the right to counsel, was invalid, notwithstanding the fact that the defendant had earlier been allowed to consult with an attorney briefly on the afternoon of the defendant's interrogation. Roper v. State, 258 Ga. 847, 375 S.E.2d 600, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 54, cert. denied, 493 U.S. 923, 110 S. Ct. 290, 107 L. Ed. 2d 270, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 4958 (1989).

Effect of guilty plea. — Where a person, without counsel, admits the person's guilt of crime and does not ask for or desire a trial, but wishes rather to plead guilty and submit to the mercy of the court, and freely and voluntarily enters such plea, the person's conduct is a competent and intelligent waiver of the person's constitutional right to assistance of counsel. Erwin v. Sanford, 27 F. Supp. 892, 1939 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2739 (D. Ga. 1939).

If the defendant is denied the constitutional right to effective assistance of counsel during the critical stage of arraignment, the defendant's guilty plea cannot be said to have been entered intelligently and voluntarily and it is error to refuse the defendant's motion to withdraw the plea. Cannon v. State, 136 Ga. App. 479, 221 S.E.2d 674, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1392 (1975).

If the accused has no counsel at the time of the accused's conviction a heavy burden rests upon the state to prove an effective waiver. It must substantiate a knowing waiver by evidence which is not so deficient in form that there is doubt as to whether the constitutional requirements have been observed. Phillips v. Smith, 300 F. Supp. 130, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8396 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Defendant who escaped during trial did not automatically waive the right to counsel at sentencing. Golden v. Newsome, 755 F.2d 1478, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28517 (11th Cir. 1985).

Interrogation not suspended in absence of unequivocal request for counsel. — Because the defendant was informed of the defendant's Miranda rights three times immediately preceding the interrogation in question, and where the defendant spoke with the defendant's spouse on the phone during a break in that interrogation, the defendant's statement to police that "my wife informed me to go get an attorney" could not be considered an equivocal request for counsel that required the officers to suspend the interrogation and seek clarification of the request. State v. Summers, 173 Ga. App. 24, 325 S.E.2d 419, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 3099 (1984).

Although a child molestation defendant initially made a selective waiver of the defendant's right to counsel, agreeing to answer some questions but not others, the defendant later made an unequivocal as-sersion of the defendant's right to counsel, at which point police should have ceased the interrogation. Admission of the defendant's statements thereafter required reversal of the defendant's convictions. Wheeler v. State, 289 Ga. 537, 713 S.E.2d 393, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 558 (2011).

If, during interrogation, defendant's request for counsel centered on specific function to be served, such as counsel's presence at the administration of a polygraph test, continued interrogation without presence of counsel was not a violation of the defendant's right to counsel. Berry v. State, 254 Ga. 101, 326 S.E.2d 748, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 624 (1985).

Where a defendant fails to sign the acknowledgement in a Uniform Traffic Citation Summons and Accusation, that the defendant has been advised of the right to counsel, and the judge fails to sign the portion stating that the judge has advised the defendant of this right, and there is no evidence in the record that the defendant voluntarily waived the right to counsel, a defendant who has been convicted under such circumstances has been denied the right to counsel, and the conviction is subject to reversal. Swinney v. City of Atlanta, 176 Ga. App. 823, 338 S.E.2d 52, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2910 (1985).

Hearing. — Because an accused who conducts the accused's own defense thereby relinquishes many of the important benefits associated with the right to counsel, a trial judge must conduct a waiver hearing to make sure that the accused understands the dangers and disadvantages of proceeding pro se. Hance v. Zant, 696 F.2d 940, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 31169 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 463 U.S. 1210, 103 S. Ct. 3544, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1393, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 780 (1983), overruled in part, Brooks v. Kemp, 762 F.2d 1383, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30625 (11th Cir. 1985), overruled in part as stated in, Sutton v. Waddington, No. C07-1462-MJP-MAT, 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 60732 (W.D. Wash. Aug. 5, 2008); 463 U.S. 1210, 103 S. Ct. 3544, 77 L. Ed. 2d 1393 (1983).

A trial judge must conduct a waiver hearing to make sure that the accused understands the risks of proceeding pro se. Jackson v. James, 839 F.2d 1513, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 3354 (11th Cir. 1988).

Statement admissible even where counsel requested and subsequently waived. — Even where a defendant requests an attorney and subsequently waives that right and makes a statement, such statement will be admissible if found to be voluntarily made. Unless clearly erroneous, a trial court's finding as to factual determinations and credibility relating to the admissibility of a confession will be upheld on appeal. Baker v. State, 157 Ga. App. 746, 278 S.E.2d 462, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2000 (1981).

Defendant's statement to the officer that the defendant would talk but would not sign anything not only waived the right to remain silent but the right to the assistance of an attorney. Graves v. State, 180 Ga. App. 446, 349 S.E.2d 519, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2738 (1986).

Appellant's actions constituted waiver of counsel. — See Singleton v. State, 176 Ga. App. 733, 337 S.E.2d 350, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2525 (1985).

Effective waiver of counsel. — See Callahan v. State, 175 Ga. App. 303, 333 S.E.2d 179, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2797 (1985).

There was competent evidence, though conflicting, to authorize the trial court's finding that the state carried its burden of showing the defendant's initiation of the defendant's statements and the defendant's knowing, intelligent, and voluntary waiver of the defendant's right to counsel. Brown v. State, 258 Ga. 315, 368 S.E.2d 481, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 223, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 945, 109 S. Ct. 374, 102 L. Ed. 2d 363, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 5046 (1988).

Although the defendant asserted the trial court compelled the defendant to proceed to trial without benefit of counsel and to represent the defendant, the record, when examined in toto, revealed that the defendant requested to have appointed counsel relieved and when this failed, by a combination of words and conduct, elected voluntarily, knowingly, and intelligently to represent oneself after adequately being advised, by the trial court during the hearing on the defendant's request, of the defendant's right to appointed counsel and of the perils of self-representation. The defendant's conduct throughout the trial was consistent with this election, and the trial court's finding that the election was freely and knowingly made was not reversed. Stevens v. State, 199 Ga. App. 563, 405 S.E.2d 713, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 592 (1991).

By merely asking if an attorney was present, the defendant did not make an unambiguous request for counsel during a custodial interrogation; because a detective testified that the detective interviewed the defendant for only 35 to 40 minutes immediately after the defendant's arrest and that the defendant was able to understand the detective and respond appropriately to questions, and because the trial court heard the audiotape of the interview, the trial court did not err in finding that the defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived the right to counsel, and admission of the statement was not improper. Simon v. State, 279 Ga. App. 844, 632 S.E.2d 723, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 728 (2006).

A defendant's videotaped statement was properly admitted into evidence after a detective advised the defendant of the right to an attorney and repeatedly asked the defendant if the defendant wanted an attorney before the defendant ultimately rejected the right to counsel. Swanson v. State, 282 Ga. 39, 644 S.E.2d 845, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 351 (2007).

Unauthorized waiver by counsel. — Where the state submitted the affidavit of trial counsel who averred only that at arraignment in this matter counsel waived jury trial but the defendant also submitted an affidavit in which the defendant stated that trial counsel never discussed with the defendant at any time during the defendant's representation the advantages and disadvantages of a jury trial and further asserted that the defendant did not "knowingly, intelligently, and willingly" waive the right to a jury trial, nor did the defendant "ask or permit" trial counsel to make such a representation at arraignment, the defendant was granted a new trial since the state had not met the burden of showing the waiver was made both intelligently and knowingly. Hill v. State, 181 Ga. App. 473, 352 S.E.2d 651, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 1439 (1987).

Mass arraignment. — Municipal court failed to meet its responsibility to determine whether there had been a proper waiver of the right to counsel when, in the context of a mass arraignment, it informed defendant and other defendants of their rights, including the right to counsel. Washington v. City of Atlanta, 201 Ga. App. 876, 412 S.E.2d 624, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1625 (1991).

The acceptance of a guilty plea during a mass arraignment outside the presence of defendant's appointed public defender without any inquiry regarding defendant's relinquishment of her right to counsel required reversal. Waire v. State, 211 Ga. App. 69, 438 S.E.2d 142, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1397 (1993).

Burden of proof of waiver. — The burden is upon the prosecution to affirmatively establish a valid waiver of the right to counsel, and waiver may not be presumed from a silent record. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975).

Standard of proof of waiver. — The burden rests upon the state to demonstrate clearly that the defendant knowingly and intelligently waived the right to counsel. Smith v. State, 132 Ga. App. 491, 208 S.E.2d 351, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1725 (1974).

Burden of proof that waiver was invalid. — Where a defendant, without counsel, acquiesces in a trial resulting in the defendant's conviction and later seeks release by the extraordinary remedy of habeas corpus, the burden of proof rests upon the defendant to establish that the defendant did not competently and intelligently waive the constitutional right to assistance of counsel. This rule applies with even greater force if the judgment is entered upon an uncoerced plea of guilty freely and voluntarily made. Erwin v. Sanford, 27 F. Supp. 892, 1939 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2739 (D. Ga. 1939).

Trial court's conclusions as to waiver must be upheld unless clearly erroneous. — Because the trial court concludes that the accused had freely and voluntarily waived the rights to silence and an attorney and had chosen to give a statement, the appellate court must accept those factual determinations by the trial court unless those findings are shown to be clearly erroneous. Lawrence v. State, 235 Ga. 216, 219 S.E.2d 101, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 832 (1975).

Right to counsel after the right has been waived. — Trial court erred in telling a defendant that the defendant could not change defendant's mind once having decided to waive the Sixth Amendment right to counsel and represent oneself in defendant's murder trial, because the right to counsel did not evaporate following a valid waiver, and a defendant may make a post-waiver request for counsel if, for example, the defendant discovers the defendant is overwhelmed by the trial process. However, the defendant's failure to object to the statement or to make a post-waiver request for counsel barred the defendant from asserting the error on appeal. Wilkerson v. State, 286 Ga. 201, 686 S.E.2d 648, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 726 (2009).

7. Self-Representation

Defendant has right to proceed without counsel. — A defendant in a criminal trial has a constitutional right to proceed without counsel when the defendant voluntarily and intelligently elects to do so, and the state may not force a lawyer upon a defendant who properly asserts that right. Lepiscopo v. United States, 469 F.2d 650, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6504 (5th Cir. 1972); Taylor v. Ricketts, 239 Ga. 501, 238 S.E.2d 52, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1226 (1977); Chapman v. United States, 553 F.2d 886, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 13024 (5th Cir. 1977); Burney v. State, 244 Ga. 33, 257 S.E.2d 543, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1093 (1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 970, 100 S. Ct. 463, 62 L. Ed. 2d 385, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 3895 (1979), superseded by statute as stated in Nelms v. Georgian Manor Condominium Asso., 253 Ga. 410, 321 S.E.2d 330, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 959 (1984); Rogers v. State, 156 Ga. App. 466, 274 S.E.2d 815, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3069

(1980); Clarke v. Zant, 247 Ga. 194, 275 S.E.2d 49, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 681 (1981); Hayes v. State, 203 Ga. App. 143, 416 S.E.2d 347, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 381 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0753, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 346 (Ga. Apr. 24, 1992).

A state may not constitutionally hale a person into its criminal courts and force a lawyer upon that person, when that person insists that the person wants to conduct one's own defense. Taylor v. Hopper, 596 F.2d 1284, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 13939 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1083, 100 S. Ct. 1039, 62 L. Ed. 2d 768, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 800 (1980).

Self representation when represented by counsel is in court's discretion. — If a party is represented by counsel, it is a matter within the sound discretion of the trial judge upon timely request as to whether such party may or may not conduct part or all of the cause. Such limitation does not violate the constitutional right of an individual to defend oneself. Hiatt v. State, 144 Ga. App. 298, 240 S.E.2d 894, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2681 (1977), superseded by statute as stated in Cargill v. State, 255 Ga. 616, 340 S.E.2d 891, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 616 (1986).

There is no constitutional right for a defendant to act as co-counsel. Cross v. United States, 893 F.2d 1287, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 1770 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 849, 111 S. Ct. 138, 112 L. Ed. 2d 105, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 4187 (1990).

A defendant is not entitled to represent oneself and also be represented by an attorney. Moss v. State, 196 Ga. App. 81, 395 S.E.2d 363, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 811 (1990).

Neither the state nor federal constitution provides a defendant with a right to simultaneous representation by counsel and self-representation. Loden v. State, 199 Ga. App. 683, 406 S.E.2d 103, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 609 (1991).

An individual does not have a right to hybrid representation. Rather, the decision to permit a defendant to proceed as cocounsel rests in the sound discretion of the trial court. Cross v. United States, 893 F.2d 1287, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 1770 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 849, 111 S. Ct. 138, 112 L. Ed. 2d 105, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 4187 (1990).

Pro se demand invalid if defendant has counsel. — Because, at the time defendants filed their pro se demand for discharge pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 they were represented by counsel, the trial court was clearly authorized to find that that pro se demand was of no legal effect whatsoever. Goodwin v. State, 202 Ga. App. 655, 415 S.E.2d 472, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 144 (1992).

Motion seeking new counsel insufficient to invoke self representation. — Because the defendant never unequivocally asserted the right to self-representation but only filed a motion seeking appointment of new counsel, the defendant's right to self-representation under the federal and state constitution was not violated. Oliver v. State, 305 Ga. 678, 827 S.E.2d 639, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 287 (2019).

Defendant did not timely assert right to defend pro se because the defendant made the request after arguments on pre-trial motions, a jury had been selected and sworn, and completion of direct examination of the state's first witness, although the defendant had stated this wish several weeks earlier, but was discouraged by counsel. Williams v. State, 207 Ga. App. 595, 428 S.E.2d 648, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 272 (1993).

Denial of defendant's request to for self-representation, a request made after the testimony of the state's third witness, could not serve as the basis for reversal since a defendant cannot frivolously change one's mind in midstream by asserting the right to self-representation in the middle of the trial. Thaxton v. State, 260 Ga. 141, 390 S.E.2d 841, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 162 (1990).

Trial judge may not impose co-counsel upon a defendant who has raised the right to self-representation. Potts v. State, 259 Ga. 812, 388 S.E.2d 678, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 54 (1990).

Defendant is not deprived of the defendant's constitutional rights when a trial court honors the defendant's request to conduct the defendant's own defense. Taylor v. Hopper, 596 F.2d 1284, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 13939 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1083, 100 S. Ct. 1039, 62 L. Ed. 2d 768, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 800 (1980).

Demand for self-representation must be honored as timely if made before the jury is selected, absent an affirmative showing that it was a tactic to secure delay. Chapman v. United States, 553 F.2d 886, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 13024 (5th Cir. 1977).

To invoke right, clear request required. — In order to invoke the right to self-representation and trigger the need for a hearing on the issue, a defendant must unambiguously communicate to the court the desire to proceed pro se. The request must be so clear that no reasonable person can say that the request was not made. United States v. Moody, 763 F. Supp. 589, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5969 (M.D. Ga. 1991), aff'd, 977 F.2d 1420, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 25576 (11th Cir. 1992).

Because the defendant failed to make an unequivocal assertion of a right to self-representation, and raised no objection after being informed that defense counsel and an associate would assist in the defense, that right was not violated. Moore v. State, 280 Ga. App. 894, 635 S.E.2d 253, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 974 (2006), cert. dismissed, No. S06C2155, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 896 (Ga. Oct. 30, 2006).

Effect of improper questioning of defendant's knowledge of death penalty law. — Death penalty defendant was improperly denied the defendant's constitutional right to self-representation because the trial court properly found the defendant was mentally competent to waive the defendant's right to counsel, but, instead of determining if the defendant knowingly and intelligently waived the right to counsel, questioned the defendant about the knowledge of death penalty law, which was irrelevant to the defendant's ability to waive the defendant's right to counsel, and the record showed the defendant had a sound general knowledge of the charges against the defendant and the trial process, understood the dangers of self-representation that were explained to the defendant, and knew the benefit counsel could provide. Lamar v. State, 278 Ga. 150, 598 S.E.2d 488, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 536 (2004).

Once the right to self-representation has been invoked initially, the trial court must conduct a hearing or engage the defendant in a colloquy to ensure that the defendant's decision is made knowingly, voluntarily, and intelligently. Cross v. United States, 893 F.2d 1287, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 1770 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 849, 111 S. Ct. 138, 112 L. Ed. 2d 105, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 4187 (1990).

Trial court should conduct a hearing on the record in which the judge ensures that the decision to proceed pro se is being made knowingly and voluntarily. The judge should do more than ask pro forma questions; the judge should explain the difficulties inherent in any criminal trial, including the importance of evidentiary rules. Strozier v. Newsome, 871 F.2d 995, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 5553 (11th Cir. 1989).

Waiver hearing is beneficial though not essential. — Although a waiver hearing explaining the disadvantages of proceeding pro se is not essential under the Sixth Amendment, it is extremely beneficial. Greene v. United States, 880 F.2d 1299, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 12362 (11th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1018, 110 S. Ct. 1322, 108 L. Ed. 2d 498, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1233 (1990).

Although a defendant need not have the skill and experience of a lawyer in order to competently and intelligently choose self-representation, the defendant should be made aware of the dangers and disadvantages of self-representation, so that the record will establish that the defendant knows what the defendant is doing and the choice is made with eyes open. Clarke v. Zant, 247 Ga. 194, 275 S.E.2d 49, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 681 (1981).

Record should contain findings as to validity of choice to proceed pro se. — Recognizing the dilemma facing trial courts when an accused expresses a desire to represent oneself, in future cases, the record should reflect a finding on the part of the trial court that the defendant has validly chosen to proceed pro se. The record should also show that this choice was made after the defendant was made aware of the defendant's right to counsel and the dangers of proceeding without counsel. Clarke v. Zant, 247 Ga. 194, 275 S.E.2d 49, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 681 (1981).

Where the record showed that the defendant was first represented by appointed counsel, discharged that attorney and hired counsel at the defendant's own expense, and later fired that attorney, it was clear that the defendant's choice was made after the defendant was aware of the right to counsel and that the defendant was aware of the dangers of proceeding without counsel. Harris v. State, 196 Ga. App. 796, 397 S.E.2d 68, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1055 (1990).

Defendant did not choose to proceed pro se. — Where defendant contended that defendant was wrongly convicted of four traffic misdemeanors because the trial court forced defendant to trial without counsel, the trial court's affidavit regarding its usual procedure in dealing with defendants who refused appointed counsel did not meet the state's burden to show that defendant made a knowing and intelligent decision to proceed pro se after being warned of the risks inherent in that choice; accordingly, a new trial was required. Jones v. State, 260 Ga. App. 251, 581 S.E.2d 315, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 351 (2003).

Trial court's failure to make inquiry of the defendant as to the defendant's background or experience and to warn the defendant of the dangers of proceeding without counsel was harmless error, where the court appointed an attorney to sit with the defendant during trial in order to advise the defendant as to procedural matters, where the court gave the defendant considerable latitude in the defendant's cross-examination and in the presentation of the defendant's defense, and the record disclosed that the defendant was well prepared to defend pro se and did so in a credible fashion. McCook v. State, 178 Ga. App. 276, 342 S.E.2d 757, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2522 (1986).

Nature of colloquy. — Defendant was improperly held in contempt and sentenced to two days imprisonment because a trial court failed to inform defendant of the dangers of self-representation and did not obtain from defendant a knowing waiver of the constitutional right to counsel where the only mention of counsel was a vague colloquy between defendant and the trial court. Merritt v. State, 261 Ga. App. 597, 583 S.E.2d 283, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 741 (2003).

When the competency of a defendant is placed in issue, it is not permissible to let a possibly incompetent defendant represent oneself without the concurrent assistance of counsel. Almond v. State, 180 Ga. App. 475, 349 S.E.2d 482, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2736 (1986).

Trial court cannot deny the defendant freedom to self-representation if competent to make the choice, even if the defendant obviously lacks the skill and knowledge necessary to present a good defense, and even if it seems that the choice would foreclose any likelihood of success because a defendant's technical legal knowledge, as such, is not relevant to an assessment of the defendant's knowing exercise of the right to proceed pro se. Bell v. Hopper, 511 F. Supp. 452, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11690 (S.D. Ga. 1981).

Defendant's admitted inability to represent oneself. — Where defendant requested self representation at trial but, upon hearing the trial court's warnings about self-representation admitted to being incapable of self-representation, the trial court did not err by proceeding with the trial with the previously appointed counsel representing defendant. Furthermore, the subsequent failure of defense counsel to object to the trial court's refusal of self representation was not ineffective assistance of counsel. Lovelace v. State, 262 Ga. App. 690, 586 S.E.2d 386, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 991 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1862, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 47 (Ga. Jan. 12, 2004).

Denial of request when waiver not voluntary. — Defendant's complete lack of knowledge of the law and the basic essentials of conducting the defendant's own defense and lack of understanding of the nature of the defense being offered, meant that the defendant was not waiving the right to counsel knowingly and voluntarily. Williams v. State, 207 Ga. App. 595, 428 S.E.2d 648, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 272 (1993).

Defendant must abide by consequences of the defendant's choice. —

A necessary corollary to the doctrine that a trial court cannot deny a defendant the freedom to choose to represent oneself so long as the defendant is competent to make the choice is that a defendant who makes this choice must abide by the consequences of this choice. Bell v. Hopper, 511 F. Supp. 452, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11690 (S.D. Ga. 1981).

No error after proper advice and assistance of counsel. — Because the defendant chose to proceed pro se after being informed of the defendant's right to counsel and the dangers of proceeding without counsel, and after counsel was made available for the defendant's consultation and that attorney participated in the defense, there was no error in permitting the defendant to proceed pro se, particularly given the strength and simplicity of state's evidence. Graham v. State, 172 Ga. App. 660, 324 S.E.2d 518, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 3077 (1984).

To constitute reversible error, the trial court's denial of an accused's request for self-representation must come after the defendant has made an unequivocal assertion of the right to represent oneself. Hayes v. State, 203 Ga. App. 143, 416 S.E.2d 347, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 381 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0753, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 346 (Ga. App. 24, 1992).

Defendant's request not to proceed pro se. — Because the defendant announced after the jury was empaneled that the defendant had dismissed the defendant's attorney and had no confidence in the attorney, the defendant also admitted that "I'm not qualified to defend myself, Your Honor . . . I do want an attorney, but I'd like to have one that I have confidence in," it was evident the defendant requested different counsel rather than unequivocally asserting the desire to proceed pro se. Hayes v. State, 203 Ga. App. 143, 416 S.E.2d 347, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 381 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0753, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 346 (Ga. App. 24, 1992).

Request for change of counsel as dilatory tactic. — Where the trial court was authorized to conclude that defendant was attempting to use the demand for a change of counsel as a dilatory tactic, which was the functional equivalent of a knowing and voluntary waiver of appointed counsel, the court could properly proceed to trial with the defendant as pro se counsel. Staples v. State, 209 Ga. App. 802, 434 S.E.2d 757, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1017 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1717, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 1028 (Ga. Oct. 29, 1993).

Failure of pro se defendant or court-appointed cocounsel to raise objection. — In prosecution for burglary, a defendant who elected to serve as the defendant's own lead counsel at trial in conjunction with appointed assistant counsel and made no objection when stipulated testimony was read into evidence could not contend that the defendant was denied effective assistance of counsel because the defendant's assistant counsel did not object to the testimony's being read into evidence. Wallis v. State, 170 Ga. App. 354, 317 S.E.2d 331, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 1897 (1984).

Refusal of cocounsel status not unconstitutional. — Defendant was not deprived of the defendant's constitutional right of self-representation through the trial court's refusal to permit the defendant to serve as cocounsel in the defendant's own defense. Cargill v. State, 255 Ga. 616, 340 S.E.2d 891, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 616 (1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1101, 107 S. Ct. 1328, 94 L. Ed. 2d 180, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 887 (1987), overruled in part, Manzano v. State, 282 Ga. 557, 651 S.E.2d 661, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 591 (2007), overruled in part as stated in Jacobs v. State, 299 Ga. App. 368, 683 S.E.2d 64, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 885 (2009).

Appointment of counsel after defendant fails to act as counsel valid. — Although the trial judge had originally given the defendant the right to self-representation but retracted that right and reappointed a public defender after the defendant refused to participate in the trial, the defendant was not denied the right to represent oneself. Spencer v. State, 176 Ga. App. 313, 335 S.E.2d 661, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2297 (1985).

Demand for law library by one in state custody. — A criminal defendant certainly has a right, correlative with the right to assistance of counsel, to dispense with counsel, and conduct the defense in propria persona, but having asserted this right, the defendant in the lawful custody of the state does not have the right to demand and receive for the defendant's use a $15,000.00 law library. Bell v. Hopper, 511 F. Supp. 452, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11690 (S.D. Ga. 1981).

Prisoner who wishes to represent oneself on appeal is entitled protection against any unconstitutional discrimination or abuse of discretion in the dispensing of those privileges granted to the prison population as a whole. Lee v. Stynchcombe, 347 F. Supp. 1076, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11943 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Violation of the accused's right to represent oneself as cocounsel may be harmless error. Clarke v. Zant, 247 Ga. 194, 275 S.E.2d 49, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 681 (1981).

Public defender may provide assistance to defendant. — The trial court did not abuse its discretion in acceding to the defendant's expressed preference to represent oneself rather than be represented by the public defender, while instructing the public defender to sit at the defense table and provide the defendant with such assistance during the trial as the defendant might desire. Turner v. State, 199 Ga. App. 836, 406 S.E.2d 512, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 716 (1991).

8. Counsel on Appeal

On certiorari. — There is no constitutional right to representation of counsel on certiorari. The constitutional right extends only through the prosecution of a direct appeal. Paino v. State, 263 Ga. 456, 435 S.E.2d 24 (1993).

Accused as witness. — Trial court properly found that defense counsel was not ineffective in the representation of defendant, insofar as in advising defendant against testifying, the counsel adequately advised defendant against doing so in order to avoid: (1) corroboration of the victim's testimony; (2) subjecting defendant to the state's cross-examination on that issue; and (3) opening the door to testimony surrounding defendant's acquaintance and the circumstances of the acquaintance's death a few days after the offenses defendant allegedly committed.

Holman v. State, 272 Ga. App. 890, 614 S.E.2d 124, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 389 (2005), cert. denied, No. S05C1295, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 606 (Ga. Sept. 19, 2005).

Adequate representation by counsel must be provided a criminal defendant through appeal. — Effective assistance of counsel “through appeal” means “through” to the very end of that first appeal. Moyer v. Georgia, 330 F. Supp. 290, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11927 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Purpose of right to counsel for indigents on appeal. — An indigent has the right to be represented by counsel on appeal of the defendant’s conviction because a rich person enjoys the benefit of counsel’s examination of the record, research of the law, and marshaling of arguments on person’s behalf, while the indigent without counsel is forced to shift for oneself. Reid v. State, 235 Ga. 378, 219 S.E.2d 740, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 887 (1975).

Rights of indigent on appeal generally. — Indigent defendant is entitled to the appointment of counsel to assist the defendant on the defendant’s first appeal and that appointed counsel must function in the active role of an advocate. Goforth v. Dutton, 409 F.2d 651, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 13068 (5th Cir. 1969).

On an appeal granted or by right an indigent may not be denied assistance of counsel. Moyer v. Georgia, 330 F. Supp. 290, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11927 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Indigent has the right to appointed counsel to assist on direct appeal. Roberts v. Caldwell, 230 Ga. 223, 196 S.E.2d 444, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 865 (1973).

An indigent defendant has the right to be represented by counsel upon appeal of a criminal conviction, and the defendant has the right to be advised of and insist upon the right of appeal, subject to the right of appointed counsel not to be required to pursue a wholly frivolous appeal. Reid v. State, 235 Ga. 378, 219 S.E.2d 740, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 887 (1975).

An indigent defendant is entitled to have counsel appointed to represent the defendant on the first level of appellate review. Weber v. State, 203 Ga. App. 356, 416 S.E.2d 868, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 416 (1992), overruled in part, Allen v. Daker, 311 Ga. 485, 858 S.E.2d 731, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 264 (2021).

Indigency may not foreclose any phase of appellate review. — If the petitioner is granted an appeal in forma pauperis, all subsequent necessary proceedings until final decision on appeal represent steps in the trial of the case at which the petitioner is entitled to counsel. The fact that the appeal in forma pauperis is allowed is a finding by the court that the trial is not ended, but extends until final determination upon appeal. Reid v. Sanford, 42 F. Supp. 300, 1941 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2427 (D. Ga. 1941).

Once the state chooses to establish appellate review in criminal cases, it may not foreclose indigents from access to any phase of that procedure because of their poverty. Moyer v. Georgia, 330 F. Supp. 290, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11927 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Indigent who intends to appeal need not specifically request appointment of counsel. — An individual desiring an appeal need not, once a responsible state authority knows of the desire to appeal and knows of the status of indigency, specifically request appointment of appellate counsel. Roberts v. Caldwell, 230 Ga. 223, 196 S.E.2d 444, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 865 (1973).

Failure to provide indigent with appellate counsel. — The failure to grant an indigent defendant seeking initial review of the defendant’s conviction the services of an advocate violates the petitioner’s rights to fair procedure and equality under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Chenoweth v. Smith, 225 Ga. 572, 170 S.E.2d 235, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 567 (1969).

Lack of counsel for indigent during appeal of right. — Where the merits of the one and only appeal an indigent has as of right are decided without benefit of counsel in a state criminal case, there has been a discrimination between the rich and the poor which violates U.S. Const., amend. 14. Chenoweth v. Smith, 225 Ga. 572, 170 S.E.2d 235, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 567 (1969).

Constitutional right of counsel does not apply in a habeas corpus proceeding, which is not a criminal prosecution. Chadwick v. Smith, 227 Ga. 753, Dismissal of an inmate's habeas petition without a hearing was proper as the petition failed to state any viable claim for pre-conviction habeas corpus relief since: (1) the inmate was not entitled to appointed counsel in the habeas corpus proceeding; (2) the habeas court was not required to make a determination of the inmate's mental state as it was an issue to be addressed in the context of the criminal prosecution; and (3) the inmate did not seek issuance of the writ on the ground that the inmate had tendered proper bail in connection with the inmate's then-pending prosecution on the criminal charge. Britt v. Conway, 281 Ga. 189, 637 S.E.2d 43, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 887 (2006).

Appeal from denial of habeas corpus. — There is no constitutional or statutory right to the assistance of appointed counsel on appeal of the denial of habeas corpus. Yates v. Brown, 235 Ga. 391, 219 S.E.2d 729, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 890 (1975).

Right to appointed counsel in habeas proceedings. — The United States Supreme Court has never held that prisoners have a constitutional right to counsel when mounting collateral attacks upon their convictions; in federal habeas proceedings, appointment of counsel prior to an evidentiary hearing is necessary only when the process or the "interests of justice" require it. McBride v. Sharpe, 25 F.3d 962, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 15164 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 990, 115 S. Ct. 489, 130 L. Ed. 2d 401, 1994 U.S. LEXIS 7914 (1994).

State is not required to pay an indigent petitioner's expenses in habeas corpus proceedings. State v. Davis, 246 Ga. 200, 269 S.E.2d 461, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1044, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1057, 101 S. Ct. 631, 66 L. Ed. 2d 511 (1980).

No right to state funds for experts or investigators in habeas corpus. — A defendant has no right to receive or spend state funds for the appointment of experts or investigators in habeas corpus proceedings, even in death penalty cases. Spencer v. Hopper, 243 Ga. 532, 255 S.E.2d 1, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 980, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 178, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Record need not reflect that the defendant made a knowing and intelligent decision not to appeal before the defendant can be precluded from appellate review. Murphy v. Balkcom, 245 Ga. 13, 262 S.E.2d 784, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 666 (1980).

Valid waiver of appellate counsel. — The defendant knowingly, voluntarily, and intelligently waived the defendant's right to appellate counsel; furthermore, since the Sixth Amendment does not require the court to appoint standby counsel or counsel to assist in specific technical matters, the court will not do so. United States v. Moore, 903 F. Supp. 44, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16078 (S.D. Ga. 1995), aff'd, 106 F.3d 415, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 1567 (11th Cir. 1997).

Self-representation during appeal not ineffective. — Trial court's denial of defendant's motion to allow an out-of-time appeal without conducting an evidentiary appeal was not an abuse of discretion as defendant explained to the trial court that defendant decided, as a matter of strategy, to file a pro se motion in arrest of judgment under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-61 rather than an immediate direct appeal; there was no need to inquire further into whether defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel in failing to file an immediate direct appeal. Smith v. State, 263 Ga. App. 414, 587 S.E.2d 787, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1147 (2003), cert. denied, No. S04C0206, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 81 (Ga. Jan. 20, 2004).

Duty of attorney as to decision whether to appeal. — An attorney renders effective assistance of counsel with regard to the decision whether to appeal when the attorney advises the client of the client's appellate rights and does not preempt the client's decision to appeal. Murphy v. Balkcom, 245 Ga. 13, 262 S.E.2d 784, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 666 (1980).

Merely filing notice of appeal does not discharge that duty. — The requirement of effective assistance of counsel on appeal is not met by the mere filing of the notice to appeal without the submission of the requisite enumeration of errors, a brief, and oral argument. Moye v. Georgia, 330 F. Supp. 290, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11927 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Appointed counsel has no duty to press counsel's services upon reluctant recipients as part of the defendant's right to counsel on appeal. Dixon v. Hopper, 237 Ga. 811, 229 S.E.2d 656, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1400 (1976).

Procedure where counsel believes appeal to be frivolous. — If counsel finds the case for appeal to be wholly frivolous, after a conscientious examination of it, counsel should so advise the court and request permission to withdraw. That request must, however, be accompanied by a brief referring to anything in the record that might arguably support the appeal. A copy of counsel's brief should be furnished the indigent and time allowed the indigent to raise any points that the indigent chooses; the court, not counsel, then proceeds, after a full examination of all the proceeding, to decide whether the case is wholly frivolous. Byrd v. Smith, 407 F.2d 363, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 9070 (5th Cir. 1969); Moye v. Georgia, 330 F. Supp. 290, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11927 (N.D. Ga. 1971); Bolick v. State, 127 Ga. App. 542, 194 S.E.2d 302, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1503, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1505, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 946 (1972);

Thornton v. Ault, 233 Ga. 172, 210 S.E.2d 683, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 712 (1974); Reid v. State, 235 Ga. 378, 219 S.E.2d 740, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 887 (1975); Fegan v. State, 154 Ga. App. 791, 270 S.E.2d 211, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2392 (1980).

Counsel not required to prepare brief setting forth meritless grounds.

— The Constitution does not require an appeal of meritorious grounds by the counsel of an indigent defendant to be accompanied by a brief prepared by the counsel of meritless grounds urged by the defendant. Reid v. State, 235 Ga. 378, 219 S.E.2d 740, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 887 (1975).

Grounds as to which defendant, but not counsel, urges review. — An indigent defendant's right to be represented by counsel on appeal does not include the right to insist that appointed counsel enumerate as error specified rulings of the trial court as to which defendant, but not counsel, urges appellate review. Reid v. State, 235 Ga. 378, 219 S.E.2d 740, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 887 (1975).

If the court finds the appeal frivolous it may grant the request to withdraw and dismiss the appeal. Byrd v. Smith, 407 F.2d 363, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 9070 (5th Cir. 1969); Fegan v. State, 154 Ga. App. 791, 270 S.E.2d 211, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2392 (1980).

If the court finds any of the issues arguable on their merits, it must then furnish counsel to argue the appeal. Byrd v. Smith, 407 F.2d 363, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 9070 (5th Cir. 1969); Fegan v. State, 154 Ga. App. 791, 270 S.E.2d 211, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2392 (1980).

Unless counsel appointed to argue meritorious issues on appeal, a defendant is deprived of adequate representation of counsel on appeal in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Byrd v. Smith, 407 F.2d 363, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 9070 (5th Cir. 1969).

Although this procedure is not followed, constitutional requirements may yet be satisfied where the appellate court has carefully reviewed the transcript of the trial and given full consideration to all legal points that might be involved. Bolick v. State, 127 Ga. App. 542, 194 S.E.2d 302, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1503, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1505, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 946 (1972).

Where appointed counsel has examined the record, researched the law, and evaluated the arguments, the constitutional requirements have been met and the obligations of appellate counsel have been satisfied. Reid v. State, 235 Ga. 378, 219 S.E.2d 740, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 887 (1975).

Refusal of attorney to pursue an appeal of the defendant's conviction, where the defendant has escaped from custody and rendered the appeal dismissible as moot, does not constitute ineffective representation of counsel. Johnson v. Caldwell, 458 F.2d 505, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 10217 (5th Cir. 1972).

What constitutes denial of counsel on appeal. — To constitute denial of right to counsel where trial attorney is retained it must be known to the court or some other responsible state official that the defendant is indigent and that the defendant desires to appeal. However, when the defendant is represented by court-appointed counsel a different standard applies, and the focus of the inquiry is not on what the defendant made known to the state, but on what the state, acting through court-appointed counsel, revealed to the defendant. Thornton v. Ault, 233 Ga. 172, 210 S.E.2d 683, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 712 (1974).

Trial court did not err in failing to appoint counsel to prosecute the defendant's motion for out-of-time appeal because the defendant did not file a motion to withdraw the guilty plea which, if timely, would have triggered the right to appointed counsel; because a motion for an out-of-time appeal cannot be construed as part of a criminal defendant's first appeal of right, a defendant is not entitled to the assistance of appointed counsel. Pierce v. State, 289 Ga. 893, 717 S.E.2d 202, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 817 (2011).

Denial of assistance of counsel on appeal. — Trial court erred in denying defendant's motion for an out-of-time appeal of the denial of the defendant's motion to withdraw the defendant's guilty plea. It was obvious that defendant had attempted to appeal the denial of the defendant's motion to withdraw and that the defendant's request for counsel to help the defendant pursue the defendant's appeal had never been ruled upon; prejudice was presumed and the harmless error analysis did not apply since there had been a total denial of the assistance of counsel. Stockton v. State, 298 Ga. App. 84, 679 S.E.2d 109, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 568 (2009).

Standard of assistance on appeal.

— Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance in direct appeal of defendant's case. Claims that counsel could have written more effectively, cited additional cases, and presented issues in a more articulate manner failed to demonstrate that counsel's assistance fell below the standard of reasonably effective assistance; a court does not grade counsel's performance when assessing an ineffective assistance claim. Hammond v. State, 264 Ga. 879, 452 S.E.2d 745, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 23, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 829, 116 S. Ct. 100, 133 L. Ed. 2d 54, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 5611 (1995).

Claim for ineffective assistance of appellate counsel failed. — Defendant failed to establish a reasonable probability of a different outcome had the defendant's absence from the juror colloquy been prevented or corrected, and the defendant's claim for ineffective assistance of appellate counsel failed. Griffin v. Terry, 291 Ga. 326, 729 S.E.2d 334, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 640, cert. denied, 568 U.S. 1051, 133 S. Ct. 765, 184 L. Ed. 2d 506, 2012 U.S. LEXIS 9329 (2012).

Failure to fully inform client of appellate rights. — Representation is inadequate and the right of appeal is denied where appointed counsel fails to fully inform the client of the client's appellate rights. Gregory v. United States, 446 F.2d 498, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 8977 (5th Cir. 1971); Thornton v. Ault, 233 Ga. 172, 210 S.E.2d 683, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 712 (1974).

An indigent accused is denied effective assistance of counsel at a critical stage of the criminal process when the court-appointed attorney fails to advise the accused of the right to appeal, the procedure and time limits involved, and of the accused's right to appointed counsel on appeal. Lumpkin v. Smith, 439 F.2d 1084,

1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 11311 (5th Cir. 1971).

Defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel was violated because a trial court failed to advise the defendant of the dangers associated with proceeding without counsel on appeal prior to accepting defendant's waiver of the right to counsel for a direct appeal of the defendant's convictions. Merriweather v. Chatman, 285 Ga. 765, 684 S.E.2d 237, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 625 (2009).

Abandonment of appeal by counsel without notice or consent. — Counsel's abandonment of a criminal appeal, without notice and without the defendant's consent, deprives the defendant of the right to counsel and the right to appeal. Chapman v. United States, 469 F.2d 634, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6938 (5th Cir. 1972).

Abandonment of appeal by appointed counsel without consent. — The right to appeal is violated if the appointed lawyer deliberately foregoes the direct appeal without first obtaining the client's consent. Gregory v. United States, 446 F.2d 498, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 8977 (5th Cir. 1971); Thornton v. Ault, 233 Ga. 172, 210 S.E.2d 683, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 712 (1974).

Abandonment of appeal by retained counsel without notice. — Petitioner is denied the constitutionally protected right of counsel when the petitioner's retained trial counsel abandons the petitioner's requested appeal without notice. Williams v. Hopper, 243 Ga. 475, 254 S.E.2d 854, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 946 (1979).

Failure of privately-retained counsel to perfect an appeal, when requested to do so, amounts to such a dereliction of duty as to deprive the defendant of both the effective aid of counsel at a critical stage of the proceedings and the right to appeal. Chapman v. United States, 469 F.2d 634, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6938 (5th Cir. 1972).

Defendant may not complain of effectiveness of retained counsel. — If the defendant has privately retained counsel, counsel's tactics and abilities are attributed to the defendant, and the defendant cannot therefore complain of the ineffectiveness of counsel. Allen v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 642, 217 S.E.2d 156, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1213 (1975).

Proof of denial of appellate counsel where defendant retained counsel at trial. — If the defendant is represented by retained counsel at the trial there are two prerequisites in showing denial of counsel for purposes of appeal: (1) it must be known to the court that the criminal defendant is indigent, and (2) it must be known to the court that the defendant wishes to appeal. Goforth v. Dutton, 409 F.2d 651, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 13068 (5th Cir. 1969).

Failure of counsel to seek appeal despite belief that grounds exist. — If trial counsel, although believing that there are meritorious grounds for an appeal, deliberately fails to move for a new trial or to file a notice of appeal and also fails to advise the client of the grounds and of the time limits on taking an appeal, counsel is ineffective to the extent that U.S. Const., amend. 6's standards are not met. Worts v. Dutton, 395 F.2d 341, 1968 U.S. App. LEXIS 6657 (5th Cir. 1968).

Dismissal of an appeal because of counsel's failure to timely file an appeal is a violation of due process because the defendant is thereby deprived of the effective assistance of counsel. Campbell v. State, 178 Ga. App. 814, 344 S.E.2d 745, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2573 (1986).

Counsel not necessary on appeal of probation-revocation order concerning evidentiary question. — If the only question on appeal of a probation-revocation order is an evidentiary one, or one that addresses itself to the discretion of the probation authorities, appointment of counsel will not be necessary. Chamlee v. State, 251 Ga. 519, 307 S.E.2d 501, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 890 (1983).

Free transcript for collateral attack on sentence. — While there is a basic right to a free transcript to perfect a timely direct appeal, there is no absolute right to a free transcript just so the prisoner may have it, and some justification for use in a habeas corpus or related proceeding must be shown in order to be entitled to such records in a collateral attack on the sentence. Garrett v. State,

159 Ga. App. 27, 282 S.E.2d 683, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2468 (1981).

Effective assistance of counsel at trial and on first appeal. — The State of Georgia recognizes the right to effective assistance of counsel at trial and on first appeal as of right and has provided for ameliorative relief in the form of an out-of-time appeal. An appellant who is denied effective assistance of counsel in attempting to appeal a conviction shall be allowed, if the appellant so desires, to file an out of time appeal to the proper appellate court. Brantley v. State, 190 Ga. App. 642, 379 S.E.2d 627, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 370 (1989).

Hearing required on motion for substitute counsel. — When the issue of the effectiveness of appointed counsel is raised in motions for substitute counsel and for a new trial, the trial court, in order to insure that the defendant's Sixth Amendment right has been and will continue to be afforded, should conduct a hearing as to the basis of the defendant's motion for appointment of new counsel. Thus, the trial court's failure to conduct a hearing on the defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel was error. DeLoach v. State, 198 Ga. App. 880, 403 S.E.2d 866, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 329 (1991).

Effectiveness of appellate counsel.

— Trial court erred in denying petitioner's application for habeas corpus relief, as petitioner's appellate counsel was ineffective for failing to contend on appeal that the state failed to establish the chain of custody of the substance identified at trial as cocaine, as any competent attorney would have raised that issue on appeal, the appellate attorney provided deficient representation in failing to do so, and the error was prejudicial to the petitioner because the error, if raised, would have led to a different outcome on appeal. Phillips v. Williams, 276 Ga. 691, 583 S.E.2d 4, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 551 (2003).

Strategic differences between trial and appellate counsel. — With regard to a defendant's convictions for malice murder and other crimes, the defendant failed to demonstrate that trial counsel's decision to forego an insanity or delusional compulsion defense, instead of pursuing the same as prior trial counsel had intended, was unreasonable as the evidence showed that defendant and trial counsel collectively agreed that the success of raising such a defense was highly unlikely. Further, the fact that trial counsel would have pursued a different strategy than the defendant's prior counsel did not render trial counsel's strategy unreasonable. Martinez v. State, 284 Ga. 138, 663 S.E.2d 675, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 563 (2008).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Compensation for representation at commitment hearing. — Where accused is not indicted by grand jury, court-appointed counsel representing the accused at a commitment hearing is not entitled to payment by the county for legal services. 1962 Ga. Op. Att'y Gen. 120.

ADVISORY OPINIONS OF THE STATE BAR

Representation of codefendants by public defenders. — Lawyers employed in the circuit public defender office in the same judicial circuit may not represent codefendants when a single lawyer would have an impermissible conflict of interest in doing so. However, it is only when it is decided that a public defender has an impermissible conflict in representing multiple defendants that the conflict is imputed to the other attorneys in that public defender's office. Thus, a per se rule of disqualification of a circuit public defender's office is not created prior to the determination that an impermissible conflict of interest exists. Adv. Op. No. 10-01 (April 15, 2013) approved by Sup. Ct. (July 11, 2013).

Amendment VII

[Right to Trial by Jury in Civil Cases]

In Suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury, shall be otherwise re-examined in any Court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law.

Cross references.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Scope and purpose generally. — U.S. Const., amend. 7 preserves the right which existed under the common law when the amendment was adopted. The phrase “common law” found in U.S. Const., amend. 7 is used in contradistinction to equity, admiralty, and maritime jurisprudence. Thus it has no application to cases where recovery of money damages is an incident to equitable relief even though damages might have been recovered in an action at law. It does not apply where the proceeding is not in the nature of a suit at common law. Wirtz v. Alapaha Yellow Pine Prods., Inc., 217 F. Supp. 465, 1963 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6953 (M.D. Ga. 1963).

U.S. Const., amend. 7 preserves to litigants the right to jury trial in suits at common law not merely suits, which the common law recognized among its old and settled proceedings, but suits in which legal rights were to be ascertained and determined, in contradistinction to those where equitable rights alone were recognized, and equitable remedies were administered. In a just sense, U.S. Const., amend. 7 then may well be construed to embrace all suits, which are not of equity and admiralty jurisdiction, whatever may be the peculiar form which they may assume to settle legal rights. Murphy v. American Motors Sales Corp., 410 F. Supp. 1403, 1976 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15676 (N.D. Ga. 1976), aff’d in part and rev’d in part, 570 F.2d 1226, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 11864 (5th Cir. 1978).

By “common law,” the framers of U.S. Const., amend. 7 meant not merely suits, which the common law recognized among its old and settled proceedings, but suits in which legal rights were to be ascertained and determined, in contradistinction to those where equitable rights alone were recognized, and equitable remedies were administered. FDIC v. New London Enters., Ltd., 619 F.2d 1099, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 16300 (5th Cir. 1980).

U.S. Const., amend. 7 was declaratory of the existing law, for it required only that jury trial in suits at common law was to be “preserved.” It thus did not purport to require a jury trial where none was required before. Atlas Roofing Co. v. Occupational Safety & Health Review

Comm'n, 430 U.S. 442, 97 S. Ct. 1261, 51 L. Ed. 2d 464, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 65 (1977), superseded by statute as stated in, In re United Mo. Bank, N.A., 901 F.2d 1449, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 6290 (8th Cir. 1990).

The phrase "suits at common law" has been construed to refer to cases tried prior to the adoption of U.S. Const., amend. 7 in courts of law in which jury trial was customary, as distinguished from courts of equity or admiralty, in which jury trial was not. Atlas Roofing Co. v. Occupational Safety & Health Review Comm'n, 430 U.S. 442, 97 S. Ct. 1261, 51 L. Ed. 2d 464, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 65 (1977), superseded by statute as stated in, In re United Mo. Bank, N.A., 901 F.2d 1449, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 6290 (8th Cir. 1990).

Right extends beyond common-law actions recognized at time of adoption. — Although the thrust of U.S. Const., amend. 7 was to preserve the right to jury trial as it existed in 1791, it has long been settled that the right extends beyond the common-law forms of action recognized at that time. FDIC v. New London Enters., Ltd., 619 F.2d 1099, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 16300 (5th Cir. 1980).

This right extends beyond common-law causes of action that existed at the time of the amendment's adoption. Sibley v. Fulton DeKalb Collection Serv., 677 F.2d 830, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18704 (11th Cir. 1982).

U.S. Const., amend. 7 requires trial by jury in actions unheard of at common law, provided that the action involves rights and remedies of the sort traditionally enforced in an action at law, rather than in an action in equity or admiralty. Sibley v. Fulton DeKalb Collection Serv., 677 F.2d 830, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18704 (11th Cir. 1982).

Right to jury trial only when issues of material fact in dispute. — The right to a jury trial is not infringed where the jury would have no role because there are no issues of material fact in dispute. CM3, Inc. v. Associated Realty Investors/Prado, 201 Ga. App. 428, 411 S.E.2d 320, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1439 (1991).

Jury trial is allowed and guaranteed only for the resolution of legal claims. Schofield v. Stetson, 459 F. Supp.

998, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14301 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

If a case involves only equitable issues, trial by jury is not guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 7. Duncan v. First Nat'l Bank, 597 F.2d 51, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 14018 (5th Cir. 1979).

Where the whole case is equitable in nature there is no constitutional or statutory right to a jury trial. Twentieth Century Music Corp. v. Frith, 645 F.2d 6, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 13276 (5th Cir. 1981).

Jury trial dependent on whether issue is legal or equitable. — Whether a party is entitled to a jury trial depends on whether the issue before the court is legal or equitable. Stamps v. Sexton Bros. Tire Co. (In re Major Tire Co.), 64 B.R. 305, 1986 Bankr. LEXIS 5477 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1986).

Where legal claims are joined with equitable claims, the right to a jury trial on the legal claims, including all issues common to both claims, remains intact. The right cannot be abridged by characterizing the legal relief sought as being incidental to the equitable claim. Murphy v. American Motors Sales Corp., 410 F. Supp. 1403, 1976 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15676 (N.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 570 F.2d 1226, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 11864 (5th Cir. 1978).

Jury trial if legal issues. — Where both legal and equitable issues are presented in a case, even when the legal issues are incidental to the equitable issues, the legal issues must be presented to a jury. Culpepper v. Reynolds Metals Co., 296 F. Supp. 1232, 1968 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12605 (N.D. Ga. 1968), rev'd, 421 F.2d 888, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 11301 (5th Cir. 1970).

When legal and equitable actions are tried together, the right to a jury in the legal action encompasses the issues common to both. Lincoln v. Board of Regents, 697 F.2d 928, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 30644 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 826, 104 S. Ct. 97, 78 L. Ed. 2d 102, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 1180 (1983).

It makes no difference if the equitable cause clearly outweighs the legal cause so that the basic issue of the case taken as a whole is equitable; as long as any legal cause is involved the jury rights it creates control. United States v. McMahan, 569 F.2d 889, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 12112 (5th Cir. 1978); Duncan v. First Nat'l Bank, 597 F.2d 51, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 14018 (5th Cir. 1979).

Loss of right to jury trial through prior determination of equitable claims. — Where both legal and equitable issues are presented in a single case, only under the most imperative circumstances can the right to a jury trial of legal issues be lost through prior determination of equitable claims. This applies whether the trial judge chooses to characterize the legal issues presented as incidental to equitable issues or not. United States v. McMahan, 569 F.2d 889, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 12112 (5th Cir. 1978).

Right applies to federal courts. — The right of trial by jury, under U.S. Const., amend. 7, applies to federal courts. Porter v. Watkins, 217 Ga. 73, 121 S.E.2d 120, 1961 Ga. LEXIS 380 (1961).

Right does not apply to suits in state courts. Butler v. Claxton, 221 Ga. 620, 146 S.E.2d 763, 1966 Ga. LEXIS 649 (1966); Smith v. Milliken & Co., 189 Ga. App. 897, 377 S.E.2d 916, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 54 (1989).

Trial court's entry of summary judgment against a life estate claimant in an action against a former daughter-in-law did not violate seventh amendment rights, as that federal constitutional amendment did not apply to suits in state court; moreover, the claimant's rights were not infringed because summary judgment was granted due to the finding that there were no issues of material fact in dispute. Crane v. Poteat, 275 Ga. App. 669, 621 S.E.2d 501, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1000 (2005), cert. denied, No. S06C0260, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 180 (Ga. Feb. 27, 2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 830, 127 S. Ct. 52, 166 L. Ed. 2d 51, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 5965 (2006).

Trial court's dismissal of a driver's negligence lawsuit filed against an insured's insurer did not deprive the driver of any seventh amendment right to a jury trial or right of access to the courts under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XII, given that the seventh amendment did not apply to suits in state courts and Ga.

Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XII dealt with a litigant's choice of either self-representation or representation by counsel, not access to the courts. Crane v. Lazaro, 281 Ga. App. 127, 635 S.E.2d 319, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 946 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0006, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 907 (Ga. Oct. 30, 2006), cert. dismissed, 549 U.S. 1200, 127 S. Ct. 1278, 167 L. Ed. 2d 69, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 1335 (2007).

Effect of Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. — The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure have not abrogated the common-law right to jury consideration of legal issues, such as title to land in trespass and ejectment actions, after timely demand. United States v. Williams, 441 F.2d 637, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 10941 (5th Cir. 1971).

Request for attorney fees. — The mere inclusion of a request for attorney's fees, where the plaintiff's other claims are exclusively equitable in nature, does not entitle the defendant to a jury trial pursuant to the seventh amendment. Wheless v. Gelzer, 765 F. Supp. 741, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7450 (N.D. Ga. 1991).

Right to revoke the waiver of the right to a jury trial is subject only to proof of special circumstances showing that its exercise would substantially delay or impede the cause of justice. Brumbalow v. State, 128 Ga. App. 581, 197 S.E.2d 380, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1551 (1973).

Parties may waive unanimity requirements in civil cases. — If the parties to a civil case may validly agree to have their rights determined without any jury or with a jury of 11 or less members, it follows that they may with equal validity consent to accept a verdict arrived at by a specified number of jurors, even that of a bare majority. A party may waive constitutional rights designed for that party's benefit and the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure authorize civil litigants to stipulate for majority verdicts. Phillips v. Meadow Garden Hosp., 139 Ga. App. 541, 228 S.E.2d 714, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1879 (1976).

Parties may not be deprived of unanimity requirement by statute. — In federal courts, civil litigants cannot be deprived by statute of their right under U.S. Const., amend. 7 to a unanimous verdict. Phillips v. Meadow Garden Hosp., 139 Ga. App. 541, 228 S.E.2d 714, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1879 (1976).

U.S. Const., amend. 7 requires that the jury be allowed to make reasonable inferences from facts proven in evidence having a reasonable tendency to sustain them. Lashley v. Ford Motor Co., 359 F. Supp. 363, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12178 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 480 F.2d 158, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9695 (5th Cir. 1973).

U.S. Const., amend. 7 permits expert opinion to have the force of fact when based on facts which sustain it. Lashley v. Ford Motor Co., 359 F. Supp. 363, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12178 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 480 F.2d 158, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9695 (5th Cir. 1973).

U.S. Const., amend. 7 does not require that inferences be made from withheld facts. — U.S. Const., amend. 7 does not require that experts or the jury be permitted to make inferences from the withholding of crucial facts, favorable in their effects to the party who has the evidence of them in the party's peculiar knowledge and possession, but elects to keep it so. Lashley v. Ford Motor Co., 359 F. Supp. 363, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12178 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 480 F.2d 158, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9695 (5th Cir. 1973).

Summary judgment is authorized where there are no issues of material fact in dispute. In such circumstances the jury, as trier of fact, has no role, and appellant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 7 are not infringed. Barrett v. Independent Order of Foresters, 625 F.2d 73, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 14446 (5th Cir. 1980).

When a buyer claiming the buyer was fraudulently sold real estate argued, on appeal, that the trial court's summary dismissal of the buyer's complaint under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-12(b)(6) and 9-11-56 deprived the buyer of the right to a jury trial, this claim had no merit because, when the opposing parties filed an affidavit with their motion for summary judgment claiming that the misrepresentation alleged in the buyer's complaint did not occur, and the buyer did not respond to that motion, the evidence in the record was undisputed that the misrepresentation, which was the crux of the buyer's claims, did not happen, so there was no fact-finding role for a jury to perform and therefore no infringement on the buyer's seventh amendment rights. Crane v. Samples, 267 Ga. App. 895, 600 S.E.2d 624, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 680 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1719, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 781 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1719, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 789 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2004).

Remittitur as condition precedent to denial of new trial. — Where a definite and readily ascertainable portion of a verdict should not have been awarded to the plaintiff, a court, as a matter of law, can condition the denial of a new trial on a remittitur of that portion of the judgment by the plaintiff. Such a remittitur does not infringe upon U.S. Const., amend. 7's guaranty of trial by a jury. Woodbury v. Whitmire, 246 Ga. 349, 271 S.E.2d 491, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1103 (1980).

Conditioning the grant of defendant's motion for a new trial on the plaintiff's refusal to remit portion of the jury award that the court determined was excessive did not violate plaintiff's constitutional right to a jury trial. Lisle v. Willis, 265 Ga. 861, 463 S.E.2d 108, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 863 (1995).

Matters assigned to administrative agencies. — When Congress creates new statutory "public rights," it may assign their adjudication to an administrative agency with which a jury trial would be incompatible, without violating U.S. Const., amend. 7's injunction that jury trial is to be preserved in suits at common law. Atlas Roofing Co. v. Occupational Safety & Health Review Comm'n, 430 U.S. 442, 97 S. Ct. 1261, 51 L. Ed. 2d 464, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 65 (1977), superseded by statute as stated in, In re United Mo. Bank, N.A., 901 F.2d 1449, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 6290 (8th Cir. 1990).

Jury trials are incompatible with the whole concept of administrative adjudication and would substantially interfere with an agency's role in the statutory scheme. Atlas Roofing Co. v. Occupational Safety & Health Review Comm'n, 518 F.2d 990, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12830 (5th Cir. 1975), aff'd, 430 U.S. 442, 97 S. Ct. 1261, 51 L. Ed. 2d 464, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 65 (1977).

Failure to meet rule-required prerequisites to trial. — No constitutional right to a trial exists when, after notice and a reasonable opportunity, a party fails to make the rule-required demonstration that some dispute of material fact exists which a trial could resolve. Oglesby v. Terminal Transp. Co., 543 F.2d 1111, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 5855 (5th Cir. 1976).

Where a legislature creates an action unheard of at common law, U.S. Const., amend. 7 requires a trial by jury if that action involves rights and remedies of the sort traditionally enforced in an action at law. FDIC v. New London Enters., Ltd., 619 F.2d 1099, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 16300 (5th Cir. 1980).

Statutory actions which create a right to recover damages have been held to be actions enforcing legal rights. FDIC v. New London Enters., Ltd., 619 F.2d 1099, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 16300 (5th Cir. 1980).

Statutorily conferred legal rights and remedies. — A jury trial is required by U.S. Const., amend. 7 when a statute confers rights and remedies of a legal nature as opposed to an equitable nature. Schofield v. Stetson, 459 F. Supp. 998, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14301 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Injunctive relief. — No constitutional right to a jury trial exists in equity actions for injunctive relief. United States v. Northside Realty Assocs., 324 F. Supp. 287, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14345 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

State drug forfeiture proceedings. — U.S. Const., amend. 7 guarantees a jury trial in federal drug forfeiture actions and is inapplicable to similar actions conducted at the state level pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49. Swails v. State, 263 Ga. 276, 431 S.E.2d 101, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 489, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1011, 114 S. Ct. 602, 126 L. Ed. 2d 567, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 7657 (1993).

Violation of municipal ordinance. — The constitutional guarantee of a right to a trial by a jury does not extend to one charged in a municipal court with violation of a municipal ordinance. Key v. Stewart, 228 Ga. 516, 186 S.E.2d 739, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 822 (1972).

Constitutional guarantee of trial by jury does not extend to eminent do- main proceedings. Sweat v. Georgia Power Co., 235 Ga. 281, 219 S.E.2d 384, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 855 (1975).

Condemnation suit brought under Code 1933, § 36-301 et seq. (see O.C.G.A. § 22-1-1 et seq.) is not a suit at common law within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 7 and, therefore, a common-law jury trial in such a case is not guaranteed by it. United States v. Kennesaw Mt. Battlefield Ass'n, 99 F.2d 830, 1938 U.S. App. LEXIS 3006 (5th Cir. 1938), cert. denied, 306 U.S. 646, 59 S. Ct. 587, 83 L. Ed. 1045, 1939 U.S. LEXIS 779 (1939).

Stockholder's derivative suits. — The right under U.S. Const., amend. 7 to trial by jury extends to a stockholder's derivative suit with respect to those issues as to which the corporation, had it been suing in its own right, would have been entitled to a jury trial. United States v. Northside Realty Assocs., 324 F. Supp. 287, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14345 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Stockholder's refusal to accept tender offer. — Federal district court's determination that a dissenting shareholder's refusal to accept a stock tender offer was "arbitrary, vexatious, or otherwise not in good faith" did not violate the shareholder's seventh amendment right to have a jury decide whether the shareholder had acted arbitrarily. Columbus Mills, Inc. v. Freeland, 918 F.2d 1575, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 21558 (11th Cir. 1990).

Obscenity cases. — A judge may act as a finder of fact in civil proceedings involving obscenity. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 454 F. Supp. 289, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16732 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

Former Code 1933, § 92-7301 (see O.C.G.A. § 48-3-1) is not violative of Ga. Const. 1877, Art. VI, Sec. XVIII, Para. I (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI), or of U.S. Const., amend. 7. Hicks v. Stewart Oil Co., 182 Ga. 654, 186 S.E. 802, 1936 Ga. LEXIS 531 (1936).

Claim for back wages in an action is one for breach of an employment contract, and as such is clearly within the jury trial guarantee of U.S. Const., amend. 7. Johnson v. Georgia Hwy. Express, Inc., 47 F.R.D. 327, 1968 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8724 (N.D. Ga. 1968), rev'd, 417 F.2d 1122, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 10240 (5th Cir. 1969).

Denial of jury trial on back pay issue under 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(g). — In a case under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5(g)), comes into where the gravamen of the complaint is injunctive and declaratory relief against racial discrimination in employment, and back pay is one of the modes of relief that a court can grant, denial of defendant's demand for a jury trial on the issue of back pay does not contravene the Constitution. Hayes v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 46 F.R.D. 49, 1968 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8718 (S.D. Ga. 1968).

Avoidance of lien on exempt property is equitable in nature. — As an equitable action, the proceeding is not a suit at common law in which legal, as opposed to equitable, rights are to be determined. Neither the seventh amendment of the United States Constitution nor the Bankruptcy Code provide support for a creditor's demand for a jury trial in such a case. Caruthers v. Fleet Fin., Inc., 87 B.R. 723, 1988 Bankr. LEXIS 825 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1988).

Interrogatory answers to be interpreted so as to eliminate inconsistency. — U.S. Const., amend. 7 requires a court to interpret a jury's answers to special interrogatories, if at all possible, so that there is no inconsistency. In doing so, the court must consider all the circumstances, especially the issues submitted to the jury, the instructions to the jury, and any expressions of the jury extrinsic to their answers to the interrogatories. Popham v. City of Kennesaw, 820 F.2d 1570, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 9542 (11th Cir. 1987).

Standard for review of federal court's denial or grant of new trial. — The general rule is that a federal district court's denial or grant of a new trial is within its discretion and is ordinarily non-reviewable save for an abuse of that discretion or misapprehension of the law. To protect a litigant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 7 and to prevent improper intrusion on the jury's function, a somewhat broader review applies to an order granting a new trial as opposed to an order denying such a motion, and the greatest degree of scrutiny is exercised when a new trial is granted on the ground that the verdict is against the weight of the evidence. Evers v. Equifax, Inc., 650 F.2d 793, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 11302 (5th Cir. 1981).

Implied waiver of jury trial. — The right to a jury trial is impliedly waived by participating in a bench trial and by failing to protest or object to a bench trial. Goss v. Bayer, 184 Ga. App. 730, 362 S.E.2d 768, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2367 (1987).

Issuance of writ of possession. — A debtor's constitutionally guaranteed right to a jury trial was not infringed when the trial court issued a writ of possession without the benefit of a jury, where there were no issues of material fact in dispute. Bledsoe v. Central Ga. Prod. Credit Ass'n, 180 Ga. App. 598, 349 S.E.2d 821, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2206 (1986).

Violation of county zoning ordinance. — An indictment charging violation of a county zoning ordinance is a charge of a violation of state law for failure to comply with the local zoning ordinances and, where such violation is a misdemeanor under state law, the defendant is entitled to trial by jury. Clark v. State, 157 Ga. App. 486, 277 S.E.2d 738, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1876 (1981).

Back pay under Civil Rights Act. — An action for reinstatement and back pay under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 is by nature equitable and entails no rights under U.S. Const., amend. 7. Lincoln v. Board of Regents, 697 F.2d 928, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 30644 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 826, 104 S. Ct. 97, 78 L. Ed. 2d 102, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 1180 (1983).

Bankruptcy proceedings. — Defendant had no seventh amendment right to a jury trial in a bankruptcy proceeding, where all claims presented by plaintiff-trustee were of an equitable nature. Stamps v. Sexton Bros. Tire Co. (In re Major Tire Co.), 64 B.R. 305, 1986 Bankr. LEXIS 5477 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1986).

Presiding over a jury trial in a core proceeding by a bankruptcy court would not violate the seventh amendment. Ellenberg v. Bouldin, 125 B.R. 851, 1990 Bankr. LEXIS 60 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1990).

The seventh amendment would be violated where a district court reviews de novo the verdict of a jury trial conducted by a bankruptcy court in a noncore proceeding. Ellenberg v. Bouldin, 125 B.R. 851, 1990 Bankr. LEXIS 60 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1990).

Debtor waived its seventh amendment right to a jury trial by bringing a noncore adversary proceeding in the bankruptcy court. Haile Co. v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 132 B.R. 979, 1991 Bankr. LEXIS 1528 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1991).

The seventh amendment applied to a case where the remedy sought and most of the claims sounded in law, as opposed to equity. Hays v. Equitex, Inc., 260 B.R. 915, 2001 Bankr. LEXIS 336 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2001).

Trustee did not waive seventh amendment right to a jury trial where three of the four claims at issue were legal claims, they were only incidentally related to the bankruptcy case, they did not have anything to do with the claims process and/or the restructuring of the debtor-creditor relationship, and they were asserted against non-creditor third parties only to generate funds for distribution to creditors. Hays v. Equitex, Inc., 260 B.R. 915, 2001 Bankr. LEXIS 336 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2001).

Fraudulent conveyance by bankruptcy debtors. — U.S. Const., amend. 7 did not grant bankruptcy debtors the right to a trial by jury in a suit by the trustee-in-bankruptcy against the debtors seeking to avoid an allegedly fraudulent conveyance of property. Pettigrew v. Graham, 747 F.2d 1383, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16229 (11th Cir. 1984).

Claims under Postal Reorganization Act. — There is no right for Postal Reorganization Act claims against the postal service to be tried by a jury. Griffin v. United States Postal Serv., 635 F. Supp.

190, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25991 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Actions against federal government. — The seventh amendment right to trial by jury does not apply in actions against the federal government because of the doctrine of sovereign immunity. Griffin v. United States Postal Serv., 635 F. Supp. 190, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 25991 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Constitutional limit on punitive damage award. — Upon determination of the constitutional limit on a particular award, the district court may strike the unconstitutional excess from a jury's punitive damage award and enter judgment for that amount. Johansen v. Combustion Eng'g., Inc., 170 F.3d 1320, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 5935 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 931, 120 S. Ct. 329, 145 L. Ed. 2d 256, 1999 U.S. LEXIS 6617 (1999).

Excessive jury award. — A federal court has no general authority to reduce the amount of a jury's verdict; however, when a court finds that a jury's award of damages is excessive, it may grant the defendant a new trial. Johansen v. Combustion Eng'g., Inc., 170 F.3d 1320, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 5935 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 931, 120 S. Ct. 329, 145 L. Ed. 2d 256, 1999 U.S. LEXIS 6617 (1999).

Because a jury's award of punitive damages does not constitute a finding of fact, appellate review of a trial court's determination that an award is consistent with due process does not implicate U.S. Const., amend. 7 concerns. Kent v. A.O. White, Jr., Consulting Eng'rs, P.C., 253 Ga. App. 492, 559 S.E.2d 731, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 111, overruled in part, Time Warner Entm't Co. v. Six Flags Over Ga., L.L.C., 254 Ga. App. 598, 563 S.E.2d 178, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 430 (2002).

Cruel and unusual punishment, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXI and §§ 38-2-1055, 42-4-5, 42-5-58.

Bail for juveniles, § 15-11-507.

Excessive bail, §§ 17-6-1 et seq., 17-13-36.

Death penalty, § 17-10-30 et seq.

No cruel and unusual punishment in court-martial, § 38-2-1055.

Editor's notes.

The United States Supreme Court has declared that the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, protects a person from cruel and unusual punishment inflicted by state, as well as federal, agencies. See Robinson v. California, 370 U.S. 660, 82 S. Ct. 1417, 8 L. Ed. 2d 758 (1962). The Supreme Court has not had occasion to decide if the prohibition against excessive bail is similarly applicable to state proceedings, but the court has intimated that it is. See Schilb v. Kuebel, 404 U.S. 357, 92 S. Ct. 479, 30 L. Ed. 2d 502 (1972). At least one federal court, however, has held that U.S. Const., amend. 8 and the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, does prohibit excessive bail in state proceedings. See Pilkington v. Circuit Court, 324 F.2d 45 (8th Cir. 1963).

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
EXCESSIVE BAIL
FINES AND PUNISHMENTS
CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

General Consideration

Eighth Amendment applies only after a prisoner is convicted. — United States v. Myers, 972 F.2d 1566, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 23302 (11th Cir. 1992), cert.

denied, 507 U.S. 1017, 113 S. Ct. 1813, 123 L. Ed. 2d 445, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 2581 (1993).

Defendant’s sentence for crimes the juvenile committed as a juvenile, which amounted to eight consecutive life sentences plus 60 years, was upheld on appeal because the United States Supreme Court had not expanded its mandate that the Eighth Amendment's prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment as the Amendment applies to juvenile offenders requires a sentencer to consider a juvenile's youth and youth's attendant characteristics before imposing a sentence other than life without parole. Veal v. State, 303 Ga. 18, 810 S.E.2d 127, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 78, cert. denied, 586 U.S. 917, 139 S. Ct. 320, 202 L. Ed. 2d 218, 2018 U.S. LEXIS 5986 (2018).

Eighth amendment protection excludes claim under due process. — Since the Eighth Amendment provides explicit protection to prisoners against cruel and unusual punishment, a prisoner could not bring a separate civil rights claim for the same behavior based on substantive due process under the fourteenth amendment. Lee v. Sikes, 870 F. Supp. 1096, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17906 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Because arrestee had not suffered a federal Eighth Amendment violation, the arrestee also had not suffered a violation under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII. — Arrestee's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suit against a county sheriff, alleging that the arrestee was raped by a deputy at the county jail, failed as a matter of law because § 1983 relief did not extend to inadequate hiring practices, and the arrestee failed to raise a fact question as to the constitutional failure to protect, staff, and train claims against the sheriff individually; because the arrestee had not suffered a federal Eighth Amendment violation, the arrestee also had not suffered a violation under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII. Boyd v. Nichols, 616 F. Supp. 2d 1331, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37750 (M.D. Ga. 2009).

Waiver of fourth amendment rights constitutional. — Waiver by defendant, while free on bond for drug offenses, of rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII as a bond condition, was constitutional under U.S. Const., amend. 8 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII; it was a reasonable exercise of the trial court's function of balancing the rights of the accused with public safety interests. Rocco v. State, 267 Ga. App. 900, 601 S.E.2d 189, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 841 (2004).

Evidence as to parole. — Fact that defendant was an habitual violator and thus upon conviction would have to serve 20 years without parole did not relate to defendant's character, his prior record, or circumstances of his offense; thus policy forbidding argument regarding one's ability or inability to make parole did not run afoul of either U.S. Const., amend. 8 or 14 and trial court did not err in refusing to allow such argument. Horton v. State, 249 Ga. 871, 295 S.E.2d 281, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1185 (1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1188, 103 S. Ct. 837, 74 L. Ed. 2d 1030, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 3285 (1983).

Death penalty for codefendant not proven to have directly committed murderous act. — Because the defendant was not only present but active and participating throughout commission of kidnapping, rape, murder, and aggravated assault of which the defendant was convicted, imposition of death penalty was not excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases even though it was not established whether the defendant or the codefendant fired the gunshots that killed the victim. Johnson v. Zant, 249 Ga. 812, 295 S.E.2d 63, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1205 (1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1228, 103 S. Ct. 1236, 75 L. Ed. 2d 469 (1983).

Dismissal of police department employees when their urine tested positive for marijuana did not in any manner involve cruel and unusual punishment within the meaning of the Eighth Amendment. Bostic v. McClendon, 650 F. Supp. 245, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23012 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Discretion to impose death penalty circumscribed by secular law. — The use by deliberating jurors of an extrajudicial code (not already embodied in their own characters) cannot be reconciled with the Eighth Amendment's requirement that any decision to impose death must be the result of discretion which is carefully and narrowly channelled and circum-scribed by the secular law of the jurisdiction. Jones v. Kemp, 706 F. Supp. 1534, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1682 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

It was constitutional error for the court to permit the Christian Bible to go into the jury room at the request of the jurors apparently for consultation in connection with their deliberations after a murder trial. Jones v. Kemp, 706 F. Supp. 1534, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1682 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Admissibility at trial of defendant's testimony at bail hearing. — Absent objections grounded on the fifth amendment at the bail hearing, the decision of defense counsel to bring the extraneous issue of guilt or innocence into the bail proceeding did not preclude, on fifth amendment grounds, the use at trial of incriminating testimony given at such hearing. Cowards v. State, 266 Ga. 191, 465 S.E.2d 677, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 45 (1996).

Punitive damages. — In an action against a truck manufacturer, a punitive damages award of $2 million was not so excessive as to violate the due process clauses of the Georgia and United States Constitutions, the Eighth Amendment of the United States Constitution, and the excessive fines clause of the Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII. Mack Trucks, Inc. v. Conkle, 263 Ga. 539, 436 S.E.2d 635, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 800 (1993).

Federal abstention. — The Court of Appeals abstained from exercising its equitable jurisdiction to hear a class action claim that Georgia's indigent defense system was inherently incapable of providing constitutionally adequate services and that the system therefore violated the sixth, eighth, and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. Luckey v. Miller, 976 F.2d 673, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 28489 (11th Cir. 1992).

Civil forfeiture. — Excessive fines analysis should center upon whether the confiscated property has a close enough relationship to the offense. United States v. One 1990 Ford Ranger Truck, 888 F. Supp. 1170, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7543 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Because the forfeited currency was used in the purchase of cocaine, the forfeiture did not violate the excessive fines clause. Lundy v. State, 226 Ga. App. 197, 482 S.E.2d 516, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 282 (1997).

Inapplicable to civil forfeiture cases. — See United States v. All Tract 686.64 Acres of Property, 820 F. Supp. 1433, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5995 (M.D. Ga. 1993).

Rape of arrestee. — Arrestee's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suit against a county sheriff, alleging that she was raped by a deputy at the county jail, failed as a matter of law because § 1983 relief did not extend to inadequate hiring practices, and she failed to raise a fact question as to the constitutional failure to protect, staff, and train claims against the sheriff individually; because she had not suffered a federal Eighth Amendment violation, she also had not suffered a violation under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII. Boyd v. Nichols, 616 F. Supp. 2d 1331, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 37750 (M.D. Ga. 2009).

Registration as sex offender not cruel and unusual punishment. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to strike an illegal sentence because the requirement that the defendant register as a sex offender did not violate the Eighth Amendment's proscription against the imposition of cruel and unusual punishment. Wiggins v. State, 288 Ga. 169, 702 S.E.2d 865, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 854 (2010), cert. denied, 563 U.S. 1011, 131 S. Ct. 2906, 179 L. Ed. 2d 1251, 2011 U.S. LEXIS 4005 (2011).

Discretionary life without parole sentence for minor permissible. — A life without parole sentence is permitted only in "exceptional circumstances," for the rare juvenile offender who exhibits such irretrievable depravity that rehabilitation is impossible; for those rarest of juvenile offenders whose crimes reflect permanent incorrigibility; for those rare children whose crimes reflect irreparable corruption — and not for the vast majority of juvenile offenders; life without parole sentences may be constitutionally imposed only on the worst-of-the-worst juvenile murderers, much like the Supreme Court has long directed that the death penalty may be imposed only on the worst-of-the-worst adult murderers. To the extent the decisions in Jones v. State, 296 Ga. 663 (2015) and Bun v. State, 296 Ga. 549 (2015) suggested otherwise, they are hereby disapproved. Veal v. State, 298 Ga. 691, 784 S.E.2d 403, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 243 (2016), overruled in part, Jones v. Mississippi, 593 U.S. 98, 141 S. Ct. 1307, 209 L. Ed. 2d 390, 2021 U.S. LEXIS 2110 (2021).

Requirements for imposing life without parole on minor. — Defendant's claim that the sentence of life without parole violated the Eighth Amendment failed because it did not require sentencing judges to say anything on the record regarding the characteristics of minors and nothing in the record showed that the trial court did not consider the relevant factors. Holmes v. State, 311 Ga. 698, 859 S.E.2d 475, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 296 (2021).

Explicit factual finding for life without parole for minor not required. — A sentencing court is not required to make an explicit factual finding of permanent incorrigibility or irreparable corruption before imposing a discretionary life without parole sentence on a minor. Sillah v. State, 315 Ga. 741, 883 S.E.2d 756, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 23 (2023).

Sentencing court is not required to explain its reasoning for imposing life without parole sentence on minor. — A trial court is not required to explain its reasoning for imposing a life without parole sentence on a minor. Garcia-Solis v. State, 320 Ga. 754, 911 S.E.2d 673, 2025 Ga. LEXIS 5 (2025).

Juvenile defendant not entitled to jury determination of life without possibility of parole. — Georgia defendant convicted of murder committed when the defendant was a juvenile did not have a federal constitutional right under the sixth amendment to have a jury make the determination required by the eighth amendment of whether the defendant was irreparably corrupt or permanently incorrigible before the defendant was sentenced to serve life without the possibility of parole. Raines v. State, 309 Ga. 258, 845 S.E.2d 613, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 473 (2020), cert. denied, 141 S. Ct. 2676, 210 L. Ed. 2d 836, 2021 U.S. LEXIS 2720 (2021).

Excessive Bail

Excessive bail provisions apply to misdemeanors. — The constitutional prohibitions against excessive bail set forth in U.S. Const., amend. 8 and Ga. Const. 1945, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. IX (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII) conviction. Jones v. Grimes, 219 Ga. 585, 134 S.E.2d 790, 1964 Ga. LEXIS 332 (1964).

When bail may be denied generally. — The command that excessive bail shall not be required at the very least obligates judges passing upon the right to bail to deny such relief only for the strongest of reasons. Sellers v. United States, 396 U.S. 9, 90 S. Ct. 27, 24 L. Ed. 2d 9, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 795 (1969).

A person convicted of an offense punishable by death has no constitutional right to bail pending appeal. Wilcox v. Carter, 545 F. Supp. 1043, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14473 (M.D. Ga. 1982).

Reasonably necessary bail constitutional. — Bail set at an amount higher than that which is reasonably necessary to insure a defendant's presence at trial is unconstitutionally "excessive," in violation of the Eighth Amendment as applied to the states through the fourteenth amendment; however, any requirement which is necessary to provide reasonable assurance of an accused's presence at trial is constitutionally permissible. Gresham v. Dell, 630 F. Supp. 1135, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27805 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Retention of appearance bond to pay fine violates Constitution. — The addition of any condition to an appearance bond to the effect that it shall be retained by the clerk to pay any fine that may subsequently be levied against the defendant after the criminal trial is over is for a purpose other than that for which bail is required to be given under the Eighth Amendment. Such provision is therefore "excessive" and is in violation of the Constitution. United States v. Rose, 791 F.2d 1477, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 26293 (11th Cir. 1986).

Defendant failed to prove that the defendant was injured by allegedly excessive bail for drug offenses, since the defendant made no showing that had the drug charges been dismissed, as they allegedly should have been, the defendant could have bond on the remaining non-drug charge. Lambert v. McFarland, 612 F. Supp. 1252, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22707 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

$100,000 bail in cocaine case held not excessive. — Setting bail in the total amount of $100,000 in a case involving two charges of selling crack cocaine was not excessive, because the trial judge was apprised of the defendant's lengthy residency in the community and the defendant's financial status, and weighed these factors against the serious nature and potential consequences of the charges. Mayfield v. State, 198 Ga. App. 252, 401 S.E.2d 297, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1586 (1990).

$250,000 bail in murder case held not excessive. — In a prosecution for murder, based upon the seriousness of the offense charged and the likelihood that defendant would not appear at trial, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in holding that bail of $250,000 originally set was not excessive. Mullinax v. State, 271 Ga. 112, 515 S.E.2d 839, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 434 (1999).

Bail in the amount of $750,000 was not excessive where defendant had prior felony convictions and the trial court's decision to increase bail at this habeas proceeding was based on other information not available at the first hearing. Pullin v. Dorsey, 271 Ga. 882, 525 S.E.2d 87, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 7 (2000).

Denial of bail not an abuse of discretion nor grounds for habeas petition. — Petitioner charged with 16 counts of violating the Georgia RICO Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-14-1, securities fraud, and theft, who owned no assets in the United States and had allegedly funneled significant assets to Belize, where the petitioner traveled frequently, was not entitled to bail as of right under O.C.G.A. § 17-6-1(a), Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII, or U.S. Const., amend. 8. The denial of bail was not an abuse of discretion, and petitioner was not entitled to a writ of habeas corpus. Constantino v. Warren, 285 Ga. 851, 684 S.E.2d 601, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 518 (2009).

Fines and Punishments

Prohibition applies to conviction for criminal offenses. — The prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment has relation to punishment imposed by sentences on conviction for criminal offenses. Hill v. State, 119 Ga. App. 612, 168 S.E.2d 327, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 1185 (1969).

The prescription against cruel and unusual punishment applies only after a criminal conviction. Gilmere v. City of Atlanta, 737 F.2d 894, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 18103 (11th Cir. 1984).

The Eighth Amendment protects convicted prisoners and does not apply to pretrial detainees. McDay ex rel. McDay v. City of Atlanta, 740 F. Supp. 852, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7619 (N.D. Ga. 1990), aff'd, 927 F.2d 614, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 2694 (11th Cir. 1991).

Life imprisonment for youth convicted of murder. — Defendant's total sentence of life without parole followed by life followed by 120 years did not violate the ban on cruel and unusual punishment because comparing the gravity of the defendant's offenses with the severity of the sentence did not even raise an inference of gross disproportionality given the number and severity of the offenses at issue, in particular the shooting of a victim. Sillah v. State, 315 Ga. 741, 883 S.E.2d 756, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 23 (2023).

Cruel and unusual punishment prohibition applicable to convicts only. — The prohibition against cruel and unusual punishments protects only those who have been convicted of a crime. Metz v. McKinley, 583 F. Supp. 683, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19160 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 747 F.2d 709, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 17517 (11th Cir. 1984).

Applicable to states through U.S. Const., amend. 14. — Cruel and unusual punishment clause is made applicable to the states through U.S. Const., amend. 14. United States v. Kaiser, 545 F.2d 467, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10529 (5th Cir. 1977).

Standards for determining constitutionality of punishment generally.

— When a form of punishment in the abstract rather than in the particular is under consideration, the inquiry into excessiveness has two aspects. First, the punishment must not involve the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain. Second, the punishment must not be grossly out of proportion to the severity of the crime. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 82 (1976).

U.S. Const., amend. 8 prohibits the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain, as well as gross disproportion between punishment and crime. Any punishment must demonstrably serve some valid penological justification in order to withstand constitutional scrutiny. United States v. Kaiser, 545 F.2d 467, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10529 (5th Cir. 1977).

A punishment is excessive and unconstitutional if it makes no measurable contribution to acceptable goals of punishment and hence is nothing more than the purposeless and needless imposition of pain and suffering, or is grossly out of proportion to the severity of the crime. Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 97 S. Ct. 2861, 53 L. Ed. 2d 982, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 146 (1977); Cox v. State, 241 Ga. 154, 244 S.E.2d 1, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 901 (1978).

U.S. Const., amend. 8 demands that punishment must not be disproportionate to the offense and that suffering cannot be gratuitously inflicted with no purpose. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Among the standards in the Fifth Circuit for finding a punishment violative of U.S. Const., amend. 8 are: whether the conditions of confinement shock the court's conscience; whether the sentence imposed is grossly disproportionate to the offense; or whether the sentence imposed offends evolving notions of decency. Cerrella v. Hanberry, 650 F.2d 606, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 11502 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1034, 102 S. Ct. 573, 70 L. Ed. 2d 478, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4425 (1981).

A sentence is disproportionate for Eighth Amendment purposes if the punishment is grossly disproportionate when compared with the nature of the crime. United States v. Elkins, 885 F.2d 775, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 15323 (11th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1005, 110 S. Ct. 1300, 108 L. Ed. 2d 477, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1069 (1990).

Defendant's five-year sentence for interfering with government property was not cruel and unusual punishment within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 8, as: (1) it was within the sentencing range specified by O.C.G.A. § 16-7-24(a); (2) it was not so disproportionate to the act as to shock the conscience; (3) the sentence was not retaliatory; and (4) there was no support for defendant's claim that, although convicted of a felony offense, defendant should have received a misdemeanor sentence because defendant committed the offense while in jail for a probation violation. Carter v. State, 267 Ga. App. 520, 600 S.E.2d 637, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 702 (2004).

Pre-deportation detention is not punishment because it is incidental to the government's power to control its borders. Sengchanh v. Lanier, 89 F. Supp. 2d 1356, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7272 (N.D. Ga. 2000).

Excessive fines clause findings required. — Where the trial court did not make findings regarding, or even specifically mentioning, the factors that must be considered in analyzing an excessive fines clause claim, vacation and remand for a new order including findings of fact and conclusions of law on those factors was required. Mitchell v. State, 236 Ga. App. 335, 511 S.E.2d 880, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 159 (1999).

Different degrees of culpability among co-defendants are relevant to the individualized sentencing mandated by the Eighth Amendment. Buttrum v. Black, 721 F. Supp. 1268, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11272 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 908 F.2d 695, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 12655 (11th Cir. 1990).

Requirements of U.S. Const., amend. 8 are defined by reference to the evolving standards of decency that mark the process of a maturing society. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Cruel and unusual punishment clause is a nonstatic, moral precept designed to curb treatment which offends contemporary standards of decency. Polakoff v. Henderson, 370 F. Supp. 690, 71 Ohio Op. 2d 106, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12414 (N.D. Ga. 1973), aff'd, 488 F.2d 977, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 10357 (5th Cir. 1974).

Inquiry in § 1983 cases. — In determining whether a state officer has crossed the constitutional line that would make physical abuse actionable in a case alleging cruel and unusual punishment under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, a court must inquire into the amount of force used in relationship to the need presented, the extent of the injury inflicted and the motives of the state officer. Brown v. Diaz, 184 Ga. App. 409, 361 S.E.2d 490, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2780 (1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 1037, 108 S. Ct. 1600, 99 L. Ed. 2d 914, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 2000 (1988).

Sodomy sentence not cruel and unusual. — Defendant's sentence of five years imprisonment and ten years' probation for violation of sodomy statute does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment because it does not shock the conscience. King v. State, 265 Ga. 440, 458 S.E.2d 98, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 365 (1995), overruled in part, Powell v. State, 270 Ga. 327, 510 S.E.2d 18, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 1148 (1998).

Provisions of the Tort Reform Act (O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1), relating to punitive damages, violated the due process and equal protection clauses of the federal and state constitutions, violated the excessive fines provisions of both constitutions, and violated the double jeopardy provision of the fifth amendment to the federal constitution. McBride v. GMC, 737 F. Supp. 1563, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5993 (M.D. Ga. 1990).

Legislative discretion in devising punishments. — So long as the General Assembly does not provide cruel and unusual punishments such as disgraced the civilization of former ages, and make one shudder with horror to read of them as drawing, quartering, burning, etc., U.S. Const., amend. 8 does not put any limit upon legislative discretion. Sims v. Balkcom, 220 Ga. 7, 136 S.E.2d 766, 1964

Ga. LEXIS 432 (1964); Evans v. State, 228 Ga. 867, 188 S.E.2d 861, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1972).

Where sentences imposed are within the statutory limits, etc. — Where sentences imposed are within the statutory limits, they are not subject to the attack that they constitute cruel and unusual punishment. Johnston v. State, 152 Ga. App. 133, 262 S.E.2d 161, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2839 (1979); Covington v. State, 157 Ga. App. 371, 277 S.E.2d 744, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1824 (1981); Cerrella v. Hanberry, 650 F.2d 606, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 11502 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1034, 102 S. Ct. 573, 70 L. Ed. 2d 478, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4425 (1981); Cook v. State, 235 Ga. App. 104, 508 S.E.2d 473.

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, imposing mandatory minimum sentences in certain cases, does not impose unconstitutionally excessive punishment, and the fact that defendants were 18 years old at the time of sentencing and may have been first offenders did not render the statute unconstitutional as applied to them. Campbell v. State. Campbell v. State, 268 Ga. 44, 485 S.E.2d 185, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 184 (1997).

A determinate sentence which falls within statutorily mandated parameters is not subject to attack on Eighth Amendment grounds. Pollard v. State, 230 Ga. App. 159, 495 S.E.2d 629, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 79 (1998); Inglett v. State, 239 Ga. App. 524, 521 S.E.2d 241; Strange v. State, 244 Ga. App. 635, 535 S.E.2d 315, 2000 Ga. App. LEXIS 682 (2000), cert. denied, No. S00C1776, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 743 (Ga. Oct. 6, 2000).

Sentence of five consecutive life sentences for conviction of five counts of selling cocaine was not cruel and unusual punishment, since it was within the statutory sentencing limits for such an offense. Reviere v. State, 231 Ga. App. 329, 498 S.E.2d 332, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 401 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1131, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 832 (Ga. Sept. 14, 1998).

Where the defendant was sentenced as a recidivist to twenty years, ten to serve and the remaining ten suspended, on a count of theft by taking, and twelve months to serve consecutively for giving a false name, these sentences were well within the statutory limits and not so disproportionate as to shock the conscience. Reid v. State, 235 Ga. App. 887, 510 S.E.2d 851, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 9 (1999).

Where a defendant was sentenced to five years imprisonment for possession of cocaine, it was within the statutory limits of two to fifteen years, and was not so overly severe or excessive as to shock the conscience. Palmore v. State, 236 Ga. App. 285, 511 S.E.2d 624, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 128 (1999).

Defendant's 10-year sentence, to be served consecutively to defendant's related sentence for theft by taking, was statutorily authorized, and, therefore, presumptively did not violate the Eighth Amendment's guarantee against cruel and unusual punishment, and defendant did not rebut that presumption by showing this legislatively authorized punishment was so overly severe or excessive in proportion to the offense as to shock the conscience. Howard v. State, 262 Ga. App. 214, 585 S.E.2d 115, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 784 (2003).

Defendant's 25-year sentence for two counts of aggravated child molestation and one count of statutory rape was not cruel and unusual punishment, as defendant's sentence was within the statutory limits of O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4(d)(1) and was not so disproportionate to shock the conscience; defendant knew the victim's age and engaged in the sexual misconduct for an extended period of time. Hunter v. State, 263 Ga. App. 747, 589 S.E.2d 306, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1312 (2003).

Trial court properly sentenced defendant to 220 years to serve, followed by 20 years of probation, on 24 counts of sexual exploitation of a child, as such a sentence was within the statutory parameters and did not shock the appellate court's conscience in light of the crimes committed and, in fact, defendant was actually spared serving the maximum amount of prison time authorized by O.C.G.A. § 16-12-100(g)(1). However, the trial court erred by ordering defendant to undergo chemical castration under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4(d)(2) since such punishment was only for defendants convicted of child molestation. Bennett v. State, 292 Ga. App. 382, 665 S.E.2d 365, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 700 (2008).

Defendant's sentence for obstruction of a law enforcement officer, driving without insurance, and failing to register a vehicle of 12 months confinement to be served on probation following 60 days of confinement, $1,500 in fines, 100 hours of community service, and a mental health evaluation was within the statutory limits set by O.C.G.A. §§ 16-10-24(b), 40-2-20(c), and 40-6-10(b), and did not shock the conscience. Smith v. State, 311 Ga. App. 184, 715 S.E.2d 434, 2011 Ga. App. LEXIS 617 (2011).

Degree of culpability may be considered by the sentencing judge in the judge's discretion. Edwards v. United States, 795 F.2d 958, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 27916 (11th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1019, 107 S. Ct. 1899, 95 L. Ed. 2d 506, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 1708 (1987).

Imposition of a higher sentence by a jury upon retrial does not violate the Constitution, unless the increased punishment can be shown to be the product of vindictiveness. Grace v. Caldwell, 231 Ga. 407, 202 S.E.2d 49, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 722 (1973).

There is no absolute constitutional bar to imposing a more severe sentence upon resentencing, but vindictiveness must not be the motivating force behind the increased sentence. Pressley v. State, 158 Ga. App. 638, 281 S.E.2d 364, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2347 (1981).

Reasons for more severe penalty upon retrial must affirmatively appear. — In order to assure the absence of such a motivation whenever a judge imposes a more severe sentence upon a defendant after a new trial, the reasons for the judge's doing so must affirmatively appear. Pressley v. State, 158 Ga. App. 638, 281 S.E.2d 364, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2347 (1981).

Reasons for imposing more severe sentence must be based upon objective information concerning identifiable conduct on the part of the defendant occurring after the time of the original sentencing proceeding. Pressley v. State, 158 Ga. App. 638, 281 S.E.2d 364, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2347 (1981).

Fines and Punishments (Cont'd)

Factual data upon which an increased sentence is based must be made part of record, so that the constitutional legitimacy of the increased sentence may be fully reviewed on appeal. Pressley v. State, 158 Ga. App. 638, 281 S.E.2d 364, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2347 (1981).

Mandatory child molestation sentence. — Mandatory sentence for aggravated child molestation of 10 years without parole pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 16-6-4(d)(1) and 17-10-6.1 was not cruel and unusual punishment as applied to the defendant, despite the fact that the defendant was 18 years old at the time of the act and the victim was only 4 years younger. Widner v. State, 280 Ga. 675, 631 S.E.2d 675, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 459 (2006).

Child molestation sentence not cruel and unusual punishment. — Although the defendant contended that the sentence provided in the amendment to O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4(d)(1), which as a result of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1(b), that sentence was 25 years, followed by life on probation, with no possibility of probation or parole for the minimum prison time of 25 years, constituted cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the Eighth Amendment as applied to the defendant, the sentence was not grossly disproportionate to the defendant's crime since aggravated child molestation committed by the defendant was not a passive felony. Moreover, the juveniles had been tried as adults and sentenced to long periods of incarceration in Georgia, and severe punishments for crimes against children had withstood previous attacks on constitutional grounds. Adams v. State, 288 Ga. 695, 707 S.E.2d 359, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 96 (2011).

Life imprisonment for youth convicted of murder. — Appellant's sentence of two consecutive terms of life imprisonment plus 85 years was not cruel and unusual punishment, despite being 17 years old at the time of the crimes, because the trial court followed the guidance offered in case law and explicitly considered the appellant's relatively young age and explained that the court balanced the appellant's youth against the vicious, mean, violent behavior and the adult conduct engaged in, which included the murder of not one but two innocent bystanders. Jones v. State, 296 Ga. 663, 769 S.E.2d 901, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 145 (2015), overruled in part, Veal v. State, 298 Ga. 691, 784 S.E.2d 403, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 243 (2016).

Life sentence for felony murder. — Defendant's felony murder conviction and life sentence for felony murder did not violate the Eighth Amendment. Rainwater v. State, 260 Ga. 807, 400 S.E.2d 623, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 72 (1991), overruled in part, Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993).

Life sentence for repeat drug conviction constitutional. — O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d), which mandates a sentence of life imprisonment upon a second conviction for selling cocaine, is not unconstitutional; and it does not violate the fourteenth and the eighth amendments to the Constitution of the United States. Grant v. State, 258 Ga. 299, 368 S.E.2d 737, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 248 (1988); Crutchfield v. State, 218 Ga. App. 360, 461 S.E.2d 555, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 713 (1995), cert. denied, No. S95C1983, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 1242 (Ga. Nov. 17, 1995).

O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d), which mandates a sentence of life imprisonment upon a second conviction for selling cocaine, does not violate due process or equal protection and does not violate state or federal constitutional guarantees against cruel and unusual punishment. Isom v. State, 261 Ga. 596, 408 S.E.2d 701, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 425 (1991).

A mandatory life sentence imposed upon a defendant convicted of a second offense of selling cocaine under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30 does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment under the eighth and fourteenth amendments. Rucks v. State, 201 Ga. App. 142, 410 S.E.2d 206, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1267 (1991).

Life sentence for recidivism. — Imposition of sentence of life imprisonment for armed robbery under recidivist statute, former Code 1933, § 27-2511 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7), was not cruel and unusual punishment. Chappell v. State, 164 Ga. App. 77, 296 S.E.2d 629, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3355 (1982), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

The imposition of a mandatory life sentence for recidivism under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 does not violate the eighth amendment proscription against cruel and unusual punishment. Howard v. State, 233 Ga. App. 724, 505 S.E.2d 768, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 993 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1887, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 1237 (Ga. Dec. 4, 1998), overruled in part, Wilson v. State, 277 Ga. 195, 586 S.E.2d 669, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 775 (2003).

Life sentence for repeat offender of sexual registration statute held unconstitutional. — Imposition of a mandatory sentence of life imprisonment imposed against a defendant, who was a second time offender, for failing to register as a sexual offender was held unconstitutional as grossly disproportionate to the crime of failing to register. Bradshaw v. State, 284 Ga. 675, 671 S.E.2d 485, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 1022 (2008).

Life sentence for young adult for malice murder. — Defendant's sentence of life in prison without parole for malice murder and a consecutive five years for possession of a weapon during the commission of a crime was not cruel and unusual punishment due to the fact that the defendant had just turned 20 when the defendant committed the crimes because: (1) there was no state or federal constitutional prohibition against sentencing a young adult to life in prison without parole for committing a homicide; and (2) there was no objective evidence that Georgians, as a matter of state constitutional law, considered the sentence to be cruel and unusual punishment when applied to an adult defendant who committed a homicide. Williams v. State, 291 Ga. 19, 727 S.E.2d 95, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 368 (2012), overruled in part, Kimbrough v. State, 300 Ga. 516, 796 S.E.2d 694, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 48 (2017).

20-year sentence for 15-year-old convicted of statutory rape upheld. — Defendant's sentence of 20 years' imprisonment for statutory rape under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-3(b) did not meet even the threshold inference of gross disproportionality under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII, and U.S. Const., amend. 8; the 13-year-old victim refused to have sex until defendant brandished a knife and threatened to kill the victim's father. Conley v. Pate, 305 Ga. 333, 825 S.E.2d 135, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 140 (2019).

Specific jury finding that defendant killed or intended killing not required. — A specific jury finding, upon imposition of the death penalty, that the defendant killed, attempted to kill, or intended that a killing or lethal force would be employed, was not required. Ross v. Kemp, 756 F.2d 1483, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28904 (11th Cir. 1985).

Effect of jury finding. — In a malice murder case involving the imposition of the death penalty, in which the jury was instructed on malice murder, and its verdict, supported by the evidence, necessarily established its finding of intent, the federal appellate court was not required to examine the record to determine whether the defendant killed or attempted to kill, or whether the defendant intended or contemplated that life be taken. Johnson v. Kemp, 759 F.2d 1503, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 29570 (11th Cir. 1985).

Maltreatment occurring prior to trial constitutes no part of the sentences imposed as a result of the trial and, therefore does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment. Hill v. State, 119 Ga. App. 612, 168 S.E.2d 327, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 1185 (1969).

Due process requires that a pretrial detainee not be punished; therefore, where punishment is imposed without adjudication, the pertinent constitutional guarantee is the due process clause, not the Eighth Amendment. McQuarter v. City of Atlanta, 572 F. Supp. 1401, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13851 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Pretrial detainees protected by fourteenth amendment. — Civil rights action by a pretrial detainee against a prison guard, alleging that the guard assaulted the detainee and used excessive force, was properly brought under the fourteenth amendment, not the Eighth Amendment. Telfair v. Gilberg, 868 F. Supp. 1396, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16494 (S.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 87 F.3d 1330, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 14113 (11th Cir. 1996).

Fines and Punishments (Cont'd)

Cruel and unusual punishment of pretrial detainee. — Apretrial detainee, who had inadequate food, no blankets or bedding, no sanitation, inadequate medical care, no shelter from the elements other than a concrete cell with broken windows permitting the passage of cold air, all of which endangered the detainee's health, was subject to cruel and unusual punishment. Goodson v. City of Atlanta, 763 F.2d 1381, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30709 (11th Cir. 1985).

Use of restraints by correction officers to reduce or eliminate plaintiffs ability to inflict physical harm against either oneself or the officers did not constitute excessive force. Campbell v. Sikes, 169 F.3d 1353, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 4663 (11th Cir. 1999).

Codefendants need not receive the same sentence. Edwards v. United States, 795 F.2d 958, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 27916 (11th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1019, 107 S. Ct. 1899, 95 L. Ed. 2d 506, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 1708 (1987).

Punishment appropriate for diverse federal offenses is a matter for the discretion of Congress, subject only to constitutional limitations, more particularly U.S. Const., amend. 8. United States v. Kitowski, 729 F.2d 1418, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 23507 (11th Cir. 1984).

Uncertain time of commencement of sentence. — Sentences given to two defendants which were to be consecutive to their release from detention as illegal aliens were not illegal despite the uncertainty as to when the exact date the sentences were to begin. United States v. Buide-Gomez, 744 F.2d 781, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 17511 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1059, 105 S. Ct. 1774, 84 L. Ed. 2d 833, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 1493 (1985).

Denial of parole for 30 years under O.C.G.A. § 42-9-39(c) not cruel and unusual punishment. — Since in pleading guilty to four counts of murder and one count of aggravated assault, the defendant admitted a number of acts that a jury could reasonably consider "aggravating circumstances" under O.C.G.A.

§ 17-10-30(b), and in both Georgia and other jurisdictions, the defendant might well have been sentenced to death, a sentence denying the defendant consideration of parole for 30 years, under O.C.G.A. § 42-9-39(c), did not constitute "cruel and unusual punishment." McClendon v. State, 256 Ga. 480, 350 S.E.2d 235, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 931 (1986).

Sentences not excessive. — Where defendant pled guilty to two counts each of driving under the influence of alcohol (DUI) and driving with a suspended license, and one count each of driving without proof of insurance, improper lane usage, unlawful use of license, giving a false name, impeding traffic, and violation of a county open container ordinance, and was sentenced on the DUI counts to a 12-month consecutive term, a $1,000 fine, and a $25 assessment for costs of publishing defendant's photo and, on the remaining charges, to concurrent 12-month terms and a $200 fine for driving without proof of insurance, the sentence was not unconstitutionally excessive. McClure v. State, 218 Ga. App. 365, 460 S.E.2d 884, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 708 (1995).

Where the trial court sentenced defendant to consecutive 20-year sentences on two aggravated battery convictions, after defendant was convicted of breaking the victim's ribs and both orbital bones of the victim's eyes, the sentences were not cruel and unusual under the Eighth Amendment; the sentences were within the statutory limits under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-24(a), (b), and (h) and did not shock the conscience. Ware v. State, 259 Ga. App. 267, 576 S.E.2d 649, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 74 (2003).

An aggregate sentence of seven consecutive life sentences plus 265 years for multiple counts of armed robbery, kidnapping, and related crimes did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment, because the sentence for each offense was within statutory guidelines, and the trial court had the discretion to impose consecutive sentences for the separate offenses. Because the defendant failed to show that the punishment was so severe as to "shock the conscience," the presumption stood that the sentence did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment. Kollie v. State, 301 Ga. App. 534, 687 S.E.2d 869, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1344 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0531, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 444 (Ga. June 1, 2010).

Imposition of three concurrent five-year probated sentences as a first offender was not grossly disproportionate to the gravity of the offense of felony sexual battery and, thus, the defendant's claim that the sentence amounted to cruel and unusual punishment failed. Jones v. State, 307 Ga. 505, 837 S.E.2d 288, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 833 (2019).

Permitting unlicensed person to drive. — A sentence of six months in jail, six months on probation, and a fine of $1,000.00 for permitting an unlicensed person to drive a car did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment. Means v. State, 255 Ga. 537, 340 S.E.2d 612, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 629 (1986).

Sentence not cruel and unusual when defendant had medical conditions. — Defendant's sentence did not violate the Eighth Amendment as the sentence of seven years in prison, and eight years on probation, was within the statutory range available for a vehicular-homicide conviction; there was no binding precedent supporting the defendant's claim that a sentence within the statutory limits could violate the Eighth Amendment's prohibition on cruel and unusual punishment based solely on a defendant's medical conditions or health issues; and the defendant identified no legal authority indicating that the defendant's medical conditions rendered the defendant's prison sentence grossly disproportionate to the severity of the defendant's crimes or to prison sentences imposed on other defendants with health issues. Butler v. State, 363 Ga. App. 753, 871 S.E.2d 902, 2022 Ga. App. LEXIS 189 (2022).

Penalty for dogfighting. — A $5,000.00 fine and an optional one year in prison does not amount to cruel and unusual punishment for those convicted of dogfighting. Hargrove v. State, 253 Ga. 450, 321 S.E.2d 104, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 955 (1984).

Twenty-year maximum sentence imposed for aggravated sodomy did not shock the conscience, and therefore did not impose cruel and unusual punishment. Rodgers v. State, 261 Ga. 33, 401 S.E.2d 735, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 125 (1991).

Ten-year sentence for sodomy. — Since the legislature has provided for a maximum sentence of confinement of 20 years, where the trial court sentenced defendant to ten years confinement followed by probation for repeated acts of sodomy committed against a minor, the sentence did not shock the conscience. Gordon v. State, 257 Ga. 439, 360 S.E.2d 253, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1987).

Defendant who was sentenced to ten years for sodomy could not complain of the maximum twenty-year sentence under the statute, as it is the sentence actually imposed, not a potentially greater sentence, which must be subjected to the constitutional scrutiny. Ray v. State, 259 Ga. 868, 389 S.E.2d 326, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 103 (1990), overruled in part, Wilson v. State, 277 Ga. 195, 586 S.E.2d 669, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 775 (2003).

Six month sentence for criminal trespass. — A sentence of six months imprisonment and six months probation for trespass at a university was not cruel and unusual punishment where the defendant had a prior conviction for trespassing at the university and an ordinance violation for picketing at the university. McCrosky v. State, 234 Ga. App. 321, 506 S.E.2d 400, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1164 (1998), cert. denied, No. S99C0121, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 127 (Ga. Feb. 5, 1999).

Unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain. — Not every governmental action affecting the interests or well-being of a prisoner is subject to Eighth Amendment scrutiny. After incarceration, only the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain constitutes cruel and unusual punishment forbidden by the Eighth Amendment. Alford v. Osei-Kawsi, 203 Ga. App. 716, 418 S.E.2d 79, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 607 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0990, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 494 (Ga. June 10, 1992).

The question of whether a measure taken inflicted unnecessary and wanton pain and suffering ultimately turns on whether force was applied in a good faith effort to maintain or restore discipline or maliciously and sadistically for the very purpose of causing harm. Alford v.

Osei-Kawsi, 203 Ga. App. 716, 418 S.E.2d 79, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 607 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0990, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 494 (Ga. June 10, 1992).

Officer's actions of kneeling plaintiff in the groin violated contemporary standards of decency when the officer was faced with the plaintiff as a rebellious prisoner. In determining whether force was applied in a good faith effort to maintain or restore discipline, or maliciously and sadistically to cause harm, the court may consider the following factors: first, the extent of injury; second, the need for application of force; third, the relationship between the need for force and the amount of force used; fourth, the threat reasonably perceived by the officer; and, fifth, any efforts made to temper the severity of a forceful response. Although plaintiff's surgery could not be attributed solely to the officer's kneeling, neither could the surgery solely be attributed to a pre-existing condition; therefore, based on the preceding analysis the officer acted maliciously and sadistically in causing plaintiff harm. Culver ex rel. Bell v. Fowler, 862 F. Supp. 369, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12290 (M.D. Ga. 1994).

Prison guards and restoration of order. — Guards may use force when necessary to restore order and need not wait until disturbances reach dangerous proportions before responding. Alford v. Osei-Kawsi, 203 Ga. App. 716, 418 S.E.2d 79, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 607 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0990, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 494 (Ga. June 10, 1992).

In determining whether a guard used excessive force, three factors are considered: the need for the force, the relationship between the need and the amount of force used, and the extent of the injury inflicted. Alford v. Osei-Kawsi, 203 Ga. App. 716, 418 S.E.2d 79, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 607 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0990, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 494 (Ga. June 10, 1992).

The use by the court of the Eleventh Circuit pattern jury instruction on excessive force in an action against prison guards was proper, notwithstanding the assertion by the defendants that the instructions failed to inform the jury that the defendants must have acted with specific intent, failed to instruct the jury on all of the factors essential to a determination of whether they had used force maliciously and sadistically for the very purpose of causing harm, and failed to inform the jury as to the deference given to prison officials in maintaining prison security and the presumption that they properly discharged their duties. Johnson v. Breeden, 280 F.3d 1308, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 1115 (11th Cir. 2002), overruled in part as stated in, Dixon v. Sutton, No. 2:08-CV-745-WC, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 49945 (M.D. Ala. May 9, 2011).

Hurling prisoner down fire escape stairs unconstitutional. — Correctional officer lacked good faith motivation in restoring discipline when the officer shoved a handcuffed, non-resisting inmate down a flight of metal stairs, entitling the inmate to prevail on an Eighth Amendment claim for cruel and unusual punishment and on the inmate's compensatory and punitive damages claim for permanent physical impairments. Davis v. Moss, 841 F. Supp. 1193, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 55 (M.D. Ga. 1994).

Use of force by prison officials did not violate an inmate's constitutional rights, where the need for the use of force was established by undisputed evidence that the inmate had created a disturbance, and the inmate's injuries were minimal. Bennett v. Parker, 898 F.2d 1530, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 6191 (11th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1103, 111 S. Ct. 1003, 112 L. Ed. 2d 1085, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 749 (1991), overruled in part as stated in, Williams v. Corr. Officer Radford, 64 F.4th 1185, 2023 U.S. App. LEXIS 8031 (11th Cir. 2023).

Use of Taser gun. — Where Taser was used on pregnant inmate, a § 1983 action was maintained, although there was no proof of serious physical injury. Alford v. Osei-Kawsi, 203 Ga. App. 716, 418 S.E.2d 79, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 607 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0990, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 494 (Ga. June 10, 1992).

Sexual harassment. — Prisoners are entitled to the protection of the Eighth Amendment from sexual harassment at the hands of prison staff. Battle v. Seago, 208 Ga. App. 516, 431 S.E.2d 148, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 584 (1993).

Certain constitutional rights follow a person into state prison through U.S. Const., amend. 14, and among these is the protection of U.S. Const., amend. 8 against cruel and unusual punishment. Wilson v. Kelley, 294 F. Supp. 1005, 1968 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8039 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 393 U.S. 266, 89 S. Ct. 477, 21 L. Ed. 2d 425, 1968 U.S. LEXIS 6 (1968).

Duty to protect prisoners. — The state has a responsibility under U.S. Const., amend. 8 to protect the safety of its prisoners. Streeter v. Hopper, 618 F.2d 1178, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 16671 (5th Cir. 1980); Yizar v. Ault, 265 Ga. 708, 462 S.E.2d 141, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 827 (1995).

Consecutive life sentences do not violate U.S. Const., amend. 8's ban on cruel and unusual punishment. Nelson v. State, 247 Ga. 172, 274 S.E.2d 317, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 609, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 882, 102 S. Ct. 365, 70 L. Ed. 2d 192 (1981).

Work and labor on the part of prisoners is not in itself unconstitutional or unlawful. Wilson v. Kelley, 294 F. Supp. 1005, 1968 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8039 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 393 U.S. 266, 89 S. Ct. 477, 21 L. Ed. 2d 425, 1968 U.S. LEXIS 6 (1968).

Hard labor as a penalty for crime is expressly permitted by U.S. Const., amend. 13, and not prohibited by U.S. Const., amend. 8. Wilson v. Kelley, 294 F. Supp. 1005, 1968 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8039 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 393 U.S. 266, 89 S. Ct. 477, 21 L. Ed. 2d 425, 1968 U.S. LEXIS 6 (1968).

Prison work assignments are considered conditions of confinement subject to scrutiny under the Eighth Amendment. Lee v. Sikes, 870 F. Supp. 1096, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17906 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Prisoner who was attacked by a boar hog while working at the prisoner's assigned duties in a prison hog farm operation failed to show deliberate indifference on the part of prison officials and, even though the evidence showed that the officials were negligent in assigning the prisoner to the hog barn without proper training and equipment, such negligence was not enough to constitute a constitutional violation. Lee v. Sikes, 870 F. Supp. 1096, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17906 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Provision of safety equipment for prisoners. — County's failure to provide a prisoner with protective goggles and provide the prisoner with prompt medical care when the prisoner was injured while working on county equipment was not a violation of the cruel and unusual punishment clause. Webb v. Carroll County, 229 Ga. App. 584, 494 S.E.2d 196 (1997), cert. denied, No. S98C0644, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 491 (Ga. May 1, 1998).

Conditions of confinement. — In construing the cruel and unusual punishment clause of U.S. Const., amend. 8, the court must inquire whether conditions of confinement shock the conscience, are greatly disproportionate to the offense, or offend evolving notions of decency. United States v. Thevis, 526 F.2d 989, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 12948 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 928, 97 S. Ct. 335, 50 L. Ed. 2d 299, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 3409 (1976).

Substandard sanitation and deficient medical care of inmates at a county jail was unconstitutional, and necessitated releasing some inmates to relieve overcrowding until construction of a new jail was completed. Fambro v. Fulton County, 713 F. Supp. 1426, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5703 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Driving while intoxicated and theft by taking. — A sentence of 10 years on a conviction for theft by taking and a consecutive sentence of 12 months for driving under the influence did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment where the defendant's actions caused significant personal injuries and property damage. Burgos v. State, 233 Ga. App. 897, 505 S.E.2d 543, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1111 (1998).

Long prison sentences. — Imposition of sentence of life imprisonment for armed robbery under recidivist statute, former Code 1933, § 27-2511 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7), was not cruel and unusual punishment. Chappell v. State, 164 Ga. App. 77, 296 S.E.2d 629, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3355 (1982), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Long prison sentences do not constitute cruel and unusual punishment where the sentences are within statutory limits. Fain v. State, 165 Ga. App. 188, 300

S.E.2d 197, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3128 (1983).

Conviction as “guilty but mentally ill” not unconstitutional. — Simply because O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 provides that the defendant convicted as “guilty but mentally ill” will be treated with funds to be appropriated, and there may exist a possibility that funds may run out or not be appropriated, there is no violation of constitutional guarantees against cruel and unusual punishment. Cooper v. State, 253 Ga. 736, 325 S.E.2d 137, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 560 (1985).

Imprisonment in certain jails may amount to cruel and unusual punishment in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 8. Stroman v. Griffin, 331 F. Supp. 226, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11991 (S.D. Ga. 1971).

Solitary confinement is not per se an unconstitutional form of punishment. It is permissible where its object is protection of the general prison population or the personnel, protection of the prisoner, for disobedience of orders or for prevention of the prisoner's escape. Krist v. Smith, 309 F. Supp. 497, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12840 (S.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 439 F.2d 146, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 11635 (5th Cir. 1971).

Visitation rights. — Utilizing the standards of “barbarous” and “shocking to the conscience” as a touchstone the denial to prisoners of conjugal visits cannot be characterized as cruel and unusual punishment. Polakoff v. Henderson, 370 F. Supp. 690, 71 Ohio Op. 2d 106, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12414 (N.D. Ga. 1973), aff'd, 488 F.2d 977, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 10357 (5th Cir. 1974).

Although there is no constitutional right to visitation in and of itself, the visitation procedures can be the subject of equitable relief once it is found that the totality of the circumstances in a prison violate U.S. Const., amend. 8. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Minimally adequate medical care. — It is settled that federal and state governments have a constitutional obligation to provide adequate medical care to those whom they are punishing by incarceration. Barker v. Brantley County, 832 F. Supp. 346, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17365 (S.D. Ga. 1993), aff'd, 19 F.3d 37, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 5145 (11th Cir. 1994).

The fact the county contracted with a local medical services provider to provide medical care at the detention center and that it relied on the provider to provide such care, did not amount to an intentionally corrupt or impermissible policy which would violate a citizen's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 8. Epps v. Gwinnett County, 231 Ga. App. 664, 499 S.E.2d 657, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 318 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1176, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 792 (Ga. Sept. 8, 1998).

Medical treatment for a prisoner is required when a physician or other health care provider, exercising ordinary skill and care at the time of observation, concludes with reasonable medical certainty: that the prisoner's symptoms evidence a serious disease or injury; that such disease or injury is curable or may be substantially alleviated; and that the potential for harm to the prisoner by reason of delay or the denial of care would be substantial. Brown v. Beck, 481 F. Supp. 723, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10466 (S.D. Ga. 1980).

Deliberate indifference standard as to medical care. — For a plaintiff to prevail on a claim that inadequate medical attention rose to the level of an Eighth Amendment constitutional violation, the plaintiff must show that a defendant was “deliberately indifferent” to the plaintiff's serious medical needs and caused plaintiff unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain. Barker v. Brantley County, 832 F. Supp. 346, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17365 (S.D. Ga. 1993), aff'd, 19 F.3d 37, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 5145 (11th Cir. 1994); Wright v. Thompson, 883 F. Supp. 724, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4865 (S.D. Ga. 1995).

Deliberate indifference to serious medical needs may be shown by proving a policy of deficiencies in staffing or procedures such that the inmate is effectively denied access to adequate medical care. Hill v. Dekalb Regional Youth Detention Ctr., 40 F.3d 1176, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 36302 (11th Cir. 1994), overruled in part, Hope v. Pelzer, 536 U.S. 730, 122 S. Ct.

2508, 153 L. Ed. 2d 666, 2002 U.S. LEXIS 4884 (2002), overruled in part as stated in, Alexander v. City of Muscle Shoals, 766 F. Supp. 2d 1214, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18978 (N.D. Ala. 2011), overruled in part as stated in, Robinson v. S.C. Dep't of Corr., No. 4:10-157-HMH-TER, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16554 (D.S.C. Feb. 17, 2011), overruled in part as stated in, Makoni v. Crawford, No. 1:11-CV-2712-WSD-JFK, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42303 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 8, 2012), abrogated in part, Mosley v. Medlin, No. CV 313-086, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 92922 (S.D. Ga. May 27, 2014).

Plaintiff failed to identify any injury or medical condition for which her husband was denied treatment or any incident in which her husband requested and was refused medical treatment; therefore, plaintiff failed to demonstrate deliberate indifference on the part of the detention center's medical director or the health care services provider to recover for an alleged violation of U.S. Const., amend. 8. Epps v. Gwinnett County, 231 Ga. App. 664, 499 S.E.2d 657, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 318 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1176, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 792 (Ga. Sept. 8, 1998).

Knowledge of a substantial risk of serious harm for the purpose of deliberate indifference means an awareness that the inmate needs medical care because of a serious risk of harm from illness or injury, as evidenced by the clinical signs and symptoms that are readily observable by a reasonable person; it does not require a final diagnosis, correct diagnosis, or a complete medical history when the inmate has not been allowed to see and to be examined by a physician or when medical care has been unreasonably delayed. Howard v. City of Columbus, 239 Ga. App. 399, 521 S.E.2d 51, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 981 (1999), cert. denied, No. S99C1687, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 64 (Ga. Jan. 14, 2000), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1215, 120 S. Ct. 2218, 147 L. Ed. 2d 250, 2000 U.S. LEXIS 3827 (2000).

Subjective deliberate indifference may be proven as a reasonable inference drawn from circumstantial evidence of the surrounding facts and circumstances. Howard v. City of Columbus, 239 Ga. App. 399, 521 S.E.2d 51, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 981 (1999), cert. denied, No. S99C1687, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 64 (Ga. Jan. 14, 2000), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1215, 120 S. Ct. 2218, 147 L. Ed. 2d 250, 2000 U.S. LEXIS 3827 (2000).

Omissions by a physician in the face of the physician's knowledge of plaintiff's vascular history and colleagues continually informing the physician that plaintiff's condition was unimproved and that the patient was in severe pain raised a jury issue as to whether or not the physician knowingly disregarded a serious medical risk and was deliberately indifferent to plaintiff's medical needs. Seals v. Shah, 145 F. Supp. 2d 1378, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5889 (N.D. Ga. 2001).

Prisoner's claims that medication was not administered properly and that the prisoner was subjected to harassment were not supported by evidence sufficient to show deliberate indifference. Herndon v. Whitworth, 924 F. Supp. 1171, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21069 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Deliberate indifference negates official's qualified immunity. — Sheriff's knowledge of the prisoner's need for medical care and the sheriff's intentional refusal to provide that care constituted "deliberate indifference," and the sheriff lost the sheriff's entitlement to qualified immunity to suit under § 1983 for violating the prisoner's fifth, eighth and fourteenth amendment rights. Harris v. Coweta County, 21 F.3d 388, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 12394 (11th Cir. 1994).

State prison inmates's pro se complaint alleging a significant and uncomfortable health problem, repeated efforts to obtain treatment, and a total lack of treatment for the problem alleged enough to take this case arguably beyond an allegation of medical malpractice, and should not have been dismissed without conducting an inquiry although the complaint presented an arguable basis in law and contained unconvincing facts. Moreland v. Wharton, 899 F.2d 1168, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 6853 (11th Cir. 1990).

Allegations of excessive and unnecessary medication administered after a prison inmate's objections to the treatment implicate Eighth Amendment concerns. Battle v. Central State Hosp., 898 F.2d 126, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 5357 (11th Cir. 1990).

Fines and Punishments (Cont'd)

Courts must generally yield to the discretion of correction officials in the area of confinement, but the general adequacy of conditions of confinement of prisoners, such as medical treatment, hygienic materials, and physical facilities, is clearly subject to scrutiny under U.S. Const., amend. 8. Dorrough v. Hogan, 563 F.2d 1259, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 5796 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 850, 99 S. Ct. 153, 58 L. Ed. 2d 153, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2923 (1978).

Deliberate indifference to an inmate's severe and obvious injuries is tantamount to an intentional infliction of cruel and unusual punishment. Harris v. Chancellor, 537 F.2d 203, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 7491 (5th Cir. 1976).

While deliberate indifference to serious medical needs of prisoners constitutes the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain, a medical decision not to order an x-ray or like measures, does not represent cruel and unusual punishment. Brown v. Beck, 481 F. Supp. 723, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10466 (S.D. Ga. 1980).

Adequacy of medical treatment. — The plaintiff in a civil rights action, a state prisoner, produced sufficient evidence from which it could be concluded that the county jail doctor acted recklessly in the performance of the doctor's professional duties, in that the doctor, while rendering some medical treatment to the plaintiff, who had aching and pain in the plaintiff's eyes and blurred vision, and who later went blind, allegedly failed to perform any diagnostic test or take eye secretion cultures, precluding summary judgment. Summary judgment was also inappropriate on behalf of the county sheriff, who allegedly never investigated overcrowding conditions in the jail and who decided not to meet certain minimal requirements of the American Medical Association. Weaver v. Jarvis, 611 F. Supp. 40, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21848 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

Inmate failed to show that the medical treatment the inmate received for an injured foot was so grossly incompetent, inadequate, or excessive as to shock the conscience, or to be intolerable to fundamental fairness, or that the medical care was so inappropriate as to evidence intentional maltreatment or refusal to provide essential care. Cantrell v. Thurman, 231 Ga. App. 510, 499 S.E.2d 416, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 496 (1998), overruled in part, Tattnall County v. Armstrong, 333 Ga. App. 46, 775 S.E.2d 573, 2015 Ga. App. LEXIS 446 (2015).

Prisoner's action for cruel and unusual punishment based on the prisoner's claim of lack of medical care was not established due to the lack of evidence regarding the culpable state of mind of the jailers and the actual causation of the prisoner's injury. Merritt v. Athens Clarke County, 233 Ga. App. 203, 504 S.E.2d 41, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 924 (1998).

Repeated denial, delay, insufficient, or inappropriate medical care of an obviously sick inmate in serious need of medical care constitutes circumstantial evidence of subjective, deliberate indifference. Howard v. City of Columbus, 239 Ga. App. 399, 521 S.E.2d 51, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 981 (1999), cert. denied, No. S99C1687, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 64 (Ga. Jan. 14, 2000), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1215, 120 S. Ct. 2218, 147 L. Ed. 2d 250, 2000 U.S. LEXIS 3827 (2000).

Temporary denial of a wheelchair did not constitute deliberate indifference to medical needs. Brown v. Thompson, 868 F. Supp. 326, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16485 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Denial of food and medical attention are, prima facie, clearly established violations of the Eighth Amendment; however, they are not violations per se because the duration of the deprivations, the context in which they occur, and the intent of the prison officials implicated are all elements affecting a claim of deliberate indifference. Brown v. Thompson, 868 F. Supp. 326, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16485 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Failure to provide medical care. — Where an inmate failed to provide evidence that he had a "serious medical need," the court could not determine his claim of deliberate indifference by prison officials. Ruble v. King, 911 F. Supp. 1544, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19708 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Deliberate indifference to serious psychological or psychiatric needs of an inmate results in the infliction of pain proscribed by the Eighth Amendment. Waldrop v. Evans, 681 F. Supp. 840, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2126 (M.D. Ga. 1988), aff'd, 871 F.2d 1030, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 5677 (11th Cir. 1989).

Providing inmate with inadequate psychiatric care can violate the inmate's Eighth Amendment right not to be subjected to cruel and unusual punishment. Greason v. Kemp, 891 F.2d 829, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 177 (11th Cir. 1990).

Indifference to psychiatric needs of mentally ill prisoners. — Evidence creating an inference that a pattern of deliberate indifference to the psychiatric needs of mentally ill prisoners existed at the jail, which city policymakers should have been aware of, established issues of material fact with respect to whether defendant suffered constitutional deprivations. Young v. City of Augusta ex rel. DeVaney, 59 F.3d 1160, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 20182 (11th Cir. 1995).

Requiring prisoner to sleep on mattress on floor not violation of constitutional rights. — Where a prisoner filed a civil complaint and amendment alleging that the prisoner was required to sleep on a mattress on the floor for a period of time and was thus deprived of the prisoner's constitutional rights under the Eighth Amendment, the trial court did not err in finding the practice not to be inhumane and in dismissing the complaint for failure to state a claim, where nothing in the complaint suggested that the prisoner was required to sleep on a floor mattress as a permanent method of placement while there was an empty and available bed which the prisoner was arbitrarily denied, nor that it resulted in torture or in pain without any penological purpose such as relief from overcrowded conditions or even as a penalty, or amounted to unquestioned and serious deprivation of the prisoner's basic human needs, that it in fact caused the prisoner any particular grievous and insupportable detriment. Hall v. Jones, 180 Ga. App. 454, 349 S.E.2d 469, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2735 (1986), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 831, 108 S. Ct. 105, 98 L. Ed. 2d 64, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 3752 (1987).

Deliberate indifference to serious medical needs of prisoners violates the Eighth Amendment prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment. Rogers v. Evans, 792 F.2d 1052, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 26644 (11th Cir. 1986); Thomas v. Evans, 880 F.2d 1235, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 12358 (11th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 901, 111 S. Ct. 261, 112 L. Ed. 2d 218, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 5040 (1990).

A prison inmate has the right under the Eighth Amendment to be free from deliberate indifference to serious physical or psychiatric needs. Waldrop v. Evans, 871 F.2d 1030, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 5677 (11th Cir. 1989); Howard v. Jonah, 208 Ga. App. 542, 430 S.E.2d 833, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 641 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1212, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 855 (Ga. Sept. 20, 1993).

Delay in access to medical attention. — To state an Eighth Amendment violation for inadequate medical care it must be shown that treatment was "so grossly incompetent, inadequate or excessive as to shock the conscience or to be intolerable to fundamental fairness or where the medical care is so inappropriate as to evidence intentional maltreatment or a refusal to provide essential care." Alford v. Osei-Kawsi, 203 Ga. App. 716, 418 S.E.2d 79, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 607 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C0990, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 494 (Ga. June 10, 1992).

Delay in access to medical attention can violate the Eighth Amendment, when it is "tantamount to 'unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain' ". Hill v. Dekalb Regional Youth Detention Ctr., 40 F.3d 1176, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 36302 (11th Cir. 1994), overruled in part, Hope v. Pelzer, 536 U.S. 730, 122 S. Ct. 2508, 153 L. Ed. 2d 666, 2002 U.S. LEXIS 4884 (2002), overruled in part as stated in, Alexander v. City of Muscle Shoals, 766 F. Supp. 2d 1214, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18978 (N.D. Ala. 2011), overruled in part as stated in, Robinson v. S.C. Dep't of Corr., No. 4:10-157-HMH-TER, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16554 (D.S.C. Feb. 17, 2011), overruled in part as stated in, Makoni v. Crawford, No. 1:11-CV-2712-WSD-JFK, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42303 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 8, 2012), abrogated in part, Mosley v. Medlin, No. CV 313-086, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 92922 (S.D. Ga. May 27, 2014).

Delay or even denial of medical treatment for superficial, nonserious physical conditions does not constitute an Eighth Amendment violation. Hill v. Dekalb Regional Youth Detention Ctr., 40 F.3d 1176, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 36302 (11th Cir. 1994), overruled in part, Hope v. Pelzer, 536 U.S. 730, 122 S. Ct. 2508, 153 L. Ed. 2d 666, 2002 U.S. LEXIS 4884 (2002), overruled in part as stated in, Alexander v. City of Muscle Shoals, 766 F. Supp. 2d 1214, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18978 (N.D. Ala. 2011), overruled in part as stated in, Robinson v. S.C. Dep't of Corr., No. 4:10-157-HMH-TER, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16554 (D.S.C. Feb. 17, 2011), overruled in part as stated in, Makoni v. Crawford, No. 1:11-CV-2712-WSD-JFK, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 42303 (N.D. Ga. Feb. 8, 2012), abrogated in part, Mosley v. Medlin, No. CV 313-086, 2014 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 92922 (S.D. Ga. May 27, 2014).

Evidence insufficient to support deliberate indifference claim. — Plaintiff did not have evidence to establish the subjective mental prong of deliberate indifference necessary to allege mistreatment under U.S. Const., amend. 8 while incarcerated. Campbell v. Sikes, 169 F.3d 1353, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 4663 (11th Cir. 1999).

Mistakes, negligence, and medical malpractice are not constitutional violations merely because the victim is a prisoner; also, differences in medical opinion do not amount to a constitutional violation. Wright v. Thompson, 883 F. Supp. 724, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4865 (S.D. Ga. 1995).

Jury question as to prisoner's medical needs. — There was a jury question whether a prisoner, who had a history of head injuries and who asked to see a doctor about severe headaches and dizziness allegedly caused by an injury received during the prisoner's recent arrest, had a serious medical need and whether the doctor who responded to the prisoner's request, but refused to examine the prisoner, stating the doctor would "doctor [the prisoner's] records," showed deliberate indifference to the prisoner's needs. United States v. Roark, 753 F.2d 991, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28174 (11th Cir. 1985).

AIDS patients. — Georgia Department of Corrections was not "deliberately indifferent" to the serious medical needs of prisoners who had tested positive to the AIDS virus, where its policy for treatment of such patients was similar to that of other reputable national and local agencies. Hawley v. Evans, 716 F. Supp. 601, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7752 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Statement of claim for denial of medical care and treatment. — To state a claim of constitutional magnitude for the denial of medical care and treatment, prisoners must show that prison officials were deliberately indifferent to their serious medical needs. Negligence, without deliberately indifferent or wanton conduct, is not cruel and unusual punishment. Hawley v. Evans, 716 F. Supp. 601, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7752 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Fine for cocaine trafficking held constitutional. — Where the defendant was convicted of trafficking cocaine in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31 and was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment and fined $100,000, the fine was not out of proportion to the severity of the crime and not constitutionally infirm either because of its mandatory nature or its amount. Wyatt v. State, 259 Ga. 208, 378 S.E.2d 690, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 195 (1989).

Forfeiture of property. — Case involving the forfeiture of 5.1 acres of land and a dwelling house on the basis of the discovery of 8.8 ounces of marijuana would be remanded to the trial court for consideration in light of the decision in Thorp v. State, 264 Ga. 712, 450 S.E.2d 416 (1994). Evans v. State, 217 Ga. App. 646, 449 S.E.2d 302, 458 S.E.2d 859, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 548 (1995).

In analyzing a claim that forfeiture amounted to an excessive fine, the court should look at the gravity of the offense, as compared with the harshness of the penalty, whether the property seized was close enough to the offense to render it "guilty," and whether the criminal activity involving the property seized was extensive, in terms of time or space. Mitchell v. State, 236 Ga. App. 335, 511 S.E.2d 880, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 159 (1999).

Finding that a portion of real property was used to facilitate drug activities did not make the entire tract of land contraband and, thus, forfeiture of a residence and the 5.2 acres of land upon which it stood was excessive. Rabern v. State, 242 Ga. App. 804, 531 S.E.2d 373, 2000 Ga. App. LEXIS 354 (2000).

Federal drug sentencing statute. — Anti-Drug Abuse Act's (21 U.S.C. § 841 et seq.) punishment for cocaine base offenses did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 8 in light of evidence adducing distinguishing risks and dangers of this drug. United States v. Mosley, 808 F. Supp. 1572, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20964 (N.D. Ga. 1992), aff'd, 51 F.3d 1050, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 6641 (11th Cir. 1995).

A fine representing an amount less than the net profit of an illegal transaction does not violate the Eighth Amendment absent a showing of severe, particularized hardship suffered by defendant. United States v. Elkins, 885 F.2d 775, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 15323 (11th Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1005, 110 S. Ct. 1300, 108 L. Ed. 2d 477, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1069 (1990).

What constitutes punishment of inmates. — Punishment within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 8, is an action by prison guards or a condition of confinement that is applied to an inmate for a penal or disciplinary purpose and is at least apparently authorized or acquiesced in by high prison officials. George v. Evans, 633 F.2d 413, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11190 (5th Cir. 1980).

Where evidence does not show that action by guards is apparently authorized or acquiesced in by high prison officials for a penal or disciplinary purpose, there is no violation of the prisoner's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 8. George v. Evans, 633 F.2d 413, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11190 (5th Cir. 1980).

Due process protection against use of undue force by guard. — Even though a violation of U.S. Const., amend. 8 may not be established, the use of undue force by a prison guard is actionable as a deprivation of due process rights under U.S. Const., amend. 14. George v. Evans, 633 F.2d 413, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11190 (5th Cir. 1980).

Emergency circumstances — i.e., large scale rioting — justified departing from terms of consent decree governing use of a jail. Wilson v. Attaway, 757 F.2d 1227, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28922 (11th Cir. 1985), overruled, United States v. Gonzalez, 107 F.4th 1304, 2024 U.S. App. LEXIS 17813 (11th Cir. 2024).

Where an officer beat an inmate who was handcuffed and shackled, the defense of qualified immunity could not be successfully asserted. Ruble v. King, 911 F. Supp. 1544, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19708 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Where an officer failed to intervene when the officer was aware that another officer was using excessive force on an inmate, the defense of qualified immunity could not be successfully asserted. Ruble v. King, 911 F. Supp. 1544, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19708 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Remedy for mistreatment of prisoner. — Assuming arguendo that a prisoner's allegations of mistreatment demonstrate cruel and unusual punishment, the prisoner still would not be entitled to release from prison, the appropriate remedy being to enjoin continuance of any practices or require correction of any conditions causing the prisoner cruel and unusual punishment. Cook v. Hanberry, 596 F.2d 658, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 14211 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 932, 99 S. Ct. 2866, 61 L. Ed. 2d 301, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 2105 (1979).

Habeas corpus is not available to prisoners complaining only of mistreatment during their legal incarceration. The relief from such unconstitutional practices, if proved, is in the form of equitably imposed restraint, not freedom from otherwise lawful incarceration. Cook v. Hanberry, 592 F.2d 248, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15812 (5th Cir. 1979).

Although openly advocating insubordination in a prison is a serious matter, it does not call for several months or years of harsh confinement in a special disciplinary facility. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Allowable conditions of probation. — The court had the authority to impose as a condition of probation the requirement that defendant wear a fluorescent pink plastic bracelet imprinted with the words "D.U.I. CONVICT." Such a requirement did not impose cruel and unusual punishment or deprive defendant of equal protection and it was not an impermissibly indeterminate condition. Ballenger v. State, 210 Ga. App. 627, 436 S.E.2d 793, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1295 (1993).

Disenfranchisement of persons convicted of certain crimes. — Although Ga. Const. 1945, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. I (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. I, Para. III and Art. II, Sec. II, Para. III) serves to abridge the plaintiff's right to vote, disenfranchisement is a nonpenal exercise of a state's power to regulate the vote and is not cruel and unusual punishment. Kronlund v. Honstein, 327 F. Supp. 71, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13308 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Possession of marijuana. — Code 1933, Ch. 79A-9, prior to Ga. L. 1974, p. 221 (See O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 13, T. 16), concerning the possession of marijuana is not subject to constitutional attack under U.S. Const., amend. 8. Blincoe v. State, 231 Ga. 886, 204 S.E.2d 597, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 1269 (1974).

Punishment for driving after license revoked. — A mandatory one to five-year sentence for driving a motor vehicle after one's license has been revoked under O.C.G.A. § 40-5-58 is neither barbaric nor excessive under U.S. Const., amend. 8. Cox v. State, 241 Ga. 154, 244 S.E.2d 1, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 901 (1978).

Refusal of statute to sell liquor tax stamps or grant liquor license. — A statute which makes it unlawful to possess or sell liquor without obtaining a license and without paying any tax imposed upon such liquor, where the defendant cannot purchase a license or pay the tax because the state refuses to sell such license or revenue stamps, does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 8 or U.S. Const., amend. 14. Akins v. State, 224 Ga. 650, 164 S.E.2d 125, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 885 (1968).

Review. — Where the appellate court did not find the defendant's sentences unconstitutionally excessive, this did not affect the defendant's right to take the defendant's contention to the sentence review board as provided under former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6. Reid v. State, 235 Ga. App. 887, 510 S.E.2d 851, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 9 (1999).

Military jurisdiction to be narrowly construed. — Although trial by a military tribunal deprives one of trial by jury and other constitutional rights, it is not unconstitutional. However, military jurisdiction is restricted to the narrowest limits consistent with the power granted Congress in U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 14. Torres v. Connor, 329 F. Supp. 1025, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10615 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Right to wear one's hair as one sees fit has not been found to be within the periphery of any of our specific constitutional rights. Ashley v. City of Macon, 377 F. Supp. 540, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12602 (M.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 505 F.2d 868, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16769 (5th Cir. 1975).

There is no constitutionally protected right, plainly expressed or within the penumbra, the shadow, of U.S. Const., amend. 1, 8, 9, 10, and 14, to wear one's hair in a public high school in the length and style that suits the wearer. Ashley v. City of Macon, 377 F. Supp. 540, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12602 (M.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 505 F.2d 868, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16769 (5th Cir. 1975).

Forfeiture for drug possession excessive. — Forfeiture of 5.1 acres of land, including a house, based on the recovery of a few immature marijuana plants growing on a small portion of the property was excessive under U.S. Const., amend. 8 and mitigation of the forfeiture was not practicable. State v. Evans, 225 Ga. App. 402, 484 S.E.2d 70, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 407 (1997).

Forfeiture based on gambling activity. — Trial court did not err in issuing interlocutory injunctions and continuing receiverships over store property seized pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-14-7 based on alleged video gambling activity in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-12-22 and racketeering activity under O.C.G.A. § 16-14-3(8) and (9). Remand was required, however, for consideration of whether the forfeitures were excessive fines in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 8.

Patel v. State, 289 Ga. 479, 713 S.E.2d 381, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 548 (2011).

Forfeiture of medical license under federal law. — Forfeiture of the defendant's medical license under 21 U.S.C. § 853 did not constitute an excessive fine in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 8. United States v. Dicter, 198 F.3d 1284, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 33604 (11th Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 828, 121 S. Ct. 77, 148 L. Ed. 2d 40, 2000 U.S. LEXIS 5210 (2000).

Requiring DNA sample from incarcerated convicted felons not punishment. — Former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 (see now O.C.G.A. § 35-3-160) did not violate the Eighth Amendment because the statute, requiring all convicted felons incarcerated in a state correctional facility to provide a sample for DNA analysis to determine the identification characteristics specific to the person, does not impose any form of punishment. Further, the purpose of establishing a DNA databank had been identified, and the methods for obtaining data provided by the statute were not excessive measures in response to the purpose, therefore, without any showing of the use of excessive force that might arguably state a claim of cruel and unusual punishment in obtaining DNA samples through involuntary means, the statute was deemed not penal and the means used to enforce the statute have not been shown to be malicious or grossly disproportionate to the refusal to comply with the statutory mandate. Quarterman v. State, 282 Ga. 383, 651 S.E.2d 32, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 580 (2007).

Incomplete brain maturation not relevant to sentence. — Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective by failing to assert that the state's statutory and constitutional provisions requiring the service of mandatory minimum sentences before consideration for parole regardless of age constituted cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the Eighth Amendment to the United States Constitution because any consideration for Eighth Amendment purposes of incomplete brain maturation due solely to age was inappropriate since the defendant was 20 years old at the time the defendant committed the crime and was sentenced to a term of years rather than death. Sears v. State, 270 Ga. 834, 514 S.E.2d 426, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 306, cert. denied, 528 U.S. 934, 120 S. Ct. 336, 145 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1999 U.S. LEXIS 6663 (1999).

Capital Punishment

Death penalty does not amount to cruel and unusual punishment forbidden by the federal Constitution. Miller v. State, 224 Ga. 627, 163 S.E.2d 730, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 876 (1968).

Punishment of death is not cruel, within the meaning of that word as used in the Constitution. It implies there is something inhuman and barbarous, something more than the mere extinguishment of life. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 82 (1976).

Constitutionality of death penalty. — The punishment of death does not invariably violate the Constitution. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 82 (1976).

Death penalty is not invariably cruel and unusual punishment within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 8. It is not inherently barbaric or an unacceptable mode of punishment for crime; neither is it always disproportionate to the crime for which it is imposed. Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 97 S. Ct. 2861, 53 L. Ed. 2d 982, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 146 (1977).

Lethal injection not cruel and unusual. — Death by lethal injection is not unconstitutional under U.S. Const., amend. 8 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII, both of which prohibit cruel and unusual punishment. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 756, 620 S.E.2d 778, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 523 (2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 3608 (2006).

Trial court did not err in rejecting a defendant's claim that lethal injection was unconstitutional as the defendant proffered no evidence to sustain the claim. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 652 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 9247 (2007).

Defendant's pre-trial motion regarding lethal injection and the defendant's amended motion for a new trial addressing lethal injection were properly denied as the defendant failed to identify any particular aspect of the evidence admitted in the trial court that would require a departure from the prior decisions holding that lethal injection was a constitutional form of execution. Williams v. State, 281 Ga. 87, 635 S.E.2d 146, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 588 (2006), cert. denied, 553 U.S. 1004, 128 S. Ct. 2046, 170 L. Ed. 2d 793, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 3545 (2008).

This state's death penalty statute is not subject to attack under U.S. Const., amend. 8. Coley v. State, 231 Ga. 829, 204 S.E.2d 612, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 1256 (1974).

Power of state courts as to capital sentencing standards. — As long as a state's capital sentencing procedures meet constitutional requirements, the state's courts are free to adopt additional standards governing its capital sentencing procedures. Goodwin v. Balkcom, 501 F. Supp. 317, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16242 (M.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 684 F.2d 794, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 25927 (11th Cir. 1982).

State's duty as to death penalty generally. — If a state wishes to authorize capital punishment it has a constitutional responsibility to tailor and apply its law in a manner that avoids the arbitrary and capricious infliction of the death penalty. Part of a state's responsibility in this regard is to define the crimes for which death may be the sentence in a way that obviates standardless sentencing discretion. Godfrey v. Georgia, 446 U.S. 420, 100 S. Ct. 1759, 64 L. Ed. 2d 398, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 99 (1980).

System of capital punishment that does not clearly define standards to guide the exercise of sentencing discretion is constitutionally intolerable. United States v. Kaiser, 545 F.2d 467, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10529 (5th Cir. 1977).

Death sentencing procedures posing risk of arbitrary and capricious imposition. — The death sentence cannot be imposed under sentencing procedures that create a substantial risk that it will be inflicted in an arbitrary and capricious manner. Goodwin v. Balkcom, 501 F.

Supp. 317, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16242 (M.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 684 F.2d 794, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 25927 (11th Cir. 1982).

Electrocution is not cruel and unusual. — The manner of execution in this state is not unconstitutional and death by electrocution is not repugnant to U.S. Const., amend. 8. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1336 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993), overruled in part, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 155 (2002).

The method of execution in this state, electrocution, does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment. Nelson v. State, 247 Ga. 172, 274 S.E.2d 317, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 609, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 882, 102 S. Ct. 365, 70 L. Ed. 2d 192 (1981); Dix v. Newsome, 584 F. Supp. 1052, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18440 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Electrocution does not inflict unnecessary torture and torment constituting cruel and unusual punishment in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 8 and U.S. Const., amend. 14. McCorquodale v. Balkcom, 525 F. Supp. 408, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15361 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 705 F.2d 1553, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 27256 (11th Cir. 1983); Felker v. Turpin, 101 F.3d 95, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 29925 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 989, 117 S. Ct. 450, 136 L. Ed. 2d 345, 1996 U.S. LEXIS 6969 (1996).

The method of execution in Georgia, electrocution, is not unconstitutional. Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 945, 104 S. Ct. 1930, 80 L. Ed. 2d 475, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 232 (1984).

Electrocution does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the Eighth Amendment. Sears v. State, 270 Ga. 834, 514 S.E.2d 426.

Mitigating factors must be considered in capital cases. — U.S. Const., amend. 8 and U.S. Const., amend. 14 require that the sentencing judge or jury must be allowed to consider, as a mitigating factor, any aspect of a defendant's character or record and any of the circumstances of the offense that the defendant proffers as a basis for a sentence less than death. Chenault v. Stynchcombe, 581 F.2d 444, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 8655 (5th Cir. 1978); Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1336 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993), overruled in part, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 155 (2002); Franklin v. State, 245 Ga. 141, 263 S.E.2d 666, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 721, cert. denied, 447 U.S. 930, 100 S. Ct. 3029, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2103 (1980); Goodwin v. Balkcom, 501 F. Supp. 317, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16242 (M.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 684 F.2d 794, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 25927 (11th Cir. 1982); Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 633 (1981).

Mitigating factors must be considered in all but the rarest kind of capital case. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1336 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993), overruled in part, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 155 (2002); Franklin v. State, 245 Ga. 141, 263 S.E.2d 666, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 721, cert. denied, 447 U.S. 930, 100 S. Ct. 3029, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2103 (1980); Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 633 (1981).

Statute providing for death penalty must allow sentencing body discretion to weigh all aspects of defendant's character and record as well as circumstances of the offense. Green v. State, 246 Ga. 598, 272 S.E.2d 475, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1221 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 936, 101 S. Ct. 1402, 67 L. Ed. 2d 372 (1981).

Implied unanimity requirement on mitigating circumstances. — Court's requiring of a written finding on mitigating circumstances, signed by the foreman, implicitly imposed an improper unanimity requirement on mitigating circumstances in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 8. Brantley v. State, 262 Ga. 786, 427 S.E.2d 758, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 263 (1993).

Mitigating evidence otherwise inadmissible under evidentiary rules.

— The Constitution requires that evidence which would be inadmissible under an evidentiary rule must not automatically be excluded if tendered in a capital case in mitigation of punishment, rather, the potentially mitigating influence of the testimony must be weighed against the harm resulting from the violation of the evidentiary rule, and in close cases the doubt should be resolved in favor of admissibility. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1336 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993), overruled in part, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 155 (2002).

Imposition of the death penalty on circumstantial evidence alone is not unconstitutional. Nelson v. State, 247 Ga. 172, 274 S.E.2d 317, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 609, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 882, 102 S. Ct. 365, 70 L. Ed. 2d 192 (1981).

Effect of Interstate Agreement on Detainers on capital punishment. — A state need not reduce a capital sentence which is authorized under its own laws merely because of the effects of another state's judicial processes, brought about by the operation of the Interstate Agreement on Detainers (see O.C.G.A. T. 42, Ch. 6, Art. 2). Cobb v. State, 244 Ga. 344, 260 S.E.2d 60, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1230 (1979).

Death penalty for capital offenses.

— Evidence was sufficient to show defendant was an active participant in capital offenses so that imposition of a death penalty was not unconstitutional under Enmund v. Florida, 458 U.S. 782, 102 S.

Capital Punishment (Cont'd)

Ct. 3368, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1140 (1982), which rejected the imposition of a death penalty that was based on a conviction for felony-murder. Stanley v. Zant, 697 F.2d 955, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 30642 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1219, 104 S. Ct. 2667, 81 L. Ed. 2d 372, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 2427 (1984).

Death penalty may not be imposed for rape, armed robbery, or kidnapping where victim is not killed. Collins v. State, 239 Ga. 400, 236 S.E.2d 759, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 786, transferred, 143 Ga. App. 583, 239 S.E.2d 232, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2422 (1977).

Rape. — A sentence of death is grossly disproportionate and excessive punishment for the crime of rape and is therefore forbidden by U.S. Const., amend. 8 as cruel and unusual punishment. Coker v. Georgia, 433 U.S. 584, 97 S. Ct. 2861, 53 L. Ed. 2d 982, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 146 (1977).

Felony murder. — The imposition of the death penalty on proof of a felony murder does not lead to the freakish and wanton executions because procedural safeguards have been enacted in order to prevent such abuses and have been held to be constitutionally adequate in that regard. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1336 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993), overruled in part, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 155 (2002).

Because the defendant did not aid and abet a felony but the defendant committed murder, the death sentence for felony murder did not violate the Eighth Amendment. Jefferson v. State, 256 Ga. 821, 353 S.E.2d 468, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 634 (1987); 511 U.S. 1046, 114 S. Ct. 1577, 128 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1994).

Murder. — A sentence to death by electrocution for murder is not cruel and unusual punishment under U.S. Const., amend. 8. Trimble v. State, 220 Ga. 229, 138 S.E.2d 274, 1964 Ga. LEXIS 499 (1964).

The death penalty for the crime of murder is not cruel and unusual punishment. Whisman v. State, 221 Ga. 460, 145 S.E.2d 499, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 495 (1965).

Infliction of death as punishment of murder is not without justification and thus is not unconstitutionally severe. Williams v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 1276, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6460 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed, 489 U.S. 1094, 109 S. Ct. 1579, 103 L. Ed. 2d 931, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1647 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1090, 110 S. Ct. 1836, 108 L. Ed. 2d 965, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1953 (1990).

Standing to challenge death penalty and striking of death-scrupled jurors. — If the defendant is not sentenced to death the defendant has no standing to challenge the constitutionality of the death penalty or the striking of jurors unequivocally opposed to it. Lindsey v. State, 234 Ga. 874, 218 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1311 (1975).

Failure to specify whether "murder" verdict was for malice murder or felony murder, thus leaving it unclear on face of verdict whether or not defendant was found to be a mere aider and abettor in the underlying felony and thus not susceptible to the death penalty, did not render death penalty erroneous where the evidence clearly indicated defendant's planning of and direct participation in the murder. Stevens v. Kemp, 254 Ga. 228, 327 S.E.2d 185, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 631 (1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1031, 106 S. Ct. 1237, 89 L. Ed. 2d 346, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 716 (1986).

Capital sentencing instructions which do not clearly guide a jury in its understanding of mitigating circumstances and their purpose, and of the option to recommend a life sentence although aggravating circumstances are found, violate the Eighth Amendment. Goodwin v. Balkcom, 684 F.2d 794, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 25927 (11th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1098, 103 S. Ct. 1798, 76 L. Ed. 2d 364, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 4035 (1983).

Prosecutors' discretion. — Defendant's claim that the prosecutor's authority to choose in which cases to seek the death penalty permitted the possibility of an arbitrary and capricious abuse of discretion and was unconstitutional was rejected as prosecutors did not have unfettered discretion to seek the death penalty, and challenges to the Georgia legislature's determination that district attorneys should have the discretion to decide whether a murder defendant met the statutory criteria for the death penalty and whether to pursue the death penalty when a defendant was eligible had been repeatedly rejected. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 652 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 9247 (2007).

Express jury finding that defendant killed, or intended to kill, not required. — There is no constitutional requirement that the jury be instructed on, or make an express finding concerning, the requirement that, in order for the defendant to be given the death penalty, the defendant must have killed, attempted to kill, or intended to kill in order for the death penalty to be imposed. However, while this determination may be made by state trial or appellate court judges, instructing the jury thereon is the better practice. Cargill v. State, 255 Ga. 616, 340 S.E.2d 891, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 616 (1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1101, 107 S. Ct. 1328, 94 L. Ed. 2d 180, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 887 (1987), overruled in part, Manzano v. State, 282 Ga. 557, 651 S.E.2d 661, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 591 (2007), overruled in part as stated in Jacobs v. State, 299 Ga. App. 368, 683 S.E.2d 64, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 885 (2009).

No merit to enumeration of error that death penalty is unconstitutional. — There is no merit in an enumeration of error contending that the death penalty is cruel and unusual punishment and is thus proscribed by both the United States and the Georgia Constitutions. Gilreath v. State, 247 Ga. 814, 279 S.E.2d 650, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 873 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 2258, 72 L. Ed. 2d 862 (1982).

Georgia death penalty scheme is constitutional. Zant v. Stephens, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 79 (1983).

U.S. Const., amend. 8 prohibits states from inflicting the death penalty upon a prisoner who is insane; however, consideration of the defendant's present sanity was premature because the defendant's execution was not imminent. Hance v. Kemp, 258 Ga. 649, 373 S.E.2d 184, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 417 (1988), cert. denied, 490 U.S. 1012, 109 S. Ct. 1658, 104 L. Ed. 2d 172, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1679 (1989).

Racial considerations in capital sentencing. — A complex statistical study that indicated a risk that racial considerations enter into capital sentencing determinations did not prove that a particular defendant's capital sentence was unconstitutional under the Eighth Amendment or the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment. McCleskey v. Kemp, 481 U.S. 279, 107 S. Ct. 1756, 95 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 1817 (1987).

Statistical evidence as to discrimination in imposition of death penalty. — Where the defendant proffered statistical evidence that the death penalty statute was applied in an arbitrary and racially discriminatory manner and with inadequate appellate review, the district court was not required to hold an evidentiary hearing in the absence of the proffer demonstrating a reasonable possibility that the evidence might compel an inference of purposeful discrimination. Ross v. Kemp, 756 F.2d 1483, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28904 (11th Cir. 1985).

A statistical study, while showing a race-of-the-victim relationship with the imposition of the death sentence discernible in enough cases to be statistically significant in the system as a whole, did not support a ruling that the system as a whole was arbitrary and capricious, and was insufficient to show that the defendant's death sentence was determined by the race of his victim, or even that the race of his victim contributed to the imposition of the penalty. McCleskey v. Kemp, 753 F.2d 877, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28073 (11th Cir. 1985), aff'd, 481 U.S. 279, 107 S. Ct. 1756, 95 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 1817 (1987).

Death penalty is not per se cruel and unusual in violation of U.S. Const.,

amend. 8. McCleskey v. Zant, 580 F. Supp. 338, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19860 (N.D. Ga. 1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 753 F.2d 877, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28073 (11th Cir. 1985).

Imposition of death penalty upon minor. — The imposition of the death penalty was not cruel and unusual punishment per se simply because defendant was a minor at the time of the offense. High v. Zant, 250 Ga. 693, 300 S.E.2d 654, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1021 (1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1220, 104 S. Ct. 2669, 81 L. Ed. 2d 374, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 280 (1984); Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 125 S. Ct. 1183, 161 L. Ed. 2d 1, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 2200 (2005), (eighth amendment forbids imposition of death penalty on juvenile offenders under age 18).

The Constitution does not prohibit a state from imposing the death penalty on one who, while 17 years old, has intentionally and viciously taken a life in cold blood. High v. Kemp, 819 F.2d 988, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 7121 (11th Cir. 1987); Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 125 S. Ct. 1183, 161 L. Ed. 2d 1, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 2200 (2005), (eighth amendment forbids imposition of death penalty on juvenile offenders under age 18).

Imposition of death penalty on co-defendant. — U.S. Const., amend. 8 does not authorize imposition of the death penalty upon a person who has participated in a robbery that results in a killing, if such person is not the person who does the killing, attempts to kill, or intends that the killing take place or that lethal force will be employed. Jones v. Francis, 252 Ga. 60, 312 S.E.2d 300, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 603, cert. denied, 469 U.S. 873, 105 S. Ct. 228, 83 L. Ed. 2d 157, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 359 (1984).

Where the defendant was not only present at the scene of the murder and participated in the assault and rape of two children, but also assisted the codefendant in stripping the children and binding their hands, then turned the defendant's car around in the road, presumably to facilitate a quick getaway and stood by the codefendant in the road while the latter shot the victims, the jury reasonably found that the defendant was an active party in the murder, and the death sentence was not disproportionate to the crime. Johnson v. Kemp, 585 F. Supp. 1496, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17338 (S.D. Ga. 1984), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 759 F.2d 1503, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 29570 (11th Cir. 1985).

Although the defendant, while not the prime mover in the murder, had a valid death penalty pending against the defendant, while the defendant's coperpetrator, arguably the triggerman in the crime, did not currently have a death sentence, the defendant's sentence was not ipso facto disproportionate, in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 8, as the focus of a capital sentencing procedure should be on the culpability of the individual defendant. Johnson v. Kemp, 585 F. Supp. 1496, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17338 (S.D. Ga. 1984), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 759 F.2d 1503, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 29570 (11th Cir. 1985).

Jurors not automatically against capital punishment cannot be systematically excluded. — A jury is improperly selected where persons who do not make it unmistakably clear that they will automatically vote against capital punishment are systematically excluded from the jury, in violation of the sixth, eighth and fourteenth amendments. Potts v. Zant, 575 F. Supp. 374, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20217 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 526, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 22119 (11th Cir. 1984).

Belief by jurors that death sentence will be carried out. — Capital defendants possess no Eighth Amendment right to a jury that imposes a death sentence believing that a sentence of death will result in the defendant's execution. Ingram v. Zant, 26 F.3d 1047, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 17171 (11th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1167, 115 S. Ct. 1137, 130 L. Ed. 2d 1097, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 1284 (1995).

Each statutory aggravating circumstance under the death penalty statute must satisfy a constitutional standard derived from the principles of Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S. Ct. 2726, 33 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1972), itself, for a system could have standards so vague that they would fail adequately to channel the sentencing decision patterns of juries with the result that a pattern of arbitrary and capricious sentencing like that found unconstitutional in Furman, supra could occur. Zant v. Stephens, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 79 (1983).

An aggravating circumstance must genuinely narrow the class of persons eligible for the death penalty and must reasonably justify the imposition of a more severe sentence on the defendant compared to others found guilty of murder. Zant v. Stephens, 462 U.S. 862, 103 S. Ct. 2733, 77 L. Ed. 2d 235, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 79 (1983).

As long as one valid statutory aggravating circumstance exists in a death penalty case, a federal habeas court should not grant relief unless the evidence or factor in question was constitutionally inappropriate. Collins v. Francis, 728 F.2d 1322, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 24501 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 963, 105 S. Ct. 361, 83 L. Ed. 2d 297, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 392 (1984).

Prosecutor's recital to jury from United States Supreme Court and Georgia Supreme Court cases during the penalty phase of a case, with the purpose of influencing the jury to impose the death penalty, violates right to a rational sentencing hearing and right to due process of law as guaranteed by the eighth and fourteenth amendments. Potts v. Zant, 575 F. Supp. 374, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20217 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 526, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 22119 (11th Cir. 1984).

Fundamentally unfair to suggest impropriety of mercy. — In the sentencing phase of a capital murder prosecution, in which the state's case against the defendant was made almost completely by the codefendant, the prosecutor's extremely improper use of century-old Georgia Supreme Court cases to suggest the impropriety of mercy rendered the sentencing proceeding fundamentally unfair. Drake v. Kemp, 762 F.2d 1449, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30624 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 478 U.S. 1020, 106 S. Ct. 3333, 92 L. Ed. 2d 738, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 2737 (1986).

Jury's function as primary sentencer in capital cases. — Although the prosecutor made statements regarding the "important responsibility" of the appellate court, which allegedly encouraged the jury to abandon its crucial function as primary sentencer, the trial court instructed the jury to disregard the prosecutor's statement and advised the jury that the statement was "highly improper" and that the case ended with the jury's decision. This admonishment was sufficient to correct any improper impression that the prosecutor may have sought to impart. McCorquodale v. Kemp, 829 F.2d 1035, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 17413 (11th Cir. 1987).

Permissible instructions concerning aggravating circumstances. — The trial judge may instruct the jury that if it finds one or more statutory aggravating circumstances it may also consider any other mitigating or aggravating circumstances in determining whether or not the death penalty should be imposed, provided that the evidence bears on the defendant's prior record, or circumstances of the defendant's offense. McCleskey v. Zant, 580 F. Supp. 338, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19860 (N.D. Ga. 1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 753 F.2d 877, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28073 (11th Cir. 1985).

Capital sentencing instructions which do not clearly guide a jury in its understanding of mitigating circumstances and their purpose violate this and the fourteenth amendments. Finney v. Zant, 709 F.2d 643, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25936 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled in part, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22736 (11th Cir. 1986).

Under Georgia's death sentencing scheme, the eighth and fourteenth amendments require that the trial judge clearly and explicitly instruct the jury about mitigating circumstances and the option to recommend against death. Where the instruction, taken as a whole, at best was contradictory and confusing as to the jury's function if it determined that an aggravating circumstance was present, as the jury was told that upon finding an aggravating circumstance its verdict would be death, but it was possible to lift isolated phrases from the jury instruction and find in those phrases an indication that a death sentence need not have inexorably flowed from a finding of an aggravated circumstance, on the whole, the instruction fell far short of providing clear and explicit information to the jury that it had the option not to recommend a sentence of death and defendant's death sentence was therefore set aside. Moore v. Kemp, 809 F.2d 702, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 1217 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1054, 107 S. Ct. 2192, 95 L. Ed. 2d 847, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 2175 (1987), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1091, 109 S. Ct. 1560, 103 L. Ed. 2d 863, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1562 (1989).

Instruction in death penalty proceeding must explain life sentence alternative. — It is error to provide a sentencing phase instruction in a death penalty case, which fails to explain that a life sentence may be recommended even in the presence of statutory aggravating circumstances. Stynchcombe v. Floyd, 252 Ga. 113, 311 S.E.2d 828, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 619 (1984).

Jury must be given standards to guide and limit its discretion whether to recommend life imprisonment or death. Goodwin v. Balkcom, 501 F. Supp. 317, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16242 (M.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 684 F.2d 794, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 25927 (11th Cir. 1982).

Because one of the aggravating circumstances used to support a death sentence was invalidated by the Georgia Supreme Court, its failure to reverse the death sentence based on that invalid aggravating circumstance deprived the defendant of the defendant's rights under the eighth and fourteenth amendments. Potts v. Zant, 575 F. Supp. 374, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20217 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 526, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 22119 (11th Cir. 1984).

"Unfettered discretion" of clemency constitutional. — The presence of "unfettered discretion" in the clemency process does not render the imposition of the death penalty of the defendant arbitrary and capricious in violation of the Eighth Amendment. The discretion involved at the clemency stage can never cause the imposition of the death sentence; it serves only as an act of grace to relieve that sentence even when the sentence has been legally imposed. Smith v. Snow, 722 F.2d 630, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 14518 (11th Cir. 1983).

Effect of jury finding of malice murder on court's review of death sentence. — A jury's decision finding the defendant guilty of malice murder foreclosed the court from considering the argument that the imposition of the death penalty was unconstitutional because the defendant aided and abetted a felony but did not kill, attempt to kill, or intend that a killing take place. Green v. Zant, 738 F.2d 1529, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 20071 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1098, 105 S. Ct. 607, 83 L. Ed. 2d 716, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 471 (1984).

Scope of federal habeas corpus review of death sentences. — If a federal habeas court concludes that the Georgia Supreme Court's determination following its "proportionality" review of a death sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35 "shocks the conscience," it is required to remand the case to allow the state court to resentence the petitioner. A federal habeas court may not conduct a de novo proportionality review and thereby inject itself into the state sentencing procedure. Its review remains confined to whether the state sentencing procedure both on its face and as applied violates the eighth and fourteenth amendments. Moore v. Balkcom, 716 F.2d 1511, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 16411 (11th Cir. 1983).

Defendant in a capital murder trial must be allowed to proffer to the jury any evidence of mitigation submitted as a basis for a sentence less than death. Westbrook v. Zant, 704 F.2d 1487, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 27982 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled in part, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22736 (11th Cir. 1986).

Grandparent's testimony of not wishing to see a grandchild die is admissible in mitigation at the sentencing phase of a death penalty case. Romine v. State, 251 Ga. 208, 305 S.E.2d 93, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 765 (1983).

State's duty to fund capital defendant's attempt to present mitigating evidence. — A capital defendant's right to present evidence in mitigation places an affirmative duty on the state to provide the funds necessary for production of that evidence. Westbrook v. Zant, 704 F.2d 1487, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 27982 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled in part, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22736 (11th Cir. 1986).

Court need not point out specific mitigating circumstances. — In making it clear to the jury that mitigating circumstances must be considered, there is no requirement that the trial court point out specific mitigating circumstances which may be present in a defendant's case and it is also unnecessary to include the magic words "mitigating circumstances" in the charge. Where Georgia juries are instructed in sentencing to consider all the facts and circumstances which have appeared at both phases of the trial, this necessarily includes any mitigating circumstances which defendant has shown, or argued, or both. Zant v. Gaddis, 247 Ga. 717, 279 S.E.2d 219, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 841, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1037, 102 S. Ct. 579, 70 L. Ed. 2d 483, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4458 (1981).

State must furnish the services of a psychologist or psychiatrist in those capital cases deemed appropriate by the state trial court. Westbrook v. Zant, 704 F.2d 1487, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 27982 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled in part, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22736 (11th Cir. 1986).

Appointment of psychologist properly denied. — Where request by indigent in capital murder case for appointment of psychologist or psychiatrist was not for purpose of determining the indigent's sanity or competency to stand trial but rather to reveal the indigent's inability due to prolonged incarceration to conform the indigent's conduct so as to constitute a mitigating factor against a death penalty sentence, trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the request. Westbrook v. Zant, 704 F.2d 1487, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 27982 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled in part, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22736 (11th Cir. 1986).

Death sentence properly applied

where rape victim killed. — The application of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(7) (imposition of death sentence) to a defendant who raped the victim before murdering the victim did not violate the defendant's Eighth Amendment rights. Johnson v. Kemp, 759 F.2d 1503, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 29570 (11th Cir. 1985).

Death penalty in domestic murder cases. — Although lesser sentences than death are frequently imposed in domestic murder cases, it does not follow that the death penalty would not be authorized for the murder of one spouse by another under any circumstances. Some of the more vile, horrible, or inhuman homicides have been perpetrated by family members against one another. Godfrey v. State, 248 Ga. 616, 284 S.E.2d 422, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 1133 (1981), cert. denied, 456 U.S. 919, 102 S. Ct. 1778, 72 L. Ed. 2d 180 (1982).

The death penalty does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment when imposed for a domestic homicide. Tyler v. Kemp, 755 F.2d 741, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28399 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 474 U.S. 1026, 106 S. Ct. 582, 88 L. Ed. 2d 564, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 4835 (1985), overruled in part, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22736 (11th Cir. 1986).

Resentencing from concurrent sentences including death to consecutive life sentences. — Where the state trial court originally sentenced defendant to death for a kidnapping and to life imprisonment for armed robbery, presumably to run concurrently, but the death sentence was set aside on direct appeal, and the case was remanded to the trial court for resentencing on the kidnapping count, and, upon resentencing, the trial court imposed a second life sentence for the kidnapping, specifically directing that it was to run consecutively to the original life sentence for the armed robbery, the trial court did not impose a harsher sentence after remand than that originally imposed in violation of the eighth and fourteenth amendments, since a death sentence, even when imposed concurrently with a life sentence, is more severe than two life sentences, whether imposed concurrently or consecutively to each other. Thomas v. Newsome, 821 F.2d 1550,

Capital Punishment (Cont'd)

1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 9637 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 967, 108 S. Ct. 461, 98 L. Ed. 2d 401, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 4983 (1987).

When the sentencing phase of a death penalty case is retried by a jury other than the one which determined guilt, evidence presented by the defense, as well as evidence presented by the state, may not be excluded on the ground that it would only go to the guilt or innocence of the defendant. Although a resentencing trial will have no effect on any previous convictions, the parties are entitled to offer evidence relating to circumstances of the crime. Blankenship v. State, 251 Ga. 621, 308 S.E.2d 369, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 941 (1983).

Black defendant's death sentence for the murder of a white person did not violate the eighth and fourteenth amendments, where, although the jurors possessed some racial prejudices, and some more so than others, defendant did not show that the jurors, either individually or as a whole, were influenced by prejudices that would make them favor the death penalty for a black person who murdered a white person. Dobbs v. Zant, 720 F. Supp. 1566, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10805 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 946 F.2d 1519, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 25048 (11th Cir. 1991).

Racial prejudice claim did not arise from the fact that a defendant was black and the victim was white, although certain of the jurors' statements revealed racial prejudice, no juror stated that they viewed blacks as more prone to violence than whites or as morally inferior to whites, and although the trial judge and defense lawyer referred to the defendant as "colored" and "colored boy", because the defense counsel did not express those personal views at trial, and neither the lawyer nor the trial judge decided the defendant's penalty. Dobbs v. Zant, 963 F.2d 1403, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 33472 (11th Cir. 1991), rev'd, 506 U.S. 357, 113 S. Ct. 835, 122 L. Ed. 2d 103, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 843 (1993).

Remarks minimizing jurors' role in death sentence. — Defendant was entitled to habeas corpus relief, where the prosecutor minimized the jurors' responsibility by telling them that the sole responsibility for the death sentence lay on defendant who "signed [the defendant's] own death warrant" and that they were "merely a cog in the criminal process," and the court overruled defendant's objection without explanation. Buttrum v. Black, 721 F. Supp. 1268, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11272 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 908 F.2d 695, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 12655 (11th Cir. 1990).

No prohibition against executing mentally ill but competent defendant. — Defendant, who was not found by the jury to be mentally ill, was not entitled to have the death sentence vacated on mental illness grounds, as O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 did not preclude a death sentence on mental illness grounds, and there was no constitutional prohibition under U.S. Const., amend. 8 or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII against a death sentence for a competent but mentally ill defendant. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 756, 620 S.E.2d 778, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 523 (2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671, 2006 U.S. LEXIS 3608 (2006).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose. — The specific constitutional intent of U.S. Const., amend. 9 is that the specific mention of certain rights in U.S. Const., amend. 1 through 8 not be interpreted as a denial that others are protected. United States v. Michael, 622 F.2d 744, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15331 (5th Cir. 1980).

Right to wear one's hair as one sees fit has not been found to be within the periphery of any of our specific constitutional rights. Ashley v. City of Macon, 377 F. Supp. 540, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12602 (M.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 505 F.2d 868,

1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16769 (5th Cir. 1975).

There is no constitutionally protected right, plainly expressed or within the penumbra, the shadow, of U.S. Const., amends. 1, 8, 10, and 14 and U.S. Const., amend. 9, to wear one's hair in a public high school in the length and style that suits the wearer. Ashley v. City of Macon, 377 F. Supp. 540, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12602 (M.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 505 F.2d 868, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16769 (5th Cir. 1975).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

U.S. Const., amend. 10 states but a truism that all is retained which has not been surrendered. United States v. Darby, 312 U.S. 100, 61 S. Ct. 451, 85 L. Ed. 609, 1941 U.S. LEXIS 1222 (1941), overruled in part as stated in Palotai v. University of Maryland College Park, 959 F. Supp. 714, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9930 (D. Md. 1997), overruled in part as stated in, Treasurer of N.J. v. United States Dep’t of the Treasury, 684 F.3d 382, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 13143 (3d Cir. 2012).

But while U.S. Const., amend. 10 has been characterized as a truism, stating merely that all is retained which has not been surrendered, it is not without significance. The amendment expressly declares the constitutional policy that Congress may not exercise power in a fashion that impairs the states’ integrity or their ability to function effectively in a federal system. City of Macon v. Marshall, 439 F. Supp. 1209, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13232 (M.D. Ga. 1977).

Federalism does not preclude cooperative action between the two sovereigns when the interests of both state and nation are thereby served. United States ex rel. Gereau v. Henderson, 526 F.2d 889, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 12958 (5th Cir. 1976).

Does not limit means by which granted powers are exercised. — U.S. Const., amend. 10 has been construed as not depriving the national government of authority to resort to all means for the exercise of a granted power which are appropriate and plainly adapted to the permitted end. United States v. Darby, 312 U.S. 100, 61 S. Ct. 451, 85 L. Ed. 609, 1941 U.S. LEXIS 1222 (1941), overruled in part as stated in Palotai v. University of Maryland College Park, 959 F. Supp. 714, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9930 (D. Md. 1997), overruled in part as stated in, Treasurer of N.J. v. United States Dep’t of the Treasury, 684 F.3d 382, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 13143 (3d Cir. 2012).

Effect on exercise of commerce power. — U.S. Const., amend. 10 does not operate upon a valid exercise of power delegated to Congress by the commerce clause, U.S. Const., Art. I, Sec. 8, Cl. 3. United States v. Collier, 478 F.2d 268, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10182 (5th Cir. 1973).

Minimum wage. — The establishment by Congress of a minimum wage is a valid regulation of interstate commerce and does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 10. Morgan v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 32 F. Supp. 617, 1940 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3158 (D. Ga. 1940).

While Congress cannot directly command or force a state or municipality to comply with federal wage and hour concepts, it may, pursuant to the spending clause of the Constitution, fix the terms and conditions upon which money from the United States Treasury will be allotted and disbursed to the states and their political subdivisions. City of Macon v. Marshall, 439 F. Supp. 1209, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13232 (M.D. Ga. 1977).

Application of the Fair Labor Standards Act, 29 U.S.C. § 201 et seq., to a county is not prevented by U.S. Const., amend. 10. Prickett v. DeKalb County, 92 F. Supp. 2d 1357, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18139 (N.D. Ga. 2000), aff’d in part and rev’d in part, 254 F.3d 74, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 15279 (11th Cir. 2001).

Conflict of civil rights and police powers in regulation of business. — Civil rights do not authorize the operation of a business within a municipality in violation of ordinances enacted under police power and for the welfare of the community. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15272 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff’d, 482 F.2d 280, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8695 (5th Cir. 1973).

Mere fact that only one party operating a business is affected by a regulation designed to localize the operation of such business in a certain district in the city does not show arbitrary and unreasonable or unjust discrimination in violation of organic rights. 106 Forsyth

Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15272 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8695 (5th Cir. 1973).

State and local zoning laws and ordinances generally. — The power and necessity for state legislatures and municipal governments to impose restrictions through zoning laws and ordinances is no longer subject to question. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15272 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8695 (5th Cir. 1973).

Test of constitutionality of zoning laws and ordinances. — A zoning statute or ordinance should not be declared unconstitutional unless its provisions are clearly arbitrary and unreasonable, having no substantial relation to the public health, safety, morals, or general welfare. And the exercise of police power in this regard must be upheld if any state of facts either known or which could be reasonably assumed affords support for it. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15272 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8695 (5th Cir. 1973).

Regulation of motion picture theaters under the police power. — Motion picture theaters, like filling stations and whiskey stores are not immune from regulation under the police power. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15272 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8695 (5th Cir. 1973).

The right to disseminate motion pictures is not absolute. It does not mean that any motion picture can be distributed at any time, at any place, and under any circumstances. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15272 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8695 (5th Cir. 1973).

Rights under U.S. Const., amend. 1, as they attach to commercial movies, are not so fundamental as to be immune from valid regulation under the police power, particularly where the restraint upon such movies is relatively minor and the public interest to be protected is substantial. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15272 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8695 (5th Cir. 1973).

Right to wear one's hair as one sees fit has not been found to be within the periphery of any of our specific constitutional rights. Ashley v. City of Macon, 377 F. Supp. 540, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12602 (M.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 505 F.2d 868, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16769 (5th Cir. 1975).

There is no constitutionally protected right, plainly expressed or within the penumbra, the shadow, of U.S. Const., amends. 1, 8, 9, 14 and U.S. Const., amend. 10, to wear one's hair in a public high school in the length and style that suits the wearer. Ashley v. City of Macon, 377 F. Supp. 540, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12602 (M.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 505 F.2d 868, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16769 (5th Cir. 1975).

31 U.S.C. §§ 462, 463, providing for discharge, by payment in legal tender, of obligations for payment in gold or any particular coin or currency, or in money of the United States measured thereby, of the then standard weight and fineness, is not unconstitutional as in violation of U.S. Const., Art. I, Sec. 8, as the exercise of a power not delegated to the Congress, nor in violation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 5 or U.S. Const., amend. 10. Smith v. Bukofzer, 180 Ga. 585, 180 S.E. 358, 1935 Ga. LEXIS 493 (1935).

U.S. Const., amend. 10 standing alone houses no constitutional guarantees of freedom. Metz v. McKinley, 583 F. Supp. 683, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19160 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 747 F.2d 709, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 17517 (11th Cir. 1984).

Regulation of airplane flights. — While the right to regulate and control the flight of airplanes in interstate commerce is vested in the federal government under the commerce clause of the federal Constitution, the federal government cannot invade the rights of the people of the sovereign states so as to regulate them as between themselves. This governmental function and power has not been granted to the federal government but is reserved in the states by U.S. Const., amend. 10.

Owen v. City of Atlanta, 157 Ga. App. 354, 277 S.E.2d 338, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1818, aff'd, 248 Ga. 299, 282 S.E.2d 906, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 1004 (1981).

Federal provisions, 11 U.S.C. § 724, governing the priority of liens in bankruptcy cases and effecting a subordination of city, county, and state tax liens, does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 10. Flatau v. Jackson (In re Cropper Co.), 63 B.R. 874, 1986 Bankr. LEXIS 6238 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 1986).

Dismissal of federal antidiscriminatory statutory action against state deemed adjudication on merits. — A federal district court's dismissal of a case with prejudice, on the grounds that a federal antidiscrimination statute cannot be applied against the states, is an adjudication on the merits, and not a jurisdictional disposition. Accordingly, the litigant is barred from relitigating the matter in state court. Similarly, a civil rights claim against the state alleging a violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 is barred by the doctrine of res judicata, because it could and should have been presented to the original federal court. Morgan v. Department of Offender Rehabilitation, 166 Ga. App. 611, 305 S.E.2d 130, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3254 (1983).

Federal statute prohibiting firearm possession. — Federal statute prohibiting anyone convicted of a domestic violence misdemeanor from possessing or receiving a firearm did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 10. National Ass'n of Gov't Employees v. Barrett, 968 F. Supp. 1564, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9407 (N.D. Ga. 1997), aff'd sub nom. Hiley v. Barrett, 155 F.3d 1276, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 23253 (11th Cir. 1998).

Forfeiture of medical license under federal law. — Forfeiture of a defendant's medical license under 21 U.S.C. § 853 did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 10. United States v. Dieter, 198 F.3d 1284, 1999 U.S. App. LEXIS 33604 (11th Cir. 1999), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 828, 121 S. Ct. 77, 148 L. Ed. 2d 40, 2000 U.S. LEXIS 5210 (2000).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose. — The very object and purpose of U.S. Const., amend. 11 is to prevent the indignity of subjecting a state to the coercive process of judicial tribunals at the instance of private parties. Ramsey v. Hamilton, 181 Ga. 365, 182 S.E. 392, 1935 Ga. LEXIS 94 (1935).

U.S. Const., amend. 11 grants a state immunity from suits by an individual. Turner v. Ledbetter, 906 F.2d 606, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 12049 (11th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 928, 111 S. Ct. 2041, 114 L. Ed. 2d 125, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 2769 (1991).

How amendment to be construed. — In order to secure the manifest purpose of the constitutional exemption guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 11, it should be interpreted not literally and too narrowly, but with the breadth and largeness necessary to enable it to accomplish its purpose; and must be held to cover not only suits brought against a state by name, but those against its officers, agents, and representatives, where the state, though not named, is the real party against which the relief is asked and the judgment will operate. Ramsey v. Hamilton, 181 Ga. 365, 182 S.E. 392, 1935 Ga. LEXIS 94 (1935).

Georgia Attorney General lacks statutory authority to waive the state’s eleventh amendment immunity from suit; only the legislature can authorize a waiver of sovereign immunity. Ramey v. Ga. Dep’t of Corr., 153 F. Supp. 2d 1382, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12883 (M.D. Ga. 2001).

Standing of county in federal court. — A political subdivision of this state, such as the DeKalb County School District and its Board of Education, does not have standing to maintain a suit against the state in federal court for a breach of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. DeKalb County Sch. Dist. v. Schrenko, 109 F.3d 680, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 6429 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 1015, 118 S. Ct. 601, 139 L. Ed. 2d 489, 1997 U.S. LEXIS 7366 (1997).

Partial dismissal permitted. — Federal courts may dismiss claims which run afoul of U.S. Const., amend. 11 without dismissing other claims involved in the case. Brown v. Composite State Bd. of Medical Exmrs., 960 F. Supp. 301, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4064 (M.D. Ga. 1997).

Federal court had jurisdiction over state agency. — The Georgia Department of Transportation was subject to jurisdiction of the federal court in an action by citizens seeking a preliminary injunction against a federally-funded road widening project that involved removal of a historically significant oak tree. Hatmaker v. Georgia DOT ex rel. Shackelford, 973 F. Supp. 1047, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21785 (M.D. Ga. 1995), dismissed, 973 F. Supp. 1058, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18510 (M.D. Ga. 1997).

Determination of dischargeability of student loan. — An adversary proceeding to determine the dischargeability of a student loan which, if successful, would restrain the defendant state from collecting the student loan debt at issue constitutes a suit for eleventh amendment purposes. Wilson v. South Carolina State Educ. Assistant Auth., 258 B.R. 303, 2001 Bankr. LEXIS 57 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 2001).

Immunity applies to awards pay- able from state treasury. — The doctrine of sovereign immunity prohibits a monetary award when the amount of that award would be paid from the state treasury. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975); Fouche v. Jekyll Island-State Park Auth., 713 F.2d 1518, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 24131 (11th Cir. 1983).

U.S. Const., amend. 11 is, in effect, the prohibition of an award of damages which must be paid out of the state treasury. Davis v. Griffin-Spalding County Bd. of Educ., 445 F. Supp. 1048, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15029 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Retroactive monetary relief against a state. — U.S. Const., amend. 11 restricts the power of the federal courts to order retroactive monetary relief against a state. Davis v. Griffin-Spalding County Bd. of Educ., 445 F. Supp. 1048, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15029 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Because an award of costs does not compensate the plaintiff for the injury that first brought the plaintiff into court, such an award does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 11's proscription against awards of "retroactive" relief against the state. Georgia Ass'n of Retarded Citizens v. McDaniel, 855 F.2d 794, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 12870 (11th Cir. 1988).

For the purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 11, there is no reason for distinguishing between actual costs and interest on those costs that result from a lengthy appellate process. Georgia Ass'n of Retarded Citizens v. McDaniel, 855 F.2d 794, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 12870 (11th Cir. 1988).

Suits against administrative agencies of the state may be instituted, without making the state a party and without its consent, where they are seeking to enforce an unconstitutional statute or a valid law in an unconstitutional manner. Davis v. Cook, 55 F. Supp. 1004, 1944 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2343 (D. Ga. 1944).

Suit against agency and officials. — Eleventh amendment barred lawsuit by Medicaid recipients seeking a portion of a tobacco settlement against state agency; however, the more difficult issue of whether the eleventh amendment barred the lawsuit insofar as the state officials were concerned was not addressed since the issue lacked merit anyway. McClendon v. Ga. Dep't of Cmty. Health, 261 F.3d 1252, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 18566 (11th Cir. 2001).

Suits against state officers. — A suit against individuals for the purpose of preventing them as officers of state from enforcing an unconstitutional enactment to the injury of the rights of the plaintiff, is not a suit against the state within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 11. Davis v. Cook, 55 F. Supp. 1004, 1944 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2343 (D. Ga. 1944).

A suit to restrain unconstitutional action threatened by an individual who is a state officer is not a suit against the state. Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. Redwine, 342 U.S. 299, 72 S. Ct. 321, 96 L. Ed. 335, 1952 U.S. LEXIS 2483 (1952).

Suit to redress unconstitutional action by state officials will lie in federal courts. Peacock v. Riggsbee, 309 F. Supp. 542, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12920 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Individual officers of a state may be sued when they act unconstitutionally under color of state law. Neal v. Georgia, 469 F.2d 446, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 6827 (5th Cir. 1972).

Suits against state officials to enjoin them from invading constitutional rights are not forbidden by U.S. Const., amend. 11. Burnham v. Department of Pub. Health, 349 F. Supp. 1335, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12449 (N.D. Ga. 1972), rev'd, 503 F.2d 1319, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 6149 (5th Cir. 1974).

State officials may be sued in federal court on the basis that the state statutes under which they are acting are unconstitutional. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

A district attorney and assistant district attorney were acting as state officials, rather than county officials, and were entitled to immunity under U.S. Const., amend. 11. McClendon v. May, 37 F. Supp. 2d 1371, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1023 (S.D. Ga. 1999), aff'd, 212 F.3d 599, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 12368 (11th Cir. 2000).

Suit against state officers acting in individual capacities. — Negligence suit was against state employees in both their official and individual capacities where the complaint referred to the DOT and its agents, listing the officials individually by name, nothing in the pleadings or pretrial order said the officials were sued in their "official capacity" only, and neither party took any step during the litigation that was inconsistent with the employees being sued in their individual capacities. Hobbs v. Roberts, 999 F.2d 1526, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 22404 (11th Cir. 1993).

Actions brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. — The fourteenth amendment does not supersede the eleventh amendment in actions alleging violations of 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Section five of the fourteenth amendment authorizes Congress to override eleventh amendment immunity to the extent necessary to enforce legislation designed to implement the substantive provisions of the fourteenth amendment, but it is well settled that § 1983 does not constitute an exercise of that authority. Thomas v. Devries, 834 F. Supp. 398, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14927 (M.D. Ga. 1993), aff'd, United States v. Rucker, 36 F.3d 95, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 24508 (11th Cir. 1994).

Public corporations and political subdivisions. — Neither public corporations nor political subdivisions are clothed with that immunity from suit which belongs to the state alone by virtue of its sovereignty. Davis v. Cook, 55 F. Supp. 1004, 1944 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2343 (D. Ga. 1944).

Suit by a public utility against a public service commission where it is charged that the commission in fixing a rate, issuing an order, or assessing a penalty, has acted illegally or abused its authority, or violated the constitutional rights of the public utility to its injury and damage, is not such an action against the state as is prohibited by U.S. Const., amend. 11. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 205 Ga. 863, 55 S.E.2d 618, 1949 Ga. LEXIS 637 (1949).

Immunity for Department of Transportation. — State Department of Transportation employees are immune from a suit for negligence in federal court under the Eleventh Amendment. Thorne v. Littlefield Constr. Co., 782 F. Supp. 108, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 583 (M.D. Ga. 1992).

The Georgia Department of Transportation (DOT) is an arm of the state and thus may have immunity under the eleventh amendment because any recovery would have been paid out of state funds; Georgia DOT's source of revenue is from the motor fuel tax specified in the Georgia Constitution. The fact that Georgia DOT can allocate its funds in its own discretion and without intervention by the state legislature does not change the fact that these funds are state funds. Robinson v. Georgia DOT, 966 F.2d 637, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 16179 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1022, 113 S. Ct. 660, 121 L. Ed. 2d 586, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 7729 (1992).

The Georgia Department of Transportation, which may receive immunity under the eleventh amendment, did not waive its federal immunity where plaintiffs sought relief for inverse condemnation of property that was an ancestral cemetery because it had consented to suit in state court; the Georgia Constitution expressly reserves the state's immunity in federal court, and a waiver in state court does not constitute a waiver in federal court. Robinson v. Georgia DOT, 966 F.2d 637, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 16179 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 506 U.S. 1022, 113 S. Ct. 660, 121 L. Ed. 2d 586, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 7729 (1992).

Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 32-2-2(a)(8), the legislature has delegated to the Department of Transportation the authority to exercise the right and power of eminent domain for public road and transportation purposes. It follows that DOT is an "arm of the State" for eminent domain purposes, and that the trial court correctly held that an action brought against DOT under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 could not be maintained for losses occasioned by pre-condemnation publicity. Thompson v. DOT, 209 Ga. App. 353, 433 S.E.2d 623, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 876 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1635, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 964 (Ga. Oct. 12, 1993).

Department of Human Resources and agents or employees of county department of family and children services were immune from suit against them in their official capacities. Powell v. Department of Human Resources, 918 F. Supp. 1575, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3003 (S.D. Ga.

1996), aff'd, 114 F.3d 1074, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 12379 (11th Cir. 1997).

Because sovereign immunity in Georgia may be waived only by statute, and because the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., specifically disavows any intent to waive the state's eleventh amendment immunity, the eleventh amendment barred the plaintiff's claim against the Department of Human Resources for injuries sustained by plaintiff's son while in foster care. McCall v. Dep't of Human Res., 176 F. Supp. 2d 1355, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20059 (M.D. Ga. 2001).

Ports Authority as arm of state. — Because the Ports Authority was an “arm of the state” entitled to immunity under the Eleventh Amendment from suit in federal court, the sovereign immunity from suit in state court that was reserved to the Ports Authority under the Georgia Constitution was not susceptible of abrogation by federal maritime law and barred a lawsuit in state court to recover damages for the tort of its employee, except to the extent the state consented to the suit. Ga. Ports Auth. v. Lawyer, 304 Ga. 667, 821 S.E.2d 22, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 702 (2018).

Georgia Department of Revenue. — The Georgia Department of Revenue is a state entity, entitled to eleventh amendment immunity from suit in federal court. Miles v. Georgia Dep't of Revenue, 797 F. Supp. 987, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12343 (S.D. Ga. 1992).

Bankruptcy debtors' adversary proceeding against the Georgia Department of Revenue was barred by U.S. Const., amend. 11. Taylor v. Department of Revenue (In re Taylor), 249 B.R. 571, 2000 Bankr. LEXIS 636 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 2000).

Suits against state bar. — Since the Georgia Supreme Court is an arm of the State of Georgia and the State Bar is an arm of the Georgia Supreme Court, where a complaint alleged that actions in disbaring an attorney taken by the individual defendants were in their official capacities as members of the judiciary and of the State Bar, the claims for compensatory damages against all defendants were claims against the state and barred by the eleventh amendment. Cohran v. State

Bar, 790 F. Supp. 1568, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6689 (N.D. Ga. 1992).

Enforcement of federal regulatory statutes. — The defense of sovereign immunity must be denied when the United States seeks to enforce a federal regulatory statute. Intracoastal Transp., Inc. v. Decatur County, 482 F.2d 361, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9046 (5th Cir. 1973).

State waives its sovereign immunity defense when it enters a field which is regulated by federal statute, whereby Congress has specifically created a remedy in private parties for the violation of the statute and has expressly provided that the private remedy is applicable to the states. Intracoastal Transp., Inc. v. Decatur County, 482 F.2d 361, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9046 (5th Cir. 1973).

State employees not immune in federal suit. — Because a state's liability insurance trust fund voluntarily established to protect its employees against personal liability for damages does not make the state the real party in interest for purposes of eleventh amendment immunity, individuals employed by a state agency are not entitled to eleventh amendment immunity from suit in federal court when they are sued in their individual capacity but are nevertheless eligible for insurance protection from the state's voluntarily established liability insurance trust fund, through which the state will pay the verdict. Jackson v. Georgia DOT, 16 F.3d 1573, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 5648 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 929, 115 S. Ct. 320, 130 L. Ed. 2d 281, 1994 U.S. LEXIS 7121 (1994).

Award of retroactive benefits under public aid program. — U.S. Const., amend. 11 bars a federal district court from awarding retroactive benefits under a federal-state public aid program that are ultimately payable from state's general revenues. Adams v. Harden, 493 F.2d 21, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 8955 (5th Cir. 1974).

Injunction prohibiting the state from recouping funds which persons received in violation of current Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program requirements but which they were entitled to receive under previous law was not barred by the eleventh amendment, because the recipients were not seeking damages but rather were seeking to prevent the state from essentially accomplishing a legal termination of AFDC benefits without providing adequate notice under federal law. Turner v. Ledbetter, 906 F.2d 606, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 12049 (11th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 928, 111 S. Ct. 2041, 114 L. Ed. 2d 125, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 2769 (1991).

Creation of insurance fund to indemnify state. — Without an explicit provision that the creation of the insurance fund to indemnify the state waived both state sovereign and eleventh amendment immunity, federal district court could not conclude that the state, by creating such a fund, had waived its constitutional immunity from being sued in federal court. Hobbs v. Georgia DOT, 785 F. Supp. 980, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2084 (N.D. Ga. 1992).

Payment of awards by school boards. — Even though a majority of funds controlled by a school board emanates from the state, the board has sufficient sources of income to satisfy a judgment, or the ability to raise it, as well as the authority to pay an award of back salary without transgressing state law. Davis v. Griffin-Spalding County Bd. of Educ., 445 F. Supp. 1048, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15029 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

U.S. Const., amend. 11 proscribes suits by citizens against their own state. Ezzell v. Board of Regents, 838 F.2d 1569, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 3055 (11th Cir. 1988).

The Supreme Court has consistently held that an unconsenting state is immune from suits brought in federal courts by the state's own citizens as well as by citizens of another state. Miles v. Georgia Dep't of Revenue, 143 F.R.D. 302, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14523 (S.D. Ga. 1992).

Suits seeking damages against administrative agencies. — Claim for damages and prospective injunctive relief against the State Board of Pharmacy for refusal to reinstate license was barred as a suit against the State. Hicks v. Georgia State Bd. of Pharmacy, 553 F. Supp. 314, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16537 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Suits seeking damages against state officers. — Claim for damages from State Board of Pharmacy members for actions in their official capacities is a suit against the state and is barred. Hicks v. Georgia State Bd. of Pharmacy, 553 F. Supp. 314, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16537 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

A medical doctor's civil rights action against members of the state board of medical examiners alleging that the board's summary suspension of his licenses to practice medicine and to prescribe controlled substances was, in effect, a suit against the state and, insofar as damages were sought from the members in their official capacities, the action was barred by the eleventh amendment. Howard v. Miller, 870 F. Supp. 340, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17123 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

Damages against parole board officers unavailable. — Defendant's monetary claims asserted against members of the Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles were barred by U.S. Const., amend. 11, as defendants were immune in their official capacity as agents of the real and substantial party in interest, the state. Lemley v. Bowers, 813 F. Supp. 814, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20712 (N.D. Ga. 1992).

State educational institute and administrators immune from damages action. — The Valdosta Technical Institute, as an educational agency of the State of Georgia providing technical and vocational instruction, and members of its administration, acting as state officials, were immune from a damages action brought in the course of a discrimination claim for non-renewal of a teaching contract. Durrani v. Valdosta Tech. Inst., 810 F. Supp. 301, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20059 (M.D. Ga. 1992), aff'd, 3 F.3d 443, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 22576 (11th Cir. 1993).

Board of pharmacy and members immune from damage actions. — Because of the control the state exercises over the State Board of Pharmacy, and because the board appears to be an entity of the state as defined by Georgia law, the board, and the board members in their official capacities, are immune from damage actions by virtue of eleventh amendment immunity. Shepard v. Byrd, 581 F.

Supp. 1374, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19563 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

But members subject to suit for unlawful acts. — By conditioning the reinstatement of a pharmacist's license to practice pharmacy on the release from civil liability of any person connected with the pharmacist's investigation and arrest, the State Board of Pharmacy engaged in a practice that was against public policy and thus unlawful. The board members therefore were not absolutely immune from suit in their individual capacities, however, the members of the board were immune from damages based on their qualified immunity. Shepard v. Byrd, 581 F. Supp. 1374, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19563 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Drug and narcotics agency officers immune from suit for damages. — Neither a federal civil rights action for damages nor a pendent claim of malicious prosecution may proceed against agents of the Georgia Drug and Narcotics Agency in their official capacities by virtue of the eleventh amendment. Shepard v. Byrd, 581 F. Supp. 1374, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19563 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Community college professors' suit against members of the board of regents of the university system was not barred by the eleventh amendment, where the board's authority to ignore the professors' tenure, when exercised, was alleged to be repugnant to the constitution, where the members had exercised and were continuing to exercise that authority to the professors' detriment, and the relief sought would end such conduct. Ezzell v. Board of Regents, 838 F.2d 1569, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 3055 (11th Cir. 1988).

College and regents immune. — Where the state had not consented or waived immunity, and since Georgia College and the Regents of the University System are state entities to which Stevens v. Gay, 864 F.2d 113, 114 (11th Cir. 1989) applies, a § 1983 action against these defendants could not be entertained in federal court. Thomas v. Devries, 834 F. Supp. 398, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14927 (M.D. Ga. 1993), aff'd, United States v. Rucker, 36 F.3d 95, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 24508 (11th Cir. 1994).

The bankruptcy court lacked jurisdiction over the board of regents of the university system in an action by a trustee based on a breach of contract by the board; thus, a judgment previously entered against the board was void. Ellenberg v. Board of Regents (In re Midland Mechanical Contractors), 200 B.R. 453, 1996 Bankr. LEXIS 1145 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1996).

College professor, dean, individually immune. — Official capacities aside, college dean and college professor were immune in their individual capacities in a civil rights action brought by a discharged professor, as they were cloaked in eleventh amendment immunity. Thomas v. Devries, 834 F. Supp. 398, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14927 (M.D. Ga. 1993), aff'd, United States v. Rucker, 36 F.3d 95, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 24508 (11th Cir. 1994).

Eleventh amendment bars a federal civil rights claim against a state park authority, which, although a public corporation, is closely controlled by the state; a suit against the authority is effectively a suit against the state. Fouche v. Jekyll Island-State Park Auth., 713 F.2d 1518, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 24131 (11th Cir. 1983).

Power of the board of regents of the university system to sue and be sued waives eleventh amendment immunity in both state and federal courts. McCroan v. Bailey, 543 F. Supp. 1201, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9555 (S.D. Ga. 1982).

Waiver of suit in state courts is not construed automatically to include federal litigation as well. Hodges v. Tomberlin, 510 F. Supp. 1280, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9687 (S.D. Ga. 1980).

Consent to suit in state court does not necessarily waive eleventh amendment immunity. Fouche v. Jekyll Island-State Park Auth., 713 F.2d 1518, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 24131 (11th Cir. 1983).

State may be subject to monetary as well as injunctive relief where it has waived immunity under U.S. Const., amend. 11. Hodges v. Tomberlin, 510 F. Supp. 1280, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9687 (S.D. Ga. 1980).

State officials not immune from suit for injunctive relief. — U.S. Const., amend. 11 does not insulate state officials acting in their official capacities from suit for prospective injunctive relief to remedy violations of federal constitutional law. Stevens v. Gay, 864 F.2d 113, 114, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 528 (11th Cir. 1989).

An action by a railroad corporation seeking prospective declaratory and injunctive relief against individual members of the Public Service Commission in their official capacities was not barred by the eleventh amendment. CSX Transp., Inc. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 944 F. Supp. 1573, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16413 (N.D. Ga. 1996).

Injunctive relief suit based on past actions. — Although the eleventh amendment does not act as a bar to suits against state officials to the extent injunctive relief is sought for ongoing violations of federal law, where plaintiff complained of violations over a period of time in the past, plaintiff was barred from seeking injunctive relief against state officers for past violations. Coney v. Department of Human Resources, 787 F. Supp. 1434, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3682 (M.D. Ga. 1992).

Prisoner's action for injunctive relief barred. — U.S. Const., amend. 11 barred a prison inmate's action against the Georgia Department of Corrections and board of corrections seeking injunctive relief from the prison mail policy, where the state itself could not be liable on the merits, and the inmate had failed to amend his complaint to add the state officials acting in their official capacities. Stevens v. Gay, 864 F.2d 113, 114, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 528 (11th Cir. 1989).

Suit against probation office prohibited. — Since the probation office was part of the Department of Corrections under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-43.1, the district court properly dismissed the probationer's claims against the probation office as frivolous under 28 U.S.C. § 1915(e)(2)(B)(i). A suit against the probation office was barred by the Eleventh Amendment. Lovelace v. Dekalb Cent. Prob., 144 Fed. Appx. 793, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 16090 (11th Cir. 2005).

No money damages in actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. — The United States Supreme Court recognizes a significant limitation on actions under § 1983 of the Civil Rights Act of 1867, 42 U.S.C. § 1983, against a state agency by specifically holding that, consistent with U.S. Const., amend. 11, relief generally must be limited to prospective injunctive relief, not money damages. Hodges v. Tomberlin, 510 F. Supp. 1280, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9687 (S.D. Ga. 1980).

Waiver of immunity in bankruptcy proceeding. — Even though the state has not waived its immunity from suit in federal court for violations of the automatic stay, it could waive this immunity by filing a proof of claim against the debtor's estate, thus submitting itself to the bankruptcy court's equitable jurisdiction. Headrick v. Georgia ex rel. Dep't of Revenue, 200 B.R. 963, 1996 Bankr. LEXIS 1234 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1996).

Immunity abrogated by provision of Bankruptcy Code. — Sovereign immunity of the state was abrogated by 11 U.S.C. § 106, subjecting it to damage awards for violations of the automatic stay, and this abrogation was enacted by a valid exercise of power under the fourteenth amendment. Headrick v. Georgia ex rel. Dep't of Revenue, 200 B.R. 963, 1996 Bankr. LEXIS 1234 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1996).

The fourteenth amendment to the United States Constitution granted Congress authority to abrogate the state's eleventh amendment immunity from suit by individuals for the state's violation of the Bankruptcy Code's discharge injunction. Burke v. Georgia ex rel. Dep't of Revenue, 203 B.R. 493, 1996 Bankr. LEXIS 1614 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1996), aff'd, No. 92-11482-JSD, No. CV197-42, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23919 (S.D. Ga. July 23, 1997).

The fourteenth amendment to the United States Constitution granted to Congress the authority to abrogate the state's sovereign immunity against individual suits in federal court for damages arising from the state's violation of the automatic stay provisions of the Bankruptcy Code. Headrick v. Georgia, 203 B.R. 805, 1996 Bankr. LEXIS 1620 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1996), aff'd, No. 92-11482-JSD, No. CV197-42, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23919 (S.D. Ga. July 23, 1997).

State has waived immunity under U.S. Const., amend. 11 in establishing the Georgia Ports Authority. Hodges v. Tomberlin, 510 F. Supp. 1280, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9687 (S.D. Ga. 1980).

Although Georgia entered a federally related sphere by operating a research vessel in the navigable waters of the United States, this act did not constitute a waiver of sovereign immunity from suits in federal court under the Jones Act and the general maritime law. Sullivan v. Georgia Dep't of Natural Resources, 724 F.2d 1478, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25532 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 872, 105 S. Ct. 222, 83 L. Ed. 2d 152, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 3806 (1984).

Provisions of O.C.G.A. § 48-2-35 do not constitute a waiver of immunity under the eleventh amendment to the United States Constitution and were not enough to confer jurisdiction on the federal courts in Georgia to hear plaintiff's claims against the state for damages or prospective relief regarding automobile "title transfer fee" statute. Johnsen v. Collins, 875 F. Supp. 1571, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20214 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

In determining whether entity is arm of the state sharing the state's immunity under U.S. Const., amend. 11, courts look to the entity's function and characteristics as determined by state law. East Cent. Health Dist. v. Brown, 752 F.2d 615, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28064 (11th Cir. 1985).

Civil rights action seeking to compel provision of indigent defense services. — U.S. Const., amend. 11 did not bar a civil rights action brought on behalf of indigent defendants seeking to compel the governor and other state officials to provide indigent defense services that met minimum constitutional standards. Luckey v. Harris, 860 F.2d 1012, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 15659 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 957, 110 S. Ct. 2562, 109 L. Ed. 2d 744, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 2766 (1990).

Private divers who salvaged artifacts from a sunken ship located on state property at the bottom of a river were not entitled to a salvage award from the state. Chance v. Certain Artifacts Found & Salvaged, 606 F. Supp. 801, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 24297 (S.D. Ga. 1984), aff'd, 775 F.2d 302, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 24245 (11th Cir. 1985).

Suits against counties. — Suit against the sheriff in the sheriff's official capacity amounts to a suit against the county employing the sheriff, and a suit against a county is generally not precluded under the eleventh amendment. Thompson v. Spikes, 663 F. Supp. 627, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5541 (S.D. Ga. 1987).

U.S. Const., amend. 11 does not protect a county from being subjected to a Fair Labor Standards Act, 29 U.S.C. § 201 et seq., suit in federal court without its consent. Prickett v. DeKalb County, 92 F. Supp. 2d 1357, 2000 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18139 (N.D. Ga. 2000), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 254 F.3d 74, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 15279 (11th Cir. 2001).

Suits against county departments. — County departments, including the county department of family and children services, were state rather than county entities for the purposes of eleventh amendment immunity. Bendiburg v. Dempsey, 707 F. Supp. 1318, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1795 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 909 F.2d 463, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 14321 (11th Cir. 1990).

The eleventh amendment barred claims against employees of a county department of family and children services for injuries sustained by the plaintiff's son while in foster care because the county department was a state agency for purposes of the eleventh amendment. McCall v. Dep't of Human Res., 176 F. Supp. 2d 1355, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20059 (M.D. Ga. 2001).

Hospital authority was local, not state, instrumentality, and was not entitled to immunity under the eleventh amendment in a federal civil rights suit brought by a paramedic against the authority. Baxter v. Fulton-DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 764 F. Supp. 1510, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7207 (N.D. Ga. 1991).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Immunity of Savannah Port Authority members. — Members of the Savannah Port Authority, who sued in their individual or personal capacities, are entitled to the same qualified immunities from tort liability as are accorded by principles of federal and state law to other public officers in the executive branch of state government. 1986 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U86-7.

Participation by Georgia in the Coastal Zone Management Act would not constitute consent to waiver of its eleventh amendment immunity or consent for other states to assert regulatory jurisdiction within Georgia. 1997 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 97-2.

Amendment XII[Election of President and Vice-President]*

The Electors shall meet in their respective states and vote by ballot for President and Vice-President, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice-President, and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of all persons voted for as Vice-President, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate; — The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates and the votes shall then be counted; — The person having the greatest number of votes for President, shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers not exceeding three on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a President whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March next following, then the Vice-President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President. — The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice-President, shall be the Vice-President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed, and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list, the Senate shall choose the Vice-President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice-President of the United States.

Amendment XIII

[Abolition of Slavery]

Section 1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

Section 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

It renders obsolete the following constitutional provisions: the clause "three-fifths of all other persons" in U.S. Const., art. I, sec. II, cl. 3, U.S. Const., art. I, sec. IX, and U.S. Const., art. IV, sec. II, cl. 3.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

U.S. Const., amend. 13 was adopted with reference to conditions existing since the foundation of the government, and the term “involuntary servitude” was intended to cover those forms of compulsory labor akin to African slavery, which, in practical operation, would tend to produce like undesirable results. It introduced no novel doctrine with respect to services always treated as exceptional, and certainly was not intended to interdict enforcement of those duties that individuals owe to the state, such as services in the army, militia, on the jury, etc. The great purpose in view was liberty under the protection of effective government, not the destruction of the latter by depriving it of essential powers. United States v. Ryals, 56 F. Supp. 772, 1944 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2033 (D. Ga. 1944).

U.S. Const., amend. 13 is not a mere prohibition of state laws establishing or upholding slavery, but an absolute declaration that slavery or involuntary servitude shall not exist in any part of the United States. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11645 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 356 (1973).

Badges and incidents of slavery. — Under U.S. Const., amend. 13, Congress has the power to determine what constitutes the badges and incidents of slavery and to translate that determination into effective legislation, such as 42 U.S.C. § 1982. Whatever else they may have encompassed, the badges and incidents of slavery include restraints upon the right to purchase, lease, sell, and convey property. Roberson v. Great Am. Ins. Cos., 48 F.R.D. 404, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13315 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

Power to enforce amendment

through legislation. — The power vested in Congress to enforce U.S. Const., amend. 13 by appropriate legislation, includes the power to enact direct and primary laws, operating upon the acts of individuals, whether sanctioned by state legislation or not. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11645 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 356 (1973).

Congressional power to abolish slavery. — Section 2 of U.S. Const., amend. 13 clothed Congress with power to pass all laws necessary and proper for abolishing all badges and incidents of slavery in the United States. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11645 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 356 (1973).

Legislation against discriminatory housing practices. — A statute that makes unlawful economic exploitation of racial bias and panic selling is one regulating conduct, and any inhibiting effect it may have upon speech is justified by the government’s interest in protecting its citizens from discriminatory housing practices and is not violative of U.S. Const., amend. 1. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11645 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 356 (1973).

Congress has power under U.S. Const., amend. 13 to eradicate conditions that prevent blacks from buying and renting property because of their race or color, and no federal statute calculated to achieve that objective can be thought to exceed the constitutional power of Congress simply because it reaches beyond state action to regulate the conduct of private individuals. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11645 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 356 (1973).

Congressional power to legislate in furtherance of the elimination of racial discrimination is derived from U.S. Const., amend. 13, the power over interstate commerce, the power under U.S. Const., amend. 14, and the power under U.S. Const., amend. 15. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11645 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 356 (1973).

Congressional power as to racial barriers to property acquisition. — The authority of Congress to enforce U.S. Const., amend. 13 by appropriate legislation includes the power to eliminate all racial barriers to the acquisition of real and personal property. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11645 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 356 (1973).

Discriminatory purpose not found. — African-American residents of a city failed to establish that, by retaining an at-large election system for city officials, the city acted with a discriminatory purpose in violation of the federal constitution. Cofield v. City of LaGrange, 969 F. Supp. 749, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9568 (N.D. Ga. 1997).

Package bond issue submitted to voters. — In requesting the county board of commissioners to submit a package bond issue to the voters instead of three separate bond issues, the county board of education did not time and structure the school bond referendum with the intent of diluting minority voting strength and manipulating the minority vote in violation of the first, thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution of the United States. Lucas v. Townsend, 783 F. Supp. 605, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 653 (M.D. Ga.), aff'd, 967 F.2d 549, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 17595 (11th Cir. 1992).

Statute aimed at the commercial activities of those who would profi- teer off the ills of society, conduct that U.S. Const., amend. 13 empowers Congress to regulate, regulates commercial activity, not speech. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11645 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 356 (1973).

When commercial speech may be prohibited. — The federal government may in some circumstances prohibit purely commercial speech made in connection with conduct which Congress can permissibly regulate or prohibit. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11645 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 356 (1973).

Title 42 U.S.C. § 1982 bars all discrimination in the sale and rental of property, and given this reading, § 1982 is constitutional under U.S. Const., amend. 13. Roberson v. Great Am. Ins. Cos., 48 F.R.D. 404, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13315 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

Employment discrimination. — U.S. Const., amend. 13 does not create a cause of action for employment discrimination. Mitchell v. Carrier Corp., 954 F. Supp. 1568, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21405 (M.D. Ga. 1995), aff'd, 108 F.3d 343, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 3016 (11th Cir. 1997).

Inapplicable to call to service to meet public need. — U.S. Const., amend. 13 has no application to a call for service made by one's government according to law to meet a public need, just as a call for money in such a case is taxation and not confiscation of property. Heflin v. Sanford, 142 F.2d 798, 1944 U.S. App. LEXIS 3514 (5th Cir. 1944).

U.S. Const., amend. 13 abolished slavery and involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, but was never intended to limit the war powers of government or its right to exact by law public service from all to meet the public need. Heflin v. Sanford, 142 F.2d 798, 1944 U.S. App. LEXIS 3514 (5th Cir. 1944).

Work and labor on the part of prisoners is not in itself unconstitutional or unlawful. Wilson v. Kelley, 294 F. Supp. 1005, 1968 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8039 (N.D.

Hard labor as a penalty for crime is expressly permitted by U.S. Const., amend. 13 and not prohibited by U.S. Const., amend. 8. Wilson v. Kelley, 294 F. Supp. 1005, 1968 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8039 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 393 U.S. 266, 89 S. Ct. 477, 21 L. Ed. 2d 425, 1968 U.S. LEXIS 6 (1968).

That one who has received an advance on a contract for services that the person is unable to repay is bound by the threat of penal sanction to remain at the person's employment until the debt has been discharged is coerced labor. Taylor v. Georgia, 315 U.S. 25, 62 S. Ct. 415, 86 L. Ed. 615, 1942 U.S. LEXIS 991 (1942).

Former Code 1933, § 26-2812 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-8-15) making criminal the receiving of money to improve real property with intent to defraud using the funds otherwise than for the payment of labor and material cost, if there are any outstanding, and providing that the failure to pay such labor and material cost is prima facie evidence of intent to defraud is not violative of U.S. Const., amend. 13, abolishing involuntary servitude. Johnson v. State, 203 Ga. 147, 45 S.E.2d 616, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 578 (1947).

Hospital authority may restrict a staff member's privileges by reasonable and nondiscriminatory rules and regulations. Yeargin v. Hamilton Mem. Hosp., 229 Ga. 870, 195 S.E.2d 8, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 809 (1972).

Issuance of injunction against discriminatory housing practices. — Because of the subtle, pervasive, and essentially irremediable nature of racial discrimination, proof of the existence of discriminatory housing practices is sufficient to permit a court to presume irreparable injury for purposes of issuing a preliminary injunction. Gresham v. Windrush Partners, Ltd., 730 F.2d 1417, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 23095 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 882, 105 S. Ct. 249, 83 L. Ed. 2d 187, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 3882 (1984).

Involuntary servitude not criminal defense. — Involuntary servitude is a constitutional violation, as well as a criminal offense, but it is not a criminal defense; therefore, the trial court did not err in failing to give the defendant's requested charges on involuntary servitude in a prosecution for selling and trafficking in cocaine in which the defendant alleged to have been illegally procured as an agent to work for the state involuntarily in connection with drug transactions. Satterfield v. State, 248 Ga. App. 479, 546 S.E.2d 859, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 309 (2001).

Redistricting attempting to interfere with right of school board member to hold office or vote. — While voting rights and the right to run for public office are core constitutional rights, an attempted deprivation of constitutional or statutory rights is not the same as an actual deprivation. Furthermore, incurring legal fees to vindicate rights does not itself establish that those rights were violated. Thus, plaintiff, a school board member, pursuing attempted violations of plaintiff's right to run and hold a designated seat in a predefined district, could not succeed as an injunction in another lawsuit and failure of preclearance interfered with the implementation of the efforts of defendants, the local voting registrars; since the attempt to deprive plaintiff of plaintiff's constitutional rights did not succeed, neither can plaintiff's lawsuit succeed. Cook v. Randolph County, 573 F.3d 1143, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 15201 (11th Cir. 2009).

Grant of summary judgment to a county was upheld because the maintenance obligations imposed by the Declaration did not constitute involuntary servitude as both the homeowners' association (HOA) and individual lot owners consented to various obligations and covenants set forth in the Declaration and the HOA had specific authority under certain circumstances to enter a lot owner's property and perform maintenance. Polo Golf & Country Club Homeowners Ass'n v. Cunard, 310 Ga. 804, 854 S.E.2d 732, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 30 (2021).

Amendment XIV[Equal Protection and Other Rights]*

Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Section 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice-President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the Executive and Judicial officers of a State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion, or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

Section 3. No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may by a vote of two-thirds of each House, remove such disability.

Section 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations and claims shall be held illegal and void.

Section 5. The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.

For comment on Pennsylvania v. Board of Dirs., 353 U.S. 230, 77 S. Ct. 806, 1 L. Ed. 2d 792 (1957), holding that the Philadelphia Board of Directors of City Trusts was an agency of the state and their denial to nonwhite applicants of admission to a college pursuant to the trust creating the institution constitutes discrimination by the state and is violative of this amendment, see 20 Ga. B.J. 397 (1958).

For comment on Ludley v. Board of Supervisors, 150 F. Supp. 900 (E.D. La. 1957), declaring that a statute requiring applicants to publicly financed institutions of higher learning obtain a certificate of eligibility and good moral character signed by their local superintendent of education and a statute forbidding teachers from performing acts to bring about integration in public schools or institutions of higher learning, together violated the equal protection clause of this amendment, and the obvious intent of the statute requiring the certificate of eligibility to discriminate against Negroes rendered it unconstitutional where standing alone as well, see 20 Ga. B.J. 400 (1958).

For comment on Schwartz v. Board of Bar Exmrs., 353 U.S. 232, 77 S. Ct. 752, 1 L. Ed. 2d 796 (1957), holding that the petitioner was denied due process by the state's refusal to allow him to qualify for the bar indicating that because of prior arrests and past membership in the Communist Party he had not shown "good moral character," see 20 Ga. B.J. 406 (1958).

For comment on Fikes v. Alabama, 352 U.S. 191, 77 S. Ct. 281, 1 L. Ed. 2d 246 (1957), holding that a confession rendered under pressure while in solitary confinement at a state penitentiary prior to arraignment was involuntary and its admission into evidence constituted a violation of due process under this amendment, see 20 Ga. B.J. 408 (1958).

For comment on Sweezy v. New Hampshire, 354 U.S. 234, 77 S. Ct. 1203, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1311 (1957), reversing a contempt conviction where appellant refused to testify on grounds of U.S. Const., amend. 1, see 20 Ga. B.J. 411 (1958).

For comment on McGee v. International Life Ins. Co., 355 U.S. 220, 78 S. Ct. 199, 2 L. Ed. 2d 223 (1957), holding that for a state to assert jurisdiction over a foreign insurance company it is sufficient for due process purposes if the contract on which the case is based has a substantial connection with that state, see 21 Ga. B.J. 113 (1958).

For comment on Payne v. Arkansas, 356 U.S. 560, 78 S. Ct. 844, 2 L. Ed. 2d 975 (1958), overturning a conviction for murder gained on the basis of a coerced confession, see 21 Ga. B.J. 116 (1958).

For comment on Complete Auto Transit Co. v. Floyd, 249 F.2d 396 (5th Cir. 1957), holding that a statute which, if applied, would subject the defendant to double recovery of medical and funeral expenses was unconstitutional as against that defendant because it deprives the defendant of its property without due process of law, see 21 Ga. B.J. 244 (1958).

General Consideration

Protection of life, liberty, and property from state interference. — Fourteenth amendment protects life, liberty, and property interests from undue state interference. Williams v. Housing Auth., 158 Ga. App. 734, 282 S.E.2d 141, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2395 (1981).

All persons — children and adults — are protected by prohibitions of U.S. Const., amend. 14. J.L. v. Parham, 412 F. Supp. 112, 1976 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16437 (M.D. Ga. 1976), rev'd on other grounds, 442 U.S. 584, 99 S. Ct. 2493, 61 L. Ed. 2d 101, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 130 (1979).

Established principle of civilized government. — While U.S. Const., amend. 14 of the Constitution of the United States is a limitation upon the powers of the states, it is old as a principle of civilized government. It is found in Magna Charta, and, in substance if not in form, in nearly all state Constitutions. By U.S. Const., amend. 5, it was introduced into the Constitution of the United States as a limitation upon the powers of the national Government, and by U.S. Const., amend. 14, as a guaranty against any encroachment upon an acknowledged right of citizenship by the legislatures of the states. J.L. v. Parham, 412 F. Supp. 112, 1976 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16437 (M.D. Ga. 1976), rev'd, 442 U.S. 584, 99 S. Ct. 2493, 61 L. Ed. 2d 101, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 130 (1979).

Sovereign immunity constitutional. — The statutory bar of sovereign immunity to suit in tort is not a deprivation of property without just compensation, nor a denial of either equal protection or due process under the federal or state Constitutions. Robinson v. City of Decatur, 253 Ga. 779, 325 S.E.2d 752, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 787 (1985), overruled on other grounds, Martin v. Georgia Dep't of Public Safety, 257 Ga. 300, 357 S.E.2d 569, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 840 (1987).

Must establish violation of clear constitutional right. — Plaintiff failed to demonstrate that the defendants violated clearly established constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known; therefore, defendants are shielded by qualified immunity. Powell v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 114 F.3d 1074, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 12379 (11th Cir. 1997).

The Court found that the plaintiff, who was attacked after being released from police custody, was not deprived of the plaintiff's constitutional rights under U.S. Const., amend. 14 when police officers released the plaintiff from custody in an impaired state, since there was no violation of a clearly established constitutional right, the individual police officers were entitled to qualified immunity. Bogle v. City of Warner Robins, 953 F. Supp. 1563, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1446 (M.D. Ga. 1997).

Requirements of U.S. Const., amend. 14 are satisfied if trial is had according to the settled course of judicial procedure obtaining in the particular state and the laws operate on all persons alike and do not subject the individual to the arbitrary exercise of the powers of government. Chatterton v. Dutton, 223 Ga. 243, 154 S.E.2d 213, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 479, cert. denied, 389 U.S. 914, 88 S. Ct. 247, 19 L. Ed. 2d 266, 1967 U.S. LEXIS 472 (1967).

Compelling state interest required for regulation of fundamental rights. — When fundamental right is affected, regulations may be justified only if necessary to accomplish compelling state interest. Chatham v. Jackson, 613 F.2d 73, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19861 (5th Cir. 1980).

Establishment clause, as applied to states through fourteenth amendment, is limited to governmental action. — Establishment clause only speaks to acts of the United States Congress, and, as applied to the states under the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment it still is limited only to governmental action respecting an establishment of religion. American Civil Liberties Union v. Rabun County Chamber of Commerce, Inc., 510 F. Supp. 886, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11449 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd, 678 F.2d 1379, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18161 (11th Cir. 1982).

Relationship of presumptions to due process. See Williamson v. State, 248 Ga. 47, 281 S.E.2d 512, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 906 (1981).

Constitutional restraints limit state power to terminate entitlement whether the entitlement is denominated a “right” or a “privilege.” Bell v. Burson, 402 U.S. 535, 91 S. Ct. 1586, 29 L. Ed. 2d 90, 1971 U.S. LEXIS 41 (1971).

Protection of freedom of speech. — Freedom of speech among fundamental personal rights and liberties protected by U.S. Const., amend. 14 from invasion by state action. Staub v. City of Baxley, 355 U.S. 313, 78 S. Ct. 277, 2 L. Ed. 2d 302, 1958 U.S. LEXIS 1830 (1958).

First amendment, in conjunction with fourteenth, prohibits governments from abridging freedom of speech or of press; or right of people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances. These expressly guaranteed freedoms share a common core purpose of assuring freedom of communication on matters relating to functioning of government. CNN, Inc. v. ABC, 518 F. Supp. 1238, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13674 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

“Fighting words” constitute one of those narrow speech areas not constitutionally protected. State v. Klinakis, 206 Ga. App. 318, 425 S.E.2d 665, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 1669 (1992), cert. denied, No. S93C0385, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 330 (Ga. Apr. 8, 1993).

The press may not be exposed to liability for truthfully publishing information released to the public in official court records. Munoz v. American Lawyer Media, 236 Ga. App. 462, 512 S.E.2d 347, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 208 (1999), cert. denied, No. S99C0794, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 546 (Ga. June 3, 1999).

Protection of familial relationship. — Appointment of a guardian ad litem for the limited purpose of making a best interest determination regarding the need for a 16-year-old to receive a blood transfusion did not constitute a substantive due process violation with respect to the government’s intrusion into the familial relationship of the child and the child’s mother who, as Jehovah’s Witnesses, did not want the transfusion. Novak v. Cobb County-Kennestone Hosp. Auth., 849 F.

Supp. 1559, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5112 (N.D. Ga. 1994), aff’d, 74 F.3d 1173, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 2197 (11th Cir. 1996).

Constitutional right to privacy. — A person’s complaint stating that city police officers violated the person’s right to privacy by viewing a videotape which depicted the person and another person engaging in sexual activity alleged a violation of a clearly established constitutional right. James v. City of Douglas, 941 F.2d 1539, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 21834 (11th Cir. 1991).

Defendant had a legitimate expectation of privacy in the apartment of the defendant’s friend’s sibling because the defendant was a frequent welcome social visitor, the defendant left possessions there, and the defendant had spent the night as a social guest. State v. Brown, 212 Ga. App. 800, 442 S.E.2d 818, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 386 (1994).

Legislation conflicting with court order based on amendment. — Legislation conflicting with court order drawing its authority from U.S. Const., amend. 14 is unconstitutional. Stell v. Board of Pub. Educ., 334 F. Supp. 909, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10690 (S.D. Ga. 1971).

Plaintiffs’ burden in dispute about discharge. — When a dispute arises concerning whether a discharge was effected pursuant to a permissible or an impermissible reason, the plaintiff has the burden to show (1) that his conduct was constitutionally protected; and (2) that his conduct was a “substantial” or “motivating” factor in the termination decision. Smith v. Price, 616 F.2d 1371, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 17470 (5th Cir. 1980).

State regulation of intoxicating beverages. — States do not escape operation of U.S. Const., amend. 14 in dealing with intoxicating beverages by reason of U.S. Const., amend. 21. Hornsby v. Allen, 326 F.2d 605, 1964 U.S. App. LEXIS 6831 (5th Cir. 1964).

Large self-contained shopping center is not functional equivalent of municipality. Hudgens v. NLRB, 424 U.S. 507, 96 S. Ct. 1029, 47 L. Ed. 2d 196, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 5 (1976).

Loitering ordinances. — Local ordinance providing that “No person shall remain or loiter upon any premises to which the public has access, including but not limited to such places as business and shopping area parking lots, where the person's presence upon such premises is unrelated to the normal activity, use or business for which such premises are made available to the public" violates U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. Bullock v. City of Dallas, 248 Ga. 164, 281 S.E.2d 613, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 946 (1981).

Right to wear one's hair as one sees fit not within specific constitutional right. — Even where the wearing of long hair is assumed to be symbolic expression, it falls within that type of expression which is manifested through conduct and is therefore subject to reasonable state regulation in furtherance of a legitimate state interest. Stevenson v. Wheeler County Bd. of Educ., 306 F. Supp. 97, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8763 (S.D. Ga. 1969), aff'd, 426 F.2d 1154, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 9057 (5th Cir. 1970).

The right to wear one's hair as one sees fit has not been found to be within the periphery of any of our specific constitutional rights. Ashley v. City of Macon, 377 F. Supp. 540, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12602 (M.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 505 F.2d 868, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16769 (5th Cir. 1975).

State subdivision can constitutionally restrict facial hair of police officers because of its strong interest in having law enforcement personnel present a uniform appearance to the public. Nalley v. Douglas County, 498 F. Supp. 1228, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14063 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Anti-nepotism ordinance constitutional. — Municipal anti-nepotism ordinance restricting the rights of law enforcement personnel to intermarry placed only an indirect burden on plaintiff's right to marry while advancing several legitimate governmental purposes in a rational manner. Parks v. City of Warner Robins, 841 F. Supp. 1205, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 372 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 43 F.3d 609, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 1446 (11th Cir. 1995).

Grandparent visitation statute unconstitutional. — The grandparent visitation statute, O.C.G.A. § 19-7-3, is unconstitutional because it does not clearly promote the health or welfare of the child and does not require a showing of harm before state interference is authorized. Brooks v. Parkerson, 265 Ga. 189, 454 S.E.2d 769, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 157, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 942, 116 S. Ct. 377, 133 L. Ed. 2d 301, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 7206 (1995).

Juvenile court jurisdiction statute does not violate the separation of powers doctrine of the state constitution, nor is it violative of the due process and equal protection provisions of the federal and state constitutions. Bishop v. State, 265 Ga. 821, 462 S.E.2d 716, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 838 (1995); Murphy v. State, 267 Ga. 100, 475 S.E.2d 590.

When controls and requirements concerning abortions within legislative discretion. — Controls and requirements concerning the performance of abortions are properly within the sphere of legislative discretion so long as they do not restrict the reasons for the initial decisions and do not violate the due process and equal protection clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Doe v. Bolton, 319 F. Supp. 1048, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10717 (N.D. Ga. 1970), modified, 410 U.S. 179, 93 S. Ct. 739, 35 L. Ed. 2d 201, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 112 (1973).

Legislature's compliance with duty to furnish party charged with crime due process of law. — Where the legislature of this state has enacted laws for the government of its courts while exercising their respective jurisdictions, which, if followed, will furnish the parties the necessary protection of life, liberty, and property, it has complied with its duty to furnish to a party charged with a crime due process of law. King v. State, 174 Ga. 432, 163 S.E. 168, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 64 (1932), superseded by statute as stated in Mitchum v. State, 306 Ga. 878, 834 S.E.2d 65, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 641 (2019).

Standing to raise question of constitutionality. — One cannot raise the question of constitutionality of a statute, or of the action of an administrative agency acting under statutory power, as violative of constitutional rights, unless the interest or rights of such complaining party are affected by the statute or the action of the agency. West v. Housing Auth., 211 Ga. 133, 84 S.E.2d 30, 1954 Ga. LEXIS 488 (1954).

Constitutional questions must be raised in trial court in order to be heard on appeal. — Constitutional questions cannot be considered by the Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court where it does not appear from the record that they were raised in the trial court. Cantrell v. Abernathy, 120 Ga. App. 318, 170 S.E.2d 319, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 761 (1969).

Abrogation of state's eleventh amendment immunity. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 granted Congress authority to abrogate the state's eleventh amendment immunity from suit by individuals for the state's violation of the Bankruptcy Code's discharge injunction. Burke v. Georgia ex rel. Dep't of Revenue, 203 B.R. 493, 1996 Bankr. LEXIS 1614 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1996), aff'd, No. 92-11482-JSD, No. CV197-42, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23919 (S.D. Ga. July 23, 1997).

U.S. Const., amend. 14 granted to Congress the authority to abrogate the state's sovereign immunity against individual suits in federal court for damages arising from the state's violation of the automatic stay provisions of the Bankruptcy Code. Headrick v. Georgia, 203 B.R. 805, 1996 Bankr. LEXIS 1620 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1996), aff'd, No. 92-11482-JSD, No. CV197-42, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23919 (S.D. Ga. July 23, 1997).

Actions alleging violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983. — The fourteenth amendment does not supersede the eleventh amendment in actions alleging violations of 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Section five of the fourteenth amendment authorizes Congress to override eleventh amendment immunity to the extent necessary to enforce legislation designed to implement the substantive provisions of the fourteenth amendment, but it is well settled that § 1983 does not constitute an exercise of that authority. Thomas v. Devries, 834 F. Supp. 398, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14927 (M.D. Ga. 1993), aff'd, United States v. Rucker, 36 F.3d 95, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 24508 (11th Cir. 1994).

Liability under federal civil rights statute. — Recognizing that 42 U.S.C. § 1983 clearly requires a showing of something more than common law tort elements, the court analyzed a deputy sheriff's tort claims for malicious prosecution, abuse of process, false arrest and false imprisonment, in the context of the fourth and fourteenth amendments, and found that claims thereunder were validly inferrable for alleged conspiracy by fellow officers to force the deputy to give false testimony against the county sheriff. Mastroianni v. Deering, 835 F. Supp. 1577, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19036 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

Where plaintiff alleges federal statutory and constitutional predicates, federal court must assume jurisdiction. — Where a plaintiff alleges 28 U.S.C. § 1343(3), in conjunction with 42 U.S.C. § 1983, as the jurisdictional predicate, and alleges federal constitutional predicates, such as fourteenth amendment property rights, first amendment rights to free speech and association, and fifth amendment just compensation or "taking" clause, a federal court must assume jurisdiction to decide whether the allegations state a cause of action on which the court can grant relief, as well as to determine issues of fact arising in the controversy. Stone Mt. Game Ranch, Inc. v. Hunt, 570 F. Supp. 238, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15846 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 746 F.2d 761, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16791 (11th Cir. 1984).

Failure to voice objection. — The refusal to grant a mistrial, on the grounds that the state's cross-examination of a witness was improper, is not an abuse of discretion where the defendant failed to voice an objection during the questioning. Kirk v. State, 168 Ga. App. 226, 308 S.E.2d 592, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2734 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 133, 311 S.E.2d 821, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 608 (1984).

Emergency medical care and services. — County which received an emergency telephone call from a mental health institute in another county had no constitutional duty to provide emergency medical care and services to an institute patient who died before receiving treatment. Cleveland v. Fulton County, 196 Ga. App. 168, 396 S.E.2d 2, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 844 (1990).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Hearsay evidence from abused children. — If it is rational to imprison a defendant who causes a child to witness sexual contact or physical abuse, it is surely rational to make the defendant merely deal with hearsay from such a child, whom the defendant may require to appear in court to testify and face cross-examination; the fact that the General Assembly loosened the hearsay rule for child witnesses to crimes involving only sexual contact and physical abuse, as opposed to all crimes or all violent crimes, should pose no problem under rational basis review. Bunn v. State, 291 Ga. 183, 728 S.E.2d 569, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 565 (2012).

Disparate classes of criminal defendants based on age of victim. — Court of appeals properly held that children's out-of-court statements about sexual conduct that happened to each other in their presence were admissible under the former Child Hearsay Statute, former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-820), because the court did not err in declining to extend the holding of Woodard v. State, 269 Ga. 317 (1998), which was overruled, to the defendant's case; there was nothing irrational about creating disparate classes of criminal defendants based on the young age of the witnesses to their crimes. Bunn v. State, 291 Ga. 183, 728 S.E.2d 569, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 565 (2012).

State Action

U.S. Const., amend. 14 applies only where there is state action. Graves v. Walton County Bd. of Educ., 300 F. Supp. 188 (M.D. Ga. 1968), aff'd, 410 F.2d 1152 (5th Cir. 1969), 1153 Jewell v. City of Covington, 425 F.2d 459, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 9678 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 929, 91 S. Ct. 195, 27 L. Ed. 2d 189, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 424 (1970); Metz v. McKinley, 583 F. Supp. 683, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19160 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 747 F.2d 709, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 17517 (11th Cir. 1984).

Before the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment comes into play, governmental deprivation of a person's liberty or property must be shown. Slocum v. Georgia State Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 678 F.2d 940, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18429 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1043, 103 S. Ct. 462, 74 L. Ed. 2d 612, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 4552 (1982).

The due process protection of U.S. Const., amend. 14 protects the citizens against state action rather than against citizen action. Duck v. State, 250 Ga. 592, 300 S.E.2d 121, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1010 (1983).

Only egregious abuse of governmental power constitutionally tortious. — Neither the federal Civil Rights Act (42 U.S.C. § 1983) nor U.S. Const., amend. 14 is a font of tort law. An act must constitute a sufficiently egregious abuse of governmental power to be constitutionally tortious. Stone Mt. Game Ranch, Inc. v. Hunt, 570 F. Supp. 238, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15846 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 746 F.2d 761, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16791 (11th Cir. 1984).

Although the right to life is undisputedly of constitutional dimension, because 42 U.S.C. § 1983 is not a general tort statute, the plaintiff must show that the injury inflicted arose to the level of a constitutional tort, being sufficiently egregious to exceed the boundaries of wrongful injuries redressable under tort law and depriving the victim of a fourteenth amendment "liberty" interest without due process of law. McQuirter v. City of Atlanta, 572 F. Supp. 1401, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13851 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

County ordinance not unconstitutionally vague. — Cherokee County, Ga., Code of Ordinances § 46-61(d) was not unconstitutionally vague where "litter" and "rubbish" were defined in the county code such that individuals were given sufficient warning that they could avoid doing that which was forbidden; it could also readily be ascertained whether a person was "accumulating" rubbish or litter on the person's property. Franklin v. State, 279 Ga. 150, 611 S.E.2d 21, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 227 (2005).

Amendment not applicable to private action. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 protects individual against state action, not against wrongs done by individuals. United States v. Sutherland, 37 F. Supp.

344, 1940 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2150 (D. Ga. 1940); United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745, 86 S. Ct. 1170, 16 L. Ed. 2d 239, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 2838 (1966).

No shield against merely private conduct. — The action inhibited by the first section of U.S. Const., amend. 14 is only such action as may fairly be said to be that of the states. U.S. Const., amend. 14 erects no shield against merely private conduct, however discriminatory or wrongful. Barnes v. Atlanta Transit Sys., 144 F. Supp. 156, 1956 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2727 (D. Ga. 1956).

State has no duty to protect citizens from “private violence” and, thus, there was no violation of substantive due process rights where, at the time the state allegedly failed to act to protect an infant, it did not have custody and control of the infant. Powell v. Department of Human Resources, 918 F. Supp. 1575, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3003 (S.D. Ga. 1996), aff’d, 114 F.3d 1074, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 12379 (11th Cir. 1997).

State action defined. — Misuse of power, possessed by virtue of state law and made possible only because the wrongdoer is clothed with the authority of state law, is action taken “under color of” state law. Shelton v. GECC, 359 F. Supp. 1079, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13221 (M.D. Ga. 1973).

In order for wrong to be subject to redress under U.S. Const., amend. 14 it must result from state action or, at the very least, the state must have some way of knowing of its occurrence. Johnson v. Smith, 295 F. Supp. 835, 1968 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7690 (N.D. Ga. 1968), aff’d, 414 F.2d 645, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 11569 (5th Cir. 1969).

No constitutional deprivation where no state created right or privilege. — There can be no deprivation of due process and equal protection of the laws in civil actions for deprivation of these rights where there is no exercise of a right or privilege created by the state and the party charged with such deprivation is not a “state actor.” Poss v. Moreland, 253 Ga. 730, 324 S.E.2d 456, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 546, cert. dismissed, 474 U.S. 807, 106 S. Ct. 182, 88 L. Ed. 2d 151, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 3127 (1985).

Due process of law is denied when an arm of the state acts directly against an individual’s property and deprives the individual of it without notice or an opportunity to be heard. Thus, the requirements of “state” action can rarely be satisfied when the action is taken by one not a state official. Reinertsen v. Porter, 242 Ga. 624, 250 S.E.2d 475, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1304 (1978).

State statutes denying equal protection and due process rendered unconstitutional. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 renders state statutes unconstitutional that deny equal protection of the law, due process of the law, etc. Screws v. United States, 140 F.2d 662, 1944 U.S. App. LEXIS 4009 (5th Cir. 1944).

State need not be directly involved for finding of discrimination. — It is not necessary that state be overtly or directly involved in order to find state-caused discrimination. Ingram v. Dunn, 383 F. Supp. 1043, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6319 (N.D. Ga. 1974), aff’d, 514 F.2d 1070 (5th Cir. 1975).

State action where one in public position acts in name and for state. — Whoever, by virtue of public position under a state government, deprives another of property, life, or liberty, without due process of law, or denies or takes away the equal protection of the laws, violates the Constitution; and as the official acts in the name and for the state, and is clothed with the state’s power, the official’s act is that of the state. United States v. Sutherland, 37 F. Supp. 344, 1940 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2150 (D. Ga. 1940).

Municipal police officer’s arrival with a motor vehicle reposessor might have given the repossession a cachet of legality and had the effect of intimidating the vehicles’ possessor into not exercising his right to resist, thus facilitating the repossession. Even if unintended, such an effect could have constituted “intervention and aid” sufficient to establish state action. Thus, the city would not be insulated from liability if its actual practice, as opposed to its stated policy, facilitated repossession. Booker v. City of Atlanta, 776 F.2d 272, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 23980 (11th Cir. 1985).

Official acted contrary to express

command of state law. — Acts done by virtue of public position under a state government, and in the name and for the state, are not to be treated as if they were the acts of private individuals, although in doing them the official acted contrary to an express command of the state law. If a state official, acting under color of state authority, invades in the course of the official's duties, a private right secured by the federal Constitution, that right is violated, even if the state officer not only exceeded the official's authority but disregarded special commands of the state law. United States v. Sutherland, 37 F. Supp. 344, 1940 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2150 (D. Ga. 1940).

Every state official bound by Constitution. — Every state official, high and low, is bound by U.S. Const., amends. 14 and 15. United States v. Raines, 362 U.S. 17, 80 S. Ct. 519, 4 L. Ed. 2d 524, 1960 U.S. LEXIS 2012 (1960).

Actions of officials held state action. — Action of duly qualified officer, acting within scope of the officer's authority, constitutes state action, even though the particular acts complained of may not be authorized. United States v. Sutherland, 37 F. Supp. 344, 1940 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2150 (D. Ga. 1940).

Action of prosecuting officers on behalf of the state, like that of administrative officers in execution of its laws, may constitute state action within the purview of U.S. Const., amend. 14. U.S. Const., amend. 14 governs any action of a state, whether through its Legislature, through its courts, or through its executive or administrative officers. This is true where the officer acts without specific authority to do the particular acts alleged and also where such acts are expressly forbidden by state law. United States v. Sutherland, 37 F. Supp. 344, 1940 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2150 (D. Ga. 1940).

As alleged threats, assaults and torture inflicted by police officer while exercising authority of the officer's office in an effort to extort from petitioner a confession of guilt of theft, constituted state action and were in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 14. United States v. Sutherland, 37 F.

Supp. 344, 1940 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2150 (D. Ga. 1940).

Business tort not civil rights case merely because state agency is party.

— A tort count arising out of a business relationship does not become a federal civil rights case because of the mere fortuity that one of the parties is a state agency. Stone Mt. Game Ranch, Inc. v. Hunt, 570 F. Supp. 238, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15846 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 746 F.2d 761, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16791 (11th Cir. 1984).

Amendment made constitutional guarantees applicable to states and gave Congress enforcement powers.

— U.S. Const., amend. 14 made the guarantees of the Constitution of the United States applicable to each of the states and gave Congress "the power to enforce provisions" thereof against those who carry a badge of authority of a state and represent it in some capacity, whether they act in accordance with their authority or misuse it. Palmer v. Hall, 380 F. Supp. 120, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7401 (M.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 517 F.2d 705, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 13119 (5th Cir. 1975).

Inquiry concerning whether state authorized misuse of power irrelevant.

— Amendment presupposes possibility of abuse by state officer or representative of powers possessed, and deals with such a contingency. It provides, therefore, for the case in which one who is in possession of state power uses that power to do wrongs which the amendment forbids, although the consummation of the wrong may be within the powers possessed, if the commission of the wrong itself is rendered possible or is efficiently aided by the state authority lodged in the wrongdoer. That is to say, the theory of the amendment is that where an officer or other representative of a state, in the exercise of the authority with which the officer is clothed misuses the power possessed to do a wrong forbidden by the amendment, inquiry concerning whether the state has authorized the wrong is irrelevant, and the federal judicial power is competent to afford redress for the wrong by dealing with the officer and the result of the officer's exertion of power. Davis v. Cook, 55 F. Supp. 1004, 1944 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2343 (D. Ga. 1944); Refoule v. Ellis, 74 F. Supp. 336, 1947 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2080 (D. Ga. 1947).

Concern of preserving civic and political rights from discriminatory state action based on race or color. —

The primary concern of the framers of U.S. Const., amend. 14 was the establishment of equality in the enjoyment of basic civic and political rights and the preservation of those rights from discriminatory action on the part of the states based on considerations of race or color. Paige v. Gray, 437 F. Supp. 137, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14308 (M.D. Ga. 1977).

Amendment protects rather than creates individual rights. — The right to the enjoyment of life and liberty is a fundamental or natural right, and is not derived from or created by the federal Constitution; nevertheless, U.S. Const., amend. 14 was designed to safeguard and protect the individual against the deprivation without due process of law of those rights by the state rather than to create new rights in the individual. Screws v. United States, 140 F.2d 662, 1944 U.S. App. LEXIS 4009 (5th Cir. 1944).

States with wide discretion in deciding whether law should operate statewide or in certain counties. — There is nothing in U.S. Const., amend. 14 that prohibits a state from creating different kinds of political subdivisions and providing a different process for selecting and removing officials in those subdivisions. The states have wide discretion in deciding whether a law should operate statewide or only in certain counties. Smith v. Abercrombie, 235 Ga. 741, 221 S.E.2d 802, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 980 (1975).

Licensing agency regulations causing discrimination. — Licensing agency is not legal cause of discrimination unless agency regulation requires or fosters discrimination. Ingram v. Dunn, 383 F. Supp. 1043, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6319 (N.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 514 F.2d 1070 (5th Cir. 1975).

Municipal ordinances adopted under state authority constitute state action and are within the prohibition of the amendment. Lovell v. City of Griffin, 303 U.S. 444, 58 S. Ct. 666, 82 L. Ed. 949, 1938 U.S. LEXIS 297 (1938); Staub v. City of Baxley, 355 U.S. 313, 78 S. Ct. 277, 2 L. Ed. 2d 302, 1958 U.S. LEXIS 1830 (1958).

Statutory declaration of noninterference with innkeepers' liens. —

Where the sole action attributable to the state is the General Assembly's enactment of statutes announcing the circumstances under which the courts of this state will not interfere with the private enforcement of innkeepers' liens, there is no violation of hotel lodgers' due process rights. Evans v. Harley Hotels, Inc., 253 Ga. 53, 315 S.E.2d 896, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 788 (1984).

In private litigation state merely furnishes forum. — If the plaintiffs have been parties to state court litigations with results considered by them to be unsatisfactory, it cannot be seriously contended that the lawyers who participated in the trial of these matters, or the judges who presided over the proceedings in the state court, are state functionaries acting under color of state law within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 14. This was private litigation and the state merely furnished the forum and had no interest one way or another in the outcome. Swift v. Fourth Nat'l Bank, 205 F. Supp. 563, 1962 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3846 (M.D. Ga. 1962).

Nonrecognition of cause of action not state action. — Where appellants contended that a doctor's negligence interfered with the woman's right to make a choice whether to continue her pregnancy, the State of Georgia was not involved; Georgia's nonrecognition of a cause of action was not state action that brought the doctor's conduct within the purview of the fourteenth amendment. Campbell v. United States, 962 F.2d 1579, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 13381 (11th Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 909, 113 S. Ct. 1254, 122 L. Ed. 2d 653, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 1124 (1993), overruled in part, SisterSong Women of Color Reprod. Just. Collective v. Governor of Ga., 40 F.4th 1320, 2022 U.S. App. LEXIS 20039 (11th Cir. 2022).

Whether state sufficiently interjected itself into challenged conduct requires factual determination. —

Whether the state has sufficiently interjected itself into the challenged conduct must be determined by weighing the facts and circumstances of each particular case. Global Indus., Inc. v. Harris, 376 F. Supp. 1379, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8408 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

State Action (Cont'd)

Determining whether private bodies required to provide due process.

— In determining whether due process mandates are applicable to private bodies, initial question is whether the state or the federal government has become so involved in the conduct of these otherwise private bodies that their activities are also governmental activities and performed under governmental aegis without the private body necessarily becoming either a governmental instrumentality or agent in a strict sense. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Determining line between private and governmental action. — Line between private conduct and governmental action cannot be defined by reference to any general formula unrelated to particular exercises of governmental authority. When governmental action is alleged there must be cautious analysis of the quality and degree of government relationship to the particular acts in question. Shelton v. GECC, 359 F. Supp. 1079, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13221 (M.D. Ga. 1973).

No infallible test for determining whether state significantly involved in private discrimination. — The United States Supreme Court has never attempted the impossible task of formulating an infallible test for determining whether the state in any of its manifestations has become significantly involved in private discrimination. Shelton v. GECC, 359 F. Supp. 1079, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13221 (M.D. Ga. 1973).

State involvement with invidious discrimination. — Where impetus for discrimination is private, state must have significantly involved itself with invidious discriminations, in order for the discriminatory action to fall within the ambit of the constitutional prohibition. Shelton v. GECC, 359 F. Supp. 1079, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13221 (M.D. Ga. 1973).

Private individuals clothed with state authority.

— State courts that aid private parties to perform public function on segregated basis implicate the state in conduct proscribed by U.S. Const., amend. 14. Evans v. Newton, 382 U.S. 296, 86 S. Ct. 486, 15 L. Ed. 2d 373, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 2530 (1966).

When private individuals or groups are endowed by the state with powers or functions governmental in nature, they become agencies or instrumentalities of the state and subject to its constitutional limitations. Evans v. Newton, 382 U.S. 296, 86 S. Ct. 486, 15 L. Ed. 2d 373, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 2530 (1966).

To determine whether private individuals were clothed with state authority one must look to the degree of involvement, for only by sifting facts and weighing circumstances can the nonobvious involvement of the state in private conduct be attributed its true significance. Shelton v. GECC, 359 F. Supp. 1079, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13221 (M.D. Ga. 1973).

When private citizen's conduct attributable to state.

— The private citizen's conduct may be attributable to the state where the government affirmatively facilitates, encourages, or authorizes the objectionable practice. Jeffries v. Georgia Residential Fin. Auth., 678 F.2d 919, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18426 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 971, 103 S. Ct. 302, 74 L. Ed. 2d 283, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 4128 (1982).

The relevant inquiry is whether there is a sufficiently close nexus between the state and the challenged action of the private entity so that the action of the latter may be fairly treated as that of the state itself. Jeffries v. Georgia Residential Fin. Auth., 678 F.2d 919, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18426 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 971, 103 S. Ct. 302, 74 L. Ed. 2d 283, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 4128 (1982).

"Special relationship" protection from violence from non-government actors.

— Plaintiff did not fit within the "special relationship" exception to the general rule that due process does not entitle a citizen to be protected from violence at the hands of non governmental actors. Lovins v. Lee, 53 F.3d 1208, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 13734 (11th Cir. 1995).

Action of private hospital not state action. — Private, operated for profit hospital's decision to change bylaws so as to allow only doctors eligible for membership in the American Medical and Dental Associations (AMA and ADA) to obtain medical staff privileges and thus denying defendants continued staff privileges because they were doctors of podiatric medicine ineligible for membership in the AMA or ADA was neither state nor federal action subject to scrutiny under the due process or equal protection clauses of the federal Constitution; nor did it constitute a restraint of trade in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-10-22 merely because the hospital derived 55 percent of its income from federal medicaid and medicare funds, was licensed by the state and was regulated as a certified provider under the medicare and medicaid programs. Todd v. Physicians & Surgeons Community Hosp., 165 Ga. App. 656, 302 S.E.2d 378, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3175 (1983).

Action of regulated utility not state action. — Regulated utility did not engage in "state action" because it obtained court judgment. Cobb v. Georgia Power Co., 757 F.2d 1248, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28923 (11th Cir. 1985).

Creditor's power of sale derived from parties' contract, not statute. — A creditor's power of sale is derived from the parties' contractual undertaking rather than from statute. Therefore, the mere enactment and enforcement of former Code 1933, § 67-1506 (see O.C.G.A. § 44-14-162) does not itself constitute state action. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Liability under federal civil rights statute. — Because a plaintiff in a civil rights case prosecuted under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging excessive force used in arrest may receive compensatory damages for such things as physical pain and suffering and mental and emotional anguish, and because such a plaintiff whose constitutional rights are violated is entitled to receive nominal damages even if the plaintiff fails to produce any evidence of compensatory damages, the district court erred in granting judgment to defendant officers as a matter of law. Slicker v. Jackson, 215 F.3d 1225, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 14355 (11th Cir. 2000).

Education and Schools

"Right" to attend school does not fall into the category of a fundamental right protected by substantive due process. Kicklighter v. Evans County Sch. Dist., 968 F. Supp. 712, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15603 (S.D. Ga. 1997), aff'd, 140 F.3d 1043, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 8773 (11th Cir. 1998).

Action of administrative officers of State Board of Education is state action within U.S. Const., amend. 14. They are acting for the state under authority of its laws. If in doing this they deny any person the equal protection of the law they may be stopped by virtue of U.S. Const., amend. 14 as officers. Cook v. Davis, 178 F.2d 595, 1949 U.S. App. LEXIS 3427 (5th Cir. 1949), cert. denied, 340 U.S. 811, 71 S. Ct. 38, 95 L. Ed. 596, 1950 U.S. LEXIS 1607 (1950).

Board of education discretion in dealing with teachers not unbounded. — It is the board of education and not a court which is empowered by law to manage a county school system, and it is their duty to hire and fire teachers as necessary. To this end, the law grants the board and its superintendent's broad discretion. The orderly operation of the schools depends upon their expertise and not upon whatever skills a judge may possess in the area of school administration. The board's discretion, though, is not unbounded. Standards which they use in the evaluation of prospective teachers must be reasonably related to teaching competency and effectiveness. Their standards must be applied in a uniform fashion so that no group of prospective teachers is singled out for greater scrutiny than other prospective teachers and employment cannot be conditioned upon factors which infringe upon the free exercise of constitutionally protected rights. Doherty v. Wilson, 356 F. Supp. 35, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14495 (M.D. Ga. 1973).

Statute denying membership to county board of education to employees of another county. — Appellant not denied equal protection by statute denying membership to county board of education to employees of another county board of education, but not to employees of the same county board of education, since state's common law rule on conflicts of interest clearly prohibits the latter situation. Culpepper v. Veal, 246 Ga. 563, 272 S.E.2d 253, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1196 (1980).

Redistricting attempting to interfere with right of school board member to hold office or vote. — While voting rights and the right to run for public office are core constitutional rights, an attempted deprivation of constitutional or statutory rights is not the same as an actual deprivation. Furthermore, incurring legal fees to vindicate rights does not itself establish that those rights were violated. Thus, plaintiff, a school board member, pursuing attempted violations of plaintiff's right to run and hold a designated seat in a predefined district, could not succeed as an injunction in another lawsuit and failure of preclearance interfered with the implementation of the efforts of defendants, the local voting registrars; since the attempt to deprive plaintiff of plaintiff's constitutional rights did not succeed, neither can plaintiff's lawsuit succeed. Cook v. Randolph County, 573 F.3d 1143, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 15201 (11th Cir. 2009).

School board member challenges. — Strict scrutiny review should not have been applied to plaintiff school board members' challenges under the first and fourteenth amendments to O.C.G.A. § 20-2-51(c)(2) because the statute's nepotism provision prohibited plaintiffs only from running for the school board in districts where certain family members were employed, but the statute did not otherwise impair plaintiffs' right to run for office or to vote; plaintiffs' injury was not so severe as to require strict scrutiny. Plaintiffs' claims that the statute was both too narrow and overbroad also failed; that the statute did not prevent nepotism in all its possible forms did not heighten the severity of the restriction to necessitate strict scrutiny. Grizzle v. Kemp, 634 F.3d 1314, 2011 U.S. App. LEXIS 4590 (11th Cir. 2011).

Due process guaranteed by university bulletin. — A provision in a private university bulletin to the effect that no student shall be dismissed without "due process" does not contractually obligate an educational institution to provide the full range of constitutional due-process protections enjoyed by students at tax-supported institutions, but only those procedures specifically provided for in the bulletin itself. Life Chiropractic College, Inc. v. Fuchs, 176 Ga. App. 606, 337 S.E.2d 45, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2927 (1985).

Due process protection for students. — Students facing temporary suspension have interests qualifying for protection of due process clause; and due process requires, in connection with a suspension of ten days or less, that the student be given oral or written notice of the charges against and, if the student denies them, an explanation of the evidence the authorities have and an opportunity to present the student's side of the story. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Student cannot be suspended without hearing complying with due process, regardless of purported waiver in school board's regulations. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

School did not have duty of protection. — Summer school student's voluntary school attendance did not create a custodial relationship between the student and the school sufficient to give rise to a constitutional duty of protection. Wright v. Lovin, 32 F.3d 538, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 26181 (11th Cir. 1994).

Protection of student from bodily injury. — The school district, members of its board of education, its superintendent, and the high school principal did not have a constitutionally recognized duty to protect a student from the threats, intimidation and bodily injury from another student. Russell v. Fannin County Sch. Dist., 784 F. Supp. 1576, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7450 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 981 F.2d 1263, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 33255 (11th Cir. 1992).

No duty of care owed to sexually harassed student. — A state owes a duty of care to the individual only where the state has acted to render the person incapable, or significantly less capable of caring for or protecting oneself, or where the state places an individual in a dangerous situation or makes the individual more vulnerable to harm. Therefore, a student who was repeatedly sexually harassed by a fifth-grade student classmate did not state a constitutional deprivation because, despite a mandatory attendance policy and the loco parentis authority of the school over the children, students are not in state custody during school hours. Aurelia D. v. Monroe County Bd. of Educ., 862 F. Supp. 363, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12197 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 74 F.3d 1186, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 2199 (11th Cir. 1996).

Applicability to institutionalized student. — Although the plaintiff, a residential student in the Georgia School of the Deaf, was sexually assaulted by a fellow classmate, because the plaintiff's due process claim was not clearly established at the time, the defendants were entitled to qualified immunity. Spivey v. Elliott, 29 F.3d 1522, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 23276 (11th Cir. 1994), op. withdrawn in part, reaff'd, 41 F.3d 1497, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 521 (11th Cir. 1995).

County board must implement state findings as to handicapped child's education. — A county board of education violates federal law by refusing to act on the findings of a state hearing officer that a handicapped child cannot receive an appropriate education in public school. Christopher N. v. McDaniel, 569 F. Supp. 291, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16472 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Mandatory attendance at school. — O.C.G.A. § 20-2-690.1 did not violate equal protection because the defendant failed to show any potential variation in application of the statute without a rational basis and the statute was reasonably related to the legitimate governmental interest of ensuring that children residing in Georgia are afforded the opportunity of an education. Pitts v. State, 293 Ga. 511, 748 S.E.2d 426, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 639 (2013).

School ethics standard not void for vagueness. — Good and sufficient cause standard in Interim Ethics Rules 505-2-.03(1)(o), Ga. Comp. R. & Regs. r. 505-2-.03(1)(o), was not void for vagueness as it gave a school superintendent notice that the superintendent's decision to bypass the sheriff's department and take the law into the superintendent's own hands by brandishing a firearm and threatening a suspect of criminal activity on a public highway, during school hours, could constitute "good and sufficient cause" for the suspension of the superintendent's educator certificate. Prof'l Stds. Comm'n v. Alberson, 273 Ga. App. 1, 614 S.E.2d 132, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 405 (2005).

School officials should possess considerable leeway in promulgating regulations for conduct. — Public school officials cannot make rules for the sake of making them but they should possess considerable leeway in promulgating regulations for the proper conduct of students. Courts should uphold them where there is any rational basis for the questioned rule. All that is necessary is a reasonable connection of the rule with the proper operation of the schools. Stevenson v. Wheeler County Bd. of Educ., 306 F. Supp. 97, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8763 (S.D. Ga. 1969), aff'd, 426 F.2d 1154, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 9057 (5th Cir. 1970).

School regulations concerning hairstyles and dress part of necessary disciplining. — Public school regulations concerning hairstyles and regulations which deal generally with dress and the like are a part of the disciplinary process which is necessary in maintaining a balance between the rights of individual students and the rights of the whole in the functioning of schools. The touchstone for sustaining such regulations is the demonstration that they are necessary to alleviate interference with the educational process. Stevenson v. Board of Educ., 426 F.2d 1154, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 9057 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 957, 91 S. Ct. 355, 27 L. Ed. 2d 265, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 193 (1970).

There is no constitutionally protected right — plainly expressed or within the penumbra, the shadow, of the U.S. Const., amends. 1, 8, 9, 10 and 14 — to wear one's hair in a public high school in the length and style that suits the wearer. Ashley v. City of Macon, 377 F. Supp. 540, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12602 (M.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 505 F.2d 868, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16769 (5th Cir. 1975).

Education and Schools (Cont'd)

Law or regulation requiring or furthering racial discrimination in schools unconstitutional. — Any law or regulation of a state, county, or municipality requiring or furthering racial discrimination in the public schools violates the federal Constitution. Stell v. Board of Pub. Educ., 334 F. Supp. 909, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10690 (S.D. Ga. 1971).

University affirmative action program held unconstitutional. — The University of Georgia's freshman admissions policy, more specifically that policy's preferential treatment of non-white applicants, violated the right of the plaintiff white females to equal protection since, even assuming that student body diversity can be a compelling interest, the university's policy was not narrowly tailored to serve that interest. Johnson v. Bd. of Regents, 263 F.3d 1234, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 19154 (11th Cir. 2001).

Aim of equal protection is to assure state supported educational opportunity without regard to race; it is not to achieve racial integration in public schools. Calhoun v. Cook, 522 F.2d 717, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 12243 (5th Cir. 1975).

Intentionally segregated schools are per se illegal. Georgia State Conference v. Georgia, 570 F. Supp. 314, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14805 (S.D. Ga. 1983).

Every school need not reflect racial composition of system in desegregation. — In the exercise of broad remedial powers, focus must be on dismantling dual school systems rather than on achieving perfect racial balance: the constitutional command to desegregate schools does not mean that every school in every community must always reflect the racial composition of the school system as a whole. United States v. Board of Educ., 331 F. Supp. 466, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12044 (N.D. Ga. 1971); Drummond v. Acree, 409 U.S. 1228, 93 S. Ct. 18, 34 L. Ed. 2d 33, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 1858 (1972).

Discriminatory intent on part of educational authorities. — Although a plaintiff may demonstrate a statistical over-representation of black students in lower level classrooms and in educable mentally retarded programs, a court cannot presume that this current condition results from prior de jure segregation in the school system where none of the students involved have attended a school segregated by law, and the school system has been unitary for at least a decade. Consequently, proof and finding of subsequent discriminatory intent on the part of the educational authorities is necessary to establish a present constitutional violation. Georgia State Conference v. Georgia, 570 F. Supp. 314, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14805 (S.D. Ga. 1983).

Busing is an available tool for use by district courts in achieving school desegregation. Acree v. County Bd. of Educ., 458 F.2d 486, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 10356 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1006, 93 S. Ct. 432, 34 L. Ed. 2d 299, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 637 (1972).

When freedom of choice plans permissible. — Freedom of choice plans for school desegregation are permissible only where they offer real promise of aiding a desegregation program to effectuate conversion of a state-imposed dual system to a unitary, nonracial system. Stell v. Board of Pub. Educ., 334 F. Supp. 909, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10690 (S.D. Ga. 1971).

Submitting package bond issue to voters in lieu of school bond. — In requesting the county board of commissioners to submit a package bond issue to the voters instead of three separate bond issues, the county board of education did not time and structure the school bond referendum with the intent of diluting minority voting strength and manipulating the minority vote in violation of the first, thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments to the Constitution of the United States. Lucas v. Townsend, 783 F. Supp. 605, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 653 (M.D. Ga.), aff'd, 967 F.2d 549, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 17595 (11th Cir. 1992).

State is not strictly liable for any alleged unlawful segregation activities by local schools. However, it has continuing authority and obligation to insure that local education agencies have completely eliminated all vestiges of the dual system and have not adopted practices that will cause racial separation.

Georgia State Conference v. Georgia, 570 F. Supp. 314, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14805 (S.D. Ga. 1983).

Action of county perpetuating or reestablishing dual school system violates desegregation order. — In light of the affirmative duty of the DeKalb County Board of Education to desegregate its dual school system, under a 1969 desegregation order, it was error for the district court to hold that the planned expansion of a high school could only be enjoined if it was motivated by discriminatory intent. Until the school system achieved unitary status, official action that had the effect of perpetuating or reestablishing a dual school system violated the board's duty to desegregate — regardless of the board's lack of discriminatory intent. Pitts v. Freeman, 755 F.2d 1423, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28511 (11th Cir. 1985).

Duty of school district to remedy demographic imbalance. — Once the racial imbalance due to the constitutional violation has been remedied, a school district is under no duty to remedy imbalance that is caused by demographic factors. Freeman v. Pitts, 503 U.S. 467, 112 S. Ct. 1430, 118 L. Ed. 2d 108, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 2114 (1992).

School de jure segregation eliminated. — The district court's conclusions that the school board had eliminated the vestiges of de jure segregation as far as practicable and that the school board had shown a good faith commitment to and compliance with the desegregation plan was not clearly erroneous. Lockett v. Board of Educ., 111 F.3d 839, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 9856 (11th Cir. 1997).

Procedures utilized by local school districts to assign students to ability groupings did not violate the equal protection clause, despite the substantial racial disparity in the lower ability groups, because the procedures were not based on the present effects of past segregation, and because the procedures remedied the consequences of prior segregation through better educational opportunities. Georgia State Conference of Branches of NAACP v. Georgia, 775 F.2d 1403, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 24517 (11th Cir. 1985).

Withdrawal of judicial supervision of school system. — A district court may relinquish its supervision and control over those aspects of a school system in which there has been compliance with a desegregation decree if other aspects of the system remain in noncompliance. Freeman v. Pitts, 503 U.S. 467, 112 S. Ct. 1430, 118 L. Ed. 2d 108, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 2114 (1992).

Transfer of excess reserves in guaranteed student loan program. — The 1987 amendments to the federal Higher Education Act of 1965, 20 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq., which required the transfer of excess reserves held by guarantors participating in the guaranteed student loan program to the United States Department of Education did not abrogate a state-created guaranty agency's contract in an attempt to lessen the public debt and, therefore, did not violate § 4 of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Georgia Student Fin. Comm'n v. Cavazos, 741 F. Supp. 899, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8536 (N.D. Ga. 1990).

Determination of dischargeability of student loan. — Congress had and exercised its authority under the fourteenth amendment to waive the eleventh amendment immunity of a state from an action by an individual to determine the dischargeability in bankruptcy of a student loan. Wilson v. South Carolina State Educ. Assistant Auth., 258 B.R. 303, 2001 Bankr. LEXIS 57 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 2001).

Requiring graduates of unapproved law schools to pass state bar within five years in order to be admitted to the state bar does not create an unconstitutional irrebuttable presumption of incompetence on the part of those who fail to pass within that time period. Cline v. Supreme Court, 781 F.2d 1541, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22105 (11th Cir. 1986).

Requiring graduates of unapproved law schools to pass bar examination within five years in order to be admitted to the state bar, while imposing no similar time limitations on graduates of approved law schools, does not violate the equal protection clause, since the distinction is rationally related to the legitimate goal of ensuring a competent bar. Cline v. Supreme Court, 781 F.2d 1541, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22105 (11th Cir. 1986).

Education and Schools (Cont'd)

No citizen with personal right as to location of public schools. — No property right which could be accorded protection under this section exists in the maintenance of a certain school in a certain location. The location of public schools is a matter in which no citizen has a personal right anymore than he would in the location of any other public facility. Wallis v. Blue, 263 F. Supp. 965, 1967 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11012 (N.D. Ga. 1967).

Consecutive years of enrollment eligibility rule for interscholastic sports does not deny student equal protection of the laws. Smith v. Crim, 240 Ga. 390, 240 S.E.2d 884, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1509 (1977).

Student has no property right in interscholastic sports. — Since a student has no right to participate in interscholastic sports, the student has no protectable property interest that would give rise to a due process claim. Smith v. Crim, 240 Ga. 390, 240 S.E.2d 884, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1509 (1977).

High school football player has no protectible property interest in sports participation. — High school football player has no right to participate in interscholastic sports and has no protectible property interest which would give rise to a due process claim. Georgia High Sch. Ass'n v. Waddell, 248 Ga. 542, 285 S.E.2d 7, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 1097 (1981).

Operation of service at reduced price and for educational institution not taking without due process. — Operation of the laundry and dry-cleaning service at reduced prices in an educational institution for the benefit of students and persons connected with the school, by the Board of Regents of the University System, did not constitute the taking, by the defendants for the state, of private property of the petitioners without due process of law, in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I, and U.S. Const., amend. 5. Villyard v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 204 Ga. 517, 50 S.E.2d 313, 1948 Ga. LEXIS 471 (1948).

Rational relationship test applicable to school tuition policy. —

Where a summer session tuition policy contains a waiver policy which waives the tuition fee for students who desire to attend summer school but are financially unable to pay tuition, the strict scrutiny test is not applicable; and the school board need show only that a rational relationship existed between the classifications created by the tuition policy and the object of this legislation. Crim v. McWhorter, 242 Ga. 863, 252 S.E.2d 421, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 771 (1979).

Improper to charge aliens tuition for public education. — A city's procedure requiring certain nonimmigrant aliens to pay tuition to attend public schools violated the equal protection clause. Pena v. Board of Educ., 620 F. Supp. 293, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15596 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

Exemption of libraries from obscenity statute. — Exemption of libraries from a statute prohibiting the sale or display of materials deemed "harmful to minors" was rationally related to making material available in an atmosphere free of commercial pressure and generally available for educational purposes, and therefore did not offend the equal protection clause. American Booksellers v. Webb, 919 F.2d 1493, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 22251 (11th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 942, 111 S. Ct. 2237, 114 L. Ed. 2d 479, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 2930 (1991).

Court order requiring county to pay school taxes to city. — Court order requiring county to pay county school taxes to city for education of children from its district does not deny due process or equal protection of the law to citizens and taxpayers of the county. Walton County Bd. of Educ. v. Academy of Social Circle, 229 Ga. 114, 189 S.E.2d 690, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 519 (1972).

Traffic consideration was rational basis for denying conditional use permit. — A city's rationale for granting a conditional use permit to a school, but not allowing it to build a 1500-seat football stadium, did not violate the school's equal protection rights, as evidence that the school's proposed stadium would exacerbate an already existing traffic problem in the area was a rational basis for the denial of that part of the permit; moreover, even if the school had shown it was similarly situated with other property owners whose applications were granted, it failed to show that the city's decision was not rationally related to a legitimate government interest. City of Roswell v. Fellowship Christian Sch., Inc., 281 Ga. 767, 642 S.E.2d 824, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 254 (2007).

Police Power

Regulation for promotion of public welfare under police power. — While the maxim salus populi suprema lex cannot be used as a mere pretext for the curtailment of constitutional safeguards still, where it does apply, it acts as a limitation on the rights of the individual which otherwise would be beyond the power of the Legislature to regulate or circumscribe. Ingram v. State, 193 Ga. 565, 19 S.E.2d 493, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 447 (1942).

Principle of laws passed under inherent police power. — When a law is attacked on the ground that it deprives a citizen of liberty or property without due process of law, the underlying principle of laws passed under the inherent police power of the government is that it is the duty of each citizen to use the citizen's property and exercise the citizen's rights and privileges with due regard to the personal and property rights of others. De Berry v. City of La Grange, 62 Ga. App. 74, 8 S.E.2d 146, 1940 Ga. App. LEXIS 598 (1940).

Due process clauses not designed to interfere with police power. — The due process clauses of the state and federal Constitutions were not designed to interfere with the police power of the state. Davis v. Stark, 198 Ga. 223, 31 S.E.2d 592, 1944 Ga. LEXIS 396 (1944).

All property is held subject to police power of the state. — The due process clauses are not intended to limit the right of the state to properly exercise the police power in the enhancement of public safety. Damages cannot be recovered by one because he incurs expense in obeying a police regulation enacted for the common welfare and safety of the public. The police power has never been surrendered by the states; and all rights of natural persons and corporations are subject to the exercise of police power. McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1136 (1966).

Constitutional amendments not designed to interfere with police power. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not curtail, restrain, destroy or take from states right duly and properly to exercise police power, but the law passed by reason of such inherent powers of government must not unreasonably invade the rights guaranteed by the Constitution and thus become repugnant to it. De Berry v. City of La Grange, 62 Ga. App. 74, 8 S.E.2d 146, 1940 Ga. App. LEXIS 598 (1940).

Neither U.S. Const., amend. 14 — broad and comprehensive as it is — nor any other amendment, was designed to interfere with the power of the state, sometimes termed its police power. McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1136 (1966).

Police power may not be exerted arbitrarily or unreasonably. — A statute valid as to one set of facts may be invalid as to another, and a statute valid when enacted may become invalid by change in the conditions to which it is applied; the police power is subject to the constitutional limitation that it may not be exerted arbitrarily or unreasonably. Humthlett v. Reeves, 212 Ga. 8, 90 S.E.2d 14, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1955) (on motion for rehearing).

Governmental purpose may not be achieved by unnecessarily broad means invading protected freedoms. — A governmental purpose to control or prevent activities constitutionally subject to state regulation may not be achieved by means which sweep unnecessarily broadly and thereby invade the area of protected freedoms. Melton v. City of Atlanta, 324 F. Supp. 315, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14726 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Even though governmental purpose may be legitimate and substantial, that purpose cannot be pursued by means that broadly stifle fundamental personal liberties when the end can more narrowly be achieved. Melton v. City of Atlanta, 324 F. Supp. 315, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14726 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Power of state to classify in adoption of police powers. — Only when attempted classification is arbitrary and unreasonable can statute be declared beyond legislative authority. McCullers v. Williamson, 221 Ga. 358, 144 S.E.2d 911, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 464 (1965).

The equal protection clause does not take the power away from the states to make classifications. It commands only that the classifications not be arbitrary. Atlanta Bowling Ctr., Inc. v. Allen, 389 F.2d 713, 1968 U.S. App. LEXIS 8071 (5th Cir. 1968).

U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not absolutely deny the state the power to set up classes of persons and treat them differently. This is especially true in the area of economic and social welfare. What U.S. Const., amend. 14 does, however, is deny to states the power to put persons into classes based upon criteria unrelated to the purpose of the legislation. DeKalb Real Estate Bd., Inc. v. Chairman & Bd. of Comm'rs of Rds. & Revenues, 372 F. Supp. 748, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12193 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not take from state power to classify in adoption of police laws, but allows the exercise of the police power with great discretion in that regard and avoids what is done only when it is without any reasonable basis and therefore is purely arbitrary. Stoner v. Fortson, 379 F. Supp. 704, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7306 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Classification must rest on difference with substantial relation to object of legislation. — When classification in a law is called in question, if any state of facts reasonably can be conceived that will sustain it, the existence of that state of facts at the time the law was enacted must be assumed. McCullers v. Williamson, 221 Ga. 358, 144 S.E.2d 911, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 464 (1965).

Classification or regulation reasonable in relation to subject and adopted in interests of community does not deny due process. Milner v. Burson, 320 F. Supp. 706, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9046 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

A classification by a state must be reasonable, not arbitrary, and must rest upon some ground of difference having a fair and substantial relation to the object of the legislation. DeKalb Real Estate Bd., Inc. v. Chairman & Bd. of Comm'rs of Rds. & Revenues, 372 F. Supp. 748, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12193 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Classification of subjects for taxation. — Law recognizes right and power of municipal government to make reasonable classifications of subjects for taxation and to make subclassifications of such classes. But it does not permit an arbitrary classification, the basis for which has no reasonable relationship to the purpose for which classification is made. Elder v. Smith, 188 Ga. 65, 2 S.E.2d 670, 1939 Ga. LEXIS 784 (1939).

Great leeway allowed in making taxation classifications. — Where taxation is concerned and no specific federal right, apart from equal protection, is imperiled, the state has large leeway in making classifications and drawing lines which in its judgment produces reasonable systems of taxation. Blackmon v. Monroe, 233 Ga. 656, 212 S.E.2d 827, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1410 (1975); Appling County v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 621 F.2d 1301, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15461 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1015, 101 S. Ct. 574, 66 L. Ed. 2d 474, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 4146 (1980).

Classification of trades, callings, businesses, or occupations. — Very wide discretion must be conceded to legislative power of state in classification of trades, callings, businesses, or occupations which may be subjected to special forms of regulation or taxation through an excise or license tax. If the selection or classification is neither capricious nor arbitrary, and rests upon some reasonable consideration of difference or policy, there is no denial of the equal protection of the law. Nance v. Harrison, 176 Ga. 674, 169 S.E. 22, 1933 Ga. LEXIS 251 (1933).

Statute protecting confidentiality of records of licensing agency. — The provision of O.C.G.A. § 43-40-27(d), prohibiting the discovery of any document in the possession of the Real Estate Commission, is not violative of due process. Demery v. Georgia Real Estate Comm'n, 266 Ga. 288, 466 S.E.2d 591.

When state regulation for public welfare not violative of due process.

— State regulation for the public welfare is not violative of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 so long as the law has a reasonable relation to a proper legislative purpose, and the means selected have a real and substantial relation to the object sought to be obtained. Eubanks v. Ferrier, 245 Ga. 763, 267 S.E.2d 230, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 929 (1980).

Social welfare statutory classification valid if rationally based and free from invidious discrimination.

— A statutory classification in the area of social welfare is consistent with the equal protection clauses of the U.S. Const., amends. 5 and 14 if it is rationally based and free from invidious discrimination. Fears v. United States, 386 F. Supp. 1223, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14379 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, Esparza-Nevarez v. U. S., 518 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Regulation of businesses affected with public interest.

— The prohibitory provisions as to due process of law and the equal protection of the laws do not preclude the state Legislature from regulating a business affected with a public interest, which is the equivalent of saying subject to the exercise of the police power, where, such regulation is not unreasonable, arbitrary, capricious, or discriminatory, and the means selected have a real and substantial relation to the object sought to be attained. Under the decision, such regulation may include the prices to be charged for the products or commodities. The function of courts in the application of U.S. Const., amend. 14 is to determine in each case whether circumstances vindicate the challenged regulation as a reasonable exertion of governmental authority or condemn it as arbitrary or discriminatory. Bohannon v. Duncan, 185 Ga. 840, 196 S.E. 897, 1938 Ga. LEXIS 552 (1938).

State regulation of business transactions.

— As a necessary consequence of a state's possession of powers, the state has the right to enforce any conditions imposed by the laws as preliminary to the transaction of business within its confines by a foreign corporation, and the state has also the further right to prohibit a citizen from contracting within the jurisdiction with any foreign company which has not acquired the privilege of engaging in business therein, either in its own behalf or through an agent empowered to that end. Such an intrastate transaction does not fall within the guaranty of U.S. Const., amend. 14 of the federal Constitution. Cooper Co. v. State, 187 Ga. 497, 1 S.E.2d 436, 1939 Ga. LEXIS 427 (1939) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 56-528 to 56-530).

Prohibition on granting of licenses to operate adult bookstore valid.

— A prohibition against granting a license to operate an adult bookstore to any person who has been convicted in the previous five years of a felony or misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, or sexual, gambling, drug, alcohol or similar offenses, is valid as a proper exercise of the police power. Airport Bookstore, Inc. v. Jackson, 242 Ga. 214, 248 S.E.2d 623, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1147 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 952, 99 S. Ct. 2182, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1057, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 1930 (1979).

Business regulations void where without reasonable or substantial relation to general welfare.

— Ga. L. 1937, p. 280, establishing a state board of photographic examiners, and providing, among other things that except as to stated classes, person desiring to engage in the business of photography or photofinishing must stand an examination and thereby qualify as to competency, ability, and integrity, and denouncing as a crime a violation of any of the terms of the act, is unconstitutional and void as an exercise of the police power. The prescribed regulations are imposed upon a lawful business, and considered as a whole do not bear any reasonable or substantial relation to the public health, safety, or morality, or other phase of the general welfare. Bramley v. State, 187 Ga. 826, 2 S.E.2d 647, 1939 Ga. LEXIS 771 (1939).

Defining qualifications for those in occupation or profession affecting public health or welfare proper.

— Legislation which defines the qualifications for one who engages in an occupation or profession affecting the public health, safety, morals or welfare is a proper exercise of the police power. Airport Bookstore, Inc. v. Jackson, 242 Ga. 214, 248 S.E.2d 623, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1147 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 952, 99 S. Ct. 2182, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1057, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 1930 (1979).

Regulation of right to practice medicine. — Right to practice medicine is conditional right subordinate to state's power and duty to safeguard public health; and it is the universal rule that in the performance of such duty and in the exercise of such power, the state may regulate and control the practice of medicine and those engaging in it, subject only to the limitation that the measures adopted must be reasonable, necessary, and appropriate to accomplish the Legislature's valid objective of protecting the health and welfare of its inhabitants. Geiger v. Jenkins, 316 F. Supp. 370, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10892 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 401 U.S. 985, 91 S. Ct. 1236, 28 L. Ed. 2d 525, 1971 U.S. LEXIS 2561 (1971).

Residency requirement for license for retail malt beverage and wine sellers upheld. — It is not an unreasonable exercise of the police power to require that a licensee, whether as an individual or as a member of a partnership, must have been a resident of the county for one year preceding the application for license. There is a reasonable basis for distinction between wholesale and retail dealers, and the residence requirement as to retail dealers is not unfairly discriminatory because it does not apply to wholesale dealers. Bonner v. Maddox, 227 Ga. 598, 182 S.E.2d 122, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 787 (1971).

Objective standards for obtaining liquor license required. — While it is firmly established that the state has the right to regulate or prohibit traffic in intoxicating liquor in the valid exercise of its police power, the due process requirement of U.S. Const., amend. 14 mandates that objective standards be set out to afford notice to applicants of requirements for obtaining a license. Mayor of Hapeville v. Anderson, 246 Ga. 786, 272 S.E.2d 713, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1282 (1980).

Regulation of nonuseful occupation potentially harmful to public. —

U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not prevent state from regulating or prohibiting nonuseful occupation which may become harmful to public, and the regulation or prohibition need not be postponed until the evil is flagrant. One cannot be heard to complain about loss of money because a business which may be subject to regulation under the police power of the state is legislated out of existence. Phillips v. City of Atlanta, 57 F. Supp. 588, 1944 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1756 (D. Ga.), aff'd, 145 F.2d 470, 1944 U.S. App. LEXIS 2550 (5th Cir. 1944).

Only invidious discrimination or patently arbitrary classifications barred. — Only "invidious" discrimination or classifications which are "patently arbitrary and utterly lacking in rational justification" are barred by either the due process or equal protection clauses. Milner v. Burson, 320 F. Supp. 706, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9046 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Burden on one assailing classification to show it arbitrary. — One who assails the classification in a law must carry the burden of showing that it does not rest upon any reasonable basis, but is essentially arbitrary. McCullers v. Williamson, 221 Ga. 358, 144 S.E.2d 911, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 464 (1965).

Justification necessary for zoning classification. — As the individual's right to the unfettered use of the individual's property confronts the police power under which zoning is done, the balance the law strikes is that a zoning classification may only be justified if it bears a substantial relation to the public health, safety, morality or general welfare. Lacking such justification, the zoning may be set aside as arbitrary or unreasonable. Barrett v. Hamby, 235 Ga. 262, 219 S.E.2d 399, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 850 (1975).

Police power to zone to prevent future use not subject to question or requirement for compensation. — The police power of the state to zone property to prevent its use for certain purposes in the future, as distinguished from the taking or damaging in respect to a use already in existence, is not open to question, and does not require the payment of any compensation. National Adv. Co. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 230 Ga. 119, 195 S.E.2d 895, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 830 (1973).

Power to enforce building code regulation. — Plaintiffs violated building code regulation by transporting a house through the streets of the county without having obtained a permit or giving the county the required 24 hours notice, and damaged a traffic light in the process. In the course of investigating the offense and determining how and whether to cite the plaintiffs, the police officer detained them and, although the police officer perhaps could have acted somewhat more quickly in making the officer's determination and perhaps could have been more solicitous of the discomfort that the plaintiffs purportedly suffered by having to sit in a hot car during the process, neither the officer nor the county violated the plaintiffs' constitutional rights. Lyle v. Dodd, 857 F. Supp. 958, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9896 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

Municipal ordinance duly enacted under ample grant of power is presumably constitutional and binding. Hart v. Columbus, 125 Ga. App. 625, 188 S.E.2d 422, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1429 (1972).

Constitutionality of ordinances favored. — It is a general rule governing the validity and construction of ordinances that their constitutionality is favored and courts are reluctant to declare an ordinance unconstitutional. Hart v. Columbus, 125 Ga. App. 625, 188 S.E.2d 422, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1429 (1972).

Municipal ordinances must be reasonable; the limitations of the power of a city council in this regard are not to be measured by the more extensive powers of the state Legislature. De Berry v. City of La Grange, 62 Ga. App. 74, 8 S.E.2d 146, 1940 Ga. App. LEXIS 598 (1940).

Any municipal ordinance that is unreasonable will be held void. Humthlett v. Reeves, 212 Ga. 8, 90 S.E.2d 14, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1955).

Municipal ordinance cannot be oppressive or unfairly discriminate. — Ordinances cannot be oppressive or unreasonable, nor can they unfairly discriminate in favor of one citizen or of one class against another. De Berry v. City of La Grange, 62 Ga. App. 74, 8 S.E.2d 146, 1940 Ga. App. LEXIS 598 (1940).

Municipality may make reasonable rules and regulations and may re- quire permits. — While a municipality may make reasonable rules and regulations looking to the protection, safety and health of its citizens and may require permits for the exercise of its power of regulation, the grant or refusal of a permit to dig a well cannot be left to arbitrary discretion. City of Hawkinsville v. Clark, 135 Ga. App. 875, 219 S.E.2d 577, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1855 (1975).

Ordinance is unconstitutional if city board of commissioners given arbitrary authority to grant permits. — An ordinance is constitutionally defective if it grants to the board of commissioners of a city the arbitrary authority to grant a permit to dig a well to some and to refuse others by prescribing no rule or guide by which it may be impartially executed and which will preclude partiality. City of Hawkinsville v. Clark, 135 Ga. App. 875, 219 S.E.2d 577, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1855 (1975).

Subjecting municipal bylaws and ordinances to court investigation. — Municipal bylaws and ordinances undertaking to regulate useful business enterprises are subject to investigation in the courts with a view to determining whether the law or ordinance is a lawful exercise of the police power, or whether, under the guise of enforcing police regulation, there has been an unwarranted and arbitrary interference with the constitutional right to carry on a lawful business or use and enjoy property. Borough of Atlanta v. Kirk, 175 Ga. 395, 165 S.E. 69, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 257 (1932).

Determination of reasonableness of ordinance made under circumstances and conditions at time of case. — In determining the reasonableness of an ordinance based upon statutory authority, such determination must be made under the circumstances and conditions of the case at the present time, and not contemporaneous with the passage of the original ordinance. Humthlett v. Reeves, 212 Ga. 8, 90 S.E.2d 14, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1955).

Municipal government without power under "police power" to discriminate between licensees arbitrarily and without cause. — A municipal government, after adopting an ordinance pursuant to the state law regulating intoxicating liquors, providing for sale of licenses for one year unless sooner revoked for violation of rules and regulations therein, is without power under "police power" to arbitrarily and without cause discriminate between such licensees by revoking one license and not those of others who occupy exactly the same position since the licensee had something more than a "mere privilege" and was entitled to the equal protection guaranteed by the Constitution. Mayor of Savannah v. Savannah Distrib. Co., 202 Ga. 559, 43 S.E.2d 704, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 483 (1947).

Municipal ordinance prohibiting sales during certain times at certain place valid under police power. — A municipal ordinance providing that it shall be illegal "for any person, firm, or corporation to sell or offer for sale any goods, wares, merchandise, pamphlets, magazines, maps, or other article of value, on any Saturday between the hours of 12 noon and 9 p.m. on any of the following congested sidewalks of said city," designating certain sidewalks and providing a penalty therefor, is a valid and reasonable regulation for public safety and convenience, under the police power of the city. Where plaintiffs seek to enjoin enforcement of the ordinance against them, on the grounds that the magazines sold and offered for sale are devoted to religious subjects, and advocate the adoption of a particular form of religion, the distribution of which is a part of their religious belief, and urge that to prohibit the sale of the magazines would be in violation of their rights of religious freedom under the state and federal Constitutions, it is not error to deny an injunction. Jones v. City of Moultrie, 196 Ga. 526, 27 S.E.2d 39, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 388 (1943).

Reasonable basis must be shown for injunctive relief or declaratory judgment. — While a municipality can, in the exercise of its police power, make reasonable regulations to protect its citizens, including measures designed to preclude the use of water unfit for human consumption or other use, as obtained from a users' private source, or as supplied to a user by others, there is no reason to recognize a claim for injunctive relief or declaratory judgment by the city absent some indication from the claim, as alleged, to show that some reasonable basis exists for protecting the health and welfare of its citizens in this manner. City of Midway v. Midway Nursing & Convalescent Ctr., Inc., 230 Ga. 77, 195 S.E.2d 452, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 817 (1973).

Constitutional restraints limit state power to terminate entitlement whether the entitlement is denominated a "right" or a "privilege." Davis v. Weir, 328 F. Supp. 317, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12816 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Regulation of game fish proper. — While it is true that ownership of fish in private ponds is a property right, it is not an absolute and unqualified right, and is bounded by the limitation that it must always yield to the state's power to regulate and preserve for the public good. Therefore, O.C.G.A. § 27-4-74 (sale, purchase, transportation, etc. of game fish generally) functions to protect the stocks of fish swimming freely in waters of this state and as such is a proper exercise of the police power. Maddox v. State, 252 Ga. 198, 312 S.E.2d 325, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 641, cert. denied, 469 U.S. 820, 105 S. Ct. 93, 83 L. Ed. 2d 39, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 3105 (1984).

Deputy's power to direct owner away from burning building. — Under the police power, a deputy sheriff is authorized to go upon private property and direct the owner to move back from a burning building when the deputy has been made aware of the possibility of an explosion. Veit v. State, 182 Ga. App. 753, 357 S.E.2d 113, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2656 (1987).

Protection of Constitutional Rights*1. Freedom of Speech and Assembly Issues

When use of language can be restricted. — Former Code 1933, § 26-2610 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-11-39.1), which made use of "fighting words," obscene and vulgar or profane language or harassing phone calls a misdemeanor, was not unconstitutional as a violation of U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. Grantham v. State, 151 Ga. App. 707, 261 S.E.2d 445, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2759, aff'd, 244 Ga. 775, 262 S.E.2d 777, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1408 (1979).

Freedom of speech and of press among personal rights and liberties protected. — Freedom of speech and of the press — which are protected by the U.S. Const., amend. 1 from abridgement by Congress — are among the fundamental personal rights and “liberties” protected by the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 from impairment by the states. Carr v. State, 176 Ga. 55, 166 S.E. 827, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 383 (1932).

First amendment freedoms protected from state impairment by due process clause include political activities. — The “liberty” protected from state impairment by due process clause of fourteenth amendment includes freedoms of speech and association guaranteed by first amendment. These first amendment freedoms extend to political activities such as running for elective office, and state election practices must therefore serve legitimate state interest narrowly and fairly to avoid obstructing and diluting these fundamental liberties. Duncan v. Poynthress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Liberty may include, but not limited to, freedom of speech. — There is more than one kind of liberty; the term may include, but is not limited to, freedom of speech. Herndon v. State, 179 Ga. 597, 176 S.E. 620, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 340 (1934), dismissed, Herndon v. Georgia, 295 U.S. 441, 55 S. Ct. 794, 79 L. Ed. 1530, 1935 U.S. LEXIS 329 (1935).

Freedom of speech and freedom of press protected from invasion by state action. — Freedom of speech and freedom of the press, which are protected by the U.S. Const., amend. 1 from infringement by Congress, are among the fundamental personal rights and liberties which are protected by U.S. Const., amend. 14 from invasion by state action. Lovell v. City of Griffin, 303 U.S. 444, 58 S. Ct. 666, 82 L. Ed. 949, 1938 U.S. LEXIS 297 (1938); Walter v. State, 131 Ga. App.

No absolute right to speak or publish. — It is a fundamental principle, long established that the freedom of speech and of the press which is secured by the Constitution, does not confer an absolute right to speak or publish, without responsibility, whatever one may choose, or an unrestricted and unbridled license that gives immunity for every possible use of language and prevents the punishment of those who abuse this freedom. Carr v. State, 176 Ga. 55, 166 S.E. 827, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 383 (1932).

Constitutional protection of speech and press outside of infringement of rights of others. — When taken as it must be as a harmonious part of the entire Constitution, and in light of history, a construction is demanded that the U.S. Const., amend. 1, by the words “speech” and “press,” means only speech and press outside of infringement of the rights of others. K. Gordon Murray Prods., Inc. v. Floyd, 217 Ga. 784, 125 S.E.2d 207, 1962 Ga. LEXIS 392 (1962).

Punishment of those abusing freedom of speech and press within police power. — That a state in the exercise of its police power may punish those who abuse the freedom of speech and press by utterances inimical to the public welfare, tending to corrupt public morals, incite to crime, or disturb the public peace is not open to question. Carr v. State, 176 Ga. 55, 166 S.E. 827, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 383 (1932).

Narrow construction of statutes regulating speech. — Constitutionally guaranteed freedom of speech forbids states’ punishing use of language not within “narrowly limited classes of speech.” In other words, a statute must be carefully drawn or be authoritatively construed to punish only unprotected speech and not be susceptible of application to protected expression. Gooding v. Wilson, 405 U.S. 518, 92 S. Ct. 1103, 31 L. Ed. 2d 408, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 72 (1972).

State may penalize utterances openly advocating overthrow of government. — A state may penalize utterances which openly advocate the overthrow of the representative and constitutional form of government of the United States and the several states, by violence or other unlawful means. Carr v. State, 176 Ga. 55, 166 S.E. 827, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 383 (1932).

When injunction not invalid as illegal prior restraint. — If prior to the issuance of an injunction an adequate determination is made that certain communication is unprotected by constitutional provisions safeguarding freedom of speech; that the order is based on a continuing course of repetitive conduct; and that the order is clear and sweeps no more broadly than necessary, then the injunction is not invalid as an illegal prior restraint. Retail Credit Co. v. Russell, 234 Ga. 765, 218 S.E.2d 54, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1253 (1975).

Right of free speech subject to restriction where required to protect state. — Freedom of speech and press does not protect disturbances to public peace or attempt to subvert government. It does not protect publications or teachings which tend to subvert or imperil the government or to impede or hinder it in the performance of its governmental duties. Carr v. State, 176 Ga. 55, 166 S.E. 827, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 383 (1932).

The right of free speech is not absolute and is subject to restriction "if the particular restriction proposed is required in order to protect the state from destruction or from serious injury, political, economic, or moral." Herndon v. State, 179 Ga. 597, 176 S.E. 620, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 340 (1934), dismissed, Herndon v. Georgia, 295 U.S. 441, 55 S. Ct. 794, 79 L. Ed. 1530, 1935 U.S. LEXIS 329 (1935).

Necessity which is essential to valid restriction does not exist unless speech would produce, or is intended to produce, a clear and imminent danger of some substantive evil which the state constitutionally may seek to prevent. Herndon v. State, 179 Ga. 597, 176 S.E. 620, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 340 (1934), dismissed, Herndon v. Georgia, 295 U.S. 441, 55 S. Ct. 794, 79 L. Ed. 1530, 1935 U.S. LEXIS 329 (1935).

First amendment guarantees pro- tected. — States and municipalities may no more interfere with freedom of speech than may national government. Southeastern Promotions, Ltd. v. City of Atlanta, 334 F. Supp. 634, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10886 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Defendant's conviction for violating O.C.G.A. § 46-5-21(a)(1) was reversed as the statute was an overbroad infringement on defendant's first amendment and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. V rights to free speech; the statute does not contain the necessary language setting out the least restrictive means to further a compelling state interest as it applies to indecent or obscene speech, whether heard by children or adults, and whether not welcomed by listeners or spoken with intent to please. McKenzie v. State, 279 Ga. 265, 626 S.E.2d 77, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 295 (2005).

Ordinance unconstitutional for placing condition precedent on and unlawfully restricting freedoms of speech, press and assembly. — Ordinance of city of Baxley shows on its face that it is violative of the U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14 in that it places a condition precedent upon, and otherwise unlawfully restricts, the defendant's freedom of speech as well as freedom of the press and freedom of lawful assembly by requiring, as conditions precedent to the exercise of those rights, the issuance of a "license" which the mayor and city council are authorized by the ordinance to grant or refuse in their discretion, and the payment of a "license fee" that is discriminatory and unreasonable in amount and constitutes a prohibitory flat tax upon the privilege of soliciting persons to join a labor union. Staub v. City of Baxley, 97 Ga. App. 221, 102 S.E.2d 643, 1958 Ga. App. LEXIS 743 (1958).

Municipality may not discriminate in regulation of expression on basis of content. — A municipality may not under U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14 discriminate in the regulation of expression on the basis of the content of that expression. Hudgens v. NLRB, 424 U.S. 507, 96 S. Ct. 1029, 47 L. Ed. 2d 196, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 5 (1976).

Teacher's oath unconstitutional. —

Language of an oath to refrain from directly or indirectly subscribing to or teaching any theory of government or economics or social relations which is inconsistent with the fundamental principles of patriotism and high ideals of Americanism provides no ascertainable standard of conduct. It is vague and uncertain in that there is no definition of fundamental principles or patriotism or high ideas of Americanism and one would necessarily teach at one's peril in the areas of government, economics or social relations. This language is thus unconstitutional and void under the U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. It constitutes a denial of due process under U.S. Const., amend. 14 in light of the penal provision, and a prohibited inhibition on the U.S. Const., amend. 1, right to freedom of speech which is protected from state invasion by U.S. Const., amend. 14. Georgia Conference of Am. Ass'n of Univ. Professors v. Board of Regents, 246 F. Supp. 553, 1965 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7174 (N.D. Ga. 1965).

Peaceful picketing at department stores open to public. — Peaceful picketing to eliminate racial discrimination in department stores open to public is right embraced in free speech under the U.S. Const., amend. 1, and made applicable to the states by U.S. Const., amend. 14. Kelly v. Page, 335 F.2d 114, 1964 U.S. App. LEXIS 4693 (5th Cir. 1964).

Georgia "Anti-Mask Act," O.C.G.A. § 16-11-38, which proscribes intimidating or threatening mask-wearing behavior, does not violate the constitutional rights of freedom of speech, freedom of association, and equal protection of the law. State v. Miller, 260 Ga. 669, 398 S.E.2d 547, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 459 (1990).

1994 Sign Ordinance. — The 1994 Sign Ordinance, a comprehensive regulatory framework for the posting of all signs within the City of Atlanta, does not violate equal protection or free speech. Outdoor Sys. v. City of Atlanta, 885 F. Supp. 1572, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12185 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Statute regulating profane words on bumper stickers unconstitutionally restricts freedom of expression as guaranteed by the first and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution and by the Georgia Constitution. Cunningham v. State, 260 Ga. 827, 400 S.E.2d 916, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 70 (1991).

Obscenity not protected liberty. — Freedom of expression does not extend to obscenity, though state regulation of obscenity must conform to procedure that will ensure against the curtailment of constitutionally protected expression, which is often separated from obscenity only by a dim and uncertain line. Carter v. Gautier, 305 F. Supp. 1098, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10110 (M.D. Ga. 1969); Central Agency, Inc. v. Brown, 306 F. Supp. 502, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8799 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

Regulation of distribution of obscenity. — States have legitimate interest in controlling commercial distribution and exploitation of obscenity. Flynt v. State, 153 Ga. App. 232, 264 S.E.2d 669, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 1762, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 888, 101 S. Ct. 245, 66 L. Ed. 2d 114, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3413 (1980).

Publications obscene as matter of law and fact. — Where publications depict acts of natural and aberrational sexual conduct, including the participants' genitals, solely for their own lewd and lascivious purpose and there is no discernible meaning other than pornographic, these magazines are obscene as a matter of law and fact. They are not protected expression under U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. Whisenhunt v. State, 156 Ga. App. 583, 275 S.E.2d 82, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3130 (1980).

Private possession of obscene materials, not obscenity, is within protection of U.S. Const., amend. 14. — Obscenity is not within the protected pale of U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14, but the private possession of obscene materials is so protected. Gable v. Jenkins, 309 F. Supp. 998, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13744 (D. Ga. 1969), aff'd, 397 U.S. 592, 90 S. Ct. 1351, 25 L. Ed. 2d 595, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 2072 (1970).

Nude and sexual conduct on premises where alcohol served. — Statute prohibiting certain nude and sexual conduct on premises where alcoholic beverages are sold or dispensed for consumption on the premises infringes upon protected speech and must fall as an improper exercise of the state's police power. Harris v. Entertainment Sys., 259 Ga. 701, 386 S.E.2d 140, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 532 (1989).

Although a state may have a certain amount of its police power restored to it under the twenty-first amendment that would otherwise be limited under the first amendment, the expression involved in an establishment offering sexually-oriented communication where alcohol is served is still within the purview of the first amendment, and is still protected by Georgia's free expression guarantees. Because Georgia has no constitutional equivalent to the twenty-first amendment, the state's police power, though possibly not limited under the U.S. Constitution, is limited by Georgia's Constitution. Harris v. Entertainment Sys., 259 Ga. 701, 386 S.E.2d 140, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 532 (1989).

Adult entertainment ordinance of sufficient notice. — Adult entertainment ordinance restricting establishments offering nude dancing and alcohol, while excluding certain mainstream performance houses with less than 20% of gross annual income from the sale of alcohol, was not void for vagueness as it was sufficiently specific in its terms to permit defendants to conduct themselves so as to avoid that which was forbidden. S.J.T., Inc. v. Richmond County, 263 Ga. 267, 430 S.E.2d 726, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 490, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1011, 114 S. Ct. 601, 126 L. Ed. 2d 567, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 7655 (1993).

Motion pictures protected by Constitution. — Motion pictures are within ambit of constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and of the press. K. Gordon Murray Prods., Inc. v. Floyd, 217 Ga. 784, 125 S.E.2d 207, 1962 Ga. LEXIS 392 (1962); Carter v. Gautier, 305 F. Supp. 1098, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10110 (M.D. Ga. 1969).

Right of commercial exploitation of film amounts to private right. — Although expression by means of motion pictures is included within the free expression or free press guarantee of U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14, the right of commercial exploitation of a film does not represent a great public interest, but amounts to a private right. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15272 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8695 (5th Cir. 1973).

Adult films may be classed differently from other films and regulated.

— A zoning ordinance regulating the location of "adult motion picture theaters" and treating them differently from other motion picture theaters, does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 1 or U.S. Const., amend. 14 because even though a city may not suppress adult films, it may place them in a different classification from other films and regulate them. Airport Bookstore, Inc. v. Jackson, 242 Ga. 214, 248 S.E.2d 623, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1147 (1978), cert. denied, 441 U.S. 952, 99 S. Ct. 2182, 60 L. Ed. 2d 1057, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 1930 (1979).

Charter and ordinance forbidding showing picture without prior approval not unconstitutional on its face. — A charter and ordinance which forbids the showing of any picture without its prior approval by a censor does not on its face offend the United States Constitution. K. Gordon Murray Prods., Inc. v. Floyd, 217 Ga. 784, 125 S.E.2d 207, 1962 Ga. LEXIS 392 (1962).

Provision making distributing obscene materials misdemeanor not unconstitutional. — Code 1933, § 26-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-12-80) is not violative of the U.S. Const., amends. 1, 4, 5, 9 and 14 on the ground that the constitutional right to mere possession of obscene material necessarily implies the right to purchase such material and, hence, the right of others to distribute it. Gornto v. State, 227 Ga. 46, 178 S.E.2d 894, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 394 (1970), cert. denied, 402 U.S. 933, 91 S. Ct. 1525, 28 L. Ed. 2d 868, 1971 U.S. LEXIS 2325 (1971).

Conviction on obscenity charge not permitted unless work substantially exceeds limits of community standards. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not permit a conviction on obscenity charges unless the work complained of is found substantially to exceed the limits of candor set by contemporary community standards. Flynt v. State, 153 Ga. App. 232, 264 S.E.2d 669, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 1762, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 888, 101 S. Ct. 245, 66 L. Ed. 2d 114, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3413 (1980).

Constructive knowledge provision in statute concerning distribution of obscene materials not unconstitutional. — Constitutional attack upon former Code 1933, § 26-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-12-80) that the constructive knowledge as found therein is a violation of the constitutional requirements as to scienter was not meritorious. Showcase Cinemas, Inc. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 225, 274 S.E.2d 578, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3008 (1980), cert. dismissed, 451 U.S. 934, 101 S. Ct. 2037, 68 L. Ed. 2d 343, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 1817 (1981).

Hearing and determination required before revocation of business license for exhibiting obscene film. — Just as there can be no massive seizure of allegedly obscene materials for destruction without a prior adversary type hearing and determination of obscenity, there can be no valid revocation of a business license for having exhibited an obscene film without such prior hearing and determination. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15272 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8695 (5th Cir. 1973).

Greater safeguards required for constructive seizure of presumptively protected material. — When dealing with presumptively protected material greater procedural safeguards must be afforded before “constructive seizure.” This usually involves the requirement of a judicial determination of some type by a neutral, detached magistrate either before or immediately after the seizure of allegedly obscene material. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 20758 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2411 (1980).

Retailer or distributor of presumptively protected material must be afforded greater procedural safeguards before seizure or “constructive seizure” may take place. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 20758 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2411 (1980).

State lacks desire to protect obscenity. — The requirement that there be a prior adversary judicial hearing on the question of obscenity before a seizure does not mean that courts, either federal or state, desire to protect obscenity. It does mean that the Supreme Court of the United States has decided that lest the nonobscene and the constitutionally protected be suppressed it is better that some judicial officer judicially determine, after hearing competent evidence, that the challenged matter is obscene before its seizure. Carter v. Gautier, 305 F. Supp. 1098, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10110 (M.D. Ga. 1969).

Where allegedly obscene materials seized, federal court will not interfere while case pending in state courts. — Where allegedly obscene films and projectors are seized as evidence of a violation of former Code 1933, § 26-2101 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-12-80), and the case is pending in the state courts, federal courts will not interfere with the pending case by requiring release of the contraband as an unconstitutional seizure. G & E Bus. Servs., Inc. v. McAuliffe, 480 F. Supp. 239, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8418 (N.D. Ga. 1979).

Interim injunctive relief not warranted in challenge to statute restricting distribution of publications to minors. — Plaintiffs, consisting of booksellers, publishers, distributors, stores, retailers, as well as an author, challenging the constitutionality of O.C.G.A. § 16-12-103 (distribution of sexually explicit materials to minors) on the ground that it would prevent even parents from providing proscribed materials to their children, in violation of the parents' federal constitutional rights to direct their children's upbringing and education, did not establish that any significant portion of their business would consist in selling parents materials covered by the challenged law and, thus, did not show that their injury would be sufficiently great to justify interim injunctive relief to protect the plaintiffs during the federal court's period of abstention while the plaintiffs sought a ruling from the state court on state and federal constitutional grounds. *American Booksellers Ass'n v. Burden on government employee to prove exercise of constitutionally protected speech was substantial factor in discharge. — A government employee has the burden of proving that the employee's speech was constitutionally protected and that its exercise was a substantial factor in the employee's discharge. *Courts v. ### 2. Freedom of Association

Liberty includes freedom of association. — Due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 prevents state governments from infringing upon right of free association. Doherty v. Wilson, 356 F. Supp. 35, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14495 (M.D. Ga. 1973).

Freedom to engage in association for advancement of beliefs and ideas is inseparable aspect of "liberty" assured by the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 which embraces freedom of speech. Stoner v. Fortson, 379 F. Supp. 704, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7306 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Compelled disclosure of affiliation with group advocating beliefs constitutes restraint on freedom of association. — Where a group is engaged in advocacy of particular beliefs, whether they be political, economic, religious, or cultural, compelled disclosure of affiliation with such a group constitutes a restraint on one's freedom of association. Stoner v. Fortson, 379 F. Supp. 704, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7306 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

3. Right to Travel

Constitutional right to travel from one state to another, and necessarily to use the highways and other instrumentalities of interstate commerce in doing so, occupies a position fundamental to the concept of the federal union. United States v. Guest, 383 U.S. 745, 86 S. Ct. 1170, 16 L. Ed. 2d 239, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 2838 (1966).

Right to move from state to state is protected by privileges and immunities clause. — Right to move freely from state to state is an incident of national citizenship protected by privileges and immunities clause of fourteenth amendment against state interference. Jones v. Helms, 452 U.S. 412, 101 S. Ct. 2434, 69 L. Ed. 2d 118, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 124 (1981).

Right to travel is protected by due process clause. — Right to travel is a privilege of national citizenship, and an aspect of liberty that is protected by due process clauses of fifth and Fourteenth Amendments. Jones v. Helms, 452 U.S. 412, 101 S. Ct. 2434, 69 L. Ed. 2d 118, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 124 (1981).

Persons, including indigents and other migrants, have a right to free travel. Jones v. Helms, 452 U.S. 412, 101 S. Ct. 2434, 69 L. Ed. 2d 118, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 124 (1981).

Distinction between precluding inward migration and efforts to obtain return of alleged criminals for prosecution. — There is an entirely obvious difference between an attempt by a "receiving state" to preclude or discourage inward migration from "sending states" of persons deemed by the receiving state to be "undesirables," "noncontributors" or "economically burdensome persons," and efforts by a sending state to bring persons accused of crimes back from receiving states to face criminal trial and punishment in the sending state. Jones v. Helms, 452 U.S. 412, 101 S. Ct. 2434, 69 L. Ed. 2d 118, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 124 (1981).

Delivering person charged with crime to state having jurisdiction. — Persons charged with commission of crimes shall be delivered up to state having jurisdiction over crime. Jones v. Helms, 452 U.S. 412, 101 S. Ct. 2434, 69

Right to travel cannot bar prosecution. — Person charged in Georgia with commission of a crime who has left Georgia and entered another state cannot be said to have a constitutionally protected right of free travel in interstate commerce that can be asserted to bar prosecution for Georgia offense. Jones v. Helms, 452 U.S. 412, 101 S. Ct. 2434, 69 L. Ed. 2d 118, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 124 (1981).

One who has committed an offense against laws of Georgia may be stopped at its borders and temporarily deprived of the freedom to travel elsewhere within or without the state. Jones v. Helms, 452 U.S. 412, 101 S. Ct. 2434, 69 L. Ed. 2d 118, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 124 (1981).

4. Right to Employment

An employee has no inherent right to seniority in service; and where seniority arises only out of contract, such rights created and arising under the contract do not extend beyond its life when it has been legally terminated. Lamon v. Georgia S. & F. Ry., 212 Ga. 63, 90 S.E.2d 658, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 548 (1955).

Seniority among railway workers is fundamentally and wholly contractual, does not arise from mere employment, and is not an inherent, natural, or constitutional right. Lamon v. Georgia S. & F. Ry., 212 Ga. 63, 90 S.E.2d 658, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 548 (1955).

Violation or misapplication of existing bargaining agreement deprives employee of protectible rights. — Violation or misapplication of an existing bargaining agreement, as by preferring an employee with less seniority over another with greater seniority, where the employee is still in service of the employer under the contract, deprives the employee of the employee's seniority rights, and such seniority rights, which are property rights, will be protected in the courts. Lamon v. Georgia S. & F. Ry., 212 Ga. 63, 90 S.E.2d 658, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 548 (1955).

Reduction in social security benefits to reflect workers' compensation payments. — Reduction in social security benefits to reflect workers' compensation payments to beneficiary has rational basis and does not violate the due process clause. Massey v. Thiokol Chem. Corp., 368 F. Supp. 668, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10506 (S.D. Ga. 1973).

Employment benefit as property interest. — Person's interest in employment benefit is "property" interest for due process purposes if there are rules or mutually explicit understandings that support the person's claim of entitlement to the benefit and that he may invoke at a hearing. Harrison v. Housing Auth., 445 F. Supp. 356, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19692 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 592 F.2d 281, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15781 (5th Cir. 1979).

Explicit recognition of property right in government benefit by positive law is not necessary in order for an interest to be greater than an abstract need or unilateral expectation. Jeffries v. Georgia Residential Fin. Auth., 503 F. Supp. 610, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15557 (N.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 678 F.2d 919, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18426 (11th Cir. 1982).

When government benefit may only be withdrawn for cause, legitimate expectation, entitlement, or property interest arises. Jeffries v. Georgia Residential Fin. Auth., 503 F. Supp. 610, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15557 (N.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 678 F.2d 919, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18426 (11th Cir. 1982).

Term "employing unit" within employment security law certain enough for purposes of due process. — Ga. L. 1937, pp. 806, 841 (see O.C.G.A. § 34-8-39) (employing unit) is not so vague and indefinite as not to be enforceable consistently with due process, in that it provides no basis for imposing the tax or contribution other than the unbridled discretion of the administrator. Jeffreys-McElrath Mfg. Co. v. Huiet, 196 Ga. 710, 27 S.E.2d 385, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 410 (1943).

Probationary employee without sufficient property interest for procedural due process. — Before the requirements of procedural due process come into play, one must be deprived of an interest in "life, liberty, or property." A probationary employee, who has no reasonable expectation of continued employment while in the probationary status, has no property interest in his or her continued employment sufficient to call forth procedural due process when that employment is terminated. Burnley v. Thompson, 524 F.2d 1233, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 11293 (5th Cir. 1975).

State's withholding expected promotion or pay raise as sanction for exercise of free speech is unconstitutional. — For a state to withhold an expected promotion or pay raise as a sanction for the exercise of the right to free speech is a restriction of that right in violation of the U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. Goolsby v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 141 Ga. App. 605, 234 S.E.2d 165, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2014 (1977), overruled in part, Deal v. Coleman, 294 Ga. 170, 751 S.E.2d 337, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 965 (2013).

Application of Workers' Compensation Law to public employee compo-ports with due process. — Ga. L. 1920, p. 167 (see O.C.G.A. § 34-9-3), making the chapter on workers' compensation applicable to public employees, is not invalid as being in violation of the due process clauses of the state and federal Constitutions; nor does it deny to the defendant the equal protection of the laws. City of Macon v. Benson, 175 Ga. 502, 166 S.E. 26, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 280 (1932).

Immunity granted employers in the Workers' Compensation Act, O.C.G.A. § 34-9-1 et seq., does not violate the due process and equal protection provisions of the state and federal constitutions. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources v. Joseph Campbell Co., 261 Ga. 822, 411 S.E.2d 871, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 26 (1992).

Immunity granted employers in Workers' Compensation Act, O.C.G.A. § 34-9-1 et seq., does not violate the due process and equal protection provisions of the state and federal constitutions. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources v. Joseph Campbell Co., 261 Ga. 822, 411 S.E.2d 871, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 26 (1992).

Exclusiveness of remedy in workers' compensation system. — Concept of exclusiveness of remedy is rational mechanism for making the workers' compensation system work in accord with the purpose of the Workers' Compensation Act (see now O.C.G.A. § 34-9-1 et seq.). Massey v. Thiokol Chem. Corp., 368 F. Supp. 668, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10506 (S.D. Ga. 1973).

Rights applicable in workers' compensation proceedings. — The constitutional guaranty of due process grants every party to a lawsuit the opportunity to be heard and to present the party's claim or defense, i.e., to have the party's day in court. These rights are granted to all parties and are applicable in workers' compensation proceedings. Scott v. Tremco, Inc., 199 Ga. App. 606, 405 S.E.2d 347, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 588 (1991), cert. denied, No. S91C1130, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 724 (Ga. June 20, 1991).

Workers' compensation was the exclusive remedy following the on-the-job death of a Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority worker, as there was no independent substantive due process right to a safe working environment separate and beyond the framework of the workers' compensation laws. Brooks-Powers v. MARTA, 260 Ga. App. 390, 579 S.E.2d 802, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 369 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1101, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 662 (Ga. July 14, 2003), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 1089, 124 S. Ct. 959, 157 L. Ed. 2d 794, 2003 U.S. LEXIS 9216 (2003).

Termination of workers' compensation benefits. — O.C.G.A. § 34-9-221(i) and Board of Workers' Compensation Rule 221(i), which set out the conditions and methods by which an employer or insurer may terminate an employee's workers' compensation benefits without a prior hearing, are constitutionally sufficient to satisfy the requirements of due process. Cryder v. Oxendine, 24 F.3d 175, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 16199 (11th Cir. 1994).

Workers' Compensation Act applicable to personal property damage action. — Although the Georgia Workers' Compensation Act, O.C.G.A. § 34-9-1 et seq., does not provide a remedy for damage to personal property, the Act does not bar an action for damages to personal property, such as an employee's clothing. To hold otherwise would deny an employee the constitutional right to due process and equal protection of the law. Superb Carpet Mills, Inc. v. Thomason, 183 Ga. App. 554, 359 S.E.2d 370, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2021 (1987), aff'd, 398 S.E.2d 23, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 441 (Ga. 1990).

Nonresident aliens. — The equal protection clause did not extend to nonresident aliens; therefor, the State Board of Workers' Compensation correctly awarded death benefits under former O.C.G.A. § 34-9-265(b)(5), which limited compensation for dependents of nonresident aliens to $1,000, even though resident survivors would have been treated more favorably. Barge-Wagener Constr. Co. v. Morales, 263 Ga. 190, 429 S.E.2d 671, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 456, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1003, 114 S. Ct. 579, 126 L. Ed. 2d 477, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 7514 (1993).

The policy of the exclusive remedy provision of the workers' compensation law is served equally whether the employee is injured or killed, and such policy does not violate equal protection when applied to wrongful death actions. Smith v. Gortman, 261 Ga. 206, 403 S.E.2d 41, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 155 (1991).

State's basis of computing worker's compensation does not violate equal protection of U.S. Const., amend. 14 either facially or in the application thereof to blacks or low income segments of the state's employed population. Massey v. Thiokol Chem. Corp., 368 F. Supp. 668, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10506 (S.D. Ga. 1973).

Exemption of employers with less than five (now three) employees from provisions of Workers' Compensation Act (see now O.C.G.A. § 34-9-1 et seq.) not denial of equal protection to third-party joint tort-feasors. See Coleman v. GMC, 386 F. Supp. 87, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5684 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

City's withholding union dues for department requires same application to other department. — Where a city has unions within both fire and police departments, and has agreed to withhold union dues for the firemen who are union members, the city may not, under the equal protection clause, refuse to apply the same rules to its police. Truck Drivers

& Helpers Local 728 v. City of Atlanta, 468 F. Supp. 620, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13527 (N.D. Ga. 1979).

O.C.G.A. § 34-9-285, in authorizing disparate treatment of occupational diseases and other injuries compensable under the Workers' Compensation Act, O.C.G.A. § 34-9-1 et seq., does not violate constitutional guarantees of equal protection. Price v. Lithonia Lighting Co., 256 Ga. 49, 343 S.E.2d 688, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 692 (1986).

O.C.G.A. § 34-9-285, which provides a restrictive rule for determining worker's compensation benefits for persons disabled due to the aggravation of a pre-existing condition by an occupational disease, is rationally related to a legitimate state interest and does not violate the Fourteenth Amendment's equal protection clause. Price v. Tanner, 855 F.2d 820, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 12776 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1081, 109 S. Ct. 1534, 103 L. Ed. 2d 839, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1521 (1989).

Distinction among workers' injured while under influence of legal or illegal drugs. — Where an injured worker's claim was denied because the worker tested positive for marijuana and cocaine after the accident and then failed to rebut the presumption found in O.C.G.A. § 34-9-17(b)(2) that the accident was caused by the illegal use of controlled substances, the supreme court held that paragraph (b)(2) does not violate equal protection by differentiating between legal and illegal drug use. There is a rational basis for distinguishing between workers who are injured while taking prescription medication and those who are injured while taking illegal substances and distinguishing between legal and illegal drug use bears a direct and real relationship to the legitimate government objective of promoting a safe work place. Kendrix v. Hollingsworth Concrete Prods., 274 Ga. 210, 553 S.E.2d 270, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 649 (2001).

School board policy granting maternity leave to tenured teachers, denying maternity leave to untenured teachers, is arbitrary, it has no rational basis, and bears no relevance to the purpose of a Local Teacher Tenure Act or to the purpose of the administrative scheme of the Board of Education. Jinks v. Mays, 332 F. Supp. 254, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11469 (N.D. Ga. 1971), aff'd in part, 464 F.2d 1223, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 8142 (5th Cir. 1972).

Attachment of due process protection to employment or administrative position. — The success of due process arguments depends upon the finding of a constitutionally protected property interest in the expectation of continued employment, or of a liberty interest infringed by the state; absent such interest no due process protections attach to a plaintiff's employment or administrative position. Press v. Board of Regents, 489 F. Supp. 150, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12764 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Fair Dismissal Act constitutional. — The Fair Dismissal Act of Georgia, O.C.G.A. § 20-2-940 et seq., both on its face and as applied, not only met, but exceeded, the minimum due process standard in a situation where a teacher who was to be terminated for cause opposed his termination. Holley v. Seminole County Sch. Dist., 755 F.2d 1492, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28520 (11th Cir. 1985).

Termination of employment "for cause." — When a teacher to be terminated for cause opposes the termination, minimum procedural due process requires that the teacher be advised of the cause or causes for the termination in sufficient detail to fairly enable the teacher to show any error that may exist, the teacher be advised of the names and the nature of the testimony of witnesses against the teacher, and at a reasonable time after such advice the teacher must be accorded a meaningful opportunity to be heard in the teacher's own defense before a tribunal that both possesses some academic expertise and has an apparent impartiality toward the charges. Callaway v. Kirkland, 320 F. Supp. 1135, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8993 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Civil employment which allows termination only "for cause" creates expectation of continued employment that is constitutionally protected. Glenn v. Newman, 614 F.2d 467, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19305 (5th Cir. 1980).

Substantial evidence of "cause" not to renew teacher's contract. — There was substantial evidence — in the form of testimony by school personnel that a teacher repeatedly left school grounds without permission, failed to attend classes and lunchroom duties to which the teacher was assigned, threatened students with academic failure if they did not play football, and directed profanity at students — to support the school board's finding of "cause" not to renew that teacher's contract. Holley v. Seminole County Sch. Dist., 755 F.2d 1492, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28520 (11th Cir. 1985).

Standard of review for personnel appeals. — The fact that the Georgia legislature and courts have confined the scope of review in appeals from the State Personnel Board to an "any evidence" standard does not present a constitutional due process violation and, hence, the plaintiff was precluded as a matter of law from litigating the plaintiff's federal constitutional claim because of the plaintiff's previous state suit involving the same cause of action. Howkins v. Caldwell, 587 F. Supp. 98, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12715 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 749 F.2d 731, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16464 (11th Cir. 1984).

Termination for inability to work with others not liberty violation. — Charge of inability to get along with administrative superiors or coworkers is not sufficient to create a "badge of infamy" sufficient to implicate a "liberty interest" protected by U.S. Const., amend. 14. Press v. Board of Regents, 489 F. Supp. 150, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12764 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Discharge of city employee. — Discharged city employee failed to produce any evidence that the decision to terminate the employee and the personnel board's decision to uphold the termination were arbitrary, capricious or pretextual and therefore constituted a substantive due process violation. Jones v. City of E. Point, 795 F. Supp. 408, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7740 (N.D. Ga. 1992), aff'd, 987 F.2d 775, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 3391 (11th Cir. 1993).

Georgia's state law provision for review of the personnel board's decision through certiorari to the county superior court satisfies the requirements of procedural due process. Jones v. City of E. Point, 795 F. Supp. 408, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7740 (N.D. Ga. 1992), aff'd, 987 F.2d 775, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 3391 (11th Cir. 1993).

City employees fired for drug use not denied due process. — Employees of city board of lights and water fired for use of drugs on the job in violation of city policy were not denied due process where the city had evidence of such drug use and could reasonably conclude that such drug use constituted a threat to the safety of the community, the employees were given a full and fair opportunity to attack that evidence and its credibility, the process for the adjudication of the grounds for their termination satisfied the requirements of procedural due process, and state judicial avenues of appeal of the errors presently alleged had not been utilized. Allen v. City of Marietta, 601 F. Supp. 482, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23673 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

No protection from incorrect or ill-advised personnel decisions. — Due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 is not guarantee against incorrect or ill-advised personnel decisions. Harrison v. Housing Auth., 445 F. Supp. 356, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19692 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 592 F.2d 281, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15781 (5th Cir. 1979); Courts v. Economic Opportunity Auth. For Savannah—Chatham County Area, Inc., 451 F. Supp. 587, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17699 (S.D. Ga. 1978).

United States Constitution cannot feasibly be construed to require federal judicial review for every public agency error. In the absence of any claim that the public employer was motivated by a desire to curtail or to penalize the exercise of an employee's constitutionally protected rights, reviewing federal courts must presume that official action was regular and, if erroneous, can best be corrected in other ways. The due process clause of the fourteenth amendment is not a guarantee against incorrect or ill-advised personnel decisions. Williams v. Housing Auth., 158 Ga. App. 734, 282 S.E.2d 141, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2395 (1981).

Pretermination hearing to protect state employees interests before termination. — Statutory and regulatory scheme governing termination of classified state employees covered by State Merit System was unconstitutional in failing to provide a list of specific charges prior to termination and in failing to provide for a pretermination hearing or other meaningful opportunity to protect employees' interests before termination. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Employee may not be deprived of the employee's property or liberty interest in continued government employment absent some due process protection. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Post termination hearing. — Post termination hearing was sufficient to protect interests of discharged government employee meriting due process protection, whether those interests were in the nature of property or liberty. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Exceptional cases warranting immediate discharge. — Adequate pretermination procedures for public employees may contain provision for exceptional cases warranting immediate discharge. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

In emergency situations, the government may terminate a protected interest without affording any protections other than the right to a hearing before the termination becomes final. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Suspended police officer with no protected liberty interest. — In suit brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 any "stigma" suffered by suspended police officer plus the suspension and subsequent rescinding of the suspension gave rise to no liberty interest protected by due process of law. Sparks v. City of Atlanta, 496 F. Supp. 770, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13508 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Effect of state remedies redressing deprivation of procedural due process. — A school employee who was improperly dismissed did not have a claim for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 when the employee was reinstated in the employee's job with back pay as the result of state remedies that redressed any procedural due process deprivation that the employee suffered. Atlanta City Sch. Dist. v. Dowling, 266 Ga. 217, 466 S.E.2d 588, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 1160, cert. denied, 519 U.S. 812, 117 S. Ct. 59, 136 L. Ed. 2d 21, 1996 U.S. LEXIS 4694 (1996).

Failure to provide pretermination notice to school employee. — Even though the board of education failed to provide a school employee with pretermination notice, the employee could not maintain a claim for damages for procedural due process deprivation under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, since the employee could have sued the board in state court to enforce that right. Merritt v. Brantley, 936 F. Supp. 988, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16704 (S.D. Ga. 1996).

Subsequent hearing curing earlier deprivation. — Because the plaintiff had a property right and liberty interest in continued employment with the sheriff's department, the plaintiff must be afforded due process, including notice and an opportunity to be heard. However, the state may cure any procedural deprivation by providing a later procedural remedy; therefore, any error resulting from insufficient notice of the first pre-termination hearing is remedied by the second hearing. Smith v. Upson County, 859 F. Supp. 1504, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10992 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 56 F.3d 1392, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 13312 (11th Cir. 1995).

To be entitled to bring a claim of due process violations following termination, an employee must show that the employee has a property interest in continued employment. Abernathy v. City of Cartersville, 642 F. Supp. 529, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23389 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

A property interest in public employment arises whenever the public employee can be terminated only for cause. Barnett v. Housing Auth., 707 F.2d 1571, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 26375 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled in part, McKinney v. Pate, 20 F.3d 1550, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 10130 (11th Cir. 1994), overruled in part, Tindal v. Montgomery County Comm'n, 32 F.3d 1535, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 26962 (11th Cir. 1994); Hudgins v. City of Ashburn, 890 F.2d 396, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 18753 (11th Cir. 1989).

Where, after a hearing required by procedural due process, a hearing tribunal of the professional practice commission declined to revoke the plaintiff's teaching certificate, there was no deprivation of any property interest. Brewer v. Schacht, 235 Ga. App. 313, 509 S.E.2d 378, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1502 (1998), cert. denied, No. S99C0403, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 288 (Ga. Mar. 5, 1999).

Right to continued public employment may arise where there is a guarantee of employment for a fixed term or where the employment allows termination only for cause. Moore v. Tri-City Hosp. Auth., 696 F. Supp. 1496, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10717 (N.D. Ga. 1988).

No right to continued public employment or pay raises. — The fact that most of a public employee's previous contracts have been for a certain length of time and have contained pay raises may lead to an expectation of receiving these terms, but it does not evidence an entitlement to them, where there is no statute, rule, regulation, policy, or contractual term that reasonably could be read as providing him with an entitlement to these benefits. Cook v. Ashmore, 579 F. Supp. 78, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20170 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

No property interest in promotion. — Municipal fire fighter had no protected property interest in a promotion to fire engineer, and the firefighter's demotion from that position did not constitute a deprivation of the firefighter's property interest without due process of law. Hunter v. City of Warner Robins, 842 F. Supp. 1460, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1298 (M.D. Ga. 1994).

Public employee governed by Georgia Merit Systems Act, O.C.G.A. § 47-2-310 et seq., and State Board Personnel Rules has a property interest in the employee's job entitling the employee to the protections of due process. Brown v.

Georgia Dep't of Revenue, 881 F.2d 1018, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 12594 (11th Cir. 1989).

State law determines the legitimacy of a claim of entitlement to continued employment. Barnett v. Housing Auth., 707 F.2d 1571, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 26375 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled in part, McKinney v. Pate, 20 F.3d 1550, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 10130 (11th Cir. 1994), overruled in part, Tindal v. Montgomery County Comm'n, 32 F.3d 1535, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 26962 (11th Cir. 1994).

Person's entitlement to continued employment is a constitutionally protectable property interest if there are rules or mutually explicit understandings that support his claim. Lovell v. Floyd County, 710 F. Supp. 1364, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4387 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Refusal to reinstate exonerated hospital paramedic unconstitutional. — A hospital's refusal to reinstate a paramedic, who had been exonerated of misconduct by an employee grievance committee, because of a subsequent accusation that the paramedic lacked a physician's sponsorship was a deprivation of the paramedic's constitutionally protected interest in continued employment. Baxter v. Fulton-DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 764 F. Supp. 1510, 1991 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7207 (N.D. Ga. 1991).

City police officers were not entitled to substantive due process protection in regard to their claims that reassignment without cause from a special investigation unit to a regular patrol unit violated charter or ordinance provisions allowing demotions only for cause and violated their due process rights. Angell v. Hart, 232 Ga. App. 222, 501 S.E.2d 594, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 608 (1998).

Termination of employment only for cause implies property interest. — An at-will public employee typically does not have a reasonable expectation of continued employment sufficient to form a protectable property interest. However, a property interest does arise whenever a public employee can be terminated only for cause. Wofford v. Glynn Brunswick Mem. Hosp., 864 F.2d 117, 1989 U.S. App.

LEXIS 529 (11th Cir. 1989); Nolin v. Douglas County, 903 F.2d 1546, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 10160 (11th Cir. 1990), overruled in part, McKinney v. Pate, 20 F.3d 1550, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 10130 (11th Cir. 1994).

In Georgia, generally, no one in public employment has a vested right to such employment. However, a property interest does arise whenever the public employee can be terminated only for cause. Payung v. Williamson, 747 F. Supp. 705, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12814 (M.D. Ga. 1990).

County personnel handbook which made numerous distinctions between department heads and rank and file employees — e.g., department heads were given the authority to evaluate rank and file employees, to grant raises, and to hear appeals from employees facing detrimental job actions — supported the conclusion that the county board of commissioners intended to grant a property interest to rank and file employees but not to department heads when it passed the personnel ordinances which make up the handbook. Warren v. Crawford, 927 F.2d 559, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 4796 (11th Cir. 1991).

Scope of rights of tenured teachers. — Where plaintiff clearly qualified as a tenured principal under Georgia law, the plaintiff's rights as a tenured principal extended to not being demoted except by specified procedures and for specified reasons. Hatcher v. Board of Pub. Educ. & Orphanage, 809 F.2d 1546, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 2218 (11th Cir. 1987), overruled in part, D'Angelo v. Sch. Bd., No. 06-13582, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 18235 (11th Cir. Aug. 1, 2007).

Where a tenured teacher held a constitutional property interest in continued comparable employment and was demoted as a result of the elimination of the position, the board of education was not constitutionally required to grant the teacher a hearing at the time the schools were closed and the initial reassignments made. Hatcher v. Board of Pub. Educ. & Orphanage, 809 F.2d 1546, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 2218 (11th Cir. 1987), overruled in part, D'Angelo v. Sch. Bd., No. 06-13582, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 18235 (11th Cir. Aug. 1, 2007).

Once initial reassignments had been made, displaced teachers who held a constitutional property interest in continued comparable employment that was denied by virtue of their placement in a lesser position were entitled to obtain a hearing regarding any positions that were assigned to individuals who did not hold a property interest in the position. Hatcher v. Board of Pub. Educ. & Orphanage, 809 F.2d 1546, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 2218 (11th Cir. 1987), overruled in part, D'Angelo v. Sch. Bd., No. 06-13582, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 18235 (11th Cir. Aug. 1, 2007).

Nontenured as well as tenured teachers are entitled to due process protections. — Nothing in the fourteenth amendment restricts due process protections to tenured teachers; when no formal system of tenure exists, due process may be mandated nonetheless when state rules or understandings between parties support a claim of entitlement to continued employment. LaPier v. Holliman, 514 F. Supp. 692, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16646 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Discretionary merit salary increases not protected interests. — Discretionary merit salary increases, designed to serve as a reward for an acceptable teaching performance, are, at best, expectations rather than entitlements, and such expectations are not protected property or liberty interests for due process purposes. Ballard v. Blount, 581 F. Supp. 160, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10899 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 1480, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 22283 (11th Cir. 1984).

Distinction in city pension plan between benefits available to surviving spouses of retired and nonretired employees did not violate equal protection since it arose only as the result of a voluntary election by the employee, rather than a unilateral imperative of the plan. Strickland v. City of Albany, 270 Ga. 31, 504 S.E.2d 666, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 875 (1998).

Insubordination and willful neglect. — County school board and school administrators did not violate standards of federal due process in failing to renew a school teacher's contract, where they informed the teacher that the reasons for their actions were the teacher's insubordination and willful neglect of duty, in addition to "other good and sufficient cause." Suber v. Bulloch County Bd. of Educ., 722 F. Supp. 736, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11357 (S.D. Ga. 1989).

Placing separation notice in confidential file. — Court clerk's placing of a terminated deputy's separation notice in the confidential files of the Department of Labor did not amount to "stigmatizing" the deputy so as to deprive the terminated deputy of a liberty interest without due process. Zellner v. Ham, 735 F. Supp. 1052, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4362 (M.D. Ga. 1990).

Effect of city personnel ordinance enactment. — Enactment of city personnel ordinance created in covered employees a present property interest subject to termination only for cause and only after a pre-termination hearing. Payung v. Williamson, 747 F. Supp. 705, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12814 (M.D. Ga. 1990).

Discharged police officer's property interest in a reinstatement hearing never ripened, where such interest was conditioned upon the occurrence of certain factors expressly identified in a letter creating a claim of entitlement to reinstatement, and those conditions failed to occur. Dudley v. City of Macon, 678 F. Supp. 280, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1188 (M.D. Ga. 1988).

Presuspension requirements satisfied. — Although a police officer's 10-day suspension without pay affected a limited property interest which could not be characterized as de minimis, the officer's meeting with the police chief was sufficient to satisfy the necessary presuspension due process requirements. Burch v. Rame, 676 F. Supp. 1218, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 95 (S.D. Ga. 1988).

Action under federal Civil Rights Act. — Where a police detective alleged that the detective could be terminated only "for cause" and thus held a constitutionally protected "property" interest in continued employment, the defendants' motion to dismiss the action under the federal Civil Rights Act (42 U.S.C. § 1983) was denied. Byrd v. City of Atlanta, 683 F.

Supp. 804, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2676 (N.D. Ga. 1988).

Terminated city police officer was not entitled to summary judgment on the officer's substantive due process claims, where the officer admitted that the officer used personal funds to obtain cocaine and made no report of the purchase to the police department, and that the officer gave cocaine to an informant and made no report of the incident. Byrd v. City of Atlanta, 709 F. Supp. 1148, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3238 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

City police officers had property interests in their employment, and were entitled to a hearing — formal or informal — prior to being discharged. Duck v. Jacobs, 739 F. Supp. 1545, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7552 (S.D. Ga. 1990).

Police chiefs lacked property interest in continued employment. — City police chiefs who successively served at the will of the mayor and council had no property interest in continued employment. Duck v. Jacobs, 739 F. Supp. 1545, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7552 (S.D. Ga. 1990).

Racial preferences for police hiring upheld. — City's use of racial preferences in employment decisions, as applied to the police department, is justified by a compelling government interest in remedying past discrimination, where, until the late 1970's, black officers were only allowed to work the night shift, they were only allowed to police black neighborhoods, and they were not authorized to arrest whites. Fountain v. City of Waycross, 701 F. Supp. 1570, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8926 (S.D. Ga. 1988).

Discharge of police officer for insubordination did not violate the officer's rights to substantive and procedural due process. Guntharp v. Cobb County, 723 F. Supp. 771, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12421 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 898 F.2d 159, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 2233 (11th Cir. 1990).

Termination of plaintiffs position as a parole review officer of the board of pardons and paroles after the plaintiff's election to county and state political party committees did not violate the plaintiff's constitutional rights of due process and equal protection or the plaintiff's constitutionally protected rights of political speech and association. MacKenzie v. Snow, 675 F. Supp. 1333, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11545 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

Discharged police officer did not possess a constitutionally protected property interest in continued employment and thus was not discharged without due process of law because there was no formal contract of employment; there was no civil service act containing a "for cause" termination requirement; police department regulations did not unambiguously indicate whether a "for cause" termination requirement existed; and because, by a provision of the city charter, the mayor and council had discretionary authority to discharge an employee. Harrison v. City of Adairsville, 560 F. Supp. 445, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18425 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Human services program manager has protected property interest in his employment. — O.C.G.A. § 45-20-1 and Rules 4 and 14 of the Rules and Regulations of the State Personnel Board create a mutually recognizable entitlement, and one is entitled to a reasonable expectation that where one performs the duties and responsibilities of a human services program manager, one will be classified as such and will receive an increase in benefits and pay in accordance with this classification. Brown v. Ledbetter, 569 F. Supp. 170, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18151 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Privileges and Immunities

Privileges and immunities not abridged by statute regulating practice of medicine where open to qualified. — A statute regulating the right to practice medicine, but leaving the field open to all who possess the prescribed qualifications, does not abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens. Yeargin v. Hamilton Mem. Hosp., 225 Ga. 661, 171 S.E.2d 136, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 604 (1969), cert. denied, 397 U.S. 963, 90 S. Ct. 997, 25 L. Ed. 2d 255, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 2689 (1970).

Motor carriers' privilege to use highways in business may be conditioned or withholding. — Motor carriers are engaged in a business that is regulable, and doing that business on the highways by a privilege which may be conditioned or withheld. Southern Motorways, Inc. v. Perry, 39 F.2d 145, 1930 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1936 (D. Ga. 1930).

Maintenance tax on operation of vehicles on public roads upheld. — Former Code 1933, Ch. 92-29 (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 10, T. 48), which imposes a maintenance tax on the operation of motor buses, trucks, and trailers on public roads, in addition to any and all other taxes, licenses, or registration fees required, for the privilege of using the highways of the state is not violative of the commerce clause or of the privileges and immunities clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Dixie-Ohio Express Co. v. State Revenue Comm'n, 186 Ga. 228, 197 S.E. 887, 1938 Ga. LEXIS 617 (1938), aff'd, 306 U.S. 72, 59 S. Ct. 435, 83 L. Ed. 495, 1939 U.S. LEXIS 1023 (1939).

Municipal corporation created by state without privileges or immunities invocable in opposition to state. — A municipal corporation, created by a state for the better ordering of government, has no privileges or immunities under the federal Constitution which it may invoke in opposition to the will of its creator. Appling County v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 621 F.2d 1301, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15461 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1015, 101 S. Ct. 574, 66 L. Ed. 2d 474, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 4146 (1980).

Statute penalizing writings to incite insurrection upheld. — Statute penalizing printing or circulating writings to incite insurrection does not abridge privileges and immunities guaranteed under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Dalton v. State, 176 Ga. 645, 169 S.E. 198, 1933 Ga. LEXIS 241 (1933).

State cannot condition granting of even privilege upon renunciation of constitutional right to procedural due process. Benefits conferred by the government cannot be conditioned on the relinquishment of constitutional rights. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Due Process*1. In General

Due process defined. — If one who has been indicted for murder has had full opportunity under the Constitution and laws of the state to defend the defendant's case in the courts having jurisdiction thereof in person, by attorney, or both, according to established constitutional rules of procedure, the defendant has been afforded due process of law under the state and federal Constitutions, which provide that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law, and where such an opportunity has been afforded the defendant, the defendant has been accorded the equal protection of the laws. Meyers v. Whittle, 171 Ga. 509, 156 S.E. 120, 1930 Ga. LEXIS 490 (1930).

Due process of law means the administration of laws which apply equally to all persons according to established rules, and which are not violative of the fundamental principles of private right, by a competent tribunal having jurisdiction of the case and proceeding upon notice and hearing. Norman v. State, 171 Ga. 527, 156 S.E. 203, 1930 Ga. LEXIS 496 (1930), transferred, 44 Ga. App. 92, 160 S.E. 522, 1931 Ga. App. LEXIS 600 (1931); King v. State, 174 Ga. 432, 163 S.E. 168, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 64 (1932), superseded by statute as stated in Mitchum v. State, 306 Ga. 878, 834 S.E.2d 65, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 641 (2019); Shoemaker v. Whitlock, 226 Ga. 771, 177 S.E.2d 677, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 680 (1970).

If one indicted has had full opportunity, under the Constitution and laws of the state, to defend the defendant's case in the courts of the state having jurisdiction thereof, in person, by attorney, or both, according to established constitutional rules of procedure the defendant has been afforded due process of law. Shoemaker v. Whitlock, 226 Ga. 771, 177 S.E.2d 677, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 680 (1970).

Traditionally, due process right concerns opportunity to be heard on factual basis underlying loss of liberty or property interest, rather than standard upon which that interest was lost. Anderson v. Banks, 520 F. Supp. 472, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15463 (S.D. Ga. 1981).

Sovereign immunity. — Sovereign immunity does not violate the right to due process as it does not constitute a deprivation with no remedy. Dollar v. Dalton Pub. Sch., 233 Ga. App. 827, 505 S.E.2d 789, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 1067 (1998), cert. denied, No. S98C1920, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 41 (Ga. Jan. 8, 1999).

Due process of law merely means according to the law of the land. Brooks v. State, 178 Ga. 784, 175 S.E. 6, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 184 (1934).

Purpose of the due process clause is to protect the people from the state, not to ensure that the state protect them from each other. Green v. Moreland, 200 Ga. App. 167, 407 S.E.2d 119, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 794 (1991).

Due process requires process of decision to be impartial. — The right to due process of law is not merely to have one's case heard by an impartial tribunal in the first instance. The process of decision must be impartial in every instance and in every respect. Wall v. American Optometric Ass'n, 379 F. Supp. 175, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8896 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 419 U.S. 888, 95 S. Ct. 166, 42 L. Ed. 2d 134, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 2900 (1974).

Waiver of due process. — Party may waive the party's constitutional and statutory rights. Pacolet Mfg. Co. v. Crescent Textiles, Inc., 219 Ga. 268, 133 S.E.2d 96, 1963 Ga. LEXIS 427 (1963).

Due process can under certain circumstances be waived, even in criminal context. Law v. USDA, 366 F. Supp. 1233, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11305 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Due process can be waived in civil contracts between debtor and creditor. Law v. USDA, 366 F. Supp. 1233, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11305 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Due process principles extend to every proceeding which may deprive person of life, liberty, or property. — "Legislative fiat may not take the place of fact in the judicial determination of issues involving life, liberty, or property," a fortiori the finding of a bureau chief or a government department head ruling cannot do so, consistently with the guarantees embodied in the Constitutions of this state and of the United States. The protective principles summed up in these due process clauses extend to every proceeding which may deprive a person of life, liberty, or property, whether the process be judicial, administrative or executive in its nature. Zachos v. Huiet, 195 Ga. 780, 25 S.E.2d 806, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 308 (1943).

Due process of law does not require judicial procedure. City of Macon v. Benson, 175 Ga. 502, 166 S.E. 26, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 280 (1932).

Fifth and fourteenth amendment restraints essentially same. — The restraint imposed upon legislation by the due process clause of the fifth and fourteenth amendments is essentially the same. DeLaigle v. Federal Land Bank, 568 F. Supp. 1432, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14993 (S.D. Ga. 1983).

Protection from arbitrary action of government. — Touchstone of due process is protection of individual against arbitrary action of government. J.L. v. Parham, 412 F. Supp. 112, 1976 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16437 (M.D. Ga. 1976), rev'd, 442 U.S. 584, 99 S. Ct. 2493, 61 L. Ed. 2d 101, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 130 (1979).

Protection from undue state interference. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 protects life, liberty and property interests from undue interference by the state. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 449, 228 S.E.2d 839, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1264 (1976), cert. denied, 432 U.S. 905, 97 S. Ct. 2949, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1077, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2482 (1977), overruled in part, Boozer v. Higdon, 252 Ga. 276, 313 S.E.2d 100, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 686 (1984).

Applicability of due process requirements to persons and organizations in private sector. — Constitutional due process requirements are applicable in some situations to persons and organizations in the private sector, as where the state or the federal government has become so involved in the conduct of otherwise private bodies that their activities are also governmental activities and performed under government aegis without the private body's necessarily becoming either a governmental instrumentality or agent in a strict sense. Roberts v.

Due Process (Cont'd)

Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Priority or preferential protection not to be given life or liberty or property interest. — The heart of U.S. Const., amend. 14 — everything it seeks to protect — is found in its provision that there must be equal protection of the law and there must be no deprivation of “life, liberty or property” without due process of law. No judge can, with good conscience, give to either “life” or “liberty” or “property” a priority or preferential protection over the other two. Clark v. State, 219 Ga. 680, 135 S.E.2d 270, 1964 Ga. LEXIS 363 (1964).

Applicability of due process depends on nature of interest at stake. — To determine whether due process requirements apply in the first place, the court must look not to the weight but to the nature of the interest at stake. Georgia Power Project v. Georgia Power Co., 409 F. Supp. 332, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15922 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Consideration of interests with regard to procedural due process. — Identification of the specific dictates of due process generally requires consideration of three distinct factors: first, the private interest that will be affected by the official action; second, the risk of an erroneous deprivation of such interest through the procedures used, and probable value, if any, of additional or substitute procedural safeguards; and finally, the government’s interest, including the function involved and the fiscal and administrative burdens that the additional or substitute procedural requirement would entail. Tucker v. Caldwell, 608 F.2d 140, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 9838 (5th Cir. 1979); Crocker v. Hakes, 616 F.2d 237, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 17927 (5th Cir. 1980).

In a due process claim, three distinct factors must be weighed in a balancing approach: first, the court must consider the private interest that will be affected; second, the risk of an erroneous deprivation of such an interest through the procedures used, and the probable value, if any, of additional or alternative procedural safeguards should be considered; finally, the government interest, both the fiscal and administrative burdens placed on government agencies and the government function involved, is to be weighed and enters into the balancing formula. Jeffries v. Georgia Residential Fin. Auth., 503 F. Supp. 610, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15557 (N.D. Ga. 1980), aff’d, 678 F.2d 919, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18426 (11th Cir. 1982).

Due process test looks to totality of surrounding circumstances. Ambros v. State, 159 Ga. App. 492, 283 S.E.2d 706, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2662 (1981).

Extent of due process afforded depends on importance of interest at stake. — Extent of due process protections which must be afforded in a particular instance varies with the importance of the interest to be protected, as compared with the interest of the state in protecting the public welfare from abuse of this interest. Page v. Jackson, 398 F. Supp. 263, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11228 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Whether due process requires a particular procedure in a given situation must be determined by balancing an individual’s interest in avoiding loss which lack of procedure inflicts upon the individual against interests which the government seeks to advance by denying it. Anderson v. Banks, 520 F. Supp. 472, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15463 (S.D. Ga. 1981).

No particular state procedure guaranteed. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not guarantee to the citizen of the state any particular form or method of state procedure. Its requirements are satisfied if the individual has reasonable notice and opportunity to be heard, and to present the individual’s claim or defense, with due regard given to the nature of the proceeding and the character of the rights that may be affected by it. City of Macon v. Benson, 175 Ga. 502, 166 S.E. 26, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 280 (1932); State v. Sanks, 225 Ga. 88, 166 S.E.2d 19, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 388 (1969).

Due process has two requirements: (1) laws must provide fair notice to persons of ordinary intelligence of precise conduct proscribed; and (2) laws must provide standards and guidance to law enforcement officers, judges, and juries, to prevent arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 515 F. Supp. 176, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16808 (N.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 673 F.2d 1225, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19863 (11th Cir. 1982).

Prerequisite for application of procedural due process. — Before the requirements of procedural due process apply there must be a deprivation of interest encompassed by U.S. Const., amend. 14's protection of liberty and property. Shaw v. Hospital Auth., 507 F.2d 625, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16352 (5th Cir. 1975).

In order to state claim of deprivation of U.S. Const., amend. 14's due process rights a plaintiff must demonstrate that: (1) the plaintiff has been deprived of liberty or property in the constitutional sense; and (2) the procedure used to deprive the plaintiff of that interest was constitutionally deficient. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 563 F.2d 1200, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 5866 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 437 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 3103, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1141, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2338 (1978).

When due process denied. — Where a body which is vested with a duty to make judgments has unlawfully delegated that responsibility to another, or where the inseparation of judicial and prosecutory functions engenders a biased hearing, due process is denied. Brownlee v. Williams, 233 Ga. 548, 212 S.E.2d 359, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1374 (1975).

Notice and hearing required prior to deprivation of property or liberty interest. — Constitutional guarantee of procedural due process applies to governmental deprivation of legitimate "property" or "liberty" interest within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 5 or U.S. Const., amend. 14 and requires that any such deprivation be accompanied by minimum procedural safeguards, including some form of notice and a hearing. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Opportunity to vindicate liberty interest is basic entitlement provided by due process. — An opportunity to vindicate a liberty interest, such as when one is publicly subjected to a badge of infamy, is one of the basic entitlements provided by the due process clause. Page v. Jackson, 398 F. Supp. 263, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11228 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Hearing for violation of liberty interest. — Due process claim for violation of "liberty interest" entitling party to full hearing arises if — and only if — the reason given or the dismissal procedure adopted resulted in a "badge of infamy," public scorn or the like. Press v. Board of Regents, 489 F. Supp. 150, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12764 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

When protected interests implicated, right to prior hearing is paramount. — The requirements of procedural due process apply only to the deprivation of interests encompassed by U.S. Const., amend. 14's protection of liberty and property. When protected interests are implicated, the right to some kind of prior hearing is paramount. The range of interests protected by procedural due process is, however, not infinite. Georgia Power Project v. Georgia Power Co., 409 F. Supp. 332, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15922 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Agencies to follow regulations pertaining to adjudication processes. — It is denial of due process for any government agency to fail to follow its regulations pertaining to adjudication processes. Courts v. Economic Opportunity Auth. For Savannah—Chatham County Area, Inc., 451 F. Supp. 587, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17699 (S.D. Ga. 1978).

Negligent act of official. — Due process clause is not implicated by negligent act of official causing unintended loss of or injury to life, liberty, or property. Terrell v. Shope, 687 F. Supp. 579, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7431 (N.D. Ga. 1988), aff'd, 911 F.2d 741, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 12405 (11th Cir. 1990).

Due process principle of impartial tribunal applies to administrative proceedings. — The due process principles of impartial and fair tribunal free from bias applies not only to trials, but equally, if not more so, to administrative proceedings. Wall v. American Optometric Ass'n, 379 F. Supp. 175, 1974 U.S. Dist.

Due Process (Cont'd)

LEXIS 8896 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 419 U.S. 888, 95 S. Ct. 166, 42 L. Ed. 2d 134, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 2900 (1974).

Due process applies to administrative acts affecting protected interest. — Not every administrative act gives rise to constitutional right of participation under due process clause. Traditionally, due process requires that an affected individual be given the right of participation, whether by a hearing or otherwise, only when the administrative act complained of directly affects a zone of interest protected by the Constitution. Wells Fargo Armored Serv. Corp. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 547 F.2d 938, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 14530 (5th Cir. 1977).

Liberty guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 14 denotes not merely freedom from bodily restraint but also the right of the individual to contract, to engage in any of the common occupations of life, to acquire useful knowledge, to marry, establish a home and bring up children, to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and generally to enjoy those privileges long recognized as essential to the orderly pursuance of happiness by free persons. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 547 F.2d 835, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10224 (5th Cir. 1977).

Refusal to permit child to testify in deprivation hearing. — Because a child was available to testify in a deprivation hearing and the child's statements were reliable, a juvenile court's refusal to permit the child to testify, despite the mother's request, rendered the evidence regarding the child's statements to other witnesses inadmissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16. In the Interest of B.W., 268 Ga. App. 862, 602 S.E.2d 869, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 1029 (2004).

Determination of what is liberty interest as matter of federal constitutional law. — While property rights that are protectable under the due process clause of the Constitution are generally created by state law, a determination of what is a "liberty" interest is a matter of federal constitutional law. Drummond v.

Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 547 F.2d 835, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10224 (5th Cir. 1977).

Creation of nonconstitutionally based liberty interests. — Nonconstitutionally based liberty interest may be created by acts or rules "defining the obligations of the authority charged with exercising" that power, and a liberty interest will be found where the government signals the existence of such right by placing substantive limitations on official discretion in the form of particularized standards or criteria to guide decision-makers. Garcia-Mir v. Meese, 781 F.2d 1450, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22122 (11th Cir. 1986).

Liberty extends to full range of conduct individual is free to pursue. — Liberty is not confined to mere freedom from bodily restraint but extends to the full range of conduct which the individual is free to pursue. Shaw v. Hospital Auth., 507 F.2d 625, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16352 (5th Cir. 1975).

"Deprived of liberty without due process of law" defined. — To be deprived of liberty "without due process of law" means to be deprived of liberty without authority of law. Palmer v. Hall, 380 F. Supp. 120, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7401 (M.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 517 F.2d 705, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 13119 (5th Cir. 1975).

State law not source of true liberty rights. — True liberty rights do not flow from state laws, which can be repealed by action of the Legislature. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 563 F.2d 1200, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 5866 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 437 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 3103, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1141, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2338 (1978).

Defendant not under arrest. — Miranda played no part in the admissibility of field sobriety test results, notwithstanding the definition of arrest contained in O.C.G.A. § 17-4-1, as the defendant was not under arrest for constitutional purposes where the defendant failed to show any restraints comparable to those associated with formal arrest, the defendant's statement that the defendant knew the officer was going to "take her in" demonstrated the defendant's apprehension, not the fact of an arrest, the defendant was not informed that the defendant's detention would not be temporary, and the defendant's performance on the field sobriety tests did not support a claim that the defendant was exposed to custodial interrogation at the scene. Evans v. State, 267 Ga. App. 706, 600 S.E.2d 671, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 720 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1683, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 883 (Ga. Sept. 27, 2004).

Refusal to allow hearsay. — Trial court did not violate the defendant's right to a fair trial under the fourteenth amendment due process clause by preventing the introduction of hearsay testimony from a person claiming to have committed the offenses the defendant was on trial for, as the trial court saw no persuasive indicia of reliability in the proffered testimony and declined to permit the defendant to present it to the jury. Inman v. State, 281 Ga. 67, 635 S.E.2d 125, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 569 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 828, 128 S. Ct. 42, 169 L. Ed. 2d 40, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 9143 (2007).

Requirements for restricting liberty. — A person's liberty interest dictates that rights may only be restricted upon a showing that: (1) the person was given an adequate procedural due process hearing; and (2) any decision to abridge the person's liberty interest was grounded upon a rational basis designed to further a legitimate state interest. Shaw v. Hospital Auth., 614 F.2d 946, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19088 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 955, 101 S. Ct. 362, 66 L. Ed. 2d 220, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3759 (1980).

Because the plaintiff relied merely upon stigmatizing statements in conjunction with the plaintiff's suspension without pay, plaintiff failed to state a claim for deprivation of a constitutionally protected liberty interest. Thomas v. Harvard, 45 F. Supp. 2d 1353, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6587 (N.D. Ga. 1999).

Liberty includes freedom to use property to get from place to place. — The freedom to make use of one's own property, such as a motor vehicle, as a means of getting about from place to place, whether in pursuit of business or pleasure, is a "liberty" which cannot be denied or curtailed by a state without due process of law under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Roberts v. Burson, 322 F. Supp. 380, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13783 (D. Ga. 1969).

State flag. — The state flag, incorporating the stars and bars of the Confederate flag, did not violate the due process clause by depriving an African-American citizen of any fundamental privacy interest in associating with white people free from unwarranted government intrusion since the record did not support the claim and, moreover, plaintiff's right to associate with white people in general was not the type of intimate relationship garnering constitutional protection under this theory. Coleman v. Miller, 885 F. Supp. 1561, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4103 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Conviction and confinement for flag burning overturned. — Defendant's conviction and confinement for burning of American flag violated her rights under the first amendment, applicable to the state by virtue of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Monroe v. State Court, 739 F.2d 568, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 19399 (11th Cir. 1984).

Provisions of the Tort Reform Act (O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1), relating to punitive damages, violated the due process and equal protection clauses of the federal and state constitutions, violated the excessive fines provisions of both constitutions, and violated the double jeopardy provision of the fifth amendment to the federal constitution. McBride v. GMC, 737 F. Supp. 1563, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5993 (M.D. Ga. 1990).

Right of privacy guaranteed. — The right of privacy within certain limits is a right derived from natural law, recognized by the principles of municipal law, and guaranteed to persons in this state both by the Constitutions of the United States and of the State of Georgia, in those provisions which declare that no person shall be deprived of liberty except by due process of law. McDaniel v. Atlanta Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 60 Ga. App. 92, 2 S.E.2d 810, 1939 Ga. App. LEXIS 510 (1939).

Right to privacy includes only personal rights deemed fundamental or implicit in concept of ordered liberty.

Due Process (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

— A right to privacy guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 14 includes only personal rights that can be deemed “fundamental” or “implicit in the concept of ordered liberty.” Paris Adult Theatre I v. Slaton, 413 U.S. 49, 93 S. Ct. 2628, 37 L. Ed. 2d 446, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 19 (1973).

Though public interest in privacy may be subordinated and clandestine surveillance allowed. — Where the police have reasonable cause to believe that public toilet stalls are being used in the commission of crime, and when they confine their activities to the times when such crimes are most likely to occur, they are entitled to institute clandestine surveillance, even though they do not have probable cause to believe that the particular persons whom they may thus catch in flagrante delicto have committed or will commit the crime. The public interest in its privacy must, to that extent, be subordinated to the public interest in law enforcement. Mitchell v. State, 120 Ga. App. 447, 170 S.E.2d 765, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 813 (1969).

Derogatory information in confidential files. — Liberty is not infringed by mere presence of derogatory information in confidential files. Sims v. Fox, 505 F.2d 857, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 5439 (5th Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1011, 95 S. Ct. 2415, 44 L. Ed. 2d 678, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 1903 (1975).

Harm to reputation. — Governmental attack on one's reputation may infringe constitutionally protected liberty in two respects: (1) governmental degradation of one's standing in his community may be denial of “liberty”; (2) governmental communication of derogatory information to employers may be an attack on “liberty.” Sims v. Fox, 505 F.2d 857, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 5439 (5th Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1011, 95 S. Ct. 2415, 44 L. Ed. 2d 678, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 1903 (1975).

To make out a constitutional claim for harm to reputation, a person must demonstrate that the person has been denied a right previously recognized by the state in conjunction with a defamatory finding about the person; the person must challenge this finding as factually inaccurate; and there must be publication of the defamatory information outside the context of litigation. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 563 F.2d 1200, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 5866 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 437 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 3103, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1141, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2338 (1978).

Judge's comment about juror's “perjury” not deprivation of liberty interest. — An out-of-court comment by a state court judge about a juror in a murder trial who voted against the death penalty, that the judge considered lodging perjury charges against the juror, however seriously it may have harmed the juror's reputation, did not deprive him of any constitutionally protected liberty interest. The juror's interest in his reputation was protected by state tort law. Emory v. Peeler, 756 F.2d 1547, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28840 (11th Cir. 1985).

Applicant Drug Screening Act unconstitutional. — Georgia's Applicant Drug Screening Act (O.C.G.A. § 45-20-110 et seq.), requiring applicants for state employment to submit to urine tests for the presence of illegal drugs, violates applicants' rights to privacy under the fourth and Fourteenth Amendments. Georgia Ass'n of Educators v. Harris, 749 F. Supp. 1110, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14647 (N.D. Ga. 1990).

No general right to medical treatment and services. — Due process clause confers no general right to the provision of medical treatment and services by a state or municipality. Wideman v. Shallowford Community Hosp., 826 F.2d 1030, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 12007 (11th Cir. 1987).

Protective services in event of medical emergency. — Federal constitutional law does not require a state to provide its citizens with protective services in the event of medical emergencies. Even if the state undertakes to provide protective services in medical emergency services, its failure to render same in a proper manner or in violation of state law does not violate the due process clause of the United States Constitution, unless the state created the medical emergency or the person was in state custody or control at the time of the emergency. Hendon v. DeKalb County, 203 Ga. App. 750, 417 S.E.2d 705, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 617 (1992).

Treatment of state mental health patients. — State mental health patients have the right under the due process clause to have all major choices concerning their treatment made in accordance with the judgment of qualified professionals who are acting within professionally accepted minimum standards. Griffith ex rel. Griffith v. Ledbetter, 711 F. Supp. 1108, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5484 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

The state's policy and procedure for the involuntary administration of antipsychotic drugs to patients at the state mental hospital does not violate substantive or procedural due process. Hightower by Dehler v. Olmstead, 959 F. Supp. 1549, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20742 (N.D. Ga. 1996).

Proof required in civil proceeding for involuntary commitment to mental hospital. — Precepts of due process require a clear and convincing standard of proof in a civil proceeding to commit an individual to a mental hospital involuntarily. Pitts v. State, 151 Ga. App. 691, 261 S.E.2d 435, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2752 (1979).

Habilitation of mentally-retarded patients. — Mentally-retarded patients residing in state institutions have no substantive due process right to habilitation in a community setting. S.H. v. Edwards, 860 F.2d 1045, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 15977 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 491 U.S. 905, 109 S. Ct. 3187, 105 L. Ed. 2d 696, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 3102 (1989).

Commitment of juvenile to institution. — Due process of law is requisite to the constitutional validity of proceedings in which a court reaches the conclusion that a juvenile has been at fault, has engaged in conduct prohibited by law, or has otherwise misbehaved with the consequence that the juvenile is committed to an institution in which the juvenile's freedom is curtailed. J.L. v. Parham, 412 F. Supp. 112, 1976 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16437 (M.D. Ga. 1976), rev'd, 442 U.S. 584, 99 S. Ct. 2493, 61 L. Ed. 2d 101, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 130 (1979).

Requiring putative father to pay for paternity blood test. — Requiring indigent putative father to bear initial burden of paying for paternity blood test is violative of the due process and equal protection clauses of the fourteenth amendment. Pierce v. State, 251 Ga. 590, 308 S.E.2d 367, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 932 (1983).

Trial court's denial of a putative father's request to require the state to make pre-trial payment of the costs of the blood tests to determine paternity effectively denied the putative father access to blood test evidence and amounted to a violation of due process. Peterson v. Moffitt ex rel. Department of Human Resources, 253 Ga. 253, 319 S.E.2d 449, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1984). (See also Burns v. State, 252 Ga. 140, 312 S.E.2d 317 (1984), annotated under "10. Criminal Trials" below.).

Unwed father's right to fitness test or veto power. — An unwed father possesses an opportunity interest to develop a relationship with his child, which interest is protected by due process of law, and, as long as he has not abandoned that interest, because Georgia law affords an unwed mother a fitness test or veto power under the same circumstances, it must also afford an unwed father a fitness test or veto power. In re Baby Girl Eason, 257 Ga. 292, 358 S.E.2d 459, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 834 (1987).

Proceedings to legitimate child. — O.C.G.A. § 19-7-22, which allows fathers, but not mothers, to petition for legitimation of a child born out of wedlock, does not violate constitutional guarantees of due process and equal protection. Pruitt v. Lindsey, 261 Ga. 540, 407 S.E.2d 750, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 396 (1991).

Modification of child support award. — Unpublished decision: Plaintiff ex-husband was correct that the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment protected a parent's fundamental right to participate in the care, custody, and management of their children, but he failed to show that O.C.G.A. § 19-9-3 violated his substantive due process rights because neither the U.S. Supreme Court nor the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit had held that a state had to impose a specific standard of proof for modification of visitation rights. Gottschalk v. Gottschalk, No. 10-11979, 2011 U.S. App. LEXIS 12222 (11th Cir. June 16, 2011).

Termination of parental rights. — An “any evidence” standard or “preponderance of the evidence” standard is inadequate in dealing with finding of deprivation of a child or termination of parental rights and would violate U.S. Const., amend. 14. In re Suggs, 249 Ga. 365, 291 S.E.2d 233, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1144 (1982).

Only under compelling circumstances found to exist by clear and convincing proof may a court sever the parent-child custodial relationship. Blackburn v. Blackburn, 249 Ga. 689, 292 S.E.2d 821, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1167 (1982).

Where a fundamental liberty interest involving the right to the companionship, care, custody and management of a child is at stake, neither the “any evidence” standard of review in civil cases nor the “reasonable evidence” standard of review currently applied in termination of parental rights cases is of sufficient quality and substantiality to support the rationality of the judgment. Blackburn v. Blackburn, 249 Ga. 689, 292 S.E.2d 821, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1167 (1982).

Parent incarcerated in Michigan was not required to be treated as though the parent were a Georgia prisoner for purposes of attendance at a parental rights termination proceeding. In re R.J.P., 222 Ga. App. 771, 476 S.E.2d 268.

Children taken into custody when parent arrested. — Police officers who deliberately chose to transfer children to a detention facility with their parent upon the parent’s arrest restrained the children’s liberty such that the officers had an affirmative duty to protect the children’s interests. Matheny v. Boatright, 970 F. Supp. 1039, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10663 (S.D. Ga. 1997).

Relationship between child and state required. — Where the noncustodial parent took and killed the child, there was no special relationship between the state and the child which imposed an affirmative duty on the state to protect the child, because the child did not rely on the state for the child’s physical needs and safety, because the custodial parent was able to protect the child because the custodial parent had physical custody, because the custodial parent had access to the courts if the custodial parent was displeased with the unsupervised visitation by the killing parent, and because the custodial parent could have intervened to stop such unsupervised visitation. Therefore, the custodial parent had no substantive due process claim. Wooten v. Campbell, 49 F.3d 696, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 7739 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 943, 116 S. Ct. 379, 133 L. Ed. 2d 302, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 7219 (1995).

Relatives have no due process right in decedent’s body. — Surviving relatives have no constitutionally protected due process right in a decedent’s body. Georgia Lions Eye Bank, Inc. v. Lavant, 255 Ga. 60, 335 S.E.2d 127, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 934 (1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1084, 106 S. Ct. 1464, 89 L. Ed. 2d 721, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 906 (1986).

Circumstances giving rise to right to police protection. — Government officials may be held liable for the deprivation of due process arising from the failure to protect private citizens when a special relationship exists between the victim and the criminal or the victim and the officials, and similarly, a constitutional right to police protection may exist when there has been some showing that the victim, as distinguished from the public at large, faced a special danger, but without a special relationship, there is no constitutional right to police protection. Trethewey v. DeKalb County, 662 F. Supp. 246, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5581 (N.D. Ga. 1987).

Claim of excessive force. — Although a non-seizure fourteenth amendment substantive due process claim of excessive force is viable, where the deputies were reasonably attempting to serve a valid warrant, and the deputies did not know that the deceased was mentally disturbed or that the deceased definitely had a gun in the bathroom, their conduct fell below the minimum requisite level of gross negligence to trigger procedural protections. Wilson v. Northcutt, 987 F.2d 719, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 6662 (11th Cir. 1993).

In an arrestee's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suit that alleged that the arrestee's fourth and fourteenth amendment rights against the use of excessive force were violated when a sheriff's deputy crashed a cruiser into the car during a high-speed pursuit, rendering the arrestee a quadriplegic, the arrestee's fourteenth amendment claims were dismissed on summary judgment because the court found that the fourth amendment claims for excessive use of force raised disputed issues of fact and were cognizable. Harris v. Coweta County, No. 3:01-CV-148-WBH, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27348 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 25, 2003), rev'd in part, aff'd, 406 F.3d 1307, 2005 U.S. App. LEXIS 6721 (11th Cir. 2005).

Sheriff, county, liable for excessive force. — Consistent with U.S. Const., amend. 14's protection of a pretrial arrestee's constitutional right to be free from the use of excessive force, where substantial evidence supported the jury's conclusion that a county sheriff had broken the jaw of the hospitalized arrestee, both the sheriff in the sheriff's official capacity, and the county for its inadequate supervisory policies reflecting a deliberate indifference to these rights, were liable under a redressory claim pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Vineyard v. County of Murray, 990 F.2d 1207, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 11152 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1024, 114 S. Ct. 636, 126 L. Ed. 2d 594, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 7853 (1993).

Deadly force by police officer against threatening person. — As a matter of law, an officer who uses deadly force against a person who threatens the officer or others with serious harm or who the officer has probable cause to believe has already inflicted serious harm on others does not thereby commit the constitutional tort of an unreasonable seizure or deprivation of life or liberty without due process. The use of deadly force by police officers in such circumstances is not, as a matter of law, unreasonable or excessive. O'Neal v. DeKalb County, 667 F. Supp. 853, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7177 (N.D. Ga. 1987), aff'd, 850 F.2d 653, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 9980 (11th Cir. 1988).

Balancing test for determining excessive use of force by police. — In a case involving use of excessive force by police officers brought under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, the balancing test for determining whether a substantive due process violation has been committed, while similar in many respects to that for assessing a fourth amendment claim, requires a plaintiff to show that the force used by a defendant officer was applied maliciously and sadistically for the very purpose of causing harm. The fourth amendment balancing test, on the other hand, does not include a "malicious and sadistic" element; rather, the reasonableness of the seizure or intrusion is the central inquiry, as is the case with respect to fourth amendment analyses outside of the police abuse context. Thompson v. Spikes, 663 F. Supp. 627, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5541 (S.D. Ga. 1987).

Excessive use of force against arrestee unconstitutional. — A supervisory or nonsupervisory official's failure or refusal to intervene when a constitutional violation such as the use of a chokehold once an arrestee is shackled is taking place in the official's presence establishes direct liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 for excessive use of force against the arrestee in violation of the arrestee's rights under the fourth and Fourteenth Amendments. McQuirter v. City of Atlanta, 572 F. Supp. 1401, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13851 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Policy and practice of police brutality unconstitutional. — Because the plaintiffs asserted in their claim against a city that the police force had an unwritten practice of deliberately overlooking acts of police brutality in order to foster a "shoot to kill" attitude among the members of the police force; and submitted an affidavit of a former officer that the officer had knowledge of its policies and practices, and that the department had a practice of not conducting thorough investigations of acts of police brutality; if believed, clearly established a cause of action against the city. Samples ex rel. Samples v. City of Atlanta, 846 F.2d 1328, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 7986 (11th Cir. 1988).

Intentional conduct by a police officer is probably necessary to hold the officer liable for a violation of substantive due process. While negligent conduct does not violate due process, the due process clause does protect against arbitrariness and abuse of power. Easterling v. City of Glennville, 694 F. Supp. 911, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22900 (S.D. Ga. 1986).

Due Process (Cont'd)
1. In General (Cont'd)

Custodial interrogation not found.

— Defendant was not subjected to improper custodial interrogation because the officer read the defendant the defendant's implied consent warnings for suspects over 21, and placed the defendant in the back of the patrol car, during an impound search of the defendant's car, the officer found an identification card that showed that the defendant was under 21, the officer asked the defendant's age, and learned that the defendant was under 21, the officer read the defendant the implied consent notice for suspects under 21, and the question was not designed to incriminate the defendant, as the officer was arresting the defendant for driving under the influence (less safe driver), and the defendant's age was not an element of the offense. Evans v. State, 267 Ga. App. 706, 600 S.E.2d 671, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 720 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1683, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 883 (Ga. Sept. 27, 2004).

City's use of handcuffs and ankle cuffs on a pre-trial detainee while the detainee was at a hospital did not violate the detainee's substantive due process right under U.S. Const., amend. 14, as these restraints did not amount to "punishment". Young v. City of Atlanta, 631 F. Supp. 1498, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26901 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Automobile negligence action not constitutional deprivation. — A person injured in an automobile accident caused by the negligent, or even grossly negligent, operation of a motor vehicle by a policeman acting in the line of duty has no federal civil rights cause of action for violation of a federal right, since automobile negligence actions do not arise to the level of a constitutional deprivation. Cannon v. Taylor, 782 F.2d 947, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22350 (11th Cir. 1986).

"Bivens" action could not be maintained by a parolee against the parole officer for alleged procedural due process violations, since the Parole Commission and Reorganization Act of 1978, a complex and comprehensive remedial system to govern parole situations, which provided the parolee with adequate relief from the deprivations at the time they were occurring, constituted a "special factor counseling hesitation" against allowing a "Bivens" action. Rauschenberg v. Williamson, 785 F.2d 985, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 23630 (11th Cir. 1986).

Arbitration of attorney fee disputes. — Neither State Bar Rule 6-303(a) nor Rule 6-502 violate the state and federal constitutional rights to equal protection as the interest of a state in regulating the legal profession and attorney-client relationship is a "compelling" one. Nodvin v. State Bar, 273 Ga. 559, 544 S.E.2d 142, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 259 (2001).

Specialty training for physicians.

— Public hospital bylaw requiring specific postgraduate specialty training or residency in order for physicians to be eligible for admission to the medical staff did not transgress the equal protection or due process rights of osteopathic physicians. Silverstein v. Gwinnett Hosp. Auth., 861 F.2d 1560, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 17589 (11th Cir. 1988).

Preservation of breath sample from auto-intoximeter test not required. — Neither the federal nor the state constitutional guarantee of due process requires the state to preserve a sample of the breath used in the administration of the auto-intoximeter test. Hopper v. State, 175 Ga. App. 358, 333 S.E.2d 201, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2801 (1985).

Use of "control questions" in polygraph examinations. — The use of "control questions" in polygraph examinations of city firefighters — questions designed to evoke a deceptive or nervous response from everyone tested — was not a violation of the firefighters' constitutional right to privacy, since the questions were general in nature, were asked for a specific, limited purpose, and, although potentially embarrassing, avoided those issues, such as those related to marriage, family, and sexual relations, generally considered to be the most personal. Further, there was no indication that the city planned to take disciplinary actions based on the control questions, release the responses to the public, or even make the responses part of the subjects' employment records. Hester v. City of Milledgeville, 777 F.2d 1492, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 25198 (11th Cir. 1985).

Ordinance unconstitutional if enjoyment of freedoms contingent upon official's uncontrolled will. — An ordinance which makes the peaceful enjoyment of freedoms which the Constitution guarantees contingent upon the uncontrolled will of an official — as by requiring a permit or license which may be granted or withheld in the discretion of such official — is an unconstitutional censorship or prior restraint upon the enjoyment of those freedoms. Staub v. City of Baxley, 355 U.S. 313, 78 S. Ct. 277, 2 L. Ed. 2d 302, 1958 U.S. LEXIS 1830 (1958).

Discrimination by municipality in regulation of expression on basis of content of expression forbidden. — While a municipality may constitutionally impose reasonable time, place, and manner regulations on the use of its streets and sidewalks for purposes of U.S. Const., amend. 1, what a municipality may not do under the U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14 is to discriminate in the regulation of expression on the basis of the content of that expression. Hudgens v. NLRB, 424 U.S. 507, 96 S. Ct. 1029, 47 L. Ed. 2d 196, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 5 (1976).

Creation and definition of property interests. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 speaks of "property" generally. There may be many gradations in the "importance" or "necessity" of various consumer goods; but if the root principle of procedural due process is to be applied with objectivity, it cannot rest on such distinctions. Morrow Elec. Co. v. Cruse, 370 F. Supp. 639, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12541 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Determination of whether interest is "property" entitled to due process protection, or a mere expectancy, is made by reference to the sufficiency of the interest under state law. Page v. Jackson, 398 F. Supp. 263, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11228 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Property interests are defined by state law. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 449, 228 S.E.2d 839, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1264 (1976), cert. denied, 432 U.S. 905, 97 S. Ct. 2949, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1077, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2482 (1977), overruled in part, Boozar v. Higdon, 252 Ga. 276, 313 S.E.2d 100, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 686 (1984).

Property interest is created and defined by source independent of the Constitution, including state laws, ordinances, or implied contracts with secure certain benefits and support claims of entitlement to those benefits. Harrison v. Housing Auth., 445 F. Supp. 356, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19692 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 592 F.2d 281, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 15781 (5th Cir. 1979); Arundar v. DeKalb County Sch. Dist., 620 F.2d 493, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 16143 (5th Cir. 1980).

Property interests are created and dimensions defined by existing rules or understandings that stem from an independent source such as state law. Press v. Board of Regents, 489 F. Supp. 150, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12764 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Protection from deprivation of property by government. — Constitutional prohibition against deprivations of property without due process of law applies only to government action. Jeffries v. Georgia Residential Fin. Auth., 503 F. Supp. 610, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15557 (N.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 678 F.2d 919, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18426 (11th Cir. 1982).

Severity of deprivation of property interest at stake provides initial measure of degree of procedural protection that individual is entitled to demand from government. Jeffries v. Georgia Residential Fin. Auth., 503 F. Supp. 610, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15557 (N.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 678 F.2d 919, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18426 (11th Cir. 1982).

Prejudgment garnishment restricted to extraordinary situations. — Prejudgment garnishment not restricting summary seizure of property to "extraordinary situations," violates U.S. Const., amend. 14. Aaron v. Clark, 342 F. Supp. 898, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13890 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Garnishment of wages for alimony. — Garnishment of wages to satisfy alimony orders or judgments meets the demands of due process. Black v. Black, 245 Ga. 281, 264 S.E.2d 216, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 765 (1980).

Due Process (Cont'd)
1. In General (Cont'd)

Degree of property deprivation. — Any invasions, regardless of degree, of owner's dominion over use or sale of private property is interdicted by U.S. Const., amend. 14 as well as by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I. Durham v. State, 219 Ga. 830, 136 S.E.2d 322, 1964 Ga. LEXIS 420 (1964).

Any significant taking of property by state is within purview of due process clause. U.S. Const., amend. 14 draws no bright lines around three-day, ten-day, or 50-day deprivations of property. North Ga. Finishing, Inc. v. Di-Chem, Inc., 419 U.S. 601, 95 S. Ct. 719, 42 L. Ed. 2d 751, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 24 (1975).

Only "significant property interest" is protected by U.S. Const., amend. 14. Gordon Junior College Chapter of Am. Ass'n of Univ. Professors v. Board of Regents, 484 F. Supp. 614, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10104 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Temporary nonfinal deprivation of property. — Temporary, nonfinal deprivation of property is nonetheless deprivation in terms of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Brainard v. State, 246 Ga. 586, 272 S.E.2d 683, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1211 (1980).

Right to pursue profession is property right. — The right to follow a profession, which includes the right to be compensated for services rendered, is a property right. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966).

Right to follow one's profession, business, or occupation, or to labor, is valuable property right, protected by the Constitution and laws of Georgia, subject only to such restrictions as the government may impose for the welfare and safety of society. Horne v. Skelton, 152 Ga. App. 654, 263 S.E.2d 528, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2995 (1979).

Ordinance or implied contract creating property interest in employment. — Property interest in employment sufficient to invoke procedural due process protections need not be formal contract or tenure system, but may be created by ordinance or by implied contract. Glenn v. Newman, 614 F.2d 467, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19305 (5th Cir. 1980).

Privileges, licenses, certificates, and franchises as property interests. — Privileges, licenses, certificates, and franchises qualify as property interests for purposes of procedural due process. The extent of the injury is irrelevant except for determining what process is due. Wells Fargo Armored Serv. Corp. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 547 F.2d 938, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 14530 (5th Cir. 1977).

Fundamental requirements of due process applicable to licensing. — Licenses are not to be taken away without procedural due process required by U.S. Const., amend. 14. Bell v. Burson, 402 U.S. 535, 91 S. Ct. 1586, 29 L. Ed. 2d 90, 1971 U.S. LEXIS 41 (1971).

Since licensing consists in the determination of factual issues and the application of legal criteria to them — a judicial act — the fundamental requirements of due process are applicable to it. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15272 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8695 (5th Cir. 1973).

Procedural due process to be followed when goods taken from user. — Statutes cannot constitutionally allow one who has a proprietary interest in goods to take them from the user of the goods without following procedural due process. It follows a fortiori that statutes cannot constitutionally allow one who has only a security interest in goods to take them from the user without following procedural due process. Mason v. Garriss, 360 F. Supp. 420, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13066 (N.D. Ga.), amended, 364 F. Supp. 452, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11794 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Vested rights required where substantial property-related expenditures made in reliance of permit. — Where substantial expenditures are made in the acquisition of property or in preparations for the construction of a building in reliance upon the granting of a permit, vested rights are acquired which cannot be displaced by the passage of a new ordinance. Clairmont Dev. Co. v. Morgan,

Debtor's equity interest in land and right to use constitute property entitled to procedural due process. — A challenged statute which provides that any security interest holder can upon default by the debtor invoke a summary foreclosure procedure is unconstitutional. The debtor's equity interest in the land and the right to its use would constitute property entitled to procedural due process. Law v. USDA, 366 F. Supp. 1233, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11305 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Issuance of building permits. — The issuance of a building permit by the county for land it either knew or should have known would not support a septic system may have given rise to an action under state law, but was not a "taking" under the fifth amendment, nor was it such an abuse of governmental power sufficient to raise the tort alleged to the stature of a substantive due process violation. Since the county could have been sued for this type of injury, a claim of denial of procedural due process was foreclosed. Rymer v. Douglas County, 764 F.2d 796, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30803 (11th Cir. 1985).

Liquor license holder has sufficient property interest in holding the license to the date of its automatic termination that the revocation of that license must be accompanied by rudimentary due process protections. Page v. Jackson, 398 F. Supp. 263, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11228 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Lack of standards for issuance of liquor licenses. — Because state law does not grant an applicant a property interest in the opportunity to acquire a liquor license, a county commissioner's failure to establish standards for the granting of a license does not violate the applicant's due process rights. Further, where the commissioner refuses to grant any licenses whatsoever, Georgia law does not require the commissioner to follow the procedural safeguards outlined in O.C.G.A. § 3-3-2 when denying a license request. Cheek v. Gooch, 779 F.2d 1507, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 21746 (11th Cir. 1986).

Granting beer and wine license applications based on public opposition. — Whether pursuant to specific statute or de facto practice, the granting of beer and wine license applications based on public opposition is an unconstitutional due process and equal protection violation. McCollum v. City of Powder Springs, 720 F. Supp. 985, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11159 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

What due process requires prior to professional board's decision to initiate proceedings against professional.

— Where an investigator was attempting to gain information concerning a doctor's fitness to practice medicine, due process did not require at this stage of the matter that the doctor be informed of the nature of the charges that have been made to the board or the names of the doctor's accusers, nor was the doctor denied due process because the doctor was not permitted to participate in selecting the documents to be collected by the investigator or to participate in the deliberations prior to the decision to initiate proceedings against the doctor. Gilmore v. Composite State Bd. of Medical Exmrs., 243 Ga. 415, 254 S.E.2d 365, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 918 (1979).

Right to practice law as property right. — Right to practice law is property right within meaning of due process and equal protection provisions of U.S. Const., amend. 14 to the Constitution of the United States. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966).

Suspension of attorney convicted of crime of moral turpitude before appeals final not violative of due process. — Promoting public confidence in the judicial system is a legitimate state end and suspension of an attorney upon conviction of a crime of moral turpitude, even before all appeals are final, is rationally related to that end and does not violate due process. In re Stoner, 246 Ga. 581, 272 S.E.2d 313, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1208 (1980).

Out-of-state lawyer without property interest requiring automatic recognition of right to appear. — An out-of-state lawyer has no property interest cognizable under U.S. Const., amend. 14 which requires automatic recognition of a right to appear pro hac vice in a criminal prosecution. Whitaker v. State, 246 Ga. 163, 269 S.E.2d 436, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1030 (1980).

Due Process (Cont'd)

Right to practice medicine as property right. — Right to practice medicine is valuable property right, in which, under the Constitution and laws of the state, one is entitled to be protected and secure. Yeargin v. Hamilton Mem. Hosp., 225 Ga. 661, 171 S.E.2d 136, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 604 (1969), cert. denied, 397 U.S. 963, 90 S. Ct. 997, 25 L. Ed. 2d 255, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 2689 (1970).

Hospital's evaluation of physician's personal qualities consistent with due process. — It is consistent with due process for a hospital to evaluate those personal qualities of a physician that reasonably relate to the physician's ability to function effectively within a hospital environment, such as a doctor's ability to work well with others, which is a factor that could significantly influence the standard of care the physician's patients received. Robbins v. Ong, 452 F. Supp. 110, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17302 (S.D. Ga. 1978).

Judgment creditor without right to deprive debtor of property without due process. — The mere fact that a creditor has obtained a judgment does not give the creditor a right to enforce that judgment by depriving the alleged judgment debtor of his property without due process of law. Apex Supply Co. v. Johnny Long Homes, Inc., 143 Ga. App. 699, 240 S.E.2d 171, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2469 (1977).

Custom of child carrying parental surname not protectible interest. — Father's protectible interest in having his child bear the parental surname as customary is not property right within meaning of due process. Fulghum v. Paul, 229 Ga. 463, 192 S.E.2d 376, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 651 (1972).

Utility rate set by Public Service Commission as confiscation. — Rate set by Public Service Commission must reach the point of confiscation for utility to show legally protected interest. Georgia Power Co. v. Allied Chem. Corp., 233 Ga. 558, 212 S.E.2d 628, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1375 (1975).

Public utility has standing to challenge rate schedule on ground that schedule is so low that it is confiscatory and denies the utility substantive due process. Georgia Power Co. v. Allied Chem. Corp., 233 Ga. 558, 212 S.E.2d 628, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1375 (1975).

Utility rate increase not customers' property right. — Utility customers have no sufficient property interest in given utility rate increase to invoke procedural protections of due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Georgia Power Project v. Georgia Power Co., 409 F. Supp. 332, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15922 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Pledging political subdivisions' power under Municipal Electric Authority of Georgia Act not taking of property without due process. — Under the Municipal Electric Authority of Georgia Act, former Code 1933, ch. 24B-4 (see O.C.G.A. § 46-3-110 et seq.), the pledging of the full faith and credit and taxing power of the political subdivisions does not constitute a taking of property without due process of law. Thompson v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 238 Ga. 19, 231 S.E.2d 720, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1077 (1976).

County landfill fee schedule upheld. — County's sanitary landfill and fee schedules were not violative of due process or equal protection clauses of the United States and Georgia Constitutions. City of Covington v. Newton County, 243 Ga. 476, 254 S.E.2d 855, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 947 (1979).

Where telephone company has no property right guaranteeing against competition. — If a telephone company does not show before the Public Service Commission that its toll service to its subscribers would be operated at a loss or that it would not receive a fair return on its investment, or that it would be unable to meet its financial or service obligations if competition is allowed, and its toll certificate was granted subject to the prospect of competition existing in the governing telephone utilities act, then it has no property right guaranteeing it against competition. Statesboro Tel. Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 235 Ga. 179, 219 S.E.2d 127, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 815 (1975), superseded by statute as stated in Georgia Public Service Com. v. Southern Bell, 254 Ga. 244, 327 S.E.2d 726, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 667 (1985).

Requiring extension of existing power lines beyond carrier's public service commitment violates due process. — To require extension of existing power lines beyond the scope of the carrier's commitment to the public service is taking of property in violation of the federal Constitution. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n v. Georgia Power Co., 182 Ga. 706, 186 S.E. 839, 1936 Ga. LEXIS 548 (1936), superseded by statute as stated in Georgia Public Service Com. v. Southern Bell, 254 Ga. 244, 327 S.E.2d 726, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 667 (1985).

Where state's compelling railroad company to operate at loss would deprive it of property without due process. — The usual permissive charter of a railroad company does not oblige the company to operate its railroad at a loss, so that, where it is reasonably certain that future operation will be at a loss, the company, in the absence of contract obligation to continue, may cease, and if in such circumstances the company be compelled by the state to continue to operate at a loss, it would be deprived of its property without due process of law. Georgia Power Co. v. City of Decatur, 281 U.S. 505, 50 S. Ct. 369, 74 L. Ed. 999, 1930 U.S. LEXIS 720 (1930).

Deprivation or regulation of liberty to contract. — Deprivation of liberty to contract is forbidden by the Constitution if without due process of law; but restraint or regulation of this liberty, if reasonable in relation to its subject and if adopted for the protection of the community against evils menacing the health, safety, morals and welfare of the people, is due process. Griffin v. Vandegriff, 205 Ga. 288, 53 S.E.2d 345, 1949 Ga. LEXIS 348 (1949).

State without power over citizen's contracts outside state. — There is a vital distinction between acts done within and acts done without the jurisdiction of the state; and since under U.S. Const., amend. 14 a citizen of a state has "a right to contract outside of the state for insurance on his property," the power of the state does not extend to such extra-territorial transactions, and a statute imposing restrictions thereon is in violation of the due process provision of that amendment. Cooper Co. v. State, 187 Ga. 497, 1 S.E.2d 436, 1939 Ga. LEXIS 427 (1939).

Review of Department of Natural Resources decisions. — The Georgia Administrative Procedure Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-13-1 et seq., and O.C.G.A. § 12-2-1 govern the procedure for judicial review of final decisions of the Department of Natural Resources and, where a party seeking review failed to make a timely request therefor, affirmance of the final decision of the department did not violate due process. Nix v. Long Mtn. Resources, Inc., 262 Ga. 506, 422 S.E.2d 195, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 923 (1992).

Property interest in public office explicated. — The broad statement that a public office is not property within the sense of the constitutional guaranties of due process of law does not mean that an officer duly inducted into office for a definite term may be deprived of its possession without a hearing, when the right to have it terminate is limited to specified causes. The statement that public office is not property means that it is not property in the sense that an officer is not denied due process of law by the abolition of the office before the expiration of his term, or by the passage of a statute limiting or reducing the officer's compensation, and that an officer has no property right in the books and papers pertaining to the officer's office. Walton v. Davis, 188 Ga. 56, 2 S.E.2d 603, 1939 Ga. LEXIS 463 (1939).

Property interests in public employment for which a person may claim U.S. Const., amend. 14's due process protection are created and their dimensions defined by existing rules and understandings that stem from an independent source such as state law, which secure certain benefits and that support claims of entitlement to those benefits. Cotten v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 395 F. Supp. 388, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8089 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 515 F.2d 1098, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 13784 (5th Cir. 1975).

Due Process (Cont'd)
1. In General (Cont'd)

Permanent or "classified" state employee has sufficient property interest in job to warrant due process protection, even though such protection may not include the right to a pretermination hearing. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Person must have legitimate claim of entitlement to have property interest in benefit. — To have a property interest in a benefit, a person clearly must have more than an abstract need or desire for it and more than a unilateral expectation of it. The person must, instead, have a legitimate claim of entitlement to it. Sims v. Fox, 505 F.2d 857, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 5439 (5th Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 1011, 95 S. Ct. 2415, 44 L. Ed. 2d 678, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 1903 (1975); Georgia Power Project v. Georgia Power Co., 409 F. Supp. 332, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15922 (N.D. Ga. 1975); Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 449, 228 S.E.2d 839, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1264 (1976), cert. denied, 432 U.S. 905, 97 S. Ct. 2949, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1077, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2482 (1977), overruled in part, Boozier v. Higdon, 252 Ga. 276, 313 S.E.2d 100, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 686 (1984); Wells Fargo Armored Serv. Corp. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 547 F.2d 938, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 14530 (5th Cir. 1977); Gordon Junior College Chapter of Am. Ass'n of Univ. Professors v. Board of Regents, 484 F. Supp. 614, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10104 (N.D. Ga. 1980); Press v. Board of Regents, 489 F. Supp. 150, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12764 (M.D. Ga. 1980); Jeffries v. Georgia Residential Fin. Auth., 503 F. Supp. 610, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15557 (N.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 678 F.2d 919, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18426 (11th Cir. 1982).

Right of defendant to fair trial versus rights of public to gain access to hearings in criminal cases. — See R.W. Page Corp. v. Lumpkin, 249 Ga. 576, 292 S.E.2d 815, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1165 (1982).

Hearing for certificate of public convenience and necessity. — A hearing on an application for a certificate of public convenience and necessity, whether granted or denied, is not a judicial or quasi-judicial proceeding to which due process rights applicable in such proceedings attach. RTC Transp., Inc. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 165 Ga. App. 539, 301 S.E.2d 896, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 1939 (1983).

The failure of the Public Service Commission to set forth its findings of fact and conclusions of law does not result in a denial of the due process rights of applicants for issuance or amendment of motor carriers' certificates. RTC Transp., Inc. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 165 Ga. App. 539, 301 S.E.2d 896, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 1939 (1983).

Hearing officer's lack of discretionary power not denial of due process. — Licensee was not denied due process and equal protection in the Department of Public Safety hearing simply because the hearing officer had no authority or discretion to reinstate a habitual violator. Hardison v. Booker, 179 Ga. App. 693, 347 S.E.2d 681, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2011 (1986).

Claimant must act in timely manner. — If a claimant has a remedy provided by law, under which the claimant can assert the claim within a reasonable time, then the claimant has the claimant's "day in court." If the claimant fails to assert it within such time, then the claimant, not the law, is at fault. The claimant has sinned away the claimant's day of grace. Berry v. Siskin, 128 Ga. App. 3, 195 S.E.2d 255, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1360 (1973).

Venue needs clear proof beyond reasonable doubt to protect due process. — Jury instructions set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-2-2(c) violated the habeas petitioner's due process rights since Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. V made venue an essential element of malice murder, and the instruction's mandate that jurors had to consider the cause of death to have occurred where the body was found improperly shifted the burden of proving otherwise onto the defendant. Owens v. McLaughlin, 733 F.3d 320, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 21599 (11th Cir. 2013).

Courts not only forum for redress. — The constitutional due process clause was not intended to give procedural protection to every person who has an interest in action taken by the state even though that action may affect a person by increasing the amount the person must pay for a service. The courts are not the only forum wherein an aggrieved person may seek redress. Georgia Power Project v. Georgia Power Co., 409 F. Supp. 332, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15922 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Fee system courts as they existed prior to July 1, 1982, in which judges relied for all of their judicial income on the fees paid by litigants before them, violated due process by creating a pecuniary interest in the fees on the part of judges of such courts, and, therefore such judges and their successors in office were enjoined from making any effort to enforce judgments rendered by those courts rendered prior to that date. Doss v. Long, 629 F. Supp. 127, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16534 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

Overlap in judicial and prosecutory functions at administrative hearings. — Considerable overlap in judicial and prosecutory functions at administrative type hearings is not per se violative of due process. Brownlee v. Williams, 233 Ga. 548, 212 S.E.2d 359, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1374 (1975).

Legislative limitation of recoverable damages after tort committed not deprivation of property without due process. — The fact that alleged libelous articles were published before the adoption of an act limiting the plaintiff's previously existing right to recover punitive damages, did not render the law unconstitutional as violating federal and state provisions against the deprivation of property without due process of law. Kelly v. Hall, 191 Ga. 470, 12 S.E.2d 881, 1941 Ga. LEXIS 317 (1941).

County or municipal corporation created by legislature without standing to invoke due process argument against legislature. — A county or municipal corporation, created by the legislature, does not have standing to invoke the equal protection and due process clauses of the state or federal Constitution in opposition to the legislature. City of Atlanta v. Spence, 242 Ga. 194, 249 S.E.2d 554, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1137 (1978).

Standing to challenge constitutionality of law or municipal ordinance.

— Before a law or municipal ordinance can be attacked by any person on the ground of its unconstitutionality, the person must show that its enforcement infringes upon rights of person or property, and neither a threat of arrest nor threats of repeated arrests amount to interference with person or property rights. Jenkins v. Thomas, 124 Ga. App. 286, 183 S.E.2d 489, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 899 (1971).

Before a statute can be attacked by anyone on the ground of its unconstitutionality, an individual must show that its enforcement is an infringement upon the right of personal property, and that such infringement results from the unconstitutional feature of the statute upon which the individual bases the attack. Bryant v. Prior Tire Co., 230 Ga. 137, 196 S.E.2d 14, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 838 (1973).

Identity fraud statute not unconstitutionally vague as applied. — O.C.G.A. § 16-9-21 expressly prohibited the improper access of another's account at a financial institution such that the defendant was placed on notice that the use of a victim's social security number to obtain a job and thus access the victim's Internal Revenue Service account was illegal; thus, O.C.G.A. § 16-9-121 was not unconstitutionally vague as applied to the defendant. Hernandez v. State, 281 Ga. 559, 639 S.E.2d 473, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 2 (2007).

No personal jurisdiction where no transaction of business in state. — In an action seeking collection of a certain promissory note for which the nonresident defendant executed a guaranty in favor of the resident plaintiff, the defendant did not "transact business" in this state, and there was, accordingly, no personal jurisdiction over the defendant under the following circumstances: (1) The guaranty was neither solicited nor executed in Georgia; (2) no contract negotiations occurred within Georgia; (3) the defendant did not have any other financial dealings with the plaintiff; and (4) the guaranty contained a choice-of-law provision calling for the application of Georgia law. Algemene Bank Nederland v. Mattox, 611 F. Supp. 144, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19561 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

Exercise of jurisdiction over non-resident former spouse in action for contempt and modification of Georgia divorce decree was consonant with due process notions of “fair play” and “substantial justice” because: (1) Georgia has a legitimate interest in protecting resident spouses and children; (2) The courts of Georgia remain open to the appellant to enforce the appellant’s rights, and the appellant enjoys the benefits and protection of the laws of Georgia; (3) the inconvenience to the appellant is outweighed by the inconvenience to the appellee who would be forced to sue in a foreign forum on a cause of action which arose from their Georgia matrimonial domicile and their Georgia divorce; and (4) the Legislature gave the courts of Georgia, through O.C.G.A. § 9-10-91(5), the authority to entertain litigation against nonresidents who incur some form of family-related obligation while maintaining a matrimonial domicile or while residing within this state. Smith v. Smith, 254 Ga. 450, 330 S.E.2d 706, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 745 (1985).

Doctrine of sovereign immunity prevents citizen’s suit against state or its political subdivisions. — The Georgia Supreme Court has often affirmed and acknowledged that the doctrine of sovereign immunity prevents a suit by a citizen against the state, or a political subdivision thereof. Haber v. Fulton County, 124 Ga. App. 789, 186 S.E.2d 152, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 1106, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 1423, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 1434 (1971).

Government not liable for mistakes in prosecution of crimes without its consent. — The safeguarding of society by the prosecution of crimes against it is a sovereign attribute inherent in all governments, and for mistakes in exercising this sovereign right there can be no liability against the government without its consent. McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1136 (1966).

U.S. Const., amend. 14 is applicable to criminal trials in state courts. King v. State, 174 Ga. 432, 163 S.E. 168, 1932

Ga. LEXIS 64 (1932), superseded by statute as stated in Mitchum v. State, 306 Ga. 878, 834 S.E.2d 65, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 641 (2019).

No deprivation of due process where right to sue the state is withdrawn. — The right to sue the state is not a vested right and cannot be property of the appellant. There is, therefore, no deprivation of due process when the right to sue is withdrawn. Goolsby v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 141 Ga. App. 605, 234 S.E.2d 165, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2014 (1977), overruled in part, Deal v. Coleman, 294 Ga. 170, 751 S.E.2d 337, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 965 (2013).

Withdrawal of right to sue state for loss of consortium. — Taking away right to action for loss of consortium of injured spouse is not deprivation of due process. Massey v. Thiokol Chem. Corp., 368 F. Supp. 668, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10506 (S.D. Ga. 1973).

Framing of question as to constitutionality of statute. — Where question as to constitutionality of statute is properly raised by attacking specific Code sections as denying the defendant equal protection and due process of law as guaranteed by the Constitution of Georgia and U.S. Const., amend. 14, and the answer clearly points out wherein the statute violates the constitutional provisions, the court cannot refuse to consider the question merely because it fails to point out the exact location of the due process and the equal protection clauses in the Constitutions. Buchanan v. Heath, 210 Ga. 410, 80 S.E.2d 393, 1954 Ga. LEXIS 331 (1954).

Sufficiency of constitutional challenge of ordinance posed by motion to dismiss. — In prosecution for violation of city code provision making it unlawful to possess lottery ticket demurrer (now motion to dismiss) on constitutional grounds which does not specify by chapter number, section number, or paragraph number, or in any other manner identify what law or constitutional provision it is contended is violated by the ordinance attacked is entirely too vague and general to raise any question as to the constitutionality of the ordinance insofar as it might contravene the due process clauses of the state and federal Constitutions. Smith v. City of Albany, 97 Ga. App. 731, 104 S.E.2d 488, 1958 Ga. App. LEXIS 868 (1958).

Failure to sever was not a denial of due process. — Defendant's motion to sever defendant's trial was properly denied since: (1) three defendants were not so numerous that the jury would be likely to confuse the facts and law applicable to each; (2) the relevant evidence against each co-defendant was unambiguous; (3) the applicable law was straightforward, and there was no evidence of any spillover effect from one co-defendant to another; (4) defendant made no showing of prejudice and a consequent denial of due process; and (5) even though the evidence was not as strong against defendant as that against the co-defendants that fact did not warrant severance. Parnell v. State, 260 Ga. App. 213, 581 S.E.2d 263, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 249 (2003).

Prosecutor's reference to defendant's silence. — Prosecutor's repeated and deliberate references throughout the trial to defendant's post-Miranda silence and request for counsel violated due process. Hill v. Turpin, 135 F.3d 1411, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 3001 (11th Cir. 1998).

Litigant's right to fair trial where there are contested issues of fact. — When there are contested issues of fact no litigant has any constitutional right to have a verdict in the litigant's favor; the litigant has only the right to a fair trial under which the jury returns a verdict for that party, plaintiff or defendant, whom it believes entitled thereto. That is due process. YMCA v. Bailey, 112 Ga. App. 684, 146 S.E.2d 324, 1965 Ga. App. LEXIS 818 (1965), cert. denied, 385 U.S. 868, 87 S. Ct. 131, 17 L. Ed. 2d 95, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 909 (1966).

Pretrial publicity not prejudicial. — Even though there had been a significant amount of media coverage as a result of corporation's patent infringement litigation against other members of the office furniture industry, this pretrial publicity in no way was sufficiently prejudicial and inflammatory as to saturate the community in such a way as to prevent prospective jurors from impartially adjudicating this dispute since the vast majority of the publicity in question was factual in nature, rather than sensational or prejudicial, and had been spread over a long span of time. Haworth, Inc. v. Herman Miller, Inc., 821 F. Supp. 1476, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21420 (N.D. Ga. 1992).

Disinterested jurors. — Evidence was insufficient to show that the jury pool of 1.8 million people was insufficient from which to draw a disinterested jury in a patent infringement case involving systems office furniture even though the office furniture industry was a major component of the region's business community and the parties to the case were respected members of their communities. Haworth, Inc. v. Herman Miller, Inc., 821 F. Supp. 1476, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21420 (N.D. Ga. 1992).

Legislative fiat may not replace factual determination. — Mere legislative fiat may not take place of fact in determination of issues involving life, liberty, or property as it is not within the province of a legislature to declare an individual guilty or presumptively guilty of a crime. Manley v. Georgia, 279 U.S. 1, 49 S. Ct. 215, 73 L. Ed. 575, 1929 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1929).

Pretrial discovery in termination of parental rights. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not mandate pretrial discovery in proceedings to terminate parental rights. In re L.L.W., 141 Ga. App. 32, 232 S.E.2d 378, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 1745 (1977); Ray v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 81, 270 S.E.2d 303, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2466 (1980).

Application of "doctrine of binding precedent". — The "doctrine of binding precedent" was violative of due process as applied to situation where defendant was granted summary judgment in a driver's claim for damages resulting from a collision after the passenger's case was tried before a jury and resulted in a verdict for defendant. Stanley v. Booz, 179 Ga. App. 257, 346 S.E.2d 1, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 1881 (1986).

Duty of court to adopt construction sustaining constitutionality of statute when two constructions possible. — Where a statute or an ordinance is capable of two constructions, constitutional under one construction and unconstitutional under the other, it is the duty of the court to adopt that construction which will sustain its constitutionality. City of Newnan v. Atlanta Laundries, Inc., 174 Ga. 99, 162 S.E. 497, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 4 (1932).

Due Process (Cont'd)

Construction under state and federal due process provisions may differ. — The fact that the United States Supreme Court may construe U.S. Const., amend. 14 as not imposing a particular limitation would not prevent this court from giving a different construction to the Georgia due process clause and holding that under this clause the limitation does exist. National Mtg. Corp. v. Suttles, 194 Ga. 768, 22 S.E.2d 386, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 639 (1942).

“Gross negligence” or “deliberate indifference” is not the proper test for adjudging a federal civil rights due process claim against a municipality. Gilmere v. City of Atlanta, 737 F.2d 894, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 18103 (11th Cir. 1984); 476 U.S. 1124, 106 S. Ct. 1993, 90 L. Ed. 2d 673 (1986); 493 U.S. 817, 110 S. Ct. 70, 107 L. Ed. 2d 37 (1989).

Excessive force claim by pretrial detainee. — Civil rights action by a pretrial detainee against a prison guard, alleging that the guard assaulted the detainee and used excessive force, was properly brought under the fourteenth amendment, not the eighth amendment. Telfair v. Gilberg, 868 F. Supp. 1396, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16494 (S.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 87 F.3d 1330, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 14113 (11th Cir. 1996).

When jury charge stating law as to presumption accords with due process. — A jury charge that is a statement of the law as to a presumption arising from proof of certain facts accords with due process if the evidence necessary to invoke the inference is sufficient for a rational juror to find the inferred fact beyond a reasonable doubt, as well as the more-likely-than-not-standard. Davis v. State, 140 Ga. App. 890, 232 S.E.2d 164, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2121 (1977).

Ability to make opening and closing statements when presenting antago- nistic defenses. — Existence of antagonistic defenses or the loss of the right to make opening and closing statements to the jury does not constitute a showing of prejudice amounting to a denial of due process. Parnell v. State, 260 Ga. App. 213, 581 S.E.2d 263, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 249 (2003).

State cannot be deemed guilty of violation of due process simply because of court error. — A state cannot be deemed guilty of a violation of the due process clause of its Constitution, or of the due process clause of the federal Constitution, simply because one of its courts while acting within its jurisdiction has made erroneous rulings or decisions. In such a case a party is left to the appropriate remedies for the correction of errors in judicial proceedings. Norman v. State, 171 Ga. 527, 156 S.E. 203, 1930 Ga. LEXIS 496 (1930), transferred, 44 Ga. App. 92, 160 S.E. 522, 1931 Ga. App. LEXIS 600 (1931); King v. State, 174 Ga. 432, 163 S.E. 168, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 64 (1932), superseded by statute as stated in Mitchum v. State, 306 Ga. 878, 834 S.E.2d 65, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 641 (2019).

When parties have been fully heard in regular course of judicial proceedings, an erroneous decision of a state court does not deprive the unsuccessful party of that party's property without due process of law. Gilmore v. Mutual Benefit Life Ins. Co., 179 Ga. 267, 175 S.E. 681, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 270 (1934).

Due process cannot be assumed to be same in military setting as it is in a civil setting due in part to the understanding on all sides that the peculiar nature of the military function makes quite difficult the adherence to a well-defined line of demarcation between the strictly disciplinary and the judicial functions in the military services. Bisson v. Howard, 224 F.2d 586, 1955 U.S. App. LEXIS 4125 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 350 U.S. 916, 76 S. Ct. 201, 100 L. Ed. 803, 1955 U.S. LEXIS 80 (1955).

Federal court jurisdiction. — Purely local dispute cannot be brought within federal court jurisdiction by mere invocation of the concepts of liberty and property protected by U.S. Const., amend. 14. Gordon Junior College Chapter of Am.

Ass'n of Univ. Professors v. Board of Regents, 484 F. Supp. 614, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10104 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Statutes creating presumption violate due process. — Statute creating presumption that is arbitrary or that operates to deny fair opportunity to repel it violates due process clause of this section. Manley v. Georgia, 279 U.S. 1, 49 S. Ct. 215, 73 L. Ed. 575, 1929 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1929).

Statutory presumption that contraband found in house belongs to husband violates due process. — Permissive, or rebuttable, presumption that contraband found in a house belongs to husband by virtue of his statutory status as head of household cannot withstand due process scrutiny. Knighton v. State, 248 Ga. 199, 282 S.E.2d 102, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 960 (1981).

Former Code 1933, § 38-118 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-4-21), relating to rebuttable presumptions, is not violative of the due process and equal protection guarantees of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Evans v. State, 159 Ga. App. 776, 285 S.E.2d 235, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2805 (1981).

Statute purporting to determine conclusive evidence void as unauthorized invasion of court function. — Insofar as former Civil Code 1910, § 1790 purported to make an official analysis of fertilizers by the state chemist conclusive evidence, it was an unauthorized invasion of the functions of the courts, and is void as violative of this section, because it is an unauthorized attempt to legislate the truth of facts upon which the rights of parties are made to depend in judicial investigations. Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Raines, 171 Ga. 154, 155 S.E. 484, 1930 Ga. LEXIS 291 (1930).

Legislation that certain factual proof constitutes prima facie evidence valid if rational connection between proof and inference. — State legislation declaring that proof of one fact or a group of facts shall constitute prima facie evidence of the main or ultimate fact in issue is valid if there is a rational connection between what is proved and what is to be inferred; thus, if the presumption is not unreasonable and is not made conclusive of the rights of the person against whom raised, it does not constitute a denial of due process of law. Manley v. Georgia, 279 U.S. 1, 49 S. Ct. 215, 73 L. Ed. 575, 1929 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1929); Johnson v. State, 203 Ga. 147, 45 S.E.2d 616, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 578 (1947); Reid v. Perkerson, 207 Ga. 27, 60 S.E.2d 151, 1950 Ga. LEXIS 391 (1950).

Sheriff can be held liable on bond for acts of deputies outside presence and without knowledge. — To hold sheriff liable on the sheriff's bond for the acts of the sheriff's deputies committed outside of the sheriff's presence and without the sheriff's knowledge is not a violation of the due process clauses of the state and federal Constitutions, notwithstanding the fact that the sheriff does not have unlimited power in discharging or removing deputies. Standard Sur. & Cas. Co. v. Johnson, 74 Ga. App. 823, 41 S.E.2d 576, 1947 Ga. App. LEXIS 707 (1947).

Statutory liability for failure to report what is not known violates due process. — Section providing that a section foreman shall be liable for double the value of the stock killed by the railroad upon the foreman's failure to post the required notice, not only makes him liable for the failure to report that of which the foreman has knowledge, but goes beyond this to subject the foreman to a liability for failing to report the killing of stock of which the foreman has no knowledge. This is a clear violation of the due process clause regardless of the fact that the penalty shall be recovered in the manner provided by law for the collection of other claims. Buchanan v. Heath, 210 Ga. 410, 80 S.E.2d 393, 1954 Ga. LEXIS 331 (1954).

Offense of defrauding or obtaining property from state, county, or public officer not violative of due process. — It is an indictable offense in this state for any person to cheat and defraud the state of any of its money or other property by using any deceitful means or artful practice. It is a felony for any officer, servant or other person in any public department, station or office of government of this state to embezzle, steal, secrete or fraudulently take and carry away any money or other property or effects belonging to the state.

Hence, to defraud or obtain property from the state, county or a public officer is clearly a substantive penal offense in this state, which does not offend the due process clause of the Constitution of the United States or the due process provision of Georgia's Constitution. Rollins v. State, 215 Ga. 437, 111 S.E.2d 63, 1959 Ga. LEXIS 506 (1959).

Appellate review of excessive punitive damage awards. — The law requires state and federal appellate courts to review de novo claims that punitive damages awards are grossly excessive in violation of the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment to the United States Constitution. Time Warner Entm't Co. v. Six Flags Over Ga., L.L.C., 254 Ga. App. 598, 563 S.E.2d 178, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 430 (2002), cert. denied, No. S02C1177, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 835 (Ga. Sept. 16, 2002), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 977, 123 S. Ct. 1783, 155 L. Ed. 2d 665, 2003 U.S. LEXIS 2955 (2003).

Excessive damages. — In an action against a truck manufacturer, a punitive damages award of $2 million was not so excessive as to violate the due process clauses of the Georgia and United States Constitutions, the eighth amendment of the United States Constitution, and the excessive fines clause of the Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII. Mack Trucks, Inc. v. Conkle, 263 Ga. 539, 436 S.E.2d 635, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 800 (1993).

Statute holding automobile owner liable for operator's negligence violates due process. — Ga. L. 1955, p. 454 clearly violates the due process clause of both the federal and state Constitutions, for the reason that it makes the owner of a motor vehicle liable if the vehicle is being used in the prosecution of the business of or for the benefit of the owner, even though operated without notice to her or without her knowledge and without her consent, express or implied. To hold this statute constitutional, would be to hold a party liable for the negligent conduct of another, even though a trespasser were operating the vehicle against the express orders of the owner, and irrespective of how careful or free from negligence the owner was, the only condition being that it be operated for the benefit of the owner. Frankel v. Cone, 214 Ga. 733, 107 S.E.2d 819, 1959 Ga. LEXIS 327 (1959), overruled on other grounds, Lott Inv. Corp. v. Gerbing, 242 Ga. 90, 249 S.E.2d 561, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1106 (1978).

State regulation of no-fault insurer's subrogation rights. — There is no constitutional impediment to state's making subrogation rights of no-fault automobile insurer dependent upon weight of vehicles involved in the accident, either under the equal protection or due process clauses. Bituminous Cas. Corp. v. Prudential Property & Cas. Ins. Co., 247 Ga. 481, 277 S.E.2d 23, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 755 (1981).

Process for commitment to state mental institution. — Former Code 1933, § 27-1503 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131) affords a person due process of the laws prior to a final order committing that person to a state mental institution whether or not that person is committed temporarily to a state mental institution for evaluation. Skelton v. Slaton, 243 Ga. 426, 254 S.E.2d 704, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 925 (1979).

Release from state mental institution. — The provisions of former Code 1933, § 27-1503 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131) disallowing the filing of another application for release until one year has elapsed from the denial of the last preceding application and allowing release only upon court order to do not offend current concepts of due process or equal protection of the laws. Skelton v. Slaton, 243 Ga. 426, 254 S.E.2d 704, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 925 (1979).

The state's policy of not discharging a voluntary patient with a legal guardian from a state mental hospital or affording the patient an involuntary commitment hearing without the consent of the guardian deprived the patient of the patient's right to challenge the patient's confinement and violated due process. Heichelbech v. Evans, 798 F. Supp. 708, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13216 (M.D. Ga. 1992), aff'd, 995 F.2d 237, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 13721 (11th Cir. 1993).

Determination of divorcing parties'

rights by judge or jury. — Former Code 1933, § 30-122 (see O.C.G.A. § 19-5-17), providing for determination of rights and disabilities of the parties by the jury or the judge, as the case may be when a divorce is granted is not violative of the due process and equal protection clauses of the state and federal Constitutions. Gary v. Johnson, 210 Ga. 686, 82 S.E.2d 651, 1954 Ga. LEXIS 421 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, § 30-122, prior to amendment by Ga. L. 1960, p. 1024, § 1 and Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 5).

Statute defining alimony comports with due process. — Because the legislative intent is clear and the statute provides “fair notice” of its meaning, former Code 1933, § 30-201 (see O.C.G.A. § 19-6-1), which defines and determines alimony, does not violate the due process clause of the state or federal Constitution. Davenport v. Davenport, 243 Ga. 613, 255 S.E.2d 695, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1009 (1979).

Authority of security personnel to control access to state buildings and property. — Former Code 1933, §§ 91-134 (see O.C.G.A. § 50-16-14) and 91-9908 (see O.C.G.A. § 50-16-16), which authorize security personnel to deny entrance of persons to and to remove persons from state buildings and property, are not violative of due process or equal protection guarantees. State v. Boone, 243 Ga. 416, 254 S.E.2d 367, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 920, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 898, 100 S. Ct. 206, 62 L. Ed. 2d 133, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 3290 (1979).

No denial of due process or equal protection in operation of MARTA Board’s fare determining function. — Since the properly constituted Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority Board has the sole authority to determine transit fares, and since the MARTA Act (Ga. L. 1965, 2243) establishes very definite parameters for the necessary and desirable fare rates, the appellants demonstrated no denial of due process or equal protection in the operation of the MARTA Board with respect to the fare determining function. Fulton County v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 247 Ga. 420, 276 S.E.2d 583, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 715 (1981).

Tort remedies for liberty depriva- tion satisfy due process. — The tort remedies that the State of Georgia provides as a means of redress for liberty deprivations i.e., O.C.G.A. § 51-1-13 (physical injury), O.C.G.A. § 51-1-14 (violent injury or attempt to commit injury) satisfied the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment, and the plaintiff’s constitutional claim against police officers was denied. Gilmere v. City of Atlanta, 737 F.2d 894, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 18103 (11th Cir. 1984).

Consequential damage from water meter leakage. — The plaintiff in a federal civil rights action had an adequate state law tort remedy. Consequently the plaintiff was not deprived of the plaintiff’s rights without due process of law when a water meter leaked, the county did not repair the meter, water flowed onto a nearby road and froze, and the plaintiff’s car skidded on the ice and collided with another car, causing extensive injuries, notwithstanding the fact that the county and its officers were immune from suit for negligence. Rittenhouse v. DeKalb County, 764 F.2d 1451, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 30880 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1014, 106 S. Ct. 1193, 89 L. Ed. 2d 308, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 277 (1986).

Failure to comply with federal cleanup act. — Failure to comply with the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act, 42 U.S.C. § 9601 et seq., did not create a due process violation since any allegations concerning such failure should be raised in the separate CERCLA recovery action. Amtreco, Inc. v. O.H. Materials, Inc., 802 F. Supp. 440, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15804 (M.D. Ga. 1992).

Motorcycle helmet law. — The motorcycle helmet law, O.C.G.A. § 40-6-315, does not require that the Georgia Board of Public Safety issue a list approving specific types of headgear and, therefore, the failure of the board to publish a list of approved headgear and eye-protective devices did not violate the plaintiff’s rights under the first, fifth, and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. ABATE of Ga., Inc. v. Georgia, 264 F.3d 1315, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 20378 (11th Cir. 2001), cert.

denied, 536 U.S. 924, 122 S. Ct. 2592, 153 L. Ed. 2d 781, 2002 U.S. LEXIS 4502 (2002).

Process due before classification as sexually dangerous predator. — Because the liberty interest affected by classification as a sexually dangerous predator were substantial and the danger of erroneous classification substantially more significant in the absence of a hearing, due process under the fourteenth amendment required an evidentiary hearing be afforded the defendant upon request due to the defendant's classification as a sexually dangerous predator. Gregory v. Sexual Offender Registration Review Bd., 298 Ga. 675, 784 S.E.2d 392, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 242 (2016).

2. Necessity for Notice and Hearing

Fundamental idea in “due process of law” is that of “notice” and “hearing.” City of Macon v. Ries, 179 Ga. 320, 176 S.E. 21, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 280 (1934); Blocker v. Blackburn, 228 Ga. 285, 185 S.E.2d 56, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 542 (1971); Law v. USDA, 366 F. Supp. 1233, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11305 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Fundamental requirement of due process in proceeding to be accorded finality is notice reasonably calculated to apprise interested parties of the pendency of the action and afford them an opportunity to present their objections. Hamilton v. Edwards, 245 Ga. 810, 267 S.E.2d 246, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 944 (1980).

Hearing must be granted before citizen is condemned. — “Due process of law” means that citizen must be afforded hearing before being condemned, and judgment can be rendered only after trial. City of Macon v. Ries, 179 Ga. 320, 176 S.E. 21, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 280 (1934).

Reasonable notice and opportunity to defend. — There is no violation of due process or the underlying principles of traditional fairness and substantial justice when reasonable notice and opportunity to defend are present. Bosworth v. Cooney, 156 Ga. App. 274, 274 S.E.2d 604, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3030 (1980).

Notice of civil action being brought against oneself is the very bedrock of due process. Lester v. Crooms, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 377, 277 S.E.2d 751, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1827 (1981).

Strict construction of service of process requirements. — Courts strictly construe service of process requirements, as notice is bedrock of due process. McGowan v. W.S. Badcock Corp., 144 Ga. App. 255, 240 S.E.2d 779, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2661 (1977).

Notice and hearing as a matter of right where one's property rights involved. — Due process of law as guaranteed by the federal and state Constitutions includes notice and hearing as a matter of right where one's property rights are involved. Dansby v. Dansby, 222 Ga. 118, 149 S.E.2d 252, 1966 Ga. LEXIS 412 (1966); Blocker v. Blackburn, 228 Ga. 285, 185 S.E.2d 56, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 542 (1971); Hamilton v. Edwards, 245 Ga. 810, 267 S.E.2d 246, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 944 (1980).

There must be some form of hearing before deprivation of constitutionally protected property interest. Glenn v. Newman, 614 F.2d 467, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19305 (5th Cir. 1980).

Because the trustees for the property at issue, a parcel of property used for religious purposes, never received notice of a tax sale concerning the property, their due process rights were violated, making the sale of that property void. Marathon Inv. Corp. v. Spinkston, 281 Ga. 888, 644 S.E.2d 133, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 306 (2007).

Execution of statutory notice provisions necessary. — Statutory provisions for notice in absence of someone to execute them amount to no requirement of notice. Ray v. Mayor of Athens, 221 Ga. 73, 143 S.E.2d 386, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 385 (1965).

When required notice allows or requires act or response within certain time. — When notice is required by law to be given to a party who has the right or is required to in some way act or respond to the notice within a prescribed period of time, the date of the notice must run from the date of its receipt unless there is express statutory provision to the contrary. Hamilton v. Edwards, 245 Ga. 810, 267 S.E.2d 246, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 944 (1980).

Insufficient service by mail. — Substituted service upon a nonresident defendant by certified mail was insufficient due to the acts of the plaintiffs where the address given in the complaint was known by the plaintiffs not to be the current address of the defendants and the defendants showed that they were separate from the party responsible. Bethco, Inc. v. Cinema 'N' Drafthouse Int'l, Inc., 204 Ga. App. 143, 418 S.E.2d 467, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 714 (1992).

Notice of process reasonably certain to inform excused when persons missing or unknown. — As examples of conditions which would not permit notice of process reasonably certain to inform and which would therefore excuse the use of a form of service falling below this standard, the United States Supreme Court cited "the case of persons missing or unknown." Benton v. Modern Fin. & Inv. Co., 244 Ga. 533, 261 S.E.2d 359, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1328 (1979).

Privilege may not be conditioned upon renunciation of right to due process. — State cannot condition granting of even privilege upon renunciation of constitutional right to procedural due process. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Right to be heard before being condemned to suffer grievous loss of any kind, even though it may not involve the stigma and hardships of a criminal conviction, is deemed essential to due process of law. Davis v. Weir, 328 F. Supp. 317, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12816 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Emergency allows termination of fundamental interest without notice and hearing. — Except in cases of emergency, due process requires that when a state seeks to terminate a fundamental interest such as liberty or property rights, it must afford notice and opportunity for hearing appropriate to the nature of the case before the termination becomes effective. Bell v. Burson, 402 U.S. 535, 91 S. Ct. 1586, 29 L. Ed. 2d 90, 1971 U.S. LEXIS 41 (1971); Morgan v. Wofford, 472 F.2d 822, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11966 (5th Cir. 1973); Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Temporary deprivation of property requires judicial supervision. — Judicial supervision over proposed temporary deprivation of property, and notice and opportunity for early preliminary hearing after deprivation are necessary to guard against mistaken and illegal deprivations of property. This is true even when the victim of the deprivation is an alleged judgment debtor. Apex Supply Co. v. Johnny Long Homes, Inc., 143 Ga. App. 699, 240 S.E.2d 171, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2469 (1977).

Statutory provision for notice and hearings as matter of right may be express or necessarily implied. — A statute complies with constitutional provisions as to due process where it provides for notice and hearing as a matter of right, either in express terms, or by necessary implication. Robitzsch v. State, 189 Ga. 637, 7 S.E.2d 387, 1940 Ga. LEXIS 373 (1940); Wallace v. State, 224 Ga. 255, 161 S.E.2d 288, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 735 (1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1123, 89 S. Ct. 995, 22 L. Ed. 2d 130, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 2437 (1969).

Where notice and hearing implied. — Act providing for removal of commissioners of roads and revenues of a named county, by the judge of the superior court or the ordinary (now probate court), after investigation of charges preferred by 25 qualified voters, or by the judge of the superior court after such investigation where charges are made by the grand jury, did not violate the due process clause of either the state or the federal Constitution for lack of requirement as to notice and hearing, in view of the provision that the judge or the ordinary to whom the complaint was presented should cause an investigation to be made of such charges, "at which investigation the accused shall have the benefit of counsel, if desired," since the provision quoted implied such requirement as to notice and hearing. Robitzsch v. State, 189 Ga. 637, 7 S.E.2d 387, 1940 Ga. LEXIS 373 (1940).

No notice and hearing required before supplemental proceedings to satisfy judgment. — Due process does not require that a defendant who has been granted an opportunity to be heard and has had the defendant's day in court, should, after a judgment has been rendered against the defendant, have further notice and a hearing before supplemental proceedings are taken to reach the defendant's property in satisfaction of the judgment. Halpern v. Austin, 385 F. Supp. 1009, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5685 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Required notice summons party to appear and speak. — Notice required by "due process" is only for the purpose of affording the party an opportunity of being heard upon the claim or the charges made; it is a summons to the party to appear and speak, if the party has anything to say, why the judgment sought should not be rendered. City of Macon v. Ries, 179 Ga. 320, 176 S.E. 21, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 280 (1934).

Notice required in any particular situation is that reasonably calculated to inform interested parties of the action to be taken and of their opportunity to present objections. Law v. USDA, 366 F. Supp. 1233, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11305 (N.D. Ga. 1973); Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Newspaper notice inadequate unless defendants show they could not give plaintiff personal service. — Absent a showing that defendants could not give plaintiff personal notice, newspaper notice would not be reasonably calculated to reach plaintiff. Law v. USDA, 366 F. Supp. 1233, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11305 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Adequacy of notice by publication. — Notice by publication is sufficient only if the party bringing the action cannot by due diligence ascertain either the names or whereabouts of those likely to oppose the action. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Service by publication. — There is no provision in the Nonresident Motorists' Act (former Code 1933, § 68-801 et seq.), the long arm statute, or in the statutes relative to torts for service on a nonresident defendant by publication; and by its own terms the provision in former Code 1933, § 81A-104(e)(1) (see O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(1)) for service by publication is limited in former Code 1933, § 81A-104(i) (see near the beginning of the second sentence. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(j)) by the qualification that the provisions shall apply only in actions or proceedings in which service by publication now or hereafter may be authorized by law. National Sur. Corp. v. Hernandez, 120 Ga. App. 307, 170 S.E.2d 318, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 754 (1969).

Publication service required remand. — In the absence of a showing that a spouse had received, or waived receipt of actual notice of a lawsuit, or that reasonable diligence had been exercised in attempting to find the spouse, judgment was vacated and case remanded to the trial court for a determination whether service by publication met due process constitutional guarantees. McDade v. McDade, 263 Ga. 456, 435 S.E.2d 24, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 620 (1993).

Other forms of service inadequate where personal service possible. — Service by publication and by mail does not provide due process when personal service could have been made. Melton v. Johnson, 242 Ga. 400, 249 S.E.2d 82, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1229 (1978).

Test of adequacy of substituted service. — Adequacy of substituted service so far as due process is concerned is dependent on whether or not the form of substituted service provided for such cases and employed is reasonably calculated to give actual notice of the proceedings and an opportunity to be heard. Melton v. Johnson, 242 Ga. 400, 249 S.E.2d 82, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1229 (1978).

Constitutional validity of any chosen method of service may be defended on the ground that it is in itself reasonably certain to inform those affected or, where conditions do not reasonably permit such notice, that the form chosen is not substantially less likely to bring home notice than other of the feasible and customary substitutes. Benton v. Modern Fin. & Inv. Co., 244 Ga. 533, 261 S.E.2d 359, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1328 (1979).

When service by publication allowed in suit for divorce or suit to set aside decree. — A suit for divorce is a proceeding in rem, and a suit to set aside a decree therein is also a proceeding in rem, unless upon the petition and the prayers thereof property rights are to be established; and service may be by publication, and the statute providing for service on nonresidents, is not in violation of the Constitution of the State of Georgia or U.S. Const., amend. 14. Axtell v. Axtell, 181 Ga. 24, 181 S.E. 295, 1935 Ga. LEXIS 13 (1935).

Notice by publication in conservator's petition for settlement. — Constructive notice by publication of a conservator's petition for final settlement and discharge from the conservatorship under O.C.G.A. §§ 29-5-80(a) and 29-5-81(b) did not violate the due process rights of a child of the ward who stood to benefit from the ward's will; the child did not have a legally protected interest in the discharge proceedings. Ray v. Stewart, 287 Ga. 789, 700 S.E.2d 367, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 604 (2010).

Process due must fit facts and circumstances. — Hearing required by due process clause must be "meaningful" and "appropriate to the nature of the case." Bell v. Burson, 402 U.S. 535, 91 S. Ct. 1586, 29 L. Ed. 2d 90, 1971 U.S. LEXIS 41 (1971).

In cases involving the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, what "process" is due must be tailored to fit the facts and circumstances involved. Davis v. Weir, 359 F. Supp. 1023, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13413 (N.D. Ga. 1973), aff'd in part, modified, 497 F.2d 139, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 7573 (5th Cir. 1974).

Form of hearing required by due process clause may vary according to nature of case. Law v. USDA, 366 F. Supp. 1233, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11305 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Whether or not one is deprived of fundamental right to fair hearing depends upon facts of each case. Brownlee v. Williams, 233 Ga. 548, 212 S.E.2d 359, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1374 (1975).

Form of procedural due process hearing judged according to nature of interest. — In general, the form of a procedural due process hearing is judged by a flexible standard which expands and contracts according to the nature of the interest in question. Shaw v. Hospital Auth., 614 F.2d 946, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19088 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 955, 101 S. Ct. 362, 66 L. Ed. 2d 220, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3759 (1980).

Determination of whether particular procedure required in given situation. — Whether due process requires a particular procedure in a given situation must be determined by balancing the individual's interest in avoiding the loss that lack of the procedure inflicts upon the individual against the interests that the government seeks to advance by denying it. Tyler v. Vickery, 517 F.2d 1089, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 13048 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 426 U.S. 940, 96 S. Ct. 2660, 49 L. Ed. 2d 393, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 2092 (1976).

Statute upheld if persons accorded notice and hearing applicable to cases of similar nature. — A statute does not violate due process of law if all persons to whom the statute applies are accorded notice and a hearing applicable to all cases of a similar nature. Southern Ry. v. Overnite Transp. Co., 223 Ga. 825, 158 S.E.2d 387, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 720 (1967).

Trial satisfies due process if procedure is same as similar cases. — When a citizen is accorded a trial according to modes of procedure applicable to cases of similar kind, it cannot be said that the citizen has been denied "due process of law." Ford v. State, 202 Ga. 599, 44 S.E.2d 263, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 505 (1947); Chatterton v. Dutton, 223 Ga. 243, 154 S.E.2d 213, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 479, cert. denied, 389 U.S. 914, 88 S. Ct. 247, 19 L. Ed. 2d 266, 1967 U.S. LEXIS 472 (1967).

No control over form of state court procedures. — Due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not control mere forms of procedure in state courts or regulate practice therein. All its requirements are complied with, provided the person condemned has had sufficient notice and adequate opportunity to defend. Herndon v. State, 178 Ga. 832, 174 S.E. 597, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 197 (1934).

When the essential elements of jurisdiction of a court in which an opportunity for a hearing is afforded are present, the power of a state over its methods of procedure is substantially unrestricted by the due process clause of the Constitution. Herndon v. State, 178 Ga. 832, 174 S.E. 597, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 197 (1934).

Rules for small claims courts need not be provided by state. — State need not provide same elaborate rules for small claims courts as for those of general jurisdiction. Sellers v. Home Furnishing Co., 235 Ga. 831, 222 S.E.2d 34, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1458 (1976).

Denial of oral hearing not due process violation. — Court's not holding oral hearing on reconsideration of defendant's motion for summary judgment does not deny due process. Bon Air Hotel, Inc. v. Time, Inc., 426 F.2d 858, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 9387 (5th Cir. 1970).

When pretermination evidentiary hearing not required. — Where a reduction or termination of public assistance payments is not grounded on particular facts relating to an individual recipient or assistance group, there is no need for a pretermination evidentiary hearing. Merriweather v. Burson, 325 F. Supp. 709, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11967 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd in part, 439 F.2d 1092, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 11225 (5th Cir. 1971).

When judgment conclusive, res judicata and not subject to collateral attack. — Where the record reveals that the personal jurisdiction issue was raised by a defendant and decided adversely to him by a court of otherwise competent jurisdiction, the judgment of that court is conclusive, is res judicata and may not be collaterally attacked. Green Acres Disct., Inc. v. Freid & Appell, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 816, 219 S.E.2d 39, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1837 (1975).

Res judicata. — Where defendant made a special appearance to contest personal jurisdiction, was fully heard, was overruled as to this objection and took no further part in the case or sought review of the adverse ruling, the judgment entered against the party on the merits is res judicata with regard to the jurisdictional issue and not subject to collateral attack on that ground when sued upon in another state. Green Acres Disct., Inc. v. Freid & Appell, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 816, 219 S.E.2d 39, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1837 (1975).

When judgment entitled to full faith and credit. — A judgment is entitled to full faith and credit — even as to question of jurisdiction — when the second court's inquiry discloses that those questions have been fully and fairly litigated and finally decided in the court which rendered the original judgment. Green Acres Disct., Inc. v. Freid & Appell, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 816, 219 S.E.2d 39, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1837 (1975).

When party appears and defends, judgment of court, regular upon its face, may not be attacked in the courts of this state. Green Acres Disct., Inc. v. Freid & Appell, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 816, 219 S.E.2d 39, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1837 (1975).

Right to support allegations by argument and proof implied. — The hearing required by due process in its essence implies that one who is entitled to it shall have the right to support the party's allegations by argument and proof. City of Macon v. Ries, 179 Ga. 320, 176 S.E. 21, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 280 (1934).

Advance notice of filing of lis pendens is not required. Aiken v. Citizens & S. Bank, 249 Ga. 481, 291 S.E.2d 717, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 859, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 307, 74 L. Ed. 2d 287, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 4159 (1982).

Federal court diversity jurisdiction. — In diversity case it is appropriate for federal court to exercise jurisdiction over foreign corporation if state court may do so in compliance with state law and the due process requirements of the United States Constitution. Bankhead Enters., Inc. v. Norfolk & W. Ry., 642 F.2d 802, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 14289 (5th Cir. 1981).

Claims against municipalities. — Since right to sue municipality is statutory, the legislature may attach notice-of-claim requirement as precondition to maintenance of such suit. Shoemaker v. Aldmor Mgt., Inc., 249 Ga. 430, 291 S.E.2d 549, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 855 (1982).

Six-month time limit for presenting claims against a municipal corporation is not unreasonable. Shoemaker v. Aldmor Mgt., Inc., 249 Ga. 430, 291 S.E.2d 549, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 855 (1982).

Hearing granted by administrative body must be fair and impartial. — In order to comply with the requirements of due process, the hearing granted by an administrative body must be a full and fair one, before an impartial officer, board, or body free of bias, hostility, and prejudice. Clary v. Mathews, 224 Ga. 82, 160 S.E.2d 338, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 673 (1968).

Procedural defect by agency not violative of due process unless defect prejudicial. — When an agency neglects to follow a procedural rule but its failure inflicts no significant injury on the party entitled to observance of the rule, the error does not prevent further administrative or judicial action. For a procedural defect to violate due process, the defect must be shown to be prejudicial. Lentz v. State Personnel Bd., 146 Ga. App. 366, 247 S.E.2d 145, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 2619 (1978).

Administrative agency as both accuser and judge. — Fact that administrative agency is both accuser and judge does not deprive accused of due process of law, especially where an appeal from the determination of the agency may be had to the courts. Clary v. Mathews, 224 Ga. 82, 160 S.E.2d 338, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 673 (1968).

Irregularity or error in administrative hearing. — Mere irregularity or error in administrative hearing cannot be basis of claim of denial of due process, and a person cannot complain of a defect in an administrative hearing as a denial of constitutional rights as long as that person obtains a full hearing before a court on the question in issue. Clary v. Mathews, 224 Ga. 82, 160 S.E.2d 338, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 673 (1968).

Appeal from suspension of driver's license. — Although defendant elected to first pursue an administrative appeal of a driver's license suspension to the Department of Public Safety, and was unsuccessful in that effort, the defendant was still entitled to file an appeal in the superior court under O.C.G.A. § 40-4-66, at which the defendant could receive a meaningful hearing upon request and, accordingly, the defendant was not denied the right to procedural due process. Miles v. Shaw, 272 Ga. 475, 532 S.E.2d 373, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 495 (2000).

Agreement waiving due process right of notice and hearing enforceable if voluntarily and knowingly made. — An agreement which waives due process right of notice and hearing is not constitutionally infirm per se; and if such an agreement was voluntarily, intelligently, and knowingly made, which may be a question of fact in some circumstances, then such an agreement for divestment is constitutionally enforceable. Law v. USDA, 366 F. Supp. 1233, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11305 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Waiver of question of jurisdiction by terms of contract. — Parties waive the question pertaining to jurisdiction as related to performance of a contract if the contract provides that all rights of the parties based upon any alleged nonperformance by either party shall be submitted to arbitration in New York, and if the contract provides that notice of further proceedings in the courts of New York may be served by registered mail. Pacolet Mfg. Co. v. Crescent Textiles, Inc., 219 Ga. 268, 133 S.E.2d 96, 1963 Ga. LEXIS 427 (1963).

Only private associations have right to obtain waiver of notice and hearing before depriving member of valuable right. Roberts v. Cameron-Brown Co., 410 F. Supp. 988, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14005 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Due process requirement for subjecting defendant to judgment in personam. — In personam jurisdiction is proper in a state court if the defendant has "certain minimum contacts with the forum state such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend 'traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice.'" Griffin v. Air S., Inc., 324 F. Supp. 1284, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14056 (N.D. Ga. 1971); Interstate Paper Corp. v. Air-O-Flex Equip. Co., 426 F. Supp. 1323, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17544 (S.D. Ga. 1977).

Due process requires only that in order to subject a defendant to a judgment in personam, if the defendant be not present within the territory of the forum, the defendant have certain minimum contacts with it such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Humphrey v. Langford, 246 Ga. 732, 273 S.E.2d 22, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1277 (1980); Coopers & Lybrand v. Cocklereece, 157 Ga. App. 240, 276 S.E.2d 845, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1725 (1981).

Test for determining whether due process permits assertion of jurisdiction is twofold: the defendant must have certain minimum contacts with the forum state such that the maintenance of the suit does not offend "traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice"; and the defendant must purposefully avail itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, thus invoking the benefits and protections of its laws. Gold Kist, Inc. v. Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream Co., 623 F.2d 375, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15055 (5th Cir. 1980).

Limits on exercise of jurisdiction are not "mechanical or quantitative" but are to be found only in the requirement that the provisions made for this purpose must be fair and reasonable in the circumstances, and must give to the defendant adequate notice of the claim against the defendant, and an adequate and realistic opportunity to appear and be heard in the defendant's defense. Coe & Payne Co. v. Wood-Mosaic Corp., 230 Ga. 58, 195 S.E.2d 399, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 811 (1973), overruled in part, Anderson v. Deas, 279 Ga. App. 892, 632 S.E.2d 682, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 655 (2006).

Jurisdiction based solely on temporary presence. — Allowing jurisdiction to be based solely on temporary presence is not inconsistent with due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Humphrey v. Langford, 246 Ga. 732, 273 S.E.2d 22, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1277 (1980).

Three broad rules by which to judge power of forum state to exercise jurisdiction over nonresident: (1) the nonresident must purposefully avail oneself of the privilege of doing some act or consummating some transaction with or in the forum; (2) the plaintiff must have a legal cause of action against the nonresident, which arises out of, or results from, the activity or activities of the defendant nonresident within the forum; and (3) if the requirements of rules (1) and (2) are met, there must also exist a "minimum contact" between the nonresident and the forum. Coopers & Lybrand v. Cocklereece, 157 Ga. App. 240, 276 S.E.2d 845, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1725 (1981).

With sufficient connection between defendant and forum state and reasonable notice to defendant. — The existence of personal jurisdiction, in turn, depends upon the presence of reasonable notice to the defendant that an action has been brought and a sufficient connection between the defendant and the forum state as to make it fair to require defense of the action in the forum. Hollingsworth v. Cunard Line, 152 Ga. App. 509, 263 S.E.2d 190, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2977 (1979).

Due process limitations on judgments in personam where defendant has no contacts with state. — Due process prevents a binding judgment being rendered in personam against an individual or corporate defendant with which the state has no contacts, ties or relations. Riordan v. W.J. Bremer, Inc., 466 F. Supp. 411, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13945 (S.D. Ga. 1979).

The due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 limits the power of a court to render a valid personal judgment against an individual or corporate defendant with which the forum state has no contacts, ties, or relations. Bankhead Enters., Inc. v. Norfolk & W. Ry., 642 F.2d 802, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 14289 (5th Cir. 1981).

Limitation on power of state court to enter judgments against persons not served with process within state.

— The due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 most assuredly limits the power of the state courts to enter judgments against persons not served with process while within their respective boundaries. Allied Fin. Co. v. Prosser, 103 Ga. App. 538, 119 S.E.2d 813, 1961 Ga. App. LEXIS 994 (1961).

Personal service in foreign state. — When a party is personally served that party is subject to in personam jurisdiction of the courts of foreign state and cannot collaterally attack a judgment of such court. Green Acres Disct., Inc. v. Freid & Appell, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 816, 219 S.E.2d 39, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1837 (1975).

Personal service on persons outside state's territorial limits by service officer of state where person is served complies with procedural due process requirements. Whitaker v. Whitaker, 237 Ga. 895, 230 S.E.2d 486, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1436 (1976).

Out of state ex parte proceeding not given effect. — Where the putative father of an illegitimate child sought and obtained a decree of a Tennessee court declaring him to be the father of such child and creating the relationship of parent and child between the petitioner and the child, the decree showing on its face that it was an ex parte proceeding, it will not be given effect in this state as against the mother, where she was not made a party in the proceeding, was not served, did not appear and plead, or otherwise waive service or consent to such decree or have notice thereof, as it is violative of the due process clauses of the state and federal Constitutions. Day v. Hatton, 210 Ga. 749, 83 S.E.2d 6, 1954 Ga. LEXIS 449 (1954).

"Minimum contacts" of the defendant with the forum state must be such that maintenance of the suit does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Bankhead Enters., Inc. v. Norfolk & W. Ry., 642 F.2d 802, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 14289 (5th Cir. 1981).

When a nonresident engages in some activity with or in the forum, even a significant single transaction, whether the nonresident physically present there or not, and as a result business is transacted, a jurisdictional "contact" exists between that nonresident and the forum. Bankhead Enters., Inc. v. Norfolk & W. Ry., 642 F.2d 802, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 14289 (5th Cir. 1981).

Minimal contacts prerequisite. — Defendant may not be called on to defend action in foreign tribunal unless the defendant has had "minimal contacts" with the state that are a prerequisite to its exercise of power over the defendant. Riordan v. W.J. Bremer, Inc., 466 F. Supp. 411, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13945 (S.D. Ga. 1979).

Grounds for exercise of personal jurisdiction over nonresident transacting business within state where minimum contacts. — Where jurisdiction over a nonresident is posted under former code 1933, § 24-113.1(a) (see O.C.G.A. § 9-10-91(1)), due process must be satisfied by the existence of "minimum contacts" of the nonresident in the state in which the nonresident is sued. Newman v. Fleming, 331 F. Supp. 973, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12067 (S.D. Ga. 1971).

With showing of nonresident's "minimum contact" with forum state. — In order to satisfy the constitutional requirement of procedural due process, it must be shown that the nonresident defendant has some "minimum contact" with the forum state so as to make that state's exercise of jurisdiction over the defendant reasonable. Hollingsworth v. Cunard Line, 152 Ga. App. 509, 263 S.E.2d 190, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2977 (1979); Bosworth v. Cooney, 156 Ga. App. 274, 274 S.E.2d 604, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3030 (1980).

Minimum contacts concept of in personam jurisdiction particularly suited to resolution of domestic relations litigation. — In a country comprising 50 state judicial systems plus the District of Columbia's system, in an age of great mobility of persons and families, and in an era of vastly increasing domestic relations litigation, the minimum contacts concept of in personam jurisdiction is particularly suited, as a matter of practicality, to the resolution of issues raised in domestic relations litigation. Whitaker v. Whitaker, 237 Ga. 895, 230 S.E.2d 486, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1436 (1976).

Residence within territorial limits of state while married is sufficient contact to confer jurisdiction in domestic relations case even though one of the parties sought to be bound in the action moved outside the boundaries of the state prior to the commencement of the domestic relations action. Whitaker v. Whitaker, 237 Ga. 895,

Ex parte judgment granting divorce entitled to full faith and credit if one spouse domiciled in forum. — An ex parte judgment that only grants a divorce is entitled to full faith and credit in other states if one of the spouses was domiciled in the forum that granted the divorce judgment. Whitaker v. Whitaker, 237 Ga. 895, 230 S.E.2d 486, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1436 (1976).

Application of long arm statute to limits of due process. — Within the bounds of fairness and substantial justice to the defendant, the long arm statute will be applied to the limits of due process so that those who invoke the protection or benefits of the laws of Georgia, or who injure citizens or property in Georgia, will be made to answer therefore in the Georgia courts. Value Eng'r Co. v. Gisell, 140 Ga. App. 44, 230 S.E.2d 29, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1344 (1976).

Nonresident motorist statutes and long arm statutes in tort and contract areas properly confer in personam jurisdiction provided the nonresident party sought to be bound had sufficient contact or public policy association with the forum state; and provided, of course, adequate notice and service of the pending action was accorded to the nonresident so as not to violate the due process rule of fundamental procedural fairness. Whitaker v. Whitaker, 237 Ga. 895, 230 S.E.2d 486, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1436 (1976).

Scope of Georgia long arm statute. — Generally in long arm cases, the court must decide if the activities in question fall within the scope of the state statute, and, if so, whether the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 is satisfied by an inclusive construction. Marival, Inc. v. Planes, Inc., 302 F. Supp. 201, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9836 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

The Georgia Supreme Court has held that former Code 1933, § 24-113.1 (see O.C.G.A. § 9-10-91) (Georgia long arm statute) extends personal jurisdiction to the maximum extent allowed by due process. National Egg Co. v. Bank Leumi le-Israel, 514 F. Supp. 1125, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12451 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Jurisdiction over nonresident under long arm statute. — Under the long arm statute jurisdiction over a nonresident exists on the basis of transacting business in this state if the nonresident has purposefully done some act or consummated some transaction in this state, if the cause of action arises from or is connected with such act or transaction, and if the exercise of jurisdiction by the courts of this state does not offend traditional fairness and substantial justice. Bailey v. London Marina, Inc., 151 Ga. App. 73, 258 S.E.2d 738, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2430 (1979); Hollingsworth v. Cunard Line, 152 Ga. App. 509, 263 S.E.2d 190, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2977 (1979).

Long Arm Statute allows exercise of jurisdiction over nonresident parties to maximum extent permitted by procedural due process. Hollingsworth v. Cunard Line, 152 Ga. App. 509, 263 S.E.2d 190, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2977 (1979); Bankhead Enters., Inc. v. Norfolk & W. Ry., 642 F.2d 802, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 14289 (5th Cir. 1981).

Georgia long arm statute is coterminous with due process clause. — The broad language of the Georgia statute, expanding notions of jurisdiction, and the experience in other jurisdictions with similar statutes indicate that an expansive reading should be given to this section. Marival, Inc. v. Planes, Inc., 302 F. Supp. 201, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9836 (N.D. Ga. 1969); Griffin v. Air S., Inc., 324 F. Supp. 1284, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14056 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Georgia long arm statute is coterminous with due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 and the policy of the courts of this state is to exercise jurisdiction thereunder to the maximum extent permitted by procedural due process. Interstate Paper Corp. v. Air-O-Flex Equip. Co., 426 F. Supp. 1323, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17544 (S.D. Ga. 1977).

Bare existence of conspiracy not enough to support long arm jurisdiction. — Bare existence of conspiracy is not enough to support long arm jurisdiction.

tion, without showing “contact” with the forum jurisdiction. A mere connection with the resident is not enough. Coopers & Lybrand v. Cocklereece, 157 Ga. App. 240, 276 S.E.2d 845, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1725 (1981).

Whether foreign corporation subject to in personam jurisdiction under long arm statute. — Where the plaintiff’s theory of liability is predicated on contractual breach and there is no claim of any tortious act or omission by the defendant foreign corporation occurring either in or outside Georgia, inquiry in determining whether the foreign corporation is subject to in personam jurisdiction under the Georgia long arm statute is limited to whether the corporation was transacting business within Georgia and, if so, whether it had sufficient contacts to satisfy the constitutional requirements of due process. Interstate Paper Corp. v. Air-O-Flex Equip. Co., 426 F. Supp. 1323, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17544 (S.D. Ga. 1977).

Service on business corporations. — The method of service properly authorized under former Code 1933, § 22-403(b) (see O.C.G.A. § 14-2-504), which concerns business corporations, is not subject to constitutional attack because it is in itself reasonably certain to inform those affected and is not substantially less likely to bring home notice than other of the feasible and customary substitutes. Frazier v. HMZ Property Mgt., Inc., 161 Ga. App. 195, 291 S.E.2d 4, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 1811 (1982).

Sufficient contact if suit is based on contract with substantial connection with state. — It is sufficient for purposes of due process that a suit is based on a contract which has substantial connection with that state. Hollingsworth v. Cunard Line, 152 Ga. App. 509, 263 S.E.2d 190, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2977 (1979); Bosworth v. Cooney, 156 Ga. App. 274, 274 S.E.2d 604, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3030 (1980).

To the extent that a corporation exercises the privilege of conducting activities within a state, it enjoys the benefits and protection of the laws of that state; the exercise of that privilege may give rise to obligations; and, so far as those obligations arise out of or are connected with the activities within the state, a procedure which requires the corporation to respond to a suit brought to enforce them can, in most instances, hardly be said to be undue. Hollingsworth v. Cunard Line, 152 Ga. App. 509, 263 S.E.2d 190, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2977 (1979).

Defendant’s trips from Florida to Georgia to negotiate contract of sale and escrow contract, and execution of the escrow contract in Georgia provided sufficient “minimum contact” within the meaning and intent of the long arm statute. Bosworth v. Cooney, 156 Ga. App. 274, 274 S.E.2d 604, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3030 (1980).

Phrase “doing business” within corporate tax provisions not violative of due process. — The phrase “doing business” within former Code 1933, § 92-2401 (see O.C.G.A. § 48-13-72) (corporate net worth tax) and former Code 1933, § 92-3113 (see O.C.G.A. § 48-7-31) (corporate income tax), which means any activity or transactions for the purpose of financial profit or gain does not violate the due process requirement of either Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I or U.S. Const., amend. 14. Chattanooga Glass Co. v. Strickland, 244 Ga. 603, 261 S.E.2d 599, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1342 (1979).

Corporation conducting activities within forum state with clear notice subject to suit. — When a corporation purposefully avails itself of the privilege of conducting activities within the forum state, it has clear notice that it is subject to suit there. Bankhead Enters., Inc. v. Norfolk & W. Ry., 642 F.2d 802, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 14289 (5th Cir. 1981).

Corporation putting products into stream of commerce with expectation of purchase by state consumers subject to personal jurisdiction. — The forum state does not exceed its powers under the due process clause if it asserts personal jurisdiction over a corporation that delivers its products into the stream of commerce with the expectation that they will be purchased by consumers in the forum state. National Egg Co. v. Bank Leumi le-Israel B.M., 504 F. Supp. 305, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15640 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Foreseeability that product will cause injury in given state is not sufficient reason to hold the seller of the product subject to the jurisdiction of that state. National Egg Co. v. Bank Leumi le-Israel B.M., 504 F. Supp. 305, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15640 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Parties to employment contract not subject to Georgia law unless contract made or actual work done in state. — Under former Code 1933, § 114-110 (see O.C.G.A. § 34-9-7) the state acquires jurisdiction only by the act of the parties in coming within the state to execute a contract of employment. In the absence of the making of a contract within the state, where no work thereunder in the state is required, the parties thereto could not be subjected to the terms of the Georgia law, for to do so would be to deny to them due process of law, as guaranteed by the state and federal Constitutions. Cramer v. American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co., 77 Ga. App. 236, 47 S.E.2d 925, 1948 Ga. App. LEXIS 523 (1948).

Where minimum contacts not satisfied. — Where officials of a defendant foreign corporation enter Georgia to investigate the possibility of entering into a contract with a Georgia plaintiff to design and manufacture machinery to be installed at defendant's plant in South Carolina, inspect two similar plants and look over plaintiff's operation in Georgia, visit plaintiff's headquarters in order to observe the manufacture of the machinery, and undertake part of the negotiations in Georgia, such activities taken either in isolation or in totality do not constitute "minimum contacts" that satisfy the constitutional test for exercise of jurisdiction. Fulghum Indus., Inc. v. Walterboro Forest Prods., Inc., 345 F. Supp. 296, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13300 (S.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 477 F.2d 910, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10579 (5th Cir. 1973).

Opportunity for hearing required prior to deprivation of property. — Opportunity for hearing required by due process must be given before deprivation of property interest, except for extraordinary situations where some valid governmental interest is at stake that justifies postponing the hearing until after the event. Burnley v. Thompson, 524 F.2d 1233, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 11293 (5th Cir. 1975).

"Pre-seizure" hearing not required with contraband condemnation. — Procedural due process of law does not require "pre-seizure" hearing in cases of contraband condemnation. Tant v. State, 247 Ga. 264, 275 S.E.2d 312, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 596 (1981).

"Post-seizure" cases require notice and hearing. — All that procedural due process of law requires in "post-seizure" cases is notice and hearing at which the owner or other party having an interest to be protected can appear and present a claim to the property being condemned. Any stipulated period of time as notice is not constitutionally required. All that is required by due process of law is that the affected party have reasonable notice and a reasonably fair opportunity for a hearing before the vehicle or other property is forfeited for a violation of the law. Tant v. State, 247 Ga. 264, 275 S.E.2d 312, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 596 (1981).

Delay in judicial determination of property rights. — Delay in judicial determination of property rights is not uncommon where essential that governmental needs be immediately satisfied. Bowles v. Willingham, 321 U.S. 503, 64 S. Ct. 641, 88 L. Ed. 892, 28 Ohio Op. 180, 1944 U.S. LEXIS 1202 (1944).

Postponement of judicial enquiry. — Where only property rights are involved, mere postponement of judicial enquiry is not denial of due process, if the opportunity given for the ultimate judicial determination of the liability is adequate. Bowles v. Willingham, 321 U.S. 503, 64 S. Ct. 641, 88 L. Ed. 892, 28 Ohio Op. 180, 1944 U.S. LEXIS 1202 (1944).

Statutes concerning proceeding before special master in condemnation procedure comport with due process. — Due process requirements are satisfied by former Code 1933, ch. 36-6A (see O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 2, T. 22), in that it gives the condemnee notice as well as an opportunity for a hearing. Sweat v. Georgia Power Co., 235 Ga. 281, 219 S.E.2d 384, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 855 (1975).

Persons with property subject to forfeiture afforded adequate notice and hearing. — Former Code 1933, § 79A-828 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49) affords adequate notice and adequate hearing so as to comport with due process of law as required by the federal Constitution and the Georgia Constitution. Tant v. State, 247 Ga. 264, 275 S.E.2d 312, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 596 (1981).

Notice to nonresident owners of property to be condemned violative of due process. — The portion of former Code 1933, § 36-610a (see O.C.G.A. § 22-2-107) that purports to provide for posting, publishing and mailing notices to known nonresident owners of property to be condemned, offends Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I and U.S. Const., amend. 14 in that it denies due process by not naming anyone to post, publish, or mail the notice therein referred to. Ray v. Mayor of Athens, 221 Ga. 73, 143 S.E.2d 386, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 385 (1965) (decided prior to amendment by Ga. L. 1966, p. 388, § 1, which designated the sheriff or the sheriff's deputy as responsible for posting and publishing the notice).

During tax assessment process taxpayer must have opportunity to be heard. — Hearing required by "due process" gives to taxpayer opportunity to submit evidence to support the taxpayer's objections to assessment which the taxpayer desires to contest and to show that the same is excessive. City of Macon v. Ries, 179 Ga. 320, 176 S.E. 21, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 280 (1934).

The assessment of a tax is action judicial in its nature, requiring for the legal exertion of the power such opportunity to appear and be heard as the circumstances of the case require. Somewhere during the process of the assessment the taxpayer must have an opportunity to be heard, and this notice must be provided as an essential part of the statutory provisions, and not awarded as a mere matter of favor or grace. A denial of this right is a failure to afford due process of law within the intention of the federal and state Constitutions. Pullman Co. v. Suttles, 187 Ga. 217, 199 S.E. 821, 1938 Ga. LEXIS 753 (1938).

Due process entitles taxpayer to be heard on property assessment before final decision is made as to value. This requirement of a hearing is satisfied by former Code 1933, § 92-6912 (see O.C.G.A. § 48-5-311). Ward v. Landrum, 140 Ga. App. 497, 231 S.E.2d 347.

Taxpayer must have notice in time to contest proceeding before tax becomes absolute lien or liability. — It has been shown that there are differences between proceedings for the levy and collection of taxes and judicial proceedings. As to what constitutes notice and opportunity to be heard, in compliance with this requirement of due process, no general rule can be laid down which will cover all cases. The general rule, which may be laid down as applicable to all cases, is that the taxpayer must have the notice in time to contest the proceeding before the tax becomes an absolute lien on the taxpayer's property or before it becomes the taxpayer's absolute personal liability. Simmons v. Newton, 178 Ga. 806, 174 S.E. 703, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 190 (1934).

Notice and opportunity to be heard before property tax assessment final comported with due process. — Ga. L. 1918, p. 232, providing for assessment for taxation of unreturned or grossly undervalued property, or property assessed at a figure grossly below its true value, is not unconstitutional as violating the due process and equal protection clauses of the state and federal Constitutions for the reason that it fails to provide for a hearing before assessment by the tax-receiver, since it does provide for notice to the claimed delinquent, with opportunity to be heard by a suit in equity both as to excessiveness and taxability, before the assessment shall become final. Hardin v. Reynolds, 189 Ga. 534, 6 S.E.2d 328, 1939 Ga. LEXIS 731 (1939).

Due process not violated by government seizure of property for taxes before notice and hearing. — The failure to give one notice and an opportunity to be heard prior to issuance of the tax fi. fa. and a subsequent levy on back accounts does not violate the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, because the seizure of property by the government for the collection of taxes constitutes one of those extraordinary situations justifying postponement of notice and hearing until after the property has been seized. Fowler v. Strickland, 243 Ga. 30, 252 S.E.2d 459, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 787, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 827, 100 S. Ct. 53, 62 L. Ed. 2d 35, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 2592 (1979).

Farmer could not be deprived of property interest in business without pre-ejection hearing. — Plaintiff as a Georgia farmer has a property interest in his business, i.e., selling merchandise at a public market, and could not be deprived of that interest without a due process pre-ejection hearing even in absence of state statute providing for such hearing. Wilder v. Irvin, 423 F. Supp. 639, 1976 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13355 (N.D. Ga. 1976).

Procedural formalities not required at temporary injunction hearings. — Mere temporary injunction hearings to determine whether a temporary injunction should be issued restraining the showing of a film need not to be surrounded with the formalities of procedure that must attend hearings finally determining rights. Walter v. Slaton, 227 Ga. 676, 182 S.E.2d 464, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 815, cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1003, 92 S. Ct. 560, 30 L. Ed. 2d 557, 1971 U.S. LEXIS 212 (1971).

Determination on granting continuance of temporary injunction hearing within judicial discretion. — The question of whether the trial judge will grant a continuance on a hearing to determine whether a temporary injunction should be issued restraining the showing of a film is within the judge's sound legal discretion, and in the absence of a clear showing that the judge abused the judge's discretion in this regard it will not be controlled. Walter v. Slaton, 227 Ga. 676, 182 S.E.2d 464, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 815, cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1003, 92 S. Ct. 560, 30 L. Ed. 2d 557, 1971 U.S. LEXIS 212 (1971).

Termination of employment. — Procedural due process does not entitle public employee to full evidentiary hearing prior to discharge. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp.

913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Adequate pretermination procedures for public employees need not include full, evidentiary hearing, provided an employee is protected by a timely and effective post-discharge hearing procedure. Eley v. Morris, 390 F. Supp. 913, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13845 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Due process does not require hearing prior to discharge, and procedural defects prior to a fair hearing may be cured by that subsequent hearing. Lentz v. State Personnel Bd., 146 Ga. App. 366, 247 S.E.2d 145, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 2619 (1978).

Procedure to meet minimum due process requirements in cases of termination of employee includes, prior to termination, written notice of the reasons for termination and an effective opportunity to rebut those reasons, which means giving the employee the right to respond in writing to the charges made and to respond orally before the official charged with the responsibility of making the termination decision. Glenn v. Newman, 614 F.2d 467, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19305 (5th Cir. 1980).

Trial type hearing before adverse personnel action against state employee not required. — Procedural due process under U.S. Const., amend. 14 is not violated by the failure to grant a trial type hearing before rather than after an adverse personnel action taken against a state employee. Aycock v. Police Comm., 133 Ga. App. 883, 212 S.E.2d 456, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 2322 (1975).

Pretermination hearing required when stated reason for public employee's discharge is reputation damaging. — A pretermination hearing is required only when the stated reason for a public employee's discharge is an allegation that the employee is guilty of immoral or dishonest conduct or other behavior that might tend to stigmatize the employee or to lower the employee's standing in the eyes of the community. This is because an employee who is discharged because of allegedly dishonest conduct has an interest in the employee's reputation as well as the employee's employment. Sheppard v. DeKalb County Merit

Council, 144 Ga. App. 115, 240 S.E.2d 316, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2601 (1977).

County's post-termination procedures cured pre-termination procedural deficiencies. — Available post-termination procedures cured public employer's failure to have a pre-termination hearing prior to termination of county employee. Jones v. Chatham County, 223 Ga. App. 455, 477 S.E.2d 889.

Post termination evidentiary hearing. — Evidentiary hearing subsequent to discharge of county employee, meets requirements of due process of law. Brownlee v. Williams, 233 Ga. 548, 212 S.E.2d 359, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1374 (1975).

Pretextually terminated employees. — Only procedural due process claims are available to pretextually terminated employees, and not substantive due process claims. Shaw v. Oconee County, 863 F. Supp. 1578, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14614 (M.D. Ga. 1994).

Due process met in suspension of public university professor. — A hearing provided a public university biology professor with the requisite due process — i.e., notice and an opportunity to be heard, because the professor was represented by counsel and was given the opportunity to present documentary evidence and witnesses, testify in his own behalf, and cross-examine the university's witnesses. The hearing satisfied the professor's right to procedural due process both with respect to his post-tenure reviews and the decision to suspend him from employment. Edmonds v. Bd. of Regents, 302 Ga. App. 1, 689 S.E.2d 352, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1440 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0824, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 437 (Ga. June 1, 2010), overruled in part, Wolfe v. Board of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga., 300 Ga. 223, 794 S.E.2d 85, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 767 (2016).

Suspension of police officer. — City police officer was denied due process when the officer was suspended without pay for 148 days without a hearing. Byrd v. City of Atlanta, 709 F. Supp. 1148, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3238 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Police officer charged with using excessive force. — Where internal affairs investigators concluded that the officer charged with using excessive force had violated departmental policy in the apprehension of the suspect, and where the officer was informed of violating the departmental policy proscribing the use of excessive force but was not given notice concerning improprieties regarding the officer's filing of reports, the officer's high speed chase, or the use of firearms, summary judgment for defendants was not proper. Further, once the plaintiff elected to have a pretermination hearing, the meeting did not constitute a proceeding in which the plaintiff received adequate notice and a hearing sufficient to deny benefits. Bass v. City of Albany, 968 F.2d 1067, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 16069 (11th Cir. 1992).

Where municipal police officer was not granted hearing prior to initial discharge, but was granted a trial type hearing on the officer's appeal before the personnel review board where the officer was confronted by the witnesses and afforded the opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses and to offer evidence in the officer's own behalf, that due process was not violated. In re Wiggins, 144 Ga. App. 707, 242 S.E.2d 290, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 1758 (1978).

Finding attorney in contempt. — Before an attorney is finally adjudicated in contempt and sentenced after trial for conduct during trial, the attorney should have reasonable notice of the specific charges and opportunity to be heard in the attorney's own behalf. Maples v. Seeliger, 165 Ga. App. 201, 299 S.E.2d 906, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3130 (1983).

Contempt proceedings. — Where there was no necessity to act summarily for the purpose of maintaining order in the courtroom, due process required that the attorney against whom the trial court ordered summary punishment be given notice of the charges against the attorney and that another judge hear the charges against the attorney. In re Siemon, 264 Ga. 641, 449 S.E.2d 832, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 887 (1994).

Adequate notice and opportunity for hearing required before termination or reduction of public assistance based on eligibility. — Public officials may not terminate or reduce the aid of any public assistance recipient prior to granting the recipient reasonable and adequate notice and opportunity for a hearing that satisfies the standards of due process of law where the proposed termination is based upon factual determinations relating to the eligibility of the particular recipient for those benefits. Merriweather v. Burson, 325 F. Supp. 709, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11967 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd in part, 439 F.2d 1092, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 11225 (5th Cir. 1971).

Notice of possible liability for Aid to Families with Dependent Children benefits. — No due process deprivation occurred because the custodial parent was proceeded against for recovery of AFDC payments although the custodial parent was never directly and explicitly notified when the custodial parent applied for benefits that the custodial parent, rather than absent non-custodial parent alone, might be held liable for their repayment. Cox v. Department of Human Resources, 174 Ga. App. 377, 330 S.E.2d 120, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2708, rev'd, 255 Ga. 6, 334 S.E.2d 683, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 866 (1985).

Garnishment of wages. — Garnishment of wages absent notice and prior hearing, violates fundamental principles of due process since it amounts to a "taking" of property. Aaron v. Clark, 342 F. Supp. 898, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13890 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Trial court deprives garnisher of due process in failing to afford it hearing on setting aside of default and propriety of modifying amount of judgment. Apex Supply Co. v. Johnny Long Homes, Inc., 143 Ga. App. 699, 240 S.E.2d 171, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2469 (1977).

Statutory procedure for garnishments comports with due process. — Procedural due process does not require opportunity for hearing before state-authorized garnishment of wages based upon prior judgment establishing the applicant's entitlement to alimony. Halpern v. Austin, 385 F. Supp. 1009, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5685 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Constitutional due process requirements are adequately met by the judicial supervision and notice to the defendant mandated by the statutory procedure for garnishments. Garnishment of wages to satisfy alimony orders or judgments meets the demands of due process. Black v. Black, 245 Ga. 281, 264 S.E.2d 216, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 765 (1980).

Garnishment of wages for alimony.

— Spouse whose assets are subject to garnishment under alimony judgment is accorded procedural due process by the fact that the affidavit for garnishment was approved by a judge before the summons of garnishment issued, under former Code 1933, § 46-102 (see O.C.G.A. § 18-4-61), and by the fact that the spouse received timely notice on the garnishment, under former Code 1933, § 46-105 (see O.C.G.A. § 18-4-64), as well as an early hearing on his traverse, in accordance with former Code 1933, § 46-401 (see O.C.G.A. § 18-4-93). Antico v. Antico, 241 Ga. 294, 244 S.E.2d 820, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 973 (1978).

Delay in issuing order on child visitation/support issue. — Eight-month delay between the trial of a child support and visitation question and entry of the final order did not deny a father his right to procedural due process under the fourteenth amendment of the United States Constitution and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I, in part, because the father filed a post-trial, pre-judgment motion requiring the trial court's time and attention. Coppedge v. Coppedge, 298 Ga. 494, 783 S.E.2d 94, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 160 (2016).

Self-executing incarceration order in event of nonpayment of alimony not denial of due process. — Trial court's self-executing incarceration order which ordered incarceration of a parent at later time unless alimony payment, adjudicated as being owed, had been made, without providing for a further hearing, did not deny the parent due process of law. Floyd v. Floyd, 247 Ga. 551, 277 S.E.2d 658, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 795 (1981).

Post-judgment garnishment procedure inadequate in judicial supervision and notice. — The post-judgment garnishment procedure in former Code 1933, §§ 46-102 (see O.C.G.A. § 18-4-61) and 46-103 (see O.C.G.A. § 18-4-62) fails to meet the requirements of judicial supervision and notice to the defendant and is therefore constitutionally inadequate. City Fin. Co. v. Winston, 238 Ga. 10, 231 S.E.2d 45, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1073 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in First Nat'l Bank v. Sinkler, 170 Ga. App. 668, 317 S.E.2d 897, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 2908 (1984) (decided prior to amendment by Ga. L. 1977, p. 159, § 1).

Post-judgment garnishment law (see O.C.G.A. Art. 4, Ch. 4, T. 18) is not unconstitutional for lack of due process. Morgan v. Morgan, 156 Ga. App. 726, 275 S.E.2d 673, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3182 (1980).

Adversary judicial hearing required before state seizure of film. — Before the state may seize any motion picture film, prior adversary judicial hearing designed to focus searchingly on the question of obscenity must be held. Carter v. Gautier, 305 F. Supp. 1098, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10110 (M.D. Ga. 1969); Central Agency, Inc. v. Brown, 306 F. Supp. 502, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8799 (N.D. Ga. 1969).

Due process in juvenile court proceedings. — There must be scrupulous adherence to due process requirements in juvenile court proceedings. C.L.T. v. State, 157 Ga. App. 180, 276 S.E.2d 862, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1763 (1981).

Juvenile judge's refusal without hearing to accept petition alleging delinquency not violative of due process. — A juvenile judge's refusal without a hearing to accept a petition alleging delinquency and thereby accept jurisdiction of a case does not deprive a party of due process of law. Lane v. Jones, 626 F.2d 1296, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 13474 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 928, 101 S. Ct. 1384, 67 L. Ed. 2d 359, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 957 (1981).

Juvenile's right to evidentiary hearing when faced with possible transfer of case from juvenile court. — When former Code 1933, §§ 24A-2002 (see O.C.G.A. § 15-11-31(a)) and 24A-2502 (see O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a)(1)) are read together, a juvenile faced with the possible transfer of his case from juvenile court to "the appropriate court having jurisdiction of the offense" has the right to an evidentiary hearing at which the juvenile must be given "the opportunity to introduce evidence and otherwise be heard in the juvenile's own behalf and to cross-examine adverse witnesses." R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3067 (1980).

Measuring up to essentials of due process and fair treatment. — Transfer hearings are critically important proceeding affecting important rights of the juvenile. While the hearing need not conform with all of the requirements of a criminal trial or even of the usual administrative hearing, the hearing must measure up to the essentials of due process and fair treatment. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3067 (1980).

Requirements for petition in juvenile proceedings to comport with due process. — In order to withstand attack based upon the denial of due process, the petition in juvenile proceedings must pass two tests: (1) it must contain sufficient factual details to inform the juvenile of the nature of the offense; and (2) it must provide data adequate to enable the accused to prepare a defense. C.L.T. v. State, 157 Ga. App. 180, 276 S.E.2d 862, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1763 (1981).

Statutory method of determining lunacy and appointing guardian comports with due process. — In view of the express requirement as to formal examination by inspection of a person alleged to be a lunatic, the statute prescribing the method of determining an issue of lunacy, and providing for the appointment of a guardian of one adjudged to be a lunatic, does not violate the due process clause of the state Constitution or the federal Constitution, in that it fails to provide for any notice to the person alleged to be insane. Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust Co. v. Liberty Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 180 Ga. 4, 177 S.E. 803, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 443 (1934).

Notice to and hearing of valid license holder required before revocation of license. — The holder of a valid license that has been properly issued may enjoin its revocation and the interference with the holder's lawful business thereunder in the absence of notice and a hearing.

Rose v. Grow, 210 Ga. 664, 82 S.E.2d 222, 1954 Ga. LEXIS 405 (1954).

Revocation of liquor license involving state action requires procedural due process. — The revocation of a liquor license which involves state action that adjudicates the vital interest of the licensee to engage in a livelihood may not take place without the procedural due process required by U.S. Const., amend. 14. Atlanta Attractions, Inc. v. Massell, 330 F. Supp. 865, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11734 (N.D. Ga. 1971), aff'd, 463 F.2d 449, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 8148 (5th Cir. 1972).

Liquor licenses may not be revoked during period of their effectiveness without some rudimentary due process protections. Page v. Jackson, 398 F. Supp. 263, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11228 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Liquor license revocation procedures which provide for a hearing, preceded by advance notice setting forth the charge forming the basis for the revocation, are sufficient to comport adequately with due process mandates. Page v. Jackson, 398 F. Supp. 263, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11228 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Notice by certified mail of driver's license revocation comports with due process. — The provision for notice by certified mail in former Code 1933, § 68B-308 (see O.C.G.A. § 40-5-58) affords due process in the administrative function of giving notice that a driver's license is revoked as a habitual violator. Weaver v. State, 242 Ga. 8, 247 S.E.2d 749, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1070 (1978).

Summary suspension of driver's license prior to hearing. — No prior hearing is necessary for suspension of driver's license, under due process requirements. Roberts v. Burson, 322 F. Supp. 380, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13783 (D. Ga. 1969).

Summary suspension of driver's license prior to hearing with no provision for automatic stay pending appeal is not violative of due process clauses of the United States Constitution and the Georgia Constitution. Williams v. Cofer, 246 Ga. 344, 271 S.E.2d 486, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1134 (1980).

Suspension of driver's license for refusal to take breath test. — As to due process rights applicable to hearing on suspension of driver's license for refusal to submit to breath analysis test, see Hardison v. Fayssoux, 168 Ga. App. 398, 309 S.E.2d 397, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2788 (1983).

Notice of driver's license revocation. — A notice of a driver's license revocation must include: 1) An indication of the time, place and nature of the hearing; 2) a statement of the legal authority and jurisdiction under which the hearing is to be held; 3) a reference to the particular section of the statutes and rules involved; and 4) a statement of the matters asserted and the right of any party to subpoena witnesses and documentary evidence. Smith v. Commissioner of Ga. Dep't of Pub. Safety, 673 F. Supp. 446, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10647 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

A driver's license revocation hearing must: 1) protect a licensee's interest in driving on public roads and in not being unfairly labeled as having certain mental or physical disabilities; and 2) give a licensee an opportunity to confront and cross-examine evidence and witnesses. A hearing violates due process where the evidence is in the form of hearsay statements. Smith v. Commissioner of Ga. Dep't of Pub. Safety, 673 F. Supp. 446, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10647 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

A driver's license may be revoked for medical reasons prior to a hearing if an appropriate official of the department of public safety finds that a genuine emergency exists so that the general public is in imminent danger of being harmed if the licensee continues to drive; however, the licensee would be entitled to an immediate postrevocation hearing. Smith v. Commissioner of Ga. Dep't of Pub. Safety, 673 F. Supp. 446, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10647 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

The right to appeal to the state court system under O.C.G.A. § 40-5-66 from a driver's license revocation does not rectify the procedural due process flaws inherent in the revocation hearing procedures because O.C.G.A. § 40-5-66 does not afford a prerule hearing. Smith v. Commissioner of Ga. Dep't of Pub. Safety, 673 F. Supp. 446, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10647 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

Administrative decision disqualifying a driver from driving a commercial motor vehicle for life based on the refusal to submit to state-administered chemical testing and a prior conviction for driving under the influence was upheld, as the arresting officer informed the driver that the driver could lose that driver's license to drive upon refusing to submit to chemical testing, and the requirements of due process did not require the arresting officer to inform the driver of all the consequences of refusing to submit to chemical testing. Moreover, the driver requested and received a hearing under O.C.G.A. § 40-5-67.1(g)(1). Chancellor v. Dozier, 283 Ga. 259, 658 S.E.2d 592, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 254 (2008).

Abandoned motor vehicle provisions violative of due process. — Due process of law includes notice and hearing as a matter of right where one's property rights are involved; the Abandoned Motor Vehicles Act (see O.C.G.A. § 40-11-1 et seq.) requires notice prior to sale of abandoned motor vehicle, but makes no provision for a judicial hearing as a matter of right on issues in controversy either prior to or following the sale of the vehicle. Due process does not permit such procedure. Gore v. Davis, 243 Ga. 634, 256 S.E.2d 329, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1015 (1979) (decided prior to amendment by Ga. L. 1980, p. 995, § 5).

Abandoned Motor Vehicle Act violative of due process because no hearing as matter of right. — Insofar as the Abandoned Motor Vehicles Act (see O.C.G.A. § 40-11-1 et seq.) requires notice prior to a sale, but makes no provision for a judicial hearing as a matter of right on issues in controversy either prior to or following the sale of the vehicle, due process is violated. One such "issue in controversy" is the matter of security interests. Mapp v. First Ga. Bank, 156 Ga. App. 380, 274 S.E.2d 765, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2989 (1980) (decided prior to amendment by Ga. L. 1981, p. 469).

Statutory provision for removal of elected county officer without provision for notice or hearing unconstitu- tional. — A statute declaring that a county officer, elected for a fixed term, "shall be removable" from office "by the judge of the superior court of the county, on the address of two-thirds of the grand jury, for inefficiency, incapacity, general neglect of duty, or malfeasance or corruption in office," but which makes no provision for any notice to the officer, or for a hearing of the charge or charges against the officer, with opportunity to make a defense, is unconstitutional; and an order of removal based upon such a statute is a mere nullity. Walton v. Davis, 188 Ga. 56, 2 S.E.2d 603, 1939 Ga. LEXIS 463 (1939).

City-run utility's collection procedure denies due process where benefit terminated without notice to recipient of benefit. — Where the effect of a city-run utility's collection procedure is to terminate the important benefit provided by the utility at cost to the customer without notice to the person who is the actual recipient of that benefit and who is the person who will suffer a serious loss with that benefit, the procedure is an unacceptable denial of due process to the customer. Davis v. Weir, 328 F. Supp. 317, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12816 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Due process demands pretermination notice to actual user of public utility service. Davis v. Weir, 497 F.2d 139, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 7573 (5th Cir. 1974), overruled in part, O'Neal v. City of Seattle, 66 F.3d 1064, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 27221 (9th Cir. 1995).

Before public utility service cut off, consumer to be given opportunity to be heard. — In Georgia it is entirely constitutional to provide for cutting off water for failure to pay at stated times the rates therefor, provided only that a consumer cannot be deprived of an opportunity to, in good faith, present any reason why the consumer ought not to be required to pay and have the consumer's claim adjudicated, providing the consumer insures the city or other party furnishing water against loss; this applies equally to charges for sewer services. Liner v. City of Rossville, 213 Ga. 756, 101 S.E.2d 753, 1958 Ga. LEXIS 272 (1958).

Extradition proceedings not violation of due process. — Summary nature of extradition proceeding does not deny petitioner due process. Smith v. Bell, 246 Ga. 577, 272 S.E.2d 309, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1205 (1980).

Revocation of the bond of a person charged with stalking lies within the discretion of the trial judge; however, because a bond revocation involves the deprivation of one's liberty the decision must comport with at least minimal state and federal due process requirements. Hood v. Carsten, 267 Ga. 579, 481 S.E.2d 525.

Courts generally deny review when the serviceman claims due process rights were violated by arbitrary official action. NeSmith v. Fulton, 615 F.2d 196, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 18885 (5th Cir. 1980).

Forfeiture provision of Controlled Substances Act satisfies due process requirements. — Forfeiture provision of the Controlled Substances Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-13-20 et seq., provides for post-seizure notice and hearing and thereby satisfies requirements of due process. Windfaire, Inc. v. Busbee, 523 F. Supp. 868, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15060 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Existence of state judicial procedure to set aside judgments obtained by fraud (O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)) sufficient to redress the plaintiff in a federal civil rights action for the deprivation that the plaintiff alleged occurred in the plaintiff's prior divorce proceeding through the alleged conspiracy of the divorce participants to take advantage of the judge's debilitated condition to procure rulings favoring the plaintiff's spouse. There was no violation of procedural due process and because of this, the plaintiff could not state a claim for the denial of substantive due process. Collins v. Walden, 613 F. Supp. 1306, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20758 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 784 F.2d 402 (11th Cir. 1986).

No guarantee perjured testimony not used in civil trial. — The plaintiff in a federal civil rights action did not show that the plaintiff was denied procedural due process in the hearing on the plaintiff's motion to recuse the judge in the plaintiff's prior divorce proceeding. The plaintiff had notice and a meaningful opportunity to present the plaintiff's arguments to a neutral decision maker as to the alleged conspiracy of the participants in the divorce proceeding to submit false and misleading affidavits in the recusal hearing. Procedural due process does not guarantee that perjured evidence will not be used in a civil trial. Collins v. Walden, 613 F. Supp. 1306, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20758 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 784 F.2d 402 (11th Cir. 1986).

Notice of issues to be decided on appeal. — Where the trial court entered summary judgment on the basis of immunity against an inmate who brought a negligence action against correctional officials, but did not rule on the issue of the work detail supervisor's negligence, the appellate court's holding that the supervisor was negligent, without having provided notice to the supervisor that it might consider the merits of the supervisor's alleged negligence, was tantamount to granting summary judgment on the negligence issue without notice and constituted a denial of due process. Coweta County v. Simmons, 269 Ga. 694, 507 S.E.2d 440.

Grant of mistrial not constitutional deprivation. — While a party suffered inconvenience and delay in resolving the party's claims, the trial court's grant of a mistrial did not deprive that party of the right to relitigate the matter, although the party chose to settle the matter instead. LaBarre v. Payne, 174 Ga. App. 32, 329 S.E.2d 533, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2690 (1985).

Landowners not entitled to hearing to contest their neighbors' license to build a private dock. — General Assembly had determined that challenges to proposed construction of private docks were not within the Coastal Marshland Protection Act's framework for formal administrative challenges; this legislative determination provided landowners, who contested their neighbors' license to build a private dock, all the process the landowners were due. Hitch v. Vasarhelyi, 302 Ga. App. 381, 691 S.E.2d 286, 2010 Ga. App. LEXIS 133 (2010), cert. denied, No. S10C1029, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 577 (Ga. July 12, 2010).

3. Statutory Notice of Proscribed Conduct

Statute must be definite and certain in its provisions to be valid, and when it is so vague and indefinite that persons of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application, it violates the first essential of due process of law. City of Atlanta v. Southern Ry., 213 Ga. 736, 101 S.E.2d 707, 1958 Ga. LEXIS 262 (1958); DeKalb Real Estate Bd., Inc. v. Chairman & Bd. of Comm'rs of Rds. & Revenues, 372 F. Supp. 748, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12193 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

The void-for-vagueness doctrine as interpreted by the United States Supreme Court requires that a penal state statute define the criminal offense with sufficient definiteness that ordinary people can understand what conduct is prohibited and in a manner that does not encourage arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement. Welch v. State, 251 Ga. 197, 304 S.E.2d 391, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 763 (1983).

Doctrine of vagueness is anchored in due process clauses of fifth and fourteenth amendments. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 515 F. Supp. 176, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16808 (N.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 673 F.2d 1225, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19863 (11th Cir. 1982).

Constitution does not require impossible standards of statutory clarity, and does not require more than that the language convey sufficiently definite warning as to the proscribed conduct when measured by common understanding and practices. If a statute is so designed that persons of ordinary intelligence who would be law abiding can tell what conduct must be to conform to its requirements and it is susceptible of uniform interpretation and application by those charged with the responsibility of enforcing it, it is invulnerable to an attack for vagueness. Watts v. State, 224 Ga. 596, 163 S.E.2d 695, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 859 (1968).

Certain amount of vagueness must be tolerated in law-making due to inherent imprecision in language; all that due process requires is that the law give sufficient warning to enable a person to conform his or her conduct in accordance with the law and to guard against discriminatory enforcement. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 515 F. Supp. 176, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16808 (N.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 673 F.2d 1225, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19863 (11th Cir. 1982).

Statutes not involving freedoms of U.S. Const., amend. 1 examined in light of facts of case. — Vagueness challenges to statutes which do not involve freedoms of U.S. Const., amend. 1 must be examined in light of the facts of the case at hand. Hardison v. Shepard, 246 Ga. 196, 269 S.E.2d 458, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1043 (1980); State v. Hudson, 247 Ga. 36, 273 S.E.2d 616, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 601 (1981).

Statute must convey sufficiently definite warning, etc. Statute must convey sufficiently definite warning as to proscribed conduct when measured by common understanding and practices. Jones v. State, 219 Ga. 848, 136 S.E.2d 358, 1964 Ga. LEXIS 423, cert. denied, 379 U.S. 935, 85 S. Ct. 330, 13 L. Ed. 2d 345, 1964 U.S. LEXIS 105 (1964); Lanthrip v. State, 235 Ga. 10, 218 S.E.2d 771, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 766 (1975); Constantino v. State, 243 Ga. 595, 255 S.E.2d 710, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1003, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 940, 100 S. Ct. 293, 62 L. Ed. 2d 306, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 3630 (1979); Johnson v. State, 246 Ga. 126, 269 S.E.2d 18, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 987 (1980).

All the due process clause requires is that the law give sufficient warning that men may conduct themselves so as to avoid that which is forbidden. In re Suggs, 249 Ga. 365, 291 S.E.2d 233, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1144 (1982).

Language of criminal defamation statute requiring a communication which "tends to provoke a breach of the peace" is vague and overbroad under U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14. Williamson v. State, 249 Ga. 851, 295 S.E.2d 305, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1211 (1982).

Absent some qualification on "bias or prejudice," O.C.G.A. § 17-10-17 is left so vague that persons of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application and, thus, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-17 is too vague to justify the imposition of enhanced criminal punishment for its violation; also, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-17 may not be upheld because it impermissibly delegates basic policy matters to policemen, judges, and juries for resolution on an ad hoc and subjective basis, with the attendant dangers of arbitrary and discriminatory applications and therefore, the sentence enhancement that defendants selected their victims because of racial bias and prejudice violated defendants' due process rights under U.S. Const., amends. 1, 5, 8, and 14 and the corresponding state constitutional provisions. Botts v. State, 278 Ga. 538, 604 S.E.2d 512, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 946 (2004).

Appellant juvenile was not entitled to dismissal of two counts of street gang activity based on the juvenile's assertion that O.C.G.A. § 16-15-3(1)(I) was unconstitutionally vague; the language in the statute provided notice to ordinary citizens that crimes committed in violation of the laws of the United States or foreign jurisdictions were considered criminal gang activity if the crimes fell within one of the categories of criminal gang activity enumerated in § 16-15-3(1)(A)-(H), (J). In re K.R.S., 284 Ga. 853, 672 S.E.2d 622, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 26 (2009).

Defendant's conviction for misdemeanor reckless conduct under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-60(b) was affirmed as the statute was not unconstitutionally vague under the fourteenth amendment since it gave a person of ordinary intelligence fair notice that it prohibited a person from leaving one's children, one an infant and the other a toddler, unsupervised on the upper floor of a two-story home that was not equipped with any device to keep the children from falling down a nearby flight of stairs. Baker v. State, 280 Ga. 822, 633 S.E.2d 541, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 489 (2006).

O.C.G.A. § 16-13-41(h) was not unconstitutionally vague as applied to a defendant, a physician, who was charged with violating O.C.G.A. § 16-13-42(a)(1) by improperly providing 33 signed prescription forms in blank to the defendant's nurse practitioner in violation of § 16-13-41(h) as that provision broadly included possession of a document by any person other than the one whose signature appeared thereon; thus, a physician's staff member could not be excluded. Raber v. State, 285 Ga. 251, 674 S.E.2d 884, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 95 (2009).

Purpose of striking down statutes which are "vague" is to prevent the arbitrary enforcement of laws that fail to give officials or the public any notice of what is prohibited. American Booksellers Ass'n v. McAuliffe, 533 F. Supp. 50, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17134 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Laws should be clear to persons of ordinary intelligence. — Law must give person of ordinary intelligence reasonable opportunity to know what is prohibited, so that the person may act accordingly. Vague laws may trap the innocent by not providing fair warning. Ridley v. State, 232 Ga. 646, 208 S.E.2d 466, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 1044 (1974).

Criterion for judging statute is fair notice, not precise definition. — Precise definition is not the proper criterion for adjudging whether a statute is so vague and indefinite as to be unenforceable. It is, rather, the practical criterion of fair notice to those to whom the statute is directed. Southern Ry. v. Brooks, 112 Ga. App. 324, 145 S.E.2d 76, 1965 Ga. App. LEXIS 692 (1965), superseded by statute as stated in Kitchen v. CSX Transp., 265 Ga. 206, 453 S.E.2d 712, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 113 (1995).

New statute punishing novel offense susceptible to challenge. — New statute punishing novel offense that has no established bounds is particularly susceptible to void for vagueness challenge. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 515 F. Supp. 176, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16808 (N.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 673 F.2d 1225, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19863 (11th Cir. 1982).

Ordinary civil statute withstanding vagueness challenge. — Ordinary civil statute that can reasonably be interpreted and limited by judicial construction will withstand vagueness challenge. Exxon Corp. v. Georgia Ass'n of Petro. Retailers, 484 F. Supp. 1008, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7715 (N.D. Ga. 1979), aff'd, 644 F.2d 1030, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 13419 (5th Cir. 1981).

Ordinary civil statute is void for vagueness only where it exacts obedience to a rule that is so vague and indefinite as really to be no rule or standard at all. Exxon Corp. v. Georgia Ass'n of Petro. Retailers, 484 F. Supp. 1008, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7715 (N.D. Ga. 1979), aff'd, 644 F.2d 1030, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 13419 (5th Cir. 1981).

Where uncertainty in statute amounts to denial of due process. — The uncertainty in a statute which will amount to a denial of due process of law is not the difficulty of ascertaining whether close cases fall within or without the prohibition of the statute, but whether the standard established by the statute is so uncertain that it cannot be determined with reasonable definiteness that any particular act is disapproved. Mixon v. State, 226 Ga. 869, 178 S.E.2d 189, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 716 (1970).

A statute, to violate due process, must be so vague that persons of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning and differ as to its application. In re Suggs, 249 Ga. 365, 291 S.E.2d 233, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1144 (1982).

Implying by court of missing mens rea element in statute. — Court may imply missing mens rea element in statute to give statute constitutional viability. High Ol' Times, Inc. v. Busbee, 515 F. Supp. 176, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16808 (N.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 673 F.2d 1225, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 19863 (11th Cir. 1982).

Application not as strict with respect to civil statutes. — The application of due process with respect to vagueness and uncertainty is not applied as strictly to civil statutes as to those penal in nature. The rule is that a statute may be too vague and uncertain to be capable of enforcement as a penal statute and yet may be sufficiently certain to set forth a rule of civil conduct. Willis v. Jackson, 148 Ga. App. 432, 251 S.E.2d 341, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 3184 (1978).

Sufficient definiteness of criminal statute. — A criminal statute that defines a crime with sufficient definiteness to enable one familiar with the acts made criminal to determine when the statute is being violated is not void as offending U.S.

Const., amend. 14 or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I. Farrar v. State, 187 Ga. 401, 200 S.E. 803, 1939 Ga. LEXIS 412 (1939); Lanthrip v. State, 235 Ga. 10, 218 S.E.2d 771, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 766 (1975).

A criminal statute is sufficiently definite if its terms furnish a test based on normal criteria that persons of common intelligence who come in contact with the statute may use with reasonable safety in determining its command. Stull v. State, 230 Ga. 99, 196 S.E.2d 7, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 825 (1973); Wilson v. State, 245 Ga. 49, 262 S.E.2d 810, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 685 (1980).

The conspiracy statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-4-8, is not unconstitutionally vague because its term "overt act" unambiguously refers to a specific type of open or manifest act made in furtherance of a conspiracy to commit a crime. Bradford v. State, 285 Ga. 1, 673 S.E.2d 201, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 48 (2009).

Appellant, a juvenile, was not entitled to the dismissal of two counts of street gang activity based on the juvenile's assertion that O.C.G.A. § 16-15-4(a) failed to inform ordinary citizens of what associations with a criminal street gang were prohibited under the statute; the statute required that a defendant's association with a group be active and include the commission of an enumerated offense under O.C.G.A. § 16-15-13(1), and that provided a sufficiently definite warning to persons of ordinary intelligence of the prohibited conduct. In re K.R.S., 284 Ga. 853, 672 S.E.2d 622, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 26 (2009).

Language of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-120(2)(B) provided clear notice to the defendant that the defendant was required to complete a turn in the left lane and that notice was consistent with other portions of the statute when read in context. Accordingly, § 40-6-120(2)(B) as applied to the defendant was not void for vagueness under the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment. State v. Newsom, 319 Ga. 607, 905 S.E.2d 618, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 164 (2024).

constitutions on vagueness grounds as applied to homeless sex offenders who possess no street or route address for their residence. Santos v. State, 284 Ga. 514, 668 S.E.2d 676, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 849 (2008).

Fundamental requirement of criminal statute is to give "fair warning" of what conduct is criminal. King v. State, 246 Ga. 386, 271 S.E.2d 630, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1118 (1980).

Criminal statute must make improbable misconstruing of statutory meaning by ordinary persons of equal intelligence. — A criminal statute must not be so vague, uncertain or ambiguous as to make it improbable that ordinary people of equal intelligence could misconstrue its meaning. King v. State, 246 Ga. 386, 271 S.E.2d 630, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1118 (1980).

Criminal statutes must give notice of prohibited offense. — Conviction under criminal enactment not giving adequate notice that conduct charged is prohibited is violative of due process. Wright v. Georgia, 373 U.S. 284, 83 S. Ct. 1240, 10 L. Ed. 2d 349, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 1552 (1963).

Criminal statute must be written in such definite terms to give notice of prohibited offense to those who would be prosecuted under it, or it is unconstitutional. United States ex rel. Huguley v. Martin, 325 F. Supp. 489, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14132 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Willful violators of constitutional requirements which have been defined are in no position to say that they had no adequate advance notice that they would be visited with punishment. Screws v. United States, 325 U.S. 91, 65 S. Ct. 1031, 89 L. Ed. 1495, 1945 U.S. LEXIS 2096 (1945).

Extent of unconstitutional vagueness of generally worded statute. — A generally worded statute which is construed to punish conduct which cannot constitutionally be punished is unconstitutionally vague to the extent that it fails to give adequate warning of the boundary between the constitutionally permissible and constitutionally impermissible applications of the statute. Wright v. Georgia, 373 U.S. 284, 83 S. Ct. 1240, 10 L. Ed. 2d 349, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 1552 (1963).

Statute does not run afoul of ex post facto clause unless it makes an action done before the passing of the law, and which was innocent when done, criminal and punishes such action, or aggravates a crime, or makes it greater than it was when committed. Federal Election Comm'n v. Lance, 617 F.2d 365, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 17855 (5th Cir. 1980).

Statutory crime of reckless conduct sufficiently definite. — Section 16-5-60 is sufficiently definite to give a person of ordinary intelligence fair notice that such conduct is forbidden by the statute. Horowitz v. State, 243 Ga. 441, 254 S.E.2d 828, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 928 (1979).

Statutes providing for jury recommendation of mercy in capital cases not vague and uncertain. — Statutes authorizing capital punishment and providing that juries in capital cases may recommend mercy, which has the effect of reducing punishment to life imprisonment in the discretion of the jury, are not vague and uncertain although they fix no standards for recommending mercy. Miller v. State, 224 Ga. 627, 163 S.E.2d 730, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 876 (1968).

Statute allowing death penalty where aggravating circumstance not unconstitutionally vague. — The aggravating circumstance of former Code 1933, § 27-2534.1 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30) that the offense of murder, rape, armed robbery, or kidnapping was outrageously and wantonly vile, horrible, and inhuman in that it involved torture and depravity of the mind, or an aggravated battery to the victim is not unconstitutionally vague; and therefore, the death penalty may be imposed if the factfinder finds it to have been present, especially since the Supreme Court of Georgia will only approve such a sentence for those cases that lie at its core. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1370 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977).

Statutory prohibition of harassing phone calls comports with due pro- cess. — Former Code 1933, §§ 26-2610 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-11-39.1) and 104-9901 (see O.C.G.A. § 46-5-21), which prohibit telephone calls for the purpose of harassing, are clear and can be readily understood by people of ordinary intelligence seeking to avoid their violation, and therefore these sections are not unconstitutionally vague or broad and do not violate due process. Constantino v. State, 243 Ga. 595, 255 S.E.2d 710, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1003, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 940, 100 S. Ct. 293, 62 L. Ed. 2d 306, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 3630 (1979).

Notice in statute making driving while intoxicated a crime adequate. — Notice given in former Code 1933, § 68A-902 (see O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391) that driving under influence of alcohol is crime is adequate. Head v. State, 246 Ga. 360, 271 S.E.2d 452, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1108 (1980).

Statute making vote buying or selling felony not void for vagueness. — Former Code 1933, § 34-1933 (see O.C.G.A. § 21-2-570), providing that any person who buys or sells or offers to buy or sell, or knowingly participates in the buying or selling of votes at any primary or election shall be guilty of a felony, is not void for vagueness or overbreadth. King v. State, 244 Ga. 536, 261 S.E.2d 333, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1330 (1979).

Statutory language of potential liability for employment security contributions and taxes meets standard of due process. — The language of former Code 1933, § 54-650.2 (see O.C.G.A. § 34-8-150) is sufficient to place the particular officer or employee of an employer who has the responsibility for filing the returns and paying the taxes for his employer on notice of his potential liability, and thus meets the standard of due process. Brumby v. Brooks, 234 Ga. 376, 216 S.E.2d 288, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1138 (1975).

Bribery statute (O.C.G.A. § 16-10-2) is not unconstitutionally vague. King v. State, 246 Ga. 386, 271 S.E.2d 630, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1118 (1980).

Standard for lawyer not unconstitutionally vague or overbroad. — The standard providing that a lawyer shall not without just cause to the detriment of the lawyer's client willfully abandon or willfully disregard a legal matter entrusted to the lawyer, or so continuously neglect a legal matter as to be tantamount or equivalent to willfulness is not unconstitutionally vague or overbroad. In re Sliz, 246 Ga. 797, 273 S.E.2d 177, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1286 (1980).

Words "place of amusement" sufficiently definite for basis of criminal prosecution. — The words "place of amusement" in former act forbidding establishment of certain businesses outside municipal limits without obtaining a license from municipal authorities were not so vague and indefinite that they could not be made the basis of a criminal prosecution. Ingram v. State, 193 Ga. 565, 19 S.E.2d 493, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 447 (1942).

Terms "nuisance" and "offensive." — Term "nuisance" itself had a definite and determined meaning in the law, and was not indefinite, vague, or uncertain; furthermore, the term "offensive" did not render a nuisance standard unconstitutionally vague; thus, Glynn County, Ga., Ordinance § 2-16-237 was not unconstitutionally vague. Stanfield v. Glynn County, 280 Ga. 785, 631 S.E.2d 374, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 388 (2006).

Statute resulting in contractor possibly contributing twice upon each employee's wages constitutional. — Ga. L. 1937, pp. 806, 841 (see O.C.G.A. § 34-8-39) is not lacking in due process, because its enforcement could result in compelling the contractor, upon whom the burden ultimately falls, to contribute twice upon the wages of each employee, if perchance he should devote a portion of a day to the performance of one contract, and the remainder to the performance of another. Jeffreys-McElrath Mfg. Co. v. Huiet, 196 Ga. 710, 27 S.E.2d 385, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 410 (1943).

Statute constitutional even though employing unit without control of amount of wages and without first-hand knowledge. — The fact that the employing unit has no control over the amount of the wages and may have no first-hand knowledge of the amount does not render the statute invalid as violating the principle of due process, as to such party. Jeffreys-McElrath Mfg. Co. v.

Ordinance revoking liquor license for any state law violation overbroad.

— City ordinance that liquor license can be revoked for violation of any state law is patently overbroad and is unconstitutional. Atlanta Attractions, Inc. v. Massell, 330 F. Supp. 865, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11734 (N.D. Ga. 1971), aff'd, 463 F.2d 449, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 8148 (5th Cir. 1972).

Ordinance forbidding disorderly conduct too vague and indefinite.

— An ordinance forbidding “anyone to engage in or do anything that is disorderly, either by words or unbecomingly conduct at any place on any street, alley, park, or any place where such disorderly conduct may be seen or heard by any person in any said city,” is too vague and indefinite to be the basis for the infliction of corporal punishment, such as service on a city chain gang, or the imposition of a fine as an alternative. Griffin v. Smith, 184 Ga. 871, 193 S.E. 777, 1937 Ga. LEXIS 649 (1937).

Municipal ordinance regarding licensing plumbers discriminatory and too vague where discretionary with mayor and council.

— Municipal ordinance providing for the licensing of plumbers, which left the grant or refusal of a license entirely a matter of discretion with the mayor and general council of the city, was too general, vague, and indefinite to be enforced, and clearly discriminatory, because it was not based upon any qualification of the alleged plumber, but was dependent entirely upon the willingness or unwillingness of the mayor and general council to enforce, or not to enforce, other portions of the ordinance which required an examination as a prerequisite to the grant of a license. DeWell v. Quarles, 180 Ga. 864, 181 S.E. 159, 1935 Ga. LEXIS 587 (1935).

Ordinances adopted pursuant to purported charter amendment void for vagueness also unenforceable.

— Ga. L. 1951, p. 3074, which purported to amend city's charter, was too vague, indefinite and uncertain in meaning to be enforced by the courts and was therefore void; and being so, the paving and curbing ordinances which the city adopted pursuant thereto were unsupported by charter authority and were therefore unenforceable. City of Atlanta v. Southern Ry., 213 Ga. 736, 101 S.E.2d 707, 1958 Ga. LEXIS 262 (1958).

Trial court did not err in granting a city summary judgment in a lessee's declaratory judgment action seeking an order declaring that City of Forest Park, Ga., Ordinance § 9-8-45 was unconstitutional because the ordinance was sufficiently definite so that a person of ordinary intelligence need not guess at its meaning; although the lessee contended that the phrase “without limitation of the generality of the foregoing” opened the definition of “public sidewalk” to include any space that the city later wished to assert fell under the ordinance, the specification of parking spaces and other areas intended for public travel did not permit the interpretation the lessee contended. Braley v. City of Forest Park, 286 Ga. 760, 692 S.E.2d 595, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 268 (2010).

Legislation may require judiciary to provide definitions.

— One of the traditional functions of courts is to interpret and construe legislative enactments. There is no due process prohibition on the enactment of legislation which requires definitions to be provided by the judiciary. Bell v. Barrett, 241 Ga. 103, 243 S.E.2d 40, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 883 (1978).

O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8), which provides a definition of “deprived child” for juvenile proceedings, provides adequate standards by which a person of common intelligence can regulate one's conduct and responsibilities in order to conform to it. In re Suggs, 249 Ga. 365, 291 S.E.2d 233, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1144 (1982).

Statute proscribing inducement to parents to part with children.

— The terms of O.C.G.A. § 19-8-24 making it unlawful to directly or indirectly hold out an inducement to parents to part with children were sufficiently clear to apprise the defendant that offering an automobile to a parent in exchange for physical custody or control of the child was proscribed. Douglas v. State, 263 Ga. 748, 438 S.E.2d 361, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 51 (1994).

Prohibited child care not adequately described. — Because the reckless conduct statute failed to provide the defendant with fair notice that the defendant could be held criminally responsible for leaving children in the care of an older child, the statute failed to clearly define its prohibitions, rendering it unconstitutionally vague as applied. Hall v. State, 268 Ga. 89, 485 S.E.2d 755, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 186 (1997).

Public drunkenness statute constitutional. — The public drunkenness statute, as presently drafted and construed by the courts of this state, contains clear standards for determining whether the conduct of an accused is violative of its terms. It describes with sufficient particularity the acts prohibited, and neither on its face nor in its application does it furnish police a tool for arbitrary encroachment upon constitutionally protected conduct. Welch v. State, 251 Ga. 197, 304 S.E.2d 391, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 763 (1983).

O.C.G.A. § 27-3-9, prohibiting the baiting of hunting land and prohibiting hunting “around or near” baited land, gives sufficient notice of the acts it prohibits so as to comply with the requirements of due process. Price v. State, 253 Ga. 250, 319 S.E.2d 849, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 881 (1984).

O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(j)(1), prohibiting possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, is not vague and uncertain, and does not violate due process. Walker v. State, 261 Ga. 739, 410 S.E.2d 422, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 1040 (1991).

Georgia’s Terroristic Threats statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-11-37(a), did not violate the due process clause and was not unconstitutionally vague as a person of ordinary intelligence could clearly understand the meaning of threatening to commit any crime of violence; and both Georgia and federal law plainly defined recklessness as the proper criminal mens rea requirement. Major v. State, 301 Ga. 147, 800 S.E.2d 348, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 377 (2017).

Statute inadequately defining “ex- otic fish.” — In deciding to prosecute a hatchery owner for violating the Fish and Game Code, based on a definition of “exotic fish” different than its generally accepted definition and not then codified or set forth in any regulation, Department of Natural Resource officials violated due process, acted outside their discretionary authority, and were not entitled to qualified immunity. Blue Ridge Mt. Fisheries, Inc. v. Department of Natural Resources, 217 Ga. App. 89, 456 S.E.2d 651, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 350 (1995), cert. denied, No. S95C1198, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 1238 (Ga. Dec. 1, 1995).

4. Business

Granting, denial, or revocation of business licenses. — Granting, denial, or revocation of business licenses involves rights subject to protection of due process clause. Housworth v. Glisson, 485 F. Supp. 29, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17196 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

Imposition of fines and penalties on members of an association of taxicab owners in the form of suspension or revocation of their certificates of public necessity and convenience for infractions of taxicab regulations by their drivers did not violate substantive due process because the civil sanctions were a valid exercise of the police power; the city was authorized to find that in the legitimate interest of promoting and protecting the public safety, subjecting the members to civil sanctions for infractions committed by their drivers was a reasonably necessary and less onerous alternative than the imposition of vicarious criminal liability. Atlanta Taxicab Co. Owners Ass’n v. City of Atlanta, 281 Ga. 342, 638 S.E.2d 307, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 1030 (2006), overruled in part, State of Ga. v. Eternal Vigilance Action, Inc., No. S25A0362, No. S25A0490, 2025 Ga. LEXIS 131 (Ga. June 10, 2025), overruled in part, Republican Nat’l Comm. Eternal Vigilance Action, Inc., 2025 Ga. LEXIS 131 (Ga. June 10, 2025).

Governing body issuing licenses required to establish ascertainable standards for license application. — Constitutional standards of due process do require that a governing body issuing licenses establish ascertainable standards by which an applicant can intelligently seek to qualify. Levendis v. Cobb County, 242 Ga. 592, 250 S.E.2d 460, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1291 (1978).

Legislative power to regulate professions. — Portion of act regulating the practice of dentistry which defines the making or repairing of appliances usable on teeth or as teeth, unless ordered by a licensed dentist, as part of the practice of dentistry, did not violate this provision. Holcomb v. Johnston, 213 Ga. 249, 98 S.E.2d 561, 1957 Ga. LEXIS 351 (1957).

Contract bids. — Bidding insurer's summary judgment motion was properly granted as to its substantive due process claim against a county as the county's decision to throw out the entire bidding process was rational in light of the taint caused by a consultant's lack of an insurance counselor's license under O.C.G.A. §§ 33-23-1.1 and 33-23-4. Benefit Support, Inc. v. Hall County, 281 Ga. App. 825, 637 S.E.2d 763, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1267 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0306, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 214 (Ga. Feb. 26, 2007).

Right to practice law is privilege or franchise. — A lawyer does not have a vested interest in the lawyer's status as a member of the State Bar of Georgia. The right to practice law is not a natural or constitutional right, nor an absolute right or a right de jure, but is a privilege or franchise. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 783 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 90 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 1857 (1970).

It has never been the law of this state that a lawyer holds an irrevocable license to practice law. The State Bar Act does not deprive an attorney of the lawyer's freedom of contract, conscience, speech, and liberty, or deprive the lawyer of the lawyer's property without due process of law. Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 783 (1969), cert. denied, 398 U.S. 910, 90 S. Ct. 1705, 26 L. Ed. 2d 71, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 1857 (1970).

State has legitimate and substantial interest in excluding from practice of law those not meeting standards of minimal competence and the Georgia examination, as presently constituted, tests skills and knowledge which have a logical, apparent relationship to those necessary to the practice of law. Davidson v. Georgia, 622 F.2d 895, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15188 (5th Cir. 1980).

Qualifications for admission to bar must have rational connection with applicant's fitness to practice law. — A state can require high standards of qualification, such as good moral character or proficiency in its law, before it admits an applicant to the bar, but any qualification must have a rational connection with the applicant's fitness or capacity to practice law. Webster v. Wofford, 321 F. Supp. 1259, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8951 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Residency requirement prior to lawyer's taking bar examination valid to extent necessary to protect state interests. — A reasonable period of residency prior to taking the bar examination for the purpose of permitting personal interviews and investigation with respect to an applicant's background, moral character and qualifications, since the state clearly has a legitimate interest in this area, may be imposed, but only to the extent necessary to protect legitimate state interests. Webster v. Wofford, 321 F. Supp. 1259, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8951 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

Twelve-month residency requirement unconstitutional. — Ga. L. 1963, p. 458, § 1, which requires an applicant for admission to the practice of law to be a bona fide resident of the State of Georgia for 12 consecutive months immediately preceding the date of such admission, is unconstitutional as violating the due process and equal protection clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Webster v. Wofford, 321 F. Supp. 1259, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8951 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

City government has wide discretion and broad powers in control of liquor traffic, which are subject only to minimal demands of due process and equal protection. Barnes v. Merritt, 428 F.2d 284, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 8568 (5th Cir. 1970).

Arbitrary denial of liquor license violates due process and equal pro- tection. — Where county government delegated authority to citizens residing within 300 feet of store to deny liquor license to store owner, the denial of a license on such arbitrary grounds constitutes a violation of equal protection and due process of law. Bozik v. Cobb County, 240 Ga. 537, 242 S.E.2d 48, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 700 (1978).

Arbitrary or unreasonable licensing procedures in liquor sale regulation unconstitutional. — United States Const., amend. 21 confers upon the states broad regulatory power over the liquor traffic within their territories; however, even in the regulation of the sales of liquor, arbitrary or unreasonable licensing procedures are in violation of the due process and equal protection clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Parks v. Allen, 409 F.2d 210, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 13063 (5th Cir. 1969).

Regulation of alcoholic beverages where nudity may exist. — The wording of the ballot on the constitutional amendment, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VII, giving the state authority to regulate alcoholic beverages and to delegate authority to counties and municipalities to regulate the exhibition of nudity in connection with the sale or consumption of alcoholic beverages, did not violate due process. Goldrush II v. City of Marietta, 267 Ga. 683, 482 S.E.2d 347, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 99, cert. denied, 522 U.S. 818, 118 S. Ct. 70, 139 L. Ed. 2d 31, 1997 U.S. LEXIS 4734 (1997).

Standards for location of liquor stores to be grounded on ordinance. — A city may not establish standards exclusively limiting the location of liquor stores to certain areas by mere custom or practice or by official declarations not grounded upon an ordinance duly adopted and accordingly binding upon the city government as well as upon the general public. Barnes v. Merritt, 428 F.2d 284, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 8568 (5th Cir. 1970).

County ordinance using voting districts and property lines to determine the number and location of licensed stores was reasonably related to the county's goal of regulating the retail sale of beer and wine and did not violate due process.

Bradshaw v. Dayton, 270 Ga. 884, 514 S.E.2d 831, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 315 (1999).

Legislature empowered to regulate personal contracts in insurance industry. — The business of insurance is so far affected with a public interest as to justify legislative regulation. It is within the power of the legislature to regulate the personal contracts involved in such business. Harrison v. Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection & Ins. Co., 183 Ga. 1, 187 S.E. 648, 1936 Ga. LEXIS 166 (1936), rev'd, 301 U.S. 459, 57 S. Ct. 838, 81 L. Ed. 1223, 1937 U.S. LEXIS 301 (1937).

Empowering county authorities to control and regulate establishment of businesses not violative of due process. — Ga. L. 1937, p. 624 providing that no person should establish a public dance hall, boxing or wrestling arena, or amusement place, tourist camps, and barbecue stands, for money or profit, outside the limits of incorporated towns or cities of a certain minimum population without first obtaining the permission of the commissioners or other authority in charge of such counties, and conferring authority on them to grant or refuse such permission for such time or under such regulations as they might deem proper for the public good, to levy a license or occupational tax on the same and to provide punishment for a violation of the act was not violative of the due process and equal protection clauses of the state and federal Constitutions. Ingram v. State, 193 Ga. 565, 19 S.E.2d 493, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 447 (1942).

Restricting hospital staffs privileges. — Hospital Authority may restrict staff member's privileges by reasonable and nondiscriminatory rules and regulations. Yeargin v. Hamilton Mem. Hosp., 229 Ga. 870, 195 S.E.2d 8, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 809 (1972).

Power to make decisions affecting physician's hospital privileges may be vested in peers in absence of showing of prejudice, and the existence of personal differences does not preclude an individual's participation. Robbins v. Ong, 452 F. Supp. 110, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17302 (S.D. Ga. 1978).

Ordinance prohibiting pinball machine business not violative of due process. — Ordinance prohibiting the owning, maintaining or operating of pinball machines and the like, authorized under the general welfare clause of the charter of the municipality enacted in pursuance of the police power of the state, is not violative of the due process of law clauses of the federal and state constitutions, for any reason assigned, or void on the ground of unreasonableness, merely because the effect of the ordinance is to destroy and confiscate the business and property of the petitioner, (distributing and leasing novelty machines used for pleasure and skill only) whereas other articles of pleasure and skill are not included in the ordinance. Woodward v. City of Lithonia, 191 Ga. 234, 11 S.E.2d 476, 1940 Ga. LEXIS 607 (1940).

Act prohibiting operation of public dance halls without license and permission to operate is not unconstitutional as denying "due process of law" or "equal protection of laws." Poss v. Norris, 197 Ga. 513, 29 S.E.2d 705, 1944 Ga. LEXIS 288 (1944).

Prohibition on scalping tickets comports with due process. — By prohibiting the practice of "scalping" tickets, former Code 1933, § 96-602 (see former O.C.G.A. § 10-1-310) was reasonably related to a proper legislative objective and consequently did not violate the due process clause of either the state or federal Constitution. Former Code 1933, § 96-602 (see former O.C.G.A. § 10-1-310) put all sports fans on an equal footing in the race to the ticket window. State v. Major, 243 Ga. 255, 253 S.E.2d 724, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 875 (1979).

Arbitrary declaration that home solicitors constitute nuisance and are subject to punishment violates due process. — To arbitrarily declare, without qualification, that every solicitor who goes to a private home to try to conduct an otherwise perfectly legal business is a nuisance and subject to fine or imprisonment is an unreasonable interference with a solicitor's normal legal rights, and is without due process of law. De Berry v. City of La Grange, 62 Ga. App. 74, 8 S.E.2d 146, 1940 Ga. App. LEXIS 598 (1940).

Ordinance can vary utility service rates according to territory. — An ordinance, which provides that rates for water service shall be higher in territory outside the corporate limits, is not unconstitutional and void as denying "due process" and "equal protection" under the federal and state Constitutions. Barr v. City Council, 206 Ga. 753, 58 S.E.2d 823, 1950 Ga. LEXIS 570 (1950).

Court interference with valid order of Public Service Commission. — Courts should not interfere with valid order of Public Service Commission unless clearly shown to be unreasonable, arbitrary, or confiscatory. If the evidence clearly showed that the requirement of the commission was unreasonable, capricious, or confiscatory, the court would be bound to set such finding aside as unlawful in the taking of property without due process of law. Otherwise the court has no such authority. Statesboro Tel. Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 235 Ga. 179, 219 S.E.2d 127, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 815 (1975), superseded by statute as stated in Georgia Public Service Com. v. Southern Bell, 254 Ga. 244, 327 S.E.2d 726, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 667 (1985).

Protection from county's use of power to withhold services to coerce payment from those not liable. — The due process and equal protection clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 14 protect both tenants and property owners from a county's use of its power to withhold water and sewer services to coerce applicants for such services to pay water bills for which they are not liable. Union Circulation Co. v. Russell, 463 F. Supp. 884, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13868 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

County can refuse services to owner of property subject to liens. — If there are valid liens on a property for unpaid water bills, then it is not unconstitutional for a county to refuse services to the owner of any property subject to such liens. Union Circulation Co. v. Russell, 463 F. Supp. 884, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13868 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

Failure of Act granting power to license to provide for review does not make it unconstitutional. — Even though an Act granting power to license occupations may not make provision for an appeal, this will not prevent a citizen who has been wronged by an arbitrary or capricious exercise of the power from seeking aid from the courts to protect him from oppression, and the failure of the Act to provide for a review does not make it unconstitutional. Jenkins v. Manry, 216 Ga. 538, 118 S.E.2d 91, 1961 Ga. LEXIS 271 (1961).

State may impose license fee upon occupation without abridging constitutional rights and privileges of others carrying on business in the state, or depriving them of the equal protection of the laws, or taking their property without due process of law. Camp v. State, 171 Ga. 25, 154 S.E. 436, 1930 Ga. LEXIS 274 (1930).

Liability for city license fees where business income almost entirely from intrastate business. — Where radio station's income is derived almost entirely from intrastate business, the claim that some of its messages may go beyond state lines would not relieve it from liability from city license fees under the interstate commerce clause. City of Atlanta v. Oglethorpe Univ., 178 Ga. 379, 173 S.E. 110, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 57 (1934).

Ordinance requiring laundry license applicant to give bond not unreasonable. — An ordinance which requires the applicant for a laundry license to give a bond where articles are taken from a city for the purpose of laundering is not arbitrary and unreasonable, and is not in conflict with the due process clause of the state Constitution or U.S. Const., amend. 14. City of Newnan v. Atlanta Laundries, Inc., 174 Ga. 99, 162 S.E. 497, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 4 (1932).

Due process clause not used to strike down regulatory state laws because unwise or not of particular view. — The day is gone when this court uses the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 to strike down state laws, regulatory of business and industrial conditions, because they may be unwise, improvident, or out of harmony with a particular school of thought. Wall v. American Optometric Ass'n, 379 F. Supp. 175, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8896 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 419 U.S. 888, 95 S. Ct. 166, 42 L. Ed. 2d 134, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 2900 (1974).

Ex parte revocation of license to equip and operate an abattoir was void, and the owner did not need to pay any attention to it unless the owner's continued operation of the business would subject the owner to penal action, in which case the owner would have remedy by injunction to keep the defendant from interfering with the owner's proper use of the property. Davis v. Johnson, 92 Ga. App. 858, 90 S.E.2d 426, 1955 Ga. App. LEXIS 732 (1955).

Laws impairing vested rights violate due process but first in field gets no monopoly protection. — The due process clauses of the state and federal Constitutions prohibit the enactment of a law which would impair vested rights, but do not inure to a person, first in the field, a monopoly in any line of business. Villyard v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 204 Ga. 517, 50 S.E.2d 313, 1948 Ga. LEXIS 471 (1948).

Remedy of mandamus against city officials to require enforcement of ordinance. — If the officials of a city are refusing to enforce the provisions of a valid ordinance by selectively permitting some businesses to pay a lesser business license than required by such an ordinance, the proper procedure for the plaintiffs to follow would be to seek mandamus against such officials to require collection in accordance with the terms of such ordinance and not an injunction to prevent the collection of any taxes from them on the theory that equal protection and due process were denied. Atlanta Motor Sales, Inc. v. City of Brunswick, 231 Ga. 374, 202 S.E.2d 68, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 711 (1973).

Consent order that imposed fines for challenge. — Where defendant signed a consent order whereby it agreed to remedy the presence of benzene in the ground near defendant's underground storage tanks and eliminate the contamination, where during this time span, defendant was represented by counsel and employed its own environmental engineer to investigate the source of the contamination, and other factors as well showed defendant's consent to the order, defendant's due process rights were not violated despite defendant's argument that it lacked the ability to challenge the validity of the consent order without the threat of enormous monetary fines. United States v. Ownbey Enters., Inc., 789 F. Supp. 1145, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5111 (N.D. Ga. 1992).

Search of commercial premises. — Night club and owner's U.S. Const., amends. 4, 14, and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII claims against two police officers survived summary judgment where the club and the owners alleged that the officers entered the club without a warrant, probable cause, or exigent circumstances, ordered the lights turned on and the music stopped, frisked the club's patrons and handcuffed some of them without making any arrests, and acted in an intimidating manner. Illusions of the South, Inc. v. City of Valdosta, No. 7:07-cv-6, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27154 (M.D. Ga. Mar. 30, 2009).

5. Taking Property for Public Use*Sovereign's taking citizen's property must be for public purpose with just and adequate compensation. —

The right of the sovereign in the property of the citizen is hedged by two fundamental safeguards — the taking must be for a public purpose, and it must be attended by just and adequate compensation. This includes every species of property in which the individual has a right of ownership, whether real or personal, corporeal or incorporeal. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966).

Owner not entitled to hearing on necessity or expediency of taking. —

The necessity or expediency of taking property for public use is a legislative question upon which the owner is not entitled to a hearing under the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 and the same clause of the Constitution of this state. Miles v. Brown, 223 Ga. 557, 156 S.E.2d 898, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 604 (1967).

No authority to take private property without notice to owner of hearing before condemnation. — Neither the General Assembly of this state, nor any municipality thereof, has authority to suspend the "due process" clauses of the federal and state Constitutions and to provide for the destruction of private property without notice to the owner of the time and place of hearing, prior to any judgment of condemnation. City of Atlanta v. Aycock, 205 Ga. 441, 53 S.E.2d 744, 1949 Ga. LEXIS 373 (1949).

Only government action inhibited.

— The fourteenth amendment proscription against deprivations of property without due process of law reaches only government action and does not inhibit the conduct of purely private persons in their ordinary activities. Jeffries v. Georgia Residential Fin. Auth., 678 F.2d 919, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18426 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 971, 103 S. Ct. 302, 74 L. Ed. 2d 283, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 4128 (1982).

Taking without due process where state or municipality takes without compensation unless under police or sovereign power. —

For the state or a municipal corporation to take private property without compensation, except where it does so under a valid exercise of the police or other sovereign power, constitutes a deprivation of property without due process of law within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 14. McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1136 (1966).

Claims concerning reasonable certainty of continuing nuisance amounting to unlawful taking of property to be heard. —

Where it is alleged, inter alia, that the construction, maintenance and operation of an airport in a residential area and the flights of airplanes in connection therewith will constitute a continuing nuisance, will cause the residents irreparable and constantly recurring damages, and will amount to an unlawful taking of their properties without due process of law in violation of the state and federal Constitutions, a motion by the defendants to dismiss the complaint on the basis that it fails to state a claim and that it is anticipatory of future conditions is properly overruled by the trial court. Camp v. Warrington, 227 Ga. 674, 182 S.E.2d 419, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 814 (1971).

City commissioners authorized to abolish city roadways provided city liable for damages. — Neither charter amendment providing that city commissioners should have authority in their discretion to close up and abolish any city street, road or alley, or part thereof provided that city should be liable for damages to any property right of any person occasioned by the exercise of such powers, nor ordinance adopted pursuant thereto, was violative of the due process clauses of the state and federal Constitutions. Jones v. City of Decatur, 189 Ga. 732, 7 S.E.2d 730, 1940 Ga. LEXIS 383 (1940).

County decision to acquire land with no effect on abutting landowners' rights. — A mere decision by the governing body of a county to acquire land for an authorized public purpose, without more, in no way affects the constitutionally protected property rights of abutting landowners, and does not trigger due process considerations of personal notice because there was no deprivation of property in any cognizable sense. Lindsey v. Guhl, 237 Ga. 567, 229 S.E.2d 354, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1306 (1976).

When other land uses cannot be considered in condemnation case. — It is error in a condemnation case to charge that the jury might, in estimating the value of the land taken, consider other uses to which the land might be devoted when there is no evidence authorizing the jury to find that it was suitable for any use other than that to which it was devoted at the time of the taking or from which a reasonable inference of suitability for other uses might be drawn. State Hwy. Dep't v. Howard, 110 Ga. App. 373, 138 S.E.2d 597, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 635 (1964).

Contention that due process violated does not make constitutional construction case. — The contention in a damage case that the alleged taking of private property for public purposes is in violation of the due process clause of the state and federal Constitutions does not make it one that involves the construction of the state and federal Constitutions. City of Atlanta v. Donald, 220 Ga. 98, 137 S.E.2d 294, 1964 Ga. LEXIS 461 (1964), transferred, 111 Ga. App. 339, 141 S.E.2d 560, 1965 Ga. App. LEXIS 964 (1965).

Slum clearance project not taking of private property in violation of due process. — The slum clearance project inaugurated by virtue of the housing authorities law (see O.C.G.A. Art. 1, Ch. 3, T. 8) and the housing cooperative law (see O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 3, T. 8), does not involve the taking of private property in violation of the due process clause of the state Constitution, or of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Williamson v. Housing Auth., 186 Ga. 673, 199 S.E. 43, 1938 Ga. LEXIS 684 (1938).

Propriety of inverse condemnation suit to challenge taking. — See Fountain v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 678 F.2d 1038, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18222 (11th Cir. 1982); Fountain v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 849 F.2d 1412, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 9845 (11th Cir. 1988).

Finality of action required for pursuing takings claim. — Landowner's just compensation claims based upon adverse zoning and land use decisions made by county officials were not ripe for review where landowners failed to show that a decision to implement challenged conduct was final, i.e., unless the official in charge of implementation had fully applied a regulation, the court could not ascertain whether its application exceeded constitutional limitations. James Emory, Inc. v. Twiggs County, 883 F. Supp. 1546, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6403 (M.D. Ga. 1995).

Finality of action required for arbitrary and capricious claims. — Landowner's due process claims contesting county officials' actions in zoning and land use matters as arbitrary and capricious exercises of the police power were not ripe for review where landowners failed to show that particular decisions being challenged had been finally applied to the property at issue. James Emory, Inc. v. Twiggs County, 883 F. Supp. 1546, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6403 (M.D. Ga. 1995).

Evidence that property was of sentimental significance to condemnees clearly would have supported a charge on uniqueness. DOT v. Metts, 208 Ga. App. 401, 430 S.E.2d 622, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 504 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1128, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 781 (Ga. July 15, 1993).

Conkle*, 263 Ga. 539, 436 S.E.2d 635, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 800 (1993); State v. Moseley, 263 Ga. 680, 436 S.E.2d 632, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 799 (1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1107, 114 S. Ct. 2101, 128 L. Ed. 2d 663, 1994 U.S. LEXIS 3803 (1994).

6. Taxation

Due process requires definite link between state and person, property or transaction it seeks to tax. Owens-Illinois Glass Co. v. Oxford, 216 Ga. 316, 116 S.E.2d 293, 1960 Ga. LEXIS 456 (1960); Independent Publishing Co. v. Hawes, 119 Ga. App. 858, 168 S.E.2d 904, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 1280 (1969).

State taxing power can be exerted only to effect public purpose and does not embrace the raising of revenue for private purposes under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Smith v. State, 222 Ga. 552, 150 S.E.2d 868, 1966 Ga. LEXIS 552 (1966).

Sole constitutional test is whether state has given anything for which it can ask return. — A state is free to pursue its own fiscal policies, unembarrassed by the Constitution, if by the practical operation of a tax the state has exerted its power in relation to opportunities which it has given, to protection which it has afforded, to benefits which it has conferred by the fact of being an orderly, civilized society. The sole constitutional test is whether the state has given anything for which it can ask return. Independent Publishing Co. v. Hawes, 119 Ga. App. 858, 168 S.E.2d 904, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 1280 (1969).

Corporate income subject to state tax unless derived from property owned or business done outside of state. — Before any part of income received by corporations having property or doing business in the state can lawfully escape the Georgia tax law, it must appear that such income was derived from property owned or business done outside of the state. Income derived by the corporation from unsolicited orders received by it from outside the state cannot, under U.S. Const., amend. 14 and the commerce clause of the United States Constitution, be taxed elsewhere than in the state. State v. Coca-Cola Bottling Co., 214 Ga. 316, 104 S.E.2d 574, 1958 Ga. LEXIS 411 (1958).

For state to tax property over which it has no territorial jurisdiction is violation of due process clauses of the federal and state Constitutions. It would be a taking of property without due process of law. Davis v. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co., 198 Ga. 550, 32 S.E.2d 180, 1944 Ga. LEXIS 431 (1944), cert. denied, 331 U.S. 829, 67 S. Ct. 1353, 91 L. Ed. 1844, 1947 U.S. LEXIS 2281 (1947); Suttles v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 193 Ga. 495, 19 S.E.2d 396, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 446 (1942).

Taxes imposed comport with due process where levied only on portion of net income arising from in-state activities. — The taxes imposed by Georgia's income tax statute are levied only on that portion of the taxpayer's net income which arises from its activities within the taxing state. These activities form a sufficient nexus between such a tax and transactions with a state for which the tax is an exaction so that the due process clause is not violated. Owens-Illinois Glass Co. v. Oxford, 216 Ga. 316, 116 S.E.2d 293, 1960 Ga. LEXIS 456 (1960).

Taxation of corporate income. — Where a domesticated corporation maintains its only office and place of business in the state, owns and manufactures all its goods therein, and receives all the proceeds from its sales made within and without the state, all from its state-owned plants and products manufactured in the state, and all from its state-owned property and state-managed business and office, from which it merely sends out samples and operates a subordinate sale office with office equipment and salesmen out of the state under the control of its state office and an executive living within the state, its entire net income from these sales would be subject to the tax imposed on net income from property owned in the state as well as from business done in the state, whether it is deemed a resident corporation, or a nonresident corporation, since neither the imposition by the statute nor the collection of such a tax would contravene U.S. Const., amend. 14. Montag Bros. v. State Revenue Comm'n, 50 Ga. App. 660, 179 S.E. 563, 1935 Ga. App. LEXIS 263 (1935), aff'd, 182 Ga. 568, 186 S.E. 558, 1936 Ga. LEXIS 496 (1936).

Graduated business tax based on reasonable classification comports with due process. — Provisions of a city ordinance imposing a graduated tax on those persons using vehicles on the streets for business purposes, in addition to the business tax required of them, and also levying a graduated tax for doing business on the streets upon carriers for hire, was not violative of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I, or this section. The city ordinance did not make unreasonable and arbitrary classifications. Solomons v. Mayor of Savannah, 183 Ga. 631, 189 S.E. 230, 1936 Ga. LEXIS 156 (1936).

Legislature can grant municipality power to make improvements and assess cost against abutting land. — An act of the Legislature granting charter power to a municipality to make public improvements such as sidewalks and street paving, and to collect the cost by special assessment and execution against the abutting land does not deprive the owner of due process of law when the act also permits the owner of such land to file an affidavit of illegality and thereby contest the reasonableness or the lawfulness of the assessment before payment is finally required. Lockridge-Rogers Lumber Co. v. City of E. Point, 214 Ga. 255, 104 S.E.2d 228, 1958 Ga. LEXIS 386 (1958).

Section of city charter which empowers it to assess the actual cost of laying or constructing a sewer line along one of its streets against the abutting property on each side of the street and which also permits the owner of such land to file an affidavit of illegality contesting the assessment, does not offend the due process clauses of the state and federal Constitutions, even though it permits the city to assess the cost without prior notice to the owner of such land and without first affording such owner an opportunity to be heard respecting the reasonableness or lawfulness of the assessment. Lockridge-Rogers Lumber Co. v. City of E. Point, 214 Ga. 255, 104 S.E.2d 228, 1958 Ga. LEXIS 386 (1958).

City's legislative authority to pave street and to assess company using street within taxing and police power. — The city of Decatur, under the Constitution and general law of Georgia, and under its charter and the amendments thereof, had legislative authority within the taxing and the police power reserved in the state to pave its streets and to assess a portion of the costs of such improvement against the street railway company occupying and using, with the consent of the city, the paved street regardless of benefit to the company. Georgia Power Co. v. City of Decatur, 181 Ga. 187, 182 S.E. 32, 1935 Ga. LEXIS 54 (1935), aff'd, 297 U.S. 620, 56 S. Ct. 606, 80 L. Ed. 925, 1936 U.S. LEXIS 542 (1936).

Due process argument untimely when no legal action instituted to prevent paving. — Where a city, in conformity to legislative authority and its ordinances, paved and incurred the expense of paving a street occupied by a street railway company, and where the company, with knowledge that the city intended, in conformity to its charter and ordinances, to charge the company with a part of the expense of such paving, stood by and saw the paving done and the expense incurred, without instituting any legal action to prevent the same, it was thereafter too late for the company to avoid payment on the ground that enforcement of the assessment would deprive the company of its property, in violation of the due process clauses of the state and federal Constitutions. Georgia Power Co. v. City of Decatur, 181 Ga. 187, 182 S.E. 32, 1935 Ga. LEXIS 54 (1935), aff'd, 297 U.S. 620, 56 S. Ct. 606, 80 L. Ed. 925, 1936 U.S. LEXIS 542 (1936).

Property assessment out of all proportion to benefit to property owner violative of due process. — Where railroad company's property which was not appreciably benefited by street paving was assessed equally with property on the other side of each paved street which received practically all of the benefits resulting from the paving, the assessment was out of all proportion to the benefit received by the railroad as an abutting property owner and violated the due process clause of this section and was not saved by adherence to the generally accepted front foot rule for assessing the cost of improvements. City of Commerce v. Southern Ry., 35 F.2d 331, 1929 U.S. App. LEXIS 2958 (5th Cir. 1929).

Municipal charter provision for property tax valuation violative of due process. — Where municipal charter provision failed to provide for notice to the taxpayer and afford as matter of right a hearing before tax assessors on the question as to valuation of the property, and where the hearing provided for by the ordinance was mere matter of grace, the charter provision is repugnant to the due process clauses of the state and federal Constitutions. Swinson v. City of Dublin, 178 Ga. 323, 173 S.E. 93, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 47 (1934).

Due process not violated because property owners subjected to taxation by act extending municipal boundaries. — An act extending municipal boundaries does not violate the constitutional guarantee of due process of the law because it subjects property owners in the area annexed to taxation by the municipality and does not deny such property owners equal protection of the law within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Lee v. City of Jesup, 222 Ga. 530, 150 S.E.2d 836, 1966 Ga. LEXIS 543 (1966), cert. denied, 386 U.S. 993, 87 S. Ct. 1307, 18 L. Ed. 2d 337, 1967 U.S. LEXIS 1866 (1967).

Review of ordinances imposing occupation taxes. — The constitutionality and legality of an occupation tax is to be judged by its effect upon dealers generally, and is not to be construed as unreasonable because it is prohibitive upon certain financially weak persons; only those laws imposing occupation taxes that are confiscatory and oppressive in general operation are to be declared unconstitutional.

Solomons v. Mayor of Savannah, 183 Ga. 631, 189 S.E. 230, 1936 Ga. LEXIS 156 (1936).

Ordinance imposing occupational tax on linen rental service was not violative of state or federal due process clause. National Linen Serv. Corp. v. City of Gainesville, 181 Ga. 397, 182 S.E. 610, 1935 Ga. LEXIS 99 (1935).

Taxation of intangibles. — While tangible property is taxable in the state where it is located, and intangibles are generally taxable in the state where the owner resides, there is an exception to the general rule regarding intangibles. The debt of a citizen of Georgia owned by a nonresident and held at the nonresident's domicile outside of the state is taxable in the state if it accrues out of or is an incident to property owned or a business conducted by the nonresident or the nonresident's agent in the state. To tax intangibles contrary to the tax situs rule stated above would constitute a denial of due process and would offend U.S. Const., amend. 14. Suttles v. Owens-Illinois Glass Co., 206 Ga. 849, 59 S.E.2d 392, 1950 Ga. LEXIS 604 (1950).

Nonresident's intangible property taxable where integral part of local business. — Intangible property of a nonresident may be taxed in this state, consistently with U.S. Const., amend. 14 and the similar or due process clause of the Constitution of Georgia, if it is so used as to become an integral part of some local business conducted by him or his agent. Suttles v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 193 Ga. 495, 19 S.E.2d 396, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 446 (1942).

Credits or accounts receivable of nonresident corporation engaged in business in Georgia taxable. — When a nonresident corporation engaged in business in this state becomes the owner of accounts receivable arising out of the business conducted in this state, such credits or accounts receivable have a tax situs in the county wherein such business is conducted, notwithstanding the orders taken for merchandise sold in this state are filled, the shipments made, the credit of the customers passed upon, and the books of account kept, at a point without the State of Georgia.

Tax enforceable on nonresident corporation's accounts receivable with situs in municipality where business conducted. — Where a non-resident corporation became the owner of accounts receivable arising out of business conducted in a municipality in this state, such credits had a tax situs in the municipality where such business was conducted, so that the enforcement of a tax upon the credits would not be contrary to the guaranty of the due process or equal protection of the law in the state and federal Constitutions. Parke, Davis & Co. v. City of Atlanta, 200 Ga. 296, 36 S.E.2d 773, 1946 Ga. LEXIS 376 (1946).

Nonresident corporation conducting loan business in Georgia within its taxing power. — Where a nonresident life insurance company employed a loan agent in Georgia on a salary basis to solicit and submit applications for loans and make reports concerning applicants and the proffered security in a fixed office or place of business in the state, leased in the agent's own name, with the rent paid by the company through reimbursement to the agent on expense account, and in all negotiations in reference to loans the company dealt with applicants by communications passing through the agent as the company's agent, with the notes and security deeds prepared in the home office and sent to the agent for execution by applicants in Georgia, and, after their return to and approval in the home office, checks were mailed to the agent for delivery to applicants in Georgia, so that all loan contracts were thus finally executed in Georgia, and where as many as 19 long-term loans were so made during continuous existence of such agency, the company in making such loans was conducting a loan business in Georgia, and thus came within its taxing power, as to property derived from or used in such business. Hence the credits arising from such loans had a situs for ad valorem taxation in Georgia, where the loan business was conducted, so that to tax them would not violate the due process clause of either the state or the federal Constitution. Suttles

v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., 193 Ga. 495, 19 S.E.2d 396, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 446 (1942).

Loans with situs for ad valorem taxation in county where loan business conducted. — In a suit by a non-resident insurance company against county taxing officials seeking to enjoin enforcement of assessments and executions for state and county taxes, the assessments being based on credits existing in the company's favor as a result of loans made by it on county real estate before the taxable period, but remaining unpaid during the period of taxation, the evidence shows without dispute that the loans have a situs for ad valorem taxation in the county in question where the loan business was conducted, so that to tax them in such county will not violate the due process clause of either the state or federal Constitution. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Suttles, 201 Ga. 84, 38 S.E.2d 786, 1946 Ga. LEXIS 355 (1946).

Taxation of domesticated foreign corporation's intangibles that acquired business situs outside state, and on which the corporation had paid franchise taxes out of state, did not violate due process clauses of state and federal Constitutions. National Linen Serv. Corp. v. Thompson, 103 Ga. App. 786, 120 S.E.2d 779, 1961 Ga. App. LEXIS 1060 (1961).

Excise tax on wines and malt beverages. — Act imposing excise tax on wines and malt beverages was within the state's authority to determine conditions upon which liquor can come into its territory and what will be done with it after it gets there, and other alleged discriminatory provisions of the act were outside the pale of protection of the due process and equal protection clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 14 and the commerce clause of the federal Constitution by reason of the U.S. Const., amend. 21, thereof. Capitol Distrib. Co. v. Redwine, 206 Ga. 477, 57 S.E.2d 578, 1950 Ga. LEXIS 494 (1950).

Provision for taxpayer's affidavit of illegality to tax execution and hearing comports with due process. — Former Code 1933, § 92-7301 (see O.C.G.A. § 48-3-1), which provides that a taxpayer may tender an affidavit of illegality when any writ of execution for payment of taxes is issued and provides for a hearing in order to determine whether the tax is legally due, is not violative of the due process clause of the state Constitution or of the Constitution of the United States. Hicks v. Stewart Oil Co., 182 Ga. 654, 186 S.E. 802, 1936 Ga. LEXIS 531 (1936).

The state could not hold out what plainly appeared to be a "clear and certain" postdeprivation remedy and then declare, only after the disputed taxes had been paid, that no such remedy existed. Reich v. Collins, 513 U.S. 106, 115 S. Ct. 547, 130 L. Ed. 2d 454, 1994 U.S. LEXIS 8789 (1994).

Apportionment of property tax. — Since the bus company submitted evidence that some of its buses had acquired a tax situs in a state other than Georgia, the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment to the United States Constitution required that Georgia's ad valorem tax on property engaged in interstate commerce, such as the bus company's buses, be apportioned; accordingly, the bus company was entitled to have the ad valorem tax assessed on its bus fleet apportioned. Fulton County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Harmon Bros. Charter Serv., 261 Ga. App. 534, 583 S.E.2d 179, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 689 (2003).

7. Zoning

Local government zoning power exercisable through different ordinances at different times affecting different areas. — Municipalities and counties which have had conferred upon them the power to zone property cannot always at one and the same time enact such a comprehensive scheme of zoning and planning as will particularly describe and embrace every piece of property by metes and bounds in the entire area of the county or municipality; but when reasonably and fairly done, such power may be exercised by the enactment of different ordinances affecting different areas at different times. Taylor v. Shetzen, 212 Ga. 101, 90 S.E.2d 572, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 561 (1955).

Zoning is subject to constitutional prohibition against taking private property without just compensation. Barrett v. Hamby, 235 Ga. 262, 219 S.E.2d 399, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 850 (1975).

Zoning statute is not per se unconstitutional because it deprives owner of property. — Zoning statute is not per se unconstitutional and void because it deprives owner of property without due process of law because the Legislature is constitutionally invested with authority to empower cities to pass zoning laws. Matthews v. Fayette County, 233 Ga. 220, 210 S.E.2d 758, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 723 (1974).

Unlawful confiscation. — For unlawful confiscation to occur, requiring that the zoning be voided, it is not necessary that the property be totally useless for the purposes classified. Where the damage to the owner is significant and is not justified by the benefit to the public, the zoning must be voided. Barrett v. Hamby, 235 Ga. 262, 219 S.E.2d 399, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 850 (1975).

If the zoning regulation results in relatively little gain or benefit to the public while inflicting serious injury or loss on the owner, the regulation is confiscatory and void. Barrett v. Hamby, 235 Ga. 262, 219 S.E.2d 399, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 850 (1975).

Application of zoning ordinance unreasonable where change of circumstances since passage. — Evidence as to change of condition and circumstances since passage in 1939 of ordinance zoning defendants' property for residential and agricultural purposes because of uses of the property adjacent to or near the defendants' property, was sufficient to warrant conclusion that to apply the provisions of the ordinance of 1939 to the property of the defendants would render such ordinance arbitrary and unreasonable. Humthlett v. Reeves, 212 Ga. 8, 90 S.E.2d 14, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1955).

Determining validity of city zoning ordinance. — Validity of city zoning ordinance depends upon facts existing at the time validity is questioned, and confiscatory character of the ordinance can be proven by conditions then existing. Humthlett v. Reeves, 212 Ga. 8, 90 S.E.2d 14, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1955).

Claim not ripe for adjudication. — Where plaintiffs brought an action against defendants in order to have a zoning ordinance struck as being a violation of plaintiffs' substantive due process rights and a violation of the taking clause of the fifth and Fourteenth Amendments, but the plaintiffs failed to pursue their remedy under state law for a claim of inverse condemnation, their claim for taking without just compensation was not ripe for adjudication. Bernstein v. Holland, 657 F. Supp. 233, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2398 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

A zoning board's decision is not ripe for review under a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 analysis until plaintiffs can demonstrate that they have exhausted their state remedies, and where it appears that any procedural requirements that were not followed by the commission are reviewable in state court, before a federal court can hold that a deprivation of procedural due process has occurred, plaintiffs must demonstrate that the procedural safeguards set up by the zoning regulations themselves are futile or inadequate as a matter of law. East-Bibb Twiggs Neighborhood Ass'n v. Macon-Bibb Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 662 F. Supp. 1465, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5379 (M.D. Ga. 1987), but see, 896 F.2d 1267 (11th Cir. 1989).

Burden of proof on property owner. — Where it is claimed that a zoning ordinance is unreasonable as to a particular tract of property, or that a change of condition has rendered the ordinance unreasonable when applied to the particular property, the burden is on the owner of such property to produce sufficient evidence from which the court can make findings of fact and law such as would justify a holding as a matter of law that the ordinance is arbitrary and unreasonable; there must be a showing of an abuse of discretion on the part of the zoning authority, and that there has been an unreasonable and unwarranted exercise of the police power. Humthlett v. Reeves, 212 Ga. 8, 90 S.E.2d 14, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1955).

Court of equity justified in restraining enforcement because of particular unreasonable application. — A zoning ordinance may in its general aspects be valid, and yet, as to a particular state of facts involving a particular parcel of real estate, be so clearly arbitrary and unreasonable as to result in confiscation, thereby justifying the interposition of a court of equity to restrain its enforcement. Humthlett v. Reeves, 212 Ga. 8, 90 S.E.2d 14, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1955).

Exhaustion of state remedies as prerequisite to federal civil rights action. — So long as the state provides an adequate procedure for obtaining just compensation, the aggrieved landowner may not claim a denial of just compensation until he/she has exhausted the state procedures for compensation. The nature of the constitutional right, therefore, requires that a property owner first utilize procedures under state law for obtaining compensation before he/she can bring a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action. East-Bibb Twiggs Neighborhood Ass'n v. Macon-Bibb Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 662 F. Supp. 1465, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5379 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

Where application completely deprives owner of beneficial use of property, attack on validity of regulation sustained. — A zoning ordinance must not infringe the constitutional guarantees of national or state Constitutions by invading personal or property rights unnecessarily or unreasonably; and if the application of a zoning ordinance has the effect of completely depriving an owner of the beneficial use of the property by precluding all uses, or the only use to which it is reasonably adapted, an attack upon the validity of the regulation, as applied to the particular property involved, will be sustained. Humthlett v. Reeves, 212 Ga. 8, 90 S.E.2d 14, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1955).

Failure to scrutinize rezoning application. — Failure to scrutinize rezoning application in light of the character of the land in question and the impact of the zoning decision upon the property owner's rights amounts to a denial of due process. Sellers v. Cherokee County, 254 Ga. 496, 330 S.E.2d 882, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 807 (1985).

Circumstances under which zoning ordinances held invalid. — Circumstances under which zoning ordinances have been held invalid, as applied to certain specific property, fall into three general classes: (1) where a small parcel of property is zoned for residential purposes, when it is entirely surrounded by commercial or business enterprises; (2) where property zoned for residential use is entirely unsuited for residential purposes; or (3) where the purpose of the ordinance is not to protect the public health, safety, morals, or general welfare. Humthlett v. Reeves, 212 Ga. 8, 90 S.E.2d 14, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1955).

Single-family residential zoning held unconstitutional. — Evidence authorized superior court to rule that single-family residential zoning on certain property was unconstitutional. The location and the irregular size and shape of lots in light of set back and minimum yard requirements of the city code rendered construction of residential dwellings on the property unfeasible. City of Rome v. Pilgrim, 246 Ga. 281, 271 S.E.2d 189, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1081 (1980).

Churches subject to reasonable regulations. — Generally any zoning ordinance that absolutely excludes churches from a residential area is invalid under constitutional guarantees. Churches are, however, subject to reasonable regulation both referring to property in the zone generally and to churches specifically, provided the regulations are reasonable and contain some standards. Rogers v. Mayor of Atlanta, 110 Ga. App. 114, 137 S.E.2d 668, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 558 (1964).

County officials prohibited from denying building permit to public housing project meeting requirements. — Where a site is legitimately zoned for the construction of apartments, U.S. Const., amend. 14 prohibits county officials from denying a building permit to a public housing project meeting zoning requirements, since the county is prohibited from placing restrictions on the class of persons to be housed at a particular site. Crow v. Brown, 332 F. Supp. 382, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11748 (N.D. Ga. 1971), aff'd, 457 F.2d 788, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 10727 (5th Cir. 1972).

When denial of building permit not deprivation of owner's property. —

The denial of a permit to the owner of a residence lot to erect thereon a filling station, when the lot is located in a district zoned by ordinance exclusively for residences, apartments, churches, hospitals, schools, and hotels, is not a deprivation of the owner's property within the meaning of the due process clauses of the Constitution of this state and of U.S. Const., amend. 14, especially when a lot has been improved and used for residential purposes long before the passage of such ordinance. Howden v. Mayor of Savannah, 172 Ga. 833, 159 S.E. 401, 1931 Ga. LEXIS 221 (1931).

Basis for review of zoning classifications. — The only basis for judicial review of zoning classifications is where classification is arbitrary and unreasonable. Classification by zoning ordinance does not violate due process when it does not appear that all permitted uses are impossible. Riddle v. Waller, 127 Ga. App. 399, 193 S.E.2d 895, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 899 (1972).

Requirements of publication of notice of hearings not violative of due process. — Due process as required by the Constitution was not denied by the terms of Ga. L. 1952, p. 2731, a zoning statute requiring that notice of hearings be published in the county where the land affected lies and in newspapers wherein sheriff's sales are advertised instead of in the official organ of the municipality. Orr v. Hapeville Realty Co., 212 Ga. 649, 94 S.E.2d 682, 1956 Ga. LEXIS 481 (1956).

Notice of hearing required on rezoning matter before county governing authority. — A party must have due and legal notice of the hearing on the matter of rezoning before the county governing authority, the body which can rezone land and thereby deprive a party of that party's property rights. F.P. Plaza, Inc. v. Waite, 230 Ga. 161, 196 S.E.2d 141, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 844, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 825, 94 S. Ct. 129, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 354 (1973).

County's refusal to rezone property from residential to commercial use. — County board's refusal to rezone property from residential to commercial use did not violate substantive due process, where the board's action was rationally related to legitimate state concerns and was not arbitrary and capricious. Habersham at Northridge v. Fulton County, 632 F. Supp. 815, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17441 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 791 F.2d 170, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 25038 (11th Cir. 1986).

Notice by publication proper and adequate. — Notice by publication of a rezoning hearing to be held by a governing authority of a county is proper and adequate insofar as the requirements of procedural due process and equal protection are concerned. F.P. Plaza, Inc. v. Waite, 230 Ga. 161, 196 S.E.2d 141, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 844, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 825, 94 S. Ct. 129, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 354 (1973); DeKalb County v. Pine Hill Civic Club, 254 Ga. 20, 326 S.E.2d 214, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 795 (1985).

Notice not required for preliminary hearing before planning commission. — Defective notice or lack of notice of the preliminary hearing before the planning commission, which cannot rezone property so as to deprive a party of that party's property rights, is not violative of procedural due process or equal protection. F.P. Plaza, Inc. v. Waite, 230 Ga. 161, 196 S.E.2d 141, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 844, cert. denied, 414 U.S. 825, 94 S. Ct. 129, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 354 (1973).

Inverse condemnation claim for money damages. — The recent Supreme Court case of First Evangelical Lutheran Church v. County of Los Angeles, 482 U.S. 304, 107 S. Ct. 2378, 96 L. Ed. 2d 250 (1987), requires that the state recognize an inverse condemnation claim for money damages where a zoning regulation amounts to a taking. East-Bibb Twiggs Neighborhood Ass'n v. Macon-Bibb Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 662 F. Supp. 1465, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5379 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

Money damages for racially motivated conspiracy affecting property rights. — Where plaintiffs are not seeking just compensation for the zoning board's decision, nor are they seeking to have their procedural or substantive due process claims vindicated, but they seek money damages for defendants' interference with their property rights through an illegal conspiracy motivated by race, plaintiffs cannot be required to seek redress under the zoning regulations of this state because they are not attacking the propriety of these regulations. East-Bibb Twiggs Neighborhood Ass'n v. Macon-Bibb Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 662 F. Supp. 1465, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5379 (M.D. Ga. 1987), but see, 896 F.2d 1267 (11th Cir. 1989).

Limitation on number of animals per tract. — Where a zoning ordinance is applicable to residential districts containing large tracts, it is unconstitutionally unreasonable and irrational in limiting the number of animals per tract without taking into consideration the size of the tract. Avant v. Douglas County, 253 Ga. 225, 319 S.E.2d 442, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 872 (1984).

Ordinance requiring land lots at least one acre in size for the keeping of a Vietnamese pot-bellied pig as a domestic pet did not violate pig owner's substantive due process rights. City of Lilburn v. Sanchez, 268 Ga. 520, 491 S.E.2d 353, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 622 (1997).

Ordinance banning permit applications if two or more violations existed. — In a declaratory judgment action brought by a developer against a county seeking to invalidate an ordinance which required denial of the developer's land disturbance permit based on two soil-related ordinance violations existing, the judgment in favor of the developer was upheld on appeal with regard to the developer's claim for damages under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, for alleged violations of the developer's equal protection rights in the county's enforcement of the ordinance. The trial court properly determined that the developer was not required to prove a valid property right with regard to the developer's equal protection challenge; the trial court properly awarded attorney fees to the developer under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11 as the jury was authorized to award the attorney fees as an element of the damages it awarded on the developer's federal equal protection claim, regardless of whether the developer could prevail on any state law claim for damages; but the trial court erred by failing to address the merits of the developer's petition for a declaratory judgment since the overall enforceability of the ordinance, which was still the law, was not rendered moot by the withdrawal notice. Fulton County v. Legacy Inv. Group, LLC, 296 Ga. App. 822, 676 S.E.2d 388, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 332 (2009).

8. Pretrial Criminal Proceedings

All seizures of person governed by the fourteenth amendment. — U.S. Const., amend. 4 and U.S. Const., amend. 14's prohibition of searches and seizures not supported by objective justification governs all seizures of person, including seizures that involve only a brief detention short of traditional arrest. Reid v. Georgia, 448 U.S. 438, 100 S. Ct. 2752, 65 L. Ed. 2d 890, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 148 (1980).

An arrest and search, legal under federal law, is legal under state laws. State v. Wilson, 179 Ga. App. 334, 346 S.E.2d 111, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2618 (1986).

Discovery. — The amended discovery procedure of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq. does not violate due process as it imposes reciprocal discovery upon the state; any difference in the scope of mitigating evidence and the scope of non-statutory aggravating evidence is too minimal to be of constitutional significance on the question of reciprocity of discovery. Stinski v. State, 281 Ga. 783, 642 S.E.2d 1, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 128 (2007).

Investigating police officer may make reasonable inquiries for safety. — Police officer investigating unusual behavior can make reasonable inquiries to dispel reasonable fears for safety of the officer and others. Shy v. State, 234 Ga. 816, 218 S.E.2d 599, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1297 (1975).

Noncustodial defendant and field sobriety test. — Upon seeing the car in distress in a through-lane of traffic, a police officer was authorized to approach the car and make inquiry and, when the defendant admitted the defendant had been drinking and driving, the officer was authorized to conduct the field sobriety tests without giving Miranda warnings.

Coates v. State, 216 Ga. App. 93, 453 S.E.2d 35, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 1425 (1994).

Permissible police interrogation. — Single threshold inquiry of officer as to what is happening is not impermissible interrogation. Shy v. State, 234 Ga. 816, 218 S.E.2d 599, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1297 (1975).

Remedy for questionable police interrogation techniques. — Where the constitutional violation alleged is questionable police interrogation techniques, and the injury suffered is the possible inducement of potentially unreliable coerced or involuntary statements from witnesses subjected to these techniques, the appropriate remedy is the defendant's right to fully cross-examine any witnesses called at trial concerning their interrogations. Wilcox v. State, 250 Ga. 745, 301 S.E.2d 251, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1029 (1983).

Presenting defendant with choice of cooperation or prosecution. — Course of conduct employed by the federal government, which presented the defendant with the alternatives of cooperating with an investigation of local government officials or facing charges on which the defendant was plainly subject to prosecution, did not violate the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment. United States v. Wingo, 723 F. Supp. 798, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12415 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

When momentary detention and questioning permissible. — Momentary detention and questioning are permissible if based upon specific and articulable facts, which, taken together with rational inferences from those facts, justify a reasonable scope of inquiry not based on mere inclination, caprice or harassment. State v. Misuraca, 157 Ga. App. 361, 276 S.E.2d 679, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1821, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 846, 102 S. Ct. 163, 70 L. Ed. 2d 133, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 3444 (1981).

Curtailement of person's liberty by police requires at least reasonable, articulable suspicion of criminal activity. — While in some circumstances a person may be detained briefly, without probable cause to arrest that person, any curtailment of a person's liberty by the police must be supported at least by a reasonable and articulable suspicion that the person seized is engaged in criminal activity. Reid v. Georgia, 448 U.S. 438, 100 S. Ct. 2752, 65 L. Ed. 2d 890, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 148 (1980).

Defendant's mental condition not determinative of voluntariness of statements. — A defendant's mental condition, by itself and apart from its relation to official coercion, should never dispose of an inquiry into constitutional voluntariness of statements made to law enforcement officers. Wilson v. State, 257 Ga. 444, 359 S.E.2d 891, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 850 (1987).

Noncustodial, voluntary statement by defendant to officer making investigation at scene when not suspected is admissible. — A noncustodial, voluntary statement by the defendant to an officer simply making an on-the-scene investigation to find out what has happened, when the officer has no suspects, is always admissible against the maker without the maker's having been advised of the maker's rights against self-incrimination. Davis v. State, 135 Ga. App. 584, 218 S.E.2d 297, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1744 (1975).

Investigatory stop by armed officer. — Investigatory stop is not automatically arrest simply because officer is armed with shotgun. Franklin v. State, 143 Ga. App. 3, 237 S.E.2d 425, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2170 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 950, 98 S. Ct. 1575, 55 L. Ed. 2d 799, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 1347 (1978).

Electronic surveillance of suspect not in custody. — Rights to remain silent and to have assistance of counsel do not apply to electronic surveillance of suspect not in custody. Granese v. State, 232 Ga. 193, 206 S.E.2d 26, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 905 (1974); Christian v. State, 190 Ga. App. 667, 379 S.E.2d 807, 1989 Ga. App. LEXIS 374 (1989).

Delay in "investigative" stage. — Where delay occurs in "investigative" stage, before either arrest or indictment, due process standards apply, not U.S. Const., amend. 6 standards. State v. Hight, 156 Ga. App. 246, 274 S.E.2d 638, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3016 (1980).

Trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment on the ground that the more than 11-year delay between the rape and murder in November 2009 and defendant's arrest in March 2020 violated his right to due process because the record did not indicate that the delay was deliberate and designed to give the state a tactical advantage. Part of the delay was the result of the state's inaction, part of the delay was the result of the state's belief that it did not have probable cause to proceed, and part of the delay was caused by unknown reasons. Kimbro v. State, 317 Ga. 442, 893 S.E.2d 678, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 223 (2023).

No U.S. Const., amend. 4 violation absent state action in search context.

— Because U.S. Const., amend. 14, through which U.S. Const., amend. 4 applies to the state, requires state action, absent some state action in a search context there can be no U.S. Const., amend. 4 violation. State v. Young, 234 Ga. 488, 216 S.E.2d 586, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1173, cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1039, 96 S. Ct. 576, 46 L. Ed. 2d 413, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 3803 (1975).

Consent by subject of search not in custody. — When the subject of a search is not in custody and the state attempts to justify a search on the basis of his consent, U.S. Const., amend. 4 and U.S. Const., amend. 14 require that it demonstrate that the consent was in fact voluntarily given, and not the result of duress or coercion, express or implied. Brand v. State, 129 Ga. App. 747, 201 S.E.2d 180, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1135 (1973).

Determination of voluntariness of consent to search. — Voluntariness of consent to search by police officer is question of fact to be determined from all circumstances, and while the subject's knowledge of a right to refuse is a factor to be taken into account, the prosecution is not required to demonstrate such knowledge as a prerequisite to establishing a voluntary consent. Brand v. State, 129 Ga. App. 747, 201 S.E.2d 180, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1135 (1973).

Evidence voluntarily produced from body cavity. — Because a small piece of plastic containing cocaine residue was produced by the defendant from a body cavity in acquiescence to a search warrant for her person while she was in lawful detention, the evidence was admissible. Scott v. State, 216 Ga. App. 692, 455 S.E.2d 609, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 249 (1995).

Chemical blood testing. — Georgia Supreme Court has held that O.C.G.A. § 40-5-55(a) is unconstitutional to the extent it requires chemical testing of the driver of a vehicle involved in a traffic accident resulting in serious injuries or death as it violates the fourth and Fourteenth Amendments of the Constitution of the United States because it authorizes a search and seizure without probable cause; thus, where testing is conducted based upon the seriousness of injuries in an accident, rather than upon probable cause that the person has violated O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391, the results are inadmissible. Buchanan v. State, 264 Ga. App. 148, 589 S.E.2d 876, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1431 (2003).

Trial judge to determine reasonableness of search. — In first instance reasonableness of search is question for trial judge to determine. Croker v. State, 114 Ga. App. 43, 150 S.E.2d 294, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 652 (1966).

To show probable cause for search and seizure it is not necessary that the arresting officer should have had before the officer legal evidence of the suspected illegal act. Croker v. State, 114 Ga. App. 43, 150 S.E.2d 294, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 652 (1966).

Legal search may be incident to lawful arrest or by consent of owner of premises or property. Abrams v. State, 223 Ga. 216, 154 S.E.2d 443, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 471 (1967).

Seizure of instrumentalities used in commission of crime. — Instrumentalities used in commission of crime may be seized at time of arrest without search warrant. Abrams v. State, 223 Ga. 216, 154 S.E.2d 443, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 471 (1967).

Objects that may be seized depends on nature of offense. — Nature of offense for which accused is arrested has important bearing upon what objects may be seized as incidental to the arrest. Abrams v. State, 223 Ga. 216, 154 S.E.2d 443, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 471 (1967).

Police justified, in exigent circumstances, to enter premises and conduct reasonable search. — In exigent circumstances, police officers are authorized, pursuant to a lawful arrest, to enter upon the premises and conduct a reasonable search of the suspect's person and immediate presence, including a search under a piece of furniture where the suspect is observed reaching for or disposing of an unknown object, which might reasonably be thought to be either a weapon or evidence. Dennis v. State, 166 Ga. App. 715, 305 S.E.2d 443, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3266 (1983).

In order to qualify as "person aggrieved by unlawful search and seizure" one must have been a victim of a search or seizure, one against whom the search was directed, as distinguished from one who claims prejudice only through the use of evidence gathered as a consequence of a search or seizure directed at someone else. Wood v. State, 224 Ga. 121, 160 S.E.2d 368, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 685 (1968).

Mere visitor without standing to object to search. — A person has no standing to object to a search of the premises, and particularly a limited one, where the person is a mere visitor (although a frequent one) since the person has no expectation of privacy in the premises of another, where the person has neither a proprietary nor a possessory interest. Dennis v. State, 166 Ga. App. 715, 305 S.E.2d 443, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3266 (1983).

Temporary detention of visitors. — It was reasonable under the fourth and Fourteenth Amendments for a police officer, knowing that certain persons and premises were the subject of the immediate execution of a search warrant, to detain temporarily a vehicle containing occupants who just departed the premises to see if one of them was a person named in the warrant. Fritz v. State, 225 Ga. App. 642, 484 S.E.2d 743, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 464 (1997).

Object seen lying in "plain view" admissible. — If a police officer has a right to be in the position from which an object is seen lying in "plain view," the object is admissible as evidence. Dennis v. State, 166 Ga. App. 715, 305 S.E.2d 443, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3266 (1983).

Seizure of gun located inside the passenger compartment of car in which appellant had been a passenger just before being arrested was not violative of fourth and fourteenth amendment rights. State v. Hopkins, 163 Ga. App. 141, 293 S.E.2d 529, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3190 (1982).

Abandoned property. — The constitutional protection of the fourth and Fourteenth Amendments does not apply to property which has been abandoned. Ramsey v. State, 183 Ga. App. 48, 357 S.E.2d 869, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 1869 (1987), cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905.

Judicial determination of probable cause. — The Constitution at a minimum apparently requires the imposition of a neutral, detached magistrate in the procedure to make an independent judicial determination of probable cause prior to issuing an arrest warrant or some other warrant authorizing the seizure of allegedly obscene material to be used as evidence. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 20758 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2411 (1980).

Prior restraint presumed unconstitutional. — There is strong presumption against constitutional validity of system of prior restraint. Penthouse Int'l, Ltd. v. McAuliffe, 610 F.2d 1353, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 20758 (5th Cir.), cert. dismissed, 447 U.S. 931, 100 S. Ct. 3031, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1131, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2411 (1980).

Standard for obtaining search warrant same as under U.S. Const., amend. 4. — Proscriptions of U.S. Const., amend. 4 are enforced against the states through U.S. Const., amend. 14, and the standard for obtaining a search warrant is the same under the two amendments. Carson v. State ex rel. Price, 221 Ga. 299, 144 S.E.2d 384, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 441 (1965).

Warrant issued by justice with pecuniary interest in issuing warrant. — Issuance of search warrant by justice of the peace with pecuniary interest in issuing warrant effects violation of the protections afforded by U.S. Const., amend. 4 and U.S. Const., amend. 14. Connally v. Georgia, 429 U.S. 245, 97 S. Ct. 546, 50 L. Ed. 2d 444, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 27 (1977).

Issuance of search warrant by justice of peace effected violation of protections afforded by U.S. Const., amend. 14. State v. Patterson, 143 Ga. App. 225, 237 S.E.2d 707, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2261 (1977).

Warrant issued by court clerk or deputy as violating due process. — Seizure of defendant pursuant to warrant issued by court clerk or deputy is flagrant violation of due process. Roberts v. Macaulay, 232 Ga. 660, 208 S.E.2d 478, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 1047 (1974).

Sufficiency of hearsay tip of reliable informer as basis of warrant, search, or seizure. — If the hearsay tip of a reliable informer on which a warrant is based does not sufficiently state the underlying circumstances from which the informant had concluded the defendants were violating the law, or does not sufficiently detail the informer's activities, but is relying on mere casual rumor or general reputation, a warrant, search or seizure based thereon is illegal. Register v. State, 124 Ga. App. 136, 183 S.E.2d 68, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 844 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 919, 92 S. Ct. 947, 30 L. Ed. 2d 790, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 3633 (1972).

Under "fruit of the poisoned tree" doctrine, search must fall if original arrest invalid. Marshall v. State, 130 Ga. App. 572, 203 S.E.2d 885, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1180 (1974).

Seizure of person by policeman. — Whenever police officer accosts an individual and restrains that individual's freedom to walk away, the officer has "seized" that person. Franklin v. State, 143 Ga. App. 3, 237 S.E.2d 425, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2170 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 950, 98 S. Ct. 1575, 55 L. Ed. 2d 799, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 1347 (1978).

Seizure is not unreasonable simply because police have taken precaution to arm themselves in light of unknown danger. Franklin v. State, 143 Ga. App. 3, 237 S.E.2d 425, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2170 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 950, 98 S. Ct. 1575, 55 L. Ed. 2d 799, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 1347 (1978).

Due Process (Cont'd)8. Pretrial Criminal*Proceedings (Cont'd)

Causal connection between illegal arrest and confession must be attenuated, or statements unusable. — There is no per se rule that Miranda warnings in and of themselves suffice to cure a fourth amendment violation involved in obtaining inculpatory statements during custodial interrogation following a formal arrest on less than probable cause. In order to use such statements, the prosecution must show not only that the statements meet fifth amendment requirements (voluntariness), but also that the causal connection between the statements and the illegal arrest is sufficiently attenuated so as to purge the primary taint of the illegal arrest in light of the distinct policies and interests of the fourth amendment. Robinson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 741, 305 S.E.2d 381, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3272 (1983).

Where suspect interrogated from time of illegal arrest until confession, confession inadmissible. — Where the causal connection between an illegal arrest and a confession is not broken by any intervening events, but a suspect is interrogated from the time of the suspect's arrival until the suspect confesses a short time later, the trial court errs by admitting the confession into evidence, and a conviction based solely on the confession cannot stand. Robinson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 741, 305 S.E.2d 381, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3272 (1983).

Confession after break in custody upheld. — Where there was a 21-month break in custody between the initial interrogation of defendant, at which time the defendant expressed the defendant's desire to speak only through counsel, and the final interrogation, at which time the defendant confessed, there was no violation of the defendant's fifth and fourteenth amendment rights. State v. Bymes, 258 Ga. 813, 375 S.E.2d 41, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 32 (1989).

Preseizure notice and hearing not required. — Preseizure notice and hearing is not required when seizure serves significant governmental purpose in asserting in rem jurisdiction over property to prevent its continued illicit possession and to enforce criminal sanctions. Blackmon v. Brotherhood Protective Order of Elks, Toccoa Lodge No. 1820, 232 Ga. 671, 208 S.E.2d 483, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 1050 (1974).

Adversary hearing not required with sale of pornography. — No adversary hearing prior to institution of criminal action is necessary where sale of alleged pornography. Gornto v. McDougall, 336 F. Supp. 1372, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15321 (S.D. Ga. 1972).

Constitutional protection not applicable to abandoned property. — Constitutional protection under U.S. Const., amend. 4 and U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not apply to property which has been abandoned. The issue of abandonment vel non of the property is a factual issue to be resolved by the trier of fact. Vines v. State, 142 Ga. App. 616, 237 S.E.2d 17, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 1422 (1977).

Defendant not on trial during grand jury proceedings. — The court does not err in refusing to allow defendant or his counsel to appear before the grand jury to present evidence and to cross-examine witnesses. The defendant is not on trial at this stage of the proceedings and therefore this refusal denies the defendant neither the right of confrontation, nor equal protection of the laws. Jackson v. State, 225 Ga. 790, 171 S.E.2d 501, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 647 (1969), rev'd, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S. Ct. 2726, 33 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1972).

State not required to use grand jury to bring actions. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not require state to use grand jury to bring criminal charges against persons. Allen v. State, 110 Ga. App. 56, 137 S.E.2d 711, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 546 (1964).

Purpose of committal hearing. — Purpose of committal hearing is simply to determine whether there is probable cause to believe the accused guilty of the crime charged, and if so, to bind him over for indictment by the grand jury. Douglas v. State, 132 Ga. App. 694, 209 S.E.2d 114, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1790 (1974).

Determination of probable cause does not rest upon technical framework but on factual and practical considerations of everyday life on which reasonable and prudent men, not legal technicians, act. Daye v. City of Albany, 496 F. Supp. 1227, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15367 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Once indictment has been returned, necessity for committal hearing has been eliminated. Douglas v. State, 132 Ga. App. 694, 209 S.E.2d 114, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1790 (1974).

Holding of commitment hearing is not requisite to trial for commission of felony. Douglas v. State, 132 Ga. App. 694, 209 S.E.2d 114, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1790 (1974).

A preliminary hearing is not a required step in a felony prosecution and once an indictment is obtained there is no judicial oversight or review of the decision to prosecute because of any failure to hold a commitment hearing. Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 168, 276 S.E.2d 852, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1756 (1981).

Failure to hold commitment hearings. — Although the commitment hearing is a “critical stage” of criminal procedure entitling a defendant to counsel, failure to hold such a hearing does not constitute a deprivation of a defendant’s constitutional rights. State v. Godfrey, 204 Ga. App. 58, 418 S.E.2d 383, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 677 (1992), cert. denied, No. S92C1011, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 495 (Ga. June 10, 1992).

Alleged loss of discovery occasioned by failure to conduct commitment hearing is not legally recognizable basis for reversal. Williams v. State, 157 Ga. App. 168, 276 S.E.2d 852, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1756 (1981).

Defendant’s absence from a pretrial conference did not thwart a fair and just hearing where there was acquiescence in the court’s ruling and the hearing involved only questions of law. Riley v. State, 180 Ga. App. 409, 349 S.E.2d 274, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2720 (1986).

When omission of hearing harmless. — Since the purpose of the commitment hearing is to determine whether there is probable cause to hold the accused for trial the subsequent indictment, trial and conviction of the accused render the omission of the hearing harmless. Douglas

v. State, 132 Ga. App. 694, 209 S.E.2d 114, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1790 (1974).

Where a post-arrest preindictment delay occurs in an investigative stage before arrest or indictment, due process standards apply, not U.S. Const., amend. 6 standards. Haisman v. State, 242 Ga. 896, 252 S.E.2d 397, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 766 (1979).

Delay of arrest following investigation. — Where investigating officer delays arrest following investigation because lacking sufficient information, no due process violation appears. Glenn v. State, 144 Ga. App. 557, 241 S.E.2d 447, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 1682 (1978).

Delay of five years between when defendant was first identified as the possible third occupant of a murder victim’s car, at which time a previously unmatched print was lifted from the victim’s car, and when defendant was indicted and arrested did not violate due process; defendant had shown at most that the delay was the result of the state’s decision to conduct further investigation and to obtain additional evidence, and a delay occasioned by the ongoing investigation of a case did not rise to the level of a due process violation. Roebuck v. State, 277 Ga. 200, 586 S.E.2d 651, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 795 (2003).

Police may not delay arrest of suspect as subterfuge to coerce suspect into self incrimination. Shy v. State, 234 Ga. 816, 218 S.E.2d 599, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1297 (1975).

When due process requires dismissal for prearrest or preindictment delay. — Dismissal is required for prearrest or preindictment delay under due process clause when it is shown that the delay caused actual substantial prejudice to defendant’s right to a fair trial and, that it was an intentional device to gain a tactical advantage. Hammond v. State, 157 Ga. App. 647, 278 S.E.2d 188, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1951 (1981).

Delay in arrest insufficient to warrant dismissal. — Where error was asserted because the trial court refused to grant the defendant’s motion to dismiss the defendant’s indictment made on the grounds of a violation of due process because there was a fifty-five day delay between the commission of the offense and the defendant's arrest, and it was argued that because of the delay the defendant could not remember the date of the alleged offense for which the defendant might have been able to provide an alibi defense, this was held not enough in itself to justify dismissing the indictment. Croom v. State, 165 Ga. App. 676, 302 S.E.2d 598, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3178 (1983).

Defendant, who was arrested and indicted in 2005 for a murder that occurred in 1987, had not shown that the delay between the time of the crime and the time of the defendant's arrest violated due process; in a murder case, any prejudice resulting merely from the passage of time could not create the requisite prejudice, and the defendant had not shown that the state acted deliberately to gain a tactical advantage. Manley v. State, 281 Ga. 466, 640 S.E.2d 9, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 10 (2007).

Defendant alleged a four-year delay between a murder and the defendant's indictment for the delay was due to the state's intent to await the defendant's convictions for other robberies and use them as "other crimes" evidence in the murder case. As the defendant relied exclusively on a hearsay document to substantiate this charge, and could not claim prejudice from an inability to call witnesses whose testimony would be inadmissible, the defendant failed to show that the defendant's due process rights under the fourteenth amendment were violated. Jones v. State, 284 Ga. 320, 667 S.E.2d 49, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 751 (2008).

Delaying medical treatment of pre-trial detainee not violation of rights.

— Jail officers did not violate the rights of a pre-trial detainee by delaying medical treatment for the detainee's bleeding cut for two and a half hours, or by failing to give the detainee the icepacks and aspirin prescribed by the doctor for pain upon the detainee's return to the jail. Aldridge v. Montgomery, 753 F.2d 970, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28160 (11th Cir. 1985).

Where defendant not deprived of constitutional right though date crime occurred different from date charged in indictment. — The defendant was not deprived of any constitutional right by reason of the fact that the indictment charged one date, whereas the crime actually occurred shortly before midnight on the day before, since no alibi evidence was offered, nor was any continuance requested on the ground of surprise that the evidence showed the commission of the crime on a date different from that shown in the indictment, and that additional time would be needed to procure alibi testimony to account for the appellant's whereabouts on that date. Carmichael v. State, 228 Ga. 834, 188 S.E.2d 495, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 926 (1972).

The substitution of accusation for indictment.

— The substitution of accusation for specific felonies enumerated in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-70.1 does not violate due process since statutory procedures exist to safeguard against criminal prosecution without probable cause, and to further protect all defendants equally, whether indicted or formally accused. Lamberson v. State, 265 Ga. 764, 462 S.E.2d 706, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 850 (1995).

Where without arrest warrant, law enforcement officer may not arrest unless probable cause.

— Where an arrest warrant has not been issued, a law enforcement officer may not arrest a person unless he has probable cause to believe the person had committed or was committing a crime. Daye v. City of Albany, 496 F. Supp. 1227, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15367 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Warrantless arrest justified where reasonable information that accused charged with serious crime.

— O.C.G.A. § 17-13-34, which authorizes a warrantless arrest by officers in this state upon reasonable information that an accused is charged in the courts of a state with a crime punishable by death or imprisonment for more than a year, is justified under the fourth, fifth, and Fourteenth Amendments, in that it is based upon a standard which comports with the constitutional standard of probable cause as set forth in Beck v. Ohio, 379 U.S. 89, 85 S. Ct. 223, 13 L. Ed. 2d 142 (1964). Ledesma v. State, 251 Ga. 487, 306 S.E.2d 629, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 797 (1983), cert. denied, 464 U.S. 1069, 104 S.

Ct. 975, 79 L. Ed. 2d 213, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 771 (1984).

Probable cause for warrantless arrest of drug suspect at airport. — Because the defendant exhibited suspicious “leg bulges” when the defendant exited the plane from Miami, a known source city for the distribution of drugs, which “leg bulges” attracted the immediate attention of two agents of the Federal Drug Enforcement Administration, appellant was placed under surveillance by both agents and was subsequently confronted, questioned, arrested, and searched by one of them, the defendant’s false response to the inquiry about the objects in the defendant’s boots, coupled with the agents’ observation and experience, provided the probable cause required for the defendant’s warrantless arrest. Accordingly, the search incident to that arrest was not violative of the fourth and Fourteenth Amendments, and the fruits of that search were properly considered by the trial court in convicting the defendant of trafficking in cocaine. Miller v. State, 183 Ga. App. 702, 359 S.E.2d 683, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2732 (1987), cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905.

Probable cause exists if the facts and circumstances within the enforcement officers’ knowledge and of which they had reasonably trustworthy information were sufficient to warrant a prudent person in believing that the person had committed or was committing an offense. Daye v. City of Albany, 496 F. Supp. 1227, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15367 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

No right to discover state evidence before trial. — A defendant does not, as a matter of right, have the right to discover from a district attorney or other prosecuting officer of the state evidence, documentary or otherwise, for use by the defendant or defense counsel before trial. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

Absent showing evidence requested is materially favorable to accused, pretrial discovery not required. — Pretrial discovery in favor of defendants is not required by considerations of due process in the absence of a showing that the evidence denied disclosure of by the prosecution upon request was materially favorable to the accused either as direct or impeaching evidence. Quaid v. State, 132 Ga. App. 478, 208 S.E.2d 336, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1724 (1974); Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

There is no general constitutional right to discovery in a criminal case, nor is there any Georgia statute or rule of practice which requires the state to open its files to a defendant’s attorney; it is only when the omitted evidence creates a reasonable doubt that did not otherwise exist, that constitutional error has been committed. This means that the omission must be evaluated in the context of the entire record. If there is no reasonable doubt about guilt whether or not the additional evidence is considered, there is no justification for a new trial. Houston v. State, 187 Ga. App. 335, 370 S.E.2d 178, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 679 (1988).

Failure to produce information not in prosecutor’s file not unconstitutional. — Defendant in criminal prosecution for delivery of cocaine was not denied due process of law because the state failed to produce the name and address of an individual identified in the records who defendant claimed was a third party in scheme to set defendant up, where prosecution’s file did not contain information pertaining to such person and the record did not support defendant’s factual assertions. Upshaw v. State, 172 Ga. App. 671, 324 S.E.2d 529, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 3079 (1984).

Prosecution’s suppression of favorable material evidence violates due process. — The suppression by the prosecution of evidence favorable to an accused upon request violates due process where the evidence is material either to guilty or to punishment, irrespective of the good faith or bad faith of the prosecution. Emmett v. Ricketts, 397 F. Supp. 1025, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11860 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Because the state’s suppression of exculpatory statements in violation of Brady was more than sufficient to place the outcome of an inmate’s trial in doubt, amounting to a denial of the inmate's fourteenth amendment due process rights, and the state's failure to produce the inmate's own statement provided the state with the opportunity to argue strenuously and virtually without contradiction that the inmate did not tell police about any alibi witness, but simply fabricated the defense prior to trial, the violation made the state's case much stronger than the full facts would have suggested, and based on such suppression, the trial did not produce a verdict worthy of confidence; hence, the inmate was properly granted habeas relief. Walker v. Johnson, 282 Ga. 168, 646 S.E.2d 44, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 349 (2007).

Prosecutorial duty to disclose information. — In a prosecution for aggravated assault, failure of the prosecution to disclose the victim's pre-trial oral unrecorded statement which, at best, admitted indirectly of the bare possibility that the victim was shot earlier than the victim testified by someone other than the actor identified by the victim under oath, was not a violation of Brady v. Maryland. Belins v. State, 210 Ga. App. 259, 435 S.E.2d 675, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1140 (1993), cert. denied, No. S94C0029, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 1138 (Ga. Dec. 3, 1993).

Detectives had no affirmative duty to make the district attorney aware of an exculpatory lab report, where there was no evidence two of the detectives ever saw the report, or had a clearly established duty to ferret it out, and where the third detective did receive the report, but it was not clearly established that the detective was required to turn over exculpatory evidence to a prosecutor since the detective had reason to believe that the prosecutor already had the evidence. Kelly v. Curtis, 21 F.3d 1544, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 14292 (11th Cir. 1994).

Prosecutorial duty to disclose exculpatory evidence to defense may not be discharged by dumping voluminous mass of files, tapes and documentary evidence on a trial judge. The prosecutor retains the constitutional obligation of initially screening the materials before him and handing over to the defense those items to which the defense is unquestionably entitled. Emmett v. Ricketts, 397 F. Supp. 1025, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11860 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Discovery of computer hard drive evidence in child pornography case.

— Defendant who was charged with child pornography did not suffer a due process violation due to the U.S. Attorney's office not responding to letters seeking assurance that defendant's expert would not be prosecuted under federal pornography laws for examining defendant's computer hard drive; the trial court ordered that the expert be provided with a copy of defendant's computer hard drive, and the trial court's order requiring written assurances from United States Attorneys of nonprosecution of the expert for any potential violations of federal child pornography statutes exceeded the trial court's authority. The trial court's finding that O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4(a)(3)(B) was unconstitutional as applied to the defendant because it deprived the defendant of due process rights was not challenged by the state on appeal. Morris v. State, 324 Ga. App. 756, 751 S.E.2d 551, 2013 Ga. App. LEXIS 932 (2013), cert. denied, No. S14C0462, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 273 (Ga. Mar. 28, 2014).

Failure of officer to preserve evidence.

— Defendant's due process rights were not violated by the failure of the investigating officer to preserve the physical evidence of a child molestation as defendant failed to show that the officer's failure to preserve the evidence was in bad faith. Ingram v. State, 262 Ga. App. 304, 585 S.E.2d 211, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 914 (2003).

Medical expert investigator's notes from homicide scene were not a "written scientific report" within the purview of § 17-7-211 and did not have to be furnished to defendant upon the latter's request. Pierce v. State, 209 Ga. App. 366, 433 S.E.2d 641, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 883 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C1648, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 962 (Ga. Oct. 12, 1993).

Failure to take arrestee before magistrate not constitutional issue.

— Though former Code 1933, § 27-210 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-4-26) requires that an officer arresting under a warrant bring the person arrested before a committing officer within 72 hours after arrest, failure to take an arrestee before a magistrate is not a federal constitutional issue. Stephenson v. Gaskins, 539 F.2d 1066, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 6857 (5th Cir. 1976).

Violation of due process of law in conducting confrontation depends on totality of surrounding circumstances. Baier v. State, 124 Ga. App. 334, 183 S.E.2d 622, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 913 (1971).

Identification procedure requires state action for application of fourteenth amendment. — For fourteenth amendment to come into play in identification procedure, state action must be involved. Lyons v. State, 247 Ga. 465, 277 S.E.2d 244, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 752 (1981).

In order for U.S. Const., amend. 14 to come into play in an identification procedure, state action must be involved. Duck v. State, 250 Ga. 592, 300 S.E.2d 121, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1010 (1983).

Lineups required to be fundamentally fair, not overly suggestive. — Without regard to the right to counsel, lineups must meet due process standards of fundamental fairness. Specifically, lineups must not be arranged in such a manner as to be overly suggestive as to the person actually pointed out by the witness or victim. Lumpkin v. Smith, 309 F. Supp. 1325, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12841 (N.D. Ga. 1970), rev'd, 439 F.2d 1084, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 11311 (5th Cir. 1971).

In determining whether lineup was impermissibly suggestive, decisive question is whether identifications were reliable under totality of circumstances. Thornton v. State, 238 Ga. 160, 231 S.E.2d 729, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 940 (1977).

Lineup not impermissibly suggestive. — Where the record showed that, as to both lineups, the other participants were all of approximately the same height, size, race, and age of the defendant, the fact that the defendant was one of only two men over six feet tall in one lineup and one of only three men over six feet tall in the other lineup did not make the lineups impermissibly suggestive. Bennett v. State, 186 Ga. App. 832, 368

S.E.2d 789, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 512 (1988).

Because an armed robbery victim viewed 11 photographs of males of the same race, and appearances similar to defendant, the victim did not know the defendant's name and did not turn the photographs over, and the victim identified the defendant as the perpetrator after looking at the photographs for about five minutes, it cannot be said that the photographic lineup was impermissibly suggestive. Wright v. State, 187 Ga. App. 311, 370 S.E.2d 160, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 698 (1988).

A photographic lineup where the defendant was the only person wearing a hooded sweatshirt was not impermissibly suggestive because there was no evidence that the perpetrator had been wearing a hooded sweatshirt. Cooper v. State, 281 Ga. 760, 642 S.E.2d 817, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 245 (2007).

Test of validity of identification is whether the identification confrontation staged by the law enforcement authorities, judged by the totality of the circumstances surrounding it, is so unnecessarily suggestive and conducive to irreparable mistaken identification as to constitute a denial of due process of law. Moye v. State, 122 Ga. App. 14, 176 S.E.2d 180, 1970 Ga. App. LEXIS 762 (1970).

Test of photographic array procedure for witnesses to try to identify the criminal suspect is whether the procedure was so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. A photographic array can be suggestive when used close in time to a lineup. Thornton v. State, 238 Ga. 160, 231 S.E.2d 729, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 940 (1977).

Photo array not impermissibly suggestive. — Photographic lineup was not impermissibly suggestive even though the defendant was the only suspect who was thin and had red hair as three of the six photographs were of suspects with red hair, the officer did not suggest to the witnesses that the defendant was the perpetrator, but simply read the standard form to them and asked them to look at the pictures, all of the suspects pictured were approximately the same age, the witnesses identified the defendant immediately when shown the lineup, and the witnesses both identified the defendant at trial. Standfill v. State, 267 Ga. App. 612, 600 S.E.2d 695, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 731 (2004).

Photographic lineup was not impermissibly suggestive because the defendant was the only one pictured with an open mouth, revealing gold teeth, and the victim had identified the perpetrator as having bottom gold teeth. It was not readily apparent that the defendant's top teeth, the only ones visible, were gold, and apart from the defendant's mouth being open slightly, the lineup depicted people with similar skin color, hair, and overall appearance. Varner v. State, 297 Ga. App. 799, 678 S.E.2d 515, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 549 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1545, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 588 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2009).

Where photographic identification procedure impermissibly suggestive.

— Where the suspect is already in custody for other reasons, and only three pictures are used for the witness to choose from, two of which depict the suspect, and one which has been altered in a manner which might suggest that it depicted the suspect, the photographic identification procedure is so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. Baier v. State, 124 Ga. App. 334, 183 S.E.2d 622, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 913 (1971).

“One on one” confrontation between eyewitness and suspect was not violation of due process. Davis v. State, 233 Ga. 847, 213 S.E.2d 695, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1462 (1975).

In-court identification outweighing other identification procedures.

— It was not necessary to decide whether the identification procedure was impermissibly suggestive, since the witness's in-court identification was based on the witness's opportunity to observe the defendant at the time of the murder, rather than on the photographic display. Baty v. State, 257 Ga. 371, 359 S.E.2d 655, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 848 (1987).

Even if pretrial identification is tainted, in-court identification is not constitutionally inadmissible if it does not depend upon the prior identification but has an independent origin. A witness's identification of the defendant had such an independent origin where he observed defendant at the scene, evidenced by the fact that the witness's composite sketch, made only three hours after the offense was committed, was almost identical to the defendant's photograph, shown to witness a week later. Selbo v. State, 186 Ga. App. 779, 368 S.E.2d 548, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 516 (1988).

Factors as to reliability of in-court identification.

— Where suggestive pretrial confrontations may have created a substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification at trial, the core question is whether, under the totality of the circumstances, the in-court identification was reliable. The factors to be weighed in arriving at the ultimate conclusion are: (1) the opportunity of the witness to view the criminal at the time of the crime; (2) the witness's degree of attention; (3) the accuracy of the witness's prior description; (4) the level of certainty demonstrated by the witness at the confrontation; and (5) the length of time between the crime and the confrontation. Jones v. Newsome, 846 F.2d 62, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 7088 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 911, 109 S. Ct. 265, 102 L. Ed. 2d 253, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 4551 (1988).

Mere fact that police officer handed photographs to victim for identification did not render the photographic identification procedure impermissibly suggestive. Whitfield v. State, 176 Ga. App. 476, 336 S.E.2d 356, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2895 (1985).

Due process not denied if pretrial confrontation accidental and not arranged toward inevitable identification.

— If a pretrial confrontation is accidental and not so arranged by the authorities as to make a resulting identification virtually inevitable, there is no denial of due process, particularly where no identification is made to the authorities at the time of the confrontation. Moye v. State, 122 Ga. App. 14, 176 S.E.2d 180, 1970 Ga. App. LEXIS 762 (1970).

Provision against self-incrimination not applicable where defendant voluntarily submits for others identifying the defendant. — The essential element in the provision against self-incrimination is that no one shall be compelled to give evidence tending to incriminate oneself. The provision is not applicable where the defendant voluntarily submits oneself for the purpose of others identifying the defendant. Whipple v. State, 218 Ga. 198, 126 S.E.2d 744, 1962 Ga. LEXIS 465 (1962), cert. denied, 375 U.S. 960, 84 S. Ct. 446, 11 L. Ed. 2d 318, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 51 (1963).

Privilege against self-incrimination not violated by requiring suspect to verbalize specific words. — Requiring a suspect to verbalize specified words for identification purposes, whether or not the words used are the same as those allegedly used during the commission of the offense, does not violate the privilege against self-incrimination accorded the accused by the United States Constitution and the state's statutes and Constitution. Clark v. State, 166 Ga. App. 366, 304 S.E.2d 494, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2170 (1983).

Conviction based upon in-court identification following pretrial identification will be set aside on that ground only if the pretrial identification procedure was so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. Moye v. State, 122 Ga. App. 14, 176 S.E.2d 180, 1970 Ga. App. LEXIS 762 (1970).

Constitutional privileges against self-incrimination are applicable to post-arrest, pretrial police interrogation. Clark v. State, 237 Ga. 901, 230 S.E.2d 277, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1439 (1976).

Where the defendant claims as error the refusal to grant a severance, the defendant must make a clear showing of prejudice and a consequent denial of due process; it is insufficient to show a mere possibility that a separate trial would give the defendant a better chance of acquittal. Love v. State, 173 Ga. App. 85, 325 S.E.2d 449, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 3101 (1984), aff'd, 254 Ga. 697, 334 S.E.2d 173, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 829 (1985).

Court's comments during voir dire.

— Where, in ruling on a voir dire question, the trial court stated that "The defendant is the one that's injected race into the case. The state hasn't," and the defendant argued that the comment put a chill on the voir dire process, denying the defendant an opportunity to get a racially unbiased jury in denial of the defendant's due process rights, it was held that the record did not show either that the court's comment somehow abridged the scope or effectiveness of the defendant's voir dire questions or that the court's comment prejudiced the minds of the jurors against the defendant. Walker v. State, 258 Ga. 443, 370 S.E.2d 149, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 304 (1988), overruled in part, Carter v. State, 298 Ga. 867, 785 S.E.2d 274, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 257 (2016).

Ill defendant during voir dire and subsequent waiver of rights.

— Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying a defendant's motion for a new trial based on the defendant vomiting in front of the jury during voir dire when the trial was commenced after a two day delay that was granted to the defendant after indicating an illness prevented the defendant's presence at trial. The trial court properly found that the alleged ill defendant waived the right to be present by repeatedly delaying the start of trial with the malingering conduct and by failing to object when defense counsel, in the defendant's presence, specifically requested that the trial court remove the defendant from the courtroom before bringing the jury panel back. Smith v. State, 284 Ga. 599, 669 S.E.2d 98, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 866 (2008).

Reserve police officers as jurors. — Trial court did not err in overruling challenges to two prospective jurors who were challenged because they were reserve police officers. Wilson v. State, 250 Ga. 630, 300 S.E.2d 640, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1019, cert. denied, 464 U.S. 865, 104 S. Ct. 199, 78 L. Ed. 2d 174, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 5341 (1983).

Asking of leading questions. — A mature individual of normal intelligence, after being fully advised of the individual's constitutional rights and consenting to be interviewed without counsel, may, during short periods of questioning when not otherwise imposed upon, be asked leading questions. Moore v. Hopper, 389 F. Supp. 931, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12839 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

Rights to assistance of counsel and to remain silent during in-custody police interrogation waivable. — Any suspect of a crime is guaranteed the rights to assistance of counsel and to remain silent during in-custody police interrogation, and any statement obtained in derogation of those rights is inadmissible in a subsequent criminal prosecution. The suspect may, however, waive these rights provided the waiver is knowingly and intelligently made. Cooper v. Griffin, 455 F.2d 1142, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 11426 (5th Cir. 1972).

Giving of Miranda warnings prior to defendant's incriminating remarks sufficient legal warning. — Where prior to making incriminating remarks, the defendant was given the Miranda warnings, further warning that the defendant should have present with the defendant at the time of making such dangerous statements, an attorney or, at least, a "disinterested person," was not legally required. Durham v. State, 243 Ga. 408, 254 S.E.2d 359, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 915 (1979).

Considerations in determining whether waiver of constitutional rights. — Mental deficiency, age, and lack of familiarity with the criminal process are important factors to be considered in determining whether there has been a waiver of constitutional rights. Cooper v. Griffin, 455 F.2d 1142, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 11426 (5th Cir. 1972).

No increased charges in circumstances suggesting retaliation for defendant's assertion of rights without explanation. — Once a prosecutor exercises the discretion to bring certain charges against a defendant, neither the prosecutor nor the prosecutor's successor may, without explanation, increase the number of or severity of those charges in circumstances which suggest that the increase is retaliation for the defendant's assertion of statutory or constitutional rights. Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 11780 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 590 (1978).

Cases in which pretrial publicity held not prejudicial to due process. See Williams v. Dutton, 400 F.2d 797, 1968 U.S. App. LEXIS 5749 (5th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1105, 89 S. Ct. 908, 21 L. Ed. 2d 799, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 2640 (1969).

Due process requires that a pretrial detainee not be punished; therefore, where punishment is imposed without adjudication, the pertinent constitutional guarantee is the due process clause, not the eighth amendment. McQuirter v. City of Atlanta, 572 F. Supp. 1401, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13851 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Forfeiture of seized controlled substances. — O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49(c), which requires prompt institution of forfeiture proceedings in cases involving the seizure of controlled substances does not violate the equal protection and due process clauses. Porter v. State, 196 Ga. App. 31, 395 S.E.2d 360, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 800 (1990).

Incompetent defendant, forced to stand trial, denied due process. — There was insufficient reason for the jury to disregard the unanimous opinions of psychiatric experts that the defendant, who suffered from schizophrenia, was incompetent to stand trial. The defendant was therefore denied due process of law when tried. Wallace v. Kemp, 757 F.2d 1102, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28924 (11th Cir. 1985).

Hearing on mental competency. — State trial court which possessed substantial and convincing evidence of defendant's possible mental incompetency was required to sua sponte hold a competency hearing to establish the defendant's competency to plead guilty, and the court's failure to hold such a hearing violated the defendant's procedural due process rights. Tiller v. Esposito, 911 F.2d 575, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 15737 (11th Cir. 1990).

Communications between parishioner and clergy admissible without assistance of counsel. — Because defendant requested the future assistance of an attorney, not immediate assistance, and because the defendant knew that the defendant's confession would be handed over to law enforcement, the clergy-parishioner privilege in former O.C.G.A. §§ 24-3-51 and 24-9-22 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 24-8-825 and 24-5-502) were inapplicable; therefore, defendant's confession to the crimes was voluntary. Willis v. State, 287 Ga. 703, 699 S.E.2d 1, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 491 (2010).

9. Right to Counsel

Denial of assistance of counsel in criminal case violates due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Walker v. State, 194 Ga. 727, 22 S.E.2d 462, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 646 (1942), superseded by statute as stated in Carter v. State, 93 Ga. App. 12, 90 S.E.2d 672, 1955 Ga. App. LEXIS 462 (1955); Walker v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 213, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10733 (5th Cir. 1973).

United States Const., amend. 6 guarantee of assistance of counsel was incorporated into U.S. Const., amend. 14 by *Gideon v. Wainwright, 372 U.S. 335, 83 S. Ct. 792, 9 L. Ed. 2d 799 (1963). United States v. Alvarez, 580 F.2d 1251, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 8749 (5th Cir. 1978).

Denial of counsel within meaning of Constitution renders judgment of conviction void. Morris v. Peacock, 202 Ga. 524, 43 S.E.2d 531, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 460, cert. denied, 332 U.S. 832, 68 S. Ct. 200, 92 L. Ed. 405, 1947 U.S. LEXIS 1619 (1947).

Protection of accused from conviction due to ignorance of rights. — The purpose of the constitutional guaranty of a right to counsel is to protect an accused from conviction resulting from the accused's own ignorance of the accused's legal and constitutional rights, and the guaranty would be nullified by a determination that an accused's ignorant failure to claim the accused's rights removes the protection of the Constitution. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 192 Ga. 634, 15 S.E.2d 873, 1941 Ga. LEXIS 533 (1941).

Due process requires that criminal defendant have right to counsel at critical stages. — The mandate of U.S. Const., amend. 6 that every accused in a criminal prosecution has the right to the assistance of counsel for his defense at every critical stage of the case as an essential component of due process in a trial in a state court compels every agency of government concerned with the operation of the courts to acknowledge the necessity for and implement the means by which this necessary public purpose must be accomplished. The provisions of Georgia's Constitution make the same demand. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966).

Benefit of counsel at critical stages of case. — Accused's right to counsel includes benefit of counsel at critical stages of case and sufficiently prior to trial for adequate preparation. Rose v. State, 128 Ga. App. 370, 196 S.E.2d 683, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1482 (1973).

Right to counsel versus right to testify. — Where a federal district court presented the defendant with a choice: either to proceed with counsel with the caveat that the defendant could be kept off the witness stand, if the defendant's attorney so desired, or to proceed pro se, the defendant was impermissibly forced to choose between two constitutional rights: the right to testify and the right to counsel. United States v. Scott, 909 F.2d 488, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 14361 (11th Cir. 1990).

Judge's refusal of request for postponement depriving defendant of opportunity to procure counsel violates amendment. — A judge's refusal of the request of a defendant for postponement, which in effect deprives the defendant of opportunity to use normal facilities and resources to procure counsel of the defendant's own choice, violates U.S. Const., amend. 14. Walker v. State, 194 Ga. 727, 22 S.E.2d 462, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 646 (1942), superseded by statute as stated in Carter v. State, 93 Ga. App. 12, 90 S.E.2d 672, 1955 Ga. App. LEXIS 462 (1955).

Court duty to assign counsel not discharged if time or circumstances precludes giving of effective aid. — It is the duty of the court to assign counsel for the applicant as a necessary requisite of due process of law, and that duty is not discharged by an assignment at such a time or under such circumstances as to preclude the giving of effective aid in the preparation and trial of the case. Mosley v. Dutton, 367 F.2d 913, 1966 U.S. App. LEXIS 4729 (5th Cir. 1966), cert. denied, 387 U.S. 942, 87 S. Ct. 2074, 18 L. Ed. 2d 1328, 1967 U.S. LEXIS 1278 (1967).

Mere appointment of counsel insufficient to comply with due process. — The duty of appointing counsel to represent the defendant is not discharged by an appointment that precluded effective assistance; the mere appointment of counsel is insufficient in and of itself to comply with the due process clause. Walker v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 213, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10733 (5th Cir. 1973).

Procedure used by county in appointing attorneys for indigent did not violate due process where, in the event the public defender's office was unavailable, attorneys were appointed from alphabetical list in an equitable manner and special considerations were given in death penalty cases. Lewis v. State, 255 Ga. 101, 335 S.E.2d 560, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 944 (1985).

When due notice or waiver of irregularity assumed. — Where the defendant was present at the hearing and was represented by counsel, and no objection was made at that time to the effect that the notice was insufficient either as to length of time or in any other respect, to allow counsel to prepare the defense, and no continuance was requested for this purpose, it must be assumed that "due notice" was in fact received by the defendant or that, in any event, the general appearance of the defendant by defense counsel constituted a waiver of any irregularity therein. Rainwater v. State, 127 Ga. App. 406, 193 S.E.2d 889, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 903 (1972).

Necessity of counsel is vital and imperative, and the failure of the trial court to make an effective appointment of counsel is likewise a denial of due process within the meaning of U.S. Const., amends. 5 and 14. Bridwell v. Aderhold, 13

F. Supp. 253, 1935 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1098 (D. Ga. 1935), aff'd, 92 F.2d 748, 1937 U.S. App. LEXIS 4689 (5th Cir. 1937).

Defendant cannot neglect procuring counsel. — A defendant must be afforded benefit of counsel, and this includes time sufficient for counsel to prepare for trial, but where the defendant was apprised of the charge against the defendant at a previous term of court and the defendant fails or neglects to procure counsel or ask the court to do so for the defendant there is no error in refusing a request for additional time on the ground that the counsel has had insufficient time to prepare the defense. Bradshaw v. State, 132 Ga. App. 363, 208 S.E.2d 173, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1690 (1974).

Defendant's diligence in obtaining counsel. — Where the trial of the defendant had been continued in order to accommodate the defendant's request to obtain different counsel and the defendant had been told when the case would be tried and warned of the dangers of proceeding without counsel and the defendant appeared without counsel on the date set, before proceeding to trial the court should have made inquiry as to whether the defendant's failure to obtain counsel was attributable to the defendant's own lack of diligence. Hasty v. State, 210 Ga. App. 722, 437 S.E.2d 638, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1334 (1993).

Indigent defendant must be afforded counsel if requested. — Impoverished defendant unable to employ or arrange for counsel must be afforded a attorney when the defendant requests it in order to meet the constitutional guaranty and to afford due process. Perry v. State, 120 Ga. App. 304, 170 S.E.2d 350, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 752 (1969).

Right to counsel includes right to appointed counsel where defendant indigent. — Right of indigent defendant in criminal trial to have assistance of counsel is fundamental right essential to a fair trial. Broome v. Matthews, 223 Ga. 92, 153 S.E.2d 721, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 426 (1967).

Indigent defendant's rights are violated if the defendant is denied appointed counsel at a preliminary hearing and suffers prejudice on trial as result. Dismuke v.

State, 127 Ga. App. 835, 195 S.E.2d 259, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1659 (1973).

Indigents must be furnished counsel at every critical stage of criminal proceedings, including first appeal, under U.S. Const., amends. 6 and 14. Thornton v. Ault, 233 Ga. 172, 210 S.E.2d 683, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 712 (1974).

The right to counsel, guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 6 and applicable to the states by virtue of U.S. Const., amend. 14, includes the right to appointed counsel where the defendant is indigent. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975).

Where competent counsel was provided by the court for a defendant who was financially unable to employ an attorney, the defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel. Willingham v. State, 134 Ga. App. 144, 213 S.E.2d 516, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1935 (1975).

Absent showing that indigent was aware of right to appointed counsel, no intentional abandonment or waiver of right. — In the absence of any showing that a petitioner was aware of the right to appointed counsel, if the petitioner was in fact indigent, it cannot be said that the petitioner intentionally abandoned or waived that right. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975).

Due process requirement as to representation by counsel for indigent. — Where the law of the state requires the appointment of counsel for indigent persons, as in a capital case, where the defendant is unable to engage a lawyer and is incapacitated by ignorance, illiteracy, physical disability, or the like, to adequately make the defendant's own defense, due process of law requires that the court assign counsel for the defendant's, competent to serve, who shall give more than casual or perfunctory service to the prisoner. Lip service only will not do. Also, the Constitution requires that a fair opportunity shall be afforded such counsel to consult the client and to prepare a defense against the charge. Coates v. Lawrence, 46 F. Supp. 414, 1942 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2548 (D. Ga.), aff'd, 131 F.2d 110, 1942 U.S. App. LEXIS 2727 (5th Cir. 1942).

Right of an indigent defendant in a criminal trial to have the assistance of counsel is a fundamental right essential to a fair trial, and a trial and conviction without the assistance of counsel violates the fourteenth amendment. No showing of prejudice is required of a defendant who has been denied assistance of counsel because when one pleads to a criminal charge without benefit of counsel, a reviewing court does not stop to determine whether prejudice resulted. Heath v. State, 268 Ga. App. 235, 601 S.E.2d 758, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 893 (2004).

Indigent accused entitled to be as fully defended as one able to employ counsel. — An accused who is unable by reason of poverty to employ counsel is entitled to be defended in all the accused's rights as fully and to the same extent as is an accused who is able to employ one's own counsel. Downer v. Dunaway, 53 F.2d 586, 1931 U.S. App. LEXIS 2708 (5th Cir. 1931).

Though compensation for attorney's representation of indigent not constitutionally required. — A request by a judge of a trial court that an attorney represent an indigent defendant in a criminal case is tantamount to a demand with which the attorney must necessarily comply, but the attorney's professional services, work product and necessary out-of-pocket expenses in providing competent representation are not required by the Constitution to be compensated. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966).

Preference for expert. — An indigent defendant does not have a constitutional right to the expert the defendant prefers. McNeal v. State, 263 Ga. 397, 435 S.E.2d 47, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 677 (1993).

Prior convictions in violation of indigent defendant's right to appointed counsel cannot be introduced for collateral use in subsequent trials. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975).

Consideration of a person's prior uncounseled convictions for driving under the influence in determining an appropriate sentence for a subsequent conviction does not violate any constitutional right to counsel because the driving under the influence statute (O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391) is not an enhanced penalty statute since it neither increases the maximum confinement authorized nor converts a misdemeanor offense into a felony. Moore v. State, 181 Ga. App. 548, 352 S.E.2d 821, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2545, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 904, 108 S. Ct. 247, 98 L. Ed. 2d 204, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 4268 (1987).

Imposing of recidivist sentence. — Prior convictions obtained in violation of a defendant's right to appointed counsel where the defendant is indigent cannot be used for the purpose of imposing a recidivist sentence. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975).

Gideon v. Wainwright has retroactive effect where the records of prior convictions obtained in violation of its standards are introduced for collateral use in subsequent trials. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975).

When defendant not denied counsel. — Where it does not appear that a defendant was unable to employ counsel, or that he desired or made any request for counsel, or that the court declined to appoint counsel to represent the defendant, the defendant was not denied counsel. Balkcom v. Shores, 219 Ga. 429, 134 S.E.2d 3, 1963 Ga. LEXIS 474 (1963).

Due process does not require forcing counsel upon defendant. Balkcom v. Shores, 219 Ga. 429, 134 S.E.2d 3, 1963 Ga. LEXIS 474 (1963).

Guarantee of benefit of counsel in criminal proceeding waivable. — The constitutional guarantees of the benefit of counsel to a defendant in the trial of a criminal proceeding both federal and state may be waived by the defendant. Williams v. Gooding, 226 Ga. 549, 176 S.E.2d 64, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 591 (1970).

Waiver of right to counsel. — The record must show, or there must be an allegation and evidence which show, that an accused was offered counsel but intelligently and understandingly rejected the offer. Anything less is not waiver of the right to counsel. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975).

Valid waiver of right to counsel exists only if defendant intentionally relinquishes or abandons known right or privilege. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975).

Valid waiver of appointed counsel requires broad understanding of situation. — To be valid a waiver of appointed counsel must be made with an apprehension of the nature of the charges, the statutory offenses included within them, the range of allowable punishment thereunder, possible defenses to the charges and circumstances in mitigation thereof, and all other facts essential to a broad understanding of the matter. Campbell v. State, 128 Ga. App. 74, 195 S.E.2d 664, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1395 (1973).

Burden of valid waiver of right to counsel upon prosecution. — Burden is upon prosecution to affirmatively establish valid waiver of right to counsel, and waiver may not be presumed from a silent record. Blaylock v. Hopper, 233 Ga. 504, 212 S.E.2d 339, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1359 (1975).

Presumption is against waiver of benefit of counsel, which must be done voluntarily, knowingly and intelligently. Rose v. State, 128 Ga. App. 370, 196 S.E.2d 683, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1482 (1973).

Affirmative showing that court furnished accused with information to make knowing decision about right to counsel required. — It must be affirmatively shown that the court furnished the accused with the necessary information upon which the accused could make a voluntary, knowing and intelligent decision regarding his right to counsel. Rose v. State, 128 Ga. App. 370, 196 S.E.2d 683, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1482 (1973).

Trial judge's responsibility to determine if proper waiver of appointed counsel. — It is the responsibility of the trial judge, when the accused is without counsel, to clearly determine whether there has been a proper waiver of appointed counsel. A judge must investigate as long and as thoroughly as the circumstances of the case before the judge demand. Campbell v. State, 128 Ga. App. 74, 195 S.E.2d 664, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1395 (1973).

Requiring penetrating and comprehensive examination of circumstances. — A judge can make certain that an accused's professed waiver of counsel is understandingly and wisely made only from a penetrating and comprehensive examination of all the circumstances under which such a plea is tendered. Campbell v. State, 128 Ga. App. 74, 195 S.E.2d 664, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1395 (1973).

Right to counsel attaches only at or after time that adversary judicial proceedings have been initiated against him. West v. State, 229 Ga. 427, 192 S.E.2d 163, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 632 (1972).

Waiver of right to counsel at plea hearing. — A judge must be present before a defendant may waive his or her constitutional right to be represented by counsel at a plea hearing. Penney v. Vaughn, 870 F. Supp. 1093, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17963 (M.D. Ga. 1994).

Use of jailhouse informants to obtain incriminating information. — In order to establish a prisoner's claim that the state violated the prisoner's right to counsel by using jailhouse informants deliberately to elicit incriminating information from the prisoner in the absence of counsel, the prisoner must show (1) that a fellow inmate was a government agent; and (2) that the inmate deliberately elicited incriminating statements from the prisoner. Depree v. Thomas, 946 F.2d 784, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 26153 (11th Cir. 1991).

Admission of incriminating statements given by defendant to fellow inmate was proper where the inmate's activity in eliciting defendant's statements was not so coercive as to violate due process. Wilson v. State, 264 Ga. 287, 444 S.E.2d 306, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 456 (1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 988, 115 S. Ct. 486, 130 L. Ed. 2d 398, 1994 U.S. LEXIS 7892 (1994), overruled in part, Washington v. State, 276 Ga. 655, 581 S.E.2d 518, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 539 (2003).

Generally, preindictment lineup does not trigger right to counsel.

Thornton v. State, 238 Ga. 160, 231 S.E.2d 729, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 940 (1977).

In Georgia preliminary commitment hearing is not inherently critical stage of criminal proceedings. Blake v. State, 109 Ga. App. 636, 137 S.E.2d 49, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 940, cert. denied, 379 U.S. 924, 85 S. Ct. 281, 13 L. Ed. 2d 337, 1964 U.S. LEXIS 180 (1964).

When due process not denied by failure to make counsel available to defendant at preliminary commitment hearing. — The failure to make counsel available to the defendant at a preliminary commitment hearing, where the defendant entered a plea of guilty that was not introduced in evidence at the defendant's trial, was not a denial of due process of law under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Blake v. State, 109 Ga. App. 636, 137 S.E.2d 49, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 940, cert. denied, 379 U.S. 924, 85 S. Ct. 281, 13 L. Ed. 2d 337, 1964 U.S. LEXIS 180 (1964).

Refusal to appoint counsel for defendant at commitment hearing did not violate due process. Molignaro v. Balkcom, 221 Ga. 150, 143 S.E.2d 748, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 404 (1965).

Denial of counsel at commitment hearing does not deny accused due process where rights not prejudiced by lack of counsel at that time. Smith v. Fuller, 223 Ga. 673, 157 S.E.2d 447, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 657 (1967).

Arraignment is critical stage in criminal case. The absence or lack of counsel at such time is a violation of the right of the accused to due process. In such cases courts "do not stop to determine whether prejudice resulted." Phillips v. Smith, 300 F. Supp. 130, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8396 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

It is unconstitutional to try a person on state felony charge unless that person has assistance of counsel or has validly waived it. Wren v. United States Bd. of Parole, 389 F. Supp. 938, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13700 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Persons charged with serious criminal offenses have right to counsel. — Persons charged with serious criminal offenses have right under U.S. Const., amends. 6 and 14 to assistance of counsel in their defense. Shepherd v.

Jordan, 425 F.2d 1174, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 9686 (5th Cir. 1970).

Where offense classified as serious, counsel must be furnished. — The length of the maximum sentence authorized by a statute proscribing criminal conduct determines the classification of an offense as petty or serious. All charges against an accused must be cumulated in measuring the possible sentence which could be imposed for the purpose of calculating whether the offense is petty or serious, and where an offense is classified as serious, counsel must be furnished. Shepherd v. Jordan, 425 F.2d 1174, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 9686 (5th Cir. 1970).

Presumption that right to counsel not denied if no affirmative showing of denial in record. — Where the record of the trial does not affirmatively show in a felony case that the accused person of mature age was denied the benefit of counsel, it must be presumed that the trial judge did the judge's duty and that the accused was not denied the right to counsel. White v. Grimes, 216 Ga. 335, 116 S.E.2d 561, 1960 Ga. LEXIS 462 (1960).

Person charged with felony in state court has unconditional and absolute constitutional right to lawyer. This right attaches at the pleading stage of the criminal process, and may be waived only by voluntary and knowing action. Boyd v. Dutton, 405 U.S. 1, 92 S. Ct. 759, 30 L. Ed. 2d 755, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 93 (1972).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in requiring appointed counsel to proceed with the trial of the case where appointed counsel was the only counsel recognized by the court as representing the defendant, and there was no direct evidence that any other counsel was privately employed to represent the defendant in the case. Arnold v. State, 156 Ga. App. 248, 274 S.E.2d 640, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3017 (1980).

Trial court's permitting appointed counsel to leave courtroom during state's argument not deprivation of right to counsel. — Under no theory can it be maintained that the trial court committed any error permitting the appellant's appointed counsel to leave the courtroom during the state's argument thereby depriving the appellant of the right of counsel under U.S. Const., amends. 6 and 14. Bryant v. State, 229 Ga. 60, 189 S.E.2d 435, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 499 (1972).

Appointment of additional counsel to assist regularly employed counsel.

— It is not denial of due process for trial court to appoint and tender to defendant additional counsel to assist regularly employed counsel of defendant's own selection. Andrews v. Robertson, 145 F.2d 101, 1944 U.S. App. LEXIS 2410 (5th Cir. 1944), cert. denied, 324 U.S. 874, 65 S. Ct. 1013, 89 L. Ed. 1427, 1945 U.S. LEXIS 2238 (1945).

Where representation by counsel comports with due process. — As to the requirement under U.S. Const., amend. 14, the services of counsel meet the requirement of the due process clause when he is a member in good standing at the bar, gives the client complete loyalty, serves in good faith to the best of counsel's ability, and counsel's service is of such character as to preserve the essential integrity of the proceedings at a trial in a court of justice. Counsel is not required to be infallible. Counsel's client is entitled to a fair trial, not a perfect one. Jones v. Balkcom, 210 Ga. 262, 79 S.E.2d 1, 1953 Ga. LEXIS 279 (1953), cert. denied, 347 U.S. 956, 74 S. Ct. 682, 98 L. Ed. 1101, 1954 U.S. LEXIS 2202 (1954).

Where counsel, representing a defendant in a criminal case, is a member of the bar in good standing, and, in representing the client in the trial of the case, gives complete loyalty to the client, serves the client in good faith to the best of counsel's ability, and counsel's service is of such a character as to preserve the essential integrity of the proceedings in a court of justice, the requirements of due process within U.S. Const., amend. 14 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I, are met. Bolick v. State, 127 Ga. App. 542, 194 S.E.2d 302, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1503, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1505, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 946 (1972).

Broad latitude of advice, direction, and policy in interest of client is essentially vested in counsel in the conduct of a trial. Counsel often waive apparently important points in the bona fide belief that, on the whole, greater advantage will be gained indirectly than might have been gained directly by insisting on them, and such a waiver either express or implied would ordinarily not tend to show incompetency. No lawyer is infallible, and the constitutional guaranties of the benefit of counsel, and of due process, do not contemplate such infallibility. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 193 Ga. 661, 19 S.E.2d 499, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 449, cert. denied, 317 U.S. 626, 63 S. Ct. 36, 87 L. Ed. 506, 1942 U.S. LEXIS 274 (1942).

Because the defendant's attorneys did not move for a continuance and obtain a longer time to prepare the case, because they allowed irrelevant or otherwise illegal evidence to be admitted without objection, because they relied solely on the statement of the defendant to the jury without introducing testimony, and because they themselves did not actively pursue the motion for new trial are not matters which would constitute a denial of the right to due process, but at most would amount to alleged negligence or errors of judgment. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 193 Ga. 661, 19 S.E.2d 499, 1942 Ga. LEXIS 449, cert. denied, 317 U.S. 626, 63 S. Ct. 36, 87 L. Ed. 506, 1942 U.S. LEXIS 274 (1942).

Defendant is entitled to effective assistance of counsel in determining how to plead and in making plea and can attack the conviction collaterally if the defendant is not given this right. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Advice of counsel to defendant entering guilty plea must be within range of competence demanded of attorneys in criminal cases. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Defendant's lawyer's duty to ascertain whether plea of guilty is entered voluntarily and knowingly. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga.

1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Counsel inducing defendant to plead guilty on patently erroneous advice. — Where counsel induced defendant to plead guilty on patently erroneous advice, defendant has been denied effective assistance of counsel, as well as due process. Walker v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 213, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10733 (5th Cir. 1973).

Defendant's due process rights were violated where throughout the state and federal habeas proceeding the defendant was induced to plead guilty by defendant's counsel's erroneous advice that the plea bargain would enable defendant to serve the federal and state sentences concurrently. Thus, the attorney provided ineffective assistance to defendant as the guilty plea was not knowing, intelligent and voluntary. Finch v. Vaughn, 67 F.3d 909, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 30983 (11th Cir. 1995).

After an inmate's counsel affirmatively misinformed the inmate that if the inmate entered a plea of guilty to a first offender offense of violating the Georgia Controlled Substances Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-13-20 et seq., that such would not impair the inmate's ability to become a lawyer, nor would it impact the inmate's immigration status, the trial court erred in denying the inmate's petition for a writ of habeas corpus pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-14-5 because under the Strickland analysis, the inmate's counsel was ineffective, as the inmate had graduated law school and passed the Bar, but the inmate's admission was held up due to the conviction, and deportation proceedings had been commenced against the inmate. Thus, since the inmate relied upon a lawyer's misinformation about collateral consequences stemming from a guilty plea, the inmate had grounds to argue that counsel provided ineffective representation pursuant to U.S. Const., amend. 6, and such claims are to be analyzed under the two-part Strickland test. Rollins v. State, 277 Ga. 488, 591 S.E.2d 796, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 1 (2004).

Counsel's conceding client's guilt rendered assistance ineffective. — Given the petitioner's plea of not guilty, the petitioner's denial of involvement in the crime, and the insubstantiality of the petitioner's insanity defense, counsel's conceding the client's guilt was irrational and rendered the assistance at trial ineffective. Francis v. Spraggins, 720 F.2d 1190, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 15343 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 470 U.S. 1059, 105 S. Ct. 1776, 84 L. Ed. 2d 835, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 1497 (1985).

Counsel to ascertain whether voluntary, knowing plea and assist in decision whether to plead guilty. — Counsel must ascertain whether a plea is entered voluntarily and knowingly and must actually and substantially assist the defendant in deciding whether to plead guilty by providing an understanding of the law in relation to the facts. Counsel's advice need not be perfect, but it must be reasonably competent so as to permit the accused to make an informed and conscious choice. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979); Austin v. Carter, 248 Ga. 775, 285 S.E.2d 542, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1083 (1982).

Effective assistance of counsel does not require errorless counsel, or counsel judged ineffective by hindsight, but counsel reasonably likely to render and rendering reasonably effective assistance. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979); Rosser v. State, 156 Ga. App. 463, 274 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3068 (1980), aff'd, 247 Ga. 724, 279 S.E.2d 217, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 840 (1981); Galloway v. State, 165 Ga. App. 536, 301 S.E.2d 894, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 1937 (1983).

Whenever actions of retained counsel operate to deprive trial of fundamental fairness, due process violated, notwithstanding any kind of specific involvement by a particular state official. If, however, retained counsel's actions in representing the defendant do not violate fundamental fairness, but are challenged as less than reasonably effective in violation of the U.S. Const., amend. 6, state involvement through actual or constructive awareness of the error by the judge, prosecutor, or other responsible official who could have corrected it, must be shown. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Counsel's significant misleading statements can rise to denial of due process. — While the good faith errors of appointed counsel are normally insufficient to justify granting a motion to vacate sentence, significant misleading statements of counsel can rise to a level of denial of due process of law and result in a vitiation of the judicial proceeding because of ineffective assistance of counsel. Walker v. Caldwell, 476 F.2d 213, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 10733 (5th Cir. 1973).

Where accused virtually unrepresented or substantially without aid of counsel. — If appointed attorneys are so ignorant, negligent, or unfaithful that the accused was virtually unrepresented, or if the accused did not in any real or substantial sense have the aid of counsel, the accused would be deprived of a fundamental constitutional right and, if convicted, might successfully complain that the accused had been denied due process of law. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 192 Ga. 634, 15 S.E.2d 873, 1941 Ga. LEXIS 533 (1941).

If counsel for the defendant in a criminal case of the character of which the present defendant stands convicted, whether appointed by the court or of the defendant's selection, was so negligent or unfaithful in the trial of the case that the defendant was virtually unrepresented, or if the defendant did not in any real or substantial sense have the aid of counsel, this amounts to deprivation of a fundamental constitutional right, and the defendant under such circumstances may complain that the defendant has been denied due process of law. Jones v. Balkcom, 210 Ga. 262, 79 S.E.2d 1, 1953 Ga. LEXIS 279 (1953), cert. denied, 347 U.S. 956, 74 S. Ct. 682, 98 L. Ed. 1101, 1954 U.S. LEXIS 2202 (1954).

Where due process and adequate representation by counsel lacking. — Where defense counsel did not adequately investigate the matter of an insanity defense, did not adequately inform and advise the client as to the advisability of utilizing such a defense, and did not raise and press the issue of disqualification of the judge, due process and adequate representation by counsel were lacking. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Where conflict of interest is objected to before trial, prejudice need not be shown. — Whenever a defendant establishes the defense lawyer's unconstitutional multiple representation, that is, where an actual conflict of interest is objected to before or during trial, prejudice need not be demonstrated; however, in order to establish a violation of the sixth amendment, a defendant who raised no objection at trial must demonstrate that an actual conflict of interest adversely affected the lawyer's performance. Dean v. State, 247 Ga. 724, 279 S.E.2d 217, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 840 (1981).

Ineffective representation due to conflict of interest renders trial fundamentally unfair. — Ineffective representation by a lawyer laboring under a conflict of interest renders trial fundamentally unfair whether judge knew of conflict or not. Unlike most fourteenth amendment due process cases, no state action in the form of a state official's knowledge of the wrongdoing need be shown. A deprivation of due process results when judgment reached in such a trial is enforced. Johnson v. Hopper, 639 F.2d 236, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 19339 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1010, 102 S. Ct. 548, 70 L. Ed. 2d 412, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4351 (1981).

Counsel not absolutely necessary for fair trial. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 prohibits the conviction and incarceration of one whose trial is offensive to the common and fundamental ideas of fairness and right, and while want of counsel in a particular case may result in a conviction lacking in such fundamental fairness, U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not embody an inexorable command that no trial for any offense, or in any court, can be fairly conducted and justice accorded a defendant who is not represented by counsel. Gann v. Gough, 79 F. Supp. 912, 1948 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2396 (D. Ga.), rev'd, 170 F.2d 473, 1948 U.S. App. LEXIS 2667 (5th Cir. 1948).

Denial of benefit of counsel constitutes ground for issuance of writ of habeas corpus. The deprivation of counsel is such a fundamental and radical error that it operates to render the trial illegal and void. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 192 Ga. 634, 15 S.E.2d 873, 1941 Ga. LEXIS 533 (1941).

Where allegations of denial of benefit of counsel in habeas corpus petition insufficient. — In a habeas corpus petition, allegations to the effect that the defendant had entered a plea of guilty to an indictment for a felony offense "without the advice of counsel" were insufficient to charge that the defendant was denied the constitutional right of the privilege and benefit of counsel, since the petition failed to allege that the defendant was unable to employ counsel or that the defendant desired or made any request for counsel or that the court declined to appoint counsel to represent the defendant. White v. Grimes, 216 Ga. 335, 116 S.E.2d 561, 1960 Ga. LEXIS 462 (1960).

Where defendant is represented by retained counsel at trial prerequisites in showing denial of counsel for appeal: (1) it must be known to the court that the criminal defendant is indigent; and (2) it must be known to the court that the defendant wishes to appeal. Goforth v. Dutton, 409 F.2d 651, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 13068 (5th Cir. 1969).

Effective assistance of counsel as to appeal. — An attorney renders effective assistance of counsel with regard to the decision whether to appeal when the attorney advises the client of the client's appellate rights and does not preempt the client's decision to appeal. Murphy v. Balkcom, 245 Ga. 13, 262 S.E.2d 784, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 666 (1980).

Appointed counsel must fully inform client of appellate rights. — Representation is inadequate and right of appeal denied where appointed counsel fails to fully inform client of appellate rights. Gregory v. United States, 446 F.2d 498, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 8977 (5th Cir. 1971); Thornton v. Ault, 233 Ga. 172, 210 S.E.2d 683, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 712 (1974).

Due Process (Cont'd)*9. Right to Counsel (Cont'd)*Where appointed counsel can determine no basis for appeal exists. —

Where the defendant's appointed counsel made an affirmative determination, as was counsel's right to do in conducting the defense, that no basis for an appeal existed, it does not appear that the appellant was denied the right to counsel on appeal or due process of law. Blackmon v. Smith, 226 Ga. 849, 178 S.E.2d 176, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 710 (1970).

Appointed lawyer may not forego direct appeal without client consent. —

Right to appeal is violated when appointed lawyer deliberately foregoes direct appeal without client's consent. Gregory v. United States, 446 F.2d 498, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 8977 (5th Cir. 1971); Thornton v. Ault, 233 Ga. 172, 210 S.E.2d 683, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 712 (1974).

Defendant is deprived of adequate representation of counsel on appeal in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 14 unless these requirements are complied with: (1) counsel must make a conscientious examination of the case; (2) if counsel finds that an appeal would be wholly frivolous, counsel must notify the court and request permission to withdraw; (3) that request must be accompanied by a brief presenting any issue which might arguably be raised on appeal; (4) petitioner should be furnished a copy of the brief and allowed an opportunity to raise any additional issues; (5) the court should examine the case to determine whether it is frivolous; (6) if the court finds the appeal frivolous, it may grant the request to withdraw and dismiss the appeal; and (7) if the court finds any of the issues arguable on their merits, it must then furnish counsel to argue the appeal. Byrd v. Smith, 407 F.2d 363, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 9070 (5th Cir. 1969).

Appointed counsel must notify court of frivolous criminal appeal. —

When appointed counsel considers criminal appeal frivolous, he must notify appellate court and request permission to withdraw, and the court must then examine the case to determine whether it is frivolous. Thornton v. Ault, 233 Ga. 172, 210 S.E.2d 683, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 712 (1974).

Indigent defendant is entitled to appointment of counsel to assist the defendant on first appeal, and that appointed counsel must function in the active role of an advocate. Goforth v. Dutton, 409 F.2d 651, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 13068 (5th Cir. 1969).

The failure to grant an indigent defendant seeking initial review of the conviction the services of an advocate violates petitioner's rights to fair procedure and equality under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Chenoweth v. Smith, 225 Ga. 572, 170 S.E.2d 235, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 567 (1969).

Provision for counsel for indigent defendants seeking discretionary appeals to Supreme Court not required. —

Neither the due process clause nor the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 requires that counsel be provided for indigent defendants seeking discretionary appeals to the state Supreme Court or to the United States Supreme Court. Wooten v. State, 245 Ga. 724, 266 S.E.2d 927, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 912 (1980).

Denial of assistance of counsel at state habeas hearing does not constitute denial of due process. Burston v. Caldwell, 477 F.2d 996, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9960 (5th Cir. 1973).

Appointment of counsel on habeas corpus proceedings in state court is not required by due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. NLRB v. Brady Aviation Corp., 224 F.2d 23, 1955 U.S. App. LEXIS 4553 (5th Cir. 1955).

Constitutional infirmities found in multiple representation of codefendants may violate due process clause or the sixth amendment, and for that reason relief can be granted. Dean v. State, 247 Ga. 724, 279 S.E.2d 217, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 840 (1981).

Ineffective counsel established. —

Where a defendant, charged with murder, rape and burglary, among other crimes, was represented at trial by two attorneys, each of whom actively participated in the defense, and each attorney espoused a defense at odds with that of the other, causing a discernible split within the ranks of the defense team which prevented counsel from, among other things, effective performance of the duty to assist petitioner in the decision whether to testify in the defendant's own defense, the defendant did not receive the effective assistance of counsel guaranteed by the Constitution. Ross v. Kemp, 260 Ga. 312, 393 S.E.2d 244, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 286 (1990).

Ineffective assistance not shown. — Where evidence showed that the defendant's counsel discussed with the defendant the right to testify and advised against it, and the defendant never affirmatively asked to testify, defendant failed to demonstrate that counsel erroneously deprived the defendant of the choice to testify and that counsel's deficiency in this regard deprived the defendant of a fair trial. Mobley v. State, 264 Ga. 854, 452 S.E.2d 500, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 41 (1995); Barron v. State, 264 Ga. 865, 452 S.E.2d 504, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 35 (1995).

Federal abstention. — The Court of Appeals abstained from exercising its equitable jurisdiction to hear a class action claim that Georgia's indigent defense system was inherently incapable of providing constitutionally adequate services and that the system therefore violated the sixth, eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution. Luckey v. Miller, 976 F.2d 673, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 28489 (11th Cir. 1992).

10. Criminal Trials

Applicability of U.S. Const., Amend 5, protections in civil and criminal actions. — The protections of U.S. Const., amend. 5 may be invoked in civil as well as criminal actions and applied fully to state proceedings through U.S. Const., amend. 14. Tennessee, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga. App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2579 (1977).

Criminal defendant is not entitled to perfect trial under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Smith v. Smith, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 885, 93 S. Ct. 99, 34 L. Ed. 2d 141, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 1745 (1972).

State's responsibility for fair trial. — State, through the judge or prosecutor, has a responsibility to see that the defendant receives a fair trial under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Fleming v. State, 246 Ga. 90, 270 S.E.2d 185, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 977, cert. denied, 449 U.S. 904, 101 S. Ct. 278, 66 L. Ed. 2d 136, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3545 (1980).

Right to fair trial denied. — The evidence below supported the habeas court's findings that (1) in failing to seek a continuance the defendant's counsel rendered ineffective assistance at the defendant's trial; and (2) counsel's ineffectiveness so prejudiced the defendant's case that the defendant was effectively denied the defendant's right to a fair trial as guaranteed by the sixth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution. Turpin v. Bennett, 272 Ga. 57, 525 S.E.2d 354, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 22 (2000).

Heinous offense defendants entitled to fair trial. — Even those guilty of most heinous offenses are entitled to fair trial. Screws v. United States, 325 U.S. 91, 65 S. Ct. 1031, 89 L. Ed. 1495, 1945 U.S. LEXIS 2096 (1945).

Justice involves delicate judgment based on circumstances of each case. — To accommodate the sound administration of justice to the rights of the defendant to a fair trial will necessarily involve a delicate judgment based on the circumstances of each case. State v. Madden, 242 Ga. 637, 250 S.E.2d 484, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1308 (1978).

Rights to be tried in court of law and not to be treated with unreasonable, unnecessary or unprovoked force while in custody. — The constitutional right to due process of law includes not only the right to be tried in a court of law for alleged offenses against the state, but also a right not to be treated with unreasonable, unnecessary or unprovoked force by those charged by the state with the duty of keeping accused and convicted offenders in custody. United States v. Stokes, 506 F.2d 771, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16512 (5th Cir. 1975).

Trial by jury not required. — Due process clause does not require trial by jury. Allen v. State, 110 Ga. App. 56, 137 S.E.2d 711, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 546 (1964).

Jury trial in all state nonpetty

Due Process (Cont'd)10. Criminal Trials (Cont'd)

criminal cases. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 guarantees the right of trial by jury in all state nonpetty criminal cases. Ballew v. Georgia, 435 U.S. 223, 98 S. Ct. 1029, 55 L. Ed. 2d 234, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 68 (1978); Haygood v. State, 221 Ga. App. 477, 471 S.E.2d 552, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 550 (1996).

Impartial tribunal required by due process. — Due process requires competent and impartial tribunal in administrative hearings and in trials to judge. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Bifurcated proceedings. — Defendant's conviction was affirmed as trying the issues of guilt and sentence before the same jury in bifurcated proceedings was not unconstitutional. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 652 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 9247 (2007).

Trial court did not err by denying defendant's pretrial motion to bifurcate the trial and try separately the charges for which defendant's status as a felon was material and the remaining charges because the felon in possession of a firearm charges served as the underlying felonies to support a felony murder conviction, they were material to a more serious charge, and Head v. State, 253 Ga. 429 (1984) required that the court deny the motion to bifurcate. In addition, the trial court gave two limiting instructions. Charles v. State, 315 Ga. 651, 884 S.E.2d 363, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 40 (2023).

Due process limitations on composition of jury. — If a state chooses, quite apart from constitutional compulsion, to use a grand or petit jury, due process imposes limitations on the composition of that jury. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Due process clause protects defendant from jurors actually incapable of rendering impartial verdict, based on the evidence and the law. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Defendant cannot complain that two prospective jurors were not stricken for cause where defendant did not challenge the prospective jurors for cause and the prospective jurors did not serve on the jury that tried the case. Thomas v. State, 264 Ga. App. 389, 590 S.E.2d 778, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1488 (2003).

Exclusion of jurors opposed to death penalty. — Questioning of jurors and exclusion of those opposed to the death penalty does not violate the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Corn v. State, 240 Ga. 130, 240 S.E.2d 694, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1423 (1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 2255, 56 L. Ed. 2d 415 (1978).

States have wide leeway in dividing responsibility between judge and jury in criminal cases. If a state concludes that jury sentencing is preferable, nothing in the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 intrudes upon that choice. Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 66 (1973).

Conviction upon charge not made or upon charge not tried constitutes denial of due process. DeFrancis v. Manning, 246 Ga. 307, 271 S.E.2d 209, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1095 (1980).

Conviction upon a charge not made would be sheer denial of due process. Rowe v. State, 166 Ga. App. 836, 305 S.E.2d 624, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3281 (1983).

Defense that act defendant is charged with violating is unconstitutional. — Due process of law demands that a party not be penalized for exercising that party's right to raise the defense that the act which the party is being charged with violating is unconstitutional. United States v. Northside Realty Assocs., 474 F.2d 1164, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11129 (5th Cir. 1973).

Defense of selective prosecution. — Though selective prosecution, if based on improper motives, can violate constitutional guarantees of equal protection, selective enforcement in and of itself is not a constitutional violation; therefore, to support a defense of selective prosecution, one must establish that others similarly situated have not generally been prosecuted and that the government's discriminatory selection of defendant is invidious, or in bad faith — that is, based on constitutionally impermissible considerations, such as race or religion. United States v. Lichenstein, 610 F.2d 1272, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 20875 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 2991, 64 L. Ed. 2d 856, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2358 (1980).

Harmless error. — Before constitutional error can be held harmless, court must believe it harmless beyond reasonable doubt. Good v. State, 127 Ga. App. 775, 195 S.E.2d 264, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1020 (1972).

Conflicting evidence did not support showing that state knowingly presented false testimony. — Although the defendant pointed to inconsistencies between a recorded statement to police from the second victim that the second victim had not seen the shooting, an officer's testimony at trial that the second victim told the officer that the second victim had seen the shooting, and the defendant's claims that it would have made it impossible for the second victim to have seen the shooting, the defendant's right to due process was not violated because the presentation of conflicting evidence alone did not support a showing that the officer was necessarily being dishonest or that the state knowingly presented false testimony; the defendant thoroughly explored the inconsistencies; and the inconsistencies were for the jury to resolve. Greene v. State, 303 Ga. 184, 811 S.E.2d 333, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 148 (2018).

Constitutionality of law cannot be raised for first time in motion for new trial and the fact that the laws were declared unconstitutional pending appeal does not require a different result. Konscol v. Konscol, 151 Ga. App. 696, 261 S.E.2d 438, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2753 (1979), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 875, 101 S. Ct. 218, 66 L. Ed. 2d 97, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 3272 (1980).

Cross-examination. — Even if the state violated the defendant's due process rights in asking whether the victim's death was accidental on cross-examination, any error was harmless, based on the overwhelming evidence that the victim's injuries were not accidental. Thomas v. State, 281 Ga. 550, 640 S.E.2d 255, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 35 (2007).

Presence of a defendant is a condition of due process to the extent that a fair and just hearing would be thwarted by the defendant's absence, and to that extent only. Bishop v. State, 179 Ga. App. 606, 347 S.E.2d 350, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2654 (1986).

Defendant has the privilege under U.S. Const., amend. 14 to be present personally whenever the defendant's presence has a relation, reasonably substantial, to the fullness of the defendant's opportunity to defend against the charge. Bishop v. State, 179 Ga. App. 606, 347 S.E.2d 350, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2654 (1986).

Due process requires that the defendant be personally present to the extent that a fair and just hearing would be thwarted by the defendant's absence, and to that extent only. Finney v. Zant, 709 F.2d 643, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25936 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled in part, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22736 (11th Cir. 1986).

Due process error must deny fundamental fairness to warrant reversal. — In evaluating whether an admission of evidence constituted a due process violation, a court reviews the record only to determine whether any error it finds is of such magnitude as to deny fundamental fairness to the criminal trial. To show a denial of fundamental fairness, any error must be material in the sense of a crucial, critical, highly significant factor. Collins v. Francis, 728 F.2d 1322, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 24501 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 963, 105 S. Ct. 361, 83 L. Ed. 2d 297, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 392 (1984).

Governmental misconduct. — When considering the appropriate remedy for an alleged constitutional violation involving governmental misconduct, the remedy should be tailored to the injury suffered from the violation alleged and should not result in the dismissal of an indictment, or in the granting of a directed verdict, when the case may proceed with full recognition of the defendant's right to a fair trial. Wilcox v. State, 250 Ga. 745, 301 S.E.2d 251, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1029 (1983).

State did not violate a defendant's

due process rights or suborn perjury by having a shooting victim testify at defendant's aggravated assault trial — defendant had shot the victim, even though the victim had previously testified in another proceeding that another person had shot the victim, because there was no showing that the victim's trial testimony was untrue or that the state knew the victim's testimony was untrue. Arnold v. State, 301 Ga. App. 714, 688 S.E.2d 656, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1428 (2009).

Where representation by counsel comports with due process. — Ineffective assistance of counsel claims regarding the defendant's initial post-trial counsel's performance lacked merit, as counsel was neither professionally deficient nor prejudicial because: (1) the defendant waived any right to be present at the two juror interviews; (2) no deficiency could result from counsel's failure to raise meritless objections; and (3) the trial court specifically found that the defendant adequately understood the nature of the charges, and comprehended the proceedings, despite being under the influence of prescribed anti-depressants, and was capable of aiding the defense. Hampton v. State, 282 Ga. 490, 651 S.E.2d 698, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 723 (2007).

Vicarious liability unconstitutional. — Vicarious criminal liability in misdemeanor cases which involve as punishment a fine and not imprisonment violates due process. Davis v. City of Peachtree City, 251 Ga. 219, 304 S.E.2d 701, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 770 (1983).

Indictment failing to specify exact cause of death. — Where the defendant argued that the defendant was denied due process since the indictment did not allege the cause of the defendant's spouse's death and, therefore, denied the defendant the opportunity to prepare a defense, it was held that an indictment failing to specify the cause of death is sufficient when the circumstances of the case will not admit of greater certainty in stating the means of death, and the available evidence at the time of the indictment was that the victim's body was discovered in a decomposed condition near a trash dump. The medical examiner ruled out several possible causes of death but could not ascertain the actual cause of death due to the condition of the body. Phillips v. State, 258 Ga. 228, 368 S.E.2d 91 (1988).

Intent to commit criminal act will sustain conviction and the state may fix the punishment based on the result of that criminal act. Head v. State, 246 Ga. 360, 271 S.E.2d 452, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1108 (1980).

Defendant taking the stand. — Criminal defendant may not be compelled to take the stand at all, thus in effect being allowed to invoke U.S. Const., amend. 5 against any and all questions. Tennessee, Inc. v. Berger, 144 Ga. App. 45, 240 S.E.2d 586, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2579 (1977).

Silence of accused. — Although the use of a defendant's silence, after the defendant has received Miranda warnings, to impeach the defendant violates due process, where a defendant is not silent but makes a statement, the state can impeach the defendant's trial testimony with inconsistencies or omissions in the defendant's pre-trial statement. Pye v. State, 269 Ga. 779, 505 S.E.2d 4, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 877 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1118, 119 S. Ct. 1767, 143 L. Ed. 2d 797, 1999 U.S. LEXIS 3316 (1999).

Constitutional right against self-incrimination is incorporated in former Code 1933, § 38-415 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20). Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1370 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977).

Double jeopardy. — Double jeopardy prohibition of U.S. Const., amend. 5 is enforceable against states through U.S. Const., amend. 14. Price v. Georgia, 398 U.S. 323, 90 S. Ct. 1757, 26 L. Ed. 2d 300, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 22 (1970); Staggers v. Stynchcombe, 319 F. Supp. 1305, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13127 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 436 F.2d 585, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 12561 (5th Cir. 1971).

It was error to grant the defendants' plea in bar based on double jeopardy after granting the defendants' motion for a mistrial when the prosecutor told the defense that a rifle could not be located; even if the conduct of the prosecutor's staff in not telling the prosecutor that the rifle was missing could be imputed to the prosecutor, there was no evidence that those persons intended to goad the defendants into moving for a mistrial. State v. Traylor, 281 Ga. 730, 642 S.E.2d 700, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 228 (2007).

Applicability of doctrine of collateral estoppel. — The doctrine of collateral estoppel is a part of the guarantee of U.S. Const., amend. 5 against double jeopardy and is applicable against the states through U.S. Const., amend. 14. Clark v. State, 144 Ga. App. 69, 240 S.E.2d 270, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2588 (1977).

Person may not be convicted by both state and municipality for same crime. The test for determining if there is a fatal identity between the crime and the ordinance is whether the ordinance contains an ingredient or element, essential to the city's peace but not essential to the state offense, or if the offense created by the ordinance lacks some element essential to the state crime. Barrett v. State, 123 Ga. App. 210, 180 S.E.2d 271, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 1165 (1971).

Defense counsel cannot later prosecute accused for same offense against which counsel had previously defended accused. Burkett v. State, 131 Ga. App. 662, 206 S.E.2d 848, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1509 (1974).

Delay in filing trial transcript. — Unless it clearly appears that the delay in filing a trial transcript prevented the presentation of an adequate appeal or impaired a defense which would otherwise be available to an appellant where a new trial is ordered due to trial error, an appellant has not suffered the prejudice which turns a transcript delay into a violation of due process of law. Graham v. State, 171 Ga. App. 242, 319 S.E.2d 484, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 2975 (1984).

Delay in investigative stage before arrest of indictment. — Where delay in bringing defendant to trial occurs in investigative stage before either arrest or indictment, due process, not sixth amendment, standards apply. Andrews v. State, 175 Ga. App. 22, 332 S.E.2d 299, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2768 (1985).

prearrest delay. See State v. Madden, 242 Ga. 637, 250 S.E.2d 484, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1308 (1978).

Dismissal for prearrest or preindictment delay required when substantial prejudice caused by intentional delay. — Dismissal is required for prearrest or preindictment delay under the due process clause when it is shown that delay caused actual, substantial prejudice to defendant's right to a fair trial and that the delay was an intentional device to gain a tactical advantage over defendant. Armour v. State, 140 Ga. App. 196, 230 S.E.2d 346, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1402 (1976).

Although there is no constitutional right to a speedy indictment or arrest, the due process clause requires dismissal of an indictment if it is shown at trial that preindictment delay caused substantial prejudice to defendant's rights with respect to the events occurring prior to indictment. State v. Madden, 242 Ga. 637, 250 S.E.2d 484, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1308 (1978).

To support a due process claim of unlawful preindictment delay, the defendant must show actual prejudice resulting from the preindictment delay and that the delay was purposefully designed to gain a tactical advantage or to harass the defendant. State v. Hight, 156 Ga. App. 246, 274 S.E.2d 638, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3016 (1980).

Speedy trial is fundamental constitutional right, not privilege. Blevins v. State, 113 Ga. App. 702, 149 S.E.2d 423, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1179 (1966).

Purposes of right to speedy trial. — The right to a speedy trial is intended to avoid oppression and prevent delay by imposing on the courts and on the prosecution an obligation to proceed with reasonable dispatch. The guaranty has been held to serve a threefold purpose: it protects the accused, if held in jail to await trial, against prolonged imprisonment; it relieves the accused of the anxiety and public suspicion attendant upon an untried accusation of crime; and, like statutes of limitation, it prevents the accused from being exposed to the hazard of a trial after the lapse of so great a time that the means of proving one's innocence may have been lost. It also applies to a person who is at large on bail, since, in addition to protecting an accused against prolonged incarceration, the right also serves other purposes which are applicable whether the defendant is on bail or not. Blevins v. State, 113 Ga. App. 702, 149 S.E.2d 423, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1179 (1966).

Unexcused denial of right to speedy trial by state is generally prejudice per se upon defendant's bona fide assertion of it. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Denial of speedy trial not prejudice per se. — Denial of right to speedy trial is constitutional deprivation which can work to accused's advantage; thus, failure to provide a speedy trial does not per se prejudice the accused's ability to defend oneself. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Assertion or failure to assert the right to speedy trial is a factor to be considered in an inquiry into the deprivation of the right though the accused has no responsibility to assert the right to speedy trial. The accused's assertion of that right would be entitled to strong evidentiary weight in determining whether the accused has been deprived of the right. The accused's failure to assert the right to a speedy trial would make it difficult to prove that the accused was denied that right. Powell v. State, 143 Ga. App. 684, 239 S.E.2d 560, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2463 (1977).

Factors to be assessed in determining whether accused has been deprived of right to speedy trial are: length of delay, the reason for the delay, the accused's assertion of the accused's right, and prejudice to the accused. Powell v. State, 143 Ga. App. 684, 239 S.E.2d 560, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2463 (1977).

In determining whether the right to speedy trial has been violated, a court is required to consider four factors: length of the delay, the reasons for the delay, the accused's assertion of the right and prejudice to the accused. Collins v. State, 154

Ga. App. 651, 269 S.E.2d 509, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2327 (1980).

Courts should assess four factors in determining whether a particular defendant has been deprived of the right to speedy trial: length of delay, the reason for the delay, the defendant's assertion of the right, and prejudice to the defendant. This balancing test is a delicate, sensitive process, and each case must rely upon its own circumstances. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Each case involving right to speedy trial must be analyzed on ad hoc basis, upon its own particular facts and circumstances. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Defendant is held to have some responsibility to assert speedy trial claim even though it is the state's duty to bring the defendant to trial; and unlike other constitutional rights, both society and the individual criminal defendant have a potential interest in either having a speedy trial or delaying any trial. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Defendant is required to show more than mere claim of prejudice in right to speedy trial. Collins v. State, 154 Ga. App. 651, 269 S.E.2d 509, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2327 (1980).

Defendant must show actual substantial prejudice because of delay in trial. — Since mere delay, even if unexcused, does not alone prejudice the defendant's ability to defend oneself, and since the defendant may be only too delighted to have the trial delayed, before the defendant is held deprived of the right to a speedy trial and there ensues the unsatisfactorily severe remedy of dismissal of the indictment with the serious consequence that a defendant who may be guilty of a serious crime will go free, without having been tried, the defendant must show some actual substantial prejudice to the defendant. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Although the state was negligent in failing to bring the defendant to trial in a timely fashion, that consideration was outweighed by the facts that the defendant suffered little actual prejudice from the delay and no unduly oppressive pre-trial incarceration, and waited a significant amount of time before asserting a speedy trial right; hence, the defendant's constitutional rights to a speedy trial were not violated. Christian v. State, 281 Ga. 474, 640 S.E.2d 21, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 23 (2007).

More than mere passage of time needed to constitute denial. — To constitute a denial of due process in the right to a speedy trial there must be more than the mere passage of time. Collins v. State, 154 Ga. App. 651, 269 S.E.2d 509, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2327 (1980).

Where overcrowded docket. — While a deliberate attempt by the prosecution to delay the trial in order to hamper the defense is weighed heavily against the government, an overcrowded docket is considered to be a more neutral reason although it cannot be overlooked. Collins v. State, 154 Ga. App. 651, 269 S.E.2d 509, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2327 (1980).

Delay solely by state authorities. — The fifth, sixth, and Fourteenth Amendments did not bar a federal prosecution in which any arguably improper or unconstitutional delay in the prosecution was occasioned solely by Georgia authorities; there was no basis for imputing Georgia's dilatory conduct to the United States or to the federal prosecution. United States v. Boone, 959 F.2d 1550, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 8909 (11th Cir. 1992).

Motion to dismiss or quash indictment for denial of speedy trial, not requesting immediate trial, is not demand for trial and is not an assertion of the right to speedy trial. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

Where trial court erred as matter of law in right to speedy trial case. — Although the determination is in every case a matter of judicial discretion, the trial court erred as a matter of law in holding that the defendant had asserted the right to speedy trial by merely moving to dismiss the indictment; and in holding that the defendant suffered actual prejudice by the death of an alibi witness whose testimony was merely cumulative; and in granting an overwhelming weight of legal burden to the duty of the state to provide a speedy trial, as against the failure of the defendant to assert the right to speedy trial in five and one-half years and the minimal prejudice caused by the delay. State v. Lively, 155 Ga. App. 402, 270 S.E.2d 812, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2602 (1980).

During the second trial of a convicted murderer to determine whether the death penalty should be imposed, (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2) refusal to admit testimony, as being hearsay (see O.C.G.A. § 24-3-1), to the effect that the accused did not commit the murder may constitute a violation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Green v. Georgia, 442 U.S. 95, 99 S. Ct. 2150, 60 L. Ed. 2d 738, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 120 (1979).

No due process if trial dominated by mob so jury intimidated, judge yields, and state executes judgment.

— If a trial is in fact dominated by a mob, so that the jury is intimidated and the trial judge yields, and so that there is an actual interference with the course of justice, there is, in that court, a departure from due process of law in the proper sense of that term. If the state supplies no corrective process and carries into execution a judgment of death or imprisonment based upon a verdict thus produced by mob domination, the state deprives the accused of life or liberty without due process of law. Downer v. Dunaway, 53 F.2d 586, 1931 U.S. App. LEXIS 2708 (5th Cir. 1931).

Likelihood or appearance of bias.

— Due process is denied by circumstances creating likelihood or appearance of bias even if there is no showing of actual bias. Peters v. Kiff, 407 U.S. 493, 92 S. Ct. 2163, 33 L. Ed. 2d 83, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 33 (1972).

Knowing and intelligent waiver of constitutional rights necessary. —

Waiver of constitutional rights not only must be voluntary but must be knowing, intelligent acts done with sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591

Defendant need not personally waive right to jury trial. — It is not necessary for preservation of due process that defendant personally waive right to jury trial. Little v. Stynchcombe, 227 Ga. 311, 180 S.E.2d 541, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 683 (1971).

Waiver of right to jury trial. — Where record indicated that valid waiver of right to jury trial may have occurred but did not reflect whether defendant personally, knowingly, voluntarily, and intelligently participated in such waiver, case was remanded to trial court for hearing on that issue. Wooten v. State, 162 Ga. App. 719, 293 S.E.2d 11, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3161 (1982).

Waiver of defendant's presence at trial. — Defendant has right to be present at trial, but may waive that right, even in a death-penalty case. Lonchar v. State, 258 Ga. 447, 369 S.E.2d 749, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 327 (1988), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 1019, 109 S. Ct. 818, 102 L. Ed. 2d 808, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 62 (1989).

No bias shown by remedial restraint on defendant during trial. — Trial court's utilization on defendant of an electronic restraint device as a security measure during trial was not error where the device was shielded from the jury's view and defendant failed to show that defendant was harmed by its use. Lovelace v. State, 262 Ga. App. 690, 586 S.E.2d 386, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 991 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1862, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 47 (Ga. Jan. 12, 2004).

Presumption of innocence. — Defendant enters into trial with presumption of innocence. Byrd v. Hopper, 402 F. Supp. 787, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15691 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Presumption of innocence and burden of proof are fundamental rights.

— Presumption of innocence and burden of proof placed on state in criminal prosecutions are fundamental rights protected by the Constitution, and are far too important and fundamental to be classified as less than constitutionally protected. Smith v. Smith, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 885, 93 S. Ct. 99, 34 L. Ed. 2d 141, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 1745 (1972).

State always bears burden of proof in criminal trial, and any shift of burden of essential element of the crime renders the trial fundamentally unfair. Johnson v. Wright, 509 F.2d 828, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 15676 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1014, 96 S. Ct. 445, 46 L. Ed. 2d 384, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 3581 (1975).

State required to prove guilt beyond reasonable doubt. — Due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 requires the state to prove guilt beyond a reasonable doubt in a criminal prosecution. Byrd v. Hopper, 402 F. Supp. 787, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15691 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Due process requires proof beyond reasonable doubt of every fact necessary to constitute crime. *Johnson v. App. 394, 283 S.E.2d 622, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2618 (1981); Mason v. Balkcom, 669 F.2d 222, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 21374 (5th Cir. 1982), cert. denied, 460 U.S. 1016, 103 S. Ct. 1260, 75 L. Ed. 2d 487, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 3734 (1983).

Due process requires state to prove beyond reasonable doubt every essential element of crime charged. Avery v. State, 138 Ga. App. 65, 225 S.E.2d 454, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2057, rev'd, 237 Ga. 865, 230 S.E.2d 301, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1425 (1976).

Proof beyond a reasonable doubt constitutes decisive difference between criminal culpability and civil liability. Little v. DeFrancis, 517 F. Supp. 1137, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13163 (M.D. Ga. 1981).

The due process clause protects the accused against conviction except upon proof beyond a reasonable doubt of every fact necessary to constitute the crime with which the accused is charged. Jury instructions that relieve the prosecution of this burden or that shift to the accused the burden of persuasion on one or more elements of the crime are unconstitutional. McCleskey v. Zant, 580 F. Supp. 338, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19860 (N.D. Ga. 1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 753 F.2d 877, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28073 (11th Cir. 1985).

The due process clause protects the accused against conviction except upon proof beyond a reasonable doubt of every fact necessary to constitute the crime with which the accused is charged. Starr v. State, 201 Ga. App. 73, 410 S.E.2d 180, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1205 (1991).

The trial court's instruction on reasonable doubt did not infringe upon the defendant's constitutionally-guaranteed due process rights by erroneously diminishing the state's burden of proof when it stated that a "doubt of the law" authorizing acquittal of the defendant exists if the jurors' "minds are wavering or unsettled or unsatisfied." Rucker v. State, 270 Ga. 431, 510 S.E.2d 816, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 44 (1999).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain the defendant's convictions for murder and possession of a knife during the commission of a crime beyond a reasonable doubt as the defendant did not dispute killing the victim and a rational trier of fact could have rejected the defendant's assertion that the defendant was not in control of the defendant's own actions, as well as any associated claims that the defendant was acting in self-defense or with an irresistible passion resulting from serious provocation. Mims v. State, 310 Ga. 853, 854 S.E.2d 742, 2021 Ga. LEXIS 21 (2021).

Proof beyond reasonable doubt required in criminal-contempt prosecution. — It is a denial of a defendant's right of due process of law under the federal and state constitutions and O.C.G.A. § 24-4-5 to fail to require proof beyond a reasonable doubt in a criminal-contempt prosecution, because the result of such a conviction is to deny the contemner of liberty and the levy of a penal fine. In re Crane, 253 Ga. 667, 324 S.E.2d 443, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1985).

Sanity not element which prosecution has to prove beyond a reasonable doubt. — Sanity has not been treated as critical essential element of offense which prosecution is required to prove beyond a reasonable doubt. Grace v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 669, 217 S.E.2d 267, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1221 (1975), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1066, 96 S. Ct. 806, 46 L. Ed. 2d 657, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1118 (1976); State v. Avery, 237 Ga. 865, 230 S.E.2d 301, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1425 (1976).

Burden of proof on state in criminal cases. — The burden of proof, as opposed to the burden of the evidence, is properly on the state in criminal cases; and at the outset of a criminal trial, the state has both burdens upon it. Smith v. Smith, 321 F. Supp. 482, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971).

Burden on government to produce evidence and convince fact finder of guilt. — Due process commands that no person shall lose one's liberty unless the government has borne the burden of producing the evidence and convincing the fact finder of that person's guilt. Smith v. Smith, 321 F. Supp. 482, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971).

Prosecution required to prove elements of crime beyond reasonable doubt. — Prosecution must carry burden of proving all critical essential elements of crime charged against a defendant in order to comport with due process. Grace v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 669, 217 S.E.2d 267, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1221 (1975), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 1066, 96 S. Ct. 806, 46 L. Ed. 2d 657, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1118 (1976).

The due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 requires that the prosecution prove each and every element of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt; a state, however, may place the burden of proof of an affirmative defense on the defendant. Holloway v. McElroy, 474 F. Supp. 1363, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10243 (M.D. Ga. 1979), aff'd, 632 F.2d 605, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11507 (5th Cir. 1980).

Burden on defendant to disprove elements of crime violates due process. — When the burden of proof or of persuasion is shifted to the defendant to disprove essential elements of a crime, then the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 has been violated. Smith v. Smith, 321 F. Supp. 482, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971).

Shift in burden of proof of essential element of crime to defendant renders trial fundamentally unfair. Smith v. Smith, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 885, 93 S. Ct. 99, 34 L. Ed. 2d 141, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 1745 (1972).

Shifting of burden of persuasion regarding fact state deems so important it must be proved or presumed is impermissible under the due process clause. Patterson v. State, 239 Ga. 409, 238 S.E.2d 2, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1193 (1977).

State with burden of proof and accused with presumption of innocence. — The principle that the state has the burden of proof in all criminal cases and that the accused is clothed with the presumption of innocence are an integral part of the concept of due process. Smith v. Smith, 321 F. Supp. 482, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971).

Burden of persuasion on element of intent. — Where an instruction on rebuttal is incorporated into a charge on the consequences presumed to be intended by a person of sound mind, the burden of persuasion on the element of intent is not shifted to the accused in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment's due process requirement that the state prove every element of a crime beyond a reasonable doubt. Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 945, 104 S. Ct. 1930, 80 L. Ed. 2d 475, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 232 (1984).

Burden of proof instruction constitutional. — Jury instruction stating that "no person shall be convicted of any crime unless and until each element of the crime is proven beyond a reasonable doubt and to a moral and reasonable certainty" did not lessen the burden of proof required for conviction in violation of the due process clause. Starr v. State, 201 Ga. App. 73, 410 S.E.2d 180, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1205 (1991); Bradford v. State, 261 Ga. 833, 412 S.E.2d 534, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 75 (1992).

Presumption-of-intent instruction unconstitutional. — In criminal prosecution in which intent was an element of the crime charged and the only contested issue at trial, jury instructions that included the sentences "The acts of a person of sound mind and discretion are presumed to be the product of a person's will, but the presumption may be rebutted" and "A person of sound mind and discretion is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his acts, but the presumption may be rebutted" violated U.S. Const., amend. 14's requirement that the state prove every element of a criminal offense beyond a reasonable doubt. Francis v. Franklin, 471 U.S. 307, 105 S. Ct. 1965, 85 L. Ed. 2d 344, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 4 (1985).

In a prosecution for malice murder, of which intent was an essential element, and in which the defendant claimed the shooting of the victim had been an accident, the jury instruction on intent, which contained the following language, was unconstitutional: "The acts of a person of sound mind and discretion are presumed to be the product of the person's will. A person of sound mind and discretion is presumed to intend [sic] the natural and probable consequences of his act. But, these presumptions may be rebutted." Carter v. Montgomery, 769 F.2d 1537, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 21496 (11th Cir. 1985).

The following charge to the jury unconstitutionally shifted the burden of persuasion on intent: "The acts of a person of sound mind and discretion are presumed to be the product of the person's will, and such person is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his acts, but either of these presumptions may be rebutted." Because the defendant's intent to kill was at issue in the trial and was supported by evidence sufficient to create a reasonable doubt concerning intent, the instruction was not harmless error. Lakes v. Ford, 779 F.2d 1578, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 21799 (11th Cir. 1986).

An instruction that shifts the burden of proof from the government to the defendant on the issue of intent (a Sandstrom error) cannot be ordinarily harmless error where the insanity defense has been raised, even though the jury has rejected this defense, since such rejection by a jury does not mean it finds the defendant was totally free of mental infirmity or that the defendant's capacity to formulate a specific intent was the same as that of a normal or average person. The prosecution must still prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant formed the intent necessary to commit murder. Bowen v. Kemp, 832 F.2d 546, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 14020 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 940, 108 S. Ct. 1120, 99 L. Ed. 2d 281, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 1123 (1988), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 970, 108 S. Ct. 1247, 99 L. Ed. 2d 445, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 1289 (1988).

The trial judge's error in a trial for murder in compelling the jury to find intent rather than allowing the jury to infer intent in violation of Sandstrom v. Montana was not harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Brooks v. Kemp, 809 F.2d 700, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 36782 (11th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 483 U.S. 1010, 107 S. Ct. 3240, 97 L. Ed. 2d 744, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 2824 (1987).

Identification testimony. — Jury charge that provided that a witness's level of certainty could be considered in assessing the reliability of identification testimony was harmless error as: (1) the identification witness was not the victim, viewed the crimes in daylight, already knew the defendant, recognized the defendant's gold teeth, and identified the defendant in a photographic lineup by the defendant's street name; (2) there was significant corroborating evidence, including a first witness's testimony that the defendant intended to kill the victim and the testimony of two other witnesses; and (3) the jury was accurately instructed as to the state's burden of proving the defendant's identity and the possibility of mistaken identification. Woodruff v. State, 281 Ga. 235, 637 S.E.2d 391, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 925 (2006).

Jury charge on intent or criminal negligence. — Where the court charged: "I charge you that intent or criminal negligence to commit the crime charged in the indictment are essential elements the state must prove beyond a reasonable doubt. . . . A person will not be presumed to act with criminal intention, but the tryor [sic] of facts; that is, the jury, may find such intention upon consideration of the words, conduct, demeanor, motive and all other circumstances connected with the act for which the accused is prosecuted . . .," the charge given was not unconstitutionally burden shifting. Veit v. State, 182 Ga. App. 753, 357 S.E.2d 113, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2656 (1987).

Jury charge on intent unconstitutionally relieved the state of its burden of persuasion on the intent element of each of the crimes with which the defendant was charged where the charge instructed the jury to presume that the defendant intended "the natural and necessary consequences of" the defendant's actions. Gaddis v. Kemp, 638 F. Supp. 819, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23731 (S.D. Ga. 1986).

Jury charge inferring intent to kill.

— Although the defendant presented the defense that due to the defendant's mental condition the defendant could not have formed the criminal intent to kill the defendant's brother, an essential element of murder, the trial court's charge, inferring the intent to kill from the use of a deadly weapon, did not unconstitutionally shift to the defendant the burden of proving lack of intent and negate the defendant's defense, because the jury was told that the decision whether or not to draw an inference was entirely up to them. Pace v. State, 258 Ga. 225, 367 S.E.2d 827 (1988).

Instruction on intent held harmless error. — Where the state presented overwhelming evidence of an intentional killing and where the defendant raised a defense of nonparticipation in the crime, effectively conceding the issue of intent, the unconstitutional burden-shifting instruction on intent was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Aldridge v. Montgomery, 753 F.2d 970, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28160 (11th Cir. 1985).

A jury charge which created an unconstitutional burden-shifting presumption with respect to the element of intent was harmless error, where defendant's defense was alibi and misidentification, and in the alternative, insanity, and such defenses did not put into issue criminal intent. Williams v. State, 180 Ga. App. 893, 350 S.E.2d 768, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2790 (1986).

Instruction that jury "may find" criminal intent upon a consideration of such circumstances as words, conduct, demeanor, or motive, is in no way unconstitutionally burden-shifting. Ford v. State, 256 Ga. 375, 349 S.E.2d 361, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 853 (1986).

Instruction that acts of person of sound mind are products of his will. — Instruction that told the jury, at the defendant's trial for felony-murder based upon the commission of armed robbery, that the acts of a person of sound mind and discretion are presumed to be the product of the person's will was reversible error, because it removed the presumption of innocence and relieved the state of the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intentionally committed the felony of armed robbery because the jury was instructed to presume that the defendant intended to perform the defendant's actions. Hall v. Kelso, 892 F.2d 1541, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 952 (11th Cir. 1990).

Instruction as to presumption that actions are a person's will. — Instructions charging that the acts of a person of sound mind and discretion are presumed to be a product of a person's will, but such presumption may be rebutted, and that a person of sound mind and discretion is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of that person's acts, but the presumption may be rebutted, create an unconstitutional burden-shifting presumption with respect to the element of intent. Boswell v. State, 176 Ga. App. 855, 338 S.E.2d 62, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2912 (1985).

Improper instruction on presumption of innocence. — Habeas corpus relief was properly granted to an inmate from a malice murder conviction because the inmate's trial counsel provided ineffective assistance by failing to reserve the right to make additional objections to the jury instructions or to object specifically to an instruction that the presumption of innocence was for the protection of the innocent and was not intended to be a cloak behind which guilty persons might hide; trial counsel's failure fell below an objective standard of reasonableness and constituted deficient performance because the instruction interfered with the right to a fair trial under the fourteenth amendment by permitting the jury to determine guilt from factors other than the proof adduced at trial, and a reasonable probability existed that, if not for trial counsel's deficient performance, the outcome of the trial would have been different. Tillman v. Massey, 281 Ga. 291, 637 S.E.2d 720, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 975 (2006).

Preprinted verdict form was erroneous because the form would mislead jurors of a reasonable understanding as to the presumption of innocence and the proper burden of proof; the verdict form constituted plain error under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-58(b) because the form affected the defendant's substantial rights by actively removing the presumption of innocence from the trial. Cheddersingh v. State, 290 Ga. 680, 724 S.E.2d 366, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 200 (2012).

Instruction that defendant may rebut presumption concerning consequences of actions disapproved. — A charge that "the acts of a person of sound mind and discretion may be inferred to be the product of that person's will, and it may be inferred that a person of sound mind and discretion intends the natural and probable consequences of their [sic] acts, but, of course, both of these inferences may be rebutted, and in any event the burden never shifts to the defendant," is not an unconstitutionally burden-shifting instruction, but has potential to confuse the jury as to how much evidence the defendant must produce to rebut the inference if the jury chooses to draw it, and such rebuttal language should not be used. Noggle v. State, 256 Ga. 383, 349 S.E.2d 175, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 844 (1986).

Jury instruction to conform to indictment. — Giving instruction on an entire Code section that defined a crime in two ways, when the indictment alleged that defendant committed the crime in only one way, was misleading and violated due process without a limiting instruction directing the jury to consider only whether defendant committed the crime as charged in the indictment. Dukes v. State, 265 Ga. 422, 457 S.E.2d 556, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 348 (1995).

Statutory presumptions of intoxication not unconstitutional. — A charge on driving under the influence of alcohol does not impermissibly direct the return of a verdict of guilty on the basis of the statutory presumptions of intoxication where the jury is instructed that the statutory presumptions are rebuttable. Clark v. State, 169 Ga. App. 535, 313 S.E.2d 748, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 1627 (1984).

No due process violation because hard choices on intoxication testing. — State's failure to immediately inform a defendant of the results of the state-administered test does not create a situation where the defendant is left with no, or so little information, that he or she is denied any meaningful choice in violation of due process; driving under the influence defendants must determine, often under difficult and stressful circumstances, whether to request an independent test, and that the choice may be difficult does not render it fundamentally unfair and this fact alone does not support a due process claim. Padidham v. State, 291 Ga. 99, 728 S.E.2d 175, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 440 (2012).

Charge that burden was on the defendant to show the defendant's authority to possess heroin did not deny the defendant due process and equal protection because the state established a prima-facie case and the defendant presented no evidence. Montford v. State, 168 Ga. App. 394, 309 S.E.2d 650, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2787 (1983), overruled on other grounds, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Charge on inference of guilt from possession of recently stolen property constitutional. — Instructing the jury that they might infer the defendant committed the crime upon proof that the defendant was in possession of the stolen goods in question recently after the commission of the crime, "unless . . . the defendant should make an explanation of the defendant's possession of the stolen property consistent with the defendant's pleas of innocence" does not unconstitutionally shift the burden of persuasion to the defendant. Clark v. State, 166 Ga. App. 366, 304 S.E.2d 494, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2170 (1983).

Trial court's instruction to the jury on the inference which may arise from proof of possession of goods recently stolen in a burglary was not burden-shifting. Myles v. State, 186 Ga. App. 817, 368 S.E.2d 574, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 478 (1988).

Burden of proving defendant's presence is on state throughout trial, and evidence of his absence tends merely to weaken or disprove the testimony of the state's witnesses on this point. Smith v. Smith, 321 F. Supp. 482, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971).

State must prove defendant's presence at commission of offense beyond a reasonable doubt since it is an essential element of the crime. Smith v. Smith, 321 F. Supp. 482, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971).

Burden to contradict state's evidence of the defendant's presence cannot require quantum of proof. — Where the state presents evidence of the defendant's presence, the burden of going forward with evidence to contradict the state's evidence may shift to the defendant but it must not carry with it the requirement that the defendant establish the defendant's evidence by any quantum of proof. Smith v. Smith, 321 F. Supp. 482, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971).

It is impermissible to require defendant to prove nonpresence by definite quantum of proof. Smith v. Smith, 321 F. Supp. 482, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971).

Charge shifting burden of persuasion to defendant on issue of self-defense unconstitutional and not harmless error. — The trial court's charge in a homicide case shifted the burden of persuasion to the defendant on the issue of self-defense in violation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, and this unconstitutional shift was not harmless error. Tennon v. Ricketts, 642 F.2d 161, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 14401 (5th Cir. 1981).

If a state includes unlawfulness within its murder and manslaughter laws as an element of those crimes, while at the same time state courts require the defendant to prove lawfulness by virtue of self-defense, that construction makes the statutes' operation run contrary to the Constitution in violation of due process. Tennon v. Ricketts, 642 F.2d 161, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 14401 (5th Cir. 1981).

No denial of due process where defendant allowed to admit some essential criminal elements to put justification of self-defense into issue. Holloway v. McElroy, 632 F.2d 605, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11507 (5th Cir. 1980).

Party seeking to prove unconstitutionally discriminatory enforcement of law has burden of presenting sufficient evidence to establish the existence of intentional or purposeful discrimination which is deliberately based upon an unjustifiable standard, such as race, religion, or other arbitrary classifications. State v. Causey, 246 Ga. 735, 273 S.E.2d 6, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1278 (1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 1019, 101 S. Ct. 3009, 69 L. Ed. 2d 391, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 2235 (1981).

Shifting burden of proof of alibi to accused is violation of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Trimble v. Stynchcombe, 481 F.2d 1175, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8537 (5th Cir. 1973).

Placing burden of proof or persuasion on defendant is unconstitutionally impermissible in cases involving alibi defense regardless of quantum of proof required. Smith v. Smith, 321 F. Supp. 482, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971).

Burden of proving alibi on defendant violates due process. — Due process is violated by charge that burden is upon defendant to prove alibi by preponderance of the evidence. Parham v. State, 120 Ga. App. 723, 171 S.E.2d 911, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 911 (1969).

The phrase, "Alibi as a defense must be established to the reasonable satisfaction of the jury," where included in jury charges, places the burden of proving the defendant's alibi on the defendant, and thus violates the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Smith v. Smith, 321 F. Supp. 482, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971).

Charge to jury that alibi must be established by defendant to reasonable satisfaction of jury is error for the reason that it shatters the presumption of innocence, creates confusion in the minds of the jury, shifts the burden of persuasion to the defendant on the issue of the defendant's presence at the crime and requires the defendant to establish the defendant's innocence, is inconsistent with the principle that the state must prove the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, and thereby violates fundamental rights incorporated in the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 of the United States Constitution. Smith v. Smith, 321 F. Supp. 482, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971); Patterson v. State, 233 Ga. 724, 213 S.E.2d 612, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1427 (1975).

Charge to jury that "alibi . . . must be established to reasonable satisfaction of jury . . ." violates due process guarantees since it removes the state's burden of proving the accused's presence at the scene of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt and imposes the burden of proving the accused's absence on the accused when the accused offers evidence to that effect. Smith v. Smith, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 885, 93 S. Ct. 99, 34 L. Ed. 2d 141, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 1745 (1972).

Charge shifting burden of proving alibi to defendant to "reasonable satisfaction of the jury" is violative of due process. Ward v. State, 234 Ga. 882, 218 S.E.2d 591, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1313 (1975).

State's characterization of its laws not to functionally operate to place burden of persuasion on defendant.

— In determining whether a state has met demands of procedural due process, federal courts must satisfy themselves that a state's characterization of its laws does not functionally operate to place the burden of persuasion of an essential element upon the defendant. Holloway v. McElroy, 632 F.2d 605, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11507 (5th Cir. 1980).

Despite a state's characterization of an issue as being an "affirmative defense," the state may not place the burden of persuasion on that issue upon the defendant if the truth of the "defense" would necessarily negate an essential element of the crime charged. Holloway v. McElroy, 632 F.2d 605, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11507 (5th Cir. 1980).

Where absence of self-defense is an essential element of the crime of voluntary manslaughter, and the trial court's charge operated to place the burden of persuasion on defendant on this issue, the defendant's conviction violated the defendant's due process rights under the United States Constitution. Holloway v. McElroy, 632 F.2d 605, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11507 (5th Cir. 1980).

Where evidence overwhelming, shifting burden of proof harmless.

— Where in a murder trial the jury was instructed as follows, "A person of sound mind and discretion is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his acts, but the presumption may be rebutted . . .," the trial court's instruction was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt because the evidence of defendant's guilt was overwhelming. This evidence overwhelmingly indicated that whoever killed victim intended to do so. Williams v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 1276, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6460 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed, 489 U.S. 1094, 109 S. Ct. 1579, 103 L. Ed. 2d 931, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1647 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1090, 110 S. Ct. 1836, 108 L. Ed. 2d 965, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1953 (1990).

Where codefendant presents no defense, no prejudice. — Where a defendant, to obtain a new trial for the denial of severance, must show prejudice and a denial of due process, but where the defendant argues that the defendant was prejudiced in that the defendant's defense was inconsistent with that of the codefendant, the codefendant's defense cannot be inconsistent with the defendant's where the codefendant presents no evidence. Rampley v. State, 166 Ga. App. 521, 304 S.E.2d 574, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 2232 (1983).

Error harmless where self-defense claim rejected.

— In a trial for murder, the charge that, "The law presumes that a person intends to accomplish the natural and probable consequences of his acts. If a person uses a deadly weapon or instrumentality in the manner in which such weapon or instrumentality is ordinarily employed to produce death and thereby causes the death of a human being, the law presumes the intent to kill," must be held to have impermissibly shifted the burden of proof on the essential element of intent to kill, but the error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt as the jury could not have entertained a reasonable doubt concerning the defendant's intent to kill, given its rejection of the defendant's claim of self-defense. Stephens v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 642, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 5265 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 872, 109 S. Ct. 189, 102 L. Ed. 2d 158, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3631 (1988).

Where presumptions of malice and intent in homicide prosecution not violative of due process.

— Charges in homicide prosecution that malice is presumed from an intentional killing and that intent is presumed from use of a deadly weapon did not violate due process because there is a rational connection between the facts proved and the facts presumed. Patterson v. State, 239 Ga. 409, 238 S.E.2d 2, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1193 (1977).

Charges in homicide prosecution that malice is presumed from an intentional killing and that intent is presumed from use of a deadly weapon were not unconstitutionally burden-shifting because they did not shift any burden of proof or persuasion to defendant. Patterson v. State, 239 Ga. 409, 238 S.E.2d 2, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1193 (1977).

Where jury was charged on both malice murder and felony murder and returned a general "guilty" verdict, the conviction required reversal where the indictment did not allege facts that would put the defendant on notice that the defendant would be required to defend against the felony-murder charge at trial. Crawford v. State, 254 Ga. 435, 330 S.E.2d 567, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 732 (1985).

If a case has been submitted to the jury on several alternative theories, one of which is unconstitutional, a general verdict of guilty which does not indicate it was based upon one of the constitutional theories must be set aside. Crawford v. State, 254 Ga. 435, 330 S.E.2d 567, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 732 (1985).

"Malice aforethought" not self-explanatory. — The defendant, who was illiterate and possessed minimal mental capacity, was inadequately informed of the elements of malice murder before he pled guilty. The prosecutor's note reading of the indictment did not suffice, as the term "malice aforethought," as it appeared in the indictment, was not self-explanatory and was incomprehensible to a layman, particularly one of limited mental capacity, without further explanation. Gaddy v. Linahan, 780 F.2d 935, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 21863 (11th Cir. 1986).

Supreme Court of Georgia disapproves the use of the phrase "the law presumes" in a deadly weapon charge, and has approved instead a charge authorizing the jury to "infer the intent to kill" from the intentional and unjustified use of a deadly weapon. Wilson v. Jones, 251 Ga. 23, 302 S.E.2d 546, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 688 (1983).

Use of "the law presumes" not reversible error. — Where the trial court gave the following charge: "... where one shoots another with a pistol and hits them [sic] the law presumes prima facie that he did it with malice, and that this presumption is not rebutted by proof that the parties had been good friends or that the defendant immediately after the shooting regrets the act," the charge when considered with other instructions did not suggest to a reasonable juror that the defendant was required to disprove criminal intent, nor did it remove from the state its burden of proving criminal intent beyond a reasonable doubt. Wilson v. Jones, 251 Ga. 23, 302 S.E.2d 546, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 688 (1983).

Due process requires that guilty plea must be knowingly, intelligently and voluntarily made and that the court make a determination to this effect before accepting the plea. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Prosecutor's disclosure of nolle prosequi agreement with defendant satisfied due process. — Where the jury was made aware of a nolle prosequi agreement between defendant and the prosecutor by the prosecutor's disclosure of the agreement, the requirements of due process were satisfied. Williams v. State, 151 Ga. App. 683, 261 S.E.2d 430, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2747 (1979).

When confessions can be introduced in evidence against defendant. — Where evidence shows that confessions were voluntarily made and were not induced by another by hope of award or fear of punishment, or where it is an issue of fact as to whether the confessions were properly obtained, defendant is not denied due process of law, as guaranteed by the state and federal Constitutions, by their introduction in evidence against him. Claybourn v. State, 190 Ga. 861, 11 S.E.2d 23, 1940 Ga. LEXIS 589 (1940).

Admission of confession in state criminal proceedings forbidden only when involuntary. — The United States Constitution forbids the admission of a confession in state criminal proceedings only when the confession is involuntary, and the legality, duration and conditions of detention is one factor relevant to the question whether the confession is voluntary. Blake v. State, 109 Ga. App. 636, 137 S.E.2d 49, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 940, cert. denied, 379 U.S. 924, 85 S. Ct. 281, 13 L. Ed. 2d 337, 1964 U.S. LEXIS 180 (1964).

Determination of voluntariness of confession. — Defendant's constitutional rights are violated when challenged confession introduced without determination by trial judge of voluntariness after an adequate hearing. Clark v. Smith, 224 Ga. 766, 164 S.E.2d 790, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 943 (1968), rev'd, 403 U.S. 946, 91 S. Ct. 2279, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859, 1971 U.S. LEXIS 1475 (1971).

Where: (1) the defendant in a criminal case contends that a confession sought to be introduced in evidence by the state was obtained as a result of coercion; (2) the testimony on the point is in conflict; and (3) the judge leaves the question of voluntariness or coercion to the jury without making a preliminary finding that the confession was in fact voluntary, the defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 14 have been violated. Schneider v. State, 130 Ga. App. 3, 202 S.E.2d 238, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1199 (1973).

Defendant is entitled to a fair hearing and a reliable determination on the issue of the voluntariness of statements made by defendant; although a judge need not make formal findings of fact or write an opinion, the judge's conclusion that a confession is voluntary must appear from the record with unmistakable clarity. When a Jackson-Denno hearing is held and defendant is offered the opportunity to present evidence contradictory to the state's prima facie case of voluntariness, the trial court must rule the confession either in or out of evidence; but if the opportunity is offered and no evidence attacking the veracity of the confession is produced, it is properly admitted. Defendant's claim that the trial court made no finding that defendant's custodial statement was voluntary lacked merit even though the trial court stated that the jury would decide the issue of voluntariness because the trial court held a Jackson-Denno hearing in which defendant was given an opportunity to present evidence that the confession was not voluntary, defendant made no claim that the confession was not in fact voluntary, and the trial court's subsequent ruling that the statement was admissible under such circumstances amounted "with unmistakable clarity" to a showing that the trial court had concluded that the confession was voluntary. Thomas v. State, 264 Ga. App. 389, 590 S.E.2d 778, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1488 (2003).

Determination of voluntariness of statement by public employee. —

Because the U.S. Supreme Court in Garrity v. N.J., 385 U.S. 493 (1967) employed the totality-of-the-circumstances test for evaluating whether a defendant's statement was coerced, and because Georgia courts have vast experience applying this test, the Supreme Court of Georgia adopts that test for determining whether the statements that a public employee makes during an investigation into the employee's activities are voluntary; factors a court may consider include whether the state actor made an overt threat to the defendant of the loss of the defendant's job if the defendant did not speak with investigators or whether a statute, rule, or ordinance of which the defendant was aware provided that the defendant would be terminated for failing to answer questions. State v. Aiken, 282 Ga. 132, 646 S.E.2d 222, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 407 (2007).

Statement by public employee defendant not voluntary. — Statements made by a defendant, a probation officer, as part of a criminal investigation into the defendant's conduct were not voluntary and thus could not be used at trial against the defendant; the defendant had subjective belief that the defendant could be fired if the defendant did not answer an investigator's questions, and considering a directive from the defendant's supervisors that the defendant meet with the investigator, combined with a form that the investigator had the defendant sign providing that the defendant could be fired if the defendant interfered with the investigation in any manner, the defendant's belief was objectively reasonable. State v. Aiken, 282 Ga. 132, 646 S.E.2d 222, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 407 (2007).

Where prima facie as to voluntariness of confession made. — Although the facts in evidence will be examined to determine whether or not they show a conviction by use of a coerced confession in violation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 or the provision in the state Constitution against self-incrimination, when such a question has been properly raised and presented, yet, where a prima facie case as to the voluntary character of the confession has been made, it is not within the power of this court to usurp the function of the jury in passing upon an issue, and to override their verdict supported by legal evidence and upheld by the judge in refusing a new trial, or to reverse a ruling admitting the confession in evidence, unless the evidence requires but one rational inference, that the confession was unlawfully obtained. Under this and the preceding rulings, the judge did not err in refusing to exclude from evidence the alleged illegal confessions and incriminatory statements of the defendant. Bryant v. State, 191 Ga. 686, 13 S.E.2d 820, 1941 Ga. LEXIS 376 (1941).

Holding hearing in presence of jury to determine voluntariness of confession violates due process clause; such a hearing outside of jury's presence is not per se reversible error. State v. Peabody, 247 Ga. 580, 277 S.E.2d 668, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 775 (1981).

Admission of interlocking confessions with proper limiting instructions conforms to requirements of U.S. Const., Amendments. 6 and 14. Tatum v. State, 249 Ga. 422, 291 S.E.2d 701, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1152 (1982).

Showing that confessor may have suffered from mental disability not sufficient to exclude statement. — A mere showing that one who confessed to a crime may have suffered from some mental disability is not a sufficient basis upon which to exclude his statement. Corn v. State, 240 Ga. 130, 240 S.E.2d 694, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1423 (1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 2255, 56 L. Ed. 2d 415 (1978).

One who suffers some mental or emotional impairment can give valid confession. Corn v. State, 240 Ga. 130, 240 S.E.2d 694, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1423 (1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 2255, 56 L. Ed. 2d 415 (1978).

There is no per se rule holding inadmissible confessions given by individuals suffering severe psychotic conditions. A confession, however, is inadmissible if it would not have been obtained but for the effects of the confessor's psychosis. Gibbs v. Warden of Ga. State Penitentiary, 450 F. Supp. 242, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17558 (M.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 589 F.2d 1113, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 17200 (5th Cir. 1979).

Admissions of psychotic individual may be used where giving of admissions not substantially related to effects of psychosis. Gibbs v. Warden of Ga. State Penitentiary, 450 F. Supp. 242, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17558 (M.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 589 F.2d 1113, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 17200 (5th Cir. 1979).

Confession inadmissible where affected by accused's psychosis. — A confession is inadmissible if it appears that the accused's psychosis rendered the accused incapable of understanding the meaning and effect of the accused's confession or caused the accused to be indifferent to protecting the accused or left the accused with little determination so that the accused's will might be easily overborne by questions and suggestions. Gibbs v. Warden of Ga. State Penitentiary, 450 F. Supp. 242, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17558 (M.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 589 F.2d 1113, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 17200 (5th Cir. 1979).

Where accused is substantially subnormal mentally. — Mental ability and unfamiliarity with criminal process weigh heavily against voluntariness of confession. Cooper v. Griffin, 455 F.2d 1142, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 11426 (5th Cir. 1972).

That an accused possesses a substantially subnormal mentality is a fact indicating, but not establishing, that his confession was involuntary. Gibbs v. Warden of Ga. State Penitentiary, 450 F. Supp. 242, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17558 (M.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 589 F.2d 1113, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 17200 (5th Cir. 1979).

Confession is inadmissible where probably not obtained but for confessor's insanity or mental incompetence despite proper police behavior and the apparent trustworthiness of the resulting confession. Gibbs v. Warden of Ga. State Penitentiary, 450 F. Supp. 242, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17558 (M.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 589 F.2d 1113, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 17200 (5th Cir. 1979).

Confessions given under influence of drugs or alcohol. — No per se rule that all confessions given while under influence of drugs or alcohol are inadmissible. Gibbs v. Warden of Ga. State Penitentiary, 450 F. Supp. 242, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17558 (M.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 589 F.2d 1113, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 17200 (5th Cir. 1979).

Use of threats or promises to coerce criminal defendant to make statement is contrary to state and federal constitutional law. Young v. State, 243 Ga. 546, 255 S.E.2d 20, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 984 (1979).

Detective's promise to a witness to "speak a word" in the witness's behalf in the witness's own case did not constitute a promise of favorable treatment required to be disclosed by the prosecution. Depree v. Thomas, 946 F.2d 784, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 26153 (11th Cir. 1991).

Investigator's services properly denied. — Where the defendant did not show that due to lack of an investigator the defendant was deprived of interviewing witnesses, trial court's motion denial did not deny the defendant federally guaranteed due process of law. Jones v. State, 207 Ga. App. 46, 427 S.E.2d 40, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 57 (1993).

Confessions are not generally rendered inadmissible merely because obtained by fraud, deception, or trickery practiced upon the accused, provided the means employed are not calculated to procure an untrue statement and the confession is otherwise freely and voluntarily made. Moore v. Hopper, 389 F. Supp. 931, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12839 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

When giving suspect false information insufficient to render confession inadmissible. — In questioning a mature criminal suspect of normal intelligence, who has been fully advised of the suspect's constitutional rights, falsely advising the suspect that the murder weapon has been found is insufficient in and of itself to render the suspect's otherwise free and voluntary confession inadmissible. Moore v. Hopper, 389 F. Supp. 931, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12839 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

The fact that state police falsely told the defendant, a mature individual of normal intelligence, during questioning of short duration that the defendant's associate had confessed, while relevant, was insufficient to make an otherwise voluntary confession inadmissible. Moore v. Hopper, 389 F. Supp. 931, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12839 (M.D. Ga. 1974).

Voluntary confession obtained during unlawful detention. — Admissibility of voluntary confession obtained during unlawful detention in state judicial proceedings remains matter for state determination. Blake v. State, 109 Ga. App. 636, 137 S.E.2d 49, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 940, cert. denied, 379 U.S. 924, 85 S. Ct. 281, 13 L. Ed. 2d 337, 1964 U.S. LEXIS 180 (1964).

Confession admissible where defendant waived right to counsel and showed no lack of understanding of rights. — Where due process and fair trial standards are otherwise met, admission of the confession of a 16-year-old defendant to various felony offenses in evidence is not cause for new trial where the defendant both orally and in writing waived the right to counsel during interrogation, never attempted to withdraw the waiver, and made no showing that the refusal of counsel at certain pretrial investigative interrogations was due to any lack of understanding on the defendant's part of the defendant's rights or of the issues involved. Jones v. State, 119 Ga. App. 105, 166 S.E.2d 617, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 997 (1969).

Proof of venue is essential element in proving guilt in criminal case. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

Venue in conspiracy prosecution is properly laid either in the jurisdiction where the conspiracy was formed or in any jurisdiction wherein a conspirator committed an overt act in furtherance of the conspiracy. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

It is essential in conspiracy prosecution that jury be properly instructed as to venue where overt acts are alleged to have been committed in more than one jurisdiction. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

Right under U.S. Const., amend. 6, of an accused to confront witnesses

against the accused is fundamental right made obligatory on states by U.S. Const., amend. 14. Dutton v. Evans, 400 U.S. 74, 91 S. Ct. 210, 27 L. Ed. 2d 213, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 2 (1970); Lingerfelt v. State, 235 Ga. 139, 218 S.E.2d 752, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 806 (1975); Park v. Huff, 506 F.2d 849, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 16511 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 423 U.S. 824, 96 S. Ct. 38, 46 L. Ed. 2d 40, 1975 U.S. LEXIS 2328 (1975).

In almost every setting where important decisions turn on questions of fact, due process requires an opportunity to confront and cross-examine adverse witnesses. Jeffries v. Georgia Residential Fin. Auth., 503 F. Supp. 610, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15557 (N.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 678 F.2d 919, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18426 (11th Cir. 1982).

Adequate accommodation for defendant's hearing loss. — Defendant's claim of a due process violation because the defendant's hearing impairment prevented the defendant from comprehending the witnesses' testimony was properly rejected. The trial court accommodated the defendant by moving the defendant closer to the witness stand and obtaining a hearing device for the defendant to use, and the defendant's conduct during the trial and statements to defense counsel indicated that the defendant was able to understand the testimony. Neugent v. State, 294 Ga. App. 284, 668 S.E.2d 888, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1171 (2008).

Witnesses' statements provided to counsel prior to testimony. — Where the defendant enumerated as error the state's failing to provide the defendant with copies of statements of witnesses, prior to trial, in which the driver of the car departing the burglary site was described as having "sandy-blond" hair, whereas one witness described the defendant's hair color as "light brown," but the statements were provided to the defendant's counsel prior to the beginning of the testimony, but after the jury had been impaneled and counsel was offered the opportunity to examine the witnesses before they testified and accepted, the defendant's motion for mistrial was properly denied. Masters v. State, 186 Ga. App. 795, 368 S.E.2d 557, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 508 (1988).

Standard for evaluation of evidence in state criminal trial that of sufficiency of evidence. — The standard by which the court must evaluate the evidence in a state criminal trial to determine whether the petitioner has been accorded constitutional due process was recently reformulated by the Supreme Court of the United States; instead of determining whether or not there is "any evidence" to support petitioner's conviction, the court must now go further and satisfy itself that the evidence in the record could reasonably support a finding of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt; the question therefore is not a question of the presence of evidence in the record but of the sufficiency of that evidence. Holloway v. McElroy, 474 F. Supp. 1363, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10243 (M.D. Ga. 1979), aff'd, 632 F.2d 605, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11507 (5th Cir. 1980).

Defendant not prohibited from challenging state's evidence. — Defendant's claim that the defendant was denied due process because the state used "false evidence" to convict the defendant failed, because the defendant was not prevented in any way from challenging the State's evidence the defendant contended was incorrect, evidence regarding the use of cell phone records to show location, and the defendant chose not to challenge the evidence. Davis v. State, 292 Ga. 90, 734 S.E.2d 401, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 955 (2012).

One on one confrontations between witness and suspect. — As general rule "one on one" confrontations between eyewitness and suspect have been condemned. Sell v. State, 156 Ga. App. 333, 274 S.E.2d 723, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2968 (1980).

Claimed violation of due process of law in conduct of confrontation depends on totality of circumstances. Sell v. State, 156 Ga. App. 333, 274 S.E.2d 723, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2968 (1980).

Lineup identification, or identification from group of photographs, is not prerequisite to every in-court identification. Moye v. State, 122 Ga. App. 14, 176 S.E.2d 180, 1970 Ga. App. LEXIS 762 (1970); Clark v. State, 156 Ga. App. 326, 274 S.E.2d 718, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2963 (1980).

A line-up identification, or identification from group of photographs, is not a prerequisite to every in-court identification. The test is whether identification confrontation staged by the law enforcement authorities, judged by the “totality of the circumstances surrounding it,” is “so unnecessarily suggestive and conducive to irreparable mistaken identification” as to constitute a denial of due process of law. Clark v. State, 156 Ga. App. 326, 274 S.E.2d 718, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2963 (1980).

Defendant’s motion to suppress two photographic identifications was properly denied as the defendant did not make a sufficient showing as to how the differences in the defendant’s photos would have rendered the lineups or procedures suggestive. Waters v. State, 281 Ga. 119, 636 S.E.2d 538, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 843 (2006).

Admission of evidence derived from suggestive identification procedures falls within scope of the due process protection of U.S. Const., amend. 14 to the United States Constitution as U.S. Const., amend. 14 is a prohibition against deprivation of rights by state action, and not by the individual or personal acts of a private citizen. Riden v. State, 151 Ga. App. 654, 261 S.E.2d 409, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2737 (1979).

Under totality of circumstances, identification may be reliable even though confrontation procedure was suggestive. When the particular factors pointing to suggestiveness are considered, if the identifications were not all but inevitable under the circumstances, they will not violate due process. Barron v. State, 157 Ga. App. 186, 276 S.E.2d 868, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1728 (1981).

It is likelihood of misidentification which offends due process. The factors to be considered in evaluating the likelihood of misidentification include the opportunity of the witness to view the criminal at the time of the crime, the witness’ degree of attention, the accuracy of the witness’ prior description of the criminal, and the level of certainty demonstrated by the witness at the confrontation. Hill v. State, 144 Ga. App. 259, 241 S.E.2d 44, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2663 (1977).

In-court identification is not constitutionally inadmissible if it has independent origin even if pretrial identification is tainted. Moye v. State, 122 Ga. App. 14, 176 S.E.2d 180, 1970 Ga. App. LEXIS 762 (1970); Perkins v. State, 216 Ga. App. 118, 453 S.E.2d 135, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 36 (1995).

When conviction based on in-court identification following pretrial identification set aside. — In-court identification of a defendant is tainted by earlier photographic identification procedure only if it can be shown that the procedure was “so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification.” United States v. Ervin, 436 F.2d 1331, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 12329 (5th Cir. 1971); United States v. Elliott, 437 F.2d 1253, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 12072 (5th Cir. 1971).

Convictions based on eyewitness identification at trial following a pretrial identification by photograph will be set aside on that ground only if the photographic identification procedure was so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. Redd v. State, 154 Ga. App. 373, 268 S.E.2d 423, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2174 (1980).

No state action violative of defendant’s rights where victim not shown photograph of defendant by police. — Where the victim was shown a single photograph of the defendant, not provided by a police officer nor by an individual established as acting in concert or at the request of the police, there was insufficient nexus to establish “state action” in violation of the defendant’s constitutional rights. Riden v. State, 151 Ga. App. 654, 261 S.E.2d 409, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2737 (1979).

An impermissibly suggestive identification procedure conducted by the police (the state) will taint an in-court identification procedure which is not independent of the tainted procedure. Riden v. State, 151 Ga. App. 654, 261 S.E.2d 409, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2737 (1979).

sel at line-up. — If the accused has been denied counsel at the line-up, the result is only that an in-court identification by a witness viewing the line-up will be excluded from evidence, if the court should find that the state has not shown that the in-court identification was based upon observations of the suspect other than the line-up identification. Mitchell v. Smith, 229 Ga. 781, 194 S.E.2d 414, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 773 (1972).

Admission of a booking photograph was not irrelevant or so impermissibly suggestive that there was a substantial likelihood of mistaken identification in violation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I since the witness testified that the witness could not identify the defendant in court as the defendant had grown a beard, grown a long ponytail, and was heavier than at the time of the incident, but the witness was able to identify the person in the booking photograph; thus, the photograph was relevant to identify the defendant, and to show how the defendant appeared at the time of the crime. Horner v. State, 257 Ga. App. 12, 570 S.E.2d 94, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 1437 (2002).

Hearing on motion to suppress identification testimony need not always be outside jury's presence. — Due process clause does not require state trial court to conduct hearing outside jury's presence on motion to suppress identification testimony in every case. State v. Peabody, 247 Ga. 580, 277 S.E.2d 668, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 775 (1981).

Factors weighed as to revealing informer's identity. — When an informer's identity is sought to be revealed by the defendant, the trial court must weigh the materiality of the informer's identity to the defense against the state's privilege not to disclose his name. Thornton v. State, 238 Ga. 160, 231 S.E.2d 729, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 940 (1977).

When absolute privilege against informer's identity impermissible. — Absolute privilege against disclosure in every case involving informer is impermissible where Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1962) motion is made. Davidson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 457, 274 S.E.2d 807, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3066 (1980).

An absolute privilege against disclosure of the identity of every informer who supplies the information upon which an arrest is based is impermissible where a motion is made to disclose information favorable to the defendant. Thornton v. State, 238 Ga. 160, 231 S.E.2d 729, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 940 (1977).

Error to refuse to consider appellants' motion for disclosure of informer's identity on its merits. — The trial judge erred in refusing to consider appellants' Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1962), motion for disclosure of the identity of the informer on its merits and in denying the motion solely on the theory that the identity was absolutely privileged. This error, however, can be cured by a post-trial hearing before the judge in the trial court. Davidson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 457, 274 S.E.2d 807, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3066 (1980).

Where informer is tipster, identity immaterial because evidence is inadmissible hearsay. — If the state proves to the court's satisfaction that an informer is a pure tipster, who has neither participated in nor witnessed the offense, any evidence he might offer would be hearsay and inadmissible. Thus the tipster's identity could not be material to the guilt or innocence of the defendant or be relevant and helpful to the defense. The public policy of the state toward nondisclosure would not be overcome and the state may rely on its privilege. Thornton v. State, 238 Ga. 160, 231 S.E.2d 729, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 940 (1977).

Trial court's comment on jurors' notes did not affect an inmate's right to an impartial jury. — Trial court did not express an opinion in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57 or of an inmate's rights to confrontation or a fair and impartial jury when it explained to those in the courtroom during jury deliberations in the inmate's trial on drug and weapons offenses that it had received two notes from the jury describing a communication received by a juror that offered the juror a bribe in exchange for changing the juror's vote to not guilty; the trial court's comment did not suggest that the inmate had directed the bribery attempt because it merely reviewed the jurors' notes and did not go beyond them, and it added nothing to that which the jurors already knew. Greer v. Thompson, 281 Ga. 419, 637 S.E.2d 698, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 983 (2006).

When alleged accomplice's statement admissible. — Even though an alleged accomplice does not appear at the defendant's trial, his statement can be placed before the jury under former Code 1933, § 38-306 (see O.C.G.A. § 24-3-5) without violating the due process or confrontation clauses, if the statement meets certain indicia of reliability, including the fact that it was offered spontaneously and was against the accomplice's penal interest. Spivey v. State, 138 Ga. App. 298, 226 S.E.2d 104, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2139, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 921, 97 S. Ct. 317, 50 L. Ed. 2d 288, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 3317 (1976).

Due process violated by state's suppression of evidence favorable to accused. — Suppression by prosecution of evidence favorable to accused when requested violates due process where the evidence is material either to guilt or to punishment, irrespective of the good faith or bad faith of the prosecution; but there must be evidence that such information existed and was actually withheld. Eades v. State, 232 Ga. 735, 208 S.E.2d 791, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 1075 (1974); Clark v. State, 144 Ga. App. 69, 240 S.E.2d 270, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2588 (1977).

Suppression by the prosecution of evidence favorable to an accused upon request violates due process where the evidence is material either to guilt or to punishment, irrespective of the good faith or bad faith of the prosecution. Lundy v. State, 139 Ga. App. 536, 228 S.E.2d 717, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1878 (1976).

Due process requires there be no suppression by state of evidence in its files favorable to accused, though there is no statutory method of discovery in criminal cases in Georgia. Thornton v. State, 139 Ga. App. 483, 228 S.E.2d 919, 1976 Ga.

App. LEXIS 1856 (1976); Howell v. State, 157 Ga. App. 451, 278 S.E.2d 43, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1867 (1981).

The suppression by the prosecution of evidence favorable to an accused upon request violates due process where the evidence is material either to guilt or to punishment. The evidence is material if it is of sufficient significance to result in the denial of the defendant's right to a fair trial if not disclosed. Davidson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 457, 274 S.E.2d 807, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3066 (1980).

Withholding or suppression by prosecution of evidence material to guilt or punishment is violative of due process. United States v. D'Antignac, 628 F.2d 428, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 13010 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 967, 101 S. Ct. 1485, 67 L. Ed. 2d 617, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 1127 (1981).

Prosecution's suppression of favorable material evidence requested is reversible error. — The prosecution's suppression of evidence, in the face of a defense production request, where the evidence is favorable to the accused and is material either to guilt or to punishment, is reversible error. Rini v. State, 235 Ga. 60, 218 S.E.2d 811, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 780 (1975).

Affirmative duty on prosecution to produce evidence favorable to accused. Brady vs. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215, (1963), imposes an affirmative duty on the prosecution to produce at the appropriate time requested evidence which is favorable to the accused either as direct or impeaching evidence. The accused need not show that the evidence demanded is favorable to the defense. Williams v. Dutton, 400 F.2d 797, 1968 U.S. App. LEXIS 5749 (5th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1105, 89 S. Ct. 908, 21 L. Ed. 2d 799, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 2640 (1969).

Duty is on state to disclose evidence exculpatory or material noncumulative and favorable to defense, even in the absence of request. Thornton v. State, 139 Ga. App. 483, 228 S.E.2d 919, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1856 (1976).

Constitutional requirement of Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963), is that the state produce exculpatory evidence in its files, not that the state affirmatively seek out exculpatory evidence, even though that evidence may be more accessible to the state than the defense. Plemons v. State, 155 Ga. App. 447, 270 S.E.2d 836, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2620 (1980).

Prosecutor may not suppress material evidence favorable to the accused, whether or not a request for such information is made or an in-camera inspection conducted. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1026 (1983).

Assistance to criminal defendant to procure reasonably obtainable evidence for defense. — It is not inconceivable that the idea embodied in the Constitutions, that every defendant shall stand equal before the law, might be held to require, and would certainly permit, that a criminal defendant be furnished assistance to procure evidence reasonably obtainable for the defense, including, when needed, an examination by a competent and disinterested expert qualified to give testimony. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, 1966 Ga. App. LEXIS 1062, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 196 (1966).

No burden on state to open its file for general inspection by the defendant; an in camera inspection of the prosecution file by the judge is sufficient, and the defendant has the burden of showing how the case has been materially prejudiced. Howell v. State, 157 Ga. App. 451, 278 S.E.2d 43, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1867 (1981).

Exculpatory evidence delayed. — Defendant's fifth amendment rights were not violated when the defendant did not receive a copy of an exculpatory witness's statement until after indictment and following the defendant's second attorney's discovery motion. Defendant failed to prove how the outcome of the case would have been any different if defendant had been supplied the exculpatory statement at an earlier date. Rock v. Lowe, 893 F. Supp. 1573, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16088

(S.D. Ga. 1995), aff'd, 79 F.3d 1161, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 4579 (11th Cir. 1996).

Only material which creates a reasonable doubt as to guilt must be disclosed under a general request for anything exculpatory. Radford v. State, 251 Ga. 50, 302 S.E.2d 555, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 695 (1983).

Not every nondisclosure of exculpatory information is error; rather, where the omitted evidence was not specifically requested, nondisclosure is error only if the omitted evidence creates a reasonable doubt that did not otherwise exist. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1026 (1983).

Where the state fails to disclose substantive evidence favorable to a defendant for which there was no specific request, the failure to disclose violates due process only if the omitted evidence creates a reasonable doubt that did not otherwise exist. Maddox v. Montgomery, 718 F.2d 1033, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 15604 (11th Cir. 1983).

Where none of materials sought for inspection were exculpatory in nature, trial court does not err in refusing to compel discovery pursuant to defendant's notices to produce and subpoenas. Jones v. State, 135 Ga. App. 893, 219 S.E.2d 585, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 1864 (1975).

Defendant's failure to identify exculpatory evidence. — Defendant was not denied defendant's constitutional right to due process by the state's failure to secure exculpatory evidence where defendant failed to identify any potential evidence that was not investigated or developed by the state; mere speculation that there may be exculpatory evidence was insufficient to show a due process violation. Cameron v. State, 262 Ga. App. 296, 585 S.E.2d 209, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 889 (2003).

Trial judge must conduct hearing on merits of Brady v. Maryland motion and if the judge finds the evidence material under Brady weigh it against the state's privilege under Roviaro v. United States, 353 U.S. 53, 77 S. Ct. 623, 1 L. Ed. 2d 639 (1956). Davidson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 457, 274 S.E.2d 807, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3066 (1980).

Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963), is not violated when the Brady material is available to defendants during trial. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1026 (1983).

Defendant did not establish Brady violation. — Under Brady, a defendant did not show that the state agreed to any sort of deal with an accomplice witness in exchange for the witness's testimony. To the extent that the witness or the witness's counsel hoped that the witness's testimony would later benefit the witness, their subjective hopes were not evidence that a deal existed; there was no evidence that the prosecutor encouraged the witness or the witness's lawyer to believe that the witness would benefit from testifying against the defendant; and the fact that the state ultimately cooperated with counsel's efforts to reduce the witness's sentence did not prove that the state and the witness had a deal prior to the defendant's trial. Varner v. State, 297 Ga. App. 799, 678 S.E.2d 515, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 549 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1545, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 588 (Ga. Sept. 8, 2009).

Brady question raised on appeal. — When a question concerning compliance with the mandate of Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963) is raised on appeal, the appellant has the burden of showing how the case has been materially prejudiced. If the evidence not furnished the defendant has been ruled cumulative, the defendant has not shown any prejudice the defendant has suffered. Chancellor v. State, 165 Ga. App. 365, 301 S.E.2d 294, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3152 (1983).

Defendant was not denied due process rights because the trial court instructed an interpreter to translate only a witness's testimony for the benefit of the jury, and not to otherwise interpret peripheral proceedings for the witness that were unrelated to the content of the witness's testimony; the defendant failed to show how the defendant was denied the right to participate in a meaningful way in the proceedings. Puga-Cerantes v. State, 281 Ga. 78, 635 S.E.2d 118, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 577 (2006).

Defendant failed to prove the prejudice prong of the defendant's Brady claim as the defendant merely speculated that an expert might have been able to show that the defendant was not traveling at 60-70 miles per hour in a stolen vehicle; such speculation did not establish a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different if the defendant had been provided with a copy of a videotape of a police officer's high-speed chase of the stolen vehicle before trial. Ferguson v. State, 280 Ga. 893, 635 S.E.2d 144, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 572 (2006).

Defendant must show favorable information improperly withheld by state, denying the defendant a fair trial. — In a criminal case, in order to establish a due process violation based on denial of a Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963) motion for discovery of exculpatory material, the defendant has the burden of showing that any of the information allegedly withheld improperly was favorable to the defendant, and that the withholding in any way denied the defendant a fair trial. Lewis v. State, 166 Ga. App. 428, 304 S.E.2d 531, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3237 (1983).

After hearing, defendants must show materiality and favorable nature of evidence. — Witness statements have never been subject to a notice to produce, although exculpatory witness statements are subject to disclosure, where requested, under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963), but where in compliance with Brady supra and its progeny, the trial court has made an in-camera inspection of the requested statements and found no exculpatory information, the defendant then has the burden of showing both the materiality and the favorable nature of the evidence sought. Welch v. State, 251 Ga. 197, 304 S.E.2d 391, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 763 (1983).

Victim's failure to identify codefendant not exculpatory evidence requiring disclosure. — Since the failure of the victim to identify another party to the assault does not create a reasonable doubt as to the guilt of defendant, whom the victim positively identified in a photographic lineup and again at trial, the district attorney did not violate Brady v.

Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963) in failing to disclose that the victim was unable to identify the other party. Radford v. State, 251 Ga. 50, 302 S.E.2d 555, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 695 (1983).

Information provided by witness for the first time at trial. — Where a witness stated for the first time during trial that, after the murder, the defendant asked another to burn the defendant's trousers, there was no violation of the constitutional duty to disclose, for the simple reason that the statement was not suppressed. Castell v. State, 250 Ga. 776, 301 S.E.2d 234, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1026 (1983).

Failure to provide copy of signature not harmful. — Where a defendant filed a general Brady motion with the state, the mere failure of the state to provide the defense with a copy of the signature of the defendant given to police officers, which was not used as a basis for any expert testimony and could have had relevance only to the authenticity of the signature on a pawn ticket, could have neither harmed nor prejudiced the defendant, who admitted under oath that the defendant signed the defendant's name to the pawn ticket. Barton v. State, 181 Ga. App. 457, 352 S.E.2d 637, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 1448 (1987).

Delay in delivering officer's sketches of crime scene. — Where a police identification technician made rough sketches of the crime scene during investigation of the murder, shortly thereafter this technician was sent to the police academy and took the rough sketches with the technician, and one day prior to trial the technician prepared a "final" drawing from the sketches that was immediately given to the defendant, and the defendant moved for a mistrial on the ground that the final sketch should have been both prepared and delivered to the defendant more promptly pursuant to the defendant's motion under Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963), it was held that the evidence was not suppressed, the defendant had not shown that the final sketch was in any way exculpatory, and the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the defendant's motion for mistrial. Baty v. State, 257 Ga. 371, 359 S.E.2d 655, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 848 (1987).

Defendant entitled to have substance related to charge independently analyzed. — A defendant charged with possession or sale of a prohibited substance has a general right to have an expert of the defendant's own choosing analyze it independently. If the defendant's conviction or acquittal is dependent upon the identification of the substance as contraband, due process of law requires that analysis of the substance not be left completely within the province of the state. Patterson v. State, 238 Ga. 204, 232 S.E.2d 233, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 963, cert. denied, 431 U.S. 970, 97 S. Ct. 2932, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1067, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2414 (1977).

Dismissal of drug possession charges against defendant after the state intentionally destroyed defendant's urine sample was proper where the crime lab's positive test results on the sample were the only evidence of defendant's guilt; the sample had initially tested negative for drugs in a field test; and there was an existing court order allowing defendant to independently test the sample. State v. Blackwell, 245 Ga. App. 135, 537 S.E.2d 457, 2000 Ga. App. LEXIS 917 (2000).

Destruction of blood sample before defendant could independently test it. — The defendant was not denied the right to due process when the state destroyed defendant's blood sample before defendant had an opportunity to independently test it for alcohol since the evidence was destroyed at the time that crime lab guidelines indicated that it should be destroyed, and the defendant produced no evidence that the crime lab or anyone acting for the state intentionally destroyed the evidence or had the evidence destroyed as a result of improper motive, such as keeping exculpatory evidence from the defendant. Swanson v. State, 248 Ga. App. 551, 545 S.E.2d 713, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 339 (2001), cert. denied, No. S01C0997, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 651 (Ga. Sept. 7, 2001).

No suppression of exculpatory evidence. — Where defendant argued that the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss the indictment due to the state's "failure" to prevent the victim's child from selling the trailer in which the murder took place, maintaining the state's inaction was tantamount to suppressing evidence, as the trailer was obviously critical exculpatory evidence, but the defendant had access to numerous crime scene photographs taken by the police and the defendant made no showing either that exculpatory evidence had been suppressed under Brady v. Maryland, or that the police were under a duty to prevent the victim's child from disposing of the trailer, there was no error. Baty v. State, 257 Ga. 371, 359 S.E.2d 655, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 848 (1987).

Where a defendant asserted error in the state's "deliberate and willful" suppression of exculpatory evidence, the glass-louvered door through which victim's home was entered unlawfully, but it is clear from such evidence that the state did not willfully and deliberately suppress evidence of the door since it was never in the state's possession, as the missing door had been replaced by the victim with a new door the same day the burglary occurred, there was no showing that defendant was prejudiced by the "loss," and since the door and missing louver were not exculpatory evidence, the court did not err by refusing to dismiss the charge on this ground. Burson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 647, 359 S.E.2d 731, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2736 (1987), cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905.

No requirement that card from which Miranda rights are read by officers to defendant be introduced in evidence by the state. James v. State, 230 Ga. 29, 195 S.E.2d 448, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 796 (1973).

Evidence of commission of crime other than one charged is generally not admissible. Bixby v. State, 234 Ga. 812, 218 S.E.2d 609, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1295 (1975).

Procedure upon defendant's challenge to voluntariness of statement. — Once a defendant raises the issue of voluntariness of a statement the state wishes to use for impeachment purposes, she is entitled to a determination of the issue by the trial court before the statement can be used, although not to a separate "Jackson v. Dennis" hearing. Fain v. State, 165 Ga. App. 188, 300 S.E.2d 197, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3128 (1983).

Fact that defendant exposes the existence of a statement does not render the substance of the statement immune from the requirement for admissibility that the statement was given voluntarily. Fain v. State, 165 Ga. App. 188, 300 S.E.2d 197, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3128 (1983).

Use of defendant's involuntary statement prohibited for all purposes. — It is a denial of due process of law for the state to use an involuntary statement against a defendant at trial for any purpose. Fain v. State, 165 Ga. App. 188, 300 S.E.2d 197, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3128 (1983).

Use of involuntary statements of nondefendants. — The due process reasons for excluding the use of a defendant's involuntary statement do not apply with equal force to the use of involuntary statements from nondefendant witnesses. Wilcox v. State, 250 Ga. 745, 301 S.E.2d 251, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1029 (1983).

Where a witness was on the witness stand and available to be questioned concerning an allegedly coerced and involuntary statement to the police and because one of the due process principles for excluding involuntary confessions (the defendant's position in the system of justice) does not apply to nondefendant witnesses who take the stand at trial, no due process rights of the defendant were violated by allowing the state to use the witness' prior statement for impeachment purposes. Wilcox v. State, 250 Ga. 745, 301 S.E.2d 251, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1029 (1983).

Statement obtained in violation of Miranda admissible for impeachment. — A prior inconsistent statement of a criminal defendant is admissible for the limited purpose of impeaching trial testimony of the defendant even though the prior inconsistent statement would otherwise be inadmissible due to Miranda violations in defendant's trial. Hicks v. State, 256 Ga. 266, 347 S.E.2d 589, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 788 (1986).

Due Process (Cont'd)10. Criminal Trials (Cont'd)

Answers to general questions admissible though no Miranda warnings given. — Miranda warnings do not have to be given in advance to general on-the-scene questioning as to facts surrounding a crime or other general questioning of citizens in the fact finding process for answers to those questions to be admissible as evidence. Brown v. State, 140 Ga. App. 160, 230 S.E.2d 128, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1383 (1976), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 819, 98 S. Ct. 58, 54 L. Ed. 2d 75, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 2790 (1977).

When testimony as to what defendant said to police agent while not in custodial interrogation is admissible. — If a defendant is not under arrest when the defendant's interview with police agent begins and if the facts disclose no "custodial interrogation," testimony elicited by the state upon direct examination in response to a question posed by a district attorney as to what the defendant said to police agent concerning incriminating evidence was not a violation of the defendant's rights under U.S. Const., amend. 14 if the district attorney does not stress the defendant's silence in an attempt to imply guilt and the jury is never told that the defendant's silence can be used for impeachment purposes, much less evidence of guilt. Alderman v. State, 241 Ga. 496, 246 S.E.2d 642, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1031 (1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 991, 99 S. Ct. 593, 58 L. Ed. 2d 666 (1978), overruled in part, Blankenship v. State, 247 Ga. 590, 280 S.E.2d 623, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 1077 (1981).

Post-arrest silence. — In the absence of the sort of affirmative assurances embodied in the Miranda warnings, it does not violate due process of law for a state to permit cross-examination as to postarrest silence if a defendant chooses to take the stand; a state is entitled, in such situations, to leave to the judge and jury under its own rules of evidence the resolution of the extent to which postarrest silence may be deemed to impeach a criminal defendant's own testimony. Hollis v. State, 174 Ga. App. 627, 330 S.E.2d 817, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2736 (1985).

It is fundamentally unfair and a violation of due process of law for the State to permit cross-examination of a defendant as to post-arrest silence if the defendant has been informed of the defendant's Miranda rights. Chapman v. State, 263 Ga. 393, 435 S.E.2d 202, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 680 (1993).

No rule that reference to accused's silence at arrest requires grant of new trial. — There is not an ironclad rule that any reference (even unwitting or harmless) to an accused's silence at time of arrest requires the grant of a new trial. Smith v. State, 140 Ga. App. 385, 231 S.E.2d 83, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1488, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2651 (1976).

State's use of defendant's post-arrest silence after Miranda warnings for impeachment purposes violates due process. — A state's use, for impeachment purposes, of a defendant's post-arrest silence after the defendant had received the Miranda warnings violates the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Clark v. State, 237 Ga. 901, 230 S.E.2d 277, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1439 (1976); Howard v. State, 237 Ga. 471, 228 S.E.2d 860, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1272 (1976); United States v. Allston, 613 F.2d 609, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19634 (5th Cir. 1980).

Evidence as to silence on the defendant's part at arrest should be excluded when objected to, for the defendant is then entitled to remain silent, and the prosecution may not use against the defendant the fact that the defendant stood mute or claimed the privilege. Smith v. State, 140 Ga. App. 385, 231 S.E.2d 83, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1488, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 2651 (1976).

Use for impeachment purposes at trial of the defendant's post-arrest silence after Miranda warnings violates due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. The rule, however, requires a case-by-case application and permits a finding of harmless error. United States v. Davis, 546 F.2d 583, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10331 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 906, 97 S. Ct. 1701, 52 L. Ed. 2d 391, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 1712 (1977).

Harmless error in admitting statement. — Erroneous admission of a statement obtained in violation of the Miranda rule was harmless error, where there were no coercive police tactics inherently offensive to due process and no reasonable chance that the error contributed to the verdict. Metheny v. State, 197 Ga. App. 882, 400 S.E.2d 25, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 1514 (1990).

It was not error to allow the defendant to be cross-examined concerning post-arrest silence where the record disclosed that, before the questioned cross-examination, the defendant was examined by defense counsel and testified that the defendant had made no statement to the police. Having addressed this matter by the defendant's own testimony on direct examination, it was not error to allow cross-examination as to that same subject matter. Jackson v. State, 258 Ga. 322, 368 S.E.2d 771 (1988).

Evidence of alibi should come into case like any other evidence and should be submitted to the jury for consideration of whether the evidence as a whole proves defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Smith v. Smith, 321 F. Supp. 482, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971).

Testimony as to circumstances connected with arrest is admissible. Bixby v. State, 234 Ga. 812, 218 S.E.2d 609, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1295 (1975).

Fruits of illegal arrest are not admissible in evidence against a defendant, and a conviction which is based upon evidence thus illegally admitted must be reversed and set aside. Traylor v. State, 127 Ga. App. 409, 193 S.E.2d 876, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 904 (1972).

Outrageous conduct by police not established. — Even if the state was required to destroy an illegal substance seized as contraband, the state's conduct in failing to meet this obligation and in using the illegal substance in a common reverse-sting operation did not rise to the level of outrageous conduct that violated fundamental notions of due process and that prejudiced the defendants. Gober v. State, 249 Ga. App. 168, 547 S.E.2d 656, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 417 (2001), aff'd, 275 Ga. 356, 566 S.E.2d 317, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 538 (2002).

Evidence obtained by illegal search and seizure of defendant inadmis- sible. — Evidence obtained by illegal seizure and search of the defendant's person, by which the defendant is compelled to criminate the defendant, is inadmissible against a defendant accused of a crime, and the burden devolves upon the state to show that evidence obtained by the search was procured after a legal arrest. Marshall v. State, 130 Ga. App. 572, 203 S.E.2d 885, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1180 (1974).

No fourteenth amendment protection for abandoned property against illegal search and seizure. — The constitutional protection of the fourth and Fourteenth Amendments does not apply to property that has been abandoned. Thus, if a defendant has abandoned the defendant's property, the defendant is not entitled to protection of that property by the fourth or Fourteenth Amendments from an illegal search or seizure. Gresham v. State, 204 Ga. App. 540, 420 S.E.2d 71, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 907 (1992).

When retroactive application of exclusionary rule not required. — If law enforcement officers reasonably believe in good faith that evidence seized is admissible at trial, judicial integrity is not offended by the introduction into evidence of that material even if decisions subsequent to the search or seizure have broadened the exclusionary rule to encompass evidence seized in that matter, and when this is shown retroactive application of the new rule is not required. Lawson v. State, 143 Ga. App. 776, 240 S.E.2d 188, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2498 (1977).

Person aggrieved by search. — If the evidence that the defendant seeks to suppress was obtained during the execution of a search warrant authorizing the search of the defendant's person and automobile, the defendant would be a "person aggrieved" by the search, if it should be held to be unlawful. Wood v. State, 224 Ga. 121, 160 S.E.2d 368, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 685 (1968).

Admission of evidence gathered from the defendant and automobile without search warrant after defendant's involvement in shooting upheld. — Admission of evidence gathered from the defendant and the defendant's automobile by state officers without a search warrant after the defendant had been involved in a shooting in a trial for violation of statute regulating pawnbrokers would not violate the due process clauses of the state and federal Constitutions, or of the civil rights statute, 42 U.S.C. §§ 1981, 1983. Atterberry v. State, 212 Ga. 778, 95 S.E.2d 787, 1956 Ga. LEXIS 530 (1956).

Due process denied where conviction procured by testimony known by prosecutor to be perjured. — Where it is shown and not denied that a conviction was procured by perjured testimony, which the state's prosecuting attorney knew to be perjured at the time it was introduced, due process as guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 14 is denied, and such testimony is not merely impeaching in character but has probative force. Burke v. State, 205 Ga. 656, 54 S.E.2d 350, 1949 Ga. LEXIS 407 (1949).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claims regarding the defendant's initial post-trial counsel's performance lacked merit, as counsel was neither professionally deficient nor prejudicial because: (1) the defendant waived any right to be present at the two juror interviews; (2) no deficiency could result from counsel's failure to raise meritless objections; and (3) the trial court specifically found that the defendant adequately understood the nature of the charges, comprehended the proceedings, despite being under the influence of prescribed anti-depressants, and was capable of aiding the defense. Hampton v. State, 282 Ga. 490, 651 S.E.2d 698, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 723 (2007).

Judgment procured by perjured testimony set aside. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 not only requires the setting aside of a judgment procured by perjured testimony, but prescribes the evidence by which the fact of perjury may be proved, thus affording due process. Burke v. State, 205 Ga. 656, 54 S.E.2d 350, 1949 Ga. LEXIS 407 (1949).

Knowing use of perjured testimony. — Conviction of a crime following a trial in which perjured testimony on a material point is knowingly used by the prosecution is an infringement on the accused's fifth and fourteenth amendment rights to due process of law. Kitchens v. State, 160 Ga. App. 492, 287 S.E.2d 316, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 3238 (1981).

It is sufficient to show that police officers acting in behalf of the state in connection with the prosecution had knowledge of the perjured character of the testimony given by a witness for the state. Kitchens v. State, 160 Ga. App. 492, 287 S.E.2d 316, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 3238 (1981).

Use of perjured testimony not grounds for reversal. — Conviction did not need to be reversed for use of perjured testimony as inconsistencies and discrepancies were disclosed at trial and available as a basis for attacking the credibility of the state's witnesses. Cammon v. State, 269 Ga. 470, 500 S.E.2d 329, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 520 (1998).

Opportunity to be heard required where act of criminal contempt not in court's presence. — Where a criminal contempt act is not in the court's immediate presence, due process requires that the accused be given an opportunity to be heard. Martin v. Waters, 151 Ga. App. 149, 259 S.E.2d 153, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2474 (1979).

Opportunity to be heard not required where contempt committed in presence of court. — Where a direct contempt is committed in the presence of the court, the offender is not entitled as a matter of right to a hearing before the court; the court may act on its own knowledge of the facts and proceed to impose punishment for the contempt, or the court may in its discretion allow a hearing. The refusal to allow a hearing does not deprive the defendant of the due process of law guaranteed by the state and federal Constitutions. Martin v. Waters, 151 Ga. App. 149, 259 S.E.2d 153, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2474 (1979).

Due process not offended by trial judge's being accuser and judge in state court contempt proceedings. — In state court contempt proceedings, due process is not offended where the trial judge in the court in which the offense allegedly occurred serves as the accuser as well as the trial judge, hearing the charges preferred by him. Friedman v. Harbold, 150 Ga. App. 482, 258 S.E.2d 154, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2265 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 950, 100 S. Ct. 1598, 63 L. Ed. 2d 785, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 1316 (1980).

Contempt hearing before another judge. — Where an announcement of punishment for contempt is delayed until the conclusion of the trial, and where the allegedly contumacious conduct of an attorney in failing to stand and respond to the court was directed toward the judge and thereafter the judge became involved in this controversy with the attorney, due process requires that the contempt hearing be conducted by another judge. Dowdy v. Palmour, 251 Ga. 135, 304 S.E.2d 52, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 745 (1983).

Witness cannot claim U.S. Const., amend. 5 privilege if previously tried and convicted for participation in same crime. Cates v. State, 245 Ga. 30, 262 S.E.2d 796, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 676 (1980).

Prosecution witness' communications during hypnotic treatment subject to disclosure. — Communications made during a hypnotic "age regression" treatment of a prosecution witness were not privileged under former Code 1933, § 84-3118 (see O.C.G.A. § 43-39-16) and were subject to disclosure, since the psychologist conducting the treatment sessions was acting at the behest of, and as a member of, the prosecution, and the treatment was conducted not for any therapeutic reasons, but in order to bolster the prosecution's case. Emmett v. Ricketts, 397 F. Supp. 1025, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11860 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Waiver of right to test constitutionality of statute making spouse incompetent witness for the other spouse. — Where, in the trial of a criminal case, the defendant offers the defendant's spouse (who was present at the difficulty) as a witness in the defendant's behalf, and on objection by the state the spouse's testimony is rejected on the ground that the spouse is not competent or compellable to testify for or against the defendant; and where thereafter the objection is withdrawn by the state, and the defendant allowed to introduce the defendant's spouse, and the defendant refuses to do so, the defendant will be considered as having waived the right to test the constitutionality of the statute making the defendant's spouse an incompetent witness for the defendant, on the ground that the defendant waived that right by the refusal to use the defendant's spouse as a witness in the defendant's behalf when the defendant was given an opportunity to do so. Williams v. State, 69 Ga. App. 863, 27 S.E.2d 54, 1943 Ga. App. LEXIS 198 (1943).

Defendant's right to fair trial violated where witness prevented from testifying for defense by threats or coercion. — Where witness is prevented from testifying for defense by threats and coercion, or where it appears probable that failure to testify is result of such treatment, defendant's right to a fair trial has been violated. Simmons v. State, 155 Ga. App. 716, 272 S.E.2d 506, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2758 (1980).

Prohibiting cross-examination of key prosecution witness. — Trial court errs in granting motion to prohibit cross-examination of key prosecution witnesses on their motives in testifying. Owens v. State, 251 Ga. 313, 305 S.E.2d 102, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 766 (1983).

Alford plea. — Although defendant's motion to withdraw defendant's Alford plea to two counts of child molestation was timely because it was filed during the term in which the trial court imposed its sentence, the trial court's judgment denying the motion was upheld because the record did not support defendant's claims that defendant did not understand the nature of an Alford plea, that defendant's plea was not entered voluntarily and intelligently, and that defendant did not receive effective assistance of counsel. Whitesides v. State, 266 Ga. App. 181, 596 S.E.2d 706, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 333 (2004).

Due process denied where accused denied right to adjudication as to sanity. — The denial to an accused person of the right to an adjudication as to whether the accused was insane at the time of the commission of an offense, or is insane at the time of the trial, is the denial of due process of law under U.S.

Where evidence raises doubt as to the defendant's competence to stand trial, the judge must impanel jury and conduct sanity hearing on the judge's own motion. Jackson v. Caldwell, 461 F.2d 682, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 9045 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 991, 93 S. Ct. 334, 34 L. Ed. 2d 257, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 887 (1972).

Absent special plea of insanity there is no mandatory duty on trial judge to impanel special jury to determine the issue of mental incompetency or insanity under former Code 1933, § 27-1502 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-130); however, failure to observe procedures adequate to protect an accused's right not to be tried or convicted while incompetent to stand trial deprives the accused of the due process right to a fair trial. Ricks v. State, 240 Ga. 853, 242 S.E.2d 604, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 850 (1978).

Insanity is affirmative defense that accused must prove by preponderance of evidence. The Georgia rule suffers from no constitutional infirmity. Grace v. Hopper, 566 F.2d 507, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 13031 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 844, 99 S. Ct. 139, 58 L. Ed. 2d 144, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 2847 (1978).

Harmless error if court required state to prove defendant's sanity. — If the court does charge that the state must prove the defendant's sanity beyond a reasonable doubt, it would be harmless error as such a charge would be beneficial to the defendant. State v. Avery, 237 Ga. 865, 230 S.E.2d 301, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1425 (1976).

Appointment of psychiatrist to assist in defense. — When a criminal defendant makes an ex parte showing that the defendant's sanity is likely to be a significant factor in the defense, the defendant must be provided with a psychiatrist to assist in the defendant's defense. Lindsey v. State, 254 Ga. 444, 330 S.E.2d 563, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 724 (1985).

Indigent's right to psychiatrist. —

The United States Supreme Court has not required that the state provide an independent psychiatrist for an indigent defendant, only that it provide a competent psychiatrist if the defendant demonstrates that the defendant's sanity at the time of the offense is to be a significant factor at trial. Tucker v. Kemp, 660 F. Supp. 832, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4047 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

Where in a death penalty case the circumstances presented to the trial court did not establish that insanity would be a significant issue at trial, the court did not abuse its discretion by refusing to provide funds for psychiatric assistance. Childs v. State, 257 Ga. 243, 357 S.E.2d 48, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 781, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 970, 108 S. Ct. 467, 98 L. Ed. 2d 406, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 5018 (1987).

Privilege of evaluation made by court-funded psychiatrist. —

For interpretation of Ake v. Oklahoma, 470 U.S. 68, 105 S. Ct. 1087, 84 L. Ed. 2d 53 (1985) regarding procedure to be followed in providing psychiatric assistance to criminal defendants, see Lindsey v. State, 254 Ga. 444, 330 S.E.2d 563, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 724 (1985).

Criminal defendant who requested funds for hiring a psychiatrist was not denied due process where the court granted funds but reserved ruling on the question of whether the evaluation would be privileged, prompting the defendant to hire a psychiatrist out of the defendant's own funds to assure privilege, since the defendant abandoned the matter by not presenting authority supporting the privilege and by failing to evoke a ruling of law from the court. Crawford v. State, 254 Ga. 435, 330 S.E.2d 567, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 732 (1985).

Expert witness appointed by court for sanity examination of defendant is witness for court. —

An expert witness appointed by the court for a sanity examination of a defendant may not be regarded as a prosecution witness, but is instead a witness for the court; and the denial of a defendant's request to furnish a psychiatrist at public expense to assist the defense, when the court-appointed doctor has reported the defendant is sane, has been held not to constitute a denial of due process. Jackson v. State, 225 Ga. 790, 171 S.E.2d 501, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 647 (1969), rev'd, 408 U.S. 238, 92 S. Ct. 2726, 33 L. Ed. 2d 346 (1972).

Motion for psychiatric assistance denied. — Where the record discloses no evidence that the defendant's sanity at the time of the offenses charged would be a significant factor at trial nor even that the defendant's mental condition was seriously in question, there was no abuse of discretion in the trial court's denial of the defendant's "motion for psychiatric assistance," and the defendant also suffered no deprivation of effective assistance of counsel resulting from the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion. Davidson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 557, 359 S.E.2d 372, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2725 (1987), cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905.

Alcohol abuse not a psychiatric issue. — Where the court ordered a psychiatric examination of the accused and the report found the accused was competent to assist in the accused's defense, that the accused knew the difference between right and wrong, that he was able to understand the legal proceedings the accused faced, that the accused's intellectual capacities were well preserved, and that the accused was aware of the nature and the seriousness of the charges against the accused, although the psychiatrist did note the accused's past history of alcohol abuse and recommended treatment, but found no evidence of a mental disorder which would have aggravated the accused's ability to distinguish right from wrong, and no evidence of a delusional compulsion, but the psychiatrist went on to find a stress factor following loss of the accused's job, which precipitated a drinking episode after a long period of abstinence, during which the crimes were committed, in the absence of a finding of any type of insanity which would have been a significant factor in the defendant's defense, the trial court did not err in denying the motion for leave to retain a psychiatrist to aid in the defendant's defense, as the defendant was required to make a showing that the defendant's sanity was likely to be a significant factor at trial. Robinson v. State, 186 Ga. App. 767, 368

Trial court's refusal to provide accused selected psychiatrist upheld, as hearing on insanity of civil nature.

— A hearing upon a special plea of insanity is a proceeding of a civil nature, in which the burden rests on the defendant to produce evidence of insanity. Thus, the refusal of a trial court to provide for examination by and assistance to the accused by a "competent" psychiatrist selected by the accused discloses no violation of due process or error for any other reason. May v. State, 146 Ga. App. 416, 246 S.E.2d 432, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 2385 (1978).

Where no special insanity plea entered, not error for court to deny defendant's motion for psychiatric examination at county expense. — It is not error for a trial court to deny the defendant's motion requesting that the defendant be examined by a psychiatrist at county expense because the defendant had not entered a special plea of insanity at the time of trial. Huguley v. State, 120 Ga. App. 332, 170 S.E.2d 450, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 772 (1969), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 834, 91 S. Ct. 68, 27 L. Ed. 2d 66, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 1010 (1970).

Court not required to appoint state-paid psychiatrist even where special insanity plea filed. — Trial court is under no constitutional or statutory duty to appoint state-paid psychiatrist to evaluate defendant even though special plea of insanity has been filed. Blankenship v. State, 247 Ga. 590, 277 S.E.2d 505, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 801 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993), cert. denied, 545 U.S. 1150, 125 S. Ct. 2964, 162 L. Ed. 2d 906, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 5192 (2005).

Charge to jury putting burden of establishing insanity defense on defendant upheld. — Charge to jury in a murder trial requiring the defendant to produce evidence in support of an insanity defense and to establish it to "the reasonable satisfaction of the jury" does not violate defendant's right to due process. Grace v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 669, 217 S.E.2d 267, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1221 (1975), cert.

Due Process (Cont'd)10. Criminal Trials (Cont'd)

denied, 423 U.S. 1066, 96 S. Ct. 806, 46 L. Ed. 2d 657, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1118 (1976).

Due process not denied where jury not instructed specifically, absent request, as to burden of proof regarding sanity. — Where the charge of the court includes instruction as to insanity but places the burden of proof as to each essential element of the crime, including intent, upon the state beyond a reasonable doubt, it is not a denial of due process of law for the court not to instruct the jury specifically, absent a request, as to any burden of proof regarding sanity. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1370 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977).

Guilty-but-mentally-ill verdict not unconstitutional. — The defendant who pleads insanity has placed his mental health in issue and inasmuch as he has presumably introduced evidence of mental illness for the court to charge the jury that it may consider a verdict of guilty but mentally ill does not constitute burden shifting. Also, while the definition of “mentally ill” in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 is not a model of specificity, the definition is sufficient to inform the jury of the meaning of a verdict of guilty but mentally ill and is not so vague as to violate due process. Cooper v. State, 253 Ga. 736, 325 S.E.2d 137, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 560 (1985).

Since the defendant made no showing that sanity at the time of the offense would be a significant factor at trial and no request for a psychiatrist to aid in the presentation of mitigating evidence at sentencing, the court's failure to provide psychiatric assistance in developing an insanity defense or in presenting mitigating evidence was not a denial of due process. Bowden v. Kemp, 767 F.2d 761, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 21205 (11th Cir. 1985).

Failure to order third examination as to competency. — The trial court's failure to order a third examination including an assessment as to defendant's competency at the time of the murder greatly hindered defendant's delusional compulsion defense in violation of due process. Ford v. Gaither, 953 F.2d 1296, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 2020 (11th Cir. 1992).

Subjecting a defendant to trial before a judge with a direct, personal, pecuniary interest in convicting the defendant effects a denial of due process in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Connally v. Georgia, 429 U.S. 245, 97 S. Ct. 546, 50 L. Ed. 2d 444, 1977 U.S. LEXIS 27 (1977).

Failure by a judge to disqualify oneself when it serves to deprive a defendant of an unbiased trier of fact is a denial of due process. Mendenhall v. Hopper, 453 F. Supp. 977, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17845 (S.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 591 F.2d 1342, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 16391 (5th Cir. 1979).

Trial judge's failure to determine nonparticipating alternate's belief against capital punishment not unconstitutional. — A trial judge's failure, during voir dire, to determine whether a prospective juror harbors not only an abstract belief against capital punishment, but also beliefs which would preclude the defendant from voting the death penalty under any circumstances does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 6 or U.S. Const., amend. 14 where the juror is an alternate who never participates in any phase of the trial. Smith v. Whisman, 431 F.2d 1051, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 7315 (5th Cir. 1970).

Replacement of trial judge after jury charged. — A defendant failed to show that due process was violated when, because of an emergency, the trial judge who had heard the case and charged the jury was replaced by a different judge, who accepted the verdict. Cooper v. State, 281 Ga. 760, 642 S.E.2d 817, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 245 (2007).

Statement of witness that arrest was made under warrant is not proof arrest legal. Marshall v. State, 130 Ga. App. 572, 203 S.E.2d 885, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1180 (1974).

When reliability of witness may be determinative, nondisclosure affecting credibility violates due process. — When the reliability of a given witness may well be determinative of guilt or innocence, nondisclosure of evidence affecting credibility violates due process guarantees. Emmett v. Ricketts, 397 F. Supp. 1025, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11860 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Admission of child witness' testimony. — Statute allowing a child who did not understand the meaning of an oath to testify in a child molestation case did not violate due process and equal protection principles, where the defendant had the opportunity to cross-examine the child witness and the statute applied equally to all those accused of child molestation. Sims v. State, 260 Ga. 782, 399 S.E.2d 924, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 52 (1991).

Juries in criminal cases are free to render verdicts that are inconsistent or even result of mistake or compromise. Any apparent inconsistency between verdicts on the two counts of an indictment does not undermine convictions on the count on which defendants were found guilty. Each count is separately considered and, if it is supported by the evidence, may stand. United States v. Lichenstein, 610 F.2d 1272, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 20875 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 447 U.S. 907, 100 S. Ct. 2991, 64 L. Ed. 2d 856, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2358 (1980).

Instruction about inference of guilt from possession of unaccounted for property not comment on defendant's failure to testify. — An instruction stating that guilt of the defendant can be inferred from possession of recently stolen property unaccounted for by him cannot properly be construed as a comment on the defendant's failure to testify. Horton v. State, 228 Ga. 690, 187 S.E.2d 677, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 886 (1972).

Evidence of an understanding or agreement as to the future prosecution of an accomplice on whose testimony the case almost entirely depends is relevant to credibility. The jury is entitled to know of it, the prosecutor has a duty to disclose it, and the failure to make this disclosure violates due process. Henderson v. State, 161 Ga. App. 211, 288 S.E.2d 284, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3023 (1982).

Jury entitled to know understanding or agreement as to future prosecution of accomplice testifying for state. — Evidence of any understanding or agreement as to future prosecution of an accomplice on whose testimony the state's case almost entirely depends is relevant to the accomplice's credibility. The jury is entitled to know of it, the prosecutor has a duty to disclose it, and the failure to make this disclosure violates due process and requires the reversal of the conviction and a remand for a new trial. Allen v. State, 128 Ga. App. 361, 196 S.E.2d 660, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1480 (1973); Dudley v. State, 148 Ga. App. 560, 251 S.E.2d 815, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 3211 (1978).

As the prosecutor has a duty to disclose any understanding concerning the testimony of an accomplice because it is relevant to the accomplice's credibility, failure to do so is a violation of due process. Adams v. State, 173 Ga. App. 877, 328 S.E.2d 767, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2688 (1985).

Jury must be informed of agreement between prosecutor and alleged accomplice whose testimony is crucial. — Due process mandates that the jury be informed of any understanding or agreement reached between the prosecutor and an alleged accomplice, on whose testimony the state's case depends. Williams v. State, 151 Ga. App. 683, 261 S.E.2d 430, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2747 (1979).

Defendant has no right to be present while jury in seclusion or deliberation. — Although the presence of the defendant at trial is a condition of due process to the extent that a fair and just hearing would be thwarted by the defendant's absence, where the defendant was absent from the court at the time the jury agreed upon a verdict there was no violation of the defendant's rights if there was no interference with the jury's deliberations, since the defendant had no right to be present while the jury was in seclusion or deliberation. Fowler v. Grimes, 198 Ga. 84, 31 S.E.2d 174, 1944 Ga. LEXIS 372, cert. denied, 323 U.S. 784, 65 S. Ct. 266, 89 L. Ed. 626, 1944 U.S. LEXIS 72 (1944).

Defendant not deprived of due process because involuntarily absent during jury deliberation and reaching of verdict. — The verdict and sentence in a murder case was not void upon the ground that the accused was involuntarily absent from the court during deliberations of the jury, and at the time the jury reached their verdict, since the accused was present in the courtroom at the time the verdict was published. Fowler v. Grimes, 198 Ga. 84, 31 S.E.2d 174, 1944 Ga. LEXIS 372, cert. denied, 323 U.S. 784, 65 S. Ct. 266, 89 L. Ed. 626, 1944 U.S. LEXIS 72 (1944).

Attempted introduction of testimony not reversible error where aggravating circumstance not dependent on premeditation. — In a rape-murder trial where the jury imposed the death penalty under former Code 1933, § 27-2534.1(b)(2) (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b)(2)) on the ground that the murder was committed while the offender was engaged in the commission of another capital felony, rape, the jury's finding of this statutory aggravating circumstance did not depend on any showing of premeditation or deliberation prior to the defendant's arriving at the scene of the crimes; therefore, it can be said beyond a reasonable doubt that the attempted introduction of testimony, regarding premeditation in the context of the entire trial and considering the curative instructions given by the trial judge, does not constitute reversible error. Gibson v. Ricketts, 244 Ga. 482, 260 S.E.2d 877, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1303 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 920, 100 S. Ct. 1285, 63 L. Ed. 2d 606, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 1085 (1980).

Improper use of evidence of prior criminal conduct. — Defendant's conviction for robbery was reversed, and a new trial ordered, in case where the defendant was charged and convicted of robbery and possession of firearm by a convicted felon, and evidence of prior felony convictions of aggravated assault and armed robbery were admitted, over objection, to establish that the defendant was a convicted felon because there were no limiting instructions to relate the prior convictions only to the possession charge, there was no corroborating testimony to back up the victim's testimony that the defendant committed the crime of robbery, and it could not be said with a certainty that the defendant's conviction for robbery was not unduly influenced by evidence of the defendant's prior criminal record. Head v. State, 253 Ga. 429, 322 S.E.2d 228, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 971 (1984), overruled in part, Ross v. State, 279 Ga. 365, 614 S.E.2d 31, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 371 (2005), overruled in part, Charles v. State, 315 Ga. 651, 884 S.E.2d 363, 2023 Ga. LEXIS 40 (2023).

Defendant is not denied fair trial by impartial jury by listing previous criminal convictions in indictment. Crocker v. Smith, 225 Ga. 529, 169 S.E.2d 787, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 555 (1969).

Evidence as to parole. — Fact that the defendant was an habitual violator and thus upon conviction would have to serve 20 years without parole did not relate to the defendant's character, his prior record, or circumstances of the defendant's offense; thus policy forbidding argument regarding one's ability or inability to make parole did not run afoul of either U.S. Const., amend. 8 or 14 and trial court did not err in refusing to allow such argument. Horton v. State, 249 Ga. 871, 295 S.E.2d 281, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1185 (1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1188, 103 S. Ct. 837, 74 L. Ed. 2d 1030, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 3285 (1983).

Admission of decedent's statement. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not require the admission of testimony about an out-of-court statement if the out-of-court statement lacks strong indicia of reliability and the declarant is deceased. Davis v. State, 194 Ga. App. 482, 391 S.E.2d 124, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 196 (1990).

Refusal by state to provide original tape recordings. — Because the defendant claimed that the trial was rendered fundamentally unfair by the state's refusal to provide the defendant with the originals of certain pre-arrest surveillance tape recordings and a post-arrest tape recording for independent scientific examination by an expert of the defendant's choosing, but the defendant did not contend, nor did the record reflect, that the defendant had ever proffered a statement the defendant made or a comment made by the sheriff during the post-arrest interview which was not recorded and thereby made a part of the post-arrest tape, and the record established that the defendant not only had the opportunity to present the defendant's version of the pre-arrest recorded conversations, but in fact testified as to what the defendant meant by certain critical statements the defendant made during those recorded conversations, it was held that a claim of deprivation of due process associated with the denial of expert assistance cannot be predicated upon little more than undeveloped assertions that the requested assistance would be beneficial. Hardin v. Black, 845 F.2d 953, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6862 (11th Cir. 1988).

Where a defendant was charged with possession of cocaine, and allegedly gave consent to a search of the defendant's vehicle, the failure by the police to produce a tape of the defendant's oral consent did not violate the fourteenth amendment. Phelps v. State, 195 Ga. App. 370, 393 S.E.2d 501, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 520 (1990).

Relating contents of lost tape to jury. — Allowing an arresting officer to relate to the jury the contents of an electronically monitored conversation which transpired between the defendant and an undercover agent without producing the lost tape recording does not violate due process. Mitchell v. State, 184 Ga. App. 181, 361 S.E.2d 51, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2762 (1987).

Recorded conversations while in jail. — Recording the defendant's jail phone calls for use at trial did not violate the equal protection clause because a non-incarcerated defendant was not similarly situated to the defendant, who was incarcerated. State v. Brantley, 321 Ga. 370, 914 S.E.2d 807, 2025 Ga. LEXIS 77 (2025).

Denial by trial judge of use of recording device. — For the trial judge to arbitrarily deny use by counsel or a party of a microphonic recording device as a work product for their personal use in a possible retrial or appeal of the case is a denial of due process. Davey v. City of Atlanta, 130 Ga. App. 687, 204 S.E.2d 322, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1229 (1974).

Use of an electronic device is subject to the supervision of the trial judge who may take reasonable measures to assure that the use of the device does not interfere with the dignity, order, and decorum of the court. Davey v. City of Atlanta, 130 Ga. App. 687, 204 S.E.2d 322, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1229 (1974).

No statutory or constitutional violation where police lose scientific reports. A Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S. Ct. 1194, 10 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1963) violation occurs only when the state withholds exculpatory information in its possession from the defendant, and where the state does not withhold any information, but the police lose it, there is no error under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211 (repealed), which requires the state to furnish the defendant copies of scientific reports it possesses. Dawson v. State, 166 Ga. App. 515, 304 S.E.2d 570, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3246 (1983).

Appointment of criminologist properly denied. — Because the defendant's motion for appointment of a criminologist or other expert to assist the defense, considered in the light of the record before the judge when the judge made a dispositive ruling, failed to create a reasonable probability that expert (nonpsychiatric) assistance was necessary to the defense and that without such assistance the defendant's trial would be rendered unfair, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion. Moore v. Kemp, 809 F.2d 702, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 1217 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1054, 107 S. Ct. 2192, 95 L. Ed. 2d 847, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 2175 (1987), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1091, 109 S. Ct. 1560, 103 L. Ed. 2d 863, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1562 (1989).

No obligation to appoint identical experts for defendant. — Where the prosecution had no witness who had participated in the fatal transaction and necessarily relied upon the opinion testimony of experts, under these circumstances, the state was not required to appoint identical experts, such as a ballistics expert, on behalf of the defendant to even the score. Stephens v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 642, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 5265 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 488 U.S. 872, 109 S. Ct. 189, 102 L. Ed. 2d 158, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 3631 (1988).

Due Process (Cont'd)10. Criminal Trials (Cont'd)Blood test fee must be given to indigent in abandonment proceeding.

— O.C.G.A. § 19-10-1(f)(2) (abandonment of dependent child) is violative of the equal protection and due process clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 14 to the extent that persons determined to be indigent are initially responsible for the expense of paternity blood tests they request pursuant to the statute. Therefore, in a prosecution for child abandonment, where the defendant is an indigent, it is error to deny the defendant's motion for funds for a blood test. Burns v. State, 252 Ga. 140, 312 S.E.2d 317, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 635 (1984). (See also Peterson v. Moffitt ex rel. Department of Human Resources, 253 Ga. 253, 319 S.E.2d 449 (1984), annotated under "1. In General" above.)

Indigent defendant was entitled to funds to pay expert to examine dental-impression evidence that was the sole connecting link between defendant and the murder. Thornton v. State, 255 Ga. 434, 339 S.E.2d 240, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 552 (1986).

Transcription of argument. — Absent a showing of harm, the failure to transcribe such things as argument does not amount to a constitutional violation sufficient to require vacating a death sentence. Jones v. Kemp, 706 F. Supp. 1534, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1682 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Transcription of mistrial. — Defendant did not have to show particularized need for transcript of prior mistrial. Walker v. State, 156 Ga. App. 478, 274 S.E.2d 680, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3077 (1980).

Physical evidence, samples, and tests. — Absent evidence that the state acted in bad faith in failing to preserve potentially exculpatory evidence, and because blood evidence found on a flashlight used by the victim to hit the defendant in the head after being stabbed was not material, but was cumulative of other evidence showing the undisputed fact that the state never denied that the victim hit the defendant in the head with the flashlight, and indeed offered testimony that the victim struck the defendant with enough force to knock the defendant to one knee, the defendant's due process rights were not violated; hence, the trial court did not err in denying a mistrial based on the defendant's allegation that the state failed to preserve potentially exculpatory evidence. Lonergan v. State, 281 Ga. 637, 641 S.E.2d 792, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 176 (2007).

Denial of use of unofficial court reporter. — Appellant not deprived of fair trial by denial of use of unofficial court reporter at the appellant's expense. Estep v. State, 129 Ga. App. 909, 201 S.E.2d 809, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1194 (1973).

Time of arrest is question of fact depending on evaluation of testimony by trial judge. Franklin v. State, 143 Ga. App. 3, 237 S.E.2d 425, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 2170 (1977), cert. denied, 435 U.S. 950, 98 S. Ct. 1575, 55 L. Ed. 2d 799, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 1347 (1978).

Statutory requirement that trial court give jury statutory instructions in writing does not violate due process and equal protection under U.S. Const., amend. 5 and U.S. Const., amend. 14 and without a concurrent right to send written instructions to the jury as to mitigating circumstances, the aggravating circumstances are not prejudicially emphasized, because the written material furnished to the jury is purely of a procedural nature and amounts to nothing more than a written formulation of the jury's potential verdicts. Collier v. State, 244 Ga. 553, 261 S.E.2d 364, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1336 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 946, 100 S. Ct. 1346, 63 L. Ed. 2d 781 (1980), overruled on other grounds, Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993); Thompson v. State, 263 Ga. 23, 426 S.E.2d 895, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 320 (1993), overruled in part, McClellan v. State, 274 Ga. 819, 561 S.E.2d 82, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 155 (2002).

Jury charge as to presumptions. — Charge telling jury that they were entitled to make certain presumptions or draw certain inferences from the evidence, not that the law required them to do so, did not violate due process. Freeman v. State, 183 Ga. App. 264, 358

S.E.2d 623, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2689 (1987), cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905.

General jury instructions sufficient. — Defendant was not denied due process where jury was given only general charges on child molestation and aggravated child molestation; the jury instructions, when taken as a whole, properly set forth the basis on which the jury was authorized to convict defendant on each count of the indictment and did not constitute a constructive amendment of the indictment. Thomas v. State, 264 Ga. App. 389, 590 S.E.2d 778, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1488 (2003).

No hearing in which all parties participated required on improper jury communications. — After a juror reported that improper jury communications had taken place during an inmate's trial on drug and weapons offenses, the inmate's defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to move for a hearing in which all interested parties were permitted to participate because, to the extent that the federal requirement for such hearings applied in state proceedings, the federal requirement did not address the procedures to be followed by trial judges when a question of jury bias was being investigated during a trial; in such circumstances, federal law left the extent to which the parties could participate in such a hearing to the discretion of the trial court, and the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment could not possibly require more of a state court system. Greer v. Thompson, 281 Ga. 419, 637 S.E.2d 698, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 983 (2006).

Trial court's failure to give a correct charge on the presumption of innocence resulted in a violation of the defendant's right to a fair trial as guaranteed by the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Blair v. State, 179 Ga. App. 519, 347 S.E.2d 337, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2644 (1986).

Judge need not point out specific mitigating circumstances or use words "mitigating circumstances" in charge. — In making it clear to the jury that mitigating circumstances must be considered, there is no requirement that trial court point out specific mitigating circumstances which may be present in defendant's case and it is also unnecessary to include the magic words "mitigating circumstances" in the charge; where Georgia juries are instructed in sentencing to consider all facts and circumstances which have appeared at both phases of trial, this necessarily includes any mitigating circumstances which defendant has shown, or argued, or both. Zant v. Gaddis, 247 Ga. 717, 279 S.E.2d 219, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 841, cert. denied, 454 U.S. 1037, 102 S. Ct. 579, 70 L. Ed. 2d 483, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 4458 (1981).

Duty to instruct jury on mitigating circumstances and option to recommend against death. — Under Georgia's death sentencing scheme the eighth and Fourteenth Amendments require that the trial judge clearly and explicitly instruct the jury about mitigating circumstances and the option to recommend against death. Where the instruction, taken as a whole, at best was contradictory and confusing as to the jury's function if it determined that an aggravating circumstance was present, as the jury was told that upon finding an aggravating circumstance its verdict would be death but it is possible to lift isolated phrases from the jury instruction and find in those phrases an indication that a death sentence need not have inexorably flowed from a finding of an aggravated circumstance, on the whole, the instruction falls far short of providing clear and explicit information to the jury that it had the option not to recommend a sentence of death, and defendant's death sentences must therefore be set aside. Moore v. Kemp, 809 F.2d 702, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 1217 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1054, 107 S. Ct. 2192, 95 L. Ed. 2d 847, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 2175 (1987), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1091, 109 S. Ct. 1560, 103 L. Ed. 2d 863, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1562 (1989).

Jury charge on conspiracy. — It is not inappropriate to charge upon law of conspiracy merely because indictment does not, in terms, allege conspiracy to commit the offense, on trial of one of two or more persons jointly indicted for a crime. Talley v. State, 120 Ga. App. 365, 170 S.E.2d 444, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 781 (1969).

Charge that witnesses are presumed truthful disapproved but not

unconstitutional. — A charge, given in a murder trial, that “when witnesses appear and testify in a case such as this, they are presumed to speak the truth unless they are impeached in some manner provided by law,” was not unconstitutional as negating the presumption of innocence and shifting the burden of proof to the defendant, but the charge can be misleading and is of little positive value, so that its use should be discontinued. Noggle v. State, 256 Ga. 383, 349 S.E.2d 175, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 844 (1986).

Use of peremptory challenges in racially discriminatory manner. — Statistical evidence was sufficiently strong to raise an inference that the prosecutor was exercising peremptory challenges in a racially discriminatory manner. Horton v. Zant, 941 F.2d 1449, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 20577 (11th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 952, 112 S. Ct. 1516, 117 L. Ed. 2d 652, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 1943 (1992).

Improper excusal of lone juror holding out for acquittal. — The trial judge’s failure to make a reliable determination of whether, in the final moments of jury deliberations, the lone juror to reserve a reasonable doubt as to the defendant’s guilt, who was reported by the jury foreman to be “extremely nervous,” was actually incapacitated, the judge’s failure to ensure that the juror understood the juror’s right to adhere to the juror’s view that the defendant should be acquitted, and the judge’s failure, upon excusing that juror and replacing the juror with an alternate juror, to instruct the reconstituted jury to begin anew deprived the defendant of the defendant’s constitutional right to a trial by a fair and impartial jury and deprived the defendant of the defendant’s due process right to a fair trial. Peek v. Kemp, 746 F.2d 672, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28171 (11th Cir. 1985).

Fact that two or more jurors visited the crime scene and related information about their observations to the rest of the jurors during their deliberations did not constitute reversible error where there was nothing to indicate that any of the jurors changed their minds because of the extrarecord information. Moore v. State, 179 Ga. App. 125, 345 S.E.2d 631, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2594 (1986).

Coercion of jurors. — A trial judge’s efforts to coerce reluctant jurors into delivering a verdict may sufficiently invade the province of the jury so as to deny the defendant fundamental fairness. Scruggs v. Williams, 903 F.2d 1430, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 10064 (11th Cir. 1990).

Where the judge asked a juror two leading questions, but they led in different directions: first, “In other words, you’re saying that is not your verdict?” and later, “So if that is your verdict . . .,” the judge’s questioning was not sufficiently coercive to violate due process. Scruggs v. Williams, 903 F.2d 1430, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 10064 (11th Cir. 1990).

Fingerprint evidence alone can be sufficient to sustain a conviction for an offense like burglary against a constitutional attack on the sufficiency of evidence. Duncan v. Stynchcombe, 704 F.2d 1213, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 28180 (11th Cir. 1983).

Under O.C.G.A. § 24-2-2, evidence of prior difficulties between the accused and the victim is admissible to illustrate the accused’s motive, intent, or bent of mind toward the victim; therefore, a peace warrant that victim had taken out against the defendant nine months before the victim’s death was clearly relevant to show the defendant’s motive and “bent of mind” towards the victim, and its admission into evidence did not violate the defendant’s due process rights. Williams v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 1276, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6460 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed, 489 U.S. 1094, 109 S. Ct. 1579, 103 L. Ed. 2d 931, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1647 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1090, 110 S. Ct. 1836, 108 L. Ed. 2d 965, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1953 (1990).

Photographs of victim’s body allowed. — Challenged photographs of the victim’s body were not a crucial, highly significant factor in the case against the defendant so as to have denied the defendant a fundamentally fair trial. Williams v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 1276, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6460 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed, 489 U.S. 1094, 109 S. Ct. 1579, 103 L. Ed. 2d 931, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1647 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1090, 110 S. Ct. 1836, 108 L. Ed. 2d 965, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1953 (1990).

Recent unexplained possession of stolen goods is sufficient to support inference of guilt beyond reasonable doubt; there is no need for further proof of guilt. Evans v. State, 156 Ga. App. 162, 275 S.E.2d 341, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2945 (1980).

Permitting Bible in jury room during deliberations. — It was constitutional error for the court to permit the Christian Bible to go into the jury room at the request of the jurors, apparently for consultation in connection with their deliberations after a murder trial. Jones v. Kemp, 706 F. Supp. 1534, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1682 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Determination of harmless error. — It is permissible for state to determine for itself what constitutes “harmless” error in conduct of trial. Pennington v. Stynchcombe, 428 F.2d 875, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 8699 (5th Cir. 1970).

Bombastic argument is not unconstitutional. — Prosecutor’s bombastic or grandiloquent argument in a criminal prosecution is not unconstitutional. Spivey v. State, 253 Ga. 187, 319 S.E.2d 420, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 840 (1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1132, 105 S. Ct. 816, 83 L. Ed. 2d 809, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 488 (1985).

A prosecutor is entitled to argue the state’s case vigorously, so long as the prosecutor talks about matters the prosecutor is entitled to talk about. Patillo v. State, 258 Ga. 255, 368 S.E.2d 493, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 235, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 378, 102 L. Ed. 2d 367, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 4982 (1988).

Unlawful use of racial epithets by defense counsel toward defendants, absent any hint of prohibition by the court, was presumed to have infected the verdict and the “essential demands of fairness” insured by the due process clause required a new trial. Kornegay v. State, 174 Ga. App. 279, 329 S.E.2d 601, 1985 Ga. App. LEXIS 2705 (1985).

Order of trial judge fixing a new date for execution of sentence after the original date has passed is not void because the defendant is involuntarily absent and has not waived or authorized any one else to waive the right to be present at the time and place of resentencing, and the passage of such order is not violative of the plaintiff’s rights under provisions of the state and federal Constitutions. McBurnett v. Balkcom, 207 Ga. 452, 62 S.E.2d 180, 1950 Ga. LEXIS 631 (1950).

No due process violation where attack is on order setting new date of execution entered without defendant’s presence. — Although it was necessary for the defendant to have been present in court when the original sentence of execution was pronounced, as well as during other proceedings throughout the trial, in the absence of waiver, no violation of due process appears, where the attack is not on the original sentence, but merely on an order fixing a new date of execution, entered without the presence of the defendant at that time, which became necessary after the date fixed in the original sentence had passed by reason of a supersedeas pending the determination of a writ of error in this court. Setting a new date of execution is not a new sentence of defendant, as to which the judge has no discretion, but merely setting the time. Fowler v. Grimes, 198 Ga. 84, 31 S.E.2d 174, 1944 Ga. LEXIS 372, cert. denied, 323 U.S. 784, 65 S. Ct. 266, 89 L. Ed. 626, 1944 U.S. LEXIS 72 (1944).

Trial court’s order that only one attorney argue for state and one for appellant does not violate rights under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and U.S. Const., amend. 14. Willis v. State, 243 Ga. 185, 253 S.E.2d 70, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 847, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 178, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Exclusionary sperm test not required in rape trial. — In a rape trial, the fact that an exclusionary sperm test (which purportedly classifies sperm into particular blood groupings for identification purposes) was not performed is not grounds for reversal, and due process does not require the performance of the test. Gray v. State, 151 Ga. App. 684, 261 S.E.2d 402, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 2748 (1979).

State’s not providing civilian clothes does not amount to compelling accused to stand trial in prison garb, which is proscribed by U.S. Const., amend. 14. United States v. Casey, 540 F.2d 811, 1976 U.S. App. LEXIS 6660 (5th Cir. 1976).

Wearing of prison-issue shoes at trial. — Because there was nothing about the clothing and shoes worn by the defendant indicating that the defendant was a prisoner, the defendant's being forced to wear prison-issue shoes at trial was not a denial of the defendant's presumption of innocence. Lockhart v. State, 172 Ga. App. 170, 322 S.E.2d 503, 1984 Ga. App. LEXIS 2439 (1984).

Notice and evidentiary hearing required upon trial court's decision to revoke appeal bail bond. — Due process requirements of U.S. Const., amend. 5 and U.S. Const., amend. 14 mandate notice and an evidentiary hearing upon the trial court's decision to revoke an appeal bail bond. Riggins v. State, 134 Ga. App. 941, 216 S.E.2d 723, 1975 Ga. App. LEXIS 2224 (1975).

One at large on bail pending appeal of federal conviction can be extradited by sister state for the purpose of serving sentences imposed by that state. Extradition under such circumstances does not violate due process constitutional rights of the party extradited. Crane v. State, 233 Ga. 264, 210 S.E.2d 800, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 737 (1974).

Unified appeal procedure under Code 1933, § 27-2538 (see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-36) does not violate due process in that it fails to provide a defendant with reciprocal rights of discovery. Sliger v. State, 248 Ga. 316, 282 S.E.2d 291, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 967 (1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 945, 102 S. Ct. 1442, 71 L. Ed. 2d 657, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 896 (1982).

Cross-examination as to agreement between witness and state. — There was no denial of due process or confrontation rights where the trial court ruled improper a question by defense counsel on cross-examination that presumed the existence of an unprovable "deal" between the state and the witness; the court did not preclude all inquiry on a subject with respect to which the defendant was entitled to reasonable cross-examination. Watkins v. State, 264 Ga. 657, 449 S.E.2d 834, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 898 (1994).

Prosecution of lesser included offense in a different county. — A prosecution for a lesser included offense, which includes the underlying felony in a felony murder case, after a conviction for the greater offense in a different county violates O.C.G.A. § 16-1-6, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, and the fifth and fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. Perkinson v. State, 273 Ga. 491, 542 S.E.2d 92, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 101 (2001).

Statutory aggravators supporting death penalty. — Georgia procedure of listing the statutory aggravators that support a death penalty through means other than the indictment was not unconstitutional under the due process clause; the state was not under a constitutional obligation to place the statutory aggravators in the indictment. Terrell v. State, 276 Ga. 34, 572 S.E.2d 595, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 1025 (2002), cert. denied, 540 U.S. 835, 124 S. Ct. 88, 157 L. Ed. 2d 64, 2003 U.S. LEXIS 6226 (2003).

Application to juvenile proceedings. — Juvenile court erred in adjudicating the juvenile delinquent on the ground that the juvenile violated the Georgia Street Gang Terrorism and Prevention Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-15-1 et seq., as the state's delinquency petition did not allege an essential element of the offense; namely, the predicate acts upon which the "pattern of criminal gang activity" was based. Accordingly, the juvenile's procedural due process rights were violated when the juvenile court adjudicated the juvenile delinquent based on that offense, as the insufficiency in the state's petition meant the juvenile was denied the juvenile's due process rights because the juvenile was not able to prepare an adequate defense. In the Interest of E.S., 262 Ga. App. 768, 586 S.E.2d 691, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1011 (2003).

Court required to make findings on Mandarin Chinese speaker's competency to stand trial without inter- preter. — Trial court erred in denying a defendant's motion for new trial based on the defendant's contention that the defendant did not understand the proceedings because an interpreter was not provided to the defendant without making findings; there was sufficient evidence to raise a question as to whether the defendant, whose native language was Mandarin Chinese, was competent to be tried without an interpreter, and the trial court was required to make findings as to the defendant's competency on the record. Ling v. State, 288 Ga. 299, 702 S.E.2d 881, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 890 (2010).

No due process violation in delay in defendant's arrest and indictment. — Superior court did not err in failing to dismiss the indictment on the ground that the delay in the defendant's arrest and indictment violated the defendant's rights to due process under the fifth and fourteenth amendments and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I because neither actual prejudice nor deliberate adverse action on the part of the state had been shown; the defendant was not in custody during the period in question. Higgenbottom v. State, 290 Ga. 198, 719 S.E.2d 482, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 944 (2011).

11. Sentencing

Defendant not denied due process because assigned to formerly appropriate commission, not successor. — Fact that the trial court, in sentencing the defendant, assigned the defendant, or ordered the defendant delivered to the Prison Commission, which has been abolished, instead of assigning the defendant or ordering the defendant delivered to the State Board of Corrections, which succeeded to the powers and duties of the commission, while not technically in the proper form, is not such an irregularity as is hurtful to any right of liberty, nor is it such a defect as to vitiate the sentence and deprive the defendant of due process of law under either the state or federal Constitutions. Dixon v. State, 83 Ga. App. 227, 63 S.E.2d 278, 1951 Ga. App. LEXIS 839 (1951).

Cruel and unusual punishment clause applicable to states. — Cruel and unusual punishment clause of U.S.

Const., amend. 8, is made applicable to states through U.S. Const., amend. 14. United States v. Kaiser, 545 F.2d 467, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10529 (5th Cir. 1977).

Qualitative differences in meting out punishment permitted. — Mere fact that an indigent in a particular case may be imprisoned for a longer time than a nonindigent convicted of the same offense does not give rise to a violation of the equal protection clause. Sentencing judges are vested with wide discretion in the exceedingly difficult task of determining the appropriate punishment in the countless variety of situations that appear. The Constitution permits qualitative differences in meting out punishment, and there is no requirement that two persons convicted of the same offense receive identical sentences. Garrett v. State, 125 Ga. App. 743, 188 S.E.2d 920, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1459 (1972).

Regard to past life and habits of particular offender allowed. — The belief no longer prevails that every offense in a like legal category calls for, under this section, an identical punishment without regard to the past life and habits of a particular offender. Garrett v. State, 125 Ga. App. 743, 188 S.E.2d 920, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1459 (1972).

Prosecutorial remarks. — The United States Constitution does not forbid a sentencer to hear argument from counsel on the need for a deterrent sentence and to fashion a sentence to satisfy that need. Collins v. Francis, 728 F.2d 1322, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 24501 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 963, 105 S. Ct. 361, 83 L. Ed. 2d 297, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 392 (1984).

U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not prevent a prosecutor from commenting during closing argument in the sentencing phase of a defendant's trial on the defendant's silence during the culpability phase of the defendant's capital trial when the defendant has testified only in the sentencing phase; after the defendant has waived the defendant's constitutional privilege by testifying, any expectation of protection from adverse comment also is waived. Tucker v. Francis, 723 F.2d 1504, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 24497 (11th Cir. 1984).

Due Process (Cont'd)11. Sentencing (Cont'd)

The standard to be employed in reviewing a prosecutor's argument is whether the prosecutor's comments so infected the trial with unfairness as to make the resulting conviction a denial of due process. Davis v. Kemp, 829 F.2d 1522, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 12938 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 929, 108 S. Ct. 1099, 99 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 996 (1988).

Arguments by the prosecutor that the death penalty serves as a deterrent are proper in the sentencing phase of a capital case. Davis v. Kemp, 829 F.2d 1522, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 12938 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 929, 108 S. Ct. 1099, 99 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 996 (1988).

The prosecutor's arguments seeking to justify the execution of defendant based upon society's legitimate interest of purging itself of this wrong was a permissible argument in the sentencing phase of a capital case. Davis v. Kemp, 829 F.2d 1522, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 12938 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 929, 108 S. Ct. 1099, 99 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 996 (1988).

The future dangerousness of a defendant is a proper consideration in imposing death, and a legitimate future dangerousness argument is not rendered improper merely because the prosecutor refers to possible victims. Davis v. Kemp, 829 F.2d 1522, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 12938 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 929, 108 S. Ct. 1099, 99 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 996 (1988).

During the sentencing phase of a capital case, the prosecutor may appropriately analogize the role of the jury and the role of soldiers fighting for their country. Davis v. Kemp, 829 F.2d 1522, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 12938 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 929, 108 S. Ct. 1099, 99 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 996 (1988).

Where the prosecutor argued that the jurors should find the defendant guilty of both rape and murder in order to preserve their chance to sentence the defendant to death at the sentencing hearing, the prosecutor also argued that the state medical examiner, who testified concerning the evidence suggesting rape, must have believed that the victim was raped or the medical examiner would not have taken the stand, and the prosecutor supported the argument that the jury should convict defendant by suggesting that they imagine looking out their windows and seeing the defendant approach their houses at night, these arguments may well have violated § 5.8 of the ABA Standards on the Administration of Criminal Justice, but the statements did not, however, render the trial fundamentally unfair. Davis v. Kemp, 829 F.2d 1522, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 12938 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 929, 108 S. Ct. 1099, 99 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 996 (1988).

Prosecutorial arguments made during the sentencing phase of a capital trial will not warrant habeas relief under 28 U.S.C. § 2254 unless the statements render the entire sentencing proceeding fundamentally unfair. Williams v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 1276, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6460 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed, 489 U.S. 1094, 109 S. Ct. 1579, 103 L. Ed. 2d 931, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1647 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1090, 110 S. Ct. 1836, 108 L. Ed. 2d 965, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1953 (1990).

Because a prosecutor read the jury a lengthy and literal quotation from a court opinion that included the statement that the court had "no sympathy with that sickly sentimentality that springs into action whenever a criminal is at length about to suffer for crime," use of the quote in the prosecutor's closing argument to the jury clearly was highly improper and rendered the sentencing phase of the petitioner's trial fundamentally unfair in violation of the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment. Presnell v. Zant, 959 F.2d 1524, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 6897 (11th Cir. 1992).

Proof of prior guilty pleas for purposes of recidivist sentencing. — Trial court did not deprive the defendant of due process of law by admitting in evidence the defendant's prior guilty plea so as to make the defendant eligible for a recidivist sentence; even though a transcript of the plea proceeding was not available, the validity of the plea was shown by extrinsic evidence. Nash v. State, 233 Ga. App. 75, 503 S.E.2d 23.

Where defendant not informed of conditions of sentence. — There is authority, when there is an error or irregularity in failing to inform the defendant of the conditions of the sentence, for correction by the court by recalling the defendant and sentencing the defendant as provided by law. Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1668 (1973).

Effect of sentence with condition for obedience of laws only in later order is unconditional discharge. — Where a condition in the sentence for obedience of laws is reflected only in a later written order, knowledge of such condition is not imputable to the defendant, and the effect of such a sentence is an unconditional discharge. Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1668 (1973).

Due process is not abridged where court fails to have jury publish defendant's sentence in open court if defendant has waived right to be present at that time. Beavers v. State, 132 Ga. App. 94, 207 S.E.2d 550, 1974 Ga. App. LEXIS 1610 (1974).

For those who plead guilty, that fact is consideration in sentencing, a consideration that is not present when one is found guilty by a jury. Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2349 (1980).

State may pursue death sentence upon plea withdrawal. — Where the defendant contended that the defendant's death sentence was arbitrarily imposed because the prosecution sought the death penalty after the defendant voluntarily withdrew the defendant's plea agreement in which the defendant would have received 30 years for manslaughter, it was held that by withdrawing the defendant's plea, the defendant and the state were returned to the position they occupied prior to the execution of the plea bargain when the defendant stood charged with the murder of the victim and burglary. Accordingly, the state was free to proceed with its prosecution and to pursue the death sentence. Williams v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 1276, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6460 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed, 489 U.S. 1094, 109 S. Ct. 1579, 103 L. Ed. 2d 931, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1647 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1090, 110 S. Ct. 1836, 108 L. Ed. 2d 965, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1953 (1990).

Discretion of court. — Under the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 17-10-1 as it existed prior to the 1993 amendment, it was within the discretion of the trial court to impose a life sentence for armed robbery; a sentence for a specific number of years was not required. Null v. State, 216 Ga. App. 641, 455 S.E.2d 359, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 268 (1995).

Court powerless to increase punishment once person enters upon execution of sentence. — While it is true that an oral sentence is not a binding judgment of the court, the law is also clear that once a person has entered upon the execution of that person's sentence, the court is without power to change it by increasing the punishment. This is considered a violation of the prohibition against double punishment or jeopardy under U.S. Const., amend. 5. Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1668 (1973).

Fact that person charged with felony is without legal counsel when sentence imposed does not render sentence void as a denial of due process and cause the resulting confinement to be illegal. Balkcom v. Shores, 219 Ga. 429, 134 S.E.2d 3, 1963 Ga. LEXIS 474 (1963).

Sentence is not necessarily void where counsel for convicted defendant declines to appeal case though requested by the client to do so. Balkcom v. Roberts, 221 Ga. 339, 144 S.E.2d 524, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 456 (1965); Bolick v. State, 127 Ga. App. 542, 194 S.E.2d 302, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1503, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1505, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 946 (1972).

Increased term based upon prior conviction where counsel was unavailable prohibited. — The rule prohibiting consideration of uncounseled convictions as the predicate for an enhanced sentence forbids the sentencing of a defendant to an increased term of incarceration solely upon consideration of a prior conviction obtained in a proceeding for which, due to the indigence of the defendant or some misconduct of the state, counsel was unavailable to the defendant. Moore v. Jarvis, 885 F.2d 1565, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 15784 (11th Cir. 1989).

Indigent defendant's imprisonment not necessary to promote compelling governmental interest. — Imprisonment of an indigent defendant who cannot immediately avail oneself of the fine option in an "alternative sentence" is not necessary to promote a compelling governmental interest. Frazier v. Jordan, 457 F.2d 726, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 10320 (5th Cir. 1972).

Municipal court sentencing cannot require indigent to pay fine or alternatively serve jail sentence. — A municipal court may not constitutionally impose a sentence requiring an indigent defendant to pay a fine or, alternatively, serve a specified number of days in jail. Frazier v. Jordan, 457 F.2d 726, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 10320 (5th Cir. 1972).

Ex post facto provision not violated by individual's being sentenced to penalty less harsh than the one that it appeared the individual would be subjected to, and was given notice of, at the moment of the crime. Federal Election Comm'n v. Lance, 617 F.2d 365, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 17855 (5th Cir. 1980).

Extension of noncustodial period of supervision to term within statutory limits does not implicate a liberty interest sufficient to require a preextension hearing as a constitutionally commanded right. United States v. Cornwell, 625 F.2d 686, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 14149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1066, 101 S. Ct. 794, 66 L. Ed. 2d 610, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 4411 (1980).

This state's death penalty statute is not subject to attack under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Coley v. State, 231 Ga. 829, 204 S.E.2d 612, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 1256 (1974).

Punishment of death does not invariably violate the Constitution. Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct.

2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 82 (1976).

Exclusion of potential jurors opposed to death penalty. — Defendant was not unconstitutionally denied a fair trial because prospective members of the jury were excluded who were unequivocally opposed to the death penalty. House v. Balkcom, 562 F. Supp. 1111, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17753 (N.D. Ga. 1983), rev'd, 725 F.2d 608, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25536 (11th Cir. 1984).

Death sentence cannot be imposed under sentencing procedures creating substantial risk of infliction in arbitrary, capricious manner. Goodwin v. Balkcom, 501 F. Supp. 317, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16242 (M.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 684 F.2d 794, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 25927 (11th Cir. 1982).

Death sentence based on one valid aggravating circumstance. — Defendant's death sentence was affirmed as the defendant's death sentence was based upon at least one valid statutory aggravating circumstance, even though the notice of the statutory aggravating circumstances upon which the state intended to rely was not filed until the first day of voir dire; one of the statutory aggravating circumstances relied upon by the state and found by the jury, that the murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in a kidnapping with bodily injury, was alleged in the indictment, and the defendant was on sufficient actual notice for due process purposes of the kidnapping statutory aggravating circumstance. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 652 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50, 2007 U.S. LEXIS 9247 (2007).

System of capital punishment not clearly defining standards to guide exercise of sentencing discretion is unconstitutional. United States v. Kaiser, 545 F.2d 467, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10529 (5th Cir. 1977).

A jury must be given standards to guide and limit its discretion whether to recommend life imprisonment or death. Goodwin v. Balkcom, 501 F. Supp. 317, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16242 (M.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 684 F.2d 794, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 25927 (11th Cir. 1982).

If a state wishes to authorize capital punishment it has a constitutional responsibility to tailor and apply its law in a manner that avoids the arbitrary and capricious infliction of the death penalty. Part of a state's responsibility in this regard is to define the crimes for which death may be the sentence in a way that obviates standardless sentencing discretion. Godfrey v. Georgia, 446 U.S. 420, 100 S. Ct. 1759, 64 L. Ed. 2d 398, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 99 (1980).

When states may adopt additional standards governing capital sentencing procedures. — As long as state's capital sentencing procedures meet constitutional requirements, state's courts are free to adopt additional standards governing those sentencing procedures. Goodwin v. Balkcom, 501 F. Supp. 317, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16242 (M.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 684 F.2d 794, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 25927 (11th Cir. 1982).

Judge's mandatory incarceration policy for certain offense not unconstitutional. — Assuming the state trial judge who sentenced the defendant had a policy of sentencing all persons found guilty of shoplifting to a period of incarceration, the sentencing court may have abused its discretion in following that policy because it does not result in individualized sentencing; but any abuse of discretion was not unconstitutional. Nation v. Georgia, 645 F. Supp. 179, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19346 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Imposition of death sentence not discriminatory. — A statistical study, while showing a race-of-the-victim relationship with the imposition of the death sentence discernible in enough cases to be statistically significant in the system as a whole, did not support a ruling that the system as a whole was arbitrary and capricious, and was insufficient to show that the defendant's death sentence was determined by the race of his victim, or even that the race of his victim contributed to the imposition of the penalty. McCleskey v. Kemp, 753 F.2d 877, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28073 (11th Cir. 1985), aff'd, 481 U.S. 279, 107 S. Ct. 1756, 95 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 1817 (1987).

Imposition of death sentence on minor. — The constitution does not prohibit a state from imposing the death penalty on one who, while 17 years old, has intentionally and viciously taken a life in cold blood. High v. Kemp, 819 F.2d 988, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 7121 (11th Cir. 1987) (but see Roper v. Simmons, 543 U.S. 551, 125 S. Ct. 1183, 161 L. Ed. 2d 1, 2005 U.S. LEXIS 2200 (2005) (juvenile death penalty declared unconstitutional)).

Sentencer may consider mitigating factors. — United States Const., amend. 8 and U.S. Const., amend. 14 require that the sentencer not be precluded from considering as a mitigating factor, any aspect of a defendant's character or record and any of the circumstances of the offense that the defendant proffers as a basis for a sentence less than death. Chenault v. Stynchcombe, 581 F.2d 444, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 8655 (5th Cir. 1978); Franklin v. State, 245 Ga. 141, 263 S.E.2d 666, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 721, cert. denied, 447 U.S. 930, 100 S. Ct. 3029, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1124, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2103 (1980); Goodwin v. Balkcom, 501 F. Supp. 317, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16242 (M.D. Ga. 1980), rev'd, 684 F.2d 794, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 25927 (11th Cir. 1982); Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 633 (1981).

O.C.G.A. § 16-5-1(d) was not unconstitutional as applied to the defendant due to an alleged lack of a mechanism or guidance for the imposition of a sentence or the provision of mitigating evidence because, while no individual determination was required to sentence the defendant in a non-death penalty case, the defendant was allowed to submit mitigating evidence at sentencing, so the defendant's due process rights were not violated. Williams v. State, 291 Ga. 19, 727 S.E.2d 95, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 368 (2012), overruled in part, Kimbrough v. State, 300 Ga. 516, 796 S.E.2d 694, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 48 (2017).

Statute providing for death penalty must allow sentencing body discretion to weigh all aspects of defendant's character and record as well as circumstances of the offense. Green v. State, 246 Ga. 598, 272 S.E.2d 475, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1221 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 936, 101 S. Ct. 1402, 67 L. Ed. 2d 372 (1981).

Grandparent's testimony of not wishing to see grandchild die is admissible in mitigation at the sentencing phase of a death penalty case. Romine v. State, 251 Ga. 208, 305 S.E.2d 93, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 765 (1983).

Instructions must explain role of mitigation. — Where the defendant contends that the jury instructions given during the sentencing phase of the trial failed to apprise the jury of the nature and function of mitigating circumstances, the standard of review is whether any reasonable juror could have failed to understand the challenged instructions and the role of mitigation. The challenged instructions need not include any particular words or phrases to define the concept of mitigation or of the function of mitigating circumstances. Williams v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 1276, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6460 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed, 489 U.S. 1094, 109 S. Ct. 1579, 103 L. Ed. 2d 931, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1647 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1090, 110 S. Where the defendant could receive any sentence within the statutory limitation upon resentencing, the defendant is entitled to be present at resentencing. Anthony v. Hopper, 235 Ga. 336, 219 S.E.2d 413, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 872 (1975), overruled in part, State v. Hudson, 293 Ga. 656, 748 S.E.2d 910, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 728 (2013).

There is no absolute constitutional bar to imposing more severe sentence upon resentencing, but vindictiveness must not be the motivating force behind the increased sentence. Anthony v. Hopper, 235 Ga. 336, 219 S.E.2d 413, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 872 (1975), overruled in part,

State v. Hudson, 293 Ga. 656, 748 S.E.2d 910, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 728 (2013).

Guarantee against double jeopardy does not restrict length of sentence that may be imposed upon reconviction, and imposition of a more severe sentence upon retrial does not violate the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Chaffin v. State, 227 Ga. 327, 180 S.E.2d 741, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 690 (1971); Rozier v. State, 126 Ga. App. 336, 190 S.E.2d 627, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1139 (1972).

Imposition of more severe sentence upon defendant's reconviction not barred. — Neither the double jeopardy clause nor the equal protection clause bars imposition of a more severe sentence upon retrial. Chaffin v. State, 227 Ga. 327, 180 S.E.2d 741, 1971 Ga. LEXIS 690 (1971); Stuckey v. Stynchcombe, 614 F.2d 75, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19420 (5th Cir. 1980).

Imposition of heavier sentence to punish defendant for having successfully appealed first conviction is denial of due process. Stuckey v. Stynchcombe, 614 F.2d 75, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19420 (5th Cir. 1980).

When the sentencing phase of a death penalty case is retried by a jury other than the one which determined guilt, evidence presented by the defense, as well as evidence presented by the state, may not be excluded on the ground that it would only go to the guilt or innocence of the defendant. Although a resentencing trial will have no effect on any previous convictions, the parties are entitled to offer evidence relating to circumstances of the crime. Blankenship v. State, 251 Ga. 621, 308 S.E.2d 369, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 941 (1983).

Sentencing after new trial not to be affected by vindictiveness. — Vindictiveness against a defendant for having successfully attacked the defendant's first conviction must play no part in the sentence the defendant receives after a new trial. Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 11780 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 590 (1978); Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2349 (1980).

Imposition of higher sentence by jury on retrial not violative of due process unless product of vindictiveness. — The imposition of a higher sentence by a jury upon retrial does not violate the Constitution unless the increased punishment can be shown to be the product of vindictiveness. Grace v. Caldwell, 231 Ga. 407, 202 S.E.2d 49, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 722 (1973).

When defendant's receiving greater sentence on retrial not violative of constitutional rights. — The imposition of a higher sentence on a defendant being retried for a crime does not violate due process or constitute double jeopardy so long as the jury is not informed of the prior sentence and the second sentence is not otherwise shown to be a product of vindictiveness. Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 66 (1973); McClure v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 45, 214 S.E.2d 503, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1008 (1975).

When a jury imposes a higher sentence on reconviction, this is not a violation of due process so long as the jury was not informed of the prior sentence. Shields v. State, 147 Ga. App. 96, 248 S.E.2d 171, 1978 Ga. App. LEXIS 2789 (1978).

Without affirmative showing in record to justify increased sentence, court is limited upon resentencing to the sentence initially imposed. Anthony v. Hopper, 235 Ga. 336, 219 S.E.2d 413, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 872 (1975), overruled in part, State v. Hudson, 293 Ga. 656, 748 S.E.2d 910, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 728 (2013).

Judge's imposition of more severe sentence after new trial. — Whenever judge imposes more severe sentence upon defendant after new trial, reasons for doing so must affirmatively appear. Chaffin v. Stynchcombe, 412 U.S. 17, 93 S. Ct. 1977, 36 L. Ed. 2d 714, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 66 (1973).

Imposition of death sentence following deadlocked first trial. — Double jeopardy clause did not bar defendant's death penalty sentence even though defendant's first trial resulted in a deadlocked jury; the first jury did not adjudicate defendant's sentence. Terrell v. State, 276 Ga. 34, 572 S.E.2d 595, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 1025 (2002), cert. denied, 540

Based on objective information about defendant's identifiable conduct after original proceeding. — Due process of law requires that vindictiveness against a defendant for having successfully attacked the defendant's first conviction must play no part in the sentence the defendant receives after a new trial. Where the judge imposes a more severe sentence on the second trial the reasons for the judge's doing so must be made a part of the record, and those reasons must be based upon objective information concerning identifiable conduct on the part of the defendant occurring after the time of the original sentencing proceeding. Hewell v. State, 238 Ga. 578, 234 S.E.2d 497, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1111 (1977); Hardwick v. Doolittle, 558 F.2d 292, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 11780 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1049, 98 S. Ct. 897, 54 L. Ed. 2d 801, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 590 (1978).

Court must include in record affirmative statement of reasons underlying decision to increase punishment upon resentencing, whether the resentencing is after a successful collateral attack upon multiple sentences or after a successful direct appeal, since the rationale to prevent the imposition of harsher penalties as a means of punishing a defendant for attacking the conviction is equally applicable to either situation. Anthony v. Hopper, 235 Ga. 336, 219 S.E.2d 413, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 872 (1975), overruled in part, State v. Hudson, 293 Ga. 656, 748 S.E.2d 910, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 728 (2013); Thompson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 704, 269 S.E.2d 474, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2349 (1980).

Failure to disclose deal with state's witness at sentencing phase not reversible error. — See Patillo v. State, 258 Ga. 255, 368 S.E.2d 493, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 235, cert. denied, 488 U.S. 948, 109 S. Ct. 378, 102 L. Ed. 2d 367, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 4982 (1988).

ment for armed robbery, presumably to run concurrently, but the death sentence was set aside on direct appeal, and the case was remanded to the trial court for resentencing on the kidnapping count, and, upon resentencing, the trial court imposed a second life sentence for the kidnapping, specifically directing that it was to run consecutively to the original life sentence for the armed robbery, the trial court did not impose a harsher sentence after remand than that originally imposed, in violation of the eighth and Fourteenth Amendments, since a death sentence, even when imposed concurrently with a life sentence, is more severe than two life sentences, whether imposed concurrently or consecutively to each other. Thomas v. Newsome, 821 F.2d 1550, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 9637 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 967, 108 S. Ct. 461, 98 L. Ed. 2d 401, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 4983 (1987).

Instructions as to presumption of innocence of aggravating circumstances. — The trial court did not err in refusing to instruct the jury at the sentencing phase of a capital offense trial that a defendant is presumed innocent of aggravating circumstances. Green v. Zant, 738 F.2d 1529, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 20071 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1098, 105 S. Ct. 607, 83 L. Ed. 2d 716, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 471 (1984).

Where a defendant challenged as constitutionally insufficient only one of two aggravating circumstances found by the jury, even if it were concluded that the claim was valid, the defendant's sentence was still constitutionally valid. Williams v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 1276, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6460 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed, 489 U.S. 1094, 109 S. Ct. 1579, 103 L. Ed. 2d 931, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1647 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1090, 110 S. Ct. 1836, 108 L. Ed. 2d 965, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1953 (1990).

Unclear capital sentencing instructions violate due process. — Capital sentencing instructions which do not clearly guide a jury in its understanding of mitigating circumstances and their purpose violate the eighth amendment and U.S. Const., amend. 14. Finney v. Zant, 709 F.2d 643, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 25936 (11th Cir. 1983), overruled in part, Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22736 (11th Cir. 1986).

Electrocution does not inflict unnecessary torture and torment constituting cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the eighth and Fourteenth Amendments. McCorquodale v. Balkcom, 525 F. Supp. 408, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15361 (N.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 705 F.2d 1553, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 27256 (11th Cir. 1983); *Felker v. Mandatory life imprisonment sentence found in O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d) of the controlled substances law does not unconstitutionally deprive a defendant of due process of law. Tillman v. State, 260 Ga. 801, 400 S.E.2d 632, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 74 (1991).

O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d), which mandates a sentence of life imprisonment upon a second conviction for selling cocaine, does not violate due process or equal protection and does not violate state or federal constitutional guarantees against cruel and unusual punishment. Isom v. State, 261 Ga. 596, 408 S.E.2d 701, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 425 (1991); Crutchfield v. State, 218 Ga. App. 360, 461 S.E.2d 555, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 713 (1995), cert. denied, No. S95C1983, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 1242 (Ga. Nov. 17, 1995).

Mandatory life sentence not cruel and unusual punishment. — A mandatory life sentence imposed upon a defendant convicted of a second offense of selling cocaine under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30 does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment under the eighth and Fourteenth Amendments. Rucks v. State, 201 Ga. App. 142, 410 S.E.2d 206, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1267 (1991).

O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30, providing mandatory life imprisonment for a second drug conviction, does not violate due process or equal protection based on statistical evidence as to the high percentage of African-Americans serving life sentences for drug offenses, nor because it creates an irrational sentencing scheme. Stephens v. State, 265 Ga. 356, 456 S.E.2d 560, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 161, cert. denied, 516 U.S. 849, 116 S. Ct. 144, 133 L. Ed. 2d 90, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 5894 (1995).

Life sentence neither discriminatory nor disproportionate. — Mandatory life sentence for second violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30 did not violate the defendant's equal protection or due process rights, nor was it disproportionate. Jackson v. State, 223 Ga. App. 471, 477 S.E.2d 893, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 1200 (1996).

Penalty under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30.1 upheld. — O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30.1, which subjects a defendant to a greater penalty for the sale of a non-controlled substance than for the sale of some controlled substances, does not violate due process. Thompson v. State, 254 Ga. 393, 330 S.E.2d 348, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 731 (1985).

Penalty under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 upheld. — No violation of due process found for the imposition of the maximum of life sentence as prescribed by the general recidivist statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7. Getty v. State, 207 Ga. App. 736, 429 S.E.2d 100, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 346 (1993), cert. denied, No. S93C0966, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 565 (Ga. Apr. 15, 1993).

12. Appeals and Habeas Corpus

U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not contemplate right to appeal. — Where such right of appeal is given, the state may prescribe the conditions and procedure to be followed. Alexander v. Blackmon, 129 Ga. App. 214, 199 S.E.2d 376, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 949 (1973).

There is no constitutional right to bond pending appeal, but once a state undertakes to establish a system for prisoners to be released on bail pending appeal, it must not violate equal protection or due process guarantees. Browning v. State, 254 Ga. 478, 330 S.E.2d 879, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 806 (1985).

For proper procedure for appellate review of in camera inspections of state's files where defendant's counsel is not granted opportunity to re- view files, see Plemons v. State, 155 Ga. App. 447, 270 S.E.2d 836, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2620 (1980).

Due process under U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not require that states provide appellate review of criminal convictions. In re Stoner, 507 F. Supp. 490, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10332 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Nineteen year delay between conviction and appeal. — Over 19-year delay between the defendant's conviction and the defendant's direct appeal did not violate the defendant's right to due process because, even if the trial court should have weighed all 19 years against the state, the defendant failed to show that the defendant was actually prejudiced as the defendant did not show that the defendant would have prevailed on the defendant's claim of ineffectiveness of counsel. Even assuming that defendant's trial counsel were deficient for failing to obtain and introduce defendant's medical records at trial, the defendant did not show that the records could have supported a defense that the defendant was incapable of firing the gun. Harper v. State, 318 Ga. 185, 897 S.E.2d 818, 2024 Ga. LEXIS 30 (2024).

Delay in filing transcript not prejudicial. — Defendant was not deprived of defendant's due process rights by a seven-month delay in the filing of the transcript as defendant did not show that the delay impacted defendant's ability to adequately present defendant's appeal or impaired any defense that defendant might have had. Carter v. State, 267 Ga. App. 520, 600 S.E.2d 637, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 702 (2004).

Defendant's state and federal due process rights were not violated by the lack of a speedy appeal as: (1) there was no evidence that the eight-year delay in filing the notice of appeal was due to the state or to defendant's counsel; (2) since the post-motion for new trial filings were pro se, the inference was that defendant desired to proceed without counsel and without appealing; (3) defendant failed to show prejudiced by the delay as the appeal was without merit; and (4) defendant's attempt to show prejudice based on the death of trial counsel was rejected as trial counsel testified at the new trial hearing. Butler v. State, 277 Ga. App. 57, 625 S.E.2d 458, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 1364 (2005), aff'd, 281 Ga. 310, 637 S.E.2d 688, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 979 (2006).

Where defendant deprived of right of appeal. — Where there is no evidence that a convicted defendant was ever advised of the defendant's right to appeal the defendant's conviction or that the defendant's attorneys ever consulted with the defendant or obtained the defendant's consent before allowing the time for a direct appeal to lapse, the defendant is deprived of the defendant's right of appeal under U.S. Const., amend. 6. Gregory v. United States, 446 F.2d 498, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 8977 (5th Cir. 1971).

Standard of materiality that evidence not disclosed to defense must satisfy to warrant new trial is relaxed in cases where the suppression is found to be deliberate or where the substantial value of the evidence to the defense could not have escaped the prosecutor's attention. Emmett v. Ricketts, 397 F. Supp. 1025, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11860 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Omitted evidence must create reasonable doubt of guilt not otherwise existing in order to justify new trial. United States v. D'Antignac, 628 F.2d 428, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 13010 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 967, 101 S. Ct. 1485, 67 L. Ed. 2d 617, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 1127 (1981).

Person convicted of crime has right to transcript of trial for use on appeal. Wilson v. State, 246 Ga. 672, 273 S.E.2d 9, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1246 (1980).

Adequate and effective appellate review for indigent defendant. — Equal protection and due process require that an indigent defendant, unable to pay the cost of recording and transcribing the proceedings, may not be denied adequate and effective appellate review accorded to all who have the money to pay these costs. Sales v. State, 152 Ga. App. 635, 263 S.E.2d 519, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 3073 (1979).

Though purchase of complete court reporter's transcript for indigent defendants is not required in all instances. — The burden which rests upon the state is to afford the indigent defendant a record of sufficient completeness to permit proper consideration of his contentions of error. Sales v. State, 152 Ga. App. 635, 263 S.E.2d 519, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 3073 (1979).

Harm to indigent defendant. — Harm arises when, due to the absence of a transcript or an effective alternative, an enumeration of error raised by an indigent defendant cannot be adequately and effectively reviewed by the appellate courts. Sales v. State, 152 Ga. App. 635, 263 S.E.2d 519, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 3073 (1979).

Indigent criminal defendant was entitled under U.S. Const., amend. 14 to trial transcript at public expense. Garrett v. State, 125 Ga. App. 743, 188 S.E.2d 920, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1459 (1972).

Provisions for transcript from recollection or by stipulation not denial of due process. — The provisions of Code 1933, § 6-805(g), (i) (see O.C.G.A. § 5-6-41(g),(i)), relating to the preparation of a transcript of proceedings from recollection or by stipulation, do not deny due process of the law. Wall v. Citizens & S. Bank, 247 Ga. 216, 274 S.E.2d 486, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 645 (1981).

Indigent is entitled to copy of trial transcript for direct appeal of conviction, but such is not the case in collateral post-conviction proceedings, and there is no due process or equal protection right to a free copy of one's court records absent a showing of necessity or justification. McDowell v. Balkcom, 246 Ga. 611, 272 S.E.2d 280, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1223 (1980).

No absolute right to free transcript. — While there is a basic right to a free transcript to perfect a timely direct appeal, there is no absolute right to a free transcript just so the prisoner may have it. Some justification for use in a habeas corpus or related proceeding must be shown in order to be entitled to such records in a collateral attack on the sentence. Wilson v. Downie, 228 Ga. 656, 187

S.E.2d 293, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 879, cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1037, 93 S. Ct. 533, 34 L. Ed. 2d 486, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 393 (1972).

Mere request for transcript by indigent defendant imposes no constitutional duty on trial court to order it prepared; only “differences in access to the instruments needed to vindicate legal rights, when based upon the financial situation of the defendant, are repugnant to the Constitution.” United States v. Smith, 605 F.2d 839, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 10807 (5th Cir. 1979).

Once appeal dismissed, defendant no longer has right to trial transcript at state expense. Yates v. Brown, 235 Ga. 391, 219 S.E.2d 729, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 890 (1975).

Defendant’s knowing decision not to appeal not required in record before preclusion from appellate review. — It is not required that the record reflect that the defendant made a knowing and intelligent decision not to appeal before the defendant can be precluded from appellate review. Murphy v. Balkcom, 245 Ga. 13, 262 S.E.2d 784, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 666 (1980).

Failure to inform defendant of right to attend jury view of scene of offense did not violate due process rights under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Harwell v. England, 234 Ga. 640, 217 S.E.2d 154, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1211 (1975).

Due process not violated because defendant not present for order fixing new date of execution. — Assuming that it was necessary for the defendant to have been present in court when the original sentence of execution was pronounced, as well as during other proceedings throughout the trial, in the absence of waiver no violation of the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 appears where the attack is not on the original sentence, but merely on an order fixing a new date of execution entered without the presence of the defendant, which became necessary after the date fixed in the original sentence had passed by reason of supersedeas pending the determination of a writ of error in this court. Smith v. Henderson, 190 Ga. 886, 10 S.E.2d 921, 1940 Ga. LEXIS 579 (1940), cert. denied, 312 U.S. 698, 61 S.

Ct. 737, 85 L. Ed. 1132, 1941 U.S. LEXIS 864 (1941); Smith v. Ricketts, 234 Ga. 245, 215 S.E.2d 249, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1097 (1975).

Though if violative of rights, no discharge on petition for habeas corpus, but, remand for resentencing in defendant’s presence. — Even if the absence of the defendant at the time of fixing a new date of execution could be taken as violative of the defendant’s constitutional rights, this would in no event have entitled the defendant to a discharge on the defendant’s petition for habeas corpus, but only to a remand to the trial court for resentencing during the defendant’s presence in court. Smith v. Henderson, 190 Ga. 886, 10 S.E.2d 921, 1940 Ga. LEXIS 579 (1940), cert. denied, 312 U.S. 698, 61 S. Ct. 737, 85 L. Ed. 1132, 1941 U.S. LEXIS 864 (1941).

Defendant denied fair trial where victim’s mother repeatedly disrupted trial. — Where during the entire trial the victim’s mother repeatedly disrupted the courtroom proceedings with emotional outbursts and other interruptions, and where the defendant repeatedly and unsuccessfully moved for a mistrial, defendant was denied a fair trial. Price v. State, 149 Ga. App. 397, 254 S.E.2d 512, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 1868 (1979).

Criminal conviction based on known perjured testimony or uncorrected false evidence violative of due process. — A criminal conviction obtained by the use of perjured testimony known by the prosecution to be perjured and knowingly used by them in order to procure the conviction, is without due process of law and in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 14. The same result obtains when the state, although not soliciting false evidence, allows it to go uncorrected when it appears. Smith v. State, 153 Ga. App. 862, 267 S.E.2d 289, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2011 (1980).

Showing fair trial prevented by pretrial publicity. — Under the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States where pretrial publicity is at issue to find that the defendant did not receive a fair trial, the defendant must show: (1) that the setting of the trial was inherently prejudicial, or (2) that the jury selection process showed actual prejudice to a degree that rendered a fair trial impossible. Harris v. State, 237 Ga. 718, 230 S.E.2d 1, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1370 (1976), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 933, 97 S. Ct. 2642, 53 L. Ed. 2d 251 (1977); Young v. State, 237 Ga. 852, 230 S.E.2d 287, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1421 (1976).

Jury viewing restraints on accused.

— State death row inmate's federal habeas corpus petition was denied since the fourteenth amendment right to a fair trial by an impartial jury was not violated by the jury's briefly seeing the inmate in handcuffs in a parking lot during a lunch break. Ford v. Schofield, 488 F. Supp. 2d 1258, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 34958 (N.D. Ga. 2007), aff'd, 546 F.3d 1326, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 22318 (11th Cir. 2008).

Free transcript of habeas corpus trial furnished to indigent defendants if they request it for appeal. Harper v. State, 229 Ga. 843, 195 S.E.2d 26, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 801 (1972).

Appointment of mental health expert by court. — State death row inmate's federal habeas corpus petition was denied where the trial court did not violate fourteenth amendment due process by appointing a mental health expert to examine defendant on the condition that the expert disclose the expert's findings to the prosecution or by refusing to permit defendant to challenge the expert's competency. Ford v. Schofield, 488 F. Supp. 2d 1258, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 34958 (N.D. Ga. 2007), aff'd, 546 F.3d 1326, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 22318 (11th Cir. 2008).

Drawing of jurors in open court not deprivation of due process or equal protection. — Petitioner in a habeas corpus hearing is not deprived of due process of law or equal protection of the laws simply because jurors must be drawn in open court. Hill v. Stynchcombe, 225 Ga. 122, 166 S.E.2d 729, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 397 (1969).

Petitioner for writ of habeas corpus based on denial of constitutional rights in criminal prosecution must show not only that the petitioner has been denied the petitioner's rights, but also that either the petitioner has exhausted all the corrective processes of the state or that such processes are inadequate for his protection. Melton v. Beard, 15 F. Supp. 980, 1936 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2148 (D. Ga. 1936).

Writ of habeas corpus cannot be used merely as substitute for writ of error or other remedial procedure to correct errors of law, of which the defendant had opportunity to avail himself; and no question as to guilt or innocence or as to any irregularity can be so raised, unless it was such as to render the judgment wholly void. Sanders v. Aldredge, 189 Ga. 69, 5 S.E.2d 371, 1939 Ga. LEXIS 662 (1939); White v. George, 195 Ga. 465, 24 S.E.2d 787, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 532 (1943).

Remedy of writ of habeas corpus when defendant denied due process in trial. — Writ of habeas corpus is the appropriate remedy only when the court was without jurisdiction in the premises, or when it exceeded its jurisdiction in passing sentence by virtue of which the party is imprisoned, or where the defendant in the trial was denied due process of law, in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 14 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I. Balkcom v. Parris, 215 Ga. 122, 109 S.E.2d 48, 1959 Ga. LEXIS 406 (1959).

Writ of habeas corpus was properly denied where the contention that the plaintiff in error was denied certain constitutional rights, including due process of law, because the refusal to continue the case was decided on the motion for new trial, adversely to the contentions of the plaintiff in error. Starr v. Balkcom, 209 Ga. 680, 75 S.E.2d 5, 1953 Ga. LEXIS 355 (1953).

Mere error by competent court regarding plea of former jeopardy gives no right to habeas corpus. — A mere error as to the applicability or inapplicability of plea of former jeopardy in a particular case by a court of competent jurisdiction would not give the right to habeas corpus under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Hall v. Scoggins, 202 Ga. 198, 42 S.E.2d 763, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 419 (1947).

Petitioner for habeas corpus may be relieved from waiver of constitutional rights if the petitioner can demonstrate that the failure to object was "for cause." Stewart v. Ricketts, 451 F. Supp. 911, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17303 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Showing of actual prejudice will allow petitioner for habeas corpus to avoid bar raised by state procedural timeliness rule concerning the waiver of federal constitutional rights. Stewart v. Ricketts, 451 F. Supp. 911, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17303 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Actual prejudice must be extraneous influence moving tribunal to decide case on improper basis, commonly, though not always, an emotional one. Stewart v. Ricketts, 451 F. Supp. 911, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17303 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

No federal claim for habeas relief stated by alleging that state habeas court failed to apply state law properly. Stewart v. Ricketts, 451 F. Supp. 911, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17303 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Writs of habeas corpus should issue where retarded petitioners' waiver of constitutional rights not knowing. — Where uncontroverted evidence was that petitioners for writs of habeas corpus were 15 and 16 years of age, with I.Q.'s estimated between 60 and 68, and had not more than second-grade reading levels, any waiver of constitutional rights by them was not knowing and intelligent, and the writs should issue. Cooper v. Griffin, 455 F.2d 1142, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 11426 (5th Cir. 1972).

Where court has jurisdiction, rulings and judgment not subject to collateral attack by habeas corpus. — Where both the trial court and Court of Appeals have jurisdiction to deal with a plea of former jeopardy, it necessarily follows that, whether the rulings and judgment against the plea were correct or incorrect, they were not absolutely void so as to render them subject to collateral attack by habeas corpus. This is true regardless of whether the right to assert the defense of former jeopardy in a state court is one that comes within the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 and the case is not altered by the fact that a petition for certiorari was denied. Hall v. Scoggins, 202 Ga. 198, 42 S.E.2d 763, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 419 (1947).

If state deliberately conceals eye-witness to crime, due process has been violated and habeas must be granted if, in the context of the entire trial, the missing witness' testimony was such as might have created a reasonable doubt which would not otherwise have existed. Freeman v. Georgia, 599 F.2d 65, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 13066 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1013, 100 S. Ct. 661, 62 L. Ed. 2d 641, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 269 (1980).

Investigating police officer's willful, intentional concealment of material information imputed to state. — When an investigating police officer willfully and intentionally conceals material information, regardless of the officer's motivation and the otherwise proper conduct of the state attorney, the police officer's conduct must be imputed to the state as part of the prosecution team. Freeman v. Georgia, 599 F.2d 65, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 13066 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1013, 100 S. Ct. 661, 62 L. Ed. 2d 641, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 269 (1980).

Habeas corpus will not lie to challenge jury charge in absence of clear denial of due process so as to render the trial fundamentally unfair. Smith v. Smith, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 885, 93 S. Ct. 99, 34 L. Ed. 2d 141, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 1745 (1972).

Habeas corpus will not lie to set aside conviction on basis of improper jury instructions. — Habeas corpus does not lie to set aside a conviction on the basis of improper jury instructions unless the impropriety is a clear denial of due process so as to render the trial fundamentally unfair. Smith v. Smith, 321 F. Supp. 482, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9045 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 454 F.2d 572, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 6623 (5th Cir. 1971).

In habeas corpus proceeding, the burden is on petitioner to establish denial of benefit of counsel by proof, and it was not error to deny the petitioner's release on this ground. *Plocar v. tioner to secure expert testimony does not infringe on the petitioner's constitutional right to a full and fair hearing on his petition in the Georgia courts. Morgan v. Zant, 582 F. Supp. 1026, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19645 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 743 F.2d 775, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 18388 (11th Cir. 1984).

In federal habeas corpus court, test of legality of state arrest is "federal probable cause." Diamond v. Marland, 395 F. Supp. 432, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12174 (S.D. Ga. 1975).

Discharge under writ of habeas corpus, after conviction, cannot be granted unless judgment is absolutely void, as where the convicting court was without jurisdiction, or where the defendant in the trial was denied due process of law in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 14, and Ga. Const. 1877, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. V (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV). Aldredge v. Williams, 188 Ga. 607, 4 S.E.2d 469, 1939 Ga. LEXIS 584 (1939), cert. denied, 309 U.S. 661, 60 S. Ct. 512, 84 L. Ed. 1009, 1940 U.S. LEXIS 949 (1940); Sanders v. Aldredge, 189 Ga. 69, 5 S.E.2d 371, 1939 Ga. LEXIS 662 (1939); White v. George, 195 Ga. 465, 24 S.E.2d 787, 1943 Ga. LEXIS 532 (1943).

Dismissal of appeal of denial of habeas corpus because prisoner escaped is not ground for habeas corpus relief. Yates v. Brown, 235 Ga. 391, 219 S.E.2d 729, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 890 (1975).

Scope of federal habeas corpus review of sentencing. — If a federal habeas court concludes that the Georgia Supreme Court's determination following its "proportionality" review of a death sentence under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-35 "shocks the conscience," it is required to remand the case to allow the state court to resentence the petitioner. A federal habeas court may not conduct a de novo proportionality review and thereby inject itself into the state sentencing procedure. Its review remains confined to whether the state sentencing procedure both on its face and as applied violates the eighth and Fourteenth Amendments. Moore v. Balkcom, 716 F.2d 1511, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 16411 (11th Cir. 1983).

Unconstitutional to dismiss appeal due to counsel's failure to file. — Dismissal of a criminal defendant's appeal because of counsel's failure to timely file an appeal is a violation of due process because the defendant is thereby deprived of the effective assistance of counsel. Campbell v. State, 178 Ga. App. 814, 344 S.E.2d 745, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2573 (1986).

Effect of media coverage. — State death row inmate's federal habeas corpus petition was denied; the inmate's right to be tried by an impartial jury was not compromised by the trial court's failure to excuse a number of allegedly biased jurors, including prospective jurors who were exposed to pretrial publicity, a prospective juror who was a local attorney, and a prospective juror who had once been the defendant in a debt collection action by filed the law firm of which the inmate's counsel was a member. Ford v. Schofield, 488 F. Supp. 2d 1258, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 34958 (N.D. Ga. 2007), aff'd, 546 F.3d 1326, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 22318 (11th Cir. 2008).

State death row inmate's federal habeas corpus petition was denied; although the prosecutor improperly referred in closing argument to the biblical condemnation of the crime of murder, the comment's inflammatory nature did not prejudice the jury because defense counsel responded in kind by referencing the biblical quality of mercy. Ford v. Schofield, 488 F. Supp. 2d 1258, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 34958 (N.D. Ga. 2007), aff'd, 546 F.3d 1326, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 22318 (11th Cir. 2008).

Appeal bond denial upheld. — The provision in O.C.G.A. § 17-6-1(g) denying appeal bonds to persons convicted of "murder, rape . . . and who have been sentenced to serve a period of seven years or more" does not violate either the due process or equal protection clause. Hall v. State, 254 Ga. 507, 330 S.E.2d 878, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 805 (1985).

Guilty plea waives suppression issue on appeal. — Because defendant pled guilty to the charges of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, defendant waived any claim that the trial court erred in denying defendant's motion to suppress evidence of said firearm found in defendant's residence. Stuart v. State, 267 Ga. App. 463, 600 S.E.2d 629, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 688 (2004).

On appeal of a denial of a motion to suppress, the evidence is to be construed most favorably to the upholding of the findings and judgment made. The trial court's findings must be adopted unless determined to be clearly erroneous. Dennis v. State, 166 Ga. App. 715, 305 S.E.2d 443, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3266 (1983).

Exculpatory materials disclosure request first made on appeal. — Where defendant filed no Brady motion for disclosure of exculpatory materials, the Court of Appeals held it could not consider matters raised for the first time on appeal. Halsell v. State, 183 Ga. App. 549, 359 S.E.2d 393, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2727 (1987).

Enumerations of error are abandoned on appeal where there is no citation to authority or argument to support them other than a general reference to the due process requirements of the Constitution. Jacobs v. State, 167 Ga. App. 454, 306 S.E.2d 717, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3330 (1983).

Pro se motion alleging ineffective assistance unauthorized and without effect. — Habeas court erred in granting the defendant a new trial on the ground that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel on appeal since the defendant was not afforded defendant's constitutional right to conflict-free appellate representation because there was no impediment to trial counsel's continued representation of the defendant on appeal; because the defendant expressed defendant's contention that trial counsel's representation fell below the constitutional standard in a pro se motion defendant filed while represented by trial counsel, defendant's motion was unauthorized and without effect, and the contents of the motion were without force to support any viable claim of an actual conflict of interest on the part of counsel. Williams v. Moody, 287 Ga. 665, 697 S.E.2d 199, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 513 (2010).

13. Probation and Parole

Entitlement to parole. — A convicted person does not have a constitutional or inherent right to be conditionally released before expiration of a valid sentence. A state may, however, create a legitimate claim of entitlement to parole through statutory language creating a protectable expectation of release. Slocum v. Georgia State Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 678 F.2d 940, 1982 U.S. App. LEXIS 18429 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1043, 103 S. Ct. 462, 74 L. Ed. 2d 612, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 4552 (1982).

Where a prisoner argued that the prisoner had a liberty interest in parole consideration and that the prisoner could, therefore, invoke the due process clause in a claim against the defendants, it was held that no entitlement or liberty interest in parole was created by Georgia statute. Fuller v. Georgia State Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 851 F.2d 1307, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 10929 (11th Cir. 1988).

No protected liberty interest in parole is created by the Georgia parole system. To give rise to a liberty interest in parole, the statutes and regulations must meaningfully limit the discretion of state officials, and, in Georgia, the substantial discretion reserved by the Board of Pardon and Paroles belies any claim to reasonable expectation of parole. Indeed, the system contains a statutory presumption against parole, O.C.G.A. § 42-9-42, and an explicit reservation of authority to depart from the grid recommendation, negating any reasonable claim of an entitlement to parole. Sultenfuss v. Snow, 35 F.3d 1494, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 27817 (11th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1191, 115 S. Ct. 1254, 131 L. Ed. 2d 134, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 1692 (1995).

A retroactive change in the method for calculating the tentative parole month of certain crime severity level offenders under the parole decision guidelines did not violate due process as the prisoners affected did not have a derivative due process right to be sentenced in reliance on an expectation of parole. Jones v. Georgia State Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 59 F.3d 1145, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 20179 (11th Cir. 1995).

Due Process (Cont'd)13. Probation and Parole (Cont'd)

The exceptional parole process governed by O.C.G.A. § 42-9-45 did not create a constitutionally protected liberty interest in parole. Worley v. Georgia Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 932 F. Supp. 1466, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8984 (N.D. Ga. 1996).

Defendant to be given notice and opportunity to be heard regarding violation of rules of suspended or probated sentence. — To deprive a defendant of the defendant's liberty upon the theory that the defendant violated any of the rules and regulations prescribed in a suspended or probated sentence without giving the defendant a notice and opportunity to be heard upon the question of whether or not the defendant violated such rules and regulations, would be to violate one of the fundamentals of our system of jurisprudence that a person shall not be deprived of one's liberty without due process of law, which includes notice and an opportunity to be heard. Lester v. Foster, 207 Ga. 596, 63 S.E.2d 402, 1951 Ga. LEXIS 476 (1951).

When revocation of suspended sentence not denial of due process. — Where it appears that full notice and hearing were afforded and that the defendant was represented by counsel both in the original trials and the subsequent revocation proceedings, the revocation of a suspended sentence is not a denial of due process. Cross v. State, 128 Ga. App. 774, 197 S.E.2d 853, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1612 (1973).

Judge authorized to revoke suspension or probation when defendant has violated court-prescribed rules. — The judge only has authority to revoke the suspension or probation when the defendant has violated any of the rules and regulations prescribed by the court. Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1668 (1973).

Last sentence of O.C.G.A. § 42-8-36(a), which allows the court to revoke probation without notice to the probationer under certain circumstances, constitutes a denial of due process.

Hughes v. Hinks, 249 Ga. 416, 291 S.E.2d 545, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1154 (1982).

Defendant denied due process by deprivation of liberty because of rule violations where none imposed in sentence. — To deprive a defendant of the defendant's liberty upon the theory that the defendant has violated rules and regulations prescribed in the defendant's sentence, when no rules, regulations, conditions, limitations, or restrictions were imposed by such sentence, would deprive the defendant of "due process of law." Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1668 (1973).

Suspension of sentence conditioned on defendant's obeying all laws is enforceable. — The condition for suspension of a sentence that the defendant obey all state, federal, and municipal laws is not so vague, indefinite, ambiguous, and uncertain as to be unenforceable. Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1668 (1973).

Defendant must be made aware of payment of fine as condition precedent to beginning probation. — While a court may lawfully require the payment of a fine as a condition precedent to beginning a probationary period, due process demands that the defendant be made aware that the condition is in fact a condition precedent. Huff v. McLarty, 241 Ga. 442, 246 S.E.2d 302, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1015 (1978).

Condition of probation invading right to self-expression and not directly related to rehabilitation unreasonable. — A condition of probation that invades a person's constitutionally protected right to personal self-expression and that is not related directly to the person's rehabilitation cannot meet the test of reasonableness. Inman v. State, 124 Ga. App. 190, 183 S.E.2d 413, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 866 (1971), overruled in part, Pittman v. State, 366 Ga. App. 372, 883 S.E.2d 56, 2023 Ga. App. LEXIS 10 (2023).

Condition precluding contact between perpetrator of sexual crime and victim. — Imposition as a condition of probation that the defendant, who was convicted of aggravated child molestation, have no direct or indirect contact with the defendant's seven-year-old child until the child reached the age of majority was within the discretion of the court, and was not a violation of the defendant's constitutional rights. Tuttle v. State, 215 Ga. App. 396, 450 S.E.2d 863, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 1247 (1994).

Requiring the defendant to wear short haircut as condition of probation is violative of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Inman v. State, 124 Ga. App. 190, 183 S.E.2d 413, 1971 Ga. App. LEXIS 866 (1971), overruled in part, Pittman v. State, 366 Ga. App. 372, 883 S.E.2d 56, 2023 Ga. App. LEXIS 10 (2023).

Where restitution court-ordered out of probationer's weekly salary on penalty of imprisonment. — Prior notice and an opportunity to be heard are prerequisite where restitution is ordered by a court to be paid out of a probationer's weekly salary, and the penalty for failure to pay is imprisonment. Morgan v. Wofford, 472 F.2d 822, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11966 (5th Cir. 1973).

Fixing amount of restitution to be paid without notice and opportunity for hearing violative of due process. — Fixing the amount of restitution required to be paid under Code 1933, § 27-2711 (see O.C.G.A. § 42-8-35), without notice to the probationer and without any opportunity for the probationer to question or appeal the amount, especially where criminal sanctions may be involved, violates U.S. Const., amend. 14, since due process requires notice and an opportunity for hearing appropriate to the nature of the case when the state seeks to deprive a person of property or liberty. Morgan v. Wofford, 472 F.2d 822, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11966 (5th Cir. 1973).

Due process right to revocation hearing does not attach until execution of violator warrant, so delay in granting such a hearing while the warrant is held in abeyance does not offend rights under U.S. Const., amend. 14 absent an affirmative showing of prejudice. Gray v. Hogan, 388 F. Supp. 476, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14205 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Guarantee of due process applies to revocations of probation, since revocation of probation results in the same loss of liberty. United States v. Cornwell, 625 F.2d 686, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 14149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1066, 101 S. Ct. 794, 66 L. Ed. 2d 610, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 4411 (1980).

Probationer is entitled to notice and hearing when petition is filed to revoke probation. United States v. Cornwell, 625 F.2d 686, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 14149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1066, 101 S. Ct. 794, 66 L. Ed. 2d 610, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 4411 (1980).

Due process requires that a hearing be held before decision to revoke probation is made. Hughes v. Hinks, 249 Ga. 416, 291 S.E.2d 545, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1154 (1982).

Notice and hearing procedure can be consolidated. — Failure of the trial court to afford a preliminary hearing to establish probable cause to conduct a revocation of probation hearing followed by an evidentiary show cause hearing, rather than consolidating the procedure into one hearing, does not violate due process. Wilson v. State, 152 Ga. App. 695, 263 S.E.2d 691, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 3009 (1979), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 847, 101 S. Ct. 133, 66 L. Ed. 2d 57, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 2934 (1980).

District courts shall provide notice to probationers of proposed extensions and advise right to hearing before the court acts. United States v. Cornwell, 625 F.2d 686, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 14149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1066, 101 S. Ct. 794, 66 L. Ed. 2d 610, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 4411 (1980).

Explanation for departure from parole guidelines. — The plaintiff had no constitutional right to procedural due process protections, and, therefore, had no right to an explanation for departure from parole guidelines. O'Kelley v. Snow, 53 F.3d 319, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 12688 (11th Cir. 1995).

Proceeding to revoke probated sentence is not criminal proceeding. — The prohibition against putting any person twice in jeopardy of life or limb applies only to twice subjecting an individual to criminal processes for the same offense against the same sovereign; there is no bar to the state's imposing both a civil and a criminal penalty for the same act. A proceeding to revoke a probated sentence is not a criminal proceeding. Johnson v. State, 142 Ga. App. 124, 235 S.E.2d 550, 1977 Ga. App. LEXIS 1504 (1977), aff'd, 240 Ga. 526, 242 S.E.2d 53, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 697 (1978).

Evidence required to revoke suspension is evidence defendant has violated conditions of probation which satisfies the trial court in the exercise of a very wide discretion; it is not necessary to show that the defendant has been convicted of the act constituting the violation of the probation. Hinton v. State, 127 Ga. App. 853, 195 S.E.2d 472, 1973 Ga. App. LEXIS 1668 (1973).

Revocation of probation, under "slight" evidence test, the standard by which the sufficiency of the evidence is determined, is not violative of due process in that it is less than that necessary to sustain a conviction. King v. State, 154 Ga. App. 549, 269 S.E.2d 55, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2276 (1980).

Application of "slight evidence" rule did not deny defendant due process in probation revocation. — Because the defendant received written notice of the claimed violation of probation, the disclosure of the evidence against the defendant, an opportunity to be heard in person, to present witnesses and document evidence, and the right to confront and cross-examine adverse witnesses, heard by a neutral and detached judicial officer with a written statement by the fact-finder as to the evidence relied on and reasons for revoking probation, application of the "slight evidence" rule did not deny the defendant due process and equal protection. Mingo v. State, 155 Ga. App. 284, 270 S.E.2d 700, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2558 (1980).

Revocation of probation based, at least in part, upon alleged commission of crime for which a party has not yet stood trial and been found guilty does not contravene principles of due process and fundamental fairness. King v. State, 154 Ga. App. 549, 269 S.E.2d 55, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2276 (1980).

Establishment of defendant's guilt beyond reasonable doubt not necessary for revocation of probation. —

The benefit and protection afforded under the due process and equal protection clauses of the state and federal Constitutions have not in anywise been violated in that the establishment of a defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt is not necessary to justify the revocation of a sentence of probation. Mingo v. State, 155 Ga. App. 284, 270 S.E.2d 700, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2558 (1980).

Even if grand jury entered a "No Bill" as to charge against the defendant for criminal damage to property in the second degree and the trial judge in the hearing concerning revocation of probation found "criminal trespass," there was no violation of the due process guarantee bestowed upon defendant by U.S. Const., amend. 5 and U.S. Const., amend. 14 and the Constitution of this state. Mingo v. State, 155 Ga. App. 284, 270 S.E.2d 700, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2558 (1980).

Revocation of probation, premised upon failure to timely pay court-ordered restitution upheld as not violating due process and equal protection. Wilson v. State, 155 Ga. App. 825, 273 S.E.2d 210, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2806 (1980).

Same minimum due process requirements in parole revocation cases apply to revocation of probation proceedings. Tucker v. State, 157 Ga. App. 202, 276 S.E.2d 842, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1737 (1981).

Due process clause requires that individual on parole be afforded hearing before parole is revoked. United States v. Cornwell, 625 F.2d 686, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 14149 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1066, 101 S. Ct. 794, 66 L. Ed. 2d 610, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 4411 (1980).

Parole revocation not part of criminal prosecution. — Supreme Court of Georgia in Johnson v. State, 240 Ga. 526, 242 S.E.2d 53 (1978), in affirming Johnson v. State, 142 Ga. App. 124, 235 S.E.2d 550 (1977), adopted the language of the Supreme Court of the United States in Morrissey v. Brewer, 408 U.S. 471, 92 S. Ct. 2593, 33 L. Ed. 2d 484 (1972) which is as follows: "The revocation of parole is not part of a criminal prosecution and thus the full panoply of rights due a defendant in such a proceeding does not apply to parole revocations. Revocation deprives an individual, not of the absolute liberty to which every citizen is entitled, but only of the conditional liberty property dependent on observance of special parole restrictions." Mingo v. State, 155 Ga. App. 284, 270 S.E.2d 700, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 2558 (1980); Christian v. State, 164 Ga. App. 612, 298 S.E.2d 325, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 3333 (1982).

Fact finder in revocation of parole hearing must make written statement of evidence relied on and reasons for revoking parole. Tucker v. State, 157 Ga. App. 202, 276 S.E.2d 842, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1737 (1981).

Hearing officer in revocation of parole hearing must make summary, or digest, of what occurs in terms of responses of the parolee, and the substance of documents or evidence given in support of parole revocation and of the parolee's position. Tucker v. State, 157 Ga. App. 202, 276 S.E.2d 842, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 1737 (1981).

Right to counsel at revocation proceeding. — A probationer has no sixth amendment right to counsel at a revocation proceeding, but has only a more limited due process right to counsel under the fourteenth amendment. Vaughn v. Rutledge, 265 Ga. 773, 462 S.E.2d 132, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 801 (1995).

Under the due process clause, a probationer in a revocation proceeding has no inflexible constitutional right to have counsel appointed; thus, a habeas court erred in predicating the grant of a petition upon a finding that the trial court's failure to inform probationer of a right to appointed counsel was a constitutional violation. Vaughn v. Rutledge, 265 Ga. 773, 462 S.E.2d 132, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 801 (1995).

Trial court's failure to inform a probationer of the probationer's right to request counsel at a revocation proceeding did not necessarily mandate the grant of the probationer's petition for habeas relief; thus, the order granting the petition was reversed and the case remanded for the court to determine whether the appointment of counsel would have been mandated had the probationer requested legal representation. Vaughn v. Rutledge, 265 Ga. 773, 462 S.E.2d 132, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 801 (1995).

A probationer has only a more limited due process right to counsel under the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, and whether the probationer is entitled to counsel must be determined on a case-by-case basis. Kitchens v. State, 234 Ga. App. 785, 508 S.E.2d 176.

Since a probationer has no inflexible right to appointed counsel under the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, there is no absolute requirement that the probationer be informed of that right, so a probationer is entitled to be informed only of his or her right to request counsel. Kitchens v. State, 234 Ga. App. 785, 508 S.E.2d 176.

Probationer had no U.S. Const., amend. 6 right to counsel at a revocation proceeding because it was not a stage of a criminal prosecution, and only had a more limited due process right to counsel under U.S. Const., amend. 14; trial court's flawed reasoning for refusing to appoint counsel for the defendant in a probation revocation proceeding was harmless because the defendant admitted to having committed another crime, did not claim any reasons justifying or mitigating the defendant's violations, capably spoke, and failed to show a lack of fundamental fairness. Banks v. State, 275 Ga. App. 326, 620 S.E.2d 581, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 968 (2005).

Waiver of right not shown. — Because the defendant was not notified that by failing to report to the defendant's probation supervisor or by changing the defendant's place of abode without permission, the defendant's probation could be revoked without notice and hearing under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-36, the defendant's act of moving from county without permission of probation officer did not constitute knowing waiver of right to notice and hearing prior to probation revocation. Hughes v. Hinks, 249 Ga. 416, 291 S.E.2d 545, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1154 (1982).

14. Prisoners

Eighth amendment protection excludes claim under due process. — Since the eighth amendment provides explicit protection to prisoners against cruel and unusual punishment, a prisoner could not bring a separate civil rights claim for the same behavior based on substantive due process under the fourteenth amendment. Lee v. Sikes, 870 F. Supp. 1096, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17906 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Procedural due process requires, as minimum, that notice be given of rules prisoners are required to follow. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Disciplinary proceedings. — Where disciplinary actions are taken against prisoner, Constitution requires only that hearing be held before final disciplinary action taken and final forfeiture occurs. Story v. Ault, 238 Ga. 69, 230 S.E.2d 875, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1098 (1976).

Due process claim on improper disciplinary hearing. — Summary judgment on an inmate's procedural due process claim for prison officials' denying the inmate witnesses at the inmate's disciplinary proceedings was properly denied as genuine issue of material fact existed, and damages claim was ordered remanded for further proceedings. Harper v. Thomas, 988 F.2d 101, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 7294 (11th Cir. 1993).

Pretrial detainees. — Whether a pretrial detainee may press a claim of excessive force under the fourth amendment remains open. It is clear, however, that the due process clause protects a pretrial detainee from the use of excessive force that amounts to punishment. Wright v. Whiddon, 951 F.2d 297, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 300 (11th Cir. 1992).

Prisoner has right to hearing before being placed in solitary confinement. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Prison inmates are afforded no due process constitutional protection against imposition of solitary confinement in the absence of some liberty interest created by the state. Dudley

v. Stewart, 724 F.2d 1493, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 25530 (11th Cir. 1984).

Where inmate's good time is forfeited constitutionally minimum procedures required are: (1) a hearing; (2) written notice of the charges served at least 24 hours in advance of the hearing; (3) a written report of the hearing setting out the reasons for the action taken and the evidence relied on. The prisoner may be permitted to call witnesses and present evidence consistent with the needs of the institution. There is no constitutional right to confrontation, cross-examination, or counsel. Story v. Ault, 238 Ga. 69, 230 S.E.2d 875, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1098 (1976).

Parole board's refusal to allow inmate to examine file not deprivation of constitutional rights. — The refusal of a parole board to allow an inmate to examine the inmate's file does not assume the proportions of a deprivation of the inmate's rights under the Constitution or the laws of the United States. Jackson v. Reese, 608 F.2d 159, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 9841 (5th Cir. 1979).

Inadequacy of review procedure for transfer from special restrictive prison facility. — See Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Prisoner being disciplined must be given written statement by fact finder as to evidence relied on and reasons. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Hearing is not required to transfer prisoner for disciplinary reasons from the general prison populace of one prison to the general prison populace of another prison with less favorable conditions. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Wrongful beating of prisoner by arresting officer acting under warrant, whether void or valid, is unlawful deprivation of a right of a citizen of the United States which U.S. Const., amend. 14 protects. Screws v. United States, 140 F.2d 662, 1944 U.S. App. LEXIS 4009 (5th Cir. 1944).

Use of undue force by prison guard is actionable as deprivation of due process rights, even though violation of U.S. Const., amend. 8, may not be established. George v. Evans, 633 F.2d 413, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11190 (5th Cir. 1980).

Prisoners have constitutional right of access to courts. — The constitution forbids courts to abridge inmates' rights to have meaningful access to and communications with the courts, and a blanket declaration that all filings would be "null and void by operation of law" was impermissible. Hooper v. Harris, 236 Ga. App. 651, 512 S.E.2d 312, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 188 (1999).

Shaving requirements for death row inmates. — Institutional policy prohibiting inmates from leaving death row unless all shaving requirements are complied with is a permissible restriction on an inmate's access to the courts, and enforcement of such a rule does not violate an inmate's constitutional rights. Solomon v. Zant, 888 F.2d 1579, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 17778 (11th Cir. 1989).

Prisoner should always be accorded privilege of conferring freely with counsel at all reasonable times. Morris v. Peacock, 202 Ga. 524, 43 S.E.2d 531, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 460, cert. denied, 332 U.S. 832, 68 S. Ct. 200, 92 L. Ed. 405, 1947 U.S. LEXIS 1619 (1947).

Prisoner not to be wrongfully deprived of privileges for desire to represent self in appeal. — A prisoner who wishes to represent oneself in a criminal appeal is entitled to be protected from any unconstitutional discrimination or abuse of discretion in the dispensing of those privileges granted to the prison population as a whole. Lee v. Stynchcombe, 347 F. Supp. 1076, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11943 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

U.S. Const., amend. 14 protects right of prisoners to seek access to courts concerning conditions of incarceration. Clark v. Hendrix, 397 F. Supp. 966, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11554 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Prisoners do not have absolute right to file any civil action they desire, and prisons may prohibit the filing of any civil action unrelated to their personal liberty. Clark v. Hendrix, 397 F. Supp. 966, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11554 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

When prisoner asserts lack of mental competence at trial. — When a prisoner, either state or federal, seeking post-conviction relief, asserts, with substantial facts to back up the prisoner's allegation, that at the time of the trial the prisoner was not mentally competent to stand trial, and that there was no resolution of that precise issue before the prisoner was tried, convicted, and sentenced, U.S. Const., amend. 14 requires that such conviction and sentence be set aside unless upon adequate hearing it is shown that the prisoner was mentally competent to stand trial. Jackson v. Caldwell, 461 F.2d 682, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 9045 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 991, 93 S. Ct. 334, 34 L. Ed. 2d 257, 1972 U.S. LEXIS 887 (1972).

Prison regulation prohibiting inmate assistance in drafting of pro se legal papers constituted deprivation of due process of law, where no "reasonable alternative" was available to furnish legal advice. Williams v. United States Dep't of Justice, 433 F.2d 958, 1970 U.S. App. LEXIS 6790 (5th Cir. 1970).

Medical needs. — The fourteenth amendment right of pretrial detainees, like the eighth amendment right of convicted prisoners, requires that government officials not be deliberately indifferent to any serious medical needs of the detainee. McDay ex rel. McDay v. City of Atlanta, 740 F. Supp. 852, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7619 (N.D. Ga. 1990), aff'd, 927 F.2d 614, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 2694 (11th Cir. 1991).

Deliberate indifference to serious medical needs by governmental custodians violates due process. However, unlike an eighth amendment violation, a due process violation does not require a subjective deliberate indifference; such violation requires action under color-of-law and causation, as in an eighth amendment violation. Howard v. City of Columbus, 239 Ga. App. 399, 521 S.E.2d 51, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 981 (1999), cert. denied, No. S99C1687, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 64 (Ga. Jan. 14, 2000), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1215, 120 S. Ct. 2218, 147 L. Ed. 2d 250, 2000 U.S. LEXIS 3827 (2000).

Where medical policies were promulgated and carried out under the mandate of O.C.G.A. § 42-5-2, requiring that a county provide adequate medical care for its inmates, and the seriously ill prisoner was seen only by undertrained LPNs, not by a physician, before the inmate died, this was a violation of the inmate's due process and eighth amendment rights. Howard v. City of Columbus, 239 Ga. App. 399, 521 S.E.2d 51, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 981 (1999), cert. denied, No. S99C1687, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 64 (Ga. Jan. 14, 2000), cert. denied, 530 U.S. 1215, 120 S. Ct. 2218, 147 L. Ed. 2d 250, 2000 U.S. LEXIS 3827 (2000).

Suicide. — In the context of a pretrial detainee's suicide, defendants must have had knowledge that the detainee was a suicide risk before they can be charged with deliberate indifference. McDay ex rel. McDay v. City of Atlanta, 740 F. Supp. 852, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7619 (N.D. Ga. 1990), aff'd, 927 F.2d 614, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 2694 (11th Cir. 1991).

Official liability for detainee's suicide. — County commissioners and jail administrators ignorant of a decedent's custody or suicidal threats were not liable under a duty to protect the decedent's liberty interests, but overseeing sheriff was potentially liable as a reasonable person in sheriff's position would have known that providing inadequate psychiatric care to a person in the sheriff's custody could violate that person's due process rights. Merideth v. Grogan, 812 F. Supp. 1223, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20601 (N.D. Ga. 1992), aff'd, 985 F.2d 579, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 1424 (11th Cir. 1993).

Health conditions. — If the municipal bureau of corrections persistently maintained conditions in the city jail which did not conform to the city ordinance regulating health and sanitary conditions, but which did amount to a custom of (as opposed to random) deprivation of rights, then the city was subject to liability for the deprivation of the defendant's due process rights. Lambert v. McFarland, 612 F. Supp. 1252, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22707 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Because a city was immune from suit in performing the governmental function of maintaining the city jail, it could not be concluded as a matter of law, in a federal civil rights action against the city and its police officers, alleging that the physical conditions in the jail deprived the defendant of due process, that "adequate state remedies" existed. Lambert v. McFarland, 612 F. Supp. 1252, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22707 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Substandard sanitation and deficient medical care of inmates at a county jail was unconstitutional, and necessitated releasing some inmates to relieve overcrowding until construction of a new jail was completed. Fambro v. Fulton County, 713 F. Supp. 1426, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5703 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-15(b) does not violate the right to privacy under the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 or the state or federal equal protection clauses. Adams v. State, 269 Ga. 405, 498 S.E.2d 268, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 442 (1998).

Requiring the defendant to serve a sentence in installments because the defendant's premature release was brought about through no fault of the defendant's own, and because reincarceration would be inconsistent with fundamental principles of liberty and justice, was a violation of due process. Derrer v. Anthony, 265 Ga. 892, 463 S.E.2d 690, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 940 (1995).

Prisoner entitled to protection against cruel and unusual punishment. — Certain constitutional rights follow a person into state prison through U.S. Const., amend. 14 and among these is the protection of U.S. Const., amend. 8, against cruel and unusual punishment. Wilson v. Kelley, 294 F. Supp. 1005, 1968 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8039 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 393 U.S. 266, 89 S. Ct. 477, 21 L. Ed. 2d 425, 1968 U.S. LEXIS 6 (1968).

Independent state ground for challenging custodial abuse. — Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII, which states that no person shall be abused while under arrest, provides an independent state ground for this action, and provides at least as much protection to pretrial detainees under certain circumstances as the fourteenth amendment due process clause. Long v. Jones, 208 Ga. App. 798, 432 S.E.2d 593, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 706 (1993).

An inmate has right to reasonable protection from constant threat of violence; however, an isolated attack by another inmate does not establish the absence of this protection. O'Neal v. Evans, 496 F. Supp. 867, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13364 (S.D. Ga. 1980).

Censorship of prisoner mail is justified only where regulation or practice in question furthers important or substantial governmental interest unrelated to the suppression of expression, and the limitation of freedoms under U.S. Const., amend. 1, is no greater than is necessary or essential to the protection of the particular governmental interest involved. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Usually no constitutionally sufficient reason to stop letter. — Unless a letter contains a threat to prison order and security or is in direct violation of law, there is usually no constitutionally sufficient reason to stop it. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Outgoing letters from prisoners may be inspected and, when deemed necessary, read to determine whether they contain escape plots, violations of law, or threats to the institution. Letters containing simply profane or obscene language, however, are not the proper subject of direct censorship through either halting the letter or suspending the mailing privilege. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Decision to censor or withhold delivery of particular letter must be accompanied by minimum procedural safeguards, since the interest of prisoners and their correspondents in uncensored communications by letter, grounded as it is in U.S. Const., amend. 1 is plainly a "liberty" interest within the meaning of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Censorship of prisoner's reading material is allowed only when government shows that censorship furthers important or substantial governmental interest unrelated to the suppression of expression and that the censorship is no greater a limitation on U.S. Const., amend. 1 rights than generally necessary to protect one or more legitimate governmental interests. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Controlling and taking of prisoner's property. — Prison officials may not permanently take property from prisoners once they have been allowed to have property in prison, but controlling how much property prisoners can have with them in the cell is clearly within the discretion of prison officials. Hardwick v. Ault, 447 F. Supp. 116, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20189 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Freezing prisoner's account. — Prison wardens' conduct in freezing an inmate's account upon receipt of a letter from a judgment creditor's attorney did not involve a federal constitutional deprivation. Grant v. Newsome, 201 Ga. App. 710, 411 S.E.2d 796, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1542 (1991).

A prison inmate may bring a federal civil rights action against prison officials for negligent deprivation of his personal property done in violation of the inmate's due process rights, where the state provided no adequate post deprivation remedy to the inmate. Hight v. Burden, 180 Ga. App. 716, 350 S.E.2d 471, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2774 (1986).

Prisoner may be found guilty of escape by department of corrections. — Even though a prisoner is not tried for the statutory offense of escape in the courts, the prisoner may be found guilty by the Department of Corrections. Story v. Ault, 238 Ga. 69, 230 S.E.2d 875, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1098 (1976).

Racial segregation for limited purpose of avoiding imminent prison violence is at discretion of prison authorities. Stroman v. Griffin, 331 F. Supp. 226, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11991 (S.D. Ga. 1971).

Mere assignment of prisoner to one job rather than another does not state constitutional claim absent other allegation, such as racial discrimination. O'Neal v. Evans, 496 F. Supp. 867, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13364 (S.D. Ga. 1980).

14. Prisoners (Cont'd)

Dismissal of suit for damages and conjugal visits with lawfully imprisoned spouse proper for failure to state claim. — Where plaintiff sued on grounds of U.S. Const., amend. 14 for damages and an order permitting conjugal visits between the plaintiff and the plaintiff's spouse during the time the plaintiff's spouse was lawfully incarcerated, the dismissal of the suit for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted was proper. Polakoff v. Henderson, 370 F. Supp. 690, 71 Ohio Op. 2d 106, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12414 (N.D. Ga. 1973), aff'd, 488 F.2d 977, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 10357 (5th Cir. 1974).

15. Election and Voting Rights

Voting rights protected. — Among the basic civic and political rights that have been found to be protected and preserved from discriminatory action on the part of states is the right of suffrage — the right or privilege of casting a vote at public elections. Paige v. Gray, 437 F. Supp. 137, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14308 (M.D. Ga. 1977).

Right to vote freely for candidate of one's choice is of the essence of a democratic society, and any restrictions on that right strike at the heart of representative government. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

States may determine conditions under which right to vote may be exercised. — A citizen has a constitutionally protected right to participate in elections on an equal basis with other citizens in the jurisdiction; however, this right is not absolute, for states have power to determine conditions under which right of suffrage may be exercised, absent discrimination which the Constitution condemns. Duncan v. Poythress, 515 F. Supp. 327, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13950 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Although administration of election is generally a state concern, voting rights are federally protected. — Administration of elections is generally a matter of state concern, but United States

Supreme Court decisions leave no room for doubt that plaintiffs' voting rights are, at bottom, federally protected. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

United States Constitution protects right to vote once a state has established an electoral system. — Although the United States Constitution confers no right to vote as such, it does guarantee to every citizen the right to participate on a fair and equal basis with all other citizens in the electoral process once a state has chosen to select its public officials by popular vote. Duncan v. Poythress, 515 F. Supp. 327, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13950 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Constitution of the United States protects right to vote in state as well as federal elections. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Constitutional right to vote includes right to have vote counted. — Qualified citizens not only have a constitutionally protected right to vote, but also the right to have their votes counted, a right which can neither be denied outright, nor destroyed by alteration of ballots, nor diluted by ballot box stuffing. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Due process clause prohibits state from unlawfully eliminating right to vote. — Just as the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment prohibits state officials from improperly diluting right to vote, the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment forbids state officials from unlawfully eliminating that fundamental right. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Due process clause prohibits action by state officials which seriously undermines fundamental fairness of electoral process. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Patent and fundamental unfairness in election process. — If the election process itself reaches point of patent and fundamental unfairness, a violation of the due process clause may be indicated and relief under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 is therefore in order. Such a situation must go well beyond ordinary dispute over counting and marking of ballots. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

If the right is denied altogether or abridged in a manner which renders the electoral process fundamentally unfair, a violation of due process may be found. Duncan v. Poythress, 515 F. Supp. 327, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13950 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Alleged infringement on right to vote must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized. — Since right to exercise the franchise in a free and unimpaird manner is preservative of other basic civil rights, any alleged infringement of right of citizens to vote must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. dismissed, 59 U.S. 1012, 103 S. Ct. 368, 74 L. Ed. 2d 504 (1982).

Right to vote is clearly fundamental, and is protected by both due process and equal protection guarantees of the fourteenth amendment; in either case, any alleged infringement of right to vote must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized, for a state has precious little leeway in making it difficult for citizens to vote. Duncan v. Poythress, 515 F. Supp. 327, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13950 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Any state encroachment on right to vote must be justified by a compelling state interest. Duncan v. Poythress, 515 F. Supp. 327, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13950 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Due process clause offers no guarantee against an unintentional error in supervision of an election which allowed a number of people to cast ballots even though they were unqualified under state law to participate in the election. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

No guarantee against innocent irregularities in administration of state elections. — Fourteenth amendment provides no guarantee against innocent irregularities in administration of state elections. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Ballot language summarizing proposed constitutional amendment. — The ballot language selected by Georgia's General Assembly briefly summarizing a proposed amendment to the state's constitution was not so misleading to voters as to justify a federal court's invalidating the outcome of a state referendum on the amendment. Burton v. Georgia, 953 F.2d 1266, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 1110 (11th Cir. 1992).

At-large election system constitutional. — African-American residents of a city failed to establish that, by retaining an at-large election system for city officials, the city acted with a discriminatory purpose in violation of the federal constitution. Cofield v. City of LaGrange, 969 F. Supp. 749, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9568 (N.D. Ga. 1997).

Local legislation. — Procedures for enactment of local legislation by the General Assembly do not violate the principle of "one person, one vote" in violation of the fourteenth amendment. DeJulio v. Georgia, 127 F. Supp. 2d 1274, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4793 (N.D. Ga. 2001), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 276 F.3d 1244, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 27071 (11th Cir. 2001), op. withdrawn, aff'd, 290 F.3d 1291, 2002 U.S. App. LEXIS 8852 (11th Cir. 2002).

Judicial appointment to a vacant seat. — Since any appointment for the judicial position would have been made less than six months prior to the election, pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. VII, the judge candidate could not show that the candidate was deprived of the candidate's right to vote or participate in the electoral process where the candidate's candidacy was "revoked" by the Secretary of State after the Governor decided to appoint a judge to the vacant seat; thus, the judge candidate failed to state a claim pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 or U.S. Const., amend. 14 against the Governor or the Secretary of State. Hornsby v. Barnes, No. 1:02-cv-1812-GET,

16. Property Rights

Rational relationship test. — Where the statute's classification scheme involves solely economic interests, the proper standard of review is whether the classification bears a rational relationship to a legitimate governmental purpose. Mixon v. One Newco, Inc., 863 F.2d 846, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 362 (11th Cir. 1989).

Property interests are created and dimensions defined by existing rules or understandings that stem from independent source such as state law. Winkler v. County of DeKalb, 648 F.2d 411, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 12139 (5th Cir. 1981). See also Press v. Board of Regents, 489 F. Supp. 150, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12764 (M.D. Ga. 1980).

Federal constitutional law determines whether state-created interests constitute protected property interests. — Although underlying substantive interest is created by independent source such as state law, federal constitutional law determines whether that interest rises to level of legitimate claim of entitlement protected by due process clause. Winkler v. County of DeKalb, 648 F.2d 411, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 12139 (5th Cir. 1981).

State cannot declare long-established property right to be nonproperty. — Although primary source of property rights is state law, the state may not magically declare an interest to be nonproperty after the fact for fourteenth amendment purposes if, for example, a long-standing pattern of practice has established an individual's entitlement to a particular governmental benefit. Winkler v. County of DeKalb, 648 F.2d 411, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 12139 (5th Cir. 1981).

Person must have legitimate claim of entitlement to have property interest in benefit. — To have property interest in a benefit, one clearly must have more than a unilateral expectation of it.

One must, instead, have a legitimate claim of entitlement to it. Williams v. Housing Auth., 158 Ga. App. 734, 282 S.E.2d 141, 1981 Ga. App. LEXIS 2395 (1981).

While a unilateral expectation of a benefit does not rise to level of a protected interest, a mutually recognized entitlement will receive constitutional protection. Winkler v. County of DeKalb, 648 F.2d 411, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 12139 (5th Cir. 1981).

Mutually recognizable entitlement will receive constitutional protection. — An interest attains the status of "property" by virtue of the fact that it has been initially recognized and protected by federal or state rules of law. Brown v. Ledbetter, 569 F. Supp. 170, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18151 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Legitimate claim of entitlement required. — In order to acquire a fourteenth amendment property interest with accompanying procedural due process, a person must have more than a unilateral expectation; the individual must possess a legitimate claim of entitlement. Adams v. Bainbridge-Decatur County Hosp. Auth., 888 F.2d 1356, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 17544 (11th Cir. 1989).

Constitutional protection inapplicable to abandoned property. — The constitutional protection of the fourth and fourteenth amendments does not apply to property which has been abandoned. Cooper v. State, 186 Ga. App. 154, 366 S.E.2d 815, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 270 (1988).

Arbitrary and capricious deprivation of a state-created property right through the action of a county executive did not violate substantive due process under the fourteenth amendment. DeKalb Stone, Inc. v. County of DeKalb, 106 F.3d 956, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 3494 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 861, 118 S. Ct. 163, 139 L. Ed. 2d 107, 1997 U.S. LEXIS 5343 (1997).

Person receiving benefits under statutory and administrative standards defining "eligibility" for them has an interest in continued receipt of those benefits that is safeguarded by procedural due process. City of Athens v. McGahee, 178 Ga. App. 76, 341 S.E.2d 855, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2486 (1986).

No property right against social security diminution. — Recipients have no constitutionally protected property interest against a direct or an indirect diminution by Congress of their old age, survivors, and disability benefits under the Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. § 301 et seq. Oliver v. Ledbetter, 821 F.2d 1507, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 8197 (11th Cir. 1987).

Termination of benefits under a city pension plan. — A city pension plan which terminated a surviving spouse's benefits upon remarriage, where the employee was not retired at the time of death, did not violate due process as a surviving spouse does not have a property right in post-remarriage benefits. Strickland v. City of Albany, 270 Ga. 31, 504 S.E.2d 666, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 875 (1998).

A cause of action is a species of property protected by the due process clause. Sisson v. Douglas County Sch. Dist., 181 Ga. App. 77, 351 S.E.2d 272, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2802 (1986).

Hospital staff membership. — Public hospital bylaws excluding nonallopathic physicians, who have not completed allopathic postgraduate training, from the medical staff do not violate the due process clause where the bylaws are rationally related to differences in allopathic and nonallopathic training and promote a legitimate state interest in providing quality health care. Silverstein v. Gwinnett Hosp. Auth., 672 F. Supp. 1444, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10531 (N.D. Ga. 1987), aff'd, 861 F.2d 1560, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 17589 (11th Cir. 1988).

Hospital may contract exclusively for radiology services. — A county hospital's exclusive contract for radiological services, in order to reduce the operating losses of its radiology department, is constitutionally valid, as it is rationally related to a legitimate state interest, i.e., financial well-being. Mays v. Hospital Auth., 582 F. Supp. 425, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20609 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

At-will hospital employee, who was terminable by the employer at any time with or without cause, was not entitled to procedural due process in connection with the termination. Adams v. Bainbridge-Decatur County Hosp. Auth., 888 F.2d 1356, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 17544 (11th Cir. 1989).

Hospital's selection of a competing anesthesiology service did not deprive anesthesiologist, where the anesthesiologist continued to have full staff privileges and to receive referrals at the hospital. Faucher v. Rodziewicz, 891 F.2d 864, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 144 (11th Cir. 1990).

Procreation is a fundamental right. Motes v. Hall County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 251 Ga. 373, 306 S.E.2d 260, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 810 (1983).

"Clear and convincing" evidence required to authorize sterilization. — The seriousness of an individual's interest at stake in a state initiated sterilization proceeding is such that due process requires "clear and convincing" evidence to authorize the sterilization of an individual. The standard of a "legal preponderance" set by O.C.G.A. § 31-20-3(c)(4) does not meet constitutional requirements. Motes v. Hall County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 251 Ga. 373, 306 S.E.2d 260, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 810 (1983).

Bar examination as prerequisite to practice law is not deprivation of property right. — Requiring applicant to take bar examination before being permitted to practice law does not deprive the applicant of a property right in violation of due process. Pace v. Smith, 248 Ga. 728, 286 S.E.2d 18, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1088 (1982).

Compliance with malt beverages statute does not create expectation of licensure. — O.C.G.A. § 3-3-2 does not create the concrete expectation necessary for the creation of a constitutionally protectible property interest because it merely requires the promulgation of standards for the issuance of a malt-beverage license, but does not itself outline standards which, if met, would lead to the issuance of a malt-beverage license. Scoggins v. Moore, 579 F. Supp. 1320, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20207 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 747 F.2d 1466, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16850 (11th Cir. 1984).

Malicious prosecution resulting in loss of license states claim. — Ordinarily, a claim of malicious prosecution does not constitute a deprivation of life, liberty or property without due process of law and, therefore, is not cognizable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Where, however, a prosecution of a pharmacist causes the pharmacist to lose the pharmacist's license to practice pharmacy, that prosecution deprives the pharmacist of the right to engage in one of the common occupations of life. A claim of malicious prosecution therefore is cognizable under § 1983. Shepard v. Byrd, 581 F. Supp. 1374, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19563 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Driver had no property right in plastic license; rather, the right referenced by the plaintiff was the right to drive, but such right is actually a privilege, which the plaintiff retained by virtue of the officer issuing a traffic citation stating that the plaintiff could continue to drive pending resolution of the case. McGraw v. State, 230 Ga. App. 843, 498 S.E.2d 314, 1998 Ga. App. LEXIS 306 (1998).

Procedural due process requirement in the context of beer and wine licensing is two-fold: (1) the licensing authority must give an applicant adequate notice of the standards the applicant must satisfy to obtain a license; and (2) it must accord the applicant due process in the application of those standards through a fair hearing. McCullum v. City of Powder Springs, 720 F. Supp. 985, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11159 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Plaintiffs who challenged the standards for the issuance of a malt-beverage license, and not defendant city's failure to promulgate such standards, possessed a protectable property interest that could be the basis for a due process claim. McCullum v. City of Powder Springs, 720 F. Supp. 985, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11159 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Tort victims were not unconstitutionally deprived of property by a grant of immunity to public employees when acting under color of state law, where potential claimants retain the remedy of a tort action for a public employee's discretionary acts done willfully, maliciously, or corruptly. Sisson

v. Douglas County Sch. Dist., 181 Ga. App. 77, 351 S.E.2d 272, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2802 (1986).

No right to have lease renewed. — A lessor breached no duty, created by contract, tort, or Georgia property law, to its lessee by failing to renew its lease or purchase its property, and, thus, did not deprive the lessee of a constitutionally protected property interest. Stone Mt. Game Ranch, Inc. v. Hunt, 746 F.2d 761, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 16791 (11th Cir. 1984).

A county's failure to put leases of county airport space up for competitive bid did not deprive the plaintiff of due process, where the plaintiff was deprived of no property to which it had legitimate claim of entitlement. Hill Aircraft & Leasing Corp. v. Fulton County, 561 F. Supp. 667, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17490 (N.D. Ga. 1982), aff'd, 729 F.2d 1467, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 24212 (11th Cir. 1984).

A business does not have a right under the due process clause to be free from "anticompetitive injury." Hill Aircraft & Leasing Corp. v. Fulton County, 561 F. Supp. 667, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17490 (N.D. Ga. 1982), aff'd, 729 F.2d 1467, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 24212 (11th Cir. 1984).

Creation of special districts for implementing hotel/motel tax. — Statute creating special districts for the purpose of implementing a hotel/motel tax did not violate state and federal constitutional due process and equal protection guarantees. Youngblood v. State, 259 Ga. 864, 388 S.E.2d 671, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 53 (1990).

A blind vendor's state-issued license issued pursuant to federal law is a property right subject to constitutional protection. Turner v. Giles, 264 Ga. 812, 450 S.E.2d 421, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 911 (1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1108, 115 S. Ct. 1959, 131 L. Ed. 2d 851, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 3252 (1995).

Notice of foreclosure. — It is not presumed that the General Assembly intended to enable a tax sale purchaser to forego any methods of notice of foreclosure of the right to redeem which might be required by the due process clause, and the words “for any reason” in O.C.G.A. § 48-4-46(c) are construed to mean that notice by publication is permissible only if a sheriff’s inability to effect personal service satisfies the constitutional mandate of due process. Hamilton v. Renewed Hope, Inc., 277 Ga. 465, 589 S.E.2d 81, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 999 (2003).

Parent’s interest in the custody of his or her child is a liberty interest entitled to constitutional protection. Bendiburg v. Dempsey, 707 F. Supp. 1318, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1795 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff’d in part and rev’d in part, 909 F.2d 463, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 14321 (11th Cir. 1990).

The state must provide a parent an opportunity to be heard prior to the termination of his or her parental rights. Under certain extraordinary circumstances, however, the state may legally move to terminate the parent’s custody rights without prior notice or opportunity for hearing, provided a meaningful postdeprivation remedy is made available. Bendiburg v. Dempsey, 707 F. Supp. 1318, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1795 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff’d in part and rev’d in part, 909 F.2d 463, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 14321 (11th Cir. 1990).

The due process clause requires that before a state may sever the rights of a parent in a natural child, the state must support its allegations of the parent’s unfitness “by at least clear and convincing evidence.” Thorne v. Padgett, 259 Ga. 650, 386 S.E.2d 155, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 529 (1989).

O.C.G.A. § 19-8-10(b) denies meaningful hearing on failure to provide support. — Because O.C.G.A. § 19-8-10(b) forecloses an inquiry into the reasons for a parent’s failure to provide care and support, thus depriving that parent of a meaningful opportunity to be heard, it denies due process of law. Thorne v. Padgett, 259 Ga. 650, 386 S.E.2d 155, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 529 (1989).

17. Jurisdiction

Long-arm jurisdiction will be exercised to the extent permitted by procedural due process. Najran Co. v. Fleetwood Enters., Inc., 659 F. Supp. 1081, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19578 (S.D. Ga. 1986).

Significant relation to state as prerequisite to application of Georgia law. — Even if Georgia choice-of-law rules would require application of its own common-law rules to some claims involving purchases of securities in other states, the law of Georgia could be applied consistent with due process only if the particular transaction had some significant relation to Georgia. Kirkpatrick v. J.C. Bradford & Co., 827 F.2d 718, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 12310 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 959, 108 S. Ct. 1220, 99 L. Ed. 2d 421, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 1237 (1988), superseded by statute as stated in, In re Vesta Ins. Group, Inc. Secs. Litig., No. CV-98-AR-1407-S, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23541 (N.D. Ala. May 28, 1999).

“Minimum contacts” is test for jurisdiction over nonresidents. — Georgia courts may exercise personal jurisdiction over nonresident defendants to the maximum extent permitted by procedural due process and the constitutional touchstone remains whether a nonresident purposefully established “minimum contacts” in the forum state. W.S. McDuffie & Assocs. v. Owens, 682 F. Supp. 1226, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2677 (N.D. Ga. 1988).

Scope of federal court’s jurisdiction over nonresidents. — In a diversity action, a federal court may exercise in personam jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant only to the extent permitted by the long-arm statute of the forum state and by the due process constraints of the fourteenth amendment. W.S. McDuffie & Assocs. v. Owens, 682 F. Supp. 1226, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2677 (N.D. Ga. 1988).

Limitations of clause do not bind federal court adjudicating federal rights. — A federal court adjudicating federally created rights and exercising the sovereign power of the United States is not bound by limitations developed under the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment, an amendment which by its terms applies only to the 50 states and not to the federal government. Wallace v. Milrob Corp. (In re Rusco Indus., Inc.), 104 B.R. 548, 1989 Bankr. LEXIS 1247 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. 1989).

Garnishment may reach out-of-state wages. — Allowing garnishment of wages earned wholly outside this state is not an unconstitutional extension of the laws of this state to a debt created outside the geographical limits of this state, thus depriving the garnishee of due process. United Merchants & Mfrs., Inc. v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 166 Ga. App. 468, 304 S.E.2d 552, 1983 Ga. App. LEXIS 3243 (1983).

Obtaining personal jurisdiction in federal question case. — To apply the test of amenability to personal jurisdiction in a federal question case, the test of constitutionality, the appropriate inquiry lies with the due process of law clause of the fifth amendment. While the limitations imposed in the fifth amendment are similar to those imposed upon the state courts under the fourteenth amendment, they are not necessarily identical. Vest v. Waring, 565 F. Supp. 674, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16589 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Nonresident contracting with resident. — Jurisdiction is not conferred upon a nonresident who merely contracts with a Georgia resident. Rather, the nonresident must purposefully do some act or consummate some transaction in Georgia from which the claim arises or to which the claim is related. Further, the exercise of jurisdiction must not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. A.I.M. Int'l, Inc. v. Battenfeld Extrusions Sys., 116 F.R.D. 633, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7351 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

Where parties allegedly negotiated at least three times, twice in Atlanta, such negotiations involved discussions as to both the terms of a contract and the modification of these terms, commission rates and sales territories were discussed and agreed upon, and these negotiations and the resulting contract prompted plaintiffs to represent themselves as defendants' agents and as such to consummate substantial sales of defendants' products, but defendants failed to pay commissions allegedly due plaintiffs, defendants purposefully established sufficient minimum contacts with the forum state and the plaintiffs' claim arose from such contacts, thus enabling the court to properly assert in personam jurisdiction over the defendants, including foreign nationals, without offending traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. A.I.M. Int'l, Inc. v. Battenfeld Extrusions Sys., 116 F.R.D. 633, 1987 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7351 (M.D. Ga. 1987).

Because plaintiff initiated a letter agreement with the nonresident defendant which called for delivery of railcars to defendant outside of Georgia and no representative of defendant visited Georgia in connection with the performance of the agreement, defendant was not subject to personal jurisdiction in Georgia. Railcar, Ltd. v. Southern Ill. Railcar Co., 42 F. Supp. 2d 1369, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3489 (N.D. Ga. 1999).

Relation of claims to contacts. — The relationship between a Spanish corporation that owned a resort in the Dominican Republic and its contacts with Georgia — which included an Internet web site — and the negligence of a taxi driver who allegedly injured the taxi's passengers, residents of Georgia who had been vacationing at the resort, was too tenuous to permit jurisdiction over the corporation in Georgia. Sol Melia v. Brown, 301 Ga. App. 760, 688 S.E.2d 675, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1438 (2009).

Shipping contract insufficient. — The exercise of specific personal jurisdiction over Danish shipping partnerships violated due process since contracts to deliver cargo to a Georgia port, in and of themselves, did not constitute sufficient minimum contacts with the forum state. Francosteel Corp. v. M/V Charm, 19 F.3d 624, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 8334 (11th Cir. 1994).

No personal jurisdiction over nonresident whose only contact with state is telephone conversations. — A federal court does not have personal jurisdiction over a nonresident defendant whose only significant contacts with the State of Georgia are allegedly defamatory, isolated telephone conversations, none of which were initiated by the defendant, with Georgia residents, one of whom is an alleged co-conspirator. McDonald v. St. Joseph's Hosp., 574 F. Supp. 123, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11868 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Personal jurisdiction not allowed although constitutional minimum contacts in existence. — In a diversity action to collect on accounts receivable obtained from a carpet manufacturer, among which accounts were a nonresident's obligations for carpet purchased, the court dismissed for lack of personal jurisdiction, although constitutional minimum contacts existed, because jurisdiction was not permitted by the long-arm statute (see O.C.G.A. § 9-10-91), the only "contacts" of the defendant consisting of the following: (1) the defendant regularly attended trade fairs in Georgia; (2) it visited a manufacturer's mill in Georgia to determine whether it would buy carpet; (3) the defendant returned to another state and placed orders with the manufacturer; (4) the defendant sent its trucks into Georgia to pick up the carpet; (5) during this trip, the defendant hauled goods for Georgia residents unrelated to the carpet transaction; and (6) relating to this trucking business, the defendant maintained a certificate of authority and a registered agent. Brooks v. State, 140 Ga. App. 371, 231 S.E.2d 138, 1976 Ga. App. LEXIS 1482 (1976) (refusing to be bound by Gold Kist, Inc. v. Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream Co., 623 F.2d 375, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15055 (5th Cir. 1980)).

Foreign manufacturers. — When a foreign manufacturer sells its product to a United States distributor knowing that its product will be sold in every state, it should reasonably expect to be haled into court in Georgia for an injury caused in this state by that product. Showa Denko K.K. v. Pangle, 202 Ga. App. 245, 414 S.E.2d 658, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1751 (1991), cert. denied, No. S92C0420, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 188 (Ga. Feb. 10, 1992).

To permit a foreign manufacturer to insulate itself from foreseeable liability by setting up a separate but wholly-owned out-of-state subsidiary for conducting its business in the United States would deny the notion of fair play to Georgia consumers. Showa Denko K.K. v. Pangle, 202 Ga. App. 245, 414 S.E.2d 658, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1751 (1991), cert. denied, No. S92C0420, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 188 (Ga. Feb. 10, 1992).

Discussion of jurisdiction over a foreign manufacturer and designer of automobiles. See Vermeulen v. Renault, U.S.A.,

Inc., 965 F.2d 1014, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 38371 (11th Cir. 1992), amended, 975 F.2d 746, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 15370 (11th Cir. 1992), modified, sub. op., 985 F.2d 1534, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 5205 (11th Cir. 1993).

Hazardous product. — When a manufacturer from another state sells its product, particularly one with a hazardous potential, to a wholesaler customer from Florida knowing that its product will ultimately be sold in that customer's wholesale outlets in Georgia, it should reasonably expect to be haled into court in Georgia for an injury caused in the state by that product. Continental Research Corp. v. Reeves, 204 Ga. App. 120, 419 S.E.2d 48, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 708 (1992), superseded by statute as stated in Johns v. Suzuki Motor of Am., Inc., 310 Ga. 159, 850 S.E.2d 59, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 760 (2020).

In product liability suit, Georgia's exercise of personal jurisdiction over French manufacturer of automobiles was consistent with Georgia law and with the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment since the manufacturer designed the car in question for the Georgia market, advertised that car in Georgia, established channels for customers in Georgia to seek advice about the car, and maintained a distribution network by which the cars were brought to Georgia, thus establishing minimum contracts with Georgia sufficient to satisfy due process requirements; and since Georgia's exercise of jurisdiction over the manufacturer comported with traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Vermeulen v. Renault U.S.A., Inc., 975 F.2d 746 (11th Cir. 1992), revised 985 F.2d 1534 (11th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 508 U.S. 907, 113 S. Ct. 2334, 124 L. Ed. 2d 246 (1993).

Sufficient contacts found where in-state subsidiaries equivalent to divisions of parent corporation. — Allegations of tortious interference with a contract and of unfair competition were sufficient to invoke long-arm jurisdiction over a foreign corporation which exercised pervasive and tight control over its in-state subsidiaries (accomplished primarily through interlocking directorates, commonality of officers, and necessity of parent review and approval of subsidiary actions), rendering these subsidiaries functionally equivalent to departments or divisions of the parent corporation. Coca-Cola Co. v. Procter & Gamble Co., 595 F. Supp. 304, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20185 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Personal jurisdiction allowed in airline passenger's suit for injuries.

— The plaintiff's jurisdictional allegations in the complaint, that the plaintiff purchased a ticket for an out-of-state airline flight, aboard a plane owned and operated by a foreign corporation not licensed to do business in Georgia, from an airline corporation with its headquarters in Georgia, at a ticket office of the state corporation in Georgia, and was subsequently injured while deplaning at the conclusion of the out-of-state flight, were sufficient to support an inference that the foreign corporation had subjected itself to the jurisdiction of courts sitting in Georgia and that the defendant had sufficient contacts with Georgia to satisfy all statutory and constitutional requirements for the exercise of long-arm jurisdiction, which allegations were not overcome by proof that the sale of tickets in Georgia was an isolated and individual event. Bracewell v. Nicholson Air Servs., Inc., 748 F.2d 1499, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 15876 (11th Cir. 1984).

Modification of foreign divorce decree. — Where, although the non-resident spouse maintained a marital residence in Georgia and the separation occurred there, the divorce decree was actually entered in Arkansas and the non-resident spouse had not been a resident of Georgia for nearly 20 years and thus had not availed oneself of the privileges of the state of Georgia, the connection with the state was sufficiently attenuated under those facts that due process would be offended by the exercise of jurisdiction over the non-resident spouse's person to modify the domesticated Arkansas divorce decree. Popple v. Popple, 257 Ga. 98, 355 S.E.2d 657, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 749 (1987).

Claim of fraudulent divorce judgment under federal civil rights stat- ute. — A federal district court could not enjoin enforcement of a state court judgment in a divorce proceeding that had been allegedly obtained by fraud and which therefore allegedly deprived the plaintiff of property without due process of law, in that the plaintiff failed to state a claim under the federal civil rights statute, because the existence of adequate review procedures under Georgia law accorded the plaintiff sufficient due process. Collins v. Collins, 597 F. Supp. 33, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15359 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Copyright infringement. — By having licensed their song to a distributor, knowing that the distributor distributed or licensed the song nationally, including within the state of Georgia, defendants have established sufficient minimum contacts with Georgia so that plaintiff's copyright infringement action does not violate due process guarantees. Payne v. Kristofferson, 631 F. Supp. 39, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13273 (N.D. Ga. 1985), But see, Gust v. Flint, 257 Ga. 129, 356 S.E.2d 513, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 833 (1987).

The following constituted insufficient minimum contacts between an electrical contractor, a foreign state, and the litigation in question (i.e., breach of contract) to satisfy due process: (1) the contractor was a local businessman whose business was confined primarily to Georgia; (2) the contractor had never been to the other state and had never done any business there; (3) the out-of-state plaintiff, who obtained a default judgment against the contractor in the plaintiff's home state, initiated the contract by calling the contractor's name from a Georgia telephone directory; and (4) the contract was to be performed entirely in Georgia. Bertke v. Cartledge, 597 F. Supp. 68, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 23400 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

Procedure for disclosure to court of child abuse records.

— Where defendant assigns error to a trial court's failure to direct the Department of Human Resources to disclose any and all reports, etc., used by or prepared by it in investigating an allegation of child abuse, since the records sought by defendant are confidential and access thereto is prohibited except as provided by O.C.G.A. § 49-5-40 et seq., regarding child abuse and deprivation records, the proper procedure for obtaining access to such records in such cases is to petition the trial court to subpoena the records and conduct an in camera inspection as to whether the records are necessary for determination of an issue before the court and are otherwise admissible under the rules of evidence, which procedure comports with the requirements of due process. Defendant's general Brady motion was inadequate to have properly raised this issue in the court below, and the assertion of error in this regard was meritless. Davidson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 557, 359 S.E.2d 372, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2725 (1987), cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905.

Child's social security benefits included in calculation of sibling's welfare benefits. — The regulations and policy requiring that old age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits received by children must be included in calculating their coresident siblings' eligibility for assistance under the aid to families with dependent children program do not deny them substantive due process by imposing a financial burden on a sibling who bears no financial responsibility for the sibling's brothers or sisters, nor by depriving the sibling of property to which the sibling is entitled, without just compensation in violation of the fifth and Fourteenth Amendments, nor are the siblings deprived of procedural due process when a sibling is denied property to which the sibling is legally entitled without a hearing. Oliver v. Ledbetter, 821 F.2d 1507, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 8197 (11th Cir. 1987).

Right of foster child to sue for deprivation of civil rights. — A child involuntarily placed in a foster home is in a situation so analogous to a prisoner in a penal institution and a child confined in a mental health facility that the foster child may bring an action under the federal Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq., for violation of fourteenth amendment rights. Taylor ex rel. Walker v. Ledbetter, 818 F.2d 791, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 7459 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1065, 109 S. Ct. 1337, 103 L. Ed. 2d 808, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1204 (1989).

The Georgia statutory foster care scheme created in a two-year old child a legitimate and sufficiently vested claim of entitlement such that deprivation of that entitlement without due process of law imposed on the child a grievous loss, supporting an action for injuries under the federal Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq. Taylor ex rel. Walker v. Ledbetter, 818 F.2d 791, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 7459 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1065, 109 S. Ct. 1337, 103 L. Ed. 2d 808, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1204 (1989).

Sufficient minimum contacts established. — For purposes of personal jurisdiction under the due process clause of the fourteenth amendment, the nonresident corporation purposefully established sufficient minimum contacts with Georgia and should have anticipated defending a suit there; the nonresident corporation established a substantial and ongoing relationship with a manufacturer by engaging in 14 transactions in six months, each of which involved contacts with Georgia. Each purchase order specified delivery by customer pickup, and the nonresident corporation allowed its customers to take delivery of the goods in Georgia; because the nonresident corporation did not pay for two of the shipments its customers picked up, it caused foreseeable injury to the manufacturer in the forum. Diamond Crystal Brands, Inc. v. Food Movers Int'l, 593 F.3d 1249, 2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 786 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 562 U.S. 836, 131 S. Ct. 158, 178 L. Ed. 2d 39, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 5846 (2010).

18. Entrapment

Proof required. — In a prosecution for conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute the cocaine, the defendant was not entitled to have the jury instructed as to the defense of entrapment where the defendant failed to meet the burden of producing evidence to establish government misconduct. United States v. Lockett, 867 F. Supp. 1044, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16441 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 70 F.3d 126, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 32870 (11th Cir. 1995).

19. Civil Proceedings

State notice provision, O.C.G.A. § 9-10-2, is rationally related to several legitimate governmental interests and does not violate due process. Georgia Dep't of Medical Assistance v. Columbia Convalescent Ctr., 265 Ga. 638, 458 S.E.2d 635, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 505 (1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1046, 116 S. Ct. 706, 133 L. Ed. 2d 662, 1996 U.S. LEXIS 65 (1996).

Due Process (Cont'd)19. Civil Proceedings (Cont'd)

Automatic dismissal provision of O.C.G.A. § 9-2-60 is a reasonable procedural rule and does not violate due process. Georgia Dep't of Medical Assistance v. Columbia Convalescent Ctr., 265 Ga. 638, 458 S.E.2d 635, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 505 (1995), cert. denied, 516 U.S. 1046, 116 S. Ct. 706, 133 L. Ed. 2d 662, 1996 U.S. LEXIS 65 (1996).

Civil contempt order in divorce case. — A civil contempt order in a divorce case requiring a husband to pay $1,500 to the wife for each day that passed without him paying the wife insurance proceeds pursuant to an oral order did not violate due process; a trial court could sua sponte raise an issue of contempt, and although the order to pay the proceeds was oral, the order was not ineffective as a matter of law, as the husband was well aware that the payment of the proceeds would be at issue and that the trial court would decide the matter without a jury. Chatfield v. Adkins-Chatfield, 282 Ga. 190, 646 S.E.2d 247, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 405 (2007).

Listing on child abuse registry. — Child sex abuse offender whose name was added to the child abuse registry under the Child Protective Services Information System, O.C.G.A. § 49-5-180 et seq., failed to show the deprivation of a liberty interest by the registry listing based on an injury to the offender's reputation; there was no evidence that the offender intended to work in the childcare field. Ga. Dep't of Human Servs. v. Steiner, 303 Ga. 890, 815 S.E.2d 883, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 446 (2018).

Punitive damage due process guideposts are based on the principle that a person receive fair notice not only of the conduct that will subject the person to punishment, but also of the severity of the penalty that a state may impose; O.C.G.A.

§ 51-12-5.1(f) informs the public that the $ 250,000 cap on punitive damages in Georgia does not apply to torts where the defendant acted or failed to act while under the influence of alcohol, drugs, or other judgment altering substances. Craig v. Holsey, 264 Ga. App. 344, 590 S.E.2d 742, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1480 (2003), cert. denied, No. S04C0603, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 312 (Ga. Mar. 29, 2004), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 820, 125 S. Ct. 59, 160 L. Ed. 2d 29, 2004 U.S. LEXIS 5668 (2004).

Punitive damages awarded in toxic tort case not excessive. — Jury's award of $17.5 million in punitive damages against a manufacturer of carbon black that permitted its smokestacks to spew an oily substance onto adjacent properties over a course of years with notice but without effectively remedying the problem was not constitutionally excessive; due process concerns were met because such conduct was exceedingly reprehensible, having damaged non-parties' as well as parties' property and health. Action Marine, Inc. v. Cont'l Carbon, Inc., 481 F.3d 1302, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 6463 (11th Cir. 2007), cert. denied, 554 U.S. 932, 128 S. Ct. 2994, 171 L. Ed. 2d 910, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 5270 (2008).

Punitive damage jury award of $17.5 million against a carbon black manufacturer was not excessive under constitutional due process standards even though it exceeded the U.S. Supreme Court's suggested 4:1 ratio for compensatory-to-punitive damages; the manufacturer had been on notice for years that an oily substance that its smoke stacks were spewing on adjacent properties were causing damage and health problems, yet it thwarted local inspection attempts to stop the practice and evinced a specific intent to cause harm, thus presenting a "race exception" to the U.S. Supreme Court's suggested amount of punitive damages. Action Marine, Inc. v. Cont'l Carbon, Inc., 481 F.3d 1302, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 6463 (11th Cir. 2007), cert. denied, 554 U.S. 932, 128 S. Ct. 2994, 171 L. Ed. 2d 910, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 5270 (2008).

Action for termination of parental rights. — Parents' were not denied due process where evidence of psychosexual evaluations and allegations of sexual abuse, molestation, and sexual abuse by the children against other children was admitted in a termination of parental rights trial, despite the petition's lack of allegations of sexual misconduct as: (1) the trial court based its findings of parental inability on the parents' failure to comply with the case plan, especially their continued failure to obtain stable employment and suitable housing; (2) neither parent was accused of sexually abusing the children; (3) evidence of past sexual abuse was relevant to establish the complex psychological problems of the two older children, to demonstrate the special needs of those children, and to expose the danger that reunification would pose; and (4) as some of the children's psychological problems were attributable to their victimization, evidence as to that issue could not have surprised the parents. In the Interest of M.E.S., 263 Ga. App. 132, 587 S.E.2d 282, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1141 (2003).

Hearing on motion for summary judgment. — Where a trial court indicated that it sent a notice of a combined rescheduled hearing on a construction manager's motion for summary judgment and a hearing on the issue of unliquidated damages to a condominium owner, it was presumed that such notice was sent and received in compliance with O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-5(b) and 9-11-6(d), and the owner's mere contention that it did not receive notice of the hearing was not controlling and did not satisfy its burden of showing that notice was in fact not received; accordingly, the owner's claim that it did not appear at the hearing because notice was insufficient lacked merit, due process was met, and the judgment entered from the hearing was affirmed. Blue Stone Lofts, LLC v. D'Amelio, 268 Ga. App. 355, 601 S.E.2d 719, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 797 (2004), cert. denied, No. S04C1908, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 83 (Ga. Jan. 10, 2005).

Equal Protection

1. In General

No precise definition of equal protection. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 prohibits a state's denying to any citizen the equal protection of the laws. What satisfies this equality has not been, and probably never can be, precisely defined. Generally it has been said that it only requires the same means and methods to be applied impartially to all the constituents of a class, so that the law shall operate equally and uniformly upon all persons in similar circumstances. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Suttles, 201 Ga. 84, 38 S.E.2d 786, 1946 Ga. LEXIS 355 (1946).

Amendment not source of substantive rights. — The guarantee of equal protection under the fourteenth amendment is not a source of substantive rights or liberties, but rather a right to be free from invidious discrimination in statutory classifications and other governmental activity. Rush v. Johnson, 565 F. Supp. 856, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16346 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Equal protection and due process not always interchangeable. — The "equal protection of the laws" is a more explicit safeguard of prohibited unfairness than "due process of law," and the two are not always interchangeable phrases. Discrimination may be so unjustifiable as to be violative of due process. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 547 F.2d 835, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10224 (5th Cir. 1977).

All persons to be treated alike under like circumstances and conditions. — Constitutional guaranty of "equal protection" requires that all persons be treated alike under like circumstances and conditions. Dorsey v. City of Atlanta, 216 Ga. 778, 119 S.E.2d 553, 1961 Ga. LEXIS 338 (1961); G.W. v. State, 233 Ga. 274, 210 S.E.2d 805, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 742 (1974).

No one group entitled to extraordinary benefits or burdens. — Equal protection provisions of state and federal Constitutions are intended to prevent extraordinary benefits or burdens from flowing to any one group. Bickford v. Nolen, 240 Ga. 255, 240 S.E.2d 24, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1467 (1977).

General rules applying evenhandedly to all persons within jurisdiction comply with equal protection clause.

Equal Protection (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

— Equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment announces a fundamental principle: the state must govern impartially. General rules that apply evenhandedly to all persons within the jurisdiction unquestionably comply with this principle. Jones v. Helms, 452 U.S. 412, 101 S. Ct. 2434, 69 L. Ed. 2d 118, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 124 (1981).

"Equal protection of the laws" includes the right to be tried and punished in the same manner as others accused of crime are tried and punished, the right to protection from injury from the officers having them in charge, and the right of protection by the officers from injury third persons seek to inflict upon them as prisoners. It must appear beyond a reasonable doubt that the officer's dereliction of duties, whether of omission or commission, sprang from a willful intent to deprive the prisoner of the rights. United States v. Lynch, 94 F. Supp. 1011, 1950 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2257 (D. Ga. 1950), aff'd, 189 F.2d 476, 1951 U.S. App. LEXIS 3189 (5th Cir. 1951).

No equal justice where kind of trial a person gets depends on amount of money the person has. Garrett v. State, 125 Ga. App. 743, 188 S.E.2d 920, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1459 (1972).

Imposition of harsher sentence upon defendant following appeal and award of new trial not violative of equal protection. — It is not a denial of equal protection of law guaranteed by U.S. Const., amend. 14 of the United States Constitution to impose a harsher sentence upon a defendant following a successful appeal and award of a new trial. Salisbury v. Grimes, 223 Ga. 776, 158 S.E.2d 412, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 692 (1967).

Comparison of state and federal equal protection clauses. — The protection of the equal protection clause in the 1983 Georgia Constitution and the United States Constitution is coextensive; yet this court may interpret the equal protection clause in the Georgia Constitution to offer greater rights than the federal equal protection clause as interpreted by the U.S. Supreme Court. Grissom v. Gleason, 262 Ga. 374, 418 S.E.2d 27, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 560 (1992).

Criteria for establishing equal protection violation by state action. — In order to establish a violation of the equal protection clause based upon the ad hoc action of state officials, a plaintiff must demonstrate that the action was prompted by some racial, or perhaps otherwise class-based, invidiously discriminatory animus. Cook v. Ashmore, 579 F. Supp. 78, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20170 (N.D. Ga. 1984) (N.D. Ballard v. Blount, 581 F. Supp. 160, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10899 (N.D. Ga. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 1480, 1984 U.S. App. LEXIS 22283 (11th Cir. 1984); Cook v. Ashmore, 579 F. Supp. 78, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20170 (N.D. Ga. 1984).

A plaintiff is not deprived of equal protection of the laws unless a defendant acts in a way that discriminates against a class or otherwise, through unequal treatment, invidiously discriminates against the plaintiff. Terrell v. Shope, 687 F. Supp. 579, 1988 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7431 (N.D. Ga. 1988), aff'd, 911 F.2d 741, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 12405 (11th Cir. 1990).

Equal protection clause does not require absolute equality. Breedlove v. Suttles, 302 U.S. 277, 58 S. Ct. 205, 82 L. Ed. 252, 1937 U.S. LEXIS 546 (1937), overruled in part, Harper v. Virginia State Bd. of Elections, 383 U.S. 663, 86 S. Ct. 1079, 16 L. Ed. 2d 169, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 2905 (1966).

Equal protection does not demand exact equality, in any event. Savannah Elec. & Power Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 239 Ga. 156, 236 S.E.2d 87, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 849 (1977).

Equal protection applicable to privileges conferred and liabilities imposed. — The guaranty of equal protection of the laws requires that all persons shall be treated alike under like circumstances and conditions, both in privileges conferred and in liabilities imposed. Chatterton v. Dutton, 223 Ga. 243, 154 S.E.2d 213, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 479, cert. denied, 389 U.S. 914, 88 S. Ct. 247, 19 L. Ed. 2d 266, 1967 U.S. LEXIS 472 (1967).

No denial of constitutionally guaranteed right where mere privilege in- volved. — Where no right, but a mere privilege, is involved, one is not in a position to assert the denial of a right guaranteed by the state or federal Constitutions. Goldberg v. Mulherin, 226 Ga. 785, 177 S.E.2d 667, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 687 (1970).

Private conduct abridging individual rights not concern of equal protection clause. — Private conduct abridging individual rights does no violence to the equal protection clause unless to some significant extent the state in any of its manifestations has been found to have become involved in it. Walker v. State, 220 Ga. 415, 139 S.E.2d 278, 1964 Ga. LEXIS 573 (1964), rev'd, 381 U.S. 355, 85 S. Ct. 1557, 14 L. Ed. 2d 681, 1965 U.S. LEXIS 1158 (1965).

While U.S. Const., amend. 14 guarantees equal protection of the laws, it does not create any new rights in itself. Burnham v. Department of Pub. Health, 349 F. Supp. 1335, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12449 (N.D. Ga. 1972), rev'd, 503 F.2d 1319, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 6149 (5th Cir. 1974).

Congressional power to legislate in furtherance of elimination of racial discrimination is derived from U.S. Const., amend. 13, the power over interstate commerce, the power under U.S. Const., amend. 14, and the power under U.S. Const., amend. 15. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11645 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 356 (1973).

Selective enforcement of statute where discrimination is invidious and purposeful offends equal protection; however, this rule does not ordinarily apply to the enforcement of statutes by administrative agencies. United States v. Lewis, 355 F. Supp. 1132, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14562 (S.D. Ga. 1973).

Discriminatory application of law fair and impartial on its face constitutes denial of equal justice. — Though a law itself is fair on its face and impartial in appearance, if it is applied and administered by public authority with an unequal hand, so as practically to make unjust and illegal discriminations between persons in similar circumstances, material to their rights, the denial of equal justice is still within the prohibition of the Constitution. Searcy v. Williams, 656 F.2d 1003, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17543 (5th Cir. 1981), aff'd, 455 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 1605, 71 L. Ed. 2d 844, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 1104 (1982).

Uneven or erroneous application of an otherwise valid law or regulation constitutes denial of equal protection only if it represents intentional or purposeful discrimination. Gilbert v. West Ga. Medical Ctr. Auth., 629 F. Supp. 738, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21183 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 784 F.2d 402, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 21953 (11th Cir. 1986).

A single invidiously discriminatory governmental act is not necessarily immunized by the absence of such discrimination in the making of other comparable decisions. Bleakley v. Jekyll Island-State Park Auth., 536 F. Supp. 236, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13039 (S.D. Ga. 1982).

When discriminatory intent inferred from foreseeable discriminatory consequences. — When official actions challenged as discriminatory include acts and decisions that do not have a firm basis in well-accepted and historically sound nondiscriminatory social policy, discriminatory intent may be inferred from fact that those acts had foreseeable discriminatory consequences. Anderson v. Banks, 520 F. Supp. 472, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15463 (S.D. Ga. 1981).

Insufficient evidence to prove disability discrimination. — Since the defendants were not even aware that the plaintiff's eye had been removed until after the plaintiff had been terminated from employment, there is absolutely no evidence from which a jury could find that the defendants intended to discriminate against the plaintiff on the basis of the plaintiff's disability. Thus, plaintiff's equal protection claim failed. Smith v. Upson County, 859 F. Supp. 1504, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10992 (M.D. Ga. 1994), aff'd, 56 F.3d 1392, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 13312 (11th Cir. 1995).

Availability to all on equal terms of state or municipal employment opportunities. — Public employment opportunities afforded by state or municipal government must be made available to all on equal terms. Johnson v. City of Albany, 413 F. Supp. 782, 1976 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15208 (M.D. Ga. 1976).

No established right to be free from retaliation. — In an action by a county public services officer against police officials alleging that defendants violated the officer's equal protection rights by discriminating against the officer on the basis of sex and by retaliating against the officer for complaints of discrimination, defendants were entitled to qualified immunity from the latter claim because no established right exists under the equal protection clause to be free from retaliation. Ratliff v. DeKalb County, 62 F.3d 338, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 21437 (11th Cir. 1995).

Provisions of the Tort Reform Act (O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1), relating to punitive damages, violated the due process and equal protection clauses of the federal and state constitutions, violated the excessive fines provisions of both constitutions, and violated the double jeopardy provision of the fifth amendment to the federal constitution. McBride v. GMC, 737 F. Supp. 1563, 1990 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5993 (M.D. Ga. 1990).

Olympic Sign Ordinance. — The Olympic Sign Ordinance, which creates a five-member committee charged with recommending "Concentrated Sign Districts" within the City of Atlanta and empowers the committee to grant permits to those desiring to erect signs pursuant to that ordinance, which permits only those signs which in some way promote an Olympic-related event, is unconstitutional in that it violates the first and Fourteenth Amendments of the U.S. Constitution. Outdoor Sys. v. City of Atlanta, 885 F. Supp. 1572, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12185 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

Ordinance prohibiting pinball machine business not violative of equal protection. — Ordinance prohibiting the owning, operating and maintaining of pinball machines and the like was not violative of the equal protection clauses of the federal and state Constitutions, on the grounds that it was discriminatory and not impartial, in that other novelty games and games of skill were not included in said ordinance. Woodward v. City of Lithonia, 191 Ga. 234, 11 S.E.2d 476, 1940 Ga. LEXIS 607 (1940).

Adult entertainment restricted. — Even though the fundamental right of free expression is involved, a city may classify and regulate adult entertainment establishments differently from other places of entertainment. Gravely v. Bacon, 263 Ga. 203, 429 S.E.2d 663, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 461 (1993).

City ordinance prohibiting nude dancing. — Municipal ordinance prohibiting nude dancing in licensed drinking establishments made a constitutionally valid distinction, non-violative of the equal protection clause, between mainstream and non-mainstream performances, which was rationally related to the city's legitimate governmental interest in health, safety and welfare. Top Shelf, Inc. v. Mayor & Aldermen, 840 F. Supp. 903, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 18689 (S.D. Ga. 1993).

Zoning ordinance which changed rear-yard setback for properties zoned for multi-family use after the date the ordinance was passed, but which retained a prior and more restrictive setback requirement for properties zoned prior to that date, was arbitrary and unreasonable and, thus, violated the equal protection clauses of the United States and Georgia Constitutions. Bailey Inv. Co. v. Augusta-Richmond County Bd. of Zoning Appeals, 256 Ga. 186, 345 S.E.2d 596, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 773 (1986).

Finality of action required for equal protection challenges. — Landowner's equal protection claims contesting county officials' resolutions in zoning and land use matters were not ripe for review where landowners failed to show that particular decisions being challenged had been finally applied to the property at issue. James Emory, Inc. v. Twiggs County, 883 F. Supp. 1546, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6403 (M.D. Ga. 1995).

Approval of landfill permit. — Federal district court properly rejected property owners' equal protection claim regarding a landfill permit in an area occupied by 3,367 black residents and 2,149 white residents, where the owners failed to demonstrate any discriminatory intent in approval of the permit. East-Bibb Twiggs Neighborhood Ass'n v. Macon Bibb Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 896 F.2d 1264, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 20805 (11th Cir. 1989).

An allegation of uneven treatment in a cleanup operation on plaintiff's property was insufficient to constitute an equal protection violation since plaintiffs are not members of a suspect class and Congress has given the Environmental Protection Agency discretionary authority over how to conduct a cleanup operation. Amtreco, Inc. v. O.H. Materials, Inc., 802 F. Supp. 440, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15804 (M.D. Ga. 1992).

County nuisance immunity. — The state's decision to protect counties from nuisance claims by virtue of the immunity provision in O.C.G.A. § 36-1-4, while allowing for such claims against municipalities, does not violate the equal protection clause, as the state's protection of counties is rationally related to the legitimate state of purpose of preserving the resources of a division of the state government. Marion v. DeKalb County, 821 F. Supp. 685, 1993 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6435 (N.D. Ga. 1993).

Nonresident motorist may be sued in any county. — It is not violation of equal protection clause to allow nonresident motorist to be sued in any county of the state at the election of the plaintiff. Lloyd Adams, Inc. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 190 Ga. 633, 10 S.E.2d 46, 1940 Ga. LEXIS 530 (1940).

City's policies of using wrist and ankle cuffs on pre-trial detainees brought to a hospital for emergency treatment without prior classification has a rational basis. Young v. City of Atlanta, 631 F. Supp. 1498, 1986 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26901 (N.D. Ga. 1986).

Immunity of parole board members. — A prison inmate may challenge the denial of pardon or parole on equal protection grounds and, although the individual members of the parole board are entitled to absolute quasi-judicial immunity from a suit for damages, to the extent that the inmate is seeking declaratory and injunctive relief, the shield of absolute immunity is inapplicable. Fuller v. Georgia State Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 851 F.2d 1307, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 10929 (11th Cir. 1988).

Pension Act providing for forfeiture during certain later employment not violative of equal protection. — Pension Act making no differentiation or distinction as to any employee, but providing that if any employee who has been pensioned accepts employment by a governmental agency, or accepts other employment and receives as compensation an amount equivalent to, or greater than the pensioner's former salary, said pensioner shall forfeit the pension during the time of said employment does not violate the equal protection clauses of the state and federal Constitutions. Franklin v. Mayor of Savannah, 199 Ga. 426, 34 S.E.2d 506, 1945 Ga. LEXIS 423 (1945).

Public Service Commission order permitting rate increase to be effected on different dates for different customers does not violate equal protection guarantees of the state and federal Constitutions because to apply a new rate at a particular point in time would require the utility to read all its meters at that particular point of time which would be unreasonable, if not impossible, to do, and even if done over a short period of time, would result in some customers' being billed for power used at a lesser rate than others. Moore v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 242 Ga. 182, 249 S.E.2d 549, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1133 (1978).

Subsidization of bus passengers not unfairly or illegally discriminatory against county resident, infrequent users, or nonusers. — The subsidization of bus passengers does not unfairly and illegally discriminate against residents of the county who do not regularly, or do not at any time, use the system and who will subsidize the transportation expenses of the remaining residents and nonresidents of the county who use the system through their payment of the sales and use tax. Camp v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 229 Ga. 35, 189 S.E.2d 56, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 940 (1972).

Governing authority's refusal to issue alcoholic beverage license when applicant meets standards denies equal protection. — If the governing authority of the city or county decides to permit the sale of malt beverages or beer, it shall adopt an ordinance setting forth the prescribed standards for the issuance of a license. When an applicant for a license meets these standards, a refusal by the governing authority to issue the license constitutes a denial of equal protection, entitling the applicant to a writ of mandamus. Grandpa's Store, Inc. v. City of Norcross, 247 Ga. 350, 275 S.E.2d 59, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 685 (1981).

Where denial of application for operator of taxicabs violated equal protection. — Petitioner alleged compliance with all the requirements of city ordinance for the operation of taxicabs and denial of application for permit to operate taxicabs though no objection was made that applicant had not complied with the requirements of the ordinance. Petitioner further alleged that such denial was without legal justification or excuse, was arbitrary, illegal and capricious and an abuse of discretion, depriving the petitioner of the equal protection of the law, and that because of the denial of the permit the petitioner is deprived of the right to pursue the petitioner's chosen livelihood and suffers pecuniary loss for which the petitioner cannot be compensated in damages. This states a cause of action for mandamus to compel city officials to issue permit. McWhorter v. Settle, 202 Ga. 334, 43 S.E.2d 247, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 437 (1947).

Rape statute (see O.C.G.A. § 16-6-1) is not violative of equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 to the United States Constitution. Lamar v. State, 243 Ga. 401, 254 S.E.2d 353, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 913 (1979).

Predicate offense allowing for easier conviction does not violate equal protection. — Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion in arrest of judgment, as the indictment filed against defendant arising out of the offense of first-degree homicide by vehicle, which contained a predicate offense making it easier to convict defendant because defendant was under 21-years-old and had a blood alcohol concentration of .02 or more at the time of the accident that killed defendant's passenger, did not violate defendant's equal protection rights under the state and federal constitutions because the predicate offense did not operate to disadvantage a suspect class or interfere with a fundamental right; rather, it was rationally related to the state's legitimate purpose in deterring younger, more inexperienced drivers from drinking and driving. David v. State, 261 Ga. App. 468, 583 S.E.2d 135, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 609 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1430, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 881 (Ga. Oct. 6, 2003).

Charitable immunity doctrine not unconstitutional. — The charitable immunity doctrine does not constitute a violation of the equal protection or due process clauses of the federal or state constitutions. Ponder v. Fulton-DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 256 Ga. 833, 353 S.E.2d 515, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 654, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 863, 108 S. Ct. 181, 98 L. Ed. 2d 134, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 3281 (1987).

Objective qualification for officeholder not violative of equal protection. — Former Code 1933, § 24-2111a (see O.C.G.A. § 15-7-21) regarding the legislatively created office of judge and solicitor of state courts of counties states objective qualification that one must have been engaged in the active practice of law for three years before taking office. This does not deny equal protection of law; it simply limits eligibility to hold office to a class of persons with a quantum of experience similar to that required under the state Constitution for the similar position of a district attorney. Nathan v. Smith, 230 Ga. 612, 198 S.E.2d 509, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 1004 (1973).

Imprisonment of indigent for failure to pay fine is unconstitutional, where state legislatively adopted "fines only" policy; the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 forbids conversion of an indigent's sentence of a fine into a prison term. Hutchinson v. Jones, 477 F. Supp. 51, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10461 (N.D. Ga. 1979).

Certain class of convicted defendants cannot be imprisoned beyond statutory maximum because indi- gent. — Though a state has considerable latitude in fixing the punishment for state crimes and may impose alternative sanctions, it may not under the equal protection clause subject a certain class of convicted defendants to a period of imprisonment beyond the statutory maximum solely by reason of their indigency. Garrett v. State, 125 Ga. App. 743, 188 S.E.2d 920, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1459 (1972).

Person who has means to pay fine but refuses or neglects to do so may be jailed, but “it is a denial to equal protection to limit punishment to payment of a fine for those who are able to pay it but to convert the fine to imprisonment for those who are unable to pay it.” Garrett v. State, 125 Ga. App. 743, 188 S.E.2d 920, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1459 (1972).

Defendant may not be kept in prison longer than statutory maximum simply for failing to pay fine and court costs immediately because this violates the equal protection clause by visiting different consequences on two categories of persons. Frazier v. Jordan, 457 F.2d 726, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 10320 (5th Cir. 1972).

Providing transcript of prior proceedings to indigent defendant. — Indigent defendant must be provided with transcript of prior proceedings when needed for effective defense or appeal, as a matter of equal protection. Walker v. State, 156 Ga. App. 478, 274 S.E.2d 680, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 3077 (1980).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-15(b) does not violate the right to privacy under the due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 or the state or federal equal protection clauses. Adams v. State, 269 Ga. 405, 498 S.E.2d 268, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 442 (1998).

Invidious discrimination based on wealth or indigency. — Prohibition of equal protection clause extends to instances of invidious discrimination based upon wealth or indigency. Garrett v. State, 125 Ga. App. 743, 188 S.E.2d 920, 1972 Ga. App. LEXIS 1459 (1972).

Discrimination between rich and poor where merits of indigent’s appeal of right decided without counsel. — Where the merits of the one and only appeal an indigent has as of right are decided without benefit of counsel in a state criminal case, there has been a discrimination between the rich and the poor which violates U.S. Const., amend. 14. Chenoweth v. Smith, 225 Ga. 572, 170 S.E.2d 235, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 567 (1969).

Providing “adequate substitute” for deprivation based on wealth. — In every case involving discrimination based on wealth, had state provided some “adequate substitute” for the resulting deprivation, there would have been no denial of equal protection. Crim v. McWhorter, 242 Ga. 863, 252 S.E.2d 421, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 771 (1979).

Classification by General Assembly of procedural rules based upon amount in controversy does not deny poor persons equal protection of the laws under the Georgia and federal Constitutions. Sellers v. Home Furnishing Co., 235 Ga. 831, 222 S.E.2d 34, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1458 (1976).

Vindictive damages provision not violative of equal protection. — Code 1933, § 105-2003 (see O.C.G.A. § 51-12-6) authorizing the jury to consider the “worldly circumstances of the parties” in tort actions where “the entire injury is to the peace, happiness, or feelings of the plaintiff,” does not violate the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Wilson v. McLendon, 225 Ga. 119, 166 S.E.2d 345, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 396 (1969).

Interspousal and intra-family doctrine of immunity not violative of equal protection or due process. — The interspousal and intra-family doctrine of immunity, which bars tort actions between family members is substantially related to the legitimate state interest of promoting the preservation of the “family unit” for the good of the society in general, does not violate due process and equal protection of the Constitution. Jones v. Swett, 244 Ga. 715, 261 S.E.2d 610, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1385 (1979).

Former Code 1933, § 74-9902 (see O.C.G.A. § 19-10-1) does not violate equal protection principles. — Former Code 1933, § 74-9902 (see O.C.G.A. § 19-10-1) does not violate the constitutional requirement that the state’s administration of its laws must be impartial and evenhanded. Jones v. Helms, 452 U.S. 412, 101 S. Ct. 2434, 69 L. Ed. 2d 118, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 124 (1981).

Enforcement of contractual uninsured motorist provision. — Upholding an uninsured motorist policy exclusion does not deny equal protection under the federal constitution to those injured by self-insureds, where there was not a situation of uneven or unequal application of the Texas statutory scheme of uninsured/underinsured motorist coverage, but rather the enforcement of a contractual provision not shown to be offensive to Texas law. Nationwide Gen. Ins. Co. v. Parnham, 182 Ga. App. 823, 357 S.E.2d 139, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 1823 (1987).

Manner of enforcement of sodomy law. — Where the defendant contended that the defendant had been denied equal protection of the law because officials actually enforce the sodomy law only against offending homosexuals and not against others who violate the sodomy law, the defendant had not proved the contention, as the manner of enforcement of the sodomy law was not established in the record. Gordon v. State, 257 Ga. 439, 360 S.E.2d 253, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1987).

Punitive damage awards. — O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1(e)(2), requiring that 75 percent of punitive damages awarded in a product liability action be paid into the state treasury, does not violate the equal protection clauses of the United States and Georgia Constitutions. Mack Trucks, Inc. v. Conkle, 263 Ga. 539, 436 S.E.2d 635, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 800 (1993); State v. Moseley, 263 Ga. 680, 436 S.E.2d 632, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 799 (1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1107, 114 S. Ct. 2101, 128 L. Ed. 2d 663, 1994 U.S. LEXIS 3803 (1994).

Year's support law (see O.C.G.A. § 53-5-1 et seq.) is not unconstitutional, since a 1979 amendment to that chapter removed gender classification for year's support eligibility, and since the year's support statute when first adopted was not violative of the Constitution under court interpretations of that period. Adams v. Adams, 249 Ga. 477, 291 S.E.2d 518, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1149 (1982).

An award entered after the corrective 1979 amendment to O.C.G.A. § 53-5-1, but from an estate of a decedent who died before the amendment, is valid; because the right was constitutionally vested under the original statute and there is no constitutional bar to the right being pursued under the amended statute. Lawrence v. Lawrence, 254 Ga. 692, 333 S.E.2d 610, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 890 (1985).

Proceeding to legitimate child. — O.C.G.A. § 19-7-22, which allows fathers, but not mothers, to petition for legitimization of a child born out of wedlock, does not violate constitutional guarantees of due process and equal protection. Pruitt v. Lindsey, 261 Ga. 540, 407 S.E.2d 750, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 396 (1991).

Guardianship. — Former O.C.G.A. § 29-6-11(c), prohibiting a guardian appointed to allow a ward to receive Department of Veterans Affairs benefits from receiving a bequest under the ward's will, did not violate the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 because it was rationally related to the legitimate state interest in regulating guardianships created to allow a ward to receive those benefits. Cross v. Stokes, 275 Ga. 872, 572 S.E.2d 538, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 1030 (2002).

Survivors benefits under federal law. — As applied to this case, the incorporation by the federal Social Security Act, 42 U.S.C. § 402(d), of the Georgia intestacy scheme to require a child seeking survivors benefits to establish paternity within two and one-half years violated equal protection. Daniels ex rel. Daniels v. Sullivan, 979 F.2d 1516, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 33724 (11th Cir. 1992).

Wrongful death statute does not violate equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 to the Constitution of the United States, because in no action ex delicto in this state, save when predicated on this statute can a plaintiff recover in a case based on simple negligence more than actual compensation. In the exercise of the state's broad police power the Legislature can create a measure of damages for homicides resulting from ordinary negligence, as well as for homicide resulting from wanton, willful, or criminal negligence. Western & A.R.R. v. Michael, 175 Ga. 1, 165 S.E. 37, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 177 (1932).

Property valuation by method other than standard method. — The uniformity clause of the state constitution and the equal protection clauses of the state and federal Constitutions were not offended by a county's valuation of a motel by a method other than the standard method for motels, where the motel property was not actually being operated as a motel and there was no income stream from which to calculate room revenue for use with the standard gross income multiplier method. Coastal Equities, Inc. v. Chatham County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 201 Ga. App. 571, 411 S.E.2d 540, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1528 (1991), cert. denied, No. S92C0226, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 1023 (Ga. Dec. 4, 1991).

Denial of liquor license on arbitrary grounds constitutes violation of equal protection for which a writ of mandamus will lie. Hernandez v. Board of Comm'rs, 242 Ga. 76, 247 S.E.2d 870, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1099 (1978).

Arbitrary refusal to grant license or permit to group when others obtain permits under similar circumstances constitutes denial of equal protection of the law. Hornsby v. Allen, 326 F.2d 605, 1964 U.S. App. LEXIS 6831 (5th Cir. 1964); Rogers v. Mayor of Atlanta, 110 Ga. App. 114, 137 S.E.2d 668, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 558 (1964).

City ordinance prohibiting the sale of alcohol. — City ordinance prohibiting the sale of alcohol at an erotic dance establishment was constitutional. The adult entertainment establishment ordinance was narrowly drawn to promote the city's interest in combating the secondary effects of adult entertainment establishments. Gravely v. Bacon, 263 Ga. 203, 429 S.E.2d 663, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 461 (1993).

Equal protection denied when liquor license applicant is refused license though meeting prescribed standards. — When an applicant for an alcoholic beverage license has met the prescribed standards for obtaining such a license, a refusal by the municipal authorities to issue the license constitutes a denial of equal protection, entitling the applicant to a writ of mandamus in state court. City of Atlanta v. Hill, 238 Ga. 413, 233 S.E.2d 193, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1040 (1977); Hernandez v. Board of Comm'rs, 242 Ga. 76, 247 S.E.2d 870, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1099 (1978).

Fact that County A authorizes sale of liquor while County B does not, does not mean that County B has been denied equal protection of the laws. Sims v. Town of Baldwin, 249 Ga. 293, 290 S.E.2d 433, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1139 (1982).

Fact that liquor is not sold in unincorporated areas of county does not, without more, illustrate a violation of equal protection where all liquor sold in county will be uniformly taxed under local amendment. Sims v. Town of Baldwin, 249 Ga. 293, 290 S.E.2d 433, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1139 (1982).

Granting of beer and wine license applications based on public opposition. — Whether pursuant to specific statute or de facto practice, the granting of beer and wine license applications based on public opposition is an unconstitutional due process and equal protection violation. McCollum v. City of Powder Springs, 720 F. Supp. 985, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11159 (N.D. Ga. 1989).

Former Code 1933, § 79A-811.2 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-13-32.1) is not a bill of attainder and does not deny "head shops" equal protection of the law. Windfaire, Inc. v. Busbee, 523 F. Supp. 868, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15060 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Prisoner and similarly situated, classified inmates with no opportunity for conjugal visits not denied equal protection. — A prisoner is not denied the equal protection of the law where the prisoner and other similarly situated and classified inmates have been afforded no opportunity for conjugal visits. Polakoff v. Henderson, 370 F. Supp. 690, 71 Ohio Op. 2d 106, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12414 (N.D. Ga. 1973), aff'd, 488 F.2d 977, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 10357 (5th Cir. 1974).

Probationary guideline departure. — Because plaintiff did not make a statistical showing sufficient to provide the "exceptionally clear proof" of either racial or gender discrimination that is required to raise an inference of discrimination, summary judgment for defendant state parole board was appropriate in an equal protection claim contesting a guideline departure. Greene v. Georgia Pardons & Parole Bd., 807 F. Supp. 748, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17695 (N.D. Ga. 1992).

Prison regulations restricting media access to the prison to responsible persons employed by and responsible to recognized media organizations did not violate the equal protection rights of newsmen not employed by a media organization, since the regulation was rationally related to the need to maintain order and security in the prison. Jersawitz v. Hanberry, 783 F.2d 1532, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 22825 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 883, 107 S. Ct. 272, 93 L. Ed. 2d 249, 1986 U.S. LEXIS 4230 (1986).

Consumer with standing to challenge rate schedule discriminating against consumer in violation of equal protection. — A consumer has standing to challenge a rate schedule on the ground that the schedule discriminates against the consumer or a class of consumers in violation of the equal protection guarantees of the state and federal Constitutions. Georgia Power Co. v. Allied Chem. Corp., 233 Ga. 558, 212 S.E.2d 628, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1375 (1975).

Present customers and future customers of a utility do not form discrete classes for purposes of equal protection analysis because customers are a constantly fluctuating group. Lasseter v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 253 Ga. 227, 319 S.E.2d 824, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 869 (1984).

State not prevented from prescribing reasonable, appropriate condition precedent to bring specified kind of suit. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 does not prevent a state from prescribing a reasonable and appropriate condition precedent to the bringing of a suit of a specified kind or class so long as the basis of distinction is real and the condition imposed has reasonable relation to a legitimate object. State v. Sanks, 225 Ga. 88, 166 S.E.2d 19, 1969 Ga. LEXIS 388 (1969).

Burden on party complaining of discrimination to show injury. — Discrimination in the grant of favors is not a denial of the equal protection of the law. In order to attack the constitutionality of a statute under the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 of the Constitution, on the ground of discrimination, the complaining party must show injury by the alleged discrimination. Mulling v. Houlihan, 205 Ga. 735, 55 S.E.2d 150, 1949 Ga. LEXIS 584 (1949), cert. denied, 338 U.S. 948, 70 S. Ct. 486, 94 L. Ed. 585, 1950 U.S. LEXIS 2356 (1950).

Specialty training for physicians. — Public hospital bylaw requiring specific postgraduate specialty training or residency in order for physicians to be eligible for admission to the medical staff did not transgress the equal protection or due process rights of osteopathic physicians. Silverstein v. Gwinnett Hosp. Auth., 861 F.2d 1560, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 17589 (11th Cir. 1988).

City ordinance requiring dress code. — City ordinance imposing dress code on taxicab drivers was rationally related to a legitimate government interest: the need to promote a safe image to visitors from out-of-town. Bah v. City of Atlanta, 103 F.3d 964, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 882 (11th Cir. 1997).

State's prohibition against medical aid reimbursement for experimental surgery, including transsexual surgery, is rationally related to its legitimate governmental interest in protecting the public health. Rush v. Johnson, 565 F. Supp. 856, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16346 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Lack of an opportunity for a defendant to appear before a grand jury does not violate equal protection, even though statutes give certain public officials such right, since there is a rational basis for the distinction. Lewis v. State, 255 Ga. 101, 335 S.E.2d 560, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 944 (1985).

Federal court cannot review Georgia appellate judgment. — A federal district court is without jurisdiction under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 to review a final judgment of the Georgia Court of Appeals on the ground that it denied the plaintiff equal protection under the law as guaranteed by the fourteenth amendment. National Carloading Corp. v. Shulman, 570 F. Supp. 3, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16446 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Wrongful denial of parole. — Prison inmate's in forma pauperis complaint that the inmate was denied parole because the inmate pursued litigation against prison officers on account of the inmate's sibling's allegedly wrongful death stated an equal protection claim, whether the inmate was the named plaintiff in the litigation or merely enabled others to pursue litigation by the inmate's acts. Clark v. Georgia Pardons & Paroles Bd., 915 F.2d 636, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 18522 (11th Cir. 1990).

No disparate treatment in employment situation. — Local police union local president's equal protection claim against the president's county employer, alleging that the employer treated the president differently than other officers by declining to question the president as part of the county's internal disciplinary investigation into the president's alleged comments that the police chief should be replaced failed because the president did not provide valid comparators as proof of disparate treatment. Local 491 v. Gwinnett County, 510 F. Supp. 2d 1271, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 33260 (N.D. Ga. 2007).

Suspended professor failed to show that he was similarly situated to other professors. — State university biology professor failed to show an equal protection violation by the university in its suspension of the professor for poor teaching, scholarship, and research, because the professor failed to show that any other professor was deficient in all three areas, although some had poorer evaluations than the professor in one of the three areas. Edmonds v. Bd. of Regents, 302 Ga. App. 1, 689 S.E.2d 352, 2009 Ga. App. LEXIS 1440 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0824, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 437 (Ga. June 1, 2010), overruled in part, Wolfe v. Board of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga., 300 Ga. 223, 794 S.E.2d 85, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 767 (2016).

Age classification in criminal statute of limitation tolling provision. — Supreme Court of Georgia holds that the age classification chosen in the tolling statute of O.C.G.A. § 17-3-2.2 does not violate the Equal Protection clauses of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II, and U.S. Const., amend. 14. Harper v. State, 292 Ga. 557, 738 S.E.2d 584, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 145 (2013).

2. Statutory Classifications

State's right and power to classify subjects of legislation. — It is not the purpose of U.S. Const., amend. 14, in the equal protection clause, to take from the states the right and power to classify the subjects of legislation. McCullers v. Williamson, 221 Ga. 358, 144 S.E.2d 911, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 464 (1965).

Legislation challenged under equal protection clause is subjected to standard of rationality. The state's goal need only be reasonable, and the statute need not be a perfect method to achieve the goal. If the court cannot conceive of a rational viewpoint that justifies the statute, it will stand. When legislation affects certain fundamental liberties and rights, however, it is subjected to a stricter constitutional test: only a compelling state interest will suffice. Williamson v. Fortson, 376 F. Supp. 1300, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8007 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Tests for examining state policy or statute. — Any state policy, rule or statute creating a classification which is attacked as violating the equal protection clause must be examined against either of two constitutional tests: (1) that the classification is rationally related to a legitimate state end; or (2) that the classification is justified by a compelling state interest. Houston v. Prosser, 361 F. Supp. 295, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13292 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Standing to seek to set aside state statute as unconstitutional. — Where a class including the complaining party is not prejudiced by the alleged discrimination, that person will not be heard to attack the constitutionality of a statute under the "equal protection" clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 on the ground that it discriminates and denies equal protection between other classes. Cooper Co. v. State, 187 Ga. 497, 1 S.E.2d 436, 1939 Ga. LEXIS 427 (1939).

One who seeks to set aside a state statute as repugnant to the federal Constitution must show that one is within the class with respect to whom the act is unconstitutional, and that the alleged unconstitutional feature injures that person. Bryant v. Prior Tire Co., 230 Ga. 137, 196 S.E.2d 14, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 838 (1973).

Standing to challenge administration of municipal programs. — City employees did not have standing to make equal protection challenges against the administration of retirement incentive programs where they retired prior to adoption of the programs or at a time when the administration of a particular program did not affect their rights. Smith v. City of LaGrange, 218 Ga. App. 394, 461 S.E.2d 550, 1995 Ga. App. LEXIS 746 (1995), cert. denied, No. S95C1949, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 1192 (Ga. Nov. 9, 1995).

Legislative classification allowed only classification with direct, real relation to legislative object or purpose. — The equal protection clause allows classification by legislation when and only when the basis of such classification bears a direct and real relation to the object or purpose of the legislation. Citizens & S Nat'l Bank v. Mann, 234 Ga. 884, 218 S.E.2d 593, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1314 (1975).

Rational relationship test. — Although classification legislation, per se, does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 14, the line that is drawn must be rational. Furthermore, the distinctions that result from the classification legislation must bear some relevance to the purpose for which the legislation was enacted. Jinks v. Mays, 332 F. Supp. 254, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11469 (N.D. Ga. 1971), aff'd in part, 464 F.2d 1223, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 8142 (5th Cir. 1972).

Where there is no suggestion that right asserted is fundamental or that suspect classification exists in the case, the standard of review is that the classification not be arbitrary or unreasonable, and that a fair and substantial relationship exist between the classification and the purpose of the law. Bickford v. Nolen, 240 Ga. 255, 240 S.E.2d 24, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1467 (1977).

Where no fundamental right is infringed upon or no suspect class is present, the appropriate constitutional test is rational relationship. Under this test, the classification must be examined to determine whether it is rationally related to a legitimate state purpose. Street v. Cobb County Sch. Dist., 520 F. Supp. 1170, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14294 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Only when attempted classification is arbitrary and unreasonable can statute be declared beyond legislative authority. McCullers v. Williamson, 221 Ga. 358, 144 S.E.2d 911, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 464 (1965).

Importance of service performed by state does not determine whether it must be regarded as fundamental for equal protection purposes. Chatham v. Jackson, 613 F.2d 73, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19861 (5th Cir. 1980).

Classification where distinction based on valid state interests upheld.

— The constitutional guaranty of equal protection requires that all persons shall be treated alike under like circumstances and conditions; however, it does not prevent a reasonable classification relating to the purpose of the legislation. Reed v. Hopper, 235 Ga. 298, 219 S.E.2d 409, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 859 (1975).

The equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 requires that all persons be treated alike under similar circumstances and conditions. It does not, however, prevent classification if the distinction is based on valid state interests. Quilloin v. Walcott, 238 Ga. 230, 232 S.E.2d 246, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 970 (1977), aff'd, 434 U.S. 246, 98 S. Ct. 549, 54 L. Ed. 2d 511, 1978 U.S. LEXIS 52 (1978).

Filing a legal malpractice claim. —

Trial court did not treat similarly situated individuals differently, based on its application of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)), because whether it was a plaintiff filing a legal malpractice claim or, as here, a defendant filing a counterclaim more than ten days before the expiration of the statute of limitations, the party would have been required to file an expert's affidavit contemporaneously with the claim and would not be entitled to the 45-day extension period of O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-9.1(b) (now (e)); accordingly, there was no equal protection violation under U.S. Const., amend. 14 in the dismissal of defendant's counterclaim for failure to file the affidavit in a timely manner. Landau v. Davis Law Group, P.C., 269 Ga. App. 904, 605 S.E.2d 461, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 1328 (2004), cert. denied, No. S05C0377, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 90 (Ga. Jan. 24, 2005).

Contract bidding process. — Bidding insurer's summary judgment motion was properly granted as to its equal protection claim against a county as the county did not exercise arbitrary power but acted rationally and reasonably in rejecting all bids across the board after it was discovered that a consultant lacked a counselor's license under O.C.G.A. §§ 33-23-1.1 and 33-23-4; because of the taint to the process, all bids were rejected, no classification was created at all, and all similarly situated persons were treated alike. Benefit Support, Inc. v. Hall County, 281 Ga. App. 825, 637 S.E.2d 763, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1267 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0306, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 214 (Ga. Feb. 26, 2007).

Application of "compelling state interest" test where impingement of fundamental interest or suspect class. — In determining if a state policy, rule or statute is in violation of this section the "compelling state interest test" is applied where there has been an impingement of a fundamental interest by the rule, policy or statute, or where the state statute, rule or policy creates a classification which is based upon criteria that are inherently "suspect" in a constitutional sense. Houston v. Prosser, 361 F. Supp. 295, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13292 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Focus is reasonableness of means used to accomplish objective not whether superior means available. — The focus of the rational relationship test is not whether the state has superior means available to accomplish its objectives, but whether the means it has chosen is a reasonable one. Davidson v. Georgia, 622 F.2d 895, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15188 (5th Cir. 1980).

Where legislative purpose legitimate and classification with reasonable relation to furthering that purpose, classification is valid. —

Classification must be reasonable resting upon some difference having fair and substantial relation to object of legislation, so that all persons similarly circumstanced shall be treated alike. Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection & Ins. Co. v. Harrison, 301 U.S. 459, 57 S. Ct. 838, 81 L. Ed. 1223, 1937 U.S. LEXIS 301 (1937).

In order to be valid statutory classification must reasonably promote some proper object of public welfare or interest, must rest on real and substantial differences, having a natural, reasonable, and substantial relation to the subject of the legislation, and must affect alike all persons or things within a particular class, or similarly situated. Geele v. State, 202 Ga. 381, 43 S.E.2d 254, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 439 (1947).

Where there is reasonable relation to object within governmental authority, exercise of legislative or municipal discretion is not subject to judicial review. McCullers v. Williamson, 221 Ga. 358, 144 S.E.2d 911, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 464 (1965).

Distinguishing classification must be based on reasonable ground and on difference bearing just and proper relation to attempted classification. Campbell v. J.D. Jewell, Inc., 221 Ga. 543, 145 S.E.2d 569, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1965).

In order to withstand equal protection scrutiny statutory scheme must bear reasonable relation to legitimate state purpose. Because the state has broad powers to regulate businesses and professions within its boundaries, especially when the profession deals directly with the health and welfare of the people of the state, the state can exclude from the practice of medicine those whom it finds not to be qualified and can set the standards for qualifications. Oliver v. Morton, 361 F. Supp. 1262, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12808 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

In order to withstand equal protection scrutiny statutory scheme must bear reasonable relation to legitimate state purpose. Oliver v. Morton, 361 F. Supp. 1262, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12808 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Under "traditional" analysis, legislative classification must be sustained, if classification is rationally related to legitimate governmental interest. Davis v. Weir, 497

F.2d 139, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 7573 (5th Cir. 1974), overruled in part, O'Neal v. City of Seattle, 66 F.3d 1064, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 27221 (9th Cir. 1995).

The validity of the state's classifications does not depend upon their absolute correctness or upon the absence of any under- or over-inclusiveness in the categories drawn, and the court need not necessarily agree with the soundness of the distinction maintained by the statutory scheme. If the legislative purpose is legitimate and the classification drawn has some reasonable relation to furthering that purpose, the classification passes muster. Wilder v. State, 232 Ga. 404, 207 S.E.2d 38, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 964 (1974).

Burden on party assailing classification to show it to have no reasonable, but essentially arbitrary basis.

— A classification having some reasonable basis does not offend equal protection merely because it is not made with mathematical nicety, or because in practice it results in some inequality. When the classification in such a law is called in question, if any state of facts reasonably can be conceived that would sustain it, the existence of that state of fact at the time the law was enacted must be assumed. One who assails the classification in such a law must carry the burden of showing that it does not rest upon any reasonable basis, but is essentially arbitrary. Gibbs v. Milk Control Bd., 185 Ga. 844, 196 S.E. 791, 1938 Ga. LEXIS 546 (1938); Anderson v. Little & Davenport Funeral Home, 242 Ga. 751, 251 S.E.2d 250, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1350 (1978).

Clearly foreseeable impact, unexplained by any permissible rationale, as violation of fourteenth amendment.

— Foreseeability alone is insufficient to make out a violation of the fourteenth amendment. However, a clearly foreseeable impact which is unexplained by any permissible rationale could support such a finding. Fact of a constitutional violation would then rest — not on fact of foreseeability — but on finding of actual discriminatory purpose reached because circumstances admit no other explanation. Anderson v. Banks, 520 F. Supp. 472, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15463 (S.D. Ga. 1981).

Concept of equal protection viewed as requiring uniform treatment of persons in same relation to governmental action questioned or challenged. It does not permit legislation that accords different treatment to persons classified on the basis of criteria wholly unrelated to the objective of the statute. Winningham v. United States Dep't of HUD, 371 F. Supp. 1140, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12204 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 512 F.2d 617, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 14863 (5th Cir. 1975).

Different persons, different circumstances. — Constitution is offended where public law is applied differently to different persons under same or similar circumstances. Mayor of Savannah v. Savannah Distrib. Co., 202 Ga. 559, 43 S.E.2d 704, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 483 (1947).

Special or class legislation. — If law operates alike on all members of class, including all persons and property similarly situated, it is not subject to objection that it is special or class legislation. Blackmon v. Monroe, 233 Ga. 656, 212 S.E.2d 827, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1410 (1975).

Equal protection clause does not require state to treat different groups in same manner. Only unreasonable discriminations are forbidden. Wall v. American Optometric Ass'n, 379 F. Supp. 175, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8896 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 419 U.S. 888, 95 S. Ct. 166, 42 L. Ed. 2d 134, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 2900 (1974).

Equal protection denied where laws applied differently to different persons under same or similar circumstances.

— It is only in cases where laws are applied differently to different persons under the same or similar circumstances that the equal protection of the law is denied. Franklin v. Mayor of Savannah, 199 Ga. 426, 34 S.E.2d 506, 1945 Ga. LEXIS 423 (1945); Ford v. State, 202 Ga. 599, 44 S.E.2d 263, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 505 (1947); Bennett v. State, 153 Ga. App. 21, 264 S.E.2d 516, 1980 Ga. App. LEXIS 1656 (1980).

States denied power to legislate different treatment according to statutory classification based on criteria unrelated to statutory objective. —

The equal protection clause in U.S. Const., amend. 14 of the federal constitution does not deny a state the power to treat different classes of people in different ways, but it does deny to states the power to legislate that different treatment be accorded to persons placed by statute into different classes on the basis of criteria wholly unrelated to the objective of the statute. Davis v. Weir, 497 F.2d 139, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 7573 (5th Cir. 1974), overruled in part, O'Neal v. City of Seattle, 66 F.3d 1064, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 27221 (9th Cir. 1995); Bickford v. Nolen, 240 Ga. 255, 240 S.E.2d 24, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1467 (1977); Corey v. Jones, 484 F. Supp. 616, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11342 (S.D. Ga. 1980), aff'd, 650 F.2d 803, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 11303 (5th Cir. 1981).

Equal protection clause provides basis for challenging legislative classifications that treat one group of persons as inferior or superior to others, and for contending that general rules are being applied in an arbitrary or discriminatory way. Jones v. Helms, 452 U.S. 412, 101 S. Ct. 2434, 69 L. Ed. 2d 118, 1981 U.S. LEXIS 124 (1981).

Function of equal protection clause is to measure validity of classifications created by state laws. Parham v. Hughes, 441 U.S. 347, 99 S. Ct. 1742, 60 L. Ed. 2d 269, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 90 (1979).

Equal protection clause requires uniformity upon all those coming within class. Citizens & S Nat'l Bank v. Mann, 234 Ga. 884, 218 S.E.2d 593, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1314 (1975).

Uniformity within classes. — Where proper basis for classification exists law may classify, and uniformity within classes satisfies the Constitution. Pharr Rd. Inv. Co. v. City of Atlanta, 224 Ga. 752, 164 S.E.2d 803, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1968).

Equal protection requirements as to classifications. — The equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 of the United States Constitution does not absolutely deny a state the power to classify groups of persons differently. Equal protection does require that such a classification be rationally related to the object of the legislation so that all persons similarly situated will be treated alike. This "rational relationship" test gives way to the more stringent test of strict judicial scrutiny only where a "fundamental right" or "suspect classification" is involved. Crim v. McWhorter, 242 Ga. 863, 252 S.E.2d 421, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 771 (1979).

An equal protection clause claim need not involve a policy toward an entire class of persons. Bleakley v. Jekyll Island-State Park Auth., 536 F. Supp. 236, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13039 (S.D. Ga. 1982).

The fourteenth amendment does not deny to states the power to treat different classes of persons in different ways. An equal protection analysis, therefore, requires as a "preliminary step" a determination of whether persons who are similarly situated are subject to disparate treatment. Stuart-James Co. v. Tanner, 259 Ga. 289, 380 S.E.2d 257, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 272 (1989).

Initial step in equal protection analysis is to determine nature of interest affected or classification involved. Street v. Cobb County Sch. Dist., 520 F. Supp. 1170, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14294 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Classification not to be held arbitrary because practical and attacking only objects fostering evil on large scale. — A classification is not to be pronounced arbitrary because it goes on practical grounds and attacks only those objects that exhibit or foster an evil on a large scale. It is not required to be mathematically precise and to embrace every case that theoretically is capable of doing the same harm. Wilder v. State, 232 Ga. 404, 207 S.E.2d 38, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 964 (1974).

Equal protection does not require that all evils of same genus be eradicated or none at all. Wilder v. State, 232 Ga. 404, 207 S.E.2d 38, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 964 (1974).

Abstract approaches to equal protection cases. — The Supreme Court of the United States has taken two abstract approaches to equal protection cases. Under the "traditional" test, a classification is valid under the equal protection clause if it has a reasonable basis. If, however, the classification affects a "fundamental right," the state must have a "compelling" interest in perpetuating the classification. Davis v. Weir, 359 F. Supp. 1023, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13413 (N.D. Ga. 1973), aff'd in part, modified, 497 F.2d 139, 1974 U.S. App. LEXIS 7573 (5th Cir. 1974).

Legislative discrimination not invalid if not so arbitrary as to be unreasonable. — If the legislature has the power to enact discriminatory legislation, the discrimination is not invalid under the equal protection provision of U.S. Const., amend. 14 if not so arbitrary as to be unreasonable and beyond the wide discretion that a legislature may exercise. Harrison v. Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection & Ins. Co., 183 Ga. 1, 187 S.E. 648, 1936 Ga. LEXIS 166 (1936), rev'd, 301 U.S. 459, 57 S. Ct. 838, 81 L. Ed. 1223, 1937 U.S. LEXIS 301 (1937).

Statutory discrimination not set aside if any facts reasonably conceived to justify it. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 permits the states a wide scope of discretion in enacting laws which affect some groups of citizens differently than others. The constitutional safeguard is offended only if the classification rests on grounds wholly irrelevant to the achievement of the state's objective. State legislatures are presumed to have acted within their constitutional power despite the fact that, in practice, their laws result in some inequality. A statutory discrimination will not be set aside if any state of facts reasonably may be conceived to justify it. Spahos v. Mayor of Savannah Beach, 207 F. Supp. 688, 1962 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5344 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 371 U.S. 206, 83 S. Ct. 304, 9 L. Ed. 2d 269, 1962 U.S. LEXIS 41 (1962); Stokes v. Fortson, 234 F. Supp. 575, 1964 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7294 (N.D. Ga. 1964); Owens v. Parham, 350 F. Supp. 598, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11777 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Discrimination not invalid if not so arbitrary as to be beyond legislative discretion. — Discrimination is not invalid under the equal protection provision of U.S. Const., amend. 14 if not so arbitrary as to be beyond the wide discretion that a legislature may exercise. Harrison v. Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection & Ins.

Co., 183 Ga. 1, 187 S.E. 648, 1936 Ga. LEXIS 166 (1936), rev'd, 301 U.S. 459, 57 S. Ct. 838, 81 L. Ed. 1223, 1937 U.S. LEXIS 301 (1937).

If state of facts may reasonably be conceived that would sustain classification, it is not violative of equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 even though discriminatory. Wilder v. State, 232 Ga. 404, 207 S.E.2d 38, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 964 (1974); Citizens & S Nat'l Bank v. Mann, 234 Ga. 884, 218 S.E.2d 593, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1314 (1975).

Discriminatory purpose implies more than acting in spite of adverse effects upon identifiable group. — Discriminatory purpose implies that decision maker selected or reaffirmed a particular course of action at least in part because of, not merely in spite of, its adverse effects upon an identifiable group. Anderson v. Banks, 520 F. Supp. 472, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15463 (S.D. Ga. 1981).

Three factors in determining whether state action is impermissibly discriminatory. — In determining whether state action is impermissibly discriminatory in violation of the equal protection clause, the court looks to three factors: character of classification in question; individual interests affected by classification; and governmental interests asserted in support of the classification. Duncan v. Poythress, 515 F. Supp. 327, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13950 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Only invidious discrimination is prohibited. — There must be showing of invidious, purposeful discrimination to give rise to relief under equal protection clause. Bond v. Floyd, 251 F. Supp. 333, 1966 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9713 (N.D. Ga.), rev'd, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S. Ct. 339, 17 L. Ed. 2d 235, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 75 (1966).

Not all classifications of citizens, however, are proscribed by the fourteenth amendment: only invidious discrimination is prohibited. Duncan v. Poythress, 515 F. Supp. 327, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13950 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

The prohibition of the equal protection clause goes no further than the invidious discrimination. Everett v. Napper, 833

F.2d 1507, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 16313 (11th Cir. 1987).

Test of whether different treatment is invidious discrimination. — The equal protection clause does not mean that a state may not draw lines that treat one class of individuals or entities differently from the others. The test is whether the difference in treatment is an invidious discrimination. Blackmon v. Monroe, 233 Ga. 656, 212 S.E.2d 827, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 1410 (1975); Appling County v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 621 F.2d 1301, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 15461 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1015, 101 S. Ct. 574, 66 L. Ed. 2d 474, 1980 U.S. LEXIS 4146 (1980).

Classification with reasonable basis not required to be mathematically or practically perfect. — A classification having some reasonable basis does not offend against the equal protection clause merely because it is not made with mathematical nicety or because in practice it results in some inequality. McCullers v. Williamson, 221 Ga. 358, 144 S.E.2d 911, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 464 (1965); Massey v. Thiokol Chem. Corp., 368 F. Supp. 668, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10506 (S.D. Ga. 1973); Anderson v. Little & Davenport Funeral Home, 242 Ga. 751, 251 S.E.2d 250, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1350 (1978).

State-created classification in practice resulting in some inequality. — State-created classification must have reasonable basis and does not fail because it in practice results in some inequality. If any state of facts reasonably can be conceived that will sustain it, the existence of that state of facts must be assumed. Those who assail the classification must carry the burden of proving that it does not rest upon any reasonable basis, but is essentially arbitrary. Spahos v. Mayor of Savannah Beach, 207 F. Supp. 688, 1962 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5344 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 371 U.S. 206, 83 S. Ct. 304, 9 L. Ed. 2d 269, 1962 U.S. LEXIS 41 (1962).

States with great discretion in making classifications unless based on closely scrutinized criterion or affecting fundamental right. — The Constitution permits states a wide scope of discretion in making classifications, unless the classification is based on some more closely scrutinized criterion, such as race or sex, or unless the classification affects a fundamental right or interest. Chatham v. Jackson, 613 F.2d 73, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19861 (5th Cir. 1980).

Statute is subject only to minimum scrutiny unless it draws suspect classification or infringes fundamental interest, under usual principles of equal protection analysis. Belluso v. Poythress, 485 F. Supp. 904, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11805 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Threshold questions as to strict judicial scrutiny. — Before a state's laws and the justifications for the classifications they create are subjected to strict judicial scrutiny, certain threshold questions must be analyzed. One of these threshold questions is "whether the relative — rather than absolute — nature of the asserted deprivation is of significant consequence." Crim v. McWhorter, 242 Ga. 863, 252 S.E.2d 421, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 771 (1979).

Strict scrutiny applied to classification based upon inherently suspect criteria. — Where the state rule impinges upon a fundamental right or creates a classification which is based upon inherently suspect criteria, the required standard of review is that of strict scrutiny. Under strict scrutiny it must be shown that the classification furthers a compelling state interest and that the means chosen to effectuate that purpose is the least restrictive alternative available. Street v. Cobb County Sch. Dist., 520 F. Supp. 1170, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14294 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

To survive strict scrutiny, the classification must be reasonably necessary to promote a compelling state interest. Duncan v. Poythress, 515 F. Supp. 327, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13950 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Classification by gender must be reasonable, not arbitrary, and must rest upon some ground of difference having a fair and substantial relation to the object of the legislation. Perini v. State, 245 Ga. 160, 264 S.E.2d 172, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 724 (1980).

Gender-based classifications require less than strict scrutiny but more than minimum scrutiny and must serve important governmental objectives and must be substantially related to achievement of those objectives. Barnes v. State, 244 Ga. 302, 260 S.E.2d 40, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1217 (1979).

While gender-based classifications are subject to scrutiny under equal protection clause, they are not inherently unconstitutional. Crist v. Crist, 460 F. Supp. 891, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15372 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 632 F.2d 1226, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11355 (5th Cir. 1980); 454 U.S. 819, 102 S. Ct. 100, 70 L. Ed. 2d 90 (1981).

Gender-based classification must serve important governmental objectives and must be substantially related to achievement of those to withstand scrutiny under the equal protection clause. Crist v. Crist, 460 F. Supp. 891, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15372 (N.D. Ga. 1978), aff'd, 632 F.2d 1226, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 11355 (5th Cir. 1980); 454 U.S. 819, 102 S. Ct. 100, 70 L. Ed. 2d 90 (1981); Perini v. State, 245 Ga. 160, 264 S.E.2d 172, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 724 (1980).

Treatment of deprived children. — Treating deprived children who were placed in the legal custody of the Department of Families and Children Services because there was no relative committed to the child who was available for immediate placement differently from deprived children who did have a committed parent or guardian available for immediate placement did not violate the equal protection clause or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II as the classes were not similarly situated and the laws were rationally related to the goal of minimizing government intervention while ensuring that children were reared in a familial environment. In the Interest of A.N., 281 Ga. 58, 636 S.E.2d 496, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 655 (2006).

Sodomy. — Claim of defendant that the sodomy statute violates due process and equal protection because it is selectively enforced against unmarried persons, and because “victims” are not prosecuted for engaging in the consensual conduct, failed where defendant did not establish the actual manner of enforcement. King v. State, 265 Ga. 440, 458 S.E.2d 98, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 365 (1995), overruled in part, Powell v. State, 270 Ga. 327, 510 S.E.2d 18, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 1148 (1998).

Distinction made between male and female in Georgia’s rape statute (see O.C.G.A. § 16-6-1) is reasonable. Lamar v. State, 243 Ga. 401, 254 S.E.2d 353, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 913 (1979).

Statutory rape. — A juvenile male defendant convicted of statutory rape was not deprived of equal protection, even though the statutory rape law applies only to a male engaging in sexual intercourse with an underage female, since, under the statute on child molestation, a female who engages in sexual intercourse with a male under the age of 14 is subject to the same penalties. In re B.L.S., 264 Ga. 643, 449 S.E.2d 823, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 888 (1994).

Psychological reality and public purpose in preventing sexual attacks on women. — The difference between male and female recognized by Georgia’s rape statute (see O.C.G.A. § 16-6-1) is a physiological reality, and the objective serves a public purpose in preventing sexual attacks upon women, with the resulting physical injury, psychological trauma and possible pregnancy. Lamar v. State, 243 Ga. 401, 254 S.E.2d 353, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 913 (1979).

Statute prohibiting firearm possession by domestic violence offenders. — Federal statute prohibiting anyone convicted of a domestic violence misdemeanor from possessing or receiving a firearm did not violate equal protection. National Ass’n of Gov’t Employees v. Barrett, 968 F. Supp. 1564, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9407 (N.D. Ga. 1997), aff’d sub nom. Hiley v. Barrett, 155 F.3d 1276, 1998 U.S. App. LEXIS 23253 (11th Cir. 1998).

Incest statute’s classification on the basis of step-parent and step-child bears a rational relationship to the governmental interest in protecting children and family unity and does not violate equal protection guarantees. Benton v. State, 265 Ga. 648, 461 S.E.2d 202, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 708 (1995), overruled in part, State v. Burns, 306 Ga. 117, 829 S.E.2d 367, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 400 (2019).

Compelling governmental interest in terminating parental rights of men- tally deficient parents incapable of caring for their children through no fault of their own is the welfare of the children and thus, such parents are not denied constitutional equal protection. In re J.C., 242 Ga. 737, 251 S.E.2d 299, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1345 (1978).

Statutory scheme protecting children from sexual offenses regardless of offender's gender not violative of equal protection. — Together, Code 1933, §§ 26-2018, 26-2019, and 26-2020 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 16-6-3, 16-6-4 and 16-6-5) provide a general statutory scheme giving protection to both male and female children under the age of 14 (now 16) from sexual offenses, regardless of the offender's gender, and thus are not invalid as depriving this defendant of equal protection of the law. Barnes v. State, 244 Ga. 302, 260 S.E.2d 40, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1217 (1979).

Code 1933, § 26-2018 (see O.C.G.A. § 16-6-3), which defines statutory rape, is substantially related to the legislative objectives of protecting young girls from the unique physical and psychological damage resulting from sexual intercourse with males. Barnes v. State, 244 Ga. 302, 260 S.E.2d 40, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 1217 (1979).

Statute allowing hearsay evidence by children. — The 1995 amendment of O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16, allowing the admission into evidence of hearsay statements made by a child under the age of 14 years who witnessed an act of physical or sexual abuse inflicted upon another, violates constitutional principles of equal protection. Woodard v. State, 269 Ga. 317, 496 S.E.2d 896, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 289 (1998), overruled in part, Bunn v. State, 291 Ga. 183, 728 S.E.2d 569, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 565 (2012), overruled in part as stated in Wofford v. State, 329 Ga. App. 195, 764 S.E.2d 437, 2014 Ga. App. LEXIS 653 (2014).

Statutes imposing alimony obligations on husbands but not wives violative of equal protection. — Former Code 1933, §§ 30-201, 30-202, 30-202.1, and 30-203 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 19-6-1, 19-6-2, and 19-6-3) impose alimony obligations on husbands but not wives and violate the equal protection clause of U.S.

Const., amend. 14, and are therefore unconstitutional. Stitt v. Stitt, 243 Ga. 301, 253 S.E.2d 764, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 894 (1979) (decided prior to amendment by Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, §§ 6 through 9).

Statute providing only for modification of alimony awarded to wife violative of equal protection. — Former Code 1933, § 30-220(b) (see O.C.G.A. § 19-6-19(b)) provides only for the modification of alimony awarded to the wife, and this is a classification by gender which violates the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Sims v. Sims, 243 Ga. 275, 253 S.E.2d 762, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 887 (1979) (decided prior to amendment by Ga. L. 1979, p. 466, § 27).

Inheritance through out-of-wedlock children. — O.C.G.A. § 53-2-4(b)(2) creates a gender-based classification in violation of the equal protection clauses of both the United States and Georgia constitutions; it provides that a father of a child born out of wedlock cannot inherit from his child if he failed or refused to openly treat the child as his own, but that a mother who acts in the same manner can inherit from the child, and there is no legitimate state interest achieved by not subjecting mothers of illegitimate children to the same standards of conduct. Rainey v. Chever, 270 Ga. 519, 510 S.E.2d 823, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 58, cert. denied, 527 U.S. 1044, 119 S. Ct. 2411, 144 L. Ed. 2d 808, 1999 U.S. LEXIS 4558 (1999).

Treatment as juvenile is not inherent right but one granted by state legislature, and the legislature may restrict or qualify that right as it sees fit, as long as no arbitrary or discriminatory classification is involved. In re J.J.S., 246 Ga. 617, 272 S.E.2d 294, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1225 (1980).

Classification of minors in statute of limitations. — The 1987 amendment which altered tolling provisions otherwise applicable to tort claims by injured minors, in cases in which tort claims arose from health care professionals' malpractice, did not violate brain-damaged child's right to equal protection or right of access to the courts. Smith v. Cobb County-Kennestone Hosp. Auth., 262 Ga. 566, 423 S.E.2d 235, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 987 (1992).

Availability of abortions. — Where abortions may be obtained only from licensed physicians and surgeons, and only after psychiatric consultation, the mere fact that physicians and psychiatrists are more accessible to rich people than to poor people, making abortions more available to the wealthy than to the indigent, is not in itself a violation of the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Doe v. Bolton, 319 F. Supp. 1048, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10717 (N.D. Ga. 1970), modified, 410 U.S. 179, 93 S. Ct. 739, 35 L. Ed. 2d 201, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 112 (1973).

Age qualifications are not unconstitutional per se, and age may well be a relevant factor in determining a teacher's continued fitness for classroom duties. Davis v. Griffin-Spalding County Bd. of Educ., 445 F. Supp. 1048, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 15029 (N.D. Ga. 1975).

Age requirement for Lieutenant Governor. — In light of the fact that the Lieutenant Governor may be called upon to exercise the powers of the office of Governor, a similar maturity requirement for the Lieutenant Governor is eminently reasonable, and the mere fact that other state officers, such as the Attorney General, may serve upon reaching 25, does not render the age requirement for Lieutenant Governor a violation of equal protection to candidates for the lieutenant governorship. Traylor v. Democratic Party, 241 Ga. 429, 246 S.E.2d 192, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1010 (1978).

Mandatory venue provisions constitutional. — The mandatory venue provisions of O.C.G.A. § 46-1-2, applying to personal injury actions against railroad and electric companies, do not violate the equal protection guarantees of the federal constitution. Driskell v. Georgia Power Co., 260 Ga. 488, 397 S.E.2d 285, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 403 (1990).

Judgment of acquittal by reason of insanity provides state rational reason for treating "insanity acquittees" differently from other persons involuntarily committed to state health facilities (see O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131). Specifically, insanity acquittees have no right to be free of the burden of proof in commitment and release hearings. Also, it is not unreasonable to presume continued mental illness based on a judgment of not guilty by reason of insanity. Benham v. Ledbetter, 609 F. Supp. 125, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20514 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 785 F.2d 1480, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 23298 (11th Cir. 1986).

Federal social welfare legislation carries strong presumption of constitutionality. — In area of economics and social welfare, state does not violate equal protection merely because classifications imperfect. If the classification has some "reasonable basis," it does not offend the Constitution simply because the classification is not made with mathematical nicety or because in practice it results in some inequality. Owens v. Parham, 350 F. Supp. 598, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11777 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Classifications may be illogical, unequal, unscientific and mathematically imperfect and still not deny equal protection in the area of welfare legislation. Equal protection does not place a "strait-jacket" on legislatures in dealing with problems of the poor and needy. Winningham v. United States Dep't of HUD, 371 F. Supp. 1140, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12204 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 512 F.2d 617, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 14863 (5th Cir. 1975).

A statutory classification in the area of social welfare is consistent with the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 if it is "rationally based and free from invidious discrimination." Winningham v. United States Dep't of HUD, 371 F. Supp. 1140, 1974 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12204 (S.D. Ga. 1974), aff'd, 512 F.2d 617, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 14863 (5th Cir. 1975).

Constitutional challenge to United States Congress' social welfare legislation must overcome the strong presumption of constitutionality inherent in such legislation and, such challenge must be assessed under reasonable basis standard governing classifications made by United States Congress' laws. Burnett v. Schweiker, 643 F.2d 1168, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 13687 (5th Cir. 1981).

A zoning ordinance does not offend equal protection if it has some fair and substantial relation to the object of the legislation and furnishes a legitimate ground of differentiation. Parking Ass'n v. City of Atlanta, 264 Ga. 764, 450 S.E.2d 200, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1994), cert. denied, 515 U.S. 1116, 115 S. Ct. 2268, 132 L. Ed. 2d 273, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 3621 (1995).

Right to housing and to welfare benefits are not so fundamental as to require closest constitutional scrutiny. Chatham v. Jackson, 613 F.2d 73, 1980 U.S. App. LEXIS 19861 (5th Cir. 1980).

Income benefit limitation in former Code 1933, § 56-3403b(b)(2) and (b)(3) (see O.C.G.A. §§ 33-34-4(a)(2)(B) and (a)(2)(C)) is constitutionally permissible. — Limitation on income benefits in former Code 1933, § 56-3403b(b)(2) and (b)(3) (see O.C.G.A. §§ 33-34-4(a)(2)(B) and (a)(2)(C)), as construed by the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, establishes a constitutionally permissible classification reasonably related to purposes of the no-fault Act. Leonard v. Preferred Risk Mut. Ins. Co., 247 Ga. 574, 277 S.E.2d 675, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 780 (1981).

County actions against balanced, dispersed public housing violative of equal protection. — Actions of a county taken to resist attempts designed to achieve the national housing policy of balanced and dispersed public housing and failing to assist such attempts violate the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Crow v. Brown, 332 F. Supp. 382, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11748 (N.D. Ga. 1971), aff'd, 457 F.2d 788, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 10727 (5th Cir. 1972).

DUI cases ineligible for first offender treatment. — O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391(f) did not violate equal protection under the fourteenth amendment or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II by excluding driving-under-the-influence offenses from First Offender Act, O.C.G.A. § 42-8-60 et seq., coverage. The defendant did not show the absence of a rational relationship between the state's compelling interest in protecting the public's safety and the classification; the defendant's equal protection argument boiled down to no more than the claim that the legislature made a bad policy judgment about which offenders should be eligible for First Offender Act treatment. Rhodes v. State, 283 Ga. 361, 659 S.E.2d 370, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 300 (2008).

Prior service credit for retirement.

— The Employee Retirement System classification system, providing differing methods of credit for military service based upon the dates and conditions of service, does not violate equal protection rights. Horton v. State Employee Retirement Sys., 262 Ga. 458, 421 S.E.2d 703, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 878 (1992).

Automobile guest passenger rule not violative of equal protection. —

The automobile guest passenger rule, distinguishing between paying and nonpaying guests, does not violate the equal protection guarantees of the state and federal Constitutions. Bickford v. Nolen, 240 Ga. 255, 240 S.E.2d 24, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1467 (1977).

Georgia's guest passenger rule, by creating a distinction between paying and nonpaying passengers, does not violate equal protection clause of fourteenth amendment. Corey v. Jones, 650 F.2d 803, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 11303 (5th Cir. 1981).

Classifying which games are prohibited on Sunday. — No constitutional infirmity necessarily inheres in regulatory scheme because certain games prohibited on Sunday while others are not. Wilder v. State, 232 Ga. 404, 207 S.E.2d 38, 1974 Ga. LEXIS 964 (1974).

Distinction between business invitee and licensee is permissible classification under equal protection guarantees of the state and federal Constitutions. Delk v. Sellers, 149 Ga. App. 439, 254 S.E.2d 446, 1979 Ga. App. LEXIS 1883 (1979).

Statutory scheme providing different procedures for handling service upon foreign and domestic corporations does not deny domestic corporations equal protection under the state and federal constitutions. Ticor Constr. Co. v. Brown, 255 Ga. 547, 340 S.E.2d 923, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 628 (1986).

Driver's license restrictions. — Statutes barring illegal aliens residing in Georgia from obtaining a Georgia driver's license do not deprive them of equal protection of the laws in violation of the fourteenth amendment. John Doe No. 1 v. Ga. Dep't of Pub. Safety, 147 F. Supp. 2d 1369, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7385 (N.D. Ga. 2001).

Motorcycle helmet law. — O.C.G.A. § 40-6-315 does not violate the equal protection rights of motorcycle riders under the fourteenth amendment. ABATE of Ga., Inc. v. Georgia, 137 F. Supp. 2d 1349, 2001 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4161 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 264 F.3d 1315, 2001 U.S. App. LEXIS 20378 (11th Cir. 2001).

Power to limit highway usage by carriers for hire justified and is reasonable classification. — The power to select, limit and prohibit uses of the highways by carriers for hire, which is implied in the requirement of a certificate of public convenience and necessity, is justified both as a regulation of the business, and as a regulation for the protection and safety of the highways. There is thereby no unequal protection of law, but a reasonable classification. Southern Motorways, Inc. v. Perry, 39 F.2d 145, 1930 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1936 (D. Ga. 1930).

Certificate and fees legally demandable by state as nondiscriminatory prerequisite to use of highway for carrier purposes. — A certificate of public convenience and necessity, with a reasonable fee therefor, and an annual license fee for the trucks, are legally demandable by a state as a nondiscriminatory prerequisite of the use of the highway for carrier purposes, even though the commerce involved is wholly interstate. Johnson Transf. & Freight Lines v. Perry, 47 F.2d 900, 1931 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1197 (D. Ga. 1931).

Limited highway weight load exemptions not unconstitutional. — Where a limited exemption to highway weight requirements was granted for certain industries which could not take advantage of other statutory exceptions, there was no arbitrary decision violative of equal protection of those industries which were not granted the same limited exemptions since overall gross weights and axle load requirements still had to be met. DOT v. Georgia Mining Ass'n, 252 Ga. 128, 311 S.E.2d 443, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 579 (1984).

Exempting public utility employees but requiring examination and licensing of others unreasonable. — There is no reasonable basis for requiring examination and licensing of plumbers and steamfitters who are not employees of public utility corporations, and exempting employees of public utility corporations operating in the territory covered by the act. This is an unjust discrimination between classes of persons, and renders the proviso in Ga. L. 1937, p. 748, § 16-A unconstitutional and void, as a violation of the due process clauses of the state and federal Constitutions, and § 2-203. Jenkins v. Manry, 216 Ga. 538, 118 S.E.2d 91, 1961 Ga. LEXIS 271 (1961).

O.C.G.A. § 46-2-26.3 does not create an unconstitutional classification although its application is in fact limited to only one power plant, because it is possible to conclude that the section does not confer a special benefit upon the utility. Lasseter v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 253 Ga. 227, 319 S.E.2d 824, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 869 (1984).

Classifications for examination for licensing as dental hygienists upheld as constitutional. — Ga. L. 1949, p. 1192 (see O.C.G.A. § 43-11-70 et seq.), regarding licensing dental hygienists, is not violative of the equal protection clauses of the state and federal Constitutions as requiring one kind of examination for one class of applicants and a different kind of examination for another class; and it does not discriminate against either class of applicants, but applies equally to all. The act deprives none of the plaintiffs of any right or property without due process of law. Lamons v. Yarbrough, 206 Ga. 50, 55 S.E.2d 551, 1949 Ga. LEXIS 611 (1949).

Provisions for certification for plumbing or steamfitting business discriminatory. — The provisions of Ga. L. 1937, p. 748, § 12 are discriminatory against individuals not connected with a partnership or corporation, since the individual would not be allowed to engage in the plumbing or steamfitting business without obtaining the certificate provided for by the act, whereas a partnership or corporation would have the right to engage in either of such businesses if one person holding such a certificate is connected with the partnership or corporation, whether or not that person is supervising the plumbing or steamfitting work done. Jenkins v. Manry, 216 Ga. 538, 118 S.E.2d 91, 1961 Ga. LEXIS 271 (1961).

Classification based on location of garages not unconstitutional. —

Though the General Assembly exempts the business of “garages” for the safekeeping and repair of automobiles which are not located in a city or town having a population of 1,000 or more, and not located within a mile of such municipalities, from the payment of an occupation tax, while imposing a special tax graduated according to population upon the occupation of keeping such garages as are located in such cities or towns and within one mile thereof, such classification is not violative of the state or the federal Constitution. Milliron v. Harrison, 175 Ga. 764, 166 S.E. 231, 1932 Ga. LEXIS 324 (1932).

Noise abatement program which distinguished between residential and commercial property for the purpose of a city’s purchase of property near an airport did not violate equal protection. Speer v. Miller, 864 F. Supp. 1294, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13460 (N.D. Ga.), amended, 864 F. Supp. 1294 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

Prohibiting chiropractors from prescribing nutritional substances for treatment. —

Although common merchants are allowed to sell nutritional substances to customers without a prescription, in that the substances do not require medical supervision for use, and in that the substances are not habit-forming, the Georgia Chiropractic Practices Act (O.C.G.A. § 43-9-1 et seq.) does not violate the equal protection clause because it prohibits chiropractors from prescribing or recommending such substances in the treatment of patients. Purchase or sale of such substances is not the vice which is condemned. Rather, the vice condemned, and that which constitutes the unlicensed practice of medicine, is: (1) prescription of nutritional treatment; (2) to cure; (3) an ailment or disease; (4) for compensation. Foster v. Georgia Bd. of Chiropractic Exmrs., 257 Ga. 409, 359 S.E.2d 877, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 1037 (1987).

Statutory exemption of medical malpractice actions from general statute of limitation provisions, does not violate equal protection when applied to loss-of-consortium actions arising out of medical malpractice. Perry v. Atlanta Hosp. & Medical Ctr., 255 Ga. 431, 339 S.E.2d 264, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 544 (1986).

The statute of repose for medical malpractice claims is rationally related to a legitimate legislative attempt to reduce the uncertainties and costs related to malpractice litigation long after the medical services have been rendered and does not violate equal protection guarantees. Hanflik v. Ratchford, 848 F. Supp. 1539, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4980 (N.D. Ga. 1994), aff’d, 56 F.3d 1391, 1995 U.S. App. LEXIS 14382 (11th Cir. 1995).

The statute of repose for medical malpractice suits under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(b) did not violate the equal protection clauses of the federal or Georgia Constitutions. There was a rational basis for treating medical malpractice differently from other forms of professional malpractice and for the five-year repose period itself, based on the considerations that uncertainty over the causes of illness and injury made it difficult for insurers to adequately assess premiums and that the passage of time made it more difficult to determine the cause of injury. Nichols v. Gross, 282 Ga. 811, 653 S.E.2d 747, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 871 (2007).

Classification held arbitrary. — Since there is no rational basis for a limitation scheme which permits medical malpractice wrongful death action if patient dies within two years of defendant’s negligent act but which bars wrongful death action if patient lives for two years after defendant’s negligent act where defendant is a doctor but not in other wrongful death cases, O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71 is unconstitutional as applied to actions for wrongful death. Clark v. Singer, 250 Ga. 470, 298 S.E.2d 484, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 993 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in Quinn v. Stafford, 257 Ga. 608, 362 S.E.2d 49, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 995 (1987).

Public officers' malpractice statute not unconstitutional. — O.C.G.A. § 45-11-4, by affording only certain enumerated officials the privilege of appearing before the grand jury prior to indictment for malpractice, does not violate the equal protection clauses of the state and federal constitutions. State v. Deason, 259 Ga. 183, 378 S.E.2d 120, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 175 (1989).

O.C.G.A. § 35-2-43(a) (repealed) unconstitutional. — O.C.G.A. § 35-2-43(a) (repealed), insofar as it prohibits naturalized citizens of the United States from being eligible for the position of officer or trooper with the uniform division of the Department of Public Safety, is unconstitutional as violative of the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Fernandez v. Georgia, 716 F. Supp. 1475, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8356 (M.D. Ga. 1989).

Classification held reasonable. — Separate classification and treatment of architects, engineers, and contractors by O.C.G.A. § 9-3-51 from owners, tenants, and manufacturers is reasonable and not arbitrary. Mullis v. Southern Co. Servs., 250 Ga. 90, 296 S.E.2d 579, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1014 (1982).

Preferential treatment of military under drinking law not unconstitutional. — O.C.G.A. § 3-3-23 (purchase of alcoholic beverages) does not violate the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment because it treats 18 year old members of the armed forces differently from all other 18 year olds. Kelley v. State, 252 Ga. 208, 312 S.E.2d 328, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 643 (1984).

The rule that treatment of obese persons with amphetamines constitutes unprofessional conduct does not violate defendant's federal constitutional right to equal protection merely because doctors are allowed to prescribe amphetamines for certain other purposes provided in Rule 360-2-.09(h) of the Composite State Board of Medical Examiners (now Georgia Composite Medical Board). Jackson v. Composite State Bd. of Medical Exmrs., 256 Ga. 264,

347 S.E.2d 581, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 808 (1986).

Basis for classification for tax purposes is to be related to the objective of ordinance. Pharr Rd. Inv. Co. v. City of Atlanta, 224 Ga. 725, 164 S.E.2d 803 (1968).

No inflexible rule of equality applicable to state taxation. — The equal protection clause imposes no iron rule of equality, prohibiting the flexibility and variety that are appropriate to reasonable schemes of state taxation. Ingalls Iron Works Co. v. Chilivis, 237 Ga. 479, 228 S.E.2d 866, 1976 Ga. LEXIS 1276 (1976).

It is competent for state to exempt certain kinds of property and tax others, the restraints upon it only being against clear and hostile discriminations against particular persons and classes. Campbell v. J.D. Jewell, Inc., 221 Ga. 543, 145 S.E.2d 569, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 524 (1965).

Discriminatory revenue or tax-raising statute not arbitrary if based on reasonable distinction. — The fact that a revenue or tax-raising statute discriminates in favor of a certain class does not make it arbitrary, if the discrimination is sounded upon a reasonable distinction. Nance v. Harrison, 176 Ga. 674, 169 S.E. 22, 1933 Ga. LEXIS 251 (1933).

Discrimination in taxation which equal protection clauses forbid is the failure of the taxing authorities to tax all like property which is subject to taxation equally or to tax the property of one owner and exempt like property belonging to another owner. Delta Air Lines v. Coleman, 219 Ga. 12, 131 S.E.2d 768, 1963 Ga. LEXIS 352, cert. denied, 375 U.S. 904, 84 S. Ct. 195, 11 L. Ed. 2d 145, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 263 (1963); Smith v. State, 222 Ga. 552, 150 S.E.2d 868, 1966 Ga. LEXIS 552 (1966).

Classification of tax exempt persons must not be arbitrary and unreasonable. — Law requires that classification of persons who are to be exempt from taxation shall not be arbitrary and unreasonable. Pharr Rd. Inv. Co. v. City of Atlanta, 224 Ga. 752, 164 S.E.2d 803, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1968).

Different tax rates on intangible personal property and real property.

— To provide different rate of taxation on intangible personal property from that on real property does not violate equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Miller v. Mitchell, 226 Ga. 892, 178 S.E.2d 175, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 727 (1970).

Tax assessors' increasing value of property systematically to raise additional revenue violative of equal protection. — Where tax assessors, without investigation, made a systematic and comprehensive increase in the value of all property returned in the county for taxes, for a particular year, not for the purpose of fixing just and fair values after investigation, or for the purpose of equalizing taxes, but for the sole purpose of raising additional revenue, such assessments were null and void, as they were clearly violative of the uniform taxation clause of state Constitution and the equal protection clauses of state and federal Constitutions. Hutchins v. Howard, 211 Ga. 830, 89 S.E.2d 183, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 483 (1955).

Ordinance imposing occupational tax upheld. — That a seller, in order to obtain business at a distant city and compete with its local laundries, subjects oneself to unusual expense and makes little profit under adverse conditions, does not afford a basis for declaring arbitrary, prohibitory, confiscatory, and void an ordinance imposing an occupational tax as applied to a business which admittedly is in its infancy. National Linen Serv. Corp. v. City of Gainesville, 181 Ga. 397, 182 S.E. 610, 1935 Ga. LEXIS 99 (1935).

Local ordinance levying sales and use tax on nonresidents of county while doing business within that county does not violate equal protection under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Camp v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 229 Ga. 35, 189 S.E.2d 56, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 940 (1972).

Excise tax on some but not all oleomargarine upheld. — Ga. L. 1935, p. 81, imposing an excise tax on all oleomargarine sold in this state containing any fat or oil other than certain specified fats or oils, was not violative of U.S. Const., amend. 14 in that it set up an arbitrary classification between persons engaged in the sale of products of a similar nature, providing a tax enforceable against some members of a class and unenforceable against other members of a class, or in that it provided no reasonable, uniform, or rational ground for distinction between the various members of the same class, in order to determine who should be taxed, and who should be exempt, or in that it did not provide equal protection of the laws of the state for property of a similar nature, by making certain oleomargarine liable for and exempting certain other oleomargarine of a similar nature from the tax. Coy v. Linder, 183 Ga. 583, 189 S.E. 26, 1936 Ga. LEXIS 149 (1936).

City ordinances fixing different water rates for those outside corporate limits not violative of equal protection. — The plaintiffs with no right to demand water service from the city may purchase it at the city's charge therefor, or they may decline to do so, at their will; but they are in no position which authorizes them to complain of an excessive charge or a discriminating rate. There was no merit in the contention that the city's ordinances which fixed different water rates for those who resided outside of its corporate limits offended U.S. Const., amend. 14 or the equal protection clause of Georgia's Constitution. City of Moultrie v. Burgess, 212 Ga. 22, 90 S.E.2d 1, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 527 (1955).

Ordinance increasing rates and fixing higher rates for nonresident water users not violative of due process and equal protection. — Where the city has the right under its charter to furnish water to resident and nonresident users, and to classify the rates for such service, an ordinance, increasing the rates and fixing rates for nonresident users higher than for resident users, is not violative of the due process and equal protection clauses of the federal and state Constitutions. Messenheimer v. Windt, 211 Ga. 575, 87 S.E.2d 402, 1955 Ga. LEXIS 396 (1955).

Statute authorizing municipality's assessing different costs in like circumstances violative of equal protection. — A statute which authorizes a municipality to pave streets similarly situated and alike in all respects, or similarly situated portions of the same street, and to assess a different portion of the cost of the improvement of abutting landowners is discriminatory and violative of the guaranty of equal protection of the laws of the Constitutions of the United States and of Georgia. Dorsey v. City of Atlanta, 216 Ga. 778, 119 S.E.2d 553, 1961 Ga. LEXIS 338 (1961).

Municipal ordinance using gross sales of preceding year as basis for license fees with no provision for new markets violative of equal protection.

— A municipal ordinance which uses the gross sales of the preceding year as a basis on which to fix a graduated scale of license fees for meat markets, and makes no provision for fees for meat markets not in business the preceding year, is unconstitutional in that it is discriminatory and violates the equal protection clauses of the state and federal Constitutions. Elder v. Smith, 188 Ga. 65, 2 S.E.2d 670, 1939 Ga. LEXIS 784 (1939).

Tax based on number of stores one operated held arbitrary, unreasonable classification violative of equal protection. — Ga. L. 1929, p. 71, Para. 109 which imposed a tax on one operating six stores or more, and refused to tax one who operated five or less stores, is an arbitrary and unreasonable classification and is void because it is in conflict with Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. I, Para. III, (tax uniformity), Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II (government duty to protect property), and U.S. Const., amend. 14. F.W. Woolworth Co. v. Harrison, 172 Ga. 179, 156 S.E. 904, 1931 Ga. LEXIS 47 (1931).

Ordinance imposing license tax on butcher shop and grocery operation according to graduated scale valid. — Ordinance imposing a license tax on the right to operate butcher shops and retail grocery stores, classified according to a graduated scale based on the number meat blocks, or value of stock and fixtures, respectively, and number of hours operated, and applicable to all persons operating businesses of the designated classes within the city, were reasonable revenue measures, and not violative of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Ard v. City of Macon, 187 Ga.

127, 200 S.E. 678, 1938 Ga. LEXIS 791 (1938).

Former bank share tax scheme constitutional. — The 1975 Georgia bank share tax scheme did not subject banks to a tax classification that was so “palpably arbitrary” or “invidious” as to run afoul of the constitutional equal protections of the equal protection clause of the United States Constitution and the due process clauses of the United States and Georgia Constitutions. Roberts v. Gunter, 251 Ga. 276, 304 S.E.2d 369, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 757 (1983).

Classification exempting owners but penalizing dealers in sale of securities is reasonable. — The state may constitutionally make reasonable classifications, and a classification which exempts owners but penalizes dealers in the sale of securities is reasonable and not arbitrary. Saunders v. State, 172 Ga. 770, 158 S.E. 791, 1931 Ga. LEXIS 202 (1931).

Classification of cash and carry grocery and cash and credit grocery not reasonable basis for taxation.

— The difference in operating a retail grocery store on the cash and carry system, where all sales are for cash and no deliveries made outside the store, and operating the same kind of store on a system of cash and credit sales and making deliveries of goods in the store and at other places, is not a reasonable basis of classification, for the purpose of taxing the former a higher rate than the latter, and such tax is discriminatory and void and inhibited by the equal protection clauses of the state and federal Constitutions. City of Douglas v. South Ga. Grocery Co., 180 Ga. 519, 179 S.E. 768, 1935 Ga. LEXIS 462 (1935).

Classification of hotels by daily charge with regard to requirement for fire escapes arbitrary.

— Where provisions of statute require hotels and inns charging $2.00 per day or more to provide outside fire escapes and making violation a misdemeanor, because the amount charged the guests has no conceivable relation to the danger of fire, to avoid which is the sole purpose of the law, the classification here is arbitrary, rendering the law unconstitutional as denying equal protection of the law. Geele v. State, 202 Ga. 381, 43 S.E.2d 254, 1947 Ga. LEXIS 439 (1947).

Former O.C.G.A. § 34-8-40(o)(11) did not deny equal protection in exempting independent salespersons such as real estate agents and insurance agents and solicitors from the unemployment tax, while not exempting securities salespersons, in the absence of proof that securities salespersons were in fact similarly situated to the real estate and insurance agents who were exempted. Stuart-James Co. v. Tanner, 259 Ga. 289, 380 S.E.2d 257, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 272 (1989).

Different pre-judgment and post-judgment interest percentages constitutional. — Where no suspect class of condemnees is involved, application of different statutory percentages to prejudgment and post-judgment interest in condemnation cases is not unconstitutional. Brooks v. DOT, 254 Ga. 60, 327 S.E.2d 175, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 611 (1985).

Plaintiff's inability to recover punitive damages in a wrongful death action does not violate the plaintiff's right to equal protection of the laws. Berman v. United States, 572 F. Supp. 1486, 1983 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12967 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

Qualification of expert witnesses and the admissibility of expert testimony. — In a personal injury suit wherein the trial court excluded the testimony of plaintiffs' two expert witnesses upon application of former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 24-7-702 and 24-7-703), the trial court did not err in rejecting the plaintiffs' equal protection challenge since the plaintiffs could not establish the necessary element of an equal protection claim that the plaintiffs were situated similarly to those being treated differently. For purposes of evidentiary standards, only those accused of the same offense are similarly situated in the criminal law arena, only those asserting or defending against the same cause of action are similarly situated in the civil law arena, and the parties to civil cases are not similarly situated to those engaged in criminal prosecutions. Mason v. Home Depot U.S.A., Inc., 283 Ga. 271, 658 S.E.2d 603, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 249 (2008).

Distinguishing between voluntary patients with legal guardians and those without in the state's procedure for discharge from a state mental hospital does not violate equal protection since there is a rational basis for the distinction. Heichelbech v. Evans, 798 F. Supp. 708, 1992 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13216 (M.D. Ga. 1992), aff'd, 995 F.2d 237, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 13721 (11th Cir. 1993).

Review of Department of Natural Resources decisions. — The Georgia Administrative Procedure Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-13-1 et seq., and O.C.G.A. § 12-2-1 govern the procedure for judicial review of final decisions of the Department of Natural Resources and, where a party seeking review failed to make a timely request therefor, affirmance of the final decision of the department did not violate equal protection. Nix v. Long Mtn. Resources, Inc., 262 Ga. 506, 422 S.E.2d 195, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 923 (1992).

Billboard restrictions. — Denial of permission to a landowner to raise a billboard following reconstruction of a highway which reduced visibility of the billboard to traffic was not a denial of equal protection where the landowner failed to show that it received treatment dissimilar to others similarly situated. Moreton Rolleston, Jr. Living Trust v. DOT, 242 Ga. App. 835, 531 S.E.2d 719, 2000 Ga. App. LEXIS 360 (2000), cert. denied, No. S00C1160, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 556 (Ga. June 30, 2000).

Disability. — With regard to equal protection, the United States Supreme Court has not determined that the physically disabled constitute a "suspect" or "quasi-suspect" class, and unlike race or gender, disability may legitimately affect a person's ability to serve as a juror; permitting disabled people selected for grand jury service to voluntarily seek and be granted excusal on a medical hardship basis if they provide supporting documentation from their doctor is not unreasonable or illegal. Sallie v. State, 276 Ga. 506, 578 S.E.2d 444, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 279, cert. denied, 540 U.S. 902, 124 S. Ct. 251, 157 L. Ed. 2d 185, 2003 U.S. LEXIS 5999 (2003).

failing to register an address change after the offender moved into a motel because the offender failed to establish that the offender was treated differently from a similarly situated nonresident sexual offender entering the state; if O.C.G.A. § 42-1-12(e)(7) applies to a hypothetical nonresident sexual offender, that person must update his or her information within 72 hours of a change of address as required in § 42-1-12(f)(5), and any nonresident sexual offender who is required to register by virtue of the specification of § 42-1-12(e)(7) is equally subject to the requirement that he or she register a new address within 72 hours of changing that address and equally subject to being charged with a violation. Dunn v. State, 286 Ga. 238, 686 S.E.2d 772, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 736 (2009).

3. Race Discrimination

State must not discriminate against person because of race. Shelton v. GECC, 359 F. Supp. 1079, 1973 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13221 (M.D. Ga. 1973).

State flag. — The Georgia state flag, which incorporated the stars and bars of the Confederate flag, did not violate an African-American citizen's equal protection rights, even though a discriminatory purpose was a motivating factor in the passage of O.C.G.A. § 50-3-1, since the evidence failed to show a sufficiently concrete, present-day discriminatory impact on African-Americans. Coleman v. Miller, 885 F. Supp. 1561, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4103 (N.D. Ga. 1995); Coleman v. Miller, 912 F. Supp. 522, 1996 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 121 (N.D. Ga. 1996), aff'd, 117 F.3d 527, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 18163 (11th Cir. 1997).

Display of the Georgia state flag did not violate an African-American citizen's constitutional rights to equal protection and freedom of expression. Coleman v. Miller, 117 F.3d 527, 1997 U.S. App. LEXIS 18163 (11th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, 523 U.S. 1011, 118 S. Ct. 1199, 140 L. Ed. 2d 328, 1998 U.S. LEXIS 1741 (1998).

Classifications based solely upon race must be scrutinized with par- ticular care, since they are contrary to the traditions and hence constitutionally suspect. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 547 F.2d 835, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10224 (5th Cir. 1977).

Discrimination due solely to race or color constitutes infringement of constitutional right, and in a case properly coming within this rule, a declaratory judgment is proper and an injunction should issue requiring equality of treatment. The fact that salary schedules and rules are fair upon their face, is not a defense if they are, in their practical application, administered in a discriminatory manner. Davis v. Cook, 80 F. Supp. 443, 1948 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2117 (D. Ga. 1948), rev'd, 178 F.2d 595, 1949 U.S. App. LEXIS 3427 (5th Cir. 1949).

National origin discrimination not actionable. — A federal civil rights claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1981 that the plaintiff was discriminatorily discharged not because of any "racial" distinctions such as skin color, but because of the plaintiff's national origin as a person of Hispanic descent, had to be dismissed. Davis v. Boyle-Midway, Inc., 615 F. Supp. 560, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16180 (N.D. Ga. 1985).

U.S. Const., amend. 14 forbids any distinction in voting process based upon race or color irrespective of whether such distinction involves the actual denial of the vote. United States v. Bibb County Democratic Executive Comm., 222 F. Supp. 493, 1962 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3264 (M.D. Ga. 1962).

Refusing person right to vote in primary because of race or color unconstitutional. — Defendants, acting as the duly constituted authorities of the Democratic Party, in refusing to permit plaintiff to vote in said primary election solely on account of the plaintiff's race and color, deprived the plaintiff of a right secured to the plaintiff by the Constitution and laws of the United States. King v. Chapman, 62 F. Supp. 639, 1945 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1841 (D. Ga. 1945), aff'd, 154 F.2d 460, 1946 U.S. App. LEXIS 2069 (5th Cir. 1946).

Segregation of polling places, although involving no actual denial of vote, is constitutionally impermissible as the elective franchise is a function of utmost importance in the process of government and so intrinsically characteristic of the dignity of citizenship. Anderson v. Courson, 203 F. Supp. 806, 1962 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3219 (M.D. Ga. 1962).

Marriage not to be restricted by racial discrimination. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 requires that freedom of choice to marry not be restricted by invidious racial discriminations. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 547 F.2d 835, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10224 (5th Cir. 1977).

Racially disproportionate impact of government activity. — Even if government activity has racially disproportionate impact, that alone does not sustain claim of racial discrimination. Proof of racially discriminatory intent or purpose is required to show a violation. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 547 F.2d 835, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10224 (5th Cir. 1977).

Affirmative action programs. — Plaintiffs, a white male and a white female and their company, had standing to challenge the constitutionality of a county's minority and female business enterprise program. Webster v. Fulton County, 44 F. Supp. 2d 1359, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12325 (N.D. Ga. 1999).

Legitimate classification causing racial disadvantage. — Otherwise legitimate classification not constitutionally "suspect" simply because greater numbers of racial minority fall in group disadvantaged by classification. Tyler v. Vickery, 517 F.2d 1089, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 13048 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 426 U.S. 940, 96 S. Ct. 2660, 49 L. Ed. 2d 393, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 2092 (1976).

Statistical evidence of disparate racial impact alone may establish prima facie case of racial discrimination, shifting to the defendant the burden of demonstrating that invidious discrimination was not among the reasons for his actions. Tyler v. Vickery, 517 F.2d 1089, 1975 U.S. App. LEXIS 13048 (5th Cir. 1975), cert. denied, 426 U.S. 940, 96 S. Ct. 2660, 49 L. Ed. 2d 393, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 2092 (1976).

Denial of seat to black representative-elect because of race would amount to invidious discrimination under the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Bond v. Floyd, 251 F. Supp. 333, 1966 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9713 (N.D. Ga.), rev'd, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S. Ct. 339, 17 L. Ed. 2d 235, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 75 (1966).

That no black person has ever been appointed to particular position as indicative of purposeful discrimination. — In an appointment case, the fact that no black person has ever been appointed to a particular position, offered without explanation, is an indicator of purposeful discrimination. Searcy v. Williams, 656 F.2d 1003, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17543 (5th Cir. 1981), aff'd, 455 U.S. 984, 102 S. Ct. 1605, 71 L. Ed. 2d 844, 1982 U.S. LEXIS 1104 (1982).

Refusal to admit blacks by restaurant leased from city-owned airport sufficiently involved state action to invoke requirements of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Coke v. City of Atlanta, 184 F. Supp. 579, 1960 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2958 (N.D. Ga. 1960).

State statute or policy that child of mixed parentage cannot be adopted by white family cannot be countenanced under the United States Constitution. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 547 F.2d 835, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 10224 (5th Cir. 1977).

State court enforcement of private agreement exclude certain race from residential real estate violative of equal protection. — It is a violation of the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 for a state court to enforce a private agreement to exclude persons of a designated race or color from the use or occupancy of real estate for residential purposes. Evans v. Abney, 224 Ga. 826, 165 S.E.2d 160, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 968 (1968), aff'd, 396 U.S. 435, 90 S. Ct. 628, 24 L. Ed. 2d 634, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 3133 (1970).

Trust fails where discriminatory purpose. — Where an order of the Supreme Court of the United States would require the trustees of a park to operate and maintain it as to whites and blacks on a nondiscriminatory basis contrary to and in violation of the specific purpose of the trust property as provided in the will of the grantor, the trust fails and is terminated. Evans v. Newton, 221 Ga. 870, 148 S.E.2d 329, 1966 Ga. LEXIS 730 (1966).

County officials prohibited from exercising discretion to deny building permits to exclude low-income blacks. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 prohibits county officials from exercising whatever discretion allowed by municipal law to deny building permits for the avowed purpose of excluding low-income blacks from apartments proposed for construction on land zoned for apartments. Crow v. Brown, 457 F.2d 788, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 10727 (5th Cir. 1972).

Municipal zoning laws excluding low-income blacks. — U.S. Const., amend. 14 prohibits county officials from exercising whatever discretion allowed by municipal zoning laws for purpose of excluding low-income blacks from apartments proposed for construction on land zoned for apartments. Crow v. Brown, 332 F. Supp. 382, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11748 (N.D. Ga. 1971), aff'd, 457 F.2d 788, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 10727 (5th Cir. 1972).

County action or inaction toward confinement of public housing to racially compacted areas unconstitutional. — In the absence of supervening necessity, any county action or inaction intended to perpetuate or which in effect does perpetuate the confinement of public housing to racially compacted areas cannot stand. Crow v. Brown, 332 F. Supp. 382, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11748 (N.D. Ga. 1971), aff'd, 457 F.2d 788, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 10727 (5th Cir. 1972).

Approval of landfill in area with majority black population. — County planning and zoning commission's decision to approve a landfill in a census tract containing a majority black population was not motivated by the intent to discriminate against black persons, where the evidence did not establish a background of discrimination in the commission's decisions. East-Bibb Twiggs

Neighborhood Ass'n v. Macon-Bibb County Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 706 F. Supp. 880, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1626 (M.D. Ga.), aff'd, East-Bibb Twiggs Neighborhood Ass'n v. Macon-Bibb Planning & Zoning Commission, 888 F.2d 1573 (11th Cir. 1989), aff'd, East-Bibb Twiggs Neighborhood Ass'n v. Macon Bibb Planning & Zoning Com., 896 F.2d 1264, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 20805 (11th Cir. 1989).

Property owners' equal protection claim was properly denied, where they failed to demonstrate that a county zoning and planning commission acted with a discriminatory intent when it approved a conditional land use permit to operate a "nonputrescible" landfill in a census tract where 3,367 black residents and 2,149 white residents lived. East-Bibb Twiggs Neighborhood Ass'n v. Macon Bibb Planning & Zoning Comm'n, 896 F.2d 1264, 1989 U.S. App. LEXIS 20805 (11th Cir. 1989).

Refusing blacks substantially equal-use of municipal facilities with whites is forbidden discrimination. — Refusing to allow plaintiffs and others similarly situated because they are blacks, to make use, on a substantially equal basis with white citizens of municipal facilities is to practice a forbidden discrimination. Holmes v. City of Atlanta, 124 F. Supp. 290, 1954 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 2861 (D. Ga. 1954), aff'd, 223 F.2d 93, 1955 U.S. App. LEXIS 3924 (5th Cir. 1955).

Discrimination in use of municipally owned recreational facilities is violative of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Wesley v. City of Savannah, 294 F. Supp. 698, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9200 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Staging of golf tournament on segregative basis upon municipally-owned golf course falls short of equal protection and is prohibited under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Wesley v. City of Savannah, 294 F. Supp. 698, 1969 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9200 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Practice of arbitrarily segregating races in state, county and city penal facilities is unconstitutional. Stroman v. Griffin, 331 F. Supp. 226, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11991 (S.D. Ga. 1971).

Racial segregation of prisoners. —

Danger to security, discipline, and good order must presently exist and be apparent to justify racial segregation of prisoners. Stroman v. Griffin, 331 F. Supp. 226, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11991 (S.D. Ga. 1971).

Where action of voluntary association made state agency to extent of nominating power violative of equal protection. — The Georgia Legislature, by giving to voluntary associations of dentists the right to nominate members of various state agencies made it an agency of the State of Georgia to that extent. By excluding black dentists from its membership it thereby deprived them of the right to vote in connection with the nomination of dentists to fill places in the agencies. The result of such action therefore is that only dentists approved by those of the white race can be elected to such offices and black dentists can have no voice in their selection. This seems to be a clear violation of the equal protection clause. Bell v. Georgia Dental Ass'n, 231 F. Supp. 299, 1964 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7590 (N.D. Ga. 1964).

Draft induction orders de facto valid. — A claim of racial discrimination in the composition of a draft board, even if factually sustained, is not a defense to a criminal charge based on refusing to submit to an induction order, because the orders of such draft are de facto valid. Gee v. Smith, 479 F.2d 642, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9325 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 415 U.S. 932, 94 S. Ct. 1446, 39 L. Ed. 2d 491, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 1353 (1974).

Removal of prosecutions to federal court. — Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. § 2000d et seq., entitles defendants to remove prosecutions to federal court if the right upon which they rely is a right under any law providing for equal civil rights and they are denied or cannot enforce that right in the state courts. Georgia v. Rachel, 384 U.S. 780, 86 S. Ct. 1783, 16 L. Ed. 2d 925, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 2810 (1966).

Discrimination in parole requires similar situation. — A prisoner alleging racial discrimination in the denial of parole failed to provide the "exceptionally clear proof" of discrimination which is required where the prisoner did not show that the prisoner was similarly situated with white inmates who were paroled. Fuller v. Georgia State Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 851 F.2d 1307, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 10929 (11th Cir. 1988).

Death penalty statute. — Even if the studies enumerated by petitioner in a motion for federal habeas corpus relief were to establish conclusively that the present Georgia death penalty statute has had a racially disproportionate impact, such a showing in itself would not establish an equal protection violation. Ross v. Hopper, 538 F. Supp. 105, 1982 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 12308 (S.D. Ga. 1982), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 716 F.2d 1528, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 16359 (11th Cir. 1983).

A petitioner is entitled to the grant of a writ of habeas corpus if the petitioner establishes that the petitioner was singled out for the imposition of the death penalty by some specific act or acts evidencing an intent to discriminate against the petitioner on account of the petitioner's race or the race of the petitioner's victim. McCleskey v. Zant, 580 F. Supp. 338, 1984 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 19860 (N.D. Ga. 1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 753 F.2d 877, 1985 U.S. App. LEXIS 28073 (11th Cir. 1985).

No relief for conclusionary statement that sentence discriminatory. — Where defendant contended that the defendant's death sentence was a result of an unconstitutional pattern and practice of discrimination against poor white males accused of killing white victims, the defendant's bald, conclusory assertions of discrimination merited no habeas relief. Williams v. Kemp, 846 F.2d 1276, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 6460 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. dismissed, 489 U.S. 1094, 109 S. Ct. 1579, 103 L. Ed. 2d 931, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1647 (1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1090, 110 S. Ct. 1836, 108 L. Ed. 2d 965, 1990 U.S. LEXIS 1953 (1990).

4. Election and Voting Rights

Unconstitutionality of Second Congressional District. — The Second Congressional District was drawn to segregate voters according to their race and so violated equal protection. Johnson v. Miller, 922 F. Supp. 1552, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 22575 (S.D. Ga. 1995).

Equal Protection (Cont'd)4. Election and Voting*Rights (Cont'd)Power of states to determine qualifications of voters and candidates. —

Each state has the sole right to determine the qualifications of those seeking state or local offices and the qualifications of voters in state elections as long as the laws of a state do not deny to the citizens of the state their rights under the federal Constitution. Maddox v. Fortson, 226 Ga. 71, 172 S.E.2d 595, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 437, cert. denied, 397 U.S. 149, 90 S. Ct. 999, 25 L. Ed. 2d 183, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 2667 (1970).

States have broad powers to regulate voting, which may include laws relating to the qualifications and functions of electors. Maddox v. Fortson, 226 Ga. 71, 172 S.E.2d 595, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 437, cert. denied, 397 U.S. 149, 90 S. Ct. 999, 25 L. Ed. 2d 183, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 2667 (1970).

The right to vote, as intended to be protected by U.S. Const., amend. 14, refers to the right to vote as established by the laws and Constitution of the state, which has broad powers to determine the conditions under which such right of suffrage may be exercised, such as residence requirements, age or previous criminal record, absent of course, any discrimination which U.S. Const., amend. 14 condemns. Maddox v. Fortson, 226 Ga. 71, 172 S.E.2d 595, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 437, cert. denied, 397 U.S. 149, 90 S. Ct. 999, 25 L. Ed. 2d 183, 1970 U.S. LEXIS 2667 (1970).

Equal protection violations generally involve purposeful denial, or dilution, of voting rights of segment of electorate. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Because the legislature, at the request of a city council, passed legislation authorizing the city to change its form of government from a strong mayor/weak council system to a weak mayor/strong council system employing a city manager, the mayor, who was African-American, did not show that this was an unconstitutional dilution of African-American voters' political power because the mayor did not show the legislation was conceived or operated as a purposeful means to further racial discrimination. Griffin v. City Council, 279 Ga. 835, 621 S.E.2d 734, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 761 (2005).

Disenfranchisement of persons convicted of crimes of moral turpitude does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 14 because sec. 2 of U.S. Const., amend. 14 specifically qualifies equal protection guarantees by recognizing the right of a state to disenfranchise persons "for participation in rebellion or other crime." Kronlund v. Honstein, 327 F. Supp. 71, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13308 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

A state may constitutionally disenfranchise otherwise qualified voters because they have been convicted of a felony, since the state has a compelling interest in protecting the integrity of its electoral process. Kronlund v. Honstein, 327 F. Supp. 71, 1971 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13308 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

Discrimination against some members of electorate may violate equal protection guarantee. —

If state discriminates in favor of some members of electorate and against others, the equal protection guarantee may have been violated. Duncan v. Poythress, 515 F. Supp. 327, 1981 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13950 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Equal protection clause and its "one-person, one vote" sequel applies:

(1) in the actual voting process by general or primary election; and (2) in the legislative functions of a state. Conversely, it apparently does not apply in nonlegislative functions of a state or in the administration of the judiciary. Smith v. State Executive Comm. of Democratic Party, 288 F. Supp. 371, 1968 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9423 (N.D. Ga. 1968).

State constitutional provision requiring that county officer be county resident for two years preceding election is reasonable and not a denial of equal protection under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Griggers v. Moye, 246 Ga. 578, 272 S.E.2d 262, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 1206 (1980).

Residency requirement for candidate upheld. — Requiring appellee candidate to reside in the district for 12 months prior to the general election did not deny the candidate equal protection under the United States Constitution or the Georgia Constitution as the residency requirement for election to the Georgia Public Service Commission was rationally related to the state's legitimate interests in fostering informed voters and promoting knowledgeable and responsive candidates with ties to the community, and did not place an unreasonable burden on the right of voters to choose a candidate or the right of the candidate to run for public office. Cox v. Barber, 275 Ga. 415, 568 S.E.2d 478, 2002 Ga. LEXIS 629 (2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1109, 123 S. Ct. 851, 154 L. Ed. 2d 780, 2003 U.S. LEXIS 646 (2003).

Statute imposing election qualifying fees violative of equal protection where not shown reasonably necessary. — Where the state does not show that the imposition of election qualifying fees is reasonably necessary to accomplishing any legitimate state objectives, the statute requiring payment of such a fee violates the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Stoner v. Fortson, 359 F. Supp. 579, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13889 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

State or political party can impose filing fee in amount reasonably approximating cost of processing candidate's application for a place on the ballot. Stoner v. Fortson, 359 F. Supp. 579, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13889 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Right to appear on ballot. — State statute creating the presidential candidate selection committee, by identifying three logically representative members of each party to serve on the committee, and by providing a check against arbitrariness by allowing only one member of the party on the committee to override the unanimous decision of the committee, is narrowly tailored to advance the interests of the state in conducting orderly and efficient elections and allowing the parties to choose their candidates, and is not violative of the first and Fourteenth Amendments. Duke v. Cleland, 884 F. Supp. 511, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3852 (N.D. Ga. 1995), aff'd, 87 F.3d 1226, 1996 U.S. App. LEXIS 16632 (11th Cir. 1996).

Prohibiting candidates from getting names on ballot due to lack of funds. — To prohibit candidates from getting names on ballot solely because they cannot post certain amount of money is unconstitutional and illegal. This unconstitutionality does not attach, where the candidate can get his name on the ballot in some other fashion, either by nominating petition, primary election, or pauper's affidavit. Georgia Socialist Workers Party v. Fortson, 315 F. Supp. 1035, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11250 (N.D. Ga. 1970), aff'd, 403 U.S. 431, 91 S. Ct. 1970, 29 L. Ed. 2d 554, 1971 U.S. LEXIS 24 (1971).

Right to appear on general election ballot is constitutionally favored but less than fundamental, and may be burdened, but only by means reasonably necessary to limit the field to serious candidates. "Seriousness" comprehends two factors, the first of which is a candidate's actual popularity and, by implication, his reasonable chances of success, and the second of which is a candidate's subjective desire and motivation. Belluso v. Poythress, 485 F. Supp. 904, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11805 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Interests behind right-to-access rule: the right of individuals to associate for the advancement of political beliefs, and the right of qualified voters, regardless of their political persuasion, to cast their votes effectively. Belluso v. Poythress, 485 F. Supp. 904, 1980 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11805 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Concept of political equality in voting booth extends to all phases of state elections. Gray v. Sanders, 372 U.S. 368, 83 S. Ct. 801, 9 L. Ed. 2d 821, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 1944 (1963).

One-person, one-vote test as to constitutionality of election system. — To test the constitutionality of an election system, the first step is to determine the geographical unit, and then to see if the voters in the unit are treated equally. This is the one-person, one-vote admeasurement. Where it is plain that every voter in the county is treated equally, the test is satisfied. Reed v. Mann, 237 F. Supp. 22, 1964 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8789 (N.D. Ga. 1964).

Proper judicial approach toward legislative apportionment at issue. — The proper judicial approach is to ascertain whether, under the particular circumstances existing in the individual state whose legislative apportionment is at issue, there has been a faithful adherence to a plan of population-based representation, with such minor deviations only as may occur in recognizing certain factors that are free from any taint of arbitrariness or discrimination. Toombs v. Fortson, 241 F. Supp. 65, 1965 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6316 (N.D. Ga. 1965), aff'd, 384 U.S. 210, 86 S. Ct. 1464, 16 L. Ed. 2d 482, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 1649 (1966).

Constitutionality of Eleventh Congressional District. — Race was the predominant, overriding factor explaining the General Assembly's decision to attach to the Eleventh District various appendages containing dense majority-black populations, thereby giving rise to a valid equal protection claim under the principles announced in Shaw v. Reno, 509 U.S. 630, 113 S. Ct. 2819, 125 L. Ed. 2d 511 (1993), and the district could not be sustained as narrowly tailored to serve a compelling governmental interest. Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900, 115 S. Ct. 2475, 132 L. Ed. 2d 762, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 4462 (1995).

Mathematical formula fixing maximum variance by which population of district may differ from average district population is not possible, but a variance of more than 15 percent would be difficult, if not impossible, to justify. The court will base any test as to the reasonableness of variances on the departure figure of 15 percent. Of course, this does not mean a deliberate built-in variance of this degree but a good faith effort to meet the average with departure only where necessary to afford individual representation to as many counties as possible. Toombs v. Fortson, 241 F. Supp. 65, 1965 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 6316 (N.D. Ga. 1965), aff'd, 384 U.S. 210, 86 S. Ct. 1464, 16 L. Ed. 2d 482, 1966 U.S. LEXIS 1649 (1966).

Agreement for appointment of certain number of black judges unconstitutional. — In an action challenging Georgia's judicial election system under the Voting Rights Act, 52 U.S.C. § 10301 et seq., and the federal Constitution, a proposed consent decree that would require the state to have a certain number of black judges was a violation of equal protection. Brooks v. State Bd. of Elections, 848 F. Supp. 1548, 1994 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3272 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

Discrimination in political rights actionable where invidious. — Political rights, such as the right to vote, are protected by the equal protection clause; but discrimination must reach the point of invidiousness to become actionable, and discrimination is not invidious if there is a reasonable chance that political relief can be obtained. Spahos v. Mayor of Savannah Beach, 207 F. Supp. 688, 1962 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 5344 (S.D. Ga.), aff'd, 371 U.S. 206, 83 S. Ct. 304, 9 L. Ed. 2d 269, 1962 U.S. LEXIS 41 (1962).

Multi-member districts not per se illegal. — Multi-member districts, even though they have certain undesirable features, are not per se illegal under the equal protection clause. In the absence of factual proof of dilution or cancellation, multi-member districts do afford citizens the equal protection of the law that comes from U.S. Const., amend. 14 and are not unconstitutional under the equal protection clause. Paige v. Gray, 437 F. Supp. 137, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14308 (M.D. Ga. 1977).

Election process equality established by U.S. Const., amend. 14 includes not only the "one-person, one-vote" rule, but also includes, as to state created multi-member election district schemes, the prohibition that such districts may not operate to minimize or cancel out the voting strength of racial or political elements of the voting population. Paige v. Gray, 437 F. Supp. 137, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14308 (M.D. Ga. 1977).

To sustain claim that multi-member election districts are unconstitutional, plaintiffs' burden is to produce evidence to support findings that the political processes leading to nomination and election were not equally open to participation by the group in question — that its members had less opportunity than did other residents in the district to participate in the political processes and to elect legislators of their choice. Paige v. Gray, 437 F. Supp. 137, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14308 (M.D. Ga. 1977).

Burden on challengers to prove multi-member districts dilute or cancel voting strength of racial or political elements. — To sustain a challenge that multi-member election districts are unconstitutional because they operate to minimize or cancel out the voting strength of racial or political elements of the voting population, the challengers must carry the burden of proving that multi-member districts operate to dilute or cancel the voting strength of racial or political elements. Such proof focuses not on population-based apportionment “one-man, one-vote” rule but on the quality of representation afforded the challengers by the multi-member district arrangement as compared with single-member districts. Paige v. Gray, 437 F. Supp. 137, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14308 (M.D. Ga. 1977).

Constitutionality of multi-member election districts evaluated according to actual performance. — In evaluating the constitutionality of multi-member election district schemes, factual proof of dilution or cancellation is derived from an examination of the manner in which the multi-member system has performed or actually worked in past years — the real-life impact of multi-member districts on individual voting power. It is not derived from a theoretical projection of the effect that a multi-member system will have in years to come. Paige v. Gray, 437 F. Supp. 137, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14308 (M.D. Ga. 1977).

When challengers factually prove that multi-member districts operate to dilute or cancel voting strength of racial or political elements, they thereby establish that such a scheme denies them the inalienable right derived from the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 that each and every citizen has full and effective participation in the political processes of his state’s legislative bodies. Paige v. Gray, 437 F. Supp. 137, 1977 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14308 (M.D. Ga. 1977).

Proof of improper assignment of voters. — Parties alleging that a state has assigned voters on the basis of race are neither confined in their proof to evidence regarding the district’s geometry and makeup nor required to make a threshold showing of bizarreness. Miller v. Johnson, 515 U.S. 900, 115 S. Ct. 2475, 132 L. Ed. 2d 762, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 4462 (1995).

Discrepancy in population of militia districts from which members of county board of education are elected denies fair and equal vote and violates the “one person, one vote” principle of the equal protection clause. Grimes v. Clark, 226 Ga. 195, 173 S.E.2d 686, 1970 Ga. LEXIS 481 (1970).

Statutory referendum procedure to remove county from fluoridation requirement constitutional. — The construction of § 12-5-175(a) by a county board of elections, to the effect that a referendum petition to remove the county from the statutory requirement of fluoridation of public water must be signed by 10 percent of the registered voters who actually voted in the election, did not violate the constitutional rights of the petitioners to equal protection and the right to vote. Kelly v. Macon-Bibb County Bd. of Elections, 608 F. Supp. 1036, 1985 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 20302 (M.D. Ga. 1985).

Evidence of intent to discriminate. — A speech favoring “white primary bill” made by the sponsor of the 1947 Single-Commissioner Act for Carroll County, which act he later sponsored in 1951, was evidence of an intent to discriminate against black voters in any voting legislation before the General Assembly during that session, and a finder of fact might well infer that such intent continued until 1951 when the bill was re-introduced under the same sponsorship. City of Carrollton Branch of NAACP v. Stallings, 829 F.2d 1547, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 13964 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 936, 108 S. Ct. 1111, 99 L. Ed. 2d 272, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 1106 (1988).

Evidence of racial prejudice excluded. — In discrimination action by black employees, the district court did not abuse its discretion in excluding evidence of plant managers’ racial prejudice where employees’ counsel failed to explain adequately the importance of the evidence. Ross v. Buckeye Cellulose Corp., 980 F.2d — Georgia Public Telecommunications Commission's decision to air a debate between Democrat and Republican candidates for Governor, while excluding a Libertarian candidate, was rational, and did not constitute an equal protection violation. Chandler v. Georgia Pub. Telecommunications Comm'n, 917 F.2d 486, 1990 U.S. App. LEXIS 19223 (11th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 816, 112 S. Ct. 71, 116 L. Ed. 2d 45, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 4368 (1991).

Right to exclude candidate from publicly broadcast political debate.

Use of direct recording electronic equipment does not deny equal protection. — Trial court did not err in granting the Secretary of State, the Governor, and the Georgia State Election Board summary judgment in voters' action challenging the use of direct recording electronic equipment on the ground that it denied the voters equal protection under the equal protection clause of the United States Constitution and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II because all Georgia voters had the option of casting an absentee ballot or using the touch screen electronic voting machines on election day, and in deciding to forego the privilege of voting early on a paper ballot, voters assumed the risk of necessarily different procedures if a recount was required; since every Georgia citizen could vote by absentee ballot or by utilizing the touch screen voting system, the voters' contention that there was some state based classification between voters was false. Favorito v. Handel, 285 Ga. 795, 684 S.E.2d 257, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 486 (2009).

5. Selection of Juries

Jury service is not right or privilege, but burden which state summons certain of citizens to bear. Simmons v. Jones, 317 F. Supp. 397, 1970 U.S. Dist.

LEXIS 10018 (S.D. Ga. 1970), rev'd, 478 F.2d 321, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9958 (5th Cir. 1973).

Standards of intelligence, uprightness and experience for jurors are not violative of the Constitution.

White v. State, 230 Ga. 327, 196 S.E.2d 849, 1973 Ga. LEXIS 896 (1973).

Youth as justification for striking juror. — Youth and lack of experience can be a race-neutral reason for striking a juror. Robert v. State, 227 Ga. App. 26, 488 S.E.2d 105, 1997 Ga. App. LEXIS 818 (1997).

"Reverse Batson" challenges. — In a federal habeas corpus case, a Caucasian state death row inmate's equal protection challenge to the prosecutor's striking of African-American venirepersons from the jury at the inmate's murder trial failed because, at the time of trial, the U.S. Supreme Court had not yet ruled that a "reverse Batson" challenge to the use of peremptory challenges to strike jurors of a different race than the defendant was possible; because a "reverse Batson" challenge was not clearly established federal law at the time, it did not form a proper basis for federal habeas relief. Ford v. Schofield, 488 F. Supp. 2d 1258, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 34958 (N.D. Ga. 2007), aff'd, 546 F.3d 1326, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 22318 (11th Cir. 2008).

When right to jury trial exists, jury's proper composition is fundamental. Simmons v. Jones, 317 F. Supp. 397, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10018 (S.D. Ga. 1970), rev'd, 478 F.2d 321, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9958 (5th Cir. 1973).

Artistic tendencies as justification for juror striking. — Trial court did not err in denying defendant's Batson challenge regarding the state's peremptory strike of an African-American juror who was a dance instructor, as the prosecutor explained that the prosecutor struck the juror because people in artistic professions had "a different slant," discriminatory intent was not inherent in this race-neutral explanation, and the juror was not similarly situated to other jurors who were not stricken. White v. State, 258 Ga. App. 546, 574 S.E.2d 629, 2002 Ga. App. LEXIS 1504 (2002).

Prosecutor's reason for a peremptory challenge against a student who was in graduate school in order to be a school counselor was race-neutral: the prosecutor was concerned that psychology would be a part of the defense of battered person syndrome, and the prosecutor did not want someone who would give strong credence to psychology. Demery v. State, 287 Ga. 805, 700 S.E.2d 373, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 610 (2010).

Use of “forced balancing” of grand jury pool upheld. — Motion to dismiss a murder indictment on the ground that the grand jury was drawn from a grand jury pool that systematically underrepresented blacks and overrepresented whites, in violation of the sixth and fourteenth amendments, based on the selection process known as “forced balancing” the grand jury pool to the most recent decennial census for the county, was properly denied under the law in effect as of November 2010, before the Jury Composition Reform Act of 2011, Ga. L. 2011, p. 59, § 1-1/HB 415, took effect. Franklin v. State, 303 Ga. 165, 810 S.E.2d 118, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 135 (2018).

Impartial venires representative of community as a whole required. — Very integrity of fact-finding process depends on impartial venires representative of community as whole. Simmons v. Jones, 317 F. Supp. 397, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10018 (S.D. Ga. 1970), rev’d, 478 F.2d 321, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9958 (5th Cir. 1973).

Just and fair trial by unbiased, unprejudiced and impartial tribunal is great American constitutional principle. There can be no due process or equal protection unless that principle remains inviolate. Simmons v. Jones, 317 F. Supp. 397, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10018 (S.D. Ga. 1970), rev’d, 478 F.2d 321, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9958 (5th Cir. 1973).

Constitutional principle that juries must be selected from fair cross section of community is well-established. Simmons v. Jones, 317 F. Supp. 397, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10018 (S.D. Ga. 1970), rev’d, 478 F.2d 321, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9958 (5th Cir. 1973).

Affirmative duties of jury commissioners, including list that is fairly representative cross section. — The United States Constitution casts upon jury commissioners, as judicial administrators, affirmative duties which must be carried out in order to have a constitutionally secure system. A list that is fairly representative cross section of the community is both a constitutional standard as well as a duty in jury selection procedures in Georgia. Simmons v. Jones, 317 F. Supp. 397, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10018 (S.D. Ga. 1970), rev’d, 478 F.2d 321, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9958 (5th Cir. 1973).

Jury roll need not accurately reflect proportionate strength of every identifiable group. — A jury roll need not be a perfect mirror of the community or accurately reflect the proportionate strength of every identifiable group, for while the cross-sectional concept is firmly imbedded in the law, the constitution does not require that the jury or jury venire be a statistical mirror of the community. Simmons v. Jones, 317 F. Supp. 397, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10018 (S.D. Ga. 1970), rev’d, 478 F.2d 321, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9958 (5th Cir. 1973).

In determining whether particular discrepancy is substantial or significant, some allowance may be made for the imprecision of the jury selection process and the operation of constitutionally inoffensive factors such as exemptions from jury duty based on occupation. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

Consideration of percentages not determinative. — The consideration of percentages of minorities on a jury panel and on the jury is relevant but not determinative. Gooden v. State, 204 Ga. App. 62, 418 S.E.2d 632, 1992 Ga. App. LEXIS 679 (1992).

Guarantee of equal protection applies to any identifiable group in community. — The constitutional guarantee of equal protection of the laws is not directed solely against discrimination between whites and blacks. It applies to any identifiable group in the community. Simmons v. Jones, 317 F. Supp. 397, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10018 (S.D. Ga. 1970), rev'd, 478 F.2d 321, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9958 (5th Cir. 1973).

State cannot deliberately exclude identifiable, distinct groups from jury lists. — A defendant is not constitutionally entitled to a venire or jury roll of any particular composition, but U.S. Const., amend. 14, equal protection and due process clause, and U.S. Const., amend. 6, right to a jury trial, do require that the state not deliberately and systematically exclude identifiable and distinct groups from their jury lists. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

Failure to show actual under-representation of a claimed cognizable group. — Supreme Court of Georgia found no need to address the trial court's finding regarding whether Hispanic persons were a cognizable group in Cobb County in order to decide the defendant's jury composition claim, because: (1) the defendant failed to show any actual under-representation of Hispanic persons; (2) a slight over-representation of Hispanic persons who were citizens, in comparison to the total county population, was shown by the evidence; and (3) the defendant's own expert belied the defendant's claim of under-representation. Rice v. State, 281 Ga. 149, 635 S.E.2d 707, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 600 (2006).

Defendant's argument that Hispanic persons were misrepresented in the composition of the grand and traverse jury pools in violation of the Sixth and Fourteenth Amendments and O.C.G.A. § 15-12-40 was rejected because the defendant failed to show any actual misrepresentation of this group: the defendant's own expert witness testified that when using 2000 Census data, absolute disparity figures for Hispanics were under the five percent threshold, although when adjusted to account for the citizenship rate of Hispanic persons, the absolute disparity figure showed over-representation by 6.12 percent for the grand jury list. Thus, the absolute disparity figures were well within constitutional requirements of 10 percent. Foster v. State, 288 Ga. 98, 701 S.E.2d 189, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 814 (2010).

Burden of proof regarding discriminatory peremptory challenges.

— The ultimate burden of persuasion in a challenge to a peremptory strike is on the opponent rather than the proponent of the strike. Hinson v. State, 237 Ga. App. 366, 515 S.E.2d 203, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 430 (1999), cert. denied, No. S99C1067, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 975 (Ga. Nov. 12, 1999).

Defendant may now complain of exclusion from jury of distinct class to which he does not belong. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

Accused entitled to demand no exclusion of race and no discrimination because of race in grand and petit juries. — What an accused is entitled to demand, under the Constitution of the United States, is that, in organizing the grand jury as well as in the impaneling of the petit jury, there shall be no exclusion of the accused's race, and no discrimination against them, because of their race or color. The question of unlawful exclusion is one of fact. Herndon v. State, 178 Ga. 832, 174 S.E. 597, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 197 (1934).

Method of jury selection does not have to guarantee all groups in community will be fully represented in order to meet equal protection standards. Brookins v. State, 221 Ga. 181, 144 S.E.2d 83, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 415 (1965).

State's use of peremptory challenges to dismiss males not unconstitutional. — In a prosecution for the murder of a homosexual victim, the state's exercise of peremptory strikes against male members of the jury pool was not unconstitutional as being gender based where, during voir dire, several of the stricken male jurors expressed hostile attitudes toward gay men, and thus may have been unsympathetic toward the victim. Tedder v. State, 265 Ga. 900, 463 S.E.2d 697, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 934 (1995).

In a prosecution for cruelty to children by maliciously causing physical pain through failing to seek medical attention, the trial court did not improperly allow the state to exercise its jury strikes in a discriminatory manner to exclude males. Herrin v. State, 221 Ga. App. 356, 471 S.E.2d 297, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 498 (1996).

Proportionate representation of races on grand or petit jury is not necessary to guarantee equal protection of the law to the accused. Brookins v. State, 221 Ga. 181, 144 S.E.2d 83, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 415 (1965).

The trial court did not err by ruling that the composition of the grand and traverse jury pools did not violate the Constitution, O.C.G.A. § 15-12-40, and the Unified Appeal Procedure where, in a comparison of the 1990 Census numbers for Hispanics in the county with the percentage of Hispanics on the jury lists, it was shown that the absolute disparities were within the legal limit. Morrow v. State, 272 Ga. 691, 532 S.E.2d 78, 2000 Ga. LEXIS 492 (2000), cert. denied, 532 U.S. 944, 121 S. Ct. 1408, 149 L. Ed. 2d 350, 2001 U.S. LEXIS 2523 (2001).

Waiver of jury of 12. — It is not necessary for an accused to personally waive the accused's right to a jury of 12 and agree to be tried by a jury of less than 12; counsel for accused may validly waive this right for the accused if (1) waiver is made, without objection, in accused's presence or (2) accused otherwise acquiesces in waiver. Hudson v. State, 250 Ga. 479, 299 S.E.2d 531, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 999 (1983).

Record sufficient to establish prima facie case of discrimination. — Evidence that the state exercised a disproportionate percentage of its strikes against blacks, by using 50 percent of its allotted strikes in selecting from a venire that was 20 percent black, was sufficient to establish a prima facie inference of discriminatory intent. Griffeth v. State, 224 Ga. App. 462, 480 S.E.2d 889.

Discrepancy in number on selection panel. — Appellant's constitutional rights to due process of law and a jury trial were not violated where his jury was selected from one panel of 14 and one panel of ten, rather than from two panels of 12 persons each. Hester v. State, 164 Ga. App. 871, 298 S.E.2d 292, 1982 Ga. App. LEXIS 2958 (1982).

Results speak for themselves and jury commissioners must be held to have intended natural result of conduct. Simmons v. Jones, 317 F. Supp. 397, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10018 (S.D. Ga. 1970), rev'd, 478 F.2d 321, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9958 (5th Cir. 1973).

Record insufficient to establish prima facie case of discrimination. — Colloquies between court and counsel and argument of counsel, though included in the record, were not competent evidence of the facts observed therein, and did not suffice to make a proper record of facts required to establish a prima facie case of discrimination. Shaw v. State, 201 Ga. App. 438, 411 S.E.2d 534, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1382 (1991).

Evidence that the state exercised a disproportionate percentage of its strikes against blacks, by using 50 percent of its allotted strikes in selecting from a venire that was 20 percent black, was sufficient to establish a prima facie inference of discriminatory intent. Griffeth v. State, 224 Ga. App. 462, 480 S.E.2d 889.

Upon appellate review of an order denying defendant's Batson challenge, the appeals court found that after considering that the ratio of African-American jurors to white jurors exceeded the ratio of potential African-American jurors to potential white jurors, defendant failed to make out a prima facie showing of racial discrimination in jury selection. Goldberg v. State, 280 Ga. App. 600, 634 S.E.2d 419, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 734 (2006), aff'd, 282 Ga. 542, 651 S.E.2d 667, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 577 (2007).

Equal Protection (Cont'd)5. Selection of Juries (Cont'd)

Trial court's finding that the defendant failed to set forth a prima facie case of racial discrimination sufficient to support a Batson challenge was not clearly erroneous, as the defendant failed to show that the totality of the relevant facts gave rise to an inference of discriminatory purpose. Moreover, the number of strikes by the state exercised against African-American veniremen did not give rise to an inference of discrimination. Ludy v. State, 283 Ga. 322, 658 S.E.2d 745, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 265 (2008).

Burden on challenger to establish purposeful racial discrimination by satisfactory evidences. — The proposition that a defendant in a criminal case is entitled to a proportionate number of the defendant's race on the jury which tries the defendant, or that the venire or jury list accurately reflect the proportionate strength of every identifiable group is not law since the challenger must establish by satisfactory evidence purposeful racial discrimination, even if the figures are not proportionate, except that a gross and unexplained disparity may be sufficient alone to demonstrate such discrimination. Talley v. State, 120 Ga. App. 365, 170 S.E.2d 444, 1969 Ga. App. LEXIS 781 (1969).

Burden is upon defendant to demonstrate that a particular class was the subject of discrimination in the jury selection procedures. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

Threshold question that must be answered by the defendant is whether the particular class constitutes an identifiable and distinct class for purposes of a jury challenge based on U.S. Const., amend. 14. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

Burden of proof regarding discriminatory peremptory challenges.

— Prosecutor must demonstrate the racial neutrality of the prosecutor's peremptory challenges only if the defendant establishes a prima facie case of racial discrimination in the prosecutor's exercise of peremptory challenges. Gamble v. State, 257 Ga. 325, 357 S.E.2d 792, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 828 (1987).

Failure to apply the three-step Batson/McCollum test was error. — While the trial court found that the state established a prima facie case of defendant's use of racial discrimination in using peremptory challenges, asked defense counsel to explain the basis for each strike, and listened to rebuttal by the prosecuting attorney, based on the assumption that defense counsel used peremptory strikes to remove all white males from the venire, it erred by failing to apply the three-step Batson/McCollum process in disallowing defendant's exercise of peremptory strikes against jurors 5, 7, and 10 and in ordering those panel members reseated. Moon v. State, 280 Ga. App. 84, 633 S.E.2d 418, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 753 (2006).

Underrepresentation not unconstitutional absent discrimination. — The defendant's allegations that the venire from which the grand and petit juries were drawn was unconstitutionally composed because both women and African-Americans were underrepresented did not establish a prima facie violation of either the sixth amendment or the fourteenth amendment, because there was no showing that the underrepresentation was due to the systematic exclusion of the groups in the jury-selection process or that the venire was selected under a practice providing an opportunity for discrimination. Cunningham v. Zant, 928 F.2d 1006, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 4864 (11th Cir. 1991).

No inference arises because no member of defendant's race on jury trying the defendant. — The arbitrary, systematic and purposeful exclusion of members of the defendant's race from the defendant's jury cannot be inferred merely from the fact that no one of that race is on such jury. Heard v. State, 210 Ga. 523, 81 S.E.2d 467, 1954 Ga. LEXIS 363 (1954).

Inference of discriminatory behavior. — Where the state used its peremptory strikes to eliminate only black veniremen and eliminated all but one for an unarticulated reason, the inference of discriminatory behavior is sufficiently raised. Barton v. State, 184 Ga. App. 258, 361 S.E.2d 250, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2771 (1987).

Race-neutral explanation for peremptory strikes. — The prosecutor, who used three of six peremptory challenges to strike the only three black members of the jury pool, did not use the peremptory strikes to challenge members of the venire on the basis of race, where the prosecutor offered a racially neutral explanation for the exercise of each peremptory strike. United States v. Williams, 936 F.2d 1243, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 16650 (11th Cir. 1991), cert. denied, 502 U.S. 1119, 112 S. Ct. 1239, 117 L. Ed. 2d 472, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 1161 (1992), cert. denied, 503 U.S. 912, 112 S. Ct. 1279, 117 L. Ed. 2d 504, 1992 U.S. LEXIS 1509 (1992).

The state's striking of the only African-American venireperson because the individual was a practicing attorney was properly found to be a race-neutral reason. Collins v. State, 239 Ga. App. 11, 520 S.E.2d 542, 1999 Ga. App. LEXIS 1286 (1999).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's Batson challenge even though the state did use all of its peremptory strikes against African-American jurors, as defendant did not rebut the state's race-neutral reasons for the strikes, that each of the jurors who were struck said that they had close friends or family members whom the state mistreated or falsely accused of crimes. Daniels v. State, 276 Ga. 632, 580 S.E.2d 221, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 363 (2003).

Prosecutor's explanation that the prosecutor decided to use peremptory challenges to strike one African-American venireperson because the venireperson knew defendant, a second African-American venireperson because that individual was unemployed, and a third African-American venireperson because that individual was related to a defendant previously prosecuted by the prosecutor's office and was friends with other defendants prosecuted by the prosecutor's office established race-neutral reasons for striking all three people, and the trial court did not violate defendant's right to equal protection by granting the prosecutor's motions to strike. Floyd v. State, 263 Ga. App. 3, 587 S.E.2d 166, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1066 (2003).

Despite defendant's ostensibly race-neutral reason for a single contested peremptory strike, after failing to express any reason why the juror's friendship with a district attorney was case-related, and the record failed to indicate that defendant did not challenge at least one other juror with a friend who worked as a prosecutor in the same judicial circuit, upon a showing by the state of a prima facie case of racial discrimination by virtue of defendant's use of all of defendant's peremptory strikes to remove whites from the jury, the trial court's finding that defendant's reliance on non-racial explanations to defend the strike was implausible and a mere pretext to disguise discrimination against white males was not clearly erroneous. Allen v. State, 280 Ga. 678, 631 S.E.2d 699, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 458 (2006).

Appeals court rejected the defendant's claim that the state committed a Batson violation in peremptorily striking two jurors, as: (1) the state's reasons in striking the first juror appeared concrete and race-neutral and any question of doubt was decided in favor of the state, given the great deference to the determination that the state's reason was not so wholly fantastic as to be pretextual; and (2) a second juror was properly stricken based on evidence that that juror worked nights, appeared to be extremely fatigued, and actually slept through portions of the voir dire. Woolfolk v. State, 282 Ga. 139, 644 S.E.2d 828, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 359 (2007).

Because the defendant was unable to rebut the state's explanation of the race-neutral reasons for the state's peremptory strike, the trial court properly denied the defendant's Batson motion. Specifically, the state explained that the state struck the juror at issue because the juror had a prison ministry, had been a character witness in a criminal case, and was related to another juror the state struck because the other juror was previously charged with aggravated assault. Boone v. State, 293 Ga. App. 654, 667 S.E.2d 880, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 1041 (2008).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's Batson challenge under the fourteenth amendment. The state explained that the state struck an African-American juror because the juror was combative and reluctant to answer the state's questions, and the defendant's argument that this was not an adequate nondiscriminatory reason for striking the juror was unpersuasive. Jackson v. State, 291 Ga. 25, 727 S.E.2d 120, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 366 (2012).

State provided sufficient race-neutral reasons for using nine of the state's 10 peremptory strikes against non-white prospective jurors, including that one stricken prospective juror worked for a group home with boys close to the defendant's age, one had multiple conflicts with the criminal justice system, and one had been falsely accused of a crime but acted in self-defense, the same legal theory advanced by the defendant. Stacey v. State, 292 Ga. 838, 741 S.E.2d 881, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 373 (2013).

Purposeful discrimination found in striking of prospective jurors. — The State's strikes of two black prospective jurors in a prisoner's capital murder trial were motivated in substantial part by discriminatory intent. The prosecution's proffered reasons for the strikes also applied to otherwise-similar nonblack panelists who were allowed to serve, and other evidence of discriminatory intent included shifting explanations, misrepresentations of the record, and a persistent focus on race in documents in the prosecution's file. Foster v. Chatman, 578 U.S. 488, 136 S. Ct. 1737, 195 L. Ed. 2d 1, 2016 U.S. LEXIS 3486 (2016).

State may provide race-neutral explanations upon remand. — The equal protection clause prohibits a prosecutor from using the state's peremptory challenges to exclude otherwise qualified and unbiased persons from the petit jury solely by reason of their race, a practice that forecloses a significant opportunity to participate in civic life. Where the record on appeal contains no transcription of the voir dire, but the state asserts that it could have provided explanations for its strikes, but did not do so at the time of the trial, the case will be remanded to provide an opportunity for the state to establish, if it can, that its strikes of veniremen were racially neutral. Congdon v. State, 261 Ga. 398, 405 S.E.2d 677, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 328 (1991).

Discrimination cannot be established by merely proving that no one of defendant's race was on jury. An accused person cannot, of right, demand a mixed jury, some of whom are of the defendant's race, nor is a jury of that kind guaranteed to any race. Herndon v. State, 178 Ga. 832, 174 S.E. 597, 1934 Ga. LEXIS 197 (1934).

Nonwhite defendant not entitled to racially mixed jury with members of his race. — A black person or member of any other race, who is on trial is not entitled to a mixed jury composed of members of the defendant's own race and members of the white race; no such right to a mixed jury is guaranteed by the due process and equal protection clauses of either the Constitution of the United States or of Georgia. Heard v. State, 210 Ga. 523, 81 S.E.2d 467, 1954 Ga. LEXIS 363 (1954).

Discriminatory selection of grand and petit juries in state courts may be challenged under the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Wilson v. State, 250 Ga. 630, 300 S.E.2d 640, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1019, cert. denied, 464 U.S. 865, 104 S. Ct. 199, 78 L. Ed. 2d 174, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 5341 (1983); Gibson v. Zant, 705 F.2d 1543, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 27257 (11th Cir. 1983).

Discriminatory selection of grand and traverse juries in state court may be challenged under the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Davis v. Zant, 721 F.2d 1478, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 14182 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1143, 105 S. Ct. 2689, 86 L. Ed. 2d 706, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 2147 (1985).

Prima facie case of discrimination.

— Two things need be shown to make out a prima facie case of discrimination: (1) an infected source of jurors such as racially segregated tax returns; and (2) an impermissible disparity between the venire and the source of jurors. Johnson v. Caldwell, 228 Ga. 776, 187 S.E.2d 844, 1972 Ga. LEXIS 906 (1972).

Improper basis for excluding juror.

— Where prosecutor stated that he was “not comfortable” with the excluded juror, the court held it not appropriate to deal with the prosecutor’s level of comfort other than to say that such was too vague, too subjective, non-specific, noncase related, and as such failed to meet Batson’s requirement of “clear and reasonably specific.” Covin v. State, 215 Ga. App. 3, 449 S.E.2d 550, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 1095 (1994).

Showing of substantial underrepresentation of cognizable class can establish prima facie case of discriminatory selection of jurors. Mann v. Cox, 487 F. Supp. 147, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9894 (S.D. Ga. 1979).

No constitutional guarantee of representative cross-section in particular case. — The fact that the jury panel in a particular case actually contained a lower percentage of blacks is not especially significant. There is no constitutional guarantee that the grand or petit juries impanelled in a particular case will constitute a representative cross-section of the entire community. Truitt v. State, 212 Ga. App. 286, 441 S.E.2d 800, 1994 Ga. App. LEXIS 265 (1994).

Establishing prima facie violation of fair cross section requirement.

— Although the defendant argued that the defendant was denied a fair trial because the jury array was selected in a manner that deprived the defendant of a fair cross-section of the community, the defendant failed to meet the defendant’s burden because the defendant did not present any evidence of systematic or purposeful discrimination as the lack of information regarding the race of the jurors did not show that the composition of the array amounted to discrimination by random process; and because the state did not fail to show a fair cross-section as the defendant, not the state, bore the burden of proof on that issue; thus, the lack of information upon which the defendant relied proved nothing, and the defendant could not prevail. Grant v. State, 305 Ga. 170, 824 S.E.2d 255, 2019 Ga. LEXIS 102 (2019), overruled in part, State v. Lane, 308 Ga. 10, 838 S.E.2d 808, 2020 Ga. LEXIS 98 (2020).

Underrepresentation of women.

— When the jury commissioners have selected persons at random directly from the voter registration list, in such mechanical manner as to virtually eliminate the possibility of bias in that selection, it is not sufficient to establish a prima-facie equal protection violation to establish that women are underrepresented on a single grand jury list by some undetermined amount. Dobbs v. Kemp, 809 F.2d 750, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 1278 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 481 U.S. 1059, 107 S. Ct. 2203, 95 L. Ed. 2d 858, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 2232 (1987).

Striking of women not pretextual.

— Defendant failed to show that the striking of two female jurors by the prosecutor was gender based since the explanations proffered by the prosecutor, that the prosecutor feared that the jurors would be distracted or preoccupied by their impending moves, were not so implausible or fantastic as to render them pretextual. Shell v. State, 264 Ga. App. 547, 591 S.E.2d 450, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 1509 (2003), cert. denied, No. S04C0672, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 370 (Ga. Apr. 27, 2004).

Underrepresentation of young persons on grand jury list did not violate the requirement that the grand jury be drawn from a fair cross section of the community; the underrepresentation was explained by the jury commissioner’s compliance with the legal requirement that only a limited number of the most experienced persons on the traverse jury list be selected for inclusion on the grand jury list. Parks v. State, 254 Ga. 403, 330 S.E.2d 686, 1985 Ga. LEXIS 711 (1985).

Systematic exclusion of blacks from jury rolls where blacks constitute sizeable part of population is violation of equal protection clause. Mann v. Cox, 487 F. Supp. 147, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9894 (S.D. Ga. 1979).

No purposeful discrimination found in exclusion of blacks from jury. — Although due to the notoriety of the case in the black community, more blacks than whites had some prior knowledge of the case and were excluded for cause, this fact did not reflect “purposeful discrimination.” Hughes v. State, 257 Ga. 200, 357 S.E.2d 80, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 797 (1987).

State’s peremptory challenges of seven black veniremen was not purposefully discriminatory, where the state struck three veniremen on the basis of their employment (unemployed or recently employed) and the remaining four veniremen because they did not appear to be particularly interested in or responsive to the selection process. Evans v. State, 183 Ga. App. 436, 359 S.E.2d 174, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2716 (1987).

Where a black defendant argued that the numerical ratios reflected by the government’s strikes constituted a prima-facie showing that the prosecutor acted with discriminatory racial intent in exercising peremptory strikes, and specifically, the government struck two-thirds of the blacks from the regular panel and one-half of the blacks from the alternate panel, it was held that although the percentage of black jurors struck from a jury panel might establish a prima-facie case in some instances, it did not because of the coincidence of two factors: (1) the number of black persons on the regular panel was small and (2) the prosecutor could have, but did not, strike all of the black members of that panel. In such a case a more appropriate analysis focuses on the prosecutor’s decision-making process as to each of the seven strikes (six strikes for the regular panel and one for the alternate panel), and since the prosecutor’s statement of reasons was clear and reasonably specific, and, since the prosecutor’s explanation was credible, no discrimination was found. United States v. David, 662 F. Supp. 244, 1987 U.S. Dist.

LEXIS 5551 (N.D. Ga. 1987), aff’d, 844 F.2d 767, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 5936 (11th Cir. 1988).

Assuming, arguendo, that the striking of both black jurors on the panel raised a prima-facie showing of discrimination, the record amply supported the trial court’s finding that the prosecutor used peremptory challenges to remove those jurors for legitimate, racially-neutral reasons, including that the two prospective jurors knew key witnesses in the case, and that one of the jurors gave contradictory responses, and one gave no response, to questions concerning their knowledge about the case. Henderson v. State, 257 Ga. 434, 360 S.E.2d 263, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 908 (1987).

Defendant failed to make a prima-facie case for unlawful discrimination in showing prosecution’s use of 10 peremptory challenges to strike seven blacks from a jury panel where the prosecution accepted five black jurors prior to exhausting its strikes and there were at least three blacks on the jury; even if a prima-facie case was established, a race-neutral explanation was given as to all potential jurors stricken. Mincey v. State, 257 Ga. 500, 360 S.E.2d 578, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 918 (1987).

Facts did not support defendant’s contention that jury was selected in racially discriminatory manner. Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 281, 368 S.E.2d 742, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 276 (1988), cert. denied, 492 U.S. 925, 109 S. Ct. 3261, 106 L. Ed. 2d 606, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 3313 (1989).

Where prosecution used five of its strikes to remove black jurors from the venire, one black juror remained on the panel and served on the jury, and legitimate, race-neutral reasons were presented by the assistant district attorney for the exercise of each strike, giving “great deference” to the trial court, it cannot be said its conclusion that the strikes were not motivated by intentional discrimination was clearly erroneous. Hamm v. State, 187 Ga. App. 318, 370 S.E.2d 158, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 699 (1988).

State’s use of three of its peremptory challenges to strike prospective jurors who were black, and one peremptory challenge to strike a prospective alternate juror who was black, was for legitimate, racially-neutral reasons. Lee v. State, 258 Ga. 481, 371 S.E.2d 389, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 365 (1988).

Where the record indicated that after the jury selection had ended, the percentage of blacks on the jury had increased from the number of blacks on the panel, there was no prima facie case of discrimination, and the trial court did not err in failing to require that the prosecutor provide an explanation for using eight of his ten peremptory jury challenges against young black men. Willis v. State, 201 Ga. App. 727, 411 S.E.2d 714, 1991 Ga. App. LEXIS 1547 (1991), cert. denied, No. S92C0235, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 1016 (Ga. Dec. 4, 1991), cert. denied, No. S92C0815, 1992 Ga. LEXIS 411 (Ga. May 8, 1992).

In a Batson challenge, the trial court found that defendant made a prima facie showing of racial discrimination and proceeded to an evaluation of the state's explanations for its strikes against two African-American members of the jury venire, but the state's explanations that: (1) it struck the first prospective juror because that juror's answers did not relate to the questions asked of the juror and were not well articulated, leading the prosecutor to suspect that the juror possessed limited intelligence; and (2) it struck the second juror because the second juror's perceptions of an incident at a water fountain with another juror and the second juror's decision to report it indicated undue attention to issues of race, and that it would have struck any potential juror who reported such an incident, regardless of that juror's race were race neutral and did not show any discriminatory intent; therefore, the trial court's ruling that defendant did not carry defendant's burden of proof to show a discriminatory purpose in the state's exercise of its peremptory strikes was not clearly erroneous. Roberts v. State, 278 Ga. 541, 604 S.E.2d 500, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 948 (2004).

Establishing prima facie equal protection case of arbitrary, systematic exclusion of blacks from jury service.

— A prima facie equal protection case of arbitrary and systematic exclusion of blacks from jury service on the basis of race may be established by proof of a long and continued history of the exclusion of blacks from local juries. Brookins v. State, 221 Ga. 181, 144 S.E.2d 83, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 415 (1965).

In order to establish prima facie case of discrimination, the defendant must demonstrate that there exists a substantial disparity between the proportion of blacks chosen for jury duty and the proportion of blacks in the eligible population and that the selection procedures themselves are not racially neutral. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

Prima facie* case of purposeful racial discrimination can be established solely on evidence of the prosecutor's exercise of peremptory challenges at trial; once the defendant makes this prima facie showing, then the burden shifts to the state to come forward with a neutral explanation for its challenges to black jurors. Hillman v. State, 182 Ga. App. 47, 354 S.E.2d 673, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2587 (1987).

To make out a prima facie case of unconstitutional exclusion of a cognizable group from the jury selection process, a defendant must show more than mere exclusion of a distinct group; the defendant must show: that the group alleged to have been excluded was a distinctive group in the community; that the representation of this group on the jury venire was not fair and reasonable in relation to the number of such persons in the community; and that this underrepresentation was due to the state's systematic exclusion of the group from the venire. Willis v. Zant, 720 F.2d 1212, 1983 U.S. App. LEXIS 15206 (11th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1256, 104 S. Ct. 3546, 82 L. Ed. 2d 849, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 2740 (1984), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1256, 104 S. Ct. 3548, 82 L. Ed. 2d 851, 1984 U.S. LEXIS 311 (1984).

Equal Protection (Cont'd)*5. Selection of Juries (Cont'd)*Prima facie case of racially discriminatory peremptory challenges.

— Prima facie case of racial discrimination was established, where prosecutor used all ten peremptory challenges to strike all ten blacks from the venire. Gamble v. State, 257 Ga. 325, 357 S.E.2d 792, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 828 (1987).

Trial court's finding that defense counsel's explanation for a prima facie racially discriminatory peremptory strike was pretextual was not clear error based on defense counsel's demeanor while explaining the strike, counsel's misstating what the juror's response was during voir dire, counsel's failure to excuse similarly situated jurors, and counsel's exercise of 11 of 12 strikes against Caucasians. Nelson v. State, 271 Ga. App. 870, 611 S.E.2d 147, 2005 Ga. App. LEXIS 192 (2005).

No prima facie showing of discrimination was established, where, although the state used six of its ten peremptory challenges to strike six of the ten prospective jurors who were black, the proportion of blacks on the selected jury (one-third) was greater than the proportion of blacks on the panel (one-fourth). Williams v. State, 258 Ga. 80, 365 S.E.2d 408, 1988 Ga. LEXIS 151 (1988).

Prosecutor's use of all ten peremptory challenges to strike blacks from the jury, leaving an all-white petit jury, did not establish a prima facie equal protection violation, where although the prosecutor had previously used peremptory challenges to strike 70 black jurors, the prosecutor had allowed 72 blacks to sit as jurors, even though 65 could have been excluded through the use of peremptory challenges. Willis v. Kemp, 838 F.2d 1510, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 1792 (11th Cir. 1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1059, 109 S. Ct. 1328, 103 L. Ed. 2d 596, 1989 U.S. LEXIS 1184 (1989).

Where percentage of blacks on the jury was, as a result of the use of peremptory strikes, higher than that of the panel from which they were chosen, defendant did not show a prima facie case of discrimination. Harris v. State, 186 Ga. App. 756, 368 S.E.2d 527, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 461 (1988).

The fact that the state exercised nine peremptory strikes alone did not establish a disproportionate exercise of strikes sufficient to raise a prima facie inference that the strikes were exercised with discriminatory intent. Whitaker v. State, 269 Ga. 462, 499 S.E.2d 888, 1998 Ga. LEXIS 522 (1998).

A white defendant lacked standing to make an equal protection claim regarding the absence of blacks on the jury where the claim was based on the fact that the defendant's black defense counsel was a member of a minority and this may have adversely influenced the jury. Heaton v. State, 180 Ga. App. 718, 350 S.E.2d 480, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2773 (1986).

White defendant lacked standing to make an equal protection claim against the state for excluding all black jurors by use of peremptory challenges. McGuire v. State, 185 Ga. App. 233, 363 S.E.2d 850, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2867 (1987).

To shift burden of proof. — Statistical evidence establishing that blacks are underrepresented, together with evidence that the jury selection procedures are not radically neutral, establishes a prima facie case of invidious racial discrimination thus shifting the burden of proof to the state. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

Fact that jury commissioners have acted in good faith is not defense to the failure to discharge the affirmative constitutional duties cast upon them to compose a list of intelligent and upright jurors who represent a cross section of such persons. Simmons v. Jones, 317 F. Supp. 397, 1970 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10018 (S.D. Ga. 1970), rev'd, 478 F.2d 321, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 9958 (5th Cir. 1973).

Mere assertions by public officials that they did not exclude prospective jurors because of race are not sufficient to meet a prima facie equal protection case of arbitrary and systematic exclusion of blacks from juries. Brookins v. State, 221 Ga. 181, 144 S.E.2d 83, 1965 Ga. LEXIS 415 (1965).

Statements by jury commissioners that selection was made without regard to race does not destroy prima facie case of discrimination based on historical statistics. Mann v. Cox, 487 F. Supp. 147, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9894 (S.D. Ga. 1979).

Inquiry concerns procedures for compiling jury lists, not actual jury composition. — In determining whether there has been a denial of defendant's U.S. Const., amend. 6 right to have a jury venires selected from fairly representative cross-sections of the community, and in determining whether the defendant's rights under the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14 have been violated because members of the defendant's race have been deliberately excluded from the jury lists, the inquiry concerns the procedures for compiling the jury lists and not the actual composition of the grand or traverse jury in a particular case. Patterson v. Balkcom, 245 Ga. 563, 266 S.E.2d 179, 1980 Ga. LEXIS 855 (1980).

Inquiry into use of peremptory challenges denied. — No reversible error for trial judge's denial of defense counsel's request for an opportunity to cross-examine the prosecutor after the prosecutor had offered a race-neutral justification for each exercise of his peremptory challenges, whereby he struck five African-American males, given that seven of the twelve jurors empanelled were African-Americans. While this statistic did not negate the possibility of race discrimination, it was significant to the highly deferential undertaken review. United States v. Jiminez, 983 F.2d 1020, 1993 U.S. App. LEXIS 2271 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 925, 114 S. Ct. 330, 126 L. Ed. 2d 276, 1993 U.S. LEXIS 6511 (1993).

The court did not err in refusing to allow defense counsel to question the prosecutor with regard to the prosecutor's reasons for peremptory challenges since there is no requirement that the prosecutor's explanations for peremptory challenges be supported by facts ascertained during voir dire, and it is the duty of the trial court, rather than the party opposing the challenges, to inquire as to any suspected impropriety in determining credibility. Chavarria v. State, 248 Ga. App. 398, 546 S.E.2d 811, 2001 Ga. App. LEXIS 276 (2001), cert. denied, No. S01C0979, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 687 (Ga. Sept. 10, 2001).

Number of peremptory challenges afforded codefendants. — O.C.G.A. § 17-8-4(b), which allows defendants tried jointly 14 peremptory challenges (while O.C.G.A. § 15-12-165 allows a defendant tried alone nine such challenges) does not violate equal protection as there are valid reasons for discriminating between the peremptory challenges of single defendants and codefendants: the avoidance of undue delay and a needless burden on the public. Dixon v. State, 285 Ga. 312, 677 S.E.2d 76, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 154 (2009), overruled in part, Whitehead v. State, 287 Ga. 242, 695 S.E.2d 255, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 412 (2010).

Jury list to be supplemented if voter list used for jury selection procedures substantially racially disparate list. — If the voter list used for the selection of jurors produces a jury list showing substantial racial disparity with the voter list, U.S. Const., amend. 14 and Code 1933, § 59-106 (see O.C.G.A. § 15-12-40) require that the jury list be supplemented by other sources. Broadway v. Culpepper, 439 F.2d 1253, 1971 U.S. App. LEXIS 11567 (5th Cir. 1971) (decided under former version of O.C.G.A. § 15-12-40).

Exclusions and exemptions from jury duty. — There is nothing in U.S. Const., amend. 14 which prevents a state from excluding and exempting from jury duty certain classes (lawyers, ministers, doctors, etc.) on the bona fide ground that it is for the good of the community that their regular work should not be interrupted; provided, the exclusion is not the result of race or class prejudice. Allen v. State, 110 Ga. App. 56, 137 S.E.2d 711, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 546 (1964).

Blanket exclusion of women from jury duty is unconstitutional. Mann v. Cox, 487 F. Supp. 147, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9894 (S.D. Ga. 1979).

Statute authorizing judge to excuse homemaker with young children

from jury not unconstitutional. — The Georgia statute authorizing the trial judge to excuse a juror who is a homemaker with children 14 years of age or under does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 6 or U.S. Const., amend. 14 to the United States Constitution, for a state may have an important interest in assuring that those members of the family responsible for the care of children are available to do so. Willis v. State, 243 Ga. 185, 253 S.E.2d 70, 1979 Ga. LEXIS 847, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 178, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Blacks not on panel because all struck or otherwise disqualified. — Because there is no constitutional right to trial jury of any particular racial composition, evidence showing that although blacks were on the panel, none were on the trial jury because all were struck or otherwise disqualified, is not sufficient to show an improperly composed grand or petit jury. Stewart v. Ricketts, 451 F. Supp. 911, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17303 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Prosecutor's use of peremptory strikes to exclude blacks from the jury did not deny defendant the right to equal protection, where one juror was excused because the juror attended the same church as the defendant's parent and another was excused because the juror failed to indicate, when asked, that the juror's child had been arrested on numerous occasions. Killens v. State, 184 Ga. App. 717, 362 S.E.2d 425, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2829 (1987).

Race-neutral explanation for peremptory strikes. — Where the prosecuting attorney offered a racially neutral motivation for the exercise of peremptory strikes, that only those black prospective jurors who knew the defendant or knew of the defendant had been removed, even if a prima facie case had been made, a review of the explanations offered by the prosecutor revealed that a race-neutral explanation was given as to all of the potential jurors, accordingly, the trial court properly denied the defendant's Batson motion. Adams v. State, 186 Ga. App. 599,

367 S.E.2d 871, 1988 Ga. App. LEXIS 423 (1988).

Where the district court found that the prosecutor articulated a neutral explanation for the prosecutor's challenges for each of the excluded black jurors, since the district court's determination that the government has rebutted the prima facie case typically turns on an evaluation of the prosecutor's creditability, so a reviewing court must give the district court's findings great deference, it was held that the district court's findings was not clearly erroneous. United States v. David, 844 F.2d 767, 1988 U.S. App. LEXIS 5936 (11th Cir. 1988).

The court properly rejected the defendant's race-neutral reason for striking a juror inasmuch as the court found, with regard to that juror, no objection to jury service because of a new job or otherwise, and found an implicitly unacceptable "pattern" relevant to the strike by the defense; thus, the trial court's upholding of the state's challenge to the peremptory strike of that juror by the defense cannot be found to be clearly erroneous. Wolfe v. State, 273 Ga. 670, 544 S.E.2d 148, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 256 (2001).

State's use of peremptory challenges to dismiss blacks not unconstitutional. — There being an absence of any pattern of systematic exclusions of blacks from juries within the jurisdiction and a reasonable explanation of record for the exercise of the peremptory challenges of two black jurors, there is no merit in the enumeration that the state pursued racially motivated practices. Johnson v. State, 179 Ga. App. 467, 346 S.E.2d 903, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2624 (1986).

Prosecutor's reasons for striking black jurors were racially neutral, where peremptory challenges were used to remove nine blacks who knew defendant and one black person whose family was known to the sheriff. McCormick v. State, 184 Ga. App. 687, 362 S.E.2d 472, 1987 Ga. App. LEXIS 2823 (1987).

Prosecutor's failure to ask same questions of white juror as asked of black juror did not evidence racial animus in the exercise of a peremptory challenge. Turner v. State, 267 Ga. 149, 476 S.E.2d 252, 1996 Ga. LEXIS 728 (1996), overruled in part as stated in Byrd v. State, 314 Ga. 21, 875 S.E.2d 643, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 178 (2022).

The striking of one black juror for a racial reason violates the equal protection clause, even where other black jurors are seated, and even when valid reasons for the striking of some black jurors are shown. United States v. David, 803 F.2d 1567, 1986 U.S. App. LEXIS 33630 (11th Cir. 1986).

State cannot deprive class of persons of privilege of serving on juries by “perverted” use of peremptory challenges, although a particular defendant does not have an equal protection right to be tried by jurors of any particular race. United States v. Carlton, 456 F.2d 207, 1972 U.S. App. LEXIS 11209 (5th Cir. 1972).

Jury from which persons with scruples against death penalty excluded not fair cross section of community. — In Witherspoon v. Illinois, 391 U.S. 510, 88 S. Ct. 1770, 20 L. Ed. 2d 776 (1968), the Supreme Court decided that a jury from which persons with scruples against the death penalty have been excluded does not represent a fair cross section of the sentiment of the community. Witherspoon, however, concerns only the exclusion of persons who merely assert conscientious scruples against capital punishment; it does not proscribe the exclusion of a person who states unequivocally that the person would never impose the death penalty or that the person’s attitude toward the death penalty would prevent the person from making an impartial decision as to the defendant’s guilt. Williams v. Dutton, 400 F.2d 797, 1968 U.S. App. LEXIS 5749 (5th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1105, 89 S. Ct. 908, 21 L. Ed. 2d 799, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 2640 (1969).

Challenging for cause any juror stating reservations about death penalty. — State has right to challenge for cause any prospective juror stating reservations about capital punishment would prevent impartial decision as to a defendant’s guilt of rape. Massey v. Smith, 224 Ga. 721, 164 S.E.2d 786, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 918 (1968), cert. denied, 395 U.S. 912, 89 S. Ct. 1756, 23 L. Ed. 2d 225, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 1659 (1969).

State has right to exclude from jury any juror who states the juror could never vote to impose death penalty or that the juror would refuse even to consider its imposition in the case before the juror. Massey v. Smith, 224 Ga. 721, 164 S.E.2d 786, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 918 (1968), cert. denied, 395 U.S. 912, 89 S. Ct. 1756, 23 L. Ed. 2d 225, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 1659 (1969).

Exclusion of jurors with scruples against death penalty invalidates death sentence, not conviction. — Exclusion of jurors with scruples against the death penalty in violation of Witherspoon v. Illinois, 391 U.S. 510, 88 S. Ct. 1770, 20 L. Ed. 2d 776 (1968), does not invalidate a conviction, but only the death sentence. Williams v. Dutton, 400 F.2d 797, 1968 U.S. App. LEXIS 5749 (5th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1105, 89 S. Ct. 908, 21 L. Ed. 2d 799, 1969 U.S. LEXIS 2640 (1969).

Racial considerations in capital sentencing. — A complex statistical study that indicated a risk that racial considerations enter into capital sentencing determinations did not prove that a particular defendant’s capital sentence was unconstitutional under the eighth amendment or the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment. McCleskey v. Kemp, 481 U.S. 279, 107 S. Ct. 1756, 95 L. Ed. 2d 262, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 1817 (1987).

Death sentence cannot be executed where those opposed to capital punishment removed for cause. — A death sentence cannot constitutionally be executed if imposed by a jury from which have been removed for cause those who are opposed to capital punishment or have conscientious scruples against imposing the death penalty. Clark v. Smith, 224 Ga. 766, 164 S.E.2d 790, 1968 Ga. LEXIS 943 (1968), rev’d, 403 U.S. 946, 91 S. Ct. 2279, 29 L. Ed. 2d 859, 1971 U.S. LEXIS 1475 (1971).

Defendant has no right to have capital punishment objectors serve on guilt determination phase of trial as part of the “cross section of the community” to which the defendant is entitled. Corn v. State, 240 Ga. 130, 240 S.E.2d 694, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1423 (1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 914, 98 S. Ct. 2255, 56 L. Ed. 2d 415 (1978).

Equal Protection (Cont'd)*5. Selection of Juries (Cont'd)

Indictment of the defendant by grand jury from which members of the defendants' race are systematically excluded is denial of equal protection of the laws. Reece v. Georgia, 350 U.S. 85, 76 S. Ct. 167, 100 L. Ed. 77, 1955 U.S. LEXIS 36 (1955).

Conviction cannot stand if based on indictment of grand jury or verdict of petit jury from which blacks excluded by reason of their race. Whitus v. Georgia, 385 U.S. 545, 87 S. Ct. 643, 17 L. Ed. 2d 599, 1967 U.S. LEXIS 2452 (1967); Brown v. State, 239 Ga. 435, 238 S.E.2d 21, 1977 Ga. LEXIS 1197 (1977).

Jury must be impartially drawn from cross section of community. — Equal protection clause prohibits convicting person by jury not impartially drawn from cross section of community. Allen v. State, 110 Ga. App. 56, 137 S.E.2d 711, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 546 (1964).

Action of jury invalid when impaneling not in compliance with law. — When the impaneling of a jury is not in compliance with law, the jury as a body is not competent to act, and its action is invalid. Allen v. State, 110 Ga. App. 56, 137 S.E.2d 711, 1964 Ga. App. LEXIS 546 (1964).

Member of minority group whose race was systematically excluded from jury service entitled to new trial before a legally constituted jury. Watson v. United States, 350 F. Supp. 57, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11075 (N.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 484 F.2d 34, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8343 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 416 U.S. 940, 94 S. Ct. 1944, 40 L. Ed. 2d 291, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 576 (1974).

White person indicted and convicted by juries from which blacks were systematically excluded entitled to have conviction set aside without a showing of actual bias. Watson v. United States, 350 F. Supp. 57, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11075 (N.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 484 F.2d 34, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 8343 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 416 U.S. 940, 94 S. Ct. 1944, 40 L. Ed. 2d 291, 1974 U.S. LEXIS 576 (1974).

Standard of review of trial courts'

rulings. — Wainwright v. Witt, 469 U.S. 412, 105 S. Ct. 844, 83 L.Ed.2d 841 (1985) is not controlling authority as to the standard of review to be applied by state appellate courts reviewing trial courts' rulings on jury selection. Greene v. Georgia, 519 U.S. 145, 117 S. Ct. 578, 136 L. Ed. 2d 507, 1996 U.S. LEXIS 7648 (1996).

Jury discrimination claims must be raised in a timely fashion. One who tardily brings the claim must make a showing of cause for the failure and must also make a showing of actual prejudice. Tennon v. Ricketts, 574 F.2d 1243, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 10736 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1091, 99 S. Ct. 874, 59 L. Ed. 2d 57, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 441 (1979).

Defendant granted more peremptory challenges than state. — Equal protection clause prohibits discrimination in jury selection on the basis of gender, or on the assumption that an individual will be biased in a particular case for no reason other than the fact that the person happens to be a woman or happens to be a man, and thus the law provides a remedy for jurors who are struck for illegal reasons by the defense; O.C.G.A. § 15-12-165, which grants a criminal defendant twice as many peremptory juror challenges as the state, is not unconstitutional. Robinson v. State, 278 Ga. 134, 598 S.E.2d 466, 2004 Ga. LEXIS 524 (2004).

Time for raising claim of racial discrimination in use of peremptory challenges. — Where the record reflected that following voir dire, the jury was selected, sworn, given preliminary instructions by the trial court, and excused for lunch, and following the recess and a lengthy hearing on an unrelated defense motion, counsel for defendant moved for mistrial, claiming that defendant's constitutional rights had been violated by the prosecutor's use of peremptory challenges to exclude blacks from the jury panel, the motion should have been deemed to be timely, since there were no judicial guidelines regarding the time and manner in which such a claim is to be presented and since the defendant's motion in this regard was made relatively promptly in the course of the proceedings. Henceforth, however, any claim under Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79, 106 S. Ct. 1712, 90 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1986), should be raised prior to the time the jurors selected to try the case are sworn. State v. Sparks, 257 Ga. 97, 355 S.E.2d 658, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 752 (1987); Ford v. State, 257 Ga. 661, 362 S.E.2d 764, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 1038 (1987), rev'd, 498 U.S. 411, 111 S. Ct. 850, 112 L. Ed. 2d 935, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 660 (1991).

A contention that the prosecutor exercised peremptory challenges in a racially discriminatory manner must be raised in a timely manner, and after trial is too late. Childs v. State, 257 Ga. 243, 357 S.E.2d 48, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 781, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 970, 108 S. Ct. 467, 98 L. Ed. 2d 406, 1987 U.S. LEXIS 5018 (1987).

The rule announced by the Georgia Supreme Court in State v. Sparks, 257 Ga. 97, 355 S.E.2d 658 (1987), regarding the time for raising a claim of racial discrimination in the use of peremptory challenges, did not bar federal judicial review of petitioner's equal protection claim, where the rule had not been firmly established at the time of petitioner's trial. Ford v. Georgia, 498 U.S. 411, 111 S. Ct. 850, 112 L. Ed. 2d 935, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 660 (1991).

A state court may adopt a general rule that a claim under Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79, 106 S. Ct. 1712, 90 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1986), is untimely if it is raised for the first time on appeal, or after the jury is sworn, or before its members are selected. In any given case, however, the sufficiency of such a rule to limit all review of a constitutional claim itself depends upon the timely exercise of the local power to set procedure. Ford v. Georgia, 498 U.S. 411, 111 S. Ct. 850, 112 L. Ed. 2d 935, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 660 (1991).

The requirement that any claim under Batson v. Kentucky, 476 U.S. 79, 106 S. Ct. 1712, 90 L. Ed. 2d 69 (1986), be raised not only before trial, but in the period between the selection of the jurors and the administration of their oaths, is a sensible rule. The imposition of this rule is nevertheless subject to the United States Supreme Court's standards for assessing the adequacy of independent state procedural grounds to bar all consideration of claims under the U.S. Constitution. Ford v. Georgia, 498 U.S. 411, 111 S. Ct. 850, 112 L. Ed. 2d 935, 1991 U.S. LEXIS 660 (1991).

Timely challenge of composition of grand jury required. — A state prisoner who fails to make a timely challenge to the composition of the grand jury that indicts the prisoner cannot challenge the composition in a subsequent federal habeas corpus attack of the prisoner's state conviction. Stewart v. Ricketts, 451 F. Supp. 911, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17303 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

Time for challenge of array of grand jurors. — A challenge to the array of grand jurors may not be entertained by a trial court unless it is made prior to the return of the indictment or the defendant has shown that the defendant had neither actual nor constructive knowledge of the alleged illegal composition of the grand jury prior to the time the indictment was returned. Tennon v. Ricketts, 574 F.2d 1243, 1978 U.S. App. LEXIS 10736 (5th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1091, 99 S. Ct. 874, 59 L. Ed. 2d 57, 1979 U.S. LEXIS 441 (1979).

Failure to object at trial waives objection. — An objection on the grounds of systematic racial exclusion on grand jury should have been presented in a proper way at the trial, and upon failure to do so it is to be considered as waived and does not present a ground for habeas corpus. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 192 Ga. 634, 15 S.E.2d 873, 1941 Ga. LEXIS 533 (1941).

In order for the defendant's motion to quash the indictment and challenge to the array of the grand jurors to be entertained by the trial court, it must be made prior to the return of the indictment or the defendant must show that the defendant had no knowledge, either actual or constructive, of such alleged illegal composition of the grand jury prior to the time the indictment was returned; otherwise, the objection is deemed to be waived. Sanders v. State, 235 Ga. 425, 219 S.E.2d 768, 1975 Ga. LEXIS 899 (1975), cert. denied, 425 U.S. 976, 96 S. Ct. 2177, 48 L. Ed. 2d 800, 1976 U.S. LEXIS 1657 (1976), superseded by statute as stated in Godfrey v. Francis, 251 Ga. 652, 308 S.E.2d 806, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 938 (1983), superseded by statute as stated in State v. Dempsey, 290 Ga. 763, 727 S.E.2d 670, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 338 (2012).

Objection to composition of grand jury or traverse jury. — Objection to the composition of a grand jury must be raised by challenge to the array duly presented before the indictment is returned or by plea in abatement filed before arraignment. A like objection to the traverse jury in a criminal case must be raised by challenge to the array at the earliest opportunity the defendant has to avail the defendant of that right. Cobb v. State, 218 Ga. 10, 126 S.E.2d 231, 1962 Ga. LEXIS 416 (1962), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 948, 83 S. Ct. 499, 9 L. Ed. 2d 497, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 2320 (1963).

Complaint of exclusion of blacks from jury requires timely challenge. — In the absence of a timely challenge to the grand jury or the traverse jury, the complaint of exclusion of blacks therefrom is not reviewable. Abrams v. State, 223 Ga. 216, 154 S.E.2d 443, 1967 Ga. LEXIS 471 (1967).

Batson challenge not preserved. — Defendant failed to preserve defendant's Batson claim for review where, following the initial Batson challenge, defendant and the state agreed to the seating on the jury of a woman and an African-American, and defendant did not object when the African-American was later removed due to the African-American's failure to disclose a recent arrest. Carter v. State, 267 Ga. App. 520, 600 S.E.2d 637, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 702 (2004).

Objection to grand jury and petit jury waived as basis for habeas relief where no objection at trial. — A defendant, by failing to object at his trial to a grand jury and petit jury subsequently adjudicated unconstitutional, thereby waived the objection as a basis for habeas relief. Stewart v. Ricketts, 451 F. Supp. 911, 1978 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 17303 (M.D. Ga. 1978).

When accused not afforded opportunity to object to composition of jury, motion for new trial of habeas corpus proceedings available. —

Where a person accused of a crime is not afforded the opportunity to make appropriate objections to the illegal composition of the grand jury or the traverse jury before indictment or during the progress of the trial, the person may raise the issue by motion for new trial or by habeas corpus proceedings. Cobb v. State, 218 Ga. 10, 126 S.E.2d 231, 1962 Ga. LEXIS 416 (1962), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 948, 83 S. Ct. 499, 9 L. Ed. 2d 497, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 2320 (1963).

Six-person limitation for petit juries in certain civil actions not violative of equal protection. — The six person limitation in Code 1933, §§ 59-703 and 59-704 (see O.C.G.A. §§ 15-12-122 and 15-12-123) for petit juries in civil actions seeking recoveries of less than $5,000 exclusive of interest and costs does not deny equal protection of the laws. Wall v. Citizens & S. Bank, 247 Ga. 216, 274 S.E.2d 486, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 645 (1981).

No challenge as to selection of foreperson. — Discrimination in the selection of grand jury foremen can have little, if indeed any, appreciable effect upon a defendant's due process rights to fundamental fairness and therefore provides no basis upon which to reverse a conviction or dismiss an indictment. Ingram v. State, 253 Ga. 622, 323 S.E.2d 801, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 1039 (1984), cert. denied, 473 U.S. 911, 105 S. Ct. 3538, 87 L. Ed. 2d 661, 1985 U.S. LEXIS 3073 (1985).

6. Criminal Procedure

Differing terms of court. — O.C.G.A. §§ 15-6-3(15.1) and 17-7-171 did not combine to deprive a criminal defendant of equal protection of the law by permitting the county of adjudication to operate with only two terms of court, while other similar-sized counties operate with more terms of court. Although the defendant may have had to wait months longer for trial than similarly situated defendants in other counties, the presumptive validity of the statutes stood. Henry v. State, 263 Ga. 417, 434 S.E.2d 469, 1993 Ga. LEXIS 643 (1993).

No actual prejudice shown in 24-year delay. — Defendant's fifth and fourteenth amendment due process rights were not violated by the 24-year delay between the crimes and the indictment as defendant failed to show actual prejudice; that the defense was weakened by the absence of witnesses who had died or could not be found and by the faded memories of witnesses who testified did not satisfy the actual prejudice prong of the Wooten test. Jackson v. State, 279 Ga. 449, 614 S.E.2d 781, 2005 Ga. LEXIS 436 (2005).

Selective enforcement of criminal statute. — To be a constitutional violation, selective enforcement of a criminal statute must represent an intentional and purposeful discrimination based upon some unjustifiable standard such as race, religion, or other arbitrary classification. Sabel v. State, 250 Ga. 640, 300 S.E.2d 663, 1983 Ga. LEXIS 1022 (1983), overruled on other grounds, Massey v. Meadows, 253 Ga. 389, 321 S.E.2d 703, 1984 Ga. LEXIS 877 (1984).

Prosecutors are vested with discretion in deciding what charges to bring against what defendants based on evidentiary considerations and, where there was no evidence tending to show that the decision to prosecute defendant was based upon invidious discrimination or upon a desire to punish him for the exercise of his legal rights, there was no violation of his equal protection rights. Russell v. State, 222 Ga. App. 475, 474 S.E.2d 673, 1996 Ga. App. LEXIS 878 (1996).

Prosecution of defendant for retaliatory purpose. — There was no presumption that prosecution of defendant was undertaken for retaliatory purpose after defendant had filed a civil lawsuit against the investigating officer in a burglary case. Lee v. State, 177 Ga. App. 698, 340 S.E.2d 658, 1986 Ga. App. LEXIS 2448 (1986).

Admission of child witness' testimony. — Statute allowing a child who did not understand the meaning of an oath to testify in a child molestation case did not violate due process and equal protection principles, where the defendant had the opportunity to cross-examine the child witness and the statute applied equally to all those accused of child molestation. Sims v. State, 260 Ga. 782, 399 S.E.2d 924, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 52 (1991).

Revocation of indigent defendant's probation for failure to pay fine. —

U.S. Const., amend. 14 prohibits a state court from automatically revoking an indigent defendant's probation for failure to pay a fine and restitution without determining that the defendant did not make sufficient bona fide efforts to pay or that alternative forms of punishment were inadequate. Bearden v. Georgia, 461 U.S. 660, 103 S. Ct. 2064, 76 L. Ed. 2d 221, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 39 (1983).

Sentencing court could not revoke defendant's probation for failure to pay imposed fine and restitution, absent evidence and findings that defendant was somehow responsible for the failure or that alternative forms of punishment were inadequate. Bearden v. Georgia, 461 U.S. 660, 103 S. Ct. 2064, 76 L. Ed. 2d 221, 1983 U.S. LEXIS 39 (1983).

Forfeiture of seized controlled substances. — O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49(c), which requires prompt institution of forfeiture proceedings in cases involving the seizure of controlled substances does not violate the equal protection and due process clauses. Porter v. State, 196 Ga. App. 31, 395 S.E.2d 360, 1990 Ga. App. LEXIS 800 (1990).

Distinction between crack and powder cocaine valid. — Federated sentencing scheme for defendants convicted of possession of crack cocaine with intent to distribute did not violate equal protection, as defendant failed to produce any evidence whatsoever of discriminatory purpose by Congress or the Sentencing Commission in establishing harsher sentencing penalties for base or crack cocaine than for powder cocaine, and as rational basis requirements were met because the sentencing statutes serve legitimate government interests. United States v. Byse, 28 F.3d 1165, 1994 U.S. App. LEXIS 21906 (11th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1097, 115 S. Ct. 767, 130 L. Ed. 2d 663, 1995 U.S. LEXIS 385 (1995).

Sentencing of habitual violators. — Because the equal protection clause does not deny a state the power to treat different classes of people in different ways, the General Assembly could have reasonably concluded that habitual violators are more dangerous than those who have had their licenses suspended or revoked. Thus, a defendant was not denied equal protection when the defendant was sentenced as an habitual violator under O.C.G.A. § 40-5-58(c) rather than being sentenced under O.C.G.A. § 40-5-121. Gaines v. State, 260 Ga. 267, 392 S.E.2d 524, 1990 Ga. LEXIS 247 (1990).

Basis of sentence. — Defendant was not denied due process in sentencing because the record indicated that the trial judge did not rely on the victim's apparently false testimony in imposing the sentence, but relied on the severity of the crime. Stephenson v. State, 261 Ga. App. 402, 582 S.E.2d 492, 2003 Ga. App. LEXIS 570 (2003), cert. denied, No. S03C1448, 2003 Ga. LEXIS 880 (Ga. Oct. 6, 2003).

Exclusion of murder from those crimes to which coercion would be a defense does not deny a defendant the right to equal protection of the law. Luther v. State, 255 Ga. 706, 342 S.E.2d 316, 1986 Ga. LEXIS 671 (1986).

The feticide statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-80, does not violate equal protection by creating two classifications that are arbitrary and capricious, although O.C.G.A. § 16-12-140 punishes the offense of criminal abortion with imprisonment for not less than one year nor more than 10 years, while the Georgia feticide statute requires a life sentence, as the distinction between the sentences required by the Georgia feticide statute and the Georgia criminal abortion statute are rationally related to legitimate governmental purposes. Smith v. Newsome, 815 F.2d 1386, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 6141 (11th Cir. 1987).

Implied consent statute, O.C.G.A. § 40-5-67.1, does not violate the dictates of equal protection set forth in the Georgia and federal constitutions. Lutz v. State, 274 Ga. 71, 548 S.E.2d 323, 2001 Ga. LEXIS 450 (2001), overruled in part, Olevik v. State, 302 Ga. 228, 806 S.E.2d 505, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 898 (2017).

Pay-day lender statutes. — The trial court did not err in rejecting both the defendants' equal protection and vagueness challenges to O.C.G.A. § 16-17-1 et seq., after they were charged with violating O.C.G.A. § 16-17-2, as both the defendants, as in-state lenders, were not similarly situated with out-of-state banks designated in O.C.G.A. § 16-17-2(a)(3), and hence were subject to state regulation restricting high interest rates on loans, whereas the out-of-state banks were not; the Georgia legislature had a rational basis for creating a class based on those in-state payday lenders who were subject to state regulation, and moreover the prohibition against payday loans in whatever form transacted, was sufficiently definite to satisfy due process standards. Glenn v. State, 282 Ga. 27, 644 S.E.2d 826, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 346 (2007).

Jury instructions did not violate the equal protection clause. — Equal protection clause was not violated in charging the jury to convict if defendant was under the influence of alcohol to the extent that it was "less safe" for defendant to drive, rather than if defendant was "rendered incapable of driving safely"; the standards were legally equivalent. Johnson v. State, 268 Ga. App. 426, 602 S.E.2d 177, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 940 (2004).

Georgia witness competency statutes present a reasonable requirement regarding the minimal level of understanding for people participating in one of the most important functions of government and do not violate the equal protection clause. Ambles v. State, 259 Ga. 406, 383 S.E.2d 555, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 348 (1989).

State had standing to challenge Georgia witness competency statutes. Ambles v. State, 259 Ga. 406, 383 S.E.2d 555, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 348 (1989).

Black defendant's death sentence for the murder of a white person did not violate the eighth and Fourteenth Amendments, where, although the jurors possessed some racial prejudices, and some more so than others, defendant did not show that the jurors, either individually or as a whole, were influenced by prejudices that would make them favor the death penalty for a black person who murdered a white person. Dobbs v. Zant, 720 F. Supp. 1566, 1989 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 10805 (N.D. Ga. 1989), aff'd, 946 F.2d 1519, 1991 U.S. App. LEXIS 25048 (11th Cir. 1991).

Mandatory life sentence constitutional. — Provision that mandates a sentence of life imprisonment upon a second conviction for selling cocaine, O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d), does not violate due process or equal protection and does not violate state or federal constitutional guarantees against cruel and unusual punishment. Isom v. State, 261 Ga. 596, 408 S.E.2d 701, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 425 (1991).

The life-without-parole statute, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-16, does not violate the equal protection clause because it places the discretion to withhold the presentation of a life-without-parole sentence in cases of crimes committed before May 1, 1993, in the hands of the prosecutor. Freeman v. State, 264 Ga. 27, 440 S.E.2d 181, 1994 Ga. LEXIS 108 (1994).

Mandatory minimum sentences. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, imposing mandatory minimum sentences in certain cases, does not violate equal protection because that section bears a reasonable relationship to the legitimate legislative concern of deterring crime and ensuring that a court imposed sentence will be served in its entirety. Campbell v. State, 268 Ga. 44, 485 S.E.2d 185, 1997 Ga. LEXIS 184 (1997).

Prior convictions in sentencing. — In an action in which the defendant was convicted of shoplifting as a felon in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 16-8-14(b)(1)(C), there was no requirement that the prior convictions upon which the conviction and sentence were based be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, as there was an exception under Apprendi for such prior convictions based upon the general principle that prior convictions were generally already proved beyond a reasonable doubt; further, there was no due process violation under U.S. Const., amend. 14 because defendant received notice of the state's intent to use the prior convictions for sentencing and the defendant had an opportunity to challenge the convictions pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2(a). Redd v.

State, 281 Ga. App. 272, 635 S.E.2d 870, 2006 Ga. App. LEXIS 1074 (2006).

Allowable conditions of probation. — The court had the authority to impose as a condition of probation the requirement that defendant wear a fluorescent pink plastic bracelet imprinted with the words "D.U.I. CONVICT." Such a requirement did not impose cruel and unusual punishment or deprive defendant of equal protection and it was not an impermissibly indeterminate condition. Ballenger v. State, 210 Ga. App. 627, 436 S.E.2d 793, 1993 Ga. App. LEXIS 1295 (1993).

Decisions by parole board. — The doctrine of qualified immunity does not shield defendants Chairman of the Board of Pardons and Paroles and Parole Decisions Guidelines employee from liability for plaintiffs equal protection claim. When making a parole decision, members of a parole board may not engage in invidious discrimination based on race, religion, national origin, poverty, or some other constitutionally protected interest. Parisie v. Morris, 873 F. Supp. 1560, 1995 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 525 (N.D. Ga. 1995).

DNA sample collection from convicted felons. — Classification of subjecting convicted felons but not convicted misdemeanants to the DNA identification process was rationally related to the Georgia legislature's legitimate law enforcement purpose of creating a permanent identification record of convicted felons because the statute encompasses all convicted felons whose crimes and/or past histories were serious enough to warrant a sentence to confinement, as opposed to lesser punishment, and the legislature acted reasonably and not arbitrarily when the legislature focused on those convicted felons who were housed in a correctional facility where DNA samples could be efficiently and economically obtained. As a result, former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 (see now O.C.G.A. § 35-3-160) rationally related to the legitimate state interest the statute was intended to promote and did not violate equal protection. Quarterman v. State, 282 Ga. 383, 651 S.E.2d 32, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 580 (2007).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

U.S. Const., amend. 14 prohibits state action only; state inaction is the opposite of state action and cannot be converted into the latter through the actions of lawless individuals whose acts are nowhere included in the amendment. 1957 Ga. Op. Att'y Gen. 14.

Hearing required before administrative agency action to revoke license. — The due process clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 14 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I, require notice and a hearing before an administrative agency before any action may be taken to revoke a license; this constitutional requirement must be met, even though the act granting the right to revoke the license provides for an appeal to the superior court. 1958-59 Ga. Op. Att'y Gen. 1.

Procedure for serviceman stationed overseas to change name. — Serviceman, citizen of Georgia stationed overseas, cannot submit to jurisdiction of Japanese Family Court in order to have his name changed without relinquishing his Georgia and United States citizenship but must petition superior court in county in which the name to be changed is recorded. 1962 Ga. Op. Att'y Gen. 345.

Statutory construction. — Statutes which possibly infringe on U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14's rights should be narrowly construed, and construed as explicit, not vague, so as to avoid the question of the statute's constitutionality whenever possible. 1977 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 77-15.

Provisions concerning livestock running at large or straying (see O.C.G.A. § 4-3-1 et seq.) not void for ambiguity. — 1952-53 Ga. Op. Att'y Gen. 381 (rendered prior to amendment by Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 395).

Regulatory license tax on newspapers. — The constitutional guarantee of a free press prohibits a municipality from levying a regulatory license tax on newspapers where such a levy subjects the newspaper to operational and expression control by the municipality. 1950-51 Ga. Op. Att'y Gen. 115.

While there is no statute dealing specifically with the question of prohibition against the levying of a license tax on newspapers by a municipality, if such a levy is determined to be regulatory in nature it would be in contravention to U.S. Const., amends. 1 and 14, and would therefore be null and void. 1950-51 Ga. Op. Att'y Gen. 115.

Contributions by public utility corporations. — O.C.G.A. § 21-5-10 (see now O.C.G.A. § 21-5-30(f)), which prohibits contributions to a political campaign by persons acting on behalf of a public utility corporation regulated by the Public Service Commission, does not unconstitutionally deny equal protection to common carriers. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 82-56.

The differential treatment between regulated and nonregulated corporations imposed by O.C.G.A. § 21-5-10 (see now O.C.G.A. § 21-5-30(f)) can be justified on the ground that in granting and protecting the monopolies of public utilities, the state has the duty also to see that the power so granted is not abused and does not even appear to have a corrupting influence on the political process. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 82-56.

Regulation making vehicles entering state hospital grounds subject to search valid. — A regulation established by the Department of Human Resources which makes vehicles entering on the grounds of Central State Hospital subject to search is a valid exercise of the department's power, and does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 14. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-15.

Selection of a county board of education. — can be changed from an appointive method to an elective one by complying with Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VIII, Sec. V, Para. IV; where this is done, the one-man, one-vote principle of U.S. Const., amend. 14 is not violated by a requirement that members reside in particular militia districts, so long as their election is on a county-wide basis. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U71-14.1.

Employment of aliens. — Provisions excluding aliens from employment (see former O.C.G.A. § 45-2-7) cannot be constitutionally applied to exclude aliens from public employment except to bar them from positions that participate directly in the formulation, execution, or review of broad public policy or from positions where citizenship otherwise bears some rational relationship to the special demands of the particular position. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-74.

Admission of aliens to public schools. — Local school systems may not deny free public education to resident alien students, legally admitted to the United States or not, solely on the basis of their status as aliens; however, a local school district may charge tuition to non-resident students, citizens and aliens alike, so long as the definition of residency found in Georgia law is applied to all. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 82-81.

Citizenship requirement for licensure by State Examining Board for Certified Public Accountants. — is unenforceable under equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-4.

Rule of merit system of personnel administration requiring applicants to be United States citizens. — Rule of State Merit System of Personnel Administration providing that applicants must be citizens of the United States to be eligible to take an examination violates the equal protection clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-10.

Allowing students moving into Greek housing to void university housing contracts violative of equal protection. — Allowing students who move into Greek housing to void their contracts binding them to pay rent for university housing for the entire school year while not extending the same privilege to other students is state action which denies equal protection of the laws and as such is contrary to U.S. Const., amend. 14. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-93.

Freedom of religion guaranteed against state encroachment. — Freedom of religion constitutes one of those "fundamental principles of liberty and justice" embraced within the concept of substantive due process and hence guaranteed against state encroachment by U.S. Const., amend. 14. 1960-61 Ga. Op. Att'y Gen. 349.

Continued incarceration of defendant for failure to pay fine. — A criminal defendant may not be incarcerated beyond the period of imprisonment imposed by the defendant's sentences based solely upon the defendant's failure to pay a contemporaneously imposed fine. A separate sentence for contempt may be imposed, however, upon a judicial finding that the individual is capable of paying the fine, but has willfully refused to do so. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-32.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Right to vote generally. — The right of suffrage is a political right, as compared with a property or civil right. In the absence of an express constitutional grant of suffrage, it is not a vested, absolute, or natural right such as it is deemed a citizen cannot be deprived of except by due process of law. The right to vote is not granted to a citizen by the United States Constitution. Nor is it a privilege of a citizen of the United States under U.S. Const., amend. 14. Nor does U.S. Const., amend. 15 abridge a state’s power over suffrage, but only denies to the states any action which discriminates against citizens of the United States to qualify or vote, by reason of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. Though the Constitution of this state guarantees the right of suffrage to those who meet its qualifications, and they are entitled to register, and this right cannot be absolutely denied or taken away by legislative enactment, the legislature has the right to prescribe reasonable regulations as to how these qualifications shall be determined. The fact that a citizen who meets one of several tests provided by the Constitution had to register or reregister does not deprive him of his constitutional right of suffrage, but is only a reasonable regulation under which the right may be exercised. Franklin v. Harper, 205 Ga. 779, 55 S.E.2d 221, 1949 Ga. LEXIS 594 (1949), appeal dismissed, 339 U.S. 946, 70 S.Ct. 804, 94 L.Ed. 1361 (1950).

Protection of right to vote extends to state and federal elections. — Constitution of the United States protects right of all qualified citizens to vote in state as well as in federal elections. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981

U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. dismissed, 459 U.S. 1012, 103 S. Ct. 368, 74 L. Ed. 2d 504 (1982).

Any alleged infringement of voting rights must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized. — Since right to exercise the franchise in a free and unimpaired manner is preservative of other basic civil rights, any alleged infringement of right of citizens to vote must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. dismissed, 59 U.S. 1012, 103 S. Ct. 368, 74 L. Ed. 2d 504 (1982).

Right to vote includes right to have vote counted. — Qualified citizens not only have a constitutionally protected right to vote, but also the right to have their votes counted, a right which can neither be denied outright, nor destroyed by alteration of ballots, nor diluted by ballot box stuffing. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Voter equality generally. — Once the geographical unit for which a representative is to be chosen is designated, all who participate in the election are to have an equal vote. Gray v. Sanders, 372 U.S. 368, 83 S. Ct. 801, 9 L. Ed. 2d 821, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 1944 (1963).

The concept of political equality in the voting booth extends to all phases of state elections. Gray v. Sanders, 372 U.S. 368, 83 S. Ct. 801, 9 L. Ed. 2d 821, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 1944 (1963).

Inapplicable to party primaries. — A party primary merely chooses candidates or nominees of a political party to be submitted to the entire electorate in the general election, and is not an "election" within the meaning of that term as used in the statutory and constitutional provisions of Georgia conferring upon its citizens the right to vote in an election. The right to participate in such a primary does not come within the protection of U.S. Const., amend. 15 and U.S. Const., amend. 14. Cox v. Peters, 208 Ga. 498, 67 S.E.2d 579, 1951 Ga. LEXIS 415 (1951).

Distinctions based on race or color unconstitutional. — U.S. Const., amend. 15 forbids any distinction in the voting process based upon race or color irrespective of whether such distinction involves the actual denial of the vote. United States v. Bibb County Democratic Executive Comm., 222 F. Supp. 493, 1962 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3264 (M.D. Ga. 1962).

Source of congressional power to eliminate discrimination. — Congressional power to legislate in furtherance of the elimination of racial discrimination is derived from U.S. Const., amend. 13, the power over interstate commerce, and the power under U.S. Const., amend. 14 and 15. United States v. Bob Lawrence Realty, Inc., 474 F.2d 115, 1973 U.S. App. LEXIS 11645 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 826, 94 S. Ct. 131, 38 L. Ed. 2d 59, 1973 U.S. LEXIS 356 (1973).

Constitutionality of voter registration laws. — Ga. L., 1949, p. 1204 (see O.C.G.A. Art. 6, Ch. 2, T. 21), as against the attack on the act as a whole, does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 14, nor U.S. Const., amend. 15. Franklin v. Harper, 205 Ga. 779, 55 S.E.2d 221, 1949 Ga. LEXIS 594 (1949).

Grounds for attacking constitutionality of voter registration laws. — The mere possibility that a board of registrars may act arbitrarily or recklessly in administering the law and thereby violate constitutional rights is not a ground for declaring a voter registration act as a whole unconstitutional. Franklin v. Harper, 205 Ga. 779, 55 S.E.2d 221, 1949 Ga. LEXIS 594 (1949).

Every state official is bound by U.S. Const., amend. 14, and U.S. Const., amend. 15. United States v. Raines, 362 U.S. 17, 80 S. Ct. 519, 4 L. Ed. 2d 524, 1960 U.S. LEXIS 2012 (1960).

Segregation of polling places, although involving no actual denial of the vote, is constitutionally impermissible as the elective franchise is a junction of interest importance in the process of government and so intrinsically characteristic of the dignity of citizenship. Anderson v. Courson, 203 F. Supp. 806, 1962 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 3219 (M.D. Ga. 1962).

Impact of qualifying fee statute on exercise of franchise. — Where a state qualifying fee statute has a real and appreciable impact on the exercise of the franchise and where this impact is related to the resources of the voters supporting a particular candidate, the statute must be closely scrutinized and found reasonably necessary to the accomplishment of legitimate state objectives in order to pass constitutional muster. Stoner v. Fortson, 359 F. Supp. 579, 1972 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13889 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

At-large election system constitutional. — African-American residents of a city failed to establish that, by retaining an at-large election system for city officials, the city acted with a discriminatory purpose in violation of the federal constitution. Cofield v. City of LaGrange, 969 F. Supp. 749, 1997 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 9568 (N.D. Ga. 1997).

Elements of proof of claim that minority votes have been diluted. — Four factors are of primary importance in determining whether a plaintiff in a voting rights suit has met the burden of proving that a minority's votes are being diluted: whether minority group members have equal access to the political process; whether past discrimination has the present effect of discouraging participation by minority members in the political process; whether the policy underlying the use of the at-large district is rooted in racial discrimination; and whether the government body in question is unresponsive to the needs of the minority community. McIntosh County Branch of NAACP v. City of Darien, 605 F.2d 753, 1979 U.S. App. LEXIS 11058 (5th Cir. 1979).

Evidence of intent to discriminate. — A speech favoring a "white primary bill" made by the sponsor of the 1947 Single-Commissioner Act for Carroll County, which act was later sponsored in 1951, was evidence of an intent to discriminate against black voters in any voting legislation before the General Assembly during that session, and a finder of fact might well infer that such intent continued until 1951 when the bill was re-introduced under the same sponsorship. City of Carrollton Branch of NAACP v. Stallings, 829 F.2d 1547, 1987 U.S. App. LEXIS 13964 (11th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 936, 108 S. Ct. 1111, 99 L. Ed. 2d 272, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 1106 (1988).

When a county board of education called for a school board referendum to provide funds to build a new high school and middle school and to air condition existing school buildings and submitted the issues as separate questions to be voted on individually during the general election rather than holding the referendum on Super Tuesday, March 8, 1988, the date of the presidential primary in which Jesse Jackson was a candidate, plaintiffs, representing black citizens, failed to prove a violation of the first, thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments of the Constitution because their expert's conclusion dealt with only candidate elections, plaintiffs did not demonstrate racially polarized voting, the totality of the circumstances did not show a discriminatory effect, and there was no evidence that the board purposefully chose the general election date so as to dilute the black vote. Lucas v. Townsend, 967 F.2d 549, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 17595 (11th Cir. 1992).

Redistricting attempting to interfere with right of school board member to hold office or vote. — While voting rights and the right to run for public office are core constitutional rights, an attempted deprivation of constitutional or statutory rights is not the same as an actual deprivation. Furthermore, incurring legal fees to vindicate rights does not itself establish that those rights were violated. Thus, plaintiff, a school board member, pursuing attempted violations of plaintiff's right to run and hold a designated seat in a predefined district, could not succeed as an injunction in another lawsuit and failure of preclearance interfered with the implementation of the efforts of defendants, the local voting registrars; since the attempt to deprive plaintiff of plaintiff's constitutional rights did not succeed, neither can plaintiff's lawsuit succeed. Cook v. Randolph County, 573 F.3d 1143, 2009 U.S. App. LEXIS 15201 (11th Cir. 2009).

Submitting package bond issue to voters. — In requesting the county board of commissioners to submit a package bond issue to the voters instead of three separate bond issues, the county board of education did not time and structure the school bond referendum with the intent of diluting minority voting strength and manipulating the minority vote in violation of the First, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States. Lucas v. Townsend, 783 F. Supp. 605, 1992 U.S.

Dist. LEXIS 653 (M.D. Ga.), aff'd, 967 F.2d 549, 1992 U.S. App. LEXIS 17595 (11th Cir. 1992).

Within constitutional limitations, there is no equity in tax law. Fears v. United States, 386 F. Supp. 1223, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14379 (N.D. Ga.), aff’d, Esparza-Nevarez v. U. S., 518 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

Unconstitutionality of a tax measure derives neither from unequal imposition nor from unequal incidence, but rather from that special instance where the act is so arbitrary as to compel the conclusion that it does not involve an exertion of the taxing power, but constitutes, in substance and effect, the direct exertion of a different and forbidden power, as, for example, the confiscation of property. Fears v. United States, 386 F. Supp. 1223, 1975 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 14379 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, Esparza-Nevarez v. U. S., 518 F.2d 1405 (5th Cir. 1975).

General principle underlying the income tax statutes, ever since the adoption of U.S. Const., amend. 16, has been the computation of gains and losses on the basis of an annual accounting for the transactions of the year. Woolford Realty Co. v. Rose, 286 U.S. 319, 52 S. Ct. 568, 76 L. Ed. 1128, 1932 U.S. LEXIS 607 (1932).

"Income" not to be restrictively construed. — The power to lay and collect taxes on incomes "from whatever source derived," are words of enlargement indicating an intention that the meaning of "income" should not be restricted. Magness v. Commissioner, 247 F.2d 740, 1957 U.S. App. LEXIS 5005 (5th Cir. 1957), cert. denied, 355 U.S. 931, 78 S. Ct. 412, 2 L. Ed. 2d 414, 1958 U.S. LEXIS 1604 (1958).

State courts cannot award federal tax exemption. — Georgia state courts do not have the authority to award the federal income tax dependency exemption to a noncustodial parent. Blanchard v. Blanchard, 261 Ga. 11, 401 S.E.2d 714, 1991 Ga. LEXIS 132 (1991).

Amendment XVII

[Popular Election of Senators]

The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote. The electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State legislatures.

When vacancies happen in the representation of any State in the Senate, the executive authority of such State shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies: Provided, That the legislature of any State may empower the executive thereof to make temporary appointment until the people fill the vacancies by election as the legislature may direct.

This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any Senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the Constitution.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Effect of U.S. Const., amend. 21. — United States Const., amend. 21 took away the power to continue prosecutions begun under the National Prohibition Act before repeal of U.S. Const., amend. 18, or to enforce judgments of conviction which had not become final prior to ratification. Hosier v. Aderhold, 71 F.2d 422, 1934 U.S. App. LEXIS 3116 (5th Cir. 1934).

Whatever power was granted by U.S. Const., amend. 18 was recalled by U.S. Const., amend. 21 and, with the recall of the power, necessarily fell acts of Congress adopted thereunder. Green v. Page, 9 F. Supp. 844, 1935 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1918 (S.D. Ga. 1935).

Prospective application. — United States Const., amend. 21 is prospective and does not apply retroactively to a case where a prosecution has been completed and a valid judgment entered before its adoption. Hosier v. Aderhold, 71 F.2d 422, 1934 U.S. App. LEXIS 3116 (5th Cir. 1934).

No double jeopardy found. — General principles of double jeopardy did not bar the defendant's retrial on the malice murder charge because the verdicts were repugnant and, thus, failed to result in an event that terminated jeopardy, akin to a situation in which a mistrial is declared after a jury could not reach a verdict. McElrath v. State, 315 Ga. 126, 880 S.E.2d 518, 2022 Ga. LEXIS 296 (2022), rev'd, 601 U.S. 87, 144 S. Ct. 651, 217 L. ## JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability to state elections. — The concept of political equality in the voting booth extends to all phases of state elections. Gray v. Sanders, 372 U.S. 368, 83 S. Ct. 801, 9 L. Ed. 2d 821, 1963 U.S. LEXIS 1944 (1963).

Any alleged infringement of voting rights must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized. — Since right to exercise the franchise in a free and unimpaird manner is preservative of other basic civil rights, any alleged infringement of right of citizens to vote must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized.

Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. dismissed, 59 U.S. 1012, 103 S. Ct. 368, 74 L. Ed. 2d 504 (1982).

Right to vote includes right to have vote counted. — Qualified citizens not only have a constitutionally protected right to vote, but also the right to have their votes counted, a right which can neither be denied outright, nor destroyed by alteration of ballots, nor diluted by ballot box stuffing. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981).

Women jurors. — U.S. Const., amend. 19 does not contemplate that the state shall be required to place the names of females in the jury box. Cady v. State, 198 Ga. 99, 31 S.E.2d 38, 1944 Ga. LEXIS 367 (1944).

Amendment XX

[Terms of Office, Assembly of Congress, and Succession]

Section 1. The terms of the President and Vice President shall end at noon on the 20th day of January, and the terms of the Senators and Representatives at noon on the 3d day of January, of the years in which such terms would have ended if this article had not been ratified; and the terms of their successors shall then begin.

Section 2. The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall begin at noon on the 3d day of January, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

Section 3. If, at the time fixed for the beginning of the term of the President, the President elect shall have died, the Vice President elect shall become President. If a President shall not have been chosen before the time fixed for the beginning of his term, or if the President elect shall have failed to qualify, then the Vice President elect shall act as President until a President shall have qualified; and the Congress may by law provide for the case wherein neither a President elect nor a Vice President elect shall have qualified, declaring who shall then act as President, or the manner in which one who is to act shall be selected, and such person shall act accordingly until a President or Vice President shall have qualified.

Section 4. The Congress may by law provide for the case of the death of any of the persons from whom the House of Representatives may choose a President whenever the right of choice shall have devolved upon them, and for the case of the death of any of the persons from whom the Senate may choose a Vice President whenever the right of choice shall have devolved upon them.

Section 5. Sections 1 and 2 shall take effect on the 15th day of October following the ratification of this article.

Section 6. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years from the date of its submission.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

U.S. Const., amend. 21 is prospective. — It does not apply retroactively to a case where a prosecution has been completed and a valid judgment entered before its adoption. Hosier v. Aderhold, 71 F.2d 422, 1934 U.S. App. LEXIS 3116 (5th Cir. 1934).

The application of U.S. Const., amend. 21 was not retroactive, but prospective. Immediately upon its ratification no further powers could be exercised which were dependent solely upon authority given by U.S. Const., amend. 18 or the National Prohibition Act, but it did not make innocent past acts which were crimes when committed, nor pardon those who had committed them, but merely made acts of such character noncriminal for the future and took away from the courts the power to proceed further in the prosecution of such crimes where final judgment had not been rendered prior to the ratification of U.S. Const., amend. 21. Ellerbee v. Aderhold, 5 F. Supp. 1022, 1934 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1929 (D. Ga. 1934).

Effect of amendment. — U.S. Const., amend. 21 takes away, as of date of its ratification, December 5, 1933, the power to continue prosecutions begun under the National Prohibition Act before repeal of U.S. Const., amend. 18, or to enforce judgments of conviction which had not become final prior to ratification. Hosier v. Aderhold, 71 F.2d 422, 1934 U.S. App. LEXIS 3116 (5th Cir. 1934).

Whatever power was granted by U.S. Const., amend. 18 was recalled by U.S.

Const., amend. 21 and, with the recall of the power, necessarily fell acts of Congress adopted thereunder. Green v. Page, 9 F. Supp. 844, 1935 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 1918 (S.D. Ga. 1935).

State control over liquor generally.

— Since the passage of U.S. Const., amend. 21, the control of the liquor traffic has been left to the states. Coon v. Tingle, 277 F. Supp. 304, 1967 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 11511 (N.D. Ga. 1967).

A state has broad power under U.S. Const., amend. 21 to specify times, places, and circumstances where liquor may be sold. Levendis v. Cobb County, 242 Ga. 592, 250 S.E.2d 460, 1978 Ga. LEXIS 1291 (1978).

Under U.S. Const., amend. 21, a state may absolutely prohibit the importation of alcoholic beverages into the state or it can leave the "wet" or "dry" decision with the individual counties. Allstate Beer, Inc. v. Julius Wile Sons & Co., 479 F. Supp. 605, 1979 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 13341 (N.D. Ga. 1979).

U.S. Const., amend. 21 denies to liquor the full protection of the commerce clause, U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 3, in order to allow states to burden it with regulatory laws. Redwine v. Schenley Indus., Inc., 210 Ga. 769, 83 S.E.2d 16, 1954 Ga. LEXIS 452 (1954).

U.S. Const., amend. 21 removes spirituous liquors and alcohol from the protection of the commerce clause to the extent necessary to allow the states to adopt and enforce appropriate laws and regulations dealing with the subject, and thus to burden interstate commerce to this extent. Atkins v. Manning, 206 Ga. 219, 56 S.E.2d 260, 1949 Ga. LEXIS 423 (1949).

Even in the absence of any protection under U.S. Const., amend. 21, the sovereign states in the exercise of their reserve police power may, without offending the commerce clause, U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 3, adopt and enforce necessary laws and regulations to effectuate their own protection against illegal traffic and trade in such liquors. Atkins v. Manning, 206 Ga. 219, 56 S.E.2d 260, 1949 Ga. LEXIS 423 (1949).

Under U.S. Const., amend. 21, states and municipalities located therein are vested with broad, sweeping authority to refuse to license the sale of liquor in establishments in which even nonobscene naked dancing is performed. Jackson v. Three Acres Co., 249 Ga. 395, 291 S.E.2d 522, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1150 (1982).

Although a city issued the appellee building permits authorizing renovation of a building that would house a restaurant/lounge in which nude or partially nude dancing would be performed, and the appellee expended approximately $40,000 in renovating the building, but due to subsequently enacted adult-business zoning ordinance, was denied an alcoholic beverage license, the appellee could not compel the issuance of such license under a vested right theory. Jackson v. Three Acres Co., 249 Ga. 395, 291 S.E.2d 522, 1982 Ga. LEXIS 1150 (1982).

Imposition of strict liability for injury resulting from sale of liquor has been found to be constitutional on basis that state enjoys a particularly broad police power as a result of U.S. Const., amend. 21, repealing prohibition. Reeves v. Bridges, 248 Ga. 600, 284 S.E.2d 416, 1981 Ga. LEXIS 1132 (1981).

Amendment does not confer other powers. — Although a state may, under U.S. Const., amend. 21, discriminate against imports of intoxicating beverages, the amendment does not confer any other powers. Hornsby v. Allen, 326 F.2d 605, 1964 U.S. App. LEXIS 6831 (5th Cir. 1964).

States do not escape the operation of U.S. Const., amend. 14 in dealing with intoxicating beverages by reason of U.S. Const., amend. 21. Hornsby v. Allen, 326 F.2d 605, 1964 U.S. App. LEXIS 6831 (5th Cir. 1964).

U.S. Const., amend. 21 confers upon the states broad regulatory power over the liquor traffic within their territories. However, even in the regulation of the sales of liquor, arbitrary or unreasonable licensing procedures are in violation of the due process and equal protection clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Parks v. Allen, 409 F.2d 210, 1969 U.S. App. LEXIS 13063 (5th Cir. 1969), later appeal, 426 F.2d 610 (5th Cir. 1970).

Act imposing excise tax on wines and malt beverages is within the state's authority to determine conditions upon which liquor can come into its territory and what will be done with it after it gets there, and other alleged discriminatory provisions of the act were outside the pale of protection of the due process and equal protection clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 14, and the commerce clause, U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. 3, by reason of U.S. Const., amend. 21. Capitol Distrib. Co. v. Redwine, 206 Ga. 477, 57 S.E.2d 578, 1950 Ga. LEXIS 494 (1950).

Regulations pertaining to the sale of alcohol are entitled to special deference when challenged in court. The broad sweep of U.S. Const., amend. 21 has been recognized as conferring something more than the normal state authority over public health, welfare, and morals. Trustees of Mtg. Trust of Am. v. Holland, 554 F.2d 237, 1977 U.S. App. LEXIS 12852 (5th Cir. 1977).

Time, place and manner of sale. — Local governing bodies have broad power under U.S. Const., amend. 21 to regulate the time, place and manner of the sale of liquor. Illusions on Peachtree Street, Inc. v. Young, 257 Ga. 142, 356 S.E.2d 510, 1987 Ga. LEXIS 765 (1987).

Offer of sexually-oriented communication where alcohol served. — Although a state may have a certain amount of its police power restored to it under the twenty-first amendment that would otherwise be limited under the first amendment, the expression involved in an estabishment offering sexually-oriented communication where alcohol is served is still within the purview of the first amendment, and is still protected by Georgia's free expression guarantees. Because Georgia has no constitutional equivalent to the twenty-first amendment, the state's police power, though possibly not limited under the U.S. Constitution, is limited by Georgia's Constitution. Harris v. Entertainment Sys., 259 Ga. 701, 386 S.E.2d 140, 1989 Ga. LEXIS 532 (1989).

Section 1. No person shall be elected to the office of the President more than twice, and no person who has held the office of President, or acted as President, for more than two years of a term to which some other person was elected President shall be elected to the office of the President more than once. [District of Columbia Electors]

Section 1. The District constituting the seat of Government of the United States shall appoint in such manner as the Congress may direct:

A number of electors of President and Vice President equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives in Congress to which the District would be entitled if it were a State, but in no event more than the least populous State; they shall be in addition to those appointed by the States, but they shall be considered, for the purposes of the election of President and Vice President, to be electors appointed by a State; and they shall meet in the District and perform such duties as provided by the twelfth article of amendment.

Section 2. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Amendment XXIV

[Suffrage in Federal Elections not to be Denied by Reason of Failure to Pay any Poll or Other Tax]

Section 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote in any primary or other election for President or Vice President, for electors for President or Vice President, or for Senator or Representative in Congress, shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State by reason of failure to pay any poll tax or other tax.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Protection of right to vote extends to state and federal elections. — Constitution of the United States protects right to vote in state as well as federal elections. Duncan v. Poythress, 657 F.2d 691, 1981 U.S. App. LEXIS 17330 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. dismissed, 459 U.S. 1012, 103 S. Ct. 368, 74 L. Ed. 2d 504 (1982).

Any alleged infringement of voting rights must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized. — Since right to exercise the franchise in a free and unimpaired manner is preservative of other basic civil rights, any alleged infringement of right of citizens to vote must be carefully and meticulously scrutinized. *Duncan v. Amendment XXV

[Succession Upon the Death, Resignation, or Removal of the President]

Section 1. In case of the removal of the President from office or of his death or resignation, the Vice President shall become President.

Section 2. Whenever there is a vacancy in the office of the Vice President, the President shall nominate a Vice President who shall take office upon confirmation by a majority vote of both Houses of Congress.

Section 3 Whenever the President transmits to the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives his written declaration that he is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, and until he transmits to them a written declaration to the contrary, such powers and duties shall be discharged by the Vice President as Acting President.

Section 4. Whenever the Vice President and a majority of either the principal officers of the executive departments or of such other body as Congress may by law provide, transmit to the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives their written declaration that the President is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the Vice President shall immediately assume the powers and duties of the office as Acting President.

Thereafter, when the President transmits to the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives his written declaration that no inability exists, he shall resume the powers and duties of his office unless the Vice President and a majority of either the principal officers of the executive department or of such other body as Congress may by law provide, transmit within four days to the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives their written declaration that the President is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office. Thereupon Congress shall decide the issue, assembling within forty-eight hours for that purpose if not in session. If the Congress, within twenty-one days after receipt of the latter written declaration, or, if Congress is not in session, within twenty-one days after Congress is required to assemble, determines by two-thirds vote of both Houses that the President is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the Vice President shall continue to discharge the same as Acting President; otherwise, the President shall resume the powers and duties of his office.

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Residence for voting purposes. — A citizen over 18 years but under 21 years is sui juris for voting purposes and can establish a residence apart from the residence of the citizen’s parents. However, such citizen must still fulfill the residence requirements established by law and each application should be decided by the voter registrars in accordance with established principles of determining residence. 1971 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 71-151.

If citizens under 21 years are prohibited from establishing a residence of their own for voting purposes while citizens over 21 years are not, then voting rights are being denied to those under 21 on account of their age. 1971 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 71-151.
