rape, and other related crimes, trial counsel's decision not to object to the jury charge on kidnapping with bodily injury did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel as the trial court employed the language of the relevant statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-40, and instructed the jury that the offense of kidnapping with bodily injury occurs when a person abducts "or" steals away any person. The fact that the indictment charged the defendant with abducting "and" stealing away the victim did not require trial counsel to object to the jury charge as the statute provided only one way in which kidnapping can be committed, namely by abducting or stealing away the victim, and the jury charge using the statutory language was appropriate, even though the indictment used the conjunctive. Greene v. State, 295 Ga. App. 803, 673 S.E.2d 292 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C0862, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 259 (Ga. 2009).

Failure to object to jury charge on armed robbery. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to a discrepancy between the armed robberies as alleged in the indictment and the manner in which the jury was charged on the armed robbery offenses because the evidence uniformly showed that the article used in the robbery was a handgun; there was not a reasonable likelihood that the jury convicted the defendant of robbing the victims with a replica, which was mentioned in the trial court's charge to the jury, because each victim referred to the weapon only as a handgun and explicitly referred to the victims' fear of being shot. Green v. State, 310 Ga. App. 874, 714 S.E.2d 646 (2011), cert. denied, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 232 (Ga. 2012).

Failure to object to charge on transferred intent. — Trial counsel performed deficiently by failing to object to the giving of a charge on transferred intent and the prosecutor's closing argument addressing the inapplicable principles of transferred intent because the charge was not adjusted to the evidence since there was no evidence that the defendant was intending to shoot any other person when the defendant shot the victim so as to bring the case within the typical "innocent bystander" scenario in which the doctrine of transferred intent was applied; however, in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt, it was highly probable that the charge did not contribute to the verdict, and the defendant failed to show the requisite prejudice, in that there was no reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different had trial counsel objected to the prosecutor's argument and the trial court's charge. Boatright v. State, 289 Ga. 597, 713 S.E.2d 829 (2011).

Failure to request instruction on hearsay testimony. — Trial counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for failing to object to or request a curative instruction regarding the investigating officer's hearsay testimony in which the officer discussed the property manager's note that placed the defendant at the scene of the crime; this hearsay testimony was cumulative, so the defendant was unable to show that there was a reasonable probability that, but for the admission of the officer's testimony, the defendant would not have been found guilty of the charged offenses. Mikell v. State, 281 Ga. App. 739, 637 S.E.2d 142 (2006).

Failure to request charge on "maliciously." — Trial counsel's failure to request a charge on the definition of "maliciously" did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel in a trial on charges arising from injuries to the defendant's infant son, as the word had such obvious significance that it required no definition, and further, decisions on requests to charge involved trial tactics by counsel, which did not amount to ineffectiveness. Lindo v. State, 278 Ga. App. 228, 628 S.E.2d 665 (2006).

Failure to request instruction on specific intent. — In a prosecution under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4, counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for failing to request a jury instruction on specific intent or in objecting to the trial court's failure to give such an instruction; the jury was adequately instructed on the specific intent of the crime of child molestation, as the trial court informed the jury that child molestation was a crime of specific intent by reading the indictment to the jury and by instructing the jury on the statutory definition of child molestation, the trial court charged the jury that intent was an essential element of the crime that the state had to prove beyond a reasonable doubt, and the trial court stated that the jury would have to acquit if it found that the subject incident occurred as a result of accident. Malone v. State, 277 Ga. App. 694, 627 S.E.2d 378 (2006).

Failure to object to jury instruction on intelligence. — Because no reversible error occurred with respect to the instruction that the jury could consider the intelligence of the witnesses to decide the witnesses' credibility, the codefendant could not succeed on the alternative claim that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance in failing to object to that instruction. Howard v. State, 288 Ga. 741, 707 S.E.2d 80 (2011).

Failure to object to jury charge on impeachment. — Trial counsel was not effective for failing to object to an instruction regarding impeachment of a witness by proof of prior contradictory statements because the charge did not constitute an expression of opinion as to the guilt of the accused in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-57; the charge stated the law accurately and was mere surplusage that did not mislead the jury. Bellamy v. State, 312 Ga. App. 899, 720 S.E.2d 323 (2011).

Failure to object to jury charge on burglary. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the trial court's recharge as, contrary to the defendant's contention, the recharge did not overemphasize the state's case and cause undue prejudice to the defendant. The charge and recharge were not misleading; the charges did not imply that a burglary could not be committed in any way other than that charged and were not presented in a way which could possibly mislead the jury. Russell v. State, 322 Ga. App. 553, 745 S.E.2d 774 (2013).

Failure to request charge on lesser included offense. — Since no instruction on lesser included offenses was required, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to request such an instruction; also, in light of the attack on a detective's techniques in interviewing an alleged child victim of molestation made by trial counsel in cross-examination and closing argument, the defendant failed to show that there would have been a different outcome if counsel requested funds and called an expert witness similarly to attack those techniques, and failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance in this regard; finally, trial counsel's decision to not call two witnesses was based on sound strategy and the defendant failed to show prejudice from the failure. Tyler v. State, 279 Ga. App. 809, 632 S.E.2d 716 (2006), cert. denied, 2006 Ga. LEXIS 810 (Ga. 2006); overruled on other grounds, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56 (2007).

Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied as the trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance in failing to request jury instructions on lesser included offenses; given that the defendant failed to specify what charges should have been requested, the defendant failed to meet the defendant's burden of showing prejudice. Lawson v. State, 280 Ga. App. 870, 635 S.E.2d 259 (2006).

In a murder prosecution, the appeals court rejected the defendant's claims that trial counsel was ineffective in failing to pursue a battered woman syndrome defense and by failing to request a jury instruction on the lesser offense of voluntary manslaughter, as: (1) the evidence showed that the defendant, after consultation with counsel, instead chose to focus exclusively on the defense of justification; (2) the evidence did not support a voluntary manslaughter charge; and (3) the defendant did not want the trial court to charge on that offense. Moreover, because appellate counsel did not ask trial counsel about the decision not to seek the manslaughter instruction, that decision was presumed to be a strategic. Ballard v. State, 281 Ga. 232, 637 S.E.2d 401 (2006).

Because a trial counsel's decision not to request a jury charge on a lesser-included offense in order to pursue an all-or-nothing defense was a matter of trial strategy, and there was no indication that the defendant would have agreed to charges on lesser-included offenses, given that the defendant relied on a claim of innocence, counsel was not ineffective in failing to request an instruction on a lesser-included offense. Davis v. State, 287 Ga. App. 786, 653 S.E.2d 104 (2007).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)E. Jury Instructions (Cont'd)

Because trial counsel made a strategic decision not to present a written request for a lesser-included misdemeanor obstruction charge given that the defendant decided to pursue an “all or nothing” defense, and as a result, the trial court did not err in not charging the jury on misdemeanor obstruction, sua sponte, which would have undermined that defense, trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to request the instruction; hence, the defendant was not entitled to a new trial on those grounds. Owens v. State, 288 Ga. App. 771, 655 S.E.2d 244 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 274 (Ga. 2008).

Defendant’s trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to request jury instruction on reckless conduct as lesser-included offense of aggravated assault as there was no evidence that would support a finding that defendant’s driving a vehicle directly at a deputy and not stopping at a police roadblock was criminally negligent rather than intentional; further, trial counsel testified that the decision to not request a jury charge on the lesser included offense was a matter of trial strategy to pursue an all or nothing defense for the aggravated assault charge. Taul v. State, 290 Ga. App. 288, 659 S.E.2d 646 (2008).

Defendant failed to establish that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel because trial counsel erroneously acceded to a simple assault charge and failed to request a jury charge on battery because the jury’s finding of guilt on aggravated assault necessarily required a finding that defendant used defendant’s hands in a way that did or was likely to result in serious bodily injury, which required the jury to reject the opportunity to find mere violent injury, which would have been the basis for a simple assault. Accordingly, the trial court was authorized to find that defendant failed to meet the burden to show that defendant’s defense was so prejudiced that there was a reasonable probability that, but for counsel’s unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different. Armstrong v. State, 292 Ga. App. 145, 664 S.E.2d 242 (2008).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a jury charge on the lesser included offense of reckless conduct. Counsel explained that the defendant was adamant that the defendant was not guilty of any crime and “we didn’t want to be in a situation where a jury could just — could fall back on a lesser charge that may not have been justified.” Atwell v. State, 293 Ga. App. 586, 667 S.E.2d 442 (2008).

Evidence was insufficient to establish a reasonable probability that the jury would have found defendant guilty of voluntary manslaughter and thus trial counsel was not ineffective in requesting this instruction since the evidence demonstrated that the victim and defendant were in rival gangs; that the victim and others drove into an apartment complex to pick up a friend; that an occupant in the victim’s vehicle poked a gun out of a window; and that defendant and the defendant’s codefendant shot at the vehicle, killing the victim and wounding others. Hung v. State, 284 Ga. 796, 671 S.E.2d 811 (2009).

In a malice murder prosecution, defense counsel was not ineffective in failing to request an instruction on voluntary manslaughter, as the defendant was fully advised on this issue and decided to pursue an “all or nothing” strategy and rely solely on self-defense. Brown v. State, 285 Ga. 324, 676 S.E.2d 221 (2009).

Although the defendant claimed that trial counsel was ineffective in failing to request a jury charge on robbery as a lesser included crime in armed robbery, the defendant failed to raise that argument in the motion for new trial; thus, the defendant waived the right to argue this issue on appeal. Ransom v. State, 298 Ga. App. 360, 680 S.E.2d 200 (2009).

Because the defendant could show neither deficient performance nor prejudice due to counsel’s failure to request jury charges on lesser included offenses, defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel claim was correctly rejected by the trial court when trial counsel ensured that the jury was allowed to consider involuntary manslaughter as a lesser included offense of the felony murder counts, and the verdict form included options for finding the defendant guilty of murder or the lesser included offense of involuntary manslaughter or not guilty; since the jury found the defendant guilty of the felony murder counts, rejecting the lesser included offense of involuntary manslaughter based on reckless conduct or simple battery, there was no reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different if counsel had also requested charges on reckless conduct and simple battery. Sigman v. State, 287 Ga. 220, 695 S.E.2d 232 (2010).

During the defendant's trial for child molestation, defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to request charges on sexual battery and the defense of accident or on mistake of fact because under the evidence, charges on those subjects were not authorized; counsel testified that counsel did not seek a charge on sexual battery because the defendant denied touching the victim, and as all of the charges the defendant contended should have been requested would require that the defendant admit that the defendant touched the victim as alleged, the charges would have been inconsistent with the defense's theory that there was no touching at all and were inconsistent with the defendant's adamant denial that the defendant touched the victim as the victim contended. Kay v. State, 306 Ga. App. 666, 703 S.E.2d 108 (2010).

Defendant failed to show that defendant's trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to request jury charges as to the lesser included offenses of robbery by intimidation and theft by taking although trial counsel could not recall counsel's specific reasons for not requesting a charge on the lesser-included offenses of armed robbery, the defendant nevertheless failed to show that trial counsel's decision was not a reasonable trial strategy or that such a request would have affected the outcome of the trial. Cruz v. State, 305 Ga. App. 805, 700 S.E.2d 631 (2010).

Trial counsel's performance was not deficient due to counsel's failure to request a jury charge on simple assault as a lesser included offense of the charged crime of aggravated assault because there was no evidence showing that the defendant committed merely simple assault; the evidence showed that the defendant's assault upon the victim was with a screwdriver within the purview of the aggravated assault statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-21(a)(2). Davis v. State, 308 Ga. App. 7, 706 S.E.2d 710 (2011).

Defendant failed to demonstrate that the defendant's trial counsel erred by failing to request a jury charge on simple battery as a lesser included offense of the charged crime of aggravated assault because there was no evidence that the defendant made physical contact with the victim or caused physical harm to the victim; since the state's evidence establishes all of the elements of an offense, and there is no evidence raising the lesser offense, there is no error in failing to give a charge on the lesser offense. Davis v. State, 308 Ga. App. 7, 706 S.E.2d 710 (2011).

Defendant's trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to request a jury charge on assault as a lesser included offense of aggravated assault because the evidence did not reasonably raise the issue that the defendant was guilty only of the lesser crime. Gross v. State, 312 Ga. App. 362, 718 S.E.2d 581 (2011).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to request jury instructions on a lesser included offense because the evidence did not reasonably raise the issue that the defendant could be guilty only of the lesser crimes; trial counsel testified that based on the evidence, the defendant did not believe there was a valid basis for requesting any lesser included offenses. Ellis v. State, 316 Ga. App. 352, 729 S.E.2d 492 (2012).

Since the jury found the defendant guilty of armed robbery and rejected the lesser offense of robbery by intimidation, counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a jury charge on theft by taking as a lesser included offense as there was no reasonable probability that the outcome would have been different. Bradley v.

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)E. Jury Instructions (Cont'd)

State, 322 Ga. App. 541, 745 S.E.2d 763 (2013).

Failure to request instruction on abandonment and accessory after the fact. — In an armed robbery prosecution, defense counsel was not deficient in not requesting jury charges on the law of abandonment and accessory after-the-fact as there was no evidence that the defendant abandoned the crime before an overt act occurred, or that the defendant was an accessory after the fact rather than a party to the robbery. Bihlear v. State, 295 Ga. App. 486, 672 S.E.2d 459 (2009).

Failure to request instruction on accessory after the fact. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a jury instruction on accessory after the fact because regardless of whether any evidence would have authorized the jury to conclude that the defendant's connection with the crime of murder charged in the bill of indictment was that of an accessory after the fact, the trial court would not have been authorized to give any charge on accessory after the fact when the defendant was not indicted for both murder and hindering the apprehension of a criminal or any other offense in the nature of an obstruction of justice. Vergara v. State, 287 Ga. 194, 695 S.E.2d 215 (2010).

Failure to request limiting instruction. — Defendant's statement that the defendant had just been released from jail was an integral part of the res gestae and was admissible even though it placed the defendant's character in issue, so defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to this admissible evidence; further, the trial court gave instructions concerning the limited use of the defendant's prior felony conviction, and, thus, trial counsel's failure to request a limiting instruction had no effect on the outcome of the trial. Lee v. State, 280 Ga. 521, 630 S.E.2d 380 (2006).

Trial counsel's action in failing to request limiting instructions as to "bad character" evidence could have been strategic, so as not to highlight the evidence, and was thus presumed strategic, rather than deficient, in the absence of testimony to the contrary; since defense counsel did not testify at the motion for new trial, the defendant failed to show that any purported deficiencies in the defendant's representation amounted to ineffective assistance. Tarver v. State, 280 Ga. App. 89, 633 S.E.2d 415 (2006).

Prior inconsistent statement of a witness who took the stand and who was subject to cross-examination was admissible as substantive evidence. Thus, because the defendant, who testified at trial, was not entitled to a limiting instruction as to the use of the defendant's prior inconsistent statements, counsel was not ineffective for failing to request the instruction; likewise, the defendant's claim that counsel was ineffective for failing to object to the state's closing argument telling the jurors that they could consider this testimony as substantive evidence also failed. Gregory v. State, 297 Ga. App. 245, 676 S.E.2d 856 (2009).

Trial counsel was not ineffective by failing to request a limiting instruction regarding the jury's consideration of evidence of the defendant's prior felony convictions because assuming deficient performance in the failure to request a limiting instruction, the defendant did not establish prejudice therefrom; the defendant failed to show that the outcome of defendant's trial would have been different had the jury been told the jury was to consider the prior convictions only for the purposes of establishing the predicate offenses of the counts in which the convictions were described. Higginbotham v. State, 287 Ga. 187, 695 S.E.2d 210 (2010).

Defendant was not deprived of the defendant's right to effective assistance of counsel because the defendant's trial counsel's failure to request the limiting charge suggested by the defendant was a reasonable trial tactic and did not amount to deficient performance, and the defendant did not show that the defendant was prejudiced by trial counsel's failure to request the charge in light of the overwhelming evidence adduced against the defendant; counsel made a strategic decision not to request a charge on conspiracy on the ground that the charge could operate to the defendant's detriment. White v. State, 308 Ga. App. 38, 706 S.E.2d 570 (2011).

Failure to request circumstantial evidence instruction. — Because the evidence rested largely on the direct evidence provided by the eyewitnesses to the event, and there was no reasonable likelihood that had the circumstantial evidence charge been given to the jury the outcome of the trial would have differed, the defendant's trial counsel could not be found ineffective in failing to request the instruction. Holden v. State, 287 Ga. App. 472, 651 S.E.2d 552 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0189, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 153 (Ga. 2008).

Failure to request curative instruction. — Trial court did not err in denying defendant a new trial on grounds that the defendant's trial counsel was ineffective, as: (1) no harm resulted from trial counsel's failure to move for a curative instruction regarding a prospective juror's comment, as that juror was excused for cause; (2) counsel could have decided that additional character witnesses were unnecessary and would detract from character evidence already presented via testimony from defendant's pastor; and (3) claims regarding the failure to provide a curative instruction as to a prospective juror's opinion regarding the truthfulness of an investigator, and in allowing the jury to consider the charge of statutory rape, were waived, and even if they would have been raised before the trial court, they lacked merit. McCoy v. State, 278 Ga. App. 492, 629 S.E.2d 493 (2006).

Trial court did not err by denying a defendant's motion for a new trial based on the defendant's contention that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel regarding convictions for aggravated sexual battery and child molestation involving the defendant's eight-year-old child, since despite trial counsel acknowledging that trial counsel failed to move for a mistrial or request a curative instruction after the state questioned the defendant about a prior act of sodomy on a 14-year-old, trial counsel's objection to the testimony was sustained. Thus, the jury heard no evidence concerning the circumstances giving rise to the sodomy charge and, further, heard no evidence refuting or contradicting the defendant's testimony that the defendant was acquitted of that charge. Dyer v. State, 295 Ga. App. 495, 672 S.E.2d 462 (2009).

Defendant failed to show any prejudice from trial counsel's failure to request a curative instruction directing the jurors to consider only the predicate offenses currently before the jury because the trial court repeatedly and thoroughly instructed the jury not to consider the allegations of the indictment as evidence. Hicks v. State, 315 Ga. App. 779, 728 S.E.2d 294 (2012).

Failure to object to or request more expansive instruction. — Because the charge that was given was adjusted to the evidence and was not erroneously incomplete, defense counsel was not ineffective in failing either to object or to request a more expansive instruction. Roper v. State, 281 Ga. 878, 644 S.E.2d 120 (2007).

Failure to object to instruction did not preclude appellate review when plain error exists. — Trial court erred in instructing the jury that the jury could convict the defendant of committing terroristic threats, O.C.G.A. § 16-11-37(a), in a manner not alleged in the indictment because the indictment alleged that the defendant threatened to commit murder with the purpose of terrorizing the victim, but the trial court twice instructed the jury that terroristic threats involved any violence or any crime of violence; under the circumstances, without a remedial instruction, it was probable that the jury found the defendant guilty of committing the act of terroristic threats in a manner not charged in the indictment, and defendant's right to due process was violated due to a fatal variance between the proof and the indictment. The jury charge constituted plain error which affected substantial rights of the defendant, and thus the failure to object to the jury instruction did not preclude appellate review of the charge. Milner v. State, 297 Ga. App. 859, 678 S.E.2d 563 (2009).

Failure to request charge on limitations on consideration of prior offenses. — Because trial counsel's failure to request an adequate charge on the limits to consideration of the defendant's prior conviction for felony firearms possession did not raise a reasonable probability that but for counsel's deficient performance, the outcome of the trial would have been different, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim failed. Holsey v. State, 281 Ga. 177, 637 S.E.2d 32 (2006).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)E. Jury Instructions (Cont'd)

Failure to request bare suspicion instruction. — Defendant's contention on appeal that defense counsel was ineffective for failing to timely request a charge on bare suspicion or to object to the trial court's refusal to give the charge once requested failed because defendant was not entitled to such a charge. Additionally, the charges that the trial court gave on presumption of innocence and reasonable doubt embodied all the elements of a bare suspicion charge, rendering such a charge unnecessary. Range v. State, 289 Ga. App. 727, 658 S.E.2d 245 (2008).

Slip of the tongue in jury instruction. — Defense counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel in failing to preserve an objection to a slip of the tongue in the jury charge that did not mislead the jury. Brantley v. State, 271 Ga. App. 733, 611 S.E.2d 71 (2005).

Counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to object or request a mistrial after the trial court stated that the indictment was an implication of guilt, as any potential error was cured by multiple instructions of the trial court, and the defendant could not show that there was harm from that minor slip of the tongue. Stinchcomb v. State, 280 Ga. 170, 626 S.E.2d 88 (2006).

Although the trial court merely made a slip of the tongue when it did not properly state the state's burden of proof on one affirmative defense, the court correctly stated the burden of proof in a second affirmative defense, defendant's attorney also informed the jury about the burden of proof, and written instructions were given to the jury; accordingly, defendant's ineffective assistance of appellate counsel claim was properly denied. Arthur v. Walker, 285 Ga. 578, 679 S.E.2d 13 (2009).

Although the defendant claimed that the defense attorney failed to object to a portion of the charge to the jury regarding the defense of justification, the existence of a mere verbal inaccuracy in the jury instruction, resulting from a palpable slip of the tongue and which could not have misled or confused the jury, did not provide a basis for reversal of the conviction. Therefore, the defendant did not prevail on the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim because the defendant could not show that a reasonable probability existed that, but for counsel's errors the outcome at trial would have been more favorable. Render v. State, 288 Ga. 420, 704 S.E.2d 767 (2011).

Failure to request instruction on witness testifying under immunity. —

In a defendant's criminal prosecution for, inter alia, felony murder, defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a jury charge on a witness testifying pursuant to a grant of immunity because the witness at issue was never charged, arrested, or prosecuted as to the events forming the basis of the instant case. Watkins v. State, 285 Ga. 107, 674 S.E.2d 275 (2009).

Failure to request instruction on alibi. — Ineffective assistance of counsel claim failed because the absence of an alibi charge did not change the fact that no juror who believed the defendant's testimony could have found that the state had carried the state's burden of proof and, thus, the defendant failed to show a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different had counsel requested and received an alibi instruction. Riley v. State, 319 Ga. App. 823, 738 S.E.2d 659 (2013).

Failure to request charge on entrapment. — Trial counsel's failure to request a jury charge on entrapment was not deficient performance of counsel because the defendant was not entitled to a jury charge on entrapment; the defendant did not admit to the commission of the crime, and the state's case did not show any evidence of entrapment. Bolton v. State, 310 Ga. App. 801, 714 S.E.2d 377 (2011).

Failure to request charge on fingerprint evidence. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to request a jury charge on fingerprint evidence as the defendant failed to show that trial counsel's decision was patently unreasonable when trial counsel testified that counsel deliberately chose not to request the charge because the evidence was consistent with the defense that the defendant's fingerprints were on a television two burglars were selling because the defendant was inspecting the television to buy the television. Chandler v. State, 320 Ga. App. 516, 740 S.E.2d 256 (2013).

F. Strategic Decisions

Strategy on defendant testifying. — Defendant failed to show that defense counsel's performance was deficient regarding advising defendant as to defendants' right to testify because counsel's advise to defendant not to testify constituted trial strategy. Smith v. State, 306 Ga. App. 693, 703 S.E.2d 329 (2010).

Strategy to argue that drug did not belong to defendant. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to move to suppress evidence of the cocaine the arresting officer found on the floor. Counsel's strategy was to argue that the drug did not belong to the defendant, and the defendant would have had to admit ownership before the defendant could claim that the officer obtained the drug by exceeding the permissible scope of a patdown search. Hardy v. State, 301 Ga. App. 115, 686 S.E.2d 789 (2009).

Analyzing fingerprint evidence not material to strategy. — Defendant failed to show that defendant's trial counsel's failure to obtain a continuance to challenge fingerprint evidence was the result of deficient performance because the defendant could not show prejudice resulting from the lack of opportunity for expert review of the fingerprint report when no expert testified at the motion for new trial hearing, and without that testimony, the court of appeals could not evaluate whether there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the proceeding could have been different; the trial court noted in the new trial hearing that counsel's strategy was to contest the occurrence of any kidnapping offense and concede the lesser crimes, and further analyzing the fingerprint evidence was not material to the trial strategy. Thornton v. State, 305 Ga. App. 692, 700 S.E.2d 669 (2010).

Failure to call expert as trial strategy. — Trial counsel's decision not to call an expert was reasonable trial strategy and did not support a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel because trial counsel testified that counsel consulted with an expert, and after weighing the pros and cons of calling an expert witness at trial, counsel decided, as a matter of trial strategy, not to do so. Wade v. State, 305 Ga. App. 382, 700 S.E.2d 827 (2010), cert. denied, 131 S. Ct. 3066, 180 L. Ed. 2d 893 (2011).

Strategy about calling defendant's child as witness. — Counsel's refusal to call the defendant's child as a witness in defendant's criminal trial on charges of having molested the child's friend was a matter of trial strategy based on the child's insistence that the child would not testify that the friend had initially molested the child and that the friend was now blaming the defendant in order to cover up the friend's own actions; there was no ineffectiveness in counsel's actions. Lester v. State, 278 Ga. App. 247, 628 S.E.2d 674 (2006).

Strategy to reserve opening and closing argument. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to interview and present an allegedly exculpatory witness as counsel received during discovery the witness statement to the police and it did not point to another assailant; further, the defendant did not present the witness at the new trial hearing and trial counsel testified that their strategy was to reserve opening and closing argument. Rakestrau v. State, 278 Ga. 872, 608 S.E.2d 216 (2005).

Strategy in drug possession cases. — Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV in asking two questions on cross-examination that allegedly elicited evidence damaging to the defendant; it was defense counsel's reasonable trial strategy in the case involving constructive possession of drugs to show that the de-defendant and another person in the house were the targets of the investigation in order to raise doubt as to whether the drugs allegedly constructively possessed by the defendant were really the defendant's drugs. Jackson v. State, 281 Ga. App. 83, 635 S.E.2d 372 (2006).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)F. Strategic Decisions (Cont'd)

Strategy in questioning defendant's drug usage. — Trial counsel was not ineffective by eliciting testimony from a narcotics investigator on cross-examination that a confidential informant told the investigator that the informant had bought drugs from the defendant in the past because trial counsel's testimony provided some evidence that counsel's decision about what questions to ask on cross-examination of the investigator was a matter of reasonable trial strategy, and the defendant failed to rebut the presumption that the strategy was reasonable; trial counsel testified that counsel's trial strategy had been to show that because the investigator continued to rely upon the informant in other cases, the investigator had an incentive to exaggerate or lie about the informant's prior dealings with the defendant. Martinez v. State, 303 Ga. App. 166, 692 S.E.2d 766 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to a witness's reference to marijuana because any challenge to the testimony would have failed; even if the testimony incidentally placed the defendant's character in issue, all circumstances with an accused's arrest were admissible if the circumstances were shown to be relevant, and that was so even if the evidence incidentally put the accused's character in issue. Odom v. State, 304 Ga. App. 615, 697 S.E.2d 289, cert. denied, No. S10C1801, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 927 (Ga. 2010).

Strategy to implicate codefendants. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for new trial on the basis of ineffective assistance of counsel because the defendant failed to rebut the presumption that trial counsel performed within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance in failing to challenge hearsay testimony; requesting a curative instruction, after a successful objection by co-counsel, could have called more attention to the remark, and a remark implicating two African-Americans fit in with the defendant's trial strategy to implicate the two codefendants. Jackson v. State, 306 Ga. App. 33, 701 S.E.2d 481 (2010).

Strategy to highlight inconsistencies in testimony. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to make a hearsay objection to the investigating officer's testimony concerning statements that a witness and the victim's mother made to the officer recounting the allegations of the victim because counsel's trial strategy was to highlight the inconsistencies between what the witness and the mother said the victim told them and what the victim subsequently told the forensic interviewer. Henry v. State, 316 Ga. App. 132, 729 S.E.2d 429 (2012).

Strategy to show coaching of victim. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the trial court's determination that the victim was present and available to testify without further inquiring into the reliability of the victim's out-of-court statements under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-820) because counsel did not want the statements to be excluded in light of counsel's trial strategy to show that the victim had been coached. Henry v. State, 316 Ga. App. 132, 729 S.E.2d 429 (2012).

Failure to call expert witness matter of trial strategy. — Trial counsel's decision not to call an expert witness was within the realm of trial tactics and strategy and provided no basis for a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel because trial counsel testified that after conferring with the defendant, they decided together not to call the witness; in its order denying the defendant's motion for new trial, the trial court reviewed the evidence presented at the motions hearings and concluded that trial counsel provided a logical and strategic basis for not calling the defense expert as a witness during the trial. O'Neal v. State, 304 Ga. App. 548, 696 S.E.2d 490 (2010).

Strategic decision not to object to evidence. — Defendant failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel based on trial counsel's failure to object to certain hearsay because defense counsel testified at the hearing on the motion for new trial that the decision not to raise numerous objections, including objections to hearsay, was a tactical one; because defense counsel believed that most of the evidence was consistent with the defense, counsel chose to follow a strategy of allowing the jury to focus on that defense, rather than a strategy of disrupting the flow of the testimony with numerous technical objections, and stated further that defense counsel was "not a big fan of objecting to hearsay anyway. If you catch it too late and then stand up, then they get to hear it two or three times." Kania v. State, 280 Ga. App. 356, 634 S.E.2d 146 (2006).

Strategic decisions in general. — When the allegations of ineffectiveness of counsel refer to activities which are properly described as trial tactics which are within the exclusive province of the lawyer after consultation with the client, such decisions of counsel do not equate to ineffective assistance of counsel. Scott v. State, 157 Ga. App. 608, 278 S.E.2d 49 (1981).

Defendant did not show that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel, even though the defendant alleged that defense counsel failed to impeach a witness using a purported prior inconsistent statement, that defense counsel did not present a defense of coercion based on the fact that the defendant's crimes were committed with another man, and that defense counsel did not call character witnesses, as the trial court's finding on denying the defendant's motion for a new trial that the alleged actions all involved strategic decisions by defense counsel was not clearly erroneous. Washington v. State, 276 Ga. 655, 581 S.E.2d 518 (2003).

Defendant did not show that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel when trial counsel asked the defendant at trial about a prior conviction, when trial counsel did not attempt to exclude evidence that right before the crime was committed that the defendant was using marijuana, and when trial counsel did not redact part of a first statement about whether the defendant would take a polygraph test, as the defendant did not show that the defendant's trial counsel's actions, which involved strategic decisions, prejudiced the defendant. Collins v. State, 276 Ga. 726, 583 S.E.2d 26 (2003).

Defendant's 16 challenges to trial counsel's assistance were rejected as the challenges were decisions made after thorough investigation and client consultation, and all involved trial strategy; the decisions concerned: (1) which witnesses to call; (2) whether to put on evidence so as to preserve the final word in closing argument; (3) how to conduct cross-examinations; (4) what motions to file; and (5) what objections to make. Rowe v. State, 263 Ga. App. 367, 587 S.E.2d 781 (2003).

Trial court properly denied defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel since defense counsel met with defendant seven times, disagreed with defendant's assertion that certain defense witnesses were improperly dressed for court, rejected certain witnesses to avoid entering into evidence defendant's prior convictions, and made several other tactical decisions about the conduct of defendant's defense. Anderson v. State, 264 Ga. App. 362, 590 S.E.2d 729 (2003).

Trial court's denial of the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim was not clearly erroneous, as the record showed that trial counsel's decisions were either strategic in nature or the result of defendant's insistence; accordingly, the defendant did not show that trial counsel was inadequately prepared or that trial counsel otherwise rendered ineffective assistance. Cummings v. State, 261 Ga. App. 281, 582 S.E.2d 231 (2003), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 824, 125 S. Ct. 40, 160 L. Ed. 2d 35 (2004).

Defense counsel's decision not to object to testimony about defendant's failure to tell a police officer that defendant was on the scene to pick up defendant's friends, including both what defendant said and what defendant did not say, was a matter of trial strategy and was not ineffective assistance of counsel; defense counsel thought that the testimony was helpful to defendant because it tended to show defendant's ignorance of the codefendants' intent to commit a crime. Botelho v. State, 268 Ga. App. 129, 601 S.E.2d 494 (2004).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)F. Strategic Decisions (Cont'd)

Failure to place character in issue as strategy. — Defendant's trial counsel's decision not to place the defendant's character in issue was a matter of trial tactics and did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel. Owens v. State, 207 Ga. App. 153, 427 S.E.2d 529 (1993).

Strategic decision to avoid giving prosecution "ammunition". — Although the defendant claimed that defense counsel: (1) allegedly met with the defendant only three times prior to the defendant's felony murder trial; (2) did not seek the help of an investigator; (3) failed to subpoena witnesses who would have testified on the defendant's behalf; (4) neglected to inform the trial court that the defendant had conflicts with two prospective jurors; and (5) failed to have the defendant testify at a Jackson-Denno hearing, the defendant failed in the defendant's burden of establishing the defendant's claim of ineffective assistance, as the trial court's credibility determinations on the issue were binding if not clearly erroneous, and the trial court found that defense counsel was not deficient after hearing testimony from defense counsel that defense counsel met with the defendant numerous times, investigated the case personally, contacted the witnesses suggested by the defendant and did not find them helpful, sought other witnesses, did not recall being told of conflicts with potential jurors, and did not call the defendant at the Jackson v. Denno hearing because of a strategic decision to avoid giving the prosecution further "ammunition." Salvers v. State, 276 Ga. 568, 580 S.E.2d 240 (2003).

Strategy in shoplifting cases. — Defendant's counsel was not ineffective in the defendant's shoplifting case given that: (1) the decision not to view the videotape was a matter of trial strategy based upon counsel's knowledge that the videotape was defective and that the tape would not have been useful because the store manager saw the defendant place the items in the trunk of the defendant's car such that the police had probable cause to search the car even without the defendant's valid consent, which, also meant that, even if counsel erred, the error did not prejudice the defendant because a suppression motion would not have been successful; and (2) counsel investigated and interviewed witnesses and determined that the value of the merchandise was irrelevant due to the defendant's criminal history and also made the strategic decision not to introduce evidence regarding pricing and valuation, as that would have eliminated counsel's right to present the opening and concluding remarks during closing argument. Horne v. State, 260 Ga. App. 640, 580 S.E.2d 644 (2003).

Strategic decision not to object to officer's testimony. — Defendant did not show that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel when trial counsel did not object to the testimony of an officer who stated that the officer believed the defendant was the driver of the van involved in the accident as trial counsel's decision not to object to testimony that had already been introduced through another witness, but, instead, to attack it on the cross-examination of the officer was a matter of trial tactics and strategy, and did not show that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel. Lanning v. State, 261 Ga. App. 480, 583 S.E.2d 160 (2003).

Trial strategy decisions not basis for reversals. — Defendant's conviction for molesting the defendant's minor daughter as part of Wiccan sexual rituals had to be affirmed, even though the defendant argued ineffective assistance of counsel, as the defendant did not provide the appellate court with evidence that any of the deficiencies alleged, even if assumed to be true, actually prejudiced the defendant's coercion defense in any way; furthermore, the bulk of the allegations involved issues of trial strategy, which could not serve as the basis for the reversal of the defendant's conviction. Laymon v. State, 261 Ga. App. 488, 583 S.E.2d 165 (2003).

Defendant with burden to show not deliberate trial strategy. — Defendant's motion for a new trial was denied as the defendant failed to obtain the lawyer's testimony as to why defense counsel failed to tender the police report to impeach a detective's testimony; the defendant failed to carry the defendant's burden of establishing that the purported deficiency in trial counsel's representation was indicative of ineffectiveness and was not an example of a conscious and deliberate trial strategy. McPetrie v. State, 263 Ga. App. 85, 587 S.E.2d 233 (2003).

Strategy to brand victim as liar. — When defendant's counsel did not object to an officer's testimony which bolstered the victim, this was not ineffective assistance of counsel because the officer's statements were elicited by counsel's line of questioning, which was not an unreasonable trial strategy, because it was consistent with counsel's announced trial strategy of trying to brand the victim as a liar. Johnson v. State, 268 Ga. App. 1, 601 S.E.2d 392 (2004).

Strategic decision not to call investigator. — Because counsel's tactical decision not to call an investigator as a witness fell within the bounds of reasonable professional conduct, defendant failed to show that counsel was ineffective; accordingly, the trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion for new trial. Hunt v. State, 278 Ga. 479, 604 S.E.2d 144 (2004).

Choosing defense strategy. — Because defendant's allegations of ineffective assistance of counsel on grounds that counsel was inadequately prepared for trial were factually meritless, based on testimony given by counsel at a hearing on defendant's motion for a new trial, or did not prejudice defendant, defendant failed to prove the attorney's ineffectiveness; moreover, a decision whether to interpose certain objections and a choice made over what defenses and theories to advance was a matter of trial strategy and tactics. Eason v. State, 270 Ga. App. 120, 605 S.E.2d 830 (2004).

Strategic decision to pursue coercion defense. — Trial court did not err in concluding that defendant failed to carry defendant's burden of showing ineffective assistance; trial counsel's decision to pursue the coercion defense, O.C.G.A. § 16-3-26, for armed robbery rather than a mistaken identity defense, was clearly a strategic decision based upon the evidence. Lewis v. State, 270 Ga. App. 48, 606 S.E.2d 77 (2004).

Strategic decision not to pursue coercion defense. — Defendant was not denied the effective assistance of counsel by counsel's failure to present a coercion defense to armed robbery, aggravated assault, and kidnapping charges as the decision about what defense to present was a matter of strategy; there was no evidence that the codefendant threatened defendant during the offenses or forced the defendant to drive the getaway car and defendant did not testify about any coercion by the codefendant until the police chase. Maxey v. State, 272 Ga. App. 800, 613 S.E.2d 236 (2005).

Strategy not to object. — Defendant did not show ineffective assistance of counsel at trial despite claims that defendant's defense attorney should have made certain objections; the matter of when and how to make objections was generally a matter of trial strategy and defendant did not show that trial counsel's decision to forego making certain objections involved a professionally unreasonable choice, especially because it appeared that the impact of making the objections defendant wanted would be negligible. Ogle v. State, 270 Ga. App. 248, 606 S.E.2d 303 (2004).

Actions might have been strategic. — Defendant's counsel was not ineffective because: (1) trial counsel liberally used the transcripts to question the detective about the detectives interviews with defendant, and trial counsel brought forth the key statements by the detective regarding the voluntariness of defendant's statements issue; (2) counsel's failure to move for a mistrial or to strike a witness's answer might have been a strategic decision and defendant did not question trial counsel concerning that decision; and (3) defendant failed to show that counsel erred in failing to object to a part of the prosecutor's closing argument. Dyer v. State, 278 Ga. 656, 604 S.E.2d 756 (2004), cert. denied, 546 U.S. 845, 126 S. Ct. 95, 163 L. Ed. 2d 111 (2005).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)F. Strategic Decisions (Cont'd)

Tactical decisions. — Trial counsel's decisions not to interpose objections to the state's eliciting of purported hearsay testimony from investigators, conduct of voir dire, and failure to seek a mistrial in response to a prosecutor's second improper reference to defendant's pre-trial silence did not constitute ineffective assistance as the decisions were tactical decisions. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 69, 608 S.E.2d 602, cert. denied, 546 U.S. 987, 126 S. Ct. 571, 163 L. Ed. 2d 478 (2005).

In a case in which defendant was charged with unlawful dumping, the defendant did not show that defense counsel provided ineffective assistance by not objecting to certain testimony, as counsel made reasonable tactical decisions; even if counsel's performance were deficient, properly admitted evidence overwhelmingly showed defendant's guilt, so there was no reasonable probability that any deficiency influenced the outcome of the trial. Crouse v. State, 271 Ga. App. 820, 611 S.E.2d 113 (2005).

Counsel did not provide ineffective assistance by introducing evidence, causing counsel to lose the right to final closing argument, as this was a tactical decision; counsel had a reasonable explanation for the decision and the defendant gave no basis for concluding that the trial would have had a different result based on the order of closing argument. Giddens v. State, 276 Ga. App. 353, 623 S.E.2d 204 (2005).

Because trial counsel's decision not to object to statements that might have impugned the defendant's character was a tactical one, the trial court properly found that trial counsel was not ineffective. Page v. State, 287 Ga. App. 182, 651 S.E.2d 131 (2007).

Because counsels' advice against putting the defendant on the stand was tactical, counsel made the strategic decision not to strike a challenged juror, and the record reflected the basis for counsels' objection and motion for a mistrial during the state's closing argument, the defendant's allegations of ineffective assistance of counsel lacked merit; thus, the defendant was not entitled to a new trial as a result. Warner v. State, 287 Ga. App. 892, 652 S.E.2d 898 (2007).

Trial counsel's trial tactics and strategy could not form the basis of an ineffective assistance of counsel claim. Moreover, although the defendant initially wanted to accept a plea offer, when the defendant decided to go to trial instead, an ineffective assistance of counsel claim attached to that decision lacked merit as the defendant failed to show that counsel's advice in this regard was insufficient or erroneous. Starks v. State, 283 Ga. 164, 656 S.E.2d 518 (2008).

While defense counsel's cross-examination of an eyewitness elicited a non-responsive statement that might have impugned the defendant's character, counsel was pursuing a reasonable and legitimate trial strategy during counsel's questioning. Since counsel's decision not to object to the statement was a tactical one, counsel did not provide ineffective representation. Herieia v. State, 297 Ga. App. 872, 678 S.E.2d 548 (2009).

Defendant did not establish that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object to testimony of prior investigations of drug activity at the defendant's home. Counsel testified the failure to object was a tactical decision as counsel wanted to highlight the fact that police found only a small quantity of drugs during two of eight investigations; it could not be said that counsel's strategy was unreasonable. Kessinger v. State, 298 Ga. App. 479, 680 S.E.2d 546 (2009).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to a paramedic's testimony that the paramedic thought a domestic situation occurred because the defendant did not show that trial counsel's tactical decision not to object to the testimony was outside the range of reasonably effective assistance; trial counsel testified that counsel did not object because there was no doubt that a domestic dispute had occurred. Brockington v. State, 316 Ga. App. 90, 728 S.E.2d 753 (2012).

Decisions presumed to be strategic. — Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object to the introduction of a doll found on the victim's bed and two photographs of the same doll that were used to suggest that the victim tried to communicate by putting the doll's legs and dress in a position that suggested a sexual encounter as trial counsel did not testify at the ineffective assistance hearing and the decision was presumed to be strategic. Page v. State, 271 Ga. App. 541, 610 S.E.2d 171 (2005).

Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for failing to call the defendant's brother as a witness and for failing to object when the trial court repeated the jury charge on similar transaction evidence; these were matters of trial strategy that required trial counsel's testimony, and, because trial counsel did not testify at a hearing, trial counsel's actions were presumed strategic and were not subject to a finding of ineffective assistance. Allen v. State, 281 Ga. App. 294, 635 S.E.2d 884 (2006).

A defendant had not shown ineffective assistance of trial counsel when there had been no evidence or testimony of any kind presented to support the ineffective assistance claim; without such evidence, it was presumed that trial counsel's actions were part of trial strategy. Ingram v. State, 286 Ga. App. 662, 650 S.E.2d 743 (2007).

Because a defendant had not questioned trial counsel at the hearing on the motion for new trial about counsel's alleged failure to object to certain comments, any decision not to object was presumed to be a strategic one that did not amount to ineffective assistance. John v. State, 282 Ga. 792, 653 S.E.2d 435 (2007).

Requesting of jury charge is trial strategy. — Defense counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel in failing to request a jury charge on alibi and mere association as the decision on whether to request a jury charge was a matter of trial strategy. Brantley v. State, 271 Ga. App. 733, 611 S.E.2d 71 (2005).

Decisions on jurors to strike is trial strategy. — Defense counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel in failing to strike jurors during voir dire according to defendant's directions as the decision on which jurors to strike was a matter of trial strategy. Stevenson v. State, 272 Ga. App. 335, 612 S.E.2d 521 (2005).

Defendant was not denied the effective assistance of counsel after counsel failed to exercise a peremptory strike to strike a sitting judge from the jury panel as the defendant failed to timely advise counsel that the judge had presided over a speeding case in which the defendant had pled guilty; counsel and the codefendant's counsel coordinated their use of peremptory strikes and made a tactical decision to strike other jurors whom they found more objectionable. McKinney v. State, 274 Ga. App. 32, 619 S.E.2d 299 (2005).

Failure to object as strategy. — Counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to a police officer's hearsay testimony about the identification of defendant from a photograph as the failure to object was a matter of strategy; further, defendant could not show harm as defendant admitted that defendant was in the photograph and another witness also identified the defendant. Dillard v. State, 272 Ga. App. 523, 612 S.E.2d 804 (2005).

In a prosecution for kidnapping with bodily injury and aggravated assault, it was not ineffective assistance of counsel for the defense counsel not to object to a detective's response to a question about the defendant's last known address, in which the detective said the person defendant was staying with wanted defendant out because that person felt uneasy, as counsel believed interposing an objection would only draw further attention to a matter resolved by the trial court, when the judge directed the witness not to volunteer information, so the counsel's failure to object was reasonable trial strategy. Nelson v. State, 278 Ga. App. 548, 629 S.E.2d 410 (2006).

Although trial counsel failed to object to the testimony concerning a guilty plea of a codefendant pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-3-52 arising from the same incident that defendant was on trial for, as well as a reference to that plea by the prosecutor during closing argument, the decision not to object was a matter of trial strategy and, accordingly, deference was provided such that there was no finding of ineffective assistance. Johnson v. State, 279 Ga. App. 182, 630 S.E.2d 778 (2006).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)F. Strategic Decisions (Cont'd)

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to object to every instance of hearsay because such was made as a strategic decision not to object in order to avoid alienating a jury that would ultimately determine whether to impose a death sentence upon defendant; moreover, defendant failed to show that any prejudice resulted by counsel's conduct. Buttram v. State, 280 Ga. 595, 631 S.E.2d 642 (2006).

Defense strategy not second guessed on appeal. — Trial strategy and tactics do not equate with ineffective assistance of counsel; thus, defendant's complaints concerning inadequate preparation, limited contact with the attorney, and failure to file a suppression motion regarding a one-on-one showup identification did not rise to the level of ineffective assistance of counsel, but were merely a part of defense counsel's trial strategy which will not be second guessed on appeal. Johnson v. State, 272 Ga. App. 881, 614 S.E.2d 128 (2005).

When trial counsel testified that counsel made a strategic decision not to object to a portion of the prosecutor's closing argument so as to avoid drawing the state's attention to refuting an accident defense, the appellate court would not second-guess counsel's decision. Hill v. State, 285 Ga. App. 503, 646 S.E.2d 718 (2007).

In appeal, necessary to call attorney as to strategy. — Trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel in failing to move for a mistrial based on the continued service of a juror who approached a state's witness during trial; defendant failed to show that any deficiency in trial counsel's representation was indicative of ineffectiveness and was not an example of a conscious and deliberate trial strategy as defendant failed to call trial counsel as a witness at the hearing on defendant's motion for new trial. Cayruth v. State, 273 Ga. App. 166, 614 S.E.2d 809 (2005).

A trial court did not err by denying a defendant's motion for a new trial as to the defendant's challenge to an aggravated assault conviction based on ineffective assistance of counsel because, even though the defendant called other witnesses who offered some testimony in support of the ineffective assistance of counsel claims, the defendant never called trial counsel, allowing the trial court to properly assume that trial counsel's actions were strategy. Worthy v. State, 286 Ga. App. 77, 648 S.E.2d 682 (2007).

Strategic decision not to call deputies. — Trial counsel's failure to subpoena deputies who participated in an investigation into an incident in which defendant threw hot bleach into the face of a victim was presumed to be a matter of strategy; further, defendant failed to show prejudice from the alleged error. Payne v. State, 273 Ga. App. 483, 615 S.E.2d 564 (2005).

Strategic decision to stipulate to felon status. — Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel as counsel's decision to stipulate to the fact that defendant was a convicted felon was presumed to be a strategic decision; further, defendant failed to show that there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different had the decision not been made. Moore v. State, 274 Ga. App. 432, 618 S.E.2d 122 (2005).

Strategy as to bifurcation of trial. — Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel as counsel's failure to seek to bifurcate the possession of a firearm by a convicted felon charge from the other charges was presumed to be a strategic decision; further, defendant failed to show that there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different had the decision not been made. Moore v. State, 274 Ga. App. 432, 618 S.E.2d 122 (2005).

Strategy not to ask for lesser included offense charge. — Counsel was not ineffective for choosing not to ask for a lesser included offense charge as trial counsel made defendant aware of counsel's trial strategy, which led defendant to decide to not ask for the charge, and was diligent in conferring with defendant throughout the trial; there were no indications that the trial's outcome would have been different but for the alleged ineffective acts. Mendoza v. State, 274 Ga. App. 662, 618 S.E.2d 712 (2005).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for asking for a charge on a lesser-included offense because the trial court's finding that counsel discussed the strategy of seeking a charge on the lesser-included offense with the defendant, who did not oppose the charge, was supported by the record and was not clearly erroneous; therefore, the court of appeals had to accept the charge. Sheats v. State, 305 Ga. App. 475, 699 S.E.2d 798 (2010).

Strategy to sever trial from codefendants. — When counsel's failure to seek to sever defendant's trial from that of defendant's accomplice was based on trial strategy, counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel. Thornton v. State, 279 Ga. 676, 620 S.E.2d 356 (2005).

Defendant was not denied the effective assistance of counsel, and claims that the counsel was ineffective by failing to: (a) offer testimony of certain alibi witnesses; (b) adequately consult with the defendant prior to trial; and (c) move to sever the trial from that of the codefendants were rejected, given that the defendant never provided counsel with any alibi witnesses, a claim that counsel failed to consult with the defendant was unfounded, and counsel's strategy to have the codefendants tried together was sound. Adkins v. State, 280 Ga. 761, 632 S.E.2d 650 (2006).

In a trial for malice murder, felony murder, and cruelty to children, a defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel because the defendant's attorney failed to move to sever the defendant's trial from that of the defendant's codefendant and failed to object to the prosecutor's allegedly improper closing argument; trial counsel testified that counsel did not seek a severance so that the jury would focus the jury's outrage on the codefendant rather than the defendant, and the prosecutor's use of phrases such as "I think" and "I know" did not amount to an impermissible statement of personal opinion. Jackson v. State, 281 Ga. 705, 642 S.E.2d 656 (2007).

Strategy to admit polygraph. — Counsel's stipulation to the admission of the results of defendant's polygraph examination at trial was permissible trial strategy, so the defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel. Thornton v. State, 279 Ga. 676, 620 S.E.2d 356 (2005).

Strategy in child molestation and sexual battery case. — Defendant did not show that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel after the defendant was convicted of aggravated sexual battery and four counts of child molestation based on various incidents involving defendant's three nieces; the record showed that counsel did introduce evidence to impeach the victims' testimony by showing that the victims had a propensity to lie and that counsel also showed the victims' motivation for fabricating stories, and, thus, it did not matter that another attorney might have tried the case differently. Aaron v. State, 275 Ga. App. 269, 620 S.E.2d 499 (2005).

Failure to interview witness as trial strategy. — In an armed robbery case, defense counsel's failure to interview an alleged alibi witness was not ineffective assistance because it was a matter of trial strategy, as: (1) the witness was unsure defendant was in the witness's home on the night of the robbery, so it could not be said that defendant had a strong alibi defense; (2) the witness gave no credible explanation for the witness's failure to come forward as a possible alibi witness; and (3) three witnesses identified defendant as one of the perpetrators of the robbery, so, even if counsel's failure to interview the witness was deficient, no reasonable probability was shown that any such deficiency affected the trial's outcome. Shannon v. State, 275 Ga. App. 550, 621 S.E.2d 540 (2005).

Failure to preserve motion for mistrial as strategy. — Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV, during a trial on charges of kidnapping and other crimes, as trial counsel's decision not to preserve a motion for mistrial was a matter of trial strategy, as counsel did not wish to reinforce the matter of improper character evidence in the minds of the jury, and counsel was not ineffective for failing to make a Batson challenge as to two jurors as counsel believed the challenge would not be successful, which was not an unreasonable decision given that the state gave racially neutral reasons for the strikes of the jurors in question. Adams v. State, 276 Ga. App. 319, 623 S.E.2d 525 (2005).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)F. Strategic Decisions (Cont'd)

Strategic decisions virtually unchallengeable. — Trial counsel's strategic decisions made after thorough investigation are virtually unchallengeable, and provide no grounds for reversal unless such tactical decisions are so patently unreasonable that no competent attorney would have chosen those strategies; defendant failed to establish that defendant was entitled to a new trial based on alleged instances of ineffective assistance of counsel in failing to object to the testimony of the child counselor which impermissibly bolstered the child victim's credibility, failing to request that the counselor first testify outside the presence of the jury in order to establish that the child's out-of-court statements bore sufficient indicia of reliability, replaying the videotape of the forensic interview, calling the child psychologist as a witness while not calling other potential defense witnesses, failing to introduce testimony regarding the child's prior false accusations of sexual misconduct, failing to impeach the testimony of the child's current foster parents, and failing to object to evidence of physical abuse. Frazier v. State, 278 Ga. App. 685, 629 S.E.2d 568 (2006), overruled on other grounds, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56 (2007).

Presumption made that trial tactics strategic. — While the defendant submitted an exhaustive list of alleged errors to support allegations of trial counsel's ineffectiveness, the claims lacked merit as they merely listed counsel's deficiencies with arguments that were perfunctory, at best; further, absent testimony explaining counsel's rationale, the court had to presume that the trial decisions made were strategic. Hall v. State, 282 Ga. App. 562, 639 S.E.2d 341 (2006).

Trial counsel was not deficient for failing to present evidence showing that a company breached the company's contract with the defendant because the defendant failed to show that trial counsel's actions were not strategic; even if trial counsel performed deficiently, the defendant could not establish that the defendant was prejudiced by counsel's performance. Bearden v. State, 316 Ga. App. 721, 728 S.E.2d 874 (2012).

Overall defense trial strategy. — Supreme Court of Georgia rejected the defendant's five ineffective assistance of counsel claims as lacking merit because the defendant failed to show that trial counsel's trial tactics and investigation were deficient, counsel explained that choices as to when and when not to object were part of the overall defense trial strategy, the defendant failed to show prejudice by permitting the state to elicit speculation that the person who killed the victim could be the person who called an anonymous tip line to suggest various suspects, and any claims not raised in the defendant's motion for a new trial were waived. Lynch v. State, 280 Ga. 887, 635 S.E.2d 140 (2006).

Use of accident defense as strategic. — Defense counsel's decision to pursue an accident defense was an informed strategic choice and was not ineffective assistance of counsel as the decision was not due to a misunderstanding of the law or the facts of the case; rather, counsel consulted with the defendant and learned that the defendant contended that the gun accidentally discharged; there was no evidence that the defendant pointed the gun at the victim before the shooting occurred and there was no dispute as to how the fatal injury was inflicted. Mayberry v. State, 281 Ga. 144, 635 S.E.2d 736 (2006).

Strategy of admitting sexual activity between victim and defendant. — Counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for admitting in the opening and closing statements that the defendant performed sexual acts with the victim; this was a matter of trial strategy that did not amount to ineffective assistance. Hutchens v. State, 281 Ga. App. 610, 636 S.E.2d 773 (2006), overruled on other grounds, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56 (2007).

Strategy to portray ex-spouse as vengeful and bitter. — Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for tendering expired protective orders issued against the defendant into evidence in a case in which the defendant was accused of stalking the wife and of burning the spouse's house; the trial counsel's strategy was reasonable, as the trial counsel attempted to discredit the spouse by portraying the spouse as a bitter and vengeful ex-spouse manipulating the legal system. Fields v. State, 281 Ga. App. 733, 637 S.E.2d 136 (2006), overruled on other grounds, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56 (2007).

Strategy to admission of hearsay. — Trial court properly determined that defendant's counsel was not ineffective in eliciting improper hearsay testimony from a witness for the state regarding the identification of the defendant and in failing to object to improper character evidence, as it was a matter of trial strategy not to object to certain testimony in order to minimize it by not bringing it to the jury's attention. Johnson v. State, 279 Ga. App. 182, 630 S.E.2d 778 (2006).

Counsel's trial strategy in failing to object to hearsay from a non-testifying codefendant was supported by a decision that the testimony was more beneficial than prejudicial, and that the complained-of testimony was necessary to refute the state's theory that the gun admitted against the defendant could have been thrown from the defendant's car; moreover, the defendant failed to show that but for the admission of that evidence, the outcome of the trial would have been different. Ross v. State, 281 Ga. App. 891, 637 S.E.2d 491 (2006).

Because the way trial counsel chose to handle the trial and present the defendant's defense did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel, when although counsel elicited prejudicial hearsay, the related questions were based on a strategic decision to attempt to show that the police had very little to link the defendant to the crimes charged, and any damaging hearsay was cumulative of testimony by the defendant's girlfriend, the claim lacked merit. Allen v. State, 286 Ga. App. 469, 649 S.E.2d 583 (2007).

Strategy for speedy trials. — Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for failing to file a demand for a speedy trial; at the time defense counsel discovered that the defendant wanted a speedy trial, a request would have been untimely, and the decision not to file a speedy trial request was a tactical one, and counsel believed that the defendant's best chance was if the state's strong case fell apart over time. Jenkins v. State, 282 Ga. App. 55, 637 S.E.2d 785 (2006).

Strategy to allow admission of simple battery arrest. — Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for failing to object to the prosecutor's impeachment of the defendant through reference to the defendant's arrest for simple battery; trial counsel made the strategic decision not to object to questioning of the defendant about the defendant's simple battery arrest because the arrest had previously been referenced and counsel did not want to appear that the defendant had something to hide, and, once the defendant addressed the issue on direct, an objection by defense counsel to questioning on cross-examination would have been meritless. Mattis v. State, 282 Ga. App. 49, 637 S.E.2d 787 (2006).

Strategy to allow victim's testimony during guilt—innocence phase. — Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for making the strategic decision not to object to the victim's testimony during the guilt/innocence portion of the trial about the victim's injuries; since the defendant's testimony was likely to show that the defendant severely struck the victim, the victim's testimony was not important, and defense counsel decided not to further emphasize it by objecting. Mattis v. State, 282 Ga. App. 49, 637 S.E.2d 787 (2006).

Strategy in questioning detective's testimony. — No ineffectiveness of counsel was shown in a defendant's malice murder trial by the trial counsel's purported bolstering of the testimony of a detective who was a prosecution witness; when, after pointing out inconsistencies and contradictions in the testimony of a witness whose statements the detective had relied upon in concluding that the defendant was responsible for the murder, the trial counsel asked the detective whether, in light of those matters, the detective believed the witness, the trial counsel was engaging in trial strategy intended to undermine the testimony of the witness rather than seeking to bolster that testimony. Green v. State, 281 Ga. 322, 638 S.E.2d 288 (2006).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)F. Strategic Decisions (Cont'd)

Strategy in shaken baby cases. — In a shaken baby case, defense counsel was not ineffective in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV in allegedly failing to adequately investigate the medical evidence or to thoroughly cross-examine the expert forensic pediatrician; the trial strategy, which was generally unassailable in an ineffective assistance claim, was for the defendant to argue that the defendant did not injure the victim and that the defendant did not know how the injuries occurred, and, although defense counsel questioned the forensic pediatrician about the possibility that one of the other children, ages four and five, who had allegedly been alone with the victim, committed the crime, there was no evidence, as the defendant claimed, that defense counsel was blaming the other children for the offense. Mahan v. State, 282 Ga. App. 201, 638 S.E.2d 366 (2006).

Disagreement with strategy is not ineffective assistance. — Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel as the trial counsel objected to the testimony of a state's witness, but the objection was overruled; that the defendant and the appellate counsel disagreed with the difficult decisions regarding trial tactics and strategy made by the trial counsel did not require a finding that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel. Revells v. State, 283 Ga. App. 59, 640 S.E.2d 587 (2006).

In a defendant's appeal of convictions for murder, felony murder, and aggravated assault, the defendant failed to rebut the presumption that defense counsel's conduct fell within the range of reasonable professional assistance as to defense counsel introducing the fact that the defendant was on probation at the time of the murder, which defense counsel chose to do in order to offer an explanation to the jury of why the defendant was afraid to report the victim's death to the police; even though a different attorney might have chosen a different trial strategy, that did not equate to ineffective assistance of counsel. Warbington v. State, 281 Ga. 464, 640 S.E.2d 11 (2007).

Strategic decisions did not amount to ineffectiveness. — Trial counsel's strategic decisions in representing the defendant did not amount to ineffectiveness as: (1) the defendant's own self-serving general statements regarding a purported psychological condition at the time of the offense were insufficient to substantiate any claim of a mental condition which would have provided a possible defense; (2) counsel's determination to rely exclusively on the prior difficulties between the defendant and the victim proved no deficiency; and (3) no ineffectiveness resulted by counsel's failure to object to the prosecutor's alleged improper remarks during closing argument. Nichols v. State, 281 Ga. 483, 640 S.E.2d 40 (2007).

The defendant's trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to object to specifically challenged testimony presented against the defendant, and a new trial was not warranted based on the ineffectiveness, as: (1) counsel explained at the hearing on the new trial motion that objections were not made for strategic and tactical reasons, so as to not draw attention to some of the testimony; (2) some of the testimony hurt the credibility of the state's witnesses while enhancing the credibility of the defense theory; (3) counsel attempted to engender sympathy for the defendant; and (4) the defendant failed to show that the outcome of the trial would have been different if the objections would have been made. Walls v. State, 283 Ga. App. 560, 642 S.E.2d 195 (2007).

Decision not to object to the admission of a codefendant's guilty plea could have been the result of reasonable trial strategy; since defendant did not call the defendant's trial counsel to testify at the hearing on the motion for new trial, and in the absence of evidence to the contrary, counsel's decisions were presumed to be strategic and thus insufficient to support an ineffective assistance of counsel claim. In any event, the evidence of the defendant's guilt was overwhelming, there was no reasonable probability the outcome would have been more favorable had counsel done the things defendant claimed that counsel should have, and no prejudice was shown. Washington v. State, 285 Ga. 541, 678 S.E.2d 900 (2009).

Trial court did not err by denying a defendant's motion for a new trial based on the defendant's contention that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel regarding convictions for aggravated sexual battery and child molestation involving the defendant's eight-year-old child as the trial transcript confirmed that trial counsel attempted to use the allegations that the defendant had abused siblings in the past in an effort to impeach or discredit the young victim on the premises that the young victim received the information from the other parent, which was trial strategy that did not amount to ineffective assistance. Dyer v. State, 295 Ga. App. 495, 672 S.E.2d 462 (2009).

Trial court did not err by denying the defendant's motion for new trial on the ground of ineffective assistance of counsel because the defendant's claims of ineffectiveness were basically unsubstantiated conclusions when many of the instances of alleged deficient performance, such as the alleged failure to properly or "ardently" examine witnesses, failure to make certain objections, failure to elicit certain testimony, and the failure to request certain charges fell under the heading of trial strategy and generally would not support a claim for ineffective assistance of counsel; although the defendant contended that counsel failed to pursue a motion to suppress on fingerprint evidence, the defendant made no attempt to show that the motion would have been successful. Moore v. State, 301 Ga. App. 220, 687 S.E.2d 259

(2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0544, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 333 (Ga. 2010).

Defendant failed to meet defendant's burden of showing deficient performance and prejudice from trial counsel's actions because trial counsel's decisions to not give an opening statement and to not cross-examine the state's witnesses were reasonable trial strategies and did not amount to ineffective assistance; at the hearing on the defendant's motion for new trial, counsel testified that counsel made a strategic decision not to give an opening statement in order to "leave the door open" for counsel to pursue whatever strategy would turn out to be the most advantageous for the defendant after hearing the evidence that the state would present, and the defendant failed to show what favorable evidence could have been elicited from the witnesses who were not cross-examined by defendant's trial attorney. Lawrence v. State, 286 Ga. 533, 690 S.E.2d 801 (2010).

There was no merit to the defendant's claim that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel on the ground that defendant's trial attorney failed to learn Georgia law on child molestation and did not know that the Georgia rape shield statute did not apply to child molestation and sexual battery cases based upon trial counsel's testimony to the contrary during the motion for new trial hearing because to the extent the defendant argued that the alleged lack of knowledge precluded a defense based upon an alleged sexual relationship between the victim and the defendant's son, trial counsel testified that counsel actually considered and rejected that defense as a matter of trial strategy; even though counsel decided to advocate a different defense, counsel still brought out some evidence from which a jury could infer that such a relationship existed. Wade v. State, 305 Ga. App. 382, 700 S.E.2d 827 (2010), cert. denied, 131 S. Ct. 3066, 180 L. Ed. 2d 893 (2011).

Trial court did not err when the court denied the portion of the codefendant's motion for new trial alleging ineffective assistance of trial counsel because the alleged deficiencies in trial counsel's performance were either without factual basis or were decisions made as matters of trial strategy; trial counsel did not speak with the deputy medical examiner who performed the autopsy before trial because the autopsy report was favorable to the codefendant's version of events, and trial counsel testified counsel did not ask for a jury instruction on voluntary manslaughter because it would have required an admission that the codefendant had committed an unlawful act. Smith v. State, 290 Ga. 428, 721 S.E.2d 892 (2012).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)F. Strategic Decisions (Cont'd)

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the prosecutor's remarks about the defendant because counsel employed a reasonable strategy in an effort to minimize the potential effect of the similar transaction evidence that had been admitted at trial; therefore, counsel's decision not to object to the state's further comment on the defendant was reasonable as well. Wheeler v. State, 290 Ga. 817, 725 S.E.2d 580 (2012).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object when the first victim testified that the first victim had been scared to come to court and testify because the first victim had been held at gunpoint during the robbery, that the first victim did not want to get involved, and that the first victim did not want to put the first victim in danger, as such presumably strategic decisions could not support a claim of ineffectiveness. Wickerson v. State, 321 Ga. App. 844, 743 S.E.2d 509 (2013).

Defendant did not show that trial counsel was ineffective. Defense counsel's failure to object to hearsay because counsel knew that the statements would be corroborated by the defendant's testimony later in the trial was trial strategy; counsel's failure to object to statements that counsel thought would be admissible as part of the res gestae was reasonable trial strategy; counsel believed that certain testimony was not hearsay and would also work to the defendant's benefit; counsel chose not to object to prior consistent testimony of the victim because counsel believed that the testimony showed that some of the victim's testimony was inconsistent and thus would undermine the victim's credibility; and contrary to the defendant's contention, certain testimony did not show that the defendant had a prior criminal history. Abernathy v. State, 299 Ga. App. 897, 685 S.E.2d 734 (2009).

Strategic decisions not basis for ineffective assistance claim. — Defendant's claims of ineffective assistance of counsel lacked merit as some of the alleged errors were strategic decisions which could not be the basis for such a claim and there was no evidence that absent the alleged errors by counsel that the outcome of the trial would have been different. Pinson v. State, 266 Ga. App. 254, 596 S.E.2d 734 (2004).

Trial strategy not ineffective assistance. — Trial court did not commit reversible error when the court: (1) granted the state's motion in limine prohibiting admission of evidence that another person confessed to the crime; (2) permitted a police officer to explain the officer's conduct under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-2; and (3) allowed the state to introduce evidence of defendant's prior misdemeanor convictions under O.C.G.A. §§ 24-2-2 and 24-9-20(b); thus, defendant failed to show that counsel's trial strategies on these issues constituted ineffective assistance of counsel. Harris v. State, 279 Ga. 522, 615 S.E.2d 532 (2005).

Defense counsel's representation was not deficient merely because counsel failed to properly challenge the state's use of eyewitness identification evidence, failed to request a jury instruction on eyewitness identification, and failed to interview and subpoena a crucial defense witness as: (1) counsel's trial strategy could not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel; (2) defendant failed to show that had counsel pursued these endeavors, the outcome would have been different; and (3) the witness defendant sought would not have helped defendant's defense. Winfield v. State, 278 Ga. App. 618, 629 S.E.2d 548 (2006).

Strategy for evidence seized pursuant to defective warrant affidavit. — The trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's plea withdrawal motion on ineffective assistance of counsel grounds as the evidence showed that trial counsel made a reasonable strategic decision, based on the defendant's own statements that failed to show standing, not to move for suppression of the evidence seized pursuant to an allegedly defective warrant affidavit, and as a result the defendant failed to show prejudice based upon that failure. Lawton v. State, 285 Ga. App. 45, 645 S.E.2d 571 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 670 (Ga. 2007).

Strategy on impeachment of witnesses. — Because the record showed that trial counsel's decision to not impeach a state's witness with evidence of two prior shoplifting convictions was part of a sound trial strategy to preserve the right to make the final closing argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71, and counsel instead pursued alternative impeachment methods to establish bias, counsel was not ineffective; moreover, given this fact and the state's evidence, it was unlikely that introduction of the shoplifting convictions would have produced a different outcome at trial. Duggan v. State, 285 Ga. App. 273, 645 S.E.2d 733 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 662 (Ga. 2007).

Partially successful strategic decisions within range of professional conduct. — Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to several comments made by the prosecutor during closing argument in which the prosecutor potentially interjected extrinsic evidence and the prosecutor's opinion with respect to witness credibility; defense counsel stated that counsel had not believed that the prosecutor's argument was very effective, and based on the testimony that defense counsel made deliberate, even partially successful, strategic decisions during the closing argument, the trial court did not clearly err in finding that the representation was within the wide range of reasonable professional conduct. Phillips v. State, 284 Ga. App. 683, 644 S.E.2d 535 (2007).

Reasonable trial strategy found. — A defendant had not shown that trial counsel was ineffective with regard to a witness, and counsel's actions were the result of a reasonable trial strategy; a component of the defense was that an investigator was persecuting the defendant because the defendant had rebuffed the investigator's sexual advances, and trial counsel did not wish to ask the witness about a discussion with the investigator because it would emphasize to the jury that at an earlier stage in the investigation than suited this theory, the investigator had information implicating the defendant. Conway v. State, 281 Ga. 685, 642 S.E.2d 673 (2007).

The defendant's numerous claims of ineffective assistance of counsel were rejected as the way counsel handled the defense was part of a reasonable trial strategy, even though the defendant claimed that counsel should have: (1) conducted a more in depth voir dire; (2) called the experts who prepared allegedly exculpatory laboratory reports; (3) examined the alibi witnesses about their prior criminal histories; (4) presented evidence to counter the state's evidence of robbery as a motive; and (5) interviewed the defendant's Army friend to determine that a discharge against that individual was dishonorable; even if counsel had undertaken these steps, the outcome would not have changed. Tolbert v. State, 282 Ga. 254, 647 S.E.2d 555 (2007).

The defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims lacked merit as a motion to strike or for a mistrial after the state's expert offered an opinion as to the victim's failure to immediately report the abuse was meritless, and counsel's decision as to how to present the defendant's testimony fell within the realm of reasonable trial strategy, and therefore could not be considered deficient. Gaines v. State, 285 Ga. App. 654, 647 S.E.2d 357 (2007).

Because trial counsel did not provide the defendant with ineffective assistance to the extent that the relevant strategic decisions made would not have affected the outcome of the trial, and counsel properly chose not to object to the court's failure to merge a kidnapping and false imprisonment conviction, as they were independent offenses, the defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied. Snelson v. State, 286 Ga. App. 203, 648 S.E.2d 647 (2007).

A defendant had not shown ineffective assistance of counsel since counsel cited

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)F. Strategic Decisions (Cont'd)

strategic reasons for failing to file a motion to sever offenses, for failing to object to the service of a juror who had a prior first-offender conviction, and for failing to object to identification testimony; counsel's failure to file a motion for a directed verdict based on the sufficiency of the evidence did not prevent the defendant from challenging the sufficiency of the evidence, and certain objections would have been meritless. Griffith v. State, 286 Ga. App. 859, 650 S.E.2d 413 (2007).

Strategy that backfired is not ineffective assistance. — While with the benefit of hindsight, it appeared that trial counsel's strategy might have backfired, the circumstances did not support a finding of ineffectiveness; further, because the defendant failed to show a reasonable probability that the result of the trial would have been different had counsel done things differently, the defendant's claims failed. Boyt v. State, 286 Ga. App. 460, 649 S.E.2d 589 (2007).

Defendant's claim that trial counsel's failure to preserve an issue constituted ineffective assistance of counsel was without merit because trial counsel's testimony showed that counsel pursued the reasonable strategy, however mistaken it could appear with hindsight, of placing the damaging information before the jury through the defendant's direct testimony, rather than risk having the information extracted from the defendant on cross-examination. Collier v. State, 288 Ga. 756, 707 S.E.2d 102 (2011).

Defendant failed to show ineffective assistance of counsel because the defendant, in view of the strength of the evidence implicating the defendant in the shootings of the two victims, failed to show that trial counsel's choice of strategies was unreasonable, and, thus, ineffective. The fact that the defendant, in hindsight, questioned the efficacy of the chosen defense strategy did not establish ineffective assistance. Jimmerson v. State, 289 Ga. 364, 711 S.E.2d 660 (2011).

Strategy on photographs. — A defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims failed as photographs showing weapons inside the defendant's house were relevant to issues before the jury and it was part of defense counsel's trial strategy to admit that the defendant grew marijuana and to deny that the defendant was involved in a home invasion. Medlin v. State, 285 Ga. App. 709, 647 S.E.2d 392 (2007).

Strategy to present alibi defense. — Counsel was not ineffective for presenting an alibi defense when the defendant contended before trial that the defendant was at home when the crime occurred; counsel's decision was a reasonable trial tactic and did not amount to ineffectiveness because the defendant and the defendant's present counsel questioned its efficacy. Johnson v. State, 282 Ga. 235, 647 S.E.2d 48 (2007).

Strategy on alibi defense. — Defendant failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel based on defense counsel's strategy in not presenting evidence that the defendant was at the defendant's mother's home on the night of the crime as an alibi defense because counsel testified that although the defendant offered multiple alibi defenses, the defendant did not tell counsel that the defendant was at the mother's home on the night of the murder, that counsel did not consider the defendant's mother a good source of defense evidence because the mother's extensive history of substance abuse presented a major obstacle to the mother's credibility, and that counsel believed that the defendant's fiancé was not credible because the fiancé had previously posed as a reporter conducting interviews about the murder and counsel believed there was a high probability of that fact damaging the defendant's defense; counsel also testified that counsel did not want to introduce any evidence in order to preserve the right to opening and closing argument, which was a valid trial strategy. Phillips v. State, 280 Ga. 728, 632 S.E.2d 131 (2006).

Defendant failed to establish a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel based on counsel's failure to present an alibi witness because counsel testified that counsel thought the jury would believe that the alibi witness, the defendant's sister, was lying for the defendant, and because counsel did not call the sister in order to preserve the right to final closing argument; further, because variances in the pronunciation and spelling of proper names were immaterial, an objection based on such variances would have been futile and trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object. Walker v. State, 280 Ga. App. 457, 634 S.E.2d 93 (2006).

Strategy to focus on alibi witness. — During defendant's trial for aggravated stalking and criminal trespass, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to introduce evidence of a hotel receipt or for failing to object to an improper question impeaching a defense witness; trial counsel's decision to focus on defendant's alibi witness was a matter of trial strategy which was not patently unreasonable. Reed v. State, 309 Ga. App. 183, 709 S.E.2d 847 (2011).

Strategy on alibi witness. — Ineffective assistance of counsel claims raised by the defendant on appeal were rejected as the evidence presented failed to show how counsel's additional meetings with the defendant would have aided the defense and how counsel's oversights during trial were prejudicial; but, the evidence sufficiently showed that counsel's decision not to call certain alibi witnesses who could not help the defense was part of an effective trial strategy. Smith v. State, 281 Ga. App. 587, 636 S.E.2d 748 (2006).

Defendant's counsel did not provide ineffective assistance during the defendant's trial for armed robbery and other crimes by failing to present an alibi witness; the testimony at the hearing on the motion for new trial showed that the witness could not have provided an alibi for the defendant for the time when the alleged crimes occurred, and it followed that failure to call the witness did not constitute ineffective assistance. Metoyer v. State, 282 Ga. App. 810, 640 S.E.2d 345 (2006).

Strategy on use of experts. — Because it appeared that trial counsel's strategy was to convince the court that insufficient circumstantial evidence had been presented in order to convict the defendant, and counsel's decision not to hire an expert to testify as to how quickly the defendant could become intoxicated was a tactical matter to avoid getting into a battle of the experts, those decisions did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel sufficient to warrant a new trial. O'Connell v. State, 285 Ga. App. 835, 648 S.E.2d 147 (2007).

Strategy of different attorneys not controlling. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for not emphasizing that no blood was found in the rooming house where a murder defendant and the victim lived; defense counsel had established the absence of forensic evidence, which would include blood evidence, inside the house, and had emphasized this during closing argument, and it could not be said that counsel was ineffective simply because another attorney might have placed more or a different emphasis on the evidence. Jones v. State, 282 Ga. 306, 647 S.E.2d 576 (2007).

Strategy on re-reading of testimony. — In light of trial counsel's reasonable strategy in acquiescing in the trial court's refusal to permit the jury to re-hear the testimony of a witness, trial counsel's performance was not deficient; counsel was concerned that re-reading the testimony would place undue emphasis on it. Williams v. State, 282 Ga. 561, 651 S.E.2d 674 (2007).

Strategy not to impeach witness. — Trial counsel's decision not to impeach a witness and to develop that witness as a suspect in the murder for which the defendant was on trial, as part of the strategy to preserve the right to final argument under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71, did not amount to deficient performance. Eason v. State, 283 Ga. 116, 657 S.E.2d 203 (2008).

Strategic decisions on jury instructions. — Defendant did not show that trial counsel was ineffective for not requesting certain charges as these would have been inconsistent with the defendant's "mere presence" defense. Thus, the trial court properly found that this was a strategic decision made in the exercise of reasonable professional judgment. Whitley v. State, 293 Ga. App. 605, 667 S.E.2d 447 (2008).

In an aggravated sodomy case, counsel was not ineffective when counsel failed to object to hearsay statements made by the state's witnesses as part of a strategy to bolster the witnesses; when counsel agreed to exclude any evidence of the victim's criminal history on the ground that counsel believed that the jury would be offended if counsel appeared to be attacking the victim; and when counsel did not request a lesser included offense instruction because counsel believed that the defendant would be convicted on a lesser offense and that counsel's strategy was that the jury would either believe the defense or they would not. Eller v. State, 294 Ga. App. 77, 668 S.E.2d 755 (2008).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)F. Strategic Decisions (Cont'd)

Strategy to “put everything on the table.” — Trial counsel was not ineffective for having the defendant testify about the defendant's criminal history, as the trial counsel stated that counsel had discussed this issue with the defendant and had decided that the best strategy was to “put everything on the table” to make the defendant seem credible; furthermore, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to make meritless objections. Gonzales v. State, 286 Ga. App. 821, 650 S.E.2d 401 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1765, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 70 (Ga. 2008).

Strategy to “put everything out there.” — Counsel was not ineffective in allowing the defendant to testify about the defendant's criminal history as this was part of counsel's trial strategy to “put everything out there,” so that the jury would be convinced the defendant was telling the truth. Spencer v. State, 296 Ga. App. 828, 676 S.E.2d 274 (2009).

Defendant failed to demonstrate ineffective assistance of counsel in the defendant's prosecution for, inter alia, robbery by force because it was a reasonable strategy to agree to the admission under former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-6-609) of a prior 1992 Texas conviction for possession of cocaine, although the conviction was over 10 years old, as the defendant testified on the defendant's own behalf and wanted to put it all out there. Everett v. State, 297 Ga. App. 351, 677 S.E.2d 394 (2009).

Strategy as to testimony of defendant.

— In a defendant's prosecution for, inter alia, felony murder, defense counsel's opening statement that the defendant would testify to explain why the defendant carried a gun was not ineffective assistance for causing a negative inference when the defendant did not testify as defense counsel used proper strategy in not having the defendant testify after concluding that the state failed to carry the state's burden during trial. Watkins v. State, 285 Ga. 107, 674 S.E.2d 275 (2009).

Strategy regarding prosecutor's “ludicrous” and “crazy” comments.

— Counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the state's opening comment that the defendant's story was “ludicrous” and “crazy.” Counsel testified that counsel did not object because the statement was not evidence and because objecting could bring attention to the comments; this was a conscious and deliberate trial strategy. Raymond v. State, 298 Ga. App. 549, 680 S.E.2d 598 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1791, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 47 (Ga. 2010).

Counsel's strategy eminently reasonable.

— Because trial counsel's strategic decision to basically admit the conduct underlying the allegations against defendant and to argue that defendant's actions amounted at most to lesser-included offenses was eminently reasonable, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel. Biggins v. State, 299 Ga. App. 554, 683 S.E.2d 96 (2009).

Strategy to discuss defendant's jail time on prior charge.

— Trial counsel was not ineffective by eliciting testimony from the defendant that the defendant met a confidential informant while in jail, by questioning the defendant about the circumstances surrounding defendant's arrest on a prior charge, and by asking the defendant when the defendant got out of jail on that charge because trial counsel testified that counsel made a strategic decision to ask questions pertaining to the defendant's stint in jail on the prior charge based upon representations the defendant made during their pre-trial meetings together, and trial counsel made the tactical decision to have the defendant testify that the defendant had once shared a jail cell with the informant and had witnessed the informant hurt other inmates on several occasions and that any negative effects of explaining to the jury why the defendant had been in jail would be outweighed by the overall positive effects of the jail-related testimony on defendant's entrapment defense; trial counsel was not required to anticipate that the defendant would mislead counsel about the prior charge, and because the questions posed by counsel on direct examination were based upon the misleading information supplied by the defendant, any resulting prejudice was attributable to the defendant, not to the ineffectiveness of defendant's trial counsel. Martinez v. State, 303 Ga. App. 166, 692 S.E.2d 766 (2010).

Trial counsel's revealing that defendant had recently been released from prison on a separate offense did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel in defendant's child molestation trial as it was a strategy used in an attempt to show that the child's parent fabricated the molestation incident in an effort to return the defendant to prison. Bentley v. State, 314 Ga. App. 599, 724 S.E.2d 890 (2012).

Reasonable strategy to not seek jury charge on accident. — Defendant, who was convicted of aggravated assault and aggravated battery, was not denied effective assistance of counsel because it was reasonable trial strategy to not seek a jury charge on accident, particularly as the facts did not warrant such an instruction, and to not object to admission of prior acts testimony, particularly as the overwhelming evidence of guilt made it unlikely that the evidence contributed to the verdict. Arnold v. State, 303 Ga. App. 825, 695 S.E.2d 299 (2010).

Strategy not to pursue medical defense. — Defendant could not prove that defendant received ineffective assistance because defendant's trial counsel made a reasonable strategic decision not to pursue a medical defense or present expert testimony on the issue; trial counsel made an informed decision not to pursue the medical defense through expert testimony based upon the representations made to counsel by the defendant over the course of several client interviews and in light of counsel's assessment that a jury would be unlikely to view the defense as plausible, and the effectiveness of trial counsel's strategic decision to defend on the alternative ground that the defendant did not commit the alleged criminal acts was demonstrated by the fact that the jury acquitted the defendant of several of the charged offenses. Coats v. State, 303 Ga. App. 818, 695 S.E.2d 285 (2010).

Strategy to concede certain offenses. — Trial counsel did not place the defendant's character in issue by conceding the defendant's guilt of aggravated assault because the concession related to the facts alleged and crimes charged in the case, not to other transactions reflective of the defendant's character; given that numerous witnesses testified that the defendant had a bat on the night in question and struck the victim in the head with the bat while only one witness testified that the defendant took the victim's wallet out of victim's pocket, trial counsel's strategy of contesting only the armed robbery count was reasonable and not ineffective. Taylor v. State, 304 Ga. App. 395, 696 S.E.2d 686 (2010).

Strategy not to move for mistrial or object. — Defendant could not establish that defendant's trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object or move for a mistrial after the prosecutor cross-examined the defendant about whether the defendant had been previously arrested for driving under the influence or had been dishonorably discharged from the military because trial counsel's decision not to object or move for a mistrial was a reasonable trial strategy; defense counsel made the strategic decision to wait until closing argument to respond to the prosecutor's questions, and counsel's strategic decision was not patently unreasonable. Boggs v. State, 304 Ga. App. 698, 697 S.E.2d 843 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to move for a mistrial when a state's witness interjected bad character evidence because trial counsel explained that counsel did not move for a mistrial as a matter of trial strategy since counsel did not believe that a mistrial was warranted and did not want to draw further attention to the objectionable facts; trial counsel's strategy in that regard was not unreasonable. Boatright v. State, 308 Ga. App. 266, 707 S.E.2d 158 (2011).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)F. Strategic Decisions (Cont'd)

Strategy on similar transaction evidence. — Trial counsel did not impugn the defendant's character during opening statement because counsel testified that counsel made the statement in anticipation of the state introducing similar transaction evidence; counsel's decision to address the problem of similar transaction testimony in counsel's opening statement was clearly strategic. Sheats v. State, 305 Ga. App. 475, 699 S.E.2d 798 (2010).

Strategy showing parent's hatred of child. — Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel when defendant's trial counsel failed to object to testimony by the victim's parent that placed the defendant's character in issue because counsel made a reasonable strategic decision not to object to the parent's passing reference to the defendant as "bad news" and the parent's testimony that the parent had seen the defendant "at the jail" where the parent worked; counsel wanted the jury to see that the parent hated the defendant and believed that the parent's testimony would show that the parent was simply biased against the defendant. Jennings v. State, 288 Ga. 120, 702 S.E.2d 151 (2010).

Strategy in aggravated assault with intent to rape charge. — Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to obtain the victim's mobile telephone records because counsel's investigator contacted the defendant's mobile telephone provider to determine if the defendant and the victim had called each other on the night of the incident but was told that the relevant records were destroyed after six months; trial counsel testified that while counsel was aware from the beginning that the defendant claimed defendant's encounter with the victim was consensual, after several discussions on trial strategy in defendant's aggravated assault with intent to rape charge, counsel and the defendant agreed to pursue a defense that focused on the victim's inability to positively identify the defendant as the victim's attacker. Mattox v. State, 305 Ga. App. 600, 699 S.E.2d 887 (2010).

Strategy implicating codefendants.

— Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for new trial on the basis of ineffective assistance of counsel because trial counsel's defense strategy of implicating the codefendants was not unreasonable, and counsel did not fail to present evidence as promised in counsel's opening statement; the jury heard at least a portion of the promised evidence, and the defendant could not show that there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different had counsel opened differently. Jackson v. State, 306 Ga. App. 33, 701 S.E.2d 481 (2010).

Strategy on polygraph and severance.

— Trial counsel was not ineffective for entering into a stipulation with the state regarding the admissibility, accuracy, and voluntariness of a polygraph examination because stipulating to the admission of polygraph test results was a valid trial strategy, and there was evidence the ramifications were explained to the defendant; trial counsel discussed the polygraph examination with the defendant on multiple occasions, and trial counsel ultimately agreed that the defendant would submit to an examination because counsel found the defendant exceedingly credible. Furthermore, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to file a motion to sever the defendant's case from that of a codefendant because trial counsel testified that counsel made the strategic decision not to move to sever the trials because counsel wanted to support the argument that polygraph examinations were unreliable by presenting evidence that the codefendant passed a polygraph examination even though more physical evidence linked the codefendant to the crime scene; an informed strategic decision concerning severance did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel. Harris v. State, 308 Ga. App. 523, 707 S.E.2d 908 (2011).

Strategy for closing argument.

— Defendant could not overcome the strong presumption that trial counsel rendered effective assistance because trial counsel's closing argument was a trial strategy to convince the jury that the evidence the state proffered was insufficient to prove the crimes with which the defendant was charged; trial counsel's argument, aimed at requesting an acquittal on the charged offenses, was a reasonable trial strategy. Daniels v. State, 310 Ga. App. 562, 714 S.E.2d 91 (2011).

Strategy on DNA evidence. — Trial counsel's decision to argue that DNA evidence were indicia of the victim's consensual relationship with the defendant rather than directly challenging the state's expert witness or deny it was the defendant's blood or saliva was an objectively reasonable trial strategy and, thus, did not support a finding that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance. Simpson v. State, 289 Ga. 685, 715 S.E.2d 142 (2011).

Strategy on video. — Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel as, contrary to defendant's claim, counsel reviewed a videotape of the crimes; the decision not to use the videotape was a matter of strategy and defendant failed to show that defendant was prejudiced by a failure to use the videotape. Williams v. State, 273 Ga. App. 213, 614 S.E.2d 834 (2005).

Defendant did not meet the burden under Strickland of showing that defense counsel's performance was deficient for pursuing the trial strategy of showing a video of the defendant's earlier arrest for driving under the influence because defense counsel testified that the theory of the case was to show through the video that the same two officers stopped the defendant both times and that the officers were targeting the defendant; counsel pursued a strategy that resulted in the defendant being acquitted of four of the six charges against the defendant. Sledge v. State, 312 Ga. App. 97, 717 S.E.2d 682 (2011).

Strategy on cross-examination. — Defendant did not show ineffective assistance of counsel based upon counsel's strategy choices regarding the scope of cross-examination of two witnesses. Donald v. State, 312 Ga. App. 222, 718 S.E.2d 81 (2011).

Switching trial strategy mid-course. — Defendant was unable to demonstrate that trial counsel rendered deficient performance by switching trial strategy based upon the evidentiary rulings of the trial court because trial counsel's strategic decisions were not so patently unreasonable that no competent attorney would have chosen those decisions. Ledford v. State, 313 Ga. App. 389, 721 S.E.2d 585 (2011).

Strategy that did not involve presenting defense on agency. — Defendant's trial attorney was not deficient in failing to present a defense based on agency, in connection with the charge against the defendant of false statement or writing regarding a building permit application by defendant for homeowners, because the defendant failed to establish a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different if the trial attorney had raised such a defense. Wilson v. State, 317 Ga. App. 171, 730 S.E.2d 500 (2012).

Strategy on recharge of jury. — Defendant's claim that trial counsel offered ineffective assistance for not objecting to the trial court's failure to recharge the jury after the jury requested written definitions of the charges lacked merit because the decision was based on counsel's strategic decision that such a request only made the jury more inclined to convict the defendant rather than acquit the defendant. Lake v. State, 293 Ga. 56, 743 S.E.2d 414 (2013).

Strategic decisions not impacting effectiveness. — Defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance based on trial counsel's admission in the opening statement to the jury that the defendant hit the victim, thereby preventing the defendant from arguing that another individual actually assaulted the victim; as the defendant's claim of ineffective assistance related to strategic matters outside of the trial record, defense counsel's theory of the case, trial counsel's testimony was required to evaluate the claim. However, the defendant's trial counsel was not called to testify at the hearing on the motion for new trial, and without trial counsel's testimony, trial counsel's actions were presumed strategic. Walker v. State, 298 Ga. App. 265, 679 S.E.2d 814 (2009).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)F. Strategic Decisions (Cont'd)

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because the defendant made no showing that the defendant's text requests for the victim's mother to call the defendant as soon as possible harmed the defendant's case, and counsel's decision not to call an expert, after a pediatrician concluded that the victim's injuries could have been caused by CPR, was a reasonable, strategic decision. Holloman v. State, 293 Ga. 151, 744 S.E.2d 59 (2013).

Failure to follow same defense strategy as prior counsel. — Eliciting evidence of defendant's prior convictions from defendant on direct examination instead of risking having the information extracted on cross-examination was a reasonable strategy. Wilson v. State, 291 Ga. App. 69, 661 S.E.2d 221 (2008).

Because defendant had not proffered the necessary evidence, defendant had not shown prejudice from counsel's tactical decision not to except to a ruling on refreshing recollection with a police report. Wilson v. State, 291 Ga. App. 69, 661 S.E.2d 221 (2008).

With regard to defendant's conviction for armed robbery and other crimes, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for new trial when the court found that defendant did not carry the burden of showing ineffective assistance based on defense counsel failing to object to the introduction into evidence of the guilty plea of the gunman/co-indictee and further failed to request a limiting instruction thereon as the evidence supported the trial court's findings that those decisions were strategic and not patently unreasonable. Trial counsel testified at the motion for a new trial hearing that the guilty plea of the gunman was important to the defense strategy of placing all the blame on the gunman as well as showing the jury that defendant would serve a lengthy sentence if the jury found the defendant guilty. Sillah v. State, 291 Ga. App. 848, 663 S.E.2d 274 (2008).

With regard to a defendant's convictions for malice murder and other crimes, the defendant failed to demonstrate that trial counsel's decision to forego an insanity or delusional compulsion defense, instead of pursuing the defense as prior trial counsel had intended, was unreasonable as the evidence showed that the defendant and trial counsel collectively agreed that the success of raising such a defense was highly unlikely. Further, the fact that trial counsel would have pursued a different strategy than the defendant's prior counsel did not render trial counsel's strategy unreasonable. Martinez v. State, 284 Ga. 138, 663 S.E.2d 675 (2008).

With regard to the defendant's conviction for distributing cocaine, the defendant failed to establish that the defendant was rendered ineffective assistance of counsel based on defense counsel failing to object to the admission of a recorded conversation between the defendant and a confidential informant on Sixth Amendment/right to confrontation grounds as even if the recorded conversation was objectionable as a violation of the defendant's constitutional rights under the confrontation clause, trial counsel testified to various strategic reasons for keeping the confidential informant out of the courtroom at the hearing on the defendant's motion for a new trial. As such, since that strategy was not patently unreasonable, the trial court did not err in finding that trial counsel's actions in that regard fell within the broad range of reasonable professional conduct. Beck v. State, 292 Ga. App. 472, 665 S.E.2d 701 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1863, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 922 (Ga. 2008).

Counsel was not ineffective for not seeking to exclude or redact portions of a defendant's profanity-ridden recorded statement. Counsel's decision not to object to the statement's admissibility was clearly strategic as counsel believed that the statement fit into the alibi defense and because counsel thought the profanity made the statement a more powerful denial. Smashum v. State, 293 Ga. App. 41, 666 S.E.2d 549 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 952 (Ga. 2008).

Strategic decision not to call witness. — Defendant was not denied the effective assistance of counsel as counsel made diligent efforts to identify and locate possible defense witnesses and made a strategic decision not to call some witnesses; further, defendant failed to show that defendant was prejudiced by counsel's failure to locate, interview, and subpoena defendant's female roommate. Sharif v. State, 272 Ga. App. 660, 613 S.E.2d 176 (2005).

Defendant failed to show that the trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance in a criminal trial, as counsel met with defendant 17 times, interviewed all of the witnesses that defendant provided names for except for one, and counsel had valid reasons for not calling each witness to the stand; a decision as to which witnesses to call was a matter of trial strategy. Steverson v. State, 276 Ga. App. 876, 625 S.E.2d 476 (2005).

Defendant's trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance by failing to call as a witness at a Jackson-Denno hearing the attorney who witnessed the defendant's statement to police regarding a drive-by shooting; because the testimony of the witnessing attorney would likely have contradicted the defendant's claim to have been pressured by the witnessing attorney into making a statement, the trial counsel's decision not to call the witnessing attorney was a strategic one, and such decisions did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel. Hill v. State, 282 Ga. App. 743, 639 S.E.2d 637 (2006).

A murder defendant did not show ineffective assistance of counsel; trial counsel chose not to call two eyewitnesses because counsel did not consider their testimony strong enough to justify the loss of the right to conclude closing argument, which was a well recognized trial tactic at the time. Cooper v. State, 281 Ga. 760, 642 S.E.2d 817 (2007).

In a prosecution on three counts of aggravated stalking, because the defendant failed to show that trial counsel's strategic decisions in declining to subpoena certain witnesses amounted to ineffectiveness, and the evidence did not support a lesser-included offense instruction, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims failed. Patterson v. State, 284 Ga. App. 780, 645 S.E.2d 38 (2007).

Because trial counsel's strategic decision not to call a close family friend as a witness, who could have rebutted the state's evidence that the defendant was controlling, was supported by testimony that the witness would not have added anything to the defense and might have diluted the defendant's voluntary manslaughter theory, counsel was not ineffective in failing have the witness testify. Johnson v. State, 282 Ga. 96, 646 S.E.2d 216 (2007).

Defendant did not show ineffective assistance of counsel since trial counsel had chosen for strategic reasons not to call two jail employees as witnesses, and the defendant's testimony about what the defendant thought the witnesses' testimony might have been was mere speculation and hearsay, which was inadequate to show prejudice. Felder v. State, 286 Ga. App. 271, 648 S.E.2d 753 (2007).

Strategy to not call witness. — Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel because counsel failed to subpoena two witnesses as the witnesses were present at trial and counsel and the defendant had decided that the witnesses would not be called because the information they would have provided had been elicited during the cross-examination of a state's witness; the failure to call the witnesses was a reasonable strategic decision that did not constitute deficient performance. McKinney v. State, 281 Ga. 92, 635 S.E.2d 153 (2006).

Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV in failing to call a potential witness who allegedly told an investigator that the victim did not appear to be hysterical on the day that the defendant committed numerous violent offenses against the victim; defense counsel interviewed the potential witness before trial, and the potential witness merely confirmed that the potential witness had given the defendant the rifle that the defendant used in an unsuccessful suicide attempt after the alleged criminal conduct at issue. Martin v. State, 281 Ga. App. 64, 635 S.E.2d 358 (2006).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims lacked merit as the appeals court found that trial counsel's tactical decision not to call the defendant's brother and sister-in-law as witnesses was strategic, and nothing in the record suggested that the defendant was denied a fair trial because trial counsel did not investigate the defendant's competency; hence, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant a new trial based on an ineffective assistance of counsel claim. Scott v. State, 281 Ga. App. 106, 635 S.E.2d 582 (2006).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)F. Strategic Decisions (Cont'd)

Since the defendant asserted that the defendant was denied effective assistance of trial counsel in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 because trial counsel failed to call witnesses who gave testimony at the hearing on the defendant's motion for a new trial that contradicted testimony for the state with regard to the timing of the defendant's arrest, the argument failed; defense counsel did not call the witnesses as a matter of trial strategy after defense counsel interviewed the witnesses and determined that their testimony was cumulative and potentially harmful to the defendant. Furthermore, the defendant's assertion that the defendant was denied effective assistance of trial counsel based on trial counsel's failure to call witnesses who would have testified that the defendant told the owner of the vehicle where the vehicle could have been found after the defendant had allegedly stolen the vehicle, was not error as the witnesses' testimony would have been inadmissible hearsay under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-1. Sexton v. State, 268 Ga. App. 736, 603 S.E.2d 66 (2004).

Defendant's defense attorney did not provide ineffective assistance in the defendant's child molestation trial by failing to call witnesses for the defense because the attorney's decision was based on a strategic choice to preserve the right to the final closing argument under former O.C.G.A. § 17-8-71; in addition, the defendant failed to show prejudice by proffering the testimony of any witnesses who would have provided testimony that was favorable to the defendant and would have changed the outcome of the trial.

Wheat v. State, 282 Ga. App. 655, 639 S.E.2d 578 (2006).

In the defendant's convictions for armed robbery, kidnapping, and aggravated assault in connection with robbery of a fast food restaurant, the defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective by failing to call three acquaintances as defense witnesses as two of the witnesses had informed trial counsel that the defendant had admitted to them that the defendant was involved in the crimes; thus, the defendant failed to show that trial counsel's strategy of not calling the witnesses (whose testimony would have been harmful) was patently unreasonable. Holsey v. State, 291 Ga. App. 216, 661 S.E.2d 621 (2008).

Strategy not to call another doctor as witness. — Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel as the trial counsel's decision not to call another doctor as a witness was a reasonable trial strategy and there was no showing of prejudice. Revells v. State, 283 Ga. App. 59, 640 S.E.2d 587 (2006).

Strategy regarding testimony of ex-spouse. — Defendant's drug convictions were appropriate because counsel's trial strategy did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel. Trial counsel testified that counsel's actions were done as a part of trial strategy to discredit the testimony of defendant's ex-wife and to show that she had a self-serving reason to testify falsely and get a lesser sentence. Carter v. State, 308 Ga. App. 686, 708 S.E.2d 595 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1141, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 573 (Ga. 2011).

Strategy to use chlamydia as part of defense. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to perfect the record and secure a final ruling after counsel moved in limine to exclude references to chlamydia because it was part of the defendant's trial strategy to convince the jury that the defendant could not have committed the charged acts because the victim had chlamydia and there was no evidence that the defendant had that sexually transmitted disease. Walker v. State, 322 Ga. App. 180, 744 S.E.2d 366 (2013).

Alleged failure to discuss trial strategy with defendant. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to adequately prepare for trial because although the defendant contended that counsel was unaware of defendant's preferred trial strategy since counsel only met with the defendant two times before trial, the trial court credited counsel's testimony and found that counsel did, in fact, discuss counsel's trial strategy with the defendant; the defendant did not further elaborate on how counsel was allegedly unprepared for trial. Sheats v. State, 305 Ga. App. 475, 699 S.E.2d 798 (2010).

Strategy on admission of time sheets. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the admission of several hundred pages of time sheets from employees because counsel testified that a substantive objection was not made because counsel believed that the time sheets were helpful and use of a reasonably informed trial strategy could not support a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel. Brown v. State, 321 Ga. App. 198, 739 S.E.2d 118 (2013).

Strategy to show defendant as psychologically defeated and traumatized. — Counsel was not ineffective for failing to advocate for the defendant to have makeup, a wig, and personal grooming tools to enable the defendant to look nicer at trial because it was a reasonable trial strategy for counsel to want to present the defendant in a way that made the defendant look like a psychologically defeated and traumatized young woman who had been victimized by an abusive and violent husband. Schutt v. State, 292 Ga. 625, 740 S.E.2d 163 (2013).

Strategy to preempt prosecutor's hard questions. — Trial counsel did not invade the province of the jury when asking the defendant on direct examination, "Do you expect the jury to believe that?". The decision to ask the question, to minimize the adverse effects on the defendant by preempting a question counsel expected the prosecution to ask, was a reasonable trial strategy. Crumity v. State, 321 Ga. App. 768, 743 S.E.2d 455 (2013).

G. Other Examples

Criminal Procedure Discovery Act constitutional. — Reciprocal discovery provisions of the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., do not violate the right to effective representation of counsel by denying the defendant the benefit of counsel's judgment of whether and when to reveal aspects of the case to the state. State v. Lucious, 271 Ga. 361, 518 S.E.2d 677 (1999).

Pretrial discovery provisions of the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, O.C.G.A. § 17-16-1 et seq., do not implicate or infringe upon the confrontation clause which guarantees only the right to confront and cross-examine those individuals called to testify against a defendant at trial. State v. Lucious, 271 Ga. 361, 518 S.E.2d 677 (1999).

Discovery requirements of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4, relating to the presentence hearing, did not violate a defendant's right to effective assistance of counsel; counsel may freely investigate for mitigating evidence, knowing that the identity of any potentially harmful witness resulting from that investigation need only be produced to the state in reciprocal discovery should the defense decide to call that witness at the presentence hearing. Muhammad v. State, 282 Ga. 247, 647 S.E.2d 560 (2007).

Interstate Agreement on Detainers. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to offer evidence in support of a motion to dismiss as the appellate court held that the Interstate Agreement on Detainers, O.C.G.A. § 42-6-20 et seq., was violated; there was no evidence that a different result would have ensued at trial had counsel introduced the detainer and the defendant's response to it. Morrison v. State, 272 Ga. App. 34, 611 S.E.2d 720, aff'd, 280 Ga. 222, 626 S.E.2d 500 (2006).

Child molestation cases. — Child molestation defendant's counsel was not ineffective because the counsel: (1) adequately investigated; (2) employed a recognized trial tactic of not calling expert and other witnesses to testify that a child's testimony was based on dreams or family background and not reality in order to preserve the final word in closing argument; and (3) was not shown to have engaged in performance that affected the outcome of the trial by not objecting to testimony under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-36 regarding the defendant's failure to respond to the state's investigator, and under O.C.G.A. § 24-9-85(b), by not requesting a special instruction regarding the child's alleged false swearing. Bruce v. State, 268 Ga. App. 677, 603 S.E.2d 33 (2004).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

In a child molestation case, defense counsel was not ineffective for not objecting to the prosecutor's statement in closing that the victims should not be "punished"; when the remark was taken in context, it was apparent that the prosecutor was addressing the lack of physical injury or eyewitnesses to corroborate the victims' testimony, and these comments did not impermissibly divert the jury from the evidence. Cherry v. State, 283 Ga. App. 700, 642 S.E.2d 369 (2007).

A defendant in a child molestation case had not shown ineffective assistance of counsel since a charge on good character was not required because the defendant had not put the defendant's good character into issue, the defendant had not shown prejudice from an isolated comment on the defendant's silence, and the defendant had not shown prejudice from counsel's failure to impeach the victim with a delinquency adjudication. Kurtz v. State, 287 Ga. App. 823, 652 S.E.2d 858 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0321, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 184 (Ga. 2008).

Trial counsel was not deficient in failing to introduce evidence that a physical examination of a child victim found no physical evidence of alleged sexual abuse. Trial counsel clearly made a tactical decision not to call the physician who examined the victim and, instead, elected to comment on the state's failure to provide physical evidence to support the molestation allegations. Shaffer v. State, 291 Ga. App. 783, 662 S.E.2d 864 (2008).

In a child molestation prosecution, the defendant contended that defendant's trial counsel was deficient in failing to attack the validity of the search warrant used to obtain a DNA sample as the supporting affidavit failed to disclose that the victims' outcry was made to their parent shortly after the parent lost primary custody of the parent's other child. This claim failed because even if this evidence had been included, the victim's statement to the affiant that the defendant fathered the victim's child was sufficient to support the warrant. Furthermore, defense counsel was not deficient in failing to object to testimony about the alleged physical abuse of the victims as counsel reasonably believed such an objection would be overruled, and planned to use this testimony to bolster the defense theory that the victims were not credible. Farris v. State, 293 Ga. App. 674, 667 S.E.2d 676 (2008).

Trial counsel's failure to subpoena a child's case file did not constitute ineffective assistance as the file regarding the child was confidential and not subject to direct subpoena by the defendant, and the defendant did not demonstrate that such action would have changed the outcome of the child molestation trial. Additionally, failure to impeach a victim's parent with the parent's status as an illegal alien also did not constitute ineffective assistance as there was no logical reason to believe that the parent's illegal alien status, known only later to police, motivated or shaded the parent's trial testimony against the defendant; indeed, the parent's illegal alien status would have been a motive for the parent not to report the crime against the child in the first place. Pareja v. State, 295 Ga. App. 871, 673 S.E.2d 343, aff'd, 286 Ga. 117, 686 S.E.2d 232 (2009).

In convictions of child molestation, aggravated child molestation, and aggravated sexual battery, defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of trial counsel since the failure to object to certain testimony from a victim-witness advocate was legitimate trial strategy, the failure to object to similar transaction evidence was proper since this evidence was admissible, and the failure to object to certain closing argument statements would not have affected the trial's outcome under the circumstances. Woods v. State, 304 Ga. App. 403, 696 S.E.2d 411 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to question the qualifications and credibility of the expert who took the child molestation victim's statement because the state's direct examination at trial showed that the expert who took the victim's statement was well-qualified with 15 years' experience in assisting children and teenagers suffering from severe mental illness or trauma. Robinson v. State, 308 Ga. App. 45, 706 S.E.2d 577 (2011).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to ask for a hearing on the admissibility of the child molestation victim's videotaped statement because counsel testified that counsel chose not to request a hearing under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-820) since counsel had never seen a victim's statement declared inadmissible, and counsel did not want the delay resulting from such a request to give the state additional time to prepare the state's case; trial counsel was under no obligation to invoke a client's legal right to a hearing designed to protect that client's interests if the invocation of that abstract right would, in counsel's professional judgment of the circumstances presented by a specific case, do actual harm to those interests. Robinson v. State, 308 Ga. App. 45, 706 S.E.2d 577 (2011).

Trial court's determination that a defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to a line of questioning regarding the witnesses' belief that the young victims were telling the truth was not clearly erroneous as counsel had pursued a reasonable trial strategy; the defense in the case, involving multiple sexual offenses committed by the defendant against young boys, was that very young children were susceptible to telling stories and misconstruing the facts. Gregoire v. State, 309 Ga. App. 309, 711 S.E.2d 306 (2011).

Defendant, in a child molestation case, failed to show ineffective assistance from trial counsel's decisions not to object to allowing the jury to see translations of notes written by the defendant to the victim and by not objecting to the admission of adult pornography found in the defendant's cell phone because the letters supported the defense counsel's strategy by showing that the victim had a motive to invent the abuse as a means of getting the defendant out of the life of the victim's parent and the adult pornography supported the defense counsel's strategy that the defendant was only attracted to adults, and not children. Medrano v. State, 315 Ga. App. 880, 729 S.E.2d 37 (2012).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to testimony that the defendant could have molested the victim's brother because the evidence included more than just the allegations made in the initial outcry; thus, the defendant failed to show a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been more favorable to the defendant had the testimony been excluded. Henry v. State, 316 Ga. App. 132, 729 S.E.2d 429 (2012).

Compelled attorney testimony. — Requiring defendant's attorney to testify against the defendant on a contested, material issue so diminishes the persuasive force of the attorney's advocacy on behalf of the defendant in the eyes of the jury that the defendant may be denied the defendant's right to effective assistance of counsel, and a subpoena which attempted such should have been quashed given an insufficient showing of need on behalf of the state. Shelton v. State, 206 Ga. App. 579, 426 S.E.2d 69 (1992).

When counsel blurs distinction between state and federal constitutional rights regarding ineffective counsel, and when such counsel makes no argument based separately on the Georgia Constitution but does primarily cite federal cases and state cases applying the federal constitution, the issue should be treated as predicated upon rights guaranteed by the United States Constitution. Davenport v. State, 172 Ga. App. 848, 325 S.E.2d 173 (1984).

Membership of bar in good standing is prima-facie proof of competency as attorney and that counsel's representation meets the requirements of due process. Hill v. Balkcom, 213 Ga. 58, 96 S.E.2d 589 (1957), commented on in 19 Ga. B.J. 519 (1957).

When a defendant is represented by employed counsel who is admitted to the bar of this state in good standing, a prima-facie case is made that the defendant was represented by a competent attorney. Suits v. State, 150 Ga. App. 285, 257 S.E.2d 306 (1979); Williams v. State,

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

153 Ga. App. 192, 264 S.E.2d 715 (1980); Chapman v. State, 154 Ga. App. 532, 268 S.E.2d 797 (1980).

Disbarment of attorney. — Trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel because defendant failed to show that counsel was under the influence of drugs during counsel's representation or that there was any deficient performance due to counsel's addiction; defendant made an unsupported claim that counsel was subsequently disbarred but subsequent disbarment, in and of itself, did not provide a basis for presuming deficient performance. Harris v. State, 279 Ga. 304, 612 S.E.2d 789 (2005).

Administrative suspension of attorney. — An attorney does not render ineffective assistance of counsel under either the United States or Georgia Constitution when representing a criminal defendant while suspended from the practice of law for failure to comply with state bar administrative regulations. Cornwell v. Dodd, 270 Ga. 411, 509 S.E.2d 919 (1999).

Defendant did not show that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel, despite the fact that defendant's counsel was under the state bar's administrative suspension at the time defendant was being tried, as the suspension was for failing to timely respond to an inquiry and did not show that counsel provided ineffective assistance in representing defendant; since defendant did not show any other evidence that defense counsel provided ineffective assistance, defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim had to fail. Zinnamon v. State, 261 Ga. App. 170, 582 S.E.2d 146 (2003).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for allowing co-counsel to give the closing argument; lack of experience alone could not constitute grounds for an ineffective assistance of counsel claim, and upon questioning by the trial court, the defendant expressly agreed that the defendant was "comfortable" with the decision to allow co-counsel to handle closing. Cooper v. State, 281 Ga. 760, 642 S.E.2d 817 (2007).

Counsel held in contempt. — Trial counsel was not ineffective because counsel was held in contempt; even if counsel did not perform to the best ability after the contempt proceeding, such did not mean counsel's performance fell to a level of ineffectiveness. Sanders v. State, 281 Ga. 36, 635 S.E.2d 772 (2006).

Retained counsel found effective. — Defendant failed to meet the burden of showing that retained counsel's performance was deficient and that the deficient performance prejudiced the defense because there was no reasonable probability that the outcome would have been different; trial counsel was death penalty certified in two states, spent eight years as a public defender before entering private practice, rendered reasonably effective services to defendant throughout the trial, and defendant presented no evidence that trial counsel's imminent new job as a judge hindered counsel's ability to provide reasonably effective counsel or prejudiced defendant's case. Maskivish v. State, 276 Ga. App. 701, 624 S.E.2d 160 (2005).

Effective counsel established. — Motion for a new trial was properly denied because defense counsel was not ineffective, because counsel was well-prepared, filed pretrial motions, thoroughly cross-examined each witness, preserved counsel's objections, and successfully excluded hearsay testimony and physical evidence, it was counsel's practice to advise counsel's clients of the meaning of trial as a recidivist, of the possible sentences, and of the risks of going to trial, and counsel obtained an acquittal on the greater charge of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute. Allen v. State, 272 Ga. App. 23, 611 S.E.2d 697 (2005).

Trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel because: (1) defendant did not identify any missing witness or any evidence that was not timely discovered; (2) counsel was not required to spend a certain amount of time with defendant; (3) defendant failed to show prejudice arising out of defendant's mother's difficulty in contacting counsel; and (4) defendant failed to show how impeaching a victim would have altered the outcome of the trial. Harris v. State, 279 Ga. 304, 612 S.E.2d 789 (2005).

Appeals court rejected defendant's claims that trial counsel was ineffective: (1) for failing to move to sever the trial from a codefendant's; (2) for failing to call as a witness a certain individual who would have provided evidence that was crucial to the defense; and (3) because counsel was ill-prepared for trial, as the overwhelming evidence of guilt would not have changed the outcome of the trial; thus, defendant failed to prove that the defendant was prejudiced by these allegations. Jenkins v. State, 279 Ga. App. 897, 633 S.E.2d 61 (2006).

Because the court of appeals found no reasonable possibility that the result of the defendant's trial would have been different if trial counsel had successfully objected to the evidence that the victim was being hidden, that the victim's grandmother had been indicted for lying, or by failing to object when the victim's foster mother bolstered the victim's credibility, the court rejected the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims. Payne v. State, 290 Ga. App. 589, 660 S.E.2d 405 (2008).

Evidence supported a conclusion that the defendant failed to show deficient performance related to the amount of time trial counsel spent consulting with the defendant because counsel testified that counsel met with the defendant multiple times during the course of the case, showed the defendant materials obtained through discovery, and discussed with the defendant medical records, how to respond to the state's allegations, and whether the defendant would testify at trial. Jackson v. State, 310 Ga. App. 476, 713 S.E.2d 679 (2011).

Because the defendant made no showing that the defendant's wife lacked authority to consent to a search of the marital residence, because trial attorney's strategic decisions not to pursue a defense or to request a jury poll were not patently unreasonable, and because the defendant's claims were not waived by appellate counsel, the defendant failed to show that the defendant was entitled to a new trial based on counsels' alleged ineffectiveness. Davis v. State, 311 Ga. App. 699, 716 S.E.2d 710 (2011).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt was presented at trial and, while the defendant contended that prejudice should have been presumed because trial counsel's actions amounted to a constructive denial of counsel, the record did not show an entire failure of counsel to meaningfully test the prosecution's case. The record demonstrated that trial counsel attempted to hold the prosecution to the prosecution's heavy burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and counsel, who had spent a significant amount of time preparing for trial, made numerous objections to testimony and evidence introduced through the prosecutor's direct examinations of the state's witnesses. Wade v. State, 315 Ga. App. 668, 727 S.E.2d 275 (2012).

Defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because counsel could not be ineffective for failing to object to testimony that did not affect the outcome of the trial, nor was counsel deficient in eliciting an arresting officer's testimony that the officer had heard over the police radio that the defendant was armed with a gun and prepared to use the gun, as the question was designed to show that the officer was being overly dramatic, which it did and was not a patently unreasonable tactic. Westbrook v. State, 291 Ga. 60, 727 S.E.2d 473 (2012).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because trial counsel understood the significance of gunpowder travel testimony, but chose not to concentrate on it because counsel did not think that the distance between the defendant and the victim was significant, and the evidence showed that the defendant intentionally grabbed the pistol and fired the pistol, creating a foreseeable risk of death that was inherently dangerous. Harris v. State, 291 Ga. 175, 728 S.E.2d 178 (2012).

Defendant's counsel withholding mitigating evidence. — Death sentence based on O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-30(b)(2), (b)(4), (b)(7) and 17-10-35(c)(1), (c)(3) aggravators for malice murder was supported by sufficient evidence, not the result of ineffective counsel or an improperly selected jury, and not disproportionate to other depraved, wantonly vile, and tortuous murders. Defendant's counsel's withholding of alleged mitigating evidence (by presenting it to the trial court under seal) so that the state could not use that evidence against defendant in the event of a new trial could not be used to assess whether counsel was ineffective for withholding it. Franks v. State, 278 Ga. 246, 599 S.E.2d 134 (2004), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 1058, 125 S. Ct. 870, 160 L. Ed. 2d 784 (2005).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

Failure to investigate and present mitigating evidence in death penalty.

— In a death penalty case, a habeas court properly found that trial counsel was deficient in investigating and presenting mitigating evidence regarding an inmate's childhood abuse and neglect and the inmate's history of substance abuse and depression. The inmate suffered prejudice because the evidence that should have been presented, showing that the inmate's history of abuse and neglect had led to the inmate's major depression and the inmate's early exposure to alcohol and drugs, would have greatly undermined the state's argument that the inmate had freely chosen a life of addiction. Hall v. McPherson, 284 Ga. 219, 663 S.E.2d 659 (2008).

Counsel's acknowledgment that without continuance representation ineffective. — Counsel's own statement in a written motion for a continuance that, without the continuance, counsel's representation would be ineffective, did not equate to a finding that counsel was ineffective at trial; furthermore, trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to call any witnesses in defendant's defense, especially because counsel believed those potential witnesses would not have helped the defense, counsel wished to preserve the right to opening and closing argument, and the witnesses' testimony could be suspect due to their relationship to defendant. Sims v. State, 278 Ga. 587, 604 S.E.2d 799 (2004).

Admission that attorney "could have done a better job." — Defendant's motion for a new trial was properly denied as the trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance even though the trial counsel admitted to the defendant's mother that the trial counsel "could have done a better job" at trial; the trial counsel's post-conviction musings about how the trial counsel could have improved the trial counsel's performance did not constitute ineffective assistance as a claim of ineffective assistance of counsel was judged by whether the trial counsel rendered reasonably effective assistance, not by a standard of errorless counsel or by hindsight. Lawson v. State, 280 Ga. App. 870, 635 S.E.2d 259 (2006).

Chronic presumption of prejudice did not apply to determine whether a malice murder, death sentenced defendant was prejudiced by counsel's representation (based upon defendant's argument that the counsel's representation broke down by counsel admitting the defendant had knifed the victim's two children) since counsel remained a vigorous advocate of the defendant's case throughout the guilt-innocence phase closing argument. Franks v. State, 278 Ga. 246, 599 S.E.2d 134 (2004), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 1058, 125 S. Ct. 870, 160 L. Ed. 2d 784 (2005).

Counsel was not ineffective for focusing on death penalty phase of malice murder trial in view of overwhelming evidence against a defendant in the guilt-innocence phase and the defendant's failure, until the last minute, to tell the counsel what exact events took place the day of the crime. Franks v. State, 278 Ga. 246, 599 S.E.2d 134 (2004), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 1058, 125 S. Ct. 870, 160 L. Ed. 2d 784 (2005).

Conflict of interest. — Defendant's appointed counsel represented defendant in the same court in which the appointed counsel was a full time law clerk; therefore, an actual conflict of interest existed warranting reversal of defendant's convictions. Sallie v. State, 269 Ga. 446, 499 S.E.2d 897 (1998).

Denial of defense counsel's motion to withdraw, made because another attorney in counsel's office represented an uncooperative witness in another matter a month prior to defendant's trial, did not violate defendant's right to representation that was free from conflicts of interest since the uncooperative witness did not testify at defendant's trial and there was no evidence suggesting that trial counsel was in possession of any information about the witness or the witness's previous prosecution. Porter v. State, 278 Ga. 694, 606 S.E.2d 240 (2004).

When defense counsel had counsel's client meet with counsel for a codefendant, and defense counsel was subsequently placed on the codefendant's witness list, defendant did not show that there was an impermissible conflict of interest constituting ineffective assistance because defendant did not show that defense counsel actively represented conflicting interests and that an actual conflict of interest adversely affected defense counsel's performance. Parker v. State, 274 Ga. App. 347, 617 S.E.2d 625 (2005).

Inmate who pled guilty to malice murder and aggravated assault and was serving a sentence of life plus years was entitled to habeas corpus relief because counsel who represented defendant at a guilty plea was simultaneously representing the district attorney, creating an actual conflict of interest and, given the enormity of the penalty the inmate faced, the conflict was impermissible. Howerton v. Danenberg, 279 Ga. 861, 621 S.E.2d 738 (2005).

Defense counsel was not operating under a conflict of interest based on the fact that the prosecutor in defendants' case had earlier tried defense counsel for murder, which trial resulted in an acquittal. Allen v. State, 278 Ga. App. 292, 628 S.E.2d 717 (2006).

Defendant did not show that the defendant's defense attorney provided ineffective assistance in a child molestation trial because of a conflict of interest arising from the attorney's representation of the defendant in divorce proceedings; the defendant voiced no objection to the alleged conflict before the trial, did not show that the attorney had an actual conflict of interest because the attorney was likely to be a necessary witness at trial, and did not show that any such actual conflict of interest adversely affected the attorney's performance. Wheat v. State, 282 Ga. App. 655, 639 S.E.2d 578 (2006).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim lacked merit as the defendant failed to show that trial counsel's actions, in which counsel also represented the codefendant who was the passenger in the vehicle the defendant was driving, prejudiced the defense; further, counsel's actions did not slight the defense of one defendant for another, the principles contained in charges on mere presence and equal access were adequate, counsel was prepared for trial, and the prosecutor's closing argument statements were not prejudicial so as to warrant an objection. Garvin v. State, 283 Ga. App. 242, 641 S.E.2d 176 (2006).

An inmate had been denied effective assistance of counsel under the Sixth Amendment and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV based on an actual conflict of interest because both trial and appellate counsel did not diligently pursue a jury array issue based on an agreement that the public defender's office had with superior court judges, despite their belief that the issue was a strong one. The attorneys' duties to their employer, the public defender's office, directly conflicted with their duties of loyalty and zealous advocacy to their client under Ga. St. Bar R. 4-102(d):1.7, and the conflict significantly affected the representation the inmate received. Edwards v. Lewis, 283 Ga. 345, 658 S.E.2d 116 (2008).

Trial court erred in granting a new trial based on ineffective assistance of counsel due to counsel's prior employment in a public defender's office where another attorney had briefly represented the state's key witness against the defendant because the defendant failed to show how the conflict of interest compromised the attorney's representation of the defendant. State v. Abernathy, 289 Ga. 603, 715 S.E.2d 48 (2011).

Record belied any assertion that trial counsel had any divided loyalties between the defendant and a man who had been a suspect in the murder and testified as a state's witness at trial or that counsel represented the man in any way during the defendant's trial because counsel actually targeted the man as one of the people other than the defendant who had actually committed the murder. Wheeler

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

v. State, 290 Ga. 817, 725 S.E.2d 580 (2012).

Conflict of interest by attorney must be actual rather than merely speculative to support relief and not every conceivable conflict is so egregious as to amount to a violation of U.S. Const., amend. 6; even joint representation of codefendants need not be a per se constitutional violation. Blake v. Zant, 513 F. Supp. 772 (S.D. Ga. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 718 F.2d 979 (11th Cir. 1983), vacated on other grounds, Burger v. Zant, 467 U.S. 1212, 104 S. Ct. 2652, 81 L. Ed. 2d 360 (1984).

Pending disciplinary action and subsequent surrender of license. — Trial counsel was not ineffective per se due to the fact that there was a pending disciplinary action against counsel at the time of trial or due to the subsequent surrender of counsel's license to practice law. Simmons v. State, 291 Ga. 705, 733 S.E.2d 280 (2012).

Effect of jurors seeing defendant in handcuffs and shackles. — Defense counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel in failing to take action when some jurors allegedly saw defendant in handcuffs and shackles as defendant failed to show that any juror actually saw defendant or that it tainted the outcome of the trial. Stevenson v. State, 272 Ga. App. 335, 612 S.E.2d 521 (2005).

Transfer of ineffective assistance of counsel claim improper. — Trial court's order denying defendant's extraordinary motion for new trial/habeas petition was a nullity and void under O.C.G.A. § 9-12-16, and the appellate court could not transfer defendant's case to the Georgia Supreme Court to consider the grant of a certificate of probable cause under O.C.G.A. § 9-14-52(b), even though the Georgia Supreme Court had exclusive jurisdiction over habeas cases, as the trial court was without subject matter jurisdiction to entertain defendant's habeas claim upon a transfer from a habeas court with instructions to determine whether trial counsel was ineffective; however, as defendant's habeas claims had not been addressed by a court of competent jurisdiction, the appellate court remanded the matter to the habeas court for resolution of defendant's habeas claims of ineffective assistance of counsel, with the final order subject to the appellate procedures outlined in O.C.G.A. § 9-14-52. Herrington v. State, 265 Ga. App. 454, 594 S.E.2d 682 (2004).

Remand ordered for evidentiary hearing on effectiveness. — Defendant's case was remanded for an evidentiary hearing on defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims as it was not clear when defendant took over defendant's own representation and defendant's appeal might have been defendant's first opportunity to raise defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims, and as defendant's claims could not be resolved by examining the appellate record. Carter v. State, 267 Ga. App. 520, 600 S.E.2d 637 (2004).

Because defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim was not properly raised before the trial court, the case was remanded for an evidentiary hearing. Rosser v. State, 276 Ga. App. 261, 623 S.E.2d 142 (2005).

Because it could not be determined from the record whether defendant could satisfy the Strickland test with respect to trial counsel's failure to ask the jurors if they knew any of the parties, the case was remanded for an evidentiary hearing; during the state's case, the bailiff brought to the court's attention that one of the juror's knew one of the police officers who testified. Kidd v. State, 277 Ga. App. 29, 625 S.E.2d 440 (2005).

As the claims of ineffective counsel, primarily in the area of preparation, had not been addressed by the trial court, further factual development by that court was required; therefore, the Court of Appeals remanded the matter with directions that if prejudicial ineffective assistance was found, the defendant was to be granted a new trial. Pinkston v. State, 277 Ga. App. 432, 626 S.E.2d 626 (2006).

Denial of a defendant's motion for a new trial was vacated and the case was remanded to the trial court to determine if counsel advised the defendant that the defendant could withdraw the defendant's guilty pleas if the defendant was dissatisfied with the defendant's sentence as long as the defendant did so before the written entry of sentence; if counsel so advised the defendant, the advice fell below an objective standard of reasonableness for ineffective assistance of counsel purposes. McCroskey v. State, 280 Ga. App. 638, 634 S.E.2d 824 (2006).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV was remanded for trial court consideration because the issue was raised for the first time on appeal and the claims were not the subject of a motion for a new trial. Acey v. State, 281 Ga. App. 197, 635 S.E.2d 814 (2006).

Because: (1) the defendant raised a colorable claim of ineffective assistance of trial counsel in a motion for a new trial based on counsel's failure to locate and present evidence of specific acts of violence by the alleged victim against third persons; (2) trial counsel's statement as to unsuccessfully attempting to locate these witnesses did not negate the possibility that a failure to do so constituted deficient performance; and (3) the defendant raised the ineffective assistance claim at the earliest practicable opportunity, albeit on appeal, the defendant asserted a colorable claim of ineffective assistance that required an evidentiary hearing on remand for its resolution. Portilla v. State, 285 Ga. App. 401, 646 S.E.2d 277 (2007).

Issue not developed. — Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for an out-of-time appeal; the claim that the trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV and U.S. Const., amend. 6 could not be resolved on appeal by reference to the record on appeal, especially since the issue had not been developed in a post-plea hearing. Thompson v. State, 275 Ga. App. 566, 621 S.E.2d 475 (2005).

Habeas court properly denied habeas petition based on ineffective assistance of trial counsel when although it was error to rule against the appellant on the ground that the appellant, who had pled guilty to drug possession charges, had expressed satisfaction with trial counsel at a plea hearing, habeas court had also ruled against appellant on the ground that it did not find that appellant's testimony regarding attorney's performance was credible. Jackson v. State, 283 Ga. 462, 660 S.E.2d 525 (2008).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to call a psychologist to testify on behalf of the defendant because any attempt to do so would have been denied; at the hearing on the defendant's motion for a new trial, the trial court indicated that the trial court would not have allowed the psychologist to testify because facts needed to support the psychologist's opinion were never placed into the record. Kirkland v. State, 292 Ga. App. 73, 663 S.E.2d 408 (2008).

Counsel ineffective but defendant failed to show prejudice. — In a felony murder trial, the prosecutor's statement concerning the defendant's failure to call police about the victim's stabbing was an improper comment on the defendant's silence or failure to come forward, and defense counsel was deficient in failing to object. But given the weight of the evidence against the defendant, the defendant failed to show that, absent counsel's deficient performance, there was a reasonable probability the outcome of the trial would have been different. Lamplay v. State, 284 Ga. 37, 663 S.E.2d 184 (2008).

While trial counsel's introduction into evidence of a prejudicial police report and failure to seek a limiting instruction on the report's use constituted deficient performance, the defendant's ineffective assistance claim failed because the defendant could not show prejudice in light of the overwhelming evidence against the defendant. Berry v. State, 318 Ga. App. 806, 734 S.E.2d 768 (2012).

Although trial counsel was deficient in failing to object to the state's introduction of the defendant's statement, which were part of the defendant's inadmissible videotaped confession, the error did not entitle the defendant to relief because the evidence was overwhelming and the defendant would not have had a better chance at trial if the trial court had excluded the videotaped statements. Fuller v. State, 320 Ga. App. 620, 740 S.E.2d 346 (2013).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

Counsel not ineffective in representation of minor. — Trial counsel's failure to seek a Jackson-Denno hearing to suppress the defendant's statement to the police did not amount to ineffective assistance because after detailing the numerous factors considered, the trial court found that if a Jackson-Denno hearing had been held, the defendant's statements would have been found admissible, notwithstanding that the defendant was a minor. Cuvas v. State, 306 Ga. App. 679, 703 S.E.2d 116 (2010).

Ineffective counsel not established.

— See White v. State, 216 Ga. App. 583, 455 S.E.2d 117 (1995); Frazier v. State, 263 Ga. App. 12, 587 S.E.2d 173 (2003); Smart v. State, 277 Ga. 111, 587 S.E.2d 6 (2003); Bravo v. State, 269 Ga. App. 242, 603 S.E.2d 669 (2004); Hayes v. State, 279 Ga. 642, 619 S.E.2d 628 (2005); Ford v. State, 272 Ga. App. 798, 613 S.E.2d 234 (2005); Seabolt v. State, 279 Ga. 518, 616 S.E.2d 448 (2005); Callahan v. State, 280 Ga. App. 323, 634 S.E.2d 102 (2006).

Trial court's determination that defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel was not clearly erroneous, as defendant did not show anything defendant's trial counsel did or failed to do that was objectionable or that would have changed the outcome of defendant's case. Dorsey v. State, 261 Ga. App. 181, 582 S.E.2d 158 (2003).

Defendant was not denied effective assistance of counsel at a trial for rape and aggravated sodomy because there was no basis to request a continuance or disallowance of a colposcope printout, which showed the victim's anal bruising, based on the state's failure to produce the printout before trial because: (1) defendant already had the assistant's examination report, which mentioned the picture; (2) defendant's counsel was permitted to interview the assistant before the assistant's testimony; (3) the day of the trial was the first time that the prosecutor saw the picture; (4) there was no bad faith by the state; and (5) the printout was cumulative of other testimony. Furthermore, defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to notify defendant of the added sodomy charge because defendant, who had a prior rape conviction, was already facing a mandatory life without parole sentence upon conviction of rape, regardless of the sodomy charge. McMorris v. State, 263 Ga. App. 630, 588 S.E.2d 817 (2003).

When the trial court credited trial counsel's testimony that counsel was prepared for trial, and heard that counsel reviewed the police reports, spoke with most of the state's witnesses, reviewed statements from the remainder of the state's witnesses, visited the scene on two occasions, and met with the defendant for a significant period just before trial to prepare the defendant for trial and for testifying, such factual finding was not clearly erroneous; thus, counsel was not ineffective. Williams v. State, 277 Ga. 368, 589 S.E.2d 563 (2003).

Supreme Court found no merit in defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim, as a review of the transcript of the hearing on defendant's motion for new trial revealed that trial counsel met and communicated with defendant numerous times in the months before trial and consulted with defendant on all possible defenses; defendant failed to present any evidence of how further cross-examination of witnesses or the submission of additional photographs of the crime scene would have been necessary or beneficial to the defense. Jackson v. State, 277 Ga. 592, 592 S.E.2d 834 (2004).

Because trial counsel met with defendant five to ten times before trial and defendant's other claims of ineffective assistance of counsel were speculative, defendant failed to establish that the alleged ineffectiveness prejudiced defendant's defense; consequently, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion for a new trial. Vanholten v. State, 271 Ga. App. 782, 610 S.E.2d 555 (2005).

On appeal from two child molestation convictions, the defendant was properly denied a new trial, because the admission of privileged testimony was not erroneous, and trial counsel was not ineffective by: (a) ignoring a consent order barring the state from introducing any written or oral admissions or statements the defendant made before and after a polygraph examination; (b) failing to assert the attorney-client privilege with respect to a polygraph expert's testimony; and (c) failing to adequately prepare a second polygraph expert who testified for the defense at trial; in fact; (1) counsel neither ignored the consent order nor performed deficiently when stipulating to the admission of the polygraph results; and (2) even assuming that counsel was deficient in failing to consult the defendant regarding the attorney-client privilege, the defendant failed to show a reasonable probability that the result would have been different in the absence of the second expert's cumulative testimony. Adesida v. State, 280 Ga. App. 764, 634 S.E.2d 880 (2006).

Even if a defendant had not waived a claim that the defendant's trial counsel provided ineffective assistance during the defendant's trial for armed robbery and other crimes by failing to procure transcripts of a Jackson-Denno hearing by failing to support the claim with citations to authority, no ineffective assistance was shown; the defendant did not suggest how the transcript could have been used to impeach the testimony of accomplices, and the transcript was not part of the record because it was not proffered at the motion for new trial. Metoyer v. State, 282 Ga. App. 810, 640 S.E.2d 345 (2006).

Despite the defendant's numerous allegations of ineffective assistance of counsel, specifically, counsel's: (1) failure to call two witnesses and to request a continuance in order to secure the presence of the witnesses; (2) failure to call for a recess to secure certified copies of the defendant's drug convictions; (3) failure to request a jury charge on impeachment of a witness; and (4) failure to object to portions of the prosecutor's closing argument, the contentions were rejected on appeal, as the defendant failed to show that the outcome of the trial would have been different but for counsel's alleged inactions. Hartley v. State, 283 Ga. App. 388, 641 S.E.2d 607 (2007).

Given the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt with respect to an aggravated assault charge, and because no reasonable probability existed that the outcome of the trial with respect to that charge would have been different had the jury not been presented evidence of the temporary protective order, and the result would not have changed even if trial counsel had stipulated to the existence of the temporary protective order to avoid its presentment to the jury, trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel in defending the charge. Ford v. State, 283 Ga. App. 460, 641 S.E.2d 671 (2007).

When each alleged deficiency of trial counsel either was completely without any factual basis or involved counsel's failure to object to clearly admissible evidence or proper trial procedure, and when the alleged deficiencies in some instances were also attributable to reasonable trial strategy, there were no errors that could be considered in a cumulative prejudice analysis. Waits v. State, 282 Ga. 1, 644 S.E.2d 127 (2007).

Because the defendant failed to show the ineffective assistance of counsel because trial counsel was poorly prepared, failed to object to the form of the jury verdict, and did not make certain arguments during the pre-sentence hearing, and failed to indicate how any of these alleged errors could have affected the outcome of the trial, the defendant failed to establish the ineffective assistance of counsel on these grounds. McCoy v. State, 285 Ga. App. 246, 645 S.E.2d 728 (2007).

Counsel's strategic decisions made during trial, and failure to make meritless objections failed to support the defendant's allegations that counsel was ineffective. Johnson v. State, 284 Ga. App. 724, 644 S.E.2d 544 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 538 (Ga. 2007).

The Court of Appeals of Georgia rejected the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim, based on counsel's alleged failure to communicate, as no reasonable probability existed, nor did the defendant offer any, that the outcome of the trial would have been different absent counsel's alleged deficient performance; moreover, to the extent that the defendant's testimony contradicted that offered by trial counsel, the trial court, at the hearing on the motion for new trial, and not the appeals court, determined witness credibility and resolved any conflicts in the testimony. Chambers v. State, 284 Ga. App. 400, 643 S.E.2d 871 (2007).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

The trial court did not err in denying the defendant's amended motion for a new trial based on trial counsel's alleged ineffective assistance, as the evidence failed to show that counsel's trial strategy was unreasonable, the defendant failed to show prejudice by counsel's actions, and the defendant failed to preserve some of the challenges to counsel's actions for appellate review. Phillips v. State, 284 Ga. App. 224, 644 S.E.2d 153 (2007).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims lacked merit, given that: (1) similar transaction testimony was cumulative of other testimony previously offered, admitted for the proper purpose of showing a prior difficulty between the defendant and one of the victims, and could have shown defendant's motive, intent, and bent of mind; and (2) the alleged improper character evidence was admissible to explain why the victims and their parents did not immediately report the matter to police. Head v. State, 285 Ga. App. 471, 646 S.E.2d 699 (2007).

Based on the transcript of the guilty plea hearing and the testimony by defense counsel at the hearing, the trial court was authorized to reject the defendant's claims that counsel's performance was deficient, that counsel was not prepared to try the case, and that counsel forced the defendant to enter a guilty plea. Moore v. State, 286 Ga. App. 99, 648 S.E.2d 451 (2007).

Defendant did not show ineffective assistance of counsel since, even if counsel's failure to attempt to exclude certain evidence was deficient, the defendant did not show that harm resulted; counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to admissible evidence that the defendant was hiding in a closet at the time of the defendant's arrest, for failing to request an alibi charge when the evidence did not show the impossibility of the defendant's presence at the crime scene, and the defendant did not show how trial counsel's failure to introduce prior allegations of sexual abuse by the victim rendered trial counsel's performance deficient. Foster v. State, 286 Ga. App. 250, 649 S.E.2d 322 (2007), cert. dismissed, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 875 (Ga. 2007).

The defendant's claims of ineffective assistance of counsel were either waived or lacked merit; nowhere in a motion for new trial or in the hearing thereon had the defendant mentioned defense counsel's failure to object to a handgun, the evidence belied the defendant's assertion that defense counsel had given the defendant an insufficient explanation of a recidivist notice, and a certain charge the defendant claimed should have been requested would have been inappropriate in light of the evidence. Winfrey v. State, 286 Ga. App. 450, 649 S.E.2d 561 (2007).

Defendants' ineffective assistance of counsel claims failed since although the defendants claimed that counsel was ineffective for failing to rebut testimony that a driver's death could not have been prevented by a seat belt, defendants had not shown that such rebuttal evidence existed; counsel was also not ineffective for failing to seek a directed verdict of acquittal because the evidence was sufficient to support the defendants' convictions, the defendants were not prejudiced by counsel's failure to request a charge on proximate cause because there was no evidence that the driver's death could have been avoided by a seat belt, defendants by not questioning counsel's reasons for not requesting certain charges had not overcome the presumption that counsel acted reasonably, no curative need had arisen to give a charge on one defendant's right not to testify, and a Jackson-Denno hearing was not required because incriminating statements made by one defendant were not made during police interrogation, but to a nurse treating that defendant at a hospital. Mitchell v. State, 282 Ga. 416, 651 S.E.2d 49 (2007).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claims regarding the defendant's initial post-trial counsel's performance lacked merit, as counsel was neither professionally deficient nor prejudicial because: (1) the defendant waived any right to be present at the two juror interviews; (2) no deficiency could result from counsel's failure to raise meritless objections; and (3) the trial court specifically found that the defendant adequately understood the nature of the charges, and comprehended the proceedings, despite being under the influence of prescribed anti-depressants, and was capable of aiding the defense. Hampton v. State, 282 Ga. 490, 651 S.E.2d 698 (2007).

A defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of counsel; counsel's failure to object to hearsay testimony about a statement by a non-testifying witness was not ineffective assistance because the statement's admission was harmless error, the failure to object to hearsay testimony as to venue was not ineffective assistance because admissible evidence established venue, and the failure to make a chain of custody objection was not ineffective assistance because the objection would have been fruitless. White v. State, 283 Ga. 566, 662 S.E.2d 131 (2008).

A defendant had not shown that trial counsel was ineffective since the defendant had not identified any motion, defense, or evidence that counsel failed to present and had failed to show any deficiencies in counsel's knowledge of the crime scene that affected the outcome of the trial; the defendant had not cited any evidence that could have been used to impeach witnesses or suggested any questions that could have been asked and had not shown prejudice from counsel's failure to seek a continuance based on the absence of a prosecution witness. Cail v. State, 287 Ga. App. 547, 652 S.E.2d 190 (2007).

Having failed to demonstrate a reasonable likelihood that the outcome of defendant's trial would have been different had defendant testified, defendant had not established ineffective assistance of counsel. Defendant claimed at a motion for new trial hearing that defendant's spouse and stepchild had lied at defendant's trial, but did not allege any specific lie; furthermore, the record confirmed that the jurors were adequately charged that defendant was denying all charges and that witness credibility was a question for them to decide. Brown v. State, 288 Ga. App. 671, 655 S.E.2d 287 (2007).

Defendant had not shown ineffective assistance of counsel because it was not unreasonable for counsel to allow defendant's statement to come into evidence, as it allowed counsel to place defendant's version of events before the jury without subjecting defendant to cross-examination; further, chain of custody objection would not have been meritorious, it was not improper for an officer to come to the defendant's house to investigate information received from an anonymous tip, it was highly probable that erroneous testimony did not contribute to the verdict, and defendant had not shown how further cross-examination of a certain witness would have produced a different result. Felton v. State, 283 Ga. 242, 657 S.E.2d 850 (2008).

Because an officer's testimony that the defendant was driving under the influence did not impermissibly invade the jury's province and because there was no reasonable probability that the language of a charge would confuse or mislead the jury, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the testimony and to the charge; furthermore, given the evidence against the defendant, there was no reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different had trial counsel objected to hypothetical questions posed to the defendant's character witness. Karafiat v. State, 290 Ga. App. 15, 658 S.E.2d 801 (2008).

Defendant did not show ineffective assistance of counsel when, on a motion for a change of venue, the defendant had not shown how live evidence or a citizen survey could have accomplished any more than the introduction in evidence of existing pretrial publicity or voir dire, and counsel's failure to prepare the defendant for testimony before the date of trial was not deficient performance because the defendant did not indicate until the morning of trial that the defendant wished to testify, the defendant had not proffered evidence as to what a more thorough investigation would have uncovered, and Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 31.3 did not entitle a defendant to evidentiary hearing with live witnesses to determine the admissibility of similar transaction evidence. Harvey v. State, 284 Ga. 8, 660 S.E.2d 528 (2008).

A defendant who claimed that defense

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

counsel failed to discuss “important issues” with the defendant, but who did not identify the issues in the defendant’s brief or testify at the new trial hearing about what might have been discussed, did not show ineffective assistance of counsel. Furthermore, counsel was not ineffective for failing to make objections that would have been fruitless. Judkins v. State, 282 Ga. 580, 652 S.E.2d 537 (2007).

A defendant in a burglary trial did not show ineffective assistance of counsel. A crowbar was admissible, and counsel’s objection to the crowbar’s admission would have been overruled; a nonresponsive answer by an officer that there was a warrant out for the defendant did not in itself place the defendant’s character into issue; and not requesting a lesser included charge on criminal trespass was a reasonable trial strategy as it would have been inconsistent with counsel’s trial theory that the defendant had been at the victim’s house to investigate suspicious noises, a lawful purpose. Rudnitskas v. State, 291 Ga. App. 685, 662 S.E.2d 729 (2008).

There was no merit to a defendant’s ineffective assistance of counsel claims. A motion to suppress incriminating letters would have been meritless because the defendant’s friend willingly handed the letters over to police and the letters were not discovered as a result of an illegal search; counsel did not have a witness testify because counsel did not believe that the witness was credible; and given the fact that the defendant would have been subject to extensive and potentially damaging cross-examination about the letters had the defendant testified, counsel was not deficient in advising the defendant not to testify and the defendant had not been prejudiced by not testifying. Lockheart v. State, 284 Ga. 78, 663 S.E.2d 213 (2008).

Trial court properly denied the defendant’s motion to withdraw a guilty plea when the defendant claimed that trial counsel was ineffective by misinforming the defendant that the sentence would run concurrently with any imposed by Tennessee for a parole violation and that the sentence would be served in Tennessee. The trial court was entitled to give credit to testimony from trial counsel and documents indicating that the defendant’s Tennessee sentence was indeed running concurrently with the Georgia sentence; it was also entitled to credit trial counsel’s testimony that counsel had informed the defendant that the sentence would be served in Georgia unless Tennessee authorities extradited the defendant to Tennessee and that counsel had made no guarantees that they would do so. Maples v. State, 293 Ga. App. 232, 666 S.E.2d 609 (2008).

Defendant did not show prejudice from trial counsel’s failure to ensure transcription of a similar transaction hearing. The defendant did not show that the hearing transcript was necessary to resolve any issue on appeal; any error with respect to the admission of the similar transaction evidence could be resolved on the basis of the record at trial. Robinson v. State, 293 Ga. App. 238, 666 S.E.2d 615 (2008).

Defense counsel was not deficient for failing to object to an officer’s testimony that while violently resisting arrest, the defendant repeatedly screamed, “I’m not going back to jail,” as evidence of these statements demonstrated the defendant’s intent to commit the crimes of obstructing and hindering law enforcement officers, and were not rendered inadmissible merely because the statements incidentally put the defendant’s character at issue. Bubrick v. State, 293 Ga. App. 502, 667 S.E.2d 666 (2008).

Defendant did not show ineffective assistance of counsel when there was no evidence that recusal of the trial judge was warranted and there was no evidentiary support for the defendant’s claim that trial counsel did not adequately involve the defendant in the pretrial and trial proceedings. Furthermore, the defendant did not show how the alleged deficiencies would have affected the outcome of the trial. Allen v. State, 284 Ga. 310, 667 S.E.2d 54 (2008).

Defendant did not show that counsel was ineffective as the trial court found that if a witness that counsel failed to locate testified, the testimony would not have been helpful in light of the witness's demeanor and credibility problems; counsel made a good faith effort to find another witness but had limited information about the witness; counsel's failure to timely notify the state of a witness's testimony was not prejudicial because the testimony would not have been helpful to the defendant and would not have been admissible at trial; and counsel was not ineffective for requesting charges on both accident and self-defense because both were warranted. Hudson v. State, 284 Ga. 595, 669 S.E.2d 94 (2008).

Since both the defendant and the ex-wife testified that they had a phone conversation on the day of the stalking and burglary incident, but disagreed as to what was said in the conversation, and the defendant's cell phone records would not have reflected the substance of the conversation, the admission of the records would have had no impact on the issue of credibility, and the failure of defense counsel to obtain the phone records did not amount to ineffective assistance. Bray v. State, 294 Ga. App. 562, 669 S.E.2d 509 (2008).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to conduct a more extensive cross-examination of a codefendant as counsel testified that counsel did not consider the codefendant to be a believable witness, the weight of the evidence was clearly against the codefendant, and counsel's strategy was to try to keep the defendant in the background and avoid responsibility for the crimes. Freeman v. State, 284 Ga. 830, 672 S.E.2d 644 (2009).

Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim based on counsel's failure to strike a juror and to make certain objections failed. The juror stated that the juror did not think the juror would be biased against the defendant and would try to base the juror's decision solely on the evidence; incriminating statements by the defendant were admissible as an exception to the hearsay rule as admissions against interest; a physician who testified that the victim's demeanor was consistent with that of a sexual assault victim was not bolstering the victim's testimony; even if trial counsel erred in failing to object to the prosecutor's statement that trial counsel should make the defendant show the defendant's teeth, no prejudice was shown given counsel's rebuttal in closing and the significant evidence of guilt; and the prosecutor was not offering the prosecutor's personal belief about the veracity of an eyewitness and the victim, but instead was arguing that based on the facts and reasonable inferences drawn therefrom, the jury should conclude that those witnesses were telling the truth. Brown v. State, 293 Ga. App. 564, 667 S.E.2d 410 (2008).

There was no ineffectiveness of the defendant's trial counsel for failing to object to questions posed to a codefendant and for failing to object to the prosecutor's closing argument as the testimony and comments by the prosecutor did not suggest to the jury that the defendant was unable to produce an alibi witness; further, the questions were proper, as were the prosecutor's remarks. Hung v. State, 284 Ga. 796, 671 S.E.2d 811 (2009).

Defendant, who sought to withdraw a guilty plea, failed to show that counsel was ineffective for failing to introduce at a Jackson-Denno hearing evidence of the defendant's mental health evaluations; thus, the defendant's motion to withdraw the plea was properly denied. The evaluations were not yet available at the time of the hearing, and neither addressed the issue of the defendant's competence at the time the defendant gave the incriminating statement. Robertson v. State, 297 Ga. App. 228, 676 S.E.2d 871 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1300, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 406 (Ga. 2009).

There was no showing that the defendant's counsel was ineffective at the defendant's criminal trial as counsel sought bifurcation of a felony murder charge, and seeking severance of a firearm possession charge was not warranted because it was the underlying felony for the felony murder charge. Additionally, counsel's failure to seek a limiting instruction in regard to the defendant's prior conviction did not constitute deficient performance since there was no showing that the outcome of the trial would have been different but for the deficiency. Varner v. State, 285 Ga. 300, 676 S.E.2d 189 (2009).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

Trial court did not clearly err in rejecting the defendant's claim that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to locate, interview, and secure a witness's presence at trial because the trial court was authorized to conclude from trial counsel's testimony that the defendant rejected the defendant's offer to hire an investigator and that counsel made reasonable efforts to locate the witness and to establish an alibi defense; moreover, based on the inconsistencies in the statements of the defendant and family members regarding the alibi, and the credibility issues regarding the alibi witness, counsel made a reasonable strategic decision to withdraw the alibi defense. Ransom v. State, 297 Ga. App. 902, 678 S.E.2d 574 (2009).

There was no showing of ineffective assistance in counsel's failure to pursue a justification defense pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-3-21(a) because, although the defendant claimed that the defendant shot the victim to protect the defendant's father, inter alia, the facts did not show that the father was in imminent danger, and the victim's threat against the father was made 30 minutes before the fatal shooting; at the time of the shooting, both men had fought in the street outside the father's home, the father was inside the home and not with them, and the victim was running away from the defendant. Even if the victim, who may have been carrying a knife, was going towards the father's house, the victim was shot before reaching the front yard. Carter v. State, 285 Ga. 565, 678 S.E.2d 909 (2009).

Although the defendant claimed that defense counsel failed to adequately investigate the victim's prior difficulties or bad acts and failed to investigate whether any toxicology reports relating to the victim would have bolstered the defendant's self-defense claim, because the defendant failed to specify what evidence counsel could have presented that would have changed the result of the trial, the defendant failed to establish that defense counsel's actions were deficient; in any event, because of the overwhelming evidence of guilt, the defendant would have been unable to show that, but for this claimed deficient performance, the jury would have reached a different verdict. Buggle v. State, 299 Ga. App. 515, 683 S.E.2d 85 (2009).

Trial counsel's deficient performance in failing to object to a jury charge was not prejudicial because the trial court admitted having erred and went on to conclude that the error was harmless in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt. Higginbotham v. State, 287 Ga. 187, 695 S.E.2d 210 (2010).

Trial counsel did not perform deficiently by failing to object to the trial court's instruction on possession of a firearm by a convicted felon when the defendant was charged with use of a firearm by a convicted felon because there was no need for counsel to object to the charge since the district attorney immediately advised the trial court of the error, and the jury was recalled and given instructions with regard to the crime as charged. Higginbotham v. State, 287 Ga. 187, 695 S.E.2d 210 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a jury charge on immunity granted to a witness because the transcript revealed that the witness was questioned regarding the grant of immunity and was thoroughly cross-examined regarding the witness's motives for testifying; that questioning and the general jury instructions on witness credibility that were given were sufficient to apprise the jury of any negative inferences the jury could draw from the immunity arrangement involving this witness. Dockery v. State, 287 Ga. 275, 695 S.E.2d 599 (2010).

Trial counsel did not "open the door" to bad character evidence by stating that the evidence would show that the victim previously stole the defendant's cash and marijuana because evidence concerning the victim's transaction with the defendant and the defendant's subsequent suspicion that the victim stole the defendant's marijuana and money was admissible as evidence of prior difficulties between the two and was relevant to show the defendant's motives. Taylor v. State, 304 Ga. App. 395, 696 S.E.2d 686 (2010).

Defendant failed to establish ineffective assistance of trial counsel because assuming that trial counsel's failure to obtain and review the actual recording of the defendant's statement to the police constituted deficient performance, the defendant did not show that the defendant was prejudiced thereby; trial counsel testified that counsel cross-examined the officer who took the defendant's statement based on notes from counsel's discussions with the defendant, counsel's investigator, the officer's report, and the officer's direct testimony. Cuvas v. State, 306 Ga. App. 679, 703 S.E.2d 116 (2010).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object when the trial court denied the jury's request for a transcript of the testimony given by a victim because the trial court was authorized to deny the jury's request; the jury did not specify any portion of the victim's testimony that the jury wanted to rehear but rather asked for a copy of all of the victim's testimony, and the record did not reflect that there was a serious disagreement as to the substance of the victim's testimony or that the testimony had been misstated during the course of trial. Boatright v. State, 308 Ga. App. 266, 707 S.E.2d 158 (2011).

Defendant failed to show that the defendant was prejudiced due to trial counsel's failure to review the redacted version of a recording of the defendant's police interview and to object to the recording because the defendant did not show a reasonable probability (i.e., a probability sufficient to undermine confidence in the outcome) that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different; although the defendant argued that a reference concerning "illegal use of prescription drugs" was prejudicial character evidence, no mention was made in the interview of whether the defendant had been prescribed the drug or was consuming the drug illegally. Eskew v. State, 309 Ga. App. 44, 709 S.E.2d 893 (2011).

Because the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to grant the defendant a continuance due to the untimeliness of the state's witness list, and because any error was harmless, the defendant could not succeed on the claim that the defendant's right to effective trial counsel was violated thereby; the defendant's claim did not require application of a presumption of prejudice, which was applicable only in extremely narrow circumstances. Norris v. State, 289 Ga. 154, 709 S.E.2d 792 (2011).

Defendant's trial counsel was not ineffective for requesting the pattern jury instruction that included a witness's degree of certainty as a factor the jury could consider in assessing the reliability of a witness's identification testimony because the defendant failed to show that the defendant was prejudiced by the request, given the other evidence linking the defendant to the crimes, including the defendant's possession of a victim's cell phone and a revolver matching the description of the one used in all three robberies. Willis v. State, 309 Ga. App. 414, 710 S.E.2d 616 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1356, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 70 (Ga. 2012).

Because there was no error in the trial court's instruction to the jury, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object. Holland v. State, 310 Ga. App. 623, 714 S.E.2d 126 (2011).

Trial counsel's failure to seek admission of a detective's notes reflecting that the defendant was scared of the victim under the rule of completeness did not support a finding of ineffective assistance of counsel because the defendant could not show that such was professionally deficient or prejudicial. Payne v. State, 289 Ga. 691, 715 S.E.2d 104 (2011).

Defendant's contention that defense counsel was ineffective for failing to preserve objections for appellate review by renewing all objections at the end of trial asserted an issue that was not the law in Georgia; having made a timely and proper objection, counsel is not required to renew counsel's objections at the close of the case to preserve the issues for appellate review. Sledge v. State, 312 Ga. App. 97, 717 S.E.2d 682 (2011).

Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective by failing to assert that the state's statutory and constitutional provisions requiring the service of mandatory minimum sentences before consideration for parole regardless of age constituted cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the Eighth Amendment to the United States Constitution because any consideration for Eighth Amendment purposes of incomplete brain maturation due solely to age was inappropriate since the defendant was 20 years old at the time the defendant committed the crime and was sentenced to a term of years rather than death. Gandy v. State, 290 Ga. 166, 718 S.E.2d 287 (2011).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective by not arguing the rule of completeness, former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-38 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-822), as a means to get the defendant's entire post-stabbing statement into evidence because there were discrepancies between the defendant's trial testimony and the account of a witness regarding a statement the defendant allegedly made on the night of the stabbing; therefore, an acquittal would not likely have resulted had the jury heard the witness's testimony in its entirety. Carruth v. State, 290 Ga. 342, 721 S.E.2d 80 (2012).

Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel due to counsel's consent to bond conditions because although counsel testified at the new trial hearing, the defendant did not question counsel as to whether counsel actually consented to the bond conditions; the defendant did not show a reasonable likelihood that without counsel's consent the bond conditions would have been less onerous. Sevostiyanova v. State, 313 Ga. App. 729, 722 S.E.2d 333 (2012), cert. denied, No. S12C0968, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 612 (Ga. 2012).

Defendant was not constructively denied counsel due to the strained relationship with the defendant's appointed attorney because trial counsel subjected the prosecution's case to meaningful adversarial testing, including cross-examining the state's witnesses, moving for a directed verdict, and making a closing argument on defendant's behalf.

Calloway v. State, 313 Ga. App. 708, 722 S.E.2d 422 (2012).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to bring errors in the jury charges to the trial court's attention because the complained of jury charges were proper, and trial counsel's conduct fell well within the broad range of reasonable professional conduct; there is no reasonable likelihood of a different outcome had trial counsel raised the arguments the defendant asserted counsel should have raised. Davis v. State, 290 Ga. 757, 725 S.E.2d 280 (2012).

Counsel was not ineffective for introducing in evidence the defendant's videotaped statement to police without redacting portions after the defendant invoked the right to counsel and asked God to have mercy on the defendant's soul, as it did not amount to an improper comment on the right to remain silent, but showed invocation of the right to counsel after giving a lengthy statement. Martin v. State, 290 Ga. 901, 725 S.E.2d 313 (2012).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a new trial because counsel's practice of not requesting a transcription of voir dire or opening and closing arguments was within the broad range of professional conduct afforded to trial counsel in a non-death penalty case. Dunlap v. State, 291 Ga. 51, 727 S.E.2d 468 (2012).

Defense counsel was not ineffective in stipulating to negative scientific test results because the test results were not inconsistent with the defendant's defense. Chance v. State, 291 Ga. 241, 728 S.E.2d 635 (2012).

Defendant, who was convicted of statutory rape, failed to show ineffective assistance of counsel because of defense counsel's failure to assert that the door had been opened to evidence of the victim's deceit regarding the victim's age as counsel testified that counsel did not hear or see any evidence that opened the door regarding the victim's deceit about the victim's age and that counsel found many of the questions to be helpful to the defense strategy of showing the victim was the one who pursued the defendant. Also, the transcript showed that the state did not introduce any direct evidence to open the door about the victim's deceit regarding the victim's age. Baker v. State, 316 Ga. App. 122, 728 S.E.2d 767 (2012).

Trial counsel was not ineffective by failing to introduce evidence of the age difference between the defendant and the accomplice as the defendant had not shown that there was a reasonable likelihood that but for trial counsel's failure to elicit additional, non-specific evidence regarding the age disparity between the defendant and the accomplice, the outcome of the trial would have been different. Trial counsel revealed at the motion for new trial hearing that the jury should have been able to observe at trial the obvious age disparity between the two. Lee v. State, 316 Ga. App. 227, 728 S.E.2d 847 (2012).

Trial counsel was not ineffective by failing to object to hearsay testimony provided by the defendant's accomplice as the hearsay was only cumulative of the accomplice's own admissible testimony describing the defendant as having shot the victim in the back of the head and that the defendant gave money to the accomplice shortly after the murder. The admission of cumulative hearsay evidence was error, and the defendant could not show that, but for trial counsel's failure to object to such evidence, the outcome of the trial would have been different. Lee v. State, 316 Ga. App. 227, 728 S.E.2d 847 (2012).

Trial counsel's failure to produce evidence of the layout of the defendant's home did not constitute ineffective assistance as the defense theory was that the accomplice was fully responsible for the crimes and that the defendant was not even present at the time of the murder. Moreover, the defendant could not make a showing of prejudice as the layout of the home would not have refuted the accomplice's testimony. Lee v. State, 316 Ga. App. 227, 728 S.E.2d 847 (2012).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to present evidence regarding the origin of the blanket in which the victim's body was wrapped to refute the testimony of the defendant's accomplice that the blanket had been taken from the laundry bin at the defendant's home as trial counsel did, in fact, elicit testimony confirming the lack of any forensic evidence connecting the defendant to the murder. Lee v. State, 316 Ga. App. 227, 728 S.E.2d 847 (2012).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to present a police photograph showing the absence of computer equipment in the defendant's bedroom to refute the testimony of the defendant's accomplice that the victim was in the defendant's bedroom looking at computer merchandise while the defendant pulled out a gun to shoot the victim. Since the defendant did not make a showing that computer equipment was not contained in a part of the defendant's bedroom that was not depicted in the picture, the defendant could not demonstrate that there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different had trial counsel taken the suggested course. Lee v. State, 316 Ga. App. 227, 728 S.E.2d 847 (2012).

Trial court did not err in finding that the defendant failed to establish an ineffectiveness claim because counsel recognized the need for interpreters and secured the interpreters to communicate with the defendant during their meetings and throughout the court proceedings; the defendant had ample opportunity to inform counsel or the trial court of any problems with the interpreters but did not do so. Cruz v. State, 315 Ga. App. 843, 729 S.E.2d 9 (2012).

Trial counsel's objections to similar transaction evidence were sufficient to raise the issue of whether the evidence showed a propensity for violence regardless of whether counsel used the word "propensity"; trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to make a meritless objection; trial counsel excepted to the trial court's denial of a motion for mistrial and thus preserved the issue for review; trial counsel was not deficient for failing to object to the state's cross-examination of the defendant because the state was permitted to ask the defendant about a similar transaction; counsel's asking a witness whether the witness was a legal alien was a matter of trial strategy; and the defendant had not shown that counsel could have challenged the validity of a guilty plea used to enhance the defendant's sentence. Dunham v. State, 315 Ga. App. 901, 729 S.E.2d 45 (2012).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

Counsel testified that counsel failed to make certain objections during opening and closing and in regard to witness bolstering for strategic reasons and that counsel decided after extensive discussion not to call the defendant as a witness because counsel believed the potential downside was overwhelming. Rawls v. State, 315 Ga. App. 891, 730 S.E.2d 1 (2012).

Defendant could not establish that the defendant's attorney was deficient for failing to object to the testimony by a certified real estate and tax appraiser because the testimony by the witness regarding building permits was not opinion testimony, but was factual testimony about how structural engineering reports and architectural plans figured into the building permitting process and about the inspections required in connection with a building permit obtained with such documents. The defendant did not demonstrate that the witness rendered any opinion regarding the building permit in the defendants' case. Wilson v. State, 317 Ga. App. 171, 730 S.E.2d 500 (2012).

Defendant's counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the trial court's jury instructions on similar transaction evidence that was admitted, although the trial court made a slip of the tongue during the instructions, as correct comprehensive limiting instructions were given to the jury during the trial; accordingly, any error was harmless. Boynton v. State, 317 Ga. App. 446, 730 S.E.2d 738 (2012), cert. denied, No. S13C0017, 2013 Ga. LEXIS 88 (Ga. 2013).

Trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to object to a probation officer's testimony as to the identity of the perpetrator because the testimony of the probation officer was not based on any distinctive observation about the defendant and the error was not harmless since the other evidence tending to identify the defendant as the perpetrator was limited to the brief testimony of the law enforcement officer, a recording of a jail house telephone call in which the defendant spoke to the defendant's roommate about how the defendant's roommate had "pulled one," and the similarities between the defendant's shoes and those worn by the perpetrator. However, no scientific evidence definitively linked the defendant to the crimes. Owens v. State, 317 Ga. App. 821, 733 S.E.2d 16 (2012).

Claim that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to renew the defendant's motion for mistrial, failing to conduct a proper examination of the victim in support of the defendant's motion for mistrial, and failing to request a limiting jury instruction contemporaneously with the admission of testimony regarding prior difficulties between the defendant and the victim failed, as the defendant could not show prejudice from any of the claimed deficiencies. Hernandez v. State, 317 Ga. App. 845, 733 S.E.2d 30 (2012).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed, as counsel strategically decided not to object to the prosecutor's misstatement of testimony and instead comment on the misrepresented statement when given the next opportunity and there were no insufficiencies in the affidavit supporting the search warrant to justify the filing of a motion to suppress. Lopez-Jimenez v. State, 317 Ga. App. 868, 733 S.E.2d 42 (2012).

Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to object to alleged prosecutorial misconduct, the prosecutors questioning of the defendant upon the defendant's post-arrest silence, as any objection would have been overruled, since the defendant opened the door to that line of questioning, and counsel could not be ineffective for failing to make a meritless objection. Doyle v. State, 291 Ga. 729, 733 S.E.2d 290 (2012).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the prosecutor's statement's about the victims' credibility, because the prosecutor did not improperly bolster the victim's credibility when the prosecutor asked the victim if the victim was telling the truth each time the victim recounted the rape and why the victim did not immediately call police, as the questions came after defense counsel attempted to impeach the victim's credibility. Jones v. State, 318 Ga. App. 342, 733 S.E.2d 400 (2012).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed as counsel presented mitigation witnesses and conducted a reasonable investigation as to mitigating circumstances to present at sentencing; counsel was not ineffective for failing to develop and present evidence of the victim's methamphetamine use at the time of the crimes to explain the victim's behavior, because the only evidence of such use was from two to three days prior to the incident, and thus, would have been irrelevant and inadmissible; counsel was not ineffective for failing to present the testimony of the victim's girlfriend regarding a recent altercation between the victim and the victim's cousin, as the girlfriend testified at the motion for a new trial that no such fight occurred, only a scuffle in which the victim was not hit. Barrett v. State, 292 Ga. 160, 733 S.E.2d 304 (2012).

As the defendant had decided to turn himself in and had already revealed to a law enforcement officer that the defendant had killed the victim, claiming self defense, and that the defendant had attempted to conceal the body, trial counsel's decision to permit the defendant to cooperate in the interrogations and searches did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel. Woods v. State, 291 Ga. 804, 733 S.E.2d 730 (2012).

Defendant's claim that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to convey a plea offer failed, because an informal offer was discussed with the defendant, who rejected the possibility. Brown v. State, 291 Ga. 892, 734 S.E.2d 23 (2012).

Defendant failed to show deficient performance on the part of defense counsel as defense counsel testified that defense counsel correctly advised the defendant that the defendant would not be eligible for parole until the defendant served 30 years of the life sentence and did not tell the defendant that the defendant could withdraw the plea at any time, testimony which the trial court credited. Arnold v. State, 292 Ga. 95, 734 S.E.2d 382 (2012).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to relevant and admissible evidence, failing to object to testimony that was supported by the evidence, or failing to make a meritless motion to exclude evidence. Thomas v. State, 318 Ga. App. 849, 734 S.E.2d 823 (2012).

Trial counsel's decision not to recall the victim to the stand to discuss the victim's provocative behavior did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel but was a strategic decision so as to ensure that counsel did not violate the former Rape Shield Statute, former O.C.G.A. § 24-2-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-4-412). Whorton v. State, 318 Ga. App. 885, 735 S.E.2d 7 (2012).

Defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel based on the failure to object to an officer's testimony that the officer believed a rape had occurred failed because the defendant could not prove the outcome would have otherwise been different given the overwhelming evidence against the defendant. Osei-Owusu v. State, 319 Ga. App. 33, 735 S.E.2d 75 (2012).

While trial counsel testified that the failure to object or move for mistrial when an officer testified that the defendant and an accomplice were arrested for, inter alia, being a convicted felon with a weapon was not part of counsel's strategy, the reference was passing and equivocal and the defendant could not establish it placed the defendant's character in evidence, nor was the defendant charged with that offense. Toro v. State, 319 Ga. App. 39, 735 S.E.2d 80 (2012).

Trial counsel's failure to convince the trial court to admit statements about the involvement of others and failure to make objection to the admission of a recorded statement did not amount to ineffective assistance because the arguments and objections sought were meritless. Bradley v. State, 292 Ga. 607, 740 S.E.2d 100 (2013).

Defendant failed to prove that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to give timely notice to the state of a surprise witness who was precluded from testifying because the defendant failed to present testimony at the hearing on the motion for a new trial as to what the witness would have testified to. Jones v. State, 292 Ga. 593, 740 S.E.2d 147 (2013).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to offer a "timeline" to show that the defendant's girlfriend delayed taking the victim to the hospital because the girlfriend never provided exact times in her testimony and nothing indicated that any delay in seeking medical treatment contributed to the victim's death. Jones v. State, 292 Ga. 593, 740 S.E.2d 147 (2013).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

Even assuming counsel's failure to serve a detective with a subpoena and inability to admit evidence of the detective's report and interview fell below prevailing professional norms, no reasonable probability existed that the jury would have returned a verdict of not guilty as evidence covering the same issues the defendant sought to cover with the detective was admitted. Goodwin v. State, 320 Ga. App. 224, 739 S.E.2d 712 (2013).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to statements that have previously been held to be within the bounds of possible argument, for failing to object to statements the prosecution used to argue motive, or for failing to object to the prosecutor's statement which urged the jury to draw inferences that an alibi witness lied from the circumstances. Wright v. State, 319 Ga. App. 723, 738 S.E.2d 310 (2013).

Trial counsel's failure to elicit testimony that an officer retrieved a shotgun from the victim's house did not prejudice the defense because the victim testified that the victim had a shotgun and the jury could not have reasonably believed there was no shotgun; thus, the defendant was unable to show that the jury's weighing of evidence of the defendant's self-defense claim would have resulted in a different outcome. Williams v. State, 319 Ga. App. 827, 738 S.E.2d 637 (2013).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to move to redact the portion of the autopsy report that said the manner of death was homicide because it was undisputed that the victim was killed by someone and the ultimate issue for the jury was whether the defendant was the killer. Young v. State, 292 Ga. 443, 738 S.E.2d 575 (2013).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to a reference by a witness to an email sent by a deceased ex-employee that was consistent with an email sent by an employee alerting general counsel to the defendant's improper acts at work because the brief reference was cumulative of other evidence. Brown v. State, 321 Ga. App. 198, 739 S.E.2d 118 (2013).

Defense counsel could not have been ineffective for failing to demand the trial court extend use immunity to a defense witness who invoked the Fifth Amendment right to remain silent as there was not current Georgia authority for such action. Ward v. State, 292 Ga. 637, 740 S.E.2d 112 (2013).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the investigator's statement at trial that the investigator took out a warrant against the defendant for burglary in addition to the charges in the case, given that the statement was brief and five witnesses identified the defendant as the assailant in the subject incidents. Riley v. State, 319 Ga. App. 823, 738 S.E.2d 659 (2013).

Defendant failed to establish that trial counsel's decision to question a witness about changes in the defendant's appearance rather than object to the state's evidence on that point was a decision that no reasonable trial counsel would make under the circumstances of the case; to the contrary, counsel's attempts to explain the defendant's appearance through the questioning of witnesses suggested that counsel made a strategic decision about how to handle the state's evidence about the defendant's appearance. Bufford v. State, 320 Ga. App. 123, 739 S.E.2d 421 (2013).

Defendant's claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because the defendant failed to show either professional deficiencies by counsel or prejudice in regard to the defendant's complaints about a jury instruction on "no duty to retreat," the alleged criminal history of a witness, and the detective's alleged bolstering of a witness's testimony, claims for which the Georgia Supreme Court found no support. Hoffler v. State, 292 Ga. 537, 739 S.E.2d 362 (2013).

Defendant failed to prove that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object that a juror who indicated that the juror was “not totally impartial” was allowed to remain seated with the panel and questioned concerning bias in the presence of the remaining qualified jurors as there was no evidence that any of the remaining jurors were somehow affected by the questioning. Furthermore, trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the admission of evidence that was cumulative of other unchallenged evidence. Maurer v. State, 320 Ga. App. 585, 740 S.E.2d 318 (2013).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to secure a ruling on an objection to the victim’s in-court identification of the defendant as looking like the person the victim saw walking with the victim’s nephew just before the victim returned and found the house burglarized because the victim clarified the response, confirming that the defendant was the person walking with the nephew and, thus, any additional arguments would have been futile. Williams v. State, 320 Ga. App. 831, 740 S.E.2d 766 (2013).

Defense counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to an investigator’s testimony regarding a DNA analysis tying the defendant to a prior offense because, despite the fact that the investigator was not one who performed the DNA analysis, the investigator did not testify as to the results; the investigator’s testimony was limited to facts of which the investigator had personal knowledge and the defendant was linked to the prior offense through a certified copy of the prior conviction. Williams v. State, 320 Ga. App. 831, 740 S.E.2d 766 (2013).

Even assuming counsel’s failure to object to testimony that a photo lineup had been made up of photos of persons who had been arrested constituted deficient performance, the defendant failed to show prejudice because there was other testimony of the defendant’s bad character admitted without objection. Thornton v. State, 292 Ga. 796, 741 S.E.2d 641 (2013).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because cell phone records and a 9-1-1 call log were cumulative of other testimony and, thus, the defendant was not prejudiced by counsel’s failure to object to their admission; the prejudicial effect of a misstatement in counsel’s opening statement was mitigated by the trial court charging the jury that opening statements were not evidence; counsel was not ineffective for failing to make a meritless object to the admission of a witness’s prior consistent statement, admissible because the witness’s veracity was placed at issue; and the failure to request a charge on self-defense did not amount to ineffective assistance when the evidence did not support such a charge and it would have been inconsistent with the defense theory. Williams v. State, 292 Ga. 844, 742 S.E.2d 445 (2013).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the state’s failure to comply with Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 31.1 and 31.3 as the detective’s testimony regarding the fact that the defendant, an accomplice, and the victim were suspected of murdering the victim’s husband, was admissible as relevant to the defendant’s motive to kill the victim. Furthermore, trial counsel was not ineffective for inadvertently opening the door to the state’s question about the defendant’s silence in trial counsel’s attempt to highlight the accomplice’s behavior of giving multiple versions of an event in an effort to point fingers at everyone except the accomplice personally. Goodman v. State, 293 Ga. 80, 742 S.E.2d 719 (2013).

Defendant’s claims of ineffective assistance of counsel failed as, inter alia, counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to an agent’s testimony that the agent’s investigation led the agent to believe that the defendant killed the victim as the defendant did not inquire into the reason for such failure and failed to overcome the presumption that counsel’s actions fell within the broad range of reasonable professional conduct. Nor was counsel ineffective for failing to object to the district attorney’s opening statement, closing argument, or other alleged misconduct as the jury was instructed that the opening statement was not evidence, the prosecutor drew reasonable inferences from the evidence in closing argument, and any factual issues were for the jury. Hall v. State, 292 Ga. 701, 743 S.E.2d 6 (2013).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to investigate and present evidence that the victim's father had used corporal punishment on the victim in the past when the victim misbehaved and that the perceived threat of such punishment could have established a motive for the victim to fabricate the initial outcry because there was evidence authorizing the jury to find that the victim had motive to lie to avoid getting into trouble. Carstaffin v. State, 323 Ga. App. 354, 743 S.E.2d 605 (2013).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

Defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to move to suppress the photographic lineup because there was no evidence concerning how the lineup was impermissibly suggestive; the array presented photographs of six males of the same race with similar complexions, hairstyles, and facial hair, and the investigator who prepared the lineup testified that the photographs did not exactly match the defendant's height, weight, and age, but contained individuals who looked "very similar." Harris v. State, 322 Ga. App. 87, 744 S.E.2d 82 (2013).

Defendants' claims of ineffective assistance of counsel failed because the first defendant failed to point to any evidence or defenses that could have been presented had counsel devoted more time to the first defendant and/or the preparation of the case, and the failure to object to or move to suppress admissible evidence would have been futile. Betancourt v. State, 322 Ga. App. 201, 744 S.E.2d 419 (2013).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claim lacked merit as the defendant failed to show prejudice as a result of trial counsel's failure to object, on hearsay and confrontation grounds, to a detective's testimony that two of the victim's rings were found in the defendant's pants because the testimony was cumulative of other evidence that the rings were found among the defendant's belongings, nor could the defendant show prejudice from counsel's failure to move for a mistrial when a detective testified that the victim found a second gun in the laundry room as there was no reasonable probability that but for counsel's failure to object the outcome would have been different. Rudison v. State, 322 Ga. App. 248, 744 S.E.2d 444 (2013).

Claim of ineffective assistance failed because the defendant failed to prove that the outcome would have been different if counsel had moved to redact from the indictment a charge that the defendant violated the Georgia Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-14-1 et seq., though a pattern of criminal activity in furtherance of a pimping enterprise, and testimony regarding events leading up to the arrest of the defendant and another allowed counsel to argue that the weapon did not belong to the defendant but to the other individual. Holmes v. State, 293 Ga. 229, 744 S.E.2d 701 (2013).

Assuming that trial counsel was deficient for not moving to redact a recording to omit the investigating officer's reference to the attorney's letter which indicated that the defendant briefly fondled the victim, the defendant nevertheless failed to carry the burden of establishing prejudice necessary for an ineffective assistance of counsel claim given the defendant's own trial testimony that the defendant touched the victim's bottom and the victim's testimony about the incident. Graves v. State, 322 Ga. App. 373, 745 S.E.2d 296 (2013).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to a properly admitted exhibit or failing to request a continuance after discovering the four boxes of documents as there was no discovery violation. Raymond v. State, 322 Ga. App. 404, 745 S.E.2d 689 (2013).

Although the defendant contended that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to properly investigate the defendant's mental health and adequately prepare the defendant to testify at trial in light of the defendant's mental condition, at the motion for new trial hearing, trial counsel testified that counsel had no concerns about the defendant's mental health. Moreover, the defendant presented no evidence at the new trial hearing that mental illness might have been an issue to be further explored by trial counsel and, thus, counsel was not ineffective for failing to investigate the issue further. Russell v. State, 322 Ga. App. 553, 745 S.E.2d 774 (2013).

Trial counsel's failure to object to the trial court's statement to defendant that "the State offered you an extremely good deal to plea bargain this case deal" did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel as the record showed that the statement was made within the context of the defendant's request to fire counsel and proceed pro se, not within the context of a plea hearing. Russell v. State, 322 Ga. App. 553, 745 S.E.2d 774 (2013).

Acquittal on serious offenses meant no ineffective assistance. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to investigate a detective's note regarding the statement of the county medical examiner that the gunshot wound to the victim's head was consistent with the victim being shot while the victim was on the victim's knees. The defendant could not demonstrate prejudice as the defendant was acquitted on the charges of murder and felony murder. Lee v. State, 316 Ga. App. 227, 728 S.E.2d 847 (2012).

Failure to visit defendant in jail not ineffective assistance. — Trial counsel was not ineffective based on counsel's failure to come to a jail to confer with a defendant in jail after the defendant's bond was revoked mid-trial; counsel had conferred with the defendant numerous times and was in constant touch with the defendant before the bond was revoked, counsel filed numerous pretrial motions, and counsel obtained acquittals for the defendant on two of the eight charges originally alleged in an indictment. Branton v. State, 292 Ga. App. 104, 663 S.E.2d 414 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1771, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 873 (Ga. 2008).

Counsel meeting with defendant ten to twelve times. — Defendant presented no information to show a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different had counsel acted otherwise because by the defendant's own admission, the defendant met with trial counsel "just about as much as anybody would want to meet with their attorney," or perhaps ten or twelve times prior to trial; trial counsel testified that counsel went over the evidence with the defendant numerous times and discussed strategy and that the defendant relied on counsel's advice and decided not to testify. Neal v. State, 308 Ga. App. 551, 707 S.E.2d 503 (2011).

Deprivation of fundamental right when accused "virtually unrepresented." — If appointed attorneys are so ignorant, negligent, or unfaithful that the accused was virtually unrepresented, or did not in any real or substantial sense have the aid of counsel, defendant would be deprived of a fundamental constitutional right, and if convicted might successfully complain that defendant had been denied due process of law. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 192 Ga. 634, 15 S.E.2d 873 (1941), later appeal, 193 Ga. 661, 19 S.E.2d 499, cert. denied, 317 U.S. 626, 63 S. Ct. 36, 87 L. Ed. 506 (1942).

If counsel for the defendant in a criminal case, whether appointed by the court or of the defendant's selection, was so negligent or unfaithful in the trial of the case that the defendant was virtually unrepresented, or if the defendant did not in any real or substantial sense have the aid of counsel, this amounts to deprivation of a fundamental constitutional right, and the defendant under such circumstances may complain that the defendant has been denied due process of law. Jones v. Balkcom, 210 Ga. 262, 79 S.E.2d 1 (1953), cert. denied, 347 U.S. 956, 74 S. Ct. 682, 98 L. Ed. 1101 (1954).

Pro se claims preserved. — Because it appeared from the record that the defendant, pro se, attempted to raise various ineffective assistance of counsel claims enumerating instances of alleged misconduct at the earliest opportunity, even though trial counsel filed a notice of appeal, the defendant was not foreclosed from raising those claims in a later motion for a new trial. Thomas v. State, 282 Ga. App. 1, 637 S.E.2d 502 (2006).

Pro se defendant cannot raise ineffective assistance claim as to issues arising during trial. — Because the defendant proceeded pro se at trial, the defendant could not raise an ineffective assistance of counsel claim with regard to issues that arose during trial. Fields v. State, 310 Ga. App. 455, 714 S.E.2d 45 (2011).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

Burden on defendant to show virtual unrepresentation to sustain contention of denial of benefit of counsel.

— The burden is on the defendant to sustain the defendant's contention that the defendant was denied the benefit of counsel; in order to sustain such contention, it is incumbent upon the defendant to show that the defendant was virtually unrepresented. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 193 Ga. 661, 19 S.E.2d 499, cert. denied, 317 U.S. 626, 63 S. Ct. 36, 87 L. Ed. 506 (1942).

After conviction of a capital offense, defendant sought release by writ of habeas corpus, alleging that attorneys appointed to defend the defendant were so ignorant, inexperienced, or grossly lacking in appreciation of their responsibility as to amount to virtually no representation, and that consequently the defendant was deprived of the benefit of counsel as guaranteed by the state and federal Constitutions, the evidence introduced by the parties respectively, without objection, demanded the finding that the applicant was not denied the benefit of counsel, as contended, and that certain evidence rejected would not have authorized a different result. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 193 Ga. 661, 19 S.E.2d 499, cert. denied, 317 U.S. 626, 63 S. Ct. 36, 87 L. Ed. 506 (1942).

Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel as: (1) the defendant waived any claims of ineffective assistance of trial counsel that were not raised in the defendant's motion for a new trial; (2) the defendant did not call trial counsel at the motion for new trial hearing and the defendant did not produce the phone records counsel did not obtain to show that they would have been relevant or helpful to the defendant's case; and (3) the trial court did not err in finding that the defendant failed to overcome the presumption of effectiveness. Smith v. State,

282 Ga. App. 339, 638 S.E.2d 791 (2006).

Benefit of counsel guarantees do not contemplate infallibility.

— In the conduct of a trial, broad latitude of advice, direction, and policy in the interest of the client is essentially vested in counsel. Counsel often waive apparently important points in the bona fide belief that, on the whole, greater advantage will be gained indirectly than might have been gained directly by insisting on them, and such a waiver either express or implied would ordinarily not tend to show incompetency. No lawyer is infallible, and the constitutional guarantees of the benefit of counsel, and of due process, do not contemplate such infallibility. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 193 Ga. 661, 19 S.E.2d 499, cert. denied, 317 U.S. 626, 63 S. Ct. 36, 87 L. Ed. 506 (1942).

Absence of prejudice. — Although trial counsel could have further impeached codefendants with certified copies of their felony convictions, any such deficiency in counsel's performance could not have prejudiced defendant because the jury was already aware of the disreputable character of these witnesses by virtue of their own testimony on the stand. Ross v. State, 231 Ga. App. 793, 499 S.E.2d 642 (1998).

Defendant's claims of ineffective assistance of counsel, alleging a failure to request a mistrial or curative instructions when defendant's sister testified as to defendant's character, a failure to object to testimony of an officer who had an arrest warrant for defendant and allegedly testified on the ultimate issue in the case, and a failure to object to improper statements by the prosecutor during closing arguments failed since the defendant failed to show prejudice as a result of any of the alleged errors made by trial counsel. Fulton v. State, 278 Ga. 58, 597 S.E.2d 396 (2004).

When, in defendant's murder trial, defense counsel did not raise a continuing witness objection at trial when a photographic lineup with signed witness statements on the back identifying defendant and an admonition sheet were allowed to go to the jury room, ineffective assistance of counsel was not shown because there was no prejudice as the witnesses were friends of defendant who identified defendant at trial, so the trial would not have had a different result, absent this error. Zellars v. State, 278 Ga. 481, 604 S.E.2d 147 (2004).

When, in defendant's murder trial, defense counsel did not object to counts in the indictment as to which the statute of limitations had expired, ineffective assistance of counsel was not shown because there was no prejudice as these counts were later dismissed, except they were allowed to serve as underlying felonies for a felony murder charge, and it was proper to allow felonies as to which the statute of limitations had expired to be used in this manner, and the evidence used to prove these felonies was admissible to prove those crimes as to which a statute of limitations had not expired. Zellars v. State, 278 Ga. 481, 604 S.E.2d 147 (2004).

Defendant failed to show prejudice for purposes of defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim for trial counsel's failure to tender medical records relating to defendant's gunshot wound as defendant failed to indicate what portion of the medical records supported defendant's claim that the medical records showed that defendant was in a defensive posture. Mills v. State, 273 Ga. App. 699, 615 S.E.2d 824 (2005).

Defendant failed to show prejudice for purposes of an ineffective assistance of counsel claim in the failure of counsel to subpoena defendant's brother. Brooks v. State, 273 Ga. App. 691, 615 S.E.2d 829 (2005), overruled on other grounds, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56 (2007).

Counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the state's initial comment in closing argument about the defendant's previous arrests and in not filing a motion to suppress evidence found in a search of defendant's house; there was no prejudice given the overwhelming evidence of guilt. Moye v. State, 277 Ga. App. 262, 626 S.E.2d 234 (2006).

With regard to a defendant's convictions for malice murder and other crimes, the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a new trial with regard to the assertions by the defendant that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel because the defendant failed to show that but for trial counsel's alleged failure to put greater emphasis on certain telephone cell phone record anomalies, the outcome of the defendant's trial would have been different. Culmer v. State, 282 Ga. 330, 647 S.E.2d 30 (2007).

Defendant did not establish ineffective assistance of counsel based on defense counsel's failing to object to an expert's testimony that in the expert's opinion, the victim had not confused sexual acts by the victim's mother with the sexual acts that the defendant was alleged to have committed; even if a reasonable juror could have interpreted the expert's testimony as an impermissible affirmation of the victim's credibility, the limiting instruction and jury charge made it clear that the jury need not accept any opinions provided by the expert, and thus it was not reasonable to conclude that but for the inclusion of this testimony, the result of the trial would have been different. Brooks v. State, 286 Ga. App. 209, 648 S.E.2d 724 (2007).

Trial counsel was not ineffective as: (1) the defendant failed to support an assertion that trial counsel was ineffective in failing to listen to an audiotape of the defendant's second interview with the Georgia Bureau of Investigation prior to trial; (2) counsel's off-hand comment as to hindsight was insufficient to support an inference of deficient performance; and (3) the defendant failed to show that prejudice resulted from counsel's alleged deficiency. Sturgis v. State, 282 Ga. 88, 646 S.E.2d 233 (2007).

Even if trial counsel was ineffective for failing to challenge the jury array on the basis that the array was tainted by the comments of a juror who was excused after stating that the juror thought the defendant was "guilty in 2003," when the crimes occurred, there was no prejudice because the juror's opinion was based solely on media reports, not on any personal knowledge of the defendant; since a prospective juror's comments did not link a defendant with criminal activity, or characterize the defendant as a criminal, the entire jury panel did not have to be excused. Edwards v. State, 282 Ga. 259, 646 S.E.2d 663 (2007).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

A defendant's ineffective assistance claim failed; even if trial counsel were ineffective for failing to interview witnesses, the defendant did not show how any witness's testimony would have changed if trial counsel interviewed the witness such that the interviewing would have affected the outcome of the trial. Ojemuyiwa v. State, 285 Ga. App. 617, 647 S.E.2d 598 (2007).

Even if trial counsel was deficient in failing to pursue a defense related to the defendant's mental status, the defendant failed to present evidence showing that the defense was available to the defendant; as a result, the defendant failed to show that a reasonable probability existed that the outcome would have been different but for any deficient performance of trial counsel in failing to pursue a mental health defense. Garza v. State, 285 Ga. App. 902, 648 S.E.2d 84 (2007), vacated, in part, 300 Ga. App. 352, 685 S.E.2d 366 (2009).

A DUI defendant who claimed that counsel was ineffective for not obtaining a complete computer-aided dispatch report had not shown that the result would have been different with the report and thus had not shown prejudice; even if an officer had an illegal basis for stopping the defendant, attempting to flee was a separate crime that essentially purged the taint of the otherwise allegedly illegal stop. Francis v. State, 287 Ga. App. 428, 651 S.E.2d 779 (2007).

The defendant had not shown prejudice by trial counsel's failure to object to the "level of certainty" language in a charge, which had been disapproved of after the defendant's trial; the language was harmless because the identification testimony did not directly implicate the defendant and because other evidence tied the defendant to the robbery in question. Rabie v. State, 286 Ga. App. 684, 649 S.E.2d 868 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 96 (Ga. 2008).

Because there was significant evidence refuting the defendant's claim of self-defense, the defendant had not shown prejudice even if trial counsel was deficient for failing to object to the prosecutor's comment on the defendant's silence, for failing to object to the prosecutor's comment in opening about the evidence the defendant was anticipated to present at trial, and for failing to object to an alleged "golden rule" argument. Jackson v. State, 282 Ga. 494, 651 S.E.2d 702 (2007).

Because any deficiency in counsel's failure to object to an investigator's testimony regarding the hearsay statements of an informant did not prejudice the defendant's defense, the jury was likely to deduce that the defendant was on parole from the fact that a parole officer initiated a search, and pretermittting whether the defendant's response to the investigator's request to search constituted "pre-arrest silence," no deficiency existed in counsel's reasonable strategic decision that the evidence was consistent with the defense, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims lacked merit. Cauley v. State, 287 Ga. App. 701, 652 S.E.2d 586 (2007).

Because a felony murder conviction merged with a malice murder conviction, the defendant had not shown prejudice from trial counsel's failure to object to the felony murder jury charge; furthermore, defendant had not shown prejudice by the making of a statement that was not introduced at trial. John v. State, 282 Ga. 792, 653 S.E.2d 435 (2007).

Defendant argued that defense counsel was ineffective in cross-examining a state's witness and in failing to call a witness to undermine the testimony of the state's witness. The defendant failed to show prejudice; as eyewitnesses testified that the defendant ordered an aggravated assault on the victim and assisted in murdering the victim, any deficiencies of counsel were unlikely to have affected the verdict. Wilcox v. State, 284 Ga. 414, 667 S.E.2d 603 (2008).

Trial court did not err in rejecting the defendant's claim that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to seek to exclude the victim's in-court identification of the defendant as tainted by a previous identification because given the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt, the defendant could not show a reasonable probability that the jury would have had a reasonable doubt respecting the defendant's guilt had the victim's identifications of the defendant been excluded; in the report to the police, the victim described the victim's car, which had been stolen, and the defendant, and when officers approached the car, the defendant immediately exited the vehicle and attempted to flee on foot. Jackson v. State, 309 Ga. App. 24, 709 S.E.2d 44 (2011).

Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel due to trial counsel's failure to object when a witness testified that the defendant spent time with an alleged gang because there was no prejudice in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt; several other eye-witnesses testified that the defendant shot the victim, and the defendant failed to show that but for counsel's failure to object, the outcome of the trial would have been any different. Kitchens v. State, 289 Ga. 242, 710 S.E.2d 551 (2011).

Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel due to trial counsel's failure to object to an officer's characterizations of the defendant as a person who was "just violent" and had "a problem with sex" because even if an objection should have been made, the defendant could not show prejudice; given the defendant's admission regarding the defendant's violent temper and dissatisfaction with sex, as well as the significant evidence implicating the defendant in the crimes, the defendant could not demonstrate any likelihood that the outcome of the trial would have been different. Dunson v. State, 309 Ga. App. 484, 711 S.E.2d 53 (2011), cert. dismissed, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 580 (Ga. 2015).

Defendant failed to show ineffective assistance of counsel from the defendant's trial counsel having failed to object to the verdict form because even if the trial counsel had made a meritorious objection, there was no reasonable probability of a different outcome in the trial. Darville v. State, 289 Ga. 698, 715 S.E.2d 110 (2011).

Defendant could not meet the burden of demonstrating prejudice from trial counsel's request for an erroneous charge because the evidence presented against the defendant was strong; although trial counsel should not have requested a charge on prior consistent statements, the defendant could not demonstrate a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different in the absence of the charge. Furthermore, defendant could not demonstrate prejudice from trial counsel's request for a witness credibility charge that allowed the jury to consider a witness's intelligence as one of several factors in assessing credibility because even assuming that the better practice was to omit intelligence as one of the factors in the credibility charge, the inclusion of credibility was not reversible error. Bellamy v. State, 312 Ga. App. 899, 720 S.E.2d 323 (2011).

Ineffective assistance in DUI cases.

— Although defense counsel in a DUI case under O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391(a)(1) was ineffective in tendering a report into evidence that contained the otherwise inadmissible numerical result of an alco-sensor test, the defendant was not prejudiced; the evidence of guilt, including the fact that the defendant was passed out behind the wheel in a left turn lane with the car in gear, the fact that the defendant had to be roused from sleep and was disoriented, the defendant's admission to drinking, and the defendant's failing a field sobriety test, was overwhelming. Hopkins v. State, 283 Ga. App. 654, 642 S.E.2d 356 (2007).

Assuming that defense counsel was deficient for not having knowledge of the contents of the defendant's cell phone records, the defendant could not show the required prejudice in light of the overwhelming evidence establishing the defendant's guilt. Swanson v. State, 282 Ga. 39, 644 S.E.2d 845 (2007).

When the defendant merely claimed that had trial counsel provided effective assistance, "the result of the proceeding would have been different," the defendant had not shown prejudice from the allegedly ineffective assistance. Jackson v. State, 284 Ga. App. 619, 644 S.E.2d 491 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1169, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 521 (Ga. 2007).

Because trial counsel was adequately prepared for trial, effectively engaged in plea negotiations, made timely objections, properly handled the defense, was not required to make meritless objections, and the defendant ultimately failed to show a reasonable probability that, but for counsel's alleged errors, the result of the trial would have been different, counsel was found to not be ineffective; thus, the defendant was not entitled to a new trial. Garrett v. State, 285 Ga. App. 282, 645 S.E.2d 718 (2007).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

The defendant could not prevail on an ineffective assistance of counsel claim since the defendant had not shown how additional communications with the defendant or interviews of additional witnesses would have changed the outcome of the trial; the trial court would have been authorized not to give a certain charge even if it had been requested, the defendant had not shown harm resulting from trial counsel's failure to have a similar transaction hearing and voir dire reported, and trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to make meritless objections. Williams v. State, 285 Ga. App. 190, 645 S.E.2d 676 (2007).

Because a transcript of the hearing on the defendant's motion for new trial was not included in the record on appeal, and absent any other proffer of the additional testimony and evidence that the alleged favorable witnesses would have testified to, the defendant could not show a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different had trial counsel subpoenaed the witnesses; hence, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim failed. Dukes v. State, 285 Ga. App. 172, 645 S.E.2d 664 (2007).

When, after examining the record and transcript in their totality and measuring the strength of the evidence against the defendant's allegations of ineffectiveness, the Court of Appeals failed to find any reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different, and in particular, noted that not only did the original DNA results show that the defendant committed the rape of the victim, but that a second test, conducted at the defendant's request, also showed that the rape was committed by the defendant or an identical twin, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim lacked merit. Arnold v. State, 284 Ga. App. 598, 645 S.E.2d 68 (2007).

Absent any prejudice from counsel's alleged ineffectiveness for failing to object to the state's introduction of hearsay and evidence of prior abuse committed by the defendant against the victim and the victim's mother, and for counsel's failure to move for a mistrial, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim lacked merit. Johnson v. State, 281 Ga. 770, 642 S.E.2d 827 (2007).

Effective assistance in involuntary intoxication defense case. — The defendant's trial counsel was not ineffective, as counsel's investigation of the defendant's involuntary intoxication defense was reasonable, even though it failed to lead to an expert competent to testify as to the defendant's intoxication and potential effects of combining alcohol with a substance marketed as an over-the-counter "performance supplement." Knox v. State, 290 Ga. App. 49, 658 S.E.2d 819 (2008).

Failure to impeach police officer. — Defendant's trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance by failing to impeach a police officer as to whether the defendant was given Miranda warnings before making a voluntary statement regarding a drive-by shooting; even if the failure to impeach the officer was deficient performance, the defendant could have shown no reasonable probability that the result of the trial was affected because the defendant's statement was nearly identical to a statement given by another person, and even if the jury had lessened its reliance on the defendant's statement based on impeachment of the officer, it would likely have reached the same conclusion based on the identical statement delivered by the other person. Hill v. State, 282 Ga. App. 743, 639 S.E.2d 637 (2006).

While the defendant waived any objection to the admission of similar transaction evidence without first requiring the state to present witness testimony at the hearing; and despite the fact that the trial court did not make the Williams findings on the record, no harmful error resulted from the admission of similar transaction evidence since the state's evidence at the out-of-court hearing was sufficient for the trial court to conclude that each of the Williams requirements was satisfied. Thus, counsel could not be deemed ineffective in failing to object to the admission of the similar transaction evidence. Hinton v. State, 290 Ga. App. 479, 659 S.E.2d 841 (2008).

Failure to object to bolstering. — Defendant failed to prove that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to object to an investigator's testimony allegedly bolstering testimony of the defendant's girlfriend because there were several reasons a reasonably lawyer might not have objected, including not wanting to signal to the jury that defense counsel was worried about the testimony. Jones v. State, 292 Ga. 593, 740 S.E.2d 147 (2013).

Failure to impeach victim. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to impeach the victim with felony convictions under former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-84.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-6-609) because the defendant did not show that, but for counsel's failure to introduce the victim's earlier convictions, there was a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different; the victim was referred to as "not trustworthy" and "a thief" during the trial, and the victim's conviction for burglary was admitted and referenced repeatedly during the trial. Askew v. State, 310 Ga. App. 746, 713 S.E.2d 925 (2011).

Failure to object to admission of testimony strategic. — Trial counsel's decision not to object to the admission of testimony that the defendant was known as "kingpin" or "king of the strip" in order to use the drug culture surrounding the case to the defendant's advantage was clearly strategic. Hargrove v. State, 291 Ga. 879, 734 S.E.2d 34 (2012).

Failure to comply with discovery. — In a defendant's malice murder trial, a failure by the defendant's trial counsel to comply with reciprocal discovery procedures that resulted in a trial court ruling precluding the defendant from impeaching a witness by introducing certified copies of the felony convictions of the witness did not constitute ineffective assistance of counsel; although the failure had to be considered deficient performance, it produced no prejudice because evidence of the criminal history of the witness was introduced by other means and the jury was instructed on the law of impeachment. Green v. State, 281 Ga. 322, 638 S.E.2d 288 (2006).

Failure to translate voir dire proceedings. — Pretermitted whether trial counsel was deficient by failing to ensure that the defendant understood the voir dire proceedings by providing for proper translation, the defendant did not point to any specific harm due to the defendant's alleged failure to understand the voir dire proceedings; therefore, the trial court did not clearly err in concluding that the defendant failed to show prejudice. It was undisputed that the defendant was present during voir dire, and the fact that the defendant may have "missed" some portion of the colloquy between counsel and 24 potential jurors did not compromise the right to be present on a constitutional scale. Pineda v. State, 297 Ga. App. 888, 678 S.E.2d 587 (2009).

Striking of jurors. — Trial counsel did not perform deficiently by failing to move to strike certain jurors for cause, despite expressing concerns about the jurors, because the record reflected that trial counsel, in fact, moved to strike the jurors in question and noted the trial court's denial of the strikes for the record. Jimmerson v. State, 289 Ga. 364, 711 S.E.2d 660 (2011).

Alleged lack of understanding of the law. — No ineffectiveness of counsel was shown in a defendant's malice murder trial by three instances of asserted errors by the defendant's trial counsel which the defendant contended resulted from the trial counsel's lack of understanding of the law; the defendant did not show that the trial counsel's alleged failure to object to the admission of certain evidence, to make a proper challenge to the jury venire, or to follow proper procedure in obtaining funds for an investigator had any negative impact on the defense, and therefore the defendant failed to show that but for the deficient performance of the trial counsel, the outcome of the trial would have been different. Green v. State, 281 Ga. 322, 638 S.E.2d 288 (2006).

Daughter's recantation of accusations. — Because the defendant failed to carry the burden of demonstrating that trial counsel's performance during the plea stage was deficient, and that counsel's deficient performance prejudiced the defendant's defense; since the general allegations made were directly contradicted by counsel's testimony, the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims were rejected. Schlau v. State, 282 Ga. App. 460, 638 S.E.2d 895 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 147 (Ga. 2007).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

Dismissal of a juror. — Because there was nothing in the record to rebut the presumption that trial counsel had legitimate reasons for the strategic decisions made during the trial, specifically relating to concerns regarding a juror's dismissal, the state's examination of the victim's mother, the refreshment of the state's witness's recollection, and closing argument, a motion for a new trial was properly denied on these grounds. Hunter v. State, 282 Ga. App. 355, 638 S.E.2d 804 (2006).

Failure to demand Jackson-Denno hearing. — Appeals court rejected the defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claims regarding the admission of a tape-recorded statement and claim that trial counsel should have demanded a Jackson-Denno hearing or a hearing to determine the admissibility of a similar transaction, as: (1) proper res gestae evidence could be admitted without having to follow the rules regarding prior similar transactions; (2) assuming that trial counsel should have demanded a Jackson-Denno hearing, the defendant failed to show how a hearing would have altered the outcome of the trial; and (3) at a hearing on the motion for a new trial, the defendant failed to introduce any evidence whatsoever to suggest that the statement made was involuntary. White v. State, 282 Ga. App. 286, 638 S.E.2d 426 (2006).

Failure to present battered person syndrome defense. — During a defendant's trial for being a party to rape and other offenses arising out of the repeated rapes of the defendant's 11-year-old child, the defendant's motion for a new trial on the ground that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel was properly denied because the defendant did not show that but for the failure of trial counsel to present a battered person defense, the outcome of the trial might have been different; the defendant failed to provide trial counsel with information indicating a possibility that the defendant suffered from that syndrome, and even if such information had been provided, the trial court might not have allowed the defense because it was a defense of justification and the defendant denied knowing about the rapes. Johnson v. State, 283 Ga. App. 99, 640 S.E.2d 644 (2006).

Failure to have dependent submit to psychosexual exam. — Defendant did not show that the defendant's defense attorney provided ineffective assistance in the defendant's child molestation trial by failing to have the defendant submit to a psychosexual examination before trial, to review the victim's school and medical records for impeaching evidence, or to have an expert review the victim's videotaped statement to police; the defendant failed to meet the burden of showing prejudice resulting from the alleged admissions by proffering any evidence to show that the exams and reviews would have elicited any admissible evidence that would have changed the outcome of the trial. Wheat v. State, 282 Ga. App. 655, 639 S.E.2d 578 (2006).

Request for bench trial and examination of competency. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant a new trial on grounds that trial counsel was ineffective, specifically as to issues of the defendant's competency to stand trial and getting the defendant to agree to a bench trial, as: (1) the record showed that defense counsel adequately pursued the competency issue, filed pre-trial discovery motions, obtained an order for defendant's mental evaluation, hired a forensic psychologist to evaluate the defendant's competency, presented and examined witnesses, cross-examined the state's witnesses, and made a closing argument; (2) even if the court were to assume that trial counsel's failure to interview the various doctors constituted deficient performance, the defendant failed to show any prejudice resulting therefrom; and (3) the defendant failed to show that trial counsel was deficient regarding the decision to pursue a bench trial rather than a jury trial, given that the trial court found that the defendant agreed that the case should be submitted to the court on stipulated facts, rather than to the jury. Wafford v. State, 283 Ga. App. 154, 640 S.E.2d 727 (2007).

Appeal on effective counsel issue held wasteful of resources. — When the issue of whether a parent was denied the effective assistance of counsel in a termination of parental rights proceeding could be decided from the record on appeal, a remand to the trial court for a ruling on this issue would be wasteful of judicial and legal resources and would serve no useful purpose. In the Interest of E.G., 284 Ga. App. 524, 644 S.E.2d 339 (2007).

Ineffective counsel established. — Petitioner's appellate counsel was ineffective by: (1) allowing thirty-three months to pass without making any attempt to obtain a hearing on a motion for new trial; (2) losing the petitioner's case file; and (3) failing to ask that the motion for new trial hearing be transcribed, which resulted in an insufficient record to support a potentially meritorious appellate claim. White v. Smith, 281 Ga. 271, 637 S.E.2d 686 (2006).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting the defendant a new trial based on the ineffective assistance of trial counsel, as: (1) counsel's pretrial investigation was deficient; (2) counsel made no effort to investigate or to obtain the criminal records of the state's similar transaction witness before trial, and did not ask for more time or a continuance upon learning that the defendant did not have the records; (3) the defendant pointed out that the jury had doubts about the victim's testimony based on their verdict of guilt to sexual battery, as a lesser-included offense of child molestation, the crime the defendant was charged with committing; (4) there was evidence that the victim had reason to lie; (5) the charged incident was not reported until after the defendant's wife hired a divorce lawyer, who then arranged the first interview between the victim and investigators; and (6) given that the evidence against the defendant was not overwhelming, this impeachment evidence was particularly crucial. State v. Lamb, 287 Ga. App. 389, 651 S.E.2d 504 (2007), overruled on other grounds, O'Neal v. State, 285 Ga. 361, 677 S.E.2d 90 (2009).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel not deemed waived. — A defendant waived a claim that trial counsel was ineffective for failing to submit a written jury charge regarding sympathy for the victim; although appellate counsel raised the issue of ineffectiveness in an amended motion for new trial, this claim had been expressly withdrawn when the motion was heard, and thus the defendant waived the issue on appeal. Jones v. State, 285 Ga. App. 48, 645 S.E.2d 569 (2007).

Parental rights termination. — Parent did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel in a termination of parental rights proceeding as: (1) the counsel's failure to call an employer of the parent as a witness was reasonable since the employer had been disbarred for child molestation; (2) in the absence of a showing how the attorney's actions in conducting discovery compromised the parent's representation, there was no error in the juvenile court's finding that the parent had adequate access to counsel; and (3) claims as to the counsel's failure to properly follow up on the issue of relative placement and to argue for a continuance were without merit. In the Interest of C.M., 282 Ga. App. 502, 639 S.E.2d 323 (2006).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object and move for a mistrial during closing argument when the prosecutor said that the jury had an opportunity to define what was acceptable in the community; read in context, the prosecutor appropriately urged the jury to speak on behalf of the community and rid the community of robbers and murderers. Furthermore, counsel was not ineffective because the defendant did not testify, as the evidence showed that counsel and the defendant discussed whether the defendant should testify, that counsel informed the defendant that the decision was the defendant's to make, and that the defendant decided not to testify. Gibson v. State, 283 Ga. 377, 659 S.E.2d 372 (2008).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

Counsel's error in phrasing question to defendant. — Defense counsel erred by asking if the defendant previously had been “charged” with a crime instead of asking whether the defendant had been “convicted,” which allowed the state to impeach the negative answer with evidence that the defendant had previously been charged with failure to yield to a police car. As the defendant was able to explain at trial that the defendant did not think the question pertained to a traffic violation, and the trial court found that there was no reasonable likelihood that such testimony affected the outcome of the trial, the trial court did not err in not granting the defendant a new trial. Taylor v. State, 293 Ga. App. 551, 667 S.E.2d 405 (2008).

Failure to object to use of single interpreter. — There was no ineffectiveness of the defendant's trial counsel for failing to seek separate interpreters for the defendant and a codefendant during their criminal trial as there was no showing that the defendant's rights were impinged by the use of a single interpreter. Hung v. State, 284 Ga. 796, 671 S.E.2d 811 (2009).

Failure to invoke rule of sequestration. — Failure of trial counsel to invoke the rule of witness sequestration did not in itself constitute deficient performance, and as the defendant did not show that any prosecution witness was influenced by the testimony of any other witness, the defendant did not show any prejudice as a result of counsel's failure to invoke the rule. Bihlear v. State, 295 Ga. App. 486, 672 S.E.2d 459 (2009).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to request a jury charge on the violation of the rule of sequestration because there was no violation of the rule; even assuming that trial counsel's failure to request such a charge constituted deficient performance, the defendant could not demonstrate prejudice in light of the overwhelming evidence substantiating the defendant's guilt. Dockery v. State, 287 Ga. 275, 695 S.E.2d 599 (2010).

Defendant failed to show that the defendant suffered any prejudice as a result of the defendant's trial counsel's failure to object to the presence of a police officer, who was the chief investigator in the case, in the courtroom because the trial court was within the court's discretion to permit the officer to remain in the courtroom and in not requiring that the officer be the first witness called to the stand, and the defendant did not show that the officer's testimony was influenced by the testimony of any other witness; merely failing to object to an investigator's presence, or to the order of the state's witnesses, does not constitute deficient performance. Andrews v. State, 307 Ga. App. 557, 705 S.E.2d 319 (2011).

Defendant failed to establish that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance by failing to move for a mistrial regarding a violation of the rule of sequestration because there was no evidence as to which witnesses violated the rule and whether the witnesses actually testified or spoke about the witnesses' testimony; the defendant did not show that the outcome of the trial would have been different if counsel called an expert to assist the jury in understanding eyewitness identifications. Glass v. State, 289 Ga. 542, 712 S.E.2d 851 (2011).

Defendant did not show prejudice due to trial counsel's failure to invoke the rule of sequestration because the jury was informed of the earlier presence of the victim's father in the courtroom, defense counsel thoroughly cross-examined the father, and the trial court properly instructed the jurors on their role in resolving conflicts in the evidence and in determining the credibility of witnesses, the weight of the evidence, and whether a witness was impeached; thus, the jury was able to gauge the father's credibility and make a determination as to the weight, if any, the father would give to the father's testimony. Pennington v. State, 313 Ga. App. 764, 723 S.E.2d 13 (2012).

Any deficiency by trial counsel in failing to request the trial court to invoke the rule of sequestration was not the cause of any alleged prejudice to the defense because the state had not identified the victim's father as a witness until the parties had presented their opening statements, and, thus, the father would not have been required to stay out of the courtroom even if defense counsel had invoked the rule of sequestration at the beginning of trial. Pennington v. State, 313 Ga. App. 764, 723 S.E.2d 13 (2012).

Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to invoke the rule of sequestration at the beginning of the trial because the defendant failed to show any harm that resulted from the admission of the testimony of the victim's father; the evidence presented by both the state and the defense showed that the father's testimony about what happened did not conflict with the defendant's claim. Pennington v. State, 313 Ga. App. 764, 723 S.E.2d 13 (2012).

Failing to request transcription of misdemeanor trial. — Defendant failed to show counsel was ineffective for not asking that a misdemeanor trial be transcribed. There was testimony that counsel did not request a transcript because the defendant never asked that one be made and counsel did not believe the defendant could pay for the transcript, and that counsel believed the defendant's right to appeal would be preserved by the statutory substitute for a transcript. Bagley v. State, 298 Ga. App. 513, 680 S.E.2d 565 (2009).

Failure to challenge statute. — Because the defendant's constitutional challenges to O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(b) were not supported by the evidence, defendant's trial counsel's performance was not deficient for failing to challenge the constitutionality of the heroin trafficking statute, and since the defendant's claims regarding the constitutionality of the heroin trafficking statute would have failed, the defendant was not prejudiced by defendant's trial counsel's decision not to raise the claims; no evidence was presented that the substance contained in the corner tie that the defendant sold to an undercover officer as heroin contained "infinitesimal and unusable amounts of heroin," heroin was a Schedule I controlled substance, O.C.G.A. § 16-13-25(2)(J), and the General Assembly's different treatment of heroin from other drugs was rationally related to the promotion of a legitimate state objective. Thomas v. State, 306 Ga. App. 279, 701 S.E.2d 895 (2010).

Failure to put defendant on stand. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to put the defendant on the stand as the defendant confirmed that it was the defendant's decision not to testify. Goodwin v. State, 320 Ga. App. 224, 739 S.E.2d 712 (2013).

Trial counsel did not render ineffective assistance by failing to call the defendant to testify because the defendant made the decision not to testify with a complete understanding of the defendant's rights, and trial counsel testified that counsel advised the defendant that it was up to the defendant whether to testify and that counsel advised against given the defendant's prior felony convictions and belief that the testimony the defendant wished to present was, to a certain extent, contrary to the defense theory. Thornton v. State, 292 Ga. 796, 741 S.E.2d 641 (2013).

Failure to object to failure to define word. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for failing to object to the trial court's failure to define the word "theft" as part of the burglary and armed robbery charges as the work was not a technical work of art, but rather a work of general broad connotation and, thus, it was unlikely that the jury was not able to understand the use of the word theft. Holder v. State, 319 Ga. App. 239, 736 S.E.2d 449 (2012).

Opening door to admission of past transactions. — Trial counsel was not ineffective for opening the door to allow the state to introduce evidence of a defendant's past juvenile adjudication for child molestation as: (1) trial counsel was aware of the defendant's juvenile adjudication prior to the trial and made a strategic decision to call a witness to testify regarding the defendant's good character; (2) the witness consistently testified that the witness knew nothing about such an incident; (3) in light of the witness's lack of knowledge and the state's failure to introduce a certified copy of the prior juvenile adjudication, trial counsel successfully objected to the state making any mention of the prior adjudication during its closing argument, and the trial court gave a special limiting instruction to ensure that the jury would not consider any impeachment evidence in making its determination. Redman v. State, 281 Ga. App. 605, 636 S.E.2d 680 (2006).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)5. Effective Assistance of Counsel (Cont'd)G. Other Examples (Cont'd)

Failure to show bank account balances. — Defense counsel was not ineffective under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for failing to subpoena the victim's bank records to show that the victim had a balance of more than $100 in the victim's bank account in order to support the defendant's claim that the victim gave the defendant the victim's bank card for the defendant to withdraw $100 to pay for sex and that the defendant could have merely withdrawn money from the automated teller machine rather than rob the victim; the defendant did not request a hearing on the motion for a new trial alleging ineffective assistance and did not submit an affidavit from trial counsel, and the defendant, therefore, did not make an affirmative showing that the purported deficiencies in the defendant's trial counsel's representation were indicative of ineffectiveness and were not examples of a conscious and deliberate trial strategy. Carswell-Danso v. State, 281 Ga. App. 576, 636 S.E.2d 735 (2006).

6. Critical Stages

Accused's right to counsel includes benefit of counsel at all critical stages of case. — The right of a person accused of a felony to the aid of counsel at all critical stages of criminal proceedings, before trial, and to prosecute an appeal provided by state law, is fundamental and must be protected by the state. Roach v. State, 111 Ga. App. 114, 140 S.E.2d 919 (1965), cert. denied, 385 U.S. 935, 87 S. Ct. 297, 17 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1966).

Accused's right to counsel includes benefit of counsel at all critical stages of case and sufficiently prior to the trial for adequate preparation. Rose v. State, 128 Ga. App. 370, 196 S.E.2d 683 (1973).

Critical stage in criminal prosecution defined. —

The assistance of counsel is one of the essentials of due process; but the accused is entitled to this assistance only at critical stages in a criminal prosecution. A critical stage in a criminal prosecution is one in which a defendant's rights may be lost, defenses waived, privileges claimed or waived, or one in which the outcome of the case is substantially affected in some other way. Ballard v. Smith, 225 Ga. 416, 169 S.E.2d 329 (1969).

Defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel attached at defendant's initial appearance, because it was uncontested that defendant asserted that right at defendant's initial appearance, and because the state conceded that defendant did not subsequently initiate further interrogation; thus, defendant's act of requesting an attorney during the initial appearance made defendant's subsequent statement inadmissible at trial, and the trial court erred in denying defendant suppression of the statement. O'Kelley v. State, 278 Ga. 564, 604 S.E.2d 509 (2004).

To the extent that Ross v. State, 254 Ga. 22, 26-27(3)(b), 326 S.E. 2d 194 (1985) held that a first appearance, or initial appearance hearing, did not constitute an adversary judicial proceeding that triggered the attachment of the Sixth Amendment right to counsel, it was overruled. O'Kelley v. State, 278 Ga. 564, 604 S.E.2d 509 (2004).

Defendant has a right to have counsel with defendant at every stage during trial of case. Leverette v. State, 104 Ga. App. 743, 122 S.E.2d 745 (1961).

Right to benefit of counsel is not restricted to trial itself. — It does include the right to advice of counsel as to whether the accused should plead guilty and certainly this right exists once an indictment charging a felony has been returned. Fair v. Balkcom, 216 Ga. 721, 119 S.E.2d 691 (1961).

Guarantee of counsel of U.S. Const., amend. 6 has been extended to earlier stages of criminal proceedings when a guilty plea might be entered. McBryar v. McElroy, 510 F. Supp. 706 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Critical stage doctrine requires counsel at arraignment stage. —

There is no question that the right of a person accused of a felony to the aid of counsel at all critical stages of proceedings designed to bring the person to trial is fundamental and must be protected by the state under our system of government. This doctrine requires counsel at least at the stage of arraignment in noncapital cases as well as in capital felony cases. Blake v. State, 109 Ga. App. 636, 137 S.E.2d 49, cert. denied, 379 U.S. 924, 85 S. Ct. 281, 13 L. Ed. 2d 337 (1964).

Generally, preindictment lineup does not trigger right to counsel. Thornton v. State, 238 Ga. 160, 231 S.E.2d 729, later appeal, 239 Ga. 693, 238 S.E.2d 376 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1073, 98 S. Ct. 1260, 55 L. Ed. 2d 778, rehearing denied, 435 U.S. 962, 98 S. Ct. 1595, 55 L. Ed. 2d 812 (1978).

Defendant, who had been charged with crimes against a first victim, but who had not been charged with crimes committed on second and third victims, did not have any right to counsel at a lineup at which the defendant was identified by the second and third victims. Ferguson v. State, 211 Ga. App. 218, 438 S.E.2d 682 (1993).

Denial of right to conduct lineup in absence of counsel for accused. — It is a denial of the constitutional right of representation by counsel to conduct a lineup in the absence of counsel for the accused, but nothing requires the reversal of a criminal case because there was a lineup conducted without counsel for the accused when the evidence shows that the in-court identification had an independent origin. Carmichael v. State, 228 Ga. 834, 188 S.E.2d 495 (1972).

Preindictment photographic identification does not require presence of counsel; there is no established constitutional right to counsel at an out-of-court photographic identification when the defendant is not present. Carter v. State, 157 Ga. App. 445, 278 S.E.2d 93 (1981).

Commitment hearing not inherently critical stage. — The commitment hearing, for the purpose of determining whether there is probable cause to believe the accused guilty of the crime charged and bind the accused over for indictment by the grand jury, is not inherently a critical stage of a criminal proceeding.

Moore v. State, 113 Ga. App. 738, 149 S.E.2d 492 (1966), cert. denied, 385 U.S. 1028, 87 S. Ct. 757, 17 L. Ed. 2d 676 (1967).

Breath testing is not critical stage.

— Motion filed by a defendant to exclude the results of a breath test under the Georgia Implied Consent Law in the defendant's prosecution for driving under the influence under O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391 was properly denied because the defendant was not entitled to the advice of counsel before deciding whether to submit to the test; the right to counsel under U.S. Const., amend. 6 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV did not come into play until the proceedings had reached a critical stage, and the breath test was not such a stage because it did not signal the beginning of a formal adversary hearing and because a lawyer could add little to the warnings required from the officer administering the test by O.C.G.A. § 40-6-392(a)(4). Rackoff v. State, 281 Ga. 306, 637 S.E.2d 706 (2006).

Error for court to recharge jury in absence of defense counsel. — Under the circumstances, the court erred in recharging the jury in the absence of the sole attorney for the defendant, on trial for murder since counsel was easily accessible in that counsel was on the courthouse grounds, and neither counsel nor the defendant waived counsel's presence. Carter v. State, 190 Ga. 534, 9 S.E.2d 747 (1940).

Sentencing is critical stage of criminal proceeding at which defendant is entitled to effective assistance of counsel, effective assistance at this stage requires zealous, and not merely perfunctory or pro forma, representation. Blake v. Zant, 513 F. Supp. 772 (S.D. Ga. 1981), rev'd on other grounds, 718 F.2d 979 (11th Cir. 1983), vacated on other grounds, Burger v. Zant, 467 U.S. 1212, 104 S. Ct. 2652, 81 L. Ed. 2d 360 (1984).

Re-sentencing. — A defendant's re-sentencing without court-appointed counsel to represent the defendant was affirmed as the trial court was simply instructed to merge the defendant's armed robbery conviction into the defendant's felony murder conviction; as the trial court had no discretion in the matter and its re-sentencing of the defendant was a ministerial act, the re-sentencing was proper. Robertson v. State, 280 Ga. 885, 635 S.E.2d 138 (2006).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)6. Critical Stages (Cont'd)

Right to counsel at hearings on motion to withdraw a guilty plea. — The trial court held a hearing on defendant's motion to withdraw a guilty plea, but did not appoint an attorney to represent defendant or inform defendant of the right to counsel; thus, defendant's constitutional right to counsel during the plea proceedings was denied. Kennedy v. State, 267 Ga. App. 314, 599 S.E.2d 290 (2004).

Lack of counsel after death sentence is imposed deprives accused of the accused's vital constitutional right to counsel and renders the accused's trial and sentence void. Sims v. Balkcom, 220 Ga. 7, 136 S.E.2d 766 (1964).

Right to counsel during interrogation. — Denial of defendant's suppression motion as to defendant's videotaped statement was proper as the statement was ambiguous as to whether defendant invoked defendant's right to counsel and after the disputed invocation of defendant's right to counsel, defendant agreed to answer questions; the trial court's interpretation of the disputed statement was not clearly erroneous, and even if the admission of the videotaped statement was in error, it would not warrant reversal because the statement was cumulative of other evidence. Christopher v. State, 262 Ga. App. 257, 585 S.E.2d 107 (2003).

Based on the totality of the circumstances and the undisputed evidence, because the defendant's confession to a police detective was voluntary and admissible under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-50 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-820), not coerced or received as a result of promises made, and not subject to exclusion due to improper methods used by the police, the trial court did not err in admitting the confession; further, exclusion of the confession was not required based on a violation of the defendant's right to counsel. Swain v. State, 285 Ga. App. 550, 647 S.E.2d 88 (2007).

Absence of defense counsel at motion in limine.

— Defendant's constitutional right to be present at trial was not violated when defense counsel was not at a pretrial hearing on the state's motion in limine because there was no substantial relationship between the defendant's presence and the defendant's opportunity to defend. Campbell v. State, 292 Ga. 766, 740 S.E.2d 115 (2013).

7. Waiver

Defendant in criminal case has constitutional right to have benefit of counsel, but the defendant can waive this right. Gatlin v. State, 17 Ga. App. 406, 87 S.E. 151 (1915).

A defendant may waive the privilege and benefit of counsel guaranteed by this paragraph. Henderson v. State, 207 Ga. 206, 60 S.E.2d 345 (1950).

Death penalty defendant was improperly denied defendant's constitutional right to self-representation when the trial court properly found defendant was mentally competent to waive defendant's right to counsel, but, instead of determining if defendant knowingly and intelligently waived defendant's right to counsel, questioned defendant about defendant's knowledge of death penalty law, which was irrelevant to defendant's ability to waive defendant's right to counsel, and the record showed defendant had a sound general knowledge of the charges against defendant and the trial process, understood the dangers of self-representation that were explained to defendant, and knew the benefit counsel could provide. Lamar v. State, 278 Ga. 150, 598 S.E.2d 488 (2004).

Constitutional guarantees of counsel of choice may be waived by action or declaration.

— When the defendant, in answer to a query from the court, states that the defendant has no counsel, and in answer to another question from the court replies that the defendant is ready for trial, and makes no request for counsel to be appointed to defend the defendant, but, on the contrary, actively enters into the case as the defendant's own lawyer, agreeing upon a jury, cross-examining the witnesses, and making defendant's own statement to the jury, the defendant waives defendant's right to be represented by counsel. Elam v. Rowland, 194 Ga. 58, 20 S.E.2d 572 (1942).

Waiver must be made knowingly and intelligently. — An accused may waive the right to counsel, provided that the accused is capable of doing so and it appears that the accused did so knowingly and intelligently. Brown v. State, 122 Ga. App. 570, 177 S.E.2d 801 (1970).

The record must disclose that the defendant voluntarily, knowingly, and intelligently waived counsel and in doing so the defendant must be advised of the defendant's right to counsel, if the defendant cannot afford counsel, and the consequences of the defendant's refusal to accept counsel. Rogers v. State, 156 Ga. App. 466, 274 S.E.2d 815 (1980); Miller v. State, 156 Ga. App. 469, 274 S.E.2d 818 (1980).

Defendant's waiver of defendant's right to counsel was found to be inadequate since the state did not meet the state's heavy burden of showing that defendant made a knowing, voluntary, free, and intelligent decision to represent oneself in the defendant's trial for aggravated assault and false imprisonment; although the trial court engaged the defendant in a colloquy about self-representation, there was no showing that the defendant was made aware of the dangers of self-representation in that the defendant's defense was confused and convoluted and the defendant was unfamiliar with the evidentiary rules, which limited the defendant's ability to defend oneself. Banks v. State, 260 Ga. App. 515, 580 S.E.2d 308 (2003).

Defendant contended that the defendant was wrongly convicted of four traffic misdemeanors because the trial court forced the defendant to trial without counsel, the trial court's affidavit regarding its usual procedure in dealing with defendants who refused appointed counsel did not meet the state's burden to show that the defendant made a knowing and intelligent decision to proceed pro se after being warned of the risks inherent in that choice; accordingly, a new trial was required. Jones v. State, 260 Ga. App. 251, 581 S.E.2d 315 (2003).

Court must ascertain awareness of accused of right to counsel. — Since the trial court merely ascertained that appellant was going to be self represented but it did not ascertain that appellant was aware of the right to counsel, there has not been an intelligent and knowing waiver of the right to counsel. Rogers v. State, 156 Ga. App. 466, 274 S.E.2d 815 (1980).

Voluntary waiver found. — Because defendant was carefully and thoroughly instructed on two different occasions regarding the right to counsel, the risks and dangers of self-representation, and other rights, defendant voluntarily waived the right to counsel. Sharp v. State, 275 Ga. App. 487, 621 S.E.2d 508 (2005).

When after the defendant requested an attorney, the defendant initiated further discussions with police, was re-apprised of the Miranda rights in full, and signed a written waiver prior to giving a statement, the taint of a prior Edwards violation with regard to two earlier statements was overcome and the last statement was properly admitted into evidence; furthermore, the trial court had considered conflicting expert testimony in conjunction with other evidence of the defendant's intelligence and had concluded that the defendant understood the defendant's rights and the consequences of waiving them. Height v. State, 281 Ga. 727, 642 S.E.2d 812 (2007).

Defendant signed a Miranda waiver, but later invoked the right to counsel. As there was no evidence the defendant made any additional statements to the officer thereafter, or that the officer interrogated the defendant after the latter invoked the right to counsel, statements the defendant made before invoking that right were properly admitted. Grant-Farley v. State, 292 Ga. App. 293, 664 S.E.2d 302 (2008).

As the trial court cautioned the defendant at great length about the dangers of self-representation, but the defendant nevertheless insisted on proceeding pro se, the record established that the defendant knowingly and intelligently waived the right to be represented by counsel. Hill v. State, 298 Ga. App. 677, 680 S.E.2d 702 (2009).

Trial court properly allowed the defendant to waive the defendant's right to counsel and represent oneself at trial because the court cautioned the defendant at great length about the dangers of self-representation, and the defendant nevertheless insisted upon self representation; the trial court, through the court's two colloquies on two separate days prior to the commencement of trial, established that the defendant made a knowing, voluntary, and intelligent waiver of defendant's right to counsel. Davis v. State, 304 Ga. App. 355, 696 S.E.2d 381 (2010).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)7. Waiver (Cont'd)

Trial court did not err in finding that the defendant knowingly, voluntarily, and intelligently waived the defendant's right to have a lawyer represent the defendant at trial because the record authorized the trial court to conclude that the defendant's expression of dissatisfaction with the defendant's third lawyer on the day of trial was a dilatory tactic that was the functional equivalent of a knowing and voluntary waiver of appointed counsel, and after the defendant indicated the defendant's desire to proceed pro se, the extensive colloquy between the defendant and the trial court established that the defendant made a knowing and intelligent waiver of the defendant's right to counsel; the defendant did not explain how the knowledge that the defendant could face lesser punishment than the defendant believed would have made the defendant less inclined to waive counsel and the record demonstrated that the defendant was aware of the dangers of self-representation and nevertheless made a knowing and intelligent waiver. Walker v. State, 288 Ga. 174, 702 S.E.2d 415 (2010).

Defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived the right to counsel as the trial court repeatedly informed the defendant of the dangers of self-representation, noting that the defendant did not know the court rules and procedures, and advised the defendant of the nature of the charges and the possible punishment that the defendant faced upon conviction. Pardon v. State, 322 Ga. App. 393, 745 S.E.2d 658 (2013).

Waiver of rights found. — To the extent defendant's complaint to the trial court reflected defendant's intent to invoke defendant's right to testify, the defendant asserted this right too late, regardless of the defendant's dissatisfaction with defense counsel's performance. To permit the defendant to reopen the evidence after closing arguments and after the State of Georgia had released all of the state's witnesses would have detrimentally affected the fairness and legitimacy of the trial. Smith v. State, 306 Ga. App. 693, 703 S.E.2d 329 (2010).

Facts and circumstances of case affect intelligent waiver determination. — The determination as to an intelligent waiver of the right to counsel must depend, in each case, upon the particular facts and circumstances surrounding the case. Johnson v. State, 139 Ga. App. 829, 229 S.E.2d 772 (1976).

Since the defendant was a man of some age, regularly employed, and of sufficient awareness of the relevant circumstances and likely consequences of defendant's acts, the defendant knowingly and intelligently waived defendant's right to counsel considering defendant's experience, background, and conduct. Thomas v. State, 244 Ga. 608, 261 S.E.2d 389 (1979).

A judge can make certain that an accused's professed waiver of counsel is understandingly and wisely made only from a penetrating and comprehensive examination of all the circumstances under which such a plea is tendered. Rogers v. State, 156 Ga. App. 466, 274 S.E.2d 815 (1980).

Accused must be furnished necessary information upon which to make decision. — It must be affirmatively shown that the court furnished the accused with the necessary information upon which the accused could make a voluntary, knowing, and intelligent decision regarding the right to counsel. Rose v. State, 128 Ga. App. 370, 196 S.E.2d 683 (1973).

To be valid, waiver of the right to counsel must be made with an apprehension of the nature of the charges, the statutory offenses included within them, the range of allowable punishments thereunder, possible defenses to the charges, and circumstances in mitigation thereof, and all other facts essential to a broad understanding of the matter. Rogers v. State, 156 Ga. App. 466, 274 S.E.2d 815 (1980).

Right cannot be waived unless offer of counsel made. — To indigent defendants, counsel must be provided by the state unless the defendant understandably, intelligently, and competently waives the right; the right cannot be waived unless an offer of counsel has been made. Blake v. State, 109 Ga. App. 636, 137 S.E.2d 49, cert. denied, 379 U.S. 924, 85 S. Ct. 281, 13 L. Ed. 2d 337 (1964).

Determination of waiver should appear on record. — While an accused may waive the right to counsel, whether there is a proper waiver should be clearly determined by the trial court, and it would be fitting and appropriate for that determination to appear upon the record. Butler v. State, 198 Ga. App. 217, 401 S.E.2d 43 (1990), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 897, 401 S.E.2d 43 (1991).

When the record reflected only defendant's request for an attorney or silence, there was not an adequate waiver of the right to counsel. Butler v. State, 198 Ga. App. 217, 401 S.E.2d 43 (1990), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 897, 401 S.E.2d 43 (1991).

Because the state failed to satisfy its burden showing that defendant waived defendant's constitutional right to counsel, defendant's conviction and sentence for leaving the scene of an accident were vacated and remanded for an evidentiary hearing. Dempsey v. State, 267 Ga. App. 661, 600 S.E.2d 735 (2004).

Presumption is against waiver of benefit of counsel, which must be done voluntarily, knowingly, and intelligently. Rose v. State, 128 Ga. App. 370, 196 S.E.2d 683 (1973).

The presumption is against waiver, and it is the responsibility of the court, when the accused is without counsel, to clearly determine whether there has been a proper waiver. The trial judge must investigate as long and as thoroughly as the circumstances of the case before the court demand. Rogers v. State, 156 Ga. App. 466, 274 S.E.2d 815 (1980).

Right to counsel is not compulsory right. — While the constitutional right to have the benefit of counsel is a valuable and sacred one, and one that should never be denied or abridged, it is not a compulsory right. Fortson v. State, 96 Ga. App. 350, 100 S.E.2d 129 (1957).

Appellant's actions did not constitute waiver of counsel since the appellant's retained attorney entered a plea of not guilty on the appellant's behalf at the appellant's arraignment and when at time of trial the appellant's attorney was permitted to withdraw as counsel, with the appellant then informing the court that the appellant wanted to get an attorney. Miller v. State, 156 Ga. App. 469, 274 S.E.2d 818 (1980).

Claim of ineffective assistance of counsel not waived. — Defendant did not waive an ineffective assistance of counsel claim by failing to raise it below as appellate counsel became involved in the case after trial counsel filed the notice of appeal and the issue was raised at the earliest practicable moment. Morrison v. State, 272 Ga. App. 34, 611 S.E.2d 720, aff'd, 280 Ga. 222, 626 S.E.2d 500 (2006).

The question of a voluntary and knowing waiver of the right of a juvenile to counsel depends on the totality of the circumstances. Howe v. State, 250 Ga. 811, 301 S.E.2d 280 (1983) (burden of showing understanding waiver met).

There are several factors to be considered among the totality of the circumstances in determining whether a juvenile's waiver of counsel was made knowingly, and voluntarily: (1) age of the accused; (2) education of the accused; (3) knowledge of the accused as to both the substance of the charge and the nature of the accused's rights to consult with an attorney and remain silent; (4) whether the accused is held incommunicado or allowed to consult with relatives, friends, or an attorney; (5) whether the accused was interrogated before or after formal charges had been filed; (6) methods used in interrogations; (7) length of interrogations; (8) whether vel non the accused refused to voluntarily give statements on prior occasions; and (9) whether the accused has repudiated an extrajudicial statement at a later date. Howe v. State, 250 Ga. 811, 301 S.E.2d 280 (1983) (burden of showing understanding waiver met).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)7. Waiver (Cont'd)

Allowing defendant to proceed pro se after three detailed warnings not abuse of discretion, as those detailed warnings were not required for the defendant to have made a knowing and intelligent waiver, but were still given, the defendant signed a detailed waiver, and the defendant waived the presence of standby counsel, Bush v. State, 268 Ga. App. 200, 601 S.E.2d 511 (2004).

The state has a heavy burden in showing that a juvenile did understand and waive the juvenile's rights. Howe v. State, 250 Ga. 811, 301 S.E.2d 280 (1983) (burden of showing understanding waiver met).

Effective waiver of counsel. — See Callahan v. State, 175 Ga. App. 303, 333 S.E.2d 179 (1985).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's requests for counsel and for a continuance so that defendant could obtain counsel, made on the day of trial, as: (1) defendant was repeatedly advised of defendant's right to counsel and of the dangers of self-representation, and a public defender was repeatedly offered, appointed, and rejected; (2) despite the trial court's clear warnings and statement of its intention to have defendant proceed on the date of the trial with or without representation, defendant appeared on the morning of the trial without representation; (3) at defendant's request, a public defender was asked to serve as standby counsel at trial, but defendant refused to allow the public defender to assist the defendant; and (4) defendant's uncooperative and dilatory conduct was the functional equivalent of a knowing and voluntary waiver of appointed counsel. Sims v. State, 265 Ga. App. 476, 594 S.E.2d 693 (2004).

There was no requirement that Miranda warnings be given by a certified translator, and so long as the accused understood the explanation of rights, an imperfect translation did not rule out a valid waiver; since the record showed that the city marshal who acted as a translator was called upon regularly to serve as a translator by various law enforcement agencies, and the defendant pointed to no error in the translation, the defendant failed to demonstrate prejudice, and the trial court was authorized to conclude that the defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived the constitutional right to remain silent and the right to counsel. Delacruz v. State, 280 Ga. 392, 627 S.E.2d 579 (2006).

In an armed robbery case, the defendant was properly allowed to waive counsel, when the defendant was advised of the charges, the possible penalties, and all the rights; as defendant was a college graduate and former police officer, who had testified as an officer and conducted another legal matter, any difficulties arising from the defendant's request, mid-trial, that standby counsel represent the defendant, were created by the defendant and were not reversible error. Joyner v. State, 278 Ga. App. 60, 628 S.E.2d 186 (2006).

Right to counsel was knowingly and voluntarily waived, as evidenced by a signed rights waiver form stating a full understanding of: (1) the nature of the charges and the maximum punishment, including the possibility of a jail sentence; (2) the right to appointed counsel if necessary; and (3) the ramifications of proceeding pro se; further, the defendant swore under penalty of perjury that these statements were true. Frasard v. State, 278 Ga. App. 352, 629 S.E.2d 53 (2006).

A defendant's videotaped statement was properly admitted into evidence after a detective advised the defendant of the right to an attorney and repeatedly asked the defendant if the defendant wanted an attorney before the defendant ultimately rejected the right to counsel. Swanson v. State, 282 Ga. 39, 644 S.E.2d 845 (2007).

Because the record showed that the defendant reinitiated further communication with police and made a knowing and intelligent waiver of any right to counsel previously invoked, the record did not support the defendant's claim that the investigators' accommodation of the defendant's request to speak to the defendant's wife in some way undermined the Edward v. Arizona, 451 U.S. 477 (1981) rule by prompting the defendant's request to reinitiate contact with the police. Rivera v. State, 282 Ga. 355, 647 S.E.2d 70 (2007).

No waiver established. — State failed to prove a valid waiver of the right to counsel, and a trial court erred in allowing the defendant to proceed pro se since the trial court never informed the defendant of the dangers of proceeding without counsel; appointed stand-by counsel sat through the trial with the defendant, but provided no assistance during the trial, and, before trial, potentially made things worse by failing to voir dire any potential jurors and by failing to object to the defendant being visibly handcuffed and shackled during the trial or even to request a curative instruction that the restraints should not have been considered evidence of defendant's guilt, so there was no reason to conclude that the conviction was independent of the defendant's decision for self representation. Davis v. State, 279 Ga. App. 628, 631 S.E.2d 815 (2006).

Because the record showed that the defendant never unequivocally asserted a right to self-representation, the trial court did not err in refusing to allow the defendant to dismiss trial counsel; thus, the trial court properly denied the defendant a new trial. Pulliam v. State, 287 Ga. App. 717, 653 S.E.2d 65 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 159 (Ga. 2008).

When the defendant, who previously waived the right to counsel, appeared for trial and requested court-appointed counsel, the trial court erred in denying the request without any discussion with the defendant to ensure that the defendant fully appreciated both the nature and the consequences of the right that the defendant relinquished and the repercussions of such a waiver. These findings were necessary to effect a valid waiver. Watkins v. State, 291 Ga. App. 343, 662 S.E.2d 544 (2008).

State did not show that the defendant made a knowing and intelligent waiver of the right to counsel. There was no evidence that the defendant was adequately informed of the nature of the charges, the possible punishments the defendant faced, the dangers of proceeding pro se, and other circumstances that might affect the defendant's ability to adequately represent the defendant's own self; furthermore, the absence of a trial transcript prevented any consideration of whether the failure to obtain a knowing and voluntary waiver was harmless. Cook v. State, 297 Ga. App. 701, 678 S.E.2d 160 (2009).

Initiation of conversation by defendant. — A defendant knowingly and intelligently waived the defendant's right to counsel in speaking to an investigator and to an assistant district attorney (ADA) outside the presence of the defendant's attorney. The defendant initiated these conversations and insisted on talking after being reminded by the investigator and the ADA that they could not discuss the case in the absence of the defendant's attorney. Davis v. State, 281 Ga. 871, 644 S.E.2d 113 (2007).

Trial court did not err in failing to suppress a statement the defendant made to the police because the statement was made during the course of a subsequent interview that the defendant initiated and was admissible; the defendant contacted the case detective and requested a meeting, the detective met with the defendant and again advised the defendant of the defendant's right to counsel, and the defendant waived the defendant's right to counsel and made an incriminating statement. Haynes v. State, 287 Ga. 202, 695 S.E.2d 219 (2010).

Trial court did not err by admitting the defendant's custodial statement to a police detective because after the defendant invoked the right to counsel, the detective ceased the interrogation and was returning the defendant to jail when the defendant told the detective that the defendant would tell the detective what the detective wanted to know and then gave an incriminating statement upon returning to the room where the interrogation was conducted. Anthony v. State, 315 Ga. App. 701, 727 S.E.2d 528 (2012).

Appellant's actions constituted waiver of counsel. — See Singleton v. State, 176 Ga. App. 733, 337 S.E.2d 350 (1985).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claim was waived on appeal because defendant failed to raise the issue in the trial court in defendant's motion to withdraw defendant's guilty plea; thus, defendant's failure to do so amounted to waiver barring appellate consideration of the issue. Sheffield v. State, 270 Ga. App. 576, 607 S.E.2d 205 (2004).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)7. Waiver (Cont'd)

Habeas court erred in granting the defendant a new trial on the ground that the defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel on appeal since the defendant was not afforded defendant's constitutional right to conflict-free appellate representation because the habeas court improperly relied on the theory that the defendant would lose defendant's right to raise the issue of ineffective assistance of trial counsel if it were not raised prior to defendant's direct appeal; when the defendant is represented by trial counsel through completion of the appellate process, the failure to raise the issue of ineffective assistance of trial counsel prior to the direct appeal does not constitute a waiver of the ability to raise the claim since the defendant is able to raise the claim in a habeas proceeding. Williams v. Moody, 287 Ga. 665, 697 S.E.2d 199 (2010).

Defendant's claim that trial counsel was ineffective when counsel failed to request that the jury panel be qualified again after the interview of new witnesses was waived because the issue was not raised either in the motion for new trial as amended or at the hearing thereon by appellate counsel, who had been appointed following the defendant's conviction. Norris v. State, 289 Ga. 154, 709 S.E.2d 792 (2011).

Impact of illness of counsel. — Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of trial counsel when counsel allowed the defendant's first scheduled trial to be canceled in the defendant's absence because the defendant did not show that the outcome of the defendant's trial would have been different if the defendant had been present that morning to hear that counsel was too ill to proceed. Neal v. State, 308 Ga. App. 551, 707 S.E.2d 503 (2011).

Failure to request instruction on defense. — Defendant was not entitled to a new trial due to ineffective assistance of counsel as defendant waived any claim of ineffective assistance based on the failure to request an instruction on the defense of justified use of force in self-defense as defendant was represented by new counsel on appeal and the alleged error was not raised in the motion for a new trial. Mayfield v. State, 276 Ga. App. 544, 623 S.E.2d 725 (2005).

Request for counsel mid-trial after requesting self representation. — Although the trial court erred by initially stating, during the course of the lengthy colloquy over self-representation, that once the defendant chose to represent oneself, the defendant could not change the defendant's mind mid-trial, the misstatement did not require the reversal of the defendant's conviction because no harm resulted; during the trial, the defendant did in fact change the defendant's mind and requested counsel, and the trial court granted the request. Davis v. State, 304 Ga. App. 355, 696 S.E.2d 381 (2010).

Self-representation did not violate right to counsel. — Trial court did not err in imposing a sentence of life imprisonment without parole because the record did not support the defendant's assertion that the conviction was obtained in violation of the defendant's constitutional right to counsel; the state offered evidence that the defendant's prior case was tried before a jury, that the defendant exercised the constitutional right to self-representation, and that appointed standby counsel was available to assist the defendant at trial. Willis v. State, 309 Ga. App. 414, 710 S.E.2d 616 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1356, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 70 (Ga. 2012).

8. Appeals

Indigent has right to appointed counsel to assist the indigent on direct appeal. Roberts v. Caldwell, 230 Ga. 223, 196 S.E.2d 444 (1973).

Out-of-time appeal. — Because trial counsel withdrew from representing the defendant without fulfilling the duty to fully inform the defendant of the relevant appeal rights, and the record failed to show whether the defendant was indigent or whether counsel informed the defendant of the right to appointed counsel, an order denying the defendant's motion for an out-of-time appeal was reversed and the case was remanded; if the defendant was found to be indigent, and the court failed to fully advise the defendant of the relevant appellate rights, an out-of-time appeal was authorized. Hill v. State, 285 Ga. App. 310, 645 S.E.2d 758 (2007).

The trial court abused its discretion in denying the defendant an out-of-time appeal without a hearing, which alleged that both the defendant's trial and appellate counsel were ineffective, as: (1) no case law or rules of court required that a motion for out-of-time appeal be verified or accompanied by an affidavit, as the trial judge seemingly required, in order to be granted a hearing on the matter; and (2) given the lack of contrary evidence in the record, the trial judge failed to make a judicial inquiry into whether the defendant was responsible for the failure to pursue a timely direct appeal. Ray v. State, 287 Ga. App. 492, 652 S.E.2d 165 (2007).

Request for appointment of appellate counsel not always necessary. — An individual desiring an appeal need not, once a responsible state authority knows of the desire to appeal and knows of the status of indigency, specifically request appointment of appellate counsel. Roberts v. Caldwell, 230 Ga. 223, 196 S.E.2d 444 (1973).

Appellate decision without benefit of counsel to indigent violates rights. — When the merits of the one and only appeal an indigent has as of right are decided without benefit of counsel in a state criminal case, there has been a discrimination between the rich and the poor which violates U.S. Const., amend. 14. Chenoweth v. Smith, 225 Ga. 572, 170 S.E.2d 235 (1969).

The failure to grant an indigent defendant seeking initial review of defendant's conviction the services of an advocate violates petitioner's rights to fair procedure and equality under U.S. amend. 14. Chenoweth v. Smith, 225 Ga. 572, 170 S.E.2d 235 (1969).

Decision of counsel not to appeal motion not denial of right. — Decision of counsel not to appeal from denial of motion for new trial contrary to instruction of defendant held not a denial of right to counsel. Givens v. Dutton, 222 Ga. 756, 152 S.E.2d 358 (1966).

Sentence is not necessarily void when counsel declines to appeal case for one convicted of crime though requested by one's client to do so. Balkcom v. Roberts, 221 Ga. 339, 144 S.E.2d 524 (1965).

Withdrawal by counsel in light of frivolous appeal. — If counsel finds case for appeal to be wholly frivolous, after a conscientious examination of it, counsel should so advise the court and request permission to withdraw. That request must, however, be accompanied by a brief referring to anything in the record that might arguably support the appeal. A copy of counsel's brief should be furnished to the indigent and time allowed for the indigent to raise any points that the indigent chooses; the court — not counsel — then proceeds, after a full examination of all the proceedings, to decide whether the case is wholly frivolous. Bolick v. State, 127 Ga. App. 542, 194 S.E.2d 302 (1972).

Self-representation during appeal not ineffective. — Trial court's denial of defendant's motion to allow an out-of-time appeal without conducting an evidentiary appeal was not an abuse of discretion as defendant explained to the trial court that defendant decided, as a matter of strategy, to file a pro se motion in arrest of judgment under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-61 rather than an immediate direct appeal; there was no need to inquire further into whether defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel in failing to file an immediate direct appeal. Smith v. State, 263 Ga. App. 414, 587 S.E.2d 787 (2003).

Evidentiary hearing required for ineffective assistance. — Because the trial court's order denying the defendant's motion for an out-of-time appeal failed to make a specific finding as to whether the right to appeal was lost as a result of the ineffectiveness of counsel or by the defendant's own conduct, that order was vacated, and the matter was remanded with directions that the trial court enter findings. Wright v. State, 282 Ga. App. 582, 639 S.E.2d 563 (2006).

Defendant not entitled to appointment of counsel to prosecute motion to vacate void and illegal sentence. — Trial court did not err in failing to appoint counsel to prosecute the defendant's motion to vacate a void and illegal sentence because the defendant did not file a motion to withdraw the guilty plea which, if timely, would have triggered the right to appointed counsel; an indigent defendant who has filed a motion to vacate void sentences is not entitled to counsel to pursue either the motion or an appeal from the denial thereof. Pierce v. State, 289 Ga. 893, 717 S.E.2d 202 (2011).

Benefit of Counsel (Cont'd)8. Appeals (Cont'd)

Defendant not entitled to appointment of counsel to prosecute motion for out-of-time appeal. — Trial court did not err in failing to appoint counsel to prosecute the defendant's motion for out-of-time appeal because the defendant did not file a motion to withdraw the guilty plea which, if timely, would have triggered the right to appointed counsel; because a motion for an out-of-time appeal cannot be construed as part of a criminal defendant's first appeal of right, a defendant is not entitled to the assistance of appointed counsel. Pierce v. State, 289 Ga. 893, 717 S.E.2d 202 (2011).

Ineffectiveness argument cannot be expanded on appeal. — Defendant was attempting to expand the original allegation of ineffectiveness on appeal when the defendant argued that trial counsel was ineffective in failing to object to the testimony of a police detective regarding the victim's truthfulness because in the defendant's motion for new trial, the defendant asserted only that counsel was ineffective in failing to object to the prosecutor's questioning of the detective concerning whether the victim was truthful when the victim gave an initial statement to and identified the defendant; the defendant could not expand the assertion in the trial court to include other statements by the victim or any questions directed to detectives concerning those later statements. Gaither v. State, 312 Ga. App. 53, 717 S.E.2d 654 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0337, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 216 (Ga. 2012).

9. Habeas Corpus Proceedings

Constitutions do not require appointment of counsel for habeas corpus petitioners. — An application for the writ of habeas corpus is not a criminal proceeding, and neither the Constitution of the United States nor the Georgia Constitution requires the appointment of counsel for the petitioner. Moore v. Caldwell, 229 Ga. 132, 189 S.E.2d 396 (1972); Wyatt v. Caldwell, 229 Ga. 597, 193 S.E.2d 607 (1972); Grace v. Caldwell, 231 Ga. 407, 202 S.E.2d 49 (1973); Moye v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 230, 214 S.E.2d 920 (1975); Spencer v. Hopper, 243 Ga. 532, 255 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 178, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

No right to counsel in habeas corpus proceeding. — A habeas corpus proceeding is not such a criminal proceeding as comes within the constitutional guarantee of the right to representation by counsel. Croker v. Smith, 225 Ga. 529, 169 S.E.2d 787 (1969); Hatton v. Smith, 228 Ga. 378, 185 S.E.2d 388 (1971), cert. denied, 407 U.S. 921, 92 S. Ct. 2466, 32 L. Ed. 2d 807 (1972); Dixon v. Caldwell, 228 Ga. 658, 187 S.E.2d 292 (1972); Wayman v. Caldwell, 229 Ga. 2, 189 S.E.2d 74 (1972); Nolley v. Caldwell, 229 Ga. 441, 192 S.E.2d 151 (1972); Smith v. Ault, 230 Ga. 433, 197 S.E.2d 348 (1973).

Georgia is not constitutionally required to provide counsel in death penalty habeas proceedings in order to ensure the fundamental fairness of Georgia's death penalty procedures and meaningful access to the courts. Gibson v. Turpin, 270 Ga. 855, 513 S.E.2d 186 (1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 946, 120 S. Ct. 363, 145 L. Ed. 2d 284 (1999).

Meaningful access to courts does not require providing funds or appointing counsel to indigent habeas petitioners. State v. Davis, 246 Ga. 200, 269 S.E.2d 461 (1980).

The state is not required to pay a petitioner's expenses in habeas corpus proceedings. State v. Davis, 246 Ga. 200, 269 S.E.2d 461 (1980).

Denial of counsel is ground for issuance of writ. — The deprivation of counsel is such a fundamental and radical error that it operates to render the trial illegal and void. Denial of the benefit of counsel constitutes a ground for the issuance of a writ of habeas corpus. Wilcoxon v. Aldredge, 192 Ga. 634, 15 S.E.2d 873

(1941), later appeal, 193 Ga. 661, 19 S.E.2d 499, cert. denied, 317 U.S. 626, 63 S. Ct. 36, 87 L. Ed. 506 (1942).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claim. — Habeas court's order denying an inmate's verified petition, which asserted that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance, was reversed as the allegations contained in the petition served as sufficient evidence to support the inmate's claim that counsel failed to file a notice of appeal after being instructed by the inmate to do so. Rolland v. Martin, 281 Ga. 190, 637 S.E.2d 23 (2006).

Because the defendant: (1) failed to show prejudice by trial counsel's failure to call certain witnesses at trial; (2) failed to raise allegations of ineffectiveness regarding the state's grant of immunity to a witness and regarding the admission of an audiotape; and (3) abandoned any error regarding the admission of a videotape of the crime scene, the defendant failed to show that trial counsel was ineffective. McNeal v. State, 281 Ga. 427, 637 S.E.2d 375 (2006).

Because a traffic stop was lawful, defendant lacked standing to challenge a search of the car, evidentiary inconsistencies were attributable to defendant's equivocal comments, and defendant failed to show that the uncalled witnesses' testimonies would have created a reasonable probability of a different outcome at trial, defendant failed to show that counsel was ineffective. Howren v. State, 271 Ga. App. 55, 608 S.E.2d 653 (2004), overruled on other grounds, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56 (2007).

Habeas court erred by concluding that there is a reasonable probability that the murder defendant's trial counsel's deficiencies changed the outcome of the defendant's trial and, therefore, erred by granting relief based on defendant's ineffective assistance of trial counsel claim. Humphrey v. Riley, 291 Ga. 534, 731 S.E.2d 740 (2012).

Defendant is precluded from maintaining another petition for habeas corpus on same ground as earlier petition by virtue of judgment that facts alleged in prior petition did not disclose a violation of the defendant's right to be represented by counsel. Williams v. Law- rence, 193 Ga. 381, 18 S.E.2d 463, cert. denied, 315 U.S. 816, 62 S. Ct. 905, 86 L. Ed. 1214 (1942).

Burden on petitioner to prove denial of benefit of counsel. — In habeas corpus proceeding, the burden was upon the petitioner to establish by proof defendant's ground of attack that defendant was denied the benefit of counsel, and it was not error to deny defendant's release on this ground. Plocar v. Foster, 211 Ga. 153, 84 S.E.2d 360 (1954), cert. denied, 349 U.S. 962, 75 S. Ct. 893, 99 L. Ed. 1284 (1955).

Burden on petitioner to demonstrate that petitioner was unaware of disadvantages to be encountered by lack of counsel. Taylor v. Hopper, 596 F.2d 1284 (5th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 444 U.S. 1083, 100 S. Ct. 1039, 62 L. Ed. 2d 768 (1980).

Habeas corpus petitioner who was sentenced to death was entitled to a new sentencing trial because the petitioner received ineffective assistance of counsel in the sentencing phase of the petitioner's trial when the petitioner's counsel did not present available mitigation evidence from expert and lay witnesses or pursue other such evidence that was available through the exercise of reasonable diligence. Head v. Thomason, 276 Ga. 434, 578 S.E.2d 426, cert. denied, 540 U.S. 957, 124 S. Ct. 409, 157 L. Ed. 2d 294 (2003).

List of Witnesses

Second clause of this paragraph entitles defendant to list of witnesses on whose testimony charge is founded. Palmer v. State, 23 Ga. App. 84, 97 S.E. 460 (1918).

Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV does not require the state to provide a list of trial witnesses, but only a list of witnesses on whose testimony the charge was based. Park v. State, 230 Ga. App. 274, 495 S.E.2d 886 (1998).

Right to have list of witnesses applies to misdemeanor cases as well as felonies. Gordon v. State, 102 Ga. 673, 29 S.E. 444 (1897).

List of witnesses must be furnished on demand. Hyatt v. State, 134 Ga. App. 703, 215 S.E.2d 698 (1975).

List of Witnesses (Cont'd)

Requirement to furnish list of witnesses. — This paragraph requires that every person charged with crime shall on demand made previously to arraignment be furnished with a list of the state's witnesses. Huffaker v. State, 119 Ga. App. 742, 168 S.E.2d 895 (1969).

Before the provisions of this paragraph become operative it is imperative that defendant make a demand for a copy of a list of witnesses, before arraignment, upon the district attorney or an assistant district attorney. Page v. State, 237 Ga. 20, 227 S.E.2d 8 (1976); Thomas v. State, 139 Ga. App. 467, 228 S.E.2d 604 (1976).

The right guaranteed by this paragraph to be furnished, on demand, with a list of witnesses on whose testimony the charge against the accused is founded, is the right, on demand, to be furnished by the district attorney's office, prior to arraignment, with the list of witnesses who will testify for the state on the trial. Sutton v. State, 237 Ga. 423, 228 S.E.2d 820 (1976).

Failure to include coindictee's name on witness list was not reversible error since the defendant was notified a month before trial that the state was dropping charges against the coindictee in exchange for the coindictee's testimony against the defendant. Mize v. State, 269 Ga. 646, 501 S.E.2d 219 (1998), cert. denied, 525 U.S. 1078, 119 S. Ct. 817, 142 L. Ed. 2d 676 (1999).

Defendant's failure to specifically request addresses and phone numbers in defendant's demand for a list of witnesses justified rejection of defendant's motion to exclude a witness. Willett v. State, 223 Ga. App. 866, 479 S.E.2d 132 (1996).

There is no right in accused to have list of witnesses who will testify on trial prior to preliminary hearing. Sutton v. State, 237 Ga. 423, 228 S.E.2d 820 (1976).

Demand for list of witnesses prior to arraignment is for discovery; after arraignment it is to prevent surprise. Rutledge v. State, 152 Ga. App. 755, 264 S.E.2d 244 (1979).

Defendant is to be given opportunity to interview witnesses against defendant prior to trial. — The purpose of the law with reference to the list of witnesses and copy of the indictment is that the defendant shall not be confronted at trial with witnesses against the defendant, that is, witnesses whom the defendant has not had the opportunity to interview prior to trial. Bisard v. State, 158 Ga. App. 62, 279 S.E.2d 310 (1981).

List of those who appeared before grand jury is sufficient. — The constitutional requirement that the district attorney furnish the accused with a list "of the witnesses on whose testimony the charge against him was founded" is fully met if the names of those who appeared before the grand jury are supplied. Manning v. State, 123 Ga. App. 844, 182 S.E.2d 690 (1971).

If the names of two persons who did, in fact, testify before the grand jury were not on the list of "witnesses appearing before the grand jury," but an inspection of the indictment and the list of witnesses thereon discloses that the names of these witnesses were included, the requirement that the accused be furnished with a list "of the witnesses on whose testimony the charge against him was founded" is met. Manning v. State, 123 Ga. App. 844, 182 S.E.2d 690 (1971).

No requirement that state furnish list of witnesses to be used at trial. — The solicitor general (now district attorney) is under no obligation to disclose to the defendant witnesses, other than those provided in a list pursuant to this paragraph, whom the solicitor general might see fit to call during the progress of the trial. Williams v. State, 42 Ga. App. 225, 155 S.E. 511 (1930).

The Constitution of this state requires the solicitor general (now district attorney), on demand therefor, to furnish the accused with a list of the witnesses on whose testimony the charge against the accused was founded but the law does not require the solicitor general (now district attorney) to furnish the accused with a list of all the witnesses the solicitor general expects to use on the trial. Britten v. State, 221 Ga. 97, 143 S.E.2d 176 (1965), cert. denied, 384 U.S. 1014, 86 S. Ct. 1944, 16 L. Ed. 2d 1035 (1966).

Even though a witness's name was not on the state's witness list, the state's formal disclosure of the witness as the confidential informant six weeks prior to trial, combined with: (i) the summary of the witness's testimony found in the search warrant affidavit given to defendant; (ii) defendant's admitted knowledge of the witness's identity prior to the formal disclosure; (iii) defendant's own pre-trial reference to the witness's as a material witness; and (iv) defendant's attempts to interview the witness prior to trial, fulfilled the purpose of the witness list rule. McLarty v. State, 238 Ga. App. 27, 516 S.E.2d 818 (1999).

No requirement that persons whose names appear on accusation or indictment must testify at trial. — There is no requirement either in the Constitution or the statutes that those persons whose names appear on an accusation or indictment as witnesses must testify on the trial of the accused. Bonds v. State, 232 Ga. 694, 208 S.E.2d 561 (1974).

When witness's name in indictment, defendant cannot claim surprise. — When a witness's name is contained in the indictment, a defendant cannot validly contend that the defendant had been surprised or unable to interview the witness in question through lack of knowledge of such witness. Garvin v. State, 144 Ga. App. 396, 240 S.E.2d 925 (1977).

State cannot deny defendant's counsel access to material witness. — The state has no more right to deny defendant's counsel access to a witness material to the defense than it would have to secrete the witness to prevent the defendant's using the witness, or to deny the defendant the right to process to compel the attendance of a witness, and the defendant cannot be required to call a person to the stand as the defendant's own witness without knowing in advance what the witness's testimony will be. Wilson v. State, 93 Ga. App. 229, 91 S.E.2d 201 (1956).

While the court has a discretionary power to order the state to permit counsel for the accused to interview a witness in its custody, when an application for such an interview is made in good faith it should ordinarily be granted, particularly in a capital case. Wilson v. State, 93 Ga.

App. 229, 91 S.E.2d 201 (1956).

Witness cannot be compelled to submit to interview by accused before trial. — Accused and the accused's counsel have the right to interview witnesses before the trial; and the state has no right to deny them access to a witness material to the defense, but a witness cannot be compelled to submit to such interview. Rutledge v. State, 245 Ga. 768, 267 S.E.2d 199 (1980).

Defendant may waive being furnished with copy of indictment or accusation and list of witnesses. Henderson v. State, 207 Ga. 206, 60 S.E.2d 345 (1950), commented on in 13 Ga. B.J. 230 (1950).

Witness whose name not on list not rendered incompetent. — Even when the defendant is furnished with a list of witnesses, another witness, whose name was not on the list, is not rendered incompetent to testify on the trial. Inman v. State, 72 Ga. 269 (1884); Williams v. State, 42 Ga. App. 225, 155 S.E. 511 (1930).

It was not error for the trial court, in a murder prosecution, to permit two named witnesses to testify in the trial of the case over objection of defendants, even though their names did not appear on the indictment at the time the case was called for trial, and they did not testify before the grand jury and their names were not on the demand furnished by the prosecuting attorney to the defendant. Evans v. State, 210 Ga. 375, 80 S.E.2d 157 (1954).

Furnishing name of witness after voir dire. — It was error to allow the testimony of a witness who was not named on the original witness list but, rather, included on an updated list given to defendant after voir dire. Bentley v. State, 210 Ga. App. 862, 438 S.E.2d 110 (1993).

Court does not err in allowing witness whose name was not on witness list to testify solely for purpose of rebuttal. Hudgins v. State, 153 Ga. App. 603, 266 S.E.2d 284 (1980).

Calling an unlisted witness in a criminal trial in rebuttal is not error. Gibbons v. State, 248 Ga. 858, 286 S.E.2d 717 (1982).

The trial court does not err in allowing the state to call a witness in rebuttal whose name does not appear on the list of witnesses furnished to the defendant if the defendant is allowed a continuance so as to afford the defendant the opportunity to question the witness prior to the witness taking the stand. Pope v. State, 168 Ga. App. 846, 310 S.E.2d 575 (1983).

List of Witnesses (Cont'd)

Nonappearance of witness before grand jury not ground for abatement of indictment. — Where defendant demanded a copy of the indictment and list of witnesses on whose testimony the indictment was founded, and was by agreement of counsel furnished the original indictment on which appeared a list of witnesses, it was not ground for abatement of the indictment or for excluding evidence of a witness whose name appeared on the indictment, that such witness did not in fact appear before the grand jury and give testimony on which the indictment was founded; nor was the admission of pertinent testimony of the witness ground for declaring a mistrial. Harris v. State, 190 Ga. 258, 9 S.E.2d 183 (1940).

When defendant fails to demand list of witnesses, state may use witness whose name had not been furnished to defendant. Prather v. State, 223 Ga. 721, 157 S.E.2d 734 (1967).

No prejudice for Brady violation. — Defendant failed to prove the prejudice prong of the defendant's Brady claim as the defendant merely speculated that an expert might have been able to show that the defendant was not traveling at 60-70 miles per hour in a stolen vehicle; such speculation did not establish a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial would have been different if the defendant had been provided with a copy of a videotape of a police officer's high-speed chase of the stolen vehicle before trial. Ferguson v. State, 280 Ga. 893, 635 S.E.2d 144 (2006).

Compulsory Process

Defendant has right to compulsory process to obtain witness. — The Constitution provides that the defendant shall have compulsory process to obtain the testimony of defendant's own witnesses, but does not guarantee more than ordinary diligence on the part of the officers, or that they shall serve a witness who conceals oneself. Roberts v. State, 94 Ga. 66, 21 S.E. 132 (1894); Smith v. State, 118 Ga. 61, 44 S.E. 817 (1903); Gilmore v. State, 154 Ga. App. 429, 268 S.E.2d 693 (1980).

When subpoena was given to the sheriff for service, but was not served, ostensibly because the sheriff was not paid a fee, the defendant had a right to compulsory process to obtain the witness. Harpe v. State, 134 Ga. App. 493, 214 S.E.2d 738 (1975).

The mere fact that a defendant may not have moved for the disclosure of an informant's identity under the authority of Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963) did not amount to a waiver of the constitutional right to insist on the presence and testimony of a known and identified witness who was in the custody of the state. Gilbert v. State, 212 Ga. App. 308, 441 S.E.2d 785 (1994).

Right to process relates only to issuance. — The right to compulsory process does not amount to a guarantee by the state that the witness requested by a defendant will in fact appear at trial, but only relates to the issuance of the process. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Davenport v. State, 289 Ga. 399, 711 S.E.2d 699 (2011).

Court should order service of process against witness in prison. Roberts v. State, 72 Ga. 673 (1884).

No requirement that court subpoena petitioner's witnesses for habeas corpus proceeding. — A habeas corpus proceeding is not a criminal prosecution and the law does not require the court to subpoena witnesses at the request of the petitioner for habeas corpus. Johnson v. Smith, 227 Ga. 611, 182 S.E.2d 101 (1971).

Right not violated when subpoenas issued. — Defendant's claim that the right to compulsory process was circumvented when the trial court granted the state's motion to quash subpoenas issued to a judge, a probation officer, and a drug-court coordinator failed, because the subpoenas were issued and served on the witnesses who, in fact, appeared and whose testimony was proffered outside the presence of the jury. Poole v. State, 291 Ga. 848, 734 S.E.2d 1 (2012).

New trial must be ordered if right to compulsory process abridged. — The trial court erred in making a determination that a prospective witness was incompetent to testify based on ex parte statements made by the administrator of the institution where the prospective witness was confined. This error is not harmless beyond a reasonable doubt; if it is determined that the witness was competent, defendant's right to compulsory process was abridged and a new trial must be ordered. Cofield v. State, 247 Ga. 98, 274 S.E.2d 530 (1981).

No requirement that public bear expense of bringing witnesses into court. — This paragraph does not contemplate that the public shall bear the expense of bringing witnesses into court, because the residents of other counties can be examined by depositions (oral examination or written interrogatories) if the defendant so desires. Neal v. Smith, 226 Ga. 96, 172 S.E.2d 684 (1970); Hughes v. State, 228 Ga. 593, 187 S.E.2d 135 (1972).

Continuance granted to enable counsel to secure witnesses. McArver v. State, 114 Ga. 514, 40 S.E. 779 (1902).

Continuance granted when defendant has used diligence to procure attendance of absent witness. — Regardless of the provisions of former Code 1933, § 81-1410 (see now O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25), a continuance or postponement should be granted until the court can produce a witness whose testimony on behalf of the defendant was material, if, in addition, it was made to appear that the defendant had used all the diligence within the defendant's power and all the means at the defendant's command to procure the attendance of the absent witness, and that the witness was within the power of the court's subpoena. Murphy v. State, 132 Ga. App. 654, 209 S.E.2d 101 (1974).

A continuance requested by the defendant in order to obtain the presence at trial of a material witness is properly denied if the defendant has not been diligent in attempting to procure the attendance of the absent witness. Burney v. State, 244 Ga. 33, 257 S.E.2d 543, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 970, 100 S. Ct. 463, 62 L. Ed. 2d 385 (1979).

Trial court did not err in failing to grant a continuance because of the absence of unserved witnesses for the defense since subpoenas were not delivered to sheriff for service until late afternoon of the first day of retrial and since no attempt was made to show what testimony of the two absent resident witnesses would have added to the appellant's defense. Shaw v. State, 163 Ga. App. 615, 294 S.E.2d 676 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 251 Ga. 109, 303 S.E.2d 448 (1983).

No benefit from right of compulsory process when witnesses beyond jurisdiction of courts. — This paragraph provides that every defendant in a criminal case shall have compulsory process to obtain the testimony of defendant's own witnesses, but such provision is of no benefit when the witnesses reside beyond the jurisdiction of the courts of this state. Hughes v. State, 228 Ga. 593, 187 S.E.2d 135 (1972); Shaw v. State, 163 Ga. App. 615, 294 S.E.2d 676 (1982), rev'd on other grounds, 251 Ga. 109, 303 S.E.2d 448 (1983).

Neither the Georgia nor the United States Constitution obligates the state to compel the attendance of witnesses who cannot be located within its jurisdiction. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Davenport v. State, 289 Ga. 399, 711 S.E.2d 699 (2011).

A party requesting the presence of an out-of-state witness does not have an absolute right to obtain the witness. Mafnas v. State, 149 Ga. App. 286, 254 S.E.2d 409 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Davenport v. State, 289 Ga. 399, 711 S.E.2d 699 (2011).

Out-of-state corporation. — Court of Appeals erred when the court concluded that a request under the former Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from Without the State in Criminal Proceedings, O.C.G.A. § 24-10-90 et seq. (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-13-90), that an out-of-state corporation be required to produce purportedly material evidence in the corporation's possession had to be ac-accompanied by the identification as a material witness of the corporate agent through which the corporation was to act because if the certificate of materiality was issued by the Georgia court, it was for the Kentucky corporation to identify the human agent through whom the corporation would act, perhaps in conjunction with the hearing that would be held in Kentucky upon receipt of the Georgia certificate of materiality. Yearly v. State, 289 Ga. 394, 711 S.E.2d 694 (2011).

Compulsory Process (Cont'd)

Full faith and credit given to out-of-state order. — Trial court did not err by requiring defendant to proceed to trial without the source code and other requested information because it had granted a certificate pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-13-94 to permit the defense an opportunity to obtain the information from the manufacturer located in Kentucky, set the case with enough time to do so, and, after the Kentucky court issued an order denying the request, which order was entitled to full faith and credit, required defendant to proceed to trial. Phillips v. State, 324 Ga. App. 728, 751 S.E.2d 526 (2013).

Timeliness of subpoena. — Trial court did not err in failing to enforce defendant's subpoenas because they were not served more than 24 hours prior to trial. Byron v. State, 229 Ga. App. 795, 495 S.E.2d 123 (1998).

Right to Confrontation1. In General

Essential purpose of confrontation is cross-examination. Denson v. State, 150 Ga. 618, 104 S.E. 780 (1920), appeal dismissed, 258 U.S. 608, 42 S. Ct. 316, 66 L. Ed. 788 (1922).

Juvenile court, at juvenile's delinquency hearing, did not err in admitting testimony about what the victim told the officer during a pre-hearing identification of the juvenile, as such hearsay testimony was admissible pursuant to the White exception which required only that the declarant testify and be available for cross-examination; that exception did require that the declarant corroborate the identification or actually be cross-examined about it, and since the statements to the officer met those requirements, the officer's testimony was admissible, especially since the juvenile's confrontation clause rights were not violated. In the Interest of L.J.P., 277 Ga. 135, 587 S.E.2d 15 (2003).

In a juvenile proceeding, incriminatory statements from a non-testifying accomplice were inadmissible as a matter of constitutional law unless the accomplice testified and was subject to cross-examination. In the Interest of A.D., 282 Ga. App. 586, 639 S.E.2d 556 (2006).

Codefendant's confession not properly admitted, but error was harmless. — Trial court erred in admitting the confession the first defendant gave to police after the first defendant had been arrested and read the Miranda rights, as the confession implicated the first defendant and the second defendant in an armed robbery, the first defendant did not testify at trial, and the second defendant thus could not cross-examine the first defendant regarding the statement; however, admission of the confession was harmless error given the other evidence of the second defendant's involvement in the robbery. Bennett v. State, 266 Ga. App. 502, 597 S.E.2d 565 (2004).

Non-testifying codefendant's admission properly admitted. — Defendant's right to confrontation was not violated by the admission of the statement of defendant's non-testifying codefendant that, when the codefendant received the murder weapon, it had four bullets in it, and when the codefendant got it back it had two bullets in it, because the jury was instructed that the statement was admitted only against the codefendant, references to defendant in the statement were redacted, and the statement incriminated defendant only when linked with other evidence. Burns v. State, 280 Ga. 24, 622 S.E.2d 352 (2005).

Admission of incriminating statements made by the defendant's co-conspirator to an informant, to the effect that the defendant agreed to sell methamphetamine to the informant, and arranging details of the transaction, did not violate the confrontation clause, despite the fact that the co-conspirator did not appear at trial and was not available for cross-examination, because the statements were made during the pendency of the criminal project, the co-conspirator was not asserting past facts and had personal knowledge of the identities and roles of the participants, the possibility that the statements were founded on faulty memory was decidedly remote, in that the referenced occurrences were taking place almost simultaneously with the statements, and, believing that the co-conspirator was setting up a lucrative drug deal with a sympathetic customer, the co-conspirator had no reason to lie about the defendant's involvement in the crime. Bowden v. State, 279 Ga. App. 173, 630 S.E.2d 792 (2006).

Right of confrontation is fundamental principle. — The basis of this paragraph is the fundamental principle that in a criminal prosecution the testimony of the witnesses shall be taken before the court, so that at the time they give the testimony they will be sworn and will be subject to cross-examination, the scrutiny of the court, and confrontation by the accused. These basics are necessary because a statement which is offered in evidence to prove the truth of the matters stated, but which was not made by the author when a witness before the court at the trial in which it is offered, is hearsay. Becton v. State, 134 Ga. App. 100, 213 S.E.2d 195 (1975).

Right paramount to policy of protecting juvenile offenders. — The right of confrontation is paramount to the state's policy of protecting a juvenile offender. Hamilton v. State, 185 Ga. App. 536, 365 S.E.2d 120 (1987), cert. denied, 185 Ga. App. 910, 365 S.E.2d 120 (1988).

Defendant's right of confrontation of witnesses was violated when the defendant was not allowed to cross examine the prosecuting witness with regard to the witness's prior juvenile adjudications, as evidence of the juvenile's record was necessary to establish the juvenile's motive, interest and bias. Hamilton v. State, 185 Ga. App. 536, 365 S.E.2d 120 (1987), cert. denied, 185 Ga. App. 910, 365 S.E.2d 120 (1988).

No violation of right to confrontation. — Defendant's right to confrontation was not violated because the transporting officer did not testify at trial and the state made no attempt during trial to admit any out-of-court statements the transporting officer may have made. Lafavor v. State, 334 Ga. App. 125, 778 S.E.2d 377 (2015).

Defendant not denied right to cross-examine witnesses. — When defense counsel attempted to cross-examine the state's witnesses as to whether certain accusations or traffic citations which had been admitted in evidence contained a driving under the influence charge, and when each time the state successfully objected that the exhibits themselves would be the highest and best evidence, the defendant was not denied due process, equal protection, or the defendant's right to cross-examine witnesses. Ferrell v. State, 149 Ga. App. 405, 254 S.E.2d 404 (1979).

Defendant's cross-examination of an arresting officer was not unduly restricted when the defendant was not allowed to ask the officer at trial if the officer's testimony at a suppression hearing satisfied the requirements for establishing the admissibility of the fruits of a pat-down search, as that legal determination was the province of the court, had previously been addressed by the court, and was not an issue for the jury. Mohamed v. State, 276 Ga. 706, 583 S.E.2d 9 (2003).

Admission of codefendant's statement to fellow prisoners referring to a robbery and a shooting by "one of the guys" did not violate defendant's federal or state rights to confront witnesses and did not mandate that defendant be tried separately as the statement did not inculcate defendant. Sampson v. State, 279 Ga. 8, 608 S.E.2d 621 (2005).

When the trial court, in a criminal case, employed a certain procedure to be used in cross-examining an officer about the officer's police report, defendant's right to cross-examine the officer was not unduly infringed, as counsel was allowed to cross-examine the officer about the report, which contained an error potentially harmful to a codefendant, without improperly admitting the erroneous information, yet with no undue infringement upon defendant's right to cross-examine the officer, and defense counsel agreed to the procedure. Parker v. State, 274 Ga. App. 347, 617 S.E.2d 625 (2005).

Right to Confrontation (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Defendant's claim that defense counsel was ineffective in failing to request that the defendant's trial be severed from the codefendant's trial because the admission into evidence of the codefendant's recorded statement, which implicated the defendant, violated the Sixth Amendment right to confront the codefendant, failed because first, the codefendant testified before the jury and was subject to cross-examination, so the admission of the codefendant's statement was not, in fact, a Bruton violation, and, second, the codefendant's incriminating statement was made shortly after the crimes occurred, was made prior to arrest, and was a non-custodial statement to an acquaintance rather than police officers, so it was more properly characterized as an admissible declaration of a co-conspirator, rather than a confession; further, the defendant's trial counsel provided several strategic reasons for choosing not to request a motion to sever, which did not form the basis for an ineffectiveness claim. Williams v. State, 280 Ga. 539, 630 S.E.2d 410 (2006).

Because hearsay testimony was cumulative of other properly admitted evidence, its admission, even if erroneous, was harmless; thus, defendant's contention of a Crawford violation lacked merit. Buttram v. State, 280 Ga. 595, 631 S.E.2d 642 (2006).

During the defendant's murder trial, the trial court properly did not abuse the court's discretion to impose reasonable limits on cross-examination without cutting off all inquiry into the appropriate subject of whether the witness had any belief that the witness would personally benefit from testifying for the state because such cross-examination carried with it the potential for confusing the jury on marginally relevant testimony. Nwakanma v. State, 296 Ga. 493, 768 S.E.2d 503 (2015).

Blood test results in defendant's medical records were not testimonial. — In the defendant's vehicular homicide prosecution, the admission of testimony regarding the defendant's blood-test results contained in the defendant's medical records did not violate the Confrontation Clause; the medical records were not testimonial in nature because the circumstances surrounding their creation objectively indicated that the records were prepared with a primary purpose of facilitating the defendant's medical care after the defendant was struck by the same vehicle that killed the victim. Hartzler v. State, 332 Ga. App. 674, 774 S.E.2d 738 (2015).

Audiotape of 9-1-1 calls non-testimonial. — Because the record supported the trial court's determination that the primary purpose common to both of the victim's 9-1-1 calls was to seek assistance in the course of a situation involving immediate danger to the victim, and because the trial court properly redacted those portions of the calls arguably involving the victim's narration of past events and the assessment of the defendant's character, the trial court did not err when the court concluded that the 9-1-1 calls were non-testimonial for purposes of the Confrontation Clause. Owens v. State, 329 Ga. App. 455, 765 S.E.2d 653 (2014).

Trial court's order granting a defendant's motion to exclude the victim's 911 call was vacated because the trial court should not have made the determination that the victim's statements were testimonial in nature without listening to the actual recording of the call and relying instead on the transcript. State v. Gunn, 333 Ga. App. 893, 777 S.E.2d 722 (2015).

No right to cross examine defendant's translator. — With regard to various drug-related convictions, defendant's Sixth Amendment right to confrontation was not violated by the trial court refusing to allow defendant to cross-examine defendant's Spanish translator after defendant's tape-recorded statement was played before the jury and defendant asserted that certain statements were translated incorrectly as, under the language conduit rule, the translator's statements were defendant's own and, therefore, defendant had no right to, in essence, confront defendant. Hernandez v. State, 291 Ga. App. 562, 662 S.E.2d 325 (2008), cert.

denied, No. S08C1631, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 763 (Ga. 2008).

Failure of defendant to advise of problems with interpreters. — Trial court did not err in finding that the defendant failed to meet the defendant's burden of showing that the performance of the defendant's attorneys was deficient because the defendant's counsel recognized the need for interpreters and secured the interpreters; the defendant, who spoke only Spanish, had ample opportunity to inform counsel or the trial court of any problems with the interpreters, and the fact that the defendant did not do so hampered the defendant in meeting the defendant's burden to show that counsel's performance in securing interpreters to assist the defendant was inadequate. Pineda v. State, 288 Ga. 612, 706 S.E.2d 407 (2011).

Codefendant's confession properly admitted even though codefendant did not testify at trial. — In defendant's trial on charges alleging that defendant and two codefendants robbed and killed a person in 1986, the trial court did not violate defendant's rights under the confrontation clause by admitting statements which defendant's codefendants made, even though the codefendants did not testify, because those statements were properly redacted before they were admitted and the jury was properly instructed on their use. Ingram v. State, 277 Ga. 46, 586 S.E.2d 221 (2003).

Right limited if witness is not "against" defendant. — Although defendant had a right to confront the witnesses against defendant, defendant was not denied that right when a witness at the scene of the crimes that resulted in one person being shot to death and the witness being injured initially refused to testify, then stated on cross-examination that defendant was not involved in the crimes and was not even present, as the witness was not a witness "against" defendant. Allison v. State, 259 Ga. App. 775, 577 S.E.2d 845 (2003).

Failure to interview witness. — In a child molestation prosecution, fact that counsel did not interview the parent of a similar transaction victim was not deficient performance, as the witness refused to give a statement or take a polygraph test before trial, claiming such acts might incriminate the parent. Estes v. State, 279 Ga. App. 394, 631 S.E.2d 438 (2006).

Defendant was convicted of violating a protective order by driving within 100 yards of the defendant's ex-spouse and child, honking the defendant's horn and yelling at the ex-spouse. As the jury likely credited the ex-spouse's testimony that the defendant drove within five yards of the ex-spouse and child, any failure by trial counsel to have adequately interviewed a witness who testified that the house the defendant was visiting was 9,375 feet away from the ex-spouse's home did not prejudice the defendant. Bee v. State, 294 Ga. App. 199, 670 S.E.2d 114 (2008).

Defendant failed to establish that the defendant suffered prejudice due to defense counsel's failure to interview the defendant's co-indictees prior to trial because the defendant made no attempt to detail what information could have been revealed pre-trial if counsel interviewed the co-indictees and how such information would have been helpful to the defendant's defense; defense counsel thoroughly cross-examined both co-indictees and impeached one of the co-indictees with the co-indictee's various prior inconsistent statements to police investigators. Moore v. State, 288 Ga. 187, 702 S.E.2d 176 (2010).

Failure to interview detective who would be witness in trial. — Trial counsel's failure to personally interview a detective before trial did not fall below an objective standard of reasonableness as counsel saw no need to interview the detective because counsel had obtained and reviewed the detective's detailed written report, and counsel considered the witness to be only of secondary importance. Lewis v. State, 297 Ga. App. 517, 677 S.E.2d 723 (2009).

No deprivation for court to refuse to require state to identify and produce informant. — A trial court's refusal to require the state to identify and produce an informant does not wrongfully deprive a defendant of defendant's right to cross-examine witnesses, when the defendant makes no showing of, and does not in any way call in issue, any favorability or materiality of the informant's testimony to the defense. Bennett v. State, 153 Ga. App. 21, 264 S.E.2d 516 (1980).

Right to Confrontation (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

State is not required to subpoena and put on stand person not listed on accusation or indictment, and it does not abridge the defendant's right of confrontation and cross-examination for the court to refuse to require the state to summon one not relied on by the state to make out its case before the jury as a witness. Bonds v. State, 232 Ga. 694, 208 S.E.2d 561 (1974).

Denial of inquiry into pending charges. — Trial court's refusal to permit cross examination of victim-witness' pending criminal charges was an abuse of discretion and reversible error when the defendant was clearly entitled to inquire of any possible desire on the witness's part to influence their disposition by assisting the state in the prosecution. Hurston v. State, 206 Ga. App. 570, 426 S.E.2d 196 (1992).

"Indicia of reliability" determine whether statement presented to jury.

— In cases involving a defendant's Sixth Amendment right to confrontation, the focus of concern is to insure that there are "indicia of reliability" which have been widely viewed as determinative of whether a statement may be placed before the jury though there is no confrontation of the declarant, and to afford the trier of fact a satisfactory basis for evaluating the truth of the prior statement. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116, rehearing denied, 444 U.S. 975, 100 S. Ct. 472, 62 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1979).

"Indicia of reliability" specified. — Those "indicia of reliability" which have been viewed as determinative of whether a statement may be placed before the jury though there is no confrontation of the declarant are that the statement was nonnarrative; that the declarant is shown by the evidence to know whereof the declarant speaks; that the witness is not apt to be proceeding on faulty recollection;

and that the circumstances show that declarant had no apparent reason to lie to the witness. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116, rehearing denied, 444 U.S. 975, 100 S. Ct. 472, 62 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1979).

Non-testifying victim's statements were pertinent to medical treatment.

— With regard to a defendant's trial and conviction for aggravated sodomy and simple battery involving the sexual assault of an inmate upon an inmate, the trial court did not violate the defendant's rights under the Confrontation Clause by admitting the statements made by the victim to the physician and the nurse who treated the victim for the injuries received because the statements were admissible under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-803), the medical diagnosis or treatment exception, and did not fall within any class of testimonial statement. In particular, no objective witness would reasonably conclude that the statements were made under such circumstances that the statement would be available for use at a later trial. Mitchell v. State, 289 Ga. App. 55, 656 S.E.2d 145 (2007), cert. dismissed, No. S08C0770, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 499 (Ga. 2008).

Confrontation rights were violated, but admission of hearsay evidence was harmless, given the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt, the fact that the victim's taped account of the argument between the defendant and the defendant's wife was cumulative to, and corroborative of, the defendant's own testimony, and as the erroneously admitted hearsay evidence did not contribute to the verdict. Delgado v. State, 287 Ga. App. 273, 651 S.E.2d 201 (2007).

Confrontation rights not violated despite admission of hearsay.

— When three of the "indicia of reliability" were present and since the incriminating statements were made during the concealment stage of the conspiracy, the admission of hearsay testimony concerning the individual's statements incriminating the individual and the defendant was authorized by former Code 1933, § 38-306 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-3-5), and did not violate the defendant's confrontation rights under the state and federal Constitutions. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116, rehearing denied, 444 U.S. 975, 100 S. Ct. 472, 62 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1979).

When a witness visited a coconspirator (the witness's uncle) with the defendant in jail and when the coconspirator gave the witness a message written down on a pad which read "don't identify him" (allegedly referring to the defendant), the written message and testimony were admissible and did not violate the defendant's confrontation rights. Mooney v. State, 243 Ga. 373, 254 S.E.2d 337, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 886, 100 S. Ct. 179, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116, rehearing denied, 444 U.S. 975, 100 S. Ct. 472, 62 L. Ed. 2d 391 (1979).

When the defendant was convicted of burglary and theft by taking after defendant's admission that after the burglary defendant and a codefendant drove off in the stolen car, and the codefendant used the stolen cash and the firearms to purchase crack cocaine, the trial court's failure to instruct the jury that certain statements made by the codefendant, which implicated defendant in the burglary were non-probative hearsay was a harmless error, as there was little question that the defendant was involved in the crimes. Goins v. State, 259 Ga. App. 739, 578 S.E.2d 308 (2003).

Trial court did not err in admitting two statements the victim made regarding defendant's kidnapping of the victim, pursuant to the res gestae exception to the hearsay rule, as the victim was still under the influence of defendant's criminal act, and the state and federal courts have previously determined that admission of res gestae evidence did not violate a defendant's right to confront defendant's accuser. White v. State, 265 Ga. App. 117, 592 S.E.2d 905 (2004).

A recorded police interview of a man that was incarcerated with the defendant shortly before the murder for which the defendant was convicted, wherein the man relayed that the defendant indicated wanting to get even with the neighbor on the floor below, was properly admitted into evidence at the defendant's trial despite posing a Crawford violation, because the man's statement may have raised one possible motive for the defendant to have killed the victim but it was not necessary to prove a motive to establish either malice murder or felony murder, for which the defendant was on trial. Humphrey v. State, 281 Ga. 596, 642 S.E.2d 23 (2007).

With regard to defendant's trial and conviction for child molestation, the trial court did not err by allowing the admission of the victim's hearsay statements as defense counsel had subpoenaed the victim and announced that defense counsel intended to call the victim as a trial witness; although the victim ultimately was not called to testify, the record established that the victim was present and available for cross-examination, and therefore, there was no Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36, 124 S. Ct. 1354, 158 L. Ed. 2d 177 (2004), violation presented in the case. Williams v. State, 290 Ga. App. 841, 660 S.E.2d 740 (2008).

The admission of an informant's testimony regarding knowledge of the defendant's participation in the victim's murder did not amount to inadmissible hearsay and did not violate the Confrontation Clause, as the hearsay was cumulative of admissible evidence adduced at trial and, in light of the overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt, there was no reasonable possibility that the confrontation violation contributed to the guilty verdict. Warren v. State, 283 Ga. 42, 656 S.E.2d 803 (2008).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a new trial and upheld the defendant's conviction for child molestation because even if the trial court erred by admitting the child victim's recorded interview and her statements to the police investigator, the forensic interviewer, her mother, and a relative, any such error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt because the evidence against the defendant was so overwhelming and cumulative in the nature of the testimony of the emergency room physician, the defendant's written statement and recorded confession, and the defendant's admissions to others; plus, the child victim's recantations were also admitted into evidence. Welch v. State, 318 Ga. App. 202, 733 S.E.2d 482 (2012).

Right to Confrontation (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)Confrontation rights were violated.

— Trial court erred in admitting, at trial, a pretrial statement made by the defendant's father to an investigator, as the defendant was not afforded a meaningful opportunity to cross-examine the father regarding the statement during a bond hearing, and the reasonable doubt standard and the significant risk standard could not be equated, given that determining whether a specific crime was committed reached different issues than determining the possibility of future bad conduct by the defendant. Dickson v. State, 281 Ga. App. 539, 636 S.E.2d 721 (2006).

Trial court's refusal to permit the defendant to cross-examine the prosecutor at a hearing on the defendant's plea of double jeopardy amounted to legal error, as such not only amounted to a violation of the defendant's right to confrontation, but also foreclosed the opportunity for the defendant to prove whether the prosecutor intended to goad the defendant into moving for a mistrial. Wright v. State, 284 Ga. App. 169, 643 S.E.2d 538 (2007).

Because the victim was unavailable at trial, having died since the alleged burglary, and had not been subject to cross-examination by the defendant, upon the state's concession that admission of the victim's identification of the defendant at the scene was harmful, the defendant's burglary conviction was reversed. Davis v. State, 289 Ga. App. 526, 657 S.E.2d 609 (2008).

Despite sufficient evidence existing to support the defendant's conviction for trafficking in cocaine, the conviction was reversed because the trial court violated the defendant's right to confrontation by admitting the out-of-court statements of a confidential informant that the informant purchased crack cocaine from the defendant, which was arguably the only direct or non-circumstantial evidence that the defendant was involved in the illegal drug activity occurring at the residence. Freeman v. State, 329 Ga. App. 429, 765 S.E.2d 631 (2014).

Admission of hearsay evidence not harmless error. — Because the evidence against the defendant was not overwhelming, admission of the officer's testimony that the witness told the officer that defendant sold the witness drugs was hearsay which violated defendant's right to a fair trial and was therefore not harmless error. Welch v. State, 231 Ga. App. 74, 498 S.E.2d 555 (1998).

Limit to cross-examination. — Trial court did not err when it limited the cross-examination of one detective concerning the other detective's interview with defendant about how the other detective formed opinions and impressions regarding the other detective's theory regarding how defendant's spouse was killed, as defendant's Sixth Amendment right to cross-examine the detective was not abridged by the limitation since defendant was trying to ask about matters that were beyond the detective's knowledge. Rowe v. State, 276 Ga. 800, 582 S.E.2d 119 (2003).

No abuse of discretion resulted from the admission of testimony from the investigating officer, the child victim's mother, and the child victim's sister, about the alleged child molestation committed by the juvenile, as: (1) the child was available to testify; (2) cross-examination of the child victim in the judge's chambers was attempted, but proved unsuccessful; and (3) the judge ruled that no further purpose would be served by having the child examined in the open courtroom. In the Interest of S.S., 281 Ga. App. 781, 637 S.E.2d 151 (2006).

The trial court did not improperly limit a drug defendant's right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination; the defendant had been able to question an undercover officer extensively regarding the officer's recollection of the incident, several other arrests, and inaccuracies in police reports before the trial court eventually restricted the defendant's questioning about reports in other cases, which were only marginally relevant to the charge filed against the defendant. Holloway v. State, 283 Ga. App. 823, 643 S.E.2d 286 (2007).

In a prosecution for aggravated sodomy, aggravated child molestation, and child molestation, the trial court abused its discretion in excluding evidence about the child victim's demeanor during the time of the reported abuse, and in sustaining the state's vague objection to defense counsel's cross-examination without any explanation, as the sought-after evidence could have been relevant to support the defense that the victim was influenced by the child's other grandmother into making accusations against the defendant and could have provided the only available evidence as to whether or how the other grandmother might have influenced the child's relations with the defendant. Slade v. State, No. A07A0734, 2007 Ga. App. LEXIS 792 (July 9, 2007).

With regard to a defendant's trial and ultimate conviction on charges of malice murder, armed robbery, and possession of a firearm during the commission of a felony, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in limiting the scope of the defendant's cross-examination of the testifying victims regarding the immigration status of the victims; the immigration status of the victims was not an issue relevant to the matter being tried, namely whether the defendant committed the crimes charged. Junior v. State, 282 Ga. 689, 653 S.E.2d 481 (2007).

The trial court properly refused to allow a defendant who claimed that the defendant had unknowingly transported drugs to cross-examine the state's expert about the mandatory minimum sentence for cocaine trafficking in order to show that a dealer would have the incentive to have an innocent person transport drugs. Allowing such evidence was improper when there was a hypothetical wrongdoer who was not identified, not charged with a crime, not testifying, and not subject to cross-examination, and who had not made a deal with the state. Perkins v. State, 288 Ga. App. 802, 655 S.E.2d 677 (2007).

Defendant had not been denied right to thorough and sifting cross-examination when trial court sustained state's objection to a question of a car salesperson when the salesperson had already testified twice that the defendant had not driven a car on a certain day when the defendant asked the salesperson whether defendant had never driven the car; defense counsel had not offered to rephrase the question or explain to the trial court what counsel was trying to ascertain, and the defendant had not shown that the limitation of the line of questioning was harmful. Head v. State, 290 Ga. App. 823, 660 S.E.2d 871 (2008).

The trial court did not abuse its discretion by refusing to allow any cross-examination of an investigator as to that part of the defendant's custodial statement in which the defendant identified a codefendant as the individual to whom the defendant rented a panel van used as a methamphetamine lab. Inasmuch as the defendant did not testify, the admission of the defendant's custodial statement implicating the codefendant was barred by Bruton. Boone v. State, 293 Ga. App. 654, 667 S.E.2d 880 (2008).

Because defendant waived an objection to the trial court's ruling on the scope of defendant's cross-examination of a witness by failing to object, and because a juror stated that the juror could be fair and impartial when hearing the case, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying defendant's motion for a new trial. Pinckney v. State, 285 Ga. 458, 678 S.E.2d 480 (2009).

Breath test printouts as business records. — There was adequate foundation to admit printouts of test results from defendant's breath test as business records under O.C.G.A. § 24-3-14(b), in that it was in the regular course of the trooper's business to perform such a test, and these printouts were the result of one of those tests conducted in the regular course of the trooper's duties; consequently, there was no violation of defendant's right of confrontation. Sisson v. State, 232 Ga. App. 61, 499 S.E.2d 422 (1998).

Telephone records as business records and counsel's objection without merit. — Although the defendant claimed that the defendant's trial counsel was ineffective in permitting the admission of certain phone records, trial counsel did object to admission of the records, but the trial court overruled the objection; the evidence showed that the records were maintained in computer storage as business records, the trial court therefore did not err in admitting the records under the business records exception to the hearsay rule, and the defendant thus failed to demonstrate deficient performance. In any event, the evidence of the defendant's guilt was overwhelming, there was no reasonable probability the outcome would have been more favorable had counsel done the things the defendant claimed that counsel should have, and no prejudice was shown. Washington v. State, 285 Ga. 541, 678 S.E.2d 900 (2009).

Right to Confrontation (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Witness in view of defendant. — When a defendant complained that the trial court did not allow the defendant to sit where the defendant could view witnesses against the defendant as they were testifying, it was error to hold that the defendant's right to confrontation did not require that the defendant be able to see witnesses as they testified. Richardson v. State, 276 Ga. 639, 581 S.E.2d 528 (2003).

Child victim testifying with back to defendant. — Testimony by a six-year-old victim who was allowed to testify facing the jury with the victim back to defendant so that the defendant could not look the victim in the eye did not violate the defendant's constitutional right to confront witnesses against the defendant since defendant had the opportunity to, and did, thoroughly cross-examine the witness. Atwell v. State, 204 Ga. App. 187, 419 S.E.2d 77 (1992).

Evidence of absent witness at former trial is admissible. Hunter v. State, 147 Ga. 823, 95 S.E. 668 (1918).

Testimony of witness from former trial admissible when opportunity to cross-examine afforded defendant. — The testimony of a witness who was examined on a former trial of a criminal charge when the opportunity of cross-examination was afforded is admissible in evidence on a subsequent trial of the same defendant upon the same charge, upon proof that the witness was removed from the state or is otherwise inaccessible. Burns v. State, 191 Ga. 60, 11 S.E.2d 350 (1940).

Admission of emergency room records without person completing records. — Admission of hospital records that indicated the defendant presented to the emergency room intoxicated and needed to be cleared to go to jail did not violate the defendant's confrontation rights without the one responsible for completing the forms testifying because the Supreme Court of Georgia has specifically held that medical records created for treatment purposes are not testimonial; thus, the trial court properly admitted the records under O.C.G.A. § 24-8-803(6). Samuels v. State, 335 Ga. App. 819, No. A15A1804, 2016 Ga. App. LEXIS 93 (2016).

Admission of "testimonial" statements was harmless error. — In defendant's prosecution for murdering defendant's former girlfriend, if the girlfriend's statements to a police officer who investigated a domestic dispute between the victim and defendant were "testimonial," the admission of those statements was harmless error because they were cumulative of other properly admitted evidence and they did not go to the core issue in the case. Williams v. State, 279 Ga. 731, 620 S.E.2d 816 (2005).

To the extent that evidence contested by defendant consisted of out-of-court statements that the victim made to officers during investigations of complaints made by the victim, it was inadmissible hearsay; however, a Crawford violation was harmless when the hearsay was cumulative of other admissible evidence, and since there was such additional admissible evidence, including the testimony of friends recounting what the victim said about the difficulties with the defendant, which statements were admissible under the necessity exception, any error was harmless. Chapman v. State, 280 Ga. 560, 629 S.E.2d 220 (2006).

While the Supreme Court of Georgia agreed with the defendant that the use of hearsay testimony denied the defendant's right to confrontation, that error was harmless in light of the fact that the hearsay was cumulative of testimony already supplied by three other witnesses. Lynch v. State, 280 Ga. 887, 635 S.E.2d 140 (2006).

Because the state's evidence in support of its charges was overwhelming, even if the trial court erred in permitting a witness to testify regarding statements made to the witness by the victim, the error was harmless. Thus, no violation of the defendant's confrontation rights occurred. Debro v. State, 282 Ga. 880, 655 S.E.2d 804 (2008).

Statements not testimonial. — Because a hearsay statement made by the defendant's late brother to the defendant's husband about the defendant's conduct and statements made immediately after the shooting at issue was not testimonial in nature, it did not implicate the confrontation clause of the federal and state constitution. Holton v. State, 280 Ga. 843, 632 S.E.2d 90 (2006).

Admission of statements that the victim made to a police investigator regarding the victim's fear of the defendant on the day that the victim was murdered did not violate the defendant's right to confrontation because the statements were not testimonial since the victim was not reporting a crime to the police officer or building a case against the defendant, the victim was merely seeking advice from a knowledgeable friend, who happened to be a police officer. Breedlove v. State, 291 Ga. 249, 728 S.E.2d 643 (2012).

Introduction of confession of codefendant who was never offered as witness denies to other codefendant constitutional right to confrontation. Sewell v. State, 153 Ga. App. 177, 264 S.E.2d 708 (1980).

Admission of co-indictee's refusal to testify was harmless error. — With regard to defendant's trial for felony murder and other crimes, trial court did not commit reversible error by holding co-indictee in contempt for refusing to testify after invoking the Fifth Amendment and then recalling the jurors and informing them that co-indictee had pled guilty to various offenses, refused to cooperate with state despite an offer of immunity, and that co-indictee had been held in contempt for that refusal. Hendricks v. State, 283 Ga. 470, 660 S.E.2d 365 (2008).

Codefendant's confession is admissible if codefendant testifies at trial. — The rule enunciated in Bruton v. United States, 391 U.S. 123, 88 S. Ct. 1620, 20 L. Ed. 2d 476 (1968), that admission of a codefendant's confession violates the confrontation clause despite omitting instructions, is inapplicable if the codefendant, the declarant, testified at trial and was available for cross-examination. Fain v. State, 165 Ga. App. 188, 300 S.E.2d 197 (1983).

Bruton violation when neither defendant testified. — In a joint trial when neither defendant testified, the second defendant was entitled to a new trial based on the admission of the first defendant's statement against the second defendant because a Bruton violation occurred and the only evidence directly identifying the second defendant as one of the men at the victim's door in a shooting incident was the first defendant's statement. Meadows v. State, 264 Ga. App. 160, 590 S.E.2d 173 (2003).

Bruton violation not shown. — Bruton objection was properly overruled as codefendant's statement that the codefendant would check with defendant regarding the victim's participation was part of the res gestae, rather than a confession or statement. Ford v. State, 274 Ga. App. 695, 617 S.E.2d 262 (2005).

Defendant's custodial statements that the defendant was not present and that the defendant had an alibi did not incriminate the codefendants. It followed that the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying motions for mistrial on Bruton grounds. Metz v. State, 284 Ga. 614, 669 S.E.2d 121 (2008), overruled on other grounds, State v. Kelly, 290 Ga. 29, 718 S.E.2d 232 (2011).

No Crawford violation. — In a delinquency proceeding on a charge of child molestation, even assuming that a police officer's statements were wrongly admitted, that testimony was merely cumulative of other properly admitted testimony presented by both the child's mother and the child's sister, and the admission did not require reversal of the court's adjudicatory findings. In the Interest of S.S., 281 Ga. App. 781, 637 S.E.2d 151 (2006).

In defendant's convictions on one count of simple assault and two counts of battery, trial court properly determined that audioteape of 9-1-1 call made by the victim was nontestimonial in nature as the caller advised that the caller had been hit, had a swollen face, was experiencing serious bleeding and the call was made with such immediacy after the attack that, upon the officer's arrival, the caller was scared and crying, and blood was running down the caller's chin, shirt, and pants; thus, trial court properly found that the call was nontestimonial in nature in that it was made to seek assistance in a situation involving immediate danger. Thompson v. State, 291 Ga. App. 355, 662 S.E.2d 135 (2008).

Right to Confrontation (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Hearsay statement of defendant's former spouse properly admitted. — Admission of a Georgia Bureau of Investigation agent's testimony regarding a statement by the defendant's former spouse implicating the defendant in a killing did not violate the defendant's right of confrontation, where the former spouse remarried the defendant before refusing to testify at the defendant's trial, and there was a "necessity" that the finder of fact be acquainted with the statement of the only eyewitness to the homicide. Higgs v. State, 256 Ga. 606, 351 S.E.2d 448 (1987).

Admission of hearsay under res gestae exception did not violate defendant's right of confrontation. — In a speeding and eluding prosecution, under the res gestae exception to the former hearsay rule, former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-803), an officer was properly allowed to testify that a bystander had asked the officer whether the officer was searching for a blue sports car and then pointed to a direction. Since no testimonial statement was involved, the defendant's rights to confrontation as interpreted by Crawford v. Washington, 541 U.S. 36 (2004), were not violated. Segel v. State, 293 Ga. App. 506, 667 S.E.2d 670 (2008).

Ex parte affidavits are inadmissible. — Upon the trial of a criminal case upon the issue of guilty or not guilty, ex parte affidavits are not admissible either for or against the accused. Becton v. State, 134 Ga. App. 100, 213 S.E.2d 195 (1975).

Right of confrontation not denied by state's use of affidavits on motions for new trial. — The use of affidavits by the state on motions for new trials in criminal cases does not deny the accused the right to be confronted by the witnesses. Perry v. State, 117 Ga. 719, 45 S.E. 77 (1903).

Examination limited to officer's reports about incident. — Trial court did not err in limiting the defendant's cross-examination of a police officer to reports relevant to the incident where the defendant was arrested as the defendant did not have a right to challenge other reports not related to the incident since the defendant's right to confront under the Confrontation Clause was not unlimited. Mai v. State, 259 Ga. App. 471, 577 S.E.2d 288 (2003).

Confrontation Clause guarantees an opportunity for effective cross-examination, not cross-examination that is effective in whatever way and to whatever extent the defense might wish; a trial court properly limited cross-examination of the victim of an armed robbery and a battery to whether the victim possessed or was under the influence of illegal drugs at the time of the incident, and disallowed questions to the victim about drug sales, since whether the victim had sold drugs was irrelevant. Daniel v. State, 271 Ga. App. 539, 610 S.E.2d 90 (2005).

Restrictions on right to cross-examination. — Although it is better that cross-examination should be too free than too restricted, this right to a thorough and sifting cross-examination must be tempered and restricted so as not to infringe on privileged areas or wander into the realm of irrelevant testimony. Eades v. State, 232 Ga. 735, 208 S.E.2d 791 (1974).

Defendant opens door to videotape testimony. — Trial court's admission of part of a videotape involving defendant's interview with detective who was unavailable at trial, which the trial court earlier had said it would exclude, was not an abuse of discretion and did not violate defendant's right to confrontation; the trial court admitted it because defense counsel "opened the door" to its admission by asking about it on direct examination, and any error in admitting it was harmless because the detective's comments about a theory that the wife might have committed suicide were favorable to defendant and any inference that defendant shot the defendant's spouse was supported by other evidence. Rowe v. State, 276 Ga. 800, 582 S.E.2d 119 (2003).

Waiver of constitutional confrontation rights in guilty plea. — Because the transcript of proceedings and trial counsel's affidavit did not show that defendant was advised that a guilty plea would waive the privilege against self-incrimination and the right to confrontation, the trial court erred in denying defendant's habeas corpus petition. Green v. State, 279 Ga. 687, 620 S.E.2d 788 (2005).

Habeas court's finding that a petitioner's guilty pleas were validly entered was reversed as the waiver forms signed by the petitioner and reviewed with the petitioner by the petitioner's attorneys addressed only the right to be tried by a jury; the waiver forms did not advise the petitioner that the petitioner was waiving the petitioner's right against self-incrimination and the petitioner's confrontation right. Beckworth v. State, 281 Ga. 41, 635 S.E.2d 769 (2006).

Testimony on deals with witnesses. — Defendant was denied the constitutional right to confrontation when a case agent was allowed to state that no deal had been reached with a confidential informant without being cross-examined; however, the error was not reversible because no prejudice was shown when the confidential informant testified at trial and was thoroughly cross-examined concerning the motives for testifying against the defendant and since no evidence was presented regarding a deal with the confidential informant. Garrison v. State, 260 Ga. App. 788, 581 S.E.2d 357 (2003).

In termination of parental rights case, no harm from alleged violation of confrontation rights. — Termination of a father's parental rights was affirmed in a case in which the father alleged that the father's confrontation rights were violated when the father had to cross-examine a mother over the telephone. In the Interest of M.H.W., 275 Ga. App. 586, 621 S.E.2d 779 (2005).

Admission of codefendant's statement harmless error. — Trial court did not violate defendant's constitutional right to confront witnesses in a case in which the trial court did not sever defendant's trial from that of defendant's two codefendants and the statement of a codefendant who did not testify at trial that defendant had ordered the codefendant to "finish off" the one man, as defendant did not show clear prejudice and that defendant's due process rights were violated by admission of the statement; however, even assuming that admission of the statement was error, the error was at most harmless, especially because of the overwhelming evidence against defendant. Mason v. State, 279 Ga. 636, 619 S.E.2d 621 (2005).

2. Right to be Present

This paragraph includes implied right of accused to be present at all stages of trial. Chance v. State, 156 Ga. 428, 119 S.E. 303 (1923).

Right to confront, see, and hear. — The defendant has not only the right to be confronted with witnesses, but the defendant has also the right to be present, and see and hear all the proceedings which are had against the defendant on the trial before the court. Bagwell v. State, 129 Ga. 170, 58 S.E. 650 (1907).

Defendant must be present when court takes any action materially affecting the defendant's case. Andrews v. State, 196 Ga. 84, 26 S.E.2d 263, cert. denied, 320 U.S. 780, 64 S. Ct. 87, 88 L. Ed. 468 (1943), overruled on other grounds, Frady v. State, 212 Ga. 84, 90 S.E.2d 664 (1955).

The right to be present, including presence by counsel, may be waived. Martin v. State, 51 Ga. 567 (1874); Brown v. State, 151 Ga. 497, 107 S.E. 536 (1921).

It is well settled that in the trial of a criminal case, whether a felony or a misdemeanor, the accused has the right to be present, in person and by the accused's attorney, during every stage of the trial from the arraignment to the verdict, and this right cannot be lost except by a clear and distinct waiver thereof by the accused. Jones v. State, 57 Ga. App. 344, 195 S.E. 316 (1938).

Rights waived when accused absents oneself from trial. — Confrontation rights are personal to the accused and are waived when the accused is free on bail and voluntarily absents oneself from the trial. Byrd v. Ricketts, 233 Ga. 779, 213 S.E.2d 610, cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1011, 95 S. Ct. 2636, 45 L. Ed. 2d 675 (1975).

Right to Confrontation (Cont'd)2. Right to be Present (Cont'd)

Defendant may waive defendant's right to confrontation by voluntarily absenting oneself from the proceedings after the trial begins. The trial begins when jeopardy attaches. Pollard v. State, 175 Ga. App. 269, 333 S.E.2d 152 (1985).

A defendant waives the right of confrontation if the defendant is voluntarily absent from trial after jeopardy attaches, which occurs immediately once the jury is selected and sworn. Manus v. State, 180 Ga. App. 658, 350 S.E.2d 41 (1986).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying a defendant's motion for a new trial based on the defendant vomiting in front of the jury during voir dire when the trial was commenced after a two day delay that was granted to the defendant after indicating an illness prevented the defendant's presence at trial. The trial court properly found that the alleged ill defendant waived the right to be present by repeatedly delaying the start of trial with the malingering conduct and by failing to object when defense counsel, in the defendant's presence, specifically requested that the trial court remove the defendant from the courtroom before bringing the jury panel back. Smith v. State, 284 Ga. 599, 669 S.E.2d 98 (2008).

Because the trial court's determination of the restitution amount was authorized by O.C.G.A. § 17-14-7(b) and did not unlawfully enhance a defendant's sentence, the defendant did not have a substantive right to have the restitution hearing held within a certain time; defendant waived the rights to be present and to confrontation by voluntarily choosing not to attend the hearing. Williams v. State, 311 Ga. App. 152, 715 S.E.2d 440 (2011), cert. denied, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 69 (Ga. 2012).

Waiver of right by disruptive behavior. — When the defendant continued with disruptive, vocal outbursts after twice being removed from the trial court during jury selection, the third and final removal of the defendant for the remainder of the jury selection process was not error because the defendant failed to heed the trial court's warnings for self control and, thereby, waived the defendant's right to be present during jury selection. Lovelace v. State, 262 Ga. App. 690, 586 S.E.2d 386 (2003).

Not guilty plea entered when defendant absent. — When the defendant is voluntarily absent, the trial court may direct that a plea of not guilty be entered and proceed with the trial. Croy v. State, 168 Ga. App. 241, 308 S.E.2d 568 (1983).

Right to be present during note exchange with jury. — Defendant's right to be present was not violated when two notes from the jurors were delivered in the defendant's absence as the allegedly improper communications were not prejudicial to defendant; one response dealt with a jury charge, which was not a critical stage of the trial, and the second was a denial of access to transcripts to the jury and an exhortation to rely upon their recollection of the evidence, which was harmless; a bailiff did not improperly relay information to the jurors; rather, the bailiff only relayed the information that was expressly authorized by the trial court. Ford v. State, 274 Ga. App. 695, 617 S.E.2d 262 (2005).

Right to be present at bench trial. — Defendant's right to be present was not violated due to the defendant's absence from 13 bench conferences as 12 conferences involved only legal arguments regarding objections and trial procedure, the defendant's absence from which did not violate the right to be present, and the defendant waived the right at the remaining conference by failing to voice any objection to the defendant's absence, either directly or through counsel. Heywood v. State, 292 Ga. 771, 743 S.E.2d 12 (2013).

Bench conferences outside of defendant's presence. — Trial court did not err in holding two bench conferences outside of the defendant's presence because the discussions at those conferences did not implicate the defendant's constitutional right to be present at critical stages of the proceedings and merely concerned matters of courtroom logistics. Tolbert v. State, 321 Ga. App. 637, 742 S.E.2d 152 (2013).

Jury may be instructed during voluntary absence of counsel, when accused was in court. Barton v. State, 67 Ga. 653, 44 Am. R. 743 (1881); Lyons v. State, 7 Ga. App. 50, 66 S.E. 149 (1909).

Although the trial judge went to the jury room to answer questions regarding the verdict form and the prosecutor and defense counsel were present but defendant was not, such action was not innocuous, but defendant did not object or seek to have counsel object, although defendant was fully aware of the matter; thus, defendant waived the issue of whether defendant was denied the right to be present at all critical stages of the trial. Fuller v. State, 277 Ga. 505, 591 S.E.2d 782 (2004).

Improper bailiff-juror communication. — Defendant waived a claim based on a bailiff's improper response to a juror's question as the defendant did not move for a mistrial or object to the trial court's subsequent remarks to the jury; further, it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to fail to grant a mistrial as the improper communication was placed on the record and remedial instructions were given before the jury's deliberations, which rebutted the presumption of prejudice. The remedial instructions did not have a chilling effect on the deliberations. Lawson v. State, 280 Ga. App. 870, 635 S.E.2d 259 (2006).

New trial when proceedings concluded in absence of defendant's counsel. — Trial court erred in receiving the verdict in the absence of the defendant's counsel, the defendant being present. Brown v. State, 151 Ga. 497, 107 S.E. 536 (1921).

It appears that when the jury returned, the sole counsel for the defendant was in a room in the courthouse adjacent to the courtroom, and that the verdict was received and published, the defendant sentenced, and the jury discharged, in counsel's absence, while counsel had no specific permission to be out of the courtroom, but no effort was made to locate counsel, nor were any other steps to protect the defendant's rights taken, the defendant and defense counsel did not waive the right to have counsel present, and a new trial should be granted. Duke v. State, 104 Ga. App. 494, 122 S.E.2d 127 (1961).

New trial when no waiver of right to poll jury. — The right of counsel to be present and to poll the jury upon the return of the verdict is a material right, and in the absence of a waiver by the defendant or defendant's counsel, or at least of the implied waiver resulting from voluntarily being absent in such manner as not to be easily located, a new trial should be granted. Duke v. State, 104 Ga. App. 494, 122 S.E.2d 127 (1961).

Right to be present does not extend to post-verdict procedures. — The general right of one accused of a felony to be present during the course of one's trial does not extend to post-verdict procedures such as a motion for new trial, at which only questions of law, not questions of fact, are determined. Dobbs v. State, 245 Ga. 208, 264 S.E.2d 18 (1980).

Resentencing in absence of defendant not violation of constitutional rights. — The order of a trial judge fixing a new date for the execution of the sentence after the original date has passed is not void because the defendant is involuntarily absent and has not waived or authorized anyone else to waive defendant's right to be present at the time and place of resentencing, and the passage of such order is not violative of the plaintiff's rights under the several provisions of the state and federal Constitutions. McBurnett v. Balkcom, 207 Ga. 452, 62 S.E.2d 180 (1950).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Right to appointed counsel not limited to capital offenses. — Under this paragraph, if the defendant is indigent, the court will appoint counsel to represent the defendant without charge; this right has never been limited to capital cases. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 133.

Distinction made between application of guarantees to offenses. — There is a clear distinction between offenses against the “laws of the state” directly enacted by the legislature and of offenses against the ordinances of the city, respecting the method of prosecution and punishing offenders against the same; these words should be given their ordinary signification; and when thus interpreted, the safeguards thereby guaranteed applied to persons charged with violation of one of the criminal statutes designed to protect the public at large, and not to offenders against the ordinances of a town or city. 1967 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 67-412.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 258 et seq., 373 et seq.

Am. Jur. Proof of Facts. — Reliability of Polygraph Examination, 14 POF2d 1.

Criminal Law — Need for Disclosure of identity of Informant, 33 POF2d 549.

Corroboration of a Child’s Sexual Abuse Allegation with Behavioral Evidence, 25 POF3d 189.

Am. Jur. Trials. — Defending Against Claim of Ineffective Assistance of Counsel, 30 Am. Jur. Trials 607.

Strategies for Enforcing the Right to Effective Representation, 46 Am. Jur. Trials 571.

C.J.S. — 22 C.J.S., Criminal Law, § 391 et seq. 22A C.J.S., Criminal Law, §§ 634, 636 663, 693, 734. 23 C.J.S., Criminal Law, §§ 1310, 1311, 1321, 1322, 1351, 1352.

ALR. — Discharge of accused under a limitation statute as a bar to a subsequent prosecution for the same offense, 3 ALR 519.

Right of defendant in criminal case to conduct defense in person, 17 ALR 266; 77 ALR2d 1233.

Incompetency, negligence, illness or the like of counsel as ground for new trial or reversal in criminal case, 24 ALR 1025; 64 ALR 436.

Constitutional guaranty of right to appear by counsel as applicable to misdemeanor case, 42 ALR 1157.

Remedy for delay in bringing accused to trial or to retrial after reversal, 58 ALR 1510.

Constitutionality and construction of statute enhancing penalty for second or subsequent offense, 82 ALR 345; 116 ALR 209; 132 ALR 91; 139 ALR 673.

Brevity of time between assignment of counsel and trial as affecting question whether accused is denied right to assistance of counsel, 84 ALR 544.

Constitutionality of statute permitting state to take or use in evidence depositions in criminal case, 90 ALR 377.

Presence of accused during view by jury, 90 ALR 597.

Brief voluntary absence of defendant from court room during trial of criminal case as ground of error, 100 ALR 478.

Effect of unauthorized amendment of criminal information or indictment, 101 ALR 1254.

Revival of judgment by constructive service of process upon nonresident, as affected by due process and full faith and credit clauses, 144 ALR 403.

Relief in habeas corpus for violation of accused’s right to assistance of counsel, 146 ALR 369.

Duty of court when appointing counsel for defendant to name attorney other than one employed by, or appointed for, a codefendant, 148 ALR 183.

Plea of guilty without advice of counsel, 149 ALR 1403.

Exclusion of public during criminal trial, 156 ALR 265; 48 ALR2d 1436.

Right to aid of counsel in application or hearing for habeas corpus, 162 ALR 922.

Effect of, and remedies for, exclusion of eligible class of persons from jury list in civil case, 166 ALR 1422.

Duty in instructing jury in criminal prosecution to explain and define offense charged, 169 ALR 315.

Duty to advise accused as to right to assistance of counsel, 3 ALR2d 1003.

Absence of accused during making of tests or experiments as affecting admissibility of testimony concerning them, 17 ALR2d 1078.

Absence of counsel for accused at time of sentence as requiring vacation thereof or other relief, 20 ALR2d 1240.

Absence of accused at return of verdict in felony case, 23 ALR2d 456.

Claim of privilege by a witness as justifying the use in criminal case of his testimony given on a former trial or preliminary examination, 45 ALR2d 1354.

Exclusion of public during criminal trial, 48 ALR2d 1436.

Accused's right to poll of jury, 49 ALR2d 619.

Right of indigent defendant in criminal case to aid of state as regards new trial or appeal, 55 ALR2d 1072.

Right to an appointment of counsel in juvenile court proceedings, 60 ALR2d 691.

Counsel's right in civil case to argue law or to read lawbooks to the jury, 66 ALR2d 9.

Power to try, in his absence, one charged with misdemeanor, 68 ALR2d 638.

Counsel's right, in consulting with accused as client, to be accompanied by psychiatrist, psychologist, hypnotist, or similar practitioner, 72 ALR2d 1120.

Incompetency of counsel chosen by accused as affecting validity of conviction, 74 ALR2d 1390; 2 ALR4th 27; 2 ALR4th 807; 26 ALR Fed. 218.

Right of accused to have his witnesses free from handcuffs, manacles, shackles, or the like, 75 ALR2d 762.

Right of defendant in criminal case to conduct defense in person, or to participate with counsel, 77 ALR2d 1233.

Propriety of criminal trial of one under influence of drugs or intoxicants at time of trial, 83 ALR2d 1067.

Exclusion or absence of defendant, pending trial of criminal case, from courtroom, or from conference between court and attorneys, during argument on question of law, 85 ALR2d 1111; 23 ALR4th 955.

Right to counsel in insanity or incompetency adjudication proceedings, 87 ALR2d 950.

Calling accused's counsel as a prosecution witness as improper deprivation of right to counsel, 88 ALR2d 796.

Admissibility of confession, admission, or incriminatory statement of accused as affected by fact that it was made after indictment and in the absence of counsel, 90 ALR2d 732.

Constitutionally protected right of indigent accused to appointment of counsel in state court prosecution, 93 ALR2d 747.

Court's duty to advise or admonish accused as to consequences of plea of guilty, or to determine that he is advised thereof, 97 ALR2d 549.

Accused's right to assistance of counsel at or prior to arraignment, 5 ALR3d 1269.

Scope and extent and remedy or sanctions for infringement of accused's right to communicate with his attorney, 5 ALR3d 1360.

Right of defendant in criminal case to inspection of statement of prosecution's witness for purposes of cross-examination or impeachment, 7 ALR3d 181.

Accused's right to interview witness held in public custody, 14 ALR3d 652.

Enforceability of transaction entered into pursuant to referral sales arrangement, 14 ALR3d 1420.

Power of court to make or permit amendment of indictment with respect to allegations as to property, objects, or instruments, other than money, 15 ALR3d 1357.

Power of court to make or permit amendment of indictment, 17 ALR3d 1181.

Power of court to make or permit amendment of indictment with respect to allegations as to prior convictions, 17 ALR3d 1265.

Power of court to make or permit amendment of indictment with respect to allegations as to nature of activity, happening, or circumstances, 17 ALR3d 1285.

Right in equity suit to jury trial of counterclaim involving legal issue, 17 ALR3d 1321.

Accused's right to inspection of minutes of state grand jury, 20 ALR3d 7.

Right of attorney appointed by court for indigent accused to, and court's power to award, compensation by public, in absence of statute or court rule, 21 ALR3d 819.

Right of motorist stopped by police officers for traffic offense to be informed at that time of his federal constitutional rights under Miranda v. Arizona, 25 ALR3d 1076.

Right to assistance by counsel in administrative proceedings, 33 ALR3d 229.

Circumstances giving rise to conflict of interest between or among criminal codefendants precluding representation by same counsel, 34 ALR3d 470.

Applicability, in proceedings under statutes relating to sexual psychopaths, of constitutional provisions for the protection of a person accused of crime, 34 ALR3d 652.

Right of indigent defendant in criminal case to aid of state by appointment of investigator or expert, 34 ALR3d 1256; 71 ALR4th 638; 72 ALR4th 874; 74 ALR4th 388; 81 ALR4th 259; 85 ALR4th 19.

Permitting documents or tape recordings containing confessions of guilt or incriminating admissions to be taken into jury room in criminal case, 37 ALR3d 238.

Right to assistance of counsel at proceedings to revoke probation, 44 ALR3d 306.

Censorship of convicted prisoners' "legal" mail, 47 ALR3d 1150.

Censorship of convicted prisoners' "non-legal" mail, 47 ALR3d 1192.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of prosecutor's remarks as to victim's age, family circumstances, or the like, 50 ALR3d 8.

Choice of venue to which transfer is to be had, where change is sought because of local prejudice, 50 ALR3d 760.

Right to counsel in contempt proceedings, 52 ALR3d 1002.

Admissibility of videotape film in evidence in criminal trial, 60 ALR3d 333; 41 ALR4th 812; 41 ALR4th 877.

Withdrawal, discharge, or substitution of counsel in criminal case as ground for continuance, 73 ALR3d 725.

Antagonistic defenses as ground for separate trials of codefendants in criminal case, 82 ALR3d 245.

Right of defendants in prosecution for criminal conspiracy to separate trials, 82 ALR3d 366.

Restricting public access to judicial records of state courts, 84 ALR3d 598.

Right of clergyman appearing in court as professional attorney to be in clerical garb, 84 ALR3d 1143.

Right to cross-examine witness as to his place of residence, 85 ALR3d 541.

Sufficiency of courtroom facilities as affecting rights of accused, 85 ALR3d 918.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of permitting nonparty to be seated at counsel table, 87 ALR3d 238.

Disruptive conduct of accused in presence of jury as ground for mistrial or discharge of jury, 89 ALR3d 960.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of gagging, shackling, or otherwise physically restraining accused during course of state criminal trial, 90 ALR3d 17.

Interference with defense counsel's pretrial interrogation of witnesses, 90 ALR3d 1231.

Admissibility of former testimony of nonparty witness, present in jurisdiction, who refuses to testify at subsequent trial without making claim of privilege, 92 ALR3d 1138.

Admissibility, as against interest, in criminal case of declaration of commission of criminal act, 92 ALR3d 1164.

Request before submitting to chemical sobriety test to communicate with counsel as refusal to take test, 97 ALR3d 852.

Validity and efficacy of accused's waiver of unanimous verdict, 97 ALR3d 1253.

Accused's right to represent himself in state criminal proceedings — modern state cases, 98 ALR3d 13.

Validity, construction, and application of interstate agreement on detainees, 98 ALR3d 160.

Right to cross-examine prosecuting witness as to his pending or contemplated civil action against accused for damages arising out of same transaction, 98 ALR3d 1060.

Modern status of rules and standards in state courts as to adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client, 2 ALR4th 27.

Waiver or estoppel in incompetent legal representation cases, 2 ALR4th 807.

Right of accused in criminal prosecution to presence of counsel at court-appointed or court-approved psychiatric examination, 3 ALR4th 910.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding speedy trial and related matters, 6 ALR4th 1208.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding confessions and related matters, 7 ALR4th 180.

Conviction by court-martial as proper subject of cross-examination for impeachment purposes, 7 ALR4th 468.

Waiver, after not guilty plea, of jury trial in felony case, 9 ALR4th 661.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding guilty pleas, 10 ALR4th 8.

Right of indigent criminal defendant to polygraph test at public expense, 11 ALR4th 733.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding search and seizure issues, 12 ALR4th 318.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding post-plea remedies, 13 ALR4th 533.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding prior convictions, 14 ALR4th 227.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding appellate and post-conviction remedies, 15 ALR4th 582.

Court's witnesses (other than expert) in state criminal prosecution, 16 ALR4th 352.

Denial of, or interference with, accused's right to have attorney initially contact accused, 18 ALR4th 669.

Exclusion of public from state criminal trial in order to avoid intimidation of witness, 55 ALR4th 1196.

Denial of accused's request for initial contact with attorney — drunk driving cases, 18 ALR4th 705.

Denial of accused's request for initial contact with attorney — cases involving offenses other than drunk driving, 18 ALR4th 743.

Conditions interfering with accused's view of witness as violation of right of confrontation, 19 ALR4th 1286.

Waiver of right to counsel by insistence upon speedy trial in state criminal case, 19 ALR4th 1299.

Modern status of rule relating to jurisdiction of state court to try criminal defendant brought within jurisdiction illegally or as result of fraud or mistake, 25 ALR4th 157.

Validity and efficacy of minor's waiver of right to counsel — modern cases, 25 ALR4th 1072.

Necessity and content of instructions to jury respecting reasons for or inferences from accused's absence from state criminal trial, 31 ALR4th 676.

Validity of jury selection as affected by accused's absence from conducting of procedures for selection and impaneling of final jury panel for specific cases, 33 ALR4th 429.

Admissibility or use in criminal trial of testimony given at preliminary proceeding by witness not available at trial, 38 ALR4th 378.

Application of speedy trial statute to dismissal or other termination of prior indictment or information and bringing of new indictment or information, 39 ALR4th 899.

Constitutionality, with respect to accused's rights to information or confrontation, of statute according confidentiality to sex crime victim's communications to sexual counselor, 43 ALR4th 395.

Drunk driving: Motorist's right to private sobriety test, 45 ALR4th 11.

Exclusion of public from state criminal trial in order to prevent disturbance by spectators or defendant, 55 ALR4th 1170.

Closed-circuit television witness examination, 61 ALR4th 1155.

Ineffective assistance of counsel: misrepresentation, or failure to advise, of immigration consequences of guilty plea — state cases, 65 ALR4th 719.

Exclusion of public from state criminal trial by conducting trial or part thereof at other than regular place or time, 70 ALR4th 632.

Right of indigent defendant in state criminal case to assistance of ballistics experts, 71 ALR4th 638.

Ineffective assistance of counsel: use or nonuse of interpreter at prosecution of foreign language speaking defendant, 79 ALR4th 1102.

What constitutes assertion of right to counsel following Miranda warnings — state cases, 83 ALR4th 443.

Right of indigent defendant in state criminal case to assistance of psychiatrist or psychologist, 85 ALR4th 19.

Ineffective assistance of counsel: use or nonuse of interpreter at prosecution of hearing-impaired defendant, 86 ALR4th 698.

Ineffective, assistance of counsel: compulsion, duress, necessity, or "hostage syndrome" defense, 8 ALR5th 713.

What persons or entities may assert or waive corporation's attorney-client privilege — modern cases, 28 ALR5th 1.

Right to appointment of counsel in contempt proceedings, 32 ALR5th 31.

Right of accused to have evidence or court proceedings interpreted, because accused or other participant in proceedings is not proficient in the language used, 32 ALR5th 149.

Duty of prosecutor to present exculpatory evidence to state grand jury, 49 ALR5th 639.

Admissibility of evidence of voice identification of defendant as affected by allegedly suggestive voice lineup procedures, 55 ALR5th 423.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client — issues of mental matters concerning persons, other than counsel's client, who are involved in criminal case, 80 ALR5th 55.

Right of indigent defendant in state criminal prosecution to ex parte in camera hearing on request for state-funded expert witness, 83 ALR5th 541.

Denial of accused's request for initial contact with attorney in cases involving offenses other than drunk driving — cases focusing on presence of inculpatory evidence other than statements by accused and cases focusing on absence of particular inculpatory evidence, 90 ALR5th 225.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client—conduct at trial regarding issues of insanity, 95 ALR5th 125.

Denial of, or interference with, accused's right to have attorney initially contact accused, 96 ALR5th 327.

Validity and efficacy of minor's waiver of right to counsel — cases decided since application of Gault, 387 U.S. 1, 87 S. Ct. 1428, 18 L. Ed. 2d 527 (1967), 101 ALR5th 351.

Denial of accused's request for initial contact with attorney — drunk driving cases, 109 ALR5th 611.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding search and seizure issues — Motions and objections during trial and matters other than pretrial motions, 117 ALR5th 513.

Denial of accused's request for initial contact with attorney in cases involving offenses other than drunk driving — Cases focusing on presence of inculpatory statements, 124 ALR5th 1.

Circumstances giving rise to prejudicial conflict of interests between criminal defendant and defense counsel—federal cases, 53 ALR Fed. 140.

Ineffective assistance of counsel: misrepresentation, or failure to advise, of immigration consequences of waiver of jury trial, 103 ALR Fed. 867.

Right of enemy combatant to counsel, 184 ALR Fed. 527.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding entrapment defense — state cases, 43 ALR6th 475.

What constitutes “custodial interrogation” within rule of requiring that suspect be informed of his or her federal constitutional rights before custodial interrogation — At border or functional equivalent of border, 68 ALR6th 607.

Criminal defendant's right to electronic recordation of interrogations and confessions, 69 ALR6th 579.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding search and seizure issues — Pretrial motions — Suppression motions where no warrant involved, 71 ALR6th 1.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of requiring defendant to wear stun belt or shock belt during course of state criminal trial, 71 ALR6th 625.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding search and seizure issues — Pretrial motions — Suppression motions where warrant was involved, 72 ALR6th 1.

Reverse-Franks claims, where police arguably omit facts from search or arrest warrant affidavit material to finding of probable cause with reckless disregard for the truth — Underlying homicide and assault offenses, 72 ALR6th 437.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding search and seizure issues — Pretrial motions — Motions other than for suppression, 73 ALR6th 1.

Reverse-Franks claims, where police arguably omit facts from search or arrest warrant affidavit material to finding of probable cause with reckless disregard for truth — Underlying drug offenses, 73 ALR6th 49.

Reverse-Franks claims, where police arguably omit facts from search or arrest warrant affidavit material to finding of probable cause with reckless disregard for the truth — Underlying sexual offenses, 74 ALR6th 69.

Construction and application by state courts of Supreme Court's ruling in Padilla v. Kentucky, 130 S. Ct. 1473, 176 L. Ed. 2d 284 (2010), that defense counsel has obligation to advise defendant that entering guilty plea could result in deportation, 74 ALR6th 373.

Construction and application of constitutional rule of Miranda — Supreme Court Cases, 17 ALR Fed. 2d 465.

Claims of ineffective assistance of counsel in death penalty proceedings — United States Supreme Court cases, 31 ALR Fed. 2d 1.

Construction and application of Sixth

Amendment right to counsel — Supreme Court cases, 33 ALR Fed. 2d 1.

Adequacy of defense counsel's representation of criminal client regarding entrapment defense — Federal cases, 42 ALR Fed. 2d 145.

Ineffective assistance of counsel in removal proceedings — Legal basis of entitlement to representation and requisites to establish prima facie case of ineffectiveness, 58 ALR Fed. 2d 363.

Ineffective assistance of counsel in removal proceedings — Particular omissions or failures, 60 ALR Fed. 2d 59.

Paragraph XV. Habeas corpus.

The writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless, in case of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XII.

Cross references. — Habeas corpus, U.S. Const., art. I, sec. IX, cl. 2 and T. 9, C. 14. Effect of technical defects in habeas proceedings, § 17-7-34. Proceedings in fugitive cases, § 17-13-30. Payment of fees from prisoner's inmate account upon filing of habeas corpus petition, § 42-12-7.1.

Law reviews. — For article, "Interstate Extradition and State Sovereignty," see 1 Mercer L. Rev. 147 (1950). For article, "Personal Rights, Property Rights and Due Process: A Comparison of Constitutional Protection in the Georgia Supreme Court and the United States Supreme Court," see 9 Mercer L. Rev. 253 (1958). For article discussing Georgia's habeas corpus statutes in light of federal courts' requirements of exhaustion of state remedies prior to entertaining a habeas petition, see 9 Ga. St. B.J. 29 (1972). For article discussing history of post-conviction habeas corpus relief in Georgia, see 12 Ga. L. Rev. 249 (1978). For article, "The Cautionary Tale of Alexander McLeod: Superior Orders and the American Writ of Habeas Corpus," see 41 Emory L.J. 515 (1992).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Remedy provided by state law. — The remedy by application for the writ of habeas corpus to the state courts is provided by state law. Porch v. Cagle, 199 F.2d 865 (5th Cir. 1952).

Motion to file out-of-time appeal. — Construing the defendant's request for an out-of-time appeal from a 1995 resentencing on various convictions as one seeking habeas corpus relief, and in light of the language in O.C.G.A. § 9-14-43, the trial court's order denying the defendant relief on jurisdictional grounds was reversed, and the matter was remanded for the trial court to consider the defendant's motion as one for a writ of habeas corpus. Anderson v. State, 284 Ga. App. 776, 645 S.E.2d 362 (2007).

son v. State, 284 Ga. App. 776, 645 S.E.2d 362 (2007).

Given that the defendant had no right to file a direct appeal from a guilty plea that was evident from the record, a motion for an out-of-time appeal, which alleged ineffective assistance of counsel, was properly denied, and counsel could not be deemed ineffective for failing to inform the defendant of the right to appeal; thus, the defendant's only remedy was by habeas corpus. Barlow v. State, 282 Ga. 232, 647 S.E.2d 46 (2007).

Prerequisite for relief from allegedly void sentence. — The trial court properly dismissed the defendant's motion to correct an allegedly void felony sentence, as the sentence was authorized by the law in existence at the time of the defendant's statutory rape convictions, and the defendant failed to seek withdrawal of the guilty pleas which led to the withdrawal as a prerequisite to challenge the sentence imposed; thus, any further relief had to be sought through a petition for habeas corpus. McClendon v. State, 287 Ga. App. 515, 651 S.E.2d 820 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 174 (Ga. 2008).

Pre-trial speedy trial demand could not be made via habeas petition. — Because the issue of whether a defendant's prosecution was barred pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 was a statutory defense which could be raised in the pending criminal action, and the claim was not relevant to the validity of any pre-trial detention, the habeas court properly dismissed the defendant's pre-trial habeas petition without an evidentiary hearing. Mungin v. St. Lawrence, 281 Ga. 671, 641 S.E.2d 541 (2007).

Failure to disclose Brady information. — Defendant did not have to show that defendant would have been acquitted if defendant had been able to obtain the Brady information; defendant simply had to show, and did show, that the state's evidentiary suppression undermined confidence in the outcome of the trial. Schofield v. Palmer, 279 Ga. 848, 621 S.E.2d 726 (2005).

Failure to disclose Brady information about confidential informant. — Convicted capital murder defendant's habeas corpus petition was granted, conviction was reversed, and a new trial was ordered because defendant prevailed on a Brady claim that the state failed to disclose that it had paid a confidential informant money for information that led to the defendant's conviction; the payment of money was exculpatory since it indicated that the informant could be impeached with a motive to lie. Schofield v. Palmer, 279 Ga. 848, 621 S.E.2d 726 (2005).

The procedural limitations of O.C.G.A. § 40-13-33(a) and (b) neither suspend the writ of habeas corpus, nor cause a court to dismiss an action for habeas without consideration of the equities presented. Rather, the statute provides that in a narrowly defined class of cases—those in which a petitioner who is not in custody seeks habeas relief from a misdemeanor traffic conviction—the petition for habeas corpus must be filed within 180 days of conviction. As such, it imposes a permissible procedural restriction on a limited group of cases. Earp v. Boylan, 260 Ga. 112, 390 S.E.2d 577 (1990).

Habeas court's order denying an inmate's verified petition, which asserted that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance, was reversed, as the allegations contained in the petition served as sufficient evidence to support the inmate's claim that counsel failed to file a notice of appeal after being instructed by the inmate to do so. Rolland v. Martin, 281 Ga. 190, 637 S.E.2d 23 (2006).

Habeas complaint properly dismissed. — The trial court properly dismissed an inmate's petition for a writ of habeas corpus for failing to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, based on a finding that such was prematurely filed in that no governor's warrant had been issued or served from the seeking state at the time the petition was filed and, the inmate had only been arrested for Georgia offenses; moreover, to the extent that the inmate might have been seeking to challenge an arrest without a warrant pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-13-34, insufficient facts were pled which supported such a claim. Powell v. Brown, 281 Ga. 609, 641 S.E.2d 519 (2007).

Appointment of counsel for habeas corpus petitioner not required. — Since habeas corpus is not a criminal proceeding, neither U.S. Const., amend. 6 nor the Georgia Constitution requires the appointment of counsel for a habeas corpus petitioner. Spencer v. Hopper, 243 Ga. 532, 255 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 178, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Defendant has no right to receive or spend state funds for appointment of experts or investigators in habeas corpus proceedings, even in death penalty cases. Spencer v. Hopper, 243 Ga. 532, 255 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 444 U.S. 885, 100 S. Ct. 178, 62 L. Ed. 2d 116 (1979).

Standard of evidence on mental retardation. — Trial court erred in ordering a jury trial on the limited issue of defendant's mental retardation in defendant's habeas corpus petition, pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XV, based on the preponderance of the evidence standard after defendant was convicted of murder and sentenced to death, as the appropriate standard if the issue were raised at trial would have been beyond a reasonable doubt; further, the habeas petition was based on a miscarriage of justice standard, as the issue was found to have been waived at trial. Head v. Hill, 277 Ga. 255, 587 S.E.2d 613 (2003).

Ineffective assistance of counsel claim. — Defendant's ineffective assistance of counsel claim was waived as defendant's original post-conviction counsel moved for a new trial, but did not raise an ineffective assistance of trial counsel claim; defendant's claim that defendant's original post-conviction counsel was deficient in failing to raise an ineffective assistance claim below had to be addressed in a habeas corpus proceeding. Mullins v. State, 267 Ga. App. 393, 599 S.E.2d 340 (2004).

In a warden's appeal, the grant of habeas corpus relief to an inmate based on ineffective assistance of counsel was upheld as the kidnapping charges in the two counties charged against the inmate were for the same offense and being advised by defense counsel to plead guilty in one county to avoid prosecution in the other was erroneous since double jeopardy would have barred any additional prosecution. Upton v. Johnson, 282 Ga. 600, 652 S.E.2d 516 (2007).

Habeas court did not err in granting the appellee's petition for writ of habeas corpus because there was no error in the habeas court's finding of an actual conflict of interest that adversely affected plea counsel's performance since the fact that the codefendant alone was paying counsel's fees created a strong incentive for counsel to prioritize the codefendant's interests in the matter over the appellee's interest, and counsel not only failed to pursue an alternative defense theory on behalf of the appellee, counsel failed even to recognize the possibility that one could exist; even though the appellee and the codefendant pursued a unified defense in that their accounts of the incident were consistent, the record reflected that the appellee was the less culpable of the two in the crime, as it appeared that the appellee's participation was limited to the role of a passive witness who happened to be driving when the codefendant initiated the brief, apparently unpremeditated interaction with the victim. State v. Mamedov, 288 Ga. 858, 708 S.E.2d 279 (2011).

Habeas court correctly concluded that ineffective assistance of trial counsel could not be used to excuse the procedural default of the petitioner's claim that the petitioner was mentally incompetent during trial because the information that trial counsel then had available to them, including the information that trial counsel unreasonably failed to obtain, would not have led constitutionally effective counsel to pursue a claim of incompetence to stand trial and would not be reasonably probable to have resulted in a finding that the petitioner was incompetent had such a plea been pursued; the petitioner failed to prove that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance regarding the petitioner's competence to stand trial because trial counsel withdrew the petitioner's plea of incompetence only after satisfying themselves that counsel was able to communicate effectively with the petitioner, and the trial court had an extensive opportunity to observe the petitioner in pre-trial and trial proceedings and to interact directly with the petitioner, and the court did not see sufficient indications of incompetence to pursue further evaluation. Perkins v. Hall, 288 Ga. 810, 708 S.E.2d 335 (2011).

Habeas court's order denying the petitioner's claim that the petitioner was entitled to a new sentencing trial was reversed and the petitioner's death sentence was vacated because trial counsel performed deficiently by failing to sufficiently develop mitigating evidence from non-experts, and there was a reasonable probability that the jury would have reached a different outcome in the sentencing phase of the petitioner's trial if the additional evidence habeas counsel obtained had been presented at trial; trial counsel failed to fully investigate whether the petitioner had suffered one or more brain injuries prior to the petitioner's crimes, and unduly limiting their interviews of the petitioner's family and friends to an unreasonably narrow range of persons, and there was additional evidence from non-experts concerning the petitioner's traumatic childhood and the petitioner's change in behavior and apparent mental distress following two head injuries. Perkins v. Hall, 288 Ga. 810, 708 S.E.2d 335 (2011).

Dismissal without hearing proper.

— Dismissal of an inmate's habeas petition without a hearing was proper as the petition failed to state any viable claim for pre-conviction habeas corpus relief since: (1) the inmate was not entitled to appointed counsel in the habeas corpus proceeding; (2) the habeas court was not required to make a determination of the inmate's mental state as it was an issue to be addressed in the context of the criminal prosecution; and (3) the inmate did not seek issuance of the writ on the ground that the inmate had tendered proper bail in connection with the inmate's then-pending prosecution on the criminal charge. Britt v. Conway, 281 Ga. 189, 637 S.E.2d 43 (2006).

Habeas court's transfer of ineffective assistance of counsel claim to trial court improper.

— Trial court's order denying defendant's extraordinary motion for new trial/habeas petition was a nullity and void under O.C.G.A. § 9-12-16, and the appellate court could not transfer defendant's case to the Georgia Supreme Court to consider the grant of a certificate of probable cause under O.C.G.A. § 9-14-52(b), even though the Georgia Supreme Court had exclusive jurisdiction over habeas cases, as the trial court was without subject matter jurisdiction to entertain defendant's habeas claim upon a transfer from a habeas court with instructions to determine whether trial counsel was ineffective; however, as defendant's habeas claims had not been addressed by a court of competent jurisdiction, the appellate court remanded the matter to the habeas court for resolution of defendant's habeas claims of ineffective assistance of counsel, with the final order subject to the appellate procedures outlined in O.C.G.A. § 9-14-52. Herrington v. State, 265 Ga. App. 454, 594 S.E.2d 682 (2004).

Opportunity to respond. — State's submission of a proposed order, which included a final adjudication of a jury array issue, was erroneously granted by the habeas court without affording an inmate an opportunity to respond, as it was fundamentally unfair for the court to decide that the inmate was not entitled to habeas relief without allowing a meaningful opportunity to respond. Edwards v. Lewis, 280 Ga. 441, 629 S.E.2d 248 (2006).

Procedural bars not found. — Defendant's habeas corpus petition based upon failure to obtain Brady information was not procedurally barred since defendant tried to obtain that information from the state but was not able to obtain it until discovery in conjunction with the habeas corpus hearings. Schofield v. Palmer, 279 Ga. 848, 621 S.E.2d 726 (2005).

An inmate's Brady claim within a petition for habeas corpus, based upon the state's failure to produce for the defense audiotapes containing exculpatory witness statements and the inmate's own statement to police during investigation of the crimes, was not procedurally defaulted because the inmate showed cause and prejudice to excuse the default. Walker v. Johnson, 282 Ga. 168, 646 S.E.2d 44 (2007).

Defendant's petition for habeas corpus was improperly denied on the basis of procedural default as the trial court improperly failed to appoint counsel to represent the defendant on appeal after a motion for new trial was denied as the trial court was aware of the defendant's desire to appeal and the defendant's indigency; the defendant was prejudiced as the defendant's notice of appeal filed pro se was untimely. Davis v. Frazier, 285 Ga. 16, 673 S.E.2d 215 (2009).

Motion to withdraw guilty plea could not be construed as habeas corpus petition as it was filed in the county in which the defendant was convicted, rather than against the warden in the county in which the defendant was incarcerated. Curry v. State, 274 Ga. App. 19, 616 S.E.2d 225 (2005).

Habeas relief properly granted. — Because the record failed to contain some affirmative evidence that either the trial court or trial counsel entered into a colloquy with an inmate and explained the inmate's Boykin rights, but merely provided the state's speculation that trial counsel might have possibly discussed the inmate's Boykin rights based on counsel's act of signing the plea agreement, that record failed to show that the inmate's plea was knowingly, voluntarily, and intelligently made and supported the grant of habeas relief. State v. Hemdani, 282 Ga. 511, 651 S.E.2d 734 (2007).

Order granting habeas relief was improper. — Order granting an inmate a new trial, finding that an inmate's appellate counsel was ineffective in pursuing the direct appeal, and that the issues the inmate raised, specifically related to an alleged impermissibly suggestive identification and to the jury verdict, were not procedurally barred or waived, was reversed, as the habeas court: (1) lost jurisdiction to amend its order once a notice of appeal was filed; and (2) applied the incorrect legal standards in finding the prejudice necessary to excuse procedural default, requiring remand for the court to determine whether any actual prejudice existed. Upton v. Jones, 280 Ga. 895, 635 S.E.2d 112 (2006).

Because the state's suppression of exculpatory statements in violation of Brady was more than sufficient to place the outcome of an inmate's trial in doubt, amounting to a denial of the inmate's Fourteenth Amendment due process rights, and the state's failure to produce the inmate's own statement provided the state with the opportunity to argue strenuously and virtually without contradiction that the inmate did not tell police about any alibi witness, but simply fabricated the defense prior to trial, the violation made the state's case much stronger than the full facts would have suggested, and based on such suppression, the trial did not produce a verdict worthy of confidence; hence, the inmate was properly granted habeas relief. Walker v. Johnson, 282 Ga. 168, 646 S.E.2d 44 (2007).

Denial of relief held proper. — Trial court properly rejected a pre-trial detainee's petition for habeas relief on grounds that the detainee's constitutional right to confront witnesses was abridged when a detective investigating the charges was permitted to give hearsay testimony at the detainee's preliminary hearing, as the detainee's constitutional right to confrontation applied only to trials, and not to a preliminary hearing, and that hearing involved a more limited scope of determining whether probable cause existed to hold an accused for trial. Gresham v. Edwards, 281 Ga. 881, 644 S.E.2d 122 (2007).

While the first of two notice of appeals from an order denying a detainee habeas relief did not invoke the appellate court's jurisdiction, as the denial of a motion for reconsideration of a final judgment was not subject to direct appeal, a second timely notice did not afford the detainee any relief as the failure to hold a preliminary commitment hearing following indictment was not erroneous. Ferguson v. Freeman, 282 Ga. 180, 646 S.E.2d 65 (2007).

A pre-trial petition for a writ of habeas corpus filed by a jail inmate was properly denied as both the trial court and the habeas court correctly held that the inmate was entitled to have bail set on only the charge set forth in the arrest warrant, and not the other six charges handed down in the grand jury's subsequently issued indictment. Bryant v. Vowell, 282 Ga. 437, 651 S.E.2d 77 (2007).

Georgia habeas court did not err by not examining a probable cause determination by a Washington magistrate because extradition documents were facially valid, a defendant had four felony charges pending in Washington, the defendant was the same person named in the extradition documents, and the defendant was a fugitive from Washington authorities; there was sufficient prima facie evidence to show that the defendant was a fugitive from justice. Smith v. State, 284 Ga. 356, 667 S.E.2d 95 (2008).

An appellant was not entitled to a writ of habeas corpus after serving four 12-month sentences of probation for four counts of public indecency under O.C.G.A. § 16-6-8 related to an incident in which the appellant began to masturbate while alongside a school bus as the appellant failed to show adverse collateral consequences as the appellant only made a bald claim that being sentenced on four counts of public indecency, as opposed to one, created more difficulty in finding employment; based on the plea agreement, the merger of the charges was expressly rejected by the appellant in order to effectuate the negotiated pleas to a misdemeanor. Turner v. State, 284 Ga. 494, 668 S.E.2d 692 (2008).

Habeas court did not err by relying on the waiver of rights form the petitioner signed because there was clear evidence beyond the mere execution of a waiver form that proved that the petitioner had been apprised of the Boykin rights; the guilty plea hearing transcript affirmatively reflected that the trial court entered into a colloquy with the petitioner to ensure that the petitioner read and fully understood the waiver of rights agreement, which the petitioner signed, and the signed “certificate of lawyer” at the conclusion of the waiver of rights form, together with the petitioner’s own acknowledgment at the guilty plea hearing, served to prove that trial counsel actually went over the waiver of rights form with the petitioner and the information that the form contained. Brown v. State, 290 Ga. 50, 718 S.E.2d 1 (2011).

Grant of new appeal improper. — Since the petitioner’s conviction had already been reviewed on direct appeal, the habeas corpus court erred in ordering a new appeal, as the proper remedy would have been to order a new trial; consequently, remand was ordered for the entry of an order granting a new trial. White v. Smith, 281 Ga. 271, 637 S.E.2d 686 (2006).

Challenge to enhanced sentence based on allegedly defective indictment. — Defendant could not challenge a sentence for family violence battery on appeal, claiming that the sentence was erroneously enhanced from a misdemeanor to a felony under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-23.1(f)(2) based on a previous conviction arising from a guilty plea to the same offense that was based on a defective indictment because since the defendant failed to challenge the indictment at the time the defendant pleaded guilty, the proper remedy was a motion in arrest of judgment under O.C.G.A. § 17-9-61(b) or habeas corpus. Grogan v. State, 297 Ga. App. 251, 676 S.E.2d 764 (2009).

Mental incompetence. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-60 et seq. is the exclusive procedure for raising a mentally incompetent challenge after sentencing, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-62, and creates a rebuttable presumption against re-litigation of a finding of competency instead of applying the stricter habeas procedural default standard, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-69; accordingly, this issue should not arise in habeas proceedings in Georgia. Perkins v. Hall, 288 Ga. 810, 708 S.E.2d 335 (2011).

Cited in Perry Dev. Corp. v. Colonial Contracting Co., 231 Ga. 666, 203 S.E.2d 475 (1974); Reed v. Hopper, 235 Ga. 298, 219 S.E.2d 409 (1975); Sutton v. Sanders, 283 Ga. 28, 656 S.E.2d 796 (2008); Taylor v. Williams, 528 F.3d 847 (11th Cir. 2008).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Execution might deprive defendant of constitutional right. — To execute a defendant upon conviction and sentence of one court while the defendant has pending an appeal in the Supreme Court of Georgia from a writ of habeas corpus from another trial court might deprive the defendant of the constitutional right to the writ of habeas corpus. 1960-61 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 354.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 39 Am. Jur. 2d, Habeas Corpus, § 1 et seq.

C.J.S. — 39 C.J.S., Habeas Corpus, § 1 et seq.

Paragraph XVI. Self-incrimination.

No person shall be compelled to give testimony tending in any manner to be self-incriminating.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII.

Cross references. — Due process of law and just compensation, U.S. Const., amend. 5, and § 38-2-411. Juvenile delinquency proceedings, § 15-11-31. Voluntary testimony of defendant, §§ 17-7-28 and 24-5-506. Admissibility in evidence of confessions and admissions, § 24-8-824 et seq. Freedom from self-incrimination in trial discovery, § 24-5-505. Certain situations in which incriminating testimony may be compelled, §§ 34-8-253, 46-2-55, and 46-2-93. Use of evidence of driver's refusal to submit to chemical test for alcohol or drugs in blood, § 40-6-392.

Law reviews. — For article, "Personal Rights, Property Rights and Due Process: A Comparison of Constitutional Protection in the Georgia Supreme Court and the United States Supreme Court," see 9 Mercer L. Rev. 253 (1958). For article discussing admissibility of illegally obtained evidence as violative of right not to incriminate self and advocating a state exclusionary rule, see 11 Ga. L. Rev. 105 (1976). For article surveying developments in Georgia juvenile court practice and procedure from mid-1980 through mid-1981, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 167 (1981). For article, "The Georgia Bill of Rights: Dead or Alive?," see 34 Emory L.J. 341 (1985). For article, "Court Ordered Surgery to Retrieve Evidence in Georgia in Light of the Supreme Court Decision in Winston v. Lee," see 37 Mercer L. Rev. 1005 (1986). For annual survey of criminal law, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 113 (2005). For annual survey of death penalty decisions, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 139 (2005).

For note, "Criminal Discovery: The Use of Notices to Produce," see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 331 (1978). For note on the Georgia right against self-incrimination, see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 1104 (1981).

For comment on Allbright v. State, 92 Ga. App. 251, 88 S.E.2d 468 (1955), holding that the admission of photographs in which defendants were ordered to pose was error as photographs were taken in violation of the self-incrimination clause of the Georgia Constitution, see 18 Ga. B.J. 344 (1956). For comment on Thomas v. State, 213 Ga. 237, 98 S.E.2d 548 (1957), holding that since defendant did not object to being placed in his car for the purposes of identification, it was not error to allow testimony concerning the incriminating act and no constitutional right was violated, see 20 Ga. B.J. 384 (1958). For comment discussing privilege against self-incrimination involved when accused is forced to speak so as to identify voice, in light of Aaron v. State, 122 So. 360 (Ala. 1960), see 24 Ga. B.J. 125 (1961). For comment criticizing Aldrich v. State, 220 Ga. 132, 137 S.E.2d 463 (1964), applying privilege against self-incrimination to driver who refuses to drive his truck onto weighing scales, see 16 Mercer L. Rev. 315 (1964). For comment on Smith v. State, 225 Ga. 328, 168 S.E.2d 587 (1969), see 6 Ga. St. B.J. 294 (1970). For comment, "The Tacit Admission Rule: Unreliable and Unconstitutional — A Doctrine Ripe for Abandonment," see 14 Ga. L. Rev. 27 (1979). For comment on Alderman v. State, 241 Ga. 496, 246 S.E.2d 642, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 991, 99 S. Ct. 593, 58 L. Ed. 2d 666 (1978), see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 349 (1979).

JUDICIAL DECISIONSANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
RIGHT AGAINST SELF-INCRIMINATION
CLAIM OF PRIVILEGE
WAIVER OF PRIVILEGE
IMMUNITY FROM PROSECUTION

EVIDENCE

1. IN GENERAL
2. ADMISSIBLE
3. INADMISSIBLE
4. VOLUNTARINESS

General Consideration

Former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 (see now O.C.G.A. § 35-3-160) constitutional. — Prisoners' claim that former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 (see now O.C.G.A. § 35-3-160) was unconstitutional because the statute forced them to submit self incriminatory evidence in violation of the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI, failed because DNA samples were not testimonial in nature. Padgett v. Ferrero, 294 F. Supp. 2d 1338 (N.D. Ga. 2003).

Defendant not subjected to custodial interrogation. — Defendant's claim that the statements defendant made to an officer as to defendant's intent to buy drugs and ownership of the jacket defendant was wearing, which contained a digital scale, should have been excluded as defendant had not been advised of defendant's Miranda rights was rejected. Miranda was inapplicable as defendant was not in custody since: (1) defendant was being questioned pursuant to a developing crime scene investigation; (2) a reasonable person in defendant's position would not have believed that the person was in custody as defendant's accomplice was the target of the investigation; and (3) defendant was allowed to leave the scene. Lewis v. State, 268 Ga. App. 547, 602 S.E.2d 278 (2004).

Miranda warnings required before custodial interrogation. — Questioning an inmate, whether by peace officers or prison officials, when the purpose of the interrogation relates to a suspected crime for which criminal prosecution might ensue, is a custodial hearing, and requires a Miranda warning in order to render any statements made therein admissible in a subsequent hearing. Grant v. State, 154 Ga. App. 758, 270 S.E.2d 42 (1980).

A disciplinary hearing while incarcerated in a state correctional institution is a custodial hearing which requires an appropriate warning of the right against self-incrimination before any statements made are admissible against the speaker in a subsequent criminal proceeding for those same criminal acts (in the absence of waiver). Grant v. State, 154 Ga. App. 758, 270 S.E.2d 42 (1980).

Time when Miranda warnings required. — Defendant who voluntarily accompanied police to a sheriff's office where the defendant was interviewed, who was not under arrest and not restrained, and who began telling the officers what the defendant had "heard" when it became apparent that the defendant knew too much about the crime only needed to have Miranda warnings at that point. Wilson v. State, 208 Ga. App. 812, 432 S.E.2d 211 (1993).

Factors for determining whether defendant in custody. — Trial court erred in suppressing a defendant's pre-Miranda statements based on the court's findings that police had probable cause to arrest and that defendant was the focus of the investigation as these considerations were irrelevant for determining whether the defendant was "in custody" for Miranda purposes. The proper inquiry was how a reasonable person in the defendant's position would have perceived the situation. State v. Folsom, 285 Ga. 11, 673 S.E.2d 210 (2009).

Inadequate invocation of self-incrimination privilege. — Because defendant's statement that defendant should not talk in the absence of "real talk" was insufficient to trigger the interrogating agent's duty to cease questioning, the trial court did not err in admitting defendant's later statements to the police. Barnes v. State, 287 Ga. 423, 696 S.E.2d 629 (2010).

Warnings not required at nonaccusatory, on-the-scene investigation. — Miranda warnings are not required when a person responds to an officer's initial inquiry at an on-the-scene investigation which has not become accusatory. Collins

v. State, 154 Ga. App. 651, 269 S.E.2d 509 (1980).

Interrogation must cease when individual unequivocally asks for attorney. United States v. Webb, 633 F.2d 1140 (5th Cir. 1981).

Privilege applies to attorney being investigated by disciplinary authorities of bar. — An attorney whose professional activities are under investigation by the disciplinary authorities of the State Bar of Georgia is entitled to the protection of the constitutional safeguards of the federal and state Constitutions against self-incrimination. Wilson v. State Bar, 225 Ga. 343, 168 S.E.2d 584, cert. denied, 396 U.S. 957, 90 S. Ct. 429, 24 L. Ed. 2d 421 (1969).

Judge cannot call defendant as witness at hearing. — Although a defendant has the right to testify at the defendant's Jackson-Denno hearing, the trial judge cannot call the defendant as a witness. Shepherd v. State, 236 Ga. 787, 225 S.E.2d 312 (1976).

Immunity promised when party compelled to answer incriminating questions. — This paragraph is not violated by an act compelling a party to answer incriminating questions, provided it guarantees immunity from a criminal proceeding. White v. Crane, 62 Ga. 399 (1879).

Comments on pre-trial silence. — Prosecutor's two improper comments on defendant's pre-trial silence were not reversible error as the trial court took corrective measures after the first comment and defendant failed to request a curative instruction or a mistrial after the second comment. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 69, 608 S.E.2d 602, cert. denied, 546 U.S. 987, 126 S. Ct. 571, 163 L. Ed. 2d 478 (2005).

In a prosecution for shoplifting, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion for a mistrial after the state improperly commented on the right to remain silent, as the error was harmless, given the overwhelming evidence of guilt, eyewitness testimony, and videotaped evidence of the crime, and the prosecutor's compliance with an instruction to not make any further comment on defendant's silence. Ekanger v. State, 279 Ga. App. 421, 631 S.E.2d 459 (2006).

During a defendant's trial for aggravated child molestation and related charges, even if a police officer was properly allowed to testify about the defendant's refusal to discuss or deny the allegations against the defendant, it was error to permit questioning of the defendant on the subject; the error was not harmless and the defendant's convictions required reversal because the prosecution deliberately and repeatedly placed the evidence before the jury, the defendant denied having sexual relations with the victim, numerous witnesses testified for the defense, and the victim gave conflicting testimony. Maynard v. State, 282 Ga. App. 598, 639 S.E.2d 389 (2006).

In a case in which ineffective assistance of counsel was claimed due to counsel's failure to object to a comment in the prosecutor's closing argument that the defendant could have given the defendant's version of the facts of a domestic dispute to the police, the appellate court improperly relied on exclusions to comments on a defendant's silence in Morrison v. State, 554 S.E.2d 190 (2001); the court overruled Morrison based on the bright-line rule in Mallory v. State, 409 S.E.2d 839 (1991), that, with reference to former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-36 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-801), that comment upon a defendant's silence or failure to come forward was far more prejudicial than probative. Reynolds v. State, 285 Ga. 70, 673 S.E.2d 854 (2009).

No prejudice from improper comment on silence. — Denial of a motion for a mistrial was proper given the trial court's prompt, detailed curative instruction to the jury; it was unlikely that the defendant was prejudiced by the prosecutor's improper comment on defendant's silence. Ford v. State, 274 Ga. App. 695, 617 S.E.2d 262 (2005).

Denial of a motion for a mistrial was proper as there was only one reference to the defendant's election not to make a statement to the police, the prosecutor did not solicit the reference, and the prosecutor neither mentioned the defendant's silence nor sought to draw any prejudicial inferences from it; there was no focus on the defendant's silence sufficient to constitute prejudicial error. Haggins v. State, 277 Ga. App. 742, 627 S.E.2d 448 (2006).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

In a defendant's trial for armed robbery and related offenses, a police officer's comment on the defendant's refusal to make a statement was harmless error because no prejudice resulted; the officer's inadvertent remark was stopped mid-sentence, the trial court instructed the jury to completely disregard the remark, and the state made no subsequent references to the defendant's silence and drew no prejudicial inferences from it. Wright v. State, 282 Ga. App. 649, 639 S.E.2d 581 (2006).

Accused may not be placed in incriminating circumstances for identification. — For the purposes of identification, the accused may not be taken and placed within the framework of the scene of the crime, there for identification within the coordinating, incriminating circumstances of the scene. Meriwether v. State, 63 Ga. App. 667, 11 S.E.2d 816 (1940).

Forced participation in lineup after illegal arrest does not contravene rights. Meriwether v. State, 63 Ga. App. 667, 11 S.E.2d 816 (1940).

No violation of rights by confession of defendant when not under arrest or in custody. — When the defendant was not under arrest or in custody at the time of the confession and no police or other law enforcement personnel were present, the defendant's constitutional rights could not have been violated. Gaston v. State, 153 Ga. App. 538, 265 S.E.2d 866 (1980).

Because of the absence or dissipation of coercion once a suspect is released from custody, subsequent confessions obtained from even police initiated interrogations are admissible without violating the suspect's Fifth Amendment rights if there has been an intervening break in custody. Wilson v. State, 264 Ga. 287, 444 S.E.2d 306, cert. denied, 513 U.S. 988, 115 S. Ct. 486, 130 L. Ed. 2d 398 (1994).

Invoking right to refuse independent psychiatric evaluation bars claim of insanity. — Defendant may invoke the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination, refuse to submit to an examination by an independent expert, and thereby forego the right to present expert testimony on the issue of insanity. Strickland v. State, 257 Ga. 230, 357 S.E.2d 85 (1987).

Finding of no custodial interrogation not clearly erroneous. — Trial court's finding that defendant was not restrained to the degree associated with formal arrest was not clearly erroneous because: (1) defendant met with two plain clothes officers and defendant's high school principal in the principal's office; (2) defendant appeared to understand the officers and personally identified defendant as one of the people photographed using stolen credit cards after defendant was shown the photographs; (3) the officers' manner was conversational and defendant did not appear frightened; (4) defendant was not in handcuffs, defendant had not been told that defendant was not free to go or under arrest, and defendant was never threatened or promised anything; and (5) defendant never asked to terminate the meeting, defendant never objected to the questioning, and defendant agreed to accompany the officers to the police department for further questioning. Dillard v. State, 272 Ga. App. 523, 612 S.E.2d 804 (2005).

Trial court did not err when the court ruled that the defendant was not in custody when the defendant made statements during the execution of a search warrant of the defendant's home, and thus Miranda warnings were not required when an officer and an investigator testified that the defendant was not under formal arrest during the execution of the search warrant, the defendant moved about the defendant's home without restriction, made and received telephone calls without restraint, and was free to leave the property. Quedens v. State, 280 Ga. 355, 629 S.E.2d 197 (2006).

Defendant was not in custody for purposes of Miranda because the defendant agreed to accompany officers to the police station, did not appear to be under the influence of alcohol or drugs, was told the defendant was free to leave, but agreed to remain at the station, was made comfortable, and was not denied access to a telephone. Bell v. State, 280 Ga. 562, 629 S.E.2d 213 (2006).

Requiring defense counsel to produce copies of videotape not an act of incrimination. — Trial court's reproduction of missing videotape exhibits for appeal was proper because, inter alia, contrary to the defendant's claim, requiring defense counsel to turn over counsel's copy of the tapes was not an act of incrimination against the defendant, but rather was an effort to allow the defendant to complete the record in the defendant's own appeal. Hughes v. State, 298 Ga. App. 113, 679 S.E.2d 121 (2009).

Scar, voluntarily exhibited, can be examined by doctor on cross-examination. Gordon v. State, 68 Ga. 814 (1882).

Scope of cross-examination is limited to matters opened by direct examination. Bishop v. Bishop, 157 Ga. 408, 121 S.E. 305 (1924).

When a defendant voluntarily testifies to matters on direct examination, a defendant can be cross-examined, and required to give a physical demonstration, concerning the matters to which the defendant testified to on direct examination. Scott v. State, 270 Ga. 93, 507 S.E.2d 728 (1998).

Cited in Sheppard v. State, 68 Ga. App. 127, 22 S.E.2d 347 (1942); Emmett v. State, 195 Ga. 517, 25 S.E.2d 9 (1943); Bryant v. State, 197 Ga. 641, 30 S.E.2d 259 (1944); Shepherd v. State, 203 Ga. 635, 47 S.E.2d 860 (1948); McKay v. Balkcom, 203 Ga. 790, 48 S.E.2d 453 (1948); Notis v. State, 84 Ga. App. 199, 65 S.E.2d 622 (1951); Allbright v. State, 92 Ga. App. 251, 88 S.E.2d 468 (1955); Walther v. Walther, 219 Ga. 644, 135 S.E.2d 401 (1964); Bass v. Bass, 222 Ga. 378, 149 S.E.2d 818 (1966); Hackney v. State, 223 Ga. 802, 158 S.E.2d 239 (1967); Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461 (1967); Sark v. State, 118 Ga. App. 529, 164 S.E.2d 266 (1968); Hunsinger v. State, 225 Ga. 426, 169 S.E.2d 286 (1969); Townsend v. Northcutt, 121 Ga. App. 230, 173 S.E.2d 470 (1970); Mallin v. Mallin, 226 Ga. 628, 176 S.E.2d 709 (1970); Fryer v. Stynchcombe, 228 Ga. 576, 186 S.E.2d 885 (1972); Master v. Savannah Sur. Assocs., 148 Ga. App. 678, 252 S.E.2d 186 (1979); Thompson v. State, 150 Ga. App. 567, 258 S.E.2d 180 (1979); Henderson v. State, 153 Ga. App. 801, 266 S.E.2d 522 (1980); Baker v. State, 162 Ga. App. 606, 292 S.E.2d 451 (1982); State v. Lampl, 296

Ga. 892, 770 S.E.2d 629 (2015).

Right Against Self-Incrimination

Protection from being compelled to furnish evidence against self. — A defendant cannot be compelled to personally incriminate oneself by acts or words. Day v. State, 63 Ga. 667 (1879).

The constitutional guaranty protects one from being compelled to furnish evidence against oneself, either in the form of oral confessions or incriminating admissions of an involuntary character, or of doing an act against one's will which is incriminating in its nature. Smith v. State, 17 Ga. App. 693, 88 S.E. 42 (1916); Aldrich v. State, 220 Ga. 132, 137 S.E.2d 463 (1964); Walter v. State, 131 Ga. App. 667, 206 S.E.2d 662, appeal dismissed, 233 Ga. 10, 209 S.E.2d 605 (1974).

The essential element in the provision of the bill of rights against self-incrimination is that no one shall be compelled to give evidence tending to incriminate that person personally. State v. J.T., 155 Ga. App. 812, 273 S.E.2d 214 (1980).

Applicability of privilege. — The constitutional privileges against self-incrimination are applicable to post-arrest, pretrial police interrogation as well as to the trial itself, i.e., the accused cannot be compelled to testify at trial. Howard v. State, 237 Ga. 471, 228 S.E.2d 860 (1976).

Defendant in a criminal case, an attorney who was the sole shareholder of a professional corporation, was properly held in civil contempt for not producing a noncompetition agreement between the corporation and a former employee. The agreement was a corporate document, and the defendant had been subpoenaed to produce the document as a corporate agent; thus, the defendant could not assert the defendant's personal right against self-incrimination and the small size of the corporation was immaterial. Thompson v. State, 294 Ga. App. 363, 670 S.E.2d 152 (2008).

Criminal Procedure Discovery Act. — The requirement of O.C.G.A. § 17-16-4, part of the Criminal Procedure Discovery Act, that a defendant disclose any mitigating evidence the defendant intended to introduce in the presentence hearing did not violate the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination; statements of witnesses a defendant intends to call to testify are not personal to the defendant, and although the disclosure of the list of witnesses a defendant intends to call is personal to the defendant, a trial court can exercise its discretion to specify the time, place, and manner of making the discovery and to enter such orders as seem just under the circumstances when self-incrimination concerns arise, such as a protective order or a continuance pending the completion of the guilt/innocence phase of the trial. Muhammad v. State, 282 Ga. 247, 647 S.E.2d 560 (2007).

Right AgainstSelf-Incrimination (Cont'd)

Implied consent warnings administered to motorists suspected of driving under the influence need not inform them of their privilege against self-incrimination. Heller v. State, 234 Ga. App. 630, 507 S.E.2d 518 (1998).

Statements voluntary. — Statements the defendant made at the scene and the station during an interview were admissible because the defendant received and waived Miranda warnings before making the incriminating statements, and the defendant's interrogators testified that the interrogators made no threats or promises and did not coerce the defendant in any way. Simmons v. State, 291 Ga. 664, 732 S.E.2d 65 (2012).

Extent of protection afforded by provision. — The protection is not limited to cases where the question or answer has a direct tendency to incriminate the defendant, or to expose the defendant to a penalty or forfeiture, but the defendant is protected from answering any question which may form a link in the chain by which such cases are to be established. Simpson v. Simpson, 233 Ga. 17, 209 S.E.2d 611 (1974).

Unlawful to compel person under suspicion to produce evidence upon which the person could be convicted. Walter v. State, 131 Ga. App. 667, 206 S.E.2d 662, appeal dismissed, 233 Ga. 10, 209 S.E.2d 605 (1974).

Prosecutor's reference to defendant's right to have psychiatrist not testify was not a violation of defendant's right against self-incrimination. Willett v. State, 223 Ga. App. 866, 479 S.E.2d 132 (1996).

Testimony that was an improper comment on a defendant's silence or failure to come forward was an impropriety but did not automatically require reversal. Bruce v. State, 268 Ga. App. 677, 603 S.E.2d 33 (2004).

Because an agent's improper reference during testimony to the defendant's invocation of the right to remain silent was made gratuitously and not in response to a specific question, because the state did not highlight the statement for the jury or suggest any inference that could be drawn from the defendant's invocation, and, because after several more questions, the trial court removed the jury from the courtroom, but no further reference was made to the improper statement, it was unlikely that the statement had an impact on the verdict; the evidence was strong, when juxtaposed with the likely impact of the statement, and, thus, the improper statement was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Kania v. State, 280 Ga. App. 356, 634 S.E.2d 146 (2006).

An officer's vague, nonresponsive comment, in response to defense counsel's interrogation, that the defendant had invoked the defendant's right to remain silent did not merit reversal as defense counsel had quickly moved past the comment and the state had not drawn attention to the comment or encouraged the jury to infer guilt from the defendant's silence. Lenon v. State, 290 Ga. App. 626, 660 S.E.2d 16 (2008).

Conviction for driving under the influence was affirmed because the prosecutor did not manifestly intend to comment on the defendant's failure to testify and the nature of the statement by the prosecutor was not such that the jury would naturally and necessarily have taken the statement to be such a comment. Moreover, even assuming that the statement was an improper comment on the defendant's failure to testify, considering that the comment did not appear intentionally designed to or likely to urge any negative inference, the context in which the comment was made, and the strength of the evidence against the defendant, any error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Schenck v. State, 307 Ga. App. 890, 706 S.E.2d 218 (2011).

Provision construed to limit state from forcing individual to present “evidence, oral or real.” — While the language of the Fifth Amendment in the United States Constitution has long been construed to be limited to “testimony,” the language of this paragraph has been construed to limit the state from forcing the individual to present “evidence, oral or real.” Johnson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 496, 274 S.E.2d 837 (1980).

An accused cannot be compelled to produce evidence, oral or real, regardless of whether or not it is “testimonial.” Johnson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 496, 274 S.E.2d 837 (1980).

Impermissible to compel accused to perform act resulting in production of incriminating evidence. — Although evidence may be compulsorily adduced from an accused, it is constitutionally impermissible to compel an accused to perform an act which results in the production of incriminating evidence. The distinction is between forcing an accused to do an act against the accused’s will and requiring an accused to submit to an act; the latter “takes evidence from the defendant” and is constitutionally acceptable, the former compels the defendant, in essence, to give evidence which violates an individual’s right against self incrimination. State v. Armstead, 152 Ga. App. 56, 262 S.E.2d 233 (1979).

Impermissible to compel handwriting exemplar. — To compel a handwriting exemplar is to compel the defendant to do an act, not to submit to an act. State v. Armstead, 152 Ga. App. 56, 262 S.E.2d 233 (1979).

Requiring suspect to give voice exemplar for identification purposes does not violate privilege against self-incrimination. Davis v. State, 158 Ga. App. 549, 281 S.E.2d 305 (1981).

Rights violated when defendant forced to produce evidence against the defendant’s will. — When a police officer compels a defendant to produce, against the will of the defendant, illegal lottery tickets by threat and by placing the officer’s hand on a pistol, the method of forcing the defendant to produce this evidence violates the defendant’s constitutional rights, in that it compels the defendant to produce evidence to incriminate oneself. Grant v. State, 85 Ga. App. 610, 69 S.E.2d 889 (1952).

Against public policy to call accused before grand jury. — The grand jury has no lawful right to call the accused before it while considering the bill of indictment against the accused, and swear or question the accused regarding such charge. It is against the public policy of this state. Jenkins v. State, 65 Ga. App. 16, 14 S.E.2d 594 (1941).

Self-incrimination would result from use of notice to produce. — When the state, through resort to the notice to produce, in effect seeks to re seize property and red vest the defendant of custody and possession by retaining it and using it as evidence in a criminal proceeding, the state may not use a notice to produce to accomplish this end. Unconstitutional self-incrimination would be the result of compliance with the state’s notice. Johnson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 496, 274 S.E.2d 837 (1980).

When use of notice to produce prohibited. — The state may not, by using a notice to produce pursuant to former Code 1933, §§ 38-801 and 38-802 and Ga. L. 1966, p. 502, § 2 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 24-10-26 and 24-10-29), attempt to secure indirectly the same disposition of the property which would have obtained in accordance with former Code 1933, § 79A-828 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49) had the state’s libel for condemnation been successful. Johnson v. State, 156 Ga. App. 496, 274 S.E.2d 837 (1980).

No violation of rights by removal of bullet. — Constitutional rights of defendant were not violated by the state in requiring the removal of a bullet from the defendant’s body. Creamer v. State, 229 Ga. 511, 192 S.E.2d 350 (1972), cert. dismissed, 410 U.S. 975, 93 S. Ct. 1454, 35 L. Ed. 2d 709 (1973).

“Testimony” means all types of evidence. Aldrich v. State, 220 Ga. 132, 137 S.E.2d 463 (1964), commented on in 16 Mercer L. Rev. 315 (1964).

Codefendant cannot be compelled to testify. — The defendant is not unfairly deprived of favorable testimony when the trial court, at the state's suggestion, advises an unrepresented codefendant of the co-defendant's constitutional rights as a witness and, after the trial court advises the co-defendant of the co-defendant's rights and appoints counsel for the co-defendant, the co-defendant chooses not to testify. Neither the trial court, the state, nor a codefendant can compel another codefendant to testify in favor of a calling codefendant, for to do so violates constitutional protections. In re J.S.S., 168 Ga. App. 340, 308 S.E.2d 855 (1983).

Right AgainstSelf-Incrimination (Cont'd)

No need to advise defendant of rights when defendant did not testify.

— Since defendant did not testify and was not cross-examined, there was no harm in the trial court's failure to advise the defendant of the defendant's right not to be compelled to testify under oath. Coonce v. State, 171 Ga. App. 20, 318 S.E.2d 763 (1984).

Debtor bears burden to establish privilege to fieri facias interrogatories.

— When interrogatories in fieri facias do not constitute or evidence extensive questioning as to the judgment debtor's financial affairs which would tend, as a matter of law, to incriminate the debtor, work a forfeiture of the debtor's estate, or bring disgrace or infamy upon the debtor or the debtor's family, but are clearly within the ambit of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-69, the burden is on the debtor to state the general reason for the debtor's refusal to answer and to specifically establish that a real danger of incrimination exists with respect to each question. Petty v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 169 Ga. App. 418, 312 S.E.2d 874 (1984).

No blanket privilege in civil case.

— There was no blanket right to refuse to answer questions in civil proceedings based on the self-incrimination privilege and when there was no transcript of the hearing at which the trial court made the court's finding that the privilege was not implicated, the appellate court presumed that evidence supported the trial court's finding and order compelling discovery;

further, the trial court's order compelling an employee and the husband to produce financial documents such as checks, account statements, and tax returns in a civil proceeding did not violate the self-incrimination privilege. Dempsey v. Kaminski Jewelry, Inc., 278 Ga. App. 814, 630 S.E.2d 77 (2006).

Driver could not assert right against self-incrimination to suppress results of field sobriety test since the driver was not a person "charged in a criminal proceeding" at the time the test was given, the driver was not in police custody at that time, and no force or threat of penalty was used against the driver. Montgomery v. State, 174 Ga. App. 95, 329 S.E.2d 166 (1985).

In a prosecution for driving under the influence, evidence of a field sobriety test should not have been excluded when the defendant was not in custody at the time the test was administered. State v. Leviner, 213 Ga. App. 99, 443 S.E.2d 688 (1994).

There was no violation of the defendant's right against self-incrimination because the defendant was not in custody at the time field sobriety tests were administered. State v. Sumlin, 224 Ga. App. 205, 480 S.E.2d 260 (1997).

Defendant was not in custody nor compelled by force or threats to perform roadside sobriety tests in violation of the defendant's rights against self-incrimination. Sisson v. State, 232 Ga. App. 61, 499 S.E.2d 422 (1998).

No violation of right by requiring defendant to strip to waist and be photographed.

— Requiring a defendant to strip to the defendant's waist and be photographed neither compelled the defendant to be a witness nor compelled the defendant to give testimony tending in any manner to be self-incriminating. Ingram v. State, 253 Ga. 622, 323 S.E.2d 801 (1984), cert. denied, 473 U.S. 911, 105 S. Ct. 3538, 87 L. Ed. 2d 661 (1985).

Requiring suspect to verbalize specified words for identification purposes, whether or not the words used are the same as those allegedly used during the commission of the offense, does not violate an accused's privilege against self-incrimination accorded the accused by the United States Constitution and the state's statutes and Constitution. Clark v. State, 166 Ga. App. 366, 304 S.E.2d 494 (1983).

Defendant does not have right to refuse to speak at a post-indictment lineup. Jenkins v. State, 167 Ga. App. 840, 308 S.E.2d 14 (1983).

No violation by taking of blood sample. — The compelled taking of a blood sample does not violate a defendant's constitutional privilege against self-incrimination. Welch v. State, 254 Ga. 603, 331 S.E.2d 573 (1985).

No violation by taking of blood and urine samples. — Admitting the results of blood and urine analysis into evidence in the defendant's felony murder trial did not violate U.S. Const., amend. V, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI, or former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-5-506) because the removal of a substance from the body through a minor intrusion did not cause the defendant to be a witness against oneself within the meaning of the Fifth Amendment and similar provisions of Georgia law. Bowling v. State, 289 Ga. 881, 717 S.E.2d 190 (2011).

Obtaining of blood, hair, and saliva samples from an accused represent "minor intrusions" which do not cause the person to be a witness against themselves within the meaning of the constitution. Calloway v. State, 199 Ga. App. 272, 404 S.E.2d 811 (1991).

Use of body excrement. — The use of a substance naturally excreted by the human body does not violate a defendant's right against self-incrimination under the Georgia Constitution. Green v. State, 260 Ga. 625, 398 S.E.2d 360 (1990), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 935, 111 S. Ct. 2059, 114 L. Ed. 2d 464 (1991); State v. Leviner, 213 Ga. App. 99, 443 S.E.2d 688 (1994).

The use of a substance naturally excreted by the human body does not violate a DUI suspect's constitutional rights, and therefore there is no requirement that one be informed of one's right against self-incrimination. Nawrocki v. State, 235 Ga. App. 416, 510 S.E.2d 301 (1998).

No violation of right by admission of blood test refusal. — The admission of a refusal to submit to blood-alcohol chemical test does not violate the constitutional right against self-incrimination. Wessels v. State, 169 Ga. App. 246, 312 S.E.2d 361 (1983).

Taking of dental impressions, dental photographs, and a dental examination of the accused did not violate the provision against incrimination because there was no surgical foray into the body of the accused which would require the additional precaution of an evidentiary hearing before a superior court to assure safe medical procedures, and to extend the Constitution so far would prohibit reasonable police practices, such as the taking of fingerprints, to which the taking of dental impressions is analogous. State v. Thornton, 253 Ga. 524, 322 S.E.2d 711 (1984).

The fact-finder's consideration of the accused's demeanor in reaction to the testimony of others, even when the accused does not take the stand, does not violate the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI. In re M.E.H., 180 Ga. App. 591, 349 S.E.2d 814 (1986).

Prosecutor's statement that only two people knew what went on in the room where an assault occurred, the victim and defendant, did not violate defendant's rights against self-incrimination. Neal v. State, 198 Ga. App. 518, 402 S.E.2d 114 (1991).

Prosecutor's comment about the defense's failure to rebut state's evidence was not an improper comment on the defendant's failure to testify. Lenon v. State, 290 Ga. App. 626, 660 S.E.2d 16 (2008).

Incrimination prerequisite determination not satisfied. — Attorney who delivered an anonymous campaign contribution on behalf of a client in violation of O.C.G.A. § 21-5-30(e) was improperly held in contempt for failing to disclose the client's name to the State Ethics Commission; the attorney invoked the self-incrimination privilege, and the trial court found the attorney in contempt without first determining whether the commission's proposed questions might have been incriminating. Begner v. State Ethics Comm'n, 250 Ga. App. 327, 552 S.E.2d 431 (2001).

Right AgainstSelf-Incrimination (Cont'd)

Right to remain silent. — Defendant invoked the right to remain silent and the state police investigator's questions that got defendant to talk about the shooting violated defendant's Fifth Amendment rights because they were not routine booking questions exempt under Miranda's right to remain silent provision; thus, the inculpatory statements made by defendant had to be suppressed. State v. Nash, 279 Ga. 646, 619 S.E.2d 684 (2005).

Defendant's suppression motion was properly denied as to the statements the defendant gave the police before the defendant was given the defendant's Miranda warnings as, although the defendant was in custody as the defendant was approached at gunpoint, handcuffed, and placed on the ground while guarded by three police officers even before the defendant was advised that the defendant was under arrest, the defendant was not subjected to interrogation as the officers asked the defendant's father, not the defendant, about the missing truck, and their questions to the father were not reasonably likely to elicit any response from the defendant. Waters v. State, 281 Ga. 119, 636 S.E.2d 538 (2006).

Improper comment on defendant's silence required new trial. — Because the trial court erroneously commented on the defendant's refusal to make a post-arrest statement to police, and the error, absent a curative instruction, was not harmless or the result of inadvertence, the defendant's robbery by sudden snatching conviction was reversed; thus, the trial court erred in denying the defendant a new trial on those grounds. Wright v. State, 287 Ga. App. 593, 651 S.E.2d 852 (2007).

Not in custody. — Defendant's motion to suppress two statements the defendant made to the police were properly denied as the defendant was not in custody when the defendant made the statements; the defendant's motion to suppress a third statement was properly denied as the defendant was read the defendant's Miranda rights before the defendant made the statement. Durham v. State, 281 Ga. 208, 636 S.E.2d 513 (2006).

As the defendants voluntarily went to the police station, were not under formal arrest at any time during their interviews, and were told before the interview that the defendants were free to leave, a reasonable person in the defendants' situation would not have felt so restrained as to equate to a formal arrest. Therefore, the failure to give the defendants Miranda warnings did not require suppression of the defendants' statements. Carter v. State, 285 Ga. 394, 677 S.E.2d 71 (2009).

Defendant driven to hospital by police not in custody and Miranda not required. — Since the defendant was not under formal arrest or any restraint when an officer questioned the defendant in the defendant's hotel room and drove the defendant to a hospital, Miranda warnings were not required. That the defendant was the focus of a murder investigation did not require the officer to give Miranda warnings; the relevant inquiry was whether a reasonable person in the defendant's situation would have perceived that the person was in custody. Timmreck v. State, 285 Ga. 39, 673 S.E.2d 198 (2009).

Jury instructions. — When during deliberations a juror sent a note asking for an answer from defendant about why defendant was on the burglary victim's property on the morning of the burglary, the failure to recharge the jury that defendant was not required to testify and that the jury should not make any adverse inferences against the defendant for not testifying did not violate defendant's right against self-incrimination since neither the jury nor defendant requested such a recharge. Lovelace v. State, 262 Ga. App. 690, 586 S.E.2d 386 (2003).

No violation in asking defendant to stand at juror's request. — Trial court did not err by complying with a juror's request that the defendant briefly stand before the jury before the jury watched a video of a drug transaction a second time. Butler v. State, 277 Ga. App. 57, 625 S.E.2d 458 (2005).

Claim of Privilege

Questioning must come when witness invokes privilege. — When a witness testifies under oath that the witness's answer to any question asked of the witness would incriminate the witness and comes within the constitutional immunities guaranteed to the witness, the court can demand no further testimony of the fact. Interstate Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Wilmont, 123 Ga. App. 337, 180 S.E.2d 913 (1971).

Trial court did not engage in the required analysis for a witness asserting a Fifth Amendment privilege, but merely declared that answering the questions concerning knowledge of the court's order regarding removing a child from a father's home would not incriminate the witness; at a minimum, such knowledge would establish a link in the chain of evidence needed to prove the witness was in contempt of that order and the trial court's finding of contempt based on the witness's refusal to answer the question was improper. In re Tidwell, 279 Ga. App. 734, 632 S.E.2d 690 (2006).

When co-defendants claimed privilege, motion for continuance properly denied. — At the time of the defendant's trial, defendant's potential witnesses' appeals were pending and their counsel informed the defendant that, if called as witnesses, they would assert their privilege against self-incrimination; therefore, the defendant could not satisfy the requirement of showing that the witnesses would be available at the next term of court and, thus, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the defendant's motion for a continuance under O.C.G.A. § 17-8-25. Pope v. State, 266 Ga. App. 658, 598 S.E.2d 48 (2004).

Party's invocation of privilege must be honored. — A questioned party's invocation of the party's constitutional privilege to be free from compulsion to testify against the party must be honored. Eason v. Berger & Co., 153 Ga. App. 126, 264 S.E.2d 579 (1980).

Privilege is personal and cannot be claimed for benefit of another. — Joint principals to a crime as accomplices are competent witnesses against each other, and while the one sought to be used as a witness has the right to claim the protection afforded by this paragraph, this constitutional guaranty is a personal privilege belonging to the witness and cannot be claimed for the witness for the benefit of another party. Dye v. State, 77 Ga. App. 517, 48 S.E.2d 742 (1948).

Witness must but accused need not claim privilege when before grand jury. — If the person testifying before a general grand jury is a mere witness, the person must claim the privilege on the ground that the person's answers will incriminate; whereas, if the person be in fact the party proceeded against, the person cannot be subpoenaed and sworn, even though the person claims no privilege. Jenkins v. State, 65 Ga. App. 16, 14 S.E.2d 594 (1941).

No presumption of guilt because accused does not deny charges. — It has long been Georgia law that an accused who is taken into custody cannot be presumed to acknowledge guilt just because the accused does not deny the charges. Emmett v. State, 243 Ga. 550, 255 S.E.2d 23 (1979).

Prosecution may not use claim of privilege against defendant. — Evidence as to silence on the part of the defendant at the time of the defendant's arrest should be excluded when objected to, for the defendant is entitled to remain silent, and the prosecution may not use against the defendant the fact that the defendant stood or claimed the defendant's privilege. Kitchens v. State, 150 Ga. App. 707, 258 S.E.2d 544 (1979).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying defendant's motion for a mistrial due to a fire investigator's comments on defendant's exercise of defendant's right to remain silent as the motion was initially made before any such testimony was given, and, while in the second instance the investigator did improperly comment on the exercise of defendant's right, the trial court properly gave the jurors a curative instruction and specifically asked them whether they could disregard the testimony. George v. State, 263 Ga. App. 541, 588 S.E.2d 312 (2003).

Evidence of defendant's post-arrest silence admitted in error harmless. — In a prosecution for battery and aggravated assault, defense counsel's failure to object to a police officer's single gratuitous reference to the defendant's post-arrest silence was not reversible error because, in view of the strong evidence of the de-defendant's guilt, this error was unlikely to have affected the outcome of the trial. Crawford v. State, 294 Ga. App. 711, 670 S.E.2d 185 (2008).

Claim of Privilege (Cont'd)

Waiver of Privilege

Privilege against self incrimination can be waived in praesenti. Feig v. Feig, 246 Ga. 763, 272 S.E.2d 723 (1980).

Witness may voluntarily answer questions. — A witness, fully apprised of the witness's rights, under this paragraph, may voluntarily answer questions tending to degrade or incriminate the witness. Gravett v. State, 74 Ga. 191 (1884); Wilburn v. State, 141 Ga. 510, 81 S.E. 444 (1914).

Defendant initiated discussions. — Statements made while the defendant was in jail were admissible because it was clear that the defendant initiated the conversation in question, and persisted in talking to the investigator after the investigator reminded defendant that the investigator could not discuss the case in the absence of defense counsel. Quedens v. State, 280 Ga. 355, 629 S.E.2d 197 (2006).

Harmless error in admitting voluntary statement. — Even if it was error to admit defendant's pre-Miranda custodial statement that was both voluntary and not incriminating, even though it appeared to have been made in response to a police officer's statement which was a psychological ploy designed to elicit an incriminating response, the error was harmless. Brown v. State, 273 Ga. App. 577, 615 S.E.2d 628 (2005).

Complete waiver of privilege when defendant testifies voluntarily. — A defendant in a criminal case who voluntarily testifies in the defendant's own behalf waives completely the defendant's privilege under the Fifth Amendment and this paragraph. Furthermore, when a defendant voluntarily takes the stand in the defendant's own behalf and testifies as to the defendant's guilt or innocence as to a particular offense, the defendant's waiver is not partial; having once cast aside the cloak of immunity, the defendant may not resume it at will, whenever cross-examination may be inconvenient or embarassing. Leonard v. State, 146 Ga. App. 439, 246 S.E.2d 450 (1978).

Allowing a codefendant to give testimony regarding the substance of defendant's prior testimony at a probation revocation hearing, after defendant elected not to take the stand at trial, did not violate the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination, since defendant waived the privilege by testifying voluntarily on the defendant's behalf at the prior hearing. Bobbitt v. State, 215 Ga. App. 131, 449 S.E.2d 674 (1994).

Age and education as factors in capacity to waive rights. — The mere fact that the defendant was 21 years old with a sixth grade education does not lead to the conclusion that the defendant was incapable of knowingly, voluntarily, and intelligently waiving the defendant's constitutional rights. Gates v. State, 244 Ga. 587, 261 S.E.2d 349 (1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 938, 100 S. Ct. 1332, 63 L. Ed. 2d 772 (1980).

Under Georgia statutes, those who have reached the age of 17 are no longer considered juveniles by Georgia's criminal justice system. Therefore, for purposes of Miranda, statements made by a person who is at least 17 years old are admissible if made voluntarily, without being induced by the hope of benefit or coerced by threats. Garlington v. State, 268 Ga. App. 264, 601 S.E.2d 793 (2004).

Juvenile waiver-of-rights form. — The trial court did not err in finding that a defendant made a knowing and intelligent waiver of the defendant's federal and state constitutional rights prior to giving a statement to police because a juvenile waiver-of-rights form was read in its entirety to, and signed by, the defendant and the defendant's parent, and neither the defendant nor the defendant's parent ever invoked the defendant's right to remain silent or asked that the questioning cease. Norris v. State, 282 Ga. 430, 651 S.E.2d 40 (2007).

Advisement of charges not relevant. — Failure to advise a defendant as to the crimes about which the defendant was to be questioned before a Miranda waiver was irrelevant to whether the waiver was knowing and voluntary. Rivera v. State, 279 Ga. App. 1, 630 S.E.2d 152 (2006).

Privilege against self incrimination can be voluntarily waived by property settlement agreement as to future income tax returns and financial information covering future financial events unknown at the time of entering into the contract. Feig v. Feig, 246 Ga. 763, 272 S.E.2d 723 (1980).

Express notice or reference to waiver not required. — When a person represented by counsel enters into a property settlement agreement which has the necessary effect of waiving a constitutional right, express notice of or reference to such waiver is not required. Feig v. Feig, 246 Ga. 763, 272 S.E.2d 723 (1980).

Waiver not invalidated by presence of attorney hired by mother. — Waiver of Miranda rights was not invalid due to police officers' failure to tell a defendant that an attorney hired by the defendant's mother had arrived at the station, because the attorney, without having consulted the defendant, was not empowered to invoke the defendant's personal rights. Bell v. State, 280 Ga. 562, 629 S.E.2d 213 (2006).

Waiver at former trial is immaterial. Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. Lybrend, 99 Ga. 421, 27 S.E. 794 (1896).

Failure to base objection on self-incrimination claim waived the claim. — In a prosecution against a defendant for aggravated assault and other charges arising out of a road rage incident, the defendant waived a claim that a subpoena directing the production of the defendant's gun violated the defendant's rights against self-incrimination; when the defendant raised the claim in a motion to quash the subpoena, the trial court reserved ruling on the argument, and when the defendant objected to the admission of the gun into evidence, the defendant limited the grounds of the objection to a claim that the chain of custody had not been proven and did not raise the objection that the defendant's self-incrimination rights were being violated. Adams v. State, 282 Ga. App. 819, 640 S.E.2d 329 (2006).

Trial judge was authorized to accept the interrogating officers' testimony and to find that the defendant's statement to police was voluntary and in accordance with Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI; although the defendant claimed that the defendant's statement to police was not voluntary due to various factors, the trial court was authorized to credit police testimony indicating that the defendant voluntarily waived the defendant's Miranda rights. Carswell-Danso v. State, 281 Ga. App. 576, 636 S.E.2d 735 (2006).

Defendant's trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV for failing to file a motion to exclude the introduction of the defendant's videotaped statement admitting to having sex with the victim and for failing to move to exclude or object to evidence of a prior molestation; there was no basis for such a motion, as the defendant's videotape showed the defendant being advised of and waiving the defendant's Miranda rights under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV, and the evidence of the prior molestation was admissible at trial and no compliance with Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 31.3 governing similar transactions was required. Hutchens v. State, 281 Ga. App. 610, 636 S.E.2d 773 (2006), overruled on other grounds, Schofield v. Holsey, 281 Ga. 809, 642 S.E.2d 56 (2007).

Statements made prior to waiver. — Admission of voluntary statements, freely given, prior to a waiver was harmless error, if error at all, given the other cumulative evidence of guilt. Jackson v. State, 274 Ga. App. 26, 619 S.E.2d 294 (2005).

Defendant's refusal to sign Miranda waiver form was not an invocation of the right to remain silent or to counsel. Hunter v. State, 273 Ga. App. 52, 614 S.E.2d 179 (2005).

Waiver not invalidated by failure to inform of all charges. — Fact that an officer failed to give a Miranda warning that specifically notified the defendant that the defendant was going to be questioned about an armed robbery, instead of just outstanding bad check charges, did not render the defendant's ensuing statement inadmissible. Hill v. State, 279 Ga. App. 402, 631 S.E.2d 446 (2006).

Defendant waived defendant's claim that defendant's statement was not voluntary and that defendant was not properly advised of defendant's

Waiver of Privilege (Cont'd)

Miranda rights as defendant failed to induce a ruling on the issue, even though defendant had filed a motion for a Jackson-Denno hearing and a motion in limine to exclude defendant's statement, and argued the issue during the hearing on defendant's motion to suppress. Bond v. State, 271 Ga. App. 849, 610 S.E.2d 609 (2005).

Waiver of constitutional rights in guilty plea. — Because the transcript of proceedings and trial counsel's affidavit did not show that defendant was advised that a guilty plea would waive the privilege against self-incrimination and the right to confrontation, the trial court erred in denying defendant's habeas corpus petition. Green v. State, 279 Ga. 687, 620 S.E.2d 788 (2005).

Habeas court's finding that a petitioner's guilty pleas were validly entered was reversed as the waiver forms signed by the petitioner and reviewed with the petitioner by the petitioner's attorneys addressed only the right to be tried by a jury; the waiver forms did not advise the petitioner that the petitioner was waiving the petitioner's right against self-incrimination and the petitioner's confrontation right. Beckworth v. State, 281 Ga. 41, 635 S.E.2d 769 (2006).

Waiver held to have been knowing and voluntary. — A trial court did not err in ruling that a defendant's statements were made following a knowing and voluntary waiver of the right against self-incrimination: the 15-year-old defendant (1) stated that the defendant wanted to speak to an officer the morning after the defendant had refused to talk to police after being given Miranda warnings; (2) was given Miranda warnings again after indicating a willingness to talk, and did not request the presence of a relative or an attorney; and (3) had received no threats or promises from the attending officer. Nelson v. State, 289 Ga. App. 326, 657 S.E.2d 263 (2008).

Evidence supported the trial court's finding that a defendant waived the defendant's right to counsel and that the defendant's statements to a detective were made voluntarily; thus, the statements were properly admitted into evidence. After the defendant said that the defendant wanted a lawyer, the defendant said that the defendant would tell the detective what happened if the defendant could speak to the defendant's family; after speaking with family members, the defendant was again advised of the defendant's rights and waived those rights; and after again asking to speak to police the next day, the defendant was again advised of the defendant's rights and waived those rights. Holmes v. State, 284 Ga. 330, 667 S.E.2d 71 (2008).

Trial court did not err in admitting a defendant's custodial statement into evidence, although the defendant argued that the defendant was illiterate and was awoken at 3 A.M. to give a statement, because the interviewing officer read the defendant the defendant's rights; the defendant appeared to understand those rights; the defendant complained of no physical injury or ailment; the police removed the defendant's handcuffs, permitting the defendant to use the restroom, and offered the defendant water; and the defendant did not appear groggy or non-responsive after napping. Billingsley v. State, 294 Ga. App. 661, 669 S.E.2d 699 (2008).

Admission of a defendant's inculpatory statement during the defendant's armed robbery trial was not an abuse of discretion based on the fact that the defendant had completed the ninth grade, the fact that the defendant acknowledged the seriousness of the crime the defendant was charged with, and the fact that the defendant also acknowledged that the defendant understood the defendant's right to counsel and the right to remain silent; the totality of the circumstances indicated that the sixteen years and nine months old defendant, gave the statement voluntarily after a knowing and intelligent waiver of the defendant's rights. Killings v. State, 296 Ga. App. 869, 676 S.E.2d 31 (2009).

Trial court did not err in concluding that the defendant made a knowing and voluntary waiver of the defendant's Miranda rights, despite the testimony of the defendant's expert witness to the contrary, because: (1) the detective who interviewed the defendant testified that the defendant said that the defendant was not under the influence of alcohol or drugs; (2) the detective had experience in dealing with people under the influence of alcohol or drugs; (3) the detective saw no evidence that the defendant was under the influence of alcohol or drugs; (4) the defendant had no difficulty speaking or communicating; (5) the detective read the defendant the defendant's Miranda rights; and (6) the defendant said that the defendant understood each of the rights. Watkins v. State, 289 Ga. 359, 711 S.E.2d 655 (2011).

Revocation of waiver of right to counsel during interrogation. — Defendant signed a Miranda waiver, later invoked the right to counsel, and still later, told another officer the defendant wanted to talk. As the defendant was re-Mirandized and re-signed the waiver of rights form, and the interviewing officer testified the officer neither made promises to the defendant nor coerced the defendant to give a statement, the defendant's confession to armed robbery was properly admitted into evidence. Grant-Farley v. State, 292 Ga. App. 293, 664 S.E.2d 302 (2008).

Immunity from Prosecution

No common-law transactional immunity exists in Georgia in the sense of the protection of a witness who gives up a valuable right. State v. Hanson, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297 (1982).

Criminal contempt conviction reversed. — Defendant's criminal contempt conviction was reversed as the trial court relied on another court's ex parte immunity grant in ordering defendant to testify and neither court made a finding that defendant's testimony was "necessary to the public interest" as required by O.C.G.A. § 24-9-28; the state had to grant a valid immunity as broad in scope as the privilege it replaced and show the applicability of that state immunity to the witness. In re Long, 276 Ga. App. 306, 623 S.E.2d 181 (2005).

Limitation on promise to forego prosecution. — A promise to forego prosecution must be limited to prosecution as to specific crimes or transactions. State v.

Hanson, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297 (1982).

Matters to be specified in promise to forego prosecution. — A valid promise to forego prosecution based on prosecutorial discretion rather than on O.C.G.A. § 24-9-28 must, first, contain a description of the crimes or transactions in regard to which an individual is excused from prosecution, and, secondly, the prosecutor must obtain court approval of an agreement to forego prosecution. State v. Hanson, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297 (1982).

Immunity not available when no constitutional right forfeited. — When defendant neither engaged in a plea bargain nor was compelled to testify but apparently gave information in exchange for dismissal of charges against the defendant and a promise of the prosecutor not to prosecute the defendant for any crimes committed prior to September, 1980, the defendant gave up no constitutional right, and was not entitled to immunity for purpose of constitutional protection. State v. Hanson, 249 Ga. 739, 295 S.E.2d 297 (1982).

Evidence

1. In General

Incriminating statement is not direct evidence of guilt. — A statement which does not confess guilt, though incriminating in nature, is an admission only. As such, it is not direct evidence of guilt, but only circumstantial evidence tending to prove the offense when considered with other evidence and may be used to justify a conviction. Thompson v. State, 151 Ga. App. 128, 258 S.E.2d 776 (1979).

Defendant's demand for counsel does not bar voluntary statements if defendant spontaneously incriminates the defendant after questioning has ceased. United States v. Webb, 633 F.2d 1140 (5th Cir. 1981).

Defendant not required to testify. — Refusal to permit defendant to introduce evidence of a victim's violent acts against third persons during the state's case was not tantamount to mandating that defendant testify, despite evidence that: (1) the victim pinned defendant against a wall;

Evidence (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

(2) defendant ran into a house screaming that defendant had been robbed and reported the robbery to the police; (3) defendant had fresh cuts or bruises on the neck; and (4) defendant reported to police that defendant had shot at someone as defendant tried to fend off a robber; it did not necessarily follow that defendant honestly sought self defense when firing a gun at the victim, given evidence that the victim turned away or ran from the defendant before the shooting and that the victim was shot in the back from at least two and one-half feet away. Nelloms v. State, 273 Ga. App. 448, 615 S.E.2d 153 (2005).

2. Admissible

Admissibility of evidence obtained from receiver of accused. — The introduction of documentary evidence obtained from a receiver of the property and assets of one accused of a crime, by the process of subpoena duces tecum, although such evidence may be incriminatory in its nature and tend to convict the accused of a crime, is not violative of this paragraph. Rawlings v. State, 163 Ga. 406, 136 S.E. 448 (1926).

Evidence voluntarily given to police is admissible. — The bloody sweater and shoes of a defendant who is charged with robbery by intimidation, when voluntarily given to the officer, are admissible, and the defendant cannot complain of being compelled to testify against the defendant. Moton v. State, 225 Ga. 401, 169 S.E.2d 320 (1969).

Because the defendant's spontaneous outburst was voluntarily made and not the product of police interrogation, the evidence was not subject to a hearsay exception, Miranda warnings were not required, and the statement was admissible. Tennyson v. State, 282 Ga. 92, 646 S.E.2d 219 (2007).

Based on the totality of the circumstances and the undisputed evidence, because the defendant's confession to a police detective was voluntary and admissible under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-50 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-824), not coerced or received as a result of promises made, and not subject to exclusion due to improper methods used by the police, the trial court did not err in admitting the confession; further, exclusion of the confession was not required based on a violation of the defendant's right to counsel. Swain v. State, 285 Ga. App. 550, 647 S.E.2d 88 (2007).

Because the evidence sufficiently showed that the defendant made a rational and intelligent choice to waive the rights outlined under Miranda and speak with police detectives on two separate and distinct occasions, the trial court did not err in denying a motion to suppress those statements. Starks v. State, 283 Ga. 164, 656 S.E.2d 518 (2008).

When the defendant asked the reason for the arrest, an officer said, child molestation; the defendant voluntarily responded that the defendant did not think the defendant had touched the child anymore. As the officer's answer had not been reasonably likely to elicit an incriminating response from the defendant, there was sufficient evidence that the defendant's statement was voluntary, not the result of interrogation, to admit the statement despite the lack of Miranda warnings. Terry v. State, 293 Ga. App. 455, 667 S.E.2d 109 (2008).

Defendant's state rights against self-incrimination were not violated because the defendant was required to turn over the defendant's clothes to the police for inspection since the defendant did not perform any act against the defendant's will to incriminate the defendant, but surrendered the clothing when asked to do so. Simpson v. State, 289 Ga. 685, 715 S.E.2d 142 (2011).

Pat-down was not "custody," so the defendant was not in custody when, immediately after a pat-down, the defendant made an incriminating statement in response to an officer's question, and thus, Miranda warnings were not required. Montgomery v. State, 279 Ga. App. 419, 631 S.E.2d 717 (2006).

Because the record indicated that the defendant was not being interrogated and was not in custody at the time two pretrial statements to a police sergeant were made, and a statement to a crimes against children detective was voluntarily given and involved general and routine booking protocol, those statements were properly admitted. Ellis v. State, 283 Ga. App. 808, 642 S.E.2d 869 (2007).

Field sobriety tests. — Miranda played no part in the admissibility of field sobriety test results, notwithstanding the definition of arrest contained in O.C.G.A. § 17-4-1, as the defendant was not under arrest for constitutional purposes when the defendant failed to show any restraints comparable to those associated with formal arrest, the defendant's statement that the defendant knew the officer was going to "take her in" demonstrated defendant's apprehension, not the fact of an arrest, the defendant was not informed that the defendant's detention would not be temporary, and the defendant's performance on the field sobriety tests did not support a claim that the defendant was exposed to custodial interrogation at the scene. Evans v. State, 267 Ga. App. 706, 600 S.E.2d 671 (2004).

Defendant's suppression motion was properly denied as an officer was not required to give defendant Miranda warnings before administering field sobriety tests as the officer did not make any statement that would cause a reasonable person to believe that the person was under arrest and not temporarily detained during an investigation. Moody v. State, 273 Ga. App. 670, 615 S.E.2d 803 (2005).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a new trial on grounds that a refusal to submit to voluntary field sobriety tests was testimonial in nature, and thus subject to the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination, as a refusal to submit to the tests was not testimonial in nature, and the mere fact that the defendant refused to submit to a blood test was not subject to the privilege against self-incrimination since no impermissible coercion was involved, regardless of the form of refusal. Ferega v. State, 286 Ga. App. 808, 650 S.E.2d 286 (2007), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 195, 172 L.Ed.2d 140 (2008).

Because there was no evidence that an officer threatened or coerced the defendant to perform three field sobriety tests, the results of the tests were properly admitted; moreover, as the defendant was not entitled to Miranda warnings prior to performing an alco-sensor test, refusal to undergo the test did not violate any right against self-incrimination. Clark v. State, 289 Ga. App. 884, 658 S.E.2d 372 (2008).

Evidence showed that a DUI defendant voluntarily performed three field sobriety tests while the defendant was not in custody, although the defendant had been stopped by a deputy and asked to perform the tests without Miranda warnings. Therefore, the motion to suppress evidence from the tests was properly denied. Bramlett v. State, 302 Ga. App. 527, 691 S.E.2d 333 (2010).

Trial court erred in granting the defendant's motion to suppress on the basis of a Miranda violation because the defendant was not in custody for the purposes of Miranda at the time the field-sobriety tests were conducted; nothing in the deputy's words or actions would have caused a reasonable person to conclude that the person's freedom was more than temporarily curtailed pending the outcome of the investigation. State v. Mosley, 321 Ga. App. 236, 739 S.E.2d 106 (2013).

Breath test. — Because defendant was not compelled by the state to submit to a breath test after the defendant's arrest, the admission at trial of the test results did not violate the defendant's right against self-incrimination. Fantasia v. State, 268 Ga. 512, 491 S.E.2d 318 (1997).

DNA tests. — In convictions of aggravated sodomy, kidnapping, burglary, and aggravated assault, use of evidence comparing DNA on lip balm found at the crime scene with the defendant's blood sample and with evidence retained from a prior rape prosecution, which resulted in the defendant's acquittal pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-60 et seq. (see now O.C.G.A. § 35-3-160 et seq.) did not violate defendant's right against self-incrimination under former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-5-506). Fortune v. State, 300 Ga. App. 550, 685 S.E.2d 466 (2009).

Evidence voluntarily produced from body cavity. — When a small piece of plastic containing cocaine residue was produced by the defendant from a body cavity in acquiescence to a search warrant for the defendant's person while the defendant was in lawful detention, the evidence was admissible. Scott v. State, 216 Ga. App. 692, 455 S.E.2d 609 (1995).

Evidence (Cont'd)2. Admissible (Cont'd)

Admissions made while accused under illegal arrest are admissible and this paragraph is not violated. Boyers v. State, 198 Ga. 838, 33 S.E.2d 251 (1945).

Admissibility of evidence given to school official. — When an item is produced by a student in accordance with the proper request of a school official having "adequate reason" and before any involvement of law enforcement officers, the item is not inadmissible in evidence as being violative of any rights against self-incrimination. State v. J.T., 155 Ga. App. 812, 273 S.E.2d 214 (1980).

State was properly allowed to use defendant's signature on fingerprint card for comparison by an expert with the signatures on allegedly forged checks since there was no indication that requiring the signing of the card was for any purpose other than as part of the administrative processing when the defendant was booked by police. Hudson v. State, 188 Ga. App. 684, 374 S.E.2d 212 (1988).

Grant of consent for search of defendant's automobile was neither incriminating nor exculpatory and, therefore, the defendant was not entitled to suppression of evidence found during the search based on the defendant's privilege against self-incrimination. Cotton v. State, 237 Ga. App. 18, 513 S.E.2d 763 (1999).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's motion to suppress the marijuana seized, as the search of the defendant's truck was conducted after a valid traffic stop after the defendant gave the officer consent to conduct the search, and nothing supported the defendant's claim that this consent was coerced because it was obtained during a custodial interrogation and without the benefit of Miranda warnings, as the officer's questioning did not unduly prolong the traffic stop and did not result in an unauthorized seizure or an equivalent custodial detention for which Miranda warnings were required. Trujillo v. State, 286 Ga. App. 438, 649 S.E.2d 573 (2007).

Videotape confession. — Because defendant was advised of defendant's Miranda rights before giving a videotaped statement to the police, the trial court did not err in ruling that the videotaped statement was admissible. Boynton v. State, 277 Ga. 130, 587 S.E.2d 3 (2003).

Voluntary statements. — While the defendant claimed an officer had promised the defendant leniency in exchange for the defendant's statement, the officer denied this; therefore, the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion to suppress the defendant's custodial statements on the grounds those statements were not voluntary was not clearly erroneous. Pennymon v. State, 261 Ga. App. 450, 582 S.E.2d 582 (2003).

Trial court properly admitted defendant's statement to the police as defendant voluntarily and intelligently waived defendant's Miranda rights, despite defendant's .093 blood alcohol level, as the interviewing officer testified that defendant appeared to understand defendant's rights, that defendant was not confused, that defendant's eyes were focused, that defendant was coherent and answered questions clearly, and that defendant did not have slurred speech or glassy eyes; there was no evidence that promises or threats were made. Forehand v. State, 271 Ga. App. 746, 611 S.E.2d 78 (2005).

Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to object when the state asked the defendant why the defendant did not stay at the victim's home following the robbery, report the incident to authorities, or tell anyone the defendant's version of events prior to the trial; the state's cross-examination did not infringe upon the defendant's right to remain silent and since defendant's direct examination brought out virtually the same testimony as the allegedly improper cross-examination, the defendant was not prejudiced by the state's inquiry. Olarte v. State, 273 Ga. App. 96, 614 S.E.2d 213 (2005).

Trial court did not err in admitting the defendant's statement to a police officer as it was a voluntary spontaneous utterance, rather than the product of custodial interrogation, since: (1) the statement was made shortly after the defendant's arrest while the officer was transporting the defendant to the police barracks; (2) the defendant made the statement after hearing a police broadcast about the discovery of the gun used in the shooting; and (3) the officer did not prompt the defendant to speak. Haggins v. State, 277 Ga. App. 742, 627 S.E.2d 448 (2006).

Videotape made at a police barracks while an officer was completing paperwork and swabbing the defendant's hands to test for gun residue that showed the defendant making a number of comments to the officer was properly admitted as: (1) the officer asked the defendant only for basic biographical data and whether the defendant was right- or left-handed, so that the officer would know which hand to un-cuff to permit the defendant to sign paperwork, which were all related to legitimate administrative needs and fell within the "booking exception" to the Miranda rule; and (2) all further discussion between the officer and the defendant, including the defendant's volunteered statement that the defendant might have fired guns on the defendant's birthday, was initiated by the defendant and was not the product of custodial interrogation. Haggins v. State, 277 Ga. App. 742, 627 S.E.2d 448 (2006).

Motion to suppress a statement was properly denied because the defendant was given Miranda rights, both orally and in writing, the defendant indicated an understanding and waived those rights, and the statement was found to have been given voluntarily and knowingly; the fact that the defendant may have been under the influence of a chemical agent did not, on its own, render the confession inadmissible. Williams v. State, 277 Ga. App. 884, 627 S.E.2d 897 (2006).

Since, at the time the defendant made statements to an officer, the defendant was not under arrest or being restrained in any way, but rather, the officer, the defendant, and the defendant's wife were outside the couples' house, and the officer was simply investigating why the officer had been called to the house, the trial court did not err in finding that defendant made voluntary, non-custodial statements which did not trigger the requirement that Miranda warnings be given. Jones v. State, 278 Ga. App. 616, 629 S.E.2d 546 (2006).

Defendant's admission to a different burglary was properly admitted as similar transaction evidence in a burglary trial since, although the defendant was in custody when the statement was made, the statement was exculpatory, volunteered by defendant, and unprompted by police questioning. Studemeyer v. State, 278 Ga. App. 756, 629 S.E.2d 593 (2006).

Defendant's motion to suppress the custodial statement the defendant gave to the police was properly denied as: (1) the Miranda warnings were first read aloud to the defendant and then the defendant was allowed to read and initial each right and to sign the waiver form; (2) the defendant's mother was present during the interrogation; (3) the defendant's statement to the police was not the result of threats or intimidation; and (4) the interrogation tactics used, including alleged screaming and chair-kicking, were not more than were ordinarily employed. Peterson v. State, 280 Ga. 875, 635 S.E.2d 132 (2006).

Despite the defendant's possible intoxication, a statement given to police was knowingly and voluntarily made, and a waiver of the rights accorded under Miranda was intelligent; thus, the trial court did not err in admitting the defendant's videotaped custodial statements into evidence. Bryant v. State, 286 Ga. App. 493, 649 S.E.2d 597 (2007).

A trial court properly admitted a defendant's incriminating statement into evidence, having found that the statement was freely and voluntarily made. The trial court found particularly noteworthy the fact that the interviewing officer stopped the interview to make sure the defendant understood the defendant's rights, and a mental evaluation revealed that defendant had an average intelligence quotient and was neither mentally nor cognitively impaired; even if the defendant was slow to understand the defendant's rights, this did not render the defendant's confession inadmissible. Mezick v. State, 291 Ga. App. 257, 661 S.E.2d 635 (2008).

Evidence (Cont'd)2. Admissible (Cont'd)

Defendant's confessions to the murder of defendant's spouse made to police were voluntary: the defendant was 37 years old, could read and write, had graduated from high school, and was not under the influence of drugs or alcohol. Defendant accompanied police to the station voluntarily, was not handcuffed, and was free to leave at any time. Turner v. State, 287 Ga. 793, 700 S.E.2d 386 (2010).

Defendant's videotaped statement made to police during a custodial interrogation was admissible because the defendant made the statement voluntarily after the defendant was advised of, and waived, the defendant's Miranda rights, and the defendant presented no evidence the statement was made under duress or coercion. McCoy v. State, 292 Ga. 296, 736 S.E.2d 425 (2013).

Statements the defendant made to police at the hospital and the police station were admissible because the defendant was not in custody at the hospital and, thus, no Miranda warnings were required, and the defendant voluntarily waived those rights at the police station. Schutt v. State, 292 Ga. 625, 740 S.E.2d 163 (2013).

Admission of the defendant's statements to an investigator was not erroneous because Miranda rights were read to the defendant, the defendant waived those rights, and there was no evidence that the defendant was coerced prior to giving the taped statement. Lindsey v. State, 321 Ga. App. 808, 743 S.E.2d 481 (2013).

Defendant's videotaped statement, which police obtained before giving Miranda warnings, was properly admitted because a reasonable person would not have perceived the defendant to be in custody when the defendant made a statement agreeing to an examiner's summary of the defendant's prior, unrecorded confession, and the defendant confessed again after the Mirandized portion of the interview. Pressley v. State, 322 Ga. App. 243, 744 S.E.2d 439 (2013).

Spontaneous statements. — It was not error for the trial court to refuse to suppress the defendant's inculpatory statements made while being transported by officers from Maryland to Georgia; the evidence supported the trial court's findings that the inculpatory statements at issue, which had been made after the defendant was advised of the Miranda rights, were not the result of interrogation or questioning but were spontaneously uttered by the defendant. Stokes v. State, 281 Ga. 825, 642 S.E.2d 82 (2007).

Admission of inculpatory statement was harmless error. — Any error in the admission of a defendant's inculpatory statement was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt based on the overwhelming evidence against the defendant in an armed robbery prosecution; the defendant made inculpatory admissions at trial, the defendant met the physical description of one of the armed robbers, and the gun and proceeds from the robbery were on the defendant's person when the defendant was arrested. Hawkins v. State, 292 Ga. App. 76, 663 S.E.2d 406 (2008).

Request for attorney on videotape permitted. — Admission of videotape which ended with a segment when the defendant requested an attorney was proper and did not involve a comment on the defendant's right to remain silent, as defendant's request was not evidence of the defendant's guilt nor was it directed to undermining any of the defendant's defenses. Rowe v. State, 276 Ga. 800, 582 S.E.2d 119 (2003).

Presumption of regularity attached. — Given that no transcript of the defendant's Jackson v. Denno hearing appeared in the record, the appeals court was left only to assume the trial court's findings at the hearing admitting the defendant's statement to police, upon the officers' full compliance with Miranda, were supported by the evidence and the trial court's actions during that hearing were appropriate; moreover, illiteracy did not dictate a determination that there was no voluntary and knowledgeable waiver of a person's Miranda rights. Hicks v. State, 281 Ga. App. 461, 636 S.E.2d 183 (2006).

Administrative processing. — When, after the defendant was arrested, the defendant was asked about the defendant's employment, in the course of completing biographical information about the defendant, defendant's response, before the defendant was warned of the defendant's Miranda rights, was admissible, because, while the question was not asked as part of a formal booking, it was part of an administrative processing which was not intended to elicit an incriminating response. English v. State, 260 Ga. App. 620, 580 S.E.2d 351 (2003).

The trial court did not err in admitting the defendant's statements made at a hospital to a sheriff's deputy and an investigator, as the statements were given while the defendant was in a medical, rather than an investigative, setting; moreover, the fact that the officers might have suspected the defendant of having committed a murder did not render the statements at issue violative of Miranda, and thus subject to suppression. Jennings v. State, 282 Ga. 679, 653 S.E.2d 17 (2007).

Not in custody. — Defendant was not in custody simply from being pulled over and temporarily detained; since the defendant was not in custody at the time that the officer pulled the defendant over, there was no need for the officer to give a Miranda warning prior to asking the defendant about drugs found in the defendant's car, and the defendant's motion to suppress was properly denied. Connell v. State, 279 Ga. App. 413, 631 S.E.2d 456 (2006).

Trial court did not err in determining that the defendant was not in custody at the time the defendant made statements to an officer. While the statements were made prior to the defendant being advised of the defendant's Miranda rights, there was no evidence that the defendant had been placed under formal arrest or restrained to the degree associated with a formal arrest, the defendant was not in a police-dominated atmosphere, the defendant's mother and aunt were present during the interview, and the temporary detention, although two hours, was not unreasonably long under the circumstances. Tobias v. State, 319 Ga. App. 320, 735 S.E.2d 113 (2012).

Statement admissible after juvenile defendant did not invoke right to have parent present. — Because the undisputed evidence established that a juvenile defendant was informed of the right to have a parent present during an interview with police in which a custodial statement was obtained, but did not invoke that right, there was no error in allowing the juvenile defendant's statement into evidence. Green v. State, 282 Ga. 672, 653 S.E.2d 23 (2007).

The Court of Appeals rejected the defendant's claim that the admission of statements given to a polygraph examiner had to be excluded as not freely and voluntarily given and because Miranda warnings had not been given, as: (1) the defendant was not in custody when the challenged statements were made; (2) incriminating statements were made only upon receipt of Miranda after an arrest; and (3) the confession was not given with the hope of benefit. Ramirez v. State, 288 Ga. App. 249, 653 S.E.2d 837 (2007).

Defendant was not entitled to Miranda warnings under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI when the defendant was interviewed by police in a child abuse case; the defendant voluntarily went to the police station to be interviewed, no restraint was placed on the defendant's freedom of movement, nor was the defendant otherwise prevented from leaving the interview, and the defendant was not arrested until after the interview had ended. Bass v. State, 282 Ga. App. 159, 637 S.E.2d 863 (2006).

Because the record failed to contain any indication that the defendant: (1) informed the officers of the defendant's desire to end an interview; (2) wished to speak with counsel; or (3) wished to leave the station, and after the statements were made the defendant was driven home by an officer, the defendant was not in custody for purposes of Miranda; therefore, admission of these non-custodial statements was proper. Vaughn v. State, 282 Ga. 99, 646 S.E.2d 212 (2007).

3. Inadmissible

Inadmissibility of evidence that witness invoked privilege during testimony before grand jury. — The court erred in admitting certain documentary evidence showing that the witness in a criminal case has declined to answer before the grand jury certain questions propounded to the witness on the ground that the witness's answer to those questions might tend to incriminate the witness. The admission of this evidence tended to destroy or at least abridge the privilege of the witness guaranteed by the Constitution of this state of refusing to answer questions tending to incriminate the witness, and to deprive the witness of the protection of that privilege which it was the purpose of the Constitution to give. Loewenherz v. Merchants' & Mechanics' Bank, 144 Ga. 556, 87 S.E. 778, 1917E Ann. Cas. 877 (1916).

Evidence (Cont'd)3. Inadmissible (Cont'd)

Instances when evidence inadmissible. — Evidence that a witness forcibly placed the defendant's foot in certain tracks near the scene of the burglary, and that the footprints were of the same size, is not admissible. Day v. State, 63 Ga. 667 (1879).

Evidence of guilt found upon a person under legal arrest may be used in evidence against the person, but when a person not in legal custody is compelled to furnish incriminating evidence against that person, the evidence is not admissible. Evans v. State, 106 Ga. 519, 32 S.E. 659, 71 Am. St. R. 276 (1899).

Although the trial court erred in allowing the state to introduce defendant's custodial statement to police, the error was harmless because the record established beyond a reasonable doubt that it did not contribute to the guilty verdict when the eyewitness testimony was overwhelming evidence of the defendant's guilt of the crimes of which the defendant was convicted. Gardner v. State, 261 Ga. App. 10, 582 S.E.2d 7 (2003).

Trial court properly suppressed the alco-sensor tests taken by the defendant because the officer incorrectly informed defendant that defendant did not have the right to refuse the test; O.C.G.A. § 40-5-55 gave the defendant the right to withdraw implied consent, as, pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII, a reasonable person in the defendant's position would have thought the defendant, who was ordered to turn around and place the defendant's hands behind the defendant's back after refusing the test, was being placed under arrest. State v. Norris, 281 Ga. App. 193, 635 S.E.2d 810 (2006).

Trial court properly suppressed the oral and written statements made by the defendant, a public employee, during an internal investigation interview conducted by the Georgia Department of Corrections, and after the defendant was forbidden to seek the advice of counsel, as the defendant had an objective belief that a failure to cooperate with the investigation by taking part in the interview and signing a written document entitled "Notice of Interfering with On-Going Internal Investigation" would result in a loss of employment; thus, the defendant's right against self-incrimination was violated. State v. Aiken, 281 Ga. App. 415, 636 S.E.2d 156 (2006).

The trial court did not err in refusing to strike a victim's testimony upon invoking a Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination, because the questions posed to that victim concerning a weapon dealt with collateral matters that occurred prior to the commission of the crimes at issue. Mercer v. State, 289 Ga. App. 606, 658 S.E.2d 173 (2008).

While non-custodial and custodial statements were properly admitted, as not vitiating the defendant's constitutional rights once defendant invoked the right to counsel, a subsequent interview initiated by police violated this right; as a result, cocaine seized through information obtained from the interview had to be suppressed as fruit of the poisonous tree. Vergara v. State, 283 Ga. 175, 657 S.E.2d 863 (2008).

The trial court properly suppressed those statements made by the defendant in violation of Miranda, and after the defendant invoked the right to counsel, as the mere act of allowing the defendant to meet with an attorney did not permit law enforcement to re-initiate any conversation with the defendant at a later time without counsel present. State v. Sammons, 283 Ga. 364, 659 S.E.2d 598 (2008).

As a defendant's statements to an officer were inadmissible under Miranda, those portions of a videotaped conversation between the defendant and the defendant's parent that recapped the interrogation by the officer (who had told the parent of the defendant's incriminating statements) were inadmissible. However, the remaining portions of the videotape were admissible. State v. Darby, 284 Ga. 271, 663 S.E.2d 160 (2008).

As the state could not comment on a defendant's failure to come forward, defense counsel was ineffective in not objecting when the state elicited testimony that the defendant knew police were looking for the defendant in connection with the charged crimes, but did not contact the authorities. Johnson v. State, 293 Ga. App. 728, 667 S.E.2d 637 (2008).

4. Voluntariness

Factors which indicate voluntariness of confession. — When the evidence heard was sufficient to authorize the trial court to determine that the defendant was advised of the defendant's rights, that the defendant was not placed under any duress, that the defendant seemed to understand the defendant's rights, that the defendant was not under the influence of drugs or alcohol, and that the defendant seemed completely aware of what was going on around the defendant, the defendant's confession was voluntarily elicited and not in violation of the Fifth and Sixth amendments. Simonton v. State, 151 Ga. App. 431, 260 S.E.2d 487 (1979).

A trial court properly admitted defendant's statement at trial with regard to defendant's conviction of felony murder and possession of a firearm in connection with the shooting death of another, as the evidence supported the trial court's conclusion that the defendant made a knowing, voluntary, and intelligent waiver of the defendant's rights before making the statement to police; the evidence established that State of Georgia police officers went to the city in the State of Florida where the defendant had fled and had been arrested and, prior to the interview, the defendant was read Miranda rights and agreed to speak with the officers after informing the officers that the defendant understood the defendant's rights. The evidence further showed that no promises or threats were made to the defendant to get the defendant to speak and at no time did the defendant ask for the questioning to stop. Martinez v. State, 283 Ga. 122, 657 S.E.2d 199 (2008).

Defendant, convicted of voluntary manslaughter, argued that because the defendant was hysterical after being told that the defendant's spouse, whom the defendant had stabbed in the chest, had died, the defendant did not understand the defendant's Miranda rights or the consequences of the defendant's statements and that those statements were thus not voluntary. This claim failed as the interviewing officer testified that the defendant understood the questions and made coherent responses and that the officer did not threaten or coerce the defendant to give a statement. McKenzie v. State, 294 Ga. App. 376, 670 S.E.2d 158 (2008).

Defendant's custodial statements were properly deemed voluntary under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-50 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-824). The defendant was advised of defendant's Miranda rights; signed a waiver of those rights; admitted no threats or promises were made; and, although the defendant claimed not to understand the Miranda rights due to limited mental capacity, there was no evidence the defendant was mentally or cognitively impaired. Inman v. State, 295 Ga. App. 461, 671 S.E.2d 921 (2009).

Although the defendant was 17 when the defendant had intercourse with a 12-year-old child, as the defendant was 18 when interrogated by police about the statutory rape, the nine-factor analysis of voluntariness set forth in Riley v. State, 226 S.E. 2d 922 (Ga. 1976), was inapplicable. The test that applied was whether, considering the totality of the circumstances, the statements were made voluntarily, without being induced by hope of benefit or coerced by threats. Henry v. State, 295 Ga. App. 758, 673 S.E.2d 120 (2009).

Voluntary statements by an accused admitted into evidence. — When an accused freely and voluntarily submits to examination by arresting officers and the prosecuting attorney, respecting the accused's alleged crime, and there is no claim that the accused was influenced by force, threats, hope, or reward, it is not error on the accused's trial to receive in evidence a signed transcript of such examination containing incriminating admissions. Russell v. State, 196 Ga. 275, 26 S.E.2d 528 (1943).

Evidence (Cont'd)4. Voluntariness (Cont'd)

Although defendant disputed many of the facts offered by a police detective and a federal agent regarding whether defendant was given Miranda warnings prior to defendant's statements to the detective and the agent and whether defendant's statements were made without bribery and coercion, the trial judge was the arbiter of the credibility of the witnesses at defendant's Jackson v. Denno hearing and ample testimony supported the trial court's conclusion that the statements were voluntarily given where the testimony of the detective and the federal agent indicated that the two custodial interviews each lasted about an hour, defendant was read Miranda warnings and executed a written waiver of rights form before giving each statement, and defendant was never threatened or promised any hope of benefit in exchange for the statements; since the trial court's factual and credibility findings were not clearly erroneous, its decision to admit the statements was upheld on appeal. Phanamixay v. State, 260 Ga. App. 177, 581 S.E.2d 286 (2003).

Since the defendant, who was not in custody at the time, volunteered an explanation as to why the defendant possessed a weapon without authority, no Miranda warning was necessary and the evidence was sufficient to show that the defendant was shot by the defendant in a government building with a weapon that the defendant took from police custody, in violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-8-2 and 16-7-24(a); therefore, the trial court's findings were not clearly erroneous. McClendon v. State, 264 Ga. App. 174, 590 S.E.2d 189 (2003).

Trial court did not err in admitting defendant's statement that if the police would let defendant walk away, defendant would identify a major drug dealer, as there was no evidence that defendant was coerced or threatened by the police, or that defendant did not understand defendant's Miranda rights; the trial court was authorized to find that the statement was freely and voluntarily given. Johnson v. State, 267 Ga. App. 549, 600 S.E.2d 667 (2004).

Defendant's statement to the police during a custodial interrogation was voluntary and was admissible as defendant was an adult and did not have a right to have defendant's parent present during questioning. Finney v. State, 270 Ga. App. 422, 606 S.E.2d 637 (2004).

Trial court's findings that defendant was advised of defendant's constitutional rights, that defendant knowingly and voluntarily relinquished those rights, and that defendant's subsequent statements were voluntary was not clearly erroneous because an officer testified that defendant was not under arrest when the defendant made the statement, that defendant was nonetheless advised of defendant's Miranda rights and appeared to understand them, and that defendant was not threatened, coerced, or promised anything in return for a statement; thus, defendant did not provide a specific basis for excluding defendant's statement. Flanders v. State, 279 Ga. 35, 609 S.E.2d 346 (2005).

Defendant voluntarily and knowingly waived defendant's constitutional rights before making a statement to the police because defendant was 15 years old when questioned, defendant had the verbal comprehension level of a nine-year-old, defendant was advised that defendant was suspected of child molestation, and defendant was advised of defendant's Miranda rights and exercised them; the methods used in the interrogation and the 27-minute length of the interrogation were not coercive. Stone v. State, 271 Ga. App. 748, 610 S.E.2d 684 (2005).

Defendant's statement to the police was presumptively valid as before making the statement, defendant was advised of defendant's Miranda rights, defendant understood those rights, defendant executed a waiver of rights form, and defendant did not invoke defendant's right to have an attorney present during defendant's interview. Ray v. State, 273 Ga. App. 656, 615 S.E.2d 812 (2005).

Defendant's videotaped statement to police was voluntarily given as defendant was advised of defendant's Miranda rights, was coherent, and did not appear to be under the influence of alcohol or drugs; there was no evidence of mental incapacity other than a draft suicide note written while defendant was hiding. Young v. State, 280 Ga. 65, 623 S.E.2d 491 (2005).

The trial court did not err in admitting a defendant's custodial statement, taken when the defendant was 17, after finding that the defendant had voluntarily waived the defendant's rights and signed the statement; there was testimony that the defendant was read the Miranda rights, signed a waiver, did not ask for the defendant's parents or an attorney, did not appear to be under the influence of alcohol or drugs, that an investigator advised the defendant that the defendant would be asked questions about the crimes in question, and that the defendant was not threatened or promised leniency and read and corrected the statement. Medlin v. State, 285 Ga. App. 709, 647 S.E.2d 392 (2007).

The trial court properly refused to suppress a defendant's confession. The evidence enabled the trial court to find that the defendant's relative was present during most of the questioning, that the defendant was able to speak privately with the relative on occasion, that the defendant was not under the influence of drugs or alcohol, that the defendant was not threatened or offered any hope of benefits, and that the defendant was not handcuffed or otherwise restrained prior to confessing to participation in a shooting; furthermore, although the defendant claimed that the statement was not knowing and voluntary because of the defendant's limited intellect, the defendant was able to provide some involved explanations to police, a police interviewer saw no confusion about the defendant's rights, and the relative testified that the defendant never indicated that the defendant felt that the defendant had to talk to the police. Boseman v. State, 283 Ga. 355, 659 S.E.2d 364 (2008).

Evidence supported the trial court's finding that a defendant waived the defendant's right to counsel and that the defendant's statements to a detective were made voluntarily; thus, the statements were properly admitted into evidence. After the defendant said that the defendant wanted a lawyer, the defendant said that the defendant would tell the detective what happened if the defendant could speak to the defendant's family; after speaking with family members, the defendant was again advised of the defendant's rights and waived those rights; and after again asking to speak to police the next day, the defendant was again advised of the defendant's rights and waived those rights. Holmes v. State, 284 Ga. 330, 667 S.E.2d 71 (2008).

In a statutory rape case, as the record showed that police had not misrepresented the 12-year-old victim's status to the defendant or promised that the defendant would be charged with rape only if the investigation established that the defendant had committed forcible rape, the defendant's confession and DNA test results were not inadmissible as having been obtained through trickery and deceit. Henry v. State, 295 Ga. App. 758, 673 S.E.2d 120 (2009).

Trial court did not err by determining that the defendant's response to law enforcement agents, who stopped the defendant's car at a park, that the defendant was at the park to counsel a 14-year-old-girl about the dangers of meeting men from the Internet was admissible because the trial court determined that the stop of the defendant's car was authorized by the facts before the officers as: (1) the defendant arrived at 10:00 P.M. at the isolated park location in a vehicle with a Tennessee license plate, which fit the description of the individual whom a task force was investigating; (2) the statements made by the investigating officer who stopped the defendant's vehicle and explained the reason for the stop would not objectively have been understood to be an interrogation; and (3) the statement made by the defendant was spontaneous and voluntary. Moreover, because the defendant was properly Mirandized prior to giving a later statement to the officers, the trial court did not err by admitting that statement. Logan v. State, 309 Ga. App. 95, 709 S.E.2d 302, cert. denied, No. S11C1101, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 579; cert. denied, 132 S. Ct. 823, 181 L. Ed. 2d 533 (2011).

Evidence (Cont'd)4. Voluntariness (Cont'd)

Defendant's custodial statement was admissible because the statement was made during questioning prompted by the defendant after the defendant signed a written waiver of rights form. Smith v. State, 292 Ga. 620, 740 S.E.2d 158 (2013).

Voluntary statements by an accused after using ecstasy admitted into evidence. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to exclude a statement made to a detective because the statement was made while the defendant was under the influence of Ecstasy and was induced by the hope of a light sentence because the defendant never told the detective that the defendant had taken Ecstasy a few hours earlier and the detective credibly testified that no promise of leniency was made. Leonard v. State, 292 Ga. 214, 735 S.E.2d 767 (2012).

Questions of fact concerning voluntariness determined by jury after prima facie showing by state. — After the state made a prima facie showing of voluntariness, the court properly admitted the defendant's statement into evidence for the jury's consideration, and thereafter, the question of whether or not defendant's confession was freely and voluntarily given, without hope of benefit or fear of injury, became one of fact for determination by the jury. Simonton v. State, 151 Ga. App. 431, 260 S.E.2d 487 (1979).

Appellate court will not override verdict unless evidence that confession unlawfully obtained. — Although the facts in evidence will be examined to determine whether or not they show a conviction by use of a coerced confession, in violation of the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the federal Constitution, or the provision in the state Constitution against self-incrimination, when such a question has been properly raised and presented, yet when a prima facie case as to the voluntary character of the confession has been made, it is not within the power of the court to usurp the function of the jury in passing upon an issue, and to override the jury's verdict supported by legal evidence and upheld by the judge in refusing a new trial, or to reverse a ruling admitting the confession in evidence, unless the evidence requires but one rational inference, that the confession was unlawfully obtained. Under this and the preceding rulings, the judge did not err in refusing to exclude from evidence the alleged illegal confession and incriminatory statements of the defendant. Bryant v. State, 191 Ga. 686, 13 S.E.2d 820 (1941).

Statements overheard by police do not amount to evidence involuntarily given and without advice of counsel.

— Evidence of statements made by the defendant in a conversation overheard by the arresting officers who had concealed themselves, as planned between them and the person with whom the defendant talked, does not amount to evidence given by the defendant involuntarily and without the advice of counsel, and is not coerced from the defendant in violation of the defendant's rights against self incrimination. Blackwell v. State, 113 Ga. App. 536, 148 S.E.2d 912 (1966).

No error to allow evidence of voluntary acts into trial. — When a person after arrest does an act voluntarily or without objection which tends to incriminate the person it is not error or unconstitutional to allow evidence of the act in the trial of the case. State v. J.T., 155 Ga. App. 812, 273 S.E.2d 214 (1980).

Defendant's contention of forced self incrimination in violation of the broader protection offered by the Georgia Constitution or O.C.G.A. § 24-9-20(a) was without merit because defendant voluntarily provided the handwriting samples which were used in overturning defendant's probation. Poole v. State, 270 Ga. App. 432, 606 S.E.2d 878 (2004).

Question was not a request for counsel. — Question by a defendant as to whether the defendant would have been arrested if the defendant asked for an attorney was not a clear request for counsel that required cessation of police questioning or clarification before continuing the interrogation and there was no evidence that the statement was given in fear of injury or for a hope of benefit; additionally, while the investigator lied to the defendant throughout the interview about the existence and amount of inculpatory evidence, nothing suggested that the investigator sought to procure a false statement. Wright v. State, 279 Ga. App. 155, 630 S.E.2d 656 (2006).

Hope of benefit not created. — In a prosecution for felony murder, armed robbery, and burglary, a defendant's post-Miranda statements were properly admitted at trial as a detective's telling the defendant the detective knew the defendant was not the shooter did not constitute the hope of a lighter sentence that tainted the voluntariness of the defendant's statements. Jackson v. State, 284 Ga. 484, 668 S.E.2d 700 (2008).

Defendant's confession was voluntary and admissible because the investigators framed the investigators' inquiries in terms of what they wanted to be able to tell the judge, and any suggestions of a possible benefit were either nonspecific (e.g., "help yourself") or along the lines of allowing the defendant to have more credibility with the jury for being honest; the promises did not relate to the charges or sentence the defendant was facing so as to render the confession inadmissible under O.C.G.A. § 24-8-824. Baughns v. State, 335 Ga. App. 600, 782 S.E.2d 494 (2016).

This provision is not applicable if the defendant voluntarily submits for purpose of others identifying the defendant. Foster v. State, 213 Ga. 601, 100 S.E.2d 426 (1957), cert. denied, 355 U.S. 967, 78 S. Ct. 559, 2 L. Ed. 2d 542 (1958); Whippler v. State, 218 Ga. 198, 126 S.E.2d 744 (1962), cert. denied, 375 U.S. 960, 84 S. Ct. 446, 11 L. Ed. 2d 318 (1963).

No violation when fingerprinting voluntary. — When a defendant voluntarily submits to fingerprinting, there is no violation of this paragraph. Gunter v. State, 223 Ga. 290, 154 S.E.2d 608 (1967).

Suspect's mental illness did not render confession involuntary. — Admissions made by defendant after defendant had been read Miranda rights and had waived them did not violate U.S. Const., amend. 5 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI; even if defendant was mentally ill as alleged, mental illness did not render a defendant incapable of making a voluntary statement. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 756, 620 S.E.2d 778 (2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671 (2006).

Drug and alcohol impairment. — Defendant's claim that a statement to police was involuntary due to drug and alcohol impairment was properly rejected as the defendant admitted during the interview to consuming only two tranquilizers due to nervousness, and the interviewers testified that the defendant did not appear to be impaired and communicated with them in a lucid and coherent manner. Carter v. State, 285 Ga. 394, 677 S.E.2d 71 (2009).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21A Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 1035 et seq. 81 Am. Jur. 2d, Witnesses, § 78 et seq.

Am. Jur. Proof of Facts. — Reliability of Polygraph Examination, 14 POF2d 1.

Involuntary Confession — Psychological Coercion, 22 POF2d 539.

Custodial Interrogation Under Miranda v. Arizona, 23 POF2d 713.

Invalidity of Suspect's Waiver of Miranda Rights, 42 POF2d 617.

Invalidity of Confession or Waiver of Miranda Rights by Mentally Retarded Person, 42 POF3d 147.

C.J.S. — 22A C.J.S., Criminal Law, §§ 906, 907.

ALR. — Right to recover property held by public authorities as evidence for use in a criminal trial, 13 ALR 1168.

Constitutional immunity against giving incriminating testimony as affecting contractual stipulation to submit to examination, 18 ALR 749.

Plea of privilege by the woman concerned in violation of White Slave Act, 48 ALR 991.

Privilege against self-incrimination as applicable to answer to pleadings, 52 ALR 143.

Privilege against self-incrimination as extending to danger of prosecution in other state or country, 59 ALR 895; 82 ALR 1380.

Admissibility of secondary evidence of incriminating document in possession of defendant, 67 ALR 77.

What amounts to violation of statute forbidding comment by prosecuting attorney on failure of accused to testify, 68 ALR 1108.

Constitutional provision against self-incrimination as applicable to questions asked or testimony given in proceeding before nonjudicial officer or body, 68 ALR 1503.

Waiver of immunity from testifying and constitutional provision against self-incrimination, by accomplice testifying for prosecution, 87 ALR 882.

Comment by court suggesting that jury may take into consideration failure of accused person to testify, 94 ALR 701.

Constitutionality, construction, and effect of statutes in relation to conduct of driver of automobile after happening of accident, 101 ALR 911.

Calling upon accused in the presence of jury to produce document in his possession as violation of privilege against self-incrimination, 110 ALR 101.

Admissibility of inculpatory statements made in presence of accused and not denied or contradicted by him, 115 ALR 1510.

Admissibility of plea of guilty at preliminary hearing, 141 ALR 1335.

Power of juvenile court to require children to testify, 151 ALR 1229.

Privilege against self-incrimination as available to member or officer of unincorporated association as regards its books or papers, 152 ALR 1208.

Testimony of incriminating character which witness was compelled to give, by virtue of immunity statute or otherwise, as admissible in a prosecution of the witness for an offense subsequently committed, 157 ALR 428.

Right to cross-examine accused as to previous prosecution for, or conviction of, crime, for purpose of affecting his credibility, 161 ALR 233.

Requiring submission to physical examination or test as violation of constitutional rights, 164 ALR 967; 25 ALR2d 1407.

Waiver of privilege against self-incrimination in exchange for immunity from prosecution as barring reassertion of privilege on account of prosecution in another jurisdiction, 2 ALR2d 631.

Use in subsequent prosecution of self-incriminating testimony given without invoking privilege, 5 ALR2d 1404.

Power of prosecuting attorney to extend immunity from prosecution to witness claiming privilege against self-incrimination, 13 ALR2d 1438.

Right of witness to refuse to answer, on the ground of self-incrimination, as to membership in or connection with party, society, or similar organization or group, 19 ALR2d 388.

Inferences arising from refusal of witness other than accused to answer question on the ground that answer would tend to incriminate him, 24 ALR2d 895.

Requiring submission to physical examination or test as violation of constitutional rights, 25 ALR2d 1407.

Right of witness to claim privilege against self-incrimination on subsequent criminal trial after testifying to same matter before grand jury, 36 ALR2d 1403.

Privilege against self-incrimination as to testimony before grand jury, 38 ALR2d 225.

Assertion of immunity as ground for removing or discharging public officer or employee, 44 ALR2d 789.

Sufficiency of witness' claim of privilege against self-incrimination, 51 ALR2d 1178.

Adequacy of immunity offered as condition of denial of privilege against self-incrimination, 53 ALR2d 1030; 29 ALR5th 1.

Right of state in criminal contempt case to obtain data from defendant by interrogatories or pretrial discovery as permitted in civil actions, 72 ALR2d 431.

Testifying in civil proceeding as waiver of privilege against self-incrimination, 72 ALR2d 830.

Admissibility of inculpatory statements made in presence of accused to which he refuses to reply on advice of counsel, 77 ALR2d 463.

Duty of court to inform accused who is not represented by counsel of his right not to testify, 79 ALR2d 643.

Admissibility, in contempt proceeding against witness, of evidence of incriminating nature of question as to which he invoked privilege against self-incrimination, 88 ALR2d 463.

Admissibility of confession, admission, or incriminatory statement of accused as affected by fact that it was made after indictment and in the absence of counsel, 90 ALR2d 732.

Right of prosecution to pretrial discovery, inspection, and disclosure, 96 ALR2d 1224.

Admissibility of confession as affected by its inducement through artifice, deception, trickery, or fraud, 99 ALR2d 772.

Comment on accused's failure to testify, by counsel for codefendant, 1 ALR3d 989.

Dismissing action or striking testimony where party to civil action asserts privilege against self-incrimination as to pertinent question, 4 ALR3d 545.

Plea of guilty or conviction as resulting in loss of privilege against self-incrimination as to crime in question, 9 ALR3d 990.

Necessity of informing suspect of rights under privilege against self-incrimination, prior to police interrogation, 10 ALR3d 1054.

Comment or argument by court or counsel that prosecution evidence is uncontradicted as amounting to improper reference to accused's failure to testify, 14 ALR3d 723.

Propriety under Griffin v. California and prejudicial effect of unrequested instruction that no inferences against accused should be drawn from his failure to testify, 18 ALR3d 1335.

Violation of federal constitutional rule (Griffin v. California) prohibiting adverse comment by prosecutor or court upon accused's failure to testify, as constituting reversible or harmless error, 24 ALR3d 1093; 32 ALR4th 774.

Requiring suspect or defendant in criminal case to demonstrate voice for purposes of identification, 24 ALR3d 1261.

Right of motorist stopped by police officers for traffic offense to be informed at that time of his federal constitutional rights under Miranda v. Arizona, 25 ALR3d 1076.

Applicability, in proceedings under statutes relating to sexual psychopaths, of constitutional provisions for the protection of a person accused of crime, 34 ALR3d 652.

Privilege against self-incrimination as ground for refusal to produce noncorporate documents in possession of person asserting privilege, but owned by another, 37 ALR3d 1373.

Propriety of requiring accused to give handwriting exemplar, 43 ALR3d 653.

Witness's refusal to testify on ground of self-incrimination as justifying reception of evidence of prior statements or admissions, 43 ALR3d 1413.

Censorship and evidentiary use of unconvicted prisoners' mail, 52 ALR3d 548.

Right of member, officer, agent, or director of private corporation or unincorporated association to assert personal privilege against self-incrimination with respect to production of corporate books or records, 52 ALR3d 636.

Use in disbarment proceeding of testimony given by attorney in criminal proceeding under grant of immunity, 62 ALR3d 1145.

Refusal to answer questions before state grand jury as direct contempt of court, 69 ALR3d 501.

Admissibility, in state probation revocation proceedings, of incriminating statement obtained in violation of Miranda rule, 77 ALR3d 669.

Nonverbal reaction to accusation, other than silence alone, as constituting adoptive admission under hearsay rule, 87 ALR3d 706.

Modern status: instruction allowing presumption or inference of guilt from possession of recently stolen property as violation of defendant's privilege against self-incrimination, 88 ALR3d 1178.

Admissibility in evidence of confession made by accused in anticipation of, during, or following polygraph examination, 89 ALR3d 230.

Admissibility of hypnotic evidence at criminal trial, 92 ALR3d 442; 77 ALR4th 927.

Propriety of requiring criminal defendant to exhibit self, or perform act, or participate in demonstration, during trial and in presence of jury, 3 ALR4th 374.

Propriety and prejudicial effect of prosecution's calling as witness, to extract claim of self-incrimination privilege, one involved in offense charged against accused, 19 ALR4th 368.

Sufficiency of showing that voluntariness of confession or admission was affected by alcohol or other drugs, 25 ALR4th 419.

Admissibility in criminal case of evidence that accused refused to take test of intoxication, 26 ALR4th 1112.

Automobiles: validity and construction of legislation authorizing revocation or suspension of operator's license for "habitual," "persistent," or "frequent" violations of traffic regulations, 48 ALR4th 367.

Voluntariness of confession as affected by police statements that suspect's relatives will benefit by the confession, 51 ALR4th 495.

What constitutes assertion of right to counsel following Miranda warnings — state cases, 83 ALR4th 443.

Propriety, under state constitutional provisions, of granting use or transactional immunity for compelled incriminating testimony — post-Kastigar cases, 29 ALR5th 1.

Coercive conduct by private person as affecting admissibility of confession under state statutes or constitutional provisions— post-Connelly cases, 48 ALR5th 555.

Admissibility of evidence of voice identification of defendant as affected by allegedly suggestive voice lineup procedures, 55 ALR5th 423.

Sufficiency of showing that voluntariness of confession or admission was affected by alcohol or other drugs— Drugs or narcotics administered as part of medical treatment and drugs or intoxicants administered by the police, 96 ALR5th 523.

What constitutes "custodial interrogation" by police officer within rule of Miranda v. Arizona requiring that suspect be informed of his or her federal constitutional rights before custodial interrogation — at suspect's or third party's residence, 28 ALR6th 505.

What constitutes "custodial interrogation" of adult by police officer within rule of Miranda v. Arizona requiring that suspect be informed of federal constitutional rights before custodial interrogation — at police station or sheriff's office, where defendant voluntarily appears or appears at request of law enforcement personnel, or where unspecified as to circumstances upon which defendant is present, 29 ALR6th 1.

What constitutes "custodial interrogation" of adult by police officer within rule of Miranda v. Arizona requiring that suspect be informed of federal constitutional rights before custodial interrogation — at police station or sheriff's office, where defendant voluntarily appears or appears at request of law enforcement personnel, or where unspecified as to circumstances upon which defendant is present, 30 ALR6th 103.

What constitutes "custodial interrogation" at hospital by police officer within rule of Miranda v. Arizona requiring that suspect be informed of his federal constitutional rights before custodial interrogation — suspect hospital visitor, not patient, 31 ALR6th 465.

What constitutes "custodial interrogation" of adult by police officer within rule of Miranda v. Arizona requiring that suspect be informed of federal constitutional rights before custodial interrogation — at police station or sheriff's office, where defendant is escorted or accompanied by law enforcement personnel, or is otherwise at station or office involuntarily, 32 ALR6th 1.

What constitutes "custodial interrogation" by police officer within rule of Miranda v. Arizona requiring that suspect be informed of his or her federal constitutional rights before custodial interrogation — at police vehicle, where defendant outside, but in immediate vicinity, 34 ALR6th 1.

What constitutes "custodial interrogation" by police officer within rule of Miranda v. Arizona requiring that suspect be informed of his or her federal constitutional rights before custodial interrogation — at police vehicle, where defendant in moving vehicle, or where unspecified as to whether vehicle moving or stationary, 35 ALR6th 127.

What constitutes "custodial interrogation" within rule of Miranda v. Arizona requiring that suspect be informed of federal constitutional rights before custodial interrogation — in jail or prison, 38 ALR6th 97.

Propriety of using otherwise inadmissible statement, taken in violation of Miranda rule, to impeach criminal defendant's credibility — state cases, 42 ALR6th 237.

What constitutes "custodial interrogation" by police officer within rule of Miranda v. Arizona requiring that suspect be informed of federal constitutional rights before custodial interrogation — upon hotel property, 45 ALR6th 337.

Suppression of statements made during police interview of non-English-speaking defendant, 49 ALR6th 343.

What constitutes "custodial interrogation" within rule of requiring that suspect be informed of his federal constitutional rights before custodial interrogation — private security guards, detectives, or police, 51 ALR6th 219.

What constitutes "custodial interrogation" by police officer within rule of Miranda v. Arizona requiring that suspect be informed of his or her federal constitutional rights before custodial interrogation — at nonpolice vehicle for traffic stop, where defendant outside, but in immediate vicinity of vehicle, or where unspecified as to whether inside or outside of nonpolice vehicle, 55 ALR6th 513.

Availability of sole shareholder's Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination to resist production of corporation's books and records--modern status, 87 ALR Fed. 177.

Construction and application of provision of Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968, as amended (18 USCS § 3501(c)), that defendant's confession shall not be inadmissible in evidence in federal criminal prosecution solely because of delay in presentment before magistrate, 124 ALR Fed. 263.

Duty of court, in federal criminal prosecution, to conduct inquiry into voluntariness of accused's statement — modern cases, 132 ALR Fed. 415.

Construction and application of constitutional rule of Miranda — Supreme Court Cases, 17 ALR Fed. 2d 465.

Paragraph XVII. Bail; fines; punishment; arrest, abuse of prisoners.

Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted; nor shall any person be abused in being arrested, while under arrest, or in prison.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIV.

Cross references. — Bail and punishment, U.S. Const., amend. 8. Cruel and unusual punishment, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXI and § 38-2-1055. Bail, §§ 5-4-20, 5-6-45, 5-7-5, 17-6-1 et seq., 17-7-24, and 17-13-36. Pauper's bail, § 5-4-20. Rights of one refused bail, § 17-7-50. Capital punishment, §§ 17-10-30 and 17-10-38. Abuse of prisoners, §§ 42-4-5 and 42-5-58.

Law reviews. — For article, "The Georgia Bill of Rights: Dead or Alive?," see 34 Emory L.J. 341 (1985). For annual survey on criminal law and procedure, see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 141 (1990). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 765 (1996). For article, "Campbell v. Georgia: Mandatory Minimum Sentencing Survives Separation of Power Attacks, Remaining a Viable Option for the Legislature in Its War on Crime," see 17 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 637 (2001). For annual survey of death penalty law, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 479 (2006). For annual survey of death penalty law, see 58 Mercer L. Rev. 111 (2006).

For note, "Communist Aliens and the Right to Bail," see 2 J. of Pub. L. 165 (1953). For note discussing constitutional problems with the bail system, see 4 Ga. St. B.J. 278 (1967). For note, "Bail in Georgia: Elimination of 'Double Bonding' — A Partially Solved Problem," see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 220 (1971). For note, "Behind Closed Doors: An Empirical Inquiry Into the Nature of Prison Discipline in Georgia,” see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 919 (1974). For note, “Not So Shocking: The Death of the Electric Chair in Georgia at the Hands of the Georgia Supreme Court in Dawson v. State,” see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 1695 (2002).

For comment on Burger v. State, 118 Ga. App. 328, 163 S.E.2d 333 (1968), see 5 Ga. St. B.J. 384 (1969).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

ARREST

BAIL

FINES

CRUEL AND UNUSUAL PUNISHMENT

General Consideration

Acceptable fines. — It is not an excessive fine to require the perpetrator of fraud to pay double the amount of the debt sought to be evaded by the fraudulent act. Conley v. State, 85 Ga. 348, 11 S.E. 659 (1890); Hathcock v. State, 88 Ga. 91, 13 S.E. 959 (1891).

Excessive damages. — In an action against a truck manufacturer, a punitive damages award of $2 million was not so excessive as to violate the due process clauses of the Georgia and United States Constitutions, the Eighth Amendment of the United States Constitution, and the excessive fines clause of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII. Mack Trucks, Inc. v. Conkle, 263 Ga. 539, 436 S.E.2d 635 (1993).

Duty of police to refrain from unlawfully assaulting or killing prisoner. — It is the duty of an arresting officer who has a person under arrest for a violation of law to refrain from unlawfully assaulting or killing the prisoner. Powell v. Fidelity & Deposit Co., 45 Ga. App. 88, 163 S.E. 239 (1932).

Actions of deputy at security checkpoint. — In a suit based on the actions of a deputy sheriff at a courthouse security checkpoint, official immunity barred the plaintiff attorney’s battery claim under the Georgia Constitution because the summary judgment evidence did not show actual malice or intent to cause injury. West v. Davis, 767 F.3d 1063 (11th Cir. 2014).

Imposition of consecutive sentence to replace concurrent sentence may be impermissible. — The imposition of a new sentence to be served consecutively to a sentence on a prior conviction, in place of a vacated sentence that was to be served concurrently with the sentence on that prior conviction, may constitute an impermissible harsher punishment. Thomas v. State, 150 Ga. App. 341, 258 S.E.2d 28 (1979).

Contempt sentence imposed on defendant contrary to spirit of law. —

When, in sentencing the defendant for contempt of court for failure to obey a court order to return the daughter to custody of the wife after a one-day visitation, the court imposed a sentence for each technical contempt, and the court rendered but one judgment, a fine of $11,900.00 and confinement in jail for over three years, the sentence is contrary to the spirit of the law of the state and against the state’s policy since the law limits the punishment for a single contempt to the maximum of $200.00 and 20 days in jail, no matter how malicious, how flagrant, and how iniquitous the act of contempt might be. Kenimer v. State ex rel. Webb, 81 Ga. App. 437, 59 S.E.2d 296 (1950), later appeal, 83 Ga. App. 264, 63 S.E.2d 280 (1951).

Death penalty instructions must include life sentence alternative. —

It is error to provide a sentencing phase instruction in a death penalty case which fails to explain that a life sentence may be recommended even in the presence of statutory aggravating circumstances. Stynchcombe v. Floyd, 252 Ga. 113, 311 S.E.2d 828 (1984).

State need not reduce capital sentence which is authorized under its own laws merely because of the effects of another state's judicial processes, brought about by the operation of the Interstate Agreement on Detainers. Cobb v. State, 244 Ga. 344, 260 S.E.2d 60 (1979).

Forfeiture of property. — Case involving the forfeiture of 5.1 acres of land and a dwelling house on the basis of the discovery of 8.8 ounces of marijuana would be remanded to the trial court for consideration in light of the decision in Thorp v. State, 264 Ga. 712, 450 S.E.2d 416 (1994). Evans v. State, 217 Ga. App. 646, 458 S.E.2d 859 (1995).

Cited in Payne v. State, 180 Ga. 609, 180 S.E. 130 (1935); Crosby v. Courson, 181 Ga. 475, 182 S.E. 590 (1935); McGraw v. State, 85 Ga. App. 857, 70 S.E.2d 141 (1952); Massey v. State, 220 Ga. 883, 142 S.E.2d 832 (1965); Massey v. State, 222 Ga. 143, 149 S.E.2d 118 (1966); Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461 (1967); Strozier v. State, 116 Ga. App. 777, 159 S.E.2d 182 (1967); Irwin v. Arrendale, 117 Ga. App. 1, 159 S.E.2d 719 (1967); Stuart v. State, 117 Ga. App. 183, 160 S.E.2d 409 (1968); Grice v. State, 224 Ga. 376, 162 S.E.2d 432 (1968); Henderson v. Dutton, 397 F.2d 375 (5th Cir. 1968); Wilson v. Kelley, 294 F. Supp. 1005 (N.D. Ga. 1968); Cushway v. State Bar, 120 Ga. App. 371, 170 S.E.2d 732 (1969); Goodine v. Griffin, 309 F. Supp. 590 (S.D. Ga. 1970); Callahan v. State, 229 Ga. 737, 194 S.E.2d 431 (1972); Reed v. State, 134 Ga. App. 47, 213 S.E.2d 147 (1975); Crawford v. State, 236 Ga. 491, 224 S.E.2d 365 (1976); Gunn v. State, 150 Ga. 730, 257 S.E.2d 538 (1979); Southerland v. Ga. Dep't of Corr., 293 Ga. App. 56, 666 S.E.2d 383 (2008).

Arrest

Use of choke-hold resulted in officer's suspension. — Police officer was properly suspended for using a choke-hold on a handcuffed suspect in an attempt to prevent the suspect from swallowing narcotics in violation of department rules; there was nothing in Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII, to suggest that because the use of a choke-hold was reasonable under some circumstances, the officer had the right to use it. Mercure v. City of Atlanta Civil Service Board, 327 Ga. App. 840, 761 S.E.2d 393 (2014).

Bail

This paragraph does not determine any right to bail, or in what cases it exists. Vanderford v. Brand, 126 Ga. 67, 54 S.E. 822, 9 Ann. Cas. 617 (1906).

Discretion of court in setting bail amount. — The amount of bail to be assessed in each criminal case is left to the sound legal discretion of the court required to fix it and, in the absence of a flagrant abuse of such discretionary power, the court's action will not be controlled. Reid v. Perkerson, 207 Ga. 27, 60 S.E.2d 151 (1950).

Entitlement to bail as matter of right. — The accused in all criminal cases less than capital felonies, before trial, is entitled to bail, at least twice, as a matter of right and not as a matter of discretion. Reid v. Perkerson, 207 Ga. 27, 60 S.E.2d 151 (1950).

Excessive bail is equivalent of refusal to grant bail, and in such a case habeas corpus is an available and appropriate remedy for relief. Reid v. Perkerson, 207 Ga. 27, 60 S.E.2d 151 (1950).

Excessive bail prohibitions apply in misdemeanor cases after conviction. — The constitutional prohibitions against excessive bail set forth in U.S. Const., amend. 8 and this paragraph apply in misdemeanor cases after conviction. Jones v. Grimes, 219 Ga. 585, 134 S.E.2d 790 (1964).

$100,000 bail in cocaine case held not excessive. — Setting bail in the total amount of $100,000 in a case involving two charges of selling crack cocaine was not excessive when the trial judge was apprised of the defendant's lengthy residency in the community and the defendant's financial status, and weighed these factors against the serious nature and potential consequences of the charges. Mayfield v. State, 198 Ga. App. 252, 401 S.E.2d 297 (1990).

$250,000 bail in murder case held not excessive. — In a prosecution for murder, based upon the seriousness of the offense charged and the likelihood that defendant would not appear at trial, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in holding that bail of $250,000, as originally set, was not excessive. Mullinax v. State, 271 Ga. 112, 515 S.E.2d 839 (1999).

Bail (Cont'd)

Bail in the amount of $750,000 was not excessive since the defendant had prior felony convictions and the trial court's decision to increase bail at this habeas proceeding was based on other information not available at the first hearing. Pullin v. Dorsey, 271 Ga. 882, 525 S.E.2d 87 (2000).

Waiver of Fourth Amendment rights proper as condition of bail. — Waiver by the defendant, while free on bond for drug offenses, of rights under U.S. Const., amend. 4 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIII as a bond condition, was constitutional under U.S. Const., amend. 8 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII; it was a reasonable exercise of the trial court's function of balancing the rights of the accused with public safety interests. Rocco v. State, 267 Ga. App. 900, 601 S.E.2d 189 (2004).

Denial of bail not an abuse of discretion nor grounds for habeas petition. — Petitioner charged with 16 counts of violating the Georgia RICO Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-14-1, securities fraud, and theft, who owned no assets in the United States and had allegedly funneled significant assets to Belize, where the petitioner traveled frequently, was not entitled to bail as of right under O.C.G.A. § 17-6-1(a), Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII, or U.S. Const., amend. VIII. The denial of bail was not an abuse of discretion, and petitioner was not entitled to a writ of habeas corpus. Constantino v. Warren, 285 Ga. 851, 684 S.E.2d 601 (2009).

Fines

Provisions of Tort Reform Act unconstitutional. — Provisions of the Tort Reform Act, O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1, relating to punitive damages, violated the due process and equal protection clauses of the federal and state constitutions, violated the excessive fines provisions of both constitutions, and violated the double jeopardy provision of the Fifth Amendment to the federal constitution. McBride v. GMC, 737 F. Supp. 1563 (M.D. Ga. 1990).

Fine did not violate defendant's constitutional rights. — When the defendant was convicted of trafficking cocaine in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31 and was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment and fined $100,000, the fine was not out of proportion to the severity of the crime and not constitutionally infirm either because of the fine's mandatory nature or the fine's amount. Wyatt v. State, 259 Ga. 208, 378 S.E.2d 690 (1989).

Punitive damages in civil cases. — The excessive fines clause of this section applies to the imposition of punitive damages in civil cases. Colonial Pipeline Co. v. Brown, 258 Ga. 115, 365 S.E.2d 827, appeal dismissed, 488 U.S. 805, 109 S. Ct. 36, 102 L. Ed. 2d 15 (1988).

A $5,000,000 punitive damages award to the owner of a bulldozer which was destroyed when it hit an improperly marked underground petroleum pipeline was excessive since: (1) any negligence present was passive; (2) there was no bodily injury to the plaintiff and the award did not bear a rational relationship to the actual damages award; and (3) there was no rational relationship between the offense and the punishment in that the punitive damage award was 100 times the property damage award. Colonial Pipeline Co. v. Brown, 258 Ga. 115, 365 S.E.2d 827, appeal dismissed, 488 U.S. 805, 109 S. Ct. 36, 102 L. Ed. 2d 15 (1988).

Cruel and Unusual Punishment

State constitution provides same protection as Fourteenth Amendment. — Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII, which states that no person shall be abused while under arrest, provides an independent state ground for this action, and provides at least as much protection to pretrial detainees under certain circumstances as the Fourteenth Amendment due process clause. Long v. Jones, 208 Ga. App. 798, 432 S.E.2d 593 (1993).

Arrestee's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suit against a county sheriff, alleging that the arrestee was raped by a deputy at the county jail, failed as a matter of law because § 1983 relief did not extend to inadequate hiring practices, and the arrestee failed to raise a fact question as to the constitutional failure to protect, staff, and train claims against the sheriff individually; because the arrestee had not suffered a federal Eighth Amendment violation, the arrestee also had not suffered a violation under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII. Boyd v. Nichols, 616 F. Supp. 2d 1331 (M.D. Ga. 2009).

Prohibition relates to sentences for criminal convictions. — The prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment has relation to punishment imposed by sentences on conviction for criminal offenses. Hill v. State, 119 Ga. App. 612, 168 S.E.2d 327 (1969).

Statutes authorizing capital punishment constitutional. — The imposition of the penalty of death upon one who rapes a woman is not “cruel and unusual” punishment. Sims v. Balkcom, 220 Ga. 7, 136 S.E.2d 766 (1964); Vanleeward v. State, 220 Ga. 135, 137 S.E.2d 452 (1964), cert. denied, 380 U.S. 982, 85 S. Ct. 1348, 14 L. Ed. 2d 275 (1965).

A sentence to death by electrocution for murder is not “cruel and unusual punishment”. Trimble v. State, 220 Ga. 229, 138 S.E.2d 274 (1964).

The death penalty for the crime of murder is not cruel and unusual punishment. Whisman v. State, 221 Ga. 460, 145 S.E.2d 499 (1965), cert. denied, 384 U.S. 895, 86 S. Ct. 1977, 16 L. Ed. 2d 1001 (1966).

The statutes of this state authorizing capital punishment have repeatedly been held not to be cruel and unusual punishment in violation of the Constitution. Hart v. State, 227 Ga. 171, 179 S.E.2d 346 (1971).

Petitioner, a death row inmate, challenged the imposition of the death penalty, in a federal habeas petition arguing that the death penalty was being administered in a racially discriminatory manner; however, the argument failed because the statistical evidence was not so strong as to permit no inference other than that the results were the product of a racially discriminatory intent or purpose in that the death penalty was sought in 58 percent of the possible death penalty cases where the defendant was black but in only 40 percent of the cases where the defendant was white, and sought in only 25 percent of the cases where the victim was black and 54 percent of the cases where the victim was white. Jefferson v. Terry, 490 F. Supp. 2d 1261 (N.D. Ga. 2007), aff’d in part and rev’d in part, 570 F.3d 1283 (11th Cir. Ga. 2009).

Proportionality review. — Defendant’s conviction was affirmed as the Georgia Supreme Court’s proportionality review was neither unconstitutional nor inadequate under Georgia statutory law. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50 (2007).

Execution by electrocution. — As electrocution inflicts purposeless violence and needless mutilation, in violation of the Georgia Constitution’s proscription of cruel and unusual punishments, future executions of death sentences are to be carried out by lethal injection only. Dawson v. State, 274 Ga. 327, 554 S.E.2d 137 (2001).

Execution of the mentally retarded constitutes cruel and unusual punishment. Fleming v. Zant, 259 Ga. 687, 386 S.E.2d 339 (1989).

Death sentence proper despite defendant’s mental illness. — Defendant, who was not found by the jury to be mentally ill, was not entitled to have the death sentence vacated on mental illness grounds, as O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 did not preclude a death sentence on mental illness grounds, and there was no constitutional prohibition under U.S. Const., amend. 8 or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII against a death sentence for a competent but mentally ill defendant. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 756, 620 S.E.2d 778 (2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671 (2006).

Death penalty for codefendant not proven to have directly committed murderous act. — Since the defendant was not only present but active and participating throughout the commission of kidnapping, rape, murder and aggravated assault of which the defendant was convicted, imposition of the death penalty was not excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases even though it was not established whether defendant or the codefendant fired the gunshots which killed the victim. Johnson v. Zant, 249 Ga. 812, 295 S.E.2d 63 (1982).

Cruel and UnusualPunishment (Cont'd)

Barbarities of quartering are forbidden. Whitten v. State, 47 Ga. 297 (1872).

Paddling of children in public school is not cruel and unusual punishment, yet any punishment beyond corporal punishment as is reasonably necessary may result in remedial action to deter excesses. Fuller v. Williams, 150 Ga. App. 730, 258 S.E.2d 538, rev'd on other grounds, 244 Ga. 846, 262 S.E.2d 135 (1979).

This paragraph does not put any limit upon legislative discretion to punish one convicted of crime so long as the legislature does not provide cruel and unusual punishments such as disgraced the civilization of former ages, and make one shudder with horror to read of them, as drawing, quartering, burning, or other acts; this paragraph does not put any limit upon legislative discretion to punish one convicted of a crime. Sims v. Balkcom, 220 Ga. 7, 136 S.E.2d 766 (1964); Dutton v. Smart, 222 Ga. 35, 148 S.E.2d 396 (1966).

Certain discretion as to term of imprisonment may be left to trial judge. Whitten v. State, 47 Ga. 297 (1872).

Prosecutors did not have unfettered discretion. — Defendant's claim that the prosecutor's authority to choose in which cases to seek the death penalty permitted the possibility of an arbitrary and capricious abuse of discretion and was unconstitutional was rejected as prosecutors did not have unfettered discretion to seek the death penalty, and challenges to the Georgia legislature's determination that district attorneys should have the discretion to decide whether a murder defendant met the statutory criteria for the death penalty and whether to pursue the death penalty when a defendant was eligible had been repeatedly rejected. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50 (2007).

Sentence not for unspecified period. — Defendant's sentences did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment. Although defendant was remanded to jail for an unspecified period, until there was an opening for the defendant at a detention center, the defendant had not been sentenced for an unspecified period of time. The defendant received a 12 month sentence and had been permitted to serve that sentence on probation, provided the defendant comply with certain conditions. Boyd v. State, 204 Ga. App. 729, 420 S.E.2d 389 (1992).

Sentence within statutory limit will not be set aside. — When the sentence imposed by the trial court is within the limit fixed by the statute, the sentence will not be set aside and a new trial granted on the ground that the sentence imposed is excessive and the punishment cruel and unusual, and, therefore, in violation of the state Constitution. Curtis v. State, 102 Ga. App. 790, 118 S.E.2d 264 (1960).

A sentence is not cruel and inhumane within the constitutional inhibition so long as it is within the statutory limit. Boyd v. State, 204 Ga. App. 729, 420 S.E.2d 389 (1992).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, imposing mandatory minimum sentences in certain cases, does not impose unconstitutionally excessive punishment, and the fact that the defendants were 18 years old at the time of sentencing and may have been first offenders did not render the statute unconstitutional as applied to the defendants. Campbell v. State, 268 Ga. 44, 485 S.E.2d 185 (1997).

Claim by the defendant that a sentence pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 16-6-22.2(b) and 17-10-6.1(b)(2) constituted cruel and unusual punishment because the sentence was grossly out of proportion to the severity of the crime, and that the sentence was overly severe under the circumstances, was within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Georgia Supreme Court where the claim challenged the constitutionality of the statutes themselves; as the sentence was legally authorized and within statutory limits, the sentence was upheld. Colton v. State, 297 Ga. App. 795, 678 S.E.2d 521 (2009).

Sentence is not cruel and inhumane within constitutional inhibition so long as it is within statutory limit. Bearden v. State, 122 Ga. App. 25, 176 S.E.2d 243 (1970).

When the sentence imposed was the mandatory minimum sentence and was no greater than what could have been imposed under prior law, the punishment was not cruel and unusual as to be completely disproportionate to the offense. Paras v. State, 247 Ga. 75, 274 S.E.2d 451 (1981).

A life without parole sentence imposed on a juvenile who is not properly determined to be in the very small class of juveniles for whom such a sentence may be deemed constitutionally proportionate is not just erroneous but contrary to law and, as a result, void; it follows that state collateral review courts that are open to federal law claims must apply the holding of Miller v. Alabama, — U.S. —, 132 S.Ct. 2455 (2012), retroactively if a petitioner challenges such a sentence under the Eighth Amendment, and it follows, as a matter of Georgia procedural law, that a defendant's Miller claim, a substantive claim that, if meritorious, would render a sentence void, can be properly raised in an amended motion for new trial and in a direct appeal, despite the failure to raise the claim before the defendant was sentenced. Veal v. State, 298 Ga. 691 (2016).

Consecutive sentencing permissible. — Defendant who was convicted of simple battery and criminal trespass after defendant attacked defendant's spouse and defendant's mother-in-law and broke the windshield and at least one other window on the spouse's car was not subjected to cruel and unusual punishment because the trial court imposed a sentence of 12 months' incarceration for each charge, and ordered that the defendant serve the sentences consecutively. Hill v. State, 259 Ga. App. 363, 577 S.E.2d 61 (2003).

Imposition of maximum misdemeanor punishment excessive. — Imposition of the maximum misdemeanor punishment upon conviction for criminal trespass exceeded constitutional bounds against cruel and unusual punishment since the trespass involved the defendant's trimming of the defendant's neighbor's hedge. Haygood v. State, 225 Ga.

App. 81, 483 S.E.2d 302 (1997).

Excessive, unusual, and cruel sentence imposed. — Although under the law of the case, the trial court may be authorized to hold the defendant guilty of 238 separate contempts when the offenses are all nevertheless based on only one culpable intent there is one contempt coupled with that culpable intent, and 237 other technical violations. Therefore, all of the sentence of the trial court over and above the maximum fixed for the first offense, and in addition thereto amounts of imprisonment and fines for each of the remaining 237 technical violations totaling the equivalent of one other maximum offense, is an abuse of judicial discretion and so cruel and unusual as to contravene the state Constitution. Kenimer v. State, 83 Ga. App. 264, 63 S.E.2d 280 (1951).

No merit to contention that separate sentences constituted cruel and unusual punishment. — Contention that imposition of 36 separate sentences, to be computed consecutively, upon convictions on 36 separate and distinct counts, constituted cruel and unusual punishment, is without merit. Curtis v. State, 102 Ga. App. 790, 118 S.E.2d 264 (1960).

More severe sentence may be imposed upon resentencing, but vindictiveness must not be motivating force. — There is no absolute constitutional bar to imposing a more severe sentence upon resentencing, but vindictiveness must not be the motivating force behind an increased sentence. Pressley v. State, 158 Ga. App. 638, 281 S.E.2d 364 (1981).

Conduct justifying imposition of more severe sentence upon resentencing. — Reasons for imposing a more severe sentence must be based upon objective information concerning identifiable conduct on the part of the defendant occurring after the time of the original sentencing proceeding. Pressley v. State, 158 Ga. App. 638, 281 S.E.2d 364 (1981).

Factual data upon which increased sentence is based must be made part of record, so that constitutional legitimacy of increased sentence may be fully reviewed on appeal. Pressley v. State, 158 Ga. App. 638, 281 S.E.2d 364 (1981).

Maltreatment prior to trial does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment. — Maltreatment occurring prior to the time of the trial constitutes no part of the sentences imposed as a result of the trial and, therefore, does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment. Hill v. State, 119 Ga. App. 612, 168 S.E.2d 327 (1969).

Cruel and UnusualPunishment (Cont'd)

Permissible punishment. — Violator of an ordinance may be compelled to work on city streets. Loeb v. Jennings, 133 Ga. 796, 67 S.E. 101, 18 Ann. Cas. 376 (1910), aff'd, 219 U.S. 582, 31 S. Ct. 469, 55 L. Ed. 345 (1911).

Defendant failed to establish the threshold gross disproportionality inference needed to support a claim that the 10 years confinement, 10 years probation sentence imposed on the defendant violated U.S. Const., amend. VIII and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII; the sentence was within the sentencing range in O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4(b)(1), the 2006 amendment to O.C.G.A. § 16-6-4(b)(2) did not apply to the defendant, so it did not provide a basis for any proportionality argument, and the evidence showed that the defendant engaged in sexual intercourse with a 12-year-old child without the child's consent, and Georgia's child molestation law punished acts that were far less severe. Bragg v. State, 296 Ga. App. 422, 674 S.E.2d 650 (2009).

Juvenile's sentence of four years in custody was proper on six counts of aggravated assault and one count of possession of a handgun by an underage person because the juvenile was not subject to one of the most severe punishments allowed by law, but was sentenced under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-602), which had the central purpose of rehabilitation and treatment of the child and not punishment. In the Interest of T. D. J., 325 Ga. App. 786, 755 S.E.2d 29 (2014).

Appellant's sentence of two consecutive terms of life imprisonment plus 85 years was not cruel and unusual punishment, despite being 17 years old at the time of the crimes, since the trial court balanced the appellant's youth against the violent behavior and the adult conduct engaged in, which included the murder of two innocent bystanders. Jones v. State, 296 Ga. 663, 769 S.E.2d 901 (2015), overruled in part by Veal v. State, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 243 (Ga. 2016).

Impermissible punishment prescribed. — A municipal ordinance authorizing punishment of its prisoners by working on a chain gang with state prisoners is void. Pearson v. Wimbish, 124 Ga. 701, 52 S.E. 751, 4 Ann. Cas. 501 (1906).

Fine for contempt of discovery order. — When the per diem fine for contempt of a discovery order imposed by the trial court totaled $193,500, the Court of Appeals agreed with the defendant that the fine imposed was substantial but found no basis in the record for concluding that this punishment constituted cruel and unusual punishment. Carey Can., Inc. v. Hinely, 181 Ga. App. 364, 352 S.E.2d 398 (1986), rev'd on other grounds, 257 Ga. 150, 356 S.E.2d 202, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 898, 108 S. Ct. 233, 98 L. Ed. 2d 192 (1987).

Life sentence for second conviction of selling cocaine not cruel and unusual punishment. — O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d), which mandates a life sentence for a second conviction of selling cocaine, does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII. Stephens v. State, 261 Ga. 467, 405 S.E.2d 483 (1991).

O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(d), which mandates a sentence of life imprisonment upon a second conviction for selling cocaine, does not violate due process or equal protection and does not violate state or federal constitutional guarantees against cruel and unusual punishment. Isom v. State, 261 Ga. 596, 408 S.E.2d 701 (1991); Crutchfield v. State, 218 Ga. App. 360, 461 S.E.2d 555 (1995).

Mandatory child molestation sentence. — Mandatory sentence for aggravated child molestation of 10 years without parole pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 16-6-4(d)(1) and 17-10-6.1 was not cruel and unusual punishment as applied to the defendant, despite the fact that the defendant was 18 years old at the time of the act and the victim was only 4 years younger. Widner v. State, 280 Ga. 675, 631 S.E.2d 675 (2006).

Twenty-five year sentence for trafficking in methamphetamine. — When the defendant was in possession of 434.72 grams of methamphetamine, the sentence of 25 years in prison and a one million dollar fine was mandated; given the large quantity and value of the methamphetamine, the sentence required by the legislature was not wholly irrational or grossly disproportionate to the severity of the crime, and because trafficking in methamphetamine was so lucrative, the mandatory sentence did not constitute cruel and unusual punishment. Flores v. State, 277 Ga. App. 211, 626 S.E.2d 181 (2006).

Death by lethal injection is not unconstitutional under U.S. Const., amend. 8 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII, both of which prohibit cruel and unusual punishment. Lewis v. State, 279 Ga. 756, 620 S.E.2d 778 (2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1116, 126 S. Ct. 1917, 164 L. Ed. 2d 671 (2006).

Defendant's pre-trial motion regarding lethal injection and the defendant's amended motion for a new trial addressing lethal injection were properly denied as the defendant failed to identify any particular aspect of the evidence admitted in the trial court that would require a departure from the prior decisions holding that lethal injection was a constitutional form of execution. Williams v. State, 281 Ga. 87, 635 S.E.2d 146 (2006), cert. denied, 553 U.S. 1004, 128 S. Ct. 2046, 170 L. Ed. 2d 793 (2008).

Trial court did not err in rejecting a defendant's claim that lethal injection was unconstitutional as the defendant proffered no evidence to sustain the claim. Walker v. State, 281 Ga. 157, 635 S.E.2d 740 (2006), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 833, 128 S. Ct. 60, 169 L. Ed. 2d 50 (2007).

Life sentence for repeat offense of failing to register as sexual offender unconstitutional. — Imposition of a mandatory sentence of life imprisonment imposed against a defendant, who was a second time offender, for failing to register as a sexual offender was held unconstitutional as grossly disproportionate to the crime of failing to register. Bradshaw v. State, 284 Ga. 675, 671 S.E.2d 485 (2008).

Sentence of life in prison plus years consecutive for convictions of felony murder and armed robbery did not exceed the statutorily authorized maximum and did not amount to cruel and unusual punishment; the felony murder statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-1, authorized a sentence of life in prison on conviction for felony murder, and the armed robbery statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41, authorized a sentence of death or imprisonment for life or by imprisonment for not less than 10 nor more than 20 years. The trial court sentenced the defendant to life in prison for the felony murder conviction plus two 20-year terms, running concurrent to each other but consecutive to the felony murder sentence, for the two convictions for armed robbery, and thus the statutory maximum was not exceeded. Washington v. State, 285 Ga. 541, 678 S.E.2d 900 (2009).

Life sentence for aggravated child molestation not cruel and unusual. — Trial counsel was not ineffective in failing to object to the life sentence for aggravated child molestation as the defendant's sentence did not raise a threshold inference of gross disproportionality because the evidence established that the defendant, while engaged in sexual intercourse with a girlfriend, summoned the 14-year-old victim, who was working alongside other young women as a prostitute on the defendant's behalf, to the defendant's room and placed the defendant's sexual organ in the victim's mouth while the defendant's testicles were placed in the girlfriend's mouth. Pepe-Frazier v. State, 331 Ga. App. 263, 770 S.E.2d 654 (2015), cert. denied, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 412 (Ga. 2015).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 8 Am. Jur. 2d, Bail and Recognizance, §§ 29, 30. 21A Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 858 et seq.

Am. Jur. Trials. — Prisoners' Rights Litigation, 22 Am. Jur. Trials 1.

Asserting Claims of Unconstitutional Prison Conditions, 64 Am. Jur. Trials 425.

C.J.S. — 6A C.J.S., Arrest, § 59. 8 C.J.S., Bail; Release and Detention Pending Proceedings, § 69. 24B C.J.S., Criminal Law, § 1984.

ALR. — Manner of inflicting death sentence as cruel or unusual punishment, 30 ALR 1452.

Liability for death of or injury to prisoner, 46 ALR 94; 50 ALR 268; 61 ALR 569.

Constitutionality of statutes in relation to treatment or discipline of convicts, 50 ALR 104.

Amount of bail required in criminal action, 53 ALR 399.

Rights and responsibilities, civil or criminal, of police officers in respect of examination of persons under arrest ("third degree"), 79 ALR 457.

Constitutionality and construction of statute enhancing penalty for second or subsequent offense, 82 ALR 345; 116 ALR 209; 132 ALR 91; 139 ALR 673.

Constitutionality of statute providing for penalty or forfeiture as affected by failure to fix maximum amount, 114 ALR 1126.

Court's power and duty, pending determination of habeas corpus proceeding on merits, to admit petition to bail, 56 ALR2d 668.

Insanity of accused as affecting right to bail in criminal case, 11 ALR3d 1385.

Right of motorist stopped by police officers for traffic offense to be informed at that time of his federal constitutional rights under Miranda v. Arizona, 25 ALR3d 1076.

Length of sentence as violation of constitutional provisions prohibiting cruel and unusual punishment, 33 ALR3d 335.

Applicability, in proceedings under statutes relating to sexual psychopaths, of constitutional provisions for the protection of a person accused of crime, 34 ALR3d 652.

Right of exonerated arrestee to have fingerprints, photographs, or other criminal identification or arrest records expunged or restricted, 46 ALR3d 900; 58 ALR4th 902.

Prison conditions as amounting to cruel and unusual punishment, 51 ALR3d 111.

Review for excessiveness of sentence in narcotics case, 55 ALR3d 812.

Drug addiction or related mental state as defense to criminal charge, 73 ALR3d 16.

Pretrial preventive detention by state court, 75 ALR3d 956.

Application of state statutes establishing pretrial release of accused on personal recognizance as presumptive form of release, 78 ALR3d 780.

Validity of a state statute imposing mandatory sentence or prohibiting granting of probation or suspension of sentence for narcotics offenses, 81 ALR3d 1192.

Modern status of right of peace officer to use deadly force in attempting to arrest fleeing felon, 83 ALR3d 174.

Validity, construction, and effect of Uniform Alcoholism and Intoxication Treatment Act, 85 ALR3d 701.

Constitutionality of state legislation imposing criminal penalties for personal possession or use of marijuana, 96 ALR3d 225.

Validity and construction of statute or ordinance mandating imprisonment for habitual or repeated traffic offender, 2 ALR4th 618.

Judicial power to order discontinuance of life-sustaining treatment, 48 ALR4th 67.

False light invasion of privacy—accusation or innuendo as to criminal acts, 58 ALR4th 902.

Propriety of imposing capital punishment on mentally retarded individuals, 20 ALR5th 177.

State statutes or ordinances requiring persons previously convicted of crime to register with authorities, 36 ALR5th 161.

Propriety of carrying out death sentences against mentally ill individuals, 111 ALR5th 491.

Application of constitutional rule of Atkins v. Virginia, 536 U.S. 304, 122 S. Ct. 2242, 153 L. Ed. 2d 335 (2002), that execution of mentally retarded persons constitutes “cruel and unusual punishment” in violation of Eighth Amendment, 122 ALR5th 145.

When does forfeiture of real property violate excessive fines clause of Eighth Amendment or state constitutions — State cases, 124 ALR5th 509.

When does use of pepper spray, mace, or other similar chemical irritants constitute violation of constitutional rights, 65 ALR6th 93.

Prison inmate’s Eighth Amendment rights to treatment for sleep disorders, 68 ALR6th 389.

When does forfeiture of currency, bank account, or cash equivalent violate excessive fines clause of Eighth Amendment, 164 ALR Fed. 591.

When does forfeiture of real property violate excessive fines clause of Eighth Amendment — post-Austin cases, 168 ALR Fed. 375.

When does forfeiture of motor vehicle pursuant to federal statute violate excessive fines clause of Eighth Amendment, 169 ALR Fed. 615.

Excessive fines clause of Eighth Amendment — Supreme Court cases, 172 ALR Fed. 389.

Paragraph XVIII. Jeopardy of life or liberty more than once forbidden.

No person shall be put in jeopardy of life or liberty more than once for the same offense except when a new trial has been granted after conviction or in case of mistrial.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XV.

Cross references. — Due process of law and just compensation, U.S. Const., amend. 5, and §§ 16-1-6 et seq., and 38-2-438. Bail for juveniles, § 15-11-507. Multiple jeopardy in grand jury proceedings, § 17-7-53. Plea of nolo contendere constituting jeopardy, § 17-7-95.

Law reviews. — For article, “Personal Rights, Property Rights and Due Process: A Comparison of Constitutional Protection in the Georgia Supreme Court and the United States Supreme Court,” see 9 Mercer L. Rev. 253 (1958). For article discussing developments in Georgia Criminal Law in 1976 to 1977, see 29 Mercer L. Rev. 55 (1977). For article, “Mistrials and the Double Jeopardy Clause,” see 14 Ga. L. Rev. 45 (1979). For annual survey of criminal law and procedure, see 35 Mercer L. Rev. 103 (1983). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on constitutional criminal procedure, see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 765 (1996).

For note, “The Posture of Former Jeopardy on Retrial,” see 9 Mercer L. Rev. 354 (1958).

For comment discussing appeal by state after acquittal, in light of State v. Evjue, 254 Wisc. 581, 37 N.W.2d 50 (1949), see 1 Mercer L. Rev. 306 (1950). For comment on State v. Vaughn, 207 Ga. 583, 63 S.E.2d 357 (1951), see 14 Ga. B.J. 72 (1951). For comment on Busbee v. State, 183 So. 2d 27 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 1966), discussing multiple prosecutions of distinct offenses arising from the same transaction, see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 304 (1966).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

SEPARATE OFFENSES

DOUBLE JEOPARDY

1. IN GENERAL

2. WHEN JEOPARDY ATTACHES

3. SAME TRANSACTION TEST

JEOPARDY AND TRIAL PROCEDURE

1. IN GENERAL
2. MISTRIALS
3. NEW TRIALS
4. SENTENCING

General Consideration

Definition of liberty. — Liberty, as used in this paragraph, is not confined to detention of the person, but embraces every inalienable right of the citizen. Jenkins v. State, 14 Ga. App. 276, 80 S.E. 688 (1914).

Nolle prosequi entered after jeopardy attached amounts to acquittal. Reynolds v. State, 3 Ga. 53 (1847); Franklin v. State, 85 Ga. 570, 11 S.E. 876 (1890).

No applicability of former jeopardy concept to certain traffic violations. — The constitutional concept of former jeopardy has a strict application to criminal prosecutions only, and will not be invoked when the traffic violations resulting in the mandatory suspension of a driver's license are subsequently included in a determination of the driver's status as a habitual offender. Williams v. State, 138 Ga. App. 662, 226 S.E.2d 816 (1976).

Distinction between successive prosecutions for speeding and for driving under influence. — When a motorist is charged with speeding and driving under the influence in two counties, the motorist may be tried and convicted in both counties for speeding, but a conviction for driving under the influence in one county will bar prosecution in the other as this charge arises out of the same conduct in both counties. State v. Willis, 149 Ga. App. 509, 254 S.E.2d 743 (1979).

Statutes expand proscription of double jeopardy. — The 1968 Georgia Criminal Code expanded the proscription of double jeopardy beyond that provided for in the United States and Georgia Constitutions. Therefore, questions of double jeopardy in Georgia must now be determined under the expanded statutory proscriptions of former Code 1933, §§ 26-505, 26-506, 26-507 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 16-1-6, 16-1-7, and 16-1-8). Consequently, previous Georgia decisions applying constitutional standards of double jeopardy will generally not be applicable. State v. Estevez, 232 Ga. 316, 206 S.E.2d 475 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Drinkard v. Walker, 281 Ga. 211, 636 S.E.2d 530 (2006); State v. Warren, 133 Ga. App. 793, 213 S.E.2d 53 (1975).

Effect of jeopardy and statute of limitations on subsequent prosecutions when previous general accusation. — When a case belongs to the class of cases, such as possession of nontax-paid liquor when the state by the generality of the indictment need not be confined to proof of any specific date or transaction within the period of limitation, the result is that a plea of nolo contendere for a prior particular crime will usually operate as a bar for any such offense committed within the period of limitation previously to the second indictment, since to hold otherwise would twice place the defendant in jeopardy. Key v. State, 83 Ga. App. 839, 65 S.E.2d 278 (1951).

Following defendant's conviction in superior court under an accusation which charged the defendant in general terms with the possession of alcoholic liquors, such conviction would operate as a bar to another prosecution for the same offense committed at any time within the two-year period immediately preceding the filing of the accusation. Gilstrap v. State, 90 Ga. App. 12, 81 S.E.2d 872 (1954).

When the state by the generality of the accusation is not confined to proof of any specific date or transaction within the period of the statute of limitations, the result is that a prosecution for a particular crime operates as a bar for any such offense committed within the period of limitation prior to the return of the accusation. Hawks v. State, 94 Ga. App. 594, 95 S.E.2d 764 (1956).

Defendant in jeopardy for second time when trial for lesser included offense. — When the conviction or acquittal is upon an indictment covering no more than one of the smaller crimes included within a larger, since it is impossible one should be convicted of the larger without being also convicted of the smaller, thus, if one has been so found guilty or not guilty of the smaller, one is, when on trial for the larger, in jeopardy a second time for the offense, namely, the smaller offense. Jordan v. State, 75 Ga. App. 815, 44 S.E.2d 821 (1947).

No error in proceeding upon subsequent indictment in criminal case while previous indictment is still pending. Lastinger v. State, 84 Ga. App. 760, 67 S.E.2d 411 (1951).

In a criminal proceeding, the pendency of a former indictment for the same offense is no ground for a plea in abatement or in bar, although the accused may have been arraigned thereon and have filed a plea, as when several indictments for the same offense are pending against the same person, it is immaterial upon which the accused is first tried. Whenever the accused has been acquitted or convicted upon any one of them, the accused can plead such acquittal or conviction in bar of a prosecution of the others. Lastinger v. State, 84 Ga. App. 760, 67 S.E.2d 411 (1951).

The pendency of a prior indictment for the same offense based on the same facts for which the defendant was arraigned on and entered a plea did not place the defendant in jeopardy. Defendant did not face a repeated prosecution simply because the defendant was tried on a subsequent indictment. Hubbard v. State, 225 Ga. App. 154, 483 S.E.2d 115 (1997).

No former jeopardy when trial under void accusation. — A plea of former jeopardy cannot be predicated on the fact that the defendant has previously been put on trial under a void accusation, that accusation being an absolute nullity, the defendant could not waive defects therein and consent that the trial proceed. Culpepper v. State, 44 Ga. App. 351, 161 S.E. 849 (1931).

Constitutions control rights when successive prosecutions involved. — When successive municipal and state prosecutions are involved, a criminal defendant's rights are controlled solely by the state and federal Constitutions. State v. Burroughs, 244 Ga. 288, 260 S.E.2d 5 (1979), rev'd on other grounds, 448 U.S. 903, 100 S. Ct. 3044, 65 L. Ed. 2d 1134 (1980).

Double jeopardy does not preclude use of acquitted crime as ground for probation revocation. — The principle of double jeopardy does not preclude the use of a crime, for which a probationer has been acquitted by a jury, as a ground for revocation of probation. Johnson v. State, 240 Ga. 526, 242 S.E.2d 53, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 881, 99 S. Ct. 221, 58 L. Ed. 2d 194 (1978).

Retrial on count quashed for second time controlled by statute. — Retrial of a charge of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon would not itself violate double jeopardy or any other constitutional right since the right not to be prosecuted on a count which was quashed for the second time was purely statutory pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-7-53.1. Langlands v. State, 282 Ga. 103, 646 S.E.2d 253 (2007).

Venue. — Venue is jurisdictional in Georgia so as to allow its being raised by general grounds of motion for new trial, but it does not go to guilt or innocence of accused and this is not substantive such that jeopardy attaches. Patterson v. State, 162 Ga. App. 455, 291 S.E.2d 567 (1982).

Because the state failed to prove the element of venue beyond a reasonable doubt, and there was no indication in the record that the juvenile waived the requirement or that the court took judicial notice of venue as an element of the offenses charged, the juvenile's adjudications of delinquency had to be reversed. However, although the delinquency adjudications had to be reversed, the state was permitted to retry the juvenile without violating the Double Jeopardy Clause, because there was otherwise sufficient evidence at trial to support the adjudications entered. In the Interest of J.B., 289 Ga. App. 617, 658 S.E.2d 194 (2008).

Cited in Reed v. State, 163 Ga. 206, 135 S.E. 748 (1926); Cliett v. State, 167 Ga. 835, 147 S.E. 35 (1929); Hall v. State, 41 Ga. App. 455, 153 S.E. 534 (1930); State v. B'Gos, 175 Ga. 627, 165 S.E. 566 (1932); Burns v. State, 191 Ga. 60, 11 S.E.2d 350 (1940); Williams v. State, 66 Ga. App. 93, 17 S.E.2d 83 (1941); Manry v. State, 77 Ga. App. 43, 47 S.E.2d 817 (1948); Dodd v. State, 85 Ga. App. 589, 69 S.E.2d 784 (1952); McGraw v. State, 85 Ga. App. 857, 70 S.E.2d 141 (1952); Massey v. State, 222 Ga. 143, 149 S.E.2d 118 (1966); Harwell v. State, 230 Ga. 480, 197 S.E.2d 708 (1973); Marchman v. State, 132 Ga. App. 677, 209 S.E.2d 88 (1974); Singer v. State, 156 Ga. App. 416, 274 S.E.2d 612 (1980); Walker v. State, 156 Ga. App. 478, 274 S.E.2d 680 (1980); State v. Abdi, 162 Ga. App. 20, 288 S.E.2d 772 (1982); Swafford v. State, 161 Ga. App. 139, 291 S.E.2d 3 (1982); Brooks v. State, 162 Ga. App. 485, 292 S.E.2d 89 (1982); State v. Hightower, 252 Ga. 220, 312 S.E.2d 610 (1984); Taylor v. State, 177 Ga. App. 624, 340 S.E.2d 263 (1986); Riley v. State, 181 Ga. App. 667, 353 S.E.2d 598 (1987); Eidson v. State, 182 Ga. App. 321, 355 S.E.2d 691 (1987); Cox v. State, 203 Ga. App. 869, 418 S.E.2d 133 (1992); Johnson v. State, 258 Ga. App. 33, 572 S.E.2d 669 (2002); Bentley v. State, 262 Ga. App. 541, 586 S.E.2d 32 (2003); Seymour v. State, 262 Ga. App. 823, 586 S.E.2d 713 (2003); Usher v. State, 290 Ga. App. 710, 659 S.E.2d 920 (2008); Freeman v. State, 329 Ga. App. 429, 765 S.E.2d 631 (2014).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Separate Offenses

Prohibition against second jeopardy for same offense signifies same criminal act or omission. — The words “same offense,” in this paragraph, prohibiting a second jeopardy, do not signify the same offense eo nomine, but the same criminal act or omission. Crumley v. City of Atlanta, 68 Ga. App. 69, 22 S.E.2d 181 (1942).

Single act may constitute two or more distinct and separate offenses. Dutton v. Smart, 222 Ga. 35, 148 S.E.2d 396 (1966).

No violation when act results in injury to two or more persons. — When an unlawful act is committed resulting in the injury or death of two or more persons in the operation of a motor vehicle, the accused may be convicted of two or more crimes if two or more persons are the victims, without violating the constitutional provisions as it relates to former jeopardy. Wellons v. State, 77 Ga. App. 652, 48 S.E.2d 922 (1948).

Upon conviction of defendant of three counts of homicide by vehicle under O.C.G.A. § 40-6-393 through a violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391, the driving under the influence statute, it was not a violation of double jeopardy to sentence defendant to 15 years for each of the homicide counts. Cox v. State, 243 Ga. App. 668, 533 S.E.2d 435 (2000).

Offender may be convicted of both offenses when they are not same offense. — If the offense is one of assault with intent to murder, and assault with intent to rob by an assault with an offensive or dangerous weapon or instrument, and the evidence supports an intent to murder and an intent to rob, the offender may be convicted of assault with intent to murder and assault with intent to rob. Under the provisions of this paragraph, the offenses are not the same offenses, although the offenses include the same occasion, time, and place. Martin v. State, 77 Ga. App. 297, 48 S.E.2d 485 (1948).

Even if a defendant is convicted for the same transaction as a matter of fact of both burglary and assault with intent to rape, the offenses are legally separate and distinct since not only are the elements of the crimes of burglary and assault with intent to rape substantially different, but the former crime is one against the habitation while the latter is a crime against the person, and, therefore, the defendant could not have been placed in former jeopardy. Dutton v. Smart, 222 Ga. 35, 148 S.E.2d 396 (1966).

When a defendant engaged in two separate courses of conduct, one, the attempt to sell marijuana to an undercover police officer, and two, possession of 12 pounds of marijuana at defendant's home, double jeopardy did not attach to the second prosecution, as these acts occurred at different times and locations, with distinct quantities of contraband, even though defendant might have at some earlier time possessed all the marijuana in defendant's home. Kinchen v. State, 265 Ga. App. 474, 594 S.E.2d 686 (2004).

Separate convictions for armed robbery and hijacking a motor vehicle did not violate the state and federal prohibitions against double jeopardy, as the latter constituted a separate offense warranting a separate sanction under Georgia law, thus warranting an additional punishment. Dumas v. State, 283 Ga. App. 279, 641 S.E.2d 271 (2007).

Punishment by different governmental entities. — One may be punishable by the state, the other by the municipality. Hood v. Von Glahn, 88 Ga. 405, 14 S.E. 564 (1892).

An acquittal under an indictment charging the accused with the offense of using obscene and vulgar language in the presence of a female will not operate to bar a prosecution for using opprobrious words and abusive language to and of another, even though both indictments related to the same act. McIntosh v. State, 116 Ga. 543, 42 S.E. 793 (1902).

One offense may be punishable by the state and the other by the federal government. Cooley v. State, 152 Ga. 469, 110 S.E. 449 (1922), appeal dismissed, 260 U.S. 760, 43 S. Ct. 251, 67 L. Ed. 501 (1923).

Multiple offenses may be punishable by the state. Two assault with murder convictions were not the same and in no sense involved any construction of the constitutional provision; and by determining that the trial court committed no error in that finding, there was no constitutional question to be decided. Fews v. State, 1 Ga. App. 122, 58 S.E. 64 (1907).

Financial transaction card theft not lesser included offense of financial transaction card fraud. — Financial transaction card theft, O.C.G.A. § 16-9-31, is not a lesser included offense of financial transaction card fraud, O.C.G.A. § 16-9-33; thus, defendant's prior conviction for the former offense did not preclude prosecution for the latter. Sword v. State, 232 Ga. App. 497, 502 S.E.2d 334 (1998).

Mere different descriptions in two indictments or two charges will not constitute different offenses. Crumley v. City of Atlanta, 68 Ga. App. 69, 22 S.E.2d 181 (1942).

Evidence must be sufficient to show distinct transactions when several counts contained in indictment. — Where separate counts are contained in an indictment, the evidence must be sufficient as to each count and must be sufficient to show that the several counts relate to distinct transactions; otherwise, a defendant may be convicted more than once for the same offense in violation of this section. Estes v. State, 98 Ga. App. 521, 106 S.E.2d 405 (1958).

Multiple prosecutions barred when one offense included in another. — When a person has been put in jeopardy of a conviction of an offense which is a necessary element in, and constitutes an essential part of, another offense, such jeopardy is a bar to subsequent prosecution for the latter offense, if founded upon the same act. Gully v. State, 116 Ga. 527, 42 S.E. 790 (1902).

Lesser included offense. — A conviction based on a greater offense bars a subsequent conviction for a lesser included offense if both convictions are based on proof of the same facts. Bailey v. State, 184 Ga. App. 890, 363 S.E.2d 172 (1987).

A conviction based on a lesser included offense bars a subsequent conviction for a greater offense if both convictions are based on proof of the same facts. Bailey v. State, 184 Ga. App. 890, 363 S.E.2d 172 (1987).

In order for the rule that jeopardy for an offense ends after a jury convicts a defendant of a lesser-included offense to apply, there must be an unambiguous conviction of the lesser offense, and the trial court must have given the jury full opportunity to return a verdict on the greater charge. Potts v. State, 258 Ga. 430, 369 S.E.2d 746 (1988), cert. denied, 489 U.S. 1068, 109 S. Ct. 1347, 103 L. Ed. 2d 815 (1989).

Crimes separate for purposes of double jeopardy and multiple prosecution. — As a matter of law, the crime of illegal possession of heroin is not included in the crime of illegal sale of heroin for the purposes of double jeopardy and multiple prosecution. Wilson v. Hopper, 234 Ga. 859, 218 S.E.2d 573 (1975).

Although both indictments against the defendant alleged similar schemes to defraud lending institutions, double jeopardy protections under O.C.G.A. §§ 16-1-7(b), 16-1-8(b), and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII did not bar the second prosecution; the indictments involved different properties, different co-conspirators, different real estate transactions, and, for the most part, different lenders, and the fact that the two separate conspiracies may have overlapped in time and resulted in violations of the same criminal statutes was not determinative. Harrison v. State, 282 Ga. App. 29, 637 S.E.2d 773 (2006).

Separate Offenses (Cont'd)

Defendant's guilty pleas for aggravated assault with intent to rape in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-21(a)(1) and kidnapping in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-5-40(a) were not accepted in violation of the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy because the offenses did not merge as a matter of law since each of the offenses was separate and required proof of different facts; the state asserted that the defendant had dragged the victim from the front of a laundromat facility into a bathroom in the back of the facility, which formed a basis for the kidnapping charge, and that the defendant had sexually assaulted the victim while holding the victim in the bathroom, which formed a basis for the aggravated assault with the intent to rape charge. Shelton v. State, 307 Ga. App. 599, 705 S.E.2d 699 (2011).

Hijacking of motor vehicle. — The statute prohibiting the hijacking of a motor vehicle does not violate the prohibition against double jeopardy since the double jeopardy clause of the Georgia Constitution does not prohibit additional punishment for a separate offense which the General Assembly has deemed to warrant separate sanction. Mathis v. State, 273 Ga. 508, 543 S.E.2d 712 (2001).

Multiple offenses for multiple viewings of obscene films. — Double jeopardy rights are not denied when defendant is convicted of multiple offenses for numerous showings of obscene film. A separate offense occurs each time the obscene film is shown. Dyke v. State, 232 Ga. 817, 209 S.E.2d 166 (1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 952, 95 S. Ct. 1687, 44 L. Ed. 2d 106 (1975).

Burglary and murder not lesser-included offenses. — For substantive double-jeopardy purposes, neither a burglary conviction nor a murder conviction is a lesser-included offense within the other, since proof of additional elements must necessarily be shown to establish each crime. Cash v. State, 258 Ga. 460, 368 S.E.2d 756 (1988).

Effect of error in failing to require state to elect which indictment to proceed upon. — An indictment for assault with intent to murder charging the commission of that offense on the part of the defendant by pointing, aiming at, and attempting to shoot and kill the prosecutor by pulling the trigger of a pistol, and the indictment charging the offense of pointing a pistol at another, being the same pointing essential to constitute the crime in each instance, the trial court erred in denying a timely motion of the defendant requiring the state to elect upon which of the two indictments it would proceed. The error was harmful to the defendant, who, on conviction under both indictments, was sentenced to two consecutive terms of imprisonment for the single offense. Davis v. State, 100 Ga. App. 308, 111 S.E.2d 116 (1959).

Defendant properly sentenced on separate counts of attempting to elude police. — Trial court properly sentenced the defendant on five separate counts of attempting to elude a police officer because the evidence supported the jury's conclusion that the defendant willfully led police on a dangerous high speed chase after being given clear signals by five separate police vehicles to stop; it is the act of fleeing from an individual police vehicle or police officer after being given a proper visual or audible signal to stop from that individual police vehicle or officer, and not just the act of fleeing itself, that forms the proper "unit of prosecution" under O.C.G.A. § 40-6-395. Smith v. State, 290 Ga. 768, 723 S.E.2d 915 (2012).

Double Jeopardy1. In General

Georgia Constitution is less protective than the Fifth Amendment, for it recognizes an exception to the bar against double jeopardy when the first trial ends in mistrial. State v. Oliver, 188 Ga. App. 47, 372 S.E.2d 256, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 47, 372 S.E.2d 256 (1988).

Protection of right. — The right not to be put in jeopardy a second time for the same cause is as sacred as the right of trial by jury, and is guarded with much care by the common law and by the Constitution. Hines v. State, 41 Ga. App. 294, 152 S.E. 616 (1930).

Double jeopardy is applied to criminal prosecutions alone. Keenan v. Hardison, 245 Ga. 599, 266 S.E.2d 205 (1980).

This constitutional provision has application only to crime and not to civil contempt. City of Macon v. Massey, 214 Ga. 589, 106 S.E.2d 23 (1958).

This paragraph is applicable only to a crime, but a contempt, whether it be civil or criminal, is not a crime within the purview of this section of the Constitution. Garland v. State, 101 Ga. App. 395, 114 S.E.2d 176 (1960).

Indictment must identify victim, if known. — When the defendant was charged by indictment with crimes against a minor victim who was identified by initials only, the court found that such was insufficient because the defendant was entitled to be charged by an indictment in perfect form; failure to identify the victim with a full name, if known, violated the defendant's constitutional rights to due process under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I and U.S. Const., amend. 5, as well as the defendant's double jeopardy rights under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII and U.S. Const., amend. 5. Sellers v. State, 263 Ga. App. 144, 587 S.E.2d 276 (2003).

Accusation did not expose defendant to double jeopardy. — Accusation was sufficient because if, after jeopardy had attached, any other proceedings were taken against the defendant arising out of a domestic incident, the defendant could plead a former acquittal or conviction because the accusation set forth specific acts and adequately defined the offenses of battery, family violence battery, and criminal trespass. The state would not be able to charge the defendant with a new offense simply by alleging that the defendant struck the victim or the victim's closet door with an object. State v. Leatherwood, 326 Ga. App. 730, 757 S.E.2d 434 (2014).

Determination must begin with criminal statute itself. — Whether multiple punishment is permissible under the rubric of substantive double jeopardy requires examination of the legislative intent underlying the criminal statute because it is for the legislature to determine to what extent certain criminal conduct has demonstrated more serious criminal interest and damaged society and to what extent it should be punished; the question of whether a course of conduct can result in multiple violations of the same statute requires a determination of the "unit of prosecution," or the precise act or conduct that is being criminalized under the statute; thus, the starting point must be the statute itself. State v. Marlowe, 277 Ga. 383, 589 S.E.2d 69 (2003).

Suspension of a driver's license at an administrative hearing was not punishment, nor was the hearing a prosecution for the purposes of double jeopardy thus, a subsequent criminal prosecution for driving under the influence was not barred. Nolen v. State, 218 Ga. App. 819, 463 S.E.2d 504 (1995), cert. denied, 518 U.S. 1018, 116 S. Ct. 2550, 135 L. Ed. 2d 1070 (1996).

Payment of the fee required for reinstatement of a driver's license after it was suspended following an arrest for driving under the influence was not punishment and did not bar a subsequent prosecution for driving under the influence. Thompson v. State, 229 Ga. App. 526, 494 S.E.2d 306 (1997); Morgan v. State, 229 Ga. App. 861, 495 S.E.2d 138 (1998).

Modification of bond conditions were not criminal punishment for double jeopardy purposes. — Conducting a hearing to modify the bond conditions of a third-time DUI offender and placing limitations upon the offender's driving privileges, predicated upon the necessity to protect the welfare and safety of the citizens of Georgia from a recidivist offender, was not punishment, nor was the hearing prosecution, for the purposes of double jeopardy. Strickland v. State, 300 Ga. App. 898, 686 S.E.2d 486 (2009).

Application of O.C.G.A. § 16-1-7. — Given that a charge of DUI served as the predicate act underlying a charge of serious injury by vehicle, thus constituting a lesser included crime of the serious injury by vehicle, O.C.G.A. § 16-1-7(a) barred conviction of and punishment for both; hence, in light of this incongruence, defendant's DUI conviction and sentence, as well as the sentence for serious injury by vehicle, were vacated. Hannah v. State, 280 Ga. App. 230, 633 S.E.2d 800 (2006).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Ten-day suspension from school following defendant's arrest and indictment for armed robbery did not rise to the level of "punishment" for double jeopardy purposes. Clark v. State, 220 Ga. App. 251, 469 S.E.2d 250 (1996).

Forfeiture proceedings not a bar to prosecution. — Double jeopardy did not attach to bar prosecution of defendant on state drug charges following federal civil forfeiture proceedings because defendant's failure to contest the forfeiture meant the defendant was not placed in jeopardy in those proceedings and, also, Georgia constitutional and statutory provisions did not bar the prosecution because they apply only to criminal proceedings, not civil proceedings. Waye v. State, 219 Ga. App. 22, 464 S.E.2d 19 (1995).

A civil federal forfeiture action was neither punishment nor criminal for purposes of the double jeopardy clause. Battista v. State, 223 Ga. App. 369, 477 S.E.2d 665 (1996).

Forfeiture proceedings did not bar a criminal prosecution based on application of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII since such proceedings have been held to be primarily remedial in nature. Manley v. State, 224 Ga. App. 661, 482 S.E.2d 416 (1997); Cuellar v. State, 230 Ga. App. 203, 496 S.E.2d 282 (1998).

Civil commitment and life imprisonment did not constitute double jeopardy violation. — Civil commitment, following finding that the defendant was not guilty by reason of insanity of malice murder, and a sentence of life imprisonment based on convictions for felony murder, with a finding of guilty but mentally ill, did not violate the defendant's double jeopardy rights under U.S. Const., amend. 5 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, as the civil commitment procedure under O.C.G.A. § 17-7-131 was not punitive in nature.

Shepherd v. State, 280 Ga. 245, 626 S.E.2d 96 (2006).

Questions of double jeopardy in Georgia must be determined under the expanded statutory proscriptions found in O.C.G.A. §§ 16-1-6, 16-1-7, and 16-1-8, which place limitations upon multiple prosecutions, convictions, and punishments for the same criminal conduct. Stone v. State, 166 Ga. App. 245, 304 S.E.2d 94 (1983).

Failure to establish venue does not bar re-trial in a court where venue is proper and proven. Kimmel v. State, 261 Ga. 332, 404 S.E.2d 436 (1991).

Absent sufficient proof to establish venue, the defendant's aggravated sexual battery and aggravated sodomy convictions were reversed; but, given that sufficient evidence otherwise existed to support the former charge, retrial on the sexual battery would not violate the defendant's double jeopardy rights. Melton v. State, 282 Ga. App. 685, 639 S.E.2d 411 (2006).

When the appellate court held in a juvenile delinquency case that the evidence supported the adjudication but that the state had not proven venue, the state could retry the defendant without violating the double jeopardy clause because there was otherwise sufficient evidence at trial to support the adjudication based on the crimes charged. In the Interest of D.D., 287 Ga. App. 512, 651 S.E.2d 817 (2007).

Plea of nolo contendere constitutes former jeopardy. Fortson v. Hopper, 242 Ga. 81, 247 S.E.2d 875 (1978).

Administrative convictions not double jeopardy. — Suspension of defendant's operator's license pursuant to administrative proceedings did not constitute former punishment foreclosing prosecution for driving under the influence in violation of double jeopardy provisions. Jackson v. State, 218 Ga. App. 677, 462 S.E.2d 802 (1995).

State has no right to appeal from a verdict by a jury in a criminal case based on an error of law or of fact because this section prevents double jeopardy. Register v. State, 10 Ga. App. 623, 74 S.E. 429 (1911), later appeal, 12 Ga. App. 1, 76 S.E. 649 (1912), later appeal, 12 Ga. App. 688, 78 S.E. 142 (1913).

Retrial barred by successful appeal including finding that evidence did not authorize verdict. — The reversal of the defendants' convictions for felony murder based upon armed robbery due to insufficient evidence not only raised a procedural double jeopardy bar for that particular crime, but also raised a procedural double jeopardy bar for the lesser-included offense of criminal attempt to commit armed robbery. Prater v. State, 273 Ga. 477, 541 S.E.2d 351 (2001).

Subsequent prosecution not barred since prosecutor had no earlier knowledge. — Because the defendant failed to affirmatively show that the prosecutor had any actual knowledge regarding approximately $300,000 worth of jewelry items found in a toolbox located at the defendant's residence upon an eviction, which were the subject of a second theft prosecution involving jewelry the defendant had stolen, the second prosecution regarding those items was not barred on double jeopardy grounds. White v. State, 284 Ga. App. 805, 644 S.E.2d 903 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 564 (Ga. 2007).

Conviction for violating municipal ordinance. — Because conviction of a violation of a municipal ordinance subjects a person to stigma and punishment by incarceration or fine, a defendant prosecuted in a municipal court proceeding is in "jeopardy" in the constitutional sense. Holcomb v. Peachtree City, 187 Ga. App. 258, 370 S.E.2d 23 (1988).

Order barring the defendant's prosecution for aggravated assault and aggravated battery on double jeopardy grounds based on the defendant's prior guilty plea to violating a disorderly conduct ordinance, a charge arising from the same fight, was error because the defendant failed to set forth the elements of the ordinance, and failed to properly plead and prove the ordinance; Georgia courts were not allowed to take judicial notice of local ordinances, but, rather, they must have been alleged and proved by production of the original or of a properly certified copy. Further, because the defendant failed to prove below that the charges could have been brought within the jurisdiction of a single court and that the proper prosecuting attorney knew of the recorder's court proceedings, the trial court was not authorized to grant the plea in bar under O.C.G.A. § 16-1-7(b). State v. Jeffries, 298 Ga. App. 141, 679 S.E.2d 368 (2009).

Consideration of murder in federal sentencing not a bar to state prosecution. — Double jeopardy did not bar the state from prosecuting defendant for murder even though the federal district court had considered the murder in its sentencing of defendant for bank robbery. Nance v. State, 266 Ga. 816, 471 S.E.2d 216 (1996), cert. denied, 519 U.S. 1043, 117 S. Ct. 615, 136 L. Ed. 2d 539 (1996).

Mere overreaching or harassment by the prosecutor, without a finding the prosecutorial misconduct was intended to subvert the protections of the double jeopardy clause, would not bar retrial of defendant's case pursuant to Georgia law. State v. Oliver, 188 Ga. App. 47, 372 S.E.2d 256, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 47, 372 S.E.2d 256 (1988).

Prosecutor's failure to follow instruction of the trial court to avoid questions concerning a witness' credibility did not bar retrial since the prosecutor's mistakes were made in good faith and there was no intention to provoke a mistrial. State v. Oliver, 188 Ga. App. 47, 372 S.E.2d 256, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 47, 372 S.E.2d 256 (1988).

Waiver by plea agreement ineffectual. — Since the defendant had already pled guilty, been sentenced, and completed sentence for certain crimes, an effort to re-indict the defendant based on the defendant's violation of a plea agreement that defendant would not seek public office was properly dismissed on the grounds of double jeopardy; defendant's agreement to submit to such prosecution by waiving any bar to prosecution, regardless of the failure to mention double jeopardy, was ineffectual. State v. Barrett, 215 Ga. App. 401, 451 S.E.2d 82 (1994), rev'd on other grounds, 265 Ga. 489, 458 S.E.2d 620 (1995).

Improper revocation of bond. — Incarceration of defendant resulting from the improper revocation of the defendant's bond was not a bar to prosecution for vehicular homicide and related offenses.

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Shaw v. State, 225 Ga. App. 193, 483 S.E.2d 646 (1997).

Extension of juvenile disposition order. — Provision permitting the juvenile court to extend an order of disposition for two years did not violate the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy since it operated to further the accomplishment of the juvenile's treatment and rehabilitation. In re T.B., 268 Ga. 149, 486 S.E.2d 177 (1997).

Corporations. — Georgia Supreme Court has declared that because a corporation is a person pursuant to Georgia law, the corporation is entitled to due process and equal protection from the state; thus, a corporation is entitled to the double jeopardy protection afforded by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII. Wilbros, LLC v. State, 294 Ga. 514, 755 S.E.2d 145 (2014).

Drug possession and multiple convictions. — Trial court did not err when the court granted the defendant's plea in bar as to the second accusation for possession of Xanax because the state had charged the defendant with the identical crime of possession of an unspecified amount of Xanax on a prior date in two accusations, the second of which was brought after the defendant had pled guilty to the first. State v. Pruiett, 324 Ga. App. 789, 751 S.E.2d 579 (2013).

Trial court erred by granting the defendant's plea in bar as to the second accusation's charges for possession of methamphetamine, clonazepam, and marijuana because the defendant could not have been convicted of possession of those drugs in a former prosecution, which involved only Xanax. State v. Pruiett, 324 Ga. App. 789, 751 S.E.2d 579 (2013).

No double jeopardy found. — Defendant's plea of double jeopardy failed because the directed verdict on the weapon possession count did not prevent retrial on the murder charges. Moody v. State, 272 Ga. 55, 525 S.E.2d 360 (2000).

Evidence at defendant's first trial was sufficient to sustain convictions for aggravated sodomy pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-6-2(a), sexual battery pursuant to

O.C.G.A. § 16-6-22.1, and aggravated sexual battery pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-6-22.2(b); thus, double jeopardy did not prohibit a retrial granted on the ground that defendant received ineffective assistance of counsel. Weldon v. State, 270 Ga. App. 574, 607 S.E.2d 175 (2004).

No double jeopardy if conviction reversed for ineffective assistance of counsel. — Because defendant's conviction for possession of cocaine was reversed due to a finding that trial counsel rendered ineffective assistance for failing to object to the admission of cocaine without establishing an adequate chain of custody, and for failing to preserve objections to the jury instructions, retrial was not barred by the double jeopardy clause of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII and U.S. Const., amend. 5, as the evidence offered by the state and admitted by the trial court, whether erroneous or not, would have been sufficient to sustain a guilty verdict against the defendant. Wilson v. State, 271 Ga. App. 359, 609 S.E.2d 703 (2005).

Defendant's conviction of hijacking a motor vehicle and armed robbery were properly entered, despite defendant's contention that the state used the same facts to establish both offenses and that defendant should have only been convicted of and sentenced for one of the offenses, as: (1) hijacking a motor vehicle was considered a separate offense and did not merge with any other offense; (2) O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1 superseded the double jeopardy provisions of O.C.G.A. § 16-1-7 in motor vehicle hijacking cases; (3) O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1(d) did not violate the prohibition against double jeopardy, since the double jeopardy clause of the Georgia Constitution did not prohibit additional punishment for a separate offense which the legislature deemed to warrant separate sanction; and (4) defendant failed to offer any evidence in support of defendant's allegation that O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1(d) otherwise violated defendant's double jeopardy rights. Holman v. State, 272 Ga. App. 890, 614 S.E.2d 124 (2005).

Variance between indictment and evidence did not pose risk of double jeopardy violation. — Fact that an indictment charged the defendant with aggravated assault and battery by slicing the victim's neck with a knife, but the evidence showed the defendant used a box cutter, did not constitute a fatal variance between the indictment and the proof, because the defendant was sufficiently informed of the charges and faced no danger of further prosecution arising out of the incident. Lawson v. State, 278 Ga. App. 852, 630 S.E.2d 131 (2006).

Defendant's separate convictions for armed robbery and hijacking a motor vehicle did not violate the prohibitions against double jeopardy as O.C.G.A. § 16-5-44.1(d) provided that hijacking a motor vehicle was a separate offense and did not merge and it therefore superseded the state statutory double jeopardy provision; further, the Georgia Constitution did not prohibit additional punishment for a separate offense that the Georgia legislature warranted a separate sanction; the defendant failed to show how the hijacking statute violated the federal double jeopardy clause. Mullins v. State, 280 Ga. App. 689, 634 S.E.2d 850 (2006).

Discrepancy in presentment not double jeopardy violation. — Trial court did not err in allowing the manufacturing methamphetamine offense to proceed to the jury under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-30(b); despite the poor wording of the caption of the count at issue, which stated "trafficking in methamphetamine," because the body of the count clearly charged the defendant with manufacturing methamphetamine, and the defendant failed to show how the defendant was misled by the presentment, nor did it expose the defendant to double jeopardy in violation of U.S. Const., amend. 5 or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII. Gentry v. State, 281 Ga. App. 315, 635 S.E.2d 782 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 78 (Ga. 2007).

Because no evidence showed that the information concerning the defendant was known to the proper prosecuting officer in Gwinnett County, and because no basis otherwise existed for a charge of conspiracy to traffic based on what officers recovered in the search of the defendant's home, the appeals court refused to state that the defendant could have been convicted of conspiracy to traffic methamphetamine in Gwinnett County, or that Gwinnett County should have charged the defendant with this crime; hence, under these circumstances, the Dawson County indictment was not barred under O.C.G.A. §§ 16-1-6(b)(1) and 16-1-7(b). Bradford v. State, 283 Ga. App. 75, 640 S.E.2d 630 (2006).

Because a plea of double jeopardy was found to be frivolous, the defendant's filing of a notice of appeal from the denial of an earlier double jeopardy plea did not divest the trial court of jurisdiction over the case, and hence the filing of a notice of appeal merely deprived the trial court of the court's power to execute the sentence; thus, because the sentence was not imposed against the defendant until after the remittitur was filed below, that sentence was upheld. DeSouza v. State, 285 Ga. App. 201, 645 S.E.2d 684 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 539 (Ga. 2007).

Prosecution under dual sovereignty doctrine of double jeopardy clause. — As the defendant's theft by taking an automobile occurred in both Georgia and Kentucky, the fact that the defendant was prosecuted in Kentucky did not bar Georgia from also prosecuting the defendant under the dual sovereignty doctrine of the double jeopardy clause; further, O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8(c) was inapplicable because there was not a federal prosecution for the same crime. Jackson v. State, 284 Ga. 826, 672 S.E.2d 640 (2009).

Second indictment, which was apparently filed to address the eventuality that the defendants' motion to withdraw a guilty plea would be granted, was returned while the defendant's jeopardy was ongoing, and, as such, the indictment did not violate U.S. Const., amend. V, and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, or O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8. Phillips v. State, 298 Ga. App. 520, 680 S.E.2d 424 (2009).

Fact that the defendant had been convicted in federal court of possession of a firearm under 18 U.S.C. § 922 did not bar a felony murder prosecution in state court on double jeopardy grounds as the state had to prove facts in the felony murder case that were not required to be proved in the federal case. Moreover, the federal offense, which required that a firearm be possessed in and affecting interstate commerce, was not within the concurrent jurisdiction of Georgia and under O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8(c) did not bar a subsequent prosecution for felony murder predicated on the underlying firearm possession charge. Marshall v. State, 286 Ga. 446, 689 S.E.2d 283 (2010).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Defendant's convictions for two counts of aggravated stalking based on the defendant's following and contacting the victim did not merge for sentencing purposes because there was sufficient evidence from which the jury could find that the defendant, in violation of a protective order, both followed the victim to a hotel and then contacted the victim; the act of following was complete when the defendant arrived at the premises of the hotel because, at that time, the defendant violated the protective order by coming within 500 feet of a place where the victim was residing. Louisyr v. State, 307 Ga. App. 724, 706 S.E.2d 114 (2011).

Implied consent to mistrial waived right to double jeopardy plea. — Although defense counsel had an opportunity to raise an objection after the court announced its intention to excuse the jurors and before the jurors returned to the courtroom, counsel failed to do so; therefore, the trial court was authorized to find that defendant, through counsel, impliedly consented to the grant of a mistrial and defendant's plea of double jeopardy made during the trial was properly denied. Howell v. State, 266 Ga. App. 480, 597 S.E.2d 546 (2004).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in declaring a mistrial and abridging defendant's constitutional right to be tried by the originally impaneled jury without first considering less drastic alternatives when the assigned courtroom was unavailable at the appointed time. The procedure the court used was flawed, not the result. A trial court is not categorically required to grant a continuance under similar circumstances; merely the court should consider a continuance as an alternative to declaring a mistrial. Since the trial court told defense counsel that if the defendant did not plead guilty, the court would declare a mistrial, the court took little or no heed to McGee's constitutional rights thereby constituting an abuse of discretion. McGee v. State, 287 Ga. App. 839, 652 S.E.2d 822 (2007).

Sentencing error corrected by Supreme Court of Georgia on appeal averted double jeopardy violation. —

While the defendant was correct in asserting that the trial court should not have imposed sentence on both felony murder guilty verdicts, the Supreme Court of Georgia corrected that error on appeal when it affirmed the judgment of conviction and sentence only on the count 3 guilty verdict, and the defendant's argument was not based on what actually occurred, but upon speculation that, had the trial court imposed the correct sentence, it would have done so by merging count 3 into count 2. Thus, even assuming, arguendo, that such speculation warranted a review of the sentence imposed, such presented no basis for reversal because nothing required the trial court to merge the two counts in the way the defendant proposed. Brady v. State, 283 Ga. 359, 659 S.E.2d 368 (2008).

Exclusion from drug court program did not violate double jeopardy ban. —

Denying a defendant access to the drug court program under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-2(a), which had been a condition of the defendant's guilty plea, was not a double jeopardy violation as the trial court did not involuntarily withdraw the guilty plea, but offered the defendant the option of withdrawing the plea or accepting one of several alternative sentences. Moreover, agreeing to attend drug court was not a "sentence," and completion of the drug court contract was dependent on the defendant's completing the drug court program. Evans v. State, 293 Ga. App. 371, 667 S.E.2d 183 (2008).

Failure to preserve for review. —

Court would not consider a pro se defendant's double jeopardy argument when the issue had not been raised below. Bruster v. State, 291 Ga. App. 490, 662 S.E.2d 265 (2008).

2. When Jeopardy Attaches

No jeopardy if original court lacked jurisdiction. — Since the defendant's original trial was before a court which lacked jurisdiction, the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's plea of former jeopardy. Jackett v. State, 209 Ga. App. 112, 432 S.E.2d 586 (1993).

No double jeopardy if prior judgment was void. — Because a uniform traffic citation was deliberately withheld from filing, and the state did not authorize or participate in the prosecution of the case, the probate court lacked authority to accept defendant's plea to the proposed charge and impose a fine, making its resulting judgment void; hence, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's plea in bar based on double jeopardy, since the probate court's void judgment could not serve as the basis for barring the subsequent indictment and prosecution of defendant in the superior court. Roberts v. State, 280 Ga. App. 672, 634 S.E.2d 790 (2006).

Threshold question regarding jeopardy. — The threshold question to be addressed in any case involving double jeopardy is whether jeopardy has attached to defendant during the proceedings which the defendant contends preclude further prosecution. Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325 (1980).

When jeopardy attaches. — Jeopardy attached when the defendant is arraigned in a valid indictment. Conley v. State, 85 Ga. 348, 11 S.E. 659 (1890); Barrs v. State, 22 Ga. App. 642, 97 S.E. 86, cert. denied, 22 Ga. App. 803 (1918).

A defendant is placed in constitutional jeopardy when, in a court of competent jurisdiction with a sufficient indictment, a defendant has been arraigned, has pled, and a jury has been impaneled and sworn. State v. Martin, 173 Ga. App. 370, 326 S.E.2d 558 (1985).

Trial court's grant of a defendant's motion for a mistrial over two months after a guilty verdict had been returned was void as a mistrial could not be entered after the verdict was returned; motions for mistrial were not to be confused with motions for a new trial, which were appropriate after the verdict was returned, and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, provided for double jeopardy protection except when a new trial had been granted after the conviction or in the case of a mistrial.

State v. Sumlin, 281 Ga. 183, 637 S.E.2d 36 (2006).

Jeopardy attaches when jury impaneled and sworn or when court begins to hear evidence. — In the case of a jury trial, jeopardy attaches when a jury is impaneled and sworn. In a nonjury trial, jeopardy attaches when the court begins to hear evidence. Franklin v. State, 85 Ga. 570, 11 S.E. 876 (1890); White v. State, 143 Ga. App. 315, 238 S.E.2d 247 (1977); Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325 (1980).

Jeopardy attaches when the issue is joined and the defendant's plea of not guilty by reason of insanity and evidence is presented to the court sitting alone as the trier of the facts and the law. White v. State, 143 Ga. App. 315, 238 S.E.2d 247 (1977).

Defendants were not placed in jeopardy before the trial court granted the state's Batson challenge and dismissed a jury that was selected to try them on charges of armed robbery and possession of a firearm during the commission of a crime because the jury was never empaneled and sworn, and the trial court did not err when it denied defendants' plea in bar and proceeded with trial. Garlington v. State, 268 Ga. App. 264, 601 S.E.2d 793 (2004).

Jeopardy did not attach at a motion to suppress hearing. — Defendant's plea in bar based on double jeopardy was properly denied because a motion to suppress hearing in a recorder's court, even with sworn testimony, did not trigger double jeopardy safeguards. Tremelling v. State, 263 Ga. App. 418, 587 S.E.2d 785 (2003).

Jeopardy attaches after witness sworn. — Allowing the solicitor more time to prepare for trial was not a proper basis for terminating a bench trial since the first witness had already been sworn and particularly since the case was completely terminated and then started anew before an entirely different judge. Due to this improper termination, double jeopardy attached. Puplampu v. State, 257 Ga. App. 5, 570 S.E.2d 83 (2002).

In a criminal matter wherein the state brought charges against defendant, a bench trial was commenced, witnesses were sworn in and testified, and the state thereafter terminated that case when it nolle prossed the charges over defendant's objection, jeopardy attached under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. 1, Para. XVIII, and under O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8(a)(2), the state could not thereafter retry defendant on the same charges; although the state's reason for nolle prossing the first set of charges was due to its inability to introduce DNA evidence as to defendant's identity, as it failed to include that information in the indictment in order to avoid a limitations issue, the reason was inconsequential because jeopardy had attached. State v. Aycock, 283 Ga. App. 876, 643 S.E.2d 249 (2007).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)2. When Jeopardy Attaches (Cont'd)

Double jeopardy for city court to stop trial and bind defendant over to superior court. — When there is nothing in an Act establishing a city court which authorizes the judge of that court to discontinue a trial and bind over the accused to the next superior court, if, after hearing the evidence, the judge should be of the opinion that the defendant is guilty of an offense which is beyond the jurisdiction of such criminal court, it constitutes double jeopardy for the judge to stop the trial and bind the defendant over to the superior court to be tried for a felony. Jordan v. State, 75 Ga. App. 815, 44 S.E.2d 821 (1947).

Jeopardy does not attach at a probation revocation hearing so as to invoke the double jeopardy clause. Smith v. State, 171 Ga. App. 279, 319 S.E.2d 113 (1984).

Admission of crimes at juvenile transfer hearing. — Jeopardy did not attach so as to preclude further proceedings against a juvenile for crimes admitted at a transfer hearing since the juvenile court accepted the admission for the limited purpose of determining whether the case should be transferred to superior court. In re M.E.J., 260 Ga. 805, 401 S.E.2d 254 (1991).

Motion in limine hearing in recorder's court. — When a recorder's court granted a defendant's motion in limine and dismissed DUI and failure to yield charges against the defendant, the state was not barred from bringing the same charges in a state court; the motion in limine hearing did not trigger double jeopardy safeguards, and because a ruling on a motion in limine was subject to modification at trial to prevent manifest injustice, it did not result in a final judgment limiting issues under the doctrine of collateral estoppel or bar another trial. Thomas v. State, 287 Ga. App. 124, 650 S.E.2d 793 (2007).

Aggravating circumstances in death penalty action. — Trial court properly convicted and sentenced defendant on charges of armed robbery and burglary, because the fact that those acts served as aggravating circumstances in relation to defendant's murder charge pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30(b) did not trigger double jeopardy, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. 1, Para. XVIII. Jones v. State, 279 Ga. 854, 622 S.E.2d 1 (2005).

Swearing in of jury required for jeopardy to attach. — Defendant did not receive ineffective assistance of trial counsel due to counsel's failure to object to the second trial on the ground of double jeopardy because the jury was never sworn in the first trial, and jeopardy did not attach. Neal v. State, 308 Ga. App. 551, 707 S.E.2d 503 (2011).

Trial court erred in holding that jeopardy had not attached on the previous charges filed against the defendant due to a mistrial because the defendant was placed in jeopardy when the jury was sworn in the first trial. Herrington v. State, 315 Ga. App. 101, 726 S.E.2d 625 (2012).

3. Same Transaction Test

Burden of proof. — The burden of proof under a special plea of former jeopardy is upon the defendant. Mance v. State, 5 Ga. App. 229, 62 S.E. 1053 (1908); Maher v. State, 53 Ga. 448, 21 Am. R. 269 (1874); Robinson v. State, 63 Ga. App. 490, 11 S.E.2d 414 (1940); Williams v. State, 63 Ga. App. 492, 11 S.E.2d 415 (1940).

Merits of plea of former jeopardy determined by what is known as "same transaction test." Moore v. State, 12 Ga. App. 576, 77 S.E. 1132 (1913).

Origin and approval of "same transaction test." — In Roberts v. State, 14

Ga. 8, 58 Am. Dec. 528 (1853), the Supreme Court adopted the rule “that the plea of autrefois acquit or convict is sufficient whenever the proof shows the second case to be the same transaction with the first.” In Gully v. State, 116 Ga. 527, 42 S.E. 790 (1902), the Supreme Court unqualifiedly approved the “same transaction test,” as laid down in the Roberts case. Harris v. State, 43 Ga. App. 485, 159 S.E. 603 (1931).

Defendant must plead and prove both transactions are same. — When one is put on trial for an offense, and one’s plea is that the same facts were involved in another charge against that person, for which one has been tried by a court of competent jurisdiction, one may plead the final result of the former trial in bar of the second proposition. In determining whether the first case is a bar to the prosecution of the second, the test is whether or not the same transaction is involved; that is, whether both indictments and the investigation that may be had thereunder relate to the same offense. Hines v. State, 41 Ga. App. 294, 152 S.E. 616 (1930).

In order to sustain a plea of former jeopardy, it is always incumbent upon the defendant to plead and prove that the transaction charged in the second indictment is the same as a matter of fact as that charged in the first indictment under which the defendant was put in jeopardy. Harris v. State, 193 Ga. 109, 17 S.E.2d 573 (1941); Gilstrap v. State, 90 Ga. App. 12, 81 S.E.2d 872 (1954).

Sufficiency of plea of autrefois acquit. — A plea of autrefois acquit is legally sufficient when it alleges that the offense in the second indictment is identical with the offense which was or could have been made the subject of investigation under the first indictment, and further alleges an acquittal under the first indictment in a court of competent jurisdiction. Lock v. State, 122 Ga. 730, 50 S.E. 932 (1905); Harris v. State, 43 Ga. App. 485, 159 S.E. 603 (1931).

Pleading and proof required for “same transaction test.” — In addition to pleading and proving that the transaction is the same as a matter of fact, it is also necessary to plead and prove either:

(a) that the transaction charged in the second indictment is an offense which is identical in law with that charged in the first indictment, or else that under the actual terms of the first indictment proof of the second offense was made necessary as an essential ingredient of the offense as first charged; or (b) that the transaction charged in the second indictment is an offense which represents either a major or minor grade of the same offense, of which the defendant might be convicted under an indictment for the major offense; or (c) when the transactions are the same as a matter of fact, even though the offenses be not identical or in effect identical as a matter of law, so as to come within the scope of the preceding subsections (a) or (b), one may nevertheless, under the principles of res judicata which may be included in a plea under the broader doctrine of former jeopardy, show that one’s acquittal on the first charge was necessarily controlled by the determination of some particular issue or issues of fact which would preclude one’s conviction of the second charge. Harris v. State, 193 Ga. 109, 17 S.E.2d 573 (1941).

Refusal to allow similar transaction evidence. — Defendant’s prosecution for a car hijacking was not barred by the double jeopardy provision of the Georgia Constitution as, even if the collateral estoppel doctrine was embodied in the Georgia Constitution, the refusal to admit evidence of the car hijacking as similar transaction evidence at defendant’s trial for armed robbery was based on the lack of similarity between the car hijacking and the armed robbery incidents, not the lack of evidence of defendant’s culpability for the car hijacking. Syas v. State, 273 Ga. App. 161, 614 S.E.2d 803 (2005).

Proof consists of evidence of record and evidence not of record. — In all pleas of former acquittal or former conviction, proof of the plea has to consist partly of matter of record and partly of matter not of record. The identity of the two cases is the part of the plea which it is the peculiar business of the evidence, which is not of record, to make out. Harris v. State, 43 Ga. App. 485, 159 S.E. 603 (1931); Gower v. State, 71 Ga. App. 127, 30 S.E.2d 298 (1944).

Double Jeopardy (Cont'd)3. Same Transaction Test (Cont'd)

Offenses charged in two prosecutions must be same in law and in fact, to entitle an accused to plead successfully former acquittal or conviction. Lunsford v. State, 60 Ga. App. 537, 4 S.E.2d 112 (1939).

Court determines whether defendant has established identity of two offenses charged. — A plea of former conviction is good as against demurrer (now motion to dismiss) only when it sets out the record of the former trial and conviction and judgment, and such a state of facts as will show that the former conviction was for the same offense for which the defendant is about to be arraigned. Gresham v. State, 52 Ga. App. 77, 182 S.E. 416 (1935).

On a plea of autrefois convict the trial court, as trier of the facts, was authorized to find that the defendant, upon whom the burden of proof rested, had not established the identity of the two offenses charged. Gilstrap v. State, 90 Ga. App. 12, 81 S.E.2d 872 (1954).

Same transaction established. — Defendant's conviction of voluntary manslaughter under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-2 was improper, as the defendant was also convicted of felony murder under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-1(c) for the same transaction, and this would have subjected the defendant to multiple convictions and punishments for one crime, which would have placed the defendant in double jeopardy in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII and U.S. Const., amend. 5. Lawson v. State, 280 Ga. 881, 635 S.E.2d 134 (2006).

Because all of the facts used to prove the offense of aggravated assault with intent to rob were used up in proving the armed robbery, merger was required. Mercer v. State, 289 Ga. App. 606, 658 S.E.2d 173 (2008).

Necessity of proof of additional fact would bar successful plea. — If the evidence required to convict under the first indictment would not be sufficient to convict under the second indictment, but proof of an additional fact would be necessary to constitute the offense charged in the second, the former conviction or acquittal could not be pled in bar to the second indictment. Price v. State, 76 Ga. App. 108, 45 S.E.2d 84 (1947).

Modified merger rule. — Modified merger rule, which speaks to the validity of a verdict on a charge of felony murder when the jury also finds the accused guilty of voluntary manslaughter, is effective at the time the jury renders the jury's verdict and is not destroyed by the granting of a motion for new trial on the voluntary manslaughter charge; likewise, the presence or absence of a separate charge of aggravated assault in the indictment has no effect on a court's application of the modified merger rule because while the existence of a separate aggravated assault charge must be carefully considered in applying the rule and making determinations as to proper sentencing, its existence does not render the rule inapplicable. Williams v. State, 288 Ga. 7, 700 S.E.2d 564 (2010).

Vacation of verdict under modified merger rule. — There is no meaningful distinction between an implicit acquittal based on a guilty verdict for a lesser included offense and the vacation of a verdict under the modified merger rule because in both cases the accused is placed in jeopardy, the jury is given a full opportunity to return a verdict on the greater charge, and the verdict rendered results in no conviction being entered; in both cases there can be no appeal because the accused's jeopardy has ended, and in both cases double jeopardy prevents retrial. Williams v. State, 288 Ga. 7, 700 S.E.2d 564 (2010).

Bad check and theft by deception. — When the only way the state could prove theft by deception was by evidence of an act of which defendant had been acquitted and discharged, issuance of a bad check, the action was barred. Day v. State, 163 Ga. App. 839, 296 S.E.2d 145 (1982).

A second conviction in a different county. — A prosecution for a lesser included offense, which includes the underlying felony in a felony murder case, after a conviction for the greater offense in a different county violates O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8(a), Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I,

Para. XVIII, and the Fifth and Fourteenth amendments to the United States Constitution. Perkinson v. State, 273 Ga. 491, 542 S.E.2d 92 (2001).

Conviction for violating county ordinance did not bar conviction under Code. — Defendant's pit bull mauled a child. The defendant's conviction in recorder's court of violating a county ordinance by failing to exercise ordinary care in controlling the defendant's pet for the protection of others was sufficiently separate from a misdemeanor reckless conduct charge under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-60(b), which required proof of a gross deviation from the standard of care, that a successive prosecution for violating § 16-5-60(b) did not violate the double jeopardy ban. State v. Stepp, 295 Ga. App. 813, 673 S.E.2d 257 (2009).

Effect of bifurcation. — Short delay between jury's verdicts on the counts of malice murder and felony murder due to the bifurcation of the trial at defendant's request did not constitute a termination of the prosecution, and, thus, defendant's trial for felony murder in a second, separate phase of trial did not violate defendant's double jeopardy rights because trial of the malice murder charge in the first phase of the trial did not involve the former prosecution necessary to bar the prosecution of the felony murder charge. Jones v. State, 276 Ga. 663, 581 S.E.2d 546 (2003).

Guilty plea based on single incident waived double jeopardy challenge. — Because defendant pled guilty to four misdemeanor counts of public indecency based on one lewd act witnessed by several school children, and willingly and knowingly accepted the specified sentences as to the four counts, the defendant waived any claim before the habeas court that there was in fact only one act and that the resulting sentences were void on double jeopardy grounds. Turner v. State, 284 Ga. 494, 668 S.E.2d 692 (2008).

Jeopardy and Trial Procedure

1. In General

Impact on retrials when "prosecutorial overreaching." — Reprosecution is barred by the double jeopardy clause when prosecutorial overreaching forces a defendant to the choice of giving up the substantial right that the defendant has to the trial before the present jury, or moving for a mistrial and giving the government a second chance before another jury with any additional advantage accrued by matter learned in the first trial. Studyvent v. State, 153 Ga. App. 161, 264 S.E.2d 695 (1980).

Trial court's refusal to permit the defendant to cross-examine the prosecutor at a hearing on the defendant's plea of double jeopardy amounted to legal error, as such not only amounted to a violation of the defendant's right to confrontation, but also foreclosed the opportunity for the defendant to prove whether the prosecutor intended to goad the defendant into moving for a mistrial. Wright v. State, 284 Ga. App. 169, 643 S.E.2d 538 (2007).

"Prosecutorial overreaching" explained. — "Prosecutorial overreaching" occurs and bars retrials when bad faith conduct by judge or prosecutor threatens the harassment of an accused by successive prosecutions or declaration of a mistrial so as to afford the prosecution a more favorable opportunity to convict the defendant. Studyvent v. State, 153 Ga. App. 161, 264 S.E.2d 695 (1980).

Discharge of accused by commitment court no bar to subsequent indictment and trial. — The discharge of the appellant on an original burglary warrant by a commitment court does not bar a subsequent indictment and trial of the appellant for the offense of burglary in a court of competent jurisdiction to try the appellant. Wells v. Stynchcombe, 231 Ga. 199, 200 S.E.2d 745 (1973).

State has right to file motion for rehearing in criminal case. — Since the court, before the remittitur goes out, may on its own motion when it determines that it has committed error, alter, amend, or vacate its judgment by motion for rehearing, the state would merely be calling to the court's attention any errors or mistakes which the state believes the court has committed. Such a motion for rehearing would not amount to placing the defendant in double jeopardy. Ramsey v. State, 212 Ga. 381, 92 S.E.2d 866 (1956).

Scope of motion in arrest of judgment. — A motion in arrest of judgment

Jeopardy and TrialProcedure (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

being narrow and restricted in its province is limited to the face of the pleadings in determining whether a violation of the constitutional provisions as to former jeopardy is presented by the record. Hall v. State, 202 Ga. 42, 42 S.E.2d 130 (1947).

Withdrawal of case from jury equivalent to acquittal in most instances.

— When a criminal case has been submitted to a jury upon a valid indictment and is withdrawn from their consideration by the judge for any reason other than the prisoner's consent, a necessity in some of its various forms one of which is mistrial, it is equivalent to an acquittal of the accused, and any subsequent prosecution on the same facts, even if in a higher court for a greater offense, the first prosecution being for a lesser included offense, constitutes jeopardy. Jordan v. State, 75 Ga. App. 815, 44 S.E.2d 821 (1947).

Failure to file plea. — Failure to file a written plea of former jeopardy prior to trial will not defeat an accused's right to be free of multiple convictions for the same criminal act. Bailey v. State, 184 Ga. App. 890, 363 S.E.2d 172 (1987).

Improper termination of trial. — Superior court erred in overruling defendant's plea of former jeopardy to a prosecution for driving under the influence when a recorder's court judge had improperly terminated the defendant's trial on the same charge in referring the case to the superior court. Phillips v. State, 197 Ga. App. 491, 399 S.E.2d 234 (1990).

The trial court properly granted the defendant's plea in bar and plea of former jeopardy in a burglary prosecution, as the state improperly terminated the first trial by dismissing the indictment after jeopardy attached without the defendant's consent, and the second burglary prosecution, although alleging a different date, residence, and accomplice, was based on the same material facts as the first indictment. State v. Jackson, 290 Ga. App. 250, 659 S.E.2d 679 (2008).

Jeopardy did not attach because there was no adjudication of guilt. — Because the defendant's alleged mistake of fact regarding a charge of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon required consideration of facts extrinsic to the accusation to be decided by a jury, the trial court erred in dismissing the charge, sua sponte; moreover, as such dismissal was not an adjudication of guilt, the state could appeal from the dismissal without violating the defendant's double jeopardy rights. State v. Henderson, 283 Ga. App. 111, 640 S.E.2d 686 (2006).

Breach of plea agreement. — Trial court did not err in granting the state's motion to set aside and disregard defendant's plea agreement and retry the defendant for the crimes covered by that agreement, as defendant breached the agreement by agreeing to testify truthfully in exchange for a lesser sentence and then falsely testifying at a codefendant's trial that defendant was not involved in an armed robbery that defendant had admitted being involved in at defendant's plea agreement hearing; defendant could not argue that trying defendant on the crimes that were the subject of the plea agreement violated double jeopardy principles since defendant chose to voluntarily violate the plea agreement and a double jeopardy argument was not available to shield defendant from the consequences of defendant's voluntary choice. Brown v. State, 261 Ga. App. 115, 582 S.E.2d 13 (2003).

Direction to continue deliberation. — Protection against double jeopardy was not violated when the trial court directed the jury to continue deliberating after it returned the second of its three verdicts since the jury's second verdict indicated that it failed to comply with the trial court's instructions and remained undecided as to the lesser included offenses of aggravated assault and involuntary manslaughter. Easley v. State, 262 Ga. App. 144, 584 S.E.2d 629 (2003).

Bench trial and jury trial on separate offenses. — Even assuming arguendo that the defendant's position that O.C.G.A. § 40-6-395 set out two distinct offenses, wilful failure to stop and fleeing and eluding a police officer, the defendant was tried, first in a bench trial and again on remand after an appeal, on an accusation charging the defendant with fleeing and eluding an officer and was found guilty and sentenced both times for fleeing and eluding; hence, because the defendant was not tried on the offense of wilful failure to stop, the defendant's contention that double jeopardy considerations prohibited a jury trial on that charge, was moot. Harbuck v. State, 280 Ga. 775, 631 S.E.2d 351 (2006).

Unsworn jury. — Retrial after not guilty finding returned by an unsworn jury was not barred by the double jeopardy principles under both the U.S. and Georgia Constitutions, as the jury lacked any authority to pass upon any of the issues at trial and, hence, could not make any determinations whatsoever as to the defendant's guilt or innocence. Spencer v. State, 281 Ga. 533, 640 S.E.2d 267, cert. denied, 551 U.S. 1103, 127 S. Ct. 2914, 168 L. Ed. 2d 243 (2007).

Prior consent order did not amount to criminal punishment to which double jeopardy prohibitions applied. — Trial court properly denied a solid waste facility operator's double jeopardy plea in bar of prosecution because even though the parties stipulated that the consent order and the criminal action alleged the same nuisance conduct and each proceeding had the same goals of restraint, deterrence, and abatement, the criminal action was not barred by the sanctions imposed in the consent order since the consent order did not amount to criminal punishment to which double jeopardy prohibitions applied. Wilbros, LLC v. State, 294 Ga. 514, 755 S.E.2d 145 (2014).

2. Mistrials

After properly declared mistrial, the defendant may be tried again. Nolan v. State, 55 Ga. 521, 21 Am. R. 281 (1875).

No double jeopardy when mistrial declared on motion of or with consent of defendant. — The double jeopardy proscription of the United States and Georgia Constitutions generally does not prevent reprosecution of a defendant when a mistrial occurs on the motion of, or with the consent of, the defendant. Studyvent v. State, 153 Ga. App. 161, 264 S.E.2d 695 (1980).

When, after a jury was impaneled, the defendant moved for severance and a mistrial, and the trial court granted the motion for severance and elected to go forward with the trial of the codefendant, but, instead of granting a mistrial, continued defendant's case, the grant of the continuance was equivalent to the grant of a mistrial, and the defendant's plea of double jeopardy was properly rejected since the defendant had sought and consented to the severance. Stone v. State, 218 Ga. App. 350, 461 S.E.2d 548 (1995).

Trial court properly denied the defendant's plea in bar based on double jeopardy under U.S. Const., amend. 5 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, seeking to prevent a retrial of criminal charges against defendant after the motion for a mistrial under O.C.G.A. § 16-1-8(e)(1) was granted in the first trial upon the jury's advisement to the trial court judge that they were hopelessly deadlocked due to the refusal by two jurors to consider the direct evidence; the mistrial was properly declared and there was no improper conduct shown by the trial court or the state but rather, the defendant's counsel admitted that defendant hoped that another jury would be more sympathetic to the defendant upon a retrial, as the first jury was deadlocked 10-2 in favor of conviction. Jackson v. State, 282 Ga. App. 476, 638 S.E.2d 865 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's plea in bar on the grounds of double jeopardy because the trial court's finding that the prosecutor did not intend to goad the defendant into moving for a mistrial was not clearly erroneous since the defendant's character was put in evidence by the witness's unresponsive answer to a question and not by any improper conduct of the prosecutor; the trial court was authorized to find that the state would have nothing to gain from delay and that the prosecutor was aggressively seeking a conviction, not a mistrial because the trial was at an early stage when the defendant's motion for a mistrial was granted, and the state had not yet presented the testimony of numerous other witnesses, including the alleged victims. Appling v. State, 305 Ga. App. 633, 700 S.E.2d 627 (2010).

Jeopardy and TrialProcedure (Cont'd)2. Mistrials (Cont'd)

No double jeopardy on retrial following judge's or prosecutor's misconduct. — In the context of a granted motion for mistrial, governmental misconduct will support a plea in bar based on double jeopardy if the prosecutor or trial judge intended to goad the defendant into moving for a mistrial. In the context of a reversal or grant of a motion for new trial, on the other hand, double jeopardy may bar a retrial when the prosecutor intended to prevent an acquittal that the prosecutor, or the trial judge accused of misconduct, believed at the time was likely to occur in the absence of the judge's misconduct. Paul v. State, 266 Ga. App. 126, 596 S.E.2d 670 (2004).

After a mistrial was declared due to the prosecutor's improper comments during closing, the trial court properly denied defendant's motion for acquittal and discharge, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-9-1, as the prosecutor had not intended to subvert the protections afforded by the double jeopardy clause, at Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII and U.S. Const., amend. 5, in the prosecutor's reference to defendant's financial status due to discussions that occurred on that issue, although the prosecutor later realized that such discussions were held outside of the presence of the jury; defendant failed to make the requisite showing of a purposeful subversion of double jeopardy, nor did defendant show an improper motive, a benefit to the state to retry the case, or conduct that gave rise to a presumption of unlawful intent. Mathis v. State, 276 Ga. App. 587, 623 S.E.2d 674 (2005).

It was error to grant the defendants' plea in bar based on double jeopardy after granting the defendants' motion for a mistrial when the prosecutor told the defense that a rifle could not be located; even if the conduct of the prosecutor's staff in not telling the prosecutor that the rifle was missing could be imputed to the prosecutor, there was no evidence that those persons intended to goad the defendants into moving for a mistrial. State v. Traylor, 281 Ga. 730, 642 S.E.2d 700 (2007).

No double jeopardy when mistrial proper. — Defendant was not improperly placed in double jeopardy given that the mistrial was properly entered on the judge's rightful determination of a hopeless deadlock in light of the jury's continued divided status after 12 hours of deliberation over the course of two days. Hurston v. State, 206 Ga. App. 570, 426 S.E.2d 196 (1992).

When the only verdict returned and read in open court was that the jury could not reach a verdict on a murder count, a grant of a mistrial was proper and the state could try the defendant again for murder and the lesser included offense of manslaughter. State v. Lane, 218 Ga. App. 126, 460 S.E.2d 550 (1995).

Since the jury in the defendant's first trial on drug charges was hopelessly deadlocked, and the trial court's decision in that trial that the jury deadlock created a manifest necessity for a mistrial, it was not an abuse of discretion, and since the trial court in the first trial provided the jury with more time to deliberate after the defendant moved for a mistrial based on the jury being deadlocked, a second trial on the same drug charges was not barred by double jeopardy; the manifest necessity of the mistrial prevented double jeopardy from attaching to the defendant's second trial. Leonard v. State, 275 Ga. App. 667, 621 S.E.2d 599 (2005).

Defendant could be retried on a kidnapping charge under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-40(b) after the defendant was acquitted of felony murder under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-1(c) and a mistrial was declared on the underlying felony of kidnapping; the jury could have based the jury's acquittal on the felony murder charge on factors other than the defendant's participation in the crimes that preceded the homicide. State v. Lambert, 276 Ga. App. 668, 624 S.E.2d 174 (2005).

Trial court's declaration of a mistrial as to all counts in an earlier trial, based on evidence that at least one juror had been improperly contacted during the trial, did not bar a retrial of the defendant on double jeopardy grounds, despite the fact that the jury had reached a verdict of not guilty as to one of the counts in the earlier trial. Smith v. State, 278 Ga. App. 315, 628 S.E.2d 722 (2006).

As the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in declaring a mistrial sua sponte on the basis that evidence inadvertently taken to the jury room which contained the defendant's exculpatory statement had irreparably prejudiced the state's right to a fair trial, and that curative instructions would be insufficient, the defendant's retrial was not barred by double jeopardy. Varner v. State, 285 Ga. 334, 676 S.E.2d 209 (2009).

After the trial court excused a juror who had been left a telephone message stating that the defendant was a good person, the juror discussed the evidence with the other jurors and made negative comments in an apparent effort to discredit the prosecution. As the trial court concluded that the excused juror may have had a bias that affected the other jurors, the court properly declared a mistrial; therefore, the defendant's retrial did not violate the double jeopardy ban. Brown v. State, 285 Ga. 324, 676 S.E.2d 221 (2009).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's plea in bar because the evidence authorized the court's determination that the complained-of inquiry by the prosecutor was not intended to goad the defense into seeking a mistrial, and the record contained evidentiary support for the trial court's determination that the prosecutor's direct examination of a police officer did not show that the prosecutor was intentionally trying to abort the trial; since the evidence authorized the trial court to find that the person in control of the prosecution did not instigate any misconduct, either directly or through collusion, in order to goad the defendant into moving for a mistrial, double jeopardy did not bar retrial. Brown v. State, 303 Ga. App. 814, 694 S.E.2d 385 (2010).

There was no error in denying the defendant's plea in bar of former jeopardy because the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in declaring a mistrial in the defendant's first trial because the record supported the court's finding that the jury was hopelessly deadlocked; the jurors informed the trial court early in their deliberations that their vote was nearly evenly split between conviction and acquittal, and at least three separate times, the jury also told the trial court that the jury was deadlocked and that further deliberations would not result in a verdict. Mattox v. State, 305 Ga. App. 600, 699 S.E.2d 887 (2010).

Prosecutor goading defendant into motion for mistrial. — The double jeopardy clause stands as a bar to retrial when "the prosecutor has goaded the defense into making a motion for a mistrial" to avoid a reversal of the conviction based on prosecutorial or judicial error. In that situation, the defendant must show that the prosecutor engaged in intentional misconduct to secure a second opportunity to try the case. Defendant did not show that the prosecutor's questioning of the state's witness rose to the level of intentional misconduct necessary to bar a retrial under the double jeopardy clause. Ritter v. State, 269 Ga. 884, 506 S.E.2d 857 (1998).

When actions of prosecutor cause mistrial. — Because a prosecutor's conduct violated one of the most basic rules of prosecutorial procedure, specifically, producing documents in discovery showing that the defendant refused to speak with police and requested a lawyer after being advised of Miranda, and hence intentionally goading the defendant into moving for a mistrial, the trial court erred in denying the defendant's motion for a plea in bar on double jeopardy grounds. Anderson v. State, 285 Ga. App. 166, 645 S.E.2d 647 (2007).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's plea of former jeopardy because the court's finding that the prosecution's question on cross-examination was an unintentional reference to the defendant's right to remain silent was not clearly erroneous; the record contained evidence to support the trial court's finding that the prosecutor's question was not intended to goad the defense into seeking a mistrial. Demory v. State, 313 Ga. App. 265, 721 S.E.2d 93 (2011).

Retrial after mistrial caused by judge's inability to disregard evidence. — In a bench trial, the judge's inability to disregard evidence the judge ruled inadmissible constituted a manifest necessity for a mistrial and the defendant's double jeopardy rights would not be violated by a retrial to a jury. Bailey v. State, 219 Ga. App. 258, 465 S.E.2d 284 (1995).

Jeopardy and TrialProcedure (Cont'd)2. Mistrials (Cont'd)

Motion for mistrial as removing barrier to reprosecution. — When circumstances develop not attributable to prosecutorial or judicial overreaching, a motion by the defendant for mistrial is ordinarily assumed to remove any barrier to reprosecution, even if the defendant's motion is necessitated by prosecutorial or judicial error. Studyvent v. State, 153 Ga. App. 161, 264 S.E.2d 695 (1980).

Granting of mistrial upon defendant's own motion never acts as bar to further prosecution; this is true even if the defendant's motion for mistrial is necessitated by error of the prosecutor or of the court. Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325 (1980).

Defendant did not carry defendant's burden of showing that the state goaded defendant into moving for a mistrial when the state failed to provide the defense with one of two statements that the victim provided to police regarding the charges brought against defendant for child molestation and statutory rape, and, thus, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's plea of former jeopardy under either the state or federal constitution after the trial court granted defendant's motion for a mistrial. Beach v. State, 260 Ga. App. 399, 579 S.E.2d 808 (2003).

Procedure amounts to jeopardy for second time. — If a judge capriciously or erroneously declares a mistrial, and the accused is again put upon trial, the accused will be placed in jeopardy a second time for the same offense. Brindle v. State, 125 Ga. App. 298, 187 S.E.2d 310 (1972).

Consent of accused needed for declaring mistrial. — When the representative of the state fails to exercise ordinary diligence and therefore does not discern a juror's relationship to the defendant, the representative impliedly waives any cause for complaint by the state, in respect to which, once the accused has been put in jeopardy by the state, the trial judge cannot interfere by declaring a mistrial without the consent of the accused. Brindle v. State, 125 Ga. App. 298, 187 S.E.2d 310 (1972).

Moral or physical necessity for mistrial. — To justify grant of a mistrial without the consent of the accused, there must either be moral or physical necessity. Nolan v. State, 55 Ga. 521, 21 Am. R. 281 (1875).

When a person accused has been put upon trial, and a jury, selected by the person and the state, charged with the case, there must be a verdict either for the person or against the person, unless there is an absolute moral or physical necessity for a mistrial, or the person consents to the mistrial. Brindle v. State, 125 Ga. App. 298, 187 S.E.2d 310 (1972).

Defense counsel's error resulting in mistrial. — In a prosecution for malice murder, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in declaring a mistrial when defense counsel injected the prejudicial issue of the victim's violent acts without having first made a prima facie showing of justification and the state could try defendant again. Laster v. State, 268 Ga. 172, 486 S.E.2d 153 (1997).

Mistrial during prosecution of multiple offenses. — When the state seeks to prosecute a defendant for two offenses in a single prosecution, one of which is included in the other, and the defendant receives a mistrial on the greater offense, the remaining conviction of the lesser offense does not bar retrial of the greater offense. Taylor v. State, 238 Ga. App. 753, 520 S.E.2d 267 (1999).

Retrial permissible only when "manifest necessity" existed for declaration of mistrial. — The test to be applied by the trial court hearing a double jeopardy plea is that retrial is permissible only if a manifest necessity existed for the declaration of the mistrial lest otherwise the end of public justice be defeated; the existence of "manifest necessity" is to be determined by weighing the defendant's right to have the defendant's trial completed before the particular tribunal against the interest of the public in having fair trials designed to end in just judgments; and the decision must take into consideration all the surrounding circumstances. Chatham v. State, 155 Ga. App. 154, 270 S.E.2d 274 (1980), rev'd on other grounds, 247 Ga. 95, 274 S.E.2d 473 (1981).

At defendant's trial for various sexual offenses based on allegations by defendant's stepdaughter, which were later recanted, there was no manifest necessity for a mistrial over defendant's objection when a child abuse investigator mentioned, in violation of the trial court's ruling on a motion in limine based on O.C.G.A. § 24-2-3, that the stepdaughter had viewed pornographic movies even though the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in granting the state's motion in limine to exclude the evidence; defense counsel's question to the investigator did not call for the improper response, and, once the issue had been injected, the defense was entitled to clarify that the defendant bore no responsibility for the victim's viewing of the pornographic movies. Thus, defendant's plea in bar based on double jeopardy should have been granted. Payne v. State, 267 Ga. App. 498, 600 S.E.2d 422 (2004).

Since the jury in defendant's first trial on drug charges was hopelessly deadlocked, and the trial court's decision in that trial that the jury deadlock created a manifest necessity for a mistrial, it was not an abuse of discretion, and since the trial court in the first trial provided the jury with more time to deliberate after defendant moved for a mistrial based on the jury being deadlocked, a second trial on the same drug charges was not barred by double jeopardy; the manifest necessity of the mistrial prevented double jeopardy from attaching to defendant's second trial. Leonard v. State, 275 Ga. App. 667, 621 S.E.2d 599 (2005).

Retrial of a criminal defendant after a mistrial caused by the inability of the jury to reach a verdict does not constitute double jeopardy if there is manifest necessity for declaring the mistrial; the determination as to whether the jury is in fact hopelessly deadlocked is a matter somewhat in the discretion of the trial court. Leonard v. State, 275 Ga. App. 667, 621 S.E.2d 599 (2005).

Because the evidence showed that the trial court did not consider any less drastic alternatives to declaring a mistrial for what, essentially, was the state's objection to one of the court's evidentiary rulings, the trial court erred in denying defendant's plea in bar of former jeopardy under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII. Freeman v. State, 299 Ga. App. 564, 683 S.E.2d 124 (2009).

Defendant's plea in bar on double jeopardy grounds was properly denied because the trial court did not err in finding a manifest necessity for declaring a mistrial after defense counsel, despite being warned, argued in closing statements that the jury should distrust the breath test administered by the state trooper because the machine used had problems. McCabe v. State, 318 Ga. App. 720, 734 S.E.2d 539 (2012).

A retrial after a mistrial caused by the failure of the jury to reach a verdict does not constitute double jeopardy under the doctrine of "manifest necessity." Murff v. State, 165 Ga. App. 808, 302 S.E.2d 697, rev'd on other grounds, 251 Ga. 478, 306 S.E.2d 267 (1983).

Jeopardy attaches when court grants mistrial over defendant's objections in some instances. — When the prosecutor begins the prosecutor's case without sufficient evidence to convict and the court grants a mistrial over defendant's objection, defendant's plea of former jeopardy should be sustained, should the state attempt to call the case again. Haynes v. State, 245 Ga. 817, 268 S.E.2d 325 (1980).

Retrial after mistrial caused by failure of the jury to reach a verdict does not constitute double jeopardy. Kelly v. State, 145 Ga. App. 780, 245 S.E.2d 20 (1978).

If a jury cannot agree upon a verdict in a criminal case, the trial judge may declare a mistrial, and the accused may then be tried a second time for the same offense. The declaration of a mistrial under such circumstances precludes an accused from successfully invoking the constitutional principle of double jeopardy at the accused's second trial. Cameron v. Caldwell, 232 Ga. 611, 208 S.E.2d 441 (1974).

Since the jury in defendant's first trial on drug charges was hopelessly deadlocked, and the trial court's decision in that trial that the jury deadlock created a manifest necessity for a mistrial, it was not an abuse of discretion, and since the trial court in the first trial provided the jury with more time to deliberate after defendant moved for a mistrial based on the jury being deadlocked, a second trial on the same drug charges was not barred by double jeopardy; the manifest necessity of the mistrial prevented double jeopardy from attaching to defendant's second trial. Leonard v. State, 275 Ga. App. 667, 621 S.E.2d 599 (2005).

Jeopardy and TrialProcedure (Cont'd)2. Mistrials (Cont'd)

Retrial after acquittal on single charge but deadlock on other charges. — Since the defendant was acquitted of a charge of malice murder, and the jury was deadlocked as to other offenses before them, retrial on the lesser included unindicted offense of voluntary manslaughter was not barred, as long as the jury did not know about the murder charge. State v. Archie, 230 Ga. App. 253, 495 S.E.2d 581 (1998).

Plea of former jeopardy not sustained when court declared mistrials.

— Plea of former jeopardy could not be sustained on the ground that on two former trials of the accused, under the same indictment, the court had declared mistrials on account of the inability of the juries to agree upon a verdict, since it is a matter somewhat in the discretion of the court when and under what circumstances a jury will be discharged from further consideration in criminal cases. Hyde v. State, 196 Ga. 475, 26 S.E.2d 744 (1943).

Defendant's introduction of prohibited evidence. — Defendant's introduction of evidence that was prohibited by the rape shield statute gave the court grounds to find manifest necessity for a mistrial; therefore, state and federal double jeopardy provisions did not bar reprosecution. Banks v. State, 230 Ga. App. 258, 495 S.E.2d 877 (1998).

3. New Trials

True intent and meaning of this paragraph is that one who, after conviction upon an indictment, voluntarily seeks and obtains a new trial thereon, becomes subject to another trial generally for the offense therein charged. Waller v. State, 104 Ga. 505, 30 S.E. 835 (1898); Jackson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 367, 268 S.E.2d 418 (1980); Daniels v. State, 165 Ga. App. 397, 299 S.E.2d 746 (1983).

Failure to properly establish venue does not bar retrial, because evidence of venue does not go to the guilt or innocence of the accused; hence, it does not invoke double jeopardy concerns. Jones v. State, 272 Ga. 900, 537 S.E.2d 80 (2000).

Adjudication of delinquency was reversed as the state presented no evidence of venue and the juvenile court did not take judicial notice that the location of an aggravated assault described at a hearing was in Sumter County; the county in which the offense was committed was not established and the evidence was insufficient to support the conviction, but retrial was not barred by the double jeopardy clause so long as venue was properly established at retrial. In the Interest of T.W., 280 Ga. App. 693, 634 S.E.2d 854 (2006).

Although there was sufficient evidence to support a juvenile's adjudication of delinquency based on the finding that the juvenile had committed acts, which, had the juvenile been an adult, would have supported a conviction for burglary in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(a), the adjudication was reversed because the state failed to present any evidence to establish proof of venue beyond a reasonable doubt. The investigating officers' county of employment did not, in and of itself, constitute sufficient proof of venue to meet the beyond a reasonable doubt standard; however, the reviewing court noted that retrying the juvenile was not prohibited under the Double Jeopardy Clause, because the evidence presented at trial was otherwise sufficient to support the adjudication of delinquency. In the Interest of B.R., 289 Ga. App. 6, 656 S.E.2d 172 (2007).

First verdict limited to lesser included offense requires that retrial be limited to that lesser offense. Price v. Georgia, 398 U.S. 323, 90 S. Ct. 1757, 26 L. Ed. 2d 300 (1970).

Acquittal on some offenses did not bar retrial on other offenses with different elements. — Although a defendant was acquitted of charges relating to the beating death and kidnapping of a robbery victim in a first trial, the defendant was convicted of armed robbery and assault of the victim. On the defendant's retrial, granted due to the state's failure to prove venue in the first trial, the state was not barred from re-prosecuting the defendant for armed robbery and assault. Patmon v. State, 303 Ga. App. 151, 693 S.E.2d 120 (2010).

Defendant's acquittal on felony murder under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-1(c) and aggravated assault under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-21 did not bar retrial on a voluntary manslaughter charge under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-2(a) as the collateral estoppel doctrine under the Double Jeopardy Clause, U.S. Const., amend. V, and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, did not apply because voluntary manslaughter required proof of an element not found in felony murder or aggravated assault, and aggravated assault with a deadly weapon and voluntary manslaughter were mutually exclusive. Roesser v. State, 316 Ga. App. 850, 730 S.E.2d 641 (2012).

Procedurally it matters not how defendant obtains a new trial, by direct appeal from the judgment of conviction or after the denial of the defendant's motion for new trial, should the defendant choose to file one. Jackson v. State, 154 Ga. App. 367, 268 S.E.2d 418 (1980); Daniels v. State, 165 Ga. App. 397, 299 S.E.2d 746 (1983).

No bar to second trial when motion for new trial by defendant granted. — Jeopardy provision does not prohibit a second trial on the same charge when the defendant has been successful in the defendant's motion for new trial in having the conviction set aside for want of sufficient evidence. Staggers v. State, 120 Ga. App. 875, 172 S.E.2d 462 (1969).

One who procures a new trial on one's own motion will not be heard to complain that to try the person again places the person in double jeopardy in violation of the state Constitution, even if the reversal was for insufficiency of evidence. Staggers v. State, 225 Ga. 581, 170 S.E.2d 430 (1969).

Defendant by securing a new trial defeats a plea of former jeopardy. Waller v. State, 104 Ga. 505, 30 S.E. 835 (1898); Taylor v. State, 110 Ga. 150, 35 S.E. 161 (1900); Pride v. State, 125 Ga. 750, 54 S.E. 688 (1906).

When a defendant in a criminal case secures a new trial by the defendant's own efforts, the defendant waives the right to plead former jeopardy because of the former trial. Arnold v. State, 88 Ga. App. 710, 77 S.E.2d 550 (1953).

When the defendant is tried on a new indictment other than the indictment on which the defendant was first tried and convicted, the defendant's plea of former jeopardy is without merit, as the defendant waived the right to plead former jeopardy when the defendant secured a new trial through the defendant's own efforts. Staggers v. State, 225 Ga. 581, 170 S.E.2d 430 (1969).

When defendant obtains reversal based upon "trial error," double jeopardy does not bar retrial. Hall v. State, 244 Ga. 86, 259 S.E.2d 41 (1979).

Because the reversal of the defendant's conviction was based on trial error, double jeopardy did not prevent retrial. Daniels v. State, 165 Ga. App. 397, 299 S.E.2d 746 (1983).

Prosecutorial misconduct did not bar a retrial of the defendant under the Double Jeopardy Clause, U.S. Const., amend. V, and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII, when the defendant alleged that the state made many statements of fact outside the record during closing argument in violation of O.C.G.A. § 17-8-75 as the defendant did not allege that the prosecutor intended to prevent an acquittal that the prosecutor believed at the time was likely to occur in the absence of the prosecutor's misconduct. Wadley v. State, 317 Ga. App. 333, 730 S.E.2d 536 (2012).

Double jeopardy does not bar retrial. — Double jeopardy clause in U.S. Const., amend. V and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII did not bar a second trial on the same charges because the defendant's motion for new trial was granted due to an erroneous evidentiary ruling. State v. Caffee, 291 Ga. 31, 728 S.E.2d 171 (2012).

Reversal for trial error explained. — Reversal for trial error, as distinguished from evidentiary insufficiency, does not constitute a decision to the effect that the government has failed to prove its case; it implies nothing with respect to the guilt or innocence of the defendant; it is a determination that a defendant has been convicted through a judicial process which is defective in some fundamental respect. Hall v. State, 244 Ga. 86, 259 S.E.2d 41 (1979).

Jeopardy and TrialProcedure (Cont'd)3. New Trials (Cont'd)

Reversal for insufficiency of evidence, but not for trial error, bars retrial. — Once a reviewing court reverses a conviction solely for insufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict of guilty, double jeopardy bars retrial; however, if a defendant obtains a reversal based upon “trial error,” double jeopardy does not bar retrial. Osborne v. State, 166 Ga. App. 439, 304 S.E.2d 416 (1983).

Defendant's convictions for armed robbery reversed for insufficient evidence. — Reversal of defendant's convictions for felony murder based on the felony of armed robbery due to insufficient evidence raises a procedural double jeopardy bar to any reprosecution for armed robbery. Prater v. State, 273 Ga. 477, 541 S.E.2d 351 (2001).

When reversal for erroneous admission of evidence not excludable on retrial, retrial allowed. — When the testimony of a lab technician was not inadmissible because it was incompetent, but because the defense had not been furnished a copy of the laboratory report as required by former O.C.G.A. § 17-7-211, it would not be excluded automatically on retrial. Thus, when the original conviction was reversed due to a trial error, rather than insufficiency of the evidence, a retrial is not barred by the double jeopardy provisions of the Georgia and United States Constitutions. Osborne v. State, 166 Ga. App. 439, 304 S.E.2d 416 (1983).

New trial granted due to erroneous evidentiary ruling. — Trial court erred in granting the defendant's plea in bar because double jeopardy did not bar a second trial on the same charges since the retrial was granted due to an erroneous evidentiary ruling; the order granting a new trial did not find the evidence was legally insufficient to sustain the verdict, but instead, the second trial judge granted the new trial based on the original trial court's error in admitting an exhibit to prove that the defendant had a prior felony conviction after the defendant offered to stipulate that the defendant was a convicted felon. State v. Caffee, 291 Ga. 31, 728 S.E.2d 171 (2012).

Death sentence unavailable on retrial following jury sentence of life imprisonment. — If the convicting jury sentences the defendant to life imprisonment, this constitutes an acquittal of the charge that the evidence supports a finding of a statutory aggravating circumstance, and in any retrial the double-jeopardy clause prohibits the defendant from being given the death sentence. Hill v. State, 250 Ga. 821, 301 S.E.2d 269 (1983).

No authority for judge to grant new trial on own motion. — A trial judge has no authority in this state on the judge's own motion, and in the absence of such motion by the defendant, to grant the defendant a new trial of a crime, and such action will be reversed on appeal. Crymes v. State, 52 Ga. App. 195, 182 S.E. 856 (1935).

4. Sentencing

Amendment of orally pronounced sentence so as to increase it. — Court is authorized to amend its oral pronouncement in order to change sentence from 12 months on probation to 12 months in jail when there was no suggestion of vindictiveness against the defendant for having exercised any legal right, but rather it was only the trial court's effort to make the punishment fit the crime of which the jury had found the defendant to be guilty. Curry v. State, 248 Ga. 183, 281 S.E.2d 604 (1981).

Increase of sentence after defendant begins serving sentence. — Oral declaration as to what sentence shall be is not the sentence of the court; the sentence signed by the judge is. However, oral declaration of a sentence may not be increased after the defendant has begun to serve the sentence. Curry v. State, 248 Ga. 183, 281 S.E.2d 604 (1981).

Sentence which has been reduced to writing and signed by a judge may not be increased after the defendant has begun to serve that sentence. Curry v. State, 248 Ga. 183, 281 S.E.2d 604 (1981).

Juvenile defendant's voluntary manslaughter sentence was vacated, and a resentencing was ordered, when the trial court erred by increasing the sentence after the defendant had already begun serving it, because the original sentence was final at the time it was imposed, and defendant had no reason to believe otherwise; hence, the trial court's increased sentence constituted double jeopardy and could not stand. Williams v. State, 273 Ga. App. 42, 614 S.E.2d 146 (2005).

Multiple convictions and punishments for single crime improper. — Appeals court agreed that because there was only one homicide victim, only one life sentence, and not three, could be imposed, because such improperly subjected the defendant to multiple convictions and punishments for one crime. Turner v. State, 281 Ga. 487, 640 S.E.2d 25 (2007).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Concept of double jeopardy requires identity of offenses and not merely identity of transaction. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 690.

Prosecution for separate municipal and state offenses arising in single transaction not barred. — An accused arrested for separate non-included offenses arising out of a single transaction, which violate municipal ordinances and state law, respectively, may be prosecuted first in the recorder's court for the municipal ordinance violations, and then transferred to the superior court to be prosecuted for the separate state violations, without violating statutory or constitutional double jeopardy prohibitions. 1986 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U86-32.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21 Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, §§ 275 et seq., 620 et seq., 633 et seq.

C.J.S. — 22 C.J.S., Criminal Law, §§ 295, 299 et seq.

ALR. — Occurrences during a view as warranting the jury's discharge without letting in plea of former jeopardy upon subsequent trial, 4 ALR 1266.

Plea of former jeopardy or of former conviction or acquittal where jury was not sworn, 12 ALR 1006.

Conviction or acquittal of larceny as bar to prosecution for burglary, 19 ALR 626.

Pendency in one county of charge of larceny as bar to subsequent charge in another county of offense which involves both felonious breaking and felonious taking of same property, 19 ALR 636.

Substitution of juror after completion of panel as sustaining plea of double jeopardy, 28 ALR 849; 33 ALR 142.

Forgery of names of several individuals to the same instrument as more than one offense, 33 ALR 562.

Plea of double jeopardy where jury was discharged because of inability of the prosecution to present testimony, 74 ALR 803.

Conviction or acquittal under charge of assault with intent to rob as bar to prosecution for assault with intent to kill based on the same transaction or on closely connected transactions, 81 ALR 701.

Constitutionality and construction of statute enhancing penalty for second or subsequent offense, 82 ALR 345; 116 ALR 209; 132 ALR 91; 139 ALR 673.

Discharge on habeas corpus after conviction as affecting claim or plea of former jeopardy, 97 ALR 160.

Identity, as regards former jeopardy, of offenses charged in different indictments or informations for conspiracy, 112 ALR 983.

Conviction or acquittal upon charge of murder of, or assault upon, one person as bar to prosecution for like offenses against other person at the same time, 113 ALR 222.

Constitutionality of statute permitting appeal by state in criminal case, 113 ALR 636; 157 ALR 1065.

Plea of former jeopardy as affected by declaration of mistrial after impaneling and swearing of jury on original trial because of errors, or supposed errors, regarding examination or challenging of jurors, 113 ALR 1428.

Former jeopardy as regards successive prosecutions for perjury charged to have been committed in the same action or proceeding, 120 ALR 1171; 29 ALR2d 925.

Plea of former jeopardy where jury is discharged because of illness or insanity of juror, 125 ALR 694.

Income tax: year as of which interest should be returned by taxpayer who makes return on accrual basis, 150 ALR 754.

Double jeopardy where jury is discharged before termination of trial because of illness of accused, 159 ALR 750.

Acquittal or conviction of one offense in connection with operation of automobile as bar to prosecution for another, 172 ALR 1053.

Former jeopardy as ground for habeas corpus, 8 ALR2d 285.

What amounts to habitual intemperance, drunkenness, and the like within statute relating to substantive grounds for divorce, 29 ALR2d 925.

Acquittal on homicide charge as bar to subsequent prosecution for assault and battery, or vice versa, 37 ALR2d 1068.

Conviction or acquittal in criminal prosecution as bar to action for statutory damages or penalty, 42 ALR2d 634.

Conviction of lesser offense as bar to prosecution for greater on new trial, 61 ALR2d 1141.

Conviction from which appeal is pending as bar to another prosecution for same offense, 61 ALR2d 1224.

What constitutes accused's consent to court's discharge of jury or to grant of state's motion for mistrial which will constitute waiver of former jeopardy plea, 63 ALR2d 782.

Plea of guilty as basis of claim of double jeopardy in attempted subsequent prosecution for same offense, 75 ALR2d 683.

Constitutionality and construction of statute or court rule relating to alternate or additional jurors or substitution of jurors during trial, 84 ALR2d 1288; 15 ALR4th 1127; 88 ALR4th 711; 10 ALR Fed. 185; 115 ALR Fed. 381; 119 ALR Fed. 589.

Propriety, and effect as double jeopardy, of court's grant of new trial on own motion in criminal case, 85 ALR2d 486.

Former jeopardy as ground for prohibition, 94 ALR2d 1048.

Conviction or acquittal in previous criminal case as bar to revocation or suspension of driver's license on same factual charges, 96 ALR2d 612.

Conviction or acquittal of one offense, in court having no jurisdiction to try offense arising out of same set of facts, later charged in another court, as putting accused in jeopardy of latter offense, 4 ALR3d 874.

Subsequent trial, after stopping former trial to try accused for greater offense, as constituting double jeopardy, 6 ALR3d 905.

Modern status of doctrine of res judicata in criminal cases, 9 ALR3d 203.

Earlier prosecution for offense during which homicide was committed as bar to prosecution for homicide, 11 ALR3d 834.

Propriety of increased punishment on new trial for same offense, 12 ALR3d 978.

When does jeopardy attach in a nonjury trial, 49 ALR3d 1039.

Prosecution for robbery of one person as bar to subsequent prosecution for robbery of another person committed at the same time, 51 ALR3d 693.

Former jeopardy: propriety of trial court's declaration of mistrial or discharge of jury, without accused's consent, on ground of prosecution's disclosure of prejudicial matter to, or making prejudicial remarks in presence of jury, 77 ALR3d 1143.

Multiple instances of forcible intercourse involving same defendant and same victim as constituting multiple crimes of rape, 81 ALR3d 1228.

Acquittal as bar to prosecution of accused for perjury committed at trial, 89 ALR3d 1098.

Double jeopardy as bar to retrial after grant of defendant's motion for mistrial, 98 ALR3d 997.

Applicability of double jeopardy to juvenile court proceedings, 5 ALR4th 234.

Conviction or acquittal in federal court as bar to prosecution in state court for state offense based on same facts — modern view, 6 ALR4th 802.

Validity, propriety, and effect of allowing or prohibiting media's broadcasting, recording, or photographing court proceedings, 14 ALR4th 121.

Retrial on greater offense following reversal of plea-based conviction of lesser offense, 14 ALR4th 970.

What constitutes "manifest necessity" for state prosecutor's dismissal of action, allowing subsequent trial despite jeopardy's having attached, 14 ALR4th 1014.

Power of state court, during same term, to increase severity of lawful sentence — modern status, 26 ALR4th 905.

Power of court to increase severity of unlawful sentence — modern status, 28 ALR4th 147.

Former jeopardy as bar to retrial of criminal defendant after original trial court's sua sponte declaration of a mistrial — state cases, 40 ALR4th 741.

Automobiles: validity and construction of legislation authorizing revocation or suspension of operator's license for "habitual," "persistent," or "frequent" violations of traffic regulations, 48 ALR4th 367.

Double jeopardy: various acts of weapons violations as separate or continuing offense, 80 ALR4th 631.

Determination that state failed to prove charges relied upon for revocation of probation as barring subsequent criminal action based on same underlying charges, 2 ALR5th 262.

Conviction or acquittal in federal court as bar to prosecution in state court for state offense based on same facts—Modern view, 97 ALR5th 201.

Double jeopardy considerations in federal criminal cases — Supreme Court cases, 162 ALR Fed. 415.

Paragraph XIX. Treason.

Treason against the State of Georgia shall consist of insurrection against the state, adhering to the state's enemies, or giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason except on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act or confession in open court.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVI.

Cross references. — Treason and punishment for treason, U.S. Const., art. III, sec. III, cls. 1 and 2, and § 16-11-1.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 70 Am. Jur. 2d, Sedition, Subversive Activities, and Treason, § 1 et seq.

C.J.S. — 87 C.J.S., Treason, § 1 et seq.

Paragraph XX. Conviction, effect of.

No conviction shall work corruption of blood or forfeiture of estate.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVII.

Cross references. — Treason and punishment for treason, U.S. Const., art. III, sec. III, cl. 2 and § 44-5-210.

Law reviews. — For article on whether one's property is forfeited after a conviction based on a nolo contendere plea, see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 723 (1979).

For note, "Vesting Title in a Murderer: Where is the Equity in the Georgia Supreme Court's Interpretation of the Slayer Statute in Levenson?," see 45 Ga. L. Rev. 877 (2011).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

This guaranty imposes no restriction upon valid exercise of police power. Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. State, 135 Ga. 545, 69 S.E. 725, 32 L.R.A. 20 (1910), aff'd, 234 U.S. 280, 34 S. Ct. 829, 58 L. Ed. 1312 (1914), aff'd, 234 U.S. 280, 34 S. Ct. 829, 58 L. Ed. 1312 (1914); Mack v. Westbrook, 148 Ga. 690, 98 S.E. 339 (1919).

By reason of this paragraph, felon or the felon's offspring may take testamentary benefits. Smith v. DuBose, 78 Ga. 413, 3 S.E. 309, 6 Am. St. R. 260 (1887).

Husband did not forfeit inheritance by murdering wife. — The fact that an heir kills the person from whom the heir expects to inherit will not change the application of the statutes of descent. Hagan v. Cone, 21 Ga. App. 416, 94 S.E. 602 (1917).

When wife dies without issue, husband is her sole heir and his right of inheritance is not forfeited by reason of having murdered her. Crumley v. Hall, 202 Ga. 588, 43 S.E.2d 646 (1947).

Confiscation of bribe money not prohibited forfeiture. — When trial court, in bribery case, ordered confiscation of bribe money and ruled that the money might be used toward payment of a fine assessed in the case, and if the bribe money did not exceed the maximum fine under former Code 1933, § 26-2301 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-10-2), the confiscation was not tantamount to a forfeiture prohibited under former Code 1933, § 85-1109 (see now O.C.G.A. § 44-5-210) and this paragraph. Hall v. State, 155 Ga. App. 724, 272 S.E.2d 578 (1980).

Statute was not unconstitutional. — Former § 2500 of the Civil Code 1910 (now repealed, but see now O.C.G.A. § 33-25-5), which provided that “death by suicide, or by the hands of justice, either punitive or preventive, releases the insurer from the obligation of his contract,” is not unconstitutional as being in conflict with this paragraph and the similar provision of U.S. Const., art. III, sec. III, cl. 1, providing that no conviction “shall work corruption of blood, or forfeiture” of estate. Adams v. Sovereign Camp, Woodmen of the World, 176 Ga. 6, 167 S.E. 604 (1932).

Cited in Caldwell v. Hill, 179 Ga. 417, 176 S.E. 381 (1934); Moore v. Moore, 225 Ga. 340, 168 S.E.2d 318 (1969); Moore v. Moore, 231 Ga. 232, 201 S.E.2d 133 (1973).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Forfeiture of public retirement system rights. — The General Assembly has the authority to enact a statute which proposes the forfeiture of earned retirement benefits of future public employees due to the conviction of a crime; however, an amendment to the Georgia Constitution proposing such a forfeiture by employees who are currently by law vested with rights under the public retirement system would, in all probability, be unconstitutional under the federal Impairment Clause contained in U.S. Const., art. I, sec. X. 1985 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U85-3.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Revocability of power or agency to collect interest in estate, 7 ALR 947.

Civil effects of sentence to life imprisonment, 139 ALR 1308.

Paragraph XXI. Banishment and whipping as punishment for crime.

Neither banishment beyond the limits of the state nor whipping shall be allowed as a punishment for crime.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XVIII.

Cross references. — Corporal punishment and restraint, §§ 38-2-1055 and 42-5-58.

Law reviews. — For article, “The Georgia Bill of Rights: Dead or Alive?,” see 34 Emory L.J. 341 (1985).

For note, “Behind Closed Doors: An Empirical Inquiry Into the Nature of Prison Discipline in Georgia,” see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 919 (1974).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Banishment limited to mean only banishment beyond limits of state. —

The drafters of the constitutional prohibition against banishment limited this general definition by choosing to define banishment more narrowly to mean only banishment beyond the limits of the state. State v. Collett, 232 Ga. 668, 208 S.E.2d 472 (1974).

No prohibition against banishment from specified areas within state. —

The 1877 drafters of this constitutional provision intended to prohibit banishment “beyond the limits of the state,” but not to prohibit banishment from specified areas within the state. State v. Collett, 232 Ga. 668, 208 S.E.2d 472 (1974).

Banishment of a defendant from specified areas in Georgia, imposed as a condition for suspension of a sentence by a trial court, does not violate the public policy of the state. State v. Collett, 232 Ga. 668, 208 S.E.2d 472 (1974).

An order modifying the trial court’s prior banishment order imposed as a condition of the defendant’s probation was upheld on appeal, as was the denial of the defendant’s motion to withdraw a negotiated plea, because: (1) the defendant’s sentence was independent, and thus, not part of the negotiated plea agreement; and (2) the trial court adequately considered that the defendant’s crimes were likely motivated by the relationship the defendant had with the victim, the defendant’s ex-spouse, where the ex-spouse resided and worked, as well as where the ex-spouse’s immediate family lived, by determining that the banishment order was issued to protect those affected, but also served a rehabilitative purpose by removing a temptation by the defendant to re offend. Hallford v. State, 289 Ga. App. 350, 657 S.E.2d 10 (2008).

Habeas court properly denied defendant’s petition for habeas relief based on the contention that a condition of probation banishing the defendant from every county in the State of Georgia but one was unconstitutional as the defendant failed to show that the probation condition to remain in Toombs County only was unreasonable or otherwise failed to bear a logical relationship to the rehabilitative scheme of the sentence pronounced. The Supreme Court of Georgia noted that the banishment was justified to protect the victim, the defendant’s ex-spouse, from the defendant’s propensity for violence toward the victim. Terry v. Hamrick, 284 Ga. 24, 663 S.E.2d 256 (2008), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 510, 172 L.Ed.2d 375 (2008).

Defendant failed to meet the burden of proving on the record that the condition of probation banishing the defendant from Bartow and Gordon Counties was unreasonable because the record contained no evidence supporting the defendant’s contentions regarding the restrictions on the defendant’s ability to obtain release from confinement and begin serving the remainder of a sentence under probation. Mallory v. State, 335 Ga. App. 852, (2016).

Cited in Sanchez v. State, 234 Ga. App. 809, 508 S.E.2d 185 (1998).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 21A Am. Jur. 2d, Criminal Law, § 883 et seq.

Am. Jur. Trials. — Public School Liability: Constitutional Tort Claims for Excessive Punishment and Failure to Supervise Students, 48 Am. Jur. Trials 587.

Paragraph XXII. Involuntary servitude.

There shall be no involuntary servitude within the State of Georgia except as a punishment for crime after legal conviction thereof or for contempt of court.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XIX.

Cross references. — Slavery prohibited, U.S. Const., amend. 13.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

This paragraph was directed against any attempt to reestablish slavery. Pearson v. Wimbish, 124 Ga. 701, 52 S.E. 751, 4 Ann. Cas. 501 (1906).

This paragraph prohibits leasing of convicts to private persons. Penitentiary Co. v. Rountree, 113 Ga. 799, 39 S.E. 508 (1901).

Right to provide for control of one's labor by contract is not prohibited. Potts v. Riddle, 5 Ga. App. 378, 63 S.E. 253 (1908).

Ballplayers. — A ballplayer may be released from one club to another. Augusta Baseball Ass'n v. Thomasville Baseball Club, 147 Ga. 201, 93 S.E. 208, 1917F L.R.A. 841 (1917).

Labor under municipal control as punishment not violative of paragraph. — To punish an offender charged with the violation of a valid municipal ordinance by confining the offender at labor under municipal control is not obnoxious to this paragraph. Pearson v. Wimbish, 124 Ga. 701, 52 S.E. 751, 4 Ann. Cas. 501 (1906).

"Crime" construed. Pearson v. Wimbish, 124 Ga. 701, 52 S.E. 751, 4 Ann. Cas. 501 (1906); Williams v. City of Hazelhurst, 11 Ga. App. 194, 74 S.E. 1039 (1912).

Involuntary demotions do not conflict with prohibition against involuntary servitude. Brown v. State Merit Sys. of Personnel Admin., 245 Ga. 239, 264 S.E.2d 186 (1980).

Statute does not create involuntary servitude. — The legislative purpose of former Code 1933, § 26-1808 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-8-4) was to punish for the fraudulent conversion, and not for a failure to comply with a contractual obligation. It follows that former Code 1933, § 26-1808 was not unconstitutional for violating due process, creating involuntary servitude, or imprisoning for debt. Smith v. State, 229 Ga. 727, 194 S.E.2d 82 (1972).

Involuntary servitude not criminal defense. — Involuntary servitude is a constitutional violation, as well as a criminal offense, but is not a criminal defense; therefore, the trial court did not err in failing to give the defendant's requested charges on involuntary servitude in a prosecution for selling and trafficking in cocaine in which the defendant alleged that the defendant had been illegally procured as an agent to work for the state involuntarily in connection with drug transactions. Satterfield v. State, 248 Ga. App. 479, 546 S.E.2d 859 (2001).

Cited in King v. State, 174 Ga. 432, 163 S.E. 168 (1932); Garner v. Wood, 188 Ga. 463, 4 S.E.2d 137 (1939).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 45 Am. Jur. 2d, Involuntary Servitude and Peonage, § 1 et seq.

C.J.S. — 16A C.J.S., Constitutional Law, § 798 et seq.

ALR. — Injunction against strike as violating constitutional provision against involuntary servitude, 46 ALR 1541.

Court appointment of attorney to represent, without compensation, indigent in civil action, 52 ALR4th 1063.

Paragraph XXIII. Imprisonment for debt.

There shall be no imprisonment for debt.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XX.

Cross references. — Payment of fine as condition of probation, § 17-10-8. Assessment and payment of costs of criminal proceedings, § 17-11-1 et seq.

Law reviews. — For article, “Jury Trials in Contempt Cases,” see 20 Ga. B.J. 297 (1957).

For note, “Wrongful Repossession in Georgia,” see 8 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 223 (1992).

For comment criticizing Messenger v. State, 209 Ga. 340, 72 S.E.2d 460 (1952), see 4 Mercer L. Rev. 371 (1953). For comment on Plapinger v. State, 217 Ga. 11, 120 S.E.2d 609 (1961), see 25 Ga. B.J. 102 (1962).

JUDICIAL DECISIONSANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

IMPRISONMENT FOR CONTEMPT

PERMISSIBLE PROBATION CONDITIONS

PERMISSIBLE PUNISHMENT

General Consideration

Language commands three departments of government to refrain from imprisoning for debt. — The unambiguous language of this paragraph leaves no room for equivocation, exception, or doubt. It simply means that the sovereign people, speaking through their Constitution, command the three departments of the government — legislative, executive, and judicial — and all officials of those departments to refrain from imprisoning a single person for debt. Messenger v. State, 209 Ga. 340, 72 S.E.2d 460 (1952). For comment, see 4 Mercer L. Rev. 371 (1953).

Inhibition of Constitution applies to any and all imprisonment for debt, irrespective of the period of its duration or the means whereby it is accomplished. Messenger v. State, 209 Ga. 340, 72 S.E.2d 460 (1952). For comment, see 4 Mercer L. Rev. 371 (1953).

Criminal laws cannot be invoked to enforce payment of debts. — However equitable it may seem that the victim of the transaction should be paid the money which the victim was induced to part with by fraudulent representations, there is no provision in the law of the state for hanging over the head of a convicted criminal the threatened enforcement of an imposed sentence for the purpose of coercing the criminal to pay a debt. Criminal laws cannot be invoked to enforce the payment of debts. Ray v. State, 40 Ga. App. 145, 149 S.E. 64 (1929).

Deputy did not show entitlement to official immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d) as to the claims of false arrest and malicious prosecution because plaintiff offered evidence tending to show that the deputy violated Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXIII and O.C.G.A. § 51-7-20; thus, there were material fact issues precluding summary judgment. Jordan v. Mosley, 487 F.3d 1350 (11th Cir. 2007).

Court without authority to order part of fine to be paid as debt. — The fact that the court was without authority to order a part of the fine to be paid as a debt would not render the whole sentence void. Only that part which attempted to make such illegal distribution would be void. Though part of a sentence is unauthorized by law, that part will not make void the whole, but that which is good may be enforced. Ray v. State, 40 Ga. App. 145, 149 S.E. 64 (1929).

When the judgments are to be construed as imposing a chain gang and jail sentence, to be discharged on the payment of a fine of $100.00, and an additional sum of $400.00 to the prosecutrix, as a penalty, then the defendant was entitled to be released upon the payment of the $100.00 fine, the court being without authority to order the defendant to pay, as a part of the penalty, an additional sum to the prosecutrix. Ray v. State, 40 Ga. App. 145, 149 S.E. 64 (1929).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Failure to pay taxes not punishable by imprisonment. — While there is no constitutional inhibition against criminalizing the failure to make an income tax return, income tax obligations constitute “debts” and any statute which characterizes the failure to pay income tax as an offense punishable by imprisonment violates the constitutional prohibition against imprisonment for debt. State v. Higgins, 254 Ga. 88, 326 S.E.2d 728 (1985).

Cited in Walden v. Sellers, 174 Ga. 774, 163 S.E. 897 (1932); Summers v. State, 63 Ga. App. 445, 11 S.E.2d 409 (1940); Howard v. State, 222 Ga. 525, 150 S.E.2d 834 (1966); Lindsey v. Solutions Exch., Inc., 178 Bankr. 895 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1995).

Imprisonment for Contempt

Editor’s notes. — In addition to the cases noted under this heading, see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXII, which specifically authorizes imprisonment for contempt of court.

Imprisonment for contempt is lawful. Smith v. McLendon, 59 Ga. 523 (1877); Clements v. Tillman, 79 Ga. 451, 5 S.E. 194, 11 Am. St. R. 441 (1887); Lamar v. Lamar, 123 Ga. 827, 51 S.E. 763, 107 Am. St. R. 169, 3 Ann. Cas. 294 (1905); Samel v. Dodd, 142 F. 68 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 201 U.S. 646, 26 S. Ct. 761, 50 L. Ed. 903 (1906).

Imprisonment for civil contempt in alimony case is permissible. — Imprisonment for civil contempt in a case involving alimony when the contemnor, although ordered imprisoned, may be purged prior to the imprisonment, was constitutionally permissible. Kaufmann v. Kaufmann, 246 Ga. 266, 271 S.E.2d 175 (1980).

Unconditional imprisonment for nonpayment of alimony permissible. — A finding of criminal contempt with the sanction of unconditional imprisonment for nonpayment of alimony is constitutionally permissible. Kaufmann v. Kaufmann, 246 Ga. 266, 271 S.E.2d 175 (1980).

Contempt order was abuse of discretion and amounted to imprisonment for debt. — The court erred in confining defendant to the custody of the sheriff until the defendant was purged of contempt by paying the entire sum of $8,667.00, found to be the amount of alimony in arrears; it was an abuse of discretion to require the defendant to pay the entire amount when the evidence disclosed the defendant was unable to comply, and amounted to imprisonment for debt. Blalock v. Blalock, 214 Ga. 586, 105 S.E.2d 721 (1958).

Failure to pay the $60,000 required under a consent decree provided no grounds for a contempt ruling when the consent decree was not interlocutory and incarcerating the debtor for contempt would have violated the clear prohibition in Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXIII. Hill v. Paluzzi, 261 Ga. App. 123, 581 S.E.2d 730 (2003).

Imprisonment for refusal to pay support, not for debt. — A person who refuses to pay alimony or child support when the person is able to do so is imprisoned for the person’s refusal to abide by the court’s order, not for debt. Ensley v. Ensley, 239 Ga. 860, 238 S.E.2d 920 (1977).

A parent who willfully refuses to pay child support which the parent is able to pay and which is required by an order of court may be found guilty of either civil or criminal contempt of court, or both, and dealt with as provided by law. Ensley v. Ensley, 239 Ga. 860, 238 S.E.2d 920 (1977).

Settlement agreement in divorce proceeding. — An order of specific performance as to a merely private debt in the form of an unincorporated settlement agreement in a divorce proceeding cannot be deemed to be a more adequate remedy than an action at law for breach of contract damages, since that order cannot constitutionally be enforced by contempt and would not obviate the necessity of the obligee's resort to successive lawsuits for the obligor's future breaches. Eickhoff v. Eickhoff, 263 Ga. 498, 435 S.E.2d 914 (1993).

Permissible Probation Conditions

Probation conditions certainly may be imposed under this paragraph, and unless illegal or unreasonable should be upheld. Davis v. State, 53 Ga. App. 325, 185 S.E. 400 (1936).

Privatization of probation services.

— In a suit brought by misdemeanor defendants challenging the privatization of probation services under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-100(g)(1), the Georgia Supreme Court agreed with the trial court that § 42-8-100(g)(1) was not unconstitutional on the statute's face and did not offend due process or equal protection nor condone imprisonment for debt. Sentinel Offender Svcs., LLC v. Glover, No. S14A1271, S14X1272, 2014 Ga. LEXIS 940 (Nov. 24, 2014).

Imposition of payment of child support arrears as a condition of probation after conviction for abandonment does not violate this paragraph. Geiger v. State, 140 Ga. App. 800, 232 S.E.2d 109 (1976).

Condition of restitution imposed for suspending sentence is legal and constitutional. — The payment of restitution to an injured party as a condition imposed for suspending a sentence upon conviction of an offense against the laws of this state does not prevent the sentence from being valid and legal, and is not violative of this paragraph. Maurier v. State, 112 Ga. App. 297, 144 S.E.2d 918 (1965).

Permissible Punishment

No intent to protect debtor who violates penal statute in creating debt. — The framers of the Constitution did not intend, by protecting the citizen against imprisonment for a mere debt, to thereby render one who happened to owe a debt immune from prosecution, if in creating the debt the person violated, at the same time and in the same Act, a penal statute in which all the citizens of the commonwealth are interested; any other rule would protect one who obtained money by false pretense, or even by robbery. Duncan v. State, 172 Ga. 186, 157 S.E. 670 (1931).

This paragraph is not violated by imprisoning person who becomes another's debtor by fraudulent practice. Lamar v. State, 120 Ga. 312, 47 S.E. 958 (1904).

Provision aimed at fraudulent conduct and not failure to pay debts.

— The offense declared in former Code 1933, §§ 26-7408 and 26-7409 was not for failure to perform service or pay debts, but for fraudulently procuring money, or other thing of value. The fraudulent conduct of the defendant was the gist of the crime, not merely the defendant's failure to perform the defendant's contract. Bullard v. State, 60 Ga. App. 33, 2 S.E.2d 725 (1939).

Punishment under fraudulent conversion statute not imprisonment for debt.

— The legislative purpose of former Code 1933, § 26-1808 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-8-4) was to punish for the fraudulent conversion, and not for a failure to comply with a contractual obligation. It follows that this section was not unconstitutional for violating due process, creating involuntary servitude, or imprisoning for debt. Smith v. State, 229 Ga. 727, 194 S.E.2d 82 (1972).

Imprisonment as a sentence for a conviction of theft by conversion does not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, prohibiting imprisonment for debt, because the Constitution does not forbid imprisonment for criminal conduct merely because the criminal conduct also results in civil debt. Connally v. State, 265 Ga. 563, 458 S.E.2d 336 (1995).

Former Code 1933, § 26-1704 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-9-20) did not authorize imprisonment for debt as prohibited by this paragraph. Cobb v. State, 246 Ga. 567, 272 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Act making overdrawing bank account criminal offense does not violate this paragraph. Duncan v. State, 172 Ga. 186, 157 S.E. 670 (1931).

Imprisonment for giving bad check not imprisonment for debt. — A person who might be imprisoned for the act of giving a bad check for an antecedent debt is not imprisoned for debt but, rather, for an independent act. Cobb v. State, 246 Ga. 567, 272 S.E.2d 299 (1980).

Permissible Punishment (Cont'd)

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 16B Am. Jur. 2d, Constitutional Law, § 674 et seq.

C.J.S. — 16A C.J.S., Constitutional Law, § 813 et seq.

ALR. — Alimony or maintenance as debt within constitutional or statutory provisions against imprisonment for debt, 30 ALR 130.

Constitutional provision against imprisonment for debt as applicable to non-payment of tax, fee, or other obligation to government, 40 ALR 77.

Constitutional provision against imprisonment for debt as applicable in bastardy proceeding, 118 ALR 1109.

Constitutional provision against imprisonment for debt as applicable to non-payment of tax, 48 ALR3d 1324.

Validity and construction of statute providing criminal penalties for failure of contractor who has received payment from owner to pay laborers or materialmen, 78 ALR3d 563.

Validity of requirement that, as condition of probation, indigent defendant reimburse defense costs, 79 ALR3d 1025.

Constitutionality of "bad checks" statute, 16 ALR4th 631.

Validity, construction, and effect of body execution statutes allowing imprisonment based on judgment, debt, or the like — modern cases, 79 ALR4th 232.

Paragraph XXIV. Costs.

No person shall be compelled to pay costs in any criminal case except after conviction on final trial.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXI.

Cross references. — Costs to indigents, §§ 5-3-22 and 9-15-2. Appeal costs, §§ 5-3-22 and 5-4-5. Costs following appellate reversal, §§ 5-4-17 and 5-6-5. Judgments, § 9-11-54. Court and litigation costs, T. 9, C. 15. Constables' fees for levies and judicial sales, § 15-10-83. Costs in criminal cases generally, T. 17, C. 11. Cost against private citizen bringing action without reasonable grounds, § 41-3-6.

Law reviews. — For annual survey of criminal law, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 129 (1986).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Generally, defendant in criminal case can be taxed with costs. Giddens v. State, 156 Ga. App. 258, 274 S.E.2d 595 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 1026, 101 S. Ct. 1733, 68 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1981).

Attendance of witnesses and process to procure it are part of costs of trial. Roberts v. State, 72 Ga. 673 (1884).

When subpoena was given to the sheriff for service, but was not served, ostensibly because the sheriff was not paid a fee, the defendant had a right to compulsory process to obtain the witness. Harpe v. State, 134 Ga. App. 493, 214 S.E.2d 738 (1975).

Costs include charges for services rendered by officers of court. — Costs generally include all charges fixed by statute as compensation for services rendered by officers of the court in the progress of the cause. Giddens v. State, 156 Ga. App. 258, 274 S.E.2d 595 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 1026, 101 S. Ct. 1733, 68 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1981).

Sheriff and court reporter are also "officers of the court" for purposes of taxation of costs. Giddens v. State, 156 Ga. App. 258, 274 S.E.2d 595 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 1026, 101 S. Ct. 1733, 68 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1981).

All officers charging costs must always show authority of law to do so. Giddens v. State, 156 Ga. App. 258, 274 S.E.2d 595 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 1026, 101 S. Ct. 1733, 68 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1981).

This paragraph provides for payment of costs after trial in lower court and not appellate court. Swearengen v. State, 146 Ga. 3, 90 S.E. 283 (1916); Wynne v. Stonecypher, 146 Ga. 5, 90 S.E. 284 (1916).

Probation may be conditioned upon payment of expenses in accordance with the conditions of probation. Giddens v. State, 156 Ga. App. 258, 274 S.E.2d 595 (1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 1026, 101 S. Ct. 1733, 68 L. Ed. 2d 220 (1981).

Cited in Shafer v. State, 193 Ga. 748, 20 S.E.2d 34 (1942); Trowbridge v. Dominy, 92 Ga. App. 177, 88 S.E.2d 161 (1955); Holloway v. State, 178 Ga. App. 141, 342 S.E.2d 363 (1986).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Costs cannot be collected until conviction. — Since cases were never signed by the defendant or a judge, which were not nol prossed, and which were transmitted to the clerk's office prior to the return of the indictment against the officer, the county does not have a claim for any portion of the money based on chargeable fees of its officers. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-90.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 20 Am. Jur. 2d, Costs, § 1 et seq.

ALR. — Items of cost of prosecution for which defendant may be held, 65 ALR2d 854.

Taxable costs and disbursements as including expenses for bonds incident to steps taken in action, 90 ALR2d 448.

Paragraph XXV. Status of the citizen.

The social status of a citizen shall never be the subject of legislation.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXII.

Cross references. — Prohibition on special laws relating to rights or status of private persons, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Constitutionality of statute fixing or regulating (or authorizing the fixing or regulating) of prices for personal services, 111 ALR 353; 119 ALR 1481.

Paragraph XXVI. Exemptions from levy and sale.

The General Assembly shall protect by law from levy and sale by virtue of any process under the laws of this state a portion of the property of each person in an amount of not less than $1,600.00 and shall have authority to define to whom any such additional exemptions shall be allowed; to specify the amount of such exemptions; to provide for the manner of exempting such property and for the sale, alienation, and encumbrance thereof; and to provide for the waiver of said exemptions by the debtor.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXIII.

Cross references. — Exemption from levy and sale, § 44-13-1 et seq.

Law reviews. — For article discussing liens and assignments of bankrupt exemption property under Georgia practice and decisions, see 1 Ga. L. Rev. No. 2, p. 31 (1927).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Alienage of resident of this state is no bar to claim of exemption provided by this paragraph. In re Trammell, 5 F.2d 326 (N.D. Ga.), petition denied, 8 F.2d 451 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 270 U.S. 649, 46 S. Ct. 349, 70 L. Ed. 780 (1925).

“Setting apart” explained. — “Setting apart” of debtor’s exempt property is a mere identification of property to which exemption shall be applied, the burden of securing which is put on the debtor. In re Trammell, 5 F.2d 326 (N.D. Ga.), petition denied, 8 F.2d 451 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 270 U.S. 649, 46 S. Ct. 349, 70 L. Ed. 780 (1925).

Purpose of Constitution in providing that certain property shall be exempt from levy and sale was not to prohibit any other species of property from being declared exempt, but to guarantee the exemption of the property specified for the benefit of the persons entitled thereto, to be set aside in the manner to be provided by the General Assembly. Southall v. Blount, 182 Ga. 368, 185 S.E. 321 (1936).

Provision not exhaustive as to other species of property which may be exempted. — Even if the legislature may not amend the homestead exemptions provided for in the Constitution so as to lessen or extend the exemption as to the species of property therein dealt with, the constitutional provisions are not exhaustive as to other species of property. Southall v. Blount, 182 Ga. 368, 185 S.E. 321 (1936).

Exemption provided for in this paragraph does not include money as subject to exemption. Southall v. Blount, 182 Ga. 368, 185 S.E. 321 (1936).

Legislature, in enacting former Code 1933, § 51-601, was dealing with different species of property from that dealt with in the Constitution. Southall v. Blount, 182 Ga. 368, 185 S.E. 321 (1936).

Former Code 1933, § 46-213, relating to exemption of benefits to be paid by fraternal benefit societies, is not violative of this paragraph providing for exemption from levy and sale of the property of certain specified persons, realty or personalty, or both, to the value in the aggregate of $1,600.00; such provision not being a limitation upon legislative power as to a species of property not therein dealt with and not being applicable to cases of exemption of “money or other benefit” payable by a fraternal benefit society. Southall v. Blount, 182 Ga. 368, 185 S.E. 321 (1936).

Applicant for homestead is not authorized to take both statutory and constitutional homesteads. Worley v. Arnold, 74 Ga. App. 772, 41 S.E.2d 568 (1947).

Judgment debtor claiming invalid statutory homestead entitled to constitutional homestead. — When statutory homestead claimed by a judgment debtor is valid, and the debtor cannot thereafter take constitutional homestead, but, if the former was invalid the debtor was entitled to the latter. Worley v. Arnold, 74 Ga. App. 772, 41 S.E.2d 568 (1947).

No valid conveyance of land during existence of homestead. — When a homestead was set apart to the head of a family, under the Constitution of 1877, in land belonging to the head of the family, the head of the family could not make a valid conveyance of the land during the existence of the homestead, and a deed so made was void. Dorsey v. Dorsey, 189 Ga. 662, 7 S.E.2d 273 (1940).

Creditor may seek to have exempted property subjected to payment when debtor has waived exemption. — When a debtor has not set aside household and kitchen furniture as prescribed in Ga. L. 1924, p. 57, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 44-13-42), and when the debtor has executed a note to a creditor waiving this exemption, the creditor may seek to have the exempted property subjected to the payment of the debtor's note. Turner v. Caudill, 175 Ga. 170, 165 S.E. 24 (1932).

Homestead right can be asserted against purchaser with notice. — Real estate paid for in full with other realty previously set apart in due and proper manner under the homestead and exemption laws of this state, and dealt with by the head of the family and the spouse (there being no other beneficiaries of the homestead) as exempted property, takes the place of the latter and is impressed with the homestead character, and such homestead right can be asserted against a purchaser with notice. Amerson v. Cox, 173 Ga. 477, 160 S.E. 506 (1931).

Cited in Aspinwall v. Latimer, 174 Ga. 712, 164 S.E. 50 (1932); Blackshear Mfg. Co. v. Carter, 180 Ga. 828, 181 S.E. 155 (1935); McDaniel v. Kelley, 61 Ga. App. 105, 5 S.E.2d 672 (1939); Pass v. Pass, 195 Ga. 155, 23 S.E.2d 697 (1942); Rose v. Crane Heating Co., 198 Ga. 295, 31 S.E.2d 717 (1944).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Homestead exemption must be applied for and is not granted solely on basis of information contained in tax return. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 292.

Delinquent state tax collection. — A taxpayer's assertion of the statutory homestead exemption contained in a former law would not prevent the Revenue Department from levying upon the taxpayer's personal automobile to satisfy delinquent state taxes. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-14.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 31 Am. Jur. 2d, Exemptions, §§ 1 et seq., 24 et seq.

C.J.S. — 35 C.J.S., Exemptions, § 1 et seq.

ALR. — Validity of mortgage executed by entryman on public land before patent, 41 ALR 938.

Loss of homestead rights by wife through absence enforced by act of husband, 42 ALR 1162; 129 ALR 305.

Deposit of exempt funds as affecting debtor's exemption, 67 ALR 1203.

Estoppel to claim, or waiver of, homestead by direction of judgment debtor to levy on real estate, 101 ALR 851.

One who supports (or is under a duty to support) in whole or part relatives who do not live with him as "head of family," "householder," etc., within homestead exemption statute, 118 ALR 1386.

Debtor's exemption of personalty as attaching to proceeds of sale or exchange thereof, 119 ALR 467.

Creation of homestead right in real estate as affecting previous mortgage, trust deed, or purchase money or vendor's lien, 123 ALR 427.

Constitutionally permissible classification or discrimination in debtors' exemption statutes, 128 ALR 107.

Exemption of motor vehicle from seizure for debt, 37 ALR2d 714.

Enforcement of claim for alimony or support, or for attorneys' fees and costs incurred in connection therewith, against exemptions, 54 ALR2d 1422.

What state exemption law, in point of time, governs bankrupt's exemption rights, 61 ALR2d 748.

Wife as head of family within homestead or other property exemption provision, 67 ALR2d 779.

What is "necessary" furniture entitled to exemption from seizure for debt, 41 ALR3d 607.

Paragraph XXVII. Spouse's separate property.

The separate property of each spouse shall remain the separate property of that spouse except as otherwise provided by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXIV.

Cross references. — Each spouse's property separate, § 19-3-9.

Law reviews. — For note, "The Economics of Divorce in Georgia: Toward a Partnership Model of Marriage," see 12 Ga. L. Rev. 640 (1978).

For comment as to larceny of separate property of wife or husband, in light of Gaines v. State, 65 Ga. App. 763, 16 S.E.2d 517 (1941), see 4 Ga. B.J. 44 (1942).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — Some of the cases annotated under this paragraph were decided under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXIV and antecedent provisions providing for the separation only of the wife's property.

Barring of wife's action for loss of consortium against husband's employer was not a constitutional deprivation of right of wife when the husband had no tort claim against his employer under the Workers' Compensation Act, as the wife's right was derivative of the husband's right. Henderson v. Hercules, Inc., 253 Ga. 685, 324 S.E.2d 453 (1985).

This provision constitutes women as feme soles. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Mann, 234 Ga. 884, 218 S.E.2d 593 (1975).

This paragraph does not restrict a woman's assumption of debts of her husband. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Mann, 234 Ga. 884, 218 S.E.2d 593 (1975).

Sale by married woman to pay debt of husband is valid. — A sale by a married woman of property belonging to her separate estate, though made for the sole purpose of raising money with which to pay a debt or liability of her husband, is nevertheless valid and binding upon her, even if the purchaser, not being a creditor of the husband and having nothing to do with any arrangement or transaction between the husband and wife, knew that the proceeds thereof were to be applied for the purpose stated. Ross v. Durrence, 173 Ga. 457, 160 S.E. 370 (1931), later appeal, 181 Ga. 52, 181 S.E. 581 (1935).

Wife may legally procure third person to pay debt of her husband, and will be bound by her contract to reimburse the third person for so doing. Ross v. Durrence, 173 Ga. 457, 160 S.E. 370 (1931), later appeal, 181 Ga. 52, 181 S.E. 581 (1935).

Recovering part of separate estate applied on husband's debt. — When the defendant made threats to have the plaintiff's husband criminally prosecuted for a misappropriation of the defendant's funds unless she consented to a sale of a part of her separate estate and delivered the proceeds to the defendant to be applied against the debt due by the husband on account of the misappropriation, there was duress as to the plaintiff wife and the law would not deem her to be in pari delicto with the defendant so as to deny her relief in recovering a part of her separate estate which was, with the knowledge of the defendant, applied on her husband's debt. Thrift Credit Union v. Moore, 88 Ga. App. 92, 76 S.E.2d 129 (1953).

Action by husband against wife for recovery of property converted by her. — While the statutes of this state do not purport to change the common law in respect to personal torts committed by one spouse against the other, they do change the common law in respect to property rights of the wife; with respect to such rights she is a feme sole, and may be sued by her husband in a bail-trover proceeding for recovery of his personal property converted by her. Eddleman v. Eddleman, 183 Ga. 766, 189 S.E. 833 (1937).

Void instrument cannot be validated by subsequent conduct of married woman. — When an instrument is made by a married woman, "which is void by reason of being in violation of the special provisions of the law on that subject," it cannot be vitalized by any subsequent conduct on her part; she is as much disabled from rendering it valid after she makes it as she is from making it in the first instance. Baxter v. Bank of Grantville, 48 Ga. App. 458, 172 S.E. 810 (1934).

Cited in Taylor v. Vezzani, 109 Ga. App. 167, 135 S.E.2d 522 (1964); Stokes v. Stokes, 246 Ga. 765, 273 S.E.2d 169 (1980).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Proposed Equal Rights Amendment might affect all state laws which discriminate, even innocuously, between the sexes or deny or abridge any equality of rights between sexes for any reason whatsoever. 1970 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 70-165 (decided under Ga. Const. 1945, Art. IV, Sec. V, Para. I).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 41 Am. Jur. 2d, Husband and Wife, §§ 11 et seq., 19.

C.J.S. — 41 C.J.S., Husband and Wife, § 16 et seq.

ALR. — Right of wife to exclude husband from possession, use, or enjoyment of family residence or homestead owned by her, 21 ALR 745.

Validity of testamentary trust to promote women’s rights, 28 ALR 720.

Marriage as extinguishing contractual indebtedness between parties, 45 ALR2d 722.

Divorce and separation: appreciation in value of separate property during marriage without contribution by either spouse as separate or communal property, 24 ALR4th 453.

Divorce property distribution: real estate or trust property in which interest vested before marriage and was realized during marriage, 60 ALR4th 217.

Paragraph XXVIII. Fishing and hunting.

The tradition of fishing and hunting and the taking of fish and wildlife shall be preserved for the people and shall be managed by law and regulation for the public good. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 1, § 1, Para. 28, approved by Ga. L. 2005, p. 1533, § 1/SR 67.)

Editor’s notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 1533, § 1, redesignated former Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXVIII as present Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXIX.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 2005, p. 1533, § 1) which redesignated former Paragraph XXVIII as Paragraph XXIX and added present Paragraph XXVIII was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 7, 2006.

Paragraph XXIX. Enumeration of rights not denial of others.

The enumeration of rights herein contained as a part of this Constitution shall not be construed to deny to the people any inherent rights which they may have hitherto enjoyed. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 1, § 1, Para. 28; Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 1, § 1, Para. 29 as redesignated by Ga. L. 2005, p. 1533, § 1/SR 67.)

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXV.

Cross references. — Rights retained by people, U.S. Const., amend. 9.

Editor’s notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 2005, p. 1533, § 1) which redesignated former Paragraph XXVIII as Paragraph XXIX and added present Paragraph XXVIII was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 7, 2006.

Law reviews. — For article, “The Georgia Bill of Rights: Dead or Alive?” see 34 Emory L.J. 341 (1985).

For comment, “Pay What You Like —

No, Really: Why Copyright Law Should Make Digital Music Free for Noncommercial Uses,” see 58 Emory L.J. 1495 (2009).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

No inherent right to intoxicating liquors. — The people did not have an inherent right to make, sell, barter, give away, keep, and furnish intoxicating liquors. Whitley v. State, 134 Ga. 758, 68 S.E. 716 (1910); Saddler v. State, 148 Ga. 462, 97 S.E. 79 (1918).

Cited in Jackson v. Beavers, 156 Ga. 71, 118 S.E. 751 (1923); Green v. City of Atlanta, 162 Ga. 641, 135 S.E. 84 (1926); Gernatt v. Huie, 192 Ga. 729, 16 S.E.2d 587 (1941); Murphy v. West, 205 Ga. 116, 52 S.E.2d 600 (1949).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Renewal of copyright where author is dead, 19 ALR 295.

Right of privacy, 138 ALR 22; 57 ALR3d 16.

Waiver or loss of right of privacy, 57 ALR3d 16.

Constitutionality of state legislation imposing criminal penalties for personal possession or use of marijuana, 96 ALR3d 225.

SECTION II.

ORIGIN AND STRUCTURE OF GOVERNMENT

Paragraph

- I. Origin and foundation of government.
- II. Object of government.
- III. Separation of legislative, judicial, and executive powers.
- IV. Contempts.
- V. What acts void.
- VI. Superiority of civil authority.

Paragraph

- VII. Separation of church and state.
- VIII. Lotteries and nonprofit bingo games.
- IX. Sovereign immunity and waiver thereof; claims against the state and its departments, agencies, officers, and employees.

Law reviews. — For comment, “Keeping the Arms in Touch: Taking Political Accountability Seriously in the Eleventh Amendment Arm of the State Doctrine,” see 64 Emory L.J. 819 (2015).

Paragraph I. Origin and foundation of government.

All government, of right, originates with the people, is founded upon their will only, and is instituted solely for the good of the whole. Public officers are the trustees and servants of the people and are at all times amenable to them.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. II, Para. I.

Cross references. — Recall of elected officials, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. IV, and Ch. 4, T. 21.

Law reviews. — For article, “The Law of the Land,” focusing on the role of the Supreme Court, see 6 J. of Pub. L. 444 (1957). For article, “Conflicts of Interests of Public Officers and Employees,” see 13 Ga. St. B.J. 64 (1976). For article, “Some Thoughts on Lawyer/Legislators in the Georgia House of Representatives,” see 23 Ga. St. B.J. 110 (1987). For annual survey of legal ethics, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 269 (1986). For article, “Administrative Law,” see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 81 (2001). For article, “Local Government Law,” see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 389 (2001). For article, “The Status of Administrative Agencies under the Georgia Constitution,” 40 Ga. L. Rev. 1109 (2006). For article, “Must Government Contractors ‘Submit’ to Their Own Destruction?: Georgia’s Trade Secret Disclosure Exemption and United HealthCare of Georgia, Inc. v. Georgia Department of Community Health,” see 60 Mercer L. Rev. 825 (2009).

For comment on City of Atlanta v. Mapel, 121 Ga. App. 567, 174 S.E.2d 599 (1970), as to municipal corporations’ negligence liability for injuries sustained at municipal golf courses, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 608 (1971).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Election is expression of people’s will. — Under Georgia’s system of government, the method of expressing the will of the people is by voting in a legally held election. Wheeler v. Board of Trustees, 200 Ga. 323, 37 S.E.2d 322 (1946).

Power to elect Governor. — The general power or jurisdiction to elect a Governor remains in the people under the Constitution, and that as related to the election of such officer by the General Assembly, that body is an agency or tribunal of special or limited jurisdiction. Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947).

This paragraph imposes no restriction on the legislative power to control municipal governments and appoint municipal officers. Mayor of Americus v. Perry, 114 Ga. 871, 40 S.E. 1004, 57 L.R.A. 230 (1902).

Territory may be annexed to a city without submission of question to the people. Toney v. Mayor of Macon, 119 Ga. 83, 46 S.E. 80 (1903), appeal dismissed, 195 U.S. 625, 25 S. Ct. 791, 49 L. Ed. 350 (1904); White v. City of Atlanta, 134 Ga. 532, 68 S.E. 103 (1910).

Tort Claims Act. — The Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., does not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. I since the Act was enacted under the authority of an amendment approved by a majority of the voters. Dollar v. Dalton Pub. Schs., 233 Ga. App. 827, 505 S.E.2d 789 (1998).

Delegation to private organization of power of appointment to public office is unconstitutional. Rogers v. Medical Ass’n, 244 Ga. 151, 259 S.E.2d 85 (1979).

County commissioners act as trustees for taxpayers. — County commissioners, in selling county property, act as fiduciaries or trustees for the taxpayers and citizens of the county, and it is their duty in making a sale of such property to do everything reasonably within their power to obtain the best possible price. DeKalb County v. Wilson, 217 Ga. 566, 124 S.E.2d 273 (1962).

School board officials related to school employees. — Neither this paragraph nor the Education Code (O.C.G.A. § 20-1-1 et seq.) presume that elected school board officials whose family members are employed by the local school system act in violation of their public duty merely by participating in decisions affecting school operations. Ianicelli v. McNeely, 272 Ga. 234, 527 S.E.2d 189 (2000).

Removal of local school board members. — Whether characterized as setting a qualification for continued service on the local board in the extraordinary circumstance of an imminent loss of accreditation, or whether characterized as providing for removal for malfeasance, misfeasance, or nonfeasance in office, O.C.G.A. § 20-2-73 was held by the Georgia Supreme Court to be a permissible exercise of the legislative power to provide for the removal for cause of members of local boards. DeKalb County Sch. Dist. v. Ga. State Bd. of Educ., 294 Ga. 349, 751 S.E.2d 827 (2013).

Standard for public trustee. — This paragraph forbids a mayor to take a contract which it is the mayor's duty to supervise. Mayor of Macon v. Huff, 60 Ga. 221 (1878); Bates v. Bigby, 123 Ga. 727, 51 S.E. 717 (1905).

A trustee is held to something stricter than the morals of the market place. Not honesty alone, but the punctilio of an honor the most sensitive, is then the standard of behavior. Malcom v. Webb, 211 Ga. 449, 86 S.E.2d 489 (1955).

Legislator representing client against state. — The Constitution prohibits a legislator from representing a client, for the legislator's own financial gain, in any civil transaction or matter wherein the State of Georgia shall be an opposing party. Such proscriptions of law are not confined to legislators who are lawyers, but extend to every public officer. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources v. Sistrunk, 249 Ga. 543, 291 S.E.2d 524 (1982).

Allocation of a portion of the fines and forfeitures collected in this state to the Peace Officers' Annuity and Benefit Fund is not a violation of this paragraph because of the possibility that peace officers will institute prosecutions for the sole purpose of building the fund, as public officers are presumed to do their duty. Cole v. Foster, 207 Ga. 416, 61 S.E.2d 814 (1950).

Legislator may represent clients before state agencies. — Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. I does not prohibit a legislator, who is an attorney, from representing clients before a state administrative agency when no fee is charged for the services rendered. Georgia State Bd. of Pharmacy v. Lovvorn, 255 Ga. 259, 336 S.E.2d 238 (1985).

City Recorder of Commerce representing client against other public officials. — The City Recorder of Commerce, as a public officer of the City of Commerce, was prohibited as attorney and for the attorney's own financial gain from initiating or defending a lawsuit on behalf of another which sought to defeat the official public actions of other trustees of the people — specifically, the mayor and two city councilmen of the City of Commerce — and a motion to disqualify the attorney should have been granted. Stephenson v. Benton, 250 Ga. 726, 300 S.E.2d 803 (1983).

Billboard advertising. — Trial court properly determined that the billboard advertising statute, O.C.G.A. § 32-6-75.3(j), did not violate the trustees clause because the trustees clause did not apply because the city's challenges to the statute did not involve a public officer reaping personal financial gain at the expense of the public. City of Columbus v. Ga. Dep't of Transp., 292 Ga. 878, 742 S.E.2d 728 (2013).

Cited in City of Macon v. Georgia Power Co., 171 Ga. 40, 155 S.E. 34 (1930); Curtis v. Town of Helen, 171 Ga. 256, 155 S.E. 202 (1930); Von Schmidt v. Noland Co., 176 Ga. 784, 169 S.E. 11 (1933); National Fin. Co. v. Citizens Loan & Sav. Co., 184 Ga. 619, 192 S.E. 717 (1937); Moyers v. State, 186 Ga. 446, 197 S.E. 846 (1938); De Berry v. City of La Grange, 62 Ga. App. 74, 8 S.E.2d 146 (1940); McRae v. Boykin, 73 Ga. App. 67, 35 S.E.2d 548 (1945); Franklin v. Harper, 205 Ga. 779, 55 S.E.2d 221 (1949); Cole v. Foster, 207 Ga. 416, 61 S.E.2d 814 (1950); Cox v. Peters, 208 Ga. 498, 67 S.E.2d 579 (1951); Barge v. Camp, 209 Ga. 38, 70 S.E.2d 360 (1952); Goodwin v. Allen, 89 Ga. App. 187, 78 S.E.2d 804 (1953); Moore v. Wells, 212 Ga. 446, 93 S.E.2d 731 (1956); Jones v. Mayor of Athens, 105 Ga. App. 86, 123 S.E.2d 420 (1961); Raif v. State, 109 Ga. App. 354, 136 S.E.2d 169 (1964); Smith v. Abercrombie, 235 Ga. 741, 221 S.E.2d 802 (1975); Bradley v. Tenneco Oil Co., 146 Ga. App. 161, 245 S.E.2d 862 (1978); Chandler v. Miller, 952 F. Supp. 804 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Member of governmental authority may not be lessee or tenant of authority. — In view of the provisions of Ga. L. 1950, pp. 152 and 156, this paragraph, and the common law, any person who is a lessee or tenant of a governmental authority under a lease or rental agreement which that person originally executed, or which has been assigned or transferred to that individual, could not hold a position as a member of that authority so long as that person remained a lessee or tenant of the authority or had any interest in such lease or rental agreement. 1978 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U78-18.

Conflict of interest exists whenever state Representative acts as attorney at law in proceeding against state regardless of whether a fee is charged for the service. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-52.

Representative's arguing for client against state is inconsistent with responsibility of public officer. — When a Representative argues for a client against the state, the power entrusted to the Representative by the people is wielded against its source on behalf of the client. This misuse of the Representative's power is a breach of fiduciary duty and is inconsistent with constitutional responsibility of public officers under this paragraph. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-52.

Legislator conflict of interest. — A legislator/lawyer may represent a client before a state regulatory agency until such time as the lawyer's duty to the client demands that the lawyer advocate a position, on behalf of the client, which is different from the position taken by the state agency. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. U83-6.

Legislator's performance of legal or contract work for city or county. — There is no per se conflict of interest if a member of the General Assembly also serves as either a city or county attorney or performs contract work for a city or county within that legislator's district. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U84-34.

County commissioner conflict of interest. — The chair of a board of county commissioners cannot sell groceries to the county when the nature of that contract would require the chair to judge the chair's own continual performance, notwithstanding the use of a competitive sealed bid in awarding the contract. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-8.

Applicability to Regional Development Center board. — A Regional Development Center's authority to contract with a nonprofit corporation is limited by the conflict of interest provisions in O.C.G.A. § 50-8-36. 1992 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 92-1.

Commission member conflict of interest. — The Housing Trust Fund for the Homeless Commission's policy of having a member disclose the member's involvement and abstain from voting when the member is involved with an organization that applies to the Commission for funding is insufficient to relieve the conflict of interest. 1992 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 92-15.

Appearance of impropriety. — Even though O.C.G.A. § 45-10-25 potentially could authorize an attorney member of the State Ethics Commission to transact business with the Commission, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. I, and O.C.G.A. § 45-10-3 counsel against such a transaction as it could give rise to an appearance of impropriety if not an actual conflict of interest. 2002 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2002-4.

Service by public officers in private associations. — Although serving as an officer in a private association may not involve any pecuniary gain, a servant of the people should guard against undertaking a position which could cause conflicting loyalties. 1990 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 90-25.

State Board of Funeral Service inspectors appointed pursuant to O.C.G.A. Ch. 18, T. 43 are not prohibited by state law from holding appointed or elected office in private associations of funeral service practitioners. However, serving as an officer in such private association could create an appearance of impropriety by competing loyalties which may be owed to the association and to the board. 1990 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 90-25.

Member of legislator's law firm as registered agent for client. — A legislator must exercise the legislator's duties in such a way that the legislator's loyalty is not divided and the legislator does not use the public's trust to promote the legislator's own personal financial gain. Thus, although no statute expressly prohibits a member of the legislator's law firm from acting as a registered agent during the tenure as a member of the General Assembly, such activity could in fact create a constitutional conflict of interest. 1991 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U91-4.

Representation by lawyer/legislator. — Lawyer/legislator may represent the legal interests of a Georgia company on matters in other states, including political consulting and the drafting of legislation. However, even if there may not be a per se conflict of interest, a lawyer/legislator must always vigilantly guard against such conflicts developing depending upon the facts and circumstances of each situation, especially when matters arise involving the lawyer/legislator's own actions in the consideration of legislation within the General Assembly. 2009 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U2009-3.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 16 Am. Jur. 2d, Constitutional Law, § 5 et seq.

ALR. — Bias or interest of administrative officer sitting in zoning proceeding as necessitating disqualification of officer or affecting validity of zoning decision, 4 ALR6th 263.

Paragraph II. Object of government.

The people of this state have the inherent right of regulating their internal government. Government is instituted for the protection, security, and benefit of the people; and at all times they have the right to alter or reform the same whenever the public good may require it.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. II, Para. II.

Cross references. — Procedure for amending Constitution of Georgia, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. X, Sec. I.

Law reviews. — For comment on Rogers v. Medical Ass'n, 244 Ga. 151, 259 S.E.2d 85 (1979), invalidating Georgia statute requiring Governor's appointments to Composite State Board of Medical Examiners be made solely from nominees submitted by state medical society as an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority to a private organization, see 29 Emory L.J. 1183 (1980).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Delegation to private organization of power of appointment to public office is unconstitutional. Rogers v. Medical Ass'n, 244 Ga. 151, 259 S.E.2d 85 (1979).

The Atlanta City Council could not constitutionally delegate its subpoena power, the power to punish by contempt, and the power to require sworn testimony before a court reporter, to a purely private, advisory group, and an attempt by the city council to do so is void. Atlanta Journal v. Hill, 257 Ga. 398, 359 S.E.2d 913 (1987).

Cited in Williams v. Fears, 110 Ga. 585, 35 S.E. 699, 50 L.R.A. 685 (1900); Mayor of Americus v. Perry, 114 Ga. 871, 40 S.E. 1004, 57 L.R.A. 230 (1902); Lambert v. Norton, 119 Ga. 351, 46 S.E. 433 (1904); Green v. City of Atlanta, 162 Ga. 641, 135 S.E. 84 (1926); Mitchell-Huntley Cotton Co. v. Lawson, 377 F. Supp. 661 (M.D. Ga. 1973).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Submission to electorate of constitutional amendments. — Amendments to state Constitution can only be submitted to electorate in accordance with the method set forth in the Constitution, which requires that there must be a concurrence in the amendment by two-thirds of each House of the General Assembly. 1962 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 34.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 16A Am. Jur. 2d, Constitutional Law, § 214 et seq.

ALR. — Statute relating to municipal fire departments as interference with local self-government, 100 ALR 1078; 141 ALR 903.

Paragraph III. Separation of legislative, judicial, and executive powers.

The legislative, judicial, and executive powers shall forever remain separate and distinct; and no person discharging the duties of one shall at the same time exercise the functions of either of the others except as herein provided.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IV.

Cross references. — Enforcement of separation of powers by criminal action, § 16-10-9.

Law reviews. — For article, “Delegation in Georgia Local Government Law,” see 7 Ga. St. B.J. 9 (1970). For article, “Regulation of the Legal Profession — Judicial or Legislative?,” see 10 Ga. St. B.J. 589 (1974). For article, “Selected Oddities in Georgia Municipal Law,” see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 783 (1975). For annual survey of constitutional law, see 35 Mercer L. Rev. 73 (1983). For annual survey of administrative law, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 17 (1986). For article, “Federal and State ‘State Action’: The Undercritical Embrace of a Hypercriticized Doctrine,” see 24 Ga. L. Rev. 327 (1990). For survey of 1995 Eleventh Circuit cases on administrative law, see 47 Mercer L. Rev. 675 (1996). For article, “Campbell v. Georgia: Mandatory Minimum Sentencing Survives Separation of Power Attacks, Remaining a Viable Option for the Legislature in Its War on Crime,” see 17 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 637

(2001). For article, “The Status of Administrative Agencies under the Georgia Constitution,” see 40 Ga. L. Rev. 1109 (2006).

For comment on Georgia Bar Ass’n v. Lawyers Title Ins. Co., 222 Ga. 657, 151 S.E.2d 718 (1966), discussing constitutional permissibility of legislative definition of practice of law and suggesting solutions to unauthorized practice of law, see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 486 (1967). For comment on Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969) as to the constitutionality of the “State Bar Act” (§§ 15-19-30 through 15-19-34), see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 355 (1969). For comment discussing judicial unification of the bar in light of Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969), see 6 Ga. St. B.J. 325 (1970). For comment on Rogers v. Medical Ass’n, 244 Ga. 151, 259 S.E.2d 85 (1979), invalidating Georgia statute requiring Governor’s appointments to Composite State Board of Medical Examiners be made solely from nominees submitted by state medical society as an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority to a private organization, see 29 Emory L.J. 1183 (1980).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
 LEGISLATIVE POWERS
 JUDICIAL POWERS
 EXECUTIVE POWERS

General Consideration

Intent to assure independence of branches. — The Constitution provided for a separate existence, distinct functions, and absolute independence of the three coordinate branches of the state government — the executive, legislative, and judicial. Holliman v. State, 175 Ga. 232, 165 S.E. 11 (1932).

This paragraph is designed to preserve inviolate the separation of the legislative and the judicial branches of the government, and to assure to each independence in the sphere of its own functions. Pearle Optical of Monroeville, Inc. v. Georgia State Bd. of Exmrs. in Optometry, 219 Ga. 364, 133 S.E.2d 374 (1963).

Separation to be strictly enforced.

— While the line of demarcation separating the legislative, judicial, and executive powers may sometimes be difficult to establish, and for this reason each of the three coordinate branches of government frequently invades the province of the others, it is nevertheless essential to the very foundation of the system of government that the mandate of the Constitution be strictly enforced. McCutcheon v. Smith, 199 Ga. 685, 35 S.E.2d 144 (1945).

No separation of powers violation.

— The trial court's order revoking a probationer's probation did not violate the separation of powers doctrine under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III, as the probationer's release resulted from an administrative error, and there was no evidence of any executive department finding that the probationer had fully served an imposed sentence in confinement based on a good-time allowance or otherwise. Clark v. State, 287 Ga. App. 176, 651 S.E.2d 106 (2007).

Effect of violation of separation of powers. — When an Act cannot be sustained as a whole because it violates the separation of powers principle, the courts will uphold it in part if it is reasonably certain that to do so would correspond with the main intent and purpose which the General Assembly sought to accomplish and if, after the unconstitutional part is stricken, there remains enough to accomplish that purpose. Greer v. State, 233 Ga. 667, 212 S.E.2d 836 (1975).

Separation cannot be total. — This paragraph attempts a separation of the three departments of government, which from the nature of things cannot be total. Beall v. Beall, 8 Ga. 210 (1850); Johnson v. Jackson, 99 Ga. 389, 27 S.E. 734 (1896).

Complete separation not necessarily intended. — Although the separation of powers is fundamental to the constitutional form of government, it does not follow that a complete separation is desirable or was intended. In re Pending Cases, 234 Ga. 264, 215 S.E.2d 473 (1975).

Three departments of government are not kept wholly separate in the Georgia Constitution. In re Pending Cases, 234 Ga. 264, 215 S.E.2d 473 (1975).

While the Constitution declares that the three departments of government shall be separate and distinct, this separation is not and from the nature of things cannot be total. Greer v. State, 233 Ga. 667, 212 S.E.2d 836 (1975).

While the departments of government must be kept separate and distinct, it is impossible to draw a mathematical line by which every action can be exactly classified; and there are some matters which do not inherently and essentially appertain to one department of government rather than to another. Greer v. State, 233 Ga. 667, 212 S.E.2d 836 (1975).

Separation of powers principle is sufficiently flexible to permit practical arrangements in a complex government. Greer v. State, 233 Ga. 667, 212 S.E.2d 836 (1975).

O.C.G.A. § 42-8-29 did not violate the constitutional principle of separation of powers, as a probation supervisor had a duty to make the supervisor's findings and report regarding an alleged probation revocation in writing to the court with the supervisor's recommendation; not unlike a district attorney, the probation supervisor was an employee of the Department of Corrections, within the executive branch of state government, and was charged with providing the trial court with information relevant to pending criminal proceedings over which the court alone exercised judicial authority. Wolcott v. State, 278 Ga. 664, 604 S.E.2d 478 (2004).

Each branch to protect its functions from invasion by other branches. — The judicial branch doubtless invades the legislative field more frequently than does the legislative branch the judicial field, but it is the duty of each to zealously protect its function from invasion of the others. The legislature has ample power to prevent attempted judicial legislation. Likewise, the judiciary has the power to prevent judicial functions by the legislature, and the welfare of the state demands that it exercise this power when necessary. McCutcheon v. Smith, 199 Ga. 685, 35 S.E.2d 144 (1945).

Paragraph applicable only to state functions. — This paragraph, providing for separation of legislative, executive, and judicial powers, applies only to state functions, and not to municipal functions. Shipman v. Johnson, 89 Ga. App. 620, 80 S.E.2d 717 (1954).

No application to municipal officers. — This paragraph has no application to municipal officers created by the legislature. Ford v. Mayor of Brunswick, 134 Ga. 820, 68 S.E. 733 (1910).

Police officer's probable cause determination. — By acting on probable cause to believe a crime was being committed, a law enforcement officer was not called upon to exercise the legislative function of defining what constituted a crime, but the executive branch function of enforcing the law; accordingly, O.C.G.A. § 40-6-395(a) was not an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority. Harbuck v. State, 280 Ga. 775, 631 S.E.2d 351 (2006).

Separation of branches is sufficient reason to treat branches differently. — The basic principle of separation of the three branches of government alone is sufficient to satisfy the requirement of a reasonable basis for legislation treating one or all of the separate branches differently. Stoner v. Fortson, 379 F. Supp. 704 (N.D. Ga. 1974).

Person in one branch may investigate another branch. — This constitutional provision does not prohibit a person in the executive branch of the government or a person in the legislative branch of the government from investigating the official conduct of any person performing duties in any branch of the government. Dean v. Bolton, 235 Ga. 544, 221 S.E.2d 20 (1975).

Legislative members of commission may not perform executive functions. — The fact that legislative members of a commission may be performing some functions that are appropriate to the legislative branch of the government does not alter the fact that they, as members of a commission, must also perform functions that are exclusively within the province of the executive branch and this is what the Constitution prohibits. Murphy v. State, 233 Ga. 681, 212 S.E.2d 839 (1975).

Legislators may appoint nonlegislators to executive commissions. — The mere appointment, by a member of the legislative branch, of a nonlegislator to an executive commission, such as the State Campaign and Financial Disclosure Committee, is not a simultaneous discharge of duties and functions against which the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers is directed. Caldwell v. Bateman, 252 Ga. 144, 312 S.E.2d 320 (1984).

Applicability to county governments. — The County Building Authority Act, although designating the chairman of the board of commissioners as one of the members of the authority, was not unconstitutional under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III, which does not apply to county governments. Building Auth. v. State, 253 Ga. 242, 321 S.E.2d 97 (1984).

Georgia Law 1973, p. 3640, which amends the Act creating the Cobb County board of commissioners to provide that the chairman and each member of the board of commissioners and the chairman and each member of the planning and zoning commission fully disclose any interest in any land sought to be rezoned, is not unconstitutional inasmuch as the doctrine of separation of powers applies only to the state and not to municipalities or to county governments. Tendler v. Thompson, 256 Ga. 633, 352 S.E.2d 388 (1987).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Failure to point out wherein an Act alleged to be violative of this paragraph is repugnant to and in conflict with the provision presents no question of judicial determination. Williams v. State, 187 Ga. 415, 1 S.E.2d 27 (1939).

Juvenile court jurisdiction statute does not violate the separation of powers doctrine of the state constitution, nor does it violate the due process and equal protection provisions of the federal and state constitutions. Bishop v. State, 265 Ga. 821, 462 S.E.2d 716 (1995); Murphy v. State, 267 Ga. 100, 475 S.E.2d 590 (1996).

Prosecutor's decision to bring an action in superior rather than juvenile court does not violate the separation of powers doctrine, because the initial option to select a forum when concurrent jurisdiction exists belongs to the litigant, and it is neither judicial, legislative, or executive power. Chapman v. State, 259 Ga. 592, 385 S.E.2d 661 (1989).

Jurisdiction over sentencing cannot be legislated away. — Trial court properly ruled that O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6, which authorized the Georgia Sentence Review Panel to review and reduce sentences, was unconstitutional as the Georgia General Assembly does not have the constitutional authority to divest the trial courts of Georgia of their traditional jurisdiction over sentencing by creating a quasi-appellate tribunal (such as the Panel) to review and alter the otherwise lawful sentences imposed by those trial courts. Sentence Review Panel v. Moseley, 284 Ga. 128, 663 S.E.2d 679 (2008).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-16, the life-without-parole statute, does not violate separation of powers because it imposes legislative restrictions on the Board of Pardons and Paroles to grant parole. Freeman v. State, 264 Ga. 27, 440 S.E.2d 181 (1994).

Mandatory minimum sentences. — O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, imposing mandatory minimum sentences in certain cases, does not violate the separation of powers doctrine in that the legislature acted within constitutional bounds in establishing minimum and maximum punishment and in eliminating judicial discretion in sentencing certain violent offenders. Campbell v. State, 268 Ga. 44, 485 S.E.2d 185 (1997).

The statute governing the punishment for serious violent offenders, O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, does not violate the separation of powers doctrine of the state constitution. Byrd v. State, 236 Ga. App. 485, 512 S.E.2d 372 (1999).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, prescribing punishment of repeat offenders, does not violate the separation of powers doctrine of the state constitution. Brabham v. State, 240 Ga. App. 506, 524 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Reapportionment. — Because Act 444, 2002 Ga. Laws 149, does not impermissibly encroach on the power of the executive branch to control litigation, but instead is a proper assertion of legislative power to determine reapportionment, it does not violate the separation of powers doctrine. Perdue v. Baker, 277 Ga. 1, 586 S.E.2d 606 (2003).

Cited in Flint River Steamboat Co. v. Foster, 5 Ga. 194, 48 Am. Dec. 248 (1848); Hilliard v. Doe, 7 Ga. 172 (1849); Eve v. State, 21 Ga. 50 (1857); Robison v. Beall, 26 Ga. 1 (1858); Walker v. Whitehead, 43 Ga. 538 (1871); Georgia R.R. v. Smith, 70 Ga. 694 (1883); Clayton v. Calhoun, 76 Ga. 270 (1886); Johnson v. Jackson, 99 Ga. 389, 27 S.E. 734 (1896); Bowen v. Clifton, 105 Ga. 490, 30 S.E. 788 (1898); Neal v. State, 104 Ga. 509, 30 S.E. 858, 69 Am. St. R. 175, 42 L.R.A. 190 (1898); Phinizy v. Eve, 108 Ga. 360, 33 S.E. 1007 (1899); Carroll v. Wright, 131 Ga. 728, 63 S.E. 260 (1908); Southern Ry. v. Melton, 133 Ga. 277, 65 S.E. 665 (1909); Daniel v. Persons, 137 Ga. 826, 74 S.E. 260 (1912); Norman v. Rehberg, 12 Ga. App. 698, 78 S.E. 256 (1913); Mayor of Americus v. Perry, 114 Ga. 871, 40 S.E. 1004, 57 A.L.R. 230 (1920); Clements v. Bostwick, 158 Ga. 906, 124 S.E. 719 (1924); City Council v. Thomas, 159 Ga. 435, 126 S.E. 144, 39 A.L.R. 1317 (1924); Felton v. Bennett, 163 Ga. 849, 137 S.E. 264 (1927); Morgan v.

Lowry, 168 Ga. 723, 149 S.E. 37 (1929); Johnson v. State, 169 Ga. 814, 152 S.E. 76 (1930); Horne v. State, 170 Ga. 638, 153 S.E. 749 (1930); Boykin v. Hopkins, 174 Ga. 511, 162 S.E. 796 (1932); Board of Comm'rs v. Massachusetts Bonding Ins. Co., 175 Ga. 584, 165 S.E. 828 (1932); Southern Ry. v. Wehunt, 177 Ga. 440, 170 S.E. 380 (1933); McDonald v. Georgia Fed'n of Labor, 178 Ga. 313, 173 S.E. 662 (1933); Georgia Power Co. v. City of Decatur, 179 Ga. 471, 176 S.E. 494 (1934); Sutton v. Adams, 180 Ga. 48, 178 S.E. 365 (1934); Madronah Sales Co. v. Wilburn, 180 Ga. 837, 181 S.E. 173 (1935); Ramsey v. Hamilton, 181 Ga. 365, 182 S.E. 392 (1935); DeKrasner v. Boykin, 54 Ga. App. 29, 186 S.E. 701 (1936); Johnson v. Walls, 185 Ga. 177, 194 S.E. 380 (1937); Freeney v. Pape, 185 Ga. 1, 194 S.E. 515 (1937); Moyers v. State, 186 Ga. 446, 197 S.E. 846 (1938); State Bd. of Educ. v. County Bd. of Educ., 190 Ga. 588, 10 S.E.2d 369 (1940); Town of McIntyre v. Scott, 191 Ga. 473, 12 S.E.2d 883 (1940); Gernatt v. Huie, 192 Ga. 729, 16 S.E.2d 587 (1941); Feagin v. Freeney, 192 Ga. 868, 17 S.E.2d 61 (1941); Lawson v. City of Moultrie, 194 Ga. 699, 22 S.E.2d 592 (1942); DeJarnette v. Hospital Auth., 195 Ga. 189, 23 S.E.2d 716 (1942); Steward v. Peerless Furn. Co., 70 Ga. App. 236, 28 S.E.2d 396 (1943); Mayor of Savannah v. Savannah Distrib. Co., 202 Ga. 559, 43 S.E.2d 704 (1947); Sheffield v. State Sch. Bldg. Auth., 208 Ga. 575, 68 S.E.2d 590 (1952); McFarlin v. Shirley, 209 Ga. 794, 76 S.E.2d 1 (1953); Martin v. Baldwin, 215 Ga. 293, 110 S.E.2d 344 (1959); South-Eastern Underwriters Ass'n v. Cravey, 216 Ga. 599, 118 S.E.2d 471 (1961); Rochester Capital Leasing Corp. v. Christian, 109 Ga. App. 818, 137 S.E.2d 518 (1964); Howard v. Housing Auth., 220 Ga. 640, 140 S.E.2d 880 (1965); Undercoffer v. Swint, 111 Ga. App. 117, 140 S.E.2d 894 (1965); Turmon v. Department of Pub. Safety, 222 Ga. 843, 152 S.E.2d 884 (1967); Campbell v. Farmer, 223 Ga. 605, 157 S.E.2d 276 (1967); Maddox v. Coogler, 224 Ga. 806, 165 S.E.2d 158 (1968); Crumley v. Head, 225 Ga. 246, 167 S.E.2d 651 (1969); Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969); Douglas County v. Abercrombie, 226 Ga. 39, 172 S.E.2d 419 (1970); Pye v. State Hwy. Dep't, 226 Ga. 389, 175 S.E.2d 510 (1970); DOT v. Hardin, 231 Ga. 359, 201 S.E.2d 441 (1973); Hawkins v. State, 130 Ga. App. 426, 203 S.E.2d 622 (1973); Fuller v. State, 232 Ga. 581, 208 S.E.2d 85 (1974); Harmon v. State, 235 Ga. 329, 219 S.E.2d 441 (1975); Rich v. State, 237 Ga. 291, 227 S.E.2d 761 (1976); State v. Andrews, 240 Ga. 531, 242 S.E.2d 153 (1978); Leonard v. State, 146 Ga. App. 439, 246 S.E.2d 450 (1978); Gunn v. State, 244 Ga. 51, 257 S.E.2d 538 (1979); Sanders v. State, 151 Ga. App. 590, 260 S.E.2d 504 (1979); Vaughn v. State, 160 Ga. App. 283, 287 S.E.2d 277 (1981); Johns v. State, 160 Ga. App. 535, 287 S.E.2d 617 (1981); Charron v. State Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 253 Ga. 274, 319 S.E.2d 453 (1984); Snelling v. State, 176 Ga. App. 192, 335 S.E.2d 475 (1985); Hirsh v. City of Atlanta, 261 Ga. 22, 401 S.E.2d 530 (1991); State v. Tyson, 273 Ga. 690, 544 S.E.2d 444 (2001); DeKalb County Sch. Dist. v. Ga. State Bd. of Educ., 294 Ga. 349, 751 S.E.2d 827 (2013); Owens v. Hill, 295 Ga. 302, 758 S.E.2d 794 (2014).

Legislative Powers

Exclusive power of legislative department. — The legislative department is invested with the exclusive power to say what the law is. Northside Manor, Inc. v. Vann, 219 Ga. 298, 133 S.E.2d 32 (1963).

Legislature to act as check on other branches. — The legislature has power to serve as a check upon the executive and judicial departments, and this function is properly performed by enactment of laws. If the legislature wishes to have the law other than what the judiciary construes it to be, it has the power and duty to so write it within the limits of the Constitution. Bedingfield v. Parkerson, 212 Ga. 654, 94 S.E.2d 714 (1956).

Legislature has no constitutional power to construe or alter judgments. Northside Manor, Inc. v. Vann, 219 Ga. 298, 133 S.E.2d 32 (1963).

Legislature cannot put limitations on discharge of judicial functions. — It is not within the power of the General Assembly, by any exercise of its legitimate legislative functions, to impose limitations and restrictions upon the discharge of purely judicial functions. Holliman v.

Legislative Powers (Cont'd)

State, 175 Ga. 232, 165 S.E. 11 (1932).

Judicial review of legislative actions limited. — If in the exercise of power to enact laws, the General Assembly merely fails to observe certain rules of internal procedure, the judiciary would not be authorized to review such action, and the same would be true as to any action of the officers of that body within the sphere of their jurisdiction. Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947).

Elections belong to the political branch of the government and are beyond the control of judicial power. It is for the political power of the state, within the limits of the Constitution, to provide the manner in which elections shall be held, and until the courts are empowered to act, by the Constitution or legislative enactment, they must refrain from interference. Kinman v. Monk, 179 Ga. 132, 175 S.E. 458 (1934).

Expenses of discharging legislative duties. — The judicial department of the government cannot interfere with any provision made by the legislative branch of the government which the General Assembly may deem to be necessary as expenses in discharging its duties of legislation. Speer v. Martin, 163 Ga. 535, 136 S.E. 425 (1927).

Code Revision Commission within legislative authority. — Composition of Code Commission did not violate this paragraph, as the work of the Commission, comprised of ten legislators and five members of the State Bar, was within the sphere of legislative authority. Harrison Co. v. Code Revision Comm'n, 244 Ga. 325, 260 S.E.2d 30 (1979).

Legislator may not be appointed to governing body of administrative agency. — The legislature cannot constitutionally create a special instrumentality of government to implement specific legislation and then retain some control over the process of implementation by appointing legislators to the governing body of the instrumentality. Greer v. State, 233 Ga. 667, 212 S.E.2d 836 (1975).

A legislator who participates as a member of the governing body of a public corporation such as the World Congress Center Authority is performing executive functions in violation of this paragraph. Greer v. State, 233 Ga. 667, 212 S.E.2d 836 (1975).

Promulgation of executive branch rules and legislative oversight thereof. — O.C.G.A. § 31-6-21.1 does not violate the separation of powers doctrine simply because it enables the Department of Community Health to promulgate and adopt regulations pursuant to a delegated power; the statute does not invest the legislature with executive power, nor does it invest the executive with legislative power. Nor could it be said that the statute runs afoul of enactment, bicameralism, and presentment provisions, as the statute allows for the adoption of rules consistent with legislation, but it does not enable the department to make laws. Albany Surgical, P.C. v. Ga. Dep't of Cmty. Health, 278 Ga. 366, 602 S.E.2d 648 (2004).

Delegation permitted. — O.C.G.A. § 20-2-690.1 did not unconstitutionally delegate power to the General Assembly as the delegation was permissible and was accompanied by sufficient guidelines that directed the State Board of Education, in promulgating policies and regulations, to take into consideration sickness and other emergencies that may arise. Pitts v. State, 293 Ga. 511, 748 S.E.2d 426 (2013).

Dram Shop Act did not invade judiciary's province. — Widow's wrongful death action against a bar that served alcohol to her husband for 8 hours, and who then died in a one-vehicle crash, was barred by the Dram Shop Act, O.C.G.A. § 51-1-40, which barred claims by consumers of alcohol; § 51-1-40 did not violate the separation of powers clause, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III, because the legislature had the authority to enact legislation codifying the common law. Dion v. Y.S.G. Enters., 296 Ga. 185, 766 S.E.2d 48 (2014).

Judicial Powers

Dividing line between courts and legislature. — In the dividing line of power between these coordinate branches, construction belongs to the courts, legislation to the legislature. Parks v. State, 212

Ga. 433, 93 S.E.2d 663 (1956); Northside Manor, Inc. v. Vann, 219 Ga. 298, 133 S.E.2d 32 (1963); Modern Homes Constr. Co. v. Burke, 219 Ga. 710, 135 S.E.2d 383 (1964).

Courts cannot add a line to the law, nor can the legislature enlarge or diminish a law by construction. Northside Manor, Inc. v. Vann, 219 Ga. 298, 133 S.E.2d 32 (1963); Modern Homes Constr. Co. v. Burke, 219 Ga. 710, 135 S.E.2d 383 (1964).

O.C.G.A. § 17-6-1(g), precluding a trial court from granting an appeal bond to defendant, who had been convicted of child molestation and aggravated child molestation, did not violate the separation of powers provision of the Georgia Constitution, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III, because there was no constitutional right to an appeal bond, so the system under which prisoners were allowed to be released on bond pending an appeal was a legislative function, and the legislature's establishment of the parameters of such bonds did not invade the province of the judiciary. Getkate v. State, 278 Ga. 585, 604 S.E.2d 838 (2004).

Court to determine the law. — Determining the meaning of the Constitution, which is binding upon everyone, is the exclusive function of the courts in the adjudication of cases properly brought before them for decision. Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947).

It is the prerogative of the judiciary to determine what the law is, and the responsibility of the legislature to declare what the law shall be. Pearle Optical of Monroeville, Inc. v. Georgia State Bd. of Exmrs. in Optometry, 219 Ga. 364, 133 S.E.2d 374 (1963).

Court not to concern itself with legislative actions. — By this paragraph, the judiciary cannot modify, amend, or repeal legislative action, nor concern itself with the wisdom of it. That is a field in which only the legislative department may work. Sirota v. Kay Homes, Inc., 208 Ga. 113, 65 S.E.2d 597 (1951).

Delegation of legislative power to courts forbidden. — The basic principle embodied in the separation of powers doctrine is that the legislature cannot delegate legislative power to the courts. This does not mean, however, that the legislature is forbidden from conferring power on the courts to ascertain whether the statutory requirements for dissolution of a municipal charter have been satisfied in particular cases. Harrell v. Courson, 234 Ga. 350, 216 S.E.2d 105 (1975).

Authority to administer justice efficiently and completely. — When the Constitution declares that the legislative, judicial, and executive powers shall forever remain separate and distinct, it thereby invests those officials charged with the duty of administering justice according to law with all necessary authority to efficiently and completely discharge those duties the performance of which is by the Constitution committed to the judiciary, and to maintain the dignity and independence of the courts. Lovett v. Sandersville R.R., 199 Ga. 238, 33 S.E.2d 905 (1945).

Exclusive power to construe laws. — By the Constitution, courts are invested with the exclusive ultimate power to construe laws. Northside Manor, Inc. v. Vann, 219 Ga. 298, 133 S.E.2d 32 (1963).

Unless construction unnecessary. — When the language of a municipal code section is plain, unambiguous, and positive, and is not capable of two constructions, no court has a right to construe it to mean anything other than what it declares, and this rule precludes the courts from construing it according to what is supposed to be the legislative intent. Sirota v. Kay Homes, Inc., 208 Ga. 113, 65 S.E.2d 597 (1951).

Legislative direction of judicial construction invalid. — It is not in the power of the legislature, under this paragraph, to enact, in any way, that the law was so and so at any past time. Crawford v. Ross, 39 Ga. 44 (1869).

In enacting a local civil service law, the legislature was performing a legislative function, and in construing the meaning of that Act, the Supreme Court was performing a judicial function, thus by that decision the meaning of the Act was judicially determined and fixed. Consequently, a later Act which was literally a legislative construction of the earlier Act, which was directly in conflict with its meaning as judicially determined, was unconstitutional since the legislature attempted a judicial function. McCutcheon v. Smith, 199 Ga. 685, 35 S.E.2d 144 (1945).

Judicial Powers (Cont'd)

An Act which does not purport to amend any existing law and amounts only to an effort on the part of the legislature to perform a judicial function in violation of this paragraph, by directing the judiciary concerning the construction which it should place upon the law. Brinkley v. Dixie Constr. Co., 205 Ga. 415, 54 S.E.2d 267, answer conformed to, 79 Ga. App. 583, 54 S.E.2d 510 (1949).

When a court adjudicates that a petition alleges no cause of action, whether rightly or erroneously, that becomes the law of the case, and neither the legislature nor the judiciary can disregard that ruling. Northside Manor, Inc. v. Vann, 219 Ga. 298, 133 S.E.2d 32 (1963).

Effect of legislative construction of law. — A legislative exposition of doubtful laws may be harmless. Wilder v. Lumpkin, 4 Ga. 208 (1848).

A legislative exposition of a doubtful law is the exercise of a judicial power, and if it interferes with no vested rights, impairs the obligation of no contract, and is not in conflict with the primary principles of our social compact, it is in itself harmless, and may be admitted to retroactive efficiency. If, however, rights have grown up under even a law of somewhat ambiguous meaning, then the universal rule of the system applies. That rule is, the courts declare what the law is, and the legislature declares what the law shall be. Northside Manor, Inc. v. Vann, 219 Ga. 298, 133 S.E.2d 32 (1963).

Legislature may establish rules of evidence. — This paragraph does not deny the legislature the power to establish rules of evidence. Banks v. State, 124 Ga. 15, 52 S.E. 74 (1905).

Legislature may not set time limit for application for writ of certiorari. — The attempt of the General Assembly to regulate the practice upon application for writ of certiorari by setting a time limit is an invasion of the prerogative of the judiciary which is not sanctioned by the Constitution. Holliman v. State, 175 Ga. 232, 165 S.E. 11 (1932).

Supreme Court's approval of a local court rule providing that civil actions seeking primarily money damages up to $25,000 or in an unspecified amount would be referred to compulsory but non-binding arbitration did not abridge the rights of any litigants or conflict with any federal or state constitutional provision or Georgia statute. Davis v. Gaona, 260 Ga. 450, 396 S.E.2d 218 (1990).

For discussion of legislature's exercise of jurisdiction over rules of procedure and practice in the courts, in conjunction with the Supreme Court, see Gordy v. Dunwody, 210 Ga. 810, 83 S.E.2d 7 (1954).

Discretion in sentencing may be limited. — In the absence of legislation, the judiciary cannot exercise discretion in fixing the quantum of punishment to be inflicted upon criminals, because such power is not one which inheres in the judicial department. It is therefore within the power of the legislature to direct the punishment to be prescribed for second offenders, and to leave no discretion to the trial judge. Knight v. State, 243 Ga. 770, 257 S.E.2d 182 (1979).

The power to create crimes and to prescribe punishment therefore is legislative, the judge is a mere agent of the law and the judge has no discretion except as is given to the judge. Knight v. State, 243 Ga. 770, 257 S.E.2d 182 (1979).

Minimum sentences made mandatory by statute do not violate the separation of powers provision of the Georgia Constitution. Paras v. State, 247 Ga. 75, 274 S.E.2d 451 (1981).

Response to juror's question concerning functions of another governmental branch. — When a question is propounded by a juror that involves the functions of a separate and distinct branch of the government, the jury should be told that such matters cannot be the subject of any instruction by the court. Thompson v. State, 203 Ga. 416, 47 S.E.2d 54 (1948).

It is improper for a judge in a trial of a person charged with murder to state or intimate what action could be taken in the future by a separate and distinct branch of the government. Thompson v. State, 203 Ga. 416, 47 S.E.2d 54 (1948).

No legislative control over granting new trials. — This paragraph constitutes an insuperable barrier to any legislative control or interference with the courts in the exercise of their powers to grant new trials. CTC Fin. Corp. v. Holden, 221 Ga. 809, 147 S.E.2d 427 (1966).

Nonjudicial powers may not be imposed on court. — Under the separation of powers doctrine, nonjudicial functions may not be imposed on a constitutional court. The duties or functions which the legislature may not transfer to the judiciary have been characterized as either legislative or executive. Their descriptive classification is not, however, the significant point. The vice lies in the fact that the duties or functions sought to be conferred upon the courts lie beyond the scope of judicial power. Bentley v. Chastain, 242 Ga. 348, 249 S.E.2d 38 (1978).

If the legislature cannot impose upon the courts the administrative duty or function of making an initial discretionary decision, it cannot do so by the fiction of an appeal de novo which requires the court to adjudicate upon administrative rather than judicial considerations. Bentley v. Chastain, 242 Ga. 348, 249 S.E.2d 38 (1978).

Issue of search warrant. — Judge who had not served as deputy sheriff for approximately eight years at the time the search warrant in question was issued was not disqualified to issue warrant. Tabb v. State, 250 Ga. 317, 297 S.E.2d 227 (1982).

Mere personal associations with police officers, without more, do not disqualify a magistrate from issuing a search warrant. Tabb v. State, 250 Ga. 317, 297 S.E.2d 227 (1982).

A judge who also serves as a county coroner is not per se disqualified from issuing a search warrant in the judge's capacity as ex officio justice of the peace. Tabb v. State, 250 Ga. 317, 297 S.E.2d 227 (1982).

Authority of superior court to order expert evaluation of defendant. — Superior court of the county in which defendant was convicted of murder had authority, on defendant's motion for new trial, to order an expert evaluation of defendant, who was incarcerated beyond the boundaries of the county in which the court sat. Zant v. Brantley, 261 Ga. 817, 411 S.E.2d 869 (1992).

Delegation of sentencing authority. — Statutory provision authorizing district attorney to move for sentence reduction in drug trafficking cases does not violate separation of powers clause, as such provision does not prohibit a defendant from filing such a motion or the court from proceeding under the statute sua sponte. Brugman v. State, 255 Ga. 407, 339 S.E.2d 244 (1986).

Enforcement of child support. — O.C.G.A. § 19-6-32, the mandatory income deduction statute for enforcing child support, does not violate the separation of powers doctrine. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources v. Word, 265 Ga. 461, 458 S.E.2d 110 (1995).

Municipal court. — Because a municipal court is a municipal office discharging strictly municipal functions, O.C.G.A. § 36-32-2(a) does not violate the separation of powers doctrine of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III, and the city was authorized to require the judge to reinstate the contract between the county and the private probation services company. Ward v. City of Cairo, 276 Ga. 391, 583 S.E.2d 821 (2003).

2010 amendment to the Local Option Sales Tax Act, O.C.G.A. § 48-8-89(d)(4), violates separation of powers doctrine. — To the extent the 2010 amendment to the Local Option Sales Tax Act (LOST), O.C.G.A. § 48-8-89(d)(4), permits judicial resolution of the issue of whether LOST should be renewed and the governing bodies of the special district should be required to levy and collect the tax, the amendment violates the separation of powers doctrine of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III. Turner County v. City of Ashburn, 293 Ga. 739, 749 S.E.2d 685 (2013).

Executive Powers

Administrative agency's powers are distinct from the legislative and judicial powers established in the Georgia Constitution. Bentley v. Chastain, 242 Ga.

Executive Powers (Cont'd)

348, 249 S.E.2d 38 (1978).

Delegation of powers from General Assembly. — The General Assembly may delegate certain powers to the executive branch of government in order to carry out the law as enacted by the General Assembly. Sundberg v. State, 234 Ga. 482, 216 S.E.2d 332 (1975).

The nondelegation doctrine is rooted in the principle of separation of powers, in that the integrity of the tripartite system of government mandates that the General Assembly not divest itself of the legislative power granted to it by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. I, Para. I. DOT v. City of Atlanta, 260 Ga. 699, 398 S.E.2d 567 (1990).

Delegation must be made with sufficient guidelines. — When a delegation of power to an executive official is made with sufficient guidelines, the official's exercise of the delegated power does not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III. DOT v. City of Atlanta, 260 Ga. 699, 398 S.E.2d 567 (1990).

Judicial review of administrative decisions limited. — The only judicial review of administrative decisions authorized is that inherent in the power of the judiciary: whether the agency acted beyond the discretionary powers conferred upon it, abused its discretion, or acted arbitrarily or capriciously with regard to an individual's constitutional rights. Bentley v. Chastain, 242 Ga. 348, 249 S.E.2d 38 (1978).

Trial court lacked jurisdiction to deal with an executive branch function until there had been an exhaustion of administrative remedies; accordingly, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the industrial loan commissioner on the commissioner's claim that the loan companies were not entitled to declaratory relief on their claim that the commissioner lacked jurisdiction over their practice of using an out-of-state bank to make their loans through the loan companies since the commissioner had not ruled on whether that practice was permissible. USA Payday Cash Advance Ctrs. v. Oxendine, 262 Ga. App. 632, 585 S.E.2d 924 (2003).

Administrative board may not determine and assess attorney's fees. —

A section authorizing an administrative board to include attorney's fees in an execution against a defaulting receiver is unconstitutional in that the determination of what attorney's fees incurred are reasonable and the assessment of such fees are judicial functions and cannot be delegated to an administrative official. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. v. Floyd County, 178 Ga. 595, 173 S.E. 720 (1934).

Parole conditions. — Trial court erred by requiring the defendant to waive the defendant's Fourth Amendment right as a condition of parole since any attempt by a court to impose its will over the Executive Department by attempting to impose as a part of a criminal sentence conditions operating as a prerequisite of or becoming automatically effective in the event of a subsequent parole of the defendant by the State Board of Pardons and Parole would be a nullity and constitute an exercise of power granted exclusively to the executive. Stephens v. State, 207 Ga. App. 645, 428 S.E.2d 661 (1993).

Habeas court erroneously addressed a defendant's challenge to a parole condition that banned the defendant from all counties in the State of Georgia but one as the habeas court's attempt to control the parole condition was a violation of the constitutional provision regarding the separation of powers since the Board of Pardons and Paroles had executive power regarding the terms and conditions of paroles. Terry v. Hamrick, 284 Ga. 24, 663 S.E.2d 256 (2008), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 510, 172 L.Ed.2d 375 (2008).

Approval of taking of municipal property. — Statutes granting the Commission on the Condemnation of Public Property the power to approve the taking of municipal property do not amount to an improper delegation of legislative power and do not violate separation-of-powers principles. DOT v. City of Atlanta, 260 Ga. 699, 398 S.E.2d 567 (1990).

Promulgation of executive branch rules and legislative oversight thereof. — O.C.G.A. § 31-6-21.1 does not violate the separation of powers doctrine simply because the statute enables the Department of Community Health to promulgate and adopt regulations pursuant to a delegated power; the statute does not invest the legislature with executive power, nor does the statute invest the executive with legislative power. Nor could it be said that the statute runs afoul of enactment, bicameralism, and presentment provisions, as the statute allows for the adoption of rules consistent with legislation, but it does not enable the department to make laws. Albany Surgical, P.C. v. Ga. Dep't of Cmty. Health, 278 Ga. 366, 602 S.E.2d 648 (2004).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Claim of power to act in derogation of the separation of powers theory must be based on the Constitution itself before it is to be recognized as existent. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-36.

Member of political committee not public officer. — An officer, member, or employee of a political committee is not a “public officer.” 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-181.

Combination of judicial, legislative, and executive officers on commission. — If a commission does not exercise executive, legislative, or judicial powers of the state, this paragraph does not prohibit the combination of judicial, legislative, or executive officers in its composition. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-142.

Justices of the peace may be legislators. — Those persons who are justices of the peace are also eligible to membership in the General Assembly. This does not violate the separation of powers doctrine contained in the Constitution. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-92.

Member of General Assembly may not serve as an appointed judge pro tem of the Recorder's Court of Chatham County. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-58.

Member of the General Assembly cannot serve simultaneously as a juvenile court judge. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U84-46.

Legislator may not perform functions of State Board of Postsecondary Vocational Education by direct employment or other contractual arrangement. 1988 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 88-11.

Service of judges on advisory council to Department of Human Resources. — The uncompensated services of juvenile and superior court judges on the advisory council to the Department of Human Resources would meet the letter as well as the spirit of both statutory and constitutional provisions relating to separation of powers. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 320.

Membership on Constitutional Amendments Publication Board. — Contracting for publication of proposed amendments is not an executive function, therefore the presence of the Speaker of the House on the Constitutional Amendments Publication Board does not conflict with this paragraph. Because the unique and sole function of the Constitutional Amendments Publication Board is to submit the constitutional amendments to the people, by proper publication, members of both the executive and legislative branches may serve on the Board. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-127.

Presence of legislative members on Outdoor Advertising Citizen's Advisory Council should not offend this paragraph, due to the advisory nature of the body. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 81-75.

Member of the General Assembly may serve on a county planning commission. 1997 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U97-11.

Solicitors of municipal court. — Solicitors of the municipal court are not within the judicial branch of state government for purposes of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III, prohibiting one person from simultaneously exercising the functions of more than one of three branches of state government. 1991 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U91-4.

Fiscal officers of appellate courts. — The appellate courts may designate their fiscal officers to handle their payrolls under procedures satisfactory to the appellate courts and the Office of Planning and Budget. However, in the establishment of these procedures, the Office of Planning and Budget, as an arm of the executive department of state government, must be ever mindful of the delicate balance of power between the executive and the judiciary, founded upon the constitutional principle of the separation of powers. 1971 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 71-100.

Administrative agency may not include legislator. — The “Geo. L. Smith II Georgia World Congress Center Act” is invalid to the extent that membership on the authority created thereby includes officers of the legislative branch of state government, violating this paragraph. 1974 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 74-109.

Court contract for private probation services. — Should a state court, as a separate governmental entity, attempt to contract for private probation services on its own, it is possible that such an agreement would violate the separation of powers provision. 1989 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U89-8.

Court reporter cannot be employed by worker’s compensation board. — A court reporter may not hold simultaneous employment with the State Board of Workers’ Compensation and a superior court or state court. 1983 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 83-56.

Member of General Assembly may not serve as municipal court judge. — While the “separation of powers” doctrine does not apply when the issues relate solely to municipal officials utilizing municipal powers, it does apply when it concerns a municipal court judge exercising state judicial powers. Because of that, the exercise of those state judicial powers by a legislator would be a violation of the constitutional prohibition against a member of one branch exercising the powers of another branch of government. Therefore, a member of the Georgia General Assembly may not serve as a municipal court judge. 2014 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U2014-2.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 16A Am. Jur. 2d, Constitutional Law, §§ 237, 238.

C.J.S. — 16 C.J.S., Constitutional Law, § 272 et seq.

ALR. — Validity and effect of provisions limiting the power of courts to declare a statute unconstitutional, 15 ALR 331; 66 ALR 1466.

Power of judiciary to compel Legislature to make apportionment of representatives or election districts as required by Constitution, 46 ALR 964.

Conclusiveness of governor’s decision in removing officers, 52 ALR 7; 92 ALR 998.

Power of legislation respecting admission to bar, 144 ALR 150.

Constitutionality of statute fixing time within which court or judge shall or shall not act, 168 ALR 1125.

Validity of delegation to private persons or organizations of power to appoint or nominate to public office, 97 ALR2d 361.

Inherent power of court to suspend for indefinite period execution of sentence in whole or in part, 73 ALR3d 474.

Validity of a state statute imposing mandatory sentence or prohibiting granting of probation or suspension of sentence for narcotics offenses, 81 ALR3d 1192.

Automobiles: validity and construction of legislation authorizing revocation or suspension of operator’s license for “habitual,” “persistent,” or “frequent” violations of traffic regulations, 48 ALR4th 367.

Paragraph IV. Contempts.

The power of the courts to punish for contempt shall be limited by legislative acts.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VI.

Cross references. — Limits to contempt power of courts, §§ 5-6-13, 15-1-4, 15-2-8, and 38-2-1048. Power of courts to punish for contempt generally, § 15-9-34. Juvenile court, § 15-11-62. Refusal to testify treated as contempt, § 24-5-507. Failure to deliver ward’s property, § 29-2-80.

Law reviews. — For article, “Jury Trials in Contempt Cases," see 20 Ga. B.J. 297 (1957). For article, "Contempt of Court in Georgia," see 23 Ga. St. B.J. 66 (1987).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

This paragraph confers no power to define a contempt. Bradley v. State, 111 Ga. 168, 36 S.E. 630, 78 Am. St. R. 157, 50 L.R.A. 691 (1900); In re Fite, 11 Ga. App. 665, 76 S.E. 397 (1912).

Paragraph only gives power to prescribe punishment. — This paragraph does not confer authority to define contempts, but only the power to prescribe the punishment after conviction. Cobb v. State, 187 Ga. 448, 200 S.E. 796, answer conformed to, 59 Ga. App. 695, 2 S.E.2d 116 (1939).

Power to punish contempts is inherent in every court of record. Cobb v. State, 187 Ga. 448, 200 S.E. 796, answer conformed to, 59 Ga. App. 695, 2 S.E.2d 116 (1939); Wood v. State, 103 Ga. App. 305, 119 S.E.2d 261 (1961), rev'd on other grounds, 370 U.S. 375, 82 S. Ct. 1364, 8 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1962).

Power is not limited by legislative inaction. — The failure of the legislature to limit the punishment for contempt does not destroy the power. Swafford v. Berrong, 84 Ga. 65, 10 S.E. 593 (1889).

Contempt powers not limited by constitutional liberties. — The inherent power of the courts to punish any publication calculated to interfere with the administration of justice is not restricted by the constitutional guaranties of liberty of the press, for liberty of the press is subordinate to the independence of the judiciary and the proper administration of justice. McGill v. State, 209 Ga. 500, 74 S.E.2d 78 (1953).

Due process, freedom of speech, and equal protection clauses of the Constitution of the United States do not bar punishment for contempt of court. Wood v. State, 103 Ga. App. 305, 119 S.E.2d 261 (1961), rev'd on other grounds, 370 U.S. 375, 82 S. Ct. 1364, 8 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1962).

Contempt power not limited by free speech. — Punishment for contempt of court is not prevented by the constitutional guaranty of freedom of speech, since contempt of court is an abuse of the liberty of speech. Wood v. State, 103 Ga.

App. 305, 119 S.E.2d 261 (1961), rev'd on other grounds, 370 U.S. 375, 82 S. Ct. 1364, 8 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1962).

Contempt power not limited by statute. — Former Code 1933, § 24-105 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-1-4), insofar as it sought to limit the jurisdiction of a constitutional court to punish contempts to certain specified acts, was not binding upon such courts. They may go beyond the provisions of the statute in order to preserve and enforce their constitutional powers by treating as contempts acts which clearly invade them. Cobb v. State, 187 Ga. 448, 200 S.E. 796, answer conformed to, 59 Ga. App. 695, 2 S.E.2d 116 (1939); Wood v. State, 103 Ga. App. 305, 119 S.E.2d 261 (1961), rev'd on other grounds, 370 U.S. 375, 82 S. Ct. 1364, 8 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1962).

If the court is created by the Constitution, the legislature cannot, without express constitutional authority, define what are contempts, and declare that the court shall have jurisdiction over no acts except those specified. Cobb v. State, 187 Ga. 448, 200 S.E. 796, answer conformed to, 59 Ga. App. 695, 2 S.E.2d 116 (1939); Wood v. State, 103 Ga. App. 305, 119 S.E.2d 261 (1961), rev'd on other grounds, 370 U.S. 375, 82 S. Ct. 1364, 8 L. Ed. 2d 569 (1962).

No authority to award attorney's fees. — Trial court does not have authority to award attorney's fees as punishment for contempt. Ragsdale v. Bryan, 235 Ga. 58, 218 S.E.2d 809 (1975).

Attorney fees are not awardable in conjunction with a citation for criminal contempt. Rolleston v. Cherry, 237 Ga. App. 733, 521 S.E.2d 1, cert. denied, 528 U.S. 1046, 120 S. Ct. 580, 145 L. Ed. 2d 482 (1999).

Contempt punishment improper when act related to another court. — A rule for contempt, based on a series of newspaper articles, is fatally defective when the publications complained of were true, related to a matter in another court and in no wise referred to the court issuing the rule when they could not have obstructed or impaired the administration of justice in the court. McGill v. State, 209 Ga. 500, 74 S.E.2d 78 (1953).

Cited in Pullen v. Cleckler, 162 Ga. 111,

132 S.E. 761 (1926); Brooks v. Sturdivant, 177 Ga. 514, 170 S.E. 369 (1933); Alred v. Celanese Corp. of Am., 205 Ga. 371, 54 S.E.2d 240 (1949); In re Pruitt, 249 Ga. 190, 288 S.E.2d 208 (1982).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Paragraph applicable only to punishment. — General Assembly is permitted by this paragraph to limit punishment for contempt, and this express grant of power to the General Assembly has been found applicable only to punishment and not to elimination of the judicial exercise of criminal contempt powers by the courts. 1979 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 79-36.

This power granted to the General Assembly is applicable to the prescribing of punishment after conviction only and may not be used to negate the inherent power of the courts to declare acts or deeds criminally contumacious. 1979 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 79-36.

Statute providing for forbearance from punishment could be enacted. — There appears to be no reason why a general statute providing for grants by the General Assembly of forbearance from punishment arising from contempt adjudication could not be enacted under this paragraph. 1979 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 79-36.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 17 Am. Jur. 2d, Contempt, § 1 et seq.

C.J.S. — 17 C.J.S., Contempt, § 1 et seq.

ALR. — Limitations statute applicable to criminal contempt proceedings, 38 ALR2d 1131.

Right to counsel in contempt proceedings, 52 ALR3d 1002.

Attorney’s failure to attend court, or tardiness, as contempt, 13 ALR4th 122.

Intoxication of witness or attorney as contempt of court, 46 ALR4th 238.

Validity and construction of state court’s order precluding publicity or comment about pending civil case by counsel, parties, or witnesses, 56 ALR4th 1214.

Contempt: state court’s power to order indefinite coercive fine or imprisonment to exact promise of future compliance with court’s order — anticipatory contempt, 81 ALR4th 1008.

Paragraph V. What acts void.

Legislative acts in violation of this Constitution or the Constitution of the United States are void, and the judiciary shall so declare them.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VIII.

Cross references. — Jurisdiction of Supreme Court to determine constitutionality of laws, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. VI, Para. II.

Law reviews. — For article, “Selected Oddities in Georgia Municipal Law,” see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 783 (1975). For article, “The Georgia Bill of Rights: Dead or Alive?,” see 34 Emory L.J. 341 (1985).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

DETERMINATION OF CONSTITUTIONALITY

1. IN GENERAL

2. PRESUMPTIONS
3. PROCEDURE

General Consideration

This paragraph is mandatory. Board of Comm'rs v. Mayor of Americus, 141 Ga. 542, 81 S.E. 435 (1914).

Duty of courts to declare unconstitutional Acts invalid. — It is the duty of the courts to declare invalid all legislative Acts which violate the Constitution, and this court has repeatedly held invalid municipal ordinances which deal with matters covered by the general law. Jenkins v. Jones, 209 Ga. 758, 75 S.E.2d 815 (1953).

No valid claim can be based upon an Act of the legislature which contravenes the Constitution. Such Acts are by the state Constitution declared void, and it is made the duty of the judiciary to declare them so. International Bus. Machs. Corp. v. Evans, 213 Ga. 333, 99 S.E.2d 220 (1957); Guhl v. Davis, 242 Ga. 356, 249 S.E.2d 43 (1978).

Power is inherent in court. — The power to test an Act by comparison with the Constitution is one inherently residing in the courts, and it is unnecessary for the Act itself to recite such power. Coleman v. Board of Educ., 131 Ga. 643, 63 S.E. 41 (1908).

Unconstitutional statute is inoperative. — A legislative Act of a general nature, and intended to have uniform operation throughout the state, duly adjudicated to be unconstitutional and inoperative, cannot be given effect in any part or subdivision of the state or of any county. Wellborn v. Estes, 70 Ga. 390 (1883); Green v. Hutchinson, 128 Ga. 379, 57 S.E. 353 (1907).

The general rule is that an unconstitutional statute, though having the form and name of law, is in reality no law, but is wholly void, and in legal contemplation is as inoperative as if it had never been passed. Grayson-Robinson Stores, Inc. v. Oneida, Ltd., 209 Ga. 613, 75 S.E.2d 161, cert. denied, 346 U.S. 823, 74 S. Ct. 39, 98 L. Ed. 348 (1953).

Paragraph indicative of supreme power of judiciary. — Whether or not this provision has reference solely to laws enacted by the legislature, it is indicative of the supreme power of the judiciary in its field of construction. Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947).

Paragraph applies to ordinances. — Generally, a municipal ordinance passed in pursuance of express legislative authority is a law within the meaning of the Constitution. Jenkins v. Jones, 209 Ga. 758, 75 S.E.2d 815 (1953).

Construction of O.C.G.A. § 48-5-2(3) regarding fair market value of property with local constitutional amendment. — Trial court properly determined that no conflict existed between a local constitutional amendment (LCA) and O.C.G.A. § 48-5-2(3) because the statute focused on the market-determined value of property on the actual date the property was acquired, rather than the property's value as much as a year later and was entirely consistent with the LCA, which froze the ad valorem tax value of homestead property in the county at the property's fair market value at the start of the year after a homestead exemption was allowed or after ownership of the property changed. Columbus Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Yeoman, 293 Ga. 107, 744 S.E.2d 18 (2013).

Cited in Boston v. Cummins, 16 Ga. 106, 60 Am. Dec. 717 (1854); Wright v. Southwestern R.R., 64 Ga. 783 (1880); Howell v. State, 71 Ga. 224, 51 Am. R. 259 (1883); Dougherty v. Boyt, 71 Ga. 484 (1883); Scoville v. Calhoun, 76 Ga. 263 (1886); Fullington v. Williams, 98 Ga. 807, 27 S.E. 183 (1896); Cutcher v. Crawford, 105 Ga. 180, 31 S.E. 139 (1898); Epping v. City of Columbus, 117 Ga. 263, 43 S.E. 803 (1903); Griffin v. Sanborn, 127 Ga. 17, 56 S.E. 71 (1906); Hall v. Tarver, 128 Ga. 410, 57 S.E. 720 (1907); Sawyer v. City of Blakely, 2 Ga. App. 159, 58 S.E. 399 (1907); Butts County v. Jackson Banking Co., 129 Ga. 801, 60 S.E. 149, 121 Am. St. R. 244, 15 L.R.A. (n.s.) 567 (1907); Coleman v. Board of Educ., 131 Ga. 643, 63 S.E. 41 (1908); Clark v. Eve, 134 Ga. 788, 68 S.E. 598 (1910); Hammond v. Clark, 136 Ga. 313, 71 S.E. 479, 38 L.R.A. (n.s.) 77 (1911); Strickland v. State, 137 Ga. 1,

General Consideration (Cont'd)

72 S.E. 260, 36 L.R.A. (n.s.) 115, 1913B Ann. Cas. 323 (1911); White v. Mayor of Forsyth, 138 Ga. 753, 76 S.E. 58 (1912); McWilliams v. Smith, 142 Ga. 209, 82 S.E. 569 (1914); Cutsinger v. City of Atlanta, 142 Ga. 555, 83 S.E. 263, 1915B L.R.A. 1097, 1916C Ann. Cas. 280 (1914); Dorsey v. Wright, 150 Ga. 321, 103 S.E. 591 (1920); Ross v. Jones, 151 Ga. 425, 107 S.E. 160 (1921); Jones v. State, 151 Ga. 502, 107 S.E. 565 (1921); Smith v. City of Atlanta, 161 Ga. 769, 132 S.E. 66, 54 A.L.R. 1001 (1926); Speer v. Martin, 163 Ga. 535, 136 S.E. 425 (1927); Roberson v. Roberson, 165 Ga. 447, 141 S.E. 306 (1928); Taliaferro County v. Edwards, 171 Ga. 289, 155 S.E. 180 (1930); Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Raines, 171 Ga. 154, 155 S.E. 484 (1930); Meyers v. Whittle, 171 Ga. 509, 156 S.E. 120 (1930); Threatt v. American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co., 173 Ga. 350, 160 S.E. 379 (1931); Von Schmidt v. Noland Co., 176 Ga. 784, 169 S.E. 11 (1933); Toole v. Anderson, 177 Ga. 814, 171 S.E. 714 (1933); De Kalb County v. Grice, 179 Ga. 458, 175 S.E. 804 (1934); McCaffrey v. State, 183 Ga. 827, 189 S.E. 825 (1937); Elder v. Home Bldg. & Loan Ass'n, 188 Ga. 113, 3 S.E.2d 75 (1939); Black v. Jones, 190 Ga. 95, 8 S.E.2d 385 (1940); Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947); Price v. State, 202 Ga. 205, 42 S.E.2d 728 (1947); Mayor of Savannah v. Harvey, 87 Ga. App. 122, 73 S.E.2d 260 (1952); Cox v. GE Co., 211 Ga. 286, 85 S.E.2d 514 (1955); Frankel v. Cone, 214 Ga. 733, 107 S.E.2d 819 (1959); Williams v. State, 217 Ga. 312, 122 S.E.2d 229 (1961); Baggett Transp. Co. v. Barnes, 108 Ga. App. 68, 132 S.E.2d 229 (1963); Calhoun v. State Hwy. Dep't, 223 Ga. 65, 153 S.E.2d 418 (1967); Brisette v. Munday, 115 Ga. App. 131, 153 S.E.2d 606 (1967); First Nat'l Bank v. Rowley, 224 Ga. 440, 162 S.E.2d 294 (1968); Pharr Rd. Inv. Co. v. City of Atlanta, 224 Ga. 403, 162 S.E.2d 333 (1968); Warren v. Walton, 231 Ga. 495, 202 S.E.2d 405 (1973); Cadle v. State, 136 Ga. App. 232, 221 S.E.2d 59 (1975); City Council v. Mangelly, 243 Ga. 358, 254 S.E.2d 315 (1979); Sikes v. Candler County, 247 Ga. 115, 274 S.E.2d 464 (1981).

Determination of Constitutionality1. In General

Duty of court to declare Act unconstitutional. — When the conflict between a statute and the Constitution is plainly apparent, the Constitution places upon the courts the duty and responsibility of holding the Act invalid. Atlantic Loan Co. v. Peterson, 181 Ga. 266, 182 S.E. 15 (1935).

When an Act of the legislature is clearly in conflict with the Constitution, it is the duty of the Supreme Court to declare it so. Davis v. Board of Educ., 203 Ga. 44, 45 S.E.2d 429 (1947).

Constitutional decision not made if decision on merits can be reached. — Inquiry will not be made into the constitutionality of a statute involved in a proceeding before the court, if a decision of the merits can be reached without reference thereto. Western & Atl. R.R. v. Gray, 172 Ga. 286, 157 S.E. 482, appeal dismissed, 283 U.S. 811, 51 S. Ct. 654, 75 L. Ed. 1428 (1931).

Court confined to settled principles of law in deciding constitutional question. — An Act cannot be declared void on the ground that it is contrary to the principles of justice and equity. Gray v. McLendon, 134 Ga. 224, 67 S.E. 859 (1910).

In determining constitutional questions, like others, the courts are not permitted to concern themselves with the wisdom of an Act, or to apply or obtrude the personal views of the judges as to such matters, but are confined to settled principles of law. Shadrick v. Bledsoe, 186 Ga. 345, 198 S.E. 535 (1938); State Ports Auth. v. Arnall, 201 Ga. 713, 41 S.E.2d 246 (1947).

Constitution prevails over conflicting law. — When there is a variance between an Act of the General Assembly and a constitutional provision, the constitutional provision prevails. Whitman v. State, 96 Ga. App. 730, 101 S.E.2d 621 (1957).

Conflict must be plain and palpable. — To authorize the court to set aside a statute as repugnant to the Constitution, the conflict must be plain and palpable. Wright v. City of Atlanta, 50 Ga. App.

244, 177 S.E. 753 (1934); Shadrick v. Bledsoe, 186 Ga. 345, 198 S.E. 535 (1938); State Ports Auth. v. Arnall, 201 Ga. 713, 41 S.E.2d 246 (1947).

The Supreme Court will not declare an Act of the legislature unconstitutional unless the conflict between the Act and the Constitution is clearly manifest. Atlantic Loan Co. v. Peterson, 181 Ga. 266, 182 S.E. 15 (1935).

Before an Act of the legislature will be declared unconstitutional, the conflict between the Act and the fundamental law must be clear and palpable. Davis v. Board of Educ., 203 Ga. 44, 45 S.E.2d 429 (1947).

The violation must be clear and unequivocal. Wellborn v. Estes, 70 Ga. 390 (1883).

Law in its formative state cannot be declared void. Clayton v. Calhoun, 76 Ga. 270 (1886).

2. Presumptions

Constitutionality is favored. — It is a general rule governing the validity and construction of ordinances that their constitutionality is favored and courts are reluctant to declare an ordinance unconstitutional. Hart v. Columbus, 125 Ga. App. 625, 188 S.E.2d 422 (1972).

Presumptions are made in favor of constitutionality. — Since the legislature is bound by the Constitution, and the members of the legislature are sworn to maintain it, all presumptions are in favor of the constitutionality of an Act of the legislature. Wright v. City of Atlanta, 50 Ga. App. 244, 177 S.E. 753 (1934); Shadrick v. Bledsoe, 186 Ga. 345, 198 S.E. 535 (1938); State Ports Auth. v. Arnall, 201 Ga. 713, 41 S.E.2d 246 (1947); Flynn v. State, 209 Ga. 519, 74 S.E.2d 461 (1953).

Every presumption will be made in favor of the constitutionality of an Act of the legislature. Davis v. Board of Educ., 203 Ga. 44, 45 S.E.2d 429 (1947).

Reasonable construction to preserve constitutionality must be adopted. — If a reasonable construction can be placed upon a statute which will preserve its constitutionality, it is the duty of the courts to adopt such construction. Turman v. Cargill & Daniel, 54 Ga. 663 (1875); Cutsinger v. City of Atlanta, 142

Ga. 555, 83 S.E. 263, 1915B L.R.A. 1097, 1916C Ann. Cas. 280 (1914); Bennett v. Wheatley, 154 Ga. 591, 115 S.E. 83 (1922); Atlantic Loan Co. v. Peterson, 181 Ga. 266, 182 S.E. 15 (1935).

Court will not declare law unconstitutional in doubtful case. — Supreme Court will not set aside a solemn Act of the legislature in a doubtful case. Wright v. City of Atlanta, 50 Ga. App. 244, 177 S.E. 753 (1934); State Ports Auth. v. Arnall, 201 Ga. 713, 41 S.E.2d 246 (1947); Davis v. Board of Educ., 203 Ga. 44, 45 S.E.2d 429 (1947); Flynn v. State, 209 Ga. 519, 74 S.E.2d 461 (1953).

Vague and uncertain attacks on constitutionality will not stand. — Since all presumptions favor the constitutionality of an Act of the legislature, it is a grave matter for the courts to set aside as being void an Act of that coordinate department of government, and vague, uncertain, and indefinite attacks on such Acts will not be considered. Flynn v. State, 209 Ga. 519, 74 S.E.2d 461 (1953).

3. Procedure

Constitutionality is a question of law for the court, and not a question of fact for a jury. Guhl v. Davis, 242 Ga. 356, 249 S.E.2d 43 (1978).

The duty to determine the constitutionality of a legislative enactment is vested in the judges, not the jury. Guhl v. Davis, 242 Ga. 356, 249 S.E.2d 43 (1978).

In order to raise a question as to constitutionality of a law, at least three things must be shown: (1) the statute, or particular part or parts of a statute which the party would challenge must be stated or pointed out with fair precision; (2) the provision of the Constitution which it is claimed has been violated must be clearly designated; and (3) it must be shown wherein the statute, or some designated part of it, violated some constitutional provision. Flynn v. State, 209 Ga. 519, 74 S.E.2d 461 (1953).

Constitutional attack must be clear and definite. — The Supreme Court will not pass upon the constitutionality of a statute when the particular provisions of the Constitution alleged to have been offended by the statute are not clearly designated. Williams v. McIntosh County, 179 Ga. 735, 177 S.E. 248 (1934).

Determination ofConstitutionality (Cont'd)3. Procedure (Cont'd)

Until a clear, definite, and specific attack is made upon the constitutionality of an Act as a whole, or upon the constitutionality of a specifically pointed out part or parts of it, the Supreme Court will decline to deal with its validity. Flynn v. State, 209 Ga. 519, 74 S.E.2d 461 (1953).

Pleading must point out the part of the Constitution violated. Jones v. Oemler, 110 Ga. 202, 35 S.E. 375 (1900).

When the charge was made that an ordinance was void for violating specified constitutional provisions, without stating wherein it violated the provisions, it was too indefinite to invoke a ruling that the ordinance was unconstitutional. Curtis v. Town of Helen, 171 Ga. 256, 155 S.E. 202 (1930).

Unless the attack under this paragraph specifies the statute and provisions of the Constitution violated, the Supreme Court will not rule upon the issues. Morris v. State, 200 Ga. 471, 37 S.E.2d 345 (1946).

Constitutional question must be first raised in trial court. — The constitutionality of an Act must be raised in the lower court. Savannah, Fla. & W. Ry. v. Hardin, 110 Ga. 433, 35 S.E. 681 (1900); Anderson v. State, 2 Ga. App. 1, 58 S.E. 401 (1907); Griggs v. State, 130 Ga. 16, 60 S.E. 103 (1908).

Before a reviewing court is authorized to pass upon the constitutionality of an Act of the General Assembly, it must appear that the question was made or presented in the court below and was passed upon by the trial judge. Borough of Atlanta v. Reynolds, 43 Ga. App. 516, 159 S.E. 607 (1931).

A constitutional question will not be decided by the Supreme Court in the absence of the question being raised in the trial court. Morris v. State, 200 Ga. 471, 37 S.E.2d 345 (1946).

The constitutionality of no law can be drawn in question for the first time in a motion for new trial, and the fact that the laws were declared unconstitutional pending appeal does not require a different result. Konscol v. Konscol, 151 Ga. App. 696, 261 S.E.2d 438 (1979), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 875, 101 S. Ct. 218, 66 L. Ed. 2d 97 (1980).

Exceptions to a judgment can present no constitutional question. Cohen v. State, 7 Ga. App. 5, 65 S.E. 1096 (1909); Johnson v. Ware, 135 Ga. 365, 69 S.E. 481 (1910).

Motion for new trial contending that a verdict is contrary to law can present no constitutional question. Hill v. State, 112 Ga. 400, 37 S.E. 441 (1900).

Declaring portion of Act invalid. — If sections, provisions, sentences, or phrases of a legislative Act can be stricken therefrom without destroying the general legislative scheme, courts should strike them, if necessary to preserve the constitutionality of the Act, and leave the remainder thereof intact. Bennett v. Wheatley, 154 Ga. 591, 115 S.E. 83 (1922).

Unless invalid portion too connected to general scheme of Act. — Part of an Act may be so connected with the general legislative scheme embodied in the Act, that it cannot be so stricken. Futrell v. George, 135 Ga. 265, 69 S.E. 182 (1910); Zachry v. Mayor of Harlem, 138 Ga. 195, 75 S.E. 4 (1912).

Effect of severability clause. — A severability clause does not change the rule that in order for one part of a statute to be upheld as severable when another is stricken as unconstitutional, they must not be mutually dependent on one another. City Council v. Mangelly, 243 Ga. 358, 254 S.E.2d 315 (1979).

Court of appeals may refuse to certify improper proceedings. Tooke v. State, 4 Ga. App. 495, 61 S.E. 917 (1908); Parker-Hensel Eng'r Co. v. Schuler, 7 Ga. App. 396, 66 S.E. 1038 (1910); Logue v. Hancock County, 8 Ga. App. 208, 68 S.E. 866 (1910).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 16 Am. Jur. 2d, Constitutional Law, § 113 et seq. 72 Am. Jur. 2d, States, Territories, and Dependencies, § 40.

Paragraph VI. Superiority of civil authority.

The civil authority shall be superior to the military.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. II, Para. V.

Cross references. — Quartering soldiers, U.S. Const., amend. 3.

Law reviews. — For note, “Rethinking the Role and Regulation of Private Military Companies: What the United States and United Kingdom Can Learn from Shared Experiences in the War on Terror,” see 39 Ga. J. Int’l & Comp. L. 445 (2011).

Paragraph VII. Separation of church and state.

No money shall ever be taken from the public treasury, directly or indirectly, in aid of any church, sect, cult, or religious denomination or of any sectarian institution.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. II, Para. X.

Cross references. — Religious and political freedom, U.S. Const., amend. 1. Tax exemptions generally, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. II, Paras. I through IV. Tax exemptions, for religious organizations, §§ 48-5-41 and 48-8-3.

Law reviews. — For article, “Religious Liberty Law and the States,” see 3 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 19 (1987).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

This paragraph forbids the union of church and state, or any political division thereof. Collum v. State, 109 Ga. 531, 35 S.E. 121 (1900).

This paragraph applies to municipalities. Bennett v. City of LaGrange, 153 Ga. 428, 112 S.E. 482, 22 A.L.R. 1312 (1922).

City charter relieving sectarian institutions from payment of pavement assessments is invalid. Mayor of Savannah v. Richter, 160 Ga. 177, 127 S.E. 148 (1925).

“Religious sect” defined. — See Bennett v. City of LaGrange, 153 Ga. 428, 112 S.E. 482, 22 A.L.R. 1312 (1922).

Religious grave markers may be erected in public graveyard. — Erection and maintenance of religiously symbolic grave markers in a public graveyard in compliance with the religious sentiments of known descendants does not conflict with this provision or the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Birdine v. Moreland, 579 F. Supp. 412 (N.D. Ga. 1983).

County invitational practice. — County commission’s sectarian invocation practice did not offend the Separation Clause of the Georgia Constitution, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VII, because the complaining county residents and taxpayers did not describe how the cost of time spent arranging for a speaker and the cost of stamps were taken in aid of any sect or sectarian institution and did not show any pecuniary benefit, either direct or indirect, conferred by the county upon such groups or that any religious organization received financial assistance from the county for promotion and advancement of its theological views. Bats v. Cobb County, 410 F. Supp. 2d 1324 (N.D. Ga. 2006), aff’d, 547 F.3d 1263 (11th Cir. 2008).

Arms-length agreement between public school and church. — Arms-length agreement by public school system with a church to lease space from the church to alleviate an overcrowding problem at one of its elementary schools did not violate the Establishment Clause of the Georgia Constitution because the payments made under the lease did not constitute giving monetary aid to the church. Taetle v. Atlanta Indep. Sch. Sys., 280 Ga. 137, 625 S.E.2d 770 (2006).

Cited in Trustees of First Methodist Episcopal Church v. City of Atlanta, 76 Ga. 181 (1886); City of Atlanta v. First Presbyterian Church, 86 Ga. 730, 13 S.E. 252, 12 L.R.A. 852 (1891); Reid v. State, 116 Ga. App. 640, 158 S.E.2d 461 (1967); Bradfield v. Hospital Auth., 226 Ga. 575, 176 S.E.2d 92 (1970); Franklin County v. Fieldale Farms Corp., 270 Ga. 272, 507 S.E.2d 460 (1998).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

This paragraph is intended to have a stronger application than the First Amendment to the United States Constitution. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 349.

Statutory provisions deemed constitutional. — The “respect for the creator” portion of the character education program authorized by O.C.G.A. § 20-2-145 and the provision of O.C.G.A. § 50-3-4.1 allowing display of the motto “In God We Trust” in public do not violate the separation of church and state provisions of either the state or federal Constitution. 2000 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 00-9.

Contract for goods or services between public and sectarian schools unconstitutional. — Supreme Court of this state would consider unconstitutional a contract for goods or services between a public elementary or secondary school and a nonpublic sectarian school. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-125.

Expenditure of funds for prison chapels. — State Board of Corrections (now Board of Offender Rehabilitation) can expend state funds for the employment of chaplains and the construction and maintenance of chapels in the various prison branches and can legally permit religious organizations to conduct services in such chapels. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 361.

Use of prison labor to gratuitously clear and maintain church grounds and cemeteries violates constitutional limitations on separation of church and state. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 349.

Contract between a county and the Y.M.C.A. to furnish recreational facilities would violate this paragraph. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-136.

Funds for transporting children to schools. — County board of education may not expend public school funds to transport children to schools other than those operated by the public school system. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 222.

Entirely federally funded plan to provide resources to private schools.

— So long as Title II of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is wholly financed by the federal government and no state matching funds are involved, the State Board of Education may lawfully administer a state plan even though it contemplates the providing of school library resources, textbooks, and other printed instructional materials for the use of students and teachers in private as well as public schools. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 65-4.

Applicability to State authority. — Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VII applies to the Georgia Residential Finance Authority in the distribution of any funds received from the settlement of litigation, its status as a state authority notwithstanding. 1988 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 88-2.

Funds from settlement of litigation. — Funds received by the State of Georgia pursuant to the settlement of litigation are public funds and subject to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VII. 1988 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 88-2.

Teaching about Bible in public schools. — Use of public funds to teach Bible courses may be held to constitute “aid” to a particular religion, i.e., Christianity, if appropriate instruction regarding other religions is not included or if the instruction is not offered in a neutral and objective manner. 1999 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 99-16.

Allowing sectarian organization to generate income through use of school property under a lease arrangement at less than the fair market rental rate would violate the “indirect aid” language of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VII. 1988 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U88-20.

Sectarian organization providing after-school program. — County school system can contract with a sectarian organization to provide after-school programs for its students if the arrangement does not involve a flow of public or school funds from the school system to the sectarian organization. 1988 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U88-6.

Reading Challenge Program grants. — Grants to sectarian schools from the Department of Education for purposes of the Reading Challenge Program are prohibited by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VII. 2000 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2000-5.

Georgia Residential Finance Authority may lend general reserve funds to religiously-motivated housing sponsor which charges in-kind interest, provided the funds are not encumbered or derived from the public treasury, the authority's own purpose is secular and nondiscriminatory, the program in fact is financially sound and secular, and it can be monitored without entanglement. 1988 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 88-15.

When Christmas display in capitol unconstitutional. — Presenting a nativity scene as a part of a planned Christmas program in the capitol rotunda, or leaving an unattended display of a Menorah in front of the capitol would be in violation of the Georgia Constitution and the establishment clause of the United States Constitution. However, a Menorah candlelighting ceremony conducted by private citizens in front of the capitol would not violate the Constitution of the United States or the Georgia Constitution. 1990 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 90-38.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 16A Am. Jur. 2d, Constitutional Law, § 432 et seq.

C.J.S. — 16A C.J.S., Constitutional Law, § 857.

ALR. — Contract to pay for services or reimburse expenditures as within constitutional inhibition of aid to sectarian institutions, 22 ALR 1319; 55 ALR 320.

Constitutionality of statute providing school bus service for pupils of parochial or private schools, 168 ALR 1434.

Public payment of tuition, scholarship, or the like, as respects sectarian school, 81 ALR2d 1309.

Validity, under state constitution and laws, of issuance by state or state agency of revenue bonds to finance or refinance construction projects at private religious-affiliated colleges or universities, 95 ALR3d 1000.

Paragraph VIII. Lotteries and nonprofit bingo games.

(a) Except as herein specifically provided in this Paragraph VIII, all lotteries, and the sale of lottery tickets, and all forms of pari-mutuel betting and casino gambling are hereby prohibited; and this prohibition shall be enforced by penal laws.

(b) The General Assembly may by law provide that the operation of a nonprofit bingo game shall not be a lottery and shall be legal in this state. The General Assembly may by law define a nonprofit bingo game and provide for the regulation of nonprofit bingo games.

(c) The General Assembly may by law provide for the operation and regulation of a lottery or lotteries by or on behalf of the state and for any matters relating to the purposes or provisions of this subparagraph. Proceeds derived from the lottery or lotteries operated by or on behalf of the state shall be used to pay the operating expenses of the lottery or lotteries, including all prizes, without any appropriation required by law, and for educational programs and purposes as hereinafter provided. Lottery proceeds shall not be subject to Article VII, Section III, Paragraph II; Article III, Section IX, Paragraph VI(a); or Article III, Section IX, Paragraph IV(c), except that the net proceeds after payment of such operating expenses shall be subject to Article VII, Section III, Paragraph II. Net proceeds after payment of such operating expenses shall be separately accounted for and shall be specifically identified by the Governor in his annual budget presented to the General Assembly as a separate budget category entitled "Lottery Proceeds" and the Governor shall make specific recommendations as to educational programs and educational purposes to which said net proceeds shall be appropriated. In the General Appropriations Act adopted by the General Assembly, the General Assembly shall appropriate all net proceeds of the lottery or lotteries by such separate budget category to educational programs and educational purposes. Such net proceeds shall be used to support improvements and enhancements for educational programs and purposes and such net proceeds shall be used to supplement, not supplant, non-lottery educational resources for educational programs and purposes. The educational programs and educational purposes for which proceeds may be so appropriated shall include only the following:

(1) Tuition grants, scholarships, or loans to citizens of this state to enable such citizens to attend colleges and universities located within this state, regardless of whether such colleges or universities are operated by the board of regents, or to attend institutions operated under the authority of the Department of Technical and Adult Education;

(2) Voluntary pre-kindergarten;

(3) One or more educational shortfall reserves in a total amount of not less than 10 percent of the net proceeds of the lottery for the preceding fiscal year;

(4) Costs of providing to teachers at accredited public institutions who teach levels K-12, personnel at public postsecondary technical institutes under the authority of the Department of Technical and Adult Education, and professors and instructors within the University System of Georgia the necessary training in the use and application of computers and advanced electronic instructional technology to implement interactive learning environments in the classroom and to access the state-wide distance learning network; and

(5) Capital outlay projects for educational facilities;

provided, however, that no funds shall be appropriated for the items listed in paragraphs (4) and (5) of this subsection until all persons eligible for and applying for assistance as provided in paragraph (1) of this subsection have received such assistance, all approved pre-kindergarten programs provided for in paragraph (2) of this subsection have been fully funded, and the education shortfall reserve or reserves provided for in paragraph (3) of this subsection have been fully funded.

(d) On and after January 1, 1995, the holding of raffles by nonprofit organizations shall be lawful and shall not be prohibited by any law enacted prior to January 1, 1994. Laws enacted on or after January 1, 1994, however, may restrict, regulate, or prohibit the operation of such raffles. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 1, § 2, Para. 8; Ga. L. 1991, p. 2035, § 1/HR 7; Ga. L. 1994, p. 2024, § 1/SR 107; Ga. L. 1998, p. 1686/SR 529.)

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. II, Para. XI.

Cross references. — Definition of “lottery,” § 16-12-20. Illegality of lotteries, §§ 16-12-22, 16-12-25, and 16-12-26.

Editor’s notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1991, p. 2035, § 1) which revised this Paragraph to provide that the General Assembly may enact legislation providing for the operation and regulation of a lottery by or on behalf of the state and providing for distribution of proceeds was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 3, 1992.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1994, p. 2024, § 1) which added subparagraph (d) was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 8, 1994.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1998, p. 1686) which substituted the present provisions of subsection (c) for the former provisions which read: “The General Assembly may by law provide for the operation and regulation of a lottery or lotteries by or on behalf of the state and for any matters relating to the purposes or provisions of this subparagraph. Proceeds derived from the lottery or lotteries operated by or on behalf of the state shall be used to pay the operating expenses of the lottery or lotteries, including all prizes, without any appropriation required by law, and for educational programs and purposes as hereinafter provided. Lottery proceeds shall not be subject to Article VII, Section III, Paragraph II; Article III, Section IX, Paragraph VI(a); or Article III, Section IX, Paragraph IV(c), except that the net proceeds after payment of such operating expenses shall be subject to Article VII, Section III, Paragraph II. Net proceeds after payment of such operating expenses shall be separately accounted for and shall be specifically identified by the Governor in his annual budget presented to the General Assembly as a separate budget category entitled ‘Lottery Proceeds’ and the Governor shall make specific recommendations as to educational programs and educational purposes to which said net proceeds shall be appropriated. In the General Appropriations Act adopted by the General Assembly, the General Assembly shall appropriate all net proceeds of the lottery or lotteries by such separate budget category to educational programs and educational purposes as specified by the General Assembly.” was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 3, 1998.

Law reviews. — For article, “The Georgia Bill of Rights: Dead or Alive?,” see 34 Emory L.J. 341 (1985). For article on resolutions proposing to amend this paragraph, see 23 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 1 (2006).

For note discussing organized crime in Georgia with respect to the application of state gambling laws, and suggesting proposals for combatting organized crime, see 7 Ga. St. B.J. 124 (1970).

For comment on Boyd v. Piggly Wiggly S., Inc., 115 Ga. App. 628, 155 S.E.2d 630 (1967), see 2 Ga. L. Rev. 132 (1967).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Intent of “bingo amendment.” — The bingo amendment is intended to allow only nonprofit organizations to benefit from bingo, and to the extent bingo proceeds are diverted from nonprofit groups this intent has been frustrated. St. John’s Melkite Catholic Church v. Commissioner of Revenue, 240 Ga. 733, 242 S.E.2d 108 (1978).

Use of “shall be legal” prevents general prohibition of bingo. — Legislature in the use of the phrase “shall be legal” in this paragraph, instead of some other phrase which would more clearly delineate the power of the legislature to regulate legal bingo, has prevented the prohibition of bingo in general, and the hindering of the operation of bingo games, and to this extent the police power has been circumscribed. But this does not mean that the state’s police power has been emasculated so that the legislature is without power to outlaw abuses of the right to operate bingo games. St. John’s Melkite Catholic Church v. Commissioner of Revenue, 240 Ga. 733, 242 S.E.2d 108 (1978).

Three ingredients are necessary to constitute a lottery or gift enterprise — prize, chance, and consideration. Boyd v. Piggly Wiggly S., Inc., 115 Ga. App. 628, 155 S.E.2d 630 (1967).

Consideration as an ingredient of a prohibited lottery or gift enterprise is shown when there is present, in the actual working of the sales promotion scheme, a class of persons who, in addition to receiving or being entitled to chances on prizes, supply consideration for all the chances in bulk by purchasing whatever the promoter is selling, whether the purchasers were required to do so or not under the wording of the promoter’s rules. Boyd v. Piggly Wiggly S., Inc., 115 Ga. App. 628, 155 S.E.2d 630 (1967).

Test of a lottery is in its working rather than in its wording. Boyd v. Piggly Wiggly S., Inc., 115 Ga. App. 628, 155 S.E.2d 630 (1967).

Games were not improper “casino gambling.” — Certain games involving the purchase of lottery tickets did not fall within the definition of improper “casino gambling” and the creation and operation of the games was a lawful exercise of the authority of the Georgia Lottery Corporation. Jackson v. Georgia Lottery Corp., 228 Ga. App. 239, 491 S.E.2d 408 (1997).

“Closed participation” gift scheme illegal. — A “closed participation” gift enterprise scheme — that is, one which is open only to patrons purchasing goods, services, or whatever the promoter is trying to push by the scheme — is illegal and contrary to public policy. Boyd v. Piggly Wiggly S., Inc., 115 Ga. App. 628, 155 S.E.2d 630 (1967).

Cited in Smith v. City of Albany, 97 Ga. App. 731, 104 S.E.2d 488 (1958); Midway Youth Football Ladies Auxiliary, Inc. v. Strickland, 449 F. Supp. 418 (N.D. Ga. 1978).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Bonus or rebate is not lottery. — Granting bonus or rebate to customer who subsequently provides for additional sales of product is not a lottery which would be illegal. 1962 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 447.

Bingo statute effective even after constitutional change. — If a statute is enacted pursuant to a specific constitutional provision, and the Constitution is later modified, the statute nevertheless continues to be effective, unless it conflicts with the new constitutional provision; therefore, the Bingo Act, Ga. L. 1977, p. 1164 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-12-50 et seq.), remains effective to authorize the Revenue Department to license and regulate certain nonprofit bingo games after the effective date of the 1978 amendment to this paragraph. 1978 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 78-87.

Educational programs. — The use of lottery proceeds for educational programs and educational purposes is authorized by the Georgia Constitution; however, it was not the intent of the General Assembly that the Georgia Student Finance Commission comply with the Fair and Open Grants Act, O.C.G.A. § 28-5-120 et seq., in administering the HOPE Scholarship, and grant programs. 2002 Op. Att’y Gen. Hope Grant, and other state scholarship No. 2002-2.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 38 Am. Jur. 2d, Gambling, § 1 et seq.

C.J.S. — 54 C.J.S., Lotteries, § 1 et seq.

ALR. — Scheme for advertising or stimulating legitimate business as a lottery, 57 ALR 424; 103 ALR 866; 109 ALR 709; 113 ALR 1121.

Constitutionality of statute which affirmatively permits certain forms of betting or gambling, 85 ALR 622.

Coin-operated or slot machines as lottery, 101 ALR 1126.

“Numbers (or number) game” or “policy game” as a lottery, 105 ALR 305.

Punchboard as a lottery, 163 ALR 1279.

Promotion schemes of retail stores as criminal offense under antigambling law, 29 ALR3d 888.

Validity and construction of statute exempting gambling operations carried on by religious, charitable, or other nonprofit organizations from general prohibitions against gambling, 42 ALR3d 663.

Paragraph IX. Sovereign immunity and waiver thereof; claims against the state and its departments, agencies, officers, and employees.

(a) The General Assembly may waive the state’s sovereign immunity from suit by enacting a State Tort Claims Act, in which the General Assembly may provide by law for procedures for the making, handling, and disposition of actions or claims against the state and its departments, agencies, officers, and employees, upon such terms and subject to such conditions and limitations as the General Assembly may provide.

(b) The General Assembly may also provide by law for the processing and disposition of claims against the state which do not exceed such maximum amount as provided therein.

(c) The state’s defense of sovereign immunity is hereby waived as to any action ex contractu for the breach of any written contract now existing or hereafter entered into by the state or its departments and agencies.

(d) Except as specifically provided by the General Assembly in a State Tort Claims Act, all officers and employees of the state or its departments and agencies may be subject to suit and may be liable for injuries and damages caused by the negligent performance of, or negligent failure to perform, their ministerial functions and may be liable for injuries and damages if they act with actual malice or with actual intent to cause injury in the performance of their official functions. Except as provided in this subparagraph, officers and employees of the state or its departments and agencies shall not be subject to suit or liability, and no judgment shall be entered against them, for the performance or nonperformance of their official functions. The provisions of this subparagraph shall not be waived.

(e) Except as specifically provided in this Paragraph, sovereign immunity extends to the state and all of its departments and agencies. The sovereign immunity of the state and its departments and agencies can only be waived by an Act of the General Assembly which specifically provides that sovereign immunity is thereby waived and the extent of such waiver.

(f) No waiver of sovereign immunity under this Paragraph shall be construed as a waiver of any immunity provided to the state or its departments, agencies, officers, or employees by the United States Constitution. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 1, § 2, Para. 9; Ga. L. 1982, p. 2546, § 1/SR 340; Ga. L. 1990, p. 2435, § 1/HR 777.)

1976 Constitution. — Art. VI, Sec. V, Para. I.

Cross references. — Joint purchase of insurance and joint formation of self-insurance programs by boards of education, § 20-2-2001 et seq. Joint purchase of insurance and joint formation of self-insurance programs by municipalities and counties, T. 36, C. 85. Waiver of sovereign immunity in actions for breach of written contracts entered into by the state, any of its departments, etc., § 50-21-1. Georgia Tort Claims Act, § 50-21-20 et seq. Immunity of counties, municipalities, and school districts, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. II, Para. IX.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1982, p. 2546, § 1) which revised the 1976 Constitution so as to provide sovereign immunity and waivers thereof was ratified at the general election held on November 2, 1982, and was incorporated as part of this paragraph pursuant to Art. XI, Sec. I, Para. V of the 1983 Constitution.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1988, p. 2121, § 1) which would have revised this paragraph to provide for sovereign immunity and official immunity, to provide for circumstances and procedures for raising such immunity, and to provide the General Assembly with authority to enact related laws, was defeated at the general election on November 8, 1988.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1990, p. 2435, § 1) which rewrote this paragraph to provide for waiver of sovereign immunity by enactment of a State Tort Claims Act was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting in the general election held on November 6, 1990.

Law reviews. — For article, "Injunction Procedure in Georgia," see 13 Ga. B.J. 300 (1951). For article, "Sovereign Immunity in Administrative Law — A New Diagnosis," see 9 J. of Pub. L. 1 (1960). For article advocating the overhaul of the doctrines of official and sovereign immunity, see 29 Mercer L. Rev. 303 (1977). For survey article on constitutional law, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 53 (1982). For survey article on contracts — legislation, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 71 (1982). For article, "The Georgia Bill of Rights: Dead or Alive?," see 34 Emory L.J. 341 (1985). For annual survey of law of torts, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 351 (1986). For article, "Georgia Local Government Tort Liability: the 'Crisis' Conundrum," see 2 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 19 (1986). For article, "The Fall and Rise of Official Immunity," see 25 Ga. St. B.J. 93 (1988). For annual survey on law of torts, see 43 Mercer L. Rev. 395 (1991). For article, "The 1992 Georgia Tort Claims Act," see 9 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 431 (1993). For article, "Local Government Tort Liability: the Summer of '92," see 9 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 405 (1993). For article, "Tort Claims Against the State: Georgia's Compensation System," see 32 Ga. L. Rev. 1103 (1998). For annual survey of administrative law, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 1 (2005). For article, "'Official Immunity' in Local Government Law: A Quantifiable Confrontation," see 22 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 597 (2006). For article, "Police Pursuits: A Comprehensive Look at the Broad Spectrum of Police Pursuit Liability and Law," see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 511 (2006). For survey article on administrative law, see 59 Mercer L. Rev. 1 (2007). For annual survey of administrative law, see 67 Mercer L. Rev. 1 (2015). For survey article on local government law, see 67 Mercer L. Rev. 147 (2015).

For note analyzing sovereign immunity in this state and proposing implementation of a waiver scheme and creation of a court of claims pursuant to this paragraph, see 27 Emory L.J. 717 (1978). For note, “City of Rome v. Jordan: Georgia is a Public Duty Doctrine Jurisdiction With No Waiver of Sovereign Immunity — A Good ‘Call’ by the Supreme Court,” see 45 Mercer L. Rev. 533 (1993). For note, “Seay v. Cleveland: Resolution of the Ministerial Discretionary Dichotomy,” see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 787 (2000). For note, “Youngblood v. Gwinnett Rockdale Newton Community Service Board: The Sovereign Immunity of State Agencies Under the Georgia Constitution and the Georgia Tort Claims Act,” see 53 Mercer L. Rev. 967 (2002).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS

WAIVER

APPLICATION OF TORT CLAIMS ACT

OFFICIALS AND THEIR FUNCTIONS

APPLICATION

General Considerations

Editor’s notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. V, Para. I and antecedent provisions, relating to the creation of a state court of claims and incidentally to the reservation of the sovereign immunity of the state, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Some of the cases cited below were decided before the 1990 amendment which deleted provisions as to waiver to the extent of liability insurance.

Governmental immunity waived only by Constitution or General Assembly. — Governmental immunity from suit is waived only when so provided by the Constitution or by the express act of the General Assembly. Porter v. Home Indem. Co., 168 Ga. App. 799, 310 S.E.2d 546 (1983).

Georgia Attorney General lacks statutory authority to waive the state’s Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit; only the legislature can authorize a waiver of sovereign immunity. Ramey v. Ga. Dep’t of Corr., 153 F. Supp. 2d 1382 (M.D. Ga. 2001).

Under the Georgia Constitution, sovereign immunity extends to the state and all of its departments, and may be waived only by a legislative act. DOT v. Watts, 260 Ga. App. 905, 581 S.E.2d 410 (2003).

Constitutionality. — Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para IX does not violate due process and equal protection guarantees. Dollar v. Dalton Pub. Schs., 233 Ga. App. 827, 505 S.E.2d 789 (1998).

For constitutionality of paragraph, see Clark v. State, 240 Ga. 188, 240 S.E.2d 5 (1977).

Constitutionality of provision for governmental immunity of counties.

— Amendment providing counties with the shield of governmental immunity was not ineffectual or invalid merely because it was in conflict with existing provisions. Harry v. Glynn County, 269 Ga. 503, 501 S.E.2d 196 (1998).

Constitutionality of statutory scheme for waiver of immunity by state and counties. — The statutory scheme under which plaintiffs having tort claims against the state have the benefit of the broad waiver of sovereign immunity afforded by the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., which does not extend to counties, whereas a county’s waiver of immunity is allowed only to the extent of insurance purchased for negligence arising from the use of a motor vehicle, results in unequal treatment, however, it does not violate due process or equal protection. Woodard v. Laurens

General Considerations (Cont'd)

County, 265 Ga. 404, 456 S.E.2d 581 (1995).

Constitutional immunity of school district. — School district was not an arm of the state for purposes of Eleventh Amendment immunity, even if it was part of the state for purposes of state sovereign immunity. Lightfoot v. Henry County Sch. Dist., 771 F.3d 764 (11th Cir. 2014).

Defense of sovereign immunity is not affirmative defense with respect to which the state has the burden of proof. Indeed, neither counsel for the state nor any of its agencies may, by affirmative action or by failure to plead, waive the defense of governmental immunity. Kelleher v. State, 187 Ga. App. 64, 369 S.E.2d 341 (1988).

This paragraph is not nullified by any illegality in its ratification. Clark v. State, 142 Ga. App. 272, 235 S.E.2d 614, aff'd, 240 Ga. 188, 240 S.E.2d 5 (1977); Harry v. Glynn County, 269 Ga. 503, 501 S.E.2d 196 (1998).

1982 amendment to 1976 Constitution properly substituted as this paragraph. — The sovereign immunity amendment to the 1976 Constitution, 1982 Ga. L., p. 2546, was properly substituted as this paragraph in the 1983 Constitution, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX. Pollard v. Board of Regents, 260 Ga. 885, 401 S.E.2d 272 (1991).

By virtue of adoption of this paragraph, doctrine of state sovereign immunity now has constitutional status and cannot be abrogated or modified by the Supreme Court. Clark v. State, 240 Ga. 188, 240 S.E.2d 5 (1977).

Immunity rule. — The immunity rule as it has heretofore existed in this state cannot be abrogated or modified by the Supreme Court. Sheley v. Board of Pub. Educ., 233 Ga. 487, 212 S.E.2d 627 (1975).

The doctrine of sovereign immunity was given constitutional status by the 1974 amendment to this paragraph, and applies to any “suit” involving claims for “injury” or “damage” against the state unless and until there is a waiver by act of the General Assembly. Echols v. DeKalb County, 146 Ga. App. 560, 247 S.E.2d 114 (1978).

Doctrine of sovereign immunity is vested with constitutional status and applies to any action against the state unless there is an express statutory waiver of sovereign immunity. National Distrib. Co. v. DOT, 157 Ga. App. 789, 278 S.E.2d 648 (1981).

Doctrine of sovereign immunity is not bar to enforcement of constitutional rights. C.F.I. Constr. Co. v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 145 Ga. App. 471, 243 S.E.2d 700, cert. dismissed, 242 Ga. 96, 249 S.E.2d 613 (1978).

Violation of constitutional right of citizen must by necessary implication raise cause of action in favor of citizen unless some means of redress other than suit has been afforded by the legislature. C.F.I. Constr. Co. v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 145 Ga. App. 471, 243 S.E.2d 700, cert. dismissed, 242 Ga. 96, 249 S.E.2d 613 (1978).

No waiver for independent contractors. — Corporations and independent contractors doing business with the state are not included within the Georgia Tort Claims Act's (GTCA's), O.C.G.A. § 50-21-22(7), definition of employee, thus, the state is immune from liability if the tort was committed by a third party and under the GTCA, the Georgia Department of Transportation's sovereign immunity has not been waived for the negligence committed by independent contractors. Ga. DOT v. Wyche, 332 Ga. App. 596, 774 S.E.2d 169 (2015).

In a suit wherein a construction worker for an independent contractor working on a state highway project was killed, the trial court erred by denying the Georgia Department of Transportation's (DOT's) motion to dismiss because whether the plaintiff's claims were characterized as either claims that the DOT negligently approved the independent contractor's paving project or negligently inspected the project, the claims were barred under the doctrine of sovereign immunity. Ga. DOT v. Wyche, 332 Ga. App. 596, 774 S.E.2d 169 (2015).

Changes in immunity rule and extent of such changes are now solely within domain of General Assembly. Sheley v. Board of Pub. Educ., 233 Ga. 487, 212 S.E.2d 627 (1975).

Generally, the state and its political subdivisions are protected by the doctrine of sovereign immunity in the performance of governmental functions; this paragraph provides for waiver of immunity of the state from suit as is now or may hereafter be provided by Act of the General Assembly. National Distrib. Co. v. DOT, 157 Ga. App. 789, 278 S.E.2d 648 (1981).

State courts have primary interest in adjudicating immunity claims. — Court abstained sua sponte under 28 U.S.C. § 1334(c)(1) and dismissed a Chapter 11 debtor's complaint against a county and various officials because, inter alia, only state law claims were raised; the issues were merely "related to" a case under Title 11, and accordingly were treated as described in 28 U.S.C. § 157(c)(1); the parties had a right to a jury trial; and issues of state sovereign immunity were raised under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(c), which the state had a primary interest in adjudicating. Old Augusta Dev. Group, Inc. v. Effingham County (In re Old Augusta Dev. Group, Inc.), No. 10-4094, 2011 Bankr. LEXIS 2587 (Bankr. S.D. Ga. May 16, 2011).

Only by express consent of state can the state be made amenable to suit and such consent is a matter of legislative grace, the extension of a privilege to which citizens have no right. Sikes v. Candler County, 247 Ga. 115, 274 S.E.2d 464 (1981).

Statutory waiver of sovereign immunity as matter of grace may be granted, withdrawn, or restricted at will of legislature. Sikes v. Candler County, 247 Ga. 115, 274 S.E.2d 464 (1981).

Waiver provisions of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX are prospective from their effective date. Wilmoth v. Henry County, 251 Ga. 643, 309 S.E.2d 126 (1983); Holloway v. Rogers, 181 Ga. App. 11, 351 S.E.2d 240 (1986).

This provision is self-executing, and, as of the provision's effective date in 1983, it results in an automatic waiver by a municipality of the defense of sovereign immunity to the extent of any applicable general liability insurance coverage carried by the municipality, despite the language in O.C.G.A. § 36-33-1(a) limiting that section's effect to litigation pending after July 1, 1986. Brockman v. Burnette, 184 Ga. App. 66, 360 S.E.2d 655 (1987) (decided prior to 1990 amendment).

Withdraw of waiver of immunity prior to 1991 amendment. — If a cause of action accrues before the effective date of the 1991 amendment to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, withdrawal of the waiver of sovereign immunity remains effective regardless of whether the action was filed before or after the effective date of the amendment; Donaldson v. Dep't of Transp., 414 S.E.2d 638 (1992), is no longer controlling in light of Curtis v. Bd. of Regents, 416 S.E.2d 510 (1992). McElmurray v. Augusta-Richmond County, 274 Ga. App. 605, 618 S.E.2d 59 (2005).

1991 amendment applicable to action arising after January 1, 1991. — The 1991 amendment to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, extending sovereign immunity "to the state and all of its departments and agencies," governed an action which arose on September 1, 1991, and was filed on November 24, 1992. Gilbert v. Richardson, 264 Ga. 744, 452 S.E.2d 476 (1994).

The 1991 amendment extending sovereign immunity "to the state and all of its departments and agencies" includes county-wide school districts created pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VIII, Sec. V, Para. I and O.C.G.A. § 20-2-50. Coffee County Sch. Dist. v. Snipes, 216 Ga. App. 293, 454 S.E.2d 149 (1995).

For application of 1991 amendment, see Rawls v. Bulloch County Sch. Dist., 223 Ga. App. 234, 477 S.E.2d 383 (1996).

1991 amendment does not apply retroactively. — The 1991 amendment to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, eliminating the insurance waiver, under which sovereign immunity in tort actions was waived to the extent that the state agencies or employees were covered by insurance, is not to be applied retroactively. Brown v. Hall County, 262 Ga. 172, 416 S.E.2d 90 (1992).

When an action was filed before the effective date of the 1991 amendment to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, the amended provision did not apply. Vannostran v. Mountainside Bldrs. Inc., 262 Ga. 172, 416 S.E.2d 89 (1992).

General Considerations (Cont'd)

The 1991 amendment has prospective effect only and does not act to withdraw any waiver of sovereign immunity for actions pending on January 1, 1991, the amendment's effective date. Donaldson v. DOT, 262 Ga. 49, 414 S.E.2d 638 (1992).

Since a plaintiff filed suit two months prior to January 1, 1991, the date the amendment to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX became effective, the amendment did not apply, and the Department of Transportation waived its sovereign immunity to the extent of its available insurance. Bob v. Scruggs Co., 204 Ga. App. 375, 419 S.E.2d 100, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 921, 419 S.E.2d 100 (1992).

Although the complaint was filed after the effective date of the constitutional amendment, since the cause of action accrued before January 1, 1991, the waiver of any existing defense of sovereign immunity was not withdrawn. Dozier v. Clayton County Hosp. Auth., 206 Ga. App. 62, 424 S.E.2d 632 (1992).

Trial court erred in granting a school board's motion for summary judgment as to an injured party's personal injury claim based on sovereign immunity as: (1) the trial court applied the wrong version of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e), which was amended, prospectively, after the accident; (2) the applicable version of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e) was in effect at the time of the accident in 1990; and (3) the parties agreed that an insurance policy would have constituted a waiver of the board's sovereign immunity, which implied that a policy existed; the case was remanded so that the trial court could reconsider its decision in light of the correct law and any insurance policy. Hart v. Appling County Sch. Bd., 266 Ga. App. 300, 597 S.E.2d 462 (2004).

Complaint filed prior to amendment's effective date. — The trial court's dismissal of the negligence action alleging breach of contract in the death of plaintiff's spouse based on sovereign immunity was reversed when the plaintiff filed a complaint prior to the effective date of the 1990 amendment to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX. These provisions do not withdraw any waiver of sovereign immunity for actions pending on the amendment's effective date of January 1, 1991. At the time of this action, the Board of Regents maintained a self-insurance program that provided liability insurance for board employees and under the constitutional provision then in effect, the board waived sovereign immunity to the extent of the liability insurance provided. Wilson v. Board of Regents, 262 Ga. 413, 419 S.E.2d 916 (1992).

Liability for actions accruing before effective date. — In an action brought against a local school board for the wrongful death of a child struck and killed by an automobile, since the fatal accident occurred prior to the effective date of subsection (a) of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, January 1, 1983, the board members' defense of sovereign immunity was not waived. Hill v. McClure, 171 Ga. App. 588, 320 S.E.2d 562 (1984).

Construction of duplicative constitutional grants of sovereign immunity. — Since the authority to waive the sovereign immunity of the state, and concomitantly that of the counties of the state, is given to the General Assembly by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, it was not necessary for the people to give an identical authority of waiver to the General Assembly by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. II, Para. IX. However, this duplicative grant does not render the two provisions inconsistent and does not indicate an intent that the Article I provision would not reserve sovereign immunity to counties. Toombs County v. O'Neal, 254 Ga. 390, 330 S.E.2d 95 (1985).

The 1991 amendment of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, extending sovereign immunity to all state departments and agencies regardless of any insurance, did not divest the General Assembly of authority under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. II, Para. IX, to waive the immunity of counties based on motor vehicle liability insurance; therefore, the amendment did not abrogate the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 33-24-51 and a county's governmental immunity was waived to the extent of liability insurance purchased. Daniels v. Decatur County, 212 Ga. App. 378, 441 S.E.2d 790 (1994).

The term “governmental immunity,” as used in O.C.G.A. § 33-24-51, is synonymous with “sovereign immunity” and does not encompass both “sovereign” and “official” immunity. Thus, the waiver of immunity provided by the statute is not in conflict with Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX since it provides both a waiver of sovereign immunity and the extent of such waiver, i.e., the extent of liability insurance coverage. Gilbert v. Richardson, 264 Ga. 744, 452 S.E.2d 476 (1994).

Construction with O.C.G.A. §§ 9-4-7(c) and 50-13-10(a). — Georgia Court of Appeals disagreed that the “may be determined” language in O.C.G.A. § 50-13-10(a) was evidence that the statute was but one of several methods by which to challenge the validity of an agency rule and that O.C.G.A. § 9-4-7(c), as well as case authority, impliedly contemplated the legitimacy of challenges to agency rules outside the purview of the Administrative Procedure Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-13-1 et seq. Live Oak Consulting, Inc. v. Dep’t of Cmty. Health, 281 Ga. App. 791, 637 S.E.2d 455 (2006).

Construction of O.C.G.A. § 50-21-24. — In order for state policy decisions related to the provision of emergency services not to be directly or indirectly put on trial, the Supreme Court of Georgia construed O.C.G.A. § 50-21-24(6), an exception to the waiver of sovereign immunity, to provide complete protection of the policy-making decisions in providing police and fire services from judicial review, as such construction accomplished a balance between the inherently unfair and inequitable results from the strict application of sovereign immunity and the need to limit the state’s exposure to tort liability that the General Assembly expressed as its goal in O.C.G.A. § 50-21-21. Ga. Forestry Comm’n v. Canady, 280 Ga. 825, 632 S.E.2d 105 (2006).

State immunity in federal court. — Although the state has waived the state’s sovereign immunity in state court to the extent the state agencies or employees were covered by insurance, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX cannot be read as waiving the state’s Eleventh Amendment immunity in federal court. Hobbs v. Georgia DOT, 785 F. Supp. 980 (N.D. Ga. 1991), aff’d in part and vacated in part on other grounds, 999 F.2d 1526 (11th Cir. 1993).

Authority of state courts over federally-based claims against state officers and employees. — The 1990 amendment addresses only the immunity defense of state officers and employees to state-based claims, not the authority of the state’s courts to hear federally-based claims against state officers and employees. Thus, the amendment cannot be construed as removing subject matter jurisdiction over federal civil rights claims from the courts of Georgia. Turner v. Giles, 264 Ga. 812, 450 S.E.2d 421 (1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1108, 115 S. Ct. 1959, 131 L. Ed. 2d 851 (1995).

The courts of this state have subject matter jurisdiction over federally-based claims against state officers and employees and the consequent authority to rule on the merits of any defense that might be raised by the state officers and employees. Turner v. Giles, 264 Ga. 812, 450 S.E.2d 421 (1994), cert. denied, 514 U.S. 1108, 115 S. Ct. 1959, 131 L. Ed. 2d 851 (1995).

Whoever contracts with the state trusts to the good faith of the state, unless the state sees fit to disrobe itself of its sovereignty. C.F.I. Constr. Co. v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 145 Ga. App. 471, 243 S.E.2d 700, cert. dismissed, 242 Ga. 96, 249 S.E.2d 613 (1978).

County waiver of immunity in employment contracts. — Trial court erred in denying a county’s motion for summary judgment because under the clear terms of the County Code, overtime-exempt fire captains, after being promoted to the rank of captain, were not entitled to use compensatory time accrued more than a year earlier and they were not entitled to receive payment for their unused compensatory time as there was no written contract that promised them compensation for such time, thus, there was no waiver of the county’s sovereign immunity. DeKalb County v. Kirkland, 329 Ga. App. 262, 764 S.E.2d 867 (2014).

Rule permitting action against local government for constitutional

General Considerations (Cont'd)question not applicable to state. —

The rule which permits a citizen and taxpayer to maintain an action against a municipality or county to test the constitutionality of an ordinance or statute cannot be applied by analogy to a suit against the state, the latter being a sovereign power and not subject to suit without its consent. Ramsey v. Hamilton, 181 Ga. 365, 182 S.E. 392 (1935).

Standing to seek reformation of liability contract. — In certifying certain questions to the Georgia Supreme Court, the federal Court of Appeals concluded that it is an open question of Georgia law whether a person injured by a municipality has a beneficial interest in the municipality's liability contract sufficient to provide standing to seek reformation. Florida Int'l Indem. Co. v. City of Metter, 952 F.2d 1297 (11th Cir. 1992).

Immunity extends to counties. — Builder's contractual and quasi-contractual claims against a county and county officials for an interest in a sewer pumping station were properly dismissed by the trial court because the claims were barred by sovereign immunity as there was no written contract to enforce. Layer v. Barrow County, 297 Ga. 871, 778 S.E.2d 156 (2015).

Cited in Hight v. Burden, 180 Ga. App. 716, 350 S.E.2d 471 (1986); Price v. DOT, 182 Ga. App. 353, 356 S.E.2d 45 (1987); Ostuni Bros. v. Fulton County Dep't of Pub. Works, 184 Ga. App. 406, 361 S.E.2d 668 (1987); Poss v. Georgia Regional Hosp., 676 F. Supp. 258 (S.D. Ga. 1987); Cooper v. Swofford, 258 Ga. 143, 368 S.E.2d 518 (1988); Kurtz v. Williams, 188 Ga. App. 14, 371 S.E.2d 878 (1988); Jarrett v. Butts, 190 Ga. App. 703, 379 S.E.2d 583 (1989); Rogers v. Sharpe, 206 Ga. App. 353, 425 S.E.2d 391 (1992); Winchester Constr. Co. v. Miller County Bd. of Educ., 821 F. Supp. 697 (M.D. Ga. 1993); Newsome v. Webster, 843 F. Supp. 1460 (S.D. Ga. 1994); Deaton v. Department of Cors., 212 Ga. App. 612, 443 S.E.2d 8 (1994); Miller v. Georgia Ports Auth., 217 Ga. App. 876, 460 S.E.2d 100 (1995); Christensen v. State, 219 Ga. App. 10, 464 S.E.2d 14 (1995); Northwest Ga. Regional Hosp. v. Wilkins, 220 Ga. App. 534, 469 S.E.2d 786 (1996); Miller v. Department of Pub. Safety, 221 Ga. App. 280, 470 S.E.2d 773 (1996); Keenan v. Plouffe, 267 Ga. 791, 482 S.E.2d 253 (1997); Smith v. Little, 234 Ga. App. 329, 506 S.E.2d 675 (1998); Seay v. Cleveland, 270 Ga. 64, 508 S.E.2d 159 (1998); Maughon v. Bibb County, 160 F.3d 658 (11th Cir. 1998); Phillips v. Walls, 242 Ga. App. 309, 529 S.E.2d 626 (2000); Department of Veterans Servs. v. Robinson, 244 Ga. App. 878, 536 S.E.2d 617 (2000); Ga. Dep't of Human Res. v. Coley, 247 Ga. App. 392, 544 S.E.2d 165 (2000); Price v. State, 250 Ga. App. 872, 553 S.E.2d 194 (2001); Sylvester v. DOT, 252 Ga. App. 31, 555 S.E.2d 740 (2001); Conley v. Dawson, 257 Ga. App. 665, 572 S.E.2d 34 (2002); Johnson v. Ga. Dep't of Human Res., 278 Ga. 714, 606 S.E.2d 270 (2004); EHCA Cartersville, LLC v. Turner, 280 Ga. 333, 626 S.E.2d 482 (2006); Nat'l Ass'n of Bds. of Pharm. v. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga., No. 3:07-CV-084 (CDL), 2008 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 32116 (M.D. Ga. Apr. 18, 2008); Bd. of Regents v. Canas, 295 Ga. App. 505, 672 S.E.2d 471 (2009), overruled on other grounds, Rivera v. Washington, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 248 (Ga. 2016); Romano v. Ga. Dep't of Corr., 303 Ga. App. 347, 693 S.E.2d 521 (2010); Nelson v. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga., 307 Ga. App. 220, 704 S.E.2d 868 (2010); Laskar v. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga., 320 Ga. App. 414, 740 S.E.2d 179 (2013); Hartley v. Agnes Scott College, 295 Ga. 458, 759 S.E.2d 857 (2014); Effingham County v. Roach, 329 Ga. App. 805, 764 S.E.2d 600 (2014), overruled on other grounds, Rivera v. Washington, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 248 (Ga. 2016); Considine v. Murphy, 297 Ga. 164, 773 S.E.2d 176 (2015).

WaiverSpecific waiver of immunity to provide limited time to file a claim. —

Trial court did not err in granting the motion by the state transportation department to dismiss on the ground that sovereign immunity barred the claimant's personal injury claim against the state because the claimant did not timely file the claimant's notice of claim, as required by O.C.G.A. § 50-21-26(a), and substantial compliance was not sufficient to meet that statute's requirement of proper notice; since the claimant did not timely file the claimant's notice of claim, the trial court was not permitted to consider the claimant's claim because the state only waived its sovereign immunity to the extent of providing a limited time to file a claim against the state, and since the claimant did not meet that requirement the trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction to entertain the claim. Williams v. Ga. DOT, 275 Ga. App. 88, 619 S.E.2d 763 (2005).

When waiver occurs. — The operation of the waiver occurs at the time the action arises, not at the time the allegedly negligent act was committed. Ethridge v. Price, 194 Ga. App. 82, 389 S.E.2d 784 (1989), cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 82, 389 S.E.2d 784 (1990).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to an applicant for university employment as to the issue of finding a valid and written contract, thus finding that the state's sovereign immunity was waived; however, summary judgment was reversed, as jury issues remained as to: (1) whether the university Board of Regents breached the contract; (2) whether university officials violated an implied duty to use their best efforts to secure the Board's approval of the applicant's appointment, whether the officials acted in bad faith when they withdrew the appointment, and whether the officials were solely responsible for the failure of the Board to vote on the appointment; and (3) whether the applicant's alleged misconduct rendered the continued pursuit of the appointment impossible or impracticable, and whether the applicant ratified the withdrawal of the appointment. Board of Regents of the Univ. Sys. v. Doe, 278 Ga. App. 878, 630 S.E.2d 85 (2006).

Immunity not waived by removal to federal court. — When plaintiffs, a gun advocacy group and one of the group's members, and a church and the pastor, sought a declaratory judgment that O.C.G.A. § 16-11-127, regulating possession of weapons in a place of worship, violated their First Amendment right to the free exercise of religion, although defendant State of Georgia may have waived the state's immunity by removing the case to federal court, the state's underlying sovereign immunity against the claims remained and the state was immune from suit. GeorgiaCarry.Org, Inc. v. Georgia, 764 F. Supp. 2d 1306 (M.D. Ga. 2011), aff'd, 687 F.3d 1244 (11th Cir. Ga. 2012).

No legislative act providing for waiver found. — Plaintiff employee did not show that defendant school system waived its immunity, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e), because plaintiff pointed to no legislative act providing for a waiver. In addition, because defendant superintendent was a state employee whose alleged tort was committed while acting within the scope of the defendant's employment, the defendant also was entitled to immunity under O.C.G.A. § 50-21-25(a). Polite v. Dougherty County Sch. Sys., No. 07-14108, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 17128 (11th Cir. Aug. 11, 2008) (Unpublished).

O.C.G.A. § 45-1-4 waives sovereign immunity. — Appellate court properly interpreted O.C.G.A. § 45-1-4 as creating an express waiver of sovereign immunity by prohibiting a public employer from retaliating against its employees, defining a public employer, and providing remedies available to an employee upon a successful retaliation claim being established. Colon v. Fulton County, 294 Ga. 93, 751 S.E.2d 307 (2013), overruled on other grounds, Rivera v. Washington, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 248 (Ga. 2016).

Equity claims against the state have not been waived by statute. Dollar v. Olmstead, 232 Ga. App. 520, 502 S.E.2d 472 (1998).

Reliance on waiver. — A waiver of sovereign immunity cannot be withdrawn after a suit is filed in reliance on that waiver. Hiers v. City of Barwick, 262 Ga. 129, 414 S.E.2d 647 (1992).

Nuisance exception. — The 1990 constitutional amendment eliminating the insurance waiver provision and substituting a Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., waiver did not conflict with the nuisance exception to sovereign immunity and a municipality can be liable for creating or maintaining a nuisance which constitutes a danger to life and health or a taking of property. City of Thomasville v. Shank, 263 Ga. 624, 437 S.E.2d 306 (1993).

Waiver (Cont'd)

Trial court properly denied a city's motion to dismiss based on sovereign immunity because the landowners asserted that the damage from the city's drainage system amounted to an unlawful taking of their property for which sovereign immunity has been waived. City of Greensboro v. Rowland, 334 Ga. App. 148, 778 S.E.2d 409 (2015), cert. denied, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 154 (Ga. 2016).

No actions may be filed against a county without express statutory authority, except to the extent of any waiver of immunity provided in the Constitution and such waiver or qualification of immunity as is now or may hereafter be provided by Act of the General Assembly. Duffield v. DeKalb County, 242 Ga. 432, 249 S.E.2d 235 (1978).

County's participation in an interlocal risk management plan constituted liability insurance for the purpose of waiving the county's sovereign immunity to the extent of the plan's coverage. Gilbert v. Richardson, 264 Ga. 744, 452 S.E.2d 476 (1994).

Even though the 1991 amendment of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX eliminated the language under which O.C.G.A. § 36-85-20 was found unconstitutional void, the revision did not resurrect the statute and, accordingly, the statute provided no basis for finding a county's participation in an interlocal risk management plan was not a waiver of sovereign immunity. The county's purchase of such insurance agreement constituted the purchase of insurance under O.C.G.A. § 33-24-51(b) and the county waived its sovereign immunity to the extent of such coverage; reversing in part, Gilbert v. Richardson, 211 Ga. App. 795, 440 S.E.2d 684 (1994). Gilbert v. Richardson, 264 Ga. 744, 452 S.E.2d 476 (1994).

County's "risk management fund" for the investigation and defense of tort claims was a self-insurance plan constituting liability insurance which waived sovereign immunity within the meaning of the former provisions of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX and O.C.G.A.

§ 33-24-51. Mims v. Clanton, 222 Ga. App. 657, 475 S.E.2d 662 (1996).

County's purchase of a general liability insurance policy for purposes of the waiver of sovereign immunity was authorized by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX and an accident involving the operation of a back hoe owned by the county was covered by the policy. Crider v. Zurich Ins. Co., 222 Ga. App. 177, 474 S.E.2d 89 (1996).

In a negligence action by a student against a school system and physical education teacher, the system and teacher were entitled to the defense of sovereign immunity, and there was no waiver of immunity by the mere existence of the system's liability insurance policy. Crisp County Sch. Sys. v. Brown, 226 Ga. App. 800, 487 S.E.2d 512 (1997).

In a wrongful death action against the Georgia Department of Corrections and state and county officials, the admitted existence of liability insurance did not amount to a waiver of sovereign immunity. Bontwell v. Department of Cors., 226 Ga. App. 524, 486 S.E.2d 917 (1997).

In an arrestee's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suit against a lead pursuit deputy and the supervisor for using excessive force to stop the arrestee's car during a high-speed chase, a county was not entitled to immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d) from liability for negligence because the county waived its immunity pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 33-24-51(b) by purchasing liability insurance coverage to cover the negligence of county employees arising from the use of a motor vehicle. Harris v. Coweta County, No. 3:01-CV-148-WBH, 2003 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27348 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 25, 2003).

In a worker's suit alleging negligence on the part of a county with regard to the county allegedly failing to properly instruct and supervise the worker in the use of a portable tar kettle machine, the trial court erred by granting the county's motion for a judgment on the pleadings based on sovereign immunity as the worker sufficiently alleged that the machine was a vehicle as contemplated by O.C.G.A. § 33-24-51, which established a waiver of sovereign immunity if the county had purchased liability insurance to cover damages and injuries arising from the use of motor vehicles under the county's management. Hewell v. Walton County, 292 Ga. App. 510, 664 S.E.2d 875 (2008).

Waiver through furnishing insurance. — Although O.C.G.A. § 45-9-5 expresses a legislative intent that sovereign immunity of the state is not to be waived through the furnishing of insurance authorized by O.C.G.A. § 45-9-4, the language of this provision of the constitution forces the court to reach a contrary result. Price v. DOT, 257 Ga. 535, 361 S.E.2d 146 (1987) (decided prior to 1990 amendment).

When negligence in performing official acts is covered by liability insurance, the officers' official immunity is waived to the extent to which this coverage will pay for the claims asserted. Swofford v. Cooper, 184 Ga. App. 50, 360 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 258 Ga. 143, 368 S.E.2d 518 (1987) (decided prior to 1990 amendment).

While sovereign immunity is waived by a county to the extent of the county's liability coverage under an insurance agreement, the existence and amount of the coverage is not a proper subject for jury consideration. Early County v. Fincher, 184 Ga. App. 47, 360 S.E.2d 602, cert. denied, 184 Ga. App. 909, 360 S.E.2d 602 (1987) (decided prior to 1990 amendment).

When insurance coverage is obtained by a government entity, the government entity waives its sovereign immunity to the extent of such insurance coverage; however, when the plain terms of the policy provide that there is no coverage for the particular claim, the policy does not create a waiver of sovereign immunity as to that claim. Dugger v. Sprouse, 257 Ga. 778, 364 S.E.2d 275 (1988) (decided prior to 1990 amendment).

The mere purchase of liability insurance does not automatically waive sovereign immunity. Rather, sovereign immunity is waived only when the insurer of a state entity satisfies a claim under the coverage provided. If payment is not required under the contract, and bad faith has not been shown, there is no waiver of immunity. Ward v. Bulloch County, 258 Ga. 92, 365 S.E.2d 440 (1988) (decided prior to 1990 amendment).

Case was remanded to the trial court to allow the parties to perfect the record on the issue of insurance coverage which could constitute a waiver of sovereign immunity. Carter v. Fulton-DeKalb County Hosp. Auth., 209 Ga. App. 384, 433 S.E.2d 433 (1993).

Because there was no evidence of record that a city maintained liability insurance that would cover the occurrences forming the basis of the developers' claims, there was no waiver of the city's sovereign immunity pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 36-33-1(a); thus, sovereign immunity was a viable defense as to the city and the city officials acting in their official capacities. Wendelken v. JENK LLC, 291 Ga. App. 30, 661 S.E.2d 152 (2008).

In determining if a county waived the county's sovereign immunity through the voluntary purchase of liability insurance under the second sentence of O.C.G.A. § 33-24-51(b), a trial court erred in considering the definition of "motor vehicle" provided in O.C.G.A. § 36-92-1; rather, "any motor vehicle" was defined as a vehicle that was capable of being driven on the public roads that was covered by a liability insurance policy purchased by the county. Glass v. Gates, 311 Ga. App. 563, 716 S.E.2d 611 (2011), aff'd, 291 Ga. 350, 729 S.E.2d 361 (2012).

County purchase of liability insurance. — The doctrine of sovereign immunity applies to all state department and agencies, including counties, regardless of the purchase of liability insurance. Kordares v. Gwinnett County, 220 Ga. App. 848, 470 S.E.2d 479 (1996).

Private liability insurance of public official. — A teacher's private liability insurance did not result in a waiver of sovereign immunity available to the teacher as an agent of the school district; a negligence action against the teacher was barred by official immunity as there was no waiver by the school district. Parker v. Wynn, 211 Ga. App. 78, 438 S.E.2d 147 (1993).

Purchase of insurance by government employees. — In action against a school principal and teacher accruing prior to the 1991 amendment of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, official immunity enjoyed by the defendants was not waived by their individual purchase of liability insurance through their professional associations. Guthrie v. Irons, 211 Ga. App. 502, 439 S.E.2d 732 (1993), disapproved in part, Gilbert v. Richardson, 264 Ga. 744, 452 S.E.2d 476 (1994).

Waiver (Cont'd)

In a personal injury action against a county when the county's liability insurance policy did not pay unless the insured's obligation exceeded a floor of $250,000, and the policy provided a ceiling of $750,000 per occurrence, immunity was waived only to the extent of the available insurance coverage. Mims v. Clanton, 215 Ga. App. 665, 452 S.E.2d 169 (1994), cert. denied, 1995 Ga. Lexis 404 (1995).

Trial court erred in dismissing the farmers' tort claims based on sovereign immunity as the date that an action was filed did not determine whether the 1991 amendment to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX controlled; as a truck was used for spreading sewage sludge on the farmers' property, damages resulting from the spreading of the sludge from the truck were injuries arising by reason of use of the truck for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 33-24-51(b). McElmurray v. Augusta-Richmond County, 274 Ga. App. 605, 618 S.E.2d 59 (2005).

County's maintenance of a reserve fund for the purpose of paying claims and the payment of claims therefrom did not constitute a self-insurance plan so as to defeat its right to assert sovereign immunity. Tillman v. Mastin, 216 Ga. App. 3, 453 S.E.2d 85 (1994).

Establishment of general liability trust fund waived immunity. — Establishment of comprehensive general liability trust fund for Department of Public Safety employees, covering negligence in performance of official acts, constituted a waiver of sovereign immunity to the extent of the available insurance in the case of an accident resulting from a high-speed chase by police. Martin v. Georgia Dep't of Pub. Safety, 257 Ga. 300, 357 S.E.2d 569 (1987), cert. denied, 484 U.S. 998, 108 S. Ct. 685, 98 L. Ed. 2d 638 (1988) (decided prior to 1990 amendment).

Umbrella liability policy, together with trust fund created by hospital, constituted "liability insurance protection" within the meaning of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX and therefore acted as a waiver of sovereign immunity. Nothing in the constitution or the statutes requires that governmental entities elect commercial insurance coverage rather than self-insurance or a combination of self-insurance and commercial insurance in order to waive sovereign immunity. Litterilla v. Hospital Auth., 262 Ga. 34, 413 S.E.2d 718 (1992).

Entering into contractual obligation no waiver of immunity without written proof of the contract. — The mere activity of the state or one of its political subdivisions in entering into an otherwise valid contractual obligation with one of its citizens is not an implied waiver of its cloak of immunity. C.F.I. Constr. Co. v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 145 Ga. App. 471, 243 S.E.2d 700, cert. dismissed, 242 Ga. 96, 249 S.E.2d 613 (1978).

Trial court improperly denied summary judgment to the Board of Regents since the plaintiff failed to present sufficient evidence to establish the existence of a written contract between the parties; therefore, the Board's sovereign immunity was not waived. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga. v. Winter, 331 Ga. App. 528, 771 S.E.2d 201 (2015), overruled on other grounds, Rivera v. Washington, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 248 (Ga. 2016).

Waiver with regard to contracts did not apply to university course catalog. — Waiver of the state's sovereign immunity with regard to contracts in writing did not apply to permit a state university student to assert breach of contract by suspending the student for theft, since the university's undergraduate catalog, which expressly stated that it was informational rather than contractual, did not constitute a contract that could be breached. Carr v. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys., No. 07-10126, 2007 U.S. App. LEXIS 22715 (11th Cir. Sept. 24, 2007) (Unpublished).

No waiver of immunity in oral contracts. — Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e) provides governmental defendants with sovereign immunity unless the immunity has been specifically waived. Even though sovereign immunity has been waived for the breach of any written contract, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-1, there has been no such waiver for oral contracts. Soloski v. Adams, 600 F. Supp. 2d 1276 (N.D. Ga. 2009).

Unsigned contract document did not waive sovereign immunity. — Computer contractor that had an unsigned copy of an agreement and an invoice for services rendered failed to show that the contractor had a signed agreement with a state agency for purposes of the state's waiver of immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(c). The contractor's claims for unjust enrichment were also barred by sovereign immunity. Ga. Dep't of Cmty. Health v. Data Inquiry, LLC, 313 Ga. App. 683, 722 S.E.2d 403 (2012).

Waiver via contract. — Trial court properly denied the Georgia Department of Corrections' (GDOC's) motion for summary judgment on sovereign immunity grounds because the GDOC waived sovereign immunity by entering into a contract with the roofing company and the doctrine of equitable subrogation gave the roofing company's surety the ability to step into the shoes of the roofing company and file suit against the GDOC once the surety incurred liability and paid the obligations of the surety's principal under the bond. State Dep't of Corr. v. Developers Sur. & Indem. Co., 324 Ga. App. 371, 750 S.E.2d 697 (2013).

Arbitration award against county not barred by immunity. — Dismissal of the law clerks' motion to confirm an arbitration award in the clerks' favor on the clerks' group-pay grievance against a county due to alleged pay disparity was not warranted as the back pay award was not barred by the doctrine of sovereign immunity; accordingly, there was no manifest disregard of the law by the arbitrator. Fulton County v. Lord, 323 Ga. App. 384, 746 S.E.2d 188 (2013).

Waiver of immunity for design claims did not waive immunity for inspection claims. — Dismissal of an injured couple's claims against the DOT to the extent the claims were based on a theory of negligent inspection of the county-owned area in which the accident occurred was proper under O.C.G.A.

§ 50-21-24(8); the waiver of immunity with respect to design claims under § 50-21-24(10) did not extend to waive immunity for inspection claims. Diamond v. DOT, 326 Ga. App. 189, 756 S.E.2d 277 (2014).

Corporations and independent contractors doing business with the state are not included within the Georgia Tort Claims Act's (GTCA's), O.C.G.A. § 50-21-22(7), definition of employee, thus, the state is immune from liability if the tort was committed by a third party and under the GTCA, the Georgia Department of Transportation's sovereign immunity has not been waived for the negligence committed by independent contractors. Ga. DOT v. Wyche, 332 Ga. App. 596, 774 S.E.2d 169 (2015).

Application of Tort Claims Act

Tort Claims Act not exclusive means for legislature to waive immunity. — Considering the 1991 amendment as a whole, sovereign immunity is waived by any legislative act which specifically provides that sovereign immunity is waived and the extent of such waiver; thus, the enactment of the Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., was but one of the ways the legislature could constitutionally waive sovereign immunity. Gilbert v. Richardson, 264 Ga. 744, 452 S.E.2d 476 (1994).

No legislative intent to withdraw sovereign immunity. — The 1991 constitutional amendment, when viewed in light of the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 51-21-20 et seq., that was passed under its authority, does not evidence any intent by the legislature to withdraw the waiver of sovereign immunity, rather, the apparent intent of the amendment and the Tort Claims Act enacted under its authority is to redraw and redefine the terms of the state's waiver of sovereign immunity. Curtis v. Board of Regents of the Univ. Sys., 262 Ga. 226, 416 S.E.2d 510 (1992).

Trial court did not err in dismissing the spouse's wrongful death claim against the county based on sovereign immunity because O.C.G.A. § 46-5-131(a) did not strictly meet the criteria for statutory waiver of sovereign immunity. Marshall v.

Application of Tort Claims Act (Cont'd)

McIntosh County, 327 Ga. App. 416, 759 S.E.2d 269 (2014).

Venue under the Tort Claims Act. — The enactment of O.C.G.A. § 50-21-28, the venue provision of the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., was a valid exercise of the General Assembly's authority pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX. Campbell v. Department of Cors., 268 Ga. 408, 490 S.E.2d 99 (1997).

Exclusion of counties and school districts. — Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, provided that counties and other political subdivisions of the State of Georgia were absolutely immune from suit for tort liability, unless that immunity was specifically waived pursuant to an Act of the General Assembly which specifically provided that sovereign immunity was waived and the extent of such waiver, and the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., provided for a limited waiver of the state's sovereign immunity for the torts of its officials and employees. However, the Act expressly excluded counties and school districts from the waiver, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-22(5); because plaintiff failed to identify any legislative Act that waived the immunity of defendant county or school district, the county defendants were immune from suit on plaintiff's state law claims. McDaniel v. Fulton County Sch. Dist., 233 F. Supp. 2d 1364 (N.D. Ga. 2002).

Highway design exception. — Decedent was killed when the taxi in which the decedent was riding spun out of control on a rain-slick interstate highway and hit a tree. Assuming arguendo that the Georgia Department of Transportation (DOT) was immune from a negligence suit under O.C.G.A. § 50-21-24 for a city employee's negligent inspection of the taxi's tires, expert testimony that the tree's proximity to the highway may have violated generally accepted engineering standards rendered the DOT liable under § 50-21-24(10), the design standards exception. Ga. DOT v. Heller, 285 Ga. 262, 674 S.E.2d 914 (2009).

Slip and fall on sidewalk. — Trial court did not err by dismissing a pedestrian's slip and fall claims against the Georgia Department of Transportation (GDOT) based on the bar of sovereign immunity because GDOT's specific decision to forego routine inspections, repairs, or maintenance of sidewalks within a state right-of-way as a result of prioritizing maintenance activities based on budgetary constraints fell under the discretionary function exception. Hagan v. Ga. DOT, 321 Ga. App. 472, 739 S.E.2d 123 (2013).

Actions motivated by intent or malice. — Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., provided immunity from liability for torts committed during a state employee's performance of official duties without regard to intent or malice. Therefore, despite evidence that two university officials' actions in locking a suspended professor out of the professor's office and laboratory were motivated by malice and ill-intent, the officials were entitled to immunity under the Act. Edmonds v. Bd. of Regents, 302 Ga. App. 1, 689 S.E.2d 352 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0824, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 437 (Ga. 2010).

DOC did not waive immunity by allowing counties to house state prisoners. — County that housed state inmates in the county's prison under O.C.G.A. § 42-5-53 functioned as an independent contractor for which the state did not waive sovereign immunity under the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., and the county employees who were allegedly negligent in their handling of an inmate did not fall within the GTCA's definition of state officer or employee, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-22(7); therefore, the State Department of Corrections was entitled to be dismissed from the inmate's suit based on sovereign immunity. Ga. Dep't of Corr. v. James, 312 Ga. App. 190, 718 S.E.2d 55 (2011), overruled by Rivera v. Washington, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 248 (Ga. 2016).

Officials and Their Functions

Action against officer or agent of state not permitted. — No citizen and taxpayer, as such, has the right to initiate in the citizen's own behalf, without the consent of the state, an action against a state officer in the officer's official capacity, to enjoin and restrain the officer from acting under a statute which is alleged to be unconstitutional and void; such an action being in effect an action against the state itself. Ramsey v. Hamilton, 181 Ga. 365, 182 S.E. 392 (1935).

Any action against an officer or agent of the state, in the officer's or agent's official capacity, in which a judgment can be rendered controlling the action or property of the state in a manner not prescribed by statute, is an action against the state and cannot be maintained without its consent. Hennessy v. Webb, 245 Ga. 329, 264 S.E.2d 878 (1980).

Agent of state cannot be made party to action. — The state cannot be made a party defendant in an action in any court, except by consent of the proper authorities; nor can this be done so as to affect the rights of the state by making the agent of the state, appointed by its authorities, a party; and any judgment against such agent cannot affect the rights of the state, or affect its position. Ramsey v. Hamilton, 181 Ga. 365, 182 S.E. 392 (1935).

Based on O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61, an arrestee's excessive force claim against a sheriff's major in the major's individual capacity was revived after a voluntary dismissal but assuming that the complaint alleged actual malice under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d), as to the major's conduct, the tort claim had to be brought against the state under O.C.G.A. § 50-21-25(b); however, the state did not waive the state's sovereign immunity under O.C.G.A. § 50-21-23(b) for such claim to be brought in federal court. Jude v. Morrison, 534 F. Supp. 2d 1365 (N.D. Ga. 2008).

Scope of immunity granted public official. — In Georgia, the distinction between a ministerial and a discretionary act, and therefore the scope of the immunity granted a public official in any given situation, turns upon the specific character of the complained-of act, not the more general nature of the job. Miree v. United States, 490 F. Supp. 768 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

The term "official functions," as used in subsection (d) of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, means any act performed within a public officer's or employee's scope of authority, including both ministerial and discretionary acts. No immunity is provided for ministerial acts negligently performed or for ministerial or discretionary acts performed with malice or an intent to injure; however, consistent with prior law, immunity is provided for the negligent performance of discretionary acts. Gilbert v. Richardson, 264 Ga. 744, 452 S.E.2d 476 (1994).

Pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d), a police officer's fingerprinting of a plaintiff, in a way that caused the plaintiff's body to be pulled against the officer's body, was sufficient to support a state law assault and battery claim; officer's motion for summary judgment on grounds of official immunity was properly denied. Hicks v. Moore, 422 F.3d 1246 (11th Cir. 2005).

The term "actual malice" as it is used in the context of official immunity requires a deliberate intention to do wrong and excludes any liability for injuries or damages if officers and employees act with implied malice in the performance of their official functions. Morrow v. Hawkins, 266 Ga. 390, 467 S.E.2d 336 (1996). But see Parker v. State, 270 Ga. 256, 507 S.E.2d 744 (1998), overruled on other grounds, 287 Ga. 881, 700 S.E.2d 394 (2010).

"Ill will" is itself not enough to establish actual malice; rather, ill will must also be combined with the intent to do something wrongful or illegal. Adams v. Hazelwood, 271 Ga. 414, 520 S.E.2d 896 (1999).

Acting with implied malice will not deny a defendant an official immunity defense. Coffey v. Brooks County, 231 Ga. App. 886, 500 S.E.2d 341 (1998).

Actual malice of officer. — In an action against a police officer for injuries sustained in a collision with a patrol car, summary judgment for the officer was proper because the officer was exercising the officer's discretion in deciding to pursue a suspected stolen car and, therefore, was liable only if the officer acted "with actual malice or with actual intent to cause injury." Williams v. Solomon, 242 Ga. App. 807, 531 S.E.2d 734 (2000).

Actual malice of officer not shown. — Because the plaintiff did not establish that the sheriff's deputies possessed "a deliberate intention to do wrong" sufficient to satisfy the actual malice standard to fit the exception to the deputies' official immunity from liability, the plaintiff's tort claims were properly dismissed on summary judgment; contrary to the plaintiff's assertion, actual malice could not be inferred from the facts of the warrantless arrest. Bashir v. Rockdale County, 445 F.3d 1323 (11th Cir. 2006).

Officials and Their Functions (Cont'd)

Violation of police manual did not make decision ministerial act. — Georgia Court of Appeals properly held that a county police officer was entitled to summary judgment on the officer's claim of official immunity as the officer's violations of a county police manual did not change the officer's discretionary decision to engage in a high-speed chase into a ministerial act; the bumping of a fleeing suspect's car did not constitute a deliberate intention to do wrong so as to satisfy the actual malice requirement of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d) since: (1) in a prior case, an officer did not act with a deliberate intent to do wrong in violating a state law; (2) although the officer bumped the fleeing vehicle during a high-speed chase on the interstate system of a major city, which might be considered reckless, actual malice required more than reckless conduct; and (3) the officer did not intend to physically harm the suspect or any bystander. Phillips v. Hanse, 281 Ga. 133, 637 S.E.2d 11 (2006).

Suit in official capacity. — Plaintiff's state-law tort claims against a police chief, two police officers, and a county were barred by the doctrine of sovereign immunity, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e), since the individual defendants were sued in their official capacities, and there was no statutory waiver of immunity as required by O.C.G.A. § 36-1-4. Payne v. Dekalb County, 414 F. Supp. 2d 1158 (N.D. Ga. 2004).

Immunity if acts done within scope of authority and without wilfulness, fraud, malice, or corruption. — Under sovereign immunity principles, a public officer or employee acting within the scope of the employee's authority and engaged in discretionary as opposed to ministerial functions is entitled to immunity from suit, provided the acts complained of are done within the scope of the officer's authority and without wilfulness, fraud, malice, or corruption. Hendon v. DeKalb County, 203 Ga. App. 750, 417 S.E.2d 705, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 417 S.E.2d 705 (1992); Teston v. Collins, 217 Ga. App. 829, 459 S.E.2d 452 (1995).

Since at the time the sheriff terminated certain deputies, a county sheriff believed with some justification that the sheriff had the authority to hire and fire deputies, and there was no evidence that the sheriff acted with malice or intent to injure the deputies when the sheriff refused to rehire them, the sheriff was entitled to official immunity from their claims for tortiously interfering with employment contracts. Aspinwall v. Herrin, 879 F. Supp. 1227 (S.D. Ga. 1994).

An officer who, in the performance of the officer's official duties, shoots another in self-defense is shielded from tort liability by the doctrine of official immunity. Kidd v. Coates, 271 Ga. 33, 518 S.E.2d 124 (1999).

Although a county police officer's actions in seeking arrest warrants may have been misguided, because there was no evidence that the actions were taken with actual malice, the officer was protected by official immunity as a police officer, and the officer's motion for summary judgment was properly granted. Todd v. Kelly, 244 Ga. App. 404, 535 S.E.2d 540 (2000).

Without proof by the administrator of the decedent inmate's estate that any actions undertaken by the county officers and employees sued for wrongful death amounted to wilfulness, malice, or corruption, they were entitled to official immunity as a matter of law; further, any failure to adopt other or additional requirements as to their policies of supervision and training in dealing with a suicidal inmate did not amount to wilfulness, malice, or corruption. Middlebrooks v. Bibb County, 261 Ga. App. 382, 582 S.E.2d 539 (2003).

Off duty officer had authority to arrest for crimes committed in the officer's presence, and this authority extended outside of the officer's jurisdiction; because the officer's belief that the arrestee was driving drunk was reasonable, the arrest was justifiable, and since the arrestee failed to show that the officer acted with actual malice or intent to injure, the officer was entitled to official immunity in a suit brought by the arrestee. Delong v. Domenici, 271 Ga. App. 757, 610 S.E.2d 695 (2005).

Officer was performing a discretionary act when the officer concluded that a person was driving recklessly and under the influence in a fatal traffic accident; since there was no evidence that the officer acted with actual malice, summary judgment in favor of the officer and a county in a suit brought by the person against the officer and the county, based on the filing of criminal charges which were later dropped, was proper. Tant v. Purdue, 278 Ga. App. 666, 629 S.E.2d 551 (2006).

Because two police officers were performing an official discretionary function when they arrested a former arrestee, and the former arrestee failed to show that the officers acted with the intent to do something wrong or illegal, both officers were entitled to official immunity pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d). Carroll v. Henry County, 336 B.R. 578 (N.D. Ga. 2006).

Deputy did not show entitlement to official immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d) as to the claims of false arrest and malicious prosecution because plaintiff offered evidence tending to show that the deputy violated Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXIII and O.C.G.A. § 51-7-20; thus, there were material fact issues precluding summary judgment. Jordan v. Mosley, 487 F.3d 1350 (11th Cir. 2007).

City officials were entitled to summary judgment to the extent developers asserted claims against them in their personal capacities because the evidence was insufficient to create a jury issue on whether they acted with actual malice as required for official immunity pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d) where the developers pointed to no specific evidence in the record to support the characterization of the officials' actions. Wendelken v. JENK LLC, 291 Ga. App. 30, 661 S.E.2d 152 (2008).

In an action alleging, inter alia, assault and false arrest, three police officers were entitled to official immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d) because the officers' conduct in arresting plaintiff arrestee for disorderly conduct was based on a discretionary act and was not shown to be based on actual malice; the arrestee had used expletives in telling the officers to leave the arrestee's home after the officers executed an arrest warrant for the arrestee's fiancé, and there were children who heard the offensive language outside the arrestee's home. Selvy v. Morrison, 292 Ga. App. 702, 665 S.E.2d 401 (2008).

Public official protected from liability in performance of discretionary duties. — A discretionary act is generally characterized as one which is the result of personal discretion or judgment. A ministerial act, on the other hand, requires merely the execution of a specific duty arising from fixed or designated facts. A public official is protected from liability in the performance of discretionary duties, whereas ministerial acts are committed at the official's own risk. Miree v. United States, 490 F. Supp. 768 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

The court found that the plaintiff was entitled to official immunity as to the student's state law claims because the facts of this case may demonstrate that the assistant principal acted with gross indifference or reckless disregard of the student's rights in the strip search of the student but did not amount to "actual malice" as interpreted by the Georgia Supreme Court. D.H. v. Clayton County Sch. Dist., 52 F. Supp. 3d 1261 (N.D. Ga. 2014).

Immunity of school officials conducting strip search. — School officials lacked reasonable individualized suspicion to strip search a middle school student in the search for drugs; thus, the official was not entitled to qualified immunity since the strip search was not reasonable at its inception. D.H. v. Clayton County Sch. Dist., 52 F. Supp. 3d 1261 (N.D. Ga. 2014).

Discretionary duties found. — In a personal injury action against a county, sheriff, and deputy sheriff, arising from an automobile collision which occurred when the deputy was on an emergency call, since the deputy was performing an official discretionary function, the deputy was immune from personal liability under the 1991 amendment of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX. Gilbert v. Richardson, 264 Ga. 744, 452 S.E.2d 476 (1994); Tkacik v. Chriss, 247 Ga. App. 86, 543 S.E.2d 392 (2000).

Officials and Their Functions (Cont'd)

Police officer's decision to pursue a car in response to reports that it had eluded police and under a reasonable perception that it could be stolen was discretionary. Morgan v. Barnes, 221 Ga. App. 653, 472 S.E.2d 480 (1996).

School officials' actions in monitoring activities associated with a school sponsored carnival were discretionary rather than ministerial. Larkins v. Cobb County Sch. Dist., 225 Ga. App. 387, 484 S.E.2d 10 (1997).

Detective who sought an arrest warrant against an arrestee for simple battery was properly granted summary judgment in the arrestee's subsequent lawsuit for, inter alia, false arrest, because, pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d), the detective, as a county employee, was immune from liability since the decision to seek an arrest warrant was a discretionary act and there was no evidence that the detective acted with actual malice, even if the arrestee was correct that the detective could have performed a better and more thorough investigation before seeking an arrest warrant. Anderson v. Cobb, 258 Ga. App. 159, 573 S.E.2d 417 (2002).

As a student's personal injury damages claims against three school employees were based on the employees negligent failure to supervise the student when the student was with a non-party, and that such failure allegedly led to the student being molested by the third-party, the supervisory decisions made were discretionary acts requiring personal deliberation and judgment; hence, any reliance on O.C.G.A. § 19-7-5 did not provide a basis for civil liability against the employees for a negligent breach of a ministerial duty, and the student's claims were barred by the doctrine of official immunity as a matter of law. Reece v. Turner, 284 Ga. App. 282, 643 S.E.2d 814 (2007).

Officers, who shot and killed a fleeing suspected felon armed with a knife, were entitled to official immunity because it was a discretionary act, during pursuit a bystander twice identified the suspect, and the suspect slashed a knife at one officer, posing an immediate threat of physical violence. Williams v. Boehrer, No. 12-14534, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 18742 (11th Cir. Sept. 10, 2013) (Unpublished).

In an arrest for driving under the influence, the arrestee's false imprisonment claim failed because the officer was entitled to official immunity since the officer was performing a discretionary act when the officer arrested the arrestee; the arrestee's general allegations of malice did not overcome official immunity. Bannister v. Conway, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 152569 (N.D. Ga. Oct. 23, 2013).

When a police dog attacked the plaintiff's son, the officer's motion for summary judgment on the ground of official immunity was improperly denied because the officer, who was a dog handler for the police department, did not act with malice or an intent to injure anyone when the officer failed to secure the police dog outside the officer's home; and the duties that the officer was alleged to have violated were not ministerial ones because, although the duties reflected in the statute regarding the restraint of vicious or dangerous animals and a county ordinance might be definite, they required an exercise of personal deliberation and judgment about what was reasonable regarding the restraint of the police dog. Eshleman v. Key, 297 Ga. 364, 774 S.E.2d 96 (2015), overruled on other grounds, Rivera v. Washington, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 248 (Ga. 2016).

Discretionary act calls for the exercise of personal deliberation and judgment, which in turn entails examining the facts, reaching reasoned conclusions, and acting on them in a way not specifically directed. Miree v. United States, 490 F. Supp. 768 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

The decision to permit a patient to leave a mental hospital for home visitation is indisputably a discretionary act and is precisely the type of governmental decision that discretionary immunity was designed to protect from tort litigation by after-the-fact review. Swofford v. Cooper, 184 Ga. App. 50, 360 S.E.2d 624, aff'd, 258 Ga. 143, 368 S.E.2d 518 (1987).

Contention that a stop sign at a county road had become obscured by tree limbs and that procedures established by county employees for removing such obstructions were inadequate, alleged negligence in the performance of a discretionary act, and the trial court properly granted summary judgment in favor of the employees. Woodard v. Laurens County, 265 Ga. 404, 456 S.E.2d 581 (1995).

Probation officer was immune from liability for actions of a probationer because the officer's supervision of the probationer was a discretionary act. Georgia Dep't of Cors. v. Lamaine, 233 Ga. App. 271, 502 S.E.2d 766 (1998).

The school principal's task of making decisions requiring the means used to supervise school children and the teacher's task to monitor, supervise, and control students are both discretionary actions protected by the doctrine of official immunity. Kelly v. Lewis, 221 Ga. App. 506, 471 S.E.2d 583 (1996); Payne v. Twiggs County Sch. Dist., 232 Ga. App. 175, 501 S.E.2d 550 (1998).

The general task imposed on a school principal to monitor, supervise, and control the movement of students during a change in classes is a discretionary action protected by official immunity. Crisp County Sch. Dist. v. Pheil, 231 Ga. App. 139, 498 S.E.2d 134 (1998).

The supervision of a prisoner work detail is a discretionary function by virtue of which the supervisor is entitled to official immunity. Parrish v. State, 270 Ga. 878, 514 S.E.2d 834 (1999), reversing Simmons v. Coweta County, 229 Ga. App. 550, 494 S.E.2d 362 (1997).

Operation of a police department, including the degree of training and supervision to be provided its officers, is a discretionary governmental function of the municipality as opposed to a ministerial, proprietary, or administratively routine function. Carter v. Glenn, 249 Ga. App. 414, 548 S.E.2d 110 (2001).

Sheriff's deputies and the police officers were entitled to official immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d), as their failure to provide cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) to the son of the parents was discretionary, and no malice was shown; the Georgia Peace Officer Standards and Training Act, O.C.G.A. § 35-8-1 et seq., and the departments for which the officers and deputies worked did not require them to maintain CPR certification or to carry CPR equipment and they were not certified to perform CPR, and, even if the deputies and officers moved people away who were trying to help the son, this did not show malice, as they were concerned the persons might harm the son. Daley v. Clark, 282 Ga. App. 235, 638 S.E.2d 376 (2006).

Discretionary act found. — Deputy was entitled to immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX after the deputy collided with a third party while pursuing a suspect; although the deputy was not responding to a bona fide emergency and another deputy was in position to intercept the suspect, the guidelines governing the deputy called for termination of pursuit "by decision of pursuing officer." Morgan v. Causey, 910 F. Supp. 651 (M.D. Ga. 1996).

Teacher's grasping student's face to get the student's attention fell within the teacher's discretionary tasks of monitoring, supervising and controlling students in the teacher's class, and no liability could attach to the teacher's actions unless the teacher acted with actual malice. Daniels v. Gordon, 232 Ga. App. 811, 503 S.E.2d 72 (1998).

Police officers' conduct, arresting and subduing a fleeing suspect, clearly constituted a discretionary act. Therefore, unless plaintiff could show that the officers acted with actual malice or with the intent to injure the suspect, the officers were immune from liability. Garrett v. Unified Gov't of Athens-Clarke County, 246 F. Supp. 2d 1262 (M.D. Ga. 2003).

Because a mayor's failure to execute a contract was an act of discretion, and an association and a taxpayer did not assert that the mayor acted with actual malice or actual intent to cause injury or that any damages flowed to the city from that failure, pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d), the complaint was properly dismissed. Common Cause/Ga. v. City of Atlanta, 279 Ga. 480, 614 S.E.2d 761 (2005).

Officials and Their Functions (Cont'd)

Ministerial act is commonly one that is simple, absolute, and definite, arising under conditions admitted or proved to exist, and requiring merely the execution of a specific duty. Miree v. United States, 490 F. Supp. 768 (N.D. Ga. 1980).

Negligent performance of ministerial duty. — Removal of a tree which fell across a road was a ministerial duty of a county road superintendent, not a discretionary one; thus, a suit against the superintendent based on the superintendent's failure to act to remove a fallen tree was not barred by official immunity. Lincoln County v. Edmond, 231 Ga. App. 871, 501 S.E.2d 38 (1998).

In a wrongful death and nuisance suit wherein the victim was killed while traveling in a taxicab on a state highway, and the taxicab had passed a mandatory city inspection the day prior, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the city inspector on the basis of official immunity as the inspector's act of inspecting the tires on the taxicab was a ministerial function since the inspector was required to check for minimum tread depth and complete the inspection checklist before passing the vehicle as safe, which were simple, absolute, and definite tasks of a ministerial nature. As a result, the inspector was not entitled to official immunity and it was for the jury to determine if the inspector performed the tasks negligently. Heller v. City of Atlanta, 290 Ga. App. 345, 659 S.E.2d 617 (2008), aff'd, Ga. DOT v. Heller, 285 Ga. 262, 674 S.E.2d 914 (2009).

Decedent was killed when the taxi in which the decedent was riding spun out of control on a rain-slick road and hit a tree. The city employee who cleared the taxi for use on the roads was not shielded from liability by the doctrine of official immunity because: (1) inspection of tires was a ministerial act; (2) the employee did nothing to verify whether the taxi's badly worn tires had the legally required minimum amount of $\frac{3}{32}$ inch of tread on them under O.C.G.A. § 40-8-74(e)(1); and (3) the employee had no "discretion" to ignore this minimum legal requirement. Ga. DOT v. Heller, 285 Ga. 262, 674 S.E.2d 914 (2009).

In a parent's wrongful death action, a trial court erred in granting a county road superintendent summary judgment on the ground that the superintendent was entitled to official immunity because the superintendent conceded that the superintendent had actual knowledge of water pouring across a road one hour before a decedent's fatal accident, and the superintendent's knowledge of the hazardous condition on the road gave rise to a ministerial duty to take remedial action; the superintendent had discretion in the manner in which the superintendent took remedial action, but the notice the superintendent received of the dangerous condition on the road triggered a ministerial duty to act, and whether the superintendent breached such a duty was an issue for a jury to decide. Barnard v. Turner County, 306 Ga. App. 235, 701 S.E.2d 859 (2010).

Ministerial duty created by traffic policy. — While the act of a county traffic department that established a policy for handling complaints about safety or traffic conditions in the first place was discretionary, the acts of following the established policy of writing up the complaint and investigating it were ministerial. Wanless v. Tatum, 244 Ga. App. 882, 536 S.E.2d 308 (2000).

Ministerial duty not created by criminal statute. — Hazing statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-61, did not transform the discretionary policing functions of school officials into a ministerial duty to enforce that law. Caldwell v. Griffin Spalding County Bd. of Educ., 232 Ga. App. 892, 503 S.E.2d 43 (1998).

Ministerial duty created by Family Violence Act. — Officers' duty to investigate a report of family violence pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-4-20.1(c) was ministerial, and, accordingly, official immunity did not apply, as such immunity was only applicable to performance of discretionary functions, unless those functions were undertaken with malice or intent to cause injury pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d). Meagher v. Quick, 264 Ga. App. 639, 594 S.E.2d 182 (2003).

Tax commissioner immune to action for damages for failure to give notice. — Property owner's claim for damages based on a county tax commissioner's failure to properly send notices required by O.C.G.A. §§ 9-13-13, 48-3-3, 48-3-9(a), and 48-4-1, was barred by sovereign immunity; O.C.G.A. §§ 15-13-2 and 48-5-137 did not render the tax commissioner liable as an ex-officio sheriff because the notices did not constitute a "false return" or legal neglect to make a "proper return". Raw Properties, Inc. v. Lawson, 335 Ga. App. 802, 783 S.E.2d 161 (2016).

Failure of sheriff to perform ministerial duty did not cause death. — Grant of summary judgment in favor of the sheriff in a wrongful-death action brought by the decedent's spouse was appropriate under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(c) because the majority of the acts complained of were discretionary. To the extent that certain acts were ministerial, the sheriff's alleged failure to perform those acts did not cause the decedent's death. Butler v. Carlisle, 299 Ga. App. 815, 683 S.E.2d 882 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0052, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 155 (Ga. 2010).

County sheriff office employees liability for suicide. — In a wrongful death action arising from the suicide death of an inmate, the trial court erred by granting summary judgment in favor of one of three county sheriff office employees based on official immunity because there was conflicting evidence about whether the one employee was notified of the suicide watch order, triggering the duties created by policies applicable to that employee. Hill v. Jackson, No. A15A1778, 2016 Ga. App. LEXIS 187 (Mar. 24, 2016).

Jury question existed as to whether police patrol was ministerial or discretionary act. — In a wrongful death suit brought after a patrol car driven by a sheriff's deputy struck and killed the decedent, there was a jury issue as to whether the deputy's patrol of the area was a ministerial or discretionary act. Nichols v. Prather, 286 Ga. App. 889, 650 S.E.2d 380 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 766 (Ga. 2007).

Liability of governmental entity under doctrine of respondeat superior. — The official immunity of a public employee does not protect a governmental entity from liability under the doctrine of respondeat superior. Thus, a county may be liable for a county employee's negligence in performing an official function to the extent the county has waived sovereign immunity. Gilbert v. Richardson, 264 Ga. 744, 452 S.E.2d 476 (1994).

In a personal injury action against a county, sheriff, and deputy sheriff, arising from an automobile collision which occurred when the deputy was on an emergency call, even though the deputy was performing an official discretionary function and was immune from personal liability, the sheriff could not claim the benefit of the deputy's official immunity defense, but the deputy was entitled to the benefit of the county's sovereign immunity defense, except to the extent of liability insurance purchased by the county. Gilbert v. Richardson, 264 Ga. 744, 452 S.E.2d 476 (1994).

Sovereign immunity bars injunctive relief against the state at common law. — Sovereign immunity bars injunctive relief against the state at common law, and therefore, IBM Corp. v. Evans, 265 Ga. 215 (453 S.E.2d 706) (1995) is overruled by the Georgia Supreme Court. Ga. Dep't of Natural Res. v. Ctr. for a Sustainable Coast, Inc., 294 Ga. 593, 755 S.E.2d 184 (2014).

Georgia Supreme Court finds IBM Corp. v. Evans, 265 Ga. 215 (453 S.E.2d 706) (1995) unsound because: (1) the clear language of the Georgia Constitution authorizes only the Georgia General Assembly to waive sovereign immunity; (2) the Constitution does not provide for an exception; (3) the Court mischaracterizes a waiver; and (4) cases the Court relies on either predated the incorporation of sovereign immunity into the Georgia Constitution or ignored the impact thereof. Ga. Dep't of Natural Res. v. Ctr. for a Sustainable Coast, Inc., 294 Ga. 593, 755 S.E.2d 184 (2014).

Injunctive relief against state or official acting outside scope of lawful authority. — An action by a company against a state department and the commissioner thereof, in the commissioner's official capacity, to enjoin the department from awarding a contract to a competitor of the company or to have the department re-bid the contract was not barred by sovereign immunity. IBM Corp. v. Georgia Dep't of Admin. Servs., 265 Ga. 215, 453 S.E.2d 706 (1995).

Officials and Their Functions (Cont'd)

Failure to name responsible personnel. — Parents of deceased mental health facility patient not only had the burden of establishing that the Department of Human Resources (DHR) waived sovereign immunity by obtaining liability insurance protection, but their failure to name the department personnel allegedly responsible for the negligence within the applicable limitations periods warranted summary judgment in favor of DHR. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources v. Poss, 263 Ga. 347, 434 S.E.2d 488 (1993).

Sheriff's responsibility for rape by deputy. — Arrestee's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 suit against a county sheriff, alleging that she was raped by a deputy at the county jail, failed as a matter of law because the sheriff was entitled to official immunity for the state law claims brought against the sheriff in the sheriff's individual capacity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d); hiring and supervision of employees was a discretionary governmental function of the county as opposed to a ministerial, proprietary, or administratively routine function. Boyd v. Nichols, 616 F. Supp. 2d 1331 (M.D. Ga. 2009).

In a suit based on the actions of a deputy sheriff at a courthouse security checkpoint, official immunity barred the plaintiff attorney's battery claim under the Georgia Constitution because the summary judgment evidence did not show actual malice or intent to cause injury. West v. Davis, 767 F.3d 1063 (11th Cir. 2014).

Officer not entitled to summary judgment on official immunity. — In a suit involving an arrest, an officer was not entitled to summary judgment based on official immunity as to the arrestee's state law claims because the officer's statements, the officer's justifications for the arrest, and the orientation of the parties just before the arrest could support a jury's reasonable inference that the officer deliberately intended to wrongfully arrest or commit battery against the arrestee.

Turner v. Jones, No. 209-013, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 119437 (S.D. Ga. Oct. 17, 2011).

Officer entitled to immunity for arrest. — In a driver's action for false imprisonment, the officer was entitled to official immunity because the act of arresting the driver was discretionary and the driver could not overcome the officer's immunity defense by showing that the officer acted with malice or an intent to injure. Watkins v. Latif, 323 Ga. App. 306, 744 S.E.2d 860 (2013).

Officer entitled to immunity for trespass. — Nothing in the record suggested that the deputies acted with actual malice since the deputies consistently stated that the deputies entered the trailer due to exigent circumstances, a burglary, and their assessment was not baseless; the residents did not raise a genuine dispute of material fact about the presence of actual malice, and the deputies were entitled to official immunity as a matter of law. Black v. Wigington, 811 F.3d 1259 (11th Cir. 2016).

Physicians employed by state medical college. — Two physicians were entitled to official immunity in a medical malpractice suit brought against the physicians by the parents of a newborn infant injured by the medical team's failure to ensure the child was adequately oxygenated during intubation because the physicians were acting within the scope of the physicians' state employment at the Medical College of Georgia in rendering the medical care at issue. However, the effect of recognizing official immunity does not necessarily leave the injured plaintiff without recourse as, while official immunity relieves the state employee of personal liability, the injured plaintiff may still seek relief against the state government entity for which the state officer or employee was acting, pursuant to the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., specifically O.C.G.A. §§ 50-21-23 and 50-21-25(b). Shekhawat v. Jones, 293 Ga. 468, 746 S.E.2d 89 (2013).

Georgia Supreme Court overrules Keenan v. Plouffe, 267 Ga. 791, 482 S.E.2d 253 (1997) and holds that the analysis of a physician's official immunity under the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., shall proceed exclusively on the basis of whether the physician was acting within the scope of the physician's state employment in performing the treatment that is the subject of the malpractice action. Shekhawat v. Jones, 293 Ga. 468, 746 S.E.2d 89 (2013).

Application

State authority is not state or state agency. — A state authority is not the state, nor a part of the state, nor an agency of the state; it is a mere creature of the state, having distinct corporate entity. Cox Enters., Inc. v. Carroll City/County Hosp. Auth., 247 Ga. 39, 273 S.E.2d 841 (1981).

Whether immunity barred personal injury suit had to be determined. — Appellate court erred by affirming the grant of the individual defendants' motion to dismiss in a personal injury suit involving a pedestrian falling at a high school because whether official immunity barred the action was a fact-specific inquiry that had not been definitively answered since limited discovery had been undertaken. Austin v. Clark, 294 Ga. 773, 755 S.E.2d 796 (2014).

Immunity extends to counties. — The state is immune to suit for any cause of action unless that immunity is expressly waived by constitutional provision or legislative enactment. That immunity extends to counties, as subdivisions of the state. James v. Richmond County Health Dep't, 168 Ga. App. 416, 309 S.E.2d 411 (1983).

In a negligence action against a county, the county's motion for summary judgment was granted on the basis of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. II, Para. IX (sovereign immunity) and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX (waiver of sovereign immunity to the extent of liability insurance coverage) not applying to counties. Bliss v. Cobb County, 599 F. Supp. 233 (N.D. Ga. 1984) (decided prior to 1990 amendment).

Under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, sovereign immunity is extended to the counties of the State of Georgia. Toombs County v. O'Neal, 254 Ga. 390, 330 S.E.2d 95 (1985); DOT v. Land, 181

Ga. App. 94, 351 S.E.2d 470 (1986), rev'd on other grounds, 257 Ga. 657, 362 S.E.2d 372 (1987).

The provisions of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX apply to counties. Curtis v. Cobb County, 254 Ga. 673, 333 S.E.2d 595 (1985).

The Constitution of Georgia extends sovereign immunity to counties and their instrumentalities as well. Culberson v. Fulton-DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 201 Ga. App. 347, 411 S.E.2d 75, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 905, 411 S.E.2d 75 (1991).

The 1991 amendment's extension of sovereign immunity to the state and its departments and agencies also applies to counties. Gilbert v. Richardson, 264 Ga. 744, 452 S.E.2d 476 (1994).

A county is not liable for nuisance claims arising from personal injuries or wrongful death. Coffey v. Brooks County, 231 Ga. App. 886, 500 S.E.2d 341 (1998).

Sovereign immunity applies to counties and protects county employees who are sued in their official capacities. Banks v. Happoldt, 271 Ga. App. 146, 608 S.E.2d 741 (2004).

Because a county enjoyed sovereign immunity from a pedestrian's negligence and nuisance claims asserted in a personal injury action against the county for its alleged failure to maintain a water meter cover, the trial court properly dismissed the claims. Rutherford v. DeKalb County, 287 Ga. App. 366, 651 S.E.2d 771 (2007).

Sheriff's deputy chased a parent who was carrying a baby; the two struggled for the deputy's gun, which discharged, killing the baby. As there was no evidence that the county waived the county's sovereign immunity, the sheriff's department was entitled to summary judgment on an estate's respondeat superior claim. Russell v. Barrett, 296 Ga. App. 114, 673 S.E.2d 623 (2009).

County board of elections (BOE) and board members were entitled to sovereign immunity on a candidate's claims that they violated the candidate's rights under the Georgia Constitution and that they conspired to commit fraud against the candidate by attempting to have the candidate's name removed from the ballot in an election for county commissioner; the candidate cited no act of the General Assembly that would permit recovery on the state law claims against the county, the BOE, or the board members in their official capacities. Johnson v. Randolph County, 301 Ga. App. 265, 687 S.E.2d 223 (2009).

Application (Cont'd)

Trial court correctly ruled that sovereign immunity barred a parent's wrongful claim against a county because the county did not waive the county's sovereign immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e); the bar of sovereign immunity neither results in a deprivation of property without just compensation nor constitutes a denial of equal protection or due process under the federal or state constitutions. Barnard v. Turner County, 306 Ga. App. 235, 701 S.E.2d 859 (2010).

Sovereign immunity barred the claimants' personal injury and nuisance claims against the members of a county board of commissioners in the commissioners' official capacities because the claimants did not show that the county waived the county's sovereign immunity with regard to the county's operation of a mosquito control helicopter which sprayed one of the claimants with chemicals. Bd. of Comm'rs v. Johnson, 311 Ga. App. 867, 717 S.E.2d 272 (2011).

City manager had official immunity. — City manager had official immunity in a defamation case under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d) and O.C.G.A. § 36-33-4 since: (1) the city finance director did not show that a statement the city manager made to the media regarding the city manager's concerns in the city finance director's department was outside the scope of the city manager's authority; (2) the city manager did not disclose anything to the city finance director's prospective employer that the prospective employer did not obtain through a Georgia Open Records Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-18-70 et seq., request; and (3) there was no policy that prohibited the city manager from verbally responding in conjunction with the city manager's Open Records Act response. Smith v. Lott, 317 Ga. App. 37, 730 S.E.2d 663 (2012).

Municipalities. — Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, which prior to the 1991 amendment waived immunity to the extent of insurance, applied to municipalities. Hiers v. City of Barwick, 262 Ga. 129, 414 S.E.2d 647 (1992).

Municipalities do not come within the ambit of the 1991 amendment of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX. City of Thomaston v. Bridges, 264 Ga. 4, 439 S.E.2d 906 (1994).

Sovereign immunity applied to city.

— In an action arising out of an arrest, despite the way the arrestee was treated, the trial court properly dismissed a complaint against a county, and granted summary judgment on the same complaint against a city, on sovereign immunity grounds and due to a failure by the arrestee to show that the immunity had been waived. Scott v. City of Valdosta, 280 Ga. App. 481, 634 S.E.2d 472 (2006).

When officers arrested a decedent who died shortly after the arrest, a city which employed one of the officers could not be held liable because: (1) the city was immune from claims involving police work unless the city waived that immunity; and (2) it was not shown that the city waived immunity. Hoyt v. Bacon County, No. 509-026, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 7330 (S.D. Ga. Jan. 26, 2011).

Quantum meruit unavailable against county and officials.

— Former employee, seeking employment compensation against a board of education, a school system, a principal, and a Superintendent, made no allegations of negligence, malice, or intent with respect to the claims for quantum meruit, and a trial court properly entered summary judgment dismissing those claims. Harden v. Clarke County Bd. of Educ., 279 Ga. App. 513, 631 S.E.2d 741 (2006).

Waiver and damages for invalid state regulation.

— There is no express constitutional right to recover damages against the state based upon the invalidity or unconstitutionality of the rules and regulations promulgated and implemented by its departments and agencies. Accordingly, unless and until there is a waiver of the doctrine of sovereign immunity as provided in Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, the judiciary is compelled to hold that the victims of such state rules and regulations have no viable state claim for damages and that they must be relegated to the express remedies which do exist, such as initiation of a declaratory judgment action pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 50-13-10. State Bd. of Educ. v. Drury, 263 Ga. 429, 437 S.E.2d 290 (1993).

No right to damages based upon invalidity of rules and regulations. — There is no express constitutional right to recover damages against the state based upon the invalidity or unconstitutionality of the rules and regulations promulgated and implemented by its departments and agencies. State Bd. of Educ. v. Drury, 263 Ga. 429, 437 S.E.2d 290 (1993).

County's failure to maintain road. — County officials were protected from liability with regard to a personal injury and wrongful death suit arising from an alleged failure of the county to maintain a road, because sovereign immunity protected the county officials from any liability with regard to an alleged failure to maintain, which was a discretionary function. Banks v. Happoldt, 271 Ga. App. 146, 608 S.E.2d 741 (2004).

No liability for defective bridges. — There is no language in O.C.G.A. § 32-4-41 specific enough to waive sovereign immunity and make a county liable for the county's defective bridges. Kordares v. Gwinnett County, 220 Ga. App. 848, 470 S.E.2d 479 (1996).

Department of Transportation employees. — Department of Transportation employees are immune from suit for negligence in federal court under the Eleventh Amendment since the state has waived its sovereign immunity and not the state's Eleventh Amendment immunity. Thorne v. Littlefield Constr. Co., (M.D. Ga. 1992).

County personnel issues. — Employee was not entitled to damages arising out of a violation of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65(b) in obtaining a temporary restraining order (TRO) against the employee as the county had sovereign immunity and the county manager and the county attorney had sovereign immunity in their official capacities; the county manager and the county attorney had official immunity in their individual capacities as obtaining the TRO was a discretionary action that they undertook to protect the public and workplace safety after they were advised of the employee's actions. Wallace v. Greene County, 274 Ga. App. 776, 618 S.E.2d 642 (2005).

No waiver of immunity in providing health insurance to state employee. — Public school teacher's putative class action against the state arising out of unilateral changes made by the Georgia Department of Community Health to the State Health Benefits Plan, resulting in increased copayments and no decrease in premiums, was barred by sovereign immunity; there was no signed, written contract between the parties, and an implied contract could not form the basis for a waiver of sovereign immunity. Ga. Dep't of Cmty. Health v. Neal, 334 Ga. App. 851, 780 S.E.2d 475 (2015).

Wrongful termination of state employee with contract. — In a claim for wrongful termination when a former state employee alleges the existence of a contract, state officials are not entitled as a matter of law to a judgment on the basis of sovereign immunity. Parrish v. State, 184 Ga. App. 195, 361 S.E.2d 57 (1987).

Paramedic employed by county was entitled to official immunity because of any negligence on the paramedic's part arising during the performance of the paramedic's official duties; the county's purchase of insurance did not affect immunity since the action was based on the paramedic's misdiagnosis or choice of treatment and did not "arise from the use of a motor vehicle." Harry v. Glynn County, 269 Ga. 503, 501 S.E.2d 196 (1998).

Driver of emergency response vehicles. — Under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d), the county emergency rescue vehicle driver was immune from liability after the driver was accused of negligently colliding with the decedent's vehicle, because the damages arose from the driver's discretionary action, the decision to rush to the scene of an accident. Anderson v. Barrow County, 256 Ga. App. 160, 568 S.E.2d 68 (2002).

In a tort action for personal injuries and property damage arising from an auto collision filed against a city and its police officer, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the officer, given that the officer was engaged in a discretionary function of responding to an emergency situation at the time the accident at issue occurred. Weaver v. City of Statesboro, 288 Ga. App. 32, 653 S.E.2d 765 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 221 (Ga. 2008).

Application (Cont'd)

Investigatory stops. — Sovereign immunity extended by the Georgia Constitution to the state and its departments and agencies also applied to Georgia counties, as well as the consolidated government of the City of Columbus and Muscogee County, the Muscogee County sheriff, and the sheriff's deputies; consequently, sovereign immunity barred the Georgia state law claims asserted against the consolidated government and the sheriff and deputies in their official capacities by a vehicle's occupants that the deputies subjected to an investigatory stop. Beulah v. Muscogee County Sheriff's Deputies, 447 F. Supp. 2d 1342 (M.D. Ga. 2006), vacated, in part, 2008 U.S. Dist LEXIS 11020 (M.D. Ga. 2008).

In an action in which the plaintiff landowners filed suit against the defendant county alleging trespass, negligence and negligence per se, and violation of the landowners' riparian rights, in connection with the county's recreational development of its adjoining property, the county was entitled to sovereign immunity because there was no showing by the landowners that the county had waived sovereign immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX and O.C.G.A. § 36-1-4. Carney v. Gordon County, No. 4:06-CV-36-RLV, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 82634 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 12, 2006).

Law enforcement not entitled to immunity when actual malice used in application of excessive force. — When a taser was used on an arrestee standing with hands in the air at least four feet off the ground in a tree, officers were not entitled to official immunity as to the arrestee's state law claims at the motion to dismiss stage because the complaint alleged actual malice under Georgia law. Harper v. Perkins, No. 11-14416, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 4064 (11th Cir. Feb. 29, 2012) (Unpublished).

Sheriff's department. — Sheriff's deputy chased a parent who was carrying a baby; the two struggled for the deputy's gun, which discharged, killing the baby. As the deputy's decision to pursue the parent was a discretionary act, and there was no evidence the deputy acted with malice or intent to injure, the deputy had qualified immunity from suit under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d); therefore, an estate's claim against the sheriff's department was properly dismissed. Russell v. Barrett, 296 Ga. App. 114, 673 S.E.2d 623 (2009).

Sheriff's deputy chased a parent who was carrying a baby; the two struggled for the deputy's gun, which discharged, killing the baby. As operation of the sheriff's department was a discretionary governmental function, and there was no evidence of malice, the sheriff and the department were entitled to sovereign immunity on an estate's claims of failing to instruct, train, and supervise. Russell v. Barrett, 296 Ga. App. 114, 673 S.E.2d 623 (2009).

Because there was no evidence that deputies acted with actual malice towards the decedent when they arrested and transferred the decedent to jail instead of the hospital, official immunity protected the sheriff and the deputies with respect to plaintiffs' state law claims. Mann v. Taser Int'l, Inc., 588 F.3d 1291 (11th Cir. 2009).

Sheriff's deputy entitled to qualified immunity. — A sheriff's deputy chased a parent who was carrying a baby; the two struggled for the deputy's gun, which discharged, killing the baby. As the deputy's decision to pursue the parent was a discretionary act, and there was no evidence the deputy acted with malice or intent to injure, the deputy had qualified immunity from suit under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d); therefore, an estate's negligence and assault and battery claims against the deputy were properly dismissed. Russell v. Barrett, 296 Ga. App. 114, 673 S.E.2d 623 (2009).

Record supported a district court's decision granting summary judgment in favor of sheriff's deputies in an action an arrestee filed under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 alleging, inter alia, that the deputies violated the arrestee's constitutional rights by procuring an arrest warrant without probable cause and using excessive force during an illegal arrest; the arrestee did not show that the officers who were sued violated clearly established law, and the officers had qualified immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX because the officers acted within the scope of the officers' authority. Smith v. Mercer, No. 13-13776, 2014 U.S. App. LEXIS 13597 (11th Cir. July 14, 2014) (Unpublished).

Immunity extends to school boards.

— The 1991 amendment extending sovereign immunity “to the state and all of its departments and agencies” includes school boards. Davis v. Dublin City Bd. of Educ., 219 Ga. App. 121, 464 S.E.2d 251 (1995).

In an action against a school board and school principal for injuries to a student who tripped and fell through a glass door at the school entrance, the board was entitled to sovereign immunity and the principal to official immunity for injuries sustained as a result of the negligent performance of discretionary official acts. Davis v. Dublin City Bd. of Educ., 219 Ga. App. 121, 464 S.E.2d 251 (1995).

The trial court properly granted summary judgment to a county school board and its superintendent in a parents negligence action arising out of an attack on school grounds that injured their child, as the board and the superintendent presented sufficient evidence that a school safety plan was in place at the elementary school at the time the child was attacked, entitling the board and the superintendent to official immunity barring the parents' negligence claims. Leake v. Murphy, 284 Ga. App. 490, 644 S.E.2d 328 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 671 (Ga. 2007).

County school district was immune from liability for a student's state tort claims arising out of the use of a Facebook photo of the student in a bikini in an internet security presentation pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e). Chaney v. Fayette County Pub. Sch. Dist., 977 F. Supp. 2d 1308 (N.D. Ga. 2013).

Immunity extends to Board of Regents. — Lower courts properly dismissed the foreign college students' declaratory judgment action seeking in-state tuition because the suit against the University System of Georgia's Board of Regents was barred by sovereign immunity and waiver did not apply. Olvera v. Univ. Sys. of Georgia's Bd. of Regents, 298 Ga. 425, 782 S.E.2d 436 (2016).

Immunity extends to county boards of education.

— For purposes of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, a county board of education is included within the definition of “the state and any of its departments and agencies.” Thigpen v. McDuffie County Bd. of Educ., 255 Ga. 59, 335 S.E.2d 112 (1985).

A county board of education, unlike the school district which it manages, is not a body corporate and does not have the capacity to sue or be sued. This rule was not changed by the 1983 adoption of this provision or its 1990 amendment. Cook v. Colquitt County Bd. of Educ., 261 Ga. 841, 412 S.E.2d 828 (1992).

When a former member of a parent-teacher student association asserted false arrest, defamation, and other claims, the claims against an education board and a superintendent in the superintendent's official capacity were properly dismissed because the member failed to show that the board waived sovereign immunity. Reeves v. Wilbanks, No. 12-16611, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 20204 (11th Cir. Oct. 3, 2013) (Unpublished).

School district's claim for disgorgement of funds against State Board of Education was disallowed, as it amounted to an action for money had and received or for unjust enrichment, and such actions are barred by sovereign immunity. Bulloch County Sch. Dist. v. Ga. Dep't of Educ., 324 Ga. App. 691, 751 S.E.2d 495 (2013).

Recreational Property Act did not waive official immunities.

— Although finding that official immunity shielded a county employee from liability for injuries suffered by a child when that child fell from a swing on county property that the employee previously inspected, and that sovereign immunity shielded the county, the trial court nonetheless erred in concluding that the Recreational Property Act, O.C.G.A. § 51-3-20 et seq., waived these immunities, as: (1) implied waivers of governmental immunity were not to be favored; (2) the employee was entitled to official or qualified immunity, which could not be waived; and (3) even assuming a partial waiver of sovereign and official immunity through enactment of the Act, no evidence was presented that the employee acted wilfully and the defect complained about by the child's mother was apparent to those using the property. Norton v. Cobb, 284 Ga. App. 303, 643 S.E.2d 803 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 634 (Ga. 2007).

Application (Cont'd)

Insurers Rehabilitation and Liquidation Act. — Provisions of the Insurers Rehabilitation and Liquidation Act, O.C.G.A. § 33-37-1 et seq., allowing the trial court to review and audit the state's conduct as receiver, did not waive the state's sovereign immunity with respect to amounts that were improperly charged to a liquidated insurer's estate, and the state was not required to repay such amounts. State of Ga. v. Sun States Ins. Group, Inc., 332 Ga. App. 197, 770 S.E.2d 43 (2015).

School districts. — Neither the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., nor any other act of the General Assembly, has waived the sovereign immunity of county-wide school districts. Teston v. Collins, 217 Ga. App. 829, 459 S.E.2d 452 (1995).

Sovereign immunity extends to school districts under the 1991 amendment of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, and the legislature has not provided for a waiver of such immunity. Bitterman v. Atkins, 217 Ga. App. 652, 458 S.E.2d 688 (1995).

Claims of student's mother against a school district and employees for breach of fiduciary duties and invasion of privacy were barred by the doctrine of sovereign immunity. Wellborn v. DeKalb County Sch. Dist., 227 Ga. App. 377, 489 S.E.2d 345 (1997).

In regard to a personal injury action arising from an accident involving a school bus, the school district waived sovereign immunity to the extent it was covered by liability insurance. Coffee County Sch. Dist. v. King, 229 Ga. App. 143, 493 S.E.2d 563 (1997).

Trial court properly dismissed a parent's tort claims against the school district and its employees, as they were immune from suit and excluded from the limited waiver provision under both O.C.G.A. §§ 50-21-22(5) and 50-21-23(a). Moreover, none of the alleged acts showed the malicious, wilful, or wanton conduct necessary to overcome that immunity. Chisolm v. Tippens, 289 Ga. App. 757, 658 S.E.2d 147 (2008), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 576, 172 L.Ed.2d 431 (2008).

Sovereign immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e) extended to a county school district. Foster v. Raspberry, No. 4:08-CV-123(CDL), 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 65419 (M.D. Ga. July 29, 2009).

Trial court erred in denying a school district's motion to dismiss a contractor's action seeking restitution because recovery was precluded under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(c) to the extent that the restitution claim sought compensation for work that was not contemplated by the parties' multi-year contract. Greene County Sch. Dist. v. Circle Y Constr., Inc., 308 Ga. App. 837, 708 S.E.2d 692 (2011).

School official's liability in hazing incident. — Proof of actual malice by school officials in connection with injuries received by a student in a hazing incident was not sufficient to show that officials were not entitled to immunity. Caldwell v. Griffin Spalding County Bd. of Educ., 232 Ga. App. 892, 503 S.E.2d 43 (1998).

Immunity extends to school district employees. — Parents, who were sued in their personal capacities for actions taken within the scope of their duties as employees of the school district, are entitled to summary judgment on the basis of official immunity. Coffee County Sch. Dist. v. Snipes, 216 Ga. App. 293, 454 S.E.2d 149 (1995).

An appellate court's reversal of a grant of judgment on the pleadings to defendants, the members of a school board of education, a school principal, the assistant principal, and a clinic nurse in their individual capacities, was in error in a negligence suit brought by the parents of a student who was assaulted by another student; the mandated action set forth in

O.C.G.A. § 20-2-1185 on the part of a school to create a safety plan was a discretionary duty rather than a ministerial duty, and while O.C.G.A. § 20-2-1184 establishes Georgia's public policy concerning the need to report timely to the appropriate authorities the identity of students who commit certain proscribed acts on school grounds, the statute did not create a civil cause of action for damages in favor of a victim or anyone else for the purported failure to report timely. Murphy v. Bajjani, 282 Ga. 197, 647 S.E.2d 54 (2007).

Sovereign immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e) extended to employees of a county school district, who were sued in their official capacities. Foster v. Raspberry, No. 4:08-CV-123(CDL), 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 65419 (M.D. Ga. July 29, 2009).

Trial court erred in denying the county school district employees' motion to set aside a default judgment entered against the employees under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) in the parents' wrongful death action because, while the employees were sued in both the employees' official and individual capacities, the parents' wrongful-death suit arose from actions the employees took in the employees' official capacities as employees of the school, and thus, the trial court erred as a matter of law in finding that the entry of the default judgment barred the employees from being able to assert that official immunity protected the employees from the parents' wrongful death action; official immunity is not a mere defense but rather an entitlement not to be sued that must be addressed as a threshold matter before a lawsuit may proceed. Cosby v. Lewis, 308 Ga. App. 668, 708 S.E.2d 585 (2011).

In a personal injury suit, the plaintiff failed to point to any evidence from which a trier of fact could infer that the conduct of the two teachers in organizing and conducting the tug-of-war contest constituted a simple, absolute, and definite act that required merely the execution of a specific duty; to the contrary, pretermittting whether one of the teachers was acting in the teacher's capacity as an employee or as a parent volunteer, the evidence was undisputed that the teachers exercised personal judgment and acted on the facts presented in a way not specifically directed by the school district; thus, the trial court did not err in concluding that the teachers were engaged in discretionary rather than ministerial activities. Davis v. Brantley County Sch. Dist., 334 Ga. App. 684, 780 S.E.2d 60 (2015).

Immunity extended to Ohio school district, board of education, and teacher. — In an action arising from injuries to a student while on a school band trip, Ohio defendants including a school district, board of education, and teacher had sovereign and official immunity from negligence liability. Holbrook v. Executive Conference Ctr., Inc., 219 Ga. App. 104, 464 S.E.2d 398 (1995).

Preparation of school safety plan is discretionary, not ministerial, duty. — The mandated action set forth in O.C.G.A. § 20-2-1185 with regard to every public school preparing a school safety plan is a discretionary duty rather than a ministerial duty; by so deciding, the Supreme Court of Georgia determined that the holding in Leake v. Murphy, 274 Ga. App. 219 (2005) was incorrect and such holding is overruled. Murphy v. Bajjani, 282 Ga. 197, 647 S.E.2d 54 (2007).

Stone Mountain Memorial Association. — Stone Mountain Memorial Association is a state department or agency for purposes of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX and, accordingly, a former inmate was required to file an ante litem notice in accordance with the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., for asserting the inmate's negligence claim; as the inmate failed to file such required notice, the trial court's grant of summary judgment to the Association pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) was proper. Gay v. Ga. Dep't of Corr., 270 Ga. App. 17, 606 S.E.2d 53 (2004).

Ports Authority immune. — The Georgia Ports Authority is a state "department or agency" that is entitled to the defense of sovereign immunity but which may be liable for the torts of state officers and employees because of the state's waiver of immunity in the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq. Miller v. Georgia Ports Auth., 266 Ga. 586, 470 S.E.2d 426 (1996).

Application (Cont'd)

State court decision holding that the Georgia Ports Authority was immune did not apply to a longshoreman's personal injury claim against the Authority, which was governed by admiralty law, as the longshoreman was injured while on a ship in navigable waters performing traditional maritime functions, and did not determine whether the Authority was immune as an "arm of the state," under the Eleventh Amendment. Hines v. Ga. Ports Auth., 278 Ga. 631, 604 S.E.2d 189 (2004).

Action to restrain Regents of University System not permissible. — Action seeking to restrain the payment of certain funds to the Regents of the University System, and their receipt and use of the funds, against state officers in their official capacity, and not as individuals committing any trespass upon the petitioners, is in effect an action against the state without its consent, and the action cannot be maintained. Ramsey v. Hamilton, 181 Ga. 365, 182 S.E. 392 (1935).

Sovereign immunity applies to Board of Regents. — The Board of Regents is the state agency vested with the governance, control, and management of the University System of Georgia and therefore, the board is an agency of the state to which sovereign immunity applies. Wilson v. Board of Regents, 262 Ga. 413, 419 S.E.2d 916 (1992).

Because Georgia had not waived the state's Eleventh Amendment immunity, the federal district court lacked jurisdiction to decide the student's breach of contract claim against the board of regents. Barnes v. Zaccari, 669 F.3d 1295 (11th Cir. 2012).

Trial court erred by finding that a university board waived sovereign immunity in a breach of contract suit brought by a student because the court erroneously relied upon an unauthenticated copy of the student code of conduct, which was not signed by either party; thus, since no written contract existed wherein the board waived sovereign immunity, the board was entitled to summary judgment on the student's breach of contract claims. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga. v. Barnes, 322 Ga. App. 47, 743 S.E.2d 609 (2013).

Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia was immune from a suit by employees of a contractor who provided a forged payment bond to the Board; the maintenance contract was not for "public works construction" as defined in O.C.G.A. § 36-91-2(12); therefore, the provisions for payment bonds in O.C.G.A. §§ 13-10-62 and 13-10-63 did not apply. Further, the Board had no duty to investigate the information presented on the face of the payment bond. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga. v. Brooks, 324 Ga. App. 15, 749 S.E.2d 23 (2013).

No genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether subsequent communications with retirement employees or officials modified the settlement agreement providing for an employee's early retirement from a university because the notes and email correspondence did not constitute signed, contemporaneous agreements demonstrating an intent to modify the settlement agreement, thus, the employee could not avoid the bar of sovereign immunity possessed by the board of regents. Carroll v. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga., 324 Ga. App. 598, 751 S.E.2d 421 (2013).

Trial court did not err in finding that sovereign immunity barred the action because the court correctly treated the policies of the Board of Regents regarding non-citizen eligibility for in-state tuition as falling outside the waiver of sovereign immunity found in O.C.G.A. § 50-13-10; thus, the students did not meet the students' burden of showing that the policies at issue were agency rules adopted pursuant § 50-13-10's waiver, rather than interpretive rules exempt from § 50-13-10. Olvera v. Univ. Sys. of Georgia's Bd. of Regents, 331 Ga. App. 392, 771 S.E.2d 91 (2015).

Regents' immunity not waived. — Board of Regents' immunity under the doctrine of sovereign immunity was not waived where hospital records, including a "consent to care" form, upon which a patient's action was based, did not constitute a written contract. Board of Regents v. Tyson, 261 Ga. 368, 404 S.E.2d 557 (1991).

Department of Revenue. — The Georgia Department of Revenue is a state entity, entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity from suit in federal court. Miles v. Georgia Dep't of Revenue, 797 F. Supp. 987 (S.D. Ga. 1992).

Sales tax refund. — Electrical membership corporation lacked associational standing to seek a sales tax refund on behalf of its members/patrons, as it was a non-taxpayer acting in a representative capacity and there was a very limited waiver of sovereign immunity provided by O.C.G.A. § 48-2-35 which did not extend to non-taxpayers; further, the waiver of sovereign immunity of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e) was to be strictly construed, and even a taxpayer was prohibited from bringing a refund action on behalf of other taxpayers similarly situated, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 48-2-35. Sawnee Elec. Mbrshp. Corp. v. Ga. Dep't of Revenue, 279 Ga. 22, 608 S.E.2d 611 (2005).

Georgia Lottery Corporation. — The Georgia Lottery Corporation is not a state “agency” entitled to the defense of sovereign immunity under the facts and law of an action brought to have certain lottery games declared illegal and unconstitutional. Jackson v. Georgia Lottery Corp., 228 Ga. App. 239, 491 S.E.2d 408 (1997).

Georgia Lottery Corporation (GLC) is entitled to assert sovereign immunity as a bar to a suit under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, and the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., because under the Georgia Lottery for Education Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-27-1 et seq., the purpose, function, and management of the GLC are indelibly intertwined with the state in a manner that qualifies the GLC for the protection of sovereign immunity as a state instrumentality; thus, the GLC must be classified as an instrumentality of the state to which sovereign immunity applies. Kyle v. Ga. Lottery Corp., 290 Ga. 87, 718 S.E.2d 801 (2011).

Hospital authorities. — Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX does not require courts to construe the “sue and be sued” language of O.C.G.A. § 31-7-75, governing functions and powers of hospital authorities, as a waiver of sovereign immunity. Howard v. Liberty Mem. Hosp., 752 F. Supp. 1074 (S.D. Ga. 1990).

Hospital was entitled to sovereign immunity for any judgment in a medical malpractice action in excess of the hospital's liability insurance. Howard v. Liberty Mem. Hosp., 752 F. Supp. 1074 (S.D. Ga. 1990) (decided prior to 1990 amendment).

Hospital authorities established pursuant to the Hospital Authorities Law are entitled to the defense of governmental immunity except to the extent there has been a waiver under the state constitution. Hospital Auth. v. Litterilla, 199 Ga. App. 345, 404 S.E.2d 796 (1991).

Hospital authority's receipt of funds from two counties in general support of an indigent treatment program did not divest the authority or its hospital of their character as county agencies or instrumentalities so as to waive sovereign immunity. Culberson v. Fulton-DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 201 Ga. App. 347, 411 S.E.2d 75, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 905, 411 S.E.2d 75 (1991).

Hospital authorities, because they are neither the state nor a department or agency of the state, are not entitled to the defense of sovereign immunity. Thomas v. Hospital Auth., 264 Ga. 40, 440 S.E.2d 195 (1994); Randolph County Hosp. Auth. v. Johnson, 215 Ga. App. 283, 450 S.E.2d 318 (1994).

Immunity of a physician at a state medical college. — Two physicians, who were faculty members at the Medical College of Georgia Children's Medical Center, did not establish in a medical malpractice action that the physicians were entitled to qualified immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d) and O.C.G.A. § 50-21-25(b), because the child whom the physicians treated at the center was a private-pay patient. Notwithstanding the physicians' official duties as faculty members, when they acted as physicians, the physicians' primary duty was to the child, rather than to the State of Georgia. Jones v. Allen, 312 Ga. App. 762, 720 S.E.2d 1 (2011).

Physician, who was a second-year fellow at the Medical College of Georgia Children's Medical Center's Graduate Medical Education Program, was entitled to official immunity in a medical malpractice action under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d) and O.C.G.A. § 50-21-25(b).

Application (Cont'd)

because the physician, who provided followup medical treatment to a child, was operating under the general supervision of an attending physician who was a faculty member and an employee of the Medical College of Georgia. Jones v. Allen, 312 Ga. App. 762, 720 S.E.2d 1 (2011).

Employees of the state mental hospital were entitled to immunity from claims by patients arising from the administration of antipsychotic drugs. Hightower by Dehler v. Olmstead, 959 F. Supp. 1549 (N.D. Ga. 1996).

Employees of Department of Family and Children Services. — Case-worker and supervisor in the Department of Family and Children Services acted within the scope of their official duties in the placement and supervision of children in a foster home and, thus, were entitled to official immunity. Miracle by Miracle v. Spooner, 978 F. Supp. 1161 (N.D. Ga. 1997).

Departments of Human Resources and Juvenile Justice. — Trial court, in a wrongful death suit, erred by denying the motions of the Georgia Department of Human Resources and the Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice to dismiss and for a directed verdict, following the death of a juvenile the agencies placed in a corporate child care institution, as the two agencies were immune from suit under the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., and there was no waiver of sovereign immunity by the state. Ga. Dep't of Human Res. v. Johnson, 264 Ga. App. 730, 592 S.E.2d 124 (2003).

The immunity granted to agencies under the Community Services Act, O.C.G.A. § 42-8-71(d), promotes a public policy that was not superseded or repealed by implication by the 1991 amendment of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX providing for the waiver of the state's sovereign immunity or by the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., which was enacted pursuant to the amendment. Department of Human Resources v. Mitchell, 238 Ga. App. 477, 518 S.E.2d 440 (1999).

Immunity extends to community service boards. — Considering the public purpose for which they were created, a community service board is a "state department or agency" entitled to raise the defense of sovereign immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX. Youngblood v. Gwinnett Rockdale Newton Cmty. Serv. Bd., 273 Ga. 715, 545 S.E.2d 875 (2001).

Because community service boards are agencies or departments of the state, the legislature acted unconstitutionally when it ignored Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e) and the express terms of the Georgia Tort Claims Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-21-20 et seq., by enacting O.C.G.A. § 37-2-11.1(c)(1) so as to denominate these newly created state agencies or departments as unclassified public entities to be accorded the same immunity as counties. Youngblood v. Gwinnett Rockdale Newton Cmty. Serv. Bd., 273 Ga. 715, 545 S.E.2d 875 (2001).

Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, which sets forth the Georgia constitution's limits on waiving sovereign immunity, were inapplicable to the inquiry of whether a community service board was an arm of the state entitled to Eleventh Amendment immunity since nothing in the state constitutional provision suggested that it limited the legislature's ability to create different governmental entities, like counties and municipalities. Johnson v. Ogeechee Behavioral Health Servs., 479 F. Supp. 2d 1357 (S.D. Ga. 2007).

Community Service Act. — When a decedent fell off a sanitation truck while performing court-ordered community service, sovereign immunity barred a wrongful death claim against a county under the Community Service Act, O.C.G.A. § 42-8-70 et seq.; O.C.G.A. § 42-8-71(d) does not specifically provide either that sovereign immunity is waived or the extent of the waiver, as required by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, and the court cannot read such a waiver into the act. DeKalb State Court Prob. Dep't v. Currid, 287 Ga. App. 649, 653 S.E.2d 90 (2007), aff'd, Currid v. DeKalb State Court Prob. Dep't, 285 Ga. 184, 674 S.E.2d 894 (2009).

County did not waive sovereign immunity under O.C.G.A. § 42-8-71(d) of the Community Service Act, O.C.G.A. § 42-8-70 et seq., in a wrongful death action because the plain language did not expressly waive sovereign immunity and the extent of any waiver was not expressed; thus, both prongs of the constitutional test under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e) were not met. Currid v. DeKalb State Court Prob. Dep't, 285 Ga. 184, 674 S.E.2d 894 (2009).

Failure to provide medical care. — In a parent's wrongful death action, the trial court erred in denying a county's motion for summary judgment because O.C.G.A. § 42-5-2 did not waive the county's sovereign immunity for claims based on failure to provide medical care; § 42-5-2 does not provide an express waiver, and nothing in the statute can be read to imply a waiver. Gish v. Thomas, 302 Ga. App. 854, 691 S.E.2d 900 (2010).

Provision of medical care to inmates is ministerial act. — Providing adequate medical attention for inmates is a ministerial act by the sheriff, because medical care is a fundamental right and is not discretionary; thus, such act is not subject to either sovereign immunity or official immunity. Since the plaintiff's contention was that it was the failure to provide adequate medical care that created liability and not the choice of treatment by the health care provider, sovereign and official immunity did not apply. Cantrell v. Thurman, 231 Ga. App. 510, 499 S.E.2d 416 (1998).

Prison officials. — Trial court incorrectly denied a prison official's motion for summary judgment on the estate administrators' state causes of action, following the death of an inmate who overdosed on Tylenol, because the administrators failed to prove that the official was acting outside the scope of the person's official duties or employment; consequently, even if the official acted with malice or intent to injure the decedent, the official was immune from liability on the administrators' state law claims against the official. Minor v. Barwick, 264 Ga. App. 327, 590 S.E.2d 754 (2003).

Inmates. — County was not entitled to sovereign immunity in an estate's claim arising from the death of an inmate because the county had bought the type of insurance defined in O.C.G.A. § 33-24-51; the estate claimed that the inmate's death resulted from an officer's negligent supervision of the inmate's actions in maintaining a tractor by trying to replace a tire. The policy covered negligence for autos, the tractor was an auto under the statute and the policy, and the policy covered maintenance of a covered auto, which included changing a tire. McDuffie v. Coweta County, 299 Ga. App. 500, 682 S.E.2d 609 (2009).

Assuming, without deciding, that the defendant deputies were performing discretionary acts during the incident alleged in a plaintiff inmate's complaint such that the standard of liability was malice or intent to injure, the plaintiff alleged sufficient facts to meet that standard. The plaintiff sufficiently alleged malice or intent to injure on the defendants' part by accusing the defendants of beating the plaintiff while handcuffed because the plaintiff refused to make the plaintiff's bed, and the defendants therefore were not entitled to official immunity, pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, at the dismissal stage in the litigation. Muckle v. Robinson, No. 2:12-CV-0061-RWS, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 8675 (N.D. Ga. Jan. 22, 2013).

Georgia Supreme Court finds that the care of inmates in the custody of a municipal corporation is a governmental function for which sovereign immunity has not been waived. City of Atlanta v. Mitcham, 296 Ga. 576, 769 S.E.2d 320 (2015).

Parole board immune. — The defense of sovereign immunity applies to a complaint against the parole board and its former chairman acting in the chairman's official capacity. Mosier v. State Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 213 Ga. App. 545, 445 S.E.2d 535 (1994), cert. denied, 5 U.S. 1040, 115 S. Ct. 1409, 131 L. Ed. 2d 295 (1995).

No waiver for parole board. — When a prisoner alleged racial discrimination with respect to the policies, practice, and racial balance of the parole board, but the district court granted summary judgment in favor of the parole board on the grounds that it was entitled to sovereign immunity pursuant to the Eleventh Amendment, it was held that the Georgia Constitution, in subsection (a) of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, specifically states that “[s]overeign immunity extends to the state and all of its departments and agencies,” and although this same provision of the constitution waives sovereign immunity in circumstances in which liability insurance protection has been provided, as there was nothing in the record indicating that liability insurance had been provided to the parole board or that the waiver was applicable, the district court was affirmed. Fuller v. Georgia State Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 851 F.2d 1307 (11th Cir. 1988) (decided prior to 1990 amendment).

Application (Cont'd)

Claim for attorney fees in criminal case barred. — There is no statutory or constitutional basis for the award of attorney fees in a criminal action; in fact, sovereign immunity barred a criminal defendant’s claim for attorney fees when the charge against the defendant was dismissed on speedy trial grounds. Bennett v. State, 210 Ga. App. 337, 436 S.E.2d 40 (1993).

Violation of Civil Rights Act. — When a governing body has worked a constitutional deprivation of a citizen pursuant to an impermissible or corrupt policy which is intentional and deliberate, a cause of action is accrued against the governing body and its employees under the federal Civil Rights Act in spite of the doctrine of sovereign immunity. City of Cave Spring v. Mason, 252 Ga. 3, 310 S.E.2d 892 (1984).

State did not waive immunity by enacting O.C.G.A. § 38-2-279. — State employee allegedly terminated for military service could not recover against the state under the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act of 1994 (USERRA) and O.C.G.A. § 38-2-279(e). The employee’s claim under USERRA was barred by U.S. Const., amend. 11, and the claim under § 38-2-279 was barred by sovereign immunity under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e). Anstadt v. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga., 303 Ga. App. 483, 693 S.E.2d 868 (2010), cert. denied, No. S10C1291, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 713 (Ga. 2010).

State not vicariously liable for negligence of employees. — In a negligence action against the state, the Department of Human Resources, and a state hospital, that accrued prior to the 1991 amendment of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX, defendants could not be held vicariously liable so as to invoke coverage of the Liability Trust Fund covering employees of the department and, thus, sovereign immunity was not waived respecting the death of plaintiff’s son, allegedly caused by the department’s employees whom plaintiffs failed to identify or name as defendants. Davis v. State, 211 Ga. App. 285, 439 S.E.2d 40 (1993).

Negligent failure to maintain building is tort action. — Action against a county for negligent failure to maintain a county building sounded in tort, not contract, and therefore, there was no waiver of sovereign immunity. Burton v. DeKalb County, 209 Ga. App. 638, 434 S.E.2d 82 (1993).

Damage of home due to police action. — Trial court properly dismissed an insurance company’s suit for inverse condemnation against a county because the insured’s home was damaged during the exercise of police power and, thus, did not fall within the waiver of sovereign immunity set forth in Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e). Amica Mut. Ins. Co. v. Gwinnett County Police Dep’t, 319 Ga. App. 780, 738 S.E.2d 622 (2013).

Consequential damages for water meter leakage. — The plaintiff in a federal civil rights action had an adequate state law tort remedy, consequently, the plaintiff was not deprived of the plaintiff’s rights without due process of law when a water meter leaked, the county did not repair the meter, water flowed onto a nearby road and froze, and the plaintiff’s car skidded on the ice and collided with another car, causing extensive injuries, notwithstanding the fact that the county and its officers were immune from suit for negligence. Rittenhouse v. DeKalb County, 764 F.2d 1451 (11th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1014, 106 S. Ct. 1193, 89 L. Ed. 2d 308 (1986).

Release of stolen property to wrong party. — The state may assert its immunity from suit in an action brought pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-5-50, relating to disposition of stolen property, to recover a sum which the state has improperly released to another party. State v. Collins, 171 Ga. App. 225, 319 S.E.2d 84 (1984).

Recovery for implied contracts and under eminent domain precluded. — Because one can now sue the state on an express contract, this viability of a claim on an express contract precludes recovery on an implied contract theory and under an eminent domain theory. DOT v. Fru-Con Constr. Corp., 206 Ga. App. 821, 426 S.E.2d 905 (1992).

Sovereign immunity barred a conventional quiet title action against the state, which was immune from suit under O.C.G.A. § 23-3-40. Sovereign immunity was not applicable to an in rem quiet title action against all the world under O.C.G.A. § 23-3-60 as such an action was against the underlying property itself. TDGA, LLC v. CBIRA, LLC, 298 Ga. 510, 783 S.E.2d 107 (2016).

Breach of contract claim barred. — A claim for breach of contract brought by a homeowner against a county after a sewer line flooded part of the home was barred by sovereign immunity since there was no written contract; furthermore, the claim, even though couched in contract, sounded in tort and was, also, barred by sovereign immunity. Merk v. DeKalb County, 226 Ga. App. 191, 486 S.E.2d 66 (1997).

The plaintiff's claim for back pay was barred by sovereign immunity, notwithstanding the plaintiff's contention that the claim arose out of an employment contract with the defendant county, since the mere acceptance by the plaintiff of a written offer of employment for an indefinite term did not create an enforceable written contract. Waters v. Glynn County, 237 Ga. App. 438, 514 S.E.2d 680 (1999).

Ex contractu action not barred. — Highway construction contractor's action against the Department of Transportation based on design errors and omissions and on the department's breach of certain implied contractual obligations was ex contractu and was not barred by sovereign immunity. DOT v. APAC-Georgia, Inc., 217 Ga. App. 103, 456 S.E.2d 668 (1995), cert. denied, 1995 Ga. Lexis 825 (1995).

Surety on a public contract, after assisting the contractor in completing the project, stood in the place of the contractor and was subrogated to the contractor's right of action for breach of contract against the Georgia Department of Corrections; under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(c), the state waived sovereign immunity for contracts. State Dep't of Corr. v. Developers Sur. & Indem. Co., 295 Ga. 741, 763 S.E.2d 868 (2014).

Ultra vires contract not enforceable under quantum meruit theory of recovery. — Appellate court erred by holding that an environmental engineering company could recover against a city on its quantum meruit claim because quantum meruit was not an available remedy against the city since the claim was based on a municipal contract that was ultra vires as it was never approved by city council. City of Baldwin v. Woodard & Curran, Inc., 293 Ga. 19, 743 S.E.2d 381 (2013).

Effect of O.C.G.A. § 32-2-6(a). — Through the enactment of O.C.G.A. § 32-2-6(a), the General Assembly has said that when a cause of action accrues on a public road which is part of the state highway system, suit may be brought against the county (which is merely a political subdivision of the state), but the Department of Transportation shall defend any such suit and be responsible for all damages awarded therein. What the General Assembly has thus done is to prescribe the terms and conditions on which the state consents to be sued, and these terms and conditions did not deprive the plaintiff of any constitutional rights. Sikes v. Candler County, 247 Ga. 115, 274 S.E.2d 464 (1981).

Action for taking of private property for public purpose is specifically exempted from jurisdiction of State Court of Claims. Harrell v. Monroe County, 147 Ga. App. 685, 250 S.E.2d 20 (1978).

Action for value of private property taken or damaged for public purpose is not either tort or contract; it is simply a constitutional right which the citizen may not be denied. C.F.I. Constr. Co. v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 145 Ga. App. 471, 243 S.E.2d 700, cert. dismissed, 242 Ga. 96, 249 S.E.2d 613 (1978).

Application (Cont'd)

County's immunity regarding tax sale. — Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 36-1-4 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e), a county was immune from a lender's suit because the lender pointed to no statute creating a waiver of immunity or any factual scenario warranting a waiver with respect to the lender's claim that the county failed to give it notice of the availability of excess funds following a tax sale as required by O.C.G.A. § 48-4-5. Bartow County v. S. Dev., III, L.P., 325 Ga. App. 879, 756 S.E.2d 11 (2014).

Actual malice not shown. — In a suit by developers against city officials, the officials were entitled to qualified immunity. While the officials might have acted with conscious disregard of the consequences to the developers if the city's water issues with a state agency were not resolved, this did not create a jury issue as to actual malice. Paul Wendelken v. Jenk, No. A07A1645; No. A07A1646, 2008 Ga. App. LEXIS 489 (Mar. 18, 2008).

Parent's allegations that a county and a county road superintendent gave false statements and committed acts that were willful, intentional, fraudulent, and reckless were insufficient to state a claim that the superintendent acted with actual malice as that term was used in Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(d); because the parent did not allege that the superintendent intended to cause a decedent's fatal accident, the parent did not state a claim for actual malice. Barnard v. Turner County, 306 Ga. App. 235, 701 S.E.2d 859 (2010).

Factual issue regarding actual malice. — When an investigator added a pawn shop owners' home address to a search warrant without the magistrate judge's approval, the investigator and the sheriff were properly denied summary judgment based on official immunity under Georgia law because there were genuine issues of fact regarding whether the investigator acted with actual malice and whether the sheriff knew of the investigator's actions. Gordon v. Chattooga County, No. 12-10818, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 13554 (11th Cir. July 3, 2012) (Unpublished).

Law clerks' claim against a county for back pay based on an alleged disparity between their salaries and salaries of other county employees was not barred by the doctrine of sovereign immunity as the claim was based on contract; immunity was specifically waived for an action ex contractu for the breach of any written contract. Fulton County v. Lord, 323 Ga. App. 384, 746 S.E.2d 188 (2013).

When officers responded to a call reporting a domestic disturbance at a residence, the decedent resisted the officers' attempt to arrest the decedent, and an officer shot and killed the decedent, it was error to grant the shooting officer official immunity as to a wrongful death claim because a jury could find that the officer intentionally shot the decedent after the struggle ended and at a time when the decedent was lying on the floor, unarmed and compliant. Felio v. Hyatt, No. 14-15702, 2016 U.S. App. LEXIS 1230 (11th Cir. Jan. 26, 2016) (Unpublished).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Department of Offender Rehabilitation employees have qualified immunity. — Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Corrections) employees, authorized by law to supervise probationers while they are performing approved court-ordered tasks under O.C.G.A. §§ 42-8-71, 42-8-72, and 42-8-73 are performing a governmental function as opposed to a ministerial task, and therefore will not be personally liable for injuries to the probationers sustained while performing the tasks unless the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Corrections) employees' conduct is willful and wanton. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-18.

The potential liability of probation supervisors supervising court-ordered community service by probationers (a discretionary function as opposed to a ministerial duty) is, notwithstanding the waiver of sovereign immunity to the extent of any liability insurance provided, only for conduct which is willful, wanton, or outside the scope of authority of the supervisor.

1983 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 83-18 (rendered prior to 1990 amendment).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 20 Am. Jur. 2d, Courts, § 99.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 541 et seq.

ALR. — Officers or privates in military service as “officers” or “employees” within statute waiving state’s immunity from liability for torts, 129 ALR 911.

Liability for injury or damages resulting from traffic accident on highway involving vehicle in military service, 147 ALR 1431.

Jurisdiction of state court over actions involving patents, 167 ALR 1114.

Tortious breach of contract as within consent to suit against United States or state on contract, 1 ALR2d 864.

Liability for injury from defective condition or improper operation of lift bridge or drawbridge, 90 ALR2d 105.

Liability, in motor vehicle-related cases, of governmental entity for injury or death resulting from design, construction, or failure to warn of narrow bridge, 2 ALR4th 635.

Liability of governmental unit for injuries caused by driver of third vehicle to person whose vehicle had been stopped by police car, 17 ALR4th 897.

Validity and construction of statute or ordinance limiting the kinds or amount of actual damages recoverable in tort action against governmental unit, 43 ALR4th 19.

Governmental tort liability for failure to provide police protection to specifically threatened crime victim, 46 ALR4th 948.

Official immunity of state national guard members, 52 ALR4th 1095.

Right of insured, precluded from recovering against owner or operator of uninsured motor vehicle because of governmental immunity, to recover uninsured motorist benefits, 55 ALR4th 806.

Governmental tort liability as to highway median barriers, 58 ALR4th 559.

Tort liability of public authority for failure to remove parentally abused or neglected children from parents’ custody, 60 ALR4th 942.

Liability for injury or death allegedly caused by activities of hospital “rescue team”, 64 ALR4th 1200.

State and local government liability for injury or death of bicyclist due to defect or obstruction in public bicycle path, 68 ALR4th 204.

Governmental liability for negligence in licensing, regulating, or supervising private day-care home in which child is injured, 68 ALR4th 266.

Liability of school or school personnel for injury to student resulting from cheerleader activities, 25 ALR5th 784.

SECTION III.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Paragraph

- I. Eminent domain.
- II. Private ways.

Paragraph

- III. Tidewater titles confirmed.

Law reviews. — For annual survey on constitutional law, see 36 Mercer L. Rev. 137 (1984).

For note discussing the historical aspects and current law concerning the state’s ownership rights in tidelands, see 17 Ga. L. Rev. 851 (1983).

Paragraph I. Eminent domain.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this Paragraph, private property shall not be taken or damaged for public purposes without just and adequate compensation being first paid.

(b) When private property is taken or damaged by the state or the counties or municipalities of the state for public road or street purposes, or for public transportation purposes, or for any other public purposes as determined by the General Assembly, just and adequate compensation therefor need not be paid until the same has been finally fixed and determined as provided by law; but such just and adequate compensation shall then be paid in preference to all other obligations except bonded indebtedness.

(c) The General Assembly may by law require the condemnor to make prepayment against adequate compensation as a condition precedent to the exercise of the right of eminent domain and provide for the disbursement of the same to the end that the rights and equities of the property owner, lien holders, and the state and its subdivisions may be protected.

(d) The General Assembly may provide by law for the payment by the condemnor of reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, incurred by the condemnee in determining just and adequate compensation.

(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of the Constitution, the General Assembly may provide by law for relocation assistance and payments to persons displaced through the exercise of the power of eminent domain or because of public projects or programs; and the powers of taxation may be exercised and public funds expended in furtherance thereof.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I.

Cross references. — Due process of law and just compensation, U.S. Const., amend. 5; Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I; Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. III; Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. II, Para. V; T. 22; T. 32, C. 3; and § 44-9-40 et seq.

Law reviews. — For article, "The Tort Liability of Municipalities in Georgia," see 17 Ga. B.J. 456 (1955). For article discussing eminent domain procedure in this country, and advocating reforms focusing on a unified method for condemnation, see 11 Mercer L. Rev. 245 (1960). For article discussing federal liability for pollution abatement in condemnation actions, see

17 Mercer L. Rev. 364 (1966). For article, "Eminent Domain, Police Power and Urban Renewal: Compensation for Interim Depreciation in Land Values," see 7 Ga. L. Rev. 226 (1972). For article discussing this paragraph as a bar to zoning regulations, and advocating the use by the Supreme Court of a balancing analysis in ruling on zoning regulations, see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 53 (1975). For article surveying Georgia cases dealing with environment, natural resources, and land use from June 1977 through May 1978, see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 75 (1978). For article surveying recent legislative and judicial developments in zoning, planning and environmental law, see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 89 (1979). For article surveying recent legislative and judicial developments in Georgia's real property laws, see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 187 (1979). For survey article on constitutional law, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 53 (1982). For annual survey on real property, see 36 Mercer L. Rev. 285 (1984). For annual survey of law of real property, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 319 (1986). For article, "Condemning Local Government Condemnation," see 39 Mercer L. Rev. 11 (1987). For article, "A Critical Review of the Law of Business Loss Claims in Georgia Eminent Domain Jurisprudence," see 51 Mercer L. Rev. 11 (1999). For survey article on local government law, see 60 Mercer L. Rev. 263 (2008). For article, "Federalization of the Mosquito: Structural Innovation in the New Deal Administrative State," see 60 Emory L.J. 325 (2010).

For note, "Annexation by Municipalities in Georgia," see 2 Mercer L. Rev. 423 (1951). For note on computation of compensation for condemned lands where value is enhanced by announcement of proposed improvement, see 15 Mercer L. Rev. 488 (1964). For note, "A Study of the Development and Current Status in Georgia of Inverse Condemnation Suits by a Landowner for Taking by Aerial Flights," see 2 Ga. St. B.J. 232 (1965). For note discussing meaning of "public use" and analyzing theories of excess condemnation, see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 274 (1966). For note discussing sonic boom damage as governmental taking of property for public use without just compensation, see 2 Ga. L. Rev. 83 (1967). For note, "Regulation and Ownership of the Marshlands: The Georgia Marshlands Act," see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 563 (1971). For note discussing airport noise as a taking, given in the absence of direct overflight, see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 218 (1975). For note analyzing sovereign immunity in Georgia and proposing implementation of a waiver scheme and creation of a court of claims pursuant to Ga. Const., Art. VI, Sec. V, Para. I, see 27 Emory L.J. 717 (1978). For note, "Have They Gone 'Too Far'? An Evaluation and Comparison of 1995 State Takings Legislation," see 30 Ga. L. Rev. 1061 (1996).

For comment on City of Macon v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 89 Ga. App. 252, 79 S.E.2d 265 (1953), see 5 Mercer L. Rev. 323 (1954). For comment on City of Macon v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 89 Ga. App. 252, 79 S.E.2d 265 (1953), see 17 Ga. B.J. 117 (1954). For comment on State Hwy. Dep't v. Thomas, 106 Ga. App. 849, 128 S.E.2d 520 (1962), see 14 Mercer L. Rev. 447 (1963). For comment on Tift County v. Smith, 107 Ga. App. 140, 129 S.E.2d 172 (1962), rev'd on appeal, 219 Ga. 68, 131 S.E.2d 527 (1963), see 26 Ga. B.J. 195 (1963). For comment on Hard v. Housing Auth., 219 Ga. 74, 132 S.E.2d 25 (1963), see 26 Ga. B.J. 349 (1964). For comment on Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966), see 17 Mercer L. Rev. 471 (1966). For comment on Calhoun v. State Hwy. Dep't, 223 Ga. 65, 153 S.E.2d 418 (1967), answer conformed to, 115 Ga. 152, 154 S.E.2d 37 (1967), see 18 Mercer L. Rev. 475 (1967). For comment on State Hwy. Dep't v. Owens, 120 Ga. App. 647, 171 S.E.2d 770 (1969), see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 616 (1971). For comment on DeKalb County v. Trustees, Decatur Lodge No. 1602, 242 Ga. 707, 251 S.E.2d 243 (1978), see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 367 (1979). For comment on Pope v. City of Atlanta, 242 Ga. 331, 249 S.E.2d 16 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 936, 99 S. Ct. 1281, 59 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1979), see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 375 (1979). For comment, "Just Compensation for Temporary Regulatory Takings: A Discussion of Factors Influencing Damage Awards," see 35 Emory L.J. 729 (1986).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

CONSTITUTIONALITY OF OTHER PROVISIONS

EXTENT OF RIGHT OF EMINENT DOMAIN

LIABILITY OF COUNTIES AND OTHER GOVERNMENTAL ENTITIES

WHAT IS COMPENSABLE

1. IN GENERAL

2. EXERCISE OF POLICE POWER

3. COMMERCIAL LOSSES
4. INTERFERENCE WITH RIGHT OF INGRESS AND EGRESS
5. CONSTRUCTION OF JAIL OR PRISON
6. INTERFERENCE WITH RIGHTS OF LESSORS AND LESSEES
7. CREATION OF NUISANCE
8. PERSONAL INJURIES
9. INTERFERENCE WITH RIPARIAN RIGHTS
10. DAMAGE FROM ROAD CONSTRUCTION OR IMPROVEMENT
11. CONSTRUCTION OF SEWER
12. EFFECT OF ZONING AND LAND USE REGULATIONS
13. OTHER LOSSES

COMPENSATION

1. IN GENERAL
2. MEASURE OF RECOVERY
3. ATTORNEYS' FEES
4. CONSEQUENTIAL AND PUNITIVE DAMAGES
5. INTERESTS OF LESSORS AND LESSEES
6. OTHER ITEMS OF RECOVERY
7. TIME AT WHICH VALUE OF LAND IS FIXED

PROCEDURE

1. IN GENERAL
2. NATURE OF RIGHT OF ACTION
3. RIGHT TO HEARING
4. LIMITATION OF ACTIONS
5. SUFFICIENCY OF PETITION
6. FINALITY OF JUDGMENT AND APPEAL

General Consideration

Just and adequate compensation must be first paid before private property is taken or damaged for public purposes. Wilson v. State Hwy. Dep't, 85 Ga. App. 907, 70 S.E.2d 535 (1952).

When the state, through any of its agents, takes or damages private property for public purposes, this paragraph lays upon it the imperative duty to first pay just and adequate compensation therefor. Whipple v. County of Houston, 214 Ga. 532, 105 S.E.2d 898 (1958).

Unlike the Fifth Amendment to the United States Constitution, the Georgia Constitution requires that a governing authority give a property owner just compensation before taking or damaging property. Speer v. Miller, 864 F. Supp. 1294 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

Paragraph to be liberally construed. Mayor of Macon v. Daley, 2 Ga. App. 355, 58 S.E. 540 (1907).

Paragraph too plain to be misunderstood. Oliver v. Union P. & W.P.R.R., 83 Ga. 257, 9 S.E. 1086 (1889).

Paragraph is self-enforcing and paramount to all legislative enactments. Elbert County v. Brown, 16 Ga. App. 834, 86 S.E. 651 (1915).

This paragraph is all-inclusive and covers taking or damaging of private property whether brought about by action involving proper and diligent construction or taking, or negligent damaging or taking. Gwinnett County v. Allen, 56 Ga. App. 753, 194 S.E. 38 (1937); Richmond County v. Williams, 109 Ga. App. 670, 137 S.E.2d 343 (1964).

Effect of this paragraph is not to authorize compensation in all cases where property may be injured by public works, but only when the enjoyment of some right of the plaintiff in reference to the plaintiff's property is interfered with, and the property thereby rendered less valuable. Bibb County v. Green, 42 Ga. App. 552, 156 S.E. 745 (1931); Felton Farm Co. v. Macon County, 49 Ga. App. 239, 175 S.E. 29 (1934).

This paragraph will apply only if property is taken or damaged. Lindsey v. Guhl, 237 Ga. 567, 229 S.E.2d 354 (1976).

Before paragraph becomes applicable, the owner's property must be taken or physically damaged for a public use. State Hwy. Dep't v. McClain, 216 Ga. 1, 114 S.E.2d 125 (1960).

Sovereign immunity. — The legislature's and the judiciary's establishment and adherence to the rule of sovereign immunity is not a "taking" of property rights required to be compensated. Tyson v. Board of Regents, 212 Ga. App. 550, 442 S.E.2d 9 (1994).

Effect of sovereign immunity. — Since the recovery of just and adequate compensation for private property which is taken for public purposes is itself an express constitutional right, sovereign immunity is not a viable bar to an action to enforce that right. State Bd. of Educ. v. Drury, 263 Ga. 429, 437 S.E.2d 290 (1993).

Action for value of private property taken or damaged for public purpose is not, in ordinary parlance, either tort or contract; it is simply a constitutional right which the citizen may not be denied. C.F.I. Constr. Co. v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 145 Ga. App. 471, 243 S.E.2d 700, cert. dismissed, 242 Ga. 96, 249 S.E.2d 613 (1978).

In statutory proceeding where a person may be deprived of property, statute must be strictly pursued. Marist Soc'y v. City of Atlanta, 212 Ga. 115, 90 S.E.2d 564 (1955).

Property interest required. — Teachers who were denied renewable teaching certificates under invalidly promulgated regulations were not entitled to recover damages under the taking provision of the state Constitution, since they did not have a property interest in renewable teaching certificates that were never issued to them. State Bd. of Educ. v. Drury, 263 Ga. 429, 437 S.E.2d 290 (1993).

Exhausting state procedures as prerequisite to Fifth Amendment claim. — When the plaintiff failed to file an inverse condemnation claim in the state court and when the federal court had not ruled on the inverse condemnation claim the plaintiff filed therein, the plaintiff's Fifth Amendment takings claim was not ripe for adjudication. Speer v. Miller, 864 F. Supp. 1294 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

In an action in which the plaintiff landowners filed suit against the defendant county alleging a taking under the Fifth Amendment, and inverse condemnation under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. 1, in connection with the county's recreational development of its adjoining property, because the landowners had failed to avail themselves of Georgia's inverse condemnation procedure, the Fifth Amendment takings claim was premature, and the county motion for partial judgment on the pleadings was granted. Carney v. Gordon County, No. 4:06-CV-36-RLV, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 82634 (N.D. Ga. Sept. 12, 2006).

When statutory remedy not exclusive. — When the statutory remedy, however broad it may be, cannot be initiated by the owner of the land, and the condemner alone can put it into operation but fails to do so, the statutory remedy is not exclusive, and the owner may resort to an action at common law. To construe the statute otherwise would render it unconstitutional. Housing Auth. v. Savannah Iron & Wire Works, Inc., 90 Ga. App. 150, 82 S.E.2d 244 (1954).

Supreme Court is without jurisdiction of action to recover damages for taking and injuring private property for public use, and the mere fact that the Constitution, under this paragraph, forbids such injury to or taking of private property without just and adequate compensation being first paid therefor in no wise makes a constitutional question for decision by such court. Mayor of Athens v. Gamma Delta Chapter House Corp., 208 Ga. 392, 67 S.E.2d 111 (1951).

The term "property" is a very comprehensive one and is used not only to signify things real and personal owned but to designate the right of ownership and that which is subject to be owned and enjoyed. Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966).

The term "property" comprehends not only the thing possessed but also, in strict legal parlance, means the rights of the owner in relation to land or a thing; the right of a person to possess, use, enjoy, and dispose of it, and the corresponding right to exclude others from the use. Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966).

Role of equity in providing protection. — If by mistake the constitutional protection provided for in Ga. Const. 1945, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II) and Ga. Const. 1945, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I. (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I) is denied the citizen, and it is not voluntarily rectified, courts of equity will command its rectification. Whipple v. County of Houston, 214 Ga. 532, 105 S.E.2d 898 (1958).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Inverse condemnation precluded after condemnation proceeding initiated. — An inverse condemnation action cannot be maintained once a condemnation proceeding has been initiated by a condemning authority; that proceeding establishes the exclusive avenue for litigating the issue of just and adequate compensation. DOT v. Samuels, 185 Ga. App. 871, 366 S.E.2d 181, cert. denied, 185 Ga. App. 909, 366 S.E.2d 181 (1988).

Evidence sufficient to support jury's verdict that there was no inverse condemnation of business. See Downside Risk, Inc. v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 168 Ga. App. 202, 308 S.E.2d 547 (1983).

Parameters of preliminary entry. — A prospective condemnor is not required to adhere to condemnation procedures and constitutional provisions for compensation before making a preliminary entry, although it is responsible for all damages which occur during its preliminary entry. The permissible scope of an entry for preliminary survey, inspection and appraisal is, however, necessarily limited by the constitutional restrictions on the taking and damaging of property without just compensation; a taking may not be allowed under the guise of a preliminary survey, and the right of entry does not include the right to make permanent appropriation or cause more than minimal or incidental damage to property. Oglethorpe Power Corp. v. Goss, 253 Ga. 644, 322 S.E.2d 887 (1984).

Availability of injunction. — Equity will grant an injunction when damages not properly tendered. Athens Term. Co. v. Athens Foundry & Mach. Works, 129 Ga. 393, 58 S.E. 891 (1907).

Time of payment. — The land must be paid for before condemnation when the Act fails to make a provision therefor. Town of Poulan v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 123 Ga. 605, 51 S.E. 657 (1905).

Failure to institute proceedings may constitute waiver of right to payment before condemnation. Marietta Chair Co. v. Henderson, 121 Ga. 399, 49 S.E. 312 (1904).

Takings clause inapplicable. — Application of the true up process to the shortfall caused by the bankruptcy of a natural gas limited liability company (LLC) did not violate the takings clauses of U.S. Const., amend. V or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I because after the true up process had operated as intended, and after the fact, a marketer sought to obtain from the government amounts representing the marketer's commercial losses on gas delivered to the LLC's customers, and that was merely a "consequential" loss to the marketer. MXenergy Inc. v. Ga. PSC, 310 Ga. App. 630, 714 S.E.2d 132 (2011).

Cited in Austin v. Augusta Term. Ry., 108 Ga. 671, 34 S.E. 852 (1899); Rogers v. Toccoa Power Co., 161 Ga. 524, 131 S.E. 517, 44 ALR 534 (1926); Smith v. Floyd County, 36 Ga. App. 554, 137 S.E. 646 (1927); State Hwy. Bd. v. Baxter, 167 Ga. 124, 144 S.E. 796 (1928); Brown v. City of Atlanta, 167 Ga. 416, 145 S.E. 855 (1928); Habersham County v. Cornwall, 38 Ga. App. 419, 144 S.E. 55 (1928); City of Atlanta v. Hines, 39 Ga. App. 499, 147 S.E. 416 (1929); Floyd County v. Fincher, 169 Ga. 460, 150 S.E. 577 (1929); Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n v. Saye & Davis Transf. Co., 170 Ga. 873, 154 S.E. 439 (1930); MacDougald Constr. Co. v. Bass Canning Co., 42 Ga. App. 533, 156 S.E. 628 (1931); Fauss v. McConnell, 172 Ga. 444, 157 S.E. 625 (1931); Montgomery & Atlanta Freight Lines v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 175 Ga. 826, 166 S.E. 200 (1932); Pike County v. Matthews, 49 Ga. App. 152, 174 S.E. 642 (1934); Holland v. Whitfield County, 54 Ga. App. 453, 188 S.E. 288 (1936); Harrison v. State Hwy. Dep't, 183 Ga. 290, 188 S.E. 445 (1936); Perkerson v. State Hwy. Bd., 56 Ga. App. 316, 192 S.E. 475 (1937); Warren v. Georgia Power Co., 58 Ga. App. 9, 197 S.E. 338 (1938); State Hwy. Bd. v. Bridges, 60 Ga. App. 240, 3 S.E.2d 907 (1939); Botts v.

Southeastern Pipe-Line Co., 190 Ga. 689, 10 S.E.2d 375 (1940); Brooks County v. Elwell, 63 Ga. App. 308, 11 S.E.2d 82 (1940); Habersham County v. Knight, 63 Ga. App. 720, 12 S.E.2d 129 (1940); City of Albany v. Lippitt, 191 Ga. 756, 13 S.E.2d 807 (1941); Hall v. State Hwy. Bd., 66 Ga. App. 190, 17 S.E.2d 291 (1941); Elder v. City of Winder, 201 Ga. 511, 40 S.E.2d 659 (1946); State Hwy. Dep't v. Parker, 75 Ga. App. 237, 43 S.E.2d 172 (1947); Southern v. Cobb County, 78 Ga. App. 58, 50 S.E.2d 226 (1948); Pilgreen v. City of Atlanta, 204 Ga. 710, 51 S.E.2d 655 (1949); Cannon v. City of Macon, 81 Ga. App. 310, 58 S.E.2d 563 (1950); Moore v. Baker, 85 Ga. App. 234, 68 S.E.2d 911 (1952); Kitchens v. Jefferson County, 85 Ga. App. 902, 70 S.E.2d 527 (1952); Allen v. City of Atlanta, 86 Ga. App. 476, 71 S.E.2d 871 (1952); Almon v. Terrell County, 89 Ga. App. 403, 79 S.E.2d 430 (1953); Mayor of Savannah v. Moses Rogers Hous. Corp., 91 Ga. App. 32, 84 S.E.2d 488 (1954); City of Thomson v. Davis, 92 Ga. App. 216, 88 S.E.2d 300 (1955); O.K., Inc. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 213 Ga. 666, 100 S.E.2d 906 (1957); United States of Am. v. Ivie, 163 F. Supp. 138 (N.D. Ga. 1957); Dougherty County v. Hamilton, 99 Ga. App. 468, 108 S.E.2d 886 (1959); Clarke County Sch. Dist. v. Madden, 99 Ga. App. 670, 110 S.E.2d 47 (1959); Kellett v. Fulton County, 215 Ga. 551, 111 S.E.2d 364 (1959); Mitchell v. City of Atlanta, 217 Ga. 202, 121 S.E.2d 764 (1961); City of Atlanta v. Lunsford, 105 Ga. App. 247, 124 S.E.2d 493 (1962); Hill v. Busbia, 217 Ga. 781, 125 S.E.2d 34 (1962); City of Atlanta v. Donald, 221 Ga. 135, 143 S.E.2d 737 (1965); State Hwy. Dep't v. MacDonald, 221 Ga. 312, 144 S.E.2d 363 (1965); Stambaugh v. City of Demorest, 221 Ga. 527, 145 S.E.2d 539 (1965); Veal v. Smith, 221 Ga. 712, 146 S.E.2d 751 (1966); Cato v. Arnold, 222 Ga. 567, 151 S.E.2d 149 (1966); State Hwy. Dep't v. Branch, 222 Ga. 770, 152 S.E.2d 372 (1966); DeKalb County v. McFarland, 223 Ga. 196, 154 S.E.2d 203 (1967); Abercrombie v. Ledbetter-Johnson Co., 116 Ga. App. 376, 157 S.E.2d 493 (1967); Tuggle v. Manning, 224 Ga. 29, 159 S.E.2d 703 (1968); Douglas County v. Abercrombie, 119 Ga. App. 727, 168 S.E.2d 870 (1969); Jones v. Georgia Power

Co., 225 Ga. 510, 169 S.E.2d 810 (1969); Pye v. State Hwy. Dep't, 226 Ga. 389, 175 S.E.2d 510 (1970); Housing Auth. v. Mercer, 124 Ga. App. 477, 184 S.E.2d 225 (1971); Arnold v. Selected Sites, Inc., 229 Ga. 468, 192 S.E.2d 260 (1972); Hinson v. DOT, 230 Ga. 314, 196 S.E.2d 883 (1973); Taylor v. Georgia Power Co., 129 Ga. App. 89, 198 S.E.2d 701 (1973); Jackson v. McIntosh County, 232 Ga. 712, 208 S.E.2d 813 (1974); Baranan v. Fulton County, 232 Ga. 852, 209 S.E.2d 188 (1974); Andrews v. Department of Transp., 133 Ga. App. 78, 210 S.E.2d 30 (1974); Lee v. W.S. Venable, 134 Ga. App. 92, 213 S.E.2d 188 (1975); Miree v. United States, 526 F.2d 679 (5th Cir. 1976); Perry v. Landmark Fin. Corp., 141 Ga. App. 62, 232 S.E.2d 399 (1977); Pope v. City of Atlanta, 240 Ga. 177, 240 S.E.2d 241 (1977); Georgia Franchise Practices Comm'n v. Massey-Ferguson, Inc., 240 Ga. 743, 242 S.E.2d 69 (1978); Lines v. State, 245 Ga. 390, 264 S.E.2d 891 (1980); Newsome v. Richmond County, 246 Ga. 300, 271 S.E.2d 203 (1980); City of Columbus v. Myszk, 246 Ga. 571, 272 S.E.2d 302 (1980); Noe v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 485 F. Supp. 501 (N.D. Ga. 1980); Smith v. Gwinnett County, 248 Ga. 882, 286 S.E.2d 739 (1982); Baranan v. Fulton County, 250 Ga. 531, 299 S.E.2d 722 (1983); Banks v. Georgia Power Co., 267 Ga. 602, 481 S.E.2d 200 (1997); City of Stockbridge v. Meeks, 283 Ga. App. 343, 641 S.E.2d 584 (2007); Bd. of Comm'rs v. Johnson, 311 Ga. App. 867, 717 S.E.2d 272 (2011).

Constitutionality of Other Provisions

This paragraph suspended prior local Acts permitting the taking of property without compensation. Alexander v. City Council, 134 Ga. 849, 68 S.E. 704 (1910).

For standard for review of constitutionality of state land use regulations, see Pope v. City of Atlanta, 242 Ga. 331, 249 S.E.2d 16 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 936, 99 S. Ct. 1281, 59 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1979), commented on in 31 Mercer L. Rev. 375 (1979).

This paragraph is not violated by Ga. L. 1957, p. 387, § 13 (see now O.C.G.A. § 22-2-111), which provides that the judge of the superior court shall enter judgment condemning the described property sought to be condemned, in rem, and fee simple, to the use of the condemning body upon the payment into the registry of the court of the amount provided for in the award of the special master, since the method of determining what is just and adequate compensation is a matter of legislative discretion, and the method prescribed in that section fully and adequately protects that constitutional right. Anthony v. State Hwy. Dep't, 215 Ga. 853, 113 S.E.2d 768 (1960).

Constitutionality of Other Provisions (Cont'd)

Constitutionality of local Act amending charter of Decatur and the ordinances passed thereunder by the municipal authorities ordering the levying of the cost of paving assessment against the street railway company and its property located therein and used by it in the operation of the street-railway system, are not violative of U.S. Const., amend. 15, Ga. Const. 1877, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. III, and Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Paras. I and II), and Ga. Const. 1877, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I) when the levying of any assessment for a local public benefit is imposed as a special tax in the exercise of the police power of the state. Neither does it violate Ga. Const. 1877, Art. VII, Sec. I, Para. I (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. III), which provides a uniform system of taxation for the general support of the government. Georgia Power Co. v. City of Decatur, 170 Ga. 699, 154 S.E. 268 (1930).

Local Act unconstitutional. — The Act of the General Assembly granting to the City of Albany power to regulate garages and filling stations, and other businesses (Ga. L. 1923, p. 412), to license those businesses only in such localities as may be least offensive to the public, and to revoke the license for those businesses when they prove dangerous and injurious to health is in conflict with the due process clause of the Constitution of Georgia as found in Ga. Const. 1877, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. I), and is also in conflict with the Constitution of Georgia as found in Ga. Const. 1877, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I), insofar as that Act is interpreted by the public officials of the City of Albany to authorize a refusal of a permit sought by an owner of property to construct a filling station which conforms in every way to the building regulations of the city. Reynolds v. Brosnan, 170 Ga. 773, 154 S.E. 264 (1930).

Child support guidelines are not illegal taking. — Trial court erred in concluding that the Child Support Guidelines, under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15, resulted in an illegal taking from a parent, by reducing the parent to poverty status, in violation of the Georgia Constitution; the guidelines rather represented the state's efforts to ensure adequate care for children whose parents were divorced or separated. Ga. Dep't of Human Res. v. Sweat, 276 Ga. 627, 580 S.E.2d 206, cert. denied, 540 U.S. 966, 124 S. Ct. 432, 157 L. Ed. 2d 310 (2003).

Extent of Right of Eminent Domain

Private property may not be taken for private purpose. Earth Mgt., Inc. v. Heard County, 248 Ga. 442, 283 S.E.2d 455 (1981).

Necessity for strict compliance with prerequisites. — The taking of private property for a public use is the exercise of a high power, and before such taking can be constitutionally accomplished all prerequisites must be complied with strictly. Woodside v. City of Atlanta, 214 Ga. 75, 103 S.E.2d 108 (1958).

Exercise of right of eminent domain is legislative function and the General Assembly may by law prescribe the procedure for taking private property for public uses. State Hwy. Dep't v. Smith, 219 Ga. 800, 136 S.E.2d 334 (1964).

Right of eminent domain gives legislature control of private property for use of public; provided just compensation be made to the owner therefor and all grantees of land from the state, and their assigns, hold it under this tacit agreement or implied understanding. State Hwy. Dep't v. Smith, 219 Ga. 800, 136 S.E.2d 334 (1964).

Eminent domain cannot be used to restrict legitimate activity in which state has interest. — Governing authority has no right to utilize power of eminent domain under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I) and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. II (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. II(b)) in order to restrict a legitimate activity in which the state has an interest. Earth Mgt., Inc. v. Heard County, 248 Ga. 442, 283 S.E.2d 455 (1981).

Role of judiciary. — The necessity or expediency of appropriating particular property for public use is not a matter of judicial cognizance, but one for the determination of the legislative branch of the government, and this must obviously be so when the state takes for the state's own purposes. State Hwy. Dep't v. Smith, 219 Ga. 800, 136 S.E.2d 334 (1964).

The courts may not interfere with the legislative discretion of a condemning body in judging the public need for and amount of property to be taken unless the condemning authority has acted in bad faith or beyond the powers conferred upon it. City of Atlanta v. First Nat'l Bank, 246 Ga. 424, 271 S.E.2d 821 (1980).

Delegability of power to agencies. — Since the legislature cannot in every case supervise the condemnation of property for public use, it may confer the power to do so on agencies. State Hwy. Dep't v. Smith, 219 Ga. 800, 136 S.E.2d 334 (1964).

Delegability to public corporation. — Grant of power of eminent domain to public or quasi public corporation held valid. Towaliga Falls Power Co. v. Sims, 6 Ga. App. 749, 65 S.E. 844 (1909).

Delegability to foreign corporation. — The grant of the power of eminent domain to a foreign corporation is valid. Southwestern R.R. v. Southern Atl. Tel. Co., 46 Ga. 43, 12 Am. R. 585 (1872).

Condemning authority may not act in bad faith in exercise of right of eminent domain. Earth Mgt., Inc. v. Heard County, 248 Ga. 442, 283 S.E.2d 455 (1981).

Private life and health held above public convenience. — The right of private convenience, the right of the private citizen to hold and own any particular property, must yield to public convenience and public service whenever and wherever the legislature says yield, and to this extent the right of eminent domain is paramount; but private life and private health are more precious in the eyes of the law than even public convenience. Thrasher v. City of Atlanta, 178 Ga. 514, 173 S.E. 817 (1934).

Applies to all forms of property. — The right of the sovereign in the property of the citizen is hedged by two fundamental safeguards: the taking must be for a public purpose, and it must be attended by just and adequate compensation. This includes every species of property in which the individual has a right of ownership, whether real or personal, corporeal or incorporeal. Weiner v. Fulton County, 113 Ga. App. 343, 148 S.E.2d 143, cert. denied, 385 U.S. 958, 87 S. Ct. 393, 17 L. Ed. 2d 304 (1966).

Conferred right of eminent domain can operate only upon the property and never on the person or citizen. Thrasher v. City of Atlanta, 178 Ga. 514, 173 S.E. 817 (1934).

As property, contracts may be condemned. DeKalb County v. United Family Life Ins. Co., 235 Ga. 417, 219 S.E.2d 707 (1975).

Property dedicated to particular purpose cannot by dedicatee, a municipality, be diverted from that purpose, except under right of eminent domain. Donalson v. Georgia Power & Light Co., 175 Ga. 462, 165 S.E. 440 (1932).

Condemnation proceeding enjoined when not in conformity with charter. — When the charter of a municipality requires the adoption of a valid ordinance as a prerequisite to the condemnation of private property, and such requirement is not complied with prior to the condemnation proceedings, the action will be enjoined. Marist Soc'y v. City of Atlanta, 212 Ga. 115, 90 S.E.2d 564 (1955).

Condemning authority not to damage property without taking. — This paragraph allows the condemning authority to "take" a property interest, that is all or part of the fee, upon payment of compensation; it does not, however, give these authorities the power to damage property without such a taking. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth. v. Trussell, 247 Ga. 148, 273 S.E.2d 859 (1981).

Extent of Right of EminentDomain (Cont'd)

A municipality must compensate a street railway for property taken for building streets. Mayor of Savannah v. Vernon Shell Rd. Co., 88 Ga. 342, 14 S.E. 610 (1892).

Right of railroads to occupy city streets is subject to this paragraph. Atlanta & W. Point R.R. v. Atlanta, Birmingham & Atl. R.R., 125 Ga. 529, 54 S.E. 736 (1906); Athens Term. Co. v. Athens Foundry & Mach. Works, 129 Ga. 393, 58 S.E. 891 (1907).

Right of railroad to obtain grant under Ga. L. 1892, p. 37, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 46-8-100(4)), relating to acquisition of right of way, held valid. Hopkins v. Florida Cent. & Peninsula R.R., 97 Ga. 107, 25 S.E. 452 (1895).

Municipality must obtain consent of chartered railroad before it can open street across carrier's lines. Brunswick & W.R.R. v. Mayor of Waycross, 94 Ga. 102, 21 S.E. 145 (1894); Stowe v. Town of Newborn, 127 Ga. 421, 56 S.E. 516 (1907).

Necessity for condemnation proceedings to subject railroad right of way to public use. — The right of way and tracks of a railroad company cannot be subjected to another and consistent public use, against the consent of the company, except under condemnation proceedings duly authorized. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Haralson County, 230 Ga. 217, 196 S.E.2d 392 (1973).

Company must prove right to erect poles. — To justify a company which uses poles and wires in the transmission of electric currents in setting up its poles in the land of a highway, it must show that it has acquired the right to do so, either by consent or condemnation from the owner of the soil. The designation by the municipality of the street where the poles may be set up is not enough. Donalson v. Georgia Power & Light Co., 175 Ga. 462, 165 S.E. 440 (1932).

Right to assess costs of paving streets. — Assessments of costs of paving a street against abutting land are not an exercise of the right of eminent domain. Speer v. Mayor of Athens, 85 Ga. 49, 11 S.E. 802 (1890); Georgia Ry. & Elec. Co. v. City of Atlanta, 144 Ga. 722, 87 S.E. 1058 (1916); Walthour v. City of Atlanta, 157 Ga. 24, 120 S.E. 613 (1923); City of Bainbridge v. Jester, 157 Ga. 505, 121 S.E. 798 (1924).

A municipal act which provides that abutting and other property and its owner are responsible for the construction cost of sidewalks and other work done which is necessary does not and cannot give the city authority to either take or damage private property without just and adequate compensation. City of East Point v. Allison, 97 Ga. App. 499, 103 S.E.2d 664 (1958).

Cutting down shade trees. — Where shade trees, growing on a strip of land between a sidewalk and a street of the municipality, are located on land which is owned by a person in fee simple, the city has no right to cut down or remove such trees without the consent of the owner, there being no public necessity therefor. City of Marietta v. Mozley, 183 Ga. 875, 190 S.E. 34 (1937).

Condemnation to prevent use as hazardous waste facility constituted bad faith. — County acted in bad faith in instituting condemnation proceedings for obvious purpose of preventing land from being used as hazardous waste facility. Earth Mgt., Inc. v. Heard County, 248 Ga. 442, 283 S.E.2d 455 (1981).

Authority of General Assembly to provide for prepayment. — This paragraph authorizes, but does not require, the General Assembly to provide for prepayment of an estimated amount against adequate compensation as a condition precedent to the exercise of the right of eminent domain and to provide for disbursement of the amount so prepaid to those entitled thereto. State Hwy. Dep't v. Smith, 219 Ga. 800, 136 S.E.2d 334 (1964).

Right of Department of Transportation to cancel landowner's contract with telegraph company. — When telegraph company has a contract with the owner whereby it is entitled to establish and maintain its equipment upon the land involved, and the State Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) has knowledge thereof, and its title is expressly made subject thereto, it cannot exercise an option in the contract agreement to cancel it, by canceling a part but not all, and take or damage property therein without first paying therefor. State Hwy. Dep't v. Western Union Tel. Co., 218 Ga. 663, 129 S.E.2d 872 (1963).

Constitutional requirement of compensation not obliterated by federal petroleum marketing practices statute. — The Federal Petroleum Marketing Practices Act, (15 U.S.C. § 2801 et seq.), which regulates petroleum franchise and marketing practices, and which requires that the franchisor “fairly apportion” between itself and a dealer any recovery “if received” by the franchisor for loss of business, concerns franchise and marketing rights only and does not touch upon or obliterate the state constitutional requirement that just and adequate compensation be paid to any condemnee for a property interest, including a leasehold interest. Simmerman v. DOT, 167 Ga. App. 383, 307 S.E.2d 4 (1983).

The Department of Transportation may not exercise eminent domain powers over municipally owned property as the legislature has not clearly granted such authority or created a procedure therefor, and as such grant may not be implied from statutory provisions generally establishing a procedure for state agencies to condemn “private property.” DOT v. City of Atlanta, 255 Ga. 124, 337 S.E.2d 327 (1985).

County’s use of power to prevent city’s treatment facility improper. — Use of the condemnation process by a county is not within its power and amounts to acting in bad faith when the true reason for the county’s condemnation was to prevent the construction of a public sewage-treatment facility by a local city. Carroll County v. City of Bremen, 256 Ga. 281, 347 S.E.2d 598 (1986).

Impairment shared by general public. — Reconstruction of a highway which reduced visibility of landowner’s billboard to traffic did not constitute an unconstitutional taking of property because the impairment was shared by the public in general and was not compensable. Moreton Rolleston, Jr. Living Trust v. DOT, 242 Ga. App. 835, 531 S.E.2d 719 (2000).

Survey part of power of eminent domain. — Power company was properly granted declaratory relief and an injunction was properly granted against the property owners who would not permit the power company access to their land to conduct surveys for a planned electrical transmission line because the power company, as the condemning body, had the right to survey and the property owners’ express refusal to allow access presented an actual risk of a breach of the peace that was alleviated by the entry of the declaratory judgment. Bearden v. Ga. Power Co., 262 Ga. App. 550, 586 S.E.2d 10 (2003).

Liability of Counties and Other Governmental Entities

Doctrine of sovereign immunity is not bar to enforcement of constitutional rights. C.F.I. Constr. Co. v. Board of Regents of Univ. Sys., 145 Ga. App. 471, 243 S.E.2d 700, cert. dismissed, 242 Ga. 96, 249 S.E.2d 613 (1978).

Sovereign immunity of Department of Transportation is pierced by constitutional right insofar as required by this paragraph, but no support exists for argument that waiver of sovereign immunity exists for ex contractu action against Department of Transportation which is not predicated upon this paragraph. National Distrib. Co. v. DOT, 157 Ga. App. 789, 278 S.E.2d 648 (1981).

Effect of enlargement of scope of paragraph. — Prior to the adoption of the Constitution of 1877, which enlarged the scope of this paragraph, a county, not being suable at common law, and constituting a political subdivision of the sovereign power, could not be sued for damaging private property for public uses. Bibb County v. Green, 42 Ga. App. 552, 156 S.E. 745 (1931); Felton Farm Co. v. Macon County, 49 Ga. App. 239, 175 S.E. 29 (1934).

County is liable for damage to property under this paragraph. Smith v. Floyd County, 85 Ga. 420, 11 S.E. 850 (1890);

Liability of Counties and Other Governmental Entities (Cont'd)

Harris County v. Brady, 115 Ga. 767, 42 S.E. 71 (1902); Fender v. Lee County, 31 Ga. App. 604, 121 S.E. 843 (1924).

A right of action exists against a county for damaging private property for public uses; the liability of counties for damages in all cases being the actual depreciation in the market value of the premises injured. Bibb County v. Green, 42 Ga. App. 552, 156 S.E. 745 (1931).

When right of action arises against county. — When private property is taken or damaged by the authorities of a county, or by their duly authorized servant, for the use of the public, without just compensation being first paid, a right of action arises in favor of the owner of the property, which may be enforced by suit against the county, and the owner is entitled to recover adequate compensation for the property taken or damaged. State Hwy. Bd. v. Ward, 42 Ga. App. 220, 155 S.E. 384 (1930); Page v. Washington County, 48 Ga. App. 791, 173 S.E. 868 (1934).

County enjoyed immunity from negligence and nuisance claims. — Because a county enjoyed sovereign immunity from a pedestrian's negligence and nuisance claims asserted in a personal injury action against the county for its alleged failure to maintain a water meter cover, the trial court properly dismissed the claims; however, a personal injury for purposes of inverse condemnation did not constitute personal property that could be taken. Rutherford v. DeKalb County, 287 Ga. App. 366, 651 S.E.2d 771 (2007).

Installation of competing water system by county. — A county that installs a competing water system is not required to compensate a private water system owner for property loss of its business with customers under the taking clause of the Georgia Constitution when the owner has neither an exclusive franchise to supply water nor a non-compete agreement with the county. Amos Plumbing & Elec. Co. v. Bennett, 261 Ga. 810, 411 S.E.2d 490 (1992).

Constitution provides for waiver of sovereign immunity. — While, as a general rule, a county is not liable to suit unless there is a law which in express terms or by necessary implication so declares, yet the appropriate law may be found in this paragraph. Page v. Washington County, 48 Ga. App. 791, 173 S.E. 868 (1934); Gwinnett County v. Allen, 56 Ga. App. 753, 194 S.E. 38 (1937).

Nuisance suits for injunction and damages can be maintained against a county under this paragraph. Therefore, the Constitution provides for a waiver of sovereign immunity when a county creates a nuisance which amounts to an inverse condemnation. Duffield v. DeKalb County, 242 Ga. 432, 249 S.E.2d 235 (1978).

Taking is prerequisite to waiver of sovereign immunity — While this paragraph can be a waiver of sovereign immunity in certain cases involving public works construction contracts, it is not considered to be a waiver unless there has first been a taking. C.W. Matthews Contracting Co. v. DOT, 160 Ga. App. 265, 286 S.E.2d 756 (1981).

Liability to suit when property damaged by county for a public purpose. — Construing together this paragraph and former Code 1933, § 23-1502 (see now O.C.G.A. § 36-1-4), a right of action was afforded against a county for damage to private property for public uses or taking private property for public uses. Consequently, a county was liable to suit at the instance of an individual for damages to the individual's property done by the county for a public purpose. Taylor v. Richmond County, 185 Ga. 610, 196 S.E. 37, answer conformed to, 57 Ga. App. 586, 196 S.E. 303 (1938).

Right to sue county for damages for the taking or damaging of private property is not dependent on any statute, but arises out of this paragraph which applies to counties as well as to individuals. Brooks County v. Elwell, 63 Ga. App. 308, 11 S.E.2d 82 (1940).

A right of action exists against a county for damaging private property for public uses; the liability of counties for damages to property in all cases being the actual depreciation in the market value of the premises injured. Felton Farm Co. v. Macon County, 49 Ga. App. 239, 175 S.E. 29 (1934).

A county can be held liable to the extent of an injury to property, not on the theory that the county is liable, as are other tort-feasors, for the negligent acts and conduct of its agents while acting within the scope of their authority, but for the reason that it cannot, either with or without the guise of contractual authority, damage the property of another for the public use without just and adequate compensation being paid. Felton Farm Co. v. Macon County, 49 Ga. App. 239, 175 S.E. 29 (1934).

The right of a property owner to recover against a county for damages to the owners' property because of public improvements is by reason of this paragraph. Reid v. Gwinnett County, 242 Ga. 88, 249 S.E.2d 559 (1978).

Lawsuits involving taking or damaging of property under this paragraph may be maintained against counties. Ingram v. Baldwin County, 149 Ga. App. 422, 254 S.E.2d 429 (1979).

Acts of omission resulting in failure to take. — Because a developer's Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I(a) claim that a county improperly refused to accept subdivision roads rested not on a taking but on an act of omission resulting in a failure to take which had no effect on functionality, no viable claim for inverse condemnation was raised, and the county was entitled to sovereign immunity from the developer's claim. Rabun County v. Mt. Creek Estates, LLC, 280 Ga. 855, 632 S.E.2d 140 (2006).

Under this paragraph, cities, counties, and all other public organizations are all upon an equal footing, and there is no reason for holding a county exempt from suits for acts done by it for objects within its legal competency, when a city, for like acts done within its legal competency, would not be exempt. Richmond County v. Williams, 109 Ga. App. 670, 137 S.E.2d 343 (1964).

Liability for acts of officers and agents. — Municipalities are liable for the acts of their officers, agents, and servants only: (a) in the performance of any function where a statute specifically provides for such liability; (b) for neglect to perform or improper or unskillful performance of their ministerial duties; (c) for the performance of their governmental functions where the same amounts to the taking or damaging of private property for public purposes without first making adequate compensation therefor, or the creation of a nuisance dangerous to the life and health of persons because of its proximity to them in the enjoyment of their property. Stubbs v. City of Macon, 78 Ga. App. 237, 50 S.E.2d 866 (1948).

Liability for property taken by agent. — County liable for property taken by agent acting under general authority of the officer or officers charged with the management of the county affairs and the work of its public roads. Dougherty County v. Tift, 75 Ga. 815 (1885); Mallory v. Morgan County, 131 Ga. 271, 62 S.E. 179 (1908); Elbert County v. Brown, 16 Ga. App. 834, 86 S.E. 651 (1915).

County liable at suit of owner of equitable title, though project later abandoned. Fender v. Lee County, 31 Ga. App. 604, 121 S.E. 843 (1924).

County may levy tax to pay for liability. — A county may be held liable for a diminution in the value of land resulting from the alteration and relocation of a public road passing through it, and the county authorities may lawfully levy a tax to pay such liability. Hall County v. Smith, 178 Ga. 212, 172 S.E. 645 (1934).

Effect of damage by Department of Transportation upon county's liability. — A county is liable for the taking or damaging of private property for public purposes under this paragraph, and the fact that the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) did the alleged damage during a time it was sought by legislative action to relieve counties from furnishing rights of way does not affect the liability in such circumstances. Gwinnett County v. Allen, 56 Ga. App. 753, 194 S.E. 38 (1937).

Effect of prior decisions upon ability of citizen to sue state itself. — Whether or not this paragraph has the effect of giving to a citizen the right to sue the state itself in its sovereign capacity for such a claim is not determined by those cases recognizing such a right of suit against the State Highway Board (now State Transportation Board) counties and municipalities, as political divisions of the state sovereignty; since in those cases the question turned, not on whether the sovereignty was suable without its consent, but on whether it had given its constitutional or legislative consent to be thus sued. Florida State Hosp. for the Insane v. Durham Iron Co., 194 Ga. 350, 21 S.E.2d 216 (1942).

Liability of Counties and Other Governmental Entities (Cont'd)

Right of contractor to sue state. — Sovereign immunity notwithstanding, a contractor has the right to sue the state under this paragraph to collect for labor and materials which the contractor has supplied and which the state has accepted and retained. Fonda Corp. v. Department of Human Resources, 147 Ga. App. 226, 248 S.E.2d 528 (1978).

Post-construction non-nuisance damage. — As a matter of law, the post-construction non-nuisance damage done to private property by a single malfunction in the operation of a public works project is not damage which has been done for a “public purpose” within the meaning of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I. Desprint Servs., Inc. v. DeKalb County, 188 Ga. App. 218, 372 S.E.2d 488 (1988).

Private property which was flooded as the result of a burst water main, which had been equipped with a new “butterfly” valve in connection with a road construction project undertaken a few weeks earlier by a county was not damaged for the “public purpose” of actually constructing any public works project within the meaning of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I. Desprint Servs., Inc. v. DeKalb County, 188 Ga. App. 218, 372 S.E.2d 488 (1988).

Inverse condemnation claim against city failed as matter of law. — Plaintiffs asserted an inverse condemnation claim, alleging that damage to their property caused by a city’s proposed construction of sidewalks deprived the plaintiffs of property without due process in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I(a). This claim failed as a matter of law because the city never began construction on the proposed sidewalk installation project and the city did not interfere with the plaintiffs’ right to use their property. Bailey v. City of Atlanta, 296 Ga. App. 679, 675 S.E.2d 564 (2009).

What is Compensable1. In General

Prior to the Constitution of 1877 there was no law governing the damaging of property. City of Atlanta v. Green, 67 Ga. 386 (1881); Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. Mayor of Union Point, 119 Ga. 809, 47 S.E. 183 (1904).

If private property is taken or damaged, even by prudent and proper exercise of power conferred by statute, the owner is entitled to just compensation. City Council v. Lamar, 37 Ga. App. 418, 140 S.E. 763 (1927); Bibb County v. Green, 42 Ga. App. 552, 156 S.E. 745 (1931); Felton Farm Co. v. Macon County, 49 Ga. App. 239, 175 S.E. 29 (1934); Felton v. State Hwy. Bd., 51 Ga. App. 930, 181 S.E. 506 (1935); Dougherty County v. Hornsby, 94 Ga. App. 689, 96 S.E.2d 326 (1956), aff’d in part and rev’d in part, 213 Ga. 114, 97 S.E.2d 300 (1957); Johnson v. Burke County, 101 Ga. App. 747, 115 S.E.2d 484 (1960).

Damages for depreciation of property resulting from physical damage to it are clearly recoverable. Richmond County v. Williams, 109 Ga. App. 670, 137 S.E.2d 343 (1964).

Test usually prescribed is whether a private person who committed the same act would be liable for damages. Peel v. City of Atlanta, 85 Ga. 138, 11 S.E. 582 (1890); Howard v. Bibb County, 127 Ga. 291, 56 S.E. 418 (1907).

Benefit to the public is unnecessary. Fender v. Lee County, 31 Ga. App. 604, 121 S.E. 843 (1924).

Taking of property for which compensation must be first paid does not require actual physical taking, but may consist in an interference with the rights of ownership, use, and enjoyment, or any other right incident to property. Woodside v. City of Atlanta, 214 Ga. 75, 103 S.E.2d 108 (1958).

Actual damage sustained regardless of whether property taken. — Whether the property is taken or not, if it is damaged by the construction or operation of improvements made for the use of the public, its owner can recover whatever damage it has actually sustained. Franklin v. City of Atlanta, 40 Ga. App. 319, 149 S.E. 326 (1929).

Damage need not be caused by acts amounting to trespass. — The damages that an individual may recover for injuries to the individual's property need not necessarily be caused by acts amounting to a trespass, or by an actual, physical invasion of the individual's real estate, but, if the individual's property be depreciated in value by the individual's being deprived of some right of use or enjoyment growing out of and appurtenant to the estate as the direct consequence of the construction and use of any public improvement, the individual's right of action is complete, and the individual may recover to the extent of the injury sustained. Dougherty County v. Hornsby, 213 Ga. 114, 97 S.E.2d 300 (1957); Johnson v. Burke County, 101 Ga. App. 747, 115 S.E.2d 484 (1960).

Consequential damage to property is a "taking" entitling owner to compensation. Wright v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 248 Ga. 372, 283 S.E.2d 466 (1981).

Damages must be special to warrant recovery. — To entitle the plaintiff to recover under this provision the damage alleged to have been sustained must have been special, and not participated in by the general public, and the sole measure of the damage is the difference between the market value of the property before the track was relocated and the value thereof after the track was relocated. Southern Ry. v. Leonard, 58 Ga. App. 574, 199 S.E. 433 (1938).

In all cases, to warrant a recovery it must appear there has been some direct physical disturbance of a right, either public or private, which the plaintiff enjoys in connection with the plaintiff's property, and which gives to it an additional value; and that by reason of such disturbance the plaintiff has sustained a special damage with respect to the property, in excess of that sustained by the public generally. Dougherty County v. Hornsby, 213 Ga. 114, 97 S.E.2d 300 (1957); Johnson v. Burke County, 101 Ga. App. 747, 115 S.E.2d 484 (1960).

The rights of plaintiffs fall into two categories: general rights, which they have in common with the public; and special rights, which they hold by virtue of their ownership of property. In order to constitute a taking or damaging of their property, it is the special rights that must have been violated. Tift County v. Smith, 219 Ga. 68, 131 S.E.2d 527 (1963).

Damage suffered by condemnee which is different from that suffered by general public in degree only, and not in kind, is not compensable or recoverable. Dougherty County v. Snelling, 132 Ga. App. 540, 208 S.E.2d 362 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Zuber Lumber Co. v. City of Atlanta, 237 Ga. 358, 227 S.E.2d 362 (1976).

"Public purpose" synonymous with "public use." — In order to be compensable under this paragraph the damage to a person's property must have been for a "public purpose" and the words "for public purpose" have been construed as synonymous with "public use." Johnson v. City of Atlanta, 117 Ga. App. 586, 161 S.E.2d 399 (1968).

If an incident causing damage is for a "public purpose," which is synonymous with "public use," it amounts to a taking without just and adequate compensation being first paid if the city takes private property without first paying for it. Pair Dev. Co. v. City of Atlanta, 144 Ga. App. 239, 240 S.E.2d 897 (1977).

Meaning of term "damage." — Property is damaged in the sense of this paragraph when there is some physical interference with a right of use appertaining to the property. City of Atlanta v. Dinkins, 46 Ga. App. 19, 166 S.E. 429 (1932); McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

Condemnee is, under this paragraph, entitled to just compensation for every species of property taken or damaged, real or personal, corporeal or incorporeal. Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966).

It is not necessary for petitioner to show actual physical taking of the petitioner's land; any interference with any of the petitioner's property rights therein is a taking of the petitioner's land within the inhibition of this paragraph. Denson v. Chattooga County, 99 Ga. App.

What is Compensable (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

234, 108 S.E.2d 155 (1959).

Right to damages for inverse condemnation. — The property owner has a right to seek damages against a public authority when such public authority is engaging in some form of inverse condemnation. Downside Risk, Inc. v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 156 Ga. App. 209, 274 S.E.2d 653 (1980).

If a public authority does not proceed directly to condemn, the injured citizen nonetheless has a right to compensation under the state Constitution. A cause of action for “inverse condemnation” will lie. Powell v. Ledbetter Bros., 251 Ga. 649, 307 S.E.2d 663 (1983).

Farmers’ inverse condemnation count alleging that a city damaged their land by spreading sewer sludge on the land with toxic elements in concentrations high enough to be considered hazardous waste was properly dismissed as the farmers consented to the city’s spreading of sewer sludge on their land. McElmurray v. Augusta-Richmond County, 274 Ga. App. 605, 618 S.E.2d 59 (2005).

It was error to award a developer damages on its inverse condemnation claim because the developer had not shown a compensable taking. Although there was a delay in developing the six lots at issue, the developer was not prevented from marketing and developing its subdivision or from making other uses of the six lots; all required approvals had occurred for the six lots; and the six lots had maintained their value. Prime Home Props., LLC v. Rockdale County Bd. of Health, 290 Ga. App. 698, 660 S.E.2d 44 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1330, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 685 (Ga. 2008).

Condemnor cannot immunize itself from paragraph. — A condemnor cannot immunize itself from its constitutional obligation to pay compensation for the taking or damaging of property done pursuant to the power of eminent domain. Fulton County v. Woodside, 223 Ga. 316, 155 S.E.2d 404 (1967).

This paragraph applies when private property is taken or damaged for public use by State Highway Board without just compensation being first paid; and in such a case a right of action arises in favor of the owner of the property, which may be enforced by suit against the State Highway Board. State Hwy. Bd. v. Ward, 42 Ga. App. 220, 155 S.E. 384 (1930).

(now State Transportation Board)

Under its power and discretion in the location, construction, and maintenance of state-aid roads, the State Highway Board (now State Transportation Board) cannot deprive the owners of land abutting thereon of their easement of access without first paying to such owners just and adequate compensation therefor. Dougherty County v. Hornsby, 213 Ga. 114, 97 S.E.2d 300 (1957).

Liability exists when work done by independent contractor. — The liability of the defendant city, under this paragraph, to pay for damage to private property resulting from public works is primary and absolute, and it is immaterial that the work may have been done by an independent contractor. City of Atlanta v. Kenny, 83 Ga. App. 823, 64 S.E.2d 912 (1951).

Whether former Code 1933, §§ 51-2-4 and 51-2-5 were exhaustive as to exceptions to the rule of nonliability of an employer for the acts of an independent contractor, they must yield to and cannot control the constitutional duty imposed upon a condemnor to pay compensation for the taking or damaging of private property for public purposes whether or not such taking or damaging was done by an independent contractor hired by the condemnor. Fulton County v. Woodside, 223 Ga. 316, 155 S.E.2d 404 (1967).

Joint liability for erection of utility poles in railroad right of way. — The power, telephone, and telegraph companies all have the power of eminent domain and could exercise that power to acquire the right to erect their lines upon the railroad’s right of way. That they choose to acquire by contract such right, as against the railroad, does not render the railroad company liable for their alleged failure also to compensate the plaintiff for the taking or damaging of plaintiff’s property by their erection of power and communication lines on the railroad’s right of way.

Tompkins v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 89 Ga. App. 171, 79 S.E.2d 41 (1953).

Joint liability of county and State Transportation Board. — When a county and the State Highway Board (now State Transportation Board) joined in damaging private property for the use of the public without first paying adequate compensation, a right of action arose in favor of the owner of the property, and the owner could have brought a joint action against the county and the State Highway Board (now State Transportation Board). State Hwy. Bd. v. Ward, 42 Ga. App. 220, 155 S.E. 384 (1930).

Applicability to cutting trees. — When certain trees growing on a space between a sidewalk and street of the defendant municipality were, according to the allegations of the petition (which, on demurrer, must be taken as true), situated and growing on land owned by plaintiff in fee simple, and when such trees were, according to the allegations of the petition, cut down and removed by the municipality without the consent of the owner, a prima-facie right of action arose in the owner's favor for the damage thus sustained. Baldwin v. City of Dawson, 41 Ga. App. 90, 151 S.E. 825 (1930).

Applicability to taking for public street purposes. — Payment of just and adequate compensation therefor must always precede the taking of private property, for public street purposes, by a municipal corporation. Harrison v. City of East Point, 208 Ga. 692, 69 S.E.2d 85 (1952).

Denial of building permit because of planned condemnation. — When the sole reason for the city's denial of a property owner's permit application for a 14,000 sq. ft. building was its determination that an announced taking would eliminate the parking spaces necessary to accommodate the building, the owner was entitled to compensation, upon proper proof, for the difference between the building the owner could have built but for the direct result of the condemnation and the building the owner was limited to as a direct consequence of the taking, which measured only 10,400 sq. ft. Lee v. DOT, 191 Ga. App. 1, 380 S.E.2d 726 (1989).

Must show county authorities responsible. — While this paragraph declares that private property shall not be taken or damaged for public use without just compensation, the taking or damaging referred to must be by some authority empowered by law to do those acts; and before a recovery can be had against a county for taking or damaging private property, it must be shown that the proper authorities of the county were responsible for the taking or damaging, or that they ratified it after the property was so taken or damaged. McGhee v. Floyd County, 95 Ga. App. 221, 97 S.E.2d 529 (1957).

Renovation expenses not recoverable as relocation expenses. — When there was evidence of expenses incurred in an extensive renovation of the new premises to which a medical practice had been moved after condemnation, these renovation expenses were not recoverable as relocation expenses by either the doctor or the doctor's corporation and in charging the jury that it could award relocation expenses in an amount such that a condemnee "would be in substantially the same position he was in prior to the taking of his property," the superior court may have fostered the erroneous impression that all or a portion of the nonrecoverable renovation cost could be awarded as recoverable relocation expenses, warranting a new trial. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth. v. Funk, 263 Ga. 385, 435 S.E.2d 196 (1993).

2. Exercise of Police Power

Compensation not required upon exercise of police power. — The provisions of the Constitution of Georgia, prohibiting the taking of private property for a public purpose without compensation, have no relevance to the exercise of the police power by the state or the state's political subdivisions. Lewis v. DeKalb County, 251 Ga. 100, 303 S.E.2d 112 (1983) (decided under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I).

Trial court properly dismissed an insurance company's suit for inverse condemnation against a county because the insured's home was damaged during the exercise of police power and, thus, did not fall within the waiver of sovereign immunity set forth in Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e). Amica Mut. Ins. Co. v.

What is Compensable (Cont'd)2. Exercise of Police Power (Cont'd)

Gwinnett County Police Dep't, 319 Ga. App. 780, 738 S.E.2d 622 (2013).

Distinction between use of eminent domain and use of police power is that the former involves the taking of property because it is needed for public use while the latter involves the regulation of the property to prevent its use in a manner detrimental to the public interest. Pope v. City of Atlanta, 242 Ga. 331, 249 S.E.2d 16 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 936, 99 S. Ct. 1281, 59 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1979).

The police power or the law of overruling necessity is not controlled by this paragraph which was not designed for, and should not be extended to, such cases. McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

Municipality may take under police power without paying compensation.

— Under certain circumstances and conditions, a municipality may, acting under its police power for the general welfare of the public, take or use the property of a person or corporation without paying compensation therefor. McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

No liability for prosecution of crimes. — The safeguarding of society by the prosecution of crimes against it is a sovereign attribute inherent in all governments, and for mistakes in exercising this sovereign right there can be no liability against the government without its consent. McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

Uncompensated obedience to regulation enacted for public safety under police power of state is not taking or damaging without just compensation of private property, or of private property affected with a public interest. McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

Loss suffered from exercise of police power is damnum absque injuria; therefore, an appeal for compensation must be to the public authority, and not to the courts. McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

At common law, state might destroy buildings in effort to stop spread of conflagration under its police power, and the owner was entitled to no compensation. A statutory provision for payment, however, may be provided. McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

Damages suffered in hunt for murder victim uncompensable. — A suit by the owner for damages to realty occasioned by the law enforcement officers of the state and a county in seeking to locate the body of a murder victim cannot be maintained against the state or the county; the action of the officers was under and pursuant to the police power of the state and its political subdivision. McCoy v. Sanders, 113 Ga. App. 565, 148 S.E.2d 902 (1966).

Damage to private car used in police search not compensable. — In a suit against a county seeking a judgment for damage and loss of use of plaintiff's vehicle occurring while the plaintiff was serving as a volunteer member of the county Emergency Management Team, which was assisting the sheriff's office in a nighttime search for a weapon involved in a crime, even if there were a factual issue as to the taking of plaintiff's vehicle, since the right was pursuant to the state's police powers, the plaintiff could not be compensated for it as a matter of law. Bray v. Houston County, 180 Ga. App. 166, 348 S.E.2d 709 (1986).

3. Commercial Losses

Damages can be awarded without showing of loss of profit. — Damages for loss of business can be awarded without a showing of loss of profit, provided the loss is not remote or speculative. DOT v. Hillside Motors, Inc., 192 Ga. App. 637, 385 S.E.2d 746, cert. denied, 192 Ga. App. 901, 385 S.E.2d 746 (1989).

Condemnee has right of compensation for damages to the condemnee's business and expenses incident to removing it to a new location which directly resulted from condemnation proceedings. Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966).

Moving merchandise. — In a condemnation case when the condemnee is engaged in a business where merchandise is kept on the property being condemned, the jury may consider the cost of removing such merchandise, not as a separate item of recovery, but as a factor which may illustrate just and adequate compensation. State Hwy. Dep't v. Robinson, 103 Ga. App. 12, 118 S.E.2d 289 (1961).

Condemned property must have uniqueness for business. — This paragraph creates a highly practical presumption which says that, as a matter of law, business losses cannot be attributed to condemnation unless the property had some uniqueness for the business. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth. v. Ply-Marts, Inc., 144 Ga. App. 482, 241 S.E.2d 599 (1978).

Mere business losses when property not unique for business not compensable. — In the absence of a showing of a special or unique value to the owner, mere business losses caused by a partial taking of the land on which a business is located are not a separate element for compensation. Evidence of such losses may be submitted to a jury only to help establish the market value of property taken. Southwire Co. v. DOT, 147 Ga. App. 606, 249 S.E.2d 650 (1978).

Must be separate item of recovery. — In a condemnation proceeding, the destruction of an established business is and must be a separate item of recovery. Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966).

4. Interference with Right of Ingress and Egress

Interfering with access compensable. — Interfering with access to premises by impeding or rendering difficult ingress or egress, is such taking and damaging as entitles the party injured to compensation under a provision for compensation when property is damaged. Dougherty County v. Hornsby, 213 Ga. 114, 97 S.E.2d 300 (1957); Johnson v. Burke County, 101 Ga. App. 747, 115 S.E.2d 484 (1960); Clayton County v. Billups E. Petro. Co., 104 Ga. App. 778, 123 S.E.2d 187 (1961); Downside Risk, Inc. v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 156 Ga. App. 209, 274 S.E.2d 653 (1980).

A right of ingress or egress to property may constitute an easement, the impairment of which will render the actor liable for damaging the property although there has been no taking of the property itself. Mayor of Athens v. Gamma Delta Chapter House Corp., 86 Ga. App. 53, 70 S.E.2d 621 (1952).

The State Highway Board (now State Transportation Board) cannot deprive the owners of abutting land of their easement of access without paying to such owners adequate and just compensation therefor. Johnson v. Burke County, 101 Ga. App. 747, 115 S.E.2d 484 (1960).

When the plaintiff had enjoyed practically unlimited ingress and egress for almost seven years, conversion of the highway from an unlimited to a limited access one constituted a taking or damaging of private property for public purposes. Clayton County v. Billups E. Petro. Co., 104 Ga. App. 778, 123 S.E.2d 187 (1961).

When a right of way for a limited access road is duly condemned the right of the property owner, through whose lands it passes and divides, to go upon or across such highway is lost. Before such right is taken from the owner the stern mandate of this paragraph must be obeyed. One of the pertinent issues in the condemnation of the right of way for a limited access highway is the value of this very right of access, the right to go upon and across the proposed highway. State Hwy. Dep't v. Lumpkin, 222 Ga. 727, 152 S.E.2d 557 (1966).

Every owner of property which abuts upon a street has a property right in the street, as an easement for the purpose of access to the owner's premises, and a deprivation of this private right is prima facie, in the absence of proof of compensation, contrary to law. Franklin v. City of Atlanta, 40 Ga. App. 319, 149 S.E. 326 (1929).

Easement of access belonging to owners of land abutting upon a highway is a property right, of which the landowner cannot be deprived upon the ground that the safety of the public traveling upon the highway may be endangered by the exercise of this easement by the abutting landowner, without just and adequate compensation being first paid to the owner. Dougherty County v. Hornsby, 213 Ga. 114, 97 S.E.2d 300 (1957).

What is Compensable (Cont'd)4. Interference with Right of Ingress and Egress (Cont'd)

Owners of property which abuts a public road have the right to the use and enjoyment of such road in common with all other members of the public, as well as other rights such as ingress and egress which do not belong to the public generally, and these rights exist regardless of whether the fee of the highway is in such owners or not. State Hwy. Dep't v. Lumpkin, 222 Ga. 727, 152 S.E.2d 557 (1966).

The right of access, or easement of access, to a public road is a property right which arises from the ownership of land contiguous to a public road, and the landowner cannot be deprived of this right without just and adequate compensation being first paid. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth. v. Datry, 235 Ga. 568, 220 S.E.2d 905 (1975).

To go upon and across the public road is one of the fundamental rights which belong to abutting landowners. State Hwy. Dep't v. Lumpkin, 222 Ga. 727, 152 S.E.2d 557 (1966).

One of the rights of a landowner is to pass across a highway from one tract or parcel of the owner's land to another situated on opposite side. State Hwy. Dep't v. Lumpkin, 222 Ga. 727, 152 S.E.2d 557 (1966).

Owner not entitled to access at all points along highway. — Although the owner of land abutting upon a highway has the right to use and enjoy the highway in common with other members of the public and has an easement of access to the land abutting upon the highway, which easement of access does not belong to the public generally and which exists whether or not the fee of the highway is in the landowner or not, such owner, however, is not entitled, as against the public, to access to the owner's land at all points in the boundary between it and the highway, if the entire access has not been cut off, and if the owner is offered a convenient access to the owner's property and to improvements thereon, and the owner's means of ingress and egress are not substantially interfered with by the public.

Johnson v. Burke County, 101 Ga. App. 747, 115 S.E.2d 484 (1960).

Rights of owner whose property does not abut on street changed. — If the property is situated within the block in which the change of the street takes place, and a usual, direct, and immediate means of access thereto or egress therefrom is thereby materially impaired or done away with, the property owner may recover of the municipality, although the owner's property does not abut on the street changed. City of Atlanta v. Dinkins, 46 Ga. App. 19, 166 S.E. 429 (1932).

Temporary obstruction is not a taking or damaging of property by eminent domain under this paragraph, and the temporary obstruction of right of ingress and egress does not deprive one of one's private property. Downside Risk, Inc. v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 156 Ga. App. 209, 274 S.E.2d 653 (1980).

Making road one-way. — City was properly granted summary judgment in an inverse condemnation suit because its change making a road a one-way street did not disturb the direct vehicular access existing from the owners' land to the abutting street; thus, there was no compensable taking, despite the fact that access was less convenient. Hanson v. City of Roswell, 262 Ga. App. 671, 586 S.E.2d 341 (2003).

5. Construction of Jail or Prison

This paragraph is not violated by erection of prison by the municipal authorities of a city within the limits thereof. Long v. City of Elberton, 109 Ga. 28, 34 S.E. 333 (1899).

Depreciation in property value caused by erection of police barracks or bail in vicinity of a residential area is damnum absque injuria. Evans v. Just Open Gov't, 242 Ga. 834, 251 S.E.2d 546 (1979).

Equity will not enjoin erection of county jail. Bacon v. Walker, 77 Ga. 336 (1886).

No injunction when no property taken. — The Supreme Court will not by interlocutory injunction interfere with the erection of a public work in which no part of the property of the citizen complainant is actually taken. Evans v. Just Open Gov't, 242 Ga. 834, 251 S.E.2d 546 (1979).

6. Interference with Rights of Lessors and Lessees

Holder of rent contract has compensable interest. — The holder of a valid rent contract for realty, though it be for a period of less than five years, has a property right in the leased premises, which is protected by this paragraph; and this is true whether the leasehold interest be taken or damaged by a county, a municipal corporation, or any other public organization. Waters v. DeKalb County, 208 Ga. 741, 69 S.E.2d 274 (1952).

Lessee has compensable damages when the lessee entered into a renewal lease after taking by eminent domain but before the original lease expired. Ellis v. DOT, 175 Ga. App. 123, 333 S.E.2d 6 (1985).

Termination of a leasehold interest by condemnation is a compensable taking. — Obviously a lessor, for the lessor's protection, may put in the lessor's lease a clause providing that as between the parties the lease is terminated in the event of condemnation, but this does not control Georgia law on the subject of compensability from the condemnor. Simmerman v. DOT, 167 Ga. App. 383, 307 S.E.2d 4 (1983) (on motion for rehearing).

Leasehold interest in premises for definite term is property, within meaning of that word as it is employed in this paragraph. Ammons v. Central of Ga. Ry., 215 Ga. 758, 113 S.E.2d 438 (1960).

A tenant, although the tenant has no estate in the land, is the owner of its use for the term of the tenant's rent contract, and can recover damages for any injury to such use resulting from the construction of a duly authorized public improvement. Waters v. DeKalb County, 208 Ga. 741, 69 S.E.2d 274 (1952).

Power of lessee to obtain injunction. — The holder of a leasehold or usufructuary interest in land is entitled to enjoin the taking or damaging of the holder's leasehold interest without just and adequate compensation being first paid. State Hwy. Dep't v. Western Union Tel. Co., 218 Ga. 663, 129 S.E.2d 872 (1963).

Factors not necessary for lessee to establish to obtain compensation. — The "just and adequate" provision of this paragraph requires that property be neither taken nor damaged without just and adequate compensation. A taking of the fixtures and inventory of the lessee need not therefore be established, nor does it preclude a recovery either that all the leased premises were not taken or that the lessee had not exercised the option to purchase at the time. DeKalb County v. Fulton Nat'l Bank, 156 Ga. App. 253, 274 S.E.2d 649 (1980).

Diminished rental value for any purpose is no basis for compensation except as to its result, if any, on the general value. Southern Ry. v. Leonard, 58 Ga. App. 574, 199 S.E. 433 (1938).

7. Creation of Nuisance

Municipality liable for creation of nuisance. — A municipality, whether exercising its governmental or its ministerial functions, is liable for creating a nuisance which damages property and also hazards health. Duffield v. DeKalb County, 242 Ga. 432, 249 S.E.2d 235 (1978).

A county, unlike a municipality, is not generally liable for creating nuisances. Duffield v. DeKalb County, 242 Ga. 432, 249 S.E.2d 235 (1978).

Summary judgment was properly granted to a county on an inverse condemnation claim filed by four property owners as the county did not either create or maintain a construction project that allegedly created a nuisance that harmed the owners since a city owned and maintained the nuisance property, the county exercised no control over the properties, and the county could not be deemed to have performed a continuous act that caused the owners' harm; while the county bid out the construction contract, it had no role in designing the plans for the contractor to use on the project or in supervising the contractor's work and the owners did not show that the county official performed any action beyond passing on an inquiry between the Georgia Department of Transportation and the city. Reidling v. City of Gainesville, 280 Ga. App. 698, 634 S.E.2d 862 (2006).

What is Compensable (Cont'd)
7. Creation of Nuisance (Cont'd)

If a county causes a nuisance to exist which amounts to a taking of property of one of its citizens for public purposes, the county is liable. Miree v. United States, 242 Ga. 126, 249 S.E.2d 573 (1978).

Whatever is done by authority of law, if done as law directs or authorizes, is not a nuisance. Perkerson v. Mayor of Greenville, 51 Ga. App. 240, 180 S.E. 22 (1935).

Constitutional basis for recovery for maintenance of continuing nuisance. — When the public authorities properly erect and properly maintain the improvements authorized by law, an action in tort is not maintainable by the owner of damaged property. In such a case, the only right of action maintainable is that conferred by this paragraph, and the recovery permitted is strictly limited to the direct damage inflicted by diminishing the market value of the property damaged. Southland Coffee Co. v. City of Macon, 60 Ga. App. 253, 3 S.E.2d 739 (1939).

County liable for diversion of surface water. — The continuous channeling of surface water across property to its damage, amounts to the taking of an easement over the lands, and is in contemplation of this paragraph. Sheehan v. Richmond County, 100 Ga. App. 496, 111 S.E.2d 924 (1959).

When a county maintains a continuing nuisance by diverting surface water which causes damage to property, a claim arises in favor of the property owner each time such flooding, siltation, pollution, or other damage occurs, and upon giving the 12-months notice required by former Code 1933, § 23-1602 (see now O.C.G.A. § 36-11-1), such property owner is entitled to recover those damages incurred in the 12 months preceding the giving of the notice. Reid v. Gwinnett County, 242 Ga. 88, 249 S.E.2d 559 (1978).

Effect of failure to give notice of continuing nuisance. — A property owner is not barred from recovering for damages for a continuing nuisance, even when notice is not given within 12 months of completion of construction of the roadway. Reid v. Gwinnett County, 242 Ga. 88, 249 S.E.2d 559 (1978).

Liability of Department of Transportation for diversion of surface water. — When the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) so constructs a concrete outlet-trap that a large increase in the volume of surface water is caused to flow upon and damage the plaintiff's property, this constitutes a damaging and taking of private property for public purposes within the purview of this paragraph. Sheehan v. Richmond County, 100 Ga. App. 496, 111 S.E.2d 924 (1959).

Fact that third parties occupy property between highway and plaintiff's property does not affect the plaintiff's right to recover for the damaging and taking of the plaintiff's property. Sheehan v. Richmond County, 100 Ga. App. 496, 111 S.E.2d 924 (1959).

8. Personal Injuries

Citizens may not recover from the state for personal injury suffered as a result of state activity, the theory being that the state may not authorize its agents to cause physical injury to any person for public purposes. Cox Communications, Inc. v. DOT, 256 Ga. 455, 349 S.E.2d 450 (1986).

No property interest in accessing Georgia Port Authority terminal. — Truck driver's claim that the driver was improperly barred from an authority's terminal was properly dismissed because the driver failed to show that the driver had an enforceable property interest for purposes of due process and eminent domain jurisprudence. Gambell v. Ga. Ports Auth., 276 Ga. App. 115, 622 S.E.2d 464 (2005).

County may not be sued under theory of eminent domain in tort action for personal injury when the county would otherwise be authorized to assert its civil immunity. Wilmoth v. Henry County, 251 Ga. 643, 309 S.E.2d 126 (1983).

County is not liable to a father of a minor child injured by negligence of a servant of county in operating a truck, for loss of the services of the child, on the theory that the deprivation of the father of the services is the taking or damaging of property for public use without just compensation, nor would it make any difference that the driver of the truck was employed in repairing a public road. Born v. Fulton County, 51 Ga. App. 537, 181 S.E. 106 (1935).

No liability for dangerously installed water meter. — The paving of a walkway along the outer edge of a city park, but within the park, by the municipality in connection with the installation of automobile parking meters so as to leave a water meter projecting above the surface of the paved walkway in a manner dangerous to pedestrians using the walkway amounts to a governmental function in connection with the construction and maintenance of a city park, and the water meter thus situated is not such a nuisance as amounts to the taking or damaging of private property for public purposes without first making adequate compensation therefor. Stubbs v. City of Macon, 78 Ga. App. 237, 50 S.E.2d 866 (1948).

9. Interference with Riparian Rights

Owner of nonnavigable stream is protected by this paragraph. City of Elberton v. Hobbs, 121 Ga. 750, 49 S.E. 780 (1905); Howard v. County of Bibb, 127 Ga. 291, 56 S.E. 418 (1907).

An owner of land to or through which a nonnavigable stream flows has a right to the flow of the water which is equal to the owners' right to the soil which underlies the stream; such a right comes within this paragraph. Davis v. Cobb County, 61 Ga. App. 712, 7 S.E.2d 324 (1940).

County liable for halting flow of stream. — When a county, grading a road under contract with the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation), hauls dirt one hundred feet from the right of way and dumps it into a spring on land adjoining plaintiffs' and stops up the spring and cuts off a stream which flowed upon and through plaintiffs' property, it is liable in damages for the difference between the value of the plaintiffs' land before and after the stoppage of the flow of water. Davis v. Cobb County, 61 Ga. App. 712, 7 S.E.2d 324 (1940).

Lay opinion testimony on cost to build a bridge. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in excluding, for insufficient foundation, a witness's opinion testimony concerning the cost to build a bridge over a waterway to cure trusts' lost usage after the condemnation of a ford over the waterway because the proffer the trusts made did not demonstrate pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-66 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-7-701) a basis upon which the witness could have formed the witness's own opinion on the cost to build the bridge apart from the single estimate the witness received; the trusts did not proffer that the witness obtained any other estimates concerning the cost to construct the bridge, spoke to anyone else about that cost, or possessed or sought to obtain any other information about that cost or about the accuracy of the estimate the witness had received. Martha K. Wayt Trust v. City of Cumming, 306 Ga. App. 790, 702 S.E.2d 915 (2010).

Evidence concerning the value of stream mitigation credits inadmissible. — Trial court did not err in excluding, as a component of the market value of condemned property, evidence concerning the value of stream mitigation credits that trusts intended to sell in connection with the condemned property because the trusts failed to show how the value of stream mitigation credits was relevant to the sole issue of just and adequate compensation when at the time of the taking, the proposed stream mitigation bank had not yet been created on the condemned property, and no stream mitigation credits had been awarded; no evidence was presented to show that the proposed future use of the property as a stream mitigation bank, or the value of stream mitigation credits it could have generated, had an effect on market value. Martha K. Wayt Trust v. City of Cumming, 306 Ga. App. 790, 702 S.E.2d 915 (2010).

10. Damage from Road Construction or Improvement

Lawful taking which results in damages. — When the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) does what it has right under law to do, but, still damages plaintiff, the Highway Board (now State Transportation Board) is bound to make compensation. Felton v.

What is Compensable (Cont'd)10. Damage from Road Construction or Improvement (Cont'd)

State Hwy. Bd., 51 Ga. App. 930, 181 S.E. 506 (1935).

Homeowner may sue for direct physical damage. — When there has been direct physical damage to the plaintiff's home resulting from the construction of a highway, a county may be sued therefor under this paragraph and it is not necessary to support the action that any portion of the plaintiff's property be taken or that it abut or touch the highway. Richmond County v. Williams, 109 Ga. App. 670, 137 S.E.2d 343 (1964).

Municipalities liable when grade of street changed. — Under this paragraph, municipal corporations are liable for consequential damages resulting to property owners from raising or lowering the grade of streets. City of Atlanta v. Dinkins, 46 Ga. App. 19, 166 S.E. 429 (1932).

When a change is made by a municipality in the grade of a street, and the market value of real property abutting thereon is thereby decreased, the owner has a cause of action against the municipality. The measure of damages to abutting property is the difference between the market value of the property before and after the change of the grade. Harbour v. City of Rome, 54 Ga. App. 97, 187 S.E. 231 (1936), aff'd, 184 Ga. 37, 190 S.E. 364 (1937).

City only indirectly liable for work done to city street by county or state highway department. — A contract or resolution by which a city authorizes the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) and a county to use and improve a city street for a state highway is not ultra vires or otherwise illegal, and when damage on account of a decrease in the market value of an adjoining lot results from the grading of a street constituting such a highway, or in the necessary grading or leveling of that portion of a street which joins the highway, the city would not be liable on the theory that it was a joint tort-feasor in directing or participating in a nuisance, but such remedy as would lie would exist by virtue of this paragraph. Perkerson v. Mayor of Greenville, 51 Ga. App. 240, 180 S.E. 22 (1935).

Landowners have no compensable interest in traffic pattern. — Adjoining owners of property or operators of businesses on property adjoining a street or highway have no vested interest in the traffic pattern which controlling authorities may provide for the public street from time to time. If they suffer damage when the pattern is changed it is a damage suffered by members of the general public owning property or operating businesses adjacent to a street or highway, and for which there can be no recovery. Dougherty County v. Snelling, 132 Ga. App. 540, 208 S.E.2d 362 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Zuber Lumber Co. v. City of Atlanta, 237 Ga. 358, 227 S.E.2d 362 (1976).

Closing of road not compensable. — The closing of a road abutting a shopping center at the intersection of the road with a state highway was not a compensable taking of property when the business did not lose access to any abutting roadway and still had access to the highway by traveling about one mile. DOT v. Durpo, 220 Ga. App. 458, 469 S.E.2d 404 (1996).

Creation of obstruction down road not compensable. — The fact that down the road from plaintiff's farm a dead-end obstruction was created so as to constitute a cul-de-sac, causing inconvenience, does not constitute the taking or damaging of private property for a public purpose so as to require compensation. Tift County v. Smith, 219 Ga. 68, 131 S.E.2d 527 (1963).

Joint liability in construction of limited access highway. — While Ga. L. 1955, p. 559 (now repealed) authorizes the cooperation of counties and municipal corporations with the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) for the purpose of establishing limited access highways, there is nothing in the statute or in the law generally which expressly or by implication makes one of the cooperating governmental entities liable for the unilateral tortious acts of another cooperating governmental entity in a project of this type. Madden v. Fulton County, 102 Ga. App. 19, 115 S.E.2d 406 (1960).

Contractual right to traffic signal. — When condemnee had been granted a contractual right in a deed from the Department of Transportation (DOT) to have a signal near its business location which permitted ease of access to its motel and this signalization was part of the bargain for consideration in a condemnation action between the defendant and the DOT, that contractual right could be condemned by DOT; however, the condemnee was entitled to just and adequate compensation therefor and the trial court did not err in charging the jury the condemnee has a special right to turn left from and into a highway. DOT v. Consolidated Equities Corp., 181 Ga. App. 672, 353 S.E.2d 603 (1987).

Loss of leasehold interest. — When claimant sought to recover loss of an advantageous leasehold interest, as well as moving expenses, after a highway project and related condemnation actions had been halted, and claimant had been advised that no move was required before September 1982 and that written notification would precede a required removal, the claimant's decision to move in August 1982 was by voluntary choice and could not be attributed to an interference by the Department of Transportation with its exclusive rights of ownership, use and enjoyment. Whether the claimant's action was characterized as direct or inverse condemnation, the losses claimed did not result from an exercise of eminent domain. Josh Cabaret, Inc. v. DOT, 256 Ga. 749, 353 S.E.2d 346 (1987).

Special damage from temporary construction easement. — If the condemnee can show that the temporary taking of a portion of the condemnee's property for a construction easement caused some special damage to the condemnee's remaining property, other than the general inconvenience, noise, dust, and obstruction caused by the construction process, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I requires that the state pay for any diminished value of the remainder. Hillman v. DOT, 257 Ga. 338, 359 S.E.2d 637 (1987).

No compensation for having to drive more circuitous route to reach property. — A property owner sought compensation for an alleged inverse condemnation of the owner's land and damage to the owner's business following certain bridge closings and construction, which did not directly affect access to the owner's property, nor change the ingress to and egress from the owner's business, but did necessitate driving a more circuitous route to reach the owner's property from certain areas. As the owner alleged only that the owner suffered damage to a greater degree than that of others affected by the bridge closings, the owner was not entitled to compensation. Hendrix v. Department of Transp., 188 Ga. App. 429, 373 S.E.2d 264 (1988).

Testimony regarding lost profits. — In an inverse condemnation action based on a temporary taking of leaseholds in connection with highway construction, it was not permissible for the leaseholder to introduce expert testimony as to the loss of business profits and worth for the purpose of proving the value of the leaseholds. Bill Ledford Motors, Inc. v. DOT, 225 Ga. App. 548, 484 S.E.2d 510 (1997).

11. Construction of Sewer

Damages caused by constructing a sewer through a private lot must be paid. Smith v. City of Atlanta, 92 Ga. 119, 17 S.E. 981 (1893).

When the laying of sewerage pipes on plaintiff's property damaged the plaintiff because of the depreciation of the plaintiff's property as the result of overflow of water from such pipes, the only damages recoverable would be under this paragraph. Lawrence v. City of La Grange, 63 Ga. App. 587, 11 S.E.2d 696 (1940).

Sewer as nuisance. — Even though the construction, installation and maintenance of a sewer-drainage system, including that for surface water, is a governmental function, a municipal corporation can nevertheless be held liable with respect to these activities on the theory of nuisance and on the theory of taking or damaging for public purposes without just and adequate compensation being first paid. Turk v. City of Rome, 133 Ga. App. 886, 212 S.E.2d 459, aff'd, 235 Ga. 223, 219 S.E.2d 97 (1975).

While the power to construct a sewer and drainage system is a governmental function, a county cannot create and maintain such a system as a nuisance which damages private property without subjecting itself to civil liability. Ingram v. Baldwin County, 149 Ga. App. 422, 254 S.E.2d 429 (1979).

What is Compensable (Cont'd)11. Construction of Sewer (Cont'd)

Single instance of backup of county sewage system into private home would not be sufficient to create nuisance for which county liability would attach. Ingram v. Baldwin County, 149 Ga. App. 422, 254 S.E.2d 429 (1979).

12. Effect of Zoning and Land Use Regulations

Zoning is subject to constitutional prohibition against taking private property without just compensation. City of Smyrna v. Ruff, 240 Ga. 250, 240 S.E.2d 19 (1977).

Justification required for zoning classification. — As the individual's right to the unfettered use of the individual's property confronts the police power under which zoning is done, the balance the law strikes is that a zoning classification may only be justified if it bears a substantial relation to the public health, safety, morality, or general welfare. Lacking such justification, the zoning may be set aside as arbitrary or unreasonable. City of Smyrna v. Ruff, 240 Ga. 250, 240 S.E.2d 19 (1977).

Standard for finding regulation confiscatory. — If the zoning regulation results in relatively little gain or benefit to the public while inflicting serious injury or loss on the owner, such regulation is confiscatory and void. City of Smyrna v. Ruff, 240 Ga. 250, 240 S.E.2d 19 (1977).

Mere unlawful attempt to regulate land use not compensable. — An unlawful attempt on the part of the governing authorities to regulate the use of the property of the owner for the owner's own purposes does not constitute a taking within the meaning of this paragraph, and accordingly does not entitle the owner of such property to compensation from the state or its agents, or give the owner any right of action for the injuries sustained. Davis v. Johnson, 92 Ga. App. 858, 90 S.E.2d 426 (1955).

Prevention of future uses not compensable. — The police power of the state to zone property to prevent its use for certain purposes in the future, as distinguished from the taking or damaging in respect to a use already in existence, is not open to question, and does not require the payment of any compensation. National Adv. Co. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 230 Ga. 119, 195 S.E.2d 895 (1973).

Diminution of value resulting from a zoning classification, in and of itself, does not constitute an unconstitutional deprivation. Gradous v. Board of Comm'rs, 256 Ga. 469, 349 S.E.2d 707 (1986).

Denial of an application to rezone lot from residential use to commercial use was not an unconstitutional taking of property without just compensation. Westbrook v. Board of Adjustment, 245 Ga. 15, 262 S.E.2d 785 (1980).

Burden of proof on plaintiff. — The plaintiff has the burden of showing that the zoning under attack is so detrimental to the plaintiff, and so insubstantially related to the public health, safety, morality and welfare, as to amount to an unconstitutional "taking," that is, an arbitrary confiscation of the plaintiff's property without compensation by the governing authority. Hubert Realty Co. v. Cobb County Bd. of Comm'rs, 245 Ga. 236, 264 S.E.2d 179 (1980).

Rezoning properly required. — When on appeal from denial of a rezoning application, the county's evidence was clearly insufficient to justify its contention that the current zoning classification of plaintiff's property promoted the health, safety, morals, or general welfare of the public, and both the county planner and a county commissioner testified that plaintiff's property was ill-suited to its present zoning classification, the trial court did not err in declaring the zoning classification of plaintiff's property to be unconstitutional and in ordering the board of commissioners to rezone it in a constitutional manner. Cobb County v. Shapiro, 251 Ga. 55, 303 S.E.2d 10 (1983).

Rezoning constituting taking. — Rezoning constituted a taking of property when it rendered the property virtually worthless and was done without evaluation of prospective uses for the property, a study of the possible impact of the property owner's use on neighboring property, or consideration of the effect of the rezoning on the value of the property. Bickerstaff Clay Prods. Co. v. Harris County, 89 F.3d 1481 (11th Cir. 1996).

13. Other Losses

Fanciful or speculative damages or sentimental injuries are not elements to be considered as damage to the freehold; neither are results amounting only to inconvenience or discomfort elements of damage in computing to what extent the value of the property has been reduced. Southern Ry. v. Leonard, 58 Ga. App. 574, 199 S.E. 433 (1938).

Inconvenience no basis for compensation. — A present inconvenience or affront to esthetic taste in not having the same view is not a basis for recovery in an action for damage to property as provided against by this paragraph. Brooks County v. Elwell, 63 Ga. App. 308, 11 S.E.2d 82 (1940).

Damage caused by mere temporary inconvenience due to the construction of the project for which the property was taken is not a proper element for consideration in determining just and adequate compensation for condemned realty. If compensable damages to the property is occasioned by the construction process, the remedy is a separate suit for damages. Southwire Co. v. DOT, 147 Ga. App. 606, 249 S.E.2d 650 (1978).

When construction of a public project merely causes personal inconvenience, annoyance, and discomfort to the occupants of property, such property has not been compensably damaged. Downside Risk, Inc. v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 156 Ga. App. 209, 274 S.E.2d 653 (1980).

Increased noise and odors may be compensable. — The term property comprehends not only the thing possessed, but also, in strict legal parlance, means the rights of the owner in relation to land or a thing; the right of a person to possess, use, enjoy, and dispose of it; and the corresponding right to exclude others from the use. Therefore, no physical invasion damaging to the property need be shown; only an unlawful interference with the right of the owner to enjoy the owner's possession; increased noise and odors may result in an inverse condemnation of property by interfering with the use and enjoyment of land and endangering health. Duffield v. DeKalb County, 242 Ga. 432, 249 S.E.2d 235 (1978).

Noise, odors, and smoke are compensable in inverse condemnation. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth. v. Trussell, 247 Ga. 148, 273 S.E.2d 859 (1981).

Special damages must be shown. — Absent a showing of special damages, that is, physical damage to property different from that kind suffered by the general public from dust, noise, and debris flowing naturally from any major construction and which affect the general public no compensable damage is shown. Downside Risk, Inc. v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 156 Ga. App. 209, 274 S.E.2d 653 (1980).

Elements of inconvenience, resulting from noises of engines, horn blowing, glare of lights and the like from passing traffic on the highway, are not recoverable under this paragraph. Richmond County v. Williams, 109 Ga. App. 670, 137 S.E.2d 343 (1964).

No recovery for damage from trains. — Evidence as to vibration of the trains, noise, smoke, cinders, and sparks from passing trains, as a result of relocating the track, causing physical damage to abutting property, would be illustrative of the diminution of the market value of the property, but no recovery could be had therefor under this provision as independent elements of damage. Similarly as to the increased fire hazard, greater danger of being struck by the passing trains, and ingress and egress being interfered with are made more difficult. Southern Ry. v. Leonard, 58 Ga. App. 574, 199 S.E. 433 (1938).

Smoke and cinders may be elements of damages. Atlantic & Birmingham Ry. v. McKnight, 125 Ga. 328, 54 S.E. 148 (1906).

Moving cables to build hospital not compensable. — When the city required the telephone company to move cables from under street in order to build hospital facilities, that act was not such a taking as to mandate payment of compensation. City of Macon v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 89 Ga. App. 252, 79 S.E.2d 265 (1953), overruled on other grounds, 161 Ga. App. 452, 288 S.E.2d 705 (1982), commented on in 5 Mercer L. Rev. 323 (1954) and 17 Ga. B.J. 117 (1954).

What is Compensable (Cont'd)13. Other Losses (Cont'd)

No compensation for depreciation by operation of public work. — The word “damages,” as used in this paragraph does not require compensation to be paid to the owner of the real property for a depreciation in the value of the owner’s property caused by the lawful operation of a public work. Evans v. Just Open Gov’t, 242 Ga. 834, 251 S.E.2d 546 (1979).

Expense of moving residence. — This paragraph allows a condemnee conducting a business enterprise on property which is taken under the power of eminent domain to recover of the condemnor, as independent items, damage to the condemnee’s business caused by the necessity of moving it to another location, and the expense incidental to removal. This concept is not applicable when the taking is simply that of the location of the condemnee’s personal residence, and when the expense of moving is merely a personal expense necessitated by the taking and does not constitute an element of damage to property, either corporeal or incorporeal. City of Gainesville v. Chambers, 118 Ga. App. 25, 162 S.E.2d 460 (1968).

Use of right of way by landowners. — Landowners are not entitled to the use of the highway right of way for parking of customers’ vehicles for service or place for private business. Johnson v. Burke County, 101 Ga. App. 747, 115 S.E.2d 484 (1960).

No claim upon release of state lien. — The state began proceedings to condemn certain property, pursuant to the provisions of the Georgia Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) (O.C.G.A. § 16-14-7), but subsequently filed a release of its RICO lien. There was no cognizable claim under the theory that private property was taken or damaged for public purposes without just and adequate compensation being first paid. The state did not apply any of the property to public use during the period it was in the state’s possession and, even assuming arguendo that the seizure resulted in a violation of state and/or federal constitutional rights, there was no basis upon which the state itself, as opposed to its officers, could be held liable for monetary damages on the basis of it. Kelleher v. State, 187 Ga. App. 64, 369 S.E.2d 341 (1988).

Increased water flow through plaintiff’s property caused by the breaching of a dam did not constitute a taking within the meaning of the Constitution. Lewis v. DeKalb County, 251 Ga. 100, 303 S.E.2d 112 (1983) (decided under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I).

Damage to building caused by flood waters coming from city streets was an inadvertent event from which no inference could be drawn that the damage was done for a public purpose. Trussell Servs., Inc. v. City of Montezuma, 192 Ga. App. 863, 386 S.E.2d 732 (1989).

Comprehensive sign ordinance providing for removal of nonconforming signs effected an unconstitutional taking of private property without just and adequate compensation. Lamar Adv. of S. Ga., Inc. v. City of Albany, 260 Ga. 46, 389 S.E.2d 216 (1990).

Facial challenges have no ripeness requirement. — The development association did not show that the tree ordinance had been applied to them in any way, and therefore, raised a facial challenge rather than an “as applied” challenge. Applying these concepts, the development association was not denied all economically viable uses of their property and there was no taking without just compensation. Greater Atlanta Homebuilders Ass’n v. DeKalb County, 277 Ga. 295, 588 S.E.2d 694 (2003).

Compensation1. In General

Owner entitled to compensation for all damage. — This paragraph is susceptible to no construction except the condemnee is entitled to be compensated for all damage to the condemnee’s property and expense caused by the condemnation proceedings. DOT v. Brooks, 153 Ga. App. 386, 265 S.E.2d 610 (1980).

Legislature, within certain bounds, prescribes method of determining measure of compensation. Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966), commented on in 17 Mercer L. Rev. 471 (1966).

What is just and adequate is justiciable question, and only the judiciary can lawfully determine that question. Calhoun v. State Hwy. Dep't, 223 Ga. 65, 153 S.E.2d 418 (1967), commented on in 18 Mercer L. Rev. 475 (1967).

Powers of departments of state over owner's right to compensation. — None of the three separate departments of the state — legislative, executive, or judicial — has the power to reduce or abolish the constitutional right of the owner to receive just and adequate compensation for the owner's private property taken for a public use. Only the judiciary can adjudicate the amount of such compensation and what evidence is relevant and admissible for that purpose. Housing Auth. v. Southern Ry., 150 Ga. App. 4, 256 S.E.2d 606 (1979), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 245 Ga. 229, 264 S.E.2d 174 (1980).

Damages decided on case-by-case basis. — Unlike other jurisdictions, Georgia does not statutorily restrict compensable elements of damage in eminent domain proceedings, but instead relies on a system of case-by-case adjudication. DeKalb County v. United Family Life Ins. Co., 235 Ga. 417, 219 S.E.2d 707 (1975).

Condemnor has burden of proving what is just and adequate compensation for property taken. Georgia Power Co. v. Smith, 94 Ga. App. 166, 94 S.E.2d 48 (1956).

Burden of proof is on condemnor to show value of property taken and consequential damages to remainder of the property. Georgia Power Co. v. Smith, 94 Ga. App. 166, 94 S.E.2d 48 (1956).

Word "damage," as used in this paragraph, is intended to cover any damage, either direct or consequential. City of Atlanta v. Dinkins, 46 Ga. App. 19, 166 S.E. 429 (1932).

Compensation for both previous damaging and final taking. — Under this paragraph, a court will award compensation for both a previous damaging and a final taking where both items of recovery are appropriate. Creel v. City of Atlanta, 399 F.2d 777 (5th Cir. 1968).

Right of first refusal to acquire real property was not compensable. — Inasmuch as an option does not confer upon the holder an interest in the property, it stands to reason that the possessor of a right of first refusal would not, just by virtue of holding the refusal right, obtain a legally compensable interest in the property itself. Robinson v. Gwinnett County, 290 Ga. 470, 722 S.E.2d 59 (2012).

Holders' right of first refusal to acquire real property was not compensable under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I because at the time of the condemnation, the refusal right under the agreement between the executor and the holders was not invoked or sought to be enforced; the condemnation did not trigger the holders' refusal right since it was unrelated to any choice by the executor to market the property, but rather it was a forced and compulsory sale to the condemning authorities, apparently not contemplated in the agreement. Robinson v. Gwinnett County, 290 Ga. 470, 722 S.E.2d 59 (2012).

Statutory pre-judgment interest rate not part of "just compensation". — Prejudgment interest rate specified by O.C.G.A. § 32-3-19(c) compensates the condemnee for the use of funds generated in a condemnation action, not for the use of the property condemned; thus, this interest rate is not part of "just compensation," and legislative determination of the rate does not involve improper exercise of a judicial function. Brooks v. DOT, 254 Ga. 60, 327 S.E.2d 175 (1985).

Prejudgment interest is not to be included as a portion of "just and adequate compensation" in a condemnation case. DOT v. Consolidated Equities Corp., 181 Ga. App. 672, 353 S.E.2d 603 (1987).

Trial court properly denied a corporation's motion for prejudgment interest in an inverse condemnation case as just and adequate compensation under the eminent domain paragraph of the Georgia Constitution, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec.

Compensation (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

III, Para. I, did not include prejudgment interest. City of Atlanta v. Landmark Envtl. Indus., 272 Ga. App. 732, 613 S.E.2d 131 (2005).

Burden of producing evidence may shift to condemnee. — The burden of proving value and damages never shifts from the condemnor, though a burden of producing evidence may arise on the part of the condemnee when the condemnee asserts the greater value or damage. Glover v. DOT, 166 Ga. App. 512, 304 S.E.2d 567 (1983).

2. Measure of Recovery

Measure of damages is loss sustained by landowner, taking into consideration all the purposes for which the property is available; generally speaking, the measure of damages is the market value of the property to be taken, and when this would give just and adequate compensation to the owner this rule should be applied. Housing Auth. v. Holloway, 63 Ga. App. 485, 11 S.E.2d 418 (1940).

The measure of damages is the pecuniary loss sustained by the owner, taking into consideration all relevant factors. Ordinarily, this loss is represented by the fair market value of the property interest taken, but it may be the fair and reasonable value of the property taken if in fact the market value would not coincide with the actual value thereof. Housing Auth. v. Savannah Iron & Wire Works, Inc., 91 Ga. App. 881, 87 S.E.2d 671 (1955).

Measure of recovery is limited strictly to actual diminution in value of property. City of Atlanta v. Due, 42 Ga. App. 797, 157 S.E. 256 (1931).

Damages for depreciation in the market value of property are appropriate in a suit against a municipality for the taking or damaging of property for public use and also in a suit for a permanent and continuing nuisance created by the municipality. City of La Fayette v. Hegwood, 52 Ga. App. 168, 182 S.E. 860 (1935).

Where property is taken, under power of eminent domain for a public use, its market value for all purposes for which the property is available is the true measure of the owner's compensation. Georgia Power Co. v. Smith, 94 Ga. App. 166, 94 S.E.2d 48 (1956).

The measure of damages under this paragraph is the actual depreciation in market value of the premises resulting from the work done and the effect upon the property. Fulton County v. Baranan, 240 Ga. 837, 242 S.E.2d 617 (1978).

Just and adequate compensation is defined as fair market value of the property at the time of taking. DeKalb County v. United Family Life Ins. Co., 235 Ga. 417, 219 S.E.2d 707 (1975).

Genuine issues of fact existed as to issue of just compensation. — Trial court erred by granting summary judgment to the Georgia Department of Transportation because there were genuine issues of material fact existing as to just compensation based on the reasonable probability that the sign ordinances would have been amended and the billboard converted to digital and that those changes would have had an appreciable impact on the present market value of the condemnee's property interest. ADC Invs., LLC v. DOT, 325 Ga. App. 685, 754 S.E.2d 648 (2014).

Measure of damages is fair market value where there is no showing of any unique value to condemnee over and above market value. State Hwy. Dep't v. Thomas, 106 Ga. App. 849, 128 S.E.2d 520 (1962), commented on in 14 Mercer L. Rev. 447 (1963).

Recovery not restricted to market value. — This paragraph does not necessarily restrict the owner's recovery to market value as the term is sometimes used. Housing Auth. v. Holloway, 63 Ga. App. 485, 11 S.E.2d 418 (1940).

Compensation may exceed value of land. — If just and adequate compensation to owners of the various interests in a parcel of land being condemned requires that the total compensation exceed the value of the land, this presents no difficulty because, under this paragraph, the jury is not only required to render a verdict for an amount which will justly and adequately compensate the condemnees for the value of the land taken, but also for whatever damages result to the condemnees from the condemnation proceeding. State Hwy. Dep't v. Thomas, 115 Ga. App. 372, 154 S.E.2d 812 (1967).

Which value gives “just and adequate compensation.” — In determining just and adequate compensation, market value and actual value will ordinarily be synonymous; if they are not, that value which will give “just and adequate compensation” is the one to be sought by the jury in rendering its verdict. State Hwy. Dep't v. Robinson, 103 Ga. App. 12, 118 S.E.2d 289 (1961).

Just and adequate compensation is the proper measure of damages in a condemnation case, and where the property is shown to have some peculiar value to the condemnee, fair market value may not be the proper method to be used in arriving at a verdict. Gaines v. City of Gainesville, 115 Ga. App. 220, 154 S.E.2d 280 (1967).

Fair market value defined. — Fair market value is the price a seller who desires, but is not required, to sell and a buyer who desires, but is not required, to buy, would agree is a fair price, after due consideration of all elements reasonably affecting value. Wright v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 248 Ga. 372, 283 S.E.2d 466 (1981).

Consideration of actual value. — While market value is the general yardstick in a condemnation proceeding or a suit for compensation in the nature of a condemnation proceeding, there may be circumstances in which market value and actual value are not the same, and in such event the jury may consider the actual value of the land or interest therein appropriated. State Hwy. Dep't v. Robinson, 103 Ga. App. 12, 118 S.E.2d 289 (1961).

Actual value. — In an eminent domain proceeding, the “just and adequate compensation” due a condemnee is “the value” of the land taken, plus any consequential damages to the remainder if there is a partial taking, which may not be less than “the actual value” of the property taken or damaged. Macon-Bibb County Water & Sewerage Auth. v. Reynolds, 165 Ga. App. 348, 299 S.E.2d 594 (1983).

The undivided fee rule, i.e., the condemnor need only pay the value of the land that was taken, which is then to be divided among the claimants based upon their respective interests, applies only when the fair market value of the real property taken does, in fact, constitute just and adequate compensation in a particular case. Fulton County v. Funk, 266 Ga. 64, 463 S.E.2d 883 (1995).

The undivided fee rule is not contrary to the principle that each condemnee must be paid for what the condemnee lost, not for what the condemnor has gained; the rule merely insures that each condemnee will not be paid more than the condemnee has lost; abrogating White v. Fulton County, 264 Ga. 393(1), 444 S.E.2d 734 (1994). Fulton County v. Funk, 266 Ga. 64, 463 S.E.2d 883 (1995).

In a total taking of property subject to a leasehold interest, charge to the jury that the amount of just and adequate compensation should “equal the whole—the value of the property” was correct where the valuation evidence dealt only with the fair market value of the property and there was no contention that the property was unique; reversing Funk v. Fulton County, 216 Ga. App. 30, 453 S.E.2d 82 (1995). Fulton County v. Funk, 266 Ga. 64, 463 S.E.2d 883 (1995).

Damages. — The word “damaged,” has a broader meaning than the word “taken,” and is designed to impose liability on a condemnor for consequential injuries to property which would not otherwise exist. Macon-Bibb County Water & Sewerage Auth. v. Reynolds, 165 Ga. App. 348, 299 S.E.2d 594 (1983).

Trial court did not err in entering a final judgment on a jury verdict awarding a company and a bank damages in a county's condemnation action because there was no evidence presented of pre-taking damages in anticipation of the taking; the trial court's jury instructions properly explained how the jury was to calculate damages. Gwinnett County v. Ascot Inv. Co., 314 Ga. App. 874, 726 S.E.2d 130 (2012).

Trial court did not commit a manifest abuse of discretion when the court allowed evidence that, as a result of the taking of property, it was no longer feasible to construct student housing because a company and a bank presented expert testimony that the property's value at the time of the taking was affected by the property's probable future use for student housing. Gwinnett County v. Ascot Inv. Co., 314 Ga. App. 874, 726 S.E.2d 130 (2012).

Compensation (Cont'd)2. Measure of Recovery (Cont'd)

Department of Transportation not required to abide by federal prohibition of compensation for enhancement. — By requiring the Department of Transportation to be guided by federal law “to the greatest extent practicable” in its condemnation procedures, O.C.G.A. § 32-8-1(b) does not thereby require the department to abide by the federal law’s prohibition of compensation for enhancement by reason of taking and does not affect the judiciary’s power to determine what constitutes just and adequate compensation. DOT v. White, 173 Ga. App. 68, 325 S.E.2d 397 (1984).

When jury may consider “just and adequate compensation” same as “fair market value.” — Where the whole property owned is taken, no consequential damages are involved, and the building is not being used by the condemnee and no lease or other factor is involved, there is nothing to require the jury to determine “just and adequate compensation” by any other method other than “fair market value.” Sutton v. State Hwy. Dep’t, 103 Ga. App. 29, 118 S.E.2d 285 (1961).

Where there are no circumstances shown that would make any distinction between just and adequate compensation to the condemnees and the fair market value of the property, a charge that compensation should be measured by fair market value is not error. Gaines v. City of Gainesville, 115 Ga. App. 220, 154 S.E.2d 280 (1967).

Question for consideration is what owner has lost. — Under this paragraph’s requirement that the condemnee be paid “just and adequate compensation” before the condemnee’s property is taken, the question which properly addresses itself to the jury’s consideration is not “What has the taker gained?” but “What has the owner lost?”. State Hwy. Dep’t v. Thomas, 115 Ga. App. 372, 154 S.E.2d 812 (1967).

Owner is to be paid just and adequate compensation for the owner’s property, that is, value of the property to the owner, not its value to condemnor. Housing Auth. v. Holloway, 63 Ga. App. 485, 11 S.E.2d 418 (1940).

If special damage is caused to property, the owner of property is entitled to recover amount of damages which the owner’s property has actually sustained. Franklin v. City of Atlanta, 40 Ga. App. 319, 149 S.E. 326 (1929).

Reproduction cost may always be used as factor involved in valuation of property, together with other factors such as depreciation and the nature of the property interest seized, in determining market value. Housing Auth. v. Savannah Iron & Wire Works, Inc., 91 Ga. App. 881, 87 S.E.2d 671 (1955).

Whole damage to property, past, present, and future, must be assessed in one action, the action taking the place of the statutory provision in cases where property is condemned. Southern Ry. v. Leonard, 58 Ga. App. 574, 199 S.E. 433 (1938).

All purposes to which property may be put are for consideration in determining its value. Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966), commented on in 17 Mercer L. Rev. 471 (1966).

Compensation when only part of property taken. — In a proceeding to condemn only a portion of a tract of land the only question to be determined by the jury is the amount which the condemnor should pay as just and adequate compensation for the part taken and consequential damages, if any, to the remaining portion of the tract, as such damages may be offset, but not exceeded, by consequential benefits. Alabama Power Co. v. Chandler, 217 Ga. 550, 123 S.E.2d 767 (1962).

Compensation for uses other than use at time of condemnation. — Under proper evidence in determining just and adequate compensation for property taken by eminent domain, the jury may consider the value of the property for uses other than that for which it was being used at the time of the condemnation. State Hwy. Dep’t v. Robinson, 103 Ga. App. 12, 118 S.E.2d 289 (1961).

Measure of damages when property used for special purpose. — Adequate compensation for property which the owner has designed for a special use, and of which the owner has been deprived for the public benefit without the owner's consent, may include the cost of the article or its value to the owner for the particular purpose for which the owner designed to use it, or for which it could be used. Housing Auth. v. Holloway, 63 Ga. App. 485, 11 S.E.2d 418 (1940).

Whether property is or is not used for a particular purpose does illustrate its peculiar value and often shows its worth to the condemnee in excess of its market value. Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966), commented on in 17 Mercer L. Rev. 471 (1966).

Anything that actually enhances value of land must be considered in order to meet the demands of this paragraph that the owner be paid before the taking, adequate and just compensation. DOT v. Arnold, 154 Ga. App. 502, 268 S.E.2d 775 (1980).

Effect of enhancement of value upon amount of damages. — Where none of the property, or only a part of it, is actually taken for public use, any enhancement of the market value which arises directly from such public improvement and which accrues directly to the particular property remaining may be set off against the gross damage which may be thus occasioned. Muecke v. City of Macon, 34 Ga. App. 744, 131 S.E. 124 (1925).

If, at the time the market value of the property sought to be condemned is to be estimated, it is known or anticipated that certain improvements will be made in the locality where the property is situated, and this fact serves to enhance the market value of the property, the owner is entitled to the actual market value as effected by reason of the fact that it is known or anticipated that such improvements will thus be made. This is true, though the projected improvements are to be made by the condemning party. Hard v. Housing Auth., 219 Ga. 74, 132 S.E.2d 25 (1963), commented on in 26 Ga. B.J. 349 (1964).

Knowledge of condemnation prior to making improvements. — Court did not err in restricting counsel from examining witnesses on their knowledge of condemnation prior to making improvements. State Hwy. Dep't v. Owens, 120 Ga. App. 647, 171 S.E.2d 770 (1969), commented on in 22 Mercer L. Rev. 616 (1971).

Knowledge of condemnation at purchase. — In a condemnation proceeding, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the lessees' motion in limine to exclude evidence that the lessees and the lessor knew of the possible condemnation when the lessees sold the property to the lessor because the Georgia Department of Transportation (DOT) sought to use the evidence to discredit the estimate the lessees and lessor made of the property's market value at the time of the taking by challenging the use of the sale as a factor in reaching that estimate used in that way, the evidence of the knowledge of a possible condemnation would bear, at least indirectly, on the question of the just and adequate compensation due the condemnees. CNL APF Partners, LP v. DOT, 307 Ga. App. 511, 705 S.E.2d 862 (2010).

Value to owners of separate interests in property. — Where there are separate interests to be condemned, the jury, in arriving at just and adequate compensation, is not only authorized but required to consider the value which the thing taken has to the respective owners of the interests being condemned. State Hwy. Dep't v. Thomas, 115 Ga. App. 372, 154 S.E.2d 812 (1967).

Damages must be limited to tract affected. — In proceedings for condemnation of land, the just compensation which the landowner is entitled to receive for the owner's lands, and damages thereto, must be limited to the tract, a portion of which is actually taken. Southwire Co. v. DOT, 147 Ga. App. 606, 249 S.E.2d 650 (1978).

Enhancement of market value due to public knowledge of impending improvements may be considered in determining the amount of compensation for purposes of this paragraph. DeKalb County v. Fulton Nat'l Bank, 156 Ga. App. 253, 274 S.E.2d 649 (1980).

When evidence authorizes charge on consequential benefits. — Where the condemnee introduces much evidence to show that, because of the condemnation, it would be required to expend certain amounts on fences, screening hedges, and grading, and thus would be consequentially damaged, and there is no evidence as to any consequential benefits resulting from the improvement, the evidence does not authorize a charge on consequential benefits. Garden Parks v. Fulton County, 88 Ga. App. 97, 76 S.E.2d 31 (1953).

Compensation (Cont'd)2. Measure of Recovery (Cont'd)

Cost of particular property. — In some instances one might not be justly compensated for the taking of one's property unless one was awarded an amount adequate to repay the cost of the particular property or to replace just such property as was taken from that person. Housing Auth. v. Holloway, 63 Ga. App. 485, 11 S.E.2d 418 (1940).

No change in right of access. — Because a plat, which was incorporated into a deed as a representation of the land conveyed to the DOT as a right of way, did not change the rights of access conveyed in the deed, the trial court properly determined that the plat did not convey access rights to a highway; thus, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the owner in the DOT's subsequent eminent domain action. DOT v. Meadow Trace, Inc., 274 Ga. App. 267, 617 S.E.2d 246 (2005), aff'd, 280 Ga. 720, 631 S.E.2d 359 (2006).

Damages not affected when property received as gift. — The value of the property damaged is not affected by the fact that it was purchased at a lower price, or received as a gift. Elbert County v. Brown, 16 Ga. App. 834, 86 S.E. 651 (1915).

Jurors are not absolutely bound to accept as correct opinions or estimates of witnesses as to value of property, though uncontradicted by other testimony, but have the right to consider the nature of the property involved, together with any other fact or circumstance properly within their knowledge, throwing light upon the question, and they may, by their verdict, fix either a lower or a higher value upon the property than that stated in the opinions or estimates of the witnesses. Southern v. Cobb County, 78 Ga. App. 58, 50 S.E.2d 226 (1948).

Only if fact finder finds for additional damages does court have right to conduct hearing to determine amount of additional damage. If the fact finder holds against such additional damage for attorney fees and costs of litigation, that phase is ended. DOT v. Shelkeith, Inc., 146 Ga. App. 581, 246 S.E.2d 706, cert. dismissed, 242 Ga. 711, 251 S.E.2d 293 (1978).

Introduction of evidence of similar property sales to prove value. — On a question in regard to the value of land sought to be condemned, it is competent to introduce evidence of sales of property similar to that in question, made at or near the time of the taking. West v. Fulton County, 95 Ga. App. 320, 97 S.E.2d 785 (1957); Alabama Power Co. v. Chandler, 217 Ga. 550, 123 S.E.2d 767 (1962).

Charging jury on fair market value. — This paragraph does not contain any allusion to fair market value as a criterion for determining just and adequate compensation, and it is error to charge the jury explicitly or implicitly in this respect. Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966), commented on in 17 Mercer L. Rev. 471 (1966).

It is proper in condemnation proceeding to instruct the jury that they are not concerned with right and necessity of taking, but in fixing the value of the property taken; the charge should not refer to the willingness or unwillingness of the condemnee. Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966), commented on in 17 Mercer L. Rev. 471 (1966).

Jury instruction that fictitious "buyer and seller" are condemnor and condemnee. It is error to give jury erroneous conception that fictitious "buyer and seller" referred to in definition of market value are the condemnor and condemnee. Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966), commented on in 17 Mercer L. Rev. 471 (1966).

In no case in jury instructions should the condemnor be referred to as buyer who is not obliged to buy and condemnee as seller who is not compelled to sell, as would be the fictitious buyers and sellers used to determine market price. Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966), commented on in 17 Mercer L. Rev. 471 (1966).

Verdict must be supported by evidence. — Where a verdict is returned for an amount larger than is authorized by the evidence adduced by the condemner, that of the condemnee must support the verdict; that is, the condemnee's proof, added to and supplemented by facts appearing from that of the condemner for that purpose must furnish the factual foundation for the verdict rendered by the jury. Georgia Power Co. v. Smith, 94 Ga. App. 166, 94 S.E.2d 48 (1956).

Landowners' claim in a condemnation action that O.C.G.A. § 22-2-84.1 was unconstitutional because payment of appellee's attorney fees would diminish the amount of compensation they receive and violate their constitutional right to receive just and adequate compensation was without merit; the method for determining just and adequate compensation was a matter of legislative discretion, the assessment of compensation by a special master satisfied the constitutional requirement of just and adequate compensation for taking property and, by conditioning an appeal to the superior court on the payment of costs, O.C.G.A. § 22-2-84.1 did not violate a property owner's right to receive just and adequate compensation before a taking of the owner's property occurred. Martin v. Henry County Water & Sewerage Auth., 279 Ga. 197, 610 S.E.2d 509 (2005).

3. Attorneys' Fees

Editor's notes. — Some of the cases noted under this heading were decided prior to the 1983 Constitution, which authorizes the General Assembly to provide by law for payment of litigation expenses, including attorneys' fees.

Paragraph does not require award of attorneys' fees. DeKalb County v. Trustees, Decatur Lodge No. 1602, 242 Ga. 707, 251 S.E.2d 243 (1978), commented on in 31 Mercer L. Rev. 367 (1979).

Attorneys' fees and expenses are not embraced within just compensation for land taken by eminent domain. Bowers v. Fulton County, 122 Ga. App. 45, 176 S.E.2d 219 (1970), commented on in 17 Mercer L. Rev. 471 (1966); Georgia Power Co. v. Sanders, 617 F.2d 1112 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 936, 101 S. Ct. 1403, 67 L. Ed. 2d 372 (1981).

Award for expenses of expert witnesses not required. — Damages as just and adequate compensation for property taken in the exercise of eminent domain does not include expenses for expert witnesses and legal counsel. Shelton v. Housing Auth., 227 Ga. 824, 183 S.E.2d 353 (1971).

Award determined by value of property. — No provision is made in this paragraph or by statute that authorizes the award of attorneys' fees and expenses of litigation as a part of just compensation, but the award is determined by the value of the property taken or damaged. Bowers v. Fulton County, 227 Ga. 814, 183 S.E.2d 347 (1971).

Recovery of attorneys' fees not prohibited. — The recovery of attorneys' fees in an eminent domain case is neither required by this paragraph nor authorized by statute. On the other hand, nothing seems to prohibit such a recovery within the constitutional concepts of due process. Housing Auth. v. Southern Ry., 150 Ga. App. 4, 256 S.E.2d 606 (1979), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 245 Ga. 229, 264 S.E.2d 174 (1980).

Property owner's appeal permitted by O.C.G.A. § 22-2-100 et seq., does not provide for a constitutional right to jury trial on the issue of just and adequate compensation; therefore, an award of attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 22-2-84.1(a) does not violate the property owner's constitutional right to receive just and adequate compensation before a taking of the owner's property occurs. Mayo v. City of Stockbridge, 285 Ga. App. 58, 646 S.E.2d 79 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1279, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 707 (Ga. 2007).

For decisions holding that "just and adequate compensation" includes attorneys' fees, see White v. Georgia Power Co., 237 Ga. 341, 227 S.E.2d 385 (1976), overruled, DeKalb County v. Trustees, Decatur Lodge No. 1602, 242 Ga. 707, 251

Compensation (Cont'd)3. Attorneys' Fees (Cont'd)

S.E.2d 243 (1978); DOT v. Doss, 238 Ga. 480, 233 S.E.2d 144 (1977); City of Macon v. Mabry, 143 Ga. App. 203, 238 S.E.2d 123 (1977); City of Atlanta v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 144 Ga. App. 157, 240 S.E.2d 730 (1977); Georgia Power Co. v. Whitmire, 146 Ga. App. 29, 245 S.E.2d 324 (1978); City of Atlanta v. Rosebush, 146 Ga. App. 99, 245 S.E.2d 440 (1978); DOT v. Shelkeith, Inc., 146 Ga. App. 581, 246 S.E.2d 706, cert. dismissed, 242 Ga. 711, 251 S.E.2d 293 (1978).

Party in condemnation proceeding acquired no vested right in attorneys' fees awarded to that party through judgment of trial court. DOT v. Kendricks, 244 Ga. 613, 261 S.E.2d 391 (1979).

General Assembly has not provided for jury trial on issue of amount of attorneys' fees and litigation costs. DOT v. Doss, 238 Ga. 480, 233 S.E.2d 144 (1977).

O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14, read in conjunction with Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I, permits trial courts to award attorney fees to condemnees in eminent domain cases. DOT v. Woods, 269 Ga. 53, 494 S.E.2d 507 (1998).

4. Consequential and Punitive Damages

Distinction from recovery for actual value. — The condemnee is entitled to be compensated for all damage done to the condemnee's property and expenses caused by the condemnation proceedings. Such damages and expenses are separate and distinct items from the amount to which the condemnee is entitled to recover as the actual value of the condemnee's building. Bowers v. Fulton County, 221 Ga. 731, 146 S.E.2d 884 (1966), commented on in 17 Mercer L. Rev. 471 (1966).

There are only two elements of damages to be considered in a condemnation proceeding: first, the market value of the property actually taken; and, second, the consequential damage that will naturally and proximately arise to the remainder of the owner's property from the taking of the part which is taken and the devoting of it to the purposes for which it is condemned, including its proper maintenance and operation, and the measure of these consequential damages is the diminution in the market value of the remainder of the property proximately arising from these causes. DOT v. Simon, 151 Ga. App. 807, 261 S.E.2d 710 (1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 478, 265 S.E.2d 777 (1980).

Consequential damages may be added to but cannot be deducted from the actual value of the part taken. DOT v. Old Nat'l Inn, Inc., 179 Ga. App. 158, 345 S.E.2d 853, cert. vacated, 256 Ga. 315, 349 S.E.2d 748 (1986).

Measure of consequential damages.

— Generally speaking, measure of consequential damages is diminution, if any, of market value of property not taken, caused by taking of part which is taken and devoting of it to purposes for which it is condemned. Wright v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 248 Ga. 372, 283 S.E.2d 466 (1981).

Proper measure of consequential damages to remainder is diminution, if any, in market value of remainder in its circumstance just prior to time of taking compared with its market value in its new circumstance just after time of taking. Wright v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 248 Ga. 372, 283 S.E.2d 466 (1981).

Because an appraiser could use the cost to cure as a factor in determining the value of the remainder after the taking, and because the appraiser's testimony was sufficient to show consequential damages, the trial court properly denied the motion for a directed verdict by the Department of Transportation; in addition, the trial court properly admitted a surveyor's testimony based on the extensive basis for the testimony, the explanation of discrepancies, and the methodology used. DOT v. Ogburn Hardware & Supply, Inc., 273 Ga. App. 124, 614 S.E.2d 108 (2005).

Consequential damages to untaken property included. — The amount of damages shall include not only the value of the property taken, but shall also compensate for the consequential damage to the remaining property not taken. These consequential damages result from the actions of the state in severing a portion from the body of the condemnee's land and interfering with the condemnee's use and enjoyment of the remaining property. State Hwy. Dep't v. Irvin, 100 Ga. App. 624, 112 S.E.2d 216 (1959).

No authority for recovery of punitive damages. — Since damages recoverable in an action by a property owner whose property is harmed by a county for public purposes is a substitute for damages recoverable in a condemnation action, there is no constitutional or statutory authority for the recovery of punitive damages against a county. Fulton County v. Baranan, 240 Ga. 837, 242 S.E.2d 617 (1978).

Damages must arise from condemnation. — If a condemnee is to recover consequential damages to the remainder of the condemnee's property when only a part is taken, it must appear that the damages to the remainder proximately and naturally arose from the condemnation and taking of the condemnee's own property. DOT v. Simon, 151 Ga. App. 807, 261 S.E.2d 710 (1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 478, 265 S.E.2d 777 (1980).

Consequential damages to remainder must be sought during proceedings establishing value of land taken. —

Where part of a tract is taken, consequential damages to remainder must be sought, if at all, during proceedings to establish value of land taken. Wright v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 248 Ga. 372, 283 S.E.2d 466 (1981).

Consequential damages to contiguous tracts of land which have different ownership. Consequential damages cannot be awarded in eminent domain case to contiguous tracts of land which have different ownership from tract in which the taking occurs such as where the condemned property is owned jointly and a contiguous tract is owned in fee by one of the co-owners of the condemned property. Georgia Power Co. v. Bray, 232 Ga. 558, 207 S.E.2d 442 (1974).

Though consequential damages to a contiguous tract of land having a different ownership from that in which the taking occurs may be real and may in fact exist, a separate owner's claim for consequential damages to that owner's land contiguous to the tract where the taking occurs cannot be asserted in a condemnation action. Consequential damages to "the remainder of the tract in which the taking occurs" are the only consequential damages that may be recovered in the condemnation action. Southwire Co. v. DOT, 147 Ga. App. 606, 249 S.E.2d 650 (1978); DOT v. Simon, 151 Ga. App. 807, 261 S.E.2d 710 (1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 478, 265 S.E.2d 777 (1980).

Burden of proof on condemnor. — The condemnor has the burden of proving whether there has been consequential damage to the remaining property and, if so, how much. Georgia Power Co. v. Smith, 94 Ga. App. 166, 94 S.E.2d 48 (1956).

Condemning party is not allowed to introduce evidence of permissive use of land of another in attempts to lessen consequential damages, nor may the condemnee increase in damages by the same means. Southwire Co. v. DOT, 147 Ga. App. 606, 249 S.E.2d 650 (1978).

Ownership of other lands without significance. — It is solely by virtue of ownership of the tract invaded that an owner is entitled to incidental damages. The owner's ownership of other lands is without legal significance. Southwire Co. v. DOT, 147 Ga. App. 606, 249 S.E.2d 650 (1978).

5. Interests of Lessors and Lessees

All relevant factors must be considered in determining just and adequate compensation, and if the market value of the property does not coincide with the actual fair market value of the property (as compared with others), the value may be the fair and reasonable value of the particular property taken. Anything that enhances the value of the property may be considered, including improvements. These rules apply to leaseholds. Simmerman v. DOT, 167 Ga. App. 383, 307 S.E.2d 4 (1983).

Measure of damages for loss of use of leased property. — The correct measure of damage to one holding a leasehold interest in land for over five years is the diminution in the market value of the premises for rent for the remainder of the term of the lease, that is, from the time of the damage till the end of the lease. Jones v. Richmond County, 61 Ga. App. 857, 7 S.E.2d 754 (1940).

Compensation (Cont'd)5. Interests of Lessors and Lessees (Cont'd)

The correct measure of damages for the loss of use of leased property is the diminution in the market value of the leasehold during the remainder of the unexpired term of the lease, less any rents to be paid by the lessee. McGhee v. Floyd County, 95 Ga. App. 221, 97 S.E.2d 529 (1957).

Effect of diminution of rental value.

— While the plaintiff is entitled to recover only for the diminution in the market value of the property and may not recover for any decrease in the rentals, the difference in the rental value of the property before the improvements were begun and after they were completed might be set up as a circumstance tending itself to show a diminution in the value of the property, or to corroborate other evidence to that effect. Southern Ry. v. Leonard, 58 Ga. App. 574, 199 S.E. 433 (1938).

When market value insufficient. —

Where a condemnation proceeding is instituted against land which is subject to a lease contract for a term of years, and where, because of the peculiar circumstances of the case, an award of damages measured solely by the fair market value of the land will not likely afford to the condemnees, the lessor and lessee, just and adequate compensation for their respective interests in the land, it is not error for the trial court, in charging the jury, to instruct them that they might find as one item to be considered in arriving at their lump-sum award as damages for the land and interest in the land taken, the fair market value to the lessee of its leasehold interest in the land condemned. State Hwy. Dep't v. Thomas, 115 Ga. App. 372, 154 S.E.2d 812 (1967).

Compensation when lessee forced to move. — Where the lessee was the tenant holding an estate for years, having remaining more than a year of the leasehold interest plus an option to purchase which would have been exercised except for the condemnation proceedings, and it was forced to move because the land remaining after the taking was inadequate for the business purposes, the result of these factors is a total eviction. Accordingly, the lessee was entitled to just and adequate compensation, including moving expenses whether the latter be thought of eo nomine or as a negative aspect of the leasehold value. DeKalb County v. Fulton Nat'l Bank, 156 Ga. App. 253, 274 S.E.2d 649 (1980).

For decision holding moving expenses for personal property not recoverable as damages per se, see Housing Auth. v. Savannah Iron & Wire Works, Inc., 90 Ga. App. 150, 82 S.E.2d 244 (1954).

Lessee may recover for a partial taking, including the removal of gasoline storage tanks from the land condemned to another part of the same premises. DeKalb County v. Fulton Nat'l Bank, 156 Ga. App. 253, 274 S.E.2d 649 (1980).

Evidence of offer of compromise. —

In a condemnation proceeding, the trial court did not err in denying the lessees' motion in limine to exclude evidence of an alleged pre-condemnation offer of compromise contained in a letter because the letter, which was sent to an appraiser and not to the Georgia Department of Transportation, was not an inadmissible offer of compromise under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-37 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-4-408); no condemnation proceeding was pending when the letter was sent, the terms of the letter sought to persuade against the condemnation of the property, or, alternatively, to ensure that the lessees would receive the full amount that the lessees believed would be the lessees' just and adequate compensation if condemnation occurred, and the letter did not propose a compromise of that amount. CNL APF Partners, LP v. DOT, 307 Ga. App. 511, 705 S.E.2d 862 (2010).

Cause of fire relevant to issue of just and adequate compensation. —

In a condemnation proceeding, the trial court erred in denying the lessees' motion in limine to exclude evidence of the cause of the fire that damaged the restaurant that was on the real property at issue because evidence concerning the reasons giving rise to the uncertainty in insurance coverage (i.e., the cause of the fire), as opposed to the fact of uncertainty, was not relevant to the issue of just and adequate compensation. CNL APF Partners, LP v. DOT, 307 Ga. App. 511, 705 S.E.2d 862 (2010).

6. Other Items of Recovery

Interest of mortgagee. — If there is no showing in the record that the mortgagee cannot reinvest its funds at an interest rate equivalent to or higher than the interest rate provided for in the mortgage, it has suffered no real damage when the secured property is condemned. DeKalb County v. United Family Life Ins. Co., 235 Ga. 417, 219 S.E.2d 707 (1975).

Mortgagee not entitled to prepayment premium. — In the absence of a provision entitling the mortgagee to the prepayment premium in case of a condemnation of the property, the mortgagee is not entitled to the prepayment premium when such a contingency occurs. DeKalb County v. United Family Life Ins. Co., 235 Ga. 417, 219 S.E.2d 707 (1975).

Measure of damages to abutting property caused by raising grade of street is the difference between the market value of the property before and after the change of the grade. Mayor of Macon v. Daley, 2 Ga. App. 355, 58 S.E. 540 (1907).

Measure of damages for obstruction in street. — Where an obstruction in the street interferes with the owner's right to the use of the street, and is authorized by law and is lawfully and not negligently maintained and is permanent in character, and causes a diminution in the value of the property, the owner of the lot may recover, of the person erecting and maintaining the obstruction, damages only in difference between the value of the owner's property before the obstruction was erected and afterwards. Felton v. State Hwy. Bd., 47 Ga. App. 615, 171 S.E. 198 (1933), later appeal, 57 Ga. App. 930, 181 S.E. 506 (1935).

Allegation of interference with access material. — Defendant is liable for any interference with the right of ingress and egress to the petitioner's property, and this allegation would be material in determining any diminution in the market value of the property by reason of such interference. Downside Risk, Inc. v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 156 Ga. App. 209, 274 S.E.2d 653 (1980).

Damages from street grading may be proved. — Cost of filling in lots, to raise them to the level of the street, may be proved upon this general question of diminution of the market value. Williamson v. Mayor of Savannah, 19 Ga. App. 784, 92 S.E. 291 (1917).

Measure of damages for property taken by erection of dam. — Any damage to, or destruction of, property resulting from exercise of lawful authority of a quasi-public corporation in the conduct of its franchise through the proper erection and proper and prudent operation of a dam, must be compensated for under this paragraph, for which the sole measure of damages is the diminution in the market value of the property thus taken or damaged and not as for a continuing, abatable nuisance, for which the measure of damages is generally stated to be the diminution of the yearly rental value of the property during its existence and within the statute of limitation plus any actual damage sustained, except where it affirmatively appears that because of the existence of the nuisance the property has been rendered permanently useless, even if the nuisance were abated, in which case the measure of damage would be, of necessity, the diminution of the market value of the property. Warren v. Georgia Power Co., 58 Ga. App. 9, 197 S.E. 338 (1938).

Relocation expenses part of just and adequate compensation. — The enactment of O.C.G.A. § 32-8-1 does not alter the fact that relocation expenses, whether awarded judicially or administratively, are still a part of the "just and adequate compensation" guaranteed to condemnees under the Constitution. DOT v. Gibson, 251 Ga. 66, 303 S.E.2d 19 (1983).

7. Time at which Value of Land Is Fixed

Date upon which determination of just and adequate compensation is to be made is date of taking. State Hwy. Dep't v. Calhoun, 114 Ga. App. 501, 151 S.E.2d 806 (1966), rev'd on other grounds, 223 Ga. 65, 153 S.E.2d 418 (1967).

When private property is condemned for public use the owner is entitled to receive just and adequate compensation as of the date of the taking and not as of the date of the announcement of the taking, and the value of the property should be fixed at the time of its taking. R.E. Adams Properties, Inc. v. City of Gainesville, 125 Ga. App. 800, 189 S.E.2d 114 (1972).

Compensation (Cont'd)7. Time at which Value of Land Is Fixed (Cont'd)

Legal taking, as opposed to physical appropriation, begins at very moment a proceeding in rem is filed against property by the condemnor, and it is not complete until the land is actually physically transferred to the possession of the condemnor, and all the time between, whether days or years, is time during which the "legal taking" is in progress. State Hwy. Dep't v. Wilson, 98 Ga. App. 619, 106 S.E.2d 544 (1958).

Date of return of award of assessors as date of fixing value. — This paragraph does not require prepayment until there is some step in this process of legal taking which may act as a point to determine value, for one cannot pay for that which has no value or an entirely unascertained value. That point arrives in the case when the award of the assessors is returned. State Hwy. Dep't v. Wilson, 98 Ga. App. 619, 106 S.E.2d 544 (1958).

Jury not free to determine other date as date of taking. — The jury is not free to determine on the evidence that some date prior to the initiation of condemnation proceedings but after the announcement of the intent to condemn is the date of taking for the purposes of just and adequate compensation. R.E. Adams Properties, Inc. v. City of Gainesville, 125 Ga. App. 800, 189 S.E.2d 114 (1972).

Charge held reversible error. — Where the charge instructs the jury to determine consequential damages both "as of the date of taking" and at the time "the improvements are made," and where these times did not coincide, the charge was internally inconsistent and constituted reversible error. Wright v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 248 Ga. 372, 283 S.E.2d 466 (1981).

Negligent or improper construction following condemnation judgment. — ment. — Condemnation judgment precludes subsequent action for consequential damages unless they result from negligent or improper construction. Wright v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 248 Ga. 372, 283 S.E.2d 466 (1981).

Where there is a physical taking of land, just and adequate compensation for the taking is determined as of the date of taking. Wright v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 248 Ga. 372, 283 S.E.2d 466 (1981).

Diminution in value of remainder, constituting consequential damages should be measured as of date of taking. Wright v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 248 Ga. 372, 283 S.E.2d 466 (1981).

Procedure1. In General*Effect of death of property owner.

— An action against a city by reason of a change in the grade of a street whereby the abutting property is diminished in its market value does not sound in tort, and the right of action does not abate by the death of the property owner before the bringing of the suit, if such action is brought by the legal representative of the owner within the statute of limitations. Harbour v. City of Rome, 54 Ga. App. 97, 187 S.E. 231 (1936), aff'd, 184 Ga. 37, 190 S.E. 364 (1937).

Jurisdiction. — Because plaintiff landfill developer had not been able to pursue its inverse condemnation claim in state court (action had been removed), the district court lacked jurisdiction over the developer's takings and inverse condemnation claims under the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I, because plaintiff had not availed itself of the state-law process, its takings and inverse condemnation claims were not ripe for federal court review. BFI Waste Sys. of N. Am. v. Dekalb County, 303 F. Supp. 2d 1335 (N.D. Ga. 2004).

Court not required to take judicial notice of independent contractor status. — In a suit by a property owner for damage to the owner's property caused by highway construction, the requirement that competitive bids be taken on highway maintenance and construction contracts does not require the court to take judicial notice of the fact that the construction was done by an independent contractor. Richmond County v. Williams, 109 Ga. App. 670, 137 S.E.2d 343 (1964).

Use of term “fair market value” rather than “fair and reasonable value” in court’s instruction, when referring to property being condemned, was not improper. Vann v. State Hwy. Dep’t, 95 Ga. App. 243, 97 S.E.2d 550 (1957).

Condemnee’s liability for interest on difference in amount of judgment.

— When, in a condemnation proceeding under the “three assessor” law as contained in former Code 1933, Chapter 36 (see now O.C.G.A. Title 22), the amount of the final judgment was less than the award made by the assessors, the condemnee was not liable for the payment of interest on the difference in the amount of the award and the judgment except from the date of the judgment. City of Atlanta v. Lunsford, 105 Ga. App. 247, 124 S.E.2d 493 (1962).

Department of Transportation’s alleged influence of the county board of commissioners’ zoning decisions against plaintiff was a wrong that could not be redressed in a condemnation proceeding because the final official decision to deny plaintiff’s zoning requests was made by the county board of commissioners, not the DOT, and only the board could be held accountable for those decisions. DOT v. Poole, 179 Ga. App. 638, 347 S.E.2d 625 (1986).

2. Nature of Right of Action

Nature of right generally. — Where property has been taken or damaged, for public purposes, by public authorities or a quasi-public corporation, the party injured, may bring one action therefor, within the time required by the statute of limitations, dating from the time of construction, not in tort for a nuisance, but to recover the direct damage inflicted. Georgia Power Co. v. Moore, 47 Ga. App. 411, 170 S.E. 520 (1933).

An action may be brought under this paragraph for the mere taking or damaging of real property without just and adequate compensation being first paid; an action sounding in tort may be brought against a municipal corporation for the creation or maintenance of a nuisance, without reference to any question of negligence where danger to health or life is involved; and an action sounding in tort may be brought against a municipal corporation for the creation or maintenance of a nuisance where the defendant is negligent, even though the act was authorized to be done. Southland Coffee Co. v. City of Macon, 60 Ga. App. 253, 3 S.E.2d 739 (1939).

When public authorities properly erect and properly maintain improvements authorized by law, the only right of action which is maintainable is that conferred by this paragraph; it does not sound in tort. Felton v. State Hwy. Bd., 51 Ga. App. 930, 181 S.E. 506 (1935).

Independent suit for damages. — There is a broad distinction between the taking by deprivation, i.e., dominion and possession of private property, and the damaging of private property by public construction. In such cases, an independent suit for damages is the proper method to seek recovery for such damages rather than in the condemnation suit. Downside Risk, Inc. v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 156 Ga. App. 209, 274 S.E.2d 653 (1980).

Effect of allegations of violations of constitutional rights. — The contention in a damage case that the alleged taking of private property for public purposes is in violation of the due process clause of the state (Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I [see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I]) and federal (U.S. Const., amend. 14) Constitutions does not make it one that involves the construction of the state and federal Constitutions. City of Atlanta v. Donald, 220 Ga. 98, 137 S.E.2d 294 (1964).

Jury instructions relevant to tort action inappropriate. — In a suit to recover compensation for the damaging of real property as the consequence of a public improvement, instructions as to the measure of damages and relevant to a tort action are not appropriate. Clarke County

Procedure (Cont'd)2. Nature of Right of Action (Cont'd)

Sch. Dist. v. Madden, 99 Ga. App. 670, 110 S.E.2d 47 (1959).

3. Right to Hearing

Constitutional guaranty of trial does not extend to eminent domain proceedings. Oliver v. Union P. & W.P.R.R., 83 Ga. 257, 9 S.E. 1086 (1889).

Notice and hearing not required prior to taking. — Since the necessity for taking private property for a public use is a legislative and not a judicial function, due process does not require notice to the owner nor an opportunity to be heard by the owner before such determination can be made. State Hwy. Dep't v. Smith, 219 Ga. 800, 136 S.E.2d 334 (1964).

Owner must have opportunity to be heard on issue of value. — The right of eminent domain underlies and is therefore superior to all rights of private property, and neither notice nor an opportunity to be heard are a prerequisite to the exercise of such power, provided only that the owner have an opportunity, in the course of the condemnation proceeding, to be heard and to offer evidence as to the value of the land taken. State Hwy. Dep't v. Smith, 219 Ga. 800, 136 S.E.2d 334 (1964).

There is no constitutional right to trial by jury in eminent domain cases. DOT v. Doss, 238 Ga. 480, 233 S.E.2d 144 (1977).

4. Limitation of Actions

When action barred by statute of limitations. — Where actual damage results to abutting property and is compensable under this paragraph, an action to recover such damage must be brought within four years from the date the right of action accrues. Southern Ry. v. Leonard, 58 Ga. App. 574, 199 S.E. 433 (1938).

Where the work which resulted in damage to plaintiff's property, for which the plaintiff would have been entitled to recover under this paragraph, was done more than four years previous to the bringing of the action, the suit was barred by the statute of limitations. Lawrence v. City of La Grange, 63 Ga. App. 587, 11 S.E.2d 696 (1940).

Date of taking. — In determining whether plaintiff filed its inverse condemnation claim within the statute of limitations, the relevant time is the date upon which the taking occurred. Speer v. Miller, 864 F. Supp. 1294 (N.D. Ga. 1994); Southfund Partners v. City of Atlanta, 221 Ga. App. 666, 472 S.E.2d 499 (1996).

Taking by continuous government activity. — In inverse condemnation cases, where there is continuous government activity that damages private property, a "date of stabilization" of the impact is utilized as the date of taking, i.e., such date is measured as the point in time when the damaging activity reached a level which substantially interferes with the owner's use and enjoyment of the owner's property. Hulsey v. DOT, 230 Ga. App. 763, 498 S.E.2d 122 (1998).

Limitation on action for change of street grade. — An action against a street railway for damage caused by changing the street grade must be brought within four years from the time the work is completed for all damages, both past and future. Smith v. Central of Ga. Ry., 22 Ga. App. 572, 96 S.E. 570 (1918); Sheppard v. Georgia Ry. & Power Co., 31 Ga. App. 653, 121 S.E. 868 (1924).

Limitation on inverse condemnation claim based on taking "easement of flight." — Where defendant city, as operator of an airport, demonstrated that there had been no increase in the frequency of planes flying over plaintiff's property or change in the nature of the use of the airspace, and that its "easement of flight" was established more than four years prior to the date on which plaintiff filed its inverse condemnation claim, such claim was barred by the statute of limitations. Speer v. Miller, 864 F. Supp. 1294 (N.D. Ga. 1994).

All claims against county for taking or damaging private property for public uses must be filed within 12 months, and suit thereon for the depreciation in the market value must be instituted within the period of limitations stipulated by the law, and it is not the policy of the law to permit the bringing of suits against counties from time to time for damages which might result by reason of negligently constructed public improvements constituting a nuisance. Bibb County v. Green, 42 Ga. App. 552, 156 S.E. 745 (1931).

5. Sufficiency of Petition

Necessity of allegations of damage.

— In an action for damages to private property instituted under this paragraph and former Code 1933, § 95-1710, allegations showing the nature of the cause, describing the property damaged, and relating the manner in which the property was damaged in the construction of a designated state highway, were proper and necessary to set forth the plaintiff's case. Bartow County v. Darnell, 95 Ga. App. 193, 97 S.E.2d 610 (1957).

Necessity of allegation that change made under authority of law. — The constitutional provision or statute under which the county is alleged to be liable need not be specifically referred to, but the petition seeking a recovery for the taking or damaging of property must allege facts which, if proved, entitle the plaintiff to recover, and one of the facts it is necessary to prove is that the alleged change was made under the authority of officers of the county who were empowered by law to do the work complained of in the petition. If this is shown, then the county could not defend on the ground that its taking, in the conduct of its business, was for an unlawful purpose. McGhee v. Floyd County, 95 Ga. App. 221, 97 S.E.2d 529 (1957).

Allegations of negligence unnecessary. — While the authority of the city to establish fire stations and appurtenances thereto for the purpose of providing the citizens with fire protection is a governmental function and for mere negligence or errors committed by the officers or employees of the city in performing such function, the city is not liable where the city damages or takes the private property of one as a result of the performance of such governmental functions, a right of action under this paragraph accrues. In such a case, allegations of negligence on the part of the defendants are not necessary and will be treated as surplusage.

City of Atlanta v. Kenny, 83 Ga. App. 823, 64 S.E.2d 912 (1951).

6. Finality of Judgment and Appeal

Effect of right of review. — A judgment cannot be treated as final so long as either of the parties has the right to have the same reviewed by the appellate court; and if it is not so reviewed, it is not final until the appellate court judgment is made the judgment of the trial court. Dougherty County v. Snelling, 132 Ga. App. 540, 208 S.E.2d 362 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Zuber Lumber Co. v. City of Atlanta, 237 Ga. 358, 227 S.E.2d 362 (1976).

Effect of right to file motion for new trial. — No judgment or decree can, under the system, be said to be final until the time prescribed by law in which a motion for a new trial may be made, or a writ of error seeking to set aside such judgment has expired. Dougherty County v. Snelling, 132 Ga. App. 540, 208 S.E.2d 362 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Zuber Lumber Co. v. City of Atlanta, 237 Ga. 358, 227 S.E.2d 362 (1976).

No finality of fixing of compensation until judgment final. — When lands are being condemned for road and street purposes, there is no finality of the fixing and determining of the compensation until the judgment itself becomes final by a failure to appeal within the time provided by law, or upon a final disposition of an appeal from the judgment. State Hwy. Dep't v. Howard, 119 Ga. App. 298, 167 S.E.2d 177 (1969).

Condemnation award, upon becoming final, is conclusive as to all damages whether foreseen or not resulting from proper construction. Fulton County v. Woodside, 223 Ga. 316, 155 S.E.2d 404 (1967).

Effect of previous award on right of action. — Private property must be negligently taken or damaged for a public purpose in order for the action to prevail against the defense that recovery is barred by a previous condemnation award. Fulton County v. Woodside, 223 Ga. 316, 155 S.E.2d 404 (1967).

Payment of compensation prior to moving for new trial. — There is no provision of law requiring the payment of compensation into the registry of the court which is awarded to a new party for the first time, by a jury on appeal, as a prerequisite to an appeal to this court or the Supreme Court. State Hwy. Dep't v. Holleman, 110 Ga. App. 256, 138 S.E.2d 325 (1964).

Procedure (Cont'd)6. Finality of Judgment and Appeal (Cont'd)

It is not condition precedent that increased compensation be paid before moving for new trial or before appealing from judgment on verdict or from denial of new trial. Dougherty County v. Snelling, 132 Ga. App. 540, 208 S.E.2d 362 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Zuber Lumber Co. v. City of Atlanta, 237 Ga. 358, 227 S.E.2d 362 (1976).

For decision holding that payment of increased compensation by condemnor is condition precedent to valid appeal, see City of Gainesville v. Loggins, 224 Ga. 114, 160 S.E.2d 374 (1968).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Word "property" contained in this paragraph means personal property as well as real estate. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 141; 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 276.

Owner's recovery not restricted to market value. — The provisions in this paragraph and former Code 1933, §§ 36-104 and 36-302 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 22-1-5 and 22-1-6) as to just and adequate compensation do not necessarily restrict the owner's recovery to market value; the owner is entitled to just and adequate compensation for the owner's property; that is, the value of the property to the owner, not its value to the state. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 271.

No distinction between temporary and permanent relocations. — No distinction can be drawn, as to obligation to pay cost of removal of facilities on right-of-way, between temporary relocations and permanent relocations. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 132.

Department of Transportation may be liable for damages to private property caused by public improvements without the property adjoining or abutting the highway improvement. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-239; 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-397.

Landowner is not entitled to award of damages in condemnation case based upon mere inconvenience and circuity of travel; if the inconvenience adversely affects the market value of the remaining property, and such inconvenience is continuous and a permanent incident of the highway, then such damages may be considered, but only as such inconveniences affect the market value of the remaining property and not as a separate and independent item of damages. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-50.

Business entitled to moving expenses. — A powder company which is forced to move the location of its place of business because a highway is constructed too near the place of business is entitled to compensation for certain moving expenses. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 137.

Moving of personal property constitutes compensable damage. — The compulsory moving of personal property against the owner's will, in order to allow construction of roads on real estate acquired after the personal property in question was pledged on that real estate, constitutes "damage" to such personal property within the meaning of this paragraph. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 141 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I).

Measure of damages for moving property. — The measure of the damages in the matter of compulsory removal of personal property would include the transportation items, any "leakage" in transit, and any depreciation in value in transit. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 141.

Removal of facilities located on railroad right-of-way. — Department of Transportation may bear expense (or that part which is not borne by railroad or United States government) of removal of facilities located on railroad right-of-way. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 132.

No authorization to pay for removal of telephone line. — The Department of Transportation is not authorized to pay for the removal of a telephone line of a rural telephone co-operative from a highway right-of-way. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 139.

Department of Transportation's liability for reducing highway access. — The Department of Transportation is liable for damages to the remaining property from which a right of way was acquired when the damages or diminution in value is a result of change of access or a reduction of access to any particular highway. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 521.

Use of inactive railroad right-of-way as trail. — Under ICC procedures, a railroad may enter into an agreement which allows interim trail use of an inactive right-of-way without triggering reversionary interests under state law; absent such agreement, upon approval of abandonment by the ICC, state law determines the nature, scope, and duration of the interest held by the railroad. 1992 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U92-11.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 26 Am. Jur. 2d, Eminent Domain, §§ 1 et seq., 7.

C.J.S. — 29A C.J.S., Eminent Domain, § 1 et seq.

ALR. — Right to interest in condemnation proceedings during owner's retention of possession, 32 ALR 98.

Damage to property from proximity of cemetery as "damage" within constitutional provision against taking or damaging property without compensation, 36 ALR 527.

Provision for taking or retaining possession pending appeal in condemnation proceeding, 55 ALR 201.

Right to and measure of compensation for animals or trees destroyed to prevent spread of disease or infection, 67 ALR 208.

Tax on automobile, or on its use, for cost of road or street construction, improvement, or maintenance, 68 ALR 200.

Constitutionality of provisions as to tribunal which shall fix the amount of compensation for taking of property in eminent domain, otherwise than objections that a trial by jury is necessary, 74 ALR 569.

Power to condemn, or authorize the condemnation of, capital stock of a public utility, 81 ALR 1071.

Constitutionality, construction and application of statute authorizing condemnation of property by cross action, 130 ALR 1226.

Compensation for property confiscated or requisitioned during war, 137 ALR 1290; 144 ALR 1506; 147 ALR 1297; 148 ALR 1384; 149 ALR 1451; 149 ALR 1452; 149 ALR 1474; 150 ALR 1417; 150 ALR

1418; 150 ALR 1480; 151 ALR 1453; 151 ALR 1473; 152 ALR 1450; 154 ALR 1447.

Extraterritorial effect of confiscation of property and nationalization of corporations, 139 ALR 1209.

General governmental policy (distinguished from specific project) as affecting compensation allowable in eminent domain, 167 ALR 502.

Damage to private property caused by negligence of governmental agents as "taking," "damage," or "use" for public purposes, in constitutional sense, 2 ALR2d 677.

Admissibility in condemnation proceedings of opinion evidence as to probable profits derivable from land condemned if devoted to particular agricultural purposes, 16 ALR2d 1113.

Eminent domain: elements and measure of compensation for oil or gas pipeline through private property, 38 ALR2d 788; 23 ALR4th 631.

Municipal power to condemn land for cemetery, 54 ALR2d 1322.

Apportionment and division of area of river as between riparian tracts fronting on same bank, in absence of agreement or specification, 65 ALR2d 143.

Cost to property owner of moving personal property as element of damages or compensation in eminent domain proceedings, 69 ALR2d 1453.

Admissibility on issue of value of real property of evidence of sale price of other real property, 85 ALR2d 110.

Eminent domain: restrictive covenant or right to enforcement thereof as compensable property right, 4 ALR3d 1137.

Depreciation in value, from project for which land is condemned, as a factor in fixing compensation, 5 ALR3d 901.

Substitute condemnation: power to condemn property or interest therein to replace other property taken for public use, 20 ALR3d 862.

Propriety and effect, in eminent domain proceedings, of instructions to the jury as to landowner's unwillingness to sell property, 20 ALR3d 1081.

Eminent domain: charging landowner with rent or use value of land where he remains in possession after condemnation, 20 ALR3d 1164.

Right of attorney appointed by court for indigent accused to, and court's power to award, compensation by public, in absence of statute or court rule, 21 ALR3d 819.

Eminent domain: cost of substitute facilities as measure of compensation to state or municipality for condemnation of public property, 40 ALR3d 143.

Abutting owner's right to damages for limitation of access caused by conversion of conventional road into limited-access highway, 42 ALR3d 13.

Measure of damages for condemnation of cemetery lands, 42 ALR3d 1314.

Propriety of court's consideration of ecological effects of proposed project in determining right of condemnation, 47 ALR3d 1267.

Plotting or planning in anticipation of improvement as taking or damaging of property affected, 49 ALR3d 127.

Traffic noise and vibration from highway as element of damages in eminent domain, 51 ALR3d 860.

Good will or "going concern" value as element of lessee's compensation for taking leasehold in eminent domain, 58 ALR3d 566.

Loss of liquor license as compensable in condemnation proceeding, 58 ALR3d 581.

Compensation for diminution in value of the remainder of property resulting from taking or use of adjoining land of others for the same undertaking, 59 ALR3d 488.

Eminent domain: consideration of fact that landowner's remaining land will be subject to special assessment in fixing severance damages, 59 ALR3d 534.

Eminent domain: condemnor's liability for costs of condemnee's expert witnesses, 68 ALR3d 546.

Eminent domain: determination of just compensation for condemnation of billboards or other advertising signs, 73 ALR3d 1122.

Admissibility under state law of hospital record relating to intoxication or sobriety of patient, 80 ALR3d 456.

Eminent domain: right to condemn property owned or used by private educational, charitable, or religious organization, 80 ALR3d 833.

Good will as element of damages for condemnation of property on which private business is conducted, 81 ALR3d 198.

Necessity of trial or proceeding, separate from main condemnation trial or proceeding, to determine divided interest in state condemnation award, 94 ALR3d 696.

Unsightliness of powerline or other wire, or related structure, as element of damages in easement condemnation proceeding, 97 ALR3d 587.

Zoning regulations limiting use of property near airport as taking of property, 18 ALR4th 542.

Sufficiency of condemnor's negotiations required as preliminary to taking in eminent domain, 21 ALR4th 765.

Eminent domain: possibility of overcoming specific obstacles to contemplated use as element in determining existence of necessary public use, 22 ALR4th 840.

Airport operations or flight of aircraft as constituting taking or damaging of property, 22 ALR4th 863.

Fear of powerline, gas or oil pipeline, or related structure as element of damages in easement condemnation proceeding, 23 ALR4th 631.

Damages resulting from temporary conditions incident to public improvements or repairs as compensable taking, 23 ALR4th 674.

Eminent domain: compensability of loss of view from owner's property — state cases, 25 ALR4th 671.

Eminent domain: public taking of sports or entertainment franchise or organization as taking for public purpose, 30 ALR4th 1226.

Eminent domain: measure and elements of damages or compensation for condemnation of public transportation system, 35 ALR4th 1263.

Validity, construction, and application of state relocation assistance laws, 49 ALR4th 491.

Inverse condemnation state court class actions, 49 ALR4th 618.

Court appointment of attorney to represent, without compensation, indigent in civil action, 52 ALR4th 1063.

Eminent domain: industrial park or similar development as public use justifying condemnation of private property, 62 ALR4th 1183.

Eminent domain: compensability of loss of visibility of owner's property, 7 ALR5th 113.

Abutting owner's right to damages for limitation of access caused by traffic regulation, 15 ALR5th 821.

Right to compensation for real property damaged by law enforcement personnel in course of apprehending suspect, 23 ALR5th 834.

Measure of damages or compensation in eminent domain as affected by premises being restricted to particular educational, religious, charitable or noncommercial use, 29 ALR5th 36.

Application of Kelo v. City of New London, 545 U.S. 469, 125 S. Ct. 2655, 162 L. Ed. 2d 439 (2005), to "Public Use" restrictions in federal and state constitutions takings clauses and eminent domain statutes, 21 ALR6th 261.

Admissibility of hospital records under Federal Business Records, 9 ALR Fed. 457.

Validity of extraterritorial condemnation by municipality, 44 ALR6th 259.

Elements and measure of compensation in eminent domain proceeding for temporary taking of property, 49 ALR6th 205.

Zoning scheme, plan, or ordinance as temporary taking, 55 ALR6th 635.

Paragraph II. Private ways.

In case of necessity, private ways may be granted upon just and adequate compensation being first paid by the applicant.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

This paragraph is not a grant of power to ordinaries (now judges of the probate courts) or county commissioners. Board of Comm'rs v. Harris, 71 Ga. 250 (1883).

Paragraph has no application to private way acquired by prescription. Everedge v. Alexander, 75 Ga. 858 (1885).

Paragraph has no reference to other private ways sections. — A private way, created by necessary implication, was wholly distinct from a private way over the land of a stranger, also provided by former Code 1933, § 85-1401 (see now O.C.G.A. § 44-9-1), from "compulsory purchase and sale through the ordinary (now superior court)" under the procedure of former Code 1933, §§ 83-101 and 83-102 (see now O.C.G.A. § 44-9-40); and consequently this paragraph had no reference thereto. Calhoun v. Ozburn, 186 Ga. 569, 198 S.E. 706 (1938).

Definition of necessity for purposes of granting private way. — Cases of necessity do not arise except where the way sought to be laid out is absolutely indispensable to the applicant, as a means of reaching the applicant's property. Chattanooga, Rome & S.R.R. v. Philpot, 112 Ga. 153, 37 S.E. 181 (1900); Gaines v. Lunsford, 120 Ga. 370, 47 S.E. 967 (1904).

When property right is taken or vested. — No property right is taken from a property owner, nor vested in a private way petitioner, until after all of the rights have been finally established, the compensation is paid, and the court makes such a "grant" by final judgment. Cline v. McMullan, 263 Ga. 321, 431 S.E.2d 368 (1993).

Cotenancy interests in underlying fee. — Condemnation of an easement against a party who has a cotenancy interest in the underlying fee is not prohibited as a matter of law, but is permissible in cases in which there is sufficient evidence establishing the “necessity” for acquisition of the easement and the exclusive use thereof. Benton v. Georgia Marble Co., 258 Ga. 58, 365 S.E.2d 413 (1988).

Mining or quarrying. — O.C.G.A. § 44-9-70’s “necessity” standard, which is based upon the successful operation of the applicant’s business of mining or quarrying, is a valid exercise of the General Assembly’s state constitutional authority with respect to the declaration of private ways of necessity. Benton v. Georgia Marble Co., 258 Ga. 58, 365 S.E.2d 413 (1988).

Paragraph III. Tidewater titles confirmed.

The Act of the General Assembly approved December 16, 1902, which extends the title of ownership of lands abutting on tidal water to low water mark, is hereby ratified and confirmed.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. III, Para. II.

Cross references. — Rights of owners of land adjacent to or covered by navigable tidewaters, § 44-8-7.

Law reviews. — For article, “Public Rights in Georgia’s Tidelands,” see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 79 (1974). For article discussing State v. Ashmore, 236 Ga. 401, 224 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 830, 97 S. Ct. 90, 50 L. Ed. 2d 93 (1976), appearing below, see 12 Ga. St. B.J. 201 (1976).

For note, “Regulation and Ownership of the Marshlands: The Georgia Marshlands Act” (Part 4, Art. 4, Ch. 5, T. 12), see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 563 (1971).

For comment on State v. Ashmore, 236 Ga. 401, 224 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 830, 97 S. Ct. 90, 50 L. Ed. 2d 93 (1976), see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 1051 (1976); 27 Mercer L. Rev. 1229 (1976).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Ratification of Act effective. — The constitutional ratification in 1945 of former Code 1933, §§ 85-1307, 85-1308, and 85-1309 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 44-8-6 and 44-8-7), which had been in effect since their enactment and which had not been held to be unconstitutional, was effective and immunized these sections from a later attack. State v. Ashmore, 236 Ga. 401, 224 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 830, 97 S. Ct. 90, 50 L. Ed. 2d 93 (1976), commented on in 12 Ga. St. B.J. 201 (1976) and 27 Mercer L. Rev. 1229 (1976).

Paragraph does not extend titles. — Any argument that this paragraph by its own terms extended the titles of landowners adjacent to tidewaters to the low water mark is completely contrary to the intention of the constitutional commission and is untenable. State v. Ashmore, 236 Ga. 401, 224 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 830, 97 S. Ct. 90, 50 L. Ed. 2d 93 (1976), commented on in 12 Ga. St. B.J. 201 (1976) and 27 Mercer L. Rev. 1229 (1976).

Effect of opening phrase. — The phrase: “The Act of the General Assembly approved December 16, 1902, which extends the title . . .” is not self-executing and is neither mandatory nor directory, but is merely for the purpose of identification of the Act being approved. State v. Ashmore, 236 Ga. 401, 224 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 830, 97 S. Ct. 90, 50 L. Ed. 2d 93 (1976), commented on in 12 Ga. St. B.J. 201 (1976) and 27 Mercer L. Rev. 1229 (1976).

Whatever rights individual parties may have in the foreshore must be determined under former Code 1933, §§ 85-1307, 85-1308, and 85-1309 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 44-8-6 and 44-8-7). State v. Ashmore, 236 Ga. 401, 224 S.E.2d 334, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 830, 97 S. Ct. 90, 50 L. Ed. 2d 93 (1976), commented on in 12 Ga. St. B.J. 201 (1976) and 27 Mercer L. Rev. 1229 (1976).

Land registration judgment invalid if state not served. — State is an adjoining landowner in tidelands and must be so named in a petition and served other than by advertisement “To Whom It May Concern,” and a land registration judgment, if granted, would not be binding upon an adjoining landowner who was not named and served. State v. Bruce, 231 Ga. 783, 204 S.E.2d 106 (1974).

Cited in Caldwell v. Hill, 179 Ga. 417, 176 S.E. 381 (1934); Fulton Bag & Cotton Mills v. Williams, 212 Ga. 783, 95 S.E.2d 848 (1956); Baranan v. State Bd. of Nursing Home Adm’rs, 143 Ga. App. 605, 239 S.E.2d 533 (1977).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Extent of state’s ownership. — If the state is classed with all of the other owners of tidewater land, the boundaries of its property clearly extend to the low-water mark or encompass generally the entire tidewater bed; but when the state’s unique position as local political sovereign is taken into consideration, its rights of ownership extend far beyond this point for an additional three miles out to sea. 1965-66 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 66-49.

Boundaries of tidewater lands owned by state extend to low-water mark in contrast to either point of high water or mean water. — See 1965-66 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 66-49.

Owner of marshland not to impede public right of enjoyment. — In the unlikely event that one should establish a title to marshland, such person could not use the property in such a way as to impede the public right of enjoyment thereof unless the grant to the marshland expresses a full relinquishment of all public rights. Position Paper, 3-23-70, 1970 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 279.

SECTION IV.

MARRIAGE

Paragraph

I. Recognition of marriage.

Cross references. — Marriage, T. 19, C. 3.

Law reviews. — For article, “Lochner, Lawrence, and Liberty,” see 27 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 609 (2011). For article, “Marriage, Death and Taxes: The Estate Planning Impact of Windsor and Obergefell on Georgia’s Same Sex Spouses,” see 21 Ga. St. Bar. J. 9 (Oct. 2015).

Paragraph I. Recognition of marriage.

(a) This state shall recognize as marriage only the union of man and woman. Marriages between persons of the same sex are prohibited in this state.

(b) No union between persons of the same sex shall be recognized by this state as entitled to the benefits of marriage. This state shall not give effect to any public act, record, or judicial proceeding of any other state or jurisdiction respecting a relationship between persons of the same sex that is treated as a marriage under the laws of such other state or jurisdiction. The courts of this state shall have no jurisdiction to grant a divorce or separate maintenance with respect to any such relationship or otherwise to consider or rule on any of the parties' respective rights arising as a result of or in connection with such relationship. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 1, § 4, Para. 1, approved by Ga. L. 2004, p. 1111, § 1/SR 595.)

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 2004, p. 1111, § 1) which added Section IV and this Paragraph was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 2, 2004.

Law reviews. — For article, "A Holy Secular Institution," see 58 Emory L.J. 1123 (2009).

For article, "Polygamous Unions? Charting the Contours of Marriage Law's Frontier," see 64 Emory L.J. 1669 (2015). For article, "Why Two In One Flesh? The Western Case for Monogamy Over Polygamy," see 64 Emory L.J. 1675 (2015). For article, "Should Civil Marriage Be Opened

Up to Multiple Parties," see 64 Emory L.J. 1747 (2015). For article, "Three May Not Be a Crowd: The Case for a Constitutional Right to Plural Marriage," see 64 Emory L.J. 1977 (2015). For article, "The Evolution of Plural Parentage Applying Vulnerability Theory to Polygamy and Same Sex Marriage," see 64 Emory L.J. 2047 (2015). For article, "Polygyny and Violence Against Women," see 64 Emory L.J. 1767 (2015).

For comment, "L'Amour for Four: Polygyny, Polyamory, and the State's Compelling Economic Interest in Normative Monogamy," see 64 Emory L.J. 2093 (2015).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — Prohibition against recognizing same-sex unions as entitled to the benefits of marriage was not "dissimilar and discordant" to the objective of reserving the status of marriage and its attendant benefits exclusively to unions of man and woman; Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. IV, Para. I did not violate the multiple-subject matter rule. Perdue v. O'Kelley, 280 Ga. 732, 632 S.E.2d 110 (2006).

ARTICLE II. VOTING AND ELECTIONS

Section

- I. Method of Voting; Right to Register and Vote.
- II. General Provisions.
- III. Suspension and Removal of Public Officials.

SECTION I.

METHOD OF VOTING; RIGHT TO REGISTER AND VOTE

Paragraph

- I. Method of voting.
- II. Right to register and vote.

Paragraph

- III. Exceptions to right to register and vote.

Paragraph I. Method of voting.

Elections by the people shall be by secret ballot and shall be conducted in accordance with procedures provided by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. II, Sec. I, Para. I.

Cross references. — Voting by paper ballot generally, § 21-2-280 et seq.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Standing to sue. — Election candidate and chairman of county board of elections lacked standing to complain about alleged violations of a voter's constitutional rights under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. I, Para. I and the fifth amendment to the United States Constitution. Hammill v. Valentine, 258 Ga. 603, 373 S.E.2d 9 (1988).

Methods of voting. — Nothing in Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. I, Para. I limits voting to some method or methods under which each voter indicates his or her choice or choices on a separate piece of paper issued to him or her for that purpose because it contemplates that the legislature shall provide a method, or methods, of voting at elections in such a way that not even those who count or tabulate the votes will know how any particular voter voted; those portions of direct recording electronic equipment which store and count the number of votes do not vitiate the nature of elections as “by the people” but simply take the place of ballot boxes and human counters. Favorito v. Handel, 285 Ga. 795, 684 S.E.2d 257 (2009).

In an action by a political party challenging the 2006 Photo ID Act, amending O.C.G.A. § 21-2-417, the photo ID requirement for in-person voting was authorized by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. I, Para. I, as a reasonable procedure for verifying that the individual appearing to vote in person was actually the same person who registered to vote. Democratic Party of Ga., Inc. v. Perdue, 288 Ga. 720, 707 S.E.2d 67 (2011).

Cited in Jones v. Darby, 174 Ga. 71, 161 S.E. 835 (1931); Lloyds Am. v. Brown, 187 Ga. 240, 200 S.E. 292 (1938); Ledger-Enquirer Co. v. Brown, 213 Ga. 538, 100 S.E.2d 166 (1957); Mathew v. Ellis, 214 Ga. 665, 107 S.E.2d 181 (1959).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 25 Am. Jur. 2d, Elections, §§ 1 et seq., 97 et seq., 191 et seq., 26 Am. Jur. 2d, Elections, § 239 et seq.

Paragraph II. Right to register and vote.

Every person who is a citizen of the United States and a resident of Georgia as defined by law, who is at least 18 years of age and not disenfranchised by this article, and who meets minimum residency requirements as provided by law shall be entitled to vote at any election by the people. The General Assembly shall provide by law for the registration of electors.

1976 Constitution. — Art. II, Sec. I, Paras. I, II; Art. II, Sec. II, Para. II.

Cross references. — Right of citizens to vote generally, § 1-2-6. Qualifications of electors generally, § 21-2-16. Residence of person desiring to vote, § 21-2-217. Registration cards, § 21-2-219. Registration requirements, § 21-2-451. False registration, § 21-2-561.

Law reviews. — For article, “The 2011

Randolph W. Thrower Symposium: Judging Politics: Judges as Political Actors, Candidates, and Arbiters of the Political: Anticipatory Overrulings, Invitations, Time Bombs, and Inadvertence: How Supreme Court Justices Move the Law,” see 61 Emory L.J. 779 (2012). For article, “Reasonable Restrictions on the Franchise: Georgia’s Voter Identification Act of 2006,” see 63 Mercer L. Rev. 1129 (2012).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Right of suffrage may be regulated but not taken away. Stewart v. Cartwright, 156 Ga. 192, 118 S.E. 859 (1923).

Paragraph a constitutional guaranty of rights of suffrage. — This paragraph amounts to a constitutional guaranty of the rights of suffrage, which, though subject to reasonable regulation, cannot be absolutely denied or taken away. King v. County Bd. of Educ., 174 Ga. 685, 164 S.E. 52 (1932).

Authority of General Assembly to pass registration laws. — This paragraph clearly indicates that the General Assembly is authorized to enact laws for the registration of electors. Franklin v. Harper, 205 Ga. 779, 55 S.E.2d 221 (1949), appeal dismissed, 339 U.S. 946, 70 S. Ct. 804, 94 L. Ed. 1361 (1950).

Action in federal court for injunction against state violated eleventh amendment to the United States Constitution. — In an action in which voting rights organizations, as well as individuals, sought an injunction to restrain the state from attempting to enforce the photo ID requirement imposed by HB 244, the State of Georgia was the real party in interest, and the plaintiffs’ claim that HB 244 violated two sections of the Georgia Constitution clearly was a cause of action against a state for alleged violations of state law, and was barred by the eleventh amendment. Common Cause/GA v. Billups, 406 F. Supp. 2d 1326 (N.D. Ga. 2005).

Exclusion of black voters qualified and offering to vote at municipal election rendered it void. Howell v. Pate, 119 Ga. 537, 46 S.E. 667 (1904).

No standing to challenge constitutionality. — Plaintiff lacked standing to challenge the constitutionality of the 2006 Photo-ID Act at the time the complaint was filed, and thus the determination that the act violated Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. I, Paras. II and III had to be vacated; the plaintiff could have voted in person under O.C.G.A. § 21-2-417 without a photo identification, as the plaintiff did not contend that the plaintiff lacked any of the forms of non-photo identification allowed to be shown by first-time voters. Perdue v. Lake, 282 Ga. 348, 647 S.E.2d 6 (2007).

Right of suffrage is a political right, as compared with a property or civil right. Franklin v. Harper, 205 Ga. 779, 55 S.E.2d 221 (1949), appeal dismissed, 339 U.S. 946, 70 S. Ct. 804, 94 L. Ed. 1361 (1950).

Power of General Assembly to prescribe how qualifications determined. — Where the state Constitution provides who shall be entitled to vote, the legislature cannot take from or add to the qualification unless the power is granted expressly or by necessary implication. However, the legislature has a wide latitude in determining how the qualifications required by the Constitution may be determined, provided it does not deny the right of franchise by making the exercise of such right so difficult or inconvenient as to amount to a denial of the right to vote. Franklin v. Harper, 205 Ga. 779, 55 S.E.2d 221 (1949), appeal dismissed, 339 U.S. 946, 70 S. Ct. 804, 94 L. Ed. 1361 (1950).

Legislature may prescribe additional grounds of qualification for voters in municipal elections, not inconsistent with those stated in the Constitution. Harris v. McMillan, 186 Ga. 529, 198 S.E. 250 (1938).

Fact that citizen who meets one of several tests provided by Constitution had to register or reregister does not deprive the citizen of the citizen's right of suffrage, but is only a reasonable regulation under which the right may be exercised. Franklin v. Harper, 205 Ga. 779, 55 S.E.2d 221 (1949), appeal dismissed, 339 U.S. 946, 70 S. Ct. 804, 94 L. Ed. 1361 (1950).

Duties other than mere citizenship to qualify as voter. — Even one who has established citizenship, which is broad enough to include both residence and domicile within a county, must perform other public duties such as registration before one is a qualified voter. Avery v. Bower, 170 Ga. 202, 152 S.E. 239 (1930).

Neither residence nor domicile, standing alone, furnishes qualifications for privilege of voting. Avery v. Bower, 170 Ga. 202, 152 S.E. 239 (1930).

No person whose name appears upon list of registered voters is entitled to vote if that person is otherwise disqualified, as by nonpayment of taxes, nonresidence, etc. Smith v. Board of Educ., 174 Ga. 735, 164 S.E. 41 (1932).

County commissioners have power to pay out of general county funds costs of county registrars in preparing lists of voters. Howell v. Bankston, 181 Ga. 59, 181 S.E. 761 (1935).

Allegation of residence not equivalent to allegation of status as voter. — The allegation that defendant is a resident within a city and an independent school district is not the equivalent of an allegation that the defendant is a voter of such independent school district. Avery v. Bower, 170 Ga. 202, 152 S.E. 239 (1930).

Presence of name on list of registered voters only prima facie evidence of qualification. — While the list of registered voters furnished to the managers of the election by the county registrars absolutely controls them, and while they have no power to allow one to vote whose name is not on the list, or to refuse anyone the right to vote whose name is on the list, this does not require and permit that in the case of a contest the votes of persons otherwise disqualified to vote should be counted; but, on the contrary, such votes should be rejected. Such list of registered voters is only prima facie evidence that they are otherwise qualified to vote. Smith v. Board of Educ., 174 Ga. 735, 164 S.E. 41 (1932).

Requirements of residence in subdivisions such as voting precincts or districts are regulated by statute. Avery v. Bower, 170 Ga. 202, 152 S.E. 239 (1930).

State has right to close registration lists before election. — A state durational residence requirement for voting is violative of U.S. Const., amend. 14. However, a state has the right to close its registration lists at some time prior to the day of election. This closing is not for the purpose of establishing any durational residence requirement, but for administrative purposes such as purging names, preparing election district voter's lists, and other similar tasks. Abbott v. Carter, 356 F. Supp. 280 (N.D. Ga. 1972).

Refusal to count elector's vote is tantamount to refusal to allow the elector to cast it. Thompson v. Willson, 223 Ga. 370, 155 S.E.2d 401 (1967).

Voter cannot be restricted to choice between names on ballot. — Elector has the right to write on the ballot any person the elector wishes to vote for, and cannot be restricted to a choice between those whose names are provided on the ballot. Thompson v. Willson, 223 Ga. 370, 155 S.E.2d 401 (1967).

Restriction of power of General Assembly to regulate voting. — While the General Assembly has the power to prescribe the method of exercising the corporate power of a municipality, nevertheless, if it does so by authorizing voting procedures it cannot limit the vote of an elector so as to deprive the voter, of the right to vote. Thompson v. Willson, 223 Ga. 370, 155 S.E.2d 401 (1967).

Municipal ordinances requiring registration violate paragraph. — City laws requiring the registration of voters at municipal elections are in conflict with this paragraph. McMahon v. Mayor of Savannah, 66 Ga. 217, 42 Am. R. 65 (1880).

Constitutionality of School Superintendent election statute. — The provision in Ga. L. 1919, p. 288, § 147 (see former O.C.G.A. § 20-2-101), which read in part, "provided, if there is in this county one or more independent school systems not under the supervision of the county superintendent, the voters of such independent system or systems shall not vote in the election for the county superintendent," was not unconstitutional upon the ground that it was in conflict with this paragraph. Bower v. Avery, 172 Ga. 272, 158 S.E. 10 (1931).

So much of Ga. L. 1919, p. 288, § 147 (see now O.C.G.A. § 20-2-101) as declared that, "if there is in this county one or more independent school systems not under the supervision of the county superintendent, the voters of such independent system or systems shall not vote in the election for the county superintendent," was not violative of this paragraph. Olliff v. Hendrix, 172 Ga. 497, 158 S.E. 11 (1931).

County commissioners have power to pay out of general county funds costs of county registrars in preparing "lists of voters." Howell v. Bankston, 181 Ga. 59, 181 S.E. 761 (1935).

Cited in Avery v. Bower, 170 Ga. 202, 152 S.E. 239 (1930); Overton v. Gandy, 170 Ga. 562, 153 S.E. 520 (1930); Briscoe v. Between Consol. Sch. Dist., 171 Ga. 820, 156 S.E. 654 (1931); Jones v. Darby, 174 Ga. 71, 161 S.E. 835 (1931); Hooper v. Almand, 196 Ga. 52, 25 S.E.2d 778 (1943); Griffin v. Trapp, 205 Ga. 176, 53 S.E.2d 92 (1949); Wittke v. Horne's Enters., Inc., 118 Ga. App. 211, 162 S.E.2d 898 (1968); Turner v. Fouche, 396 U.S. 346, 90 S. Ct. 532, 24 L. Ed. 2d 567 (1970); Marchman v. State, 132 Ga. App. 677, 209 S.E.2d 88 (1974).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Registration form requesting racial identification. — Registration to vote may not be conditioned upon an applicant supplying the applicant's race on a registration application, though race may be requested as an optional part of the registration process. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 95-35.

Question of moving residence one of fact. — Once a person has established one's legal residence under this paragraph, then the question as to whether or not that person has removed their residence is a question of fact, of which intention is the principal determining factor. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 129.

Elector cannot be disenfranchised simply by loss of the elector's voter registration card by county officials; an elector whose name appears on an electors' list, and who is not disqualified, must be allowed to vote in future elections. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-58.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 25 Am. Jur. 2d, Elections, §§ 1 et seq., 50 et seq, 196 et seq. 26 Am. Jur. 2d, Elections, § 239 et seq.

C.J.S. — 29 C.J.S., Elections, § 25 et seq.

ALR. — State voting rights of residents of federal military establishment, 34 ALR2d 1193.

Validity of absentee voters' laws, 97 ALR2d 218.

Residence of students for voting purposes, 44 ALR3d 797.

Paragraph III. Exceptions to right to register and vote.

(a) No person who has been convicted of a felony involving moral turpitude may register, remain registered, or vote except upon completion of the sentence.

(b) No person who has been judicially determined to be mentally incompetent may register, remain registered, or vote unless the disability has been removed.

1976 Constitution. — Art. II, Sec. II, Para. I.

Cross references. — Qualifications of electors generally, § 21-2-216. Removal of electors, § 21-2-231. Effect of pardon, § 42-9-54.

Law reviews. — For article on the effects of a conviction based on a nolo contendere plea on voting and holding public office, see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 723 (1979). For article, "Reasonable Restrictions on the Franchise: Georgia's Voter Identification Act of 2006," see 63 Mercer L. Rev. 1129 (2012).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality of disenfranchisement. — Disenfranchisement of persons convicted of crimes of moral turpitude does not violate U.S. Const., amend. 14, sec. 1, because U.S. Const., amend. 14, sec. 2, specifically qualifies equal protection guarantees by recognizing the right of a state to disenfranchise persons "for participation in rebellion or other crime." Kronlund v. Honstein, 327 F. Supp. 71 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

No standing to challenge constitutionality. — Plaintiff lacked standing to challenge the constitutionality of the 2006 Photo-ID Act at the time the complaint was filed, and thus the determination that the act violated Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. I, Paras. II and III had to be vacated; the plaintiff could have voted in person under O.C.G.A. § 21-2-417 without a photo identification, as the plaintiff did not contend that the plaintiff lacked any of the forms of non-photo identification allowed to be shown by first-time voters.

Perdue v. Lake, 282 Ga. 348, 647 S.E.2d 6 (2007).

Action in federal court for injunction against state violated eleventh amendment to the United States Constitution. — In an action in which voting rights organizations, as well as individuals, sought an injunction to restrain the state from attempting to enforce the photo ID requirement imposed by HB 244, the State of Georgia was the real party in interest, and the plaintiffs' claim that HB 244 violated two sections of the Georgia Constitution clearly was a cause of action against a state for alleged violations of state law, and was barred by the eleventh amendment. Common Cause/GA v. Billups, 406 F. Supp. 2d 1326 (N.D. Ga. 2005).

Compelling state interest. — A state may constitutionally disenfranchise otherwise qualified voters because they have been convicted of a felony, since the state has a compelling interest in protecting the integrity of its electoral process. Kronlund v. Honstein, 327 F. Supp. 71 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

State may prohibit idiots and insane persons, as well as those convicted of certain offenses, from participating in elections. Kronlund v. Honstein, 327 F. Supp. 71 (N.D. Ga. 1971).

No conviction when verdict set aside or subject to being set aside. — If a jury's verdict of guilty has been set aside or is under review and thus subject to being set aside either by motion for new trial, bill of exceptions or other appropriate procedure, there is no conviction within the meaning of this paragraph. Summerour v. Cartrett, 220 Ga. 31, 136 S.E.2d 724 (1964).

State may disenfranchise habitual DUI offenders. — Conviction under the habitual DUI offender provision of O.C.G.A. § 40-5-58(c)(2) is a crime of moral turpitude for purposes of Ga. Const.

1983, Art. II, Sec. I. Jarrard v. Clayton County Bd. of Registrars, 262 Ga. 759, 425 S.E.2d 874 (1993), overruled on other grounds, Cook v. Board of Registrars, 291 Ga. 67, 727 S.E.2d 478 (2012).

Transportation and possession of non-tax-paid liquor is not a crime involving moral turpitude. Hutto v. Rowland, 226 Ga. 889, 178 S.E.2d 180 (1970).

Unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors is not a crime involving moral turpitude. Hutto v. Rowland, 226 Ga. 889, 178 S.E.2d 180 (1970).

Photo identification requirement. — In an action by a political party challenging the 2006 Photo ID Act, amending O.C.G.A. § 21-2-417, no voter was disenfranchised by the Act and, therefore, the Act did not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. I, Para. III. Democratic Party of Ga., Inc. v. Perdue, 288 Ga. 720, 707 S.E.2d 67 (2011).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

MORAL TURPITUDE

OPINIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW

General Consideration

This paragraph is not concerned with punishment imposed for conviction of crime but rather with conviction itself. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-17.

Conviction rather than fine or imprisonment deprives a person of the person's civil and political rights. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 477.

Necessity of final adjudication of guilt. — The word "conviction," for purposes of this paragraph, refers to an adjudication of guilt which is final. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-26.

Persons awaiting trial are eligible to register and to vote; those who are incarcerated cannot be denied these rights by virtue of their incarceration. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-137.

Effect of conviction outside state. — An individual convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude, in a jurisdiction outside the State of Georgia, is not entitled to vote in Georgia, so long as such crime is punishable in Georgia by imprisonment. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-92.

Youth committing crime punishable by imprisonment disqualified. — Where a youth has not been imprisoned in a penitentiary but has been committed to the Department of Offender Rehabilitation (now Department of Corrections), if the crime committed is punishable by imprisonment, the disqualification of the right to vote attaches. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-17.

Elector who is convicted of crime of abandonment and receives felony punishment would be disfranchised. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 124.

Conviction of a misdemeanor does not deprive a person of voting rights. — A person who has been convicted of a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude shall not be prevented from exercising voting rights regardless of whether the sentence has been completed. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-43.

One can lose one's right to vote and hold public office only upon conviction for a felony involving moral turpitude and can no longer lose these rights by conviction for a misdemeanor. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-33.

A conviction resulting from a nolo contendere plea cannot be used to impose any disability including disqualification from voting, holding public office, and jury service. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-33.

Persons entitled to restoration of rights. — On July 1, 1983, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. I, Para. III shall serve to restore the voting rights of persons who meet the requirements of the provision regardless of when the crime was committed, the person was convicted, or the sentence was completed. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-43.

Restoration of civil rights is not necessary to enable one who has completed one's sentence to register to vote. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-33.

Judicial determination of mental incompetence. — A judge of probate court may, in the course of a proceeding for the appointment of a guardian for an incapacitated adult, judicially determine a person to be mentally incompetent and thereby remove the person's right to vote. 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 85-48.

A separate judicial determination must be made that a person is "mentally incompetent" prior to the removal of a person's right to vote. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 95-27.

Moral Turpitude

For meaning of the term "moral turpitude," see 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 115.

Violations of statutes expressing moral judgment of community. — Any crime constituting intentional violation of statute expressing moral judgment of the community against prohibited conduct would involve moral turpitude. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-352.

Murder as involving moral turpitude. — Murder involves vileness and depravity, for it is the result of an abandoned and malignant heart, and is a crime involving moral turpitude. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 291.

Offenses committed by juveniles. — Person convicted of crime before reaching age of 17 loses that person's right to vote if convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude even though the person is committed to the State Department of Human Resources, rather than sentenced to the Board of Corrections. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-17.

All felonies considered as involving moral turpitude. — It is recommended that, for purposes of granting clemency and restoring civil rights, the Board of Pardons and Paroles consider all felonies as involving moral turpitude. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-33.

Drug-related offense. — Generally, a drug-related offense classified as a felony is a felony involving moral turpitude which will remove a person's right to vote, but the right to vote may not be withheld until a conviction becomes final. 1986 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 86-15.

Opinions Under Prior Law

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, opinions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. I and antecedent provisions, relating to the continued disenfranchisement of felony convicts until the granting of a pardon, are included in the annotations for this paragraph. Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. I, Para. III now provides for continued disenfranchisement of a felony convict until completion of the sentence.

Serving sentence, by itself, does not restore person's right to vote, but the grant of a pardon will restore a person's right to vote. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-374.

Word "pardoned" as contained in this paragraph must be given no stricter meaning than that traditionally required by law, namely, an act of executive clemency. 1952-53 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 136.

Grant of certificate of good conduct in other state does not restore Georgia right to vote. — One convicted of a felony in another state is deprived of one's right to register and vote in Georgia, and the grant of a certificate of good conduct to end disability under the other state's law would not restore one's right to vote in this state; in order to have one's disabilities removed it would be necessary to obtain a pardon from the pardoning power of the other state. 1950-51 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 298.

Opinions Under Prior Law (Cont'd)

Order of restoration of civil rights allows voting and holding office. —

The order of restoration of civil rights is no different from a pardon and the order restoring civil rights is sufficient to meet the requirements of this paragraph authorizing persons previously disenfranchised to be allowed to again vote and hold office. 1952-53 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 136.

SECTION II.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Paragraph

- I. Procedures to be provided by law.
- II. Run-off election.
- III. Persons not eligible to hold office.

Paragraph

- IV. Recall of public officials holding elective office.
- V. Vacancies created by elected officials qualifying for other office.

Paragraph I. Procedures to be provided by law.

The General Assembly shall provide by law for a method of appeal from the decision to allow or refuse to allow any person to register or vote and shall provide by law for a procedure whereby returns of all elections by the people shall be made to the Secretary of State.

1976 Constitution. — Art. II, Sec. II, Paras. III, IV; Art. II, Sec. III, Para. IV; Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. III.

Cross references. — Making of returns to Secretary of State, §§ 21-2-50, 21-2-456, 21-2-496, and 21-2-497. Appeals from decisions denying or allowing registration, § 21-2-228. Secretary of State deemed chief state election official, § 21-2-210.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 25 Am. Jur. 2d, Elections, § 109 et seq. 26 Am. Jur. 2d, Elections, § 281 et seq.

C.J.S. — 29 C.J.S., Elections, §§ 60 et seq., 319 et seq.

Paragraph II. Run-off election.

A run-off election shall be a continuation of the general election and only persons who were entitled to vote in the general election shall be entitled to vote therein; and only those votes cast for the persons designated for the runoff shall be counted in the tabulation and canvass of the votes cast.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. I, Para. IV.

Cross references. — Run-off elections, § 21-2-501.

Paragraph III. Persons not eligible to hold office.

No person who is not a registered voter; who has been convicted of a felony involving moral turpitude, unless that person's civil rights have been restored and at least ten years have elapsed from the date of the completion of the sentence without a subsequent conviction of another felony involving moral turpitude; who is a defaulter for any federal, state, county, municipal, or school system taxes required of such officeholder or candidate if such person has been finally adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction to owe those taxes, but such ineligibility may be removed at any time by full payment thereof, or by making payments to the tax authority pursuant to a payment plan, or under such other conditions as the General Assembly may provide by general law; or who is the holder of public funds illegally shall be eligible to hold any office or appointment of honor or trust in this state. Additional conditions of eligibility to hold office for persons elected on a write-in vote and for persons holding offices or appointments of honor or trust other than elected offices created by this Constitution may be provided by law. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 2, § 2, Para. 3; Ga. L. 1990, p. 2443, § 1/SR 116; Ga. L. 2002, p. 1500, § 1/HR 126.)

1976 Constitution. — Art. II, Sec. II, Para. I; Art. II, Sec. III, Paras. II, III.

Cross references. — Disqualification for General Assembly, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. II, Para. IV and Art. III, Sec. IV, Para. V. Disabilities to holding office generally, §§ 16-10-9, 21-2-7, 21-2-8, 45-2-1 et seq., 45-5-2, and 45-5-6. Write-in voting in state elections, §§ 21-2-133 and 21-2-358. Rejection of application for voter registration card, § 21-2-222. Oath of public office that officer does not hold any unaccounted for public money, § 45-3-1.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1990, p. 2443, § 1) which rewrote Paragraph III was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 6, 1990.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 2002, p. 1500, § 1), which revised this paragraph to provide that certain persons who are defaulters for federal, state, or local taxes shall be ineligible to hold any public office in this state was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held November 5, 2002.

Law reviews. — For article on the effects of a conviction based on a nolo contendere plea on voting and holding public office, see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 723 (1979). For annual survey of local government law, see 57 Mercer L. Rev. 289 (2005).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Ten year lapse requirement. — A potential candidate who completed the candidate's sentence for conviction of a felony prior to the enactment of the 1990 amendment of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. III did not have any vested rights to seek office; eligibility to hold public office is determined by the statutory and constitutional requirements in effect on the date of the election. McIntyre v. Miller, 263 Ga. 578, 436 S.E.2d 2 (1993).

Double jeopardy not violated. — The obvious purpose of the 1990 constitutional amendment is not to impose an additional penalty upon convicted felons, but merely to designate a reasonable ground of eligibility for holding public office in this state; accordingly, a contention that disqualification would violate the principle of double jeopardy is without merit. McIntyre v. Miller, 263 Ga. 578, 436 S.E.2d 2 (1993).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 21-2-494. — Trial court did not err in finding that O.C.G.A. § 21-2-494 was constitutional, despite an election challenger's claim that it impermissibly allowed the exclusion of votes for write-in candidates and because it did not require that voters be provided with notice that write-in votes for unqualified candidates would not be counted, as: (1) it was undisputed that nine write-in votes were cast for individuals who were not eligible to hold office, as these people did not give proper notice of their intention of candidacy; (2) no voters were disenfranchised; (3) each voter was given the opportunity to vote for the candidate of his or her own choosing; and (4) the legislature properly exercised its power when it limited the counting of write-in votes to votes cast for qualified write-in candidates. Brodie v. Champion, 281 Ga. 105, 636 S.E.2d 511 (2006).

Convicted felon is prohibited from running for office of sheriff even though such person might obtain pardon for felony. Barbour v. Democratic Executive Comm., 246 Ga. 193, 269 S.E.2d 433 (1980).

Consideration for plea agreement. — Granting first offender treatment to defendant for crimes for which the defendant could have been barred from seeking office for ten years constituted consideration for a plea agreement. State v. Barrett, 215 Ga. App. 401, 451 S.E.2d 82 (1994), rev'd on other grounds, 265 Ga. 489, 458 S.E.2d 620 (1995).

Transportation and possession of non-tax-paid liquor is not crime involving moral turpitude. Hutto v. Rowland, 226 Ga. 889, 178 S.E.2d 180 (1970).

Nor is unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors. Hutto v. Rowland, 226 Ga. 889, 178 S.E.2d 180 (1970).

No conviction when verdict set aside or subject to being set aside. — If a jury's verdict of guilty has been set aside or is under review and thus subject to being set aside either by motion for new trial, bill of exceptions or other appropriate procedure, there is no conviction within the meaning of this paragraph. Summerour v. Cartrett, 220 Ga. 31, 136 S.E.2d 724 (1964).

Words "public money" (now "public funds") mean money belonging to state. Morgan v. Crow, 183 Ga. 147, 187 S.E. 840 (1936).

Power of legislature to provide qualifications for county officers. — Office of county tax assessor and membership in board of county commissioners are not fixed by the constitution, but are creatures of statutes. That being true, the legislature can deal with the subject of qualification and disqualification. Parks v. Ash, 168 Ga. 868, 149 S.E. 207 (1929).

Receipt of pardon after quo warranto proceedings started does not remove disability. — Where the right of a county commissioner to hold office is attacked by reason of the commissioner having been convicted of a felony before the commissioner's election, and therefore not a qualified voter or eligible to hold any civil office, the fact that the commissioner received a pardon after the institution of the quo warranto proceedings, but prior to the decision of the trial judge, does not remove the commissioner's ineligibility. Hulgan v. Thornton, 205 Ga. 753, 55 S.E.2d 115 (1949).

Appointee to office of ineligible elected official remains for remainder of term of office. — Where a vacancy in the office of county Superintendent of Schools was created by proper order of the board of education suspending the holder of such office, and an appointment was made to fill such vacancy, and thereafter the suspended official became ineligible under the Constitution and laws of this state to hold such office, the appointee would retain the office for the remainder of the term of the former ineligible Superintendent under the provisions of former § 20-2-107. Parkerson v. Hart, 200 Ga. 660, 38 S.E.2d 397 (1946).

Temporary suspension of indicted official. — The constitutional provision prohibiting a convicted felon from holding elective office does not preempt the provision in O.C.G.A. § 45-5-6 for the temporary suspension of an elected official indicted for a felony. Eaves v. Harris, 258 Ga. 1, 364 S.E.2d 854, appeal dismissed, 487 U.S. 1228, 108 S. Ct. 2889, 101 L. Ed. 2d 924 (1988).

Cited in Spillers v. State, 299 Ga. App. 854, 683 S.E.2d 903 (2009).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

PERSONS ELECTED ON WRITE-IN VOTE

General Consideration

This paragraph is not concerned with punishment imposed for conviction of crime but rather with conviction itself. 1975 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 75-17.

Conviction rather than fine or imprisonment deprives a person of the person’s civil and political rights. 1945-47 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 477.

Necessity of final adjudication of guilt. — The word “conviction,” for purposes of this paragraph refers to an adjudication of guilt which is final. 1974 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 74-26.

Disability does not extend to mere employment. — Even though parolees from the penitentiary and all convicted felons, before pardon, are ineligible for any civil “office,” this disability would not extend to mere employment where such employment does not amount to a position of trust. 1968 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 68-35.

For meaning of the term “moral turpitude,” see 1963-65 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 115.

Any crime constituting intentional violation of statute expressing moral judgment of the community against prohibited conduct would involve moral turpitude. 1968 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 68-352.

Person who has been convicted of crime involving moral turpitude cannot hold public office in this state. 1962 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 131.

Ten year lapse requirement. — A person seeking to hold any office or appointment of honor or trust in this state must meet the eligibility requirements as set forth in Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. III, as amended by the 1990 amendment. 1992 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 92-3.

The 1990 amendment, which added the 10 year lapse requirement as an additional qualification to hold office, is applicable to bar a person from holding public office who was convicted of a felony, completed a sentence, and regained that person’s civil rights prior to the amendment’s effective date when 10 years has not yet elapsed from the date of completion of the sentence. 1992 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 92-3.

Person convicted in federal court of transporting stolen automobile in interstate commerce would be ineligible to hold any civil office. 1962 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 131.

Conviction of crime of “having liquor” does not render person disqualified from holding public office. 1967 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 67-26.

Conviction as disability to hold office of public school trustee. — Construing this paragraph and Ga. L. 1943, p. 185, §§ 20 and 26 (see now O.C.G.A. § 42-9-54), a person who has been convicted of any crime involving moral turpitude and who has not been subsequently pardoned is not eligible to hold the office of trustee for a local public school. 1954-56 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 295.

Effect of plea of nolo contendere on appointment to university teaching position. — Since a plea of nolo contendere may not be raised in another proceeding as a basis for any civil disqualification, the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia is not legally prohibited from appointing an individual to a teaching position. 1963-65 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 566.

Person convicted of crime before reaching age of 17 loses that person’s right to vote if convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude even though the person is committed to the State Department of Human Resources, rather than sentenced to the Board of Corrections (now Department of Offender Rehabilitation). 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-17.

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Registering to vote after qualifying for office. — A candidate who registers to vote only after qualification for office and the closing of the qualification process is not legally qualified to run for office. 1992 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U92-14.

Federal candidate need not be registered voter or resident of election district. — Insofar as they require a candidate for the United States House of Representatives to be a registered voter or to be a resident of the district from which election is sought, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. III and O.C.G.A. § 21-2-132 are unenforceable, as the only qualifications a candidate must possess to be eligible to seek the office of United States representative are those enumerated in U.S. Const., art. I, sec. II. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-62.

Conviction as disqualification from position of trust under Board of Regents. — Conviction and sentence for a felony involving moral turpitude does not render an individual ineligible for employment by the Board of Regents unless the position of employment is one which constitutes a position of trust. 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 85-47.

A conviction resulting from a nolo contendere plea cannot be used to impose any disability including disqualification from voting, holding public office, and jury service. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-33.

Completion of sentence does not restore right to hold office or position of trust. — Pardon or restoration of civil rights is necessary to hold any office or appointment of honor or trust, even if the sentence has been completed, if the conviction was for a felony involving moral turpitude. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-33.

Persons Elected on Write-In Vote

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, opinions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. II, Sec. III, Para. III and antecedent provisions, relating to specified eligibility requirements for persons elected on write-in votes, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Notice of intention of candidacy pursuant to this paragraph includes both giving notice to proper official and publishing notice in prescribed manner. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-151.

Notice of intention need not be given in advance by write-in candidate in special election. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-59.

Applicability to persons seeking justice of the peace and constable offices. — Persons seeking election as write-in candidates for the offices of justices of the peace and constables (both now judge of the magistrate court) at the November general election are required by the Constitution to file their notices with the Secretary of State and comply with the state-wide publication requirement. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-356.

Failure to fill offices by special election. — If no one is elected in a special election, the offices of justice of the peace and constable (both now judge of the magistrate court) must be filled by election rather than appointment. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-59.

Enforcement against write-in primary candidate. — While a "write-in" candidate who has in fact filed a "notice of intention of candidacy" prior to any of the fiscal disclosure report filing dates surrounding the primary must comply with those report requirements occurring after the candidate has become a candidate, and while an individual who "intends" to subsequently become a "write-in" candidate "should" file such reports, the practical consequence is probably that only those reporting dates fixed with respect to the general election can be enforced against a "write-in" candidate. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-22.

How vacancy created by noncompliance with paragraph filled. — Vacancy in office which results from a determination in a quo warranto proceeding that the election for that office failed because of a failure to comply with this paragraph is filled by a special election for that office. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-56.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 29 C.J.S., Elections, § 305 et seq. 67 C.J.S., Officers and Public Employees, § 37.

ALR. — Time as of which eligibility or ineligibility to office is to be determined, 88 ALR 812; 143 ALR 1026.

Elections: validity of state or local legislative ban on write-in votes, 69 ALR4th 948.

Paragraph IV. Recall of public officials holding elective office.

The General Assembly is hereby authorized to provide by general law for the recall of public officials who hold elective office. The procedures, grounds, and all other matters relative to such recall shall be provided for in such law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. IV, Para. I.

Cross references. — Recall elections, Ch. 4, T. 21.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality of procedure for review of recall petition. — The recall “condition” provided in O.C.G.A. § 21-4-6(f) of the Recall Act of 1989 is not unconstitutional as denying an elected official an opportunity for a judicial hearing to determine the truth or falsity of the alleged facts upon which the recall application is based. Collins v. Morris, 263 Ga. 734, 438 S.E.2d 896 (1993).

Grounds for recall. — The absence of a specification of grounds for a recall in the Public Officers Recall Act (O.C.G.A. § 21-4-1 et seq.) causes the statute to fall short of that which is required of the General Assembly by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. IV and results in a fatal constitutional infirmity. Mitchell v. Wilkerson, 258 Ga. 608, 372 S.E.2d 432 (1988).

No right to solicit in privately-owned shopping malls. — Nothing in the Georgia Constitution or the Recall Act of 1989, either separately or together, establishes a right of private citizens to enter onto privately-owned shopping malls to solicit signatures for a recall petition. Citizens for Ethical Gov’t, Inc. v. Gwinnett Place Assoc., 260 Ga. 245, 392 S.E.2d 8 (1990).

Cited in DeKalb County Sch. Dist. v. Ga. State Bd. of Educ., 294 Ga. 349, 751 S.E.2d 827 (2013).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Constitutionality of state and local recall provisions, 13 ALR6th 661.

Paragraph V. Vacancies created by elected officials qualifying for other office.

The office of any state, county, or municipal elected official shall be declared vacant upon such elected official qualifying, in a general primary or general election, or special primary or special election, for another state, county, or municipal elective office or qualifying for the House of Representatives or the Senate of the United States if the term of the office for which such official is qualifying for begins more than 30 days prior to the expiration of such official's present term of office. The vacancy created in any such office shall be filled as provided by this Constitution or any general or local law. This provision shall not apply to any elected official seeking or holding more than one elective office when the holding of such offices simultaneously is specifically authorized by law. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 2, § 2, Para. 4, approved by Ga. L. 1983, p. 972, § 1/HR 30)

Cross references. — Eligibility of members of municipal councils or boards of aldermen for other municipal offices, § 36-30-4.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1983, p. 972, § 1) adding this Paragraph was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 6, 1984.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Vacancy created by resignation of superior court judge. — Judgment entered by a judge who was appointed by the chief county magistrate judge upon a request for "assistance" made by the superior court chief judge pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-1-9.1, was not void, even though the judge was appointed to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of a superior court judge, which vacancy should have been filled by the Governor. Dominguez v. Enterprise Leasing Co., 197 Ga. App. 664, 399 S.E.2d 269 (1990).

Retention election of a city solicitor was an "election to the office of a municipal elected official" within the meaning of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. V. Hornsby v. Campbell, 267 Ga. 511, 480 S.E.2d 189 (1997).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Member of General Assembly qualifying as candidate for office of mayor of Atlanta. — Since the term of office of mayor of the City of Atlanta begins more than 30 days prior to the expiration of the term of office for members of the General Assembly and since a member of the General Assembly is not specifically authorized by law to hold both a seat in the Georgia General Assembly and the office of mayor of the City of Atlanta, pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. V, the seat of a member of the Georgia General Assembly would be declared vacant by operation of law upon the member's qualifying to seek the office of mayor of the City of Atlanta. 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U85-33.

Chief magistrate seeking election to city council. — Since the office of member of the City Council of Lincolnton began more than 30 days prior to the expiration of the candidate's office as Chief Magistrate for Lincoln County and since there was no specific authorization by law permitting a person to hold the offices of magistrate and city councilman simultaneously, the candidate's office as Chief Magistrate for Lincoln County would be declared vacant by operation of law pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. V upon the person qualifying to seek the office of member of the City Council of Lincolnton. 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U85-41.

Chief magistrate who is appointed to office pursuant to local legislation is not subject to the provisions of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. V. 1986 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U86-11.

Office of member of a county board of education will be declared vacant by operation of law upon that member qualifying to seek another elected office on the school board if the term of the new office begins more than thirty days prior to the expiration of the member's current term of office and the holding of the two offices simultaneously is not specifically authorized by law. 1986 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 86-17.

Local law cannot extend the tenure in office of an elected official who would otherwise immediately vacate that office when qualifying to run for another elected position. 2000 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2000-3.

Paragraph does not apply to power commissioner who is selected by grand jury. 1988 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U88-17.

Elected soil and water district supervisors. — Elected soil and water district supervisors are elected state officials and are thus subject to the constitutional provision that their office is vacated when they qualify for another state, county, or municipal office. 1992 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 92-28.

Vacancy created in office of county commissioner as matter of law. — Where a county commissioner has a term of office on the county commission which extends past 30 days after the commencement of the term of office of state senator for which the county commissioner intends to run, the commissioner's qualifying to run for election to the state senate will create a vacancy in the office of county commissioner as a matter of law. 1990 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U90-9.

SECTION III.

SUSPENSION AND REMOVAL OF PUBLIC OFFICIALS

Paragraph

I. Procedures for and effect of suspending or removing public officials upon felony indictment.

Paragraph

II. Suspension upon felony conviction.

Paragraph I. Procedures for and effect of suspending or removing public officials upon felony indictment.

(a) As used in this Paragraph, the term "public official" means the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, the Secretary of State, the Attorney General, the State School Superintendent, the Commissioner of Insurance, the Commissioner of Agriculture, the Commissioner of Labor, and any member of the General Assembly.

(b) Upon indictment for a felony by a grand jury of this state or by the United States, which felony indictment relates to the performance or activities of the office of any public official, the Attorney General or district attorney shall transmit a certified copy of the indictment to the Governor or, if the indicted public official is the Governor, to the Lieutenant Governor who shall, subject to subparagraph (d) of this Paragraph, appoint a review commission. If the indicted public official is the Governor, the commission shall be composed of the Attorney General, the Secretary of State, the State School Superintendent, the Commissioner of Insurance, the Commissioner of Agriculture, and the Commissioner of Labor. If the indicted public official is the Attorney General, the commission shall be composed of three other public officials who are not members of the General Assembly. If the indicted public official is not the Governor, the Attorney General, or a member of the General Assembly, the commission shall be composed of the Attorney General and two other public officials who are not members of the General Assembly. If the indicted public official is a member of the General Assembly, the commission shall be composed of the Attorney General and one member of the Senate and one member of the House of Representatives. If the Attorney General brings the indictment against the public official, the Attorney General shall not serve on the commission. In place of the Attorney General, the Governor shall appoint a retired Supreme Court Justice or a retired Court of Appeals Judge. The commission shall provide for a speedy hearing, including notice of the nature and cause of the hearing, process for obtaining witnesses, and the assistance of counsel. Unless a longer period of time is granted by the appointing authority, the commission shall make a written report within 14 days. If the commission determines that the indictment relates to and adversely affects the administration of the office of the indicted public official and that the rights and interests of the public are adversely affected thereby, the Governor or, if the Governor is the indicted public official, the Lieutenant Governor shall suspend the public official immediately and without further action pending the final disposition of the case or until the expiration of the officer's term of office, whichever occurs first. During the term of office to which such officer was elected and in which the indictment occurred, if a nolle prosequi is entered, if the public official is acquitted, or if after conviction the conviction is later overturned as a result of any direct appeal or application for a writ of certiorari, the officer shall be immediately reinstated to the office from which he was suspended. While a public official is suspended under this Paragraph and until initial conviction by the trial court, the officer shall continue to receive the compensation from his office. After initial conviction by the trial court, the officer shall not be entitled to receive the compensation from his office. If the officer is reinstated to office, he shall be entitled to receive any compensation withheld under the provisions of this Paragraph.

(c) Unless the Governor is the public officer under suspension, for the duration of any suspension under this Paragraph, the Governor shall appoint a replacement officer except in the case of a member of the General Assembly. If the Governor is the public officer under suspension, the provisions of Article V, Section I, Paragraph V of this Constitution shall apply as if the Governor were temporarily disabled. Upon a final conviction with no appeal or review pending, the office shall be declared vacant and a successor to that office shall be chosen as provided in this Constitution or the laws enacted in pursuance thereof.

(d) No commission shall be appointed for a period of 14 days from the day the indictment is received. This period of time may be extended by the Governor. During this period of time, the indicted public official may, in writing, authorize the Governor or, if the Governor is the indicted public official, the Lieutenant Governor to suspend him from office. Any such voluntary suspension shall be subject to the same conditions for review, reinstatement, or declaration of vacancy as are provided in this Paragraph for a nonvoluntary suspension.

(e) After any suspension is imposed under this Paragraph, the suspended public official may petition the appointing authority for a review. The Governor or, if the indicted public official is the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor may reappoint the commission to review the suspension. The commission shall make a written report within 14 days. If the commission recommends that the public official be reinstated, he shall immediately be reinstated to office.

(f) The report and records of the commission and the fact that the public official has or has not been suspended shall not be admissible in evidence in any court for any purpose. The report and record of the commission shall not be open to the public.

(g) The provisions of this Paragraph shall not apply to any indictment handed down prior to January 1, 1985.

(h) If a public official who is suspended from office under the provisions of this Paragraph is not first tried at the next regular or special term following the indictment, the suspension shall be terminated and the public official shall be reinstated to office. The public official shall not be reinstated under this subparagraph if he is not so tried based on a continuance granted upon a motion made only by the defendant. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 2, Sec. 3, Para. 1, approved by Ga. L. 1984, p. 1719, § 1/SR 268; Ga. L. 1986, p. 1614, § 1/HR 505)

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1984, p. 1719, § 1) which added this Paragraph was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 6, 1984.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1986, p. 1614, § 1) which revised subparagraph (b) by inserting "or by the United States" following "this state" in the first sentence, substituting "initial conviction by the trial court" for "final conviction" in the third from the last sentence, and adding the last two sentences was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 4, 1986.

The constitutional amendment proposed in Ga. L. 1988, p. 2100, § 1, which would have revised subparagraphs (a) and (b) to delete references to the State School Superintendent and to make stylistic changes, was defeated at the general election on November 8, 1988.

Paragraph II. Suspension upon felony conviction.

Upon initial conviction of any public official designated in Paragraph I of this section for any felony in a trial court of this state or the United States, regardless of whether the officer has been suspended previously under Paragraph I of this section, such public official shall be immediately and without further action suspended from office. While a public official is suspended from office under this Paragraph, he or she shall not be entitled to receive the compensation from his or her office. If, during the remainder of the elected official's term of office, the conviction is later overturned as a result of any direct appeal or application for a writ of certiorari, the public official shall be immediately reinstated to the office from which he or she was suspended and shall be entitled to receive any compensation withheld under the provisions of this Paragraph. Unless the Governor is the public official under suspension, for the duration of any suspension under this Paragraph, the Governor shall appoint a replacement official except in the case of a member of the General Assembly. If the public officer under suspension is a member of the Senate or House of Representatives, then a replacement member for the duration of the suspension shall be elected as now or hereafter provided by law, in a manner the same as or similar to the election of a member to fill a vacancy in the General Assembly but to serve only for the duration of the suspension. If the Governor is the public officer under suspension, the provisions of Article V, Section I, Paragraph V of this Constitution shall apply as if the Governor were temporarily disabled. Upon a final conviction with no appeal or review pending, the office shall be declared vacant and a successor to that office shall be chosen as provided in this Constitution or the laws enacted in pursuance thereof. The provisions of this Paragraph shall not apply to any conviction rendered prior to January 1, 1987. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 2, Sec. 3, Para. 2, approved by Ga. L. 1986, p. 1614, § 2/HR 505; Ga. L. 2000, p. 2005, § 1/SR 411)

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1986, p. 1614, § 2) which added this Paragraph was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 4, 1986.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 2000, p. 2005, § 1), which modified this Paragraph by inserting "or she" in two places, "or her" in the second sentence, "during the remainder of the elected official's term of office," near the beginning of the third sentence, and adding the fifth sentence, was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held November 7, 2000.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — What constitutes conviction within statutory or constitutional provision making conviction of crime ground of disqualification for, removal from, or vacancy in, public office, 11 ALR5th 52.

ARTICLE III. LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

Section

- I. Legislative Power.
- II. Composition of General Assembly.
- III. Officers of the General Assembly.
- IV. Organization and Procedure of the General Assembly.
- V. Enactment of Laws.
- VI. Exercise of Powers.
- VII. Impeachments.
- VIII. Insurance Regulation.
- IX. Appropriations.
- X. Retirement Systems.

Law reviews. — For article, “Limiting Animal Law Cases,” see 45 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (2010).
Article III Standing to ‘Accidental’ Plaintiffs: Lessons from Environmental and

SECTION I.

LEGISLATIVE POWER

Paragraph

- I. Power vested in General Assembly.

Paragraph I. Power vested in General Assembly.

The legislative power of the state shall be vested in a General Assembly which shall consist of a Senate and a House of Representatives.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. I, Para. I.

Cross references. — Separation of legislative, judicial, and executive power, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III. Delegation of legislative powers to municipalities, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. II, Para. II. Acts changing term of office of incumbent prohibited, § 1-3-11.

Law reviews. — For article, “The Bicameral Principle in State Legislatures,” see 11 J. of Pub. L. 310 (1962). For article tracing the history of municipal annexation, and the General Assembly’s role therein, see 2 Ga. L. Rev. 35 (1967). For article discussing the impact of home rule on local governments, see 4 Ga. St. B.J.

317 (1968). For article discussing the evolution of municipal annexation law in light of Plantation Pipe Line Co. v. City of Bremen, 227 Ga. 1, 178 S.E.2d 868 (1970), see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 499 (1971). For article, “History of the Veto Power in Georgia,” see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 513 (1972). For article analyzing the changing relationship between state and local governments in Georgia in light of “Amendment 19,” see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 757 (1975). For article, “Selected Oddities in Georgia Municipal Law,” see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 783 (1975). For article, “The Status of Administrative Agencies under the Georgia Constitution,” see 40 Ga. L. Rev. 1109 (2006).

For comment on Rogers v. Medical

Ass'n, 244 Ga. 151, 259 S.E.2d 85 (1979), invalidating Georgia statute requiring Governor's appointments to Composite State Board of Medical Examiners be made solely from nominees submitted by state medical society as an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority to a private organization, see 29 Emory L.J. 1183 (1980).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

DELEGATION OF POWERS

1. IN GENERAL
2. TO LOCAL GOVERNMENTS
3. TO ADMINISTRATIVE AGENCIES

General Consideration

Legislative power of state is vested exclusively in General Assembly. Southern Coop. Foundry Co. v. Drummond, 76 Ga. App. 222, 45 S.E.2d 687 (1947).

Only General Assembly has right to legislate and prescribe laws of this state. Long v. State, 202 Ga. 235, 42 S.E.2d 729 (1947).

Distinction between legislative and judicial roles. — Legislative power is that which declares what the law shall be; judicial is that which declares what law is, and applies it to past transactions and existing cases; the one makes the law, the other expounds and judicially administers it; the one prescribes a rule of civil conduct, the other interprets and enforces it in a case in litigation. Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947).

Legislature has power to serve as check upon executive and judicial departments, and this function is properly performed by enactment of laws; if the legislature wishes to have the law other than what the judiciary construes it to be, it has the power and duty to so write it within the limits of the Constitution. Bedingfield v. Parkerson, 212 Ga. 654, 94 S.E.2d 714 (1956).

Acts void if beyond authority of department. — If any department of the government, including the judiciary, acts beyond the bounds of its authority, such action is without jurisdiction, is unconstitutional, and is void. Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947).

Power to create crimes and to prescribe punishment therefor is legislative. Johnson v. State, 169 Ga. 814, 152 S.E. 76 (1930).

Legislature determines whether crime a felony. — A crime is a felony or not, according to the penalty fixed by the legislature; and it is not within the province of the courts to help out the legislature. Johnson v. State, 169 Ga. 814, 152 S.E. 76 (1930).

Legislature can fix determinate term of punishment for infraction of a criminal law; and the judiciary is without authority to exercise any discretion in imposing such penalty. Johnson v. State, 169 Ga. 814, 152 S.E. 76 (1930).

Power of legislature as to determinate or indeterminate sentences. — All legislation is exclusively within the power of the legislature. This being so, it can prescribe determinate or indeterminate sentences for crime. Johnson v. State, 169 Ga. 814, 152 S.E. 76 (1930).

Judge imposing indeterminate sentence acts in pursuance of legislative power. — The legislature can authorize the judiciary to impose an indeterminate sentence, and clothe the judge with discretion in fixing the quantum of punishment within the minimum and maximum limits of punishment prescribed by the Act creating the crime. In exercising such power and discretion, the judge acts, not upon any inherent power residing in the judicial department, but in pursuance of power conferred upon the judge by the legislature. Johnson v. State, 169 Ga. 814, 152 S.E. 76 (1930).

Authority to create and alter municipal systems of government is vested in legislature. Lee v. City of Jesup, 222 Ga. 530, 150 S.E.2d 836 (1966), cert. denied, 386 U.S. 993, 87 S. Ct. 1307, 18 L. Ed. 2d 337 (1967).

Legislature retains power to adopt entirely new charter. — The power to adopt an entirely new charter cannot be found in either or both of the home rule statutes (Ga. Const. 1976, Art. IX, Sec. III, Para. I [see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. II, Para. II] and § 36-35-6). Consequently, this legislative power still resides in the General Assembly. Jackson v. Inman, 232 Ga. 566, 207 S.E.2d 475 (1974).

Power of Secretary of State to confer with charter applicants. — The Secretary of State could not confer alone or concurrently with the individuals who might apply for a charter. Eminent Household of Columbian Woodmen v. Thornton, 134 Ga. 405, 67 S.E. 849 (1910).

Rule of Public Service Commission prescribing penalty valid. — A rule of the Railroad Commission (now Public Service Commission) prescribing a penalty where a carrier fails to furnish cars does not violate the provisions of this paragraph. Southern Ry. v. Melton, 133 Ga. 277, 65 S.E. 665 (1909).

City charter delegating to mayor and council power to extend city limits within given range not unconstitutional. Bennett v. City of Baxley, 149 Ga. 275, 99 S.E. 864 (1919).

Adoption of a code, not compilation, is legislative act. Western & Atl. R.R. v. Young, 83 Ga. 512, 10 S.E. 197 (1889).

Failure of legislature to observe internal procedure no grounds for review. — If in the exercise of power to enact laws, the General Assembly merely fails to observe certain rules of internal procedure, the judiciary would not be authorized to review such action, and the same would be true as to any action of the officers of that body within the sphere of their jurisdiction. Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947).

Operation of presumption of proper enactment. — A duly enrolled Act, properly authenticated by the regular presiding officers of both houses of the General Assembly, approved by the Governor, and deposited with the Secretary of State as an existing law, will be conclusively presumed to have been enacted in accordance with constitutional requirements; and it is not permissible to show, by the legislative journals or other records, that it did not receive on its passage a majority vote of all the members elected to each House, or that there was any irregularity in its enactment. Capitol Distrib. Co. v. Redwine, 206 Ga. 477, 57 S.E.2d 578 (1950).

Legislative journal and photostatic copies of bill not permissible to impeach Act. — Where a copy of an enrolled Act levying excise taxes on malt beer and wine and purporting to contain the signatures of the Speaker of the House, Clerk of the House, President of the Senate, Secretary of the Senate, and the Governor, is set out and made a part of the amended petition, which seeks to show invalidity upon the contention that a portion of the title was composed and inserted by some method or agency in an irregular manner during the process of its passage, neither the legislative journals nor photostatic copies of the bill are permissible to impeach the Act, because of the conclusive presumption against any irregularity in its enactment; and, accordingly, this court cannot consider violations of the state constitution that are dependent on being so shown. Capitol Distrib. Co. v. Redwine, 206 Ga. 477, 57 S.E.2d 578 (1950).

Delegation of power to adopt name after merger of corporations valid. — An Act authorizing a board of directors of a consolidated railroad to adopt for its name "Selma, Rome & Dalton Railroad Company," and to adopt as its charter that of the Alabama & Tennessee River Railroad Company is valid. Southern Ry. v. Lancaster, 149 Ga. 434, 100 S.E. 380 (1910).

Cited in Central Ga. Land & Lumber Co. v. Exchange Bank, 101 Ga. 345, 28 S.E. 863 (1897); Featherstone v. Norman, 170 Ga. 370, 153 S.E. 58 (1930); Maner v. Dykes, 52 Ga. App. 715, 184 S.E. 438 (1936); State Bd. of Educ. v. County Bd. of Educ., 190 Ga. 588, 10 S.E.2d 369 (1940); Huiet v. Schwob Mfg. Co., 196 Ga. 855, 27 S.E.2d 743 (1943); Reliable Transf. Co. v. May, 70 Ga. App. 613, 29 S.E.2d 187 (1944); Bibb County v. Garrett, 204 Ga.

General Consideration (Cont'd)

817, 51 S.E.2d 658 (1949); Atkins v. Manning, 206 Ga. 219, 56 S.E.2d 260 (1949); State v. State Toll Bridge Auth., 210 Ga. 690, 82 S.E.2d 626 (1954); Spence v. Rowell, 213 Ga. 145, 97 S.E.2d 350 (1957); Russell v. Venable, 216 Ga. 137, 115 S.E.2d 103 (1960); Jamison v. City of Atlanta, 225 Ga. 51, 165 S.E.2d 647 (1969); Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969); Gainer v. Ellis, 226 Ga. 79, 172 S.E.2d 608 (1970); Bituminous Cas. Co. v. Renfroe, 130 Ga. App. 621, 204 S.E.2d 317 (1974); Harrell v. Courson, 234 Ga. 350, 216 S.E.2d 105 (1975); Harmon v. State, 235 Ga. 329, 219 S.E.2d 441 (1975); Rich v. State, 237 Ga. 291, 227 S.E.2d 761 (1976); Department of Natural Resources v. Padgett, 146 Ga. App. 121, 245 S.E.2d 480 (1978); Pelphrey v. Cobb County, 547 F.3d 1263 (11th Cir. 2008).

Delegation of Powers1. In General

This paragraph renders void any attempt to delegate legislative powers. Phillips v. City of Atlanta, 210 Ga. 72, 77 S.E.2d 723 (1953).

Attempt by legislature without express constitutional authority to delegate power to make law is violation of this paragraph. Flynn v. State, 88 Ga. App. 52, 76 S.E.2d 38 (1953).

Legislative power cannot be delegated except in cases where definite courses are indicated. Bedingfield v. Parkerson, 212 Ga. 654, 94 S.E.2d 714 (1956).

Two types of delegation not unconstitutional. — Two types of legislation are not repugnant to the Constitution. First is in cases where after a legislative enactment has plainly set forth the purpose of the legislation and marked its limits, it then provided that designated administrative officers should have power to promulgate rules within the scope of the legislation, designed to fully administer and give effect to that law. The second is in legislation to which a referendum is attached which provided that it would become a law only after having received a favorable vote of the people to be affected.

Phillips v. City of Atlanta, 210 Ga. 72, 77 S.E.2d 723 (1953).

The delegation of the setting of compensation is constitutional where the Constitution is silent as to how compensation is set. McCray v. Cobb County, 251 Ga. 24, 302 S.E.2d 563 (1983).

The former Courts of Limited Jurisdiction Compensation Act of 1982, Ga. L. 1982, p. 1737, repealed in its entirety by Ga. L. 1983, pp. 884, 928, did not unlawfully delegate the duty to set the compensation for justices of the peace to a lesser body, in giving this power to the governing authority of each county, since there was no provision in the 1976 Georgia Constitution that the legislature itself must fix the salary for the judicial office in question. McCray v. Cobb County, 251 Ga. 24, 302 S.E.2d 563 (1983).

Police officer's probable cause determination. — By acting on a determination of probable cause to believe a crime was being committed, a law enforcement officer was not called upon to exercise the legislative function of defining what constituted a crime, but the executive branch function of enforcing the law; accordingly, O.C.G.A. § 40-6-395(a) was not an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority. Harbuck v. State, 280 Ga. 775, 631 S.E.2d 351 (2006).

2. To Local Governments

Local Act authorizing county officers to establish system of registration for that county violates this paragraph. Richter v. Chatham County, 146 Ga. 218, 91 S.E. 35 (1916).

Determination of local operation of statute. — This paragraph does not prevent the legislature from delegating to local authorities the determination of the question whether or not particular legislation should be operative in given counties or localities. Haney v. Comm'rs of Bartow County, 91 Ga. 770, 18 S.E. 28 (1893).

Creation of state courts is sovereign state function, and they can be created only by General Assembly; the creation of such courts involves the appointment or the selection of the judges and of the necessary court officers, and this phase of the creation of the court is likewise a function of the state and cannot be delegated by the General Assembly to a lesser governmental unit, and certainly not to municipal corporations. City of Atlanta v. Landers, 212 Ga. 111, 90 S.E.2d 583 (1955).

Attempt to grant municipality power to try state offenses invalid. — The legislature has no power to establish a municipal court, or police court, and make it subordinate to the will of the municipal authorities, and at the same time to confer upon it jurisdiction to try offenses against the state when committed within the limits of the municipal corporation. City of Atlanta v. Landers, 212 Ga. 111, 90 S.E.2d 583 (1955).

Power must be granted by general Act. — The power of a municipality to punish as a municipal offense that which is by general law of the state also a state offense must be conferred by a general rather than a special Act of the legislature and the grant of such power must be clearly expressed. The mere authority granted in a municipal charter to enact ordinances for the general welfare is not a sufficient delegation of this authority. Furthermore, the act which the municipality seeks to punish as a municipal offense must be such as affects the peace and good order of the municipality and contain some characterizing ingredient not contained in the state offense. Gordon v. Green, 228 Ga. 505, 186 S.E.2d 719 (1972).

Distinction between cases dealing with municipal authority to punish for state offenses. — There is a distinction between an attempt by the legislature to confer upon a municipal court power and authority to punish for a state offense and the delegation in a general Act of authority to the municipality to enact an ordinance making an act which is a criminal offense under the state law a crime under the municipal ordinance and to punish for a violation of the municipal ordinance. Gordon v. Green, 228 Ga. 505, 186 S.E.2d 719 (1972).

Delegation of power to pay obligations under Municipal Electric Authority Act not unconstitutional. — Ga. L. 1975, p. 107, § 17 (see now O.C.G.A. § 46-3-129), conferring power on the fiscal authorities to appropriate funds to pay the obligations under the contracts and to make payments of such funds, does not constitute an unconstitutional delegation of legislative powers. Thompson v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 238 Ga. 19, 231 S.E.2d 720 (1976).

Delegation of power to set interest rates not unconstitutional. — Ga. L. 1975, p. 107, § 30 (see now O.C.G.A. § 46-3-146), limiting the power of the state to adversely affect the interests of the owners of the Municipal Electric Authority's bonds and notes, does not constitute an unconstitutional delegation of legislative powers in violation of this paragraph, because it does not limit the right of the General Assembly to legislate except to prevent legislation which will impair the contracts with the bond owners. Thompson v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 238 Ga. 19, 231 S.E.2d 720 (1976).

Validity of delegation of power in housing law. — Neither Ga. L. 1937, p. 210, § 1 et seq. nor Ga. L. 1937, p. 697, § 1 (see now T. 8, Ch. 3, Art. 1, nor T. 8, Ch. 3, Art. 2), delegate to cities and counties powers which are nondelegable legislative powers, in violation of this paragraph. Williamson v. Housing Auth., 186 Ga. 673, 199 S.E. 43 (1938).

Completion of details of county line change delegable. — This paragraph does not prevent the legislature from delegating completion of details in changing a county line to grand juries, county commissioners, local boards, and the like. Aultman v. Hodge, 150 Ga. 370, 104 S.E. 1 (1920).

Attempt to delegate power to alter corporate limits invalid. — The matter of fixing municipal corporate limits is strictly legislative, and it was beyond the power of the General Assembly to delegate its exclusive power to alter the corporate limits of a city in the manner provided by the Act (Ga. L. 1946, p. 130) and pursued in reference to the land involved. The statute is therefore unconstitutional and void. Du Pre v. City of Marietta, 213 Ga. 403, 99 S.E.2d 156 (1957).

Section authorizing annexation by ordinance unconstitutional. — The 1946 Act (Ga. L. 1946, p. 130; former Code 1933, § 69-901), purporting to authorize annexation of property within corporate limits of cities by ordinance, is an unconstitutional attempt to delegate legislative powers, and is void. Proceedings under that void Act, undertaking to incorporate the lands within the city, were void and without effect. Du Pre v. City of Marietta, 213 Ga. 403, 99 S.E.2d 156 (1957).

Delegation of Powers (Cont'd)
2. To Local Governments (Cont'd)

Municipality prohibited from annexation during referendum process. — Trial court properly held that a municipality did not have the authority under O.C.G.A. § 36-36-21 to annex land that the Georgia General Assembly designated for annexation to another municipality, subject to a referendum, before the referendum took place; thus, a city was prohibited from attempting to annex property during the referendum process. City of Brookhaven v. City of Chamblee, 329 Ga. App. 346, 765 S.E.2d 33 (2014).

Section granting municipalities power to approve amusement places not unconstitutional. — Act approved March 29, 1937, Ga. L. 1937, p. 624 (now repealed), providing that no person should establish a public dance hall, boxing, or wrestling arena, or amusement place, tourist camps, and barbecue stands, for money or profit, outside the limits of incorporated towns or cities of a certain minimum population without first obtaining the permission of the commissioners or other authority in charge of such counties, was not violative of the due process and equal protection clauses of the state (Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I, and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III [see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I, and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I]) and federal (U.S. Const., amend. 14) Constitutions, nor of this paragraph. Ingram v. State, 193 Ga. 565, 19 S.E.2d 493 (1942).

Acts empowering county board of commissioners to fix salary of clerk of municipal court were not violative of this section. Truesdel v. Freeney, 186 Ga. 288, 197 S.E. 783 (1938).

Attempt to delegate power to fix salary of district attorney invalid. — Local Act that delegates to a grand jury and an ordinary (now judge of the probate court) authority to fix the salary to be paid the solicitor general (now district attorney) is violative of the state Constitution (Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. XII, Para. II [see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. VIII, Para. I]) which vests in the General Assembly power to prescribe such salaries, and is violative of this paragraph. Mosley v. Garrett, 182 Ga. 810, 187 S.E. 20 (1936).

Removal of local school board members. — Whether characterized as setting a qualification for continued service on the local board in the extraordinary circumstance of an imminent loss of accreditation, or whether characterized as providing for removal for malfeasance, misfeasance, or nonfeasance in office, O.C.G.A. § 20-2-73 was held by the Georgia Supreme Court to be a permissible exercise of the legislative power to provide for the removal for cause of members of local boards. DeKalb County Sch. Dist. v. Ga. State Bd. of Educ., 294 Ga. 349, 751 S.E.2d 827 (2013).

3. To Administrative Agencies

The nondelegation doctrine is rooted in the principle of separation of powers, in that the integrity of the tripartite system of government mandates that the General Assembly not divest itself of the legislative power granted to it by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. I, Para. I. DOT v. City of Atlanta, 260 Ga. 699, 398 S.E.2d 567 (1990).

No authority to delegate essentially legislative functions to administrative body. — Legislature has no power to delegate to board, or bureau or other administrative body authority to make rules or regulations which are essentially legislative in character. Southern Coop. Foundry Co. v. Drummond, 76 Ga. App. 222, 45 S.E.2d 687 (1947).

This paragraph does not prevent legislature from conferring quasi-legislative powers on administrative bodies. Zuber v. Southern Ry., 9 Ga. App. 539, 71 S.E. 937 (1911).

The legislative department of the state will not be permitted to relieve itself by delegation of its powers. It cannot confer on any person or body the power to determine what the law shall be. But this constitutional inhibition does not prevent the grant of legislative authority to some administrative board or other tribunal to adopt rules, by-laws, or ordinances for its government, or to carry out a particular purpose. Pearle Optical of Monroeville, Inc. v. Georgia State Bd. of Exmrs. in Optometry, 219 Ga. 364, 133 S.E.2d 374 (1963).

This paragraph does not prevent the grant of legislative authority to some ministerial officer, board or other tribunal to adopt rules, by-laws, or other ordinances for its government, or to carry out a particular purpose. Thus, while it is necessary that a law, when it comes from the lawmaking power, shall be complete, still there are many matters as to methods or details which the legislature may refer to some designated ministerial officer or board. Scoggins v. Whitfield Fin. Co., 242 Ga. 416, 249 S.E.2d 222 (1978).

The General Assembly is empowered to enact laws of general application and then delegate to administrative officers or agencies authority to make rules and regulations necessary to effectuate such laws. DOT v. Del-Cook Timber Co., 248 Ga. 734, 285 S.E.2d 913 (1982).

General Assembly may delegate certain powers to executive branch of government in order to carry out law as enacted by General Assembly. Sundberg v. State, 234 Ga. 482, 216 S.E.2d 332 (1975).

Delegation must be made with sufficient guidelines. — Where a delegation of power to an executive official is made with sufficient guidelines, the official's exercise of the delegated power does not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III. DOT v. City of Atlanta, 260 Ga. 699, 398 S.E.2d 567 (1990).

Ministerial officer shall not have power to define application of statute. — A statute will be held unconstitutional as an improper delegation of legislative power if it is incomplete as legislation and authorizes an executive board to decide what shall and what shall not be an infringement of the law, because any statute which leaves the authority to a ministerial officer to define the thing to which the statute is to be applied is invalid. Howell v. State, 238 Ga. 95, 230 S.E.2d 853 (1976).

When administrative officers may promulgate rules and regulations. —

After a legislative enactment has plainly set forth its provisions and marked its limits, it may then authorize designated administrative officers to promulgate rules and regulations within the scope of the legislation to administer fully and give effect to it. Crawley v. Seignious, 213 Ga. 810, 102 S.E.2d 38 (1958); Gartrell v. McGahee, 216 Ga. 125, 114 S.E.2d 871 (1960).

Legislature may refer matters of methods or details in carrying out statutory duty. —

While it is necessary that a law, when it comes from the lawmaking power, shall be complete, still there are many matters as to methods or details which the legislature may refer to some designated ministerial officer or board. This paragraph, therefore, does not deny to the lawmaking body the necessary resources of flexibility and practicality which will enable it to perform its function in laying down policies and establishing standards, while leaving to selected instrumentalities the making of subordinate rules within prescribed limits and the determination of facts to which the policy as declared by the legislature is to apply. Pearle Optical of Monroeville, Inc. v. Georgia State Bd. of Exmrs. in Optometry, 219 Ga. 364, 133 S.E.2d 374 (1963).

Validity of regulations made in conformity with statute. — Where the Constitution expressly gives to the legislature the power to delegate its lawmaking authority (Ga. Const. 1976, Art. IX, Sec. IV, Para. II (15) [see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. II, Para. IV]), regulations of administrative bodies in conformity with the statute enacted under such express constitutional sanction are valid. Flynn v. State, 88 Ga. App. 52, 76 S.E.2d 38 (1953).

State revenue department's regulation regarding malt beverage distribution in Georgia did not violate the Georgia Constitution, as the regulation did not conflict with the constitutional provision empowering the General Assembly to exercise legislative power by creating laws; the regulation was not a new law, but was merely an administrative rule authorized by and consistent with a duly-passed statute. Ga. Oilmen's Ass'n v. Ga. Dep't of

Delegation of Powers (Cont'd)3. To Administrative Agencies (Cont'd)

Revenue, 261 Ga. App. 393, 582 S.E.2d 549 (2003).

Rules promulgated by administrative boards must be within framework of the Act creating them and must be designed to accomplish the purpose of the Act. Pearle Optical of Monroeville, Inc. v. Georgia State Bd. of Exmrs. in Optometry, 219 Ga. 364, 133 S.E.2d 374 (1963).

Rule of judicial noninterference. — Boards and commissions may be either legislative or constitutional, and if their powers are set out in the Constitution the courts should not and cannot interfere. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Invenchek, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 798, 204 S.E.2d 457 (1974).

Public Service Commission has power to regulate motortruck freight transportation. — The legislature having given to the Public Service Commission regulatory supervision, as provided in the Acts relating thereto, over motortruck freight transportation for hire by common carriers, and the legislature having power to regulate the operation of motortrucks over the highways of this state, it can enact such laws regulating speed, size, brakes, lights, etc., of such vehicles as tended to promote the general safety of the public in the use of the highways of this state by such vehicles. Maner v. Dykes, 55 Ga. App. 436, 190 S.E. 189 (1937).

Courts not to interfere with ratemaking function of Public Service Commission. — Ratemaking is a legislative function which the Constitution has authorized and required the legislature to delegate to the Public Service Commission. To this extent, and to this extent only, the Commission is constitutionally charged as a lawmaking body, and so long as it does not itself act in an unconstitutional manner the courts do not have any right to interfere. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Invenchek, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 798, 204 S.E.2d 457 (1974).

Authorization of examining board to adopt professional examination valid. — It is not an improper delegation of legislative power to authorize an examining board to determine the nature and character of an examination which will determine the knowledge and competency of persons desiring to follow an occupation which affects the public welfare, or to prescribe what is satisfactory evidence that a person has skillfully engaged in the occupation for a period of five years prior to the person's application. Jenkins v. Manry, 216 Ga. 538, 118 S.E.2d 91 (1961).

O.C.G.A. § 43-4-2, providing for examination of architects, is not an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority. Wise v. State Bd. for Examination, Qualification & Registration of Architects, 247 Ga. 206, 274 S.E.2d 544, overruled in part by Innovative Clinical & Consulting Servs. v. First Nat'l Bank, 279 Ga. 672, 620 S.E.2d 352 (2005), appeal dismissed, 454 U.S. 882, 102 S. Ct. 76, 70 L. Ed. 2d 73 (1981).

Grant of power to fix milk prices valid. — Under the state Milk Control Act (Ga. L. 1937, p. 247, now repealed), which sufficiently fixed the policy, general rules, and methods by which the milk control board should exercise its functions, the mere vesting of power in the board to find facts after investigation and to fix maximum and minimum prices based thereon did not render the Act violative of this paragraph on the ground that the Act transferred such power to the board. Bohannon v. Duncan, 185 Ga. 840, 196 S.E. 897 (1938).

Sections granting power to board of education valid. — Section 14 of Ga. L. 1951, p. 241 and section 11 of Ga. L. 1949, pp. 1406, 1412 (now repealed), are not void upon the ground that they attempt to vest legislative powers in the State Board of Education and offend this paragraph and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IV (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III). Sheffield v. State Sch. Bldg. Auth., 208 Ga. 575, 68 S.E.2d 590 (1952).

Adoption of federal method of income calculation no delegation of taxing power. — Where the State Revenue Commission (now Department of Revenue), in assessing the tax against the defendant, merely adopted the federal method of calculating the defendant's net income under the federal statute as the state's method of accomplishing that result, and properly assessed the tax due to the state as part of the amount which the defendant had paid to the United States, such adoption was not a delegation to the federal authorities of the state's power to tax. Head v. McKenney, 61 Ga. App. 552, 6 S.E.2d 405 (1939).

Delegation of power to levy taxes in Agricultural Commodities Promotion Act invalid. — Former Code 1933, Ch. 5-29, which attempted to delegate the power of the General Assembly to levy taxes, was in conflict with Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IV (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III) and this paragraph and for that reason was unconstitutional. Campbell v. Farmer, 223 Ga. 605, 157 S.E.2d 276 (1967).

Authorizing commission to contract for new code not unconstitutional. — A contract authorized by the General Assembly is not a law and where the General Assembly has retained complete control over the contract and its terms by making it contingent on approval by the General Assembly of an appropriation authorizing the commission to formulate the contract was not an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power. Harrison Co. v. Code Revision Comm'n, 244 Ga. 325, 260 S.E.2d 30 (1979).

Grant of authority by legislature to State Board of Examiners in Optometry (now State Board of Optometry) to regulate practice of optometry does not violate constitutional standards. Pearle Optical of Monroeville, Inc. v. Georgia State Bd. of Exmrs. in Optometry, 219 Ga. 364, 133 S.E.2d 374 (1963).

Unconstitutionality of sections of Motor Vehicle, Farm Machinery and Construction Equipment Franchise Practices Act. — Former Code 1933, §§ 84-6603(s), 84-6604(d), 84-6610(a)(3), and 84-6610(b)(3), enacted by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1440, were unconstitutional, null and void because each and all of said sections improperly and unlawfully delegate legislative responsibility to the Franchise Practices Commission in violation of this paragraph. Georgia Franchise Practices Comm'n v. Massey-Ferguson, Inc., 244 Ga. 800, 262 S.E.2d 106 (1979).

Power of revenue commissioner to punish for violations of alcoholic beverage laws. — Unrestrained and unrestricted power by the state revenue commissioner to declare a violation of the commissioner's administrative and policing regulations to be a misdemeanor would offend the Constitution, but applying the limitation contained in former Code 1933, § 58-1069 (see now O.C.G.A. § 3-3-27) that section was not subject to the attacks made upon it. Glustrom v. State, 206 Ga. 734, 58 S.E.2d 534 (1950).

Delegation of power to make penal laws not authorized. — Where the legislative power is by express constitutional provision placed in the legislature, such lawmaking body cannot delegate to an administrative body the power to make penal laws concerning conduct not made illegal by the enabling Act. Flynn v. State, 88 Ga. App. 52, 76 S.E.2d 38 (1953).

An Act which delegates to an agency the authority to make rules or regulations, the violation of any and all of them constituting a misdemeanor, is an unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority. Howell v. State, 238 Ga. 95, 230 S.E.2d 853 (1976).

When regulations can be basis for prosecution. — Agency regulations which can be made the basis of a criminal prosecution are those made in accord, or in harmony, with those things declared to be a crime by the terms and provisions of the Act involved. Howell v. State, 238 Ga. 95, 230 S.E.2d 853 (1976).

Approval of taking of municipal property. — Statutes granting the Commission on the Condemnation of Public Property the power to approve the taking of municipal property do not amount to an improper delegation of legislative power and do not violate separation-of-powers principles. DOT v. City of Atlanta, 260 Ga. 699, 398 S.E.2d 567 (1990).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Delegation of quasi-legislative matters. — While the General Assembly cannot delegate powers, it may confer upon administrative bodies the power to deal in a somewhat legislative way with quasi-legislative matters. 1948-49 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 700.

Constitutionality of Junior College Act. — Ga. L. 1958, p. 47, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. Art. 4, Ch. 3, T. 20) does not violate this paragraph, Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. XII (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI), or Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VII, Sec. III, Para. VI (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. IV, Para. X). 1963-65 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 100.

No duty or authority is conferred upon Commissioner of Agriculture by Constitution; to the contrary, the express authority is reserved in the General Assembly to prescribe the duties, authority, and salaries of the executive officers. 1958-59 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 4.

Authority of legislature to curtail activities of Commissioner of Agriculture. — The General Assembly does not have the authority to abolish the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture, but it has the authority to curtail the activities of the Commissioner of Agriculture by creating autonomous agricultural services. 1958-59 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 4.

Legislature is only state authority with consent power over federal acquisitions. — Only authority of the state which has power to consent to the acquisition of property within the state by the federal government so as to deprive the state of jurisdiction over the property is the General Assembly. 1945-47 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 49.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 16 Am. Jur. 2d, Constitutional Law, § 284 et seq. 72 Am. Jur. 2d, States, Territories, and Dependencies, § 38 et seq.

C.J.S. — 16 C.J.S., Constitutional Law, §§ 5et seq., 283 et seq., 232. 16C C.J.S., Constitutional Law, § 1875 et seq.

ALR. — Constitutionality of legislative delegation of powers to prescribe or vary regulations concerning motor vehicles used on highways, 87 ALR 546.

Power and duty of court where legislature renders constitutional mandate ineffectual by failing to enact statute necessary to make it effective or by repealing or amending statute previously passed for that purpose, 153 ALR 522.

Validity of delegation to private persons or organizations of power to appoint or nominate to public office, 97 ALR2d 361.

Validity of statute establishing or authorizing minimum price schedules for barbers, 54 ALR3d 916.

What constitutes taking of property requiring compensation under takings clause of Fifth Amendment to United States Constitution — Supreme Court cases, 10 ALR Fed. 2d 231.

Construction and application of “public use” restriction in Fifth Amendment’s Takings Clause — United States Supreme Court Cases, 10 ALR Fed. 2d 407.

SECTION II.

COMPOSITION OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Paragraph

- I. Senate and House of Representatives.
- II. Apportionment of General Assembly.

Paragraph

- III. Qualifications of members of General Assembly.
- IV. Disqualifications.
- V. Election and term of members.

Paragraph I. Senate and House of Representatives.

(a) The Senate shall consist of not more than 56 Senators, each of whom shall be elected from single-member districts.

(b) The House of Representatives shall consist of not fewer than 180 Representatives apportioned among representative districts of the state.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. II, Para. I; Art. III, Sec. III, Para. I.

Cross references. — Membership and apportionment of General Assembly generally, § 28-1-1. Apportionment of House of Representatives, § 28-2-1. Apportionment of Senate, § 28-2-2.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 25 Am. Jur. 2d, Elections, § 11 et seq.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 121 et seq.

ALR. — Inequality of population or lack of compactness of territory as invalidating apportionment of representatives, 2 ALR 1337.

Civil responsibility of member of legislative body for his vote therein, 22 ALR 125.

Paragraph II. Apportionment of General Assembly.

The General Assembly shall apportion the Senate and House districts. Such districts shall be composed of contiguous territory. The apportionment of the Senate and of the House of Representatives shall be changed by the General Assembly as necessary after each United States decennial census.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. II, Para. I; Art. III, Sec. III, Para. I.

Cross references. — Membership and apportionment of General Assembly generally, § 28-1-1. Apportionment of House of Representatives, § 28-2-1. Apportionment of Senate, § 28-2-2.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Separation of powers. — Because Act 444, 2002 Ga. Laws 149, does not impermissibly encroach on the power of the executive branch to control litigation, but instead is a proper assertion of legislative power to determine reapportionment, it does not violate separation of powers. Perdue v. Baker, 277 Ga. 1, 586 S.E.2d 606 (2003).

Frequency of reapportionment. — Senate Bill 386, 2006 General Assembly, was enacted pursuant to the Georgia legislature's exercise of the discretionary authority granted by Ga. Const. 1983, Art.

III, Sec. II, Para. II as: (1) Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. II, Para. II and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. II, Para. II were essentially identical with respect to the frequency of reapportionment; (2) Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. II, Para. II required the legislature to reapportion itself at least once after each census if "necessary," but the exercise was not limited to a once-in-a-decade occurrence; and (3) the frequency of reapportionment between censuses was a matter of unfettered legislative discretion. Blum v. Schrader, 281 Ga. 238, 637 S.E.2d 396 (2006).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 25 Am. Jur. 2d, Elections, § 11 et seq.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 121 et seq.

ALR. — Inequality of population or lack of compactness of territory as invalidating apportionment of representatives, 2 ALR 1337.

Civil responsibility of member of legislative body for his vote therein, 22 ALR 125.

Application of constitutional “compactness requirement” to redistricting, 114 ALR5th 311.

State court jurisdiction over congressional redistricting disputes, 114 ALR5th 387.

Paragraph III. Qualifications of members of General Assembly.

(a) At the time of their election, the members of the Senate shall be citizens of the United States, shall be at least 25 years of age, shall have been citizens of this state for at least two years, and shall have been legal residents of the territory embraced within the district from which elected for at least one year.

(b) At the time of their election, the members of the House of Representatives shall be citizens of the United States, shall be at least 21 years of age, shall have been citizens of this state for at least two years, and shall have been legal residents of the territory embraced within the district from which elected for at least one year.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. II, Para. II; Art. III, Sec. III, Para. II.

Cross references. — Disqualifications for office, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. III; and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. II, Para. IV. Persons ineligible to hold public office or act as election officials, § 21-2-8. Eligibility requirements of candidates, §§ 21-2-132, 21-2-153. Restriction on number of offices for which an individual may be nominated or be a candidate at any one election, § 21-2-136. Qualifications for Representatives, § 28-2-1. Qualifications for Senators, § 28-2-2.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Enumerated qualifications not all inclusive. — There is nothing in the Georgia Constitution which limits qualifications of a legislator to those expressed herein. These qualifications and disqualifications of legislators are not all inclusive. Bond v. Floyd, 251 F. Supp. 333 (N.D. Ga.), rev'd on other grounds, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S. Ct. 339, 17 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1966).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

There is no conflict in being county attorney, and also holding office of State Representative. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-271.

Candidate on ballot in special congressional primary may not be permitted to run at same time in general election for position in Georgia General Assembly. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U82-30.

Residency requirement for representatives means at least one year immediately preceding election. — The requirement in Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. II, Para. III(b) that at the time of their election, the members of the House of Representatives shall have been legal residents of the territory embraced within the district from which elected for at least one year means for at least one year immediately preceding the election. 1989 Op. Att’y Gen. 89-31.

One-year residency requirement for Representatives must be met by date of election. 1981 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U81-28.

Waiver of durational residency requirement. — There is no authority that would permit the waiver of the Constitution’s durational residency requirement. 2001 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U2001-3.

Areas previously included in the district. — Residency requirement for Representatives applies to candidate moving into district from area previously, but no longer, included in district. 1981 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U81-28.

Reapportionment does not alter residency requirement. — Nothing in this paragraph provides an exception to the one-year residency requirement for Representatives due to reapportionment of the district. 1981 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U81-28.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 72 Am. Jur. 2d, States, Territories, and Dependencies, §§ 38 et seq., 57 et seq.

ALR. — Nonregistration as affecting one’s qualification to hold public office, 128 ALR 1117.

Validity of requirement that candidate or public officer have been resident of governmental unit for specified period, 65 ALR3d 1048.

Paragraph IV. Disqualifications.

(a) No person on active duty with any branch of the armed forces of the United States shall have a seat in either house unless otherwise provided by law.

(b) No person holding any civil appointment or office having any emolument annexed thereto under the United States, this state, or any other state shall have a seat in either house.

(c) No Senator or Representative shall be elected by the General Assembly or appointed by the Governor to any office or appointment having any emolument annexed thereto during the time for which such person shall have been elected unless the Senator or Representative shall first resign the seat to which elected; provided, however, that, during the term for which elected, no Senator or Representative shall be appointed to any civil office which has been created during such term.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. V, Para. VII.

Cross references. — Disqualification for office generally, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. III. Compensation and allowances provided by law, Ga. Const.

1983, Art. III, Sec. IV, Para. VI; and §§ 28-1-8 and 45-7-4. Other offices and compensation which are not allowed, §§ 16-10-9, 28-1-13, 45-7-3, and 45-7-8. Appointments and emoluments allowed, § 45-2-1.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose of this paragraph is to prevent use of public office for private gains, or to hold two public offices. Rowe v. Tuck, 149 Ga. 88, 99 S.E. 303 (1919).

No one holding any state or federal office is eligible for a seat in either house. Bond v. Floyd, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S. Ct. 339, 17 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1966).

Election of county officer to General Assembly will not work ouster of county office. McWilliams v. Neal, 130 Ga. 733, 61 S.E. 721 (1908).

Speaker of House may be member of Education Authority (Schools). —

Since membership in the School Building Authority (now Education Authority (Schools)) is neither an office to which emoluments are annexed nor a civil office, the appointment of the Speaker of the House of Representatives as a member does not offend this paragraph. Sheffield v. State Sch. Bldg. Auth., 208 Ga. 575, 68 S.E.2d 590 (1952).

Cited in McLendon v. Everett, 205 Ga. 713, 55 S.E.2d 119 (1949); Greer v. State, 233 Ga. 667, 212 S.E.2d 836 (1975); In re Inquiry Concerning Judge No. 591, 250 Ga. 796, 300 S.E.2d 807 (1983).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
SPECIFIC OFFICERS

General Consideration

Each House of General Assembly has exclusive original jurisdiction to determine qualifications of its members. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-109.

Effect of election to General Assembly or holding state office. — Persons who hold a state office, except justices of the peace (now judge of the magistrate court) and officers of the militia, are ineligible to membership in the General Assembly; but if one, by reason of holding one of the offices not within the above exception, mentioned in this paragraph, at the time of the person's election as a member of the General Assembly, is rendered ineligible to membership in that body, the fact of the person's ineligibility would not work an ouster from the first office, but would only affect the person's right to take a seat as a member of the General Assembly. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 261.

Person holding another office may not have seat in General Assembly but no prohibition exists as to the person's election to General Assembly while holding such office. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 235.

Candidate on ballot in special congressional primary may not be permitted to run at same time in general election for position in Georgia General Assembly. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U82-30.

Specific Officers

Former officer of United States Naval Reserve, retired with pay by reason of disability received in service, is eligible as member of General Assembly. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 234.

When city or county officer is state officer. — There is no statute or constitutional provision prohibiting a county officer from serving as a member of the General Assembly and, a solicitor of a city court created under a special Act of the General Assembly could not be a state officer within the meaning of this paragraph. However, if the holder of such office receives any emolument or compensation under said office from the state, it may be held to fall within this paragraph. 1950-51 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 16.

Solicitor of city court would be eligible under this paragraph to hold seat in either house of General Assembly, subject to exceptions as to emolument from the state, and the provisions of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. X (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IV, Para. VII), and the other qualifications necessary to hold public office. 1950-51 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 16).

County commissioner can be member of General Assembly. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 384.

Member of General Assembly can hold office of justice of the peace (now judge of the magistrate court) while member of General Assembly. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 384.

Justice of the peace (now judge of the magistrate court), not being county official, is not barred from holding at same time office of county commissioner. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 53.

Those persons who are justices of the peace (now judge of the magistrate court) are also eligible to membership in the General Assembly; this does not violate the separation of powers doctrine. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-92.

Member of county board of human resources cannot, at same time, serve as member of General Assembly. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 260.

There is no prohibition against justice of the peace (now judge of the magistrate court) at same time holding membership on county Democratic executive committee. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 50.

Member of county board of education may serve as member of General Assembly. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 383; 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 52.

There is no conflict in being county attorney, and also holding office of state Representative. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-271.

Being in employ of county school board would not make person ineligible to occupy a seat in General Assembly. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-169.

Members of Georgia Education Authority not state officers. — The Georgia Education Authority is a corporate body and a distinct entity in and of itself; the members of said authority receive no emolument and such members do not hold an office within the meaning of this paragraph. 1950-51 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 441.

Clerk of superior court cannot lawfully serve as member of General Assembly. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-105.

Membership on governing boards of public, nonmunicipal corporations are not civil offices. — Membership on governing boards of public, nonmunicipal corporations, such as ports authority, are not civil offices within contemplation of this paragraph, though such members are clearly fiduciaries of public trust; further, there exists no basis for distinguishing between the term "civil office" as used in § 45-2-1 and as used in this paragraph. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-18.

Juvenile court judge cannot at same time be member of General Assembly. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 261.

A member of the General Assembly cannot serve simultaneously as a juvenile court judge. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U84-46.

Legislator's performance of legal or contract work for city or county. — There is no per se conflict of interest if a member of the General Assembly also serves as either a city or county attorney, or performs contract work for a city or county within that legislator's district. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U84-34.

When nonpayment of taxes is disqualification. — The payment of taxes is not required of any candidate for a state office except that members of the General Assembly may not be seated if in default for taxes; whether candidates for county offices are eligible to run where they are behind with payment of taxes depends upon the office and the legislative Acts relating to that office or officer. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 311.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 63C Am. Jur. 2d, Public Officers and Employees, § 57 et seq.

C.J.S. — 67 C.J.S., Officers and Public Employees, § 26 et seq.

ALR. — Physical or mental disability as disqualification or ground of removal or impeachment of public officer, 28 ALR 777.

Time as of which eligibility or ineligibility to office is to be determined, 88 ALR 812; 143 ALR 1026.

One acting under authority of emergency or relief board or administration as civil officer within contemplation of constitutional provision against holding two or more offices at same time, 105 ALR 1237.

Construction and application of constitutional or statutory provision that member of Congress or state legislature shall not, during term for which he is elected, be appointed or elected to any civil office which shall have been created or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during the term for which he was elected, 118 ALR 182.

Incompatibility of offices or positions in the military and in the civil services, 147 ALR 1419; 148 ALR 1399; 150 ALR 1444.

Paragraph V. Election and term of members.

(a) The members of the General Assembly shall be elected by the qualified electors of their respective districts for a term of two years and shall serve until the time fixed for the convening of the next General Assembly.

(b) The members of the General Assembly in office on June 30, 1983, shall serve out the remainder of the terms to which elected.

(c) The first election for members of the General Assembly under this Constitution shall take place on Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1984, and subsequent elections biennially on that day until the day of election is changed by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. V, Paras. I, II.

Cross references. — Date of election, § 21-2-9. Special elections for members of General Assembly, § 21-2-544.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1988, p. 2114, § 1) which would have revised subparagraphs (a) and (b) to change the terms of office from two years to four years was defeated at the general election on November 8, 1988.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Election is absolutely void when not held at proper time and place by persons qualified to hold it. Smiley v.

Gaskin, 115 Ga. App. 547, 154 S.E.2d 740 (1967).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 97 et seq.

SECTION III.

OFFICERS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Paragraph

I. President and President Pro Tempore of the Senate.

Paragraph

II. Speaker and Speaker Pro Tempore of the House of Representatives.

Paragraph

III. Other officers of the two houses.

Paragraph I. President and President Pro Tempore of the Senate.

(a) The presiding officer of the Senate shall be styled the President of the Senate.

(b) A President Pro Tempore shall be elected by the Senate from among its members. The President Pro Tempore shall act as President in case of the temporary disability of the President. In case of the death, resignation, or permanent disability of the President or in the event of the succession of the President to the executive power, the President Pro Tempore shall become President and shall receive the same compensation and allowances as the Speaker of the House of Representatives. The General Assembly shall provide by law for the method of determining disability as provided in this Paragraph.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. IV, Para. I.

Sec. I, Para. III. Election of Senate officers by Senate, § 28-1-3. Powers and duties of President and Speaker Pro Tempore, § 28-1-6.

Cross references. — Other elected executive officers, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V,

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 72 Am. Jur. 2d, States, Territories, and Dependencies, § 57.

Paragraph II. Speaker and Speaker Pro Tempore of the House of Representatives.

(a) The presiding officer of the House of Representatives shall be styled the Speaker of the House of Representatives and shall be elected by the House of Representatives from among its members.

(b) A Speaker Pro Tempore shall be elected by the House of Representatives from among its members. The Speaker Pro Tempore shall become Speaker in case of the death, resignation, or permanent disability of the Speaker and shall serve until a Speaker is elected. Such election shall be held as provided in the rules of the House. The General Assembly shall provide by law for the method of determining disability as provided in this Paragraph.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. IV, Para. II.

ident and Speaker Pro Tempore, § 28-1-6. Procedure for determining disability of Speaker of House of Representatives, § 28-1-6.1.

Cross references. — Election of officers, § 28-1-3. Powers and duties of Pres-

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

House members not bound by Democratic Party Caucus Rules. — When the membership of the House elects its Speaker, the House members are not legally bound by the Democratic Party Caucus Rules to vote for the nominee of the Caucus. 1992 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U92-17.

Paragraph III. Other officers of the two houses.

The other officers of the two houses shall be a Secretary of the Senate and a Clerk of the House of Representatives.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. IV, Para. III. ate and Clerk of House of Representatives, § 28-3-20 et seq.

Cross references. — Secretary of Sen-

SECTION IV.

ORGANIZATION AND PROCEDURE OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

Paragraph

- I. Meeting, time limit, and adjournment.
- II. Oath of members.
- III. Quorum.
- IV. Rules of procedure; employees; interim committees.
- V. Vacancies.

Paragraph

- VI. Salaries.
- VII. Election and returns; disorderly conduct.
- VIII. Contempts, how punished.
- IX. Privilege of members.
- X. Elections by either house.
- XI. Open meetings.

Paragraph I. Meeting, time limit, and adjournment.

(a) The Senate and House of Representatives shall organize each odd-numbered year and shall be a different General Assembly for each two-year period. The General Assembly shall meet in regular session on the second Monday in January of each year, or otherwise as provided by law, and may continue in session for a period of no longer than 40 days in the aggregate each year. By concurrent resolution, the General Assembly may adjourn any regular session to such later date as it may fix for reconvening. Separate periods of adjournment may be fixed by one or more such concurrent resolutions.

(b) Neither house shall adjourn during a regular session for more than three days or meet in any place other than the state capitol without the consent of the other. Following the fifth day of a special session, either house may adjourn not more than twice for a period not to exceed seven days for each such adjournment. In the event either house, after the thirtieth day of any session, adopts a resolution to adjourn for a specified period of time and such resolution and any amendments thereto are not adopted by both houses by the end of the legislative day on which adjournment was called for in such resolution, the Governor may adjourn both houses for a period of time not to exceed ten days.

(c) If an impeachment trial is pending at the end of any session, the House shall adjourn and the Senate shall remain in session until such trial is completed.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. V, Paras. III, VI.

Cross references. — Impeachment, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VII. Meeting time and place, § 28-1-2.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1988, p. 2114, § 2) which would have revised subparagraph (a) to change the terms of office from two years to four years, was defeated at the general election on November 8, 1988.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Paragraph binding as to time limitation. — Failure on part of either house, or of both, to conform to constitutional requirements relating to adjournment, when attempting to adjourn sine die, will not abrogate or modify the limitation of 60 days (now 40 days) fixed by this paragraph. Bunger v. State, 146 Ga. 672, 92 S.E. 72 (1917).

Cited in Wood v. Arnall, 189 Ga. 362, 6 S.E.2d 722 (1939); Smith v. McMichael, 203 Ga. 74, 45 S.E.2d 431 (1947); Glustrom v. State, 206 Ga. 734, 58 S.E.2d 534 (1950); Maddox v. Fortson, 226 Ga. 71, 172 S.E.2d 595 (1970).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

General Assembly may meet each year in one regular session of certain number of days but it may prolong that session by adjourning and reconvening at later date. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-69.

Necessity to reintroduce bills. —

Bills introduced at the January session of the General Assembly are required to be reintroduced at the coming session of the General Assembly where there was a lapse of the previous legislative session. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 155.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 72 Am. Jur. 2d, States, Territories, and Dependencies, § 44 et seq.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 109 et seq.

ALR. — Power of Legislature or branch thereof as to time of assembling, and length of session, 56 ALR 721.

Paragraph II. Oath of members.

Each Senator and Representative, before taking the seat to which elected, shall take the oath or affirmation prescribed by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV.

Cross references. — Generally, U.S. Const., art. VI, cl. 3. Violations of oath, § 16-10-1. Oath of General Assembly members, § 28-1-4. Other oaths required, § 45-3-1.

v. Floyd, 251 F. Supp. 333 (N.D. Ga. 1966), appearing below, see 17 Mercer L. Rev. 467 (1966).

Law reviews. — For comment on Bond

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Authority of legislators to test sincerity of oath. — The oath provisions of the United States (Art. VI, Cl. 2) and Georgia (this paragraph) Constitutions do not violate U.S. Const., amend. 1. But this requirement does not authorize a majority of state legislators to test the sincerity with which another duly elected legislator can swear to uphold the Constitution. Bond v. Floyd, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S. Ct. 339, 17 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1966), commented on in 17 Mercer L. Rev. 467 (1966) (decided prior to 1983 Constitution, which provides that oath shall be as prescribed by law).

Paragraph III. Quorum.

A majority of the members to which each house is entitled shall constitute a quorum to transact business. A smaller number may adjourn from day to day and compel the presence of its absent members.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. V, Para. V.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Glustrom v. State, 206 Ga. 734, 58 S.E.2d 534 (1950).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 72 Am. Jur. 2d, States, Territories, and Dependencies, § 39.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 86.

Paragraph IV. Rules of procedure; employees; interim committees.

Each house shall determine its rules of procedure and may provide for its employees. Interim committees may be created by or pursuant to the authority of the General Assembly or of either house.

1976 Constitution. — There was no similar provision in the 1976 Constitution.

Paragraph V. Vacancies.

When a vacancy occurs in the General Assembly, it shall be filled as provided by this Constitution and by law. The seat of a member of either house shall be vacant upon the removal of such member's legal residence from the district from which elected.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. V, Para. VIII. Art. III, Sec. II, Para. III; §§ 28-2-1, 28-2-2, and 45-2-4. Special elections to fill

Cross references. — Residence requirements of members, Ga. Const. 1983, vacancies, § 21-2-544.

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Change of residence by member of General Assembly. — If a current member of the General Assembly moves that member's permanent residence or domicile outside the current district, the member will have vacated the office as a matter of law. 2001 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U2001-3.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 63C Am. Jur. 2d, Public Officers and Employees, §§ 71, 74.

Paragraph VI. Salaries.

The members of the General Assembly shall receive such salary as shall be provided for by law, provided that no increase in salary shall become effective prior to the end of the term during which such change is made.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX; Art. V, Sec. II, Para. III.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1997, p. 1713) concerning the Georgia Citizens Commission on Compensation of Public Officials was defeated at the general election on November 8, 1998.

Cross references. — Unauthorized compensation, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI; and § 45-7-8. Compensation and allowances provided by law, §§ 28-1-8 and 45-7-4. Sanctions for accepting illegal compensation, § 45-7-8.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 63C Am. Jur. 2d, Public Officers and Employees, § 339.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 104 et seq.

ALR. — Right to salary of one illegally elected or appointed to legislature, 7 ALR 1682.

Power to appropriate public money for expenses of legislators not covered by constitutional compensation, 50 ALR 1238; 60 ALR 416.

Constitutional provisions creating an office and forbidding change in compensation during term as appropriation within other constitutional provision forbidding payment of state funds except in pursuance of appropriation, 88 ALR 1054.

Constitutional inhibition of change of officer's compensation as applicable to allowance for expenses or disbursements, 106 ALR 779.

Paragraph VII. Election and returns; disorderly conduct.

Each house shall be the judge of the election, returns, and qualifications of its members and shall have power to punish them for disorderly behavior or misconduct by censure, fine, imprisonment, or expulsion; but no member shall be expelled except by a vote of two-thirds of the members of the house to which such member belongs.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. V, Para. X.

Cross references. — Vacating an office by majority vote for failure to organize emergency session, § 28-1-7. Ethics and Efficiency in Government Act, see Ch. 11,

T. 28. Code of ethics for government service, § 45-10-1.

Law reviews. — For article, “Georgia’s New Ethics Laws: A Summary of the Changes Relevant to Lobbyists and Legislators,” see 11 Ga. St. B.J. 22 (No. 4, 2005).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Each house of General Assembly has exclusive jurisdiction to determine qualifications and eligibility of its members. Fowler v. Bostick, 99 Ga. App. 428, 108 S.E.2d 720 (1959).

The Georgia courts refuse to take jurisdiction over controversies having to do with the qualifications of legislators. Bond v. Floyd, 251 F. Supp. 333 (N.D. Ga.), rev’d on other grounds, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S. Ct. 339, 17 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1966).

This paragraph and House rule embodying it are not unconstitutionally vague. Bond v. Floyd, 251 F. Supp. 333 (N.D. Ga.), rev’d on other grounds, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S. Ct. 339, 17 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1966).

State legislative body necessarily possesses inherent power of self-protection. Self-protection goes to the process of qualifications as well as expulsion. Bond v. Floyd, 251 F. Supp. 333 (N.D. Ga.), rev’d on other grounds, 385 U.S. 116, 87 S. Ct. 339, 17 L. Ed. 2d 235 (1966).

Superior court without jurisdiction to hold Assembly member ineligible.

— Under this paragraph, a judge of the superior court did not have jurisdiction to hold, in quo warranto proceedings, that a member of the General Assembly who had been elected to that position and who had been sworn in as a member, was ineligible or disqualified for membership in that body; and the demurrer (now motion to dismiss) raising the contention that the court was without jurisdiction should have been sustained. Rainey v. Taylor, 166 Ga. 476, 143 S.E. 383 (1928).

Trial court without jurisdiction to hear equitable action to determine election. — The State Senate being vested by this paragraph with exclusive power to adjudge the qualifications of its own members, a trial court has no jurisdiction to entertain equitable action to determine which of two candidates was elected and properly sustained general demurrers (now motions to dismiss) to the petition. Beatty v. Myrick, 218 Ga. 629, 129 S.E.2d 764 (1963).

Cited in State Hwy. Dep’t v. Hicks, 115 Ga. App. 703, 155 S.E.2d 689 (1967); DeFee v. Kaley, 119 Ga. App. 538, 167 S.E.2d 758 (1969).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Each House of General Assembly has exclusive original jurisdiction to determine the qualifications of its members. 1975 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 75-109.

Judge of superior court lacks jurisdiction to disqualify member who has been sworn. 1962 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 266.

Whether incumbent holds over when senator-elect dies is one of the qualifications to be determined by Senate. 1945-47 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 345.

Person holding another office may not have seat in General Assembly but no prohibition exists as to the person's election to General Assembly while holding such office. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 235.

Eligibility of city court solicitor to hold General Assembly seat. — A solicitor of city court is eligible under Ga.

Const. 1945, Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. I (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. II, Para. IV) to hold a seat in either house of the General Assembly, subject to exceptions as to emolument from the state, and the provisions of this paragraph, and the other qualifications necessary to hold public office in this state. 1950-51 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 16.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 72 Am. Jur. 2d, States, Territories, and Dependencies, § 57 et seq.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, §§ 94 et seq., 171 et seq.

ALR. — Jurisdiction of courts to determine election or qualifications of member of legislative body, and conclusiveness of its decision, as affected by constitutional or statutory provision making legislative body the judge of election and qualification of its own members, 107 ALR 205.

Paragraph VIII. Contempts, how punished.

Each house may punish by imprisonment, not extending beyond the session, any person not a member who shall be guilty of a contempt by any disorderly behavior in its presence or who shall rescue or attempt to rescue any person arrested by order of either house.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. V, Para. XI.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 17 Am. Jur. 2d, Contempt, § 191 et seq.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, §§ 111, 112.

Paragraph IX. Privilege of members.

The members of both houses shall be free from arrest during sessions of the General Assembly, or committee meetings thereof, and in going thereto or returning therefrom, except for treason, felony, or breach of the peace. No member shall be liable to answer in any other place for anything spoken in either house or in any committee meeting of either house.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. V, Para. XII.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Similarity to U.S. Constitution. — This paragraph is similar to that in the Constitution of the United States in regard to Senators and Representatives in the Congress (U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VI, para. I). Village of N. Atlanta v. Cook, 219 Ga. 316, 133 S.E.2d 585 (1963).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Speeding violations. — A member of the Georgia General Assembly is not immune from arrest and prosecution for speeding violations, or any other criminal offense, by virtue of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IV, Para. IX. 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U85-50.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 5 Am. Jur. 2d, Arrest, § 103 et seq.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 99.

ALR. — Immunity of public officer from criminal arrest, 1 ALR 1156.

Service of a subpoena as an arrest within constitutional or statutory immunity of members of legislature or others from arrest, 79 ALR 1214.

Governmental control of actions or speech of public officers or employees in respect of matters outside the actual performance of their duties, 163 ALR 1358.

Defamation: nature and extent of privilege accorded public statements, relating to subject of legislative business or concern, made by member of state or local legislature or council outside of formal proceedings, 41 ALR4th 1116.

Paragraph X. Elections by either house.

All elections by either house of the General Assembly shall be by recorded vote, and the vote shall appear on the respective journal of each house.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. V, Para. XIII.

Cross references. — Elections by General Assembly, § 28-1-12. Election of Secretary of Senate and Clerk of House of Representatives, § 28-3-20.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Constitutionality and effect of statute relating to deadlock or tie vote in governmental body, 40 ALR 808.

Paragraph XI. Open meetings.

The sessions of the General Assembly and all standing committee meetings thereof shall be open to the public. Either house may by rule provide for exceptions to this requirement.

1976 Constitution. — There was no similar provision in the 1976 Constitution.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Failure to state claim. — To show entitlement under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IV, Para. XI, plaintiffs were required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(a)(2)(A) to allege that one or more “sessions of the General Assembly” or one more “standing committee meetings there of” was closed to the public. Because the complaint failed to so allege, it failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted and, accordingly, a motion to dismiss under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) should have been granted. Murphy v. American Civil Liberties Union of Ga., Inc., 258 Ga. 637, 373 S.E.2d 364 (1988).

SECTION V.

ENACTMENT OF LAWS

Paragraph

- I. Journals and laws.
- II. Bills for revenue.
- III. One subject matter expressed.
- IV. Statutes and sections of Code, how amended.
- V. Majority of members to pass bill.
- VI. When roll-call vote taken.
- VII. Reading of general bills.
- VIII. Procedure for considering local legislation.

Paragraph

- IX. Advertisement of notice to introduce local legislation.
- X. Acts signed.
- XI. Signature of Governor.
- XII. Rejected bills.
- XIII. Approval, veto, and override of veto of bills and resolutions.
- XIV. Jointly sponsored bills and resolutions.

Law reviews. — For article, “Bill Drafting — Some Guidelines and Pitfalls,” see 2 Ga. St. B.J. 181 (1965).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Originating entity for enrolled Acts. — The enrolled Act (Ga. L. 1987, p. 1133) which increased the marriage license fee was not unconstitutional despite the originating entity. A duly enrolled Act, properly authenticated by the regular presiding officers of both houses of the General Assembly, approved by the Governor, and deposited with the Secretary of State as an existing law, will be conclusively presumed to have been enacted in accordance with constitutional requirements. Collins v. Woodham, 257 Ga. 643, 362 S.E.2d 61 (1987).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Power of state Legislature to limit the powers of a state constitutional convention, 158 ALR 512.

Legislative adoption of compiled or revised statutes as giving effect to former repealed or suspended provisions included therein, 12 ALR2d 423.

Paragraph I. Journals and laws.

Each house shall keep and publish after its adjournment a journal of its proceedings. The original journals shall be the sole, official records of the proceedings of each house and shall be preserved as provided by law. The General Assembly shall provide for the publication of the laws passed at each session.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VII, Paras. I, II.

Cross references. — Journals and laws to be deposited with Secretary of State, § 28-1-11. Entering the inauguration of the Governor in the journal, § 45-12-3.

Law reviews. — For article, “Researching Georgia Law,” see 34 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 741 (2015).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Sufficiency of identification of bill. — This paragraph is complied with where a bill is identified by the journal by indicating that conditional requirements were observed. Carswell v. Wright, 133 Ga. 714, 66 S.E. 905 (1910).

Operation of presumption of proper enactment. — A duly enrolled Act, authenticated by the presiding officers of both houses of the General Assembly, approved by the Governor and deposited with the Secretary of State as an existing law, is conclusively presumed to have been enacted in accordance with constitutional requirements, and it is not permissible to show the contrary by extrinsic evidence. Williams v. MacFeeley, 186 Ga. 145, 197 S.E. 225 (1938).

Enrolled Act cannot be shown invalid by entries in journals. — An enrolled Act of the legislature, bearing the signature of the officers of both houses, and the approval of the Governor, and deposited with the Secretary of State, cannot be shown to be invalid by reason of entries or lack of entries in the journals of the General Assembly touching the details of its passage. Williams v. MacFeeley, 186 Ga. 145, 197 S.E. 225 (1938).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 73 Am. Jur. 2d, Statutes, § 41.

C.J.S. — 82 C.J.S., Statutes, §§ 48, 77, 78.

Paragraph II. Bills for revenue.

All bills for raising revenue, or appropriating money, shall originate in the House of Representatives.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. VIII.

Cross references. — Recording votes on appropriations bills, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. VI. Originating resolutions relating to a claim against the state, § 28-5-80.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Originating entity for enrolled Acts. — The enrolled Act (Ga. L. 1987, p. 1133) which increased the marriage license fee was not unconstitutional despite the originating entity. A duly enrolled Act, properly authenticated by the regular presiding officers of both houses of the General Assembly, approved by the Governor, and deposited with the Secretary of State as an existing law, will be conclusively presumed to have been enacted in accordance with constitutional requirements. Collins v. Woodham, 257 Ga. 643, 362 S.E.2d 61 (1987).

Cited in Grizzard v. State Revenue Comm'n, 177 Ga. 845, 171 S.E. 765 (1933);

Prater v. Larabee Flour Mills Co., 180 Ga. 581, 180 S.E. 235 (1935); Irons v. Harrison, 185 Ga. 244, 194 S.E. 749 (1937); Shadrick v. Bledsoe, 186 Ga. 345, 198 S.E. 535 (1938); McLucas v. State Bridge Bldg. Auth., 210 Ga. 1, 77 S.E.2d 531 (1953); State v. State Toll Bridge Auth., 210 Ga. 690, 82 S.E.2d 626 (1954); Schaffer v. Oxford, 102 Ga. App. 710, 117 S.E.2d 637 (1960).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

All legislation affecting revenue, either its increase or decrease, must originate in the House of Representatives to be constitutional. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 156.

Phrase "or appropriating money" refers to funds made available to various departments and agencies for payment of state expenses. 1952-53 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 4.

Bill for spending money for particular project must originate in House of Representatives, if its purpose is to make available funds to finance the project. 1952-53 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 4.

Bill providing pension plan for judges and solicitors of city courts is not required to originate in House of Representatives, as such a bill is not "appropriating money" in the sense of the Constitution. 1952-53 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 4.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 82 C.J.S., Statutes, § 14.

ALR. — Application of constitutional requirement that bills for raising revenue originate in lower house, 4 ALR2d 973.

Paragraph III. One subject matter expressed.

No bill shall pass which refers to more than one subject matter or contains matter different from what is expressed in the title thereof.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. IV.

Law reviews. — For article discussing implications of this paragraph on municipal annexation statutes, see 2 Ga. L. Rev. 35 (1967). For article, "The 1967 Amendments to the Georgia Civil Practice Act (Ch. 11, T. 9) and the Appellate Procedure Act" (Art. 2, Ch. 6, T. 5), see 3 Ga. St. B.J. 383 (1967). For article, "Synopsis of 1968 Amendments to the Appellate Procedure Act (Art. 2, Ch. 6, T. 5) and Georgia Civil Practice Act" (Ch. 11, T. 9), see 4 Ga. St. B.J. 503 (1968). For article, "The Legislative Process in Georgia Local Government Law," see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1971). For article, "Selected Oddities in Georgia Municipal Law," see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 783 (1975).

For survey article on constitutional law, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 53 (1982). For survey article on local government law, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 225 (1982). For article, "Federalization of the Mosquito: Structural Innovation in the New Deal Administrative State," see 60 Emory L.J. 325 (2010).

For comment on the constitutionality of Ga. L. 1958, pp. 657, 658; as amended by Ga. L. Ex. Sess., 1964, pp. 16, 17 (§ 53-2-40), reducing the number of required witnesses to a will to two, in light of this paragraph, see 1 Ga. St. B.J. 126 (1964). For comment on Griffith v. Merrit, 223 Ga. 562, 157 S.E.2d 23 (1967), appearing below, see 19 Mercer L. Rev. 436 (1968). For comment on Sams v. Olah, 225

Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969) as to the constitutionality of the State Bar Act (Art.

2, Ch. 19, T. 15), see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 355 (1969).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

PLURALITY OF SUBJECT MATTER

SUFFICIENCY OF CAPTION

1. IN GENERAL
2. USE OF WORDS "AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES"

SPECIFIC LAWS

1. LAWS OF GENERAL APPLICATION
2. PENAL STATUTES
3. AMENDMENTS
4. LOCAL LAWS
5. MUNICIPAL ORDINANCES

General Consideration

Origin of section. — This paragraph was inserted in the Constitution of 1798, and its necessity was suggested by the Yazoo Act. Savannah v. State ex rel. Green, 4 Ga. 26 (1848); Mayor of Macon v. Hughes, 110 Ga. 795, 36 S.E. 247 (1900).

This paragraph was a reverberation from the shock resulting from passage of an Act that under the caption "for the protection and support of its frontier settlements," a measure disposing of Georgia's western lands, 35,000,000 acres, for $500,000.00, less than two cents per acre, a territory out of which a few years later the States of Alabama and Mississippi were carved. Cady v. Jardine, 185 Ga. 9, 193 S.E. 869 (1937).

Paragraph a Georgia contribution to constitutional law. — This paragraph first appeared in the Constitution of 1798, and before that time no other state had such a provision; it is distinctly a Georgia contribution to constitutional law. Cady v. Jardine, 185 Ga. 9, 193 S.E. 869 (1937).

This paragraph is designed for two purposes, first, the prevention of surreptitious legislation typified by the ill-famed "Yazoo Fraud;" and, second, the prevention of "omnibus" bills combining many matters, adverse in their nature, with the view of combining in their favor the advocates of all and thus securing the passage of several measures no one of which could succeed upon its own merits. Camp v.

Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 229 Ga. 35, 189 S.E.2d 56 (1972).

This constitutional provision was inspired by the "Yazoo Fraud" and embodied in the Constitution to prevent the "smuggling" of undesirable legislation, and to provide that in the future the people would have notice of the contents of proposed legislation. Briggs v. State, 80 Ga. App. 664, 56 S.E.2d 802 (1949), overruled on other grounds, Howell v. State, 238 Ga. 95, 230 S.E.2d 853 (1976).

Purpose of this provision is to protect the people against covert or surprise legislation. Bray v. City of E. Point, 203 Ga. 315, 46 S.E.2d 257 (1948); Nelson v. Southern Guar. Ins. Co., 221 Ga. 804, 147 S.E.2d 424 (1966); Green v. Bryson, 223 Ga. 862, 159 S.E.2d 56 (1968).

This paragraph is mandatory upon legislature and not directory, and Acts in violation thereof are void. McCaffrey v. State, 183 Ga. 827, 189 S.E. 825 (1937); Black v. Jones, 190 Ga. 95, 8 S.E.2d 385 (1940).

This paragraph stands as bar to any legislation which embodies more than one subject matter. Fields v. Arnall, 199 Ga. 491, 34 S.E.2d 692 (1945).

Purpose is not to prevent comprehensive legislation. — The purpose of this paragraph is to prevent the passage of a law which is not indicated in a general way in the title of the Act. Its object, therefore, is not to prevent comprehensive, but surreptitious legislation. Kaigler v. Board of Comm'rs of Rds. & Revenues,

174 Ga. 849, 164 S.E. 193 (1932).

Construction of paragraph as forbidding comprehensive Acts would be incorrect. — This paragraph is intended to stop the vicious practice of joining in one Act incongruous and unrelated matters; but any construction of it which would interfere with the very commendable policy or practice of incorporating the entire body of statutory law upon one general subject in a single Act, instead of dividing it into a number of separate Acts, would not only be contrary to its spirit, but also seriously embarrassing to honest legislation. Crews v. Cook, 220 Ga. 479, 139 S.E.2d 490 (1964); Lord v. State, 235 Ga. 342, 219 S.E.2d 425 (1975).

Act which does not specify all of its consequences and effects in its title does not necessarily violate this paragraph. Upton County Sch. Dist. v. City of Thomaston, 248 Ga. 98, 281 S.E.2d 537 (1981).

Each proposition submitted to voters should stand or fall upon its own merits, without, on the one hand, receiving any adventitious aid from another and perhaps more popular one, or, on the other hand, having to carry the burden of supporting a less meritorious and popular measure. No voter should be compelled, in order to support a measure which the voter favors, to vote also for a wholly different one which the voter's judgment disapproves, or, in order to vote against the proposition which the voter desires to defeat, to vote also against the one which commends itself to the approval of the voter's judgment. Wall v. Board of Elections, 242 Ga. 566, 250 S.E.2d 408 (1978).

Legislature empowered to legislate in one Act upon general subject. — The General Assembly is empowered under this paragraph to legislate in one Act upon a general subject and to embody therein all elements of the general subject, and such an Act is valid. Fields v. Arnall, 199 Ga. 491, 34 S.E.2d 692 (1945).

An Act which attempted to annex land alleged to be within the corporate limits of another municipality, explicitly named in the Act, violated this paragraph. The General Assembly is incompetent to amend, repeal, or modify the charters of two separate and distinct municipal corporations in one Act, and to attempt to do so causes the Act to impermissibly refer to more than one subject matter. Schneider v. City of Folkston, 207 Ga. 434, 62 S.E.2d 177 (1950).

An Act whose title referred only to one city, but which also attempted to amend, partially repeal, and nullify the charter of another municipality caused the Act to contain matter different from what was expressed in the title in violation of this paragraph. Schneider v. City of Folkston, 207 Ga. 434, 62 S.E.2d 177 (1950).

This paragraph is not applicable to proposals by legislature to amend constitution. Cooney v. Foote, 142 Ga. 647, 83 S.E. 537 (1916); Goolsby v. Stephens, 155 Ga. 529, 117 S.E. 439 (1923).

Adoption of Code containing Act violating this paragraph waives the defect. Central of Ga. Ry. v. State, 104 Ga. 831, 31 S.E. 531 (1898); Kennedy v. Meara, 127 Ga. 68, 56 S.E. 243 (1906); Davis v. Davison, 160 Ga. 545, 128 S.E. 743 (1925).

Necessity of showing injury from unconstitutional statute. — An attack upon a statute that it contains matter different from that expressed in the title is of necessity limited to the subject area that affects the attacking party since a party who attacks a statute as being unconstitutional must show that the alleged unconstitutional feature of the statute injures that party and so operates as to deprive the party of rights protected by the Constitution. Lord v. State, 235 Ga. 342, 219 S.E.2d 425 (1975).

Pleading must specify defect. — An assignment of error must point out the portion of the body of the Act inconsistent with the title, or wherein the Act refers to more than one subject matter. Walthour v. City of Atlanta, 157 Ga. 24, 120 S.E. 613 (1923).

Attack on a statute was not properly raised, and could not be considered by the Supreme Court where the plaintiff in error failed to show wherein the statute violates the constitutional provision. Davis v. State, 204 Ga. 467, 50 S.E.2d 604 (1948).

Cited in Morgan v. Lowry, 168 Ga. 723, 149 S.E. 37 (1929); Mobley v. Personius, 172 Ga. 261, 157 S.E. 294 (1931); Georgia

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Hwy. Express v. Harrison, 172 Ga. 431, 157 S.E. 464 (1931); Johnson Transf. & Freight Lines v. Perry, 47 F.2d 900 (N.D. Ga. 1931); Atlanta Laundries, Inc. v. Harrison, 174 Ga. 448, 162 S.E. 912 (1932); Buie v. Buie, 175 Ga. 27, 165 S.E. 15 (1932); Richardson v. Johnson Furn. Co., 176 Ga. 28, 166 S.E. 662 (1932); State Bd. of Barber Exmrs. v. Blocker, 176 Ga. 125, 167 S.E. 298 (1932); Moseley v. State, 176 Ga. 889, 169 S.E. 97 (1933); Murphy v. Holman, 179 Ga. 329, 176 S.E. 5 (1934); Madronah Sales Co. v. Wilburn, 180 Ga. 837, 181 S.E. 173 (1935); Maner v. State, 181 Ga. 254, 181 S.E. 856 (1935); Harbin v. Holcomb, 181 Ga. 800, 184 S.E. 603 (1936); Chivilis v. West, 182 Ga. 379, 185 S.E. 348 (1936); Gormley v. Shiver, 182 Ga. 750, 187 S.E. 382 (1936); Russell v. Burroughs, 183 Ga. 361, 188 S.E. 451 (1936); Moore v. Bell, 186 Ga. 583, 198 S.E. 711 (1938); National Sur. Corp. v. Gatlin, 192 Ga. 293, 15 S.E.2d 180 (1941); Gernatt v. Huie, 192 Ga. 729, 16 S.E.2d 587 (1941); Singleton v. State, 196 Ga. 136, 26 S.E.2d 736 (1943); Ragans v. Ragans, 200 Ga. 890, 39 S.E.2d 162 (1946); Morris v. City Council, 201 Ga. 666, 40 S.E.2d 710 (1946); Kirkpatrick v. Candler, 205 Ga. 449, 53 S.E.2d 889 (1949); Houlihan v. Atkinson, 205 Ga. 720, 55 S.E.2d 233 (1949); Glustrom v. State, 206 Ga. 734, 58 S.E.2d 534 (1950); City of Atlanta v. Anglin, 209 Ga. 170, 71 S.E.2d 419 (1952); Walker v. McKenzie, 209 Ga. 653, 74 S.E.2d 870 (1953); Ball v. Peavy, 210 Ga. 575, 82 S.E.2d 143 (1954); State v. State Toll Bridge Auth., 210 Ga. 690, 82 S.E.2d 626 (1954); Calhoun v. State, 211 Ga. 112, 84 S.E.2d 198 (1954); Bibb County v. Hancock, 211 Ga. 429, 86 S.E.2d 511 (1955); Panlos v. Stephenson, 213 Ga. 816, 102 S.E.2d 165 (1958); Crow v. McCallum, 215 Ga. 692, 113 S.E.2d 203 (1960); Russell v. Venable, 216 Ga. 137, 115 S.E.2d 103 (1960); Williams v. State, 217 Ga. 312, 122 S.E.2d 229 (1961); City of Chamblee v. Village of N. Atlanta, 217 Ga. 517, 123 S.E.2d 663 (1962); Sweeney v. Balkcom, 219 Ga. 292, 133 S.E.2d 10 (1963); Stephenson v. State, 219 Ga. 652, 135 S.E.2d 380 (1964); Sheppard v. DeKalb County Bd. of Educ., 220 Ga. 219, 138 S.E.2d 271 (1964); Ralston Purina Co. v. Acrey, 220 Ga. 788, 142 S.E.2d 66 (1965); Pye v. State Hwy. Dep't, 226 Ga. 389, 175 S.E.2d 510 (1970); Road Bldrs., Inc. v. Hawes, 228 Ga. 608, 187 S.E.2d 287 (1972); DeKalb County v. Allstate Beer, Inc., 229 Ga. 483, 192 S.E.2d 342 (1972); Stoner v. Fortson, 379 F. Supp. 704 (N.D. Ga. 1974); Granger v. State, 235 Ga. 681, 221 S.E.2d 451 (1975); Orkin v. State, 236 Ga. 176, 223 S.E.2d 61 (1976); Osborne v. Ridge View Assocs., 238 Ga. 377, 233 S.E.2d 342 (1977); Auto-Owners Ins. Co. v. Safeco Ins. Co. of Am., 245 Ga. 558, 266 S.E.2d 175 (1980); Lang v. State, 168 Ga. App. 693, 310 S.E.2d 276 (1983); Porter v. Calhoun County Bd. of Comm'rs, 252 Ga. 446, 314 S.E.2d 649 (1984); American Booksellers Ass'n v. Webb, 590 F. Supp. 677 (N.D. Ga. 1984); Ellis v. State, 256 Ga. 751, 353 S.E.2d 19 (1987); Hussey v. Chatham County, 268 Ga. 871, 494 S.E.2d 510 (1998); City of Brookhaven v. City of Chamblee, 329 Ga. App. 346, 765 S.E.2d 33 (2014).

Plurality of Subject Matter

This paragraph stands as bar to any legislation which embodies more than one subject matter. Fields v. Arnall, 199 Ga. 491, 34 S.E.2d 692 (1945).

Act may contain any number of provisions consistent with the general subject. Whitley v. State, 134 Ga. 758, 68 S.E. 716 (1910).

Unity of purpose is criterion for consistency with general subject. Central of Ga. Ry. v. State, 104 Ga. 831, 31 S.E. 531 (1898); Branson v. Long, 159 Ga. 288, 123 S.E. 500 (1924).

Act may properly include various provisions, so long as they are not inconsistent with, or foreign to, general object of the Act. Hines v. Etheridge, 173 Ga. 870, 162 S.E. 113 (1931) (decided under 1877 Const).

All that this paragraph requires is that Act embrace only one general subject; and by this is meant, merely, that all matters treated by the Act should be so connected with or related to each other, either logically or in popular understanding, as to be parts of, or germane to, one subject. Crews v. Cook, 220 Ga. 479, 139 S.E.2d 490 (1964); Lord v. State, 235

Ga. 342, 219 S.E.2d 425 (1975); American Booksellers Assoc. v. Webb, 254 Ga. 399, 329 S.E.2d 495 (1985).

Any instrumentality aiding purpose of Act not unconstitutional. — When it is plain by the Act a certain thing is to be done, any instrumentality authorized by the Act in aid of, to conduce to, to assist, the one great purpose of the Act is not a different subject-matter, but is part of the main subject-matter; it is part of the “substantial unity in the statutable object,” and is not unconstitutional. Shadrick v. Bledsoe, 186 Ga. 345, 198 S.E. 535 (1938).

Test is whether all parts of Act are germane to single objective. — The test of whether an Act or a constitutional amendment violates the multiple subject matter rule is whether all of the parts of the Act or of the constitutional amendment are germane to the accomplishment of a single objective. Wall v. Board of Elections, 242 Ga. 566, 250 S.E.2d 408 (1978).

Test is whether Act embraces two dissimilar subjects. — To constitute plurality of subject matter, an Act must embrace two or more dissimilar and discordant subjects that by no fair intentment can be considered as having any logical connection with or relation to each other. Crews v. Cook, 220 Ga. 479, 139 S.E.2d 490 (1964); Lord v. State, 235 Ga. 342, 219 S.E.2d 425 (1975); American Booksellers Assoc. v. Webb, 254 Ga. 399, 329 S.E.2d 495 (1985).

Meaning of “subject” of Act. — The “subject” of an Act, within the meaning of this paragraph, is regarded as the matter or thing forming the groundwork of the Act. Capitol Distrib. Co. v. Redwine, 206 Ga. 477, 57 S.E.2d 578 (1950).

To constitute plurality of subject matter, an Act must embrace two or more dissimilar and discordant subjects that by no fair intentment can be considered as having any logical connection with or relation to each other. Wall v. Board of Elections, 242 Ga. 566, 250 S.E.2d 408 (1978).

Meaning of word “subject matter” as used in this paragraph is not synonymous with that of word “provision.” Crews v. Cook, 220 Ga. 479, 139 S.E.2d 490 (1964); Lord v. State, 235 Ga.

342, 219 S.E.2d 425 (1975).

No plurality where all parts of Act relate to subject of legislation. —

Where the parts of a statute have a natural connection and reasonably relate, directly or indirectly, to one general and legitimate subject of legislation, the Act is not open to the objection of plurality of subject matter, within the meaning of this paragraph. Hines v. Etheridge, 173 Ga. 870, 162 S.E. 113 (1931); Millhollan v. State, 221 Ga. 165, 143 S.E.2d 730 (1965).

Paragraph does not mandate separate Acts for branches and segments of general subject matter. — This paragraph does not mean that every branch and segment of the general subject constitutes a subject matter different from that of the general subject to which it is related, and hence must be treated as a separate and independent Act. Fields v. Arnall, 199 Ga. 491, 34 S.E.2d 692 (1945).

General Assembly cannot amend charters of two municipalities in one Act. — An Act which attempted to annex land alleged to be within the corporate limits of another municipality, explicitly named in the Act, violated this paragraph. The General Assembly is incompetent to amend, repeal, or modify the charters of two separate and distinct municipal corporations in one Act, and to attempt to do so causes the Act to impermissibly refer to more than one subject matter. Schneider v. City of Folkston, 207 Ga. 434, 62 S.E.2d 177 (1950).

An Act whose title referred only to one city, but which also attempted to amend, partially repeal, and nullify the charter of another municipality caused the Act to contain matter different from what was expressed in the title in violation of this paragraph. Schneider v. City of Folkston, 207 Ga. 434, 62 S.E.2d 177 (1950).

When different questions on referendum may be consolidated in one law. — Where several different, unrelated bond issues are submitted to the voters in one referendum, this is something closely akin to coercion and not at all conducive to a free and untrammelled expression of public sentiment as to the merits of either. However, questions are properly consolidated into one law where the initial question was whether something should be done and the additional questions were merely incidental to the accomplishment of it. Wall v. Board of Elections, 242 Ga. 566, 250 S.E.2d 408 (1978).

Plurality of Subject Matter (Cont'd)

Provision for penalty not unconstitutional. — The fact that an Act provides for a penalty upon one coming within the provisions of the Act, and that this penalty may be enforced by civil or criminal procedure, does not render the Act itself obnoxious to this paragraph. Copeland v. Leathers, 206 Ga. 280, 56 S.E.2d 530 (1949).

Acts not containing more than one subject. — Even though the crime of abandonment involves two distinct elements — bastardy and forsaking of parental duties, the statute creating the offense (O.C.G.A. § 19-10-1) deals with only one subject — the crime of abandonment — and therefore does not violate the constitutional prohibition. Bembry v. State, 250 Ga. 237, 297 S.E.2d 36 (1982).

Sufficiency of Caption1. In General

The purpose of this constitutional provision requiring that the act's title must alert the reader to the matters contained in its body is to protect against surprise legislation. Mead Corp. v. Collins, 258 Ga. 239, 367 S.E.2d 790 (1988).

General object of law is all that need be indicated by title. Howell v. State, 71 Ga. 224 (1883); Fullington v. Williams, 98 Ga. 807, 27 S.E. 183 (1896); Welborne v. State, 114 Ga. 793, 40 S.E. 857 (1902); Inter-City Coach Lines v. Harrison, 172 Ga. 390, 157 S.E. 673 (1931); City of Albany v. Ader, 176 Ga. 391, 168 S.E. 1 (1933); Wright v. State, 53 Ga. App. 371, 186 S.E. 149 (1936); Complete Auto Transit, Inc. v. Floyd, 214 Ga. 232, 104 S.E.2d 208 (1958); Eubanks v. State, 217 Ga. 588, 124 S.E.2d 269 (1962).

The caption of an Act need only indicate the general object and subject matter to be dealt with therein and broad enough to protect the people against covert or surprise legislation. State v. Resolute Ins. Co., 221 Ga. 815, 147 S.E.2d 433 (1966);

Ray v. Hand, 225 Ga. 589, 170 S.E.2d 692 (1969).

Title which reasonably expresses general subject of legislation covers all matters properly connected with general subject and germane thereto. Martin v. Broach, 6 Ga. 21 (1849); Howell v. State, 71 Ga. 224 (1883); Davis v. Warde, 155 Ga. 748, 118 S.E. 378, appeal dismissed, 263 U.S. 725, 44 S. Ct. 3, 68 L. Ed. 527 (1923); Wilson v. Supreme Forest Woodman Circle, 156 Ga. 403, 119 S.E. 394 (1923); Morgan v. Shepherd, 171 Ga. 33, 154 S.E. 780 (1930).

Legislators not to be misled by title.

— One of the evils this paragraph seeks to prevent is the insertion of clauses in the body of Acts of which the title gives no intimation. Cade v. State, 207 Ga. 135, 60 S.E.2d 763 (1950).

The purpose of this section is protection against surprise or fraudulent matter in the body of an Act, of which the title gives no intimation. Therefore, in considering an attack on a statute pursuant to this section, the question is whether the language of the title gives notice of what the body of the Act contains. Carsello v. State, 220 Ga. 90, 137 S.E.2d 305 (1964).

To prevent fraud and surprise it is important that the members of the General Assembly should be notified at least by the title of the Act of the subject matter about which they are legislating; they should not be misled by the title. Fortson v. Weeks, 232 Ga. 472, 208 S.E.2d 68 (1974).

Act void if title and body do not correspond. — If both the title and the body of the Act contain separate and distinct subject-matters, the Act will be void in its entirety. Bass v. Lawrence, 124 Ga. 75, 52 S.E. 296 (1905).

When the caption of the Act describes one area or territory, and the body of the Act another area or territory, whether it be larger or smaller, the body of the Act contains a subject matter totally different from that contained in the caption, and is therefore in violation of this paragraph. Adams v. City of Cornelia, 206 Ga. 687, 58 S.E.2d 398 (1950).

Where there is inserted in the body of an Act a completely unrelated provision of which the title gives no intimation, this paragraph is violated. Brown v. Clower, 225 Ga. 165, 166 S.E.2d 363 (1969).

This paragraph does not require that the title should contain a synopsis of the law. The general object of the law is all that need be indicated by the title. Minute details should be omitted. Wright v. Fulton County, 169 Ga. 354, 150 S.E. 262 (1929); Green v. Harper, 177 Ga. 680, 170 S.E. 872 (1933); Cade v. State, 207 Ga. 135, 60 S.E.2d 763 (1950).

This paragraph does not require that the title of an Act should contain a synopsis of the law proposed, but that the Act should contain no matter variant from the title. Inter-City Coach Lines v. Harrison, 172 Ga. 390, 157 S.E. 673 (1931); City of Albany v. Ader, 176 Ga. 391, 168 S.E. 1 (1933); Wright v. State, 53 Ga. App. 371, 186 S.E. 149 (1936).

The title to an Act need not contain a synopsis of all of its provisions. Board of Educ. & Orphanage v. State Bd. of Educ., 186 Ga. 200, 197 S.E. 261 (1938); Thompson v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 238 Ga. 19, 231 S.E.2d 720 (1976).

Constitution does not require that title of Act should contain a synopsis of the law, but that Act should contain no matter variant from title; if title is descriptive generally of purposes of Act, it is sufficient, and it is not necessary that it should particularize the several provisions contained in the body of the Act. Devier v. State, 247 Ga. 635, 277 S.E.2d 729 (1981); Ladson v. State, 248 Ga. 470, 285 S.E.2d 508 (1981).

Minute details should be omitted. Banks v. State, 124 Ga. 15, 52 S.E. 74 (1905); Inter-City Coach Lines v. Harrison, 172 Ga. 390, 157 S.E. 673 (1931).

It is not intended that the substance of an Act should be set forth in the caption, nor that every detail stated in the body thereof be mentioned in the title; if what follows after the enacting clause is definitely related to what is expressed in the caption, if it be naturally connected therewith, and related to the main object or subject matter of the legislation and is not in conflict therewith, there is no infringement of this paragraph. State v. Resolute Ins. Co., 221 Ga. 815, 147 S.E.2d 433 (1966); Nash v. National Preferred Life Ins. Co., 222 Ga. 14, 148 S.E.2d 402 (1966); Ray v. Hand, 225 Ga. 589, 170 S.E.2d 692 (1969); Frazer v. City of Albany, 245 Ga. 399, 265 S.E.2d 581 (1980); Devier v. State, 247 Ga. 635, 277 S.E.2d 729 (1981); Ladson v. State, 248 Ga. 470, 285 S.E.2d 508 (1981); Ladson v. State, 248 Ga. 470, 285 S.E.2d 508 (1981).

Every detail in the Act need not be set forth in the caption in order to apprise the public and the legislature of the intended legislation. Green v. Bryson, 223 Ga. 862, 159 S.E.2d 56 (1968).

This paragraph does not require the legislature to set forth the entire substance of an Act in its title. Davenport v. Davenport, 243 Ga. 613, 255 S.E.2d 695 (1979).

Titles exceedingly brief, general, and indefinite may be sufficient. Fullington v. Williams, 98 Ga. 807, 27 S.E. 183 (1896); Plumb v. Christie, 103 Ga. 686, 30 S.E. 759 (1898); Nolan v. Central Ga. Power Co., 134 Ga. 201, 67 S.E. 656 (1910); Wright v. Fulton County, 169 Ga. 354, 150 S.E. 262 (1929); Inter-City Coach Lines v. Harrison, 172 Ga. 390, 157 S.E. 673 (1931).

Title sufficient if germane to subject. — If what follows after an enacting clause is definitely related to what is expressed in the title, has a natural connection, relates to the main subject of legislation, and is not in conflict therewith, there is no infringement of this paragraph. Cady v. Jardine, 185 Ga. 9, 193 S.E. 869 (1937).

This paragraph does not mean that the caption must be as detailed as the Act. It is sufficient if the provision of the Act is germane to the subject thereof stated in the caption. Undercofler v. Hospital Auth., 221 Ga. 501, 145 S.E.2d 487 (1965); Hawes v. Cordell Ford Co., 223 Ga. 260, 154 S.E.2d 599 (1967); Sears v. State, 232 Ga. 547, 208 S.E.2d 93 (1974).

Substantial correspondence necessary between title and body. — The title and body of legislative Acts must correspond, not literally but substantially, and this is to be determined in view of the subject matter to which the legislation relates. Green v. Bryson, 223 Ga. 862, 159 S.E.2d 56 (1968).

Substance of the Act must be related to the title, and the title must give notice of the Act's contents. Davenport v. Davenport, 243 Ga. 613, 255 S.E.2d 695 (1979).

Sufficiency of Caption (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Legislation germane to purpose of Act may be included. — Any legislation which is germane to the general purpose of an Act as indicated in the title can be properly embraced in the Act, and no matter what may be its details the legislation embraced therein will not render the Act subject to the objection that it contains matter variant from the title, so long as such matter is legitimately within the general scope of the purpose of the Act as indicated in the title. Board of Educ. & Orphanage v. State Bd. of Educ., 186 Ga. 200, 197 S.E. 261 (1938).

Every detail of an Act need not be expressed in the caption and as long as the provisions are germane to the general purpose of the Act they will not be considered different subject matter. Rich v. State, 237 Ga. 291, 227 S.E.2d 761 (1976).

It is only necessary that the subject matter in the body of the Act relate to what is expressed in the title and have a natural connection to the main object of the legislation and not in conflict therewith, so as not to be deceiving upon a casual reading of only the heading of the Act. Lee v. State, 239 Ga. 769, 238 S.E.2d 852 (1977).

Act not unconstitutional when title broader than body. — An Act is not unconstitutional because language employed in the body of the Act is not as broad as might be warranted by the caption. Plumb v. Christie, 103 Ga. 686, 30 S.E. 759 (1898); Coleman v. Board of Educ., 131 Ga. 643, 63 S.E. 41 (1908).

The mere fact that the title of a statute is broader in terms and scope than the body of the Act does not affect its sufficiency under this paragraph if the variance is not such as to be misleading. Hill v. Perkins, 218 Ga. 354, 127 S.E.2d 909 (1962).

Matter in the body of an Act inconsistent with the title may be omitted if the remainder of the Act sets forth a complete scheme. Barnett v. State, 117 Ga. 298, 43 S.E. 720 (1903); Pearson v.

Bass, 132 Ga. 117, 63 S.E. 798 (1909); Jackson v. Beavers, 156 Ga. 71, 118 S.E. 751 (1923).

Inclusion of penalty not mentioned in title not unconstitutional. — This paragraph is not violated by the inclusion in the body of an Act of a penalty which is not alluded to in the caption of the Act where the penalty affixed is germane to the purpose of the Act. Pitts v. State, 219 Ga. 222, 132 S.E.2d 649 (1963).

2. Use of Words "And for Other Purposes"

Use of words authorizes inclusion of germane provisions. — The use of the words "and for other purposes" will not authorize legislation upon any subject save one which is germane to the general subject embraced in the title. Board of Pub. Educ. v. Barlow, 49 Ga. 232 (1873); Crawley v. State, 150 Ga. 86, 102 S.E. 898 (1920); Storey v. Town of Summerville, 158 Ga. 182, 123 S.E. 139 (1924).

Provisions germane to the general subject-matter embraced in the title of an Act, and which are designed to carry into effect the purposes for which it is passed, may be constitutionally enacted therein, though not referred to in the title otherwise than by use of the words, "and for other purposes." White v. Donaldson, 170 Ga. 432, 153 S.E. 19 (1930); Morgan v. Shepherd, 171 Ga. 33, 154 S.E. 780 (1930); Inter-City Coach Lines v. Harrison, 172 Ga. 390, 157 S.E. 673 (1931); Hines v. Etheridge, 173 Ga. 870, 162 S.E. 113 (1931); Cady v. Jardine, 185 Ga. 9, 193 S.E. 869 (1937); Shadrick v. Bledsoe, 186 Ga. 345, 198 S.E. 535 (1938); Eubanks v. State, 217 Ga. 588, 124 S.E.2d 269 (1962); Campbell v. J.D. Jewell, Inc., 221 Ga. 543, 145 S.E.2d 569 (1965); Nash v. National Preferred Life Ins. Co., 222 Ga. 14, 148 S.E.2d 402 (1966).

The phrase "and for other purposes" authorizes the inclusion in the Act of matter germane to the general subject of the Act. Black v. Jones, 190 Ga. 95, 8 S.E.2d 385 (1940).

Where the caption of an Act contains the words "and for other purposes" this language authorizes the incorporation in the body of the Act of any provision that is incidental or germane to the main objective as indicated by the caption. Harris v. State, 191 Ga. 243, 12 S.E.2d 64 (1940).

The clause, “and for other purposes,” contained in the caption of an Act of the legislature, will include almost any provision of the Act consistent with the general purpose of the Act as amended. Adams v. City of Cornelia, 206 Ga. 687, 58 S.E.2d 398 (1950).

Use of words “and for other purposes” does not warrant the introduction of new subject matter in the Act. Jackson v. State, 5 Ga. App. 177, 62 S.E. 726 (1908).

Specific Laws

1. Laws of General Application

Section taxing charge for use of real property unconstitutional when under caption of “personal property.” — Section 3 (C) 1 (b) of Ga. L. 1951, p. 360 (§ 48-8-2(6)(C)) violates this paragraph, for the reason that the title gives notice of its intention to tax leases and rentals of “tangible personal property,” but gives no notice of an intention to tax the lease, rental, or other charge for the use of real property. Atlanta Americana Motor Hotel Corp. v. Undercofler, 222 Ga. 295, 149 S.E.2d 691 (1966).

Act fixing qualifications of tax assessors may include disqualification provision. — Where a portion of the caption indicates that the Act (Ga. L. 1913, p. 125, §§ 48-5-291 through 48-5-296) is to fix the “qualifications” of tax assessors it is sufficient to authorize the incorporation in the Act of a provision for their disqualification. Parks v. Ash, 168 Ga. 868, 149 S.E. 207 (1929), overruled on other grounds, Lucas v. Woodward, 240 Ga. 770, 243 S.E.2d 28 (1978).

Only one subject matter, that is, the right to redeem property sold for taxes, is referred to in Ga. L. 1949, p. 1132. Every provision in the body of the Act is specifically expressed in the title, and the statute does not violate this paragraph. Patterson v. Florida Realty & Fin. Corp., 212 Ga. 440, 93 S.E.2d 571 (1956).

This paragraph is not violated by the General Tax Act of 1890 (Ga. L. 1890-91, p. 35). McGhee v. State, 92 Ga.

21, 17 S.E. 276 (1893).

Title of Act embracing malt beverages cannot extend to all alcoholic beverages. — Where the title of an Act (Ga. L. 1935, p. 73) embraces “malt beverages” only, and a section (Code 1933, § 58-724, see § 3-3-21) within the body extends to “alcoholic beverages of any kind,” and prohibits the sale thereof on any school grounds or college campus or within 100 yards thereof, it contains matter different from that in the title, in violation of this paragraph. McCaffrey v. State, 183 Ga. 827, 189 S.E. 825 (1937).

Act setting tax rate on malt beverage crowns constitutional. — Ga. L. 1937-38 Ex. Sess., p. 175 (Code 1933, § 58-739), purporting to amend the General Tax Act of 1935 (§ 3-5-60) as related to the tax on auctioneers, and “to provide that the tax paid crowns or lid crown required by law to be attached or affixed to bottles or cans containing malt beverages shall be at the rate of two cents for each can or bottle containing 12 fluid ounces or proportionally thereof, so as to graduate the tax on bottles or cans of various sizes,” does not violate this paragraph. Crisp v. Head, 187 Ga. 20, 199 S.E. 219 (1938).

Section limiting state’s power to affect interests of owners of Municipal Electric Authority bonds. — Ga. L. 1975, p. 107 (see now O.C.G.A. § 46-3-146), limiting the power of the state to adversely affect the interests of the owners of the Municipal Electric Authority’s bonds and notes, is not in violation of this paragraph. Thompson v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 238 Ga. 19, 231 S.E.2d 720 (1976).

Act fixing venue of suits against electric companies constitutional (Ga. L. 1912, p. 66, § 46-1-2). Towaliga Falls Power Co. v. Foster, 143 Ga. 688, 85 S.E. 835 (1915).

Act dealing with municipal taxation of life insurers not unconstitutional because title does not mention county powers. — Even though there is no reference in the title to the provision in the Act (Ga. L. 1964, p. 122, § 33-8-8) that no county or unincorporated area shall be permitted to impose, levy, or charge any of the taxes and fees mentioned therein, no reference in the title need be specifically made to the fact that no county or unincorporated area thereof could impose such taxes and fees under the Act since the title sufficiently covers this provision by stating that the Act involves the "exercise of the powers of municipal corporations and other political subdivisions." This phrase is sufficient to cover both the granting and the taking of power from the various political subdivisions in the establishment of a uniform policy. Nash v. National Preferred Life Ins. Co., 222 Ga. 14, 148 S.E.2d 402 (1966).

Specific Laws (Cont'd)1. Laws of General*Application (Cont'd)

Not unconstitutional because it does not mention effect on business licenses. — Even though the title does not indicate that the Act (Ga. L. 1964, p. 122) deals with business licenses issued by the county, the words "fees and taxes" as used in the title are sufficient to include those various and specific types which are set out in detail in the body of the Act including business licenses. Nash v. National Preferred Life Ins. Co., 222 Ga. 14, 148 S.E.2d 402 (1966).

Not unconstitutional because it preempts field of imposing taxes on life insurers. — Even though no reference is made in the title that the purpose of the Act (Ga. L. 1964, p. 122) is to preempt to the state the field of imposing taxes upon life insurance companies, the title does state that the Act is to "provide a uniform policy," and there could be no such uniform policy established in this field unless total authority in this matter is preempted and placed into one policy making body, in this case the General Assembly. The fact that the body of the Act mentions preemption does not violate the Constitution because it is incidental and necessary to carry out the purpose of establishing a uniform policy. Nash v. National Preferred Life Ins. Co., 222 Ga. 14, 148 S.E.2d 402 (1966).

Not unconstitutional because it deals with both county and municipal governments. — The Act (Ga. L. 1964, p. 122) does not refer to more than one subject matter even though it deals with the powers of both county and municipal governments, since the Act deals with the taxing of insurance company premiums and that alone is the subject matter of the Act. Nash v. National Preferred Life Ins. Co., 222 Ga. 14, 148 S.E.2d 402 (1966).

Employer's Liability Act constitutional. (Ga. L. 1909, p. 160). Georgia C. & P.R.R. v. Hines, 138 Ga. 713, 76 S.E. 60 (1912).

Housing Authorities Act constitutional. — Neither Ga. L. 1937, p. 210 nor p. 697 (Art. 1, Ch. 3, T. 8) refer to more than one subject-matter, or contain matter different from that expressed in the title contrary to this paragraph. Williamson v. Housing Auth., 186 Ga. 673, 199 S.E. 43 (1938).

Banking Law of 1919 constitutional. — The Banking Law of 1919 (Ga. L. 1919, p. 135) is not repugnant to this paragraph. Felton v. Bennett, 163 Ga. 849, 137 S.E. 264 (1927).

Nonresident Motorist Act constitutional. — There is no merit in the contention that the Nonresident Motorist Act (Ga. L. 1937, p. 732) is lacking in the unity of purpose required by this paragraph, because it provides for both a method of serving a nonresident and the venue of suits brought thereunder. Lloyd Adams, Inc. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 190 Ga. 633, 10 S.E.2d 46 (1940).

Motor vehicle registration law constitutional. (Ga. L. 1915, Ex. Sess., p. 107, now repealed). Tarver v. City of Albany, 160 Ga. 251, 127 S.E. 856 (1925).

Motor Vehicle Registration Law (Ga. L. 1937-38, Ex. Sess., p. 259) does not violate this paragraph insofar as it attempts to deal with or tax public property. Burkett v. State, 198 Ga. 747, 32 S.E.2d 797 (1945).

Uniform Rules of the Road Act constitutional. — The Uniform Rules of the Road Act, Ga. L. 1974, p. 633, as amended by Ga. L. 1976, p. 977, does not violate this paragraph by containing matter different from what is expressed in the title. Head v. State, 246 Ga. 360, 271 S.E.2d 452 (1980).

Georgia Motor Vehicle Accident Reparations Act constitutional. — The fact that the title to the Georgia Motor Vehicle Accident Reparations Act (Ga. L.

1974, p. 113; O.C.G.A. Ch. 34, T. 33) does not make reference to a penalty provision provided for in the body of that Act does not render it unconstitutional under this paragraph. Atlanta Cas. Co. v. Jones, 247 Ga. 238, 275 S.E.2d 328 (1981).

Resolution authorizing sale of list of motor vehicle owners constitutional. — The resolution of 1929 (former Ga. L. 1929, p. 1483) authorizing the sale of the list of motor vehicle owners is not unconstitutional and void, for the reason that it has no caption and was not passed in conformity; it being evident from reading the resolution that it was intended as a revenue measure. While the resolution has not a formal caption as precedes an Act, the preamble was in substance a caption and the resolution was introduced in the House of Representatives as required by Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. VIII (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. II) and as required of all revenue bills. Grizzard v. State Revenue Comm'n, 177 Ga. 845, 171 S.E. 765 (1933).

Registration section of Motor Common Carriers Act constitutional. — Section 18 (former O.C.G.A. § 46-7-15) of the former Motor Common Carriers Act (Ga. L. 1931, p. 199) was not unconstitutional on the grounds that the statute referred to more than one subject matter or contained matter different from what was expressed in the statute's title. City of Albany v. Ader, 176 Ga. 391, 168 S.E. 1 (1933); Mayor of Savannah v. V.C. Ellington Co., 177 Ga. 149, 170 S.E. 38 (1933).

Housing Authority Law of 1937 constitutional. — The "Housing Authority Law" of 1937 (Ga. L. 1937, p. 210, § 8-3-1 et seq.), and the Act of 1939 amending this law (Ga. L. 1939, p. 121), is not in contravention of this paragraph, as referring to more than one subject matter, or as containing matter different from what is expressed in the title; and is not in contravention of the uniformity clause contained in Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VII (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV), a special law as to matters covered by general laws. Barber v. Housing Auth., 189 Ga. 155, 5 S.E.2d 425 (1939).

Section relating to divorce procedure constitutional. — The legislation enacting § 19-6-1 (Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253) meets the single subject matter requirement of this paragraph, because its provisions all relate to changes in divorce and alimony procedure necessitated by the advent of "no fault" divorce, and because the lien provision has a natural connection with the main object of the legislation. Davenport v. Davenport, 243 Ga. 613, 255 S.E.2d 695 (1979).

Act providing for liens upon estates relating to alimony constitutional. — The statement in the caption of Ga. L. 1977, p. 1253 that it amended former Code 1933, § 30-201 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-6-1), relating to permanent and temporary alimony "to provide for liens upon estates," gave sufficient notice of the provisions of the Act to meet the requirement of this paragraph. Davenport v. Davenport, 243 Ga. 613, 255 S.E.2d 695 (1979).

The Child Abuse and Prevention Act refers to only one subject matter and that is the implementation relating to a State Children's Trust Fund. Collins v. Woodham, 257 Ga. 643, 362 S.E.2d 61 (1987).

State Bar Act not unconstitutional on grounds that it violates this paragraph (Art. 2, Ch. 19, T. 15). Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969), commented on in 21 Mercer L. Rev. 355 (1969).

Act regulating dental hygienists constitutional. — The Act regulating the occupation of dental hygienists, approved February 25, 1949, Ga. L. 1949, p. 1192 (now repealed) is not unconstitutional, because it violates the due-process and equal-protection clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 14 and the Georgia Constitution, or because it violates this paragraph. Lamons v. Yarbrough, 206 Ga. 50, 55 S.E.2d 551 (1949).

Paragraph not violated by Act proscribing practice of dentistry without a license. Wrzesinski v. State, 271 Ga. 659, 522 S.E.2d 461 (1999).

Failure to mention penalty of injunction in caption of roadhouse licensing Act not unconstitutional. — The fact that no particular reference is made in the title of the Act (Ga. L. 1945, p. 326) to the penalty of injunction provided for in Ga. L. 1945, p. 326, § 17A (see now

Specific Laws (Cont'd)1. Laws of General*Application (Cont'd)

O.C.G.A. § 43-21-57) does not render this provision of the Act repugnant to this paragraph. Copeland v. Leathers, 206 Ga. 280, 56 S.E.2d 530 (1949).

Act requiring contractor to give bond in public works contracts constitutional (Ga. L. 1916, p. 94; see O.C.G.A. Art. 4, Ch. 82, T. 36). Ty Ty Consol. Sch. Dist. v. Colquitt Lumber Co., 153 Ga. 426, 112 S.E. 561 (1922).

Land Registration Act constitutional (Ga. L. 1917, p. 108; see O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 2, T. 44). Crowell v. Akin, 152 Ga. 126, 108 S.E. 791 (1921).

Legislation germane to purpose of Act. — O.C.G.A. § 9-3-51 which insulates architects, engineers, contractors, and all other parties participating in the design, planning, supervision, or construction of an improvement to real property from liability for injuries to persons or property occurring more than eight years after substantial completion of such improvement and resulting from negligent designing, planning, supervision, or construction of such an improvement does not violate this paragraph. Mullis v. Southern Co. Servs., 250 Ga. 90, 296 S.E.2d 579 (1982).

Building Authority Act not violative of paragraph. — Because the entire County Building Authority Act dealt with the creation and operation of county building authorities, the Act did not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. III by allegedly covering two distinct subject matters: (1) the creation, functions, and powers of county building authorities; and (2) the specific grant of power to other governmental entities to deal with the building authority. Building Auth. v. State, 253 Ga. 242, 321 S.E.2d 97 (1984).

Definition of "burglary" in § 16-7-1 does not violate this paragraph. — Definition of "burglary" in O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1 relates to main object of legislation, contains "no matter variant from the title," and bears "a natural connection" to the matter contained in the enacting clause, and does not violate this paragraph. Ladson v. State, 248 Ga. 470, 285 S.E.2d 508 (1981).

Notice of repeal of tax deduction. —

Where an Act's title, which refers to Ga. L. 1969, p. 115 and relates the amendment to "adjustments to federal taxable income to be made by corporations," it gives adequate notice of the repeal of the deduction for corporate long-term capital gains as the title puts the reader on notice that subsection (b) affecting corporate adjustments is being amended, and as the long-term capital gains deduction is one of the corporate adjustments in the referenced section and is naturally connected with and germane to the main object of the legislation as stated in the title; that subsection (b)(6) is on page 117, Ga. L. 1969, rather than on page 115, Ga. L. 1969, is not fatal. Mead Corp. v. Collins, 258 Ga. 239, 367 S.E.2d 790 (1988).

Tort Reform Act. — O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1(e)(2) is unconstitutional as containing matter different from that expressed in the title of the Tort Reform Act and containing subject matter different from other subject matter in the body of the Act. McBride v. GMC, 737 F. Supp. 1563 (M.D. Ga. 1990).

Punitive damages law. — Because the trial court erroneously concluded that the purpose of O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1 is revenue raising, it erred in holding that the statute violates Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. III, providing that no bill shall contain subject matter different from that expressed in the title. Mack Trucks, Inc. v. Conkle, 263 Ga. 539, 436 S.E.2d 635 (1993); State v. Moseley, 263 Ga. 680, 436 S.E.2d 632 (1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1107, 114 S. Ct. 2101, 128 L. Ed. 2d 663 (1994).

Guardianship for veterans. — Former O.C.G.A. § 29-6-11(c), prohibiting a guardian appointed to allow a ward to receive Department of Veterans Affairs benefits from receiving a bequest under the ward's will, did not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. III, prohibiting the passage of a bill containing matter different from the bill's title, because one of the bill's stated purposes was to provide for a comprehensive change in the guardianship of beneficiaries of the United States Department of Veterans Affairs, and the statute was sufficiently related to this purpose. Cross v. Stokes, 275 Ga. 872, 572 S.E.2d 538 (2002).

2. Penal Statutes

This paragraph applies to penal statutes. Harris v. State, 110 Ga. 887, 36 S.E. 232 (1900).

Penalty need not be mentioned in title. Morris v. State, 117 Ga. 1, 43 S.E. 368 (1903); Pearson v. Bass, 132 Ga. 117, 63 S.E. 798 (1909); Stanley v. State, 135 Ga. 859, 70 S.E. 591 (1911).

Body of penal statute cannot be narrowed to conform to title. — The body of a penal statute, when broader in its terms than the title warrants, cannot be so narrowed by constructions as to make the statute good for what is embraced within the title, unless the result thus arrived at will correspond with the real legislative intention. McCaffrey v. State, 183 Ga. 827, 189 S.E. 825 (1937).

Act imposing death penalty constitutional. — The Act providing for the imposition of the death penalty (Ga. L. 1973, p. 159; see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-30) deals with only one subject and is not violative of the Georgia Constitution. McCorquodale v. State, 233 Ga. 369, 211 S.E.2d 577 (1974).

Act amending sections on bail in criminal cases constitutional. — Ga. L. 1943, p. 282, while amending provisions which deal with the subject of bail in criminal cases by providing for service of the forfeiture proceeding and for relief of the surety after final judgment, does not contain more than one subject matter in violation of this paragraph. Fields v. Arnall, 199 Ga. 491, 34 S.E.2d 692 (1945).

Act making it felony to defraud laborers and materialmen constitutional. — The Act of 1941, Ga. L. 1941, p. 480 (now repealed), which declares that it shall be a felony for any person, with the intent to defraud, to use the proceeds of any payment made to the person for the purpose of improving real property, otherwise than for the payment of labor and material cost, if there be any obligations outstanding, and providing that the failure to pay such labor and material cost would be prima-facie evidence of intent to defraud, is not violative of this paragraph, or in violation of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XX (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art.

I, Sec. I, Para. XXIII), which prohibits an imprisonment for debt; or in violation of the equal protection and due process clauses of U.S. Const., amend. 14. Collins v. State, 206 Ga. 95, 55 S.E.2d 599 (1949).

Void check law constitutional. — Act (Ga. L. 1919, p. 135, Art. 20, § 34) prohibiting utterance of void checks constitutional. Corenblum v. State, 153 Ga. 596, 113 S.E. 159 (1922).

Prohibition law constitutional (Ga. L. 1907, p. 81; former Code 1910, §§ 426 through 433). Whitley v. State, 134 Ga. 758, 68 S.E. 716 (1910).

Local Act providing penalty for illegal voting constitutional (Ga. L. 1914, p. 1172). Holland v. State, 155 Ga. 795, 118 S.E. 203 (1923).

Local Act regulating sale of liquor constitutional (Ga. L. 1906, p. 430). Glover v. State, 126 Ga. 594, 55 S.E. 592 (1906).

3. Amendments

Title of original Act will aid in determining scope of amendatory Act. Dallis v. Griffin, 117 Ga. 408, 43 S.E. 758 (1903); Holland v. State, 155 Ga. 795, 118 S.E. 203 (1923); Southwestern R.R. v. Wright, 156 Ga. 1, 118 S.E. 552 (1923).

In determining whether an amending statute contains matter different from that expressed in its title, the title of the original statute may be considered when it is set forth in the title of the amending statute. Campbell v. J.D. Jewell, Inc., 221 Ga. 543, 145 S.E.2d 569 (1965).

Insertion of matter not mentioned in title violates paragraph. — When the caption of an amendatory Act specifically limits the matters to be included in the amendment, and there is inserted in the body of the Act a completely unrelated provision of which the title gives no intimation, this paragraph is violated. Nelson v. Southern Guar. Ins. Co., 221 Ga. 804, 147 S.E.2d 424 (1966).

Radical change in Act not unconstitutional. — Though amendatory Act may radically change provisions of Act which it amends, this does not render it obnoxious to this paragraph. Sayer v. Brown, 119 Ga. 539, 46 S.E. 649 (1904).

Retention of all features in original Act by revising Act constitutional. —

Specific Laws (Cont'd)3. Amendments (Cont'd)

If, in revising an old law, the revising Act embraces two features, both of which were embraced in the law revised, the retention of both features in the revising Act does not make the body of the Act contain or refer to matters not expressed in its title. White v. Donaldson, 170 Ga. 432, 153 S.E. 19 (1930).

Provision in caption designating amended Act permits inclusion of consistent material. — A provision in the caption of an Act of the legislature, simply describing the Act as one to amend a designated Act, is sufficient to permit any provision in the Act not inconsistent with the original Act to be amended. Adams v. City of Cornelia, 206 Ga. 687, 58 S.E.2d 398 (1950).

Amendment to Workers' Compensation Act constitutional (Ga. L. 1922, p. 185, amending Ga. L. 1920, p. 167; see O.C.G.A. Ch. 9, T. 34). Athens Ry. & Elec. Co. v. Kinney, 160 Ga. 1, 127 S.E. 290 (1925).

Amendment to § 34-9-13(e) of Workers' Compensation Act unconstitutional. — 1989 amendment to O.C.G.A. § 34-9-13(e) is unconstitutional since the alteration greatly limited availability of workers' compensation benefits to surviving spouses and was enacted in legislation that had the object and title reflecting a purpose of correcting only grammatical errors and to modernize language in various statutes—all non-substantive alterations; 1989 amendment to § 34-9-13(e), which greatly limited the availability of benefits to surviving spouses, was a substantive alteration made in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. III. Sherman Concrete Pipe Co. v. Chinn, 283 Ga. 468, 660 S.E.2d 368 (2008).

The 1990 Act amending O.C.G.A. § 16-6.5.1(b) to include a person "who is enrolled in a school" to the class of victims did not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. III. Randolph v. State, 269 Ga. 147, 496 S.E.2d 258 (1998).

4. Local Laws

Title authorizes inclusion of all matter germane to general subject. —

Where title of an Act was: "An Act to amend the several Acts relating to and incorporating the Mayor and Aldermen of The City of Savannah, to extend the corporate limits of the City of Savannah and for other purposes," any legislation could constitutionally be embodied in the Act which was germane to the general subject of amending the charter of the city. Parker v. Mayor of Savannah, 216 Ga. 210, 115 S.E.2d 555 (1960).

General Assembly cannot amend charters of two municipalities in one Act.

— An Act which attempted to annex land alleged to be within the corporate limits of another municipality, explicitly named in the Act, violated this paragraph. The General Assembly is incompetent to amend, repeal, or modify the charters of two separate and distinct municipal corporations in one Act, and to attempt to do so causes the Act to impermissibly refer to more than one subject matter. Schneider v. City of Folkston, 207 Ga. 434, 62 S.E.2d 177 (1950).

An Act whose title referred only to one city, but which also attempted to amend, partially repeal, and nullify the charter of another municipality caused the Act to contain matter different from what was expressed in the title in violation of this paragraph. Schneider v. City of Folkston, 207 Ga. 434, 62 S.E.2d 177 (1950).

An Act which attempted to annex additional territory within the corporate limits of another municipality violated this paragraph even though it made no explicit mention of the latter, but merely described the territory; the Act improperly purported to amend the charters of two municipalities by subtraction and addition of property. City of Chamblee v. Village of N. Atlanta, 217 Ga. 517, 123 S.E.2d 663 (1962).

It is not necessary that title of local Act be specific, but where title of such is definite, it is therefore necessarily limited, and to permit other and totally different matter to be incorporated would be to let in the very mischief intended to be prevented by this provision. Bray v. City of E. Point, 203 Ga. 315, 46 S.E.2d 257 (1948).

Act amending Act creating new city charter violates this paragraph, insofar as it purports to create a joint board of tax appeals. Toole v. Anderson, 177 Ga. 814, 171 S.E. 714 (1933).

Act regulating fees of officers of city court invalid as conflicting with this paragraph. Christie v. Miller, 128 Ga. 412, 57 S.E. 697 (1907).

Act authorizing city to acquire fee-simple title by condemnation void, as it could be construed to include two distinct powers of condemnation. O'Dowd's Sons & Co. v. City Council, 141 Ga. 748, 82 S.E. 148 (1914).

Act allowing mayor to succeed to position in office unconstitutional in part as violating this paragraph. Griffith v. Merrit, 223 Ga. 562, 157 S.E.2d 23 (1967), commented on in 19 Mercer L. Rev. 436 (1968).

Creation of municipality constitutional. Welborne v. State, 114 Ga. 793, 40 S.E. 857 (1902); Mayor of Americus v. Perry, 114 Ga. 871, 40 S.E. 1004 (1920); Tison v. City of Doerun, 155 Ga. 367, 116 S.E. 615 (1923); Storey v. Town of Summerville, 158 Ga. 182, 123 S.E. 139 (1924).

Act creating new city charter constitutional. Baugh v. City of LaGrange, 161 Ga. 80, 130 S.E. 69 (1925).

Act granting commission form of government constitutional. City of Cartersville v. McGinnis, 142 Ga. 71, 82 S.E. 487 (1914); Davis v. Warde, 155 Ga. 748, 118 S.E. 378, appeal dismissed, 263 U.S. 725, 44 S. Ct. 3, 68 L. Ed. 527 (1923); Cady v. Jardine, 185 Ga. 9, 193 S.E. 869 (1937).

Act creating city court constitutional. Welborne v. State, 114 Ga. 793, 40 S.E. 857 (1902); Fountain v. Ragan-Malone Co., 141 Ga. 58, 80 S.E. 306 (1913).

Act changing terms of court constitutional. Burge v. Mangum, 134 Ga. 307, 67 S.E. 857 (1910).

Acts to raise money for school purposes valid. Smith v. Bohler, 72 Ga. 546 (1884); Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. Hutchinson, 125 Ga. 762, 54 S.E. 725 (1906); Board of Educ. v. Board of Educ., 147 Ga. 776, 95 S.E. 684 (1918).

Act creating municipal court and permitting oral charges to jury is not unconstitutional because in conflict with this paragraph. Robinson v. Odom, 168 Ga. 81, 147 S.E. 569 (1929).

Act changing county lines constitutional. Manson v. City of College Park, 131 Ga. 429, 62 S.E. 278 (1908).

Annexation Acts generally. — Annexation Acts do not refer to more than one subject matter because they both annex property into city school district and remove property from county school district. Upton County Sch. Dist. v. City of Thomaston, 248 Ga. 98, 281 S.E.2d 537 (1981).

Shifting of school district boundaries is merely one of several consequences of annexation, not a "subject matter" contained in annexation Acts. For example, one effect of annexation is to render the annexed territory subject to taxation by city. An Act which provides for annexation but does not provide for taxation of annexed territory does not contain matter different from what is expressed in the title within the meaning of this paragraph. Upton County Sch. Dist. v. City of Thomaston, 248 Ga. 98, 281 S.E.2d 537 (1981).

Act annexing contiguous territory to city constitutional. Mayor of Macon v. Hughes, 110 Ga. 795, 36 S.E. 247 (1900); Richardson v. Mayor of Macon, 132 Ga. 122, 63 S.E. 790 (1909); White v. City of Atlanta, 134 Ga. 532, 68 S.E. 103 (1910); Davidson v. Town of Kirkwood, 152 Ga. 357, 110 S.E. 154 (1921).

Act for creation of metropolitan rapid transit system constitutional. — Legislation which has many provisions that are made for the creation and development of a rapid transit system for a metropolitan, multicounty area does not violate this section. Camp v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 229 Ga. 35, 189 S.E.2d 56 (1972).

Local Act which changes method of compensating two county officials does not violate this paragraph. — This paragraph does not require a general revision of the method of compensating all the public officials of the county in order to deal in one Act with the method of compensating more than one of such public officials. Gainer v. Ellis, 226 Ga. 79, 172 S.E.2d 608 (1970).

Act amending incorporation law of school is not unconstitutional under this paragraph. English v. Smith, 162 Ga. 195, 133 S.E. 847 (1926).

Specific Laws (Cont'd)4. Local Laws (Cont'd)

Caption broad enough to allow appropriation in Act. — Caption of Act creating county board of education was sufficiently broad to allow inclusion in Act of appropriation of funds to carry out purpose of Act. Board of Educ. & Orphanage v. State Bd. of Educ., 186 Ga. 200, 197 S.E. 261 (1938).

5. Municipal Ordinances

This paragraph has no application to ordinances passed by municipal authorities. Padrosa v. Amos, 175 Ga. 413, 165 S.E. 248 (1932); Watkins v. Simmons, 179 Ga. 162, 175 S.E. 493 (1934).

Ordinance covering unrelated subject matters is not for that reason rendered invalid. Atlantic Co. v. Jones, 86 Ga. App. 515, 71 S.E.2d 824 (1952).

Charter regulating occupation tax.

— Because a second city provided by local ordinance for the levy, assessment, and collection of an occupation tax on businesses and practitioners operating within that city's limits, the second city had the general authority to collect such a tax under O.C.G.A. § 48-13-6(b), and only the second city was authorized to levy, assess, and collect an occupation tax from businesses and practitioners at the airport that were located within the second city's limits to the extent consistent with Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. IV, Para. I, O.C.G.A. § 48-13-6(b), other applicable statutes, and that city's own charter, ordinances, and regulations; Atlanta, Ga., Charter, § 7-105(f) is ineffective to the extent it purports to divest College Park, Georgia of the authority to levy, assess, and collect an occupation tax on those businesses and practitioners operating at the airport and within the city limits of College Park. City of Atlanta v. City of College Park, 311 Ga. App. 62, 715 S.E.2d 158 (2011).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

If there is serious conflict between the matters covered in title and in law itself, law is unconstitutional; the general purpose of this paragraph is to give notice of the subject of the Act. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-82 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. III).

This paragraph does not require that body of an Act express everything mentioned in caption, but only vice versa. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 382 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. III).

This paragraph excludes amendments to a General Appropriations Act for a prior fiscal year. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-53 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. III).

Act relating to ethics code for Board of Human Resources may be unconstitutional. — Courts could rule the Act, (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 45-10-3, 45-10-4 and 45-10-5), which imposes a general code of ethics on members of the Board of Human Resources and takes away the rule making authority of all boards, commissions, and authorities of state government, constitutionally defective under this paragraph. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-43.1 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. III).

Acts placing city courts under Employees' Retirement System of Georgia do not affect jurisdiction. — Titles to Acts placing city courts under Employees' Retirement System of Georgia (Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 305, § 47-2-293 and Ga. L. 1962, p. 54, § 47-2-290) do not mention any relation to jurisdiction of such courts, and so those sections cannot be construed as affecting jurisdiction. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U70-93.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 73 Am. Jur. 2d, Statutes, § 53 et seq.

ALR. — Sufficiency of title of act licensing or otherwise regulating dealers in securities or other interests or obligations of third persons, 153 ALR 874.

Paragraph IV. Statutes and sections of Code, how amended.

No law or section of the Code shall be amended or repealed by mere reference to its title or to the number of the section of the Code; but the amending or repealing Act shall distinctly describe the law or Code section to be amended or repealed as well as the alteration to be made.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. XII.

Law reviews. — For article, “Bill Drafting — Some Guidelines and Pitfalls,” see 2 Ga. St. B.J. 181 (1965). For article discussing problems of construction when repeal statutes are subsequently repealed, see 10 Ga. St. B.J. 41 (1973).

For comment on Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969) as to the constitutionality of the State Bar Act (Art. 2, Ch. 19, T. 15), see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 355 (1969).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
SUFFICIENCY OF DESCRIPTION
IMPLIED REPEALS
SPECIFIC LAWS

General Consideration

Objectives of paragraph. — An object of this paragraph is to put legislators and the public who might be affected on guard as to all matters connected with subject matter. Ragans v. Ragans, 200 Ga. 890, 39 S.E.2d 162 (1946); Bienert v. State, 82 Ga. App. 179, 60 S.E.2d 575 (1950) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

This paragraph has no reference to Act complete in itself, which does not purport to amend any particular law. Bagwell v. City of Lawrenceville, 94 Ga. 654, 21 S.E. 903 (1894) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph does not apply to constitutional amendments. Cooney v. Foote, 142 Ga. 647, 83 S.E. 537 (1914) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph does not apply to Acts passed pursuant thereto. McCall v. Wilkins, 145 Ga. 342, 89 S.E. 219 (1916) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph does not apply to general tax Acts. — This paragraph does not apply to general tax Acts designed to raise revenue for the purposes of the state government from time to time, and according to changing necessities and exigencies the state may require less revenue or more than theretofore. Fidelity Fruit & Produce Co. v. City of Atlanta, 183 Ga. 698, 189 S.E. 527 (1937) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Act which does not purport to amend or repeal any particular law or section is not within purview of this paragraph. Hines v. Etheridge, 173 Ga. 870, 162 S.E. 113 (1931); Aven v. Steiner Cancer Hosp., 189 Ga. 126, 5 S.E.2d 356 (1939) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Adoption of Code containing Act originally passed in violation of this paragraph cures the defect. McFarland v. Donaldson, 115 Ga. 567, 41 S.E. 1000 (1902); Aultman v. Hodge, 147 Ga. 626, 95 S.E. 297 (1918) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Parts of third Act incorporated. — Where the body of the Act amends the original act by adding a new section which makes certain sections of a third Act part of the Act as amended, this is a sufficient description under this section of the alteration to be made in the Act sought to be amended, and this is so although such third Act and the amending Act became laws on the same day. Holland v. State, 155 Ga. 795, 118 S.E. 203 (1923) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Effect of abrogation of law. — Where an amending Act recites that the old Act as amended shall read in a certain way, such recital as to what the law shall be after the passage of the amended Act abrogates everything in the old law which is not contained therein. Gilbert v. Georgia R.R. & Banking Co., 104 Ga. 412, 30 S.E. 673 (1898).

For effect of repealing a repealing Act, see McCants v. Layfield, 149 Ga. 231, 99 S.E. 877 (1919).

General law may be repealed or modified by another general law, but it cannot be repealed or modified by special or local law. Cheatham v. Palmer, 176 Ga. 227, 167 S.E. 522 (1933).

No requirement of citing effect of legislation on judicial decisions. — There is no constitutional nor statutory requirement that the legislature cite decisions of the court which may be changed, modified, or abrogated by legislative enactments. Davis v. State, 204 Ga. 467, 50 S.E.2d 604 (1948).

Cited in Wood v. City of Rome, 172 Ga. 696, 158 S.E. 585 (1931); Buie v. Buie, 175 Ga. 27, 165 S.E. 15 (1932); Terrell v. Forest Park Consol. Sch. Dist., 175 Ga. 88, 165 S.E. 122 (1932); National Fin. Co. v. Citizens Loan & Sav. Co., 184 Ga. 619, 192 S.E. 717 (1937); Shadrick v. Bledsoe, 186 Ga. 345, 198 S.E. 535 (1938); Pierce v. Powell, 188 Ga. 481, 4 S.E.2d 192 (1939); State Bd. of Educ. v. County Bd. of Educ., 190 Ga. 588, 10 S.E.2d 369 (1940); Morris v. City Council, 201 Ga. 666, 40 S.E.2d 710 (1946); Price v. State, 202 Ga. 205, 42 S.E.2d 728 (1947); Glustrom v. State, 206 Ga. 734, 58 S.E.2d 534 (1950); Complete Auto Transit, Inc. v. Floyd, 214 Ga. 232, 104 S.E.2d 208 (1958); Cavendar v. Evans, 218 Ga. 739, 130 S.E.2d 717 (1963); Burson v. Bishop, 117 Ga. App. 602, 161

S.E.2d 518 (1968); Pye v. State Hwy. Dep't, 226 Ga. 389, 175 S.E.2d 510 (1970); Mayson v. Davis, 227 Ga. 399, 181 S.E.2d 64 (1971); Perdue v. City Council, 137 Ga. App. 702, 225 S.E.2d 62 (1976); Osborne v. Ridge View Assocs., 238 Ga. 377, 233 S.E.2d 342 (1977); Pendigrass v. Edmonds, 247 Ga. 508, 277 S.E.2d 247 (1981); DOT v. Cochran, 160 Ga. App. 583, 287 S.E.2d 599 (1981); Teachers Retirement Sys. v. City of Atlanta, 249 Ga. 196, 288 S.E.2d 200 (1982).

Sufficiency of Description

This paragraph refers to what is contained in body of the Act, and not to contents of title. Holland v. State, 155 Ga. 795, 118 S.E. 203 (1923); Southwestern R.R. v. Wright, 156 Ga. 1, 118 S.E. 552 (1923) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Basic requirement of paragraph. — All that this paragraph requires is that the Act amended or repealed should be identified in some other way than by mere reference to its title. Welborne v. State, 114 Ga. 793, 40 S.E. 857 (1902); Fountain v. Ragan-Malone Co., 141 Ga. 58, 80 S.E. 306 (1913) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Mere reference to the Code section to be affected is insufficient, and a reasonably clear and concise description of the subject matter of the affected statute is necessary. Mead Corp. v. Collins, 258 Ga. 239, 367 S.E.2d 790 (1988).

This paragraph is not complied with if only reference to law to be amended or repealed is its title or number of section. Ragans v. Ragans, 200 Ga. 890, 39 S.E.2d 162 (1946) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Title and date of approval of Act recited. — Under this paragraph, an Act of the legislature can be amended or repealed by a recital of its title and the date of its approval. Adam v. Wright, 84 Ga. 720, 11 S.E. 893 (1890); Fullington v. Williams, 98 Ga. 807, 27 S.E. 183 (1896); Town of Maysville v. Smith, 132 Ga. 316, 64 S.E. 131 (1909); Holland v. State, 155 Ga. 795, 118 S.E. 203 (1923) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

This paragraph requires only description, not transcription, and though the description must be distinct it need not be lengthy or extended. Newman v. State, 101 Ga. 534, 28 S.E. 1005 (1897); Cunningham v. State, 1 Ga. App. 697, 58 S.E. 23 (1907); Cunningham v. State, 128 Ga. 55, 57 S.E. 90 (1907); Ragans v. Ragans, 200 Ga. 890, 39 S.E.2d 162 (1946) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph satisfied when all on notice that certain Act is to be amended. Stembridge v. Newton, 213 Ga. 304, 99 S.E.2d 133 (1957) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated where casual reading shows amended section. — Where a most casual reading of the amendment will suffice to show precisely, and without the slightest danger of mistake, what section was to be amended, this paragraph is not violated. Ryle v. Wilkinson County, 104 Ga. 473, 30 S.E. 934 (1898) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Omission of date of approval immaterial where original Act is sufficiently described in the body of the amendment. Town of Maysville v. Smith, 132 Ga. 316, 64 S.E. 131 (1909); Tison v. City of Doerun, 155 Ga. 367, 116 S.E. 615 (1923).

Place of description. — It is immaterial that the description did not precede, but followed, that portion of the amending Act which declared what the amendment should be. Fite v. Black, 85 Ga. 413, 11 S.E. 782 (1890); Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. George, 92 Ga. 760, 19 S.E. 813 (1894); Silvey & Co. v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 94 Ga. 609, 21 S.E. 607 (1894); Fullington v. Williams, 98 Ga. 807, 27 S.E. 183 (1896); Gilbert v. Georgia R.R. & Banking Co., 104 Ga. 412, 30 S.E. 673 (1898); Ryle v. Wilkinson County, 104 Ga. 473, 30 S.E. 934 (1898).

Entire amendment is construed together. Georgia R.R. & Banking Co. v. George, 92 Ga. 760, 19 S.E. 813 (1894); Gilbert v. Georgia R.R. & Banking Co., 104 Ga. 412, 30 S.E. 673 (1898).

Title as well as entire Act may be considered in determining whether Act violates this paragraph. Ragans v. Ragans, 200 Ga. 890, 39 S.E.2d 162 (1946) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Town charter amended by setting forth name and date thereof. Town of Poulan v. Atlantic Coast Line R.R., 123 Ga. 605, 51 S.E. 657 (1905); City of Cartersville v. McGinnis, 142 Ga. 71, 82 S.E. 487 (1914).

Implied Repeals

This paragraph has no reference to implied amendments or repeals. Peed v. McCrary, 94 Ga. 487, 21 S.E. 232 (1894); Silver v. State, 147 Ga. 162, 93 S.E. 145 (1917); Berry v. State, 153 Ga. 169, 111 S.E. 669 (1922); Walthour v. City of Atlanta, 157 Ga. 24, 120 S.E. 613 (1923); Durham v. State, 166 Ga. 561, 144 S.E. 109 (1928); Head v. Wilkinson, 186 Ga. 739, 198 S.E. 782 (1938); Williams v. State, 187 Ga. 415, 1 S.E.2d 27 (1939); Barber v. Housing Auth., 189 Ga. 155, 5 S.E.2d 425 (1939); Fortson v. Fortson, 200 Ga. 116, 35 S.E.2d 896 (1945); Leonard v. State ex rel. Lanier, 204 Ga. 465, 50 S.E.2d 212 (1948) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

There is amendment or repeal by implication where later law is irreconcilable with older law. Bedingfield v. Parkerson, 212 Ga. 654, 94 S.E.2d 714 (1956).

Repeals by implication are not favored. Glover v. State, 126 Ga. 594, 55 S.E. 592 (1906); Edalgo v. Southern Ry., 129 Ga. 258, 58 S.E. 846 (1907); Thomas v. Board of Comm'rs, 196 Ga. 10, 25 S.E.2d 647 (1943).

Repeal by implication is possible, but not favored, and before an Act will be held to have been repealed by implication the conflict between it and the repealing Act must be clear. One statute will not be construed to repeal another by implication unless the two are in irreconcilable conflict. Kaminsky v. State, 76 Ga. App. 505, 46 S.E.2d 640 (1948).

The intention to repeal will not be presumed, nor the effect of repeal admitted, unless the inconsistency is unavoidable. Goebel v. Hodges, 83 Ga. App. 574, 64 S.E.2d 207 (1951).

Valid subsisting statute is not repealed by implication by later Act unless they are wholly inconsistent, or unless the later Act covers the entire field of the former legislation. Fairfax

Implied Repeals (Cont'd)

Bldg. Co. v. Oldknow, 46 Ga. App. 281, 167 S.E. 538 (1933).

Specific Laws

Omission of section of tax Act in succeeding Act is repeal. — Where a section of the General Tax Act of 1927 exempting vendors of perishable farm products from payment of license fees or taxes (Ga. L. 1927, p. 56, former Code 1933, § 92-1602) was entirely omitted from the succeeding Tax Act of 1935 (Ga. L. 1935, p. 11), which Act covered the entire subject matter dealt with by the general Tax Act of 1927, the omission must be held to have been intentional and to have effected the repeal of the omitted provision in the previous Act. Fidelity Fruit & Produce Co. v. City of Atlanta, 183 Ga. 698, 189 S.E. 527 (1937).

O.C.G.A. § 40-5-58(d) not amendment to § 17-7-95. — O.C.G.A. § 40-5-58(d), dealing with the effect of a nolo contendere plea upon the punishment of an habitual traffic law violator, does not constitute an amendment to or repeal of O.C.G.A. § 17-7-95, dealing with the effect of a nolo contendere plea generally, within the meaning of this paragraph. Smith v. State, 248 Ga. 828, 286 S.E.2d 709 (1982) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated by local Act fixing election and terms of certain officers. Collins v. Russell, 107 Ga. 423, 33 S.E. 444 (1899) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated by amendment to town charter. Shippen Bros. Lumber Co. v. Elliott, 134 Ga. 699, 68 S.E. 509 (1910) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated by Act changing terms of superior court. Burge v. Mangum, 134 Ga. 307, 67 S.E. 857 (1910) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated by Act amending Workers' Compensation Law. — Act adding a new paragraph (Ga. L. 1943, p. 401; see O.C.G.A. § 34-9-6) to the Code, which, among other things, provided that accidents to employees of departments which had been operating under the Workers' Compensation Law and had occurred prior to the passage of this Act would be treated as compensable accidents just as though the employee had been covered under workers' compensation, is not in violation of this paragraph. State Hwy. Dep't v. Bass, 197 Ga. 356, 29 S.E.2d 161 (1944) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated by Act ceding jurisdiction to federal government. — The 1927 Act of cession of jurisdiction (Ga. L. 1927, p. 352; see O.C.G.A. §§ 50-2-22 through 50-2-24) is not an Act of repeal or amendment of prior Acts. It is a new and general statute by which the state makes a complete and general cession of jurisdiction to the federal government over all lands held by the United States for "purposes of government." Those sections are in nowise contrary to this paragraph. Bowen v. United States, 134 F.2d 845 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 319 U.S. 764, 63 S. Ct. 1320, 87 L. Ed. 1714 (1943) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated by Act providing for bond validation. — Former Code 1933, § 87-314 (Ga. L. 1939, p. 177), providing for the validation of bonds, does not violate this paragraph. Town of McIntyre v. Scott, 191 Ga. 473, 12 S.E.2d 883 (1940) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated by Act providing for recovery for homicide of parent. — The Act of 1924 as to recovery for homicide of parent (Ga. L. 1924, p. 60; see O.C.G.A. § 51-4-2) is not unconstitutional as being in violation of this paragraph. Peeler v. Central of Ga. Ry., 163 Ga. 784, 137 S.E. 24 (1927) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated by Act providing for electrocutions. — The Act of February 16, 1938 (Ga. L. Ex. Sess. 1937-1938, p. 330; see O.C.G.A. § 17-10-38), providing that electrocutions be carried out by the Board of Penal Administration (now Department of Offender Rehabilitation) is not unconstitutional as violative of this paragraph. Williams v. State, 187 Ga. 415, 1 S.E.2d 27 (1939) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated by Act taxing business of selling malt beverages. — So far as Ga. L. 1937-38, Ex. Sess., p. 175 (former Code 1933, § 58-739), purports to impose a tax upon the business of selling malt beverages, it does not profess to change or repeal any particular law or statute upon the subject, and it therefore is not within the prohibition of this paragraph. Crisp v. Head, 187 Ga. 20, 199 S.E. 219 (1938) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated by State Bar Act. — (Ga. L. 1963, p. 70; see O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 19, T. 15). Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969), commented on in 21 Mercer L. Rev. 355 (1969).

Paragraph not violated by amendment to statute providing for administration of ward's estates. — Statute, under which, upon the death of a ward, the guardian becomes the ward's administrator, does not violate this paragraph, since the 1958 amendment (Ga. L. 1958, p. 377) to that statute did not refer to former Code 1933, § 113-1202 (see now O.C.G.A. § 53-6-24), relating to selection of administrators by majority of heirs, or in any manner purport to amend or repeal it, and the 1958 amendment clearly stated the law to be amended and the nature of the alterations to be accomplished. Cavender v. Evans, 219 Ga. 449, 133 S.E.2d 856 (1963) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated by local Act amending Act creating board of county commissioners. Stembridge v. Newton, 213 Ga. 304, 99 S.E.2d 133 (1957) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated by local Act providing for assessments of street paving costs. City of Valdosta v. Harris, 156 Ga. 490, 119 S.E. 625 (1923) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

Paragraph not violated by local Act amending Act incorporating school. English v. Smith, 162 Ga. 195, 133 S.E. 847 (1926) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IV).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 73 Am. Jur. 2d, Statutes, § 259 et seq.

C.J.S. — 82 C.J.S., Statutes, § 291 et seq.

ALR. — Repeal of constitutional provision or amendment, 36 ALR 1456.

Withdrawal by constitutional amendment or legislative Act of power under which political body acted in punishing act as crime, as affecting prior offenses, 89 ALR 1514.

Effect of modification or repeal of constitutional or statutory provision adopted by reference in another provision, 168 ALR 627.

Applicability of constitutional requirement that repealing or amendatory statute refer to statute repealed or amended, to repeal or amendment by implication, 5 ALR2d 1270.

Paragraph V. Majority of members to pass bill.

No bill shall become law unless it shall receive a majority of the votes of all the members to which each house is entitled, and such vote shall so appear on the journal of each house.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. VII.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Enrolled Act is conclusive of the fact that this paragraph was complied with. DeLoach v. Newton, 134 Ga. 739, 68 S.E. 708 (1910); Whitley v. State, 134 Ga. 758, 68 S.E. 716 (1910); Dorsey v. Wright, 150 Ga. 321, 103 S.E. 591 (1920); Williams v. MacFeeley, 186 Ga. 145, 197 S.E. 225 (1938) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. V).

Entries or lack thereof in journals cannot be used to show enrolled Act invalid. — An enrolled Act of the legislature, bearing the signatures of the officers of both houses, and the approval of the Governor, and deposited with the Secretary of State, cannot be shown to be invalid by reason of entries or lack of entries in the journals of the General Assembly touching the details of its passage. Williams v. MacFeeley, 186 Ga. 145, 197 S.E. 225 (1938).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Effect of vacancy on number of votes required by paragraph. — There having been 205 members elected to House (House now to consist of not fewer than 180 members), requisite vote under this paragraph would be majority of the 205 so elected. Fact that vacancy exists would not reduce number of votes required. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 259. (Opinion rendered prior to 1983 Constitution, which provides that no bill shall become law unless voted for by majority of members to which each house is entitled.)

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 73 Am. Jur. 2d, Statutes, §§ 25, 26.

C.J.S. — 82 C.J.S., Statutes, §§ 52, 53.

Paragraph VI. When roll-call vote taken.

In either house, when ordered by the presiding officer or at the desire of one-fifth of the members present or a lesser number if so provided by the rules of either house, a roll-call vote on any question shall be taken and shall be entered on the journal. The yeas and nays in each house shall be recorded and entered on the journal upon the passage or rejection of any bill or resolution appropriating money and whenever the Constitution requires a vote of two-thirds of either or both houses for the passage of a bill or resolution.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VII, Paras. V, VI; Art. III, Sec. X, Para. II.

Cross references. — Votes to override executive veto or to propose changes to Constitution of Georgia, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. XI. Votes on appropriations bills, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. VI. Votes on compensation for public officials, § 28-5-3. State financing and investment generally, § 50-17-20 et seq.

Law reviews. — For note discussing the local option sales tax, Code 1933, § 92-3447a.1 (see Art. 2, Ch. 8, T. 48), see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 313 (1979).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Enrolled Act is conclusive of fact that this paragraph was complied with. Dorsey v. Wright, 150 Ga. 321, 103 S.E. 591 (1920).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 73 Am. Jur. 2d, Statutes, § 23 et seq. that proposed constitutional amendment be entered in journal of each branch of the legislature, 41 ALR 640.
C.J.S. — 82 C.J.S., Statutes, §§ 45, 50.
ALR. — Construction of requirement

Paragraph VII. Reading of general bills.

The title of every general bill and of every resolution intended to have the effect of general law or to amend this Constitution or to propose a new Constitution shall be read three times and on three separate days in each house before such bill or resolution shall be voted upon; and the third reading of such bill and resolution shall be in their entirety when ordered by the presiding officer or by a majority of the members voting on such question in either house.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. III.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Act adopting Code valid. — The Act of 1895 adopting the Code is not unconstitutional because the various sections of the Code were not read three times on three separate days in each house of the General Assembly before the passage of the Act. Central of Ga. Ry. v. State, 104 Ga. 831, 31 S.E. 531 (1898).

Relation of caption to subject. — This paragraph does not require that the caption must be as detailed as the Act. It is sufficient if the provision of the Act is germane to the subject thereof stated in the caption. Undercofler v. Hospital Auth., 221 Ga. 501, 145 S.E.2d 487 (1965) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. VII).

Operation of presumption of proper enactment. — A duly enrolled Act, properly authenticated by the regular presiding officers of both houses of the General Assembly, approved by the Governor, and deposited with the Secretary of State as an existing law, will be conclusively presumed to have been enacted in accordance with constitutional requirements; and it is not permissible to show, by the legislative journals or other records, that it did not receive on its passage a majority vote of all the members elected to each house, or that there was any irregularity in its enactment. Capitol Distrib. Co. v. Redwine, 206 Ga. 477, 57 S.E.2d 578 (1950).

Introduction of legislative journal and photostatic copies of bill not permissible to impeach Act. — Where a copy of an enrolled Act levying excise taxes on malt beer and wine and purporting to contain the signatures of the Speaker of the House, Clerk of the House, President of the Senate, Secretary of the Senate, and the Governor, is set out and made a part of the amended petition, which seeks to show invalidity upon the contention that a portion of the title was composed and inserted by some method or agency in an irregular manner during the process of its passage, neither the legislative journals nor photostatic copies of the bill are permissible to impeach the Act, because of the conclusive presumption against any irregularity in its enactment. Capitol Distrib. Co. v. Redwine, 206 Ga. 477, 57 S.E.2d 578 (1950).

Cited in York v. State, 172 Ga. 483, 158 S.E. 53 (1931); Glustrom v. State, 206 Ga. 734, 58 S.E.2d 534 (1950).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 73 Am. Jur. 2d, Statutes, § 24.

C.J.S. — 82 C.J.S., Statutes, § 33 et seq.

Paragraph VIII. Procedure for considering local legislation.

The General Assembly may provide by law for the procedure for considering local legislation. The title of every local bill and every resolution intended to have the effect of local law shall be read at least once before such bill or resolution shall be voted upon; and no such bill or resolution shall be voted upon prior to the second day following the day of introduction.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. III.

Law reviews. — For article, “Local Legislation in Georgia: The Notice Requirement,” see 7 Ga. L. Rev. 22 (1972).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality of procedures. — Procedures for enactment of local legislation by the General Assembly do not violate the principle of “one person, one vote” in violation of the fourteenth amendment. DeJulio v. Georgia, 127 F. Supp. 2d 1274 (N.D. Ga. 2001).

Relation of caption to subject. — This paragraph does not require that the caption must be as detailed as the Act. It is sufficient if the provision of the Act is germane to the subject thereof stated in the caption. Undercofler v. Hospital Auth., 221 Ga. 501, 145 S.E.2d 487 (1965) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. VIII).

Operation of presumption of proper enactment. — A duly enrolled Act, properly authenticated by the regular presiding officers of both houses of the General Assembly, approved by the Governor, and deposited with the Secretary of State as an existing law, will be conclusively presumed to have been enacted in accordance with constitutional requirements; and it is not permissible to show, by the legislative journals or other records, that it did not receive on its passage a majority vote of all the members elected to each house, or that there was any irregularity in its enactment. Capitol Distrib. Co. v. Redwine, 206 Ga. 477, 57 S.E.2d 578 (1950).

Introduction of legislative journal and photostatic copies of bill not permissible to impeach Act. — Where a copy of an enrolled Act levying excise taxes on malt beer and wine and purporting to contain the signatures of the Speaker of the House, Clerk of the House, President of the Senate, Secretary of the Senate, and the Governor is set out and made a part of the amended petition, which seeks to show invalidity upon the contention that a portion of the title was composed and inserted by some method or agency in an irregular manner during the process of its passage, neither the legislative journals nor photostatic copies of the bill are permissible to impeach the Act, because of the conclusive presumption against any irregularity in its enactment. Capitol Distrib. Co. v. Redwine, 206 Ga. 477, 57 S.E.2d 578 (1950).

Paragraph IX. Advertisement of notice to introduce local legislation.

The General Assembly shall provide by law for the advertisement of notice of intention to introduce local bills.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. IX.

Cross references. — Force of law of local Acts, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. II, Para. I. Local referenda on abolishing offices or changing term, § 1-3-11. Notice of introduction of local legislation, §§ 28-1-14 and 36-34-8.

Law reviews. — For article discussing trend to abolish fee system for compensation of public officials and court resistance manifested in rigid interpretation of notice requirements, see 9 Mercer L. Rev. 231 (1958). For article on the historical interpretation and validity of statutes pertaining to county commissioners, see 15 Mercer L. Rev. 258 (1963). For article, “Bill Drafting — Some Guidelines and Pitfalls,” see 2 Ga. St. B.J. 181 (1965). For article discussing consent considerations in municipal annexations by the Legislature, see 2 Ga. L. Rev. 35 (1967). For article, “Local Legislation in Georgia: The Notice Requirement,” see 7 Ga. L. Rev. 22

(1972). For article analyzing the changing relationship between state and local governments in Georgia in light of “Amendment 19,” see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 757 (1975). For article discussing standards for determining whether constitutional amendments are general or special, see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 169 (1975). For article examining history of recall in local government law, and considering future developments, see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 883 (1976).

For note on the validity of population statutes, see 2 Ga. St. B.J. 533 (1966). For note discussing the notice requirement of local legislation in light of purportedly general population bills, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 602 (1971).

For comment on Smith v. McMichael, 203 Ga. 74, 45 S.E.2d 431 (1947), appearing below, see 10 Ga. B.J. 227 (1947). For comment on Gay v. Laurens County, 213 Ga. 518, 100 S.E.2d 271 (1957), appearing below, see 20 Ga. B.J. 535 (1958).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
CHANGES IN LOCAL GOVERNMENT
PROOF OF NOTICE
FORMALITIES OF NOTICE

General Consideration

Editor’s notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. IX and antecedent provisions, specifying the method by which intention to introduce local legislation was to be advertised, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Notice of intent to introduce legislation to continue the effectiveness of a 1952 constitutional amendment allowing the establishment of a joint board of tax assessors in a population category applying only to Fulton County and the City of Atlanta was sufficient, notwithstanding that the notice did not specifically refer to either Fulton County or the City of Atlanta. Lomax v. Lee, 261 Ga. 575, 408 S.E.2d 788 (1991).

Purpose of paragraph. — One of the purposes of this paragraph is to prevent local and special laws which affect only a particular locality, such as a county or municipality, from becoming laws unless notice of intention to introduce such bills be given during a specified time preceding their introduction in the General Assembly by newspaper advertisement published in the locality affected, with the object of preventing duties and obligations from being imposed on local governments without giving those in charge of such governments an opportunity to oppose their passage. Fleming v. Daniell, 221 Ga. 43, 142 S.E.2d 804 (1965); Smith v. Abercrombie, 235 Ga. 741, 221 S.E.2d 802 (1975) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Purpose of advertisement is to protect against surprise legislation. — The purpose of the advertisement under this paragraph as to local legislation is “to protect the people against covert or surprise legislation.” Brown v. Clower, 225 Ga. 165, 166 S.E.2d 363 (1969) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Cannot restrain power to create or abolish charters of municipal corporations. — This paragraph may not be extended by implication to place restraint upon power of General Assembly to create or abolish charters of municipal corporations, either by local or general law, since municipalities are creatures of the legislature, and their existence may be established, altered, amended, enlarged, or diminished, or utterly abolished by the legislature. City of Mt. View v. Clayton County, 242 Ga. 163, 249 S.E.2d 541 (1978), appeal dismissed, 440 U.S. 902, 99 S. Ct. 1205, 59 L. Ed. 2d 450 (1979) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Paragraph as test of whether bill is special. — A decisive proof that laws are not local or special within the meaning of the Constitution is, that by this paragraph every local or special bill has to be advertised beforehand in the locality where the matter or thing to be affected may be situated. Mathis v. Jones, 84 Ga. 804, 11 S.E. 1018 (1890) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Acts which affect only certain counties are local and special Acts. Fleming v. Daniell, 221 Ga. 43, 142 S.E.2d 804 (1965).

Standing to challenge constitutionality of Act. — Parties as citizens and taxpayers are entitled to challenge the constitutionality under this paragraph of an Act purporting to incorporate town. Bracewell v. Warnock, 208 Ga. 388, 67

S.E.2d 114 (1951) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Changes in Local Government

Right of incumbent to office depends upon law under which the incumbent holds office. If the law is capable of being repealed, the right of the officer is gone. City of Mt. View v. Clayton County, 242 Ga. 163, 249 S.E.2d 541 (1978), appeal dismissed, 440 U.S. 902, 99 S. Ct. 1205, 59 L. Ed. 2d 450 (1979).

Creation of board of county commissioners not unconstitutional infringement on power of ordinary (now judge of the probate court). — Since the General Assembly has constitutional authority to create a board of county commissioners, and since the ordinary (now judge of the probate court) is given jurisdiction over county matters only when such a board has not been created, a contention that an Act creating such a board unconstitutionally infringes upon and restricts the power and authority of an ordinary (now judge of the probate court) is without merit. Bleckley v. Vickers, 225 Ga. 593, 170 S.E.2d 695 (1969).

Authority of General Assembly to prescribe powers of ordinary (now judge of the probate court) over county affairs necessarily includes authority to increase or diminish such powers. Bleckley v. Vickers, 225 Ga. 593, 170 S.E.2d 695 (1969).

Changing commission form of government not violation of paragraph. — Act replacing one county commissioner with three member board of commissioners, and keeping the incumbent commissioner as member of board, did not abolish the office of the commissioner in violation of this paragraph. Webb v. Echols, 211 Ga. 724, 88 S.E.2d 625 (1955) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

To abolish office means to abrogate, annihilate, destroy, extinguish, or put an end to it. Webb v. Echols, 211 Ga. 724, 88 S.E.2d 625 (1955).

General Assembly may not provide for initial appointment of new county commissioners. — This paragraph requires new members of the board of commissioners of a county to be elected, and it is not constitutionally permissible for the General Assembly to provide for the initial appointment of additional commissioners pending a subsequent election. Lance v. Stepp, 232 Ga. 675, 208 S.E.2d 559 (1974) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Recall of county officeholder provided for under special Act does not abolish or modify term of office but merely creates a vacancy in the office and such a recall procedure does not abolish, shorten, or lengthen the term of office. Smith v. Abercrombie, 235 Ga. 741, 221 S.E.2d 802 (1975).

Paragraph not violated when office and court of justice of the peace abolished at end of term of such officer, at which time the magistrate's court will operate in lieu of the justice court. Burpee v. Logan, 216 Ga. 434, 117 S.E.2d 339 (1960) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Former third sentence of this paragraph not violated by Act which classed judge as "junior," because the Act does not change the office held, the duties thereof, or the term. Mulling v. Houlihan, 205 Ga. 735, 55 S.E.2d 150 (1949), cert. denied, 338 U.S. 948, 70 S. Ct. 486, 94 L. Ed. 585 (1950) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Proof of Notice

Enrolled copy of local bill must show copy of required notice and certificate or affidavit in order to become law. Smith v. Clayton, 80 Ga. App. 21, 55 S.E.2d 171 (1949).

Advertisement required. — Under this paragraph, the absence of the required proof of advertisement prevents an Act from becoming a law. It follows that a referendum approving the Act is unlawful, and the result of the unlawful referendum is likewise unlawful. Smith v. City Council, 203 Ga. 511, 47 S.E.2d 582 (1948) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Notice as proven becomes integral part of bill itself and as such must be embodied within the enrollment of such bill. Smith v. McMichael, 203 Ga. 74, 45 S.E.2d 431 (1947), commented on in 10 Ga. B.J. 227 (1947).

Inclusion of proof of notice imputes absolute verity as to contents. —

When the enrollment of any local or special bill has incorporated therein the required proof of notice, and after it has been properly signed and filed with the Secretary of State, it will not only impute absolute verity as to its contents, but it will also conclusively show upon its face its validity with respect to this paragraph; whereas, if such enrollment fails to show the required proof of notice, it is upon its face invalid. Smith v. McMichael, 203 Ga. 74, 45 S.E.2d 431 (1947); Bracewell v. Warnock, 208 Ga. 388, 67 S.E.2d 114 (1951); Bleckley v. Vickers, 225 Ga. 593, 170 S.E.2d 695 (1969), commented on in 10 Ga. B.J. 227 (1947). (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

No presumption or evidence allowed to speak in lieu of contents of enrolled Act. —

It is the manifest intention of the first two paragraphs of this section that the bill finally enrolled as the statute shall speak for itself, and that no presumption and no sort of evidence shall be allowed to speak in lieu of what the enrolled Act says for itself; this clear manifestation of intent can not be defeated by mere punctuations that might appear therein. Smith v. McMichael, 203 Ga. 74, 45 S.E.2d 431 (1947); Bleckley v. Vickers, 225 Ga. 593, 170 S.E.2d 695 (1969), commented on in 10 Ga. B.J. 227 (1947). (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

For decisions holding that presumption of proper notice is operative, see Speer v. Mayor of Athens, 85 Ga. 49, 11 S.E. 802 (1890); Peed v. McCrary, 94 Ga. 487, 21 S.E. 232 (1894); Fullington v. Williams, 98 Ga. 807, 27 S.E. 183 (1896); Chamlee v. Davis, 115 Ga. 266, 41 S.E. 691 (1902); Lee v. Tucker, 130 Ga. 43, 60 S.E. 164 (1908).

No particular form of affidavit required. —

An affidavit of publication of notice of intention to introduce a local Act into the General Assembly is essential to its validity. It certifies that the local people are notified of the proposed legislation as required by law. However, no particular form of affidavit is required. City of Mt. View v. Clayton County, 242 Ga. 163, 249 S.E.2d 541 (1978), appeal dismissed, 440 U.S. 902, 99 S. Ct. 1205, 59 L. Ed. 2d 450 (1979).

Proof of Notice (Cont'd)

Example of affidavit meeting requirements of paragraph. — An affidavit showing publication in the newspaper in which sheriff's advertisements for the locality affected, were published once a week for three weeks during a period of 60 days immediately preceding its introduction into the General Assembly "as provided by law," satisfies the requirements of this paragraph. City of Mt. View v. Clayton County, 242 Ga. 163, 249 S.E.2d 541 (1978), appeal dismissed, 440 U.S. 902, 99 S. Ct. 1205, 59 L. Ed. 2d 450 (1979) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Enrolled copy of bill providing for trial by jury of six fails to show compliance with this paragraph, so it can never become law. Smith v. Clayton, 80 Ga. App. 21, 55 S.E.2d 171 (1949) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Act relating to management of county school system failed to show proof of notice, and is therefore void. Nickles v. County Bd. of Educ., 203 Ga. 755, 48 S.E.2d 546 (1948).

Act amending town charter violates this paragraph. Bergman v. Dutton, 203 Ga. 672, 48 S.E.2d 101 (1948) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Formalities of Notice

Paragraph does not require more information than in caption of bill. — Under reasonable rules of construction, this paragraph does not require more information as to the law to be enacted than would be required in the caption of the bill itself. Walker Elec. Co. v. Walton, 203 Ga. 246, 46 S.E.2d 184 (1948); Swiney v. City of Forest Park, 211 Ga. 154, 84 S.E.2d 573 (1954); Parker v. Mayor of Savannah, 216 Ga. 210, 115 S.E.2d 555 (1960) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Paragraph requires only general notice. — This paragraph does not require specificity in the notice, but requires only a general notice sufficient to put the public on notice that legislation affecting a particular subject will be introduced. Cain v. Lumpkin County, 229 Ga. 274, 190 S.E.2d 910 (1972) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Sufficient notice found. — Where the corporate limits of a municipality include portions of two counties, and the notice of intention to apply for passage of a local bill is published as required by law in the newspaper in which the sheriff's advertisements for the county of the legal situs of the municipality are published, and the local act in its enrolled form contains proof of such publication in the county of the legal situs of the municipality, this is a sufficient compliance with the requirements of Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. XIV of the Constitution of 1945. Robertson v. Temple, 207 Ga. 311, 61 S.E.2d 285 (1950).

Omission of material provision violates paragraph. — Where the notice of intention to apply for local legislation specifically details the matters to be included in the Act, but omits a material provision of the proposed Act, the notice does not meet the requirements of this paragraph. DeKalb County v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 228 Ga. 512, 186 S.E.2d 732 (1972) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Mention of specific matters excludes foreign subjects. — Specificity of subject matter in the notice is not required by this paragraph; however, once specific matters are mentioned in the notice, matters foreign to those subjects may not constitutionally appear in the bill. Smith v. Abercrombie, 235 Ga. 741, 221 S.E.2d 802 (1975) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Not necessary to specify state or legislative body of introduction of bill. — Contention that notice is insufficient under this paragraph because it does not say in what General Assembly of what state a bill is to be introduced, or that a bill is to be introduced in any legislative forum, is without merit. Swiney v. City of Forest Park, 211 Ga. 154, 84 S.E.2d 573 (1954) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Title of Act to amend charter sufficiently broad to include any change. — Where the title of an Act expressly declares that its purpose is to amend the charter of a city, this is clearly broad enough to refer to any change made in the charter in the body of the act. Parker v. Mayor of Savannah, 216 Ga. 210, 115 S.E.2d 555 (1960).

Use of words sufficient to include enlargement of city limits. — The words “to define said limits of said city”, as used in notice of legislation, are sufficiently broad to include the extension or enlargement of the corporate limits. Swiney v. City of Forest Park, 211 Ga. 154, 84 S.E.2d 573 (1954).

Advertisement which appears on January 1, a legal holiday, is valid. Parker v. Mayor of Savannah, 216 Ga. 210, 115 S.E.2d 555 (1960).

This paragraph is not complied with when one of the publications is on a Sunday for the reason that where the law requires publication of a notice as a condition precedent to the doing of some act, its publication on a Sunday is not legal and amounts to no publication at all. Gay v. Laurens County, 213 Ga. 518, 100 S.E.2d 271 (1957), commented on in 20

Ga. B.J. 535 (1958)(see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Personal notice of proposed annexation is not required under this paragraph, although notice by publication is required. Ballentine v. Willingham, 237 Ga. 60, 226 S.E.2d 593, appeal dismissed, 429 U.S. 909, 97 S. Ct. 298, 50 L. Ed. 2d 276 (1976) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. IX).

Bill cannot be introduced during third week of publication. — This paragraph requires that the notice be published at least once a week during three separate weeks, and the first publication must not be more than 60 days before the bill is introduced, and the local bill cannot be introduced during the week embraced in the third publication. Bracewell v. Warnock, 208 Ga. 388, 67 S.E.2d 114 (1951).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor’s notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. IX and antecedent provisions, which specified the method by which intention to introduce local legislation was to be advertised, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Legal requirements for publication of notice. — For discussion of the various legal requirements concerning the publication of advertisements of notices of intention to introduce local legislation, see 1952-53 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 376.

Local Act which does not contain any evidence of publication is unconstitutional and void, and the courts will look to the enrolled Act to see whether it was duly published. 1945-47 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 4.

Notice must put citizens on notice of general nature of legislation. — The notice of intention to apply for local legislation must be sufficient to put the citizens on notice as to the general nature of the proposed legislation. 1945-47 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 3.

Copy of notice must be attached to bill. — Evidence that the caption of the bill has been advertised need not be set out in the body of the bill, but a copy of the notice which has been certified by the publisher or an affidavit of the author to the effect that the notice has been published must be attached to the bill. 1948-49 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 23.

Newspaper must cover entire judicial circuit area. — If one newspaper does not cover the entire area included in the judicial circuit, the required notice must be run in as many newspapers as necessary so as to cover the entire area included in the judicial circuit affected by the local legislation. 1967 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 67-453.

Any bill passed without notice required by this paragraph being attached is unconstitutional and void. 1948-49 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 37.

When local bill is rendered unconstitutional by failure to show publication, new notice of intent to introduce must be published. 1948-49 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 24.

This section applies only to local bills and does not apply to general legislation. 1958-59 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 178.

Proposed local constitutional amendment need not be published in accordance with this paragraph. 1970 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U70-117.

Since city court involves local or special law, provisions of this section are applicable with respect to its abolition. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 46.

Referendum must be held to abolish city court before all terms of office expire. — The proper means of abolishing a city court would be by a local Act, duly advertised, repealing the Act creating said court, and if such Act were to take effect immediately, or any time before the date on which all terms of office of the court officials expire, such Act, to be constitutional, would have to require that a referendum be held. If the Act should provide that it would not take effect until the expiration of the terms of office of the present officeholders a referendum is not necessary. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 46.

For opinion that Act creating city court is a general law, see 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 74.

History of naming officials to hold commission office. — If referendum is held under this paragraph, one-man commission abolished, and completely new commission established, situation exists where General Assembly has in past named individuals who will fill new offices. The only objection which could be made would be that it would be against public policy to name individuals to hold office for a long term without an election. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 36.

Time between publication and introduction. — As long as there is no more than 60 days between first publication and introduction of bill, which introduction must of course be after third publication, then it will comply with this paragraph. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 23.

This paragraph does not mean that a bill must be advertised 60 days before its introduction; therefore a bill may be advertised any time during a period of 60 days before it is introduced in the General Assembly. For example, a bill could be advertised on December fourteenth, twenty-first and twenty-eighth and introduced any time during the month of January or the first part of February, so long as the introduction comes within the period of 60 days. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 24.

Appointive office. — Since the third sentence limits its application to elected officials, the General Assembly may enact legislation which has the effect of shortening the term of appointed small claims court judge without necessity of a referendum approving the legislation. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U82-13.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 73 Am. Jur. 2d, Statutes, § 30 et seq.

C.J.S. — 82 C.J.S., Statutes, § 18 et seq.

ALR. — Constitutional provisions against special legislation relating to counties or municipalities as affected by the distinction between their political and nonpolitical character, 50 ALR 1163.

Paragraph X. Acts signed.

All Acts shall be signed by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. X.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Cooney v. Foote, 142 Ga. 647, 83 S.E. 537 (1914); Glustrom v. State, 206 Ga. 734, 58 S.E.2d 534 (1950).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 73 Am. Jur. 2d, Statutes, §§ 28, 30 et seq.

C.J.S. — 82 C.J.S., Statutes, §§ 74, 75.

Paragraph XI. Signature of Governor.

No provision in this Constitution for a two-thirds' vote of both houses of the General Assembly shall be construed to waive the necessity for the signature of the Governor as in any other case, except in the case of the two-thirds' vote required to override the veto or to submit proposed constitutional amendments or a proposal for a new Constitution.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. XI; Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VII. Constitutional amendments, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. X, Sec. I.

Cross references. — Recording two-thirds' votes, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. VI. Vetoes by the Governor, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. IV.

Law reviews. — For article, "History of the Veto Power in Georgia," see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 513 (1972).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Vote necessary to pass bill over veto, 2 ALR 1593.

Effect of failure of officers of Legislature to sign bills as required by constitutional provisions, 95 ALR 278.

Validity of veto as affected by failure to give reasons for vetoing or objections to measure vetoed, 119 ALR 1189.

Failure of governor to sign bill until after the date at which it is to become effective, 146 ALR 693.

Paragraph XII. Rejected bills.

No bill or resolution intended to have the effect of law which shall have been rejected by either house shall again be proposed during the same regular or special session under the same or any other title without the consent of two-thirds of the house by which the same was rejected.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. X.

Paragraph XIII. Approval, veto, and override of veto of bills and resolutions.

(a) All bills and all resolutions which have been passed by the General Assembly intended to have the effect of law shall become law if the Governor approves or fails to veto the same within six days from the date any such bill or resolution is transmitted to the Governor unless the General Assembly adjourns sine die or adjourns for more than 40 days prior to the expiration of said six days. In the case of such adjournment sine die or of such adjournment for more than 40 days, the same shall become law if approved or not vetoed by the Governor within 40 days from the date of any such adjournment.

(b) During sessions of the General Assembly or during any period of adjournment of a session of the General Assembly, no bill or resolution shall be transmitted to the Governor after passage except upon request of the Governor or upon order of two-thirds of the membership of each house. A local bill which is required by the Constitution to have a referendum election conducted before it shall become effective shall be transmitted immediately to the Governor when ordered by the presiding officer of the house wherein the bill shall have originated or upon order of two-thirds of the membership of such house.

(c) The Governor shall have the duty to transmit any vetoed bill or resolution, together with the reasons for such veto, to the presiding officer of the house wherein it originated within three days from the date of veto if the General Assembly is in session on the date of transmission. If the General Assembly adjourns sine die or adjourns for more than 40 days, the Governor shall transmit any vetoed bill or resolution, together with the reasons for such veto, to the presiding officer of the house wherein it originated within 60 days of the date of such adjournment.

(d) During sessions of the General Assembly, any vetoed bill or resolution may upon receipt be immediately considered by the house wherein it originated for the purpose of overriding the veto. If two-thirds of the members to which such house is entitled vote to override the veto of the Governor, the same shall be immediately transmitted to the other house where it shall be immediately considered. Upon the vote to override the veto by two-thirds of the members to which such other house is entitled, such bill or resolution shall become law. All bills and resolutions vetoed during the last three days of the session and not considered for the purpose of overriding the veto and all bills and resolutions vetoed after the General Assembly has adjourned sine die may be considered at the next session of the General Assembly for the purpose of overriding the veto in the manner herein provided. If either house shall fail to override the Governor's veto, neither house shall again consider such bill or resolution for the purpose of overriding such veto.

(e) The Governor may approve any appropriation and veto any other appropriation in the same bill, and any appropriation vetoed shall not become law unless such veto is overridden in the manner herein provided.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. II,
Para. VI.

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Effect of governor's veto of appropriations. — Appropriations veto power of Governor may be exercised only with respect to General Assembly's statement of the amount of the authorized expenditure and the purpose for which it is authorized; effect of such veto is to reduce, by the amount vetoed, the larger appropriation in which the specific appropriation is included. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U73-94.

Exercise of the veto power under the Georgia Constitution against amended appropriation leaves intact the prior appropriation for that purpose. Veto of an additional appropriation in an Act amending a General Appropriations Act renders ineffectual that appropriation. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-36.

Application. — The effect of the governor's veto of the Cooperative Educational Services language was to arrest the operation of Act No. 1379 to Ga. L. 1973, p. 1353, § 27 insofar as it purported to amend the prior language authorizing an expenditure of funds for that purpose, thus leaving intact the prior appropriation. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-36.

Governor's veto of state fund appropriations in Section 23 (B) (1) of General Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 1975, Ga. Laws 1974, p. 1508, was proper and reduced the total appropriations to the Department of Labor. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-98.

The governor's veto of Ga. L. 1974, pp. 1508 and 1576 eliminated the authorization for the Department of Labor to expend the specified amounts for those purposes designated as "Basic Employment Security" and necessarily reduced the total appropriation to the Department of Labor by that amount. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-98.

General law may not be conditioned on referendum. — Although the General Assembly has the broad authority to condition the effectiveness of a law upon a subsequent event, it may not delegate its ultimate responsibility to make decisions on fundamental legislative issues. Therefore, the General Assembly may not enact a general law which by its terms conditions its effectiveness upon approval by the voters at a statewide referendum. 1993 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 93-5.

Limitation on veto of individual appropriations. — The Governor's power to veto individual appropriations does not include the power to reduce an appropriation. 2000 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U2000-2.

Paragraph XIV. Jointly sponsored bills and resolutions.

The General Assembly may provide by law for the joint sponsorship of bills and resolutions.

1976 Constitution. — There were no similar provisions in the 1976 Constitution.

SECTION VI.

EXERCISE OF POWERS

Paragraph

- I. General powers.
- II. Specific powers.
- III. Powers not to be abridged.
- IV. Limitations on special legislation.

Paragraph

- V. Specific limitations.
- VI. Gratuities.
- VII. Regulation of alcoholic beverages.

Paragraph I. General powers.

The General Assembly shall have the power to make all laws not inconsistent with this Constitution, and not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, which it shall deem necessary and proper for the welfare of the state.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. I.

Cross references. — Power of the judiciary to declare void those Acts which are repugnant to the Constitution, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. V. Limited power to make laws during special sessions, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VII.

Law reviews. — For article discussing extent of state legislative power, see 12 Ga. B.J. 147 (1949). For article, "History of the Veto Power in Georgia," see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 513 (1972).

For note examining commercial arbitration in Georgia, and advocating incorporation into law of essential features of the Uniform Arbitration Act, see 12 Ga. L. Rev. 323 (1978).

For comment on Rogers v. Medical Ass'n, 244 Ga. 151, 259 S.E.2d 85 (1979), as to unconstitutional delegation of legislative authority to a private organization, see 29 Emory L.J. 1183 (1980).

JUDICIAL DECISIONSANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
SPECIFIC CASES

General Consideration

Power of making laws vested in legislature. — This paragraph and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IV (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III) vest the power of making laws in the legislature, which cannot be divested by contract. Harrick v. Rouse, 17 Ga. 56 (1855); Daly v. Harris, 33 Ga. 38 (1864); Orr v. James, 159 Ga. 237, 125 S.E. 468 (1924) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. I).

Cannot enact measures prohibited by state or federal Constitution. — Legislature is absolutely unrestricted in its power to legislate, so long as it does not undertake to enact measures prohibited by the state or federal Constitution. Georgia Power Co. v. Allied Chem. Corp., 233 Ga. 558, 212 S.E.2d 628 (1975); Bryan v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 238 Ga. 572, 234 S.E.2d 784 (1977).

This paragraph is a limitation on power of General Assembly. Blackmon v. Golia, 231 Ga. 381, 202 S.E.2d 186 (1973) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. I).

Discretion of legislature as to termination of public interest.

— Large discretion is necessarily vested in the legislature to determine: (a) what the interests of the public require; and (b) what measures are necessary for the protection of such interests. Mack v. Westbrook, 148 Ga. 690, 98 S.E. 339 (1919).

Difference between state legislature and United States Congress in their power to make laws is that the former can do all things not prohibited by the Constitution, while the latter can exercise no power not delegated to it by the states in the United States Constitution. Plumb v. Christie, 103 Ga. 686, 30 S.E. 759 (1898).

Public welfare must be protected.

Walker v. Whitehead, 43 Ga. 538 (1871), rev'd on other grounds, 83 U.S. 314, 21 L. Ed. 357 (1872).

Scope of the police power is to protect the public morals, the public health and safety, without a denial of equal protection of the laws. Georgia S. & Fla. Ry. v. Adkins, 156 Ga. 826, 120 S.E. 610 (1923).

Comprehended in this broad power to “make all laws” is power to change or modify existing laws. — A law enacted by one General Assembly is subject to repeal or modification by the same or a subsequent General Assembly. State Bd. of Educ. v. County Bd. of Educ., 190 Ga. 588, 10 S.E.2d 369 (1940).

There is a strong presumption in favor of the constitutionality of a statute. Bryan v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm’n, 238 Ga. 572, 234 S.E.2d 784 (1977).

Federal government, in exercise of its exclusive prerogative to wage war, cannot be interfered with by state legislation. City of Atlanta v. Stokes, 175 Ga. 201, 165 S.E. 270 (1932).

Cited in Green v. Harper, 177 Ga. 680, 170 S.E. 872 (1933); Miller v. Head, 186 Ga. 694, 198 S.E. 680 (1938); Tripp v. Martin, 210 Ga. 284, 79 S.E.2d 521 (1954); Village of N. Atlanta v. Cook, 219 Ga. 316, 133 S.E.2d 585 (1963); Jones v. Balkcom, 222 Ga. 201, 149 S.E.2d 97 (1966); Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969); Carroway v. Stynchcombe, 225 Ga. 586, 170 S.E.2d 396 (1969); Ray v. Hand, 225 Ga. 589, 170 S.E.2d 692 (1969); Sears v. State, 232 Ga. 547, 208 S.E.2d 93 (1974); Harrell v. Courson, 234 Ga. 350, 216 S.E.2d 105 (1975); Atlanta Journal v. Hill, 257 Ga. 398, 359 S.E.2d 913 (1987); Arneson v. Board of Trustees, 257 Ga. 579, 361 S.E.2d 805 (1987); Crump Ins. Servs. v. All Risks, Ltd., 315 Ga. App. 490, 727 S.E.2d 131 (2012).

Specific Cases

Delegation of legislative power to the voters. — Legislature may submit to electorate question whether legislation framed and approved by General Assembly shall become operative. An Act is not unconstitutional and void for the reason that it delegates legislative power to the voters. Hines v. Etheridge, 173 Ga. 870, 162 S.E. 113 (1931).

Under police power right to contract is not unlimited, but is subject to regulation. City of Dawson v. Dawson Tel. Co., 137 Ga. 62, 72 S.E. 508 (1911); Railroad Comm’n v. Louisville & N.R.R., 140 Ga. 817, 80 S.E. 327 (1913); Union Dry Goods Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Corp., 142 Ga. 841, 83 S.E. 946 (1914), aff’d, 248

U.S. 372, 39 S. Ct. 117, 63 L. Ed. 309 (1919); Union Dry Goods Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Corp., 248 U.S. 372, 39 S. Ct. 117, 63 L. Ed. 309 (1919).

Power to regulate occupations. — Under the police power, laws may be passed regulating common occupations which, from their nature, afford opportunity for fraud and imposition. Bazemore v. State, 121 Ga. 619, 49 S.E. 701 (1905).

Act regulating business of photography unconstitutional. — The Act approved March 25, 1937, Ga. L. 1937, p. 280 (former Code 1933, Ch. 84-23) establishing a state board of photographic examiners, and providing, among other things, that except as to stated classes, persons desiring to engage in the business of photography or photofinishing must stand an examination and thereby qualify as to competency, ability, and integrity, and denouncing as a crime a violation of any of the terms of the Act, is unconstitutional and void as an exercise of the police power, in that the prescribed regulations are imposed upon a lawful business, and considered as a whole do not bear any reasonable or substantial relation to the public health, safety, or morality, or other phase of the general welfare. Bramley v. State, 187 Ga. 826, 2 S.E.2d 647 (1939).

State can fix the interest rate and regulate business of lending money. King v. State, 136 Ga. 709, 71 S.E. 1093 (1911).

Regulation of municipal corporations. — A municipal corporation is a creature of legislation, and its modes of government and the officers conducting the same may be changed by the legislature. Churchill v. Walker, 68 Ga. 681 (1882).

Power to set standards for municipal incorporation. — It is in the power of the legislature to decide when a given locality has a sufficient number of inhabitants to entitle it to be incorporated as a city. Mattox v. State, 115 Ga. 212, 41 S.E. 709 (1902).

Selection of state judge cannot be left to municipal corporation. — The creation of state courts is a sovereign state function, and they can be created only by the General Assembly; the creation of such courts involves the appointment or the selection of the judges and of the necessary court officers, and this phase of the creation of the court is likewise a function of the state and cannot be delegated by the General Assembly to a lesser governmental unit of the state, and certainly not to municipal corporations. City of Atlanta v. Landers, 212 Ga. 111, 90 S.E.2d 583 (1955).

Specific Cases (Cont'd)

Court created subordinate to municipal authorities not to try state offenses. — The legislature has no power to establish a municipal court, or police court, and make it subordinate to the will of the municipal authorities, and at the same time to confer upon it jurisdiction to try offenses against the state when committed within the limits of the municipal corporation. City of Atlanta v. Landers, 212 Ga. 111, 90 S.E.2d 583 (1955).

Act granting municipality power over streets valid. — An Act conferring on a municipal corporation the power to grade, pave, and improve its streets and sidewalks, and to assess the real estate abutting on each side of the street is valid. Hayden v. City of Atlanta, 70 Ga. 817 (1883).

Regulation of municipal corporations. — Just as the General Assembly is limited by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. I in its conduct relative to municipal corporations, so is a state agency limited in its conduct relative to municipal corporations by laws passed by the General Assembly pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. I. DOT v. City of Atlanta, 255 Ga. 124, 337 S.E.2d 327 (1985).

For distinction between valid and invalid ordinance, see Badkins v. Robinson, 53 Ga. 613 (1875).

Zoning ordinance prohibiting the holding of stores in residential districts not valid. Smith v. City of Atlanta, 161 Ga. 769, 132 S.E. 66, cert. denied, 271 U.S. 672, 46 S. Ct. 486, 70 L. Ed. 1144 (1926).

Former “Steinberg Act” (former O.C.G.A. § 36-67-1 et seq.), providing for zoning proposal review procedures in urbanized counties, did not unconstitutionally bind the local government in any way nor infringe on the local government’s ability to “exercise the power of zoning.” Northridge Community Ass’n v. Fulton County, 257 Ga. 722, 363 S.E.2d 251 (1988).

Regulation of soliciting. — Soliciting for hotels, bathhouses, physicians, or similar enterprises may be prohibited in the exercise of the police power. Jackson v. Beavers, 156 Ga. 71, 118 S.E. 751 (1923).

Sale of spirituous liquors may be regulated under the police power. Plumb v. Christie, 103 Ga. 686, 30 S.E. 759 (1898).

Delegation of power to make appointments unconstitutional. — The General Assembly may, within constitutional limitations, establish qualifications for public office and designate a governmental appointing authority; but it cannot delegate the appointive power to a private organization; thus, where the Medical Association of Georgia, a private organization, controlled the appointment of the members of the State Board of Medical Examiners under former Code 1933, §§ 84-903 and 84-1201 (see now O.C.G.A. § 43-34-22) which provided that the Governor must appoint from its nominees, the Act violated this paragraph. Rogers v. Medical Ass’n, 244 Ga. 151, 259 S.E.2d 85 (1979) (decided prior to 1997 amendment; see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. I).

Under this paragraph, legislature may prescribe a rule for the measure of damages. Clay v. Cent. R.R. & Banking Co., 84 Ga. 345, 10 S.E. 967 (1890) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. I).

General Assembly possesses inherent power to regulate public utilities, independent of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. IX (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V). Georgia Power Co. v. Allied Chem. Corp., 233 Ga. 558, 212 S.E.2d 628 (1975).

Grant of power to Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia constitutional. — Former Code 1933, § 32-121 (see now O.C.G.A. § 20-3-31), declaring that the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia shall have power to exercise any power usually granted to such corporation, necessary to its usefulness, which is not in conflict with the Constitution and laws of this state, is not inconsistent with this paragraph. Villyard v. Regents of Univ. Sys., 204 Ga. 517, 50 S.E.2d 313 (1948) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. I).

Adoption. — Trial court abused the court's discretion by denying a foster parent's petition to adopt the foster child on the ground that placing the child with the foster parent violated the state's public policy because all of the evidence showed that the adoption would be in the child's best interest, and the trial court failed to apply the law as written and determine whether it was in the child's best interest to allow the adoption; as long as the adoption laws are constitutional, neither the superior court nor the court of appeals has the authority to amend the law to establish what the court deems are better qualifications for those seeking to adopt. In re Goudeau, 305 Ga. App. 718, 700 S.E.2d 688 (2010).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

No duty or authority is conferred upon Commissioner of Agriculture by the Constitution; to the contrary, the expressed authority is reserved in the General Assembly to prescribe the duties, authority, and salaries of the executive officers. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 4.

Creation of autonomous agricultural services within power of General Assembly. — The General Assembly does not have the authority to abolish the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture, but it has the authority to curtail the activities of the Commissioner of Agriculture by creating autonomous agricultural services. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 4.

Option to terminate does not make invalid contract valid. — Fact that contract which violates Constitution contains option to terminate does not make it comply with Constitution, and is beyond authority of a state agency. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-115, supplemented in Position Paper, 8-8-78, 1978 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 267.

Legally and historically, conferring of "official" status has been and is within exclusive province of General Assembly. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-329.

Only General Assembly can create or designate an "official" state theater. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-329.

When funds may be expended on official state theater. — The mere designation of an official state theater by the General Assembly would not, in itself, authorize the expenditure of state funds in its operation if the theater's ownership remained private; any contribution of funds under these circumstances would constitute a donation or gratuity in violation of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. XII(1) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI). Conversely, should a theater be acquired and operated by the state or function in connection with a state department or agency, state funds may then be used in its operation. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-329.

General law may not be conditioned on referendum. — Although the General Assembly has the broad authority to condition the effectiveness of a law upon a subsequent event, it may not delegate its ultimate responsibility to make decisions on fundamental legislative issues. Therefore, the General Assembly may not enact a general law which by its terms conditions its effectiveness upon approval by the voters at a statewide referendum. 1993 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 93-5.

Georgia Public Defenders Standards Council. — The General Assembly was authorized to move the Georgia Public Defenders Standards Council from the judicial branch of government to the executive branch. 2009 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2009-2.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 16A Am. Jur. 2d, Constitutional Law, § 237 et seq.

72 Am. Jur. 2d, States, Territories, and Dependencies, § 38 et seq.

ALR. — Power of Legislature to set aside or impair judgment, 3 ALR 450.

Power of Legislature to investigate conduct of private person, corporation, or institution, 9 ALR 1341.

Power of state to change private contract rates for public utilities, 9 ALR 1423.

Constitutionality of “civil rights” legislation by state, 49 ALR 505.

Power of legislative body or committee to compel attendance of nonmember as witness, 65 ALR 1518; 135 ALR 1096.

Governmental powers in peace-time emergency, 86 ALR 1539; 88 ALR 1519; 96 ALR 312; 96 ALR 826.

Constitutionality of legislative delegation of powers to prescribe or vary regulations concerning motor vehicles used on highways, 87 ALR 546.

Power of Legislature to change title of constitutional office, 110 ALR 1215.

Power to detach land from municipal corporations, towns, or villages, 117 ALR 267.

Adoption by or under authority of state statute without specific enactment or reenactment of prospective federal legislation or federal administrative rules as unconstitutional delegation of legislative power, 133 ALR 401.

Power of Legislature respecting admission to bar, 144 ALR 150.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of statutes abolishing civil actions for alienation of affections, criminal conversation, seduction, and breach of promise to marry, 158 ALR 617; 167 ALR 235.

Validity of state statutory provisions for arbitration of labor disputes, as against the objection of delegation of legislative power without setting up adequate standards to guide the administrative agency, 9 ALR2d 871.

Validity of state statute or regulation fixing minimum prices at which alcoholic beverages may be sold at retail, 96 ALR3d 639.

Paragraph II. Specific powers.

(a) Without limitation of the powers granted under Paragraph I, the General Assembly shall have the power to provide by law for:

(1) Restrictions upon land use in order to protect and preserve the natural resources, environment, and vital areas of this state.

(2) A militia and for the trial by courts-martial and nonjudicial punishment of its members, the discipline of whom, when not in federal service, shall be in accordance with law and the directives of the Governor acting as commander in chief.

(3) The participation by the state and political subdivisions and instrumentalities of the state in federal programs and the compliance with laws relating thereto, including but not limited to the powers, which may be exercised to the extent and in the manner necessary to effect such participation and compliance, to tax, to expend public money, to condemn property, and to zone property.

(4) The continuity of state and local governments in periods of emergency resulting from disasters caused by enemy attack including but not limited to the suspension of all constitutional legislative rules during such emergency.

(5) The participation by the state with any county, municipality, nonprofit organization, or any combination thereof in the operation of any of the facilities operated by such agencies for the purpose of encouraging and promoting tourism in this state.

(6) The control and regulation of outdoor advertising devices adjacent to federal aid interstate and primary highways and for the acquisition of property or interest therein for such purposes and may exercise the powers of taxation and provide for the expenditure of public funds in connection therewith.

(b) The General Assembly shall have the power to implement the provisions of Article I, Section III, Paragraph I(2.); Article IV, Section VIII, Paragraph II; Article IV, Section VIII, Paragraph III; and Article X, Section II, Paragraph XII of the Constitution of 1976 in force and effect on June 30, 1983; and all laws heretofore adopted thereunder and valid at the time of their enactment shall continue in force and effect until modified or repealed.

(c) The distribution of tractors, farm equipment, heavy equipment, new motor vehicles, and parts therefor in the State of Georgia vitally affects the general economy of the state and the public interest and public welfare. Notwithstanding the provisions of Article I, Section I, Paragraphs I, II, and III or Article III, Section VI, Paragraph V(c) of this Constitution, the General Assembly in the exercise of its police power shall be authorized to regulate tractor, farm equipment, heavy equipment, and new motor vehicle manufacturers, distributors, dealers, and their representatives doing business in Georgia, including agreements among such parties, in order to prevent frauds, unfair business practices, unfair methods of competition, impositions, and other abuses upon its citizens. Any law enacted by the General Assembly shall not impair the obligation of an existing contract but may apply with respect to the renewal of such a contract after the effective date of such law. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 3, § 6, Para. 2; Ga. L. 1992, p. 3342, § 1/SR 486.)

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I; Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. IIIA; Art. III, Sec. XI, Paras. I-IV; Art. III, Sec. XII, Para. I; Art. IV, Sec. VII, Para. II; Art. IV, Sec. VIII, Paras. II, III; Art. X, Sec. II, Para. XII.

Cross references. — Congress's powers as to militia, U.S. Const., art. I, sec. VIII, cl. XVI. General restriction on power of General Assembly to grant donations, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI. Zoning and planning, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. II, Para. IV. Preservation of natural resources generally, T. 12, T. 27, T. 52. Federal aid to education, §§ 20-2-14 et seq., 20-2-168, 20-2-169, 20-2-575. Federal aid for vocational education and rehabilitation, §§ 20-4-1 et seq., 20-4-22, 49-9-4 et seq. Relocation assistance to persons displaced by federal-aid public works projects, Ch. 4, T. 22. Naming state roads, bridges, or interchanges, § 32-4-3. Federal aid for public roads, § 32-5-1 et seq. Outdoor advertising, § 32-6-70 et seq. Limited access roads, § 32-6-110 et seq. Junkyards, § 32-6-241 et seq. Relocation assistance for persons displaced by highway projects, Ch. 8, T. 32. Establishment of militia districts, Ch. 2, T. 36. State militia generally, § 38-2-1 et seq. Emergency powers of Governor generally, §§ 38-3-51, 45-12-29 et seq. Convening of emergency session of General Assembly, § 38-3-52 et seq.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1992, p. 3342, § 1)

which added subparagraph (c) was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 3, 1992.

Law reviews. — For article discussing aesthetic beauty as an element significant to zoning, see 11 J. of Pub. L. 260 (1962). For article suggesting increased state role in land use planning, see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 53 (1975). For article discussing park and outdoor recreation planning through the national park system, with special emphasis on the Chattahoochee River corridor, see 25 Emory L.J. 255 (1976). For article surveying recent legislative and judicial developments in zoning, planning and environmental law, see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 89 (1979). For annual survey of law on environment, natural resources, and land use, see 35 Mercer L. Rev. 147 (1983). For annual survey of appellate practice and procedure, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 47 (1986). For article, "Judicial Review of Georgia Zoning: Cyclones and Doldrums in the Windmills of the Mind," see 2 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 97 (1986).

For note discussing the historical aspects and current law concerning the state's ownership rights in tidelands, see 17 Ga. L. Rev. 851 (1983). For note, "Constitutional Barriers to Statewide Land Use Regulation in Georgia: Do They Still Exist?," see 3 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 249 (1987).

For comment on Pope v. City of Atlanta, 242 Ga. 331, 249 S.E.2d 16 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 936, 99 S. Ct. 1281, 59 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1979), see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 375 (1979).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

For standard for review of constitutionality of state land use regulations, see Pope v. City of Atlanta, 242 Ga. 331, 249 S.E.2d 16 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 936, 99 S. Ct. 1281, 59 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1979), commented on in 31 Mercer L. Rev. 375 (1979).

Exercise of zoning power does not require payment of compensation. — The police power of the state to zone property to prevent its use for certain purposes in the future, as distinguished from the taking or damaging in respect to a use already in existence, is not open to question and does not require the payment of any compensation. National Adv. Co. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 230 Ga. 119, 195 S.E.2d 895 (1973).

Enactment of outdoor advertising zoning laws is within legislature's power. — The 1983 Constitution carried forward power exclusively in the counties and municipalities from Paragraph II of Section VIII of Article IV of the Georgia Constitution of 1976, (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. X, Sec. 11, Paras. VI, IV, VI, and VII); the Outdoor Advertising Act does not conflict with Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. II, Para. IV. Patrick v. Head, 262 Ga. 654, 424 S.E.2d 615 (1993).

Cited in WMW, Inc. v. Am. Honda Motor Co., 291 Ga. 683, 733 S.E.2d 269 (2012).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 53 Am. Jur. 2d, Military, and Civil Defense, § 1 et seq.

53A Am. Jur. 2d, Military, and Civil Defense, § 383 et seq.

C.J.S. — 16 C.J.S., Constitutional Law, § 419 et seq. 101A C.J.S., Zoning and Land Planning, §§ 8 et seq., 57.

ALR. — Constitutionality of statute limiting or controlling exploitation or waste of natural resources, 24 ALR 307; 78 ALR 834.

License tax or fee on automobiles as affected by interstate commerce clause, 25 ALR 37; 52 ALR 533; 115 ALR 1105.

Power of state to prohibit or restrict exportation of natural resources, 32 ALR 331.

Validity of privilege or occupation tax on business of severing natural resources from soil, 32 ALR 827; 52 ALR 187; 60 ALR 101.

Powers of federal and state governments respectively as regards railroad stations, 37 ALR 1372.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of statute conferring emergency powers upon governor during war, 150 ALR 1488.

Regulation of junk dealers, 45 ALR2d 1391.

Paragraph III. Powers not to be abridged.

The General Assembly shall not abridge its powers under this Constitution. No law enacted by the General Assembly shall be construed to limit its powers.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VIII, Paras. II, III.

Cross references. — Statutory construction generally, Ch. 3, T. 1.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
EMINENT DOMAIN
POLICE POWER

General Consideration

Prohibiting impairment of contract. — Hotel/motel tax statute providing that once the courts have validated a bond issue and the bonds have been issued, the state cannot impair the contract between the issuer and the bondholder does not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. III. Youngblood v. State, 259 Ga. 864, 388 S.E.2d 671 (1990).

Eminent Domain

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. II and antecedent provisions, relating specifically to the preservation of the state's right to exercise the power of eminent domain, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Right of eminent domain gives legislature control of private property for use of the public, provided just compensation be made to the owner therefor. All grantees of land from the state, and their assigns, hold it under this tacit agreement or implied understanding. State Hwy. Dep't v. Smith, 219 Ga. 800, 136 S.E.2d 334 (1964).

Authority to prescribe procedure. — The exercise of the right of eminent domain is a legislative function and the General Assembly may by law prescribe the procedure for taking private property for public uses. State Hwy. Dep't v. Smith, 219 Ga. 800, 136 S.E.2d 334 (1964).

Necessity or expediency of appropriating particular property for public use is not matter of judicial cognizance, but one for the determination of the legislative branch, and this must obviously be so where the state takes for its own purposes. State Hwy. Dep't v. Smith, 219 Ga. 800, 136 S.E.2d 334 (1964).

Legislature may exercise power of eminent domain only by payment for land taken, except in extraordinary cases. Loughbridge v. Harris, 42 Ga. 500 (1871).

Property owner must be paid just and adequate compensation before property is taken. Thomas v. City of Cairo, 206 Ga. 336, 57 S.E.2d 192 (1950).

Private life and health more important than public convenience. — The right of private convenience, the right of the private citizen to hold and own any particular property, must yield to public convenience and public service whenever and wherever the legislature says yield, and to this extent the right of eminent domain is paramount; but private life and private health are more precious in the eyes of the law than even public convenience. Thrasher v. City of Atlanta, 178

Eminent Domain (Cont'd)

Ga. 514, 173 S.E. 817 (1934).

Governing authority not to use eminent domain power to restrict legitimate activity. — A governing authority has no right to utilize the power of eminent domain under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. II and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I) in order to restrict a legitimate activity in which the state has an interest. Earth Mgt., Inc. v. Heard County, 248 Ga. 442, 283 S.E.2d 455 (1981).

Condemning authority may not act in bad faith in exercise of right of eminent domain. Earth Mgt., Inc. v. Heard County, 248 Ga. 442, 283 S.E.2d 455 (1981).

Blocking hazardous waste facility. — County acted in bad faith under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. II and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. III, Para. I) when it instituted condemnation proceedings for purpose of preventing land from being used as hazardous waste facility. Earth Mgt., Inc. v. Heard County, 248 Ga. 442, 283 S.E.2d 455 (1981).

Right of eminent domain can operate only upon property and never on the person or citizen. Thrasher v. City of Atlanta, 178 Ga. 514, 173 S.E. 817 (1934).

Strict compliance with statute necessary. — In proceedings under statutory authority, whereby an owner may be deprived of property, the statute must be strictly pursued. Compliance with all its prerequisites must be shown. Thomas v. City of Cairo, 206 Ga. 336, 57 S.E.2d 192 (1950).

Neither notice nor opportunity to be heard are prerequisite to the exercise of the power of eminent domain, provided only that the owner have an opportunity, in the course of the condemnation proceeding, to be heard and to offer evidence as to the value of the land taken. State Hwy. Dep't v. Smith, 219 Ga. 800, 136 S.E.2d 334 (1964).

Legislature may delegate to agencies power to condemn property. —

Since the legislature cannot in every case supervise the condemnation of property for public use, it may confer the power to do so on agencies. State Hwy. Dep't v. Smith, 219 Ga. 800, 136 S.E.2d 334 (1964).

Condemnation of land by water power owners may be authorized. Jones v. North Ga. Elec. Co., 125 Ga. 618, 54 S.E. 85 (1906).

One exercising delegated power of eminent domain may not condemn property already devoted to another and different public use unless power to do so is conferred upon it in express terms or by necessary implication. Southern Ry. v. State Hwy. Dep't, 219 Ga. 435, 134 S.E.2d 12 (1963), commented on in 1 Ga. St. B.J. 242 (1964).

Authority to annex noncontiguous property. — Since the authority of the General Assembly to annex municipal property is limited only by the state and federal constitutions, its annexation of municipal property which was not contiguous to lands owned by the city was valid; therefore, the city's annexation of property which was contiguous to that property was also valid. City of Ft. Oglethorpe v. Boger, 267 Ga. 485, 480 S.E.2d 186 (1997).

Effect of contrary zoning regulations on governmental use. — Municipality may use property acquired by purchase for necessary governmental use, regardless of contrary zoning regulations. Mayor of Savannah v. Collins, 211 Ga. 191, 84 S.E.2d 454 (1954).

City ordinance providing for condemnation invalid. — City ordinance which provides for the condemnation of property, with the proviso that the city might refuse to accept the property or to pay the award of the assessors if the amount, manner of payment, and terms thereof were not satisfactory to the city, is invalid and city would be enjoined from proceeding thereunder. Thomas v. City of Cairo, 206 Ga. 336, 57 S.E.2d 192 (1950).

Property condemned for purposes of relocating railroad track displaced by highway construction is validly condemned for highway use. Hinson v. DOT, 230 Ga. 314, 196 S.E.2d 883 (1973).

Police Power

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. II and antecedent provisions, relating specifically to the preservation of the state's right to exercise police power, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Police power is broad, but must be exercised in subordination to Constitution. Commissioners of Glynn County v. Cate, 183 Ga. 111, 187 S.E. 636 (1936).

Constitutional considerations which limit government's right of eminent domain do not apply to police power, and the citizen whose property is taken or destroyed is helpless before it. However, the police power can be invoked only in the face of compelling necessity, and it extends no further than the emergency which creates it. Horne v. City of Cordele, 140 Ga. App. 127, 230 S.E.2d 333 (1976).

Uncompensated destruction of property of citizen exceeding immediate necessity of the occasion is unconstitutional exercise of police power. Horne v. City of Cordele, 140 Ga. App. 127, 230 S.E.2d 333 (1976).

Police power is possessed by municipal corporations only if, where, and to extent there has been express grant by state. Palmer v. Hall, 380 F. Supp. 120 (M.D. Ga. 1974), modified, 517 F.2d 705 (5th Cir. 1975).

Power and necessity for legislatures and municipal governments to impose restrictions through zoning laws and ordinances is no longer subject to question. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1044, 95 S. Ct. 2660, 45 L. Ed. 2d 696 (1975).

Municipality free to contract where no exercise of state police power. — Where state has not exercised its police power in regulating street railway fares, it is not unconstitutional for a municipality to make a contract in this area. Georgia Ry. & Power Co. v. Railroad Comm'n, 149 Ga. 1, 98 S.E. 696 (1919).

Power to suspend business license to prevent public indecency. — A municipality's right under its police power to prevent public indecency is vital to local government and the power exists to suspend ex parte a business license in a proper case where public morals are threatened. Sokolic v. Ryan, 304 F. Supp. 213 (S.D. Ga. 1969).

Commercial movies not immune from regulation. — First amendment (U.S. Const., amend. 1) rights as they attach to commercial movies are not so fundamental as to be immune from valid regulation under the police power, particularly where the restraint upon such movies is relatively minor and the public interest to be protected is substantial. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1044, 95 S. Ct. 2660, 45 L. Ed. 2d 696 (1975).

Civil rights do not authorize operation of business within municipality in violation of ordinances enacted under police power and for welfare of community. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1044, 95 S. Ct. 2660, 45 L. Ed. 2d 696 (1975).

Fact that regulation affects only one person not unconstitutional. — The mere fact that only one party operating a business is affected by a regulation designed to localize the operation of such business in a certain district in a city does not show arbitrary, unreasonable, or unjust discrimination in violation of organic rights. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1044, 95 S. Ct. 2660, 45 L. Ed. 2d 696 (1975).

Motion picture theaters, like filling stations and whiskey stores, are not immune from regulation under police power. 106 Forsyth Corp. v. Bishop, 362 F. Supp. 1389 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 482 F.2d 280 (5th Cir. 1973), cert. denied, 422 U.S. 1044, 95 S. Ct. 2660, 45 L. Ed. 2d 696 (1975).

Nuisance not legalized. — It is never to be presumed that the legislature intended to authorize a corporation to erect a nuisance. Towaliga Falls Power Co. v. Sims, 6 Ga. App. 749, 65 S.E. 844 (1909).

Police Power (Cont'd)

Prohibition laws are within the exercise of police power. Whitley v. State, 134 Ga. 758, 68 S.E. 716 (1910).

Regulation of buses valid. — Ordinance regulating buses for transportation of passengers in streets is not unconstitutional. Schlesinger v. City of Atlanta, 161 Ga. 148, 129 S.E. 861 (1925).

Office of police officer carries with it no inherent power and is purely statutory creation. Palmer v. Hall, 380 F. Supp. 120 (M.D. Ga. 1974), modified, 517 F.2d 705 (5th Cir. 1975).

Metropolitan River Protection Act (Ga. L. 1973, p. 128, Ga. L. 1975, p. 837), providing for protection of city water supply, is constitutional. Pope v. City of Atlanta, 242 Ga. 331, 249 S.E.2d 16 (1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 936, 99 S. Ct. 1281, 59 L. Ed. 2d 494 (1979), commented on in 31 Mercer L. Rev. 375 (1979).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, opinions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. II and antecedent provisions, relating specifically to the preservation of the state's right to exercise the power of eminent domain, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Legislature has power to authorize municipal corporation to acquire lands beyond municipal limits and for that purpose to exercise the power of eminent domain where the proposed taking of private property is strictly for public use. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-65 (decided under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. II).

Provisions of this paragraph give broad effect to state's right of eminent domain. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-1.

General law may not be conditioned on referendum. — Although the General Assembly has the broad authority to condition the effectiveness of a law upon a subsequent event, it may not delegate its ultimate responsibility to make decisions on fundamental legislative issues. Therefore, the General Assembly may not enact a general law which by its terms conditions its effectiveness upon approval by the voters at a statewide referendum. 1993 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 93-5.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 16A Am. Jur. 2d, Constitutional Law, §§ 344 et seq., 375 et seq.

C.J.S. — 16 C.J.S., Constitutional Law, § 380 et seq.

ALR. — Constitutionality of statute or ordinance requiring proprietor of place of amusement to furnish fire or police protection at his own expense, 8 ALR 1628.

Constitutionality of statute requiring persons, regardless of financial condition, to engage in some business, profession, occupation, or employment, 9 ALR 1366.

Power of state to change private contract rates for public utilities, 9 ALR 1423.

Constitutionality of fence and stock laws, 18 ALR 67.

Constitutionality of regulations as to milk, 18 ALR 235; 42 ALR 556; 58 ALR 672; 80 ALR 1225; 101 ALR 64; 110 ALR 644; 119 ALR 243; 155 ALR 1383.

Licensing and regulation of pool and billiard rooms and bowling alleys, 20 ALR 1482; 29 ALR 41; 53 ALR 149; 72 ALR 1339.

License tax or fee on automobiles as affected by interstate commerce clause, 25 ALR 37; 52 ALR 533; 115 ALR 1105.

Power of state to prohibit or restrict exportation of natural resources, 32 ALR 331.

Public regulation of dancing, dance halls, dancing schools, etc., 48 ALR 144; 60 ALR 173.

Validity of regulations affecting wholesale produce dealers, 48 ALR 449.

Statute or ordinance in relation to advertising as interference with interstate commerce, 48 ALR 563; 57 ALR 105; 115 ALR 952.

Power to make abandonment, desertion, or nonsupport of wife or family criminal offense, 48 ALR 1193.

Constitutionality of statute in relation to oleo/margarine or other substitute for butter, 53 ALR 474.

Validity of statute or ordinance in relation to doors, 53 ALR 920.

Power to establish building line along street, 53 ALR 1222.

Constitutionality of statute regulating sale of poisons, drugs, or medicines, 54 ALR 730.

Constitutionality of statute regulating sale or dispensation of medicines or drugs in original package, 54 ALR 744.

Constitutionality and effect of statutory restriction on moving or aiding in moving of tenant or laborer, 55 ALR 311.

Constitutional power to compel railroad company to relocate or reconstruct highway crossing or to pay or contribute to expense thereof, 55 ALR 660; 62 ALR 815; 109 ALR 768.

Ice business as affected with a public interest, 68 ALR 1033.

Constitutionality of legislative delegation of powers to prescribe or vary regulations concerning motor vehicles used on highways, 87 ALR 546.

Validity of license law which requires security for payment of debts by licensee, 101 ALR 827.

Constitutionality, construction, and application of statutes relating to the purchase of farm and dairy products from producers for purposes of resale, 117 ALR 347.

Validity of statutes or ordinances requiring license for, or otherwise regulating, solicitation of alms or contributions for charitable, religious, or individual purposes, 130 ALR 1504.

Validity of provision of statute or ordinance that requires vacation of premises which do not comply with building or sanitary regulations, upon notice to that effect, without judicial proceeding, 153 ALR 849.

Validity of commercial rent control legislation as applied to pre-existing leases, 162 ALR 202.

Power to revoke license as affected by the fact that the penalty provided by license statute or ordinance for violation of its terms or conditions does not include revocation, 165 ALR 1174.

Public regulation or control of insurance agents or brokers, 10 ALR2d 950.

Validity and construction of gun control laws, 28 ALR3d 845.

Validity, construction, and application of state statutes forbidding possession, transportation, or sale of unstamped or unlicensed cigarettes or other tobacco products, 46 ALR3d 1342.

Validity and construction of statute or ordinance regulating or prohibiting self-service gasoline filling stations, 46 ALR3d 1393.

Conservation: Validity, construction, and application of enactments restricting land development by dredging or tilling, 46 ALR3d 1422.

Relief to owner of motor vehicle subject to state forfeiture for use in violation of narcotics laws, 50 ALR3d 172.

Validity and construction of statute or ordinance forbidding unauthorized persons to enter upon or remain in school building or premises, 50 ALR3d 340.

Validity and construction of statute or ordinance prohibiting commercial exhibition of malformed or disfigured persons, 62 ALR3d 1237.

Validity and construction of state or local regulation prohibiting off-premises advertising structures, 81 ALR3d 486.

Validity and construction of state or local regulation prohibiting the erection or maintenance of advertising structures within a specified distance of street or highway, 81 ALR3d 564.

Validity of state gun control legislation under state constitutional provisions securing the right to bear arms, 86 ALR4th 931.

Federal constitutional right to bear arms, 37 ALR Fed. 696.

Construction and application of 18 USCS § 922(e), prohibiting delivery of firearms to common carrier, 125 ALR Fed. 613.

Paragraph IV. Limitations on special legislation.

(a) Laws of a general nature shall have uniform operation throughout this state and no local or special law shall be enacted in any case for which provision has been made by an existing general law, except that the General Assembly may by general law authorize local governments by local ordinance or resolution to exercise police powers which do not conflict with general laws.

(b) No population bill, as the General Assembly shall define by general law, shall be passed. No bill using classification by population as a means of determining the applicability of any bill or law to any political subdivision or group of political subdivisions may expressly or impliedly amend, modify, supersede, or repeal the general law defining a population bill.

(c) No special law relating to the rights or status of private persons shall be enacted.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VII; Art. IX, Sec. V, Paras. I, II.

Cross references. — Equal protection, U.S. Const., amend. 14, and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II. Prohibition on laws relating to social status of a citizen, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XXV. Population bill defined, § 28-1-15.

Law reviews. — For article discussing constitutional limitations on special legislation, see 13 Ga. B.J. 147 (1950). For article analyzing alternative means of implementing home rule legislation and advocating home rule for municipalities in light of numerous attempts to pass such legislation in Georgia, prior to repeal of Municipal Home Rule Law of 1951 and adoption of the Municipal Home Rule Act of 1965, see 8 Mercer L. Rev. 337 (1957). For article on the historical interpretation and validity of statutes pertaining to Georgia county commissioners, see 15 Mercer L. Rev. 258 (1963). For article, "Bill Drafting — Some Guidelines and Pitfalls," see 2 Ga. St. B.J. 181 (1965). For article discussing the constitutionality of retaining local legislation which deviates from statutes of general application, see 5 Ga. St. B.J. 309 (1969). For article, "Delegation in Georgia Local Government Law," see 7 Ga. St. B.J. 9 (1970). For article, "The Legislative Process in Georgia Local Government Law," see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 1 (1971). For article discussing the evolution of municipal annexation law in Georgia in light of Plantation Pipe Line Co. v. City of Bremen, 227 Ga. 1, 178 S.E.2d 868 (1970), see 5 Ga. L. Rev. 499 (1971). For article discussing the effect of the general criminal statute on self-interest and municipal purchasing (§ 16-10-6) on the general statute on votes by municipal councilmen in matters of personal interest (§ 36-30-6) and on local statutory law, see 7 Ga. St. B.J. 431 (1971). For article, "Local Legislation in Georgia: The Notice Requirement," see 7 Ga. L. Rev. 22 (1972). For article analyzing the changing relationship between state and local governments in Georgia in light of "Amendment 19," see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 757 (1975). For article, "Selected Oddities in Georgia Municipal Law," see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 783 (1975). For article discussing standards for determining whether constitutional amendments are general or special, see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 169 (1975). For article examining history of recall in Georgia local government law, and considering future developments, see 10 Ga. L. Rev. 883 (1976). For article providing an overview of Georgia's treatment of special or local legislation, see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 1167 (1976). For article discussing effect of City of Atlanta v. Myers, 240 Ga. 261, 240 S.E.2d 60 (1977), appearing below, on limits of municipal government autonomy, see 12 Ga. L. Rev. 805 (1978). For article, “Unlawful Special Laws: A Postscript on the Proscription,” see 30 Mercer L. Rev. 319 (1978). For article on the effect on receiving government-issued licenses after a conviction based on a nolo contendere plea, see 13 Ga. L. Rev. 723 (1979). For article surveying legislative and judicial developments in Georgia local government law for 1978-79, see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 155 (1979). For article surveying developments in Georgia local government law from mid-1980 through mid-1981, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 187 (1981). For article surveying developments in Georgia real property law from mid-1980 through mid-1981, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 219 (1981). For article on constitutional law, see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 53 (1982). For article, “The United States Supreme Court as Home Rule Wrecker,” see 34 Mercer L. Rev. 363 (1982). For article, “The Georgia Supreme Court and Local Government Law: Two Sheets to the Wind,” see 16 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 361 (1999).

For note on the validity of population statutes in Georgia, see 2 Ga. St. B.J. 533 (1966). For note discussing the notice requirement of local legislation in light of purportedly general population bills, see 22 Mercer L. Rev. 602 (1971).

For comment on Phillips v. City of Atlanta, 210 Ga. 72, 77 S.E.2d 723 (1953), see 16 Ga. B.J. 343 (1954).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

UNIFORM OPERATION

SPECIAL LAWS

PRIVATE RIGHTS

CLASSIFICATION

1. IN GENERAL

2. BY POPULATION

MUNICIPAL ORDINANCES

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

General Consideration

Purpose of this paragraph is to insure the uniform operation of general laws throughout the state. City of Atlanta v. Hudgins, 193 Ga. 618, 19 S.E.2d 508 (1942) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV).

This paragraph is intended to insure that once the legislature enters a field by enacting a general law, that field must thereafter be reserved exclusively to general legislation and cannot be open to special or local laws. City of Atlanta v. Hudgins, 193 Ga. 618, 19 S.E.2d 508 (1942); Beard v. City of Atlanta, 91 Ga. App. 584, 86 S.E.2d 672 (1955) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV).

The broad objective of this paragraph was manifestly to prevent the confusion and uncertainty that would necessarily result if there existed at the same time a general law and a special law dealing with or regulating the same subject matter. City of Atlanta v. Hudgins, 193 Ga. 618, 19

S.E.2d 508 (1942) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV).

Prevention of unequal privileges or duties. — What this paragraph seeks to do is to prevent the creation of special laws giving any one community any more rights or privileges than another, or putting any more duties on one community than any other similarly situated. DeJarnette v. Hospital Auth., 195 Ga. 189, 23 S.E.2d 716 (1942) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV).

Immunity of water authority. — The immunity provision of the charter of the Macon Water Authority Act that exempted the Authority from vicarious liability was not preempted by O.C.G.A. § 51-2-2, and did not offend Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV(a). Matthews v. Macon Water Auth., 273 Ga. 436, 542 S.E.2d 106 (2001).

General and special laws mutually exclusive. — A law territorially general, and a subsequent law territorially special, for the same order of cases, are mutually exclusive of each other. The legislature may have either, but, in the nature of things, cannot have both. City of Atlanta v. Hudgins, 193 Ga. 618, 19 S.E.2d 508 (1942).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

State statutes preempted city's ordinance. — Conviction and fine against a convenience store operator for violating a city ordinance that prohibited certain retailers of packaged alcoholic beverages from allowing coin operated amusement machines (COAMs) on the same premises was reversed because the state's COAM Laws, O.C.G.A. §§ 16-12-35 and 50-27-70 to 50-27-104, preempted the city's ordinance at least insofar as the ordinance applied to COAMs as defined by the state statutes. Gebrekidan v. City of Clarkston, No. S15A1442, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 238 (Mar. 21, 2016).

Statute providing for recovery of costs for converting from oil-burning to coal-burning facility. — O.C.G.A. § 46-2-26.3, relating to recovery of costs of conversion from oil-burning to coal-burning generating facility, is not unconstitutional as a special law for which provision has been made by general law, because O.C.G.A. § 46-2-23 does not divest the General Assembly of its power to regulate public utilities. Lasseter v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 253 Ga. 227, 319 S.E.2d 824 (1984).

The County Building Authority Act was not a special law or population bill and was not unconstitutional under either the 1976 or the 1983 Constitutions. Therefore, the Fulton County Building Authority was authorized to issue bonds to finance the acquisition and construction of mental retardation training centers and to finance studies, services, and reports incidental to preparing plans for a county office building, because such projects were within the scope of the Act, which was a "general law," as referred to in Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. VI, Para. I. Building Auth. v. State, 253 Ga. 242, 321 S.E.2d 97 (1984).

Supreme Court's approval of a local court rule providing that civil actions seeking primarily money damages up to $25,000 or in an unspecified amount would be referred to compulsory but non-binding arbitration did not abridge the rights of any litigants or conflict with any federal or state constitutional provision or Georgia statute. Davis v. Gaona, 260 Ga. 450, 396 S.E.2d 218 (1990).

Condemning property for utility company. — Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 46-3-201(b)(9), the electric corporation, which had to condemn property in order to effectuate its project, did not have to demonstrate to the county the necessity or the appropriateness of its proposed project; thus, the county ordinance prohibiting the electric lines for three years was unconstitutional. Rabun County v. Ga. Transmission Corp., 276 Ga. 81, 575 S.E.2d 474 (2003).

Amendment changing retroactive effect of prior amendment. — An amendment which changed the retroactive effect of an earlier amendment to O.C.G.A. § 40-5-67.1, the implied consent warning law, so that it applied only to stops made after the effective date of the earlier amendment, rather than to cases pending on such date, did not violate the uniformity or special laws provisions of the state constitution. State v. Martin, 266 Ga. 244, 466 S.E.2d 216 (1996).

County ordinance was proper use of police power. — Since the stated purpose of Gwinnett County, Ga., Ord. No. 82-11 was to impede the sale of stolen property, and its requirements were designed to achieve that end, it was a proper use of the county's police power; further, by expressly preserving local laws in O.C.G.A. § 44-12-135, which included county ordinances, the legislature had in effect "authorized" them, and so Gwinnett County, Ga., Ord. No. 82-11 did not conflict with O.C.G.A. § 44-12-138. Pawnmart, Inc. v. Gwinnett County, 279 Ga. 19, 608 S.E.2d 639 (2005).

Cited in County of Dougherty v. Boyt, 71 Ga. 484 (1883); Houston County v. Killen, 76 Ga. 826 (1886); Maxwell v. Tumlin, 79 Ga. 570, 4 S.E. 858 (1887); Adair v. Ellis, 83 Ga. 464, 10 S.E. 117 (1889); Mathis v. Jones, 84 Ga. 804, 11 S.E. 1018 (1890); Weed v. Mayor of Savannah, 87 Ga. 513, 13 S.E. 522 (1891); Union Sav. Bank & Trust Co. v. Dottenheim, 107

Ga. 606, 34 S.E. 217 (1899); Williams v. Fears, 110 Ga. 584, 35 S.E. 699, 50 L.R.A. 685 (1900); Sayer v. Brown, 119 Ga. 539, 46 S.E. 649 (1904); Barber v. Alexander, 120 Ga. 30, 47 S.E. 580 (1904); Neal v. McWhorter, 122 Ga. 431, 50 S.E. 381 (1905); Sellers v. Cox, 127 Ga. 246, 56 S.E. 284 (1906); Binns v. Ficklen, 130 Ga. 377, 60 S.E. 1051 (1908); Clark v. Reynolds, 136 Ga. 817, 72 S.E. 254 (1911); Hammond v. State, 10 Ga. App. 143, 72 S.E. 937 (1911); Clark v. Clark, 137 Ga. 185, 73 S.E. 16 (1911); Macon, D. & S.R.R. v. Calhoun, 138 Ga. 165, 74 S.E. 1030 (1912); Williams v. State, 138 Ga. 168, 74 S.E. 1083 (1912); Greer v. Turner County, 138 Ga. 558, 75 S.E. 578 (1912); Stewart v. Anderson, 140 Ga. 31, 78 S.E. 457 (1913); Board of Comm'rs v. Mayor of Americus, 141 Ga. 542, 81 S.E. 435 (1914); McWilliams v. Smith, 142 Ga. 209, 82 S.E. 569 (1914); Sampson v. Harris, 147 Ga. 426, 94 S.E. 558 (1917); Wright v. Hardwick, 152 Ga. 302, 109 S.E. 903 (1921); Cooper v. Rollins, 152 Ga. 588, 110 S.E. 726 (1922); Wilkins v. Mayor of Savannah, 152 Ga. 638, 111 S.E. 42 (1922); Walthour v. City of Atlanta, 157 Ga. 24, 120 S.E. 613 (1923); Downs v. State, 158 Ga. 669, 124 S.E. 166 (1924); Spielberger v. Hall & Co., 159 Ga. 511, 126 S.E. 391 (1925); Abbott v. Commissioners of Fulton County, 160 Ga. 657, 129 S.E. 38 (1925); Baugh v. City of LaGrange, 161 Ga. 80, 130 S.E. 69 (1925); Shore v. Banks County, 162 Ga. 185, 132 S.E. 753 (1926); Mayor of Danville v. Wilkinson County, 166 Ga. 460, 143 S.E. 769 (1928); Harris County v. Williams, 167 Ga. 45, 144 S.E. 756 (1928); Cochran v. City of Thomasville, 167 Ga. 579, 146 S.E. 462 (1928); Greer v. State, 169 Ga. 552, 150 S.E. 839 (1929); Avery v. Bower, 170 Ga. 202, 152 S.E. 239 (1930); Wilson v. Harris, 170 Ga. 800, 154 S.E. 388 (1930); Taliaferro County v. Edwards, 171 Ga. 289, 155 S.E. 180 (1930); Curtis v. Town of Helen, 171 Ga. 256, 155 S.E. 202 (1930); Murray v. City of Waycross, 171 Ga. 484, 156 S.E. 38 (1930); Meyers v. Whittle, 171 Ga. 509, 156 S.E. 120 (1930); Bower v. Avery, 172 Ga. 272, 158 S.E. 10 (1931); York v. State, 172 Ga. 483, 158 S.E. 53 (1931); Medders v. Stewart, 172 Ga. 507, 158 S.E. 56 (1931); Jordan v. State, 172 Ga. 857, 159 S.E. 235 (1931); Felton v.

McArthur, 173 Ga. 465, 160 S.E. 419 (1931); Strickland v. Houston, 173 Ga. 615, 161 S.E. 262 (1931); Hopkins v. Chatham Phoenix Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 174 Ga. 136, 162 S.E. 521 (1932); Family Fin. Co. v. Allman, 174 Ga. 467, 163 S.E. 143 (1932); Slater v. Davis, 174 Ga. 633, 163 S.E. 704 (1932); State Bd. of Barber Exmrs. v. Blocker, 176 Ga. 125, 167 S.E. 298 (1932); Von Schmidt v. Noland Co., 176 Ga. 784, 169 S.E. 11 (1933); Moseley v. State, 176 Ga. 889, 169 S.E. 97 (1933); Green v. Harper, 177 Ga. 680, 170 S.E. 872 (1933); Felton v. Huie, 178 Ga. 311, 173 S.E. 660 (1933); Newport v. Longino, 178 Ga. 797, 174 S.E. 537 (1934); Simmons v. Newton, 178 Ga. 806, 174 S.E. 703 (1934); Dillon v. Continental Trust Co., 179 Ga. 198, 175 S.E. 652 (1934); Gormley v. Searcy, 179 Ga. 389, 175 S.E. 913 (1934); Williams v. McIntosh County, 179 Ga. 735, 177 S.E. 248 (1934); Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n v. City of Albany, 180 Ga. 355, 179 S.E. 369 (1935); Georgia Power Co. v. City of Decatur, 181 Ga. 187, 182 S.E. 32 (1935); Harbin v. Holcomb, 181 Ga. 800, 184 S.E. 603 (1936); Board of Educ. v. Board of Comm'rs of Rds. & Revenues, 182 Ga. 326, 185 S.E. 331 (1936); Wright v. Richmond County Dep't of Health, 182 Ga. 651, 186 S.E. 815 (1936); Gormley v. Hart, 54 Ga. App. 373, 188 S.E. 66 (1936); Russell v. Burroughs, 183 Ga. 361, 188 S.E. 451 (1936); McKown v. City of Atlanta, 184 Ga. 221, 190 S.E. 571 (1937); National Fin. Co. v. Citizens Loan & Sav. Co., 184 Ga. 619, 192 S.E. 717 (1937); Freeney v. Pape, 185 Ga. 1, 194 S.E. 515 (1937); Sharpe v. City of Waycross, 185 Ga. 208, 194 S.E. 522 (1937); Gibson v. Hood, 185 Ga. 426, 195 S.E. 444 (1938); Webb v. City of Atlanta, 186 Ga. 430, 198 S.E. 50 (1938); Hoover v. Brown, 186 Ga. 519, 198 S.E. 231 (1938); Head v. Wilkinson, 186 Ga. 739, 198 S.E. 782 (1938); Williamson v. Housing Auth., 186 Ga. 673, 199 S.E. 43 (1938); State Hwy. Dep't v. H.G. Hastings Co., 187 Ga. 204, 199 S.E. 793 (1938); Lloyds Am. v. Brown, 187 Ga. 240, 200 S.E. 292 (1938); Steele v. City of Waycross, 187 Ga. 382, 200 S.E. 704 (1938); Rourke v. U.S. Fid. & Guar. Co., 187 Ga. 636, 1 S.E.2d 728 (1939); County Bd. of Educ. v. Young, 187 Ga. 644, 1 S.E.2d 739 (1939); Garner v. Wood, 188

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Ga. 463, 4 S.E.2d 137 (1939); Barber v. Housing Auth., 189 Ga. 155, 5 S.E.2d 425 (1939); Kelisen v. Savannah Theatres Co., 61 Ga. App. 100, 5 S.E.2d 712 (1939); Upson v. Almand, 190 Ga. 376, 9 S.E.2d 662 (1940); Board of Pub. Educ. & Orphanage v. State Bd. of Educ., 190 Ga. 581, 10 S.E.2d 365 (1940); Town of McIntyre v. Scott, 191 Ga. 473, 12 S.E.2d 883 (1940); Feagin v. Freeney, 192 Ga. 868, 17 S.E.2d 61 (1941); Jones v. Methvin, 193 Ga. 17, 17 S.E.2d 172 (1941); Sumter County v. Allen, 193 Ga. 171, 17 S.E.2d 567 (1941); McCook v. Long, 193 Ga. 299, 18 S.E.2d 488 (1942); Brock v. Chappell, 196 Ga. 567, 27 S.E.2d 38 (1943); Chappell v. Kilgore, 196 Ga. 591, 27 S.E.2d 89 (1943); Derrick v. City Council, 138 F.2d 507 (5th Cir. 1943); Nichols v. Hampton, 198 Ga. 327, 31 S.E.2d 659 (1944); Sneed v. State, 72 Ga. App. 102, 33 S.E.2d 29 (1945); Morgan v. Mertins, 198 Ga. 800, 33 S.E.2d 156 (1945); Owens v. Rutherford, 200 Ga. 143, 36 S.E.2d 309 (1945); Bowen v. Lewis, 201 Ga. 487, 40 S.E.2d 80 (1946); Nichols v. Pirkle, 202 Ga. 372, 43 S.E.2d 306 (1947); Mayor of Savannah v. Savannah Distrib. Co., 202 Ga. 559, 43 S.E.2d 704 (1947); Lashley v. McDowell, 75 Ga. App. 695, 44 S.E.2d 487 (1947); Christian v. Moreland, 203 Ga. 20, 45 S.E.2d 201 (1947); Brunswick Peninsular Corp. v. Daugharty, 203 Ga. 454, 47 S.E.2d 275 (1948); Irwin v. Torbert, 204 Ga. 111, 49 S.E.2d 70 (1948); City of Griffin v. Southeastern Textile Co., 204 Ga. 579, 50 S.E.2d 322 (1948); Hasty v. Hamrick, 205 Ga. 84, 52 S.E.2d 470 (1949); Calhoun County v. Early County, 205 Ga. 169, 52 S.E.2d 854 (1949); Houlihan v. Saussy, 206 Ga. 1, 55 S.E.2d 557 (1949); Norris v. McDaniel, 207 Ga. 232, 60 S.E.2d 329 (1950); Richards v. Richards, 85 Ga. App. 605, 69 S.E.2d 911 (1952); City of Atlanta v. Anglin, 209 Ga. 170, 71 S.E.2d 419 (1952); Mayor of Savannah v. Harvey, 87 Ga. App. 122, 73 S.E.2d 260 (1952); City of Atlanta v. Wilson, 209 Ga. 527, 74 S.E.2d 455 (1953); Phillips v. City of Atlanta, 210 Ga. 72, 77 S.E.2d 723 (1953); Herrod v. O'Beirne, 210 Ga. 476, 80 S.E.2d 684 (1954); City of Atlanta v. Sims, 210 Ga. 605, 82 S.E.2d 130 (1954); Richmond Concrete Prods. Co. v. Ward, 212 Ga. 773, 95 S.E.2d 677 (1956); Hansell v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 213 Ga. 205, 98 S.E.2d 622 (1957); Hannah v. State, 97 Ga. App. 188, 102 S.E.2d 624 (1958); Laurens County v. Keen, 214 Ga. 32, 102 S.E.2d 697 (1958); Sigman v. Brunswick Port Auth., 214 Ga. 332, 104 S.E.2d 467 (1958); Smith v. City of Albany, 97 Ga. App. 731, 104 S.E.2d 488 (1958); Barnett v. Boling, 214 Ga. 401, 105 S.E.2d 312 (1958); Hix v. Ramey, 214 Ga. 464, 105 S.E.2d 452 (1958); City of Macon v. Harrison, 98 Ga. App. 769, 106 S.E.2d 833 (1958); Lewis v. City Council, 215 Ga. 427, 110 S.E.2d 665 (1959); Smith v. Branch, 215 Ga. 744, 113 S.E.2d 445 (1960); Kennison v. Lee, 217 Ga. 155, 121 S.E.2d 821 (1961); Williams v. State, 217 Ga. 312, 122 S.E.2d 229 (1961); Cox v. DeJarnette, 104 Ga. App. 664, 123 S.E.2d 16 (1961); Willingham v. State, 104 Ga. App. 863, 123 S.E.2d 199 (1961); Vandiver v. Williams, 218 Ga. 60, 126 S.E.2d 210 (1962); Meeks v. Lunsford, 106 Ga. App. 154, 126 S.E.2d 531 (1962); Vandiver v. Williams, 106 Ga. App. 435, 127 S.E.2d 168 (1962); Harper Motor Lines v. Roling, 218 Ga. 812, 130 S.E.2d 817 (1963); Stewart v. Davidson, 218 Ga. 760, 130 S.E.2d 822 (1963); Clark v. Kaylor, 219 Ga. 256, 132 S.E.2d 778 (1963); Stephenson v. State, 219 Ga. 652, 135 S.E.2d 380 (1964); Howard v. Housing Auth., 220 Ga. 640, 140 S.E.2d 880 (1965); Ralston Purina Co. v. Acrey, 220 Ga. 788, 142 S.E.2d 66 (1965); Henson v. Georgia Indus. Realty Co., 220 Ga. 857, 142 S.E.2d 219 (1965); Fleming v. Daniell, 221 Ga. 43, 142 S.E.2d 804 (1965); Stephens v. Moran, 221 Ga. 4, 142 S.E.2d 845 (1965); City of Columbus v. Atlanta Cigar Co., 111 Ga. App. 774, 143 S.E.2d 416 (1965); DuBose v. City of Lumpkin, 113 Ga. App. 297, 147 S.E.2d 837 (1966); Billingslea v. Flynt, 222 Ga. 444, 150 S.E.2d 678 (1966); Ingram v. Payton, 222 Ga. 503, 150 S.E.2d 825 (1966); Lee v. City of Jesup, 222 Ga. 530, 150 S.E.2d 836 (1966); Talley v. Sun Fin. Co., 223 Ga. 419, 156 S.E.2d 55 (1967); Cambron v. Cogburn, 118 Ga. App. 454, 164 S.E.2d 350 (1968); Dobson v. Brown, 225 Ga. 73, 166 S.E.2d 22 (1969); Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969); Local 574, Int'l Ass'n of Firefighters v.

Floyd, 225 Ga. 625, 170 S.E.2d 394 (1969); Gainer v. Ellis, 226 Ga. 79, 172 S.E.2d 608 (1970); Flanigen v. Preferred Dev. Corp., 226 Ga. 267, 174 S.E.2d 425 (1970); Pye v. State Hwy. Dep't, 226 Ga. 389, 175 S.E.2d 510 (1970); Electro-Kinetics Corp. v. Wilson, 122 Ga. App. 171, 176 S.E.2d 604 (1970); Gresham v. Symmers, 227 Ga. 616, 182 S.E.2d 764 (1971); Laidler v. Smith, 227 Ga. 759, 182 S.E.2d 891 (1971); Forbes v. Lovett, 227 Ga. 772, 183 S.E.2d 371 (1971); Silverman v. Mayor of Savannah, 125 Ga. App. 41, 186 S.E.2d 447 (1971); Gordon v. Green, 228 Ga. 505, 186 S.E.2d 719 (1972); Marietta Broadcasting Co. v. Advance Mktg. Research, Inc., 231 Ga. 13, 200 S.E.2d 134 (1973); Webb v. Board of Comm'rs, 231 Ga. 365, 201 S.E.2d 462 (1973); Hodges v. Hodges, 231 Ga. 810, 204 S.E.2d 291 (1974); Edwards v. Bullard, 131 Ga. App. 34, 205 S.E.2d 115 (1974); Jackson v. Inman, 232 Ga. 566, 207 S.E.2d 475 (1974); Powell v. Board of Comm'rs of Rds. & Revenues, 234 Ga. 183, 214 S.E.2d 905 (1975); Sellers v. Home Furnishing Co., 235 Ga. 831, 222 S.E.2d 34 (1976); Evans v. City of Tifton, 138 Ga. App. 374, 226 S.E.2d 471 (1976); Thompson v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 238 Ga. 19, 231 S.E.2d 720 (1976); City of Atlanta v. Associated Bldrs. & Contractors, 143 Ga. App. 115, 237 S.E.2d 601 (1977); Thompson v. Hill, 143 Ga. App. 272, 238 S.E.2d 271 (1977); City of Atlanta v. Myers, 240 Ga. 261, 240 S.E.2d 60 (1977); Williams v. Richmond County, 241 Ga. 89, 243 S.E.2d 55 (1978); State v. Ramsey, 147 Ga. App. 150, 248 S.E.2d 289 (1978); Georgia S. & Fla. Ry. v. Odom, 242 Ga. 169, 249 S.E.2d 545 (1978); Lambert v. City of Atlanta, 242 Ga. 645, 250 S.E.2d 456 (1978); Edmonds v. City of Albany, 242 Ga. 648, 250 S.E.2d 458 (1978); Cochran v. City of Rockmart, 242 Ga. 732, 251 S.E.2d 259 (1978); Savage v. City of Atlanta, 242 Ga. 671, 251 S.E.2d 268 (1978); Gleason v. City Council, 242 Ga. 796, 251 S.E.2d 536 (1979); City of Columbus v. Ronald A. Edwards Constr. Co., 155 Ga. App. 502, 271 S.E.2d 643 (1980); McSears v. State, 247 Ga. 48, 273 S.E.2d 847 (1981); Chatham County v. Kiley, 249 Ga. 110, 288 S.E.2d 551 (1982); Clark & Stephenson v. State Personnel Bd., 252 Ga. 548, 314 S.E.2d 658 (1984); Bowen v. City of Columbus, 256 Ga. 462, 349 S.E.2d 740 (1986); Terrell County v. Albany/Dougherty Hosp. Auth., 256 Ga. 627, 352 S.E.2d 378 (1987); Brophy v. McCranie, 264 Ga. 187, 442 S.E.2d 230 (1994); Weldon v. Board of Comm'rs, 212 Ga. App. 885, 443 S.E.2d 513 (1994); Franklin County v. Fieldale Farms Corp., 270 Ga. 272, 507 S.E.2d 460 (1998); Nash v. Pierce, 238 Ga. App. 466, 519 S.E.2d 462 (1999); In re Estate of Dasher, 259 Ga. App. 201, 575 S.E.2d 921 (2002); City of Buford v. Ga. Power Co., 276 Ga. 590, 581 S.E.2d 16 (2003); Wheatley v. Moe's Southwest Grill, LLC, 580 F. Supp. 2d 1324 (N.D. Ga. 2008); Smart v. State, 318 Ga. App. 882, 732 S.E.2d 850 (2012); Wilbros, LLC v. State, 294 Ga. 514, 755 S.E.2d 145 (2014); City of Brookhaven v. City of Chamblee, 329 Ga. App. 346, 765 S.E.2d 33 (2014).

Uniform Operation

What constitutes general law. — A law, to be general under this paragraph, must operate uniformly, throughout the whole state, upon the subject or class of subjects with which it proposes to deal. Lorentz & Rittler v. Alexander, 87 Ga. 444, 13 S.E. 632 (1891); Union Sav. Bank & Trust Co. v. Dottenheim, 107 Ga. 606, 34 S.E. 217 (1899) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV).

This paragraph requires a law to have uniform operation. Hortman v. Yarbrough, 214 Ga. 693, 107 S.E.2d 202 (1959); Nash v. National Preferred Life Ins. Co., 222 Ga. 14, 148 S.E.2d 402 (1966); Cragg v. State, 224 Ga. 196, 160 S.E.2d 817 (1968); Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Mann, 234 Ga. 884, 218 S.E.2d 593 (1975) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV).

Uniformity does not mean universality. Hortman v. Yarbrough, 214 Ga. 693, 107 S.E.2d 202 (1959); Nash v. National Preferred Life Ins. Co., 222 Ga. 14, 148 S.E.2d 402 (1966); Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Mann, 234 Ga. 884, 218 S.E.2d 593 (1975).

This paragraph does not mean that general laws may have no exceptions. McAllister v. American Nat'l Red Cross, 240 Ga. 246, 240 S.E.2d 247 (1977) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV).

Uniform Operation (Cont'd)

Requirements for constitutional uniformity. — A law shall apply to all persons, matters or things which it is intended to affect. Hortman v. Yarbrough, 214 Ga. 693, 107 S.E.2d 202 (1959); Nash v. National Preferred Life Ins. Co., 222 Ga. 14, 148 S.E.2d 402 (1966); Cragg v. State, 224 Ga. 196, 160 S.E.2d 817 (1968); Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Mann, 234 Ga. 884, 218 S.E.2d 593 (1975).

This provision is complied with when the law operates uniformly upon all persons who are brought within the relations and circumstances provided by it. Hortman v. Yarbrough, 214 Ga. 693, 107 S.E.2d 202 (1959); Cragg v. State, 224 Ga. 196, 160 S.E.2d 817 (1968); Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Mann, 234 Ga. 884, 218 S.E.2d 593 (1975).

If an Act operates generally upon the entire class of subjects with which it deals, uniformly throughout the state, there is no merit in a constitutional attack based upon this paragraph. City of Calhoun v. North Ga. Elec. Membership Corp., 233 Ga. 759, 213 S.E.2d 596 (1975) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV).

If a law operates alike on all who come within the scope of its provisions, constitutional uniformity is secured. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Mann, 234 Ga. 884, 218 S.E.2d 593 (1975).

O.C.G.A. § 51-1-29.5(c) does not violate the uniformity provision of the Georgia Constitution, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV(a), because it is a general law; it operates uniformly upon all health care liability claims arising from emergency medical care, and classification of the designated class is neither arbitrary nor unreasonable. Gliemmo v. Cousineau, 287 Ga. 7, 694 S.E.2d 75 (2010).

School districts. — There is no lack of uniformity in a section which applies to every board of education throughout the state in precisely the same way. Bedingfield v. Parkerson, 212 Ga. 654, 94 S.E.2d 714 (1956).

Independent school systems constitute one class and uniformity requires that they be treated alike. Rice v. Cook, 222 Ga. 499, 150 S.E.2d 822 (1966).

Abolition of local school districts by repeal of their corporate charters does not violate constitutional uniformity requirement. Upton County Sch. Dist. v. City of Thomaston, 248 Ga. 98, 281 S.E.2d 537 (1981).

General law may except certain persons or things. — A law operating uniformly throughout the state, but from which the General Assembly excepts certain persons or things, is still a general law. McAllister v. American Nat'l Red Cross, 240 Ga. 246, 240 S.E.2d 247 (1977).

To be territorially general, law may not exclude any county. — It is not necessary that every county in the state, at the time of the passage of a law, should fall within its operation, but it is necessary that none should be excepted in such a way that it can never fall within its provisions. Shadrick v. Bledsoe, 186 Ga. 345, 198 S.E. 535 (1938).

If a statute should except from its operation even one county, either by name, or by the use of such words as clearly indicate that the law can never apply to such county, the Act is lacking in the feature of territorial generality, and is therefore not a general law. Davis v. Board of Educ., 203 Ga. 44, 45 S.E.2d 429 (1947).

The exception of five named counties from the provisions of an Act prevented the Act from having uniform operation throughout the state. Davis v. Board of Educ., 203 Ga. 44, 45 S.E.2d 429 (1947).

Municipal charters need not be uniform. — There is no requirement in the Constitution that there be uniformity in the charters of the municipalities. Harris v. McMillan, 186 Ga. 529, 198 S.E. 250 (1938).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68 is a general law and does not violate the uniformity clause. — The Tort Reform Act of 2005, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68, does not violate the uniformity clause of the Georgia Constitution, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV(a), because § 9-11-68 is a general law since it applies uniformly throughout the state to all tort cases; the purpose of the general law to encourage litigants in tort cases to make and accept good faith settlement proposals in order to avoid unnecessary litigation is a legitimate legislative purpose, consistent with the state's strong public policy of encouraging negotiations and settlements, and the fact that the statute applies to tort cases, but not other civil actions, does not render it an impermissible special law. Smith v. Baptiste, 287 Ga. 23, 694 S.E.2d 83 (2010).

Exception to hotel/motel tax cap proper. — O.C.G.A. § 48-13-51(a)(5)(B) was not unconstitutional under the Uniformity Clause, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV(a), but was a proper exception to the general law of § 48-13-51(a)(1)(D), which imposed a three percent cap on Hotel/Motel taxes, in that the statute applied uniformly on all taxing authorities within the scope of the statute's provisions, and because the classification made by the statute was not arbitrary or unreasonable. Cottrell v. Atlanta Dev. Auth., 297 Ga. 1, 770 S.E.2d 616 (2015).

Special Laws

Constitution does not prohibit special laws per se. — The legislature may enact special laws affecting special classes, but it cannot do so if it has previously legislated in that area by general law nor may it do so if the classification of those affected is unreasonable. Lasseter v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 253 Ga. 227, 319 S.E.2d 824 (1984).

Special law conflicting with existing general law invalid. — A special or local law dealing with a subject as to which provision has already been made by an existing general law is in conflict with that section and invalid. Cheatham v. Palmer, 176 Ga. 227, 167 S.E. 522 (1933).

Touching anything whatever of a local nature, there may be a local law, provided no existing general statute applies to it, but the same thing cannot be regulated one way by a general statute, and another way by a subsequent local statute. City of Atlanta v. Hudgins, 193 Ga. 618, 19 S.E.2d 508 (1942).

An Act which deals with a subject matter for which provision has been made by an existing general law is repugnant to this paragraph, and is therefore null and void. Studstill v. Gary, 216 Ga. 268, 116 S.E.2d 213 (1960) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV).

Paragraph applies to all fields covered by general law. — This paragraph is not limited to those fields and subjects which have been completely exhausted by a general law. It embraces every field and subject which has been covered, though superficially, by a general law. City of Atlanta v. Hudgins, 193 Ga. 618, 19 S.E.2d 508 (1942) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV).

Paragraph applies to element embraced but not specifically dealt with in general law. — The mere fact that a special law deals with some remote segment or element of the general subject embraced in the general law, which segment or element is not dealt with by the general law, does not alter the fact that such special law is enacted in a case where provision has been made by an existing general law. City of Atlanta v. Hudgins, 193 Ga. 618, 19 S.E.2d 508 (1942); Giles v. Gibson, 208 Ga. 850, 69 S.E.2d 774 (1952); Pace v. City of Atlanta, 135 Ga. App. 399, 218 S.E.2d 128 (1975).

Conflict required. — A special law does not conflict with a general law if it does not detract from or hinder the operation of the general law, but rather augments and strengthens it. Grovenstein v. Effingham County, 262 Ga. 45, 414 S.E.2d 207 (1992).

A local ordinance that effectively prohibited sales of alcoholic beverages to minors in a more restrictive manner than under O.C.G.A. § 3-3-2 was not a special law that was preempted by a general law. The local ordinance was authorized by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV, and O.C.G.A. § 3-3-2 and did not result in a conflict. Grovenstein v. Effingham County, 262 Ga. 45, 414 S.E.2d 207 (1992).

Special or local law cannot repeal or modify general law. — A general law may be repealed or modified by another general law, but it cannot be repealed or modified by a special or local law. City of Atlanta v. Hudgins, 193 Ga. 618, 19 S.E.2d 508 (1942); Hood v. Burson, 194 Ga. 30, 20 S.E.2d 755 (1942); Irwin County Elec. Membership Corp. v. Haddock, 214 Ga. 682, 107 S.E.2d 195 (1959).

While a special law may not conflict with the general law in the sense that it has the effect of repealing some portion of the general law, nevertheless if the special law modifies it in any manner, either by expanding or contracting its meaning, such special law is obnoxious to the Constitution and cannot be sustained. City of Atlanta v. Hudgins, 193 Ga. 618, 19 S.E.2d 508 (1942).

Special Laws (Cont'd)

In the eye of the Constitution, every local law is special relative to a general law. City of Atlanta v. Hudgins, 193 Ga. 618, 19 S.E.2d 508 (1942).

Special laws cannot change grand jury. — The powers and duties of grand jury bodies, as stated by general laws, cannot be altered by any special laws to enlarge, diminish, modify, or change them. Bussell v. Youngblood, 239 Ga. 553, 238 S.E.2d 89 (1977).

Law territorially general cannot be made territorially special. — General statutes can be killed, but not mutilated. The smallest of their territorial members cannot be cut off. City of Atlanta v. Hudgins, 193 Ga. 618, 19 S.E.2d 508 (1942); Davis v. Board of Educ., 203 Ga. 44, 45 S.E.2d 429 (1947).

A law which is general by reason of its territorial comprehensiveness only can no more be limited in its operation territorially by a subsequent special law than can one which is general in the nature of its subject matter. Hood v. Burson, 194 Ga. 30, 20 S.E.2d 755 (1942).

There is no way to convert a statute territorially general into one territorially special. It may be altered at will, save that, whilst it has life it must live over the state with equal vigor, and can be excluded from no nook or corner in which there is a subject matter for its operation, and any of its attributes may be changed or destroyed except its territorial generality and uniformity, which must be as enduring as its life. Davis v. Board of Educ., 203 Ga. 44, 45 S.E.2d 429 (1947).

General law can only be affected by another general law. — If a general law is not exhaustive and fails to reach every minute element of the subject dealt with, the only constitutional remedy for a more exhaustive legislative treatment is by amendment of the general law by a general enactment. It cannot be done by amending or supplementing the general law by a special law. City of Atlanta v. Hudgins, 193 Ga. 618, 19 S.E.2d 508 (1942).

A general statute cannot cease to be general other than by another general statute repealing it. City of Atlanta v. Hudgins, 193 Ga. 618, 19 S.E.2d 508 (1942); Hood v. Burson, 194 Ga. 30, 20 S.E.2d 755 (1942).

Terms of superior courts. — When the legislature deals with superior courts in fixing the terms at which they are to be held in the several counties, it does so by general and not by special legislation. Burge v. Mangum, 134 Ga. 307, 67 S.E. 857 (1910); Geer v. Bush, 146 Ga. 701, 92 S.E. 47 (1917); Geer v. Colquitt Hdwe. & Furn. Co., 146 Ga. 811, 92 S.E. 515 (1917); Norris v. McDaniel, 207 Ga. 232, 60 S.E.2d 329 (1950).

Act fixing terms of a superior court and providing for attendance of grand juries thereat is a general law. Long v. State, 160 Ga. 292, 127 S.E. 842 (1925); Brown v. State, 242 Ga. 602, 250 S.E.2d 491 (1978).

O.C.G.A. § 3-7-43 held unconstitutional. — O.C.G.A. § 3-7-43, pursuant to which a city and a county were issuing alcoholic beverage licenses to private clubs without previous voter approval, is unconstitutional as a special law in conflict with existing general law. Regency Club v. Stuckey, 253 Ga. 583, 324 S.E.2d 166 (1984).

Statute allowing claims against manufacturers or suppliers of asbestos. — O.C.G.A. § 9-3-30.1, providing for the revival or extension of actions against manufacturers or suppliers of asbestos, does not meet constitutional standards because it singles out for special treatment property claims against manufacturers and suppliers of asbestos and differentiates them from all other claims that might be based upon other hazardous or toxic substances. Celotex Corp. v. St. Joseph Hosp., 259 Ga. 108, 376 S.E.2d 880 (1989), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 1081, 110 S. Ct. 1138, 107 L. Ed. 2d 1043 (1990).

Zoning ordinances. — The Zoning Procedures Law, O.C.G.A. § 36-66-1 et seq., preempted the provisions in a city charter for the purposes of the adoption and amendment of zoning ordinances. Little v. City of Lawrenceville, 272 Ga. 340, 528 S.E.2d 515 (2000).

War on Terrorism Local Assistance Act. — Legislation enacting the War on Terrorism Local Assistance Act, O.C.G.A. § 36-75-11(c), does not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV because the legislation and § 36-75-11(c) are logically related and do not embrace discordant subjects when the legislation generally pertains to public safety and judicial facilities authorities, and § 36-75-11(c) applies to authorities in counties that have activated public safety and judicial facilities authorities; it was the legislature's decision to enact a statute imposing a referendum requirement on any authority that has been authorized to incur bonded indebtedness in a county with an activated public safety and judicial facilities authority when that authority has constructed or operates buildings or facilities for use by a department, agency, division or commission of such county. Dev. Auth. v. State, 286 Ga. 36, 684 S.E.2d 856 (2009).

Private Rights

Private rights are confined to such rights, when applied to property, as persons may possess unconnected with, and not essentially affecting, the public interest, or growing out of a public institution of society. Board of Educ. & Orphanage v. State Bd. of Educ., 186 Ga. 200, 197 S.E. 261 (1938).

Classification

1. In General

Legislature may make classifications for purposes of legislation and pass general laws with reference to such classes. Commissioners of Rds. & Revenues v. Davis, 213 Ga. 792, 102 S.E.2d 180 (1958); City of Atlanta v. Gower, 216 Ga. 368, 116 S.E.2d 738 (1960); Jones v. City of College Park, 223 Ga. 778, 158 S.E.2d 384 (1967).

Provided classification relates to object of legislation. — In order to constitutionally classify for legislation, the basis for classification must relate to the object or purpose of the legislation. City of Atlanta v. Wilson, 209 Ga. 527, 74 S.E.2d 455 (1953).

The basis of classification must have some reasonable relation to the subject matter of the law, and must furnish a legitimate ground of differentiation. City of Atlanta v. Gower, 216 Ga. 368, 116 S.E.2d 738 (1960); Jones v. City of College Park, 223 Ga. 778, 158 S.E.2d 384 (1967).

Classification cannot be unreasonable or arbitrary. — Mere arbitrary discriminations are not permissible under the Constitution. City of Atlanta v. Gower, 216 Ga. 368, 116 S.E.2d 738 (1960).

A classification is valid if it relates to the subject matter of the legislation and is not unreasonable or arbitrary. Strickland v. Richmond County, 243 Ga. 462, 254 S.E.2d 844 (1979).

Must operate uniformly. — A tax is not violative of this paragraph if applied uniformly. Underwriters Salvage Co. v. City of Atlanta, 174 Ga. 678, 163 S.E. 893 (1932) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV).

A law which operates uniformly upon all persons of a designated class is a general law within the meaning of the Constitution, provided that the classification thus made is not arbitrary or unreasonable. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Mann, 234 Ga. 884, 218 S.E.2d 593 (1975).

To be constitutional, it is necessary only that the law applies uniformly to the class or classes of persons or things affected by it, and that the classes included or excluded from its general effect are reasonable and not arbitrary. McAllister v. American Nat'l Red Cross, 240 Ga. 246, 240 S.E.2d 247 (1977).

Classification may not restrict Act's application to single county. — While the legislature may make a classification for the purposes of legislation, and pass general laws with respect to different classes, it cannot place one county in a class for such purposes. If the attempted classification is so hedged about and restricted that the Act applies to only one county, and other counties cannot come within the class created, it is a local law and not a general one having operation throughout the state. Marbut v. Hollingshead, 172 Ga. 531, 158 S.E. 28 (1931).

Classification (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

May not restrict application to single county unless other counties may enter class. — An Act is not unconstitutional as a special law at the time it is passed if it is reasonable and not arbitrary, and it provides that the class may be enlarged when other counties attain the characteristic of the member of the class. It is not necessarily a special law, even though it applies to but one county. Lawson v. State, 242 Ga. 744, 251 S.E.2d 304 (1978).

Effect of population bill carried forward from 1945 constitution. — A 1952 amendment to the 1945 constitution, allowing the establishment of a joint board of tax assessors in a population category applying only to Fulton County and the City of Atlanta, was carried forward in the present constitution, and neither the amendment nor a 1952 implementing statute was unconstitutional. However, subsequent amendments which attempted to establish by local act any appeal system other than that specified in the 1952 amendment, and other amendments that attempted to change the population category affected by the 1952 amendment, were unconstitutional and void. Lomax v. Lee, 261 Ga. 575, 408 S.E.2d 788 (1991).

Classification of property for tax purposes. — The General Assembly may fix the taxing situs of all tangible or intangible personal property, but it must be by general law, and classified according to the nature of the property, and not according to the nature of the owner. County of Walton v. County of Morgan, 120 Ga. 548, 48 S.E. 243 (1904).

Professions. — Separate classification and treatment of architects, engineers, and contractors by O.C.G.A. § 9-3-51 from owners, tenants, and manufacturers is reasonable and not arbitrary. Mullis v. Southern Co. Servs., 250 Ga. 90, 296 S.E.2d 579 (1982).

2. By Population

Editor's notes. — The cases noted under this heading were decided prior to the 1983 Constitution, which provides that no population bill shall be passed except as defined by the General Assembly.

Requirements for valid classification of counties by population are that: the bases of classification must have some reasonable relation to the subject matter of the law, and must furnish a legitimate ground of differentiation; the classification must be open to let in counties subsequently falling within the class, as well as open to let out a county which, either by increase or decrease of population, ceases to have the required population; and the law must apply uniformly to all counties within the class, and must not be so hedged about and restricted that the Act applies only to one county. Estes v. Jones, 203 Ga. 686, 48 S.E.2d 99 (1948).

The legislature would be authorized to make a classification of cities on the basis of population, and pass a general law with reference to such classification, provided the basis of classification has some reasonable relation to the subject matter of the law, and furnishes a legitimate ground for differentiation, and provided that the Act is so framed as to let in all cities coming within the population classification, and let out all cities falling below the classification. City of Atlanta v. Gower, 216 Ga. 368, 116 S.E.2d 738 (1960).

Reasonable relation to subject matter of legislation. — A classification upon the basis of population is a reasonable and natural classification where it is adjusted to the purpose or subject matter of the legislation and, consequently, does not violate the Constitution. Orr v. Hapeville Realty Invs., Inc., 211 Ga. 235, 85 S.E.2d 20 (1954), overruled on other grounds, East Lands, Inc. v. Floyd County, 244 Ga. 761, 262 S.E.2d 51 (1979).

A population classification of not less than 145,000 but not more than 165,000 has no reasonable relationship to the subject matter of a statute. Strickland v. Richmond County, 243 Ga. 462, 254 S.E.2d 844 (1979).

Depends upon particular facts. — Whether or not classification by population bears a reasonable relation to the subject matter of the statute depends largely upon the facts of each particular case. Strickland v. Richmond County, 243 Ga. 462, 254 S.E.2d 844 (1979).

Classification must be open to let in new county or city. — Where the basis of classification is that of population, in order to be a general law it is necessary that such classification shall be open to let in any county or city which by any future census might have the stipulated population. Barge v. Camp, 209 Ga. 38, 70 S.E.2d 360 (1952); Commissioners of Rds. & Revenues v. Davis, 213 Ga. 792, 102 S.E.2d 180 (1958).

An Act which makes a classification by population must be open to let in counties subsequently falling within the class. Humthlett v. Reeves, 211 Ga. 210, 85 S.E.2d 25 (1954).

Classification which does not allow new county or city is not general law. — Where a classification is made on the basis of population as to counties or cities, and the Act is so limited and restricted that all counties or cities which may come within the population class cannot come within the provisions of the Act, it is not a general law. City of Atlanta v. Gower, 216 Ga. 368, 116 S.E.2d 738 (1960).

Classification of counties based upon population of an adjoining county is purely arbitrary. Humthlett v. Reeves, 211 Ga. 210, 85 S.E.2d 25 (1954).

The population of one county cannot have any reasonable relation to the subject matter of a statute dealing with establishing cemeteries so as to make it applicable to an adjoining county. Humthlett v. Reeves, 211 Ga. 210, 85 S.E.2d 25 (1954).

Classification by population permitted. — Acts providing for a cadastral survey in certain counties would not have been unconstitutional, illegal, and void even had such Acts named certain counties rather than fixing a classification based on population since the purpose of such Acts was to confer upon the proper governing authority of counties falling within the fixed classification additional powers and duties. Hutchins v. Candler, 209 Ga. 415, 73 S.E.2d 191 (1952).

O.C.G.A. § 15-9-120(2), granting the right to a jury trial in the probate courts of counties with a certain population according to the 1990 decennial census “or any future such census”, was not an unconstitutional special law, under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV(a), because the statute’s use of the disjunctive “or” gave the statute the elasticity required to make the statute a general law as this allowed counties to move into or out of this class of counties according to the latest census. Ellis v. Johnson, 291 Ga. 127, 728 S.E.2d 200 (2012).

Classification not permitted. — A section purporting to create a classification of counties for the purpose of levying a school tax solely upon the basis of population is unconstitutional. Southern Ry. v. Harrison, 172 Ga. 465, 157 S.E. 462 (1931).

Population as the sole basis for the attempted classification of counties to be excluded from the privilege of fishing noncommercially on Sunday is discriminatory and repugnant. McAllister v. State, 220 Ga. 570, 140 S.E.2d 828 (1965).

The portion of a section allowing tax collectors in counties of certain populations to retain a different percentage of school taxes collected than that specified in the general law for the collection of county school taxes was a special law in violation of a general law and was held invalid because the population bracket used applied to only one county and there was no rational relationship between the population bracket used and the subject matter of the law. Board of Comm’rs v. Clayton County Sch. Dist., 250 Ga. 244, 297 S.E.2d 724 (1982).

For a classification by population to render a statute general instead of special, the statute must not only be open to let in counties later falling within the class, but must be open to let out a county that by increase or decrease according to the last census ceases to have the required population, so as not to freeze a county within the original population restriction. Dougherty Co. v. Bush, 227 Ga. 137, 179 S.E.2d 343 (1971).

Municipal Ordinances

Municipal ordinance is “special law.” — A municipal ordinance which deals with matters covered by a general law is a special law within the meaning of this paragraph. Jenkins v. Jones, 209 Ga.

Municipal Ordinances (Cont'd)

758, 75 S.E.2d 815 (1953) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV).

Generally, a municipal ordinance passed in pursuance of express legislative authority is a law within the meaning of the Constitution, and has the same effect as a local law duly enacted by the state legislature. Jenkins v. Jones, 209 Ga. 758, 75 S.E.2d 815 (1953).

A municipal ordinance is nothing more than a special law limiting its application to the territory embraced within the municipality. Pace v. City of Atlanta, 135 Ga. App. 399, 218 S.E.2d 128 (1975).

Penal ordinance yields to state law.

— A municipal ordinance which penalizes an act made penal by existing state law covering the same subject matter must yield to the state law. City of Albany v. Key, 124 Ga. App. 16, 183 S.E.2d 20 (1971).

Ordinance may not infringe upon acts made penal by state law. Harper v. State, 135 Ga. App. 924, 219 S.E.2d 636 (1975).

Municipal ordinance must differ from state statute. — Where a municipal ordinance and a public criminal statute operate upon the same state of physical acts, the ordinance is invalid unless the offense created thereby contains some characterizing ingredient not contained in the state offense. Jenkins v. Jones, 209 Ga. 758, 75 S.E.2d 815 (1953).

A municipality may by ordinance penalize an act which is forbidden by the penal laws of the state, if there is in the municipal offense some essential ingredient not essential to the state offense, or if the municipal offense lacks some ingredient essential to the state offense. Goldstein v. City of Atlanta, 141 Ga. App. 701, 234 S.E.2d 344, cert. dismissed, 239 Ga. 843, 240 S.E.2d 551 (1977).

Municipalities may not penalize an act which is also forbidden by a state penal law unless there is an “essential” or “characterizing” ingredient in the municipal offense which is not essential to or contained in the state offense. This is the test intended to be applied in determining the validity of a local ordinance, when there exists a general law on the same subject, and there is no express legislative authorization for the special law. Akin v. Hardison, 245 Ga. 57, 262 S.E.2d 814 (1980).

Municipal ordinance must affect peace and good order of municipality.

— The act which the municipality seeks to punish as a municipal offense must be such as affects the peace and good order of the municipality and contain some characterizing ingredient not contained in the state offense. Gordon v. Green, 228 Ga. 505, 186 S.E.2d 719 (1972).

Power of municipality conferred by general legislative Act.

— The ordinance of a city penalizing a lesser speed than is penalized by the statute of the state is merely supplemental to the statute. The legislative Acts regulating the speed of motor vehicles within the state specifically authorize municipalities to regulate traffic within the municipal limits. Walters v. State, 90 Ga. App. 360, 83 S.E.2d 48 (1954).

The power of a municipality to punish as a municipal offense that which is by general law of the state also a state offense must be conferred by a general rather than a special Act of the legislature and the grant of such power must be clearly expressed. Gordon v. Green, 228 Ga. 505, 186 S.E.2d 719 (1972).

Authority must be clear and unequivocal.

— The General Assembly may authorize the punishment of an act as a city offense which would also be a state offense, provided the terms of the Act conferring the authority are clear and unequivocal and manifest a legislative intent to confer authority for the punishment of such act. Akin v. Hardison, 245 Ga. 57, 262 S.E.2d 814 (1980).

Municipal ordinance that augments general law.

— There is no unconstitutional conflict between the state minimum wage law and a city ordinance where the ordinance does not detract from or hinder the operation of the minimum wage law, but rather it augments and strengthens it. City of Atlanta v. Associated Bldrs. & Contractors, 240 Ga. 655, 242 S.E.2d 139 (1978).

Municipal charter's authority insufficient.

— The mere authority granted in a municipal charter to enact ordinances for the general welfare is not a sufficient delegation of the municipality's authority. Gordon v. Green, 228 Ga. 505, 186 S.E.2d 719 (1972).

Special ordinances, conflicting with a general ordinance, may be passed. Brown v. Atlanta Ry. & Power Co., 113 Ga. 462, 39 S.E. 71 (1901); Sawyer v. City of Blakely, 2 Ga. App. 159, 58 S.E. 399 (1907).

Express authorization for ordinance. — Subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 3-3-2 constituted an express authorization by general law for Effingham County to exercise by local ordinance the police power of revoking licenses for the sale of beer and wine, provided that the ordinance met the requirement of subsection (a) of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV. Grovenstein v. Effingham County, 262 Ga. 45, 414 S.E.2d 207 (1992).

Municipality's unconstitutional regulation of practice of law. — An occupational tax ordinance levied on professionals and requiring registration and a fee payment at the beginning of each year, prior to the transaction of business, operated as an unconstitutional precondition on the practice of law. Sexton v. City of Jonesboro, 267 Ga. 571, 481 S.E.2d 818 (1997).

Ordinance holding surety liable on criminal appearance bond until fine collected deemed constitutional. — Section 4-1009(6) of the Code of Ordinances of the City of Macon, which seeks to hold the surety liable on a criminal appearance bond until the fine imposed is collected, does not conflict with Georgia case law, is authorized by O.C.G.A. § 36-32-4, which authorizes municipal corporations to make provision by ordinance as to what constitutes the forfeiture of bonds given by offenders for their appearance before municipal courts, and does not conflict with O.C.G.A. § 17-6-31 (surrender on surety bonds); for these reasons, there has not been preemption by the state in this area of regulatory activity. Therefore, § 4-1009(6) is not unconstitutional under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV. City of Macon v. Davis, 251 Ga. 332, 305 S.E.2d 116 (1983).

Ordinance providing certain insurance benefits for dependents of city employees who qualified and registered as domestic partners, which defined "dependent" consistent with state law, did not violate the Georgia Constitution or the Municipal Home Rule Act. City of Atlanta v. Morgan, 268 Ga. 586, 492 S.E.2d 193 (1997).

City's ordinances prohibiting the use of amphibious vehicles as tour vehicles in parts of the city were not preempted by the state law giving the Public Service Commission the authority to issue certificates of public convenience and necessity; the ordinances fall within the constitutional exception to the doctrine of preemption since the General Assembly enacted general laws authorizing the local government to exercise its police powers and enact the local laws at issue. Old South Duck Tours, Inc. v. Mayor & Aldermen of Savannah, 272 Ga. 869, 535 S.E.2d 751 (2000).

County ordinance was proper use of police power. — Since the stated purpose of Gwinnett County, Ga., Ord. No. 82-11 was to impede the sale of stolen property, and its requirements were designed to achieve that end, it was a proper use of the county's police power; further, by expressly preserving local laws in O.C.G.A. § 44-12-135, which included county ordinances, the legislature had in effect "authorized" them, and so Gwinnett County, Ga., Ord. No. 82-11 did not conflict with O.C.G.A. § 44-12-138. Pawnmart, Inc. v. Gwinnett County, 279 Ga. 19, 608 S.E.2d 639 (2005).

City ordinance regarding discontinuance of water service pre-empted. — Pursuant to the uniformity clause of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV(a), § 154-120(1) of the Code of Ordinances of the City of Atlanta, Ga., which authorized the discontinuance of water service until a bill was paid, was pre-empted by O.C.G.A. § 36-60-17(a), which did not allow a supplier to refuse to supply water to a water meter because of a prior owner's indebtedness. Fed. Home Loan Mortg. Corp. v. City of Atlanta, 285 Ga. 189, 674 S.E.2d 905 (2009).

City ordinance regulating age of persons who could enter adult entertainment establishments. — Trial court erred by rejecting entertainers' challenge under the uniformity clause, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV(a), to a city's ordinance prohibiting persons aged 18 to 21 from entering adult entertainment establishments where alcohol was served because the ordinance conflicted with O.C.G.A. § 3-3-24(a), allowing persons over 18 to work in such establishments. Willis v. City of Atlanta, 285 Ga. 775, 684 S.E.2d 271 (2009).

Municipal Ordinances (Cont'd)

Ordinance did not impair operation of state law. — Definition of "public sidewalk" found in City of Forest Park, Ga., Ordinance § 9-8-45(f) is not unconstitutional as conflicting with state law because nothing in § 9-8-45 impairs the operation of O.C.G.A. § 40-1-1(57); by its specific terms, § 40-1-1(57), is not intended to be a definition of general application, but defines the term "sidewalk" in the context of Title 40 of the Georgia Code, which is labeled "Motor Vehicles and Traffic," and it does not appear that the definition set forth in § 40-1-1(57) would apply elsewhere in the Code in which the word "sidewalk" is used in other contexts. Braley v. City of Forest Park, 286 Ga. 760, 692 S.E.2d 595 (2010).

Ordinance not preempted by statute. — Miller County, Ga., Ordinance No. 10-01, § 3 could not be preempted by O.C.G.A. § 36-1-14 because § 3 did not impair the statute's operation but rather strengthened and augmented the statute; the exception in § 3 was more narrow than in O.C.G.A. § 36-1-14, requiring that a majority of the Board of Commissioners of Miller County approve the contract or transaction after establishing that the goods, and the County had authority, as an incident of the county's home rule power, to amend Ga. L. 1983, p. 4594, § 14. Bd. of Comm'rs v. Callan, 290 Ga. 327, 720 S.E.2d 608 (2012).

Ordinance imposing an occupational tax. — City ordinance imposing an occupational tax on attorneys who maintain an office and practice law in the city did not violate constitutional equal protection because the tax paid for a variety of city services that benefited all citizens within the city, including attorneys, it was reasonable for the city to require attorneys with offices inside city limits to help pay for city services from which the attorneys benefit, and all attorneys subject to the ordinance were taxed uniformly. Moss v. City of Dunwoody, 293 Ga. 858, 750 S.E.2d 326 (2013).

County Commissioners

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VII, Ga. Const. 1976, Art. IX, Sec. I, Paras. VI and VII, and antecedent provisions, are included in the annotations for this paragraph. The 1983 Constitution now provides that counties shall have such governing authorities as are provided by the 1983 Constitution (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. I, Para. I) and by law.

No requirement as to uniformity. — There is no constitutional requirement as to uniformity where the duties and powers of county commissioners are concerned. Deason v. DeKalb County, 222 Ga. 63, 148 S.E.2d 414 (1966).

Paragraph does not apply. — There is good reason to construe Ga. Const. 1976, Art. IX, Sec. I, Para. VI (no comparable provision) as being separate and distinct in its requirements from the provisions of this paragraph prohibiting the passing of special laws where there is already an existing general law. Toole v. Anderson, 177 Ga. 814, 171 S.E. 714 (1933).

The purpose of this paragraph was to ordain the uniform operation throughout the state of all the general laws; but to this general rule the Constitution itself made an exception as to county commissioners (Ga. Const. 1976, Art. IX, Sec. I, Para. VII [no comparable provision]), which sanctions the utmost diversity consistent with the needs of the particular county that may require them. Bradford v. Hammond, 179 Ga. 40, 175 S.E. 18 (1934); Hutchins v. Candler, 209 Ga. 415, 73 S.E.2d 191 (1952).

The constitutional provision prohibiting special laws in cases for which provision has been made by general law does not apply to statutes defining the powers of a county governing authority. SCA Servs. of Ga., Inc. v. Fulton County, 238 Ga. 154,

231 S.E.2d 774 (1977).

Creation of duties by special Acts.

— There is no limitation or restriction upon the General Assembly in the creation by special law of county commissioners, and in fixing their jurisdiction, powers, and duties. Hutchins v. Candler, 209 Ga. 415, 73 S.E.2d 191 (1952).

Local law invalidated in compensation dispute. — Trial court correctly held that a county solicitor general was improperly compensated beginning in July 2007 but erred in calculating the back pay due to him as of January 1, 2009, based on an amended local law because the amended local law irreconcilably conflicted with O.C.G.A. § 15-18-67(b), which prohibited the reduction of a solicitor-general's compensation during his term of office. Inagawa v. Fayette County, 291 Ga. 715, 732 S.E.2d 421 (2012).

This paragraph has been construed together with Ga. Const. 1976, Art. IX, Sec. I, Paras. VI and VII (no comparable provisions) to impose very little restriction on the General Assembly in creating and defining the duties of county commissioners by special Act. The General Assembly has the power to pass separate and distinct laws creating county commissioners for every county in Georgia. Smith v. Abercrombie, 235 Ga. 741, 221 S.E.2d 802 (1975).

Inapplicability of general laws. —

General laws, so far as they refer to county commissioners, are subject to qualification by special Acts, and the special Acts need not be uniform. Robitzsch v. State, 189 Ga. 637, 7 S.E.2d 387 (1940); Moore v. Whaley, 189 Ga. 647, 7 S.E.2d 394 (1940).

The provisions of general laws enacted by the legislature do not apply to county commissioners, unless made so by the special laws creating them. Humthlett v. Reeves, 211 Ga. 210, 85 S.E.2d 25 (1954); Smith v. Abercrombie, 235 Ga. 741, 221 S.E.2d 802 (1975).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Intent of paragraph. — This paragraph was intended to ensure that once the legislature enters a field by enacting a general law, that field is thereafter to be reserved exclusively for general legislation and cannot be open to special or local laws. Thus, once the General Assembly has legislated in an area, such legislation preempts additional action in the form of special or local laws. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-150.

Local ordinance covering same subject as a general law must conform with the provisions of the general law, but may exact additional requirements. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-149.

General air pollution law does not preclude local ordinances. — The existence of general air pollution laws does not necessarily preclude the adoption of local ordinances on the same subject provided such ordinances are of a nonpenal nature, are provided for the protection of the health, safety, and comfort of the community and are not prohibited by express or implied language in the general law. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-149.

Invalidation of special laws. — A local or special law is invalidated by the second clause of this paragraph only where a general law covering the subject already exists, while the first clause of this paragraph invalidates local or special legislation even where no general law dealing with the subject matter exists. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 375 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV).

Local law providing for salary. —

Local legislation can be used to supplement by salary the fees of the ordinary (now judge of the probate court) and sheriff of a particular county. 1952-53 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 24.

Municipal ordinances creating status of domestic partnership. — Municipal ordinances which create the status of domestic partnership are violative of constitutional and statutory provisions precluding municipal legislation relating to legal status and relationship; thus, group health insurance coverage provided pursuant to such ordinances is violative of the public policy of this state. 1993 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 93-26.

Glue sniffing ordinance prohibited.

— A city may not adopt an ordinance prohibiting glue sniffing, already denounced by a state statute. 1970 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U70-59.

Local Act requiring special election before expiration of 29 days between call of election and election itself is invalid. 1980 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 80-27.

Evacuation to protect lives and property is exercise of government’s inherent “police powers.” 1983 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 83-60.

Fire ordinances for day care centers. — The authority of local governments to enact fire ordinances for day care centers is preempted by former O.C.G.A. § 49-5-14 which gave the Board of Human Resources authority to adopt fire safety codes for day care centers. 1984 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 84-9.

Residency requirements for candidates for Board of Commissioners. — The provisions of the local Act establishing a requirement that candidates for the Board of Commissioners of Clay County be residents of the commissioner districts from which they are seeking election for a period of at least five years immediately preceding the date of the election is unenforceable as being a local Act in derogation of general law. 1984 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U84-31.

Local regulation of air pollutants.

— While local governments are not preempted from regulating in the area of air quality control, any ordinance in this area which contradicts or detracts from the Georgia Air Quality Act, O.C.G.A. § 12-9-1 et seq., would be unconstitutional and void. 1986 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U86-22.

Local licensing of journeymen electricians. — The State Construction Industry Licensing Board Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 14, T. 43, prohibits a municipality or county from establishing licensing requirements for journeyman electricians since any local provision would constitute a local law in conflict with the general provision. 1987 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 87-3.

Payroll deduction programs for public employees. — Political subdivisions may establish payroll deduction programs for public employees provided that there is statutory authority to do so and that the programs are not unconstitutional gratuities. The General Assembly, by acting in this area through various general statutory provisions, intended to permit local governments to utilize payroll deduction plans only in limited circumstances as outlined in those kinds of general laws; there is no general law authorizing local governments to undertake payroll deduction programs either through the passage of local law or through local ordinances. Absent authority to engage in such programs through the enactment of local laws, the most appropriate method for their implementation would be through the passage of general laws. 2014 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U2014-3.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 16A Am. Jur. 2d, Constitutional Law, §§ 284 et seq., 312 et seq., 319 et seq.

C.J.S. — 16 C.J.S., Constitutional Law, § 280.

ALR. — Constitutional provisions against special legislation relating to counties or municipalities as affected by the distinction between their political and nonpolitical character, 50 ALR 1163.

Constitutional provision prohibiting local or special legislation as applied to statutes relating to juries, 155 ALR 789.

Validity of statutory classifications based on population — intoxicating liquor statutes, 100 ALR3d 850.

Paragraph V. Specific limitations.

(a) The General Assembly shall not have the power to grant incorporation to private persons but shall provide by general law the manner in which private corporate powers and privileges may be granted.

(b) The General Assembly shall not forgive the forfeiture of the charter of any corporation existing on August 13, 1945, nor shall it grant any benefit to or permit any amendment to the charter of any corporation except upon the condition that the acceptance thereof shall operate as a novation of the charter and that such corporation shall thereafter hold its charter subject to the provisions of this Constitution.

(c)(1) The General Assembly shall not have the power to authorize any contract or agreement which may have the effect of or which is intended to have the effect of encouraging a monopoly, which is hereby declared to be unlawful and void. Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (c)(2) of this Paragraph, the General Assembly shall not have the power to authorize any contract or agreement which may have the effect of or which is intended to have the effect of defeating or lessening competition, which is hereby declared to be unlawful and void.

(2) The General Assembly shall have the power to authorize and provide by general law for judicial enforcement of contracts or agreements restricting or regulating competitive activities between or among:

(A) Employers and employees;

(B) Distributors and manufacturers;

(C) Lessors and lessees;

(D) Partnerships and partners;

(E) Franchisors and franchisees;

(F) Sellers and purchasers of a business or commercial enterprise; or

(G) Two or more employers.

(3) The authority granted to the General Assembly in subparagraph (c)(2) of this Paragraph shall include the authority to grant to courts by general law the power to limit the duration, geographic area, and scope of prohibited activities provided in a contract or agreement restricting or regulating competitive activities to render such contract or agreement reasonable under the circumstances for which it was made.

(d) The General Assembly shall not have the power to regulate or fix charges of public utilities owned or operated by any county or municipality of this state, except as authorized by this Constitution.

(e) No municipal or county authority which is authorized to construct, improve, or maintain any road or street on behalf of, pursuant to a contract with, or through the use of taxes or other revenues of a county or municipal corporation shall be created by any local Act or pursuant to any general Act nor shall any law specifically relating to any such authority be amended unless the creation of such authority or the amendment of such law is conditioned upon the approval of a majority of the qualified voters of the county or municipal corporation affected voting in a referendum thereon. This subparagraph shall not apply to or affect any state authority. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 3, § 6, Para. 5; Ga. L. 1986, p. 1628, § 1/HR 662; Ga. L. 2010, p. 1260, § 1/HR 178.)

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VIII, Paras. V, VI, VIII-X.

Cross references. — Impairment of contract obligations generally, U.S. Const., art. I, sec. X, cl. 1. Regulation of utilities generally, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. I, Para. I. Establishment of just and reasonable rates, fares, and charges for transportation, § 40-1-118. Granting particular corporate powers: banks, § 7-1-395; insurance companies, § 33-14-5; express companies, § 46-9-230; canal companies, § 52-4-1; navigation companies, § 52-5-1. Illegal and void contracts generally, Ch. 8, T. 13. Corporations generally, T. 14. O.C.G.A. §§ 13-8-2; Art. 4 of Ch. 8 of T. 13. Inviolability of charters generally, §§ 14-2-1701, 14-3-1701. Forfeiture of corporate charters, § 14-4-160. Right of state to withdraw franchise when charter granted since January 1, 1863, § 14-5-3. Penalty for conspiring to restrain competition, § 16-10-22. Regulation of utility rates generally, § 46-2-23 et seq. Penalties for unjust discrimination by utilities, § 46-2-90 et seq. Regulation of rates charged by motor carriers, § 46-7-18. Regulation of rates charged by railroad companies, § 46-8-20. Street, suburban, and interurban railroads, § 46-8-330 et seq. Penalty for discrimination in rates and charges by carriers generally, § 46-9-250 et seq.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1986, p. 1628, § 1) which added subparagraph (e) was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 4, 1986.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1994, p. 2022, § 1) which would have authorized agreements among health care providers and other persons for the provision of health care services which may have had the effect of lessening competition if, according to criteria established by the General Assembly, the benefits to the public of such contracts or agreements outweighed the disadvantages of lessened competition was defeated at the general election on November 8, 1994.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 2010, p. 1260, § 1), which rewrote subsection (c), was ratified at the general election held on November 2, 2010.

Law reviews. — For article, "The General Practitioner and Antitrust Problems," see 20 Ga. B.J. 47 (1957). For article surveying important general legal principles of municipal and county government purchasing and contracting in Georgia, see 16 Mercer L. Rev. 371 (1965). For article discussing 1976 constitutional amendment transferring authority to grant corporate powers and privileges from superior courts to the Secretary of State, and subsequent procedural changes, see 13 Ga. St. B.J. 91 (1976). For article discussing origin of state bar on anticompetitive combinations, see 15 Ga. St. B.J. 39 (1978). For article on enforceability of restrictive covenants in employment contracts, see 17 Ga. St. B.J. 110 (1981). For article, "Liabilities of the Former Officer or Director," see 18 Ga. St. B.J. 150 (1982). For article, "The Underbrush Grows Deeper: Restrictive Covenants in Employment Agreements in Georgia," see 21 Ga. St. B.J. 28 (1984). For article, "Survey of Current Georgia Law Regarding Restrictive Covenants," see 25 Ga. St. B.J. 188 (1989). For article, "Georgia Constitution May Restrict the 1990 Restrictive Covenant Law," see 27 Ga. St. B.J. 82 (1990). For article, "Restrictions on Post-Employment Competition by an Executive Under Georgia Law," see 54 Mercer L. Rev. 1133 (2003). For annual survey on labor and employment law, see 64 Mercer L. Rev. 173 (2012).

For note, “Maintaining Trade Secrecy: The Significance of Water Services v. Tesco Chemicals” (410 F.2d 163 (5th Cir. 1969)), see 4 Ga. L. Rev. 541 (1970). For note discussing covenants not to compete in employment contracts as void when in general restraint of trade, see 10 Ga. St.

B.J. 125 (1973). For note discussing restrictions on the creation of public purpose corporations, see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 680 (1974).

For comment on Griffin v. Vandegriff, 205 Ga. 288, 53 S.E.2d 345 (1949), see 11 Ga. B.J. 491 (1949). For comment on Durham v. Stand-By Labor of Ga., Inc., 230 Ga. 558, 198 S.E.2d 145 (1973), see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 526 (1974).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

GRANT OF CORPORATE POWERS

CONTRACTS TO DEFEAT COMPETITION

1. IN GENERAL
2. COVENANTS NOT TO COMPETE
 - A. IN GENERAL
 - B. ANCILLARY TO CONTRACT OF EMPLOYMENT
 - C. ANCILLARY TO SALE OF BUSINESS
 - D. COVENANTS NOT TO DISCLOSE TRADE SECRETS
3. SPECIFIC CASES
4. PRACTICE AND PLEADING

REGULATION OF PUBLIC UTILITIES

1. IN GENERAL
2. DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW

General Consideration

Cited in McAlpin v. Coweta Fayette Surgical Assocs., 217 Ga. App. 669, 458 S.E.2d 499 (1995); Crosby v. Hospital Auth., 93 F.3d 1515 (11th Cir. 1996); Atlanta Bread Co. Int'l v. Lupton-Smith, 285 Ga. 587, 679 S.E.2d 722 (2009); WMW, Inc. v. Am. Honda Motor Co., 291 Ga. 683, 733 S.E.2d 269 (2012).

Grant of Corporate Powers

Standing. — In order to have standing to bring claims under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V, or O.C.G.A. § 13-8-2(a)(2), plaintiff must be a party to the alleged illegal contract or agreement. Valley Prods. Co. v. Landmark, 877 F. Supp. 1087 (W.D. Tenn. 1994), aff'd, 128 F.3d 398 (11th Cir. 1997).

Creation of Municipal Electric Authority constitutional. — As the Municipal Electric Authority is a public corporation of the state, the creation of the authority and the granting of powers to it do not constitute a grant of corporate powers and privileges to a private company in violation of paragraph (a). Thompson v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 238 Ga. 19, 231 S.E.2d 720 (1976) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

State Bar of Georgia is not private corporation under paragraph (a), but is an administrative arm of the court. Wallace v. Wallace, 225 Ga. 102, 166 S.E.2d 718, cert. denied, 396 U.S. 939, 90 S. Ct. 369, 24 L. Ed. 2d 240 (1969) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Object of paragraph (b) is to subject corporations to taxing power of the state, although exempted therefrom under their original charters, and the proviso was made for the purpose of encouraging the building of railroads. State v. Central of Ga. Ry., 109 Ga. 716, 35 S.E. 37, 48 L.R.A. 351 (1900) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Change of penalty during life of charter. — Where the charter of a turnpike company granted in 1840 provided for a penalty for neglect of certain duties, the legislature could not change the penalty during the life of the charter. Habersham Tpk. Co. v. Taylor, 73 Ga. 552 (1884).

Grant of Corporate Powers (Cont'd)

Restrictive covenant for subdivision. — A restrictive covenant barring “For Sale” signs in a subdivision was not an unenforceable restraint on trade; the cases citing such authority referred to restrictive covenants in the employment area, not to restrictive covenants on the use of real property, and it was well settled that a grantor of real property could restrict the use of it by restrictive covenants. Godley Park Homeowners Ass’n v. Bowen, 286 Ga. App. 21, 649 S.E.2d 308 (2007).

Contracts in special charters creating perpetual tax exemptions are not revocable by paragraph (b). Central of Ga. Ry. v. Wright, 248 U.S. 525, 39 S. Ct. 181, 63 L. Ed. 401 (1919) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

The fact that contracts in special charters creating perpetual tax exemptions are not revocable by paragraph (b) applies to lessees of the original contracting company. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Wright, 250 U.S. 519, 40 S. Ct. 1, 63 L. Ed. 1123 (1919) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Contracts to Defeat Competition1. In General

Paragraph (c) based on common law. — Paragraph (c) is based on the common-law principle which invalidates contracts creating monopolies or defeating competition. Central R.R. v. Collins, 40 Ga. 582 (1869); State v. Central of Ga. Ry., 109 Ga. 716, 35 S.E. 37 (1900) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Contracts in restraint of trade void generally. — Contracts which tend to lessen competition or which are in restraint of trade are against public policy and are void. Wedgewood Carpet Mills, Inc. v. Color-Set, Inc., 149 Ga. App. 417, 254 S.E.2d 421 (1979).

Common law tort actions. — Georgia recognizes a common law tort action in favor of third parties who are injured by a conspiracy in restraint of trade. United States Anchor Mfg., Inc. v. Rule Indus., Inc., 7 F.3d 986 (11th Cir. 1993), cert. denied, 512 U.S. 1221, 114 S. Ct. 2710, 129 L. Ed. 2d 2837 (1994).

Legal effect of restrictive covenant determines enforceability. — In carrying out the policy stated in subsection (c) of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V, regarding defeating or lessening of competition, it is the legal effect of a restrictive covenant in a contract, not the parties’ specified manner of enforcement of the provision, that determines enforceability of a contract. Dougherty, McKinnon & Luby v. Greenwald, Denzik & Davis, 213 Ga. App. 891, 447 S.E.2d 94 (1994).

Paragraph (c) has same meaning as former Code 1933, § 20-504 (see now O.C.G.A. § 13-8-2), prohibiting restraint of trade and monopoly. Griffin v. Vandegriff, 205 Ga. 288, 53 S.E.2d 345 (1949), commented on in 11 Ga. B.J. 491 (1949) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Application of term “competition.” — The term “competition” is relative and dependent upon public benefits. State v. Central of Ga. Ry., 109 Ga. 716, 35 S.E. 37 (1900).

Paragraph (c) does not impose absolute bar against every kind of restrictive agreement. Howard Schultz & Assocs. v. Broniec, 239 Ga. 181, 236 S.E.2d 265 (1977), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 938, 100 S. Ct. 1332, 63 L. Ed. 2d 772 (1980); Adcock v. Speir Ins. Agency, Inc., 158 Ga. App. 317, 279 S.E.2d 759 (1981) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Restraints to be considered against public policy background. — Contractual restraints which tend to diminish competition and trade have to be considered against a background of public policy generally disfavoring contracts which have that effect. Farmer v. Airco, Inc., 231 Ga. 847, 204 S.E.2d 580 (1974).

Factors for consideration in restraint of trade. — Covenants in restraint of trade may be enforced if they are reasonable as to time and place and are not overly broad as to the activities proscribed, taking into consideration the interests of individuals in gaining and pursuing a livelihood, of commercial concerns in protecting property, confidential information and relationships, good will and economic advantage, and of the broader public policy favoring individual freedom to enter into contracts. Durham v. Stand-By Labor of Ga., Inc., 230 Ga. 558, 198 S.E.2d 145 (1973), commented on in 8 Ga. L. Rev. 526 (1974).

Not all restraints of trade are unconstitutional and the test in this state is whether the restraint involved is "injurious to the public interest." City of Calhoun v. North Ga. Elec. Membership Corp., 233 Ga. 759, 213 S.E.2d 596 (1975).

A contract which tends to lessen competition or which is in restraint of trade may be upheld if the restraint is reasonable and the contract is valid in other respects. Wedgewood Carpet Mills, Inc. v. Color-Set, Inc., 149 Ga. App. 417, 254 S.E.2d 421 (1979).

Statement of "rule of reason." — When a contract in restraint of trade is considered in the circumstances in which it is made, and the restraint appears to have been for the legitimate interests of the party in whose favor it is imposed, and is not specially injurious to the public, the restraint will be held valid. Durham v. Stand-By Labor of Ga., Inc., 230 Ga. 558, 198 S.E.2d 145 (1973), commented on in 8 Ga. L. Rev. 526 (1974); Interstate Sec. Police, Inc. v. Citizens & S. Emory Bank, 237 Ga. 37, 226 S.E.2d 583 (1976).

The broad language of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V has been narrowed by the application of a court created "rule of reason." Thus, the legislature may encourage narrowly tailored contracts, which do not unreasonably chill competition, based upon the legislature's evaluation of the public interest. Ferrero v. Associated Materials, Inc., 923 F.2d 1441 (11th Cir. 1991).

Contract in partial restraint may be upheld provided restraint is reasonable and the contract is valid in other essentials. Britt v. Davis, 239 Ga. 747, 238 S.E.2d 881 (1977).

A contract in partial restraint of trade is enforceable if it is reasonably limited as to time and territory and not otherwise unreasonable. Watkins v. Avnet, Inc., 122 Ga. App. 474, 177 S.E.2d 582 (1970).

Limited restraints, if not greater than protection the other party requires, are not outlawed. Interstate Sec. Police, Inc. v. Citizens & S. Emory Bank, 237 Ga. 37, 226 S.E.2d 583 (1976).

Former O.C.G.A. § 13-8-2.1, permitting contracts in partial restraint of trade, did not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V. Ferrero v. Associated Materials, Inc., 923 F.2d 1441 (11th Cir. 1991).

"Blue-pencil theory of severability" rejected. — If a contract contains illegal and unenforceable clauses within a restrictive covenant, the entire covenant must fail because the "blue-pencil theory of severability" is rejected. McNease v. National Motor Club of Am., Inc., 238 Ga. 53, 231 S.E.2d 58 (1976); Uni-Worth Enters., Inc. v. Wilson, 244 Ga. 636, 261 S.E.2d 572 (1979).

2. Covenants Not to Compete

A. In General

Rule of reason prevails. — In all cases involving covenants not to compete, whether in sales of businesses or covenants ancillary to employment contracts, the rule of reason prevails. Durham v. Stand-By Labor of Ga., Inc., 230 Ga. 558, 198 S.E.2d 145 (1973), commented on in Ga. L. Rev. 526 (1974).

Three prerequisites for enforcement of noncompetition provisions. — There are three prerequisites which must be met before noncompetition provisions in contracts may be enforced without contravening public policy: (1) the provision must be reasonable as to the time of the restraint; (2) the provision must be definite and reasonable as to the territorial extent of the duty owed not to compete; (3) the provision must be definite and reasonable as to nature of the business activities proscribed by the noncompetition covenant. Farmer v. Airco, Inc., 231 Ga. 847, 204 S.E.2d 580 (1974).

Standard of review. — Covenants not to compete are scrutinized to determine if they are sufficiently limited in time and territorial effect and are otherwise reasonable, considering the interests to be protected and the effects on both parties to the contract. Rash v. Toccoa Clinic Medical Assocs., 253 Ga. 322, 320 S.E.2d 170 (1984).

Contracts to DefeatCompetition (Cont'd)2. Covenants Not to Compete (Cont'd)A. In General (Cont'd)

Preferred interpretation of restrictive covenant. — When a court is presented with a restrictive covenant that is susceptible to more than one reasonable interpretation, the preferred interpretation is the one that least restricts competition, thereby posing the least affront to the public policy of the State of Georgia. Atlanta Ctr. Ltd. v. Hilton Hotels Corp., 848 F.2d 146 (11th Cir. 1988).

Contract in restraint of trade. — Small movie theater company sufficiently alleged that a large theater chain forced movie distributors to enter into exclusive dealing agreements by threatening that their refusal to grant clearances in the local area would result in adverse economic consequences; thus, the company could pursue the company's claims for both tortious interference and for violations of Georgia law prohibiting contracts in restraint of trade. Cobb Theatres III, LLC v. AMC Entm't Holdings, Inc., 101 F. Supp. 3d 1319 (N.D. Ga. 2015).

Greater latitude given to covenants relating to sale of business. — What is reasonable in a restrictive covenant is a matter of law for the court to decide, allowing greater latitude for covenants relating to the sale of a business than for covenants ancillary to employment. Watkins v. Avnet, Inc., 122 Ga. App. 474, 177 S.E.2d 582 (1970).

Since the employee who agrees to the covenant may have done so from an inferior bargaining position, and since the covenant may seriously impair the employee's ability to earn a living, courts traditionally give greater scrutiny to restrictive covenants within employment contracts, as opposed to such covenants contained in business sales or partnership agreements. Rash v. Toccoa Clinic Medical Assocs., 253 Ga. 322, 320 S.E.2d 170 (1984).

B. Ancillary to Contract of Employment

Reasonableness of restraint a question of law. — Whether the restraints imposed by an employment contract are reasonable under paragraph (c) is a question of law for determination by the court. Orkin Exterminating Co. v. Pelfrey, 237 Ga. 284, 227 S.E.2d 251 (1976); McNease v. National Motor Club of Am., Inc., 238 Ga. 53, 231 S.E.2d 58 (1976); Koger Properties, Inc. v. Adams-Cates Co., 247 Ga. 68, 274 S.E.2d 329 (1981) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Public policy generally disfavors such covenants. — Covenants not to compete ancillary to employment contracts must be scrutinized in terms of the public policy generally disfavoring such contracts as restraints on trade and competition. Preferred Risk Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 233 Ga. 423, 211 S.E.2d 720 (1975).

Covenant valid. — Restrictive covenant in employment contract between defendant broadcasting corporation and plaintiff meteorologist/television personality which prohibited competition "on air" in the Atlanta market for a period of six months after termination of employment was valid. Beckman v. Cox Broadcasting Corp., 250 Ga. 127, 296 S.E.2d 566 (1982).

Trial court erred in striking down non-solicitation of customer covenants in an employment contract between former employees and their employer, as the restrictive covenants were reasonable, limited in scope, and not against public policy under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V(c) and O.C.G.A. § 13-8-2; the covenants only included current, existing clients and not former customers of the employer, the employees were only prohibited from soliciting the current customers that they had served during their employment, and they were only prohibited from selling them insurance or employee benefit plans that were offered by the employer during their employment. Palmer & Cay of Ga., Inc. v. Lockton Cos., Inc., 284 Ga. App. 196, 643 S.E.2d 746 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 503 (Ga. 2007).

Covenant valid if not against public interest and not unnecessarily injurious to obligor. — So long as a noncompetition provision in an employment contract does not adversely affect the interest of the public or injure the obligor beyond what is necessary to protect the legitimate rights of the obligees, it is valid. Griffin v. Vandegriff, 205 Ga. 288, 53 S.E.2d 345 (1949), commented on in 11 Ga. B.J. 491 (1949); Wulforst v. Hudgins & Co., 231 Ga. 170, 200 S.E.2d 743 (1973).

Non-competition and non-solicitation covenants were reasonable and enforceable where they were of a two-year duration, were limited to a seven-county territorial area, and where prohibiting the professional activity of accounting and the solicitation of clients pursuant to the covenant in light of the firm's need to protect its investment in defendant's skills. Habif, Arogeti & Wynne v. Baggett, 231 Ga. App. 289, 498 S.E.2d 346 (1998).

Covenants against competition must be limited in time and territorial effect. — A restrictive covenant in a contract of employment whereby a person agrees not to engage in an occupational activity of a particular kind which is reasonably limited as to time and territory is valid and enforceable so long as it is not unreasonable in other respects. Baxley v. Black, 224 Ga. 456, 162 S.E.2d 389 (1968).

Covenants against competition contained in employment contracts are considered in partial restraint of trade and are to be tolerated only if strictly limited in time and territorial effect and otherwise reasonable considering the business interest of the employer sought to be protected and the effect on the employee. Purcell v. Joyner, 231 Ga. 85, 200 S.E.2d 363 (1973); Preferred Risk Mut. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 233 Ga. 423, 211 S.E.2d 720 (1975); Orkin Exterminating Co. v. Pelfrey, 237 Ga. 284, 227 S.E.2d 251 (1976); McNease v. National Motor Club of Am., Inc., 238 Ga. 53, 231 S.E.2d 58 (1976); Fuller v. Kolb, 238 Ga. 602, 234 S.E.2d 517 (1977); Howard Schultz & Assocs. v. Broniec, 239 Ga. 181, 236 S.E.2d 265 (1977); Uni-Worth Enters., Inc. v. Wilson, 244 Ga. 636, 261 S.E.2d 572 (1979); Koger Properties, Inc. v. Adams-Cates Co., 247 Ga. 68, 274 S.E.2d 329 (1981); Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith v. Stidham, 506 F. Supp. 1182 (M.D. Ga.), aff'd in part, vacated in part on other grounds, 658 F.2d 1098 (5th Cir. 1981); Adcock v. Speir Ins. Agency, Inc., 158 Ga. App. 317, 279 S.E.2d 759 (1981); Barnes Group, Inc. v. Harper, 653 F.2d 175 (5th Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 455 U.S. 921, 102 S. Ct. 1278, 71 L. Ed. 2d 462 (1982).

A contract which includes a noncompetition agreement must specify a time that is reasonable and a territory that is reasonable for the protection of the employer's legitimate business interests in order to be enforced. Wulforst v. Hudgins & Co., 231 Ga. 170, 200 S.E.2d 743 (1973).

A restriction against doing business with any actual or potential customers of the employer located in a specific geographical area in which the employee had not actually done business is overbroad and unreasonable. Hulcher Servs. v. R.J. Corman R.R. Co. L.L.C., 247 Ga. App. 486, 543 S.E.2d 461 (2000).

Restrictive covenant must be reasonably necessary to protect interest of the party in whose favor it is imposed. Baxley v. Black, 224 Ga. 456, 162 S.E.2d 389 (1968).

Restrictions which place greater limitations than are necessary to protect employer render contract void and unenforceable. Watkins v. Avnet, Inc., 122 Ga. App. 474, 177 S.E.2d 582 (1970).

Language which restricts former employees from activities in a much more limited fashion than is necessary for the protection of the employer will not withstand the reasonableness test so as to uphold the covenant. Puritan/Churchill Chem. Co. v. Eubank, 245 Ga. 334, 265 S.E.2d 16 (1980).

Three elements are essential in determining reasonableness. — These three elements may be categorized as: (1) the restraint in the activity of the employee, or former employee, imposed by the contract; (2) the territorial or geographical restraint; and (3) the length of time during which the covenant seeks to impose the restraint. Britt v. Davis, 239 Ga. 747, 238 S.E.2d 881 (1977).

Covenant supported by sufficient consideration and rendered definite by performance valid. — Where a restrictive clause in a contract of employment was supported by sufficient consideration in the form of mutual promises and had been rendered definite by performance of the main contract, and was reasonable as to time and area, it was not void under this paragraph or former Code 1933, § 20-504 (see now O.C.G.A. § 13-8-2). Griffin v. Vandegriff, 205 Ga. 288, 53 S.E.2d 345 (1949), commented on in 11 Ga. B.J. 491 (1949) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Contracts to DefeatCompetition (Cont'd)2. Covenants Not to Compete (Cont'd)B. Ancillary to Contract of Employment (Cont'd)

"Blue-pencil theory of severability" rejected. — The court will not sever or "blue pencil" a covenant not to compete ancillary to an employment contract so as to remove the offending restraint of trade provision and give effect to the remaining portions of the contract. Interstate Transp., Inc. v. Syfan, 154 Ga. App. 413, 268 S.E.2d 751 (1980).

Generally, territorial restrictions which relate to territory in which employee was employed will be enforced. Adcock v. Speir Ins. Agency, Inc., 158 Ga. App. 317, 279 S.E.2d 759 (1981).

Employee must be able to forecast territorial extent of duty. — A contractual provision which prohibits an employee upon termination of employment from entering into any competitive activity within a 50-mile radius of where the employer is operating is overly broad and unreasonable because of the employee's inability to forecast with certainty the territorial extent of the duty owed the former employer. Durham v. Stand-By Labor of Ga., Inc., 230 Ga. 558, 198 S.E.2d 145 (1973), commented on in 8 Ga. L. Rev. 526 (1974).

Where the employee is unable to forecast with certainty the territorial extent of the duty owed the former employer, the contract is void for indefiniteness. Britt v. Davis, 239 Ga. 747, 238 S.E.2d 881 (1977).

A territorial restriction in a covenant not to compete which cannot be determined until the date of the employee's termination is too indefinite to be enforced. Koger Properties, Inc. v.

Adams-Cates Co., 247 Ga. 68, 274 S.E.2d 329 (1981).

Restriction relating to entire business territory of employer generally unenforceable. — A territorial restriction which relates to the territory in which an employer does business (as opposed to the territory serviced by the employee) is generally unenforceable unless an employer shows a legitimate business interest to be protected. Koger Properties, Inc. v. Adams-Cates Co., 247 Ga. 68, 274 S.E.2d 329 (1981); Adcock v. Speir Ins. Agency, Inc., 158 Ga. App. 317, 279 S.E.2d 759 (1981).

Insofar as territorial restrictions are concerned, some of them relate to the territory in which the employee was employed; others relate to the territory in which the employer does business. The former generally will be enforced while the latter generally are unenforceable absent a showing by the employer of the legitimate business interests sought to be protected. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith v. Stidham, 506 F. Supp. 1182 (M.D. Ga. 1981), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 658 F.2d 1098 (5th Cir. 1981).

Covenant related to territory where employer does business where only justification is that employer wants to avoid competition by employee in that area is not prima facie valid. Adcock v. Speir Ins. Agency, Inc., 158 Ga. App. 317, 279 S.E.2d 759 (1981).

Provisions which allow employer to assign employee to new territory, with restrictive covenants following the employee wherever the employee might be assigned, are too indefinite to be enforced. McNease v. National Motor Club of Am., Inc., 238 Ga. 53, 231 S.E.2d 58 (1976).

Contract embracing too much territory not enforceable in smaller area.

— A contract enumerating numerous territories which are not necessary for the protection of legitimate business interests of the employer is not an enforceable contract, and as a result is not enforceable in even the smallest area specified, though that smaller area would be a legitimate and enforceable restricted area standing alone. Wulffhorst v. Hudgins & Co., 231 Ga. 170, 200 S.E.2d 743 (1973).

Restrictive covenant held invalid for including too much territory. Purcell v. Joyner, 231 Ga. 85, 200 S.E.2d 363 (1973).

Three year and world-wide restrictions unenforceable. — Covenant prohibiting former employee from working in any capacity in the world in the business of developing or selling electronic firearm systems for three years following the employee's termination was overbroad in terms of territorial coverage. Firearms Training Sys. v. Sharp, 213 Ga. App. 566, 445 S.E.2d 538 (1994).

Absence of geographical limitation. — A nonsolicitation clause in an employment contract prohibiting solicitation of the employer's clients that the employee actually contacted while serving the employer is enforceable notwithstanding the absence of explicit geographical limitation. W.R. Grace & Co. v. Mouyal, 262 Ga. 464, 422 S.E.2d 529 (1992).

Effect of prohibition against entering into same or similar business. — A contract not to enter into a certain business or the same kind or similar business is unambiguous and excludes on the part of one who makes such a covenant any participation or sharing or taking a part in the aid of such sales. Farmer v. Airco, Inc., 231 Ga. 847, 204 S.E.2d 580 (1974).

Agreement is enforceable which prohibits employee from pirating the former employer's customers served by the employee, during the employment, at the employer's direct or indirect expense. Adcock v. Speir Ins. Agency, Inc., 158 Ga. App. 317, 279 S.E.2d 759 (1981).

Overbroad and unreasonable covenant unenforceable. — A post-employment restriction in a covenant not to compete was overbroad, unreasonable, and unenforceable where it prohibited a former employee from performing services not only for former customers of the employer with whom the employee had personal contact, but also for anyone in protected areas, and which prohibited the employee from accepting business from former customers of the employer, regardless of who initiated the contact. AmeriGas Propane, L.P. v. T-Bo Propane, Inc., 972 F. Supp. 685 (S.D. Ga. 1997).

A covenant not to compete in an employment contract that was overbroad as to its territorial coverage and the scope of activity prohibited was unenforceable. Harville v. Gunter, 230 Ga. App. 198, 495 S.E.2d 862 (1998).

Agreement prohibiting a physician from practicing within a 20-mile radius of any of the employer's medical centers for two years from termination, even centers where the physician never worked and those opened during the physician's tenure, was overly broad and not enforceable. Davis v. Albany Area Primary Health Care, Inc., 233 Ga. App. 311, 503 S.E.2d 909 (1998).

Trial court erred by not determining, as a matter of law, whether noncompete agreements were enforceable; because the agreements contained neither specific territorial limits nor limited their restrictions to customers with whom the former employees had contacts during their employment, the restrictions were unreasonable, overbroad, and unenforceable. Fellows v. All Star, Inc., 272 Ga. App. 262, 612 S.E.2d 86 (2005).

Employment contract which contained noncompete and nonsolicitation clauses was deemed unenforceable, pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V(c) and O.C.G.A. § 13-8-2, because the noncompete clause was overly broad in that it attempted to preclude the former employee not only from performing painting services for prior clients, but also from acting as a sales person in the decorative or faux painting business; there was no evidence that the employer had employed "sales persons" or that the employee had ever acted in that capacity on behalf of the employer, and summary judgment to the employee was proper. Whimsical Expressions, Inc. v. Brown, 275 Ga. App. 420, 620 S.E.2d 635 (2005).

A noncompetition agreement that provided that an employee of a drug and alcohol testing service would not compete with the employer "in any area of business" of the employer's, including solicitation of existing accounts, was unreasonable as overly broad and indefinite; when read as a whole, the noncompetition agreement was plainly intended to prevent any type of competing activity whatsoever, with the reference to solicitation merely being illustrative of one type of prohibited activity. Stultz v. Safety &

Contracts to DefeatCompetition (Cont'd)2. Covenants Not to Compete (Cont'd)B. Ancillary to Contract of Employment (Cont'd)

Compliance Mgmt., 285 Ga. App. 799, 648 S.E.2d 129 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 812 (Ga. 2007).

A non-compete clause in a Software Agreement between an employer and employee was unenforceable as a restraint of trade under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V(c), because it was unlimited as to time and territory. However, under O.C.G.A. § 10-1-762(d), the employee was prohibited from using a software version that incorporated the employer's trade secrets and confidential information, regardless of the non-compete clause. Coleman v. Retina Consultants, P.C., 286 Ga. 317, 687 S.E.2d 457 (2009).

Covenant attempting to prohibit all activities of employee in connection with another real estate business is overly broad, in excess of any legitimate protection necessary for the employer, and unreasonable. C.V. Mosley Constr. Co. v. McCuin, 238 Ga. 503, 233 S.E.2d 763 (1977).

Covenant not to compete was overbroad in territory and scope. — The restrictive covenant not to compete contained in former employee's employment agreement with plaintiff-company was overbroad as to territory and scope of activities where it included all of Georgia and Florida and was not tailored to the job the employee performed for the company, but instead, prohibited the employee from being connected in any way with a similar business. Ceramic & Metal Coatings Corp. v. Hizer, 242 Ga. App. 391, 529 S.E.2d 160 (2000).

Covenant wherein employee agrees not to accept employment with competitor "in any capacity" imposes greater limitation upon employee than is necessary for the protection of the employer and, therefore, is unenforceable. Uni-Worth Enters., Inc. v. Wilson, 244 Ga. 636, 261 S.E.2d 572 (1979).

Covenant unenforceable when it prohibits competition with any services or products of employer. —

Where each of the four subparagraphs of the restrictive covenant in this case prohibits the employee from doing certain enumerated acts "competitive with any services or products offered or possessed by employer," the entire restrictive covenant is too indefinite to be enforced. Uni-Worth Enters., Inc. v. Wilson, 244 Ga. 636, 261 S.E.2d 572 (1979).

Mere agreement in covenant of areas of employer's business insufficient to enforce contract. — A post-employment covenant containing an agreement between the parties that the employer is doing business in a specified area is not enough, standing alone, to warrant enforcement of the covenant. Wulffhorst v. Hudgins & Co., 231 Ga. 170, 200 S.E.2d 743 (1973).

Injunction enforcing restrictive covenants against employee amounted to wrongful restraint. — Injunction enforcing restrictive covenants against the employee amounted to a wrongful restraint under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V(c) since the non-disclosure provisions in the form and the agreement were unenforceable on their face because the provisions were not limited in time, and Georgia law was clear that, if one covenant in an agreement subject to strict scrutiny was unenforceable, then the other covenants were all unenforceable. Therefore, the appellate court remanded the case for a determination of the amount of actual damages, if any, suffered by the employee during the period of the injunction's enforcement. Cox v. Altus Healthcare & Hospice, Inc., 308 Ga. App. 28, 706 S.E.2d 660 (2011).

C. Ancillary to Sale of Business

Given broader latitude than covenants ancillary to employment contracts. — Covenants not to compete incorporated in agreements for the sale of a business or its assets have been given greater latitude and broadness in their interpretation and enforcement than those noncompetition covenants ancillary to contracts of employment. Farmer v. Airco, Inc., 231 Ga. 847, 204 S.E.2d 580 (1974).

Reasonable time limitation not applicable. — A contract in the sale of properties and good will of a business not to engage in such a business within a reasonable space of territory need not be limited as to time in order to be a valid and binding contract. Watkins v. Avnet, Inc., 122 Ga. App. 474, 177 S.E.2d 582 (1970); Farmer v. Airco, Inc., 231 Ga. 847, 204 S.E.2d 580 (1974).

Contract can extend to all territory covered by business. — A contract which affords a fair protection to the party in whose favor it is made and is not injurious to the public may extend to all the territory covered by the business, the good will of which has been sold. Farmer v. Airco, Inc., 231 Ga. 847, 204 S.E.2d 580 (1974).

Duty not to compete for customers is reasonable and definite where it extends only to those customers existing at time of the sale as shown by the seller's accounts receivable. Farmer v. Airco, Inc., 231 Ga. 847, 204 S.E.2d 580 (1974).

Sale of franchise. — A noncompetition covenant in a franchise contract which purported to be effective for one year after the franchise was terminated was void as overbroad. Allen v. Hub Cap Heaven, Inc., 225 Ga. App. 533, 484 S.E.2d 259 (1997).

D. Covenants Not to Disclose Trade Secrets

Factors in determining reasonableness. — In determining whether a covenant not to disclose is reasonable, two factors are important: (1) is the information confidential and related to the business; and (2) is the restraint reasonably related to the protection of such information? Water Servs., Inc. v. Tesco Chems., 410 F.2d 163 (5th Cir. 1969), commented on in 4 Ga. L. Rev. 541 (1970).

Nondisclosure covenants bear no relation to territorial limitations. — Covenants not to disclose and utilize confidential business information are related to general covenants not to compete because of the similar employer interest in maintaining competitive advantage. Unlike general noncompetition provisions, however, specific nondisclosure covenants bear no relation to territorial limitations and their reasonableness turns on factors of time and the nature of the business interest sought to be protected. Durham v. Stand-By Labor of Ga., Inc., 230 Ga. 558, 198 S.E.2d 145 (1973), commented on in 8 Ga. L. Rev. 526 (1974).

Nondisclosure covenants are separately enforceable. — Although noncompetition covenants in employment contracts may not be enforceable, nondisclosure clauses in the same contract can be separately enforced under a reasonableness test. Nolan v. Meyners-Robinson Co., 246 Ga. 49, 268 S.E.2d 656 (1980).

Covenant overbroad when reaches beyond trade secrets. — Restricting an employee from utilizing the experience gained and using information not designated as trade secrets and attempting to extend the restriction beyond the employer's business in perpetuity to that of its clients, customers, consultants, licensees, or affiliates without geographic restriction reaches beyond the scope permitted in terms of time, territory, and activities protected. Thomas v. Best Mfg. Corp., 234 Ga. 787, 218 S.E.2d 68 (1975).

Noncompetition agreement alone not personal service contract. — While a noncompetition agreement joined with affirmative promises is a personal services contract which terminates upon the death of the promisor, a noncompetition agreement standing alone, with no affirmative promises, is not. Mail & Media, Inc. v. Rotenberry, 213 Ga. App. 826, 446 S.E.2d 517 (1994).

3. Specific Cases

General Assembly is free to restrict competition among public utilities where, in the judgment of the legislature or its duly authorized delegate, such competition may be injurious to existing public service. City of Calhoun v. North Ga. Elec. Membership Corp., 233 Ga. 759, 213 S.E.2d 596 (1975); Thompson v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 238 Ga. 19, 231 S.E.2d 720 (1976).

Superior court has no jurisdiction to make or regulate price of a commodity made and sold in this state by a manufacturing corporation. Southern Ice & Coal Co. v. Atlantic Ice & Coal Corp., 143 Ga. 810, 85 S.E. 1021 (1915).

Sections of Franchise Practices Act unconstitutional. — Code 1933,

Contracts to DefeatCompetition (Cont'd)3. Specific Cases (Cont'd)

§§ 84-6603(s) and 84-6610(a)(4) of the Franchise Practices Act (Ga. L. 1976, p. 1440) are unconstitutional, null and void because their purpose is to enable franchised dealers of motor vehicles to establish a monopoly in violation of paragraph (c). Georgia Franchise Practices Comm'n v. Massey-Ferguson, Inc., 244 Ga. 800, 262 S.E.2d 106 (1979) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Exclusive privilege to Municipal Electric Authority. — Right granted by Ga. L. 1975, p. 107, § 17 (see now O.C.G.A. § 46-3-129) to political subdivisions to give exclusive privilege or monopoly to Municipal Electric Authority does not violate paragraph (c). Thompson v. Municipal Elec. Auth., 238 Ga. 19, 231 S.E.2d 720 (1976) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Paragraph (c) not violated by purchase of stock of insurance company by securities company. Clarke v. Central R.R. & Banking Co., 50 F. 338 (S.D. Ga. 1892); Winter v. Southern Sec. Co., 155 Ga. 590, 118 S.E. 214 (1923) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Purchase of controlling stock to create illegal consolidation is prohibited. Clarke v. Central R.R. & Banking Co., 50 F. 338 (S.D. Ga. 1892).

Mere issuance of bonds contrary to bylaws may not violate paragraph (c). Georgia G.R.R. v. Miller, 144 Ga. 665, 87 S.E. 897 (1916) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Paragraph (c) applies to street railways. Trust Co. v. State, 109 Ga. 736, 35 S.E. 323 (1900) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Granting of concessions by carrier not necessarily unconstitutional. — Paragraph (c) does not deny a carrier the right to grant concessions to some patrons if no public duty is involved. Kates v. Atlanta Baggage & Cab Co., 107 Ga. 636, 34 S.E. 372 (1899); Atlanta Term. Co. v. American Baggage & Transp. Co., 125 Ga. 677, 54 S.E. 711 (1906); Hart v. Atlanta Term. Co., 128 Ga. 754, 58 S.E. 452 (1907) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Contract binding only one party violates paragraph. —

Where a contract prohibits B from selling 12 colors of its product at all except to A, yet A has no requirements to make any purchases at all, admitting of no exceptions, the contract is a clear violation of paragraph (c) and O.C.G.A. § 13-8-2. Wedgewood Carpet Mills, Inc. v. Color-Set, Inc., 149 Ga. App. 417, 254 S.E.2d 421 (1979) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Contract preventing incurrence of additional debt not illegal. —

Contract provision which prohibits the borrower from incurring additional debt for business operations without the consent of the lender while the loan is still unpaid is not an unreasonable restraint on trade because it protects the legitimate rights of the lender by promoting the solvency of the borrower. Interstate Sec. Police, Inc. v. Citizens & S. Emory Bank, 237 Ga. 37, 226 S.E.2d 583 (1976).

Water power contract may be assigned. Columbus R.R. v. City Mills Co., 135 Ga. 626, 70 S.E. 242 (1911).

Contract to sell official Code does not violate paragraph. —

Contract which grants to publishing company "the exclusive right to distribute and sell sets and volumes of the 'Official Code of Georgia Annotated,'" the copyright for which will be in the name of the state, does not prevent other companies from publishing a competitive product and therefore does not violate the constitutional prohibition against a monopoly. Harrison Co. v. Code Revision Comm'n, 244 Ga. 325, 260 S.E.2d 30 (1979).

State's purchase of Code from publishing company as provided for in contract does not tend to create monopoly merely because it gives publishing company a subsidy and a substantial competitive advantage, within paragraph (c). Harrison Co. v. Code Revision Comm'n, 244 Ga. 325, 260 S.E.2d 30 (1979) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Rental of space in state-owned exhibition center. —

The decision of the George L. Smith II Georgia World Congress Center Authority, which operated a state-owned exhibition center, not to rent space to a promoter for a proposed fall home show but to rent instead to a competitor to hold its own fall home show did not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V. Exposition Enters., Inc. v. George L. Smith II Ga. World Congress Ctr. Auth., 177 Ga. App. 211, 338 S.E.2d 726 (1985).

Contracts in partial restraint of trade. — Former O.C.G.A. § 13-8-2.1 (contracts in partial restraint of trade) was beyond the power of the General Assembly, and was unlawful and void, inasmuch as it authorizes contracts and agreements which may have the effect of or which were intended to have the effect of defeating or lessening competition or encouraging monopoly. Jackson & Coker, Inc. v. Hart, 261 Ga. 371, 405 S.E.2d 253 (1991).

Covenant prohibiting former employee from accepting unsolicited former clients. — Covenant not to solicit was unenforceable where it prohibited former insurance representative from accepting applications for insurance from employer's policyholders who wished to transfer to the new company without any solicitation on the representative's part. American Gen. Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 208 Ga. App. 282, 430 S.E.2d 166 (1993).

Covenant prohibiting supervisory work. — Covenant was overbroad because it did not permit employee to "assist, aid or abet" others, which, in effect, prohibited employee from working as a supervisor or in other capacities. American Gen. Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 208 Ga. App. 282, 430 S.E.2d 166 (1993).

Restrain trade of alcoholic beverages. — State revenue department's regulation regarding distribution of malt beverages in Georgia did not violate the provision of the Georgia Constitution that prohibited the General Assembly from creating a monopoly in a business by passing laws that appeared to restrain trade because the authority to sell alcoholic beverages was a privilege and not a right; as a result, a monopoly in such a business created by the General Assembly, by engaging in the traffic upon a body corporate, was not violative of the Georgia Constitution. Ga. Oilmen's Ass'n v. Ga. Dep't of Revenue, 261 Ga. App. 393, 582 S.E.2d 549 (2003).

4. Practice and Pleading

Injunction as remedy. — The remedy for a breach of paragraph (c) may be injunction, and it is not always necessary to forfeit the charter. Trust Co. v. State, 109 Ga. 736, 35 S.E. 323, 48 L.R.A. 520 (1900) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Private citizen cannot question illegal purchase of stock. Brown v. Atlanta Ry. & Power Co., 113 Ga. 462, 39 S.E. 71 (1901); Cox v. Hardee, 135 Ga. 80, 68 S.E. 932 (1910).

Private citizen cannot bring suit to enjoin contract in restraint of trade.

— At common law, contracts in restraint of trade were unenforceable, just as they are unenforceable under paragraph (c); but a mere member of the public cannot bring a suit to enjoin it. Palmer v. Atlantic Ice & Coal Corp., 178 Ga. 405, 173 S.E. 424 (1934) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Bondholders have no standing to attack illegal contract. — The state, the stockholders, and the parties alone can attack a contract as being ultra vires or in restraint of trade; bondholders cannot do so. Palmer v. Atlantic Ice & Coal Corp., 178 Ga. 405, 173 S.E. 424 (1934).

Who may bring action against railroad company. — If a railroad company violates its public duty to the injury of the traveling public, an action for damages will lie by a proper party plaintiff so injured, or remedy may be had by injunction or mandamus in a proper case; or probably the Attorney General might proceed on behalf of the public. Palmer v. Atlantic Ice & Coal Corp., 178 Ga. 405, 173 S.E. 424 (1934).

Removal of case. — A case may be removed to federal court where a domestic corporation violated paragraph (c) by purchasing stock in a foreign corporation. South Carolina v. Port Royal & Augusta Ry., 56 F. 333 (D.S.C. 1893) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Ruling in interlocutory order a finding of law. — Where court rules that a restrictive covenant is illegal and unenforceable, a court makes a determination of a legal question, not an adjudication of contested facts. Uni-Worth Enters., Inc. v.

Contracts to DefeatCompetition (Cont'd)4. Practice and Pleading (Cont'd)

Wilson, 244 Ga. 636, 261 S.E.2d 572 (1979).

Regulation of Public Utilities1. In General*Prohibition against fixing municipal utility rates does not affect broader powers of General Assembly.

— The provision of paragraph (d) which prohibits the General Assembly from regulating or fixing the charges of municipally owned or operated public utilities does not deal with every aspect of the General Assembly's broad, inherent powers over both public utilities and municipal corporations. City of Calhoun v. North Ga. Elec. Membership Corp., 233 Ga. 759, 213 S.E.2d 596 (1975) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Term "regulate or fix" refers to dollar amount to be charged electric customers. City of Calhoun v. North Ga. Elec. Membership Corp., 233 Ga. 759, 213 S.E.2d 596 (1975).

2. Decisions Under Prior Law

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. IX and antecedent provisions, describing with specificity the power of the state to regulate public utilities, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

General Assembly possesses inherent power to regulate public utilities, independent of this paragraph. Georgia Power Co. v. Allied Chem. Corp., 233 Ga. 558, 212 S.E.2d 628 (1975) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Paragraph not intended to limit powers. — Independently of this paragraph, the General Assembly possesses the inherent power to regulate public utilities. The conference upon the General Assembly of the powers stated in this paragraph was not intended to limit its powers to those expressed in this paragraph. Atlanta Term. Co. v. Georgia Pub.

Serv. Comm'n, 163 Ga. 897, 137 S.E. 556 (1927) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

This paragraph is not construed to restrict powers of General Assembly over public utilities and municipal corporations unless it is clearly and indisputably shown that the legislation in question is intended as a restriction regulating or fixing charges. City of Calhoun v. North Ga. Elec. Membership Corp., 233 Ga. 759, 213 S.E.2d 596 (1975) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Power to regulate electric light company. — The Railroad Commission (now Public Service Commission) has power to prescribe schedules of just and reasonable rates of charges for services by electric light and power companies. City of Atlanta v. Georgia Ry. & Power Co., 149 Ga. 411, 100 S.E. 442 (1919).

Right to and standard for judicial review of utility rates are not found in this paragraph. Georgia Power Co. v. Allied Chem. Corp., 233 Ga. 558, 212 S.E.2d 628 (1975) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Mandatory form of this paragraph is intentional. Southern Ry. v. Melton, 133 Ga. 277, 65 S.E. 665 (1909) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Creation of Public Service Commission object of paragraph. — The object of this paragraph was attained by creation of the Public Service Commission and conferring of powers thereon. Tilley v. Savannah, Fla. & W. R.R., 5 F. 641 (S.D. Ga. 1881); Georgia R.R. v. Smith, 70 Ga. 694 (1883) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Public Service Commission has power to regulate rates and practices of public utilities. Gas Light Co. v. Georgia Power Co., 440 F.2d 1135 (5th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1062, 92 S. Ct. 732, 30 L. Ed. 2d 750 (1972).

Commission jurisdiction ousted by contract. — The jurisdiction of the commission was ousted by a contract between a city and street railway providing for transfers upon payment of a full fare. Georgia Ry. & Power Co. v. Railroad Comm'n, 149 Ga. 1, 98 S.E. 696 (1919).

Reasonableness of rates is judicial question. Richmond & Danville R.R. v.

Trammel, 53 F. 196 (N.D. Ga. 1892).

Industrial and economic facts are considered in rate fixing. Southern Ry. v. Atlanta Stove Works, 128 Ga. 207, 57 S.E. 429 (1907); Hill v. Wadley S. Ry., 128 Ga. 705, 57 S.E. 795 (1907).

Single continuous rate over separate lines void. Georgia S. & Fla. Ry. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 289 F. 878 (N.D. Ga. 1923).

Rate fixing contracts between shippers and carriers void. Wight v. Pelham & Havana R.R., 18 Ga. App. 195, 89 S.E. 176 (1916).

Group of railroad companies may refuse to renew lease of part of terminal property constructed for the purpose of encouraging traffic. Williams-Thompson Co. v. Louisville & Nashville R.R., 159 Ga. 793, 126 S.E. 833 (1925).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Paragraph based on common law. — Paragraph (c) was an embodiment of the common-law rule which prohibited contracts in general restraint of trade, and thus it had the same meaning as former Code 1933, § 20-504 (see now O.C.G.A. § 13-8-2) which states that contracts in general restraint of trade cannot be enforced. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 429 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. V).

Applicability to public service corporations. — The principle that contracts even in partial restraint of trade are void if contrary to the interest of the public is applicable to public service corporations. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 429.

Jurisdiction of Public Service Commission. — The Public Service Commission maintains its jurisdiction over the services and property of that portion of a municipally-owned, revenue bond-financed natural gas distribution system which has been extended beyond the boundaries of the county in which the municipality is located even if the revenue bonds have been paid off by the municipality. 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 85-39.

The Public Service Commission has no jurisdiction over the services and property of a natural gas distribution system owned and operated by and within a municipality. 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 85-39.

The Public Service Commission has no jurisdiction over master-metered customers so long as the activities of the customers do not constitute furnishing service to the public. 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 85-39.

Validity of partial restraints of trade. — While contracts in general restraint of trade are void, contracts in partial restraint of trade are valid if they are reasonable and not injurious to the public interest. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 429.

Paragraph (c) applies to governmental departments. — The phrase, "General Assembly of this State shall have no power to authorize any such contract or agreement" means that governmental departments receiving their power from the General Assembly shall likewise have no such power. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-2 (decided under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. VIII).

Reservation of state jobs for bid by designated contractors. — Program whereby certain state jobs or parts of state jobs would be reserved to be bid upon exclusively by designated class of contractors would tend to defeat or lessen competition and any contract entered into pursuant to such a program would be null and void. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-2.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 54 Am. Jur. 2d, Monopolies, Restraints of Trade, and Unfair Trade Practices, § 443 et seq. 64 Am. Jur. 2d, Public Utilities, § 67 et seq.

C.J.S. — 58 C.J.S., Monopolies, § 66 et seq. 73B C.J.S., Public Utilities, § 18 et seq. 74 C.J.S., Railroads, § 85 et seq.

ALR. — Federal control of public utilities, 8 ALR 969; 10 ALR 956; 11 ALR 1450; 14 ALR 234; 19 ALR 678; 52 ALR 296.

Power of state to change private contract rates for public utilities, 9 ALR 1423.

Constitutionality of statute or ordinance authorizing use of public funds, credit, or power of taxation for restoration or repair of privately owned public utility, 13 ALR 313.

Special services or facilities afforded by shipper as a factor in carrier's rates, 25 ALR 191.

Right to cut off water supply because of nonpayment of water bill or charges for connections, etc., 28 ALR 472.

Right of manufacturer, producer, or wholesaler to control resale price, 32 ALR 1087; 103 ALR 1331; 125 ALR 1335.

Validity, construction, and effect of provisions for the appropriation of excess income of public utility, 33 ALR 488.

Regulation of food service in connection with passenger transportation, 36 ALR 1451.

Discrimination by carrier between shippers as to use of right of way or wharf, 44 ALR 1526.

Discrimination in the operation of a municipal utility, 50 ALR 126.

Application of anti-trust laws to combinations to maintain prices of commodities as affected by reasonableness of prices fixed, 50 ALR 1000.

Power of state to amend charter of a private incorporated charity, 62 ALR 573.

Power of state or municipality to fix minimum public utility rates, 68 ALR 1002.

Validity of stipulation in contract of employment against connection with labor union or employers' association, and power of Legislature to prohibit such contract, 68 ALR 1267.

Removal or attempted removal of one from field of competition by inducing him to enter another's employment as violation of anti-monopoly Act, 74 ALR 289.

Power of state or public service commission to regulate rates of municipally owned or operated public utility, 76 ALR 851; 127 ALR 94.

Sale of business and "good will," or of interest in partnership and "good will," as implying restriction against competition in absence of provision in that regard, 82 ALR 1030.

Construction of contract or regulations regarding time of payment for public utility service, 97 ALR 982.

Power of corporation to amend its charter in respect of character or kind of business, 111 ALR 1525.

Right of user of public utility to discontinue use, 112 ALR 230.

Constitutionality of statute or ordinance requiring public utility to supply fixtures or accessories or incidental service to customers free of charge or for fixed charge, 115 ALR 1162.

Price fixing by Legislature or administrative body, 119 ALR 985.

Validity of covenant by employee or seller of business not to enter employment of customers, clients, or patrons of the business, 119 ALR 1452.

Constitutionality of statute fixing or regulating (or authorizing the fixing or regulating) of prices for personal services, 119 ALR 1481.

Right of public utility to make a fixed monthly service charge or a minimum monthly bill, 122 ALR 193.

Right of manufacturer, producer, or wholesaler to control resale price, 125 ALR 1335.

Constitutional and statutory provisions relating to consolidation, merger, or reorganization of corporations as applicable retrospectively to corporation previously chartered, 131 ALR 734.

Danger to person or property as affecting right of public utility to discontinue its service upon failure of consumer to comply with reasonable and valid regulations, 132 ALR 914.

Operation of negative or restrictive covenant in contract of employment for a specific period, as extended by continuance in the employment after the expiration of that period, 163 ALR 405.

Who are entitled to benefit of statutes giving right to combine, 166 ALR 161.

Discrimination between property within and that outside municipality or other governmental district as to public service or utility rates, 4 ALR2d 595.

Right of public utilities to discontinue line or branch on ground that it is unprofitable, 10 ALR2d 1121.

Right of customers of public utility with respect to fund representing a refund from another supplying utility upon reduction of latter's rates, 18 ALR2d 1343.

Variations of utility rates based on flat and meter rates, 40 ALR2d 1331.

Enforceability of covenant against competition, ancillary to sale or other transfer of business, practice, or property, as affected by duration of restriction, 45 ALR2d 77; 13 ALR4th 661.

Enforceability of covenant against competition, ancillary to sale or other transfer of business, practice, or property, as affected by territorial extent of restriction, 46 ALR2d 119; 13 ALR4th 661.

Application to banks and banking institutions of antimonopoly or antitrust laws, 83 ALR2d 374.

Validity, construction, and effect of lessor's covenant against use of his other property in competition with the lessee-covenantor, 97 ALR2d 4.

Rendering financial or other assistance to another as breach of covenant not to compete, 1 ALR3d 778.

Covenant restricting use of land, made for purpose of guarding against competition, as running with land, 25 ALR3d 897.

Employee's duty, in absence of express contract, not to disclose or use in new employment special skills or techniques acquired in earlier employment, 30 ALR3d 631.

Validity and construction of restrictive covenant not to compete ancillary to franchise agreement, 50 ALR3d 746.

Sufficiency of consideration for employee's covenant not to compete, entered into after inception of employment, 51 ALR3d 825.

Enforceability, insofar as restrictions would be unreasonable, of contract containing unreasonable restrictions on competition, 61 ALR3d 397.

Validity and construction of contractual restrictions on right of medical practitioner to practice, incident to sale of practice, 62 ALR3d 918.

Validity and construction of contractual restrictions on right of medical practitioner to practice, incident to partnership agreement, 62 ALR3d 970.

Validity and construction of contractual restrictions on right of medical practitioner to practice, incident to employment agreement, 62 ALR3d 1014.

Validity and construction of state statutes forbidding area price discrimination, 67 ALR3d 26.

Application of state antitrust laws to athletic leagues or associations, 85 ALR3d 970.

Practices forbidden by state deceptive trade practice and consumer protection Acts, 89 ALR3d 449.

Validity and construction of contractual restriction on right of accountant to practice, incident to sale of practice or withdrawal from accountancy partnership, 13 ALR4th 661.

Application of state antitrust laws to activities or practices of real-estate agents or associations, 22 ALR4th 103.

Reinstatement of repealed, forfeited, expired, or suspended corporate charter as validating interim acts of corporation, 42 ALR4th 392.

Propriety, under state law, of manufacturer's or supplier's refusal to sell medical product to individual physician, hospital, or clinic, 45 ALR4th 1006.

Paragraph VI. Gratuities.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in the Constitution, (1) the General Assembly shall not have the power to grant any donation or gratuity or to forgive any debt or obligation owing to the public, and (2) the General Assembly shall not grant or authorize extra compensation to any public officer, agent, or contractor after the service has been rendered or the contract entered into.

(b) All laws heretofore adopted under Article III, Section VIII, Paragraph XII of the Constitution of 1976 in force and effect on June 30, 1983, shall continue in force and effect and may be amended if such amendments are consistent with the authority granted to the General Assembly by such provisions of said Constitution.

(c) The General Assembly may provide by law and may expend or authorize the expenditure of public funds for a health insurance plan or program for persons and the spouses and dependent children of persons who are retired former employees of public schools or public school systems of this state.

(d) The General Assembly may provide by law for indemnification with respect to licensed emergency management rescue specialists who are or have been killed or permanently disabled in the line of duty on or after January 1, 1991, and publicly employed emergency medical technicians who are or have been killed or permanently disabled in the line of duty on or after January 1, 1987.

(e)(1) The General Assembly may provide by law for a program of indemnification with respect to the death or permanent disability of any law enforcement officer, fireman, prison guard, or publicly employed emergency medical technician who is or at any time in the past was killed or permanently disabled in the line of duty. Funds shall be appropriated as necessary for payment of such indemnification or for the purchase of insurance for such indemnification or both.

(2) The General Assembly may provide by law for a program of compensation for injuries incurred by law enforcement officers and firemen in the line of duty. A law enforcement officer who becomes physically disabled, but not permanently disabled, as a result of a physical injury incurred in the line of duty and caused by a willful act of violence and a fireman who becomes physically disabled, but not permanently disabled, as a result of a physical injury incurred in the line of duty while fighting a fire shall be entitled to receive monthly compensation from the state in an amount equal to any such person's regular compensation for the period of time that the law enforcement officer or fireman is physically unable to perform the duties of his or her employment; provided, however, that such benefits provided in this subparagraph shall not be granted for more than a total of 12 months for injuries resulting from a single incident. A law enforcement officer or fireman shall be required to submit to a state agency satisfactory evidence of such disability. Benefits made available under this subparagraph shall be subordinate to workers' compensation benefits, disability and other compensation benefits from an employer which the law enforcement officer or fireman is awarded and shall be limited to the difference between the amount of workers' compensation benefits, disability and other compensation benefits actually paid and the amount of the law enforcement officer's or fireman's regular compensation. Any law enforcement officer or fireman who receives indemnification under subparagraph (1) of this subparagraph (e) shall not be entitled to any compensation under this subparagraph.

(f) The General Assembly is authorized to provide by law for compensating innocent victims of crimes which occur on and after July 1, 1989. The General Assembly is authorized to define the types of victims eligible to receive compensation and to vary the amounts of compensation according to need. The General Assembly shall be authorized to allocate certain funds, to appropriate funds, to provide for a continuing fund, or to provide for any combination thereof for the purpose of compensating innocent victims of crime and for the administration of any laws enacted for such purpose.

(g) The General Assembly may provide by law for indemnification with respect to public school teachers, administrators, and employees who are killed or permanently disabled by an act of violence in the line of duty, a nonlapsing indemnification fund for such purposes, and dedication of revenue from special and distinctive motor vehicle license plates honoring Georgia educators to such fund.

(g) The General Assembly may provide by law for a program of indemnification with respect to the death or permanent disability of any state highway employee who is or at any time in the past was killed or permanently disabled in the line of duty. Funds shall be appropriated as necessary for payment of such indemnification or for the purchase of insurance for such indemnification or both. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 3, § 6, Para. 6; Ga. L. 1986, p. 1622, § 1/HR 69; Ga. L. 1986, p. 1623, § 1/HR 125; Ga. L. 1986, p. 1627, § 1/HR 644; Ga. L. 1988, p. 2096, § 1/SR 274; Ga. L. 1990, p. 2432, § 1/HR 588; Ga. L. 2000, p. 1999, § 1/SR 204; Ga. L. 2000, p. 2001, § 1/HR 971; Ga. L. 2000, p. 2007, § 1/SR 519.)

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VIII, Paras. VII, XII.

Cross references. — Reward for first oil well in state, § 12-4-20. Compensation for crime victims, § 17-14-30 et seq. Indemnification for death of publicly employed emergency services personnel and prison guards, § 45-9-80 et seq. Temporary disability compensation for officers or firefighters injured in the line of duty, § 45-9-101 et seq. Donations of books and printed materials to nonprofit organizations, § 45-13-83 et seq. Payment by Department of Industry and Trade of expenses of industrial prospects, § 50-7-15.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1986, p. 1623, § 1) which added subparagraph (c), regarding health insurance plans for retired employees of public school systems and their spouses and children, was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election on November 4, 1986.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1986, p. 1622, § 1) which added subparagraph (c), regarding indemnification of publicly employed emergency medical technicians who are or have been killed or permanently disabled in the line of duty on or after January 1, 1987, was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 4, 1986.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1986, p. 1627, § 1) which added subparagraph (c), regarding indemnification of law enforcement officers, firemen, prison guards, or publicly employed emergency medical technicians "who are or at any time in the past were killed or permanently disabled in the line of duty" was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 4, 1986.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1988, p. 2096, § 1) which added subparagraph (f), authorizing the General Assembly to provide by law for compensating innocent victims of crime, and authorizing the General Assembly to allocate funds, to appropriate funds, and to provide for a continuing fund and which redesignated the former subparagraphs (c) added by Ga. L. 1986, p. 1622, § 1 and Ga. L. 1986, p. 1627, § 1 as subparagraphs (d) and (e), respectively, was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 8, 1988.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1990, p. 2432, § 1) which inserted in subparagraph (d) "licensed emergency management rescue specialists who are or have been killed or permanently disabled in the line of duty on or after January 1, 1991, and" following "indemnification with respect to" was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 6, 1990.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 2000, p. 1999, § 1), which redesignated the existing provisions of subparagraph (e) as subparagraph (e)(1) and added subparagraph (e)(2), was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held November 7, 2000.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 2000, p. 2001, § 1), which added the first subparagraph (g), so as to provide that the General Assembly may provide by law for indemnification with respect to public school teachers, administrators, and employees who are killed or permanently disabled by an act of violence in the line of duty, a nonlapsing indemnification fund for such purposes, and dedication of revenue from special and distinctive motor vehicle license plates honoring Georgia educators to such fund, was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held November 7, 2000.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 2000, p. 2007, § 1), which added the second subparagraph (g), so as to provide that the General Assembly may provide by law for a program of indemnification with respect to the death or permanent disability of any state highway employee who is or at any time in the past was killed or permanently disabled in the line of duty, was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held November 7, 2000.

Law reviews. — For article discussing sovereign immunity and the State Court of Claims, see 14 Ga. St. B.J. 152 (1978). For article, "Public Rights in Georgia's Tidelands," see 9 Ga. L. Rev. 79 (1974). For article, "Workers' Compensation in Georgia Municipal Law," see 15 Ga. L. Rev. 57 (1980). For annual survey of constitutional law, see 40 Mercer L. Rev. 117 (1988).

For note discussing restrictions on the creation of public purpose corporations, see 8 Ga. L. Rev. 680 (1974).

For comment on Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969) as to the constitutionality of the State Bar Act (Art. 2, Ch. 19, T. 5), see 21 Mercer L. Rev. 355 (1969).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
SPECIFIC CASES
RECOGNIZANCES

General Consideration

Paragraph is applicable to cities and counties as well as to General Assembly. Grand Lodge, I.O.O.F. v. City of Thomasville, 226 Ga. 4, 172 S.E.2d 612

(1970) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

This paragraph applies to pension systems for municipal employees. Bender v. Anglin, 207 Ga. 108, 60 S.E.2d 756, cert. denied, 340 U.S. 878, 71 S. Ct.

125, 95 L. Ed. 638 (1950) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

State may be liable as joint tort-feasor. — Nothing in the Georgia Tort Claims Act contradicts the holding that the state can be liable as a joint tort-feasor, and such holding does not violate the provisions of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI. DOT v. Brown, 218 Ga. App. 178, 460 S.E.2d 812 (1995), aff'd, 267 Ga. 6, 471 S.E.2d 849 (1996).

Definitions of “pension” and “compensation.” — The words “pension” and “compensation” are not synonymous. The former is ordinarily a gratuity or bounty from the government in recognition of but not in payment for past services. Dewitt v. Richmond County, 192 Ga. 770, 16 S.E.2d 579 (1941).

Word “gratuity” as used in this paragraph is employed in its natural and ordinary meaning. McCook v. Long, 193 Ga. 299, 18 S.E.2d 488 (1942) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

No “gratuity” involved where county recovers substantial benefits in return for use of county property. Smith v. Board of Comm’rs of Rds. & Revenues, 244 Ga. 133, 259 S.E.2d 74 (1979).

Consideration paid for services not gratuity. — Consideration provided by a contract to be paid by the state for services to be performed under the terms of the contract is not a gratuity. Harrison Co. v. Code Revision Comm’n, 244 Ga. 325, 260 S.E.2d 30 (1979).

No “gratuity” where consideration provided. — Because the University of Georgia Athletic Association provides ample consideration and services for the funds that it receives, the transfer of student athletic fees collected by the university to the association is not a “gratuity” within the meaning of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI. Haggard v. Board of Regents, 257 Ga. 524, 360 S.E.2d 566 (1987).

A grant of property by a municipality for use by an organization as rescue missions did not constitute an impermissible gratuity in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI. Swanberg v. City of Tybee Island, 271 Ga. 23, 518 S.E.2d 114 (1999).

County not authorized to donate public funds to chamber of commerce, freight bureau, or convention and tourist bureau. Atlanta Chamber of Commerce v. McRae, 174 Ga. 590, 163 S.E. 701 (1931).

Cited in Morris v. Tatum, 178 Ga. 728, 174 S.E. 340 (1934); West v. Trotzier, 185 Ga. 794, 196 S.E. 902 (1938); Garr v. E.W. Banks Co., 206 Ga. 831, 59 S.E.2d 400 (1950); Cole v. Foster, 207 Ga. 416, 61 S.E.2d 814 (1950); Ford Motor Co. v. Abercrombie, 207 Ga. 464, 62 S.E.2d 209 (1950); Barge v. Camp, 209 Ga. 38, 70 S.E.2d 360 (1952); City of Atlanta v. Anglin, 209 Ga. 170, 71 S.E.2d 419 (1952); State v. State Toll Bridge Auth., 210 Ga. 690, 82 S.E.2d 626 (1954); McKelvey v. Logan, 220 Ga. 197, 137 S.E.2d 651 (1964); Trice v. Wilson, 113 Ga. App. 715, 149 S.E.2d 530 (1966); Hospital Auth. v. Stewart, 226 Ga. 530, 175 S.E.2d 857 (1970); DOT v. Hardin, 231 Ga. 359, 201 S.E.2d 441 (1973); Richmond County v. Pierce, 234 Ga. 274, 215 S.E.2d 665 (1975); Wilson v. Strange, 235 Ga. 156, 219 S.E.2d 88 (1975); Rich v. State, 237 Ga. 291, 227 S.E.2d 761 (1976); DOT v. Doss, 238 Ga. 480, 233 S.E.2d 144 (1977); Savage v. City of Atlanta, 242 Ga. 671, 251 S.E.2d 268 (1978); Kellett v. DOT, 174 Ga. App. 214, 329 S.E.2d 514 (1985); City of Lithia Springs v. Turley, 241 Ga. App. 472, 526 S.E.2d 364 (1999); Bauerband v. Jackson County, 278 Ga. 222, 598 S.E.2d 444 (2004).

Specific Cases

Paragraph violated where public street vacated for benefit of private individual. Marietta Chair Co. v. Henderson, 121 Ga. 399, 49 S.E. 312 (1904) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Resolution to refund to sureties on bond of defaulting treasurer any sum which they paid violated this paragraph. Smith v. Fuller, 135 Ga. 271, 69 S.E. 177 (1910) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Resolution relieving bondsmen of liability, and directing county to pay sureties the amounts paid by them, is invalid. Geer

Specific Cases (Cont'd)

v. Dancer, 164 Ga. 9, 137 S.E. 558 (1927) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Resolution instructing city to refund to surety amount paid on criminal bond forfeiture unconstitutional. McCook v. Long, 193 Ga. 299, 18 S.E.2d 488 (1942).

After the payment of a final judgment on a bond forfeiture and the delivery of that money to the county authorities, who maintain the courts, no resolution or Act of the legislature may legally direct a refund of such payment. Washburn v. MacNeill, 205 Ga. 772, 55 S.E.2d 135 (1949).

For decision holding that such a resolution is not unconstitutional, see Stewart v. Davis, 175 Ga. 545, 165 S.E. 598 (1932).

Paragraph not violated by grant of right of way to railroad. Georgia v. Trustees of Cincinnati S. Ry., 248 U.S. 26, 39 S. Ct. 14, 63 L. Ed. 104 (1918) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Act requiring municipal authorities to pay registration clerk in tax collector's office a certain salary does not violate this paragraph. Mayor of Savannah v. Guerard, 158 Ga. 205, 122 S.E. 691 (1924) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Workers' Compensation Act does not violate this paragraph. — The Workers' Compensation Act (Ga. L. 1920, p. 167; see O.C.G.A. Ch. 9, T. 34), providing in part that "employers" shall include any municipal corporation within the state and any political division thereof, does not violate this paragraph. City of Macon v. Benson, 175 Ga. 502, 166 S.E. 26 (1932) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Act (Ga. L. 1943, p. 401) amending the Workers' Compensation Act, so far as it provides for compensation for past accidents of employees who had been employed in a state department that has previously operated under the Workers' Compensation Act is not unconstitutional under this paragraph as being a grant of a "donation" or "gratuity." State Hwy. Dep't v. Bass, 197 Ga. 356, 29 S.E.2d 161 (1944)

(see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

State Bridge Building Authority Act does not violate this paragraph (Ga. L. 1953, p. 626, now repealed). McLucas v. State Bridge Bldg. Auth., 210 Ga. 1, 77 S.E.2d 531 (1953) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

State School Building Authority Act does not violate paragraph. — The State School Building Authority Act, Ga. L. 1951, p. 241 (see now O.C.G.A. Pt. 3, Art. 11, Ch. 2, T. 20) plainly forbids any attempt thereunder to obligate the state, pledge the state's faith or credit, or donate anything belonging to the state; therefore, neither the Act, lease contract executed thereunder, nor the revenue bonds issued pursuant thereto offend this paragraph. Sheffield v. State Sch. Bldg. Auth., 208 Ga. 575, 68 S.E.2d 590 (1952) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Payment to hospital for purposes of providing ward for care of indigent sick does not violate this paragraph. Brock v. Chappell, 196 Ga. 567, 27 S.E.2d 38 (1943) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

State Bar Act not gratuity under this Paragraph (Ga. L. 1963, p. 70; see O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 19, T. 15). Sams v. Olah, 225 Ga. 497, 169 S.E.2d 790 (1969), commented on in 21 Mercer L. Rev. 355 (1969) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Regulations permitting tree trimming on highway rights-of-way. — Regulations of the Department of Transportation permitting the trimming of trees and vegetation on highway rights-of-way in order to make advertising signs on private property more visible violated the constitutional prohibition against gratuities. Garden Club of Ga., Inc. v. Shackelford, 266 Ga. 24, 463 S.E.2d 470 (1995).

Legislative scheme in O.C.G.A. § 32-6-75.3 allowing the owners of private outdoor advertising to trim vegetation on public property blocking the view of their advertising was not an unconstitutional donation, under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI, because the legislature declared that outdoor advertising benefits the state, and private individuals were required to pay the state for the privilege of allowing the public to have an unimpeded view of their signs. Garden Club of Ga. v. Shackelford, 274 Ga. 653, 560 S.E.2d 522 (2002).

Payments from county to building authority. — Since the payments to be made by the county to the building authority under the binding agreements entered into pursuant to the County Building Authority Act, in regard to the acquisition and construction of certain county buildings, were in return for bargained-for consideration, they were not prohibited donations or gratuities. Building Auth. v. State, 253 Ga. 242, 321 S.E.2d 97 (1984).

Bond resolution did not violate the Gratuities Clause of the Georgia Constitution because the county and the airport authority did not extend a gratuity to a commercial aviation company as the county's issuance of the bond created a substantial benefit for the county, namely the presence and use of an airport which could accommodate commercial passenger flights, which directly benefited the airport authority and the county; the fact that the commercial aviation company received a secondary benefit as being the commercial airline service renting part of the terminal and landing flights on the expanded taxiway did not change that result. Avery v. State of Ga., 295 Ga. 630, 761 S.E.2d 56 (2014).

Services sufficient consideration for payments. — Intergovernmental Agreement did not violate the gratuities clause as the Cobb-Marietta Coliseum and Exhibit Hall Authority's services were sufficient consideration for the promised payments. Savage v. State of Ga., 297 Ga. 627, 774 S.E.2d 624 (2015).

Peace officer's retirement benefit which is based on service prior to the date of the retirement Act is not extra compensation after the service is rendered nor is it a gratuity in violation of subparagraphs 1 and 2. Cole v. Foster, 207 Ga. 416, 61 S.E.2d 814 (1950).

Condition on grants for road construction and maintenance. — Condition in statute authorizing grants of state funds for road construction and maintenance, that no county was eligible to receive any funds unless a tax credit was given on homesteads first and then on tangible property (exclusive of motor vehicles and trailers) in accordance with the formulas prescribed in the Act, was not a forbidden gratuity within the meaning of the Georgia Constitution. Brown v. Wright, 231 Ga. 686, 203 S.E.2d 487 (1974) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Acceptance of subdivision roads. — Because a developer expended hundreds of thousands of dollars to build the roads in question, and because the evidence, even when viewed favorably to the county, showed that the problems raised by the county concerning shoulders occur at only certain locations in the two-mile road system, the county's acceptance of the roads did not amount to an illegal gratuity. Rabun County v. Mt. Creek Estates, LLC, 280 Ga. 855, 632 S.E.2d 140 (2006).

Amendment to Homestead Option Sales and Use Tax not payment of gratuity. — Trial court did not err in holding that Ga. L. 2007, p. 598, § 1 et seq., which amended the Homestead Option Sales and Use Tax (HOST) Act, O.C.G.A. § 48-8-100 et seq., was not the payment of a gratuity in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI(a) because the equalization amount received by a city as a qualified municipality within a county special tax district clearly represented the share of homestead option sales and use tax capital outlay proceeds the legislature determined the city's residents were entitled to receive; therefore, that share was not a gift in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI(a); under the Homestead Option Sales and Use Tax Act, O.C.G.A. § 48-8-100 et seq., as amended, the city, just like the county, would act as an agent for the special tax district coterminous with the geographical boundaries of the county in expending HOST revenues for capital outlay projects that benefited the special tax district. DeKalb County v. Perdue, 286 Ga. 793, 692 S.E.2d 331 (2010).

Billboard take-down credits. — Trial court erred in holding that the take-down credits under O.C.G.A. § 32-6-75.3(j) violated the gratuities clause because, to the contrary, the Supreme Court of Georgia has found that the Georgia legislature has explicitly determined that removal of outdated signs provides a benefit to the State of Georgia and that there would be a financial benefit in allowing take-down credits. City of Columbus v. Ga. Dep't of Transp., 292 Ga. 878, 742 S.E.2d 728 (2013).

Specific Cases (Cont'd)

Recognizances

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. VII and antecedent provisions, relating to restrictions on the power of the General Assembly to relieve principals or securities upon forfeited recognizances from payment thereof, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Resolution authorizing court to refund to surety amount paid on criminal bond forfeiture unconstitutional. McCook v. Long, 193 Ga. 299, 18 S.E.2d 488 (1942).

After the payment of a final judgment on a bond forfeiture and the delivery of that money to the county authorities no resolution or Act of the legislature may legally direct a refund of such payment. Washburn v. MacNeill, 205 Ga. 772, 55 S.E.2d 135 (1949).

For decision holding that such a resolution is not unconstitutional, see Stewart v. Davis, 175 Ga. 545, 165 S.E. 598 (1932).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERALANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

DONATIONS TO ORGANIZATIONS AND INDUSTRY

SALE OF AND IMPROVEMENTS TO REAL PROPERTY

EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

PUBLIC EMPLOYEES

OTHER EXPENDITURES

General ConsiderationParagraph applies to departments.

— If the General Assembly cannot grant any donation or gratuity in favor of any person, corporation, or association, a department of the state would not be authorized to do so. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 246.

Conveyances in aid of public purposes. — Conveyance in aid of public purpose from which great benefits are expected is not within class of evils that this paragraph intended to prevent and is not within the meaning of the word "gratuity" as it naturally would be understood. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 281 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

General welfare grants not permitted. — Direct grants to private persons to induce economic activity for the general welfare are not permitted. 1998 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U98-15.

Donations by city prohibited. — A contribution by a city to a private person, corporation, or association for any purpose which is not authorized by the charter of that city or by any provision of the Constitution or general law of this state is prohibited by this paragraph. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-59 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Gratuities proscription is applicable to counties. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U80-43.

Payment of entertainment expense as gratuity. — Regional Development Centers, as public agencies and instrumentalities of the municipalities and counties in their regions, are subject to the Georgia Constitution's gratuities clause. Absent any specific authorizing statute, the payment of entertainment expenses would be unauthorized. Indeed, such an expenditure would constitute a gratuity in violation of the Georgia Constitution. 1992 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 92-1.

Journalists' use of government office space not a violation. — The gratuities clause of the Georgia Constitution is not per se violated by the free use of government office space as a news room by journalists covering state government. 1993 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U93-14.

Use of state-owned aircraft. — If the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, or Speaker of the House must travel on personal or political business, such travel must be accomplished by private means unless the commissioner of public safety has determined that travel on state aircraft is necessary for personal security; otherwise, where any public officer uses a state aircraft for a personal or political reason, the use of the aircraft is contrary to the prohibitions of the gratuities clause and state statutes authorizing the use of state aircraft, even if the official was to reimburse the state for the direct costs associated with the trip. 2004 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 04-3.

Donations to Organizations and Industry

Paragraph violated by donation to private industry. — Municipalities are not authorized to make any donations or other financial contributions to private industry. 1952-53 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 129.

Chamber of commerce. — A municipality cannot constitutionally donate tax funds to a chamber of commerce. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 499.

A development authority may not disburse funds to a chamber of commerce for general promotion and other described activities without violating Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-7.

A county development authority is not precluded by the gratuities clause of the Georgia Constitution from contracting with a chamber of commerce to encourage and promote the expansion of industry, agriculture, and trade in the county, using funds appropriated to the authority by the county board of commissioners, but such contracts must not be sham agreements, and they must result in substantial benefits to the county. 1986 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U86-28.

Donation to Southeastern Legal Foundation violated paragraph. — Funds of the Georgia Agricultural Commodity Commission may not be expended for contributions to and support of the activities of the Southeastern Legal Foundation. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-102.

Donation to Ducks Unlimited violated paragraph. — Game and Fish Commission (now Department of Natural Resources) may not make grant to Ducks Unlimited, although funds may be appropriated for the same purposes (e.g., recreation, conservation of natural resources). 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-128.

Donation to Paralympic Organizing Committee violated paragraph. — The Department of Natural Resources could not use an appropriation to pay rent and other expenses to Georgia Tech on behalf of the Paralympic Organizing Committee. 1997 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 97-6.

Furnishing of office to privately organized credit union unconstitutional. — The board of regents may not donate to a privately organized credit union any office space, supplies, or telephone services when the expenses for same are borne by appropriations of the General Assembly. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-418.

Expenditure of state funds to furnish secretarial service to nonstate agency violated this paragraph. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 43 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Disbursement of federal funds to private hospital associations violated this paragraph. — In view of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. IX, Sec. V, Para. II (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. IV), and this paragraph, the State Treasurer (now director of the Office of Treasury and Fiscal Services) and the Department of Public Health (now Department of Human Resources) are without authority to receive and disburse federal funds under the provisions of the Hill-Burton Act (60 Stat. 1040, see 42 U.S.C. §§ 291a through 291m) to private nonprofit hospital associations or corporations. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 341 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Forgiveness of loans made by the Georgia Housing and Finance Authority under the Economic Development Incentive Loan Program violates state law. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 95-22 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Donations to Organizations and Industry (Cont'd)

Indemnity and hold harmless clause violates prohibition. — An indemnity and hold harmless clause in a proposed contract, under which clause a state agency would indemnify a private corporation, constitutes both a gratuity and a pledge of the state's credit and thus falls within the prohibitions contained in this paragraph and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VII, Sec. III, Para. IV (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. IV, Para. VIII). 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-67 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

County cannot make donations to water and sewerage authority, but it can enter into contracts with such authority. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U70-225.

Former Code 1933, §§ 104-204 and 104-205 (see now O.C.G.A. § 46-5-1) did not authorize telegraph and telephone companies to utilize state-owned stream bed properties without securing prior permission and making just compensation. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-169.

Board of regents may lease lands in return for the endowment of a research chair if the endowment is equal to the fair market value of the lease and the term of the lease is reasonable. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 95-25.

Paragraph not violated by purchase of promotional trinkets. — The purchase of cuff links and the decorative attachment to the key rings designed in the shape of the State of Georgia for controlled distribution to representatives of industries which the Department of Industry and Trade is attempting to encourage to locate or expand operations in Georgia is authorized by Ga. L. 1962, p. 694, § 7 (see now O.C.G.A. § 50-7-7) and is not repugnant to this paragraph, since the elements of gratuity are merely incidental to their dominant function of advertising and promotion. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 558.

Bondsman not entitled to refund of forfeiture even after surrender of principal. — Former Code 1933, § 27-904 (see now O.C.G.A. § 17-6-31) provided for the relieving of a bondsman's liability prior to the time that the bondsman pays the forfeiture to the county, but after the payment by a bondsman to the county of a final judgment on an appearance bond forfeiture, the bondsman is not entitled to a refund of the forfeiture even though the bondsman later surrenders the principal to county authorities. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U76-28 (decided under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. VIII, Para. VII, relating to restrictions on the power of the General Assembly to relieve principals or securities on forfeited recognizances from payment thereof).

Sale of and Improvements to Real Property

In any exchange or other negotiation, the state must receive full value for any property conveyed; otherwise, there occurs a grant or gift contrary to the terms of this paragraph. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U71-17 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Hospital authority can lease unimproved land to a third party subject to the prohibition against gratuities contained in this paragraph. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-190 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Paragraph violated by use of state funds for permanent improvements to private property. — Expenditures by board of regents for improvements on real property to which board does not hold title are illegal and unconstitutional. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 588.

It is unlawful to expend state funds in order to make permanent improvements to property unless the state owns the fee interest in the property concerned or unless the improvements are of such a nature or character to be subject to either recoupment or removal by the state at the time the state's use of the property terminates. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-115.

Construction of fall-out shelters on private property violated this paragraph. — Municipal bond money cannot be legally spent on improvement of conversion of existing building located on private property for construction of public fall-out shelters. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 332.

Maintaining private driveways violates this paragraph. — State funds or county funds can only be used for valid “public purposes” which clearly does not encompass maintaining private driveways. 1963-65 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 466.

Use of convict labor on private property is permissible in situations where the sole benefit flows to state. 1969 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 69-158.

Paragraph not violated by clearing land in return for use of property. — Under Ga. L. 1956, p. 161, § 22 (see now O.C.G.A. § 42-5-60), an agreement entered into between the warden of a prison branch and a private landowner, whereby in consideration of the warden’s clearing five acres of land belonging to the landowner, the landowner will permit the prison branch to occupy the land rent free for a period of three years, is not illegal, so long as it was entered into in good faith, for the purpose of procuring the use of land for the state, rather than as a guise whereby the private landowner is enabled to receive a gratuity from the state, prohibited by this paragraph. 1958-59 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 248 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Positioning officer’s mobile home on prison property does not violate paragraph. — The use of inmate labor to position and level a correctional officer’s mobile home site on prison property is not a violation of this paragraph. 1969 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 69-418 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

When use of state labor to move fence for right of way permissible. — The State Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) can contract with a private property owner to use prison labor or state maintenance forces to remove and reset fences upon the private property which is to be used as a right of way, since the utilization of this prison labor is to the benefit of the state. However, the department cannot guarantee to a county that it will perform these acts or expend this money if a county in turn entered into such an agreement with the private landowner which guaranteed to the private landowner that the state would perform such acts. 1969 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 69-158.

Educational Institutions

This paragraph does not apply to state grants for educational purposes. 1971 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 71-147 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Grants to nonprofit educational corporation are legal where sole purpose is to carry forward a public-type undertaking previously conducted by state. 1958-59 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 281.

Junior College Act of 1958 does not violate this paragraph (Ga. L. 1958, p. 47; see O.C.G.A. Art. 4, Ch. 3, T. 20). 1963-65 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 100.

Use of federal funds in private schools approved. — So long as Title II of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (79 Stat. 27) is wholly financed by the federal government and no state matching funds are involved, the State Board of Education may lawfully administer a state plan adopted under this title of the Act even though it contemplates the providing of school library resources, textbooks, and other printed instructional materials for the use of students and teachers in private as well as public schools. 1965-66 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 65-4.

Neither the state, a county, or a city may constitutionally give or donate school property to a private individual or institution; outright sale of such school property with no strings attached is permissible. 1958-59 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 175.

While the discretionary powers of a county school board were exceedingly broad under former Code 1933, § 32-909 (see now O.C.G.A. § 20-2-520), it was quite clear that the section did not authorize a county school board to make a “gift” of school property to a citizen or group of citizens; the power of disposition was limited to the “sale” of such property. 1963-65 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 628.

Paragraph violated by use of funds for room and board and medical treatment for students. — Neither the State Board of Education nor local boards of education can lawfully use school funds for room and board (other than school lunches) or for medical (including psychiatric) treatment or services beyond such evaluation as is necessary to placement and the determination of the proper educational program for a given child. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-1.

Educational Institutions (Cont'd)

Fiscal resources of the Georgia Agricultural Commodity Commission for Milk may not be expended to fund student scholarships in the dairy science curricula at University of Georgia or to participate in funding a private scholarship foundation for students matriculating in such curricula. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-115.

Board of regents may not lawfully employ "housemothers" at privately owned, off-campus, student dormitories. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-259.

Distinguishing between accredited and unaccredited proprietary schools for inclusion in informational directory. — State's interest in disseminating information only on schools which meet certain minimum standards for protection of its citizenry is certainly one rational basis for distinguishing between accredited and unaccredited proprietary schools for inclusion by Georgia Educational Improvement Council in informational directory regarding post-secondary schools. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 81-107.

Inclusion of proprietary schools by Georgia Educational Improvement Council in informational directory regarding certain post-secondary educational institutions does not violate this clause, since citizens of Georgia will benefit from a listing of accredited proprietary schools along with other post-secondary schools in one directory. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 81-107 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Prohibition contained in paragraph (b) applies to county boards of education. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-13 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Payment to make school superintendent's salary comply with requirements of State Board of Education constitutes salary adjustment rather than extra compensation and is not unlawful. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-13.

Licensing university trademarks. — The Board of Regents may by contract authorize foundations and athletic associations affiliated with university system institutions to license trademarks of the Board of Regents with the specific requirement that any funds generated thereby will be applied solely for the use and benefit of the educational programs at the institution concerned without violating Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-10.

Public Employees

Paragraph violated by payment to one not performing services. — The State Board of Health (now Department of Human Resources) is not authorized to provide compensation for a person who is inactive and not performing services for the state in return for the emolument received. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 522.

County expending funds to satisfy judgment rendered against ex-sheriff violates this paragraph. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U75-26 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Payments to former chancellor violate this paragraph. — Payments to a former chancellor after the chancellor's resignation, and to the widow of the director of budgets after the director's death, are illegal under this paragraph and must be repaid to the state by the board of regents and its treasurer. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 540 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Payroll deductions for third party violates this paragraph. — In the absence of authorizing legislation, it would not be lawful for a state agency to deduct dues, contributions, or donations from a public employee's paycheck for transmittal to some third party with which the state agency has no contractual relationship; this includes prohibiting a state agency from making payroll deductions for charitable purposes from a state employee's pay on a voluntary basis. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-62.

Deductions for private parking facility violates this paragraph. — Monthly payroll deductions for parking spaces of individual employees in private facility, where the owner of the private facility is a third-party recipient not in contractual relationship with the government, would be a gratuity prohibited by this paragraph. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-114 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

This paragraph prohibits pay raises which are retroactive in nature. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-150 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

If the management of an agency had the discretion to grant a merit increase and, for some reason did not exercise that discretion, any attempt to make retroactive payment would be granting extra compensation to a public officer or agent after the service had been rendered in violation of this paragraph. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-110 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

If the management of a department had the discretion to grant a merit increase and lawfully did not exercise that discretion, any attempt to later make a retroactive payment would be granting extra compensation to a public officer or agent after the service had been rendered and would violate this paragraph. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-62 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Discretionary salary increases may not be retroactively granted where higher appointing authority disagrees with lower appointing authority's earlier decision to deny increase. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-14.

Legislation which attempts to increase benefits of those already retired is in violation of this paragraph. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-399 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

A supplemental retirement plan for public employees which does not require a substantial benefit to the employer, in the form of new service or otherwise, violates the prohibitions against governmental gratuities and extra compensation for services rendered. 1996 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U96-21.

Voluntary deductions from wages for charitable donations. — Since charitable deductions are authorized by O.C.G.A. § 45-20-50 et seq. to provide employees of various state agencies with an additional employment benefit, such benefit becomes part of the employment contract, and consequently is not a gratuity to the employees. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 82-79.

Paragraph not violated by payment of retirement allowance. — The regents may pay a retirement allowance to an employee of a radio station which is owned by the regents and operated under the auspices of the Georgia Institute of Technology. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-362.

Authorization of tax-sheltered annuity plans does not violate this paragraph. — The Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia may authorize the units of the university system to enter into tax-sheltered annuity plans for its employees, and such annuities cannot be considered gratuities under this paragraph. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 65-69 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Emeritus positions do not violate this paragraph. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 417 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Advance payment of travel expenses does not violate this paragraph. — The use of public funds for advance payment of state employee travel expenses, authorized under Ga. L. 1973, p. 842, § 1 et seq. (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 45-7-25 through 45-7-28), does not violate this paragraph or Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VII, Sec. III, Para. IV (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. IV, Para. VIII). 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-87 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Employees' Suggestion and Awards Program does not violate this paragraph. — Compensation pursuant to the Employees' Suggestion and Awards Program (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 21, T. 45) would be payment for a service which has been performed by the employee and would not fall into the category of a gift or gratuity. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-183 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Money paid under the Employees' Suggestion and Awards Program (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 21, T. 45) is an award and as such does not violate this paragraph, since such payment is a form of compensation. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-86 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Public Employees (Cont'd)

Local school system employee suggestion programs do not violate the constitutional prohibition against gratuities. 1998 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U98-14.

Payment for unused annual leave as terminal leave does not violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI. — A county board of education may pay an elected Superintendent for the Superintendent's unused annual leave as terminal leave when the Superintendent vacates office so long as such payment was previously agreed to as part of his compensation package. 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. 89-51.

Employment status of University System professor not affected by detention behind Iron Curtain where trip abroad is part of professor's duties. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-178.

State employees may use department purchased corporate credit cards to purchase commercial transportation but employees provided with such cards should be required to execute change of beneficiary form so that any travel insurance benefits payable because of the use of the cards will be payable to the department to avoid conflict with this section. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-65 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Uniformed officers in Motor Carrier Certification and Enforcement Division, Georgia Public Service Commission, are not entitled to receive indemnification pursuant to Ga. L. 1978, p. 1914, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. Art. 5, Ch. 9, T. 45) with respect to death occurring in the line of duty. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-119.

Transfer of leave time prohibited. — No leave accrued by a county employee under a county personnel system can be transferred when the employee becomes a state employee since assumption of such leave by the state would be a gratuity prohibited by Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI and would violate Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. IV, Para. X, which prohibits the assumption of any debt owed by the county. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 84-38.

Educational debt repayment. —

Even though hospital authorities are subject to the gratuities clause of the Georgia Constitution, an authority may offer a prospective employee a signing bonus if it receives a substantial benefit in exchange; however, a hospital authority may not assume payment of a prospective employee's educational loan without explicit statutory authority to do so. 2002 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U2002-7.

Other Expenditures

Paragraph violated by paying damages for negligence to a few. — The General Assembly has never seen fit to provide that the state would be liable to all persons who were injured or damaged by reason of the negligence of its employees. The giving of such benefits to a few, to the exclusion of others, would make such gift by the General Assembly a pure gratuity or donation. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 632.

Providing compensation for services already rendered violates this paragraph. — House Resolution No. 61-151 (1961), which attempts to provide compensation to a contractor because the authority of the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) to do so is in question, is unconstitutional because it provides payment for services already rendered in violation of this paragraph. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 44 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Payment under illegal contract violates this paragraph. — Where Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) had no legal authority to enter into contracts for adjustment of facilities of utility owners, such contracts are void, and any attempt to make payment under them would violate this paragraph. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-339 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Assumption of shipping expenses violates this paragraph. — Where the seller must bear the shipping expense under the term "F.O.B. the place of destination" and there is no obligation on the state as purchaser to assume this burden, any attempt by the state to do so would be, in effect, a gratuity. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-1.

Prisoners working on private vehicles unconstitutional. — It is not permissible for the inmates of a training and development center for state prisoners to perform work on private vehicles to obtain practice in carrying out procedures learned in the automobile school. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-452.

Payment for awards luncheon violates this paragraph. — It would be a violation of this paragraph for the state to pay for an awards luncheon. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-42 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

County jail inmates may not be utilized to clean graffiti from private property unless it can be clearly demonstrated that the use of such inmates for this purpose confers a substantial public benefit, since the performance of such a service at county expense would violate the gratuities clause of the Constitution. 2001 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U2001-4.

Payment of entertainment expense as gratuity. — Regional Development Centers, as public agencies and instrumentalities of the municipalities and counties in their regions, are subject to the Georgia Constitution's gratuities clause. Absent any specific authorizing statute, the payment of entertainment expenses would be unauthorized. Indeed, such an expenditure would constitute a gratuity in violation of the Georgia Constitution. 1992 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 92-1.

DOT precluded from acting as conduit for federal money. — If there is no specific statutory authority, the Department of Transportation will be precluded from acting as a conduit for federal money by this paragraph. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-117 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

County may not pay the processioners' fees in processioning proceeding unless it is the applicant for, otherwise, the payment would constitute a gratuity to the applicant in violation of this paragraph. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U71-45 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Bondsman not entitled to refund of forfeiture even after surrender of principal. — Former Code 1933, § 27-904 (see now O.C.G.A. § 17-6-31) provided for the relieving of a bondsman's liability prior to the time that the bondsman pays the forfeiture to the county, but after the payment by a bondsman to the county of a final judgment on an appearance bond forfeiture, the bondsman was not entitled to a refund of the forfeiture even though the bondsman later surrendered the principal to county authorities. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U76-28.

Additional compensation for services not authorized. — The Department of Transportation may not include in a contract for services a provision which would allow it, if it desired, to pay additional compensation for the services if they are not completed for the originally agreed upon amount. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-37.

Proposed $5,000 signing bonus for new therapists employed by the Division of Rehabilitation Services of the Department of Human Resources, if it is a gratuity, would violate subsection (a) of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI. 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 89-10.

Carriage upon state aircraft must be limited to state officials and employees on official business of the state and those non-employees from whose carriage the state derives some benefit. The only exceptions may be in those areas exempted from subsection (a) of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI by subsection (b). 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 89-19.

Paragraph not violated by payments pursuant to authorized contract. — When a county makes payments pursuant to a contract with another local government in return for bargained-for consideration which constitutes substantial benefits, and the contract is otherwise authorized, the gratuity provision would not be violated. 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. U89-15.

Reasonable tips for services are not gratuities and may be borne by state departments. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-28.

When funds may be expended on official state theater. — The mere designation of an official state theater by the General Assembly would not, in itself, authorize the expenditure of state funds in its operation if the theater's ownership remained private; any contribution of funds under these circumstances would constitute a donation or gratuity in violation of this paragraph. Conversely, should a theater be acquired and operated by the state or function in connection with a state department or agency, state funds may then be used in its operation. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-329 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Other Expenditures (Cont'd)

Inmate scholarship matching program. — This paragraph was not applicable where the General Assembly appropriated state funds for a federal matching fund program for inmate scholarships. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-111 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

County may apply to federal government for funds to be used for urban redevelopment and for public housing within the county. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U75-35.

Agency or department of the state may employ Atlanta Historical Society to obtain information in connection with advertising and promoting historical resources. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 287.

Reimbursement by one state agency to another agency, both of which are administered by the State Merit System, is not prohibited by this paragraph. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 374 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Payment of claim under Motor Vehicle Certificate of Title Act approved. — If, pursuant to Ga. L. 1965, p. 304, § 10 (see now O.C.G.A. § 40-3-6), the board to hear complaints and claims finds that an act or omission of the commissioner or one of the commissioner's employees in the administration of the Motor Vehicle Certificate of Title Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 3, T. 40) has caused monetary damage, the Department of Revenue can legally pay the claim. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-223.

Entering into enforceable contract for prepayment of professional services and paying pursuant to such contract is not unlawful. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 81-29.

Legality of pretrial release programs. — Pretrial release programs where defendants are allowed to pay 10 percent of the bond originally set by the court upon their satisfying certain administrative criteria are appropriate as long as the county is not put in the position of being the surety of the remaining part of the bond, which would be in violation of this section. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-85 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VI).

Department of Medical Assistance (now Department of Community Health) may not forbear collection of overpayments made to providers. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-89.

Removing vegetation to facilitate viewing of privately owned billboards not violative of paragraph. — Cutting of trees and vegetation on rights-of-way, without cost or expense to taxpayers and to extent no more than minimally necessary to facilitate reasonably adequate public viewing of privately owned billboards, does not itself amount to donation of constitutionally forbidden gratuity. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 81-75.

O.C.G.A. §§ 32-6-75.2 and 32-6-75.3 do not authorize direct economic benefit to private persons. — Neither O.C.G.A. § 32-6-75.2 nor O.C.G.A. § 32-6-75.3 authorizes any private person to derive any economic benefit directly from disposition of material severed from rights-of-way. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 81-75.

Payroll deduction programs for public employees. — Political subdivisions may establish payroll deduction programs for public employees provided that there is statutory authority to do so and that the programs are not unconstitutional gratuities. The General Assembly, by acting in this area through various general statutory provisions, intended to permit local governments to utilize payroll deduction plans only in limited circumstances as outlined in those kinds of general laws; there is no general law authorizing local governments to undertake payroll deduction programs either through the passage of local law or through local ordinances. Absent authority to engage in such programs through the enactment of local laws, the most appropriate method for their implementation would be through the passage of general laws. 2014 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U2014-3.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 63C Am. Jur. 2d, Public Funds, § 70 et seq.

ALR. — Power of Legislature to grant extra compensation for past services of individual public officer or employee, 23 ALR 612.

Validity of contract by officer with public for rendition of new or special services to be paid for in addition to regular compensation, 159 ALR 606.

Validity and effect of agreement by public officer or employee to accept less than compensation of fees fixed by law, or of acceptance of reduced amount, 160 ALR 490.

Statutes providing for governmental compensation for victims of crime, 20 ALR4th 63.

State or local governmental body’s action or inaction, in provision of public utility services, benefiting private company as constituting gift of money, or pledge of credit, to private party in violation of state constitutional provision, 122 ALR5th 337.

Paragraph VII. Regulation of alcoholic beverages.

The State of Georgia shall have full and complete authority to regulate alcoholic beverages and to regulate, restrict, or prohibit activities involving alcoholic beverages. This regulatory authority of the state shall include all such regulatory authority as is permitted to the states under the Twenty-First Amendment to the United States Constitution. This regulatory authority of the state is specifically delegated to counties and municipalities of the state for the purpose of regulating, restricting, or prohibiting the exhibition of nudity, partial nudity, or depictions of nudity in connection with the sale or consumption of alcoholic beverages; and such delegated regulatory authority may be exercised by the adoption and enforcement of regulatory ordinances by the counties and municipalities of this state. A general law exercising such regulatory authority shall control over conflicting provisions of any local ordinance but shall not preempt any local ordinance provisions not in direct conflict with general law.

Editor’s notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1994, p. 2018, § 1) providing that the state shall have full and complete authority to regulate alcoholic beverages in any manner permitted under the twenty-first amendment to the United States Constitution was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November

8, 1994. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 3, § 6, Para. 7; Ga. L. 1994, p. 2018, § 1/HR 709.)

Law reviews. — For article, “Regulation of Alcoholic Beverages Generally,” see 28 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 255 (2011).

For note on the 1994 enactment of this paragraph, see 11 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 33 (1994).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. VII does not violate freedom of expression as guaranteed by the first amendment or the prohibition against multiple subject matters in the state Constitution, and the wording of the ballot concerning the amendment did not violate the due process guarantees of the fourteenth amendment. Goldrush II v. City of Marietta, 267 Ga. 683, 482 S.E.2d 347 (1997), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 818, 118 S. Ct. 70, 139 L. Ed. 2d 31 (1997).

SECTION VII.

IMPEACHMENTS

Paragraph

I. Power to impeach.

II. Trial of impeachments.

Paragraph

III. Judgments in impeachment.

Paragraph I. Power to impeach.

The House of Representatives shall have the sole power to vote impeachment charges against any executive or judicial officer of this state or any member of the General Assembly.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. I.

Cross references. — Grounds for impeachment of judges, §§ 15-1-7, 15-6-13, and 15-6-21.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Sentence of removal from office for official malpractice does not violate paragraph. — A sentence of court which imposed the penalty of removal from office for a violation of former Penal Code 1910, §§ 295 and 296 (see now O.C.G.A. § 45-11-4) did not violate this paragraph. The constitutional method and the legislative method of removing county and state officials from office were merely cumulative and not conflicting. Kent v. State, 18 Ga. App. 30, 88 S.E. 913 (1916) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. I).

Liability of judge to disbarment proceedings. — That a lawyer is also a judge of the superior court and hence a constitutional officer and must have practiced law seven years at the time of the lawyer's election and is prohibited from practicing law while serving as judge, does not mean that the lawyer cannot at the same time be disbarred and the lawyer's license to practice law canceled as provided in former Code 1933, T. 9, Ch. 5 (see now O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 19, T. 15). The two proceedings are provided for the accomplishment of entirely different results. Each must be pursued to accomplish the result which it is intended to accomplish. Gordon v. Clinkscales, 215 Ga. 843, 114 S.E.2d 15 (1960).

Cited in Cargile v. State, 194 Ga. 20, 20 S.E.2d 416 (1942); DeKalb County Sch. Dist. v. Ga. State Bd. of Educ., 294 Ga. 349, 751 S.E.2d 827 (2013).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 63C Am. Jur. 2d, Public Officers and Employees, § 154 et seq.

ALR. — Physical or mental disability

as disqualification or ground of removal or impeachment of public officer, 28 ALR 777.

Membership in or affiliation with religious, political, social, or criminal society or group as ground of removal of public officer, 116 ALR 358.

Paragraph II. Trial of impeachments.

The Senate shall have the sole power to try impeachments. When sitting for that purpose, the Senators shall be on oath, or affirmation, and shall be presided over by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Should the Chief Justice be disqualified, then the Presiding Justice shall preside. Should the Presiding Justice be disqualified, then the Senate shall select a Justice of the Supreme Court to preside. No person shall be convicted without concurrence of two-thirds of the members to which the Senate is entitled.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. II. impeachment of judges, §§ 15-1-7, 15-6-13, and 15-6-21.

Cross references. — Grounds for im-

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Act granting power of removal of Railroad Commissioners (now Public Service Commissioners) does not violate this paragraph. (Ga. L. 1878-79, p. 125). Gray v. McLendon, 134 Ga. 224, 67 S.E. 859 (1910) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VII, Para. II).

Liability of judge to disbarment proceedings. — That a lawyer is also a judge of the superior court and hence a constitutional officer and must have practiced law seven years at the time of the lawyer's election and is prohibited from practicing law while serving as judge, does not mean that the lawyer cannot at the same time be disbarred and the lawyer's license to practice law canceled as provided in former Code 1933, T. 9, Ch. 5 (see now O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 19, T. 15). The two proceedings are provided for the accomplishment of entirely different results. Each must be pursued to accomplish the result which it is intended to accomplish. Gordon v. Clinkscales, 215 Ga. 843, 114 S.E.2d 15 (1960).

Cited in Cargile v. State, 194 Ga. 20, 20 S.E.2d 416 (1942).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 63C Am. Jur. 2d, Public Officers and Employees, § 154 et seq.
ALR. — Physical or mental disability

as disqualification or ground of removal or impeachment of public officer, 28 ALR 777.

Paragraph III. Judgments in impeachment.

In cases of impeachment, judgments shall not extend further than removal from office and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust, or profit within this state or to receive a pension therefrom, but no such judgment shall relieve any party from any criminal or civil liability.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. III.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Cargile v. State, 194 Ga. 20, 20 S.E.2d 416 (1942).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Physical or mental disability as disqualification or ground of removal or impeachment of public officer, 28 ALR 777.

Membership in or affiliation with religious, political, social, or criminal society or group as ground of removal of public officer, 116 ALR 358.

Governing law as to existence or character of offense for which one has been convicted in a federal court, or court of another state, as bearing upon disqualification to vote, hold office, practice profession, sit on jury, or the like, 175 ALR 784.

SECTION VIII.

INSURANCE REGULATION

Paragraph

I. Regulation of insurance.

Paragraph

II. Issuance of licenses.

Paragraph I. Regulation of insurance.

Provision shall be made by law for the regulation of insurance.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. IX, Paras. I-V.

Cross references. — Insurance regulation generally, T. 33.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Insurers Rehabilitation and Liquidation Act. — O.C.G.A. § 33-37-56 does not impermissibly conflict with the constitutional jurisdiction of the superior courts; the statute is an authorized exception to the superior courts' grant of general jurisdiction. Smith v. Farm & Home Life Ins. Co., 269 Ga. 709, 506 S.E.2d 104 (1998).

Paragraph II. Issuance of licenses.

Insurance licenses shall be issued by the Commissioner of Insurance as required by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. IX, Paras. I-V.

Cross references. — Insurance regulation generally, T. 33.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 43 Am. Jur. 2d, Insurance, § 27 et seq.

C.J.S. — 44 C.J.S., Insurance, § 67.

ALR. — Power to exact license fees or impose a penalty for benefit of private individual or corporation, 13 ALR 828; 19

ALR 205.

Right to enjoin business competitor from unlicensed or otherwise illegal acts or practices, 90 ALR2d 7.

SECTION IX.

APPROPRIATIONS

Paragraph

- I. Public money, how drawn.
- II. Preparation, submission, and enactments of general appropriations bill.
- III. General appropriations bill.
- IV. General appropriations Act.

Paragraph

- V. Other or supplementary appropriations.
- VI. Appropriations to be for specific sums.
- VII. Appropriations void, when.

Law reviews. — For article, “Urban Decay, Austerity, and the Rule of Law,” see 61 Emory L.J. 1, 25355 (2014).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Campbell v. State Rd. & Tollway Auth., 276 Ga. 714, 583 S.E.2d 32 (2003).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Meaning of “appropriation”. — An appropriation is an authorization by the General Assembly to expend from public funds a sum of money not in excess of the amount specified for the purpose specified in the authorization. 1973 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U73-94.

New tax law or amendment increasing tax rate can be made effective as existing law upon passage by General Assembly and approval by Governor, notwithstanding the fact that the commencement of collection of the new or increased tax is a later date. 1968 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 68-422.

Transfer of appropriation approved. — Under the authority granted by former Code 1933, § 40-421 (see now O.C.G.A. § 45-12-90), the Office of Planning and Budget may transfer an appropriation to any of the agencies of the state having comparable authority; those agencies may, in turn, pursuant to this section and the referenced statutory authority, contract with the Georgia Residential Finance Authority for services which are both within the scope of the authority of those agencies as well as within the scope of the powers of the Georgia Residential Finance Authority. 1975 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 75-40 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Liability for work done or materials furnished, etc., for state or federal governments in excess of appropriations, 19 ALR 408.

Use of public funds or exercise of taxing power to promote patriotism, 30 ALR 1035.

Budget provisions of Constitution or statute in relation to appropriation of state funds, 40 ALR 1067.

Validity and effect of provision of appropriation bill subjecting expenditure or payment of amounts appropriated to approval of governor or other officer not otherwise authorized, 91 ALR 1511.

Constitutionality of appropriation of public funds for benefit of widow or other relative of deceased public officer or employee, 121 ALR 1317.

Paragraph I. Public money, how drawn.

No money shall be drawn from the treasury except by appropriation made by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. X, Para. I.

Cross references. — Withdrawals only by warrant of Governor, § 45-12-21.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Duty of director of Office of Treasury and Fiscal Services. — Under this paragraph, it is the duty of the Treasurer (now director of the Office of Treasury and Fiscal Services) to keep safely the funds of the state, and to pay out the funds only upon the warrants of the Governor, when countersigned by the Comptroller General, excepting drafts of the President of the Senate or Speaker of the House for sums due to the members or officers thereof. Gurnee, Jr. & Co. v. Speer, 68 Ga. 711 (1882) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. I).

Warrant is not a contract, but a revocable license. Fletcher v. Renfroe, 56 Ga. 674 (1876).

Act not to be held unconstitutional where appropriation not at issue. — Act (Ga. L. 1943, p. 401) amending Workers' Compensation Law (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 9, T. 34) so far as it provides for compensation for past accidents of employees of a state department that had previously operated under the Workers' Compensation Law, could not be held unconstitutional on ground that no appropriation for payment of such claims had been made where the only issue was the right to establish liability against the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) and the matter of discharging such liability was not involved. State Hwy. Dep't v. Bass, 197 Ga. 356, 29 S.E.2d 161 (1944).

Cited in Nance v. Daniel, 183 Ga. 538, 189 S.E. 21 (1936); Irons v. Harrison, 185 Ga. 244, 194 S.E. 749 (1937); Wright v. Forrester, 192 Ga. 864, 16 S.E.2d 873 (1941); State Ports Auth. v. Arnall, 201 Ga. 713, 41 S.E.2d 246 (1947); Maynard v. Thrasher, 77 Ga. App. 316, 48 S.E.2d 471 (1948); Gregory v. Hamilton, 215 Ga. 735, 113 S.E.2d 395 (1960); Georgia Ass'n of Educators v. Harris, 403 F. Supp. 961 (N.D. Ga. 1975); Briarcliff Haven, Inc. v. Department of Human Resources, 403 F. Supp. 1355 (N.D. Ga. 1975); Wilson v. Board of Regents, 246 Ga. 649, 272 S.E.2d 496 (1980); Buskirk v. State, 267 Ga. 769, 482 S.E.2d 286 (1997); Stalling v. State, 312 Ga. App. 154, 717 S.E.2d 733 (2011).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

When failure to appropriate funds excuses failure to perform official duties. — A public official will be excused from carrying out an official duty upon failure of the General Assembly to appropriate funds for performance, if, but only if, the official is able to show that the resulting lack of funds, together with an inability to obtain the same, make performance impossible. Failure of the General Assembly to appropriate moneys for a specific official duty might not justify a failure to perform where the official has received a general appropriation and could divert a portion thereof to carry out the official's statutory or official duty. 1969 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 69-174.

State agency is not authorized to pledge credit of the state. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-115; Position Paper, 8-8-78, 1978 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 267.

State agency is not authorized to collect fees and deposit the fees in its own account, but rather such fees must be paid over in compliance with this paragraph and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VII, Sec. II, Para. III (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. III, Para. II). 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 631 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. I).

This paragraph generally prohibits state organizations from collecting money and using that money for their own programs. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-126 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. I).

Allocation of particular source of income for particular agency precluded. — This paragraph and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VII, Sec. II, Para. III (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. III, Para. II), when read in conjunction with Art. III, Sec. X, Para. VII (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. VI), preclude both the practice of allocating particular sources of income for the use of a particular agency and the allocation of the fees, or any part of the fees, collected by the various examining boards to meet their expenses, and further preclude any implied commitment on the part of the General Assembly to appropriate to the examining boards an amount equal to the total fees generated. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-93.

Collections from delinquent accounts must be paid into general fund. — While this paragraph and Ga.

Const. 1976, Art. III, Sec. X, Para. VII, and Art. VII, Sec. II, Para. III (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. VI, and Art. VII, Sec. III, Para. II) do not specifically provide that money recovered for contractual violations or delinquent accounts be paid into the treasury, such money must be paid into the state treasury, and not earmarked. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-126 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. I).

Examining board may not use funds acquired from license fees. — Because license fees were remitted to the State Treasurer (now director of the Office of Treasury and Fiscal Services) as required by former Code 1933, § 84-101 (see now O.C.G.A. § 43-1-3), the only method by which an examining board may acquire the use of these funds was pursuant to an appropriation by the General Assembly. 1972 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 72-112.

Application fees nonrefundable. — Application fees by the joint secretary of the state examining boards, which are paid into the state treasury, are nonrefundable unless there is express statutory authority to do so. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-69.

Method of distributing funds to Georgia Real Estate Commission. — The lawful method of distribution of funds to the Georgia Real Estate Commission calls for the Secretary of State to exercise the secretary's discretion in dividing the total appropriation for the joint secretary's office among the various examining boards including the Georgia Real Estate Commission. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-93.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 63C Am. Jur. 2d, Public Funds, § 44 et seq.

ALR. — Constitutionality of statute appropriating money to reimburse public officer or employee for money paid or liability incurred by him in consequence of breach of duty, 155 ALR 1438.

What constitutes moral obligation justifying appropriation of public moneys for benefit of an individual, 172 ALR 1407.

Paragraph II. Preparation, submission, and enactments of general appropriations bill.

(a) The Governor shall submit to the General Assembly within five days after its convening in regular session each year a budget message and a budget report, accompanied by a draft of a general appropriations bill, in such form and manner as may be prescribed by statute, which shall provide for the appropriation of the funds necessary to operate all the various departments and agencies and to meet the current expenses of the state for the next fiscal year.

(b) The General Assembly shall annually appropriate those state and federal funds necessary to operate all the various departments and agencies. To the extent that federal funds received by the state for any program, project, activity, purpose, or expenditure are changed by federal authority or exceed the amount or amounts appropriated in the general appropriations Act or supplementary appropriation Act or Acts, or are not anticipated, such excess, changed or unanticipated federal funds are hereby continually appropriated for the purposes authorized and directed by the federal government in making the grant. In those instances where the conditions under which the federal funds have been made available do not provide otherwise, federal funds shall first be used to replace state funds that were appropriated to supplant federal funds in the same state fiscal year. The fiscal year of the state shall commence on the first day of July of each year and terminate on the thirtieth of June following.

(c) The General Assembly shall by general law provide for the regulation and management of the finance and fiscal administration of the state.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. X, Paras. III, V; Art. X, Sec. II, Para. IX.

Cross references. — State financing and investment generally, § 50-17-20 et seq.

Law reviews. — For article, “Judicial Review in General Assistance,” see 6 J. of Pub. L. 100 (1957).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose of appropriation control. — The purpose of this and other paragraphs on appropriation control is to end the practice of allocating or earmarking particular taxes for the use by any specific department, and to require the General Assembly to appropriate from the general fund specific amounts for each fiscal year for the support of each department or agency. Gregory v. Hamilton, 215 Ga. 735, 113 S.E.2d 395 (1960).

Cited in State Ports Auth. v. Arnall, 201 Ga. 713, 41 S.E.2d 246 (1947); Brown v. Wright, 231 Ga. 686, 203 S.E.2d 487 (1974); Georgia Ass’n of Educators v. Harris, 403 F. Supp. 961 (N.D. Ga. 1975); Briarcliff Haven, Inc. v. Department of Human Resources, 403 F. Supp. 1355 (N.D. Ga. 1975); Hilton Constr. Co. v. Rockdale County Bd. of Educ., 245 Ga. 533, 266 S.E.2d 157 (1980).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
FEDERAL EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS

General Consideration

It is the exclusive function of the executive branch to prepare budget report. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-18.

It is the exclusive function of the legislative branch to appropriate money in the form of a general appropriations bill. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-18.

The General Assembly is responsible for appropriating federal funds, but federal funds are continually appropriated. 1997 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U97-5.

General Assembly does not have authority to amend the revenue estimate established by Governor. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-18.

Governor's acquiescence to General Assembly proposal. — Governor may, by acquiescing in proposal by General Assembly to increase revenue estimate, effectively make that proposal the Governor's revised revenue estimate. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-18.

An appropriation's Act does no more or no less than authorize maximum amount of funds to be spent for specified objects; it does not mandate such expenditures. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-80.

The General Assembly may not consistently with this paragraph appropriate directly to an entity created as a separate corporate body, such as the Georgia Residential Finance Authority. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-40 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. II).

Effect of paragraph on agency spending authorization. — This paragraph prohibits an appropriations Act from doing anything other than authorizing a state agency to spend up to a maximum amount for a purpose or function which the agency is permitted or required by general law. 1977 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 77-87 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. II).

Actual power of a public agency to spend public money for particular activities or purposes must be pursuant to a general law, not an appropriation's Act. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-80.

Agency not authorized to pledge credit of state. — No agency may execute a contract with a private party for the purchase of goods or services which purports to obligate appropriations or state funds from any other source not on hand at the time of the contract or where the fiscal obligation of the agency depends for its full performance upon such future appropriations or the continued existence of any other source of state funds. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-115; 1978 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 267.

Payment of membership dues. — Departments, institutions, and agencies can pay dues and membership fees in state and national organizations from appropriated funds. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-110.

This paragraph directs that the general appropriations Act be passed at regular session. 1952-53 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 257 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. II).

This paragraph excludes amendments to a general appropriations Act for a prior fiscal year. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-53 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. II).

Discretion lies with the state agency to determine which fiscal year's funds were obligated by particular contract. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-163.

Donated funds received by Department of Public Safety supplement rather than replace appropriated funds. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-140.

Federal Educational Programs

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, opinions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. X, Sec. II, Para. IX, relating to appropriation of matching funds to obtain federal funds in aid of education, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Scholarship under this paragraph not burdened with employment and repayment restrictions. — Under this paragraph, the General Assembly could appropriate money to the Department of Human Resources to be used for federal matching, and the department could make a scholarship directly to the student; scholarships made under this provision would carry no restriction as to employment or repayment. 1971 Op. Att'y

Federal Educational Programs (Cont'd)

Gen. No. 71-147 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. II).

A state department or agency may implement a doctoral-level training program for employees, provided that it does so using regularly appropriated funds to obtain federal matching funds. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-154.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 63C Am. Jur. 2d, Public Funds, § 64.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, §§ 387, 392 et seq.

ALR. — Validity and effect of provision of appropriation bill subjecting expenditure or payment of amounts appropriated to approval of governor or other officer not otherwise authorized, 91 ALR 1511.

Paragraph III. General appropriations bill.

The general appropriations bill shall embrace nothing except appropriations fixed by previous laws; the ordinary expenses of the executive, legislative, and judicial departments of the government; payment of the public debt and interest thereon; and for support of the public institutions and educational interests of the state. All other appropriations shall be made by separate bills, each embracing but one subject.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. X, Para. IV.

and investment generally, § 50-17-20 et seq.

Cross references. — State financing

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose of appropriation control. — The purpose of this and other paragraphs on appropriation control is to end the practice of allocating or earmarking particular taxes for the use by any specific department, and to require the General Assembly to appropriate from the general fund specific amounts for each fiscal year for the support of each department or agency. Gregory v. Hamilton, 215 Ga. 735, 113 S.E.2d 395 (1960) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. III).

Cited in Irons v. Harrison, 185 Ga. 244, 194 S.E. 749 (1937); Atlanta Fin. Co. v. Brown, 187 Ga. 729, 2 S.E.2d 415 (1939); Schaffer v. Oxford, 102 Ga. App. 710, 117 S.E.2d 637 (1960).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

It is exclusive function of legislative branch to appropriate money in form of a general appropriations bill. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-18.

Discretion lies with the state agency to determine which fiscal year's funds were obligated by particular contract. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-163.

When agency may contract in one fiscal year for services in the next. —

A state agency may contract with a party in one fiscal year for services to be performed in the next fiscal year so long as the funds to meet the obligations of the contract were existing in the agency's appropriation and were unobligated prior to the execution of the contract. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-163.

This paragraph excludes amendments to a general appropriations Act for a prior fiscal year. 1974 Op.

Att'y Gen. No. 74-53 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. III).

Appropriations Act may not alter responsibilities or powers of state agency which are derived from general law. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-46.

Appropriation Act does no more or no less than authorize maximum amount of funds to be spent for specified objects; it does not mandate such expenditures. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-80.

Establishment of obligation to pay funds into state treasury is matter of substantive law, and under this paragraph substantive laws cannot be contained in the General Appropriations Act. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-118 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. III).

Actual power of a public agency to spend public money for particular activities or purposes must be pursuant to a general law, not an appropriations Act. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-80.

Effect of paragraph on agency spending authorization. — This paragraph prohibits an appropriations Act from doing anything other than authorizing a state agency to spend up to a maximum amount for a purpose or function which the agency is permitted or required by general law. 1977 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 77-87.

Payment of membership dues. — Departments, institutions, and agencies can pay dues and membership fees in state and national organizations from appropriated funds. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-110.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 63C Am. Jur. 2d, Public Funds, § 44.

ALR. — Particularity of specification of purpose required in appropriation bill, 20 ALR 981.

Paragraph IV. General appropriations Act.

(a) Each general appropriations Act, now of force or hereafter adopted with such amendments as are adopted from time to time, shall continue in force and effect for the next fiscal year after adoption and it shall then expire, except for the mandatory appropriations required by this Constitution and those required to meet contractual obligations authorized by this Constitution and the continued appropriation of federal grants.

(b) The General Assembly shall not appropriate funds for any given fiscal year which, in aggregate, exceed a sum equal to the amount of unappropriated surplus expected to have accrued in the state treasury at the beginning of the fiscal year together with an amount not greater than the total treasury receipts from existing revenue sources anticipated to be collected in the fiscal year, less refunds, as estimated in the budget report and amendments thereto. Supplementary appropriations, if any, shall be made in the manner provided in Paragraph V of this section of the Constitution; but in no event shall a supplementary appropriations Act continue in force and effect beyond the expiration of the general appropriations Act in effect when such supplementary appropriations Act was adopted and approved.

(c) All appropriated state funds, except for the mandatory appropriations required by this Constitution, remaining unexpended and not contractually obligated at the expiration of such general appropriations Act shall lapse.

(d) Funds appropriated to or received by the State Housing Trust Fund for the Homeless shall not be subject to the provisions of Article III, Section IX, Paragraph IV(c), relative to the lapsing of funds, and may be expended for programs of purely public charity for the homeless, including programs involving the participation of churches and religious institutions, notwithstanding the provisions of Article I, Section II, Paragraph VII. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 3, § 9, Para. 3; Ga. L. 1988, p. 2098, § 1/HR 587.)

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. X, Para. V.

Cross references. — State debt generally, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. IV.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1988, p. 2098, § 1) which added subparagraph (d) was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 8, 1988.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose of appropriation control.

— The purpose of this and other paragraphs on appropriation control is to end the practice of allocating or earmarking particular taxes for the use by any specific department, and to require the General Assembly to appropriate from the general fund specific amounts for each fiscal year for the support of each department or agency. Gregory v. Hamilton, 215 Ga. 735, 113 S.E.2d 395 (1960) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. IV).

Cited in State Ports Auth. v. Arnall, 201 Ga. 713, 41 S.E.2d 246 (1947); Busbee v. Georgia Conference, Am. Ass'n of Univ. Professors, 235 Ga. 752, 221 S.E.2d 437 (1975); Georgia Ass'n of Educators v. Harris, 403 F. Supp. 961 (N.D. Ga. 1975); Briarcliff Haven, Inc. v. Department of Human Resources, 403 F. Supp. 1355 (N.D. Ga. 1975); Hilton Constr. Co. v. Rockdale County Bd. of Educ., 245 Ga. 533, 266 S.E.2d 157 (1980).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Clear intent to impose a "checks and balances" system on appropriations. — One of those "checks and balances" is the restriction which limits the legislative power to appropriate the amount of funds determined by the Governor to be available for appropriation. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-18.

Funds in reserves may not be appropriated in fiscal years subsequent to those in which reserves were created as long as the obligations against such reserves remain outstanding. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U79-26.

When agency may contract in one fiscal year for services in the next. — A state agency may contract with a party in one fiscal year for services to be performed in the next fiscal year so long as the funds to meet the obligations of the contract were existing in the agency's appropriation and were unobligated prior to the execution of the contract. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-163.

Discretion lies with the state agency to determine which fiscal year's funds were obligated by particular contract. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-163.

Inclusion of estimated lapse for current fiscal year. — Legislature may not make appropriations up to budget amount which includes estimated lapse from appropriations for current fiscal year. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-11.

Attempt to authorize use of federal funds in excess of amount contemplated invalid. — Georgia Laws 1977, pp. 1335, 1502, § 48 which authorizes the Office of Planning and Budget to utilize federal funds in excess of the amounts contemplated in the appropriations Act to supplant state funds, is invalid as an attempt to confer general law authority contrary to this paragraph. 1977 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 77-87 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. IV).

Agency not authorized to pledge credit of state. — No agency may execute a contract with a private party for the purchase of goods or services which purports to obligate appropriations or state funds from any other source not on hand at the time of the contract or where the fiscal obligation of the agency depends for its full performance upon such future appropriations or the continued existence of any other source of state funds. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-115; 1978 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 267.

Donated funds received by Department of Public Safety supplement rather than replace appropriated funds. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-140.

What roads measured in county to determine grant distribution. — The measurement of roads in a county for the purpose of determining proportional share of the annual distribution of a state grant under the general appropriations Act should include only those roads which are outside the boundaries of the municipal districts. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-108.

Constitutional amendment necessary to authorize increase in retirement benefits to be paid from state funds to retired teachers in any local system funded through appropriations made by municipal corporations, counties, or any political subdivision. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-140.

Lapse of appropriations that become deobligated. — Appropriated state funds which become deobligated during a subsequent fiscal year are subject to lapse, and may not be applied to contracts for which motor fuel tax appropriations were previously committed. 1993 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 93-9.

Limitation on veto of individual appropriations. — The Governor's power to veto individual appropriations does not include the power to reduce an appropriation. 2000 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2000-2.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 63C Am. Jur. 2d, Public Funds, § 44 et seq.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, §§ 367, 369, 370, 404 et seq.

ALR. — Taxpayer's right to maintain action to enjoin wrongful expenditure of public funds, as affected by the fact that the funds in question were not raised by taxation, 131 ALR 1230.

Paragraph V. Other or supplementary appropriations.

In addition to the appropriations made by the general appropriations Act and amendments thereto, the General Assembly may make additional appropriations by Acts, which shall be known as supplementary appropriation Acts, provided no such supplementary appropriation shall be available unless there is an unappropriated surplus in the state treasury or the revenue necessary to pay such appropriation shall have been provided by a tax laid for such purpose and collected into the general fund of the state treasury. Neither house shall pass a supplementary appropriation bill until the general appropriations Act shall have been finally adopted by both houses and approved by the Governor.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. X, Para. VI.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose of appropriation control. — The purpose of this and other paragraphs on appropriation control is to end the practice of allocating or earmarking particular taxes for the use by any specific department, and to require the General Assembly to appropriate from the general fund specific amounts for each fiscal year for the support of each department or agency. Gregory v. Hamilton, 215 Ga. 735, 113 S.E.2d 395 (1960) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. V).

Cited in State Ports Auth. v. Arnall, 201 Ga. 713, 41 S.E.2d 246 (1947).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

This paragraph excludes amendments to a general appropriations Act for a prior fiscal year. 1974 Op.

Att’y Gen. No. 74-53 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. V).

Paragraph VI. Appropriations to be for specific sums.

(a) Except as hereinafter provided, the appropriation for each department, officer, bureau, board, commission, agency, or institution for which appropriation is made shall be for a specific sum of money; and no appropriation shall allocate to any object the proceeds of any particular tax or fund or a part or percentage thereof.

(b) An amount equal to all money derived from motor fuel taxes received by the state in each of the immediately preceding fiscal years, less the amount of refunds, rebates, and collection costs authorized by law, is hereby appropriated for the fiscal year beginning July 1, of each year following, for all activities incident to providing and maintaining an adequate system of public roads and bridges in this state, as authorized by laws enacted by the General Assembly of Georgia, and for grants to counties by law authorizing road construction and maintenance, as provided by law authorizing such grants. Said sum is hereby appropriated for, and shall be available for, the aforesaid purposes regardless of whether the General Assembly enacts a general appropriations Act; and said sum need not be specifically stated in any general appropriations Act passed by the General Assembly in order to be available for such purposes. However, this shall not preclude the General Assembly from appropriating for such purposes an amount greater than the sum specified above for such purposes. The expenditure of such funds shall be subject to all the rules, regulations, and restrictions imposed on the expenditure of appropriations by provisions of the Constitution and laws of this state, unless such provisions are in conflict with the provisions of this paragraph. And provided, however, that the proceeds of the tax hereby appropriated shall not be subject to budgetary reduction. In the event of invasion of this state by land, sea, or air or in case of a major catastrophe so proclaimed by the Governor, said funds may be utilized for defense or relief purposes on the executive order of the Governor.

(c) A trust fund for use in the reimbursement of a portion of an employer's workers' compensation expenses resulting to an employee from the combination of a previous disability with subsequent injury incurred in employment may be provided for by law. As authorized by law, revenues raised for purposes of the fund may be paid into and disbursed from the trust without being subject to the limitations of subparagraph (a) of this Paragraph or of Article VII, Section III, Paragraph II.

(d) As provided by law, additional penalties may be assessed in any case in which any court in this state imposes a fine or orders the forfeiture of any bond in the nature of the penalty for all offenses against the criminal and traffic laws of this state or of the political subdivisions of this state. The proceeds derived from such additional penalty assessments may be allocated for the specific purpose of meeting any and all costs, or any portion of the cost, of providing training to law enforcement officers and to prosecuting officials.

(e) The General Assembly may by general law approved by a three-fifths' vote of both houses designate any part or all of the proceeds of any state tax now or hereafter levied and collected on alcoholic beverages to be used for prevention, education, and treatment relating to alcohol and drug abuse.

(f) The General Assembly is authorized to provide by law for the creation of a State Children's Trust Fund from which funds shall be disbursed for child abuse and neglect prevention programs. The General Assembly is authorized to appropriate moneys to such fund and such moneys paid into the fund shall not be subject to the provisions of Article III, Section IX, Paragraph IV(c), relative to the lapsing of funds.

(g) The General Assembly is authorized to provide by law for the creation of a Seed-Capital Fund from which funds shall be disbursed at the direction of the Advanced Technology Development Center of the University System of Georgia to provide equity and other capital to small, young, entrepreneurial firms engaged in innovative work in the areas of technology, manufacturing, or agriculture. Funds shall be disbursed in the form of loans or investments which shall provide for repayment, rents, dividends, royalties, or other forms of return on investments as provided by law. Moneys received from returns on loans or investments shall be deposited in the Seed-Capital Fund for further disbursement. The General Assembly is authorized to appropriate moneys to such fund and such moneys paid into the fund shall not be subject to the provisions of Article III, Section IX, Paragraph IV(c) relative to the lapsing of funds. The General Assembly shall be authorized to provide by law for any matters relating to the purpose or provisions of this subparagraph.

(h) The General Assembly is authorized to provide by general law for additional penalties or fees in any case in any court in this state in which a person is adjudged guilty of an offense against the criminal or traffic laws of this state or an ordinance of a political subdivision of this state. The General Assembly is authorized to provide by general law for the allocation of such additional penalties or fees for the construction, operation, and staffing of jails, correctional institutions, and detention facilities by counties.

(i) The General Assembly is authorized to provide by general law for the creation of an Indigent Care Trust Fund. Any hospital, hospital authority, county, or municipality is authorized to contribute or transfer moneys to the fund and any other person or entity specified by the General Assembly may also contribute to the fund. The General Assembly may provide by general law for the dedication and deposit of revenues raised from specified sources for the purposes of the fund into the fund. Moneys in the fund shall be exclusively used for primary health care programs for medically indigent citizens and children of this state, for expansion of Medicaid eligibility and services, or for programs to support rural and other health care providers, primarily hospitals, who disproportionately serve the medically indigent. Any other appropriation from the Indigent Care Trust Fund shall be void. Contributions and revenues deposited to the fund shall not lapse and shall not be subject to the limitations of subparagraph (a) of this Paragraph or of Article VII, Section III, Paragraph II. Contributions in the fund which are not appropriated as required by this subparagraph shall be refunded pro rata to the contributors thereof, as provided by the General Assembly.

(j) The General Assembly is authorized to provide by general law for the creation of an emerging crops fund from which to pay interest on loans made to farmers to enable such farmers to produce certain crops on Georgia farms and thereby promote economic development. The General Assembly is authorized to appropriate moneys to such fund and moneys so appropriated shall not be subject to the provisions of Article III, Section IX, Paragraph IV(c), relative to the lapsing of appropriated funds. Interest on loans made to farmers shall be paid from such fund pursuant to such terms, conditions, and requirements as the General Assembly shall provide by general law. The General Assembly may provide by general law for the administration of such fund by such state agency or public authority as the General Assembly shall determine.

(k) The General Assembly is authorized to provide by general law for additional penalties or fees in any case in any court in this state in which a person is adjudged guilty of an offense involving driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs or reckless driving. The General Assembly is authorized to provide by general law for the allocation of such additional penalties or fees to the Brain and Spinal Injury Trust Fund, as provided by law, for the specified purpose of meeting any and all costs, or any portion of the costs, of providing care and rehabilitative services to citizens of the state who have survived neurotrauma with head or spinal cord injuries. Moneys appropriated for such purposes shall not lapse. The General Assembly may provide by general law for the administration of such fund by such authority as the General Assembly shall determine.

(l) The General Assembly is authorized to provide by general law for the creation of a roadside enhancement and beautification fund from which funds shall be disbursed for enhancement and beautification of public rights of way; for allocation and dedication of revenue from tree and other vegetation trimming or removal permit fees, other related assessments, and special and distinctive wildflower motor vehicle license plate fees to such fund; that moneys paid into the fund shall not lapse, the provisions of Article III, Section IX, Paragraph IV(c) notwithstanding; and for any matters relating to the purpose or provisions of this subparagraph. An Act creating such fund and making such provisions effective January 1, 1999, or later may originate or have originated in the Senate or the House of Representatives.

(m) There shall be within the Department of Agriculture a dog and cat reproductive sterilization support program to control dog and cat overpopulation and thereby reduce the number of animals housed and killed in animal shelters, which program shall be administered by the Commissioner of Agriculture. In order to fund the program, there shall be issued beginning in 2003 specially designed license plates promoting the program. The General Assembly shall provide by law for the issuance of such license plates and for the dedication of certain revenue derived from fees for such plates to the support of the program. All such dedicated revenue derived from special license plate fees, any funds appropriated to the department for such purposes, and any voluntary contributions or other funds made available to the department for such purposes and all interest thereon shall be deposited in a special fund for support of the program, shall not be used for any purpose other than support of the program, and shall not lapse. The General Assembly may provide by law for all matters necessary or appropriate to the implementation of this paragraph.

(n) The General Assembly may provide by law for the issuance and renewal of special motor vehicle license plates that motor vehicle owners may optionally purchase and renew for additional fees. The General Assembly may provide for all or a portion of the net revenue, as defined by the General Assembly, derived from the additional fees charged for any such special license plate to be dedicated to an agency, fund, or nonprofit corporation to implement or support programs related to the nature of the special license plate, as intended by the authorizing statute. Any dedication of funds enacted pursuant to the authority of this subparagraph may be in whole or in part for the ultimate use of a nonprofit corporation, without limitation by Article III, Section VI, Paragraph VI, if the General Assembly determines that the license plate program and such appropriation will benefit both the state and the nonprofit corporation. Any law enacted pursuant to the authority of this subparagraph may provide that funds dedicated pursuant to such law shall not lapse as otherwise required by Article III, Section IX, Paragraph IV(c). Any law enacted pursuant to the authority of this subparagraph shall be required to receive a two thirds' majority vote in both the Senate and the House of Representatives. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 3, § 9, Para. 6; Ga. L. 1986, p. 1631, § 1/SR 330; Ga. L. 1988, p. 2106, § 1/HR 552; Ga. L. 1988, p. 2125, § 1/SR 347; Ga. L. 1988, p. 2126, § 1/SR 350; Ga. L. 1990, p. 2441, § 1/HR 796; Ga. L. 1992, p. 3333, § 1/HR 840; Ga. L. 1998, p. 1683/SR 144; Ga. L. 1998, p. 1688/SR 559; Ga. L. 2002, p. 1503, § 1/HR 264; Ga. L. 2006, p. 1112, § 1/HR 1564; Ga. L. 2014, p. 887, § 1/HR 1183.)

Proposed amendment. — Amendment of the Georgia Constitution proposed by Ga. L. 2015, p. 1497, § 1/SR 7, if ratified, would add a new subparagraph to read as follows: “(o) The General Assembly may provide by general law for additional penalties in any case in any court in this state in which a person is adjudged guilty of keeping a place of prostitution, pimping, pandering, pandering by compulsion, solicitation of sodomy, masturbation for hire, trafficking of persons for sexual servitude, or sexual exploitation of children and may impose assessments on adult entertainment establishments as defined by law; and such appropriated amount shall not lapse as required by Article III, Section IX, Paragraph IV(c) and shall not be subject to the limitations of subparagraph (a) of this Paragraph, Article III, Section V, Paragraph II, Article VII, Section III, Paragraph II(a), or Article VII, Section III, Paragraph IV. The General Assembly may provide by general law for the allocation of such assessments and additional penalties to the Safe Harbor for Sexually Exploited Children Fund for the specified purpose of meeting any and all costs, or any portion of the costs, of providing care and rehabilitative and social services to individuals in this state who have been or may be sexually exploited. The General Assembly may provide by general law for the administration of such fund by such authority as the General Assembly shall determine.”

Amendment of the Georgia Constitution proposed by Ga. L. 2016, p. 895, § 1/SR 558, if ratified, would add a new subparagraph to read as follows: “(o) The proceeds of any excise tax imposed by general law on the sale of fireworks or consumer fireworks in this state shall be dedicated to the provision of trauma care, fire services, and local public safety purposes in Georgia. The General Assembly shall provide by general law for the use, dedication, and deposit of revenues raised from any such excise tax on fireworks or consumer fireworks. Contributions and revenues deposited for such purposes shall not lapse and shall not be subject to the limitations of subparagraph (a) of this Paragraph or of Article VII, Section III, Paragraph II.”

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. VI; Art. III, Sec. X, Para. VII; Art. VII, Sec. II, Para. III.

Cross references. — Provider Payment Agreement Act, § 31-8-179 et seq. Financing of state transportation system generally, § 32-2-2. Roadside enhancement and beautification, § 32-6-75.1 et seq. Creation of subsequent injury trust fund, § 34-9-352. Grants for road construction and maintenance, § 36-17-20. Use of fuel tax money for emergency defense purposes, § 38-2-172. Disposition of collected revenues, § 48-2-17. Motor fuel and road taxes generally, Ch. 9, T. 48. Peace Officer and Prosecutor Training Fund Act of 1983, § 15-21-70 et seq. Jail Construction and Staffing Act, § 15-21-90 et seq.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1986, p. 1631, § 1) which added subparagraph (f) was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 4, 1986.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1988, p. 2106, § 1) which added subparagraph (g) authorizing the creation of a Seed-Capital Fund to provide equity and other capital to certain firms engaged in innovative work in the areas of technology, manufacturing, or agriculture, providing for payments into the fund and disbursements therefrom, and providing for returns on loans and investments was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 8, 1988.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1988, p. 2125, § 1) which added subparagraph (g) (redesignated as subparagraph (h) by Ga. L. 1990, p. 2441, §§ 1, 2, approved November 6, 1990) authorizing the General Assembly to provide for additional penalties or fees in criminal or traffic cases, and to allocate such penalties or fees for the construction, operation, and staffing of jails, correctional institutions, and detention facilities by counties was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 8, 1988.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1988, p. 2126, § 1) which added subparagraph (g) (redesignated as subparagraph (i) by Ga. L. 1990, p. 2441, §§ 1, 2, approved November 6, 1990) authorizing the creation of an Indigent Care Trust Fund and authorizing contributions thereto and appropriations therefrom was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 8, 1988.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1988, p. 2110, § 1) which would have added a new subparagraph authorizing the creation of an Export Finance Fund from which funds shall be disbursed for a Georgia export finance program to provide loan guarantees, insurance, and coinsurance, to support the export of certain goods, services, and agricultural commodities produced or grown primarily in Georgia, and to provide for payments into the fund and disbursements therefrom was defeated at the general election on November 8, 1988.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1990, p. 2441, §§ 1, 2) which redesignated the last two subparagraphs designated as subparagraph (g) as subparagraphs (h) and (i), respectively, and added subparagraph (j) was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 6, 1990. Ga. L. 1990, p. 2441, also repealed and superseded the amendments proposed in Ga. L. 1990, p. 2445, relating to an emerging crops loan fund.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1992, p. 3333, § 1) which revised subparagraph (i) to provide for the dedication and deposit of revenues raised from specified sources for the purposes of funding an Indigent Care Trust Fund; to provide that moneys in the fund shall be exclusively used for primary health care programs for medically indigent citizens and children, for expansion of Medicaid eligibility and services, or for programs to support rural and other health care providers who disproportionately serve the medically indigent; and to provide that contributions and revenues deposited to the fund shall not lapse, was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 3, 1992.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1992, p. 3339, §§ 1, 2) which would have redesignated subparagraph (b) as subparagraph (b)(1) and would have added subparagraph (b)(2) with provisions as to a Transportation Trust Fund, was defeated at the general election on November 3, 1992.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1998, p. 1683) which added subparagraph (k), relating to the Brain and Spinal Injury Trust Fund, was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 3, 1998.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1998, p. 1684) which would have created the Land, Water, Wildlife, and Recreation Heritage Fund, was defeated at the general election held on November 3, 1998.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1998, p. 1688) which added the second subparagraph (k) (now (l)), relating to a roadside enhancement and beautification fund, was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 3, 1998.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 2002, p. 1503, § 1), which added subparagraph (m), was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held November 5, 2002.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 2006, p. 1112, § 1), which added subparagraph (n), was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 7, 2006.

The constitutional amendment proposed by Ga. L. 2010, p. 1261, § 1, which would have added subparagraph (o) to add a $10.00 tag fee on private passenger vehicles for state-wide trauma care, was defeated at the general election held on November 2, 2010.

The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 2014, p. 887, § 1/HR 1183) which inserted “or reckless driving” at the end of the first sentence of subsection (k), was ratified at the general election held on November 4, 2014.

Law reviews. — For article, “Health: Care and Protection of Indigent and Elderly Patients,” see 30 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 153 (2013).

For comment discussing paragraph (c), see 13 Ga. St. B.J. 50 (1976).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose of appropriation control.

— The purpose of this and other paragraphs on appropriation control is to end the practice of allocating or earmarking particular taxes for the use by any specific department, and to require the General Assembly to appropriate from the general fund specific amounts for each fiscal year for the support of each department or agency. Gregory v. Hamilton, 215 Ga. 735, 113 S.E.2d 395 (1960) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. VI).

Conditions on grants for road construction and maintenance. — The General Assembly was not prohibited from imposing as a condition for granting state funds for road construction and maintenance that for a county to be eligible a tax credit must be given on homesteads first and then on tangible personal property (exclusive of motor vehicles and trailers) in accordance with the formulas prescribed in the Act. Brown v. Wright, 231 Ga. 686, 203 S.E.2d 487 (1974).

General Assembly may attach reasonable conditions to its monetary grants to counties for road construction and maintenance. Brown v. Wright, 231 Ga. 686, 203 S.E.2d 487 (1974).

Effect of amendment on power of departments to contract. — The 1952 amendment to this paragraph (Ga. L. 1951, p. 849), neither expressly nor by necessary implication, divests the Highway Department (now Department of Transportation) of the power conferred by Ga. Const. 1976, Art. IX, Sec. VI, Para. I(a) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. III, Para. I) to contract for the use of bridge facilities from the State Bridge Building Authority (now Georgia Highway Authority) for highway purposes, and to pay annual or monthly rentals for the use of them during the contract period. McLucas v. State Bridge Bldg. Auth., 210 Ga. 1, 77 S.E.2d 531 (1953).

Earmarking of revenue derived from license fees is not constitutionally permissible. — O.C.G.A. § 19-14-21 is part of an enrolled Act (Ga. L. 1987, p. 1133) conclusively presumed to have been enacted in accordance with constitutional requirements and although subsection (b) of that section is invalid because it violates the proscription against “earmarked” taxes it does not invalidate the remainder of the section. Collins v. Woodham, 257 Ga. 643, 362 S.E.2d 61 (1987).

Environmental assurance fee provided for by O.C.G.A. § 12-13-10 is not motor fuel tax within the meaning of subparagraph (b) of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. VI. Luke v. Georgia Dep’t of Natural Resources, 270 Ga. 647, 513 S.E.2d 728 (1999).

Cited in State Ports Auth. v. Arnall, 201 Ga. 713, 41 S.E.2d 246 (1947); Weeks v. Georgia State Hwy. Auth., 217 Ga. 14, 120 S.E.2d 620 (1961).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Purpose of this paragraph is to require General Assembly to make a yearly appropriation of specific sum of money for each department or agency. 1972 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 72-112 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. VI).

Authority of Governor to curtail legislative appropriations. — Governor, as director of budget, is authorized to restrict and curtail legislative appropriations where anticipated income of state would otherwise be exceeded. 1952-53 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 276.

This paragraph generally prohibits state organizations from collecting money and using that money for their own programs. 1971 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 71-126 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. VI).

Allocation of particular source of income for particular agency precluded. — This paragraph and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VII, Sec. II, Para. III (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. III, Para. II), preclude both the practice of allocating particular sources of income for the use of a particular agency and the allocation of the fees, or any part of the fees, collected by the various examining boards to meet their expenses, and further preclude any implied commitment on the part of the General Assembly to appropriate to the examining boards an amount equal to the total fees generated. 1976 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 76-93 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. VI).

Earmarking revenue sources to designated agencies. — A statute which attempts to earmark receipts from certain revenue sources as an appropriation to a certain agency is unconstitutional. 1972 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 72-107.

Collections from delinquent accounts must be paid into general fund. — While this paragraph and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VII, Sec. II, Para. III (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VII, Sec. III, Para. II) do not specifically provide that money recovered for contractual violations or delinquent accounts be paid into the treasury, such money must be paid into the state treasury, and not earmarked. 1971 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 71-126 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. VI).

Failure to appropriate full estimated amount committed by para. VI(b), freeing a corresponding amount of estimated available funds for appropriation for other purposes, is unconstitutional. 1980 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 80-30 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. VI).

Legislature may authorize courts to assess additional penalties at time bond is set. — The General Assembly may by legislation authorize courts, when assessing additional penalty provided for under paragraph (d), to make such assessment at time bond is set. 1981 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U81-43. (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. VI).

What are activities incident to maintaining roads. — To construct and maintain a system of public roads, streets, sidewalks, bridges, and appurtenances, and to provide traffic control devices and equipment to control and accommodate the flow of traffic therein would be “activities incident to providing and maintaining an adequate system of public roads and bridges in this State” under the provisions of this paragraph, and Ga. L. 1965, p. 458, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 36-40-41) declares the same within its latitude.

1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 65-40 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. IX, Para. VI).

Method of distribution of funds to Georgia Real Estate Commission. — The lawful method of distribution of funds to the Georgia Real Estate Commission calls for the Secretary of State to exercise the Secretary's discretion in dividing the total appropriation for the joint secretary's office among the various examining boards including the Georgia Real Estate Commission. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-93.

Continuing appropriation for State Ports Authority not allowed. — The General Assembly may not set aside a continuing appropriation for 31 years for the purpose of developing ports under the jurisdiction of the State Ports Authority. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 645.

Department of Transportation may not utilize motor fuel tax funds to construct walkways on bridges for purpose of fishing. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-96.

Department of Transportation is authorized to construct and maintain airports, but use of funds for that purpose, unless specifically appropriated by the legislature, would be unconstitutional. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 267.

Department of Transportation not to use motor fuel tax funds for bicycle paths. — Motor fuel tax funds may not lawfully be used by the Department of Transportation for the planning, designing, purchase of right of way and easements, construction, and maintenance of ways for the sole travel of bicycles off the State Highway System. 1973 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 73-133.

Appropriation of interest on motor fuel tax revenues. — Interest earned on motor fuel tax revenues is constitutionally appropriated for activities incident to the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 84-6.

Subsequent Injury Trust Fund. — The Subsequent Injury Trust Fund is not subject to the requirement that monies be paid into the general fund of the state treasury. 1993 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 93-28.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 39 Am. Jur. 2d, Highways, Streets, and Bridges, § 130 et seq.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 404 et seq.

ALR. — Particularity of specification of purpose required in appropriation bill, 20 ALR 981.

Paragraph VII. Appropriations void, when.

Any appropriation made in conflict with any of the foregoing provisions shall be void.

1976 Constitution. — Art. III, Sec. X, Para. VIII.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in State Ports Auth. v. Arnall, 201 Ga. 713, 41 S.E.2d 246 (1947).

SECTION X.

RETIREMENT SYSTEMS

Paragraph

- I. Expenditure of public funds authorized.
- II. Increasing benefits authorized.
- III. Retirement systems covering employees of county boards of education.
- IV. Firemen's pension system.

Paragraph

- V. Funding standards.
- V-A. Limitation on involuntary separation benefits for Governor of the State of Georgia.
- VI. Involuntary separation; part-time service.

Paragraph I. Expenditure of public funds authorized.

Public funds may be expended for the purpose of paying benefits and other costs of retirement and pension systems for public officers and employees and their beneficiaries.

1976 Constitution. — Art. X, Sec. I, Paras. I-III.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Payment of retirement benefits to school employees is not an expenditure for an "educational purpose." — Rather, payment of retirement benefits for county school employees from general county funds is authorized by Ga. Const. 1976, Art. X, Sec. I, Paras. I-III (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. X, Para. I) and by Ga. Const. 1976, Art. IX, Sec. V, Para. II (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. IV, Para. II), as it represents a separate and distinct public purpose. Lomax v. McBrayer, 248 Ga. 753, 286 S.E.2d 35 (1982).

Retirement of elected judicial officers. — The Georgia Constitution does not prohibit the award to elected judicial officers of creditable service for retirement purposes based upon accrued but unused annual leave and sick leave. Arneson v. Board of Trustees, 257 Ga. 579, 361 S.E.2d 805 (1987).

Cited in Young v. State, 132 Ga. App. 790, 209 S.E.2d 96 (1974); Teachers Retirement Sys. v. City of Atlanta, 249 Ga. 196, 288 S.E.2d 200 (1982).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Employees of Southern Interstate Nuclear Board. — Subject to restriction regarding participation in more than one program, employees of Southern Interstate Nuclear Board are eligible for coverage by the Georgia State Employees' Retirement System; a contractual arrangement approved by the Governor would be the proper means of providing this coverage. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-22.

Supplemental retirement plan at Medical College of Georgia. — It is within the authority of the Board of Regents to establish a supplemental retirement plan at the Medical College of Georgia. 1999 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U99-10.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 60A Am. Jur. 2d, Pensions and Retirement Funds, § 1166 et seq.

C.J.S. — 78 C.J.S., Schools and School Districts, § 481 et seq.

ALR. — Disciplinary suspension of public employee as affecting computation of length of service for retirement or pension purposes, 6 ALR2d 506.

Mandatory retirement of public officer or employee based on age, 81 ALR3d 811.

Paragraph II. Increasing benefits authorized.

Public funds may be expended for the purpose of increasing benefits being paid pursuant to any retirement or pension system wholly or partially supported from public funds.

1976 Constitution. — Art. X, Sec. I, Para. V.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Carter v. Haynes, 228 Ga. 462, 186 S.E.2d 115 (1971); Richmond County

v. Pierce, 234 Ga. 274, 215 S.E.2d 665 (1975).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, opinions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. X, Sec. I, Para. V and antecedent provisions, relating to the ability of the General Assembly to provide for increased retirement benefits, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Increases in teacher's retirement benefits arising from state funds. — A constitutional amendment would be necessary to authorize an increase in retirement benefits, to be paid from state funds, to retired teachers in any local system funded through appropriations made by municipal corporations, counties, or any political subdivision. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-14.

A supplemental retirement plan for public employees which does not require a substantial benefit to the employer, in the form of new service or otherwise, violates the prohibitions against governmental gratuities and extra compensation for services rendered. 1996 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U96-21.

Effect of §§ 47-3-120 and 47-3-124 and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. X, Sec. I, Para. V (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. X, Para. II). — Upon reading Ga. L. 1975, p. 357, §§ 2 and 3, Ga. L. 1975, p. 1328, § 1 and Ga. L. 1974, p. 1139, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 47-3-120 and 47-3-124) within the context of the provisions concerning teacher retirement systems (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 3, T. 47), and upon considering precipitant events leading to passage of the provisions, it became evident that the aforementioned Georgia laws (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 47-3-120 and 47-3-124) and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. X, Sec. I, Para. V (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. X, Para. II) were designed to include theretofore excluded local fund retirees under the minimum Teachers Retirement System benefits statute. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-9.

Ga. L. 1975, p. 357, §§ 2 and 3, Ga. L. 1975, p. 1328, § 1 and Ga. L. 1974, p. 1139, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 47-3-120 and 47-3-124) were accompanied by and conditioned upon ratification of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. X, Sec. I, Para. V (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. X, Para. II), an amendment to the Georgia Constitution authorizing the General Assembly to provide by law Teachers Retirement System retirement benefits to teachers retiring with a local retirement fund. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-9.

A retired member of the Teachers Retirement System is entitled to receive the $9.00 minimum retirement benefits whether the member is retired as a member of the TRS or is receiving minimum retirement benefits by virtue of the member's teaching service under a local retirement fund. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-27.

Application. — This paragraph should not be applied to persons who neither render services as public school employees nor made the required contributions to the Public School Employees' Retirement System. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-73. (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. X, Para. II).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Increase of pension benefits as applicable to those already receiving benefits, 118 ALR 992.

Paragraph III. Retirement systems covering employees of county boards of education.

Notwithstanding Article IX, Section II, Paragraph III(a)(14), the authority to establish or modify heretofore existing local retirement systems covering employees of county boards of education shall continue to be vested in the General Assembly.

1976 Constitution. — Art. X, Sec. I, Para. III.

Paragraph IV. Firemen's pension system.

The powers of taxation may be exercised by the state through the General Assembly and the counties and municipalities for the purpose of paying pensions and other benefits and costs under a firemen's pension system or systems. The taxes so levied may be collected by such firemen's pension system or systems and disbursed therefrom by authority of the General Assembly for the purposes therein authorized.

1976 Constitution. — Art. X, Sec. I, Para. IV.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 60A Am. Jur. 2d, Pensions and Retirement Funds, § 1185 et seq.

Paragraph V. Funding standards.

It shall be the duty of the General Assembly to enact legislation to define funding standards which will assure the actuarial soundness of any retirement or pension system supported wholly or partially from public funds and to control legislative procedures so that no bill or resolution creating or amending any such retirement or pension system shall be passed by the General Assembly without concurrent provisions for funding in accordance with the defined funding standards.

1976 Constitution. — Art. X, Sec. I, Para. II.

Cross references. — Public retirement systems standards, § 47-20-1 et seq.

Paragraph V-A. Limitation on involuntary separation benefits for Governor of the State of Georgia.

Any other provisions of this Constitution to the contrary notwithstanding, no past, present, or future Governor of the State of Georgia who ceases or ceased to hold office as Governor for any reason, except for medical disability, shall receive a retirement benefit based on involuntary separation from employment as a result of ceasing to hold office as Governor. The provisions of any law in conflict with this Paragraph are null and void effective January 1, 1985. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 3, § 10, Para. 5-A, approved by Ga. L. 1984, p. 1714, § 1/SR 307.)

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1984, p. 1714, § 1) which added this paragraph was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 6, 1984.

Paragraph VI. Involuntary separation; part-time service.

(a) Any public retirement or pension system provided for by law in existence prior to January 1, 1985, may be changed by the General Assembly for any one or more of the following purposes:

(1) To redefine involuntary separation from employment; or

(2) To provide additional or revise existing limitations or restrictions on the right to qualify for a retirement benefit based on involuntary separation from employment.

(b) The General Assembly by law may define or redefine part-time service, including but not limited to service as a member of the General Assembly, for the purposes of any public retirement or pension system presently existing or created in the future and may limit or restrict the use of such part-time service as creditable service under any such retirement or pension system.

(c) Any law enacted by the General Assembly pursuant to subparagraph (a) or (b) of this Paragraph may affect persons who are members of public retirement or pension systems on January 1, 1985, and who became members at any time prior to that date.

(d) Any law enacted by the General Assembly pursuant to subparagraph (a) or (b) of this Paragraph shall not be subject to any law controlling legislative procedures for the consideration of retirement or pension bills, including, but not limited to, any limitations on the sessions of the General Assembly at which retirement or pension bills may be introduced.

(e) No public retirement or pension system created on or after January 1, 1985, shall grant any person whose retirement is based on involuntary separation from employment a retirement or pension benefit more favorable than the retirement or pension benefit granted to a person whose separation from employment is voluntary. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 3, § 10, Para. 6, approved by Ga. L. 1984, p. 1726, § 1/SR 274.)

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1984, p. 1726, § 1) which added this paragraph was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 6, 1984.

ARTICLE IV.CONSTITUTIONAL BOARDS AND COMMISSIONS

Section

- I. Public Service Commission.
- II. State Board of Pardons and Paroles.
- III. State Personnel Board.
- IV. State Transportation Board.
- V. Veterans Service Board.
- VI. Board of Natural Resources.
- VII. Qualifications, Compensation, Removal from Office, and Powers and Duties of Members of Constitutional Boards and Commissions.
- VIII. Georgia Citizens Commission on Compensation of Public Officials.

SECTION I.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION

Paragraph

- I. Public Service Commission.

Paragraph I. Public Service Commission.

(a) There shall be a Public Service Commission for the regulation of utilities which shall consist of five members who shall be elected by the people. The Commissioners in office on June 30, 1983, shall serve until December 31 after the general election at which the successor of each member is elected. Thereafter, all succeeding terms of members shall be for six years. Members shall serve until their successors are elected and qualified. A chairman shall be selected by the members of the commission from its membership.

(b) The commission shall be vested with such jurisdiction, powers, and duties as provided by law.

(c) The filling of vacancies and manner and time of election of members of the commission shall be as provided by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. IV, Sec. I, Para. I.

Cross references. — Georgia Public Service Commission generally, Ch. 2, T. 46.

Law reviews. — For comment on Georgia Power Co. v. Allied Chem. Corp., 233 Ga. 558, 212 S.E.2d 628 (1975), see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 341 (1975).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Effect of paragraph on Commission. — This paragraph does not change the character or nature of the office as to the powers, duties, and functions of the Public Service Commission. It simply makes the Commission a constitutional agency of the state and not merely a creature of the General Assembly. The members of the Commission in office continue with the same powers and duties as then provided by law, or that may be prescribed in the future. It does not clothe the Commission or its members with the robe of the sovereign state nor immunize them from judicial process, in cases where their action is subject to judicial review. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 205 Ga. 863, 55 S.E.2d 618 (1949) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. I, Para. D).

Grant of authority not a divestiture of regulatory power. — The grant of authority to regulate public utilities to the Public Service Commission, to the exclusion of other executive branch agencies, does not mean that the General Assembly has divested itself of its constitutional power to regulate public utilities. Lasseter v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 253 Ga. 227, 319 S.E.2d 824 (1984).

Public Service Commission has power to regulate rates and practices of public utilities. Gas Light Co. v. Georgia Power Co., 440 F.2d 1135 (5th Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1062, 92 S. Ct. 732, 30 L. Ed. 2d 750 (1972).

This paragraph fixes sole power for determination of what are reasonable rates in the Public Service Commission. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Invenchek, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 798, 204 S.E.2d 457 (1974) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. I, Para. I).

Function of making telephone rates is legislative in nature, and such rates cannot be judicially fixed by courts. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 203 Ga. 832, 49 S.E.2d 38 (1948).

Residency requirement upheld for candidates. — Requiring appellee candidate to reside in the district for 12 months prior to the general election did not deny the candidate equal protection under the United States Constitution or the Georgia Constitution as the residency requirement for election to the Georgia Public Service Commission was rationally related to the state's legitimate interests in fostering informed voters and promoting knowledgeable and responsive candidates with ties to the community, and did not place an unreasonable burden on the right of voters to choose a candidate or the right of the candidate to run for public office. Cox v. Barber, 275 Ga. 415, 568 S.E.2d 478 (2002), cert. denied, 537 U.S. 1109, 123 S. Ct. 851, 154 L. Ed. 2d 780 (2003).

Compatibility of effect of rate schedule on municipal exercise of discretion. — Any indirect effect which a rate schedule might have upon a municipality's exercise of its discretion in granting franchises is entirely compatible with the authority granted the municipalities by Ga. L. 1976, p. 188, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 36-34-2(7)). City of Lithonia v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 238 Ga. 339, 232 S.E.2d 832 (1977).

Included within general power to fix rates is power to limit liability of utility for negligence in curtailment of service. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co., 245 Ga. 5, 262 S.E.2d 895 (1980).

Fact that Public Service Commission is constitutional body does not make action against it one against state. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 205 Ga. 863, 55 S.E.2d 618 (1949).

Contract for total energy system subject to regulation. — A contract between a public utility and its landlord to furnish a total energy system (hot and cold water and electricity included) was not a private nonutility contract and was, therefore, subject to regulation by the Public Service Commission. Atlanta Gas Light Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 228 Ga. 347, 185 S.E.2d 403 (1971).

Utility cannot avoid regulation of natural gas by conversion into electricity. — Where a public utility would be subject to regulation if it sold only natural gas to a customer, it cannot avoid regulation of its rates by converting the gas into a total energy service, which includes electricity; thus, a utility is also subject to regulation. Atlanta Gas Light Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 228 Ga. 347, 185 S.E.2d 403 (1971).

Cited in Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n v.

City of Albany, 180 Ga. 355, 179 S.E. 369 (1935); Gas Light Co. v. Georgia Power Co., 313 F. Supp. 860 (M.D. Ga. 1970); Georgia Power Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 231 Ga. 339, 201 S.E.2d 423 (1973); Georgia Power Co. v. Allied Chem. Corp., 233 Ga. 558, 212 S.E.2d 628 (1975).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Manner of election of Commissioners. — Members of the Public Service Commission should be elected in the same manner as the Governor. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 161.

Private contractual agreements between regulated utilities. — Public Service Commission required to give private contractual agreements between regulated utilities only such weight as it deems necessary, and should disregard such agreements if they prove contrary to the public interest. 1960-61 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 429.

No jurisdiction to regulate rates for use of steam. — Absent legislative enactment, the Public Service Commission is without jurisdiction to regulate rates charged by an electric power company for steam which is generated as a by-product of the company's manufacture of electricity. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-91.

O.C.G.A. § 46-2-5 is constitutional; the Georgia Public Service Commission does not have the authority to declare the statute unconstitutional; the Commission is not free to disregard the statute; the Commission may not select a chairman for a two-year term; and a chairman whose term commences on July 1, 2009, may serve beyond January 16, 2010, only if there are no other commissioners eligible to serve as chairman under O.C.G.A. § 46-2-5(b)(2). 2009 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2009-4.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 64 Am. Jur. 2d, Public Utilities, § 143 et seq.

C.J.S. — 73B C.J.S., Public Utilities, § 148 et seq.

ALR. — Federal control of public utilities, 8 ALR 969; 10 ALR 956; 11 ALR 1450; 14 ALR 234; 19 ALR 678; 52 ALR 296.

Regulating issuance of securities by public utilities through public service commissions, 41 ALR 889.

Jurisdiction of public service commission over carriers transporting by motor trucks or busses, 103 ALR 268.

Time as of which eligibility or ineligibility to office is to be determined, 143 ALR 1026.

Right of public utility to discontinue line or branch on ground that it is unprofitable, 10 ALR2d 1121.

Legislative power to prescribe qualifications for or conditions of eligibility to constitutional office, 34 ALR2d 155.

Community antenna television systems (CATV) as subject to jurisdiction of state public utility or service commission, 61 ALR3d 1150.

SECTION II.

STATE BOARD OF PARDONS AND PAROLES

Paragraph

I. State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Paragraph

II. Powers and authority.

Law reviews. — For annual survey article on criminal law and procedure, see 46 Mercer L. Rev. 153 (1994).

Paragraph I. State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

There shall be a State Board of Pardons and Paroles which shall consist of five members appointed by the Governor, subject to confirmation by the Senate. The members of the board in office on June 30, 1983, shall serve out the remainder of their respective terms, provided that the expiration date of the term of any such member shall be December 31 of the year in which the member's term expires. As each term of office expires, the Governor shall appoint a successor as herein provided. All such terms of members shall be for seven years. A chairman shall be selected by the members of the board from its membership.

1976 Constitution. — Art. IV, Sec. II, Para. I.

Cross references. — State Board of Pardons and Paroles, § 42-9-1 et seq.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Qualification of membership. — This paragraph does not include any qualification of membership or any penalty by forfeiture of office for engaging in another business or profession. Partain v. Maddox, 227 Ga. 623, 182 S.E.2d 450 (1971) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. I, Para. II).

Authority of Governor as to vacancies in office. — The authority given to the Governor to fill a vacancy does not include the right to declare that a vacancy exists, or to accept an undated resignation given years before. Partain v. Maddox, 227 Ga. 623, 182 S.E.2d 450 (1971).

Parole conditions. — The trial court erred by requiring defendant to waive defendant's fourth amendment right as a condition of parole, since any attempt by a court to impose its will over the Executive Department by attempting to impose as a part of a criminal sentence conditions operating as a prerequisite of or becoming automatically effective in the event of a subsequent parole of defendant by the State Board of Pardons and Parole would be a nullity and constitute an exercise of power granted exclusively to the Executive. Stephens v. State, 207 Ga. App. 645, 428 S.E.2d 661 (1993).

Paragraph II. Powers and authority.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in this Paragraph, the State Board of Pardons and Paroles shall be vested with the power of executive clemency, including the powers to grant reprieves, pardons, and paroles; to commute penalties; to remove disabilities imposed by law; and to remit any part of a sentence for any offense against the state after conviction.

(b)(1) When a sentence of death is commuted to life imprisonment, the board shall not have the authority to grant a pardon to the convicted person until such person has served at least 25 years in the penitentiary; and such person shall not become eligible for parole at any time prior to serving at least 25 years in the penitentiary.

(2) The General Assembly may by general law approved by two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the General Assembly in a roll-call vote provide for minimum mandatory sentences and for sentences which are required to be served in their entirety for persons convicted of armed robbery, kidnapping, rape, aggravated child molestation, aggravated sodomy, or aggravated sexual battery and, when so provided by such Act, the board shall not have the authority to consider such persons for pardon, parole, or commutation during that portion of the sentence.

(3) The General Assembly may by general law approved by two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the General Assembly in a roll-call vote provide for the imposition of sentences of life without parole for persons convicted of murder and for persons who having been previously convicted of murder, armed robbery, kidnapping, rape, aggravated child molestation, aggravated sodomy, or aggravated sexual battery or having been previously convicted under the laws of any other state or of the United States of a crime which if committed in this state would be one of those offenses and who after such previous conviction subsequently commits and is convicted of one of those offenses and, when so provided by such Act, the board shall not have the authority to consider such persons for pardon, parole, or commutation from any portion of such sentence.

(4) Any general law previously enacted by the General Assembly providing for life without parole or for mandatory service of sentences without suspension, probation, or parole is hereby ratified and approved but such provisions shall be subject to amendment or repeal by general law.

(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraph (b) of this Paragraph, the General Assembly, by law, may prohibit the board from granting and may prescribe the terms and conditions for the board's granting a pardon or parole to:

(1) Any person incarcerated for a second or subsequent time for any offense for which such person could have been sentenced to life imprisonment; and

(2) Any person who has received consecutive life sentences as the result of offenses occurring during the same series of acts.

(d) The chairman of the board, or any other member designated by the board, may suspend the execution of a sentence of death until the full board shall have an opportunity to hear the application of the convicted person for any relief within the power of the board.

(e) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this Paragraph, the State Board of Pardons and Paroles shall have the authority to pardon any person convicted of a crime who is subsequently determined to be innocent of said crime or to issue a medical reprieve to an entirely incapacitated person suffering a progressively debilitating terminal illness or parole any person who is age 62 or older. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 4, § 2, Para. 2; Ga. L. 1994, p. 2015, § 1.)

1976 Constitution. — Art. IV, Sec. II, Para. I; Art. V, Sec. II, Para. II.

Cross references. — Power of judges to suspend or probate sentences, § 17-10-1. State Board of Pardons and Paroles generally, Ch. 9, T. 42. Powers of State Board of Pardons and Paroles, § 42-9-20. Governor without power as to pardons or paroles, § 42-9-56. Restrictions on relief for person serving a second life sentence, § 42-9-39.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1994, p. 2015, § 1) which revised subparagraphs (b) and (e) to authorize the General Assembly to provide by two-thirds vote for mandatory service of sentences for persons convicted of armed robbery, kidnapping, rape, aggravated child molestation, aggravated sodomy, or aggravated sexual battery without possibility of pardon, parole, or commutation during that portion of the sentence, to provide in the same manner for sentences of life without parole for persons convicted of murder and those who have been convicted a second time of any of the above offenses, and to provide exceptions as to persons convicted of a crime and subsequently determined to be innocent of that crime or determined to be medically incapacitated, and as to certain elderly persons was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 8, 1994.

Administrative Rules and Regulations. — Pardons and paroles, Official Compilation of Rules and Regulations of State of Georgia, Rules of State Board of Pardons and Paroles, Chs. 475-1 through 475-3.

Law reviews. — For article discussing areas in which attorneys may represent clients before the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, see 13 Ga. St. B.J. 46 (1976).

For note on the 1994 amendment of this paragraph, see 11 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 37 (1994).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Effect of pardon is to release the punishment and blot out the guilt. United States v. Athens Armory, 35 Ga. 344 (N.D. Ga. 1868).

Effect of reprieve. — A reprieve by the executive is nothing but a temporary suspension for the period named in the respite of the execution of the sentence imposed by the court. Gore v. Humphries, 163 Ga. 106, 135 S.E. 481 (1926).

Stay of execution. — The contention that only the Governor can stay the execution of a sentence in a case where such sentence has been suspended by the Governor in the exercise of the Governor's right to suspend the sentence by reprieve is untenable under Ga. L. 1924, p. 195, § 7 (see now O.C.G.A. § 17-10-40). Gore v. Humphries, 163 Ga. 106, 135 S.E. 481 (1926) (decided under Ga. Const. 1877, Art. V, Sec. I, Para. XII, relating to the Governor's power to suspend execution of sentences).

Conditional pardon may be granted. Carmichael v. Banks, 102 Ga. 217, 29 S.E. 211 (1897).

Paragraph will not be given retroactive application. Whittle v. Jones, 198 Ga. 538, 32 S.E.2d 94 (1944), appeal dismissed, 324 U.S. 829, 65 S. Ct. 915, 89 L. Ed. 1396 (1945) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. II, Para. II).

Retroactive application of provision regarding fourth-offender recidivists. — Decision of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles to eliminate plaintiff's parole eligibility which constituted a change in the policy of the Board to grant parole to persons convicted under the recidivist statute did not violate the ex post facto clause of the United States Constitution. Metheny v. Hammonds, 216 F.3d 1307 (11th Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1196, 121 S. Ct. 1200, 149 L. Ed. 2d 114 (2001), vacating and remanding Metheny v. Hammonds, 39 F. Supp. 2d 1381 (M.D. Ga. 1999).

Court will not rule on validity of paragraph where prior provision would have same effect. Whittle v. Jones, 198 Ga. 538, 32 S.E.2d 94 (1944), appeal dismissed, 324 U.S. 829, 65 S. Ct. 915, 89 L. Ed. 1396 (1945) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. II, Para. II).

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-16, the life-without-parole statute, does not violate separation of powers doctrine because it imposes legislative restrictions on the Board of Pardons and Paroles to grant parole. Freeman v. State, 264 Ga. 27, 440 S.E.2d 181 (1994).

Authority of board to parole drug traffickers. — Where O.C.G.A. § 16-13-31(d) provides that the adjudication of guilt or imposition of sentence not be suspended, probated, deferred or withheld, and where the term “paroled” is not expressly included, it does not conflict with the parole authority given the State Board of Pardons and Paroles under the Georgia Constitution. Paras v. State, 247 Ga. 75, 274 S.E.2d 451 (1981).

Parole conditions. — The trial court erred by requiring defendant to waive the defendant’s fourth amendment right as a condition of parole, since any attempt by a court to impose its will over the Executive Department by attempting to impose as a part of a criminal sentence conditions operating as a prerequisite of or becoming automatically effective in the event of a subsequent parole of defendant by the State Board of Pardons and Parole would be a nullity and constitute an exercise of power granted exclusively to the Executive. Stephens v. State, 207 Ga. App. 645, 428 S.E.2d 661 (1993).

Nature of power discretionary. — The power of the board to grant reprieves, pardons, and paroles, to commute penalties, to remove disabilities imposed by law, and to remit parts of sentences is discretionary. Justice v. State Bd. of Par- dons & Paroles, 234 Ga. 749, 218 S.E.2d 45 (1975).

Separate and distinct powers. — An “Order of Restoration of Civil and Political Rights” issued by the Board of Pardons and Paroles did not constitute a pardon of an applicant to become a professional bondsperson, since the Board’s authority to grant pardons is an entirely separate and distinct power from its authority to remove disabilities imposed by law. Harrison v. Wigington, 269 Ga. 388, 497 S.E.2d 568 (1998).

Right of condemned prisoner to seek commutation. — This paragraph and Ga. L. 1943, p. 185 (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 9, T. 42) provide that a person sentenced to the extreme penalty of the law may make application for commutation of that person’s sentence. It is the clear intent of this paragraph and the law that consideration and action upon one application for commutation by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles is all that the prisoner may demand as a matter of right. Whether or not a second application would be considered and acted upon by the board would be a matter for their discretion. McLendon v. Everett, 205 Ga. 713, 55 S.E.2d 119 (1949) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. II, Para. II).

Confidentiality provisions of Ga. L. 1975, p. 786, § 4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 42-9-53) apply to information, documents, memoranda, and records of State Board of Pardons and Paroles except those required to be made available to the General Assembly under this paragraph (requirement now deleted), and except the transcripts of any hearing conducted by the board in any matter. Morris v. State, 246 Ga. 510, 272 S.E.2d 254 (1980) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. II, Para. II).

O.C.G.A. § 42-9-53 is constitutional under this paragraph. Morris v. State, 246 Ga. 510, 272 S.E.2d 254 (1980) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. II, Para. II).

Remitted fine is recoverable. Parrott v. Wilson, 51 Ga. 255 (1874).

Contract to obtain a pardon legitimately is valid. Formby v. Pryor, 15 Ga. 258 (1854); Bird v. Meadows, 25 Ga. 251 (1858).

Revocation of probation impossible if probation previously terminated.

— Trial court erred in granting the state's motion to revoke defendant's probation for a probation violation as the Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles had terminated the probationary portion of defendant's sentences and had restored defendant's civil and political rights; the state could not meet its initial burden to show a sentence of probation. White v. State, 274 Ga. App. 805, 619 S.E.2d 333 (2005).

Inmate had no due process right to collect testimony from prison staff.

— Death row inmate's suit under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 arising out of a warden's forbidding prison staff to testify for the inmate in a clemency hearing was properly dismissed for failure to state a claim because the Due Process Clause did not guarantee state prisoners a right to acquire such testimony, nor did it bar state officials from limiting prisoners' access to such testimony, despite a Georgia statute allowing the Board of Pardons and Paroles to collect all available information. Gissendaner v. Comm'r, Ga. Dep't of Corr., 794 F.3d 1327 (11th Cir. 2015), cert. denied, stay denied, 136 S. Ct. 25, 2015 U.S. LEXIS 4672, 192 L. Ed. 2d 996 (U.S. 2015).

Cited in Muckle v. Clarke, 191 Ga. 202, 12 S.E.2d 339 (1940); Matthews v. Everett, 201 Ga. 730, 41 S.E.2d 148 (1947); Turner v. Wilburn, 206 Ga. 149, 56 S.E.2d 285 (1949); Parks v. State, 206 Ga. 675, 58 S.E.2d 142 (1950); Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 96 S. Ct. 2909, 49 L. Ed. 2d 859 (1976); Green v. State, 244 Ga. 755, 262 S.E.2d 68 (1979); Johns v. State, 160 Ga. App. 535, 287 S.E.2d 617 (1981); Charron v. State Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 253 Ga. 274, 319 S.E.2d 453 (1984); Guyton v. State, 272 Ga. 529, 531 S.E.2d 94 (2000); Stinski v. State, 286 Ga. 839, 691 S.E.2d 854 (2010).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION POWERS OF BOARD

General Consideration

Section 17-10-7 is unconstitutional.

— O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7, providing that a habitual criminal shall not be eligible for parole, is unconstitutional and may be ignored. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 519. Metheny v. Hammonds, 216 F.3d 1307 (11th Cir. 2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1196, 121 S. Ct. 1200, 149 L. Ed. 2d 114 (2001).

Responsibility to release prisoners with perfect conduct records. — Responsibility of releasing prisoners who have served their minimum terms with perfect conduct records rests on State Board of Pardons and Paroles, and not on the State Board of Corrections (now Department of Offender Rehabilitation) or the director thereof. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 193.

Language of this paragraph covers misdemeanors, and therefore it would be necessary to change the Constitution in order to eliminate, as a matter of law, misdemeanor prisoners from consideration for parole. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 3 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. II, Para. II).

Effect of pardon on extraordinary rights. — The right to operate a motor vehicle, to practice a profession, and other extraordinary rights granted and regulated by the state under its police power are not affected by a pardon. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 506.

One pardoned for traffic offense not entitled to reinstatement of driver's license. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 506.

Availability of files to Governor. — It was not the intent of the law that the records of the board be kept secret from the Governor; files relating to a parole action should be made available to the Governor at the Governor's request. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-51.

Not necessary for orders to use particular caption. — The State Board of Pardons and Paroles may entitle or refer to orders authorized to be entered by the Constitution or statutes by employing whatever caption it deems appropriate; it is not necessary for the board to employ such words as "reprieve," "pardon," "parole," "commutation," or "remission" in the caption of its orders. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-210.

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Powers of Board

Paragraph a limitation on commutation of death penalty. — Georgia Laws 1976, p. 1865 is a limitation on the authority of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles to grant pardons or paroles to persons whose death penalties are commuted by the board after January 1, 1977, or persons who are convicted of armed robbery after January 1, 1977. 1977 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 77-17.

Clemency. — Under current Georgia law, the board may extend clemency only after conviction. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 82-101.

Meaning of phrase "after conviction." — The phrase "after conviction" as contained in this paragraph does not mean that the power to grant parole exists at any and all times following conviction. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-97 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. II, Para. II).

Board may not review original record of trial for purpose of determining guilt or innocence of defendant, but may consider it on the question of clemency. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 443.

State Board of Corrections may not release inmate into custody of officials of other state. — Neither the Attorney General nor the State Board of Corrections may release an inmate of the Georgia penal system into the custody of officials of another state in order for the inmate to be tried in the criminal courts of the foreign state. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-304.

One under 16 years of age who commits crime may be pardoned. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 626.

Juvenile committed to Department of Human Resources may be pardoned. — A person convicted of a crime before reaching the age of 17 loses the person's right to vote if convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude even though he is committed to the Department of Human Resources, rather than sentenced to the Board of Corrections; the right to vote and other civil and political rights, however, may be restored by the State Board of Pardons and Paroles. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-17.

Board is not empowered to grant clemency where offense is criminal contempt of court. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 79-36.

Suspension of sentence in event of parole by other state approved. — Where a prisoner is incarcerated in another state and is serving its and Georgia sentences concurrently, a provision for suspension of the Georgia sentence in the event of a parole by the other state authorities does not usurp the functions of the Board of Pardons and Paroles. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-147.

Conditional release approved. — Under this paragraph and Ga. L. 1943, p. 185 (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 9, T. 42), the board may, if it deems it necessary and proper in the interest of the prisoner and the public, grant to such prisoner a conditional release providing therein that such release is conditioned upon the prisoner's remaining in a state hospital and continuing the treatment prescribed by the members of the staff until such time as the prisoner has been cured of an illness, or the illness reduced to such point where the physicians in charge of the prisoner's case deem it prudent and safe for the prisoner and the general public that the prisoner be dismissed from the hospital. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 504 (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. II, Para. II).

Power to assess fine in lieu of imprisonment. — Board has the power to commute a sentence of imprisonment to present service upon the condition that the prisoner pay a fine in the sum fixed within the law by the board, or upon such other conditions which are not illegal, immoral, or impossible of performance. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 446.

Board has authority to commute sentence from six months in jail to six months in county correctional institution. 1952-53 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 137.

Effect of reprieve. — A reprieve is the withdrawing of any sentence for an interval of time, it does no more than stay the execution of the sentence for a period of time. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 200.

Reprieve for purpose of medical treatment. — Board may, in its discretion, grant a reprieve of a sentence for a specified period of time to enable a prisoner to obtain medical treatments outside of the confines of a state penal institution. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-205.

When prisoner under reprieve may leave state for medical treatment. — Board may not permit a prisoner to leave the state under a reprieve order so long as board's own rule prohibits such practice; however, there is no constitutional or statutory provision which would prevent the board from granting a reprieve, for medical purposes, when the members of the board know that the prisoner intends to leave the state for the purpose of securing medical treatment if the board changed its rule. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-205.

Effect of medical treatment on sentence. — Where a prisoner receives a reprieve of the prisoner's sentence for the purpose of receiving medical treatment, the prisoner's sentence does not run during the time the prisoner is outside the penitentiary. 1957 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 200.

Constitutional limitations on power of Board of Pardons and Paroles. — As of January 1, 1995, there are additional constitutional limitations on the power of the Board of Pardons and Paroles to parole which now are the clear prerogative of the General Assembly to proscribe. They include the inability to parole during the mandatory minimum sentence for the seven serious violent felonies set out in O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6.1, the inability to parole for sentences of life without parole as set out in O.C.G.A. §§ 17-10-7(b)(2) and 17-10-16, and the inability to parole for felony recidivists who are convicted for a fourth or subsequent such offense. Other felons and misdemeanants are required to serve the minimum time prescribed in O.C.G.A. § 42-9-45(b) subject to the authority reserved by statute to the board in O.C.G.A. § 42-9-46 to consider for clemency upon complying with certain notice procedures. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 95-4.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 67A C.J.S., Pardon and Parole, § 1 et seq.

ALR. — Power of executive to pardon one committed for contempt, 23 ALR 524; 26 ALR 21; 38 ALR 171; 63 ALR 226.

Constitutionality of statute conferring on court power to suspend sentence, 26 ALR 399; 101 ALR 402; 109 ALR 1048; 132 ALR 819; 158 ALR 1315.

Consent of convict as essential to a pardon, commutation or reprieve, 52 ALR 835.

Pardon as affecting previous offenses or punishment therefor, 57 ALR 443.

Power of executive to pardon one committed for contempt, 63 ALR 226.

Pardon as defense to proceeding for suspension or cancellation of license of physician, surgeon, or dentist, 126 ALR 257.

Pardon as preventing disbarment of attorney or removal of officer or as nullifying disbarment or removal, 143 ALR 172; 70 ALR2d 268.

Offenses and convictions covered by pardon, 35 ALR2d 1261.

Pardon as restoring public office or license or eligibility therefor, 58 ALR3d 1191.

Validity, construction, application, and effect of statute requiring conditions, in addition to expiration of time, for reinstatement of suspended or revoked driver's license, 2 ALR5th 725.

SECTION III.

STATE PERSONNEL BOARD

Paragraph

I. State Personnel Board.

Paragraph

II. Veterans preference.

Paragraph I. State Personnel Board.

(a) There shall be a State Personnel Board which shall consist of five members appointed by the Governor, subject to confirmation by the Senate. The members of the board in office on June 30, 1983, shall serve out the remainder of their respective terms. As each term of office expires, the Governor shall appoint a successor as herein provided. All such terms of members shall be for five years. Members shall serve until their successors are appointed and qualified. A member of the State Personnel Board may not be employed in any other capacity in state government. A chairman shall be selected by the members of the board from its membership.

(b) The board shall provide policy direction for a State Merit System of Personnel Administration and may be vested with such additional powers and duties as provided by law. State personnel shall be selected on the basis of merit as provided by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. IV, Sec. VI, Para. I.

Cross references. — Veterans' preference in employment, Ga. Const. 1983, Art.

IV, Sec. III, Para. II. State Merit System of Personnel Administration generally, § 45-20-1 et seq.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

General Assembly was authorized to provide systems for public employment. — Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. III, Para. I left it to the General Assembly to create a state merit system by the enactment of laws regarding selection of state personnel based on merit; legislation providing systems for public employment was subject to amendment or even repeal, and so the 1996 and 2000 amendments to O.C.G.A. § 45-20-2(15) (see paragraph (12)) were not unconstitutional. SEIU v. Perdue, 280 Ga. 379, 628 S.E.2d 589 (2006).

Director was employee not official.

— Summary judgment for community service board on a former executive director's breach of employment contract claim was reversed because the trial court erred in determining that the director was an official instead of an employee under the State of Georgia Merit Protection System; community service boards constituted state agencies as local units of the Department of Human Resources, and any state agency expressly had the power to contract on any subject matter within the agency's interest. Ashe v. Clayton County Cmty. Serv. Bd., 262 Ga. App. 738, 586 S.E.2d 683 (2003) (Unpublished).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Employment as attorney for private client prohibited. — A member of the State Personnel Board is prohibited from representing a private client for a fee in a court of law or in any other adversarial proceeding where such representation might defeat the official public actions of another public officer. 1991 Op. Att'y Gen. 91-25.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 67 C.J.S., Officers and Public Employees, § 66. ineligibility to office is to be determined, 143 ALR 1026.

ALR. — Time as of which eligibility or Paragraph II. Veterans preference.

Any veteran who has served as a member of the armed forces of the United States during the period of a war or armed conflict in which any branch of the armed forces of the United States engaged, whether under United States command or otherwise, and was honorably discharged therefrom, shall be given such veterans preference in any civil service program established in state government as may be provided by law. Any such law must provide at least ten points to a veteran having at least a 10 percent service connected disability as rated and certified by the Veterans Administration, and all other such veterans shall be entitled to at least five points.

1976 Constitution. — Art. IV, Sec. VI, § 43-1-9. Veterans preference in scoring Para. II. civil service examinations, §§ 45-2-21, 45-2-22.

Cross references. — Veterans preference before state examining boards,

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Policy behind paragraph. — Veterans' preference has traditionally been justified as a measure designed to reward veterans for the sacrifice of military service, to ease the transition from military to civilian life, to encourage patriotic service, and to attract loyal and well-disciplined people to civil service occupations. Boykin v. Strickland, 245 Ga. 294, 264 S.E.2d 225 (1980); Dash v. De- partment of Human Resources, 153 Ga. App. 633, 266 S.E.2d 305 (1980).

Public policy supporting reasonableness of class preference for veterans applies equally to hiring and layoffs. Boykin v. Strickland, 245 Ga. 294, 264 S.E.2d 225 (1980).

Cited in Brown v. State Merit Sys. of Personnel Admin., 245 Ga. 239, 264 S.E.2d 186 (1980).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

No conflict between paragraph and sections providing for licensure examinations. — There is no conflict between the preference in employment granted veterans under this paragraph, and the extra points granted to veterans when taking licensure examinations offered by the various state examining boards under Ga. L. 1968, p. 1213, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 43-1-9, et seq.), since the two provisions speak of separate types of veterans' preferences. 1978 Op. Att'y

Gen. No. 78-69. (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. III, Para. II).

First prerequisite in determining veteran's eligibility under this paragraph is his or her service. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 469. (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. III, Para. II).

Preferences under federal civil service laws. — This paragraph is sufficiently broad in scope and intent to embrace within it all persons accorded preferences under the provisions of the federal civil service laws. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 469. (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. III, Para. II).

Change in veterans' preference rules. — Absolute veterans' preference in reductions-in-force in the classified service of the state merit system can constitutionally be amended only by appropriate action of the General Assembly. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 82-48.

The General Assembly has authority to decrease or otherwise amend current veterans' preference in reduction-in-force situations and such amendment could affect both current and future employees. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 82-88.

Including wives and widows. — The preference under state civil service systems accorded veterans by this paragraph includes wives of disabled veterans and widows of deceased veterans. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 469. (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IV, Sec. III, Para. II).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, §§ 193, 194.

ALR. — Character of service or connection with military or naval service necessary to entitle one to benefit of veterans' preference statute in relation to civil service, 87 ALR 1002.

Constitutionality of state veterans' public employment preference laws, 161 ALR 494.

SECTION IV.

STATE TRANSPORTATION BOARD

Paragraph

I. State Transportation Board; commissioner.

Paragraph I. State Transportation Board; commissioner.

(a) There shall be a State Transportation Board composed of as many members as there are congressional districts in the state. The member of the board from each congressional district shall be elected by a majority vote of the members of the House of Representatives and Senate whose respective districts are embraced or partly embraced within such congressional district meeting in caucus. The members of the board in office on June 30, 1983, shall serve out the remainder of their respective terms. The General Assembly shall provide by law the procedure for the election of members and for filling vacancies on the board. Members shall serve for terms of five years and until their successors are elected and qualified.

(b) The State Transportation Board shall select a commissioner of transportation, who shall be the chief executive officer of the Department of Transportation and who shall have such powers and duties as provided by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. IV, Sec. VIII, Para. I.

Cross references. — State Transportation Board generally, § 32-2-20 et seq.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Pye v. State Hwy. Dep't, 226 Ga. 389, 175 S.E.2d 510 (1970); Outdoor Adv. Ass'n v. DOT, 186 Ga. App. 550, 367 S.E.2d 827 (1988).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

There must be a commissioner of transportation duly elected and qualified, in order to carry on certain functions of the Department of Transportation as its chief executive officer. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-198.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Legislative power to prescribe qualifications for or conditions of eligibility to constitutional office, 34 ALR2d 155. Time as of which eligibility or ineligibility to office is to be determined, 143 ALR 1026.

Power and duty of highway officers as regards location or routes of roads to be constructed or improved, 91 ALR 242.

SECTION V.

VETERANS SERVICE BOARD

Paragraph

- I. Veterans Service Board; commissioner.

Paragraph I. Veterans Service Board; commissioner.

(a) There shall be a State Department of Veterans Service and Veterans Service Board which shall consist of seven members appointed by the Governor, subject to confirmation by the Senate. The members in office on June 30, 1983, shall serve out the remainder of their respective terms. As each term of office expires, the Governor shall appoint a successor as herein provided. All such terms of members shall be for seven years. Members shall serve until their successors are appointed and qualified.

(b) The board shall appoint a commissioner who shall be the executive officer of the department. All members of the board and the commissioner shall be veterans of some war or armed conflict in which the United States has engaged. The board shall have such control, duties, powers, and jurisdiction of the State Department of Veterans Service as shall be provided by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. IV, Sec. V, Veterans Service and Veterans Service Board, § 38-4-1 et seq.

Cross references. — Department of

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Goebel v. Hodges, 83 Ga. App. 574, 64 S.E.2d 207 (1951); Toombs v. Fortson, 241 F. Supp. 65 (N.D. Ga. 1965).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Compensation of Veterans Service Board must be determined by General Assembly. 1954-56 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 635.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Time as of which eligibility or ineligibility to office is to be determined, 143 ALR 1026.

SECTION VI.

BOARD OF NATURAL RESOURCES

Paragraph

I. Board of Natural Resources.

Paragraph I. Board of Natural Resources.

(a) There shall be a Board of Natural Resources which shall consist of one member from each congressional district in the state and five members from the state at large, one of whom must be from one of the following named counties: Chatham, Bryan, Liberty, McIntosh, Glynn, or Camden. All members shall be appointed by the Governor, subject to confirmation by the Senate. The members of the board in office on June 30, 1983, shall serve out the remainder of their respective terms. As each term of office expires, the Governor shall appoint a successor as herein provided. All such terms of members shall be for seven years. Members shall serve until their successors are appointed and qualified. Insofar as it is practicable, the members of the board shall be representative of all areas and functions encompassed within the Department of Natural Resources.

(b) The board shall have such powers and duties as provided by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. IV, Sec. IV, Para. I.

Cross references. — Department of Natural Resources, Ch. 2, T. 12.

Law reviews. — For note, "Regulation of Artificial Lakes and Recreational Subdivisions in Georgia," recommending methods for future regulation, see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 580 (1972).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Stephens v. Stewart, 118 Ga. App. 811, 165 S.E.2d 572 (1968); Young v. Young, 252 Ga. 564, 315 S.E.2d 878 (1984).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 84. ineligibility to office is to be determined, ALR. — Time as of which eligibility or 143 ALR 1026.

SECTION VII.

QUALIFICATIONS, COMPENSATION, REMOVAL FROM OFFICE, AND POWERS AND DUTIES OF MEMBERS OF CONSTITUTIONAL BOARDS AND COMMISSIONS

Paragraph

I. Qualifications, compensation, and removal from office.

Paragraph

II. Powers and duties.

Paragraph I. Qualifications, compensation, and removal from office.

The qualifications, compensation, and removal from office of members of constitutional boards and commissions provided for in this article shall be as provided by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. IV, Sec. I, Para. I; Art. IV, Sec. II, Para. I; Art. IV, Sec. IV, Para. I; Art. IV, Sec. V, Para. I; Art. IV, Sec. VIII, Para. I. amendment (Ga. L. 1997, p. 1713) creating the Georgia Citizens Commission on Compensation of Public Officials was defeated at the 1998 November general election.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional

Paragraph II. Powers and duties.

The powers and duties of members of constitutional boards and commissions provided for in this article, except the Board of Pardons and Paroles, shall be as provided by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. IV, Sec. I, Para. I; Art. IV, Sec. IV, Para. I; Art. IV, Sec. V, Para. I; Art. IV, Sec. VIII, Para. I.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

O.C.G.A. § 17-10-16, the life-without-parole statute, does not violate the separation of powers doctrine because it imposes legislative restrictions on the Board of Pardons and Paroles to grant parole. Freeman v. State, 264 Ga. 27, 440 S.E.2d 181 (1994).
Cited in Charron v. State Bd. of Pardons & Paroles, 253 Ga. 274, 319 S.E.2d 453 (1984).

SECTION VIII.

GEORGIA CITIZENS COMMISSION ON COMPENSATION OF PUBLIC OFFICIALS

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1997, p. 1713) creating the Georgia Citizens Commission on Compensation of Public Officials was defeated at the 1998 November general election.

ARTICLE V. EXECUTIVE BRANCH

Section

- I. Election of Governor and Lieutenant Governor.
- II. Duties and Powers of Governor.
- III. Other Elected Executive Officers.
- IV. Disability of Executive Officers.

Law reviews. — For article, “State Executive Branch Generally,” see 29 Ga. St. U.L. Government: Organization of the Executive Branch Generally, Rev. 162 (2012).

SECTION I.

ELECTION OF GOVERNOR AND LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Paragraph

- I. Governor: term of office; compensation and allowances.
- II. Election for Governor.
- III. Lieutenant Governor.

Paragraph

- IV. Qualifications of Governor and Lieutenant Governor.
- V. Succession to executive power.
- VI. Oath of office.

Law reviews. — For note, “Perdue v. Baker: Who Has the Ultimate Power over Litigation on Behalf of the State of Georgia — the Governor or the Attorney General?,” see 21 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 751 (2005).

Paragraph I. Governor: term of office; compensation and allowances.

There shall be a Governor who shall hold office for a term of four years and until a successor shall be chosen and qualified. Persons holding the office of Governor may succeed themselves for one four-year term of office. Persons who have held the office of Governor and have succeeded themselves as hereinbefore provided shall not again be eligible to be elected to that office until after the expiration of four years from the conclusion of their term as Governor. The compensation and allowances of the Governor shall be as provided by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. I, Para. I.

Editor’s notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1997, p. 1713) creating the Georgia Citizens Commission on Compensation of Public Officials was defeated at the 1998 November general election.

Cross references. — Salaries of public officers and employees generally, Ch. 7, T. 45. Governor generally, Ch. 12, T. 45.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Provision of this paragraph allowing Governor to succeed position in office will be given its plain and unambiguous meaning. Irwin v. Busbee, 241 Ga. 567, 247 S.E.2d 103 (1978) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. I, Para. I).

Removal of public officer. — Provision of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. I that executive power shall be vested in a Governor does not imply authority in the Governor to remove a public officer during the officer's tenure of office. Holder v. Anderson, 160 Ga. 433, 128 S.E. 181 (1925) (decided under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VIII).

Cited in Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947); Maddox v. Fortson, 226 Ga. 71, 172 S.E.2d 595 (1970); Henderson v. Maddox, 227 Ga. 195, 179 S.E.2d 770 (1971); Frier v. City of Douglas, 233 Ga. 775, 213 S.E.2d 607 (1975).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Purpose of succession provision. — The provision that the Governor shall hold office for a term of four years and until a successor shall be chosen and qualified was a recognition by the framers of the Constitution that contingencies might happen which had not been specifically dealt with, the purpose being to avoid a vacancy in office when such contingency occurred. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 302.

Extended tenure until successor chosen and qualified. — This paragraph imposes upon incumbent Governor obligation of extended tenure of office until the Governor's successor has been chosen and qualified. 1965-66 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 66-256. (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. I, Para. I).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 38 Am. Jur. 2d, Governor, § 1.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 211 et seq.

ALR. — Construction and effect of constitutional or statutory provisions disqualifying one for public office because of previous tenure of office, 59 ALR2d 716.

Paragraph II. Election for Governor.

An election for Governor shall be held on Tuesday after the first Monday in November of 1986, and the Governor-elect shall be installed in office at the next session of the General Assembly. An election for Governor shall take place quadrennially thereafter on said date unless another date be fixed by the General Assembly. Said election shall be held at the places of holding general elections in the several counties of this state, in the manner prescribed for the election of members of the General Assembly, and the electors shall be the same.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. I, Para. II.

Cross references. — When elections to be held, § 21-2-9. Responsibilities of General Assembly in installation of Governor, § 45-12-1.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Wood v. Arnall, 189 Ga. 362, 6 S.E.2d 722 (1939); Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947); Jones v. Fortson, 223 Ga. 7, 152 S.E.2d 847 (1967).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 38 Am. Jur. 2d, Governor, § 2.

Paragraph III. Lieutenant Governor.

There shall be a Lieutenant Governor, who shall be elected at the same time, for the same term, and in the same manner as the Governor. The Lieutenant Governor shall be the President of the Senate and shall have such executive duties as prescribed by the Governor and as may be prescribed by law not inconsistent with the powers of the Governor or other provisions of this Constitution. The compensation and allowances of the Lieutenant Governor shall be as provided by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. I, Para. VI.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1997, p. 1713) creating the Georgia Citizens Commission on Compensation of Public Officials was defeated at the 1998 November general election.

Cross references. — Election of Lieutenant Governor, § 21-2-9. Salaries and fees for public officers and employees generally, Ch. 7, T. 45.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Function of Lieutenant Governor in event of vacancy in office of Governor. — The Lieutenant Governor does not succeed to the office of Governor in the event of a vacancy, rather the executive power devolves upon the Lieutenant Governor so that government can continue to function until a Governor is chosen by the people as provided by law. Henderson v. Maddox, 227 Ga. 195, 179 S.E.2d 770 (1971).

Cited in Wood v. Arnall, 189 Ga. 362, 6 S.E.2d 722 (1939).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Lieutenant Governor is a constitutional officer and is elected in the same manner as the Governor and the other executive officers referred to in Ga. Const. 1976, Art. V, Sec. III, Para. I (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. III, Para. I). 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 161.

Lieutenant Governor is entitled to subsistence and mileage expenses actually incurred in the performance of the Lieutenant Governor's official business on the same basis as other officers of the state government are paid. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 564.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 258.

ALR. — Is office of lieutenant governor primarily executive or legislative?, 70 ALR 1095.

Paragraph IV. Qualifications of Governor and Lieutenant Governor.

No person shall be eligible for election to the office of Governor or Lieutenant Governor unless such person shall have been a citizen of the United States 15 years and a legal resident of the state six years immediately preceding the election and shall have attained the age of 30 years by the date of assuming office.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. I, Para. VII.

Cross references. — Other disabilities to holding office, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. III, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. II, Para. IV, and §§ 16-10-9, 21-2-7, 21-2-8, 45-2-1 et seq., and 45-5-2. Eligibility for single elective office only, § 21-2-136.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Maturity requirement not a violation of equal protection clause. — In light of the fact that the Lieutenant Governor may be called upon to exercise the powers of the office of Governor, a similar maturity requirement for the Lieutenant Governor is eminently reasonable, and the mere fact that other state officers, such as the Attorney General, may serve upon reaching 25, does not render the instant age requirement a violation of the equal protection clause (U.S. Const., amend. 14). Traylor v. Democratic Party, 241 Ga. 429, 246 S.E.2d 192 (1978).

Maturity requirement not a violation of right of association. — The fact that a candidate under 30 may not run for Lieutenant Governor does not deny the first amendment right of association to those voters who might wish to “associate” with such a candidate by voting for that candidate. Traylor v. Democratic Party, 241 Ga. 429, 246 S.E.2d 192 (1978).

Function of Lieutenant Governor in event of vacancy in office of Governor. — The Lieutenant Governor does not succeed to the office of Governor in the event of a vacancy, rather the executive power devolves upon the Lieutenant Governor so that the government can continue to function until a Governor is chosen by the people as provided by law. Henderson v. Maddox, 227 Ga. 195, 179 S.E.2d 770 (1971).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 38 Am. Jur. 2d, Governor, § 2.

ALR. — Time as of which eligibility or ineligibility to office is to be determined, 88 ALR 812; 143 ALR 1026.

Nonregistration as affecting one’s qualification to hold public office, 128 ALR 1117.

Validity of requirement that candidate or public officer have been resident of governmental unit for specified period, 65 ALR3d 1048.

Validity of age requirement for state public office, 90 ALR3d 900.

Paragraph V. Succession to executive power.

(a) In case of the temporary disability of the Governor as determined in the manner provided in Section IV of this article, the Lieutenant Governor shall exercise the powers and duties of the Governor and receive the same compensation as the Governor until such time as the temporary disability of the Governor ends.

(b) In case of the death, resignation, or permanent disability of the Governor or the Governor-elect, the Lieutenant Governor or the Lieutenant Governor-elect, upon becoming the Lieutenant Governor, shall become the Governor until a successor shall be elected and qualified as hereinafter provided. A successor to serve for the unexpired term shall be elected at the next general election; but, if such death, resignation, or permanent disability shall occur within 30 days of the next general election or if the term will expire within 90 days after the next general election, the Lieutenant Governor shall become Governor for the unexpired term. No person shall be elected or appointed to the office of Lieutenant Governor for the unexpired term in the event the Lieutenant Governor shall become Governor as herein provided.

(c) In case of the death, resignation, or permanent disability of both the Governor or the Governor-elect and the Lieutenant Governor or the Lieutenant Governor-elect or in case of the death, resignation, or permanent disability of the Governor and there shall be no Lieutenant Governor, the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall exercise the powers and duties of the Governor until the election and qualification of a Governor at a special election, which shall be held within 90 days from the date on which the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall have assumed the powers and duties of the Governor, and the person elected shall serve out the unexpired term.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. I, Para. VIII.

Cross references. — Power of General Assembly to provide for succession to office of Governor, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. II. Determination of disability, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. IV, Para. II. Succession for the unexpired term only, § 45-5-3.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Declaration by General Assembly of result of election to fill vacancy. — The General Assembly has considered that even as to an election to fill a vacancy in the office of Governor, ascertainment and declaration of the result should be made by that body, according to the regular method of filling the office permanently. Wood v. Arnall, 189 Ga. 362, 6 S.E.2d 722 (1939).

Cited in Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947); Traylor v. Democratic Party, 241 Ga. 429, 246 S.E.2d 192 (1978).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Governor's absence from state does not constitute "disability" under this paragraph. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-293. (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. I, Para. V).

Lieutenant Governor does not serve term as Governor while exercising executive powers, but rather the Lieutenant Governor becomes acting Governor until a successor can be elected and qualified to fill the unexpired term of Governor; the person who is elected and subsequently qualified to fill the unexpired term is specifically referred to in the Constitution as “Governor,” and the person is elected for the unexpired term. 1948-49 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 403.

If Lieutenant Governor does not desire to become candidate for unexpired term of Governor, the Lieutenant Governor is not required to resign the office after having served as acting Governor, but may continue to serve as Lieutenant Governor until the four-year term to which the Lieutenant Governor was elected expires. 1948-49 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 403.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 38 Am. Jur. 2d, Governor, § 11 et seq.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 179 et seq.

ALR. — Power to pardon or commute sentence as one which devolves upon the Lieutenant Governor during the absence or disability of the Governor, 32 ALR 1162.

Devolution, in absence of Governor, of veto and approval powers, upon Lieutenant Governor or other officer, 136 ALR 1053.

Paragraph VI. Oath of office.

The Governor and Lieutenant Governor shall, before entering on the duties of office, take such oath or affirmation as prescribed by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. I, Para. IX.

Cross references. — Requirement that executives of the several states take oath to support Constitution of United States, U.S. Const., art. VI, cl. 3. Penalty for violation of oath, § 16-10-1. Oath generally, §§ 45-3-1, 45-12-4.

SECTION II.

DUTIES AND POWERS OF GOVERNOR

Paragraph

- I. Executive powers.
- II. Law enforcement.
- III. Commander in chief.
- IV. Veto power.
- V. Writs of election.
- VI. Information and recommendations to the General Assembly.

Paragraph

- VII. Special sessions of the General Assembly.
- VIII. Filling vacancies.
- IX. Appointments by Governor.
- X. Information from officers and employees.

Law reviews. — For article, “The Status of Administrative Agencies under the Georgia Constitution,” see 40 Ga. L. Rev. 1109 (2006).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Powers of Governor and Attorney General in litigation. — Construed together, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V and O.C.G.A. §§ 45-15-3, 45-15-6, 45-15-35, and 45-12-26, do not vest either the Georgia Governor or the Attorney General with the exclusive power to control legal proceedings involving the State of Georgia; instead, the Governor and Attorney General have concurrent powers over litigation in which the state is a party. Perdue v. Baker, 277 Ga. 1, 586 S.E.2d 606 (2003).

Powers of governor. — Because, pursuant to Ga. Const. Art. 5, § 2, part of defendant Governor's job was to ensure the enforcement of Georgia's statutes, he was properly named as a party in an action challenging the constitutionality of Georgia's Carry Law, O.C.G.A. § 16-11-127, filed by plaintiff gun owners. GeorgiaCarry.Org, Inc v. Georgia, 687 F.3d 1244 (11th Cir. 2012).

Paragraph I. Executive powers.

The chief executive powers shall be vested in the Governor. The other executive officers shall have such powers as may be prescribed by this Constitution and by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. IV, Sec. VI, Para. I; Art. V, Sec. I, Para. I.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Removal of public officer. — Provision that executive power shall be vested in a Governor does not imply authority in the Governor to remove a public officer during tenure of office. Holder v. Anderson, 160 Ga. 433, 128 S.E. 181 (1925).

Powers of Governor and Attorney General. — Construed together, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V and O.C.G.A.

§§ 45-15-3, 45-15-6, 45-15-35, and 45-12-26, do not vest either the Georgia Governor or the Attorney General with exclusive power to control legal proceedings involving the State of Georgia; instead, the Governor and Attorney General have concurrent powers over litigation in which the state is a party. Perdue v. Baker, 277 Ga. 1, 586 S.E.2d 606 (2003).

Paragraph II. Law enforcement.

The Governor shall take care that the laws are faithfully executed and shall be the conservator of the peace throughout the state.

1976 Constitution. — Art. IV, Sec. VI, Para. I; Art. V, Sec. II, Para. II.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Authority of Governor to remove public officer. — This paragraph does not imply authority in the Governor to remove a public officer during tenure of office. Holder v. Anderson, 160 Ga. 433, 128 S.E. 181 (1925) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. II).

Cited in Kryder v. State, 212 Ga. 272, 91 S.E.2d 612 (1956); Manders v. Lee, 338 F.3d 1304 (11th Cir. 2003).

Paragraph III. Commander in chief.

The Governor shall be the commander in chief of the military forces of this state.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. II, Para. I.

Cross references. — Powers of Governor as commander in chief, §§ 38-2-6, 38-2-7, 38-2-110, 38-3-51, and 45-12-27 et seq.

Law reviews. — For note, “Rethinking the Role and Regulation of Private Military Companies: What the United States and United Kingdom Can Learn from Shared Experiences in the War on Terror,” see 39 Ga. J. Int’l & Comp. L. 445 (2011).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Maddox v. Fortson, 226 Ga. 71, 172 S.E.2d 595 (1970).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 53 Am. Jur. 2d, Military, and Civil Defense, § 27 et seq.

Paragraph IV. Veto power.

Except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, before any bill or resolution shall become law, the Governor shall have the right to review such bill or resolution intended to have the effect of law which has been passed by the General Assembly. The Governor may veto, approve, or take no action on any such bill or resolution. In the event the Governor vetoes any such bill or resolution, the General Assembly may, by a two-thirds’ vote, override such veto as provided in Article III of this Constitution.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. II, Paras. VI, VII.

Cross references. — Veto effective against bills passed by two-thirds vote of General Assembly, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. V, Para. XI. Veto ineffective against proposed Constitution changes, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. X, Sec. I, Para. V. Effective date of Acts, §§ 1-3-4, 1-3-4.1.

Law reviews. — For article, “History of the Veto Power in Georgia,” see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 513 (1972).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

When bill has been approved, it becomes operative from that date. Walker v. City of Rome, 16 Ga. App. 817, 86 S.E. 658 (1913).

Approval by operation of this paragraph as affecting time of expression of legislative intent. — An Act not approved by the Governor, but which became effective by operation of this paragraph on April 12, must be considered as being a later expression of the legislative intent than an Act passed at the same session, approved on April 10 of the same year, the effective date of which was July 1 of the next year. Gunn v. Balkcom, 228 Ga. 802, 188 S.E.2d 500 (1972) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. IV).

Last approved Act of several inconsistent Acts passed on same day controls. Wright v. Overstreet, 122 Ga. 633, 50 S.E. 487 (1905); County of Butts v. Strahan, 151 Ga. 417, 107 S.E. 163 (1921).

Right to veto bill after adjournment based on practice of past executives. Solomon v. Commissioners of Cartersville, 41 Ga. 157 (1870); Temple Baptist Church v. Georgia Term. Co., 128 Ga. 669, 58 S.E. 157 (1907).

Publication of Act in newspaper is unnecessary. Epstin v. Levenson & Co., 79 Ga. 718, 4 S.E. 328 (1887).

Cited in Maddox v. Fortson, 226 Ga. 71,

172 S.E.2d 595 (1970); Keener v. MacDougall, 232 Ga. 273, 206 S.E.2d 519 (1974).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Veto power does not permit Governor to change effective date of Act of the General Assembly from one fixed in Act. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 296.

Effect of partial approval of appropriation bill. — The Governor may approve or disapprove any part of an appropriation bill, even though they all are included in the same Act; the parts given approval will be valid and the parts disapproved will be invalid. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 628.

Limitation on veto of individual appropriations. — The Governor's power to veto individual appropriations does not include the power to reduce an appropriation. 2000 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2000-2.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 73 Am. Jur. 2d, Statutes, § 30 et seq.

C.J.S. — 82 C.J.S., Statutes, § 54 et seq.

ALR. — Vote necessary to pass bill over veto, 2 ALR 1593.

Computation of time allowed for approval or disapproval of bill by governor, 54 ALR 339.

Power of executive to sign bill after adjournment, or during recess of Legislature, 64 ALR 1468.

Is Sunday to be included in computation of period within which bill must be presented to governor?, 71 ALR 1363.

Validity and effect of provision of appropriation bill subjecting expenditure or payment of amounts appropriated to approval of Governor or other officer not otherwise authorized, 91 ALR 1511.

Disapproval by governor of a bill in part or approval with modifications, 99 ALR 1277.

Validity of veto as affected by failure to give reasons for vetoing or objections to measure vetoed, 119 ALR 1189.

Failure of Governor to sign bill until after the date at which it is to become effective, 146 ALR 693.

Paragraph V. Writs of election.

The Governor shall issue writs of election to fill all vacancies that may occur in the Senate and in the House of Representatives.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. II, Para. III.

Cross references. — Vacancies in office generally, Ch. 5, T. 45.

Paragraph VI. Information and recommendations to the General Assembly.

At the beginning of each regular session and from time to time, the Governor may give the General Assembly information on the state of the state and recommend to its consideration such measures as the Governor may deem necessary or expedient.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. II, Para. III.

Paragraph VII. Special sessions of the General Assembly.

(a) The Governor may convene the General Assembly in special session by proclamation which may be amended by the Governor prior to the convening of the special session or amended by the Governor with the approval of three-fifths of the members of each house after the special session has convened; but no laws shall be enacted at any such special session except those which relate to the purposes stated in the proclamation or in any amendment thereto.

(b) The Governor shall convene the General Assembly in special session for all purposes whenever three-fifths of the members to which each house is entitled certify to the Governor in writing, with a copy to the Secretary of State, that in their opinion an emergency exists in the affairs of the state. The General Assembly may convene itself if, after receiving such certification, the Governor fails to do so within three days, excluding Sundays.

(c) Special sessions of the General Assembly shall be limited to a period of 40 days unless extended by three-fifths' vote of each house and approved by the Governor or unless at the expiration of such period an impeachment trial of some officer of state government is pending, in which event the House shall adjourn and the Senate shall remain in session until such trial is completed.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. II, Para. III. government during emergency, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. II, and Cross references. — Continuity of §§ 38-3-52 and 38-3-53.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Requirement that subject of session be stated in proclamation is imperative; approval by the Governor of an Act enacted at a session, not within the scope of the object stated, cannot make it valid. Jones v. State, 151 Ga. 502, 107 S.E. 765 (1921); McDonald v. State, 152 Ga. 223, 109 S.E. 656 (1921); Bibb County v. Williams, 152 Ga. 489, 110 S.E. 275 (1922).

Exercise of Governor's prerogative to convene General Assembly on extraordinary occasion not reviewable. Bunger v. State, 146 Ga. 672, 92 S.E. 72 (1917).

Standing to attack statute as invalid under paragraph. — In an action for mandamus where the duty imposed upon the officer was merely subordinate and ministerial in character, and the act to be performed was not one that was actually prohibited by the Constitution, and no material personal or property right of the treasurer would be affected by requiring its performance according to the statute, an officer had no interest in defeating the statute, and therefore could not attack it as invalid under this paragraph. Mallet v. Harper, 182 Ga. 506, 185 S.E. 798 (1936) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VII).

Constitutionality of Near Beer Act. — The Near Beer Act of 1908 (Ga. L. 1908, p. 1112) related to the object stated in the proclamation. Carroll v. Wright, 131 Ga. 728, 63 S.E. 260 (1908).

Constitutionality of Liquor Store Act. — The General Assembly did not violate this paragraph in the passage of what is commonly known as the Liquor Store Act (Ga. L. 1937-38, Ex. Sess., p. 103, Art. 3, Ch. 4, T. 3). Shadrack v.

Bledsoe, 186 Ga. 345, 198 S.E. 535 (1938) (see Ga. Const 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VII).

Constitutionality of Act making it duty of trial judge to fix sentence. — Act (Ga. L. 1937-38, Ex. Sess., p. 326, now repealed) making it the duty of the trial judge to fix the sentence in criminal cases, and giving the judge the power to place the defendant on probation, was related to the object stated in the Governor's proclamation concerning a called session, as "Laws fixing and imposing sentences in criminal cases; and probation of persons convicted." Williams v. MacFeeley, 186 Ga. 145, 197 S.E. 225 (1938).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Meaning of "three-fifths of members elected." — This paragraph provides for "three-fifths of the members elected" as a prerequisite for the convening of an extraordinary session of the legislature; this necessarily means three-fifths actually elected by the people to serve as members of the General Assembly, and persons who had resigned or were otherwise disqualified would not detract from the total number previously elected. 1945-47 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 347. (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VII).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 38 Am. Jur. 2d, Governor, § 4 et seq. Am. Jur. 2d, States, Territories, and Dependencies, § 46.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, §§ 111, 112.

Paragraph VIII. Filling vacancies.

(a) When any public office shall become vacant by death, resignation, or otherwise, the Governor shall promptly fill such vacancy unless otherwise provided by this Constitution or by law; and persons so appointed shall serve for the unexpired term unless otherwise provided by this Constitution or by law.

(b) In case of the death or withdrawal of a person who received a majority of votes cast in an election for the office of Secretary of State, Attorney General, State School Superintendent, Commissioner of Insurance, Commissioner of Agriculture, or Commissioner of Labor, the Governor elected at the same election, upon becoming Governor, shall have the power to fill such office by appointing, subject to the confirmation of the Senate, an individual to serve until the next general election and until a successor for the balance of the unexpired term shall have been elected and qualified.

1976 Constitution. — Art. IV, Sec. II, Para. I; Art. IV, Sec. IV, Para. I; Art. IV, Sec. V, Para. I; Art. IV, Sec. VI, Para. I; Art. V, Sec. II, Para. IV; Art. V, Sec. III, Para. I.

Cross references. — Determining disability of executive officers, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. IV, Para. II. Vacancies in office generally, see Ch. 5, T. 45. Incapacity of Commissioner of Insurance, § 45-12-23. Filling of vacancy in office for which advice and consent of Senate required, § 45-12-52.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendments (Ga. L. 1984, p. 1716, § 1) and (Ga. L. 1988, p. 2100, § 2) which would have revised subparagraph (b) to delete the reference to the State School Superintendent were defeated at the general elections on November 6, 1984, and on November 8, 1988.

Law reviews. — For article discussing appointment and removal power of Governor, see 14 Ga. B.J. 171 (1951). For article, “Legislative Delegation of Executive Power of Appointment to Private Organizations Held Unconstitutional,” see 16 Ga. St. B.J. 129 (1980).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

This paragraph confers no power to create a vacancy by any declaration or judgment that one exists; there must be an actual vacancy before the power or duty of filling it arises. Patten v. Miller, 190 Ga. 123, 8 S.E.2d 757 (1940); Mulcay v. Murray, 219 Ga. 747, 136 S.E.2d 129 (1964); Partain v. Maddox, 227 Ga. 623, 182 S.E.2d 450 (1971) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VIII).

Paragraph refers only to filling vacancy in office. — Although this paragraph and former Code 1933, § 40-301 (see now O.C.G.A. § 45-12-50) required the Governor to fill vacancies in office by appointment, this requirement did not extend to or embrace filling a vacancy in term, but had reference solely to filling a vacancy in office. Roan v. Rodgers, 201 Ga. 696, 40 S.E.2d 551 (1946) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VIII).

Quo warrant denied challenging appointment of judges. — Trial court’s denial of the challenger’s petition for a writ of quo warranto was affirmed because the newly created positions on the Georgia Court of Appeals qualified as vacancies under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. VII, Para. III; thus, the governor had the authority to appoint judges to the vacancies created by amended O.C.G.A. § 15-3-1(a). Clark v. Deal, No. S16X0560, 2016 Ga. LEXIS 314 (Apr. 26, 2016).

Intra-county request for judicial assistance. — Requesting and receiving intra-county judicial assistance did not unconstitutionally create a judgeship as the juvenile court judges who assisted the superior court did not become superior court judges; thus, no judicial position constitutionally required to be filled by election under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. VII, Para. I, or by gubernatorial appointment until election under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VIII, was created by the exercise of O.C.G.A. § 15-1-9.1(b)(2)(C). Earl v. Mills, 278 Ga. 128, 598 S.E.2d 480 (2004).

Delegation by General Assembly of power to make appointments unconstitutional. — The General Assembly may, within constitutional limitations, establish qualifications for public office and designate a governmental appointing authority; but it cannot delegate the appointive power to a private organization, thus, where the Medical Association of Georgia, a private organization, controls the appointment of the members of the State Board of Medical Examiners under Ga. L. 1971, p. 689, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 43-34-22) which provides that the Governor must appoint from its nominees, the Act violates this paragraph. Rogers v. Medical Ass’n, 244 Ga. 151, 259 S.E.2d 85 (1979) (decided prior to 1997 amendment).

Requirements for effective resignation. — A resignation of a public office, to be effective, must be made with the intention of relinquishing the office, accompanied by the act of relinquishment. Partain v. Maddox, 227 Ga. 623, 182 S.E.2d 450 (1971).

Requirement that appointee tender undated resignation illegal. — The Governor does not have the constitutional right to create a vacancy in an office by requiring the prospective appointee, either before or immediately after such appointment, to tender an undated resignation from such office, although it was not then contemplated by either party that the resignation would then and there take effect, but might at some remote uncertain day in the future be “accepted” by the Governor. Partain v. Maddox, 227 Ga. 623, 182 S.E.2d 450 (1971).

Vacancy in office of Attorney General. — There is no specific provision in the Constitution relating to the manner of filling a vacancy in the office of Attorney General, but this paragraph is sufficiently broad in scope to cover the subject. Wood v. Arnall, 189 Ga. 362, 6 S.E.2d 722 (1939) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VIII).

Act providing for appointment of additional judge by Governor constitutional. (Ga. L. 1920, p. 96). Ross v. Jones, 151 Ga. 425, 107 S.E. 160 (1921).

Cited in Stanley v. Sims, 185 Ga. 518, 195 S.E. 439 (1937); Kaigler v. Floyd, 187 Ga. 441, 200 S.E. 784 (1939); Britton v. Bowden, 188 Ga. 806, 5 S.E.2d 47 (1939);

Stephens v. Reid, 189 Ga. 372, 6 S.E.2d 728 (1939); Maddox v. Fortson, 226 Ga. 71, 172 S.E.2d 595 (1970); Perdue v. Palmour, 278 Ga. 217, 600 S.E.2d 370 (2004); DeKalb County Sch. Dist. v. Ga. State Bd. of Educ., 294 Ga. 349, 751 S.E.2d 827 (2013).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

This paragraph does not extend to or embrace filling vacancy in term, but has reference solely to filling vacancy in office. 1965-66 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 66-231. (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VIII).

Offices requiring majority vote. — The Secretary of State, Attorney General, State School Superintendent, Commissioner of Agriculture, and Commissioner of Labor must be elected by a majority vote. 1997 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U97-20.

Special election necessary when general election does not fill vacancy. — When there is a failure of election to fill the office in a general election, in the absence of some specific provision of law to the contrary, a special election is necessary to fill the office. 1969 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 69-179.

Governor has the authority to fill the office of State Treasurer (now director of the Office of Treasury and Fiscal Services) if such office is vacated by resignation. 1972 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 72-18.

Duration of appointment to office of director of the Office of Treasury and Fiscal Services. — Since there is no provision in the law providing for mid-term elections to replace resigned State Treasurer (now director of the Office of Treasury and Fiscal Services), the Governor’s appointment of a State Treasurer (now director) would be for the remainder of the unexpired term. 1972 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 72-18.

Withdrawal of elected candidate prior to taking oath. — Where the elected Commissioner of Labor withdrew prior to taking the oath of office and another person was appointed to serve until the next general election in 1992, the proper ballot caption for the office for the 1992 primary and general elections was: “For Commissioner of Labor (To Succeed Al Scott for the Unexpired Term of Joe Tanner, withdrawn).” 1991 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 91-16.

Filling unexpired term of Commissioner of Labor. — Since the Commissioner of Labor is routinely elected at the same time as the Governor and holds his or her office for the same term, an election which must be held to fill the balance of the unexpired term after the Commissioner withdraws is one “that arises from some exigency or special need outside the usual routine,” which would be categorized as a “special election” under Georgia law. The Georgia Election Code certainly authorizes, but does not require, a special primary in this situation. 1992 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 92-11.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 38 Am. Jur. 2d, Governor, § 6 et seq.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 177.

ALR. — Conclusiveness of Governor’s decision in removing officers, 52 ALR 7; 92 ALR 998.

Validity of delegation to private persons or organizations of power to appoint or nominate to public office, 97 ALR2d 361.

Paragraph IX. Appointments by Governor.

The Governor shall make such appointments as are authorized by this Constitution or by law. If a person whose confirmation is required by the Senate is once rejected by the Senate, that person shall not be renominated by the Governor for appointment to the same office until the expiration of a period of one year from the date of such rejection.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. II, Para. V.

Cross references. — Vacancies in office generally, Ch. 5, T. 45. Filling of vacancy in office for which advice and consent of Senate required, § 45-12-52.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in DeKalb County Sch. Dist. v. Ga. State Bd. of Educ., 294 Ga. 349, 751 S.E.2d 827 (2013).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Rejection of appointment by Senate. — A person whose appointment has been affirmatively rejected by the Senate is not eligible to be reappointed to succeed oneself in that office for at least one year following the Senate rejection. 2003 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 03-5.

Senate’s declining to consider appointments. — Where the Senate declined to consider and vote on gubernatorial appointments, as to those appointments made pursuant to the Governor’s authority under the Constitution or under O.C.G.A. § 45-12-52(b), because there was no affirmative rejection, the appointees are not disqualified from reappointment. 2003 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 03-5.

Paragraph X. Information from officers and employees.

The Governor may require information in writing from constitutional officers and all other officers and employees of the executive branch on any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices or employment.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VIII.

Cross references. — Appointment of replacement officers, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VIII. Ethics and Efficiency in Government Act, see Ch. 11, T. 28. When offices deemed vacated and filling vacancies, § 45-5-1. Code of ethics for government service, § 45-10-1.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Qualification for membership. — This paragraph does not include any qualification of membership or any penalty by forfeiture of office for engaging in another business or profession. Partain v. Maddox, 227 Ga. 623, 182 S.E.2d 450 (1971).

Requirement that appointee tender undated resignation illegal. — The Governor does not have the constitutional right to create a vacancy in an office by requiring the prospective appointee, either before or immediately after such appointment, to tender an undated resignation from such office, although it was not then contemplated by either party that the resignation would then and there take effect, but might at some remote uncertain day in the future be “accepted” by the Governor. Partain v. Maddox, 227 Ga. 623, 182 S.E.2d 450 (1971).

Cited in Maddox v. Fortson, 226 Ga. 71, 172 S.E.2d 595 (1970).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Availability to Governor of files of State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

— It was not the intent of the law that the records of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles be kept secret from the Governor; files relating to a parole action should be made available to the Governor at the Governor’s request. 1967 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 67-51.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 63C Am. Jur. 2d, Public Officers and Employees, § 289 et seq.

ALR. — Conclusiveness of governor’s decision in removing officers, 52 ALR 7; 92 ALR 998.

Power to suspend or lay off public officers or employees for a temporary period without pay as an economy and not a disciplinary measure, 111 ALR 432.

SECTION III.

OTHER ELECTED EXECUTIVE OFFICERS

Paragraph

I. Other executive officers, how elected.

II. Qualifications.

III. Powers, duties, compensation,

Paragraph

and allowances of other executive officers.

IV. Attorney General; duties.

Law reviews. — For note, “Perdue v. Baker: Who Has the Ultimate Power over Litigation on Behalf of the State of Georgia — the Governor or the Attorney General?,” see 21 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 751 (2005).

Paragraph I. Other executive officers, how elected.

The Secretary of State, Attorney General, State School Superintendent, Commissioner of Insurance, Commissioner of Agriculture, and Commissioner of Labor shall be elected in the manner prescribed for the election of members of the General Assembly and the electors shall be the same. Such executive officers shall be elected at the same time and hold their offices for the same term as the Governor.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. III, Para. I, Art. VI, Sec. X, Para. I.

Cross references. — Election of executive officers generally, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. I, Para. II, and § 21-2-9.

Editor’s notes. — The constitutional amendments (Ga. L. 1984, p. 1716, § 2) and (Ga. L. 1988, p. 2100, § 3) which would have revised Paragraph I to delete the reference to the State School Superintendent were defeated at the general elections on November 6, 1984, and November 8, 1988.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Distinction between county officers and state executive officers. — Holders of county offices under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. IX, Sec. I, Para. VIII (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. I, Para. III), are not executive officers of the state within the meaning of this paragraph. Houlihan v.

Saussy, 206 Ga. 1, 55 S.E.2d 557 (1949) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. III, Para. I).

Cited in Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947); State v. Burroughs, 149 Ga. App. 183, 254 S.E.2d 144 (1979).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Manner of election of Lieutenant Governor. — Under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. V, Sec. I, Para. VI (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. I, Para. III), it is clear that the Lieutenant Governor is classified as a constitutional officer and is elected in the same manner as the Governor and the other executive officers referred to in this paragraph. 1948-49 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 161. (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. III, Para. I).

Duration of appointment to office of director of the Office of Treasury and Fiscal Services. — Since there is no provision in the law providing for mid-term elections to replace a resigned State Treasurer (now director of the Office of Treasury and Fiscal Services), the Governor’s appointment of a State Treasurer (now director of the Office of Treasury and Fiscal Services) would be for the remainder of the unexpired term. 1972 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 72-18.

Filling unexpired term of Commissioner of Labor. — Since the Commissioner of Labor is routinely elected at the same time as the Governor and holds his or her office for the same term, an election which must be held to fill the balance of the unexpired term after the Commissioner withdraws is one “that arises from some exigency or special need outside the usual routine,” which would be categorized as a “special election” under Georgia law. The Georgia Election Code certainly authorizes, but does not require, a special primary in this situation. 1992 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 92-11.

No duty or authority is conferred upon Commissioner of Agriculture by Constitution; to the contrary, the expressed authority is reserved in the General Assembly to prescribe the duties, authority, and salaries of the executive officers. 1958-59 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 4.

Authority of General Assembly to create autonomous agricultural services. — The General Assembly does not have the authority to abolish the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture, but it has the authority to curtail the activities of the Commissioner of Agriculture by creating autonomous agricultural services. 1958-59 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 4.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 26 Am. Jur. 2d, Elections, § 281 et seq. 38 Am. Jur. 2d, Governor, §§ 4, 8.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, § 152 et seq.

Paragraph II. Qualifications.

(a) No person shall be eligible to the office of the Secretary of State, Attorney General, State School Superintendent, Commissioner of In-insurance, Commissioner of Agriculture, or Commissioner of Labor unless such person shall have been a citizen of the United States for ten years and a legal resident of the state for four years immediately preceding election or appointment and shall have attained the age of 25 years by the date of assuming office. All of said officers shall take such oath and give bond and security, as prescribed by law, for the faithful discharge of their duties.

(b) No person shall be Attorney General unless such person shall have been an active-status member of the State Bar of Georgia for seven years.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. III, Para. IV; Art. VI, Sec. XIII, Para. I.

Cross references. — Disabilities to holding office, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. II, Sec. II, Para. III; Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. II, Para. IV; §§ 16-10-9, 21-2-7, and 21-2-8; Ch. 2, T. 45; and § 45-5-2. Qualifications for specific offices, Commissioner of Agriculture, § 2-2-2; State School Superintendent, § 20-2-31; Commissioner of Labor, § 34-2-3. Eligibility for single elective office only, § 21-2-136.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1988, p. 2100, § 4) which would have revised subparagraph (a) to delete the reference to the State School Superintendent was defeated at the general election on November 8, 1988.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Age at time of election. — The word "election" as it appears in this provision means the day votes are cast, not the day when they are finally tabulated and certified by the Secretary of State. Poythress v.

Moses, 250 Ga. 452, 298 S.E.2d 480 (1983) (decided under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. XIII, Para. I, relating to qualifications of Attorney General and other officials.).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Time as of which eligibility or ineligibility to office is to be determined, 88 ALR 812; 143 ALR 1026.

Nonregistration as affecting one's qualification to hold public office, 128 ALR 1117.

Validity of requirement that candidate or public officer have been resident of governmental unit for specified period, 65 ALR3d 1048.

Validity of age requirement for state public office, 90 ALR3d 900.

Paragraph III. Powers, duties, compensation, and allowances of other executive officers.

Except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, the General Assembly shall prescribe the powers, duties, compensation, and allowances of the above executive officers and provide assistance and expenses necessary for the operation of the department of each.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. III, Para. II; Art. VI, Sec. X, Para. II.

Cross references. — Salaries and fees of public officers and employees generally, Ch. 7, T. 45.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Cited in Tucker v. Wilson, 198 Ga. 474, 31 S.E.2d 657 (1944).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Payment of membership dues. — Departments, institutions, or agencies can pay dues and membership fees in various state and national organizations from appropriated funds. 1968 Op. Att’y Gen. No. 68-110.

No duty or authority is conferred upon Commissioner of Agriculture by Constitution; to the contrary, the expressed authority is reserved in the General Assembly to prescribe the duties, authority, and salaries of the executive officers. 1958-59 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 4.

Authority of General Assembly to create autonomous agricultural services. — The General Assembly does not have the authority to abolish the office of the Commissioner of Agriculture, but it has the authority to curtail the activities of the Commissioner of Agriculture by creating autonomous agricultural services. 1958-59 Op. Att’y Gen. p. 4.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 63C Am. Jur. 2d, Public Officers and Employees, §§ 298 et seq., 431 et seq.

C.J.S. — 81A C.J.S., States, §§ 206 et seq., 254 et seq.

Paragraph IV. Attorney General; duties.

The Attorney General shall act as the legal advisor of the executive department, shall represent the state in the Supreme Court in all capital felonies and in all civil and criminal cases in any court when required by the Governor, and shall perform such other duties as shall be required by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. VI, Sec. X, Para. II.

Cross references. — Office of Attorney General, Ch. 15, T. 45.

Law reviews. — For annual survey of administrative law, see 38 Mercer L. Rev.

17 (1986). For article, “The Office of the Attorney General of Georgia,” see 23 Ga. St. B.J. 176 (1987). For article, “Researching Georgia Law,” see 34 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 741 (2015).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Legal advice to, and prosecution of, state officers or employees. — There is no conflict between the attorney general’s giving legal advice to officers or employees of the Department of Labor and prosecuting department officers or employees who violate the laws. Such a dual role is authorized. Brown v. State, 177 Ga. App. 284, 339 S.E.2d 332 (1985).

Dual role in representation before Health Planning Review Board. —

The Assistant Attorney General fulfilled a constitutionally and statutorily mandated dual role in representing both the State Health Planning and Development Agency and the Health Planning Review Board, but the Assistant Attorney General’s dual role as prosecutor and legal advisor to the Review Board did not taint the opportunity of each party to present its case in full before the Review Board. North Fulton Community Hosp. v. State Health Planning & Dev. Agency, 168 Ga. App. 801, 310 S.E.2d 764 (1983).

Representation of Department of Community Affairs. — The trial court did not err in granting state senator's plea in bar to charges of making a false writing where there was no criminal charge pending, only the knowledge that public monies allocated for one purpose had been expended for another and an attempt to resolve all matters, civil and criminal, which had occurred between state senator and the Department of Community Affairs (DCA) before the date of the signing of the release and where DCA was represented by the Attorney General in the matter of the DCA grant investigation and release. State v. Dean, 212 Ga. App. 724, 442 S.E.2d 830 (1994).

Cited in Doe v. Bolton, 319 F. Supp. 1048 (N.D. Ga. 1970).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

When Attorney General becomes active participant in capital felony prosecution. — The Attorney General becomes an active participant in a capital felony prosecution only after an appeal from a conviction for a capital felony has been perfected in the Supreme Court of Georgia. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-171.

Attorney General not authorized to participate in motion for new trial in capital felony prosecution. — Since the motion for a new trial is considered as a preappellate procedure, then until an appeal is perfected in the Supreme Court of Georgia the Attorney General is not authorized to actively participate in these proceedings. 1968 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 68-171.

Duty of Attorney General to represent two agencies suing each other. — The Attorney General may not appoint counsel to permit the Georgia Real Estate Commission to sue the Secretary of State and the joint-secretary of the state examining boards in the use of current appropriations made by the legislature among the various licensing boards, because serious ethical problems would result since the Attorney General is the legal advisor to the entire executive department of the state government and would be obligated to represent both agencies involved. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-93.

Use of outside legal representation. — The Department of Labor may not employ its own general counsel or otherwise provide itself with legal advice or representation other than through the Attorney General. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 84-48.

Attorneys employed by state agencies. — Although state agencies may employ persons with legal training and experience to serve as administrative legal service officers, those persons may not provide legal advice or representation to the agency, and no attorney-client relationship or privilege arises between the legal services officer and other agency officers or employees, or the agency itself. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 95-1.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 7 Am. Jur. 2d, Attorney General, § 6 et seq.

C.J.S. — 7A C.J.S., Attorney General, § 23 et seq.

ALR. — Right of Attorney General to represent or serve administrative officer or body to exclusion of attorney employed by such officer or body, 137 ALR 818.

SECTION IV.

DISABILITY OF EXECUTIVE OFFICERS

Paragraph

- I. "Elected constitutional executive officer," how defined.
- II. Procedure for determining disability.

Paragraph

- III. Effect of determination of disability.

Cross references. — Filling of vacancies in office generally, Ch. 5, T. 45, and § 45-12-50 et seq.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 67 C.J.S., Officers and Public Employees, § 209 et seq. 81A C.J.S., States, § 192 et seq.

ALR. — Power to pardon or commute sentence as one which devolves upon the Lieutenant Governor during the absence or disability of the Governor, 32 ALR 1162.

Paragraph I. "Elected constitutional executive officer," how defined.

As used in this section, the term "elected constitutional executive officer" means the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, the Secretary of State, the Attorney General, the State School Superintendent, the Commissioner of Insurance, the Commissioner of Agriculture, and the Commissioner of Labor.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. IV, Para. I.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendments (Ga. L. 1984, p. 1716, § 3) and (Ga. L. 1988, p. 2100, § 5) which would have revised Paragraph I to delete the reference to the State School Superintendent were defeated at the general elections on November 6, 1984, and November 8, 1988.

Paragraph II. Procedure for determining disability.

Upon a petition of any four of the elected constitutional executive officers to the Supreme Court of Georgia that another elected constitutional executive officer is unable to perform the duties of office because of a physical or mental disability, the Supreme Court shall by appropriate rule provide for a speedy and public hearing on such matter, including notice of the nature and cause of the accusation, process for obtaining witnesses, and the assistance of counsel. Evidence at such hearing shall include testimony from not fewer than three qualified physicians in private practice, one of whom must be a psychiatrist.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. IV,
Para. I.

Paragraph III. Effect of determination of disability.

If, after hearing the evidence on disability, the Supreme Court determines that there is a disability and that such disability is permanent, the office shall be declared vacant and the successor to that office shall be chosen as provided in this Constitution or the laws enacted in pursuance thereof. If it is determined that the disability is not permanent, the Supreme Court shall determine when the disability has ended and when the officer shall resume the exercise of the powers of office. During the period of temporary disability, the powers of such office shall be exercised as provided by law.

1976 Constitution. — Art. V, Sec. IV, power and duties upon finding of temporary disabilities, Ch. 5A, T. 45.
Para. I.

Cross references. — Assumption of

ARTICLE VI. JUDICIAL BRANCH

Section

- I. Judicial Power.
- II. Venue.
- III. Classes of Courts of Limited Jurisdiction.
- IV. Superior Courts.
- V. Court of Appeals.
- VI. Supreme Court.
- VII. Selection, Term, Compensation, and Discipline of Judges.
- VIII. District Attorneys.
- IX. General Provisions.
- X. Transition.

Cross references. — Procedure for judge to exercise power outside own court, § 15-1-9.1. State courts of counties, Ch. 7, T. 15. Magistrate courts, Ch. 10, T. 15.

Law reviews. — For article, “An Overview of the New Georgia Constitution,” see 35 Mercer L. Rev. 1 (1983). For annual survey of law on trial practice and procedure, see 35 Mercer L. Rev. 315 (1983). For article, “See One, Do One, Teach One: Dissecting the Use of Medical Education’s Signature Pedagogy in the Law School Curriculum,” see 26 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 361 (2010).

SECTION I. JUDICIAL POWER

Paragraph

- I. Judicial power of the state.
- II. Unified judicial system.
- III. Judges; exercise of power outside own court; scope of term “judge.”
- IV. Exercise of judicial power.
- V. Uniformity of jurisdiction, powers, etc.

Paragraph

- VI. Judicial circuits; courts in each county; court sessions.
- VII. Judicial circuits, courts, and judgeships, law changed.
- VIII. Transfer of cases.
- IX. Rules of evidence; law prescribed.
- X. Authorization for pilot projects.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Magistrate’s power in dispossessory proceeding. — Magistrate court had the authority to enter an order in a dispossessory action directing the landlord to perform repairs to the tenant’s apartment, as a magistrate court was entitled to exercise such powers as were necessary in aid of its jurisdiction, or to protect or effectuate its judgments. H. J. Russell & Co. v. Manuel, 264 Ga. App. 273, 590 S.E.2d 250 (2003).

Paragraph I. Judicial power of the state.

The judicial power of the state shall be vested exclusively in the following classes of courts: magistrate courts, probate courts, juvenile courts, state courts, superior courts, Court of Appeals, and Supreme Court. Magistrate courts, probate courts, juvenile courts, and state courts shall be courts of limited jurisdiction. In addition, the General Assembly may establish or authorize the establishment of municipal courts and may authorize administrative agencies to exercise quasi-judicial powers. Municipal courts shall have jurisdiction over ordinance violations and such other jurisdiction as provided by law. Except as provided in this paragraph and in Section X, municipal courts, county recorder's courts and civil courts in existence on June 30, 1983, and administrative agencies shall not be subject to the provisions of this article. The General Assembly shall have the authority to confer "by law" jurisdiction upon municipal courts to try state offenses. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 6, § 1, Para. 1; Ga. L. 1990, p. 2440, § 1/HR 861.)

1976 Constitution. — Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I; Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. XI; Art. VI, Sec. VI, Para. I; Art. VI, Sec. VII, Para. I.

Cross references. — State courts, § 15-7-1 et seq. Magistrate courts, § 15-10-1 et seq.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1990, p. 2440, § 1) which added the last sentence was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 6, 1990.

Law reviews. — For article, "Court Reform in the Twentieth Century: A Critique of the Court Unification Controversy," see 27 Emory L.J. 559 (1978). For annual survey on criminal law and procedure, see 42 Mercer L. Rev. 141 (1990). For article, "The City Court of Atlanta and the 1983 Georgia Constitution: Is the Judicial Engine Souped Up or Blown Up?," see 15 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 941 (1999).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

POWERS OF LEGISLATURE

PROBATE COURTS

General Consideration

Distinction between legislative and judicial functions. — Legislative power is that which declares what the law shall be; judicial is that which declares what law is, and applies it to past transactions and existing cases; the one makes the law, the other expounds and judicially administers it; the one prescribes a rule of civil conduct, the other interprets and enforces it in a case in litigation. Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947).

Intra-county request for judicial assistance did not create class of court.

— Intra-county request for judicial assistance under O.C.G.A. § 15-1-9.1(b)(2)(C) did not create a separate court, but was a constitutionally-permitted request for intra-county judicial assistance where the request and the response set out the matters to be handled by the two juvenile court judges who had agreed to assist the superior court; accordingly, the intra-county request and response were neither an unconstitutional creation of a class of court in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I, nor an unconstitutional usurpation of legislative authority by members of the judiciary in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VII. Earl v. Mills, 278 Ga. 128, 598 S.E.2d 480 (2004).

Determining the meaning of the Constitution is the exclusive function of the courts. Thompson v. Talmadge,

General Consideration (Cont'd)

201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947).

If any department of government, including the judiciary, acts beyond bounds of its authority, such action is void. Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947).

Legislation may not give court's power to agency. — Trial court properly ruled that O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6, which authorized the Georgia Sentence Review Panel to review and reduce sentences, was unconstitutional as the Georgia General Assembly does not have the constitutional authority to divest the trial courts of Georgia of their traditional jurisdiction over sentencing by creating a quasi-appellate tribunal (such as the Panel) to review and alter the otherwise lawful sentences imposed by those trial courts. Sentence Review Panel v. Moseley, 284 Ga. 128, 663 S.E.2d 679 (2008).

For distinction between courts and administrative agencies, see Bentley v. Chastain, 242 Ga. 348, 249 S.E.2d 38 (1978).

Courts enumerated in this paragraph are constitutional courts and may not be interfered with by legislation. Chatham County v. Mulling, 248 Ga. 878, 286 S.E.2d 735 (1982) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I).

Only state courts may try persons charged with violating state laws. City of Atlanta v. Landers, 212 Ga. 111, 90 S.E.2d 583 (1955).

Cost of enforcement of state law cannot be considered in administration of justice. City of Atlanta v. Landers, 212 Ga. 111, 90 S.E.2d 583 (1955).

Action by judges during judicial convention. — Passage of rule of practice by judges of the superior courts in convention cannot be classified as exercise of "judicial power". Moyers v. State, 186 Ga. 446, 197 S.E. 846 (1938).

Judiciary has no authority to review internal procedure of legislature. — If in the exercise of power to enact laws, the General Assembly merely fails to observe certain rules of internal procedure, the judiciary would not be authorized to review such action, and the same would be true as to any action of the officers of that body within the sphere of their jurisdiction. Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947).

Constitution does not fix salary of ordinary (now probate judge), which is paid out of the county treasury. Houlihan v. Saussy, 206 Ga. 1, 55 S.E.2d 557 (1949).

Validity of title to office created by law is a judicial question. Thompson v. Talmadge, 201 Ga. 867, 41 S.E.2d 883 (1947).

Power to create additional positions on municipal court is not conferred upon municipal court judge, but lies at discretion of the county commission. The judge of the municipal court has only the power to recommend individuals to fill court positions. Chatham County v. Mulling, 248 Ga. 878, 286 S.E.2d 735 (1982).

Failure to consider need for judge pro tempore may be abuse of discretion. — Failure of a county commissioner to consider the need of a municipal court for a judge pro tempore and additional deputies where municipal court was overburdened and understaffed amounted to an arbitrary and capricious gross abuse of discretion and a failure to exercise the discretion required by law. Chatham County v. Mulling, 248 Ga. 878, 286 S.E.2d 735 (1982).

Judge not "policymaker." — A juvenile court judge pro tempore was a state official and, as such, could not be the "official policymaker" responsible for establishing an alleged unconstitutional custom or policy on behalf of a county which was the defendant in a federal civil rights action. Bendiburg v. Dempsey, 692 F. Supp. 1354 (N.D. Ga. 1988).

Municipal court jurisdiction over state misdemeanor offenses. — In providing that municipal courts shall have jurisdiction over ordinance violations and such other jurisdiction as provided by law, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I authorizes the General Assembly to vest municipal courts with jurisdiction over state misdemeanor offenses. Kolker v. State, 260 Ga. 240, 391 S.E.2d 391 (1990).

Jurisdiction over foreign plaintiff's contract action. — When an out-of-state seller sued an in-state buyer in Georgia, despite a provision in the parties' contract for the jurisdiction of the courts of Texas, and the seller did not respond, the courts of Georgia had subject matter jurisdiction under O.C.G.A. § 15-7-4(a)(2); Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I; Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. III, Para. I; and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I; the parties waived the forum selection clause by either filing suit in Georgia or not responding. Euler-Siac S.P.A. (Creamar Spa) v. Drama Marble Co., 274 Ga. App. 252, 617 S.E.2d 203 (2005).

City Court of Atlanta does not violate the exclusivity and uniformity provisions. — The City Court of Atlanta, under 1996 Ga. Laws 627, does not violate the exclusivity and uniformity provisions of the Georgia Constitution. The court rejected the defendant's contention that the phrase "system of state courts" found in the preamble of the 1996 Act amounts to an unconstitutional attempt by the General Assembly to place the City Court of Atlanta in the class of "state court," under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I, while restricting its jurisdiction. Wickham v. State, 273 Ga. 563, 544 S.E.2d 439 (2001).

Venue for the Atlanta City Court did not need to be shown to be in Fulton County or DeKalb County as venue was coextensive with city territorial limits and need not be shown to lie in either county. State v. Walker, 276 Ga. 756, 585 S.E.2d 77 (2003).

Recorder's court jurisdiction over state misdemeanor traffic offenses. — Under the 1983 Georgia Constitution, the recorder's courts continue to possess limited jurisdiction over state misdemeanor traffic offenses until otherwise provided by law. Wojcik v. State, 260 Ga. 260, 392 S.E.2d 525 (1990).

Appeal from violation of city ordinance lies in superior court. — Where uniform traffic citation and complaint form was used to charge an offense in a constitutional city court, but the solicitor general (now district attorney) subsequently amended the form to allege a violation of a city ordinance, jurisdiction of an appeal lay in the superior court rather than the Court of Appeals. Parnell v. City of Atlanta, 173 Ga. App. 602, 327 S.E.2d 569 (1985).

Juvenile courts are courts of record; therefore, they are authorized to grant new trials. In re T.A.W., 265 Ga. 106, 454 S.E.2d 134 (1995).

Proof that a criminal offense occurred within the city limits of Atlanta is sufficient to establish venue in the City Court of Atlanta; to the extent that Walker v. State, 258 Ga. App. 354 (2002) conflicts with this holding, it is overruled. Gardner v. State, 261 Ga. App. 425, 582 S.E.2d 566 (2003).

Superior court judge was state employee. — Trial court did not err in determining that a deceased Georgia superior court judge was a State of Georgia employee but not a county employee for purposes of the exclusive remedy provision under O.C.G.A. § 34-9-11(a) of the Georgia Workers' Compensation Act in a claim by the judge's widow against county sheriffs, arising from the murder of the judge while in a courtroom, as the judge was vested with the judicial power of the State of Georgia under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I and was defined as a "state official" pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 45-7-4(a)(20) for compensation purposes; the fact that the county asserted that the widow could obtain workers compensation benefits and that it offered her the judge's funeral expenses, both of which sums the widow refused, or that it contributed a supplemental amount to the judge's salary, did not make the judge a county employee. Freeman v. Barnes, 282 Ga. App. 895, 640 S.E.2d 611 (2006).

Cited in Porter v. Calhoun County Bd. of Comm'rs, 252 Ga. 446, 314 S.E.2d 649 (1984); Ward v. State, 188 Ga. App. 372, 373 S.E.2d 65 (1988); Kolker v. State, 193 Ga. App. 306, 387 S.E.2d 597 (1989); Fathers Are Parents Too, Inc. v. Hunstein, 202 Ga. App. 716, 415 S.E.2d 322 (1992); Waller v. State, 231 Ga. App. 323, 498 S.E.2d 362 (1998); Nguyen v. State, 282 Ga. 483, 651 S.E.2d 681 (2007); Hendry v. Hendry, 292 Ga. 1, 734 S.E.2d 46 (2012).

Powers of Legislature

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I and antecedent provisions, relating to enumeration of courts of the state, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Powers of Legislature (Cont'd)

This paragraph does not authorize legislature to take away jurisdiction of superior courts, given by Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I). Williams v. State, 138 Ga. 168, 74 S.E. 1083 (1912).

Additional terms of superior courts may be created. Burge v. Mangum, 134 Ga. 307, 67 S.E. 857 (1910).

Nonuniform city courts may be created. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Jackson, 98 Ga. 207, 25 S.E. 264 (1896); Welborne v. Donaldson, 115 Ga. 563, 41 S.E. 999 (1902); Clark v. Black, 136 Ga. 812, 72 S.E. 251 (1911).

Organization and manner of payment of salaries of judge and officers thereof may be provided for. Clark v. Eve, 134 Ga. 788, 68 S.E. 598 (1910); Clark v. Black, 136 Ga. 812, 72 S.E. 251 (1911); Macon, D. & S.R.R. v. Calhoun, 138 Ga. 165, 74 S.E. 1030 (1912).

This paragraph does not bar creation of tribunals for special purposes but rather authorizes General Assembly to create additional courts. Tax Assessors v. Chitwood, 235 Ga. 147, 218 S.E.2d 759 (1975) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I).

General Assembly's power to prescribe territorial limits. — This paragraph empowers the General Assembly to prescribe territorial limits within which courts may be established and within which the courts shall exercise jurisdiction. Strickland v. Houston, 173 Ga. 615, 161 S.E. 262 (1931) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I).

Power to appoint judges cannot be delegated to municipal corporations. — The creation of state courts involves the appointment of judges and court officers; this function cannot be delegated to municipal corporations. City of Atlanta v. Landers, 212 Ga. 111, 90 S.E.2d 583 (1955).

Nonelected senior judges. — There is no merit to the argument that the authorization for the service of senior judges conflicts with Ga. Const. 1983, Art.

VI, Sec. I, Para. I, vesting judicial power in designated courts, because creation of the position of senior judge does not establish a separate judicial forum. Smith v. Langford, 271 Ga. 221, 518 S.E.2d 884 (1999).

Act granting board of commissioners of county power to fix salary of municipal court judge constitutional. Feagin v. Freeney, 192 Ga. 868, 17 S.E.2d 61 (1941).

Power of municipality to punish as municipal offense that which is also state offense must be conferred by general law and the grant of such power must be clearly expressed. Furthermore, the act which the municipality seeks to punish as a municipal offense must be such as affects the peace and good order of the municipality and contain some characterizing ingredient not contained in the state offense. Gordon v. Green, 228 Ga. 505, 186 S.E.2d 719 (1972).

Under this paragraph, legislature is authorized to create school courts or school tribunals and confer jurisdiction on them to hear and determine school controversies. Boatright v. Yates, 211 Ga. 125, 84 S.E.2d 195 (1954) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I).

Courts to assist in administration of school system. — Under the provisions of this paragraph, the General Assembly is empowered to create a court, or courts, which has jurisdiction of all controversies arising in the administration of the common school system, as created by the School Laws of 1919 (Ga. L. 1919, p. 288), and to give to any party a right to appeal successively from the decision of the county board of education to the State School Superintendent, and from the judgment of the State School Superintendent to the State Board of Education, whose judgment should be final. Board of Educ. v. Board of Educ., 173 Ga. 203, 159 S.E. 712 (1931).

Power of superior court judge to pay attorney fees in capital felony cases. — The legislature by authorizing payment of certain fees and expenses of appointed attorneys in capital felony cases created an expense of court, and the judges of the superior courts have the inherent power and authority to order it paid out of the county treasury. Bibb County v. Hancock, 211 Ga. 429, 86 S.E.2d 511 (1955).

Cases from an abolished county court may be transferred to superior court. Redd v. Davis, 59 Ga. 823 (1877).

Inspection of private institutions by grand jury constitutional. — Georgia Laws 1916, p. 126, now repealed, providing for inspection of private sanitariums and convents by members of grand jury, do not violate this paragraph. Sister Felicitas v. Hartridge, 148 Ga. 832, 98 S.E. 538 (1919) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I).

Act removing county site valid. Orr v. James, 159 Ga. 237, 125 S.E. 468 (1924).

Probate Courts

Editor's notes. — Some of the cases noted under this heading were decided under Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. VI, Para. I and antecedent provisions, relating to the probate court.

Paragraph does not fix salaries. — Although this paragraph provides for the establishment of courts of ordinary (now probate courts), and prescribes their powers and term of office, it does not fix their salary, which is paid out of the county treasury. Houlihan v. Saussy, 206 Ga. 1, 55 S.E.2d 557 (1949).

Court of equity to interfere with probate court only when remedies at law inadequate. — While under former Code 1933, § 113-2203 (see now O.C.G.A. § 53-7-160) a court of equity had concurrent jurisdiction with the ordinary (now probate judge) over the settlement of accounts of administrators, and under former Code 1933, § 37-403 (see now O.C.G.A. § 23-2-91) equity, upon the application of an interested person, will assume jurisdiction to prevent loss, yet this paragraph vested in the ordinary (now probate judge) jurisdiction of probate, and, hence, equity would exercise jurisdiction in such matters only when available remedies at law were inadequate. Hamrick v. Hamrick, 206 Ga. 564, 58 S.E.2d 145 (1950); L.L. Minor Co. v. Perkins, 246 Ga. 6, 268 S.E.2d 637 (1980) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I).

Equity can only exercise its current jurisdiction over the administration of estates when complete and adequate remedies at law are unavailable. Powell v. Thorsen, 248 Ga. 697, 285 S.E.2d 699 (1982).

This paragraph confers jurisdiction of subject matter on superior court by consent of parties. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. v. Cohran, 106 Ga. App. 14, 126 S.E.2d 289 (1962) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I).

Appeal to the superior court from preliminary ruling violated this paragraph and former Code 1933, § 113-603 (see now O.C.G.A. § 53-3-1). Hartley v. Holwell, 202 Ga. 724, 44 S.E.2d 896 (1947) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I).

Paragraph does not exclude remedy by certiorari. — This paragraph gives the right of appeal from the court of ordinary (now probate court) but does not exclude the remedy by certiorari. Seagraves v. Powell Co., 143 Ga. 572, 85 S.E. 760 (1915) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I).

Where either appeal or certiorari is proper, movant may elect which one to pursue. Pierce v. Felts, 146 Ga. 809, 92 S.E. 541 (1917).

Under this paragraph and former Code 1933, § 113-603 (see now O.C.G.A. § 53-3-1) only court of ordinary (now probate court) had original jurisdiction over probate of wills, and the provisions for appeal in such cases were not intended to invade this original jurisdiction. Hartley v. Holwell, 202 Ga. 724, 44 S.E.2d 896 (1947) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I).

Court of ordinary (now probate court) has no jurisdiction to determine dire need of widow in action to sell property in which the widow owned life estate. Castleberry v. Horne, 220 Ga. 691, 141 S.E.2d 394 (1965).

For jurisdiction of ordinary (now probate judge) over homesteads, see Dunagan v. Stadler, 101 Ga. 474, 29 S.E. 440 (1897).

Appeal not authorized. — Ruling by court of ordinary (now probate court) striking some but not all of grounds of caveat to application to probate will is not decision authorizing appeal. Hartley v. Holwell, 202 Ga. 724, 44 S.E.2d 896 (1947).

Probate Courts (Cont'd)

Person who is not qualified voter is not eligible to office of ordinary (now probate judge). Lee v. Byrd, 169 Ga. 622, 151 S.E. 28 (1929).

No distinction needs to be made in pleadings between ordinary (now probate judge) and court of ordinary (now probate court). Trust Co. v. Smith, 54 Ga. App. 518, 188 S.E. 469 (1936).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Municipal corporations cannot try for state offenses. — The only courts with authority or jurisdiction to try state offenses, or persons charged with violation of state laws, are state courts; the trial of a state case is a function of the state, and municipal corporations have no right to inflict punishment for violations of the criminal laws of this state. 1958-59 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 216.

Juvenile courts cannot require specialized services for handicapped or abused children. — Juvenile courts are without authority to compel state agencies or local school systems to provide or fund specialized services for handicapped or abused children, although a child involved is a handicapped child within the meaning of 20 U.S.C. § 1401 et seq., the Education for All Handicapped Act. 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U89-6.

Judge of probate court is both judicial and county officer. 1948-49 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 482.

Judge of probate court not qualified also to hold public office of county attorney; it is self-evident that the duties of the two public offices in many instances would be conflicting and would be incompatible. 1962 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 61.

A probate court may exercise state judicial power over misdemeanor traffic offenses occurring within the corporate limits of a municipal corporation where the charter of the municipal corporation authorizes a municipal court but no such court is in existence. The arresting officer in a misdemeanor traffic case is responsible for returning those charges to the proper court with jurisdiction to hear the matter, but, if the citation is erroneously returned to the incorrect court, that court should promptly act to transfer the matter to a court with jurisdiction to consider the charges. 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U89-30.

O.C.G.A. § 40-13-29 does not prohibit the probate court from exercising state judicial power in any county simply because of the existence of a municipal court within the corporate limits of a municipal corporation within that county. 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U89-30.

Probate court judges may not exercise jurisdiction over cases involving possession of one ounce or less of marijuana, either by virtue of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. XI (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. X, Para. I) or by virtue of their undisputed authority over misdemeanor traffic cases. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 81-25.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 20 Am. Jur. 2d, Courts, § 16 et seq.

C.J.S. — 21 C.J.S., Courts, § 164 et seq.

ALR. — Power of court to prescribe rules of pleadings, practice, or procedure, 110 ALR 22; 158 ALR 705.

Paragraph II. Unified judicial system.

All courts of the state shall comprise a unified judicial system.

1976 Constitution. — Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. II.

Cross references. — Uniformity of courts, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. V. Rules of court generally, §§ 15-1-5 and 15-2-18.

Law reviews. — For article, “Regulation of the Legal Profession — Judicial or Legislative?,” see 10 Ga. St. B.J. 589 (1974). For article, “Court Reform in the Twentieth Century: A Critique of the Court Unification Controversy,” see 27 Emory L.J. 559 (1978).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 20 Am. Jur. 2d, Courts, §§ 8 et seq., 65 et seq.

Paragraph III. Judges; exercise of power outside own court; scope of term “judge.”

Provided the judge is otherwise qualified, a judge may exercise judicial power in any court upon the request and with the consent of the judges of that court and of the judge’s own court under rules prescribed by law. The term “judge,” as used in this article, shall include Justices, judges, senior judges, magistrates, and every other such judicial office of whatever name existing or created.

1976 Constitution. — Art. VI, Sec. III, Para. I; Art. VI, Sec. IV, Paras. IX, X; Art. VI, Sec. XIII, Para. II.

Cross references. — Grounds for disqualification, §§ 15-1-8 and 15-1-9. Request for assistance, § 15-1-9.1.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor’s notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. X and antecedent provisions, relating to alternating of judges in city courts, state courts, and superior courts, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

This paragraph applies to only constitutional city courts. Paulk v. State, 2 Ga. App. 660, 58 S.E. 1108 (1907) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. III).

Purpose of this paragraph is to avoid delay, expense, and inconvenience when the judge of either court is disqualified to perform any duties which the law places upon that person as judge. McCullough v. McCullough, 208 Ga. 776, 69 S.E.2d 764 (1952) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. III).

Paragraph applies only to cases actually pending. Cox v. State, 19 Ga. App. 283, 91 S.E. 422 (1917) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. III).

Substitution of judges not restricted as to type of cases. — There is neither language nor implication in this paragraph that restricts the substitution of judges there provided for to any type of cases, to term matters, or to chambers matters. McCullough v. McCullough, 208 Ga. 776, 69 S.E.2d 764 (1952) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. III).

When another judge is to be substituted. — Whenever a party to any proceeding makes and files a timely and sufficient affidavit that the judge before whom the matter is pending has a personal bias or prejudice either against the party or in favor of any adverse party, such judge shall proceed no further therein, but another judge shall be assigned to hear such proceedings. Stevens v. Wakefield, 160 Ga. App. 353, 287 S.E.2d 49 (1981), overruled on other grounds, 249 Ga. 254, 290 S.E.2d 58 (1982).

The term “sentencing judge” in O.C.G.A. § 42-8-34(g) refers to the office and not to the person. Smith v. State, 250 Ga. App. 128, 550 S.E.2d 683 (2001), overruled on other grounds, Lewis v. McDougal, 276 Ga. 861, 583 S.E.2d 859 (2003).

Objection to appointment of magistrate waived. — Where there was a serious doubt that the purported appointment by a single judge was equivalent to designation “upon the request and with the consent of the judges of that court and of the judge’s own court under rules prescribed by law,” but there was no objection to the appointment of the magistrate to sit as a superior court judge prior to the commencement of the divorce trial upon which appeal was based, the issue was not preserved for appellate review. Troncone v. Troncone, 261 Ga. 662, 409 S.E.2d 516 (1991).

Judge of superior court cannot attest affidavit to begin prosecution in city court. Edmondson v. State, 123 Ga. 194, 51 S.E. 301 (1905).

Other cases cannot be tried by regular trial judge during time of trial. Butler v. State, 112 Ga. 76, 37 S.E. 119 (1900).

Where superior court judge undertakes to preside in case pending in city court in which the regular judge is not disqualified, the trial is a nullity. Ivey v. State, 112 Ga. 175, 37 S.E. 398 (1900).

State judge disqualifying self. — Utilization of procedure for reassigning case provided in this paragraph was within discretion of state court judge who disqualified herself; the matter being one of judicial administration, the choice implemented deprived the plaintiffs of nothing to which they were entitled under principles of due process. Stevens v. Wakefield, 163 Ga. App. 40, 292 S.E.2d 516 (1982) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. III).

Intra-county judicial assistance. — Requesting and receiving intra-county judicial assistance was permitted under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. III, and did not unconstitutionally create a judgeship as the juvenile court judges who assisted the superior court did not become superior court judges; thus, no judicial position constitutionally required to be filled by election under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. VII, Para. I, or by gubernatorial appointment until election under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. V, Sec. II, Para. VIII, was created by the exercise of O.C.G.A. § 15-1-9.1(b)(2)(C). Earl v. Mills, 278 Ga. 128, 598 S.E.2d 480 (2004).

Valid Act may authorize city court judge to sit in other city courts. Georgia, Fla. & Ala. Ry. v. Sasser, 130 Ga. 394, 60 S.E. 997 (1908).

City court judge empowered to preside for superior court county judge. — City Court of Camilla being a constitutional city court, its judge was empowered under this paragraph to preside in place of superior court judge of county. Galloway v. Mitchell County Elec. Membership Corp., 190 Ga. 428, 9 S.E.2d 903 (1940) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. III).

Superior court judge emeritus without jurisdiction to certify appeal pursuant to Art. 2, Ch. 6, T. 5 except when authorized. — Because a superior court judge emeritus had not been granted constitutional or statutory authority to serve as a superior court judge, except when the Governor was authorized to call upon the judge to do so or the judge is selected to serve as such in a civil case under the provisions of former Code 1933, §§ 24-2623-24-2626 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-6-13 and 15-6-14), it necessarily follows that a superior court judge emeritus not within these exceptions was wholly without jurisdiction or power to certify a bill of exceptions (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-49) in a case tried by a superior court judge. Chambers v. Wynn, 217 Ga. 381, 122 S.E.2d 571 (1961) (decided under Ga. Const. 1945, Art. VI, Sec. XIII, Para. II, relating to emeritus justices and judges.).

Nonelected senior judges. — Even though the position of senior judge is not an elected one, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. III allows a senior judge to exercise judicial power in the superior courts when the assistance of a senior judge is necessary. O.C.G.A. §§ 15-1-9.2 and 47-8-61 are simply the statutory enactments pursuant to this constitutional provision. Smith v. Langford, 271 Ga. 221, 518 S.E.2d 884 (1999).

Paragraph IV. Exercise of judicial power.

Each court may exercise such powers as necessary in aid of its jurisdiction or to protect or effectuate its judgments; but only the superior and appellate courts shall have the power to issue process in the nature of mandamus, prohibition, specific performance, quo warranto, and injunction. Each superior court, state court, and other courts of record may grant new trials on legal grounds.

1976 Constitution. — Art. I, Sec. I, Para. VIII; Art. VI, Sec. IV, Paras. II, V, VI.

Cross references. — New trial generally, Ch. 5, T. 5. Writs of mandamus, prohibition, and quo warranto, Ch. 6, T. 9.

Law reviews. — For article, “Contempt of Court in Georgia,” see 23 Ga. St. B.J. 66 (1987). For article, “The Civil Jurisdiction of State and Magistrate Courts,” see 24 Ga. St. B.J. 29 (1987).

JUDICIAL DECISIONSANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
NEW TRIAL

General Consideration

Only power and authority given to superior courts to correct errors in inferior courts is by writ of certiorari. Rushing v. City of Plains, 152 Ga. App. 884, 264 S.E.2d 319 (1980).

Power to issue injunctions. — Superior courts are empowered to issue injunctions, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. IV and O.C.G.A. § 15-6-8, and nothing in O.C.G.A. § 48-4-40(1) deprives the superior courts of that power in the arena of redemption of property following a tax sale. Am. Lien Fund, LLC v. Dixon, 286 Ga. 562, 690 S.E.2d 415 (2010).

This paragraph does not give any right to issue distress warrants. Woolsey v. Lawshe, 1 Ga. App. 817, 57 S.E. 1039 (1907) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. IV).

Mandate of this paragraph and provisions of former Code 1933, § 64-101 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-6-20) gave judge of superior court power to issue writs of mandamus, and made it the judge’s duty to do so from any cause whereby a defect of legal justice would ensue if a mandamus was not issued, and if there was no other specific legal remedy. Wofford Oil Co. v. City of Calhoun, 183 Ga. 511, 189 S.E. 5 (1936) (see Ga. Const.

1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. IV).

Rights conferred by this paragraph need not be mentioned in local Act creating city court. Daughtry v. State, 115 Ga. 819, 42 S.E. 248 (1902) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. IV).

Enjoining arbitration proceeding on res judicata grounds. — Trial court was empowered to protect a judgment it entered by enjoining an arbitration proceeding on the grounds of res judicata and collateral estoppel. Mitcham v. Blalock, 268 Ga. 644, 491 S.E.2d 782 (1997). But see Felix v. State, 271 Ga. 534, 523 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Probate court. — Probate court erred by allowing the objections of a bank and a decedent’s parents solely on the basis of adverse title and by denying a year’s support to the widow when the widow failed to meet the resulting burden of proof, because the probate court lacked the jurisdiction under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. III, Para. I and O.C.G.A. § 15-9-30 to determine that the relevant money-market account and real property were not part of the estate; despite the jurisdictional limitation and the lack of an appropriate objection, the probate court proceeded to conduct a hearing as to the amount necessary for the widow’s support, thereby inappropriately placing upon the widow a burden of proof that was contrary to O.C.G.A. § 53-3-7(a) and otherwise lacking in the absence of the jurisdictionally defective objections to the petition. In re Mahmoodzadeh, 314 Ga. App. 383, 724 S.E.2d 797 (2012).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Petition seeking to require superior court judge to enter order. — Although there may occasionally appear to be a need to file an original petition in the Supreme Court to issue process in the nature of mandamus, and perhaps quo warranto or prohibition, where a superior court judge is named as the respondent, such as where the petitioner seeks to require the judge to enter an order in a matter allegedly pending more than 30 days in violation of O.C.G.A. § 15-6-21(a), such a petition may in fact be filed in the appropriate superior court. Being the respondent, the superior court judge will disqualify, another superior court judge will be appointed to hear and determine the matter, and the final decision may be appealed to the Supreme Court for review. Brown v. Johnson, 251 Ga. 436, 306 S.E.2d 655 (1983).

Excessive fines findings required. — Where the trial court did not make findings regarding, or even specifically mentioning, the factors that must be considered in analyzing an excessive fines claim, vacation and remand for a new order including findings of fact and conclusions of law on those factors was required. Mitchell v. State, 236 Ga. App. 335, 511 S.E.2d 880 (1999).

Power to review when question cannot be raised in trial court. — When a question cannot be raised in the trial court, the Court of Appeals has inherent power to review to avoid clear injustice where it appears prejudicial error has occurred necessitating reversal of the trial court's judgment. Evans v. Belth, 193 Ga. App. 757, 388 S.E.2d 914 (1989).

Discretion in reviewing allegation of error. — For the purpose of protecting its judgments on appellate review, the Court of Appeals may, in the exercise of sound discretion, elect to review any one or more of the several assertions of error contained within a single enumeration and to treat the remaining assertions of error therein as abandoned. Felix v. State, 271 Ga. 534, 523 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. IV is not authority for an appellate court to protect an appellate adjudication from further appellate review by declining to reach the merits of an allegation of error sufficiently set forth pursuant to the Appellate Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 5-6-40 et seq. Felix v. State, 271 Ga. 534, 523 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Appellate court lacked authority to exercise appellate jurisdiction where recent case law made it no longer appropriate for the appellate court to invoke the broad inherent and constitutional power of a court to take those acts necessary in aid of its jurisdiction under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. IV. St. Paul Reinsurance Co. v. Ross, 254 Ga. App. 190, 561 S.E.2d 489 (2002).

Order to comply with settlement agreement. — State court order declaring that defendants had not defaulted with respect to a settlement agreement and ordering the parties to comply with the terms of the agreement did not constitute a final judgment where the order did not expressly provide either that the action was dismissed or that plaintiffs receive judgment in accordance with the terms of the agreement. Zeitman v. McBrayer, 201 Ga. App. 767, 412 S.E.2d 287 (1991).

Rule to protect appellate judgments. — As a general appellate rule adopted as necessary to protect or effectuate appellate judgments, it is the state of an appellate record and transcript duly before the appellate court at the time of the original disposition of the appeal, and not the state of the record as amended in an attempt to support an appellate position argued on motion for reconsideration, that is controlling as to the adequacy of the record for purposes of appellate review. Williams v. Food Lion, Inc., 213 Ga. App. 865, 446 S.E.2d 221 (1994); Perimeter Realty v. GAPI, Inc., 243 Ga. App. 584, 533 S.E.2d 136 (2000).

Appellate order reinstated. — Trial court's failure to comply with Court of Appeals' order to reach final determination of the merits of appellant's appeal by the dismissal thereof warranted remand to the superior court for compliance with the directions originally mandated by the court. Walton v. State, 207 Ga. App. 787, 429 S.E.2d 158 (1993).

Standing. — Citizen lacked standing to seek to have the State Bar institute disciplinary action against attorney in a case where the Office of General Counsel had decided not to proceed. Scanlon v. State Bar, 264 Ga. 251, 443 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1018, 115 S. Ct. 581, 130 L. Ed. 2d 495 (1994).

Magistrate court lacks injunctive relief authority. — As injunctive relief was only within the jurisdiction of appellate and superior courts, pursuant to Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. IV, and magistrate courts had jurisdiction in matters that were not vested in the superior courts, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-10-2, a magistrate court exceeded its authority when it imposed injunctive relief against property owners upon finding that they violated a county zoning ordinance, which allowed the owners to seek relief from the void sentence at any time in the superior court; the owners had illegally operated a paving business on their property, and the magistrate had ordered the removal of all of the paving equipment within a set time in order to avoid a daily fine. Adams v. Madison County Planning & Zoning, 271 Ga. App. 333, 609 S.E.2d 681 (2005).

Dismissal of petition for writs of mandamus and prohibition. — In an original action brought before the Supreme Court of Georgia, the Court dismissed a petition for writs of mandamus and prohibition filed by a prosecutor regarding a criminal prosecution because the prosecutor was not entitled to use the writs to circumvent the statutory limitations on the State's ability to appeal under O.C.G.A. §§ 5-7-1 and 5-7-2. Howard v. Fuller, No. S08O0357, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 873 (Nov. 30, 2007).

Contempt finding improper. — Order holding an attorney in contempt pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5 and otherwise was improper because, inter alia, the trial court immediately imposed punishment and did not provide the attorney the opportunity to speak in the attorney's own behalf, the attorney was not put on notice that a continuation of the offending conduct would have constituted contempt, it was highly unlikely that the attorney's allegedly offending conduct should have had any impact on the deliberations of the factfinder, a juvenile judge, and the trial court acted without warning and had obviously lost the court's patience with the attorney and the attorney's client and imposed sanctions for contempt when other actions might have achieved the same result without the disruption to the case that these contempt citations had caused. In re Hughes, 299 Ga. App. 66, 681 S.E.2d 745 (2009).

Dismissal of petition required under O.C.G.A. § 9-10-14. — Georgia Supreme Court dismissed an inmate's petition for a writ of mandamus because the inmate was not incarcerated in Georgia, thus, the filing requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-10-14(b) were not applicable to the inmate and the inmate should have filed the petition initially with a Georgia superior court. Gay v. Owens, 292 Ga. 480, 738 S.E.2d 614 (2013).

Cited in Graham v. Cavender, 252 Ga. 123, 311 S.E.2d 832 (1984); Talley v. State, 200 Ga. App. 442, 408 S.E.2d 463 (1991); Queen v. State, 207 Ga. App. 138, 427 S.E.2d 107 (1993); In re Siemon, 264 Ga. 641, 449 S.E.2d 832 (1994); Ellerbee v. State, 215 Ga. App. 312, 450 S.E.2d 443 (1994); Thorp v. State, 217 Ga. App. 275, 457 S.E.2d 234 (1995); Rabern v. State, 221 Ga. App. 874, 473 S.E.2d 547 (1996); Waldrip v. Head, 272 Ga. 572, 532 S.E.2d 380 (2000); Holmes v. State, 273 Ga. 644, 543 S.E.2d 688 (2001); Giles v. Vastakis, 262 Ga. App. 483, 585 S.E.2d 905 (2003); Bynum v. State, 289 Ga. App. 636, 658 S.E.2d 196 (2008); In re Jefferson, 283 Ga. 216, 657 S.E.2d 830 (2008); Clark v. Chapman, 301 Ga. App. 117, 687 S.E.2d 146 (2009); Owens v. Hill, 295 Ga. 302, 758 S.E.2d 794 (2014); Holman v. State, 329 Ga. App. 393, 765 S.E.2d 614 (2014).

New Trial

Legislature barred from interfering with courts in power to grant new trials. — This paragraph and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IV (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. III) constitute insuperable barriers to legislative control or interference with courts in exercise of their powers to grant new trials. CTC Fin. Corp. v. Holden, 221 Ga. 809, 147 S.E.2d 427 (1966) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. IV).

New Trial (Cont'd)

New trials are granted by superior court as a court, and not by the presiding judge in capacity as a judge. Allen v. State, 102 Ga. 619, 29 S.E. 470 (1897).

Municipal courts may hear motions for new trial. — In a dispossessory action, a municipal court erred in holding that it lacked jurisdiction to hear a motion for new trial under O.C.G.A. § 5-5-1. The municipal's court enacting legislation, 1983 Ga. Laws 4453-4454, § 33, as well as Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. IV, gave it such jurisdiction. Nelson v. Powell, 293 Ga. App. 227, 666 S.E.2d 598 (2008).

No appeal from jury verdict in county court to jury in superior court. — As this section is not self-executing, an appeal does not lie from the verdict of a jury in the county court to a jury in the superior court. Davison v. Bush, 8 Ga. App. 34, 68 S.E. 495 (1910) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. IV).

Until approval of trial judge is given, a verdict does not become binding in a case where a motion for a new trial contains the general grounds. Brown v. Service Coach Lines, 71 Ga. App. 437, 31 S.E.2d 236 (1944).

Appellate court must assume knowledge on trial judge's part as to duty to approve verdict. — In interpreting the language of an order overruling a motion for a new trial, an appellate court must presume that the trial judge knew the rule as to the obligation to approve the jury's verdict devolving upon the judge, and that in overruling the motion the judge did exercise this discretion, unless the language of the order indicates to the contrary and that the court agreed to the verdict against the judge's own judgment and against the dictates of the judge's own conscience, merely because the judge did not feel that the judge had the duty or authority to override the findings of the jury upon disputed issues of fact. Brown v. Service Coach Lines, 71 Ga. App. 437, 31 S.E.2d 236 (1944).

Rules of discretion of judge and jury independent of each other. — The rules of law governing (1) the right of the jury to originally fix the damages; (2) the right of the appellate court to grant a new trial where the verdict is alleged to be excessive or inadequate; and (3) the right of a trial judge to grant a new trial where in the judge's discretion the judge thinks the verdict "unfair, unjust, contrary to the evidence, excessive, or too small," exist apart from and independent of each other. Brown v. Service Coach Lines, 71 Ga. App. 437, 31 S.E.2d 236 (1944).

General rule of noninterference with refusal to order new trial on ground of inadequate damages. — Where a trial judge refuses to order a new trial on the ground of inadequate damages in a tort action, the appellate court will interfere with that discretion only in case of manifest abuse. Brown v. Service Coach Lines, 71 Ga. App. 437, 31 S.E.2d 236 (1944).

Appellate court must approve when no evidence of bias or mistake. — Where the amount of a verdict, though less than an appellate court would have approved, did not afford such evidence of bias, passion, prejudice, or mistake as to justify setting it aside as inadequate, the appellate court must affirm it. Brown v. Service Coach Lines, 71 Ga. App. 437, 31 S.E.2d 236 (1944).

When jury verdict to be set aside for inadequate damages. — Where the item of damage complained of in a motion for a new trial could only be measured by the enlightened conscience of intelligent jurors, and the amount assessed is substantial, the appellate court ought not to set aside the verdict of the jury on the ground of inadequacy simply because the damages are inadequate, unless it clearly appears that the verdict is so small as to afford evidence of a gross mistake or undue bias, or so small as to support a convincing inference of gross mistake or undue bias, or so small as to justify an inference of gross mistake or undue bias. Brown v. Service Coach Lines, 71 Ga. App. 437, 31 S.E.2d 236 (1944).

Magistrate courts are not courts of record with the power to grant new trials; thus, a motion for a new trial in the magistrate court did not toll the time for filing an appeal to state or superior court.

Bowen v. Ball, 215 Ga. App. 640, 451 S.E.2d 502 (1994).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Power to order pre-sentence psychological evaluations. — A superior court may order psychological evaluations of criminal defendants prior to sentencing and at county expense. 1985 Op. Att’y Gen. No. U85-29.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 14 Am. Jur. 2d, Certiorari, § 1 et seq. 52 Am. Jur. 2d, Mandamus, §§ 1 et seq., 11 et seq.

C.J.S. — 21 C.J.S., Courts, § 1 et seq.

ALR. — Adequacy of remedy by appeal in criminal cases to preclude prohibition sought on the ground of lack or loss of jurisdiction, 141 ALR 1262.

Discretion of appellate court to refuse exercise of its original jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus, 165 ALR 1431.

Jury trial waiver as binding on later state civil trial, 48 ALR4th 747.

Paragraph V. Uniformity of jurisdiction, powers, etc.

Except as otherwise provided in this Constitution, the courts of each class shall have uniform jurisdiction, powers, rules of practice and procedure, and selection, qualifications, terms, and discipline of judges. The provisions of this Paragraph shall be effected by law within 24 months of the effective date of this Constitution.

1976 Constitution. — Art. VI, Sec. VII, Para. II; Art. VI, Sec. IX, Para. I.

Cross references. — Effective date of Constitution, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. XI, Sec. I, Para. VI.

Law reviews. — For article, “Regulation of the Legal Profession — Judicial or Legislative?,” see 10 Ga. St. B.J. 589 (1974).

For comment on Jones v. Boykin, 185 Ga. 606, 196 S.E. 900 (1937), see 1 Ga. B.J. 38 (1939).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

UNIFORMITY

SUPREME COURT PROCEDURE

General Consideration

This paragraph requires uniformity of jurisdiction as to subject matter alone and not over person or territory. Starnes v. Mutual Loan & Banking Co., 102 Ga. 597, 29 S.E. 452 (1897); Bibb County v. Hancock, 211 Ga. 429, 86 S.E.2d 511 (1955) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. V).

This paragraph forbids Acts authorizing irregular practices by the superior courts. Law v. McCord, 143 Ga. 822, 85 S.E. 1025 (1915) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. V).

Phrase “except as otherwise provided in this Constitution” takes care of any lack of uniformity between single judge and multi-judge circuits. Fulton

General Consideration (Cont'd)

County v. Woodside, 222 Ga. 90, 149 S.E.2d 140 (1966).

Uniformity of proceedings and practice in state courts may be established by General Assembly but such uniformity is not required. McSears v. State, 247 Ga. 48, 273 S.E.2d 847 (1981).

City Court of Atlanta does not violate the exclusivity and uniformity provisions. — The City Court of Atlanta, under 1996 Ga. Laws 627, does not violate the exclusivity and uniformity provisions of the Georgia Constitution. The court rejected the defendant's contention that the phrase "system of state courts" found in the preamble of the 1996 Act amounts to an unconstitutional attempt by the General Assembly to place the City Court of Atlanta in the class of "state court," under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. V, while restricting its jurisdiction. Wickham v. State, 273 Ga. 563, 544 S.E.2d 439 (2001).

Legislature has provided for uniform practice in courts of record by passage of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) and by providing that it shall apply in all courts of record. The legislature cannot, then, proceed to declare that the practice in some courts of record shall be different. Gresham v. Symmers, 227 Ga. 616, 182 S.E.2d 764 (1971).

General Assembly is authorized to reduce juries in state courts from 12 to six without violating this paragraph. McSears v. State, 247 Ga. 48, 273 S.E.2d 847 (1981) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. V).

Number of sessions of superior courts may be increased. Mulherin v. Kennedy, 120 Ga. 1080, 48 S.E. 437 (1904); Burge v. Mangum, 134 Ga. 307, 67 S.E. 857 (1910).

General Assembly cannot strip powers of superior court judge. — General Assembly may not enact any law stripping any superior court judge of jurisdiction and powers conferred upon the judge by the Constitution. Fulton County v. Woodside, 222 Ga. 90, 149 S.E.2d 140 (1966).

Judges of superior court are co-equal in jurisdiction and authority. Fulton County v. Woodside, 222 Ga. 90, 149 S.E.2d 140 (1966).

Magistrate judges and variance by local law. — As the constitution permits selection and terms of offices of magistrate judges to be varied by local law, the provisions of O.C.G.A. §§ 15-10-20, 15-10-23, 15-10-100, 15-10-105 and Ga. L. 1983, p. 4027, are not unconstitutional. In re Magistrate Court, 262 Ga. 334, 418 S.E.2d 42 (1992).

Judges in multi-judge circuits have coequal jurisdiction and authority, yet are subject to reasonable rules designed to expedite the business of the court by adopting a manner or method for distribution of the business of the court among the judges. Fulton County v. Woodside, 222 Ga. 90, 149 S.E.2d 140 (1966).

Georgia Constitution does not require random and equal distribution of cases among the judges of a multi-judge circuit; it merely requires certain uniformity among courts. Lumpkin v. Johnson, 270 Ga. 392, 509 S.E.2d 621 (1998).

There is no constitutional requirement of uniformity among judges within one court, since the term "courts" refers to the entire court and not to the judge or judges of the court. Cobb County v. Campbell, 256 Ga. 519, 350 S.E.2d 466 (1986).

Lawyer serving as superior court judge subject to disbarment. — That a lawyer was also a judge of the superior court and hence a constitutional officer and must have practiced law seven years at the time of the lawyer's election and was prohibited from practicing law while serving as judge, did not mean that the lawyer cannot at the same time be disbarred and the lawyer's license to practice law canceled as was provided in former Code 1933, Ch. 5, T. 9 (see now O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 19, T. 15). The two proceedings were provided for the accomplishment of entirely different results. Each must be pursued to accomplish the result which it was intended to accomplish. Gordon v. Clinkscales, 215 Ga. 843, 114 S.E.2d 15 (1960).

Assignments can restrict authority of judge, but not of courts. — Assignment of nonjury, or criminal, or jury, or other kinds of cases to judge does restrict the judge's authority and powers to that type of cases during that assignment, but this in no way limits, detracts from, or otherwise controls the jurisdiction of the court which is a separate entity from and larger in scope than the judge or judges of that court. Fulton County v. Woodside, 222 Ga. 90, 149 S.E.2d 140 (1966).

Cited in McDonald v. Vaughn, 130 Ga. 398, 60 S.E. 1060 (1908); Meyers v. Whittle, 171 Ga. 509, 156 S.E. 120 (1930); Wages v. Morgan, 174 Ga. 158, 162 S.E. 380 (1932); Jones v. Boykin, 185 Ga. 606, 196 S.E. 900 (1938); Moyers v. State, 186 Ga. 446, 197 S.E. 846 (1938); Robert v. Steed, 207 Ga. 41, 60 S.E.2d 134 (1950); City of Atlanta v. Sims, 210 Ga. 605, 82 S.E.2d 130 (1954); Gordon v. Clinkscales, 215 Ga. 843, 114 S.E.2d 15 (1960); Burpee v. Logan, 216 Ga. 434, 117 S.E.2d 339 (1960); Simmons v. State, 226 Ga. 110, 172 S.E.2d 680 (1970); Sellers v. Home Furnishing Co., 235 Ga. 831, 222 S.E.2d 34 (1976); Hopkins v. Hopkins, 237 Ga. 845, 229 S.E.2d 751 (1976); State v. Andrews, 240 Ga. 531, 242 S.E.2d 153 (1978); Williams v. Richmond County, 241 Ga. 89, 243 S.E.2d 55 (1978); McKeighan v. Long, 154 Ga. App. 171, 268 S.E.2d 674 (1980).

Uniformity

Editor's notes — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. IX, Para. I and antecedent provisions are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Superior court has jurisdiction of cases transferred from abolished city court. Macon, D. & S.R.R. v. Calhoun, 138 Ga. 165, 74 S.E. 1030 (1912); Macon, D. & S.R.R. v. Calhoun, 11 Ga. App. 338, 75 S.E. 343 (1912).

Practice of either City Court of Atlanta or City Court of Savannah may be changed to adapt to existing conditions. Welborne v. State, 114 Ga. 793, 40 S.E. 857 (1902).

Right to adapt to existing conditions is subject to the limitation of Ga. Const. 1877, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. VII (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV). Binns v. Ficklen, 130 Ga.

377, 60 S.E. 1051 (1908).

Justice court and court of notary public are identical. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Carter, 11 Ga. App. 499, 75 S.E. 842 (1912).

Civil Court of Fulton County is not subject to rules of uniformity laid down in this paragraph. McBrayer v. Automobile Fin., Inc., 95 Ga. App. 116, 97 S.E.2d 184 (1957) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. V).

Paragraph not violated by Code 1895, § 2372 relating to benevolent institutions. Kennedy v. Meara, 127 Ga. 68, 56 S.E. 243 (1906) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. V).

Local Act creating the Municipal Court of Macon and permitting oral charges to the jury does not violate this paragraph. Robinson v. Odom, 168 Ga. 81, 147 S.E. 569 (1929) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. V).

Act establishing county criminal courts (Ga. L. 1929, p. 394) does not violate this paragraph. Jordan v. State, 172 Ga. 857, 159 S.E. 235 (1931) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. V).

Supreme Court Procedure

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. VII and antecedent provisions, relating to the Supreme Court's power to make rules as to hearing and determining cases, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Supreme Court had authority under this paragraph to determine cases under such regulations as were prescribed by it. This was so because this paragraph prevailed over former Code 1933, § 24-3801 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-2-4). Fuller v. State, 232 Ga. 581, 208 S.E.2d 85 (1974) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. V).

Validity of laws setting rules of practice and procedure. — The rules of procedure and practice recommended by the Supreme Court pursuant to Ga. L. 1945, p. 145 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-2-18), are matters over which the legislature has always exercised jurisdiction. This paragraph does not change the jurisdiction but refers only to rules for the operation of the Supreme Court which the Supreme Court alone can adopt. The 1953 amendment, Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess. p. 279 (now repealed) is valid. Gordy v. Dunwody, 210 Ga. 810, 83 S.E.2d 7 (1954) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. V).

Supreme Court Procedure (Cont'd)

This paragraph does not invest Supreme Court with power to prescribe rules of procedure and practice in trial courts. Gordy v. Dunwody, 210 Ga.

810, 83 S.E.2d 7 (1954) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. V).

Supreme Court cannot adopt questions presented for review in appellant's brief as being specifications of error since the brief is not a part of the record but a requirement of the court under its authority to make rules for the determination of cases. Windsor v. Southeastern Adjusters, Inc., 221 Ga. 329, 144 S.E.2d 739 (1965).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Construction and application of constitutional provision against special or local laws regulating practice in courts of justice, 135 ALR 365.

Power of court to prescribe rules of pleading, practice, or procedure, 158 ALR 705.

Paragraph VI. Judicial circuits; courts in each county; court sessions.

The state shall be divided into judicial circuits, each of which shall consist of not less than one county. Each county shall have at least one superior court, magistrate court, a probate court, and, where needed, a state court and a juvenile court. The General Assembly may provide by law that the judge of the probate court may also serve as the judge of the magistrate court. In the absence of a state court or a juvenile court, the superior court shall exercise that jurisdiction. Superior courts shall hold court at least twice each year in each county.

1976 Constitution. — Art. VI, Sec. III, Para. I; Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. VIII; Art. VI, Sec. VI, Para. I.

Cross references. — Superior courts, Ch. 6, T. 15. Probate courts, Ch. 9, T. 15. Magistrate courts, Ch. 10, T. 15. Parental rights in juvenile proceedings, Ch. 11, T. 15.

Law reviews. — For article, "The Selection and Tenure of Judges," see 2 Ga. St. B.J. 281 (1966).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION
TIME OF HEARING

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. III, Para. I and antecedent provisions are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Jurisdiction of superior court judges is coextensive with the limits of this state. Burge v. Mangum, 134 Ga. 307, 67 S.E. 857 (1910).

Legislature and judges have no authority to alter superior court jurisdiction. — The Constitution has vested all the judicial power in the courts of the state, and neither the legislature nor a judge, nor the judges of a superior court have authority to limit or expand the jurisdiction and authority of a superior court. Fulton County v. Woodside, 222 Ga. 90, 149 S.E.2d 140 (1966).

Court may be presided over by more than one judge. — There is only one superior court in each county, but the court may be presided over by more than one judge, and the court may be divided into divisions, each presided over by a different judge. Fulton County v. Woodside, 222 Ga. 90, 149 S.E.2d 140 (1966).

Judges in multi-judge circuits have coequal jurisdiction and authority, yet are subject to reasonable rules designed to expedite the business of the court by adopting a manner or method for distribution of the business of the court among the judges. Fulton County v. Woodside, 222 Ga. 90, 149 S.E.2d 140 (1966).

Judges of the superior court are coequal in jurisdiction and authority. Fulton County v. Woodside, 222 Ga. 90, 149 S.E.2d 140 (1966).

Paragraph does not prohibit increase in number of sittings. — This paragraph requires at least two sittings of the superior court in each county, but does not prohibit more sittings to be held, nor does it prohibit two or more sections of the superior court presided over by different judges sitting at the same time. Bone v. State, 86 Ga. 108, 12 S.E. 205 (1890); Burge v. Mangum, 134 Ga. 307, 67 S.E. 857 (1910); Fulton County v. Woodside, 222 Ga. 90, 149 S.E.2d 140 (1966) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VI).

Special term of court for trial of criminal offenses may be authorized. Grinad v. State, 34 Ga. 270 (1866); Spann v. State, 47 Ga. 553 (1873).

Court may be presided over by more than one judge. — There is only one superior court in each county, but the court may be presided over by more than one judge, and the court may be divided into divisions, each presided over by a different judge. Fulton County v.

Woodside, 222 Ga. 90, 149 S.E.2d 140 (1966).

Judge may receive guilty plea in county other than where crime committed. — A judge of the superior court has jurisdiction under this paragraph to receive a plea of guilty in a county of the judge's circuit other than the county in which the crime is alleged to have been committed. Thompson v. Lynn, 215 Ga. 165, 109 S.E.2d 522 (1959) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VI).

Lack of uniformity in disposing of cases permitted. — This paragraph, in stating that the legislature shall have authority to regulate the manner in which the judges in multi-judge circuits shall dispose of the business of the court, permits lack of uniformity in this respect in multi-judge circuits. Fulton County v. Woodside, 222 Ga. 90, 149 S.E.2d 140 (1966) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VI).

This paragraph is not violated by local Act authorizing sections of the court to sit in certain counties. Bone v. State, 86 Ga. 108, 12 S.E. 205 (1890) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VI).

Local Act permitting Governor to appoint judge for a state circuit does not violate this paragraph. Ross v. Jones, 151 Ga. 425, 107 S.E. 160 (1921) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VI).

Election held under paragraph not affected by paragraph providing for filling vacancy in unexpired term. — An election held at the time prescribed by this paragraph and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. III, Para. II (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. VII, Para. I) to fill the office for the next ensuing four-year term is not affected by the provisions of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. III, Para. III (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. VII, Para. III), which provide not for the election of a judge for the next ensuing four-year term, but for the filling of a vacancy for the portion of the unexpired term occasioned by the death or resignation of the incumbent. Hooper v. Almand, 196 Ga. 52, 25 S.E.2d 778 (1943) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VI).

General Consideration (Cont'd)

Cited in Luangkhot v. State, 292 Ga. 423, 736 S.E.2d 397 (2013).

Time of Hearing

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. VIII and antecedent provisions, relating to the power of superior courts to hear matters at any time in vacation, or term, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

This paragraph enlarges jurisdiction of judges of superior court as to hearing and determination of matters in vacation. Southeastern Pipe Line Co. v. Garrett ex rel. Le Sueur, 192 Ga. 817, 16 S.E.2d 753 (1941) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VI).

Judge empowered to rule on demurrers (now motions to dismiss) at any time. — Under the broad power conferred by this paragraph, the judges of the superior court are authorized, on reasonable notice to the parties, to hear, determine, and enter a final judgment on demurrers (now motions to dismiss) in vacation, at chambers, at interlocutory hearings, or at any time, whether before or after the appearance day of an action. Reardon v. Bland, 206 Ga. 633, 58 S.E.2d 377 (1950) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VI).

Judge may set aside judgment rendered in vacation. — Under the terms of this paragraph the judge is empowered, for sufficient cause and on proper pleading, to vacate and set aside any order or judgment which the judge was theretofore authorized by law to render in vacation and which the judge did actually render during the same vacation period, and to this extent it is self-executing; in such case the judge will act as a court of general jurisdiction where previously the judge's authority or jurisdiction may have been limited or conditional. Southeastern Pipe Line Co. v. Garrett ex rel. Le Sueur, 192 Ga. 817, 16 S.E.2d 753 (1941) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VI).

Any judgment authorized by this paragraph may be attended by presumption of regularity. Southeastern Pipe Line Co. v. Garrett ex rel. Le Sueur, 192 Ga. 817, 16 S.E.2d 753 (1941) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VI).

Presumption of proper notice operative even when judgment rendered in vacation. — Where the record is silent as to notice, reasonable and proper notice to the parties will be presumed under the principle that any judgment of a court of general jurisdiction will be presumed valid until the contrary appears. This presumption prevails in favor of judgments rendered in vacation, as well as those rendered in term, where the matter so dealt with in vacation was one of which the judge had jurisdiction in vacation to the same extent as in term. Southeastern Pipe Line Co. v. Garrett ex rel. Le Sueur, 192 Ga. 817, 16 S.E.2d 753 (1941).

Right of new party to preparation time may be waived. — The right of a new party, who was not made a party defendant until the date of trial and judgment, to have the same time within which to prepare for trial as if the new party had been one of the original parties to the cause may be waived. Barfield v. Aiken, 209 Ga. 483, 74 S.E.2d 100 (1953).

Parties to mandamus action in which there are issues of fact may waive their right to jury trial either tacitly or expressly. City of Atlanta v. McLennan, 240 Ga. 407, 240 S.E.2d 881 (1977).

Waiver of jury trial at first trial of civil case applies to retrials of same case. City of Atlanta v. McLennan, 240 Ga. 407, 240 S.E.2d 881 (1977).

Judgment at chambers requires reasonable notice. — The power of the superior courts to determine issues by final judgment at chambers in any county in the judicial circuit when a jury verdict is not required may be exercised only after reasonable notice to the parties. Hinson v. Hinson, 218 Ga. 447, 128 S.E.2d 487 (1962).

Cited in Bush v. Reeves, No. 1:05-CV-1315-TWT, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38050 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 22, 2005).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Superior court judges' salaries are within purview of recommendations of State Commission on Compensation. 1971 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 71-173.1.

Judge eligible for emeritus appointment not required to make contribution to retirement fund. — If a superior court judge who is eligible for emeritus appointment is appointed or elected to another office of profit or trust, the judge is not required to make further contributions to the Superior Court Judges Retirement Fund while holding such other office. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U76-9.

Since superior court judges are elected officials, they are not covered by workers' compensation law. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-71.

RESEARCH REFERENCES

C.J.S. — 21 C.J.S., Courts, §§ 149, 164, 166, 210.

Paragraph VII. Judicial circuits, courts, and judgeships, law changed.

The General Assembly may abolish, create, consolidate, or modify judicial circuits and courts and judgeships; but no circuit shall consist of less than one county.

1976 Constitution. — Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. II; Art. VI, Sec. III, Para. I; Art. VI, Sec. VII, Para. I; Art. VI, Sec. XVI, Para. I.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the provisions, decisions under former Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. XVI, Para. I and antecedent provisions, which authorized the General Assembly to abolish only those courts which were not specifically mentioned in the Constitution, are included in the annotations for this paragraph.

Legislature cannot abolish or diminish the jurisdiction of courts established by the Constitution; this does not prohibit the legislature from abolishing these courts by merger of counties. Hines v. Etheridge, 173 Ga. 870, 162 S.E. 113 (1931).

Legislation may not give court's power to agency. — Trial court properly ruled that O.C.G.A. § 17-10-6, which authorized the Georgia Sentence Review Panel to review and reduce sentences, was unconstitutional as the Georgia General Assembly does not have the constitutional authority to divest the trial courts of Georgia of their traditional jurisdiction over sentencing by creating a quasi-appellate tribunal (such as the Panel) to review and alter the otherwise lawful sentences imposed by those trial courts. Sentence Review Panel v. Moseley, 284 Ga. 128, 663 S.E.2d 679 (2008).

Exclusive jurisdiction of the superior court cannot be divested. Williams v. State, 138 Ga. 168, 74 S.E. 1083 (1912).

In merging contiguous counties, incidental abolishment of courts permitted. — It is the duty of the court to construe the constitutional provision providing for merger of counties as conferring, by necessary implication, upon the legislature the power of enacting legislation for merging of contiguous counties, although the incidental effect of such Acts may be to supersede constitutional courts and abolish constitutional officers existing in the counties merged at the dates when the merger Acts become effective. Hines v. Etheridge, 173 Ga. 870, 162 S.E. 113 (1931).

Intra-county request for judicial assistance. — Intra-county request for judicial assistance under O.C.G.A. § 15-1-9.1(b)(2)(C) did not create a separate court, but was a constitutionally-permitted request for intra-county judicial assistance where the request and the response set out the matters to be handled by the two juvenile court judges who had agreed to assist the superior court; accordingly, the intra-county request and response were neither an unconstitutional creation of a class of court in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. I, nor an unconstitutional usurpation of legislative authority by members of the judiciary in violation of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VII. Earl v. Mills, 278 Ga. 128, 598 S.E.2d 480 (2004).

Power to transfer cases. — The legislature has implied power to transfer cases of the abolished court to another existing court. Macon, D. & S.R.R. v. Calhoun, 138 Ga. 165, 74 S.E. 1030 (1912).

Intermediate appellate court erred in reversing a trial court's denial of a health care providers' motion for summary judgment in a wrongful death claim; although the trial court lacked jurisdiction to allow an exception to O.C.G.A. § 51-4-2(a) to authorize a guardian to bring the wrongful death claim, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI,

Sec. I, Para. VIII required that the trial court's ruling be vacated and the case remanded with direction to transfer the case to superior court. Blackmon v. Tenet Healthsystem Spalding, Inc., 284 Ga. 369, 667 S.E.2d 348 (2008).

Construction of this paragraph and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. IX, Sec. I, Para. XI (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. I, Para. II). — In construing provisions in this paragraph and Ga. Const. 1976, Art. IX, Sec. I, Para. XI (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. I, Para. II), their meaning is that the legislature cannot abolish constitutional courts and constitutional officers where the purpose of the Act is to accomplish this alone. But where the Constitution grants to the legislature the power to merge contiguous counties, which is done in conformity to the power, and where the merging Act has the incidental effect of superseding certain courts existing in the merged county by those of the county into which the merged county is absorbed, and of abolishing certain offices held under general provisions of the Constitution in the county absorbed, such merger Act is not unconstitutional and void because it is in conflict with the provision of the Constitution inhibiting the abolition of constitutional courts and officers. Hines v. Etheridge, 173 Ga. 870, 162 S.E. 113 (1931) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VII).

Cited in Nobles v. State, 81 Ga. App. 229, 58 S.E.2d 496 (1950); Granger v. State, 235 Ga. 681, 221 S.E.2d 451 (1975); Chatham County v. Mulling, 248 Ga. 878, 286 S.E.2d 735 (1982); Bush v. Reeves, No. 1:05-CV-1315-TWT, 2005 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 38050 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 22, 2005).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

Am. Jur. 2d. — 20 Am. Jur. 2d, Courts, §§ 4 et seq., 8 et seq.

C.J.S. — 21 C.J.S., Courts, § 166 et seq.

Paragraph VIII. Transfer of cases.

Any court shall transfer to the appropriate court in the state any civil case in which it determines that jurisdiction or venue lies elsewhere.

1976 Constitution. — Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. IV.

Cross references. — Transfers and changes of venue in magistrate court proceedings, Uniform Rules for the Magistrate Courts, Rule 18.

Law reviews. — For annual survey on trial practice and procedure, see 38 Mercer L. Rev. 383 (1986). For article, “The Civil Jurisdiction of State and Magistrate Courts,” see 24 Ga. St. B.J. 29 (1987).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Improper venue. — Trial court erred in dismissing an employee’s breach of contract suit against a corporation based on improper venue where the appropriate remedy would have been to transfer the case to another court with proper venue as provided by Ga. Sup. Ct. R. 19.1 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VIII. Farrell v. HRC Armco, Inc., 253 Ga. App. 633, 560 S.E.2d 107 (2002).

Where the decedent’s grandniece filed a caveat to the probate of the will in solemn form on grounds of undue influence and contract to make a will and then filed an identical complaint in the superior court, the superior court was an improper venue for the contract to make a will action, as the co-executors did not live in the county where the action was filed as was required under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. VI; as a result, the case had to be transferred to the appropriate superior court as provided under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. VIII. SunTrust Bank v. Peterson, 263 Ga. App. 378, 587 S.E.2d 849 (2003).

Venue proper. — Venue was appropriate in the trial court and the court’s finding to the contrary was erroneous, but the error was harmless given that the trial court retained the case instead of transferring the case, the third-party defendant was not dismissed from the case, and the trial court correctly granted summary judgment to the third-party defendant on a separate basis. Bostick v. CMM Props., 327 Ga. App. 137, 755 S.E.2d 895 (2014).

Cited in Long v. Bruner, 171 Ga. App. 124, 318 S.E.2d 818 (1984); Unger v. Bryant Equip. Sales & Servs., Inc., 173 Ga. App. 364, 326 S.E.2d 483 (1985); Edwards v. Edmondson, 173 Ga. App. 353, 326 S.E.2d 550 (1985); Bosma v. Gunter, 258 Ga. 664, 373 S.E.2d 368 (1988); Douglas v. Gilbert, 195 Ga. App. 796, 395 S.E.2d 9 (1990); McDonald v. MARTA, 251 Ga. App. 2306, 554 S.E.2d 226 (2001); In re Estate of Dasher, 259 Ga. App. 201, 575 S.E.2d 921 (2002); Live Oak Consulting, Inc. v. Dep’t of Cmty. Health, 281 Ga. App. 791, 637 S.E.2d 455 (2006); Ford v. Hanna, 292 Ga. 500, 739 S.E.2d 309 (2013); In the Interest of M. F., 298 Ga. 138, 780 S.E.2d 291 (2015).

Paragraph IX. Rules of evidence; law prescribed.

All rules of evidence shall be as prescribed by law.

1976 Constitution. — There was no similar provision in the 1976 Constitution.

Cross references. — Evidence generally, T. 24.

Paragraph X. Authorization for pilot projects.

The General Assembly may by general law approved by a two-thirds’ majority of the members of each house enact legislation providing for, as pilot programs of limited duration, courts which are not uniform within their classes in jurisdiction, powers, rules of practice and procedure, and selection, qualifications, terms, and discipline of judges for such pilot courts and other matters relative thereto. Such legislation shall name the political subdivision, judicial circuit, and existing courts affected and may, in addition to any other power, grant to such court created as a pilot program the power to issue process in the nature of mandamus, prohibition, specific performance, quo warranto, and injunction. The General Assembly shall provide by general law for a procedure for submitting proposed legislation relating to such pilot programs to the Judicial Council of Georgia or its successor. Legislation enacted pursuant to this Paragraph shall not deny equal protection of the laws to any person in violation of Article I, Section I, Paragraph II of this Constitution. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, § 1, Para. X, approved by Ga. L. 1994, p. 2020, § 1/HR 712.)

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1994, p. 2020, § 1) authorizing the General Assembly to enact general legislation providing for, as pilot programs of limited duration, courts which are not uniform within their classes in jurisdiction, powers, rules of practice and procedure, and selection, qualifications, terms, and discipline of judges was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 8, 1994.

SECTION II.

VENUE

Paragraph

- I. Divorce cases.
- II. Land titles.
- III. Equity cases.
- IV. Suits against joint obligors, co-partners, or joint trespassers.

Paragraph

- V. Suits against maker, endorser, etc.
- VI. All other cases.
- VII. Venue in third-party practice.
- VIII. Power to change venue.

Law reviews. — For article discussing 1976 to 1977 developments in the law of venue in Georgia, see 29 Mercer L. Rev. 265 (1977).

For note discussing problems with venue in Georgia, and proposing statutory revisions to improve the resolution of venue questions, see 9 Ga. St. B.J. 254 (1972). For note, "Venue in Multidefendant Civil Practice in Georgia," see 6 Ga. State U.L. Rev. 427 (1990). For note, "Getting Personal With Our Neighbors—A Survey of Southern States' Exercise of General Jurisdiction and A Proposal for Extending Georgia's Long-Arm Statute," see 25 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 1177 (2009).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Venue will be determined as of the date of filing as long as service is subsequently perfected upon a defendant within a reasonable time period. Perry v. Perry, 245 Ga. 298, 264 S.E.2d 228 (1980).

Venue for partnerships. — Venue in a suit against a limited partnership was improper in a county to which the limited partnership's sole connection was that the county was the residence of one of its limited partners. Nolan Rd. W., Ltd. v. PNC Realty Holding Corp., 274 Ga. 742, 559 S.E.2d 447 (2002).

Resort to a bill of peace does not enable a party to circumvent the initial requirement of venue as governed by the constitutional provisions of this section. Summit Ins. Co. v. Mulherin, 233

Ga. 606, 212 S.E.2d 788 (1975) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. I, Para. X).

Venue in action where there is counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim for interpleader is proper only in county of residence where one of claimants resides. Kelly v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 160 Ga. App. 405, 287 S.E.2d 343 (1981).

Interpleader does not effect change of provisions of state Constitution regarding venue of civil cases. Kelly v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 160 Ga. App. 405, 287 S.E.2d 343 (1981).

Permissive joinder of causes does not alleviate venue requirements. — Statute such as former O.C.G.A. § 46-7-12 authorizing the permissive joinder of two causes of action did not obviate the necessity of compliance with the applicable constitutional venue requirements as to each; thus, if the claim asserted against the codefendants or third parties was essentially independent rather than one ancillary to the main action, it must satisfy within itself the constitutional venue requirements. Thomas v. Bobby Stevens Hauling Contractors, 165 Ga. App. 710, 302 S.E.2d 585 (1983).

RESEARCH REFERENCES

ALR. — Place of holding sessions of trial court as affecting validity of its proceedings, 43 ALR 1516; 18 ALR3d 572.

Retroactive operation and effect of venue statute, 41 ALR2d 798.

Place where claim or cause of action “arose” under state venue statute, 53 ALR4th 1104.

Paragraph I. Divorce cases.

Divorce cases shall be tried in the county where the defendant resides, if a resident of this state; if the defendant is not a resident of this state, then in the county in which the plaintiff resides; provided, however, a divorce case may be tried in the county of residence of the plaintiff if the defendant has moved from that same county within six months from the date of the filing of the divorce action and said county was the site of the marital domicile at the time of the separation of the parties, and provided, further, that any person who has been a resident of any United States army post or military reservation within the State of Georgia for one year next preceding the filing of the petition may bring an action for divorce in any county adjacent to said United States army post or military reservation. (Ga. Const. 1983, Art. 6, § 2, Para. 1; Ga. L. 1990, p. 2430, § 1/HR 585.)

1976 Constitution. — Art. VI, Sec. XIV, Para. I.

Cross references. — Exclusive jurisdiction in the superior court, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I and § 19-5-1. Residency requirements, § 19-5-2.

Editor's notes. — The constitutional amendment (Ga. L. 1990, p. 2430, § 1) which rewrote Paragraph I was approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting at the general election held on November 6, 1990.

Law reviews. — For article, “Current Problems With Venue in Georgia,” see 12 Ga. St. B.J. 71 (1975). For article surveying developments in Georgia trial practice and procedure from mid-1980 through mid-1981, see 33 Mercer L. Rev. 275 (1981).

For comment on Musgrove v. Musgrove, 213 Ga. 610, 100 S.E.2d 577 (1957), upholding validity of divorce decree granted in county other than residence of defendant when defendant waived process and consented to trial elsewhere, see 20 Ga.

B.J. 548 (1958). For comment on Register v. Stone's Independent Oil Distrib., Inc., 227 Ga. 123, 179 S.E.2d 68 (1971), see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 428 (1972).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

ANALYSIS

GENERAL CONSIDERATION

REQUIREMENTS OF DIVORCE ACTIONS

1. VENUE GENERALLY

PROPER COUNTY

RESIDENCE AND DOMICILE

JURISDICTION

1. IN GENERAL

2. ATTACHMENT OF JURISDICTION

3. EFFECT OF LACK OF JURISDICTION

General Consideration

Impleading of a third-party defendant under this section is an ancillary "suit" or "case" so it must satisfy within itself the venue requirements of the Constitution but is an ancillary proceeding with its venue resting upon that of the main action. Register v. Stone's Indep. Oil Distribs., Inc., 227 Ga. 123, 179 S.E.2d 68 (1971), commented on in 8 Ga. St. B.J. 428 (1972) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. I).

Cited in Thomas v. Lambert, 187 Ga. 616, 1 S.E.2d 443 (1939); Jones v. State, 70 Ga. App. 431, 28 S.E.2d 373 (1943); Tatum v. Tatum, 203 Ga. 406, 46 S.E.2d 915 (1948); Dependable Ins. Co. v. Gibbs, 218 Ga. 305, 127 S.E.2d 454 (1962); Ward v. Ward, 223 Ga. 868, 159 S.E.2d 81 (1968); Hunt v. Hunt, 225 Ga. 276, 168 S.E.2d 321 (1969); Dunlap v. Dunlap, 234 Ga. 304, 215 S.E.2d 674 (1975); Alcorn v. Alcorn, 245 Ga. 1, 262 S.E.2d 778 (1980); Reno v. Reno, 247 Ga. 560, 277 S.E.2d 511 (1981); Ledford v. Bowers, 248 Ga. 804, 286 S.E.2d 293 (1982); Browne v. Browne, 258 Ga. 636, 373 S.E.2d 366 (1988).

Requirements of Divorce Actions

1. Venue Generally

Purpose. — The purpose of the state constitution's venue requirement is to protect defendants in divorce actions from having to respond in a foreign, and perhaps hostile court. Williams v. Williams, 259 Ga. 788, 387 S.E.2d 334 (1990).

Where a defendant in a divorce action lives outside of Georgia, the action may be brought in the plaintiff's county of residence. A trial court's finding that venue over a divorce action was improper in Fulton County was error and was reversed where, although the wife had returned to Britain, the husband continued to maintain his residency in Fulton County. Cooke v. Cooke, 277 Ga. 731, 594 S.E.2d 370 (2004).

Provisions not mandatory or exhaustive. — The provisions of the state constitution relating to venue in divorce cases are neither mandatory nor exhaustive. Williams v. Williams, 259 Ga. 788, 387 S.E.2d 334 (1990).

Conferring venue by consent. — Under certain circumstances both jurisdiction of the person and venue can be conferred by consent. Ledford v. Bowers, 248 Ga. 804, 286 S.E.2d 293 (1982).

Waiver of objection to venue. — Husband's affidavit waived any objection to venue in an uncontested divorce proceeding where the husband was a Chatham County resident and the wife was a resident of Clayton County, and they had agreed to obtain the divorce in Clayton County to save money. Williams v. Williams, 259 Ga. 788, 387 S.E.2d 334 (1990).

Separation agreement was not waiver of venue. — Husband did not waive the defense of improper venue by signing a separation agreement that purported to settle the rights of the parties but did not contain any mention of venue. Bonner v. Bonner, 272 Ga. 545, 533 S.E.2d 72 (2000).

In an action for divorce it is necessary to allege correct venue, as prescribed by this paragraph, and to make affirmative proof thereof. Johnson v. Johnson, 188 Ga. 800, 4 S.E.2d 807 (1939) (see Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. I).

Improper venue meant void judgment. — A judgment of divorce in which the venue was improper was void. Thorpe v. Thorpe, 268 Ga. 724, 492 S.E.2d 887 (1997).

To authorize a valid judgment in a divorce action the allegation of venue must be supported by evidence. Stewart v. Stewart, 195 Ga. 460, 24 S.E.2d 672 (1943).

Effect of dismissal of divorce suit in another state prior to suit in this state on plaintiff's statement of residency. — The pendency of a suit for divorce in another state, which was dismissed only a short time before filing of a suit for divorce in this state, does not disprove the positive testimony of the plaintiff that the plaintiff had been a bona fide resident of this state for 12 months prior to the filing of the plaintiff's suit. Bellamy v. Bellamy, 187 Ga. 804, 2 S.E.2d 413 (1939).

Proper venue. — Contrary to the wife's claim, venue was proper in Houston County because the record showed that the wife gave the marital address as the wife's place of residence and the residence was located in Houston County. Rymuza v. Rymuza, 292 Ga. 98, 734 S.E.2d 384 (2012).

Proper County

Divorce must be brought in defendant's county of residence. — Where both parties are residents of this state, a divorce is invalid unless the suit is brought in the county where the defendant resides. Moody v. Moody, 194 Ga. 843, 22 S.E.2d 837 (1942); Musgrove v. Musgrove, 213 Ga. 610, 100 S.E.2d 577 (1957), commented on in 20 Ga. B.J. 548 (1958).

Proper venue when one spouse in penitentiary. — Where husband was confined in a penitentiary in a county other than that in which he and his wife resided, the venue was in the latter county. McLeod v. McLeod, 144 Ga. 359, 87 S.E. 286 (1915).

Venue for marriage annulment. — As to venue of suit to annul marriage with nonresident, see Cale v. Davis, 135 Ga. 185, 68 S.E. 1101 (1910).

The residence of an individual cannot be shifted to another county where the individual has a business, so that the latter county may be the proper venue of a suit against the individual because of a tort committed by the individual's agents in the county where the tort was committed. Youmans v. Hickman, 179 Ga. 684, 177 S.E. 238 (1934).

A decree in a suit brought in a county other than that in which the defendant was a resident is void. Allen v. Allen, 218 Ga. 364, 127 S.E.2d 902 (1962).

Divorce suit void for failure to sue in defendant's county of residence. — Where husband in divorce suit alleged that wife was not a resident of this state, and wife in her answer alleged she was a resident of this state, but of a different county than that in which suit had been brought, verdict in favor of divorce was void, for the reason that the husband could sue only in the county of his wife's residence; and if the answer of the wife be taken as true, and if she was in fact a nonresident of the state, there having been no service by publication or otherwise, the judgment for divorce would also be void. Jones v. Jones, 181 Ga. 747, 184 S.E. 271 (1936).

There is no inhibition against impleading a party who resides in county other than that in which main action pends. Register v. Stone's Indep. Oil Distribs., Inc., 227 Ga. 123, 179 S.E.2d 68 (1971), commented on in 8 Ga. St. B.J. 428 (1972).

Different venue possible in suits for separate maintenance and divorce. — Since venue for divorce lies only in county of residence of defendant, in a suit for separate maintenance, venue may be proper for the main claim and improper for a counterclaim for divorce where parties reside in different counties. Herring v. Herring, 246 Ga. 462, 271 S.E.2d 857 (1980).

Proper County (Cont'd)

Residence and Domicile

