Because the juvenile court primarily based the court's decision that a parent's two children were deprived, awarding temporary custody of the children to the county, on evidence received at an unrecorded hearing, and a waiver requiring a transcript of that hearing was not in evidence, those findings were reversed, and the case was remanded. In the Interest of D.P., 284 Ga. App. 453, 644 S.E.2d 299 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Use of a tape recorder was a permissible means of recording and, although some of the disposition testimony could not be transcribed because the tape ran out, the transcription was sufficient since the juvenile court judge, the defense attorney, and the prosecutor signed the certification. In the Interest of E.D.F., 243 Ga. App. 68, 532 S.E.2d 424 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Recording of proceeding. — Recording was waived since the juvenile court failed to record an in-chambers interview with a child and the parents acquiesced in such procedure. In the Interest of A.R., 248 Ga. App. 783, 546 S.E.2d 915 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Quality of a tape-recording of a termination-of-parental rights hearing was so poor that the court reporter could not understand much of what was said; as it was the mother's burden to provide the transcript of the hearing and since the transcript was inadequate to address a claim of error, the appellate court assumed the trial court's ruling was correct. In the Interest of C.T.M., 278 Ga. App. 297, 628 S.E.2d 713 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

New hearing ordered for unrecorded proceedings. — Once it was discovered that a portion of the proceedings went unrecorded, a party was entitled to a new hearing on the party's modification petition, and to have such a hearing recorded in its entirety as mandated by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-17). In re T.M.C., 206 Ga. App. 595, 426 S.E.2d 247 (1992); In re L.G., 230 Ga. App. 153, 495 S.E.2d 628 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Indigent parent entitled to paupered transcript for use in appeal. — Indigent parent, whose parental rights have been terminated by an order of a juvenile court on a petition filed by an agency of the state, is entitled to a paupered transcript of the proceeding in the juvenile court for use in appealing the decision of that court. Nix v. Department of Human Resources, 236 Ga. 794, 225 S.E.2d 306 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1801).

15-11-19. Rights of parties to proceedings.

(a) A party has the right to be present, to be heard, to present evidence material to the proceedings, to cross-examine witnesses, to examine pertinent court files and records, and to appeal the orders of the court; provided, however, that the court shall retain the discretion to exclude a child from any part or parts of any proceeding under Article 3 of this chapter if the court determines that it is not in such child's best interests to be present. An attorney for an excluded child shall not be excluded from the proceedings.

(b) A person afforded rights under this chapter shall be advised of such rights at that person's first appearance before the court.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Right to cross-examine adverse witnesses guaranteed by former Code 1933, § 24A-2002 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19) was afforded upon request according to former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-56 and 15-11-65). A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

Private interview of child by father's counsel not necessary. — Requiring a child to submit privately and alone to an interview by his father's counsel is not necessary. The father's rights provided by statute are adequate and proper to ensure him a fair hearing. In re L.L.W., 141 Ga. App. 32, 232 S.E.2d 378 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

Former Code 1933, § 24A-2002 was implementation of constitutional right of due process. In re L.L.W., 141 Ga. App. 32, 232 S.E.2d 378 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

Fair trial required. — Adjudicatory phase of a delinquency proceeding is the functional equivalent of the trial in the regular criminal or civil process, and a juvenile charged with delinquency is entitled by right to have the court apply those common law jurisprudential principles which experience and reason have shown are necessary to give the accused the essence of a fair trial; those principles include the privilege against self-incrimination and the right of cross-examination under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-7(a) and (b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-19 and 15-11-28). In the Interest of J.C., 257 Ga. App. 657, 572 S.E.2d 21 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-7).

Right to confront accusers. — Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-7(a), juveniles were entitled to confront their accusers through cross-examination during a delinquency proceeding's adjudicatory phase. In the Interest of J.C., 257 Ga. App. 657, 572 S.E.2d 21 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-7).

Minor with mental disability may confess. — Mere showing that one who confessed to crime may have suffered from some mental disability is not a sufficient basis upon which to exclude the statement. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-31).

Age alone is not determinative of whether a person can waive one's rights. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-31).

Waiver of rights upheld on appeal absent clear error. — Question of whether or not a defendant is capable or incapable of making a knowing and intelligent waiver of the defendant's rights is to be answered by the trial judge and will be accepted by an appellate court unless such determination is clearly erroneous. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-31).

Transfer hearings must meet essentials of due process and fair treatment. — Transfer hearings are critically important proceedings affecting important rights of the juvenile. While a hearing need not conform with all of the requirements of a criminal trial or even of the usual administrative hearing, the hearing must measure up to the essentials of due process and fair treatment. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

When former Code 1933, §§ 24A-2002 and 24A-2501 are read together, a juvenile faced with the possible transfer of the juvenile's case from juvenile court to "the appropriate court having jurisdiction of the offense" has the right to an evidentiary hearing at which the juvenile must be given "the opportunity to introduce evidence and otherwise be heard in his own behalf and to cross-examine adverse witnesses." R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

Statutory provisions regarding transfer of juvenile case must be followed. — Under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561), the juvenile court had discretion to determine whether there are "reasonable grounds" to order the transfer only after conducting an evidentiary hearing required under former paragraph (a)(1) of that section. The juvenile court may not simply "waive" juvenile jurisdiction and deny appellant the right to an evidentiary hearing on the "reasonable grounds" for the transfer. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

Court must conduct evidentiary hearing on transfer. — If the juvenile court judge refused to conduct a hearing at which evidence bearing upon the "transfer criteria" listed in former Code 1933, § 24A-2501 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) could be introduced, the judgment of the juvenile court transferring jurisdiction must be reversed and the case remanded for an appropriate evidentiary hearing. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

Fair trial not found. — Juvenile did not receive a fair trial since the juvenile was not permitted to confront the state's witness, and was questioned without being sworn or advised of the right to remain silent, and the consequences of foregoing that right. In the Interest of J.C., 257 Ga. App. 657, 572 S.E.2d 21 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-7).

15-11-20. Referral for mediation.

(a) At any time during a proceeding under this chapter, the court may refer a case to mediation.

(b) When referring a case to mediation, the court shall take into consideration the guidelines from the Georgia Commission of Dispute Resolution for mediating cases involving domestic violence or family violence.

(c) A referral order shall recite that while the parties shall attend a scheduled mediation session and shall attempt to mediate in good faith, such parties shall not be required to reach an agreement.

(d) Victims in a delinquency case referred to mediation may attend and participate in such mediation, but shall not be required to do so as a condition of such case being heard by the juvenile court.

15-11-21. Selection and appointment of mediator.

(a) Once an order referring a case to mediation has been signed, the court shall appoint a mediator from a list of court approved mediators who are registered with the Georgia Office of Dispute Resolution to mediate juvenile court cases.

(b) The court shall appoint a qualified mediator within five days of signing the order referring the case to mediation.

15-11-22. Agreement to mediate; procedure.

(a) The parties shall sign and date a written agreement to mediate. The agreement to mediate shall identify the controversies between the parties, affirm the parties' intent to resolve such controversies through mediation, and specify the circumstances under which mediation may continue. The agreement to mediate shall specify the confidentiality requirements of mediation and the exceptions to confidentiality in mediation as such are set forth in the Supreme Court of Georgia Alternative Dispute Resolution Rules and appendices.

(b) A mediator shall not knowingly assist the parties in reaching an agreement which would be unenforceable for reasons such as fraud, duress, the absence of bargaining ability, unconscionability, or lack of court jurisdiction.

(c) Prior to the parties signing an agreement to mediate, the mediator shall advise the parties that each of them may obtain review by an attorney of any agreement reached as a result of the mediation.

(d) The mediator shall at all times be impartial.

15-11-23. Stay of proceeding pending mediation; time limitations.

(a) Upon issuing a referral to mediation the court may stay the proceeding.

(b) Mediation shall occur as soon as practicable and be scheduled within 30 days of the order referring the matter to mediation unless the time frame is extended by the court.

(c) The court may extend the timeline for scheduling a mediation for an additional 30 days.

15-11-24. Termination of mediation.

(a) Any party in a mediation may withdraw from or terminate further participation in mediation at any time.

(b) A mediator shall terminate mediation when:

(1) The mediator concludes that the participants are unable or unwilling to participate meaningfully in the process;

(2) The mediator concludes that a party lacks the capacity to perceive and assert his or her own interests to the degree that a fair agreement cannot be reached;

(3) The mediator concludes that an agreement is unlikely; or

(4) The mediator concludes that a party is a danger to himself or herself or others.

15-11-25. Approval of mediation agreements; exceptions.

(a) All mediation agreements shall be presented to the juvenile court judge for approval.

(b) The mediation agreement shall be made an order of the court unless, after further hearing, the court determines by clear and convincing evidence that the agreement is not in the best interests of the child.

15-11-26. Best interests of child.

Whenever a best interests determination is required, the court shall consider and evaluate all of the factors affecting the best interests of the child in the context of such child's age and developmental needs. Such factors shall include:

(1) The physical safety and welfare of such child, including food, shelter, health, and clothing;

(2) The love, affection, bonding, and emotional ties existing between such child and each parent or person available to care for such child;

(3) The love, affection, bonding, and emotional ties existing between such child and his or her siblings, half siblings, and stepsiblings and the residence of such other children;

(4) Such child's need for permanence, including such child's need for stability and continuity of relationships with his or her parent, siblings, other relatives, and any other person who has provided significant care to such child;

(5) Such child's sense of attachments, including his or her sense of security and familiarity, and continuity of affection for such child;

(6) The capacity and disposition of each parent or person available to care for such child to give him or her love, affection, and guidance and to continue the education and rearing of such child;

(7) The home environment of each parent or person available to care for such child considering the promotion of such child's nurturance and safety rather than superficial or material factors;

(8) The stability of the family unit and the presence or absence of support systems within the community to benefit such child;

(9) The mental and physical health of all individuals involved;

(10) The home, school, and community record and history of such child, as well as any health or educational special needs of such child;

(11) Such child's community ties, including church, school, and friends;

(12) Such child's background and ties, including familial, cultural, and religious;

(13) The least disruptive placement alternative for such child;

(14) The uniqueness of every family and child;

(15) The risks attendant to entering and being in substitute care;

(16) Such child's wishes and long-term goals;

(17) The preferences of the persons available to care for such child;

(18) Any evidence of family violence, substance abuse, criminal history, or sexual, mental, or physical child abuse in any current, past, or considered home for such child;

(19) Any recommendation by a court appointed custody evaluator or guardian ad litem; and

(20) Any other factors considered by the court to be relevant and proper to its determination.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Denial of petition to legitimate child. — Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the putative father's petition to legitimate the child because, although the father was not seeking custody of the child, the juvenile court did not err in basing the court's ruling on a determination of whether the father was fit to assume immediate custody of the child as the juvenile court properly considered the father's interest in caring for the child; the father's ability to support the child if placed in the father's care; and the child's current placement as part of the best interests analysis under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26. In the Interest of J. M., 337 Ga. App. 811, 788 S.E.2d 888 (2016), cert. denied, No. S16C1860, 2017 Ga. LEXIS 120 (Ga. 2017).

15-11-27. Physical and mental examinations.

During the pendency of any proceeding under this chapter, the court may order:

(1) A child to be examined by outside parties or private providers at a suitable place by a physician or psychologist; provided, however, that orders to perform an evaluation shall not be imposed upon any state agency or county government unless such state agency or county government has funds available for such evaluation; and

(2) Medical or surgical treatment of a child suffering from a serious physical condition or illness which, in the opinion of a licensed physician, requires prompt treatment, even if the parent, guardian, or legal custodian has not been given notice of a hearing, is not available, or without good cause informs the court of his or her refusal to consent to the treatment.

15-11-28. Privilege against self-incrimination.

(a) No admission, confession, or incriminating information obtained from a child in the course of any screening that is undertaken in conjunction with proceedings under this chapter, including but not limited to court ordered screenings, shall be admitted into evidence in any adjudication hearing in which a child is accused under this chapter. Such admission, confession, or incriminating information may be considered by the court at disposition.

(b) No admission, confession, or incriminating information obtained from a child in the course of any assessment or evaluation, or any treatment that is undertaken in conjunction with proceedings under this chapter, including but not limited to court ordered detention or risk assessments and evaluations, shall be admitted into evidence against such child, except as rebuttal or impeachment evidence, or used as a basis for such evidence in any future adjudication hearing or criminal proceeding in which such child is accused. Such admission, confession, or incriminating information may be considered by the court at disposition.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-31 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-7(b), which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Private interview of child by father's counsel not necessary. — Requiring a child to submit privately and alone to an interview by his father's counsel is not necessary. The father's rights provided by statute are adequate and proper to ensure him a fair hearing. In re L.L.W., 141 Ga. App. 32, 232 S.E.2d 378 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

Former Code 1933, § 24A-2002 was implementation of constitutional right of due process. In re L.L.W., 141 Ga. App. 32, 232 S.E.2d 378 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

Constitutional privilege against self-incrimination was as applicable in juvenile cases as it was with respect to adults. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

Fair trial required. — Adjudicatory phase of a delinquency proceeding is the functional equivalent of the trial in the regular criminal or civil process, and a juvenile charged with delinquency is entitled by right to have the court apply those common law jurisprudential principles which experience and reason have shown are necessary to give the accused the essence of a fair trial; those principles include the privilege against self-incrimination and the right of cross-examination under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-7(a) and (b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-19 and 15-11-28). In the Interest of J.C., 257 Ga. App. 657, 572 S.E.2d 21 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-7).

Rule as to confessions of juveniles should be same as that for confessions of adults because law enforcement officers cannot be certain when law enforcement officers question a juvenile what kind of case may develop, and the statutory safeguards are applicable to both criminal and juvenile cases. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

Juvenile confessions judged with more care and caution. — Confessions of juveniles are scanned with more care and received with greater caution. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

Voluntary pretrial statement admitted. — Since the defendant was a minor when the defendant's statement was given and the defendant's statement was made outside the presence or without the assistance of counsel or other responsible adult, and there was no evidence that the defendant's statements were involuntary, the defendant's pretrial statement was admissible. Duffy v. State, 262 Ga. 249, 416 S.E.2d 734 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-31).

Minor has capacity to make voluntary confession even in a capital case, without the presence or consent of counsel or other responsible adult, with such absence being just one factor or circumstance to consider in determining the voluntariness of the confession. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-31).

Minor with mental disability may confess. — Mere showing that one who confessed to crime may have suffered from some mental disability is not a sufficient basis upon which to exclude the statement. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-31).

Presence of parents during questioning. — There is no provision requiring that one or both parents be present during the questioning. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981); Duffy v. State, 262 Ga. 249, 416 S.E.2d 734 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-31).

Parents were denied due process in a termination of parental rights proceeding since the parents were excluded from an observation room during an interview of their children, even though the parents' attorneys were present in the room, from which location no one would have been seen or heard by the children. In re M.S., 178 Ga. App. 380, 343 S.E.2d 152 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-31).

Waiver of right against self-incrimination. — Question of a voluntary and knowing waiver by a juvenile of the juvenile's right not to incriminate oneself depends on the totality of circumstances to be analyzed by a consideration of nine factors: (1) the age of the accused; (2) the education of the accused; (3) knowledge of the accused as to both the substance of the charge and the nature of the accused's rights to consult with an attorney and remain silent; (4) whether the accused is held incommunicado or allowed to consult with relatives, friends, or an attorney; (5) whether the accused was interrogated before or after formal charges had been filed; (6) the methods used in the interrogation; (7) the length of the interrogation; (8) whether vel non the accused refused to give statements voluntarily on prior occasions; and (9) whether the accused has repudiated an extrajudicial statement at a later date. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-31).

Age alone is not determinative of whether a person can waive one's rights. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-31).

Waiver of rights upheld on appeal absent clear error. — Question of whether or not a defendant is capable or incapable of making a knowing and intelligent waiver of the defendant's rights is to be answered by the trial judge and will be accepted by an appellate court unless such determination is clearly erroneous. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-31).

Delinquency found when acts corroborated confession. — Child's confession out-of-court corroborated by evidence that stolen items were found in the child's possession within a few hours of the crime with which the child was charged, theft, constituted sufficient proof to support a finding of delinquency. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

Transfer hearings must meet essentials of due process and fair treatment. — Transfer hearings are critically important proceedings affecting important rights of the juvenile. While a hearing need not conform with all of the requirements of a criminal trial or even of the usual administrative hearing, the hearing must measure up to the essentials of due process and fair treatment. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

When former Code 1933, §§ 24A-2002 and 24A-2501 are read together, a juvenile faced with the possible transfer of the juvenile's case from juvenile court to "the appropriate court having jurisdiction of the offense" has the right to an evidentiary hearing at which the juvenile must be given "the opportunity to introduce evidence and otherwise be heard in his own behalf and to cross-examine adverse witnesses." R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2002).

Fair trial not found. — Juvenile did not receive a fair trial since the juvenile was not permitted to confront the state's witness, and was questioned without being sworn or advised of the right to remain silent, and the consequences of foregoing that right. In the Interest of J.C., 257 Ga. App. 657, 572 S.E.2d 21 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-7).

15-11-29. Protective orders.

(a) In any proceeding under this chapter, either on application of a party or on the court's own motion, the court may make an order restraining or otherwise controlling the conduct of a person if due notice of the application or motion and the grounds therefor and an opportunity to be heard thereon have been given to the person against whom the order is directed. Such an order may require any such person:

(1) To stay away from a person's home or a child;

(2) To permit a parent to visit his or her child at stated periods;

(3) To abstain from offensive conduct against a child, his or her parent, or any person to whom custody of such child is awarded;

(4) To give proper attention to the care of his or her home;

(5) To cooperate in good faith with an agency to which custody of a child is entrusted by the court or with an agency or association to which a child is referred by the court;

(6) To refrain from acts of commission or omission that tend to make a home not a proper place for a child;

(7) To ensure that a child attends school pursuant to any valid law relating to compulsory attendance;

(8) To participate with a child in any counseling or treatment deemed necessary after consideration of employment and other family needs; and

(9) To enter into and complete successfully a substance abuse program approved by the court.

(b) After notice and opportunity for hearing afforded to a person subject to a protective order, a protective order may be modified or extended for a further specified period, or both, or may be terminated if the court finds that the best interests of the child and the public will be served thereby.

(c) Protective orders may be enforced by citation to show cause for contempt of court by reason of any violation thereof and, where protection of the welfare of a child so requires, by the issuance of a warrant to take the alleged violator into custody and bring him or her before the court.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-57 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-11, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Psychological counseling. — Juvenile court order requiring a noncustodial parent to seek psychological counseling with a particular psychologist who is located 50 miles from the residence and work of the noncustodial parent is unreasonable and has to be stricken. In re A.S., 185 Ga. App. 11, 363 S.E.2d 325 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-57).

Order was not a protective order. — When a trial court, upon finding a mother's children were deprived, left the children's custody with the mother upon certain conditions, this was not a protective order, despite the fact that this was what was prayed for at the hearing resulting in the order, but it was, rather, a deprivation order under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-212), so, when the specified conditions were violated, the trial court was not limited to the remedies available in the protection order statute, but was authorized to remove the children from the mother's custody. In the Interest of S.Y., 264 Ga. App. 623, 591 S.E.2d 489 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-11).

15-11-29.1. Parental accountability; court orders; enforcement.

(a) In any proceeding involving a child in need of services or a delinquent child or when a case plan has been imposed under Code Sections 15-11-38 and 15-11-39, upon the application of the prosecuting attorney or a party to the plan under Code Sections 15-11-38 and 15-11-39, or on the court's own motion, the court may issue an order restraining or otherwise controlling the conduct of such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian so as to promote such child's treatment, rehabilitation, and welfare, provided that due notice of the application or motion and the grounds therefor and an opportunity to be heard thereon have been given to such parent, guardian, or legal custodian. When the court is determining if an order is appropriate, it shall consider:

(1) The best interests of such child;

(2) The risk to public safety such delinquent child poses;

(3) Evidence of a repeated pattern of behavior by such child; and

(4) The extent to which enhanced involvement and supervision of such child may ameliorate public safety concerns.

(b) An order issued under this Code section may require a parent, guardian, or legal custodian to:

(1) Ensure that the child attends school pursuant to any law relating to compulsory attendance;

(2) Monitor the child's school homework and studies after school;

(3) Attend school meetings as requested by the child's teacher, counselor, or school administrator;

(4) Participate with the child in any counseling or treatment deemed necessary, after consideration of employment and other family needs, and follow recommendations made by such professionals;

(5) Provide transportation for the child to attend counseling, programs, or other services ordered by the court;

(6) Provide instruction and guidance to improve the child's behavior;

(7) Prohibit specific individuals from having contact with the child or from entering the child's residence;

(8) When the child is on probation:

(A) Provide transportation to the probation office or any other counseling or program directed by the child's probation officer;

(B) Cooperate with the child's probation officer and answer all of his or her questions truthfully; and

(C) Allow access to the child upon the request of the probation officer;

(9) Enter into and successfully complete a substance abuse program approved by the court;

(10) Abstain from offensive conduct against the child;

(11) Pay for the costs and expenses of the child's counseling, treatment, or other services in the same manner as set forth in subsection (c) of Code Section 15-11-36;

(12) Pay restitution as set forth in Code Section 17-14-5;

(13) Pay any judgment entered pursuant to Code Section 51-2-3; and

(14) Take any other action or refrain from any other action that the court finds reasonably related to the child's treatment, rehabilitation, or welfare and the safety of the public.

(c) After notice and opportunity for hearing afforded to a person subject to an order entered under this Code section, such order may be modified or extended for a further specified period, or both, or may be terminated if the court finds that the best interests of the child and the public will be served thereby.

(d) An order entered pursuant to this Code section may be enforced by citation to show cause for contempt of court by reason of any violation thereof and, when protection of the welfare of a child so requires, by the issuance of a warrant to take the alleged violator into custody and bring him or her before the court.

15-11-30. Rights and duties of legal custodian.

A legal custodian has the right to physical custody of a child, the right to determine the nature of the care and treatment of such child, including ordinary medical care, and the right and duty to provide for the care, protection, training, and education and the physical, mental, and moral welfare of such child, subject to the conditions and limitations of the order and to the remaining rights and duties of such child's parent or guardian.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

"Legal guardian." — Grandmother was not a "legal guardian" of a child within the meaning of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-13 or O.C.G.A. § 19-9-22(2). Stills v. Johnson, 272 Ga. 645, 533 S.E.2d 695 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-13).

Right to consent to adoption of child is one of those residual rights retained by a parent, notwithstanding the transfer of temporary legal custody of the child to another person. Skipper v. Smith, 239 Ga. 854, 238 S.E.2d 917 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2901); O'Neal v. Wilkes, 263 Ga. 850, 439 S.E.2d 490 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-43).

Powers and duties of juvenile court. — Having committed a child to the Division of Children and Youth (now Division of Youth Services), which under former Code 1933, § 24A-2701 was self-executing in placing control over the child to the division for two years, or until the child was sooner discharged, or as provided for an extension of the two-year period on motion of the division, it was beyond the power of the trial judge to make further provision at that time in effect retaining jurisdiction over the child to prevent the mother from gaining physical custody of the child except subject to further order of the court or to require that the child upon release shall be returned to the child treatment center and the physical custody of this court. Mack v. State, 125 Ga. App. 639, 188 S.E.2d 828 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2901).

Visitation rights of a parent of a child in the custody of the Department of Family and Children Services are a residual "parental tie" which is not severed by the mere placement of the child in the temporary custody of the department, without a specific finding as to that right. In re K.B., 188 Ga. App. 199, 372 S.E.2d 476 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-43).

Right to control medical care. — Mother forfeited her right to control her child's medical care when she lost temporary custody of the child. In the Interest of C.R., 257 Ga. App. 159, 570 S.E.2d 609 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-13).

Right of parent to object to immunization not found. — After a child has been found to be deprived, the only remaining parental rights under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-13 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30) that have been recognized by the appellate courts were the rights to consent to an adoption of the child and to visit with the child; accordingly, the temporary custodian of the child had the authority to have the child immunized over the mother's religious objection to the immunization. In the Interest of C.R., 257 Ga. App. 159, 570 S.E.2d 609 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-13).

Foster children. — Former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-13, 15-11-58 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-30, 15-11-134, and 15-11-200 et seq.), and O.C.G.A. §§ 20-2-690.1, and 49-5-12, which set out in clear detail the rights and services to which foster children are entitled, were not too vague and amorphous to be enforced by the judiciary and imposed specific duties on the state defendants; thus, the federal regulatory scheme embodied in the CSFR process does not relieve the state defendants of their obligation to fulfill their statutory duties to the foster children, nor does it provide a legal excuse for their failure to do so. Kenny A. v. Perdue, No. 1:02-cv-1686-MHS, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27025 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 11, 2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-13).

Intervention of county agency in adoption proceeding proper. — County Department of Family and Children Services was properly permitted to intervene with regard to a couple's petition seeking to adopt a child as the child was adjudicated deprived and placed in the temporary custody of the department. While the biological parents' surrender of their parental rights was the basis for the adoption petition, the department remained the temporary legal custodian of the child and, given that the department's interest in the child as the temporary legal custodian, the juvenile court did not err by allowing the department to intervene through the department's objection to the adoption. Sastre v. McDaniel, 293 Ga. App. 671, 667 S.E.2d 896 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-13).

Private cause of action. — Following factors are relevant in determining whether a private remedy is implicit in a statute not expressly providing one: first, is the plaintiff one of the class for whose special benefit the statute was enacted; second, is there any indication of legislative intent, explicit or implicit, either to create such a remedy or to deny one; third, is it consistent with the underlying purpose of the legislative scheme to imply such a remedy for plaintiff? If foster children alleged that certain children services agencies and officials violated former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-13 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30), then that section conferred upon the children a private cause of action. Kenny A. v. Perdue, 218 F.R.D. 277 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 18, 2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-13).

Trial court erred in requiring a father to prove by clear and convincing proof that changed circumstances warranted modification of an order placing the father's children with their maternal aunts; the father retained an interest in the children, under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-58(i)(1) and 15-11-13 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-30 and 15-11-204), sufficient to support a right to petition for modification, and the father was only required to prove the motion under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-444 and 15-11-608)by a preponderance of the evidence. In re J. N., 302 Ga. App. 631, 691 S.E.2d 396 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-13).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24A-2901, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Commitment does not necessarily require surrogate parent be appointed. — There is a distinction between children who are simply committed to the state for temporary care and supervision and those who are actually "wards of the state." Commitment of a child to the Division of Youth Services does not per se make a child a "ward of the state" for the purposes of 20 U.S.C. § 1401 et seq. of a surrogate parent. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-53 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2901).

15-11-31. Contempt powers; other sanctions.

(a) In addition to all other inherent powers of the court to enforce its lawful orders, the court may punish an adult for contempt of court by imprisonment for not more than 20 days or a fine not to exceed $1,000.00 for willfully disobeying an order of the court or for obstructing or interfering with the proceedings of the court or the enforcement of its orders.

(b) The court shall restrict and limit the use of contempt powers with respect to commitment of a child to a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility and in no event shall a child solely alleged or adjudicated to be a dependent child be placed in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility.

(c) A child may be placed in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility for not more than 72 hours if:

(1) He or she is found in contempt of court; and

(2) Less restrictive alternatives have been considered and are unavailable or inappropriate or if such child has already been ordered to serve a less restrictive alternative sanction but failed to comply with the sanction.

(d) In addition or as an alternative to the punishment provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, after notice and opportunity to be heard, the court may impose any or all of the following sanctions when a parent, guardian, or legal custodian other than DJJ or DFCS willfully violates any order issued by the court directed to him or her:

(1) Require a child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian to make restitution as provided in Code Section 17-14-5;

(2) Reimburse the state for the costs of detention, treatment, or rehabilitation of a child;

(3) Require a child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian to participate in a court approved educational or counseling program designed to contribute to the ability to provide proper parental care and supervision of such child, including, but not limited to, parenting classes; or

(4) Require a child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian to enter into a contract or plan as a part of the disposition of any charges against such child so as to provide for the supervision and control of such child by his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian and reunification with such child.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-401, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-62 and pre-2014 Code Sections 15-11-2 and 15-11-5, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

No exclusive original jurisdiction over certain youthful offenders. — Ga. L. 1971, p. 709, § 1 does not vest exclusive original jurisdiction in the juvenile court over the following class of youthful offenders: persons between the ages of 17 and 21 years, who have committed noncapital felonies, and who are under the supervision of or are on probation to a juvenile court for acts of delinquency committed before reaching the age of 17 years. State v. Crankshaw, 243 Ga. 183, 253 S.E.2d 69 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Contempt power not limited to adults, but applicable to juveniles as well. — There was nothing in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5 to indicate an intent to limit the contempt power of any Georgia court to adults alone. In the Interest of P.W., 289 Ga. App. 323, 657 S.E.2d 270 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

When criminal contemnor is a child, the case is recognized to be a juvenile matter, and a contempt of court proceeding can be viewed as a delinquency proceeding predicated on an allegation that the juvenile has committed criminal contempt of court. In re J.E.H., 202 Ga. App. 29, 413 S.E.2d 227 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-62).

Error in finding contempt. — Because a custody transfer order had not been filed with the court clerk, in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58(b), when an administrative employee allegedly failed to comply with the order, the trial court erred by finding the employee in contempt under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5(a). In the Interest of K.D., 272 Ga. App. 803, 613 S.E.2d 239 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Because a written order issued by a juvenile court did not show deprivation of the child with regard to the child's father, the order was void to the extent the order directed removal of the child from the father's home, and a later contempt finding based on the trial court's void order was a nullity. The trial court's direction as to removal of the child was not binding and the court's later contempt finding based on that order was improper. In re Tidwell, 279 Ga. App. 734, 632 S.E.2d 690 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Order holding an attorney in contempt pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5 was improper because, inter alia, the trial court immediately imposed punishment and did not provide the attorney the opportunity to speak on the attorney's own behalf, the attorney was not put on notice that a continuation of the offending conduct would have constituted contempt, it was highly unlikely that the attorney's allegedly offending conduct should have had any impact on the deliberations of the factfinder, a juvenile judge, and the trial court acted without warning and had obviously lost the court's patience with the attorney and the attorney's client and imposed sanctions for contempt when other actions might have achieved the same result without the disruption to the case that these contempt citations caused. In re Hughes, 299 Ga. App. 66, 681 S.E.2d 745 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Father properly held in contempt. — In a situation where a juvenile protective order required a father to bring the father's son to the son's probation officer as required by the officer, and did not limit the number of visits, sufficient evidence supported a contempt finding against the father based on the father's decision to forgo a meeting requested by the probation officer. In re Liles, 278 Ga. App. 496, 629 S.E.2d 492 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Attorney not in contempt. — Although a juvenile court has the power to hold a party in contempt of court, a juvenile court erred by holding an attorney in contempt based on a per se rule. The juvenile court determined that a per se rule existed that an attorney was in contempt when the attorney claimed ineffectiveness against themselves, but no such per se rule existed and, therefore, it was error to have adjudicated the attorney in contempt. Morris v. State, 295 Ga. App. 579, 672 S.E.2d 531 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Criminal contempt finding and resulting sentence upheld. — Juvenile court properly held a juvenile defendant in contempt for not writing a required letter of apology and essay on courtroom conduct and for violating electronic monitoring, and sentenced the juvenile to 20 days in detention: (1) the juvenile court had the authority to order the defendant to write the letter and essay; (2) former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5 did not limit the contempt power of a Georgia court to adults; and (3) juvenile courts had the power to punish contempt by imprisonment. In the Interest of P.W., 289 Ga. App. 323, 657 S.E.2d 270 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

15-11-32. Modification or vacation of orders; retroactive application.

(a) An order of the court shall be set aside if:

(1) It appears that it was obtained by fraud or mistake sufficient therefor in a civil action;

(2) The court lacked jurisdiction over a necessary party or the subject matter; or

(3) Newly discovered evidence so requires.

(b) An order of the court may also be changed, modified, or vacated on the ground that changed circumstances so require in the best interests of a child except an order of dismissal following a contested adjudicatory hearing.

(c) Except as otherwise provided in Code Section 15-11-602, an order committing a child to DJJ may only be modified after such child has been transferred to DJJ custody upon motion of DJJ.

(d) An order of adjudication of delinquency by a court may be modified or vacated if the child was adjudicated for a delinquent act for a sexual crime as defined in Code Section 16-3-6 and such crime resulted from the child being:

(1) Trafficked for sexual servitude in violation of Code Section 16-5-46; or

(2) A victim of sexual exploitation as defined in Code Section 49-5-40.

(e) Any party to the proceeding, the probation officer, or any other person having supervision or legal custody of or an interest in a child may petition the court for the relief provided in this Code section. Such petition shall set forth in clear and concise language the grounds upon which the relief is requested.

(f) After a petition seeking relief under this Code section is filed, the court shall fix a time for hearing and shall cause notice to be served on the parties to the proceeding or those affected by the relief sought. After the hearing, the court shall deny or grant relief as the evidence warrants.

(g) This Code section is intended to be retroactive and shall apply to any child who is under the jurisdiction of the court at the time of a hearing, regardless of the date of the original delinquency order.

Modification or Vacation of Orders

General Consideration

Procedural requirements met. — Fact that the court denominated the child's "motion for new trial" as a "motion to reconsider" was not controlling since the nature of the motion, the court's consideration of the motion, the procedure employed, and the final outcome all met the procedural requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-32) so as to give the juvenile court jurisdiction. In re J.O., 191 Ga. App. 521, 382 S.E.2d 214 (1989), overruled on other grounds, In re T.A.W., 265 Ga. 106, 454 S.E.2d 134 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Personal jurisdiction. — Because former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-32) allowed a juvenile court to change or vacate the court's orders without placing any time limit on this type of jurisdiction, there was no merit to a father's argument that the trial court lacked personal jurisdiction to restore a mother's parental rights because he and the children were then permanent residents of Florida. In the Interest of K.W., 291 Ga. App. 623, 662 S.E.2d 255, cert. dismissed, No. S08C1642, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 767 (Ga. 2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Juvenile court erred in failing to set aside the court's adjudication order finding that a mother's children were deprived when the mother's physical location was known and service was never attempted because the juvenile court lacked personal jurisdiction over the mother for insufficient service of process. Taylor v. Padgett, 300 Ga. App. 314, 684 S.E.2d 434 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Means to attack juvenile court order. — Juvenile court order can be challenged by the filing of a motion to modify or vacate. In re M.A.L., 202 Ga. App. 768, 415 S.E.2d 649 (1992), cert. denied, overruled on other grounds, In re T.A.W., 265 Ga. 106, 454 S.E.2d 134 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

When the parent's parental rights were terminated by order of the juvenile court, the parent's motion for reconsideration, based solely on sufficiency of the evidence, did not extend the time for filing a notice of appeal and it could not be regarded as a reason to vacate or modify the judgment of the court. In re A.C.J., 211 Ga. App. 865, 440 S.E.2d 751 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Appellate court could not consider the merits of the juvenile court's order terminating the parental rights of the parents because the parents neither timely appealed that order nor filed a motion within 30 days that would extend the time to appeal. In the Interest of A. M., 324 Ga. App. 512, 751 S.E.2d 144 (2013).

Juvenile's motion for a new delinquency hearing based on newly discovered evidence amounted to a motion for a new trial on the grounds of newly discovered evidence and it was appropriate for the court to consider: (1) whether the evidence came to the juvenile's attention subsequent to the initial hearing; (2) that it was not owing to want of due diligence that the juvenile did not acquire the evidence sooner; (3) that the evidence was so material, and the evidence would have produced a different verdict; (4) that the evidence was not cumulative only; (5) that the affidavit of the witness personally should be procured or the affidavit's absence accounted for; and (6) that a new hearing would not be granted if the only effect of the evidence would be to impeach the credibility of a witness. In re A.D.C., 233 Ga. App. 73, 503 S.E.2d 334 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Construction with other statutes. — Nonprofit advocacy organization was authorized to file a deprivation petition which was separate and distinct from the initial deprivation adjudication since there was no requirement that a petition for modification must be filed under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42 (see now

O.C.G.A. § 15-11-32), instead of a deprivation petition under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63). In re A.V.B., 222 Ga. App. 241, 474 S.E.2d 114 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(e)(1)(D) and (e)(2)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602), a juvenile court may order a child released from a youth development center or transferred to a nonsecure facility during the period of restrictive custody set out in the initial order or may discharge a child from the custody of the Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice upon a motion after a year of custody. However, such an order may not be made on the ground that changed circumstances so require in the best interest of the child. Reading former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-40 and 15-11-63(e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32 and 15-11-602) together, such a notion for release should be based on other grounds. In the Interest of J.W., 293 Ga. App. 408, 667 S.E.2d 161 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Inherent authority of juvenile court. — There was no error in allowing the court-appointed special advocate to continue termination proceedings by moving for a new trial, given that the nature of the proceedings was the protection of the children whose well-being was threatened, and the juvenile court had inherent authority to vacate or modify the juvenile court's earlier order. In re K.R.C., 235 Ga. App. 354, 510 S.E.2d 547 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

When a trial court, upon finding a mother's children were deprived, left their custody with the mother upon certain conditions, and provided that the violation of those conditions would subject the mother to possible punishment for contempt, when the mother violated those conditions, the trial court had the inherent authority, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608), to modify the court's order and remove the children from their mother's custody. In the Interest of S.Y., 264 Ga. App. 623, 591 S.E.2d 489 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Authority in juvenile court to rehear order. — Since the juvenile court judge has the power to revoke, even reverse, the juvenile court's order, it logically follows that the juvenile court has the authority to take the lesser step of ordering a rehearing to determine the correctness of the juvenile court's order. In re P.S.C., 143 Ga. App. 887, 240 S.E.2d 165 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

No hearing required prior to ordering rehearing. — Order granting a rehearing, although issued ex parte, is valid because no hearing is required prior to ordering a rehearing. In re P.S.C., 143 Ga. App. 887, 240 S.E.2d 165 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

Inherent power to modify judgments for length of statutory appeal period. — Juvenile court retains the juvenile court's inherent power to modify the court's own judgments at least for the length of the statutory appeal period. In re P.S.C., 143 Ga. App. 887, 240 S.E.2d 165 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

Temporary custody and visitation rights. — Juvenile court had jurisdiction to modify an order granting temporary custody of a deprived child to the Department of Family and Children Services and to permit visitation by parents who filed a petition for visitation rights four months after the custody order. In re K.B., 188 Ga. App. 199, 372 S.E.2d 476 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Judge has authority to grant rehearing on termination matter. — Juvenile court judge, having issued an order terminating parental rights, has authority to grant a rehearing on the matter. In re P.S.C., 143 Ga. App. 887, 240 S.E.2d 165 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

Parent's parental rights restored. — Based upon newly discovered evidence that the caseworker of a parent who surrendered parental rights was a friend of the foster parents and had engaged in fraud and other illegalities, the trial court properly restored the parent's parental rights pursuant to former O.C.G.A.

Modification or Vacation of Orders (Cont'd)

§ 15-11-40(a)(3) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-32). Thus, O.C.G.A. § 19-8-9, requiring a parent to revoke a surrender within 10 days, did not prevent the surrenders from being voidable. In the Interest of K.W., 291 Ga. App. 623, 662 S.E.2d 255, cert. dismissed, No. S08C1642, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 767 (Ga. 2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Motion to modify termination of parental rights. — Motion for modification of a juvenile court order terminating parental rights is similar to a motion to set aside under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d), which is appealable but does not sustain an appeal from the underlying judgment. In re H.A.M., 201 Ga. App. 49, 410 S.E.2d 319 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Juvenile court did not err in denying the parents' motion to modify or vacate the order terminating their parental rights as the parents' residency status had been admitted at the termination hearing and was neither newly discovered nor a change in circumstances that established that it would be in the best interest of the children to change, modify, or vacate the order of termination; and the father's eligibility for legal residency status did not change the fact that termination was appropriate because of the children's extreme special needs, which required extra-ordinary, specialized care, and the parents' low levels of functioning. In the Interest of A. M., 324 Ga. App. 512, 751 S.E.2d 144 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Contents of motion. — Since the substance of a post-trial motion made no reference to any of the factors which would warrant the vacation or modification of the juvenile court's order under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-32), it could not be considered a motion to modify or vacate, thus an appeal could not be taken. In re C.M., 205 Ga. App. 543, 423 S.E.2d 280 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Burden of proof for modification is preponderance of the evidence. — Trial court erred in requiring a father to prove by clear and convincing proof that changed circumstances warranted modification of an order placing the father's children with their maternal aunts; the father retained an interest in the children, under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-13 and 15-11-58(i)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-30 and 15-11-204), sufficient to support a right to petition for modification, and the father was only required to prove the motion under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-444 and 15-11-608) by a preponderance of the evidence. In re J. N., 302 Ga. App. 631, 691 S.E.2d 396 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Appellate courts will not interfere with orders terminating parental rights. — Legislature has declared that the former Juvenile Code should be construed toward the end of providing for a child's welfare, "preferably in the child's own home." To this end, the appellate courts will not declare orders terminating parental rights, removing the child permanently from the child's own home, to be beyond the reach of the court issuing the order. To the contrary, the juvenile court judge who has second thoughts about such an action should take whatever steps necessary to ensure the correctness of the judge's action. In re P.S.C., 143 Ga. App. 887, 240 S.E.2d 165 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

Juvenile court retains jurisdiction when juvenile outside of county. — Former statute vested in the juvenile court of a county the jurisdiction to modify and vacate the juvenile court's orders on any of the grounds specified in former subsection (a), whether the juvenile is detained in that county or elsewhere, but the superior court of that county has no jurisdiction to exercise appellate review of judgments rendered by the juvenile court. Rossi v. Price, 237 Ga. 651, 229 S.E.2d 429 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

Delinquency adjudication. — Defendant juvenile's appeal of an order denying a motion to reconsider, vacate, or modify the delinquent adjudication was proper because the denial of the motion was a final judgment and was directly appeal-able; therefore, the defendant could appeal the ruling on disposition as well as on the original finding of delinquency. An order denying a motion under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) seeking a modification based on changed circumstances in a delinquency matter is a final judgment directly appealable under O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-34(a)(1) and former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-35). In the Interest of J. L. K., 302 Ga. App. 844, 691 S.E.2d 892 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Modification of a sentencing order was proper since a juvenile had been committed to the Department of Children & Youth Services (DCYS) for a period of detention and treatment but had not been transferred to the physical custody of DCYS but was held in a detention center pending placement in a youth development campus. In re B.D.T., 219 Ga. App. 804, 466 S.E.2d 680 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Modification was improper. — Since it was undisputed that after the juvenile court adjudicated the child as delinquent and committed the child to the Department of Juvenile Justice, and the child was placed in the physical custody of the Department, which confined the child for a year, the Department had already taken physical custody of the child and therefore the juvenile court could not subsequently modify the original dispositional order. In the Interest of S.S., 276 Ga. App. 666, 624 S.E.2d 251 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Claim for commutation or reduction. — When former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-40(b), 15-11-63(e)(1)(D) and (e)(2)(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, 15-11-602, and 15-11-608) were read together to effectuate their meaning as required by O.C.G.A. § 1-3-1(a), the juvenile court did not err in denying a juvenile's motion to commute or reduce the sentence imposed. Allegations that the juvenile was rehabilitated while in restrictive custody and would benefit from being released were insufficient to grant the juvenile court authority to modify the juvenile court's commitment order once physical custody of the juvenile was transferred to the Department of Juvenile Justice. In the Interest of J.V., 282 Ga. App. 319, 638 S.E.2d 757 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Reduction in sentence not authorized. — Although former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) prohibited the change, modification, or vacation of a commitment order once a child is in the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice "on the ground that changed circumstances so require in the best interest of the child" or because the child had been rehabilitated, the statute did not prohibit the change, modification, or vacation of a commitment order on other grounds. Further the application of former § 15-11-40(b) did not render former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(e)(2)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) purposeless in these circumstances when the juvenile based a reduction in sentence on rehabilitation. In re T. H., 298 Ga. App. 536, 680 S.E.2d 569 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Commitment order could not be changed. — Defendant moved for early release from a youth development center on grounds that alleged changed circumstances required release in the best interests of the child. The motion was properly denied because under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608), once the Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice had physical custody, a commitment order could not be changed on that basis but could be changed on other grounds. In the Interest of J.W., 293 Ga. App. 408, 667 S.E.2d 161 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Modification of a juvenile commitment order under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) on the ground that changed circumstances required modification in the best interest of the child was not available to a minor because the minor was already in the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice; the fact that the custody was based on the minor's restrictive custody under a different commitment order, and not on the commitment order the minor sought to modify, had no bearing on whether the modification could be made. In the Interest of P.S., 295 Ga. App. 724, 673 S.E.2d 74 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Although former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-471, 15-11-602, and 15-11-707) suggested that a juvenile defendant could move for early release from a youth development center after the defendant was already in custody, former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) prohibited modification of a commitment order on the grounds of changed circumstances. As a change in circumstances was the basis of the defendant's motion for early release, the juvenile court lacked jurisdiction to grant the motion. In re K.F., 299 Ga. App. 685, 683 S.E.2d 650 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Trial court did not err in dismissing a juvenile's motion to set aside the adjudications of child molestation and aggravated child molestation because evidence that contradicted the victim's testimony that the victim did not have sexual intercourse with any other man did not go to the issue of whether the juvenile was guilty and the juvenile had admitted the allegations. In the Interest of D. H., 332 Ga. App. 274, 772 S.E.2d 70 (2015).

Juvenile court did not err in dismissing a juvenile's motion to modify the commitment order on the basis that the purpose of rehabilitation was not being served because the motion was not accompanied by a written recommendation from the juvenile's Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice counselor or placement supervisor; thus, O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32 and 15-11-602 barred the juvenile court from modifying the commitment order as requested. In the Interest of D. H., 332 Ga. App. 274, 772 S.E.2d 70 (2015).

Contents of motion. — If the substance of a post-trial motion made no reference to any of the factors which would warrant the vacation or modification of the juvenile court's order, it could not be considered a motion to modify or vacate, thus an appeal could not be taken. In re C.M., 205 Ga. App. 543, 423 S.E.2d 280, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 423 S.E.2d 280 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Evidence insufficient to support finding of delinquency. — Trial court erred in denying the defendant juvenile's motion to reconsider, vacate, or modify a delinquent adjudication for the offense of simple assault because the evidence was insufficient to support the finding of delinquency since, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-5-20(a)(2), the crime of simple assault required proof that the defendant's actions placed the defendant's grandmother in reasonable apprehension of immediately receiving a violent injury, but the only evidence of that fact was hearsay; a police officer, who was the only witness, testified that the grandmother told the officer that the grandmother was afraid of the defendant, and that the defendant was perhaps going to hit the grandmother, but the officer admitted that there were no allegations that the defendant attempted to hit the grandmother, nor did the officer witness any of the alleged events. In the Interest of J. L. K., 302 Ga. App. 844, 691 S.E.2d 892 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

New disposition was sanction for original offense. — Although the initial act of bringing a weapon to school was not a designated felony under the statute in effect when a juvenile's probation was revoked, a dispositional order imposed upon revocation of probation related to the original delinquent act because the new disposition was a sanction for the original offense. In the Interest of N.M., 316 Ga. App. 649, 730 S.E.2d 127 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Modification based on failure to provide interpreter to parents. — Juvenile court did not abuse its discretion in denying the parents' motion to modify or set aside the termination of parental rights order based on the parents' claim that a language barrier existed at the time of the termination hearing and during critical times in their case because the parents did not assert that the Georgia Department of Family and Children Services should have provided them with an interpreter who spoke their Guatemalan dialect of Mam. In the Interest of A. M., 324 Ga. App. 512, 751 S.E.2d 144 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

15-11-33. Transfer when disposition incorporates reunification plan and parents reside in different counties.

(a) Whenever an order of disposition incorporates a reunification plan and the residence of the parent is not in the county of the court with jurisdiction or the residence of the parent changes to a county other than the county of the court with jurisdiction, the court may transfer jurisdiction to the juvenile court of the residence of the parent to whom the reunification plan is directed.

(b) Within 30 days of the filing of the transfer order, the transferring court shall provide the receiving court with certified copies of the adjudication order, the order of disposition, the order of transfer, the case plan, and any other court documents deemed necessary by the transferring court to enable the receiving court to assume jurisdiction over the matter.

(c) The transferring court shall retain jurisdiction until the receiving court acknowledges acceptance of the transfer.

(d) Compliance with this Code section shall terminate jurisdiction in the transferring court and confer jurisdiction in the receiving court.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-30.5, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Counsel not ineffective for failure to file transfer motion. — Given the children services department's opposition to transferring a mother's reunification plan to the county where the mother was living, and given that the transfer was not mandatory under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33), the mother's attorney was not deficient in failing to file a transfer motion. In the Interest of C.G., 279 Ga. App. 730, 632 S.E.2d 472 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.5).

15-11-34. Commitment to adult correctional facility prohibited.

Except as otherwise provided by Code Section 17-10-14, a child shall not be committed to an adult correctional facility or other facility used primarily for the execution of sentences of persons convicted of a crime.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Commitment to Department of Corrections permitted. — Commitment of a juvenile to the Department of Corrections was not violative of the former provisions. A.B.W. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 346, 199 S.E.2d 636 (1973), aff'd, 231 Ga. 699, 203 S.E.2d 512 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401)).

Commitment of delinquent to rehabilitation or treatment facilities. — Commitment of a delinquent child under the Juvenile Code to a facility operated under the direction of the juvenile court, or to another local public authority, or to the Division of Children and Youth (now Division of Youth Services) or to the Department of Corrections is for essentially the purpose of rehabilitation or treatment. A.B.W. v. State, 231 Ga. 699, 203 S.E.2d 512 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401)).

Transfer delay violated due process and legislative intent. — Forty days commitment to an adult imprisonment facility is not a "reasonably short time," and such delay in transferring a juvenile to a Department of Human Resources facility violates due process as well as the legislative intent of the former provisions. Long v. Powell, 388 F. Supp. 422 (N.D. Ga.), vacated on other grounds, 423 U.S. 808, 96 S. Ct. 18, 46 L. Ed. 2d 28 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

Effect of commitment to Department of Corrections. — If the court commits a youth to the Department of Corrections, the youth may be confined in one of that department's facilities because the Juvenile Code's prohibition against the incarceration of delinquent and unruly juveniles would not apply. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-98 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

Custody properly in Department under provisions of criminal sentence. — Department of Corrections properly has custody of an individual under the provisions of a criminal sentence which was imposed subsequent to an unexpired order of commitment; at the expiration of the criminal sentence alternative arrangements for custody should be made for the remainder of the term of commitment. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-20 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

15-11-35. Appeals.

In all cases of final judgments of the juvenile court, appeals shall be taken to the Court of Appeals or the Supreme Court in the same manner as appeals from the superior court. However, no such judgment or order shall be superseded or modified except in the discretion of the trial court; rather, the judgment or order of the court shall stand until reversed or modified by the reviewing court. The appeal of an order granting a petition to terminate parental rights shall stay an adoption proceeding related to the child who is the subject of such order until such order becomes final by the conclusion of appellate proceedings or the expiration of the time for seeking such review. Except for proceedings in connection with an adoption, the court shall continue to conduct hearings and issue orders in accordance with this chapter while an appeal in a case is pending.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Juveniles are granted same rights of appeal as are possessed by adults. J.J. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 660, 218 S.E.2d 668 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3801).

"Final judgments" defined. — Former Code 1933, § 24A-3801 provided for appeals "in all cases of final judgments of a juvenile court judge," without defining "final judgments." Former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34) provided for appeals "[w]here the judgment is final — that is to say — where the cause is no longer pending in the court below." J.T.M. v. State, 142 Ga. App. 635, 236 S.E.2d 764 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3801).

Order of a juvenile court adjudicating a juvenile delinquent and transferring the matter to another juvenile court for disposition was a final order and was appealable without the need for a certificate of immediate review. In re T.L.C., 266 Ga. 407, 467 S.E.2d 885 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-64).

Transferral order is final and therefore appealable since the order operates to transfer the case to the superior court, after which the cause is no longer pending in "the court below," the juvenile court. J.T.M. v. State, 142 Ga. App. 635, 236 S.E.2d 764 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3801).

Judgment or order stands until reversed or modified. — Even though a transfer order was on appeal at the time the defendant was indicted, the order remained in effect at that time, and the proceedings which occurred in the superior court, pursuant to the transfer order which had not been superseded, including the indictment, were valid. Rocha v. State, 234 Ga. App. 48, 506 S.E.2d 192 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-64).

Transfer of child custody case is continuation of that proceeding. Thus, a transfer order in a habeas corpus-child custody proceeding is not final and hence is not appealable without a certificate of immediate review. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs. v. Perkins, 244 Ga. 237, 259 S.E.2d 427 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3801).

Grant or denial of supersedeas. — Juvenile court, unlike a superior court dealing with the same subject matter, has the discretion to grant or deny supersedeas even though the case in the juvenile court emanated from a superior court. Elder v. Elder, 184 Ga. App. 167, 361 S.E.2d 46 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-64).

Order denying petition subject to review. — Order denying the petition to vacate the order committing the juvenile is a judicial order, subject to judicial review. Rossi v. Price, 237 Ga. 651, 229 S.E.2d 429 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3801).

Court of appeals was without jurisdiction to entertain the state's appeal of a dismissal of a juvenile court petition. In re J.H., 228 Ga. App. 154, 491 S.E.2d 209 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-64).

Order holding all charges in abeyance during a period of good behavior was not a final judgment of adjudication and disposition on allegations contained in the petition. In re M.T., 223 Ga. App. 615, 478 S.E.2d 428 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-64).

Adjudication order alone is not final, appealable judgment. — Adjudication order alone, without a dispositional order following a dispositional hearing under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401 was not a final, appealable judgment under former Code 1933, § 24A-3801 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-35), nor was it made one by the provisions of former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34). M.K.H. v. State, 132 Ga. App. 143, 207 S.E.2d 645 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3801); In re G.C.S., 186 Ga. App. 291, 367 S.E.2d 103 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-64).

Indigent parent entitled to paupered transcript for use in appeal. — Indigent parent, whose parental rights have been terminated by an order of a juvenile court on a petition filed by an agency of the state, is entitled to a paupered transcript of the proceeding in the juvenile court for use in appealing the decision of that court. Nix v. Department of Human Resources, 236 Ga. 794, 225 S.E.2d 306 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3801).

Delinquency adjudication. — Defendant juvenile's appeal of an order denying a motion to reconsider, vacate, or modify the delinquent adjudication was proper because the denial of the motion was a final judgment and was directly appealable; therefore, the defendant could appeal the ruling on disposition as well as on the original finding of delinquency. An order denying a motion under O.C.G.A.

§ 15-11-40(b) seeking a modification based on changed circumstances in a delinquency matter is a final judgment directly appealable under O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-34(a)(1) and 15-11-3. In the Interest of J. L. K., 302 Ga. App. 844, 691 S.E.2d 892 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-3).

Denial of motion to modify in child deprivation proceeding. — Phrase "child custody cases" within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a)(11) does not include a child deprivation proceeding in which a custody order has been entered; however, the decision to terminate reunification services is a final judgment directly appealable under O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-34(a)(1) and 15-11-3. In re J. N., 302 Ga. App. 631, 691 S.E.2d 396 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-3).

Juvenile court did not err in dismissing a juvenile's motion to modify the commitment order on the basis that the purpose of rehabilitation was not being served because the motion was not accompanied by a written recommendation from the juvenile's Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice counselor or placement supervisor; thus, O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32 and 15-11-602 barred the juvenile court from modifying the commitment order as requested. In the Interest of D. H., 332 Ga. App. 274, 772 S.E.2d 70 (2015).

15-11-36. Expenses charged to county; payment by parent on court order.

(a) The following expenses shall be a charge upon the funds of the county upon certification thereof by the court:

(1) The cost of medical and other examinations and treatment of a child ordered by the court;

(2) The cost of care and support of a child committed by the court to the legal custody of an individual or a public or private agency other than DJJ, but the court may order supplemental payments, if such are necessary or desirable for services;

(3) Reasonable compensation for services and related expenses of an attorney appointed by the court, when appointed by the court to represent a child and when appointed by the court to conduct the proceedings;

(4) Reasonable compensation for a guardian ad litem;

(5) The expense of service of summons, notices, and subpoenas; travel expenses of witnesses; transportation, subsistence, and detention of a child for juvenile court proceedings or superior court proceedings when a child is prosecuted in superior court pursuant to Code Section 15-11-560; and other like expenses incurred in the proceedings under this chapter; and

(6) The cost of counseling and counsel and advice required or provided under the provisions of Code Section 15-11-212 or 15-11-601.

(b) The court shall determine whether the expenses shall be a charge upon the funds of the county and certify such expenses to the county governing authority within 120 days from the date such expenses were submitted to the court for certification. If the court has not made such certification within 120 days, the court shall be deemed to have denied certification.

(c) If, after due notice to the parent or other person legally obligated to care for and support a child and after affording such person an opportunity to be heard, the court finds that such person is financially able to pay all or part of the costs and expenses outlined in subsection (a) of this Code section, the court may order such person to pay the same and prescribe the manner of payment. In addition, the court may order payment from a child's parent or other legally obligated person or entity to reimburse all or part of the costs and expenses of the department or DJJ for treatment, care, and support of a child. Unless otherwise ordered, payment shall be made to the clerk of the court for remittance to the person or agency, including the department or DJJ, to whom compensation is due or, if the costs and expenses have been paid by the county, to the appropriate officer of the county.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 24-2431 and 24-2432, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-56 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-8, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Counsel on appeal. — There is no statutory provision whereby the Supreme Court can appoint counsel on appeals in habeas corpus cases contesting child custody. West v. Cobb County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 425, 254 S.E.2d 373 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 24-2431 and 24-2432).

"Subsistence." — "Subsistence," as used in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-8(a)(5), must be interpreted to include emergency medical procedures; thus, a juvenile court erred when the court refused to certify the emergency medical expenses incurred by a juvenile in the temporary custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice for payment by a county. In the Interest of J.S., 282 Ga. 623, 652 S.E.2d 547 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-8).

Defendant. a juvenile, sustained a hand fracture while in the custody of the Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice. In view of a nurse's testimony that delaying treatment could have caused the hand to become deformed, the provision of medical services to treat the fracture was an emergency or necessary medical procedure that fell within the meaning of "subsistence" as provided in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-8(a)(5); therefore, the county was obliged to pay these medical expenses. In re A. G., 298 Ga. App. 804, 681 S.E.2d 649 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-8).

Parents' income relevant to determination of juvenile's indigency. — It is proper for a court to consider a juvenile's parents' income when the court makes a decision concerning whether or not the juvenile is indigent. In re R.K.J., 179 Ga. App. 112, 345 S.E.2d 658 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-8).

Reimbursement for medical expenses. — Trial court erred in refusing to certify the medical bills sought to be reimbursed by the Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) from a county in the amount of $4,568.50 incurred on behalf of a female juvenile detained in the custody of the DJJ, because the juvenile presented a life-threatening condition of galactorrhea, which required diagnostic testing at a medical center; the word subsistence, as provided in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-8(a)(5), was held to include emergency medical treatment for a juvenile, therefore, DJJ was entitled to reimbursement from the county. In the Interest of J.S., 283 Ga. App. 448, 641 S.E.2d 682, aff'd, 282 Ga. 623, 652 S.E.2d 547 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-8).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

County not charged costs in advance. — Costs in juvenile proceedings are properly charges against county in which case arises; the county may not be required to pay such costs in advance. 1978 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U78-19 (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 24-2431 and 24-2432).

Transportation of children under court jurisdiction responsibility of county. — Once a child has been brought to the court or a juvenile intake officer, subsequent transportation of children under the jurisdiction of a juvenile court is the county's responsibility, and that such transportation costs shall be a charge upon the funds of the county upon certification thereof by the court. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U79-13 (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 24-2431 and 24-2432).

Psychometric testing, psychological examinations, and remedial reading instructions were included in former provisions. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U79-4 (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 24-2431 and 24-2432).

15-11-37. Supervision fees.

(a) The court may collect supervision fees from those who are placed under the court's formal or informal supervision in order that the court may use those fees to expand the provision of the following types of ancillary services:

(1) Housing in nonsecure residential facilities;

(2) Educational services, tutorial services, or both;

(3) Counseling and diagnostic testing;

(4) Mediation;

(5) Transportation to and from court ordered services;

(6) Truancy intervention services;

(7) Restitution programs;

(8) Job development or work experience programs;

(9) Community services; and

(10) Any other additional programs or services needed to meet the best interests, development, and rehabilitation of a child.

(b)(1) The juvenile court may order each delinquent child or child in need of services who receives supervision to pay to the clerk of the court:

(A) An initial court supervision user's fee of not less than $10.00 nor more than $200.00; and

(B) A court supervision user's fee of not less than $2.00 nor more than $30.00 for each month that a child receives supervision.

(2) A child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian may be jointly and severally liable for the payment of fees set forth in paragraph (1) of this subsection and shall be subject to the enforcement procedure in subsection (c) of Code Section 15-11-36. The judge shall provide that any such fees shall be imposed on such terms and conditions as shall assure that the funds for the payment are from moneys earned by such child. All moneys collected by the clerk under this subsection shall be transferred to the county treasurer, or such other county official or employee who performs duties previously performed by the treasurer, who shall deposit the moneys into a county supplemental juvenile services fund. The governing authority of the county shall appropriate moneys from the county supplemental juvenile services fund to the juvenile court for the court's discretionary use in providing community services described in subsection (a) of this Code section to child offenders. These funds shall be administered by the county and the court may draw upon them by submitting invoices to the county. The county supplemental juvenile services fund may be used only for these services. Any moneys remaining in the fund at the end of the county fiscal year shall not revert to any other fund but shall continue in the county supplemental juvenile services fund. The county supplemental juvenile services fund may not be used to replace other funding of services.

(c) The clerk of the court shall be responsible for collections of fees as ordered by the court.

(d) For the purpose of this Code section, the term "legal custodian" shall not be interpreted or construed to include the department or DJJ.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-37, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-38. Community based risk reduction programs.

(a) Any court may order the establishment of a community based risk reduction program, within the geographical jurisdiction of the court, for the purpose of utilizing available community resources in assessment and intervention in cases of delinquency, dependency, or children in need of services so long as the court determines that sufficient funds are available for such programs. Subject to the procedures, requirements, and supervision established in the order creating such program, any individual and any public or private agency or entity may participate in the program.

(b) As part of a risk reduction program, a court may implement or adopt an early intervention program designed to identify children and families who are at risk of becoming involved with the court. Such early intervention program shall be for the purpose of developing and implementing intervention actions or plans to divert the children and their families from becoming involved in future cases in the court. The court's involvement shall be for the limited purpose of facilitating the development of the program and for the purpose of protecting the confidentiality of the children and families participating in the program.

(c) As part of an early intervention program, the court may enter into protocol agreements with school systems within the court's jurisdiction, the county division of family and children services, the county department of health, DJJ, any state or local department or agency, any mental health agency or institution, local physicians or health care providers, licensed counselors and social workers, and any other social service, charitable, or other entity or any other agency or individual providing educational or treatment services to families and children within the jurisdiction of the court. Such protocol agreements shall authorize the exchange of confidential information in the same manner and subject to the same restrictions, conditions, and penalties as provided in Code Section 15-11-40.

(d) When any agency or entity participating in a protocol agreement identifies a child who is at risk of becoming a delinquent child, dependent child, or child in need of services, the agency or entity shall refer the case to a multiagency staffing panel. The panel shall develop a multiagency intervention plan for such child. Such child or his or her parent, or both, may be present during any review of such child's case by the panel. A child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian shall be notified of the intervention plan by the agency making the referral or by a person or entity designated by the panel to administer the program. The staff of the court, other than the judge, shall work with the other agencies involved to educate a child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian and such child on the importance of following the intervention plan and on the consequences if anyone is referred to the court. If an intervention plan is developed for a child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian consents to such plan, the failure to comply with the plan or any portion thereof may constitute the basis for a referral to DFCS.

15-11-39. Risk assessments or risk and needs assessments; case plans; issuance of orders.

(a) In any jurisdiction within which a risk reduction program has been established, when a child comes before the court for disposition, the court may order that a risk assessment or risk and needs assessment, as defined in Code Section 49-4A-1, be made of such child and the circumstances resulting in such child being before the court.

(b) If the results of a risk assessment or risk and needs assessment, as defined in Code Section 49-4A-1, demonstrates a need for a case plan, the court may order that a case plan be developed by a panel representing community agencies as authorized by the court. A case plan shall contain the proposed actions and alternatives for the proper and efficient use of available community resources to assist a child.

(c) A case plan shall be served on a child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian. A case plan shall also include a cover letter which contains the following information:

(1) Sources to explain the process, procedures, and penalties for not responding to the court order in the prescribed time frame; and

(2) The deadline for responding to the court order and stating objections to the case plan or any portion thereof is ten days from the date of service.

(d) If no objection is made or if a child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian consents to the case plan, the case plan shall be incorporated into and made a part of the disposition order entered in the case by entry of a supplemental order. The case plan may be modified by the court at any time such child is under the jurisdiction of the court.

(e) If a child or his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian objects to the case plan, the court shall conduct a hearing. The court may decline to adopt the case plan or may confirm or modify the case plan. In implementing a case plan, the court shall have available all of the protective powers set forth in Code Section 15-11-29, without the necessity of a show cause hearing, unless objection is made to the case plan.

(f) In any jurisdiction within which a risk reduction program has been established, such court may issue an order authorized by Code Section 15-11-29.1.

15-11-40. Information sharing; confidentiality.

(a) Notwithstanding any provision contained in this chapter or in any rule or regulation adopted by any department, board, or agency of the state to the contrary, the court and any individual, public or private agency, or other entity participating in a community based risk reduction program may exchange, as necessary, information, medical records, school records, immigration records, records of adjudication, treatment records, and any other records or information which may aid in the assessment of and intervention with the children and families in such program if such exchange of information is ordered by the court or consented to by the parties. Such information shall be used by such individuals and agencies only for the purposes provided in this chapter and as authorized by the court for the purpose of implementing the case plan and for the purposes permitted under each agency's own rules and regulations. Such information shall not be released to any other individual or agency except as may be necessary to effect the appropriate treatment or intervention as provided in the case plan. Such information shall otherwise remain confidential as required by state and federal law and the court may punish any violations of confidentiality as contempt of court.

(b) Any person who authorizes or permits any unauthorized person or agency to have access to confidential records or reports of child abuse shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. Any person who knowingly and under false pretenses obtains or attempts to obtain confidential records or reports of child abuse or information contained therein shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

(c) Confidential records or reports of child abuse and information obtained from such records may not be made a part of any record which is open to the public except that a prosecuting attorney may use and make public that record or information in the course of any criminal prosecution for any offense which constitutes or results from child abuse.

(d) This Code section shall not abridge the provisions relating to confidentiality of patient or client records and shall not serve to destroy or in any way abridge the confidential or privileged character thereof.

15-11-41. Compliance with privacy laws.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in Code Section 15-11-710, entities governed by federal or state privacy laws may require the following before sharing confidential information:

(1) For release of child abuse records by the department, a subpoena and subsequent order of the court requiring the release of such information in accordance with Code Section 49-5-41;

(2) For release of information relating to diagnosis, prognosis, or treatment of drug and alcohol abuse:

(A) If the person is 18 or has been emancipated, consent from the person to whom such information relates;

(B) If the person is under the age of 18 years and has not been emancipated, valid consent from such person's parent, guardian, or legal custodian or consent by a parent, guardian, or legal custodian to a confidentiality agreement between the health care provider and the unemancipated minor; provided, however, that consent from an unemancipated minor shall be sufficient for the release of such information if the unemancipated minor is allowed by law to consent to the health care service to which the records relate without the consent of a parent, guardian, or legal custodian and has not designated anyone as a personal representative; or

(C) A subpoena requiring the release of such information and protective order of the court regarding the release of such information; and

(3) For release of confidential health, mental health, or education records:

(A) If the person is 18 or has been emancipated, consent from the person to whom such information relates;

(B) If the person is under the age of 18 years and has not been emancipated, valid consent from such person's parent, guardian, or legal custodian or consent by a parent, guardian, or legal custodian to a confidentiality agreement between the health care provider and the unemancipated minor; provided, however, that consent from an unemancipated minor shall be sufficient for the release of such information if the unemancipated minor is allowed by law to consent to the health care service to which the records relate without the consent of a parent, guardian, or legal custodian and has not designated anyone as a personal representative;

(C) A subpoena requiring the release of such information; or

(D) An order of the court requiring the release of such information.

(b) In issuing an order for the release of information under this Code section, the court may:

(1) Include protections against further disclosure of the information;

(2) Limit the purposes for which the information may be used; and

(3) Require records to be redacted so that only relevant information is shared.

(c) Nothing in this Code section shall be deemed to replace the responsibility of entities governed by federal and state privacy laws to comply with such laws.

(d) Nothing in this Code section shall be construed as barring or limiting the release of confidential information referred to in this Code section pursuant to a search warrant.

15-11-50. Creation of juvenile courts; appointment of judges.

(a) There is created a juvenile court in every county in the state.

(b) Except where election is provided by local law, the judge or a majority of the judges of the superior court in each circuit in the state may appoint one or more qualified persons as judge of the juvenile courts of the circuit. Such superior court judge or judges shall establish the total number of circuit-wide juvenile court judges and shall establish whether the judge or judges shall be full time or part time, or a combination of full time and part time. Each circuit-wide judge appointed shall have the authority to act as judge of each juvenile court in each county of the circuit.

(c) If no person is appointed as a juvenile court judge for a circuit, then a superior court judge of the circuit shall as part of the duties of the superior court judge assume the duties of the juvenile court judge in all counties in the circuit in which a separate juvenile court judgeship has not been established.

(d) All juvenile court judgeships established on or before October 1, 2000, and their methods of compensation, selection, and operation shall continue until such time as one or more circuit-wide juvenile court judges are appointed. However, in any circuit where a superior court judge assumes the duties of the juvenile court judge, such circuit shall not be entitled to the state funds provided for in Code Section 15-11-52.

(e) When one or more circuit-wide juvenile court judges are appointed or elected, any juvenile court judge in office at that time shall be authorized to fulfill his or her term of office. The jurisdiction of each judge shall be circuit wide.

(f) After the initial appointments and prior to any subsequent appointment or reappointment of any part-time or full-time juvenile court judge, the judge or judges responsible for making the appointment shall publish notice of the vacancy of the juvenile court judgeship once a month for three months prior to such appointment or reappointment. Such notice shall be published in the official legal organ of each of the counties in the circuit where the juvenile court judge has venue. The expense of such publication shall be paid by the county governing authority in the county where such notice is published.

(g) In the event that more than one juvenile court judge is appointed, one judge shall be designated presiding judge.

(h) In any case in which action under this Code section is to be taken by a superior court judge of the circuit, such action shall be taken as follows:

(1) Where there are one or two superior court judges, such action shall be taken by the chief judge of the circuit; and

(2) Where there are more than two superior court judges, such action shall be taken by a majority vote of the judges of the circuit.

Juvenile court judge has authority to issue criminal warrants for adults as juvenile court is county court. Thornton v. State, 157 Ga. App. 75, 276 S.E.2d 125 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-3).

If superior court judge sits as juvenile court judge, orders issued by the judge are orders of that court and not of the superior court and must conform to the legal requirements of courts of limited jurisdiction to be valid. Turnell v. Johnson, 223 Ga. 309, 154 S.E.2d 591 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-201).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-3 and 15-11-18 are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Existing terms unaffected by new judicial district. — Terms of the existing juvenile court judge for the counties of Pickens, Fannin, Gilmer, Forsyth, and Cherokee are not affected by the creation of the new Appalachian Judicial Circuit. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-26 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-3).

Term of office. — Term of office of juvenile court judges appointed under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-18 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-50 and 15-11-52) was four years to run from the date of the expiration of the term of office of the juvenile court judge's predecessor in office. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U84-32 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-3).

All juvenile court judgeships are to be appointed to a term equal to that of superior court judges, which is currently four years. The provision for state contribution for circuit-wide juvenile court judges' compensation conditioned upon appropriation of the necessary funds for that purpose does not delay enactment of the remainder of the 1982 amendment. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U87-5 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-3).

Appointment of retired superior court judge. — Superior court judge who retires under either of the two superior court judges retirement systems may be appointed to serve as a juvenile court judge; however, with one limited exception, his or her eligibility for senior judge status under either system will be suspended or delayed while appointed to that office. 1991 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 91-9 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-3).

Appointment of superior court judge as juvenile court judge. — Senior superior court judge, who was not being appointed in that senior judge capacity pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-1-9.1, may be appointed to serve as a part-time state-funded juvenile court judge and, so long as the hours worked annually do not exceed 1040 hours, there is no effect on the senior judge's retirement. 2000 Op. Atty. Gen. No. U2000-9 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-18).

Local legislation not necessary. — Local legislation is not necessary to establish a juvenile court for a particular county alone, but the powers of the juvenile court cannot be restricted to only that county. 2000 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U2000-3 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-18).

15-11-52. Terms and compensation of judges.

(a) Each appointed juvenile court judge shall serve for a term of four years.

(b) The compensation of the full-time or part-time juvenile court judges shall be set by the superior court with the approval of the governing authority or governing authorities of the county or counties for which the juvenile court judge is appointed.

(c) Out of funds appropriated to the judicial branch of government, the state shall contribute toward the salary of the judges on a per circuit basis in the following amounts:

(1) Each circuit with one or more juvenile court judges who are not superior court judges assuming the duties of juvenile court judges shall receive a state grant of $100,000.00;

(2) In addition to the amount set forth in paragraph (1) of this subsection, each circuit which has more than four superior court judges shall be eligible for additional state grants in the amount of $25,000.00 per superior court judgeship exceeding four judges in such circuit;

(3) In circuits where the superior court judges elect to use the state grant for one or more part-time judges, the amount of the state grant shall be as follows; provided, however, that such grant shall not exceed the amount the circuit is eligible to receive under paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection:

(A) For each part-time judge who works one day weekly $20,000.00

(B) For each part-time judge who works two days weekly 40,000.00

(C) For each part-time judge who works three days weekly 60,000.00

(D) For each part-time judge who works four days weekly ..... 80,000.00; and

(4) All state grants provided by this subsection shall be spent solely on salaries for juvenile court judges and shall not be used for any other purposes.

Att'y Gen. No. U83-26 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-3).

Superior court judge may fix salary of juvenile court judge. — Judge of a superior court may not fix the salary of the juvenile court judge until such time as the salary of the juvenile court judge is no longer fixed by legislative act. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U74-68 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-201).

Term of office. — Term of office of juvenile court judges appointed under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-18 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-50 and 15-11-52) was four years to run from the date of the expiration of the term of office of the juvenile court judge's predecessor in office. 1984 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U84-32 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-3).

All juvenile court judgeships are to be appointed to a term equal to that of superior court judges, which is currently four years. Att'y Gen. No. U87-5 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-3).

15-11-53. Practice of law by judges.

(a) It shall be unlawful for any full-time juvenile court judge to engage in any practice of law outside his or her role as a juvenile court judge.

(b) It shall be unlawful for a part-time judge of any juvenile court to engage directly or indirectly in the practice of law in his or her own name or in the name of another as a partner in any manner in any case, proceeding, or matter of any kind in the court to which he or she is assigned or in any other court in any case, proceeding, or any other matters of which it has pending jurisdiction or has had jurisdiction.

(c) It shall be unlawful for any juvenile court judge, full time or part time, to give advice or counsel to any person on any matter of any kind whatsoever which has arisen directly or indirectly in court, except such advice or counsel as a judge is called upon to give while performing the duties of a juvenile court judge.

15-11-54. Administration and expenses of juvenile courts.

(a) Each juvenile court shall be assigned and attached to the superior court of the county for administrative purposes.

(b) The governing authority of the county of residence of each juvenile court judge shall offer the juvenile court judge insurance benefits and any other benefits except retirement or pension benefits equivalent to those offered to employees of the county, with a right to contribution from other counties in the circuit for a pro rata contribution toward the costs of such benefits, based on county population. Counties shall continue to provide membership in retirement plans available to county employees for any juvenile court judge in office before July 1, 1998, who did not become a member of the Georgia Judicial Retirement System provided by Chapter 23 of Title 47.

(c) Except for state grants provided by Code Section 15-11-52, all expenditures of the court are declared to be an expense of the court and payable out of the county treasury with the approval of the governing authority or governing authorities of the county or counties for which the juvenile court judge is appointed.

15-11-55. Applicability of local laws.

(a) To the extent that the provisions of this article conflict with a local constitutional amendment authorizing the election of a juvenile court judge and with the provisions of a local Act authorized by such local constitutional amendment to provide for the term of office, vacancies in office, qualifications, compensation, and full-time or part-time status of a juvenile court judge or judges, the provisions of such local constitutional amendment and such local Act shall govern.

(b) The state grants provided by Code Section 15-11-52 shall be provided to any circuit encompassing a juvenile court governed by the provisions of a local constitutional amendment and a local Act in the same manner as other circuits, except that, in any circuit with one or more elected juvenile court judges, the elected juvenile court judge who is senior in duration of service as a juvenile court judge shall establish, subject to other applicable provisions of law, the total number of circuit-wide juvenile court judges, whether the judge or judges shall be full time or part time or a combination of full time and part time, and the compensation of any part-time juvenile court judge or judges.

15-11-57. Commissioning of juvenile court judges; appointment of associate juvenile court judges.

(a) Whenever a juvenile court judge is appointed it shall be the duty of the clerk of the superior court to forward to the Secretary of State and to the Council of Juvenile Court Judges a certified copy of the order of appointment. The order of appointment shall set out the name of the person appointed, the term of office, the effective date of the appointment, the name of the person being succeeded, if any, and whether the office was vacated by resignation, death, or otherwise. Upon receipt of such order, the Secretary of State shall issue a commission as for superior court judges.

(b) Whenever an associate juvenile court judge is appointed to serve in a juvenile court, the clerk of the juvenile court shall forward a certified copy of the order of appointment to the Council of Juvenile Court Judges.

15-11-58. Council of Juvenile Court Judges; role; director.

(a) All of the judges and associate judges of the courts exercising jurisdiction over children shall constitute a Council of Juvenile Court Judges. The council shall annually elect from among its members a judge to serve as presiding judge and chairperson of the council.

(b) The Council of Juvenile Court Judges:

(1) Shall meet at stated times to be fixed by it or on call of the chairperson;

(2) May establish general policies for the conduct of courts exercising jurisdiction over children;

(3) May promulgate uniform rules and forms governing procedures and practices of the courts;

(4) Shall publish in print or electronically an annual report of the work of the courts exercising jurisdiction over children, which shall include statistical and other data on the courts' work and services, research studies the council may make of the problems of children and families dealt with by the courts, and any recommendations for legislation; and

(5) Shall be authorized to inspect and copy records of the courts, law enforcement agencies, the department, the Department of Community Supervision, and DJJ for the purpose of compiling statistical data on children.

(c) Subject to the approval of the Council of Juvenile Court Judges, the presiding judge of the council shall appoint a chief administrative and executive officer for the council who shall have the title of director of the Council of Juvenile Court Judges. Under the general supervision of the presiding judge of the council and within the policies established by the council, the director shall:

(1) Provide consultation to the courts regarding the administration of court services and the recruitment and training of personnel;

(2) Make recommendations to the council for improvement in court services;

(3) With the approval of the presiding judge, appoint consultants and necessary clerical personnel to perform the duties assigned to the council and the director;

(4) Collect necessary statistics and prepare an annual report of the work of the courts;

(5) Promulgate in cooperation with DJJ standard procedures for coordinating DJJ, the Department of Community Supervision, and county juvenile probation services throughout this state; and

(6) Perform such other duties as the presiding judge of the council shall specify.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2015, p. 422, § 6-1/HB 310, not codified by the General Assembly, provides, in part, that the amendment by this Act shall apply to sentences entered on or after July 1, 2015.

15-11-59. Educational seminars.

(a) The Council of Juvenile Court Judges, in conjunction with the Institute of Continuing Judicial Education of Georgia, shall establish seminars for all judges and associate juvenile court judges exercising juvenile court jurisdiction and may make provisions relative to such seminars by court rules properly adopted.

(b) Seminars shall offer instruction and training in juvenile law and procedure, child development and psychology, sociological theories relative to delinquency and breakdown of the family structure, and such other training and activities as the council may determine would promote the quality of justice in the juvenile court system.

(c) Expenses of administration of seminar programs and actual expenses incurred by the judges or associate juvenile court judges in attending such seminars shall be paid from state funds appropriated for the council for such purpose, from federal funds available to the council for such purpose, or from other sources. Judges and associate juvenile court judges shall receive the same expense and travel allowances which members of the General Assembly receive for attending meetings of legislative interim committees.

(d) Each judge and associate juvenile court judge exercising juvenile jurisdiction shall receive training appropriate to the role and participate in at least 12 hours of continuing legal education or continuing judicial education established or approved by the council each year and meet such rules as established by the council pertaining to such training. Superior court judges may meet this requirement by attending seminars held in conjunction with the seminars for superior court judges provided by the Institute of Continuing Judicial Education of Georgia. Judges and associate juvenile court judges shall not exercise juvenile court jurisdiction unless the council certifies that annual training has been accomplished or unless the judge is in the first year of his or her initial appointment; provided, however, that the council may in hardship cases extend deadlines for compliance with this Code section.

15-11-60. Associate juvenile court judges; qualifications.

(a) A judge may appoint one or more persons to serve as associate juvenile court judges in juvenile matters on a full-time or part-time basis. The associate juvenile court judge shall serve at the pleasure of the judge, and his or her salary shall be fixed by the judge with the approval of the governing authority or governing authorities of the county or counties for which the associate juvenile court judge is appointed. The salary of each associate juvenile court judge shall be paid from county funds.

(b) Each associate juvenile court judge shall have the same qualifications as required for a judge of the juvenile court as provided in Code Section 15-11-51; provided, however, that any person serving as an associate juvenile court judge on July 1, 2007, shall be qualified for appointment thereafter to serve as an associate juvenile court judge.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-10 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-21, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Failure to comply with subsections (b) and (c). — Since the juvenile court referee [now associate judge] failed to comply with subsections (b) and (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-10 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-60), the order of commitment in the case must be reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings in compliance with the foregoing provisions of the former Juvenile Court Code. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-10).

Judge's failure to comply. — While the language of a juvenile court judge's order suggested that the judge conducted a de novo review of a decision by an associate judge, the judge erred in denying a juvenile's motion for rehearing. The disposition which the juvenile court judge was authorized and required to make was a de novo determination as to the juvenile's delinquency, not an order granting or denying the juvenile's motion. In the Interest of J. C., 308 Ga. App. 336, 708 S.E.2d 1 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21).

Nature of rehearing. — Rehearing that was mandated by former subsection (d) (now subsection (e)) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-10 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-60) differs from a review of a referee's findings and recommendations. A rehearing on reconsideration contemplates a second, de novo consideration or a retrial of the issues, while a review involves only the examination of the record by an appellate tribunal and consideration for the purpose of correction. In re M.E.T., 197 Ga. App. 255, 398 S.E.2d 30 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-10).

Effect of timely request for rehearing. — Juvenile's timely request for a hearing required that the juvenile court judge make de novo findings and recommendations after conducting a de novo review of the original evidence that the referee considered. The judge could not ignore the timely request for a rehearing and merely "confirm" the findings and recommendations of the referee pursuant to subsection (e) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-10 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21). In re M.E.T., 197 Ga. App. 255, 398 S.E.2d 30 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-10).

Authority to confirm associate judge's findings and recommendations. — Juvenile court judge is authorized to confirm the referee's findings and recommendation only if no rehearing is mandated. In re M.E.T., 197 Ga. App. 255, 398 S.E.2d 30 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-10).

Appointment of juvenile court personnel by superior court judge. — Superior court judge sitting as a juvenile court judge may appoint supporting personnel for the juvenile court pursuant to former Code 1933, §§ 24A-601, 24A-603 and 24A-701 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-60, 15-11-63, and 15-11-66). 1977 Op. 15-11-61. Associate juvenile court traffic judges.

(a) The judge may appoint one or more persons to serve at the pleasure of the judge as associate juvenile court traffic judges on a full-time or part-time basis.

(b) An associate juvenile court traffic judge shall be a member of the State Bar of Georgia.

In the event the judge of the juvenile court is absent or unable to make such appointment, the judge of the superior court of that county may so appoint.

(b) The person appointed shall have the authority to preside in the stead of the disqualified, ill, or absent judge and shall be paid from the county treasury such emolument as the appointing judge shall prescribe; provided, however, that the emolument shall not exceed the compensation received by the regular juvenile court judge for such services.

See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Designation of judge while transferring jurisdiction does not void valid orders. — The designation of the judge pro tempore by the superior court while transferring jurisdiction of a case to the juvenile court, though surplusage, does not void the otherwise valid orders. K.G.W. v. State, 140 Ga. App. 571, 231 S.E.2d 421 (1976), cert. dismissed, 238 Ga. 599, 234 S.E.2d 535 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3701).

Judge pro tempore not "official policymaker." — Juvenile court judge pro tempore is a state official and, as such, could not be the "official policymaker" responsible for establishing an alleged unconstitutional custom or policy on behalf of a county which was the defendant in a federal civil rights action. Bendiburg v. Dempsey, 692 F. Supp. 1354 (N.D. Ga. 1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Juvenile court judge pro tempore may be paid less. — Since former Code 1933, § 24A-3701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-62) by the statute's terms applied only to judges pro tempore, and former Code 1933, § 24A-701 did not provide a limit upon salaries of juvenile court referees (now associate judges), a juvenile court judge may be paid less than a referee (now associate judge). 1981 Op. Service by a correctional officer on incarcerated father. — Personal service of a summons and a petition of deprivation by a correctional officer upon an incarcerated father was sufficient as the service procedures in the Civil Practice Act were not adopted nor were those procedures binding on the juvenile court, and the correctional officer was acting under the direction of the court for the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). 15-11-64. Collection of information by juvenile court clerks; reporting requirement; data collection.

(a) Each clerk of the juvenile court shall collect the following information for each child in need of services, delinquent child, and child accused of a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act and provide such information to DJJ as frequently as requested by DJJ:

(1) Name;

(2) Date of birth;

(3) Sex;

(4) Race;

(5) Offense charged;

(6) Location of the offense, including the name of the school if the offense occurred in a school safety zone, as defined in Code Section 16-11-127.1;

(7) The name of the referral source, including the name of the school if the referring source was a school;

(8) Disposition of the case; and

(9) Date of and authority for commitment, if applicable.

(b) Each clerk of the juvenile court shall report to the Administrative Office of the Courts the total number of petitions or motions filed under subsection (b) of Code Section 15-11-682 for the previous calendar year and, of that number, the number in which the court appointed a guardian ad litem, the number in which the court appointed counsel, the number in which the judge issued an order authorizing an abortion without notification, the number in which the judge denied such an order, and, of the last, the number of denials from which an appeal was filed, the number of appeals that resulted in denials being affirmed, and the number of appeals that resulted in reversals of such denials. Each clerk shall make such report by March 15 of each year for the previous calendar year. The individual reports made to the Administrative Office of the Courts shall be held confidential and not subject to disclosure under Article 4 of Chapter 18 of Title 50, relating to open records. The Administrative Office of the Courts shall provide aggregated statistics only in accordance with subsection (g) of Code Section 16-12-141.1. Such individual reports shall be destroyed six months after submission to the Administrative Office of the Courts.

(c) Pursuant to rules adopted by the Supreme Court of Georgia, on and after January 1, 2021, each clerk of the juvenile court shall collect data on each child alleged or adjudicated to be a delinquent child and transmit such data as required by such rules. The Supreme Court of Georgia shall make and publish in print or electronically such state-wide minimum standards and rules as it deems necessary to carry out this subsection. Each clerk of the juvenile court shall develop and enact policies and procedures necessary to carry out the standards and rules created by the Supreme Court of Georgia.

(d) Pursuant to rules adopted by the Supreme Court of Georgia, on and after January 1, 2021, each clerk of the juvenile court shall collect data on all cases in which a child alleged or adjudicated to be a child in need of services or a delinquent child is placed in foster care and has also been alleged or adjudicated to be a dependent child and shall transmit such data as required by such rules. Such data shall include, at a minimum, the adherence on each case by the court to the time frames contained in Code Section 15-11-102.

The 2020 amendment, effective July 1, 2020, in subsection (c), substituted "adopted by the Supreme Court of Georgia, on and after January 1, 2021" for "promulgated by the Judicial Council of Georgia, on and after January 1, 2019" in the first sentence and substituted "Supreme Court of Georgia" for "Judicial Council of Georgia" at the beginning of the second sentence and the end of the third sentence; and added subsection (d).

15-11-65. Training requirements for juvenile court clerks.

(a) Any person who is appointed as or is performing the duties of a clerk of the juvenile court shall satisfactorily complete 20 hours of training in the performance of the duties of a clerk of the juvenile court within the first 12 months following such appointment or the first performance of such duties.

(b) In each year after the initial appointment, any person who is appointed as or is performing the duties of a clerk of the juvenile court shall satisfactorily complete in that year 12 hours of additional training in the performance of such person's duties as clerk.

(c) Training pursuant to this Code section shall be provided by the Institute of Continuing Judicial Education of Georgia. Upon satisfactory completion of such training, a certificate issued by the institute shall be placed into the minutes of the juvenile court record in the county in which such person serves as a clerk of the juvenile court. All reasonable expenses of such training including, but not limited to, any tuition fixed by such institution shall be paid from county funds by the governing authority of the county for which the person serves as a clerk of the juvenile court, unless funding is provided from other sources.

(d) A judge of the juvenile court shall appoint a clerk pro tempore for that court in order for the regular clerk to attend required training. Such clerk pro tempore shall not be required to meet the training requirements for performing the clerk's duties.

(e) The provisions of this Code section shall not apply to clerks of juvenile courts who also act as clerks of superior courts and who already have mandatory training requirements in such capacity.

15-11-67. Duties of probation or community supervision officers.

(a) A county juvenile probation officer or DJJ staff member serving as a juvenile probation officer or community supervision officer, as appropriate:

(1) Shall make investigations, reports, and recommendations to the court as directed by this chapter;

(2) Shall supervise and assist a child placed on probation or under the protective supervision or care of such officer by order of the court or other authority of law;

(3) May, unless otherwise ordered by the court, determine if a child should be placed on unsupervised probation and, if so, place a child on unsupervised probation;

(4) Shall make appropriate referrals to other private or public agencies of the community if such assistance appears to be needed or desirable;

(5) May take into custody and detain a child who is under the supervision or care of such officer if such officer has reasonable cause to believe that such child's health or safety or that of another is in imminent danger or that such child may abscond or be removed from the jurisdiction of the court, or when so ordered by the court pursuant to this chapter;

(6) May not conduct accusatory proceedings against a child who is or may be under such officer's care or supervision;

(7) Shall perform all other functions designated by this chapter or by order of the court pursuant to this chapter. Any of the functions specified in this Code section may be performed in another state if authorized by the court located in this state and permitted by the laws of the other state; and when, in the judgment of such officer, such detention or custody is not warranted.

(8) Other laws to the contrary notwithstanding, no such officer shall be liable for the acts of a child not detained or taken into custody

(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a) of this Code section, DJJ, as the employer, shall maintain sole authority over the duties and responsibilities of all DJJ staff members serving as probation officers and the Department of Community Supervision shall maintain sole authority over the duties and responsibilities of all of such department's staff serving as community supervision officers.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-602, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-8 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-24.2, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Juvenile court probation officer had no authority to apply for search warrant. Huff v. Walker, 125 Ga. App. 251, 187 S.E.2d 343 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-602).

Construction with other law. — Juvenile's interference with a juvenile probation officer's attempt to take the juvenile into custody, after the juvenile tested positive for illegal drug use, was sufficient to support an adjudication for felony obstruction under O.C.G.A. § 16-10-24(b); moreover, the probation officer was a legally authorized person lawfully discharging a duty to do so pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24.2(5). In the Interest of M.M., 287 Ga. App. 233, 651 S.E.2d 155 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 95 (Ga. 2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24.2).

Conducting of accusatory proceedings against child. — It was error for a juvenile probation officer to conduct accusatory proceedings against a child who was or may be under the officer's care or supervision, even if a licensed attorney who thus could be considered "legal counsel," because the official whose statutory responsibilities include the supervision and assisting of juveniles could best serve that function if the official remained an objective and unbiased figure. In re P.L.S., 170 Ga. App. 74, 316 S.E.2d 175 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-8).

Consent to proceedings by juvenile probation officer waived error. — Appellant juvenile's failure to object to accusatory proceedings conducted by a juvenile probation officer denied appellant the right to rely on that error as a basis for reversal on appeal, but if such a procedure is allowed over proper objection appellate courts should not hesitate to reverse. In re P.L.S., 170 Ga. App. 74, 316 S.E.2d 175 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-8).

Commitment to Department of Juvenile Justice did not violate statute. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24.2 set forth the duties of a probation officer, and the defendant showed no merit in the defendant's argument that the commitment to the Department of Juvenile Justice violated that Code section. In the Interest of B. Q. L. E., 297 Ga. App. 273, 676 S.E.2d 742, cert. denied, No. S09C1197, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 787 (Ga. 2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24.2).

Authority of probation staff. — Department of Juvenile Justice's probation staff may assist prosecuting attorneys in obtaining necessary reports and files and in creating delinquency petitions but may not conduct an accusatory proceeding. The probation staff must also comply with valid court orders issued pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24.2(6). 2008 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2008-5 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24.2).

15-11-68. Duties of juvenile court intake officers; training.

(a) A juvenile court intake officer:

(1) Shall receive and examine complaints and charges of delinquency, of dependency, or that a child is a child in need of services for the purpose of considering the commencement of proceedings under this chapter;

(2) Shall make appropriate referrals to other private or public agencies of the community if such assistance appears to be needed or desirable;

(3) Shall compile on a regular basis the case files or a report on those cases that were informally adjusted for review by the judge;

(4) May not conduct accusatory proceedings against a child or draft judicial orders, official charges, or any other document which is required to be drafted by an attorney;

(5) Shall perform all other functions designated by this chapter or by order of the court pursuant to this chapter; and

(6) Except as provided in Article I, Section II, Paragraph IX(d) of the Constitution, no county juvenile court intake officer, or DJJ staff member serving as a juvenile court intake officer, shall be liable for the acts of a child not detained or taken into custody when, in the judgment of such officer, such detention or custody is not warranted.

(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a) of this Code section, DJJ, as the employer, shall maintain sole authority over the duties and responsibilities of all DJJ staff members serving as juvenile court intake officers. No DJJ staff member shall serve as a juvenile court intake officer in a dependency proceeding commenced under Article 3 of this chapter.

(c) Each juvenile court intake officer exercising the authority to remove a child pursuant to the provisions of Articles 1 and 3 of this chapter shall first successfully complete, each year, eight hours of appropriate training relevant to the performance of such determinations, including, but not limited to, training concerning contrary to the welfare determinations, reasonable efforts to prevent removal of a child and diligent search requirements consistent with Article 3 of this chapter, reasonable alternatives to foster care, and DFCS policies and procedures related to the removal of a child and placement of such child in foster care.

The 2019 amendment, effective April 18, 2019, added the second sentence in subsection (b) and added subsection (c).

15-11-69. Transfer of probation and intake services and employees to Department of Juvenile Justice.

(a) The probation and intake services of the juvenile court of each county may be transferred to and become a part of the state-wide juvenile and intake services and be fully funded through DJJ. The probation and intake officers of juvenile courts of those counties whose probation and intake services are transferred pursuant to this Code section shall become DJJ employees on the date of such transfer and on and after that date such employees shall be subject to the salary schedules and other DJJ personnel policies, except that the salaries of such employees shall not be reduced as a result of becoming DJJ employees.

(b) The probation and intake services of the juvenile court of a county may be transferred to DJJ by a local Act of the General Assembly that approves such transfer.

(c) Persons who were probation and intake officers of the juvenile court of a county on June 30, 1996, but who were transferred as probation and intake officers to and became a part of the state-wide juvenile and intake services system fully funded through DJJ before January 1, 1999, shall be covered employees in the classified service as defined in Code Section 45-20-2.

15-11-70. "Risk and needs assessment" defined; establishment of family treatment court division; procedures; fees; acceptance of grants or donations.

(a)(1) As used in this subsection, the term "risk and needs assessment" means an actuarial tool, approved by the Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia and validated on a targeted population, scientifically proven to determine an individual's risk to recidivate and to identify criminal risk factors that, when properly addressed, can reduce such individual's likelihood of committing future criminal behavior.

(2) Any juvenile court may establish a family treatment court division to provide an alternative to the traditional judicial system for the disposition of dependancy cases and for assisting superior courts with criminal cases referred to such division under Code Section 15-11-15. The goal of a family treatment court division is to:

(A) Reduce alcohol or drug abuse and addiction for respondents in dependency proceedings;

(B) Improve permanency outcomes for families when dependency is based in part on alcohol or drug use and addiction;

(C) Increase the personal, familial, and societal accountability of respondents in dependency proceedings; and

(D) Promote effective intervention and use of resources among child welfare personnel, law enforcement agencies, treatment providers, community agencies, and the courts.

(3) In any criminal case transferred pursuant to Code Section 15-11-15, when the defendant meets the eligibility criteria for the family treatment court division, such case may be assigned to the family treatment court division:

(A) Prior to the entry of the sentence, if the prosecuting attorney consents;

(B) As part of a sentence in a case; or

(C) Upon consideration of a petition to revoke probation.

(4) Each family treatment court division shall establish a planning group to develop a work plan. The planning group shall include the judges, prosecuting attorneys, special assistant attorneys general, public defenders, attorneys who represent children and parents, law enforcement officials, probation officers, community supervision officers, court appointed special advocates, guardians ad litem, DFCS employees, and other individuals having expertise in services available to families in dependency proceedings. The work plan shall address the operational, coordination, resource, information management, and evaluation needs of the family treatment court division. The work plan shall include family treatment court division policies and practices related to implementing the standards and practices developed pursuant to paragraph (5) of this subsection. The work plan shall ensure a risk and needs assessment is used to identify the likelihood of recidivating and identify the needs that, when met, reduce recidivism. The work plan shall include eligibility criteria for the family treatment court division. The family treatment court division shall combine judicial supervision, treatment of family treatment court division participants, drug testing, and mental health treatment.

(5)(A) The Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia shall establish standards and practices for family treatment court divisions, taking into consideration guidelines and principles based on current research and findings that are published by experts on family treatment health needs and treatment options in a dependency setting. Standards and practices shall include, but shall not be limited to, the use of a risk and needs assessment to identify the likelihood of recidivating and identify the needs that, when met, reduce recidivism. The Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia shall update its standards and practices to incorporate research, findings, and developments in the family treatment court field. Each family treatment court division shall adopt policies and practices that are consistent with the standards and practices published by the Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia.

(B) The Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia shall provide technical assistance to family treatment court divisions to assist them with the implementation of policies and practices, including, but not limited to, guidance on the implementation of risk and needs assessments in family treatment court divisions.

(C) The Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia shall create and manage a certification and peer review process to ensure family treatment court divisions are adhering to the Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia's standards and practices and shall create a waiver process for family treatment court divisions to seek an exception to the Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia's standards and practices. The Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia shall create a certification process to allow a court to demonstrate its need for additional state grant funds, as authorized by Code Section 15-11-52, for one or more part-time judges to operate a family treatment court division. In order to receive state appropriated funds, any family treatment court division established on and after July 1, 2017, shall be certified pursuant to this subparagraph or, for good cause shown to the Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia, shall receive a waiver from the Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia.

(D) On and after July 1, 2017, the award of any state funds for a family treatment court division shall be conditioned upon a family treatment court division attaining certification or a waiver by the Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia. On or before September 1, the Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia shall publish an annual report listing certified family treatment court divisions.

(E) The Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia shall develop and manage an electronic information system for performance measurement and accept submission of performance data in a consistent format from all family treatment court divisions. The Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia shall identify elements necessary for performance measurement, including, but not limited to, the number of children reunited with participants in a family treatment court division, drug testing results, drug testing failures, participant employment, the number of participants who successfully complete the program, and the number of participants who fail to complete the program.

(F) On or before July 1, 2017, and every three years thereafter, the Council of Accountability Court Judges of Georgia shall conduct a performance peer review of the family treatment court divisions for the purpose of improving family treatment court division policies and practices and the certification and recertification process.

(6) A court instituting the family treatment court division may request any of the following individuals to serve in the family treatment court division:

(A) One or more prosecuting attorneys designated by the prosecuting attorney for the jurisdiction;

(B) A special assistant attorney general; or

(C) One or more assistant public defenders designated by the public defender, if any.

(7) The clerk of the juvenile court that is instituting the family treatment court division or such clerk's designee shall serve as the clerk of the family treatment court division.

(8) The court instituting the family treatment court division may request community supervision officers, probation officers, and other employees of the court to perform duties for the family treatment court division. Such individuals shall perform duties as directed by the judges of the family treatment court division.

(9) The court instituting the family treatment court division may enter into agreements with other courts and agencies for the assignment of personnel and probation supervision from other courts and agencies to the family treatment court division.

(10) Expenses for salaries, equipment, services, and supplies incurred in implementing this Code section may be paid from state funds, funds of the county or political subdivision implementing such family treatment court division, federal grant funds, and funds from private donations.

(11) A court instituting a family treatment court division shall comply with the periodic review process as required by Code Section 15-11-216.

(b) Each family treatment court division shall establish criteria which define the successful completion of the family treatment court division program. If the family treatment court division participant who was referred to the family treatment court division on a criminal charge by a superior court successfully completes the family treatment court division program, a report of such completion shall be communicated to the referring superior court judge.

(c) Any statement made by a family treatment court division participant as part of participation in such court division, or any report made by the staff of such court division or program connected to such court division, regarding a participant's substance usage shall not be admissible as evidence against the participant in any legal proceeding or prosecution; provided, however, that, if the participant violates the conditions of his or her participation in the program or is terminated from the family treatment court division, the reasons for the violation or termination may be considered in sanctioning, sentencing, or otherwise disposing of the participant's case.

(d) Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, family treatment court division staff shall be provided, upon request, with access to all records relevant to the treatment of the family treatment court division participant from any state or local government agency. All such records and the contents thereof shall be treated as confidential, shall not be disclosed to any person outside of the family treatment court division, and shall not be subject to Article 4 of Chapter 18 of Title 50, relating to open records, or subject to subpoena, discovery, or introduction into evidence in any civil or criminal proceeding. Such records and the contents thereof shall be maintained by the family treatment court division and originating court in a confidential file not available to the public.

(e) Any fees received by a family treatment court division from a family treatment court division participant as payment for substance abuse treatment and services shall not be considered as court costs or a fine.

(f) The court may have the authority to accept grants, donations, and other proceeds from outside sources for the purpose of supporting the family treatment court division. Any such grants, donations, or proceeds shall be retained by the family treatment court division for expenses.

Deprivation

Broad definition of "deprived child." — Former statute defined "deprived child" in broad enough terminology to allow sufficient latitude of discretion for juvenile court. Moss v. Moss, 135 Ga. App. 401, 218 S.E.2d 93 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Definition of "deprived child" focuses upon needs of child regardless of parental fault. Brown v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 136 Ga. App. 308, 220 S.E.2d 790 (1975); Cox v. Department of Human Resources, 148 Ga. App. 43, 250 S.E.2d 839 (1978); Hainut v. Houston County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 154 Ga. App. 556, 269 S.E.2d 61 (1980); Gardner v. Lenon, 154 Ga. App. 748, 270 S.E.2d 36 (1980) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

In considering a deprivation petition, the petition is brought on behalf of the child and it is the child's welfare and not who is responsible for the conditions which amount to deprivation that is the issue. Furthermore, such deprivation must be shown by clear and convincing evidence. In the Interest of D.L.W., 264 Ga. App. 168, 590 S.E.2d 183 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Primary factor in determining whether children are deprived is not the parents' circumstances, but the children's need. In the Interest of R.M., 276 Ga. App. 707, 624 S.E.2d 182 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Petition failed to allege valid allegations of deprivation. — Granting of temporary custody of the mother's child to the mother's ex-boyfriend and his wife following their petition to have the boy adjudicated deprived was inappropriate because the juvenile court lacked jurisdiction over the proceeding. The petition did not contain valid allegations of deprivation under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) and nothing in the record demonstrated that present drug use on the part of the mother had a negative effect on the child rising to the level of present deprivation; the petition was an attempt to obtain custody of the child. In the Interest of C. L. C., 299 Ga. App. 729, 683 S.E.2d 690 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Children with special needs. — When employing the two-step test before terminating a parent's rights, a juvenile court order that a child was deprived, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), which was not appealed, was binding on a mother and satisfied the first factor of the test under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310); the juvenile court determined that due in part to a medical problem, the child had special needs and the mother lacked the ability to provide for the physical, mental, emotional, and moral conditions and needs of the child. In the Interest of J.T.W., 270 Ga. App. 26, 606 S.E.2d 59 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Because the juvenile court properly focused on the subject parent's abandonment of the child in support of the court's deprivation finding, and hence, the focus could not be on the adequate level of care given by the child's maternal grandparent, the court's deprivation finding was supported by sufficient evidence. Moreover, the state adequately showed that the parent was incapable of caring for any child, let alone this child, given that the child had special medical needs. In the Interest of A.B., 289 Ga. App. 655, 658 S.E.2d 205 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Present deprivation required. — Juvenile courts of the state have jurisdiction with regard to a child who is alleged to be deprived, not a child who has allegedly been or will allegedly be deprived while in the legal custody of a nonresident parent. Lewis v. Winzenreid, 263 Ga. 459, 435 S.E.2d 602 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court's concern that a mother's children, who were previously deemed deprived, might be deprived in the future if the mother did not have an acceptable plan to prevent future occurrences of domestic violence did not support extending an agency's custody of the children due to a finding that the children continued to be deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107); there was no evidence that the mother's present actions rose to the level of deprivation of the children. In the Interest of T. D., 309 Ga.

App. 9, 709 S.E.2d 883 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Standing to challenge deprivation finding. — Despite being the child's primary caretaker since the death of the child's parent, because the child's grandparent had no legal right to custody of the child, the grandparent was not aggrieved by an order finding the child deprived, an award of custody to the child's cousin, and an attorney-fee award and, therefore, had no standing to challenge such order. In the Interest of J.R.P., 287 Ga. App. 621, 652 S.E.2d 206 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 207 (Ga. 2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Merger of charges against the defendant for cruelty to children and contributing to the deprivation of a minor was not required because, although based on similar facts, each charge required proof of a fact not required to prove the other. Porter v. State, 243 Ga. App. 498, 532 S.E.2d 407 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Findings necessary. — Because the trial court treated a deprivation determination as part of a custody determination, which does not require specific findings of fact, the case was remanded with direction that the court prepare findings of fact employing statutory standards for a determination of deprivation. In re J.B., 241 Ga. App. 679, 527 S.E.2d 275 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court's conclusion that returning a child to the mother's home after the child was in agency custody would be contrary to the child's welfare because of domestic violence issues and that the child's placement in a residential treatment program was appropriate for the child's needs was improper under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) as the juvenile court had to make appropriate findings of fact upon which the court based the court's finding of deprivation. In the Interest of T. D., 309 Ga. App. 9, 709 S.E.2d 883 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Findings are binding. — Since a parent did not appeal a trial court's finding that the child was deprived, the parent was bound by that finding in the subsequent termination of parental rights proceeding. In the Interest of T.A., 279 Ga. App. 377, 631 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

1. In General

Consideration of past conduct in finding deprivation. — Mother's argument that the events leading to the instant deprivation petition represented a "one-time incident" during which she simply "fell off the wagon" lacked any merit because even though there was some evidence that the mother has experienced brief periods of relative stability as an adult, the record showed that she had been unable to maintain such stability; the court could consider the past conduct of the mother in making the court's determination that the deprivation of the children would continue if the children were left in the mother's care. In the Interest of H.E., 272 Ga. App. 604, 612 S.E.2d 909 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court may consider a mother's inability to properly care for one child as evidence that the mother will not be able to care for the mother's other children. In the Interest of R. B., 322 Ga. App. 421, 745 S.E.2d 677 (2013).

Deprivation of love and nurture is equally as serious as mental or physical disability. Elrod v. Hall County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 136 Ga. App. 251, 220 S.E.2d 726 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Unfortunate circumstances do not excuse improper care. — While because of unfortunate economic or personal circumstances every family cannot demand nor expect an always adequate supply of the material necessities and conveniences for which the standard of living in the United States justly creates an expectation, at the same time occurrence of those unfortunate circumstances does not create carte blanche for ignoring proper care of dependent children. Vermilyea v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 746, 272 S.E.2d 588 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Quality of evidence affects determination of deprivation. — Court must wait for deprivation to actually occur. Past acts of deprivation are certainly stronger proof and more convincing evidence upon which to decide the issue. But there is no reason why a determination of deprivation may not be made on proof that the conditions under which the child would be raised in the parent's home strongly indicate that deprivation will occur in the future. Jones v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 371, 271 S.E.2d 27 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

1. In General (Cont'd)

Discretion of court in determining deprivation. — Determination of deprivation and the decision to terminate parental rights based thereon is an exercise of discretion by the trial court and if based upon evidence will not be controlled by a reviewing court. Roberts v. State, 141 Ga. App. 268, 233 S.E.2d 224 (1977), overruled on other grounds, Chancey v. Department of Human Resources, 156 Ga. App. 338, 274 S.E.2d 728 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Deprivation from educational neglect. — Evidence was sufficient to support the juvenile court's findings that the parents' children were deprived due to educational neglect as evidenced by the children's truancy, the home was unsafe with pill bottles laying around and a nail gun under the sink, and the parents' drug abuse. In the Interest of J.C., 264 Ga. App. 598, 591 S.E.2d 475 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Findings made in unrecorded hearing reversed. — Because the juvenile court primarily based the court's decision that a parent's two children were deprived, awarding temporary custody of the children to the county, on evidence received at an unrecorded hearing, and a waiver requiring a transcript of that hearing was not in evidence, those findings were reversed, and the case was remanded. In the Interest of D.P., 284 Ga. App. 453, 644 S.E.2d 299 (2007) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Discovery from guardian ad litem's file. — Juvenile order granting a guardian a protective order against a mother was vacated because the juvenile court erred in imposing blanket protection for the guardian ad litem's file under a privilege exception to discovery; on remand, the juvenile court was directed to exercise the court's discretion to determine whether the material sought by the mother was privileged or otherwise should not be subject to discovery. In the Interest of J. N., 344 Ga. App. 409, 810 S.E.2d 191 (2018).

2. Deprivation Found

Absence of proper parental care. — In a criminal trial on charges that the defendant allowed the repeated rapes of the defendant's 11-year-old child, the rule of lenity did not require that the defendant's felony convictions for being a party to rape and cruelty to children to be subsumed by the misdemeanor conviction for contributing to the deprivation of a minor because different facts were necessary to prove the offenses. The rape conviction required proof under O.C.G.A. §§ 16-2-20 and 16-6-1(a)(1) that the defendant took affirmative steps to aid the rapist. The cruelty to children conviction required proof under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-70(b) that the defendant caused excessive mental pain to the child. The conviction for contributing to the deprivation of a minor required proof under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) and O.C.G.A. § 16-12-1(b)(3) that the defendant failed to provide the child with proper care necessary for the child's health, which the state proved by showing that the defendant failed to seek prenatal care for the child even though the defendant knew that the child was pregnant. Johnson v. State, 283 Ga. App. 99, 640 S.E.2d 644 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Given evidence that the defendant's two young children were left unattended, resulting in one going outside in near freezing weather without the proper clothing, causing that child's body temperature to drop two degrees and suffer mild hypothermia, the defendant's two convictions for contributing to the deprivation of a minor were upheld on appeal. Ellis v. State, 283 Ga. App. 808, 642 S.E.2d 869

Appeals court found that the evidence supported the juvenile court's finding that a parent's six children were deprived, and that the unexplained abuse was the result of the parent's inability to protect the children as the evidence showed that: (1) one child suffered unexplained sexual abuse while in the parent's care, and sustained a head injury while allegedly in the parent's aunt's care; and (2) another child was molested while the parent was asleep. In the Interest of S.Y., 284 Ga. App. 218, 644 S.E.2d 145 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Because the older of two children sustained multiple unexplained fractures while in the custody of the child's parents, this was sufficient evidence authorizing the juvenile court's finding that the older child was deprived and further supported evidence that a younger sibling was also deprived; thus, the juvenile court was authorized to find a lack of proper parental care and control based on the parent's failure to protect both children from injury. In the Interest of A.R., 287 Ga. App. 334, 651 S.E.2d 467 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Trial court properly terminated parental rights of two biological parents to their four children, ages seven, five, four, and two, as clear and convincing evidence established that parents were unable to feed and house the children and that they had essentially abandoned their parental responsibilities; examples of parental misconduct and inability of the parents to provide for the children included the parents' failure to show significant compliance with the reunification goals, their eviction from their home, and their failure to make regular visitation with the children. In the Interest of C.G., 289 Ga. App. 844, 658 S.E.2d 448 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Termination of a parent's rights to two children was upheld on appeal as the evidence supported the juvenile court's finding that the children were deprived at the time of the termination hearing based on the parent's failure to provide proper parental care and control. The evidence also established that for over three years, the parent failed to make any progress in meeting reunification goals that were set, which demonstrated that the children's deprivation was likely to continue, and the best interests of the children included finding stability with the foster parent, who desired to adopt the children. In the Interest of A.G., 293 Ga. App. 383, 667 S.E.2d 176 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Deprivation prior to birth. — Juvenile court erred in taking judicial notice of a psychological evaluation and citizen review panel's report issued in a mother's case prior to a child's birth because the juvenile court could not consider the evaluation or report to determine whether the child was without proper parental care or control or that the mother was unfit to parent the child; neither of the documents were tendered into evidence, and there was no testimony as to the contents of the documents. In the Interest of S. D., 316 Ga. App. 86, 728 S.E.2d 749 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parent imprisoned. — The statutory finding of deprivation is based on an absence of proper parental care or control, not the temporary guardianship provided when the parent is in prison. In re J.L.M., 204 Ga. App. 46, 418 S.E.2d 415 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was upheld on appeal since the evidence showed that the mother never bonded with the child, was repeatedly incarcerated, and never attempted to contact the child's caregiver, the mother's aunt, to whom guardianship had been granted; the juvenile court's determination that the child was deprived and that such deprivation was likely to continue based on the mother's continuous criminal activity was supported by the evidence. In the Interest of S.R.M., 283 Ga. App. 463, 641 S.E.2d 666 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Although children were deprived under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) because their parent, who had been incarcerated on forgery and firearms charges, was living in a homeless shelter at the time of the termination hearing and was then unable to provide them with proper parental care, it had not been proven that the causes of the children's deprivation were likely to continue; the termination petition was filed while the parent was still incarcerated, and the parent was not given any realistic opportunity to fulfill the goals of a reunification plan. In the Interest of R.C.M., 284 Ga. App. 791, 645 S.E.2d 363 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Deprivation from inadequate treatment of psychological problems. — Juvenile court did not err in finding that a 12-year-old child was deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) due to the child's severe psychological problems, which required in-patient treatment, because the child's mother had been unable to obtain the recommended treatment for the child and the child's mental health was deteriorating. In the Interest of V.A.D., 305 Ga. App. 23, 699 S.E.2d 346 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Evidence of deprived child. — Judge found by clear and convincing evidence that the child was a deprived child within the meaning of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2 and that such deprivation was likely to continue; that the continued deprivation was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the child since the mother was serving jail time for a felony conviction, was a drug user, and failed to communicate with the child for over a year. In re H.M.T., 203 Ga. App. 247, 416 S.E.2d 567 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Evidence was sufficient to permit the juvenile court to find clear and convincing evidence of the child's deprivation and that the child's mother's misconduct or inability to care for the child's needs resulted in abuse or neglect sufficient to render the mother unfit to retain custody. In re C.N., 231 Ga. App. 639, 500 S.E.2d 400 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Since the evidence at the hearing described the home life of a mother's three children and her failure to comply with Department of Family and Children's Service requests, it was sufficient for the juvenile court to find that one of the children was a deprived child. In re C.S., 236 Ga. App. 312, 511 S.E.2d 895 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parents' choice in exposing their child to an inappropriate and dangerous living environment showed a lack of parental judgment and careless disregard for the child's health and safety that was sufficient to support a finding that the child was deprived. In the Interest of B.M.B., 241 Ga. App. 609, 527 S.E.2d 250 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

On appeal, the mother argued that the juvenile court erred in considering her testimony during the deprivation hearing because the court had previously found her incompetent, but even without the mother's testimony, ample evidence supported the juvenile court's decision to extend the deprivation order because the juvenile court found that the child was deprived because the mother: (1) had not obtained counseling; (2) had not found stable housing; (3) did not have any source of income; (4) failed to attend parenting classes; and (5) failed to comply with the reunification plan. Additionally, because the crux of the juvenile court's inquiry was the mother's competence as a parent, it was illogical to preclude a trial court from considering the mother's testimony for that purpose. In the Interest of B.B., 267 Ga. App. 360, 599 S.E.2d 304 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court did not err in finding that there was ample evidence to support the court's finding that two children were deprived, that remaining in their mother's care was contrary to their welfare, and that the children needed protection while she endeavored to comply with a reunification plan because the mother repeatedly relapsed back into an unstable dangerous lifestyle, particularly when she was involved with abusive men or those with substance abuse problems. In the Interest of H.E., 272 Ga. App. 604, 612 S.E.2d 909 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's determination that a mother's child was deprived, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), due to the lack of proper parental care, that such deprivation was likely to continue or not be remedied due to the mother's failure to take responsibility for the child and to work at succeeding at the goals of the case plan, and that such deprivation would cause serious harm to the child, who needed a stable family environment; accordingly, termination of the mother's parental rights was proper pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320). In the Interest of B.S., 274 Ga. App. 647, 618 S.E.2d 695 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Children were properly found to be deprived, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), because their mother did not show that she was able to support them, she showed no past or present ability to care for them or house them, and she had exposed them to drug and alcohol abuse by other family members, as well as domestic violence. In the Interest of L.F., 275 Ga. App. 247, 620 S.E.2d 476 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Termination of a father's parental rights was supported by evidence of the adverse impact on the child of the mother's continuous drug abuse, the father's neglect of the father's other children, and by the two years the father waited before filing a petition to legitimate the child; the termination of a mother's parental rights was supported by evidence of the mother's egregious drug abuse, the repeated removal of the children from the mother's care, and the mother's failure to comply with the case plan goals. In the Interest of T.L., 279 Ga. App. 7, 630 S.E.2d 154 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parent's admission to methamphetamine use during a period that a child protective services investigation was pending, when the children had recently come into the parent's care, and after the parent had agreed to a drug screen, allowed a trial court to infer that the parent had a chronic drug problem which adversely affected the children, and supported the trial court's finding that the children were deprived. In the Interest of K.W., 279 Ga. App. 319, 631 S.E.2d 110 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Although a parent made substantial progress on a reunification plan while incarcerated, an order extending temporary custody for an additional year in favor of the Department of Family and Children Services was upheld on appeal as sufficient evidence was presented that the parent was unable to: (1) establish stable housing; (2) complete a substance abuse assessment; and (3) demonstrate six months of clean drug screens. In the Interest of R.B., 285 Ga. App. 556, 647 S.E.2d 300 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

On appeal from an order finding the subject child was deprived, assuming certain findings of the juvenile court were not supported by the record, as the appealing parent contended, evidence that the child was physically and emotionally abused by that parent, and that the child lived in an unstable environment, was sufficient to support the order of deprivation. In the Interest of M.K., 288 Ga. App. 71, 653 S.E.2d 354 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Based on clear and convincing evidence that one parent admittedly suffered from a schizoaffective disorder that was both ignored and not treated with medication, and the other parent denied the existence of that disorder by continuing to leave the child in the first parent's care, sufficient evidence supported the juvenile court's finding that the child was deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107). Moreover, the appeals court was not required to wait until the child suffered from harm before finding that child to be deprived. In the Interest of D.H.D., 289 Ga. App. 32, 656 S.E.2d 183 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

As a parent's actions, including not feeding the child or changing the child's diaper often enough, placed the child at risk, and the parent received one-on-one instruction and training for a considerable period of time, yet failed to put the training into practice and continued to risk the child's well-being, there was clear and convincing evidence to support the trial court's finding that the child was a "deprived child" as defined by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A). In the Interest of W. A. P., 293 Ga. App. 433, 667 S.E.2d 197 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Petition made valid allegations of deprivation as defined by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), including the mother's leaving the children with the father and not visiting them, the mother's lack of appropriate housing and stable employment, the mother's lack of financial support for the children, and the mother's use of one child's disability benefits to pay the mother's own bills rather than to care for the child. In the Interest of M. M., 315 Ga. App. 673, 727 S.E.2d 279 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Order finding the children to be deprived and discontinuing reunification services was supported by the evidence; the fact that the father was unable to provide parental care and control of the children at the time of the deprivation hearing because of the conditions of the father's bond constituted clear and convincing evidence that the children were deprived. In addition, there was evidence that the father moved the children to three different states to hide the children from the juvenile court, and the father had abused the children's mother causing the mother to leave the children to escape the father. In the Interest of A. S., 318 Ga. App. 457, 734 S.E.2d 225 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court properly determined that a mother's child was deprived within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2 based on evidence in the record that the mother was living in the home where the putative father was residing despite the sexual abuse allegation the mother made against the father and, the mother failed to comply with the case plan for another child, including an investigation of the sexual abuse allegations against the father. In the Interest of R. B., 322 Ga. App. 421, 745 S.E.2d 677 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

When it is established that a parent has previously deprived, neglected, or abused one or more of their children and that the detrimental conditions existing at that time have not significantly changed, a juvenile court is under no obligation to return a child to the parent and wait until the child is harmed in order to find that there is evidence of that child's current deprivation.Specifically, a juvenile court is allowed to hear and weigh evidence of the past deprivation of other siblings when assessing the current deprivation of a child. In the Interest of R. B., 322 Ga. App. 421, 745 S.E.2d 677 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Exposure to "sexualized environment". — There was ample evidence a child was deprived because a psychologist found that the child exhibited sexual knowledge that was unusual for the child's age and that the knowledge could indicate the child was exposed to a "sexualized environment," pornography, or sexual abuse; the child exhibited reactive attachment disorder as a result of being frequently "uprooted" and exposed to a transient and chaotic lifestyle, the child needed a stable environment in which the child could feel safe, and that the child would need long-term psychological treatment to address relationship issues. In the Interest of H.E., 272 Ga. App. 604, 612 S.E.2d 909 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Child with multiple fractures. — Deprivation finding was supported by sufficient evidence which showed that the child victim suffered multiple fractures all over the child's body which indicated that the fractures occurred at different times, the child had no disease predisposing the child to the fractures, and a doctor testified that the injuries were consistent with abusive non-accidental trauma. In the Interest of T.J., 273 Ga. App. 547, 615 S.E.2d 613 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parental admission of not wanting to parent. — There was clear and convincing evidence that supported a juvenile court's determination that a parent's child was deprived pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2 due to the parent's admission that the parent did not want to parent the child, the parent's actions which were contrary to the child's best interest, the fact that the parent was placed under house arrest following two arrests for assault, and the parent's failure to comply with the goals of the parent's reunification plan within the context of a parental rights termination proceeding. In the Interest of J.D., 280 Ga. App. 861, 635 S.E.2d 226 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Failure to maintain parental bond. — Evidence showed that two children were deprived for purposes of the termination of a parent's rights as: (1) the children had been found to be deprived and were not in the parent's custody; (2) the parent failed to maintain a parental bond as the parent did not visit the children once in nine months, failed to give the children birthday presents, and did not contact the foster parents; (3) the parent failed to complete the case plan although the parent completed parenting classes and a substance abuse evaluation, the parent moved at least nine times in two years and did not maintain regular contact with a child services agency; and (4) the parent paid $60 of $900 owed in child support and failed to support the children. In the Interest of C.M., 282 Ga. App. 502, 639 S.E.2d 323 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Sexual abuse. — Evidence supported a finding that two of a mother's children were deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2 when the mother continued to expose the children to their grandfather even though she believed an allegation that he had sexually abused one of them, repeatedly told DFCS personnel that the children were liars despite her own history of sexual abuse as a child, and continued to live with her fiancé despite allegations that he had sexually abused the other child; furthermore, several referrals had been made to the DFCS pertaining to the children, including a substantiated claim of physical abuse. In the Interest of N.D., 286 Ga. App. 236, 648 S.E.2d 771 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parental inability resulting from death of other child. — Trial court properly found that children were deprived; evidence authorized the court to find that anguish the parent felt at the death of another child, combined with other emotional and mental factors, made the parent unable or unwilling to provide the surviving children with proper parental care or control and that this situation, which existed in 2006, had not been remedied in 2007. In the Interest of T.P., 291 Ga. App. 83, 661 S.E.2d 211 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Evidence from forensic pediatrician and clinical psychologist. — There was no merit to a father's argument that the trial court erred in admitting certain evidence in finding that three children were deprived and in authorizing the grant of a motion for nonreunification with the father. Although the father claimed that certain documents contained hearsay, it was presumed that the trial court in a nonjury trial would select only legal evidence; the father had not shown that the opinions of a forensic pediatrician and a clinical psychologist who were qualified as experts should have been excluded; the father had not made any argument as to how he was prejudiced by evidence apparently introduced against the mother; and an indictment for one child's injuries was properly admitted as the father's custody status was an issue in the case. In the Interest of A.R., 295 Ga. App. 22, 670 S.E.2d 858 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Psychological testimony on developmental delay. — Evidence was sufficient to show that three children were deprived and to authorize the grant of a motion for nonreunification with their father. There was evidence that one child was seriously and intentionally injured while in either the sole or joint care of the father; the psychologist who evaluated the children, as well as their foster parent, testified as to numerous ways the children were developmentally delayed when initially taken into protective custody; and the father cited no evidence that he had made any attempt to maintain a parental bond with any of his children, met any of the other goals of the reunification plans, or otherwise provided for the needs of his children. In the Interest of A.R., 295 Ga. App. 22, 670 S.E.2d 858 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parental mental illness. — Despite evidence that a parent had fulfilled many of the goals set for the parent by a juvenile court, sufficient evidence supported the court's finding that, as a result of the parent's mental illness, the parent could not adequately care for the parent's child, even if the parent's unfitness was unintentional. Therefore, sufficient evidence supported the juvenile court's conclusion that the child was deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) as to the parent. In re J. G., 308 Ga. App. 127, 706 S.E.2d 741 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Inadequate parental supervision. — Because a mother's children had been found to be deprived, as defined in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), because her persistent failure to adequately supervise the children supported a finding that the deprivation was likely to continue, and because continued deprivation was likely to seriously harm the children, the mother's parental rights were properly terminated. In the Interest of T. A. H., 310 Ga. App. 93, 712 S.E.2d 115 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parent imprisoned. — Parent's continued incarceration at the time of a termination of parental rights hearing authorized the court to find that the parent's children were presently deprived. In the Interest of D.T.A., 312 Ga. App. 26, 717 S.E.2d 536 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Unsubstantiated claims of child's illness. — A 12-year-old child was deprived, given evidence that the child's mother made unsubstantiated claims that the child had 34 types of seizure disorders as well as ten to eleven deadly allergies, could not read more than 10 books a year in school, and could not bring books home from school; and the father testified that he would continue working, leaving the child in the care of the mother. In the Interest of A.L., 313 Ga. App. 858, 723 S.E.2d 76 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Failure to complete counseling. — Juvenile court properly held that a 13-year-old grandson continued to be deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) because clear and convincing evidence established that the child was without the care necessary for the child's mental or emotional health based on the grandmother/guardian failing to complete family counseling as required. In the Interest of J. B., 319 Ga. App. 796, 738 S.E.2d 639 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Videotaping, stripping, and spanking resulted in deprivation. — Evidence that the children's mother permitted and/or assisted her husband in making videotapes for distribution of the children being stripped and spanked was sufficient to show that the children were deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107). In the Interest of J.P., 253 Ga. App. 732, 560 S.E.2d 318 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Medical issues resulting in deprivation. — Clear and convincing evidence supported an order adjudicating two children deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) because their sibling died of complications from tuberculosis (TB) after not receiving medical treatment for at least a month, the father had been twice diagnosed with active TB, but refused to admit he had TB, and the mother refused to take medication to keep her latent TB from becoming active, and would not admit that TB had anything to do with the death of the sibling. In the Interest of R.M., 276 Ga. App. 707, 624 S.E.2d 182 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

An order finding that a mother's two children were deprived was upheld on appeal since the evidence established that the mother's 12-year-old daughter was pregnant with the mother's 38-year-old boyfriend's child and the daughter had at least four sexual partners since the age of nine, and the mother's son had cavities so large that the cavities were visible in the boy's teeth and he had a very poor educational status; also, the mother failed to accept responsibility for the condition of the children. In the Interest of A.S., 285 Ga. App. 563, 646 S.E.2d 756 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Grandparent caused deprivation. — When a grandparent who had adopted three grandchildren struck one in the face, leaving a mark, pushed a child into a tub of water after asking if the child wanted to drown, spanked the children with a belt, and struck one child with a belt buckle and another with an extension cord, there was sufficient evidence of deprivation under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107). In the Interest of T.R., 284 Ga. App. 742, 644 S.E.2d 880 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Alcohol abuse and domestic violence resulting in deprivation. — In a deprivation case involving four children, sufficient evidence existed to support the order adjudicating the children deprived since the evidence established that the parents admitted chronically abusing alcohol and admitted that such abuse lead to domestic violence; the father of the children falsely accused child molestation against one of the children, which affected that child so badly that the child refused to live at home and required psychiatric treatment, and even without testimony as to the effect on the children, the juvenile court was authorized to infer from the evidence that the alcohol abuse and domestic violence in the home had an adverse effect on the minor children. In the Interest of E.D., 287 Ga. App. 152, 650 S.E.2d 800 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Molestation resulting in deprivation. — Trial court properly found that a child was deprived and placed her in the temporary custody of her grandmother, given the evidence that the mother's boyfriend was molesting the child, that the mother knew of allegations that the boyfriend was molesting the child but continued to live with him, that the mother did not seek medical treatment for the child's vaginal rashes, and that the child had exhibited abnormal behavior over a period of months. In the Interest of L.A.T., 291 Ga. App. 312, 661 S.E.2d 679 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

In a mother's appeal of a juvenile court's declaration that a child was deprived, the juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in making that conclusion based on the sexual abuse of the child by the stepfather because the record established by clear and convincing evidence that the mother did not fully appreciate all that had to be done to protect the child and the child was minimizing the abuse and masking the continuing emotional impact of the experience due to psychological pressure from the mother. In the Interest of A. P., 299 Ga. App. 886, 684 S.E.2d 22 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

False allegations against spouse result in deprivation. — Children, ages four and six, were deprived as defined in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) based on their mother's unwarranted and unrelenting insistence that their father, whom she was divorcing, had abused them, subjecting the children to repeated forensic interviews and invasive medical examinations, despite being warned that these repeated interviews were harmful to the children. In the Interest of S.K., 301 Ga. App. 35, 686 S.E.2d 814 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Since the evidence in the record showed that the child had been subjected to numerous medical examinations for sexual abuse at the mother's behest, in an apparent effort to frustrate or foreclose the father's right of visitation, and she persisted in having the child examined for possible sexual abuse, the juvenile court properly found that the mother's conduct was egregious and was properly considered by the juvenile court in reaching the court's deprivation finding. In the Interest of M.E., 265 Ga. App. 412, 593 S.E.2d 924 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

not err in adjudicating a child deprived and granting temporary custody of the child to the Department of Family and Children Services because the juvenile court did not rely mainly on hearsay testimony to establish the facts on which the court based the court's deprivation finding; the record contained clear and convincing evidence establishing that the child's sibling died under circumstances that constituted substantial evidence that such injury or death resulted from parental neglect or abuse pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(B) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311), and the record also contained evidence that the child was physically abused while in the parent's custody and, therefore, lacked the proper parental care necessary for physical and emotional health. In the Interest of K.B., 302 Ga. App. 50, 690 S.E.2d 627 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parental mental illness. — Juvenile court's order finding a one-year-old child to be deprived was upheld on appeal as clear and convincing evidence existed that: (1) one parent suffered from a psychological disorder, which was not controlled by medication, and caused that parent to have delusions; and (2) the other parent, knowing the aforementioned condition of the first parent, left the child in that parent's care. In the Interest of M.D., 283 Ga. App. 805, 642 S.E.2d 863 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Termination order was upheld on appeal because the juvenile court was presented with clear and convincing proof sufficient to support the termination of parental rights: (1) the parent's mental health problems were unlikely to be remedied, resulting in a lack of proper parental care or control and the likelihood that the parent would not be able to provide a stable home; and (2) the parent failed to protect the children from harm in the past. Moreover, as a result of the aforementioned, the children faced a fairly grim scenario of mental health concerns of increasing severity as the children aged. In the Interest of H.K., 288 Ga. App. 831, 655 S.E.2d 698 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

There was sufficient evidence that a child was deprived based on the mother's increasingly severe mental health problems resulting in repeated hospitalizations, her unpredictable, angry, and violent outbursts directed at or committed in the presence of family members, her poor prognosis for bringing her behavior under control in the short term, and her conduct and demeanor during the deprivation hearing. In the Interest of S.D.H., 287 Ga. App. 684, 652 S.E.2d 570 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Evidence sufficient to find deprivation or termination of parental rights. — Evidence that parents were imprisoned for abusing one of their three children, and their parental rights were terminated as to that child; that a second child, while in their care, sustained permanent brain injuries due to abusive head trauma, and the child's arm was fractured in a manner consistent with abuse; and the fact that the parents invoked the Fifth Amendment during the deprivation hearing was sufficient to allow the trial court to find by clear and convincing evidence that their two children were deprived as defined by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107). In the Interest of A.A., 293 Ga. App. 471, 667 S.E.2d 641 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Clear and convincing evidence supported the termination of a mother's parental rights over her three children pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310), based on a showing that the children were deprived pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), such deprivation continued due to the mother's lack of proper care or control, the deprivation was likely to continue, it was likely harmful to the children, and termination was in their best interests; the mother had chronic drug and alcohol abuse problems, as well as a lack of employment, and despite continuing case plans, she failed to comply or to correct those issues. In the Interest of P. D. W., 296 Ga. App. 189, 674 S.E.2d 338 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

There was sufficient clear and convincing evidence presented to authorize the juvenile court to find that a mother's child was deprived and that the deprivation was likely to continue, and consequently, that reunification of the child with the mother would be detrimental to the child and was not in the child's best interest because, while the juvenile court took into consideration the previous termination of the mother's parental rights in determining whether the child was deprived, the juvenile court also heard substantial evidence showing that the mother's mental, emotional, and financial condition had not changed significantly since her parental rights to her children were terminated and that despite the assistance of the Department of Family and Children Services and the loss of her four children the mother still lacked the necessary skills, judgment, and resources to properly care for the child. In re R. B., 309 Ga. App. 407, 710 S.E.2d 611 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Trial court did not err by finding, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-381, 15-11-310, 15-11-311, 15-11-320, and 15-11-471), that the child was deprived at the time of a termination hearing and that the mother was the cause of the deprivation as the evidence showed that the mother had a 12-year history of drug addiction, that she repeatedly used methamphetamine while pregnant with the child, that the mother's two other children were not in her custody, that she had multiple felony drug convictions, that she was in jail after the child's birth, that she failed to financially support the child until four weeks before the termination hearing, that she had lived in five separate residences since giving birth to the child, and that she made no attempt whatsoever to visit the child until one month prior to the termination hearing. In the Interest of Z. P., 314 Ga. App. 347, 724 S.E.2d 48 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court did not err in terminating a mother's parental rights pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320) because clear and convincing evidence supported the court's finding that the children were deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107); the mother failed to complete counseling for her depression and parenting aide counseling, and the mother failed to exercise scheduled visits with the children. In the Interest of A. R., 315 Ga. App. 357, 726 S.E.2d 800 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Inability to control child. — Because the Department of Family and Children Services presented clear and convincing evidence of a parent's inability to control a child to the extent necessary for that child's mental, physical, and emotional health, and the parent was afforded sufficient due process, the juvenile court's deprivation finding was upheld on appeal; moreover, absent evidence of a custody dispute, the proceeding was not a pretextual custody battle which divested the juvenile court of jurisdiction. In the Interest of D.T., 284 Ga. App. 336, 643 S.E.2d 842 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Under the circumstances in the mother's case, the juvenile court correctly found that the evidence of the children's deprivation was clear and convincing under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-1 and 15-11-2 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-1, 15-11-2, 15-11-381, and 15-11-471) in that the evidence demonstrated that the minor children were not receiving adequate support for the children's mental health issues. The uncontrolled behavior of the children related to those issues was negatively affecting the children's academic and social well-being and there was also clear and convincing evidence that the mother was not utilizing available resources to address the children's problems, and that the mother had attempted to have one of the children hospitalized because she could not control the child; moreover, one of the children also exhibited severe mental health issues, including cutting herself and attacking other children, that were not adequately addressed. App. 121, 704 S.E.2d 444 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Failure to take steps to reunite with child. — Father's failure for three years to take the steps necessary to be reunited with a four-year-old daughter provided clear and convincing evidence that the deprivation was likely to continue, and the evidence was sufficient to establish that the termination of the father's parental rights was in the best interest of the child in light of the fact that at the time of the termination hearing, the child had spent three of the four years of life in foster care and the evidence showed the father's failure to establish a suitable home and a stable income, become drug free, or comply with reunification plan goals. In the Interest of J.A., 286 Ga. App. 704, 649 S.E.2d 882 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Physical abuse of other parent. — Evidence was sufficient to support the juvenile court's ruling that a child was deprived pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) because the father had a history of physical abuse to the mother, and the child was exposed to repeated incidences of abuse; there was clear and compelling evidence showing a lack of proper parental control to such an extent that the child was adversely affected because the evidence showed that the child began exhibiting disturbing "cutting" and "burning" behaviors when the child and the mother moved in with the father, and the mother testified about the father's aggressive behavior toward the child. In the Interest of W. W., 308 Ga. App. 407, 707 S.E.2d 611 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Physical abuse of child. — There was sufficient evidence to support a juvenile court's finding that a child was deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) because the mother physically abused the child on at least two occasions to the extent that officials at the child's school became concerned for the child's physical and emotional well being; although the mother sought anger-management counseling, the psychologist working with the mother testified that it was unwise to return the child to the mother's custody until and unless the mother sought further psychiatric counseling. In re T.S., 310 Ga. App. 100, 712 S.E.2d 121 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court did not err in finding that children were deprived and that their father was unable to provide proper parental care for the children because there was clear and convincing evidence to show that the father had engaged in past egregious conduct of a physically abusive nature toward one of the children; there was medical evidence regarding the nature and extent of the child's injuries and evidence that the injuries had been inflicted by the father. In the Interest of T. P., 310 Ga. App. 684, 713 S.E.2d 874 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Failure to seek family counseling. — Clear and convincing evidence authorized the juvenile court to find that a child was currently deprived because the child was without the care necessary for the child's mental or emotional health; although the father argued that his completion of the case plan goals eliminated the original causes of the deprivation, the failure to complete family counseling continued the deprivation. In the Interest of H. J., 313 Ga. App. 255, 721 S.E.2d 197 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Deprivation of adopted child. — In a deprivation case involving a nine-year-old adopted child, there was clear and convincing evidence establishing that the child was deprived by both parents based on one parent's sexual abuse of the child and the other parent's failure to protect the child from such abuse. In the Interest of B.H., 295 Ga. App. 297, 671 S.E.2d 303 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Termination for continuing deprivation. — Since there was a prior hearing in which the appellant's children were determined to be "deprived," and in the termination hearing, the judge made explicit findings of fact concerning events since the original hearing and concluded that the conditions and causes of the deprivation were likely to continue and would not be remedied and that by reason thereof the children were suffering and would probably suffer serious physical, mental, moral, or emotional harm, an order of termination was proper. Wynn v. Department of Human Resources, 149 Ga. App. 559, 254 S.E.2d 883 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Court of Appeals of Georgia rejected a parent's challenge to the sufficiency of the evidence supporting an order terminating that parent's parental rights as the evidence showed that the parent failed to: (1) ensure that the child's educational needs were met; (2) safeguard the child from a sexually abusive relative; (3) maintain regular contact with the child; and (4) maintain adequate and stable housing and employment. Thus, because the child had been in foster care for three years prior to the termination hearing, had bonded with them and expressed a desire to be adopted by them, and the foster parents stood ready to adopt, termination was in the child's best interest. In the Interest of K.A.C., 290 Ga. App. 310, 659 S.E.2d 703 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

In a termination of parental rights proceeding, the evidence showed that the child's deprivation was likely to continue under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320) as the mother's sobriety was recent, her compliance with the drug treatment was mandatory to avoid jail, she failed to adequately support the child, her testimony in the termination hearing was evasive, she relinquished and lost custody of her two other children, she made no efforts whatsoever to contact or visit the child until the child was nine months old, and she was willing to reconcile with the father, who was also addicted to methamphetamine and had not completed any type of drug treatment. In the Interest of Z. P., 314 Ga. App. 347, 724 S.E.2d 48 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Sexual abuse. — Evidence was sufficient to support the trial court's determination that the children were deprived within the meaning of former paragraph (8) of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) since medical evidence showed that the children had been sexually abused. In re J.E.L., 189 Ga. App. 203, 375 S.E.2d 490 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

After finding there was clear and convincing evidence the father had molested the child, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by considering the evidence and deciding that the court had no choice but to protect the child by removing custody from the mother as well as the father since the mother refused to believe that the father had molested the child and was unwilling to remove the child from the danger presented by living with the father. In re B.H., 190 Ga. App. 131, 378 S.E.2d 175 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Finding that the father had sexually molested his youngest daughter in the presence of his eldest child along with expert testimony that the father was not responding to therapy provided clear and convincing evidence that the children were deprived due to parental misconduct and that the cause of that deprivation was likely to continue, warranting termination of the father's parental rights. In re R.E., 207 Ga. App. 178, 427 S.E.2d 512 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court's finding that there was clear and convincing evidence of deprivation was supported by the record because, in addition to the evidence that the minor child's legal father and the child's stepmother were touching the child inappropriately, there was evidence that the child was sexually abused by the legal father's cousins, and, based on the legal father's testimony, it did not appear that the legal father believed the child or that the father would protect the child from these cousins in the future. C.A.L. v. State, 307 Ga. App. 658, 705 S.E.2d 885 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

There was sufficient evidence to support a juvenile court's finding that two children and their younger siblings were deprived because the evidence showed that the father abused one of the children by forcing her to have sexual intercourse with him and that he also abused the second child by forcing her to fully undress and touching her breasts and buttocks in an inappropriate manner; the father admitted to those actions before later recanting, and several witnesses testified that the mother admitted to catching the father having sexual intercourse with the first child and doing nothing to stop it. As to the younger siblings, the juvenile court was authorized to find that the younger siblings were also deprived; even without direct testimony as to the effect on the younger siblings, the juvenile court was authorized to infer from the evidence that the sexual abuse of the children in the home had an adverse effect on the younger siblings. In the Interest of S.B., 312 Ga. App. 180, 718 S.E.2d 49 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Deprivation circumstances authorize removal of child from parent's custody. — Evidence of the father's unfitness, his relationship with the children, and his abandonment of the children are sufficient to authorize a finding that the best interest of the children would not be served by placing the children in his custody. Milford v. Maxwell, 140 Ga. App. 85, 230 S.E.2d 93 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Evidence which established that the parents, both substance abusers, failed to provide proper parental care for their child, that the child suffered health problems as a result of the parent's neglect, and the parents' own admissions that they were incapable of providing for their child financially were sufficient for the juvenile court to find by clear and convincing evidence that the child was a "deprived child." In re C.N.G., 204 Ga. App. 239, 419 S.E.2d 42 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

There was no merit in the mother's claim that the juvenile court erred in finding the child deprived because there was clear and convincing evidence that the acts complained of negatively impacted the child. The mother correctly argues that a deprivation petition brought under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) focuses upon the needs of the child regardless of the parental fault. However, the mother's fitness to parent is nonetheless in issue. Pertinently, it is undisputed in the evidence that being left at home alone had frightened the child; that the child markedly improved in school after the child's removal from the home; and that the mother was in complete noncompliance with the safety plan that she had signed. In the Interest of D.C., 268 Ga. App. 882, 602 S.E.2d 885 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Intervention of social worker did not preclude deprivation. — Intense supervision of mother and her child by the mother's caseworker did not satisfy the care and control requirements of the law; although the intervention of the caseworker prevented the child from suffering any lasting harm, this did not preclude the child from being classified as deprived. Jones v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 371, 271 S.E.2d 27 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Parental decision to entrust child to caretakers was not deprivation. — Trial court erred in concluding that a child was deprived since the evidence showed that the child's mother exercised good parental judgment in temporarily placing the child with caretakers and showed that while in their care, all of the child's physical, mental, and emotional needs were met. In the Interest of C.C., 249 Ga. App. 101, 547 S.E.2d 738 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parental decision to continue to live with abuser. — As mother contravened the trial court's order by allowing the man who molested the mother's older child to continue living with her, the mother's younger child was deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) as the child was without proper parental care or control necessary for the child's physical, mental, or emotional health. In the Interest of K.C.H., 257 Ga. App. 529, 571 S.E.2d 515 (2002) (decided under for-

Mother's past behavior relevant. — In deciding whether children were deprived, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), it was proper for a trial court to consider evidence of the mother's past conduct in deciding the likelihood that such conduct would continue in the future. In the Interest of L.F., 275 Ga. App. 247, 620 S.E.2d 476 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Evidence sufficient for finding of deprivation. — See In re J.R., 202 Ga. App. 418, 414 S.E.2d 540 (1992); In re W.J.G., 216 Ga. App. 168, 453 S.E.2d 768 (1995); In re S.S., 232 Ga. App. 287, 501 S.E.2d 618 (1998); In the Interest of S.B., 242 Ga. App. 184, 528 S.E.2d 278 (2000); In the Interest of W.P.H., 249 Ga. App. 890, 549 S.E.2d 513 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court's termination of parental rights over the child was proper pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320) when the parent's lack of proper parental care or control amounted to deprivation of the child under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2), the parent failed to establish a bond with the child or substantially complete the goals of the parent's reunification plan, and the parent did not provide support to the child under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2; further, the deprivation was deemed likely to continue and likely to result in harm to the child, and the child's best interest was served by termination of the parent's rights as the child had formed a bond with the foster parent. In the Interest of J.D., 280 Ga. App. 861, 635 S.E.2d 226 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court's deprivation finding entered against a parent was upheld on appeal given that the parent: (1) waived any claim of error to evidence submitted by the guardian ad litem during an ex parte meeting; and (2) failed to show any harm from the denial of a motion to continue the deprivation hearing, despite becoming ill during the proceedings, as the hearing had nearly concluded and no other evidence was to have been presented. In the Interest of S.P., 282 Ga. App. 82, 637 S.E.2d 802 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parent's challenge to the finding of deprivation by the juvenile court was rejected given clear and convincing evidence of a prior molestation by the parent's then live-in boyfriend and allegations of a subsequent molestation by the parent's current live-in boyfriend, which the parent refused to believe; these circumstances supported a finding that the parent failed to protect the child from emotional, if not physical, harm, and thus the child was deprived. In the Interest of S.V., 285 Ga. App. 772, 648 S.E.2d 109 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Department of family and children services established that a parent's children were deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310) with the following evidence: (1) the parent was not receiving drug treatment, had no stable housing, and had paid no child support; (2) the parent had not received mandated drug treatment or paid any child support; (3) the parent admitted having no suitable housing at the time the termination petition was filed, and the parent's post-petition acquisition of adequate housing was based solely on the ongoing good graces of the parent's new romantic companion, who was married to someone else. In the Interest of P. D. W., 296 Ga. App. 189, 674 S.E.2d 338 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Trial court's findings that a parent's children were deprived were supported by clear and convincing evidence; one child's bed-wetting and both children's excessive hunger were being punished with methods found inappropriate or abusive. Moreover, the parent was uncooperative and directed the children to be uncooperative. In the Interest of Z. D., 296 Ga. App. 389, 674 S.E.2d 630 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

As a parent's children had previously been deemed deprived, and the trial court was entitled to consider the fact that the parent had not completed a case plan as evidence that the children's deprivation was likely to continue if the children were returned to the parent, the evidence was sufficient to support the trial court's findings of deprivation under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107). In re J. A., 298 Ga. App. 11, 679 S.E.2d 52 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court did not err in finding that an infant was deprived because a rational trier of fact could have found by clear and convincing evidence that the infant was deprived and that the deprivation was a result of the mother's parental misconduct or incapability when the infant was sexually abused during a time period in which the infant was in the care of the mother and father; the juvenile court was not required to determine which of the parents was responsible for the harm to the infant but that pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), the infant was without proper parental care or control, subsistence, education as required by law, or other care or control necessary for the child's physical, mental, or emotional health or morals, which was clearly shown based on the infant's being sexually abused while in the mother's care. In the Interest of K. L., 300 Ga. App. 557, 685 S.E.2d 464 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain a juvenile court's determination that a child was deprived by the father because the child's mother presented a danger to the child, and the father deprived the child by failing to protect the child from the mother, who had chronic substance abuse problems and an extensive history of criminal activity; there was testimony that the father admitted that the father understood the danger and threat that the mother posed to the mother's children and that the father was permitting the mother to have contact with the child, despite the danger that the mother presented to the child, and given the conflicts in the testimony, the juvenile court was entitled to conclude that the father was dishonest in the father's testimony and was authorized to infer from the father's dishonesty that the father had permitted the child to have contact with the mother and that the father put the interests of the mother ahead of the best interest of the child. In the Interest of C.B., 308 Ga. App. 158, 706 S.E.2d 752 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Evidence supported a juvenile court's order finding a parent's child to be deprived, as the parent failed to obtain stable housing or a job, and relied on others for transportation; moreover, the parent had failed to maintain meaningful contact with the child, admitting that the parent was emotionally unable to do so. In the Interest of D. S., 316 Ga. App. 296, 728 S.E.2d 890 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parental mental illness. — Evidence was sufficient to support a juvenile court's finding that a child was deprived within the meaning of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) since: (1) the mother suffered from a severe psychological disorder; (2) the mother could not care for the child without daily supervision; and (3) the mother's mental disorder was potentially dangerous to the child. In the Interest of D.L.W., 264 Ga. App. 168, 590 S.E.2d 183 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court did not err in considering the mother's testimony in determining whether her child was deprived, even though the juvenile court had previously found her mentally incompetent, as the juvenile court was authorized to consider any testimony, including that of the allegedly impaired parent, in determining the central issue of whether the parent was able to adequately provide for the child's needs; also, consideration of the mother's testimony supported the findings of the psychologist who testified that the mother's multiple mental disorders interfered with her ability to adequately care for her child. In the Interest of B.B., 268 Ga. App. 603, 602 S.E.2d 330 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Inadequate housing and employment. — Court properly found that a child was deprived and terminated a mother's parental rights since the mother lacked permanent housing, the state had no verification that she was employed, she was in denial about her mental health condition, and she refused all treatment. In the Interest of B.B., 268 Ga. App. 858, 603 S.E.2d 333 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Court noting prior deprivation proceedings. — Finding of deprivation was supported by the court taking judicial notice of prior deprivation proceedings before the same court relating to the parent's two older children. In the Interest of A.B., 285 Ga. App. 288, 645 S.E.2d 716 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parental drug abuse. — Minor child was properly found to be deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) based on the unrehabilitated drug abuse under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(B)(ii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310) by the mother, including during the pregnancy with the child, the juvenile court could properly infer an adverse impact on the child; the juvenile court was entitled to reject the mother's testimony that the mother had given up drugs, particularly in light of a positive drug screen just two months before the deprivation hearing and the lack of treatment. In the Interest of N.H., 297 Ga. App. 344, 677 S.E.2d 399 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court did not err in granting a motion filed by a county department of family and children services to extend the department's temporary custody of a mother's children because clear and convincing evidence supported the juvenile court's conclusion that the children remained deprived; there was evidence that the mother was a chronic drug user who remained unrehabilitated even after her children had been removed from her custody, and the evidence of chronic unrehabilitated drug use, along with the evidence that the mother had not completed her reunification case plan goals, authorized the juvenile court to conclude that the children would continue to be deprived if the children were returned to the mother. In the Interest of Q.A., 306 Ga. App. 386, 702 S.E.2d 701 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Inadequate housing. — In a termination of parental rights proceeding, clear and convincing evidence showed the children were presently deprived, under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2(8)(A) and 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(i) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-107, and 15-11-310), because the children's father said the father could not care for the children at the time of the termination hearing and had no stable housing. In the Interest of E.G., 315 Ga. App. 35, 726 S.E.2d 510 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

3. Deprivation Not Found

No showing of abandonment or deprivation found. — See In re J.C.P., 167 Ga. App. 572, 307 S.E.2d 1 (1983); In re E.R.D., 172 Ga. App. 590, 323 S.E.2d 723 (1984); In re D.S., 217 Ga. App. 29, 456 S.E.2d 715 (1995); In the Interest of M.L.C., 249 Ga. App. 435, 548 S.E.2d 137 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Evidence insufficient for finding of deprivation. — Evidence was uncontroverted that the appellant had taken care of her child to the best of her ability and that the child's basic physical, mental, and emotional needs had been met by the appellant; thus, while the court did not condone the appellant's transitory lifestyle, her previous drug use, her relationship with an abusive husband, and her leaving the child unsupervised in her car for even a short period of time, such conduct alone was not clear and convincing evidence that the child was deprived under the definition set forth in O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) and that temporarily removing custody of the child from the appellant would be best for the child's welfare. In re D.E.K., 236 Ga. App. 574, 512 S.E.2d 690 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Trial court improperly concluded, based on mischaracterization of evidence and reliance on inadmissible evidence, that a father's abuse of the mother rendered the father's children by a previous relationship deprived. In the Interest of C.D.E., 248 Ga. App. 756, 546 S.E.2d 837 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Trial court erred in finding that a child was deprived pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A.

3. Deprivation Not Found (Cont'd)

§§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), and in ordering that temporary custody be placed in the child's aunt, as the trial court's order reflected that the order was based on a stipulation of deprivation, which was inaccurate, and the mother had only stipulated to a grant of temporary custody for a short time, but had not conceded the issue of deprivation; moreover, the court's order was also based on a mischaracterization and misstatement of the evidence, as well as on unsubstantiated hearsay, rendering the evidence insufficient to support the finding of deprivation. In the Interest of S.J., 270 Ga. App. 598, 607 S.E.2d 225 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Trial court erred in finding that the child was deprived as defined in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2 and in ordering continued custody in the Department of Family and Children Services because there was no competent evidence of the mother's present mental impairment, evidence did not substantiate the finding that the child was at risk for child abuse, and none of the evidence presented reflected poorly on the mother's parental fitness. In the Interest of K.S., 271 Ga. App. 891, 611 S.E.2d 150 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court erred in finding that two children were deprived since: (1) one child's appointment with a therapist was missed due to transportation issues and was not timely rescheduled because the mother did not have a telephone; (2) there was no evidence that the mother's occasional drug use adversely affected the children; (3) the mother denied allegations that a child had been crying for long periods of time, that she had shouted at the child to "shut the hell up," and that men were coming in and out of the apartment at all hours; and (4) there was no indication that additional drug screenings and assessments were required under a protective order. In the Interest of A.J.I., 277 Ga. App. 226, 626 S.E.2d 195 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court's order finding that a mother deprived her child, and an award of temporary custody to the child's paternal grandparents, was reversed because: (1) the order was not supported by sufficient evidence; (2) evidence concerning the amount of support the mother provided at a time when she was a non-custodial parent became largely irrelevant once the prior temporary custody order expired and she regained custody; (3) once this occurred, a new deprivation proceeding had to be commenced, requiring proof of current deprivation, and such was not proven; (4) the record was ambiguous regarding the finding that the mother's current employment was insufficient to cover her monthly expenses; and (5) the mother was taking steps to care for the child's needs, such as ensuring that the child's Medicaid eligibility was in proper order, enrolling the child in pre-kindergarten, and scheduling dental and medical appointments. In the Interest of G.S., 279 Ga. App. 89, 630 S.E.2d 607 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court erred in extending temporary custody in the Department of Family and Children Services for an additional 12 months as: (1) the child's father was found to be a fit parent and was fully able to assume custody; (2) there was no testimony that the father was not capable of taking care of the child; and (3) the father completed every aspect of the case plan and was eligible for day-care assistance; thus, the evidence presented at the hearing fell far short of meeting the clear and convincing standard necessary to support a finding of deprivation. In the Interest of J.P., 280 Ga. App. 100, 633 S.E.2d 442 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court erred in finding that a child was deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) because the evidence demonstrated that the mother properly cared for the child and that the child's needs were being met; the only reason a county department of family and children services (DFACS) filed the deprivation petition was because the mother was in DFACS care and because of possible future deprivation, but that was not the standard since the state had to present evidence of present deprivation, which the state failed to do. In the Interest of S. D., 316 Ga. App. 86, 728 S.E.2d 749 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Evidence did not support a finding of deprivation because there was no psychological evaluation included in the record, or reports from treating physicians, or medical reports indicating any mental impairment or how that mental impairment might limit the mother's parental abilities, and the only other evidence in this regard was from the grandmother about the mother having ADHD, learning disabilities, and being "mildly retarded." In the Interest of D. W., 318 Ga. App. 725, 734 S.E.2d 543 (2012).

Juvenile court erred in finding that the child was deprived as the mother and the child lived with the maternal grandmother, there was no evidence that the mother was unable to care for the child, and the isolated instance of the child being without supervision, caused by the mother's temporary hospitalization and the grandmother being away, did not constitute parental unfitness authorizing a finding of deprivation and severance of the parent-child relationship. In the Interest of L. K., 322 Ga. App. 163, 744 S.E.2d 352 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Juvenile court erred by finding that a mother's three children were deprived under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) because the case lacked clear and convincing evidence to support that finding since only one incident of domestic violence occurred in front of the children, and the mother responded appropriately by calling the police. In the Interest of H. B., 324 Ga. App. 36, 749 S.E.2d 38 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Mother was entitled to reversal of an order finding the child deprived because the only witness was the child's case manager, who testified that the child was taken into custody because the mother's seven other children were previously adjudicated deprived and there was concern with regard to mental health issues and housing, both of which had been dealt with by the mother. In the Interest of R. S. T., 323 Ga. App. 860, 748 S.E.2d 498 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Cluttered and dirty home insufficient for deprivation. — Juvenile court erred in finding that a child was deprived because although the mother's home appeared cluttered and dirty, the environment was otherwise suitable; moreover, for about three weeks prior to the hearing, the mother showed continued improvement in achieving the goal of the safety plan, which appeared to be to provide a suitable environment for the child. In the Interest of T. L., 269 Ga. App. 842, 605 S.E.2d 432 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Criticism of child insufficient for deprivation. — While there was evidence in a child deprivation proceeding of a stepfather's anger and verbal aggression towards State of Georgia employees and that the child at issue was often quiet and withdrawn while in the mother's and stepfather's care, an order finding the child deprived and removing the child from the mother was reversed since insufficient evidence existed to establish deprivation. The state failed to provide clear and convincing evidence to support the deprivation finding since the state presented evidence of only one episode where the stepfather criticized the child. In the Interest of D.S., 283 Ga. App. 767, 642 S.E.2d 431 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Single episode of pulling gun on parent insufficient for deprivation. — Juvenile court erred by finding that clear and convincing evidence existed supporting a finding that three children were deprived within the meaning of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) because a single incident, albeit highly inappropriate, wherein the mother's boyfriend pulled a gun on the mother was insufficient and did not demonstrate abuse of the children. In the Interest of S. M., 321 Ga. App. 827, 743 S.E.2d 497 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

No proof of harm to child. — Finding that a one-year-old child was deprived was reversed on appeal because the mother's parenting ability had never been called into question, and the only other issue identified in the record was a single altercation between the father and mother, who no longer resided together and that incident did not involve abuse of the child, who was two months old at the time, and the record contained no allegation nor proof of harm to the child. In the Interest of R. L., 321 Ga. App. 837, 743 S.E.2d 502 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

3. Deprivation Not Found (Cont'd)

Domestic abuse insufficient for deprivation. — There was absolutely no basis for the trial court to conclude that a father's abuse of the mother rendered the mother's child by a previous relationship a deprived child at the time of the deprivation hearing since: (1) there was absolutely no evidence presented that the mother was anything other than a fit parent for her children, and the only person who even expressed an opinion on the subject testified that she had no concerns whatsoever about the mother's ability to parent her children; (2) the only basis for asserting that any of the children were deprived was the father's violence toward the mother; and (3) the evidence was undisputed that the mother and father were no longer living together at the time of the deprivation hearing and were in the process of obtaining a divorce. In the Interest of C.D.E., 248 Ga. App. 756, 546 S.E.2d 837 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

It was error to find deprivation under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) since the trial court relied on a history of domestic violence between the parents, but the only evidence of such history was the hearsay statement of the mother; even if an incident of domestic violence between the parents happened as the child described, there was no evidence that the child was harmed. In the Interest of H.S., 285 Ga. App. 839, 648 S.E.2d 143 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Requiring financial assistance insufficient for deprivation. — Trial court erred in finding the father's child was deprived and in transferring the child to the custody of the county child welfare agency. The child was not "deprived" within the meaning of that term under Georgia law as clear and convincing evidence did not show that the child was without proper parental care or control, subsistence, education as required by law, or other care or control necessary for the child's physical, mental, or emotional health or morals, although the record did show that the parent at times struggled to provide for the child and needed the financial assistance of others from time to time in order to do so. In the Interest of E.M., 264 Ga. App. 277, 590 S.E.2d 241 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Reading ability of parents as justification for deprivation. — Trial court's judgment finding that a mother's children continued to be deprived was reversed since, although the trial court based the court's finding partly on the mother's reading level, the case plan only required that the mother enroll and participate in literacy training, not that she reach a certain reading milestone. The mother substantially complied with the goals of the case plan, and there was no evidence of continued deprivation presented to reach the clear and convincing threshold. In the Interest of C.F., 266 Ga. App. 325, 596 S.E.2d 781 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parent's Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy insufficient for deprivation. — Trial court erred in finding a child deprived due to her mother's Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy (MSBP) since: (1) the child's symptoms were witnessed by medical professionals; (2) the child's symptoms began to subside before the child was removed from her parents; (3) the mother's therapist did not diagnose her with MSBP; (4) the trial court's decision was based on experts' opinions that were based on incorrect assumptions; and (5) the child services department's expert's opinion did not show that the mother had abused the child by subjecting her to unnecessary medical treatment or that she was a deprived child. In the Interest of A.B., 267 Ga. App. 466, 600 S.E.2d 409 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

No deprivation of special needs child. — Although a child's disability, when coupled with a parent's limitations, might form a legitimate basis for finding the child to be deprived, when the evidence presented against that parent did not meet the definition of "deprived," and no evidence was presented that the parent was incapable of meeting the child's special needs, clear and convincing evidence was lacking to support a deprivation finding entered against that parent. In the Interest of D.N.K., 282 Ga. App. 430, 638 S.E.2d 861 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Improper actions of grandparent not deprivation. — Juvenile court erred when the court entered an order finding a young child deprived as defined by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107); although the child's grandparent acted improperly in yelling at the child and pushing the child's face into the side of a car, there was no evidence of any physical or emotional harm to the child, the incident was isolated, and there was no evidence that the grandparent had any past mental or emotional problems. In the Interest of C.L.Z., 283 Ga. App. 247, 641 S.E.2d 243 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Evidence of deprivation supports finding that child will suffer serious harm. — Same facts that support a juvenile court's conclusion that a child is deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), and that the deprivation is likely to continue if placed with the parent, also support a conclusion that continued deprivation would likely cause the child serious harm under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310). In re A. R., 302 Ga. App. 702, 691 S.E.2d 402 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Willfulness in abuse by babysitter. — Evidence of willfulness necessary to sustain conviction under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), the contributing to the deprivation of a minor statute, was shown since the evidence established that the defendant babysitter knew that the infant needed immediate medical attention, and that the babysitter failed to seek medical treatment for the infant. Hoang v. State, 250 Ga. App. 403, 551 S.E.2d 813 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Psychological evaluation. — In determining that children were deprived, the trial court did not err in 2007 in considering a deposition of a psychologist who had evaluated a parent in 2006; that evaluation contained both an assessment of the parent's parental incompetency at the time of the evaluation and a prediction of the likelihood of future improvement; moreover, the trial court had held evidence open for any additional testimony from the psychologist, although none was presented. In the Interest of T.P., 291 Ga. App. 83, 661 S.E.2d 211 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Father not found unfit. — Trial court erred in awarding temporary custody of a child to the department of family and children services. While the mother's unfitness due to her drug use was proved by clear and convincing evidence, the trial court did not find that the father's threats to and arguments with the mother and her family members harmed the child and, therefore, the court's findings did not establish the father's unfitness. In the Interest of C.R., 292 Ga. App. 346, 665 S.E.2d 39 (2008) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Inadequate Housing

Evidence of deprived child. — Juvenile court's ruling that a child was deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) was supported by clear and convincing evidence of deprivation based on evidence of the parent's multiple unconfirmed allegations of sexual abuse and the parent's lack of employment and stable housing. In the Interest of J.S., 295 Ga. App. 861, 673 S.E.2d 331 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Children had been found to have been deprived due to inadequate housing and the parent's failure to provide adequate support for the children due to the parent's unstable employment. Since, by the time of the subsequent termination hearing, the parent had failed to comply with a case plan by staying drug-free, maintaining stable housing and employment, attending weekly Narcotics Anonymous meetings, and paying child support, the conditions leading to the prior unappealed finding of deprivation continued to exist. In the Interest of K.R., 298 Ga. App. 436, 680 S.E.2d 532 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Evidence that a mother provided her children with inadequate housing for over a year, had been unemployed for over a year, had not completed a budget, and had just applied for public assistance and Social Security benefits was sufficient to support a judgment that the children were deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107). In the Interest of T.V., 302 Ga. App. 124, 690 S.E.2d 457 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Trial court did not err in terminating a mother's rights to three minor children under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320) because the children were deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) as the parents failed to provide the children with adequate and stable housing and financial support, and the mother failed to maintain an emotional bond with the children. In the Interest of T. C., 302 Ga. App. 693, 691 S.E.2d 603 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, §§ 24A-401, 24A-2301A, 24A-2302A, and 24A-3301, and pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-37, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Court's jurisdiction encompasses deprivation proceedings. — Inasmuch as the juvenile court's jurisdiction encompasses proceedings in which a child was alleged to be deprived, Ga. L. 1971, p. 709, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-211, 15-11-212, and 15-11-215) applied to a "deprived child" as defined in the statute. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-131 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

"Deprived child" includes child who is abused, neglected, or exploited. — Although Ga. L. 1974, p. 438, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-7-5) did not explicitly mention "deprived" children that definition was certainly inclusive of a child who was abused, neglected, or exploited. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-131 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

"Threatened harm to child's welfare" included in "deprived child." — Inasmuch as the court in Elrod v. Department of Family & Children Servs., 136 Ga. App. 251, 220 S.E.2d 726 (1975), spoke of "probable deprivation," "substantial danger," and the "likelihood of substantial threat to a child's physical, mental, moral or emotional well-being," the definitional elements of "deprived child" include "threatened harm to the child's welfare." 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-131 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Appointment of guardian in deprivation proceedings. — Under the principle that the law is to be liberally construed toward the protection of the child whose well-being is threatened, deprivation proceedings arising from child abuse and neglect by a parent or caretaker present a conflict of interest wherein the provisions concerning the appointment of a guardian ad litem would apply. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-131 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3301).

15-11-100. Purpose of article.

The purpose of this article is:

(1) To assist and protect children whose physical or mental health and welfare is substantially at risk of harm from abuse, neglect, or exploitation and who may be further threatened by the conduct of others by providing for the resolution of dependency proceedings in juvenile court;

(2) To ensure that dependency proceedings are conducted expeditiously to avoid delays in permanency plans for children;

(3) To provide the greatest protection as promptly as possible for children; and

(4) To ensure that the health, safety, and best interests of a child be the paramount concern in all dependency proceedings.

15-11-102. Dependency case time limitations.

(a) A preliminary protective hearing shall be held promptly and no later than 72 hours after a child is placed in foster care, provided that, if the 72 hour time frame expires on a weekend or legal holiday, such hearing shall be held on the next day which is not a weekend or legal holiday.

(b) If a child was not taken into protective custody or is released from foster care at a preliminary protective hearing, the following time frames apply:

(1) A petition for dependency shall be filed within 30 days of the child's preliminary protective hearing;

(2) Summons shall be served at least 72 hours before the dependency adjudication hearing;

(3) The dependency adjudication hearing shall be held no later than 60 days after the filing of a petition for dependency; and

(4) If the child's dispositional hearing is not held in conjunction with the dependency adjudication hearing, it shall be held and completed within 30 days after the conclusion of the dependency adjudication hearing.

(c) If a child is not released from foster care at the preliminary protective hearing, the following time frames apply:

(1) A petition for dependency shall be filed within five days of the child's preliminary protective hearing;

(2) Summons shall be served at least 72 hours before the dependency adjudication hearing;

(3) The dependency adjudication hearing shall be held no later than ten days after the filing of a petition for dependency;

(4) DFCS shall submit to the court its written report within 30 days of the date a child who is placed in the custody of DFCS is removed from the home and at each subsequent review of the disposition order. If the DFCS report does not contain a plan for reunification services, a nonreunification hearing shall be held no later than 30 days from the time the report is filed; and

(5) If a dispositional hearing is not held in conjunction with the dependency adjudication hearing, it shall be held and completed within 30 days after the conclusion of the dependency adjudication hearing.

(d) An initial periodic review hearing shall be held within 75 days following a child's removal from his or her home. An additional periodic review shall be held within four months following such initial review.

(e) Permanency plan hearings shall be held no later than 30 days after DFCS has submitted a written report to the court which does not provide a plan for reunification services or:

(1) For children under seven years of age at the time a petition for dependency is filed, no later than nine months after such child is considered to have entered foster care, whichever comes first. Thereafter a permanency plan hearing shall be held every six months while such child continues in DFCS custody or more frequently as deemed necessary by the court until the court determines that such child's permanency plan and goal have been achieved; or

(2) For children seven years of age and older at the time a petition is filed, no later than 12 months after such child is considered to have entered foster care, whichever comes first. Thereafter a permanency plan hearing shall be held every six months while such child continues in DFCS custody or more frequently as deemed necessary by the court until the court determines that such child's permanency plan and goal have been achieved.

(f) A supplemental order of the court adopting a child's permanency plan shall be entered within 30 days after the court has determined that reunification efforts need not be made by DFCS.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Notice and hearing requirements were mandatory and must be adhered to in order for the juvenile court to proceed with the adjudicatory hearing. If for some reason the statutes were not, dismissal of the petition would be without prejudice. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Failure to comply with notice and hearing requirements of the Juvenile Code, after an allegedly deprived child has been taken from the parent's custody, prejudices or injures the rights of the parent, primarily the right to possession of the child under former Code 1933, §§ 74-106, 74-108, and 74-203 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1, 19-7-25, and 19-9-2). Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Failure to comply with time limits requires dismissal. — Time limits established by the General Assembly in the Juvenile Code are jurisdictional and must be strictly adhered to. A failure to comply with the time periods set out in the statute requires dismissal. R.A.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 366, 274 S.E.2d 752 (1980), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 66 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Dismissal without prejudice for violating five day time limit. — In dismissing a deprivation petition because the petition was filed outside of the five-day limit of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49(e), the trial court properly made the dismissal without prejudice. The Georgia Supreme Court had stated that in such a case any dismissal for failure to follow one of the procedural rules was without prejudice. In the Interest of E.C., 291 Ga. App. 440, 662 S.E.2d 252 (2008) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Waiver of requirements of section. — Although the procedural requirements in parental termination proceedings have been held to be mandatory, such requirements can be waived. Irvin v. Department of Human Resources, 159 Ga. App. 101, 282 S.E.2d 664 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Definition of "day." — Word "day," not being qualified, means a calendar or civil day consisting of 24 hours from midnight to midnight. J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

15-11-103. Right to attorney.

(a) A child and any other party to a proceeding under this article shall have the right to an attorney at all stages of the proceedings under this article.

(b) The court shall appoint an attorney for an alleged dependent child. The appointment shall be made as soon as practicable to ensure adequate representation of such child and, in any event, before the first court hearing that may substantially affect the interests of such child.

(c) A child's attorney owes to his or her client the duties imposed by the law of this state in an attorney-client relationship.

(d) If an attorney has been appointed to represent a child in a prior proceeding under this chapter, the court, when possible, shall appoint the same attorney to represent such child in any subsequent proceeding.

(e) An attorney appointed to represent a child in a dependency proceeding shall continue the representation in any subsequent appeals unless excused by the court.

(f) Neither a child nor a representative of a child may waive a child's right to an attorney in a dependency proceeding.

(g) A party other than a child shall be informed of his or her right to an attorney prior to any hearing. A party other than a child shall be given an opportunity to:

(1) Obtain and employ an attorney of such party's own choice;

(2) Obtain a court appointed attorney if the court determines that such party is an indigent person; or

(3) Waive the right to an attorney, provided that such waiver is made knowingly, voluntarily, and on the record.

General Consideration

Due process requires notice of right to counsel. — Due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, requires that in respect of proceedings to determine delinquency which may result in commitment to an institution in which the juvenile's freedom is curtailed, the child and the child's parents must be notified of the child's right to be represented by counsel retained by the parents, or if the parents are unable to afford counsel, that counsel will be appointed to represent the child. Freeman v. Wilcox, 119 Ga. App. 325, 167 S.E.2d 163 (1969), disapproved in Riley v. State, 237 Ga. 124, 226 S.E.2d 922 (1976), to the extent that no automatic exclusionary rule should be applied to incriminating statements made by a juvenile whose parents were not separately advised of the right to counsel (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Right to counsel at delinquency hearing. — General Assembly intended that in a juvenile court a child is of right entitled to counsel at a hearing which covers a determination by the court concerning the existence of delinquency by reason of the violation of probation conditions. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

No right to counsel before judicial citizens review panel. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-103, 15-11-402, and 15-11-475) did not apply to reviews by a judicial citizens review panel as the proceedings mentioned in former § 15-11-6(b) were proceedings before the juvenile court; the citizen's review panel's findings of fact and recommendations are not legal evidence as the panel were not a court of record and the panel's actions were not necessarily in compliance with regard to legal due process considerations. In the Interest of K.M.C., 273 Ga. App. 276, 614 S.E.2d 896 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Parent entitled to representation at all stages of deprivation proceeding. — Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b), a parent was entitled to representation at all stages of the proceedings alleging deprivation. In the Interest of A. R., 296 Ga. App. 62, 673 S.E.2d 586 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Parent entitled to effective representation. — Mother was entitled to effective representation in termination hearing. In re A.H.P., 232 Ga. App. 330, 500 S.E.2d 418 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30).

Right applies to informal detention hearing and other stages. — Accused juvenile was entitled to counsel at an "informal detention hearing" required by Ga. L. 1971, p. 709, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-60), or at any of the other stages of any proceedings alleging delinquency, unruliness, and deprivation. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Juvenile entitled to principles necessary for fair trial. — Juvenile charged with "delinquency" is entitled by right to have the court apply those common-law jurisprudential principles which experience and reason have shown are necessary to give the accused the essence of a fair trial. T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Ingredients of fair trial. — To give one accused in a juvenile proceeding a fair trial, the trial must include such ingredients as the presumption of innocence, the requirement that if the conviction is based entirely upon circumstantial evidence then the proved facts shall exclude every other reasonable hypothesis save that of guilt, and the necessity of producing independent corroborative evidence to that of an accomplice for a finding of guilt when based upon the latter's testimony. T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Cannot reverse delinquency adjudication unless deprivation of counsel harmful. — Although an accused is entitled to counsel at the stage known as "a detention hearing", there is no authority for reversing an adjudication of delinquency after a fair trial with legal representation because of lack of counsel at the detention hearing, unless it appears that deprivation of counsel at that stage resulted in harm to the juvenile. T.K. v. State, 126 Ga. App. 269, 190 S.E.2d 588 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Juvenile Code recognizes that a parent is a "party" to proceedings involving the parent's child. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Physical presence of parent cannot be equated with meaningful representation. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Indigent putative father's performance of the duties of a parent does not control the determination of whether he is entitled to appointed representation; the crucial inquiry is whether the putative father was a "party" to any of the proceedings within the meaning of the former statute. Wilkins v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 255 Ga. 230, 337 S.E.2d 20 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30).

Former Code section did not imply that foster parents may have certain rights. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 449, 228 S.E.2d 839 (1976), cert. denied, 432 U.S. 905, 97 S. Ct. 2949, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1077 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Parent's right to representation not violated. — Mother's right to appointed counsel was not violated since, after being notified of such right, she did not request counsel until shortly before the termination hearing and did not identify any proceeding at which she appeared unrepresented. In re A.M.R., 230 Ga. App. 133, 495 S.E.2d 615 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30).

Juvenile court did not err by refusing to dismiss the proceedings to terminate a mother's parental rights for the failure of the mother to be represented by counsel at the judicial citizens review panel as the proceedings mentioned in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-103, 15-11-402, and 15-11-475) were proceedings before the juvenile court and were not reviews by the panel; further, any error was harmless as the juvenile court did not rely on the panel's recommendations in terminating the mother's parental rights. In the Interest of K.M.C., 273 Ga. App. 276, 614 S.E.2d 896 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Parent, who was represented by counsel during the course of a termination of parental rights proceeding, could not prove that the parent was denied counsel during the proceeding because, beyond the claim that the parent was denied counsel, the parent failed to show what arguments the parent would have advanced, what evidence the parent would have produced in the parent's favor, or how the parent would have been successful had the parent been represented by counsel; moreover, in light of the overwhelming evidence supporting the termination of the parent's parental rights, there was nothing in the record that would support a finding of harm. In the Interest of M.S., 279 Ga. App. 254, 630 S.E.2d 856 (2006), overruled on other grounds, In re J.M.B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Right to counsel of choice. — In a dependency action, the juvenile court did not err by denying the mother's request for a continuance to hire counsel of the mother's choice because the mother was advised that the mother could retain an attorney but that the mother should do that so that counsel was ready for trial. In the Interest of A.B., 350 Ga. App. 158, 828 S.E.2d 394 (2019).

Indigent parent entitled to paupered transcript for use in appeal. — Indigent parent, whose parental rights have been terminated by an order of the juvenile court on a petition filed by an agency of the state, is entitled to a paupered transcript of the proceeding in the juvenile court for use in appealing the decision of that court. Nix v. Department of Human Resources, 236 Ga. 794, 225 S.E.2d 306 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Trial court committed reversible error in failing to determine whether appointed counsel was required for parent. — Fact that there was sufficient evidence to support the termination of a parent's rights did not relieve the trial court of the court's obligation to determine whether counsel should have been appointed for the parent under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-103, 15-11-402, and 15-11-475). The trial court's limited inquiry as to whether the parent waived the right to counsel, and the court's failure to ascertain the parent's financial status was reversible error. In the Interest of P. D. W., 296 Ga. App. 189, 674 S.E.2d 338 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Cited in In the Interest of J. N., 344 Ga. App. 409, 810 S.E.2d 191 (2018).

Waiver

Right to counsel may be waived unless child is not represented by the child's parents, guardian, or custodian. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Determination of voluntary and knowing waiver of right. — Question of a voluntary and knowing waiver of a juvenile's right to counsel depends on the totality of the circumstances and the state has a heavy burden in showing that the juvenile did understand and waive the juvenile's right to counsel. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Trial court apparently determined that, given the court's finding that the mother was not competent, the mother was unable to show a knowing and voluntary waiver of her right to appointed counsel at the child deprivation hearing; thus, the trial court did not err in refusing to allow her to proceed pro se. Additionally, the mother failed to establish that she was harmed by her counsel's representation; thus, without harm, the mother's alleged error presented no basis for reversal. In the Interest of B.B., 267 Ga. App. 360, 599 S.E.2d 304 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Factors considered in determining proper waiver. — Several of the factors to be considered among the totality of the circumstances in determining whether the juvenile's waiver of counsel is made knowingly and voluntarily are: (1) age of the accused; (2) education of the accused; (3) knowledge of the accused as to both the substance of the charge and the nature of the accused's rights to consult with an attorney and remain silent; (4) whether the accused was held incommunicado or allowed to consult with relatives, friends, or an attorney; (5) whether the accused was interrogated before or after formal charges were filed; (6) methods used in interrogations; (7) length of interrogations; (8) whether vel non the accused refused to voluntarily give statements on prior occasions; and (9) whether the accused repudiated an extra-judicial statement at a later date. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977) (decided under former 1933, § 24A-2001).

Juvenile court proceeding null if no waiver. — If in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and since the hearing was not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding was an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933 § 24A-2001).

Mother who waives child's rights must be unbiased mother, free of interests conflicting with the needs of her daughter whom she undertakes to represent; an ally, not an adversary. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933 § 24A-2001).

Right to counsel waived. — Trial judge's determination that a 15-year-old girl knowingly and voluntarily waived her right to counsel in a murder case was not clearly erroneous since she was interrogated before formal charges were filed, was not held incommunicado, and there was no evidence that coercive or deceptive interrogation techniques were employed. J.E.W. v. State, 256 Ga. 464, 349 S.E.2d 713 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-6 and 15-11-30).

Right to counsel not waived. — In a proceeding for termination of parental rights, an indigent parent did not waive the right to appointed counsel in a knowing, intelligent, and voluntary manner simply because the parent failed to request counsel prior to the hearing as directed by the court. The court's denial of the parent's request for counsel was reversible error. In re J. M. B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Juvenile court's orders in a dependency proceeding were void because the record clearly demonstrated that the parents were denied the parents' right to counsel at the judicial review despite indicating that the parents had obtained counsel who asked the parents to obtain a continuance and the juvenile court's failure to inquire into whether the parents were indigent and entitled to appointed counsel. In the Interest of C. H., 343 Ga. App. 1, 805 S.E.2d 637 (2017), vacated, cert. denied, 2018 Ga. LEXIS 774 (Ga. 2018).

Error in proceeding without counsel harmless. — As a juvenile court in a mother's parental rights termination proceeding failed to make inquiry as to whether the mother was indigent and whether she was waiving the right to counsel pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b), the judgment terminating her parental rights over her three children could not stand. Moreover, the record demonstrated many instances of harm caused by the mother's lack of counsel. In the Interest of P. D. W., 296 Ga. App. 189, 674 S.E.2d 338 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Juvenile did not make a knowing and intelligent decision to proceed without counsel where the referee did not warn her or her mother of the danger of proceeding without counsel or of the consequences of an affirmative finding or admission of the charge enumerated in the petition; the juvenile appellant and her mother did not stand before the court with open eyes, knowing the danger and consequences of proceeding without the benefit of legal representation. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-10-30).

15-11-104. Appointment and removal of guardian ad litem; use of a CASA.

(a) The court shall appoint a guardian ad litem for an alleged dependent child.

(b) An attorney for an alleged dependent child may serve as such child's guardian ad litem unless or until there is conflict of interest between the attorney's duty to such child as such child's attorney and the attorney's considered opinion of such child's best interests as guardian ad litem.

(c) A party to the proceeding, the employee or representative of a party to the proceeding, or any other individual with a conflict of interest shall not be appointed as guardian ad litem.

(d) A court shall appoint a CASA to act as guardian ad litem whenever possible, and a CASA may be appointed in addition to an attorney who is serving as a guardian ad litem.

(e) A lay guardian shall not engage in activities which could reasonably be construed as the practice of law.

(f) Before the appointment as a guardian ad litem, such person shall have received training appropriate to the role as guardian ad litem which is administered or approved by the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children. For attorneys, preappointment guardian ad litem training shall be satisfied within the attorney's existing continuing legal education obligations and shall not require the attorney to complete additional training hours in addition to the hours required by the State Bar of Georgia.

(g) Any volunteer guardian ad litem authorized and acting in good faith, in the absence of fraud or malice and in accordance with the duties required by this Code section, shall have immunity from any liability, civil or criminal, that might otherwise be incurred or imposed as a result of taking or failing to take any action pursuant to this Code section.

(h) The court may remove a guardian ad litem from a case upon finding that the guardian ad litem acted in a manner contrary to a child's best interests, has not appropriately participated in the case, or if the court otherwise deems continued service as inappropriate or unnecessary.

(i) A guardian ad litem shall not engage in ex parte contact with the court except as otherwise provided by law.

(j) The court, a child, or any other party may compel a guardian ad litem for a child to attend a trial or hearing relating to such child and to testify, if appropriate, as to the proper disposition of a proceeding.

(k) The court shall ensure that parties have the ability to challenge recommendations made by the guardian ad litem or the factual basis for the recommendations in accordance with the rules of evidence applicable to the specific proceeding.

(l) A guardian ad litem's report shall not be admissible into evidence prior to the disposition hearing except in accordance with the rules of evidence applicable to the specific proceeding.

(m) A guardian ad litem who is not also serving as attorney for a child may be called as a witness for the purpose of cross-examination regarding the guardian ad litem's report even if the guardian ad litem is not identified as a witness by a party.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2014 Code Sections 15-11-9(b) and 15-11-9.1(j)(1), which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Impeachment testimony from CASA representative properly excluded. — In an action wherein two parents were found to have deprived an adopted child due to one parent's sexual abuse of the child and the other parent's failure to protect the child from such abuse, the juvenile court properly refused to allow a court-appointed special advocate (CASA) to impeach a prior foster child whom the parents had previously cared for as former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-9.1 established confidentiality of the CASA's information. Further, allowing such testimony was inconsistent with the CASA program and the parents had multiple witnesses to impeach the foster child. In the Interest of B.H., 295 Ga. App. 297, 671 S.E.2d 303 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-9.1).

was vacated because the juvenile court erred in imposing blanket protection for the guardian ad litem's file under a privilege exception to discovery; on remand, the juvenile court was directed to exercise the court's discretion to determine whether the material sought by the mother was privileged or otherwise should not be subject to discovery. In the Interest of J. N., 344 Ga. App. 409, 810 S.E.2d 191 (2018).

Attorney also serving as guardian ad litem. — Aside from arguing that counsel's hasty appointment as guardian ad litem precluded counsel from assessing whether a conflict of interest existed, the defendant juvenile failed to identify what if any conflict of interest existed or how the defendant was harmed by the dual appointment and without such a showing the defendant's argument that the dual appointment was error failed. In the Interest of N. T., 355 Ga. App. 205, 843 S.E.2d 877 (2020).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-9(b), which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Appointment of guardian in deprivation proceedings. — Under the principle that the law is to be liberally construed toward the protection of the child whose well-being is threatened, deprivation proceedings arising from child abuse and neglect by a parent or caretaker present a conflict of interest wherein the provisions concerning the appointment of a guardian ad litem would apply. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-131.

Applicability to deprivation proceedings. — Inasmuch as the juvenile court's jurisdiction encompasses proceedings in which a child was alleged to be deprived, former Code 1933, § 24A-3301 (see former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-9) applied to a deprived child as defined in former Code 1933, § 24A-401 (see former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2). 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 76-131.

15-11-105. Powers and duties of guardian ad litem.

(a) A guardian ad litem shall advocate for a child's best interests in the proceeding for which the guardian ad litem has been appointed.

(b) In determining a child's best interests, a guardian ad litem shall consider and evaluate all of the factors affecting the best interests of a child in the context of a child's age and developmental needs. Such factors shall include:

(1) The physical safety and welfare of such child, including food, shelter, health, and clothing;

(2) The mental and physical health of all individuals involved;

(3) Evidence of domestic violence in any current, past, or considered home for such child;

(4) Such child's background and ties, including familial, cultural, and religious;

(5) Such child's sense of attachments, including his or her sense of security and familiarity and continuity of affection for the child;

(6) The least disruptive placement alternative for such child;

(7) The child's wishes and long-term goals;

(8) The child's community ties, including church, school, and friends;

(9) The child's need for permanence, including his or her need for stability and continuity of relationships with a parent, siblings, and other relatives;

(10) The uniqueness of every family and child;

(11) The risks attendant to entering and being in substitute care;

(12) The preferences of the persons available to care for such child; and

(13) Any other factors considered by the guardian ad litem to be relevant and proper to his or her determination.

(c) Unless a child's circumstances render the following duties and responsibilities unreasonable, a guardian ad litem shall at a minimum:

(1) Maintain regular and sufficient in-person contact with the child and, in a manner appropriate to his or her developmental level, meet with and interview such child prior to custody hearings, adjudication hearings, disposition hearings, judicial reviews, and any other hearings scheduled in accordance with the provisions of this chapter;

(2) In a manner appropriate to such child's developmental level, ascertain such child's needs, circumstances, and views;

(3) Conduct an independent assessment to determine the facts and circumstances surrounding the case;

(4) Consult with the child's attorney, if appointed separately, regarding the issues in the proceeding;

(5) Communicate with health care, mental health care, and other professionals involved with such child's case;

(6) Review case study and educational, medical, psychological, and other relevant reports relating to such child and the respondents;

(7) Review all court related documents;

(8) Attend all court hearings and other proceedings to advocate for such child's best interests;

(9) Advocate for timely court hearings to obtain permanency for such child;

(10) Protect the cultural needs of such child;

(11) Contact the child prior to any proposed change in such child's placement;

(12) Contact the child after changes in such child's placement;

(13) Request a judicial citizen review panel or judicial review of the case;

(14) Attend judicial citizen panel review hearings concerning such child and if unable to attend the hearings, forward to the panel a letter setting forth such child's status during the period since the last judicial citizen panel review and include an assessment of the DFCS permanency and treatment plans;

(15) Provide written reports to the court and the parties on the child's best interests, including, but not limited to, recommendations regarding placement of such child, updates on such child's adjustment to placement, DFCS's and respondent's compliance with prior court orders and treatment plans, such child's degree of participation during visitations, and any other recommendations based on the best interests of the child;

(16) When appropriate, encourage settlement and the use of any alternative forms of dispute resolution and participate in such processes to the extent permitted; and

(17) Monitor compliance with the case plan and all court orders.

(d)(1) Except as provided in Article 11 of this chapter, a guardian ad litem shall receive notices, pleadings, or other documents required to be provided to or served upon a party and shall be notified of all court hearings, judicial reviews, judicial citizen review panels, and other significant changes of circumstances of a child's case which he or she is appointed to the same extent and in the same manner as the parties to the case are notified of such matters.

(2) A guardian ad litem shall be notified of the formulation of any case plan of a child's case which he or she is appointed and may be given the opportunity to be heard by the court about such plans.

(e) Upon presentation of an order appointing a guardian ad litem, such guardian ad litem shall have access to all records and information relevant to a child's case to which he or she is appointed when such records and information are not otherwise protected from disclosure pursuant to Code Section 19-7-5. Such records and information shall not include records and information provided under Article 11 of this chapter or provided under Chapter 4A of Title 49.

(f) All records and information acquired or reviewed by a guardian ad litem during the course of his or her appointment shall be deemed confidential and shall not be disclosed except as ordered by the court.

(g) Except as provided in Code Section 49-5-41, regarding access to records, any guardian ad litem who discloses confidential information obtained during the course of his or her appointment, in violation of law, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. A guardian ad litem shall maintain all information and records regarding mental health, developmental disability, and substance abuse according to the confidentiality requirements contained in Code Section 37-3-166, 37-4-125, or 37-7-166, as applicable.

(h) In the event of a change of venue, the original guardian ad litem shall, as soon as possible, communicate with the appointed guardian ad litem in the new venue and shall forward all pertinent information to the new guardian ad litem.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-9.1(d), (f), (g), and (h), which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Impeachment testimony from CASA representative properly excluded. — In an action wherein two parents were found to have deprived an adopted child due to one parent's sexual abuse of the child and the other parent's failure to protect the child from such abuse, the juvenile court properly refused to allow a court-appointed special advocate (CASA) to impeach a prior foster child whom the parents had previously cared for as former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-9.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-105) established confidentiality of the CASA's information. Further, allowing such testimony was inconsistent with the CASA program and the parents had multiple witnesses to impeach the foster child. In the Interest of B.H., 295 Ga. App. 297, 671 S.E.2d 303 (2008).

Discovery from guardian ad litem's file. — Juvenile order granting a guardian a protective order against a mother was vacated because the juvenile court erred in imposing blanket protection for the guardian ad litem's file under a privilege exception to discovery; on remand, the juvenile court was directed to exercise the court's discretion to determine whether the material sought by the mother was privileged or otherwise should not be subject to discovery. In the Interest of J. N., 344 Ga. App. 409, 810 S.E.2d 191 (2018).

Fingerprinting of offenders not required. — Violation of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-9.1(h)(2) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-105(g)) was not an offense designated as one that requires fingerprinting. 2008 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2008-1.

15-11-106. Participation of a CASA.

(a)(1) Before executing duties as a CASA, and upon completion of all the requirements of an affiliate court appointed special advocate program, a CASA shall be sworn in by a judge of the juvenile court in the court or circuit in which he or she wishes to serve. A CASA shall not be assigned a case prior to being sworn in by a juvenile court judge as set forth in this paragraph.

(2) If a juvenile court judge determines that a child involved in a dependency proceeding needs a CASA, the judge shall have the authority to appoint a CASA, and in such circumstance shall sign an order appointing a CASA at the earliest possible stage of the proceedings. Such order shall impose on a CASA all the duties, rights, and responsibilities set forth in this Code section and Code Sections 15-11-104 and 15-11-105.

(b) The role of a CASA in juvenile court dependency proceedings shall be to advocate for the best interests of the child.

(c) In addition to the reasons stated in subsection (h) of Code Section 15-11-104, the court may discharge a CASA upon finding that the CASA has acted in a manner contrary to the mission and purpose of the affiliate court appointed special advocate program.

15-11-107. Treatment by spiritual means; life-threatening condition or disability exception.

(a) A parent, guardian, or legal custodian's reliance on prayer or other religious nonmedical means for healing in lieu of medical care, in the exercise of religious beliefs, shall not be the sole basis for considering his or her child to be a dependent child; provided, however, that the religious rights of a parent, guardian, or legal custodian shall not limit the access of a child to medical care in a life-threatening situation or when the condition will result in serious disability.

(b) In order to make a determination as to whether a child is in a life-threatening situation or that a child's condition will result in serious disability, the court may order a medical evaluation of a child.

(c) If the court determines, on the basis of any relevant evidence before the court, including the court ordered medical evaluation and the affidavit of the attending physician, that a child is in a life-threatening situation or that a child's condition will result in serious disability, the court may order that medical treatment be provided for such child.

(d) A child whose parent, guardian, or legal custodian inhibits or interferes with the provision of medical treatment in accordance with a court order shall be considered to be a dependent child and the court may find the parent, guardian, or legal custodian in contempt and enter any order authorized by and in accordance with the provisions of Code Section 15-11-31.

In light of the reenactment of this chapter, effective January 1, 2014, the reader is advised to consult the annotations following Code Section 15-11-2(8), for annotations which may also be applicable to this Code section.

Absence of proper parental care. — In a criminal trial on charges that the defendant allowed the repeated rapes of the defendant's 11-year-old child, the rule of lenity did not require that the defendant's felony convictions for being a party to rape and cruelty to children to be subsumed by the misdemeanor conviction for contributing to the deprivation of a minor because different facts were necessary to prove the offenses. The rape conviction required proof under O.C.G.A. §§ 16-2-20 and 16-6-1(a)(1) that the defendant took affirmative steps to aid the rapist. The cruelty to children conviction required proof under O.C.G.A. § 16-5-70(b) that the defendant caused excessive mental pain to the child. The conviction for contributing to the deprivation of a minor required proof under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) and O.C.G.A. 16-12-1(b)(3) that the defendant failed to provide the child with proper care necessary for the child's health, which the state proved by showing that the defendant failed to seek prenatal care for the child even though the defendant knew that the child was pregnant. Johnson v. State, 283 Ga. App. 99, 640 S.E.2d 644 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Deprivation prior to birth. — Juvenile court erred in taking judicial notice of a psychological evaluation and citizen review panel's report issued in a mother's case prior to a child's birth because the juvenile court could not consider the evaluation or report to determine whether the child was without proper parental care or control or that the mother was unfit to parent the child; neither of the documents were tendered into evidence, and there was no testimony as to the contents of the documents. In the Interest of S. D., 316 Ga. App. 86, 728 S.E.2d 749 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Children with special needs. — When employing the two-step test before terminating a parent's rights, a juvenile court order that a child was deprived, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), which was not appealed, was binding on a mother and satisfied the first factor of the test under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310); the juvenile court determined that due in part to a medical problem, the child had special needs and the mother lacked the ability to provide for the physical, mental, emotional, and moral conditions and needs of the child. In the Interest of J.T.W., 270 Ga. App. 26, 606 S.E.2d 59 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Because the juvenile court properly focused on the subject parent's abandonment of the child in support of the court's deprivation finding, and hence, the focus could not be on the adequate level of care given by the child's maternal grandparent, the court's deprivation finding was supported by sufficient evidence. Moreover, the state adequately showed that the parent was incapable of caring for any child, let alone this child, given that the child had special medical needs. In the Interest of A.B., 289 Ga. App. 655, 658 S.E.2d 205 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Parent with schizophrenia. — Evidence supported the finding that a child was deprived within the meaning of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), and that termination of the mother's parental rights was in the child's best interest, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-2320), because the mother, who was homeless and suffering from schizophrenia, failed to maintain contact with the agency or visit with the child for more than one year, and the mother never accomplished court-ordered goals for reunification or demonstrated the ability to adequately care for the child. In the Interest of S.G., 271 Ga. App. 776, 611 S.E.2d 86 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Child was deprived as defined in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) because the mother had borderline intellectual functioning and was at a high risk of engaging in physical child abuse, the child was a special needs child with developmental disorders and physical problems who was not being properly supervised in a dirty home where there was little food, the mother needed long-term intensive psychological treatment but failed to obtain counseling and stopped taking her medications, and the mother failed to support the child or to comply with case plan goals. In the Interest of A.K., 272 Ga. App. 429, 612 S.E.2d 581 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Child with multiple fractures. — Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's determination that a mother's child was deprived, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), due to the lack of proper parental care, that such deprivation was likely to continue or not be remedied due to the mother's failure to take responsibility for the child and to work at succeeding at the goals of the case plan, and that such deprivation would cause serious harm to the child, who needed a stable family environment; accordingly, termination of the mother's parental rights was proper pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320). In the Interest of B.S., 274 Ga. App. 647, 618 S.E.2d 695 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Failure to change baby's diaper. — As a parent's actions, including not feeding the child or changing the child's diaper often enough, placed the child at risk, and the parent received one-on-one instruction and training for a considerable period of time, yet failed to put the training into practice and continued to risk the child's well-being, there was clear and convincing evidence to support the trial court's finding that the child was a "deprived child" as defined by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A). In the Interest of W. A. P., 293 Ga. App. 433, 667 S.E.2d 197 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Failure to complete counseling. — Juvenile court properly held that a 13-year-old grandson continued to be deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) because clear and convincing evidence established that the child was without the care necessary for the child's mental or emotional health based on the grandmother/guardian failing to complete family counseling as required. In the Interest of J. B., 319 Ga. App. 796, 738 S.E.2d 639 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Medical issues resulting in deprivation. — Clear and convincing evidence supported an order adjudicating two children deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) because their sibling died of complications from tuberculosis (TB) after not receiving medical treatment for at least a month, the father had been twice diagnosed with active TB, but refused to admit he had TB, and the mother refused to take medication to keep her latent TB from becoming active, and would not admit that TB had anything to do with the death of the sibling. In the Interest of R.M., 276 Ga. App. 707, 624 S.E.2d 182 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

An order finding that a mother's two children were deprived was upheld on appeal since the evidence established that the mother's 12-year-old daughter was pregnant with the mother's 38-year-old boyfriend's child and the daughter had at least four sexual partners since the age of nine, and the mother's son had cavities so large that the cavities were visible in the boy's teeth and he had a very poor educational status; also, the mother failed to accept responsibility for the condition of the children. In the Interest of A.S., 285 Ga. App. 563, 646 S.E.2d 756 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Grandparent caused deprivation. — When a grandparent who had adopted three grandchildren struck one in the face, leaving a mark, pushed a child into a tub of water after asking if the child wanted to drown, spanked the children with a belt, and struck one child with a belt buckle and another with an extension cord, there was sufficient evidence of deprivation under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107). In the Interest of T.R., 284 Ga. App. 742, 644 S.E.2d 880 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

False allegations against spouse result in deprivation. — Children, ages four and six, were deprived as defined in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) based on their mother's unwarranted and unrelenting insistence that their father, whom she was divorcing, had abused them, subjecting the children to repeated forensic interviews and invasive medical examinations, despite being warned that these repeated interviews were harmful to the children. In the Interest of S.K., 301 Ga. App. 35, 686 S.E.2d 814 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Evidence sufficient to find deprivation or termination of parental rights. — Evidence that parents were imprisoned for abusing one of their three children, and their parental rights were terminated as to that child; that a second child, while in their care, sustained permanent brain injuries due to abusive head trauma, and the child's arm was fractured in a manner consistent with abuse; and the fact that the parents invoked the Fifth Amendment during the deprivation hearing was sufficient to allow the trial court to find by clear and convincing evidence that their two children were deprived as defined by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107). In the Interest of A.A., 293 Ga. App. 471, 667 S.E.2d 641 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Failure to provide adequate mental health support to children. — Under the circumstances in the mother's case, the juvenile court correctly found that the evidence of the children's deprivation was clear and convincing under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-1 and 15-11-2 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-1, 15-11-2, 15-11-381, and 15-11-471) in that the evidence demonstrated that the minor children were not receiving adequate support for the children's mental health issues. The uncontrolled behavior of the children related to those issues was negatively affecting the children's academic and social well-being and there was also clear and convincing evidence that the mother was not utilizing available resources to address the children's problems, and that the mother had attempted to have one of the children hospitalized because she could not control the child; moreover, one of the children also exhibited severe mental health issues, including cutting herself and attacking other children, that were not adequately addressed. In the Interest of D. Q., 307 Ga. App. 121, 704 S.E.2d 444 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Deprivation from inadequate treatment of psychological problems. — Juvenile court did not err in finding that a 12-year-old child was deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) due to the child's severe psychological problems, which required in-patient treatment, because the child's mother had been unable to obtain the recommended treatment for the child and the child's mental health was deteriorating. In the Interest of V.A.D., 305 Ga. App. 23, 699 S.E.2d 346 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Medical evidence supported finding of physical abuse of child. — Juvenile court did not err in finding that children were deprived and that their father was unable to provide proper parental care for the children because there was clear and convincing evidence to show that the father had engaged in past egregious conduct of a physically abusive nature toward one of the children; there was medical evidence regarding the nature and extent of the child's injuries and evidence that the injuries had been inflicted by the father. In the Interest of T. P., 310 Ga. App. 684, 713 S.E.2d 874 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Failure of babysitter to seek medical treatment. — Evidence of willfulness necessary to sustain conviction under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), the contributing to the deprivation of a minor statute, was shown since the evidence established that the defendant babysitter knew that the infant needed immediate medical attention, and that the babysitter failed to seek medical treatment for the infant. Hoang v. State, 250 Ga. App. 403, 551 S.E.2d 813 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

15-11-108. Notice of postadjudication hearings to parties.

(a) The court shall give to all parties written notice of the date, time, place, and purpose of the following postadjudication hearings or reviews:

(1) Nonreunification hearings;

(2) Disposition hearings;

(3) Periodic review hearings;

(4) Periodic reviews by judicial citizen review panel;

(5) Permanency plan hearings;

(6) Termination of parental rights hearings; and

(7) Posttermination of parental rights review hearings.

(b) Issuance and service of summons, when appropriate, shall comply with the requirements of Code Sections 15-11-160 and 15-11-161.

(c) Unless otherwise provided in this chapter, written notice shall be delivered to the recipient at least 72 hours before the hearing or review by United States mail, e-mail, or hand delivery.

15-11-109. (For effective date, see note.) Notice of hearings to specified nonparties.

(a) In advance of each hearing or review, DFCS shall give written notice of the date, time, place, and purpose of the review or hearing, including the right to be heard, to the caregiver of a child, the foster parent of a child, any preadoptive parent, or any relative providing care for a child. The written notice shall be delivered to the recipient at least 72 hours before the review or hearing, except in the case of preliminary protective hearings or emergency hearings when such notice is not possible, by United States mail, e-mail, or hand delivery.

(b) Notice of a hearing or review shall not be construed to require a legal custodian, foster parent, preadoptive parent, or relative caring for a child to be made a party to the hearing or review solely on the basis of such notice and opportunity to be heard.

(c) Upon placement of a child, DFCS shall provide the caregiver, foster parent, preadoptive parent, or relative providing care for such child with the following information in writing:

(1) At the time of placement:

(A) An explanation of the process for enrolling the child in school and any information necessary to complete the process;

(B) A description of any financial assistance for which the caregiver, foster parent, preadoptive parent, or relative may be eligible, including any financial assistance available for child care;

(C) A description of the reasonable and prudent parenting standard defined in Code Section 49-5-3; and

(D) Contact information for a county or district department of family and children services; and

(2) At the time of placement, if available:

(A) A copy of or recommendations from the child's most recent physical and dental examinations and any available information on the child's known medical conditions and current medications;

(B) A copy of or recommendations from the child's most recent developmental assessment, trauma assessment, and psychological evaluation;

(C) A copy of any court scheduling order or the dates and times for any scheduled hearings relating to the child; and

(D) Health insurance information for the child, including the child's Medicaid number.

If the information listed in this paragraph is not available to DFCS at the time of placement, DFCS shall request such information no later than 15 days after the child enters foster care and provide such information to the caregiver, foster parent, preadoptive parent, or relative providing care for the child. Provision of records in accordance with this paragraph shall not be considered a violation of subsection (b) of Code Section 49-5-40.

(d) (For effective date, see note.) At each hearing or review, the court shall make specific findings of fact in writing regarding participation by the caregiver of a child, the foster parent of a child, any preadoptive parent, or any relative providing care for a child. Such findings of fact shall include:

(1) Whether the caregiver was provided notice of the hearing or review, including the method, and whether the caregiver expressed an interest in being heard at the hearing or review; and

(2) If the caregiver is present, specific information regarding the caregiver's views, including, but not limited to, concerning the child's well-being, health, and safety; any changes the caregiver believes are necessary to advance the child's well-being, health, and safety; and the timeliness, necessity, and quality of services being provided to the child and caregiver; and a summary of documentation presented by the caregiver regarding the child's well-being, health, and safety, including, but not limited to, reports from physicians, counselors, psychologists, and teachers.

Court had jurisdiction to enter termination of parental rights. — Juvenile court had jurisdiction to enter a termination of parental rights order because the juvenile court scheduled a timely hearing on the Department of Human Resource's motion for an extension, and the mother was served with notice of the hearing; the mother, however, failed to appear for the scheduled hearing. By failing to appear for a timely hearing of which the mother had notice, the mother waived the requirement of a hearing before the expiration of the earlier custody order. 15-11-110. Continuance of a hearing in dependency proceedings.

(a) Upon request of an attorney for a party, the court may continue any hearing under this article beyond the time limit within which the hearing is otherwise required to be held; provided, however, that no continuance shall be granted that is contrary to the interests of the child. In considering a child's interests, the court shall give substantial weight to a child's need for prompt resolution of his or her custody status, the need to provide a child with a stable environment, and the damage to a child of prolonged temporary placements.

(b) Continuances shall be granted only upon a showing of good cause and only for that period of time shown to be necessary by the evidence presented at the hearing on the motion. Whenever any continuance is granted, the facts proved which require the continuance shall be entered in the court record.

(c) A stipulation between attorneys or the convenience of the parties shall not constitute good cause. Hearings with dependency case time limitations required by Code Section 15-11-102 and termination of parental rights hearings shall take priority in attorney conflict resolution over all other civil and criminal hearings and nonjury appearances in any other class of trial court. The need for discovery shall not constitute good cause unless the court finds that a person or entity has failed to comply with an order for discovery.

(d) In any case in which a child or his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian is represented by an attorney and no objection is made to an order continuing any such hearing beyond the time limit, the absence of such an objection shall be deemed a consent to the continuance; provided, however, that even with consent, the court shall decide whether to grant the continuance in accordance with subsection (a) of this Code section.

The 2020 amendment, effective July 1, 2020, substituted "Hearings with dependency case time limitations required by Code Section 15-11-102 and termination of parental rights hearings shall take priority in attorney conflict resolution over all other civil and criminal hearings and nonjury appearances in any other class of trials court." for "Except as otherwise provided by judicial rules governing attorney conflict resolution, a pending criminal prosecution or family law matter shall not constitute good cause." in subsection (c).

Juvenile Code requires separate trials with each having different goals. — First or adjudicatory process in a delinquency case is a full scale fact-finding hearing to determine if the child committed the act with which the child is charged and whether that constitutes delinquency. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201); J.B. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 545, 228 S.E.2d 712 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Purpose of division of juvenile trials into two phases. — In dividing juvenile trials into two phases lawmakers intended to give the juvenile judge an opportunity to conduct the "functional equivalent" of a regular trial (the adjudicatory hearing) in a manner which would satisfy the required constitutional procedures concomitant with the usual legal rules, such as those dealing with admissibility of evidence, proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and similar requirements applicable to adults. Thereafter, at the dispositional phase, the judge was to explore all available additional avenues, including psychiatric and sociological studies, which would enable the judge to provide a solution for the youngster and the family aimed at making the child a secure law-abiding member of society. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Continuances under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-110 apply only to dependency proceedings. — O.C.G.A. § 15-11-110, which assists and protects children whose physical or mental health and welfare is substantially at risk of harm from abuse, neglect, or exploitation and who may be further threatened by the conduct of others, applies to dependency proceedings and not to delinquency proceedings. In the Interest of A. H., 332 Ga. App. 590, 774 S.E.2d 163 (2015).

Continuation of a dispositional hearing should have been allowed when the probation officer notified the court that the officer was not prepared to make a recommendation regarding disposition. In re M.D., 233 Ga. App. 261, 503 S.E.2d 888 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

In a child dependency case involving a child to whom the 10-day hearing time limit in O.C.G.A. § 15-11-181(a) applied, the juvenile court's grant of a continuance until four weeks later did not meet the stringent requirements of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-110 for granting a continuance; dismissal without prejudice should have been granted. In the Interest of I. L. M., 304 Ga. 114, 816 S.E.2d 620 (2018).

15-11-111. Court orders.

(a) At any hearing held with respect to a child, the court in its discretion, and based upon the evidence, may enter an order:

(1) Accepting or rejecting any DFCS report;

(2) Ordering an additional evaluation; or

(3) Undertaking such other review as it deems necessary and appropriate to determine the disposition that is in the child's best interests.

(b) The court's order:

(1) May incorporate all or part of the DFCS report; and

(2) Shall include findings of fact which reflect the court's consideration of the oral and written testimony offered by all parties, as well as nonparties, who are required to be provided with notice and a right to be heard in any hearing to be held with respect to a child, and DFCS.

General Consideration

In light of the reenactment of this chapter, effective January 1, 2014, the reader is advised to consult the annotations following Code Section 15-11-2, for annotations which may also be applicable to this Code section.

Termination

Court had jurisdiction to enter termination of parental rights. — Juvenile court had jurisdiction to enter a termination of parental rights order because the juvenile court scheduled a timely hearing on the Department of Human Resource's motion for an extension, and the mother was served with notice of the hearing; the mother, however, failed to appear for the scheduled hearing. By failing to appear for a timely hearing of which the mother had notice, the mother waived the requirement of a hearing before the expiration of the earlier custody order. In the Interest of M.S.S., 308 Ga. App. 614, 708 S.E.2d 570 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reunification

1. Reunification Efforts Not Required

Presumption that reunification services are inappropriate. — Pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204), reunification services were inappropriate if reasonable efforts to reunify a child with the child's family would be detrimental to the child; although rebuttable, a presumption existed. In the Interest of J.P.V., 261 Ga. App. 194, 582 S.E.2d 170 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Juvenile court's decision to terminate parental rights was supported by clear and convincing evidence including the family's history of instability, the fact that the children lived in filth for their entire lives, their developmental and emotional problems, and evidence of malnourishment and poor hygiene. The mother failed to rebut the presumption that reunification services should not be provided to the family and that efforts to reunify the children with the mother would be detrimental to the children. In the Interest of T.D.B., 266 Ga. App. 434, 597 S.E.2d 537 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Because the parental rights to a mother's other four children had previously been terminated around the time the mother's infant child was born, the juvenile court did not err in approving a nonreunification plan involving that infant child pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a)(4)(C); further, a presumption of nonreunification arose based on the mother's medically verified mental deficiency. In the Interest of J.P., 280 Ga. App. 100, 633 S.E.2d 442 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Presumption against reunification. — Because there was no evidence that parents suffered from a medically verifiable deficiency of their mental health, no presumption against reunification arose on such account. In the Interest of A.M.,

306 Ga. App. 358, 702 S.E.2d 686 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Notice of nonreunification. — Parent had notice that the Georgia Department of Family and Children Services was seeking nonreunification and had the opportunity to contest the issue; after a hearing the court continued the case, noting that a nonreunification case plan had been filed and the parent was contesting the issue of nonreunification, and the hearing was held on the later date with the parent and the parent's attorney present at the hearing. In the Interest of A. E., 314 Ga. App. 206, 723 S.E.2d 499 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reasonable efforts at reunification not required. — Reasonable efforts toward reunification of a father with his child were not required because the court made findings of aggravated circumstances including a finding that the father had sexually abused the child and the child's siblings. In the Interest of B.M., 252 Ga. App. 716, 556 S.E.2d 883 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a juvenile court's judgment that reunification services were inappropriate for a mother with a history of drug and alcohol use, whose minor child had been taken from her home on three occasions because of the mother's inability to provide adequate food, clothing, and shelter for the child. In the Interest of J.P.V., 261 Ga. App. 194, 582 S.E.2d 170 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Although former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-134) required a juvenile court to make a finding of fact as to whether reasonable efforts at reunification were made prior to placement of the children in a county agency in a parental rights termination proceeding, such finding was not required because the children had already been found to be deprived by the mother. In the Interest of S.N.L., 275 Ga. App. 600, 621 S.E.2d 792 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Termination of a parent's rights to a child was not barred by the parent's claim that a county department of family and children services established a nonreunification plan before contacting the parent and then denied the parent's requests for information; former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58 did not impose upon termination proceedings the same procedures that applied to disposition orders and recommendations regarding reunification and did not obligate the department in every case to create a plan for reunification, and when the department afforded the parent an opportunity to participate in the case by mailing the initial case plan to the parent and explaining the need to legitimize the child, the parent failed to seize the opportunity or to comply timely with the instructions on legitimization. In the Interest of T.C., 282 Ga. App. 659, 639 S.E.2d 601 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

2. Reunification Efforts

Reasonable efforts at reunification. — Because a caseworker began working with the father even before he established paternity, and because the Department of Family and Children Services prepared a case plan for the father, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-202), reasonable efforts were made to place the child with the father before the child was placed with the Department. In re T.B.W., 312 Ga. App. 733, 719 S.E.2d 589 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reunification plan. — Because the juvenile court entered court-ordered goals for reunification, but failed to enter a specific plan for reunification after the deprivation finding, and the mother's attorney was left with virtually no time to file any motions requesting visitation or a case plan for reunification, under the mandate of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a)(2) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-202), the juvenile court was required to set out a plan for reunification and give the mother the opportunity to meet those goals. In the Interest of B.C., 250 Ga. App. 152, 550 S.E.2d 707 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Mother's claim that the reunification plan that the state family welfare department imposed on her was too vague to comply with the applicable statutory requirements was waived because that claim was not raised in the trial court, but, in any event, the plan was sufficiently specific to meet the statutory requirements. In the Interest of D.E., 269 Ga. App. 753, 605 S.E.2d 394 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

2. Reunification Efforts (Cont'd)

Failure to comply with previous reunification plan. — One of the noted factors in finding a child to be deprived was proof that a parent had unjustifiably failed to comply with a previously ordered plan designed to reunite the family under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204). In the Interest of R.M., 276 Ga. App. 707, 624 S.E.2d 182 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. T. 15, C. 11).

3. Reunification Inappropriate

Reunification not appropriate. — Evidence that reunification would subject the child to further educational neglect, inadequate supervision, and domestic violence, that the mother's cognitive limitations placed the child at risk, that the mother failed to make progress despite intervention, and that there were no other services that could be provided to eliminate the risk of harm to child, made it clear reunification would be detrimental. In re C.N., 231 Ga. App. 639, 500 S.E.2d 400 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Since the evidence showed that children were deprived due to a mother's lack of parental care, that the deprivation was likely to continue and cause serious harm to the children, and that the mother unjustifiably failed to comply with previous reunification plans, the trial court did not err in approving the nonreunification plan. In re C.S., 236 Ga. App. 312, 511 S.E.2d 895 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Reunification was not appropriate since evidence showed that parents unjustifiably failed to comply with plans designed to reunite the parents with the children, the children were removed from the parents' custody on two or more occasions, reunification services were previously provided, and there were grounds for terminating parental rights. In re R.U., 239 Ga. App. 573, 521 S.E.2d 610 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Juvenile court did not err in approving a nonreunification plan when convincing evidence showed reunification was not in the best interests of the children and the likelihood that it would only prolong their deprivation. In the Interest of U.B., 246 Ga. App. 328, 540 S.E.2d 278 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. T. 15, C. 11).

Evidence that the children's mother permitted and/or assisted her husband in making videotapes for distribution of the children being stripped and spanked was sufficient to show that reunification services between the children and their mother should not be provided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204); furthermore, a presumption against nonreunification existed because of the evidence of the mother's past egregious conduct, and there was insufficient evidence to overcome the presumption favoring reunifications. In the Interest of J.P., 253 Ga. App. 732, 560 S.E.2d 318 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. T. 15, C. 11).

Reunification was not appropriate since evidence of the children's starvation, coupled with the mother's complete denial of responsibility for their emaciated condition, amply supported the juvenile court's findings that she physically neglected the children and that reunification would be detrimental to the children. In the Interest of R.N.R., 257 Ga. App. 93, 570 S.E.2d 388 (2002) (decided under former Code O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Evidence was sufficient to support a juvenile court's approval of nonreunification of the mother and her child under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204) as the mother failed to rebut the presumption that reunification services not be provided due to her medically verifiable health deficiency when the mother provided evidence that she complied with her prenatal care, did fine during pregnancy even though she was not on her medication, and was a loving mother, but a psychiatrist testified that the mother was mentally ill, that the illness could cause the mother to hurt the child, and that the mother's mental condition was likely to continue. In the Interest of D.L.W., 264 Ga. App. 168, 590 S.E.2d 183 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. T. 15, C. 11).

As the trial court found clear and convincing evidence of a medically verifiable condition creating the parent's inability to properly parent the children, this finding created a presumption that reunification services need not be provided. In the Interest of A.W., 264 Ga. App. 705, 592 S.E.2d 177 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Evidence was sufficient to support the trial court's judgment that reunification efforts should be discontinued as to the mother as clear and convincing evidence showed that the mother had not, as required by the reunification plan, gone six consecutive months without testing positive for drugs and had refused to submit to two drug screenings; also, the mother had not rebutted the presumption that reunification efforts should be discontinued. In the Interest of J.B., 274 Ga. App. 564, 618 S.E.2d 187 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Plan for nonreunification under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204) was in the child's best interests since: (1) the grandmother relapsed after regaining custody and became so drunk that she passed out and left the four-year-old child unsupervised; (2) the incident resulted in the grandmother's father applying for a protection order; (3) the grandmother was dismissed from a substance abuse treatment program; (4) the grandmother pled guilty to driving under the influence and child endangerment two years earlier; and (5) the child had behavioral problems that resulted in hospitalization and that led a child services agency to seek therapeutic foster care before seeking permanent adoption. In the Interest of J.B., 274 Ga. App. 20, 619 S.E.2d 305 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Trial court properly granted an agency's motion to end reunification services provided to the parents as the evidence indicated that the parents refused to cooperate with case plans and had completely denied responsibility for placing the children in a harmful situation. In the Interest of D.B., 277 Ga. App. 454, 627 S.E.2d 101 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Rational trier of fact could have found clear and convincing evidence that the parent unjustifiably failed to comply with the reunification plan and that reasonable efforts to reunify the child with the parent would be detrimental to the child under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204); the parent failed to complete parenting classes, failed to obtain stable housing and employment, failed to pay child support, failed to attend psychotherapy, and disappeared for months at a time without explanation and without visiting the child. In the Interest of C.A., 279 Ga. App. 747, 632 S.E.2d 698 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

In the termination of parental rights case, contrary to the mother's argument, the reunification plan complied with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(c)(3) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-201); the plan required the mother, who was mentally retarded, to prove that the mother could be a fit parent, and the mother failed to show this. In the Interest of H.F.G., 281 Ga. App. 22, 635 S.E.2d 338 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Order holding that reunification efforts on the part of a mother were not in the best interest of her two children was upheld on appeal pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204) since the record established that the mother suffered from mental illness and was unable to care for her children. The mother failed to rebut the presumption that reunification services were inappropriate when she had unjustifiably failed to comply with a previously ordered plan. In the Interest of T.L., 285 Ga. App. 526, 646 S.E.2d 728 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Although a parent made substantial progress on a reunification plan while incarcerated, an order extending temporary custody for an additional year in favor of the Department of Family and

3. Reunification Inappropriate (Cont'd)

Children Services was upheld on appeal as sufficient evidence was presented that the parent was unable to: (1) establish stable housing; (2) complete a substance abuse assessment; and (3) demonstrate six months of clean drug screens; further, as the parent was living with the other parent who evidence showed to be an unrehabilitated drug user, the trial court was authorized to conclude that the child at issue would not be in a safe environment if returned to the parent. In the Interest of R.B., 285 Ga. App. 556, 647 S.E.2d 300 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Juvenile court did not err in approving nonreunification with regard to a parent and two twin children as some evidence showed that the parent: unjustifiably failed to comply with the case plan goals to provide financial support for the children; failed to maintain stable housing and employment; failed to attend all scheduled psychological evaluations; exhibited paranoid and psychopathic personality tendencies to the extent that the parent's ability to care for the children was severely impaired; and was convicted of threatening a prior spouse and stalking that spouse and children and, thus, had engaged in actions which constituted egregious conduct toward those children. In the Interest of T.W., 288 Ga. App. 386, 654 S.E.2d 218 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Trial court properly extended a department of family and child services' custody of a child when the child's mother, communicating with the child over the Internet while posing as an adult man, had pretended to have witnessed a sexually graphic event; the child was especially vulnerable to sexually inappropriate behavior; and the mother's conduct during visitation with the child, including her statements that the child would be a suspect if anything happened to the mother, that the child would never live with her father, and that the child was "acting like a whore," was also probative of whether she would act abusively toward her daughter if she were returned to her custody. The fact that the mother had substantially completed her reunification case plan did not mandate that the child be returned to her custody. In the Interest of Q.H., 291 Ga. App. 598, 662 S.E.2d 358 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

There was sufficient clear and convincing evidence presented to authorize the juvenile court to find that a mother's child was deprived and that the deprivation was likely to continue, and consequently, that reunification of the child with the mother would be detrimental to the child and was not in the child's best interest because, while the juvenile court took into consideration the previous termination of the mother's parental rights in determining whether the child was deprived, the juvenile court also heard substantial evidence showing that the mother's mental, emotional, and financial condition had not changed significantly since her parental rights to her children were terminated and that, despite the assistance of the Department of Family and Children Services and the loss of her four children, the mother still lacked the necessary skills, judgment, and resources to properly care for the child. In re R. B., 309 Ga. App. 407, 710 S.E.2d 611 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Juvenile court did not err in terminating the reunification services and approving the non-reunification plan because clear and convincing evidence supported the juvenile court's conclusion that the child was deprived based on the mother's long-term substance abuse and that such deprivation was likely to continue and cause harm to the child. In the Interest of J. T., 322 Ga. App. 4, 743 S.E.2d 571 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reunification inappropriate when children had severe medical issues. — Trial court did not err in granting a motion filed by the Department of Family and Children Services for nonreunification because evidence supported the trial court's finding that the parents were not able to meet their children's medical needs, and the children's lives would be endangered if the appropriate level of care was not maintained; the parents' physical neglect of the children and their continuing inability to meet their children's extensive medical needs was sufficient for any rational trier of fact to find by clear and convincing evidence that reunification efforts would be detrimental to the children. In the Interest of A.M., 306 Ga. App. 358, 702 S.E.2d 686 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Report recommending nonreunification met requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-200), notwithstanding evidence which the mother contended showed that the contents of the report recommending nonreunification were determined prior to her meeting with caseworkers for the county Department of Family and Children Services. Although the court agreed with the mother that a report should not be finalized until after such a meeting had been conducted, it disagreed with the mother's apparent contention that nothing should be committed to writing prior to such meeting. In the Interest of T.R., 248 Ga. App. 310, 548 S.E.2d 621 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Discontinuing efforts for reunification appropriate. — Because a trial court found in the court's unappealed orders that the children were deprived and that such deprivation was caused by their father, in a second unappealed order finding that the deprivation was likely to continue and that the father was untruthful, evasive, and inconsistent in his testimony, the statutory criteria for discontinuing efforts for reunification of the family were met. In re L.S.M., 236 Ga. App. 537, 512 S.E.2d 397 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Denial of reunification was proper based on findings that this was the third time that the children had been removed from the mother's care, that the Department of Family and Children Services had previously undertaken reasonable efforts to reunify the family, that the mother had unjustifiably failed to comply with prior plans, and that she had serious medical problems. In re K.M., 240 Ga. App. 67, 522 S.E.2d 667 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Order terminating reunification services was proper after a case manager testified that the mother did not meet the case plan requirements, and although the mother claimed that she worked "daily" to clean up her house and satisfy the other case plan goals, she readily admitted that she failed to make her home safe for the child within the 90-day time period established by the court. In the Interest of B.D.G., 262 Ga. App. 843, 586 S.E.2d 736 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Termination of reunification services was affirmed since the evidence showed that the parent had a history of chronic unrehabilitated abuse of alcohol or controlled substances with the effect of rendering the parent incapable of providing adequately for the needs of the children. In the Interest of S.A., 263 Ga. App. 610, 588 S.E.2d 805 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Record supported the juvenile court's judgment that a parent did not fulfill the terms of a case plan that was established by the Department of Family and Children's Services because the parent continued using cocaine and refused to attend substance abuse treatment; thus, the child was deprived and custody was properly placed in the department. In the Interest of J.L., 269 Ga. App. 226, 603 S.E.2d 742 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Because a mother unjustifiably failed to comply with the court-ordered case-plan goals, ample evidence supported the juvenile court's order approving the termination of reunification services under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204). In the Interest of K.R., 270 Ga. App. 296, 605 S.E.2d 911 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Because a presumption of nonunification arose after a parent failed to pay child support or comply with the reunification plan, reunification services were properly discontinued; but a placement order with a foster care agency was reversed as a grandparent presented uncontradicted evidence supporting a consideration for alternative placement. In the Interest of J.J., 287 Ga. App. 746, 652 S.E.2d 639 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Inappropriate (Cont'd)

Juvenile court properly terminated reunification services under since the child's parent had been incarcerated for the majority of the child's life and faced additional jail time if convicted of several pending charges, and the parent's child enjoyed a significant bond with the child's aunt and uncle, with whom the child had lived for several years. In the Interest of C.P., 291 Ga. App. 699, 662 S.E.2d 802 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Grant of a petition to cease efforts to reunify the mother with the mother's three children was supported by evidence that the mother continued to live with the mother's drug-supplier boyfriend and use illegal drugs, had not obtained a source of income, and had not ensured that the children had no contact with the mother's boyfriend, who allegedly touched one of the children inappropriately. In the Interest of R. G., 322 Ga. App. 523, 745 S.E.2d 752 (2013).

4. Procedure

Notice. — At a permanency hearing, at which a mother appeared represented by counsel, the mother was not entitled to prior notice by report or motion that DFCS would seek termination of reunification services and an award of long-term custody at the hearing. In the Interest of D. H., 313 Ga. App. 664, 722 S.E.2d 388 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Discontinuing efforts for reunification not appropriate. — Evidence that the mother had substantially complied with the reunification plan and that, in the opinion of the psychologist retained by the Department of Family and Children Services, the psychologist did not understand why the department was seeking to end reunification efforts when the only way it was possible to determine if the mother would be able to effectively parent her eight year old child in the future was by reuniting the mother and child overcame the statutory presumption that reunification was not appropriate in cases when a child had been removed from the mother's home on at least two prior occasions and reunification services had been made available on those occasions. In the Interest of M.H., 251 Ga. App. 528, 554 S.E.2d 616 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Because the record failed to contain clear and convincing evidence to support the termination of reunification services to a parent, but instead showed that the parent substantially met the goals outlined in the reunification plan, maintained an income level appropriate to meet the needs of the parent's family, and cooperated in submitting to a psychological evaluation and any recommended treatment, that part of the lower court's judgment was reversed; but, the denial of the parent's reunification motion and the extension of temporary custody was affirmed. In the Interest of S.L.E., 280 Ga. App. 145, 633 S.E.2d 454 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Trial court improperly granted a motion filed by the Department of Family and Children Services to discontinue efforts to reunify parents with their children because the trial court erred in finding that the parents suffered from a medically verifiable deficiency of their mental health such as to render them incapable of providing for the physical needs of the children; the four psychological reports, two for each parent, that were submitted into evidence for consideration by the trial court provided no evidentiary support for the trial court's finding of a "medically verifiable deficiency" of the parents' mental health because the reports did not suggest that either parent lacked the mental competency to care for their children. In the Interest of A.M., 306 Ga. App. 358, 702 S.E.2d 686 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

A juvenile court's orders terminating reunification services and awarding custody of a child to the maternal grandmother were not supported by clear and convincing evidence because the mother demonstrated that she had Supplemental Security Income for two other children and that she could live comfortably with her children at her mother's home. In the Interest of D. H., 313 Ga. App. 664, 722

S.E.2d 388 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Failure to challenge deprivation order. — Failure to challenge a deprivation order precluded a parent's challenge to the sufficiency of the evidence showing that reasonable reunification efforts were made. In the Interest of R.D.B., 282 Ga. App. 628, 639 S.E.2d 565 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Finding of reunification efforts not required. — Because the children had not been placed in the custody of the Department of Family and Children Services, the trial court was not required to find that the agency had made reasonable reunification efforts. In the Interest of T.R., 284 Ga. App. 742, 644 S.E.2d 880 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Parent's complicity in murder. — When a mother's boyfriend was charged with murdering one of her three children, and she was charged with complicity, and since there was no evidence she knew that the boyfriend abused her children, and none of the aggravated circumstances contained in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a)(4)(A)-(C) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-203) had been shown, the trial court erred in excusing the state from making reasonable efforts toward reunification. In the Interest of A.B., 263 Ga. App. 697, 589 S.E.2d 264 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reunification plan requiring English classes. — Trial court did not misread parents' case plan to include goals that were not expressed in the plan because evidence supported the trial court's finding that the parents' case plan required the parents to have a psychological examination and follow through with recommended treatment; because the psychologist who recommended English as a second language classes pointed to the parents' language limitations as causing them to miss information necessary to provide appropriate medical care for the children, the recommended action was directly related to the circumstances which required the children be separated from the parents, and the recommended action could be included in the case plan without further judicial review. In the Interest of A.M., 306 Ga. App. 358, 702 S.E.2d 686 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Findings of fact not set forth separately from conclusions of law. — After the now-15-year-old child was removed from an aunt and uncle's custody and adjudicated dependent based on allegations that the aunt had physically abused the child, the juvenile court erred in entering an order granting a motion for nonreunification filed by the County Department of Family and Children Services because the nonreunification order did not set forth the juvenile court's findings of facts, separate from the conclusions of law, in a manner that would permit the appellate court to make an intelligent review of the merits of the challenges to the sufficiency of the evidence. In the Interest of B. G., 345 Ga. App. 167, 812 S.E.2d 552 (2018).

Juvenile court's order finding the child to be dependent and granting the maternal grandmother custody failed to sufficiently explain the court's conclusion as to dependency and third-party custody because the order did not set forth findings of fact, separate from conclusions of law, in a manner permitting the appellate court to review the merits of the challenges to the sufficiency of the evidence. In the Interest of J. G., 350 Ga. App. 588, 829 S.E.2d 828 (2019).

In a dependency case, the juvenile court's order denying the mother's motion for immediate reunification and return of the mother's six children to the mother's custody on the court's belief that the mother would not protect the children from the biological father of five of the children once the father was released from prison was vacated as the order did not include findings of fact, separate from the court's apparent conclusions of law, in a manner that would permit the appellate court to make an intelligent or meaningful review of the challenges to the sufficiency of the evidence. In the Interest of T. Y., 350 Ga. App. 553, 829 S.E.2d 808 (2019).

Reunification order insufficient to allow for meaningful appellate review. — Juvenile court's order that reunification was not in a child's best interests was vacated because the juvenile court found that reunification efforts would be detrimental to the child but did not specify which, if any, of the presumptions under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204) supported the court's finding; therefore, it was impossible for the court of appeals to determine whether the order was supported by clear and convincing evidence. In re T.S., 310 Ga. App. 100, 712 S.E.2d 121 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

15-11-112. Court ordered visitation.

(a) When a child is removed from his or her home, the court shall order reasonable visitation that is consistent with the age and developmental needs of a child if the court finds that it is in a child's best interests. The court's order shall specify the frequency, duration, and terms of visitation including whether or not visitation shall be supervised or unsupervised.

(b) There shall be a presumption that visitation shall be unsupervised unless the court finds that unsupervised visitation is not in a child's best interests.

(c) Within 30 days of the court finding that there is a lack of substantial progress towards completion of a case plan, the court shall review the terms of visitation and determine whether the terms continue to be appropriate for a child or whether the terms need to be modified.

15-11-113. Date child is considered to have entered foster care.

When a child is alleged to be a dependent child, the date such child is considered to have entered foster care shall be the date of the first judicial finding that such child has been subjected to child abuse or neglect or the date that is 60 days after the date on which such child is removed from his or her home, whichever is earlier.

PART 2

VENUE FOR DEPENDENCY PROCEEDINGS

15-11-125. Venue.

(a) A proceeding under this article may be commenced:

(1) In the county in which a child legally resides; or

(2) In the county in which a child is present when the proceeding is commenced if such child is present without his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian or the acts underlying the dependency allegation are alleged to have occurred in that county.

(b) For the convenience of the parties, the court may transfer the proceeding to the county in which a child legally resides. If the proceeding is transferred, certified copies of all legal and social documents and records pertaining to the proceeding on file with the clerk of court shall accompany the transfer.

Editor's notes. — Many of the following annotations should be examined in light of the amendment to Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. XIV, Para. VI (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. VI) which took effect November 1, 1981.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-15 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-29, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Determining legal residence. — In determining where a juvenile resides for purposes of venue, it is generally the legal residence that controls. In re A.M.C., 213 Ga. App. 897, 446 S.E.2d 760 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

Challenge to court's jurisdiction unsuccessful. — Although former Code 1933, § 79-404 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-2-4) provided that the domicile of an illegitimate child shall be that of his or her mother, yet, where the plea to the jurisdiction alleged "this court has accepted jurisdiction and custody of the minor child … and is holding said child subject to the order of this court," which clearly showed that the child was before the court, and there was no allegation showing the domicile of the mother, who was present in court, or any other reason why the juvenile court did not have jurisdiction, it was not error to overrule the plea. Springstead v. Cook, 215 Ga. 154, 109 S.E.2d 508 (1959) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 87, § 3).

TAKING INTO CARE

15-11-130. Emergency care and supervision of child without court order; immunity.

(a) Notwithstanding Code Sections 15-11-133 and 15-11-135, DFCS shall be authorized to provide emergency care and supervision to any child without seeking a court order for a period not to exceed seven days when:

(1)(A) As a result of an emergency or illness, the person who has physical and legal custody of a child is unable to provide for the care and supervision of such child, and such person or a law enforcement officer, emergency personnel employed by a licensed ambulance provider, fire rescue personnel, or a hospital administrator or his or her designee requests that DFCS exercise such emergency custody; and

(B) A child is not at imminent risk of abuse or neglect, other than the risks arising from being without a caretaker; or

(2) The child is a victim of trafficking for labor or sexual servitude under Code Section 16-5-46.

(b) During the period when a child is in the temporary care and supervision of DFCS, DFCS shall endeavor to place such child with a relative of such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian, in foster care, or in emergency foster care or shall make other appropriate placement arrangements. DFCS shall have the same rights and powers with regard to such child as does his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian including the right to consent to medical treatment.

(c) Immediately upon receiving custody of a child, DFCS shall begin a diligent search for a relative or other designee of a child's parent who can provide for the care and supervision of such child.

(d) At any time during such seven-day period, and upon notification to DFCS that a child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian or an expressly authorized relative, or designee thereof, is able to provide care to and exercise control over a child, DFCS shall release such child to the person having custody of such child at the time such child was taken into DFCS custody or to such person's authorized relative or designee.

(e) Upon the expiration of such seven-day period, if a child has not been released or if DFCS determines that there is an issue of neglect, abandonment, or abuse, DFCS shall promptly contact a juvenile court intake officer or bring such child before the juvenile court. If, upon making an investigation, the juvenile court intake officer finds that foster care is warranted for such child, then, for purposes of this chapter, such child shall be deemed to have been placed in foster care at the time such finding was made and DFCS may file a dependency petition.

(f) DFCS and its successors, agents, assigns, and employees shall be immune from any and all liability for providing care and supervision in accordance with this Code section, for consenting to medical treatment for a child, and for releasing a child.

Any offense occurring before July 1, 2019, shall be governed by the statute in effect at the time of such offense, and any resulting conviction shall be considered a prior conviction for the purpose of imposing a sentence that provides for a different penalty for a subsequent conviction."

15-11-130.1. Referral to victim assistance organizations of child suspected of being a victim of sexual exploitation or trafficking.

A law enforcement officer or agency or DFCS shall refer any child suspected of being a victim of sexual exploitation or trafficking under Code Section 16-5-46 to an available victim assistance organization, as certified by the Criminal Justice Coordinating Council pursuant to Code Section 15-21-132, which provides comprehensive trauma-informed services designed to alleviate the adverse effects of trafficking victimization and to aid in the child's healing, including, but not limited to, assistance with case management, placement, access to educational and legal services, and mental health services.

15-11-131. Temporary protective custody of child by physician without court order and without parental consent; immunity.

(a) Notwithstanding Code Section 15-11-133, a physician licensed to practice medicine in this state who is treating a child may take or retain temporary protective custody of such child, without a court order and without the consent of his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian, provided that:

(1) A physician has reasonable cause to believe that such child is in a circumstance or condition that presents an imminent danger to such child's life or health as a result of suspected abuse or neglect; or

(2) There is reasonable cause to believe that such child has been abused or neglected and there is not sufficient time for a court order to be obtained for temporary custody of such child before such child may be removed from the presence of the physician.

(b) A physician holding a child in temporary protective custody shall:

(1) Make reasonable and diligent efforts to inform the child's parents, guardian, or legal custodian of the whereabouts of such child;

(2) As soon as possible, make a report of the suspected abuse or neglect which caused him or her to take temporary custody of the child and inform DFCS that such child has been held in temporary custody; and

(3) Not later than 24 hours after such child is held in temporary custody:

(A) Contact a juvenile court intake officer, and inform such intake officer that such child is in imminent danger to his or her life or health as a result of suspected abuse or neglect; or

(B) Contact a law enforcement officer who shall take such child and promptly bring such child before a juvenile court intake officer.

(c) A child who meets the requirements for inpatient admission shall be retained in a hospital or institution until such time as such child is medically ready for discharge. Upon notification by the hospital or institution to DFCS that a child who is not eligible for inpatient admission or who is medically ready for discharge has been taken into custody by a physician and such child has been placed in DFCS custody, DFCS shall take physical custody of such child within six hours of being notified.

(d) If a juvenile court intake officer determines that a child is to be placed in foster care and the court orders that such child be placed in DFCS custody, then:

(1) If such child remains in the physical care of the physician, DFCS shall take physical possession of such child within six hours of being notified by the physician, unless such child meets the criteria for admission to a hospital or other medical institution or facility; or

(2) If such child has been brought before the court by a law enforcement officer, DFCS shall promptly take physical possession of such child.

(e) If a juvenile court intake officer determines that a child should not be placed in foster care, such child shall be released.

(f) If a child is placed in foster care, then the court shall notify such child's parents, guardian, or legal custodian, the physician, and DFCS of the preliminary protective hearing which is to be held within 72 hours.

(g) If after the preliminary protective hearing a child is not released, DFCS shall file a petition alleging dependency in accordance with this article, provided that there is a continued belief that such child's life or health is in danger as a result of suspected abuse or neglect.

(h) Any hospital or physician authorized and acting in good faith and in accordance with acceptable medical practice in the treatment of a child under this Code section shall have immunity from any liability, civil or criminal, that might otherwise be incurred or imposed as a result of taking or failing to take any action pursuant to this Code section. This Code section shall not be construed as imposing any additional duty not already otherwise imposed by law.

15-11-132. Verbal custody order.

(a) The facts supporting the issuance of an order of removal may be relayed orally, including telephonically, to the judge or a designated juvenile court intake officer, and the order directing that a child be taken into custody may be issued orally or electronically.

(b) When a child is taken into custody under exceptional circumstances, an affidavit or sworn complaint containing the information previously relayed orally, including telephonically, shall be filed with the clerk of the court the next business day, and a written order shall be issued if not previously issued. The written order shall include the court's findings of fact supporting the necessity for such child's removal from the custody of his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian in order to safeguard such child's welfare and shall designate a child's legal custodian.

(c) The affidavit or sworn complaint filed after a child has been placed shall indicate whether the child was released to such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian or remains removed.

(d) DFCS shall promptly notify the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the nature of the allegations forming the basis for taking a child into custody and, if such child is not released, of the time and place of the preliminary protective hearing.

15-11-133. Removal of child from the home; protective custody; consideration of alternatives.

(a) A child may be removed from his or her home, without the consent of his or her parents, guardian, or legal custodian:

(1) Pursuant to an order of the court under this article; or

(2) By a law enforcement officer or duly authorized officer of the court if:

(A) A child is in imminent danger of abuse or neglect if he or she remains in the home; or

(B) A child is a victim of trafficking for labor or sexual servitude under Code Section 16-5-46.

(b) Upon removing a child from his or her home, a law enforcement officer or duly authorized officer of the court shall:

(1) Immediately deliver such child to a medical facility if such child is believed to suffer from a serious physical condition or illness which requires prompt treatment, and, upon delivery, shall promptly contact DFCS;

(2) Bring such child immediately before the juvenile court or promptly contact the juvenile court; and

(3) Promptly give notice to the court and such child's parents, guardian, or legal custodian that such child is in protective custody, together with a statement of the reasons for taking such child into protective custody.

(c) The removal of a child from his or her home by a law enforcement officer shall not be deemed an arrest.

(d) A law enforcement officer removing a child from his or her home has all the privileges and immunities of a law enforcement officer making an arrest.

(e) A law enforcement officer shall promptly contact the juvenile court for issuance of a court order once such officer has taken a child into protective custody and delivered such child to a medical facility.

(f) The juvenile court shall immediately determine if a child should be released, remain in protective custody, or be brought before the court upon being contacted by a law enforcement officer, duly authorized officer of the court, or DFCS that a child has been taken into protective custody.

(g) In addition to the requirements of Code Section 15-11-134, prior to authorizing the removal of a child from his or her home as provided in paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section or ordering a child to remain in protective custody as provided in subsection (f) of this Code section, the court shall consider whether there are reasonable alternatives to the removal of the child and placement of the child in foster care and may order temporary alternatives to foster care in lieu of removing the child and placing the child in protective custody or continuing the child in protective custody pursuant to Code Section 15-11-133.1.

The 2019 amendments. — The first 2019 amendment, effective April 18, 2019, substituted "the juvenile court" for "a juvenile court intake officer" at the end of paragraph (b)(2) and near the beginning of subsection (e); substituted "The juvenile court" for "A juvenile court intake officer" at the beginning of subsection (f); and added subsection (g). The second 2019 amendment, effective July 1, 2019, rewrote paragraph (a)(2), which formerly read: "By a law enforcement officer or duly authorized officer of the court if a child is in imminent danger of abuse or neglect if he or she remains in the home." JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Authority of county department of family and children services. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-17 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-133) empowered a county department of family and children services to act in a situation of medical neglect. Bendiburg v. Dempsey, 909 F.2d 463 (11th Cir. 1990), cert. denied, 500 U.S. 932, 111 S. Ct. 2053, 114 L. Ed. 2d 459 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-17).

Removal from custody improper. — Trial court erred in sua sponte removing two boys from their mother's custody and placing the boys in the temporary custody of DFCS as part of the court's ruling on a deprivation petition involving their sisters; no petition was filed with regard to the boys and the court could not find that former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-45(a)(4) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-133) authorized the boys' removal as the trial court made no findings as to one boy and only limited ones as to the other, which did not demand a loss of custody. In the Interest of N.D., 286 Ga. App. 236, 648 S.E.2d 771 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-45).

Escape from custody. — Juvenile who was taken into custody by the police for a probation violation, and who escaped, could not be adjudicated delinquent based on the adult crime of misdemeanor escape since the juvenile was not in custody prior to or after having been convicted of a felony, misdemeanor, or violation of a municipal ordinance. In re J.B., 222 Ga. App. 252, 474 S.E.2d 111 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-17).

Purpose. — Purpose of former Code 1933, § 24A-1402 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) was to make certain that a juvenile's rights were protected when the juvenile was taken into custody or placed in detention. Paxton v. State, 159 Ga. App. 175, 282 S.E.2d 912, cert. denied, 248 Ga. 231, 283 S.E.2d 235 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Importance of procedural due process in juvenile proceedings. — Safeguarding of the child's procedural rights takes on the same importance that procedural due process has in an adult criminal proceeding context. R.A.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 366, 274 S.E.2d 752 (1980), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 66 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Applicability of statutory safeguards. — Statutory safeguards were applicable to juvenile cases and a criminal case when a juvenile was tried as an adult. Bussey v. State, 144 Ga. App. 875, 243 S.E.2d 99 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Trial court did not err in admitting a juvenile defendant's videotaped statement to the police because the police did not follow the juvenile intake procedures outlined in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-47(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133 and 15-11-502) as: (1) defendant was 15-years-old at the time of the shooting and police discussed the nature of the charges; (2) police read defendant the Miranda rights, and all questioning took place with defendant's mother present; (3) both defendant and the mother voluntarily signed a waiver of counsel form that explained defendant's Miranda rights prior to any questioning taking place; (4) defendant averred that no threats, promises, tricks, or other forms of persuasion were used to induce the defendant to sign the waiver form; (5) the interview itself lasted only 15 or 20 minutes, and police did not employ any tactics to pressure or coerce the defendant into giving a statement; and (6) police ceased all questioning the moment that the defendant's mother asked for an attorney. Williams v. State, 273 Ga. App. 42, 614 S.E.2d 146 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-47).

Because a juvenile's allegations that the state failed to comply with the procedural requirements under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49(c)(1) and (e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-102, 15-11-145, 15-11-151, 15-11-472, and 15-11-521) should have been raised in the superior court and had no bearing on the validity of the delinquency petitions or the substantive charges against the juvenile in juvenile court, the juvenile court properly prevented the juvenile from presenting evidence regarding the procedural violations. In the Interest of K.C., 290 Ga. App. 416, 659 S.E.2d 821 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-47).

Procedural requirements are applicable when child is taken into custody or temporarily detained, regardless of whether it is for alleged delinquency, unruliness, or deprivation. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Failure to follow mandated procedures warrants dismissal without prejudice of a petition alleging deprivation of a child. Another petition can be filed without delay if there is reason to believe the child is being neglected or abused. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 140 Ga. App. 175, 230 S.E.2d 139 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Failure to follow procedures did not warrant dismissal. — Even though taking a juvenile to police headquarters before releasing the juvenile to the juvenile's parents was a violation of subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133 and 15-11-502), dismissal of the delinquency petition was not required because the violation did not cause injury or prejudice to the juvenile. In re C.W., 227 Ga. App. 763, 490 S.E.2d 442 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Former statute directed person taking child into custody to follow one of specified courses, "without first taking the child elsewhere," such as to the police station. M.K.H. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 565, 218 S.E.2d 284 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

When failure to bring juvenile promptly before court not prejudicial. — Any deviation from former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-410, 15-11-411, 15-11-412, 15-11-501, 15-11-502, and 15-11-507) resulting from a police officer taking a juvenile to the scene of a crime for show-up identification following the juvenile's arrest but prior to taking the juvenile before the juvenile court was minimal and not prejudicial error. M.A.K. v. State, 171 Ga. App. 151, 318 S.E.2d 828 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Failure of the state police to take a defendant promptly before a judicial officer does not make the defendant's conviction constitutionally infirm unless the defendant's defense was prejudiced thereby. Paxton v. Jarvis, 735 F.2d 1306 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 935, 105 S. Ct. 335, 83 L. Ed. 2d 271 (1984); Barnes v. State, 178 Ga. App. 205, 342 S.E.2d 388 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Juvenile may first be booked if rights are observed. — There was no violation of former Code 1933, § 24A-1402) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-410, 15-11-411, 15-11-412, 15-11-501, 15-11-502, and 15-11-507) because a juvenile suspect was first taken to a police station for booking purposes, if the juvenile was advised of the juvenile's rights under that section to be questioned elsewhere; the juvenile signed a waiver of these rights on an "advice to juveniles" form and was detained at a youth development center. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Juvenile court intake officers act in a judicial capacity; therefore, law enforcement officers, who perform an executive function, are per se disqualified from acting as intake officers. Brown v. Scott, 266 Ga. 44, 464 S.E.2d 607 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Juvenile court intake officer is a public officer for purposes of a quo warranto proceeding. Brown v. Scott, 266 Ga. 44, 464 S.E.2d 607 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Failure to comply with notice and hearing requirements of the Juvenile Code, after an allegedly deprived child has been taken from the parent's custody, prejudices or injures the rights of the parent, primarily the right to possession of the child under former Code 1933, §§ 74-106, 74-108, and 74-203 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1, 19-7-25, and 19-9-2). Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Time limits are jurisdictional and must be adhered to. — Time limits established by the General Assembly in the Juvenile Code are jurisdictional and must be strictly adhered to. A failure to comply with the time periods requires dismissal. R.A.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 366, 274 S.E.2d 752 (1980), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 66 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

No jurisdiction for acts punishable by loss of life or confinement for life. — Juvenile court did not have exclusive jurisdiction over delinquent acts for which a child (under 17 years old) may be punished by loss of life or confinement for life in the penitentiary. Nevertheless, the statutory safeguards provided were applicable to both criminal and juvenile cases. Jackson v. State, 146 Ga. App. 375, 246 S.E.2d 407 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Incriminating statements obtained in violation of the Juvenile Code are not rendered per se inadmissible; rather, the issue to be considered is whether there was a knowing and intelligent waiver by the appellant of the appellant's constitutional rights in making the incriminating statements. Lattimore v. State, 265 Ga. 102, 454 S.E.2d 474 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Barber v. State, 267 Ga. 521, 481 S.E.2d 813 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Skidmore v. State, 226 Ga. App. 130, 485 S.E.2d 540 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Gilliam v. State, 268 Ga. 690, 492 S.E.2d 185 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Simon v. State, 269 Ga. 208, 497 S.E.2d 231 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Hanifa v. State, 269 Ga. 797, 505 S.E.2d 731 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Attaway v. State, 244 Ga. App. 5, 534 S.E.2d 580 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Evidence not inadmissible because of technical violations. — Since no injury appeared to have resulted, technical violations of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-410, 15-11-411, 15-11-412, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) would not render infirm evidence obtained as a result of such violations. In re J.D.M., 187 Ga. App. 285, 369 S.E.2d 920 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Guardian cooperating with police. — By notifying the defendant's guardian of the defendant's arrest and the grounds therefor, the police complied with subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-501). That the guardian cooperated with the police in the police investigation of the defendant's involvement in the crime did not require a finding that the statement was not voluntarily made. Burnham v. State, 265 Ga. 129, 453 S.E.2d 449 (1995), overruled on other grounds, Stinski v. State, 281 Ga. 783, 642 S.E.2d 1 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Rule as to confessions of juveniles should be same as that for confessions of adults because law enforcement officers cannot be certain when officers question a juvenile what kind of case may develop, and the statutory safeguards are applicable to both criminal and juvenile cases. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402); Jackson v. State, 146 Ga. App. 375, 246 S.E.2d 407 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-19, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Juvenile court intake officers. — Officers of the juvenile division of the sheriff's department may not also serve as juvenile court intake officers for purposes of compliance with former statutory provisions. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-66 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

15-11-133.1. Temporary alternatives to foster care; orders; minimal preliminary assessments; preliminary protective hearing; time for hearings.

(a) Temporary alternatives to foster care may be ordered by the court ex parte, prior to a preliminary protective hearing, or may be ordered following a preliminary protective hearing. A temporary alternative to foster care may include one or more of the following:

(1) A temporary order authorizing the child to be cared for by a relative or fictive kin;

(2) A temporary protective order pursuant to the provisions of Code Section 15-11-29; or

(3) An order that the DFCS investigate and report to the court whether removal is necessary.

(b) An order pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section requiring the child to be cared for by a relative or fictive kin shall be based upon a finding by the court that continuation of the child in his or her home would be contrary to his or her welfare. Such findings shall be made on an individualized basis and shall be documented in the court's written order.

(c) When entering an order pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section, the court shall order a preliminary assessment of the person who is to provide care for the child by a probation officer, or such other individual or agency as the court may designate, which shall include, at a minimum:

(1) A walk-through of such person's residence to identify safety hazards;

(2) An in-state criminal record check, pursuant to subsection (a) or (c) of Code Section 35-3-34, of such person and all other adults living in such person's residence;

(3) A search of the Georgia Sex Offender Registry for the name of such person and all other adults living in such person's residence; and

(4) A search of data provided electronically to the public by the Department of Community Supervision and the Department of Corrections for information concerning such person and all adults living in such person's residence.

Such preliminary assessment shall be completed no later than 72 hours after the time such order is entered except that if such order is entered on a weekend, such preliminary assessment may be completed no later than five days after the order is entered.

(d) Upon issuance of an order for a temporary alternative to foster care, a preliminary protective hearing shall be completed as provided in Code Section 15-11-145, except that such preliminary protective hearing shall be held within five days of the order for a temporary alternative to foster care.

(e) Unless modified by the court, temporary alternatives to foster care ordered by the court in accordance with this Code section shall remain in effect until modified by the court or until the court has held the preliminary protective hearing. The court may continue to impose the temporary alternatives to foster care after the preliminary protective hearing in accordance with subsection (b) of Code Section 15-11-146.

General Consideration

Applicability. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-134) was inapplicable since a child remained in the legal custody of the child's father with whom the child had been residing for several months prior to the deprivation hearing as the child was not placed in the custody of the Georgia Department of Family and Children Services. In the Interest of K.J., 268 Ga. App. 843, 602 S.E.2d 861 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

In a termination of parental rights case, the court rejected the parents' argument that the parents had been deprived of the opportunity to achieve reunification under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a)(2) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-202) because the Department of Family and Children Services had not promptly presented a second reunification plan; while the parents had made laudable efforts to comply with the second case plan, the parent had not complied with the first plan; moreover, former § 15-11-58 did not apply to termination proceedings. In the Interest of T.W.O., 283 Ga. App. 771, 643 S.E.2d 255 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Limits on dispositional power of trial judge after initial commitment. — Except as provided in subsection (b) (now subsection (a)) of former Code 1933, § 24A-2701 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-134) the commitment for an additional two years, the trial judge can neither terminate nor extend the disposition, and after the Division of Youth Services had physical custody under the order, the judge was also prevented from changing, modifying, or vacating the order on the ground that changed circumstances so required in the best interests of the child. Department of Human Resources v. J.R.S., 161 Ga. App. 262, 287 S.E.2d 713 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Jurisdiction. — Superior court properly declined jurisdiction in a custody action brought by grandparents because once a juvenile court took jurisdiction of a deprivation action concerning the child and, later, a termination action of parental rights, the court took jurisdiction of the entire case of the minor child including the issues of disposition and custody. Segars v. State, 309 Ga. App. 732, 710 S.E.2d 916 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Foster children. — Former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-13 and 15-11-58 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-30, 15-11-134, and 15-11-200 et seq.), 20-2-690.1, and 49-5-12 were not too vague and amorphous to be enforced by the judiciary and impose specific duties on the state defendants; thus, the federal regulatory scheme embodied in the CSFR process did not relieve the state defendants of the defendants obligation to fulfill the defendants statutory duties to the foster children, nor did the former statute provide a legal excuse for the defendants failure to do so. Kenny A. v. Perdue, No. 1:02-cv-1686-MHS, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27025 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 11, 2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Removal from home. — Since a minor was living with the minor's aunt and uncle for over 10 years and they thereafter commenced a private child deprivation proceeding against the minor's mother, it was determined that former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-134) was inapplicable to the action and, accordingly, the procedures outlined therein did not have to be followed prior to the juvenile court making an order that the legal custody be vested in the aunt and uncle. Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58 required that the child be "removed" from the child's home, but since the child already considered home to be with the child's aunt and uncle, the juvenile court had not removed the child and the procedures therein did not apply. In the Interest of J.W.K., 276 Ga. 314, 578 S.E.2d 396 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

There was sufficient support for the trial court's finding that continued custody in a grandparent who had adopted three grandchildren would be contrary to the welfare of the children since the grandparent had struck one child in the face, leaving a mark, spanked the children with a belt, pushed one child into a tub of water after asking if the child wanted to die and drown, and struck one child with an extension cord and another with a belt buckle; the trial court found that the children had suffered emotional trauma because of the grandparent's acts and that the grandchildren's condition improved significantly when the grandchildren were removed from the grandparent's home and placed with relatives. In the Interest of T.R., 284 Ga. App. 742, 644 S.E.2d 880 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Relative placement not a priority. — Children were entitled to have juvenile court's order awarding the aunt and uncle custody vacated because the rehearing court erroneously held that the Juvenile Code established a preference for relative placement; while former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-134, 15-11-202, and 15-11-203) listed the custody options available to a juvenile judge in a certain order, the list was not to be construed as expressing a legislative intent for priority of placement. In the Interest of J. C. W., 318 Ga. App. 772, 734 S.E.2d 781 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Evidence insufficient for finding of deprivation. — Juvenile court erred in extending temporary custody in the Department of Family and Children Services for an additional 12 months as: (1) the child's father was found to be a fit parent and was fully able to assume custody; (2) there was no testimony that the father was not capable of taking care of the child; and (3) the father completed every aspect of the case plan and was eligible for day-care assistance; thus, the evidence presented at the hearing fell far short of meeting the clear and convincing standard necessary to support a finding of deprivation. In the Interest of J.P., 280 Ga. App. 100, 633 S.E.2d 442 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Evidence sufficient for finding of deprivation. — Because the Department of Family and Children Services presented clear and convincing evidence of a parent's inability to control a child to the extent necessary for that child's mental, physical, and emotional health, and the parent was afforded sufficient due process, the juvenile court's deprivation finding was upheld on appeal; moreover, absent evidence of a custody dispute, the proceeding was not a pretextual custody battle which divested the juvenile court of jurisdiction. In the Interest of D.T., 284 Ga. App. 336, 643 S.E.2d 842 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

In a deprivation case involving four children, sufficient evidence existed to support the order adjudicating the children deprived since the evidence established that the parents admitted chronically abusing alcohol and admitted that such abuse led to domestic violence; the father of the children falsely accused child molestation against one of the children, which affected that child so badly that the child refused to live at home and required psychiatric treatment, and even without testimony as to the effect on the children, the juvenile court was authorized to infer from the evidence that the alcohol abuse and domestic violence in the home had an adverse effect on the minor children. In the Interest of E.D., 287 Ga. App. 152, 650 S.E.2d 800 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Mother's parental unfitness based on the mother's long term drug abuse, including during the mother's pregnancy with the minor child, was shown by clear and convincing evidence and permitted the award of temporary custody of the child to the county department of family and children services under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-134, 15-11-202, and 15-11-203). In the Interest of N.H., 297 Ga. App. 344, 677 S.E.2d 399 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Clear and convincing evidence under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a) established that a child was deprived due to parental unfitness because the mother was unable to care for the child from birth due to mental instability, the father was intentionally absent for the first two months of the child's life, and although the parents had married, neither had a job or stable housing, and the mother's mental instability had not been addressed. In re V.D., 303 Ga. App. 155, 692 S.E.2d 780 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Juvenile court did not err in granting a motion filed by a county department of family and children services to extend the department's temporary custody of a mother's children because clear and convincing evidence supported the juvenile court's conclusion that the children remained deprived; there was evidence that the mother was a chronic drug user who remained unrehabilitated even after her children had been removed from her custody, and the evidence of chronic unrehabilitated drug use, along with the evidence that the mother had not completed her reunification case plan goals, authorized the juvenile court to conclude that the children would continue to be deprived if the children were returned to the mother. In the Interest of Q.A., 306 Ga. App. 386, 702 S.E.2d 701 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

No equal protection violation. — Treating deprived children who were placed in the legal custody of the Department of Families and Children Services because there was no relative committed to the child who was available for immediate placement differently from deprived children who did have a committed parent or guardian available for immediate placement did not violate the equal protection clause or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II. as the classes were not similarly situated and the laws were rationally related to the goal of minimizing government intervention while ensuring that children were reared in a familial environment. In the Interest of A.N., 281 Ga. 58, 636 S.E.2d 496 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Procedure

Findings made without transcript reversed. — Because the juvenile court primarily based the court's decision that a parent's two children were deprived, awarding temporary custody of the children to the county, on evidence received at an unrecorded hearing, and a waiver requiring a transcript of that hearing was not in evidence, those findings were reversed, and the case was remanded. In the Interest of D.P., 284 Ga. App. 453, 644 S.E.2d 299 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Failure to follow required procedures. — Juvenile court erred by not holding a preliminary protective hearing within 72 hours after the children were placed in foster care, by not giving the mother proper notice of the hearing, and by not making the required written findings regarding the children's welfare. In the Interest of R. B., 346 Ga. App. 564, 816 S.E.2d 706 (2018).

Temporary custody and visitation rights. — Juvenile court had jurisdiction to modify an order granting temporary custody of a deprived child to the Department of Family and Children Services and to permit visitation by parents who filed a petition for visitation rights four months after the custody order. In re K.B., 188 Ga. App. 199, 372 S.E.2d 476 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Consolidated proceedings not appealable when party consented. — Having consented to the consolidation of nonreunification proceedings with termination proceedings, the mother could not challenge the procedure for the first time on appeal. In the Interest of A.S.O., 243 Ga. App. 1, 530 S.E.2d 261 (2000), cert denied, 531 U.S. 1176, 121 S. Ct. 1150, 148 L. Ed. 2d 1012 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

15-11-135. Placement in eligible foster care.

(a) A child taken into custody shall not be placed in foster care prior to the hearing on a petition for dependency unless:

(1) Foster care is required to protect the child;

(2) The child has no parent, guardian, or legal custodian or other person able to provide supervision and care and return him or her to the court when required; or

(3) An order for the child's foster care has been made by the court.

(b) No child alleged to be or adjudicated as a dependent child shall be detained in any jail, adult lockup, or adult detention facility, nor shall a child be detained in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility unless a child is also alleged to have committed a delinquent act or adjudicated to be a delinquent child and the court determines that the requirements for detention under Article 6 of this chapter are met.

(c) An alleged dependent child may be placed in foster care only in:

(1) A licensed or approved foster home or a home approved by the court which may be a public or private home;

(2) The home of the child's noncustodial parent;

(3) The home of a relative;

(4) The home of fictive kin;

(5) A facility operated by a licensed child welfare agency; or

(6) A licensed shelter care facility approved by the court.

(d) The actual physical placement of a child pursuant to this Code section shall require the approval of the judge of the juvenile court or his or her designee.

(e) In any case in which a child is taken into protective custody of DFCS:

(1) DFCS shall give preference for placement to an adult who is a relative or fictive kin over a nonrelated caregiver, provided that such relative or fictive kin has met all requirements for a DFCS relative or fictive kin placement and such placement is in the best interests of the child; and

(2) Such child shall be placed together with his or her siblings who are also in protective custody or DFCS shall include a statement in its report and case plan of continuing efforts to place the siblings together or document why such joint placement would be contrary to the safety or well-being of any of the siblings. If siblings are not placed together, DFCS shall provide for frequent visitation or other ongoing interaction between siblings, unless DFCS documents that such frequent visitation or other ongoing interaction would be contrary to the safety or well-being of any of the siblings.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability. — Contrary to the defendant's claims, neither former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-67 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-442) nor former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-48(e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-135, 15-11-400, and 15-11-412) applied to the defendant's case because both provisions applied when the child was found "unruly," and the defendant was adjudicated delinquent, not unruly. In the Interest of B. Q. L. E., 297 Ga. App. 273, 676 S.E.2d 742, cert. denied, No. S09C1197, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 787 (Ga. 2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-48).

Suspect may first be booked if rights are observed. — There was no violation of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-20 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-155, 15-11-400, 15-11-412, and 15-11-504) because a juvenile suspect was first taken to a police station for booking purposes, if the juvenile was advised of the juvenile's rights under that section to be questioned elsewhere; the juvenile signed a waiver of these rights on an "advice to juveniles" form and was detained at a youth development center. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Confession admissible if juvenile taken before county police. — Juvenile defendant's confession was admissible despite the fact that the juvenile was not taken before an impartial juvenile intake officer but a member of the county police department since the defendant's mother was present during the juvenile's interrogation and it was not alleged that the officer failed to perform any duty imposed upon the officer. Worthy v. State, 253 Ga. 661, 324 S.E.2d 431 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-20).

All detention facilities not supervised and controlled by juvenile courts. — Juvenile courts are not granted the power and authority to supervise and control all the various detention facilities. Jones v. State, 134 Ga. App. 611, 215 S.E.2d 483 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

No guarantee of all bed space desired by courts. — Subsection (a) of former section contemplated otherwise than that the Department of Human Resources guarantee all bed space desired by the juvenile courts. Jones v. State, 134 Ga. App. 611, 215 S.E.2d 483 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Confinement designation not exercise of court's jurisdiction. — Juvenile court's order for detention was merely an order pursuant to the former statute; designating the place of confinement was not an exercise of jurisdiction by that court. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Foster relationship gives rise to no state-created rights. — Children are placed in foster homes as an alternative to institutional care for what is clearly designed as a transitional phase in the child's life. Therefore, in the eyes of the state, which creates the foster relationship, the relationship is considered temporary at the outset and gives rise to no state-created rights in the foster parents. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 563 F.2d 1200 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 437 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 3103, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1141 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Juvenile intake officer to locate appropriate juvenile facility. — Juvenile intake officer should make all reasonable efforts to locate an appropriate juvenile facility for the detention of an allegedly delinquent child before determining that such a facility was "not available" for purposes of the former statute. 1978 Op. PART 4

PRELIMINARY PROTECTIVE HEARINGS

15-11-145. Preliminary protective hearing requirements.

(a) If an alleged dependent child is removed from his or her home and is not returned home, the preliminary protective hearing shall be held promptly and not later than 72 hours after such child is placed in foster care; provided, however, that if the 72 hour time frame expires on a weekend or legal holiday, the hearing shall be held on the next day which is not a weekend or legal holiday.

(b) Reasonable oral or written notice of the preliminary protective hearing, stating the time, place, and purpose of the hearing, shall be given to the child who is a party in such hearing and, if such person can be found, to his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian.

(c) If an alleged dependent child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian has not been notified of the preliminary protective hearing and did not appear or waive appearance at such hearing and thereafter files an affidavit showing such facts, the court shall rehear the matter without unnecessary delay and shall order such child's release unless it appears from such hearing that such child's foster care is warranted or required.

(d) The following persons shall have the right to participate in the preliminary protective hearing:

(1) A child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian, unless such person cannot be located or fails to appear in response to the notice;

(2) A child's attorney and guardian ad litem if a guardian ad litem has been appointed;

(3) A child who was removed from his or her home, unless the court finds, after considering evidence of harm to such child that will result from such child's presence at the proceeding, that being present is not in such child's best interests;

(4) A parent's attorney if an attorney has been retained or appointed;

(5) The assigned DFCS caseworker; and

(6) The attorney for DFCS.

(e) The court may allow the following parties to be present at the preliminary protective hearing, if the court finds it is in the best interests of the child:

(1) Any relative or other persons who have demonstrated an ongoing commitment to a child with whom a child might be placed;

(2) DFCS employees involved in the case;

(3) An advocate as requested by an alleged dependent child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian; and

(4) Other persons who have knowledge of or an interest in the welfare of the child who is alleged to be dependent.

(f) At the commencement of a preliminary protective hearing, the court shall inform the parties of:

(1) The contents of the complaint in terms understandable to the parties;

(2) The nature of the proceedings in terms understandable to the parties; and

(3) The parties' due process rights, including the parties' right to an attorney and to an appointed attorney if they are indigent persons, the right to call witnesses and to cross-examine all witnesses, the right to present evidence, and the right to a trial by the court on the allegations in the complaint or petition.

(g) If a child is not released at the preliminary protective hearing, a petition for dependency shall be made and presented to the court within five days of such hearing.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Notice and hearing requirements were mandatory and must be adhered to in order for the juvenile court to proceed with the adjudicatory hearing. If for some reason the statutes were not, dismissal of the petition would be without prejudice. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Failure to comply with notice and hearing requirements of the Juvenile Code, after an allegedly deprived child has been taken from the parent's custody, prejudices or injures the rights of the parent, primarily the right to possession of the child under former Code 1933, §§ 74-106, 74-108, and 74-203 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1, 19-7-25, and 19-9-2). Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Juvenile court erred by not holding a preliminary protective hearing within 72 hours after the children were placed in foster care, by not giving the mother proper notice of the hearing, and by not making the required written findings regarding the children's welfare. In the Interest of R. B., 346 Ga. App. 564, 816 S.E.2d 706 (2018).

Failure to comply with time limits requires dismissal. — Time limits established by the General Assembly in the Juvenile Code are jurisdictional and must be strictly adhered to. A failure to comply with the time periods set out in the statute requires dismissal. R.A.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 366, 274 S.E.2d 752 (1980), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 66 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Definition of "day." — Word "day," not being qualified, means a calendar or civil day consisting of 24 hours from midnight to midnight. J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

15-11-146. Preliminary protective hearing; findings.

(a) At the preliminary protective hearing, the court shall determine:

(1) Whether there is probable cause to believe a child is a dependent child; and

(2) Whether protective custody of a child is necessary to prevent abuse or neglect pending the hearing on the dependency petition.

(b) The court:

(1) On finding that the complainant has proven neither of the required elements prescribed in subsection (a) of this Code section, shall dismiss the case and shall return the child before the court to his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(2) On finding that the complainant has not met the burden of proving that protective custody is necessary, shall return the child before the court to his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian pending the hearing on the dependency petition. The court may also order a temporary alternative to foster care as provided in subsection (a) of Code Section 15-11-133.1 if it determines that such an order is necessary to prevent abuse or neglect prior to the adjudicatory hearing and to prevent the need for the child to be placed in foster care; or

(3) On finding that the complainant has met the burden prescribed in subsection (a) of this Code section, may place the child before the court in the temporary custody of DFCS pending the hearing on the dependency petition. DFCS shall prioritize temporary placement with an adult who is a relative or fictive kin, provided that such individual has met DFCS's requirements for relative placement and such temporary placement is in the best interests of such child.

(c) A court's order removing a child from his or her home or ordering a temporary alternative to foster care in accordance with paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of Code Section 15-11-133.1 shall be based upon a finding that:

(1) Continuation in his or her home would be contrary to such child's welfare; or

(2) Removal is in such child's best interests.

(d) The court shall make written findings as to whether DFCS has made reasonable efforts to prevent or eliminate the need for removal of a child from his or her home and to make it possible for such child to safely return home. If the court finds that no services were provided but that reasonable services would not have eliminated the need for protective custody, the court shall consider DFCS to have made reasonable efforts to prevent or eliminate the need for protective custody. The court shall include in the written findings a brief description of what preventive and reunification efforts were made by DFCS.

(e) In determining whether a child shall be removed or continued out of his or her home, the court shall consider whether reasonable efforts can prevent or eliminate the need to separate the family. The court shall make a written finding in every order of removal that describes why it is in the best interests of the child that he or she be removed from his or her home or continued in foster care.

(f) To aid the court in making the required written findings, DFCS shall present evidence to the court outlining the reasonable efforts made to prevent taking a child into protective custody and to provide services to make it possible for such child to safely return to his or her home and why protective custody is in the best interests of the child.

15-11-150. Authority to file petition.

A DFCS employee, a law enforcement officer, or any person who has actual knowledge of the abuse, neglect, or abandonment of a child or is informed of the abuse, neglect, or abandonment of a child that he or she believes to be truthful may make a petition alleging dependency. Such petition shall not be accepted for filing unless the court or a person authorized by the court has determined and endorsed on the petition that the filing of the petition is in the best interests of the public and such child.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-24, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Construction with former provisions. — Nonprofit advocacy organization was authorized to file a deprivation petition which was separate and distinct from the initial deprivation adjudication since there is no statutory requirement that a petition for modification must be filed under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-312), instead of a deprivation petition under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-150, 15-11-390, and 15-11-420). In re A.V.B., 222 Ga. App. 241, 474 S.E.2d 114 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24).

Great aunt and uncle. — Child's great aunt and uncle had standing to bring a petition to terminate the parental rights of the child's father and mother. In re J.J., 225 Ga. App. 682, 484 S.E.2d 681 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24).

(b) If a child was not removed from his or her home or if a child was removed from his or her home but was released from protective custody at the preliminary protective hearing, a petition alleging dependency shall be filed within 30 days of the preliminary protective hearing.

(c) Upon a showing of good cause and notice to all parties, the court may grant a requested extension of time for filing a petition alleging dependency in accordance with the best interests of the child. The court shall issue a written order reciting the facts justifying the extension.

15-11-152. Contents of petition.

A petition alleging dependency shall be verified and may rely on information and belief and shall set forth plainly and with particularity:

(1) The facts which bring a child within the jurisdiction of the court, with a statement that it is in the best interests of the child and the public that the proceeding be brought;

(2) The name, date of birth, and residence address of the child named in the petition;

(3) The name and residence address of the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the child named in the petition; or, if such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian does not reside or cannot be found within the state or if such place of residence address is unknown, the name of any known adult relative of such child residing within the county or, if there is none, the known adult relative of such child residing nearest to the location of the court;

(4) Whether the child named in the petition is in protective custody and, if so, the place of his or her foster care and the time such child was taken into protective custody; and

(5) Whether any of the information required by this Code section is unknown.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-25 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-38.1, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Juvenile petition must satisfy "due process." — Although a juvenile petition does not have to be drafted with the exactitude of a criminal accusation, the petition must satisfy "due process." T.L.T. v.

State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Since the state's petition failed to set forth in ordinary and concise language the facts demonstrating the nature of the parent's alleged failure to provide proper parental care or control, the parent lacked sufficient information to enable the parent to prepare a defense, and this amounted to a denial of due process. In re D.R.C., 191 Ga. App. 278, 381 S.E.2d 426 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

To meet constitutional requirement of due process the language of a juvenile petition must pass two tests: (1) the petition must contain sufficient factual details to inform the juvenile of the nature of the offense; and (2) the petition must provide data adequate to enable the accused to prepare a defense. T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Allege with particularity. — Due process requires that the petition alleging delinquency must set forth with specificity the alleged violation of law either in the language of the particular section, or so plainly that the nature of the offense charged may be easily understood by the child and the child's parents or guardian. D.P. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 680, 200 S.E.2d 499 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Petition filed alleging delinquency, deprivation, or unruliness must set forth alleged misconduct with particularity. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Insufficient notice to juvenile of alleged offense. — If a juvenile is brought to trial on a petition alleging delinquency based on a violation of former Code 1933, § 26-1601 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1) but was adjudicated delinquent for violating former Code 1933, § 26-1806 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-8-7), there was insufficient notice to the juvenile of the offense alleged to be the basis of the juvenile's delinquency and the trial court must be reversed. D.P. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 680, 200 S.E.2d 499 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Statement of custody irrelevant if jurisdiction otherwise exists. — If jurisdiction otherwise existed, such as if the action was brought in the county of the residence of both mother and son, then the requirement in paragraph (4) of former Code 1933, § 24A-1603 had no relevancy to the right of the trial court to handle the case. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Assumption of jurisdiction linked to authorized petition. — An order for detention clearly did not meet the requirements of a petition filed pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24A-1603 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-152, 15-11-280, 15-11-390, 15-11-420, 15-11-422, and 15-11-522) to commence proceedings under former Code 1933, § 24A-1601 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-420), and the assumption of jurisdiction by the juvenile court is linked to the authorized petition. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

In a hearing on parental custody in a divorce action, the trial court erred in awarding custody of the parties' minor children to the Department of Family and Children Services based upon findings that the children were deprived and the parents unfit because the mother had no notice that the superior court judge might award custody of the children to a third party based upon standards of deprivation. Watkins v. Watkins, 266 Ga. 269, 466 S.E.2d 860 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

Preparation and verification. — Because counsel for the Department of Children & Family Services stated to the court that counsel prepared the termination petition, that the petition was reviewed, verified, and then signed by counsel the next day, this was sufficient to comply with the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-152, 15-11-280, 15-11-390, 15-11-422, and 15-11-522). In re A.K.M., 235 Ga. App. 853, 510 S.E.2d 611 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

Service by correctional officer upon incarcerated father. — Personal service of a summons and a petition of deprivation by a correctional officer upon an incarcerated father was sufficient as the service procedures in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1 et seq., were not adopted nor were binding on the juvenile court, and the correctional officer was acting under the direction of the court for the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). In the Interest of A.J.M., 277 Ga. App. 646, 627 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38.1).

(a) The petitioner may amend the petition alleging dependency at any time:

(1) To cure defects of form; and

(2) Prior to the adjudication hearing, to include new allegations of fact or requests for adjudication.

(b) When the petition is amended after the initial service to include new allegations of fact or requests for adjudication, the amended petition shall be served on the parties and provided to the attorneys of record.

(c) The court shall grant the parties additional time to prepare only as may be required to ensure a full and fair hearing; provided, however, that when a child is in protective custody or in detention, an adjudication hearing shall not be delayed more than ten days beyond the time originally fixed for the hearing.

Part 6

Summons and Service

15-11-160. Issuance of summons.

(a) The court shall direct the issuance of a summons to a child if such child is 14 years of age or older, such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian, such child's attorney, such child's guardian ad litem, if any,

and any other persons who appear to the court to be proper or necessary parties to the proceeding, requiring them to appear before the court at the time fixed to answer the allegations of the petition alleging dependency. A copy of the petition alleging dependency shall accompany the summons unless the summons is served by publication, in which case the published summons shall indicate the general nature of the allegations and where a copy of the petition alleging dependency can be obtained.

(b) A summons shall state that a party is entitled to an attorney in the proceedings and that the court will appoint an attorney if the party is an indigent person.

(c) The court may endorse upon the summons an order directing a child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian to appear personally at the hearing and directing the person having the physical custody or control of a child to bring such child to the hearing.

(d) A party other than a child may waive service of summons by written stipulation or by voluntary appearance at the hearing.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Parent's right to appeal delinquency adjudication. — As parties to their child's delinquency action pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-160, 15-11-423, and 15-11-530), the child's parents had the right to appeal the juvenile court's judgment and to participate in the appellate process. In the Interest of J.L.B., 280 Ga. App. 556, 634 S.E.2d 514 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Proceeding null when no waiver of rights nor proper service. — If, in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of the right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and if the hearing is not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding is an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

No fixed date on summons. — Summons served upon a parent did not have to require the parent to appear in court on any fixed date in order to answer allegations in a petition to terminate the parent's parental rights. In re W.R.S., 213 Ga. App. 616, 445 S.E.2d 367 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

If there was no service of process and notice as required by former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-26(b) and 15-11-27(a)

(see now O.C.G.A. § 15-1-1 et seq.) and there was no valid waiver of notice of the pending charge by service of process or otherwise, the entire hearing is a nullity. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Waiver of right to prior notice of charge. — If neither the juvenile nor the mother were represented by counsel at the dispositional hearing, neither party knew the nature of the charge filed against the minor, and neither party knew of the serious consequences which may result in the case of an adverse adjudication of the petition filed against the juvenile, it is highly unlikely that the parties understood the significance of waiving their right to prior notice of the pending charge. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

15-11-161. Service of summons.

(a) If a party to be served with a summons is within this state and can be found, the summons shall be served upon him or her personally as soon as possible and at least 72 hours before the adjudication hearing.

(b) If a party to be served is within this state and cannot be found but his or her address is known or can be ascertained with due diligence, the summons shall be served upon such party at least five days before the adjudication hearing by mailing him or her a copy by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested.

(c) If a party to be served is outside this state but his or her address is known or can be ascertained with due diligence, service of the summons shall be made at least five days before the adjudication hearing either by delivering a copy to such party personally or by mailing a copy to him or her by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested.

(d) If, after due diligence, a party to be served with a summons cannot be found and such party's address cannot be ascertained, whether he or she is within or outside this state, the court may order service of the summons upon him or her by publication. The adjudication hearing shall not be earlier than five days after the date of the last publication.

(e)(1) Service by publication shall be made once a week for four consecutive weeks in the official organ of the county where the petition alleging dependency has been filed. Service shall be deemed complete upon the date of the last publication.

(2) When served by publication, the notice shall contain the names of the parties, except that the anonymity of a child shall be preserved by the use of appropriate initials, and the date the petition alleging dependency was filed. The notice shall indicate the general nature of the allegations and where a copy of the petition alleging dependency can be obtained and require the party to be served by publication to appear before the court at the time fixed to answer the allegations of the petition alleging dependency.

(3) Within 15 days after the filing of the order of service by publication, the clerk of court shall mail a copy of the notice, a copy of the order of service by publication, and a copy of the petition alleging dependency to the last known address of the party being served by publication.

(f) Service of the summons may be made by any suitable person under the direction of the court.

(g) The court may authorize the payment from county funds of the costs of service and of necessary travel expenses incurred by persons summoned or otherwise required to appear at the hearing.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 24-2406 and 24A-1702, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-27 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-39.1, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

There was no equal protection violation in framework of this former Code section since similarly situated residents and nonresidents were accorded equal treatment and it was only in cases when laws were applied differently to different persons under the same or similar circumstances that the equal protection of the law was denied. In re M.A.C., 244 Ga. 645, 261 S.E.2d 590 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1702).

When service by publication sufficient in adoption proceeding. — Service by publication was sufficient to bestow jurisdiction over putative fathers of children whose natural mothers wish to give the children up for adoption. In re J.B., 140 Ga. App. 668, 231 S.E.2d 821 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1702).

Service of summons and termination petition was ineffective since, even though the summons was left at the mother's residence, there was no evidence that the summons was left with a statutorily appropriate person, and service of the petition the day before the hearing was not timely. In re D.R.W., 229 Ga. App. 571, 494 S.E.2d 379 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-27).

Order terminating an out-of-state incarcerated parent's parental rights was reversed as: (1) service of the termination petition and summons upon the parent via certified mail was insufficient under both O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 and former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282); (2) a correctional officer who personally delivered the documents to the parent did not amount to sufficient and lawful personal service as the officer lacked the inherent authority to perfect service under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c) and no court order existed to grant the authority; and (3) the trial court's reliance on the service provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), a statute dealing with service in juvenile court proceedings generally, was misplaced. In the In-

Service by publication in termination proceeding. — Juvenile court may order service of process by publication in a termination proceeding if, after reasonable effort, a party cannot be found and the party's address cannot be ascertained. In re M.J.B., 238 Ga. App. 833, 520 S.E.2d 497 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Service by publication in deprivation proceeding. — Juvenile court erred in granting service by publication of the paternal grandparents' petition alleging that the mother's children were deprived because the grandparents failed to exercise reasonable diligence to find the mother, the juvenile court concluded that the mother could not be found with due diligence within the State of Georgia without any competent evidence to support that finding, and the juvenile court failed to place any burden on the grandparents to determine what notice the grandparents had given to the mother of the grandparents' deprivation petition and simply relied on evidence about the father's efforts to contact her; the grandparents did not file a written motion for service by publication and supporting affidavit as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(f)(1)(A), the grandparents had some means of communicating with the mother because the father had the mother's telephone number and was able to notify the mother by phone of the 72-hour hearing, the grandparents could have contacted the mother's relatives to ascertain the mother's whereabouts, and the grandparents could have attempted to serve the mother personally or by registered or certified mail at the mother's prior address. Taylor v. Padgett, 300 Ga. App. 314, 684 S.E.2d 434 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Service by correctional officer on incarcerated parent. — Personal service of a summons and a petition of deprivation, by a correctional officer upon an incarcerated parent, was sufficient as the service procedures in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1 et seq., were not adopted nor were binding on the juvenile court, and the correctional officer was acting under the direction of the court for the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). In the Interest of A.J.M., 277 Ga. App. 646, 627 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Service not perfected on incarcerated person. — Deprivation order had to be vacated and the case remanded because service of the deprivation petition on the parent in question, who was incarcerated, was not perfected in accordance with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). The parent had not waived personal service and personal service was not waived simply by actual notice having been achieved. In the Interest of A. R., 296 Ga. App. 62, 673 S.E.2d 586 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Requirement of "reasonable effort" to find party. — Former statute required a showing by the department that a "reasonable effort" had been made to find a putative father or ascertain his address. In re J.B., 140 Ga. App. 668, 231 S.E.2d 821 (1976) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Permissibility of publication notice dependent upon investigation. — Whether publication notice is permissible necessarily depends upon an investigation of whether the whereabouts of putative fathers were unknown and whether the fathers could be found with reasonable diligence. In re J.B., 140 Ga. App. 668, 231 S.E.2d 821 (1976) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

If there was no service of process and notice as required by the former provisions and there was no valid waiver of notice of the pending charge by service of process or otherwise, the entire hearing is a nullity. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Waiver of right to notice. — If neither the juvenile nor the juvenile's mother were represented by counsel at the dispositional hearing, neither party knew the nature of the charge filed against the minor, and neither party knew of the serious consequences which may result in the case of an adverse adjudication of the petition filed against the juvenile, it is highly unlikely that the parties understood the significance of waiving the parties right to prior notice of the pending charge. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Timeliness of petition. — Juvenile was entitled to a copy of the delinquency petition filed against the juvenile, and pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), the juvenile had a right to receive the petition at least 24 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing; however, the juvenile waived any objection the juvenile had on the grounds of improper service since the juvenile received the petition right before the hearing as the juvenile did not make an objection or request a continuance on the basis that the juvenile was unprepared. In the Interest of E.S., 262 Ga. App. 768, 586 S.E.2d 691 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Permitting state's mid-trial amendment of petition to change the charge against the juvenile from a misdemeanor to a felony was error since the amendment was done without notice and provision of a continuance to allow additional time for preparation of a defense. In re D.W, 232 Ga. App. 777, 503 S.E.2d 647 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Reliance on section by trial court misplaced. — Because former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282) related specifically to service in termination-of-parental-rights proceedings, the trial court's reliance on the service provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), a statute dealing with service in juvenile court proceedings generally, was misplaced; moreover, for purposes of statutory interpretation, a specific statute prevailed over a general statute, absent any indication of a contrary legislative intent. In the Interest of C.S., 282 Ga. 7, 644 S.E.2d 812 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Waiver of notice. — In a juvenile delinquency case, although neither defendants nor their parents were served with copies of the petitions and hearing summonses as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-162, 15-11-281, 15-11-423, 15-11-425, and 15-11-532), the defendants and their parents appeared at the hearings with their attorneys without objecting to lack of notice; thus, the defendants and their parents waived the notice issue. In the Interest of T.K.L., 277 Ga. App. 461, 627 S.E.2d 98 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Implied waiver of service on behalf of child. — If a child is present at a juvenile court hearing with the child's parent and counsel, the child's parent impliedly may waive service of a summons on a child's behalf by voluntary appearance at a hearing without objection to lack of service. Fulton County Detention Center v. Robertson, 249 Ga. 864, 295 S.E.2d 101 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Parent's right to appeal delinquency adjudication. — As parties to their child's delinquency action pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-160, 15-11-423, and 15-11-530), the child's parents had the right to appeal the juvenile court's judgment and to participate in the appellate process. In the Interest of J.L.B., 280 Ga. App. 556, 634 S.E.2d 514 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Proceeding null when no waiver of rights nor proper service. — If, in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of the right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and if the hearing is not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding is an absolute nullity. 15-11-163. Interlocutory order of disposition when summons served by publication.

(a) If service of summons upon a party is made by publication, the court may conduct a provisional hearing upon the allegations of the petition alleging dependency and enter an interlocutory order of disposition if:

(1) The petition alleges dependency of a child;

(2) The summons served upon any party:

(A) States that prior to the final hearing on such petition a provisional hearing will be held at a specified time and place;

(B) Requires the party who is served other than by publication to appear and answer the allegations of the petition alleging dependency at the provisional hearing;

(C) States further that findings of fact and orders of disposition made pursuant to the provisional hearing will become final at the final hearing unless the party served by publication appears at the final hearing; and

(D) Otherwise conforms to the requirements of Code Section 15-11-160; and

(3) A child named in a petition alleging dependency is brought is personally before the court at the provisional hearing.

(b) Findings of fact and orders of disposition shall have only interlocutory effect pending final hearing on the petition alleging dependency.

(c) If a party served by publication fails to appear at the final hearing on the petition alleging dependency, the findings of fact and interlocutory orders made shall become final without further evidence. If a party appears at the final hearing, the findings and orders shall be vacated and disregarded and the hearing shall proceed upon the allegations of such petition without regard to this Code section.

Challenge to temporary order made while proceedings still pending. — If petition in the juvenile court alleges deprivation of a child and if the service of summons is made by publication, the juvenile court is authorized to enter an interlocutory order of disposition and any challenge to the service or to the temporary order must be made by the appellant in the juvenile court where the proceedings are still pending. PART 7

PREADJUDICATION PROCEDURES

15-11-170. Discovery.

(a) In all cases under this article, any party shall, upon written request to the party having actual custody, control, or possession of the material to be produced, have full access to the following for inspection, copying, or photographing:

(1) The names and telephone numbers of each witness likely to be called to testify at the hearing by another party;

(2) A copy of any formal written statement made by the alleged dependent child or any witness that relates to the subject matter concerning the testimony of the witness that a party intends to call as a witness at the hearing;

(3) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, any scientific or other report which is intended to be introduced at any hearing or that pertains to physical evidence which is intended to be introduced;

(4) Any drug screen concerning the alleged dependent child or his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(5) Any case plan concerning the alleged dependent child or his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(6) Any visitation schedule related to the alleged dependent child;

(7) Photographs and any physical evidence which are intended to be introduced at any hearing;

(8) Copies of any police incident reports regarding an occurrence which forms part or all of the basis of the petition; and

(9) Any other relevant evidence not requiring consent or a court order under subsection (b) of this Code section.

(b) Upon presentation of a court order or written consent from the appropriate person or persons permitting access to the party having actual custody, control, or possession of the material to be produced, any party shall have access to the following for inspection, copying, or photographing:

(1) Any psychological, developmental, physical, mental or emotional health, or other assessments of the alleged dependent child or his or her family, parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(2) Any school record concerning the alleged dependent child;

(3) Any medical record concerning the alleged dependent child;

(4) Transcriptions, recordings, and summaries of any oral statement of the alleged dependent child or of any witness, except child abuse reports that are confidential pursuant to Code Section 19-7-5 and work product of counsel;

(5) Any family team meeting report or multidisciplinary team meeting report concerning the alleged dependent child or his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(6) Supplemental police reports, if any, regarding an occurrence which forms part of all of the basis of the petition; and

(7) Immigration records concerning the alleged dependent child.

(c) If a party requests disclosure of information pursuant to subsection (a) or (b) of this Code section, it shall be the duty of such party to promptly make the following available for inspection, copying, or photographing to every other party:

(1) The names and last known addresses and telephone numbers of each witness to the occurrence which forms the basis of the party's defense or claim;

(2) Any scientific or other report which is intended to be introduced at the hearing or that pertains to physical evidence which is intended to be introduced;

(3) Photographs and any physical evidence which are intended to be introduced at the hearing; and

(4) A copy of any written statement made by any witness that relates to the subject matter concerning the testimony of the witness that the party intends to call as a witness.

(d) A request for discovery or reciprocal discovery shall be complied with promptly and not later than five days after the request is received or 72 hours prior to any hearing except when later compliance is made necessary by the timing of such request. If such request for discovery is made fewer than 48 hours prior to an adjudicatory hearing, the discovery response shall be produced in a timely manner. If, subsequent to providing a discovery response in compliance with this Code section, the existence of additional evidence is found, it shall be promptly provided to the party making the discovery request.

(e) If a request for discovery or consent for release is refused, application may be made to the court for a written order granting discovery. Motions for discovery shall certify that a request for discovery or consent was made and was unsuccessful despite good faith efforts made by the requesting party. An order granting discovery shall require reciprocal discovery. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) or (b) of this Code section, the court may deny, in whole or in part, or otherwise limit or set conditions concerning a discovery response upon a sufficient showing by a person or entity to whom a request for discovery is made that disclosure of the information would:

(1) Jeopardize the safety of a party, witness, or confidential informant;

(2) Create a substantial threat of physical or economic harm to a witness or other person;

(3) Endanger the existence of physical evidence;

(4) Disclose privileged information; or

(5) Impede the criminal prosecution of a minor who is being prosecuted as an adult or the prosecution of an adult charged with an offense arising from the same transaction or occurrence.

(f) No deposition shall be taken of an alleged dependent child unless the court orders the deposition, under such conditions as the court may order, on the ground that the deposition would further the purposes of this part.

(g) If at any time during the course of the proceedings it is brought to the attention of the court that a person or entity has failed to comply with an order issued pursuant to this Code section, the court may grant a continuance, prohibit the party from introducing in evidence the information not disclosed, or enter such other order as the court deems just under the circumstances.

(h) Nothing contained in this Code section shall prohibit the court from ordering the disclosure of any information that the court deems necessary for proper adjudication.

(i) Any material or information furnished to a party pursuant to this Code section shall remain in the exclusive custody of the party and shall only be used during the pendency of the case and shall be subject to such other terms and conditions as the court may provide.

No Brady violation shown. — In a juvenile proceeding wherein the juvenile was adjudicated delinquent as a result of a battery against a schoolmate on a school bus, the trial court did not err in allegedly failing to enforce the discovery provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-75(a)(7) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-541) and in allegedly failing to remedy a Brady violation because the videotape at issue was not in the custody and control of the State of Georgia; the juvenile could have obtained the evidence had the juvenile simply subpoenaed the video prior to trial and, significantly, the unrebutted evidence of record established that the videotape lacked any exculpatory or evidentiary value since the videotape was blank. In the Interest of E.J., 283 Ga. App. 648, 642 S.E.2d 179 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-75).

Discovery from guardian ad litem's file. — Juvenile order granting a guardian a protective order against a mother was vacated because the juvenile court erred in imposing blanket protection for the guardian ad litem's file under a privilege exception to discovery; on remand, the juvenile court was directed to exercise the court's discretion to determine whether the material sought by the mother was privileged or otherwise should not be subject to discovery. In the Interest of J. N., 344 Ga. App. 409, 810 S.E.2d 191 (2018).

15-11-180. Standard of proof.

The petitioner shall have the burden of proving the allegations of a dependency petition by clear and convincing evidence.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Sufficient findings of deprivation. — Evidence that parents were imprisoned for abusing one of their three children, and their parental rights were terminated as to that child; that a second child, while in their care, sustained permanent brain injuries due to abusive head trauma, and the child's arm was fractured in a manner consistent with abuse; and the fact that the parents invoked the Fifth Amendment during the deprivation hearing was sufficient to allow the trial court to find by clear and convincing evidence that their two additional children were deprived as defined by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-107). In the Interest of A.A., 293 Ga. App. 471, 667 S.E.2d 641 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54).

Father's contention that the juvenile court's deprivation order was deficient was without merit because, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-181), the juvenile court's order clearly stated that the court's finding of deprivation was based on the father's sexual abuse of his children and the mother's failure to stop such abuse as alleged. In the Interest of S.B., 312 Ga. App. 180, 718 S.E.2d 49 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54).

Eighteen-month-old child was properly found to be a dependent child because the child was a victim of abuse under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(2)(A) based on multiple bruises, a skull fracture, and other non-accidental injuries the child suffered while in the care of the mother and her boyfriend, who both acknowledged that no other person had been caring for the child. In the Interest of S. C. S., 336 Ga. App. 236, 784 S.E.2d 83 (2016).

Juvenile court's dependency determination was not supported by clear and convincing evidence because no evidence or testimony was proffered regarding other children in foster care, and any concerns about the mother's residence and the evidence of drug use through two positive hair follicle drug screenings was controverted by the mother presenting three negative hair follicle drug screenings covering the same time period. In the Interest of M. S., 352 Ga. App. 249, 834 S.E.2d 343 (2019).

15-11-181. Adjudication hearing.

(a) The court shall fix a time for an adjudication hearing. If the alleged dependent child is in foster care, the hearing shall be scheduled for no later than ten days after the filing of the petition alleging dependency. If the alleged dependent child is not in foster care, but the court has ordered a temporary alternative to foster care, the adjudication hearing shall be held no later than 30 days after the filing of the petition alleging dependency. Otherwise, the adjudication hearing shall be held no later than 60 days after the filing of the petition alleging dependency. If adjudication is not completed within 60 days from the date such child was taken into protective custody, the petition alleging dependency may be dismissed without prejudice.

(b) The following persons shall have the right to participate in the adjudication hearing:

(1) The parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the alleged dependent child, unless such person cannot be located or fails to appear in response to the notice;

(2) The attorney and guardian ad litem of the alleged dependent child;

(3) The alleged dependent child, unless the court finds, after considering evidence of harm to such child that will result from his or her presence at the proceeding, that being present is not in the child's best interests;

(4) The attorneys for the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the alleged dependent child if attorneys have been retained or appointed;

(5) The assigned DFCS caseworker; and

(6) The attorney for DFCS.

(c) If the court finds it is in the best interests of the alleged dependent child, the court may allow the following to be present at the adjudication hearing:

(1) Any relative or other persons who have demonstrated an ongoing commitment to a child alleged to be a dependent child with whom he or she might be placed;

(2) DFCS employees involved with the case;

(3) An advocate as requested by the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the alleged dependent child; and

(4) Other persons who have knowledge of or an interest in the welfare of such child.

(d) Except as provided in this subsection, the adjudication hearing shall be conducted in accordance with Title 24. Testimony or other evidence relevant to the dependency of a child or the cause of such condition may not be excluded on any ground of privilege, except in the case of:

(1) Communications between a party and his or her attorney; and

(2) Confessions or communications between a priest, rabbi, or duly ordained minister or similar functionary and his or her confidential communicant.

(e) After hearing the evidence, the court shall make and file specific written findings as to whether a child is a dependent child.

(f) If the court finds that a child is not a dependent child, it shall dismiss the petition alleging dependency and order such child discharged from foster care or other restriction previously ordered.

(g) If the court adjudicates a child as a dependent child, the court shall proceed immediately or at a postponed hearing to make a proper disposition of the case.

(h) If the court adjudicates a child as a dependent child, the court shall also make and file a finding whether such dependency is the result of substance abuse by such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian.

(i) If the disposition hearing is held on the same day as the adjudication hearing, the court shall schedule the dates and times for the first periodic review hearing and for the permanency plan hearing.

The 2019 amendment, effective April 18, 2019, inserted ", but the court has ordered a temporary alternative to foster care, the adjudication hearing shall be held no later than 30 days after the filing of the petition alleging dependency. Otherwise," in the third sentence of subsection (a).

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-26 and pre-2014 Code Sections 15-11-39 and 15-11-54, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Time limits set forth in the former statute were jurisdictional and the adjudicatory hearing must be set for a time not later than that prescribed by statute. J.T.G. v. State, 141 Ga. App. 184, 233 S.E.2d 40 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Time limits established by the General Assembly in the Juvenile Code are jurisdictional and must be strictly adhered to. Crews v. Brantley County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 146 Ga. App. 408, 246 S.E.2d 426 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Language of former statute was mandatory and the time for the hearing must be set for a time not later than ten days after the petition was filed. J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701); Crews v. Brantley County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 146 Ga. App. 408, 246 S.E.2d 426 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701); Irvin v. Department of Human Resources, 159 Ga. App. 101, 282 S.E.2d 664 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Language of former subsection (a) of this section was mandatory and the adjudicatory hearing must be set for a time not later than that prescribed. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Goal sought to be accomplished by the ten-day hearing requirement for detained children was the same goal for the 60-day hearing requirement for non-detained children and, thus, the latter requirement was mandatory, rather than directory. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Time limits for speedy trial must be strictly adhered to. — If a legislative body has defined the right to speedy trial in terms of days, then the time limits must be strictly complied with. J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Trial court erred in setting the date for a hearing twelve days, rather than ten days, from the date of the filing of a petition charging a juvenile with the commission of the delinquent act of burglary. In re M.D.C., 214 Ga. App. 59, 447 S.E.2d 143 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Provision of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) that the time for a hearing shall not be later than ten days after filing of the petition if the child was in custody was the equivalent of a speedy trial demand which did not require a specific demand by the child. However, the statute's protection could be waived if not properly raised and, furthermore, the trial court had discretion to grant a continuance of a hearing properly set for a date within ten days from the filing of the petition. In re M.D.C., 214 Ga. App. 59, 447 S.E.2d 143 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) did not constitute a speedy trial demand and, therefore, the failure to comply with the former statute's provisions resulted in dismissal of the petition without prejudice. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Time limits satisfied by hearing adjudicatory in nature. — When a juvenile and the juvenile's parents were summoned to appear at a hearing to defend against charges and to show cause why the juvenile should not be dealt with according to law, were instructed to remain in attendance at the hearing until final adjudication of the petition, were informed of the possibility of a continuance, and were told that the state would seek transfer to the superior court, the hearing was adjudicatory in nature and satisfied the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26. In re L.A.E., 265 Ga. 698, 462 S.E.2d 148 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Construction with other law. — Because a juvenile's allegations that the state failed to comply with the procedural requirements under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49(c)(1) and (e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-102, 15-11-145, 15-11-151, 15-11-472, and 15-11-521) should have been raised in the superior court, and had no bearing on the validity of the delinquency petitions or the substantive charges against the juvenile in juvenile court, the court properly denied the presentation of evidence regarding the delinquency and substantive issues. In the Interest of K.C., 290 Ga. App. 416, 659 S.E.2d 821 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Arraignment during adjudicatory hearing. — In the absence of a transcript, a juvenile failed to establish that former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) was violated since a hearing was timely scheduled and held, an arraignment was conducted at the beginning, the juvenile requested legal counsel and was found eligible to receive counsel, and a continuance was granted so counsel could be secured; conducting an arraignment was not inconsistent with an adjudicatory hearing. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996), reversing In re R.D.F., 216 Ga. App. 563, 455 S.E.2d 77 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Arraignment hearing scheduled within the 60-day time period is not sufficient to satisfy the requirement that an adjudicatory hearing must be set within that period. In re R.O.B., 216 Ga. App. 181, 453 S.E.2d 776 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Hearing requirement applicable when child in detention when petition filed. — Ten-day hearing requirement was applicable when a child was "in detention" on the date the petition was filed in court. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

§ 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441 and 15-11-582) required that an adjudicatory hearing date be set within ten days after a filing of a petition charging a minor with commission of delinquent acts, but does not require that a hearing be actually held within ten days after the filing of the petition. P.L.A. v. State, 172 Ga. App. 820, 324 S.E.2d 781 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); Johnson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 168, 358 S.E.2d 313 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); In re L.T.W., 211 Ga. App. 441, 439 S.E.2d 716 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); In re B.W.S., 265 Ga. 567, 458 S.E.2d 847 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Ten-day hearing rule was not absolute, and a continuance could be granted in the sound discretion of the trial court. Johnson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 168, 358 S.E.2d 313 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Adjudicatory hearing timely. — Juvenile court did not err in denying the defendant juvenile's motion to dismiss a petition because the adjudicatory hearing was set and held within ten days of the filing of the petition pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582), although the hearing was then continued, which was an action that was within the juvenile court's discretion. In the Interest of C.H., 306 Ga. App. 834, 703 S.E.2d 407 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Continuance requested by parent did not violate time limit. — When a hearing on a deprivation petition was held within ten days of the petition's filing, but the case was continued for eight days because the mother's counsel had a scheduling conflict, there was no violation of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a)'s (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) ten-day time limit. In the Interest of C.R., 292 Ga. App. 346, 665 S.E.2d 39 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Adjudication hearing required after an initial hearing. — By restraining the child at an initial hearing, the juvenile court implicitly found probable cause, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-46.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-415 and 15-11-503). The juvenile court therefore erred in later deciding that a 10-day adjudication hearing was actually a detention hearing and in resetting the 10-day adjudication hearing. In the Interest of K.L., 303 Ga. App. 679, 694 S.E.2d 372 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Failure to follow mandated procedures warrants dismissal without prejudice of a petition alleging deprivation of a child. Another petition can be filed without delay if there is reason to believe the child is being neglected or abused. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 140 Ga. App. 175, 230 S.E.2d 139 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Motion to dismiss necessary if no provision for automatic dismissal. — If there is no provision in the statute for automatic dismissal, there should be a motion to dismiss directed to the trial judge and it should appear that the delay is not due to the actions of the defendant. E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 724, 215 S.E.2d 732 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Violation of ten-day mandate does not deprive jurisdiction. — Violation of the statutory mandate to set the hearing date not later than ten days after filing of the petition if the child is in detention would not deprive the court of jurisdiction that would otherwise exist. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Legislature intended incarceration be limited according to calendar days. — General Assembly intended that a juvenile who is incarcerated after the court has had a preliminary detention hearing should have the juvenile's incarceration limited and the juvenile's fate determined according to calendar days, not "working days." J.B.H. v. State, 139

Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

No habeas corpus if compliance with statutory requirements. — Habeas corpus will not lie if the juvenile court, after notice and hearing, enters an order pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24-2409 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-211, 15-11-212, and 15-11-215). Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Effect of failure to show compliance with hearing requirement. — If the parents, in their petition seeking return of their children, allege that there has been no hearing as required by statute, and the record of prior juvenile court proceedings is silent as to whether such a hearing was ever set, continued, or held, and since the hearing requirement was mandatory, the defendant County Family and Children Services Department did not show compliance with the hearing requirement, and the parents stated claims for habeas relief which may be granted. Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Permitting state's mid-trial amendment of petition to change the charge against the juvenile from a misdemeanor to a felony was error since the amendment was done without notice and provision of a continuance to allow additional time for preparation of a defense. In re D.W, 232 Ga. App. 777, 503 S.E.2d 647 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Illegal detention. — If a petition was not presented within 72 hours of a detention hearing as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21(e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-145, 15-11-400, 15-11-413, 15-11-414, and 15-11-472), the state cannot thus illegally detain the child and then render such a jurisdictional defect harmless by setting the adjudication hearing within 13 days (72 hours plus 10 days) of the detention hearing under subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582). In re B.A.P., 180 Ga. App. 433, 349 S.E.2d 218 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Visitation restrictions unauthorized if complaint dismissed. — Since the children were not found to be deprived, the trial court, in dismissing a deprivation complaint, was without authority to impose restrictions on the mother's visitation, and the order imposing those restrictions was reversed. In the Interest of C.F., 266 Ga. App. 325, 596 S.E.2d 781 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54).

Preparation of order by counsel not judge. — That the trial court's termination order was prepared by counsel for the department of family and children services at the trial court's direction did not violate former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-181) as the order adequately reflected the court's holdings. In the Interest of A.G., 293 Ga. App. 493, 667 S.E.2d 662 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54).

Addressing child's special immigrant juvenile status. — In a deprivation proceeding, a juvenile court erred by failing to address the child's special immigrant juvenile status under 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(27)(J)(ii) and a remand was necessary since the juvenile court had to determine whether the evidence supported the findings so that the federal government could address the issue in separate deportation proceedings. In the Interest of J. J. X. C., 318 Ga. App. 420, 734 S.E.2d 120 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54).

Guardian ad litem could examine witnesses and challenge evidence. — Juvenile court did not err by allowing a non-lay guardian ad litem (GAL) to examine witnesses and challenge certain evidence in the service of the children's best interest because the limitation in O.C.G.A. § 15-11-104 only applied to lay guardians, while O.C.G.A. § 15-11-181(b)(2) permitted the GAL to participate in the hearing. In the Interest of R. D., 346 Ga. App. 257, 816 S.E.2d 132 (2018).

Waiver of Time Limits

Waiver of procedural requirements. — Time limits on setting juvenile hearings are mandatory, but procedural requirements can be waived. J.T.G. v. State, 141 Ga. App. 184, 233 S.E.2d 40 (1977) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); Cox v. Department of Human Resources, 148 Ga. App. 338, 250 S.E.2d 728 (1978), overruled on other grounds, 156 Ga. App. 338, 274 S.E.2d 728 (1980) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

With regard to a juvenile's adjudication of delinquency for acts which, if committed by an adult, would have constituted the offense of child molestation, the juvenile court did not err by denying the juvenile's motion to dismiss, which was based on an extended pre-trial detention as the juvenile and defense counsel agreed to a continuance and acquiesced in a hearing date delaying the adjudication for at least 48 days following the filing of the delinquency petition, which caused the juvenile to waive the right to complain that the adjudication hearing date was not set to occur in compliance with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582). However, the adjudication was reversed and the case was remanded to the juvenile court since the juvenile court erroneously applied a clear and convincing standard of proof and the standard of proof on charges of a criminal nature was the same as that used in criminal proceedings against adults, namely proof beyond a reasonable doubt. In the Interest of A.S., 293 Ga. App. 710, 667 S.E.2d 701 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Juvenile waived the right under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) to have an adjudicatory hearing within 10 days of the delinquency petition being filed by failing to object to the date proposed for the adjudicatory hearing, which was one month after the filing of the petition. In re A. T., 302 Ga. App. 713, 691 S.E.2d 642 (2010), overruled in part by Worthen v. State, 304 Ga. 862, 823 S.E.2d 291 (2019) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to comply with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) because the defendant's parent, the defendant's representative, and an attorney acknowledged that the parent did not object when, at the arraignment hearing, it was announced that the adjudicatory hearing would be set outside of the 60-day window; the parent also did not object within the statutorily prescribed 60-day-time period, and the motion to dismiss was filed outside of the 60-day requirement. In the Interest of I.M.W., 313 Ga. App. 624, 722 S.E.2d 586 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Hearing time limit can be waived. — If the party does not enter an objection during the course of the trial the party will not be heard to complain on appeal and if a hearing is set within the statutory time limit, the court may in the court's discretion grant a continuance. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code § 24A-1701); In re J.B., 183 Ga. App. 229, 358 S.E.2d 620, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 906, 358 S.E.2d 620 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Juvenile was entitled to a copy of the delinquency petition filed against the juvenile, and pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), the juvenile had a right to receive the petition at least 24 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing; however, the juvenile waived any objection based on the grounds of improper service since the juvenile received notice right before the hearing as the juvenile did not make an objection or request a continuance on the basis that the juvenile was unprepared. In the Interest of E.S., 262 Ga. App. 768, 586 S.E.2d 691 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Delay negotiated by defendant waives time limit. — If the statute does not require dismissal as a matter of law regardless of the reason for the delay, it is clear that a delay negotiated and obtained by the defendant personally would constitute a waiver of the 60-day requirement. E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 724, 215 S.E.2d 732 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Proceeding null when no waiver of rights nor proper service. — If, in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of the right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and if the hearing is not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding is an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Order granting continuance failed to show extended time was necessary. — In a child dependency case involving a child to whom the 10-day hearing time limit in O.C.G.A. § 15-11-181(a) applied, the juvenile court's grant of a continuance until four weeks later did not meet the stringent requirements of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-110 for granting a continuance; dismissal without prejudice should have been granted. In the Interest of I. L. M., 304 Ga. 114, 816 S.E.2d 620 (2018).

Substance Abuse

Results of drug abuse. — Juvenile court did not err when the court found that a parent's decision to continue using cocaine and the parent's refusal to attend substance abuse treatment adversely affected the child, and that the child was deprived as a result. In the Interest of J.L., 269 Ga. App. 226, 603 S.E.2d 742 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54).

In view of the trial court's reliance on other evidence to support the court's findings as to a parent's continuing drug problems, including avoidance of court-ordered drug screens, the parent did not show that the parent was harmed by admission of the results of the drug tests at a deprivation hearing. In addition, urinalysis was a medically accepted and widely used method of drug testing, and although neither witness who testified about the test results received formal training from test manufacturers, one witness's longtime practical experience in administering the test and the other witness's government certification provided some basis for the determination that the witnesses were qualified to testify about the test results. In the Interest of J.R.N., 291 Ga. App. 521, 662 S.E.2d 300 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54).

Appeals

Parent's right to appeal delinquency adjudication. — As parties to their child's delinquency action pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-160, 15-11-423, and 15-11-530), the child's parents had the right to appeal the juvenile court's judgment and to participate in the appellate process. In the Interest of J.L.B., 280 Ga. App. 556, 634 S.E.2d 514 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Allegation of failure to comply with time requirements not appealable. — If the defendant, prior to a hearing to determine the defendant's delinquency, appealed from the juvenile court's denial of the defendant's motion to dismiss based solely upon an alleged failure to comply with the time requirements of subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582), the Court of Appeals dismissed the appeal since a motion under that Code section cannot be analogized to the denial of a O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 motion and did not involve a question of speedy trial rights which would be directly appealable. In re M.O.B., 190 Ga. App. 474, 378 S.E.2d 898 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Predisposition Social Studies

15-11-190. Social study.

If the allegations of the petition alleging dependency are admitted or after an adjudication hearing the court has adjudicated a child as a dependent child, the court may direct that a written social study and report be made by a person designated by the court.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-190, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-12, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Hearsay evidence may be admitted. — Consideration of evidence containing some hearsay may technically violate provisions of this section but in a case tried without a jury, the trial judge has a much broader discretion in the admission of evidence and the judge's judgment will not be reversed if there is any legal evidence to support the finding. Moss v. Moss, 135 Ga. App. 401, 218 S.E.2d 93 (1975) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-12).

Reports containing hearsay may be admitted. — Consideration of written reports containing hearsay matter at a fact-finding child deprivation hearing is more than a technical violation of the law, but under the particular facts of a case it may not be reversible error. In re J.C., 242 Ga. 737, 251 S.E.2d 299 (1978), appeal dismissed, 441 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2046, 60 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1979) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-12).

Presumption that judge did not rely on hearsay. — When a written welfare report in a child in a child deprivation hearing was made by the caseworker who testified and was cross-examined at the hearing and when the evidence introduced at the hearing, not considering the report, was sufficient to support the findings of fact made by the judge, it will be presumed that the judge did not consider any hearsay testimony in the report in the judge's determination that the children were deprived. In re J.C., 242 Ga. 737, 251 S.E.2d 299 (1978), appeal dismissed, 441 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2046, 60 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1979) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-12).

15-11-191. Contents of social study.

Each social study shall include, but not be limited to, a factual discussion of each of the following subjects:

(1) What plan, if any, for the return of the child adjudicated to be a dependent child to his or her parent and for achieving legal permanency for such child if efforts to reunify fail is recommended to the court;

(2) Whether the best interests of the child will be served by granting reasonable visitation rights to his or her other relatives in order to maintain and strengthen the child adjudicated to be a dependent child's family relationships;

(3) Whether the child adjudicated to be a dependent child has siblings under the court's jurisdiction, and, if so:

(A) The nature of the relationship between such child and his or her siblings;

(B) Whether the siblings were raised together in the same home and whether the siblings have shared significant common experiences or have existing close and strong bonds;

(C) Whether the child adjudicated to be a dependent child expresses a desire to visit or live with his or her siblings and whether ongoing contact is in such child's best interests;

(D) The appropriateness of developing or maintaining sibling relationships;

(E) If siblings are not placed together in the same home, why the siblings are not placed together and what efforts are being made to place siblings together or why those efforts are not appropriate;

(F) If siblings are not placed together, the frequency and nature of the visits between siblings; and

(G) The impact of the sibling relationship on the child adjudicated to be a dependent child's placement and planning for legal permanence;

(4) The appropriateness of any placement with a relative of the child adjudicated to be a dependent child; and

(5) Whether a caregiver desires and is willing to provide legal permanency for a child adjudicated to be a dependent child if reunification is unsuccessful.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

15-11-41, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-58, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this part, are included in the annotations for this part. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Jurisdiction. — Superior court properly declined jurisdiction in a custody action brought by grandparents because once a juvenile court took jurisdiction of a deprivation action concerning the child and, later, a termination action of parental rights, the court took jurisdiction of the entire case of the minor child including the issues of disposition and custody. Segars v. State, 309 Ga. App. 732, 710 S.E.2d 916 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Foster children. — Former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-13 and 15-11-58 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-30, 15-11-134, and 15-11-200 et seq.), and O.C.G.A. § 20-2-690.1, and 49-5-12 were not too vague and amorphous to be enforced by the judiciary and impose specific duties on the state defendants; thus, the federal regulatory scheme embodied in the CSFR process did not relieve the state defendants of the defendants obligation to fulfill the defendants statutory duties to the foster children, nor did the former statute provide a legal excuse for the defendants failure to do so. Kenny A. v. Perdue, No. 1:02-cv-1686-MHS, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27025 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 11, 2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

No equal protection violation. — Treating deprived children who were placed in the legal custody of the Department of Families and Children Services because there was no relative committed to the child who was available for immediate placement differently from deprived children who did have a committed parent or guardian available for immediate placement did not violate the equal protection clause or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II. as the classes were not similarly situated and the laws were rationally related to the goal of minimizing government intervention while ensuring that children were reared in a familial environment. In the Interest of A.N., 281 Ga. 58, 636 S.E.2d 496 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Temporary custody and visitation rights. — Juvenile court had jurisdiction to modify an order granting temporary custody of a deprived child to the Department of Family and Children Services and to permit visitation by parents who filed a petition for visitation rights four months after the custody order. In re K.B., 188 Ga. App. 199, 372 S.E.2d 476 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

15-11-200. DFCS report; case plan.

(a) Within 30 days of the date a child who is placed in DFCS custody is removed from his or her home and at each subsequent review of the disposition order, DFCS shall submit a written report to the court which shall either:

(1) Include a case plan for a reunification of the family; or

(2) Include a statement of the factual basis for determining that a plan for reunification is not appropriate.

(b) The report submitted by DFCS shall become a discrete part of the case record in a format determined by DFCS and shall be made available to a child who is placed in DFCS custody if such child is 14 years of age or older, his or her attorney, his or her guardian ad litem, if any, and the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of such child. The contents of the report shall be determined at a meeting to be held by DFCS in consultation with the parent, guardian, or legal custodian and child who was placed in DFCS custody, when appropriate. The parent, guardian, or legal custodian, the child who was placed in DFCS custody if such child is 14 years of age or older, his or her attorney, and guardian ad litem, if any, shall be given written notice of the meeting at least five days in advance of such meeting and shall be advised that the report will be submitted to the court for consideration as an order of the court. The report submitted to the court shall also contain any dissenting recommendations of the judicial citizen review panel, if applicable, and any recommendations of the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the child who was placed in DFCS custody, if such are available.

(c) If the court adopts a report that contains a case plan for reunification services, it shall be in effect until modification by the court. A case plan shall address each reason requiring removal of a child from his or her home and shall, at a minimum, comply with the requirements of Code Section 15-11-201.

(d) If the submitted DFCS report contains a proposed case plan for reunification services:

(1) DFCS shall provide the caregiver, the foster parent, and any preadoptive parent or relative providing care for the child who was placed in DFCS custody with a copy of those portions of the court approved case plan that involve the permanency goal and the services to be provided to the child;

(2) A copy of the DFCS report and case plan shall be delivered to the parent, guardian, or legal custodian by United States mail, e-mail, or hand delivery at the same time the report and case plan are transmitted to the court, along with written notice that such report will be considered by the court without a hearing unless, within five days from the date the copy of such report and case plan were delivered, the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the child who was placed in DFCS custody requests a hearing before the court to review such report and case plan; and

(3) If no hearing is requested, the court shall enter a disposition order or supplemental order incorporating all elements of the case plan for reunification services which the court finds essential to reunification, specifying what shall be accomplished by all parties before reunification of the family can be achieved.

(e) When DFCS recommends that reunification services are not appropriate and should not be allowed, the DFCS report shall address each reason requiring removal of a child from his or her home and shall contain at least the following:

(1) The purpose for which the child in DFCS custody was placed in foster care, including a statement of the reasons why such child cannot be adequately and safely protected at his or her home and the harm which may occur if such child remains in his or her home and a description of the services offered and the services provided to prevent removal of such child from his or her home;

(2) A clear statement describing all of the reasons supporting a finding that reunification of a child with his or her parent will be detrimental to such child and that reunification services therefore need not be provided, including specific findings as to whether any of the grounds for terminating parental rights exist; and

(3) The statements, provisions, and requirements found in paragraphs (11) and (12) of subsection (b) of Code Section 15-11-201.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-200, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

No error for failing to meet time requirements. — Since the plaintiff failed to show that it was the Department of Family and Children's Service's fault that the citizens review panel meeting was held outside the statutory time frame, there was no error justifying reversal of the juvenile court's judgment. In re C.S., 236 Ga. App. 312, 511 S.E.2d 895 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Custody by Department suspends parental right. — Removal of custody of the child from the parents is a determination that, for whatever length of time custody is exercised by the Department of Family and Children Services, this right has been suspended, although not finally terminated. Rodgers v. Department of Human Resources, 157 Ga. App. 235, 276 S.E.2d 902 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2701).

15-11-201. DFCS case plan; contents.

(a) A case plan shall be designed to achieve placement in the most appropriate, least restrictive, and most family-like setting available and in close proximity to the alleged dependent child's parent's home, consistent with the best interests and special needs of such child, and shall consider the placement's proximity to the school in which such child is enrolled at the time of placement.

(b) A case plan shall be developed by DFCS and the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the alleged dependent child and, when appropriate, such child. A case plan shall include, but not be limited to, all of the following:

(1) A description of the circumstances that resulted in such child being placed under the jurisdiction of the court and in foster care;

(2) An assessment of such child's and his or her family's strengths and needs and the type of placement best equipped to meet those needs;

(3)(A) A description of the type of home or institution in which such child is to be placed, including a discussion of the safety and appropriateness of the placement.

(B) If a child is placed in a qualified residential treatment program, DFCS must document:

(i) Reasonable and good faith efforts to identify and include all the individuals of the child's family and permanency team;

(ii) All contact information for members of the family and permanency team;

(iii) All contact information for other family members and fictive kin who are not part of the family and permanency team;

(iv) Evidence that meetings of the family and permanency team, including meetings relating to the assessment required by Code Section 15-11-219, are held at a time and place convenient for family;

(v) If reunification is the goal, evidence demonstrating that the parent from whom the child was removed provided input on the members of the family and permanency team;

(vi) Evidence that the assessment required by Code Section 15-11-219 is determined in conjunction with the family and permanency team;

(vii) The placement preferences of the family and permanency team relative to the assessment that recognizes children should be placed with their siblings unless there is a finding by the court that such placement is contrary to their best interest; and

(viii) If the placement preferences of the family and permanency team and child are not the placement setting recommended by the qualified individual conducting the assessment under Code Section 15-11-219, the reasons why the preferences of the team and of the child were not recommended.

(C) If a child is placed in a qualified residential treatment program for more than six consecutive or nonconsecutive months, DFCS must maintain:

(i) Documentation of the assessment completed by a qualified individual, including written recommendations regarding the placement that will provide the child with the most effective level of care in the least restrictive environment and how that placement is consistent with the permanency goals established for the child; and

(ii) Documentation of the determination and approval or disapproval of the placement in a qualified residential treatment program by the court;

(4) Specific time-limited goals and related activities designed to enable the safe return of such child to his or her home, or, in the event that return to his or her home is not possible, activities designed to result in permanent placement or emancipation;

(5) Assignment of specific responsibility for accomplishing the planned activities;

(6) The projected date of completion of the case plan objectives;

(7) The date time-limited services will be terminated;

(8) A schedule of visits between such child and his or her siblings and other appropriate family members and an explanation if no visits are scheduled;

(9) When placement is made in a foster family home, group home, or other child care institution that is either a substantial distance from the home of such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian or out of state, the case plan shall specify the reasons why the placement is the most appropriate and is in the best interests of the child;

(10) When an out-of-state group home placement is recommended or made, the case plan shall comply with Code Section 39-4-4, the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children. In addition, documentation of the recommendation of the multidisciplinary team and the rationale for such particular placement shall be included. The case plan shall also address what in-state services or facilities were used or considered and why they were not recommended;

(11) If applicable, a statement that reasonable efforts have been made and a requirement that reasonable efforts shall be made for so long as such child remains in the custody of the department:

(A) To place siblings removed from their home in the same foster care, kinship care, guardianship, or adoptive placement, unless DFCS documents that such a joint placement would be contrary to the safety or well-being of any of the siblings; and

(B) In the case of siblings removed from their home who are not so jointly placed, for frequent visitation or other ongoing interaction between the siblings, unless DFCS documents that such frequent visitation or other ongoing interaction would be contrary to the safety or well-being of any of the siblings;

(12) Provisions ensuring the educational stability of such child while in foster care, including:

(A) An assurance that the placement of such child in foster care takes into account the appropriateness of the current educational setting and the proximity to the school in which such child is enrolled at the time of placement;

(B) An assurance that the state agency has coordinated with appropriate local educational agencies to ensure that such child remains in the school in which such child is enrolled at the time of placement; or

(C) If remaining in such school is not in the best interests of the child, an assurance by DFCS that DFCS and the local educational agencies have cooperated to assure the immediate and appropriate enrollment in a new school, with all of the educational records of such child provided to such new school;

(13) An account of health and education information about such child including school records, immunizations, known medical problems, any known medications he or she may be taking, names and addresses of his or her health and educational providers; such child's grade level performance; assurances that such child's placement in foster care takes into account proximity to the school in which he or she was enrolled at the time of placement; and other relevant health and educational information;

(14) A recommendation for a permanency plan for such child. If, after considering reunification, adoptive placement, permanent guardianship, or placement with a fit and willing relative, DFCS recommends placement in another planned permanent living arrangement for a child who has attained the age of 16, the case plan shall include:

(A) Documentation of a compelling reason or reasons why reunification, termination of parental rights and adoption, permanent guardianship, or placement with a fit and willing relative are not in the child's best interests;

(B) Documentation of the intensive, ongoing, and unsuccessful efforts made by the state agency to return the child home or secure a placement for the child with a fit and willing relative, a legal guardian, or an adoptive parent, including through efforts that utilize search technology, including social media, to find biological family members for the child; and

(C) Documentation of the steps the state agency is taking to ensure that the child's foster family home or child care institution is following the reasonable and prudent parent standard, as defined in Code Section 49-5-3, and documentation that the child has regular, ongoing opportunities to engage in age or developmentally appropriate activities, as defined in Code Section 49-5-3, including by consulting with the child in an age-appropriate manner about the opportunities of the child to participate in the activities.

For purposes of this paragraph, a "compelling reason" shall have the same meaning as in paragraph (2) of subsection (b) of Code Section 15-11-233;

(15)(A) A statement that the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of such child and the child have had an opportunity to participate in the development of the case plan, to review the case plan, to sign the case plan, and to receive a copy of the plan, or an explanation about why such persons were not able to participate or sign the case plan.

(B) The case plan for each child in foster care who has attained the age of 14 years old shall be developed and revised in consultation with the child and, at the option of the child, up to two members of the case planning team who are chosen by the child and who are not a foster parent of, or caseworker for, the child. DFCS may reject an individual selected by a child to be a member of the case planning team at any time if DFCS has good cause to believe that the individual would not act in the best interests of the child. One such member may be designated to be the child's advisor and, as necessary, advocate, with respect to the application of the reasonable and prudent parent standard to the child.

(C) The case plan for each child in foster care who has attained the age of 14 years old shall include:

(i) A document describing the rights of the child with respect to education, health, visitation, and court participation, the right to be provided with a consumer report pursuant to 42 U.S.C. Section 675(5)(I), and the right to stay safe and avoid exploitation; and

(ii) A signed acknowledgment by the child that the child has been provided with a copy of the document described in division

(i) of this subparagraph and that the rights contained in the document have been explained to the child in an age-appropriate way;

(16) A requirement that the DFCS case manager and staff and, as appropriate, other representatives of such child provide him or her with assistance and support in developing a transition plan that is personalized at the direction of such child, including specific options on housing, health insurance, education, local opportunities for mentors and continuing support services, and workforce supports and employment services, and is as detailed as such child may elect. The transition plan shall be completed in the 90 day period immediately prior to the date on which such child will attain 18 years of age;

(17) For such child in out-of-home care who is 14 years of age or older, a written description of the programs and services which will help him or her prepare for the transition from foster care to independent living; and

(18) The identity of the person within DFCS or other agency who is directly responsible for ensuring that the case plan is implemented.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-201, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2014, p. 780, § 1-11/SB 364; Ga. L. 2015, p. 552, § 13/SB 138; Ga. L. 2018, p. 927, § 1-3/HB 906; Ga. L. 2019, p. 893, § 3/SB 225; Ga. L. 2019, p. 1056, § 15/SB 52.

The 2018 amendment, effective July 1, 2020, in paragraph (b)(16), substituted "workforce" for "work force" near the end of the first sentence, in the second sentence, substituted "The transition plan shall be completed in the 90 day period immediately prior to the date on which such child will attain 18 years of age" for "The transition plan shall be completed in the 90 day period: (A) Immediately prior to the date on which such child will attain 18 years of age; or", and deleted former subparagraph (b)(16)(B), which read: "If such child remains in the care of DFCS past his or her eighteenth birthday, before his or her planned exit from DFCS care."

The 2019 amendments. — The first 2019 amendment, effective May 7, 2019, designated the existing provisions of paragraph (b)(3) as subparagraph (b)(3)(A); substituted a period for a semicolon at the end of subparagraph (b)(3)(A); and added subparagraphs (b)(3)(B) and (b)(3)(C). The second 2019 amendment, effective May 12, 2019, part of an Act to revise, modernize, and correct the Code, revised punctuation at the end of subparagraph (b)(16).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Private cause of action. — Following factors were relevant in determining whether a private remedy was implicit in a statute not expressly providing one: first, was the plaintiff one of the class for whose special benefit the statute was enacted; second, was there any indication of legislative intent, explicit or implicit, either to create such a remedy or to deny one; third, was it consistent with the underlying purpose of the legislative scheme to imply such a remedy for plaintiff? When foster children alleged that certain child services agencies and officials violated former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(c) and (o)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-201 and 15-11-230), then the former statute conferred upon the children a private cause of action. Kenny A. v. Perdue, 218 F.R.D. 277 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 18, 2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Timing of case plan made it impossible to comply with case plan. — Record provided no support for a finding that the aunt and uncle failed to comply with the goals of a case plan for reunification with the child, and to the extent the juvenile court based the court's ruling on such a failure, the court erred because the only written case plans were an unfiled case plan dated May 6, 2016, and another case plan dated May 10, 2016, and filed May 12, 2016; the first hearing on the motion for nonreunification was held on May 13, 2016, the day after the May 10 case plan was filed with the juvenile court; and the juvenile court issued the order on August 16, 2016, nunc pro tunc June 2, 2016, even though the May 10 case plan gave the aunt and uncle until September 30, 2016, to complete several reunification goals. In the Interest of B. G., 345 Ga. App. 167, 812 S.E.2d 552 (2018).

15-11-202. Reasonable efforts by DFCS to preserve or reunify families.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (a) of Code Section 15-11-203, reasonable efforts shall be made to preserve or reunify families:

(1) Prior to the placement of an alleged dependent child in DFCS custody to prevent the need for removing him or her from his or her home; or

(2) To eliminate the need for removal and make it possible for a child alleged to be or adjudicated as a dependent child to return safely to his or her home at the earliest possible time.

(b) In determining the type of reasonable efforts to be made to a child alleged to be or adjudicated as a dependent child and in making such reasonable efforts, such child's health and safety shall be the paramount concern.

(c) Appropriate services to meet the needs of a child alleged to be or adjudicated as a dependent child and his or her family may include those provided by DFCS and other services available in the community.

(d) The court shall be required to review the appropriateness of DFCS's reasonable efforts at each stage of the proceedings.

(e)(1) At the preliminary protective hearing, DFCS has the burden of demonstrating that:

(A) It has made reasonable efforts to prevent placement of an alleged dependent child in foster care;

(B) There are no appropriate services or efforts which could allow an alleged dependent child to safely remain in the home given the particular circumstances of such child and his or her family at the time of his or her removal and so the absence of such efforts was justifiable; or

(C) Reasonable efforts to prevent placement and to reunify an alleged dependent child with his or her family are not required because of the existence of one or more of the circumstances enumerated in subsection (a) of Code Section 15-11-203.

(2) At the adjudication hearing, DFCS has the burden of demonstrating that:

(A) It has made reasonable efforts to eliminate the need for removal of an alleged dependent child from his or her home and to reunify such child with his or her family at the earliest possible time; or

(B) Reasonable efforts to prevent placement and to reunify an alleged dependent child with his or her family are not required because of the existence of one or more of the circumstances enumerated in subsection (a) of Code Section 15-11-203.

(3) At each other hearing, DFCS has the burden of demonstrating that:

(A) It has made reasonable efforts to eliminate the need for removal of a child alleged to be or adjudicated as a dependent child from his or her home and to reunify such child with his or her family at the earliest possible time; or

(B) It has made reasonable efforts to finalize an alternative permanent home for a child alleged to be or adjudicated as a dependent child.

(f)(1) When determining whether reasonable efforts have been made, the court shall consider whether services to the child alleged to be or adjudicated as a dependent child and his or her family were:

(A) Relevant to the safety and protection of such child;

(B) Adequate to meet the needs of such child and his or her family;

(C) Culturally and linguistically appropriate;

(D) Available and accessible;

(E) Consistent and timely; and

(F) Realistic under the circumstances.

(2) In determining whether reasonable efforts have been made to finalize an alternative permanent home for a child adjudicated dependent, the court shall also consider whether DFCS has completed the diligent search required by subsection (e) of Code Section 15-11-211 and has provided notice to persons identified in such diligent search as required by subsection (c) of Code Section 15-11-211.

(g) A finding that reasonable efforts have not been made shall not preclude the entry of an order authorizing a child alleged to be or adjudicated as a dependent child's placement when the court finds that placement is necessary for the protection of such child.

(h) When efforts to prevent the need for a child alleged to be or adjudicated as a dependent child's placement were precluded by an immediate threat of harm to such child, the court may make a finding that reasonable efforts were made if it finds that the placement of such child in the absence of such efforts was justifiable.

(i) Reasonable efforts to place a child adjudicated as a dependent child for adoption or with a guardian or legal custodian may be made concurrently with reasonable efforts to reunify. When DFCS decides to concurrently make reasonable efforts for both reunification and permanent placement away from the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of a child adjudicated as a dependent child, DFCS shall disclose its decision and both plans to all parties and obtain approval from the court. When DFCS proceeds on both plans, the court's review of reasonable efforts shall include efforts under both plans.

(j) An order placing or continuing the placement of a child alleged to be or adjudicated as a dependent child in DFCS custody shall contain, but not be limited to, written findings of facts stating:

(1) That such child's continuation in or return to his or her home would be contrary to his or her welfare;

(2) Whether reasonable efforts have been made to prevent or eliminate the need for placement of such child, unless the court has determined that such efforts are not required or shall cease; and

(3) Whether reasonable efforts should continue to be made to prevent or eliminate the need for placement of such child, unless the court has previously determined that such efforts are not required or shall cease.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-202, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2019, p. 456, § 1/SB 167.

The 2019 amendment, effective July 1, 2019, designated the existing provisions of subsection (f) as paragraph (f)(1); redesignated former paragraphs (f)(1) through (f)(6) as present subparagraphs (f)(1)(A) through (f)(1)(F), respectively; and added paragraph (f)(2).

General Consideration

Applicability. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-134) was inapplicable since a child remained in the legal custody of the child's father with whom the child had been residing for several months prior to the deprivation hearing as the child was not placed in the custody of the Georgia Department of Family and Children Services. In the Interest of K.J., 268 Ga. App. 843, 602 S.E.2d 861 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

In a termination of parental rights case, the court rejected the parents' argument that the parents had been deprived of the opportunity to achieve reunification under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a)(2) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-202) because the Department of Family and Children Services had not promptly presented a second reunification plan; while the parents had made laudable efforts to comply with the second case plan, the parent had not complied with the first plan; moreover, former § 15-11-58 did not apply to termination proceedings. In the Interest of T.W.O., 283 Ga. App. 771, 643 S.E.2d 255 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reunification

Notice. — At a permanency hearing, at which a mother appeared represented by counsel, the mother was not entitled to prior notice by report or motion that DFCS would seek termination of reunification services and an award of long-term custody at the hearing. In the Interest of D. H., 313 Ga. App. 664, 722 S.E.2d 388 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Presumption that reunification services are inappropriate. — Pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204), reunification services were inappropriate if reasonable efforts to reunify a child with the child's family would be detrimental to the child; although rebuttable, a presumption existed. In the Interest of J.P.V., 261 Ga. App. 194, 582 S.E.2d 170 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Juvenile court's decision to terminate parental rights was supported by clear and convincing evidence including the family's history of instability, the fact that the children lived in filth for their entire lives, their developmental and emotional problems, and evidence of malnourishment and poor hygiene. The mother failed to rebut the presumption that reunification services should not be provided to the family and that efforts to reunify the children with the mother would be detrimental to the children. In the Interest of T.D.B., 266 Ga. App. 434, 597 S.E.2d 537 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Because the parental rights to a mother's other four children had previously been terminated around the time the mother's infant child was born, the juvenile court did not err in approving a nonreunification plan involving that infant child pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a)(4)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-203); further, a presumption of nonreunification arose based on the mother's medically verified mental deficiency. In the Interest of J.P., 280 Ga. App. 100, 633 S.E.2d 442 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Presumption against reunification. — Because there was no evidence that parents suffered from a medically verifiable deficiency of their mental health, no presumption against reunification arose on such account. In the Interest of A.M., 306 Ga. App. 358, 702 S.E.2d 686 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Notice of nonreunification. — Parent had notice that the Georgia Department of Family and Children Services was seeking nonreunification and had the opportunity to contest the issue; after a hearing the court continued the case, noting that a nonreunification case plan had been filed and the parent was contesting the issue of nonreunification, and the hearing was held on the later date with the parent and the parent's attorney present at the hearing. In the Interest of A. E., 314 Ga. App. 206, 723 S.E.2d 499 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reasonable efforts at reunification not required. — Reasonable efforts toward reunification of a father with his child were not required because the court made findings of aggravated circumstances including a finding that the father had sexually abused the child and the child's siblings. In the Interest of B.M., 252 Ga. App. 716, 556 S.E.2d 883 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a juvenile court's judgment that reunification services were inappropriate for a mother with a history of drug and alcohol use, whose minor child had been taken from her home on three occasions because of the mother's inability to provide adequate food, clothing, and shelter for the child. In the Interest of J.P.V., 261 Ga. App. 194, 582 S.E.2d 170 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Although former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-134) required a juvenile court to make a finding of fact as to whether reasonable efforts at reunification were made prior to placement of the children in a county agency in a parental rights termination proceeding, such finding was not required because the children had already been found to be deprived by the mother. In the Interest of S.N.L., 275 Ga. App. 600, 621 S.E.2d 792 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Termination of a parent's rights to a child was not barred by the parent's claim that a county department of family and children services established a nonreunification plan before contacting the parent and then denied the parent's requests for information; former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58 did not impose upon termination proceedings the same procedures that applied to disposition orders and recommendations regarding reunification and did not obligate the department in every case to create a plan for reunification, and when the department afforded the parent an opportunity to participate in the case by mailing the initial case plan to the parent and explaining the need to legitimize the child, the parent failed to seize the opportunity or to comply timely with the instructions on legitimization. In the Interest of T.C., 282 Ga. App. 659, 639 S.E.2d 601 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reasonable efforts at reunification. — Because a caseworker began working with the father even before he established paternity, and because the Department of Family and Children Services prepared a case plan for the father, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-202), reasonable efforts were made to place the child with the father before the child was placed with the Department. In re T.B.W., 312 Ga. App. 733, 719 S.E.2d 589 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reunification plan. — Because the juvenile court entered court-ordered goals for reunification, but failed to enter a specific plan for reunification after the deprivation finding, and the mother's attorney was left with virtually no time to file any motions requesting visitation or a case plan for reunification, under the mandate of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a)(2) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-202), the juvenile court was required to set out a plan for reunification and give the mother the opportunity to meet those goals. In the Interest of B.C., 250 Ga. App. 152, 550 S.E.2d 707 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Mother's claim that the reunification plan that the state family welfare department imposed on her was too vague to comply with the applicable statutory requirements was waived because that claim was not raised in the trial court, but, in any event, the plan was sufficiently specific to meet the statutory requirements. In the Interest of D.E., 269 Ga. App. 753, 605 S.E.2d 394 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Failure to comply with previous reunification plan. — One of the noted factors in finding a child to be deprived was proof that a parent had unjustifiably failed to comply with a previously ordered plan designed to reunite the family under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204). In the Interest of R.M., 276 Ga. App. 707, 624 S.E.2d 182 (2005).

Reunification not appropriate. — Evidence that reunification would subject the child to further educational neglect, inadequate supervision, and domestic violence, that the mother's cognitive limitations placed the child at risk, that the mother failed to make progress despite intervention, and that there were no other services that could be provided to eliminate the risk of harm to child, made it clear reunification would be detrimental. In re C.N., 231 Ga. App. 639, 500 S.E.2d 400 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Since the evidence showed that children were deprived due to a mother's lack of parental care, that the deprivation was likely to continue and cause serious harm to the children, and that the mother unjustifiably failed to comply with previous reunification plans, the trial court did not err in approving the nonreunification plan. In re C.S., 236 Ga. App. 312, 511 S.E.2d 895 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Reunification was not appropriate since evidence showed that parents unjustifiably failed to comply with plans designed to reunite the parents with the children, the children were removed from the parents' custody on two or more occasions, reunification services were previously provided, and there were grounds for terminating parental rights. In re R.U., 239 Ga. App. 573, 521 S.E.2d 610 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Juvenile court did not err in approving a nonreunification plan when convincing evidence showed reunification was not in the best interests of the children and the likelihood that it would only prolong their deprivation. In the Interest of U.B., 246 Ga. App. 328, 540 S.E.2d 278 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Evidence that the children's mother permitted and/or assisted her husband in making videotapes for distribution of the children being stripped and spanked was sufficient to show that reunification services between the children and their mother should not be provided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204); furthermore, a presumption against nonreunification existed because of the evidence of the mother's past egregious conduct, and there was insufficient evidence to overcome the presumption favoring reunifications. In the Interest of J.P., 253 Ga. App. 732, 560 S.E.2d 318 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Reunification was not appropriate since evidence of the children's starvation, coupled with the mother's complete denial of responsibility for their emaciated condition, amply supported the juvenile court's findings that she physically neglected the children and that reunification would be detrimental to the children. In the Interest of R.N.R., 257 Ga. App. 93, 570 S.E.2d 388 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Evidence was sufficient to support a juvenile court's approval of nonreunification of the mother and her child under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204) as the mother failed to rebut the presumption that reunification services not be provided due to her medically verifiable health deficiency when the mother provided evidence that she complied with her prenatal care, did fine during pregnancy even though she was not on her medication, and was a loving mother, but a psychiatrist testified that the mother was mentally ill, that the illness could cause the mother to hurt the child, and that the mother's mental condition was likely to continue. In the Interest of D.L.W., 264 Ga. App. 168, 590 S.E.2d 183 (2003).

As the trial court found clear and convincing evidence of a medically verifiable condition creating the parent's inability to properly parent the children, this finding created a presumption that reunification services need not be provided. In the Interest of A.W., 264 Ga. App. 705, 592 S.E.2d 177 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Evidence was sufficient to support the trial court's judgment that reunification efforts should be discontinued as to the mother as clear and convincing evidence showed that the mother had not, as required by the reunification plan, gone six consecutive months without testing positive for drugs and had refused to submit to two drug screenings; also, the mother had not rebutted the presumption that reunification efforts should be discontinued. In the Interest of J.B., 274 Ga. App. 564, 618 S.E.2d 187 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Plan for nonreunification under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204) was in the child's best interests since: (1) the grandmother relapsed after regaining custody and became so drunk that she passed out and left the four-year-old child unsupervised; (2) the incident resulted in the grandmother's father applying for a protection order; (3) the grandmother was dismissed from a substance abuse treatment program; (4) the grandmother pled guilty to driving under the influence and child endangerment two years earlier; and (5) the child had behavioral problems that resulted in hospitalization and that led a child services agency to seek therapeutic foster care before seeking permanent adoption. In the Interest of J.B., 274 Ga. App. 20, 619 S.E.2d 305 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Trial court properly granted an agency's motion to end reunification services provided to the parents as the evidence indicated that the parents refused to cooperate with case plans and had completely denied responsibility for placing the children in a harmful situation. In the Interest of D.B., 277 Ga. App. 454, 627 S.E.2d 101 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Rational trier of fact could have found clear and convincing evidence that the parent unjustifiably failed to comply with the reunification plan and that reasonable efforts to reunify the child with the parent would be detrimental to the child under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204); the parent failed to complete parenting classes, failed to obtain stable housing and employment, failed to pay child support, failed to attend psychotherapy, and disappeared for months at a time without explanation and without visiting the child. In the Interest of C.A., 279 Ga. App. 747, 632 S.E.2d 698 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

In the termination of parental rights case, contrary to the mother's argument, the reunification plan complied with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(c)(3) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-201); the plan required the mother, who was mentally retarded, to prove that the mother could be a fit parent, and the mother failed to show this. In the Interest of H.F.G., 281 Ga. App. 22, 635 S.E.2d 338 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Order holding that reunification efforts on the part of a mother were not in the best interest of her two children was upheld on appeal pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204) since the record established that the mother suffered from mental illness and was unable to care for her children. The mother failed to rebut the presumption that reunification services were inappropriate when she had unjustifiably failed to comply with a previously ordered plan. In the Interest of T.L., 285 Ga. App. 526, 646 S.E.2d 728 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Although a parent made substantial progress on a reunification plan while incarcerated, an order extending temporary custody for an additional year in favor of the Department of Family and Children Services was upheld on appeal as sufficient evidence was presented that the parent was unable to: (1) establish stable housing; (2) complete a substance abuse assessment; and (3) demonstrate six months of clean drug screens; further, as the parent was living with the other parent who evidence showed to be an unrehabilitated drug user, the trial court was authorized to conclude that the child at issue would not be in a safe environment if returned to the parent. In the Interest of R.B., 285 Ga. App. 556, 647 S.E.2d 300 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Juvenile court did not err in approving nonreunification with regard to a parent and two twin children as some evidence showed that the parent: unjustifiably failed to comply with the case plan goals to provide financial support for the children; failed to maintain stable housing and employment; failed to attend all scheduled psychological evaluations; exhibited paranoid and psychopathic personality tendencies to the extent that the parent's ability to care for the children was severely impaired; and was convicted of threatening a prior spouse and stalking that spouse and children and, thus, had engaged in actions which constituted egregious conduct toward those children. In the Interest of T.W., 288 Ga. App. 386, 654 S.E.2d 218 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Trial court properly extended a department of family and child services' custody of a child when the child's mother, communicating with the child over the Internet while posing as an adult man, had pretended to have witnessed a sexually graphic event; the child was especially vulnerable to sexually inappropriate behavior; and the mother's conduct during visitation with the child, including her statements that the child would be a suspect if anything happened to the mother, that the child would never live with her father, and that the child was "acting like a whore," was also probative of whether she would act abusively toward her daughter if she were returned to her custody. The fact that the mother had substantially completed her reunification case plan did not mandate that the child be returned to her custody. In the Interest of Q.H., 291 Ga. App. 598, 662 S.E.2d 358 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

There was sufficient clear and convincing evidence presented to authorize the juvenile court to find that a mother's child was deprived and that the deprivation was likely to continue, and consequently, that reunification of the child with the mother would be detrimental to the child and was not in the child's best interest because, while the juvenile court took into consideration the previous termination of the mother's parental rights in determining whether the child was deprived, the juvenile court also heard substantial evidence showing that the mother's mental, emotional, and financial condition had not changed significantly since her parental rights to her children were terminated and that, despite the assistance of the Department of Family and Children Services and the loss of her four children, the mother still lacked the necessary skills, judgment, and resources to properly care for the child. In re R. B., 309 Ga. App. 407, 710 S.E.2d 611 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Juvenile court did not err in terminating the reunification services and approving the non-reunification plan because clear and convincing evidence supported the juvenile court's conclusion that the child was deprived based on the mother's long-term substance abuse and that such deprivation was likely to continue and cause harm to the child. In the Interest of J. T., 322 Ga. App. 4, 743 S.E.2d 571 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reunification inappropriate when children had severe medical issues. — Trial court did not err in granting a motion filed by the Department of Family and Children Services for nonreunification because evidence supported the trial court's finding that the parents were not able to meet their children's medical needs, and the children's lives would be endangered if the appropriate level of care was not maintained; the parents' physical neglect of the children and their continuing inability to meet their children's extensive medical needs was sufficient for any rational trier of fact to find by clear and convincing evidence that reunification efforts would be detrimental to the children. In the Interest of A.M., 306 Ga. App. 358, 702 S.E.2d 686 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Report recommending nonreunification met requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-200), notwithstanding evidence which the mother contended showed that the contents of the report recommending nonreunification were determined prior to her meeting with caseworkers for the county Department of Family and Children Services. Although the court agreed with the mother that a report should not be finalized until after such a meeting had been conducted, it disagreed with the mother's apparent contention that nothing should be committed to writing prior to such meeting. In the Interest of T.R., 248 Ga. App. 310, 548 S.E.2d 621 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Discontinuing efforts for reunification appropriate. — Because a trial court found in the court's unappealed orders that the children were deprived and that such deprivation was caused by their father, in a second unappealed order finding that the deprivation was likely to continue and that the father was untruthful, evasive, and inconsistent in his testimony, the statutory criteria for discontinuing efforts for reunification of the family were met. In re L.S.M., 236 Ga. App. 537, 512 S.E.2d 397 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Denial of reunification was proper based on findings that this was the third time that the children had been removed from the mother's care, that the Department of Family and Children Services had previously undertaken reasonable efforts to reunify the family, that the mother had unjustifiably failed to comply with prior plans, and that she had serious medical problems. In re K.M., 240 Ga. App. 67, 522 S.E.2d 667 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Order terminating reunification services was proper after a case manager testified that the mother did not meet the case plan requirements, and although the mother claimed that she worked "daily" to clean up her house and satisfy the other case plan goals, she readily admitted that she failed to make her home safe for the child within the 90-day time period established by the court. In the Interest of B.D.G., 262 Ga. App. 843, 586 S.E.2d 736 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Termination of reunification services was affirmed since the evidence showed that the parent had a history of chronic unrehabilitated abuse of alcohol or controlled substances with the effect of rendering the parent incapable of providing adequately for the needs of the children. In the Interest of S.A., 263 Ga. App. 610, 588 S.E.2d 805 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Record supported the juvenile court's judgment that a parent did not fulfill the terms of a case plan that was established by the Department of Family and Children's Services because the parent continued using cocaine and refused to attend substance abuse treatment; thus, the child was deprived and custody was properly placed in the department. In the Interest of J.L., 269 Ga. App. 226, 603 S.E.2d 742 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Because a mother unjustifiably failed to comply with the court-ordered case-plan goals, ample evidence supported the juvenile court's order approving the termination of reunification services under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204). In the Interest of K.R., 270 Ga. App. 296, 605 S.E.2d 911 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Because a presumption of non-unification arose after a parent failed to pay child support or comply with the reunification plan, reunification services were properly discontinued; but a placement order with a foster care agency was reversed as a grandparent presented uncontradicted evidence supporting a consideration for alternative placement. In the Interest of J.J., 287 Ga. App. 746, 652 S.E.2d 639 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Juvenile court properly terminated reunification services under since the child's parent had been incarcerated for the majority of the child's life and faced additional jail time if convicted of several pending charges, and the parent's child enjoyed a significant bond with the child's aunt and uncle, with whom the child had lived for several years. In the Interest of C.P., 291 Ga. App. 699, 662 S.E.2d 802 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Grant of a petition to cease efforts to reunify the mother with the mother's three children was supported by evidence that the mother continued to live with the mother's drug-supplier boyfriend and use illegal drugs, had not obtained a source of income, and had not ensured that the children had no contact with the mother's boyfriend, who allegedly touched one of the children inappropriately. In the Interest of R. G., 322 Ga. App. 523, 745 S.E.2d 752 (2013).

Discontinuing efforts for reunification not appropriate. — Evidence that the mother had substantially complied with the reunification plan and that, in the opinion of the psychologist retained by the Department of Family and Children Services, the psychologist did not understand why the department was seeking to end reunification efforts when the only way it was possible to determine if the mother would be able to effectively parent her eight year old child in the future was by reuniting the mother and child overcame the statutory presumption that reunification was not appropriate in cases when a child had been removed from the mother's home on at least two prior occasions and reunification services had been made available on those occasions. In the Interest of M.H., 251 Ga. App. 528, 554 S.E.2d 616 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Because the record failed to contain clear and convincing evidence to support the termination of reunification services to a parent, but instead showed that the parent substantially met the goals outlined in the reunification plan, maintained an income level appropriate to meet the needs of the parent's family, and cooperated in submitting to a psychological evaluation and any recommended treatment, that part of the lower court's judgment was reversed; but, the denial of the parent's reunification motion and the extension of temporary custody was affirmed. In the Interest of S.L.E., 280 Ga. App. 145, 633 S.E.2d 454 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Trial court improperly granted a motion filed by the Department of Family and Children Services to discontinue efforts to reunify parents with their children because the trial court erred in finding that the parents suffered from a medically verifiable deficiency of their mental health such as to render them incapable of providing for the physical needs of the children; the four psychological reports, two for each parent, that were submitted into evidence for consideration by the trial court provided no evidentiary support for the trial court's finding of a "medically verifiable deficiency" of the parents' mental health because the reports did not suggest that either parent lacked the mental competency to care for their children. In the Interest of A.M., 306 Ga. App. 358, 702 S.E.2d 686 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

A juvenile court's orders terminating reunification services and awarding custody of a child to the maternal grandmother were not supported by clear and convincing evidence because the mother demonstrated that she had Supplemental Security Income for two other children and that she could live comfortably with her children at her mother's home. In the Interest of D. H., 313 Ga. App. 664, 722 S.E.2d 388 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Failure to challenge deprivation order. — Failure to challenge a deprivation order precluded a parent's challenge to the sufficiency of the evidence showing that reasonable reunification efforts were made. In the Interest of R.D.B., 282 Ga. App. 628, 639 S.E.2d 565 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Finding of reunification efforts not required. — Because the children had not been placed in the custody of the Department of Family and Children Services, the trial court was not required to find that the agency had made reasonable reunification efforts. In the Interest of T.R., 284 Ga. App. 742, 644 S.E.2d 880 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Failure of Department of Family and Children Services to make reasonable efforts. — Even assuming that the Department of Family and Children Services made no reasonable effort to prevent a newborn's removal from her mother's custody, the juvenile court's factual findings that the mother's older child had been removed months earlier due to physical abuse inflicted by the mother, her boyfriend, or both, and that the newborn was the child of the mother and her boyfriend, who had since married, supported the award of custody to the Department pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-202(g). In the Interest of S. C. S., 336 Ga. App. 236, 784 S.E.2d 83 (2016).

Parent's complicity in murder did not excuse lack of reunification efforts. — When a mother's boyfriend was charged with murdering one of her three children, and she was charged with complicity, and since there was no evidence she knew that the boyfriend abused her children, and none of the aggravated circumstances contained in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a)(4)(A)-(C) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-203) had been shown, the trial court erred in excusing the state from making reasonable efforts toward reunification. In the Interest of A.B., 263 Ga. App. 697, 589 S.E.2d 264 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reunification plan requiring English classes. — Trial court did not misread parents' case plan to include goals that were not expressed in the plan because evidence supported the trial court's finding that the parents' case plan required the parents to have a psychological examination and follow through with recommended treatment; because the psychologist who recommended English as a second language classes pointed to the parents' language limitations as causing them to miss information necessary to provide appropriate medical care for the children, the recommended action was directly related to the circumstances which required the children be separated from the parents, and the recommended action could be included in the case plan without further judicial review. In the Interest of A.M., 306 Ga. App. 358, 702 S.E.2d 686 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reunification order insufficient to allow for meaningful appellate review. — Juvenile court's order that reunification was not in a child's best interests was vacated because the juvenile court found that reunification efforts would be detrimental to the child but did not specify which, if any, of the presumptions under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204) supported the court's finding; therefore, it was impossible for the court of appeals to determine whether the order was supported by clear and convincing evidence. In re T.S., 310 Ga. App. 100, 712 S.E.2d 121 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

15-11-203. When reasonable efforts by DFCS not required.

(a) The court may direct that reasonable efforts to eliminate the need for placement of an alleged dependent child shall not be required or shall cease if the court determines and makes written findings of fact that a parent of an alleged dependent child:

(1) Has subjected his or her child to aggravated circumstances;

(2) Has been convicted of the murder or murder in the second degree of another child of such parent;

(3) Has been convicted of the voluntary manslaughter of another child of such parent;

(4) Has been convicted of aiding or abetting, attempting, conspiring, or soliciting to commit murder or voluntary manslaughter of another child of such parent;

(5) Has been convicted of committing a felony assault that results in serious bodily injury to the child or another child of such parent;

(6) Has been convicted of rape, sodomy, aggravated sodomy, child molestation, aggravated child molestation, incest, sexual battery, or aggravated sexual battery of the alleged dependent child or another child of the parent;

(7) Is required to register as a sex offender and that preservation of a parent-child relationship is not in the alleged dependent child's best interests; or

(8) Has had his or her rights to a sibling of the alleged dependent child terminated involuntarily and the circumstances leading to such termination of parental rights to that sibling have not been resolved.

(b) If the court determines that one or more of the circumstances enumerated in subsection (a) of this Code section exist or DFCS has submitted a written report to the court which does not contain a plan for reunification services, then:

(1) A permanency plan hearing shall be held for a child adjudicated as a dependent child within 30 days; and

(2) Reasonable efforts shall be made to place a child adjudicated as a dependent child in a timely manner in accordance with the permanency plan and to complete whatever steps are necessary to finalize the permanent placement of such child.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-203, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2014, p. 444, § 2-2/HB 271.

Father fit and able to assume custody. — Juvenile court erred in extending temporary custody in the Department of Family and Children Services for an additional 12 months as: (1) the child's father was found to be a fit parent and was fully able to assume custody; (2) there was no testimony that the father was not capable of taking care of the child; and (3) the father completed every aspect of the case plan and was eligible for day-care assistance; thus, the evidence presented at the hearing fell far short of meeting the clear and convincing standard necessary to support a finding of deprivation. In the Interest of J.P., 280 Ga. App. 100, 633 S.E.2d 442 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Notice. — At a permanency hearing, at which a mother appeared represented by counsel, the mother was not entitled to prior notice by report or motion that DFCS would seek termination of reunification services and an award of long-term custody at the hearing. In the Interest of D. H., 313 Ga. App. 664, 722 S.E.2d 388 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Presumption that reunification services are inappropriate. — Because the parental rights to a mother's other four children had previously been terminated around the time the mother's infant child was born, the juvenile court did not err in approving a nonreunification plan involving that infant child pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a)(4)(C); further, a presumption of nonreunification arose based on the mother's medically verified mental deficiency. In the Interest of J.P., 280 Ga. App. 100, 633 S.E.2d 442 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

15-11-204. Nonreunification hearing.

(a) If the DFCS report does not contain a plan for reunification services, the court shall hold a nonreunification hearing to review the report and the determination that a plan for reunification services is not appropriate.

(b) The nonreunification hearing shall be held no later than 30 days from the time the DFCS report is filed. Notice of the nonreunification hearing shall be provided, by summons, to the child adjudicated as a dependent child if he or she is 14 years of age or older, his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian, attorney, guardian ad litem, if any, and specified nonparties entitled to notice.

(c) At the nonreunification hearing:

(1) DFCS shall notify the court whether and when it intends to proceed with termination of parental rights; and

(2) The court shall also hold a permanency plan hearing, at which the court shall consider in-state and out-of-state permanent placement options for the child adjudicated as a dependent child and shall incorporate a permanency plan for such child in its order.

(d) DFCS shall have the burden of demonstrating by clear and convincing evidence that a reunification plan is not appropriate considering the health and safety of the child adjudicated as a dependent child and such child's need for permanence. There shall be a presumption that reunification is detrimental to a child adjudicated as a dependent child and reunification services should not be provided if the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that:

(1) Such child's parent has unjustifiably failed to comply with a previously ordered plan designed to reunite the family;

(2) An alleged dependent child has been removed from his or her home on at least two previous occasions and reunification services were made available on those occasions;

(3) A ground for terminating parental rights exists; or

(4) Any of the circumstances set out in subsection (a) of Code Section 15-11-203 exist, making it unnecessary to provide reasonable efforts to reunify.

(e) If the court has entered an order finding that reasonable efforts to reunify a child adjudicated as a dependent child with his or her family are not required but the court finds further that referral for termination of parental rights and adoption is not in the best interests of such child, the court may, upon proper petition, place such child in the custody of a permanent guardian pursuant to the provisions of this article.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-204, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Jurisdiction to award permanent custody over juvenile court's award of temporary custody. — Judgment was reversed because the juvenile court's authority to place a child in the custody of a "willing" and "qualified" relative was not authority to award permanent custody of the child as custody was determined by discerning the best interests of the child and not the willingness or the qualifications of a person to take temporary custody of the child. Ertter v. Dunbar, 292 Ga. 103, 734 S.E.2d 403 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

No equal protection violation. — Treating deprived children who were placed in the legal custody of the Department of Families and Children Services because there was no relative committed to the child who was available for immediate placement differently from deprived children who did have a committed parent or guardian available for immediate placement did not violate the equal protection clause or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II. as the classes were not similarly situated and the laws were rationally related to the goal of minimizing government intervention while ensuring that children were reared in a familial environment. In the Interest of A.N., 281 Ga. 58, 636 S.E.2d 496 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

No application to legal custodians. — Affording the text of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204 its plain and ordinary meaning, viewing the statute in the context in which the statute appears, and reading the statute in its most natural and reasonable way, the presumption set forth therein that reunification is detrimental to a child adjudicated as a dependent child applies to a parent and does not apply to the circumstance of the failure of a child's legal custodian to comply with a previously-ordered plan to reunite the family; thus, the juvenile court erred in applying that presumption to the child's aunt and uncle as the child's legal custodians. In the Interest of B. G., 345 Ga. App. 167, 812 S.E.2d 552 (2018).

Findings made without transcript reversed. — Because the juvenile court primarily based the court's decision that a parent's two children were deprived, awarding temporary custody of the children to the county, on evidence received at an unrecorded hearing, and a waiver requiring a transcript of that hearing was not in evidence, those findings were reversed, and the case was remanded. In the Interest of D.P., 284 Ga. App. 453, 644 S.E.2d 299 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Hearing not precondition to commencement of termination proceeding. — Since the Department of Family and Children Services included plans for reunification in case plans prior to the date a citizen review panel recommended termination of parental rights, a hearing was not a precondition to the commencement of termination proceedings. In re K.H., 229 Ga. App. 307, 494 S.E.2d 69 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Court had jurisdiction to enter termination of parental rights. — Juvenile court had jurisdiction to enter a termination of parental rights order because the juvenile court scheduled a timely hearing on the Department of Human Resource's motion for an extension, and the mother was served with notice of the hearing; the mother, however, failed to appear for the scheduled hearing. By failing to appear for a timely hearing of which the mother had notice, the mother waived the requirement of a hearing before the expiration of the earlier custody order. In the Interest of M.S.S., 308 Ga. App. 614, 708 S.E.2d 570 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Notice of nonreunification. — Parent had notice that the Georgia Department of Family and Children Services was seeking nonreunification and had the opportunity to contest the issue; after a hearing the court continued the case, noting that a nonreunification case plan had been filed and the parent was contesting the issue of nonreunification, and the hearing was held on the later date with the parent and the parent's attorney present at the hearing. In the Interest of A. E., 314 Ga. App. 206, 723 S.E.2d 499 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reasonable efforts at reunification not required. — Reasonable efforts toward reunification of a father with his child were not required because the court made findings of aggravated circumstances including a finding that the father had sexually abused the child and the child's siblings. In the Interest of B.M., 252 Ga. App. 716, 556 S.E.2d 883 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a juvenile court's judgment that reunification services were inappropriate for a mother with a history of drug and alcohol use, whose minor child had been taken from her home on three occasions because of the mother's inability to provide adequate food, clothing, and shelter for the child. In the Interest of J.P.V., 261 Ga. App. 194, 582 S.E.2d 170 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Although former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-134) required a juvenile court to make a finding of fact as to whether reasonable efforts at reunification were made prior to placement of the children in a county agency in a parental rights termination proceeding, such finding was not required because the children had already been found to be deprived by the mother. In the Interest of S.N.L., 275 Ga. App. 600, 621 S.E.2d 792 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Termination of a parent's rights to a child was not barred by the parent's claim that a county department of family and children services established a nonreunification plan before contacting the parent and then denied the parent's requests for information; former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58 did not impose upon termination proceedings the same procedures that applied to disposition orders and recommendations regarding reunification and did not obligate the department in every case to create a plan for reunification, and when the department afforded the parent an opportunity to participate in the case by mailing the initial case plan to the parent and explaining the need to legitimize the child, the parent failed to seize the opportunity or to comply timely with the instructions on legitimization. In the Interest of T.C., 282 Ga. App. 659, 639 S.E.2d 601 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Juvenile court did not err in approving a nonreunification plan when convincing evidence showed reunification was not in the best interests of the children and the likelihood that it would only prolong their deprivation. In the Interest of U.B., 246 Ga. App. 328, 540 S.E.2d 278 (2000).

Evidence that the children's mother permitted and/or assisted her husband in making videotapes for distribution of the children being stripped and spanked was sufficient to show that reunification services between the children and their mother should not be provided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204); furthermore, a presumption against nonreunification existed because of the evidence of the mother's past egregious conduct, and there was insufficient evidence to overcome the presumption favoring reunifications. In the Interest of J.P., 253 Ga. App. 732, 560 S.E.2d 318 (2002).

Reunification was not appropriate since evidence of the children's starvation, coupled with the mother's complete denial of responsibility for their emaciated condition, amply supported the juvenile court's findings that she physically neglected the children and that reunification would be detrimental to the children. In the Interest of R.N.R., 257 Ga. App. 93, 570 S.E.2d 388 (2002).

Evidence was sufficient to support a juvenile court's approval of nonreunification of the mother and her child under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204) as the mother failed to rebut the presumption that reunification services not be provided due to her medically verifiable health deficiency when the mother provided evidence that she complied with her prenatal care, did fine during pregnancy even though she was not on her medication, and was a loving mother, but a psychiatrist testified that the mother was mentally ill, that the illness could cause the mother to hurt the child, and that the mother's mental condition was likely to continue. In the Interest of D.L.W., 264 Ga. App. 168, 590 S.E.2d 183 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

As the trial court found clear and convincing evidence of a medically verifiable condition creating the parent's inability to properly parent the children, this finding created a presumption that reunification services need not be provided. In the Interest of A.W., 264 Ga. App. 705, 592 S.E.2d 177 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Evidence was sufficient to support the trial court's judgment that reunification efforts should be discontinued as to the mother as clear and convincing evidence showed that the mother had not, as required by the reunification plan, gone six consecutive months without testing positive for drugs and had refused to submit to two drug screenings; also, the mother had not rebutted the presumption that reunification efforts should be discontinued. In the Interest of J.B., 274 Ga. App. 564, 618 S.E.2d 187 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Plan for nonreunification under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204) was in the child's best interests since: (1) the grandmother relapsed after regaining custody and became so drunk that she passed out and left the four-year-old child unsupervised; (2) the incident resulted in the grandmother's father applying for a protection order; (3) the grandmother was dismissed from a substance abuse treatment program; (4) the grandmother pled guilty to driving under the influence and child endangerment two years earlier; and (5) the child had behavioral problems that resulted in hospitalization and that led a child services agency to seek therapeutic foster care before seeking permanent adoption. In the Interest of J.B., 274 Ga. App. 20, 619 S.E.2d 305 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Trial court properly granted an agency's motion to end reunification services provided to the parents as the evidence indicated that the parents refused to cooperate with case plans and had completely denied responsibility for placing the children in a harmful situation. In the Interest of D.B., 277 Ga. App. 454, 627 S.E.2d 101 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Rational trier of fact could have found clear and convincing evidence that the parent unjustifiably failed to comply with the reunification plan and that reasonable efforts to reunify the child with the parent would be detrimental to the child under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204); the parent failed to complete parenting classes, failed to obtain stable housing and employment, failed to pay child support, failed to attend psychotherapy, and disappeared for months at a time without explanation and without visiting the child. In the Interest of C.A., 279 Ga. App. 747, 632 S.E.2d 698 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

In the termination of parental rights case, contrary to the mother's argument, the reunification plan complied with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(c)(3) (see now

O.C.G.A. § 15-11-201); the plan required the mother, who was mentally retarded, to prove that the mother could be a fit parent, and the mother failed to show this. In the Interest of H.F.G., 281 Ga. App. 22, 635 S.E.2d 338 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Order holding that reunification efforts on the part of a mother were not in the best interest of her two children was upheld on appeal pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204) since the record established that the mother suffered from mental illness and was unable to care for her children. The mother failed to rebut the presumption that reunification services were inappropriate when she had unjustifiably failed to comply with a previously ordered plan. In the Interest of T.L., 285 Ga. App. 526, 646 S.E.2d 728 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Although a parent made substantial progress on a reunification plan while incarcerated, an order extending temporary custody for an additional year in favor of the Department of Family and Children Services was upheld on appeal as sufficient evidence was presented that the parent was unable to: (1) establish stable housing; (2) complete a substance abuse assessment; and (3) demonstrate six months of clean drug screens; further, as the parent was living with the other parent who evidence showed to be an unrehabilitated drug user, the trial court was authorized to conclude that the child at issue would not be in a safe environment if returned to the parent. In the Interest of R.B., 285 Ga. App. 556, 647 S.E.2d 300 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Juvenile court did not err in approving nonreunification with regard to a parent and two twin children as some evidence showed that the parent: unjustifiably failed to comply with the case plan goals to provide financial support for the children; failed to maintain stable housing and employment; failed to attend all scheduled psychological evaluations; exhibited paranoid and psychopathic personality tendencies to the extent that the parent's ability to care for the children was severely impaired; and was convicted of threatening a prior spouse and stalking that spouse and children and, thus, had engaged in actions which constituted egregious conduct toward those children. In the Interest of T.W., 288 Ga. App. 386, 654 S.E.2d 218 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Trial court properly extended a department of family and child services' custody of a child when the child's mother, communicating with the child over the Internet while posing as an adult man, had pretended to have witnessed a sexually graphic event; the child was especially vulnerable to sexually inappropriate behavior; and the mother's conduct during visitation with the child, including her statements that the child would be a suspect if anything happened to the mother, that the child would never live with her father, and that the child was "acting like a whore," was also probative of whether she would act abusively toward her daughter if she were returned to her custody. The fact that the mother had substantially completed her reunification case plan did not mandate that the child be returned to her custody. In the Interest of Q.H., 291 Ga. App. 598, 662 S.E.2d 358 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

There was sufficient clear and convincing evidence presented to authorize the juvenile court to find that a mother's child was deprived and that the deprivation was likely to continue, and consequently, that reunification of the child with the mother would be detrimental to the child and was not in the child's best interest because, while the juvenile court took into consideration the previous termination of the mother's parental rights in determining whether the child was deprived, the juvenile court also heard substantial evidence showing that the mother's mental, emotional, and financial condition had not changed significantly since her parental rights to her children were terminated and that, despite the assistance of the Department of Family and Children Services and the loss of her four children, the mother still lacked the necessary skills, judgment, and resources to properly care for the child. In re R. B., 309 Ga. App. 407, 710 S.E.2d 611 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Juvenile court did not err in terminating the reunification services and approving the non-reunification plan because clear and convincing evidence supported the juvenile court's conclusion that the child was deprived based on the mother's long-term substance abuse and that such deprivation was likely to continue and cause harm to the child. In the Interest of J. T., 322 Ga. App. 4, 743 S.E.2d 571 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reunification inappropriate when children had severe medical issues. — Trial court did not err in granting a motion filed by the Department of Family and Children Services for nonreunification because evidence supported the trial court's finding that the parents were not able to meet their children's medical needs, and the children's lives would be endangered if the appropriate level of care was not maintained; the parents' physical neglect of the children and their continuing inability to meet their children's extensive medical needs was sufficient for any rational trier of fact to find by clear and convincing evidence that reunification efforts would be detrimental to the children. In the Interest of A.M., 306 Ga. App. 358, 702 S.E.2d 686 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Report recommending nonreunification met requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-200), notwithstanding evidence which the mother contended showed that the contents of the report recommending nonreunification were determined prior to her meeting with caseworkers for the county Department of Family and Children Services. Although the court agreed with the mother that a report should not be finalized until after such a meeting had been conducted, it disagreed with the mother's apparent contention that nothing should be committed to writing prior to such meeting. In the Interest of T.R., 248 Ga. App. 310, 548 S.E.2d 621 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Failure to provide child support resulted in nonreunification. — Because a presumption of non-unification arose after a parent failed to pay child support or comply with the reunification plan, reunification services were properly discontinued; but a placement order with a foster care agency was reversed as a grandparent presented uncontradicted evidence supporting a consideration for alternative placement. In the Interest of J.J., 287 Ga. App. 746, 652 S.E.2d 639 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Discontinuing efforts for reunification not appropriate. — Evidence that the mother had substantially complied with the reunification plan and that, in the opinion of the psychologist retained by the Department of Family and Children Services, the psychologist did not understand why the department was seeking to end reunification efforts when the only way it was possible to determine if the mother would be able to effectively parent her eight year old child in the future was by reuniting the mother and child overcame the statutory presumption that reunification was not appropriate in cases when a child had been removed from the mother's home on at least two prior occasions and reunification services had been made available on those occasions. In the Interest of M.H., 251 Ga. App. 528, 554 S.E.2d 616 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Finding of reunification efforts not required. — Because the children had not been placed in the custody of the Department of Family and Children Services, the trial court was not required to find that the agency had made reasonable reunification efforts. In the Interest of T.R., 284 Ga. App. 742, 644 S.E.2d 880 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Parent's complicity in murder. — When a mother's boyfriend was charged with murdering one of her three children, and she was charged with complicity, and since there was no evidence she knew that the boyfriend abused her children, and none of the aggravated circumstances contained in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a)(4)(A)-(C) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-203) had been shown, the trial court erred in excusing the state from making reasonable efforts toward reunification. In the Interest of A.B., 263 Ga. App. 697, 589 S.E.2d 264 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Reunification order insufficient to allow for meaningful appellate review. — Juvenile court's order that reunification was not in a child's best interests was vacated because the juvenile court found that reunification efforts would be detrimental to the child but did not specify which, if any, of the presumptions under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-204) supported the court's finding; therefore, it was impossible for the court of appeals to determine whether the order was supported by clear and convincing evidence. In re T.S., 310 Ga. App. 100, 712 S.E.2d 121 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Jurisdiction. — Superior court properly declined jurisdiction in a custody action brought by grandparents because once a juvenile court took jurisdiction of a deprivation action concerning the child and, later, a termination action of parental rights, the court took jurisdiction of the entire case of the minor child including the issues of disposition and custody. Segars v. State, 309 Ga. App. 732, 710 S.E.2d 916 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Foster children. — Former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-13 and 15-11-58 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-30, 15-11-134, and 15-11-200 et seq.), and O.C.G.A. §§ 20-2-690.1 and 49-5-12 were not too vague and amorphous to be enforced by the judiciary and impose specific duties on the state defendants; thus, the federal regulatory scheme embodied in the CSFR process did not relieve the state defendants of the defendants obligation to fulfill the defendants statutory duties to the foster children, nor did the former statute provide a legal excuse for the defendants failure to do so. Kenny A. v. Perdue, No. 1:02-cv-1686-MHS, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27025 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 11, 2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

No equal protection violation. — Treating deprived children who were placed in the legal custody of the Department of Families and Children Services because there was no relative committed to the child who was available for immediate placement differently from deprived children who did have a committed parent or guardian available for immediate placement did not violate the equal protection clause or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II. as the classes were not similarly situated and the laws were rationally related to the goal of minimizing government intervention while ensuring that children were reared in a familial environment. In the Interest of A.N., 281 Ga. 58, 636 S.E.2d 496 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Temporary custody and visitation rights. — Juvenile court had jurisdiction to modify an order granting temporary custody of a deprived child to the Department of Family and Children Services and to permit visitation by parents who filed a petition for visitation rights four months after the custody order. In re K.B., 188 Ga. App. 199, 372 S.E.2d 476 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Consolidated proceedings not appealable when party consented. — Having consented to the consolidation of nonreunification proceedings with termination proceedings, the mother could not challenge the procedure for the first time on appeal. In the Interest of A.S.O., 243 Ga. App. 1, 530 S.E.2d 261 (2000), cert denied, 531 U.S. 1176, 121 S. Ct. 1150, 148 L. Ed. 2d 1012 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

15-11-210. Disposition hearing.

(a) If not held in conjunction with an adjudication hearing, a disposition hearing shall be held and completed within 30 days after the conclusion of an adjudication hearing.

(b) The court may consider any evidence, including hearsay evidence, that the court finds to be relevant, reliable, and necessary to determine the needs of a child adjudicated as a dependent child and the most appropriate disposition.

(c) Before determining the appropriate disposition, the court shall receive in evidence:

(1) The social study report as provided for in Code Section 15-11-191, if applicable, and the child adjudicated as a dependent child's proposed written case plan. The social study report and case plan shall be filed with the court not less than 48 hours before the disposition hearing;

(2) Any study or evaluation made by a guardian ad litem appointed by the court;

(3) Any psychological, medical, developmental, or educational study or evaluation of the child adjudicated as a dependent child; and

(4) Other relevant and material evidence as may be offered, including, but not limited to, the willingness of the caregiver to provide legal permanency for the child adjudicated as a dependent child if reunification is unsuccessful.

(d) Prior to a disposition hearing, and upon request, the parties and their attorneys shall be afforded an opportunity to examine any written reports received by the court.

(e)(1) Portions of written reports received by the court which are not relied on by the court in reaching its decision, which if revealed would be prejudicial to the interests of any party to the proceeding, or which reveal confidential sources, may be withheld in the court's discretion.

(2) Parties and their attorneys shall be given the opportunity to controvert written reports received by the court and to cross-examine individuals making such reports.

(f) At the conclusion of the disposition hearing, the court shall set the time and date for the first periodic review hearing and the permanency plan hearing.

General Consideration

Standard of proof on question of delinquency or termination. — An "any evidence" standard or "preponderance of the evidence" standard is inadequate in dealing with finding of deprivation of a child or termination of parental rights and would violate U.S. Const., amend. 14. In re Suggs, 249 Ga. 365, 291 S.E.2d 233 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33); In re J.K.D., 211 Ga. App. 776, 440 S.E.2d 524 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Standard of proof on charges of criminal nature against juvenile is the same as that used in criminal proceedings against adults; proof must be beyond a reasonable doubt. M.W.W. v. State, 136 Ga. App. 472, 221 S.E.2d 669 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201); In re M.M., 235 Ga. App. 109, 508 S.E.2d 484 (1998) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Termination of parental rights is a severe measure. If a third party sues the custodial parent to obtain custody of a child and to terminate the parent's custodial rights in the child, the parent is entitled to custody of the child unless the third party shows by "clear and convincing evidence" that the parent is unfit or otherwise not entitled to custody under O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1 and 19-7-4. Subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-110 and 15-11-210) requires the court after a hearing to find "clear and convincing evidence" of "deprivation" before an order of deprivation may be entered. Heath v. McGuire, 167 Ga. App. 489, 306 S.E.2d 741 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

If deprivation forms the predicate upon which a third party seeks a temporary transfer of the child's legal custody, in order to support such a disposition the child must first be adjudicated to be a deprived child. By statute, that finding of deprivation must be made by "clear and convincing evidence." In re J.C.P., 167 Ga. App. 572, 307 S.E.2d 1 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33); In re J.T.M., 200 Ga. App. 636, 409 S.E.2d 256 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33) but see In re A.W., 240 Ga. App. 259, 523 S.E.2d 88 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Standard of proof on termination or transfer of custody petition. — Regardless of whether the remedy sought is termination of parental rights or merely a transfer of temporary custody, clear and convincing evidence is required to support the finding of deprivation. In re R.R.M.R., 169 Ga. App. 373, 312 S.E.2d 832 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Finding of parental unfitness is essential to support an adjudication of present deprivation when parental rights are terminated as well as the transfer of temporary or permanent custody to a third party. In re J.C.P., 167 Ga. App. 572, 307 S.E.2d 1 (1983), but see In re A.W., 240 Ga. App. 259, 523 S.E.2d 88 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Delinquency found when delinquent acts corroborated by confession. — Child's confession out of court corroborated by evidence that the stolen items were found in the child's possession within a few hours of the theft constituted sufficient proof under both former Code 1933, §§ 24A-2201 and 24A-2202 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-19 and § 15-11-28) to support a finding of delinquency. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Application to termination of parental rights. — Former statute was applicable when proceeding was for termination of parental rights since that was also a custody controversy involving a deprived child. Powell v. Department of Human Resources, 147 Ga. App. 251, 248 S.E.2d 533 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Chancey v. Department of Human Resources, 156 Ga. App. 338, 274 S.E.2d 728 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Evidence of deprivation. — Evidence was sufficient to permit the juvenile court to find clear and convincing evidence of the child's deprivation and that the child's mother's misconduct or inability to care for the child's needs resulted in abuse or neglect sufficient to render her unfit to retain custody. In re C.N., 231 Ga. App. 639, 500 S.E.2d 400 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Evidence of unexplained bruises on a child's arms and back and fractures of the child's arms and legs while in the child's parents' and maternal grandmother's care was sufficient to support a deprivation order. In re J.V., 241 Ga. App. 621, 526 S.E.2d 386 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Parents' choice in exposing their child to an inappropriate and dangerous living environment showed a lack of parental judgment and careless disregard for the child's health and safety that was sufficient to support a finding that the child was deprived. In the Interest of B.M.B., 241 Ga. App. 609, 527 S.E.2d 250 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Termination based on parent's mental illness. — When a mother's parental rights were terminated to the mother's three-year-old daughter, sufficient evidence existed to support the judgment of termination because the evidence established that the mother was unable to provide adequately for the child due to mental illness, which was corroborated by evidence that the mother had four other children who were not in the mother's care or support; further, the mother had a long history of drug and alcohol abuse for which the mother failed to obtain inpatient drug treatment, was unable to maintain stable housing, failed to parent any children successfully, and the foster parents planned to adopt the child. In the Interest of D.P., 287 Ga. App. 168, 651 S.E.2d 110 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-56).

Sexual abuse as cause of deprivation. — Evidence supported the juvenile court's determination that a father deprived his child by committing sexual abuse against the child because a psychologist who interviewed the child testified that in the psychologist's opinion the child had a history of some kind of abuse, and another psychologist who performed a sexual trauma evaluation of the child testified that the child was difficult to manage and easily distracted, became anxious when asked any question regarding sex, exhibited abnormal anger and aggression as well as sexual behaviors common in sexually abused girls, and exhibited distorted sexual beliefs; the child's older sibling testified that the sibling had witnessed several instances of physical abuse by the father against the child. In the Interest of V. H., 308 Ga. App. 582, 708 S.E.2d 544 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-56).

Types of evidence admissible. — Citizens review panel report was properly considered by a trial court in reaching the court's decision regarding a termination of parental rights petition since the court is permitted to consider all helpful information. In re M.L.P., 236 Ga. App. 504, 512 S.E.2d 652 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Trial court did not err in admitting a home evaluation report into evidence in a hearing on a termination petition. In the Interest of R.G., 249 Ga. App. 91, 547 S.E.2d 729 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-56).

Lesbian relationship of parent. — Juvenile court erred in entering a finding of deprivation against a mother based solely on a case manager's report which was largely supported by hearsay; further, because the only remaining basis for the court's ruling was the mother's lesbian relationship, a deprivation finding could not be sustained absent a finding that the children were deprived as a result. In the Interest of E.C., 271 Ga. App. 133, 609 S.E.2d 381 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-56).

Custody by department only suspends parental right of custody. — Removal of custody of the child from the parents is a determination that, for whatever length of time custody is exercised by the department of family and children services, this right has been suspended, although not finally terminated. Rodgers v. Department of Human Resources, 157 Ga. App. 235, 276 S.E.2d 902 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Discretion of trier of fact on probative value of evidence. — Probative value to be accorded any evidence is within the sound discretion of the trier of fact, and should not be disturbed in the absence of a manifest abuse of discretion. C.A.J. v. State, 127 Ga. App. 813, 195 S.E.2d 225 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Limited restraining order appropriate disposition. — After a juvenile attacked a store detective, and subsequently displayed violent behavior and threatened another store employee, the court's conclusion that the juvenile was in need of treatment and rehabilitation, and the court's limited restraining order preventing the juvenile from entering any store owned by the company in Fulton County, except in the immediate presence of a parent or adult relative, was an appropriate disposition and justified by the evidence. In re J.M., 237 Ga. App. 298, 513 S.E.2d 742 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Separate Hearings

Juvenile Code requires separate trials with each having different goals. — First or adjudicatory process in a delinquency case is a full scale fact-finding hearing to determine if the child committed the act with which the child is charged and whether that constitutes delinquency. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201); J.B. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 545, 228 S.E.2d

712 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Purpose of division of juvenile trials into two phases. — In dividing juvenile trials into two phases lawmakers intended to give the juvenile judge an opportunity to conduct the "functional equivalent" of a regular trial (the adjudicatory hearing) in a manner which would satisfy the required constitutional procedures concomitant with the usual legal rules, such as those dealing with admissibility of evidence, proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and similar requirements applicable to adults. Thereafter, at the dispositional phase, the judge was to explore all available additional avenues, including psychiatric and sociological studies, which would enable the judge to provide a solution for the youngster and the family aimed at making the child a secure law-abiding member of society. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

During adjudicatory phase, rules of evidence generally prevail. — In the second (dispositional) phase, the court hears virtually all evidence which is material and relevant to the issue of disposition. J.B. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 545, 228 S.E.2d 712 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Dispositional hearing not necessary for termination due to deprivation. — If a petition for the termination of parental rights alleged only that the children were deprived, not delinquent, or unruly, it was not necessary for the juvenile judge to hold a dispositional hearing. In re J.C., 242 Ga. 737, 251 S.E.2d 299 (1978), appeal dismissed, 441 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2046, 60 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Dispositional hearing not needed for disposition order. — Trial court may enter order of disposition without first holding dispositional hearing if there is an implicit finding that termination of the parental rights of both parties is authorized, leaving the court with only the alternatives provided in former Code 1933, § 24A-3204 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-180 and 15-11-181). Moss v. Moss, 135 Ga. App. 401, 218 S.E.2d 93 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Probative evidence admissible in disposition hearing. — Juvenile court can consider a juvenile's prior record in aggravation of disposition even though the prior record has not been presented to the juvenile prior to trial. O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 (felony sentencing of adults) is not applicable to juvenile disposition hearings as the General Assembly has not made it so. To the contrary, subsection (a) of that section authorizes in dispositional hearings the receipt and consideration of all helpful information to the extent of its probative value, even though not otherwise competent evidence, in a hearing on criminal responsibility. C.P. v. State, 167 Ga. App. 374, 306 S.E.2d 688 (1983) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Caseworker's testimony about a mother's missed visits with the child was allowable as information that might be helpful to the juvenile court in determining whether the mother's parental rights were to be terminated, even though the information might not otherwise have been competent evidence. In the Interest of A.K., 272 Ga. App. 429, 612 S.E.2d 581 (2005) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Continuation of a dispositional hearing should have been allowed when the probation officer notified the court that the officer was not prepared to make a recommendation regarding disposition. In re M.D., 233 Ga. App. 261, 503 S.E.2d 888 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Dispositional hearing was held, albeit briefly, when, at the conclusion of the trial, the court found that the juvenile had committed the offense charged and questioned the juvenile with regard to whether the juvenile had been in court before and whether the juvenile had ever been charged with similar conduct. In re B.J.G., 234 Ga. App. 285, 506 S.E.2d 449 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Procedure

Access to confidential records. — Nonprofit advocacy corporation mandated under federal law to investigate incidents of abuse and neglect of individuals with mental illness should have been given reasonable access to confidential county and juvenile court records in connection with investigations relating to the corporation's filing of a deprivation petition. In re A.V.B., 222 Ga. App. 241, 474 S.E.2d 114 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Courts may consider reports which contain hearsay in disposition phase. — Former statute required that in the hearing on a petition alleging deprivation the trial court shall first make the court's finding as to whether the children were deprived, and it was only after this decision had been made that the judge, in considering the disposition to be made of the children, could consider written reports which contain hearsay matter. In re J.C., 242 Ga. 737, 251 S.E.2d 299 (1978), appeal dismissed, 441 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2046, 60 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933 § 24A-2201).

Trial court did not err in considering reports filed by a court-appointed special advocate (CASA), and by allowing the CASA to make a statement at the end of the hearing. In the Interest of C.G.B., 242 Ga. App. 705, 531 S.E.2d 107 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Assault victim's uncertified, unauthenticated medical reports admissible. — Court does not err in allowing uncertified and unauthenticated medical reports of an assault victim in evidence at the disposition hearing. C.P. v. State, 167 Ga. App. 374, 306 S.E.2d 688 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Admission of hearsay evidence. — Trial court did not err in permitting the introduction of hearsay evidence for whatever weight and credit the court might give the evidence. In the Interest of A.T.H., 248 Ga. App. 570, 547 S.E.2d 299 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-56).

Although a parent was deemed to have abandoned a claim raised on appeal regarding admissibility of evidence from a caseworker in the parental rights termination proceeding under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320) due to the parent's failure to have cited to any portions of the record in support of the parent's argument, pursuant to Ga. Ct. App. R. 25(c)(3), such evidentiary rulings would not have constituted reversible error because the remaining evidence introduced at the hearing, not considering the caseworker's report, was sufficient to support the findings and conclusions in the matter. There was no reversible error and, further, hearsay evidence was presumed to have been disregarded and other evidence properly considered under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-56(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-210). In the Interest of T.A.M., 280 Ga. App. 494, 634 S.E.2d 456 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-56).

Juvenile court erred by terminating a grandparent's visitation rights previously granted by relying on the child's out-of-court statements and by failing to recite what standard the court was using to modify the previous visitation awarded to the grandparent. In re K. I. S., 294 Ga. App. 295, 669 S.E.2d 207 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-56).

In a deprivation proceeding, it was error to admit a faxed copy of a document purportedly originating from the United States Department of Homeland Security that stated that an investigation had been initiated to determine whether the parent in question was subject to deportation. In the absence of any relevant witness testimony or documentary evidence properly certifying the record, the document consisted entirely of hearsay, which lacked probative value even in a dispositional hearing. In the Interest of A. R., 296 Ga. App. 62, 673 S.E.2d 586 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-56).

State failed to meet the state's burden of showing that an allegedly abused child was "available to physically appear" at a deprivation hearing as required for hearsay testimony to be admissible under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-16 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-820). The juvenile court erred in relying on the hearsay testimony of a social worker and a DFCS case manager regarding what the child said. In the

Interest A.T., 309 Ga. App. 822, 711 S.E.2d 382 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-56).

In a visitation dispute, it was not error to deny a father's motion in limine to exclude hearsay in a custody evaluation because former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-56(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-210) specifically allowed the trial court to receive such information. Gottschalk v. Gottschalk, 311 Ga. App. 304, 715 S.E.2d 715 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-56).

Right to cross-examine afforded upon request. — Right to cross-examine adverse witnesses guaranteed by former Code 1933, § 24A-2002 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-19 and 15-11-28) was afforded upon request according to former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-110 and 15-11-210). A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former 1933, § 24A-2201).

Record must show clear and convincing evidence which authorizes finding. — Just as former statute did not require the court to include a specific statement as to the standard of proof of delinquency in the adjudication order, no such explicit finding was required as to the need for treatment or rehabilitation as long as the record showed that there was clear and convincing evidence which authorized the judge's implicit finding. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Explicit statutory findings required by former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-110 and 15-11-210) should be made in accordance with former Code 1933, § 81A-152 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52). Crook v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 137 Ga. App 817, 224 S.E.2d 806 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

In ruling on deprivation petitions, findings of fact should be made in accordance with former Code 1933, § 81A-152 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52). W.R.G. v. State, 142 Ga. App. 81, 235 S.E.2d 43 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201); In re A.A.G., 143 Ga. App. 648, 239 S.E.2d 697 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Exception when petition alleges only deprivation. — If the petition by the county department alleges only deprivation, it is unnecessary to make an explicit finding of deprivation. Moss v. Moss, 135 Ga. App. 401, 218 S.E.2d 93 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Explicit finding for petition alleging multiple conditions. — Patent reason for explicit finding of deprivation in petition alleging multiple conditions is to indicate the necessity for and to authorize dispositions of the deprived child or children under the statute or statutes deemed applicable by the court. Moss v. Moss, 135 Ga. App. 401, 218 S.E.2d 93 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Disposition made following finding of delinquency. — Decision that the child is in need of treatment or rehabilitation, based upon clear and convincing evidence, is made following a finding of delinquency. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Dispositional hearings held in county of juvenile's residence. — Dispositional hearings must be held in the county of the juvenile's residence to meet state constitutional requirements. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

No need to repeat evidence presented during adjudicatory portion. — There is no error in refusing to have the dispositional phase include a repetition of the same evidence and witnesses previously presented during the adjudicatory portion. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Order for transfer for further disposition is not final appealable judgment. — When, pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-5180 and 15-11-210), an order was entered adjudicating a juvenile guilty of an offense and, under the authority of former Code 1933, § 24A-1201 (see now

O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-401 and 15-11-490) jurisdiction was transferred to the county of the residence for further disposition, that order was not a final appealable judgment. D.C.E. v. State, 130 Ga. App. 724, 204 S.E.2d 481 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

French-speaking parent's stipulation to certain facts presented in a deprivation petition was sufficient evidence to support a finding that the parent's children were deprived and the parent's argument that the parent did not "understand" the meaning or significance of the stipulation was properly rejected. In re M.O., 233 Ga. App. 125, 503 S.E.2d 362 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Certified documents properly admitted. — In a deprivation proceeding, the trial court properly admitted documents from a parent's criminal case under former O.C.G.A. § 24-5-31 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-10-1005). The court found that the documents were attached to a negotiated plea and had been certified. In the Interest of A. R., 296 Ga. App. 62, 673 S.E.2d 586 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-56).

15-11-211. Relative search by DFCS.

(a) A diligent search shall be initiated at the outset of a case under this article and shall be conducted throughout the duration of a case, when appropriate.

(b) A diligent search shall include at a minimum:

(1) Interviews with the child's parent during the course of an investigation, while child protective services are provided, and while such child is in care;

(2) Interviews with the child;

(3) Interviews with identified relatives throughout the case;

(4) Interviews with any other person who is likely to have information about the identity or location of the person being sought;

(5) Comprehensive searches of data bases available to DFCS including, but not limited to, searches of employment, residence, utilities, vehicle registration, child support enforcement, law enforcement, corrections records, and any other records likely to result in identifying and locating the person being sought;

(6) Appropriate inquiry during the course of hearings in the case; and

(7) Any other reasonable means that are likely to identify relatives or other persons who have demonstrated an ongoing commitment to the child.

(c) All adult relatives of the alleged dependent child identified in a diligent search required by this Code section and all parents of a sibling of such child, when such parent has legal custody of such sibling, subject to exceptions due to family or domestic violence, shall be provided with notice:

(1) Specifying that an alleged dependent child has been or is being removed from his or her parental custody;

(2) Explaining the options a relative has to participate in the care and placement of the alleged dependent child and any options that may be lost by failing to respond to the notice;

(3) Describing the process for becoming an approved foster family home and the additional services and supports available for children placed in approved foster homes; and

(4) Describing any financial assistance for which a relative may be eligible.

(d) The diligent search required by this Code section and the notification required by subsection (c) of this Code section shall be completed, documented in writing, and filed with the court within 30 days from the date on which the alleged dependent child was removed from his or her home and at each periodic review hearing required by Code Section 15-11-216.

(e) After the completion of the diligent search required by this Code section, DFCS shall have a continuing duty to search for relatives or other persons who have demonstrated an ongoing commitment to a child and with whom it may be appropriate to place the alleged dependent child until such relatives or persons are found or until such child is placed for adoption unless the court excuses DFCS from conducting a diligent search. If a relative entitled to notice under subsection (c) of this Code section fails, within six months from the date he or she receives the required notice, to demonstrate an interest in and willingness to provide a permanent home for a child, the court may excuse DFCS from considering such relative as a placement.

The 2019 amendment, effective July 1, 2019, added "and at each periodic review hearing required by Code Section 15-11-216" at the end of subsection (d) and added the second sentence in subsection (e).

The 2020 amendment, effective July 29, 2020, part of an Act to revise, modernize, and correct the Code, substituted "have demonstrated an ongoing" for "have an ongoing" in the middle of the first sentence of subsection (e).

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2019, p. 456, § 2/SB 167, amended subsection (e) of this Code section but inadvertently omitted the word "demonstrated" preceding "an ongoing commitment" in the first sentence.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

No equal protection violation. — Treating deprived children who were placed in the legal custody of the Department of Families and Children Services because there was no relative committed to the child who was available for immediate placement differently from deprived children who did have a committed parent or guardian available for immediate placement did not violate the equal protection clause or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II. as the classes were not similarly situated and the laws were rationally related to the goal of minimizing government intervention while ensuring that children were reared in a familial environment. In the Interest of A.N., 281 Ga. 58, 636 S.E.2d 496 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

In a deprivation proceeding, the department of family and child services did not violate equal protection by requiring the parents to pay part of the costs for services mandated under their case plan. The department was not drawing a distinction between similarly situated parties in that a parent who could afford to contribute financially was not similarly situated to one who could not afford to do so; moreover, even if the parents were similarly situated to others who were not required to pay for a portion of services, the goals served by the contribution requirement of requiring parents to take responsibility for conduct that harmed their children and of increasing the likelihood of success for family reunification represented legitimate governmental purposes. In the Interest of P.N., 291 Ga. App. 512, 662 S.E.2d 287 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Jurisdiction of adoption while deprivation proceeding pending. — Superior court has exclusive jurisdiction in adoption matters and had jurisdiction to entertain an adoption petition notwithstanding the pendency of deprivation proceedings in the juvenile court involving the same child. Edgar v. Shave, 205 Ga. App. 337, 422 S.E.2d 234 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Authority of juvenile courts to transfer legal custody. — Juvenile court had exclusive original jurisdiction over deprivation proceedings, and the juvenile court had the authority to order the disposition best suited to the needs of the children including the transfer of temporary legal custody. In re A.L.L., 211 Ga. App. 767, 440 S.E.2d 517 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Juvenile court erred in awarding custody of a child to the father even after finding that the child was not deprived because according to a plain reading of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55(a)(2) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-211 and 15-11-212), the juvenile court was without authority to transfer custody of the child to the father and paternal grandmother; while under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(c)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-11) the juvenile court had concurrent jurisdiction to hear and determine the issue of custody and support when the issue was transferred by proper order of the superior court, no such order existed in the record, and instead, the juvenile court specifically found that the child was not deprived. In re T.S., 310 Ga. App. 100, 712 S.E.2d 121 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

No need to repeat evidence already presented during adjudicatory portion. — There is no error in refusing to have the dispositional phase include a repetition of the same evidence and witnesses previously presented during the adjudicatory portion. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301).

Sufficient evidence of deprivation. — Evidence was sufficient to permit the juvenile court to find clear and convincing evidence of the child's deprivation and that the child's parent's misconduct or inability to care for the child's needs resulted in abuse or neglect sufficient to render the parent unfit to retain custody. In re C.N., 231 Ga. App. 639, 500 S.E.2d 400 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Since the evidence in the record showed that the child had been subjected to numerous medical examinations for sexual abuse at the mother's behest, in an apparent effort to frustrate or foreclose the father's right of visitation, and she persisted in having the child examined for possible sexual abuse, the juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in finding that: (1) such examinations were so numerous as to be psychologically harmful to the child; and (2) the circumstances under which future examinations might proceed were to be limited. In the Interest of M.E., 265 Ga. App. 412, 593 S.E.2d 924 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Juvenile court's order finding a one-year-old child to be deprived was upheld on appeal as clear and convincing evidence existed that: (1) one parent suffered from a psychological disorder, which was not controlled by medication, and caused that parent to have delusions; and (2) the other parent, knowing the aforementioned condition of the first parent, left the child in that parent's care. In the Interest of M.D., 283 Ga. App. 805, 642 S.E.2d 863 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Given the judicial notice taken by the juvenile judge who entered a prior deprivation finding against a parent's older two children, and the presumption of correctness that attached to those findings, as the pleadings and evidence from those proceedings were not included in the appellate record, sufficient evidence supported the court's deprivation finding involving the parent's youngest child. In the Interest of A.B., 285 Ga. App. 288, 645 S.E.2d 716 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Adequate care from grandparent does not inhibit deprivation by parent. — Juvenile court properly focused on the subject parent's abandonment of the child in support of the court's deprivation finding and not on the adequate level of care given by the child's maternal grandparent when making a deprivation finding. Moreover, the state showed that the parent was incapable of caring for any child, let alone a premature infant with special medical needs. In the Interest of A.B., 289 Ga. App. 655, 658 S.E.2d 205 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Abuse by stepparent resulted in deprivation by parent. — In a mother's appeal of a juvenile court's declaration that a child was deprived, the juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in making that conclusion based on the sexual abuse of the child by the stepfather because the record established by clear and convincing evidence that the mother did not fully appreciate all that had to be done to protect the child and the child was minimizing the abuse and masking the continuing emotional impact of the experience due to psychological pressure from the mother. In the Interest of A. P., 299 Ga. App. 886, 684 S.E.2d 22 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Finding of parental unfitness is essential to support an adjudication of present deprivation since parental rights are terminated as well as the transfer of temporary or permanent custody to a third party. In re J.C.P., 167 Ga. App. 572, 307 S.E.2d 1 (1983), but see In re A.W., 240 Ga. App. 259, 523 S.E.2d 88 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Circumstances in which custody may be lost. — Custody may be lost if a child is found to be destitute or suffering, if the child is being reared under immoral influences, or if the child is found to be deprived and likely to be harmed thereby. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Prima-facie right of custodial parent. — In a contest between the parents, the award of custody by a divorce court vests the custodial parent with a prima facie right. Ordinarily, the trial court should favor the parent having such a right. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Overcoming prima-facie right. — In order to forfeit the custodial parent's prima-facie right to custody, the court must find either that the original custodian is no longer able or suited to retain custody or that conditions surrounding the child have so changed that modification of the original judgment would have the effect of promoting the child's welfare. It is a change for the worse in the conditions of the child's present home environment rather than any purported change for the better in the environment of the noncustodial parent that the law contemplates under this theory. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Custody with department following finding of deprivation. — Record supported the juvenile court's judgment that a parent did not fulfill the terms of a case plan that was established by the Department of Family and Children's Services because the parent continued using cocaine and refused to attend substance abuse treatment; thus, the child was deprived and custody was properly placed in the department. In the Interest of J.L., 269 Ga. App. 226, 603 S.E.2d 742 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Custody with department only suspends parental right of custody. — Removal of custody of the child from the parents is a determination that, for whatever length of time custody is exercised by the Department of Family and Children Services, this right has been suspended, although not finally terminated. Rodgers v. Department of Human Resources, 157 Ga. App. 235, 276 S.E.2d 902 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301).

Department relieved of responsibility after child removed from its custody. — Juvenile court ordered the Department of Human Services to exceed its authority when it simultaneously removed the child from the Department's custody and ordered it to continue to make visit's to the child's new home, as pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55(c), placement of the child with the paternal grandfather relived the Department of further responsibility for child. In the Interest of B. K., 326 Ga. App. 56, 755 S.E.2d 863 (2014) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-22-55).

Actions by department not action of district attorney. — When the Department of Family and Children Services, acting as the legal custodian of a child, declines to permit a pretrial witness interview, that action is not the action of a party to the suit, i.e., the district attorney's office. Pendergrass v. State, 168 Ga. App. 190, 308 S.E.2d 585 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Habeas relief when no showing of compliance with statute. — When the parents in their petition seeking return of their children, allege that there had been no hearing as required by former Code 1933, § 24A-1701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39), and the record of prior juvenile court proceedings was silent as to whether such a hearing was ever set, continued, or held, and since the hearing requirement of former Code 1933, § 24A-1701 was mandatory, the defendant County Family and Children Services Department did not show compliance with the hearing requirement, and the parents stated claims for habeas relief which may be granted. Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301).

Study of individual need not contain approval of custody award. — While former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-211) requires that the court secure a study of the individual by the probation officer or other person or agency designated by the court, and that, having done so, the court found the individual to be qualified to receive and care for the child, that former statute did not condition the court's authority to transfer custody of the child to an individual on the approval of that individual by the person or agency conducting the study. In re R.R.M.R., 169 Ga. App. 373, 312 S.E.2d 832 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Orders beyond court's authority. — Since the record contained no support for a finding that three children, ranging in age from nine to 13, suffered any deprivation as a result of their living conditions, it was beyond the court's authority to order that the children be "encouraged to communicate and have contact with neighbors," and it was none of the state's business whether the children were allowed to sleep outside at night, so long as that was what the children were happy doing and no ill effects could be attributed to it. In re D.H., 178 Ga. App. 119, 342 S.E.2d 367 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Limited restraining order appropriate disposition. — Since a juvenile attacked a store detective, and subsequently displayed violent behavior and threatened another store employee, the court's conclusion that the juvenile was in need of treatment and rehabilitation, and the court's limited restraining order preventing the juvenile from entering any store owned by the company in Fulton County, except in the immediate presence of a parent or adult relative, was an appropriate disposition and justified by the evidence. In re J.M., 237 Ga. App. 298, 513 S.E.2d 742 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Joint custody not permitted. — Juvenile court exceeded the court's authority when the court awarded joint legal and physical custody of a deprived child jointly with the Department of Human Resources (DHR) and unrelated third parties since the DHR objected to such arrangement. In re J.N.T., 212 Ga. App. 498, 441 S.E.2d 918 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Consideration of parent's behavior at hearing. — Consideration by a juvenile court of a noncustodial parent's behavior in a hearing to determine the need for continuing the temporary suspension of custody does not deprive a noncustodial parent of due process. In re A.S., 185 Ga. App. 11, 363 S.E.2d 325 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Court not required to follow recommended disposition. — In a deprivation proceeding, the trial court was authorized to find that a child's deprivation resulted from the mother's unfitness in failing to protect the child from sexual abuse and in refusing to believe the child's allegations against the child's father. Thus, the trial court was not required to follow a recommended disposition that the child be returned to the mother, who had stipulated to the petition in return for a recommendation by the Department of Family and Children Services and the child advocate that the child be returned to the mother. Finally, after refusing to return the child to the mother, the court did not err in not allowing the mother to withdraw the mother's stipulation to the allegations of the petition since there was no indication that the stipulation was conditional on the trial court's acceptance of the parties' proposed disposition or that the stipulation was obtained by fraud or mistake. In re R. J. M., 295 Ga. App. 886, 673 S.E.2d 527 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Visitation rights of a parent of a child in custody of the Department of Family and Children Services are a residual "parental tie" which is not severed by the mere placement of the child in the temporary custody of the department, without a specific finding as to that right. In re K.B., 188 Ga. App. 199, 372 S.E.2d 476 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Order requiring compulsory school attendance affirmed. — In re D.H., 178 Ga. App. 119, 342 S.E.2d 367 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Reasonable efforts at reunification required. — Disposition portion of the Juvenile Court's order giving temporary legal custody of the child to relatives failed to comply with the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-134, and 15-11-201) because the order did not contain the necessary findings about reasonable efforts by any appropriate agencies to reunify a parent with the child and foreclosed any consideration of a plan to provide reunification services. In the Interest of J.W.K., 254 Ga. App. 661, 563 S.E.2d 514 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Provision for transfer of child to mother not required. — Juvenile court was not required to include a provision for transfer of a child back to the child's mother after the child was found to be deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-212) as the child remained in the custody of the father, who lived in another state. In the Interest of K.J., 268 Ga. App. 843, 602 S.E.2d 861 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Retransfer provision necessary. — Because an order finding that children adopted by their grandparent were deprived did not contain a provision under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55(a)(2) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-212) stating the circumstances under which the children would be returned to the grandparent's care, the case was remanded for the trial court to enter such a provision. In the Interest of T.R., 284 Ga. App. 742, 644 S.E.2d 880 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Insufficient evidence of deprivation. — Juvenile court's finding of deprivation was in error because there was no evidence presented at the hearing to support the court's finding. In the court's dispositional order, the juvenile court made no specific factual findings that the child was deprived as to the father, but merely listed reasons as to why the court was declining to transfer custody to the father and stated that the court found the child deprived as to the father due to the child's current needs and welfare, a finding which was not supported by any evidence. In the Interest of L. A., 322 Ga. App. 94, 744 S.E.2d 88 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

15-11-212. Disposition of dependent child.

(a) The court may make any of the following orders of disposition or a combination of those best suited to the protection and physical, emotional, mental, and moral welfare of a child adjudicated as a dependent child:

(1) Permit such child to remain with his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian subject to conditions and limitations as the court prescribes, including supervision as directed by the court for the protection of such child;

(2) Grant or transfer temporary legal custody to any of these persons or entities:

(A) Any individual, including a biological parent, who, after study by the probation officer or other person or agency designated by the court, is found by the court to be qualified to receive and care for such child, provided that priority for placement is given to an adult who is a relative or fictive kin;

(B) An agency or other private organization licensed or otherwise authorized by law to receive and provide care for such child;

(C) Any public agency authorized by law to receive and provide care for such child; provided, however, that for the purpose of this Code section, the term "public agency" shall not include DJJ or DBHDD; or

(D) An individual in another state with or without supervision by an appropriate officer pursuant to the requirements of Code Section 39-4-4, the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children;

(3) Transfer jurisdiction over such child in accordance with the requirements of Code Section 39-4-4, the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children;

(4) Order such child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian to participate in counseling or in counsel and advice as determined by the court. Such counseling and counsel and advice may be provided by the court, court personnel, probation officers, professional counselors or social workers, psychologists, physicians, physician assistants, qualified volunteers, or appropriate public, private, or volunteer agencies as directed by the court and shall be designed to assist in deterring future conditions of dependency or other conduct or conditions which would be harmful to a child or society;

(5) Order the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of such child to participate in a court approved educational or counseling program designed to contribute to the ability of such parent, guardian, or legal custodian to provide proper parental care and supervision of such child, including, but not limited to, parenting classes;

(6) Order DFCS to implement and such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian to cooperate with any plan approved by the court; or

(7) Order temporary child support for such child to be paid by that person or those persons determined to be legally obligated to support such child. In determining such temporary child support, the court shall apply the child support guidelines provided in Code Section 19-6-15 and the implementation and any review of the order shall be held as provided in Code Section 19-6-15. Where there is an existing order of a superior court or other court of competent jurisdiction, the court may order the child support obligor in the existing order to make payments to such child's caretaker on a temporary basis but shall not otherwise modify the terms of the existing order. A copy of the juvenile court's order shall be filed in the clerk's office of the court that entered the existing order. Temporary child support orders entered pursuant to this paragraph shall be enforceable by the court's contempt powers so long as the court is entitled to exercise jurisdiction over the dependency case.

(b) The transfer of temporary legal custody may be subject to conditions and limitations the court may prescribe. Such conditions and limitations shall include a provision that the court shall approve or direct the return of the physical custody of a child adjudicated as a dependent child to his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian either upon the occurrence of specified circumstances or at the direction of the court. The return of physical custody of a child adjudicated as a dependent child to his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian may be made subject to conditions and limitations the court may prescribe, including, but not limited to, supervision for the protection of such child.

(c) A child adjudicated as a dependent child shall not be committed to or confined in an institution or other facility designed or operated for the benefit of delinquent children unless such child is also adjudicated to be a delinquent child and such child's detention is warranted under the requirements of Article 6 of this chapter.

(d) After transferring temporary legal custody of a child adjudicated as a dependent child to DFCS, the court may at any time conduct sua sponte a judicial review of the current placement plan being provided to such child. After its review, the court may order DFCS to comply with the current placement plan, order DFCS to devise a new placement plan, or make any other order relative to placement or custody outside DFCS as the court finds to be in the best interests of such child. Placement or a change of custody by the court outside DFCS shall relieve DFCS of further responsibility for such child except for any provision of services ordered by the court to ensure the continuation of reunification services to such child's family when appropriate.

(e) A court shall not be required to make an order of disposition regarding a child who is discharged from a facility in which such child was hospitalized or habilitated pursuant to Chapter 3, 4, or 7 of Title 37 unless such child is to be discharged into the physical custody of any person who had such custody when the court made its most recent adjudication that the child was a dependent child.

(f) If a child is adjudicated as a dependent child and the dependency is found to have been the result of substance abuse by his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian and the court orders transfer of temporary legal custody of such child, the court shall be authorized to further order that legal custody of such child may not be transferred back to his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian unless such parent, guardian, or legal custodian:

(1) Undergoes substance abuse treatment and random substance abuse screenings and those screenings remain negative for a period of no less than 12 consecutive months; or

(2) Successfully completes programming through a family treatment court division.

(g) If the court finds that DFCS preventive or reunification efforts have not been reasonable but that further efforts could not permit a child adjudicated as a dependent child to safely remain at home, the court may nevertheless authorize or continue the removal of such child.

(h) When the case plan requires a concurrent permanency plan, the court shall review the reasonable efforts of DFCS to recruit, identify, and make a placement in a home in which a relative of a child adjudicated as a dependent child, foster parent, or other persons who have demonstrated an ongoing commitment to the child has agreed to provide a legally permanent home for such child in the event reunification efforts are not successful.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 24-2402, 24-2408, 24A-301, and 24A-2301, pre-2000 Code Sections 15-11-5, and 15-11-34, and pre-2014 Code Sections 15-11-28, and 15-11-55, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Additionally, many of the annotations found under this Code section were taken from cases decided prior to the adoption of the 1983 Constitution. See Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. III, Para. I and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I.

Deprivation proceeding not a custody dispute. — Because the pleadings established that the petition was a properly filed and factually supported deprivation petition, and due to the presence of unchallenged, valid allegations of deprivation, the deprivation proceeding was not a disguised custody matter; accordingly, the juvenile court properly exercised the court's jurisdiction over the proceeding. In the Interest of K.L.H., 281 Ga. App. 394, 636 S.E.2d 117 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Proceeding for termination of parental rights is custody controversy involving deprived child. Moss v. Moss, 233 Ga. 688, 212 S.E.2d 853 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Actions in which one parent seeks termination of the parental rights of the other parent by means of a deprivation petition are not all prima facie custody cases and it is not required that all such actions must be filed in superior court. In re M.C.J., 271 Ga. 546, 523 S.E.2d 6 (1999), reversing In re W. W. W., 213 Ga. App. 732, 445 S.E.2d 832 (1994); In re M.A., 218 Ga. App. 433, 461 S.E.2d 600 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5); In re M.C.J., 236 Ga. App. 225, 511 S.E.2d 533 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(a)(2)(C), the superior court did not have subject matter jurisdiction to terminate the husband's parental rights because the biological father's petition to legitimate a child who was born in wedlock was a petition to terminate the parental rights of the legal father; after the superior court determined that the biological father had not abandoned his opportunity interest, the issue became whether the superior court could grant the petition to legitimate the child, and to grant the legitimation petition required the superior court to first terminate the parental rights of the husband, who was the legal father. Brine v. Shipp, 291 Ga. 376, 729 S.E.2d 393 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Custody dispute of orphaned children. — In a custody dispute involving children orphaned by the murder-suicide of their parents, a superior court did not err in denying an aunt's motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction because the superior court correctly held that, in the absence of an earlier-filed action in juvenile court or probate court, it was the first court to take jurisdiction and properly retained jurisdiction. Stone-Crosby v. Mickens-Cook, 318 Ga. App. 313, 733 S.E.2d 842 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Superior court in habeas corpus action for child custody lacks authority to enter order terminating parental rights. Dein v. Mossman, 244 Ga. 866, 262 S.E.2d 83 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

General requirements necessary to terminate parental rights. — Generally, the requirements necessary to terminate the parental rights of the mother are deprivation, probable continued deprivation, and that the child will probably suffer serious emotional harm. Beasley v. Jones, 149 Ga. App. 317, 254 S.E.2d 472 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Definition of "full age." — One becomes of "full age" on the day preceding the anniversary of one's birth, on the first moment of that day. Edmonds v. State, 154 Ga. App. 650, 269 S.E.2d 512 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Child turned 17 on the earliest moment of the day before juvenile's birthday. — Delinquency petition against a juvenile was properly transferred to the state court on the ground that the juvenile was arrested for possessing marijuana on the day before the juvenile's seventeenth birthday; pursuant to former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-28 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-10, 15-11-11, 15-11-212, and 15-11-560), the juvenile was deemed to have been 17 at the earliest moment of the day before the juvenile's birthday, which was the day the juvenile was arrested. In the Interest of A.P.S., 304 Ga. App. 513, 696 S.E.2d 483 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Defendant claimed under 17 at the time offenses were committed. — Superior court had authority to try the defendant who claimed to be under 17 at the time the offenses were committed since the jury was instructed that the defendant should be found guilty only if the defendant committed the alleged acts after the defendant turned 17. Johnson v. State, 214 Ga. App. 319, 447 S.E.2d 663 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Referral from superior court to juvenile court for special findings. — Since a custody case was referred to the juvenile court for only an investigation and report with the judgment of the superior court resting on these findings as well as testimony and other evidence before the superior court, the superior court's judgment was not void, but at most was voidable only if an appeal had been perfected. Jackson v. Gamble, 232 Ga. 149, 205 S.E.2d 256 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Custody case could not determine other civil issues. — Because the trial court relied upon documents other than the pleadings, a motion to dismiss should in fact have been treated as a motion for summary judgment; a juvenile court had no jurisdiction over claims of fraud, breach of contract, perjury, and defamation made by a former husband against his former wife, and thus, a custody case between parties which was litigated in juvenile court was not an adjudication of the husband's claim for purposes of res judicata. Litsky v. Schaub, 269 Ga. App. 254, 603 S.E.2d 754 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Order addressing issue not raised was a nullity. — Since a written order issued by a juvenile court did not show deprivation of the child with regard to the child's father, and since all parties stipulated that the child was not deprived with regard to the child's father, the order was void to the extent the order directed removal of the child from the father's home; moreover, to the extent that a later contempt finding was based on the trial court's void order, it was a nullity; the trial court's direction as to removal of the child was not binding and the court's later contempt finding based on that order was improper. In re Tidwell, 279 Ga. App. 734, 632 S.E.2d 690 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Termination of parental rights via divorce decree. — Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(a)(2)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10, 15-11-11, and 15-11-212), except in connection with an adoption proceeding, a juvenile court was the sole court for an action involving any proceeding for the termination of parental rights. However, the parent affirmatively invoked the jurisdiction of the superior court for the purpose of obtaining the divorce, consented to the superior court's incorporation of the settlement agreement, and then failed to file a motion to set aside the judgment of divorce for four years; thus, the parent's acts and omissions estopped the parent from attacking the divorce judgment. Amerson v. Vandiver, 285 Ga. 49, 673 S.E.2d 850 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Deprivation and termination of parental rights. — Juvenile court shall be sole court for initiating action for termination of legal parent-child relationship. Dein v. Mossman, 244 Ga. 866, 262 S.E.2d 83 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Juvenile court has exclusive jurisdiction to hear cases involving deprivation and termination of parental rights. Abrams v. Daffron, 155 Ga. App. 182, 270 S.E.2d 278 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Superior court has jurisdiction to consider termination of the rights of a putative father only "in connection with adoption proceedings." Alexander v. Guthrie, 216 Ga. App. 460, 454 S.E.2d 805 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Superior court lacked subject matter jurisdiction to consider divorced mother's petition for termination of the father's parental rights. In re A.D.B., 232 Ga. App. 697, 503 S.E.2d 596 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Juvenile court has exclusive original jurisdiction over actions involving termination of parental rights. The juvenile court properly exercised jurisdiction over a grandmother's petition to terminate a mother's parental rights because the grandmother already had custody of the children and the mother was facing allegations of having deprived her children. In the Interest of K.N.C., 264 Ga. App. 475, 590 S.E.2d 792 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Matters relating to custody and visitation. — Superior and juvenile courts exercise concurrent jurisdiction over all matters relating to custody and visitation, except in those situations in which exclusive jurisdiction is vested in the superior court. In re D.N.M., 193 Ga. App. 812, 389 S.E.2d 336, cert. denied, 193 Ga. App. 910, 389 S.E.2d 336 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Concurrent jurisdiction over custody issues. — Subsection (c) of this section is applicable only in those cases where the juvenile court and the superior court have concurrent jurisdiction and custody is the subject of controversy. Brooks v. Leyva, 147 Ga. App. 616, 249 S.E.2d 628 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

No error to transfer case to juvenile court for investigation. — If a change of circumstances is alleged subsequent to a decree of divorce awarding custody of a minor child to one of the two parties, it is not error for the judge of the superior court to transfer the investigation thus called for to the juvenile court for investigation. Slate v. Coggins, 181 Ga. 17, 181 S.E. 145 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

Decree of divorce in a case in which the custody of a minor child is involved, awarding the child to one party or the other, is final, except when a change of circumstances is shown; when such change is alleged, it is not error for the judge of the superior court to transfer the investigation thus called for to the juvenile court for investigation. Fortson v. Fortson, 197 Ga. 699, 30 S.E.2d 165 (1944) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

Since there was evidence that the living conditions and conduct of children, subjects of a custody award in a divorce decree, were much worse than as shown upon a former trial, the judge did not err in transferring the investigation to the juvenile court for trial and determination. Fortson v. Fortson, 197 Ga. 699, 30 S.E.2d 165 (1944) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

In custody litigation, the juvenile court errs in hearing a case in which there is no order transferring the case from the superior court. Further, if an order of a juvenile court fails to recite the jurisdictional facts (i.e., such facts as are necessary to give it jurisdiction of the person and subject matter), the judgment is void. Lockhart v. Stancil, 258 Ga. 634, 373 S.E.2d 355 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5); In re W.W.W., 213 Ga. App. 732, 445 S.E.2d 832 (1994), but see In re M.C.J., 271 Ga. 546, 523 S.E.2d 6 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Juvenile court cannot modify superior court's custody determination. — Juvenile court, without proper transfer from superior court, is without authority to modify custody provisions of the final divorce decree in regard to the mother's visitation privileges. In re M.M.A., 174 Ga. App. 898, 332 S.E.2d 39 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5); Owen v. Owen, 183 Ga. App. 472, 359 S.E.2d 229 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

No equal protection violation. — Treating deprived children who were placed in the legal custody of the Department of Families and Children Services because there was no relative committed to the child who was available for immediate placement differently from deprived children who did have a committed parent or guardian available for immediate placement did not violate the equal protection clause or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II. as the classes were not similarly situated and the laws were rationally related to the goal of minimizing government intervention while ensuring that children were reared in a familial environment. In the Interest of A.N., 281 Ga. 58, 636 S.E.2d 496 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

In a deprivation proceeding, the department of family and child services did not violate equal protection by requiring the parents to pay part of the costs for services mandated under their case plan. The department was not drawing a distinction between similarly situated parties in that a parent who could afford to contribute financially was not similarly situated to one who could not afford to do so; moreover, even if the parents were similarly situated to others who were not required to pay for a portion of services, the goals served by the contribution requirement of requiring parents to take responsibility for conduct that harmed their children and of increasing the likelihood of success for family reunification represented legitimate governmental purposes. In the Interest of P.N., 291 Ga. App. 512, 662 S.E.2d 287 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Determination that deprivation proceeding was not custody dispute. — Because the pleadings established that a deprivation petition was properly filed and factually supported, and due to the presence of unchallenged, valid allegations of deprivation, the deprivation proceeding was not a disguised custody matter; accordingly, the juvenile court properly exercised the court's jurisdiction over the proceeding. In the Interest of K.L.H., 281 Ga. App. 394, 636 S.E.2d 117 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Authority of juvenile courts to transfer legal custody. — Juvenile court had exclusive original jurisdiction over deprivation proceedings, and the juvenile court had the authority to order the disposition best suited to the needs of the children including the transfer of temporary legal custody. In re A.L.L., 211 Ga. App. 767, 440 S.E.2d 517 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Juvenile court erred in awarding custody of a child to the father even after finding that the child was not deprived because according to a plain reading of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55(a)(2) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-211 and 15-11-212), the juvenile court was without authority to transfer custody of the child to the father and paternal grandmother; while under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(c)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-11) the juvenile court had concurrent jurisdiction to hear and determine the issue of custody and support when the issue was transferred by proper order of the superior court, no such order existed in the record, and instead, the juvenile court specifically found that the child was not deprived. In re T.S., 310 Ga. App. 100, 712 S.E.2d 121 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

No need to repeat evidence already presented during adjudicatory portion. — There is no error in refusing to have the dispositional phase include a repetition of the same evidence and witnesses previously presented during the adjudicatory portion. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301).

Standard of proof for finding deprivation. — If deprivation forms the predicate upon which a third party seeks a temporary transfer of the child's legal custody, in order to support such a disposition the child must first be adjudicated to be a deprived child. By statute, that finding of deprivation must be made by "clear and convincing evidence." In re J.C.P., 167 Ga. App. 572, 307 S.E.2d 1 (1983), but see In re A.W., 240 Ga. App. 259, 523 S.E.2d 88 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Juvenile courts are given wide discretion once deprivation is found to either terminate the rights of the parent or issue an order under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-212). Painter v. Barkley, 157 Ga. App. 69, 276 S.E.2d 850 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301).

When a trial court, upon finding a mother's children were deprived, left their custody with the mother upon certain conditions, this was not a protective order, despite the fact that this was what was prayed for at the hearing resulting in the order, but it was, rather, a deprivation order under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-1-212), so, when the specified conditions were violated, the trial court was not limited to the remedies available in the protection order statute, but was authorized to remove the children from the mother's custody. In the Interest of S.Y., 264 Ga. App. 623, 591 S.E.2d 489 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Physical and legal custody may not be divided. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-212) did not authorize the court to transfer "legal custody" of the child to one person or agency while awarding another person or agency the right to physical custody. In re R.R.M.R., 169 Ga. App. 373, 312 S.E.2d 832 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Juvenile court erred in awarding legal custody of two children to the Department of Family and Children Services (DFACS) and then ordering that physical custody be given to the maternal grandparents as: (1) once legal custody of a deprived child had been granted to DFACS, the juvenile court could not dictate physical custody; (2) nothing in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55(a)(2) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-211) allowed any redefinition of legal custody as defined in O.C.G.A. § 49-5-3(12); (3) using the rules of construction, former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55(a)(2) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-211) followed the statutory and legal precedent that the grant of legal custody to DFACS included the right to determine physical custody; and (4) the 2003 amendment to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-211 and 15-11-212) did not reject the statutory definition of legal custody. In the Interest of A.N., 281 Ga. 58, 636 S.E.2d 496 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Finding of parental unfitness is essential to support an adjudication of present deprivation since parental rights are terminated as well as the transfer of temporary or permanent custody to a third party. In re J.C.P., 167 Ga. App. 572, 307 S.E.2d 1 (1983), but see In re A.W., 240 Ga. App. 259, 523 S.E.2d 88 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Circumstances in which custody may be lost. — Custody may be lost if a child is found to be destitute or suffering, if the child is being reared under immoral influences, or if the child is found to be deprived and likely to be harmed thereby. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Prima-facie right of custodial parent. — In a contest between the parents, the award of custody by a divorce court vests the custodial parent with a prima facie right. Ordinarily, the trial court should favor the parent having such a right. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Overcoming prima-facie right. — In order to forfeit the custodial parent's prima-facie right to custody, the court must find either that the original custodian is no longer able or suited to retain custody or that conditions surrounding the child have so changed that modification of the original judgment would have the effect of promoting the child's welfare. It is a change for the worse in the conditions of the child's present home environment rather than any purported change for the better in the environment of the noncustodial parent that the law contemplates under this theory. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Habeas relief when no showing of compliance with statute. — When the parents in their petition seeking return of their children, allege that there had been no hearing as required by former Code 1933, § 24A-1701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39), and the record of prior juvenile court proceedings was silent as to whether such a hearing was ever set, continued, or held, and since the hearing requirement of former Code 1933, § 24A-1701 was mandatory, the defendant County Family and Children Services Department did not show compliance with the hearing requirement, and the parents stated claims for habeas relief which may be granted. Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301).

No habeas corpus if court enters orders. — Habeas corpus will not lie if the juvenile court, after notice and hearing, enters an order pursuant to former provisions an disposition of deprived children. Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301).

Temporary custody order does not deprive all parental rights. — An order of the juvenile court awarding custody of a child to a named individual pending further order of the court, not having awarded itself permanent custody of the child, does not deprive the parents of all parental rights or the right to notice in an adoption proceeding. Jackson v. Anglin, 193 Ga. 737, 19 S.E.2d 914 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, Chs. 24-24 and Ga. L. 1941, p. 300).

Orders beyond court's authority. — Since the record contained no support for a finding that three children, ranging in age from nine to 13, suffered any deprivation as a result of their living conditions, it was beyond the court's authority to order that the children be "encouraged to communicate and have contact with neighbors," and it was none of the state's business whether the children were allowed to sleep outside at night, so long as that was what the children were happy doing and no ill effects could be attributed to it. In re D.H., 178 Ga. App. 119, 342 S.E.2d 367 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Limited restraining order appropriate disposition. — Since a juvenile attacked a store detective, and subsequently displayed violent behavior and threatened another store employee, the court's conclusion that the juvenile was in need of treatment and rehabilitation, and the court's limited restraining order preventing the juvenile from entering any store owned by the company in Fulton County, except in the immediate presence of a parent or adult relative, was an appropriate disposition and justified by the evidence. In re J.M., 237 Ga. App. 298, 513 S.E.2d 742 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Consideration of parent's behavior at hearing. — Consideration by a juvenile court of a noncustodial parent's behavior in a hearing to determine the need for continuing the temporary suspension of custody does not deprive a noncustodial parent of due process. In re A.S., 185 Ga. App. 11, 363 S.E.2d 325 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Recommendations by juvenile court. — Juvenile court does not exceed the court's authority in a hearing to determine the need for continuing the temporary suspension of custody by making recommendations as to the placement, care, and supervision of a child. In re A.S., 185 Ga. App. 11, 363 S.E.2d 325 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

If a juvenile court's finding as to custody is in the nature of a recommendation to the superior court, the custody issue remains pending below and is not before the appellate court on appeal. In the Interest of M.E., 265 Ga. App. 412, 593 S.E.2d 924 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Court not required to follow recommended disposition. — In a deprivation proceeding, the trial court was authorized to find that a child's deprivation resulted from the mother's unfitness in failing to protect the child from sexual abuse and in refusing to believe the child's allegations against the child's father. Thus, the trial court was not required to follow a recommended disposition that the child be returned to the mother, who had stipulated to the petition in return for a recommendation by the Department of Family and Children Services and the child advocate that the child be returned to the mother. Finally, after refusing to return the child to the mother, the court did not err in not allowing the mother to withdraw the mother's stipulation to the allegations of the petition since there was no indication that the stipulation was conditional on the trial court's acceptance of the parties' proposed disposition or that the stipulation was obtained by fraud or mistake. In re R. J. M., 295 Ga. App. 886, 673 S.E.2d 527 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Visitation rights of a parent of a child in custody of the Department of Family and Children Services are a residual "parental tie" which is not severed by the mere placement of the child in the temporary custody of the department, without a specific finding as to that right. In re K.B., 188 Ga. App. 199, 372 S.E.2d 476 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Reasonable efforts at reunification required. — Disposition portion of the Juvenile Court's order giving temporary legal custody of the child to relatives failed to comply with the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-134, and 15-11-201) because the order did not contain the necessary findings about reasonable efforts by any appropriate agencies to reunify a parent with the child and foreclosed any consideration of a plan to provide reunification services. In the Interest of J.W.K., 254 Ga. App. 661, 563 S.E.2d 514 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Reunification order exceeded statutory authority. — Juvenile court exceeded the court's statutory authority in the court's order reuniting the children with their mother because the requirements that the Georgia Department of Human Services pay for the children's orthodontist treatment until completion, that it must do whatever it was that helped the mother and craft and fashion with the mother what was needed for the children, and that it give the mother all she wanted, needed or desired for the children, appeared to be unrelated to the statutory purpose of continuation of reunification services. In the Interest of A. M., 350 Ga. App. 333, 829 S.E.2d 422 (2019).

Retransfer provision necessary. — Because an order finding that children adopted by their grandparent were deprived did not contain a provision under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55(a)(2) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-212) stating the circumstances under which the children would be returned to the grandparent's care, the case was remanded for the trial court to enter such a provision. In the Interest of T.R., 284 Ga. App. 742, 644 S.E.2d 880 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Jurisdiction

Determination that deprivation proceeding not custody dispute. — Juvenile court did not have jurisdiction of a deprivation proceeding brought against a mother brought by the child's temporary guardian in a transparent attempt to use the juvenile court to seek custody of the child. In re B.C.P., 229 Ga. App. 111, 493 S.E.2d 258 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Specific custody controversies not within supreme court appellate jurisdiction. — Custody controversies involving delinquent children, unruly children, or deprived children are not cases "in the nature of habeas corpus" and are not within the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court. Moss v. Moss, 233 Ga. 688, 212 S.E.2d 853 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Juvenile court does not lose jurisdiction if agency has custody. — That a "deprived child" may be in agency custody at the time of the hearing on termination of parental rights does not oust the juvenile court from jurisdiction to determine the ultimate issue. In re K.C.O., 142 Ga. App. 216, 235 S.E.2d 602 (1977) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Juvenile court has jurisdiction despite indictment for noncapital felony. — Indictment of a juvenile for a noncapital felony in the superior court does not oust the juvenile court of the court's first obtained jurisdiction under the Georgia Constitution and statute law. J.W.A. v. State, 233 Ga. 683, 212 S.E.2d 849 (1975), commented on in 27 Mercer L. Rev. 335 (1975). (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Juvenile court not divested of jurisdiction unless transfer proceeding held. — Since jurisdiction is first acquired by the juvenile court, a subsequent superior court indictment does not divest the juvenile court of the juvenile court's jurisdiction unless a proper transfer proceeding has been held. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Superior court referral of custody case retained juvenile court's jurisdiction. — Jurisdiction of divorce in superior court, and referral by the superior court to the juvenile court for custody determination, gave the juvenile court jurisdiction over the custody issue. Order by the superior court, in response to a party's motion for modification of custody, when the custody issue had not yet been resolved by the juvenile court, was void. Owen v. Owen, 195 Ga. App. 545, 394 S.E.2d 580 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Juvenile court did not retain jurisdiction to hear grandparents' petition for permanent custody after determining that the mother's four children were deprived since the grandparents' complaint for permanent custody was not in the nature of a deprivation petition and did not allege that the grandparents should be granted permanent custody of the children on the basis that the children were deprived. In re C.C., 193 Ga. App. 120, 387 S.E.2d 46 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Jurisdiction over children born in U.S. to Mexican citizens. — Juvenile court had jurisdiction to terminate the parental rights of Mexican citizens because, when the termination petition was filed, the children, who were born in the United States, were citizens of Georgia and thereby entitled to the protection of Georgia law, which specifically provides for the termination of parental rights. In the Interest of J.H., 244 Ga. App. 788, 536 S.E.2d 805 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Transferral of custody habeas corpus case by superior court. — In a custody controversy in the nature of habeas corpus, the juvenile court has concurrent jurisdiction to decide the issue only if the case is transferred to the juvenile court by proper order of the superior court; and in such a transferred case, appellate jurisdiction is lodged in the supreme court of this state. In re J.R.T., 233 Ga. 204, 210 S.E.2d 684 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301); Moss v. Moss, 233 Ga. 688, 212 S.E.2d 853 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Original and appellate jurisdiction in certain custody controversies. — Juvenile court has original jurisdiction in a custody controversy involving a delinquent child, an unruly child, or a deprived child and appellate jurisdiction in such cases is vested in the court of appeals. In re J.R.T., 233 Ga. 204, 210 S.E.2d 684 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301); Moss v. Moss, 233 Ga. 688, 212 S.E.2d 853 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Jurisdiction over offenses committed when juvenile 16. — Juvenile court retained jurisdiction over the defendant for an offense the defendant committed when the defendant was 16 years old until the entry of the court's order transferring the case to the superior court. In re D.L., 228 Ga. App. 503, 492 S.E.2d 273 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Lack of jurisdiction to award permanent custody. — Judgment was reversed because the juvenile court's authority to place a child in the custody of a "willing" and "qualified" relative was not authority to award permanent custody of the child as custody was determined by discerning the best interests of the child and not the willingness or the qualifications of a person to take temporary custody of the child. Ertter v. Dunbar, 292 Ga. 103, 734 S.E.2d 403 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Order which fails to recite jurisdictional grounds is void. — If the order of the juvenile court taking custody, control, and supervision of a minor child fails to show that it was by reason of one of the several grounds set out in the statute, such order is void for want of jurisdiction. Ferguson v. Hunt, 221 Ga. 728, 146 S.E.2d 756 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

Jurisdiction of juvenile court, being civil in nature, extends only to those minors who are residents of the county. Giles v. State, 123 Ga. App. 700, 182 S.E.2d 140 (1971) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

Jurisdiction to enter child support award. — Since a parent's children were found to be deprived and were placed temporarily with relatives, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(c)(2)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10, 15-11-11, and 15-11-212), the trial court had jurisdiction to order the parent to pay temporary support. However, the court lacked jurisdiction to enter a final award of support under O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 as no final order was entered disposing of the case. In the Interest of R.F., 295 Ga. App. 739, 673 S.E.2d 108 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Granting of temporary custody of the mother's child to the mother's ex-boyfriend and his wife following their petition to have the boy adjudicated deprived was inappropriate because the juvenile court lacked jurisdiction over the proceeding under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(a)(1)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10, 15-11-11, and 15-11-212). The petition did not contain valid allegations of deprivation and nothing in the record demonstrated that present drug use on the part of the mother had a negative effect on the child rising to the level of present deprivation; the petition was an attempt to obtain custody of the child. In the Interest of C. L. C., 299 Ga. App. 729, 683 S.E.2d 690 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28); Mauldin v. Mauldin, 322 Ga. App. 507, 745 S.E.2d 754 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Juvenile Code confers exclusive original jurisdiction to juvenile court over certain juvenile matters, and designates the juvenile court the sole court for initiating action concerning any child that is alleged to be deprived and for the termination of the legal parent-child relationship. Brooks v. Leyva, 147 Ga. App. 616, 249 S.E.2d 628 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Juvenile court does not have original jurisdiction over custody controversy. — It was not the intention of the General Assembly to give original jurisdiction of the custody of a child to a juvenile court when there is a dispute over the custody between the parents. Bartlett v. Bartlett, 99 Ga. App. 770, 109 S.E.2d 821 (1959) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

Original and appellate jurisdiction in custody disputes between parents. — In a case of dispute over custody between parents, original jurisdiction exists exclusively in courts having jurisdiction of habeas corpus or divorce and alimony actions, in both of which the supreme court has exclusive jurisdiction on appeal. Bartlett v. Bartlett, 99 Ga. App. 770, 109 S.E.2d 821 (1959) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

Noncapital juvenile cases. — Juvenile courts have exclusive original jurisdiction over noncapital juvenile cases. State v. Crankshaw, 243 Ga. 183, 253 S.E.2d 69 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Jurisdiction over deprivation cases is exclusive. — Subparagraph (a)(1)(C) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10, 15-11-11, and 15-11-212) clearly placed exclusive jurisdiction in the juvenile court as the sole court for initiating an action concerning any child who is alleged to be deprived. Williams v. Davenport, 159 Ga. App. 531, 284 S.E.2d 45 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Juvenile court had exclusive original jurisdiction over deprivation proceedings, and the juvenile court had the authority to order the disposition best suited to the needs of the children, including the transfer of temporary legal custody. In re A.L.L., 211 Ga. App. 767, 440 S.E.2d 517 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Because the action appealed from involved a deprivation proceeding, and the court's order reflected on the order's face that the order was addressing the alleged deprivation of the child at issue, the juvenile court clearly had subject matter jurisdiction over the deprivation petition. In the Interest of T. L., 269 Ga. App. 842, 605 S.E.2d 432 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Absent evidence of a custody dispute, a deprivation proceeding was not a pretextual custody battle which divested the juvenile court of the juvenile court's exclusive jurisdiction. In the Interest of D.T., 284 Ga. App. 336, 643 S.E.2d 842 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Exclusive jurisdiction for two years over children found deprived. — Juvenile Code vests exclusive jurisdiction in the juvenile court for at least two years over matters concerning children whom the juvenile court has duly found to be deprived. West v. Cobb County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 425, 254 S.E.2d 373 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Child was not deprived so as to confer jurisdiction since it was admitted that both grandparental homes were suitable as placements for the child. In re C.F., 199 Ga. App. 858, 406 S.E.2d 279 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Exclusive original jurisdiction existed in juvenile court. — Because there was a bona fide allegation that a child was deprived, because the issue of permanent custody or modification of the divorce decree had not been transferred to the juvenile court, and because a mother's temporary custody had expired, the juvenile court had authority to exercise the court's exclusive original jurisdiction under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(a)(1)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10, 15-11-11, and 15-11-212); therefore, the habeas court erred in denying the father's petition for relief. Douglas v. Douglas, 285 Ga. 548, 678 S.E.2d 904 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Juvenile court properly exercised jurisdiction over termination proceedings pursuant to former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-28 and 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10, 15-11-11, 15-11-212, 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320) as the petition was filed by the mother, who had already been awarded sole physical custody of the child and as the termination petition dealt specifically with factors relating to the father's inability to provide proper care and support for the child such that the father's parental rights should be terminated. In the Interest of A.R.K.L., 314 Ga. App. 847, 726 S.E.2d 77 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Juvenile court did not retain jurisdiction. — Although a great aunt and great step-uncle argued that the trial court erred in exercising subject matter jurisdiction in a custody matter at a time when the juvenile court had exclusive original jurisdiction, there was no order of the superior court transferring the petition to the juvenile court, and the jurisdiction obtained during an original deprivation proceeding did not serve to retain such jurisdiction; therefore, the juvenile court did not retain jurisdiction. The complaint for permanent custody filed by the grandmother and the step-grandfather was not in the nature of a deprivation petition. Wiepert v. Stover, 298 Ga. App. 683, 680 S.E.2d 707 (2009), overruled on other grounds, Artson, LLC v. Hudson, 322 Ga. App. 859, 747 S.E.2d 68 (2013).

No transfer hearing required when concurrent jurisdiction. — Transfer hearing is not required when the offense is one over which the juvenile and superior courts have concurrent jurisdiction and the superior court first takes jurisdiction. Lewis v. State, 246 Ga. 101, 268 S.E.2d 915 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

If either the juvenile court or the superior court properly could have exercised jurisdiction, no petition alleging delinquency was ever filed in the juvenile court, and the superior court first took jurisdiction through indictment, jurisdiction properly vested in the superior court and no transfer hearing pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-561, 15-11-563, and 15-11-566) was required. Taylor v. State, 194 Ga. App. 871, 392 S.E.2d 57 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Jurisdiction in temporary custody matters. — Trial court erred when the court prohibited the Department of Human Resources from placing children with their mother or allowing the children to visit with the mother unsupervised and by staying any decision of a juvenile court that would be contrary to the court's order because, although the trial court and the juvenile court had concurrent jurisdiction over the temporary custody of the children, the juvenile court in the contemporaneous deprivation proceeding had the authority to order the disposition best suited to the needs of the children, including the transfer of temporary legal custody, and the juvenile court had already exercised the court's jurisdiction over the temporary custody of the children in light of the deprivation action; although the trial court expressed the court's concern about the department's decision to recommend that the children be physically placed with the mother, the juvenile court was competent to oversee the department, and there was no good reason for the trial court to conclude that the trial court was in a better position to address the department's placement decisions than the juvenile court. Long v. Long, 303 Ga. App. 215, 692 S.E.2d 811 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Juvenile court lacked jurisdiction since there was no order of the superior court transferring the issue of custody so as to meet the requirements of subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-212). In re C.F., 199 Ga. App. 858, 406 S.E.2d 279 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Jurisdiction between courts. — Trial court erred when the court prohibited the Department of Human Resources from placing children with their mother or allowing the children to visit with the mother unsupervised and by staying any decision of a juvenile court that would be contrary to the court's order because, although the trial court and the juvenile court had concurrent jurisdiction over the temporary custody of the children, the juvenile court in the contemporaneous deprivation proceeding had the authority to order the disposition best suited to the needs of the children, including the transfer of temporary legal custody, and the juvenile court had already exercised the court's jurisdiction over the temporary custody of the children in light of the deprivation action; although the trial court expressed the court's concern about the department's decision to recommend that the children be physically placed with the mother, the juvenile court was competent to oversee the department, and there was no good reason for the trial court to conclude that the trial court was in a better position to address the department's placement decisions than the juvenile court. Long v. Long, 303 Ga. App. 215, 692 S.E.2d 811 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Superior court without jurisdiction over habeas corpus petition. — If a juvenile court order entered pursuant to former provisions an disposition of deprived children after notice and hearing was still in effect, the superior court had no jurisdiction of the related habeas corpus petition. West v. Cobb County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 425, 254 S.E.2d 373 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301).

Adoption

Termination-of-rights petition which seeks adoption of child. — If a petition for termination of the rights of a putative father of an illegitimate child specifically states that it is in pursuance of the petitioners' prospective adoption of the child, the petition is "in connection with adoption proceedings" within the meaning of subparagraph (a)(2)(C) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10, 15-11-11, and 15-11-212). H.C.S. v. Grebel, 253 Ga. 404, 321 S.E.2d 321 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5); H.C.S. v. Grebel, 172 Ga. App. 819, 325 S.E.2d 925 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Adoption (Cont'd)

Juvenile court lacked jurisdiction to consider a petition for termination of parental rights because the termination was sought "in connection with" an adoption proceeding. In re B.G.D., 224 Ga. App. 124, 479 S.E.2d 439 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Termination action in which adoption will be pursued at a later date. — Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(a)(2)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10, 15-11-11, and 15-11-212), the juvenile court had exclusive original jurisdiction over a child's grandparents' action seeking termination of the child's parents' parental rights. Although the grandparents planned to adopt the child, the grandparents intended to adopt the child under the laws of Florida, where the grandparents lived. In re J. S., 302 Ga. App. 342, 691 S.E.2d 250 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Matters relating to adoption. — Fact that the natural mother of a child, who sought the termination of the natural father's parental rights, contemplated a possible adoption did not automatically render the proceeding one "in connection with" an adoption. In re D.L.N., 234 Ga. App. 123, 506 S.E.2d 403 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Trial court did not err in concluding that the court had jurisdiction over an adoption and termination of parental rights proceeding as statutory law granted the trial court jurisdiction over adoption proceedings and other proceedings that were not granted exclusively to the juvenile courts; since the juvenile courts were granted exclusive jurisdiction over deprivation proceedings, those types of matters were to be heard by the juvenile courts, but the trial court had the authority to hear adoption and other matters, such as the adoptive parents' adoption petition filed to adopt the biological parents' minor child. Snyder v. Carter, 276 Ga. App. 426, 623 S.E.2d 241 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Court lacked jurisdiction in adoption. — Georgia superior court erred by ordering a father's parental rights terminated and granting a couple's petition for adoption because the court lacked jurisdiction in the case since adoption had already commenced via a deprivation proceeding in a Georgia juvenile court; thus, the juvenile court should have presided over the termination proceeding. Alizota v. Stanfield, 319 Ga. App. 256, 734 S.E.2d 497 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Jurisdiction of adoption while deprivation proceeding pending. — Superior court has exclusive jurisdiction in adoption matters and had jurisdiction to entertain an adoption petition notwithstanding the pendency of deprivation proceedings in the juvenile court involving the same child. Edgar v. Shave, 205 Ga. App. 337, 422 S.E.2d 234 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Criminal Matters

Purpose of division of juvenile trials into two phases. — In dividing juvenile trials into two phases, lawmakers intended to give the juvenile judge an opportunity to conduct the "functional equivalent" of a regular trial (the adjudicatory hearing) in a manner which would satisfy the required constitutional procedures concomitant with the usual legal rules, such as those dealing with admissibility of evidence, proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and similar requirements applicable to adults. Thereafter, at the dispositional phase, the judge was to explore all available additional avenues, including psychiatric and sociological studies, which would enable the judge to provide a solution for the youngster and the family aimed at making the child a secure law-abiding member of society. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301).

Juvenile subject to criminal adjudication when case transferred to superior court. — Juvenile whose case is properly transferred to the superior court is subject to the criminal sanctions which may be imposed in that court. Thus, an adjudication of guilt of a juvenile in superior court is a criminal adjudication. Carrindine v. Ricketts, 236 Ga. 283, 223 S.E.2d 627 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Confinement implies juvenile in need of supervision, correction, and training. — Confinement necessarily deprives the parents of their prima facie prerogative of training and supervision, and implies that the juvenile is, within the terms of the juvenile law, one who is in need of supervision beyond the control of the parents and in need of correction and training which the parents cannot provide. Young v. State, 120 Ga. App. 605, 171 S.E.2d 756 (1969) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Violation of probation. — Although the violation of probation may constitute a "delinquent act" in and of itself, a violation of probation which occurs after the juvenile's 17th birthday will not authorize the initiation of a new delinquency petition against the juvenile. The juvenile court's jurisdiction would extend only to revoking the juvenile's probation for the juvenile's previous adjudication of delinquency. In re B.S.L., 200 Ga. App. 170, 407 S.E.2d 123 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Application

Sufficient evidence of deprivation. — Evidence was sufficient to permit the juvenile court to find clear and convincing evidence of the child's deprivation and that the child's parent's misconduct or inability to care for the child's needs resulted in abuse or neglect sufficient to render the parent unfit to retain custody. In re C.N., 231 Ga. App. 639, 500 S.E.2d 400 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Since the evidence in the record showed that the child had been subjected to numerous medical examinations for sexual abuse at the mother's behest, in an apparent effort to frustrate or foreclose the father's right of visitation, and she persisted in having the child examined for possible sexual abuse, the juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in finding that: (1) such examinations were so numerous as to be psychologically harmful to the child; and (2) the circumstances under which future examinations might proceed were to be limited. In the Interest of M.E., 265 Ga. App. 412, 593 S.E.2d 924 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Juvenile court's order finding a one-year-old child to be deprived was upheld on appeal as clear and convincing evidence existed that: (1) one parent suffered from a psychological disorder, which was not controlled by medication, and caused that parent to have delusions; and (2) the other parent, knowing the aforementioned condition of the first parent, left the child in that parent's care. In the Interest of M.D., 283 Ga. App. 805, 642 S.E.2d 863 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Given the judicial notice taken by the juvenile judge who entered a prior deprivation finding against a parent's older two children, and the presumption of correctness that attached to those findings, as the pleadings and evidence from those proceedings were not included in the appellate record, sufficient evidence supported the court's deprivation finding involving the parent's youngest child. In the Interest of A.B., 285 Ga. App. 288, 645 S.E.2d 716 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Adequate care from grandparent does not inhibit deprivation by parent. — Juvenile court properly focused on the subject parent's abandonment of the child in support of the court's deprivation finding and not on the adequate level of care given by the child's maternal grandparent when making a deprivation finding. Moreover, the state showed that the parent was incapable of caring for any child, let alone a premature infant with special medical needs. In the Interest of A.B., 289 Ga. App. 655, 658 S.E.2d 205 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Abuse by stepparent resulted in deprivation by parent. — In a mother's appeal of a juvenile court's declaration that a child was deprived, the juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in making that conclusion based on the sexual abuse of the child by the stepfather because the record established by clear and convincing evidence that the mother did not fully appreciate all that had to be done to protect the child and the child was minimizing the abuse and masking the continuing emotional impact of the experience due to psychological pressure from the mother. In the Interest of A. P., 299 Ga. App. 886, 684 S.E.2d 22 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Custody with department following finding of deprivation. — Record supported the juvenile court's judgment that a parent did not fulfill the terms of a case plan that was established by the Department of Family and Children's Services because the parent continued using cocaine and refused to attend substance abuse treatment; thus, the child was deprived and custody was properly placed in the department. In the Interest of J.L., 269 Ga. App. 226, 603 S.E.2d 742 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Custody with department only suspends parental right of custody. — Removal of custody of the child from the parents is a determination that, for whatever length of time custody is exercised by the Department of Family and Children Services, this right has been suspended, although not finally terminated. Rodgers v. Department of Human Resources, 157 Ga. App. 235, 276 S.E.2d 902 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301).

Actions by department not action of district attorney. — When the Department of Family and Children Services, acting as the legal custodian of a child, declines to permit a pretrial witness interview, that action is not the action of a party to the suit, i.e., the district attorney's office. Pendergrass v. State, 168 Ga. App. 190, 308 S.E.2d 585 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Order requiring compulsory school attendance affirmed. — In re D.H., 178 Ga. App. 119, 342 S.E.2d 367 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Provision for transfer of child to mother not required. — Juvenile court was not required to include a provision for transfer of a child back to the child's mother after the child was found to be deprived under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-212) as the child remained in the custody of the father, who lived in another state. In the Interest of K.J., 268 Ga. App. 843, 602 S.E.2d 861 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Insufficient evidence of deprivation. — Juvenile court's finding of deprivation was in error because there was no evidence presented at the hearing to support the court's finding. In the court's dispositional order, the juvenile court made no specific factual findings that the child was deprived as to the father, but merely listed reasons as to why the court was declining to transfer custody to the father and stated that the court found the child deprived as to the father due to the child's current needs and welfare, a finding which was not supported by any evidence. In the Interest of L. A., 322 Ga. App. 94, 744 S.E.2d 88 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24A-301, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-5 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-28, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

No conflict with jurisdictional grant over adoptions to superior courts. — Jurisdiction of superior courts over adoptions does not conflict with the general grant of "exclusive original jurisdiction over juvenile matters" to the juvenile courts. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U76-15 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Superior court may terminate parent-child relationship only with adoption. — Although both superior and juvenile courts have jurisdiction to terminate the parent-child relationship, the superior court may do so only in conjunction with an adoption proceeding which has been filed in that court; the juvenile court remains the sole court for initiating a parental termination proceeding if there is no concomitant adoption proceeding in process. 1977 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U77-52 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Jurisdiction of superior courts not affected by interstate compact on juveniles. — No provision of the interstate compact on juveniles has any effect on the jurisdiction and authority of superior courts over matters of adoption. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U76-15 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act proceedings. — Superior court may not transfer a Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act, O.C.G.A. § 19-11-40 et seq., proceeding to a juvenile court. 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U89-7 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Paternity questions. — Since no provision would permit the transfer of paternity questions to a juvenile court, no case in which paternity is involved may be transferred by a superior court to a juvenile court. 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U89-7 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

15-11-213. Disposition orders; considerations.

Any order of disposition shall contain written findings of fact to support the disposition and case plan ordered. Before making an order of disposition, the court shall consider the following:

(1) Why the best interests and safety of a child adjudicated as a dependent child are served by the disposition and case plan ordered, including but not limited to:

(A) The interaction and interrelationship of such child with his or her parent, siblings, and any other person who may significantly affect the child's best interests;

(B) Such child's adjustment to his or her home, school, and community;

(C) The mental and physical health of all individuals involved;

(D) The wishes of such child as to his or her placement;

(E) The wishes of such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian as to such child's custody;

(F) Whether there exists a relative of such child or other individual who, after study by DFCS, is found to be qualified to receive and care for such child; and

(G) The ability of a parent, guardian, or legal custodian of a child adjudicated as a dependent child to care for such child in the home so that no harm will result to such child;

(2) The availability of services recommended in the case plan;

(3) What alternative dispositions or services under the case plan were considered by the court and why such dispositions or services were not appropriate in the instant case;

(4) The appropriateness of the particular placement made or to be made by the placing agency; and

(5) Whether reasonable efforts were made to prevent or eliminate the necessity of a child adjudicated as a dependent child's removal and to reunify his or her family after removal from the custody of his or her family unless reasonable efforts were not required. The court's findings should include a brief description of what preventive and reunification efforts were made and why further efforts could not have prevented or eliminated the necessity of such removal.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Juvenile court required to determine what is in child's best interest. — In a dependency case, sua sponte order dismissing the proceeding was vacated because the juvenile court failed to make proper resolution of the dependency petition as the juvenile court was required to determine what was in the child's best interest. In the Interest of A. L. S., 350 Ga. App. 636, 829 S.E.2d 900 (2019).

15-11-214. Duration of disposition orders.

(a) An order of disposition in a dependency proceeding shall continue in force until the purposes of the order have been accomplished.

(b) The court may terminate an order of disposition of a child adjudicated as a dependent child on or without an application of a party if it appears to the court that the purposes of the order have been accomplished.

(c) When a child adjudicated as a dependent child reaches 18 years of age, all orders in connection with dependency proceedings affecting him or her then in force terminate and he or she shall be discharged from further obligation or control.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-214, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2018, p. 927, § 1-4/HB 906.

The 2018 amendment, effective July 1, 2020, substituted the present provisions of subsection (c) for the former provisions, which read: "Unless a child remains in DFCS care or continues to receive services from DFCS, when a child adjudicated as a dependent child reaches 18 years of age, all orders affecting him or her then in force terminate and he or she shall be discharged from further obligation or control."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Inconvenient forum. — In a child custody case in which the children had been removed from their Georgia mother's custody and had lived in Florida with their father for more than two years and most of the witnesses lived outside of Georgia, the juvenile court erred in dismissing the mother's petition for custody based on inconvenient forum without making specific findings demonstrating its consideration of all of the factors in O.C.G.A. § 19-9-67(b)(1) through (8). Further, the case should be stayed, not dismissed. In the Interest of A. L., 351 Ga. App. 824, 833 S.E.2d 296 (2019).

15-11-215. (For effective date, see note.) Notice of change in placement hearings; presumptions.

(a) Not less than five days in advance of any placement change, DFCS shall, in writing, notify the court, a child who is 14 years of age or older, the child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian, the person or agency with physical custody of the child, the child's attorney, the child's guardian ad litem, if any, and any other attorney of record of such change in the location of the child's placement while the child is in DFCS custody. The notice required by this subsection may include notice via email if the caregiver or other party who will receive the notification has agreed to receive notice via email.

(b) If a child's health or welfare may be endangered by any delay in changing his or her placement, the court and all attorneys of record shall be notified of such placement change within 24 hours of such change.

(c) A child adjudicated as a dependent child who is 14 years of age or older, his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian, the person or agency with physical custody of the child, such child's attorney, such child's guardian ad litem, if any, and any attorney of record may request a hearing pertaining to such child's case plan or the permanency plan in order for the court to consider the change in the location of such child's placement and any changes to the case plan or permanency plan resulting from such child's change in placement location. The hearing shall be held within five days of receiving notice of a change in the location of such child's placement and prior to any such placement change, unless such child's health or welfare may be endangered by any delay in changing such child's placement.

(d) The Council of Juvenile Court Judges shall by rule provide for methods by which persons entitled to notice, including those not represented by counsel, may electronically file an objection to the placement change. Such rule shall provide for the use of a standard form that the objector may file electronically with the clerk of court and which upon filing shall be distributed electronically to all parties and others entitled to notice.

(e) At the hearing to consider a child adjudicated as a dependent child's case plan and permanency plan, the court shall consider the case plan and permanency plan recommendations made by DFCS, including a recommendation as to the location of the placement of such child, and shall make findings of fact upon which the court relied in determining to reject or accept the case plan or permanency plan and the recommendations made by DFCS, including the location of such child's placement. The court shall specifically consider any objections filed to the change of placement and shall consider evidence pertaining to such objections, including, but not limited to, evidence from the child and the foster parent, relative, or caregiver.

(f) If the court rejects DFCS recommendations, the court shall demonstrate that DFCS recommendations were considered and explain why it did not follow such recommendations. If the court rejects the DFCS case plan and permanency plan recommendations, including the change in the location of the placement of a child adjudicated as a dependent child, the court may order DFCS to devise a new case plan and permanency plan recommendation, including a new recommendation as to the location of such child within the resources of the department, or make any other order relative to placement or custody outside the department as the court finds to be in the best interests of such child and consistent with the policy that children in DFCS custody should have stable placements.

(g) If the court finds that the child has been living in a stable home environment with his or her current caregivers for the past 12 months and that removal of the child from such caregivers would be detrimental to the child's emotional well-being, the court may presume that continuation of the child's placement with his or her current caregivers is in the child's best interests and shall enter a finding that a change of placement is a failure by DFCS to make reasonable efforts to finalize the permanency plan which is in effect at the time of the hearing.

(h) Placement or a change of legal custody by the court outside DFCS shall relieve DFCS of further responsibility for a child adjudicated as a dependent child except for any provision of services ordered by the court to ensure the continuation of reunification services to such child's family when appropriate.

(i) A placement change shall not include a temporary absence from the child's identified and ongoing foster care placement, including, but not limited to, visitation with a friend, sibling, relative, or other caretaker, including a preplacement visit to a possible foster or adoptive placement; hospitalization for medical, acute psychiatric episodes or diagnosis; respite care when the child is expected to return to his or her foster care placement; day or overnight camp; temporary travel with the foster family or child care institution personnel, church, school, or other persons or groups approved by DFCS; trial home visits with the court's permission, if required by subsection (b) of Code Section 15-11-212; and runaway episodes.

Delayed effective date. — This Code section, as set out above, is effective January 1, 2021. For version of this Code section in effect until January 1, 2021, see the 2020 amendment note.

The 2019 amendment, effective July 1, 2019, added present subsection (f) and redesignated former subsections (f) and (g) as present subsections (g) and (h), respectively.

The 2020 amendment, effective January 1, 2021, in subsection (a), inserted ", in writing," in the first sentence and added the second sentence; added subsection (d); redesignated former subsections (d) through (h) as present subsections (e) through (i), respectively; added the second sentence to subsection (e); and substituted "preplacement" for "pre-placement" in the middle of subsection (i).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Jurisdiction between courts. — Trial court erred when the court prohibited the Department of Human Resources from placing children with their mother or allowing the children to visit with the mother unsupervised and by staying any decision of a juvenile court that would be contrary to the court's order because, although the trial court and the juvenile court had concurrent jurisdiction over the temporary custody of the children, the juvenile court in the contemporaneous deprivation proceeding had the authority to order the disposition best suited to the needs of the children, including the transfer of temporary legal custody, and the juvenile court had already exercised the court's jurisdiction over the temporary custody of the children in light of the deprivation action; although the trial court expressed the court's concern about the department's decision to recommend that the children be physically placed with the mother, the juvenile court was competent to oversee the department, and there was no good reason for the trial court to conclude that the trial court was in a better position to address the department's placement decisions than the juvenile court. Long v. Long, 303 Ga. App. 215, 692 S.E.2d 811 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

No equal protection violation. — Treating deprived children who were placed in the legal custody of the Department of Families and Children Services because there was no relative committed to the child who was available for immediate placement differently from deprived children who did have a committed parent or guardian available for immediate placement did not violate the equal protection clause or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II. as the classes were not similarly situated and the laws were rationally related to the goal of minimizing government intervention while ensuring that children were reared in a familial environment. In the Interest of A.N., 281 Ga. 58, 636 S.E.2d 496 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

In a deprivation proceeding, the department of family and child services did not violate equal protection by requiring the parents to pay part of the costs for services mandated under their case plan. The department was not drawing a distinction between similarly situated parties in that a parent who could afford to contribute financially was not similarly situated to one who could not afford to do so; moreover, even if the parents were similarly situated to others who were not required to pay for a portion of services, the goals served by the contribution requirement of requiring parents to take responsibility for conduct that harmed their children and of increasing the likelihood of success for family reunification represented legitimate governmental purposes. In the Interest of P.N., 291 Ga. App. 512, 662 S.E.2d 287 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Determination that deprivation proceeding was not custody dispute. — Because the pleadings established that a deprivation petition was properly filed and factually supported, and due to the presence of unchallenged, valid allegations of deprivation, the deprivation proceeding was not a disguised custody matter; accordingly, the juvenile court properly exercised the court's jurisdiction over the proceeding. In the Interest of K.L.H., 281 Ga. App. 394, 636 S.E.2d 117 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Purpose of division of juvenile trials into two phases. — In dividing juvenile trials into two phases, lawmakers intended to give the juvenile judge an opportunity to conduct the "functional equivalent" of a regular trial (the adjudicatory hearing) in a manner which would satisfy the required constitutional procedures concomitant with the usual legal rules, such as those dealing with admissibility of evidence, proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and similar requirements applicable to adults. Thereafter, at the dispositional phase, the judge was to explore all available additional avenues, including psychiatric and sociological studies, which would enable the judge to provide a solution for the youngster and the family aimed at making the child a secure law-abiding member of society.

D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301).

Jurisdiction of adoption while deprivation proceeding pending. — Superior court has exclusive jurisdiction in adoption matters and had jurisdiction to entertain an adoption petition notwithstanding the pendency of deprivation proceedings in the juvenile court involving the same child. Edgar v. Shave, 205 Ga. App. 337, 422 S.E.2d 234 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Authority of juvenile courts to transfer legal custody. — Juvenile court had exclusive original jurisdiction over deprivation proceedings, and the juvenile court had the authority to order the disposition best suited to the needs of the children including the transfer of temporary legal custody. In re A.L.L., 211 Ga. App. 767, 440 S.E.2d 517 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Juvenile court erred in awarding custody of a child to the father even after finding that the child was not deprived because according to a plain reading of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55(a)(2) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-211 and 15-11-212), the juvenile court was without authority to transfer custody of the child to the father and paternal grandmother; while under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(c)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-11) the juvenile court had concurrent jurisdiction to hear and determine the issue of custody and support when the issue was transferred by proper order of the superior court, no such order existed in the record, and instead, the juvenile court specifically found that the child was not deprived. In re T.S., 310 Ga. App. 100, 712 S.E.2d 121 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

No need to repeat evidence already presented during adjudicatory portion. — There is no error in refusing to have the dispositional phase include a repetition of the same evidence and witnesses previously presented during the adjudicatory portion. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301).

Notice of change in placement sufficient given previous discussions. — As the adoption of a permanency plan and placement of a child with the paternal grandparents had already been discussed at a hearing held at the child advocate's request, the advocate was not prejudiced by the department of family and children services' failure to provide the advocate with five days' notice of a change in the child's placement as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55(d) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-215). In the Interest of N. W., 309 Ga. App. 617, 710 S.E.2d 832 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

Standard of proof for finding deprivation. — If deprivation forms the predicate upon which a third party seeks a temporary transfer of the child's legal custody, in order to support such a disposition the child must first be adjudicated to be a deprived child. By statute, that finding of deprivation must be made by "clear and convincing evidence." In re J.C.P., 167 Ga. App. 572, 307 S.E.2d 1 (1983), but see In re A.W., 240 Ga. App. 259, 523 S.E.2d 88 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

No habeas corpus if court enters orders. — Habeas corpus will not lie if the juvenile court, after notice and hearing, enters an order pursuant to former provisions an disposition of deprived children. Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2301).

Consideration of parent's behavior at hearing. — Consideration by a juvenile court of a noncustodial parent's behavior in a hearing to determine the need for continuing the temporary suspension of custody does not deprive a noncustodial parent of due process. In re A.S., 185 Ga. App. 11, 363 S.E.2d 325 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

Recommendations by juvenile court. — Juvenile court does not exceed the court's authority in a hearing to determine the need for continuing the temporary suspension of custody by making recommendations as to the placement, care, and supervision of a child. In re A.S., 185 Ga. App. 11, 363 S.E.2d 325 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34).

If a juvenile court's finding as to custody is in the nature of a recommendation to the superior court, the custody issue remains pending below and is not before the appellate court on appeal. In the Interest of M.E., 265 Ga. App. 412, 593 S.E.2d 924 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-55).

15-11-216. Periodic review hearing; required evidence.

(a) All cases of children in DFCS custody shall be initially reviewed within 75 days following a child adjudicated as a dependent child's removal from his or her home and shall be conducted by the court. An additional periodic review shall be held within four months following the initial review and shall be conducted by the court or by judicial citizen review panels established by the court, as the court directs, meeting such standards and using such procedures as are established by court rule by the Supreme Court, with the advice and consent of the Council of Juvenile Court Judges. The court shall have the discretion to schedule any subsequent review hearings as necessary.

(b) At any periodic review hearing, the paramount concern shall be a child adjudicated as a dependent child's health and safety.

(c) At the initial 75 day periodic review, the court shall approve the completion of the relative search, schedule the subsequent four-month review to be conducted by the court or a judicial citizen review panel, and shall determine:

(1) Whether a child adjudicated as a dependent child continues to be a dependent child;

(2) Whether the existing case plan is still the best case plan for such child and his or her family and whether any changes need to be made to the case plan, including whether a concurrent case plan for nonreunification is appropriate;

(3) The extent of compliance with the case plan by all participants;

(4) The appropriateness of any recommended changes to such child's placement;

(5) Whether appropriate progress is being made on the permanency plan;

(6) Whether all legally required services are being provided to a child adjudicated as a dependent child, his or her foster parents if there are foster parents, and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(7) Whether visitation is appropriate and, if so, approve and establish a reasonable visitation schedule consistent with the age and developmental needs of a child adjudicated as a dependent child;

(8) Whether, for a child adjudicated as a dependent child who is 14 years of age or older, the services needed to assist such child to make a transition from foster care to independent living are being provided; and

(9) Whether reasonable efforts continue to be made to prevent or eliminate the necessity of such child's removal from his or her home and to reunify the family after removal of a child adjudicated as a dependent child, unless reasonable efforts were not required.

(d) If at any review subsequent to the initial 75 day review the court finds that there is a lack of substantial progress towards completion of the case plan, the court shall order DFCS to develop a case plan for nonreunification or a concurrent case plan contemplating nonreunification.

(d.1) At each review hearing held with respect to a child who remains placed in a qualified residential treatment program, the department shall submit evidence documenting that:

(1) Ongoing assessment of the strengths and needs of the child continues to support the determination that the needs of the child cannot be met through placement in a foster family home;

(2) Placement in a qualified residential treatment program provides the most effective and appropriate level of care for the child in the least restrictive environment;

(3) Placement in a qualified residential treatment program is consistent with the short-term and long-term goals for the child, as specified in the permanency plan for the child;

(4) The specific treatment or service needs that will be met for the child in the placement and the length of time the child is expected to need the treatment or services; and

(5) The efforts made by the department to prepare the child to return home or to be placed with a fit and willing relative, a legal guardian, or an adoptive parent, or in a foster family home.

(e) At the time of each review of a child adjudicated as a dependent child in DFCS custody, DFCS shall notify the court whether and when it intends to proceed with the termination of parental rights.

The 2019 amendment, effective May 7, 2019, added subsection (d.1).

The 2020 amendment, effective July 29, 2020, part of an Act to revise, modernize, and correct the Code, substituted "short-term and long-term" for "short- and long-term" in paragraph (d.1)(3).

15-11-217. Periodic review by judicial citizen review panel.

(a) In the event the periodic review of a case is conducted by a judicial citizen review panel, the panel shall transmit its report and that of DFCS, including its findings and recommendations together with DFCS proposed revised plan for reunification or other permanency plan, if necessary, to the court and the parent within five days after the review.

(b) DFCS shall provide the caregiver of a child adjudicated as a dependent child, his or her foster parents if there are foster parents, and any preadoptive parents or relatives providing care for such child with a copy of those portions of the report of the judicial citizen review panel that involve the recommended permanency goal and the recommended services to be provided to such child.

(c) Any party may request a hearing on the proposed revised plan in writing within five days after receiving a copy of the plan.

(d) If no hearing is requested or scheduled by the court on its own motion, the court shall review the proposed revised plan and enter a supplemental order incorporating the revised plan as part of its disposition in the case. In the event that a hearing is held, the court shall, after hearing evidence, enter a supplemental order incorporating all elements that the court finds essential in the proposed revised plan.

(e) Notwithstanding subsections (c) and (d) of this Code section, if the judicial citizen review panel finds that there is a lack of substantial progress towards completion of the case plan, the court shall schedule a hearing within 30 days of such finding to determine whether a case plan for nonreunification is appropriate.

(f) If the judicial citizen review panel determines that a parent of a child adjudicated as a dependent child has unjustifiably failed to comply with the ordered plan designed to reunite such child's family and that such failure is significant enough to warrant consideration of the parent's termination of parental rights, the panel may make a recommendation to DFCS and the attorney for such child that a petition for termination of parental rights should be prepared.

15-11-218. Content of orders following periodic review hearings or reports by judicial citizen review panels.

(a) At the conclusion of a periodic review hearing, or upon review of a report by a judicial citizen review panel, the court shall issue written findings of fact that include:

(1) Why a child adjudicated as a dependent child continues to be a dependent child;

(2) Whether the existing case plan is still the best case plan for a child adjudicated as a dependent child and his or her family and whether any changes need to be made to the case plan including whether a concurrent case plan for nonreunification is appropriate;

(3) The extent of compliance with the case plan by all participants;

(4) The basis for any changes to the placement of a child adjudicated as a dependent child;

(5) Whether visitation is or continues to be appropriate;

(6) A description of progress being made on the permanency plan;

(7) Whether all legally required services are being provided to a child adjudicated as a dependent child, his or her foster parents if there are foster parents, and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(8) Whether, for a child adjudicated as a dependent child who is 14 years of age or older, the services needed to assist such child to make a transition from foster care to independent living are being provided; and

(9) Whether reasonable efforts continue to be made to prevent or eliminate the necessity of the removal of a child adjudicated as a dependent child and to reunify his or her family after removal, unless reasonable efforts were not required.

(b) At the conclusion of a periodic review hearing, or upon review of a report by a judicial citizen review panel, the court shall order one of the following dispositions:

(1) Return a child adjudicated as a dependent child to his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian's home with or without court imposed conditions;

(2) Allow a child adjudicated as a dependent child to continue in the current custodial placement because the current placement is appropriate for such child's needs;

(3) Allow a child adjudicated as a dependent child to continue in the current custodial placement although the current placement is no longer appropriate for such child's needs and direct DFCS to devise another plan which shall:

(A) Be submitted within ten days for court approval;

(B) Be furnished to all parties after court approval of the revised plan; and

(C) Be provided to the caregiver of a child adjudicated as a dependent child, his or her foster parents if there are foster parents, and any preadoptive parents or relative providing care for such child with a copy of those portions of the court approved revised plan that involve the permanency goal and the services to be provided to such child; or

(4) Make additional orders regarding the treatment plan or placement of a child adjudicated as a dependent child to protect such child's best interests if the court determines DFCS has failed in implementing any material provision of the case plan or abused its discretion in the placement or proposed placement of such child.

15-11-219. Required findings for qualified residential treatment program admittance; assessment procedures; writing requirement.

(a) Before a child's placement in a qualified residential treatment program, but no later than 30 days following the start of such placement, a qualified individual shall:

(1) Assess the strengths and needs of the child using an age-appropriate, evidence based, validated, functional assessment tool;

(2) Determine whether the needs of the child can be met with family members or through placement in a foster family home or, if not, which DFCS approved authorized setting would provide the most effective and appropriate level of care for the child in the least restrictive environment and be consistent with the short-term and long-term goals for the child, as specified in the permanency plan for the child; and

(3) Develop a list of child-specific short-term and long-term mental and behavioral health goals.

(b) The qualified individual conducting the assessment shall work in conjunction with the family and permanency team for the child while conducting and making the assessment.

(c) If the qualified individual conducting the assessment determines the child should not be placed in a foster family home, the qualified individual shall specify in writing:

(1) The reasons why the needs of the child cannot be met by the family of the child or in a foster family home. A shortage or lack of foster family homes shall not be an acceptable reason for determining that the needs of the child cannot be met in a foster family home; and

(2) Why the recommended placement in a qualified residential treatment program is the setting that will provide the child with the most effective and appropriate level of care in the least restrictive environment and how that placement is consistent with the short-term and long-term goals for the child, as specified in the permanency plan for the child.

Effective date. — This Code section became effective May 7, 2019.

The 2020 amendment, effective July 29, 2020, part of an Act to revise, modernize, and correct the Code, substituted "evidence based" for "evidence-based" in paragraph (a)(1); and substituted "short-term and long-term" for "short- and long-term" in paragraphs (a)(2), (a)(3), and (c)(2).

15-11-220. Required findings after placement in qualified residential treatment program; documentation.

(a) Within 60 days of the start of a child's placement in a qualified residential treatment program, the court must:

(1) Consider the assessment required by Code Section 15-11-219 determination, and documentation made by the qualified individual in approving the placement;

(2) Determine whether the needs of the child can be met through placement in a foster family home or, if not, whether placement of the child in a qualified residential treatment program provides the most effective and appropriate level of care for the child in the least restrictive environment;

(3) Determine whether placement in a qualified residential treatment program is consistent with the short-term and long-term goals for the child, as specified in the permanency plan for the child;

(4) Determine whether it is in the best interest of the child to be placed in a qualified residential treatment program and whether, for that reason, it is not in the best interest of the child or the child's siblings to be placed together; and

(5) Approve or disapprove the qualified residential treatment program placement by entering written findings of fact on the record. Placement or a change of legal custody by the court outside DFCS shall relieve DFCS of further responsibility for a child adjudicated as a dependent child except for any provision of services ordered by the court to ensure the continuation of reunification services to such child's family when appropriate.

(b) Documentation of the determination and approval or disapproval of the placement in a qualified residential treatment program by the court shall be included in and made part of the case plan for the child.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-220, enacted by Ga. L. 2019, p. 893, § 5/SB 225; Ga. L. 2020, p. 493, § 15/SB 429.

Effective date. — This Code section became effective May 7, 2019.

The 2020 amendment, effective July 29, 2020, part of an Act to revise, modernize, and correct the Code, substituted "short-term and long-term" for "short- and long-term" in paragraph (a)(3).

Part 12

Permanency Plan

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-58, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this part, are included in the annotations for this part. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Foster children. — Former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-13 and 15-11-58 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-30, 15-11-134, and 15-11-200 et seq.), and O.C.G.A. § 20-2-690.1, and 49-5-12 were not too vague and amorphous to be enforced by the judiciary and impose specific duties on the state defendants; thus, the federal regulatory scheme embodied in the CSFR process did not relieve the state defendants of the defendants obligation to fulfill the defendants statutory duties to the foster children, nor did the former statute provide a legal excuse for the defendants failure to do so. Kenny A. v. Perdue, No. 1:02-cv-1686-MHS, 2004 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 27025 (N.D. Ga. Dec. 11, 2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

15-11-230. Permanency plan hearing.

(a) The court shall hold a permanency plan hearing to determine the future permanent legal status of each child in DFCS custody.

(b) A permanency plan hearing, which considers in-state and out-of-state placement options for a child adjudicated as a dependent child, shall be held:

(1) No later than 30 days after DFCS has submitted a written report to the court which does not contain a plan for reunification services;

(2) For children under seven years of age at the time a petition is filed, no later than nine months after such child has entered foster care;

(3) For children seven years of age and older at the time a petition is filed, no later than 12 months after such child has entered foster care; or

(4) For a child in a sibling group whose members were removed from the home at the same time and in which one member of the sibling group was under seven years of age at the time a petition for dependency was filed, the permanency plan hearing shall be held no later than nine months after such child has entered foster care.

(c) After the initial permanency plan hearing has occurred, a permanency plan hearing shall be held not less frequently than every six months during the time a child adjudicated as a dependent child continues in DFCS custody or more frequently as deemed necessary by the court until the court determines that such child's permanency plan and goal have been achieved.

(d) A child adjudicated as a dependent child, his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian, attorney, guardian ad litem, if any, foster parents if there are foster parents, any preadoptive parent or relatives providing care for such child, and other parties shall be given written notice of a permanency plan hearing at least five days in advance of such hearing and shall be advised that the permanency plan recommended by DFCS will be submitted to the court for consideration as the order of the court.

(e) The court shall consult with the child adjudicated as a dependent child, in an age-appropriate manner, regarding the proposed permanency plan for such child.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-230, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Private cause of action. — Following factors were relevant in determining whether a private remedy was implicit in a statute not expressly providing one: first, was the plaintiff one of the class for whose special benefit the statute was enacted; second, was there any indication of legislative intent, explicit or implicit, either to create such a remedy or to deny one; third, was it consistent with the underlying purpose of the legislative scheme to imply such a remedy for plaintiff? When foster children alleged that certain child services agencies and officials violated former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(c) and (o)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-201 and 15-11-230), then the former statute conferred upon the children a private cause of action. Kenny A. v. Perdue, 218 F.R.D. 277 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 18, 2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

15-11-231. Permanency plan report.

At least five days prior to the permanency plan hearing, DFCS shall submit for the court's consideration a report recommending a permanency plan for a child adjudicated as a dependent child. The report shall include documentation of the steps to be taken by DFCS to finalize the permanent placement for such child and shall include, but not be limited to:

(1) The name, address, and telephone number of such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(2) The date on which such child was removed from his or her home and the date on which such child was placed in foster care;

(3) The location and type of home or facility in which such child is currently held or placed and the location and type of home or facility in which such child will be placed;

(4) The basis for the decision to hold such child in protective custody or to place such child outside of his or her home;

(5) A statement as to the availability of a safe and appropriate placement with a fit and willing relative of such child or other persons who have demonstrated an ongoing commitment to a child or a statement as to why placement with the relative or other person is not safe or appropriate;

(6) If as a result of the placement such child has been or will be transferred from the school in which such child is or most recently was enrolled, documentation that a placement that would maintain such child in that school is unavailable, inappropriate, or that such child's transfer to another school would be in such child's best interests;

(7) A plan for ensuring the safety and appropriateness of the placement and a description of the services provided to meet the needs of such child and his or her family, including a discussion of services that have been investigated and considered and are not available or likely to become available within a reasonable time to meet the needs of such child or, if available, why such services are not safe or appropriate;

(8) The goal of the permanency plan which shall include:

(A) Whether and, if applicable, when such child shall be returned to his or her parent;

(B) Whether and, if applicable, when such child shall be referred for termination of parental rights and adoption;

(C) Whether and, if applicable, when such child shall be placed with a permanent guardian; or

(D) In the case in which DFCS has documented a compelling reason that none of the options identified in subparagraphs (A) through (C) of this paragraph would be in the best interests of the child who has attained the age of 16 years old, whether, and if applicable, when such child shall be placed in another planned permanent living arrangement;

(8.1) The documentation listed in paragraph (14) of subsection (b) of Code Section 15-11-201;

(9) If a child adjudicated as a dependent child is 14 years of age or older, a description of the programs and services that are or will be provided to assist such child in preparing for the transition from foster care to independent living. The description shall include all of the following:

(A) The anticipated age at which such child will be discharged from foster care;

(B) The anticipated amount of time available in which to prepare such child for the transition from foster care to independent living;

(C) The anticipated location and living situation of such child on discharge from foster care;

(D) A description of the assessment processes, tools, and methods that have been or will be used to determine the programs and services that are or will be provided to assist such child in preparing for the transition from foster care to independent living; and

(E) The rationale for each program or service that is or will be provided to assist such child in preparing for the transition from foster care to independent living, the time frames for delivering such programs or services, and the intended outcome of such programs or services;

(10) When the recommended permanency plan is referral for termination of parental rights and adoption or placement in another home, a description of specific recruitment efforts such as the use of state, regional, and national adoption exchanges, including electronic exchange systems, to facilitate orderly and timely in-state and interstate placements; and

(11) For a child who remains placed in a qualified residential treatment program, documentation that:

(A) Ongoing assessment of the strengths and needs of the child continues to support the determination that the needs of the child cannot be met through placement in a foster family home;

(B) Placement in a qualified residential treatment program provides the most effective and appropriate level of care for the child in the least restrictive environment;

(C) Placement in a qualified residential treatment program is consistent with the short-term and long-term goals for the child, as specified in the permanency plan for the child;

(D) The specific treatment or service needs that will be met for the child in the placement and the length of time the child is expected to need the treatment or services; and

(E) The efforts made by the department to prepare the child to return home or to be placed with a fit and willing relative, a legal guardian, or an adoptive parent, or in a foster family home.

The 2019 amendment, effective May 7, 2019, deleted "and" at the end of subparagraph (9)(E), substituted "; and" for a period at the end of paragraph (10), and added paragraph (11).

The 2020 amendment, effective July 29, 2020, part of an Act to revise, modernize, and correct the Code, substituted "short-term and long-term" for "short- and long-term" in subparagraph (11)(C).

15-11-232. Permanency plan hearing; findings.

(a) At the permanency plan hearing, the court shall make written findings of fact that include the following:

(1) Whether DFCS has made reasonable efforts to finalize the permanency plan which is in effect at the time of the hearing;

(2) The continuing necessity for and the safety and appropriateness of the placement;

(3) Compliance with the permanency plan by DFCS, parties, and any other service providers;

(4) Efforts to involve appropriate service providers in addition to DFCS staff in planning to meet the special needs of a child adjudicated as a dependent child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(5) Efforts to eliminate the causes for the placement of a child adjudicated as a dependent child outside of his or her home and toward returning such child safely to his or her home or obtaining a permanent placement for such child;

(6) The date by which it is likely that a child adjudicated as a dependent child will be returned to his or her home, placed for adoption, or placed with a permanent guardian or in some other alternative permanent placement;

(7) Whether, in the case of a child adjudicated as a dependent child placed out of state, the out-of-state placement continues to be appropriate and in the best interests of such child;

(8) In the case of a child adjudicated as a dependent child who is 14 years of age or older, the services needed to assist such child to make a transition from foster care to independent living;

(9) In the case of a child for whom another planned permanent living arrangement is the permanency plan:

(A) Whether DFCS has documented intensive, ongoing, and, as of the date of the hearing, unsuccessful efforts to return the child to the home or to secure a placement for the child with a fit and willing relative, a legal guardian, or an adoptive parent, including through efforts that utilize search technology, including social media, to find biological family members for the children;

(B) Whether DFCS has documented the steps it is taking to ensure that the child's foster family home or child care institution is following the reasonable and prudent parent standard and the child has regular, ongoing opportunities to engage in age or developmentally appropriate activities, including by consulting with the child in an age-appropriate manner about the opportunities of the child to participate in the activities; and

(C) After asking the child, what his or her desired permanency outcome is;

(10) If a child has attained the age of 14 years old, whether the permanency plan developed for the child, and any revision or addition to the plan, was developed in consultation with the child and, at the option of the child, with not more than two members of the permanency planning team who were selected by the child and who are not a foster parent of or caseworker for the child in accordance with subparagraph (A) of paragraph (15) of Code Section 15-11-201; and

(11) In the case of a child placed in a qualified residential treatment program:

(A) Whether DFCS has documented ongoing assessments of the strengths and needs of the child that continues to support the determination that the needs of the child cannot be met through placement in a foster family home;

(B) Whether DFCS has documented that placement in a qualified residential treatment program provides the most effective and appropriate level of care for the child in the least restrictive environment;

(C) Whether DFCS has documented that the child's placement in a qualified residential treatment program is consistent with the short-term and long-term goals for the child, as specified in the permanency plan for the child;

(D) Whether DFCS has documented the specific treatment or service needs that will be met for the child in the placement and the length of time the child is expected to need the treatment or services; and

(E) Whether DFCS has documented their efforts to prepare the child to return home or to be placed with a fit and willing relative, a legal guardian, or an adoptive parent, or in a foster family home.

(b) The permanency plan incorporated in the court's order shall include:

(1) Whether and, if applicable, when a child adjudicated as a dependent child shall be returned to his or her parent;

(2) Whether and, if applicable, when a child adjudicated as a dependent child shall be referred for termination of parental rights and adoption;

(3) Whether and, if applicable, when a child adjudicated as a dependent child shall be placed with a permanent guardian; or

(4) In the case in which DFCS has documented a compelling reason that none of the options identified in paragraphs (1) through (3) of this subsection would be in the best interests of the child, whether, and if applicable, when such child shall be placed in another planned permanent living arrangement.

(c) If the court finds, as of the date of the hearing, that another planned permanent living arrangement is in the best interests of a child who has attained the age of 16 years old, the court shall make findings of fact explaining such determination and, in its order, provide compelling reasons why it is not or continues to not be in a child's best interests to be returned to his or her parent, referred for termination of parental rights and adoption, placed with a permanent guardian, or placed with a fit and willing relative.

(d) A supplemental order of the court adopting the permanency plan including all requirements of the permanency plan as provided in Code

Section 15-11-231 shall be entered following the permanency hearing and in no case later than 30 days after the court has determined that reunification efforts shall not be made by DFCS. The supplemental order shall include a requirement that the DFCS case manager and staff and, as appropriate, other representatives of a child adjudicated as a dependent child provide such child with assistance and support in developing a transition plan that is personalized at the direction of such child; includes specific options on housing, health insurance, education, local opportunities for mentors and continuing support services, and work force supports and employment services; and is as detailed as such child may elect in the 90 day period immediately prior to the date on which he or she will attain 18 years of age.

The 2019 amendment, effective May 7, 2019, deleted "and" at the end of subparagraph (a)(9)(C), substituted "; and" for a period at the end of paragraph (a)(10), and added paragraph (a)(11).

The 2020 amendment, effective July 29, 2020, part of an Act to revise, modernize, and correct the Code, substituted "short-term and long-term" for "short- and long-term" in subparagraph (a)(11)(C).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-41 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-2, which were subsequently repealed by were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Statute of limitations. — Since the father's petition was filed within the two-year limitation required by former subsection (d) (now subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-232)), but the hearing was not held in the juvenile court until after the expiration of that period and the mother requested and received a further continuance, the mother's appearance and participation in the hearing without proper objection before or at trial constituted a waiver of such procedural defects. Page v. Shuff, 160 Ga. App. 866, 288 S.E.2d 582 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Parent with schizophrenia. — Evidence supported the finding that a child was deprived within the meaning of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107), and that termination of the mother's parental rights was in the child's best interest, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320), because the mother, who was homeless and suffering from schizophrenia, failed to maintain contact with the agency or visit with the child for more than one year, and the mother never accomplished court-ordered goals for reunification or demonstrated the ability to adequately care for the child. In the Interest of S.G., 271 Ga. App. 776, 611 S.E.2d 86 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Child was deprived as defined in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-107) because the mother had borderline intellectual functioning and was at a high risk of engaging in physical child abuse, the child was a special needs child with developmental disorders and physical problems who was not being properly supervised in a dirty home where there was little food, the mother needed long-term intensive psychological treatment but failed to obtain counseling and stopped taking her medications, and the mother failed to support the child or to comply with case plan goals. In the Interest of A.K., 272 Ga. App. 429, 612 S.E.2d 581 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

15-11-233. Termination of parental rights; exceptions.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, DFCS shall file a petition to terminate the parental rights of a parent of a child adjudicated as a dependent child or, if such a petition has been filed by another party, seek to be joined as a party to the petition, and, concurrently, to identify, recruit, process, and approve a qualified family for an adoption if:

(1) A child adjudicated as a dependent child has been in foster care under the responsibility of DFCS for 15 of the most recent 22 months;

(2) The court has made a determination that the parent has subjected his or her child to aggravated circumstances; or

(3) The court has made a determination that the parent of a child adjudicated as a dependent child has been convicted of:

(A) The murder of another child of such parent;

(B) Murder in the second degree of another child of such parent;

(C) Voluntary manslaughter of another child of such parent;

(D) Voluntary manslaughter of the other parent of such child;

(E) Aiding or abetting, attempting, conspiring, or soliciting to commit murder or voluntary manslaughter of another child of such parent;

(F) Aiding or abetting, attempting, conspiring, or soliciting to commit murder or voluntary manslaughter of the other parent of such child; or

(G) Committing felony assault that has resulted in serious bodily injury to such child or to another child of such parent.

(b) Termination of parental rights may not be in the best interests of a child adjudicated as a dependent child when:

(1) Such child is being cared for by his or her relative;

(2) The case plan documents a compelling reason for determining that filing such a petition would not be in the best interests of such child. Such compelling reasons may include, but not be limited to:

(A) A parent of such child is successfully participating in services that will make it possible for his or her child to safely return home;

(B) Another permanency plan is better suited to meet the health and safety needs of such child. Documentation that another permanent plan is better suited to meet the health and safety needs of such child may include documentation that:

(i) Such child is 14 years of age or older and objects to termination of parental rights. Prior to accepting a child's objection, the court shall personally question such child in chambers to determine whether the objection is a voluntary and knowing choice;

(ii) Such child is 16 years of age or older and specifically requests that emancipation be established as his or her permanent plan;

(iii) The parent of such child and such child have a significant bond, but such parent is unable to care for such child because of an emotional or physical disability and such child's caregiver has committed to raising such child to the age of majority and facilitating visitation with such disabled parent; or

(iv) Such child is in a residential treatment facility that provides services specifically designed to address his or her treatment needs and the court determines that his or her needs could not be served by a less restrictive placement;

(C) Such child is living with his or her relative who is unable or unwilling to adopt such child, but who is willing and capable of providing such child with a stable and permanent home environment and the removal of such child from the physical custody of his or her relative would be detrimental to such child's emotional well-being;

(D) The court or judicial citizen review panel, in a prior hearing or review, determined that while the case plan was to reunify the family, DFCS did not make reasonable efforts; or

(E) Such child is an unaccompanied refugee or there are international legal obligations or foreign policy reasons that would preclude terminating parental rights; or

(3) DFCS has not provided to the family of such child services deemed necessary for his or her safe return to his or her home, consistent with the specific time frames for the accomplishment of the case plan goals.

(c) The recommendation by DFCS that termination of parental rights is not in the best interests of a child shall be based on the present family circumstances of such child and shall not preclude a different recommendation at a later date if the family circumstances of a child adjudicated as a dependent child change.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

In light of the reenactment of this chapter, effective January 1, 2014, the reader is advised to consult the annotations following Code Section 15-11-202, which may also be applicable to this Code section.

Custody by Department suspends parental right. — Removal of custody of the child from the parents is a determination that, for whatever length of time custody is exercised by the Department of Family and Children Services, this right has been suspended, although not finally terminated. Rodgers v. Department of Human Resources, 157 Ga. App. 235, 276 S.E.2d 902 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2701).

No equal protection violation. — Treating deprived children who were placed in the legal custody of the Department of Families and Children Services because there was no relative committed to the child who was available for immediate placement differently from deprived children who did have a committed parent or guardian available for immediate placement did not violate the equal protection clause or Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. II. as the classes were not similarly situated and the laws were rationally related to the goal of minimizing government intervention while ensuring that children were reared in a familial environment. In the Interest of A.N., 281 Ga. 58, 636 S.E.2d 496 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Extension of temporary custody proper. — Juvenile court did not err in granting a motion filed by a county department of family and children services (DFCS) to extend the department's temporary custody of a mother's children because any procedural defect in the commencement of the case was rendered moot when DFCS thereafter filed new deprivation petitions, new adjudicatory hearings were held on those petitions, and the juvenile court then entered orders granting those petitions and finding that the children continued to be deprived; although the record did not contain an original deprivation order entered by the juvenile court, the record reflected that DFCS subsequently filed new deprivation petitions while the children remained in the department's care, and the juvenile court conducted adjudicatory hearings on those new petitions and then entered orders finding that the children were deprived. In the Interest of Q.A., 306 Ga. App. 386, 702 S.E.2d 701 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Juvenile court did not err in granting a motion filed by a county department of family and children services to extend the department's temporary custody of a mother's children because clear and convincing evidence supported the juvenile court's conclusion that a prior deprivation order needed to be extended in order to accomplish the order's purpose of ensuring the safety and well-being of the children while the mother completed her reunification plan and prepared for the transition of her children back into her home; there was testimony at the hearing on the extension motion reflecting that the mother had not completed her reunification case plan goals of obtaining stable employment, submitting to random drug screens, and attending scheduled visitations with her children. In the Interest of Q.A., 306 Ga. App. 386, 702 S.E.2d 701 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Temporary custody and visitation rights. — Juvenile court had jurisdiction to modify an order granting temporary custody of a deprived child to the Department of Family and Children Services and to permit visitation by parents who filed a petition for visitation rights four months after the custody order. In re K.B., 188 Ga. App. 199, 372 S.E.2d 476 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Parent's burden of proof when seeking modification. — Trial court erred in requiring a father to prove by clear and convincing proof that changed circumstances warranted modification of an order placing the father's children with their maternal aunts; the father retained an interest in the children sufficient to support a right to petition for modification, and the father was only required to prove the motion by a preponderance of the evidence. In re J. N., 302 Ga. App. 631, 691 S.E.2d 396 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

15-11-240. Appointment of permanent guardian; jurisdiction; findings.

(a) In addition to the jurisdiction to appoint guardians pursuant to Code Section 15-11-13, the juvenile court shall be vested with jurisdiction to appoint a permanent guardian for a child adjudicated as a dependent child in accordance with this article. Prior to the entry of such an order, the court shall:

(1) Find that reasonable efforts to reunify such child with his or her parents would be detrimental to such child or find that the living parents of such child have consented to the permanent guardianship;

(2) Find that termination of parental rights and adoption is not in the best interests of such child;

(3) Find that the proposed permanent guardian can provide a safe and permanent home for such child;

(4) Find that the appointment of a permanent guardian for such child is in the best interests of such child and that the individual chosen as such child's permanent guardian is the individual most appropriate to be such child's permanent guardian taking into consideration the best interests of the child; and

(5) If such child is 14 years of age or older, find that the appointment of a permanent guardian for such child is in the best interests of such child and that the individual chosen by such child as the child's permanent guardian is the individual most appropriate to be such child's permanent guardian taking into consideration the best interests of the child.

(b) The court may enter an order of support on behalf of a child against the parents of such child in accordance with paragraph (7) of subsection (a) of Code Section 15-11-212.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-302, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-6 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-30.1, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Jurisdiction of juvenile court in transferred custody proceeding. — In a custody proceeding transferred from the superior court, the juvenile court was authorized to issue an order restraining the future disclosure of information contained in the juvenile court's files and records and to punish for contempt any past unauthorized disclosure of that material. In re Burton, 271 Ga. 491, 521 S.E.2d 568 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Georgia Supreme Court affirmed the transfer of a father's petition for custody from Gwinnett County, Georgia, to Douglas County, Georgia because the "complaint for custody" that the father filed in Gwinnett County fairly was read as a petition to modify, vacate, or revoke the permanent guardianship, a petition over which the Juvenile Court of Douglas County had exclusive jurisdiction under the circumstances. In the Interest of M. F., 298 Ga. 138, 780 S.E.2d 291 (2015).

Notice and hearing requirements of Juvenile Code mandatory. — Juvenile court committed reversible error in granting the children's paternal grandparents custody and guardianship of the children because the court failed to follow the statutory mandates outlined in the Juvenile Code as the mother did not consent to transfer of permanent guardianship and no guardianship petition was filed and provided to the mother with notice of proceedings. In the Interest of J. C., 350 Ga. App. 34, 827 S.E.2d 717 (2019).

Adoption, not guardianship, in child's best interest. — Evidence authorized a juvenile court's finding that the termination of a parent's parental rights and the award of the child's permanent custody to DFCS to place for adoption with the child's foster family were in the child's best interest; there was sufficient evidence to support the juvenile court's denial of the parent's request that the child's grandmother be appointed guardian. The grandmother had already been determined unsuitable. In the Interest of S. P., 336 Ga. App. 488, 784 S.E.2d 846 (2016).

Appointment of permanent guardian proper. — Trial court was authorized to conclude that the permanent guardian demonstrated by clear and convincing evidence that the appointment of a permanent guardian would be in the child's best interest as the mother had not completed her case plan, the child had experienced chronic neglect, and the mother lacked the necessary skills to meet the child's severe needs and ensure she received the essential services she was entitled to. In the Interest of K. G., 344 Ga. App. 674, 811 S.E.2d 451 (2018).

Award of permanent guardianship affirmed. — Award of permanent guardianship to the aunt was affirmed because the parent gave no reason to believe that any objection to taking judicial notice of the deprivation order would have had any merit, nor did the parent identify specific evidence that the parent would have brought forward to challenge the earlier deprivation order. In the Interest of L. B., 319 Ga. App. 173, 735 S.E.2d 162 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.1).

Guardian's petition for permanent guardianship was properly granted as reasonable efforts to reunify the child with the mother would be detrimental to the child because the child was born with Down Syndrome and a congenital heart defect, and had special needs; the mother made no efforts to obtain support or to prepare for the child's birth, even though the child would require services immediately; the mother was unable to get along with the child's service providers to the point that the providers did not want to continue providing services to the child; and the mother lacked the necessary skills to be able to meet the child's severe needs and the ability to ensure that the child received the services to which the child was entitled. In the Interest of K. G., 343 Ga. App. 345, 807 S.E.2d 70 (2017).

Guardianship of a child under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-240 was upheld based on evidence specifically showing, in light of the child's diagnosed disorders, continued uncertainty about the child's living situation and guardianship, and the mother's history of drug use and current lack of established, long-term stability and sobriety. In the Interest of J. W., 346 Ga. App. 443, 816 S.E.2d 409 (2018).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Jurisdiction to appoint guardians for children. — Former statute implicitly recognized that courts other than juvenile courts had jurisdiction to appoint guardians for children. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U76-15 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-302).

Support proceedings. — Subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15) authorized the superior court to transfer to the juvenile court support cases not involving a question of paternity as well as those support proceedings originating from a court-established support unit in the judicial circuit. 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U89-7 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Superior court may not transfer a Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act proceeding to a juvenile court under subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15). 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U89-7 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Paternity questions. — Since no provision under subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15) would permit the transfer of paternity questions to a juvenile court, no case in which paternity was involved may be transferred under that statute by a superior court to a juvenile court. 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U89-7 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Permanent custody determination upon divorce decree. — When a superior court transfers the question of custody determination to a juvenile court pursuant to subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15), the juvenile court may make only a temporary custody determination pending the outcome of the divorce action; but if the divorce decree is entered the juvenile court can then make a permanent custody determination. 1994 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U94-1 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

15-11-241. Petition for permanent guardian.

The petition for the appointment of a permanent guardian pursuant to this part shall set forth:

(1) The facts upon which the court's jurisdiction is based;

(2) The name and date of birth of the child adjudicated as a dependent child;

(3) The name, address, and county of domicile of the petitioner and the petitioner's relationship to such child, if any, and, if different from the petitioner, the name, address, and county of domicile of the individual nominated by the petitioner to serve as guardian and that individual's relationship to such child, if any;

(4) A statement that:

(A) Reasonable efforts to reunify such child with his or her parents would be detrimental to such child;

(B) Termination of parental rights and adoption is not in the best interests of such child;

(C) The proposed guardian can provide a safe and permanent home for such child;

(D) The appointment of a permanent guardian for such child is in the best interests of such child and that the individual chosen as such child's guardian is the individual most appropriate to be such child's permanent guardian taking into consideration the best interests of the child; and

(E) If such child is 14 years of age or older, that the appointment of a permanent guardian for such child is in the best interests of the child and that the individual chosen by such child as the child's permanent guardian is the most appropriate individual to be such child's permanent guardian taking into consideration the best interests of the child;

(5) Whether such child was born out of wedlock and, if so, the name and address of the biological father, if known;

(6) Whether, to the petitioner's knowledge, there exists any notarized or witnessed document made by a parent of such child that deals with the guardianship of such child and the name and address of any designee named in the document;

(7) In addition to the petitioner and the nominated guardian and, if the parent of such child has not consented to the permanent guardianship, the names and addresses of the following relatives of such child whose parents' whereabouts are known:

(A) The adult siblings of such child; provided, however, that not more than three adult siblings need to be listed;

(B) If there is no adult sibling of such child, the grandparents of such child; provided, however, that not more than three grandparents need to be listed; or

(C) If there is no grandparent of such child, any three of the nearest adult relatives of such child determined according to Code Section 53-2-1;

(8) Whether a temporary guardian has been appointed for such child or a petition for the appointment of a temporary guardian has been filed or is being filed; and

(9) The reason for any omission in the petition for appointment of a permanent guardian for such child in the event full particulars are lacking.

Petition lacked required information. — Because the mother did not consent to the guardianship, given the mandatory language of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-241, and the juvenile court's obligation to determine whether the grandmother was the individual most appropriate to be the child's permanent guardian, the trial court erred by granting the grandmother's petition because the court lacked the information required by § 15-11-241(7) and (9), including the names and addresses of relatives. In the Interest of N. J., 335 Ga. App. 477, 781 S.E.2d 585 (2016).

Att'y Gen. No. U89-7 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Superior court may not transfer a Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act proceeding to a juvenile court under subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15). 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U89-7 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Paternity questions. — Since no provision under subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15) would permit the transfer of paternity questions to a juvenile court, no case in which paternity was involved may be transferred under that statute by a superior court to a juvenile court. 1989 Op. 15-11-242. Effect of guardianship order.

(a) Permanent guardianship orders entered pursuant to Code Section 15-11-240 shall:

(1) Remain in effect until the child adjudicated as a dependent child reaches the age of 18 or becomes emancipated;

(2) Not be subject to review by the court except as provided in Code Section 15-11-244; and

(3) Establish a reasonable visitation schedule which allows the child adjudicated as a dependent child to maintain meaningful contact with his or her parents through personal visits, telephone calls, letters, or other forms of communication or specifically include any restriction on a parent's right to visitation.

(b) A permanent guardian shall have the rights and duties of a permanent guardian as provided in Code Sections 29-2-21, 29-2-22, and 29-2-23 and shall take the oath required of a guardian as provided in Code Section 29-2-24.

Permanent custody determination upon divorce decree. — When a superior court transfers the question of custody determination to a juvenile court pursuant to subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15), the juvenile court may make only a temporary custody determination pending the outcome of the divorce action; but if the divorce decree is entered the juvenile court can then make a permanent custody determination. 1994 Op. 15-11-243. Notice and permanent guardianship hearing.

(a) Notice of a guardianship petition pursuant to this part shall be given to a parent of the child who was adjudicated as a dependent child and shall also be given in accordance with subsection (c) of Code Section 29-2-17 except that, if the parents have consented to the guardianship, notice of the petition shall not be required to be given to:

(1) The adult siblings of the child who was adjudicated as a dependent child;

(2) The grandparents of the child who was adjudicated as a dependent child; or

(3) The nearest adult relatives of the child who was adjudicated as a dependent child as determined in accordance with Code Section 53-2-1.

(b) The hearing shall be conducted in accordance with Code Section 29-2-18 to determine the best interests of the child who was adjudicated as a dependent child, and in reaching its determination the court shall consider Code Section 15-11-240.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-302, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-6 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-30.1, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Notice and hearing requirements of Juvenile Code mandatory. — Juvenile court committed reversible error in granting the children's paternal grandparents custody and guardianship of the children because the court failed to follow the statutory mandates outlined in the Juvenile Code as the mother did not consent to the transfer of permanent guardianship and no guardianship petition was filed and provided to the mother with the notice of proceedings. In the Interest of J. C., 350 Ga. App. 34, 827 S.E.2d 717 (2019).

Jurisdiction of juvenile court in transferred custody proceeding. — In a custody proceeding transferred from the superior court, the juvenile court was authorized to issue an order restraining the future disclosure of information contained in the juvenile court's files and records and to punish for contempt any past unauthorized disclosure of that material. In re Burton, 271 Ga. 491, 521 S.E.2d 568 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Award of permanent guardianship affirmed. — Award of permanent guardianship to the aunt was affirmed because the parent gave no reason to believe that any objection to taking judicial notice of the deprivation order would have had any merit, nor did the parent identify specific evidence that the parent would have brought forward to challenge the earlier deprivation order. In the Interest of L. B., 319 Ga. App. 173, 735 S.E.2d 162 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.1).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Support proceedings. — Subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15) authorized the superior court to transfer to the juvenile court support cases not involving a question of paternity as well as those support proceedings originating from a court-established support unit in the judicial circuit. 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U89-7 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Superior court may not transfer a Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act proceeding to a juvenile court under subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15). 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U89-7 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Paternity questions. — Since no provision under subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15) would permit the transfer of paternity questions to a juvenile court, no case in which paternity was involved may be transferred under that statute by a superior court to a juvenile court. 1989 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U89-7 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Permanent custody determination upon divorce decree. — When a superior court transfers the question of custody determination to a juvenile court pursuant to subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15), the juvenile court may make only a temporary custody determination pending the outcome of the divorce action; but if the divorce decree is entered the juvenile court can then make a permanent custody determination. 1994 Op. 15-11-244. Modification of permanent guardianship order.

(a) The court shall retain jurisdiction over a guardianship action under this part for the sole purpose of entering an order following the filing of a petition to modify, vacate, or revoke the guardianship and appoint a new guardian.

(b) The superior courts shall have concurrent jurisdiction for enforcement or modification of any child support or visitation order entered pursuant to Code Section 15-11-240.

(c) The guardianship shall be modified, vacated, or revoked based upon a finding, by clear and convincing evidence, that there has been a material change in the circumstances of the child who was adjudicated as a dependent child or the guardian and that such modification, vacation, or revocation of the guardianship order and the appointment of a new guardian is in the best interests of the child. Appointment of a new guardian shall be subject to the provisions of Code Sections 15-11-240 and 15-11-241.

In re Burton, 271 Ga. 491, 521 S.E.2d 568 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Restoration of fitness to previously unfit parent. — Juvenile court erred when the court dismissed a father's petition because by alleging a restoration to fitness, the father alleged a material change in circumstances to change the permanent guardianship of the child and, therefore, stated a claim under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-244 upon which relief might properly be granted so long as the father proved that material change in circumstances clearly and convincingly and that custody was now in the child's best interest. In the Interest of M. F., 298 Ga. 138, 780 S.E.2d 291 (2015).

Restoration of fitness is material change of condition. — Georgia Supreme Court holds that it is not unreasonable to understand O.C.G.A. § 15-11-244(c) to include the restoration of fitness to a previously unfit parent as among the material changes in the circumstances of a child that would permit a modification, vacatur, or revocation of a permanent guardianship. In the Interest of M. F., 298 Ga. 138, 780 S.E.2d 291 (2015).

Award of permanent guardianship affirmed. — Award of permanent guardianship to the aunt was affirmed because the parent gave no reason to believe that any objection to taking judicial notice of the deprivation order would have had any merit, nor did the parent identify specific evidence that the parent would have brought forward to challenge the earlier deprivation order. Order of visitation improper. — Juvenile court erred by granting visitation to the guardians and ordering the father to undergo counseling because the juvenile court's order revoked the guardianship and, thus, left the juvenile court without authority or jurisdiction to place the complained of restraints upon the father's custodial rights. In the Interest of M. F., 345 Ga. App. 550, 813 S.E.2d 786 (2018).

TERMINATION OF PARENTAL RIGHTS

Law reviews. — For article, "Toward a Parent-Inclusive Attorney-Client Privilege," see 53 Ga. L. Rev. 991 (2019).

PART 1

GENERAL PROVISIONS

15-11-260. Purpose of article.

(a) The purpose of this article is:

(1) To protect a child who has been adjudicated as a dependent child from his or her parent who is unwilling or unable to provide safety and care adequate to meet such child's physical, emotional, and mental health needs by providing a judicial process for the termination of all parental rights and responsibilities;

(2) To eliminate the need for a child who has been adjudicated as a dependent child to wait unreasonable periods of time for his or her parent to correct the conditions which prevent his or her return to the family;

(3) To ensure that the continuing needs of a child who has been alleged or adjudged to be a dependent child for proper physical, mental, and emotional growth and development are the decisive considerations in all proceedings;

(4) To ensure that the constitutional rights of all parties are recognized and enforced in all proceedings conducted pursuant to this article while ensuring that the fundamental needs of a child are not subjugated to the interests of others; and

(5) To encourage stability in the life of a child who has been adjudicated as a dependent child and has been removed from his or her home by ensuring that all proceedings are conducted expeditiously to avoid delays in resolving the status of the parent and in achieving permanency for such child.

(b) Nothing in this article shall be construed as affecting the rights of a parent who is not the subject of the proceedings.

15-11-260.1. Exemption when governed by Indian Child Welfare Act.

A proceeding under this article shall not be subject to this article to the extent that it is governed by the Indian Child Welfare Act, P.L. 95-608, as amended, Chapter 21 of Title 25 of the United States Code. In those circumstances, compliance with such federal law shall be required.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-260.1, enacted by Ga. L. 2019, p. 893, § 8/SB 225.

15-11-261. Scope, effect, and duration of order terminating parental rights.

(a) An order terminating the parental rights of a parent shall be without limit as to duration and shall divest the parent and his or her child of all legal rights, powers, privileges, immunities, duties, and obligations with respect to each other, except:

(1) The right of such child to receive child support from his or her parent until a final order of adoption is entered;

(2) The right of such child to inherit from and through his or her parent. The right of inheritance of such child shall be terminated only by a final order of adoption; and

(3) The right of such child to pursue any civil action against his or her parent.

(b) When an order terminating the parent and child relationship has been issued, the parent whose right has been terminated shall not thereafter be entitled to notice of proceedings for the adoption of his or her child by another, nor has the parent any right to object to the adoption or otherwise to participate in such proceedings.

(c) The relationship between a child and his or her siblings shall not be severed until that relationship is terminated by final order of adoption.

(d) A relative whose relationship to a child is derived through the parent whose parental rights are terminated shall be considered to be a relative of such child for purposes of placement of, and permanency plan for, such child until such relationship is terminated by final order of adoption.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under Ga. L. 1971, pp. 709, 748, former Code 1933, § 24A-3203, and pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-80, and former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-53 which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Application of changed statutory provisions on appeal. — There are no vested rights that would be impaired by applying on appeal the new law of termination of parental rights to a case, even though the old law was in effect at the time of the trial; and, moreover, the retrial of the case under the provisions concerning termination of parental rights might have a salutary effect. In re L.L.B., 256 Ga. 768, 353 S.E.2d 507 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-80).

Petition need not state effect of order. — Parent was presumed to be cognizant of former statutory provisions, which establishes the legal effect of the order. The petition need not clearly state the effect of an order for termination of parental rights. Moss v. Moss, 135 Ga. App. 401, 218 S.E.2d 93 (1975) (decided under former Ga. L. 1971, pp. 709, 748).

Former statute was clear statement that right of inheritance in case of intestacy ceased both as to the parent from the child and as to the child from the parent. Spence v. Levi, 133 Ga. App. 581, 211 S.E.2d 622 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3203).

Conclusive presumption of dependency created by O.C.G.A. § 34-9-13 is not defeated by the termination of parental rights. Menard v. Fairchild, 254 Ga. 275, 328 S.E.2d 721 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-53).

Support considered obligation. — Child support is an obligation under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-80 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-261) such that a parent whose rights have been terminated was not subject to a subsequent judicial proceeding under O.C.G.A. § 19-11-1 to provide reimbursal payments of government dispensed child assistance benefits. Department of Human Resources v. Ammons, 206 Ga. App. 805, 426 S.E.2d 901 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-80).

15-11-262. Right to attorney and appointment of guardian ad litem.

(a) A child and any other party to a proceeding under this article shall have the right to an attorney at all stages of the proceedings under this article.

(b) The court shall appoint an attorney for a child in a termination of parental rights proceeding. The appointment shall be made as soon as practicable to ensure adequate representation of such child and, in any event, before the first court hearing that may substantially affect the interests of such child.

(c) A child's attorney owes to a child the duties imposed by the law of this state in an attorney-client relationship.

(d) The court shall appoint a guardian ad litem for a child in a termination proceeding; provided, however, that such guardian ad litem may be the same person as the child's attorney unless or until there is a conflict of interest between the attorney's duty to such child as such child's attorney and the attorney's considered opinion of such child's best interests as guardian ad litem.

(e) The court shall appoint a CASA to serve as guardian ad litem whenever possible, and a CASA may be appointed in addition to an attorney who is serving as a guardian ad litem.

(f) The role of a guardian ad litem in a termination of parental rights proceeding shall be the same role as provided for in all dependency proceedings under Article 3 of this chapter.

(g) If an attorney or guardian ad litem has been appointed to represent a child in a prior proceeding under this chapter, the court, when possible, shall appoint the same attorney to represent such child in any subsequent proceeding.

(h) An attorney appointed to represent a child in a termination proceeding shall continue the representation in any subsequent appeals unless excused by the court.

(i) Unless authorized by the court, neither a child or a representative of a child may waive the right to any attorney in a termination proceeding.

(j) A party other than a child shall be informed of his or her right to an attorney prior to the adjudication hearing and prior to any other hearing at which a party could be subjected to the loss of residual parental rights. A party other than a child shall be given an opportunity to:

(1) Obtain and employ an attorney of the party's own choice;

(2) To obtain a court appointed attorney if the court determines that the party is an indigent person; or

(3) Waive the right to an attorney.

Judgment vacated because no attorney appointed. — In any case involving termination of parental rights in which no attorney was appointed by the trial court to represent the interests of the child, the judgment must be vacated and the case remanded to the juvenile court for retrial. In re J.D.H., 188 Ga. App. 466, 373 S.E.2d 279 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-85).

When, in a termination of parental rights proceeding, indigent counsel appeared with the child's mother, but was unsure if the mother qualified for the counsel's services, it was error for the trial court to dismiss the indigent counsel and require the mother to proceed without an attorney without determining if the mother was indigent at the time of the hearing because the entire legislative scheme written into the pertinent provision of the Juvenile Code was intended to provide an indigent parent with effective representation at all stages of any proceeding involving the termination of parental rights under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-98(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-262). In the Interest of A.M.A., 270 Ga. App. 769, 607 S.E.2d 916 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-98).

Court is not required to appoint an attorney in adoption proceedings since the adoption statutes did not require the appointing of an attorney for the child. Arrington v. Hand, 193 Ga. App. 457, 388 S.E.2d 52 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-85).

Appointing counsel for child. — It was not error, in a termination of parental rights proceeding, for the trial court not to appoint counsel for the child, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-98(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-262), in addition to the child's guardian ad litem, as the trial court specifically found that the guardian ad litem discharged those duties as the child's counsel. In the Interest of A.M.A., 270 Ga. App. 769, 607 S.E.2d 916 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-98).

Denial of continuance to obtain counsel. — In a termination of parental rights case when the trial court denied one parent's motion for a continuance to obtain counsel because the parent had already been given six weeks' notice of the hearing and instructions on how to apply for appointed counsel, reversal was not required; even if the trial court erred in not continuing the hearing, the parent did not show what, if any, harm the parent suffered from the absence of counsel. In the Interest of J.A.S., 287 Ga. App. 125, 650 S.E.2d 788 (2007), overruled on other grounds, In re J.M.B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-98).

Dual appointment not improper. — In a termination of parental rights case, there was no merit to a mother's argument that it was error to appoint the same person as the children's attorney and as their guardian ad litem (GAL) because the attorney's obligation to advocate for the children's desire to be returned to the mother conflicted with the requirement that the GAL advocate in the best interests of the children. Such a dual appointment had been expressly approved by the legislature in enacting former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-98(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-262) and involved no conflict of interest because the fundamental duty of both a GAL and an attorney was to act in the best interests of the party represented; furthermore, as the mother's argument was an implicit admission that being returned to her was not in the children's best interests, even if a separate attorney had been appointed to represent the expressed desires of the children, the trial court would have been obligated by law to terminate the mother's parental rights. In the Interest of A.P., 291 Ga. App. 690, 662 S.E.2d 739 (2008), cert. dismissed, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 777 (Ga. 2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-98).

Children adequately represented. — Termination of the mother's parental rights was proper because the mother's contention that the children's interests were not adequately represented before the juvenile court since the children were not represented by an attorney was without merit. The children were represented by an appointed guardian ad litem, which was specifically provided for by the legislature in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-98(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-262). In the Interest of R. J., 308 Ga. App. 702, 708 S.E.2d 626 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-98).

Putative father entitled to counsel. — Putative father clearly fell within the general definition of a "party" for the purposes of the paternity hearing mandated by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281, 15-11-282, and 15-11-283) and was therefore entitled to appointed counsel. Wilkins v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 255 Ga. 230, 337 S.E.2d 20 (1985) (decided under former law).

No error in failure to advise mother of right to appointed counsel. — Biological mother's contention that the mother was unaware of the option to request counsel as an indigent failed as the adoption statutes did not require the appointing of an attorney for the mother and, thus, the trial court did not err in failing to advise the biological mother as to any rights to be appointed an attorney. Steele v. Steele, 346 Ga. App. 196, 816 S.E.2d 327 (2018).

Right to counsel not waived. — In a proceeding for termination of parental rights, an indigent parent did not waive the right to appointed counsel in a knowing, intelligent, and voluntary manner simply because the parent failed to request counsel prior to the hearing as directed by the court. The court's denial of the parent's request for counsel was reversible error. In re J. M. B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-98).

Right to appeal. — In a child custody action, if the court appointed a guardian ad litem to represent the minor, the minor was in effect made a party to the action and had standing through the guardian ad litem to appeal. Miller v. Rieser, 213 Ga. App. 683, 446 S.E.2d 233 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-85).

ADVISORY OPINIONS OF THE STATE BAR

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, advisory opinions under former Code Section 15-11-98, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Conflict between child and attorney who is guardian ad litem. — When it becomes clear that there is an irreconcilable conflict between the child's wishes and the attorney's considered opinion of the child's best interests in a parental termination procedure, the attorney must withdraw from his or her role as the child's guardian ad litem. Adv. Op. No. 10-2 (January 9, 2012).

Withdrawal when irreconcilable conflict between child and guardian ad litem. — When it becomes clear that there is an irreconcilable conflict between the child's wishes and the attorney's considered opinion of the child's best interests, the attorney must withdraw from his or her role as the child's guardian ad litem. Adv. Op. No. 16-2 (June 4, 2016).

Withdrawal as guardian when conflict between child's wishes and best interest. — When an attorney has been appointed to serve both as legal counsel and as guardian ad litem for a child under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-262 in a termination of parental rights case, if the attorney finds that the child's wishes and best interests are in conflict, the attorney must seek removal as guardian ad litem, considering Ga. St. Bar R. 4-102(d):1.6. (confidentiality) in the process of the removal. In re Formal Advisory Opinion No. 16-2, 302 Ga. 736, 808 S.E.2d 735 (2017).

15-11-263. Physical and mental examinations.

(a) Upon motion of any party or the court, the court may require a physical or mental evaluation of a child adjudicated as a dependent child or his or her parent, stepparent, guardian, or legal custodian.

(b) The cost of any ordered evaluation shall be paid by the moving party unless apportioned by the court, in its discretion, to any other party or parties.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-100, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Mental evaluation left to court's discretion. — Under the language of former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-12 and 15-11-100 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-27, 15-11-101, 15-11-263, and 15-11-590), authorizing the juvenile court to order psychological examinations, the decision to order a mental evaluation was left to the juvenile court's discretion. In the Interest of S.K., 248 Ga. App. 122, 545 S.E.2d 674 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-100).

15-11-264. Discovery.

(a) In all cases under this article, any party shall, upon written request to the party having actual custody, control, or possession of the material to be produced, have full access to the following for inspection, copying, or photographing:

(1) The names and telephone numbers of each witness likely to be called to testify at the hearing by another party;

(2) A copy of any formal written statement made by the child adjudicated as a dependent child or any witness that relates to the subject matter concerning the testimony of the witness that a party intends to call as a witness at the hearing;

(3) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, any scientific or other report which is intended to be introduced at any hearing or that pertains to physical evidence which is intended to be introduced;

(4) Any drug screen concerning the child adjudicated as a dependent child or his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(5) Any case plan concerning the child adjudicated as a dependent child or his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(6) Any visitation schedule related to the child who is adjudicated as a dependent child;

(7) Photographs and any physical evidence which are intended to be introduced at any hearing;

(8) Copies of the police incident report regarding an occurrence which forms part or all of the basis of the petition; and

(9) Any other relevant evidence not requiring consent or a court order under subsection (b) of this Code section.

(b) Upon presentation of a court order or written consent from the appropriate person or persons permitting access to the party having actual custody, control, or possession of the material to be produced, any party shall have access to the following for inspection, copying, or photographing:

(1) Any psychological, developmental, physical, mental or emotional health, or other assessments of the child adjudicated as a dependent child or the family, parent, guardian, or legal custodian of such child;

(2) Any school record concerning the child adjudicated as a dependent child;

(3) Any medical record concerning the child adjudicated as a dependent child;

(4) Transcriptions, recordings, and summaries of any oral statement of the child adjudicated as a dependent child or of any witness, except child abuse reports that are confidential pursuant to Code Section 19-7-5 and work product of counsel;

(5) Any family team meeting report or multidisciplinary team meeting report concerning the child adjudicated as a dependent child or his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(6) Supplemental police reports, if any, regarding an occurrence which forms part of all of the basis of the petition; and

(7) Immigration records concerning the child adjudicated as a dependent child.

(c) If a party requests disclosure of information pursuant to subsection (a) or (b) of this Code section, it shall be the duty of such party to promptly make the following available for inspection, copying, or photographing to every other party:

(1) The names and last known addresses and telephone numbers of each witness to the occurrence which forms the basis of the party's defense or claim;

(2) Any scientific or other report which is intended to be introduced at the hearing or that pertains to physical evidence which is intended to be introduced;

(3) Photographs and any physical evidence which are intended to be introduced at the hearing; and

(4) A copy of any written statement made by any witness that relates to the subject matter concerning the testimony of the witness that the party intends to call as a witness.

(d) A request for discovery or reciprocal discovery shall be complied with promptly and not later than five days after the request is received or 72 hours prior to any hearing except when later compliance is made necessary by the timing of the request. If the request for discovery is made fewer than 48 hours prior to an adjudicatory hearing, the discovery response shall be produced in a timely manner. If, subsequent to providing a discovery response in compliance with this Code section, the existence of additional evidence is found, it shall be promptly provided to the party making the discovery request.

(e) If a request for discovery or consent for release is refused, application may be made to the court for a written order granting discovery. Motions for discovery shall certify that a request for discovery or consent was made and was unsuccessful despite good faith efforts made by the requesting party. An order granting discovery shall require reciprocal discovery. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) or (b) of this Code section, the court may deny, in whole or in part, or otherwise limit or set conditions concerning the discovery response upon a sufficient showing by a person or entity to whom a request for discovery is made that disclosure of the information would:

(1) Jeopardize the safety of a party, witness, or confidential informant;

(2) Create a substantial threat of physical or economic harm to a witness or other person;

(3) Endanger the existence of physical evidence;

(4) Disclose privileged information; or

(5) Impede the criminal prosecution of a minor who is being prosecuted as an adult or the prosecution of an adult charged with an offense arising from the same transaction or occurrence.

(f) No deposition shall be taken of a child adjudicated as a dependent child unless the court orders the deposition, under such conditions as the court may order, on the ground that the deposition would further the purposes of this part.

(g) If at any time during the course of the proceedings it is brought to the attention of the court that a person or entity has failed to comply with an order issued pursuant to this Code section, the court may grant a continuance, prohibit the party from introducing in evidence the information not disclosed, or enter such other order as the court deems just under the circumstances.

(h) Nothing contained in this Code section shall prohibit the court from ordering the disclosure of any information that the court deems necessary for proper adjudication.

(i) Any material or information furnished to a party pursuant to this Code section shall remain in the exclusive custody of the party and shall only be used during the pendency of the case and shall be subject to such other terms and conditions as the court may provide.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-75, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

No Brady violation shown. — In a juvenile proceeding wherein the juvenile was adjudicated delinquent as a result of a battery against a schoolmate on a school bus, the trial court did not err in allegedly failing to enforce the discovery provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-75(a)(7) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-541) and in allegedly failing to remedy a Brady violation because the videotape at issue was not in the custody and control of the State of Georgia; the juvenile could have obtained the evidence had the juvenile simply subpoenaed the video prior to trial and, significantly, the unrebutted evidence of record established that the videotape lacked any exculpatory or evidentiary value since the videotape was blank. In the Interest of E.J., 283 Ga. App. 648, 642 S.E.2d 179 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-75).

No pretrial discovery mandated. — Neither the U.S. Const., amend. 14 nor the state Constitution mandates pretrial discovery in proceedings to terminate parental rights. Ray v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 81, 270 S.E.2d 303 (1980) (decided under former law).

Discovery of relevant evidence granted. — Because termination of parental rights is more civil in nature than criminal, it generally is the legislative intent to grant discovery of evidence relevant to an issue in controversy, except when otherwise barred. Ray v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 81, 270 S.E.2d 303 (1980) (decided under former law).

15-11-265. Suspension of right of voluntary surrender of parental rights.

Once a petition to terminate parental rights has been filed, the parent of a child adjudicated as a dependent child shall thereafter be without authority to affect the custody of his or her child except such parent may:

(1) Consent to a judgment terminating his or her parental rights; and

(2) Execute an act of surrender in favor of:

(A) A third party if all of the parties to the petition to terminate parental rights agree; or

(B) The department.

Part 2

Venue for Petition to Terminate Parental Rights

15-11-270. Venue.

(a) A proceeding under this article shall be commenced:

(1) In the county that has jurisdiction over related dependency proceedings;

(2) In the county in which a child legally resides;

(3) In the county in which a child is present when the termination proceeding is commenced if such child is present without his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian; or

(4) In the county where the acts underlying the petition to terminate parental rights are alleged to have occurred.

(b) For the convenience of the parties, the court may transfer proceedings to the county in which the parent of a child adjudicated as a dependent child legally resides. If a proceeding is transferred, certified copies of all legal and social documents and records pertaining to the proceeding on file with the clerk of court shall accompany the transfer.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-15 and former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15, pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-29, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

County of parent's residence. — Revision of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. XIV, Para. VI (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. VI), providing that venue in juvenile court cases may be determined by the provisions of the Juvenile Court Code of Georgia, removed any constitutional impediment to applying former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-17, 15-11-270, and 15-11-401) to parental termination proceedings when the parent resides in a different county from that in which an allegedly deprived child is found. In re R.A.S., 249 Ga. 236, 290 S.E.2d 34 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

Action to terminate parental rights on ground of deprivation need not be brought in county of parents' residence. In re S.H., 163 Ga. App. 419, 294 S.E.2d 621 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

County of child's foster home. — Proceeding to terminate parental rights may be commenced in the county in which the child resides in a foster home. Cain v. Department of Human Resources, 166 Ga. App. 801, 305 S.E.2d 492 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

Because the child was placed into the Department of Family and Children Service's legal custody, a rebuttable presumption arose that the child obtained a Jones County legal residence for the purposes of determining venue; thus, by alleging that the child was in the department's custody, and by setting forth the department's address in Jones County, the department's petition provided sufficient information to establish that the child's residence was in Jones County, making venue therein, proper. In the Interest of A.J.M., 277 Ga. App. 646, 627 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29).

County where parent resides. — For cases holding that venue for termination proceedings lies in the county where the parent resides, decided under prior constitutional provisions, see Quire v. Clayton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 242 Ga. 85, 249 S.E.2d 538 (1978), and Williams v. Department of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 610, 258 S.E.2d 288 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Determining legal residence. — In determining where a juvenile resides for purposes of venue, it is generally the legal residence that controls. In re A.M.C., 213 Ga. App. 897, 446 S.E.2d 760 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

Since the requirements for venue in a county were met, the fact that the childrens' mother was in the process of moving to another state when the county department of family and children services obtained custody of her children was insufficient to rebut the presumption that the children resided in the county. In re K.M.L., 237 Ga. App. 662, 516 S.E.2d 363 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

Waiver of objection to venue. — By a parent's actions and inactions, the parent waived the parent's right to object to the venue of termination proceedings. In the Interest of H.D.M., 241 Ga. App. 805, 527 S.E.2d 633 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

In a deprivation proceeding, the court erred in basing venue on the childrens' brief visit to the county where the deprivation petitions were filed because the children were residing and attending school in another county at the time. In re B.G., 238 Ga. App. 227, 518 S.E.2d 451 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

Because a child was born in Lee County and had lived with the child's mother and maternal grandparents in Lee County for ten out of the 16 months of the child's life when a petition alleging deprivation was filed under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-270 and 15-11-401), Lee County was the proper venue for the action. In the Interest of C.R., 292 Ga. App. 346, 665 S.E.2d 39 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29).

Service on mother in county of residence sufficient. — Service of process on the mother in the county of this state in which the mother of an illegitimate child resides is sufficient to give the county juvenile court jurisdiction over both the mother and the child regardless of whether there was a "detention" of the child and in spite of the fact that a welfare worker obtained possession of the child outside of the state. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Venue exists despite absence of child. — If a particular county is the residence of the child and of the child's mother, venue properly exists there for temporary custody actions even if the child was not personally present within the boundaries of that county on the date of the filing of the petition to the court for temporary custody. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Venue in county of child's residence and where child born. — Requirements for proving that venue was properly in Cobb County were met because a mother was residing in Cobb County when her child was born and when the underlying proceeding alleging deprivation commenced and that the child remained in the custody of Cobb County Department of Family and Children Services through the time the juvenile court entered the court's deprivation and non-reunification order. In re R. B., 309 Ga. App. 407, 710 S.E.2d 611 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29).

Challenge to court's jurisdiction unsuccessful. — Although former Code 1933, § 79-404 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-2-4) provided that the domicile of an illegitimate child shall be that of his or her mother, yet, where the plea to the jurisdiction alleged "this court has accepted jurisdiction and custody of the minor child … and is holding said child subject to the order of this court," which clearly showed that the child was before the court, and there was no allegation showing the domicile of the mother, who was present in court, or any other reason why the juvenile court did not have jurisdiction, it was not error to overrule the plea. Springstead v. Cook, 215 Ga. 154, 109 S.E.2d 508 (1959) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 87, § 3).

Child was residing in Cobb County when an underlying proceeding alleging deprivation commenced and had remained in the custody of Cobb County Department of Family and Children Services through the time a termination of parental rights order was entered; accordingly, requirements for venue in Cobb County were met. In re R. J. D. B., 305 Ga. App. 888, 700 S.E.2d 898 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29).

There was sufficient evidence that venue was proper in Douglas County, Georgia, in a deprivation proceeding, as the Douglas County Department of Family and Children Services (DFCS) had been involved with the family for some time; the subject child's parent lived in a shelter in Douglas County in May and June of 2010, and at the time the deprivation petition was filed the child was in the custody of the Douglas County DFCS, where the child remained through the entry of the deprivation order. In the Interest of D. S., 316 Ga. App. 296, 728 S.E.2d 890 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29).

15-11-280. Petition; style; contents; putative fathers.

(a) A petition to terminate parental rights and all subsequent court documents in such proceeding shall be entitled "In the interest of _____, a child.", except upon appeal, in which event the anonymity of a child shall be preserved by use of appropriate initials. The petition shall be in writing.

(b) The petition to terminate parental rights shall be made, verified, and endorsed by the court as provided in Article 3 of this chapter for a petition alleging dependency.

(c) A petition to terminate parental rights shall:

(1) State clearly that an order for termination of parental rights is requested and that the effect of the order will conform to Code Section 15-11-261;

(2) State the statutory ground, as provided in Code Section 15-11-310, on which the petition is based; and

(3) Set forth plainly and with particularity:

(A) The facts which bring a child within the jurisdiction of the court, with a statement that it is in the best interests of such child and the public that the proceeding be brought;

(B) The name, age, date of birth, and residence address of the child named in the petition;

(C) The name and residence address of the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of such child; or, if the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the child named in the petition to terminate parental rights does not reside or cannot be found within the state or if such place of residence address is unknown, the name of any known adult relative of such child residing within the county or, if there is none, the known adult relative of such child residing nearest to the location of the court;

(D) Whether the child named in the petition is in protective custody and, if so, the place of his or her foster care and the time such child was taken into protective custody; and

(E) Whether any of the information required by this paragraph is unknown.

(d) When a petition to terminate parental rights seeks termination of the rights of a biological father who is not the legal father and who has not surrendered his rights to his child, the petition shall include a certificate from the putative father registry disclosing the name, address, and social security number of any registrant acknowledging paternity of the child named in the petition or indicating the possibility of paternity of a child of the child's mother for a period beginning no more than two years immediately preceding such child's date of birth. The certificate shall document a search of the registry on or before the date of the filing of the petition and shall include a statement that the registry is current as to filings of registrants as of the date of the petition.

(e) A copy of a voluntary surrender or written consent, if any, previously executed by a parent of the child named in the petition to terminate parental rights shall be attached to the petition.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-25, pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-38.1, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-82, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-95, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Juvenile petition must satisfy "due process." — Although a juvenile petition does not have to be drafted with the exactitude of a criminal accusation, the petition must satisfy "due process." T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Since the state's petition failed to set forth in ordinary and concise language the facts demonstrating the nature of the parent's alleged failure to provide proper parental care or control, the parent lacked sufficient information to enable the parent to prepare a defense, and this amounted to a denial of due process. In re D.R.C., 191 Ga. App. 278, 381 S.E.2d 426 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

To meet constitutional requirement of due process the language of a juvenile petition must pass two tests: (1) the petition must contain sufficient factual details to inform the juvenile of the nature of the offense; and (2) the petition must provide data adequate to enable the accused to prepare a defense. T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Allege with particularity. — Due process requires that the petition alleging delinquency must set forth with specificity the alleged violation of law either in the language of the particular section, or so plainly that the nature of the offense charged may be easily understood by the child and the child's parents or guardian. D.P. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 680, 200 S.E.2d 499 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Petition filed alleging delinquency, deprivation, or unruliness must set forth alleged misconduct with particularity. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Insufficient notice to juvenile of alleged offense. — If a juvenile is brought to trial on a petition alleging delinquency based on a violation of former Code 1933, § 26-1601 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1) but was adjudicated delinquent for violating former Code 1933, § 26-1806 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-8-7), there was insufficient notice to the juvenile of the offense alleged to be the basis of the juvenile's delinquency and the trial court must be reversed. D.P. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 680, 200 S.E.2d 499 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Statement of custody irrelevant if jurisdiction otherwise exists. — If jurisdiction otherwise existed, such as if the action was brought in the county of the residence of both mother and son, then the requirement in paragraph (4) of former Code 1933, § 24A-1603 had no relevancy to the right of the trial court to handle the case. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Assumption of jurisdiction linked to authorized petition. — An order for detention clearly did not meet the requirements of a petition filed pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24A-1603 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-152, 15-11-280, 15-11-390, 15-11-420, 15-11-422, and 15-11-522) to commence proceedings under former Code 1933, § 24A-1601 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-420), and the assumption of jurisdiction by the juvenile court is linked to the authorized petition. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

In a hearing on parental custody in a divorce action, the trial court erred in awarding custody of the parties' minor children to the Department of Family and Children Services based upon findings that the children were deprived and the parents unfit because the mother had no notice that the superior court judge might award custody of the children to a third party based upon standards of deprivation. Watkins v. Watkins, 266 Ga. 269, 466 S.E.2d 860 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

Preparation and verification. — Because counsel for the Department of Children & Family Services stated to the court that counsel prepared the termination petition, that the petition was reviewed, verified, and then signed by counsel the next day, this was sufficient to comply with the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-152, 15-11-280, 15-11-390, 15-11-422, and 15-11-522). In re A.K.M., 235 Ga. App. 853, 510 S.E.2d 611 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

Service by correctional officer upon incarcerated father. — Personal service of a summons and a petition of deprivation by a correctional officer upon an incarcerated father was sufficient as the service procedures in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1 et seq., were not adopted nor were binding on the juvenile court, and the correctional officer was acting under the direction of the court for the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). In the Interest of A.J.M., 277 Ga. App. 646, 627 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38.1).

Standing. — Child's great aunt and uncle had standing to bring a petition to terminate the parental rights of the child's father and mother. In re J.J., 225 Ga. App. 682, 484 S.E.2d 681 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-82).

Compliance shown. — Because orders entered by the juvenile court before the Department of Human Resources (DHR) filed its termination petition related to that petition, specifically declaring the child to be deprived and that the child had been in the temporary legal custody of the DHR for over 14 months with no indication that the conditions of deprivation will be alleviated in the future, the court either substantially complied with or satisfied by implication the endorsement requirements showing that the filing of the petition was in the best interest of the public and the child. In the Interest of V.D.S., 284 Ga. App. 582, 644 S.E.2d 422 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 635 (Ga. 2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-95).

Parent notified of consequences of termination order. — Terms which sufficiently apprised father of the consequences of an order terminating parental rights complied with subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-82 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-280). In re A.M.S., 208 Ga. App. 328, 430 S.E.2d 626 (1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1128, 114 S. Ct. 1095, 127 L. Ed. 2d 409 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-82).

State's petition failed to comply with subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-82 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-280) since the petition contained the first sentence of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-80 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-261) almost verbatim but did not provide any notice of the effects of the second sentence of that section. In re D.R.C., 191 Ga. App. 278, 381 S.E.2d 426 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-82).

Juvenile court lacked jurisdiction over the mother and the subject matter of the termination of her parental rights because no original petition was filed and personally served. In re C.I.W., 229 Ga. App. 481, 494 S.E.2d 291 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-82).

15-11-281. Issuance of summons.

(a) The court shall direct the issuance of a summons to the mother, legal father or biological father, guardian, legal custodian, attorney, and guardian ad litem, if any, of the child named in the petition to terminate parental rights and any other persons who appear to the court to be proper or necessary parties to the proceeding, requiring them to appear before the court at the time fixed to answer the allegations of the petition. A copy of such petition shall accompany the summons unless the summons is served by publication, in which case the published summons shall indicate the general nature of the allegations and where a copy of such petition can be obtained.

(b) The court shall direct notice and a copy of the petition be provided to the child named in the petition if the child is 14 years of age or older.

(c) The summons shall include the notice of effect of a termination judgment as set forth in Code Section 15-11-284 and shall state that a party is entitled to an attorney in the proceedings and that the court will appoint an attorney if the party is an indigent person.

(d) The court may endorse upon the summons an order directing the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the child named in the petition to appear personally at the hearing or directing the person having the physical custody or control of such child to bring such child to the hearing.

(e) A party other than the child named in the petition may waive service of summons by written stipulation or by voluntary appearance at the hearing.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Service of process by correctional officer on incarcerated parent. — Personal service of a summons and a petition of deprivation, by a correctional officer upon an incarcerated parent, was sufficient as the service procedures in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1 et seq., were not adopted nor were binding on the juvenile court, and the correctional officer was acting under the direction of the court for the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). In the Interest of A.J.M., 277 Ga. App. 646, 627 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Waiver of notice. — In a juvenile delinquency case, although neither defendants nor their parents were served with copies of the petitions and hearing summonses as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-162, 15-11-281, 15-11-423, 15-11-425, and 15-11-532), the defendants and their parents appeared at the hearings with their attorneys without objecting to lack of notice; thus, the defendants and their parents waived the notice issue. In the Interest of T.K.L., 277 Ga. App. 461, 627 S.E.2d 98 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Waiver of procedural requirements. — Time limits on setting juvenile hearings are mandatory, but procedural requirements can be waived. J.T.G. v. State, 141 Ga. App. 184, 233 S.E.2d 40 (1977) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26). Cox v. Department of Human Resources, 148 Ga. App. 338, 250 S.E.2d 728 (1978), overruled on other grounds, 156 Ga. App. 338, 274 S.E.2d 728 (1980) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Implied waiver of service on behalf of child. — If a child is present at a juvenile court hearing with the child's parent and counsel, the child's parent impliedly may waive service of a summons on a child's behalf by voluntary appearance at a hearing without objection to lack of service. Fulton County Detention Center v. Robertson, 249 Ga. 864, 295 S.E.2d 101 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Parent's right to appeal delinquency adjudication. — As parties to their child's delinquency action pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-160, 15-11-423, and 15-11-530), the child's parents had the right to appeal the juvenile court's judgment and to participate in the appellate process. In the Interest of J.L.B., 280 Ga. App. 556, 634 S.E.2d 514 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Proceeding null when no waiver of rights nor proper service. — If, in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of the right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and if the hearing is not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding is an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Constitutionality. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281, 15-11-282, and 15-11-283) was not unconstitutional because the statute required the biological father to exercise his interest in the child by filing a petition to legitimate. In the Interest of D.B., 243 Ga. App. 473, 533 S.E.2d 737 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Requiring fathers of children born out of wedlock to legitimate their children in order to preserve their parental rights does not violate equal protection because unwed fathers and unwed mothers are not similarly situated. In the Interest of V.M.T., 243 Ga. App. 732, 534 S.E.2d 452 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Construction with former provisions. — Because former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282) related specifically to service in termination-of-parental-rights proceedings, the trial court's reliance on the service provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), a statute dealing with service in juvenile court proceedings generally, was misplaced; moreover, for purposes of statutory interpretation, a specific statute prevailed over a general statute, absent any indication of a contrary legislative intent. In the Interest of C.S., 282 Ga. 7, 644 S.E.2d 812 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Putative father entitled to counsel. — Putative father clearly fell within the general definition of a "party" for the purposes of the paternity hearing mandated by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281, 15-11-282, and 15-11-283) and was therefore entitled to appointed counsel. Wilkins v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 255 Ga. 230, 337 S.E.2d 20 (1985) (decided under former law).

Content of summons served upon father did not have to require him to appear in court on any fixed date in order to answer allegations in a petition to terminate his parental rights. In re W.R.S., 213 Ga. App. 616, 445 S.E.2d 367 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83).

Failure to give notice not error. — Failure to give notice to a father pursuant to subsections (e) and (g) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282) was not error since such notice requirements related only to the availability of the abbreviated termination procedures contained therein and did not affect the jurisdiction of the court to consider a termination proceeding; the absence of an attempt by the father to legitimate the children did not contribute to the judgment terminating the father's parental rights. In re C.M.S., 218 Ga. App. 487, 462 S.E.2d 398 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83); In re J.K., 239 Ga. App. 142, 520 S.E.2d 19 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83); In the Interest of L.S., 244 Ga. App. 626, 536 S.E.2d 533 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83).

15-11-282. Service of summons.

(a) If a party to be served with a summons is within this state and can be found, the summons shall be served upon him or her personally as soon as possible and at least 30 days before the termination of parental rights hearing.

(b) If a party to be served is within this state and cannot be found but his or her address is known or can be ascertained with due diligence, the summons shall be served upon such party at least 30 days before the termination of parental rights hearing by mailing him or her a copy by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested.

(c) If a party to be served is outside this state but his or her address is known or can be ascertained with due diligence, service of the summons shall be made at least 30 days before the termination of parental rights hearing either by delivering a copy to such party personally or by mailing a copy to him or her by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested.

(d) If, after due diligence, a party to be served with a summons cannot be found and such party's address cannot be ascertained, whether he or she is within or outside this state, the court may order service of the summons upon him or her by publication. The termination of parental rights hearing shall not be earlier than 31 days after the date of the last publication.

(e)(1) Service by publication shall be made once a week for four consecutive weeks in the legal organ of the county where the petition to terminate parental rights has been filed and of the county of the biological father's last known address. Service shall be deemed complete upon the date of the last publication.

(2) When served by publication, the notice shall contain the names of the parties, except that the anonymity of a child shall be preserved by the use of appropriate initials, and the date the petition to terminate parental rights was filed. The notice shall indicate the general nature of the allegations and where a copy of the petition to terminate parental rights can be obtained and require the party to be served by publication to appear before the court at the time fixed to answer the allegations of the petition to terminate parental rights.

(3) The petition to terminate parental rights shall be available to the party whose rights are sought to be terminated free of charge from the court during business hours or, upon request, shall be mailed to such party.

(4) Within 15 days after the filing of the order of service by publication, the clerk of court shall mail a copy of the notice, a copy of the order of service by publication, and a copy of the petition to terminate parental rights to the absent party's last known address.

(f) Service of the summons may be made by any suitable person under the direction of the court.

(g) The court may authorize the payment from county funds of the costs of service and of necessary travel expenses incurred by persons summoned or otherwise required to appear at the hearing.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 24-2406 and 24A-1702, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-27, pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-39.1, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-83, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-96, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

There was no equal protection violation in framework of this former Code section since similarly situated residents and nonresidents were accorded equal treatment and it was only in cases when laws were applied differently to different persons under the same or similar circumstances that the equal protection of the law was denied. In re M.A.C., 244 Ga. 645, 261 S.E.2d 590 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1702).

When service by publication sufficient in adoption proceeding. — Service by publication was sufficient to bestow jurisdiction over putative fathers of children whose natural mothers wish to give the children up for adoption. In re J.B., 140 Ga. App. 668, 231 S.E.2d 821 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1702).

Service of summons and termination petition was ineffective since, even though the summons was left at the mother's residence, there was no evidence that the summons was left with a statutorily appropriate person, and service of the petition the day before the hearing was not timely. In re D.R.W., 229 Ga. App. 571, 494 S.E.2d 379 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-27).

Order terminating an out-of-state incarcerated parent's parental rights was reversed as: (1) service of the termination petition and summons upon the parent via certified mail was insufficient under both O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 and former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282); (2) a correctional officer who personally delivered the documents to the parent did not amount to sufficient and lawful personal service as the officer lacked the inherent authority to perfect service under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c) and no court order existed to grant the authority; and (3) the trial court's reliance on the service provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), a statute dealing with service in juvenile court proceedings generally, was misplaced. In the Interest of C.S., 282 Ga. 7, 644 S.E.2d 812 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Service by publication in termination proceeding. — Juvenile court may order service of process by publication in a termination proceeding if, after reasonable effort, a party cannot be found and the party's address cannot be ascertained. In re M.J.B., 238 Ga. App. 833, 520 S.E.2d

Juvenile court erred in terminating the parent's parental rights after the parent failed to appear at the termination hearing because the parent was denied due process based on service of process by publication as the parent was not properly served because there was nothing in the record showing that the petitioner requested to serve the parent by publication or filed an affidavit or sworn testimony in support of such service; and there was nothing in the record indicating that the trial court, prior to service by publication, concluded that the petitioner exercised due diligence in attempting to personally serve the parent, or that the trial court issued an order permitting service by publication. In the Interest of A. H., P. H., & J. H., 339 Ga. App. 882, 795 S.E.2d 188 (2016).

Juvenile court erred in terminating the mother's parental rights because the record failed to demonstrate that the summons was served by publication upon order of the court, after having been presented with evidence of due diligence by the Georgia Department of Human Services, Division of Family and Children Services and upon motion by the Department. In the Interest of R. C., 343 Ga. App. 682, 808 S.E.2d 39 (2017).

Service by publication in deprivation proceeding. — Juvenile court erred in granting service by publication of the paternal grandparents' petition alleging that the mother's children were deprived because the grandparents failed to exercise reasonable diligence to find the mother, the juvenile court concluded that the mother could not be found with due diligence within the State of Georgia without any competent evidence to support that finding, and the juvenile court failed to place any burden on the grandparents to determine what notice the grandparents had given to the mother of the grandparents' deprivation petition and simply relied on evidence about the father's efforts to contact her; the grandparents did not file a written motion for service by publication and supporting affidavit as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(f)(1)(A), the grandparents had some means of communicating with the mother because the father had the mother's telephone number and was able to notify the mother by phone of the 72-hour hearing, the grandparents could have contacted the mother's relatives to ascertain the mother's whereabouts, and the grandparents could have attempted to serve the mother personally or by registered or certified mail at the mother's prior address. Taylor v. Padgett, 300 Ga. App. 314, 684 S.E.2d 434 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Service by correctional officer on incarcerated parent. — Personal service of a summons and a petition of deprivation, by a correctional officer upon an incarcerated parent, was sufficient as the service procedures in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1 et seq., were not adopted nor were binding on the juvenile court, and the correctional officer was acting under the direction of the court for the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). In the Interest of A.J.M., 277 Ga. App. 646, 627 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Service not perfected on incarcerated person. — Deprivation order had to be vacated and the case remanded because service of the deprivation petition on the parent in question, who was incarcerated, was not perfected in accordance with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). The parent had not waived personal service and personal service was not waived simply by actual notice having been achieved. In the Interest of A. R., 296 Ga. App. 62, 673 S.E.2d 586 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Requirement of "reasonable effort" to find party. — Former statute required a showing by the department that a "reasonable effort" had been made to find a putative father or ascertain his address. In re J.B., 140 Ga. App. 668, 231 S.E.2d 821 (1976) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Permissibility of publication notice dependent upon investigation. — Whether publication notice is permissible necessarily depends upon an investigation of whether the whereabouts of putative fathers were unknown and whether the fathers could be found with reasonable diligence. In re J.B., 140 Ga. App. 668, 231 S.E.2d 821 (1976) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

If there was no service of process and notice as required by the former provisions and there was no valid waiver of notice of the pending charge by service of process or otherwise, the entire hearing is a nullity. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Waiver of right to notice. — If neither the juvenile nor the juvenile's mother were represented by counsel at the dispositional hearing, neither party knew the nature of the charge filed against the minor, and neither party knew of the serious consequences which may result in the case of an adverse adjudication of the petition filed against the juvenile, it is highly unlikely that the parties understood the significance of waiving the parties right to prior notice of the pending charge. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Timeliness of petition. — Juvenile was entitled to a copy of the delinquency petition filed against the juvenile, and pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), the juvenile had a right to receive the petition at least 24 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing; however, the juvenile waived any objection the juvenile had on the grounds of improper service since the juvenile received the petition right before the hearing as the juvenile did not make an objection or request a continuance on the basis that the juvenile was unprepared. In the Interest of E.S., 262 Ga. App. 768, 586 S.E.2d 691 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Permitting state's mid-trial amendment of petition to change the charge against the juvenile from a misdemeanor to a felony was error since the amendment was done without notice and provision of a continuance to allow additional time for preparation of a defense. In re D.W, 232 Ga. App. 777, 503 S.E.2d 647 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Reliance on section by trial court misplaced. — Because former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282) related specifically to service in termination-of-parental-rights proceedings, the trial court's reliance on the service provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), a statute dealing with service in juvenile court proceedings generally, was misplaced; moreover, for purposes of statutory interpretation, a specific statute prevailed over a general statute, absent any indication of a contrary legislative intent. In the Interest of C.S., 282 Ga. 7, 644 S.E.2d 812 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Constitutionality. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281, 15-11-282, and 15-11-283) was not unconstitutional because the statute required the biological father to exercise his interest in the child by filing a petition to legitimate. In the Interest of D.B., 243 Ga. App. 473, 533 S.E.2d 737 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Requiring fathers of children born out of wedlock to legitimate their children in order to preserve their parental rights does not violate equal protection because unwed fathers and unwed mothers are not similarly situated. In the Interest of V.M.T., 243 Ga. App. 732, 534 S.E.2d 452 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Construction with former provisions. — Because former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282) related specifically to service in termination-of-parental-rights proceedings, the trial court's reliance on the service provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), a statute dealing with service in juvenile court proceedings generally, was misplaced; moreover, for purposes of statutory interpretation, a specific statute prevailed over a general statute, absent any indication of a contrary legislative intent. In the Interest of C.S., 282 Ga. 7, 644 S.E.2d 812 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Failure to file petition to legitimate. — If the biological father received notice of a proceeding to terminate parental rights and failed to file a petition to legitimate the children, termination of his parental rights was authorized under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96). In re D.B.G., 226 Ga. App. 29, 485 S.E.2d 575 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83).

Court correctly terminated a father's parental rights after he was personally served with a copy of the petition, which contained a notice that he would lose all rights unless he filed a petition to legitimate within 30 days, and he never filed such a petition. In re E.D.T., 233 Ga. App. 774, 505 S.E.2d 516 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83); In the Interest of D.M., 244 Ga. App. 361, 535 S.E.2d 7 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Since the biological father of a child was notified nine months before a termination hearing that he had 30 days in which to file a petition to legitimate the child, and was further informed eleven days before the hearing that the paternity tests showed the child was his, but did not inform the court that he had received the paternity test results and wished more time in which to file a petition to legitimate, the court did not err in determining that his rights should be terminated. In re A.K.M., 235 Ga. App. 853, 510 S.E.2d 611 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83).

Biological father who fails to seek to legitimate his child following receipt of proper notice of termination proceedings may not thereafter object to the termination of his parental rights. In the Interest of A.W., 242 Ga. App. 26, 528 S.E.2d 819 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Since the putative biological father failed to file a legitimation petition, despite having received two notices of his need to legitimate and having been given a continuance from the termination hearing so that he could comply with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283), the juvenile court did not err in determining that his parental rights should be terminated. In the Interest of D.B., 243 Ga. App. 473, 533 S.E.2d 737 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283), a petition to terminate parental rights must notify a biological father who is not the legal father that he must file, within 30 days of receipt of notice, a petition to legitimate his child; O.C.G.A. § 19-7-22 regulates a petition for the legitimation of a child, notice to the mother, a court order, the order's effect, and the intervention by the father. In the Interest of D.W., 264 Ga. App. 833, 592 S.E.2d 679 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

If a biological father fails to file a legitimation petition within 30 days of a petition under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283), he loses all rights to the child and will not be entitled to object to the termination of his parental rights; if no legitimation petition is timely filed, or if it is denied or dismissed, the trial court shall enter an order terminating the father's rights under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283). In the Interest of D.W., 264 Ga. App. 833, 592 S.E.2d 679 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Order terminating a biological parent's parental rights was upheld on appeal as the parent failed to file for legitimation of the affected children within 30 days of being notified of the termination petition, despite repeatedly being notified to do so, and despite the appointment of an attorney in the termination proceedings. In the Interest of S.M.G., 284 Ga. App. 64, 643 S.E.2d 296 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Because a father failed to give written notice to the juvenile court that a legitimation petition was filed, as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28), within 30 days of receiving notification of a termination proceeding, the juvenile court properly entered an order terminating the father's parental rights, and the father was thus denied the right to object. In the Interest of S.M.R., 286 Ga. App. 139, 648 S.E.2d 697 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Trial court properly terminated a parent's parental rights to a child as a result of the parent failing to timely file a notice of the petition to legitimate the child with the juvenile court within 30 days. In the Interest of M.D., 293 Ga. App. 700, 667 S.E.2d 693 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Because a father of a 7-year-old autistic child had not even attempted to legitimate his child, despite numerous warnings from the juvenile court, the father lacked standing to challenge the termination of his parental rights. Therefore, the father's argument that the juvenile court erred in denying his motion for a continuance was moot. In the Interest of T. B. R., 304 Ga. App. 773, 697 S.E.2d 878 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Content of summons served upon father did not have to require him to appear in court on any fixed date in order to answer allegations in a petition to terminate his parental rights. In re W.R.S., 213 Ga. App. 616, 445 S.E.2d 367 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83).

Service of summons and petition. — Subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-282) required only that a copy of the summons and petition be served on the parent at least 30 days before the time set for hearing on the petition. In re C.M., 194 Ga. App. 503, 391 S.E.2d 26 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83).

Service of a summons and termination petition was ineffective when, even though the summons was left at the mother's residence, there was no evidence the documentation was left with a statutorily appropriate person, and service of the petition the day before the hearing was not timely. In re D.R.W., 229 Ga. App. 571, 494 S.E.2d 379 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83).

Service of process on the mother was insufficient since there was no evidence that she was served personally with the summons and petition or by leaving a copy at her dwelling house or usual place of abode with a person of suitable age and discretion then residing therein, and the fact that she may have had actual notice of the termination proceeding would not cure the defective service. In the Interest of S.S., 246 Ga. App. 248, 540 S.E.2d 238 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Within the context of a parental rights termination proceeding, a juvenile court had the discretion to determine whether to grant an extension of time for a putative father to serve the legitimation petition on the mother, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(i) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-283), and O.C.G.A. § 19-7-22(b), and Georgia case law that allowed application of the procedural rules set out in the Civil Practice Act, including O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c) relating to service and extensions thereto; accordingly, the juvenile court's refusal to hear the legitimation petition was error, as was the decision to terminate the putative father's parental rights under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 without first determining whether he had standing under the legitimation action. In the Interest of A.H., 279 Ga. App. 77, 630 S.E.2d 587 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

An order terminating an out-of-state incarcerated parent's parental rights was reversed as: (1) service of the termination petition and summons upon the parent via certified mail was insufficient under both O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4 and former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282); (2) a correctional officer who personally delivered the documents to the parent did not amount to sufficient and lawful personal service as the officer lacked the inherent authority to perfect service under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c) and no court order existed to grant the authority; and (3) the trial court's reliance on the service provisions of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1, a statute dealing with service in juvenile court proceedings generally, was misplaced. In the Interest of C.S., 282 Ga. 7, 644 S.E.2d 812 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Failure to give notice not error. — Failure to give notice to a father pursuant to subsections (e) and (g) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282) was not error since such notice requirements related only to the availability of the abbreviated termination procedures contained therein and did not affect the jurisdiction of the court to consider a termination proceeding; the absence of an attempt by the father to legitimate the children did not contribute to the judgment terminating the father's parental rights. In re C.M.S., 218 Ga. App. 487, 462 S.E.2d 398 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83); In re J.K., 239 Ga. App. 142, 520 S.E.2d 19 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83); In the Interest of L.S., 244 Ga. App. 626, 536 S.E.2d 533 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83).

Waiver of issue of service of process. — By failing to raise the issue at a termination hearing, mother waived the issue of insufficiency of process or service of process. In re S.J.M., 225 Ga. App. 703, 484 S.E.2d 764 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83).

Termination of parental rights mandatory. — In the absence of standing to object to the termination of parental rights for an untimely filed legitimation petition, entry of an order terminating parental rights was mandatory under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283); the word "shall" as used in those provisions could be construed otherwise. In the Interest of D.W., 264 Ga. App. 833, 592 S.E.2d 679 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

15-11-283. Notice to father.

(a) Unless he has surrendered all parental rights to his child, a summons shall be served in the same manner as set forth in Code Section 15-11-282 on the biological father:

(1) Whose paternity has been previously established in a judicial proceeding to which the father was a party;

(2) Whose identity is known to the petitioner or the petitioner's attorney;

(3) Who is a registrant on the putative father registry and has acknowledged paternity of the child named in the petition brought pursuant to this article;

(4) Who is a registrant on the putative father registry who has indicated possible paternity of the child named in the petition brought pursuant to this article that was born to such child's mother during a period beginning no more than two years immediately preceding such child's date of birth; or

(5) Who, if the court finds from the evidence including but not limited to the affidavit of the mother of a child named in the petition brought pursuant to this article, has performed any of the following acts:

(A) Lived with such child;

(B) Contributed to such child's support;

(C) Made any attempt to legitimate such child; or

(D) Provided support or medical care for such mother either during her pregnancy or during her hospitalization for the birth of such child.

(b) The notice shall advise the biological father who is not the legal father that he may lose all rights to the child named in a petition brought pursuant to this article and will not be entitled to object to the termination of his rights to such child unless, within 30 days of receipt of notice, he files:

(1) A petition to legitimate such child; and

(2) Notice of the filing of the petition to legitimate with the court in which the termination of parental rights proceeding is pending.

(c) If the identity of the biological father whose rights are sought to be terminated is not known to the petitioner or the petitioner's attorney and the biological father would not be entitled to notice in accordance with subsection (a) of this Code section, then it shall be rebuttably presumed that he is not entitled to notice of the proceedings. The court shall be authorized to require the mother to execute an affidavit supporting the presumption or show cause before the court if she refuses. Absent evidence rebutting the presumption, no further inquiry or notice shall be required by the court, and the court may enter an order terminating the rights of the biological father.

(d) The court may enter an order terminating all the parental rights of a biological father, including any right to object thereafter to such proceedings:

(1) Who fails to file a timely petition to legitimate the child named in a petition brought pursuant to this article and notice in accordance with subsection (b) of this Code section;

(2) Whose petition to legitimate is subsequently dismissed for failure to prosecute; or

(3) Whose petition to legitimate does not result in a court order finding that he is the legal father of the child named in a petition brought pursuant to this article.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-283, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2014, p. 780, § 1-21/SB 364.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-83, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-96, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Constitutionality. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281, 15-11-282, and 15-11-283) was not unconstitutional because the statute required the biological father to exercise his interest in the child by filing a petition to legitimate. In the Interest of D.B., 243 Ga. App. 473, 533 S.E.2d 737 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Requiring fathers of children born out of wedlock to legitimate their children in order to preserve their parental rights does not violate equal protection because unwed fathers and unwed mothers are not similarly situated. In the Interest of V.M.T., 243 Ga. App. 732, 534 S.E.2d 452 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Standing. — Parent who filed a legitimation petition more than 30 days after a termination of parental rights petition was filed lacked standing to challenge the termination. In the Interest of S.H., 251 Ga. App. 555, 553 S.E.2d 849 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Father was not entitled to a new trial on a termination of rights petition filed by the Department of Family and Children Services as the father failed to legitimate the child at issue and, hence, lacked standing to challenge the termination of parental rights order. In the Interest of J.L.E., 281 Ga. App. 805, 637 S.E.2d 446 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Given a biological father's failure to legitimate the child at issue, the father lacked standing to challenge the juvenile court's termination of parental rights order. In the Interest of L.S.T., 286 Ga. App. 638, 649 S.E.2d 841 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Putative father had standing to appeal the termination of the putative father's parental rights even though the putative father had never filed a petition to legitimate the child; because the putative father never received notice under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(e) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283) that the putative father had 30 days to file a petition to legitimate a child, former § 15-11-96(i) did not apply. In the Interest of K.E.A., 292 Ga. App. 239, 663 S.E.2d 822 (2008), overruled on other grounds, In re J.M.B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Juvenile court did not err in denying a father's legitimation petition based on his failure to support the child or his mother or send the child cards or letters while incarcerated. Because the father failed to legitimate the child, he lacked standing to challenge the termination of his parental rights under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(i)(3) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283). In re J. S., 302 Ga. App. 342, 691 S.E.2d 250 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Termination hearing seeks above all else welfare of child with due regard for the rights of the parents. Harvey v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 147 Ga. App. 824, 250 S.E.2d 563 (1978) (decided under former law); Childers v. Clayton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 147 Ga. App. 825, 250 S.E.2d 564 (1978) (decided under former law); Kilgore v. Department of Human Resources, 151 Ga. App. 19, 258 S.E.2d 680 (1979) (decided under former law).

Court's discretion not controlled, absent abuse. — In determining how the interest of the child is best served, the juvenile court is vested with broad discretion which will not be controlled in the absence of manifest abuse. Harvey v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 147 Ga. App. 824, 250 S.E.2d 563 (1978) (decided under former law); Childers v. Clayton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 147 Ga. App. 825, 250 S.E.2d 564 (1978) (decided under former law).

Failure to file petition to legitimate. — If the biological father received notice of a proceeding to terminate parental rights and failed to file a petition to legitimate the children, termination of his parental rights was authorized under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96). In re D.B.G., 226 Ga. App. 29, 485 S.E.2d 575 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83).

Court correctly terminated a father's parental rights after he was personally served with a copy of the petition, which contained a notice that he would lose all rights unless he filed a petition to legitimate within 30 days, and he never filed such a petition. In re E.D.T., 233 Ga. App. 774, 505 S.E.2d 516 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83); In the Interest of D.M., 244 Ga. App. 361, 535 S.E.2d 7 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Since the biological father of a child was notified nine months before a termination hearing that he had 30 days in which to file a petition to legitimate the child, and was further informed eleven days before the hearing that the paternity tests showed the child was his, but did not inform the court that he had received the paternity test results and wished more time in which to file a petition to legitimate, the court did not err in determining that his rights should be terminated. In re A.K.M., 235 Ga. App. 853, 510 S.E.2d 611 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-83).

Biological father who fails to seek to legitimate his child following receipt of proper notice of termination proceedings may not thereafter object to the termination of his parental rights. In the Interest of A.W., 242 Ga. App. 26, 528 S.E.2d 819 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Since the putative biological father failed to file a legitimation petition, despite having received two notices of his need to legitimate and having been given a continuance from the termination hearing so that he could comply with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283), the juvenile court did not err in determining that his parental rights should be terminated. In the Interest of D.B., 243 Ga. App. 473, 533 S.E.2d 737 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283), a petition to terminate parental rights must notify a biological father who is not the legal father that he must file, within 30 days of receipt of notice, a petition to legitimate his child; O.C.G.A. § 19-7-22 regulates a petition for the legitimation of a child, notice to the mother, a court order, the order's effect, and the intervention by the father. In the Interest of D.W., 264 Ga. App. 833, 592 S.E.2d 679 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

If a biological father fails to file a legitimation petition within 30 days of a petition under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283), he loses all rights to the child and will not be entitled to object to the termination of his parental rights; if no legitimation petition is timely filed, or if it is denied or dismissed, the trial court shall enter an order terminating the father's rights under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283). In the Interest of D.W., 264 Ga. App. 833, 592 S.E.2d 679 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Order terminating a biological parent's parental rights was upheld on appeal as the parent failed to file for legitimation of the affected children within 30 days of being notified of the termination petition, despite repeatedly being notified to do so, and despite the appointment of an attorney in the termination proceedings. In the Interest of S.M.G., 284 Ga. App. 64, 643 S.E.2d 296 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Because a father failed to give written notice to the juvenile court that a legitimation petition was filed, as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(h) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28), within 30 days of receiving notification of a termination proceeding, the juvenile court properly entered an order terminating the father's parental rights, and the father was thus denied the right to object. In the Interest of S.M.R., 286 Ga. App. 139, 648 S.E.2d 697 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Trial court properly terminated a parent's parental rights to a child as a result of the parent failing to timely file a notice of the petition to legitimate the child with the juvenile court within 30 days. In the Interest of M.D., 293 Ga. App. 700, 667 S.E.2d 693 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

Because a father of a 7-year-old autistic child had not even attempted to legitimate his child, despite numerous warnings from the juvenile court, the father lacked standing to challenge the termination of his parental rights. Therefore, the father's argument that the juvenile court erred in denying his motion for a continuance was moot. In the Interest of T. B. R., 304 Ga. App. 773, 697 S.E.2d 878 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96).

15-11-284. Notice of effect of termination judgment.

The notice required to be given to the mother, the biological father, and legal father of the child shall state:

"NOTICE OF EFFECT OF TERMINATION JUDGMENT

Georgia law provides that you can permanently lose your rights as a parent. A petition to terminate parental rights has been filed requesting the court to terminate your parental rights to your child. A copy of the petition to terminate parental rights is attached to this notice. A court hearing of your case has been scheduled for the _____ day of _____, _____, at (time of day), at the _____ Court of _____ County.

If you fail to appear, the court can terminate your rights in your absence.

If the court at the trial finds that the facts set out in the petition to terminate parental rights are true and that termination of your rights will serve the best interests of your child, the court can enter a judgment ending your rights to your child.

If the judgment terminates your parental rights, you will no longer have any rights to your child. This means that you will not have the right to visit, contact, or have custody of your child or make any decisions affecting your child or your child's earnings or property. Your child will be legally freed to be adopted by someone else.

Even if your parental rights are terminated:

(1) You will still be responsible for providing financial support (child support payments) for your child's care unless and until your child is adopted; and

(2) Your child can still inherit from you unless and until your child is adopted.

This is a very serious matter. You should contact an attorney immediately so that you can be prepared for the court hearing. You have the right to hire an attorney and to have him or her represent you. If you cannot afford to hire an attorney, the court will appoint an attorney if the court finds that you are an indigent person. Whether or not you decide to hire an attorney, you have the right to attend the hearing of your case, to call witnesses on your behalf, and to question those witnesses brought against you.

If you have any questions concerning this notice, you may call the telephone number of the clerk's office which is _____."

15-11-285. Sanctions for failure to obey summons.

(a) If any person named in and properly served with a summons shall without reasonable cause fail to appear or, when directed in the summons, to bring the child named in the petition pursuant to this article before the court, then the court may issue a rule nisi against the person, directing the person to appear before the court to show cause why he or she should not be held in contempt of court.

(b) If a summons cannot be served or if the person to whom the summons is directed fails to obey it, the court may issue an order to take the child named in the petition pursuant to this article into protective custody.

Part 4

Hearings

15-11-300. (For effective date, see note.) Notice of hearings to specified parties; required findings.

(a) In advance of each hearing to terminate parental rights, DFCS shall give written notice of the date, time, place, and purpose of the hearing to the caregiver of the child at issue, the foster parents of such child, if any, any preadoptive parent, or any relative providing care for such child, including the right to be heard. The written notice shall be delivered to the recipient at least 72 hours before the review or hearing by United States mail, e-mail, or hand delivery.

(b) This Code section shall not be construed to require a caregiver, foster parent, preadoptive parent, or relative caring for the child at issue to be made a party to the hearing solely on the basis of such notice and right to be heard.

(c) (For effective date, see note.) At any termination of parental rights hearing, the court shall make specific findings of fact in writing regarding participation by the caregiver of a child, the foster parent of a child, any preadoptive parent, or any relative providing care for a child. Such findings of fact shall include:

(1) Whether the caregiver was provided notice of the hearing, including the method, and whether the caregiver expressed an interest in being heard at the hearing; and

(2) If the caregiver is present, specific information regarding the caregiver's views, including, but not limited to, concerning the child's well-being, health, and safety; any changes the caregiver believes are necessary to advance the child's well-being, health, and safety; and the timeliness, necessity, and quality of services being provided to the child and caregiver; and a summary of documentation presented by the caregiver regarding the child's well-being, health, and safety, including, but not limited to, reports from physicians, counselors, psychologists, and teachers.

Delayed effective date. — Subsection (c), as set out above, becomes effective January 1, 2021. Until January 1, 2021, there is no subsection (c).

The 2020 amendment, effective January 1, 2021, added subsection (c).

Statutory construction. — Because former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282) related specifically to service in termination of parental rights proceedings, the trial court's reliance on the service provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), a statute dealing with service in juvenile court proceedings generally, was misplaced; moreover, for purposes of statutory interpretation, a specific statute prevailed over a general statute, absent any indication of a contrary legislative intent. In the Interest of C.S., 282 Ga. 7, 644 S.E.2d 812 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-104).

15-11-301. Expedited hearings; orders.

(a) If no just cause has been shown for delay, all hearings contemplated by this article shall be conducted within 90 days of the date a petition to terminate parental rights is filed.

(b) If no just cause for delay has been shown by written finding of fact by the court, an order of disposition shall be issued by the juvenile court no later than 30 days after the conclusion of the hearing on the petition to terminate parental rights.

(c) All hearings contemplated by this article shall be recorded by stenographic notes or by electronic, mechanical, or other appropriate means capable of accurately capturing a full and complete record of all words spoken during the hearings. If no just cause for delay has been shown, the court reporter shall provide a transcript of the hearings no later than 30 days after a notice of appeal is filed.

(d) This Code section shall not affect the right to request a rehearing or the right to appeal the juvenile court's order.

(e) Failure to comply with the time requirements of this Code section shall not be grounds to invalidate an otherwise proper order terminating parental rights unless the court determines that such delay resulted in substantial prejudice to a party.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Just cause for delay. — Although a hearing in a mother's parental rights termination proceeding was not held for two years, such was justified based on a finding that there was just cause for delay as one of the fathers of the five children involved in the termination proceeding was difficult to serve; service by publication was too costly for the county agency, many attempts to effect personal service were unsuccessfully made, and the mother deliberately hindered the agency's efforts to obtain service on the father. In the Interest of A.A., 274 Ga. App. 791, 618 S.E.2d 723 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-106).

15-11-302. Confidentiality of testimony of parties.

The record of the testimony of the parties adduced in any proceeding under this article shall not be admissible in any civil, criminal, or any other cause or proceedings in any court against a person named as respondent for any purpose whatsoever, except in subsequent dependency or termination proceedings involving the same child or dependency or termination proceedings involving the same respondent.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-302, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-303. Standard of proof.

In all proceedings under this article, the standard of proof to be adduced to terminate parental rights shall be by clear and convincing evidence.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-303, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-86, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Standard of review for the termination of parental rights is whether, after viewing the evidence in a light most favorable to the parent, a rational trier of fact could have found by clear and convincing evidence that the biological parent's rights should have been lost. State v. O'Neill, 209 Vt. 599, 209 A.3d 1213 (2019) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-86).

15-11-304. Applicability of Title 24; privileges.

Except as provided in this Code section, hearings to terminate parental rights shall be conducted in accordance with Title 24. Testimony or other evidence relevant to determining whether a statutory ground for termination of parental rights exists may not be excluded on any ground of privilege, except in the case of:

(1) Communications between a party and his or her attorney; and

(2) Confessions or communications between a priest, rabbi, or duly ordained minister or similar functionary and his or her confidential communicant.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-304, enacted by Ga. L. 2014, p. 780, § 1-22/SB 364.

PART 5

GROUNDS FOR TERMINATION OF PARENTAL RIGHTS

15-11-310. Grounds for determining termination of parental rights.

(a) In considering the termination of parental rights, the court shall first determine whether one of the following statutory grounds for termination of parental rights has been met:

(1) The parent has given written consent to termination which has been acknowledged by the court or has voluntarily surrendered his or her child for adoption;

(2) The parent has subjected his or her child to aggravated circumstances;

(3) The parent has wantonly and willfully failed to comply for a period of 12 months or longer with a decree to support his or her child that has been entered by a court of competent jurisdiction of this or any other state;

(4) A child is abandoned by his or her parent; or

(5) A child is a dependent child due to lack of proper parental care or control by his or her parent, reasonable efforts to remedy the circumstances have been unsuccessful or were not required, such cause of dependency is likely to continue or will not likely be remedied in the reasonably foreseeable future, and:

(A) Returning such child to his or her parent is likely to cause serious physical, mental, moral, or emotional harm to such child or threaten the physical safety or well-being of such child; or

(B) Continuation of the parent and child relationship will cause or is likely to cause serious physical, mental, moral, or emotional harm to such child.

(b) If any of the statutory grounds for termination has been met, the court shall then consider whether termination is in a child's best interests after considering the following factors:

(1) Such child's sense of attachments, including his or her sense of security and familiarity, and the continuity of affection for such child;

(2) Such child's wishes and long-term goals;

(3) Such child's need for permanence, including his or her need for stability and continuity of relationships with a parent, siblings, and other relatives;

(4) Any benefit to such child of being integrated into a stable and permanent home and the likely effect of delaying such integration into such stable and permanent home environment;

(5) The detrimental impact of the lack of a stable and permanent home environment on such child's safety, well-being, or physical, mental, or emotional health;

(6) Such child's future physical, mental, moral, or emotional well-being; and

(7) Any other factors, including the factors set forth in Code Section 15-11-26, considered by the court to be relevant and proper to its determination.

(c) If the court determines that a parent has subjected his or her child to aggravated circumstances because such parent has committed the murder of the other parent of such child, the court shall presume that termination of parental rights is in the best interests of the child.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-310, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2018, p. 935, § 3/SB 131.

The 2018 amendment, effective July 1, 2018, substituted the present provisions of paragraph (a)(5) for the former provisions, which read: "A child is a dependent child due to lack of proper parental care or control by his or her parent, reasonable efforts to remedy the circumstances have been unsuccessful or were not required, such cause of dependency is likely to continue or will not likely be remedied, and the continued dependency will cause or is likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to such child."; deleted "and" at the end of paragraph (b)(3); added paragraphs (b)(4) through (b)(6); and redesignated former paragraph (b)(4) as present paragraph (b)(7).

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Sections 15-11-51 and 15-11-81, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-94, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70 not applicable. — Provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-443 and 15-11-607) as to orders of disposition and recommendations regarding unification were not applicable in proceedings under former O.C.G.A.

§ 15-11-81 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320). In re V.S., 230 Ga. App. 26, 495 S.E.2d 142 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Primary consideration in proceeding to terminate parental rights was welfare of child. In re Creech, 139 Ga. App. 210, 228 S.E.2d 198 (1976); Avera v. Rainwater, 150 Ga. App. 39, 256 S.E.2d 648 (1979) (decided under former law).

Parental misconduct or incapability must be shown. — For the termination of parental rights, there must be a showing of parental unfitness caused either by intentional or unintentional misconduct resulting in abuse or neglect of the child, or by what is tantamount to a physical or mental incapability to care for the child. Howard v. Department of Human Resources, 157 Ga. App. 306, 277 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former law).

Petition to terminate own rights not authorized. — Statutory authority of the juvenile court to entertain petitions to terminate parental rights does not extend to petitions by parents seeking judicial imprimatur of their own voluntary abandonment of parental responsibility. In re K.L.S., 180 Ga. App. 688, 350 S.E.2d 50 (1986) (decided under former law).

Responsibility cannot be terminated by contract. — Father could not voluntarily abandon his parental responsibility by contract. Diegel v. Diegel, 261 Ga. App. 660, 583 S.E.2d 520 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Agency custody does not oust judicial jurisdiction. — That a "deprived child" may be in agency custody at the time of the hearing on termination of parental rights does not oust the juvenile court from jurisdiction to determine the ultimate issue of custody. In re K.C.O., 142 Ga. App. 216, 235 S.E.2d 602 (1977) (decided under former law).

Exercise of custody by county department suspends, but does not terminate, parental rights. — Removal of custody of the child from the parents is a determination that, for whatever length of time custody is exercised by the department of family and children services, this right has been suspended, although not finally terminated. Rodgers v. Department of Human Resources, 157 Ga. App. 235, 276 S.E.2d 902 (1981) (decided under former law).

Time limitation in subparagraph (b)(4)(C) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310(a)(3)) is designed to give the parent whose rights are subject to termination sufficient time and opportunity to demonstrate his or her ability to comply with the terms of the court's order. In re B.L., 196 Ga. App. 807, 397 S.E.2d 156 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Legitimation rights of putative father must first be determined. — Within the context of a parental rights termination proceeding, a juvenile court had the discretion to determine whether to grant an extension of time for a putative father to serve his legitimation petition on the mother, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-7-22(b) former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283), and Georgia case law that allowed application of the procedural rules set out in the Civil Practice Act, including O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c) relating to service and extensions thereto; accordingly, the juvenile court's refusal to hear the legitimation petition was error as was the decision to terminate the putative father's parental rights under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320) without first determining whether he had standing or not under the legitimation action. In the Interest of A.H., 279 Ga. App. 77, 630 S.E.2d 587 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Biological father who fails to seek to legitimate his child following receipt of proper notice of termination proceedings may not thereafter object to the termination of his parental rights. In the Interest of A.W., 242 Ga. App. 26, 528 S.E.2d 819 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Father lacked standing to challenge termination order. — Given a biological father's failure to legitimate the child at issue, the father lacked standing to challenge the juvenile court's termination of parental rights order. In the Interest of L.S.T., 286 Ga. App. 638, 649 S.E.2d

Determination whether needs met by temporary custody. — Although sufficient evidence was presented to authorize termination of parental rights, the case was remanded to the trial court to determine if the child's needs could be met by temporary custody to some agency or individual as opposed to a complete severance of all parental rights. Jones v. Department of Human Resources, 168 Ga. App. 915, 310 S.E.2d 753 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

In a hearing on parental custody in a divorce action, the trial court erred in awarding custody of the parties' minor children to the Department of Family and Children Services based upon findings that the children were deprived and the parents unfit because the mother had no notice that the superior court judge might award custody of the children to a third party based upon standards of deprivation. Watkins v. Watkins, 266 Ga. 269, 466 S.E.2d 860 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination petition was not a disguised adoption matter. — Contrary to a father's contention, the termination petition filed by the child's mother was not actually a disguised adoption matter that could be properly heard only in superior court. The stepfather's mere expression of a desire to adopt the child at some time in the future was not sufficient for the court to conclude that the petition was filed in connection with an adoption proceeding; there was no evidence that an adoption petition was pending at the time that the petition was filed; and the petition, which stated that the father failed to provide for the support of the child and failed to have any contact with the child, alleged grounds sufficient for termination. In the Interest of A.R.K.L., 314 Ga. App. 847, 726 S.E.2d 77 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Consent to termination not procured by duress. — Mother's written consent pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310) to termination of her parental rights to her child, who was suspected of having autism, was not procured by fraud or duress, although it was later determined that the child did not have autism. The pressure the mother felt to try to keep one of her children did not constitute legal duress. In re A.B., 311 Ga. App. 629, 716 S.E.2d 755 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Criteria for Termination

Criteria justifying termination. — Affirmative evidence of moral unfitness, physical abuse, abandonment, refusal to support, or similar misconduct by a parent or the likelihood of substantial threat to a child's physical, mental, moral, or emotional well-being justifiably warrants the termination of a parent's right to a child. Elrod v. Hall County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 136 Ga. App. 251, 220 S.E.2d 726 (1975) (decided under former law).

Thread running through parental right termination cases manifests moral unfitness, physical abuse, and abandonment. Patty v. Department of Human Resources, 154 Ga. App. 455, 269 S.E.2d 30 (1980) (decided under former law).

Court in arriving at the court's decision in terminating parental rights should use, among other criteria, moral unfitness, physical abuse, and abandonment by a parent. Gardner v. Lenon, 154 Ga. App. 748, 270 S.E.2d 36 (1980) (decided under former law).

Custody may be lost if a child is found to be destitute or suffering, if the child is being reared under immoral influences, or if the child is found to be deprived and likely to be harmed thereby. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983) (decided under former law).

Parental rights may be terminated when the child is deprived and the court finds that the conditions and causes of the deprivation are likely to continue or will not be remedied and that by reason thereof the child is suffering or will probably suffer serious physical, mental, moral, or emotional harm. The last two statutorily required findings are necessary only in cases of termination of parental rights. In re J.C.P., 167 Ga. App. 572, 307 S.E.2d 1 (1983), but see In re A.W.,

240 Ga. App. 259, 523 S.E.2d 88 (1999) (decided under former law).

Determining the propriety of termination of parental rights is a two-step process. First, the court shall determine if there exists clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or inability; secondly, if such evidence exists, the court then considers whether termination of parental rights is in the best interest of the child, given the physical, mental, emotional, and moral condition and needs of the child, including the need for a stable home. In re G.L.H., 209 Ga. App. 146, 433 S.E.2d 357 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re B.C., 235 Ga. App. 152, 508 S.E.2d 774 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Juvenile court employed a two-prong analysis for determining whether parental rights should be terminated under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-10-310 and 15-10-320) first, the court determined whether there was clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or that the parent was unable to care for and control the child; and, second, the court determined whether termination was in the best interest of the child. In the Interest of A.M., 259 Ga. App. 537, 578 S.E.2d 226 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Detailed findings for termination. — Termination of parental rights was allowed when the trial judge made detailed findings regarding the criteria to meet the two-step test, specifically, the court found that within the 18 months preceding the court's order, the defendant made no attempt to contact or communicate with the child, and the child was readily adoptable. In re H.M.T., 203 Ga. App. 247, 416 S.E.2d 567 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Considerations for the court. — Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(C)(ii)-(iii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310), in cases when the child was not in the custody of the parent who was the subject of the termination of parental rights proceedings and in determining whether the child was without proper parental care and control, the court should consider, without being limited to, whether the parent without justifiable cause failed significantly for a period of one year or longer prior to the filing of the petition for termination of parental rights: (1) to provide for the care and support of the child as required by law or judicial decree; and (2) to comply with a court ordered plan designed to reunite the child with the parent or parents. In the Interest of J.J., 259 Ga. App. 159, 575 S.E.2d 921 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Court's failure to make clear court's basis for termination decision. — Termination of the mother's parental rights had to be vacated because it was unclear whether the juvenile court intended to rely on dependency or abandonment to support the court's decision to terminate the mother's parental rights given that the juvenile court appeared to have addressed the two concepts interchangeably. In the Interest of J. A. B., 336 Ga. App. 367, 785 S.E.2d 43 (2016).

Termination of rights in child's best interest based on case manager's testimony. — Termination of the mother's parental rights was in the child's best interests because the case manager testified that the child was thriving in foster care and bonded with the foster parents, that the mother was unstable, the mother continued to use cocaine, and that continued contact with the mother would be harmful to the child. In the Interest of C. A. B., 351 Ga. App. 666, 832 S.E.2d 645 (2019).

Egregious conduct was one factor in termination proceedings. — Egregious conduct or evidence of past egregious conduct of a parent toward the parent's child or another child of a physically, emotionally, or sexually cruel or abusive nature was one factor a court may consider in determining whether the child was without proper parental care and control under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(B)(iv) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-318). In the Interest of J.P., 253 Ga. App. 732, 560 S.E.2d 318 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Because a mother's children had been found to be deprived, as defined in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-107), because her persistent failure to adequately supervise the children supported a finding that the deprivation was likely to continue, and because continued deprivation was likely to seriously harm the children, the mother's parental rights were properly terminated. In the Interest of T. A. H., 310 Ga. App. 93, 712 S.E.2d 115 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Abandonment by parent. — Termination of the mother's parental rights based on abandonment was proper because O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310 did not require the juvenile court to make a finding that the child would suffer harm if the child remained in foster care in order for parental rights to be terminated; and the mother waived the mother's right to challenge the juvenile court's finding on appeal as the mother failed to enumerate as error and challenge on appeal the juvenile court's determination that the evidence supported a finding of abandonment by the mother as a statutory ground for terminating the mother's parental rights. In the Interest of I. H. H., 345 Ga. App. 808, 815 S.E.2d 133 (2018).

Juvenile court's determination that the father abandoned the child was supported by clear and convincing evidence including evidence that the father had no contact with the child for nearly three years, the father had been incarcerated and admitted to having a drug problem, and the father had a violent temper and perpetrated acts of violence against the mother in and out of the child's presence. In the Interest of C. S., 354 Ga. App. 133, 840 S.E.2d 475 (2020).

Proof of abandonment. — Record supported a finding of abandonment as the evidence showed that the father paid no child support, as required by the Department of Children and Family Services (DFCS) case plan, had not seen the child for over a year leading up to the termination proceedings, failed to legitimate the child, moved to Florida (and later Tennessee) without notifying DFCS, and failed to attend the vast majority of scheduled visits with the child arranged by DFCS. In the Interest of B. D. O., 343 Ga. App. 587, 807 S.E.2d 507 (2017).

Termination not justified. — Evidence was insufficient to terminate the mother's parental rights and grant an adoption petition of the maternal grandparents because any continued dependency experienced by the child was not shown to likely cause the child serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm as the mother was progressing with stabilization, the child had a stable lifestyle with the care of maternal grandparents and extended family, and the mother and child maintained a positive, healthy bond. Hewlett v. Hewlett, 349 Ga. App. 267, 825 S.E.2d 622 (2019).

Evidence

Present situation must be considered prior to termination. — Juvenile court erred in terminating the mother's parental rights after the child was beaten by the mother's husband so severely that she had to be placed on life support since the Department of Family and Children Services failed to show by clear and convincing evidence that the mother was presently unfit and that the deprivation would continue unless her parental rights were terminated; there was no evidence that the child had been deprived while in her mother's care prior to the mother's marriage and as the husband had been removed from the child and the mother's life, the primary cause of the child's deprivation had been remedied. In addition, the mother acted entirely on her own to improve her abilities to care for her child so that a similar situation did not recur. In the Interest of V.E.H., 262 Ga. App. 192, 585 S.E.2d 154 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence requirements showing parental misconduct or inability. — Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) and (b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310), construing the evidence most favorably to the findings of the court, the question on appeal of a termination of parental rights was whether a rational trier of fact could have found clear and convincing evidence: (1) of parental misconduct or inability; and (2) that terminating parental rights was in the best interest of the child. Parental misconduct or inability was shown by evidence: (1) that the child was deprived; (2) lack of parental care caused the deprivation; (3) such was likely to continue; and (4) the continued deprivation was likely to cause serious harm to the child. In the Interest of M.L., 259 Ga. App. 534, 578 S.E.2d 190 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Inability to properly rear children. — Same factors that show a parent's inability to properly rear her children also may provide proof that termination of parental rights would be in the children's best interests. In re S.J.C., 234 Ga. App. 491, 507 S.E.2d 226 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Same factors showing parental misconduct used for termination. — Same factors that show parental misconduct or inability can support a juvenile court's finding that termination of parental rights is in the children's best interests. In the Interest of N.L., 260 Ga. App. 830, 581 S.E.2d 643 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence of dependency supported termination. — There was sufficient evidence that the children were dependent at the time of the termination hearing due to a lack of proper parental care and control, including evidence of repeated instances of inadequate food, clothing, and shelter, inadequate supervision, the mother's resistance towards acquiring recommended therapy for a child, and injuries sustained by the children. In the Interest of D. M. et al., 339 Ga. App. 46, 793 S.E.2d 422 (2016).

In a case terminating the mother's parental rights, the child was currently dependent at the time of the hearing because the mother failed to maintain visitation with the child from May 2015 to March 2016, with only sporadic visitation prior to May 2015; the mother failed to provide child support, refused to provide proof of income, and was currently living in a two-bedroom home with four other individuals, none of whom had been screened by the Department of Family and Children Services or ever met the child; and the mother suffered from serious mental health issues, which the mother denied, even though the mother was taking some medication and receiving some counseling. In the Interest of R. S. T., 345 Ga. App. 300, 812 S.E.2d 614 (2018).

Same evidence showing parental misconduct used for termination. — Same evidence showing parental misconduct or inability may establish the requirement to show that termination of parental rights is in a child's best interest. In the Interest of A.B., 274 Ga. App. 230, 617 S.E.2d 189 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence sufficient to support termination. — Order terminating the mother's parental rights was supported by evidence that any strides the mother made pertaining to the case plan were temporary, the mother only made two child support payments, the mother failed to secure stable housing, and the mother returned the children 12 hours after regaining custody and suggested the children live with the foster parents. In the Interest of C. J. V., 333 Ga. App. 844, 777 S.E.2d 692 (2015).

Failure to pay child support supported termination. — Clear and convincing evidence was presented to support termination of the father's parental rights on the basis of failure to comply for a period of 12 months with a decree to support the child, including evidence that the father was ordered to pay support of $45 per week and the father failed to provide any support for the child through the date of the final hearing. In the Interest of E. M., 347 Ga. App. 351, 819 S.E.2d 505 (2018).

Evidence supported termination based on aggravating circumstances. — There was clear and convincing evidence to support the juvenile court's termination of the parent's parental rights for subjecting the children to aggravating circumstances including evidence that the parent had a history of abusing the children. In the Interest of C. A. B., 347 Ga. App. 474, 819 S.E.2d 916 (2018).

Actions of Parents

Improper to terminate rights of illegal alien. — When a father, an illegal alien, cooperated with the court and the Department of Family and Children Services (DFCS), participated in mediation, was trying to obtain legal residency, worked full time, paid child support, consistently visited his daughter, and had a positive relationship with her, the juvenile court erred in terminating his parental rights on grounds that he might someday be deported and the child be sent to Mexico or returned to the care of DFCS. In the Interest of M.M., 263 Ga. App. 353, 587 S.E.2d 825 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination appropriate when children living in filth. — To determine the best interests of the children, the juvenile court may consider the same factors that supported its finding of parental inability; hence, when the children were raised in filth and the mother did nothing to demonstrate that she could maintain a stable, sanitary home, the juvenile court did not err in terminating the mother's parental rights. In the Interest of A.B., 251 Ga. App. 827, 555 S.E.2d 159 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Children living in squalor. — An order terminating parental rights is amply supported by evidence, inter alia, that the parents failed to provide a stable home environment, the children were generally filthy, they resided in a house with human and animal waste in the living area, the family did not use proper hygiene and they had a strong, offensive odor, the parents provided no routine health care for the children, and the children did not have adequate clothing for cold weather. Cain v. Department of Human Resources, 166 Ga. App. 801, 305 S.E.2d 492 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence of the mother's lack of motivation in the past and her present very squalid living conditions, which the homemaker testified showed very little improvement, formed a valid basis for the court's decision to terminate the mother's parental rights. In re L.A., 166 Ga. App. 857, 305 S.E.2d 636 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parents' children were deprived within the meaning of subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310) and, thus, termination of parental rights was appropriate when the children continued to live in deplorable conditions even after a case plan was developed and there was no reason to expect that the conditions would improve. In re K.L., 234 Ga. App. 719, 507 S.E.2d 542 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination of parents' parental rights was supported by sufficient evidence which showed that after the children were placed in foster care due to unsanitary living conditions and abandonment, the parents continued to live in squalor and did not comply with the court's reunification plan. In the Interest of H.H., 257 Ga. App. 173, 570 S.E.2d 623 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of parental rights for killing other parent. — Mere fact that one parent kills another does not in and of itself cause the forfeiture of the killer's parental rights as a matter of law. In re H.L.T., 164 Ga. App. 517, 298 S.E.2d 33 (1982) (decided under former law).

Requisite malice necessarily shown by a finding of guilty to the murder of one's spouse, as opposed to voluntary manslaughter, is sufficient to imply a moral unfitness such as to terminate the parental relationship, an unfitness which is likely to continue with resultant harm to the innocent child. Heath v. McGuire, 167 Ga. App. 489, 306 S.E.2d 741 (1983) (decided under former law).

Father's parental rights were terminated after he pled guilty to the murder of the children's mother and her companion in the children's hearing, had repeatedly neglected the physical and emotional needs of the children, had a history of violent and abusive behavior toward the children and their mother, and the murders had a demonstrable negative effect on his relationship with the children. In re J.L.M., 204 Ga. App. 46, 418 S.E.2d 415 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination of parental rights for father's murder of the mother of the child while on bond for aggravated assault based on his having shot a friend of the mother was proper. In re A.M.S., 208 Ga. App. 328, 430 S.E.2d 626 (1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 1128, 114 S. Ct. 1095, 127

L. Ed. 2d 409 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

When the biological father was serving a lengthy prison sentence for the murder of the mother of his children, termination of his parental rights was warranted. In re C.M.S., 218 Ga. App. 487, 462 S.E.2d 398 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Despite the fact that a father had not yet been tried, his parental rights were properly terminated for moral unfitness because the father admitted that the father fatally shot the wife in front of the child and that he left his child, who had cerebral palsy and was unable to care for himself, alone with the child's mother's body. In the Interest of J.R., 274 Ga. App. 653, 618 S.E.2d 688 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent threatening harm to other parent. — Evidence that a father had emotionally abused and neglected a child by repeatedly beating and threatening to kill the child's mother in the child's presence, along with evidence that the father also repeatedly beat his first wife, was relevant to whether the cause of the child's deprivation was likely to continue under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311) and was admissible under former O.C.G.A. § 24-2-2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-4-405). Davis v. Rathel, 273 Ga. App. 183, 614 S.E.2d 823 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent convicted of conspiracy to murder spouse. — In a proceeding to terminate a mother's parental rights, after the mother had been convicted of conspiracy in the murder of her husband, the juvenile court committed harmful error in distinguishing the mother from the person who did the killing and concluding that the mother's role in the conspiracy did not support a finding of parental unfitness. In re J.M.R., 218 Ga. App. 490, 462 S.E.2d 173 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Failure to protect child from others. — Evidence supported termination of a mother's parental rights, since her two-year old child was discovered by police in a filthy motel room with the mother's third husband, and the child was without clothes, was crying profusely, and exhibited multiple bruises and cigarette burns on the child's body. In re B.R.S., 198 Ga. App. 561, 402 S.E.2d 281 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination of mother's parental rights was warranted by evidence that she permitted her child to spend the night with a neighbor who was suspected of sexually abusing the child. In re B.J., 220 Ga. App. 144, 469 S.E.2d 313 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

When a mother's boyfriend was charged with murdering one of her three children, she was charged with complicity, and the state took custody of the child at issue within days of the child's birth and apparently made no plans for the reunification of mother and child, the record lacked clear and convincing evidence of the existence of the factors set out in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (b)(4)(A)(ii)-(iv) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310); therefore, the juvenile court erred in finding the child was "deprived" and that the deprivation was ongoing due to maternal inability to properly care for and protect the child. In the Interest of A.B., 263 Ga. App. 697, 589 S.E.2d 264 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

For purposes of the termination of parental rights, the evidence was sufficient to support a trial court's finding that a lack of proper parental care by a mother caused her children's deprivation including that: (1) the mother did not protect her daughter from her husband after the first incident of sexual abuse; (2) the mother continued to have contact with her husband after an order prohibited her from doing so, which violated the reunification plan; (3) the mother was slow to recognize the threat to the child; (4) the mother did not provide any support for the children while they were in the family services department's care; and (5) the mother failed to maintain any contact with the trial court, her attorney, or the family services department for 18 months. In the Interest of J.H., 267 Ga. App. 541, 600 S.E.2d 650 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Failure to protect child from other parent. — Judgment of termination of a mother's parental rights was sustained by clear and convincing evidence when, in the period following the placement of the children in foster care, the mother made no progress toward establishing a stable home and removing herself for her children's sake from financial and domestic dependence upon the father of one of the children, who was determined to have sexually abused the other; and, moreover, she offered no plan or course of endeavor suggesting she could in any manner establish a home for the children away from that person and away from her mother's house in which it was found by the trial court to have a history of child molestation. In re S.G., 182 Ga. App. 95, 354 S.E.2d 640 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence showing that the father did not protect the child from the physical and emotional abuse of the mother even though he knew she was prone to violence and had harmed the child in the past warranted termination of his parental rights. In re M.C.A.B., 207 Ga. App. 325, 427 S.E.2d 824 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

When a father's almost total lack of involvement in his child's welfare left the child vulnerable to the neglect and abuse her mother inflicted upon her, his lack of proper care and control was the cause of her deprivation. In re D.N.M., 235 Ga. App. 712, 510 S.E.2d 366 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was affirmed; evidence that the mother failed to take steps to prevent the father's abuse of the children, as well as the mother's active assistance in spanking them with belts on at least one occasion, counseled in favor of a finding that the deprivation was likely to continue. In the Interest of N.S.E., 287 Ga. App. 186, 651 S.E.2d 123 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Although the parental rights of the other parent had also been terminated based on the other parent's criminal history, mental illness, prior poor parenting, anger management issues, lack of income and employment, and alcohol abuse, the parent expressed no intention of altering the relationship with the other parent in light of the other parent's parental unfitness and the parent's statement that that the parent would use the other parent as a caregiver; thus, termination of the parent's rights was necessary to protect the best interests of the child, whose primary caregiver would be the other parent. In the Interest of A.D.M., 288 Ga. App. 757, 655 S.E.2d 336 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 402 (Ga. 2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent's solicitation of someone to murder child. — Partial denial of a father's motion for a continuance in proceedings to terminate the father's parental rights was not an abuse of discretion as the father did not object to the trial court's proposal and the decision to allow a mother to testify without delay, and the father failed to show that additional time would have benefitted him; the termination of the father's parental rights was based on: (1) a divorce decree permanently prohibiting the father from all contact with his child; and (2) the father's conviction of soliciting someone to murder his child. In the Interest of M.H.W., 275 Ga. App. 586, 621 S.E.2d 779 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent threatening to kill children. — In a parental rights termination case, the father argued unsuccessfully that there was no competent evidence that the children would suffer harm if the father was permitted to maintain the father's parental rights under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iv) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311); the father's incarceration was to continue for years, and the father had held the children hostage and threatened to kill them. In the Interest of B.D., 281 Ga. App. 725, 637 S.E.2d 123 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Exposing children to domestic violence. — It was clear that the juvenile court had not erred in finding that the children's best interests were served by terminating the mother's parental rights when the mother's exposure of her children to incidents of domestic violence demonstrated an indifference to their safety and particularly disturbing were the unexplained injuries one of the children suffered, both the serious burns to the child's mouth and what appeared to have been sexual abuse, while in the care of the mother. In the Interest of N.L., 260 Ga. App. 830, 581 S.E.2d 643 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Domestic violence in home justified termination of parental rights. — Mother's parental rights were properly terminated given an environment of unrelenting domestic violence and drug abuse and her failure to stabilize the home according to a prior court-ordered plan. In re S.M.S., 207 Ga. App. 248, 427 S.E.2d 598 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Refusal to allow child to attend school. — There was sufficient evidence of present unfitness, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310), to support termination of a mother's parental rights because each time the child was returned to the mother, the pattern of deprivation continued in which the mother refused to allow the child to attend school due to the child's mild to moderate eczema, two doctors testified that eczema would not interfere with the child's ability to attend school, and the mother refused to obtain psychiatric counseling or to take medication in order to regain custody. In the Interest of R.H.L., 272 Ga. App. 10, 611 S.E.2d 700 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Wanton and willful failure to comply with support order not shown. — See In re H.B., 174 Ga. App. 435, 330 S.E.2d 173 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Trial court erred by basing the court's finding of dependency of a child on time during which the father had not been served and in terminating the father's rights for non-support during a time when he had not been served; the father had paid $1,020 in support, curing contempt, and had completed most of his parenting classes. In the Interest of T. S., 351 Ga. App. 297, 830 S.E.2d 789 (2019).

Financial inability to support authorized termination. — When the evidence supported the trial court's finding that a parent did not have the financial means to support her children and had, despite court orders requiring her to do so, failed to pay child support sufficient to provide for even the bare necessities, that she had consistently failed to comply with court-ordered reunification plans, i.e. maintain stable employment or adequate housing, visit the children regularly, or to attend counseling consistently, the court properly concluded that such failure established grounds for termination. In re M.L.P., 236 Ga. App. 504, 512 S.E.2d 652 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Failure to support. — When the father admitted that he had failed to pay child support for over a year and offered no satisfactory explanation for his failure to provide financial support for his children, and the father was an admitted unrehabilitated alcohol abuser who lived in a two-bedroom trailer with his girlfriend and her two children by a former relationship, termination of the father's parental rights was justified. In re C.G.A., 204 Ga. App. 174, 418 S.E.2d 779 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Trial court did not err by considering a mother's failure to provide the children with monetary support as one of the grounds for termination, notwithstanding her assertion that a court had never issued an order requiring such support, as a parent has a statutory duty to support her children with or without a court order. In the Interest of R.W., 248 Ga. App. 522, 546 S.E.2d 882 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Father's failure to support his child, even in the absence of an order directing the father to pay a specific amount for the child's support, was compelling evidence that the father was not an able parent under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(B)(v) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311). In the Interest of S.E.L., 251 Ga. App. 728, 555 S.E.2d 115 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court's determination that the children's deprivation for purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311) resulted from the lack of proper parental care or control was supported by evidence that the mother did not pay any child support for her five children during the two years preceding the termination hearing, leaving the Department of Children and Families to support her children; the mother had a statutory duty under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2 to support her children, with or without a court order. In the Interest of J.J., 259 Ga. App. 159, 575 S.E.2d 921 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Father's parental rights were properly terminated because evidence that the children would be in danger if reunited with him and that he had repeatedly failed to pay child support or to comply with case plan goals clearly and convincingly supported the juvenile court's determination that the deprivation was likely to continue and to cause the children serious harm. In the Interest of B.L., 278 Ga. App. 388, 629 S.E.2d 89 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a parent's parental rights was affirmed pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311) as the totality of the evidence supported a finding that the parent had not voluntarily fulfilled the parent's support obligations to the parent's child; the evidence showed that the only child support the parent paid had been that which was garnished from the parent's wages, and even with such an arrangement the parent somehow fell behind in the payments. In the Interest of K.D., 285 Ga. App. 673, 647 S.E.2d 360 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent's parental rights to a child were properly terminated because the cause of the child's dependency was likely to continue and not likely to be remedied, satisfying O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310(a)(5); the parent's psychological issues, incarcerations, and refusal to follow the parent's case plan had worsened, not improved. In the Interest of S. P., 336 Ga. App. 488, 784 S.E.2d 846 (2016) (decided prior to 2018 amendment of paragraph (a)(5)).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was proper because the mother wantonly and willfully failed to comply for a period of 12 months or longer with the court's child support decree as the mother did not present evidence supporting the mother's uncorroborated testimony that the mother paid $600 in child support. In the Interest of C. A. B., 351 Ga. App. 666, 832 S.E.2d 645 (2019).

Parent's inability to find work insufficient for termination. — While a young mother failed to obtain employment while her child was in foster care, she applied for numerous jobs without success and completed an eight-month program to become a medical assistant; the trial court failed to address whether her lack of employment was "without justifiable cause," as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(C). In the Interest of D. P., 326 Ga. App. 101, 756 S.E.2d 207 (2014) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Physical abuse of caseworker by parent. — Termination order was supported by clear and convincing evidence of "parental misconduct or inability," since the mother had been uncooperative with and physically abusive to caseworkers, had failed to comply with a court-ordered plan requiring her to pay child support and to attend parenting classes, and had made little effort either to create a stable home environment or to remain employed. In re S.L., 189 Ga. App. 361, 375 S.E.2d 484 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination when parent had drinking problem and incarceration history. — Termination of the father's parental rights was in the child's best interest as the father never indicated the father wanted custody, with one exception the father failed to communicate with the child, the father had a drinking problem, and the father had a criminal history including incarceration for violence. In the Interest of E. M., 347 Ga. App. 351, 819 S.E.2d 505 (2018).

Termination for incarceration and failure to support not justified. — Findings in support of the court's order terminating the father's parental rights were not supported by the evidence as nothing in the record supported the finding that the father wantonly and willfully failed to comply with a child support order for 12 months when the order had been in place for nine months and there was no evidence that the father's failure to pay while incarcerated was willful. In addition, despite evidence of the father's criminal history, there was no clear and convincing evidence that the father had a history of repeated incarceration after the child's birth and had been given custody of the child when the child was five months old. In the Interest of M. R. B., 350 Ga. App. 595, 829 S.E.2d 848 (2019).

Sexual Abuse

Sexual abuse sufficient for termination of parental rights. — Finding that the father had sexually molested his youngest daughter in the presence of his eldest child along with expert testimony that the father was not responding to therapy provided clear and convincing evidence that the children were deprived due to parental misconduct and that the cause of that deprivation was likely to continue, warranting termination of the father's parental rights. In re R.E., 207 Ga. App. 178, 427 S.E.2d 512 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Sexual abuse was properly considered as to its detrimental effect on the parent's relationship with the parent's children, regardless of whether the conviction was "final". In re J.E.L., 223 Ga. App. 269, 477 S.E.2d 412 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

There was clear and convincing evidence to support a finding by the juvenile court of parental misconduct or inability pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310) based upon the statutory factors; the juvenile court found that the father had molested one of the children and that the mother had failed to protect the children from the father; there was also evidence that the father had abused more than one child. In the Interest of A.B., 283 Ga. App. 131, 640 S.E.2d 702 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Appeals court found that the evidence supported the juvenile court's finding that a parent's six children were deprived, and that the unexplained abuse was the result of the parent's inability to protect the children as the evidence showed that: (1) one child suffered unexplained sexual abuse while in the parent's care, and sustained a head injury while allegedly in the parent's aunt's care; and (2) another child was molested while the parent was asleep. In the Interest of S.Y., 284 Ga. App. 218, 644 S.E.2d 145 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Sexual abuse of half-sister and grandmother. — Termination of parental rights was appropriate when the court's findings that the child's deprivation would continue and that termination of the father's rights would be in the best interest of the child were supported by evidence that the father sexually molested the child's half-sister as well as his own grandmother, and that he failed to address his moral and psychological problems. State v. O'Neill, 209 Vt. 599, 209 A.3d 1213 (2019) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Sexual abuse of children with special needs. — Trial court properly terminated the parental rights of parents to their two daughters pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311). Since the parents failed to support their enumerated errors with specific reference to the record or transcript as required by Ga. Ct. App. R. 27(c)(3)(i), the appellate court did not need to search for or consider those enumerations, but, out of an abundance of caution, the appellate court reviewed the record and determined that the termination was proper as the juvenile court heard evidence that the father had sexually abused one daughter, and that the other daughter had also been exposed to sexual activity while in the parents' custody, and there was also evidence that both children had special needs that the parents were not able to meet. In the Interest of K.M., 260 Ga. App. 635, 580 S.E.2d 636 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent allowing sexual abuse by another. — Even though the mother contended that she was willing to take steps to be a proper parent, the evidence was sufficient to support the trial court's finding that the children's deprivation was likely to continue for purposes of terminating the mother's parental rights since: (1) the mother continued to allow the abuser into her home after she learned that he had fathered her older, minor daughter's child and had at least some contact with him after she learned that he had sexual relations with another daughter; (2) the mother failed to appreciate that such relations were inappropriate and could be harmful to the children; and (3) the mother failed to comply with the Department of Families and Children Services' requirements that she get a job to help support the children, and get counseling to help meet her children's emotional and psychological needs. In the Interest of A.M., 259 Ga. App. 537, 578 S.E.2d 226 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court properly considered a mother's past conduct in determining that the deprivation of five children would likely continue, including her passivity with regard to her husband sexually abusing the children and the mother doing nothing; therefore, the termination of the mother's parental rights was upheld on appeal. In the Interest of J.B.M., 284 Ga. App. 480, 644 S.E.2d 317 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Sexual molestation by parent justified termination. — Because the evidence indicated that the father had molested the children, clear and convincing evidence supported the trial court's findings that the pattern of deprivation was likely to continue and that such deprivation was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the children pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iv) (see now O.C.G.A. 15-11-310); the evidence showed that the children had suffered emotional and sexual harm during the time that their father was responsible for their care, and this caused their emotional distress and behavioral problems. In the Interest of I.M.G., 276 Ga. App. 598, 624 S.E.2d 236 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Alleged sexual abuse and denial. — History of alleged sexual abuse taken together with a current denial of any alleged abuse, failure to complete a sexual offender treatment program, failure to pay child support, and failure to complete the goals set forth by the state clearly established present conduct from which a factfinder could infer that the parents were not equipped to support the child in the future. In the Interest of J.B., 248 Ga. App. 64, 545 S.E.2d 609 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Imprisoned parent for sexual abuse of child. — There was clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or inability to parent justifying termination of the father's parental rights; the father did not dispute that there was sufficient evidence showing the child was deprived and, even if challenged, the child's deprivation was established by the juvenile court's unappealed order finding the child deprived as the father pled guilty and was imprisoned for molesting the child, the father had absolutely no contact with the child from the time the child was removed from the home, and the father provided only minimal financial support before being incarcerated. In the Interest of C.B., 258 Ga. App. 143, 574 S.E.2d 339 (2002), overruled on other grounds, In re J.M.B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent seeking medical exams for sexual abuse. — When the evidence in the record showed that the child had been subjected to numerous medical examinations for sexual abuse at the mother's behest, in an apparent effort to frustrate or foreclose the father's right of visitation, and she persisted in having the child examined for possible sexual abuse, the juvenile court properly found that said conduct was egregious and was properly considered by the juvenile court in reaching the court's deprivation finding. In the Interest of M.E., 265 Ga. App. 412, 593 S.E.2d 924 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Imprisonment

Imprisonment alone does not always compel a termination of parental rights but when the parent has not visited regularly with the children or established a parental bond, has failed to contact the department of family and children services or refrain from criminal activity as required by the case plan, and has no present prospects for employment, income, or a stable home, those circumstances combine with the fact of incarceration to support a finding of parental unfitness sufficient to terminate a parent's rights. In re R.L.H., 188 Ga. App. 596, 373 S.E.2d 666 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Although imprisonment alone does not always compel a termination of parental rights, imprisonment will support such a ruling when adequate aggravating circumstances are shown to exist. In re S.K.L., 199 Ga. App. 731, 405 S.E.2d 903 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re L.F., 203 Ga. App. 522, 417 S.E.2d 344, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 417 S.E.2d 344 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

When an incarcerated parent has a criminal history of repetitive incarcerations for the commission of criminal offenses or parole violations, this constitutes an additional factor which may be considered in determining whether the child presently is without the proper parental care and control of the offending parent, and that such is likely to continue. In re L.F., 203 Ga. App. 522, 417 S.E.2d 344, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 417 S.E.2d 344 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re A.M.N., 234 Ga. App. 365, 506 S.E.2d 693 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Imprisoned parents. — Defendant's convictions and incarcerations had a demonstrable negative effect on the quality of the parent-child relationship sufficiently explicit to support termination. In re K.M.H., 209 Ga. App. 194, 433 S.E.2d 117 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence showing a total lack of effort by the father to contact or provide parental support over the entire life of his two-year-old child and that the father was incarcerated for, among other things, enticing a child for indecent purposes was sufficient to support the court's conclusion that termination was in the child's best interest. In re S.B.H., 216 Ga. App. 861, 456 S.E.2d 620 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Father's failure to comply with department of family and children services plan, requiring him to maintain contact with his children, was properly considered by the trial court even though the father was incarcerated; his incarceration did not prevent him from writing to or calling the children. In re R.J.P., 222 Ga. App. 771, 476 S.E.2d 268 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence supported termination of parental rights since the parent was serving a 20-year prison sentence, had not maintained contact with the child, and had provided no significant financial support. In the Interest of S.H., 251 Ga. App. 555, 553 S.E.2d 849 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court properly terminated a parent's parental rights to the child pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311); there was sufficient evidence to establish that the child's deprivation was caused by a lack of proper parental care or control based on the parent's incarceration, that the pattern of deprivation was likely to continue, that continued deprivation would likely cause the child harm, and that the termination of parental rights was in the best interests of the child. In the Interest of B.L.H., 259 Ga. App. 482, 578 S.E.2d 143 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

When the father confessed to a premeditated rape and attendant crimes, staged highly publicized hunger strikes in the community where the child resided and was without the possibility of parole, the court properly terminated the father's parental rights despite the father's visitation, calling, and child support payments prior to incarceration. In the Interest of M.H.S., 261 Ga. App. 686, 583 S.E.2d 471 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court properly terminated a father's parental rights to his children; there was sufficient evidence that the father had committed parental misconduct pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311), based on the fact that the father was in prison on a felony drug charge and had failed to communicate with the children, and that the termination of rights was in the best interests of the children. In the Interest of K.W., 262 Ga. App. 744, 586 S.E.2d 423 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court properly terminated a putative father's parental rights to a child because the termination of the putative father's parental rights was in the best interest of the child as the putative father was serving a prison sentence; had been convicted of multiple criminal offenses, particularly selling cocaine; and the child spent all but two days of the child's life in foster care, was doing well, and bonded with the foster parents, who wanted to adopt the child. In the Interest of A.L.S.S., 264 Ga. App. 318, 590 S.E.2d 763 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence supported a trial court's findings terminating a parent's parental rights when the parent was serving a 10-year prison sentence for kidnapping and robbery, had failed to complete any of the goals of the case plans, did not make an effort to actually communicate directly with the child after removal from the grandparent's custody, did not support the child financially, and failed to comply with the case plan. In the Interest of D.M.W., 266 Ga. App. 456, 597 S.E.2d 531 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a father's parental rights was proper because the evidence showed, inter alia, that the father was unable to forego criminal activity and stay out of prison so that he could provide a stable home for his child; the lack of structure, even for the short periods of time that the child was visiting with the father, had a noticeable negative effect on the child's behavior. In the Interest of T.B., 274 Ga. App. 147, 616 S.E.2d 896 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a father's parental rights, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311), was error because there were no aggravating circumstances and the father, although incarcerated, made an effort during the incarceration to complete a case plan not designed for the father, including writing over 40 letters to the children, attempting to arrange for the children to visit him in prison, and completing treatment programs. In the Interest of J.D.F., 277 Ga. App. 424, 626 S.E.2d 616 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

In a termination of parental rights proceeding under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311), the evidence was sufficient to show that continued deprivation of the parent's child was likely; at the time that the parent would be released from prison, the child would have been in foster care for about 75 percent of the child's life, and the evidence also showed that the parent had failed to support the parent's child which demonstrated that the parent was not an able parent. In the Interest of T.G.Y., 279 Ga. App. 449, 631 S.E.2d 467 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Father's parental rights were terminated with clear and convincing evidence that termination was in the children's best interest under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311); the children had been exposed to drug use and violence, the father was to remain in prison for the foreseeable future, and there was no evidence that, upon release, the father, who had held the children hostage and had threatened to kill the children, would be able to provide the children a safe, stable home. In the Interest of B.D., 281 Ga. App. 725, 637 S.E.2d 123 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent's rights to a child were properly terminated because evidence of the parent's neglect of other children, substance abuse, and failure to support the child permitted a rational trier of fact to find by clear and convincing evidence that the child's deprivation was likely to continue under former O.C.G.A. § 9-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iii); the parent's failure to support the child while in prison and the lack of a relationship between the parent and the child could be considered as aggravating circumstances which showed that the parent's incarceration had a negative effect on the child. In the Interest of T.C., 282 Ga. App. 659, 639 S.E.2d 601 (2006)

(decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was upheld on appeal since the evidence showed that the mother had never bonded with the child, was repeatedly incarcerated, and never attempted to contact the child's caregiver, the mother's aunt, to whom guardianship had been granted; the juvenile court's determination that the child was deprived and that such deprivation was likely to continue based on the mother's continuous criminal activity was supported by the evidence. In the Interest of S.R.M., 283 Ga. App. 463, 641 S.E.2d 666 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parental rights were properly terminated based on clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or inability under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311) because while the subject child was in the agency's custody, the parent was unemployed, was released from prison, and then arrested on new charges and incarcerated again, no child support was paid, and the parent only complied with a case plan to the extent of legitimating the child. In the Interest of A.J., 288 Ga. App. 579, 654 S.E.2d 465 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence was insufficient to establish that the children's dependent state was likely to continue or unlikely to be remedied in the foreseeable future as the Division of Family and Children Services offered no competent proof of the father's crimes or how long he would actually be incarcerated and the record did not contain any evidence indicating that the father had a history of repeated incarcerations. In the Interest of E. G. L. B., 342 Ga. App. 839, 805 S.E.2d 285 (2017).

Parents' history of incarcerations for repeated criminal offenses, failure to comply with reunification plans while incarcerated, and a determination that it was likely that such criminal history would continue upon release from incarceration supported a finding that the deprivation of their children was likely to continue under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310). In the Interest of M.C.L., 251 Ga. App. 132, 553 S.E.2d 647 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Mother's repeated incarceration and termination of rights to other children. — Mother's repeated incarcerations were an aggravating circumstance that was properly considered in deciding whether her child's deprivation was likely to continue, and evidence that the mother had four other children who were not in her care indicated that she was unable to care for the child in this case; the trial court's termination of the mother's parental rights was proper. In the Interest of A.C., 272 Ga. App. 165, 611 S.E.2d 766 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination appropriate when mother pled guilty to deprivation. — Termination of parental rights was in the best interests of the children since the mother had severe mental problems, abused alcohol, did not comply with treatment programs, was hospitalized in psychiatric institutions often, and pled guilty to deprivation. In the Interest of A.L.E., 248 Ga. App. 213, 546 S.E.2d 319 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Consideration of prison sentence proper. — Because the father's parental rights were terminated, the trial court did not err in considering the father's felony conviction and 15-year sentence in determining whether the children were without proper parental care and control pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311); this was a proper factor since aggravating factors existed. In the Interest of I.M.G., 276 Ga. App. 598, 624 S.E.2d 236 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Imprisonment delays opportunity to bond with child. — Pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(B)(iii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311), a juvenile court was authorized to find by clear and convincing evidence that a mother's imprisonment had a negative effect on the parent-child relationship in that the imprisonment further delayed the mother's overdue efforts to form a meaningful parent-child relationship. In the Interest of A.R.A.S., 278 Ga. App. 608, 629 S.E.2d 822 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

When the father was almost continuously incarcerated since the birth of his first child and the children had no contact with him while he was incarcerated, termination of his parental rights was appropriate. In re D.A.P., 234 Ga. App. 257, 506 S.E.2d 438 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Repetitive incarcerations. — Parental misconduct was shown when the father was incarcerated as a habitual felon, and during periods of freedom he had shown little interest in or capacity for adequately caring for his child. In re B.C., 235 Ga. App. 152, 508 S.E.2d 774 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Child's petition for termination of rights of incarcerated parent. — Trial court's denial of a child's petition for termination of the parental rights of the childs mother was vacated since the court had limited the court's finding to a deprivation arising solely from the mother's incarceration without considering present evidence of parental misconduct or inability. In re J.E.E., 228 Ga. App. 831, 493 S.E.2d 34 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination of rights in child's best interest. — Evidence that the child's current foster care served the child's interests by providing a sense of permanence and well-being and of the father's history of substance abuse, abandonment of the child, and failure to comply with key elements of the case plan supported a finding that termination of the father's parental rights was in the child's best interest. In the Interest of B. D. O., 343 Ga. App. 587, 807 S.E.2d 507 (2017).

Children

Children need stability. — When a child's behavior improved after being placed in state custody, but she continued to need regular counseling and a stable, consistent home environment, there was no error in the juvenile court's implicit conclusions that continued deprivation would seriously harm the child and that termination of parental rights was in her best interest. In re D.N.M., 235 Ga. App. 712, 510 S.E.2d 366 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was in 12-year-old child's best interest because the child had been in foster care periodically and needed a stable home, the child was well-adjusted with the foster parents, the child's performance at school was vastly improved, the child rarely missed school, and the child wanted to stay with the foster family and go to school. In the Interest of R.H.L., 272 Ga. App. 10, 611 S.E.2d 700 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence of a mother's repeated failures to remain drug free and to take the steps necessary to reunite with her child was sufficient to prove that her children's continued deprivation would cause the children serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm, and it was well settled that the children needed permanence of home and emotional stability or they were likely to suffer serious emotional problems. In the Interest of A.B., 274 Ga. App. 230, 617 S.E.2d 189 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's determination that a mother's child was deprived, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-107), due to lack of proper parental care, that such deprivation was likely to continue or not be remedied due to the mother's failure to take responsibility for the child and to work at succeeding at the goals of her case plan, and that such deprivation would cause serious harm to the child, who needed a stable family environment; accordingly, termination of the mother's parental rights was proper, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311). In the Interest of B.S., 274 Ga. App. 647, 618 S.E.2d 695 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence was sufficient to support the juvenile court's determination pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311) that, there being clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or inability, termination of the mother's parental rights was in the best interest of the child, considering the child's physical, mental, emotional, and moral needs, and the child's need for a secure and stable home. In the Interest of B.J.F., 276 Ga. App. 437, 623 S.E.2d 547 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

In a termination of parental rights case involving a mother who had mental health and substance abuse issues, continued deprivation was likely to cause harm to the child under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iv) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310) as a psychologist testified that the child needed a stable environment or the child was likely to act out. In the Interest of D.A.B., 281 Ga. App. 702, 637 S.E.2d 102 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Children with special needs. — When employing the two-step test before terminating a parent's rights, a juvenile court order that a child was deprived, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-107), which was not appealed, was binding on a mother and satisfied the first factor of the test under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310); the juvenile court determined that due in part to a medical problem, the child had special needs and the mother lacked the ability to provide for the physical, mental, emotional, and moral conditions and needs of the child. In the Interest of J.T.W., 270 Ga. App. 26, 606 S.E.2d 59 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

"Continued deprivation was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional or moral harm to the child" factor for the termination of mother's parental rights was satisfied as: (1) the child required a stable routine with constant monitoring of the child's physical symptoms to maintain the child's emotional and physical health; and (2) a psychologist testified that the mother would be unable, given her limited cognitive abilities, to provide the care the child needed. In the Interest of K.N., 272 Ga. App. 45, 611 S.E.2d 713 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Best interest of the child factor for the termination of a mother's parental rights was satisfied because the mother failed to establish a parental bond with the child, failed to comply with her case plan, limited cognitive abilities and personality disorder impaired her ability to attend to the child's many special needs, child's visits with his parents were disturbing to the child, and the child was doing well in the custody of the Department of Family and Children's Services and would benefit by staying with the capable and caring foster parents. In the Interest of K.N., 272 Ga. App. 45, 611 S.E.2d 713 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Deprivation was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to a child because the child had severe developmental delays when the child entered foster care and made tremendous improvements in a structured one-on-one learning environment; the mother failed to complete a reunification plan and her parenting skills were severely impaired by recurring psychological problems; the mother failed to obtain housing or employment; to improve her parenting skills specific to her child's special needs; to continue psychological counseling, to support the child; or to maintain any parental relationship with the child. In the Interest of A.K., 272 Ga. App. 429, 612 S.E.2d 581 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

There was sufficient clear and convincing evidence to support a juvenile court's termination of a father's parental rights over his two children, each of whom was severely handicapped, as the father's limited cognitive abilities made it difficult for him to be the sole parent, he was unable to properly care for the children and to maintain a clean home, they had been deemed deprived, and termination was in their best interests; also, they had bonded with their foster families and did not have much of a bond with their father. In the Interest of M.W., 275 Ga. App. 849, 622 S.E.2d 68 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court's termination of a parent's parental rights was affirmed as sufficient evidence supported a finding that the children were likely to suffer serious harm if the parent's parental rights were not terminated since: (1) the children needed a very structured environment, without which it was likely that the children would lack basic social functioning; (2) the parent was mentally, emotionally, and financially unable to manage her own life without the substantial assistance of her parents; (3) the parent was either unwilling or unable to develop necessary parenting skills; (4) the children were in a stable foster home with nurturing foster parents where their special needs were met; (5) there was no parental bond between the biological parent and the children; and (6) the foster parent was interested in adopting the children. In the Interest of K.L., 280 Ga. App. 773, 634 S.E.2d 870 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Father's incarceration history, the father's failure to support the child, and the father's lack of interest in the child showed that the father could not be relied on to meet the needs of the child, who had special needs; termination of the father's parental rights, therefore, was in the child's best interest under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311). In the Interest of E.K., 280 Ga. App. 818, 635 S.E.2d 214 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was upheld on appeal since the mother stipulated to depriving the child, had a mental disability which prevented the mother from giving the child the proper care in light of the child's special needs, including failing to provide the child with prescription medication, and the mother continued a relationship with a boyfriend who had sexually abused the child; the reviewing court found clear and convincing evidence established that it was in the best interests of the child to terminate the mother's parental rights. In the Interest of B.S., 283 Ga. App. 724, 642 S.E.2d 408 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

There was sufficient evidence to support the termination of a mother's parental rights since the evidence showed that the mother lacked the intellectual and emotional capacity to care for her two children, particularly the younger child, who had special needs as the result of injuries inflicted by his father; the mother was in denial about the younger child's condition and about the injuries that had been inflicted upon the child, had not refrained from using physical discipline on the children, had not paid child support, had not created a meaningful bond with the children and the children had thrived in foster care. In the Interest of R.S., 287 Ga. App. 228, 651 S.E.2d 156 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

It was proper to terminate a father's parental rights to a special needs child since the father had failed to comply with case plan goals or to acknowledge or address his mental health problems, there was ample evidence of his low intellectual functioning and its negative impact on his parenting skills, doctors had testified that the child would not be safe with the father and the father would not be able to parent a special needs child, and the father had failed to maintain a parental bond with the child in a meaningful way. In the Interest of B.W., 287 Ga. App. 54, 651 S.E.2d 332 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

It was proper to terminate a mother's parental rights to a special needs child since the mother had not supported the child, had been repeatedly incarcerated, had not seen the child in three years or attempted to maintain contact with the child, had not completed a drug treatment program, had not remained drug free for more than eight or nine months, and had failed to comply with any of her case plan goals; considering the special needs of the child, the harmful effects of prolonged foster care, and the evidence of the mother's drug abuse and failure to comply with case plan goals, the trial court was authorized to conclude that terminating the mother's parental rights was in the best interest of the child. In the Interest of B.W., 287 Ga. App. 54, 651 S.E.2d 332 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Child with special needs and parent with limited intellectual abilities. — Child was deprived, for purposes of terminating a mother's parental rights, because the mother had borderline intellectual functioning and was at high risk of engaging in physical child abuse of her special needs child; the child was not being properly supervised, the home was dirty, and there was little food, the mother needed long-term intensive psychological treatment but failed to obtain counseling and stopped taking her medications, and the mother failed to support the child or to comply with case plan goals. In the Interest of A.K., 272 Ga. App. 429, 612 S.E.2d 581 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Children developing behavioral problems after visiting with parent. — In an action to terminate parental rights brought under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81, evidence that the mother's seven year old child was often out of control and physically violent at school, that the school could never contact the mother to discuss the child's problems, that the mother refused consent for recommended treatment for the child, that the child's behavior improved markedly after custody was obtained by the department of children and family services, and that the child's behavior would deteriorate after visits from the mother, was clear and convincing evidence that deprivation of the child was likely to continue and justified termination of the mother's parental rights; the juvenile court was not required to reunite the mother and the child to obtain evidence of current or future deprivation. In the Interest of C.M., 251 Ga. App. 374, 554 S.E.2d 510 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was in the best interest of the children as the children showed signs of distress after the mother's visits and as the children were thriving in the care of a foster parent who was willing to care for the children indefinitely. In the Interest of C.T.M., 273 Ga. App. 168, 614 S.E.2d 812 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was proper because the mother failed to achieve many of the goals of the reunification plan and because the children developed behavioral problems after the mother's visits. In the Interest of M.H.W., 277 Ga. App. 318, 626 S.E.2d 515 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Foster care. — Juvenile court could consider the adverse effects of prolonged foster care in determining that the children's continued deprivation was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iv) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310). In the Interest of M.C.L., 251 Ga. App. 132, 553 S.E.2d 647 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence was sufficient to support the trial court's finding that the deprivation was likely to cause physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the children in a termination of parental rights proceeding since: (1) the children became upset when the mother made promises and representations that she did not keep, including promises that she would visit or that they could come home with her; (2) one child became upset when her mother urged her to lie about the abuser's sexual abuse; and (3) the juvenile court considered that the children needed a stable home situation, and that prolonged foster care was detrimental. In the Interest of A.M., 259 Ga. App. 537, 578 S.E.2d 226 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Child in foster care for extensive time. — Termination of a parent's parental rights was affirmed as the children had been in the care of their foster parents since they were three months old and had not seen the parent in over 27 months; the parent's caseworker opined that the children were still deprived due to neglect. In the Interest of S.B., 287 Ga. App. 203, 651 S.E.2d 140 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Living conditions and economic circumstances of foster family. — Evidence concerning the living conditions and economic circumstances of the child's foster parents who had expressed an interest in adopting the child was not relevant to the first portion of the test under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311), the determination of whether there was clear and convincing evidence showing parental misconduct or inability; however, such evidence was relevant to the second part of the statutory test, a determination of whether termination of the parental rights of the natural parents was in the best interest of the child, since it showed the merits of an alternative placement available to the child. In re J.M.G., 214 Ga. App. 738, 448 S.E.2d 785 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Deprivation

Deprivation of love and nurture, is equally as serious as mental or physical disability. In re Levi, 131 Ga. App. 348, 206 S.E.2d 82 (1974) (decided under former law); Elrod v. Hall County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 136 Ga. App. 251, 220 S.E.2d 726 (1975) (decided under former law).

Moral unfitness possible factor in proving deprivation. — When the issue is termination of parental rights (without adoption by others), moral unfitness may be a factor in proving that a child is deprived and will suffer serious physical, mental, moral, or emotional harm. Johnson v. Edison, 235 Ga. 820, 221 S.E.2d 813 (1976) (decided under former law).

Failure to identify specific findings that support conclusion that cause of dependency was likely to continue. — While the juvenile court's order reflected diligent and careful consideration and referred to the children's past dependency, the order did not identify specific factual findings that authorized the trial judge to conclude that the cause of the children's dependency was likely to continue and, thus, it was insufficient to enable appellate review. In the Interest of D. W., 340 Ga. App. 508, 798 S.E.2d 49 (2017).

Deprivation alone insufficient to authorize termination. — Clear and convincing evidence of the child's deprivation at the parent's hand, standing alone, will not authorize the termination of parental rights. There must also be clear and convincing evidence that the child's deprivation is likely to continue or will not likely be remedied; and that the continued deprivation will cause or is likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the child. In re M.H.F., 201 Ga. App. 56, 410 S.E.2d 167 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

No right to be present at deprivation hearing. — Father was not denied due process on the ground that he was not present at the deprivation hearings in which the trial court declared the father's three children to be deprived because deprivation proceedings and parental rights termination proceedings are separate and distinct, and a termination proceeding is not the proper time to assert error in the deprivation proceedings; further, the father failed to show that he was harmed as a result of any alleged violation of due process since there was overwhelming evidence supporting the termination of the father's parental rights. In the Interest of M.S., 279 Ga. App. 254, 630 S.E.2d 856 (2006), overruled on other grounds, In re J.M.B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Dispositional hearing unnecessary when only deprivation alleged. — When a petition for the termination of parental rights alleged only that the children were deprived, not delinquent or unruly, it was not necessary for the juvenile judge to hold a dispositional hearing. In re J.C., 242 Ga. 737, 251 S.E.2d 299 (1978), appeal dismissed, 441 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2046, 60 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1979) (decided under former law).

Continued likelihood of deprivation. — Four elements necessary to a finding of "parental misconduct or inability" as set forth in former subparagraph (b)(4)(A) of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310) were met when: the child was deprived because of the mother's lack of stable employment or housing; the mother's prior drinking, criminal behavior, physical abuse, neglect, and repeated failure to comply with court-ordered plans authorized a finding that the deprivation resulted from her lack of care or control; the nature and severity of the child's emotional and neurological problems, were such to cause serious harm, and given the evidence of the mother's past behavior and the length of time that had elapsed with no improvement in the situation, the child's need for stability and constant supervision, and the mother's apparent inability to understand the child's problems or provide adequate care or supervision, the juvenile court had clear and convincing evidence that the conditions of deprivation were likely to continue. In re J.C.J., 207 Ga. App. 599, 428 S.E.2d 643 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Order terminating a parent's parental rights to the parent's three children was upheld on appeal as clear and convincing evidence was presented that the parent: (1) was bound by an order of deprivation entered against the parent based on a failure to appeal the order; (2) never fully complied with the case plan, nor had any intention of doing so in the future; and (3) had a history of poor relationship choices such that when this evidence was combined with other evidence supporting termination, the juvenile court was authorized to find that any deprivation was likely to continue. In the Interest of A.C., 280 Ga. App. 212, 633 S.E.2d 609 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

In a second termination of parental rights proceeding against a mother, clear and convincing evidence existed as to a continued deprivation finding, given the mother's ongoing failure to comply with multiple requirements of a case plan, specifically failing to: (1) voluntarily pay any child support; (2) take the necessary steps to prepare financially for the children; (3) obtain a GED; (4) secure new employment; and (4) line up child care. Furthermore, the fact that the mother's husband had an extensive criminal history reflecting substance abuse issues, particularly when considered in conjunction with a DUI incident involving the husband and the mother's current probation sentence for a drug-related offense, constituted evidence in favor of a finding of likely continued deprivation. In the Interest of T.J., 281 Ga. App. 308, 636 S.E.2d 54 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a parent's rights was proper as there was sufficient evidence that continued deprivation was likely to cause harm to the children since child one had suffered 10 separate bone fractures, and the parent failed to offer a reasonable explanation for those injuries. In the Interest of K.J.M., 282 Ga. App. 72, 637 S.E.2d 810 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence showed that continued deprivation would likely cause two children harm in light of the children's bonds formed with the foster parents, the lack of bonds formed with the parent, the "unemotional" state of child one upon arriving in foster care, and child two's reaction to the parent's failed visits. In the Interest of C.M., 282 Ga. App. 502, 639 S.E.2d 323 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court properly terminated a parent's rights; given the parent's history of unemployment, unstable housing arrangements, inability to stay in regular contact with social services or the children, and failure to complete substance abuse treatment. The juvenile court was authorized to find that the cause of the children's deprivation would likely continue. In the Interest of K.M., 284 Ga. App. 442, 644 S.E.2d 193 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

In a case terminating the mother's parental rights, the dependency was likely to continue as the mother's housing could not be considered stable because, at the time of the hearing, the mother had only very recently moved into a boyfriend's mother's home and refused to provide any information about their relationship or their intentions; the mother refused to provide proof of the mother's income or the mother's job, which the mother had only very recently obtained; and the mother continued to be aggressive with the case workers for Department of Family and Children Services, the mother refused to complete all portions of the required psychological evaluation, and the mother refused to provide answers to various questions at the hearing. In the Interest of R. S. T., 345 Ga. App. 300, 812 S.E.2d 614 (2018).

Deprivation continuing from parental drug abuse. — Juvenile court's findings supported the conclusion that the children were dependent at the time of the termination of parental rights hearing due to a lack of proper parental care and control because the parent's continuing substance abuse was evidenced by the parent's prior positive drug screen and several refused screenings (which the Division of Family and Children Services treated as positive), and because the parent was unable to pay even a symbolic amount of child support or to provide stable housing. In the Interest of A. S., 339 Ga. App. 875, 794 S.E.2d 672 (2016).

Finding of dependency does not necessarily mean harm. — Georgia Court of Appeals has long said that a finding that dependency is likely to continue does not necessarily justify a finding of harm, although dependency could support a finding of harm in particular circumstances; rather, in determining whether harm to the child exists, Georgia law requires a juvenile court to consider both the relationship between the parent and child at the time of the termination hearing and what might happen if the child were returned to the parent. In the Interest of L. P., J. P., & P. P., 339 Ga. App. 651, 794 S.E.2d 252 (2016).

Judgments terminating the parents' rights to three children under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310 were affirmed based on the mother's re-incarceration and continued pattern of drug use, the parents' failure to consistently visit the children and the behavior problems and mood shifts that occurred with the children after any visit. In the Interest of L. P., J. P., & P. P., 339 Ga. App. 651, 794 S.E.2d 252 (2016).

While there was sufficient evidence that the children were dependent due to lack of proper parental care and control, including evidence of inadequate food, clothing, shelter, and supervision, the juvenile court failed to provide specific findings that the dependency was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm. In the Interest of D. M. et al., 339 Ga. App. 46, 793 S.E.2d 422 (2016).

Deprivation likely to continue. — Given the testimony of the psychologists and the social worker about the effect on the children of their parents' condition and behavior, the parents' continued incarceration and years of probation, their past behavior, and the likelihood of any significant and meaningful change, a rational trier of fact could have found by clear and convincing evidence that the deprivation was likely to continue or would not likely be remedied. In re A.M.N., 234 Ga. App. 365, 506 S.E.2d 693 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence of physical abuse, inability to provide a safe, sanitary home, and failure to comply with reunification plans authorized the juvenile court to determine that a child was deprived and that her deprivation was likely to continue, and was sufficient to provide clear and convincing evidentiary support that her continued deprivation would cause or was likely to cause her serious physical, mental, emotional, and moral harm. In re K.R.C., 235 Ga. App. 354, 510 S.E.2d 547 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

When the mother admitted that she could not care for her child and that it would be some time in the future before she could do so, and when neither she nor the father complied with a case plan set up for them, there was sufficient clear and convincing evidence from which the trial court could conclude deprivation was likely to continue. In re J.O.L., 235 Ga. App. 856, 510 S.E.2d 613 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination of parental rights was affirmed because there was ample evidence, including the family's history of instability, the fact that the children lived in filth for their entire lives, their developmental and emotional problems, and evidence of malnourishment and poor hygiene to support the juvenile court's finding that the deprivation of the children would continue in the future and that termination was in the children's best interest. In the Interest of T.D.B., 266 Ga. App. 434, 597 S.E.2d 537 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Although there was evidence of the father's efforts to improve himself, evidence that the father never accepted responsibility for the children's neglect or the abuse of their mother and utterly failed to demonstrate an ability to cope with the children's medical needs or provide any financial support supported the juvenile court's determination that the deprivation was likely to continue or would not likely be remedied. In the Interest of J.P., 268 Ga. App. 32, 601 S.E.2d 409 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Because a father failed to maintain a familial bond with his child, stopped visiting the child, and generally ignored the case plan requirements for reunification, clear and convincing evidence showed that, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310), the child would likely suffer serious harm from continued deprivation. In the Interest of C.A.W., 272 Ga. App. 4, 611 S.E.2d 154 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence supported the finding that the children's deprivation was likely to continue because the mother abandoned the children and failed to maintain meaningful or consistent contact with either the Department of Family and Children Services or the children for over a year, she made no effort to support the children financially, made no effort to comply with the reunification plan, and she surrendered her parental rights in the children. In the Interest of M.E.M., 272 Ga. App. 451, 612 S.E.2d 612 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence that a parent failed to take advantage of offers to help the parent find housing, secure employment, and obtain treatment; missed many scheduled visits with the parent's children; and left the state, which prevented the parent from seeing them, supported the trial court's finding that the deprivation was likely to continue. In the Interest of J.H., 278 Ga. App. 32, 628 S.E.2d 140 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

In a termination of parental rights case, clear and convincing evidence supported the finding that the deprivation was likely to continue pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310); the father showed an inability to keep the children away from the mother despite a court order requiring the father to do so, the father had a long period of noncompliance with the case plan, and the father did not pay child support until ordered to do so. In the Interest of M.R., 282 Ga. App. 91, 637 S.E.2d 743 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 56 (Ga. 2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a parent's rights was proper as there was sufficient evidence that the cause of the deprivation was likely to continue as: (1) child one suffered multiple bone fractures in at least two separate incidents, but the parent could not provide a plausible explanation for child one's injuries; (2) the parent never identified the source of the problem, so the abuse was unremedied; (3) the parent failed to find stable employment and did not provide financial support for the two children; and (4) the parent failed to complete either the domestic violence counseling or the additional anger management counseling recommended as part of the reunification plan, and failed to take measures to remedy the problems that more than likely contributed to child one's injuries. In the Interest of K.J.M., 282 Ga. App. 72, 637 S.E.2d 810 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence showed that two children's deprivation was likely to continue given the parent's failure to comply with the case plan for more than one year prior to the termination proceeding. In the Interest of C.M., 282 Ga. App. 502, 639 S.E.2d 323 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

In a termination of parental rights proceeding, the evidence showed that the child's deprivation was likely to continue under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-94 (see now §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-107, 15-11-310, 15-11-311, 15-11-320, 15-11-381, and 15-11-471), as the mother's sobriety was recent, her compliance with the drug treatment was mandatory to avoid jail, she failed to adequately support the child, her testimony in the termination hearing was evasive, she relinquished and lost custody of her two other children, she made no efforts whatsoever to contact or visit the child until the child was nine months old, and she was willing to reconcile with the father, who was also addicted to methamphetamine and had not completed any type of drug treatment. In the Interest of Z. P., 314 Ga. App. 347, 724 S.E.2d 48 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

In a termination of parental rights proceeding, clear and convincing evidence showed the cause of the deprivation of a father's children would likely continue, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310), because the father did not: (1) complete the father's case plan after getting a job and buying a car; (2) visit the children for five months before the termination hearing; or (3) support the children while the children were in foster care. In the Interest of E.G., 315 Ga. App. 35, 726 S.E.2d 510 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court's finding that continued deprivation was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the children was supported by the record because the mother repeatedly failed to comply with the requirements of her case plan to reunite with her children. In the Interest of A. R., 315 Ga. App. 357, 726 S.E.2d 800 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence supported a finding that a mother's deprivation of her children was caused by a lack of proper parental care as the mother failed to sever contact with the father, that she defended the father, and that she diverted resources to the father instead of paying child support or securing appropriate housing. This deprivation was likely to continue. In the Interest of K.L.M., 316 Ga. App. 246, 729 S.E.2d 452 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Exposure of children to domestic violence. — Termination of a father's parental rights to two minor sons was upheld on appeal because the father had a long history of domestic violence against the mother, regularly threatened her that he would make her watch him kill the children and then he would kill her, and he never established a parental bond or financially supported the children significantly; additional considerations included the father stabbing a male friend of the mother and the children seeing the man bleed on their kitchen floor, photographs found by the mother that appeared to have been close-up shots of one of the children's rectum, which the father explained were taken by a police officer investigating sexual abuse, and expert testimony concluding unanimously that further contact between the father and the children would cause serious harm to the children, who were emotionally fragile. In the Interest of G.W.R., 270 Ga. App. 194, 606 S.E.2d 281 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Past deprivation considered to determine likelihood of continuation. — As a general rule, while past deprivation is not sufficient for termination without a showing of present deprivation, the past conduct of the parent is properly considered by the court in determining whether such conditions of deprivation are likely to continue. In re L.F., 203 Ga. App. 522, 417 S.E.2d 344, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 417 S.E.2d 344 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re A.M.N., 234 Ga. App. 365, 506 S.E.2d 693 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Although past deprivation is not sufficient for termination without a showing of present deprivation, a juvenile court can consider a parent's past conduct in determining whether such conditions of deprivation are likely to continue. In the Interest of N.L., 260 Ga. App. 830, 581 S.E.2d 643 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Mother's past conduct indicated deprivation likely to continue. — Based on the mother's past conduct as a recidivist, the juvenile court was authorized to find the deprivation of the children would not likely be remedied in the future and that it was in their best interest that her parental rights be terminated. In the Interest of C.N.S., 248 Ga. App. 84, 545 S.E.2d 633 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Medical and psychological conditions of parent causing deprivation. — Clear and convincing evidence supported the order terminating a parent's rights to two minor children as the children's deprivation was due primarily to the parent's mental illness and failure to take prescribed medication to address that illness, and during more than 30 months the parent was given to work on a reunification case plan, the mother failed to comply with the requirements of the plan. In the Interest of O. B., 337 Ga. App. 401, 787 S.E.2d 344 (2016).

Sufficient evidence that continued deprivation likely to cause harm. — Evidence supported the termination of a mother's parental rights as continued deprivation was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the children in light of the children's distress before and during contact with the grandmother, the person the mother put forward as a surrogate parent; also, the children clung to their foster mother after visits with the grandmother. In the Interest of C.T.M., 273 Ga. App. 168, 614 S.E.2d 812 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Because the Department presented sufficient evidence of a father's neglect of two children, lack of any meaningful parental bond, repeated incarceration, and failure to pay child support, the juvenile court, when coupled with the father's acknowledgment that the children thrived in the current placement, was authorized to find that sufficient evidence was presented to support a finding that deprivation of the two children by the father was likely to continue and that termination of the father's parental rights was in the childrens' best interest; furthermore, a claim that the father lacked knowledge of, and was not directed to pay child support, was irrelevant in light of the directive found in O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2 that a parent had a statutory duty to pay child support with or without a court order. In the Interest of T.C., 281 Ga. App. 137, 635 S.E.2d 395 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Given evidence of a parent's drug addiction, lack of successful treatment and follow-up care, unstable living situation, failure to pay child support, and lack of a close bond with the child at issue, clear and convincing evidence supported a termination of that parent's parental rights based on the child's deprivation, and that the deprivation would likely continue; moreover, pretermitting whether sufficient evidence supported a finding that the parent suffered from a mental illness, this finding was not necessary to support termination of parental rights. In the Interest of D.D.B., 282 Ga. App. 416, 638 S.E.2d 843 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

In a termination of parental rights case, there was sufficient evidence that continued deprivation was likely to seriously harm the children. The deprivation involved, among other things, the mother repeatedly relapsing into drug abuse and her repeated incarceration for crimes and violations of probation, and there was testimony about the children's need for permanency. In the Interest of C.L., 315 Ga. App. 607, 727 S.E.2d 163 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Deprivation likely to cause harm to children. — Evidence of the father's past neglect of the children's medical, physical, and emotional needs and the testimony of their foster mother which revealed that current contact with the father was upsetting and disruptive to the children, supported a conclusion that continued deprivation was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the children. In the Interest of J.P., 268 Ga. App. 32, 601 S.E.2d 409 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence of deprivation sufficient. — Evidence was sufficient to show both deprivation and that the deprivation resulted from the mother's conduct. In the Interest of S.B., 242 Ga. App. 184, 528 S.E.2d 278 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence supported the finding that the children's deprivation was caused by the mother because the mother abandoned the children and left them with her mother and her mother's husband, who had been charged with sex crimes, she failed to maintain meaningful or consistent contact with either the Department of Family and Children Services or the children for over a year and made no effort to support the children financially, the mother made no effort to comply with the reunification plan, and she surrendered her parental rights in the children. In the Interest of M.E.M., 272 Ga. App. 451, 612 S.E.2d 612 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence supported the termination of a mother's parental rights as the mother was bound by a juvenile court's order finding that the children were deprived as a result of neglect, including inadequate housing and the mother's substance abuse; the mother did not appeal the juvenile court's finding. In the Interest of C.T.M., 273 Ga. App. 168, 614 S.E.2d 812 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a parent's rights was proper as there was sufficient evidence that the children would be deprived if returned to their parent's custody given the parent's lack of employment, the parent's inability to financially support the children, their failure to receive further anger management counseling, and failure to complete domestic violence counseling; also, child one's unexplained injuries were evidence of deprivation. In the Interest of K.J.M., 282 Ga. App. 72, 637 S.E.2d 810 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence showed that two children were deprived for purposes of the termination of a parent's rights as: (1) the children had been found to be deprived and were not in the parent's custody, and the parent failed to maintain a parental bond as the parent did not visit the children once in nine months, failed to give the children birthday presents, and did not contact the foster parents; (2) the parent failed to complete the case plan, although the parent completed parenting classes and a substance abuse evaluation, the parent moved at least nine times in two years and did not maintain regular contact with a child services agency; and (3) the parent paid $60 of $900 owed in child support and failed to support the children. In the Interest of C.M., 282 Ga. App. 502, 639 S.E.2d 323 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Lack of evidence that deprivation likely to continue. — Lack of evidence that the cause of a child's deprivation was likely to continue or that the child's continued deprivation was likely to cause physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the child, as required under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310), required that the trial court's order terminating the parental rights of the child's father be reversed. In the Interest of B.F., 253 Ga. App. 887, 560 S.E.2d 738 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court erred in terminating the mother's parental rights as the cause of the child's deprivation was unlikely to continue because the court ignored the mother's present and well-documented commitment to sobriety; the mother earned a high-school diploma, enrolled in college, completed a drug-rehabilitation program, and attended a 15-week parenting class; the mother never missed a scheduled supervised visit with the child; and the mother's cohabitation with a boyfriend was an insufficient basis for terminating the mother's parental rights as the boyfriend helped the mother maintain a stable home and there was no evidence that the boyfriend's potential drug use would negatively affect the child. In the Interest of J. V. J., 329 Ga. App. 421, 765 S.E.2d 389 (2014) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court erred in terminating the mother's parental rights to the oldest child as the clear and convincing evidence did not show that the mother was presently unfit and that the child's deprivation was likely to continue and cause substantial harm because the mother had maintained stable housing with the youngest child and that child's father; the mother had sources of income; and the mother met or substantially completed most of the other case plan goals by completing parenting classes, attending counseling sessions, attending the majority of the scheduled visitations with the child, interacting well with the child during visitation, and meeting with the caseworkers. In the Interest of T. M., 329 Ga. App. 719, 766 S.E.2d 101 (2014) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Although a mother was disabled from multiple sclerosis and other problems, took several medications, lived on limited means, was in a contentious relationship with the putative father, had accumulated trash around her home, and had never lived with her four-year-old child, the evidence did not clearly and convincingly show that she was presently unfit and that the deprivation was likely to continue and cause serious harm because the father had moved out and she had cleaned up the home. In the Interest of S. R. R., 330 Ga. App. 817, 769 S.E.2d 562 (2015) (decided under former O.C.G.A. 15-11-94).

Juvenile court erred in terminating the mother's parental rights as to five of the eight children because the record was devoid of any evidence showing that the dependency was likely to continue or that continued dependency would cause harm to the children. In the Interest of A. B., 346 Ga. App. 2, 815 S.E.2d 561 (2018).

Evidence insufficient to show that deprivation likely to cause harm. — Termination of the mother's parental rights was improper as a failure to terminate the mother's rights would not cause or was not likely to cause the children serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm because the children would not be harmed seriously were the children to remain in foster care, by virtue of either their relationship with their mother or the impermanency of that situation; the mother had positive visits with the children; the children were happy to see their mother; the children were not performing poorly in school or displaying significant age-inappropriate behavioral problems; and the lack of specific evidence regarding potential harm mandated reversal as the mother and children were bonded and emotionally close. In the Interest of E. M. D., 339 Ga. App. 189, 793 S.E.2d 489 (2016).

Evidence did not clearly and convincingly support terminating the mother's parental rights because the mother had adequate housing, stable income, clean drug screens, completed a substance abuse treatment program, underwent a mental health assessment, started counseling and treatment, and had completed an anger management program, and the record did not show that reasonable efforts to remedy the circumstances of dependency were unsuccessful. In the Interest of B. R. J., 344 Ga. App. 465, 810 S.E.2d 630 (2018).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was improper because, although the trial court was authorized to find that the mother's housing was not stable and that the dependency was likely to continue and would not likely be remedied, the evidence was insufficient to show that continued dependency would cause or was likely to cause the children serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm as the trial court did not assess the extent to which instability and impermanency were currently causing specific harms to the children, and whether, as a result of the dependency, the children would be harmed by remaining in foster care indefinitely; and there was no finding regarding how continuing the status quo would harm the children. In the Interest of A. F., 346 Ga. App. 538, 816 S.E.2d 496 (2018).

Lack of proper parental care by mother caused deprivation. — Children's deprivation was caused by a lack of proper parental care by the mother since the mother: (1) did not pay child support; (2) failed to comply with the reunification goals: (3) did not resolve the criminal charges against her; (4) did not maintain contact with her children; and (5) did not establish a stable home. In the Interest of J.J., 259 Ga. App. 159, 575 S.E.2d 921 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Mental retardation of parent. — Insufficient evidence supported the termination of a parent's rights because the record showed that while the parent had mental retardation, the parent functioned well despite the mental disability and had the skills necessary to provide for and raise a family, including two children, in Arkansas; thus, there was a lack of evidence that the deprivation was to continue. In the Interest of O. B., 337 Ga. App. 401, 787 S.E.2d 344 (2016).

Mother's history of child neglect was clearly relevant to the consideration of whether deprivation was likely to continue when, aware of her past failings, she continued to ignore her responsibility to financially support her children. In re M.L.P., 236 Ga. App. 504, 512 S.E.2d 652 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Indication of future deprivation. — While past acts of deprivation are stronger proof and more convincing evidence upon which to decide the issue, there is no reason why a determination of deprivation may not be made on proof that the conditions under which the child would be raised in the parent's home strongly indicate that deprivation will occur in the future. Roberts v. State, 141 Ga. App. 268, 233 S.E.2d 224 (1977) (decided under prior law); Jones v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 371, 271 S.E.2d 27 (1980) (decided under prior law).

In a termination of parental rights case, the evidence was sufficient to support the finding that the deprivation was likely to continue. The mother was arrested and jailed following the birth of her older child and violated her probation at least twice; furthermore, even if she left her first rehabilitation program for legitimate reasons, she left it without permission, relapsed into drug abuse, and failed to notify the Department of Family and Children Services of her whereabouts. In the Interest of C.L., 315 Ga. App. 607, 727 S.E.2d 163 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Insufficient evidence that continued deprivation likely to cause harm. — Termination of the mother's parental rights was improper because, although the evidence supported the finding that the children's dependency was likely to continue and would not likely be remedied, the state did not sufficiently establish that the children were likely to suffer harm under the status quo as there was no evidence that their continued relationship with their mother was harmful; and the juvenile court's generalized findings that the children would experience doubt, uncertainty and hesitancy in life, and that foster care would not provide the kind of stability they needed, and would put them at risk of delinquency, other anti-social behavior, and "foster care drift" did not show how each child would be harmed by the status quo. In the Interest of A. S., 339 Ga. App. 875, 794 S.E.2d 672 (2016).

15-11-311. Determination of whether child is without proper parental care and control.

(a) In determining whether a child is without proper parental care and control, the court shall consider, without being limited to, the following:

(1) A medically verified deficiency of such child's parent's physical, mental, or emotional health that is of such duration or nature so as to render such parent unable to provide adequately for his or her child;

(2) Excessive use of or history of chronic unrehabilitated substance abuse with the effect of rendering a parent of such child incapable of providing adequately for the physical, mental, emotional, or moral condition and needs of his or her child;

(3) A felony conviction and imprisonment of a parent of such child for an offense which has a demonstrably negative effect on the quality of the parent-child relationship including, but not limited to, any of the following:

(A) Murder of another child of such parent;

(B) Voluntary manslaughter of another child of such parent;

(C) Voluntary manslaughter of the other parent of his or her child;

(D) Aiding or abetting, attempting, conspiring, or soliciting to commit murder or voluntary manslaughter of another child of such parent;

(E) Aiding or abetting, attempting, conspiring, or soliciting to commit murder or voluntary manslaughter of the other parent of his or her child; or

(F) Committing felony assault that results in serious bodily injury to his or her child or another child of such parent;

(4) Egregious conduct or evidence of past egregious conduct of a physically, emotionally, or sexually cruel or abusive nature by such parent toward his or her child or toward another child of such parent;

(5) Physical, mental, or emotional neglect of his or her child or evidence of past physical, mental, or emotional neglect by the parent of such child or another child of such parent; and

(6) Serious bodily injury or death of a sibling of his or her child under circumstances which constitute substantial evidence that such injury or death resulted from parental neglect or abuse.

(b) In determining whether a child who is not in the custody and care of his or her parent is without proper parental care and control, the court shall also consider, without being limited to, whether such parent, without justifiable cause, has failed significantly for a period of six months prior to the date of the termination hearing:

(1) To develop and maintain a parental bond with his or her child in a meaningful, supportive manner;

(2) To provide for the care and support of his or her child as required by law or judicial decree; and

(3) To comply with a court ordered plan designed to reunite such parent with his or her child.

(c) A parent's reliance on prayer or other religious nonmedical means for healing in lieu of medical care, in the exercise of religious beliefs, shall not be the sole basis for determining a parent to be unwilling or unable to provide safety and care adequate to meet his or her child's physical, emotional, and mental health needs as provided in paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of this Code section or as depriving such child of proper parental care or control for purposes of this Code section and Code Section 15-11-310.

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Sections 15-11-51 and 15-11-81, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-94, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

In light of the reenactment of this chapter, effective January 1, 2014, the reader is advised to consult the annotations following Code Section 15-11-310, which may also be applicable to this Code section.

Actions of Parents

Watching pornography with child and alcoholism of parent. — When the record was replete with references to a mother's problems with chronic alcohol abuse, and to her problematic relationship with the father of three of her children, who abused both her and the children, and since there was "egregious conduct" toward the children in having them watch pornography with her, this evidence, some of which was of recent origin, coupled with her failure to comply with safety plans, was clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or inability. In re B.D., 236 Ga. App. 119, 511 S.E.2d 229 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Alcohol abuse by parent. — Trial court's determination to terminate a father's parental rights was supported by clear and convincing evidence pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)-(C)(ii)-(iii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311) since he had a history of alcohol and drug abuse, admitted that he needed financial help to support his children, had not offered any support during the period that the children were in temporary custody as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2, and failed to achieve any of the goals of the agency's case plan for him. In the Interest of D.L., 268 Ga. App. 360, 601 S.E.2d 714 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a father's parental rights was supported by evidence, inter alia, that the child was not properly cared for and developmentally delayed, that the father had been convicted several times for alcohol related driving offenses, and that the father was eventually incarcerated for, among other convictions, vehicular homicide; the father presented no evidence that he had taken steps to control his alcohol problem, or to otherwise provide the highly structured, consistent, nurturing environment which the child required, and there was no evidence that the father provided any support for the child. In the Interest of M.L.S., 273 Ga. App. 554, 615 S.E.2d 615 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Alcoholism as factor in terminating parental rights. — Termination of the father's parental rights was in the best interest of the child in light of the father's chronic alcoholism, refusal to rehabilitate, history of public brawling and overall unstable lifestyle. In re C.K.M., 207 Ga. App. 221, 427 S.E.2d 585 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court properly terminated a mother's parental rights when the mother abused drugs and alcohol, had been repeatedly incarcerated, failed to support or visit the child, did not feed the child well or attend to his safety and hygiene when he was with her, had twice absconded with the child over state lines, once while she was intoxicated, had failed to meet case plan goals, and her rights to five other children had been terminated. In the Interest of J.F., 283 Ga. App. 759, 642 S.E.2d 434 (2007) (decided under former

"Horrific" physical abuse of child. — Evidence that parents "horrifically" physically abused their child and emotionally neglected both children, that the children had been adjudicated as deprived and that such deprivation was likely to continue, and that termination of the parents' rights was in the children's best interests, supported a termination decision under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(B)(iv)-(vi) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311); the parents had also failed to complete their reunification case plans successfully, had not appealed the determination that the children were deprived, and further, the children were placed in a foster care home that was suitable for adoption and indicated that the children had no desire to return to the parents. In the Interest of J.I., 269 Ga. App. 764, 605 S.E.2d 397 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent showering with children. — Juvenile court's finding that the children were dependent due to sexual touching during showers with their father was supported by testimony of one child's classmate and mother who testified that the child told the classmate about the showers, a detective who conducted a forensic interview and testified the children had been coached, and the children's aunt who testified to the parents' argument about the father showering with one of the children. In the Interest of H. B., 346 Ga. App. 163, 816 S.E.2d 313 (2018).

Near accidental drowning of child in bathtub. — Termination of the father's parental rights was upheld when the evidence showed that he left the children in the unsupervised care of the mentally unstable mother whose parental rights had been terminated, and that he had left the children unsupervised in the bathtub, causing near drowning of one child. In re D.C., 176 Ga. App. 30, 335 S.E.2d 148 (1985) (decided under former law).

Termination for shaking of children. — Biological father's parental rights to his twin children were properly terminated because clear and convincing evidence existed that the father caused various injuries to the children by shaking them on at least two occasions when they were only two months old, and the father pled guilty to two counts of cruelty to children. In the Interest of C.A., 278 Ga. App. 93, 628 S.E.2d 151 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent purchasing items instead of supporting child. — When a father admitted that he did not pay child support for his children while they were in foster care, stating that, instead, he purchased items the children needed, the trial court's findings that he did not provide for the children's care and support as required by law, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(C)(ii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311), were supported by clear and convincing evidence. In the Interest of C.M., 275 Ga. App. 719, 621 S.E.2d 815 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Failure to communicate with child. — During the year before the filing of a termination petition, a mother did not visit, send cards or letters, or make any telephone calls to the child, constituting clear and convincing evidence under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(C)(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311), that the mother significantly failed without justifiable cause to develop and maintain a parental bond with the child in a meaningful, supportive manner. In the Interest of A.R.A.S., 278 Ga. App. 608, 629 S.E.2d 822 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parental deprivation not shown by citizenship, license status, or verifiability of income. — Trial court erred in terminating a parent's rights and allowing the maternal aunt to adopt a two-year-old child because the parent had completed the parent's reunification plan and there was no deprivation or any factors in O.C.G.A. § 19-8-10(a) or (b); the trial court relied on improper factors such as the parent's non-citizen status, the parent's lack of a driver's license, and the verifiability of the parent's income. Alizota v. Stanfield, 329 Ga. App. 550, 765 S.E.2d 707 (2014).

Medical and Psychological Factors

Medical care for children. — Father's failure to obtain training in the use of an apnea monitor and cardiopulmonary resuscitation skills for his child's medical care supported termination of the father's parental rights as did the father's assertion that he would cure the child's asthma by having the child drink from a coconut and then burying the coconut. In the Interest of S.E.L., 251 Ga. App. 728, 555 S.E.2d 115 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Child born with fetal alcohol syndrome. — Trial court properly terminated a father's parental rights to his daughter pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311); the child was deprived, as the father had made no attempts to help care for the child, who was born with fetal alcohol syndrome, and the adoption of the child by the mother's relatives pursuant to O.C.G.A § 19-8-10 was in the best interest of the child. Rokowski v. Gilbert, 275 Ga. App. 305, 620 S.E.2d 509 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Child with fetal alcohol syndrome and child with ringworm. — Mother was bound by prior court orders that her children were deprived as a result of the children being without proper parental care and supervision under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(C)(i) to (iii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311). Additionally, (1) the mother failed to fully comply with an alcohol treatment program; (2) the mother's alcohol abuse had caused fetal alcohol syndrome in one child, and another had severe incurable ringworm; (3) the mother did not visit or financially support the children; and (4) the mother had mental-health deficiencies that rendered her incapable of providing adequately for the children. In the Interest of M.L., 259 Ga. App. 534, 578 S.E.2d 190 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Children with multiple broken bones. — Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's termination of a father's parental rights since the father pled guilty to cruelty to children by breaking his son's arm, the son showed evidence of unrelated multiple rib fractures, and the father had earlier lost parental rights to the daughter due to numerous bone fractures suffered in the parents' care. In the Interest of B.W., 254 Ga. App. 63, 561 S.E.2d 199 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parental drug abuse. — Termination of the mother's parental rights was upheld when the juvenile court properly considered the mother's admitted history of substance abuse and its effect on her ability to be a parent, and the record demonstrated that the mother made little or no effort to develop a parental relationship with the child, to provide the child with financial support, or to comply with her case plan goals. In the Interest of S.L.B., 265 Ga. App. 684, 595 S.E.2d 370 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was supported by evidence that her rights to all six of her prior children had been terminated because, in essence, she did not care about having them at the time, and by the mother's acknowledgement of her long history of crack addiction, her failure to complete a drug rehabilitation program either before or after the child's birth, her failure to attend classes on addiction during her incarceration after the child's birth, and her use of cocaine while she was pregnant with the child. In the Interest of B.S., 265 Ga. App. 795, 595 S.E.2d 607 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

There was sufficient evidence, including drug abuse and the failure to seek treatment, to support a finding of parental misconduct or inability as contemplated by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320), for the termination of a mother's parental rights. In the Interest of H.D.T., 273 Ga. App. 863, 616 S.E.2d 196 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court properly terminated a mother's parental rights to her children pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320) as the mother had deprived the children by failing to care for them, the deprivation was likely to continue in light of the mother's drug abuse and depression, and the termination was in the best interest of the children as the children were thriving in the care of their grandmother. In the Interest of P.L.S.D., 275 Ga. App. 49, 619 S.E.2d 755 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

There was sufficient evidence that continued deprivation caused by the mother was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the children, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310, because the mother had a demonstrated history of irresponsible and neglectful conduct toward her children and an established pattern of joblessness and instability as well as drug abuse; her ongoing drug abuse and multiple drug addictions, and her failure to complete the essential elements of her case plan would negatively impact the children's well-being. In the Interest of L.W., 276 Ga. App. 197, 622 S.E.2d 860 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Sufficient evidence supported an order terminating a mother's parental rights as the mother had used drugs since age 13, had threatened the child, had only attended three or four recommended Narcotics Anonymous meetings that year, been diagnosed with amphetamine mood disorder and dependence, and tested positive for drug use on the date of the termination hearing. In the Interest of K.A.P., 277 Ga. App. 794, 627 S.E.2d 857 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a father's parental rights was supported by evidence of the adverse impact on the child of the mother's continuous drug abuse, the father's neglect of the father's other children, and by the two years the father waited before filing a petition to legitimate the child; the termination of a mother's parental rights was supported by evidence of the mother's egregious drug abuse, the repeated removal of the children from the mother's care, and the mother's failure to comply with her case plan goals. In the Interest of T.L., 279 Ga. App. 7, 630 S.E.2d 154 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Since neither parent appealed deprivation orders, they were bound by their findings for purposes of a later termination hearing; the termination order was supported by sufficient evidence including, the failure of the parents to stop abusing drugs, to achieve stable housing, to support the children, and to maintain contact with the children. In the Interest of C. P., 279 Ga. App. 25, 630 S.E.2d 165 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a juvenile court's termination of a mother's parental rights over two children pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(B) and (C) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311) as the mother had a chronic history of drug use, the mother did not have a parental bond with the children and did not support the children, there was no satisfactory completion of the conditions of the mother's reunification plan, the mother was incapable of providing adequate care to the children, and custody in the paternal grandparents was in the children's best interests; the juvenile's court reliance on any non-compliance with a reunification plan that had not been in effect for one year or was not court-ordered was error, but it was harmless when there were other substantial factors to support the termination decision. In the Interest of D.J., 279 Ga. App. 355, 631 S.E.2d 427 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court's decision to terminate a mother's parental rights pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310) was supported by sufficient evidence; a rational trier of fact could have concluded that the mother's chronic drug abuse had rendered the mother incapable of providing for the needs of the children; this lack of proper parental care or control was the cause of the children's deprivation; the cause of the deprivation was likely to continue as evidenced by the mother's inability to maintain a stable home or employment; and the continued deprivation was likely to cause serious harm to the children. In the Interest of C.G., 279 Ga. App. 730, 632 S.E.2d 472 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

In the parental rights termination case, clear and convincing evidence demonstrated parental misconduct under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311); the child was deprived, the mother caused the deprivation by using methamphetamine during the mother's pregnancy, and the mother's continued drug use demonstrated a likely continuation of the deprivation that was likely to seriously harm the child. In the Interest of L.L., 280 Ga. App. 804, 635 S.E.2d 216 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Mother's repeated drug use, resistance to inpatient, long-term mental health and drug treatment, and failure to maintain stable housing or employment, in addition to the bond the child developed with the foster family, established that termination of the mother's parental rights was in the child's best interest under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310). In the Interest of H.E.M.O., 281 Ga. App. 281, 636 S.E.2d 47 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Order terminating a parent's parental rights was upheld on appeal as clear and convincing evidence was presented that such was warranted given the parent's serious drug addiction, failure to maintain a steady job and appropriate home, and sporadic visitation and lack of bond with the children; as a result, termination was in the childrens' best interest. In the Interest of T.J., 281 Ga. App. 673, 637 S.E.2d 75 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

In a termination of parental rights case, the cause of the child's deprivation was likely to continue under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310) as the mother had been unable to stop the mother's use of controlled substances or to consistently take medication as prescribed. In the Interest of D.A.B., 281 Ga. App. 702, 637 S.E.2d 102 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was affirmed as the child's deprivation was likely to continue since the mother had relapsed from an earlier drug program, the mother had tested positive for drugs shortly before the hearing, all of the mother's drug screens had been positive, and the mother had not completed the mother's most recent drug program; further, the mother did not meet the goals of the mother's reunification plan and failed to visit the child. In the Interest of M.N.R., 282 Ga. App. 46, 637 S.E.2d 777 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Order terminating a parent's parental rights was upheld on appeal, given evidence of: (1) a previous deprivation finding, which the parent did not appeal; (2) the parent's continued addiction to crack cocaine; (3) the parent's failure to pay child support and have sufficient contact with the two children; and (4) the parent's continued unfitness, which supported the court's finding that the deprivation was likely to continue. In the Interest of K.W., 283 Ga. App. 398, 641 S.E.2d 598 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Clear and convincing evidence supported termination of a mother's parental rights. The conditions of her children's deprivation were likely to continue as the mother had a history dating back to 1991 which required an agency's intervention, and the mother admitted that she was a drug addict. The father's history of chronic, unrehabilitated drug abuse and incarcerations also supported termination of his parental rights. In the Interest of S.S.G.A., 285 Ga. App. 276, 645 S.E.2d 724 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court properly terminated a parent's parental rights, concluding that any deprivation the affected children suffered was likely to continue, as clear and convincing evidence was presented that the parent had a substantial drug problem, which went untreated, and rendered the parent unfit to care for the children. In the Interest of M.A., 287 Ga. App. 719, 652 S.E.2d 613 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court did not err by finding, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-107, 15-11-310, 15-11-311, 15-11-381, and 15-11-471), that the child was deprived at the time of the termination hearing and that the mother was the cause of the deprivation as the evidence showed that the mother had a 12-year history of drug addiction, that she repeatedly used methamphetamine while pregnant with the child, that the mother's two other children were not in her custody, that she had multiple felony drug convictions, that she was in jail after the child's birth, that she failed to financially support the child until four weeks before the termination hearing, that she had lived in five separate residences since giving birth to the child, and that she made no attempt whatsoever to visit the child until one month prior to the termination hearing. In the Interest of Z. P., 314 Ga. App. 347, 724 S.E.2d 48 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was supported by clear and convincing evidence because, inter alia, the mother was likely to subject the children to generalized neglect; the mother exhibited major depressive disorder and generalized anxiety disorder which likely would damage the children; the mother failed to complete individual counseling sessions, failed to complete drug treatment, failed to have consistent housing, and failed to provide clean drug screens during the plan; and the mother continued a dependent relationship with the father, who was alleged to have sexually abused the older child. In the Interest of A. M. B., 324 Ga. App. 394, 750 S.E.2d 709 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

In a termination of parental rights case, there was evidence to support the juvenile court's finding that the children's dependency was likely to continue and would not likely be remedied because the parent was unable to remain drug free; the parent failed and refused drug screenings; and the parent failed to complete substance abuse counseling following the parent's positive drug screen. In the Interest of A. S., 339 Ga. App. 875, 794 S.E.2d 672 (2016).

Impact of foster care. — Termination of the mother's parental rights was improper because, although the record supported a finding that the child would suffer serious harm if the child were returned to the mother, the record did not support a finding that remaining in foster care would likely cause serious harm to the child as a bonding and attachment expert and the case worker testified about the strong and positive relationship the child had with the foster parents; the expert did not opine that the instability and impermanency of foster care were currently causing any specific harm to the child; and there was no other evidence presented that the child suffered any emotional stress or sadness from the instability and impermanency associated with foster care. In the Interest of R. S. T., 345 Ga. App. 300, 812 S.E.2d 614 (2018).

Parental dependency on prescription drugs. — Trial court's findings were sufficient to support a termination of a mother's parental rights when the mother did not financially support the children, even when funds were available to the mother to do so, the mother failed to develop a bond with the children, the mother was dependent on prescription medication to the extent that the mother was physically unable to care for the children, the mother was unwilling to undergo mental health treatment, which experts believed was vital to stabilize the mother and enable the mother to parent the children, and repeatedly and continually failed to obey court orders or cooperate in the case plan. In the Interest of J.K., 278 Ga. App. 564, 629 S.E.2d 529 (2006), overruled on other grounds, In the Interest of J.E., 309 Ga. App. 51, 711 S.E.2d 5 (Ga. Ct. App. 2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Mother's repeated inability to overcome drug addiction, with its consequent incarceration and loss of employment supported a finding that termination of parental rights was in the best interests of the child. In re D.T., 221 Ga. App. 328, 471 S.E.2d 281 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was supported by clear and convincing evidence because the mother failed to comply with a reunification plan by failing to successfully complete a drug treatment program, failing to provide stable housing, and failing to obtain stable employment. Additionally, the mother failed to show a strong familial bond with the children or that the termination of her parental rights was not in the best interests of the children. In the Interest of S.S., 259 Ga. App. 126, 576 S.E.2d 99 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent taking medication and receiving counseling. — In a case terminating the mother's parental rights, the child was currently dependent at the time of the hearing because the mother failed to maintain visitation with the child from May 2015 to March 2016, with only sporadic visitation prior to May 2015; the mother failed to provide child support, refused to provide proof of income, and was currently living in a two-bedroom home with four other individuals, none of whom had been screened by the Department of Family and Children Services or ever met the child; and the mother suffered from serious mental health issues, which the mother denied, even though the mother was taking some medication and receiving some counseling. In the Interest of R. S. T., 345 Ga. App. 300, 812 S.E.2d 614 (2018).

Evidence of parent's psychological problems sufficient. — Termination of a mother's parental rights was warranted because she suffered from a dependent disability disorder and because her brother, a convicted child molester, lived in her home. In re D.I.W., 215 Ga. App. 644, 451 S.E.2d 804 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence supported the court's findings concerning the likelihood of the mother's mental condition continuing and of her failure to comply with reunification plan goals so that termination of parental rights was in the child's best interest. In the Interest of C.K., 242 Ga. App. 269, 529 S.E.2d 395 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Clear and convincing evidence supported the termination of the mother's parental rights to the mother's children as the mother's lack of parental care and control was the cause of the children's deprivation. The mother suffered from a psychological disorder that affected her ability to provide adequate care for the children, tested positive for marijuana, was convicted of theft by conversion, was incarcerated on a probation violation, and had failed to develop and maintain a parental bond with the children in a meaningful and supportive manner; such factors all bore upon the trial court's determination as to whether the children were without proper parental care and control under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311). In re R.A.R., 259 Ga. App. 680, 577 S.E.2d 872 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court did not err in considering the mother's testimony in determining whether her child was deprived, even though the juvenile court had previously found her mentally incompetent, as the juvenile court was authorized to consider any testimony, including that of the allegedly impaired parent, in determining the central issue of whether the parent was able to adequately provide for the child's needs; also, consideration of the mother's testimony supported the findings of the psychologist who testified that the mother's multiple mental disorders interfered with her ability to adequately care for her child. In the Interest of B.B., 268 Ga. App. 603, 602 S.E.2d 330 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence supported the finding that a child was deprived within the meaning of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-107), and that termination of the mother's parental rights was in the child's best interest, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320), because the mother, who was homeless and suffering from schizophrenia, failed to maintain contact with the agency or visit with the child for more than one year, and she never accomplished court ordered goals for reunification or demonstrated the ability to adequately care for the child. In the Interest of S.G., 271 Ga. App. 776, 611 S.E.2d 86 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Lack of proper parental care or control as cause of deprivation factor for terminating a mother's parental rights was satisfied because the mother attended only 38 of 79 scheduled visits and failed to develop any kind of basic relationship with the child; failed to comply with her case plan because she moved, lost her job, failed to complete therapy, and failed to obtain medical treatment; failed to contribute to the child's support; and she had a low IQ, limited cognitive abilities, and a dependent personality disorder, all of which impaired her ability to parent the child. In the Interest of K.N., 272 Ga. App. 45, 611 S.E.2d 713 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Because a trial court expressly found, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320), that a mother's five children were deprived, that the cause was a lack of proper parental care and control, that the cause of deprivation was not likely to be remedied, and that the continued deprivation would cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the children, a decision to terminate the mother's parental rights was supported by the clear and convincing evidence in that she was found incapable of parenting and she had mental health issues which she was not taking care of; there was no requirement that specific findings had to be separately made as to each child, and the trial court made adequate findings to support the determination which were applicable to all of the children, and to the mother's treatment of them. In the Interest of A.A., 274 Ga. App. 791, 618 S.E.2d 723 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence of a mother's obsessive-compulsive disorder and depression, evidence that these disorders interfered with the mother's ability to provide for the children, along with the mother's sporadic attendance at therapy, and failure to consistently take prescribed medication sufficiently supported the termination of the mother's parental rights. In the Interest of S.W.J.P.D., 279 Ga. App. 226, 630 S.E.2d 824 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent's parental rights were properly terminated under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311) because the record showed that the parent was diagnosed with a mental condition that prevented the parent from caring adequately for the parent's child, that the parent failed to attend the counseling sessions required in the parent's case plan, and the parent did not take medication for the parent's mental illness as prescribed. This evidence supported the trial court's conclusion that: the child was deprived; the deprivation was attributable to a lack of proper parental care; the deprivation was likely to continue; and the deprivation was likely to seriously harm the child. In the Interest of T.A., 279 Ga. App. 377, 631 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Based on the mother's mental illness, the mother's recurring use of illegal drugs, the mother's failure to consistently take prescribed medication, and the debilitating effect of the mother's failure to properly medicate, the juvenile court was entitled to conclude lack of parental care and control under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311) in a termination of parental rights case. In the Interest of D.A.B., 281 Ga. App. 702, 637 S.E.2d 102 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a parent's parental rights order was supported by clear and convincing evidence consisting of: (1) prior deprivation orders which were never appealed; (2) the parent's medically verifiable mental illness which prevented the parent from adequately parenting the child; (3) the parent's failure to comply with the case plan goals, failure to maintain employment and stable housing, and failure to develop adequate parental skills; and (4) the fact that the child had been in foster care and was thriving therein; moreover, the aforementioned amounted to clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or inability for the court to determine that termination was in the children's best interests. In the Interest of E.G., 284 Ga. App. 524, 644 S.E.2d 339 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent's parental rights to the parent's child were properly terminated because the cause of the child's dependency was likely to continue and not likely to be remedied, satisfying O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310(a)(5); the parent's psychological issues, incarcerations, and refusal to follow the parent's case plan had worsened, not improved. In the Interest of S. P., 336 Ga. App. 488, 784 S.E.2d 846 (2016).

Parent with Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy. — Clear and convincing evidence was presented that the deprivation caused by the mother was likely to continue and that the termination of her parental rights was in the best interests of her two children since there was evidence: (1) that the mother suffered from Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy; (2) that the children had been admitted to hospital emergency rooms by the mother on numerous occasions, but that neither had any serious medical problems since being separated from the mother; and (3) that on one occasion while the older child was in the hospital, the mother injected a mixture of feces and urine into his intravenous tube. In re C.M., 236 Ga. App. 874, 513 S.E.2d 773 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Medical and psychological conditions of parent. — Trial court's order terminating a mother's parental rights was not error since there was evidence of physical and sexual abuse, testimony concerning the mother's mental and emotional problems (including drinking and drug addiction), and the mother had a history of suicide attempts and had been diagnosed as having an antisocial personality. In re J.I.H., 191 Ga. App. 848, 383 S.E.2d 349 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

There was sufficient evidence showing a likelihood of future deprivation of the parent's children to authorize termination of parental rights as evidence showed the parent's medical condition prevented the parent from adequately caring for the children; the parent had cerebral palsy and suffered from seizures, and a psychologist testified that the parent had moderate mental retardation and functioned at a second to third grade level. In the Interest of A.W., 264 Ga. App. 705, 592 S.E.2d 177 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Clear and convincing evidence supported the order terminating a parent's rights to two minor children as the children's deprivation was due primarily to the parent's mental illness and failure to take prescribed medication to address that illness, and during more than 30 months the parent was given to work on a reunification case plan, the parent failed to comply with the requirements of the plan. In the Interest of O. B., 337 Ga. App. 401, 787 S.E.2d 344 (2016).

Mother with untreated depression. — Juvenile court did not err in terminating a mother's parental rights pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311) because any rational trier of fact could have found by clear and convincing evidence that the mother suffered from a medically verifiable deficiency such as to render her unable to provide adequately for the needs of the children; a psychological evaluation showed that the mother was diagnosed with depression, and the clinician who counseled the mother for depression testified that the mother's ability to function in society was compromised by her low IQ, her depression, and her failure to take her medication. In the Interest of A. R., 315 Ga. App. 357, 726 S.E.2d 800 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent with mental or emotional deficiencies. — Trial court's detailed and comprehensive findings that: both parents experienced medically verifiable mental or emotional deficiencies chronically affecting the parents' provisionary ability; both parents carried felony convictions and imprisonment; and both parents had failed to conduct significant visitational or reunificatory efforts warranted termination of their parental rights in the best interest of the child. In re M.M., 207 Ga. App. 722, 429 S.E.2d 132 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Although a psychologist who testified in a mother's parental rights termination proceeding did not explicitly conclude that she could not parent her three minor children, the psychologist's testimony that she was mentally retarded and illiterate, that she would have trouble with basic activities of daily living, that she would have a difficult time being a sufficient parent, and that if she had custody of the children, the county agency had to stay actively involved in order to monitor the mother's decision-making, together with other evidence of her parental misconduct and inability, supported the termination under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)-(B)(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311). In the Interest of S.N.L., 275 Ga. App. 600, 621 S.E.2d 792 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court did not err in terminating a parent's parental rights, finding that the child's deprivation was likely to continue or to harm the child, and in determining that termination was in the child's best interest, based on clear and convincing evidence that: (1) the parent was unable to provide for the child's basic needs; (2) the parent's mental health issues would not be resolved in the immediate future, if ever; and (3) the parent failed to make any significant progress towards reunification since the child's birth. Moreover, the same evidence also supported the court's finding that the deprivation was likely to continue and the child would likely suffer serious harm from the continued deprivation such that termination was in the child's best interest. In the Interest of D.L.T., 283 Ga. App. 223, 641 S.E.2d 236 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent with psychological impairment. — There was sufficient evidence that the cause of a child's deprivation was likely to continue when the mother failed to consistently seek mental health treatment or to take her medication, could not care for her four older children, and had no bond with the child and did not regularly visit or support the child; although the mother showed progress in securing housing, taking her medication, and seeing a therapist, she did so only after the termination petition was filed, and at the time of the hearing she was still living with a relative and spending time at a motel, and she admitted that she took her medication only when she had the medication available. In the Interest of H.M., 287 Ga. App. 418, 651 S.E.2d 527 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination order was upheld on appeal because the juvenile court was presented with clear and convincing proof sufficient to support the termination of parental rights: (1) the parent's mental health problems were unlikely to be remedied, resulting in a lack of proper parental care or control and the likelihood that the parent would not be able to provide a stable home; and (2) the parent failed to protect the children from harm in the past. In the Interest of H.K., 288 Ga. App. 831, 655 S.E.2d 698 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent with mental illness. — In a case wherein a mother's parental rights were terminated to the mother's three-year-old daughter, sufficient evidence existed to support the judgment of termination because the evidence established that the mother was unable to provide adequately for the child due to mental illness, which was corroborated by evidence that the mother had four other children who were not in the mother's care or support; further, the mother had a long history of drug and alcohol abuse of which the mother failed to obtain inpatient drug treatment, was unable to maintain stable housing, failed to parent any children successfully, and the foster parents planned to adopt the child. In the Interest of D.P., 287 Ga. App. 168, 651 S.E.2d 110 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent with longstanding mental problems. — Because a mother did not appeal a juvenile court's finding of deprivation of her child, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310), and the juvenile court also found that she suffered from serious and longstanding mental problems that prevented her from caring for the child, despite her expressed desire to do so, termination of her parental rights was supported by the evidence; there was evidence that the child was deprived, that deprivation was attributable to a lack of proper parental care, that the deprivation was likely to continue, and that it was likely to cause serious mental, emotional, and moral harm to him. In the Interest of D.L., 270 Ga. App. 847, 608 S.E.2d 311 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Presence of grandmother in home was irrelevant to question of whether mentally retarded mother's parental rights should be terminated. Wasson v. Cox, 176 Ga. App. 684, 337 S.E.2d 445 (1985) (decided under former law).

Lack of mental ability authorizes termination. — Laws authorizing the termination of parental rights may sever children who are "deprived," within the meaning of the law, from parents whose only deficiency is lack of mental ability to give necessary care to the children. Jones v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 371, 271 S.E.2d 27 (1980) (decided under former law).

Mental disability that renders a parent incapable of caring for the child is a valid legal basis for termination of parental rights. In re B.J.H., 194 Ga. App. 282, 390 S.E.2d 427 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Parents with limited mental capacity. — Juvenile court's termination of a mother's parental rights over three minor children, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311), was supported by clear and convincing evidence, as they had been declared deprived due to her parental neglect, she had failed to meet the goals of her reunification plan, which included providing stable housing, financial security, and completing various therapies, and her mental limitations would have made it difficult for her to parent. In the Interest of S.N.L., 275 Ga. App. 600, 621 S.E.2d 792 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Testimony that a mother was unable to provide a stable home for a child given the mother's limited mental capacity and history of being easily led and exploited by others, that the child was doing well in foster care, and that the foster parents wanted to adopt the child, was clear and convincing evidence supporting the termination of the mother's parental rights under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4). In the Interest of B.R., 277 Ga. App. 833, 627 S.E.2d 879 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Mother's argument in the termination of parental rights case, that there was no specific harm to the child under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iv), failed; it was found that the mother was mentally incapable of caring for the child, and there was evidence that the child was specifically harmed in that the child had been in foster care for three years, had serious anger problems, and was developmentally delayed. In the Interest of H.F.G., 281 Ga. App. 22, 635 S.E.2d 338 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Although the mother's friends were allegedly willing to assist the mother in raising the child, sufficient evidence in the termination of parental rights case established that the cause of the deprivation was likely to continue under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310); the mother lacked the mental capacity to care for the child without constant assistance. In the Interest of H.F.G., 281 Ga. App. 22, 635 S.E.2d 338 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Mental retardation of parent. — Sufficient evidence supported the trial court's order terminating the parental rights of a mother who suffered from some degree of mental retardation, including evidence that the child, who was an asthmatic, was not receiving the medication and care the child required from the mother; the mother failed to learn proper parenting skills despite the resources offered to her; the mother never secured a stable home or stable employment; the mother's shortcomings and failures provided clear and convincing evidence that the child's deprivation would likely continue; and the child had developed a strong bond with the foster parents and was developing nicely. In the Interest of C.R.G., 272 Ga. App. 161, 611 S.E.2d 784 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Insufficient evidence supported the termination of a parent's rights because the record showed that while the parent had mental retardation, the parent functioned well despite the mental disability and had the skills necessary to provide for and raise a family, including two children, in Arkansas; thus, there was a lack of evidence that the deprivation was to continue. In the Interest of O. B., 337 Ga. App. 401, 787 S.E.2d 344 (2016).

Mislabeling of mother's mental health problem. — Even if the trial court mislabeled a mother's diagnosis as schizophrenia rather than schizoaffective disorder, such error likely did not affect the court's decision to terminate her parental rights as the evidence showed that the mother had significant mental health problems characterized by delusions and hallucinations and did not consistently follow treatment. In the Interest of H.M., 287 Ga. App. 418, 651 S.E.2d 527 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Medical condition of parent justified termination. — Father did not contest the trial court's findings that his asthma, emphysema, and bronchitis rendered him unable to provide adequately for the needs of his children, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(B)(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311), and the record supported this basis for termination of his parental rights by clear and convincing evidence. In the Interest of C.M., 275 Ga. App. 719, 621 S.E.2d 815 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent's disability justified termination. — Juvenile court did not err in terminating a father's parental rights, given clear and convincing evidence of the father's disability and incapacity suffered therefrom, failure to maintain a stable home, and lack of proper parental care or control caused the child's continued deprivation such that termination was in the child's best interests; moreover, even though there was some argument that if given an additional, unspecified period of time the father might be capable of parenting the child, the juvenile court was authorized to find from the evidence that continued deprivation was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to that child. In the Interest of D.R., 281 Ga. App. 762, 637 S.E.2d 154 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Medical and psychological conditions of parent. — Factor, "cause of the deprivation was likely to continue" was satisfied because the mother failed to comply with her case plan by failing to obtain counseling for her own medical and physical needs; the mother was in denial about her own physical health; and a psychologist testified that the mother had limited cognitive abilities and a dependent personality disorder that was difficult to treat. In the Interest of K.N., 272 Ga. App. 45, 611 S.E.2d 713 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Mother's medical condition. — Rational trier of fact could find by clear and convincing evidence that a mother's parental rights should be terminated, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310), because the mother failed to comply with three case plans by missing appointments and being dishonest, did not seek treatment for the mother's Huntington's disease, despite obvious symptoms, and had four car accidents in three months due to the mother's disease. In the Interest of M.T.H., 279 Ga. App. 662, 632 S.E.2d 441 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Mother's emotional instability and educational deprivation of children. — Evidence of the mother's emotional instability and the educational deprivation of the children authorized the juvenile court under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311) to find that the lack of proper parental care was the cause of the deprivation, and that the termination of the mother's parental rights was in the children's best interests. In the Interest of K.S., 258 Ga. App. 24, 572 S.E.2d 710 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Child needs permanence and stability which parent could not provide. — Trial court dismissed the appeal of a mother challenging the termination of parental rights because the judgment was supported by sufficient evidence showing that though the mother had not bonded with the child, the mother was unwilling to make the necessary changes to parent the child, which caused the child's stay in foster care when the child needed permanence and stability. In the Interest of M. M. M. T., 327 Ga. App. 572, 760 S.E.2d 188 (2014) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Deprivation

Parent's lack of parental care or control caused deprivation. — Affirmance of the juvenile court's order terminating a parent's parental rights was ordered as the parent failed to comply with the case plan outlined, and the parent's failure to obtain stable housing, continued financial instability, and prolonged unwillingness to address mental health issues showed that the parent's lack of parental care or control caused the children's deprivation; hence, the parent's motion for a new trial was properly denied. In the Interest of J.M.N., 285 Ga. App. 203, 645 S.E.2d 685 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Court upheld an order terminating a parent's parental rights which was supported by sufficient evidence that the children at issue lacked proper parental care and that the cause of the deprivation was likely to continue, based on that parent's admitted drug use, failure to pay child support, failure to establish a bond with the children, and consent to a non-reunification plan, satisfying former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(ii) and (iii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310). In the Interest of H.C., 285 Ga. App. 631, 647 S.E.2d 333 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Deprivation continuing from parental drug abuse. — Juvenile court's findings supported the conclusion that the children were dependent at the time of the termination of parental rights hearing due to a lack of proper parental care and control because the parent's continuing substance abuse was evidenced by the parent's prior positive drug screen and several refused screenings (which the Division of Family and Children Services treated as positive); and because the parent was unable to pay even a symbolic amount of child support or to provide stable housing. In the Interest of A. S., 339 Ga. App. 875, 794 S.E.2d 672 (2016).

Lack of proper parental care by mother caused deprivation. — Children's deprivation was caused by a lack of proper parental care by the mother since the mother: (1) did not pay child support; (2) failed to comply with the reunification goals: (3) did not resolve the criminal charges against her; (4) did not maintain contact with her children; and (5) did not establish a stable home. In the Interest of J.J., 259 Ga. App. 159, 575 S.E.2d 921 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parental deprivation not shown. — Juvenile court's finding of deprivation was reversed because the record lacked clear and convincing evidence to support the court's finding that the child was deprived as there was no evidence that the child was harmed during acts of domestic violence between the parents, both parties testified that they had no present intention to reunite, the father had passed several drug screens, and the father was in the process of completing a substance abuse program. In the Interest of G. R. B., 330 Ga. App. 693, 769 S.E.2d 119 (2015).

Termination improper when deprivation unlikely to continue. — Trial court erred in terminating the mother's parental rights to the oldest child as the clear and convincing evidence did not show that the mother was presently unfit and that the child's deprivation was likely to continue and cause substantial harm because the mother had maintained stable housing with the youngest child and that child's father; the mother had sources of income; and the mother met or substantially completed most of the other case plan goals by completing parenting classes, attending counseling sessions, attending the majority of the scheduled visitations with the child, interacting well with the child during visitation, and meeting with the caseworkers. In the Interest of T. M., 329 Ga. App. 719, 766 S.E.2d 101 (2014) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Insufficient evidence that continued deprivation likely to cause harm. — Termination of the mother's parental rights was improper because, although the evidence supported the finding that the children's dependency was likely to continue and would not likely be remedied, the state did not sufficiently establish that the children were likely to suffer harm under the status quo as there was no evidence that their continued relationship with their mother was harmful; and the juvenile court's generalized findings that the children would experience doubt, uncertainty and hesitancy in life, and that foster care would not provide the kind of stability they needed, and would put them at risk of delinquency, other anti-social behavior, and "foster care drift" did not show how each child would be harmed by the status quo. In the Interest of A. S., 339 Ga. App. 875, 794 S.E.2d 672 (2016).

Disposition

15-11-320. (For effective date, see note.) Termination of parental rights; findings; standard of proof.

(a) When the court finds that any ground set out in Code Section 15-11-310 is proved by clear and convincing evidence and that termination of parental rights is in a child's best interests, it shall order the termination of the parent's rights.

(b) The court's order shall:

(1) (For effective date, see note.) Contain written findings on which the order is based, including the factual basis for a determination that grounds for termination of parental rights exist and that termination is in the best interests of the child, including the findings required by subsection (c) of Code Section 15-11-300;

(2) Be conclusive and binding on all parties from the date of entry;

(3) Grant custody of the child at issue in accordance with Code Section 15-11-321; and

(4) Inform the parent whose rights have been terminated of his or her right to use the services of the Georgia Adoption Reunion Registry; however, failure to include such information shall not affect the validity of the judgment.

(c) If the court does not order the termination of parental rights but the court finds that there is clear and convincing evidence that a child is a dependent child, the court may enter a disposition order in accordance with the provisions of Article 3 of this chapter.

(d) The court shall transmit a copy of every final order terminating the parental rights of a parent to the State Adoption Unit of the department within 15 days of the filing of such order.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-320, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2018, p. 19, § 1-2/HB 159; Ga. L. 2020, p. 241, § 4/SB 439.

Delayed effective date. — Paragraph (b)(1), as set out above, becomes effective January 1, 2021. For version of paragraph (b)(1) in effect until January 1, 2021, see the 2020 amendment note.

The 2018 amendment, effective September 1, 2018, substituted "State Adoption Unit" for "Office of Adoptions" in subsection (d).

The 2020 amendment, effective January 1, 2021, added ", including the findings required by subsection (c) of Code Section 15-11-300" at the end of paragraph (b)(1).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Sections 15-11-51, 15-11-54, 15-11-81, and 15-11-90, and pre-2014 Code Sections 15-11-94 and 15-11-103, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Placement with relative of putative father. — Evidence supported termination of a father's parental rights since the child was deprived; the court properly refused to consider placing the child with either the father's parents or his sister after terminating the father's parental rights. In the Interest of M.D.B., 262 Ga. App. 796, 586 S.E.2d 700 (2003) decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Equal protection and due process. — By not raising the issue below, a parent in a termination of parental rights case waived the parent's arguments that the trial court violated equal protection and due process by not determining whether the parent's mental health concerns affected the parent's ability to complete the specific goals in the parent's case plan; moreover, there was uncontradicted evidence that despite the parent's mental health problems, the parent understood the case plan, appreciated the plan's requirements, and could have completed the plan, but did not do so, and the parent testified that the parent was able both physically and mentally to care for the child. In the Interest of H.M., 287 Ga. App. 418, 651 S.E.2d 527 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70 not applicable. — Provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-443 and 15-11-607) as to orders of disposition and recommendations regarding unification were not applicable in proceedings under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320). In re V.S., 230 Ga. App. 26, 495 S.E.2d 142 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Primary consideration in proceeding to terminate parental rights was welfare of child. In re Creech, 139 Ga. App. 210, 228 S.E.2d 198 (1976); Avera v. Rainwater, 150 Ga. App. 39, 256 S.E.2d 648 (1979) (decided under former law).

Parental misconduct or incapability must be shown. — For the termination of parental rights, there must be a showing of parental unfitness caused either by intentional or unintentional misconduct resulting in abuse or neglect of the child, or by what is tantamount to a physical or mental incapability to care for the child. Howard v. Department of Human Resources, 157 Ga. App. 306, 277 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former law).

Petition to terminate own rights not authorized. — Statutory authority of the juvenile court to entertain petitions to terminate parental rights does not extend to petitions by parents seeking judicial imprimatur of their own voluntary abandonment of parental responsibility. In re K.L.S., 180 Ga. App. 688, 350 S.E.2d 50 (1986) (decided under former law).

Responsibility cannot be terminated by contract. — Father could not voluntarily abandon his parental responsibility by contract. Diegel v. Diegel, 261 Ga. App. 660, 583 S.E.2d 520 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Agency custody does not oust judicial jurisdiction. — That a "deprived child" may be in agency custody at the time of the hearing on termination of parental rights does not oust the juvenile court from jurisdiction to determine the ultimate issue of custody. In re K.C.O., 142 Ga. App. 216, 235 S.E.2d 602 (1977) (decided under former law).

Exercise of custody by county department suspends, but does not terminate, parental rights. — Removal of custody of the child from the parents is a determination that, for whatever length of time custody is exercised by the department of family and children services, this right has been suspended, although not finally terminated. Rodgers v. Department of Human Resources, 157 Ga. App. 235, 276 S.E.2d 902 (1981) (decided under former law).

Venue for foster child in residential county. — Proceeding to terminate parental rights may be commenced in the county in which the child resides in a foster home. Cain v. Department of Human Resources, 166 Ga. App. 801, 305 S.E.2d 492 (1983) (decided under former law).

Legitimation rights of putative father must first be determined. — Within the context of a parental rights termination proceeding, a juvenile court had the discretion to determine whether to grant an extension of time for a putative father to serve his legitimation petition on the mother, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-7-22(b), former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-283), and Georgia case law that allowed application of the procedural rules set out in the Civil Practice Act, including O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c) relating to service and extensions thereto; accordingly, the juvenile court's refusal to hear the legitimation petition was error as was the decision to terminate the putative father's parental rights under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320) without first determining whether he had standing or not under the legitimation action. In the Interest of A.H., 279 Ga. App. 77, 630 S.E.2d 587 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Biological father who fails to seek to legitimate his child following receipt of proper notice of termination proceedings may not thereafter object to the termination of his parental rights. In the Interest of A.W., 242 Ga. App. 26, 528 S.E.2d 819 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Father lacked standing to challenge termination order. — Given a biological father's failure to legitimate the child at issue, the father lacked standing to challenge the juvenile court's termination of parental rights order. In the Interest of L.S.T., 286 Ga. App. 638, 649 S.E.2d 841 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Withdrawal of consent not allowed. — After voluntarily consenting to a termination of parental rights, a parent could not change the parent's mind because such consent was undertaken in writing, in open court, and upon the advice of counsel; further, no statutory authority existed allowing a parent to withdraw the voluntary consent to the termination of parental rights. In the Interest of T.C.D.,

281 Ga. App. 517, 636 S.E.2d 704 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Right to counsel. — Parent, who was represented by counsel during the course of a termination of parental rights proceeding, could not prove that the parent was denied counsel during the proceeding because, beyond the parent's claim that the parent was denied counsel, the parent failed to show what arguments the parent would have advanced, what evidence the parent would have produced in the parent's favor, or how the parent would have been successful had the parent been represented by counsel; moreover, in light of the overwhelming evidence supporting the termination of the parent's parental rights, there was nothing in the record that would support a finding of harm. In the Interest of M.S., 279 Ga. App. 254, 630 S.E.2d 856 (2006), overruled on other grounds, In re J.M.B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion denying a father's motion for a continuance of a termination hearing on the basis that the father's attorney did not have sufficient time to prepare for the termination hearing because the father delayed requesting court-appointed counsel and waited until the day before the hearing to ask for a continuance. In the Interest of A.R.K.L., 314 Ga. App. 847, 726 S.E.2d 77 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

No ineffective counsel. — Parent did not receive ineffective assistance of counsel in a termination of parental rights proceeding as: (1) the counsel's failure to call an employer of the parent as a witness was reasonable since the employer had been disbarred for child molestation; (2) in the absence of a showing how the attorney's actions in conducting discovery compromised the parent's representation, there was no error in the juvenile court's finding that the parent had adequate access to counsel; and (3) claims as to counsel's failure to properly follow up on the issue of relative placement and to argue for a continuance were without merit. In the Interest of C.M., 282 Ga. App. 502, 639 S.E.2d 323 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Denial of continuance not abuse of discretion. — Given that the procedural history of a termination of parental rights action was one of continuing delay and postponement because a parent failed to show: (1) that a continuance of the hearing was an entitlement; (2) what arguments and evidence would have been advanced; or (3) that the outcome of the proceeding would have been different if the parent or counsel had been present, the juvenile court's denial of a continuance of a termination hearing was not an abuse of discretion. In the Interest of R.L.J., 285 Ga. App. 887, 648 S.E.2d 189 (2007), overruled on other grounds, In re J.M.B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Determination whether needs met by temporary custody. — Although sufficient evidence was presented to authorize termination of parental rights, the case was remanded to the trial court to determine if the child's needs could be met by temporary custody to some agency or individual as opposed to a complete severance of all parental rights. Jones v. Department of Human Resources, 168 Ga. App. 915, 310 S.E.2d 753 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

In a hearing on parental custody in a divorce action, the trial court erred in awarding custody of the parties' minor children to the Department of Family and Children Services based upon findings that the children were deprived and the parents unfit because the mother had no notice that the superior court judge might award custody of the children to a third party based upon standards of deprivation. Watkins v. Watkins, 266 Ga. 269, 466 S.E.2d 860 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Agency required to make thorough search for relative placement. — Juvenile court erred in failing to require the child services agency to make a thorough search for a suitable relative placement for a child whose mother's parental rights were terminated. In the Interest of A.K., 272 Ga. App. 429, 612 S.E.2d 581 (2005)

(decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court did not err in failing to place two children with a relative as a child services agency investigated placement with a parent's sibling (who did not want the children), the grandparents (who were financially unstable and had a history of child abuse), and a great-grandparent (who was on disability and in poor health); on the other hand, the children had formed a bond with their foster parents, who were raising the children as their own. In the Interest of C.M., 282 Ga. App. 502, 639 S.E.2d 323 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Jurisdiction properly exercised. — Juvenile court properly exercised jurisdiction over termination proceedings pursuant to former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-28 and 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10 and 15-11-320) as the petition was filed by the mother, who had already been awarded sole physical custody of the child and as the termination petition dealt specifically with factors relating to the father's inability to provide proper care and support for the child such that the father's parental rights should be terminated. In the Interest of A.R.K.L., 314 Ga. App. 847, 726 S.E.2d 77 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination petition was not a disguised adoption matter. — Contrary to a father's contention, the termination petition filed by the child's mother was not actually a disguised adoption matter that could be properly heard only in superior court. The stepfather's mere expression of a desire to adopt the child at some time in the future was not sufficient for the court to conclude that the petition was filed in connection with an adoption proceeding; there was no evidence that an adoption petition was pending at the time that the petition was filed; and the petition, which stated that the father failed to provide for the support of the child and failed to have any contact with the child, alleged grounds sufficient for termination. In the Interest of A.R.K.L., 314 Ga. App. 847, 726 S.E.2d 77 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Order deficient. — Superior court's order in termination of parental rights action was deficient because it did not include specific findings of fact showing that the mother abandoned the child, and it did not include specific factual findings showing that the mother failed to provide care and support for the child without justifiable cause. Moreover, the superior court's conclusion that adoption was in the child's best interest also lacked particularity. Dell v. Dell, 324 Ga. App. 297, 748 S.E.2d 703 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Criteria for Termination

Criteria justifying termination. — Affirmative evidence of moral unfitness, physical abuse, abandonment, refusal to support, or similar misconduct by a parent or the likelihood of substantial threat to a child's physical, mental, moral, or emotional well-being justifiably warrants the termination of a parent's right to a child. Elrod v. Hall County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 136 Ga. App. 251, 220 S.E.2d 726 (1975) (decided under former law).

Thread running through parental right termination cases manifests moral unfitness, physical abuse, and abandonment. Patty v. Department of Human Resources, 154 Ga. App. 455, 269 S.E.2d 30 (1980) (decided under former law).

Court in arriving at the court's decision in terminating parental rights should use, among other criteria, moral unfitness, physical abuse, and abandonment by a parent. Gardner v. Lenon, 154 Ga. App. 748, 270 S.E.2d 36 (1980) (decided under former law).

Custody may be lost if a child is found to be destitute or suffering, if the child is being reared under immoral influences, or if the child is found to be deprived and likely to be harmed thereby. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983) (decided under former law).

Parental rights may be terminated when the child is deprived and the court finds that the conditions and causes of the deprivation are likely to continue or will not be remedied and that by reason thereof the child is suffering or will probably suffer serious physical, mental, moral, or emotional harm. The last two statutorily required findings are necessary only in cases of termination of parental rights. In re J.C.P., 167 Ga. App. 572, 307 S.E.2d 1 (1983), but see In re A.W., 240 Ga. App. 259, 523 S.E.2d 88 (1999) (decided under former law).

Determining the propriety of termination of parental rights is a two-step process. First, the court shall determine if there exists clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or inability; secondly, if such evidence exists, the court then considers whether termination of parental rights is in the best interest of the child, given the physical, mental, emotional, and moral condition and needs of the child, including the need for a stable home. In re G.L.H., 209 Ga. App. 146, 433 S.E.2d 357 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re B.C., 235 Ga. App. 152, 508 S.E.2d 774 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Juvenile court employed a two-prong analysis for determining whether parental rights should be terminated under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-10-310 and 15-10-320) first, the court determined whether there was clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or that the parent was unable to care for and control the child; and, second, the court determined whether termination was in the best interest of the child. In the Interest of A.M., 259 Ga. App. 537, 578 S.E.2d 226 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Detailed findings for termination. — Termination of parental rights was allowed when the trial judge made detailed findings regarding the criteria to meet the two-step test, specifically, the court found that within the 18 months preceding the court's order, the defendant made no attempt to contact or communicate with the child, and the child was readily adoptable. In re H.M.T., 203 Ga. App. 247, 416 S.E.2d 567 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Considerations for the court. — Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)-(C)(ii)-(iii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310), in cases when the child was not in the custody of the parent who was the subject of the termination of parental rights proceedings and in determining whether the child was without proper parental care and control, the court should consider, without being limited to, whether the parent without justifiable cause failed significantly for a period of one year or longer prior to the filing of the petition for termination of parental rights: (1) to provide for the care and support of the child as required by law or judicial decree; and (2) to comply with a court ordered plan designed to reunite the child with the parent or parents. In the Interest of J.J., 259 Ga. App. 159, 575 S.E.2d 921 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Egregious conduct was one factor in termination proceedings. — Egregious conduct or evidence of past egregious conduct of a parent toward the parent's child or another child of a physically, emotionally, or sexually cruel or abusive nature was one factor a court may consider in determining whether the child was without proper parental care and control under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(B)(iv) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-318). In the Interest of J.P., 253 Ga. App. 732, 560 S.E.2d 318 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Because a mother's children had been found to be deprived, as defined in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-107), because her persistent failure to adequately supervise the children supported a finding that the deprivation was likely to continue, and because continued deprivation was likely to seriously harm the children, the mother's parental rights were properly terminated. In the Interest of T. A. H., 310 Ga. App. 93, 712 S.E.2d 115 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Findings

Required explicit statutory findings should be made in accordance with Ga. L. 1970, p. 170, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52). Crook v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 137 Ga. App. 817, 224 S.E.2d 806 (1976) (decided under former law).

Juvenile courts were given wide discretion, once deprivation was found, either to terminate the rights of the parent or issue an order under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-34. Painter v. Barkley, 157 Ga. App. 69, 276 S.E.2d 850 (1981) (decided under former law).

Explicit findings of fact as well as conclusions of law are required to be made in juvenile court cases which seek a termination of parental rights. Avera v. Rainwater, 147 Ga. App. 505, 249 S.E.2d 340 (1978) (decided under former law).

Trial court erred in failing to make explicit findings of fact regarding parental inability or misconduct and in failing to draw explicit conclusions of law and, thus, the court erred in terminating the mother's parental rights in her three children. In the Interest of S.W.J.P.D., 275 Ga. App. 272, 620 S.E.2d 497 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Final order terminating the mother's parental rights did not include findings of fact and conclusions of law as required. The order was deficient because the order did not address any of the criteria for termination of parental rights, the order did not include specific findings of fact showing that the mother abandoned the child, and the order did not include specific factual findings showing that the mother failed to provide care and support for the child without justifiable cause. Dell v. Dell, 324 Ga. App. 297, 748 S.E.2d 703 (2013).

Finding under former statute was not required to be explicit but could be implicit from the disposition made in the order and the evidence adduced at the hearing. Moss v. Moss, 135 Ga. App. 401, 218 S.E.2d 93 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3201).

Judgment must show compliance with statutory criteria. — Judgment having such a final, ultimate, and significant result as that of severing the rights of a parent to a child must conclusively show compliance with the statutory criteria prescribed as a condition precedent for such termination; a dry recitation that certain legal requirements have been met is insufficient to satisfy the requirement of the law; the judgment must set forth sufficiently explicit findings. McCary v. Department of Human Resources, 151 Ga. App. 181, 259 S.E.2d 181 (1979) (decided under former law).

Superior court's order was deficient because the order did not address any of the criteria for termination of parental rights pursuant to OCGA § 15-11-94, it did not include specific findings of fact showing that the mother abandoned the child, and the order did not include specific factual findings showing that the mother failed to provide care and support for the child without justifiable cause. Moreover, the superior court's conclusion that adoption was in the child's best interest also lacked particularity and, therefore, the mother was entitled to an order vacating the grant of the stepmother's petition for adoption. Dell v. Dell, 324 Ga. App. 297, 748 S.E.2d 703 (2013) (decided under former law).

Denial of maternal grandmother's petition for custody proper. — In a termination of parental rights proceeding, a juvenile court did not err by denying the maternal grandmother's petition for custody of the child because the grandmother had never seen the child and called the state only once about the child. In the Interest of S.R.C.J., 317 Ga. App. 699, 732 S.E.2d 547 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Dry recitation that certain legal requirements are met is insufficient to satisfy the requirements of the law with regard to termination of parental rights. In re H.T., 198 Ga. App. 463, 402 S.E.2d 83 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Order terminating parental rights must contain explicit findings supporting conclusions that: (1) the child is deprived; (2) the conditions and causes of the deprivation are likely to continue or will not be remedied; and (3) by reason thereof the child is suffering or will probably suffer serious physical, mental, moral, or emotional harm. Griffith v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 159 Ga. App. 649, 284 S.E.2d 666 (1981) (decided under former law).

Explicit findings required for termination. — Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310), a finding of parental misconduct or inability required clear and convincing evidence of the following four factors: (1) that the child was deprived; (2) that the cause of the deprivation was a lack of proper parental care or control; (3) that the cause of the deprivation was likely to continue or was not likely to be remedied; and (4) that the continued deprivation was likely to cause physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the child. In the Interest of A.M., 259 Ga. App. 537, 578 S.E.2d 226 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination decision supported by "parental misconduct" findings. — Once a juvenile court made explicit findings as to the existence of "parental misconduct," as defined in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311), the court did not have to make further factual findings to support the court's decision to terminate parental rights. In re G.K.J., 187 Ga. App. 443, 370 S.E.2d 490 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Explicit finding of deprivation or abandonment required. — Explicit conclusions of law conforming to statutory requirements are required in termination of parental rights cases. Accordingly, an appellate court may not supply by implication a finding of deprivation or abandonment. Williams v. Department of Human Resources, 148 Ga. App. 219, 251 S.E.2d 134 (1978) (decided under former law).

Explicit finding of deprivation is necessary and the appellate court will not supply by implication such a finding. Roberts v. State, 139 Ga. App. 353, 228 S.E.2d 376 (1976), later appeal, 141 Ga. App. 268, 233 S.E.2d 224 (1977) (decided under former law).

Termination proper when explicit finding of deprivation. — When there was a prior hearing in which the children were determined to be "deprived" and, in the termination hearing, the judge made explicit findings of fact concerning events since the original hearing and concluded that "the conditions and causes of the deprivation are likely to continue and will not be remedied and that by reason thereof, the children are suffering and will probably suffer serious physical, mental, moral, or emotional harm," an order of termination was proper. Wynn v. Department of Human Resources, 149 Ga. App. 559, 254 S.E.2d 883 (1979) (decided under former law).

In a termination of parental rights case, there was clear and convincing evidence that the children were deprived as required under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310); the juvenile court entered three unappealed orders finding that the children were deprived, and the father was bound by the orders. In the Interest of M.R., 282 Ga. App. 91, 637 S.E.2d 743 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 56 (Ga. 2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parental rights are terminated only when there is profoundly detrimental, egregious, parental conduct underlying the statutorily mandated determination of deprivation and probable continued deprivation. Madray v. Department of Human Resources, 146 Ga. App. 762, 247 S.E.2d 579 (1978) (decided under former law); Shover v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 38, 270 S.E.2d 462 (1980) (decided under former law).

Termination authorized for conclusion of deprivation. — When the findings of fact supported by the evidence authorized the conclusion of law that the children were deprived and that the conditions that caused the deprivation are likely to continue, the termination of parental rights was authorized. Roberson v. Department of Human Resources, 148 Ga. App. 626, 252 S.E.2d 57 (1979) (decided under former law).

Order need not recite words "in the best interest of the child." — While former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320) mandated the juvenile court consider "the best interest of the child" before ruling on a petition to terminate a parent's rights in the child, the subsection contained no explicit statutory requirement that an order recite the words "in the best interest of the child" before the order was correct under the law. In re T.M.H., 197 Ga. App. 416, 398 S.E.2d 766 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Trial court's findings were sufficiently explicit to support termination. In re G.T.T., 199 Ga. App. 706, 405 S.E.2d 750 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Parent could challenge findings when changed circumstances. — When a parent's inability that supported an initial finding of deprivation, the parent's absence due to incarceration, no longer existed at the time of the hearing on the termination petition, the parent's failure to appeal earlier deprivation orders did not preclude the parent from challenging the juvenile court's finding that the children were deprived at the time of the hearing on the termination petition. In the Interest of R.C.M., 284 Ga. App. 791, 645 S.E.2d 363 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Unreasoned expansion of evidence not favored. — Former Code 1933, § 24A-101 counseled against any unreasoned expansion of the type of evidence which will suffice to show deprivation, and probable continued deprivation, causing or likely to cause serious harm to a child because of the Code's expressed preference for preservation of the family unit. Leyva v. Brooks, 145 Ga. App. 619, 244 S.E.2d 119 (1978) (decided under former law).

Due regard for rights of parents in termination hearing. — Termination hearing seeks above all else the welfare of the child, with due regard for the rights of the natural and adoptive parents. In re Levi, 131 Ga. App. 348, 206 S.E.2d 82 (1974) (decided under former law); Gardner v. Lenon, 154 Ga. App. 748, 270 S.E.2d 36 (1980) (decided under former law).

Court must relate welfare of child to parental misconduct and not to the vagaries or vicissitudes that beset every family on its journey through the thickets of life. Shover v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 38, 270 S.E.2d 462 (1980) (decided under former law).

It is not proper to consider the question of the termination of parental rights based solely upon a "welfare of the child" test, without some required showing of parental unfitness, caused either by intentional or unintentional misconduct resulting in the abuse or neglect of the child, or by what is tantamount to physical or mental incapability to care for the child. Ray v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 81, 270 S.E.2d 303 (1980) (decided under former law); Chancey v. Department of Human Resources, 156 Ga. App. 338, 274 S.E.2d 728 (1980) (decided under former law); Brown v. Department of Human Resources, 157 Ga. App. 106, 276 S.E.2d 155 (1981) (decided under former law).

It is not proper to consider the question of termination of parental rights based solely upon a "welfare of the child" test, without some required showing of parental unfitness, caused either by intentional or unintentional misconduct resulting in the abuse or neglect of the child, or by what is tantamount to physical or mental incapability to care for the child. Griffith v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 159 Ga. App. 649, 284 S.E.2d 666 (1981) (decided under former law); Dale v. Hall County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 159 Ga. App. 654, 284 S.E.2d 669 (1981) (decided under former law).

Factors showing misconduct may be used to support finding of best interest. — Same factors which show the existence of parental misconduct or inability can also be used to support a finding that the termination of parental rights would be in the child's best interests. In re M.L.P., 236 Ga. App. 504, 512 S.E.2d 652 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Authority to conduct best interests analysis. — Trial court erroneously found that the court had no discretion to consider whether the parties' agreement, voluntarily terminating the father's parental rights under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-1 as part of the divorce settlement, was in the best interests of the child; the trial court, which had authority under O.C.G.A. § 19-9-5(b) to reject a custody agreement as being against the child's best interests and which had authority under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320) to ascertain whether a voluntary termination was in the child's best interests, was to reject the agreement if it was not in the child's best interests. Taylor v. Taylor, 280 Ga. 88, 623 S.E.2d 477 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Findings (Cont'd)

Order of department compliance. — Although a prior order of the court which allegedly required the department to monitor the father's parenting skills was not made a part of the record, when there was evidence which established that the department complied with the order and the father failed to cooperate, the trial court properly concluded that the court's order had not been violated or that if the order had been violated, the violation was not relevant to the court's decision on the merits. In re C.G.A., 204 Ga. App. 174, 418 S.E.2d 779 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence

Present situation must be considered prior to termination. — Juvenile court erred in terminating the mother's parental rights after the child was beaten by the mother's husband so severely that she had to be placed on life support since the Department of Family and Children Services failed to show by clear and convincing evidence that the mother was presently unfit and that the deprivation would continue unless her parental rights were terminated; there was no evidence that the child had been deprived while in her mother's care prior to the mother's marriage and as the husband had been removed from the child and the mother's life, the primary cause of the child's deprivation had been remedied. In addition, the mother acted entirely on her own to improve her abilities to care for her child so that a similar situation did not recur. In the Interest of V.E.H., 262 Ga. App. 192, 585 S.E.2d 154 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence requirements showing parental misconduct or inability. — Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) and (b)(4)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310), construing the evidence most favorably to the findings of the court, the question on appeal of a termination of parental rights was whether a rational trier of fact could have found clear and convincing evidence: (1) of parental misconduct or inability; and (2) that terminating parental rights was in the best interest of the child. Parental misconduct or inability was shown by evidence: (1) that the child was deprived; (2) lack of parental care caused the deprivation; (3) such was likely to continue; and (4) the continued deprivation was likely to cause serious harm to the child. In the Interest of M.L., 259 Ga. App. 534, 578 S.E.2d 190 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Two-step analysis. — Termination of parental rights case involves a two-step analysis, first, there must be a finding of parental misconduct or inability, which requires clear and convincing evidence that: (1) the child is deprived; (2) the lack of proper parental care or control is the cause of the deprivation; (3) the cause of the deprivation is likely to continue; and (4) continued deprivation is likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the child. If these four factors exist, then the court must determine whether termination of parental rights is in the best interest of the child, considering the child's physical, mental, emotional, and moral condition and needs, including the need for a secure, stable home. In the Interest of N.L., 260 Ga. App. 830, 581 S.E.2d 643 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Testimony of child might be best testimony as to mother-child relationship in an action to sever parental rights. Harper v. Department of Human Resources, 159 Ga. App. 758, 285 S.E.2d 220 (1981) (decided under former law).

Inability to properly rear children. — Same factors that show a parent's inability to properly rear her children also may provide proof that termination of parental rights would be in the children's best interests. In re S.J.C., 234 Ga. App. 491, 507 S.E.2d 226 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Same factors showing parental misconduct used for termination. — Same factors that show parental misconduct or inability can support a juvenile court's finding that termination of parental rights is in the children's best interests. In the Interest of N.L., 260 Ga. App. 830, 581 S.E.2d 643 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Same evidence showing parental misconduct used for termination. — Same evidence showing parental misconduct or inability may establish the requirement to show that termination of parental rights is in a child's best interest. In the Interest of A.B., 274 Ga. App. 230, 617 S.E.2d 189 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Information not obtainable from parent's attorney. — Child's paternal grandparents were not entitled to subpoena the attorney who had represented the child's mother in several DUI cases in order to obtain information concerning her "alcohol problem," since the information sought could have been obtained through other sources. In re N.S.M., 183 Ga. App. 398, 359 S.E.2d 185 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Reversal not required by hearsay evidence. — Consideration of hearsay evidence contained in reports received from various doctors, teachers, and other diagnostic specialists did not require reversal of a juvenile judge's decision on the termination of parental rights, since there was ample evidence to support the judge's finding of continued deprivation even without reliance on the hearsay records. In re J.T.S., 185 Ga. App. 772, 365 S.E.2d 550 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Criminal acts of mental and physical abuse. — Clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or inability, including criminal acts of mental and physical child abuse were present. In re R.E.C., 187 Ga. App. 35, 369 S.E.2d 323 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Factors showing parental inability used for termination. — Court may look at the same factors which show parental inability to care for a child to support a finding that termination of parental rights would be in the child's best interest, and since those factors, combined with the mother's uncertainty as to when she would be able to care for the child, were factored into the child's need for a permanent home and emotional stability, there was sufficient clear and convincing evidence that termination was in the best interest of the child. In re J.O.L., 235 Ga. App. 856, 510 S.E.2d 613 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Staleness of evidence. — When the evidence of parental misconduct was stale and there was an absence of clear and convincing evidence that the deprivation was likely to continue, termination of parental rights was inappropriate. In re R.U., 223 Ga. App. 440, 477 S.E.2d 864 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence of parent's character is admissible in a termination of parental rights proceeding as the proceeding inherently involves character issues, specifically the parent's ability to provide proper parental care and control; while most civil cases require the factfinder to determine the truth only with regard to the discrete transactions in issue, termination cases require the factfinder to predict a parent's future conduct and ability to parent. Davis v. Rathel, 273 Ga. App. 183, 614 S.E.2d 823 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence of father's past behavior. — Based on the father's past behavior, the length of time his problems have persisted, and his own admissions, the juvenile court did not err in terminating his parental rights. In the Interest of D.L.D., 248 Ga. App. 149, 546 S.E.2d 11 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Focus on past actions of parent. — Juvenile court properly focused on evidence of the mother's past physical, mental, and emotional neglect of her other children in terminating her parental rights. In the Interest of Z.B., 252 Ga. App. 335, 556 S.E.2d 234 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

More weight given to past behavior than positive promises. — Termination of a mother's parental rights was upheld since the evidence showed that, despite the mother's claim that she had changed while in prison and that she would be divorcing her husband who was prone to mistreat their children, the children had already suffered serious second-degree burning. In re T.M.R., 208 Ga. App. 499, 430 S.E.2d 865 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Despite recent efforts made by the mother to comply with some of the case plan goals, the trial court was entitled to place more weight on negative past facts than positive promises as to the future and to find that the deprivation was likely to continue in light of the mother's past conduct; clear and convincing evidence established that the deprivation was likely to continue since the facts showed that the mother failed to complete the agency's reunification plan, failed to complete drug treatment, had repeated incarcerations, and failed to support the children, as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2 and former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(C)(ii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311). In the Interest of A.H., 278 Ga. App. 192, 628 S.E.2d 626 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence supported the termination of a parent's parental rights: the parent's recent stable housing and income and the parent's unsubstantiated claims of drug rehabilitation were outweighed by the parent's four-year abandonment of the children; the parent's recent drug use; the parent's failure to control a seizure disorder; and the parent's failure to maintain a bond with the children. In the Interest of R.C.M., 284 Ga. App. 791, 645 S.E.2d 363 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Past history given more weight than future promises. — During the 32-month period that the child was in foster care, because a mother: (1) failed to maintain a job, failed to provide adequate financial support for the child, failed to consult with a psychiatrist, failed to obtain a driver's license, and failed to secure stable, adequate housing; (2) gave birth to two more children and was struggling to support them on her own; and (3) failed to achieve many of the goals set out in her reunification plan, including missing approximately half of her scheduled visits with the child, clear and convincing evidence was presented to support termination of her parental rights; further, despite her efforts to obtain her GED and an offer of employment that she planned to accept following the termination hearing, such effort was not conclusive of parental fitness in light of her history of neglect. In the Interest of J.G.-S., 279 Ga. App. 102, 630 S.E.2d 615 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Discounting promises for future. — In light of a parent's continued lack of housing or employment, repeated failure to comply with the case plan, and continued mental instability coupled with a failure to complete mandated mental health and substance abuse treatment, clear and convincing evidence supported the juvenile court's order terminating that parent's parental rights; moreover, in making this determination, the juvenile court was authorized to consider the parent's past conduct and to discount promises to obtain stable housing and employment in the future. In the Interest of D.P.E., 282 Ga. App. 529, 639 S.E.2d 535 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence must pertain to present circumstances. — When the evidence of the mother's purported parental unfitness considered by the trial court consisted of episodes which occurred in the past and since there was no clear and convincing evidence of her current unfitness, even though the mother's life had been marked by a recurring pattern of drug abuse, crime, and incarceration, because there was no compelling evidence presented which would clearly convince a rational trier of fact that the child's past deprivation would continue so as to authorize the total termination of the mother's parental rights, the trial court's order totally terminating the mother's parental rights was reversed. In re N.F.R., 179 Ga. App. 346, 346 S.E.2d 121 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Terminated caseworker's unavailability affected parental termination. — Summary of terminated caseworker's files was hearsay evidence and should not have been introduced into evidence; without summary, the state lacked clear and convincing evidence to show that parental rights should be terminated. In the Interest of A.A., 252 Ga. App. 167, 555 S.E.2d 827 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Calling father as adverse witness. — Juvenile court did not err in a parental rights termination proceeding pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-320) when the court allowed paternal grandparents who petitioned for permanent custody of their grandchildren to call the father as an adverse witness, subject to cross-examination pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-6-611), as there was no due process violation of the father's rights pursuant to U.S. Const., amend. 14 and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. I. In the Interest of D.J., 279 Ga. App. 355, 631 S.E.2d 427 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Witness credibility decision, supported by evidence, undisturbed. — Under the provisions of the Juvenile Code, the judge sits as the trier of fact. Decisions as to the credibility of witnesses rest solely with the judge, and if there is any evidence to support the judge's findings, those findings will not be disturbed. Powell v. Department of Human Resources, 147 Ga. App. 251, 248 S.E.2d 533 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Chancey v. Department of Human Resources, 156 Ga. App. 338, 274 S.E.2d 728 (1980) (decided under former law).

Unwilling parent could be cross-examined. — Former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-81 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-6-611) applied to termination proceedings, which were civil, not criminal, in nature; therefore, a parent had no right to refuse to be called as a witness for cross-examination by the Department of Family and Children Services. In the Interest of A.R.A.S., 278 Ga. App. 608, 629 S.E.2d 822 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence of treatment of newborn properly excluded. — In light of the parent's history and failure to make adequate progress under the parent's case plan as to child one and child two, it was not an abuse of discretion to refuse to admit subsequent evidence of the conditions surrounding a third newly-born child as those conditions did not change the parent's treatment of and lack of bonding with child one and two. In the Interest of C.M., 282 Ga. App. 502, 639 S.E.2d 323 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Citizen review panel reports contain hearsay that cannot be considered in determining whether clear and convincing evidence supports the termination of a parent's rights. In the Interest of N.G., 257 Ga. App. 57, 570 S.E.2d 367 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

To find abandonment, there must be sufficient evidence of actual desertion, accompanied by intention to sever entirely, so far as possible to do so, the parental relation, throw off all obligations growing out of the relationship, and forego all parental duties and claims. Thrasher v. Glynn County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 162 Ga. App. 702, 293 S.E.2d 6 (1982), but see In re A.W., 240 Ga. App. 259, 523 S.E.2d 88 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Clear and Convincing Standard

Evidentiary standard for termination of parental rights is compelling facts to establish the necessary lack of proper parental care or control. Brown v. Department of Human Resources, 157 Ga. App. 106, 276 S.E.2d 155 (1981) (decided under former law).

Clear and convincing evidence of the elements set out in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311) as to deprivation was required to authorize the termination of parental rights. In re L.A., 166 Ga. App. 857, 305 S.E.2d 636 (1983) (decided under former law); In re S.G.T., 175 Ga. App. 475, 333 S.E.2d 445 (1985) (decided under former law).

Third party must show "clear, convincing" evidence. — As between a natural parent and a third party (grandparent), the parent can be deprived of custody only if one of the conditions specified in O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1 and 19-7-4, or one of the other legal grounds, is found to exist by clear and convincing evidence. Brant v. Bazemore, 159 Ga. App. 659, 284 S.E.2d 674 (1981) (decided under former law).

When a third party sued the custodial parent to obtain custody of a child and to terminate the parent's custodial rights in the child, the parent is entitled to custody of the child unless the third party shows by "clear and convincing evidence" that the parent is unfit or otherwise not entitled to custody under O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1 and 19-7-4. Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-600) required the court after a hearing to find "clear and convincing evidence" of "deprivation" before an order of termination could be entered. Heath v. McGuire, 167 Ga. App. 489, 306 S.E.2d 741 (1983) (decided under former law).

Clear and convincing evidence found of compelling facts authorizing termination of parental rights. — See White v. Department of Human Resources, 167 Ga. App. 731, 307 S.E.2d 686 (1983) (decided under former law); In re K.E.B., 193 Ga. App. 382, 388 S.E.2d 1 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re C.M., 194 Ga. App. 503, 391 S.E.2d 26 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re S.T., 201 Ga. App. 37, 410 S.E.2d 312 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re M.R., 213 Ga. App. 460, 444 S.E.2d 866 (1994), overruled on other grounds, In re C.S.W., 231 Ga. App. 444, 498 S.E.2d 813 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re K.S.W., 233 Ga. App. 144, 503 S.E.2d 376 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re R.M., 232 Ga. App. 727, 503 S.E.2d 635 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In the Interest of J.H., 244 Ga. App. 788, 536 S.E.2d 805 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Clear and convincing evidence supported termination of father's parental rights. — In a termination of parental rights proceeding, clear and convincing evidence showed the deprivation suffered by a father's children was likely to cause serious harm, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iv) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310), because: (1) the father had no bond with the children,; and (2) a child's removal from foster care would be emotionally devastating. In the Interest of E.G., 315 Ga. App. 35, 726 S.E.2d 510 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Clear and convincing evidence supported termination of mother's parental rights. — Order terminating a mother's parental rights was supported by clear and convincing evidence based on the mother's past conduct, present incarceration, lack of parental bond, and failure to support her child, deprivation was likely to continue, and termination was in the child's best interests. In the Interest of P.A.T.L., 264 Ga. App. 901, 592 S.E.2d 536 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

As a mother's children had been in foster care for three years, and during that time period she did not complete her case plan by finding stable housing and employment, clear and convincing evidence supported the juvenile court's finding that termination of her parental rights under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320) was in the children's best interest. In the Interest of C.T.M., 278 Ga. App. 297, 628 S.E.2d 713 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

County Department of Family and Children Services presented clear and convincing evidence that the cause of a child's deprivation by his mother was likely to continue as the juvenile court properly considered: (1) the mother's past conduct in making this determination; and (2) that despite assistance from the Department, the mother maintained a relationship with a man who abused her, failed to pay child support, failed to maintain stable housing or employment, refused to cooperate with the Department's counselor, and was unable to care for the child or the child's siblings. In the Interest of S.R.B., 273 Ga. App. 39, 614 S.E.2d 150 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

When mother's triplets were removed at three months of age in 2001, the mother made some efforts to address drug problems, but showed no prospect of providing support or a stable home for the children, and the mother continued to use drugs after a treatment program, and failed to complete numerous terms of a parent reunification plan, clear and convincing evidence supported termination of the mother's parental rights. In the Interest of J.A.R.S., 262 Ga. App. 237, 585 S.E.2d 184 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court did not err in terminating the mother's parental rights in her two children as clear and convincing evidence supported findings that the mother was unable to properly parent them because their deprivation was likely to continue or would likely not be remedied, since the evidence showed that she had spent some time in jail, was currently in jail for five years, and had trouble maintaining stable employment and housing even when she was not in jail. In the Interest of C.B.H., 262 Ga. App. 833, 586 S.E.2d 678 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence supported the termination of a mother's parental rights as the lack of care or control was likely to continue in light of the mother's history of neglect, including her consideration of placing the children with their grandmother, who had abused the mother as a child; further, the mother's failure to meet any of the reunification goals and her relapse into criminal behavior while she was failing to meet the goals of her case plans supported this finding. In the Interest of C.T.M., 273 Ga. App. 168, 614 S.E.2d 812 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court did not err in terminating a mother's parental rights pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320) because clear and convincing evidence supported the court's finding that the children were deprived under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-107); the mother failed to complete counseling for her depression and parenting aide counseling, and the mother failed to exercise scheduled visits with the children. In the Interest of A. R., 315 Ga. App. 357, 726 S.E.2d 800 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Clear and convincing evidence supported termination of parental rights of mother and father. — See In re J.T.S., 185 Ga. App. 772, 365 S.E.2d 550 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re K.G.L., 198 Ga. App. 891, 403 S.E.2d 464 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re F.C., 239 Ga. App. 545, 521 S.E.2d 470 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re C.J.B., 239 Ga. App. 755, 521 S.E.2d 891 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81); In re J.V., 241 Ga. App. 621, 526 S.E.2d 386 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Clear and convincing evidence supported termination. — State presented clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or inability former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(i)-(iv) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310) when: (1) the parents did not appeal the deprivation order, so it was undisputed that the children were deprived; and (2) the parents did not accomplish the goals of the reunification plan as the parents failed to: maintain stable employment, maintain stable and sanitary housing, successfully complete the required psychological counseling, learn and apply budgeting and home management skills, and make regular child support payments. The record supported findings that the cause of the children's deprivation was unlikely to be remedied and that the continued deprivation was likely to cause physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the children. In the Interest of M.E.S., 263 Ga. App. 132, 587 S.E.2d 282 (2003).

Clear and convincing evidence supported an order terminating the parent's parental rights, specifically that: (1) the parent exhibited a willingness to put a drug addiction before the needs to the child; (2) the parent failed to establish a strong parental bond with the child; and (3) the child exhibited a strong risk of developing behavioral and attachment problems if not adopted. Moreover, the aforementioned evidence supported a finding that the child's deprivation was likely to continue and that termination was in the child's best interest. In the Interest of E.J., 284 Ga. App. 814, 644 S.E.2d 906 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Order terminating a parent's parental rights was supported by clear and convincing evidence as: (1) an order finding the child deprived was not appealed; (2) a determination that the child was without proper care and control was binding against the parent; (3) the parent failed to complete the reunification case plans; and

(4) adoption proceedings were in place. In the Interest of I.G., 285 Ga. App. 162, 645 S.E.2d 649 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Because the juvenile court was presented with sufficient evidence to satisfy by clear and convincing proof that termination of a biological mother's parental rights was properly based on the child's deprivation, and that the deprivation was likely to continue due to the mother's criminal past, a lack of a bond with the child, and a failure to provide the child with a stable lifestyle, the termination was upheld on appeal. Moreover, sufficient evidence was presented that the child was doing well in foster care, could not tolerate being abandoned again, and that the current foster parent had been identified as an adoptive resource. In the Interest of M.J.G., 288 Ga. App. 754, 655 S.E.2d 333 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Given clear and convincing evidence of a parent's drug abuse, failure to comply with case plan goals both before and during periods of incarceration, lack of a parental bond with the child, and failure to provide financial support, the juvenile court properly terminated that parent's parental rights and found that the child's deprivation was likely to continue and would result in serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm. In the Interest of R.D.B., 289 Ga. App. 76, 656 S.E.2d 203 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Despite a natural parent's alleged recent life changes, due to the parent's instability, lengthy history of drug abuse, failure to establish a bond and financially support the children at issue, and the childrens' history in foster care, the juvenile court's finding that the deprivation was likely to continue, and that such deprivation was likely to harm the children, was supported by clear and convincing evidence. In the Interest of A.H., 289 Ga. App. 121, 656 S.E.2d 254 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

In a termination of parental rights proceeding, clear and convincing evidence showed the children were presently deprived, under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2(8)(A) and 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(i) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-107 and 15-11-310), because the children's father said the father could not care for the children at the time of the termination hearing and had no stable housing. In the Interest of E.G., 315 Ga. App. 35, 726 S.E.2d 510 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Clear and convincing standard inapplicable to alternative dispositions. — "Clear and convincing" evidence standard which applies to child dispositions that result in the most severe method of disposition, the complete termination of parental rights, does not apply to alternate dispositions; a thorough investigation of all such possible alternatives is expected before recourse to complete termination of parental rights is sought. In re P.F.J., 174 Ga. App. 47, 329 S.E.2d 194 (1985) (decided under former law).

Actions of Parents

Improper to terminate rights of illegal alien. — When a father, an illegal alien, cooperated with the court and the Department of Family and Children Services (DFCS), participated in mediation, was trying to obtain legal residency, worked full time, paid child support, consistently visited his daughter, and had a positive relationship with her, the juvenile court erred in terminating his parental rights on grounds that he might someday be deported and the child be sent to Mexico or returned to the care of DFCS. In the Interest of M.M., 263 Ga. App. 353, 587 S.E.2d 825 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination appropriate when children living in filth. — To determine the best interests of the children, the juvenile court may consider the same factors that supported its finding of parental inability; hence, when the children were raised in filth and the mother did nothing to demonstrate that she could maintain a stable, sanitary home, the juvenile court did not err in terminating the mother's parental rights. In the Interest of A.B., 251 Ga. App. 827, 555 S.E.2d 159 (2001)

(decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Contest between parents. — In a contest between the parents, the award of custody by a divorce court vests the custodial parent with a prima-facie right. Ordinarily, the trial court should favor the parent having such a right. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

In order to forfeit the custodial parent's prima-facie right to custody, the court must find either that the original custodian is no longer able or suited to retain custody or that the conditions surrounding the child have so changed that modification of the original judgment would have the effect of promoting the child's welfare. It is a change for the worse in the conditions of the child's present home environment rather than any purported change for the better in the environment of the noncustodial parent that the law contemplates under this theory. In re M.M.A., 166 Ga. App. 620, 305 S.E.2d 139 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Substance abuse by both parents. — Judgments terminating the parental rights of a mother and father to their three children pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310 were affirmed because of their excessive use of and history of chronic substance abuse, which caused their inability to maintain consistency in employment and the children to be dependent, their failure to comply with the court ordered plan designed to reunite the family, no due process violations occurred, and the children had bonded well with their foster families.

Children

Children need stability. — When a child's behavior improved after being placed in state custody, but she continued to need regular counseling and a stable, consistent home environment, there was no error in the juvenile court's implicit conclusions that continued deprivation would seriously harm the child and that termination of parental rights was in her best interest. In re D.N.M., 235 Ga. App. 712, 510 S.E.2d 366 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was in 12-year-old child's best interest because the child had been in foster care periodically and needed a stable home, the child was well-adjusted with the foster parents, the child's performance at school was vastly improved, the child rarely missed school, and the child wanted to stay with the foster family and go to school. In the Interest of R.H.L., 272 Ga. App. 10, 611 S.E.2d 700 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence of a mother's repeated failures to remain drug free and to take the steps necessary to reunite with her child was sufficient to prove that her children's continued deprivation would cause the children serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm, and it was well settled that the children needed permanence of home and emotional stability or they were likely to suffer serious emotional problems. In the Interest of A.B., 274 Ga. App. 230, 617 S.E.2d 189 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Clear and convincing evidence supported a trial court's determination that a mother's child was deprived, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-107), due to lack of proper parental care, that such deprivation was likely to continue or not be remedied due to the mother's failure to take responsibility for the child and to work at succeeding at the goals of her case plan, and that such deprivation would cause serious harm to the child, who needed a stable family environment; accordingly, termination of the mother's parental rights was proper, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311). In the Interest of B.S., 274 Ga. App. 647, 618 S.E.2d 695 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence was sufficient to support the juvenile court's determination pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311) that, there being clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or inability, termination of the mother's parental rights was in the best interest of the child, considering the child's physical, mental, emotional, and moral needs, and the child's need for a secure and stable home. In the Interest of B.J.F., 276 Ga. App. 437, 623 S.E.2d 547 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

In a termination of parental rights case involving a mother who had mental health and substance abuse issues, continued deprivation was likely to cause harm to the child under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iv) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310) as a psychologist testified that the child needed a stable environment or the child was likely to act out. In the Interest of D.A.B., 281 Ga. App. 702, 637 S.E.2d 102 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Children with special needs. — When employing the two-step test before terminating a parent's rights, a juvenile court order that a child was deprived, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(8)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-107), which was not appealed, was binding on a mother and satisfied the first factor of the test under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310); the juvenile court determined that due in part to a medical problem, the child had special needs and the mother lacked the ability to provide for the physical, mental, emotional, and moral conditions and needs of the child. In the Interest of J.T.W., 270 Ga. App. 26, 606 S.E.2d 59 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

"Continued deprivation was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional or moral harm to the child" factor for the termination of mother's parental rights was satisfied as: (1) the child required a stable routine with constant monitoring of the child's physical symptoms to maintain the child's emotional and physical health; and (2) a psychologist testified that the mother would be unable, given her limited cognitive abilities, to provide the care the child needed. In the Interest of K.N., 272 Ga. App. 45, 611 S.E.2d 713 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Best interest of the child factor for the termination of a mother's parental rights was satisfied because the mother failed to establish a parental bond with the child, failed to comply with her case plan, limited cognitive abilities and personality disorder impaired her ability to attend to the child's many special needs, child's visits with his parents were disturbing to the child, and the child was doing well in the custody of the Department of Family and Children's Services and would benefit by staying with the capable and caring foster parents. In the Interest of K.N., 272 Ga. App. 45, 611 S.E.2d 713 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Deprivation was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to a child because the child had severe developmental delays when the child entered foster care and made tremendous improvements in a structured one-on-one learning environment; the mother failed to complete a reunification plan and her parenting skills were severely impaired by recurring psychological problems; the mother failed to obtain housing or employment; to improve her parenting skills specific to her child's special needs; to continue psychological counseling, to support the child; or to maintain any parental relationship with the child. In the Interest of A.K., 272 Ga. App. 429, 612 S.E.2d 581 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

There was sufficient clear and convincing evidence to support a juvenile court's termination of a father's parental rights over his two children, each of whom was severely handicapped, as the father's limited cognitive abilities made it difficult for him to be the sole parent, he was unable to properly care for the children and to maintain a clean home, they had been deemed deprived, and termination was in their best interests; also, they had bonded with their foster families and did not have much of a bond with their father. In the Interest of M.W., 275 Ga. App. 849, 622 S.E.2d 68 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court's termination of a parent's parental rights was affirmed as sufficient evidence supported a finding that the children were likely to suffer serious harm if the parent's parental rights were not terminated since: (1) the children needed a very structured environment, without which it was likely that the children would lack basic social functioning; (2) the parent was mentally, emotionally, and financially unable to manage her own life without the substantial assistance of her parents; (3) the parent was either unwilling or unable to develop necessary parenting skills; (4) the children were in a stable foster home with nurturing foster parents where their special needs were met; (5) there was no parental bond between the biological parent and the children; and (6) the foster parent was interested in adopting the children. In the Interest of K.L., 280 Ga. App. 773, 634 S.E.2d 870 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Father's incarceration history, the father's failure to support the child, and the father's lack of interest in the child showed that the father could not be relied on to meet the needs of the child, who had special needs; termination of the father's parental rights, therefore, was in the child's best interest under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311). In the Interest of E.K., 280 Ga. App. 818, 635 S.E.2d 214 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was upheld on appeal since the mother stipulated to depriving the child, had a mental disability which prevented the mother from giving the child the proper care in light of the child's special needs, including failing to provide the child with prescription medication, and the mother continued a relationship with a boyfriend who had sexually abused the child; the reviewing court found clear and convincing evidence established that it was in the best interests of the child to terminate the mother's parental rights. In the Interest of B.S., 283 Ga. App. 724, 642 S.E.2d 408 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

There was sufficient evidence to support the termination of a mother's parental rights since the evidence showed that the mother lacked the intellectual and emotional capacity to care for her two children, particularly the younger child, who had special needs as the result of injuries inflicted by his father; the mother was in denial about the younger child's condition and about the injuries that had been inflicted upon the child, had not refrained from using physical discipline on the children, had not paid child support, had not created a meaningful bond with the children and the children had thrived in foster care. In the Interest of R.S., 287 Ga. App. 228, 651 S.E.2d 156 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

It was proper to terminate a father's parental rights to a special needs child since the father had failed to comply with case plan goals or to acknowledge or address his mental health problems, there was ample evidence of his low intellectual functioning and its negative impact on his parenting skills, doctors had testified that the child would not be safe with the father and the father would not be able to parent a special needs child, and the father had failed to maintain a parental bond with the child in a meaningful way. In the Interest of B.W., 287 Ga. App. 54, 651 S.E.2d 332 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

It was proper to terminate a mother's parental rights to a special needs child since the mother had not supported the child, had been repeatedly incarcerated, had not seen the child in three years or attempted to maintain contact with the child, had not completed a drug treatment program, had not remained drug free for more than eight or nine months, and had failed to comply with any of her case plan goals; considering the special needs of the child, the harmful effects of prolonged foster care, and the evidence of the mother's drug abuse and failure to comply with case plan goals, the trial court was authorized to conclude that terminating the mother's parental rights was in the best interest of the child. In the Interest of B.W., 287 Ga. App. 54, 651 S.E.2d 332 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence of emotional difficulties of child insufficient. — Evidence in an action to sever parental rights that the child has emotional difficulties, fantasies, and nightmares about living with his mother may not alone deprive the mother of parental rights. Harper v. Department of Human Resources, 159 Ga. App. 758, 285 S.E.2d 220 (1981) (decided under former law).

Foster care. — Juvenile court could consider the adverse effects of prolonged foster care in determining that the children's continued deprivation was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iv) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310). In the Interest of M.C.L., 251 Ga. App. 132, 553 S.E.2d 647 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence was sufficient to support the trial court's finding that the deprivation was likely to cause physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the children in a termination of parental rights proceeding since: (1) the children became upset when the mother made promises and representations that she did not keep, including promises that she would visit or that they could come home with her; (2) one child became upset when her mother urged her to lie about the abuser's sexual abuse; and (3) the juvenile court considered that the children needed a stable home situation, and that prolonged foster care was detrimental. In the Interest of A.M., 259 Ga. App. 537, 578 S.E.2d 226 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Child in foster care for extensive time. — Termination of a parent's parental rights was affirmed as the children had been in the care of their foster parents since they were three months old and had not seen the parent in over 27 months; the parent's caseworker opined that the children were still deprived due to neglect. In the Interest of S.B., 287 Ga. App. 203, 651 S.E.2d 140 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Failure to communicate with children and foster parents. — Evidence showed that a parent's lack of care and control was the cause of two children's deprivation for purposes of the termination of a parent's rights as: (1) the parent's history of erratic visitation and unstable housing and employment was the cause of the instability, lack of bonding, and lack of child support that two children would face if reunited with the parent; (2) the parent failed to take advantage of regular visitation opportunities, did not establish stable housing, did not maintain stable employment, and provided inadequate child support; and (3) the parent did not maintain communication with the children's foster parents about the children or the parent's availability for visitation. In the Interest of C.M., 282 Ga. App. 502, 639 S.E.2d 323 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Living conditions and economic circumstances of foster family. — Evidence concerning the living conditions and economic circumstances of the child's foster parents who had expressed an interest in adopting the child was not relevant to the first portion of the test under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311), the determination of whether there was clear and convincing evidence showing parental misconduct or inability; however, such evidence was relevant to the second part of the statutory test, a determination of whether termination of the parental rights of the natural parents was in the best interest of the child, since it showed the merits of an alternative placement available to the child. In re J.M.G., 214 Ga. App. 738, 448 S.E.2d 785 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Detrimental effects of prolonged stay in foster care considered. — Adoptability of the children is never a basis for the determination of unfitness of the parents inasmuch as the finding of unfitness must rest upon its own merit. The court is nevertheless authorized to consider the severe detrimental effects of a prolonged stay in foster care under the ephemeral hope of change but without the real prospect of parental improvement that would justify such a prolonged stay in foster care. In re G.M.N., 183 Ga. App. 458, 359 S.E.2d 217 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Sufficient Evidence for Termination

App. 42, 438 S.E.2d 155 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Parent's parental rights were properly terminated when the parent failed to appeal an order finding that the parent's three minor children were deprived, steadfastly refused to cooperate with the Department of Family and Children Services with respect to a reunification plan, and completely failed to provide for the children's education. In the Interest of N.Q., 260 Ga. App. 118, 578 S.E.2d 920 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence held sufficient to justify termination of parental rights. — Termination of parental rights was in the children's best interest because the children were in need of stability and permanence in their lives, their mother could not provide either, and the children had developed close bonds with their foster parents, who wished to adopt them. In the Interest of M.E.M., 272 Ga. App. 451, 612 S.E.2d 612 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of parental rights was proper based upon evidence of the mother's failure to contest a prior deprivation finding, continued drug use, lack of parental care or control, failure to obtain suitable housing, inability to maintain stable employment, failure to cooperate with the case plan, and failure to seek or maintain counseling or drug abuse treatments; the court was authorized to find that the children's continued deprivation would have a detrimental effect on them in light of the evidence that the children had improved due to the stability they realized while in foster care. In the Interest of D.D., 273 Ga. App. 839, 616 S.E.2d 179 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence supported the termination of the mother's parental rights pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311) because the mother showed no justifiable cause for her failure, over a two-year period, to meet the goals of her case plan, provide support for her child, or visit him for over one year, evidence of domestic violence in the child's presence and the mother's failure to comply with the requirements of the reunification plan authorized the juvenile court to find that the child's continued deprivation would be detrimental, and termination of parental rights was in the best interests of the child. In the Interest of M.M., 276 Ga. App. 211, 622 S.E.2d 892 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Since a parent did not dispute that the parent's child was deprived and never appealed any of the orders finding that the child was deprived, a trial court's order terminating parental rights was supported by sufficient evidence which included evidence that the parent failed to provide the department with information as to the parent's whereabouts, failed to achieve financial stability, and physically, financially, and emotionally neglected the child; further, the trial court was authorized to infer from the evidence of past conduct that the improvements in the parent's situation were insufficient to justify maintaining the child in limbo in hopes that the parent could, at some point, provide an adequate home for the child. In the Interest of C.J., 279 Ga. App. 213, 630 S.E.2d 836 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Juvenile court was authorized to terminate a parent's parental rights based on: (1) an unappealed prior deprivation order; (2) the reasonable likelihood that the parent would be incapable of providing a stable home environment in the foreseeable future; and (3) the fact that the children had been in foster care for over five years and in need of some semblance of permanency; moreover, the conflicting testimony did not preclude the juvenile court from finding that no reasonable likelihood existed that the parent would ever be capable of providing a stable home. In the Interest of D.E., 282 Ga. App. 519, 639 S.E.2d 526 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Order terminating a parent's parental rights was upheld on appeal, and was held to be in the child's best interests, given evidence of the parent's history of incarcerations, substance abuse, and inability to care for any of the parent's six children, as well as the bond the child developed with the foster family and their desire to adopt; moreover, because the parent did not challenge the deprivation order, no challenge to the sufficiency of the evidence showing that reasonable reunification efforts were made could be raised. In the Interest of R.D.B., 282 Ga. App. 628, 639 S.E.2d 565 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Juvenile court's order terminating a parent's parental rights was upheld on appeal as supported by sufficient evidence that the two children involved were deprived and that such deprivation was likely to continue given the parent's past untreated drug abuse, failure to pay child support, continued unemployment, failure to maintain stable housing, and failure to maintain a parental bond with the children. In the Interest of M.A.S., 284 Ga. App. 102, 643 S.E.2d 370 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence was sufficient to support termination of a parent's parental rights after the trial court found that the parent neglected and failed to supervise the children; the parent had made little or no progress on the parent's case plan, tested positive for drugs, did not complete required classes, failed to visit the children during at least one six-week period, spent time in prison, failed to maintain stable housing and employment, and the children were thriving with foster parents who wished to adopt the children. In the Interest of M.D.L., 285 Ga. App. 357, 646 S.E.2d 331 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination of a parent's parental rights was proper in light of the parent's: (1) failure to provide stable and adequate housing; (2) drug use; (3) lack of stable employment; (4) ongoing difficulty with anger; (5) failure to pay child support; (6) historical reluctance to work with the department of family and children services; (7) frequent failure to appear for supervised visitation; and (8) failure to bond with the children when the parent did appear, as well as the behavioral and emotional problems of the children. In the Interest of A.D.M., 288 Ga. App. 757, 655 S.E.2d 336 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 402 (Ga. 2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Juvenile court's order terminating a parent's parental rights was upheld on appeal as supported by sufficient evidence including: (1) a prior unappealed finding that the children were deprived; (2) the parent's history of drug use and mental issues; (3) the parent's failure to pay child support; (4) the lack of a significant parental bond with the children; and (5) the parent's unemployment. In the Interest of K.A.B., 285 Ga. App. 537, 646 S.E.2d 736 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Juvenile court properly ordered a mother's termination of her parental rights to her child because clear and convincing evidence showed that the child's continued deprivation was likely to cause the child serious harm based on the mother's failure to show an end to her drug abuse, her failure to provide for the child, the absence of a bond between the mother and the child, the child's bond with her foster parents, and the foster parents' wish to adopt. In the Interest of S.R.C.J., 317 Ga. App. 699, 732 S.E.2d 547 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was upheld because the evidence showed that the mother had committed repeated criminal acts resulting in the mother's incarceration, the mother had a history of acting violently toward those close to the mother, and the mother failed to attend drug and alcohol assessment, maintain a stable home, or make any child support payments. In the Interest of D. T. A., 318 Ga. App. 182, 733 S.E.2d 466 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination of the father's parental rights was supported by evidence that the father was not capable of caring for the child without assistance and the father's niece was not deemed an appropriate placement for the child due to inconsistent drug test results and unstable financial status. In addition, the mother continued to reside with the father, making the father's residence an unsafe place for the child to live. In the Interest of T.G., 318 Ga. App. 191, 733 S.E.2d 777 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Trial court's order terminating parental rights was supported by evidence that the parents temporarily stopped using drugs but were again using illegal drugs by the time of the termination hearing, they were attempting to circumvent drug testing, and they had not undergone drug treatment even though failure to do so was a basis for deprivation finding. In the Interest of B. W., 325 Ga. App. 899, 756 S.E.2d 25 (2014) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of parental rights proper. — Juvenile court's termination of a parent's parental rights over the parent's child was proper pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320) since the parent's lack of proper parental care or control amounted to deprivation of the child under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-107, 15-11-381, and 15-11-471), the parent failed to establish a bond with the child or substantially complete any of the goals of the parent's reunification plan, and the parent did not provide support to the child under O.C.G.A. § 19-7-2; further, the deprivation was deemed likely to continue and likely result in harm to the child, and the child's best interest was served by termination of the parent's rights as the child had formed a bond with the foster parent. In the Interest of J.D., 280 Ga. App. 861, 635 S.E.2d 226 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of parental rights appropriate. — Evidence was sufficient to support the termination of a parent's parental rights on the ground of parental misconduct or inability under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a)(2) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320) because, despite years of intervention, the parent failed to manage the parent's anger and control the parent's substance abuse, the parent abused the spouse, abused and neglected the parent's children, and made little effort to support the children or to attempt to meet the goals of the case plan; the children had been doing well in the care of their foster parents and their foster parents all expressed interest in adoption. In the Interest of M.S., 279 Ga. App. 254, 630 S.E.2d 856 (2006), overruled on other grounds, In re J.M.B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a parent's parental rights was proper in light of the parent's: (1) continued psychological and emotional instability; (2) multiple incarcerations; (3) alcohol abuse; (4) lengthy history with the department of family and children services, including the termination of rights to three other children; (5) lack of material improvement; and (6) lack of concern about the seven children, as well as the emotional and behavioral problems from which all of the children suffered. In the Interest of A.D.M., 288 Ga. App. 757, 655 S.E.2d 336 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 402 (Ga. 2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

App. 858, 603 S.E.2d 333 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Since a rational trier of fact could have found that misconduct or inability by the mother and father existed and that termination of parental rights was in the best interest of the children, the trial court did not err in terminating the parents' rights to their children under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320). The evidence was sufficient to show that the children's deprivation was likely to continue since the mother failed to complete her case plan and the father, who was incarcerated, had a history of domestic violence and had failed to receive the domestic violence counseling required by the case plan. In the Interest of C.S., 279 Ga. App. 831, 632 S.E.2d 665 (2006), reversed on other grounds, 282 Ga. 7, 644 S.E.2d 812 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court's order terminating the parental rights of both parents was supported by sufficient evidence that: (1) the parents failed significantly to comply with a reunification plan without justification; (2) the child's deprived status was caused by the parents' lack of proper care and control, and that deprivation was likely to continue; and (3) the child needed permanence and stability, which was amply being provided by the foster family. In the Interest of C.N.I., 280 Ga. App. 305, 633 S.E.2d 660 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court properly terminated parental rights when: the parents' failure to comply with a case plan, their housing and financial instability, and their unwillingness to face their substance abuse showed that their lack of parental care or control caused the children's deprivation; the mother's fragile mental health and unstable financial situation and the father's inability to obtain steady employment or stable housing, delay in addressing his drug problems, and untruthfulness in altering pay records indicated that the lack of care or control was likely to continue; and the record supported findings that continued deprivation would cause serious harm to the children and that termination was in their best interests. In the Interest of T.W.O., 283 Ga. App. 771, 643 S.E.2d 255 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Orders terminating the parental rights of both parents were upheld on appeal as supported by: (1) deprivation findings that were not appealed; (2) the parents' unwillingness to address their mental health issues and substance abuse problems; (3) the long history of deficiencies in the supervision of their children; and (4) their failure to comply with the case plan. In the Interest of Am.T., 284 Ga. App. 847, 644 S.E.2d 923 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parents' rights to their four children were properly terminated since: the parents had not appealed from a previous finding of deprivation, and the conditions upon which the earlier finding was based still existed; the parents had not received drug treatment or submitted to drug screens, had little or no contact with the children, had paid inadequate child support, and had failed to complete case plan goals; the father had been repeatedly incarcerated; the mother was unemployed at the time of the hearing and the father had held his current job for only two days; and the parents lived in housing that they could not afford and that was too small for four children. In the Interest of R.N.H., 286 Ga. App. 737, 650 S.E.2d 397 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

It was proper to terminate both parents' rights to a child when neither parent interacted with the child at visits, paid the required child support, remained drug-free for six months, maintained stable housing, or completed recommended treatment resulting from psychological evaluations; further, the mother had never shown any evidence of employment and had completed parenting classes only just before the termination petition was filed, and the father had never completed the classes. In the Interest of J.A.S., 287 Ga. App. 125, 650 S.E.2d 788 (2007), overruled on other grounds, In re J.M.B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

As neither parent sufficiently complied with their reunification plans, maintained stable residences for six months, completed drug screens, satisfied their child support obligations, or maintained a job for six months, and both were unfit to care for the child, the child was deprived, and this deprivation was likely to continue, clear and convincing evidence supported terminating their parental rights. In the Interest of D.O.R., 287 Ga. App. 659, 653 S.E.2d 314 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Father's parental rights were properly terminated pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320) because a rational trier of fact could have found that termination was in the child's best interest since there was evidence of the father's past parental misconduct, including his inability to provide emotional and financial support for the child; his history of violence; his lack of interest in the well-being of the child; and his failure to attempt to contact the child, despite knowledge of the mother's serious drug addiction, for over four years. In the Interest of T. B., 267 Ga. App. 484, 600 S.E.2d 432 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

600, 547 S.E.2d 799 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94); In the Interest of M.D.B., 262 Ga. App. 796, 586 S.E.2d 700 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of father's parental rights was justified based on his failure to provide support and communicate with the children, even though the petition was filed less than one year since his last support payment. In re K.A.C., 229 Ga. App. 254, 493 S.E.2d 645 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Termination of a father's parental rights was authorized when the father had sexually abused his children, was unable to maintain housing and employment outside of a sheltered environment, did not complete an ordered psychosexual evaluation or regular, random drug screening, interfered with his children's treatment for psychological disorders, and indicated no intention to change his current living arrangements. In the Interest of C.F., 251 Ga. App. 708, 555 S.E.2d 81 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence that the father made little effort, even when he was not incarcerated, to establish a meaningful relationship with the child, visited the child only twice, offered no financial support, and had not taken any steps to establish a stable home was sufficient to support termination of the father's parental rights. In the Interest of D.W., 265 Ga. App. 782, 595 S.E.2d 616 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence of the father's continuing failure to attend the children's medical appointments, his refusal to work on his case plan, his refusal to obtain recommended treatment for substance abuse, his failure to maintain stable housing, and conclusions drawn by a psychologist who evaluated the father, all supported the juvenile court's finding that the father's lack of proper parental care or control caused the deprivation which led to the termination of his parental rights as to his two children. In the Interest of J.P., 268 Ga. App. 32, 601 S.E.2d 409 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Testimony that the children had bonded with their foster family, who had provided a nurturing, stable environment for the children and who desired to adopt the children, in conjunction with evidence of the father's lack of financial and proper medical support authorized the conclusion that termination of the father's parental rights was in the children's best interest. In the Interest of J.P., 268 Ga. App. 32, 601 S.E.2d 409 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a father's parental rights was affirmed despite the father's allegation that his confrontation rights were violated when he had to cross-examine a mother over the telephone. In the Interest of M.H.W., 275 Ga. App. 586, 621 S.E.2d 779 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a father's parental rights was justified by evidence that the father used and sold drugs, abused the children and their mother, was paranoid, delusional, schizoid, and narcissistic, and that the children were fearful of being reunited with the father. In the Interest of C.L.C., 277 Ga. App. 297, 626 S.E.2d 531 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence supported the termination of a father's parental rights when the father failed to complete his case plan, including the requirements that he undergo regular drug screens and maintain stable housing and employment, and had not maintained a meaningful parental bond with the child; a continued deprivation was likely to seriously harm the child, who had bonded with her foster family, and these factors supported a finding that termination was in the child's best interest. In the Interest of M.C., 287 Ga. App. 766, 653 S.E.2d 120 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of father's parental rights appropriate. — Evidence was sufficient to support the termination of a father's parental rights because: (1) the father had committed egregious acts toward the child and had physically, mentally, and emotionally neglected the child through a pattern of physical violence and threats towards the child's mother in the child's presence; (2) the father's imprisonment for that abuse had a demonstrable negative effect on the parent-child relationship; (3) the father had failed for a period of one year or longer to maintain a parental bond with the child; (4) the child's deprivation was likely to continue; (5) the father's parental misconduct was and would continue to be harmful to the child; and (6) it was in the child's best interest to terminate the father's parental rights. Davis v. Rathel, 273 Ga. App. 183, 614 S.E.2d 823 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court's decision to terminate a putative father's parental rights in his child, and a father's parental rights in his two children, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A) and (B) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-311), was supported by clear and convincing evidence, based on the conclusive finding that the children were deprived, that they would likely continue to be deprived, that such deprivation would likely cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the children, and that termination was in the children's best interest; the fathers had each been incarcerated, failed to complete the case plan goals, had a past history of non-support and/or domestic violence, demonstrated a lack of parental care and control, and the children had been doing well in foster care. In the Interest of T.A.M., 280 Ga. App. 494, 634 S.E.2d 456 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Father's parental rights properly terminated. — Father's failure for three years to take the steps necessary to be reunited with a four-year-old daughter provided clear and convincing evidence that the deprivation was likely to continue, and the evidence was sufficient to establish that the termination of the father's parental rights was in the best interest of the child in light of the fact that at the time of the termination hearing, the child had spent three of the four years of life in foster care and the clear and convincing evidence showed the father's failure to establish a suitable home and a stable income, become drug free, or comply with reunification plan goals. In the Interest of J.A., 286 Ga. App. 704, 649 S.E.2d 882 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence justified termination of the mother's parental rights since the record was replete with circumstantial evidence which clearly and convincingly established that the child was emotionally harmed and would likely be so harmed in the future by the mother. In re E.P.N., 193 Ga. App. 742, 388 S.E.2d 903 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Nature of and circumstances surrounding mother's convictions on 14 counts of enticing a child for indecent purposes, child molestation, aggravated sodomy, and incest per se established the requisite aggravating circumstances to justify termination of her parental rights when her convictions pertained to her two minor female children, when there was a recurring pattern of such conduct directed toward them from which it was reasonably inferred that the cause of the deprivation was likely to continue. In re S.H., 204 Ga. App. 135, 418 S.E.2d 454 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Mother's likelihood of continued inability to parent warranted termination of her parental rights given her emotional problems, inability to hold a job and pattern of behavior in chasing dangerous companions. In re B.P., 207 Ga. App. 242, 427 S.E.2d 593 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

When the mother, without justifiable cause, failed significantly for a period of one year or longer prior to the filing of the termination petition to comply with the reunification plan and failed to provide for the support of the child as required by the plan, and since the court was authorized to find a mental inability on the part of the mother to care for the child, the court did not err in terminating the mother's rights based on the paramount importance of the welfare of the child. In re A.S.M., 214 Ga. App. 668, 448 S.E.2d 703 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence was sufficient to permit the juvenile court to find clear and convincing evidence of child's deprivation and that the child's mother's misconduct or inability to care for the child's needs resulted in abuse or neglect sufficient to render her unfit to retain custody. In re C.N., 231 Ga. App. 639, 500 S.E.2d 400 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence supported termination of the biological mother's parental rights since there was no question that the children were deprived, the mother's inability to care for the children was the cause of their deprivation, the deprivation was likely to continue, the children were likely to be harmed by the continued deprivation, and the termination of the mother's parental rights would be in the best interests of the children. In re S.J.C., 234 Ga. App. 491, 507 S.E.2d 226 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

When children were initially taken from the mother's home because she held no job, could not provide stable living conditions, and failed to provide them with appropriate medical care and schooling, the court was entitled to infer from the fact that the mother had done nothing in six years to make changes in her life, that the deprivation was likely to continue, and termination of parental rights was justified. Parker v. Kennon, 235 Ga. App. 272, 509 S.E.2d 152 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

When the juvenile court recognized that there was positive evidence showing that a mother was attempting to address her crack cocaine addiction and that she interacted well in supervised visits with her child, but that other evidence showing mental retardation, severe deficits in adaptive functioning, and a long history of chronic abuse of crack cocaine, rendered her unable to parent the child independently, the finding that the child was deprived and that the lack of proper parental care and control was the cause of a deprivation which was likely to continue, causing serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the child was justified, and supported termination of the mother's parental rights in the child's best interests. In re L.H., 236 Ga. App. 132, 511 S.E.2d 253 (1999), overruled in part by State v. Herendeen, 279 Ga. 323, 613 S.E.2d 647 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Juvenile court's order terminating a mother's parental rights was upheld as sufficient evidence was presented supporting the termination, including that: (1) the mother failed to substantially comply with the case plan requirements for a year or more; (2) it was likely that continued deprivation would be damaging to the well-being of the child; (3) the mother never provided proof of regular drug treatment or regular employment, she failed to maintain stable housing, and eviction warrants were taken out against her for non-payment of rent; (4) the mother failed to provide adequate proof that she received mental health treatment; and (5) the mother did not regularly visit the child or provide any financial support. In the Interest of A.M., 275 Ga. App. 630, 621 S.E.2d 567 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Evidence was sufficient for termination of parental rights since the mother had multiple arrests for driving under the influence, was unable to establish a safe and stable living environment for her children, and was unable to maintain consistent employment. In the Interest of N.M.H., 252 Ga. App. 353, 556 S.E.2d 454 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court properly terminated mother's parental rights in the face of clear and convincing evidence that the mother could not properly care for the child and that termination was in the best interest of the child given the mother's history of drug abuse, infliction of "boo boo's", and locking of the child in a closed up automobile in the middle of July. In the Interest of T.W., 255 Ga. App. 674, 565 S.E.2d 925 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Clear and convincing evidence supported the termination of appellant mother's parental rights as to her two youngest daughters because: (1) the mother did not appeal deprivation orders of the juvenile court; (2) the mother failed to comply with the reunification plan; (3) for nine years the mother failed to meet the reunification goals regarding her five older children; (4) the children's deprivation was likely to continue and have a detrimental effect on them; and (5) the foster parents, who were one of the daughter's paternal grandparents, were ready to adopt both girls. In the Interest of N.G., 257 Ga. App. 57, 570 S.E.2d 367 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Finding existence of factors of parental inability and that lack of proper parental care or control caused the deprivation of the children was supported by clear and convincing evidence. The mother committed past egregious conduct toward her children of a physically or abusive nature and the mother had a mental deficiency of such a nature that she was unable to adequately provide for the children. In the Interest of D.B., 257 Ga. App. 497, 572 S.E.2d 9 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence authorized the juvenile court to terminate the mother's parental rights to her daughter since the mother had a history of criminal behavior and drug addiction, and demonstrated an inability or unwillingness to meet the case plan goals for reunification with the daughter. In the Interest of B.N.S., 259 Ga. App. 622, 578 S.E.2d 242 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Mother's parental rights were properly terminated under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320) since: (1) the mother failed to appeal the deprivation order, and could not challenge the finding that the child was deprived; (2) the mother had a serious mental illness that made her unfit to parent under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(B)(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311), and the juvenile court could conclude that the child's deprivation was caused by lack of proper parental care or control; (3) the cause of the deprivation was likely to continue and was likely to cause serious harm to the child in light of the mother's failure to consistently treat her mental condition; and (4) the termination of the mother's parental rights was in the best interests of the child, considering the factors that supported the finding of parental inability, that the child had been in the same home since birth, and that the child's foster home wished to adopt the child. In the Interest of D.D.B., 263 Ga. App. 325, 587 S.E.2d 822 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was upheld since the mother insisted that she would allow the child to visit a home in which violence was prevalent, failed to maintain a home for herself, failed to attend regular visitations or financially support the child, and failed to meet the goals of the many reunification plans presented to her; it was also determined that termination was in the best interest of the child. In the Interest of G.B., 263 Ga. App. 577, 588 S.E.2d 779 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court's termination of a mother's parental rights was supported by clear and convincing evidence pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320) since she failed to comply with the conditions of a prior deprivation order, the trial court found that returning the child to the mother would likely cause harm to the child, and it was in the best interest of the child to terminate the mother's rights since: the mother had not bonded with the child; had a drug abuse problem that the mother had only stopped a few months prior to the termination hearing; the mother had not held down a job as required; the mother had not made the required child support payments; and the mother's visitation was very infrequent. In the Interest of A.S.R.H., 265 Ga. App. 30, 593 S.E.2d 59 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court involved in termination proceeding erred in finding that the mother was incapable of forming an emotional bond with her two minor children as the evidence in the record did not support such a conclusion, but the error in making that finding was harmless and the termination of the mother's parental rights in her two children was still warranted since a number of other findings that she did not even challenge were supported by the record and warranted the termination of her parental rights. In the Interest of M.T.C., 267 Ga. App. 160, 598 S.E.2d 879 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Viewed in a light most favorable to the juvenile court's ruling, evidence authorized the juvenile court to find that a mother continued to be a drug abuser; that her felony convictions, imprisonment, and resultant separation from her children had a demonstrably negative effect on the quality of her relationship with them; that the children's sibling died under circumstances evidencing parental neglect or abuse; that the mother failed to comply with the family reunification case plan; and that the cause of her children's deprivation, therefore, had not been remedied; consequently, there was no merit in her claim that termination of her parental rights was unwarranted. In the Interest of M.T.M., 267 Ga. App. 492, 600 S.E.2d 430 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court's decision to terminate the mother's parental rights was supported by sufficient evidence and, therefore, was not overturned on appeal; the evidence showed that the children were deprived, which was a finding that the mother did not contest, and that because the mother had failed to fulfill the conditions of the mother's reunification plan for two years, that the termination was in the best interest of the mother's two children. In the Interest of T.G., 269 Ga. App. 278, 603 S.E.2d 764 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Sufficient evidence supported a decision to terminate a mother's parental rights because: (1) the children were deprived due to the mother's physical, mental, or emotional neglect; (2) the mother exposed the children to egregious living conditions, was unable to maintain a stable home for them, did not provide them proper nutrition and medical care, and subjected them to episodes of domestic violence and drug abuse by her boyfriend; (3) the mother failed to address the mental health needs of herself and the children; (4) after the children were placed in the custody of the Department of Family and Children Services, the mother failed to comply with the reunification case plans goals; (5) even though the mother completed an initial mental health evaluation, she failed to follow through with the recommended treatment; (6) there was expert testimony concerning the mother's emotional instability; and (7) there was also evidence of the mother's refusal to accept responsibility for her problems or behavior, the mother's placing her needs in front of those of the children, the mother's anger over the recommendation that the children sleep separately despite reports that one had molested the other, the mother's inability to effectively discipline the children or to learn discipline techniques, the mother's deference to her boyfriend's decisions for the children's medical care, even when not in the best interest of the children, and the mother's refusal to seek proper treatment for one child who was diagnosed with severe attention deficit hyperactivity disorder and oppositional defiant disorder. In the Interest of H.Y., 270 Ga. App. 497, 606 S.E.2d 679 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Sufficient evidence supported a termination order because the mother, inter alia, failed to pay child support, failed to complete anger management and parenting classes, tested negative at only one of 21 drug screens, showed mental issues at the termination hearing itself, was diagnosed with bipolar and other mental disorders but failed to receive any treatment, failed to appear on time or at all for 11 scheduled visitations, and had six other visitations terminated early due to her behavior, including one involving an assault on a supervisor, and because, among other things, the father refused to sign the case plan, saw the children only once after the deprivation hearing, never paid any child support, was ordered to have no contact with another child as a result of a guilty plea for child sexual molestation, and was in jail for probation violation. Since neither of the trial court's two orders finding that both children were deprived were appealed, the parents were bound by their factual findings for purposes of the termination proceeding. In the Interest of M.K.H., 270 Ga. App. 564, 607 S.E.2d 202 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence was sufficient to support termination of a mother's parental rights as: (1) the child was previously found to be deprived; (2) the mother's lack of parental care caused the deprivation as she was diagnosed with amphetamine abuse and psychological problems, the child's siblings were permanently removed from her, and she pled guilty to cruelty to children, as to those children; (3) the deprivation's cause was likely to continue, given the mother's lack of stable employment and housing, her failure to pay child support, her non-attendance at visitation, pending criminal charges, and mental illness; (4) continued deprivation would seriously harm the child, given these facts and the fact that the child was removed from the mother at two days of age and was doing well in foster care; and (5) termination was in the child's best interest, given the facts previously found. In the Interest of A.M.A., 270 Ga. App. 769, 607 S.E.2d 916 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

There was no error in the termination of parental rights because, given the mother's inability to successfully complete a drug treatment program and her failure to fulfill the other provisions in her case plan, the misconduct or inability was likely to continue and unlikely to be remedied; under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320), the children were adjudicated deprived primarily due to the mother's drug problems and her neglect of them, she remained a high school dropout who was financially dependent upon her boyfriend, and she was unemployed. In the Interest of L.W., 276 Ga. App. 197, 622 S.E.2d 860 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination order under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320) was supported by sufficient evidence, including the mother's failure to obtain stable, legal income or stable housing, although the mother had almost two years to meet these goals of the reunification case plan, the mother's acknowledgement that the mother was entirely dependent upon a boyfriend, the mother's failure to address marital instability and follow a psychologist's recommendations, and the mother's concession that the children were deprived due to medical neglect and other factors; based on this, and other evidence, the trial court found that the mother's lack of parental care was the cause of the deprivation. The same facts supported the finding that the children were deprived, that the deprivation was likely to continue, and the continued deprivation would likely have caused the children serious harm. In the Interest of K.A.S., 279 Ga. App. 643, 632 S.E.2d 433 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Trial court properly held that termination of a mother's parental rights was in her 20-month-old child's best interest. The mother had been incarcerated for most of her child's life, missed several visits with the child before the incarceration, lacked stability, and had a lengthy history with the department of family and child services involving her older children; there was evidence that the mother suffered significantly from substance abuse and would have difficulty changing her behavior; and the child's foster parents wished to adopt the child. In the Interest of T.B., 288 Ga. App. 794, 655 S.E.2d 680 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of mother's parental rights appropriate. — Termination of a mother's parental rights was proper when the juvenile court determined by clear and convincing evidence that: (1) a mother's deprivation of her children would likely continue because she had quit her job, failed to secure other stable employment, moved several times because she could not afford housing, was arrested, and had jeopardized her probation by drinking again; and (2) termination was in the best interest of the children because their grandmother, who had custody of them, was providing a stable home environment and because contact with the mother was detrimental to the children. In the Interest of K.N.C., 264 Ga. App. 475, 590 S.E.2d 792 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court properly terminated a mother's parental rights as the mother was bound by the deprivation, temporary custody, and non-reunification orders, which were not appealed; considering the mother's alcohol abuse, frequent incarceration, and failure to change substantially her lifestyle, the evidence supported the findings that the children were deprived due to lack of proper parental control or inability, that the deprivation was likely to continue, and that the continued deprivation would cause serious harm to the children. In the Interest of K.M.C., 273 Ga. App. 276, 614 S.E.2d 896 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence allowed a finding that a mother's children were deprived at the time of the termination order as the mother continued to reside in the same unsanitary house that the Department of Children and Families found unsuitable for the children, and she continued to have a relationship with the father; thus, the conditions upon which the trial court's deprivation findings were based still existed at the time of the termination hearing. In the Interest of K.L.M., 316 Ga. App. 246, 729 S.E.2d 452 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parental rights of mother properly terminated. — Trial court did not err in terminating the parental rights of the mother in the minor child as the mother conceded the child was deprived and that her conduct caused that deprivation; in addition, clear and convincing evidence showed the existence of the remaining factors necessary to terminate parental rights as the evidence showed that because of her past conduct the deprivation was likely to continue and that the continued deprivation would likely cause serious harm to the minor child. In the Interest of D.E., 269 Ga. App. 753, 605 S.E.2d 394 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Mother's parental rights in her children were properly terminated, because: (1) she did not appeal a prior finding that the children were deprived; (2) the deprivation was caused by a lack of parental care due to the mother's imprisonment, which had a demonstrable negative effect on the parent-child relationship pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(B)(iii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-1-311), excessive drug use, making her unable to provide for the children pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(B)(ii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311), and her failure to comply with a court-ordered plan to reunite her with the children pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(C)(iii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311); (3) clear and convincing evidence showed the deprivation was likely to continue, as the mother was highly likely to continue abusing drugs and did not achieve financial or residential stability; (4) the deprivation was likely to harm the children due to the mother's repeated failure to remain drug free and her failure to take steps to reunite with the children, causing a lack of a permanent home for the children and emotional instability; and (5) termination of parental rights was in the children's best interests, considering their mental, emotional, and moral condition and their need for a secure and stable home. In the Interest of A.B., 274 Ga. App. 230, 617 S.E.2d 189 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination in best interests of children. — Mother's current living situation which could not accommodate all three children coupled with her longstanding inability or refusal to comply with reunification plans or bond with her children supported a finding that termination was in the best interests of the children. In the Interest of D.M.H., 242 Ga. App. 47, 528 S.E.2d 816 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Although the mother appeared to have made some progress, sufficient evidence was presented to support the trial court's findings that the children's deprivation was likely to continue, that the continued deprivation would be likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the children, and that termination of the mother's rights was in the best interests of the children. In the Interest of J.S.G., 242 Ga. App. 387, 529 S.E.2d 141 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A.

§ 15-11-94). In the Interest of B.I.F., 264 Ga. App. 777, 592 S.E.2d 441 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a parent's rights was in the best interests of the children since: (1) child one suffered multiple bone fractures by the age of four months, and the parent could not reasonably explain those injuries; (2) the children had been placed in foster care and had bonded with their foster parents; (3) child two cried uncontrollably when placed in the parent's care during scheduled visitation, but did not do so when with others; and (4) the parent was unemployed and had never paid any of the required child support. In the Interest of K.J.M., 282 Ga. App. 72, 637 S.E.2d 810 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a parent's parental rights was in two children's best interests as: (1) the foster parents of the children had fully incorporated the children into their families, treated the children as their own, and desired to adopt the children; (2) each child's foster parents regularly communicated with the other child's foster parents and facilitated visits between the children; (3) in contrast, the biological parent failed to regularly visit the children and went for months without seeing the children or communicating with the foster parents; (4) the parent failed to give birthday presents to the children and missed a Christmas visit; and (5) despite the mandates of the parent's case plan, the parent failed to provide financial support, to obtain stable housing, or to obtain stable employment. In the Interest of C.M., 282 Ga. App. 502, 639 S.E.2d 323 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of parental rights was in the best interests of three children as the children were in need of supervision, treatment, and rehabilitation; the children were and would continue to suffer from deprivation; and a continued relationship with the parents would cause further harm. The record also supported the conclusion that the mother would not protect the children from the father in the future. In the Interest of A.B., 283 Ga. App. 131, 640 S.E.2d 702 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Based on the evidence of a mother's prior drug problems, her failure to support or develop any bond or contact with the child, her willingness to reconcile with the father, and the foster parents' desire to adopt the child, the trial court did not manifestly abuse the court's discretion by finding that termination was in the child's best interest. In the Interest of Z. P., 314 Ga. App. 347, 724 S.E.2d 48 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Placement with grandparent inappropriate following parental rights termination. — Based on a mother's housing and employment instability, failure to comply with a reunification plan, and lack of bonding with her child, the mother's parental rights were properly terminated under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320); the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court refused to award custody to the grandmother under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103(a)(1) based on the court's conclusion that such a placement was not in the child's best interests. In the Interest of J.W.M., 273 Ga. App. 20, 614 S.E.2d 163 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Medical and psychological conditions of parent. — Clear and convincing evidence supported the order terminating a parent's rights to two minor children as the children's deprivation was due primarily to the parent's mental illness and failure to take prescribed medication to address that illness, and during more than 30 months the parent was given to work on a reunification case plan, the parent failed to comply with the requirements of the plan. In the Interest of O. B., 337 Ga. App. 401, 787 S.E.2d 344 (2016).

Insufficient Evidence for Termination

Limited education is not basis for termination. — Termination of parental rights was reversed for both the mother and father because failure to complete school cannot be the primary reason to terminate parental rights, nor are delays in meeting some goals of a court-ordered reunification plan alone sufficient. In the Interest of T.B., 242 Ga. App. 564, 529 S.E.2d 620, 529 S.W.2d 620 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Limited education and poor conditions insufficient for termination. — When the mother has only a ninth-grade education, lives in a trailer without water or toilet facilities in the rear of her mother's yard, has no steady job, and has a husband in prison, parental rights may not be severed absent a showing of misconduct or physical or mental disability of the mother. Harper v. Department of Human Resources, 159 Ga. App. 758, 285 S.E.2d 220 (1981) (decided under former law).

Status as teenager insufficient for termination of parental rights. — While the evidence showed only that at the time of the hearing the mother was 16 years old, unemployed, without prospects for future employment, and without any stable living arrangements, this was insufficient as a matter of law to authorize the termination of her parental rights. Chancey v. Department of Human Resources, 156 Ga. App. 338, 274 S.E.2d 728 (1980) (decided under former law).

Imprisonment insufficient for termination. — Even though mother was incarcerated "on arrest for possession of cocaine and intent to solicit prostitution," denial of termination of parental rights was authorized based on the lack of evidence that the child was deprived due to parental unfitness or that the deprivation was likely to continue. In re R.A., 226 Ga. App. 18, 486 S.E.2d 363 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Order terminating a mother's parental rights was reversed, despite the fact that the juvenile court correctly found clear and convincing evidence that the child was deprived due to the mother's incarceration, as no clear and convincing evidence was presented against the mother that the cause of the deprivation was likely to continue and would not be remedied, the child was only 20 months old at the time of the termination hearing, and no other evidence was presented against the mother as to the issue of unfitness. In the Interest of J.A.W., 281 Ga. App. 545, 636 S.E.2d 725 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Although the father had not communicated with the child or provided support for a period of time given the fact that the father had been incarcerated, the court did not conclude that the father had abandoned the child within the meaning of the law nor did the court made specific factual findings or conclusions of law concerning the issue of justifiable cause; thus, the court did not address any of the criteria for termination pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320). Ray v. Hann, 323 Ga. App. 45, 746 S.E.2d 600 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Petition for adoption inappropriate when both parties equally able to meet child's needs. — Because the evidence showed that the child's needs could be equally met in either the mother's or the grandparent's home, the trial court abused the court's discretion in terminating the mother's parental rights under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320) and O.C.G.A. 19-8-10 and granting the grandmother's and the step-grandfather's petition for adoption under O.C.G.A. § 19-8-2. McCollum v. Jones, 274 Ga. App. 815, 619 S.E.2d 313 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent recovering from drug abuse. — Department of children and family services failed to prove by clear and convincing evidence that a mother was unfit and that her children's deprivation would continue unless her parental rights were terminated since: (1) the mother completed an eight-week intensive drug treatment program; (2) subsequent drug screening tests introduced into evidence revealed that she was drug-free; and (3) though not required to do so by the reunification plan, the mother joined Narcotics Anonymous and attended meetings twice a week. In the Interest of L.J.L., 247 Ga. App. 477, 543 S.E.2d 818 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court erred in determining that clear and convincing evidence existed to support the termination of a mother's parental rights because there was insufficient evidence supporting the finding that the children's deprivation was likely to continue as the mother had undergone treatment and was told not to have contact with the children; there was no evidence admitted that a failure to maintain a bond existed or to support the finding of excessive or chronic unrehabilitated drug abuse. In the Interest of C. G., 324 Ga. App. 110, 749 S.E.2d 411 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence of parent's psychological problems insufficient. — Trial court erred in finding child deprived and in ordering continued custody of the child in the Department of Family and Children Services because there was no competent evidence supporting the finding that the mother suffered from a mental impairment; the social worker's testimony that the mother's obstetrician thought the mother had cuts on her wrist that might have been self-inflicted, and that the obstetrician was concerned because the mother was crying and depressed after her child was taken away, there were no psychological evaluations or reports from treating physicians in the record, or medical reports indicating any mental impairment or how said mental impairment might limit the mother's parental abilities. In the Interest of K.S., 271 Ga. App. 891, 611 S.E.2d 150 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Isolated incident of leaving child alone insufficient. — When the only evidence of actual neglect by the natural mother is an isolated incident where she left the child alone for approximately 45 minutes, while such behavior is reprehensible, this incident is not so compelling as to clearly convince a rational trier of fact that the child's past deprivation will continue so as to authorize the total termination of parental rights. In re S.M., 169 Ga. App. 364, 312 S.E.2d 829 (1983) (decided under former law).

No intercession simply because child's lot substandard. — Seldom does the state wield so awesome a power as when the state permanently cuts the family ties between parent and child. While the state may not sit blindly idle as a child suffers unconscionable hardship, neither may the state blithely intercede simply because the child's lot is substandard. Shover v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 38, 270 S.E.2d 462 (1980) (decided under former law).

Poverty alone insufficient grounds for termination. — It was error to terminate a mother's parental rights as it was not shown that the children's deprivation was likely to continue; the mother met virtually all of her case plan goals except for paying child support and her shortcomings with regard to her case plan stemmed largely from her poverty, which alone was not a basis for termination. In the Interest of C.T., 286 Ga. App. 186, 648 S.E.2d 708 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Parent's medical condition insufficient for termination. — Termination of parental rights was not justified since there was less than "clear and convincing" evidence that parental unfitness, which included severe abuse by the mother, would not be remedied, and there was no competent evidence showing that the father's physical disability would likely impair his ability to care for the child. In re K.E.B., 190 Ga. App. 121, 378 S.E.2d 171 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Cohabiting with divorced, drinking spouse insufficient. — Mother's resumption of a cohabitation arrangement with her former spouse who had developed a drinking problem did not support termination of her parental rights as an unfit parent since the evidence indicated the mother was, inter alia, gainfully employed. In re A.D., 208 Ga. App. 438, 430 S.E.2d 809 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Child wanted to live with parent. — Although a parent's past was far from exemplary, the evidence presented did not clearly and convincingly establish that the child's deprivation would continue and not likely be remedied to support termination of parental rights. The child informed the court that the child wanted to live with the parent, and since the parent's release from prison, the parent's drug screens were negative. In the Interest of K.D.E., 288 Ga. App. 520, 654 S.E.2d 651 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

No intercession because mother deemed failure by society. — Mother's failure fully to live up to societal norms for productivity, morality, cleanliness, and responsibility does not summarily rob her of the right to raise her own offspring, nor does it end the child's right to be raised by the child's own mother. R.C.N. v. State, 141 Ga. App. 490, 233 S.E.2d 866 (1977) (decided under former law); Patty v. Department of Human Resources, 154 Ga. App. 455, 269 S.E.2d 30 (1980) (decided under former law); Shover v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 38, 270 S.E.2d 462 (1980) (decided under former law).

Termination unauthorized absent finding of child suffering. — Even though "the child is a deprived child and that the conditions and causes of deprivation are likely to continue," absent a finding "that by reason thereof the child is suffering or will probably suffer serious physical, mental, moral, or emotional harm," termination of parental rights is not authorized. Patty v. Department of Human Resources, 151 Ga. App. 555, 260 S.E.2d 551 (1979) (decided under former law).

No evidence of present parental misconduct or inability. — When the mother had been sober and drug free for two years, took all available rehabilitation and parenting classes during a recent incarceration, was presently employed, was current on child support, and took advantage of all opportunities to communicate with her child, the juvenile court properly found no evidence of present parental misconduct or inability. In re J.E.E., 235 Ga. App. 247, 509 S.E.2d 147 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Based on the brief and insubstantial testimony given by the parole officer and the caseworker, there was no clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct or inability. Absent such evidence, the juvenile court erred in taking the drastic action of terminating the mother's parental rights. In the Interest of A.G.I., 246 Ga. App. 85, 539 S.E.2d 584 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

No clear and convincing evidence justifying termination. — Termination of parental rights was erroneous in the absence of clear and convincing evidence that the cause of the child's deprivation with respect to the mother was likely to continue or would not be remedied, or that the child was likely to suffer serious physical, mental, moral, or emotional harm caused by the father. In re K.J., 226 Ga. App. 303, 486 S.E.2d 899 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Because the state failed to show by clear and convincing evidence that a child's deprivation was likely to continue or that the child would be harmed by a continuing relationship with the father, as the evidence showed that the father: (1) substantially complied with the case plan; (2) was cooperative with the case workers; and (3) was diligent in establishing and maintaining a strong bond with the child, the order terminating the father's parental rights was reversed. In the Interest of S.M.W., 287 Ga. App. 288, 651 S.E.2d 211 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

No clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct. — When the primary allegation of parental misconduct was failure to comply with a case reunification plan, and when the evidence was undisputed that the parent had complied with four of the plan's five goals, and when the only unmet goal was completing high school, and when the parent quit high school to marry and get a job to provide a home for the child, there was by no means clear and convincing evidence of parental misconduct by the mother. In the Interest of T.B., 242 Ga. App. 564, 529 S.E.2d 620, 529 S.W.2d 620 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

In a termination of parental rights matter, the record failed to present clear and convincing evidence that the children's deprivation was likely to continue as both parents made significant progress on their case plans, and it was clear that the children were emotionally attached to the parents; the record showed that the father completed everything required in the case plan except with regard to child support, and the mother "was wonderful with the children" during supervised visits. In the Interest of A.F., 283 Ga. App. 509, 642 S.E.2d 148 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Clear and convincing evidence of a parent's misconduct or inability sufficient to justify a termination of that parent's parental rights under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310, 15-11-311, and 15-11-320) was lacking; no evidence was presented that any continued deprivation of the child would cause the child physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm, and termination of the parent's parental rights was not shown to be in the child's best interest; thus, the trial court properly denied a petition to terminate parental rights. In the Interest of K.C.R., 283 Ga. App. 593, 642 S.E.2d 214 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Insufficient evidence for termination of parental rights. — As insufficient evidence was presented of a parent's parental misconduct or inability, a reunification plan was never implemented, and the parent made efforts to establish a stable home, despite shortcomings in the efforts to pay child support and in pursuing visitation, clear and convincing evidence did not support terminating the parent's parental rights; moreover, sufficient evidence was presented to negate the juvenile court's finding that the parent was unfit. In the Interest of T.E.T., 282 Ga. App. 269, 638 S.E.2d 412 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Insufficient findings to support termination. — Although the trial court was allowed to consider a father's criminal history in determining whether his parental rights should be terminated and the appellate court found that any rational trier of fact could have found by clear and convincing evidence that the cause of a child's deprivation was likely to continue, the appellate court could not affirm the trial court's judgment that the father's failure to provide care for the child was likely to harm the child because the trial court failed to support the court's judgment with explicit factual findings. In the Interest of R.S., 255 Ga. App. 756, 566 S.E.2d 461 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Insufficient evidence of deprivation. — Evidence that the cause of two children's deprivation was likely to continue for purposes of terminating the mother's parental rights was problematic since: (1) although the mother had not had contact with the children, she was ordered not to have contact; (2) the children were not deprived while in the mother's care prior to her marriage to her husband, who sexually abused the daughter, and the husband was no longer in contact with the mother or the children; (3) the mother failed to pay child support breaching a legal duty; (4) the mother lived with her fiancé which raised questions, but no home study was performed; and (5) the daughter was troubled, but her condition was not caused by the mother. In the Interest of J.H., 267 Ga. App. 541, 600 S.E.2d 650 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Juvenile court erred in terminating a mother's parental rights with respect to the mother's child because, concerning whether continued deprivation would cause or would be likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the child, the evidence was insufficient. In the Interest of J. J. S., 321 Ga. App. 86, 741 S.E.2d 207 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was reversed because the record did not support a finding that the deprivation was likely to continue since the mother had secured employment and housing, had attended a parenting class, completed a psychological evaluation, consistently visited the children, and started making child support payments. In the Interest of C. J. V., 323 Ga. App. 283, 746 S.E.2d 783 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Insufficient evidence that continued deprivation likely to cause harm. — Juvenile court's finding that the deprivation of a mother's children was likely to continue did not state any specific facts that led to the conclusion that there was a likelihood of serious harm from continued deprivation; thus, the matter was remanded for appropriate findings and conclusions. In the Interest of K.L.M., 316 Ga. App. 246, 729 S.E.2d 452 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Detrimental and egregious parental conduct not demonstrated. — Although evidence showed poverty and instability in the mother's living arrangements, the evidence did not demonstrate the profoundly detrimental and egregious parental conduct which led to the termination of rights in previous cases. R.C.N. v. State, 141 Ga. App. 490, 233 S.E.2d 866 (1977) (decided under former law).

While the lifestyle and income-producing ability of the mother who lived in a trailer with a friend's family and did babysitting and housework were not exemplary, they could not be said to be so profoundly detrimental or egregious as to warrant the permanent termination of her parental rights to her child. Shover v. Department of Human Resources, 155 Ga. App. 38, 270 S.E.2d 462 (1980) (decided under former law).

Deprivation unlikely to cause serious harm to child. — Trial court erred in entering judgment terminating the mother's parental rights to her child even though there was evidence concerning the mother's past behavior, the mother's inability to provide a home or support for the child, and the mother's failure to comply with significant portions of the mother's case plan for reunification showing by clear and convincing evidence that the causes of the child's deprivation were likely to continue; insufficient evidence was presented to show that continued deprivation was likely to cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to the child, thus, termination of the mother's parental rights was improper. In the Interest of J.H., 258 Ga. App. 211, 573 S.E.2d 481 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence insufficient to authorize termination of mother's parental rights. — See In the Interest of A.W., 249 Ga. App. 278, 547 S.E.2d 797 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94); In the Interest of D.F., 251 Ga. App. 859, 555 S.E.2d 225 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94); In the Interest of J.M., 251 Ga. App. 380, 554 S.E.2d 533 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Hearsay. — Based upon the juvenile court's express reliance upon hearsay in an exhibit to support the court's conclusion that a parent suffered from schizophrenia to such a degree that the parent was unable to provide for the needs of the parent's child, termination of parental rights was inappropriate. In the Interest of C. A., 316 Ga. App. 185, 728 S.E.2d 816 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of mother's parental rights inappropriate. — Mother's parental rights could not be terminated in the absence of clear and convincing evidence that the mother's mental disorder, which was identified as the cause of her child's deprivation, was likely to continue or not be remedied. In re C.G., 235 Ga. App. 23, 508 S.E.2d 246 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Decision terminating mother's parental rights was reversed after it was shown that her circumstances had changed significantly because she was no longer in jail, was working full-time, had undergone drug counseling, had established a home, and her daughter had a strong emotional attachment to her. In re K.M., 240 Ga. App. 677, 523 S.E.2d 640 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

When the department of family and children services failed to present clear and convincing evidence that mother's children were likely to suffer serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm if parental rights were not terminated, evidence was insufficient to warrant termination of mother's parental rights. Trial judge's decision could not rest on dry recitation that certain legal requirements were met to satisfy requirements of the law. In the Interest of J.M., 251 Ga. App. 380, 554 S.E.2d 533 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence before the trial court did not establish by clear and convincing evidence that the mother's neglect of her child was likely to continue and termination was inappropriate since: the mother had been unaware of the child's location despite her best efforts to locate the child, a previous finding of deprivation did not mean that there would be continued deprivation, there was no case plan for reunification, and the child was living with grandparents and would not suffer without permanent placement. In the Interest of B.F., 257 Ga. App. 76, 570 S.E.2d 385 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Although a mother had difficulty establishing a stable home environment and she had poor judgment in selecting a partner, there was insufficient evidence that continued exposure to the mother or continued deprivation of the child would cause the child serious physical, mental, or moral harm, and a decision to terminate the mother's parental rights was not supported pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(iv) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310); at the time of the termination hearing, the mother was in a good marriage, lived in a home with her in-laws, had obtained a job, and seemed to understand the importance of a stable life. In the Interest of J.T.W., 270 Ga. App. 26, 606 S.E.2d 59 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a mother's parental rights was improper because, although the evidence showed that the children were deprived and that the mother's lack of proper parental care caused the deprivation, in that the mother had been diagnosed with antisocial personality disorder and mild mental retardation but neglected to take the medication prescribed to treat her condition, resulting in the mother's inability to maintain employment and a stable, safe home environment, there was insufficient evidence to support the juvenile court's conclusion that the continued deprivation was likely to cause serious harm to the children. In the Interest of J.S.B., 277 Ga. App. 660, 627 S.E.2d 402 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Mother was entitled to reversal of the order terminating the mother's parental rights because the mother's circumstances at the time of the termination hearing were significantly different from those which caused the child to be removed from the mother's custody; among other things, the mother established stable housing near a child care center that could provide specialized care for the child, had obtained a driver's license, was a college student, had exercised unsupervised visitation, had attended most of the child's medical appointments, had completed anger and violence counseling, had completed parenting classes, and knew how to care for the medically fragile child. In the Interest of M. T. F., 318 Ga. App. 135, 733 S.E.2d 432 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence was insufficient to support the juvenile court's order terminating the mother's parental rights to the child because it was undisputed that the mother had completed most of the mother's case plan goals by the time the termination petition was filed. The mother had submitted to two psychological evaluations, attended a parenting class, and worked steadily toward achieving stable housing, and the specific requirement that she participate with the recommendations of a developmental disability organization was not added to her case plan until two months before the petition was filed and the mother was participating, to some extent, with the organization. In the Interest of D. J., 320 Ga. App. 247, 739 S.E.2d 730 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was improper as a failure to terminate the mother's rights would not cause or was not likely to cause the children serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm because the children would not be harmed seriously were the children to remain in foster care, by virtue of either their relationship with their mother or the impermanency of that situation; the mother had positive visits with the children; the children were happy to see their mother; the children were not performing poorly in school or displaying significant age-inappropriate behavioral problems; and the lack of specific evidence regarding potential harm mandated reversal as the mother and children were bonded and emotionally close. In the Interest of E. M. D., 339 Ga. App. 189, 793 S.E.2d 489 (2016).

Termination of the mother's parental rights was improper because, although the evidence supported the finding that the children's dependency was likely to continue and would not likely be remedied, the state did not sufficiently establish that the children were likely to suffer harm under the status quo as there was no evidence that their continued relationship with their mother was harmful; and the juvenile court's generalized findings that the children would experience doubt, uncertainty and hesitancy in life, and that foster care would not provide the kind of stability they needed, and would put them at risk of delinquency, other anti-social behavior, and "foster care drift" did not show how each child would be harmed by the status quo. In the Interest of A. S., 339 Ga. App. 875, 794 S.E.2d 672 (2016).

Evidence insufficient for termination of father's parental rights. — See In the Interest of V.S., 249 Ga. App. 502, 548 S.E.2d 490 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Father was entitled to have the order terminating the father's parental rights reversed because the testimony indicated that the father had maintained a bond with the children, and the father was making progress on the father's case plan, completing parental and anger management classes, addressing the father's substance abuse issue, maintaining suitable employment for a long period of time, and maintaining suitable housing. In the Interest of C. S., 319 Ga. App. 138, 735 S.E.2d 140 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of father's parental rights inappropriate. — Termination of the parental rights regarding two children with two separate fathers was inappropriate because it was undisputed that neither father ever abused either child. In re D.C.N.K., 232 Ga. App. 85, 501 S.E.2d 268 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Juvenile court erred in terminating father's parental rights in the daughter when the juvenile court failed to make the required legal conclusion regarding whether the daughter's continued deprivation would cause serious physical, mental, emotional, or moral harm to her, as well as supporting findings of fact; thus, a remand was necessary for an appropriate ruling. In the Interest of M.D.F., 263 Ga. App. 50, 587 S.E.2d 199 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Reliance on citizen's review panel insufficient. — Record showing heavy reliance on the recommendations of a citizen's review panel and on the mother's past unfitness did not present sufficient competent evidence for termination of her parental rights. In re M.L.P., 231 Ga. App. 223, 498 S.E.2d 786 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81).

Parent with mental retardation. — Insufficient evidence supported the termination of a parent's rights because the record showed that while the parent had mental retardation, the parent functioned well despite the mental disability and had the skills necessary to provide for and raise a family, including two children, in Arkansas; thus, there was a lack of evidence that the deprivation was to continue. In the Interest of O. B., 337 Ga. App. 401, 787 S.E.2d 344 (2016).

Deprivation

Parent's lack of parental care or control caused deprivation. — Affirmance of the juvenile court's order terminating a parent's parental rights was ordered as the parent failed to comply with the case plan outlined, and the parent's failure to obtain stable housing, continued financial instability, and prolonged unwillingness to address mental health issues showed that the parent's lack of parental care or control caused the children's deprivation; hence, the parent's motion for a new trial was properly denied. In the Interest of J.M.N., 285 Ga. App. 203, 645 S.E.2d 685 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Court upheld an order terminating a parent's parental rights which was supported by sufficient evidence that the children at issue lacked proper parental care and that the cause of the deprivation was likely to continue, based on that parent's admitted drug use, failure to pay child support, failure to establish a bond with the children, and consent to a non-reunification plan, satisfying former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(A)(ii) and (iii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-310). In the Interest of H.C., 285 Ga. App. 631, 647 S.E.2d 333 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Deprivation continuing from parental drug abuse. — Juvenile court's findings supported the conclusion that the children were dependent at the time of the termination of parental rights hearing due to a lack of proper parental care and control because the parent's continuing substance abuse was evidenced by the parent's prior positive drug screen and several refused screenings (which the Division of Family and Children Services treated as positive); and because the parent was unable to pay even a symbolic amount of child support or to provide stable housing. In the Interest of A. S., 339 Ga. App. 875, 794 S.E.2d 672 (2016).

Evidence of deprivation sufficient. — Evidence was sufficient to show both deprivation and that the deprivation resulted from the mother's conduct. In the Interest of S.B., 242 Ga. App. 184, 528 S.E.2d 278 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence supported the finding that the children's deprivation was caused by the mother because the mother abandoned the children and left them with her mother and her mother's husband, who had been charged with sex crimes, she failed to maintain meaningful or consistent contact with either the Department of Family and Children Services or the children for over a year and made no effort to support the children financially, the mother made no effort to comply with the reunification plan, and she surrendered her parental rights in the children. In the Interest of M.E.M., 272 Ga. App. 451, 612 S.E.2d 612 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence supported the termination of a mother's parental rights as the mother was bound by a juvenile court's order finding that the children were deprived as a result of neglect, including inadequate housing and the mother's substance abuse; the mother did not appeal the juvenile court's finding. In the Interest of C.T.M., 273 Ga. App. 168, 614 S.E.2d 812 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Termination of a parent's rights was proper as there was sufficient evidence that the children would be deprived if returned to their parent's custody given the parent's lack of employment, the parent's inability to financially support the children, their failure to receive further anger management counseling, and failure to complete domestic violence counseling; also, child one's unexplained injuries were evidence of deprivation. In the Interest of K.J.M., 282 Ga. App. 72, 637 S.E.2d 810 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Evidence showed that two children were deprived for purposes of the termination of a parent's rights as: (1) the children had been found to be deprived and were not in the parent's custody, and the parent failed to maintain a parental bond as the parent did not visit the children once in nine months, failed to give the children birthday presents, and did not contact the foster parents; (2) the parent failed to complete the case plan, although the parent completed parenting classes and a substance abuse evaluation, the parent moved at least nine times in two years and did not maintain regular contact with a child services agency; and (3) the parent paid $60 of $900 owed in child support and failed to support the children. In the Interest of C.M., 282 Ga. App. 502, 639 S.E.2d 323 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Reunification

Reunification plan not required. — Department of Family and Children Services was not obligated in every case to create a plan for reunification, nor was the juvenile court required to reunite a child with the child's parent in order to obtain current evidence of deprivation or neglect; when the parental rights were at issue as to a parent who did not have custody of the child, the court must determine whether the child was without proper parental care and control by considering the criteria established by former

O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94(b)(4)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-311). In the Interest of T. B., 267 Ga. App. 484, 600 S.E.2d 432 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Because the parental rights to a mother's other four children had previously been terminated around the time the mother's infant child was born, the juvenile court did not err in approving a non-reunification plan involving that infant child pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58(a)(4)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-310 and 15-11-320); further, a presumption of non-reunification arose based on the mother's medically verified mental deficiency. In the Interest of J.P., 280 Ga. App. 100, 633 S.E.2d 442 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

Reunification not appropriate. — Juvenile court did not err in terminating the reunification services and approving the non-reunification plan because clear and convincing evidence supported the juvenile court's conclusion that the child was deprived based on the mother's long-term substance abuse and that such deprivation was likely to continue and cause harm to the child. In the Interest of J. T., 322 Ga. App. 4, 743 S.E.2d 571 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-94).

15-11-321. Custody of child following termination proceedings or surrender of parental rights.

(a) When a court enters an order terminating the parental rights of a parent or accepts a parent's voluntary surrender of parental rights, or a petition for termination of parental rights is withdrawn because a parent has executed an act of surrender in favor of the department, a placement may be made only if the court finds that such placement is in the best interests of the child and in accordance with such child's court approved permanency plan created pursuant to Code Sections 15-11-231 and 15-11-232. In determining which placement is in a child's best interests, the court shall enter findings of fact reflecting its consideration of the following:

(1) Such child's need for a placement that offers the greatest degree of legal permanence and security;

(2) The least disruptive placement for such child;

(3) Such child's sense of attachment and need for continuity of relationships;

(4) The value of biological and familial connections; and

(5) Any other factors the court deems relevant to its determination.

(b) A guardian or legal custodian shall submit to the jurisdiction of the court for purposes of placement.

(c) A placement effected under the provisions of this Code section shall be conditioned upon the person who is given custody or who is granted an adoption of a child whose parents have had their parental rights terminated or surrendered agreeing to abide by the terms and conditions of the order of the court.

(d) In addition to its rights as a legal custodian, the department has the authority to consent to the adoption of a child whose parents have had their parental rights terminated or surrendered.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-321, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2016, p. 134, § 1-4/HB 887; Ga. L. 2019, p. 456, § 4/SB 167.

The 2019 amendment, effective July 1, 2019, deleted the former second sentence of subsection (a), which read: "In determining which placement is in a child's best interests, the court shall initially attempt to place the child with an adult who is a relative or fictive kin, if such individual is willing and found by the court to be qualified to receive and care for such child."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Sections 15-11-54 and 15-11-90, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-103, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Jurisdiction to award custody to Department Human Resources. — Juvenile court had jurisdiction to award custody of a child to the Department of Human Resources and properly entered the court's order of disposition awarding permanent custody to the Department because the mother and father had no rights to surrender to the great-grandparents when the termination order reflected the juvenile court's intent to record a previously unrecorded action actually taken or judgment actually rendered; the juvenile court rendered a judgment terminating the child's parental rights at the conclusion of the hearing on September 3, 2008, and although the court's oral ruling was not memorialized in a written order until September 9, 2008, and not filed until September 17, 2008, such order clearly stated that the order was nunc pro tunc to September 3, 2008, the date of the termination hearing. In re D.C.H., 300 Ga. App. 827, 686 S.E.2d 434 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Superior court properly declined jurisdiction in a custody action brought by grandparents because, once a juvenile court took jurisdiction of a deprivation action concerning the child and, later, a termination action of parental rights, the court took jurisdiction of the entire case of the minor child including the issues of disposition and custody under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-58 and 15-11-103 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-134, 15-11-201 et seq., and 15-11-320 et seq.). Segars v. State, 309 Ga. App. 732, 710 S.E.2d 916 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

In determining whether or not there is a parent having parental rights, the court will look not only to the biological or "legal" father and mother, but also at third persons who stand in loco parentis, whom the court has equated with parents, and when there is a person standing in loco parentis who has taken a voluntarily relinquished child into its family and cared for the child, it is not the legislative intent that the child be automatically removed from that home and placed with a state or county agency just because there is no biological or "legal" father or mother with parental rights. In re M.A.F., 254 Ga. 748, 334 S.E.2d 668 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54).

Failure to consider statutory factors. — Juvenile court's order placing the child with the intervenors had to be vacated because the juvenile court did not apply the proper statute, O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321, or fully consider the five factors therein. In the Interest of A. H., 348 Ga. App. 817, 824 S.E.2d 688 (Feb. 26, 2019).

Court should seek to place custody first with the Department of Human Resources, then with a licensed child-placing agency, then in a foster home, and lastly in some other undesignated receiver. Department of Human Resources v. Ledbetter, 153 Ga. App. 416, 265 S.E.2d 337 (1980) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54).

Placement with relative of putative father. — Trial court was not required to place a child with the putative father's mother or uncle, who testified that they would be willing to accept custody during the termination hearing since: (1) although the putative father's mother and uncle knew of the child's birth and subsequent removal from her mother's custody, neither one contacted DFACS or took any action to seek custody or to support the child prior to the termination hearing; and (2) the putative father was never married to the child's mother, and he provided no evidence that he was in fact her biological father. In re S.B., 237 Ga. App. 692, 515 S.E.2d 209 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-90).

Evidence supported termination of a father's parental rights since the child was deprived; the court properly refused to consider placing the child with either the father's parents or his sister after terminating the father's parental rights. In the Interest of M.D.B., 262 Ga. App. 796, 586 S.E.2d 700 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Juvenile court erred in denying an aunt and an uncle's motion to intervene in a termination of parental rights proceeding on the ground that the putative father had not legitimated the child as under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321), the juvenile court had to attempt to place the child first with a family member; if the aunt and uncle were family members, they had to be considered as a possible placement for the child. In the Interest of J.M.T., 275 Ga. App. 526, 621 S.E.2d 535 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Court cannot invest itself with authority to choose an adopting family, relying upon the provisions dealing with "other suitable measures for the care and welfare of the child." Department of Human Resources v. Ledbetter, 153 Ga. App. 416, 265 S.E.2d 337 (1980) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54).

Consent of placement agency necessary for adoption. — Former statute, which provided for the placing of children with an agency upon termination of parental rights, also mandated that consent of the agency was necessary for adoption. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 449, 228 S.E.2d 839 (1976), cert. denied, 432 U.S. 905, 97 S. Ct. 2949, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1077 (1977) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54).

Placement of child with foster family. — It was not an abuse of discretion to find that relative placement was not in the best interest of a child as: (1) the child had been in the foster parents' care for over 10 months, had bonded with the foster parents, and referred to them as "mommy" and "daddy"; (2) an aunt and uncle had not bonded with the child in 12 supervised visits; (3) the foster parents wanted to adopt the child; and (4) the child's strong bond with a sibling was accorded less weight than other factors militating for the child's placement with the foster family. In the Interest of S.V., 281 Ga. App. 331, 636 S.E.2d 80 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Trial court terminated parents' rights to four dependent children based on the parents' failure to comply with their case plan. As the children were thriving in foster care, and no relatives could be found who were suitable custodians, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion or violate former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321) by not placing the children with family members. In the Interest of A.G., 293 Ga. App. 493, 667 S.E.2d 662 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Although former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321) encouraged relative placement, it was not an absolute requirement. Because the child's established bond with a foster family authorized the juvenile court finding that the child's best interest was served by remaining with the foster family over being placed with a relative, the juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in the court's determination of the child's best interest. In the Interest of C.B., 300 Ga. App. 278, 684 S.E.2d 401 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

No preference for placement with family member. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321) did not require a trial court to give preference to family members in making a placement of a child following termination of parental rights. In the Interest of B.R.W., 242 Ga. App. 232, 530 S.E.2d 5 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Permanent custody of a child was properly granted to a county department of family and children services, rather than to the maternal grandmother, since: (1) the grandmother exhibited distorted and delusional thoughts and symptoms associated with schizophrenia; (2) on at least one occasion, the child's mother had physically assaulted the grandmother; (3) the child's mother had accused the grandfather of raping her, and the grandmother said that the grandfather had taken and failed a polygraph test in connection with the alleged rape; and (4) the mother had a history of violent and aggressive behavior and would have access to the child if the child were placed in the grandmother's home, and the grandmother lacked the ability to protect the child from the mother. In the Interest of L.M.J., 247 Ga. App. 756, 545 S.E.2d 127 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Nothing in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-320, 15-11-321, and 15-11-322) requires a trial court to give a preference to family members in making a placement of a child following termination of parental rights, and a placement should be made under the terms of former subsection (a) only if such a placement was in the best interests of the child. In the Interest of S.K., 248 Ga. App. 122, 545 S.E.2d 674 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Court improperly failed to consider placement of child with relative. — Juvenile court erred in placing a child in the department's permanent custody for purposes of adoption without considering placement of the child with a relative, notwithstanding that the father did not specifically identify any relatives to be considered, since he testified that he believed a suitable relative placement could be found and there was no evidence that the department investigated any relatives as possible suitable placement. In the Interest of J.J.W., 247 Ga. App. 804, 545 S.E.2d 21 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

According to the clear dictates of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321), it was incumbent upon the court and the department of human resources to conduct a thorough search for a suitable family member with whom to place the child. In the Interest of Z.B., 252 Ga. App. 335, 556 S.E.2d 234 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Although the juvenile court did not err in finding that placement of a child with a putative father's mother would not have been in the child's best interest, further investigation was needed to establish whether the father's father was, in fact, a blood relative to the child; if so, it would be necessary to consider placing the child with the grandfather. In the Interest of S.H., 251 Ga. App. 555, 553 S.E.2d 849 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Trial court erred in failing to consider an appropriate relative placement for a putative father's minor child upon the trial court's determination to terminate the father's parental rights as the trial court and the county agency had a duty under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321) to conduct a thorough search for a suitable family member. In the Interest of T.A.M., 280 Ga. App. 494, 634 S.E.2d 456 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Not in best interest to return children to paternal grandmother. — Termination of the mother's parental rights was in the children's best interests and it was not in their best interest to return them to the custody of their paternal grandmother. In the Interest of S.K., 248

Ga. App. 122, 545 S.E.2d 674 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in rejecting a child's paternal grandmother as a suitable home for placement of a child after termination of the parents' parental rights since the best interests of the child would not have been served by placement with the grandmother. The grandmother did not request placement of the child with her, did not attempt to bond with the child while the child was in foster care, was of advanced age and limited financial resources, and had not noticed bruising on the then two month old child the day before the child was removed for abuse. Furthermore, the child's guardian ad litem presented evidence that removing the child from the foster home would be damaging as that was the only family the child knew, the child had bonded with that family, and the foster parents planned to adopt the child. In the Interest of S.S., 267 Ga. App. 601, 600 S.E.2d 679 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Grandparent not appropriate placement. — A 7-year-old autistic child's grandmother was not a suitable placement for the child because the grandmother's husband had a stroke, causing significant medical problems, which required constant care by the grandmother. In the Interest of T. B. R., 304 Ga. App. 773, 697 S.E.2d 878 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to place the children with the grandparents as there was concern about such placement since the grandmother knew the half-sibling was being neglected but did not attempt to protect the child and a counselor testified that the half-sibling was aggressive toward or withdrawn from the grandmother and displayed disruptive behaviors in the child's foster home following visits with the grandmother. In the Interest of D. L. T., 323 Ga. App. 719, 747 S.E.2d 880 (2013).

Search for other family members. — After the court allowed a grandmother to participate fully in the hearing and to present evidence of her own fitness, she can not argue on appeal that DFCS should have conducted a broader search for other family members because she has not shown how she has the right to raise this issue on appeal since she is neither the parent nor the guardian of the child on whose behalf such search is to be conducted. In the Interest of B.R.W., 242 Ga. App. 232, 530 S.E.2d 5 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

In the termination of parental rights case, the appellate court rejected the mother's contention that the juvenile court committed reversible error in finding that the Georgia Department of Family and Children's Services had made a thorough search under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321) for a suitable relative with whom to place the child; the thorough search requirement imposed against the Department had been deleted from the statute, and there was evidence that the juvenile court attempted to place the child with a relative. In the Interest of L.L., 280 Ga. App. 804, 635 S.E.2d 216 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Sufficient compliance with Code section. — Although the search was conducted approximately two years before the termination hearing, evidence existed showing that the department complied with the dictate of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321) in attempting to find relatives to place the child with. In the Interest of G.B., 263 Ga. App. 577, 588 S.E.2d 779 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

As the evidence showed that the Department of Family and Children Services evaluated the maternal grandmother for placement, but that authorities did not approve her home for placement, and that the mother failed to provide any relatives' names to the court for placement, the Department did not fail to make a thorough and exhaustive search for a suitable family member with whom the child could be placed. In the Interest of A.M., 275 Ga. App. 630, 621 S.E.2d 567 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Juvenile court did not violate the mandate of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103(a)(1)

(see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321) by failing to search for a suitable family member for placement after deciding to terminate a mother's parental rights as the record showed that the relatives suggested by the mother and reported to the court were investigated and one was not approved and two others failed to respond. In the Interest of D.D., 273 Ga. App. 839, 616 S.E.2d 179 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Evidence showed that a trial court complied with the requirement of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321) by placing the children with their maternal grandfather and step-grandmother who planned to adopt the children. In the Interest of A.H., 278 Ga. App. 192, 628 S.E.2d 626 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Juvenile court's finding that a child services agency had made reasonable efforts to find suitable relative placement for a child, without success, was supported by evidence that an aunt and uncle had not obtained a larger living space until shortly before the termination of parental rights hearing and a child services representative's testimony that in 12 supervised visits, the aunt and uncle had not bonded with the child. In the Interest of S.V., 281 Ga. App. 331, 636 S.E.2d 80 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Juvenile court did not err in failing to place two children with a relative as a child services agency investigated placement with a parent's sibling (who did not want the children), the grandparents (who were financially unstable and had a history of child abuse), and a great-grandparent (who was on disability and in poor health); on the other hand, the children had formed a bond with their foster parents, who were raising the children as their own. In the Interest of C.M., 282 Ga. App. 502, 639 S.E.2d 323 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Post-termination placement with the foster parents was upheld on appeal, given sufficient evidence that the child's grandparent made little effort to connect with the child; had previously refused to take custody; had health problems; lacked complete knowledge of the child's special needs; and failed to fully disclose the family's financial circumstances during a home study. Moreover, the foster parents had custody of the child for the child's entire life; the child bonded with them and viewed them as parents; the child would likely suffer trauma if removed from their home, and progressed developmentally in their care. In the Interest of R.D.B., 289 Ga. App. 76, 656 S.E.2d 203 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

After terminating couple's parental rights, department of family and children services did not fail to make reasonable efforts to find a relative placement under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321); there was evidence that removing children from their foster home would be emotionally harmful to them and that a couple related to the father was unsuitable, and the mother's lack of cooperation precluded the department's compliance with the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children, which required her birth certificate for out-of-state placement. In the Interest of A.A., 290 Ga. App. 818, 660 S.E.2d 868 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Discretion of court. — After hearing evidence regarding the option of placing the child with the paternal grandmother, the court did not err in finding that it was in the best interest of the child to be permanently placed with the foster mother. In re C.L.R., 232 Ga. App. 134, 501 S.E.2d 296 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-90).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in failing to place a child with a family member upon termination of the mother's parental rights as the child would remain in a safe and stable foster home upon termination of the mother's parental rights and the foster mother intended to adopt the child. In the Interest of A.L.S.S., 264 Ga. App. 318, 590 S.E.2d 763 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in declining to place the two children with relatives after the juvenile court terminated the mother's parental rights; the only relatives available, the maternal grandparents and a brother, admitted that they could not adequately care for the children and, thus, placement with them was not in the best interests of the children. In the Interest of C.B.H., 262 Ga. App. 833, 586 S.E.2d 678 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Denial of placement with maternal great aunt not error. — Upon the termination of a parent's parental rights, the juvenile court's order rejecting placement of the two children at issue with a relative was upheld on appeal as: (1) that relative had previously relinquished custody of the older child; (2) sufficient evidence was presented that the children were in separate stable foster-care placements; (3) the respective foster parents expressed a willingness to adopt the children; and (4) the guardian ad litem agreed that placement with the foster families was in the best interest of both children. In the Interest of K.W., 283 Ga. App. 398, 641 S.E.2d 598 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Denial of placement with aunt. — In light of a maternal aunt's lack of a bond with a parent's children and the foster parents' strong bond with the children, the juvenile court was authorized to decline placing the children with the aunt, and did not abuse the court's discretion under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321). In the Interest of N.S.E., 287 Ga. App. 186, 651 S.E.2d 123 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Finding that no able or willing relative was available was not error. — In a termination of parental rights case, trial court did not err in finding under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321) that placement of children with a relative was not an option, having heard evidence that no relatives were willing or able to assume custody; moreover, the parent had waived appellate review of the issue by failing to raise the issue below. In the Interest of A.D.I., 291 Ga. App. 190, 661 S.E.2d 606 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Placement with relative not in child's best interests. — In a termination of parental rights case, the trial court did not err in finding that placement with a relative was not in the best interests of the child; a search by the department of family and children services did not reveal any interested relatives, and neither parent timely provided the names and addresses of additional relatives for consideration. In the Interest of B.W., 287 Ga. App. 54, 651 S.E.2d 332 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Evidence supported the juvenile court's decision to terminate parental rights and to award permanent custody of a child to the Department of Human Resources, rather than the child's maternal great-grandparents, given the child's long-term placement with foster parents and the child's developing "crucial attachments" to them; finding that the child had resided in the foster parents' home for 18 of her 22 months of life and was attached to the foster parents, who were the only primary caregivers of which the child had any memory, the juvenile court concluded that placement with the Department was the most appropriate for and in the best interest of the child. In re D.C.H., 300 Ga. App. 827, 686 S.E.2d 434 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

Home study issue not ripe for review. — In a termination of parental rights case, a mother's contention that a county department of family and children services (DFCS) violated former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103(a)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-321) by failing to include in the record evidence that the department conducted a home study of the child's paternal grandmother was not ripe for review. The trial court awarded permanent custody to the DFCS for the purpose of adoption and expressly noted that the issue of whether the grandmother could serve as the permanent adoption placement would be addressed in later proceedings. In the Interest of U.G., 291 Ga. App. 404, 662 S.E.2d 190 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-103).

15-11-322. Continuing court review when child not adopted.

If a petition seeking the adoption of a child whose parents have had their parental rights terminated or surrendered is not filed within six months after the date of the disposition order, the court shall then, and at least every six months thereafter so long as such child remains unadopted, review the circumstances of such child to determine what efforts have been made to assure that such child will be adopted. The court shall:

(1) Make written findings regarding whether reasonable efforts have been made to move such child to permanency;

(2) Evaluate whether, in light of any change in circumstances, the permanency plan for such child remains appropriate; and

(3) Enter such orders as it deems necessary to further adoption or if appropriate, other permanency options, including, but not limited to, another placement.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Sections 15-11-54 and 15-11-90, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-103, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Court cannot invest itself with authority to choose an adopting family, relying upon the provisions dealing with "other suitable measures for the care and welfare of the child." Department of Human Resources v. Ledbetter, 153 Ga. App. 416, 265 S.E.2d 337 (1980) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54).

Consent of placement agency necessary for adoption. — Former statute, which provided for the placing of children with an agency upon termination of parental rights, also mandated that consent of the agency was necessary for adoption. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 449, 228 S.E.2d 839 (1976), cert. denied, 432 U.S. 905, 97 S. Ct. 2949, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1077 (1977) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-54).

15-11-323. Reinstatement of parental rights; standard of proof.

(a) A child who has not been adopted after the passage of at least three years from the date the court terminated parental rights or the parent voluntarily surrendered parental rights to DFCS and for whom the court has determined that adoption is no longer the permanent plan may petition the court to reinstate parental rights pursuant to the modification of orders procedure prescribed by Code Section 15-11-32.

Such child may file the petition to reinstate parental rights prior to the expiration of such three-year period if the department or licensed child-placing agency that is responsible for the custody and supervision of such child and such child stipulate that such child is no longer likely to be adopted. A child 14 years of age or older shall sign the petition in the absence of a showing of good cause as to why such child could not do so.

(b) If it appears that the best interests of a child may be promoted by reinstatement of parental rights, the court shall order that a hearing be held and shall cause notice to be served by United States mail to DFCS, the attorney of record, guardian ad litem, if any, and foster parents, if any, of the child whose parental rights were terminated or surrendered and the child's former parent whose parental rights were terminated or surrendered. The former parent and foster parents, if any, shall have a right to be heard at the hearing to reinstate parental rights but shall not be parties at such hearing, and such hearing may be conducted in their absence. A child's motion shall be dismissed if his or her former parent cannot be located or if such parent objects to the reinstatement.

(c) The court shall grant the petition if it finds by clear and convincing evidence that a child is no longer likely to be adopted and that reinstatement of parental rights is in the child's best interests. In determining whether reinstatement is in the child's best interests the court shall consider, but not be limited to, the following:

(1) Whether a parent whose rights are to be reinstated is a fit parent and has remedied his or her deficits as provided in the record of the prior termination proceedings and prior termination order;

(2) The age and maturity of a child and the ability of such child to express his or her preference;

(3) Whether the reinstatement of parental rights will present a risk to a child's health, welfare, or safety; and

(4) Other material changes in circumstances, if any, that may have occurred which warrant the granting of the petition.

(d) If the court grants the petition to reinstate parental rights, a review hearing shall be scheduled within six months. During such period, the court may order that a child be immediately placed in the custody of his or her parent or, if the court determines that a transition period is necessary and such child is in DFCS custody at the time of the order, order DFCS to provide transition services to the family as appropriate.

(e) An order granted under this Code section reinstates a parent's rights to his or her child. Such reinstatement shall be a recognition that the situation of the parent and his or her child has changed since the time of the termination of parental rights and reunification is now appropriate.

(f) This Code section is intended to be retroactive and applied to any child who is under the jurisdiction of the court at the time of the hearing regardless of the date parental rights were terminated.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-323, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-324. (Effective January 1, 2021) Testimony and evidence from foster parents, caregivers, and others.

(a) After the court has granted a termination of parental rights, and during the dispositional phase of such case contemplated in Code Section 15-11-321 and in any post-dispositional review under Code Section 15-11-322, the court shall in making its disposition consider the testimony of and evidence provided by any foster parent, caregiver, relative, or other individual in whose physical custody the child has resided for at least 12 months during a period ending not more than 90 days preceding the filing of the petition, provided that such individual expresses a desire and willingness to adopt the child.

(b) Such testimony and evidence may include evidence regarding the level of attachment and bonding between the child and caregiver; the child's health, safety, and well-being; and such other evidence that the court may consider relevant to its disposition of the case. The court may, in its discretion, limit the scope of such evidence as it may deem relevant and material to the dispositional issues at hand.

ARTICLE 4A

EXTENDED CARE YOUTH SERVICES

Effective date. — This article became effective July 1, 2020.

Cross references. — Children and Youth Act, § 49-5-1 et seq. Postsecondary Education Grants for Foster Children and Adopted Children, § 20-3-600 et seq.

15-11-340. Criteria for receiving services; development of transition plan; termination.

(a) A child may receive extended care youth services from DFCS. In order to receive such services, he or she must be between 18 and 21 years of age, sign a voluntary placement agreement with DFCS, and meet objective eligibility criteria established by DFCS, which shall include one or more of the following requirements:

(1) Be completing secondary education or a program leading to an equivalent credential;

(2) Be enrolled in an institution which provides postsecondary or vocational education;

(3) Be a participant in a program or activity designed to promote or remove barriers to employment;

(4) Be employed for at least 120 hours per month;

(5) Be employed for 80 hours per month, provided that he or she is also engaged in one of the activities described in paragraphs (1) through (3) of this subsection or can only work 80 hours per month due to a medical condition; or

(6) Be incapable of doing any of the activities described in paragraphs (1) through (5) of this subsection due to a medical condition.

(b) When a child is receiving extended care youth services from DFCS, a DFCS case manager and staff, other representatives of such child and, as appropriate, such child shall develop a transition plan that is personalized at the direction of such child, including an option to execute a durable power of attorney for health care, health care proxy, or other similar document recognized by law with respect to health care and specific options on housing, health insurance, education, local opportunities for mentors and continuing support services, and workforce supports and employment services, and is as detailed as such child may elect. Such transition plan shall be completed within 30 days of the child agreeing to such services and shall be updated as required by this article.

(c) A child may terminate a voluntary placement agreement and stop receiving extended care youth services at any time.

(d) Every 12 months, a DFCS case manager shall determine if a child is still eligible for extended care youth services. If DFCS determines that a child is no longer eligible for extended care youth services, DFCS may terminate the voluntary placement agreement with such child and stop providing extended care youth services. DFCS shall provide written or electronic notice to such child regarding such termination and to the court that approved such services.

(e) A child who is within 12 months of becoming 21 years of age shall not be permitted to sign a voluntary placement agreement with DFCS for extended care youth services.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-340, enacted by Ga. L. 2018, p. 927, § 1-5/HB 906; Ga. L. 2020, p. 191, § 3/HB 912.

The 2020 amendment, effective July 1, 2020, substituted "12 months" for "60 days" in the first sentence of subsection (d).

15-11-341. Written report to court; review hearing and findings.

(a) No later than 120 days after a voluntary placement agreement is signed by a child, DFCS shall file with the court a written report which shall contain the following:

(1) The child's name, date of birth, race, gender, and current address;

(2) Facts to support a finding that the child meets the eligibility criteria for extended care youth services and an explanation as to why it is in the child's best interests to receive extended care youth services;

(3) A copy of the signed voluntary placement agreement;

(4) A plan for such child to transition to independent living or another planned permanent adult living arrangement which is appropriate for the age and independence of the child using a form adopted by DFCS;

(5) Any information the child wants the court to consider; and

(6) Any other information DFCS wants the court to consider.

(b) Within 30 days of the filing of the written report required by this Code section, the court shall hold a review hearing and make written findings of fact for the purpose of determining whether extended care youth services are in the best interests of such child. The court shall issue an order with regard to the child having extended care youth services if it has determined that such services are in the best interests of the child and, as appropriate, approve or reject the plan for transition to independent living or another planned permanent adult living arrangement submitted by DFCS.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-341, enacted by Ga. L. 2018, p. 927, § 1-5/HB 906.

15-11-342. Determination of dates; periodic review hearings; role of DFCS in hearing and transition planning.

(a) When a child is receiving services under this article, the date such child is considered to have entered foster care shall be 60 days after such child signed the voluntary placement agreement.

(b)(1) No later than 12 months after a child is considered to have entered foster care, the court shall hold a hearing and make findings of fact for the purpose of determining whether:

(A) The services and supports provided by DFCS under the child's voluntary placement agreement are developmentally appropriate;

(B) DFCS has made reasonable efforts to finalize the child's plan for transition to independent living or another planned permanent adult living arrangement; and

(C) The child is making progress toward achieving independence.

(2) The court shall issue an order adopting or rejecting any updated transition plan for such child.

(c) So long as a child is eligible for and remains in extended care youth services, the court shall conduct periodic review hearings and make written findings of fact in accordance with subsection (b) of this Code section no later than 12 months following the previous hearing. Such periodic review hearings shall continue so long as such child is eligible for and remains in extended care youth services.

(d) Five days prior to any hearing conducted under this Code section, DFCS shall submit a report for the court's consideration, on a form adopted by DFCS, recommending a plan for transition to independent living or another permanent planned adult living arrangement and include the child's name, address, and telephone number, the date he or she entered extended care youth services, and the placement and services being provided for such child.

(e) Within the 90 day period prior to a child no longer receiving extended care youth services from DFCS, a DFCS case manager and staff, and other representatives of such child and, as appropriate, such child shall develop a final transition plan that is personalized at the direction of such child, including an option to execute a durable power of attorney for health care, health care proxy, or other similar document recognized by law with respect to health care and specific options on housing, health insurance, education, local opportunities for mentors and continuing support services, and workforce supports and employment services, and is as detailed as such child may elect.

ARTICLE 5
CHILD IN NEED OF SERVICES

PART 1
GENERAL PROVISIONS

15-11-380. Purpose of article.

The purpose of this article is:

(1) To acknowledge that certain behaviors or conditions occurring within a family or school environment indicate that a child is experiencing serious difficulties and is in need of services and corrective action in order to protect such child from the irreversibility of certain choices and to protect the integrity of such child's family;

(2) To make family members aware of their contributions to their family's problems and to encourage family members to accept the responsibility to participate in any program of care ordered by the court;

(3) To provide a child with a program of treatment, care, guidance, counseling, structure, supervision, and rehabilitation that he or she needs to assist him or her in becoming a responsible and productive member of society; and

(4) To ensure the cooperation and coordination of all agencies having responsibility to supply services to any member of a family referred to the court.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-380, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-381. Definitions.

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Comprehensive services plan" means an interagency treatment, habilitation, support, or supervision plan developed collaboratively by state or local agency representatives, parties, and other interested persons following a court's finding that a child is incompetent to proceed.

(2) "Habilitation" means the process by which a child is helped to acquire and maintain those life skills which will enable him or her to cope more effectively with the demands of his or her own person and of his or her environment and to raise the level of his or her physical, mental, social, and vocational abilities.

(3) "Plan manager" means a person who is under the supervision of the court and is appointed by the court to convene a meeting of all relevant parties for the purpose of developing a comprehensive services plan.

(4) "Runaway" means a child who without just cause and without the consent of his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian is absent from his or her home or place of abode for at least 24 hours.

(5) "Status offense" means an act prohibited by law which would not be an offense if committed by an adult.

(6) "Truant" means having ten or more days of unexcused absences from school in the current academic year.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-381, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Section 24A-401, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-2, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

In light of the reenactment of this chapter, effective January 1, 2014, the reader is advised to consult the annotations following Code Section 15-11-2, for annotations which may also be applicable to this Code section.

Desert defined. — "Desert," in its most common verb form, is defined as "to withdraw from or leave usually without intent to return;" accordingly, in order for a child to "desert" the child's home within the meaning of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(12)(D) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-381, and 15-11-471), the child must leave the home without an intent to return to the home. Thus, when the defendant, a juvenile, left home for nearly two days but then returned voluntarily, the defendant's delinquency adjudication for being an unruly child had to be reversed. In the Interest of D.B., 284 Ga. App. 445, 644 S.E.2d 305 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Unruliness based on running away. — Defendant, a juvenile, was properly found unruly based on running away when the defendant went to a grandparent's house without the parent's permission and did not return of the defendant's own volition. In the Interest of B.B., 298 Ga. App. 432, 680 S.E.2d 497 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

One becomes of full age on day preceding anniversary of one's birth, on the first moment of that day. Edmonds v. State, 154 Ga. App. 650, 269 S.E.2d 512 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Age of child at time of arrest. — Delinquency petition against a juvenile was properly transferred to the state court on the ground that the juvenile was arrested for possessing marijuana on the day before the juvenile's seventeenth birthday; pursuant to former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-28 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-10), the juvenile was deemed to have been 17 at the earliest moment of the day before the juvenile's birthday, which was the day the juvenile was arrested. In the Interest of A.P.S., 304 Ga. App. 513, 696 S.E.2d 483 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2 was inapplicable to an unborn fetus who was facing almost certain death because of complications in pregnancy. Jefferson v. Griffin Spalding County Hosp. Auth., 247 Ga. 86, 274 S.E.2d 457 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Statement of 17-year old admissible as not child. — Fact that the defendant was 17 did not affect the admissibility of the defendant's statement. The defendant was not a "child" under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2. Robertson v. State, 297 Ga. App. 228, 676 S.E.2d 871 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1300, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 406 (Ga. 2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Sufficient evidence was present to find child truant and unruly, as well as in need of supervision, since the evidence showed a large number of unexcused absences and the mother never applied for the services of a homebound teacher for the child as required by the school. In re A.D.F., 176 Ga. App. 5, 335 S.E.2d 144 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Determination of in need of supervision. — Since the corroboration rule, which requires independent corroborative evidence to support testimony of accomplice, does not apply to misdemeanors, a juvenile proceeding was reconsidered, as an erroneous finding about the juvenile's alleged crime may have affected the court's finding concerning whether the juvenile was in need of correction and supervision. J.B.L. v. State, 144 Ga. App. 223, 241 S.E.2d 40 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

No exclusive original jurisdiction over certain youthful offenders. — Ga. L. 1971, p. 709, § 1 does not vest exclusive original jurisdiction in the juvenile court over the following class of youthful offenders: persons between the ages of 17 and 21 years, who have committed noncapital felonies, and who are under the supervision of or are on probation to a juvenile court for acts of delinquency committed before reaching the age of 17 years. State v. Crankshaw, 243 Ga. 183, 253 S.E.2d 69 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Former Code 1933, § 24A-401 was intended merely as a device for extending jurisdiction of juvenile courts to take actions against persons between the age of 17 and 21 years authorized under Ga. L. 1971, p. 709, § 1. State v. Crankshaw, 243 Ga. 183, 253 S.E.2d 69 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Noncapital felonies committed by persons over 17 years. — Former statute should not be construed as giving the juvenile courts jurisdiction over noncapital felonies committed by persons after those people have reached the age of 17 years. State v. Crankshaw, 243 Ga. 183, 253 S.E.2d 69 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Evidence from forensic pediatrician and clinical psychologist. — There was no merit to a father's argument that the trial court erred in admitting certain evidence in finding that three children were deprived and in authorizing the grant of a motion for nonreunification with the father. Although the father claimed that certain documents contained hearsay, it was presumed that the trial court in a nonjury trial would select only legal evidence; the father had not shown that the opinions of a forensic pediatrician and a clinical psychologist who were qualified as experts should have been excluded; the father had not made any argument as to how he was prejudiced by evidence apparently introduced against the mother; and an indictment for one child's injuries was properly admitted as the father's custody status was an issue in the case. In the Interest of A.R., 295 Ga. App. 22, 670 S.E.2d 858 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Psychological testimony on developmental delay. — Evidence was sufficient to show that three children were deprived and to authorize the grant of a motion for nonreunification with their father. There was evidence that one child was seriously and intentionally injured while in either the sole or joint care of the father; the psychologist who evaluated the children, as well as their foster parent, testified as to numerous ways the children were developmentally delayed when initially taken into protective custody; and the father cited no evidence that he had made any attempt to maintain a parental bond with any of his children, met any of the other goals of the reunification plans, or otherwise provided for the needs of his children. In the Interest of A.R., 295 Ga. App. 22, 670 S.E.2d 858 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Part 2

Informal Procedures

15-11-390. Filing of complaint.

(a) A complaint alleging a child is a child in need of services may be made by any person, including a law enforcement officer, who has knowledge of the facts alleged or is informed and believes that such facts are true. A prosecuting attorney may file a complaint alleging a child is in need of services or intervene in such matter to represent the interest of the state as parens patriae.

(b) The complaint shall set forth plainly and with particularity:

(1) The name, date of birth, and residence address of the child alleged to be a child in need of services;

(2) The facts alleging why the court has jurisdiction of the complaint;

(3) The reasons why the complaint is in the best interests of the child and the public;

(4) The names and residence addresses of the parent, guardian, or legal custodian, any other family members, or any other individuals living within such child's home;

(5) The name of any public institution or agency having the responsibility or ability to supply services alleged to be needed by such child; and

(6) Whether any of the matters required by this subsection are unknown.

(c) When a school official is filing a complaint alleging a child is a child in need of services, information shall be included which shows that:

(1) The legally liable school district has sought to resolve the expressed problem through available educational approaches; and

(2) The school district has sought to engage the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of such child in solving the problem but such person has been unwilling or unable to do so, that the problem remains, and that court intervention is needed.

(d) When a school official is filing a complaint alleging a child is a child in need of services involving a child who is eligible or suspected to be eligible for services under the federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act or Section 504 of the federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973, information shall be included which demonstrates that the legally liable school district:

(1) Has determined that such child is eligible or suspected to be eligible under the federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act or Section 504 of the federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973; and

(2) Has reviewed for appropriateness such child's current Individualized Education Program (IEP) and placement and has made modifications where appropriate.

(e) The juvenile court intake officer shall be responsible for receiving complaints alleging that a child is a child in need of services.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-24, former Code 1933, § 24A-1603, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-25 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-38.1, which were subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Construction with former provisions. — Nonprofit advocacy organization was authorized to file a deprivation petition which was separate and distinct from the initial deprivation adjudication since there is no statutory requirement that a petition for modification must be filed under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-312), instead of a deprivation petition under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-150, 15-11-390, and 15-11-420). In re A.V.B., 222 Ga. App. 241, 474 S.E.2d 114 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24).

Great aunt and uncle. — Child's great aunt and uncle had standing to bring a petition to terminate the parental rights of the child's father and mother. In re J.J., 225 Ga. App. 682, 484 S.E.2d 681 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24).

Juvenile petition must satisfy "due process." — Although a juvenile petition does not have to be drafted with the exactitude of a criminal accusation, the petition must satisfy "due process." T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Since the state's petition failed to set forth in ordinary and concise language the facts demonstrating the nature of the parent's alleged failure to provide proper parental care or control, the parent lacked sufficient information to enable the parent to prepare a defense, and this amounted to a denial of due process. In re D.R.C., 191 Ga. App. 278, 381 S.E.2d 426 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

To meet constitutional requirement of due process the language of a juvenile petition must pass two tests: (1) the petition must contain sufficient factual details to inform the juvenile of the nature of the offense; and (2) the petition must provide data adequate to enable the accused to prepare a defense. T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Allege with particularity. — Due process requires that the petition alleging delinquency must set forth with specificity the alleged violation of law either in the language of the particular section, or so plainly that the nature of the offense charged may be easily understood by the child and the child's parents or guardian. D.P. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 680, 200 S.E.2d 499 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Petition filed alleging delinquency, deprivation, or unruliness must set forth alleged misconduct with particularity. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Insufficient notice to juvenile of alleged offense. — If a juvenile is brought to trial on a petition alleging delinquency based on a violation of former Code 1933, § 26-1601 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1) but was adjudicated delinquent for violating former Code 1933, § 26-1806 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-8-7), there was insufficient notice to the juvenile of the offense alleged to be the basis of the juvenile's delinquency and the trial court must be reversed. D.P. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 680, 200 S.E.2d 499 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Statement of custody irrelevant if jurisdiction otherwise exists. — If jurisdiction otherwise existed, such as if the action was brought in the county of the residence of both mother and son, then the requirement in paragraph (4) of former Code 1933, § 24A-1603 had no relevancy to the right of the trial court to handle the case. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Assumption of jurisdiction linked to authorized petition. — An order for detention clearly did not meet the requirements of a petition filed pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24A-1603 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-152, 15-11-280, 15-11-390, 15-11-420, 15-11-422, and 15-11-522) to commence proceedings under former Code 1933, § 24A-1601 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-420), and the assumption of jurisdiction by the juvenile court is linked to the authorized petition. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

In a hearing on parental custody in a divorce action, the trial court erred in awarding custody of the parties' minor children to the Department of Family and Children Services based upon findings that the children were deprived and the parents unfit because the mother had no notice that the superior court judge might award custody of the children to a third party based upon standards of deprivation. Watkins v. Watkins, 266 Ga. 269, 466 S.E.2d 860 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

Preparation and verification. — Because counsel for the Department of Children & Family Services stated to the court that counsel prepared the termination petition, that the petition was reviewed, verified, and then signed by counsel the next day, this was sufficient to comply with the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-152, 15-11-280, 15-11-390, 15-11-422, and 15-11-522). In re A.K.M., 235 Ga. App. 853, 510 S.E.2d 611 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

Service by correctional officer upon incarcerated father. — Personal service of a summons and a petition of deprivation by a correctional officer upon an incarcerated father was sufficient as the service procedures in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1 et seq., were not adopted nor were binding on the juvenile court, and the correctional officer was acting under the direction of the court for the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). In the Interest of A.J.M., 277 Ga. App. 646, 627 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38.1).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24-2403, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

School official not liable for investigative referral of deprivation. — School official would not be held liable in a legal action founded upon the official's good faith referral of a child neglect, abuse, or abandonment situation to a county department of family and children services for investigation. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 746 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2403).

PART 3

FORMAL COURT PROCEDURES

15-11-400. Child in need of services; time limitations for continued custody or temporary custody hearings.

(a) The continued custody hearing for a child alleged to be a child in need of services shall be held promptly and no later than:

(1) Twenty-four hours, excluding weekends and holidays, after such child is taken into temporary custody if he or she is being held in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility; or

(2) Seventy-two hours, excluding weekends and holidays, after such child is placed in foster care.

(b) If a child alleged to be a child in need of services was never taken into temporary custody or is released from temporary custody at the continued custody hearing, the following time frames apply:

(1) The petition for a child in need of services shall be filed:

(A) Within 30 days of the filing of the complaint with the juvenile court; or

(B) Within 30 days of such child's release from temporary custody;

(2) Summons shall be served at least 72 hours before the adjudication hearing;

(3) An adjudication hearing shall be scheduled to be held no later than 60 days after the filing of the petition for a child in need of services; and

(4) If not held in conjunction with an adjudication hearing, a disposition hearing shall be held and completed within 30 days after the conclusion of an adjudication hearing.

(c) If a child alleged to be a child in need of services is not released from temporary custody at the continued custody hearing, the following time frames apply:

(1) The petition for a child in need of services shall be filed within five days of the continued custody hearing;

(2) Summons shall be served at least 72 hours before an adjudication hearing;

(3) An adjudication hearing shall be scheduled to be held no later than ten days after the filing of the petition for a child in need of services; and

(4) If not held in conjunction with an adjudication hearing, a disposition hearing shall be held and completed within 30 days after the conclusion of an adjudication hearing.

There was no equal protection violation in framework of this former Code section since similarly situated residents and nonresidents were accorded equal treatment and it was only in cases when laws were applied differently to different persons under the same or similar circumstances that the equal protection of the law was denied. In re M.A.C., 244 Ga. 645, 261 S.E.2d 590 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1702).

Time limits set forth in the former statute were jurisdictional and the adjudicatory hearing must be set for a time not later than that prescribed by statute. J.T.G. v. State, 141 Ga. App. 184, 233 S.E.2d 40 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Time limits established by the General Assembly in the Juvenile Code are jurisdictional and must be strictly adhered to. Crews v. Brantley County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 146 Ga. App. 408, 246 S.E.2d 426 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Language of former statute was mandatory and the time for the hearing must be set for a time not later than ten days after the petition was filed. J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701); Crews v. Brantley County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 146 Ga. App. 408, 246 S.E.2d 426 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701); Irvin v. Department of Human Resources, 159 Ga. App. 101, 282 S.E.2d 664 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Language of former subsection (a) of this section was mandatory and the adjudicatory hearing must be set for a time not later than that prescribed. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Goal sought to be accomplished by the ten-day hearing requirement for detained children was the same goal for the 60-day hearing requirement for non-detained children and, thus, the latter requirement was mandatory, rather than directory. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Time limits for speedy trial must be strictly adhered to. — If a legislative body has defined the right to speedy trial in terms of days, then the time limits must be strictly complied with. J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Trial court erred in setting the date for a hearing twelve days, rather than ten days, from the date of the filing of a petition charging a juvenile with the commission of the delinquent act of burglary. In re M.D.C., 214 Ga. App. 59, 447 S.E.2d 143 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Provision of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) that the time for a hearing shall not be later than ten days after filing of the petition if the child was in custody was the equivalent of a speedy trial demand which did not require a specific demand by the child. However, the statute's protection could be waived if not properly raised and, furthermore, the trial court had discretion to grant a continuance of a hearing properly set for a date within ten days from the filing of the petition. In re M.D.C., 214 Ga. App. 59, 447 S.E.2d 143 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) did not constitute a speedy trial demand and, therefore, the failure to comply with the former statute's provisions resulted in dismissal of the petition without prejudice. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Construction with other law. — Because a juvenile's allegations that the state failed to comply with the procedural requirements under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49(c)(1) and (e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-102, 15-11-145, 15-11-151, 15-11-472, and 15-11-521) should have been raised in the superior court, and had no bearing on the validity of the delinquency petitions or the substantive charges against the juvenile in juvenile court, the court properly denied the presentation of evidence regarding the delinquency and substantive issues. In the Interest of K.C., 290 Ga. App. 416, 659 S.E.2d 821 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Hearing requirement applicable when child in detention when petition filed. — Ten-day hearing requirement was applicable when a child was "in detention" on the date the petition was filed in court. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Continuance requested by parent did not violate time limit. — When a hearing on a deprivation petition was held within ten days of the petition's filing, but the case was continued for eight days because the mother's counsel had a scheduling conflict, there was no violation of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a)'s (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) ten-day time limit. In the Interest of C.R., 292 Ga. App. 346, 665 S.E.2d 39 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Failure to follow mandated procedures warrants dismissal without prejudice of a petition alleging deprivation of a child. Another petition can be filed without delay if there is reason to believe the child is being neglected or abused. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 140 Ga. App. 175, 230 S.E.2d 139 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Motion to dismiss necessary if no provision for automatic dismissal. — If there is no provision in the statute for automatic dismissal, there should be a motion to dismiss directed to the trial judge and it should appear that the delay is not due to the actions of the defendant. E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 724, 215 S.E.2d 732 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Violation of ten-day mandate does not deprive jurisdiction. — Violation of the statutory mandate to set the hearing date not later than ten days after filing of the petition if the child is in detention would not deprive the court of jurisdiction that would otherwise exist. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Legislature intended incarceration be limited according to calendar days. — General Assembly intended that a juvenile who is incarcerated after the court has had a preliminary detention hearing should have the juvenile's incarceration limited and the juvenile's fate determined according to calendar days, not "working days." J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

No habeas corpus if compliance with statutory requirements. — Habeas corpus will not lie if the juvenile court, after notice and hearing, enters an order pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24-2409 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-211, 15-11-212, and 15-11-215). Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Effect of failure to show compliance with hearing requirement. — If the parents, in their petition seeking return of their children, allege that there has been no hearing as required by statute, and the record of prior juvenile court proceedings is silent as to whether such a hearing was ever set, continued, or held, and since the hearing requirement was mandatory, the defendant County Family and Children Services Department did not show compliance with the hearing requirement, and the parents stated claims for habeas relief which may be granted. Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Permitting state's mid-trial amendment of petition to change the charge against the juvenile from a misdemeanor to a felony was error since the amendment was done without notice and provision of a continuance to allow additional time for preparation of a defense. In re D.W, 232 Ga. App. 777, 503 S.E.2d 647 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Illegal detention. — If a petition was not presented within 72 hours of a detention hearing as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21(e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-145, 15-11-400, 15-11-413, 15-11-414, and 15-11-472), the state cannot thus illegally detain the child and then render such a jurisdictional defect harmless by setting the adjudication hearing within 13 days (72 hours plus 10 days) of the detention hearing under subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582). In re B.A.P., 180 Ga. App. 433, 349 S.E.2d 218 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

When service by publication sufficient in adoption proceeding. — Service by publication was sufficient to bestow jurisdiction over putative fathers of children whose natural mothers wish to give the children up for adoption. In re J.B., 140 Ga. App. 668, 231 S.E.2d 821 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1702).

Service of summons and termination petition was ineffective since, even though the summons was left at the mother's residence, there was no evidence that the summons was left with a statutorily appropriate person, and service of the petition the day before the hearing was not timely. In re D.R.W., 229 Ga. App. 571, 494 S.E.2d 379 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-27).

Order terminating an out-of-state incarcerated parent's parental rights was reversed as: (1) service of the termination petition and summons upon the parent via certified mail was insufficient under both O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-4 and former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282); (2) a correctional officer who personally delivered the documents to the parent did not amount to sufficient and lawful personal service as the officer lacked the inherent authority to perfect service under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(c) and no court order existed to grant the authority; and (3) the trial court's reliance on the service provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), a statute dealing with service in juvenile court proceedings generally, was misplaced. In the Interest of C.S., 282 Ga. 7, 644 S.E.2d 812 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Service by publication in termination proceeding. — Juvenile court may order service of process by publication in a termination proceeding if, after reasonable effort, a party cannot be found and the party's address cannot be ascertained. In re M.J.B., 238 Ga. App. 833, 520 S.E.2d 497 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Service by publication in deprivation proceeding. — Juvenile court erred in granting service by publication of the paternal grandparents' petition alleging that the mother's children were deprived because the grandparents failed to exercise reasonable diligence to find the mother, the juvenile court concluded that the mother could not be found with due diligence within the State of Georgia without any competent evidence to support that finding, and the juvenile court failed to place any burden on the grandparents to determine what notice the grandparents had given to the mother of the grandparents' deprivation petition and simply relied on evidence about the father's efforts to contact her; the grandparents did not file a written motion for service by publication and supporting affidavit as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(f)(1)(A), the grandparents had some means of communicating with the mother because the father had the mother's telephone number and was able to notify the mother by phone of the 72-hour hearing, the grandparents could have contacted the mother's relatives to ascertain the mother's whereabouts, and the grandparents could have attempted to serve the mother personally or by registered or certified mail at the mother's prior address. Taylor v. Padgett, 300 Ga. App. 314, 684 S.E.2d 434 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Service by correctional officer on incarcerated parent. — Personal service of a summons and a petition of deprivation, by a correctional officer upon an incarcerated parent, was sufficient as the service procedures in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1 et seq., were not adopted nor were binding on the juvenile court, and the correctional officer was acting under the direction of the court for the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). In the Interest of A.J.M., 277 Ga. App. 646, 627 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Service not perfected on incarcerated person. — Deprivation order had to be vacated and the case remanded because service of the deprivation petition on the parent in question, who was incarcerated, was not perfected in accordance with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). The parent had not waived personal service and personal service was not waived simply by actual notice having been achieved. In the Interest of A. R., 296 Ga. App. 62, 673 S.E.2d 586 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Requirement of "reasonable effort" to find party. — Former statute required a showing by the department that a "reasonable effort" had been made to find a putative father or ascertain his address. In re J.B., 140 Ga. App. 668, 231 S.E.2d 821 (1976) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Permissibility of publication notice dependent upon investigation. — Whether publication notice is permissible necessarily depends upon an investigation of whether the whereabouts of putative fathers were unknown and whether the fathers could be found with reasonable diligence. In re J.B., 140 Ga. App. 668, 231 S.E.2d 821 (1976) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

If there was no service of process and notice as required by the former provisions and there was no valid waiver of notice of the pending charge by service of process or otherwise, the entire hearing is a nullity. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Timeliness of petition. — Juvenile was entitled to a copy of the delinquency petition filed against the juvenile, and pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), the juvenile had a right to receive the petition at least 24 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing; however, the juvenile waived any objection the juvenile had on the grounds of improper service since the juvenile received the petition right before the hearing as the juvenile did not make an objection or request a continuance on the basis that the juvenile was unprepared. In the Interest of E.S., 262 Ga. App. 768, 586 S.E.2d 691 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Permitting state's mid-trial amendment of petition to change the charge against the juvenile from a misdemeanor to a felony was error since the amendment was done without notice and provision of a continuance to allow additional time for preparation of a defense. In re D.W, 232 Ga. App. 777, 503 S.E.2d 647 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Reliance on section by trial court misplaced. — Because former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282) related specifically to service in termination-of-parental-rights proceedings, the trial court's reliance on the service provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), a statute dealing with service in juvenile court proceedings generally, was misplaced; moreover, for purposes of statutory interpretation, a specific statute prevailed over a general statute, absent any indication of a contrary legislative intent. In the Interest of C.S., 282 Ga. 7, 644 S.E.2d 812 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Applicability. — Contrary to the defendant's claims, neither former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-67 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-442) nor former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-48(e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-135, 15-11-400, and 15-11-412) applied to the defendant's case because both provisions applied when the child was found "unruly," and the defendant was adjudicated delinquent, not unruly. In the Interest of B. Q. L. E., 297 Ga. App. 273, 676 S.E.2d 742, cert. denied, No. S09C1197, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 787 (Ga. 2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-48).

Suspect may first be booked if rights are observed. — There was no violation of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-20 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-155, 15-11-400, 15-11-412, and 15-11-504) because a juvenile suspect was first taken to a police station for booking purposes, if the juvenile was advised of the juvenile's rights under that section to be questioned elsewhere; the juvenile signed a waiver of these rights on an "advice to juveniles" form and was detained at a youth development center. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Confession admissible if juvenile taken before county police. — Juvenile defendant's confession was admissible despite the fact that the juvenile was not taken before an impartial juvenile intake officer but a member of the county police department since the defendant's mother was present during the juvenile's interrogation and it was not alleged that the officer failed to perform any duty imposed upon the officer. Worthy v. State, 253 Ga. 661, 324 S.E.2d 431 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-20).

All detention facilities not supervised and controlled by juvenile courts. — Juvenile courts are not granted the power and authority to supervise and control all the various detention facilities. Jones v. State, 134 Ga. App. 611, 215 S.E.2d 483 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

No guarantee of all bed space desired by courts. — Subsection (a) of former section contemplated otherwise than that the Department of Human Resources guarantee all bed space desired by the juvenile courts. Jones v. State, 134 Ga. App. 611, 215 S.E.2d 483 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Confinement designation not exercise of court's jurisdiction. — Juvenile court's order for detention was merely an order pursuant to the former statute; designating the place of confinement was not an exercise of jurisdiction by that court. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Foster relationship gives rise to no state-created rights. — Children are placed in foster homes as an alternative to institutional care for what is clearly designed as a transitional phase in the child's life. Therefore, in the eyes of the state, which creates the foster relationship, the relationship is considered temporary at the outset and gives rise to no state-created rights in the foster parents. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 563 F.2d 1200 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 437 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 3103, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1141 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Limited restraining order appropriate disposition. — After a juvenile attacked a store detective, and subsequently displayed violent behavior and threatened another store employee, the court's conclusion that the juvenile was in need of treatment and rehabilitation, and the court's limited restraining order preventing the juvenile from entering any store owned by the company in Fulton County, except in the immediate presence of a parent or adult relative, was an appropriate disposition and justified by the evidence. In re J.M., 237 Ga. App. 298, 513 S.E.2d 742 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Purpose of division of juvenile trials into two phases. — In dividing juvenile trials into two phases lawmakers intended to give the juvenile judge an opportunity to conduct the "functional equivalent" of a regular trial (the adjudicatory hearing) in a manner which would satisfy the required constitutional procedures concomitant with the usual legal rules, such as those dealing with admissibility of evidence, proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and similar requirements applicable to adults. Thereafter, at the dispositional phase, the judge was to explore all available additional avenues, including psychiatric and sociological studies, which would enable the judge to provide a solution for the youngster and the family aimed at making the child a secure law-abiding member of society. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

During adjudicatory phase, rules of evidence generally prevail. In the second (dispositional) phase, the court hears virtually all evidence which is material and relevant to the issue of disposition. J.B. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 545, 228 S.E.2d 712 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Access to confidential records. — Nonprofit advocacy corporation mandated under federal law to investigate incidents of abuse and neglect of individuals with mental illness should have been given reasonable access to confidential county and juvenile court records in connection with investigations relating to the corporation's filing of a deprivation petition. In re A.V.B., 222 Ga. App. 241, 474 S.E.2d 114 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Right to cross-examine afforded upon request. — Right to cross-examine adverse witnesses guaranteed by former Code 1933, § 24A-2002 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-19 and 15-11-28) was afforded upon request according to former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-400, 5-11-440, 15-11-581, 15-11-582, and 15-11-600). A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Exception if petition alleged only deprivation. — If the petition by the county department alleged only deprivation, it was unnecessary to make an explicit finding of deprivation. Moss v. Moss, 135 Ga. App. 401, 218 S.E.2d 93 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Explicit finding for petition alleging multiple conditions. — Patent reason for explicit finding of deprivation in petition alleging multiple conditions was to indicate the necessity for and to authorize dispositions of the deprived child or children under the statute or statutes deemed applicable by the court. Moss v. Moss, 135 Ga. App. 401, 218 S.E.2d 93 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Disposition made following finding of delinquency. — Decision that the child is in need of treatment or rehabilitation, based upon clear and convincing evidence, is made following a finding of delinquency. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

French-speaking parent's stipulation to certain facts presented in a deprivation petition was sufficient evidence to support a finding that the parent's children were deprived and the parent's argument that the parent did not "understand" the meaning or significance of the stipulation was properly rejected. In re M.O., 233 Ga. App. 125, 503 S.E.2d 362

Waiver of Time Limit

Waiver of procedural requirements. — Time limits on setting juvenile hearings are mandatory, but procedural requirements can be waived. J.T.G. v. State, 141 Ga. App. 184, 233 S.E.2d 40 (1977) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); Cox v. Department of Human Resources, 148 Ga. App. 338, 250 S.E.2d 728 (1978), overruled on other grounds, 156 Ga. App. 338, 274 S.E.2d 728 (1980) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

With regard to a juvenile's adjudication of delinquency for acts which, if committed by an adult, would have constituted the offense of child molestation, the juvenile court did not err by denying the juvenile's motion to dismiss, which was based on an extended pre-trial detention as the juvenile and defense counsel agreed to a continuance and acquiesced in a hearing date delaying the adjudication for at least 48 days following the filing of the delinquency petition, which caused the juvenile to waive the right to complain that the adjudication hearing date was not set to occur in compliance with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582). However, the adjudication was reversed and the case was remanded to the juvenile court since the juvenile court erroneously applied a clear and convincing standard of proof and the standard of proof on charges of a criminal nature was the same as that used in criminal proceedings against adults, namely proof beyond a reasonable doubt. In the Interest of A.S., 293 Ga. App. 710, 667 S.E.2d 701 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Juvenile waived the right under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) to have an adjudicatory hearing within 10 days of the delinquency petition being filed by failing to object to the date proposed for the adjudicatory hearing, which was one month after the filing of the petition. In re A. T., 302 Ga. App. 713, 691 S.E.2d 642 (2010), overruled in part by Worthen v. State, 304 Ga. 862, 823 S.E.2d 291 (2019) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to comply with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) because the defendant's parent, the defendant's representative, and an attorney acknowledged that the parent did not object when, at the arraignment hearing, it was announced that the adjudicatory hearing would be set outside of the 60-day window; the parent also did not object within the statutorily prescribed 60-day-time period, and the motion to dismiss was filed outside of the 60-day requirement. In the Interest of I.M.W., 313 Ga. App. 624, 722 S.E.2d 586 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Hearing time limit can be waived. — If the party does not enter an objection during the course of the trial the party will not be heard to complain on appeal and if a hearing is set within the statutory time limit, the court may in the court's discretion grant a continuance. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code § 24A-1701); In re J.B., 183 Ga. App. 229, 358 S.E.2d 620, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 906, 358 S.E.2d 620 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Juvenile was entitled to a copy of the delinquency petition filed against the juvenile, and pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), the juvenile had a right to receive the petition at least 24 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing; however, the juvenile waived any objection based on the grounds of improper service since the juvenile received notice right before the hearing as the juvenile did not make an objection or request a continuance on the basis that the juvenile was unprepared. In the Interest of E.S., 262 Ga. App. 768, 586 S.E.2d 691 (2003)

(decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Delay negotiated by defendant waives time limit. — If the statute does not require dismissal as a matter of law regardless of the reason for the delay, it is clear that a delay negotiated and obtained by the defendant personally would constitute a waiver of the 60-day requirement. E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 724, 215 S.E.2d 732 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Proceeding null when no waiver of rights nor proper service. — If, in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of the right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and if the hearing is not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding is an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Waiver of right to notice. — If neither the juvenile nor the juvenile's mother were represented by counsel at the dispositional hearing, neither party knew the nature of the charge filed against the minor, and neither party knew of the serious consequences which may result in the case of an adverse adjudication of the petition filed against the juvenile, it is highly unlikely that the parties understood the significance of waiving the parties right to prior notice of the pending charge. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Adjudicatory Hearings

Time limits satisfied by hearing adjudicatory in nature. — When a juvenile and the juvenile's parents were summoned to appear at a hearing to defend against charges and to show cause why the juvenile should not be dealt with according to law, were instructed to remain in attendance at the hearing until final adjudication of the petition, were informed of the possibility of a continuance, and were told that the state would seek transfer to the superior court, the hearing was adjudicatory in nature and satisfied the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26. In re L.A.E., 265 Ga. 698, 462 S.E.2d 148 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Arraignment during adjudicatory hearing. — In the absence of a transcript, a juvenile failed to establish that former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) was violated since a hearing was timely scheduled and held, an arraignment was conducted at the beginning, the juvenile requested legal counsel and was found eligible to receive counsel, and a continuance was granted so counsel could be secured; conducting an arraignment was not inconsistent with an adjudicatory hearing. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996), reversing In re R.D.F., 216 Ga. App. 563, 455 S.E.2d 77 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Arraignment hearing scheduled within the 60-day time period is not sufficient to satisfy the requirement that an adjudicatory hearing must be set within that period. In re R.O.B., 216 Ga. App. 181, 453 S.E.2d 776 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Time for adjudicatory hearing is not mandatory. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441 and 15-11-582) required that an adjudicatory hearing date be set within ten days after a filing of a petition charging a minor with commission of delinquent acts, but does not require that a hearing be actually held within ten days after the filing of the petition. P.L.A. v. State, 172 Ga. App. 820, 324 S.E.2d 781 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); Johnson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 168, 358 S.E.2d 313 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); In re L.T.W., 211 Ga. App. 441, 439 S.E.2d 716 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); In re B.W.S., 265 Ga. 567, 458 S.E.2d 847 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Ten-day hearing rule was not absolute, and a continuance could be granted in the sound discretion of the trial court. Johnson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 168, 358 S.E.2d 313 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Adjudicatory hearing timely. — Juvenile court did not err in denying the defendant juvenile's motion to dismiss a petition because the adjudicatory hearing was set and held within ten days of the filing of the petition pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582), although the hearing was then continued, which was an action that was within the juvenile court's discretion. In the Interest of C.H., 306 Ga. App. 834, 703 S.E.2d 407 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Adjudication hearing required after an initial hearing. — By restraining the child at an initial hearing, the juvenile court implicitly found probable cause, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-46.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-415 and 15-11-503). The juvenile court therefore erred in later deciding that a 10-day adjudication hearing was actually a detention hearing and in resetting the 10-day adjudication hearing. In the Interest of K.L., 303 Ga. App. 679, 694 S.E.2d 372 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Dispositional Hearings

Dispositional hearing not necessary for termination due to deprivation. — If a petition for the termination of parental rights alleged only that the children were deprived, not delinquent or unruly, it was not necessary for the juvenile judge to hold a dispositional hearing. In re J.C., 242 Ga. 737, 251 S.E.2d 299 (1978), appeal dismissed, 441 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2046, 60 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Dispositional hearing not needed for disposition order. — Trial court may enter order of disposition without first holding dispositional hearing if there is an implicit finding that termination of the parental rights of both parties is authorized, leaving the court with only the alternatives provided in former Code 1933, § 24A-3204 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-180 and 15-11-181). Moss v. Moss, 135 Ga. App. 401, 218 S.E.2d 93 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Probative evidence admissible in disposition hearing. — Juvenile court can consider a juvenile's prior record in aggravation of disposition even though the record has not been presented to the juvenile prior to trial. O.C.G.A. § 17-10-2 (felony sentencing of adults) is not applicable to juvenile disposition hearings as the General Assembly has not made it so. To the contrary, subsection (a) of that section authorizes in dispositional hearings the receipt and consideration of all helpful information to the extent of its probative value, even though not otherwise competent evidence, in a hearing on criminal responsibility. C.P. v. State, 167 Ga. App. 374, 306 S.E.2d 688 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Continuation of a dispositional hearing should have been allowed when the probation officer notified the court that the officer was not prepared to make a recommendation regarding disposition. In re M.D., 233 Ga. App. 261, 503 S.E.2d 888 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Dispositional hearing was held, albeit briefly, since, at the conclusion of the trial, the court found that the juvenile had committed the offense charged and questioned the juvenile with regard to whether the juvenile had been in court before and whether the juvenile had ever been charged with similar conduct. In re B.J.G., 234 Ga. App. 285, 506 S.E.2d 449 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Timing of dispositional hearing. — When a juvenile court, having concluded the adjudicatory hearing and having found a juvenile defendant guilty of contempt, proceeded immediately to a dispositional hearing at which the defendant had the opportunity to be heard and to give evidence, the defendant waived any assertion of error by not objecting to this proceeding. In the Interest of P.W., 289 Ga. App. 323, 657 S.E.2d 270 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-65).

Dispositional hearings held in county of juvenile's residence. — Dispositional hearings must be held in the county of the juvenile's residence to meet state constitutional requirements. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

No need to repeat evidence presented during adjudicatory portion. — There was no error in refusing to have the dispositional phase include a repetition of the same evidence and witnesses previously presented during the adjudicatory portion. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Appeals

Parent's right to appeal delinquency adjudication. — As parties to their child's delinquency action pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-160, 15-11-423, and 15-11-530), the child's parents had the right to appeal the juvenile court's judgment and to participate in the appellate process. In the Interest of J.L.B., 280 Ga. App. 556, 634 S.E.2d 514 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Allegation of failure to comply with time requirements not appealable. — If the defendant, prior to a hearing to determine the defendant's delinquency, appealed from the juvenile court's denial of the defendant's motion to dismiss based solely upon an alleged failure to comply with the time requirements of subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582), the Court of Appeals dismissed the appeal since a motion under that Code section cannot be analogized to the denial of a O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 motion and did not involve a question of speedy trial rights which would be directly appealable. In re M.O.B., 190 Ga. App. 474, 378 S.E.2d 898 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Order for transfer for further disposition is not final appealable judgment. — When, pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-400, 15-11-440, 15-11-478, 15-11-581, 15-11-582, and 15-11-600), an order was entered adjudicating a juvenile guilty of an offense and, under the authority of former Code 1933, § 24A-1201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-401 and 15-11-490) jurisdiction was transferred to the county of the residence for further disposition, that order was not a final judgment appealable under former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-34 and 5-6-35). D.C.E. v. State, 130 Ga. App. 724, 204 S.E.2d 481 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Juvenile intake officer to locate appropriate juvenile facility. — Juvenile intake officer should make all reasonable efforts to locate an appropriate juvenile facility for the detention of an allegedly delinquent child before determining that such a facility was "not available" for purposes of the former statute. 1978 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U78-13 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — Many of the following annotations should be examined in light of the amendment to Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. XIV, Para. VI (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. VI) which took effect November 1, 1981.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 24A-1101, 24A-1201, pre-2000 Code Sections 15-11-15 and 15-11-16 and pre-2014 Code Sections 15-11-29 and 15-11-30, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

County of parent's residence. — Revision of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. XIV, Para. VI (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. VI), providing that venue in juvenile court cases may be determined by the provisions of the Juvenile Court Code of Georgia, removed any constitutional impediment to applying former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-17, 15-11-270, and 15-11-401) to parental termination proceedings when the parent resides in a different county from that in which an allegedly deprived child is found. In re R.A.S., 249 Ga. 236, 290 S.E.2d 34 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

Action to terminate parental rights on ground of deprivation need not be brought in county of parents' residence. In re S.H., 163 Ga. App. 419, 294 S.E.2d 621 (1982) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Determining legal residence. — Juvenile proceeding for delinquency or unruly conduct may be tried either in the county where the child resides or in the county where the unruly or delinquent conduct occurred. In re A.M.C., 213 Ga. App. 897, 446 S.E.2d 760 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

In determining where a juvenile resides for purposes of venue, it is generally the legal residence that controls. In re A.M.C., 213 Ga. App. 897, 446 S.E.2d 760 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

In a proceeding against a juvenile for the status offense of unruliness, the juvenile's legal residence for purposes of venue was in the county of the Department of Family & Children Services having custody over the juvenile, even though the place of the offense and the juvenile's family residence were in other counties. In re A.M.C., 213 Ga. App. 897, 446 S.E.2d 760 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

Adjudication proceeding is actually nothing more than pretrial hearing held in the county where the child was apprehended and in the custody of local authorities for committing the alleged unruly acts or delinquent behavior. M.E.B. v. State, 230 Ga. 154, 195 S.E.2d 891 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Venue lies in county where juvenile committed criminal act. — Although some of the proceedings in juvenile court are of a criminal character, not all are. For those that are, delinquency, unruliness and juvenile traffic offenses, the venue provisions of the Juvenile Code and the state constitution, that venue lies in the county in which the act was committed, are in accord. Quire v. Clayton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 242 Ga. 85, 249 S.E.2d 538 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Dispositional hearings conducted in county where defendant resides. — It was at the dispositional hearings provided for in former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-101 and 15-11-210) that the actual "case" was tried, thereby comporting with the constitutional mandate that civil cases shall be tried in the county where the defendant resided. M.E.B. v. State, 230 Ga. 154, 195 S.E.2d 891 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

In a deprivation proceeding, the court erred in basing venue on the childrens' brief visit to the county where the deprivation petitions were filed because the children were residing and attending school in another county at the time. In re B.G., 238 Ga. App. 227, 518 S.E.2d 451 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

Because a child was born in Lee County and had lived with the child's mother and maternal grandparents in Lee County for ten out of the 16 months of the child's life when a petition alleging deprivation was filed under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-270 and 15-11-401), Lee County was the proper venue for the action. In the Interest of C.R., 292 Ga. App. 346, 665 S.E.2d 39 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29).

Service on mother in county of residence sufficient. — Service of process on the mother in the county of this state in which the mother of an illegitimate child resides is sufficient to give the county juvenile court jurisdiction over both the mother and the child regardless of whether there was a "detention" of the child and in spite of the fact that a welfare worker obtained possession of the child outside of the state. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Venue exists despite absence of child. — If a particular county is the residence of the child and of the child's mother, venue properly exists there for temporary custody actions even if the child was not personally present within the boundaries of that county on the date of the filing of the petition to the court for temporary custody. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Venue in county of child's residence and where child born. — Requirements for proving that venue was properly in Cobb County were met because a mother was residing in Cobb County when her child was born and when the underlying proceeding alleging deprivation commenced and that the child remained in the custody of Cobb County Department of Family and Children Services through the time the juvenile court entered the court's deprivation and non-reunification order. In re R. B., 309 Ga. App. 407, 710 S.E.2d 611 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29).

Challenge to court's jurisdiction unsuccessful. — Although former Code 1933, § 79-404 (see now O.C.G.A. § 19-2-4) provided that the domicile of an illegitimate child shall be that of his or her mother, yet, where the plea to the jurisdiction alleged "this court has accepted jurisdiction and custody of the minor child … and is holding said child subject to the order of this court," which clearly showed that the child was before the court, and there was no allegation showing the domicile of the mother, who was present in court, or any other reason why the juvenile court did not have jurisdiction, it was not error to overrule the plea. Springstead v. Cook, 215 Ga. 154, 109 S.E.2d 508 (1959) (decided under Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 87, § 3).

Child was residing in Cobb County when an underlying proceeding alleging deprivation commenced and had remained in the custody of Cobb County Department of Family and Children Services through the time a termination of parental rights order was entered; accordingly, requirements for venue in Cobb County were met. In re R. J. D. B., 305 Ga. App. 888, 700 S.E.2d 898 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29).

There was sufficient evidence that venue was proper in Douglas County, Georgia, in a deprivation proceeding, as the Douglas County Department of Family and Children Services (DFCS) had been involved with the family for some time; the subject child's parent lived in a shelter in Douglas County in May and June of 2010, and at the time the deprivation petition was filed the child was in the custody of the Douglas County DFCS, where the child remained through the entry of the deprivation order. In the Interest of D. S., 316 Ga. App. 296, 728 S.E.2d 890 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29).

Transfer provisions were not violative of Constitution. — Ga. L. 1971, p. 709, § 1, by providing that after adjudication of delinquency in a court of another county the proceeding shall be transferred to the county of the child's residence for disposition, is not violative of the Georgia Constitution. M.E.B. v. State, 230 Ga. 154, 195 S.E.2d 891 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1201).

Failure to transfer prior to notice of appeal. — If it is undisputed that a child was a "nonresident child" as defined in former paragraph (a)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30 at the time of the delinquent act and at the time of the adjudication of delinquency, in that the child then resided in Spalding County, Georgia, the juvenile court of Henry County erred in failing to transfer the case to the county of the child's residence for disposition prior to the filing of the child's notice of appeal in accordance with former subsection (b) of that section. In re R.W., 186 Ga. App. 885, 368 S.E.2d 824 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-16).

Dispositional hearings held in county where defendant resides constitutional. — It was at the dispositional hearings provided for in former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-110 and 15-11-210) that the actual "case" was tried, thereby comporting with the constitutional mandate that civil cases shall be tried in the county where the defendant resided. M.E.B. v. State, 230 Ga. 154, 195 S.E.2d 891 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1201).

Authority to grant new trials. — Juvenile courts are courts of record; therefore, juvenile courts are authorized to grant new trials. In re T.A.W., 265 Ga. 106, 454 S.E.2d 134 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-16).

No jurisdiction for acts punishable by loss of life or confinement for life. — Juvenile court did not have exclusive jurisdiction over delinquent acts for which a child (under 17 years old) may be punished by loss of life or confinement for life in the penitentiary. Nevertheless, the statutory safeguards provided were applicable to both criminal and juvenile cases. Jackson v. State, 146 Ga. App. 375, 246 S.E.2d 407 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Incriminating statements obtained in violation of the Juvenile Code are not rendered per se inadmissible; rather, the issue to be considered is whether there was a knowing and intelligent waiver by the appellant of the appellant's constitutional rights in making the incriminating statements. Lattimore v. State, 265 Ga. 102, 454 S.E.2d 474 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Barber v. State, 267 Ga. 521, 481 S.E.2d 813 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Skidmore v. State, 226 Ga. App. 130, 485 S.E.2d 540 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Gilliam v. State, 268 Ga. 690, 492 S.E.2d 185 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Simon v. State, 269 Ga. 208, 497 S.E.2d 231 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Hanifa v. State, 269 Ga. 797, 505 S.E.2d 731 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Attaway v. State, 244 Ga. App. 5, 534 S.E.2d 580 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Evidence not inadmissible because of technical violations. — Since no injury appeared to have resulted, technical violations of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-410, 15-11-411, 15-11-412, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) would not render infirm evidence obtained as a result of such violations. In re J.D.M., 187 Ga. App. 285, 369 S.E.2d 920 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Guardian cooperating with police. — By notifying the defendant's guardian of the defendant's arrest and the grounds therefor, the police complied with subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-501). That the guardian cooperated with the police in the police investigation of the defendant's involvement in the crime did not require a finding that the statement was not voluntarily made. Burnham v. State, 265 Ga. 129, 453 S.E.2d 449 (1995), overruled on other grounds, Stinski v. State, 281 Ga. 783, 642 S.E.2d 1 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1201, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Failure to comply prejudices constitutional rights of child. — Failure to comply with the transfer provisions of former subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1971, p. 709, § 1 would prejudice the rights of the child under the venue provisions of the Georgia Constitution to have a dispositional hearing in the county of the child's residence. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U79-4 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1201).

Transfer after delinquency or unruliness adjudication. — Once a child has been adjudicated delinquent or unruly in juvenile court, the child would have to be transferred to the juvenile court in the county of the child's residence. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U79-4 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1201).

15-11-402. Right to attorney and appointment of guardian ad litem.

(a) The court shall appoint an attorney for a child alleged to be a child in need of services.

(b) The court may appoint a guardian ad litem for a child alleged to be a child in need of services at the request of such child's attorney or upon the court's own motion if it determines that a guardian ad litem is necessary to assist the court in determining the best interests of such child; provided, however, that such guardian ad litem may be the same person as the child's attorney unless or until there is a conflict of interest between the attorney's duty to such child as such child's attorney and the attorney's considered opinion of such child's best interests as guardian ad litem.

(c) The role of a guardian ad litem in a proceeding for a child in need of services shall be the same role as provided for in all dependency proceedings under Article 3 of this chapter.

(d) If an attorney or a guardian ad litem has previously been appointed for a child in a dependency or delinquency proceeding, the court, when possible, shall appoint the same attorney or guardian ad litem for a child alleged to be a child in need of services.

(e) An attorney appointed to represent a child in a proceeding for a child in need of services shall continue representation in any subsequent appeals unless excused by the court.

(f) A child alleged to be a child in need of services shall be informed of his or her right to an attorney at or prior to the first court proceeding for a child in need of services. A child alleged to be a child in need of services shall be given an opportunity to:

(1) Obtain and employ an attorney of his or her own choice; or

(2) To obtain a court appointed attorney if the court determines that such child is an indigent person.

General Consideration

Due process requires notice of right to counsel. — Due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, requires that in respect of proceedings to determine delinquency which may result in commitment to an institution in which the juvenile's freedom is curtailed, the child and the child's parents must be notified of the child's right to be represented by counsel retained by the parents, or if the parents are unable to afford counsel, that counsel will be appointed to represent the child. Freeman v. Wilcox, 119 Ga. App. 325, 167 S.E.2d 163 (1969), disapproved in Riley v. State, 237 Ga. 124, 226 S.E.2d 922 (1976), to the extent that no automatic exclusionary rule should be applied to incriminating statements made by a juvenile whose parents were not separately advised of the right to counsel (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Right to counsel at delinquency hearing. — General Assembly intended that in a juvenile court a child is of right entitled to counsel at a hearing which covers a determination by the court concerning the existence of delinquency by reason of the violation of probation conditions. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

No right to counsel before judicial citizens review panel. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-103, 15-11-402, and 15-11-475) did not apply to reviews by a judicial citizens review panel as the proceedings mentioned in former § 15-11-6(b) were proceedings before the juvenile court; the citizen's review panel's findings of fact and recommendations are not legal evidence as the panel were not a court of record and the panel's actions were not necessarily in compliance with regard to legal due process considerations. In the Interest of K.M.C., 273 Ga. App. 276, 614 S.E.2d 896 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Parent entitled to representation at all stages of deprivation proceeding. — Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b), a parent was entitled to representation at all stages of the proceedings alleging deprivation. In the Interest of A. R., 296 Ga. App. 62, 673 S.E.2d 586 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Parent entitled to effective representation. — Mother was entitled to effective representation in termination hearing. In re A.H.P., 232 Ga. App. 330, 500 S.E.2d 418 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30).

Right applies to informal detention hearing and other stages. — Accused juvenile was entitled to counsel at an "informal detention hearing" required by Ga. L. 1971, p. 709, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-60), or at any of the other stages of any proceedings alleging delinquency, unruliness, and deprivation. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Juvenile entitled to principles necessary for fair trial. — Juvenile charged with "delinquency" is entitled by right to have the court apply those common-law jurisprudential principles which experience and reason have shown are necessary to give the accused the essence of a fair trial. T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Ingredients of fair trial. — To give one accused in a juvenile proceeding a fair trial, the trial must include such ingredients as the presumption of innocence, the requirement that if the conviction is based entirely upon circumstantial evidence then the proved facts shall exclude every other reasonable hypothesis save that of guilt, and the necessity of producing independent corroborative evidence to that of an accomplice for a finding of guilt when based upon the latter's testimony. T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Cannot reverse delinquency adjudication unless deprivation of counsel harmful. — Although an accused is entitled to counsel at the stage known as "a detention hearing", there is no authority for reversing an adjudication of delinquency after a fair trial with legal representation because of lack of counsel at the detention hearing, unless it appears that deprivation of counsel at that stage resulted in harm to the juvenile. T.K. v. State, 126 Ga. App. 269, 190 S.E.2d 588 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Juvenile Code recognizes that a parent is a "party" to proceedings involving the parent's child. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Physical presence of parent cannot be equated with meaningful representation. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Indigent putative father's performance of the duties of a parent does not control the determination of whether he is entitled to appointed representation; the crucial inquiry is whether the putative father was a "party" to any of the proceedings within the meaning of the former statute. Wilkins v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 255 Ga. 230, 337 S.E.2d 20 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30).

Former Code section did not imply that foster parents may have certain rights. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 449, 228 S.E.2d 839 (1976), cert. denied, 432 U.S. 905, 97 S. Ct. 2949, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1077 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Parent's right to representation not violated. — Mother's right to appointed counsel was not violated since, after being notified of such right, she did not request counsel until shortly before the termination hearing and did not identify any proceeding at which she appeared unrepresented. In re A.M.R., 230 Ga. App. 133, 495 S.E.2d 615 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30).

Juvenile court did not err by refusing to dismiss the proceedings to terminate a mother's parental rights for the failure of the mother to be represented by counsel at the judicial citizens review panel as the proceedings mentioned in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-103, 15-11-402, and 15-11-475) were proceedings before the juvenile court and were not reviews by the panel; further, any error was harmless as the juvenile court did not rely on the panel's recommendations in terminating the mother's parental rights. In the Interest of K.M.C., 273 Ga. App. 276, 614 S.E.2d 896 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Parent, who was represented by counsel during the course of a termination of parental rights proceeding, could not prove that the parent was denied counsel during the proceeding because, beyond the claim that the parent was denied counsel, the parent failed to show what arguments the parent would have advanced, what evidence the parent would have produced in the parent's favor, or how the parent would have been successful had the parent been represented by counsel; moreover, in light of the overwhelming evidence supporting the termination of the parent's parental rights, there was nothing in the record that would support a finding of harm. In the Interest of M.S., 279 Ga. App. 254, 630 S.E.2d 856 (2006), overruled on other grounds, In re J.M.B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Indigent parent entitled to paupered transcript for use in appeal. — Indigent parent, whose parental rights have been terminated by an order of the juvenile court on a petition filed by an agency of the state, is entitled to a paupered transcript of the proceeding in the juvenile court for use in appealing the decision of that court. Nix v. Department of Human Resources, 236 Ga. 794, 225 S.E.2d 306 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Trial court committed reversible error in failing to determine whether appointed counsel was required for parent. — Fact that there was sufficient evidence to support the termination of a parent's rights did not relieve the trial court of the court's obligation to determine whether counsel should have been appointed for the parent under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-103, 15-11-402, and 15-11-475). The trial court's limited inquiry as to whether the parent waived the right to counsel, and the court's failure to ascertain the parent's financial status was reversible error. In the Interest of P. D. W., 296 Ga. App. 189, 674 S.E.2d 338 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Waiver

Right to counsel may be waived unless child is not represented by the child's parents, guardian, or custodian. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Determination of voluntary and knowing waiver of right. — Question of a voluntary and knowing waiver of a juvenile's right to counsel depends on the totality of the circumstances and the state has a heavy burden in showing that the juvenile did understand and waive the juvenile's right to counsel. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Trial court apparently determined that, given the court's finding that the mother was not competent, the mother was unable to show a knowing and voluntary waiver of her right to appointed counsel at the child deprivation hearing; thus, the trial court did not err in refusing to allow her to proceed pro se. Additionally, the mother failed to establish that she was harmed by her counsel's representation; thus, without harm, the mother's alleged error presented no basis for reversal. In the Interest of B.B., 267 Ga. App. 360, 599 S.E.2d 304 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Factors considered in determining proper waiver. — Several of the factors to be considered among the totality of the circumstances in determining whether the juvenile's waiver of counsel is made knowingly and voluntarily are: (1) age of the accused; (2) education of the accused; (3) knowledge of the accused as to both the substance of the charge and the nature of the accused's rights to consult with an attorney and remain silent; (4) whether the accused was held incommunicado or allowed to consult with relatives, friends, or an attorney; (5) whether the accused was interrogated before or after formal charges were filed; (6) methods used in interrogations; (7) length of interrogations; (8) whether vel non the accused refused to voluntarily give statements on prior occasions; and (9) whether the accused repudiated an extra-judicial statement at a later date. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977) (decided under former 1933, § 24A-2001).

Juvenile court proceeding null if no waiver. — If in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and since the hearing was not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding was an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933 § 24A-2001).

Mother who waives child's rights must be unbiased mother, free of interests conflicting with the needs of her daughter whom she undertakes to represent; an ally, not an adversary. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933 § 24A-2001).

Right to counsel waived. — Trial judge's determination that a 15-year-old girl knowingly and voluntarily waived her right to counsel in a murder case was not clearly erroneous since she was interrogated before formal charges were filed, was not held incommunicado, and there was no evidence that coercive or deceptive interrogation techniques were employed. J.E.W. v. State, 256 Ga. 464, 349 S.E.2d 713 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-6 and 15-11-30).

Right to counsel not waived. — In a proceeding for termination of parental rights, an indigent parent did not waive the right to appointed counsel in a knowing, intelligent, and voluntary manner simply because the parent failed to request counsel prior to the hearing as directed by the court. The court's denial of the parent's request for counsel was reversible error. In re J. M. B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Error in proceeding without counsel harmless. — As a juvenile court in a mother's parental rights termination proceeding failed to make inquiry as to whether the mother was indigent and whether she was waiving the right to counsel pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b), the judgment terminating her parental rights over her three children could not stand. Moreover, the record demonstrated many instances of harm caused by the mother's lack of counsel. In the Interest of P. D. W., 296 Ga. App. 189, 674 S.E.2d 338 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Juvenile did not make a knowing and intelligent decision to proceed without counsel where the referee did not warn her or her mother of the danger of proceeding without counsel or of the consequences of an affirmative finding or admission of the charge enumerated in the petition; the juvenile appellant and her mother did not stand before the court with open eyes, knowing the danger and consequences of proceeding without the benefit of legal representation. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-10-30).

PREADJUDICATION CUSTODY AND RELEASE OF CHILDREN

15-11-410. Taking a child into temporary custody.

(a) A child may be taken into temporary custody under this article:

(1) Pursuant to a court order; or

(2) By a law enforcement officer when there are reasonable grounds to believe that a child has run away from his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian or the circumstances are such as to endanger a child's health or welfare unless immediate action is taken.

(b) Before entering an order authorizing temporary custody, the court shall consider the results of a detention assessment and determine whether continuation in the home is contrary to a child's welfare and whether there are available services that would prevent the need for custody. The court shall make such determination on a case-by-case basis and shall make written findings of fact referencing any and all evidence relied upon in reaching its decision.

(c) A person taking a child into temporary custody shall deliver such child, with all reasonable speed and without first taking such child elsewhere, to a medical facility if he or she is believed to suffer from a serious physical condition or illness which requires prompt treatment and, upon delivery, shall promptly contact a juvenile court intake officer.

(d) As soon as a juvenile court intake officer is notified that a child has been taken into temporary custody, such juvenile court intake officer shall administer a detention assessment and determine if such child should be released, remain in temporary custody, or be brought before the court.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Procedural requirements are applicable when child is taken into custody or temporarily detained, regardless of whether it is for alleged delinquency, unruliness, or deprivation. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Failure to follow mandated procedures warrants dismissal without prejudice of a petition alleging deprivation of a child. Another petition can be filed without delay if there is reason to believe the child is being neglected or abused. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 140 Ga. App. 175, 230 S.E.2d 139 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Failure to follow procedures did not warrant dismissal. — Even though taking a juvenile to police headquarters before releasing the juvenile to the juvenile's parents was a violation of subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133 and 15-11-502), dismissal of the delinquency petition was not required because the violation did not cause injury or prejudice to the juvenile. In re C.W., 227 Ga. App. 763, 490 S.E.2d 442 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Former statute directed person taking child into custody to follow one of specified courses, "without first taking the child elsewhere," such as to the police station. M.K.H. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 565, 218 S.E.2d 284 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

When failure to bring juvenile promptly before court not prejudicial. — Any deviation from former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-410, 15-11-411, 15-11-412, 15-11-501, 15-11-502, and 15-11-507) resulting from a police officer taking a juvenile to the scene of a crime for show-up identification following the juvenile's arrest but prior to taking the juvenile before the juvenile court was minimal and not prejudicial error. M.A.K. v. State, 171 Ga. App. 151, 318 S.E.2d 828 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Failure of the state police to take a defendant promptly before a judicial officer does not make the defendant's conviction constitutionally infirm unless the defendant's defense was prejudiced thereby. Paxton v. Jarvis, 735 F.2d 1306 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 935, 105 S. Ct. 335, 83 L. Ed. 2d 271 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Barnes v. State, 178 Ga. App. 205, 342 S.E.2d 388 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Juvenile may first be booked if rights are observed. — There was no violation of former Code 1933, § 24A-1402) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-410, 15-11-411, 15-11-412, 15-11-501, 15-11-502, and 15-11-507) because a juvenile suspect was first taken to a police station for booking purposes, if the juvenile was advised of the juvenile's rights under that section to be questioned elsewhere; the juvenile signed a waiver of these rights on an "advice to juveniles" form and was detained at a youth development center. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Juvenile court intake officers act in a judicial capacity; therefore, law enforcement officers, who perform an executive function, are per se disqualified from acting as intake officers. Brown v. Scott, 266 Ga. 44, 464 S.E.2d 607 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Juvenile court intake officer is a public officer for purposes of a quo warranto proceeding. Brown v. Scott, 266 Ga. 44, 464 S.E.2d 607 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Failure to comply with notice and hearing requirements of the Juvenile Code, after an allegedly deprived child has been taken from the parent's custody, prejudices or injures the rights of the parent, primarily the right to possession of the child under former Code 1933, §§ 74-106, 74-108, and 74-203 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1, 19-7-25, and 19-9-2). Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Time limits are jurisdictional and must be adhered to. — Time limits established by the General Assembly in the Juvenile Code are jurisdictional and must be strictly adhered to. A failure to comply with the time periods requires dismissal. R.A.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 366, 274 S.E.2d 752 (1980), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 66 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

No jurisdiction for acts punishable by loss of life or confinement for life. — Juvenile court did not have exclusive jurisdiction over delinquent acts for which a child (under 17 years old) may be punished by loss of life or confinement for life in the penitentiary. Nevertheless, the statutory safeguards provided were applicable to both criminal and juvenile cases. Jackson v. State, 146 Ga. App. 375, 246 S.E.2d 407 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Incriminating statements obtained in violation of the Juvenile Code are not rendered per se inadmissible; rather, the issue to be considered is whether there was a knowing and intelligent waiver by the appellant of the appellant's constitutional rights in making the incriminating statements. Lattimore v. State, 265 Ga. 102, 454 S.E.2d 474 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Barber v. State, 267 Ga. 521, 481 S.E.2d 813 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Skidmore v. State, 226 Ga. App. 130, 485 S.E.2d 540 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Gilliam v. State, 268 Ga. 690, 492 S.E.2d 185 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Simon v. State, 269 Ga. 208, 497 S.E.2d 231 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Hanifa v. State, 269 Ga. 797, 505 S.E.2d 731 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Attaway v. State, 244 Ga. App. 5, 534 S.E.2d 580 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Evidence not inadmissible because of technical violations. — Since no injury appeared to have resulted, technical violations of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-410, 15-11-411, 15-11-412, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) would not render infirm evidence obtained as a result of such violations. In re J.D.M., 187 Ga. App. 285, 369 S.E.2d 920 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Guardian cooperating with police. — By notifying the defendant's guardian of the defendant's arrest and the grounds therefor, the police complied with subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-501). That the guardian cooperated with the police in the police investigation of the defendant's involvement in the crime did not require a finding that the statement was not voluntarily made. Burnham v. State, 265 Ga. 129, 453 S.E.2d 449 (1995), overruled on other grounds, Stinski v. State, 281 Ga. 783, 642 S.E.2d 1 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Rule as to confessions of juveniles should be same as that for confessions of adults because law enforcement officers cannot be certain when officers question a juvenile what kind of case may develop, and the statutory safeguards are applicable to both criminal and juvenile cases. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402); Jackson v. State, 146 Ga. App. 375, 246 S.E.2d 407 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Confession inadmissible if failure to comply with safeguards. — Failure to comply with the statutory safeguards renders a confession of a juvenile inadmissible in evidence. Bussey v. State, 144 Ga. App. 875, 243 S.E.2d 99 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Failure to comply with the statutory safeguards renders confession of a juvenile inadmissible even in a criminal case where a juvenile is tried as an adult. Manning v. State, 162 Ga. App. 494, 292 S.E.2d 95 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Confession obtained illegally inadmissible in delinquency hearing. — Confession obtained from a juvenile in violation of the statute was inadmissible in a hearing to determine the delinquency of a juvenile. J.J. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 660, 218 S.E.2d 668 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Confession admissible after juvenile opted not to have parent present. — Because the undisputed evidence established that a juvenile defendant was informed of the right to have a parent present during an interview with police in which a custodial statement was obtained, but did not invoke that right, there was no error in allowing the juvenile defendant's statement into evidence. Green v. State, 282 Ga. 672, 653 S.E.2d 23 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-47).

Confession admissible if parent present and rights protected. — Juvenile defendant's confession was admissible despite the fact that the defendant was not taken before an impartial juvenile intake officer but a member of the county police department since the defendant's mother was present during the juvenile's interrogation and it was not alleged that the officer failed to perform any duty imposed upon the officer. Worthy v. State, 253 Ga. 661, 324 S.E.2d 431 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Issue of whether officer to whom juvenile was taken and to whom the juvenile made a confession was a "juvenile court intake officer" did not affect the admissibility of the statement since Miranda warnings were given and the juvenile's mother was present. Houser v. State, 173 Ga. App. 378, 326 S.E.2d 513 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Language of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) requiring the bringing of a child before juvenile authorities was directory and did not serve to render inadmissible a juvenile's confession if the juvenile's rights were otherwise protected, such as if the juvenile's father was present and was continually apprised of the questioning. W.G.C. v. State, 173 Ga. App. 528, 327 S.E.2d 522 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Confession admissible despite technical violation. — Police officer's failure to bring juvenile initially to juvenile court did not render the 14-year old's confession inadmissible since the confession was obtained only after the juvenile waived the juvenile's rights knowingly and voluntarily, and with the knowledge and consent of both the juvenile's mother and legal guardian. In re J.D.G., 207 Ga. App. 698, 429 S.E.2d 118 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Since the defendant's statement was knowingly and intelligently given before officers had an opportunity to take the juvenile anywhere, former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-133, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) was neither implicated nor violated. McKoon v. State, 266 Ga. 149, 465 S.E.2d 272 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Juvenile court intake officers. — Officers of the juvenile division of the sheriff's department may not also serve as juvenile court intake officers for purposes of compliance with former statutory provisions. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-66 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

(b) Immediately after a child is taken into custody, every effort shall be made to contact such child's parents, guardian, or legal custodian.

(c) If a parent, guardian, or legal custodian has not assumed custody of his or her child at the end of the 12 hour period described in subsection (a) of this Code section, the court shall be notified and shall place such child in the least restrictive placement consistent with such child's needs for protection or control. In making its determination of placement, the court should consider the following placement options:

(1) In the custody of such child's parents, guardian, or legal custodian upon such person's promise to bring such child before the court when requested by the court;

(2) Before placing the child in the custody of DFCS, whether the child may be placed with a relative or fictive kin upon such person's promise to bring such child before the court when requested by the court;

(3) In the custody of DFCS which shall promptly arrange for foster care of such child;

The 2019 amendment, effective April 18, 2019, added paragraph (c)(2) and redesignated former paragraphs (c)(2) through (c)(4) as present paragraphs (c)(3) through (c)(5), respectively.

Code Commission notes. — Pursuant to Code Section 28-9-5, in 2013, "is" was inserted in subsection (b).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Time limits are jurisdictional and must be adhered to. — Time limits established by the General Assembly in the Juvenile Code are jurisdictional and must be strictly adhered to. A failure to comply with the time periods requires dismissal. R.A.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 366, 274 S.E.2d 752 (1980), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 66 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-19, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Juvenile court intake officers. — Officers of the juvenile division of the sheriff's department may not also serve as juvenile court intake officers for purposes of compliance with former statutory provisions. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-66 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

15-11-412. Temporary detention; place of custody.

(a) A child alleged to be a child in need of services may be held in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility until a continued custody hearing is held, provided that a detention assessment has been administered and such child is not held in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility for more than 24 hours and any of the following apply:

(1) It is alleged that such child is a runaway;

(2) It is alleged that such child is habitually disobedient of the reasonable and lawful commands of his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian and is ungovernable; or

(3) Such child has previously failed to appear at a scheduled hearing.

(b) A child alleged to be a child in need of services placed in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility pursuant to subsection (a) of this Code section may be appointed an attorney prior to the continued custody hearing.

(c) In no case shall a child alleged to be or adjudicated as a child in need of services in custody be detained in a jail, adult lock-up, or other adult detention facility.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability. — Contrary to the defendant's claims, neither former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-67 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-442) nor former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-48(e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-135, 15-11-400, and 15-11-412) applied to the defendant's case because both provisions applied when the child was found "unruly," and the defendant was adjudicated delinquent, not unruly. In the Interest of B. Q. L. E., 297 Ga. App. 273, 676 S.E.2d 742, cert. denied, No. S09C1197, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 787 (Ga. 2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-48).

Suspect may first be booked if rights are observed. — There was no violation of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-20 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-155, 15-11-400, 15-11-412, and 15-11-504) because a juvenile suspect was first taken to a police station for booking purposes, if the juvenile was advised of the juvenile's rights under that section to be questioned elsewhere; the juvenile signed a waiver of these rights on an "advice to juveniles" form and was detained at a youth development center. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Confession admissible if juvenile taken before county police. — Juvenile defendant's confession was admissible despite the fact that the juvenile was not taken before an impartial juvenile intake officer but a member of the county police department since the defendant's mother was present during the juvenile's interrogation and it was not alleged that the officer failed to perform any duty imposed upon the officer. Worthy v. State, 253 Ga. 661, 324 S.E.2d 431 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-20).

All detention facilities not supervised and controlled by juvenile courts. — Juvenile courts are not granted the power and authority to supervise and control all the various detention facilities. Jones v. State, 134 Ga. App. 611, 215 S.E.2d 483 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

No guarantee of all bed space desired by courts. — Subsection (a) of former section contemplated otherwise than that the Department of Human Resources guarantee all bed space desired by the juvenile courts. Jones v. State, 134 Ga. App. 611, 215 S.E.2d 483 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Confinement designation not exercise of court's jurisdiction. — Juvenile court's order for detention was merely an order pursuant to the former statute; designating the place of confinement was not an exercise of jurisdiction by that court. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Foster relationship gives rise to no state-created rights. — Children are placed in foster homes as an alternative to institutional care for what is clearly designed as a transitional phase in the child's life. Therefore, in the eyes of the state, which creates the foster relationship, the relationship is considered temporary at the outset and gives rise to no state-created rights in the foster parents. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 563 F.2d 1200 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 437 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 3103, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1141 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403, and pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-19, which were subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Juvenile intake officer to locate appropriate juvenile facility. — Juvenile intake officer should make all reasonable efforts to locate an appropriate juvenile facility for the detention of an allegedly delinquent child before determining that such a facility was "not available" for purposes of the former statute. 1978 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U78-13 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Juvenile court intake officers. — Officers of the juvenile division of the sheriff's department may not also serve as juvenile court intake officers for purposes of compliance with former statutory provisions. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-66 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

15-11-413. Continued custody hearing.

(a) If a child alleged to be a child in need of services is being held in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility, a continued custody hearing shall be held within 24 hours, excluding weekends and holidays. If such hearing is not held within the time specified, such child shall be released from temporary detention in accordance with subsection (c) of Code Section 15-11-411 and with authorization of the detaining authority.

(b) If a child alleged to be a child in need of services is not being held in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility and has not been released to the custody of such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian, a hearing shall be held within 72 hours, excluding weekends and holidays, after such child is placed in foster care.

15-11-414. Continued custody hearing; findings.

(a) At the commencement of a continued custody hearing, the court shall inform the parties of:

(1) The nature of the allegations;

(2) The nature of the proceedings;

(3) The possible consequences or dispositions that may apply to such child's case following adjudication; and

(4) Their due process rights, including the right to an attorney and to an appointed attorney; the privilege against self-incrimination; that he or she may remain silent and that anything said may be used against him or her; the right to confront anyone who testifies against him or her and to cross-examine any persons who appear to testify against him or her; the right to testify and to compel other witnesses to attend and testify in his or her own behalf; the right to a speedy adjudication hearing; and the right to appeal and be provided with a transcript for such purpose.

(b) At a continued custody hearing, the court shall determine whether there is probable cause to believe that a child has committed a status offense or is otherwise a child in need of services and that continued custody is necessary.

(c) If the court determines there is probable cause to believe that a child has committed a status offense or is otherwise in need of services, the court may order that such child:

(1) Be released to the custody of his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian; or

(2) Be placed in the least restrictive placement consistent with such child's need for protection and control as authorized by Code Section 15-11-411 and in accordance with Code Section 15-11-415. Before placing the child in the custody of DFCS, the court shall consider whether the child may be placed with a relative or fictive kin upon such person's promise to bring such child before the court when requested by the court. Upon finding that such a placement may be made, the court is authorized to order such a placement.

(d) If the court determines there is probable cause to believe that such child has committed a status offense or is otherwise in need of services, the court shall:

(1) Refer such child and his or her family for a community based risk reduction program; or

(2) Order that a petition for a child in need of services be filed and set a date for an adjudication hearing.

(e) Following a continued custody hearing, the court may detain a child alleged to be a child in need of services in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility for up to 24 hours, excluding weekends and legal holidays, only for the purpose of providing adequate time to arrange for an appropriate alternative placement pending the adjudication hearing.

(f) All orders shall contain written findings as to the form or conditions of a child's release. If a child alleged to be a child in need of services cannot be returned to the custody of his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian at the continued custody hearing, the court shall state the facts upon which the continued custody is based. The court shall make the following findings of fact referencing any and all evidence relied upon to make its determinations:

(1) Whether continuation in the home of such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian is contrary to such child's welfare; and

(2) Whether reasonable efforts have been made to safely maintain such child in the home of his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian and to prevent or eliminate the need for removal from such home. Such finding shall be made at the continued custody hearing if possible but in no case later than 60 days following such child's removal from his or her home.

The 2019 amendment, effective April 18, 2019, added the second and third sentences in paragraph (c)(2).

15-11-415. Detention decision; findings.

(a) Restraints on the freedom of a child prior to adjudication shall be imposed only when there is probable cause to believe that a child committed the act of which he or she is accused, there is clear and convincing evidence that such child's freedom should be restrained, that no less restrictive alternatives will suffice, and:

(1) Such child's detention or care is required to reduce the likelihood that he or she may inflict serious bodily harm on others during the interim period; or

(2) Such child's detention is necessary to secure his or her presence in court to protect the jurisdiction and processes of the court.

(b) A child alleged to be a child in need of services shall not be detained:

(1) To punish, treat, or rehabilitate such child;

(2) To allow his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian to avoid his or her legal responsibilities;

(3) To satisfy demands by a victim, law enforcement, or the community;

(4) To permit more convenient administrative access to him or her;

(5) To facilitate further interrogation or investigation; or

(6) Due to a lack of a more appropriate facility.

(c) Whenever a child alleged to be a child in need of services cannot be unconditionally released, conditional or supervised release that results in the least necessary interference with the liberty of such child shall be favored over more intrusive alternatives.

(d) Whenever the curtailment of the freedom of a child alleged to be a child in need of services is permitted, the exercise of authority shall reflect the following values:

(1) Respect for the privacy, dignity, and individuality of such child and his or her family;

(2) Protection of the psychological and physical health of such child;

(3) Tolerance of the diverse values and preferences among different groups and individuals;

(4) Assurance of equality of treatment by race, class, ethnicity, and sex;

(5) Avoidance of regimentation and depersonalization of such child;

(6) Avoidance of stigmatization of such child; and

(7) Assurance that such child has been informed of his or her right to consult with an attorney and that, if the child is an indigent person, an attorney will be provided.

(e) If a child alleged to be a child in need of services can remain in the custody of his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian through the provision of services to prevent the need for removal, the court shall order that such services shall be provided.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1401, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-18.1, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-46.1, which were subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Jurisdiction linked to petition. — Former statute indicated that assumption of jurisdiction by a juvenile court was linked to an authorized petition. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1401).

Imposition of interim control or detention. — Act of placing a juvenile in the back seat of a patrol car and taking the juvenile to police headquarters was not "the imposition of interim control or detention" within the meaning of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-18.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-415). In re C.W., 227 Ga. App. 763, 490 S.E.2d 442 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-18.1).

Probable cause found. — By restraining the child at an initial hearing, the juvenile court implicitly found probable cause, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-46.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-415). The juvenile court therefore erred in later deciding that a 10-day adjudication hearing was actually a detention hearing and in resetting the 10-day adjudication hearing. In the Interest of K.L., 303 Ga. App. 679, 694 S.E.2d 372 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-46.1).

PART 5

PETITION AND SUMMONS

15-11-420. Authority to file petition.

A petition alleging that a child is a child in need of services may be filed by a parent, a guardian, a legal custodian, a law enforcement officer, a guardian ad litem, an attorney who has knowledge of the facts alleged or is informed and believes that such facts are true, or a prosecuting attorney. Except when such petition has been filed by a prosecuting attorney, it shall not be accepted for filing unless the court or a person authorized by the court has determined and endorsed on the petition that the filing of the petition is in the best interests of the public and such child. When such petition is filed by a prosecuting attorney, the prosecuting attorney shall be authorized to conduct the proceedings on behalf of the state as parens patriae.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Former Code section was not unconstitutional on the ground that the former section violated due process of law by permitting the juvenile court to allow the case to be transferred to the superior court by merely disallowing the filing of a petition such as would vest jurisdiction in the juvenile court, without the benefit of any transfer hearing. Treatment as a juvenile is not an inherent right, but one granted by the General Assembly; therefore, the General Assembly may restrict or qualify that right as the General Assembly sees fit. Lane v. Jones, 244 Ga. 17, 257 S.E.2d 525 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1601).

No deprivation of due process in giving juvenile court judge discretion as to filing of petitions in that court. This section was for the best interests of the public, as well as the child. Lane v. Jones, 244 Ga. 17, 257 S.E.2d 525 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1601).

Party not deprived of due process by judge's refusal to accept petition. — Juvenile judge's refusal without a hearing to accept a petition alleging delinquency and thereby accept jurisdiction of a case does not deprive a party of due process of law. Lane v. Jones, 626 F.2d 1296 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 928, 101 S. Ct. 1384, 67 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1601).

Findings of likelihood of continued deprivation sufficient. — Because orders entered by the juvenile court before the Department of Human Resources (DHR) filed its termination petition related to that petition, specifically declaring the child to be deprived and that the child had been in the temporary legal custody of the DHR for over 14 months with no indication that the conditions of deprivation will be alleviated in the future, the court either substantially complied with or satisfied by implication the endorsement requirements showing that the filing of the petition was in the best interest of the public and the child. In the Interest of V.D.S., 284 Ga. App. 582, 644 S.E.2d 422 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 635 (Ga. 2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A., § 15-11-37).

Only petition can confer jurisdiction. — Juvenile court's issuance of order of detention did not result in that court's taking jurisdiction because only a "petition" within the meaning of the former section could commence a juvenile proceeding. Longshore v. State, 239 Ga. 437, 238 S.E.2d 22 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1601).

Purpose of requiring an endorsement in the petition is to assure that the court, or someone acting for the court, has made such a determination before proceedings are commenced against the child. Such a determination can be made by the court and entered in the record by way of the order of detention. The purpose of the statute being fulfilled, the petitions are not void for lack of an endorsement. J.G.B. v. State, 136 Ga. App. 75, 220 S.E.2d 79 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1601).

No custody habeas corpus proceeding without legal right of custody. — Habeas corpus proceeding to obtain the custody of minor children may not be brought by a person claiming no legal right of custody. This does not mean that a person concerned with the welfare of a child, who is being raised under conditions detrimental to the child's welfare, has no remedy. Spitz v. Holland, 243 Ga. 9, 252 S.E.2d 406 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1601).

Finding of deprivation if children's mother killed by father. — Regardless of the evidence, the court is authorized to find children to be deprived when their mother has been killed by their father. George v. Anderson, 135 Ga. App. 273, 217 S.E.2d 609 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Painter v. Barkley, 157 Ga. App. 69, 276 S.E.2d 850 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1601).

Construction with former provisions. — Nonprofit advocacy organization was authorized to file a deprivation petition which was separate and distinct from the initial deprivation adjudication since there is no statutory requirement that a petition for modification must be filed under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-312), instead of a deprivation petition under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-150, 15-11-390, and 15-11-420). In re A.V.B., 222 Ga. App. 241, 474 S.E.2d 114 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24).

Great aunt and uncle. — Child's great aunt and uncle had standing to bring a petition to terminate the parental rights of the child's father and mother. In re J.J., 225 Ga. App. 682, 484 S.E.2d 681 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-24).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24-2403, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

School official not liable for investigative referral of deprivation. — School official would not be held liable in a legal action founded upon the official's good faith referral of a child neglect, abuse, or abandonment situation to a county department of family and children services for investigation. 1963-65 Op. Att'y Gen. p. 746 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2403).

ALR. — Defense of infancy in juvenile delinquency proceedings, 83 A.L.R.4th 1135.

15-11-421. Time limitations for filing petition.

(a) If a child alleged to be a child in need of services is not released from temporary custody at a continued custody hearing, a petition seeking an adjudication that such child is a child is in need of services shall be filed within five days of such continued custody hearing.

(b) If a child alleged to be a child in need of services was never taken into temporary custody or is released from temporary custody at a continued custody hearing, a petition seeking an adjudication that such child is a child in need of services shall be filed:

(1) Within 30 days of the filing of the complaint with the juvenile court intake officer; or

(2) Within 30 days of such child's release from temporary custody.

(c) Upon a showing of good cause and notice to all parties, the court may grant a requested extension of time for filing a petition seeking an adjudication that a child is a child in need of services in accordance with the best interests of the child. The court shall issue a written order reciting the facts justifying the extension.

(d) If no petition seeking an adjudication that a child is a child in need of services is filed within the required time frame, the complaint may be dismissed without prejudice.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Time limits set forth in the former statute were jurisdictional and the adjudicatory hearing must be set for a time not later than that prescribed by statute. J.T.G. v. State, 141 Ga. App. 184, 233 S.E.2d 40 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Time limits established by the General Assembly in the Juvenile Code are jurisdictional and must be strictly adhered to. Crews v. Brantley County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 146 Ga. App. 408, 246 S.E.2d 426 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Language of former statute was mandatory and the time for the hearing must be set for a time not later than ten days after the petition was filed. J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701); Crews v. Brantley County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 146 Ga. App. 408, 246 S.E.2d 426 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701); Irvin v. Department of Human Resources, 159 Ga. App. 101, 282 S.E.2d 664 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Language of former subsection (a) of this section was mandatory and the adjudicatory hearing must be set for a time not later than that prescribed. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Goal sought to be accomplished by the ten-day hearing requirement for detained children was the same goal for the 60-day hearing requirement for non-detained children and, thus, the latter requirement was mandatory, rather than directory. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Time limits for speedy trial must be strictly adhered to. — If a legislative body has defined the right to speedy trial in terms of days, then the time limits must be strictly complied with. J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Trial court erred in setting the date for a hearing twelve days, rather than ten days, from the date of the filing of a petition charging a juvenile with the commission of the delinquent act of burglary. In re M.D.C., 214 Ga. App. 59, 447 S.E.2d 143 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Provision of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) that the time for a hearing shall not be later than ten days after filing of the petition if the child was in custody was the equivalent of a speedy trial demand which did not require a specific demand by the child. However, the statute's protection could be waived if not properly raised and, furthermore, the trial court had discretion to grant a continuance of a hearing properly set for a date within ten days from the filing of the petition. In re M.D.C., 214 Ga. App. 59, 447 S.E.2d 143 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) did not constitute a speedy trial demand and, therefore, the failure to comply with the former statute's provisions resulted in dismissal of the petition without prejudice. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Time limits satisfied by hearing adjudicatory in nature. — When a juvenile and the juvenile's parents were summoned to appear at a hearing to defend against charges and to show cause why the juvenile should not be dealt with according to law, were instructed to remain in attendance at the hearing until final adjudication of the petition, were informed of the possibility of a continuance, and were told that the state would seek transfer to the superior court, the hearing was adjudicatory in nature and satisfied the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26. In re L.A.E., 265 Ga. 698, 462 S.E.2d 148 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Construction with other law. — Because a juvenile's allegations that the state failed to comply with the procedural requirements under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49(c)(1) and (e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-102, 15-11-145, 15-11-151, 15-11-472, and 15-11-521) should have been raised in the superior court, and had no bearing on the validity of the delinquency petitions or the substantive charges against the juvenile in juvenile court, the court properly denied the presentation of evidence regarding the delinquency and substantive issues. In the Interest of K.C., 290 Ga. App. 416, 659 S.E.2d 821 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Arraignment during adjudicatory hearing. — In the absence of a transcript, a juvenile failed to establish that former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) was violated since a hearing was timely scheduled and held, an arraignment was conducted at the beginning, the juvenile requested legal counsel and was found eligible to receive counsel, and a continuance was granted so counsel could be secured; conducting an arraignment was not inconsistent with an adjudicatory hearing. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996), reversing In re R.D.F., 216 Ga. App. 563, 455 S.E.2d 77 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Arraignment hearing scheduled within the 60-day time period is not sufficient to satisfy the requirement that an adjudicatory hearing must be set within that period. In re R.O.B., 216 Ga. App. 181, 453 S.E.2d 776 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Hearing requirement applicable when child in detention when petition filed. — Ten-day hearing requirement was applicable when a child was "in detention" on the date the petition was filed in court. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Time for adjudicatory hearing is not mandatory. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441 and 15-11-582) required that an adjudicatory hearing date be set within ten days after a filing of a petition charging a minor with commission of delinquent acts, but does not require that a hearing be actually held within ten days after the filing of the petition. P.L.A. v. State, 172 Ga. App. 820, 324 S.E.2d 781 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); Johnson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 168, 358 S.E.2d 313 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); In re L.T.W., 211 Ga. App. 441, 439 S.E.2d 716 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); In re B.W.S., 265 Ga. 567, 458 S.E.2d 847 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Ten-day hearing rule was not absolute, and a continuance could be granted in the sound discretion of the trial court. Johnson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 168, 358 S.E.2d 313 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Adjudicatory hearing timely. — Juvenile court did not err in denying the defendant juvenile's motion to dismiss a petition because the adjudicatory hearing was set and held within ten days of the filing of the petition pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582), although the hearing was then continued, which was an action that was within the juvenile court's discretion. In the Interest of C.H., 306 Ga. App. 834, 703 S.E.2d 407 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Waiver of procedural requirements. — Time limits on setting juvenile hearings are mandatory, but procedural requirements can be waived. J.T.G. v. State, 141 Ga. App. 184, 233 S.E.2d 40 (1977) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); Cox v. Department of Human Resources, 148 Ga. App. 338, 250 S.E.2d 728 (1978), overruled on other grounds, 156 Ga. App. 338, 274 S.E.2d 728 (1980) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

With regard to a juvenile's adjudication of delinquency for acts which, if committed by an adult, would have constituted the offense of child molestation, the juvenile court did not err by denying the juvenile's motion to dismiss, which was based on an extended pre-trial detention as the juvenile and defense counsel agreed to a continuance and acquiesced in a hearing date delaying the adjudication for at least 48 days following the filing of the delinquency petition, which caused the juvenile to waive the right to complain that the adjudication hearing date was not set to occur in compliance with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582). However, the adjudication was reversed and the case was remanded to the juvenile court since the juvenile court erroneously applied a clear and convincing standard of proof and the standard of proof on charges of a criminal nature was the same as that used in criminal proceedings against adults, namely proof beyond a reasonable doubt. In the Interest of A.S., 293 Ga. App. 710, 667 S.E.2d 701 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Juvenile waived the right under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) to have an adjudicatory hearing within 10 days of the delinquency petition being filed by failing to object to the date proposed for the adjudicatory hearing, which was one month after the filing of the petition. In re A. T., 302 Ga. App. 713, 691 S.E.2d 642 (2010), overruled in part by Worthen v. State, 304 Ga. 862, 823 S.E.2d 291 (2019) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to comply with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) because the defendant's parent, the defendant's representative, and an attorney acknowledged that the parent did not object when, at the arraignment hearing, it was announced that the adjudicatory hearing would be set outside of the 60-day window; the parent also did not object within the statutorily prescribed 60-day-time period, and the motion to dismiss was filed outside of the 60-day requirement. In the Interest of I.M.W., 313 Ga. App. 624, 722 S.E.2d 586 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Hearing time limit can be waived. — If the party does not enter an objection during the course of the trial the party will not be heard to complain on appeal and if a hearing is set within the statutory time limit, the court may in the court's discretion grant a continuance. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code § 24A-1701); In re J.B., 183 Ga. App. 229, 358 S.E.2d 620, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 906, 358 S.E.2d 620 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Juvenile was entitled to a copy of the delinquency petition filed against the juvenile, and pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), the juvenile had a right to receive the petition at least 24 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing; however, the juvenile waived any objection based on the grounds of improper service since the juvenile received notice right before the hearing as the juvenile did not make an objection or request a continuance on the basis that the juvenile was unprepared. In the Interest of E.S., 262 Ga. App. 768, 586 S.E.2d 691 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Continuance requested by parent did not violate time limit. — When a hearing on a deprivation petition was held within ten days of the petition's filing, but the case was continued for eight days because the mother's counsel had a scheduling conflict, there was no violation of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a)'s (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) ten-day time limit. In the Interest of C.R., 292 Ga. App. 346, 665 S.E.2d 39 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Parent's right to appeal delinquency adjudication. — As parties to their child's delinquency action pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-160, 15-11-423, and 15-11-530), the child's parents had the right to appeal the juvenile court's judgment and to participate in the appellate process. In the Interest of J.L.B., 280 Ga. App. 556, 634 S.E.2d 514 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Adjudication hearing required after an initial hearing. — By restraining the child at an initial hearing, the juvenile court implicitly found probable cause, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-46.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-415 and 15-11-503). The juvenile court therefore erred in later deciding that a 10-day adjudication hearing was actually a detention hearing and in resetting the 10-day adjudication hearing. In the Interest of K.L., 303 Ga. App. 679, 694 S.E.2d 372 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Delay negotiated by defendant waives time limit. — If the statute does not require dismissal as a matter of law regardless of the reason for the delay, it is clear that a delay negotiated and obtained by the defendant personally would constitute a waiver of the 60-day requirement. E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 724, 215 S.E.2d 732 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Proceeding null when no waiver of rights nor proper service. — If, in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of the right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and if the hearing is not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding is an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Failure to follow mandated procedures warrants dismissal without prejudice of a petition alleging deprivation of a child. Another petition can be filed without delay if there is reason to believe the child is being neglected or abused. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 140 Ga. App. 175, 230 S.E.2d 139 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Motion to dismiss necessary if no provision for automatic dismissal. — If there is no provision in the statute for automatic dismissal, there should be a motion to dismiss directed to the trial judge and it should appear that the delay is not due to the actions of the defendant. E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 724, 215 S.E.2d 732 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Allegation of failure to comply with time requirements not appealable. — If the defendant, prior to a hearing to determine the defendant's delinquency, appealed from the juvenile court's denial of the defendant's motion to dismiss based solely upon an alleged failure to comply with the time requirements of subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582), the Court of Appeals dismissed the appeal since a motion under that Code section cannot be analogized to the denial of a O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 motion and did not involve a question of speedy trial rights which would be directly appealable. In re M.O.B., 190 Ga. App. 474, 378 S.E.2d 898 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Violation of ten-day mandate does not deprive jurisdiction. — Violation of the statutory mandate to set the hearing date not later than ten days after filing of the petition if the child is in detention would not deprive the court of jurisdiction that would otherwise exist. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Legislature intended incarceration be limited according to calendar days. — General Assembly intended that a juvenile who is incarcerated after the court has had a preliminary detention hearing should have the juvenile's incarceration limited and the juvenile's fate determined according to calendar days, not "working days." J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

No habeas corpus if compliance with statutory requirements. — Habeas corpus will not lie if the juvenile court, after notice and hearing, enters an order pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24-2409 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-211, 15-11-212, and 15-11-215). Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Effect of failure to show compliance with hearing requirement. — If the parents, in their petition seeking return of their children, allege that there has been no hearing as required by statute, and the record of prior juvenile court proceedings is silent as to whether such a hearing was ever set, continued, or held, and since the hearing requirement was mandatory, the defendant County Family and Children Services Department did not show compliance with the hearing requirement, and the parents stated claims for habeas relief which may be granted. Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Permitting state's mid-trial amendment of petition to change the charge against the juvenile from a misdemeanor to a felony was error since the amendment was done without notice and provision of a continuance to allow additional time for preparation of a defense. In re D.W, 232 Ga. App. 777, 503 S.E.2d 647 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Illegal detention. — If a petition was not presented within 72 hours of a detention hearing as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21(e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-145, 15-11-400, 15-11-413, 15-11-414, and 15-11-472), the state cannot thus illegally detain the child and then render such a jurisdictional defect harmless by setting the adjudication hearing within 13 days (72 hours plus 10 days) of the detention hearing under subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582). In re B.A.P., 180 Ga. App. 433, 349 S.E.2d 218 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

15-11-422. Content of petitions.

(a) A petition seeking an adjudication that a child is a child in need of services shall be verified and may be on information and belief. It shall set forth plainly and with particularity:

(1) The facts which bring a child within the jurisdiction of the court, with a statement that it is in the best interests of the child and the public that the proceeding be brought;

(2) The name, date of birth, and residence address of the child alleged to be a child in need of services;

(3) The name and residence address of the parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the child named in the petition; or, if such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian does not reside or cannot be found within the state or if such place of residence address is unknown, the name of any known adult relative of such child residing within the county or, if there is none, the known adult relative of such child residing nearest to the location of the court;

(4) The name and age of any other family member of such child living within such child's home;

(5) Whether all available and appropriate attempts to encourage voluntary use of community services by such child's family have been exhausted; and

(6) Whether any of the information required by this subsection is unknown.

(b) If a petition seeking an adjudication that a child is a child in need of services is based on a complaint filed by a school official, such petition shall be dismissed unless it includes information which shows that:

(1) The legally liable school district has sought to resolve the expressed problem through available educational approaches; and

(2) The school district has sought to engage such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian in solving the problem but any such individual has been unwilling or unable to do so; that the problem remains; and that court intervention is needed.

(c) If a petition seeking an adjudication that a child is a child in need of services is based on a complaint filed by a school official involving a child who is eligible or suspected to be eligible for services under the federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act or Section 504 of the federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973, such petition shall be dismissed unless it includes information which demonstrates that the legally liable school district:

(1) Has determined that such child is eligible or suspected to be eligible under the federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act or Section 504 of the federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973; and

(2) Has reviewed for appropriateness such child's current Individualized Education Program (IEP) and placement and has made modifications where appropriate.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-25 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-38.1, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Juvenile petition must satisfy "due process." — Although a juvenile petition does not have to be drafted with the exactitude of a criminal accusation, the petition must satisfy "due process." T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Since the state's petition failed to set forth in ordinary and concise language the facts demonstrating the nature of the parent's alleged failure to provide proper parental care or control, the parent lacked sufficient information to enable the parent to prepare a defense, and this amounted to a denial of due process. In re D.R.C., 191 Ga. App. 278, 381 S.E.2d 426 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

To meet constitutional requirement of due process the language of a juvenile petition must pass two tests: (1) the petition must contain sufficient factual details to inform the juvenile of the nature of the offense; and (2) the petition must provide data adequate to enable the accused to prepare a defense. T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Allege with particularity. — Due process requires that the petition alleging delinquency must set forth with specificity the alleged violation of law either in the language of the particular section, or so plainly that the nature of the offense charged may be easily understood by the child and the child's parents or guardian. D.P. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 680, 200 S.E.2d 499 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Petition filed alleging delinquency, deprivation, or unruliness must set forth alleged misconduct with particularity. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Insufficient notice to juvenile of alleged offense. — If a juvenile is brought to trial on a petition alleging delinquency based on a violation of former Code 1933, § 26-1601 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1) but was adjudicated delinquent for violating former Code 1933, § 26-1806 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-8-7), there was insufficient notice to the juvenile of the offense alleged to be the basis of the juvenile's delinquency and the trial court must be reversed. D.P. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 680, 200 S.E.2d 499 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Statement of custody irrelevant if jurisdiction otherwise exists. — If jurisdiction otherwise existed, such as if the action was brought in the county of the residence of both mother and son, then the requirement in paragraph (4) of former Code 1933, § 24A-1603 had no relevancy to the right of the trial court to handle the case. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Assumption of jurisdiction linked to authorized petition. — An order for detention clearly did not meet the requirements of a petition filed pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24A-1603 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-152, 15-11-280, 15-11-390, 15-11-420, 15-11-422, and 15-11-522) to commence proceedings under former Code 1933, § 24A-1601 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-420), and the assumption of jurisdiction by the juvenile court is linked to the authorized petition. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

In a hearing on parental custody in a divorce action, the trial court erred in awarding custody of the parties' minor children to the Department of Family and Children Services based upon findings that the children were deprived and the parents unfit because the mother had no notice that the superior court judge might award custody of the children to a third party based upon standards of deprivation. Watkins v. Watkins, 266 Ga. 269, 466 S.E.2d 860 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

Preparation and verification. — Because counsel for the Department of Children & Family Services stated to the court that counsel prepared the termination petition, that the petition was reviewed, verified, and then signed by counsel the next day, this was sufficient to comply with the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-152, 15-11-280, 15-11-390, 15-11-422, and 15-11-522). In re A.K.M., 235 Ga. App. 853, 510 S.E.2d 611 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

Service by correctional officer upon incarcerated father. — Personal service of a summons and a petition of deprivation by a correctional officer upon an incarcerated father was sufficient as the service procedures in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1 et seq., were not adopted nor were binding on the juvenile court, and the correctional officer was acting under the direction of the court for the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). In the Interest of A.J.M., 277 Ga. App. 646, 627 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38.1).

15-11-423. Issuance of summons.

(a) The court shall direct the issuance of a summons to the child alleged to be a child in need of services, his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian, DFCS and any other public agencies or institutions providing services, and any other persons who appear to the court to be proper or necessary parties to such child in need of services proceeding requiring them to appear before the court at the time fixed to answer the allegations of the petition seeking an adjudication that a child is in need of services. A copy of such petition shall accompany the summons.

(b) The summons shall state that a party is entitled to an attorney in the proceedings and that the court will appoint an attorney if the party is an indigent person.

(c) A party other than a child may waive service of summons by written stipulation or by voluntary appearance at the hearing.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Waiver of notice. — In a juvenile delinquency case, although neither defendants nor their parents were served with copies of the petitions and hearing summonses as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-162, 15-11-281, and 15-11-423, 15-11-425, and 15-11-532), the defendants and their parents appeared at the hearings with their attorneys without objecting to lack of notice; thus, the defendants and their parents waived the notice issue. In the Interest of T.K.L., 277 Ga. App. 461, 627 S.E.2d 98 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Implied waiver of service on behalf of child. — If a child is present at a juvenile court hearing with the child's parent and counsel, the child's parent impliedly may waive service of a summons on a child's behalf by voluntary appearance at a hearing without objection to lack of service. Fulton County Detention Center v. Robertson, 249 Ga. 864, 295 S.E.2d 101 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Parent's right to appeal delinquency adjudication. — As parties to their child's delinquency action pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-160, 15-11-423, and 15-11-530), the child's parents had the right to appeal the juvenile court's judgment and to participate in the appellate process. In the Interest of J.L.B., 280 Ga. App. 556, 634 S.E.2d 514 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Proceeding null when no waiver of rights nor proper service. — If, in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of the right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and if the hearing is not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding is an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

No fixed date on summons. — Summons served upon a parent did not have to require the parent to appear in court on any fixed date in order to answer allegations in a petition to terminate the parent's parental rights. In re W.R.S., 213 Ga. App. 616, 445 S.E.2d 367 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

If there was no service of process and notice as required by former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-26(b) and 15-11-27(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-1 et seq.) and there was no valid waiver of notice of the pending charge by service of process or otherwise, the entire hearing is a nullity. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Waiver of right to prior notice of charge. — If neither the juvenile nor the mother were represented by counsel at the dispositional hearing, neither party knew the nature of the charge filed against the minor, and neither party knew of the serious consequences which may result in the case of an adverse adjudication of the petition filed against the juvenile, it is highly unlikely that the parties understood the significance of waiving their right to prior notice of the pending charge. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397,

349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

15-11-424. Service of summons.

(a) If a party to be served with a summons pursuant to Code Section 15-11-423 is within this state and can be found, the summons shall be served upon him or her personally as soon as possible and at least 72 hours before the adjudication hearing.

(b) If a party to be served is within this state and cannot be found but his or her address is known or can be ascertained with due diligence, the summons shall be served upon such party at least five days before an adjudication hearing by mailing him or her a copy by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested.

(c) If a party to be served is outside this state but his or her address is known or can be ascertained with due diligence, service of the summons shall be made at least five days before an adjudication hearing either by delivering a copy to such party personally or by mailing a copy to him or her by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested.

(d) Service of the summons may be made by any suitable person under the direction of the court.

(e) The court may authorize payment from county funds of the costs of service and of necessary travel expenses incurred by persons summoned or otherwise required to appear at the hearing on the petition seeking an adjudication that a child is in need of services.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 24-2406 and 24A-1702, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-27 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-39.1, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

There was no equal protection violation in framework of this former Code section since similarly situated residents and nonresidents were accorded equal treatment and it was only in cases when laws were applied differently to different persons under the same or similar circumstances that the equal protection of the law was denied. In re M.A.C., 244 Ga. 645, 261 S.E.2d 590 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1702).

Service of summons and termination petition was ineffective since, even though the summons was left at the mother's residence, there was no evidence that the summons was left with a statutorily appropriate person, and service of the petition the day before the hearing was not timely. In re D.R.W., 229 Ga. App. 571, 494 S.E.2d 379 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-27).

Service by correctional officer on incarcerated parent. — Personal service of a summons and a petition of deprivation, by a correctional officer upon an incarcerated parent, was sufficient as the service procedures in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1 et seq., were not adopted nor were binding on the juvenile court, and the correctional officer was acting under the direction of the court for the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). In the Interest of A.J.M., 277 Ga. App. 646, 627 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Service not perfected on incarcerated person. — Deprivation order had to be vacated and the case remanded because service of the deprivation petition on the parent in question, who was incarcerated, was not perfected in accordance with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). The parent had not waived personal service and personal service was not waived simply by actual notice having been achieved. In the Interest of A. R., 296 Ga. App. 62, 673 S.E.2d 586 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Requirement of "reasonable effort" to find party. — Former statute required a showing by the department that a "reasonable effort" had been made to find a putative father or ascertain his address. In re J.B., 140 Ga. App. 668, 231 S.E.2d 821 (1976) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

If there was no service of process and notice as required by the former provisions and there was no valid waiver of notice of the pending charge by service of process or otherwise, the entire hearing is a nullity. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Waiver of right to notice. — If neither the juvenile nor the juvenile's mother were represented by counsel at the dispositional hearing, neither party knew the nature of the charge filed against the minor, and neither party knew of the serious consequences which may result in the case of an adverse adjudication of the petition filed against the juvenile, it is highly unlikely that the parties understood the significance of waiving the parties right to prior notice of the pending charge. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Timeliness of petition. — Juvenile was entitled to a copy of the delinquency petition filed against the juvenile, and pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), the juvenile had a right to receive the petition at least 24 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing; however, the juvenile waived any objection the juvenile had on the grounds of improper service since the juvenile received the petition right before the hearing as the juvenile did not make an objection or request a continuance on the basis that the juvenile was unprepared. In the Interest of E.S., 262 Ga. App. 768, 586 S.E.2d 691 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Permitting state's mid-trial amendment of petition to change the charge against the juvenile from a misdemeanor to a felony was error since the amendment was done without notice and provision of a continuance to allow additional time for preparation of a defense. In re D.W, 232 Ga. App. 777, 503 S.E.2d 647 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Reliance on section by trial court misplaced. — Because former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282) related specifically to service in termination-of-parental-rights proceedings, the trial court's reliance on the service provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), a statute dealing with service in juvenile court proceedings generally, was misplaced; moreover, for purposes of statutory interpretation, a specific statute prevailed over a general statute, absent any indication of a contrary legislative intent. In the Interest of C.S., 282 Ga. 7, 644 S.E.2d 812 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

15-11-425. Sanctions for failure to obey summons.

(a) In the event a parent, guardian, or legal custodian of a child alleged to be a child in need of services willfully fails to appear personally at a hearing on the petition seeking an adjudication that a child is a child in need of services after being ordered to so appear or such parent, guardian, or legal custodian willfully fails to bring such child to such hearing after being so directed, the court may issue a rule nisi against the person directing the person to appear before the court to show cause why he or she should not be held in contempt of court.

(b) If a parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the child alleged to be a child in need of services fails to appear in response to an order to show cause, the court may issue a bench warrant directing that such parent, guardian, or legal custodian be brought before the court without delay to show cause why he or she should not be held in contempt and the court may enter any order authorized by the provisions of Code Section 15-11-31.

(c) In the event an agency representative willfully fails to appear at a hearing on the petition seeking an adjudication that a child is a child in need of services after being ordered to so appear, the court may direct the appropriate agency representative to appear before the court to show cause why a contempt order should not be issued.

(d) If a child 16 years of age or older fails to appear at a hearing on a petition seeking an adjudication that such child is a child in need of services after being ordered to so appear, the court may issue a bench warrant requiring that such child be brought before the court without delay and the court may enter any order authorized by the provisions of Code Section 15-11-31.

(e) If there is sworn testimony that a child 14 years of age but not yet 16 years of age willfully refuses to appear at a hearing on a petition seeking an adjudication that such child is a child in need of services after being ordered to so appear, the court may issue a bench warrant requiring that such child be brought before the court and the court may enter any order authorized by the provisions of Code Section 15-11-31.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — Many of the following annotations should be examined in light of the amendment to Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. XIV, Para. VI (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. VI) which took effect November 1, 1981.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-15 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-29, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Venue exists despite absence of child. — If a particular county is the residence of the child and of the child's mother, venue properly exists there for temporary custody actions even if the child was not personally present within the boundaries of that county on the date of the filing of the petition to the court for temporary custody. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Waiver of notice. — In a juvenile delinquency case, although neither defendants nor their parents were served with copies of the petitions and hearing summonses as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-162, 15-11-281, 15-11-423, 15-11-425, and 15-11-532), the defendants and their parents appeared at the hearings with their attorneys without objecting to lack of notice; thus, the defendants and their parents waived the notice issue. In the Interest of T.K.L., 277 Ga. App. 461, 627 S.E.2d 98 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Implied waiver of service on behalf of child. — If a child is present at a juvenile court hearing with the child's parent and counsel, the child's parent impliedly may waive service of a summons on a child's behalf by voluntary appearance at a hearing without objection to lack of service. Fulton County Detention Center v. Robertson, 249 Ga. 864, 295 S.E.2d 101 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Parent's right to appeal delinquency adjudication. — As parties to their child's delinquency action pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-160, 15-11-423, and 15-11-530), the child's parents had the right to appeal the juvenile court's judgment and to participate in the appellate process. In the Interest of J.L.B., 280 Ga. App. 556, 634 S.E.2d 514 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Proceeding null when no waiver of rights nor proper service. — If, in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of the right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and if the hearing is not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding is an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

PART 6

ADJUDICATION, DISPOSITION, AND REVIEWS

15-11-440. Standard of proof.

The petitioner, or prosecuting attorney when representing the state, has the burden of proving the allegations of a child in need of services petition by clear and convincing evidence.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Standard of proof on question of delinquency or termination. — An "any evidence" standard or "preponderance of the evidence" standard is inadequate in dealing with a finding of deprivation of a child or termination of parental rights and would violate U.S. Const., amend. 14. In re Suggs, 249 Ga. 365, 291 S.E.2d 233 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33); In re J.K.D., 211 Ga. App. 776, 440 S.E.2d 524 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Standard of proof on charges of criminal nature against juvenile is the same as that used in criminal proceedings against adults; proof must be beyond a reasonable doubt. M.W.W. v. State, 136 Ga. App. 472, 221 S.E.2d 669 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933 § 24A-2201); In re M.M., 235 Ga. App. 109, 508 S.E.2d 484 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

With regard to a juvenile's adjudication of delinquency for acts which, if committed by an adult, would have constituted the offense of child molestation, the juvenile court did not err by denying the juvenile's motion to dismiss, which was based on an extended pre-trial detention as the juvenile and defense counsel agreed to a continuance and acquiesced in a hearing date delaying the adjudication for at least 48 days following the filing of the delinquency petition, which caused the juvenile to waive the right to complain that the adjudication hearing date was not set to occur in compliance with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39. However, the adjudication was reversed and the case was remanded to the juvenile court since the juvenile court erroneously applied a clear and convincing standard of proof and the standard of proof on charges of a criminal nature was the same as that used in criminal proceedings against adults, namely proof beyond a reasonable doubt. In the Interest of A.S., 293 Ga. App. 710, 667 S.E.2d 701 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-65).

Clear and convincing evidence required for termination of parental rights. — Termination of parental rights is a severe measure. If a third party sues the custodial parent to obtain custody of a child and to terminate the parent's custodial rights in the child, the parent is entitled to custody of the child unless the third party shows by "clear and convincing evidence" that the parent is unfit or otherwise not entitled to custody under O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1 and 19-7-4. Subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-440 and 15-11-581) required the court after a hearing to find "clear and convincing evidence" of "deprivation" before an order of deprivation may be entered. Heath v. McGuire, 167 Ga. App. 489, 306 S.E.2d 741 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Clear and convincing evidence required for deprivation. — If deprivation formed the predicate upon which a third party sought a temporary transfer of the child's legal custody, in order to support such a disposition the child must first be adjudicated to be a deprived child. By statute, that finding of deprivation must be made by "clear and convincing evidence." In re J.C.P., 167 Ga. App. 572, 307 S.E.2d 1 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33); In re J.T.M., 200 Ga. App. 636, 409 S.E.2d 256 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33); but see In re A.W., 240 Ga. App. 259, 523 S.E.2d 88 (1999).

Delinquency found when delinquent acts corroborated by confession. — Child's confession out of court corroborated by evidence that the stolen items were found in the child's possession within a few hours of the theft constituted sufficient proof to support a finding of delinquency. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Purpose of division of juvenile trials into two phases. — In dividing juvenile trials into two phases lawmakers intended to give the juvenile judge an opportunity to conduct the "functional equivalent" of a regular trial (the adjudicatory hearing) in a manner which would satisfy the required constitutional procedures concomitant with the usual legal rules, such as those dealing with admissibility of evidence, proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and similar requirements applicable to adults. Thereafter, at the dispositional phase, the judge was to explore all available additional avenues, including psychiatric and sociological studies, which would enable the judge to provide a solution for the youngster and the family aimed at making the child a secure law-abiding member of society. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

During adjudicatory phase, rules of evidence generally prevail. In the second (dispositional) phase, the court hears virtually all evidence which is material and relevant to the issue of disposition. J.B. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 545, 228 S.E.2d 712 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Dispositional hearing not necessary for termination due to deprivation. — If a petition for the termination of parental rights alleged only that the children were deprived, not delinquent or unruly, it was not necessary for the juvenile judge to hold a dispositional hearing. In re J.C., 242 Ga. 737, 251 S.E.2d 299 (1978), appeal dismissed, 441 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2046, 60 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Right to cross-examine afforded upon request. — Right to cross-examine adverse witnesses guaranteed by former Code 1933, § 24A-2002 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-19 and 15-11-28) was afforded upon request according to former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-400, 15-11-440, 15-11-581, 15-11-582, and 15-11-600). A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Record must show clear and convincing evidence which authorized finding. — Just as former statute did not require the court to include a specific statement as to the standard of proof of delinquency in the adjudication order, no such explicit finding is required as to the need for treatment or rehabilitation as long as the record showed that there was clear and convincing evidence which authorized the judge's implicit finding.

A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Explicit statutory findings required by former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-440, 15-11-581, and 15-11-600) should be made in accordance with former Code 1933, § 81A-152 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52). Crook v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 137 Ga. App 817, 224 S.E.2d 806 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

In ruling on deprivation petitions, findings of fact should be made in accordance with former Code 1933, § 81A-152 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52). W.R.G. v. State, 142 Ga. App. 81, 235 S.E.2d 43 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201); In re A.A.G., 143 Ga. App. 648, 239 S.E.2d 697 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Disposition made following finding of delinquency. — Decision that the child is in need of treatment or rehabilitation, based upon clear and convincing evidence, is made following a finding of delinquency. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Dispositional hearings held in county of juvenile's residence. — Dispositional hearings must be held in the county of the juvenile's residence to meet state constitutional requirements. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

No need to repeat evidence presented during adjudicatory portion. — There was no error in refusing to have the dispositional phase include a repetition of the same evidence and witnesses previously presented during the adjudicatory portion. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Order for transfer for further disposition is not final appealable judgment. — When, pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-400, 15-11-440, 15-11-478, 15-11-581, 15-11-582, and 15-11-600), an order was entered adjudicating a juvenile guilty of an offense and, under the authority of former Code 1933, § 24A-1201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-401 and 15-11-490) jurisdiction was transferred to the county of the residence for further disposition, that order was not a final judgment appealable under former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-34 and 5-6-35). D.C.E. v. State, 130 Ga. App. 724, 204 S.E.2d 481 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Time limits set forth in the former statute were jurisdictional and the adjudicatory hearing must be set for a time not later than that prescribed by statute. J.T.G. v. State, 141 Ga. App. 184, 233 S.E.2d 40 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Time limits established by the General Assembly in the Juvenile Code are jurisdictional and must be strictly adhered to. Crews v. Brantley County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 146 Ga. App. 408, 246 S.E.2d 426 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Language of former statute was mandatory and the time for the hearing must be set for a time not later than ten days after the petition was filed. J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701); Crews v. Brantley County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 146 Ga. App. 408, 246 S.E.2d 426 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701); Irvin v. Department of Human Resources, 159 Ga. App. 101, 282 S.E.2d 664 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Language of former subsection (a) of this section was mandatory and the adjudicatory hearing must be set for a time not later than that prescribed. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Goal sought to be accomplished by the ten-day hearing requirement for detained children was the same goal for the 60-day hearing requirement for non-detained children and, thus, the latter requirement was mandatory, rather than directory. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Time limits for speedy trial must be strictly adhered to. — If a legislative body has defined the right to speedy trial in terms of days, then the time limits must be strictly complied with. J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Trial court erred in setting the date for a hearing twelve days, rather than ten days, from the date of the filing of a petition charging a juvenile with the commission of the delinquent act of burglary. In re M.D.C., 214 Ga. App. 59, 447 S.E.2d 143 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Provision of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) that the time for a hearing shall not be later than ten days after filing of the petition if the child was in custody was the equivalent of a speedy trial demand which did not require a specific demand by the child. However, the statute's protection could be waived if not properly raised and, furthermore, the trial court had discretion to grant a continuance of a hearing properly set for a date within ten days from the filing of the petition. In re M.D.C., 214 Ga. App. 59, 447 S.E.2d 143 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) did not constitute a speedy trial demand and, therefore, the failure to comply with the former statute's provisions resulted in dismissal of the petition without prejudice. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Time limits satisfied by hearing adjudicatory in nature. — When a juvenile and the juvenile's parents were summoned to appear at a hearing to defend against charges and to show cause why the juvenile should not be dealt with according to law, were instructed to remain in attendance at the hearing until final adjudication of the petition, were informed of the possibility of a continuance, and were told that the state would seek transfer to the superior court, the hearing was adjudicatory in nature and satisfied the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26. In re L.A.E., 265 Ga. 698, 462 S.E.2d 148 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Construction with other law. — Because a juvenile's allegations that the state failed to comply with the procedural requirements under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49(c)(1) and (e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-102, 15-11-145, 15-11-151, 15-11-472, and 15-11-521) should have been raised in the superior court, and had no bearing on the validity of the delinquency petitions or the substantive charges against the juvenile in juvenile court, the court properly denied the presentation of evidence regarding the delinquency and substantive issues. In the Interest of K.C., 290 Ga. App. 416, 659 S.E.2d 821 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Arraignment during adjudicatory hearing. — In the absence of a transcript, a juvenile failed to establish that former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) was violated since a hearing was timely scheduled and held, an arraignment was conducted at the beginning, the juvenile requested legal counsel and was found eligible to receive counsel, and a continuance was granted so counsel could be secured; conducting an arraignment was not inconsistent with an adjudicatory hearing. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996), reversing In re R.D.F., 216 Ga. App. 563, 455 S.E.2d 77 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Arraignment hearing scheduled within the 60-day time period is not sufficient to satisfy the requirement that an adjudicatory hearing must be set within that period. In re R.O.B., 216 Ga. App. 181, 453 S.E.2d 776 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Hearing requirement applicable when child in detention when petition filed. — Ten-day hearing requirement was applicable when a child was "in detention" on the date the petition was filed in court. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Time for adjudicatory hearing is not mandatory. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441 and 15-11-582) required that an adjudicatory hearing date be set within ten days after a filing of a petition charging a minor with commission of delinquent acts, but does not require that a hearing be actually held within ten days after the filing of the petition. P.L.A. v.

State, 172 Ga. App. 820, 324 S.E.2d 781 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); Johnson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 168, 358 S.E.2d 313 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); In re L.T.W., 211 Ga. App. 441, 439 S.E.2d 716 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); In re B.W.S., 265 Ga. 567, 458 S.E.2d 847 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Ten-day hearing rule was not absolute, and a continuance could be granted in the sound discretion of the trial court. Johnson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 168, 358 S.E.2d 313 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Adjudicatory hearing timely. — Juvenile court did not err in denying the defendant juvenile's motion to dismiss a petition because the adjudicatory hearing was set and held within ten days of the filing of the petition pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582), although the hearing was then continued, which was an action that was within the juvenile court's discretion. In the Interest of C.H., 306 Ga. App. 834, 703 S.E.2d 407 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Waiver of procedural requirements. — Time limits on setting juvenile hearings are mandatory, but procedural requirements can be waived. J.T.G. v. State, 141 Ga. App. 184, 233 S.E.2d 40 (1977) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26). Cox v. Department of Human Resources, 148 Ga. App. 338, 250 S.E.2d 728 (1978), overruled on other grounds, 156 Ga. App. 338, 274 S.E.2d 728 (1980) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

With regard to a juvenile's adjudication of delinquency for acts which, if committed by an adult, would have constituted the offense of child molestation, the juvenile court did not err by denying the juvenile's motion to dismiss, which was based on an extended pre-trial detention as the juvenile and defense counsel agreed to a continuance and acquiesced in a hearing date delaying the adjudication for at least 48 days following the filing of the delinquency petition, which caused the juvenile to waive the right to complain that the adjudication hearing date was not set to occur in compliance with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582). However, the adjudication was reversed and the case was remanded to the juvenile court since the juvenile court erroneously applied a clear and convincing standard of proof and the standard of proof on charges of a criminal nature was the same as that used in criminal proceedings against adults, namely proof beyond a reasonable doubt. In the Interest of A.S., 293 Ga. App. 710, 667 S.E.2d 701 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Juvenile waived the right under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) to have an adjudicatory hearing within 10 days of the delinquency petition being filed by failing to object to the date proposed for the adjudicatory hearing, which was one month after the filing of the petition. In re A. T., 302 Ga. App. 713, 691 S.E.2d 642 (2010), overruled in part by Worthen v. State, 304 Ga. 862, 823 S.E.2d 291 (2019) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to comply with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) because the defendant's parent, the defendant's representative, and an attorney acknowledged that the parent did not object when, at the arraignment hearing, it was announced that the adjudicatory hearing would be set outside of the 60-day window; the parent also did not object within the statutorily prescribed 60-day-time period, and the motion to dismiss was filed outside of the 60-day requirement. In the Interest of I.M.W., 313 Ga. App. 624, 722 S.E.2d 586 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Hearing time limit can be waived. — If the party does not enter an objection during the course of the trial the party will not be heard to complain on appeal and if a hearing is set within the statutory time limit, the court may in the court's discretion grant a continuance. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code § 24A-1701); In re J.B., 183 Ga. App. 229, 358 S.E.2d 620, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 906, 358 S.E.2d 620 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Juvenile was entitled to a copy of the delinquency petition filed against the juvenile, and pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), the juvenile had a right to receive the petition at least 24 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing; however, the juvenile waived any objection based on the grounds of improper service since the juvenile received notice right before the hearing as the juvenile did not make an objection or request a continuance on the basis that the juvenile was unprepared. In the Interest of E.S., 262 Ga. App. 768, 586 S.E.2d 691 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Continuance requested by parent did not violate time limit. — When a hearing on a deprivation petition was held within ten days of the petition's filing, but the case was continued for eight days because the mother's counsel had a scheduling conflict, there was no violation of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a)'s (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) ten-day time limit. In the Interest of C.R., 292 Ga. App. 346, 665 S.E.2d 39 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Parent's right to appeal delinquency adjudication. — As parties to their child's delinquency action pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-160, 15-11-423, and 15-11-530), the child's parents had the right to appeal the juvenile court's judgment and to participate in the appellate process. In the Interest of J.L.B., 280 Ga. App. 556, 634 S.E.2d 514 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Adjudication hearing required after an initial hearing. — By restraining the child at an initial hearing, the juvenile court implicitly found probable cause, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-46.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-415 and 15-11-503). The juvenile court therefore erred in later deciding that a 10-day adjudication hearing was actually a detention hearing and in resetting the 10-day adjudication hearing. In the Interest of K.L., 303 Ga. App. 679, 694 S.E.2d 372 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Delay negotiated by defendant waives time limit. — If the statute does not require dismissal as a matter of law regardless of the reason for the delay, it is clear that a delay negotiated and obtained by the defendant personally would constitute a waiver of the 60-day requirement. E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 724, 215 S.E.2d 732 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Proceeding null when no waiver of rights nor proper service. — If, in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of the right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and if the hearing is not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding is an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Failure to follow mandated procedures warrants dismissal without prejudice of a petition alleging deprivation of a child. Another petition can be filed without delay if there is reason to believe the child is being neglected or abused. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 140 Ga. App. 175, 230 S.E.2d 139 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Motion to dismiss necessary if no provision for automatic dismissal. — If there is no provision in the statute for automatic dismissal, there should be a motion to dismiss directed to the trial judge and it should appear that the delay is not due to the actions of the defendant. E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 724, 215 S.E.2d 732 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Allegation of failure to comply with time requirements not appealable. — If the defendant, prior to a hearing to determine the defendant's delinquency, appealed from the juvenile court's denial of the defendant's motion to dismiss based solely upon an alleged failure to comply with the time requirements of subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582), the Court of Appeals dismissed the appeal since a motion under that Code section cannot be analogized to the denial of a O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 motion and did not involve a question of speedy trial rights which would be directly appealable. In re M.O.B., 190 Ga. App. 474, 378 S.E.2d 898 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Violation of ten-day mandate does not deprive jurisdiction. — Violation of the statutory mandate to set the hearing date not later than ten days after filing of the petition if the child is in detention would not deprive the court of jurisdiction that would otherwise exist. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Legislature intended incarceration be limited according to calendar days. — General Assembly intended that a juvenile who is incarcerated after the court has had a preliminary detention hearing should have the juvenile's incarceration limited and the juvenile's fate determined according to calendar days, not "working days." J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

No habeas corpus if compliance with statutory requirements. — Habeas corpus will not lie if the juvenile court, after notice and hearing, enters an order pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24-2409 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-211, 15-11-212, and 15-11-215). Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Effect of failure to show compliance with hearing requirement. — If the parents, in their petition seeking return of their children, allege that there has been no hearing as required by statute, and the record of prior juvenile court proceedings is silent as to whether such a hearing was ever set, continued, or held, and since the hearing requirement was mandatory, the defendant County Family and Children Services Department did not show compliance with the hearing requirement, and the parents stated claims for habeas relief which may be granted. Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Permitting state's mid-trial amendment of petition to change the charge against the juvenile from a misdemeanor to a felony was error since the amendment was done without notice and provision of a continuance to allow additional time for preparation of a defense. In re D.W, 232 Ga. App. 777, 503 S.E.2d 647 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Illegal detention. — If a petition was not presented within 72 hours of a detention hearing as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21(e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-145, 15-11-400, 15-11-413, 15-11-414, and 15-11-472), the state cannot thus illegally detain the child and then render such a jurisdictional defect harmless by setting the adjudication hearing within 13 days (72 hours plus 10 days) of the detention hearing under subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582). In re B.A.P., 180 Ga. App. 433, 349 S.E.2d 218 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

15-11-442. Disposition hearing; time limitations; disposition of a child in need of services.

(a) If the court finds that a child is a child in need of services, a final disposition hearing shall be held and completed within 30 days of the conclusion of the adjudication hearing if the final disposition hearing is not held in conjunction with such adjudication hearing.

(b) The court shall order the least restrictive and most appropriate disposition. Such disposition may include:

(1) Permitting such child to remain with his or her caregiver without limitations or conditions;

(2) Permitting such child to remain with his or her caregiver subject to such limitations and conditions as the court may prescribe;

(3) Placing such child on probation or unsupervised probation on such terms and conditions as deemed in the best interests of such child and the public. An order granting probation to a child in need of services may be revoked on the ground that the terms and conditions of the probation have not been observed;

(4) Requiring that such child perform community service in a manner prescribed by the court and under the supervision of an individual designated by the court;

(5) Requiring that such child make restitution. A restitution order may remain in force and effect simultaneously with another order of the court. Payment of funds shall be made by such child or his or her family or employer directly to the clerk of the juvenile court entering the order or another employee of that court designated by the judge, and such court shall disburse such funds in the manner authorized in the order. While an order requiring restitution is in effect, the court may transfer enforcement of its order to:

(A) The juvenile court of the county of such child's residence and its probation staff, if he or she changes his or her place of residence; or

(B) A superior court once such child reaches 18 years of age if he or she thereafter comes under the jurisdiction of the superior court;

(6) Imposing a fine on such child who has committed an offense which, if committed by an adult, would be a violation under the criminal laws of this state or has violated an ordinance or bylaw of a county, city, town, or consolidated government. Such fine shall not exceed the fine which may be imposed against an adult for the same offense;

(7) Requiring such child to attend structured after-school or evening programs or other court approved programs as well as requiring supervision of such child during the time of the day in which he or she most often used to perform the acts complained of in the petition alleging that such child is a child in need of services;

(8) Any order authorized for the disposition of a dependent child;

(9) Any order authorized for the disposition of a delinquent child except that a child in need of services shall not be placed in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility nor shall such facility accept such child;

(10) Any order authorized under Code Section 15-11-29.1; or

(11) Any combination of the dispositions set forth in paragraphs (1) through (10) of this subsection as the court deems to be in the best interests of a child and the public.

(c) All disposition orders shall include written findings of the basis for the disposition and such conditions as the court imposes and a specific plan of the services to be provided.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-67, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Applicability. — Contrary to the defendant's claims, neither former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-67 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-442) nor former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-48(e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-135, 15-11-400, and 15-11-412) applied to the defendant's case because both provisions applied when the child was found "unruly," and the defendant was adjudicated delinquent, not unruly. In the Interest of B. Q. L. E., 297 Ga. App. 273, 676 S.E.2d 742, cert. denied, No. S09C1197, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 787 (Ga. 2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-67).

Petition insufficient to charge juvenile as unruly. — Juvenile court erred in denying the defendant juvenile's special demurrer to a petition accusing the juvenile of being unruly pursuant to former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-67 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-381, 15-11-442, and 15-11-471) because the petition did not allege the defendant's misconduct with particularity, and the defendant was unable to determine what acts of disobedience supported the allegation that the defendant was unruly; although the petition alleged the date the defendant was disobedient, the petition provided no factual details, and the petition merely mirrored the language of former § 15-11-2(12)(B) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-381, and 15-11-471). In the Interest of C.H., 306 Ga. App. 834, 703 S.E.2d 407 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-67).

15-11-443. Duration of disposition orders.

(a) An order of disposition shall be in effect for the shortest time necessary to accomplish the purposes of the order and for not more than two years. A written disposition order shall state the length of time the order is to be in effect. An order of extension may be made if:

(1) A hearing is held prior to the expiration of the order upon motion of DFCS, DJJ, the petitioner, the prosecuting attorney, or on the court's own motion;

(2) Reasonable notice of the factual basis of the motion and of the hearing and opportunity to be heard are given to the parties affected;

(3) The court finds that the extension is necessary to accomplish the purposes of the order extended; and

(4) The extension does not exceed two years from the expiration of the prior order.

(b) The court may terminate an order of disposition or an extension of such a disposition order prior to its expiration, on its own motion or an application of a party, if it appears to the court that the purposes of the order have been accomplished.

(c) When a child adjudicated as a child in need of services reaches 18 years of age, all orders affecting him or her then in force shall terminate and he or she shall be discharged from further obligation or control.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality of provision for extension of custody. — Provision of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-443 and 15-11-607) permitting the court to extend an order of disposition for two years did not violate constitutional prohibitions against double jeopardy since the statute operated to further the accomplishment of the juvenile's treatment and rehabilitation. In re T.B., 268 Ga. 149, 486 S.E.2d 177 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. — Despite the fact that former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-443 and 15-11-607) allowed for a juvenile probation order to be extended if, among other things, a hearing was held prior to the expiration of the order upon motion of a party or on the court's own motion, the juvenile court erred in extending a juvenile's probation and imposing the condition that restitution be paid without making the requisite findings set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10, such as the juvenile's financial condition. In the Interest of C.S., 280 Ga. App. 781, 635 S.E.2d 176 (2006), overruled on other grounds, McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Applicability. — Provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-443 and 15-11-607) were not applicable in proceedings under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-709) for termination of parental rights. In re V.S., 230 Ga. App. 26, 495 S.E.2d 142 (1998).

Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in transferring a former juvenile's case to the superior court because, as a 28-year-old adult, the juvenile court no longer had jurisdiction over the matter, and the court could not be assured that the former juvenile would receive the appropriate treatment for the necessary length of time in the juvenile system; furthermore, the transfer under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2(a)(3) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) did not violate substantive due process under the Fourteenth Amendment. In the Interest of R.T., 278 Ga. App. 225, 628 S.E.2d 662 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Contrary to a juvenile's claim that the juvenile court erred in committing the juvenile into the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice for two years consecutive to a 60-day boot camp program, the disposition was valid under both former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-66(b)(1) and 15-11-70(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-443, 15-11-600, and 15-11-607) as: (1) the former granted the court the discretion, in a case involving a felony offense, to order the juvenile to serve up to a maximum of 60 days in a youth development center in addition to any other treatment or rehabilitation; and (2) under the latter, an order of disposition continued in force for two years, or until the child was sooner discharged by the department. In the Interest of J.R., 280 Ga. App. 143, 633 S.E.2d 447 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Exclusive jurisdiction for at least two years over deprived children. — Juvenile Code vests exclusive jurisdiction in the juvenile court for at least two years over matters concerning children whom the juvenile court has duly found to be deprived. West v. Cobb County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 425, 254 S.E.2d 373 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2701).

Statute permitted a juvenile court to extend an order of probation until the juvenile reached the age of 21 years. State v. Crankshaw, 243 Ga. 183, 253 S.E.2d 69 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2701).

Credibility of witnesses in custody. — Witness who is under commitment to the Department of Juvenile Justice is equally subject to the allegation that the witness is shading their testimony in favor of the state in order to obtain more favorable treatment. Wright v. State, 279 Ga. 498, 614 S.E.2d 56 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Juvenile adjudication of witness. — Trial court's restriction of the defendant's cross-examination of two state's witnesses about their juvenile adjudications was error as the state's case relied primarily on these witnesses, who provided the only evidence that the defendant shot the victim; thus, the defendant's conviction for felony murder was reversed. Wright v. State, 279 Ga. 498, 614 S.E.2d 56 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Extension of probation proper. — Juvenile's argument on appeal that the juvenile court was not authorized to extend an order of probation for the purpose of payment of restitution, and in doing so, the juvenile court assumed a prosecutorial role, lacked merit, given the language in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-607) and the state policy pronounced in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-5. In the Interest of C.S., 280 Ga. App. 781, 635 S.E.2d 176 (2006), overruled on other grounds, McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Juvenile's inability to comply with the juvenile court's order to complete 120 days of a reporting program without extending probation was directly attributable to the juvenile's actions in violating probation and, thus, the juvenile court did not err in extending the juvenile's probation period. In the Interest of M. A. I., 319 Ga. App. 578, 737 S.E.2d 585 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Custody by Department suspends parental right. — Removal of custody of the child from the parents is a determination that, for whatever length of time custody is exercised by the Department of Family and Children Services, this right has been suspended, although not finally terminated. Rodgers v. Department of Human Resources, 157 Ga. App. 235, 276 S.E.2d 902 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Effect of order reversing termination of parental rights. — After the court of appeals reversed an order of the juvenile court terminating parental rights, on remand, the juvenile court, which had already extended an order giving custody to the Department of Family and Children Services for two years, lacked authority to extend the order further. In re B.G., 231 Ga. App. 39, 497 S.E.2d 572 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24A-2701, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Unexpired order of commitment. — Department of Corrections properly has custody of an individual under the provisions of a criminal sentence which was imposed subsequent to an unexpired order of commitment; at the expiration of the criminal sentence, alternative arrangements for custody should be made for the remainder of the term of commitment. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-20 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2701).

15-11-444. Probation revocation.

(a) An order granting probation to a child adjudicated to be a child in need of services may be revoked on the ground that the conditions of probation have been violated.

(b) Any violation of a condition of probation may be reported to any person authorized to make a petition alleging that a child is in need of services as set forth in Code Section 15-11-420. A motion for revocation of probation shall contain specific factual allegations constituting each violation of a condition of probation.

(c) A motion for revocation of probation shall be served upon the child, his or her attorney, and parent, guardian, or legal custodian in accordance with the provisions of Code Section 15-11-424.

(d) If a child in need of services is taken into custody because of the alleged violation of probation, the provisions governing the detention of a child under this article shall apply.

(e) A revocation hearing shall be scheduled to be held no later than 30 days after the filing of a motion to revoke probation.

(f) If the court finds, beyond a reasonable doubt, that a child in need of services violated the terms and conditions of probation, the court may:

(1) Extend his or her probation;

(2) Impose additional conditions of probation; or

(3) Make any disposition that could have been made at the time probation was imposed.

Revocation of Probation

Modification or Vacation of Orders

Burden of proof for modification is preponderance of the evidence. — Trial court erred in requiring a father to prove by clear and convincing proof that changed circumstances warranted modification of an order placing the father's children with their maternal aunts; the father retained an interest in the children, under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-13 and 15-11-58(i)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-30 and 15-11-204), sufficient to support a right to petition for modification, and the father was only required to prove the motion under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-444 and 15-11-608) by a preponderance of the evidence. In re J. N., 302 Ga. App. 631, 691 S.E.2d 396 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Delinquency adjudication. — Defendant juvenile's appeal of an order denying a motion to reconsider, vacate, or modify the delinquent adjudication was proper because the denial of the motion was a final judgment and was directly appealable; therefore, the defendant could appeal the ruling on disposition as well as on the original finding of delinquency. An order denying a motion under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) seeking a modification based on changed circumstances in a delinquency matter is a final judgment directly appealable under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a)(1) and former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-35). In the Interest of J. L. K., 302 Ga. App. 844, 691 S.E.2d 892 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Modification of a sentencing order was proper since a juvenile had been committed to the Department of Children & Youth Services (DCYS) for a period of detention and treatment but had not been transferred to the physical custody of DCYS but was held in a detention center pending placement in a youth development campus. In re B.D.T., 219 Ga. App. 804, 466 S.E.2d 680 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Modification was improper. — Since it was undisputed that after the juvenile court adjudicated the child as delinquent and committed the child to the Department of Juvenile Justice, and the child was placed in the physical custody of the Department, which confined the child for a year, the Department had already taken physical custody of the child and therefore the juvenile court could not subsequently modify the original dispositional order. In the Interest of S.S., 276 Ga. App. 666, 624 S.E.2d 251 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Claim for commutation or reduction. — When former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-40(b), 15-11-63(e)(1)(D) and (e)(2)(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, 15-11-602, and 15-11-608) were read together to effectuate their meaning as required by O.C.G.A. § 1-3-1(a), the juvenile court did not err in denying a juvenile's motion to commute or reduce the sentence imposed. Allegations that the juvenile was rehabilitated while in restrictive custody and would benefit from being released were insufficient to grant the juvenile court authority to modify the juvenile court's commitment order once physical custody of the juvenile was transferred to the Department of Juvenile Justice. In the Interest of J.V., 282 Ga. App. 319, 638 S.E.2d 757 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Reduction in sentence not authorized. — Although former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) prohibited the change, modification, or vacation of a commitment order once a child is in the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice "on the ground that changed circumstances so require in the best interest of the child" or because the child had been rehabilitated, the statute did not prohibit the change, modification, or vacation of a commitment order on other grounds. Further the application of former § 15-11-40(b) did not render former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(e)(2)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) purposeless in these circumstances when the juvenile based a reduction in sentence on rehabilitation. In re T. H., 298 Ga. App. 536, 680 S.E.2d 569 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Commitment order could not be changed. — Defendant moved for early release from a youth development center on grounds that alleged changed circumstances required release in the best interests of the child. The motion was properly denied because under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608), once the Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice had physical custody, a commitment order could not be changed on that basis but could be changed on other grounds. In the Interest of J.W., 293 Ga. App. 408, 667 S.E.2d 161 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Modification of a juvenile commitment order under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) on the ground that changed circumstances required modification in the best interest of the child was not available to a minor because the minor was already in the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice; the fact that the custody was based on the minor's restrictive custody under a different commitment order, and not on the commitment order the minor sought to modify, had no bearing on whether the modification could be made. In the Interest of P.S., 295 Ga. App. 724, 673 S.E.2d 74 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Although former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-471, 15-11-602, and 15-11-707) suggested that a juvenile defendant could move for early release from a youth development center after the defendant was already in custody, former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) prohibited modification of a commitment order on the grounds of changed circumstances. As a change in circumstances was the basis of the defendant's motion for early release, the juvenile court lacked jurisdiction to grant the motion. In re K.F., 299 Ga. App. 685, 683 S.E.2d 650 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Contents of motion. — If the substance of a post-trial motion made no reference to any of the factors which would warrant the vacation or modification of the juvenile court's order, it could not be considered a motion to modify or vacate, thus an appeal could not be taken. In re C.M., 205 Ga. App. 543, 423 S.E.2d 280, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 423 S.E.2d 280 (1992) (decided under former

O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Evidence insufficient to support finding of delinquency. — Trial court erred in denying the defendant juvenile's motion to reconsider, vacate, or modify a delinquent adjudication for the offense of simple assault because the evidence was insufficient to support the finding of delinquency since, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-5-20(a)(2), the crime of simple assault required proof that the defendant's actions placed the defendant's grandmother in reasonable apprehension of immediately receiving a violent injury, but the only evidence of that fact was hearsay; a police officer, who was the only witness, testified that the grandmother told the officer that the grandmother was afraid of the defendant, and that the defendant was perhaps going to hit the grandmother, but the officer admitted that there were no allegations that the defendant attempted to hit the grandmother, nor did the officer witness any of the alleged events. In the Interest of J. L. K., 302 Ga. App. 844, 691 S.E.2d 892 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

New disposition was sanction for original offense. — Although the initial act of bringing a weapon to school was not a designated felony under the statute in effect when a juvenile's probation was revoked, a dispositional order imposed upon revocation of probation related to the original delinquent act because the new disposition was a sanction for the original offense. In the Interest of N.M., 316 Ga. App. 649, 730 S.E.2d 127 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Modification based on failure to provide interpreter to parents. — Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the parents' motion to modify or set aside the termination of parental rights order based on the parents' claim that a language barrier existed at the time of the termination hearing and during critical times in their case because the parents did not assert that the Georgia Department of Family and Children Services should have provided them with an interpreter who spoke their Guatemalan dialect of Mam. In the Interest of A. M., 324 Ga. App. 512, 751 S.E.2d 144 (2013).

Revocation of Probation

There is no double jeopardy protection against revocation of probation and the imposition of imprisonment. In re B.N.D., 185 Ga. App. 906, 366 S.E.2d 187, cert. denied, 185 Ga. App. 910, 366 S.E.2d 187 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Hearing in juvenile court seeking termination of probation must be treated as a delinquency trial. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801); T.S.I. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 775, 229 S.E.2d 553 (1976) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Hearing to determine delinquency required prior to revocation of probation. — In order to revoke a juvenile's probation, a de novo hearing is required to determine whether a delinquent act has been committed and that the child is delinquent. T.S.I. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 775, 229 S.E.2d 553 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

Juvenile court cannot sua sponte revoke probation and order a disposition as for a "designated felony act" after conducting a hearing on a petition which alleges only delinquency by reason of the commission of an act not within the ambit of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-471, 15-11-602, and 15-11-707). Before a juvenile court may revoke an order granting probation, a petition must be filed requesting such relief. In re B.C., 169 Ga. App. 200, 311 S.E.2d 857 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Burden of proof in revocation proceeding. — Finding of delinquency through parole violation in a revocation proceeding must be on proof beyond a reasonable doubt. T.S.I. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 775, 229 S.E.2d 553 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

Slight evidence will not be sufficient to authorize revocation of juvenile's probation. T.S.I. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 775, 229 S.E.2d 553 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

Juvenile proceeding differs from adult hearing. — Juvenile revocation of probation proceedings is not analogous to adult probation revocation hearings. T.S.I. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 775, 229 S.E.2d 553 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

Part 7

Mental Health

15-11-450. Comprehensive services plan for child found unrestorably incompetent to proceed; plan manager.

(a) After determining, in accordance with the provisions of Article 7 of this chapter, that a child alleged to be a child in need of services in a petition under this article or who has been alleged to have committed a delinquent act is unrestorably incompetent to proceed and the court orders that procedures for a comprehensive services plan be initiated, the court shall appoint a plan manager, if one has not already been appointed, to direct the development of a comprehensive services plan for such child.

(b) The plan manager shall convene all relevant parties to develop a comprehensive services plan. A plan manager shall request that the following persons attend such meeting:

(1) The parent, guardian, or legal custodian of such child;

(2) Such child's attorney;

(3) The person who filed the petition alleging that a child is in need of services or committed a delinquent act;

(4) Such child's guardian ad litem, if any;

(5) Mental health or developmental disabilities representatives;

(6) Such child's caseworker;

(7) A representative from such child's school; and

(8) Any family member of such child who has shown an interest and involvement in such child's well-being.

(c) A plan manager may request that other relevant persons attend a comprehensive services plan meeting, including but not limited to the following:

(1) A representative from the Department of Public Health;

(2) A DFCS caseworker;

(3) A prosecuting attorney;

(4) Representatives of the public and private resources to be utilized in the plan; and

(5) Other persons who have demonstrated an ongoing commitment to the child.

(d) A plan manager shall be responsible for collecting all previous histories of such child, including, but not limited to, previous evaluations, assessments, and school records, and for making such histories available for consideration by the persons at the comprehensive services plan meeting.

(e) Unless a time extension is granted by the court, a plan manager shall submit the comprehensive services plan to the court within 30 days of the entry of the court's disposition order for a child adjudicated to be unrestorably incompetent to proceed under Article 7 of this chapter. The plan shall include the following:

(1) An outline of the specific provisions for supervision of such child for protection of the community and such child;

(2) An outline of a plan designed to provide treatment, habilitation, support, or supervision services for a child in the least restrictive environment;

(3) If such child's evaluation recommends inpatient treatment, certification by such plan manager that such child is mentally ill or developmentally disabled and meets the requirements for civil commitment pursuant to Chapters 3 and 4 of Title 37 and that all other appropriate community based treatment options have been exhausted; and

(4) Identification of all parties responsible for each element of the plan, including such child, agency representatives, and other persons.

(f) A plan manager shall also be responsible for:

(1) Convening a meeting of all parties and representatives of all agencies prior to the comprehensive services plan hearing and review hearings;

(2) Identifying to the court any person who should provide testimony at the comprehensive services plan hearing; and

(3) Monitoring the comprehensive services plan, presenting to the court amendments to the plan as needed, and presenting evidence to the court for the reapproval of the plan at subsequent review hearings.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-450, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2014, p. 780, § 1-37/SB 364; Ga. L. 2015, p. 540, § 2-6/HB 361.

15-11-451. Hearing on mental health plan; time limitations.

(a) The court shall hold a comprehensive services plan hearing within 30 days after the comprehensive services plan has been submitted to the court for the purpose of approving the plan. Thereafter, the court shall hold a comprehensive services plan hearing every six months for the purpose of reviewing such child's condition and approving the comprehensive services plan.

(b) The persons required to be notified of a comprehensive services plan hearing and witnesses identified by a plan manager shall be given at least ten days' prior notice of the hearing and any subsequent hearing to review such child's condition and shall be afforded an opportunity to be heard at any such hearing. The victim, if any, of a child's alleged delinquent act shall also be provided with the same ten days' prior notice and shall be afforded an opportunity to be heard and to present a victim impact form as provided in Code Section 17-10-1.1 to the court at the comprehensive services plan hearing. The judge shall make a determination regarding sequestration of witnesses in order to protect the privileges and confidentiality rights of a child adjudicated to be unrestorably incompetent to proceed under Article 7 of this chapter.

(c) At the comprehensive services plan hearing, the court shall enter an order incorporating a comprehensive services plan as part of the disposition of the comprehensive services plan hearing. At the time of the disposition, a child shall be placed in an appropriate treatment setting, as recommended by the examiner, unless such child has already been placed in an appropriate treatment setting pursuant to subsection (d) of Code Section 15-11-656.

(d) If, during the comprehensive services plan hearing or any subsequent review hearing, the court determines that a child is mentally ill or developmentally disabled and meets the requirements for civil commitment pursuant to Chapters 3 and 4 of Title 37, such child may be committed to an appropriate treatment setting.

(e) At any time, in the event of a change in circumstances regarding such child, the court on its own motion or on the motion of the attorney representing such child, any guardian ad litem for such child, the person who filed the petition alleging that a child is in need of services or committed a delinquent act, the prosecuting attorney, or the plan manager may set a hearing for review of the comprehensive services plan and any proposed amendments to such plan. The court may issue an appropriate order incorporating an amended plan.

(f) If a child is under a comprehensive services plan when he or she reaches the age of 18, the plan manager shall make a referral for appropriate adult services.

PART 1

GENERAL PROVISIONS

15-11-470. Purpose of article.

The purpose of this article is:

(1) Consistent with the protection of the public interest, to hold a child committing delinquent acts accountable for his or her actions, taking into account such child's age, education, mental and physical condition, background, and all other relevant factors, but to mitigate the adult consequences of criminal behavior;

(2) To accord due process of law to each child who is accused of having committed a delinquent act;

(3) To provide for a child committing delinquent acts with supervision, care, and rehabilitation which ensure balanced attention to the protection of the community, the imposition of accountability, and the development of competencies to enable such child to become a responsible and productive member of the community;

(4) To promote a continuum of services for a child and his or her family from prevention of delinquent acts to aftercare, considering, whenever possible, prevention, diversion, and early intervention, including an emphasis on community based alternatives;

(5) To provide effective sanctions to acts of juvenile delinquency; and

(6) To strengthen families and to successfully reintegrate delinquent children into homes and communities.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-470, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-471. Definitions.

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "AIDS transmitting crime" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 31-22-9.1.

(2) "Behavioral health evaluation" means a court ordered evaluation completed by a licensed psychologist or psychiatrist of a child alleged to have committed or adjudicated of a delinquent act so as to provide the juvenile court with information and recommendations relevant to the behavioral health status and mental health treatment needs of such child.

(3) "Community rehabilitation center" means a rehabilitation and custodial center established within a county for the purpose of assisting in the rehabilitation of delinquent children and children in need of services in a neighborhood and family environment in cooperation with community educational, medical, and social agencies. Such center shall:

(A) Be located within any county having a juvenile court presided over by at least one full-time judge exercising jurisdiction exclusively over juvenile matters; and

(B) Be operated by a nonprofit corporation organized under Chapter 3 of Title 14, the "Georgia Nonprofit Corporation Code," and have a full-time chief executive officer. The charter, bylaws, and method of selecting the board of directors and chief executive officer of such nonprofit corporation shall be subject to the unanimous approval of the chief judge of the judicial circuit in which the county is located, the judge or judges of the juvenile court, the superintendent of the county school district, and the commissioner of juvenile justice; such approval shall be in writing and shall be appended to the charter and bylaws of the nonprofit organization. Any amendment of the charter or bylaws of the nonprofit corporation shall be subject to the same written approval as the original charter and bylaws.

(4) "Determined to be infected with HIV" means having a confirmed positive human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) test or having been clinically diagnosed as having AIDS.

(5) "Graduated sanctions" means:

(A) Verbal and written warnings;

(B) Increased restrictions and reporting requirements;

(C) Community service;

(D) Referral to treatment and counseling programs in the community;

(E) Weekend programming;

(F) Electronic monitoring, as such term is defined in Code Section 42-3-111;

(G) Curfew;

(H) An intensive supervision program; or

(I) A home confinement program.

(6) "Hearing officer" means a DJJ employee or county juvenile probation office employee, as applicable, who has been selected and appointed by DJJ or the county juvenile probation office, as applicable, to hear cases alleging violations of probation for administrative sanctioning. A hearing officer shall not be a probation officer who has direct supervision over the child who is the subject of the hearing.

(7) "HIV test" means any antibody, antigen, viral particle, viral culture, or other test to indicate the presence of HIV in the human body, and such test has been approved for such purposes by the regulations of the Department of Community Health.

(8) "Intensive supervision" means the monitoring of a child's activities on a more frequent basis than regular aftercare supervision, pursuant to regulations of the commissioner of juvenile justice.

(9) "Low risk" means the lowest risk to recidivate as calculated by a risk assessment.

(10) "Moderate risk or high risk" means a calculation by a risk assessment that is not low risk.

(11) "Probation management program" means a special condition of probation that includes graduated sanctions.

(12) "Secure probation sanctions program" means confinement in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility for seven, 14, or 30 days.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-401, former Code Section 15-11-2, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-37, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-63, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Sufficient evidence was present to find child truant and unruly, as well as in need of supervision, since the evidence showed a large number of unexcused absences and the mother never applied for the services of a homebound teacher for the child as required by the school. In re A.D.F., 176 Ga. App. 5, 335 S.E.2d 144 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Determination of in need of supervision. — Since the corroboration rule, which requires independent corroborative evidence to support testimony of accomplice, does not apply to misdemeanors, a juvenile proceeding was reconsidered, as an erroneous finding about the juvenile's alleged crime may have affected the court's finding concerning whether the juvenile was in need of correction and supervision. J.B.L. v. State, 144 Ga. App. 223, 241 S.E.2d 40 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-401).

Evidence from forensic pediatrician and clinical psychologist. — There was no merit to a father's argument that the trial court erred in admitting certain evidence in finding that three children were deprived and in authorizing the grant of a motion for nonreunification with the father. Although the father claimed that certain documents contained hearsay, it was presumed that the trial court in a nonjury trial would select only legal evidence; the father had not shown that the opinions of a forensic pediatrician and a clinical psychologist who were qualified as experts should have been excluded; the father had not made any argument as to how he was prejudiced by evidence apparently introduced against the mother; and an indictment for one child's injuries was properly admitted as the father's custody status was an issue in the case. In the Interest of A.R., 295 Ga. App. 22, 670 S.E.2d 858 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Psychological testimony on developmental delay. — Evidence was sufficient to show that three children were deprived and to authorize the grant of a motion for nonreunification with their father. There was evidence that one child was seriously and intentionally injured while in either the sole or joint care of the father; the psychologist who evaluated the children, as well as their foster parent, testified as to numerous ways the children were developmentally delayed when initially taken into protective custody; and the father cited no evidence that he had made any attempt to maintain a parental bond with any of his children, met any of the other goals of the reunification plans, or otherwise provided for the needs of his children. In the Interest of A.R., 295 Ga. App. 22, 670 S.E.2d 858 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2).

Jurisdiction. — Under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2(2)(B) and 15-11-28(a)(1)(F) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-381, and 15-11-471), a juvenile court lacked jurisdiction over the defendant, who was over 17 when a probation violation occurred; thus, the defendant's commitment under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-471, and 15-11-602) was void. The state had not filed a petition for probation revocation, but only for a violation of probation. In the Interest of T.F., 314 Ga. App. 606, 724 S.E.2d 892 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

15-11-472. Delinquency case time limitations.

(a) A detention hearing shall be held promptly and no later than:

(1) Two business days after an alleged delinquent child is placed in preadjudication custody if he or she is taken into custody without an arrest warrant; or

(2) Five business days after an alleged delinquent child is placed in preadjudication custody if he or she is taken into custody pursuant to an arrest warrant.

(b) If an alleged delinquent child is placed in preadjudication custody without an arrest warrant and the detention hearing cannot be held within 48 hours because the expiration of the 48 hours falls on a weekend or legal holiday, the court shall review the detention assessment and the decision to detain such child and make a finding based on probable cause within 48 hours of such child being placed in preadjudication custody.

(c) If an alleged delinquent child is released from preadjudication custody at the detention hearing or was never taken into custody, the following time frames shall apply:

(1) Any petition alleging delinquency shall be filed within 30 days of the filing of the complaint or within 30 days after such child is released from preadjudication custody. If a complaint was not filed, the complaint shall be filed within the statute of limitations as provided by Chapter 3 of Title 17;

(2) Summons shall be served at least 72 hours before the adjudication hearing;

(3) The arraignment hearing shall be scheduled no later than 30 days after the filing of the petition alleging delinquency;

(4) The adjudication hearing shall be held no later than 60 days from the filing of the petition alleging delinquency unless a continuance is granted as provided in Code Section 15-11-478; and

(5) The disposition hearing shall be held within 30 days of the adjudication hearing unless the court makes written findings of fact explaining the delay.

(d) If an alleged delinquent child is not released from preadjudication custody at the detention hearing, the following time frames shall apply:

(1) The petition alleging delinquency shall be filed within 72 hours of the detention hearing;

(2) Summons shall be served at least 72 hours before the adjudication hearing;

(3) The adjudication hearing shall be held no later than ten days after the filing of the petition alleging delinquency unless a continuance is granted as provided in Code Section 15-11-478; and

(4) The disposition hearing shall be held within 30 days of the adjudication hearing unless the court makes written findings of fact explaining the delay.

(e) For purposes of this Code section, preadjudication custody begins when a juvenile court intake officer authorizes the placement of a child in a secure residential facility.

(f) A child who is released from detention but subject to conditions of release shall not be considered to be in detention for purposes of calculating time frames set forth in this article or for purposes of calculating time served.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Continuance request on the part of the state. — Order granting the state's request for a continuance in a juvenile proceeding was vacated because the juvenile court did not consider whether the state's proffered reason of needing more time to determine whether to file a removal petition constituted good cause given the juvenile's objection to the continuance and the expressed desire to admit to the charged crimes. In the Interest of A. H., 332 Ga. App. 590, 774 S.E.2d 163 (2015).

15-11-473. Conduct of delinquency proceeding by prosecuting attorney; access to information.

(a) A prosecuting attorney shall conduct delinquency proceedings on behalf of the state.

(b) Except as provided in Article 9 of this chapter, in any delinquency proceeding, the prosecuting attorney shall be entitled to complete access to all court files, probation files, hearing transcripts, delinquency reports, and any other juvenile court records. It shall be the duty of the clerk, probation and intake officer, probation officers of the juvenile court, community supervision officers, and DJJ to assist a prosecuting attorney in obtaining any requested items.

15-11-475. Right to attorney; waiver.

(a) An alleged delinquent child shall have the right to be represented by an attorney at all proceedings under this article.

(b) A parent, guardian, or legal custodian of an alleged delinquent child shall not waive his or her child's right to be represented by an attorney.

(c) An alleged delinquent child may waive the right to an attorney under limited circumstances as set forth in subsection (b) of Code Section 15-11-511, but if a child's liberty is in jeopardy, he or she shall be represented by an attorney.

(d) Upon a motion by an attorney for an alleged delinquent child, together with written permission of such child, a judge shall issue an order providing that such child's attorney shall have access to all dependency, school, hospital, physician, or other health or mental health care records relating for such child.

General Consideration

Due process requires notice of right to counsel. — Due process clause of U.S. Const., amend. 14, requires that in respect of proceedings to determine delinquency which may result in commitment to an institution in which the juvenile's freedom is curtailed, the child and the child's parents must be notified of the child's right to be represented by counsel retained by the parents, or if the parents are unable to afford counsel, that counsel will be appointed to represent the child. Freeman v. Wilcox, 119 Ga. App. 325, 167 S.E.2d 163 (1969), disapproved in Riley v. State, 237 Ga. 124, 226 S.E.2d 922 (1976), to the extent that no automatic exclusionary rule should be applied to incriminating statements made by a juvenile whose parents were not separately advised of the right to counsel (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Right to counsel at delinquency hearing. — General Assembly intended that in a juvenile court a child is of right entitled to counsel at a hearing which covers a determination by the court concerning the existence of delinquency by reason of the violation of probation conditions. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

No right to counsel before judicial citizens review panel. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-103, 15-11-402, and 15-11-475) did not apply to reviews by a judicial citizens review panel as the proceedings mentioned in former § 15-11-6(b) were proceedings before the juvenile court; the citizen's review panel's findings of fact and recommendations are not legal evidence as the panel were not a court of record and the panel's actions were not necessarily in compliance with regard to legal due process considerations. In the Interest of K.M.C., 273 Ga. App. 276, 614 S.E.2d 896 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Parent entitled to representation at all stages of deprivation proceeding. — Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b), a parent was entitled to representation at all stages of the proceedings alleging deprivation. In the Interest of A. R., 296 Ga. App. 62, 673 S.E.2d 586 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Parent entitled to effective representation. — Mother was entitled to effective representation in termination hearing. In re A.H.P., 232 Ga. App. 330, 500 S.E.2d 418 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30).

Right applies to informal detention hearing and other stages. — Accused juvenile was entitled to counsel at an "informal detention hearing" required by Ga. L. 1971, p. 709, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-60), or at any of the other stages of any proceedings alleging delinquency, unruliness, and deprivation. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Juvenile entitled to principles necessary for fair trial. — Juvenile charged with "delinquency" is entitled by right to have the court apply those common-law jurisprudential principles which experience and reason have shown are necessary to give the accused the essence of a fair trial. T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Ingredients of fair trial. — To give one accused in a juvenile proceeding a fair trial, the trial must include such ingredients as the presumption of innocence, the requirement that if the conviction is based entirely upon circumstantial evidence then the proved facts shall exclude every other reasonable hypothesis save that of guilt, and the necessity of producing independent corroborative evidence to that of an accomplice for a finding of guilt when based upon the latter's testimony. T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Cannot reverse delinquency adjudication unless deprivation of counsel harmful. — Although an accused is entitled to counsel at the stage known as "a detention hearing", there is no authority for reversing an adjudication of delinquency after a fair trial with legal representation because of lack of counsel at the detention hearing, unless it appears that deprivation of counsel at that stage resulted in harm to the juvenile. T.K. v. State, 126 Ga. App. 269, 190 S.E.2d 588 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Juvenile Code recognizes that a parent is a "party" to proceedings involving the parent's child. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Physical presence of parent cannot be equated with meaningful representation. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Indigent putative father's performance of the duties of a parent does not control the determination of whether he is entitled to appointed representation; the crucial inquiry is whether the putative father was a "party" to any of the proceedings within the meaning of the former statute. Wilkins v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 255 Ga. 230, 337 S.E.2d 20 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30).

Former Code section did not imply that foster parents may have certain rights. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 449, 228 S.E.2d 839 (1976), cert. denied, 432 U.S. 905, 97 S. Ct. 2949, 53 L. Ed. 2d 1077 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Parent's right to representation not violated. — Mother's right to appointed counsel was not violated since, after being notified of such right, she did not request counsel until shortly before the termination hearing and did not identify any proceeding at which she appeared unrepresented. In re A.M.R., 230 Ga. App. 133, 495 S.E.2d 615 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30).

Juvenile court did not err by refusing to dismiss the proceedings to terminate a mother's parental rights for the failure of the mother to be represented by counsel at the judicial citizens review panel as the proceedings mentioned in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-103, 15-11-402, and 15-11-475) were proceedings before the juvenile court and were not reviews by the panel; further, any error was harmless as the juvenile court did not rely on the panel's recommendations in terminating the mother's parental rights. In the Interest of K.M.C., 273 Ga. App. 276, 614 S.E.2d 896 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Parent, who was represented by counsel during the course of a termination of parental rights proceeding, could not prove that the parent was denied counsel during the proceeding because, beyond the claim that the parent was denied counsel, the parent failed to show what arguments the parent would have advanced, what evidence the parent would have produced in the parent's favor, or how the parent would have been successful had the parent been represented by counsel; moreover, in light of the overwhelming evidence supporting the termination of the parent's parental rights, there was nothing in the record that would support a finding of harm. In the Interest of M.S., 279 Ga. App. 254, 630 S.E.2d 856 (2006), overruled on other grounds, In re J.M.B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Indigent parent entitled to paupered transcript for use in appeal. — Indigent parent, whose parental rights have been terminated by an order of the juvenile court on a petition filed by an agency of the state, is entitled to a paupered transcript of the proceeding in the juvenile court for use in appealing the decision of that court. Nix v. Department of Human Resources, 236 Ga. 794, 225 S.E.2d 306 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Trial court committed reversible error in failing to determine whether appointed counsel was required for parent. — Fact that there was sufficient evidence to support the termination of a parent's rights did not relieve the trial court of the court's obligation to determine whether counsel should have been appointed for the parent under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-103, 15-11-402, and 15-11-475). The trial court's limited inquiry as to whether the parent waived the right to counsel, and the court's failure to ascertain the parent's financial status was reversible error. In the Interest of P. D. W., 296 Ga. App. 189, 674 S.E.2d 338 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Waiver

Right to counsel may be waived unless child is not represented by the child's parents, guardian, or custodian. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Determination of voluntary and knowing waiver of right. — Question of a voluntary and knowing waiver of a juvenile's right to counsel depends on the totality of the circumstances and the state has a heavy burden in showing that the juvenile did understand and waive the juvenile's right to counsel. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2001).

Trial court apparently determined that, given the court's finding that the mother was not competent, the mother was unable to show a knowing and voluntary waiver of her right to appointed counsel at the child deprivation hearing; thus, the trial court did not err in refusing to allow her to proceed pro se. Additionally, the mother failed to establish that she was harmed by her counsel's representation; thus, without harm, the mother's alleged error presented no basis for reversal. In the Interest of B.B., 267 Ga. App. 360, 599

S.E.2d 304 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Factors considered in determining proper waiver. — Several of the factors to be considered among the totality of the circumstances in determining whether the juvenile's waiver of counsel is made knowingly and voluntarily are: (1) age of the accused; (2) education of the accused; (3) knowledge of the accused as to both the substance of the charge and the nature of the accused's rights to consult with an attorney and remain silent; (4) whether the accused was held incommunicado or allowed to consult with relatives, friends, or an attorney; (5) whether the accused was interrogated before or after formal charges were filed; (6) methods used in interrogations; (7) length of interrogations; (8) whether vel non the accused refused to voluntarily give statements on prior occasions; and (9) whether the accused repudiated an extra-judicial statement at a later date. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977) (decided under former 1933, § 24A-2001).

Juvenile court proceeding null if no waiver. — If in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and since the hearing was not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding was an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933 § 24A-2001).

Mother who waives child's rights must be unbiased mother, free of interests conflicting with the needs of her daughter whom she undertakes to represent; an ally, not an adversary. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933 § 24A-2001).

Right to counsel waived. — Trial judge's determination that a 15-year-old girl knowingly and voluntarily waived her right to counsel in a murder case was not clearly erroneous since she was interrogated before formal charges were filed, was not held incommunicado, and there was no evidence that coercive or deceptive interrogation techniques were employed. J.E.W. v. State, 256 Ga. 464, 349 S.E.2d 713 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-6 and 15-11-30).

Right to counsel not waived. — In a proceeding for termination of parental rights, an indigent parent did not waive the right to appointed counsel in a knowing, intelligent, and voluntary manner simply because the parent failed to request counsel prior to the hearing as directed by the court. The court's denial of the parent's request for counsel was reversible error. In re J. M. B., 296 Ga. App. 786, 676 S.E.2d 9 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Error in proceeding without counsel harmless. — As a juvenile court in a mother's parental rights termination proceeding failed to make inquiry as to whether the mother was indigent and whether she was waiving the right to counsel pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6(b), the judgment terminating her parental rights over her three children could not stand. Moreover, the record demonstrated many instances of harm caused by the mother's lack of counsel. In the Interest of P. D. W., 296 Ga. App. 189, 674 S.E.2d 338 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-6).

Juvenile did not make a knowing and intelligent decision to proceed without counsel where the referee did not warn her or her mother of the danger of proceeding without counsel or of the consequences of an affirmative finding or admission of the charge enumerated in the petition; the juvenile appellant and her mother did not stand before the court with open eyes, knowing the danger and consequences of proceeding without the benefit of legal representation. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-10-30).

15-11-476. Appointment of guardian ad litem.

(a) The court shall appoint a guardian ad litem whenever:

(1) An alleged delinquent child appears before the court without his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(2) It appears to the court that a parent, guardian, or legal custodian of an alleged delinquent child is incapable or unwilling to make decisions in the best interests of such child with respect to proceedings under this article such that there may be a conflict of interest between such child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian; or

(3) The court finds that it is otherwise in a child's best interests to do so.

(b) The role of a guardian ad litem in a delinquency proceeding shall be the same role as provided for in all dependency proceedings under Article 3 of this chapter.

(c) In a delinquency proceeding, a child's parent, guardian, legal custodian, or attorney shall not prohibit or impede the child's guardian ad litem's access to such child.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-476, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2014, p. 780, § 1-36/SB 364.

15-11-477. Orders for behavioral health evaluations.

(a) At any time prior to the issuance of a final dispositional order, the court may order a behavioral health evaluation of a child alleged to be or adjudicated as a delinquent child which may be conducted by DBHDD or a private psychologist or psychiatrist.

(b) The court shall order and give consideration to the results of a child's behavioral health evaluation before ordering a child adjudicated for a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act placed in restrictive custody; provided, however, that such order shall not be required if the court has considered the results of a prior behavioral health evaluation of such child that had been completed in the preceding six months.

(c) Statements made by a child during a behavioral health evaluation shall only be admissible into evidence as provided in Code Section 15-11-479.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-477, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-478. Continuance of a hearing in delinquency proceedings.

A continuance shall be granted only upon a showing of good cause and only for that period of time shown to be necessary by the moving party at the hearing on the motion. Whenever any continuance is granted, the facts which require the continuance shall be entered into the court record.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Separate trials (adjudication and dispositional) with each having different goals are required. See D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201). J.B. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 545, 228 S.E.2d 712 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Purpose of division of juvenile trials into two phases. — In dividing juvenile trials into two phases lawmakers intended to give the juvenile judge an opportunity to conduct the "functional equivalent" of a regular trial (the adjudicatory hearing) in a manner which would satisfy the required constitutional procedures concomitant with the usual legal rules, such as those dealing with admissibility of evidence, proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and similar requirements applicable to adults. Thereafter, at the dispositional phase, the judge was to explore all available additional avenues, including psychiatric and sociological studies, which would enable the judge to provide a solution for the youngster and the family aimed at making the child a secure law-abiding member of society. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

During adjudicatory phase, rules of evidence generally prevail. In the second (dispositional) phase, the court hears virtually all evidence which is material and relevant to the issue of disposition. J.B. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 545, 228 S.E.2d 712 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Dispositional hearing not necessary for termination due to deprivation. — If a petition for the termination of parental rights alleged only that the children were deprived, not delinquent or unruly, it was not necessary for the juvenile judge to hold a dispositional hearing. In re J.C., 242 Ga. 737, 251 S.E.2d 299 (1978), appeal dismissed, 441 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2046, 60 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Continuation of a dispositional hearing should have been allowed when the probation officer notified the court that the officer was not prepared to make a recommendation regarding disposition. In re M.D., 233 Ga. App. 261, 503 S.E.2d

888 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Dispositional hearing was held, albeit briefly, since, at the conclusion of the trial, the court found that the juvenile had committed the offense charged and questioned the juvenile with regard to whether the juvenile had been in court before and whether the juvenile had ever been charged with similar conduct. In re B.J.G., 234 Ga. App. 285, 506 S.E.2d 449 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Timing of dispositional hearing. — When a juvenile court, having concluded the adjudicatory hearing and having found a juvenile defendant guilty of contempt, proceeded immediately to a dispositional hearing at which the defendant had the opportunity to be heard and to give evidence, the defendant waived any assertion of error by not objecting to this proceeding. In the Interest of P.W., 289 Ga. App. 323, 657 S.E.2d 270 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-65).

Disposition made following finding of delinquency. — Decision that the child is in need of treatment or rehabilitation, based upon clear and convincing evidence, is made following a finding of delinquency. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Dispositional hearings held in county of juvenile's residence. — Dispositional hearings must be held in the county of the juvenile's residence to meet state constitutional requirements. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Continuance request on the part of the state. — Order granting the state's request for a continuance in a juvenile proceeding was vacated because the juvenile court did not consider whether the state's proffered reason of needing more time to determine whether to file a removal petition constituted good cause given the juvenile's objection to the continuance and the expressed desire to admit to the charged crimes. In the Interest of A. H., 332 Ga. App. 590, 774 S.E.2d 163 (2015).

No need to repeat evidence presented during adjudicatory portion. — There was no error in refusing to have the dispositional phase include a repetition of the same evidence and witnesses previously presented during the adjudicatory portion. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-19, and former Code Section 15-11-47, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Rule as to confessions of juveniles should be same as that for confessions of adults because law enforcement officers cannot be certain when officers question a juvenile what kind of case may develop, and the statutory safeguards are applicable to both criminal and juvenile cases. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402); Jackson v. State, 146 Ga. App. 375, 246 S.E.2d 407 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Confession inadmissible if failure to comply with safeguards. — Failure to comply with the statutory safeguards renders a confession of a juvenile inadmissible in evidence. Bussey v. State, 144 Ga. App. 875, 243 S.E.2d 99 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Failure to comply with the statutory safeguards renders confession of a juvenile inadmissible even in a criminal case where a juvenile is tried as an adult. Manning v. State, 162 Ga. App. 494, 292 S.E.2d 95 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Confession obtained illegally inadmissible in delinquency hearing. — Confession obtained from a juvenile in violation of the statute was inadmissible in a hearing to determine the delinquency of a juvenile. J.J. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 660, 218 S.E.2d 668 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Confession admissible after juvenile opted not to have parent present. — Because the undisputed evidence established that a juvenile defendant was informed of the right to have a parent present during an interview with police in which a custodial statement was obtained, but did not invoke that right, there was no error in allowing the juvenile defendant's statement into evidence. Green v. State, 282 Ga. 672, 653 S.E.2d 23 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-47).

Confession admissible if parent present and rights protected. — Juvenile defendant's confession was admissible despite the fact that the defendant was not taken before an impartial juvenile intake officer but a member of the county police department since the defendant's mother was present during the juvenile's interrogation and it was not alleged that the officer failed to perform any duty imposed upon the officer. Worthy v. State, 253 Ga. 661, 324 S.E.2d 431 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Issue of whether officer to whom juvenile was taken and to whom the juvenile made a confession was a "juvenile court intake officer" did not affect the admissibility of the statement since Miranda warnings were given and the juvenile's mother was present. Houser v. State, 173 Ga. App. 378, 326 S.E.2d 513 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Language of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-133, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) requiring the bringing of a child before juvenile authorities was directory and did not serve to render inadmissible a juvenile's confession if the juvenile's rights were otherwise protected, such as if the juvenile's father was present and was continually apprised of the questioning. W.G.C. v. State, 173 Ga. App. 528, 327 S.E.2d 522 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Confession admissible despite technical violation. — Police officer's failure to bring juvenile initially to juvenile court did not render the 14-year old's confession inadmissible since the confession was obtained only after the juvenile waived the juvenile's rights knowingly and voluntarily, and with the knowledge and consent of both the juvenile's mother and legal guardian. In re J.D.G., 207 Ga. App. 698, 429 S.E.2d 118 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Since the defendant's statement was knowingly and intelligently given before officers had an opportunity to take the juvenile anywhere, former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-133, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) was neither implicated nor violated. McKoon v. State, 266 Ga. 149, 465 S.E.2d 272 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-19, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Juvenile court intake officers. — Officers of the juvenile division of the sheriff's department may not also serve as juvenile court intake officers for purposes of compliance with former statutory provisions. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-66 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

15-11-480. When jeopardy attaches.

(a) When a child enters a denial to a petition alleging his or her delinquency, jeopardy attaches when the first witness is sworn at the adjudication hearing.

(b) When a child enters an admission to a petition alleging his or her delinquency, jeopardy attaches when the court accepts the admission.

15-11-481. Victim impact statement in delinquency proceedings.

(a) The victim of a child's alleged delinquent act shall be entitled to the same rights, notices, and benefits as the victim of a crime committed by an adult as set forth in Chapters 14, 15, 15A, and 17 of Title 17. The rights, notices, and benefits to a victim set forth in this article shall not be construed to deny or diminish the rights, notices, and benefits set forth in Chapters 14, 15, 15A, and 17 of Title 17.

(b) In any delinquency proceeding in which a petition has been filed, the prosecuting attorney shall notify any victim of a child's alleged delinquent act that the victim may submit a victim impact form as provided in Code Section 17-10-1.1.

(c) The provisions of subsection (e) of Code Section 17-10-1.1 shall apply to the use and disclosure of the victim impact form.

(d) Prior to the imposition of a dispositional order for a child adjudicated for a delinquent act, the juvenile court shall permit the victim, the family of the victim, or other witness with personal knowledge of the delinquent act to testify about the impact of the delinquent act on the victim, the victim's family, or the community. Except as provided in subsection (f) of this Code section, such evidence shall be given in the presence of the child adjudicated for a delinquent act and shall be subject to cross-examination.

(e) The admissibility of the evidence described in subsection (d) of this Code section shall be in the sole discretion of the judge and in any event shall be permitted only in such a manner and to such a degree as not to unduly prejudice the child adjudicated for a delinquent act. If the judge excludes evidence, the state shall be allowed to make an offer of proof.

(f) Upon a finding by the court specific to the case and the witness that the witness would not be able to testify in person without showing undue emotion or that testifying in person will cause the witness severe physical or emotional distress or trauma, evidence presented pursuant to subsection (d) of this Code section may be in the form of, but not limited to, a written statement or a prerecorded audio or video statement, provided that such witness is subject to cross-examination. Photographs of the victim may be included with any evidence presented pursuant to subsection (d) of this Code section.

(g) In presenting such evidence, the victim, the family of the victim, or other witness having personal knowledge of the impact of the delinquent act on the victim, the victim's family, or the community shall, if applicable:

(1) Describe the nature of the delinquent act;

(2) Itemize any economic loss suffered by the victim or the family of the victim, if restitution is sought;

(3) Identify any physical injury suffered by the victim as a result of the delinquent act along with its seriousness and permanence;

(4) Describe any change in the victim's personal welfare or familial relationships as a result of the delinquent act;

(5) Identify any request for psychological services initiated by the victim or the victim's family as a result of the delinquent act; and

(6) Include any other information related to the impact of the delinquent act upon the victim, the victim's family, or the community that the court inquires of.

(h) The court shall allow the child adjudicated for a delinquent act the opportunity to cross-examine and rebut the evidence presented of the victim's personal characteristics and the emotional impact of the delinquent act on the victim, the victim's family, or the community, and such cross-examination and rebuttal evidence shall be subject to the same discretion set forth in subsection (d) of this Code section.

(i) No disposition of a child adjudicated as delinquent shall be invalidated because of failure to comply with the provisions of this Code section. This Code section shall not be construed to create any cause of action or any right of appeal on behalf of the victim, the state, or such child; provided, however, that if the court intentionally fails to comply with this Code section, the victim may file a complaint with the Judicial Qualifications Commission.

Part 2

Venue in Delinquency Proceedings

15-11-490. Venue; transfers between juvenile courts.

(a) A proceeding under this article may be commenced:

(1) In the county in which an allegedly delinquent child legally resides; or

(2) In any county in which the alleged delinquent acts occurred.

(b) If the adjudicating court finds that a nonresident child has committed a delinquent act, the adjudicating court may retain jurisdiction over the disposition of a nonresident child or may transfer the proceeding to the county of such child's residence for disposition. Like transfer may be made if the residence of such child changes pending the proceeding.

(c) If the adjudicating court retains jurisdiction, prior to making any order for disposition of a nonresident child, the adjudicating court shall communicate to the court of the county of such child's residence the fact that such child has been adjudicated to have committed a delinquent act. Such communication shall state the date upon which the adjudicating court plans to enter an order for disposition of such nonresident child and shall request any information or recommendations relevant to the disposition of such nonresident child. Any such recommendation shall be considered by but shall not be binding upon the adjudicating court in making its order for disposition.

(d) When any case is transferred, certified copies of all documents and records pertaining to the case on file with the clerk of the court shall accompany the transfer order. Compliance with this subsection shall terminate jurisdiction in the transferring court and initiate jurisdiction in the receiving court.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — Many of the following annotations should be examined in light of the amendment to Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. XIV, Para. VI (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. VI) which took effect November 1, 1981.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101, pre-2000 Code Sections 15-11-15 and 15-11-16 and pre-2014 Code Sections 15-11-29 and 15-11-30, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Determining legal residence. — Juvenile proceeding for delinquency or unruly conduct may be tried either in the county where the child resides or in the county where the unruly or delinquent conduct occurred. In re A.M.C., 213 Ga. App. 897, 446 S.E.2d 760 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

In determining where a juvenile resides for purposes of venue, it is generally the legal residence that controls. In re A.M.C., 213 Ga. App. 897, 446 S.E.2d 760 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

In a proceeding against a juvenile for the status offense of unruliness, the juvenile's legal residence for purposes of venue was in the county of the Department of Family & Children Services having custody over the juvenile, even though the place of the offense and the juvenile's family residence were in other counties. In re A.M.C., 213 Ga. App. 897, 446 S.E.2d 760 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

Delinquency adjudication hearing serves same purpose as arraignment. — Delinquency adjudication hearing merely serves the same purpose in the civil juvenile court proceeding as an arraignment under the criminal code. M.E.B. v. State, 230 Ga. 154, 195 S.E.2d 891 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101); D.C.E. v. State, 130 Ga. App. 724, 204 S.E.2d 481 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Adjudication proceeding is actually nothing more than pretrial hearing held in the county where the child was apprehended and in the custody of local authorities for committing the alleged unruly acts or delinquent behavior. M.E.B. v. State, 230 Ga. 154, 195 S.E.2d 891 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Order entered following a delinquency adjudicatory hearing under former Code 1933, § 24A-1201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-17 and 15-11-490) was not a final judgment appealable under former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34) but was instead merely an order entered in a pretrial hearing similar to an arraignment. D.C.E. v. State, 130 Ga. App. 724, 204 S.E.2d 481 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Former statute did not conflict with general venue provisions of Constitution insofar as delinquency proceedings were concerned. G.S.K. v. State, 147 Ga. App. 571, 249 S.E.2d 671 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Venue lies in county where juvenile committed criminal act. — Although some of the proceedings in juvenile court are of a criminal character, not all are. For those that are, delinquency, unruliness and juvenile traffic offenses, the venue provisions of the Juvenile Code and the state constitution, that venue lies in the county in which the act was committed, are in accord. Quire v. Clayton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 242 Ga. 85, 249 S.E.2d 538 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Juvenile's change of residence did not bar the exercise of jurisdiction over the juvenile by the juvenile court in the county in which the offense occurred. In re D.L., 228 Ga. App. 503, 492 S.E.2d 273 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-15).

Evidence showed that the delinquent conduct occurred in the victim's house, which was sufficient to establish the venue of the case wherein the juvenile was properly adjudicated. In the Interest of M.C., 322 Ga. App. 239, 744 S.E.2d 436 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29).

Officer testified that the officer responded to a stolen-vehicle dispatch; that officer arrived at the scene of the location where the vehicle or vehicles reportedly had been stolen; the juvenile was at that location; and the vehicle had been stolen out of DeKalb County; thus, from that testimony, the juvenile court could have concluded that the delinquent act occurred in DeKalb County, Georgia. In the Interest of A. P., 348 Ga. App. 638, 824 S.E.2d 94 (2019).

Insufficient proof of venue. — In a juvenile delinquency case, the state failed to prove venue since the state offered no evidence that a church where an aggravated assault occurred was within the boundaries of the county in question; as to charges of obstruction of an officer, there was no evidence as to the location of the houses where the acts in question occurred. In the Interest of D.D., 287 Ga. App. 512, 651 S.E.2d 817 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29).

Although there was sufficient evidence to support a juvenile's adjudication of delinquency based on the finding that the juvenile had committed acts, which, had the juvenile been an adult, would have supported a conviction for burglary in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1(a), the adjudication was reversed because the state failed to present any evidence to establish proof of venue beyond a reasonable doubt. The investigating officers' county of employment did not, in and of itself, constitute sufficient proof of venue to meet the beyond a reasonable doubt standard; however, the reviewing court noted that retrying the juvenile was not prohibited under the Double Jeopardy Clause because the evidence presented at trial was otherwise sufficient to support the adjudication of delinquency. In the Interest of B.R., 289 Ga. App. 6, 656 S.E.2d 172 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29).

Because the state failed to prove the element of venue beyond a reasonable doubt, and there was no indication in the record that the juvenile waived that requirement or that the court took judicial notice of venue as an element of the offenses charged, the juvenile's adjudications of delinquency had to be reversed. In the Interest of J.B., 289 Ga. App. 617, 658 S.E.2d 194 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-29).

Dispositional hearings conducted in county where defendant resides. — It was at the dispositional hearings provided for in former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-101 and 15-11-210) that the actual "case" was tried, thereby comporting with the constitutional mandate that civil cases shall be tried in the county where the defendant resided. M.E.B. v. State, 230 Ga. 154, 195 S.E.2d 891 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Transfer provisions were not violative of Constitution. — Ga. L. 1971, p. 709, § 1, by providing that after adjudication of delinquency in a court of another county the proceeding shall be transferred to the county of the child's residence for disposition, is not violative of the Georgia Constitution. M.E.B. v. State, 230 Ga. 154, 195 S.E.2d 891 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1201).

Failure to transfer prior to notice of appeal. — If it is undisputed that a child was a "nonresident child" as defined in former paragraph (a)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30 at the time of the delinquent act and at the time of the adjudication of delinquency, in that the child then resided in Spalding County, Georgia, the juvenile court of Henry County erred in failing to transfer the case to the county of the child's residence for disposition prior to the filing of the child's notice of appeal in accordance with former subsection (b) of that section. In re R.W., 186 Ga. App. 885, 368 S.E.2d 824 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-16).

Dispositional hearings held in county where defendant resides constitutional. — It was at the dispositional hearings provided for in former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-110 and 15-11-210) that the actual "case" was tried, thereby comporting with the constitutional mandate that civil cases shall be tried in the county where the defendant resided. M.E.B. v. State, 230 Ga. 154, 195 S.E.2d 891 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1201).

Authority to grant new trials. — Juvenile courts are courts of record; therefore, juvenile courts are authorized to grant new trials. In re T.A.W., 265 Ga. 106, 454 S.E.2d 134 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-16).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1201, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Failure to comply prejudices constitutional rights of child. — Failure to comply with the transfer provisions of former subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1971, p. 709, § 1 would prejudice the rights of the child under the venue provisions of the Georgia Constitution to have a dispositional hearing in the county of the child's residence. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U79-4 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1201).

Transfer after delinquency or unruliness adjudication. — Once a child has been adjudicated delinquent or unruly in juvenile court, the child would have to be transferred to the juvenile court in the county of the child's residence. 1979 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U79-4 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1201).

CUSTODY AND RELEASE OF CHILD

15-11-500. Order to take child into immediate custody.

If it appears from a filed affidavit or from sworn testimony before the court that the conduct, condition, or surroundings of an alleged delinquent child are endangering such child's health or welfare or those of others or that such child may abscond or be removed from the jurisdiction of the court or will not be brought before the court, notwithstanding the service of the summons, the court may endorse upon the summons an order that a law enforcement officer shall serve the summons and take such child into immediate custody and bring him or her forthwith before the court.

15-11-501. Taking child into custody; notice to custodian; notification of prosecuting attorney.

(a) An alleged delinquent child may be taken into custody:

(1) Pursuant to an order of the court under this article, including an order to a DJJ employee to apprehend:

(A) When he or she has escaped from an institution or facility operated by DJJ; or

(B) When he or she has been placed under supervision and has violated its conditions;

(2) Pursuant to the laws of arrest; or

(3) By a law enforcement officer or duly authorized officer of the court if there are reasonable grounds to believe that a child has committed a delinquent act.

(b) A law enforcement officer taking a child into custody shall promptly give notice together with a statement of the reasons for taking such child into custody to his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian and to the court.

(c) When a child who is taken into custody has committed an act which would constitute a felony if committed by an adult, the juvenile court, within 48 hours after it learns of such child having been taken into custody, shall notify the prosecuting attorney of the judicial circuit in which the juvenile proceedings are to be instituted.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402, pre-2000 Code Sections 15-11-17 and 15-11-19, and pre-2014 Code Sections 15-11-45 and 15-11-47, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Escape from custody. — Juvenile who was taken into custody by the police for a probation violation, and who escaped, could not be adjudicated delinquent based on the adult crime of misdemeanor escape since the juvenile was not in custody prior to or after having been convicted of a felony, misdemeanor, or violation of a municipal ordinance. In re J.B., 222 Ga. App. 252, 474 S.E.2d 111 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-17).

Purpose. — Purpose of former Code 1933, § 24A-1402 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) was to make certain that a juvenile's rights were protected when the juvenile was taken into custody or placed in detention. Paxton v. State, 159 Ga. App. 175, 282 S.E.2d 912, cert. denied, 248 Ga. 231, 283 S.E.2d 235 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Importance of procedural due process in juvenile proceedings. — Safeguarding of the child's procedural rights takes on the same importance that procedural due process has in an adult criminal proceeding context. R.A.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 366, 274 S.E.2d 752 (1980), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 66 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Applicability of statutory safeguards. — Statutory safeguards were applicable to juvenile cases and a criminal case when a juvenile was tried as an adult. Bussey v. State, 144 Ga. App. 875, 243 S.E.2d 99 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Trial court did not err in admitting a juvenile defendant's videotaped statement to the police because the police did not follow the juvenile intake procedures outlined in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-47(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133 and 15-11-502) as: (1) defendant was 15-years-old at the time of the shooting and police discussed the nature of the charges; (2) police read defendant the Miranda rights, and all questioning took place with defendant's mother present; (3) both defendant and the mother voluntarily signed a waiver of counsel form that explained defendant's Miranda rights prior to any questioning taking place; (4) defendant averred that no threats, promises, tricks, or other forms of persuasion were used to induce the defendant to sign the waiver form; (5) the interview itself lasted only 15 or 20 minutes, and police did not employ any tactics to pressure or coerce the defendant into giving a statement; and (6) police ceased all questioning the moment that the defendant's mother asked for an attorney. Williams v. State, 273 Ga. App. 42, 614 S.E.2d 146 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-47).

Because a juvenile's allegations that the state failed to comply with the procedural requirements under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49(c)(1) and (e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-102, 15-11-145, 15-11-151, 15-11-472, and 15-11-521) should have been raised in the superior court and had no bearing on the validity of the delinquency petitions or the substantive charges against the juvenile in juvenile court, the juvenile court properly prevented the juvenile from presenting evidence regarding the procedural violations. In the Interest of K.C., 290 Ga. App. 416, 659 S.E.2d 821 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-47).

Notice and hearing requirements of § 15-11-21 and former Code 1933, §§ 24A-1402 and 24A-1404 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-501 and 15-11-506) were mandatory and must be adhered to in order for the juvenile court to proceed with the adjudicatory hearing. If, for some reason the statutes were not, dismissal of the petition would be without prejudice. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Procedural requirements are applicable when child is taken into custody or temporarily detained, regardless of whether it is for alleged delinquency, unruliness, or deprivation. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Failure to follow mandated procedures warrants dismissal without prejudice of a petition alleging deprivation of a child. Another petition can be filed without delay if there is reason to believe the child is being neglected or abused. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 140 Ga. App. 175, 230 S.E.2d 139 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Failure to follow procedures did not warrant dismissal. — Even though taking a juvenile to police headquarters before releasing the juvenile to the juvenile's parents was a violation of subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133 and 15-11-502), dismissal of the delinquency petition was not required because the violation did not cause injury or prejudice to the juvenile. In re C.W., 227 Ga. App. 763, 490 S.E.2d 442 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Former statute directed person taking child into custody to follow one of specified courses, "without first taking the child elsewhere," such as to the police station. M.K.H. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 565, 218 S.E.2d 284 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

When failure to bring juvenile promptly before court not prejudicial. — Any deviation from former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-410, 15-11-411, 15-11-412, 15-11-501, 15-11-502, and 15-11-507) resulting from a police officer taking a juvenile to the scene of a crime for show-up identification following the juvenile's arrest but prior to taking the juvenile before the juvenile court was minimal and not prejudicial error. M.A.K. v. State, 171 Ga. App. 151, 318 S.E.2d 828 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Failure of the state police to take a defendant promptly before a judicial officer does not make the defendant's conviction constitutionally infirm unless the defendant's defense was prejudiced thereby. Paxton v. Jarvis, 735 F.2d 1306 (11th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 935, 105 S. Ct. 335, 83 L. Ed. 2d 271 (1984); Barnes v. State, 178 Ga. App. 205, 342 S.E.2d 388 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Juvenile may first be booked if rights are observed. — There was no violation of former Code 1933, § 24A-1402) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-410, 15-11-411, 15-11-412, 15-11-501, 15-11-502, and 15-11-507) because a juvenile suspect was first taken to a police station for booking purposes, if the juvenile was advised of the juvenile's rights under that section to be questioned elsewhere; the juvenile signed a waiver of these rights on an "advice to juveniles" form and was detained at a youth development center. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Juvenile court intake officers act in a judicial capacity; therefore, law enforcement officers, who perform an executive function, are per se disqualified from acting as intake officers. Brown v. Scott, 266 Ga. 44, 464 S.E.2d 607 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Juvenile court intake officer is a public officer for purposes of a quo warranto proceeding. Brown v. Scott, 266 Ga. 44, 464 S.E.2d 607 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Failure to comply with notice and hearing requirements of the Juvenile Code, after an allegedly deprived child has been taken from the parent's custody, prejudices or injures the rights of the parent, primarily the right to possession of the child under former Code 1933, §§ 74-106, 74-108, and 74-203 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1, 19-7-25, and 19-9-2). Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Time limits are jurisdictional and must be adhered to. — Time limits established by the General Assembly in the Juvenile Code are jurisdictional and must be strictly adhered to. A failure to comply with the time periods requires dismissal. R.A.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 366, 274 S.E.2d 752 (1980), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 66 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Juvenile court intake officers. — Officers of the juvenile division of the sheriff's department may not also serve as juvenile court intake officers for purposes of compliance with former statutory provisions. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-66 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

15-11-502. Procedure after taking child into custody; detention.

(a) A person taking an alleged delinquent child into custody, with all reasonable speed and without first taking such child elsewhere, shall:

(1) Immediately release such child, without bond, to his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian upon such person's promise to bring such child before the court when requested by the court;

(2) Immediately deliver such child to a medical facility if such child is believed to suffer from a serious physical condition or illness which requires prompt treatment and, upon delivery, shall promptly contact a juvenile court intake officer. Immediately upon being notified by the person taking such child into custody, the juvenile court intake officer shall determine if such child can be administered a detention assessment and if so, shall conduct such assessment and determine if such child should be released, remain in protective custody, or be brought before the court; or

(3) Bring such child immediately before the juvenile court or promptly contact a juvenile court intake officer. The court or juvenile court intake officer shall determine if such child should be released or detained. All determinations and court orders regarding detention shall comply with the requirements of this article and shall be based on an individual detention assessment of such child and his or her circumstances.

(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a) of this Code section, a law enforcement officer may detain an alleged delinquent child for a reasonable period of time sufficient to conduct interrogations and perform routine law enforcement procedures including but not limited to fingerprinting, photographing, and the preparation of any necessary records.

(c) Prior to a detention hearing, an alleged delinquent child shall be placed in detention, if necessary, only in such places as are authorized by Code Section 15-11-504.

Purpose. — Purpose of former Code 1933, § 24A-1402 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) was to make certain that a juvenile's rights were protected when the juvenile

Juvenile court intake officers act in a judicial capacity; therefore, law enforcement officers, who perform an executive function, are per se disqualified from acting as intake officers. Brown v. Scott, 266 Ga. 44, 464 S.E.2d 607 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Juvenile court intake officer is a public officer for purposes of a quo warranto proceeding. Brown v. Scott, 266 Ga. 44, 464 S.E.2d 607 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Failure to comply with notice and hearing requirements of the Juvenile Code, after an allegedly deprived child has been taken from the parent's custody, prejudices or injures the rights of the parent, primarily the right to possession of the child under former Code 1933, §§ 74-106, 74-108, and 74-203 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1, 19-7-25, and 19-9-2). Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Time limits are jurisdictional and must be adhered to. — Time limits established by the General Assembly in the Juvenile Code are jurisdictional and must be strictly adhered to. A failure to comply with the time periods requires dismissal. R.A.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 366, 274 S.E.2d 752 (1980), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 66 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

No jurisdiction for acts punishable by loss of life or confinement for life. — Juvenile court did not have exclusive jurisdiction over delinquent acts for which a child (under 17 years old) may be punished by loss of life or confinement for life in the penitentiary. Nevertheless, the statutory safeguards provided were applicable to both criminal and juvenile cases. Jackson v. State, 146 Ga. App. 375, 246 S.E.2d 407 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Incriminating statements obtained in violation of the Juvenile Code are not rendered per se inadmissible; rather, the issue to be considered is whether there was a knowing and intelligent waiver by the appellant of the appellant's constitutional rights in making the incriminating statements. Lattimore v. State, 265 Ga. 102, 454 S.E.2d 474 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Barber v. State, 267 Ga. 521, 481 S.E.2d 813 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Skidmore v. State, 226 Ga. App. 130, 485 S.E.2d 540 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Gilliam v. State, 268 Ga. 690, 492 S.E.2d 185 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Simon v. State, 269 Ga. 208, 497 S.E.2d 231 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Hanifa v. State, 269 Ga. 797, 505 S.E.2d 731 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19); Attaway v. State, 244 Ga. App. 5, 534 S.E.2d 580 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Evidence not inadmissible because of technical violations. — Since no injury appeared to have resulted, technical violations of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-410, 15-11-411, 15-11-412, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) would not render infirm evidence obtained as a result of such violations. In re J.D.M., 187 Ga. App. 285, 369 S.E.2d 920 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Guardian cooperating with police. — By notifying the defendant's guardian of the defendant's arrest and the grounds therefor, the police complied with subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-501). That the guardian cooperated with the police in the police investigation of the defendant's involvement in the crime did not require a finding that the statement was not voluntarily made. Burnham v. State, 265 Ga. 129, 453 S.E.2d 449 (1995), overruled on other grounds, Stinski v. State, 281 Ga. 783, 642 S.E.2d 1 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Rule as to confessions of juveniles should be same as that for confessions of adults because law enforcement officers cannot be certain when officers question a juvenile what kind of case may develop, and the statutory safeguards are applicable to both criminal and juvenile cases. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402); Jackson v. State, 146 Ga. App. 375, 246 S.E.2d 407 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Confession inadmissible if failure to comply with safeguards. — Failure to comply with the statutory safeguards renders a confession of a juvenile inadmissible in evidence. Bussey v. State, 144 Ga. App. 875, 243 S.E.2d 99 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Failure to comply with the statutory safeguards renders confession of a juvenile inadmissible even in a criminal case where a juvenile is tried as an adult. Manning v. State, 162 Ga. App. 494, 292 S.E.2d 95 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Confession obtained illegally inadmissible in delinquency hearing. — Confession obtained from a juvenile in violation of the statute was inadmissible in a hearing to determine the delinquency of a juvenile. J.J. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 660, 218 S.E.2d 668 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Confession admissible after juvenile opted not to have parent present. — Because the undisputed evidence established that a juvenile defendant was informed of the right to have a parent present during an interview with police in which a custodial statement was obtained, but did not invoke that right, there was no error in allowing the juvenile defendant's statement into evidence. Green v. State, 282 Ga. 672, 653 S.E.2d 23 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-47).

Confession admissible if parent present and rights protected. — Juvenile defendant's confession was admissible despite the fact that the defendant was not taken before an impartial juvenile intake officer but a member of the county police department since the defendant's mother was present during the juvenile's interrogation and it was not alleged that the officer failed to perform any duty imposed upon the officer. Worthy v. State, 253 Ga. 661, 324 S.E.2d 431 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Issue of whether officer to whom juvenile was taken and to whom the juvenile made a confession was a "juvenile court intake officer" did not affect the admissibility of the statement since Miranda warnings were given and the juvenile's mother was present. Houser v. State, 173 Ga. App. 378, 326 S.E.2d 513 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Language of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) requiring the bringing of a child before juvenile authorities was directory and did not serve to render inadmissible a juvenile's confession if the juvenile's rights were otherwise protected, such as if the juvenile's father was present and was continually apprised of the questioning. W.G.C. v. State, 173 Ga. App. 528, 327 S.E.2d 522 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Confession admissible despite technical violation. — Police officer's failure to bring juvenile initially to juvenile court did not render the 14-year old's confession inadmissible since the confession was obtained only after the juvenile waived the juvenile's rights knowingly and voluntarily, and with the knowledge and consent of both the juvenile's mother and legal guardian. In re J.D.G., 207 Ga. App. 698, 429 S.E.2d 118 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Since the defendant's statement was knowingly and intelligently given before officers had an opportunity to take the juvenile anywhere, former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) was neither implicated nor violated. McKoon v. State, 266 Ga. 149, 465 S.E.2d 272 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Juvenile court intake officers. — Officers of the juvenile division of the sheriff's department may not also serve as juvenile court intake officers for purposes of compliance with former statutory provisions. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-66 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

15-11-503. Detention decision; findings.

(a) Restraints on the freedom of an alleged delinquent child prior to adjudication shall be imposed only when there is probable cause to believe that such child committed the act of which he or she is accused, that there is clear and convincing evidence that such child's freedom should be restrained, that no less restrictive alternatives will suffice, and that:

(1) Such child's detention or care is required to reduce the likelihood that he or she may inflict serious bodily harm on others during the interim period;

(2) Such child has a demonstrated pattern of theft or destruction of property such that detention is required to protect the property of others;

(3) Such child's detention is necessary to secure his or her presence in court to protect the jurisdiction and processes of the court; or

(4) An order for such child's detention has been made by the court.

(b) All children who are detained shall be informed of their right to bail as provided by Code Section 15-11-507.

(c) An alleged delinquent child shall not be detained:

(1) To punish, treat, or rehabilitate him or her;

(2) To allow his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian to avoid his or her legal responsibilities;

(3) To satisfy demands by a victim, law enforcement, or the community;

(4) To permit more convenient administrative access to him or her;

(5) To facilitate further interrogation or investigation; or

(6) Due to a lack of a more appropriate facility.

(d) Whenever an alleged delinquent child cannot be unconditionally released, conditional or supervised release that results in the least necessary interference with the liberty of such child shall be favored over more intrusive alternatives.

(e) Whenever the curtailment of the freedom of an alleged delinquent child is permitted, the exercise of authority shall reflect the following values:

(1) Respect for the privacy, dignity, and individuality of such child and his or her family;

(2) Protection of the psychological and physical health of such child;

(3) Tolerance of the diverse values and preferences among different groups and individuals;

(4) Assurance of equality of treatment by race, class, ethnicity, and sex;

(5) Avoidance of regimentation and depersonalization of such child;

(6) Avoidance of stigmatization of such child; and

(7) Assurance that such child has been informed of his or her right to consult with an attorney and that, if such child is an indigent person, an attorney will be provided.

(f) Before entering an order authorizing detention, the court shall determine whether a child's continuation in his or her home is contrary to his or her welfare and whether there are available services that would prevent or eliminate the need for detention. The court shall make that determination on a case-by-case basis and shall make written findings of fact referencing any and all evidence relied upon in reaching its decision.

(g) If an alleged delinquent child can remain in the custody of his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian through the provision of services to prevent the need for removal, the court shall order that such services shall be provided.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Jurisdiction linked to petition. — Former statute indicated that assumption of jurisdiction by a juvenile court was linked to an authorized petition. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1401).

Consideration of evidence from detention hearing at adjudication. — Although evidence presented at a juvenile detention hearing was for the purpose of determining whether preadjudication custody of the child was required, a juvenile court did not err in considering evidence presented at the detention hearing during the adjudication hearing; any error was harmless as the same judge, counsel, and witnesses participated in both hearings and the evidence was substantially the same. 15-11-504. Place of detention; data on child detained.

(a) An alleged delinquent child may be detained only in:

(1) A licensed foster home;

(2) A home approved by the court which may be a public or private home;

(3) The home of such child's noncustodial parent or of a relative;

(4) A facility operated by a licensed child welfare agency; or

(5) A secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility.

(b) Placement shall be made in the least restrictive facility available consistent with the best interests of the child.

(c) A child 15 years of age or older and alleged to be a delinquent child may be held in a jail or other facility for the detention of adults for identification or processing procedures or while awaiting transportation only so long as necessary to complete such activities for up to six hours, or for up to 24 hours if the closest secure residential facility is more than 70 miles from such facility, if all of the following apply:

(1) Such child is detained for the commission of a crime that would constitute a class A designated felony act, class B designated felony act, or a serious violent felony as defined in Code Section 17-10-6.1;

(2) Such child is awaiting a detention hearing;

(3) Such child's detention hearing is scheduled within 24 hours after being taken into custody, excluding weekends and legal holidays;

(4) There is no existing acceptable alternative placement for such child; and

(5) The jail or other facility for the detention of adults provides sight and sound separation for children, including:

(A) Total separation between children and adult facility spatial areas such that there is no verbal, visual, or physical contact and there could be no haphazard or accidental contact between child and adult residents in the respective facilities;

(B) Total separation in all program activities for children and adults within the facilities, including recreation, education, counseling, health care, dining, sleeping, and general living activities;

(C) Continuous visual supervision of a child; and

(D) Separate staff for children and adults, specifically direct care staff such as recreation, education, and counseling, although specialized services staff, such as cooks, bookkeepers, and medical professionals who are not normally in contact with detainees or whose infrequent contacts occur under conditions of separation of children and adults, can serve both.

(d) A child shall not be transported with adults who have been charged with or convicted of a crime. DJJ may transport a child with children who have been charged with or convicted of a crime in superior court.

(e) The official in charge of a jail or other facility for the detention of adult offenders or persons charged with a crime shall inform the court or the juvenile court intake officer immediately when a child who appears to be under the age of 17 years is received at such facility and shall deliver such child to the court upon request or transfer such child to the facility designated by the juvenile court intake officer or the court.

(f) All facilities shall maintain data on each child detained and such data shall be recorded and retained by the facility for three years and shall be made available for inspection during normal business hours by any court exercising juvenile court jurisdiction, by DJJ, by the Governor's Office for Children and Families, by the Criminal Justice Coordinating Council, by the Administrative Office of the Courts, and by the Council of Juvenile Court Judges. Such data shall be used by the inspecting agency for official purposes and shall not be subject to release by such agency pursuant to Article 4 of Chapter 18 of Title 50, nor subject to subpoena. The required data are each detained child's:

(1) Name;

(2) Date of birth;

(3) Sex;

(4) Race;

(5) Offense or offenses for which such child is being detained;

(6) Date of and authority for confinement;

(7) Location of the offense and the name of the school if the offense occurred in a school safety zone, as defined in Code Section 16-11-127.1;

(8) The name of the referral source, including the name of the school if the referring source was a school;

(9) The score on the detention assessment;

(10) The basis for detention if such child's detention assessment score does not in and of itself mandate detention;

(11) The reason for detention, which may include, but shall not be limited to, preadjudication detention, detention while awaiting a postdisposition placement, or serving a short-term program disposition;

(12) Date of and authority for release or transfer; and

(13) Transfer or to whom released.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability. — Contrary to the defendant's claims, neither former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-67 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-442) nor former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-48(e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-135, 15-11-400, and 15-11-412) applied to the defendant's case because both provisions applied when the child was found "unruly," and the defendant was adjudicated delinquent, not unruly. In the Interest of B. Q. L. E., 297 Ga. App. 273, 676 S.E.2d 742, cert. denied, No. S09C1197, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 787 (Ga. 2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-48).

Suspect may first be booked if rights are observed. — There was no violation of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-20 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-155, 15-11-400, 15-11-412, and 15-11-504) because a juvenile suspect was first taken to a police station for booking purposes, if the juvenile was advised of the juvenile's rights under that section to be questioned elsewhere; the juvenile signed a waiver of these rights on an "advice to juveniles" form and was detained at a youth development center. Marshall v. State, 248 Ga. 227, 282 S.E.2d 301 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Confession admissible if juvenile taken before county police. — Juvenile defendant's confession was admissible despite the fact that the juvenile was not taken before an impartial juvenile intake officer but a member of the county police department since the defendant's mother was present during the juvenile's interrogation and it was not alleged that the officer failed to perform any duty imposed upon the officer. Worthy v. State, 253 Ga. 661, 324 S.E.2d 431 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-20).

All detention facilities not supervised and controlled by juvenile courts. — Juvenile courts are not granted the power and authority to supervise and control all the various detention facilities. Jones v. State, 134 Ga. App. 611, 215 S.E.2d 483 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

No guarantee of all bed space desired by courts. — Subsection (a) of former section contemplated otherwise than that the Department of Human Resources guarantee all bed space desired by the juvenile courts. Jones v. State, 134 Ga. App. 611, 215 S.E.2d 483 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Confinement designation not exercise of court's jurisdiction. — Juvenile court's order for detention was merely an order pursuant to the former statute; designating the place of confinement was not an exercise of jurisdiction by that court. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

Foster relationship gives rise to no state-created rights. — Children are placed in foster homes as an alternative to institutional care for what is clearly designed as a transitional phase in the child's life. Therefore, in the eyes of the state, which creates the foster relationship, the relationship is considered temporary at the outset and gives rise to no state-created rights in the foster parents. Drummond v. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children's Servs., 563 F.2d 1200 (5th Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 437 U.S. 910, 98 S. Ct. 3103, 57 L. Ed. 2d 1141 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1403).

School officials not involved in admission of student to detention center. — Because the school officials exercised their discretion under the law to report alleged criminal action against a school resource officer by the student, there was no evidence that school officials were involved in the decision to admit the student into the youth detention center, and the student was allowed to return to school upon the student's release from the youth detention center, the disciplinary hearing was not untimely, as there was evidence that the student had not been suspended before the hearing, and, thus, the superior court erred in reversing the state board of education's decision and remanding the case to the state board with direction to vacate the adjudication of expulsion entered against the student. Fulton County Bd. of Educ. v. D. R. H., 325 Ga. App. 53, 752 S.E.2d 103 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 54-11-48).

Restrictive custody appropriate. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by ordering a juvenile to serve 12 months in restrictive custody as the juvenile's school disciplinary record; record of delinquency; violations of probation; immaturity; susceptibility to temptation; use of marijuana; lack of positive male role models; lack of structure; and the absence of other activities to occupy time demonstrated that restrictive custody was in the juvenile's best interests, as well as the community's, and was not arbitrary. In the Interest of C. M., 331 Ga. App. 16, 769 S.E.2d 737 (2015).

Juvenile intake officer to locate appropriate juvenile facility. — Juvenile intake officer should make all reasonable efforts to locate an appropriate juvenile facility for the detention of an allegedly delinquent child before determining that such a facility was "not available" for purposes of the former statute. 1978 Op. 15-11-505. Use of detention assessments to determine if detention is warranted; "serious delinquent act" defined.

(a) If an alleged delinquent child is brought before the court, delivered to a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility or foster care facility designated by the court, or otherwise taken into custody, the juvenile court intake officer shall immediately administer a detention assessment and determine if such child should be detained, taking into account subsection (b) of this Code section. Such child shall be released unless it appears that his or her detention is warranted.

(b)(1) As used in this subsection, the term "serious delinquent act" means to commit, attempt to commit, conspiracy to commit, or solicitation of another to commit a delinquent act which if committed by an adult would constitute:

(A) Aggravated assault;

(B) Aggravated battery;

(C) Aggravated child molestation;

(D) Aggravated cruelty to animals;

(E) Aggravated sexual battery;

(F) Aggravated sodomy;

(G) Armed robbery involving a firearm;

(H) Arson in the first degree;

(I) Burglary in the first degree;

(J) Child molestation;

(K) Escape;

(L) Hijacking a motor vehicle in the first degree;

(M) Home invasion in the first or second degree;

(N) Involuntary manslaughter;

(O) Murder;

(P) Participating in criminal gang activity, as defined in subparagraphs (A) through (G) and (J) of paragraph (1) of Code Section 16-15-3, in violation of Code Section 16-15-4;

(U) Trafficking of substances in violation of Code Section 16-13-31 or 16-13-31.1;

(V) Vehicular homicide; or

(W) Voluntary manslaughter.

(2) When a child who is 13 years of age or younger is taken into custody as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section for any delinquent act other than a serious delinquent act, there shall be a presumption that such child should not be detained.

15-11-506. Detention hearing; time limitations.

(a) A detention hearing shall be held to determine whether preadjudication custody of an alleged delinquent child is required. If such hearing is not held within the time specified, such child shall be released from detention or foster care.

(b) If an alleged delinquent child is detained and is not released from preadjudication custody, a detention hearing shall be held promptly and not later than:

(1) Two days after such child is placed in preadjudication custody if such child is taken into custody without an arrest warrant; or

(2) Five days after such child is placed in preadjudication custody if such child is taken into custody pursuant to an arrest warrant.

(c) Notwithstanding Code Section 15-11-5, if the detention hearing cannot be held within two days in accordance with paragraph (1) of subsection (b) of this Code section because the date for the hearing falls on a weekend or legal holiday, the court shall review the decision to detain such child and make a finding based on probable cause within 48 hours of such child being placed in preadjudication custody.

(d) Reasonable oral or written notice of the detention hearing, stating the time, place, and purpose of the hearing, shall be given to an alleged delinquent child and to his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian, if he or she can be found. In the event such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian cannot be found, the court shall forthwith appoint a guardian ad litem for such child.

(e) If an alleged delinquent child is not released from preadjudication custody and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian or guardian ad litem, if any, has not been notified of the hearing and did not appear or waive appearance at such hearing and thereafter files an affidavit showing such facts, the court shall rehear the matter without unnecessary delay and shall order such child's release unless it appears from such hearing that such child's detention or foster care is warranted or required.

(f) At the commencement of the detention hearing, the court shall inform an alleged delinquent child of:

(1) The contents of the complaint or petition;

(2) The nature of the proceedings;

(3) The right to make an application for bail, as provided by Code Section 15-11-507 and Title 17;

(4) The possible consequences or dispositions that may apply to such child's case following adjudication; and

(5) His or her due process rights, including the right to an attorney and to an appointed attorney; the privilege against self-incrimination; that he or she may remain silent and that anything said may be used against him or her; the right to confront anyone who testifies against him or her and to cross-examine any persons who appear to testify against him or her; the right to testify and to compel other witnesses to attend and testify in his or her own behalf; the right to a speedy adjudication hearing; and the right to appeal and be provided with a transcript for such purpose.

(g) If an alleged delinquent child can be returned to the custody of his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian through the provision of services to eliminate the need for removal, the court shall release such child to the physical custody of his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian and order that those services shall be provided.

(h) If an alleged delinquent child cannot be returned to the custody of his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian, a probation officer or community supervision officer, as applicable, shall provide referrals for services as soon as possible to enable such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian to obtain any assistance that may be needed to effectively provide the care and control necessary for such child to return home.

(i) For purposes of this Code section, preadjudication custody begins when a juvenile court intake officer authorizes the placement of a child in a secure residential facility.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Notice and hearing requirements of former Code 1933, §§ 24A-1402 and 24A-1404 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-501, 15-11-502, 15-11-506, and 15-11-507) were mandatory and must be adhered to in order for the juvenile court to proceed with the adjudicatory hearing. If for some reason the statutes were not, dismissal of the petition would be without prejudice. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Provisions for detention and prosecution of a juvenile are mandatory, and a failure to comply with the provisions prejudices or injures the due process rights of the juvenile. In re B.A.P., 180 Ga. App. 433, 349 S.E.2d 218 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21).

Failure to comply with notice and hearing requirements of the Juvenile Code, after an allegedly deprived child has been taken from the parent's custody, prejudices or injures the rights of the parent, primarily the right to possession of the child under former Code 1933, §§ 74-106, 74-108, and 74-203 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1, 19-7-25, and 19-9-2). Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Applicability of provisions of this section. — Subsection (c) of former Code 1933, § 24A-1404 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-506) had no application unless a juvenile was taken into custody, not released under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58), but instead brought before the juvenile court or delivered to a detention or shelter care facility designated by the court and then released after an investigation under subsection (a) of former Code 1933, § 24A-1404. D.C. v. State, 145 Ga. App. 868, 245 S.E.2d 26 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Because a juvenile's allegations that the state failed to comply with the procedural requirements under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49(c)(1) and (e) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-506) should have been raised in the superior court and had no bearing on the validity of the delinquency petitions or the substantive charges against the juvenile in juvenile court, said court properly prevented the juvenile from presenting evidence regarding the same. In the Interest of K.C., 290 Ga. App. 416, 659 S.E.2d 821 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49).

Section inapplicable. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-506) did not apply because the juvenile was released to the juvenile's parents after being taken to the police station. In re C.W., 227 Ga. App. 763, 490 S.E.2d 442 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21).

Failure to comply with time limits requires dismissal. — Time limits established by the General Assembly in the Juvenile Code are jurisdictional and must be strictly adhered to. A failure to comply with the time periods set out in the statute requires dismissal. R.A.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 366, 274 S.E.2d 752 (1980), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 66 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Dismissal without prejudice for violating five day time limit. — In dismissing a deprivation petition because the petition was filed outside of the five-day limit of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49(e) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-506), the trial court properly made the dismissal without prejudice. The Georgia Supreme Court had stated that in such a case any dismissal for failure to follow one of the procedural rules was without prejudice. In the Interest of E.C., 291 Ga. App. 440, 662 S.E.2d 252 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49).

Running of time limit for holding hearing. — If juvenile was originally under the jurisdiction of the superior court, the time limit for holding a juvenile detention hearing did not begin running when the Attorney General mailed a letter to the juvenile court declining prosecution as an adult, but began to run when all the requirements for transfer were met and a petition for delinquency was filed. In re T.C.S., 220 Ga. App. 545, 469 S.E.2d 802 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21).

Importance of procedural due process in juvenile proceedings. — Safeguarding of the child's procedural rights take on the same importance that procedural due process has in an adult criminal proceeding context. R.A.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 366, 274 S.E.2d 752 (1980), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 66 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Waiver of requirements of former section. — Although the procedural requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-506 have been held to be mandatory, such requirements can be waived. Irvin v. Department of Human Resources, 159 Ga. App. 101, 282 S.E.2d 664 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21).

Right to counsel of accused juvenile. — An accused juvenile is entitled to counsel at an "informal detention hearing,", or at any of the other stages of any proceedings alleging delinquency, unruliness, and deprivation. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Jurisdiction linked to petition. — Former statute indicated that assumption of jurisdiction by a juvenile court was linked to an authorized petition. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

No acquisition of jurisdiction by juvenile court ordering place of detention. — Juvenile court's order for detention was merely a designation of the place of detention as required by former statute, the juvenile court did not acquire jurisdiction by the court's order for detention. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Former Juvenile Code recognized that parent was "party" to proceedings involving the parent's child. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Definition of "day." — Word "day," not being qualified, means a calendar or civil day consisting of 24 hours from midnight to midnight. J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1404).

Charging petition "logged" in by clerk deemed "presented to the court." — When the chief deputy clerk and calendar clerk received a petition charging a minor with commission of various delinquent acts and "logged" the petition in, the petition was "presented to the court" within the meaning of subsection (e) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-506). P.L.A. v. State, 172 Ga. App. 820, 324 S.E.2d 781 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21).

Adjudication hearing required after an initial hearing. — By restraining the child at an initial hearing, the juvenile court implicitly found probable cause, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-46.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-415). The juvenile court therefore erred in later deciding that a 10-day adjudication hearing was actually a detention hearing and in resetting the 10-day adjudication hearing. In the Interest of K.L., 303 Ga. App. 679, 694 S.E.2d 372 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49).

Illegal detention. — When the petition on the charge on which a juvenile was detained had not been presented within 72 hours of the detention hearing, the state was not at liberty to hold the juvenile until the state developed evidence of other crimes or discovered the juvenile had committed other crimes, although if the charge upon which the juvenile had been detained was properly petitioned within 72 hours and the juvenile was then lawfully detained, the state could have prosecuted the juvenile at the subsequent adjudicatory hearing within ten days under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-522) for any offenses the state uncovered in the meantime, including one upon a petition filed the day of the adjudicatory hearing. In re B.A.P., 180 Ga. App. 433, 349 S.E.2d 218 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21).

Since the petition was not presented within 72 hours of a detention hearing as required by subsection (e) of former

O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-506), the state cannot thus illegally detain the child and then render such a jurisdictional defect harmless by setting the adjudication hearing within 13 days (72 hours plus 10 days) of the detention hearing under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-522). In re B.A.P., 180 Ga. App. 433, 349 S.E.2d 218 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21).

Return of a child to custody following the child's escape was not an "informal detention" pursuant to subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-506) so as to require a hearing within 72 hours of the child's recapture. In re J.L.P., 226 Ga. App. 160, 486 S.E.2d 387 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21).

Dismissal of depravation complaint. — Because a child's mother and stepfather tested negative for chlamydia and were cooperating with authorities, pursuant to Ga. Unif. Juv. Ct. R. 8.1 and former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-506), the trial court properly dismissed a depravation complaint for lack of reasonable grounds showing intentional or unintentional misconduct resulting in abuse or neglect of the child. In the Interest of J. F., 310 Ga. App. 807, 714 S.E.2d 399 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49).

Additional charges. — Since a child remained in custody continually from the child's arrest on December 31, 1990, and a detention hearing was held on January 2, 1991, and the 72-hour period following that hearing did not expire until January 5, the state was authorized to bring additional charges at a detention hearing on January 7, 1991, and the additional charges constituted compliance with subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-506). In re S.E.M., 201 Ga. App. 454, 411 S.E.2d 350 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21).

Timely hearing. — When the defendant was arrested in the early hours of Friday, a hearing conducted at 9:00 a.m. the following Monday was timely. Livingston v. State, 266 Ga. 501, 467 S.E.2d 886 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21).

Findings made in unrecorded hearing reversed. — Because the juvenile court primarily based the juvenile court's decision that a parent's two children were deprived, awarding temporary custody of the children to the county, on evidence received at an unrecorded hearing, and a waiver requiring a transcript of that hearing was not in evidence, those findings were reversed, and the case was remanded. In the Interest of D.P., 284 Ga. App. 453, 644 S.E.2d 299 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49).

Consideration of evidence from detention hearing at adjudication. — Although evidence presented at a juvenile detention hearing was for the purpose of determining whether preadjudication custody of the child was required, a juvenile court did not err in considering evidence presented at the detention hearing during the adjudication hearing; any error was harmless as the same judge, counsel, and witnesses participated in both hearings and the evidence was substantially the same. In the Interest of C. S., 334 Ga. App. 153, 778 S.E.2d 396 (2015).

15-11-507. (For effective date, see note.) Bail.

(a) All children alleged to have committed a delinquent act shall have the same right to bail as adults.

(b) The judge shall admit to bail all children in the same manner and under the same circumstances and procedures as are applicable to adults accused of the commission of crimes, with the exception that applying for bail, holding a hearing on the application, and granting bail for children alleged to have committed a delinquent act may only occur:

(1) At intake in accordance with Code Section 15-11-503; or

(2) At the detention hearing in accordance with Code Section 15-11-506.

(c) A court shall be authorized to release an alleged delinquent child on bail if the court finds that such child:

(1) Poses no significant risk of fleeing from the jurisdiction of the court or failing to appear in court when required;

(2) Poses no significant threat or danger to any person, to the community, or to any property in the community;

(3) Poses no significant risk of committing any felony pending trial; and

(4) Poses no significant risk of intimidating witnesses or otherwise obstructing the administration of justice.

(d) If a child is accused of committing an act that would be a serious violent felony, as defined in Code Section 17-10-6.1, if committed by an adult and such child has previously been adjudicated for a delinquent act for committing an act that would be a serious violent felony if committed by an adult, there shall be a rebuttable presumption that no condition or combination of conditions will reasonably assure the appearance of such child as required or assure the safety of any other person or the community.

(e) Any person having legal custody or an adult blood relative or stepparent of an alleged delinquent child shall be entitled to post bail but shall be required immediately to return such child to the individual or entity having legal custody of such child.

(f) (For effective date, see note.) For the purposes of this Code section, the term "bail" shall include the release of a child on an unsecured judicial release as provided for in Code Section 17-6-12.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Jurisdiction of trial court not affected by denial of bail. — Even assuming an irregularity in the prior imprisonment of the appellant, such as an abuse of discretion in the denial of bail, this would in nowise affect the jurisdiction of the court trying appellant. R.T.M. v. State, 138 Ga. App. 92, 225 S.E.2d 510 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

15-11-508. Notification to victim of child's release from detention.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term:

(1) "Notice" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 17-17-3.

(2) "Victim" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 17-17-3.

(3) "Violent delinquent act" means to commit, attempt to commit, conspiracy to commit, or solicitation of another to commit a delinquent act which if committed by an adult would constitute:

(A) A serious violent felony as defined by Code Section 17-10-6.1;

(B) A class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act;

(C) Stalking or aggravated stalking as provided by Article 7 of Chapter 5 of Title 16; or

(D) Any attempt to commit, conspiracy to commit, or solicitation of another to commit an offense enumerated in subparagraphs (A) through (C) of this paragraph.

(b) If a child accused of a violent delinquent act is detained pending adjudication, a juvenile court intake officer shall provide notice to the victim, whenever practicable, that such child is to be released from detention not less than 24 hours prior to such child's release from detention.

(c) Not less than 48 hours prior to a child who has been adjudicated to have committed a violent delinquent act being released from detention or transferred to a nonsecure residential facility, a juvenile court intake officer shall, whenever practicable, provide notice to the victim of such pending release or transfer.

(d) Victim notification need not be given unless a victim has expressed a desire for such notification and has provided a juvenile court intake officer with a current address and telephone number. It shall be the duty of a juvenile court intake officer to advise the victim of his or her right to notification and of the requirement of the victim to provide a primary and personal telephone number to which such notification shall be directed.

Part 4

Intake or Arraignment

15-11-510. Intake; informal adjustment.

(a) If an alleged delinquent child has not been detained after the filing of a complaint, he or she shall be promptly referred to intake or given a date for arraignment.

(b) At intake, the court, the juvenile court intake officer, or other officer designated by the court shall inform a child of:

(1) The contents of the complaint;

(2) The nature of the proceedings;

(3) The possible consequences or dispositions that may apply to such child's case following adjudication; and

(4) His or her due process rights, including the right to an attorney and to an appointed attorney; the privilege against self-incrimination; that he or she may remain silent and that anything said may be used against him or her; the right to confront anyone who testifies against him or her and to cross-examine any persons who appear to testify against him or her; the right to testify and to compel other witnesses to attend and testify in his or her own behalf; the right to a speedy adjudication hearing; and the right to appeal and be provided with a transcript for such purpose.

(c) A juvenile court intake officer may elect to pursue a case through informal adjustment or other nonadjudicatory procedure in accordance with the provisions of Code Section 15-11-515.

(d) If a case is to be prosecuted further and handled other than by informal adjustment or other nonadjudicatory procedure, a referral shall be made to the prosecuting attorney and a petition for delinquency shall be filed within 30 days of the filing of a complaint.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-510, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-511. Arraignment; admissions at arraignment; right to attorney.

(a) At arraignment, the court shall inform a child of:

(1) The contents of the petition alleging delinquency;

(2) The nature of the proceedings;

(3) The possible consequences or dispositions that may apply to such child's case following adjudication; and

(4) His or her due process rights, including the right to an attorney and to an appointed attorney; the privilege against self-incrimination; that he or she may remain silent and that anything said may be used against him or her; the right to confront anyone who testifies against him or her and to cross-examine any persons who appear to testify against him or her; the right to testify and to compel other witnesses to attend and testify in his or her own behalf; the right to a speedy adjudication hearing; and the right to appeal and be provided with a transcript for such purpose.

(b) The court may accept an admission at arraignment and may proceed immediately to disposition if a child is represented by counsel at arraignment. If a child's liberty is not in jeopardy, he or she may waive the right to counsel at arraignment, provided that such waiver is made knowingly, voluntarily, and on the record. A child represented by counsel or whose liberty is not in jeopardy may make a preliminary statement indicating whether he or she plans to admit or deny the allegations of the complaint at the adjudication hearing. The court shall not accept an admission from a child whose liberty is in jeopardy and who is unrepresented by counsel.

(c) The court shall appoint an attorney to represent an alleged delinquent child whose liberty is in jeopardy and who is an indigent person.

The 2018 amendment, effective July 1, 2018, added the proviso at the end of the second sentence of subsection (b).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — Many of the following annotations should be examined in light of the amendment to Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. XIV, Para. VI (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. II, Para. VI) which took effect November 1, 1981.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 24A-1101, 24A-1201, pre-2000 Code Sections 15-11-15 and 15-11-16 and pre-2014 Code Sections 15-11-29 and 15-11-30, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Arraignment during adjudicatory hearing. — In the absence of a transcript, a juvenile failed to establish that former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) was violated since a hearing was timely scheduled and held, an arraignment was conducted at the beginning, the juvenile requested legal counsel and was found eligible to receive counsel, and a continuance was granted so counsel could be secured; conducting an arraignment was not inconsistent with an adjudicatory hearing. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996).

Arraignment hearing scheduled within the 60-day time period is not sufficient to satisfy the requirement that an adjudicatory hearing must be set within that period. In re R.O.B., 216 Ga. App. 181, 453 S.E.2d 776 (1995).

Delinquency adjudication hearing serves same purpose as arraignment. — Delinquency adjudication hearing merely serves the same purpose in the civil juvenile court proceeding as an arraignment under the criminal code. M.E.B. v. State, 230 Ga. 154, 195 S.E.2d 891 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101); D.C.E. v. State, 130 Ga. App. 724, 204 S.E.2d 481 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1101).

Rule as to confessions of juveniles should be same as that for confessions of adults because law enforcement officers cannot be certain when officers question a juvenile what kind of case may develop, and the statutory safeguards are applicable to both criminal and juvenile cases. Crawford v. State, 240 Ga. 321, 240 S.E.2d 824 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402); Jackson v. State, 146 Ga. App. 375, 246 S.E.2d 407 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Confession inadmissible if failure to comply with safeguards. — Failure to comply with the statutory safeguards renders a confession of a juvenile inadmissible in evidence. Bussey v. State, 144 Ga. App. 875, 243 S.E.2d 99 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Failure to comply with the statutory safeguards renders confession of a juvenile inadmissible even in a criminal case where a juvenile is tried as an adult. Manning v. State, 162 Ga. App. 494, 292 S.E.2d 95 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Confession obtained illegally inadmissible in delinquency hearing. — Confession obtained from a juvenile in violation of the statute was inadmissible in a hearing to determine the delinquency of a juvenile. J.J. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 660, 218 S.E.2d 668 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1402).

Confession admissible after juvenile opted not to have parent present. — Because the undisputed evidence established that a juvenile defendant was informed of the right to have a parent present during an interview with police in which a custodial statement was obtained, but did not invoke that right, there was no error in allowing the juvenile defendant's statement into evidence. Green v. State, 282 Ga. 672, 653 S.E.2d 23 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-47).

Confession admissible if parent present and rights protected. — Juvenile defendant's confession was admissible despite the fact that the defendant was not taken before an impartial juvenile intake officer but a member of the county police department since the defendant's mother was present during the juvenile's interrogation and it was not alleged that the officer failed to perform any duty imposed upon the officer. Worthy v. State, 253 Ga. 661, 324 S.E.2d 431 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Issue of whether officer to whom juvenile was taken and to whom the juvenile made a confession was a "juvenile court intake officer" did not affect the admissibility of the statement since Miranda warnings were given and the juvenile's mother was present. Houser v. State, 173 Ga. App. 378, 326 S.E.2d 513 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Language of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) requiring the bringing of a child before juvenile authorities was directory and did not serve to render inadmissible a juvenile's confession if the juvenile's rights were otherwise protected, such as if the juvenile's father was present and was continually apprised of the questioning. W.G.C. v. State, 173 Ga. App. 528, 327 S.E.2d 522 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Confession admissible despite technical violation. — Police officer's failure to bring juvenile initially to juvenile court did not render the 14-year old's confession inadmissible since the confession was obtained only after the juvenile waived the juvenile's rights knowingly and voluntarily, and with the knowledge and consent of both the juvenile's mother and legal guardian. In re J.D.G., 207 Ga. App. 698, 429 S.E.2d 118 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Since the defendant's statement was knowingly and intelligently given before officers had an opportunity to take the juvenile anywhere, former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-133, 15-11-501, and 15-11-502) was neither implicated nor violated. McKoon v. State, 266 Ga. 149, 465 S.E.2d 272 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-19).

Part 5

Informal Adjustment

15-11-515. Informal adjustment; circumstances; admissions; exceptions.

(a) Before a petition for informal adjustment is filed, a probation officer or other officer designated by the court, subject to the court's direction, may inform the parties of informal adjustment if it appears that:

(1) The admitted facts bring the case within the jurisdiction of the court;

(2) Counsel and advice without an adjudication would be in the best interests of the public and a child, taking into account at least the following factors:

(A) The nature of the alleged offense;

(B) The age and individual circumstances of such child;

(C) Such child's prior record, if any;

(D) Recommendations for informal adjustment made by the complainant or the victim; and

(E) Services to meet such child's needs and problems may be unavailable within the formal court system or may be provided more effectively by alternative community programs; and

(3) A child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian consent with knowledge that consent is not obligatory.

(b) The giving of counsel and advice shall not extend beyond three months unless extended by the court for an additional period not to exceed three months and shall not authorize the detention of a child if not otherwise permitted by this article.

(c) An incriminating statement made by a participant in an informal adjustment to the person giving counsel or advice and in the discussion or conferences incident thereto shall not be used against the declarant over objection in any hearing except in a hearing on disposition in a juvenile court proceeding or in a criminal proceeding upon conviction for the purpose of a presentence investigation.

(d) If a child is alleged to have committed a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act, the case shall not be subject to informal adjustment, counsel, or advice without the prior consent of the district attorney or his or her authorized representative.

DELINQUENCY PETITION

15-11-520. Authority to file petition.

A petition alleging delinquency shall be filed by an attorney as set forth in Code Section 15-18-6.1.

15-11-521. Time limitations for filing petition.

(a) If a child is in detention prior to adjudication, a petition alleging delinquency shall be filed not later than 72 hours after the detention hearing. If no petition alleging delinquency is filed within the applicable time, such child shall be released from detention and the complaint shall be dismissed without prejudice. Such petition may be refiled as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section within the statute of limitations.

(b) If a child is not in detention prior to adjudication, a petition alleging delinquency shall be filed within 30 days of the filing of the complaint alleging violation of a criminal law or within 30 days of such child's release pursuant to a determination that detention is not warranted. Upon a showing of good cause and notice to all parties, the court may grant an extension of time for filing a petition alleging delinquency. The court shall issue a written order reciting the facts justifying any extension.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-521, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Question of dismissal of action if neither petition nor extension filed. — Because two conflicting decisions that governed a case regarding interpretation of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-521(b) were before the Supreme Court of Georgia on certiorari review, the court certified resolution of the case to the Supreme Court via a certified question under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. V, Para. IV. To await the Supreme Court's decision would run afoul of the two-term rule, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. IX, Para. II. In the Interest of J. F., 338 Ga. App. 15, 789 S.E.2d 274 (2016).

30-day deadline. — Under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-521(b), the state must file a petition alleging delinquency against a juvenile who is not detained within 30 days of filing of the complaint or seek an extension of that deadline from the juvenile court; if the state misses the 30-day deadline and does not seek an extension, the case must be dismissed without prejudice. In the Interest of M.D.H., 300 Ga. 46, 793 S.E.2d 49 (2016).

15-11-522. Contents of petition.

A petition alleging delinquency shall be verified and may be on information and belief. It shall set forth plainly and with particularity:

(1) The facts which bring a child within the jurisdiction of the court, with a statement that it is in the best interests of such child and the public that the proceeding be brought and that such child is in need of supervision, treatment, or rehabilitation, as the case may be;

(2) The name, age, and residence address of such child on whose behalf such petition is brought;

(3) The name and residence address of such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian; or, if such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian does not reside or cannot be found within this state or if such place of residence address is unknown, the name of any of such child's known adult relative residing within the county or, if there is none, such child's known adult relative residing nearest to the location of the court;

(4) If a child is in custody, the place of his or her detention and the time such child was taken into custody;

(5) If a child is being charged with a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act; and

(6) Whether any of the information required by this Code section is unknown.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-25 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-38.1, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Juvenile petition must satisfy "due process." — Although a juvenile petition does not have to be drafted with the exactitude of a criminal accusation, the petition must satisfy "due process." T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Since the state's petition failed to set forth in ordinary and concise language the facts demonstrating the nature of the parent's alleged failure to provide proper parental care or control, the parent lacked sufficient information to enable the parent to prepare a defense, and this amounted to a denial of due process. In re D.R.C., 191 Ga. App. 278, 381 S.E.2d 426 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

To meet constitutional requirement of due process the language of a juvenile petition must pass two tests: (1) the petition must contain sufficient factual details to inform the juvenile of the nature of the offense; and (2) the petition must provide data adequate to enable the accused to prepare a defense. T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Allege with particularity. — Due process requires that the petition alleging delinquency must set forth with specificity the alleged violation of law either in the language of the particular section, or so plainly that the nature of the offense charged may be easily understood by the child and the child's parents or guardian. D.P. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 680, 200 S.E.2d 499 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Petition filed alleging delinquency, deprivation, or unruliness must set forth alleged misconduct with particularity. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Insufficient notice to juvenile of alleged offense. — If a juvenile is brought to trial on a petition alleging delinquency based on a violation of former Code 1933, § 26-1601 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-7-1) but was adjudicated delinquent for violating former Code 1933, § 26-1806 (see now O.C.G.A. § 16-8-7), there was insufficient notice to the juvenile of the offense alleged to be the basis of the juvenile's delinquency and the trial court must be reversed. D.P. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 680, 200 S.E.2d 499 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Statement of custody irrelevant if jurisdiction otherwise exists. — If jurisdiction otherwise existed, such as if the action was brought in the county of the residence of both mother and son, then the requirement in paragraph (4) of former Code 1933, § 24A-1603 had no relevancy to the right of the trial court to handle the case. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

Assumption of jurisdiction linked to authorized petition. — An order for detention clearly did not meet the requirements of a petition filed pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24A-1603 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-152, 15-11-280, 15-11-390, 15-11-420, 15-11-422, and 15-11-522) to commence proceedings under former Code 1933, § 24A-1601 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-420), and the assumption of jurisdiction by the juvenile court is linked to the authorized petition. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1603).

In a hearing on parental custody in a divorce action, the trial court erred in awarding custody of the parties' minor children to the Department of Family and Children Services based upon findings that the children were deprived and the parents unfit because the mother had no notice that the superior court judge might award custody of the children to a third party based upon standards of deprivation. Watkins v. Watkins, 266 Ga. 269, 466 S.E.2d 860 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

Preparation and verification. — Because counsel for the Department of Children & Family Services stated to the court that counsel prepared the termination petition, that the petition was reviewed, verified, and then signed by counsel the next day, this was sufficient to comply with the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-152, 15-11-280, 15-11-390, 15-11-422, and 15-11-522). In re A.K.M., 235 Ga. App. 853, 510 S.E.2d 611 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-25).

Service by correctional officer upon incarcerated father. — Personal service of a summons and a petition of deprivation by a correctional officer upon an incarcerated father was sufficient as the service procedures in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1 et seq., were not adopted nor were binding on the juvenile court, and the correctional officer was acting under the direction of the court for the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). In the Interest of A.J.M., 277 Ga. App. 646, 627 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38.1).

15-11-523. Amendment of petition.

(a) A prosecuting attorney may amend a petition alleging delinquency at any time prior to the commencement of the adjudication hearing. However, if an amendment is made, a child may request a continuance of his or her adjudication hearing. A continuance may be granted by the court for such period as required in the interest of justice.

(b) When a petition alleging delinquency is amended to include material changes to the allegations or new charges of delinquency for adjudication, the petition shall be served in accordance with Code Sections 15-11-530 and 15-11-531.

(c) After jeopardy attaches, a petition alleging delinquency shall not be amended to include new charges of delinquency.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-523, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Permitting state's mid-trial amendment of petition to change the charge against the juvenile from a misdemeanor to a felony was error since the amendment was done without notice and provision of a continuance to allow additional time for preparation of a defense. In re D.W, 232 Ga. App. 777, 503 S.E.2d 647 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Amendment erroneously allowed. — Trial court erred in allowing an amendment to the delinquency petition because the state sought to make a material amendment to the petition absent proper notice and service and after the hearing had commenced and jeopardy attached pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-480(b). In the Interest of J.H., 335 Ga. App. 848, 783 S.E.2d 367 (2016).

Part 7

Summons and Service

15-11-530. Issuance of summons.

(a) The court shall direct the issuance of a summons to a child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian requiring them to appear before the court at the time fixed to answer the allegations of a petition alleging delinquency. A copy of the petition shall accompany the summons.

(b) The summons shall state that a party shall be entitled to have an attorney in the proceedings and that the court will appoint an attorney if the party is an indigent person.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Parent's right to appeal delinquency adjudication. — As parties to their child's delinquency action pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-160, 15-11-423, and 15-11-530), the child's parents had the right to appeal the juvenile court's judgment and to participate in the appellate process. In the Interest of J.L.B., 280 Ga. App. 556, 634 S.E.2d 514 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Proceeding null when no waiver of rights nor proper service. — If, in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of the right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and if the hearing is not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding is an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

No fixed date on summons. — Summons served upon a parent did not have to require the parent to appear in court on any fixed date in order to answer allegations in a petition to terminate the parent's parental rights. In re W.R.S., 213 Ga. App. 616, 445 S.E.2d 367 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

If there was no service of process and notice as required by former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-26(b) and 15-11-27(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-1 et seq.) and there was no valid waiver of notice of the pending charge by service of process or otherwise, the entire hearing is a nullity. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Waiver of right to prior notice of charge. — If neither the juvenile nor the mother were represented by counsel at the dispositional hearing, neither party knew the nature of the charge filed against the minor, and neither party knew of the serious consequences which may result in the case of an adverse adjudication of the petition filed against the juvenile, it is highly unlikely that the parties understood the significance of waiving their right to prior notice of the pending charge. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

15-11-531. Service of summons.

(a) If a party to be served with a summons is within this state and can be found, the summons shall be served upon him or her personally as soon as possible and at least 72 hours before the adjudication hearing.

(b) If a party to be served is within this state and cannot be found but his or her address is known or can be ascertained with due diligence, the summons shall be served upon such party at least five days before the adjudication hearing by mailing him or her a copy by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested.

(c) If an individual to be served is outside this state but his or her address is known or can be ascertained with due diligence, notice of the summons shall be made at least five days before the adjudication hearing either by delivering a copy to such party personally or by mailing a copy to him or her by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested.

(d) Service of the summons may be made by any suitable person under the direction of the court.

(e) The court may authorize payment from county funds of the costs of service and of necessary travel expenses incurred by persons summoned or otherwise required to appear at the hearing.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 24-2406 and 24A-1702, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-27 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-39.1, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

There was no equal protection violation in framework of this former Code section since similarly situated residents and nonresidents were accorded equal treatment and it was only in cases when laws were applied differently to different persons under the same or similar circumstances that the equal protection of the law was denied. In re M.A.C., 244 Ga. 645, 261 S.E.2d 590 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1702).

Service of summons and termination petition was ineffective since, even though the summons was left at the mother's residence, there was no evidence that the summons was left with a statutorily appropriate person, and service of the petition the day before the hearing was not timely. In re D.R.W., 229 Ga. App. 571, 494 S.E.2d 379 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-27).

Service by correctional officer on incarcerated parent. — Personal service of a summons and a petition of deprivation, by a correctional officer upon an incarcerated parent, was sufficient as the service procedures in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1 et seq., were not adopted nor were binding on the juvenile court, and the correctional officer was acting under the direction of the court for the purposes of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). In the Interest of A.J.M., 277 Ga. App. 646, 627 S.E.2d 399 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Service not perfected on incarcerated person. — Deprivation order had to be vacated and the case remanded because service of the deprivation petition on the parent in question, who was incarcerated, was not perfected in accordance with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531). The parent had not waived personal service and personal service was not waived simply by actual notice having been achieved. In the Interest of A. R., 296 Ga. App. 62, 673 S.E.2d 586 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Requirement of "reasonable effort" to find party. — Former statute required a showing by the department that a "reasonable effort" had been made to find a putative father or ascertain his address. In re J.B., 140 Ga. App. 668, 231 S.E.2d 821 (1976) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

If there was no service of process and notice as required by the former provisions and there was no valid waiver of notice of the pending charge by service of process or otherwise, the entire hearing is a nullity. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Waiver of right to notice. — If neither the juvenile nor the juvenile's mother were represented by counsel at the dispositional hearing, neither party knew the nature of the charge filed against the minor, and neither party knew of the serious consequences which may result in the case of an adverse adjudication of the petition filed against the juvenile, it is highly unlikely that the parties understood the significance of waiving the parties right to prior notice of the pending charge. In re W.M.F., 180 Ga. App. 397, 349 S.E.2d 265 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Timeliness of petition. — Juvenile was entitled to a copy of the delinquency petition filed against the juvenile, and pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), the juvenile had a right to receive the petition at least 24 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing; however, the juvenile waived any objection the juvenile had on the grounds of improper service since the juvenile received the petition right before the hearing as the juvenile did not make an objection or request a continuance on the basis that the juvenile was unprepared. In the Interest of E.S., 262 Ga. App. 768, 586 S.E.2d 691 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

Reliance on section by trial court misplaced. — Because former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-96(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-281 and 15-11-282) related specifically to service in termination-of-parental-rights proceedings, the trial court's reliance on the service provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), a statute dealing with service in juvenile court proceedings generally, was misplaced; moreover, for purposes of statutory interpretation, a specific statute prevailed over a general statute, absent any indication of a contrary legislative intent. In the Interest of C.S., 282 Ga. 7, 644 S.E.2d 812 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1).

15-11-532. Sanctions for failure to obey summons.

(a) In the event a child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian willfully fails to appear personally at a hearing on a petition alleging delinquency after being ordered to so appear or a child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian willfully fails to bring such child to a hearing after being so directed, the court may issue a rule nisi against the person directing the person to appear before the court to show cause why he or she should not be held in contempt of court.

(b) If a parent, guardian, or legal custodian of the alleged delinquent child fails to appear in response to an order to show cause, the court may issue a bench warrant directing that such parent, guardian, or legal custodian be brought before the court without delay to show cause why he or she should not be held in contempt and the court may enter any order authorized by the provisions of Code Section 15-11-31.

(c) If a child 16 years of age or older fails to appear at a hearing on a petition alleging delinquency after being ordered to so appear, the court may issue a bench warrant requiring that such child be brought before the court without delay and the court may enter any order authorized by the provisions of Code Section 15-11-31.

(d) If there is sworn testimony that a child less than 16 years of age willfully refuses to appear at a hearing on a petition alleging delinquency after being ordered to so appear, the court may issue a bench warrant requiring that such child be brought before the court and the court may enter any order authorized by the provisions of Code Section 15-11-31.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Waiver of notice. — In a juvenile delinquency case, although neither defendants nor their parents were served with copies of the petitions and hearing summonses as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-162, 15-11-281, 15-11-423, 15-11-425, and 15-11-532), the defendants and their parents appeared at the hearings with their attorneys without objecting to lack of notice; thus, the defendants and their parents waived the notice issue. In the Interest of T.K.L., 277 Ga. App. 461, 627 S.E.2d 98 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Implied waiver of service on behalf of child. — If a child is present at a juvenile court hearing with the child's parent and counsel, the child's parent impliedly may waive service of a summons on a child's behalf by voluntary appearance at a hearing without objection to lack of service. Fulton County Detention Center v. Robertson, 249 Ga. 864, 295 S.E.2d 101 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Parent's right to appeal delinquency adjudication. — As parties to their child's delinquency action pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-160, 15-11-423, and 15-11-530), the child's parents had the right to appeal the juvenile court's judgment and to participate in the appellate process. In the Interest of J.L.B., 280 Ga. App. 556, 634 S.E.2d 514 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Proceeding null when no waiver of rights nor proper service. — If, in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of the right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and if the hearing is not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding is an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

15-11-541. Discovery procedures.

(a) Except as limited by subsection (d) of Code Section 15-11-542, in all cases in which a child is charged with having committed a delinquent act, such child shall, upon filing a motion for discovery with the court and serving a copy of the motion to the prosecuting attorney, have full access to the following for inspection, copying, or photographing:

(1) A copy of the complaint;

(2) A copy of the petition for delinquency;

(3) The names and last known addresses and telephone numbers of each witness to the occurrence which forms the basis of the charge;

(4) A copy of any written statement made by such child or any witness that relates to the testimony of a person whom the prosecuting attorney intends to call as a witness;

(5) A copy of any written statement made by any alleged coparticipant which the prosecuting attorney intends to use at a hearing;

(6) Transcriptions, recordings, and summaries of any oral statement of such child or of any witness, except attorney work product;

(7) Any scientific or other report which is intended to be introduced at the hearing or that pertains to physical evidence which is intended to be introduced;

(8) Photographs and any physical evidence which are intended to be introduced at the hearing; and

(9) Copies of the police incident report and supplemental report, if any, regarding the occurrence which forms the basis of the charge.

(b) The prosecuting attorney shall disclose all evidence, known or that may become known to him or her, favorable to such child and material either to guilt or punishment.

(c) If a child requests disclosure of information pursuant to subsection (a) of this Code section, it shall be the duty of such child to promptly make the following available for inspection, copying, or photographing to the prosecuting attorney:

(1) The names and last known addresses and telephone numbers of each witness to the occurrence which forms the basis of the defense;

(2) Any scientific or other report which is intended to be introduced at the hearing or that pertains to physical evidence which is intended to be introduced;

(3) Photographs and any physical evidence which he or she intends to introduce at the hearing; and

(4) A copy of any written statement made by any witness that relates to the testimony of a person whom the child intends to call as a witness.

(d) A request for discovery or reciprocal discovery shall be complied with promptly and not later than 48 hours prior to the adjudication hearing, except when later compliance is made necessary by the timing of the request. If the request for discovery is made fewer than 48 hours prior to the adjudication hearing, the discovery response shall be produced in a timely manner.

(e) Any material or information furnished to a child pursuant to a discovery request shall remain in the exclusive custody of such child and shall only be used during the pendency of the case and shall be subject to such other terms and conditions as the court may provide.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-75, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

No Brady violation shown. — In a juvenile proceeding wherein the juvenile was adjudicated delinquent as a result of a battery against a schoolmate on a school bus, the trial court did not err in allegedly failing to enforce the discovery provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-75(a)(7) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-541) and in allegedly failing to remedy a Brady violation because the videotape at issue was not in the custody and control of the State of Georgia; the juvenile could have obtained the evidence had the juvenile simply subpoenaed the video prior to trial and, significantly, the unrebutted evidence of record established that the videotape lacked any exculpatory or evidentiary value since the videotape was blank. In the Interest of E.J., 283 Ga. App. 648, 642 S.E.2d 179 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-75).

15-11-542. Motion to compel discovery; limitations; sanctions.

(a) If a request for discovery is refused, application may be made to the court for a written order granting discovery.

(b) Motions to compel discovery shall certify that a request for discovery was made and was refused.

(c) An order granting discovery shall require reciprocal discovery.

(d) The court may deny, in whole or in part, or otherwise limit or set conditions concerning discovery upon sufficient showing by a person or entity to whom a request for discovery is made that disclosure of the information would:

(1) Jeopardize the safety of a party, witness, or confidential informant;

(2) Create a substantial threat of physical or economic harm to a witness or other person;

(3) Endanger the existence of physical evidence;

(4) Disclose privileged information; or

(5) Impede the criminal prosecution of a child who is being prosecuted as an adult or the prosecution of an adult charged with an offense arising from the same transaction or occurrence.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-542, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-543. Notice of alibi defense.

(a) Upon written request by a prosecuting attorney stating the time, date, and place at which the alleged delinquent act was committed, a child shall serve upon the prosecuting attorney a written notice of his or her intention to offer a defense of alibi.

(b) A notice to offer an alibi defense shall state the specific place or places at which a child claims to have been at the time of the alleged delinquent act and the names, addresses, dates of birth, and telephone numbers of the witnesses, if known to the child, upon whom such child intends to rely to establish his or her alibi, unless previously supplied.

(c) A request for alibi evidence shall be complied with promptly and not later than 48 hours prior to the adjudication hearing, except when later compliance is made necessary by the timing of the request. If the request for alibi evidence is made fewer than 48 hours prior to the adjudication hearing, the alibi evidence shall be produced in a timely manner.

(d) If a child withdraws his or her notice of intention to rely upon an alibi defense, the notice and intention to rely upon an alibi defense shall not be admissible; provided, however, that a prosecuting attorney may offer any other evidence regarding alibi.

(e) A prosecuting attorney shall serve upon a child a written notice stating the names, addresses, dates of birth, and telephone numbers of the witnesses, if known to the state, upon whom the state intends to rely to rebut such child's evidence of alibi, unless previously supplied.

If at any time during the course of the proceedings it is brought to the attention of the court that a person or entity has failed to comply with a discovery request, the court may order the person or entity to permit the discovery or inspection of evidence, grant a continuance, or upon a showing of prejudice and bad faith, prohibit the party from introducing in evidence the information not disclosed or presenting the witness not disclosed, or enter such other order as the court deems just under the circumstances. The court may specify the time, place, and manner of making the discovery, inspection, and interview and may prescribe such terms and conditions as are just.

TRANSFERS

15-11-560. Concurrent and original jurisdiction of superior court.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section, the court shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court over a child who is alleged to have committed a delinquent act which would be considered a crime if tried in a superior court and for which an adult may be punished by loss of life, imprisonment for life without possibility of parole, or confinement for life in a penal institution.

(b) The superior court shall have exclusive original jurisdiction over the trial of any child 13 to 17 years of age who is alleged to have committed any of the following offenses:

(1) Murder;

(2) Murder in the second degree;

(3) Voluntary manslaughter;

(4) Rape;

(5) Aggravated sodomy;

(6) Aggravated child molestation;

(7) Aggravated sexual battery;

(8) Armed robbery if committed with a firearm;

(9) Aggravated assault if committed with a firearm upon a public safety officer as such acts are prohibited under subsection (c) of Code Section 16-5-21; or

(10) Aggravated battery upon a public safety officer as such acts are prohibited under subsection (c) of Code Section 16-5-24.

(c) The granting of bail or pretrial release of a child charged with an offense enumerated in subsection (b) of this Code section shall be governed by the provisions of Code Section 17-6-1.

(d) At any time before indictment, the district attorney may, after investigation and for cause, decline prosecution in the superior court of a child 13 to 17 years of age alleged to have committed an offense specified in subsection (b) of this Code section. Upon declining such prosecution in the superior court, the district attorney shall cause a petition to be filed in the appropriate juvenile court for adjudication within 72 hours if the child is in detention or 30 days if the child is not in detention. Except as provided in paragraph (8) of subsection (b) of

Code Section 15-11-602, any case transferred by the district attorney to the juvenile court pursuant to this subsection shall be subject to the class A designated felony act provisions of Code Section 15-11-602, and the transfer of the case from superior court to juvenile court shall constitute notice to such child that such case is subject to the class A designated felony act provisions of Code Section 15-11-602.

(e)(1) After indictment, the superior court may after investigation transfer to the juvenile court any case involving a child 13 to 17 years of age alleged to have committed any act described in paragraph (3), (5), (6), (7), (9), or (10) of subsection (b) of this Code section. In considering the transfer of such case, the court shall consider the criteria set forth in Code Section 15-11-562. Any such transfer shall be appealable by the State of Georgia pursuant to Code Section 5-7-1. Upon such a transfer by the superior court, jurisdiction shall vest in the juvenile court and jurisdiction of the superior court shall terminate.

(2) Except as provided in paragraph (8) of subsection (b) of Code Section 15-11-602, any case transferred by the superior court to the juvenile court pursuant to this subsection shall be subject to the class A designated felony act provisions of Code Section 15-11-602, and the transfer of the case from superior court to juvenile court shall constitute notice to such child that such case is subject to the class A designated felony act provisions of Code Section 15-11-602.

(f) The superior court may transfer any case involving a child 13 to 17 years of age alleged to have committed any offense enumerated in subsection (b) of this Code section and convicted of a lesser included offense not included in subsection (b) of this Code section to the juvenile court of the county of such child's residence for disposition. Upon such a transfer by the superior court, jurisdiction shall vest in the juvenile court and jurisdiction of the superior court shall terminate.

(g) Within 30 days of any proceeding in which a child 13 to 17 years of age is convicted of certain offenses over which the superior court has original jurisdiction as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section or adjudicated as a delinquent child on the basis of conduct which if committed by an adult would constitute such offenses, the superior court shall provide written notice to the school superintendent or his or her designee of the school in which such child is enrolled or, if the information is known, of the school in which such child plans to be enrolled at a future date. Such notice shall include the specific criminal offense that such child committed. The local school system to which such child is assigned may request further information from the court's file.

(h) As used in this Code section, the term "firearm" means a handgun, rifle, shotgun, or other weapon which will or can be converted to expel a projectile by the action of an explosive or electrical charge.

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 24-2402, 24-2408 and 24A-301, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-5 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-28(b), which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

In light of the reenactment of this chapter, effective January 1, 2014, the reader is advised to consult the annotations following Code Section 15-11-10, which may also be applicable to this Code section.

Additionally, many of the annotations found under this Code section were taken from cases decided prior to the adoption of the 1983 Constitution. See Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. III, Para. I and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I.

Constitutionality of application. — Defendant's contention that the provision for charging juveniles as adults was applied in an unconstitutionally discriminatory manner against the defendant and other black males was not established by any evidence. Skidmore v. State, 226 Ga. App. 130, 485 S.E.2d 540 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Definition of "full age." — One becomes of "full age" on the day preceding the anniversary of one's birth, on the first moment of that day. Edmonds v. State, 154 Ga. App. 650, 269 S.E.2d 512 (1980)

(decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Child turned 17 on the earliest moment of the day before juvenile's birthday. — Delinquency petition against a juvenile was properly transferred to the state court on the ground that the juvenile was arrested for possessing marijuana on the day before the juvenile's seventeenth birthday; pursuant to former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-28 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-10, 15-11-11, 15-11-212, and 15-11-560), the juvenile was deemed to have been 17 at the earliest moment of the day before the juvenile's birthday, which was the day the juvenile was arrested. In the Interest of A.P.S., 304 Ga. App. 513, 696 S.E.2d 483 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Confinement implies juvenile in need of supervision, correction, and training. — Confinement necessarily deprives the parents of their prima facie prerogative of training and supervision, and implies that the juvenile is, within the terms of the juvenile law, one who is in need of supervision beyond the control of the parents and in need of correction and training which the parents cannot provide. Young v. State, 120 Ga. App. 605, 171 S.E.2d 756 (1969) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Defendant claimed under 17 at the time offenses were committed. — Superior court had authority to try the defendant who claimed to be under 17 at the time the offenses were committed since the jury was instructed that the defendant should be found guilty only if the defendant committed the alleged acts after the defendant turned 17. Johnson v. State, 214 Ga. App. 319, 447 S.E.2d 663 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Exceptions to superior court jurisdiction to try juvenile. — Superior court has jurisdictional power to try a juvenile defendant accused of an offense or offenses for which the maximum criminal penalty is neither life imprisonment nor death. J.J. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 660, 218 S.E.2d 668 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Waiver of presentment. — Lower appellate court erred when the court affirmed the transfer of the defendant from the superior court to the juvenile court because the court misunderstood O.C.G.A. § 17-7-50.1 when the court concluded that the statute does not permit a detained child to waive presentation within 180 days of the date of detention as the defendant filed an express waiver. State v. Baxter, 300 Ga. 268, 794 S.E.2d 49 (2016).

Habeas corpus petition does not confer superior court jurisdiction. — If a juvenile court order entered pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24A-2301 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-211, 15-11-212, 15-11-215) after notice and hearing was still in effect, the superior court had no jurisdiction of the related habeas corpus petition. West v. Cobb County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 425, 254 S.E.2d 373 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Jurisdiction over offenses committed when juvenile 16. — Juvenile court retained jurisdiction over the defendant for an offense the defendant committed when the defendant was 16 years old until the entry of the court's order transferring the case to the superior court. In re D.L., 228 Ga. App. 503, 492 S.E.2d 273 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Lack of jurisdiction to award permanent custody. — Judgment was reversed because the juvenile court's authority to place a child in the custody of a "willing" and "qualified" relative was not authority to award permanent custody of the child as custody was determined by discerning the best interests of the child and not the willingness or the qualifications of a person to take temporary custody of the child. Ertter v. Dunbar, 292 Ga. 103, 734 S.E.2d 403 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Juvenile court is court of special and limited jurisdiction, and the court's judgments must show on the judgment's face such facts as are necessary to give the court jurisdiction of the person and subject matter. If the order of a juvenile court fails to recite the jurisdictional facts, the judgment is void. Williams v. Department of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 610, 258 S.E.2d 288 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Juvenile courts are courts of limited jurisdiction, possessing only those powers specifically conferred upon the courts by statute. In re J.O., 191 Ga. App. 521, 382 S.E.2d 214 (1989), overruled on other grounds, In re T.A.W., 265 Ga. 106, 454 S.E.2d 134 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Age at time of offense controls. — Although a juvenile no longer qualified as a child under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(2)(A) and (B) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2) after the seventeenth birthday, it is the juvenile's age at the time of the offense that controls; therefore, because the juvenile was under the age of 17 at the time the act of delinquency was committed, the juvenile court properly exercised exclusive original jurisdiction over the juvenile's case. In the Interest of J.T.D., 242 Ga. App. 243, 529 S.E.2d 377 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

As there was evidence that the defendant molested the victim after turning 17, the juvenile court did not have exclusive jurisdiction over the defendant's sexual molestation case, and the defendant's conviction in a superior court was proper. McGruder v. State, 279 Ga. App. 851, 632 S.E.2d 730 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Prosecutor's discretion to choose superior rather than juvenile court. — Prosecutor's decision to bring an action in superior rather than juvenile court does not violate the separation of powers doctrine of the state constitution because the initial option to select a forum when concurrent jurisdiction exists belongs to the litigant, and it is neither judicial, legislative, or executive power. Chapman v. State, 259 Ga. 592, 385 S.E.2d 661 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Jurisdiction over juveniles of county juvenile or superior courts. — Minor who is a resident of this state is subject to the jurisdiction of the juvenile court of the county of the minor's residence, the proceedings in such court being civil rather than criminal in nature. If the crime charged is a felony, such minor is also subject to the criminal jurisdiction of the superior court of the county wherein the felony was committed. Whitman v. State, 96 Ga. App. 730, 101 S.E.2d 621 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

Giving the juvenile court an additional opportunity to take jurisdiction of a case at the earliest possible moment is consistent with the rehabilitative purpose of the Juvenile Code. In re C.R., 263 Ga. 155, 430 S.E.2d 3 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Original Jurisdiction

Juvenile court has jurisdiction despite indictment for noncapital felony. — Indictment of a juvenile for a noncapital felony in the superior court does not oust the juvenile court of the court's first obtained jurisdiction under the Georgia Constitution and statute law. J.W.A. v. State, 233 Ga. 683, 212 S.E.2d 849 (1975), commented on in 27 Mercer L. Rev. 335 (1975). (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Jurisdiction in superior court. — Superior court had exclusive jurisdiction over the trial of two persons, 15 and 16 years of age, who were alleged to have committed armed robbery with a rifle, and there was no error in the court's refusal to transfer the case to juvenile court. Bearden v. State, 241 Ga. App. 842, 528 S.E.2d 275 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Unaccepted offer to reduce armed robbery to robbery did not obligate the state to reduce the charge because armed robbery was punishable by life imprisonment, it was not a transferable offense, and the trial court was without authority to transfer the armed robbery case from superior court to juvenile court. State v. Harper, 271 Ga. App. 761, 610 S.E.2d 699 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

While an original child molestation charge brought against a juvenile was properly filed in the juvenile court, once the state added an aggravated sexual battery count via an amendment, the superior court gained jurisdiction. Thus, the juvenile's allegations that the state failed to comply with the procedural requirements under former O.C.G.A.

§§ 15-11-49(c)(1) and (e) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-472) should have been raised in the superior court, and had no bearing on the validity of the delinquency petitions or the substantive charges against the juvenile in juvenile court. In the Interest of K.C., 290 Ga. App. 416, 659 S.E.2d 821 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Since an armed robbery was completed when control of the money in a cash register was ceded to the defendant and the other four robbers, the facts were sufficient to indict the defendant, who was 16 years old, for armed robbery under O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41(a); therefore, the superior court lacked authority under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(B) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560) to transfer the case to a juvenile court. Gutierrez v. State, 306 Ga. App. 371, 702 S.E.2d 642 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Trial court did not err in sentencing the defendant to 20 years to serve 10 in prison pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-8-41(b) and (d) because, although the defendant was only 13 years old, the defendant participated in an armed robbery; the legislature's determination that the superior court has jurisdiction over minors 13 to 17 years of age who are alleged to have committed certain serious offenses is founded on a rational basis, including the need for secure placement of certain violent juvenile offenders and the safety of students and citizens of Georgia. Cuvas v. State, 306 Ga. App. 679, 703 S.E.2d 116 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Superior court loss of jurisdiction after 180 days. — Because a grand jury did not indict a juvenile within 180 days after the juvenile's detention as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(A)(vii) and no extension of time had been granted as of that date, the grand jury lost authority over the case by operation of law. The trial court's order granting the state's request for an out-of-time extension was void. Nunnally v. State, 311 Ga. App. 558, 716 S.E.2d 608 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Same 180-day time limitation applied to both former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-28(b) and 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-560, 15-11-561, 15-11-563, and 15-11-566), and that 180 days began to run on the day the juvenile was detained whenever the superior court was exercising jurisdiction under either section; it necessarily follows that anytime the superior court loses jurisdiction which was conferred by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b) because the state failed to obtain an indictment within 180 days of the date the juvenile was detained, the time will also have expired within which the state could procure an indictment if the superior court were proceeding under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 and, thus, a transfer back to the superior court under those circumstances is pointless since an indictment returned by the grand jury would be void. In the Interest of C.B., 313 Ga. App. 778, 723 S.E.2d 21 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Although O.C.G.A. § 17-7-50.1 allows the state to request one automatic 90-day extension, this extension cannot be granted after the expiration of the 180 days; the legislature intended to set time limitations for the state to act in those situations in which the juvenile is detained and the superior court is exercising jurisdiction over the matter pursuant to either former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560) or former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-561, 15-11-563, and 15-11-566). In the Interest of C.B., 313 Ga. App. 778, 723 S.E.2d 21 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Exceptions to juvenile court's exclusive original jurisdiction. — Former Code 1933, §§ 24A-301 and 24A-401 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-10, 15-11-11, 15-11-212, and 15-11-560) did not vest exclusive original jurisdiction in the juvenile court over the following class of youthful offenders: persons between the ages of 17 and 21 years, who have committed noncapital felonies, and who were under the supervision of or were on probation to a juvenile court for acts of delinquency committed before reaching the age of 17 years. State v. Crankshaw, 243 Ga. 183, 253 S.E.2d 69 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Superior courts not deprived of constitutional felony jurisdiction. — While the juvenile court jurisdiction embraces all minors under the age of 17, this cannot deprive the superior courts of this state of their constitutional felony jurisdiction. Jones v. State, 119 Ga. App. 105, 166 S.E.2d 617 (1969) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

Concurrent Jurisdiction

Constitution authorizes concurrent jurisdictional scheme. — Law provides a concurrent jurisdictional scheme that is authorized by Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I). J.W.A. v. State, 233 Ga. 683, 212 S.E.2d 849 (1975), commented on in 27 Mercer L. Rev. 335 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

When the controlling language of Ga. Const. 1976, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I) was read with the former Juvenile Code, it was apparent that a harmonious and reasonable system of concurrent jurisdiction between the juvenile courts and superior courts had been achieved. J.W.A. v. State, 233 Ga. 683, 212 S.E.2d 849 (1975), commented on in 27 Mercer L. Rev. 335 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Statutory scheme which contemplates trials of juveniles in felony cases that are punished by death or life imprisonment in either superior or juvenile court does not deprive juveniles of any substantive or procedural due process rights. Chapman v. State, 259 Ga. 592, 385 S.E.2d 661 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Jurisdiction of capital felonies and custody cases distinguished. — Juvenile court and the superior court have concurrent jurisdiction of delinquent acts which constitute capital felonies, but the juvenile court may consider questions of custody only if such issues are transferred to the juvenile court from the superior court. Quire v. Clayton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 242 Ga. 85, 249 S.E.2d 538 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

Concurrent jurisdiction of superior courts to try juvenile defendants. — The 1935 amendment to former Code 1933, § 24-2402 did not so change the Juvenile Court Act of 1915 (former Code 1910, Ch. 24-24) as to deprive the superior courts in a county where juvenile courts had been established of the right to try a defendant indicted for a felony, although the defendant may have been less than 16 years of age at the time of the commission of the alleged crime. Mills v. State, 56 Ga. App. 390, 192 S.E. 730 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

Superior court exceeded the court's authority in transferring the prosecution of two juveniles to juvenile court after the state elected to pursue the cases in superior court as former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10, 15-11-11, and 15-11-560) granted the superior court concurrent jurisdiction over the cases before it, and the court was obligated to retain jurisdiction prior to indictment. State v. Henderson, 281 Ga. 623, 641 S.E.2d 515 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Because the juvenile court had concurrent jurisdiction over proceedings involving the termination of parental rights in connection with an adoption proceeding, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(a)(2)(C), the appellate court rejected a parent's argument that the juvenile court improperly referred to surrender of parental rights in certain of the court's orders and that by doing so the court exceeded the court's jurisdiction. In the Interest of A.C., 283 Ga. App. 743, 642 S.E.2d 418 (2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

In a case in which: (1) an inmate was charged in juvenile court with aggravated assault and aggravated battery pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10, 15-11-11, and 15-11-560); (2) after the victim died, the inmate was indicted in a county superior court for felony murder, aggravated assault, and aggravated battery without a transfer hearing being held in the juvenile court as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2; (3) the superior court was exercising the court's jurisdiction pursuant to former § 15-11-28(b)(2)(A); and (4) the juvenile court judge ordered the juvenile complaint against the inmate to be dismissed, the inmate's motion for reconsideration of the denial of the inmate's petition for a writ of habeas corpus was properly denied; any due process error had no effect on the outcome of the inmate's case since the felony murder charge was properly before the superior court and would have been proved by the same evidence. Moreover, the inmate's right against excessive punishment was not violated. Miller v. Martin, No. 1:04-cv-1120-WSD-JFK, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 61192 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 20, 2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Concurrent jurisdiction over capital felonies must necessarily extend to related lesser crimes forming part of the same criminal transaction. Worthy v. State, 253 Ga. 661, 324 S.E.2d 431 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

When the superior court obtained exclusive jurisdiction over the defendant upon allegations of aggravated sodomy and aggravated child molestation against the defendant, evidence of other acts not within the exclusive jurisdiction of the court did not constitute "extraordinary cause" to transfer the case to the juvenile court. Reynolds v. State, 217 Ga. App. 570, 458 S.E.2d 855 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

First court to take jurisdiction will retain jurisdiction, where courts have concurrent jurisdiction. J.G.B. v. State, 136 Ga. App. 75, 220 S.E.2d 79 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301); Couch v. State, 253 Ga. 764, 325 S.E.2d 366 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

When common-law courts have concurrent jurisdiction, first court taking jurisdiction will retain jurisdiction. Lincoln v. State, 138 Ga. App. 234, 225 S.E.2d 708 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Whichever court first takes jurisdiction retains jurisdiction subject to the power of the juvenile court to transfer cases to the superior court. Lane v. Jones, 626 F.2d 1296 (5th Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 450 U.S. 928, 101 S. Ct. 1384, 67 L. Ed. 2d 359 (1981).

Original and concurrent jurisdiction in noncapital juvenile cases. — Under the statutory scheme, exclusive original jurisdiction of noncapital juvenile cases is placed in the juvenile courts with the concurrent jurisdiction of the superior courts becoming effective when activated by a proper transfer from the juvenile courts. J.W.A. v. State, 233 Ga. 683, 212 S.E.2d 849 (1975), commented on in 27 Mercer L. Rev. 335 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

While under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10, 15-11-11 and 15-11-560) an involuntary manslaughter charge could not be initiated in a superior court, which properly transferred the matter to a juvenile court, assuming the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2(a)(3) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10, 15-11-11, and 15-11-561) were met, the juvenile court did not err in granting a motion to transfer the case back to the superior court as the authority to do so was specifically given in former § 15-11-30.2. In the Interest of C.G., 291 Ga. App. 743, 662 S.E.2d 823 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Statutory criminal safeguards with concurrent jurisdiction. — Juvenile court does not have exclusive jurisdiction over delinquent acts for which a child under 17 years old may be punished by loss of life or confinement for life in the penitentiary. Nevertheless, the rules as to confessions of juveniles are the same because law enforcement officers cannot be certain when the officers question a juvenile what kind of case may develop, and the statutory safeguards are applicable to both criminal and juvenile cases. Jackson v. State, 146 Ga. App. 375, 246 S.E.2d 407 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Filing of juvenile complaint does not vest exclusive jurisdiction in juvenile court. — Although the filing of a juvenile complaint form alone may commence informal proceedings, the filing will not operate to vest exclusive jurisdiction in the juvenile court since the juvenile court would have concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court. State v. Whetstone, 264 Ga. 135, 441 S.E.2d 842 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Jurisdiction, once exercised, becomes exclusive. — Jurisdiction, once exercised, becomes exclusive rather than concurrent, subject to the right of either court to transfer to the other. J.T.M. v. State, 142 Ga. App. 635, 236 S.E.2d 764 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Transfers

Juvenile subject to criminal adjudication when case transferred to superior court. — Juvenile whose case is properly transferred to the superior court is subject to the criminal sanctions which may be imposed in that court. Thus, an adjudication of guilt of a juvenile in superior court is a criminal adjudication. Carrindine v. Ricketts, 236 Ga. 283, 223 S.E.2d 627 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Juvenile court not divested of jurisdiction unless transfer proceeding held. — Since jurisdiction is first acquired by the juvenile court, a subsequent superior court indictment does not divest the juvenile court of the juvenile court's jurisdiction unless a proper transfer proceeding has been held. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Transfer to superior court not required if no exclusive jurisdiction. — In a child molestation case, it was not necessary for the juvenile court to transfer the charges to the superior court in order for the superior court to have jurisdiction because the juvenile court's finding that there was no evidence that the defendant was under 17 when the acts were committed amounted to a finding that the juvenile court did not have exclusive jurisdiction. Landrum v. State, 210 Ga. App. 275, 436 S.E.2d 40 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Transfer from superior court. — State did not show that a superior court abused the court's discretion in reaching a decision that a 14-year-old defendant's aggravated sexual assault case was "extraordinary" and should be heard in juvenile court due to the defendant's social immaturity. State v. Ware, 258 Ga. App. 564, 574 S.E.2d 632 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Collateral estoppel did not prohibit transfer back to superior court. — Disregarding the question of whether collateral estoppel actually applied in the context of a case, the transfer of an involuntary manslaughter case, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-567), against a juvenile to the juvenile court did not collaterally estop a later transfer of the case back to the superior court under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-561, 15-11-563, 15-11-566) because the first transfer was based on the jurisdictional restrictions in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560) and at the time of that transfer, the superior court did not consider or rule on the multiple factors in former § 15-11-30.2 on which the second transfer was based. In the Interest of C.G., 291 Ga. App. 743, 662 S.E.2d 823 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Transfer to superior court was improper. — Juvenile court erred in granting the state's motion to transfer the defendant juvenile's case back to the superior court pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-561, 15-11-563, and 15-11-566) because the superior court had properly transferred the case to the juvenile court since the defendant was not indicted within 180 days of detention as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-50.1; the time limits set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-50.1 were plainly stated and mandatory and clearly express the legislative intent that when a juvenile was detained and the superior court was exercising jurisdiction under either former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560) or former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2, the state must obtain an indictment within the specified time or the superior court lost the jurisdiction conferred by those provisions. In the Interest of C.B., 313 Ga. App. 778, 723 S.E.2d 21 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Juvenile court properly dismissed delinquency petition since transfer hearing did not apply. — Juvenile court properly dismissed a delinquency petition without a hearing, which petition alleged that the juvenile committed aggravated sodomy, as former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2(f) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) expressly provided that the transfer hearing provisions did not apply to any proceeding within the exclusive jurisdiction of a superior court, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560), which included aggravated sodomy. In the Interest of N.C., 293 Ga. App. 374, 667 S.E.2d 181 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Superior court may deny motion for transfer to juvenile court. — When a juvenile defendant is charged with a crime for which the juvenile could be punished by loss of life or confinement for life in a penitentiary, and the superior court first took jurisdiction over such juvenile, the trial court may deny a motion which seeks to transfer jurisdiction to the juvenile court for a hearing to determine defendant's amenability to rehabilitation in the juvenile court system. Brown v. State, 235 Ga. 353, 219 S.E.2d 419 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-301).

Denial of transfer after verdict. — Superior court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to transfer to the juvenile court for final disposition after the defendant was found guilty of a lesser included offense over which the court lacked exclusive jurisdiction. Reynolds v. State, 266 Ga. 235, 466 S.E.2d 218 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Juvenile defendant was charged with murder and conspiracy to commit armed robbery; the defendant was convicted in the superior court of the latter crime. As former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(A)(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560) have the superior court the discretion over whether to transfer the case to juvenile court for disposition or to retain jurisdiction for sentencing, the court properly sentenced the defendant as an adult to 10 years' imprisonment, the maximum sentence. Furthermore, the sentence did not violate the defendant's due process or equal protection rights as the defendant had no constitutional right to be treated as a juvenile. Pascarella v. State, 294 Ga. App. 414, 669 S.E.2d 216 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0426, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 188 (Ga. 2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Transfer provisions did not apply in armed robbery case. — Juvenile court erred in finding that a juvenile case involving armed robbery with a firearm was subject to the transfer provisions delineated in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-561, 15-11-563, and 15-11-566) because, under subsection (f) of that section, the transfer provisions did not apply in cases involving armed robbery with a firearm, which were subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the superior court under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(A)(vii) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-10, 15-11-11, and 15-11-560). However, because the juvenile court had concurrent jurisdiction to enter the judgment due to the state's filing a petition in the juvenile court, the state had no right to appeal from the judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-7-1(A)(5). In re D. L., 302 Ga. App. 234, 690 S.E.2d 522 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

No transfer hearing required when concurrent jurisdiction. — Transfer hearing is not required when the offense is one over which the juvenile and superior courts have concurrent jurisdiction and the superior court first takes jurisdiction. Lewis v. State, 246 Ga. 101, 268 S.E.2d 915 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

If either the juvenile court or the superior court properly could have exercised jurisdiction, no petition alleging delinquency was ever filed in the juvenile court, and the superior court first took jurisdiction through indictment, jurisdiction properly vested in the superior court and no transfer hearing pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561, 15-11-563, and 15-11-566) was required. Taylor v. State, 194 Ga. App. 871, 392 S.E.2d 57 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

No transfer hearing if juvenile court did not exercise jurisdiction. — When the defendant, then a juvenile, was charged with armed robbery in 1993, both the juvenile and superior courts could exercise jurisdiction over the defendant under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-10, 15-11-11, and 15-11-560). Since there was no evidence that the juvenile court had ever exercised jurisdiction, no transfer hearing was required for the superior court to exercise jurisdiction. Styles v. State, 291 Ga. App. 255, 661 S.E.2d 641 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

No error to transfer case to juvenile court for investigation. — If a change of circumstances is alleged subsequent to a decree of divorce awarding custody of a minor child to one of the two parties, it is not error for the judge of the superior court to transfer the investigation thus called for to the juvenile court for investigation. Slate v. Coggins, 181 Ga. 17, 181 S.E. 145 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

Decree of divorce in a case in which the custody of a minor child is involved, awarding the child to one party or the other, is final, except when a change of circumstances is shown; when such change is alleged, it is not error for the judge of the superior court to transfer the investigation thus called for to the juvenile court for investigation. Fortson v. Fortson, 197 Ga. 699, 30 S.E.2d 165 (1944) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

Since there was evidence that the living conditions and conduct of children, subjects of a custody award in a divorce decree, were much worse than as shown upon a former trial, the judge did not err in transferring the investigation to the juvenile court for trial and determination. Fortson v. Fortson, 197 Ga. 699, 30 S.E.2d 165 (1944) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-2402).

Superior court may deny motion for transfer to juvenile court. — When a juvenile defendant is charged with a crime for which the juvenile could be punished by loss of life or confinement for life in a penitentiary, and the superior court first took jurisdiction over such juvenile, the trial court may deny a motion which seeks to transfer jurisdiction to the juvenile court for a hearing to determine defendant's amenability to rehabilitation in the juvenile court system. Brown v. State, 235 Ga. 353, 219 S.E.2d 419 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24-301).

Denial of transfer after verdict. — Superior court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the defendant's motion to transfer to the juvenile court for final disposition after the defendant was found guilty of a lesser included offense over which the court lacked exclusive jurisdiction. Reynolds v. State, 266 Ga. 235, 466 S.E.2d 218 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Juvenile defendant was charged with murder and conspiracy to commit armed robbery; the defendant was convicted in the superior court of the latter crime. As former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(A)(i) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560) have the superior court the discretion over whether to transfer the case to juvenile court for disposition or to retain jurisdiction for sentencing, the court properly sentenced the defendant as an adult to 10 years' imprisonment, the maximum sentence. Furthermore, the sentence did not violate the defendant's due process or equal protection rights as the defendant had no constitutional right to be treated as a juvenile. Pascarella v. State, 294 Ga. App. 414, 669 S.E.2d 216 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0426, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 188 (Ga. 2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Specific Offenses

Violation of probation. — Under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2(2)(B) and 15-11-28(a)(1)(F) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-10, and 15-11-11), a juvenile court lacked jurisdiction over the defendant, who was over 17 when a probation violation occurred; thus, the defendant's commitment under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, and 15-11-602) was void. The state had not filed a petition for probation revocation, but only for a violation of probation. In the Interest of T.F., 314 Ga. App. 606, 724 S.E.2d 892 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Child molestation. — Because child molestation was not an offense listed in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560), the trial court erred in using former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(a)(2)(D) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2) to classify the offense as a designated felony act when the court sentenced a juvenile. In the Interest of M. S., 277 Ga. App. 706, 627 S.E.2d 422 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Because the indictment alleged and the evidence at trial authorized a finding that the defendant committed aggravated child molestation on some date after July 1, 2006, the trial court could not be divested of jurisdiction pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(B) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-560). Therefore, the trial court correctly denied the motion to transfer the case to juvenile court. Adams v. State, 288 Ga. 695, 707 S.E.2d 359 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Armed robbery. — Denial of the defendant's motion to transfer under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(B) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560) was upheld; the armed robbery was completed at the time the cash register was opened and the flap resting on the top of the cash raised, thereby ceding control of the money to the perpetrators and satisfying the requisite slightest change of location necessary for the armed robbery. Gutierrez v. State, 290 Ga. 643, 723 S.E.2d 658 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Aggravated assault as part of same transaction as armed robbery. — Superior court had jurisdiction to convict a juvenile defendant of aggravated assault since that offense was part of the same transaction as the greater offense of armed robbery over which the court had jurisdiction. Leeks v. State, 226 Ga. App. 227, 483 S.E.2d 691 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5); Houston v. State, 237 Ga. App. 878, 517 S.E.2d 357 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Noncapital juvenile cases. — Juvenile courts have exclusive original jurisdiction over noncapital juvenile cases. State v. Crankshaw, 243 Ga. 183, 253 S.E.2d 69 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Speeding is an act designated a crime by O.C.G.A. § 40-6-1 (now subsection (a) of § 40-6-1) and, therefore, a speeding charge against a 16-year-old juvenile could be tried only in juvenile court. In re L.J.V., 180 Ga. App. 400, 349 S.E.2d 37 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Acts constituting armed robbery with a firearm. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss an indictment on the ground that the prosecution was barred by double jeopardy since the defendant previously had been adjudicated delinquent in juvenile court for the acts alleged in the indictment because the juvenile court's adjudication of the defendant as delinquent was void, and jeopardy did not attach during the juvenile court proceeding; because the superior court had exclusive jurisdiction under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(vii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560) since the defendant was alleged in the juvenile court to have committed acts constituting armed robbery with a firearm, the juvenile court lacked jurisdiction to adjudicate the defendant delinquent for acts constituting armed robbery, notwithstanding the state's initial participation in the juvenile proceedings or the defendant's admission of the allegations in that court. Bonner v. State, 302 Ga. App. 57, 690 S.E.2d 216 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-528).

Armed robbery case could not be transferred to juvenile court. — Trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to petition to have the defendant's case transferred to juvenile court as the defendant was 16 when the crime was committed; as the case involved an armed robbery, the case could not be transferred to juvenile court. Hall v. State, 274 Ga. App. 842, 619 S.E.2d 344 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Juveniles charged with capital offenses. — Superior courts and juvenile courts have concurrent jurisdiction over juveniles charged with capital offenses, and whichever court first takes jurisdiction over the matter in question may retain jurisdiction, subject to the right of the juvenile court to transfer the case to the superior court. Relyea v. State, 236 Ga. 299, 223 S.E.2d 638 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301); Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

Armed robbery case could not be transferred to juvenile court. — Trial counsel did not provide ineffective assistance of counsel by failing to petition to have the defendant's case transferred to juvenile court as the defendant was 16 when the crime was committed; as the case involved an armed robbery, the case could not be transferred to juvenile court. Hall v. State, 274 Ga. App. 842, 619 S.E.2d 344 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Civil Matters

Matters relating to custody and visitation. — Superior and juvenile courts exercise concurrent jurisdiction over all matters relating to custody and visitation, except in those situations in which exclusive jurisdiction is vested in the superior court. In re D.N.M., 193 Ga. App. 812, 389 S.E.2d 336, cert. denied, 193 Ga. App. 910, 389 S.E.2d 336 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Matters relating to adoption. — Fact that the natural mother of a child, who sought the termination of the natural father's parental rights, contemplated a possible adoption did not automatically render the proceeding one "in connection with" an adoption. In re D.L.N., 234 Ga. App. 123, 506 S.E.2d 403 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Trial court did not err in concluding that the court had jurisdiction over an adoption and termination of parental rights proceeding as statutory law granted the trial court jurisdiction over adoption proceedings and other proceedings that were not granted exclusively to the juvenile courts; since the juvenile courts were granted exclusive jurisdiction over deprivation proceedings, those types of matters were to be heard by the juvenile courts, but the trial court had the authority to hear adoption and other matters, such as the adoptive parents' adoption petition filed to adopt the biological parents' minor child. Snyder v. Carter, 276 Ga. App. 426, 623 S.E.2d 241 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Court lacked jurisdiction in adoption. — Georgia superior court erred by ordering a father's parental rights terminated and granting a couple's petition for adoption because the court lacked jurisdiction in the case since adoption had already commenced via a deprivation proceeding in a Georgia juvenile court; thus, the juvenile court should have presided over the termination proceeding. Alizota v. Stanfield, 319 Ga. App. 256, 734 S.E.2d 497 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Concurrent jurisdiction over custody issues. — Subsection (c) of the former section was applicable only in those cases when the juvenile court and the superior court have concurrent jurisdiction and custody was the subject of controversy. Brooks v. Leyva, 147 Ga. App. 616, 249 S.E.2d 628 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-301).

In custody litigation, the juvenile court errs in hearing a case in which there is no order transferring the case from the superior court. Further, if an order of a juvenile court fails to recite the jurisdictional facts (i.e., such facts as are necessary to give it jurisdiction of the person and subject matter), the judgment is void. Lockhart v. Stancil, 258 Ga. 634, 373 S.E.2d 355 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5); In re W.W.W., 213 Ga. App. 732, 445 S.E.2d 832 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5), but see In re M.C.J., 271 Ga. 546, 523 S.E.2d 6 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Juvenile court cannot modify superior court's custody determination. — Juvenile court, without proper transfer from superior court, is without authority to modify custody provisions of the final divorce decree in regard to the mother's visitation privileges. In re M.M.A., 174 Ga. App. 898, 332 S.E.2d 39 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5); Owen v. Owen, 183 Ga. App. 472, 359 S.E.2d 229 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Jurisdiction in temporary custody matters. — Trial court erred when the court prohibited the Department of Human Resources from placing children with their mother or allowing the children to visit with the mother unsupervised and by staying any decision of a juvenile court that would be contrary to the court's order because, although the trial court and the juvenile court had concurrent jurisdiction over the temporary custody of the children, the juvenile court in the contemporaneous deprivation proceeding had the authority to order the disposition best suited to the needs of the children, including the transfer of temporary legal custody, and the juvenile court had already exercised the court's jurisdiction over the temporary custody of the children in light of the deprivation action; although the trial court expressed the court's concern about the department's decision to recommend that the children be physically placed with the mother, the juvenile court was competent to oversee the department, and there was no good reason for the trial court to conclude that the trial court was in a better position to address the department's placement decisions than the juvenile court. Long v. Long, 303 Ga. App. 215, 692 S.E.2d 811 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

No transfer of custody issue. — Juvenile court lacked jurisdiction since there was no order of the superior court transferring the issue of custody so as to meet the requirements of subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-212). In re C.F., 199 Ga. App. 858, 406 S.E.2d 279 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24A-301, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-5 and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-28(b), which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Scope of exclusive jurisdiction. — Juvenile court has exclusive jurisdiction over the following classes of traffic offenders: (1) offenders under the age of 16 who have committed a "juvenile traffic offense"; (2) offenders under the age of 17 who have committed any traffic offense; and (3) offenders under the age of 21 who have committed any traffic offense, and "who committed an act of delinquency before reaching the age of 17 years, and who have been placed under the supervision of the court or on probation to the court." 1985 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U85-18 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Magistrate court judge may issue arrest warrants for juveniles charged with an offense enumerated in subparagraph (b)(2)(A) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560). 1998 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U98-9 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5).

Court records concerning juveniles prosecuted as adults. — Court records concerning juveniles should be afforded the same treatment as any other superior court records when the court retains exclusive jurisdiction over a case involving a juvenile 13 to 17 years of age who is accused of committing specified felonies. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U95-8 (decided under former O.C.G.A., § 15-11-5).

(a) After a petition alleging delinquency has been filed but before the adjudication hearing, on its own motion or on a motion by a prosecuting attorney, the court may convene a hearing to determine whether to transfer the offense to the appropriate superior court for criminal trial if the court determines that:

(1) There is probable cause to believe that a child committed the alleged offense;

(2) Such child is not committable to an institution for the developmentally disabled or mentally ill; and

(3) The petition alleges that such child:

(A) Was at least 15 years of age at the time of the commission of the offense and committed an act which would be a felony if committed by an adult; or

(B) Was 13 or 14 years of age and either committed an act for which the punishment is loss of life or confinement for life in a penal institution or committed aggravated battery resulting in serious bodily injury to an alleged victim who is not a public safety officer as such term is defined in Code Section 16-5-19.

(b) At least three days prior to the scheduled transfer hearing, written notice shall be given to a child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian. The notice shall contain a statement that the purpose of the hearing is to determine whether such child is to be tried in the juvenile court or transferred for trial as an adult in superior court. A child may request and the court shall grant a continuance to prepare for the transfer hearing.

(c) After consideration of a probation report, risk assessment, and any other evidence the court deems relevant, including any evidence offered by a child, the court may determine that because of the seriousness of the offense or such child's prior record, the welfare of the community requires that criminal proceedings against such child be instituted. The court shall also consider the criteria listed in subsection (a) of Code Section 15-11-562.

(d) No child, either before or after reaching 17 years of age, shall be prosecuted in superior court for an offense committed before the child turned 17, unless the case has been transferred as provided in this part. In addition, no child shall be subject to criminal prosecution at any time for an offense arising out of a criminal transaction for which the juvenile court retained jurisdiction in its transfer order.

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, annotations taken from cases decided prior to the adoption of the 1983 Constitution are included in the annotations for this Code section. See Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. III, Para. I and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-39, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-30.2, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Reasonable and not unconstitutional. — Former statute was reasonable and did not violate substantive due process under U.S. Const., amend. 14. In re J.J.S., 246 Ga. 617, 272 S.E.2d 294 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Attempt to transfer after adjudicatory hearing is unconstitutional. — Attempt to transfer a juvenile to superior court after an adjudicatory hearing violated subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) and placed the juvenile in jeopardy twice in violation of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments. In re T.E.D., 169 Ga. App. 401, 312 S.E.2d 864 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Legislature may restrict or qualify right to treatment as juvenile. — Treatment as a juvenile is not an inherent right but one granted by the state legislature, and the legislature may restrict or qualify that right as the legislature sees fit as long as no arbitrary or discriminatory classification is involved. Lane v. Jones, 244 Ga. 17, 257 S.E.2d 525 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501); In re J.J.S., 246 Ga. 617, 272 S.E.2d 294 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Jurisdiction linked to petition. — Former statute indicated that assumption of jurisdiction by a juvenile court was linked to an authorized petition. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Subsection (c) of former statute (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-566) did not enlarge scope of former statute beyond that specified in former subsection (a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561). Williams v. State, 238 Ga. 298, 232 S.E.2d 535 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Juvenile has no absolute right to waive juvenile court jurisdiction. — Absent compliance with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561), there can be no such transfer of a juvenile to another court for treatment as an adult criminal defendant. In re D.B., 187 Ga. App. 3, 369 S.E.2d 498 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Continuance request on the part of the state. — Order granting the state's request for a continuance in a juvenile proceeding was vacated because the juvenile court did not consider whether the state's proffered reason of needing more time to determine whether to file a removal petition constituted good cause given the juvenile's objection to the continuance and the expressed desire to admit to the charged crimes. In the Interest of A. H., 332 Ga. App. 590, 774 S.E.2d 163 (2015).

Collateral estoppel did not prohibit transfer back to superior court. — Disregarding the question of whether collateral estoppel actually applied in the context of a case, the transfer of an involuntary manslaughter case, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-567), against a juvenile to the juvenile court did not collaterally estop a later transfer of the case back to the superior court under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) because the first transfer was based on the jurisdictional restrictions in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560) and at the time of that transfer, the superior court did not consider or rule on the multiple factors in former § 15-11-30.2 on which the second transfer was based. In the Interest of C.G., 291 Ga. App. 743, 662

S.E.2d 823 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Juvenile not intellectually disabled or mentally ill. — Juvenile court did not err in finding that the defendant juvenile was not committable to an institution for the developmentally disabled or mentally ill based on a doctor's evaluation which found that the defendant did not meet the criteria for intellectual disability or mental illness after having conducted an evaluation of the defendant. In the Interest of K. S., 348 Ga. App. 440, 823 S.E.2d 536 (2019).

Transfer Hearings

Juvenile court divests itself of jurisdiction. — Requirements of former statute constitute the only means by which the former juvenile court can divest itself of jurisdiction under the former Juvenile Code. J.W.A. v. State, 233 Ga. 683, 212 S.E.2d 849 (1975); C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976); K.G.W. v. State, 140 Ga. App. 571, 231 S.E.2d 421 (1976), cert. dismissed, 238 Ga. 599, 234 S.E.2d 535 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Former Code section was designed to require a hearing on the issue of transfer if the juvenile court was considering relinquishing jurisdiction. J.J. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 660, 218 S.E.2d 668 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Former Code section was designed to define procedures and requirements governing transfer hearings. J.J. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 660, 218 S.E.2d 668 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Juvenile court properly dismissed a delinquency petition without a hearing. — Juvenile's due process rights were not violated when the court dismissed, without a hearing, a delinquency petition which alleged that the juvenile committed aggravated sodomy as former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2(f) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) expressly provided that the transfer hearing provisions did not apply to any proceeding within the exclusive jurisdiction of a superior court, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560), which included aggravated sodomy. In the Interest of N.C., 293 Ga. App. 374, 667 S.E.2d 181 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Broad discretion of a juvenile court. — Juvenile court was vested with broad discretion in determining whether reasonable grounds exist for transferring a delinquency petition to the appropriate court for prosecution of a crime or public offense. In re K.L.L., 204 Ga. App. 320, 419 S.E.2d 312, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 922, 419 S.E.2d 312 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Juvenile appellant challenged the juvenile court's transfer order contending that the evidence was insufficient to show: (a) that the juvenile committed the offenses alleged against the juvenile as the evidence was based on hearsay testimony from an investigator; (b) that the juvenile was not committable to an institution for the mentally retarded or mentally ill, and (c) that the juvenile was not amenable to treatment in the juvenile system. However, the hearsay evidence was admissible at the instant transfer hearing and the juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in finding that the appellant was not committable upon the mental health report of its psychologist. In the Interest of D.W.B., 259 Ga. App. 662, 577 S.E.2d 819 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Juvenile court did not abuse the juvenile court's discretion in transferring a former juvenile's case to the superior court because, as a 28-year-old adult, the juvenile court no longer had jurisdiction over the matter, and the court could not be assured that the former juvenile would receive the appropriate treatment for the necessary length of time in the juvenile system; furthermore, the transfer under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2(a)(3) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) did not violate substantive due process under the Fourteenth Amendment. In the Interest of R.T., 278 Ga. App. 225, 628 S.E.2d 662 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Transfer decision by court is critical determination. — Decision by a juvenile court to surrender the court's jurisdiction is a critical determination affecting the tenor of the juvenile's subsequent treatment in the courts and therefore must measure up to the essentials of due process and fair treatment. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Transfer hearings must meet essentials of due process and fair treatment. — Transfer hearings are critically important proceedings affecting important rights of the juvenile. While the hearing need not conform with all of the requirements of a criminal trial or even of the usual administrative hearing, the hearing must measure up to the essentials of due process and fair treatment. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Pre-custody statements without Miranda warnings were admissible in considering transfer. — Statements of the defendant, a juvenile, were admissible and were properly considered in deciding to transfer the defendant's case to the superior court for prosecution even though the statements were made prior to the defendant receiving Miranda warnings since the defendant voluntarily spoke to the police and was not in custody or otherwise detained at the time the statements were made; even if the statements were inadmissible, other evidence, including statements by others which incriminated the defendant, was admissible and supported the transfer determination. In the Interest of B.Y., 257 Ga. App. 253, 570 S.E.2d 689 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Transfer hearing not similar to committal court or arraignment. — Transfer hearings are not to be treated as similar to a committal court nor as an arraignment under the criminal procedure provisions. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

No transfer hearing without petition filed in juvenile court. — If no petition alleging delinquency was filed in juvenile court, no transfer hearing in that court was required. Williams v. State, 238 Ga. 298, 232 S.E.2d 535 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501); Longshore v. State, 239 Ga. 437, 238 S.E.2d 22 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Evaluation of mental condition. — In an action against a juvenile charging the juvenile with the delinquent act of murder, when nonexpert witnesses did not provide any basis for their opinion that the juvenile was not mentally ill, the juvenile court abused the court's discretion in transferring the case to the superior court without sufficient evaluation of the juvenile's mental health. In re R.A.J., 214 Ga. App. 162, 447 S.E.2d 158 (1994), overruled on other grounds, In re R.B., 264 Ga. 602, 448 S.E.2d 690 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

To the extent that consideration of the need for future psychiatric treatment might have influenced the determination of whether a transfer to the superior court would be in the juvenile's best interest, the relevant consideration was whether the juvenile required treatment now or in the future and whether such treatment was available through the superior court or exclusively through the juvenile court, not whether the juvenile was suffering from a delusional compulsion at the time of the prior act. In re E.J.P., 236 Ga. App. 221, 511 S.E.2d 290 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Jeopardy did not attach so as to preclude further proceedings against a juvenile for crimes the juvenile admitted at a transfer hearing since the juvenile court accepted the admission for the limited purpose of determining whether the case should be transferred to superior court. In re M.E.J., 260 Ga. 805, 401 S.E.2d 254 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Transfer decision usually final and reviewable. — Transfer decision is determinative as to the juvenile aspect of the case and thus may be final and reviewable. Fulton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs. v. Perkins, 244 Ga. 237, 259 S.E.2d 427 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Transfer to superior court was proper since the transfer was based in part on the severity of murder and robbery offenses and in part on the involvement in the crimes at issue of adult offenders, along with the defendant's role as the apparent instigator of the offenses. Waller v. State, 261 Ga. 830, 412 S.E.2d 531 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Transfer from the juvenile court to the superior court was proper since evidence was presented as to each transfer requirement and the juvenile court ruled that such evidence justified transfer. In re E.J.P., 236 Ga. App. 221, 511 S.E.2d 290 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Since there were reasonable grounds to determine that the juvenile was a party to the crime of armed robbery and was not likely to be amenable to treatment in the juvenile system, the juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in transferring the case to the superior court. In re J.L.B., 240 Ga. App. 655, 523 S.E.2d 645 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Since both the state's and the juvenile's expert witnesses testified that the juvenile did not require involuntary commitment, there was ample evidence supporting the juvenile court's determination that the juvenile did not meet the criteria for involuntary commitment; therefore, the transfer from juvenile court to superior court for criminal prosecution was proper. In the Interest of A.B.S., 242 Ga. App. 277, 529 S.E.2d 415 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in transferring the cases of two juvenile defendants to the superior court for prosecution on charges of aggravated assault and attempted armed robbery. The record supported a finding that the transfer criteria of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2(a)(3) and (a)(4) were met since the juvenile court found that the interests of the defendants and the community mandated transfer in light of the seriousness of the conduct, which included one victim being hit repeatedly with a baseball bat, since there was evidence that the defendants committed the alleged delinquent acts when both were older than 15, and since neither of the defendants were committable to an institution for the mentally infirm. In the Interest of B.Y., 257 Ga. App. 253, 570 S.E.2d 689 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Juvenile court did not abuse the juvenile court's discretion in transferring the prosecution of two juveniles to the superior court, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2, based on the nature and severity of the crimes alleged, the community interest, the age of both juveniles charged, and the fact that insufficient time existed to provide both with adequate treatment in the juvenile system. In the Interest of S.K.K., 280 Ga. App. 877, 635 S.E.2d 263 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

In a case in which: (1) an inmate was charged in juvenile court with aggravated assault and aggravated battery pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-10); (2) after the victim died, the inmate was indicted in a county superior court for felony murder, aggravated assault, and aggravated battery without a transfer hearing being held in the juvenile court as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561); (3) the superior court was exercising the superior court's jurisdiction pursuant to former § 15-11-28(b)(2)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560); and (4) the juvenile court judge ordered the juvenile complaint against the inmate to be dismissed, the inmate's motion for reconsideration of the denial of the inmate's petition for a writ of habeas corpus was properly denied; any due process error had no effect on the outcome of the inmate's case since the felony murder charge was properly before the superior court and would have been proved by the same evidence. Moreover, the inmate's right against excessive punishment was not violated. Miller v. Martin, No. 1:04-cv-1120-WSD-JFK, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 61192 (N.D. Ga. Aug. 20, 2007) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Juvenile defendant's long history of offenses, the failure of attempts at rehabilitation through the juvenile system, and the fact that, as the defendant was 17, alternative rehabilitation programs in the juvenile system would be difficult, if not impossible, to find, supported the juvenile court's determination that the interests of the defendant and the community would be better served by transferring the case to superior court. In the Interest of T. F., 295 Ga. App. 417, 671 S.E.2d 887 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Because a juvenile had an extensive history of delinquency offenses, because past rehabilitative attempts had proven fruitless, and because several of the pending charges against the juvenile involved seriously violent behavior, transfer of the juvenile's case to a superior court pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) was proper. In re R.W., 299 Ga. App. 505, 683 S.E.2d 80 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

State met the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2(a)(3)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) for transferring a criminal case against a juvenile to the superior court based on the nature and severity of the offenses, the involvement of adult offenders, and the juvenile's role as an instigator in a gang shooting that injured five innocent bystanders. In re D. C., 303 Ga. App. 395, 693 S.E.2d 596 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Transfer to superior court was improper. — Juvenile court erred in granting the state's motion to transfer the defendant juvenile's case back to the superior court pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 because the superior court had properly transferred the case to the juvenile court since the defendant was not indicted within 180 days of detention as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-7-50.1; the time limits set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-7-50.1 are plainly stated and mandatory and clearly express the legislative intent that when a juvenile is detained and the superior court is exercising jurisdiction under either former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560) or former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561), the state must obtain an indictment within the specified time or the superior court loses the jurisdiction conferred by those provisions. In the Interest of C.B., 313 Ga. App. 778, 723 S.E.2d 21 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Hearsay testimony from an investigator as evidence of the "reasonable grounds to believe" that the juvenile had committed murder was admissible at a transfer hearing. In re R.B., 264 Ga. 602, 448 S.E.2d 690 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Affirmative defense not issue in transfer hearings. — Consideration of an affirmative defense goes to the merits of a case and is not an issue during the juvenile court's consideration of whether to transfer a case. In re E.J.P., 236 Ga. App. 221, 511 S.E.2d 290 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Community interests met. — Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in transferring a murder case since the juvenile court found that because of the heinous nature of the offense the community's interest in treating the appellant as an adult outweighed the appellant's interest in being treated as a juvenile. In re C.R., 264 Ga. 215, 442 S.E.2d 737 (1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 947, 115 S. Ct. 357, 130 L. Ed. 2d 311 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Severity of crime. — Juvenile court may, but is not required to, consider the severity of the crimes committed when determining the weight to be given the community's interest in trying a juvenile in superior court. In re J.N.B., 263 Ga. 600, 436 S.E.2d 202 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Procedure

Burden of meeting stated requirements of former statute was upon state. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

State is required to carry the burden of showing that the child is not amenable to treatment or rehabilitation. In re E.W., 256 Ga. 681, 353 S.E.2d 175 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39); In re S.P., 189 Ga. App. 829, 377 S.E.2d 911 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

State has the burden of showing that the child is not amenable to treatment or rehabilitation in order to make a finding that the interests of the child and the community require placing the child under legal restraint and making the transfer to another court. In re K.S.J., 258 Ga. 52, 365 S.E.2d 820 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Determination that a child is not committable to an institution for the mentally retarded or mentally ill must be supported by competent evidence, and the burden of presenting such evidence lies with the state. In re K.S.J., 258 Ga. 52, 365 S.E.2d 820 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39); In re S.P., 189 Ga. App. 829, 377 S.E.2d 911 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Showing necessary. — As to offenses charged, all that is required is to show court had reasonable grounds to believe child committed delinquent acts and is not amenable to treatment or rehabilitation through available facilities. D.L.M. v. State, 160 Ga. App. 424, 287 S.E.2d 355 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Nature of crime alone was not sufficient to satisfy requirements of former section. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Same transfer requirements for capital and noncapital offenses. — If a petition alleging delinquency has been filed in the juvenile court, the same requirements must be met in order for the juvenile court to transfer a case involving a capital offense to the superior court as a case involving a noncapital offense. J.G.B. v. State, 136 Ga. App. 75, 220 S.E.2d 79 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Time limitation. — Same 180-day time limitation applies to both former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-28(b) and 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-560 and 15-11-561), and that 180 days begins to run on the day the juvenile is detained whenever the superior court is exercising jurisdiction under either section; it necessarily follows that anytime the superior court loses jurisdiction which was conferred by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b) because the state failed to obtain an indictment within 180 days of the date the juvenile was detained, the time will also have expired within which the state could procure an indictment if the superior court were proceeding under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) and, thus, a transfer back to the superior court under those circumstances is pointless since an indictment returned by the grand jury would be void. In the Interest of C.B., 313 Ga. App. 778, 723 S.E.2d 21 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Although O.C.G.A. § 17-7-50.1 allows the state to request one automatic 90-day extension, this extension cannot be granted after the expiration of the 180 days; the legislature intended to set time limitations for the state to act in those situations in which the juvenile is detained and the superior court is exercising jurisdiction over the matter pursuant to either former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560) or former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561). In the Interest of C.B., 313 Ga. App. 778, 723 S.E.2d 21 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Waiver of presentment. — Lower appellate court erred when the court affirmed the transfer of the defendant from the superior court to the juvenile court because the court misunderstood O.C.G.A. § 17-7-50.1 when the court concluded that the statute did not permit a detained child to waive presentation within 180 days of the date of detention as the defendant filed an express waiver. State v. Baxter, 300 Ga. 268, 794 S.E.2d 49 (2016).

Notice of transfer required to meet due process. — Giving the accused juvenile notice of an intention to transfer the case out of the juvenile court's jurisdiction was instituted in order to satisfy the essentials of due process and fair treatment. Reed v. State, 125 Ga. App. 568, 188 S.E.2d 392 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Notice when hearing to make transfer decision. — Former statute specifically required that in cases in which the juvenile court decided to yield to concurrent jurisdiction over the juvenile to another court that the accused child and the child's parents must be notified that the hearing was for this specific "purpose." Reed v. State, 125 Ga. App. 568, 188 S.E.2d 392 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Juvenile facing transfer of case has right to evidentiary hearing. — When former Code 1933, §§ 24A-2501 and 24A-2002 are read together, a juvenile faced with the possible transfer of the juvenile's case from juvenile court to "the appropriate court having jurisdiction of the offense" has the right to an evidentiary hearing at which the juvenile must be given the opportunity to introduce evidence and otherwise be heard in the juvenile's own behalf and to cross-examine adverse witnesses. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Adequate notice of hearing. — There was no harmful error in the failure of the notice to state the purpose of the hearing since, even if the initial knowledge of the purpose of the hearing was insufficient to establish proper notice to the juvenile, the mother, and the attorney, a five-day postponement of the portion of the hearing dealing with whether to process the juvenile as an adult provided adequate notice. In re B.A.H., 198 Ga. App. 713, 402 S.E.2d 791 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Failure to object to motion for transfer. — Since a juvenile admitted receipt of the state's written motion for transfer and interposed no objection, but proceeded on the merits of the motion, any valid objection to the sufficiency of the motion was waived. In re L.R., 219 Ga. App. 755, 466 S.E.2d 653 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39); Rivers v. State, 229 Ga. App. 12, 493 S.E.2d 2 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Juvenile court must conduct evidentiary hearing. — Juvenile court has discretion to determine whether there are "reasonable grounds" and to order the transfer only after conducting an evidentiary hearing. The juvenile court may not simply waive juvenile jurisdiction and deny an appellant the right to an evidentiary hearing on the "reasonable grounds" for the transfer. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933 § 24A-2501).

Standard under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2(a)(3) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) required only that the court find that there are "reasonable grounds to believe" that the child committed the act alleged, not "proof beyond a reasonable doubt" was is required for a conviction. Moreover, the court's determination, if based on evidence, will not be controlled by the appellate court. In re K.S.J., 258 Ga. 52, 365 S.E.2d 820 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39); In re R.J., 191 Ga. App. 712, 382 S.E.2d 671 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39); In the Interest of J.B.H., 241 Ga. App. 736, 527 S.E.2d 18 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Right to effective assistance of counsel and inspection of records. — While former Code 1933, §§ 24A-3501 and 24A-3502 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-704 and 15-11-708) both require the consent of the court to inspect a juvenile's records and files, a juvenile's right to effective assistance of counsel limits the court's discretion to withhold such consent from counsel representing the juvenile in a "critically important" transfer proceeding. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Error to limit access of defense counsel to juvenile's records. — Since the court granted defense counsel's motion pursuant to former Code 1933, §§ 24A-3501 and 24A-3502 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-704 and 15-11-708) but limited access to only those files and records of appellant which would be "used against" the juvenile concerned at the transfer hearing, to the extent that the appellant's counsel was not granted access to files and records of the appellant which were considered by the juvenile court in transferring jurisdiction, the ruling was erroneous. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Right to view all records and files. — Not only are a juvenile and the juvenile's counsel entitled to know what information in the juvenile's records and files the court relied upon in the juvenile court's adverse decision to transfer jurisdiction, but the juvenile and counsel are also entitled to view those records and files considered but not relied upon by the juvenile judge. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Examine material before decision on waiver. — If a decision on waiver is "critically important" it is equally of "critical importance" that the material submitted to the judge be subjected to examination, criticism, and refutation within reasonable limits having regard to the theory of the former Juvenile Code. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Effect of denial of access to certain materials. — While allowing counsel access to materials which will be "used against" a juvenile serves the defensive purpose of ensuring that any adverse material considered by the court will be subject to attack and refutation, it denies counsel the opportunity to examine, for the purpose of discovering and ensuring that proper and due consideration is given thereto, any material to be considered by the court which might serve as a "reasonable ground" for retaining, rather than transferring, jurisdiction. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Testimony of nonexpert on child's mental condition allowed. — Child's mental condition may be established by the testimony of a nonexpert witness, such as a court services worker, provided the witness gives sufficient facts and circumstances to establish the basis for the witness's opinion. L.K.F. v. State, 173 Ga. App. 770, 328 S.E.2d 394 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Limits on judge's discretionary determination. — Discretion conferred by paragraph (a)(3) of the former statute cannot be based on undisclosed personal information known to the trial jurist and in disregard of the evidence in the record. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Transfer based on layperson's testimony of juvenile's mental condition. — Juvenile court did not abuse the juvenile court's discretion in ordering a transfer merely because the court relied on layperson rather than expert testimony as to the juvenile's mental condition and amenability to treatment. D.T.R. v. State, 174 Ga. App. 695, 331 S.E.2d 70 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Community's interest in treating juvenile as adult strongest. — Juvenile court's finding that, because of the heinous nature of the offenses (aggravated assaults leaving one victim with permanent brain damage), the community's interest in treating the juvenile as an adult outweighed the juvenile's interest in remaining in the juvenile system and was sufficient to warrant transfer. State v. M.M., 259 Ga. 637, 386 S.E.2d 35 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Juvenile court did not err in the juvenile court's reliance upon the heinous nature of the charged offense in determining that the community's interest in treating a juvenile defendant as an adult outweighed the defendant's interest in being treated in the juvenile system. In re J.H., 260 Ga. 447, 396 S.E.2d 885 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Transfer judgment must be based on evidentiary hearing. — Since the juvenile court judge refused to conduct a hearing at which evidence bearing upon the "transfer criteria" listed in the former section could be introduced, the judgment of the juvenile court transferring jurisdiction must be reversed and the case remanded for an appropriate evidentiary hearing. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Hearsay evidence admissible at transfer hearings. — Given that the right of confrontation is a trial right, there is no reason to apply that right to a transfer hearing involving a juvenile.

Therefore, hearsay evidence is admissible at such hearings. In the Interest of T. F., 295 Ga. App. 417, 671 S.E.2d 887 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Conduct cannot waive statutory requirements if juvenile involved. — If the juvenile had a full hearing and the child and the child's parents were present and participated in the hearing, normally such conduct, including the acknowledgment of service by the attorney of the initial petition under the former Juvenile Code, might constitute a waiver of the three-day notice requirement of paragraph (a)(2) of the former section, but if a juvenile was involved then such conduct will not operate as an estoppel or legal waiver of statutory requirements. Reed v. State, 125 Ga. App. 568, 188 S.E.2d 392 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Juvenile court judge may disallow filing of petitions to avoid jurisdiction. — Former Code 1933, § 24A-1601 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-420) was not unconstitutional on the ground that the statute violated due process of law by permitting the juvenile court to allow the case to be transferred to the superior court by merely disallowing the filing of a petition such as would vest jurisdiction in the juvenile court, without the benefit of any transfer hearing. Lane v. Jones, 244 Ga. 17, 257 S.E.2d 525 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Amenability to Treatment

Testimony regarding rehabilitation possibilities or absence needed. — Since the former section required the state to show "reasonable grounds," there must be testimony as to the rehabilitation possibilities or absence thereof in the record to meet the due process requirements granted juveniles by the Georgia Supreme Court. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501); In re T.J.M., 142 Ga. App. 415, 236 S.E.2d 152 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Reflection of nonamenability in transfer order. — Transfer order must realistically reflect why a child is not amenable to treatment as a juvenile. Such a decision must be based on evidence and the basis for the decision must be clearly reflected in the transfer order itself. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Overly general transfer order. — Transfer order which did not reflect why the child was not amenable to treatment as a juvenile was too general to sustain and was remanded for specific findings and conclusions balancing the amenability factor against the interests of the community in processing the child as an adult. In re H.W.A., 182 Ga. App. 188, 354 S.E.2d 884 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39); In re M.M., 190 Ga. App. 795, 380 S.E.2d 75 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Number and severity of offenses, standing alone, cannot establish absence of amenability to rehabilitation. J.G.B. v. State, 136 Ga. App. 75, 220 S.E.2d 79 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501); C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Child's amenability or nonamenability to treatment is but one factor to consider in determining the child's and the community's interests. Both the state and the juvenile are free to put forth any evidence they desire relating to the child's and the community's interest. State v. M.M., 259 Ga. 637, 386 S.E.2d 35 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Juvenile court finding that it would be in the best interest of a juvenile defendant and of the public for the defendant to be dealt with as an adult based on the severity of the offense does not abuse the juvenile court's discretion in ordering the transfer of that case to superior court based on these findings. In re A.G., 265 Ga. 481, 458 S.E.2d 343 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Whether a juvenile is amenable to treatment in the juvenile system is but one factor for the juvenile court to consider when making this determination. In re J.B., 234 Ga. App. 775, 507 S.E.2d 874 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Amenability factor may be outweighed by interests of community. — Juvenile court may transfer to the superior court a juvenile who is amenable to treatment if the juvenile court finds that the amenability factor is outweighed by the interests of the community in treating the child as an adult. In re K.S.J., 258 Ga. 52, 365 S.E.2d 820 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Findings required. — Order of the juvenile court transferring a juvenile's case to superior court so that the juvenile could be treated as an adult offender was required to be remanded because, even though the record contained facts on which the court's conclusion could be based, the record failed to show the required balancing of the interests of the juvenile and the community. In the Interest of B.J.W., 247 Ga. App. 437, 543 S.E.2d 811 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

It is not necessary to prove the juvenile's amenability to treatment in the juvenile system if the interest of the community mandates a transfer. In re S.B.B., 234 Ga. App. 778, 507 S.E.2d 879 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Former statute subsumed a juvenile's amenability to treatment within the concept, "the interest of the child," and authorized a juvenile court to transfer to the superior court a juvenile who was amenable to treatment if the juvenile court found that the amenability factor was outweighed by the interest of the community in processing the child as an adult. In re J.J.S., 246 Ga. 617, 272 S.E.2d 294 (1980) (decided under Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

After a juvenile stole two pounds of cocaine from a sheriff's property room, and had a history of delinquency adjudications, there was no abuse of discretion in the juvenile court's transfer of the defendant to superior court for prosecution of this offense. In re T.M., 195 Ga. App. 342, 393 S.E.2d 448 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Even though the juvenile defendant was amenable to treatment, considering the severity of the crimes involved and the involvement of an adult offender, the juvenile court had sufficient basis for finding that the community's interest mandated the defendant's adjudication to the adult system. In re C.B.D., 215 Ga. App. 655, 449 S.E.2d 1 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

State is not required to show, nor is the transfer order required to explain, why the child is not amenable to treatment when that factor is not relied on as the basis for the transfer. In re J.D., 264 Ga. 836, 452 S.E.2d 105 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

State did not err in failing to determine whether the juvenile was amenable to treatment since the court found it would be in the best interest of the public for the juvenile to be dealt with as an adult based on the severity of the offense and the community's interest in public prosecution. In re J.D., 264 Ga. 836, 452 S.E.2d 105 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Because the record showed that the juvenile had a five-year history of treatment in the juvenile system resulting from criminal offenses escalating in severity, including carrying a concealed weapon and carrying a pistol without a license, the juvenile court correctly balanced the juvenile's interest in treatment in the juvenile court system against the community's interest in treating the juvenile as an adult. In re A.P.W., 265 Ga. 8, 453 S.E.2d 457 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39); In the Interest of D.W.B., 259 Ga. App. 662, 577 S.E.2d 819 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Burden of proving nonamenability. — If the state seeks a transfer based at least in part on the child's nonamenability to treatment in the juvenile system, the state has the burden of proving the child is not amenable to treatment. But if the state argues that, even though a juvenile is amenable to treatment, the community's interest in transferring the juvenile to the adult system outweighs the juvenile's interest in treatment in the juvenile system, the state does not have to prove the child's nonamenability to treatment. State v. M.M., 259 Ga. 637, 386 S.E.2d 35 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

If the juvenile court relies in part on the child's nonamenability to treatment in ordering the transfer, the transfer order, in performing the balancing test required by subparagraph (a)(3)(C) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561), must reflect why the child is not amenable to treatment, but if the state argues that, even though a juvenile is amenable to treatment, the community's interest in transferring the juvenile to the adult system outweighs the juvenile's interest in treatment in the juvenile system, and the court orders a transfer, the order does not have to reflect why the juvenile is not amenable to treatment. Instead, the order must balance the child's interest in treatment in the juvenile system, including but not limited to the child's amenability to treatment, against the community's interest in treating the child as an adult. State v. M.M., 259 Ga. 637, 386 S.E.2d 35 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39); In re J.B., 234 Ga. App. 775, 507 S.E.2d 874 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

State did not meet the state's burden to prove the defendant's nonamenability to juvenile treatment since the defendant had no prior record and had no previous experience in the juvenile system and, although the state and the court's order relied on nonamenability, no proof of such was offered. In re E.M., 198 Ga. App. 729, 402 S.E.2d 751, cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 898, 402 S.E.2d 751 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Availability of treatment facilities. — Since there were reasonable grounds for the court to conclude that the juvenile could not receive appropriate treatment in a secure facility for the necessary length of time in the juvenile system, the juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in ordering a transfer. In re J.N.B., 263 Ga. 600, 436 S.E.2d 202 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Evidence supported juvenile court's judgment ordering transfer of charges for trial in superior court. — Evidence that a juvenile had a history of using marijuana and other drugs, had used marijuana before the juvenile lost control of a car the juvenile was driving while racing another car on a public street, causing a multi-car collision in which two people died, had challenged other people to automobile races on several occasions, violated the conditions of the juvenile's driver's license by driving with a non-family member, and used drugs after the accident was sufficient to support the juvenile court's judgment that the juvenile was not amenable to treatment in the juvenile court system and that the interests of the juvenile and the community would be better served if the case was transferred to the superior court. In the Interest of W.N.J., 268 Ga. App. 637, 602 S.E.2d 173 (2004) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Juvenile court's order transferring the defendant, a juvenile, for trial as an adult pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) was proper because the juvenile court properly found that based on the testimony of the defendant's probation officer, the defendant was not amenable to treatment in that court; the juvenile court also properly found that the community's interest in transfer outweighed the defendant's interest in remaining in juvenile court based on the escalating nature of the defendant's alleged criminal conduct, all while on probation. Evidence that the defendant was intelligent and performed well in school did not demand a finding or necessarily demonstrate that the defendant was amenable to the treatment solutions offered in the juvenile court. In re D.M., 299 Ga. App. 586, 683 S.E.2d 130 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in determining that the community's interest in having the defendant prosecuted as an adult, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2), outweighed the defendant's interest in having the case stay in juvenile court because the factors favoring the community's interest outweighed the defendant's amenability to treatment in the juvenile court, particularly, the seriousness of the offenses in that the defendant killed a child and caused another to be a quadriplegic, the fact that the defendant was the instigator, the limited options for detention and supervision available to the juvenile court in dealing with the defendant, and the community's need for a full and public trial. In the Interest of J. R. L., 319 Ga. App. 666, 738 S.E.2d 144 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Concurrent Jurisdiction

Court first taking jurisdiction retains jurisdiction unless transfer. — Superior courts and the juvenile courts have concurrent jurisdiction over juveniles charged with capital offenses, and whichever court first takes jurisdiction over the matter may retain jurisdiction, subject to the right of the juvenile court to transfer the case to the superior court. Hartley v. Clack, 239 Ga. 113, 236 S.E.2d 63 (1977) (decided prior to adoption of 1983 Constitution and under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

After a delinquency petition was filed, alleging that a 16-year-old committed the criminal offense of armed robbery, and the juvenile court conducted a hearing to determine whether the offense should be transferred for prosecution in the superior court, the juvenile court did not err when the juvenile court determined that the commission of the serious offense of armed robbery by a 16-year-old acting in concert with adult co-perpetrators warrants the conclusion that the child is not amenable to treatment as a juvenile. In re J.D., 195 Ga. App. 801, 395 S.E.2d 280 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Concurrent jurisdiction of superior court activated upon proper transfer. — Under the statutory scheme, exclusive original jurisdiction of noncapital juvenile cases is placed in the juvenile courts with the concurrent jurisdiction of the superior courts becoming effective when activated by a proper transfer from the juvenile courts. J.W.A. v. State, 233 Ga. 683, 212 S.E.2d 849 (1975), for comment, see 27 Mercer L. Rev. 335 (1975) (decided prior to adoption of 1983 Constitution and under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

While under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560) an involuntary manslaughter charge could not be initiated in a superior court, which properly transferred the matter to a juvenile court, assuming the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2(a)(3) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) were met, the juvenile court did not err in granting a motion to transfer the case back to the superior court as the authority to do so was specifically given in former § 15-11-30.2. In the Interest of C.G., 291 Ga. App. 743, 662 S.E.2d 823 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

No transfer hearing required for concurrent jurisdiction. — When either the juvenile court or the superior court properly could have exercised jurisdiction, no petition alleging delinquency was ever filed in the juvenile court, and the superior court first took jurisdiction through indictment, jurisdiction properly vested in the superior court and no transfer hearing pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) was required. Taylor v. State, 194 Ga. App. 871, 392 S.E.2d 57 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Because the defendant was charged with participating in a "pattern of criminal street gang activity" that included armed robbery and murder, the trial court's jurisdiction necessarily extended to the related lesser crimes even though the defendant was a juvenile at the time and the case had not been transferred pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561). Seabolt v. State, 279 Ga. 518, 616 S.E.2d 448 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Subsequent juvenile court proceedings void if superior court first exercised jurisdiction. — If the superior court first exercised jurisdiction over a minor charged with murder by conducting a committal hearing, subsequent proceedings in juvenile court which charged the appellant with aggravated assault and ordered transferral to superior court were null and void. J.T.M. v. State, 142 Ga. App. 635, 236 S.E.2d 764 (1977) (decided prior to adoption of 1983 Constitution and under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Superior court may deny transfer motion seeking juvenile court hearing. — If a juvenile defendant is charged with a crime for which the juvenile could be punished by loss of life or confinement for life in a penitentiary, and the superior court first took jurisdiction over such juvenile, the trial court may deny a motion which seeks to transfer jurisdiction to the juvenile court for a hearing to determine the defendant's amenability to rehabilitation in the juvenile court system. Brown v. State, 235 Ga. 353, 219 S.E.2d 419 (1975) (decided prior to adoption of 1983 Constitution and under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Juvenile court's judgment to try the defendant as a juvenile is res judicata as the determination of guilt was made in that court. Lincoln v. State, 138 Ga. App. 234, 225 S.E.2d 708 (1976) (decided prior to adoption of 1983 Constitution and under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Properly transferred juvenile subject to criminal adjudication. — Juvenile whose case is properly transferred to the superior court is subject to the criminal sanctions which may be imposed in that court. Thus, an adjudication of guilt of a juvenile in superior court is a criminal adjudication. Carrindine v. Ricketts, 236 Ga. 283, 223 S.E.2d 627 (1976) (decided prior to adoption of 1983 Constitution and under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Juvenile court and superior court with concurrent jurisdiction in armed robbery case. — Juvenile court erred in finding that a juvenile case involving armed robbery with a firearm was subject to the transfer provisions delineated in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) because, under former subsection (f) of that section, the transfer provisions did not apply in cases involving armed robbery with a firearm, which were subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of the superior court under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(A)(vii) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560). However, because the juvenile court had concurrent jurisdiction to enter the judgment due to the state's filing a petition in the juvenile court, the state had no right to appeal from the judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-7-1(a)(5). In re D. L., 302 Ga. App. 234, 690 S.E.2d 522 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

15-11-562. Transfer criteria; written report.

(a) The criteria that the juvenile court shall consider in determining whether to transfer an alleged delinquent child as set forth in subsection (a) of Code Section 15-11-561 to superior court and the criteria that the superior court shall consider in determining whether to transfer any case involving a child 13 to 17 years of age alleged to have committed any act described in paragraph (3), (5), (6), (7), (9), or (10) of subsection (b) of Code Section 15-11-560 to juvenile court as set forth in subsection (e) of Code Section 15-11-560 includes, but shall not be limited to:

(1) The age of such child;

(2) The seriousness of the alleged offense, especially if personal injury resulted;

(3) Whether the protection of the community requires transfer of jurisdiction;

(4) Whether the alleged offense involved violence or was committed in an aggressive or premeditated manner;

(5) The impact of the alleged offense on the alleged victim, including the permanence of any physical or emotional injury sustained, health care expenses incurred, and lost earnings suffered;

(6) The culpability of such child including such child's level of planning and participation in the alleged offense;

(7) Whether the alleged offense is a part of a repetitive pattern of offenses which indicates that such child may be beyond rehabilitation in the juvenile justice system;

(8) The record and history of such child, including experience with the juvenile justice system, other courts, supervision, commitments to juvenile institutions, and other placements;

(9) The sophistication and maturity of such child as determined by consideration of his or her home and environmental situation, emotional condition, and pattern of living;

(10) The program and facilities available to the juvenile court in considering disposition; and

(11) Whether or not a child can benefit from the treatment or rehabilitative programs available to the juvenile court.

(b) A probation officer, or community supervision officer, as applicable, shall prepare a written report developing fully all available information relevant to the transfer criteria. Such officer shall submit such report to the parties and the court as soon as practicable but not later than 24 hours before the scheduled hearing. The child subject to transfer and the prosecuting attorney shall have the right to review such report and cross-examine the individual making such report.

(c) The court may order a transfer evaluation of a child's clinical status as it may impact the criteria in subsection (a) of this Code section. Statements made by a child in a transfer evaluation shall only be admissible into evidence in an adjudication hearing or in a criminal proceeding as provided by Code Sections 15-11-479 and 15-11-563.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Transfer of the defendant's case was supported by evidence that it was in the community's interest, and the defendant failed to abide by the conditions of probation and continued to engage in criminal activity that escalated in severity. In the Interest of T. S., 336 Ga. App. 352, 785 S.E.2d 32 (2016).

Transfer order was appropriate after the juvenile court considered all the statutory factors and noted, inter alia, that the defendant juvenile had a history of stealing cars, stealing from stores, vandalizing property, smoking marijuana daily, associating with gang members, and scoring in the low range on the treatment amenability scale of the risk-sophistication-treatment inventory. In the Interest of K. S., 348 Ga. App. 440, 823 S.E.2d 536 (2019).

Standard of review. — Function of the Georgia Court of Appeals is limited to ascertaining whether there was some evidence to support the juvenile court's determination, and absent an abuse of discretion, the appellate court will affirm the order transferring jurisdiction. In the Interest of J. M. S., 334 Ga. App. 142, 778 S.E.2d 391 (2015), overruled on other grounds by In the Interest of J. H., 340 Ga. App. 733, 797 S.E.2d 185 (Ga. Ct. App. 2017).

15-11-563. Statements made at transfer hearing.

Statements made by a child at a transfer hearing shall not be admissible against such child over objection in a criminal proceedings if transfer is ordered except as impeachment or rebuttal evidence.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, annotations taken from cases decided prior to the adoption of the 1983 Constitution are included in the annotations for this Code section. See Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. III, Para. I and Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I.

In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-39, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-30.2, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Legislature may restrict or qualify right to treatment as juvenile. — Treatment as a juvenile is not an inherent right but one granted by the state legislature, and the legislature may restrict or qualify that right as the legislature sees fit as long as no arbitrary or discriminatory classification is involved. Lane v. Jones, 244 Ga. 17, 257 S.E.2d 525 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501); In re J.J.S., 246 Ga. 617, 272 S.E.2d 294 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Pre-custody statements without Miranda warnings were admissible in considering transfer. — Statements of the defendant, a juvenile, were admissible and were properly considered in deciding to transfer the defendant's case to the superior court for prosecution even though the statements were made prior to the defendant receiving Miranda warnings since the defendant voluntarily spoke to the police and was not in custody or otherwise detained at the time the statements were made; even if the statements were inadmissible, other evidence, including statements by others which incriminated the defendant, was admissible and supported the transfer determination. In the Interest of B.Y., 257 Ga. App. 253, 570 S.E.2d 689 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2).

Jeopardy did not attach so as to preclude further proceedings against a juvenile for crimes the juvenile admitted at a transfer hearing since the juvenile court accepted the admission for the limited purpose of determining whether the case should be transferred to superior court. In re M.E.J., 260 Ga. 805, 401 S.E.2d 254 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Juvenile facing transfer of case has right to evidentiary hearing. — When former Code 1933, §§ 24A-2501 and 24A-2002 are read together, a juvenile faced with the possible transfer of the juvenile's case from juvenile court to "the appropriate court having jurisdiction of the offense" has the right to an evidentiary hearing at which the juvenile must be given the opportunity to introduce evidence and otherwise be heard in the juvenile's own behalf and to cross-examine adverse witnesses. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

15-11-564. Appeal of transfer order.

(a) The decision of the court regarding transfer of the case shall only be an interlocutory judgment which either a child or the prosecuting attorney, or both, have the right to have reviewed by the Court of Appeals.

(b) The pendency of an interlocutory appeal shall stay criminal proceedings in superior court. A child transferred for trial as an adult in superior court shall be detained only in those places authorized for the preadjudication detention of a child as set forth in Code Section 15-11-504.

15-11-565. Places authorized for detention of child before and after transfer order.

(a) Prior to the entry of a judgment ordering a child's transfer or during the pendency of an appeal of a judgment ordering a child's transfer, such child shall be detained only in those places authorized for the preadjudication detention of a child as set forth in Code Section 15-11-504.

(b) After the entry of a judgment ordering transfer, a child shall be detained only in those places authorized for the detention of a child until such child, as set forth in Code Section 15-11-34, reaches 17 years of age.

15-11-566. Dismissal order upon transfer to superior court.

(a) If the court decides to transfer a child for trial in superior court, it shall dismiss the juvenile court petition alleging delinquency for the offense or offenses being transferred, set forth the offense or offenses which are being transferred, and make the following findings of fact in its dismissal order:

(1) That the court had jurisdiction of the cause and the parties;

(2) That the child subject to transfer was represented by an attorney; and

(3) That the hearing was held in the presence of the child subject to transfer and his or her attorney.

(b) The dismissal order shall also recount the reasons underlying the decision to transfer jurisdiction.

(c) A dismissal of the petition alleging delinquency terminates the jurisdiction of the juvenile court over such child as to those offenses which are transferred. If the petition alleging delinquency alleges multiple offenses that constitute a single criminal transaction, the court shall either retain or transfer all offenses relating to a single criminal transaction.

(d) Once juvenile court jurisdiction is terminated, the superior court shall retain jurisdiction even though, thereafter, a child pleads guilty to, or is convicted of, a lesser included offense. The plea to, or conviction of, a lesser included offense shall not revest juvenile jurisdiction over such child.

(e) A copy of the petition alleging delinquency and order of dismissal shall be sent to the district attorney of the judicial circuit in which the proceeding is taking place.

(f) If the court decides not to transfer a child for trial in superior court, it shall set a date for an adjudication hearing in juvenile court on the petition alleging delinquency.

Legislature may restrict or qualify right to treatment as juvenile. — Treatment as a juvenile is not an inherent right but one granted by the state legislature, and the legislature may restrict or qualify that right as the legislature sees fit as long as no arbitrary or discriminatory classification is involved. Lane v. Jones, 244 Ga. 17, 257 S.E.2d 525 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501); In re J.J.S., 246 Ga. 617, 272 S.E.2d 294 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

Subsection (c) of former statute (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-566) did not enlarge scope of former statute beyond that specified in former subsection (a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561). Williams v. State, 238 Ga. 298, 232 S.E.2d 535 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501).

15-11-567. Transfers to juvenile court.

(a) Except in those cases in which the superior court has exclusive original jurisdiction or juvenile court jurisdiction has been terminated and the child has been transferred to superior court, if it appears to any court in a criminal proceeding or a quasi-criminal proceeding that the accused is a child, the case shall forthwith be transferred to the juvenile court together with a copy of the indictment, special presentment, accusation, or citation and all other papers, documents, and transcripts of testimony relating to the case.

(b) The transferring court shall order that a child be taken forthwith to the juvenile court or to a place of detention designated by the court or shall release him or her to the custody of his or her parent, guardian, legal custodian, or other person legally responsible for him or her to be brought before the juvenile court at a time designated by that court. The indictment, special presentment, accusation, or citation may not serve in lieu of a petition alleging delinquency in the juvenile court except as provided in Part 14 of this article.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose of former statute was obviously to provide a forum in which all juveniles may receive equal treatment. Kelly v. State, 122 Ga. App. 185, 176 S.E.2d 468 (1970) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 24-2414 and 24-2415).

Multiple transfers. — Disregarding the question of whether collateral estoppel actually applied in the context of a case, the transfer of an involuntary manslaughter case, under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-567), against a juvenile to the juvenile court did not collaterally estop a later transfer of the case back to the superior court under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) because the first transfer was based on the jurisdictional restrictions in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-560) and at the time of that transfer, the superior court did not consider or rule on the multiple factors in former § 15-11-30.2 on which the second transfer was based. In the Interest of C.G., 291 Ga. App. 743, 662 S.E.2d 823 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-30.4).

Part 10

Adjudication

15-11-580. Admission or denial of the allegations of a petition.

(a) At the commencement of the adjudication hearing, the court shall address the alleged delinquent child, in language understandable to the child, and determine whether such child is capable of understanding statements about his or her rights under this article.

(b) If a child is capable, the court shall inquire how he or she responds to the allegations of the delinquency petition. The child may:

(1) Deny the allegations of such petition, in which case the court shall proceed to hear evidence on such petition; or

(2) Admit the allegations of such petition, in which case the court shall further inquire to determine whether there is a factual basis for adjudication. If so, the court may then adjudge such child to have committed a delinquent act.

(c) If a child stands mute, refuses to answer, or answers evasively, the court shall enter a denial of the allegations.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Courts may consider reports which contain hearsay in disposition phase. — Former statute required that in the hearing on a petition alleging deprivation the trial court shall first make the court's finding as to whether the children were deprived, and it was only after this decision had been made that the judge, in considering the disposition to be made of the children, may consider written reports which contain hearsay matter. In re J.C., 242 Ga. 737, 251 S.E.2d 299 (1978), appeal dismissed, 441 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2046, 60 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Entry of Alford plea by juvenile. — Juvenile court erred by denying a juvenile's request to enter an Alford plea since the Georgia General Assembly did not expressly prohibit the entry of Alford pleas in juvenile court, and the juvenile court was required to construe O.C.G.A. § 15-11-580 liberally to ensure the juvenile's best interests. 15-11-581. Standard of proof.

The state shall have the burden of proving the allegations of a delinquency petition beyond a reasonable doubt.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

General Consideration

General Consideration

Standard of proof on question of delinquency or termination. — An "any evidence" standard or "preponderance of the evidence" standard is inadequate in dealing with a finding of deprivation of a child or termination of parental rights and would violate U.S. Const., amend. 14. In re Suggs, 249 Ga. 365, 291 S.E.2d 233 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33); In re J.K.D., 211 Ga. App. 776, 440 S.E.2d 524 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Standard of proof on charges of criminal nature against juvenile is the same as that used in criminal proceedings against adults; proof must be beyond a reasonable doubt. M.W.W. v. State, 136 Ga. App. 472, 221 S.E.2d 669 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933 § 24A-2201); In re M.M., 235 Ga. App. 109, 508 S.E.2d 484 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

With regard to a juvenile's adjudication of delinquency for acts which, if committed by an adult, would have constituted the offense of child molestation, the juvenile court did not err by denying the juvenile's motion to dismiss, which was based on an extended pre-trial detention as the juvenile and defense counsel agreed to a continuance and acquiesced in a hearing date delaying the adjudication for at least 48 days following the filing of the delinquency petition, which caused the juvenile to waive the right to complain that the adjudication hearing date was not set to occur in compliance with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39. However, the adjudication was reversed and the case was remanded to the juvenile court since the juvenile court erroneously applied a clear and convincing standard of proof and the standard of proof on charges of a criminal nature was the same as that used in criminal proceedings against adults, namely proof beyond a reasonable doubt. In the Interest of A.S., 293 Ga. App. 710, 667 S.E.2d 701 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-65).

Wrong standard of proof applied in juvenile's case. — Juvenile's adjudication as delinquent for theft related acts was reversed because the juvenile court applied an erroneous standard of proof by concluding that there was some evidence to find that the juvenile removed a teacher's wallet from the teacher's desk since the wallet was found in the juvenile's book bag as the proper standard was proof beyond a reasonable doubt, not the lesser and different standard of some evidence. In the Interest of A. G., No. A20A0054, 2020 Ga. App. LEXIS 385 (June 24, 2020).

Clear and convincing evidence required for termination of parental rights. — Termination of parental rights is a severe measure. If a third party sues the custodial parent to obtain custody of a child and to terminate the parent's custodial rights in the child, the parent is entitled to custody of the child unless the third party shows by "clear and convincing evidence" that the parent is unfit or otherwise not entitled to custody under O.C.G.A. §§ 19-7-1 and 19-7-4. Subsection (b) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-440 and 15-11-581) required the court after a hearing to find "clear and convincing evidence" of "deprivation" before an order of deprivation may be entered. Heath v. McGuire, 167 Ga. App. 489, 306 S.E.2d 741 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Clear and convincing evidence required for deprivation. — If deprivation formed the predicate upon which a third party sought a temporary transfer of the child's legal custody, in order to support such a disposition the child must first be adjudicated to be a deprived child. By statute, that finding of deprivation must be made by "clear and convincing evidence." In re J.C.P., 167 Ga. App. 572, 307 S.E.2d 1 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33); In re J.T.M., 200 Ga. App. 636, 409 S.E.2d 256 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33), but see In re A.W., 240 Ga. App. 259, 523 S.E.2d 88 (1999).

Delinquency found when delinquent acts corroborated by confession. — Child's confession out of court corroborated by evidence that the stolen items were found in the child's possession within a few hours of the theft constituted sufficient proof to support a finding of delinquency. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Purpose of division of juvenile trials into two phases. — In dividing juvenile trials into two phases lawmakers intended to give the juvenile judge an opportunity to conduct the "functional equivalent" of a regular trial (the adjudicatory hearing) in a manner which would satisfy the required constitutional procedures concomitant with the usual legal rules, such as those dealing with admissibility of evidence, proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and similar requirements applicable to adults. Thereafter, at the dispositional phase, the judge was to explore all available additional avenues, including psychiatric and sociological studies, which would enable the judge to provide a solution for the youngster and the family aimed at making the child a secure law-abiding member of society. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

During adjudicatory phase, rules of evidence generally prevail. In the second (dispositional) phase, the court hears virtually all evidence which is material and relevant to the issue of disposition. J.B. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 545, 228 S.E.2d 712 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Dispositional hearing not necessary for termination due to deprivation. — If a petition for the termination of parental rights alleged only that the children were deprived, not delinquent or unruly, it was not necessary for the juvenile judge to hold a dispositional hearing. In re J.C., 242 Ga. 737, 251 S.E.2d 299 (1978), appeal dismissed, 441 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2046, 60 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Right to cross-examine afforded upon request. — Right to cross-examine adverse witnesses guaranteed by former Code 1933, § 24A-2002 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-19 and 15-11-28) was afforded upon request according to former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-400, 5-11-440, 15-11-581, 15-11-582, and 15-11-600). A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Record must show clear and convincing evidence which authorized finding. — Just as former statute did not require the court to include a specific statement as to the standard of proof of delinquency in the adjudication order, no such explicit finding is required as to the need for treatment or rehabilitation as long as the record showed that there was clear and convincing evidence which authorized the judge's implicit finding. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Explicit statutory findings required by former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-440, 15-11-581, and 15-11-600) should be made in accordance with former Code 1933, § 81A-152 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52). Crook v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 137 Ga. App 817, 224 S.E.2d 806 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

In ruling on deprivation petitions, findings of fact should be made in accordance with former Code 1933, § 81A-152 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52). W.R.G. v. State, 142 Ga. App. 81, 235 S.E.2d 43 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201); In re A.A.G., 143 Ga. App. 648, 239 S.E.2d 697 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Dispositional hearings held in county of juvenile's residence. — Dispositional hearings must be held in the county of the juvenile's residence to meet state constitutional requirements. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

No need to repeat evidence presented during adjudicatory portion. — There was no error in refusing to have the dispositional phase include a repetition of the same evidence and witnesses previously presented during the adjudicatory portion. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Order for transfer for further disposition is not final appealable judgment. — When, pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-400, 15-11-440, 15-11-478, 15-11-581, 15-11-582, and 15-11-600), an order was entered adjudicating a juvenile guilty of an offense and, under the authority of former Code 1933, § 24A-1201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-401 and 15-11-490) jurisdiction was transferred to the county of the residence for further disposition, that order was not a final judgment appealable under former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-34 and 5-6-35). D.C.E. v. State, 130 Ga. App. 724, 204 S.E.2d 481 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

15-11-582. Adjudication hearing; time limitations; findings.

(a) The court shall fix a time for the adjudication hearing. If an alleged delinquent child is in detention, the hearing shall be held no later than ten days after the filing of the delinquency petition. If a child is not in detention, the hearing shall be held no later than 60 days after the filing of such petition.

(b) Adjudication hearings shall be conducted:

(1) By the court without a jury;

(2) In accordance with Article 5 and Part 1 of Article 6 of Chapter 7 and Chapter 8 of Title 17, unless otherwise provided in this article;

(3) In accordance with the rules of evidence set forth in Title 24; and

(4) In language understandable to the child subject to the delinquency petition and participants, to the fullest extent practicable.

(c) The court shall determine if the allegations of the petition alleging delinquency are admitted or denied in accordance with the provisions of Code Section 15-11-580.

(d) After hearing all of the evidence, the court shall make and record its findings on whether the delinquent acts ascribed to a child were committed by such child. If the court finds that the allegations of delinquency have not been established, it shall dismiss the delinquency petition and order such child be released from any detention or legal custody imposed in connection with the proceedings.

(e) The court shall make a finding that a child has committed a delinquent act based on a valid admission made in open court of the allegations of the delinquency petition or on the basis of proof beyond a reasonable doubt. If the court finds that a child has committed a delinquent act, the court may proceed immediately or at a postponed hearing to make disposition of the case.

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 24A-1701 and 24A-2201, pre-2000 Code Sections 15-11-26 and 15-11-33, and pre-2014 Code Sections 15-11-39 and 15-11-65, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Time limits set forth in the former statute were jurisdictional and the adjudicatory hearing must be set for a time not later than that prescribed by statute. J.T.G. v. State, 141 Ga. App. 184, 233 S.E.2d 40 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Time limits established by the General Assembly in the Juvenile Code are jurisdictional and must be strictly adhered to. Crews v. Brantley County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 146 Ga. App. 408, 246 S.E.2d 426 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Language of former statute was mandatory and the time for the hearing must be set for a time not later than ten days after the petition was filed. J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701); Crews v. Brantley County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 146 Ga. App. 408, 246 S.E.2d 426 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701); Irvin v. Department of Human Resources, 159 Ga. App. 101, 282 S.E.2d 664 (1981) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Language of former subsection (a) of this section was mandatory and the adjudicatory hearing must be set for a time not later than that prescribed. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Goal sought to be accomplished by the ten-day hearing requirement for detained children was the same goal for the 60-day hearing requirement for non-detained children and, thus, the latter requirement was mandatory, rather than directory. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Time limits for speedy trial must be strictly adhered to. — If a legislative body has defined the right to speedy trial in terms of days, then the time limits must be strictly complied with. J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Trial court erred in setting the date for a hearing twelve days, rather than ten days, from the date of the filing of a petition charging a juvenile with the commission of the delinquent act of burglary. In re M.D.C., 214 Ga. App. 59, 447 S.E.2d 143 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Provision of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) that the time for a hearing shall not be later than ten days after filing of the petition if the child was in custody was the equivalent of a speedy trial demand which did not require a specific demand by the child. However, the statute's protection could be waived if not properly raised and, furthermore, the trial court had discretion to grant a continuance of a hearing properly set for a date within ten days from the filing of the petition. In re M.D.C., 214 Ga. App. 59, 447 S.E.2d 143 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) did not constitute a speedy trial demand and, therefore, the failure to comply with the former statute's provisions resulted in dismissal of the petition without prejudice. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Time limits satisfied by hearing adjudicatory in nature. — When a juvenile and the juvenile's parents were summoned to appear at a hearing to defend against charges and to show cause why the juvenile should not be dealt with according to law, were instructed to remain in attendance at the hearing until final adjudication of the petition, were informed of the possibility of a continuance, and were told that the state would seek transfer to the superior court, the hearing was adjudicatory in nature and satisfied the requirements of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26. In re L.A.E., 265 Ga. 698, 462 S.E.2d 148 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Construction with other law. — Because a juvenile's allegations that the state failed to comply with the procedural requirements under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49(c)(1) and (e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-102, 15-11-145, 15-11-151, 15-11-472, and 15-11-521) should have been raised in the superior court, and had no bearing on the validity of the delinquency petitions or the substantive charges against the juvenile in juvenile court, the court properly denied the presentation of evidence regarding the delinquency and substantive issues. In the Interest of K.C., 290 Ga. App. 416, 659 S.E.2d 821 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Arraignment during adjudicatory hearing. — In the absence of a transcript, a juvenile failed to establish that former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) was violated since a hearing was timely scheduled and held, an arraignment was conducted at the beginning, the juvenile requested legal counsel and was found eligible to receive counsel, and a continuance was granted so counsel could be secured; conducting an arraignment was not inconsistent with an adjudicatory hearing. In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996), reversing In re R.D.F., 216 Ga. App. 563, 455 S.E.2d 77 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Arraignment hearing scheduled within the 60-day time period is not sufficient to satisfy the requirement that an adjudicatory hearing must be set within that period. In re R.O.B., 216 Ga. App. 181, 453 S.E.2d 776 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Hearing requirement applicable when child in detention when petition filed. — Ten-day hearing requirement was applicable when a child was "in detention" on the date the petition was filed in court. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Time for adjudicatory hearing is not mandatory. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441 and 15-11-582) required that an adjudicatory hearing date be set within ten days after a filing of a petition charging a minor with commission of delinquent acts, but does not require that a hearing be actually held within ten days after the filing of the petition. P.L.A. v. State, 172 Ga. App. 820, 324 S.E.2d 781 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); Johnson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 168, 358 S.E.2d 313 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); In re L.T.W., 211 Ga. App. 441, 439 S.E.2d 716 (1993) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26); In re B.W.S., 265 Ga. 567, 458 S.E.2d 847 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Ten-day hearing rule was not absolute, and a continuance could be granted in the sound discretion of the trial court. Johnson v. State, 183 Ga. App. 168, 358 S.E.2d 313 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Adjudicatory hearing timely. — Juvenile court did not err in denying the defendant juvenile's motion to dismiss a petition because the adjudicatory hearing was set and held within ten days of the filing of the petition pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582), although the hearing was then continued, which was an action that was within the juvenile court's discretion. In the Interest of C.H., 306 Ga. App. 834, 703 S.E.2d 407 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Waiver of procedural requirements. — Time limits on setting juvenile hearings are mandatory, but procedural requirements can be waived. J.T.G. v. State, 141 Ga. App. 184, 233 S.E.2d 40 (1977) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26). Cox v. Department of Human Resources, 148 Ga. App. 338, 250 S.E.2d 728 (1978), overruled on other grounds, 156 Ga. App. 338, 274 S.E.2d 728 (1980) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

With regard to a juvenile's adjudication of delinquency for acts which, if committed by an adult, would have constituted the offense of child molestation, the juvenile court did not err by denying the juvenile's motion to dismiss, which was based on an extended pre-trial detention as the juvenile and defense counsel agreed to a continuance and acquiesced in a hearing date delaying the adjudication for at least 48 days following the filing of the delinquency petition, which caused the juvenile to waive the right to complain that the adjudication hearing date was not set to occur in compliance with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582). However, the adjudication was reversed and the case was remanded to the juvenile court since the juvenile court erroneously applied a clear and convincing standard of proof and the standard of proof on charges of a criminal nature was the same as that used in criminal proceedings against adults, namely proof beyond a reasonable doubt. In the Interest of A.S., 293 Ga. App. 710, 667 S.E.2d 701 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Juvenile waived the right under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) to have an adjudicatory hearing within 10 days of the delinquency petition being filed by failing to object to the date proposed for the adjudicatory hearing, which was one month after the filing of the petition. In re A. T., 302 Ga. App. 713, 691 S.E.2d 642 (2010), overruled in part by Worthen v. State, 304 Ga. 862, 823 S.E.2d 291 (2019) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to comply with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) because the defendant's parent, the defendant's representative, and an attorney acknowledged that the parent did not object when, at the arraignment hearing, it was announced that the adjudicatory hearing would be set outside of the 60-day window; the parent also did not object within the statutorily prescribed 60-day-time period, and the motion to dismiss was filed outside of the 60-day requirement. In the Interest of I.M.W., 313 Ga. App. 624, 722 S.E.2d 586 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Hearing time limit can be waived. — If the party does not enter an objection during the course of the trial the party will not be heard to complain on appeal and if a hearing is set within the statutory time limit, the court may in the court's discretion grant a continuance. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code § 24A-1701); In re J.B., 183 Ga. App. 229, 358 S.E.2d 620, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 906, 358 S.E.2d 620 (1987) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Juvenile was entitled to a copy of the delinquency petition filed against the juvenile, and pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-161, 15-11-282, 15-11-400, 15-11-424, and 15-11-531), the juvenile had a right to receive the petition at least 24 hours prior to the adjudicatory hearing; however, the juvenile waived any objection based on the grounds of improper service since the juvenile received notice right before the hearing as the juvenile did not make an objection or request a continuance on the basis that the juvenile was unprepared. In the Interest of E.S., 262 Ga. App. 768, 586 S.E.2d 691 (2003) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Continuance requested by parent did not violate time limit. — When a hearing on a deprivation petition was held within ten days of the petition's filing, but the case was continued for eight days because the mother's counsel had a scheduling conflict, there was no violation of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(a)'s (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582) ten-day time limit. In the Interest of C.R., 292 Ga. App. 346, 665 S.E.2d 39 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Parent's right to appeal delinquency adjudication. — As parties to their child's delinquency action pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-160, 15-11-423, and 15-11-530), the child's parents had the right to appeal the juvenile court's judgment and to participate in the appellate process. In the Interest of J.L.B., 280 Ga. App. 556, 634 S.E.2d 514 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Adjudication hearing required after an initial hearing. — By restraining the child at an initial hearing, the juvenile court implicitly found probable cause, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-46.1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-415 and 15-11-503). The juvenile court therefore erred in later deciding that a 10-day adjudication hearing was actually a detention hearing and in resetting the 10-day adjudication hearing. In the Interest of K.L., 303 Ga. App. 679, 694 S.E.2d 372 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-39).

Delay negotiated by defendant waives time limit. — If the statute does not require dismissal as a matter of law regardless of the reason for the delay, it is clear that a delay negotiated and obtained by the defendant personally would constitute a waiver of the 60-day requirement. E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 724, 215 S.E.2d 732 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Proceeding null when no waiver of rights nor proper service. — If, in a juvenile court proceeding, there was neither waiver of the right of a mother, nor proper service upon the parties and if the hearing is not taken under oath, or waived by any of the parties, the proceeding is an absolute nullity. McBurrough v. Dep't of Human Resources, 150 Ga. App. 130, 257 S.E.2d 35 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Failure to follow mandated procedures warrants dismissal without prejudice of a petition alleging deprivation of a child. Another petition can be filed without delay if there is reason to believe the child is being neglected or abused. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 140 Ga. App. 175, 230 S.E.2d 139 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Motion to dismiss necessary if no provision for automatic dismissal. — If there is no provision in the statute for automatic dismissal, there should be a motion to dismiss directed to the trial judge and it should appear that the delay is not due to the actions of the defendant. E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 724, 215 S.E.2d 732 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Allegation of failure to comply with time requirements not appealable. — If the defendant, prior to a hearing to determine the defendant's delinquency, appealed from the juvenile court's denial of the defendant's motion to dismiss based solely upon an alleged failure to comply with the time requirements of subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582), the Court of Appeals dismissed the appeal since a motion under that Code section cannot be analogized to the denial of a O.C.G.A. § 17-7-170 motion and did not involve a question of speedy trial rights which would be directly appealable. In re M.O.B., 190 Ga. App. 474, 378 S.E.2d 898 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Violation of ten-day mandate does not deprive jurisdiction. — Violation of the statutory mandate to set the hearing date not later than ten days after filing of the petition if the child is in detention would not deprive the court of jurisdiction that would otherwise exist. Sanchez v. Walker County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 138 Ga. App. 49, 225 S.E.2d 441, rev'd on other grounds, 237 Ga. 406, 229 S.E.2d 66 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Legislature intended incarceration be limited according to calendar days. — General Assembly intended that a juvenile who is incarcerated after the court has had a preliminary detention hearing should have the juvenile's incarceration limited and the juvenile's fate determined according to calendar days, not "working days." J.B.H. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 199, 228 S.E.2d 189 (1976), overruled on other grounds, In re R.D.F., 266 Ga. 294, 466 S.E.2d 572 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

No habeas corpus if compliance with statutory requirements. — Habeas corpus will not lie if the juvenile court, after notice and hearing, enters an order pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24-2409 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-211, 15-11-212, and 15-11-215). Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Effect of failure to show compliance with hearing requirement. — If the parents, in their petition seeking return of their children, allege that there has been no hearing as required by statute, and the record of prior juvenile court proceedings is silent as to whether such a hearing was ever set, continued, or held, and since the hearing requirement was mandatory, the defendant County Family and Children Services Department did not show compliance with the hearing requirement, and the parents stated claims for habeas relief which may be granted. Chaffins v. Lowndes County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 528, 255 S.E.2d 360 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1701).

Permitting state's mid-trial amendment of petition to change the charge against the juvenile from a misdemeanor to a felony was error since the amendment was done without notice and provision of a continuance to allow additional time for preparation of a defense. In re D.W, 232 Ga. App. 777, 503 S.E.2d 647 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Illegal detention. — If a petition was not presented within 72 hours of a detention hearing as required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-21(e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-145, 15-11-400, 15-11-413, 15-11-414, and 15-11-472), the state cannot thus illegally detain the child and then render such a jurisdictional defect harmless by setting the adjudication hearing within 13 days (72 hours plus 10 days) of the detention hearing under subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-181, 15-11-400, 15-11-421, 15-11-441, and 15-11-582). In re B.A.P., 180 Ga. App. 433, 349 S.E.2d 218 (1986) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-26).

Limited restraining order appropriate disposition. — After a juvenile attacked a store detective, and subsequently displayed violent behavior and threatened another store employee, the court's conclusion that the juvenile was in need of treatment and rehabilitation, and the court's limited restraining order preventing the juvenile from entering any store owned by the company in Fulton County, except in the immediate presence of a parent or adult relative, was an appropriate disposition and justified by the evidence. In re J.M., 237 Ga. App. 298, 513 S.E.2d 742 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Separate trials (adjudication and dispositional) with each having different goals are required. See D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201); J.B. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 545, 228 S.E.2d 712 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Purpose of division of juvenile trials into two phases. — In dividing juvenile trials into two phases lawmakers intended to give the juvenile judge an opportunity to conduct the "functional equivalent" of a regular trial (the adjudicatory hearing) in a manner which would satisfy the required constitutional procedures concomitant with the usual legal rules, such as those dealing with admissibility of evidence, proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and similar requirements applicable to adults. Thereafter, at the dispositional phase, the judge was to explore all available additional avenues, including psychiatric and sociological studies, which would enable the judge to provide a solution for the youngster and the family aimed at making the child a secure law-abiding member of society. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Disposition made following finding of delinquency. — Decision that the child is in need of treatment or rehabilitation, based upon clear and convincing evidence, is made following a finding of delinquency. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Dispositional Hearings

Dispositional hearing not necessary for termination due to deprivation. — If a petition for the termination of parental rights alleged only that the children were deprived, not delinquent or unruly, it was not necessary for the juvenile judge to hold a dispositional hearing. In re J.C., 242 Ga. 737, 251 S.E.2d 299 (1978), appeal dismissed, 441 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2046, 60 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Continuation of a dispositional hearing should have been allowed when the probation officer notified the court that the officer was not prepared to make a recommendation regarding disposition. In re M.D., 233 Ga. App. 261, 503 S.E.2d 888 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Dispositional hearing was held, albeit briefly, since, at the conclusion of the trial, the court found that the juvenile had committed the offense charged and questioned the juvenile with regard to whether the juvenile had been in court before and whether the juvenile had ever been charged with similar conduct. In re B.J.G., 234 Ga. App. 285, 506 S.E.2d 449 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Dispositional hearings held in county of juvenile's residence. — Dispositional hearings must be held in the county of the juvenile's residence to meet state constitutional requirements. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Evidentiary Issues

During adjudicatory phase, rules of evidence generally prevail. In the second (dispositional) phase, the court hears virtually all evidence which is material and relevant to the issue of disposition. J.B. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 545, 228 S.E.2d 712 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Right to cross-examine afforded upon request. — Right to cross-examine adverse witnesses guaranteed by former Code 1933, § 24A-2002 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-19 and 15-11-28) was afforded upon request according to former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-400, 5-11-440, 15-11-581, 15-11-582, and 15-11-600). A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

No need to repeat evidence presented during adjudicatory portion. — There was no error in refusing to have the dispositional phase include a repetition of the same evidence and witnesses previously presented during the adjudicatory portion. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Consideration of evidence from detention hearing at adjudication. — Although evidence presented at a juvenile detention hearing was for the purpose of determining whether preadjudication custody of the child was required, a juvenile court did not err in considering evidence presented at the detention hearing during the adjudication hearing; any error was harmless as the same judge, counsel, and witnesses participated in both hearings and the evidence was substantially the same. In the Interest of C. S., 334 Ga. App. 153, 778 S.E.2d 396 (2015).

Report Contents; Disclosure

15-11-590. Predisposition investigation and report.

(a) After an adjudication that a child has committed a delinquent act, the court may direct that a written predisposition investigation report be prepared by the probation officer or other person designated by the court.

(b) A predisposition investigation report shall contain such information about the characteristics, family, environment, and the circumstances affecting the child who is the subject of the report as the court determines may be helpful in its determination of the need for treatment or rehabilitation and a proper disposition of the case, including but not limited to:

(1) A summary of the facts of the conduct of such child that led to the adjudication;

(2) The sophistication and maturity of such child;

(3) A summary of such child's home environment, family relationships, and background;

(4) A summary of such child's prior contacts with the juvenile court and law enforcement agencies, including the disposition following each contact and the reasons therefor;

(5) A summary of such child's educational status, including, but not limited to, his or her strengths, abilities, and special educational needs. The report shall identify appropriate educational and vocational goals for such child. Examples of appropriate goals include:

(A) Attainment of a high school diploma or its equivalent;

(B) Successful completion of literacy courses;

(C) Successful completion of vocational courses;

(D) Successful attendance and completion of such child's current grade if enrolled in school; or

(E) Enrollment in an apprenticeship or a similar program;

(6) A summary of the results and recommendations of any of such child's significant physical and mental examinations;

(7) The seriousness of the offense to the community;

(8) The nature of the offense; and

(9) Whether the offense was against persons or against property.

(c) If the court has ordered a child's physical or mental examination to be conducted, the report shall include a copy of the results of the examination.

(d) If the court has ordered a risk assessment for a child, that assessment shall be included in the predisposition investigation report.

(e) All information shall be presented in a concise and factual manner. The report shall indicate the sources of information in the report.

(f) The original report and any other material to be disclosed shall be furnished to the court, and copies shall be furnished to the attorney for the child who is the subject of such report and to the prosecuting attorney at least five days prior to the disposition hearing.

Part 12

Disposition

15-11-600. Disposition hearing; time limitations; findings; evidence.

(a)(1) After a finding that a child has committed a delinquent act, the court shall hear evidence and determine whether:

(A) Such child is in need of treatment, rehabilitation, or supervision;

(B) Such child's continuation in his or her home is contrary to such child's welfare; and

(C) Reasonable efforts have been made to prevent or eliminate the need to remove such child from his or her home.

(2) After hearing the evidence described in paragraph (1) of this subsection, the court shall make and file its findings based upon such determinations.

(b) The court may proceed immediately to the disposition hearing after the adjudication hearing or conduct the disposition hearing within 30 days of the adjudication hearing. The disposition hearing may occur later than 30 days after the adjudication hearing only if the court makes and files written findings of fact explaining the need for delay.

(c) In the absence of evidence to the contrary, evidence sufficient to warrant a finding that felony acts have been committed shall also be sufficient to sustain a finding that the child is in need of treatment or rehabilitation.

(d) If the court finds that a child who committed a delinquent act is not in need of treatment, rehabilitation, or supervision, it shall dismiss the proceeding and discharge such child from any detention or other restriction previously ordered.

(e) If the court finds that a child who committed a delinquent act is in need of supervision but not of treatment or rehabilitation, it shall find that such child is a child in need of services and enter any disposition authorized by Code Section 15-11-442.

(f) The court may consider any evidence, including hearsay evidence, that the court finds to be relevant, reliable, and necessary to determine the needs of a child who committed a delinquent act and the most appropriate disposition.

(g)(1) Prior to the disposition hearing, and upon request, the parties and their attorneys shall be afforded an opportunity to examine any written reports received by the court.

(2) Portions of written reports not relied on by the court in reaching its decision which if revealed would be prejudicial to the interests of any party to the proceeding, or reveal confidential sources, may be withheld in the court's discretion.

(3) Parties and their attorneys shall be given the opportunity to controvert written reports received by the court and to cross-examine individuals making such reports.

(h) In scheduling investigations and hearings, the court shall give priority to proceedings in which a child is in detention or has otherwise been removed from his or her home.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Delinquency found when delinquent acts corroborated by confession. — Child's confession out of court corroborated by evidence that the stolen items were found in the child's possession within a few hours of the theft constituted sufficient proof to support a finding of delinquency. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Limited restraining order appropriate disposition. — After a juvenile attacked a store detective, and subsequently displayed violent behavior and threatened another store employee, the court's conclusion that the juvenile was in need of treatment and rehabilitation, and the court's limited restraining order preventing the juvenile from entering any store owned by the company in Fulton County, except in the immediate presence of a parent or adult relative, was an appropriate disposition and justified by the evidence. In re J.M., 237 Ga. App. 298, 513 S.E.2d 742 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Purpose of division of juvenile trials into two phases. — In dividing juvenile trials into two phases lawmakers intended to give the juvenile judge an opportunity to conduct the "functional equivalent" of a regular trial (the adjudicatory hearing) in a manner which would satisfy the required constitutional procedures concomitant with the usual legal rules, such as those dealing with admissibility of evidence, proof beyond a reasonable doubt, and similar requirements applicable to adults. Thereafter, at the dispositional phase, the judge was to explore all available additional avenues, including psychiatric and sociological studies, which would enable the judge to provide a solution for the youngster and the family aimed at making the child a secure law-abiding member of society. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

During adjudicatory phase, rules of evidence generally prevail. In the second (dispositional) phase, the court hears virtually all evidence which is material and relevant to the issue of disposition. J.B. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 545, 228 S.E.2d 712 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Continuation of a dispositional hearing should have been allowed when the probation officer notified the court that the officer was not prepared to make a recommendation regarding disposition. In re M.D., 233 Ga. App. 261, 503 S.E.2d 888 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Courts may consider reports which contain hearsay in disposition phase. — Former statute required that in the hearing on a petition alleging deprivation the trial court shall first make the court's finding as to whether the children were deprived, and it was only after this decision had been made that the judge, in considering the disposition to be made of the children, may consider written reports which contain hearsay matter. In re J.C., 242 Ga. 737, 251 S.E.2d 299 (1978), appeal dismissed, 441 U.S. 929, 99 S. Ct. 2046, 60 L. Ed. 2d 657 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Consideration of case plan not admitted into evidence. — In a termination of parental rights proceeding, it was not error for a trial court to consider a case plan that had not been admitted into evidence because former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-65(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-600) allowed the court to consider all helpful evidence even though not otherwise competent. In the Interest of E.G., 315 Ga. App. 35, 726 S.E.2d 510 (2012) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Assault victim's uncertified, unauthenticated medical reports admissible. — Court does not err in allowing uncertified and unauthenticated medical reports of an assault victim in evidence at the disposition hearing. C.P. v. State, 167 Ga. App. 374, 306 S.E.2d 688 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-33).

Dismissal of DUI charge authorized. — Plain language of O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-600(a)(1), (d) and 15-11-630(i), authorized a juvenile court's decision to dismiss a juvenile's DUI case after finding that the juvenile had attended a substance abuse treatment program; had passed drug and alcohol tests; was receiving counseling; and had complied with court-ordered driving restrictions. The juvenile court was not required to comply with O.C.G.A. § 40-6-391(c). In the Interest of R. M., 354 Ga. App. 36, 840 S.E.2d 144 (2020).

Right to cross-examine afforded upon request. — Right to cross-examine adverse witnesses guaranteed by former Code 1933, § 24A-2002 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-19 and 15-11-28) was afforded upon request according to former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-400, 15-11-440, 15-11-581, 15-11-582, and 15-11-600). A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Record must show clear and convincing evidence which authorized finding. — Just as former statute did not require the court to include a specific statement as to the standard of proof of delinquency in the adjudication order, no such explicit finding is required as to the need for treatment or rehabilitation as long as the record showed that there was clear and convincing evidence which authorized the judge's implicit finding. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App. 156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Explicit statutory findings required by former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-440, 15-11-581, and 15-11-600) should be made in accordance with former Code 1933, § 81A-152 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52). Crook v. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources, 137 Ga. App 817, 224 S.E.2d 806 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

In ruling on deprivation petitions, findings of fact should be made in accordance with former Code 1933, § 81A-152 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52). W.R.G. v. State, 142 Ga. App. 81, 235 S.E.2d 43 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201). In re A.A.G., 143 Ga. App. 648, 239 S.E.2d 697 (1977) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Timing of dispositional hearing. — When a juvenile court, having concluded the adjudicatory hearing and having found a juvenile defendant guilty of contempt, proceeded immediately to a dispositional hearing at which the defendant had the opportunity to be heard and to give evidence, the defendant waived any assertion of error by not objecting to this proceeding. In the Interest of P.W., 289 Ga. App. 323, 657 S.E.2d 270 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-65).

Disposition made following finding of delinquency. — Decision that the child is in need of treatment or rehabilitation, based upon clear and convincing evidence, is made following a finding of delinquency. A.C.G. v. State, 131 Ga. App.

156, 205 S.E.2d 435 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Dispositional hearings held in county of juvenile's residence. — Dispositional hearings must be held in the county of the juvenile's residence to meet state constitutional requirements. C.L.A. v. State, 137 Ga. App. 511, 224 S.E.2d 491 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

No need to repeat evidence presented during adjudicatory portion. — There was no error in refusing to have the dispositional phase include a repetition of the same evidence and witnesses previously presented during the adjudicatory portion. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

Order for transfer for further disposition is not final appealable judgment. — When, pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24A-2201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-400, 15-11-440, 15-11-478, 15-11-581, 15-11-582, and 15-11-600), an order was entered adjudicating a juvenile guilty of an offense and, under the authority of former Code 1933, § 24A-1201 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-401 and 15-11-490) jurisdiction was transferred to the county of the residence for further disposition, that order was not a final judgment appealable under former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-34 and 5-6-35). D.C.E. v. State, 130 Ga. App. 724, 204 S.E.2d 481 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2201).

French-speaking parent's stipulation to certain facts presented in a deprivation petition was sufficient evidence to support a finding that the parent's children were deprived and the parent's argument that the parent did not "understand" the meaning or significance of the stipulation was properly rejected. In re M.O., 233 Ga. App. 125, 503 S.E.2d 362 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-478).

Merger doctrine inapplicable. — Because of the unique nature of juvenile court proceedings and the fact that a disposition or adjudication order is not a conviction of a crime, the doctrine of merger is inapplicable in juvenile proceedings. In the Interest of I. H., 350 Ga. App. 394, 829 S.E.2d 437 (2019).

15-11-601. Disposition of delinquent act.

(a) At the conclusion of the disposition hearing, if a child who committed a delinquent act is determined to be in need of treatment or rehabilitation, then after considering the results of such child's risk assessment if the court is contemplating placing such child in restrictive custody, the court shall enter the least restrictive disposition order appropriate in view of the seriousness of the delinquent act, such child's culpability as indicated by the circumstances of the particular case, the age of such child, such child's prior record, and such child's strengths and needs. The court may make any of the following orders of disposition, or combination of them, best suited to such child's treatment, rehabilitation, and welfare:

(1) Any order authorized for the disposition of a dependent child other than placement in the temporary custody of DFCS unless such child is also adjudicated as a dependent child;

(2) An order requiring such child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian to participate in counseling or in counsel and advice. Such counseling and counsel and advice may be provided by the court, court personnel, probation officers, community supervision officers, professional counselors or social workers, psychologists, physicians, physician assistants, qualified volunteers, or appropriate public, private, or volunteer agencies and shall be designed to assist in deterring future delinquent acts or other conduct or conditions which would be harmful to such child or society;

(3) An order placing such child on probation under conditions and limitations the court prescribes and which may include the probation management program. The court may place such child on probation under the supervision of:

(A) A probation officer of the court or the court of another state or a community supervision officer;

(B) Any public agency authorized by law to receive and provide care for such child; or

(C) Any community rehabilitation center if its chief executive officer has acknowledged in writing its willingness to accept the responsibility for the supervision of such child;

(4) An order placing a child on unsupervised probation under conditions and limitations the court prescribes;

(5) In any case in which such child who has not achieved a high school diploma or the equivalent is placed on probation, the court shall consider and may order as a condition of probation that he or she pursue a course of study designed to lead to achieving a high school diploma or the equivalent;

(6) An order requiring that such child perform community service in a manner prescribed by the court and under the supervision of an individual designated by the court;

(7) An order requiring that such child make restitution. In ordering a child to make restitution, the court shall follow the procedure set forth in Article 1 of Chapter 14 of Title 17. Such order may remain in force and effect simultaneously with another order of the court, including but not limited to an order of commitment to DJJ. However, no order of restitution shall be enforced while such child is at a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility unless the commissioner of juvenile justice certifies that a restitution program is available at such facility. Payment of funds shall be made by such child or his or her family or employer directly to the clerk of the juvenile court entering the order or to another employee of such court designated by the judge, and that court shall disburse such funds in the manner authorized in the order. While an order requiring restitution is in effect, the court may transfer enforcement of its order to:

(A) DJJ;

(B) The juvenile court of the county of such child's residence and its probation staff, if he or she changes his or her place of residence; or

(C) The superior court once such child reaches 18 years of age as set forth in Code Section 17-14-5 if he or she thereafter comes under the jurisdiction of such court, and the court shall transfer enforcement of its order to superior court if the terms of such order are not completed when such child reaches 21 years of age;

(8) An order requiring such child remit to the general fund of the county a sum not to exceed the maximum fine applicable to an adult for commission of any of the following offenses:

(A) Any felony in the commission of which a motor vehicle is used;

(B) Driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs;

(C) Driving without proof of minimum required motor vehicle insurance;

(D) Fraudulent or fictitious use of a driver's license;

(E) Hit and run or leaving the scene of an accident;

(F) Homicide by vehicle;

(G) Manslaughter resulting from the operation of a motor vehicle;

(H) Possession of controlled substances or marijuana;

(I) Racing on highways or streets;

(J) Using a motor vehicle in fleeing or attempting to elude an officer; or

(K) Any violation of the provisions contained in Title 40 which is properly adjudicated as a delinquent act;

(9) An order suspending such child's driver's license for a period not to exceed the date on which he or she reaches 18 years of age or, in the case of a child who does not have a driver's license, an order prohibiting the issuance of a driver's license to such child for a period not to exceed the date on which he or she reaches 18 years of age. The court shall retain the driver's license during such period of suspension and return it to such child at the end of such period. The court shall notify the Department of Driver Services of any actions taken pursuant to this paragraph;

(10) An order placing such child in an institution, camp, or other facility for delinquent children operated under the direction of the court or other local public authority only if such child was adjudicated for a delinquent act involving:

(A) An offense that would be a felony if committed by an adult; or

(B) An offense that would be a misdemeanor if committed by an adult and such child has had at least one prior adjudication for an offense that would be a felony if committed by an adult and at least three other prior adjudications for a delinquent act as defined in subparagraph (A) of paragraph (19) of Code Section 15-11-2;

(11) With the same exceptions as set forth in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (10) of this subsection, an order committing such child to DJJ; or

(12) Any order authorized under Code Section 15-11-29.1.

(b)(1) This subsection shall apply to cases involving:

(A) An offense that would be a felony if committed by an adult; or

(B) An offense that would be a misdemeanor if committed by an adult and such child has had at least one prior adjudication for an offense that would be a felony if committed by an adult and at least three other prior adjudications for a delinquent act as defined in subparagraph (A) of paragraph (19) of Code Section 15-11-2.

(2) In addition to any other treatment or rehabilitation, the court may order such child to serve up to a maximum of 30 days in a secure residential facility or, after a risk assessment and with the court's approval, in a treatment program provided by DJJ or the juvenile court.

(c) Any child ordered to a secure residential facility under subsection (b) of this Code section and detained after the adjudication hearing in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility pending placement in a secure residential facility shall be given credit for time served in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility awaiting placement.

(d) A child shall be given adequate information concerning the obligations and conditions imposed upon him or her by the disposition ordered by the court and the consequences of failure to meet such obligations and conditions. Such information shall be given in terms understandable to a child to enable such child to conform his or her conduct to the requirements of the disposition.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Applicability. — Contrary to a juvenile's claim that the juvenile court erred in committing the juvenile into the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice for two years consecutive to a 60-day boot camp program, the disposition was valid under both former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-66(b)(1) and 15-11-70(a) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-443, 15-11-601, and 15-11-607) as: (1) the former granted the court the discretion, in a case involving a felony offense, to order the juvenile to serve up to a maximum of 60 days in a youth development center in addition to any other treatment or rehabilitation; and (2) under the latter, an order of disposition continued in force for two years, or until the child was sooner discharged by the department. In the Interest of J.R., 280 Ga. App. 143, 633 S.E.2d 447 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-66).

Limitation on "sentencing." — After hearing evidence during the adjudicatory phase, the juvenile court makes a single determination of whether the child is delinquent, regardless of the number of offenses committed; thus, the court did not have the power to order a juvenile to serve two consecutive 90-day terms in a youth development center for separate acts of delinquency. In re M.D., 233 Ga. App. 261, 503 S.E.2d 888 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-35).

Limited restraining order appropriate disposition. — After a juvenile attacked a store detective, and subsequently displayed violent behavior and threatened another store employee, the court's conclusion that the juvenile was in need of treatment and rehabilitation, and the court's limited restraining order preventing the juvenile from entering any store owned by the company in Fulton County, except in the immediate presence of a parent or adult relative, was an appropriate disposition and justified by the evidence. In re J.M., 237 Ga. App. 298, 513 S.E.2d 742 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-35).

Designation of work of public purpose for destruction of public property is constructive rather than punitive. It comes within the statutory mandate that juvenile court judges are to make such disposition of a delinquent child as is "best suited to his treatment, rehabilitation, and welfare." M.J.W. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 350, 210 S.E.2d 842 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2302).

Restitution as condition for probation. — Both power and necessity to require restitution as condition for probation exist under the Juvenile Code. P.R. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 346, 210 S.E.2d 839 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2302).

Term "conditions and limitations" must include right to order restitution. This right is inherent in the power of the court, in what is, in effect, the burden upon the court, to make such disposition of a delinquent child as is "best suited to his treatment, rehabilitation, and welfare." P.R. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 346, 210 S.E.2d 839 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2302).

Liability for restitution not conferred on parents. — Paragraph (a)(5) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-35 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-601) fixes the restitution obligation on the juvenile, the offending party, and does not confer liability for restitution on the parents. In re C.R.D., 197 Ga. App. 571, 398 S.E.2d 845 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-35).

Mechanics of forwarding restitution funds to court. — Reasonable reading of the concluding language of paragraph (a)(5) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-35 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-601) was that the language specified acceptable means or conduits by which the money owed by the juvenile offender could be paid, i.e., the mechanics of forwarding the restitution funds to the court. It was a statement of practical administrative convenience deemed necessary to implement restitution. It did not independently broaden restitution liability. In re C.R.D., 197 Ga. App. 571, 398 S.E.2d 845 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-35).

30-day limitation not applicable to pre-dispositional period. — Despite the 41-day confinement of the first juvenile, the juvenile court complied with the statutory limits relied upon by the first juvenile as the disposition order did not include any confinement in a secure residential facility, so the 30-day confinement limit was not directly implicated by the disposition order and, by its plain terms, the credit-for-time-served requirement only addressed dispositional confinement, not other confinement. In the Interest of B. L., 333 Ga. App. 860, 777 S.E.2d 705 (2015).

Commitment to Department of Juvenile Justice proper. — Juvenile defendant's commitment to the Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) was proper because the defendant was on probation for a delinquent act and the defendant's violation of probation terms was also a delinquent act, and commitment to DJJ was found to be the treatment or rehabilitation best suited to the child's needs. In the Interest of B. Q. L. E., 297 Ga. App. 273, 676 S.E.2d 742, cert. denied, No. S09C1197, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 787 (Ga. 2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-66).

Confinement of juvenile for public indecency not allowed. — Since the defendant's delinquent act of public indecency did not constitute an act which, if committed by an adult, would be punishable either as a felony or as a misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature involving bodily injury or a substantial likelihood of injury under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-66 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-601), the juvenile court's sentence which included confinement exceeded that allowed by law and was void. In the Interest of C. H., 319 Ga. App. 373, 735 S.E.2d 291 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-66).

Prohibition against driving during period of probation authorized. — After a juvenile was found delinquent, the court did not exceed the court's authority by prohibiting the juvenile from driving until the expiration of the juvenile's probation, rather than the juvenile's eighteenth birthday. In re A.H.S., 223 Ga. App. 824, 479 S.E.2d 157 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-35).

Credit for time served. — Juvenile court erred in expressly denying a juvenile credit for the time served in detention prior to the delinquency adjudication because under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-601(11)(c), the juvenile court was required to give a child credit for time served in a secure residential facility and the credit for time served applies to the disposition of all offenses, including felonies, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-604(b). In the Interest of D. D., 335 Ga. App. 676, 782 S.E.2d 728 (2016).

Appeal of adjudication after disposition order expired was not moot. — Juvenile who appealed the juvenile's adjudication of delinquency after the disposition order had expired was not required to show adverse collateral consequences in the record in order to avoid a finding of mootness; such consequences were presumed based on the uses to which a prior adjudication of delinquency could be put. In the Interest of M. F., 305 Ga. 820, 828 S.E.2d 350 (2019).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-35, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-66, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Court costs. — Juvenile court had no authority to impose court costs on child as part of conditions of probation. 1982 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U82-14 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-35).

All costs related to subsistence and detention, including emergency medical costs, incurred on behalf of juveniles held in Department of Juvenile Justice facilities prior to a formal commitment to the Department of Juvenile Justice are properly assessed to the counties. 2002 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 2002-6 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-66).

Free education of school-age children. — School-age children placed in facilities by the Department of Human Resources or the Department of Children and Youth Services must be provided with a free education by the local school system in which the facility is located. 1996 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 96-23 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-35).

15-11-602. Disposition of class A or class B designated felony act.

(a) When a child is adjudicated to have committed a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act, the order of disposition shall be made within 20 days of the conclusion of the disposition hearing. The court may make one of the following orders of disposition best suited to provide for the rehabilitation of such child and the protection of the community:

(1) Any order authorized by Code Section 15-11-601, if the court finds that placement in restrictive custody is not required; or

(2) An order placing such child in restrictive custody.

(b) Every order shall include a finding, based on a preponderance of the evidence, of whether such child requires placement in restrictive custody. If placement in restrictive custody is ordered for a child classified as low risk, the court shall make a specific written finding as to why placement in restrictive custody is necessary. In determining whether placement in restrictive custody is required, the court shall consider and make specific written findings of fact as to each of the following factors:

(1) The age and maturity of such child;

(2) The needs and best interests of such child;

(3) The record, background, and risk level of such child as calculated by a risk assessment, including, but not limited to, information disclosed in the probation investigation, diagnostic assessment, school records, and dependency records;

(4) The nature and circumstances of the offense, including whether any injury involved was inflicted by such child or another participant, the culpability of such child or another participant in planning and carrying out the offense, and the existence of any aggravating or mitigating factors;

(5) The need for protection of the community;

(6) The age and physical condition of the victim;

(7) If the act was trafficking of substances in violation of Code Section 16-13-31 or 16-13-31.1, whether the circumstances involved sale, delivery, or manufacture of the substances, and if such circumstances were not involved, the court shall dispose of the act as a class B designated felony act; and

(8) If the act was aggravated child molestation and subject to the provisions of paragraph (2) of subsection (d) of Code Section 16-6-4, the court shall adjudicate the act as a delinquent act and impose a disposition in accordance with Code Section 15-11-601.

(c) An order for a child adjudicated for a class A designated felony act placing such child in restrictive custody shall provide that:

(1) Such child shall be placed in DJJ custody for an initial period of up to 60 months;

(2) Such child shall be confined for a period set by the order in a secure residential facility, except as provided in subsection (e) of this

Code section. All time spent in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility shall be counted toward the confinement period set by the order;

(3) After a period of confinement set by the court, such child shall be placed under intensive supervision not to exceed 12 months;

(4) Such child shall not be released from intensive supervision unless by court order; and

(5) All home visits shall be carefully arranged and monitored by DJJ personnel while such child is placed in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility.

(d) An order for a child adjudicated for a class B designated felony act placing such child in restrictive custody shall provide that:

(1) Such child shall be placed in DJJ custody for an initial period of up to 36 months; provided, however, that not more than 18 months of such custodial period shall be spent in restrictive custody;

(2) Except as provided in subsection (e) of this Code section, if such child is classified as moderate risk or high risk, he or she shall be confined for a period set by the order in a secure residential facility for half of the period of restrictive custody and the other half of the period of restrictive custody may, at the discretion of DJJ, be spent in a nonsecure residential facility. All time spent in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility shall be counted toward the confinement period set by the order;

(3) Except as provided in subsection (e) of this Code section, if such child is classified as low risk, he or she shall be confined for a period set by the order in a nonsecure residential facility. All time spent in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility shall be counted toward the confinement period set by the order;

(4) Such child shall be placed under intensive supervision not to exceed six months either after a period of confinement set by the court or as an initial period of supervision;

(5) Such child shall not be released from intensive supervision unless by court order; and

(6) All home visits shall be carefully arranged and monitored by DJJ personnel while a child is placed in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility.

(e)(1) Any child who is ordered to be confined in restrictive custody who is diagnosed with a developmental disability and is not amenable to treatment in a secure residential facility may be transferred by DJJ to a nonsecure residential facility determined to be appropriate for such child by DJJ, provided that the court and prosecuting attorney are notified of such change of placement.

(2) Notwithstanding subsection (b) of this Code section, the court shall order placement in restrictive custody in any case where the child is found to have committed a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act in which such child inflicted serious physical injury upon another person who is 72 years of age or older.

(f) During a child's placement order or any extension of the placement in restrictive custody:

(1) While in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility, such child shall be permitted to participate in all services and programs and shall be eligible to receive special medical and treatment services, regardless of the time of confinement in such facility. A child adjudicated to have committed a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act may be eligible to participate in programs sponsored by such facility, including community work programs and sheltered workshops under the general supervision of DJJ staff outside of such facility. In cooperation and coordination with the DJJ, such child shall be allowed to participate in state sponsored programs for evaluation and services under the Georgia Vocational Rehabilitation Agency and the Department of Behavioral Health and Developmental Disabilities;

(2)(A) A child adjudicated to have committed a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act shall not be discharged from placement in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility prior to the period of time provided in the court's order except as provided in paragraph (1) of subsection (e) of this Code section or when a motion to be discharged from placement in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility is granted by the court. After a court order denying a motion to discharge a child from placement in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility, a subsequent such motion shall not be filed until at least six months have elapsed. Notwithstanding Code Section 15-11-32, DJJ or any party may file a motion with the court seeking a child's release from placement in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility, an order modifying the court's order requiring placement in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility, or termination of an order of disposition for a child committed for a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act.

(B) All motions filed under this paragraph shall be accompanied by a written recommendation for release, modification, or termination from a child's DJJ counselor or placement supervisor, filed in the court that committed such child to DJJ, and served on the prosecuting attorney for such jurisdiction.

(C) At least 14 days prior to the date of the hearing on the motion, the moving party shall serve a copy of the motion, by first-class mail, upon the victim of the class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act, if any, at the victim's last known address, the child's attorney, if any, the child's parents or guardian, and the law enforcement agency that investigated the class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act. In addition to the parties to the motion, the prosecuting attorney and the victim, if any, shall have a right to be heard and to present evidence to the court relative to any motion filed pursuant to this paragraph.

(D) A court hearing a motion filed under this paragraph shall determine the disposition of a child based upon a preponderance of the evidence. In determining whether a motion for release from custody, modification of placement in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility, or termination of an order of disposition should be granted or denied due to changed circumstances, the court shall be required to find whether or not such child has been rehabilitated and shall consider and make specific findings of fact as to each of the following factors:

(i) The needs and best interests of such child;

(ii) The record and background of such child, including the disciplinary history of such child during the period of placement in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility and subsequent offense history;

(iii) The academic progress of such child during the period of placement in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility, including, if he or she is receiving services under the federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act or Section 504 of the federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973, a review of his or her Individualized Education Program (IEP) and such child's progress toward IEP goals;

(iv) The victim's impact statement submitted for purposes of a hearing conducted pursuant to this paragraph;

(v) The safety risk to the community if such child is released; and

(vi) Such child's acknowledgment to the court and victim, if any, of his or her conduct being the cause of harm to others; and

(3) Unless otherwise specified in the order, DJJ shall report in writing to the court not less than once every six months during the placement on the status, adjustment, and progress of such child.

(g) Notwithstanding the initial periods of placement in restrictive custody ordered by the court pursuant to subsection (c) or (d) of this Code section, the period of placement may be extended on motion by DJJ, after a disposition hearing, for two additional periods not to exceed 12 months each, provided that no placement or extension of custody may continue beyond a child's twenty-first birthday.

(h) The court shall identify the school last attended by a child adjudicated for a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act and the school which such child intends to attend and shall transmit a copy of the adjudication to the principals of both schools within 30 days of the adjudication. Such information shall be subject to notification, distribution, and other requirements as provided in Code Section 20-2-671.

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801, pre-2000 Code Sections 15-11-37 and 15-11-42, and pre-2014 Code Sections 15-11-40 and 15-11-63, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Constitutionality. — Order of restrictive custody was not sufficiently like a criminal adjudication to invoke a constitutional right to a trial by jury. In re L.C., 273 Ga. 886, 548 S.E.2d 335 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Construction with other statutes. — When former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-40(b) and 15-11-63(e)(1)(D) and (e)(2)(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-444, 15-11-602 and 15-11-608) were read together to effectuate their meaning, as required by O.C.G.A. § 1-3-1(a), the juvenile court did not err in denying a juvenile's motion to commute or reduce the sentence imposed as allegations that the juvenile was rehabilitated while in restrictive custody and would benefit from being released were insufficient to grant the juvenile court authority to modify the court's commitment order once physical custody of the juvenile was transferred to the Department of Juvenile Justice. In the Interest of J.V., 282 Ga. App. 319, 638 S.E.2d 757 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A.

Under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(e)(1)(D) and (e)(2)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602), a juvenile court may order a child released from a youth development center or transferred to a nonsecure facility during the period of restrictive custody set out in the initial order or may discharge a child from the custody of the Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice upon a motion after a year of custody. However, such an order may not be made on the ground that changed circumstances so require in the best interest of the child. Reading former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-40 and 15-11-63(e) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-602) together, such a motion for release should be based on other grounds. In the Interest of J.W., 293 Ga. App. 408, 667 S.E.2d 161 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Jurisdiction. — Under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2(2)(B) and 15-11-28(a)(1)(F) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-381, and 15-11-471), a juvenile court lacked jurisdiction over the defendant, who was over 17 when a probation violation occurred; thus, the defendant's commitment under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-471, and 15-11-602) was void. The state had not filed a petition for probation revocation, but only for a violation of probation. In the Interest of T.F., 314 Ga. App. 606, 724 S.E.2d 892 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Juvenile court had jurisdiction under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602 to modify the juvenile's disposition after the juvenile was committed to the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice because the juvenile made a cognizable claim that the juvenile's disposition was void, contending that the juvenile did not qualify as a Class-B designated felon. In the Interest of D. B., 341 Ga. App. 559, 802 S.E.2d 19 (2017).

Delinquency adjudication. — Defendant juvenile's appeal of an order denying a motion to reconsider, vacate, or modify the delinquent adjudication was proper because the denial of the motion was a final judgment and was directly appealable; therefore, the defendant could appeal the ruling on disposition as well as on the original finding of delinquency. An order denying a motion under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) seeking a modification based on changed circumstances in a delinquency matter is a final judgment directly appealable under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a)(1) and former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-35). In the Interest of J. L. K., 302 Ga. App. 844, 691 S.E.2d 892 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Modification of a sentencing order was proper since a juvenile had been committed to the Department of Children & Youth Services (DCYS) for a period of detention and treatment but had not been transferred to the physical custody of DCYS but was held in a detention center pending placement in a youth development campus. In re B.D.T., 219 Ga. App. 804, 466 S.E.2d 680 (1996) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Modification was improper. — Since it was undisputed that after the juvenile court adjudicated the child as delinquent and committed the child to the Department of Juvenile Justice, and the child was placed in the physical custody of the Department, which confined the child for a year, the Department had already taken physical custody of the child and therefore the juvenile court could not subsequently modify the original dispositional order. In the Interest of S.S., 276 Ga. App. 666, 624 S.E.2d 251 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Reduction in sentence not authorized. — Although former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) prohibited the change, modification, or vacation of a commitment order once a child is in the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice "on the ground that changed circumstances so require in the best interest of the child" or because the child had been rehabilitated, the statute did not prohibit the change, modification, or vacation of a commitment order on other grounds. Further the application of former § 15-11-40(b) did not render former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(e)(2)(C) (see now

O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) purposeless in these circumstances when the juvenile based a reduction in sentence on rehabilitation. In re T. H., 298 Ga. App. 536, 680 S.E.2d 569 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Commitment order could not be changed. — Modification of a juvenile commitment order under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) on the ground that changed circumstances required modification in the best interest of the child was not available to a minor because the minor was already in the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice; the fact that the custody was based on the minor's restrictive custody under a different commitment order, and not on the commitment order the minor sought to modify, had no bearing on whether the modification could be made. In the Interest of P.S., 295 Ga. App. 724, 673 S.E.2d 74 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Juvenile court did not err in dismissing a juvenile's motion to modify the commitment order on the basis that the purpose of rehabilitation was not being served because the motion was not accompanied by a written recommendation from the juvenile's Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice counselor or placement supervisor; thus, O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32 and 15-11-602 barred the juvenile court from modifying the commitment order as requested. In the Interest of D. H., 332 Ga. App. 274, 772 S.E.2d 70 (2015).

Contents of motion. — If the substance of a post-trial motion made no reference to any of the factors which would warrant the vacation or modification of the juvenile court's order, it could not be considered a motion to modify or vacate, thus an appeal could not be taken. In re C.M., 205 Ga. App. 543, 423 S.E.2d 280, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 423 S.E.2d 280 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Evidence insufficient to support finding of delinquency. — Trial court erred in denying the defendant juvenile's motion to reconsider, vacate, or modify a delinquent adjudication for the offense of simple assault because the evidence was insufficient to support the finding of delinquency since, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-5-20(a)(2), the crime of simple assault required proof that the defendant's actions placed the defendant's grandmother in reasonable apprehension of immediately receiving a violent injury, but the only evidence of that fact was hearsay; a police officer, who was the only witness, testified that the grandmother told the officer that the grandmother was afraid of the defendant, and that the defendant was perhaps going to hit the grandmother, but the officer admitted that there were no allegations that the defendant attempted to hit the grandmother, nor did the officer witness any of the alleged events. In the Interest of J. L. K., 302 Ga. App. 844, 691 S.E.2d 892 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

New disposition was sanction for original offense. — Although the initial act of bringing a weapon to school was not a designated felony under the statute in effect when a juvenile's probation was revoked, a dispositional order imposed upon revocation of probation related to the original delinquent act because the new disposition was a sanction for the original offense. In the Interest of N.M., 316 Ga. App. 649, 730 S.E.2d 127 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Modification based on failure to provide interpreter to parents. — Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the parents' motion to modify or set aside the termination of parental rights order based on the parents' claim that a language barrier existed at the time of the termination hearing and during critical times in their case because the parents did not assert that the Georgia Department of Family and Children Services should have provided the parents with an interpreter who spoke their Guatemalan dialect of Mam. In the Interest of A. M., 324 Ga. App. 512, 751 S.E.2d 144 (2013).

Claim for commutation or reduction. — When former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-40(b), 15-11-63(e)(1)(D) and (e)(2)(c) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, 15-11-602, and 15-11-608) were read together to effectuate their meaning as required by O.C.G.A. § 1-3-1(a), the juvenile court did not err in denying a juvenile's motion to commute or reduce the sentence imposed. Allegations that the juvenile was rehabilitated while in restrictive custody and would benefit from being released were insufficient to grant the juvenile court authority to modify the juvenile court's commitment order once physical custody of the juvenile was transferred to the Department of Juvenile Justice. In the Interest of J.V., 282 Ga. App. 319, 638 S.E.2d 757 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Credit for time served. — Juvenile court erred in expressly denying a juvenile credit for the time served in detention prior to the delinquency adjudication because under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-601(11)(c), the juvenile court was required to give a child credit for time served in a secure residential facility and the credit for time served applies to the disposition of all offenses, including felonies, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-604(b). In the Interest of D. D., 335 Ga. App. 676, 782 S.E.2d 728 (2016).

Disposition as designated felon appropriate. — Disposition of the defendant juvenile as a "designated felon" was not improper since the evidence provided by the victims, a sheriff's deputy, and the defendant's own statements were legally sufficient to support the delinquency adjudication for acts that if committed by an adult would constitute burglary, theft by taking-vehicle (three acts), and obstruction of an officer. In the Interest of E.J., 292 Ga. App. 69, 663 S.E.2d 411 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Disposition as designated felon inappropriate. — Juvenile court erred by imposing restrictive custody against a juvenile under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) because the juvenile did not knowingly and voluntarily waive the right to counsel in a prior adjudication for motor vehicle theft; thus, that prior adjudication was inadmissible for the purposes of the designated felony statute, O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(a)(2)(E), as to the current adjudication for motor vehicle theft. In the Interest of S. M., 322 Ga. App. 678, 745 S.E.2d 863 (2013).

Petition necessary to revoke probation. — Juvenile court cannot sua sponte revoke probation and order a disposition as for a "designated felony act" after conducting a hearing on a petition which alleges only delinquency by reason of the commission of an act not within the ambit of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-602). Before a juvenile court may revoke an order granting probation, a petition must be filed requesting such relief. In re B.C., 169 Ga. App. 200, 311 S.E.2d 857 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37).

No age requirement for previous designated felony acts. — Juvenile court did not err in finding that the defendant committed a designated felony act under former subparagraph (a)(2)(D) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-602), although the previous adjudicated delinquent acts were not committed when the defendant was 13 or more years of age. The previous act of burglary to which former subparagraph (a)(2)(D) referred carried no age requirement. The only requirement was that the juvenile commit a felonious act after three previous adjudications for acts which would have been felonies if committed by an adult. In re K.A.B., 188 Ga. App. 515, 373 S.E.2d 395 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37).

Criteria must be expressed in writing. — Court's failure in judgment and disposition to expressly recite all of the criteria set forth in subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) warranted reversal and remand, even though a staff report tracked the statutory language and contained ample facts to serve as a sufficient basis for the court's findings of fact and conclusions of law. In re N.N.G, 196 Ga. App. 765, 397 S.E.2d 40 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37).

Extent and depth of analysis to which each of the "elements" in subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) must be subjected is in large measure within the sound discretion of the court. It was required, as a statutory minimum, that each of these "elements" must be specifically addressed in writing. In re C.T., 197 Ga. App. 300, 398 S.E.2d 286 (1990) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37); In re S.P., 240 Ga. App. 827, 525 S.E.2d 403 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37).

Trial court's failure to make written findings on each of the five elements set forth in subsection (c) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) required reversal of a delinquency adjudication. In re Y.E., 229 Ga. App. 506, 494 S.E.2d 297 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37).

Vacation of the juvenile court's judgment and remand of the case was required for compliance with the requirement that the court consider the needs and the best interests of the juvenile and enter appropriate written findings addressing this element after which an appropriate order of disposition may be entered. In the Interest of E.D.F., 243 Ga. App. 68, 532 S.E.2d 424 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37).

After the juvenile was convicted of aggravated assault, the trial court erred in failing to make written findings under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(c) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) regarding the necessity of confining the juvenile to restrictive custody because such findings were mandatory. In the Interest of M.D.L., 271 Ga. App. 738, 610 S.E.2d 687 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Notice of designated felony act charge not required. — Due process does not require that the juvenile be informed either in writing or in the delinquency petition that the juvenile is being charged with a designated felony act which may require that the juvenile be sentenced to restrictive custody. In the Interest of A.T., 246 Ga. App. 30, 539 S.E.2d 540 (2000) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37).

Commitment order could not be changed. — Defendant moved for early release from a youth development center on grounds that alleged changed circumstances required release in the best interests of the child. The motion was properly denied because under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-444 and 15-11-608), once the Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice had physical custody, a commitment order could not be changed on that basis but could only be made on other grounds. In the Interest of J.W., 293 Ga. App. 408, 667 S.E.2d 161 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Although former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-444 and 15-11-608) prohibited the change, modification, or vacation of a commitment order once a child was in the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice "on the ground that changed circumstances so require in the best interest of the child" or because the child had been rehabilitated, the statute did not prohibit the change, modification, or vacation of a commitment order on other grounds. Further the application of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) did not render former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63 (e)(2)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) purposeless in these circumstances when the juvenile based a reduction in sentence on rehabilitation. In re T. H., 298 Ga. App. 536, 680 S.E.2d 569 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Although former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) suggested that a juvenile defendant could move for early release from a youth development center after the juvenile was already in custody, former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-444 and 15-11-608) prohibited modification of a commitment order on the grounds of changed circumstances. As a change in circumstances was the basis of the defendant's motion for early release, the juvenile court lacked jurisdiction to grant the motion. In re K.F., 299 Ga. App. 685, 683 S.E.2d 650 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Predisposition detainment credit mandated. — Juvenile court erred in ordering that a juvenile receive no credit for time served because former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(e)(1)(B) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) mandated that the juvenile's predisposition detainment had to be credited to the time set for confinement. In the Interest of L.R., 316 Ga. App. 374, 729 S.E.2d 520 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Judge's action not violation of juvenile's right not to testify. — Juvenile court did not comment on the juvenile's right not to testify because the court was required to make the factual findings that the juvenile acted alone and the existence of aggravating or mitigating evidence in rendering the court's disposition. In the Interest of C. M., 331 Ga. App. 16, 769 S.E.2d 737 (2015).

Identified Felonies

Construction with § 16-11-127.1. — Evidence established that the juvenile committed the designated felony act of carrying a weapon on school property because under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(a)(2)(B)(iv) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-602, and 15-11-707), the carrying or possession of a weapon in violation of O.C.G.A. § 16-11-127.1(b) was a designated felony act if done by any child. In the Interest of A.M., 248 Ga. App. 241, 545 S.E.2d 688 (2001) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Child molestation. — Because child molestation was not an offense listed in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28(b)(2)(A) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-401 and 15-11-490), the trial court erred in using former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(a)(2)(D) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-602) to classify the offense as a designated felony act when the court sentenced a juvenile. In the Interest of M. S., 277 Ga. App. 706, 627 S.E.2d 422 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Evidentiary Issues

Burden of proof for modification is preponderance of the evidence. — Trial court erred in requiring a father to prove by clear and convincing proof that changed circumstances warranted modification of an order placing the father's children with their maternal aunts; the father retained an interest in the children, under former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-13 and 15-11-58(i)(1) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-30 and 15-11-204), sufficient to support a right to petition for modification, and the father was only required to prove the motion under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-444 and 15-11-608) by a preponderance of the evidence. In re J. N., 302 Ga. App. 631, 691 S.E.2d 396 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Sufficient findings warranting restrictive custody. — Juvenile court adequately set forth findings of fact required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(c) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) when the court imposed a sentence of restrictive custody on a minor for committing aggravated child molestation; the egregiousness of the offense made restrictive custody necessary to promote the best interests of the minor and to protect the community. In the Interest of T.N., 254 Ga. App. 330, 562 S.E.2d 374 (2002) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Trial court properly imposed restrictive custody on a juvenile after finding that the juvenile stole a second car in a single criminal episode as former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(a)(2)(E) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-602) did not require proof of a second adjudication of delinquency to authorize restrictive custody; it sufficed that the juvenile committed a second violation of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-8-2 through 16-8-9, since the stolen property was a motor vehicle. In the Interest of L.J., 279 Ga. App. 237, 630 S.E.2d 771 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Juvenile court did not err in determining that a defendant juvenile was in need of restrictive custody with thirty months of confinement in a youth detention center because: (1) the court complied with former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(c) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) by making specific written findings of fact as to each of the statutory elements; (2) the court's findings analyzed the defendant's needs and best interest; and (3) the court properly considered the report of a psychological evaluation performed on the defendant, along with the defendant's background and prior juvenile history, in making the court's determination that the defendant's needs would be better served with restrictive custody; the juvenile court's findings accurately reflected the nature and circumstances of the aggravated assault the defendant committed, including the facts that the victim did receive a serious injury when the defendant shot the victim in the head and that the victim had to receive medical treatment for the victim's head injury, and the juvenile court's findings as to those basic facts were supported by the trial evidence and showed circumstances that authorized the order for restrictive custody. In the Interest of I.C., 300 Ga. App. 683, 686 S.E.2d 279 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in placing the defendant in restrictive custody because, once the juvenile court determined that the victim was sixty-two or older and suffered serious injuries, the court was required to sentence the defendant to restrictive custody under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(d) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602); having no discretion in the matter, the juvenile court was not required to make findings of fact regarding the factors listed in former § 15-11-63(c), which the court would otherwise have to consider to determine whether to place the defendant in restrictive custody. In the Interest of J. W., 306 Ga. App. 339, 702 S.E.2d 649 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Juvenile court, upon considering the evidence presented, made the requisite findings in the court's order, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(c) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602), to determine whether restrictive custody was required. In re S.F., 312 Ga. App. 671, 719 S.E.2d 558 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in placing the juvenile in restrictive custody because the juvenile court, following a hearing and upon considering the evidence presented, made the finding required under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(c) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) to determine whether restrictive custody was required; any alleged predisposition to commit the juvenile to restrictive custody was belied by the juvenile court's pronouncement of intent to review the record before issuing any ruling. In the Interest of R.W., 315 Ga. App. 227, 726 S.E.2d 708 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Juvenile court did not err in sentencing the juvenile as a designated felon because the juvenile court considered the factors in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-471, and 15-11-602), and the court's findings that the juvenile had three prior separate felony adjudications, that the juvenile had a pistol during the commission of the crimes, and that the community needed protection from the juvenile were sufficient. In the Interest of K.F., 316 Ga. App. 437, 729 S.E.2d 575 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in ordering a juvenile to serve 36 months in restrictive custody because the court's findings authorized the court to find that the juvenile's criminal history, repeated violations of probation, removal of the electronic tether, and frequent use of marijuana demonstrated that restrictive custody was in the juvenile's best interests, as well as the community's, and outweighed the absence of any physical harm to the victim of the theft by receiving incident. In the Interest of D. C., 324 Ga. App. 95, 748 S.E.2d 514 (2013).

Improper consideration of evidence required remand. — Because two of three felony charges against a child were reversed on appeal, and the juvenile court improperly considered the victim's cognitive and memory losses when there was no evidence that the losses were caused by the child's beating of the victim and not by a preexisting brain tumor, remand was required for consideration of the sentence of restrictive custody on only the aggravated assault adjudication. In the Interest of Q. S., 310 Ga. App. 70, 712 S.E.2d 99 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Restrictive Custody

Juvenile may receive restrictive custody for the designated felony act of aggravated assault alone. C.P. v. State, 167 Ga. App. 374, 306 S.E.2d 688 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37).

If the juvenile court made all the factual findings required by former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-471, 15-11-602) and specifically found "the child is in need of restrictive custody" in the juvenile court's order of commitment, there was no error in confining the child in a youth development center. In re T.T., 236 Ga. App. 46, 510 S.E.2d 901 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37).

Trial court did not err in placing the defendants, both juveniles, in restrictive custody, as the aggravated assault that the defendants committed was a designated felony under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2) that required a finding under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-62) as to whether defendants required restrictive custody; the circumstances under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(c) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-62) supported the imposition of restrictive custody since the crime was severe, the crime was premeditated, and the crime had a devastating impact on the victim's life. In the Interest of T.K.L., 277 Ga. App. 461, 627 S.E.2d 98 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Juvenile's sentence of four years in custody was proper on six counts of aggravated assault and one count of possession of a handgun by an underage person because the juvenile was not subject to one of the most severe punishments allowed by law, but was sentenced under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-602), which had the central purpose of rehabilitation and treatment of the child and not punishment. In the Interest of T. D. J., 325 Ga. App. 786, 755 S.E.2d 29 (2014) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Proper restrictive custody finding. — In a juvenile delinquency case, the trial court did not make improper findings under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(c) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) in the court's decision to impose restrictive custody. The finding that the defendant was "in need of treatment and rehabilitation" drew a conclusion about the needs and best interests of the defendant, and although a reference to "previous convictions" was a misnomer, it was clear that the trial court was aware that the defendant's record and background included only one delinquency adjudication. In the Interest of J.A.C., 291 Ga. App. 728, 662 S.E.2d 811 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Oral statements the juvenile court made during the hearing did not show that the juvenile court abused the court's discretion in placing the juvenile in restrictive custody because the statements were not replicated in the juvenile court's written order, which set forth the juvenile court's basis for committing the juvenile to restrictive custody. Furthermore, the commitment order showed that the juvenile court found the juvenile to be in need of secure confinement and rehabilitation before the juvenile was allowed to return to the community, and that was sufficient to show that the juvenile court considered the juvenile's needs and best interests. In the Interest of R.W., 315 Ga. App. 227, 726 S.E.2d 708 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Juvenile court erred by ordering a juvenile into restrictive custody under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) after failing to make specific written findings of fact in the court's disposition order and, instead, relying on boilerplate text that the court had considered the necessary factors following the juvenile's delinquency adjudication for violating O.C.G.A. § 16-11-127.1(b)(1) for possession of a weapon in a school zone. In the Interest of J.X.B., 317 Ga. App. 492, 731 S.E.2d 381 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by ordering a juvenile to serve 12 months in restrictive custody as the juvenile's school disciplinary record; record of delinquency; violations of probation; immaturity; susceptibility to temptation; use of marijuana; lack of positive male role models; lack of structure; and the absence of other activities to occupy time demonstrated that restrictive custody was in the juvenile's best interests, as well as the community's, and was not arbitrary. In the Interest of C. M., 331 Ga. App. 16, 769 S.E.2d 737 (2015).

While not specifically delineated under a separate heading, the juvenile court considered and made specific written findings as to the child's record, background, and risk level as required by O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602(b)(3): the juvenile court specifically noted that the Behavioral Health Evaluation revealed that the child had been diagnosed with attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder, oppositional defiant disorder, depressive disorder, cannabis abuse, and borderline intellectual functioning. In the Interest of C. S., 334 Ga. App. 153, 778 S.E.2d 396 (2015).

Second violation, not second adjudication. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(a)(2)(E) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-602) did not require proof of a second or subsequent "adjudication" of delinquency to authorize the imposition of restrictive custody; rather, former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(a)(2)(E) authorized restrictive custody when a child was found to have committed a second or subsequent "violation" of O.C.G.A. §§ 16-8-2 through 16-8-9, if the property which was the subject of the theft was a motor vehicle. In the Interest of L.J., 279 Ga. App. 237, 630 S.E.2d 771 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63).

Violation of probation. — Although the violation of probation may constitute a "delinquent act" in and of itself, a violation of probation which occurs after the juvenile's 17th birthday will not authorize the initiation of a new delinquency petition against the juvenile. The juvenile court's jurisdiction would extend only to revoking the juvenile's probation for the juvenile's previous adjudication of delinquency. In re B.S.L., 200 Ga. App. 170, 407 S.E.2d 123 (1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, §§ 24A-2301A and 24A-2302A, and pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-37, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Purpose. — Former Code section was enacted to ensure that certain juveniles who commit serious acts ("designated felonies") are, upon judicial determination, placed in restrictive custody and that the option of the Division of Youth Services to release a juvenile so placed would be somewhat limited. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-160 (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 24A-2301A and 24A-2302A).

Participation in community work program violated spirit of former section. — General Assembly intended that juveniles committed to the Division of Youth Services under a restrictive custody dispositional order should be held in secure facilities and should not be allowed to come in contact with the general public. Participation by designated felons in community work programs was at least a violation of the spirit, if not the interpretive letter, of the former statute. 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-160 (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 24A-2301A and 24A-2302A).

Statutory rape and the combined offenses of statutory rape and criminal trespass may not be considered designated felony acts under paragraph (a)(2) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2 and 15-11-602). 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 83-17 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37).

Designated felony act. — Unless a juvenile had been adjudicated a delinquent in prior court appearances for acts of burglary, a multiple count petition was not sufficient to fall within former subparagraph (a)(2)(D) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63). 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-10 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37).

15-11-603. Disposition of child adjudged to have committed delinquent act constituting AIDS transmitting crime; HIV testing; reports.

(a) As part of any order of disposition regarding a child adjudged to have committed a delinquent act constituting an AIDS transmitting crime, the court may in its discretion and after conferring with the director of the health district, order that such child submit to an HIV test within 45 days following the adjudication of delinquency. The court shall mail DJJ a copy of the order within three days following its issuance.

(b) Within 30 days following receipt of the copy of the order, DJJ shall arrange for the HIV test for such child.

(c) Any child placed in the custody and control of DJJ shall be HIV tested in accordance with DJJ's policies and procedures.

(d) If a child is determined to be infected with HIV, that determination and the name of the child shall be deemed to be AIDS confidential information and shall only be reported to:

(1) DJJ or the Department of Corrections, as the case may be, and the Department of Public Health, which may disclose the name of such child if necessary to provide counseling and which shall provide counseling to each victim of the AIDS transmitting crime or to any parent, guardian, or legal custodian of any victim who is a minor or incompetent person if DJJ or the Department of Corrections believes the crime posed a reasonable risk of transmitting HIV to the victim. Counseling shall include providing the person with information and explanations medically appropriate for such person which may include all or part of the following: accurate information regarding AIDS and HIV; an explanation of behaviors that reduce the risk of transmitting AIDS and HIV; an explanation of the confidentiality of information relating to AIDS diagnoses and HIV tests; an explanation of information regarding both social and medical implications of HIV tests; and disclosure of commonly recognized treatment or treatments for AIDS and HIV;

(2) The court which ordered the HIV test; and

(3) Those persons in charge of any facility to which such child has been confined by order of the court. In addition to any other restrictions regarding the confinement of a child, a child determined to be an HIV infected person may be confined separately from any other children in that facility other than those who have been determined to be infected with HIV if:

(A) That child is reasonably believed to be sexually active while confined;

(B) That child is reasonably believed to be sexually predatory either during or prior to detention; or

(C) The commissioner of juvenile justice reasonably determines that other circumstances or conditions exist which indicate that separate confinement would be warranted.

15-11-604. Credit for time served.

(a) A child adjudicated to have committed a delinquent act shall be given credit for each day spent in a secure residential facility, a nonsecure residential facility, or any institution or facility for the treatment or examination of a physical or mental disability awaiting adjudication, pending disposition and in connection with and resulting from a court order entered in the proceedings for which the disposition was imposed and in any institution or facility for treatment or examination of a physical or mental disability. Such credit shall be applied toward the child's disposition.

(b) Subsection (a) of this Code section shall apply to dispositions for all offenses, whether classified as violations, misdemeanors, or felonies.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-66, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Credit for time served. — Prior to the 2010 amendment of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-66 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-604), the defendant was not entitled to credit for time served prior to adjudication of delinquency for the probation violation. In the Interest of M. A. I., 319 Ga. App. 578, 737 S.E.2d 585 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-66).

Juvenile court erred in expressly denying a juvenile credit for the time served in detention prior to the delinquency adjudication because under O.C.G.A. § 15-11-601, the juvenile court was required to give a child credit for time served in a secure residential facility and the credit for time served applies to the disposition of all offenses, including felonies, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-11-604(b). In the Interest of D. D., 335 Ga. App. 676, 782 S.E.2d 728 (2016).

15-11-605. Probation management programs or secure probation sanctions programs; violations of probation programs.

(a) In addition to any other terms or conditions of probation provided for under this article, the court may require that children who receive a disposition of probation:

(1) Be ordered to a probation management program; or

(2) Be ordered to a secure probation sanctions program by a probation officer or hearing officer.

(b) When a child has been ordered to a probation management program or secure probation sanctions program, the court shall retain jurisdiction throughout the period of the probated sentence and may modify or revoke any part of a probated sentence as provided in Code Section 15-11-32.

(c)(1) DJJ in jurisdictions where DJJ is authorized to provide probation supervision or the county juvenile probation office in jurisdictions where probation supervision is provided directly by the county, as applicable, shall be authorized to establish rules and regulations for graduated sanctions as an alternative to judicial modifications or revocations for probationers who violate the terms and conditions of a probation management program.

(2) DJJ or the county juvenile probation office, as applicable, shall not sanction probationers for violations of conditions of probation if the court has expressed an intention in a written order that such violations be heard by the court.

(d) DJJ or the county juvenile probation office, as applicable, shall impose only those restrictions equal to or less restrictive than the maximum sanction established by the court.

(e) The secure probation sanctions program shall be established by DJJ. Exclusion of a child from a secure probation sanctions program otherwise authorized by this Code section to enter such program shall be mutually agreed upon by the Council of Juvenile Court Judges and DJJ. The secure probation sanctions program shall be available to the juvenile courts to the extent that each secure facility has capacity for such offenders within its facilities. Prior to reaching full capacity, DJJ shall inform the various juvenile courts of its capacity constraints.

(f)(1) When requesting the secure probation sanctions program, probation officers supervising a child under a probation management program shall provide an affidavit to the court specifying:

(A) The elements of such child's probation program;

(B) Such child's failures to respond to graduated sanctions in the community; and

(C) Such child's number of violations and the nature of each violation.

(2) If a probation officer fails to document the violations and specify how a child has failed to complete a probation management program, such child shall be ineligible to enter the secure probation sanctions program.

(3) A child may enter the secure probation sanctions program if ordered by the court and:

(A) The probation officer has complied with the provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection and the criteria set by the department for entrance into such program and such child has had three or more violations of probation; or

(B) A child in a probation management program and his or her parent or guardian, or a child in such program and his or her attorney, admit to three or more violations of such program and sign a waiver accepting the sanction proposed by the probation officer.

(4) Each new violation of a condition of a probated sentence may result in a child being sentenced to the secure probation sanctions program; provided, however, that if a child is sentenced to the secure probation sanctions program and completes all program components in the seven, 14, and 30 day programs, such child shall be ineligible to attend the secure probation sanctions program for a future violation of a condition of the same probated sentence.

(g)(1) When a violation of a condition of probation occurs, a child may have an administrative hearing conducted by a hearing officer. If the hearing officer determines by a preponderance of the evidence that such child violated the conditions of probation, the probation officer shall be authorized to impose graduated sanctions. A child's failure to comply with a sanction imposed under this paragraph shall constitute another violation of probation.

(2) A hearing officer's decision shall be final unless such child files, within five days of the service of such decision, a written demand with the hearing officer who conducted the administrative hearing for review of such decision. Such demand shall not stay the sanction decision. Such hearing officer shall issue a response to such demand within five days of receiving such demand.

(3) If such hearing officer insists on the sanction, his or her decision shall be final unless the child subject to the sanction files an appeal in the court that originally adjudicated such child. Such appeal shall be filed within ten days of the date of the decision of the hearing officer.

(4) The appeal shall first be reviewed by the court upon the record. At the court's discretion, a de novo hearing may be held on the decision. The filing of the appeal shall not stay the sanction decision.

(5) Where the court does not act on the appeal within 15 days of the date of the filing of the appeal, the sanction decision shall be affirmed by operation of law.

An order of disposition or adjudication shall not be a conviction of a crime and shall not impose any civil disability ordinarily resulting from a conviction nor operate to disqualify the child in any civil service application or appointment.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Treatment of juvenile delinquency as class of conduct. — It is clear that the General Assembly sought to treat matters of juvenile delinquency as a class of conduct separate and distinct from conventional criminality. T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

Juvenile court cannot find anyone guilty of crime. T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

Adjudication of delinquency when child has not attained 13 years. — Juvenile court may adjudicate a child a delinquent based upon a petition alleging that the child committed an act designated a crime under Georgia law, when that child has not yet attained the age of 13 years. K.M.S. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 683, 200 S.E.2d 916 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

Juvenile subject to criminal adjudication if case transferred. — Juvenile whose case is properly transferred to the superior court is subject to the criminal sanctions which may be imposed in that court. Thus, an adjudication of guilt of a juvenile in superior court is a criminal adjudication. Carrindine v. Ricketts, 236 Ga. 283, 223 S.E.2d 627 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

Court must recognize quasi-criminal aspects of juvenile law. — Although former statute declared that an adjudication order was noncriminal, nevertheless, the court must recognize the quasi-criminal aspects of juvenile law. M.J.W. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 350, 210 S.E.2d 842 (1974) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

Due process must be adhered to in juvenile court proceedings. — While cases in the juvenile court are not criminal proceedings, due process must always be scrupulously adhered to. D.P. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 680, 200 S.E.2d 499 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

Merger doctrine inapplicable. — Because of the unique nature of juvenile court proceedings and the fact that a disposition or adjudication order is not a conviction of a crime, the doctrine of merger is inapplicable in juvenile proceedings. In the Interest of I. H., 350 Ga. App. 394, 829 S.E.2d 437 (2019).

Use of records during sentencing. — Juvenile records may be introduced during the sentencing phase of a trial. Burrell v. State, 258 Ga. 841, 376 S.E.2d 184 (1989) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

Out-of-state convictions for acts committed while the defendant was a juvenile could not be used as prior felony convictions for purposes of recidivist sentencing under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 because the defendant would not have been convicted of those felonies in this state, but would have been adjudicated delinquent. Miller v. State, 231 Ga. App. 869, 501 S.E.2d 42 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38).

Commitment to Department of Juvenile Justice proper. — Contrary to the defendant's contention, the commitment to the Department of Juvenile Justice pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-66(a)(4) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-601) was not cruel and unusual punishment; the commitment was not a conviction of a crime and did not impose any civil disability ordinarily resulting from a conviction nor operate to disqualify the child in any civil service application or appointment. Further, the commitment was statutorily authorized. In the Interest of B. Q. L. E., 297 Ga. App. 273, 676 S.E.2d 742, cert. denied, No. S09C1197, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 787 (Ga. 2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-72).

Appeal of adjudication after disposition order expired was not moot. — Juvenile who appealed the juvenile's adjudication of delinquency after the disposition order had expired was not required to show adverse collateral consequences in the record in order to avoid a finding of mootness; such consequences were presumed based on the uses to which a prior adjudication of delinquency could be put. In the Interest of M. F., 305 Ga. 820, 828 S.E.2d 350 (2019).

15-11-607. Duration of disposition orders.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in Code Section 15-11-602, an order of disposition committing a child adjudicated for a delinquent act to DJJ shall continue in force for two years or until such child is sooner discharged by DJJ. The court which made the order may extend its duration for a period not to exceed two years subject to like discharge, if:

(1) A hearing is held upon DJJ's motion prior to the expiration of the order;

(2) Reasonable notice of the factual basis of the motion and of the hearing and an opportunity to be heard are given to such child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian; and

(3) The court finds that the extension is necessary for the treatment or rehabilitation of such child.

(b) Any other order of disposition except an order of restitution as allowed by paragraph (7) or (8) of subsection (a) of Code Section 15-11-601 shall continue in force for not more than two years. An order of extension may be made if:

(1) A hearing is held prior to the expiration of the order on the court's own motion or upon motion of DJJ or the prosecuting attorney;

(2) Reasonable notice of the factual basis of the motion and of the hearing and opportunity to be heard are given to the parties affected;

(3) The court finds that the extension is necessary to accomplish the purposes of the order extended; and

(4) The extension does not exceed two years from the expiration of the prior order.

(c) The court may terminate an order of disposition or an extension of such a disposition order prior to its expiration, on its own motion or an application of a party, if it appears to the court that the purposes of the order have been accomplished.

(d) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (7) of subsection (a) of Code Section 15-11-601 and Code Section 17-14-5, when a child reaches

21 years of age, all orders affecting him or her then in force terminate and he or she is discharged from further obligation or control.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality of provision for extension of custody. — Provision of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-443 and 15-11-607) permitting the court to extend an order of disposition for two years did not violate constitutional prohibitions against double jeopardy since the statute operated to further the accomplishment of the juvenile's treatment and rehabilitation. In re T.B., 268 Ga. 149, 486 S.E.2d 177 (1997) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10. — Despite the fact that former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-443 and 15-11-607) allowed for a juvenile probation order to be extended if, among other things, a hearing was held prior to the expiration of the order upon motion of a party or on the court's own motion, the juvenile court erred in extending a juvenile's probation and imposing the condition that restitution be paid without making the requisite findings set forth in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-10, such as the juvenile's financial condition. In the Interest of C.S., 280 Ga. App. 781, 635 S.E.2d 176 (2006), overruled on other grounds, McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Applicability. — Provisions of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-443 and 15-11-607) were not applicable in proceedings under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-81 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-709) for termination of parental rights. In re V.S., 230 Ga. App. 26, 495 S.E.2d 142 (1998).

Juvenile court did not abuse the court's discretion in transferring a former juvenile's case to the superior court because, as a 28-year-old adult, the juvenile court no longer had jurisdiction over the matter, and the court could not be assured that the former juvenile would receive the appropriate treatment for the necessary length of time in the juvenile system; furthermore, the transfer under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-30.2(a)(3) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-561) did not violate substantive due process under the Fourteenth Amendment. In the Interest of R.T., 278 Ga. App. 225, 628 S.E.2d 662 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Contrary to a juvenile's claim that the juvenile court erred in committing the juvenile into the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice for two years consecutive to a 60-day boot camp program, the disposition was valid under both former O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-66(b)(1) and 15-11-70(a) (see now O.C.G.A.

§§ 15-11-443, 15-11-600, and 15-11-607) as: (1) the former granted the court the discretion, in a case involving a felony offense, to order the juvenile to serve up to a maximum of 60 days in a youth development center in addition to any other treatment or rehabilitation; and (2) under the latter, an order of disposition continued in force for two years, or until the child was sooner discharged by the department. In the Interest of J.R., 280 Ga. App. 143, 633 S.E.2d 447 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Exclusive jurisdiction for at least two years over deprived children. — Juvenile Code vests exclusive jurisdiction in the juvenile court for at least two years over matters concerning children whom the juvenile court has duly found to be deprived. West v. Cobb County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 243 Ga. 425, 254 S.E.2d 373 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2701).

Statute permitted a juvenile court to extend an order of probation until the juvenile reached the age of 21 years. State v. Crankshaw, 243 Ga. 183, 253 S.E.2d 69 (1979) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2701).

Credibility of witnesses in custody. — Witness who is under commitment to the Department of Juvenile Justice is equally subject to the allegation that the witness is shading their testimony in favor of the state in order to obtain more favorable treatment. Wright v. State, 279 Ga. 498, 614 S.E.2d 56 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Juvenile adjudication of witness. — Trial court's restriction of the defendant's cross-examination of two state's witnesses about their juvenile adjudications was error as the state's case relied primarily on these witnesses, who provided the only evidence that the defendant shot the victim; thus, the defendant's conviction for felony murder was reversed. Wright v. State, 279 Ga. 498, 614 S.E.2d 56 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Extension of probation proper. — Juvenile's argument on appeal that the juvenile court was not authorized to extend an order of probation for the purpose of payment of restitution, and in doing so, the juvenile court assumed a prosecutorial role, lacked merit, given the language in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70(b) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-607) and the state policy pronounced in O.C.G.A. § 17-14-5. In the Interest of C.S., 280 Ga. App. 781, 635 S.E.2d 176 (2006), overruled on other grounds, McCart v. State, 289 Ga. App. 830, 658 S.E.2d 465 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Juvenile's inability to comply with the juvenile court's order to complete 120 days of a reporting program without extending probation was directly attributable to the juvenile's actions in violating probation and, thus, the juvenile court did not err in extending the juvenile's probation period. In the Interest of M. A. I., 319 Ga. App. 578, 737 S.E.2d 585 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-70).

Custody by Department suspends parental right. — Removal of custody of the child from the parents is a determination that, for whatever length of time custody is exercised by the Department of Family and Children Services, this right has been suspended, although not finally terminated. Rodgers v. Department of Human Resources, 157 Ga. App. 235, 276 S.E.2d 902 (1981) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

Effect of order reversing termination of parental rights. — After the court of appeals reversed an order of the juvenile court terminating parental rights, on remand, the juvenile court, which had already extended an order giving custody to the Department of Family and Children Services for two years, lacked authority to extend the order further. In re B.G., 231 Ga. App. 39, 497 S.E.2d 572 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-41).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24A-2701, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Unexpired order of commitment. — Department of Corrections properly has custody of an individual under the provisions of a criminal sentence which was imposed subsequent to an unexpired order of commitment; at the expiration of the criminal sentence, alternative arrangements for custody should be made for the remainder of the term of commitment. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 75-20 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2701).

15-11-608. Probation revocation; procedure.

(a) An order granting probation to a child adjudicated for a delinquent act may be revoked on the ground that the conditions of probation have been violated.

(b) Any violation of a condition of probation may be reported to the prosecuting attorney who may file a motion in the court for revocation of probation. A motion for revocation of probation shall contain specific factual allegations constituting each violation of a condition of probation.

(c) The motion for revocation of probation shall be served upon the child serving the probated sentence, his or her attorney, and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian in accordance with the provisions of Code Section 15-11-531.

(d) If a child serving a probated sentence is taken into custody because of an alleged violation of probation, the provisions governing the detention of a child shall apply.

(e) A revocation hearing shall be scheduled to be held no later than 30 days after the filing of such motion or, if a child has been detained as a result of the filing of such motion for revocation, not later than ten days after the filing of the motion.

(f) If the court finds, beyond a reasonable doubt, that a child violated the terms and conditions of probation, the court may:

(1) Extend probation;

(2) Impose additional conditions of probation; or

(3) Make any disposition that could have been made at the time probation was imposed.

(g) In the case of a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act, if the court finds that a child violated the terms and conditions of probation, the court shall reconsider and make specific findings of fact as to each of the factors in subsection (b) of Code Section 15-11-602 to determine whether placement in restrictive custody.

(h) In the case of a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act, if the court finds, beyond a reasonable doubt, that a child violated the terms and conditions of probation and revokes the order granting probation, the child shall be given credit for time served on probation and time served in preadjudication custody.

Revocation of Probation

General Consideration

Cited in In the Interest of H. J. C., 331 Ga. App. 506, 771 S.E.2d 184 (2015).

Modification or Vacation of Orders

Reduction in sentence not authorized. — Although former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) prohibited the change, modification, or vacation of a commitment order once a child is in the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice "on the ground that changed circumstances so require in the best interest of the child" or because the child had been rehabilitated, the statute did not prohibit the change, modification, or vacation of a commitment order on other grounds. Further the application of former § 15-11-40(b) did not render former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63(e)(2)(C) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-602) purposeless in these circumstances when the juvenile based a reduction in sentence on rehabilitation. In re T. H., 298 Ga. App. 536, 680 S.E.2d 569 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Commitment order could not be changed. — Defendant moved for early release from a youth development center on grounds that alleged changed circumstances required release in the best interests of the child. The motion was properly denied because under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608), once the Georgia Department of Juvenile Justice had physical custody, a commitment order could not be changed on that basis but could be changed on other grounds. In the Interest of J.W., 293 Ga. App. 408, 667 S.E.2d 161 (2008) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Modification of a juvenile commitment order under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) on the ground that changed circumstances required modification in the best interest of the child was not available to a minor because the minor was already in the custody of the Department of Juvenile Justice; the fact that the custody was based on the minor's restrictive custody under a different commitment order, and not on the commitment order the minor sought to modify, had no bearing on whether the modification could be made. In the Interest of P.S., 295 Ga. App. 724, 673 S.E.2d 74 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Although former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-63 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-471, 15-11-602, and 15-11-707) suggested that a juvenile defendant could move for early release from a youth development center after the defendant was already in custody, former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40(b) (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-32, 15-11-444, and 15-11-608) prohibited modification of a commitment order on the grounds of changed circumstances. As a change in circumstances was the basis of the defendant's motion for early release, the juvenile court lacked jurisdiction to grant the motion. In re K.F., 299 Ga. App. 685, 683 S.E.2d 650 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Contents of motion. — If the substance of a post-trial motion made no reference to any of the factors which would warrant the vacation or modification of the juvenile court's order, it could not be considered a motion to modify or vacate, thus an appeal could not be taken. In re C.M., 205 Ga. App. 543, 423 S.E.2d 280, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 423 S.E.2d 280 (1992) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Probation violation included in justification of delinquency petition. — Juvenile court erred when the court dismissed the state's petition alleging that a child had committed the delinquent act of violating probation as O.C.G.A. § 15-11-2(19)(B) plainly included a probation violation in the category of actions that may give rise to a new delinquency petition and O.C.G.A. § 15-11-608(b) plainly permitted the filing of a motion for revocation of probation, and no court is authorized to ignore either a petition brought under the first or a motion brought under the second. In the Interest of H. J. C., 331 Ga. App. 506, 771 S.E.2d 184 (2015).

Evidence insufficient to support finding of delinquency. — Trial court erred in denying the defendant juvenile's motion to reconsider, vacate, or modify a delinquent adjudication for the offense of simple assault because the evidence was insufficient to support the finding of delinquency since, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 16-5-20(a)(2), the crime of simple assault required proof that the defendant's actions placed the defendant's grandmother in reasonable apprehension of immediately receiving a violent injury, but the only evidence of that fact was hearsay; a police officer, who was the only witness, testified that the grandmother told the officer that the grandmother was afraid of the defendant, and that the defendant was perhaps going to hit the grandmother, but the officer admitted that there were no allegations that the defendant attempted to hit the grandmother, nor did the officer witness any of the alleged events. In the Interest of J. L. K., 302 Ga. App. 844, 691 S.E.2d 892 (2010) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

New disposition was sanction for original offense. — Although the initial act of bringing a weapon to school was not a designated felony under the statute in effect when a juvenile's probation was revoked, a dispositional order imposed upon revocation of probation related to the original delinquent act because the new disposition was a sanction for the original offense. In the Interest of N.M., 316 Ga. App. 649, 730 S.E.2d 127 (2012) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-40).

Modification based on failure to provide interpreter to parents. — Juvenile court did not abuse its discretion in denying the parents' motion to modify or set aside the termination of parental rights order based on the parents' claim that a language barrier existed at the time of the termination hearing and during critical times in their case because the parents did not assert that the Georgia

Department of Family and Children Services should have provided the parents with an interpreter who spoke their Guatemalan dialect of Mam. In the Interest of A. M., 324 Ga. App. 512, 751 S.E.2d 144 (2013).

Revocation of Probation

There is no double jeopardy protection against revocation of probation and the imposition of imprisonment. In re B.N.D., 185 Ga. App. 906, 366 S.E.2d 187, cert. denied, 185 Ga. App. 910, 366 S.E.2d 187 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Hearing in juvenile court seeking termination of probation must be treated as a delinquency trial. K.E.S. v. State, 134 Ga. App. 843, 216 S.E.2d 670 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801); T.S.I. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 775, 229 S.E.2d 553 (1976) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Hearing to determine delinquency required prior to revocation of probation. — In order to revoke a juvenile's probation, a de novo hearing is required to determine whether a delinquent act has been committed and that the child is delinquent. T.S.I. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 775, 229 S.E.2d 553 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

Juvenile court cannot sua sponte revoke probation and order a disposition as for a "designated felony act" after conducting a hearing on a petition which alleges only delinquency by reason of the commission of an act not within the ambit of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-37 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-2, 15-11-471, 15-11-602, and 15-11-707). Before a juvenile court may revoke an order granting probation, a petition must be filed requesting such relief. In re B.C., 169 Ga. App. 200, 311 S.E.2d 857 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-42).

Burden of proof in revocation proceeding. — Finding of delinquency through parole violation in a revocation proceeding must be on proof beyond a reasonable doubt. T.S.I. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 775, 229 S.E.2d 553 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

Slight evidence will not be sufficient to authorize revocation of juvenile's probation. T.S.I. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 775, 229 S.E.2d 553 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

Juvenile proceeding differs from adult hearing. — Juvenile revocation of probation proceedings is not analogous to adult probation revocation hearings. T.S.I. v. State, 139 Ga. App. 775, 229 S.E.2d 553 (1976) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2801).

Part 13

Permanency Planning for Delinquent and Dependent Children

15-11-620. Calculating time when child is delinquent and dependent.

(a) When a child is alleged to have committed a delinquent act and be a dependent child, the date such child is considered to have entered foster care shall be the date of the first judicial finding that such child has been subjected to child abuse or neglect or the date that is 60 days after the date on which such child is removed from his or her home, whichever is earlier.

(b) When a child is alleged to have committed a delinquent act and is placed directly in a nonsecure residential facility, the date such child is considered to have entered foster care shall be 60 days after the date on which such child is removed from his or her home.

(c) If a child alleged or adjudicated to have committed a delinquent act is detained in a facility operated primarily for the detention of delinquent children but is later placed in foster care within 60 days of such child's removal from the home, then the date of entry into foster care shall be 60 days after the date of removal.

(d) When a child alleged or adjudicated to have committed a delinquent act is detained in a facility operated primarily for the detention of delinquent children but is later placed in a nonsecure residential facility within 60 days of such child's removal from the home, the date such child is considered to have entered foster care shall be 60 days from the date on which such child is removed from his or her home.

(e) If a child is detained in a facility operated primarily for the detention of delinquent children pending placement in foster care and remains detained for more than 60 days, then the date of entry into foster care shall be the date such child is placed in foster care.

(f) When a child alleged or adjudicated to have committed a delinquent act is detained in a facility operated primarily for the detention of delinquent children and remains detained for more than 60 days and such child is subsequently placed in a nonsecure residential facility, the date such child is considered to have entered foster care shall be the date such child was placed in a nonsecure residential facility.

15-11-621. Periodic review hearings for delinquent children in foster care or committed to the Department of Juvenile Justice.

(a) The periodic review hearing requirements under Code Sections 15-11-216, 15-11-217, and 15-11-218 shall apply to proceedings involving a child alleged or adjudicated to have committed a delinquent act and placed in foster care.

(b) When a child is committed to DJJ and for whom a determination has been made that the child's continuation in his or her home is contrary to the child's welfare and he or she is placed in a nonsecure residential facility, such child shall receive a periodic review before an administrative review panel within DJJ within six months following the date the child entered the nonsecure residential facility and every six months thereafter while the child remains in such facility. The administrative review panel within DJJ shall transmit its report, including its findings and recommendations, to the court within five days after conducting its review.

15-11-622. Permanency planning requirements; reasons for failure to terminate parental rights.

(a) The permanency plan requirements under Code Sections 15-11-230, 15-11-231, and 15-11-232 shall apply to proceedings involving a child alleged or adjudicated to have committed a delinquent act and placed in foster care.

(b) In addition to the compelling reasons set forth in Code Section 15-11-233, a compelling reason for determining that filing a termination of parental rights petition is not in the best interests of a child alleged or adjudicated to have committed a delinquent act may include, but not be limited to:

(1) A child's developmental needs require continued out-of-home placement for an additional number of months, and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian has cooperated with referrals, visitation, and family conferences, as well as therapy;

(2) A child is uncooperative with services or referrals; and

(3) The length of the delinquency disposition affects the permanency plan.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-622, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-623. Permanency plan; hearing, notice, report, and findings of fact when a child is committed to the Department of Juvenile Justice.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "permanency plan" means a specific written plan prepared by DJJ designed to ensure that a child is reunified with his or her family or ensure that such child quickly attains a substitute long-term home when return to such child's family is not possible or is not in such child's best interests.

(b)(1) The court shall hold a hearing to review the permanency plan for each child committed to DJJ when a determination has been made that the child's continuation in his or her home is contrary to the child's welfare, and the child is placed in a nonsecure residential facility.

(2) Such hearing shall be held no later than 12 months from the date a child is considered to have entered foster care and every 12 months thereafter to make determinations including whether the permanency plan for such child is appropriate and whether reasonable efforts to finalize the permanency plan have been made by DJJ.

(3) A child's parent, guardian, legal custodian, attorney, any relatives providing care for such child, and other interested parties shall be given written notice of such hearing at least five days in advance of such hearing and shall be advised that the permanency plan will be submitted to the court for consideration as the order of the court.

(4) At least five days prior to such hearing, DJJ shall submit for the court's consideration a report recommending a permanency plan for a child committed to a nonsecure residential facility. Such report shall include documentation of the steps taken by DJJ to finalize the permanent placement for such child.

(5) Subsequent to such hearing, the court shall make written findings of fact that shall include whether DJJ has made reasonable efforts to finalize the permanency plan in effect at the time of the hearing.

Part 14

Traffic Offenses

15-11-630. "Child" defined; juvenile traffic offenses; summons; hearings; penalties; transfers; providing information to Department of Driver Services.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "child" means an individual under 17 years of age.

(b) A juvenile traffic offense consists of a violation by a child of:

(1) A law or local ordinance governing the operation of a moving motor vehicle upon the streets or highways of this state or upon the waterways within or adjoining this state; or

(2) Any other motor vehicle traffic law or local ordinance if a child is taken into custody and detained for its violation or is transferred to the juvenile court by the court hearing the charge.

(c) The following offenses shall be acts of delinquency and shall not be handled as juvenile traffic offenses: aggressive driving, reckless driving, a speeding offense punishable by four or more points, homicide by vehicle, manslaughter resulting from the operation of a vehicle, any felony in the commission of which a motor vehicle is used, racing on highways and streets, using a motor vehicle in fleeing or attempting to elude an officer, fraudulent or fictitious use of a driver's license, hit and run or leaving the scene of an accident, driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs, and any offense committed by an unlicensed driver under 16 years of age.

(d) A juvenile traffic offense shall not be an act of delinquency unless the case is transferred to the delinquency calendar.

(e) The summons, notice to appear, or other designation of a citation accusing a child of committing a juvenile traffic offense constitutes the commencement of the proceedings in the court of the county in which the alleged violation occurred and serves in place of a summons and petition under this article. These cases shall be filed and heard separately from other proceedings of the court. If a child is taken into custody on the charge, Code Sections 15-11-503 and 15-11-505 shall apply. If a child is, or after commencement of the proceedings becomes, a resident of another county of this state, the court in the county where the alleged traffic offense occurred may retain jurisdiction over the entire case.

(f) The court shall fix a time for a hearing and shall give reasonable notice thereof to the child accused of committing a juvenile traffic offense and, if his or her address is known, to his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian. If the accusation made in the summons, notice to appear, or other designation of a citation is denied, a hearing shall be held at which the parties shall have the right to subpoena witnesses, present evidence, cross-examine witnesses, and appear with their attorney. The hearing shall be open to the public.

(g) If the court finds on the admission of a child or upon the evidence that a child committed the offense charged, it may make one or more of the following orders:

(1) Reprimand, counsel, or warn such child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian; provided, however, that this disposition order shall not be available for any act of delinquency;

(2) As a matter of supervised or unsupervised probation, order the Department of Driver Services to suspend such child's privilege to drive under stated conditions and limitations for a period not to exceed 12 months;

(3) Require such child to attend a traffic school approved by the Department of Driver Services or a substance abuse clinic or program approved by either DBHDD or the Council of Juvenile Court Judges for a reasonable period of time;

(4) Assess a fine and order such child to remit to the general fund of the county a sum not exceeding the maximum applicable to an adult for a like offense. The fine shall be subject to all additions and penalties as specified under this title and Title 47;

(5) Require such child to participate in a program of community service as specified by the court;

(6) Impose any sanction authorized by Code Section 15-11-442 or 15-11-601; or

(7) Place such child on probation subject to the conditions and limitations imposed by Title 40 governing probation granted to adults for like offenses, provided that such probation shall be supervised by the court or shall be unsupervised probation.

(h) In lieu of the orders provided by subsection (g) of this Code section, if the evidence warrants, the court may transfer the case to the delinquency calendar of the court and direct the filing and service of a summons and delinquency petition.

(i) Upon finding that a child has committed a juvenile traffic offense or an act of delinquency which would be a violation of Title 40 if committed by an adult, the court shall forward, within ten days, a report of the final adjudication and disposition of the charge to the Department of Driver Services; provided, however, that this procedure shall not be applicable to those cases which have been dismissed or in which a child and his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian have been reprimanded, counseled, or warned by the court. The Department of Driver Services shall record the adjudication and disposition of the offense on such child's permanent record, and such adjudication and disposition shall be deemed a conviction for the purpose of suspending or revoking such child's driver's license. Such record shall also be available to law enforcement agencies and courts as are the permanent traffic records of adults.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-3101, pre-2000 Code Section

15-11-49, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-73, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Traffic offenses were covered by former statute and were treated separately from delinquency proceedings unless an appropriate petition was filed at the direction of the court. Quire v. Clayton County Dep't of Family & Children Servs., 242 Ga. 85, 249 S.E.2d 538 (1978) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3101).

The procedures in juvenile courts for traffic offenses were established in former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-650) and juvenile traffic offenses were given special treatment in juvenile law and were not considered delinquency proceedings unless transferred to the delinquency calendar. In re B.G.W. III, 218 Ga. App. 384, 461 S.E.2d 568 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49).

Rule requiring giving advice on rights inapplicable. — Considering the informal nature of the proceedings under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-630), Juvenile Court Rule 4.7, requiring advice to the juvenile regarding the juvenile's rights, was not applicable to traffic offenses. In re B.G.W. III, 218 Ga. App. 384, 461 S.E.2d 568 (1995) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-49).

Double jeopardy plea. — As a prosecutor had no actual knowledge of a prior juvenile traffic citation arising out of the same incident that was resolved against the defendant, a juvenile, when the prosecutor initiated charges against the juvenile on additional delinquency traffic citations under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-73 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-630), the juvenile court properly denied the juvenile's motion to acquit and plea of double jeopardy under O.C.G.A. § 16-1-7(b). In re C. E. H., 297 Ga. App. 467, 677 S.E.2d 318 (2009) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-73).

Delinquency order improper. — There was no indication that a juvenile defendant's speeding case was transferred to the delinquency calendar, so under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-73(d) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-630), the trial court's order adjudging the juvenile delinquent was error. In the Interest of R.G., 272 Ga. App. 276, 612 S.E.2d 94 (2005) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-73).

ARTICLE 7

COMPETENCY IN DELINQUENCY OR CHILD IN NEED OF SERVICES CASES

Administrative rules and regulations. — Rules and regulations on Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities and Addictive Diseases, Official Compilation of the Rules and Regulations of the State of Georgia, Rules of Department of Human Services, Subjects 290-4-1 and 290-4-3 et seq.

15-11-650. Purpose of article.

The purpose of this article is:

(1) To set forth procedures for a determination of whether a child is incompetent to proceed; and

(2) To provide a mechanism for the development and implementation of competency remediation services, when appropriate, including treatment, habilitation, support, or supervision services.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-650, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

Law reviews. — For note, "Statutory Reform in the Georgia Juvenile Court System: Juvenile Competency Issues Finally Addressed," see 15 Ga. St. U.L. Rev. 879 (1999).

15-11-651. Definitions.

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Competency remediation services" means outpatient interventions directed only at facilitating the attainment of competence to proceed for a child adjudicated to be incompetent to proceed. Such term may include mental health treatment to reduce interfering symptoms, specialized psychoeducational programming, or a combination of these interventions.

(2) "Comprehensive services plan" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 15-11-381.

(3) "Incompetent to proceed" means lacking sufficient present ability to understand the nature and object of the proceedings, to comprehend his or her own situation in relation to the proceedings, and to assist his or her attorney in the preparation and presentation of his or her case in all adjudication, disposition, or transfer hearings. Such term shall include consideration of a child's age or immaturity.

(4) "Mental competency proceeding" means a hearing conducted to determine whether a child is incompetent to proceed in adjudication, a disposition hearing, or a transfer proceeding.

(5) "Plan manager" shall have the same meaning as set forth in Code Section 15-11-381.

(6) "Treatment facility" means a facility that receives patients for psychiatric treatment as provided in Code Sections 37-3-80 through 37-3-84 but shall not include a secure residential facility.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-651, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-652. Stay of proceedings regarding child who may not be mentally competent to stand trial; appointment of attorney; tolling of time periods.

(a) If at any time after the filing of a petition alleging delinquency or that a child is a child in need of services the court has reason to believe that the child named in the petition may be incompetent to proceed, the court on its own motion or on the motion of the attorney representing such child, any guardian ad litem for such child, such child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian, or the prosecuting attorney shall stay all proceedings relating to such petition and, unless the court accepts a stipulation by the parties as to such child's incompetency, shall order a competency evaluation of and report on such child's mental condition.

(b) When a delinquency petition is filed alleging a child under the age of 13 has committed a serious violent felony, as defined in Code Section 17-10-6.1, the court shall stay all delinquency proceedings relating to such petition and, unless the court accepts a stipulation by the parties as to such child's incompetency, shall order a competency evaluation and report concerning such child's mental condition.

(c) Any motion, notice of hearing, order, or other pleading relating to a child's incompetency to proceed shall be served upon him or her, his or her attorney, his or her guardian ad litem, if any, his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian, and the prosecuting attorney.

(d) Prior to the administration of any evaluation, the court shall appoint an attorney to represent a child if he or she is not yet represented by an attorney.

(e) All time limits set forth in Articles 5 and 6 of this chapter for adjudication and disposition of a delinquency or a child in need of services proceeding shall be tolled during the evaluation, adjudication, and disposition phases of the mental competency proceeding and during provision of competency remediation services.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-652, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-653. Evaluation of a child's mental condition; procedures; written reports; additional evaluations.

(a) The court ordered evaluation and report shall be conducted by an examiner who shall consider whether a child is incompetent to proceed. The court shall provide the examiner with any law enforcement or court records necessary for understanding the petition alleging delinquency. The attorney for the child being examined and the prosecuting attorney shall provide the examiner with any records from any other available sources that are deemed necessary for the competency evaluation.

(b) The competency evaluation shall be performed on an outpatient basis; provided, however, that if a child is in an out-of-home placement, the evaluation shall be performed at such child's location.

(c) The examiner who conducts the evaluation shall submit a written report to the court within 30 days of receipt of the court order for evaluation. The court may, in its discretion, grant the examiner an extension in filing such report. The report shall contain the following:

(1) The specific reason for the evaluation, as provided by the court or the party requesting the evaluation;

(2) The evaluation procedures used, including any psychometric instruments administered, any records reviewed, and the identity of any persons interviewed;

(3) Any available pertinent background information;

(4) The results of a mental status exam, including the diagnosis if any and description of any psychiatric symptoms, cognitive deficiency, or both;

(5) A description of a child's abilities and deficits in the following mental competency functions:

(A) The ability to understand and appreciate the nature and object of the proceedings;

(B) The ability to comprehend his or her situation in relation to the proceedings; and

(C) The ability to assist his or her attorney in the preparation and presentation of his or her case;

(6) An opinion regarding the potential significance of a child's mental competency, strengths, and deficits;

(7) An opinion regarding whether or not a child should be considered incompetent to proceed; and

(8) A specific statement explaining the reasoning supporting the examiner's final determination.

(d) If, in the opinion of the examiner, a child should be considered incompetent to proceed, the report shall also include the following:

(1) An opinion on whether the primary cause of incompetency to proceed is immaturity, mental illness, developmental disability, or a combination of mental illness and developmental disability;

(2) An opinion on whether there is a substantial probability that the examined child will attain the mental competency necessary to participate in adjudication, a disposition hearing, or a transfer hearing in the foreseeable future;

(3) If the examiner believes that the examined child will attain mental competency, recommendations for the general level and type of competency remediation services necessary for significant deficits;

(4) A recommendation on the appropriate treatment or services;

(5) A recommendation as to the least restrictive setting in which competency remediation services may be effectively provided to such child if he or she is in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility and how such detention should continue;

(6) When appropriate, recommendations for modifications of court procedure which may help compensate for mental competency weaknesses; and

(7) Any relevant medication history.

(e) If the examiner determines that the examined child is currently competent because of ongoing treatment with medication or other services, the report shall address the necessity of continuing such treatment and shall include a description of any limitation such treatment may have on competency.

(f) Copies of the written evaluation report shall be provided by the court to the attorney representing the examined child, the prosecuting attorney or a member of his or her staff, and any guardian ad litem for the examined child no later than five days after receipt of the report by the court.

(g) Upon a showing of good cause by any party or upon the court's own motion, the court may order additional evaluations by other licensed psychologists or psychiatrists. In no event shall more than one evaluation be conducted by an examiner employed by DBHDD.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-653, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2017, p. 604, § 2-1/SB 175.

15-11-654. Transfer of proceedings.

(a) If at any time following a finding that a child is incompetent to proceed the court determines that such child is a resident of a county of this state other than the county in which the court sits, the court may transfer the proceeding to the county of such child's residence.

(b) When any case is transferred, certified copies of all legal, social history, health, or mental health records pertaining to the case on file with the clerk of the court shall accompany the transfer. Compliance with this subsection shall terminate jurisdiction in the transferring court and initiate jurisdiction in the receiving court.

(c) If a court determines that such child's competency is remediated, jurisdiction of the case may be returned to the transferring court for the adjudication hearing and any subsequent proceedings.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-654, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-655. Mental competency hearing; burden of proof; notice; rights during hearing; procedure; findings.

(a) A hearing to determine if a child is incompetent to proceed shall be conducted within 60 days after the initial court order for evaluation. The hearing may be continued by the court for good cause shown.

(b) Written notice shall be given to all parties and the victim at least ten days prior to such hearing.

(c) The burden of proving that a child is incompetent to proceed shall be on such child. The standard of proof necessary for proving mental competency shall be a preponderance of the evidence.

(d) At the hearing to determine incompetency to proceed, a child's attorney and the prosecuting attorney shall have the right to:

(1) Present evidence;

(2) Call and examine witnesses;

(3) Cross-examine witnesses; and

(4) Present arguments.

(e) The examiner appointed by the court shall be considered the court's witness and shall be subject to cross-examination by both a child's attorney and the prosecuting attorney.

(f) The court's findings of fact shall be based on any evaluations of a child's mental condition conducted by licensed psychologists or psychiatrists appointed by the court, any evaluations of a child's mental condition conducted by independent licensed psychologists or psychiatrists hired by the parties, and any additional evidence presented.

(g) If the court finds that a child is not incompetent to proceed, the proceedings which have been suspended shall be resumed. The time limits under Article 5 or 6 of this chapter for adjudication and disposition of the petition shall begin to run from the date of the order finding such child mentally competent.

(h) Copies of the court's findings shall be given to the parties within ten days following the issuance of such findings.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-655, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-656. Disposition of incompetent child; competency remediation.

(a) If the court finds that a child is incompetent to proceed but such child's incompetence may be remediated, if such child is alleged:

(1) To be a child in need of services, the court shall either dismiss the petition without prejudice or order competency remediation services for such child; or

(2) To have committed a delinquent act, the court may order competency remediation services for such child.

(b) In determining whether to order competency remediation services, the court shall consider:

(1) Whether there is probable cause to believe the allegations in the petition are true;

(2) The nature of the incompetency;

(3) An incompetent child's age; and

(4) The nature of the act alleged to have been committed by the incompetent child, in particular whether the act is a serious violent felony as such term is defined in Code Section 17-10-6.1.

(c) If a child is determined to be incompetent to proceed, the court has ordered that competency remediation services should be provided, and:

(1) Such child is alleged to have committed an act that would be a felony if committed by an adult, the court may retain jurisdiction of such child for up to two years after the date of the order of incompetency, with review hearings at least every six months to redetermine competency or proceed as provided in subsection (f) of this Code section; or

(2) A child is alleged to have committed an act that would be a misdemeanor if committed by an adult, the court may retain jurisdiction of a child for up to 120 days after the date of the order of incompetency or proceed as provided in subsection (f) of this Code section.

(d) All court orders determining incompetency shall include specific written findings by the court as to the nature of the incompetency and the mandated outpatient competency remediation services. If such child is in an out-of-home placement, the court shall specify the type of competency remediation services to be performed at such child's location. A child may be placed in a facility or program authorized or designated by DBHDD if the court makes a finding by clear and convincing evidence that all available less restrictive alternatives, including treatment in community residential facilities or community settings which would offer an opportunity for improvement of a child's condition, are inappropriate.

(e) A child who is incompetent to proceed shall not be subject to transfer to superior court, adjudication, disposition, or modification of disposition so long as the mental incompetency exists.

(f) If the court determines that an alleged delinquent child is incompetent to proceed, the court may dismiss the petition without prejudice.

(g)(1) If a child is detained in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility and the court determines that such child is incompetent to proceed, within five days of such determination the court shall issue an order to:

(A) Immediately release such child to the appropriate parent, guardian, or legal custodian; or

(B) Detain such child in the least restrictive setting, if such child is alleged to have committed a delinquent act and the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that such child's detention or care is required:

(i) To reduce the likelihood that he or she may inflict serious bodily harm to others;

(ii) Because he or she has a demonstrated pattern of theft or destruction of property such that detention is required to protect the property of others; or

(iii) Because detention is necessary to secure his or her presence in court to protect the jurisdiction and processes of the court.

(2) If such child is unrestorably incompetent to proceed, such child shall not be detained in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility after a comprehensive services plan has been adopted as provided in Code Section 15-11-451. If such child is incompetent to proceed but his or her incompetence may be remediated, such child shall not be detained in a secure residential facility or nonsecure residential facility for any longer period of time than is allowed for the disposition of a delinquent act under Code

Section 15-11-601 or for the disposition of a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act under Code Section 15-11-602, as applicable.

15-11-657. Restoration to competency; remediation orders and reports.

(a) All competency remediation service orders issued by the court shall contain:

(1) The name of the competency remediation service program provider and the location of the program;

(2) A statement of the arrangements for a child's transportation to the program site;

(3) The length of the competency remediation service program;

(4) A statement of the arrangements for a child's transportation after the program ends; and

(5) A direction concerning the frequency of reports required by the court.

(b) DBHDD or a licensed psychologist or psychiatrist shall file a written report with the court:

(1) Not later than six months after the date the court orders that competency remediation be attempted but prior to the first review hearing;

(2) Every six months after the first review hearing if a child remains incompetent to proceed and under an order for remediation;

(3) At any time DBHDD or a licensed psychologist or psychiatrist opines a child has attained competency; or

(4) At shorter intervals designated by the court in its competency remediation order.

(c) DBHDD or the licensed psychologist or psychiatrist written report shall include, but not be limited to:

(1) Whether a child's competency can be remediated or whether a child is likely to remain incompetent to proceed for the foreseeable future;

(2) Whether additional time is needed to remediate a child's competency; and

(3) If a child has attained competency, the effect, if any, of any limitations that are imposed by any medication or other treatment used in the effort to remediate competency.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-657, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-658. Disposition of a child found unrestorably incompetent to proceed.

(a) If the court initially finds that a child is unrestorably incompetent to proceed, the court shall dismiss the petition, appoint a plan manager, and order that procedures for a comprehensive services plan be initiated under Article 5 of this chapter. When appropriate, the court may:

(1) Order that a child be referred for civil commitment pursuant to Chapters 3 and 4 of Title 37. Such proceedings shall be instituted not less than 60 days prior to the dismissal of the delinquency or a child in need of services petition; or

(2) Order that referral be made for appropriate adult services if a child has reached the age of 18 years at the time of the competency determination.

(b) If at any time after a child is ordered to undergo competency remediation services DBHDD or a licensed psychologist or psychiatrist opines that a child is likely to remain incompetent to proceed for the foreseeable future, DBHDD or the licensed psychologist or psychiatrist shall submit a report to the court so stating.

(c) Upon receipt of the report specified in subsection (b) of this Code section, the court shall make a competency determination and shall dismiss the delinquency petition, appoint a plan manager, and order that procedures for a comprehensive services plan be initiated under Article 5 of this chapter. When appropriate, the court may:

(1) Order that a child be referred for civil commitment pursuant to Chapters 3 and 4 of Title 37. Such proceedings shall be instituted not less than 60 days prior to the dismissal of the delinquency or child in need of services petition; or

(2) Order that referral be made for appropriate adult services if a child has reached the age of 18 years at the time of the competency determination.

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24A-2601, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Requirements prior to commitment of mentally retarded or mentally ill child. — A mentally retarded child may not properly be committed to the Department of Human Resources unless the department first advises the court that the department has appropriate facilities available to serve that particular child; a mentally ill child may not be similarly committed unless the child is in need of hospitalization because the child is likely to injure oneself or others if not hospitalized or because, due to the child's mental illness, the child is incapable of caring for the child's physical health and safety. 1976 Op. 15-11-659. Court's duty when child found unrestorably incompetent to proceed.

If at any time after a child is adjudicated to be incompetent to proceed due to age, immaturity, or for any reason other than mental illness or developmental disability and is ordered to undergo competency remediation services and DBHDD determines that such child is likely to remain incompetent to proceed for the foreseeable future, DBHDD shall submit a report and its conclusions to the court. Upon receipt of such report, the court shall:

(1) Make a competency determination;

(2) Order that the applicable petition be dismissed; and

(3) Order that a plan manager be appointed and that the procedures for a comprehensive services plan be initiated under Article 5 of this chapter.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-659, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-660. Review hearings.

(a) The court shall hold a hearing to review a child's progress toward competency:

(1) At least every six months;

(2) At any time, on its own motion or on the motion of the prosecuting attorney, a child's attorney, or a child's guardian ad litem, if any;

(3) On receipt of a report submitted by DBHDD; or

(4) Not less than three months before a child's eighteenth birthday.

(b) If at a review hearing the court finds that a child has attained competency, the suspended proceedings shall be resumed and the time limits applicable under Article 5 or 6 of this chapter shall begin to run from the date of the order finding the child mentally competent.

(c) If at a review hearing held following the court's receipt of a DBHDD or licensed psychologist or psychiatrist's report the court finds that a child's incompetency has not been remediated but that such child has made substantial progress toward remediation, the court may extend the competency remediation program period for an additional 60 days if the court determines by clear and convincing evidence that further participation is likely to lead to remediation of competency.

(d) If at a review hearing the court finds that a child's competency is not remediated and is not likely to be remediated within the time left before such child's eighteenth birthday, the court shall dismiss the petition with prejudice if such child is alleged to be a child in need of services or to have committed a delinquent act which would be a misdemeanor if committed by an adult.

(e) At each review hearing, the court shall also consider whether the petition alleging delinquency or that a child is a child in need of services should be withdrawn, maintained, or dismissed, without prejudice, upon grounds other than a child's being incompetent to proceed. If the court dismisses the petition, the prosecuting attorney may seek to refile a petition alleging a delinquent act which would be a felony if committed by an adult if a child is later determined to be mentally competent. The prosecuting attorney may also seek transfer to superior court if a child is later determined to be mentally competent and otherwise meets all the requirements for transfer under Article 6 of this chapter.

Standard of proof. — Former Parental Notification Act, former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-110 et seq. (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-680 et seq.), did not require a quantum of proof greater than a preponderance of the evidence. The juvenile court was not tasked with balancing any broader societal interests; thus, there was no basis for imposing a heightened "clear and convincing" standard of proof. In the Interest of Doe, 319 Ga. App. 574, 737 S.E.2d 581 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-110).

15-11-681. Definitions.

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Abortion" means the use or prescription of any instrument, medicine, drug, or any other substance or device with the intent to terminate the pregnancy of a female known to be pregnant. The term "abortion" shall not include the use or prescription of any instrument, medicine, drug, or any other substance or device employed solely to increase the probability of a live birth, to preserve the life or health of the child after live birth, or to remove a dead unborn child who died as a result of a spontaneous abortion. The term "abortion" also shall not include the prescription or use of contraceptives.

(2) "Proper identification" means any document issued by a governmental agency containing a description of the person, the person's photograph, or both, including but not limited to a driver's license, an identification card authorized under Code Sections 40-5-100 through 40-5-104 or similar identification card issued by another state, a military identification card, a passport, or an appropriate work authorization issued by the United States Immigration and Customs Enforcement Division of the Department of Homeland Security.

(3) "Unemancipated minor" means any person under the age of 18 who is not or has not been married or who is under the care, custody, and control of such person's parent or parents, guardian, or the juvenile court of competent jurisdiction.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-681, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-682. Parental notification of abortion; hearing; venue.

(a) No physician or other person shall perform an abortion upon an unemancipated minor unless:

(1)(A) The unemancipated minor seeking an abortion is accompanied by his or her parent or guardian who shall show proper identification and state that he or she is the lawful parent or guardian of the unemancipated minor and that he or she has been notified that an abortion is to be performed on the unemancipated minor;

(B) The physician or the physician's qualified agent gives at least 24 hours' actual notice, in person or by telephone, to the parent or guardian of the unemancipated minor of the pending abortion and the name and address of the place where the abortion is to be performed; provided, however, that, if the person so notified indicates that he or she has been previously informed that the unemancipated minor was seeking an abortion or if the person so notified has not been previously informed and he or she clearly expresses that he or she does not wish to consult with the unemancipated minor, then in either event the abortion may proceed in accordance with Chapter 9A of Title 31; or

(C) The physician or a physician's qualified agent gives written notice of the pending abortion and the address of the place where the abortion is to be performed, sent by registered or certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested with delivery confirmation, addressed to a parent or guardian of the unemancipated minor at the usual place of abode of the parent or guardian. Unless proof of delivery is otherwise sooner established, such notice shall be deemed delivered 48 hours after mailing. The time of mailing shall be recorded by the physician or agent in the unemancipated minor's file. The abortion may be performed 24 hours after the delivery of the notice; provided, however, that, if the person so notified certifies in writing that he or she has been previously informed that the unemancipated minor was seeking an abortion or if the person so notified has not been previously informed and he or she certifies in writing that he or she does not wish to consult with the unemancipated minor, then in either event the abortion may proceed in accordance with Chapter 9A of Title 31; and

(2) The unemancipated minor signs a consent form stating that she consents, freely and without coercion, to the abortion.

(b) If the unemancipated minor or the physician or a physician's qualified agent, as the case may be, elects not to comply with any one of the requirements of subparagraph (a)(1)(A), (a)(1)(B), or (a)(1)(C) of this Code section, or if the parent or legal guardian of the unemancipated minor cannot be located, the unemancipated minor may petition, on his or her own behalf or by next friend, any juvenile court in the state for a waiver of such requirement pursuant to the procedures provided for in Code Section 15-11-684. The juvenile court shall assist the unemancipated minor or next friend in preparing the petition and notices required pursuant to this Code section. Venue shall be lawful in any county.

(c) No abortion shall be performed unless the requirements of subparagraph (a)(1)(A), (a)(1)(B), or (a)(1)(C) of this Code section have been met or the unemancipated minor has obtained a court order waiving such requirements.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — Former Georgia Parental Notification Act's requirements, former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-110 et seq. (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-680 et seq.), taken together, did not unduly burden a minor's abortion decision. Planned Parenthood Ass'n v. Miller, 934 F.2d 1462 (11th Cir. 1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-112).

Constructive delivery provision of subparagraph (a)(1)(C) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-112 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-682) ensured that, with no parental action, and no actual notice to her parent, a minor can proceed with her abortion. The provision did not unduly burden a minor's abortion right, and it therefore survived constitutional scrutiny. Planned Parenthood Ass'n v. Miller, 934 F.2d 1462 (11th Cir. 1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-112).

Notice. — By limiting written notice to notice by the United States Postal Service — and excluding notice by private carriers such as Federal Express and Airborne Express — Georgia has enacted reasonable regulations that foster Georgia's important state interest in protecting immature minors. Planned Parenthood Ass'n v. Miller, 934 F.2d 1462 (11th Cir. 1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-112).

Legislature may permit notice by telephone or in person, or by some other means that guarantees sufficient reliability; it may refuse to recognize notice if a physician simply sends a note home with a minor or uses an uncertified mail service since, with either of these methods, there is a substantial likelihood that the notice will not reach its destination. Planned Parenthood Ass'n v. Miller, 934 F.2d 1462 (11th Cir. 1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-112).

Authority of judicial officers. — An intake officer's authority to make a preliminary determination under Juvenile Court Rule 4.1 regarding a minor's petition does not impose an impermissible third-party veto over a minor's abortion decision. Planned Parenthood Ass'n v. Miller, 934 F.2d 1462 (11th Cir. 1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-112).

Because a guardian ad litem who is familiar with the conduct of the waiver hearing and appeal offers invaluable assistance to a pregnant minor, Juvenile Court Rule 23.2, which provides for the appointment of a guardian, will promote rather than burden the minor's abortion decision. Planned Parenthood Ass'n v. Miller, 934 F.2d 1462 (11th Cir. 1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-112).

Waiver of notification denied. — Juvenile court correctly found that an unemanicipated minor would have to notify her parents before having an abortion because she did not consult with her doctor before making this decision and there was no evidence that it would not be in her best interest to inform her parents. In re E.H., 240 Ga. App. 91, 524 S.E.2d 2 (1999) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-112).

See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

15-11-684. Conduct of hearing; appeal.

(a) An unemancipated minor may participate in proceedings in the court on such minor's own behalf and the court shall advise such minor of the right to court appointed counsel and shall provide such minor with such counsel upon request or if such minor is not already adequately represented.

(b) All court proceedings under this Code section shall be conducted in a manner to preserve the complete anonymity of the parties and shall be given such precedence over other pending matters as is necessary to ensure that a decision is reached by the court as expeditiously as is possible under the circumstances of the case. In no event shall the name, address, birth date, or social security number of such minor be disclosed.

(c) The requirements of subparagraph (a)(1)(A), (a)(1)(B), or (a)(1)(C) of Code Section 15-11-682 shall be waived if the court finds either:

(1) That the unemancipated minor is mature enough and well enough informed to make the abortion decision in consultation with her physician, independently of the wishes of such minor's parent or guardian; or

(2) That the notice to a parent or, if the unemancipated minor is subject to guardianship, the legal guardian pursuant to Code Section 15-11-682 would not be in the best interests of such minor.

(d) A court that conducts proceedings under this Code section shall issue written and specific factual findings and legal conclusions supporting its decision and shall order that a record of the evidence be maintained. The juvenile court shall render its decision within 24 hours of the conclusion of the hearing and a certified copy of same shall be furnished immediately to the unemancipated minor. If the juvenile court fails to render its decision within 24 hours after the conclusion of the hearing, then the petition shall be deemed granted. All juvenile court records shall be sealed in a manner that will preserve anonymity.

(e) An expedited appeal completely preserving the anonymity of the parties shall be available to any unemancipated minor to whom the court denies a waiver of notice. The appellate courts are authorized and requested to issue promptly such rules as are necessary to preserve anonymity and to ensure the expeditious disposition of procedures provided by this Code section. In no event shall the name, address, birth date, or social security number of such minor be disclosed during the expedited appeal or thereafter.

(f) No filing fees shall be required of any unemancipated minor who uses the procedures provided by this Code section.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — There was no constitutional infirmity in the constructive order provision in former subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 15-11-114 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-684); as long as the state imposed a constitutional timetable for the minor's petition to be heard and acted upon, this was sufficient to demonstrate that bypass procedure's expediency. Planned Parenthood Ass'n v. Miller, 934 F.2d 1462 (11th Cir. 1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-114).

Time requirement. — Although a hearing was conducted on a Friday, former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-114 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-684) included no provision allowing the court to delay the court's ruling on the petition beyond 24 hours in order to accommodate an intervening weekend or holiday. The statute did not use vague language to describe the applicable time period, such as "one day" or "by the end of the next business day"; instead, the statute specifically stated "within 24 hours of the conclusion of the hearing." In the Interest of Doe, 319 Ga. App. 574, 737 S.E.2d 581 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-114).

Order not rendered within 24 hours of conclusion of hearing. — Juvenile was entitled to reversal of the denial of the juvenile's petition for waiver of the parental notification requirement before an unemancipated minor may have an abortion because the juvenile court failed to comply with the statutory mandate that the court render a decision and provide a certified copy of the order to the minor within 24 hours of the conclusion of the hearing pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-114(d) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-684). In the Interest of Doe, 319 Ga. App. 574, 737 S.E.2d 581 (2013) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-114).

Complete anonymity is not critical. — Fact that some public officials have access to the minor's court record did not compromise the record's confidentiality, nor did it mean that the officials would make unauthorized disclosures of the record. Planned Parenthood Ass'n v. Miller, 934 F.2d 1462 (11th Cir. 1991) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-114).

15-11-685. Applicability to nonresidents.

15-11-686. Medical emergency.

This article shall not apply when, in the best clinical judgment of the attending physician on the facts of the case before him or her, a medical emergency exists that so complicates the condition of the unemancipated minor as to require an immediate abortion. A person who performs an abortion as a medical emergency under the provisions of this Code section shall certify in writing the medical indications on which this judgment was based when filing such reports as are required by law.

15-11-687. Immunity of health care provider acting in good faith.

Any physician or any person employed or connected with a physician, hospital, or health care facility performing abortions who acts in good faith shall be justified in relying on the representations of the unemancipated minor or of any other person providing the information required under this article. No physician or other person who furnishes professional services related to an act authorized or required by this article and who relies upon the information furnished pursuant to this article shall be held to have violated any criminal law or to be civilly liable for such reliance, provided that the physician or other person acted in good faith.

Any person who violates the provisions of this article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and any person who intentionally encourages another to provide false information pursuant to this article shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

ARTICLE 9

ACCESS TO HEARINGS AND RECORDS

15-11-700. Admission to hearings of general public and media.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "dependency proceeding" means a court proceeding stemming from a petition alleging that a child is a dependent child.

(b) The general public shall be admitted to:

(1) An adjudicatory hearing involving an allegation of a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act;

(2) An adjudicatory hearing involving an allegation of delinquency brought in the interest of any child who has previously been adjudicated for committing a delinquent act; provided, however, the court shall close any delinquency hearing on an allegation of sexual assault or any delinquency hearing at which any party expects to introduce substantial evidence related to matters of dependency;

(3) Any child support hearing;

(4) Any hearing in a legitimation action filed pursuant to Code Section 19-7-22;

(5) At the court's discretion, any dispositional hearing involving any proceeding under this article; or

(6) Any hearing in a dependency proceeding, except as otherwise provided in subsection (c) of this Code section.

(c) The court may close the hearing in a dependency proceeding only upon making a finding upon the record and issuing a signed order stating the reason or reasons for closing all or part of a hearing in such proceeding and stating that:

(1) The proceeding involves an allegation of an act which, if done by an adult, would constitute a sexual offense under Chapter 6 of Title 16; or

(2) It is in the best interests of the child. In making such a determination, the court shall consider such factors as:

(A) The age of the child alleged or adjudicated as a dependent child;

(B) The nature of the allegations;

(C) The effect that an open court proceeding will have on the court's ability to reunite and rehabilitate the family unit; and

(D) Whether the closure is necessary to protect the privacy of a child, of a foster parent or other caretaker of a child, or of a victim of domestic violence.

(d) The court may close a hearing or exclude a person from a hearing in any proceeding on its own motion, by motion of a party to the proceeding, or by motion of the child who is the subject of the proceeding or the child's attorney or guardian ad litem.

(e) Only the parties, their counsel, witnesses, persons accompanying a party for his or her assistance, the victim, and any other persons as the court finds have a proper interest in the proceeding or in the work of the court may be admitted by the court to hearings from which the public is excluded; provided, however, that when the conduct alleged in the dependency proceeding could give rise to a criminal or delinquent act prosecution, attorneys for the prosecution and the defense shall be admitted.

(f) The court may refuse to admit a person to a hearing in any proceeding upon making a finding upon the record and issuing a signed order that the person's presence at the hearing would:

(1) Be detrimental to the best interests of the child who is a party to the proceeding;

(2) Impair the fact-finding process; or

(3) Be otherwise contrary to the interest of justice.

(g) The court may temporarily exclude any child from a termination of parental rights hearing except while allegations of his or her delinquency or child in need of services conduct are being heard.

(h) Any request for installation and use of electronic recording, transmission, videotaping, or motion picture or still photography of any judicial proceeding shall be made to the court at least two days in advance of the hearing. The request shall be evaluated by the court pursuant to the standards set forth in Code Section 15-1-10.1.

(i) The judge may order the media not to release identifying information concerning any child or family members or foster parent or other caretaker of a child involved in hearings open to the public.

(j) The general public shall be excluded from proceedings in juvenile court unless such hearing has been specified as one in which the general public shall be admitted to pursuant to this Code section.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Parents to be present throughout hearing. — Former statute indicated the legislative plan for the conduct of hearings was for the parents to be present at all times. D.C.A. v. State, 135 Ga. App. 234, 217 S.E.2d 470 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-1801).

Presence of members of the press. — In a proceeding seeking the termination of parental rights, if no objection to the presence of members of the press is made at any time during the hearing, any enumeration of error is without merit. Heath v. McGuire, 167 Ga. App. 489, 306 S.E.2d 741 (1983) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

Adoption caseworker. — Trial court did not err by permitting an adoption caseworker to remain in the courtroom during the father's termination of parental rights hearing after the father's counsel invoked the rule of sequestration; the rule of sequestration did not apply because the caseworker was not a witness, and the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in determining that it was necessary for the caseworker to hear the evidence at the hearing for purposes of efficiency. In the Interest of T.G.Y., 279 Ga. App. 449, 631 S.E.2d 467 (2006) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-78).

Consideration of public's rights to open hearing. — When a member of the public or press institutes a judicial proceeding to require the opening of a juvenile hearing, the court must, in an expeditious manner, give the public or press an opportunity to present evidence and argument to show that the state's or juvenile's interest in a closed hearing is overridden by the public's interest in a public hearing. Florida Publishing Co. v. Morgan, 253 Ga. 467, 322 S.E.2d 233 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-28).

15-11-701. Sealing of files and records; hearings; limitations on disclosure; identity of victim.

(a) Upon dismissal of a petition or complaint alleging delinquency or that a child is a child in need of services or completion of the process in a case handled through informal adjustment, mediation, or other nonadjudicatory procedure, the court shall order the sealing of the files and records in the case.

(b) On application of a person who has been adjudicated for committing a delinquent act or as a child in need of services or on the court's own motion, and after a hearing, the court shall order the sealing of the files and records in the proceeding if the court finds that:

(1) Two years have elapsed since the final discharge of the person;

(2) Since the final discharge of the person he or she has not been convicted of a felony or of a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude or adjudicated for committing a delinquent act or as a child in need of services and no proceeding seeking conviction or adjudication is pending against the person; and

(3) The person has been rehabilitated.

(c) On application of a person who has been adjudicated for a delinquent act or on the court's own motion, and after a hearing, the court shall order the sealing of the files and records in the proceeding, including those specified in Code Sections 15-11-702 and 15-11-708, if the court finds that the child was adjudicated for a delinquent act for a sexual crime as defined in Code Section 16-3-6 and such crime resulted from the child being:

(1) Trafficked for sexual servitude in violation of Code Section 16-5-46; or

(2) A victim of sexual exploitation as defined in Code Section 49-5-40.

(d) Reasonable notice of the hearing required by subsection (b) and (c) of this Code section shall be given to:

(1) The prosecuting attorney;

(2) DJJ, when appropriate;

(3) The authority granting the discharge if the final discharge was from an institution or from parole; and

(4) The law enforcement officers or department having custody of the files and records if the files and records specified in Code Sections 15-11-702 and 15-11-708 are included in the application or motion.

(e) Upon the entry of the order the proceeding shall be treated as if it had never occurred. All index references shall be deleted and the person, the court, the law enforcement officers, and the departments shall properly reply that no record exists pertaining to the person upon inquiry in any matter. Copies of the order shall be sent to each agency or designated official and shall also be sent to the deputy director of the Georgia Crime Information Center of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. Inspection of the sealed files and records thereafter may be permitted by an order of the court upon petition by the person who is the subject of the records and otherwise only by those persons named in the order or to criminal justice officials upon petition to the court for official judicial enforcement or criminal justice purposes.

(f) The court may seal any record containing information identifying a victim of an act which, if done by an adult, would constitute a sexual offense under Chapter 6 of Title 16.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

"Moral turpitude." — In general, the phrase "moral turpitude" refers to felonies which are malum in se. In re Long, 153 Ga. App. 883, 267 S.E.2d 481 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3504).

Records of the Department of Family and Children Services which are not part of a juvenile court proceeding are not sealable. In re W.J.K., 188 Ga. App. 299, 372 S.E.2d 681 (1988) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-61).

Motion to seal juvenile court record premature. — Juvenile court properly denied each of the minor's motions to seal the juvenile court record because the motions were filed prematurely as at least two years had to elapse from the time the minor completed the terms of the minor's sentence and was released from probation before the minor was entitled to a sealed record. In the Interest of L.T., 325 Ga. App. 590, 754 S.E.2d 380 (2014) (decided under former OCGA § 15-11-79.2).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24A-3504, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Inspection by employees of adult probation and parole offices. — Pursuant to former Code 1933, § 24A-3504 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-701), a juvenile court judge may, in the judge's discretion, permit employees of an adult probation office and an adult parole office to inspect juvenile court records, except in cases where those records have been sealed under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-703). 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-34 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3504).

Consent of court needed for access of parole board. — Consent of the court must be obtained on each individual to allow the State Board of Pardons and Paroles access to juvenile records, and if those records are sealed, the subject must petition the court to allow the board access to such records. 1978 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 78-76 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3504).

15-11-702. Children's fingerprints, photographs, and names.

(a)(1) Every child charged with an offense that would be a felony if committed by an adult shall be fingerprinted and photographed upon being taken into custody.

(2) Fingerprints and photographs of children to be used in investigating the commission of crimes shall be taken and filed separately from those of adults by law enforcement officials and shall be made available as provided in this article and as may be directed by the court.

(b) Fingerprint files and photographs of children may be inspected by law enforcement officers when necessary for criminal justice purposes and for the discharge of their official duties. Other inspections may be authorized by the court in individual cases upon a showing that it is necessary in the public interest.

(c) If a child has been charged with an offense that if committed by an adult would be a felony or if the case is transferred to another court for prosecution, such child's identification data, and other pertinent information shall be forwarded to the Georgia Crime Information Center of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation. The center shall create a juvenile fingerprint file and enter the data into the computerized criminal history files. The Georgia Bureau of Investigation shall act as the official state repository for juvenile history data and shall be authorized to disseminate such data for the purposes specified in Code Section 15-11-708.

(d) Upon application of a child, fingerprints and photographs of such child shall be removed from the file and destroyed if a petition alleging delinquency is not filed or the proceedings are dismissed after either such petition is filed or the case is transferred to the juvenile court or the child is adjudicated not to be a delinquent child. The court shall notify the deputy director of the Georgia Crime Information Center when fingerprints and photographs are destroyed, and the Georgia Bureau of Investigation shall treat such records in the same manner as criminal history record information is restricted pursuant to Code Section 35-3-37.

(e) Except as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, without the consent of the judge, a child shall not be photographed after he or she is taken into custody unless the case is transferred to another court for prosecution.

(f) Upon request, the judge or his or her designee shall release the name of any child with regard to whom a petition has been filed alleging a child committed a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act or alleging a child committed a delinquent act if such child has previously been adjudicated for committing a delinquent act or if such child has previously been before the court on a delinquency charge and adjudication was withheld.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under pre-2014 repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Section held unconstitutional. — Conclusive presumption in paragraph (g)(1) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-60 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-702) that juvenile proceedings are to be closed to the press and public is unconstitutional. Florida Publishing Co. v. Morgan, 253 Ga. 467, 322 S.E.2d 233 (1984) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-60).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Inapplicable to children prosecuted in superior court. — Provisions of former statute concerning compilation and maintenance of fingerprint records of children investigated by law enforcement authorities should not apply to the case of a child who is either indicted and tried in the superior court for a capital felony or who is transferred from the juvenile court for criminal prosecution; in either of those instances a child may be fingerprinted in accordance with standard practice; thus, such a child's fingerprint file would neither have to be "kept separate from those of adults" nor "maintained on a local basis only," but could be forwarded "to a central state or federal depository" for storage in the routine manner. 1974 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 74-58 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3503).

Disposition of fingerprints. — Fingerprints of children taken as authorized in subsection (a) of former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-60 may be filed locally and need not be delivered to the court; fingerprints taken as authorized in subsection (e) must be destroyed or delivered to the court. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-66 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-60).

For a discussion of the validity of provisions as to publication of child's name or picture, in light of Smith v. Daily Mail Publishing Co., 443 U.S. 97, 98 S. Ct. 2667, 61 L. Ed. 2d 399 (1979) see 1980 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 80-11 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3503).

Court orders for the release of information should be written. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U87-18 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-60).

Mandatory release of name. — Court has a mandatory duty to release only the name of a child who is before the court for a second or subsequent delinquency matter. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U87-18 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-60).

15-11-703. Use of disposition and evidence.

Except as provided in subsection (d) of Code Section 24-6-609, the disposition of a child and evidence adduced in a hearing in the juvenile court shall not be used against such child in any proceeding in any court other than as provided in Code Section 16-15-9 or 24-4-418 or for a proceeding for delinquency or a child in need of services, whether before or after reaching 18 years of age, except in the establishment of conditions of bail, plea negotiations, and sentencing in criminal offenses; and, in such excepted cases, such records of dispositions and evidence shall be available to prosecuting attorneys, superior or state court judges, and the accused and may be used in the same manner as adult records. Whenever such record of disposition is filed in a superior or state court or admitted into evidence in a superior or state court proceeding, it shall be filed under seal.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401, pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-38, and pre-2014 Code Section 15-11-79.1, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Purpose. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-703) was designed to protect children from disclosure relating to matters resulting from and produced in juvenile hearings, not to insulate a child from the effect of testimony of those investigating crimes. Hayward v. Ramick, 248 Ga. 841, 285 S.E.2d 697 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38).

Finding delinquent act. — Juvenile court may find that any act designated a crime under the law is a delinquent act when committed by a juvenile. In order to do this, it is not necessary that the juvenile be considered or found guilty of a crime. K.M.S. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 683, 200 S.E.2d 916 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401); T.L.T. v. State, 133 Ga. App. 895, 212 S.E.2d 650 (1975) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

Adjudication of delinquency when child has not attained 13 years. — Juvenile court may adjudicate a child a delinquent based upon a petition alleging that the child committed an act designated a crime under Georgia law, when the child has not yet attained the age of 13 years. K.M.S. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 683, 200 S.E.2d 916 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

Due process must be adhered to in juvenile court proceedings. — While cases in the juvenile court are not criminal proceedings, due process must always be scrupulously adhered to. D.P. v. State, 129 Ga. App. 680, 200 S.E.2d 499 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

Section not bar to all evidence adduced at hearing. — Former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-703) bared use only of such evidence as would disclose the "disposition of a child" at a juvenile hearing and did not bar introduction of testimony regarding the juvenile's prior commission of a rape if such evidence was used to show lustful disposition and for corroboration purposes. Houser v. State, 173 Ga. App. 378, 326 S.E.2d 513 (1985) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38).

Authority for use of juvenile court record in dispositional proceedings. — Former Code 1933, §§ 24A-2401 and 27-2702 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-703 and 42-8-34), construed in pari materia, clearly authorized the use of the juvenile court record in dispositional proceedings after conviction of a felony for the purposes of a presentence investigation and report. Jones v. State, 129 Ga. App. 623, 200 S.E.2d 487 (1973) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-2401).

Evidence of incident occurring when defendant was a juvenile. — Trial court did not err when the court denied the defendant's motion for new trial on the basis that the state proffered similar transaction evidence of an incident that occurred when the defendant was a juvenile because the trial court offered to give a curative instruction to the jury, but trial counsel refused the curative instruction citing "strategy" as counsel's reasons; the trial court admonished the witness not to make any references to the juvenile court proceeding. Kitchens v. State, 289 Ga. 242, 710 S.E.2d 551 (2011) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-79.1).

Use of materials produced during investigation. — In the prosecution of a felony murder case, the admission of testimony of an investigating officer relating to a statement made by the defendant during a juvenile investigation was not error since the officer's testimony did not disclose the "disposition of a child" nor was the testimony "evidence adduced in a hearing in juvenile court." Waugh v. State, 263 Ga. 691, 437 S.E.2d 297 (1993), cert. denied, 511 U.S. 1090, 114 S. Ct. 1850, 128 L. Ed. 2d 474 (1994) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38).

Use of records during sentencing. — Juvenile records may be introduced during the sentencing phase of a trial. Burrell v. State, 258 Ga. 841, 376 S.E.2d 184 (1989) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38).

Out-of-state convictions for acts committed while the defendant was a juvenile could not be used as prior felony convictions for purposes of recidivist sentencing under O.C.G.A. § 17-10-7 because the defendant would not have been convicted of those felonies in this state, but would have been adjudicated delinquent. Miller v. State, 231 Ga. App. 869, 501 S.E.2d 42 (1998) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38).

Because juvenile court dispositions could be used in sentencing in felony offenses, and the records of dispositions and evidence were available to district attorneys, superior court judges, and the accused and could be used in the same manner as adult records, the trial court properly considered the defendant's juvenile court records in sentencing the defendant. Taylor v. State, 331 Ga. App. 577, 771 S.E.2d 224 (2015) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-79.1).

Use of adjudications to determine probation. — It is not unconstitutional to use juvenile-court adjudications to determine whether subsequent felony conviction should be probated. Brawner v. State, 250 Ga. 125, 296 S.E.2d 551 (1982) (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38).

Appeal of adjudication after disposition order expired was not moot. — Juvenile who appealed the juvenile's adjudication of delinquency after the disposition order had expired was not required to show adverse collateral consequences in the record in order to avoid a finding of mootness; such consequences were presumed based on the uses to which a prior adjudication of delinquency could be put. In the Interest of M. F., 305 Ga. 820, 828 S.E.2d 350 (2019).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-38, which was subsequently repealed but was succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Code section to be considered in deciding whether to permit inspection. — In determining whether to permit inspection of juvenile court records, a juvenile court judge should take former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-703) into account and determine whether the person seeking inspection of an individual's juvenile court records would be permitted to use those records "against" the individuals whose juvenile court records are sought. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-34 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38).

Psychological tests results may be used in later proceedings. — Results of psychological tests administered to juveniles appearing in the juvenile court may be computerized and used in later court proceedings, if appropriate safeguards to protect the confidentiality of the records are undertaken. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-25 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38).

Access to records by superior court judge. — Superior court judge is not entitled to have access to juvenile court records relating to a defendant before the judge in any hearing or proceeding prior to the defendant's conviction of a felony. 1986 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U86-36 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-38).

15-11-704. Public inspection of court files and records; use in subsequent juvenile or criminal prosecution.

(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) of this Code section and Code Sections 15-11-705 and 15-11-706, all files and records of the court in a proceeding under this chapter shall be open to inspection only upon order of the court.

(b) The general public shall be allowed to inspect court files and records for any proceeding that was open to the public pursuant to paragraphs (1) through (5) of subsection (b) of Code Section 15-11-700.

(c) A judge may permit authorized representatives of recognized organizations compiling statistics for proper purposes to inspect and make abstracts from official records under whatever conditions upon their use and distribution such judge may deem proper and may punish by contempt any violation of those conditions.

(d) A judge shall permit authorized representatives of DJJ, the Governor's Office for Children and Families, the Criminal Justice Coordinating Council, the Administrative Office of the Courts, and the Council of Juvenile Court Judges to inspect and extract data from any court files and records for the purpose of obtaining statistics on children and to make copies pursuant to the order of the court. Such data shall be used by the inspecting agency for official purposes and shall not be subject to release by such agency pursuant to Article 4 of Chapter 18 of Title 50, nor subject to subpoena.

(e) Except as otherwise provided in Code Sections 15-11-701 and 15-11-703, the complaint, petition, order of adjudication, and order of disposition in any delinquency case shall be disclosed upon request of the prosecuting attorney or the accused for use preliminarily to or in conjunction with a subsequent juvenile or criminal proceeding in a court of record.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Right to effective assistance of counsel and withholding inspection. — While former Code 1933, §§ 24A-3501 and 24A-3502 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-704 and 15-11-708) both require the consent of the court to inspect a juvenile's records and files, a juvenile's right to effective assistance of counsel limited the court's discretion to withhold such consent from counsel representing the juvenile in a "critically important" transfer proceeding. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3501).

Erroneous ruling if court limited access of defense counsel. — If the court granted defense counsel's motion pursuant to former Code 1933, §§ 24A-3501 and 24A-3502 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-704 and 15-11-708) but limited access to only those files and records of appellant which would be "used against" the juvenile concerned at the transfer hearing, to the extent that the appellant's counsel was not granted access to files and records of the appellant which were considered by the juvenile court in transferring jurisdiction, the ruling was erroneous. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3501).

Effect of limited access to materials. — While allowing counsel access to materials which will be "used against" a juvenile serves the defensive purpose of ensuring that any adverse material considered by the court will be subject to attack and refutation, it denies counsel the opportunity to examine, for the purpose of discovering and ensuring that proper and due consideration is given thereto, any material to be considered by the court which might serve as a reasonable ground for retaining, rather than transferring, jurisdiction. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3501).

Right to view records and files considered but not relied upon. — Not only are a juvenile and a juvenile's counsel entitled to know what information in the juvenile's records and files the court relied upon in the court's adverse decision to transfer jurisdiction, but the juvenile and counsel are also entitled to view those records and files considered but not relied upon by the juvenile judge. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3501).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24A-3501, and pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-58, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Requests to inspect should be denied except if specifically provided. — Legislature intended that requests to inspect court files and records in situations other than those that are specifically provided for in Ga. L. 1971, p. 709, § 1 should ordinarily be denied. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U76-7 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3501).

Considering former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-704) in the statute's entirety, it appears that the General Assembly intended that requests to inspect juvenile court files and records, in situations other than those that are specifically provided for in that section, should ordinarily be denied. 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-34 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Discretion of judge over inspection and copying of records. — Judge may as a matter of discretion release copies of files and records in any case in which the judge may permit inspection; however, a judge could in the judge's discretion permit inspection and still refuse to release copies, or the judge could impose conditions upon the use and distribution of copies. 1976 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U76-7 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3501).

Access to records by superior court judge. — Superior court judge is not entitled to have access to juvenile court records relating to a defendant before the judge in any hearing or proceeding prior to the defendant's conviction of a felony. 1986 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U86-36 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Court orders for the release of information should be written. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U87-18 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Conditions for release. — Juvenile court should only release information regarding a child's delinquency charges when disclosure is found to be in the child's own interest or otherwise mandated by the Constitution. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U87-18 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

Inspection by employees of adult parole and probation offices. — Pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-704), a juvenile court judge may, in the judge's discretion, permit employees of an adult probation office and an adult parole office to inspect juvenile court records, except in cases when those records have been sealed under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-61 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-701). 1981 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U81-34 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-58).

15-11-705. Child in need of services records; penalty for disclosure.

(a) Notwithstanding other provisions of this article, the court records of proceedings under Article 5 of this chapter shall be withheld from public inspection but shall be open to inspection by juvenile probation officers, community supervision officers, a child who is a party in a proceeding, his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian, such child's attorney, and others entrusted with the supervision of such child. Additional access to court records may be granted by court order.

(b) It shall be unlawful for any person to disclose court records, or any part thereof, to persons other than those entitled to access under subsection (a) of this Code section, except by court order. Any person who knowingly violates this subsection shall be guilty of contempt and the court may enter any order authorized by the provisions of Code Section 15-11-31.

15-11-706. Records for cases handled through informal adjustment, mediation, or other nonadjudicatory procedure; penalty for disclosure.

(a) When a decision is made to handle a case through informal adjustment, mediation, or other nonadjudicatory procedure, the juvenile court intake officer shall file with the court in the county in which a child legally resides all of the following information:

(1) The name, address, and date of birth of the child subject to informal adjustment, mediation, or other nonadjudicatory procedure;

(2) The act or offense for which such child was apprehended;

(3) The diversion decision made;

(4) The nature of such child's compliance with an informal adjustment agreement; and

(5) If an informal adjustment agreement is revoked, the fact of and reasons for the revocation.

(b) Notwithstanding subsection (a) of Code Section 15-11-701, the court in the county in which a child resides shall keep a separate record for such child which shall be open to the court, the prosecuting attorney, or an officer designated by the court only for the purpose of deciding whether to handle a subsequent case through informal adjustment, mediation, or other nonadjudicatory procedure or for use in disposition of a subsequent proceeding. Any person who knowingly violates this subsection shall be guilty of contempt and the court may enter any order authorized by the provisions of Code Section 15-11-31.

15-11-707. Notice to school superintendent.

Within 30 days of any proceeding in which a child is adjudicated for committing a delinquent act for a second or subsequent time or is adjudicated for committing a class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act, the court shall provide written notice to the school superintendent of the school in which such child is enrolled or his or her designee or, if the information is known, of the school in which such child plans to be enrolled at a future date. Such notice shall include the specific delinquent act or class A designated felony act or class B designated felony act such child committed.

15-11-708. Separation of juvenile and adult records for law enforcement; inspection; limited fingerprint access.

(a) Law enforcement records and files concerning a child shall be kept separate from the records and files of arrests of adults.

(b) Unless a charge of delinquency is transferred for criminal prosecution, the interest of national security requires, the case is one in which the general public may not be excluded from the hearings, or the court otherwise orders in the best interests of the child, the records and files shall not be open to public inspection nor shall their contents be disclosed to the public.

(c) Inspection of the records and files shall be permitted by:

(1) A juvenile court having a child before it in any proceeding;

(2) The attorney for a party to the proceedings, with the consent of the court;

(3) The officers of public institutions or agencies to whom a child is committed;

(4) Law enforcement officers and prosecuting attorneys of this state, the United States, or any other jurisdiction when necessary for the discharge of their official duties;

(5) A court in which a child is convicted of a criminal offense, for the purpose of a presentence report or other disposition proceeding;

(6) Officials of penal institutions and other penal facilities to which a child is committed; or

(7) A parole board in considering a child's parole or discharge or in exercising supervision over such child.

(d) The court shall allow authorized representatives of DJJ, the Governor's Office for Children and Families, the Criminal Justice Coordinating Council, the Administrative Office of the Courts, and the Council of Juvenile Court Judges to inspect and copy law enforcement records for the purpose of obtaining statistics on children. Such data shall be used by the inspecting agency for official purposes and shall not be subject to release by such agency pursuant to Article 4 of Chapter 18 of Title 50, nor subject to subpoena.

(e) Access to fingerprint records submitted to the Georgia Bureau of Investigation shall be limited to the administration of criminal justice purposes.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Right to effective assistance of counsel and right to inspect. — While former Code 1933, §§ 24A-2002 and 24A-2501 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-19, and 15-11-28) both required the consent of the court to inspect a juvenile's records and files, a juvenile's right to effective assistance of counsel limited the court's discretion to withhold such consent from counsel representing the juvenile in a "critically important" transfer proceeding under former Code 1933, § 24A-2501. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3502).

Right to view records and files considered but not relied upon. — Not only are a juvenile and the juvenile's counsel entitled to know what information in the juvenile's records and files the court relied upon in the juvenile court's adverse decision to transfer jurisdiction, but the juvenile and counsel are also entitled to view those records and files considered but not relied upon by the juvenile judge. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3502).

Erroneous ruling if court limited access of defense counsel. — If the court granted defense counsel's motion pursuant to former Code 1933, §§ 24A-2002 and 24A-2501 (see now

O.C.G.A. §§ 15-11-19 and 15-11-28) but limited access to only those files and records of appellant which would be "used against" the juvenile concerned at the transfer hearing, to the extent that appellant's counsel was not granted access to the files and records of appellant which were considered by the juvenile court in transferring jurisdiction, the ruling was erroneous. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3502).

Effect of limited access to materials. — While allowing counsel access to materials which will be "used against" a juvenile serves the defensive purpose of ensuring that any adverse material considered by the court will be subject to attack and refutation, it denies counsel the opportunity to examine, for the purpose of discovering and ensuring that proper and due consideration is given thereto, any material to be considered by the court which might serve as a "reasonable ground" for retaining, rather than transferring, jurisdiction. R.S. v. State, 156 Ga. App. 460, 274 S.E.2d 810 (1980) (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3502).

Appeal of adjudication after disposition order expired was not moot. — Juvenile who appealed the juvenile's adjudication of delinquency after the disposition order had expired was not required to show adverse collateral consequences in the record in order to avoid a finding of mootness; such consequences were presumed based on the uses to which a prior adjudication of delinquency could be put. In the Interest of M. F., 305 Ga. 820, 828 S.E.2d 350 (2019).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, opinions under former Code 1933, § 24A-3502, and pre-2000 Code Section 15-11-59, which were subsequently repealed but were succeeded by provisions in this Code section, are included in the annotations for this Code section. See the Editor's notes at the beginning of the chapter.

Psychological test results may be used in later proceedings. — Results of psychological tests administered to juveniles appearing in the juvenile court may be computerized and used in later court proceedings, if appropriate safeguards to protect the confidentiality of the records are undertaken. 1983 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U83-25 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-59).

Consent of court needed for access by parole board. — Consent of the court must be obtained on each individual to allow the State Board of Pardons and Paroles access to juvenile records, and if those records are sealed, the subject must petition the court to allow the board access to such records. 1978 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 78-76 (decided under former Code 1933, § 24A-3502).

Court records concerning juveniles prosecuted as adults. — Court records concerning juveniles should be afforded the same treatment as any other superior court records when the court retains exclusive jurisdiction over a case involving a juvenile 13 to 17 years of age who is accused of committing specified felonies. 1995 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U95-8 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-59).

Court orders for the release of information should be written. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U87-18 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-59).

Conditions for release. — Juvenile court should only release information regarding a child's delinquency charges when disclosure is found to be in the child's own interest or otherwise mandated by the Constitution. 1987 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U87-18 (decided under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-59).

15-11-709. Preservation and destruction of records; computer retrieval.

(a) Subject to the earlier sealing of certain records pursuant to Code Section 15-11-701, the juvenile court shall make and keep records of all cases brought before it and shall preserve the records pertaining to a child in accordance with the common records retention schedules for courts approved by the State Records Committee pursuant to Code Section 50-18-92.

(b) Thereafter, the court may destroy such records, except that the records of cases in which a court terminates the parental rights of a parent and the records of cases involving a petition for legitimation of a child shall be preserved permanently.

(c) The juvenile court shall make official minutes consisting of all petitions and orders filed in a case and any other pleadings, certificates, proofs of publication, summonses, warrants, and other writs which may be filed and shall make social records consisting of records of investigation and treatment and other confidential information.

(d) Identification data shall be maintained and shall be disseminated to criminal justice officials for official judicial enforcement or criminal justice purposes as provided in Code Section 35-3-33.

(e) Nothing in this chapter shall restrict or otherwise prohibit a juvenile court clerk from electing to store for computer retrieval any or all records, dockets, indexes, or files; nor shall a juvenile court clerk be prohibited from combining or consolidating any books, dockets, files, or indexes in connection with the filing for record of papers of the kind specified in this chapter or any other law, provided that any automated or computerized record-keeping method or system shall provide for the systematic and safe preservation and retrieval of all books, dockets, records, or indexes. When the clerk of a juvenile court elects to store for computer retrieval any or all records, the same data elements used in a manual system shall be used, and the same integrity and security shall be maintained.

15-11-710. Exchange of information.

(a) As used in this Code section, the term "governmental entity" shall mean the court, superior court, DJJ, DBHDD, DFACS, county departments of family and children services, or public schools, as such term is defined in Code Section 16-11-35.

(b) Governmental entities and state, county, municipal, or consolidated government departments, boards, or agencies shall exchange with each other all information not held as confidential pursuant to federal law and relating to a child which may aid a governmental entity in the assessment, treatment, intervention, or rehabilitation of a child, notwithstanding Code Section 15-1-15, 15-1-19, 15-11-40, 15-11-70, 15-11-105, 15-11-170, 15-11-264, 15-11-541, 15-11-542, 15-11-603, 15-11-708, 15-11-709, 15-11-744, 20-2-751.2, 20-14-40, 24-12-10, 24-12-11, 24-12-20, 26-4-5, 26-4-80, 26-5-17, 31-5-5, 31-33-6, 37-1-53, 37-2-9.1, 42-5-36, 42-8-40, 42-8-109.2, 49-5-40, 49-5-41, 49-5-41.1, 49-5-44, or 49-5-45, in order to serve the best interests of such child. Information which is shared pursuant to this subsection shall not be utilized to assist in the prosecution of a child in juvenile, superior, or state court or utilized to the detriment of such child.

(c) Information released pursuant to this Code section shall not change or rescind the confidential nature of such information and such information shall not be subject to public disclosure or inspection unless otherwise provided by law.

15-11-720. Conditions under which emancipation may occur.

(a) Emancipation may occur by operation of law or pursuant to a petition filed with the court as provided in this article by a child who is at least 16 years of age.

(b) An emancipation occurs by operation of law:

(1) When a child is validly married;

(2) When a child reaches the age of 18 years; or

(3) During the period when a child is on active duty with the armed forces of the United States.

(c) An emancipation occurs by court order pursuant to a petition filed by a child with the juvenile court.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-720, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-721. Petition requirements.

(a) A child seeking emancipation shall file a petition for emancipation in the juvenile court in the county where such child resides. The petition shall be signed and verified by the petitioner and shall include:

(1) The petitioner's full name and birth date and the county and state where the petitioner was born;

(2) A certified copy of the petitioner's birth certificate;

(3) The name and last known address of the petitioner's parent, guardian, or legal custodian and, if no parent, guardian, or legal custodian can be found, the name and address of the petitioner's nearest living relative residing within this state;

(4) The petitioner's present address and length of residency at that address;

(5) A declaration by the petitioner demonstrating the ability to manage his or her financial affairs together with any information necessary to support the declaration;

(6) A declaration by the petitioner demonstrating the ability to manage his or her personal and social affairs together with any information necessary to support the declaration; and

(7) The names of individuals who have personal knowledge of the petitioner's circumstances and believe that under those circumstances emancipation is in the best interests of the petitioner. Such individuals may include any of the following:

(A) A licensed physician, physician assistant, or osteopath;

(B) A registered professional nurse or licensed practical nurse;

(C) A licensed psychologist;

(D) A licensed professional counselor, social worker, or marriage and family therapist;

(E) A school guidance counselor, school social worker, or school psychologist;

(F) A school administrator, school principal, or school teacher;

(G) A member of the clergy;

(H) A law enforcement officer; or

(I) An attorney.

(b) If the petition provided for under subsection (a) of this Code section is based on the petitioner's desire to enter into a valid marriage, the petitioner shall:

(1) Be at least 17 years of age;

(2) In addition to the requirements provided for under subsection (a) of this Code section, include in such petition the name, age, date of birth, and address of residence of the intended spouse;

(3) Include a statement of the reasons why the petitioner desires to marry, how the parties came to know each other, and how long they have known each other; and

(4) Attach copies of any criminal records of either party to be married and of any family violence or stalking protective order issued to protect or restrain either party to be married.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-721, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2019, p. 558, § 2-1/HB 228.

The 2019 amendment, effective July 1, 2019, designated the existing provisions as subsection (a); deleted the comma following "petitioner" in the second sentence of the introductory language of subsection (a); and added subsection (b).

15-11-722. Summons, answer, and time limitations.

(a) Upon filing the petition, a copy of the petition for emancipation and a summons to appear at the hearing shall be served on all persons named in the petition and upon any individual who provided an affidavit for the emancipation.

(b) A person served with a petition may file an answer in the juvenile court in which the petition was filed within 30 days of being served.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-722, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-723. Appointment of attorney and guardian ad litem; affidavits of adults supporting emancipation.

(a) After a petition for emancipation is filed, the court shall appoint an attorney for the petitioner and may:

(1) Appoint a guardian ad litem to investigate the allegations of the petition and to file a report with the court, including a recommendation as to whether it is in the best interests of the petitioner that the petition for emancipation be granted; and

(2) Appoint an attorney for the petitioner's parent, guardian, or legal custodian if he or she is an indigent person and if he or she opposes the petition.

(b) After a petition for emancipation is filed, the court shall seek an affidavit from each person identified in the petition pursuant to paragraph (7) of subsection (a) of Code Section 15-11-721 that describes why that person believes the petitioner should be emancipated.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-723, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2019, p. 558, § 2-2/HB 228.

The 2019 amendment, effective July 1, 2019, inserted "shall appoint an attorney for the petitioner and" in the introductory language of subsection (a); added "and" at the end of paragraph (a)(1); deleted former paragraph (a)(2), which read: "Appoint an attorney for the petitioner; and"; redesignated former paragraph (a)(3) as present paragraph (a)(2); and inserted "subsection (a) of" in the middle of subsection (b).

15-11-724. Standard of proof.

A child who petitions the court for emancipation shall have the burden of showing that emancipation should be ordered by a preponderance of evidence.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-724, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-725. Emancipation hearing; findings.

(a)(1) Except as provided for in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the court shall issue an emancipation order if, after a hearing, it determines that emancipation is in the best interests of the child and such child has established:

(A) That his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian does not object to the petition; or, if a parent, guardian, or legal custodian objects to the petition, that the best interests of the child are served by allowing the emancipation to occur by court order;

(B) That he or she is a resident of this state;

(C) That he or she has demonstrated the ability to manage his or her financial affairs, including proof of employment or other means of support. "Other means of support" shall not include general assistance or aid received from means-tested public assistance programs such as Temporary Assistance for Needy Families as provided in Article 9 of Chapter 4 of Title 49 or similar programs under Title IV-A of the federal Social Security Act;

(D) That he or she has the ability to manage his or her personal and social affairs, including, but not limited to, proof of housing; and

(E) That he or she understands his or her rights and responsibilities under this article as an emancipated child.

(2) If the court finds that the petition for emancipation is based upon the petitioner's desire to enter into a valid marriage, the court shall not issue an emancipation order if the court further finds that:

(A) The petitioner is being compelled to marry against the petitioner's will by force, fraud, or coercion;

(B) The petitioner is younger than 17 years of age, or the age difference between the parties is more than four years;

(C) The intended spouse was or is in a position of authority or special trust as defined in Code Section 16-6-5.1 in relation to the petitioner;

(D) The intended spouse has been convicted of or entered into a diversion program for a crime against a person under Chapter 5 of Title 16 that involves an act of violence or includes a child victim or is for a crime defined as a sexual offense under Chapter 6 of Title 16;

(E) There is a preponderance of evidence that the petitioner was the victim and the intended spouse was the perpetrator of statutory rape as defined in Code Section 16-6-3;

(F) The intended spouse has previously been enjoined by a family violence or stalking protective order, regardless of whether or not the person to be protected by the order was the petitioner; or

(G) The intended marriage is not in the best interests of the petitioner. A past or current pregnancy of the petitioner or the intended spouse or the wishes of the parents or legal guardians of the petitioner may be considered by the court, but shall not alone or together be sufficient evidence to determine the best interests of the minor.

(b) If the court issues an emancipation order, the court shall retain a copy of the order until the emancipated child becomes 25 years of age.

(c) An emancipation obtained by fraud is voidable. Voiding an emancipation order shall not affect an obligation, responsibility, right, or interest that arose during the period of time the order was in effect.

(d) A child or his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian may appeal the court's grant or denial of an emancipation petition.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-725, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2019, p. 558, § 2-3/HB 228.

The 2019 amendment, effective July 1, 2019, designated the existing provisions of the introductory paragraph of subsection (a) as paragraph (a)(1); substituted "Except as provided for in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the" for "The" at the beginning of paragraph (a)(1); redesignated former paragraphs (a)(1) through (a)(5) as present subparagraphs (a)(1)(A) through (a)(1)(E), respectively; and added paragraph (a)(2).

U.S. Code. — Title IV-A of the federal Social Security Act, referred to in this Code section, is codified at 42 U.S.C. § 601 et seq.

15-11-726. Rescission of emancipation order.

(a) A child emancipated by court order may petition the juvenile court that issued the emancipation order to rescind such order.

(b) A copy of the petition for rescission and a summons shall be served on the petitioner's parent, guardian, or legal custodian.

(c) The court shall grant the petition and rescind the order of emancipation if it finds:

(1) That the petitioner is an indigent person and has no means of support;

(2) That the petitioner and the petitioner's parent, guardian, or legal custodian agree that the order should be rescinded; or

(3) That there is a resumption of family relations inconsistent with the existing emancipation order.

(d) If a petition for rescission is granted, the court shall issue an order rescinding the emancipation order and retain a copy of the order until the petitioner becomes 25 years of age.

(e) Rescission of an emancipation order shall not alter any contractual obligations or rights or any property rights or interests that arose during the period of time that the emancipation order was in effect.

(f) A child or his or her parent, guardian, or legal custodian may appeal the court's grant or denial of a petition for rescission of an emancipation order. The appeal shall be filed in the Court of Appeals.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-726, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-727. Rights of emancipated child; limitations of parental obligations.

(a) A child emancipated by operation of law or by court order shall be considered to have the rights and responsibilities of an adult, except for those specific constitutional and statutory age requirements regarding voting, use of alcoholic beverages, and other health and safety regulations relevant to a child because of his or her age. The rights of a child to receive any transfer of property or money pursuant to "The Georgia Transfers to Minors Act" under Article 5 of Chapter 5 of Title 44; under the Uniform Transfers to Minors Act, the Uniform Gift to Minors Act, or other substantially similar act of another state; or pursuant to a trust agreement shall not be affected by a declaration of an emancipation under this article.

(b) A child shall be considered emancipated for the purposes of, but not limited to:

(1) The right to enter into enforceable contracts, including apartment leases;

(2) The right to sue or be sued in his or her own name;

(3) The right to retain his or her own earnings;

(4) The right to establish a separate domicile;

(5) The right to act autonomously, and with the rights and responsibilities of an adult, in all business relationships, including but not limited to property transactions and obtaining accounts for utilities, except for those estate or property matters that the court determines may require a conservator or guardian ad litem;

(6) The right to earn a living, subject only to the health and safety regulations designed to protect those under the age of 18 regardless of their legal status;

(7) The right to authorize his or her own preventive health care, medical care, dental care, and mental health care, without parental knowledge or liability;

(8) The right to apply for a driver's license or other state licenses for which he or she might be eligible;

(9) The right to register for school;

(10) The right to apply for medical assistance programs and for other welfare assistance, if needed;

(11) The right, if a parent, to make decisions and give authority in caring for his or her own minor child; and

(12) The right to make a will.

(c) A parent, guardian, or legal custodian of a child emancipated by court order shall not be liable for any debts incurred by his or her child during the period of emancipation.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-727, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-728. Duty to support; ability to marry.

(a) The duty to provide support for a child shall continue until an emancipation order is granted.

(b) A child emancipated under this article shall not be considered a dependent child.

(c) The provisions set forth in Code Section 19-3-2 regarding age limitations to contract for marriage shall apply to a child who has become emancipated under this article.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-728, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

ARTICLE 11

GEORGIA CHILD ADVOCATE FOR THE PROTECTION OF CHILDREN ACT

15-11-740. Short title; purpose.

(a) This article shall be known and may be cited as the "Georgia Child Advocate for the Protection of Children Act."

(b) In keeping with this article's purpose of assisting, protecting, and restoring the security of children whose well-being is threatened, it is the intent of the General Assembly that the mission of protection of the children of this state should have the greatest legislative and executive priority. Recognizing that the needs of children must be attended to in a timely manner and that more aggressive action should be taken to protect children from abuse and neglect, the General Assembly creates the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children to provide independent oversight of persons, organizations, and agencies responsible for providing services to or caring for children who are victims of child abuse and neglect or whose domestic situation requires intervention by the state. The Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children will provide children with an avenue through which to seek relief when their rights are violated by state officials and agents entrusted with their protection and care.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-740, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-741. Definitions.

As used in this article, the term:

(1) "Advocate" or "child advocate" means the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children established under Code Section 15-11-742.

(2) "Agency" shall have the same meaning and application as provided for in paragraph (1) of subsection (a) of Code Section 50-14-1.

(3) "Child" or "children" means an individual receiving protective services from DFCS, for whom DFCS has an open case file, or who has been, or whose siblings, parents, or other caretakers have been, the subject of a report to DFCS within the previous five years.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-741, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-742. Creation of the Office of Child Advocate for the Protection of Children; staff and personnel; contracts.

(a) There is created the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children. The Governor, by executive order, shall create a nominating committee which shall consider nominees for the position of the advocate and shall make a recommendation to the Governor. Such person shall have knowledge of the child welfare system, the juvenile justice system, and the legal system and shall be qualified by training and experience to perform the duties of the office as set forth in this article.

(b) The advocate shall be appointed by the Governor from a list of at least three names submitted by the nominating committee for a term of three years and until his or her successor is appointed and qualified and may be reappointed. The salary of the advocate shall not be less than $60,000.00 per year, shall be fixed by the Governor, and shall come from funds appropriated for the purposes of the advocate.

(c) The Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children shall be assigned to the Office of Planning and Budget for administrative purposes only, as described in Code Section 50-4-3.

(d) The advocate may appoint such staff as may be deemed necessary to effectively fulfill the purposes of this article, within the limitations of the funds available for the purposes of the advocate. The duties of the staff may include the duties and powers of the advocate if performed under the direction of the advocate. The advocate and his or her staff shall receive such reimbursement for travel and other expenses as is normally allowed to state employees from funds appropriated for the purposes of the advocate.

(e) The advocate shall have the authority to contract with experts in fields including but not limited to medicine, psychology, education, child development, juvenile justice, mental health, and child welfare as needed to support the work of the advocate, utilizing funds appropriated for the purposes of the advocate.

(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of state law, the advocate shall act independently of any state official, department, or agency in the performance of his or her duties.

(g) The advocate or his or her designee shall be a member of the Georgia Child Fatality Review Panel.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-742, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-743. Duties of advocate.

The advocate shall perform the following duties:

(1) Identify, receive, investigate, and seek the resolution or referral of complaints made by or on behalf of children concerning any act, omission to act, practice, policy, or procedure of an agency or any contractor or agent thereof that may adversely affect the health, safety, or welfare of the children;

(2) Refer complaints involving abused children to appropriate regulatory and law enforcement agencies;

(3) Report the death of any child to the chairperson of the review committee, as such term is defined in Code Section 19-15-1, for the county in which such child resided at the time of death, unless the advocate has knowledge that such death has been reported by the county medical examiner or coroner, pursuant to Code Section 19-15-3, and to provide such committee access to any records of the advocate relating to such child;

(4) Provide periodic reports on the work of the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children, including but not limited to an annual written report for the Governor and the General Assembly and other persons, agencies, and organizations deemed appropriate. Such reports shall include recommendations for changes in policies and procedures to improve the health, safety, and welfare of children and shall be made expeditiously in order to timely influence public policy;

(5) Establish policies and procedures necessary for the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children to accomplish the purposes of this article, including without limitation providing DFCS with a form of notice of availability of the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children. Such notice shall be posted prominently, by DFCS, in DFCS offices and in facilities receiving public moneys for the care and placement of children and shall include information describing the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children and procedures for contacting such office; and

(6) Convene quarterly meetings with organizations, agencies, and individuals who work in the area of child protection to seek opportunities to collaborate and improve the status of children in Georgia.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-743, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242; Ga. L. 2014, p. 34, § 2-2/SB 365.

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2014, p. 34, § 2-1/SB 365, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "This part shall be known and may be cited as the 'Journey Ann Cowart Act.'"

Ga. L. 2014, p. 34, § 2-9/SB 365, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "It is the intent of the General Assembly to provide for transparency relative to investigations involving child abuse and child fatalities in order to best protect the children of this state. The General Assembly finds that more disclosure of information may be necessary when a child is deceased. The General Assembly intends that agencies and departments of this state share data in order to conduct research for the purpose of preventing child fatalities in this state."

15-11-744. Rights and powers of advocate; subpoena; judicial actions.

(a) The advocate shall have the following rights and powers:

(1) To communicate privately, by mail or orally, with any child and with each child's parent, guardian, or legal custodian;

(2) To have access to all records and files of DFCS concerning or relating to a child, and to have access, including the right to inspect, copy, and subpoena records held by clerks of the various courts, law enforcement agencies, service providers, including medical and mental health, and institutions, public or private, with whom a particular child has been either voluntarily or otherwise placed for care or from whom the child has received treatment within this state. To the extent any such information provides the names and addresses of individuals who are the subject of any confidential proceeding or statutory confidentiality provisions, such names and addresses or related information that has the effect of identifying such individuals shall not be released to the public without the consent of such individuals. The Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children shall be bound by all confidentiality safeguards provided in Code Sections 49-5-40 and 49-5-44. Anyone wishing to obtain records held by the Office of the Child Advocate shall petition the original agency of record where such records exist;

(3) To enter and inspect any and all institutions, facilities, and residences, public and private, where a child has been placed by a court or DFCS and is currently residing. Upon entering such a place, the advocate shall notify the administrator or, in the absence of the administrator, the person in charge of the facility, before speaking to any children. After notifying the administrator or the person in charge of the facility, the advocate may communicate privately and confidentially with children in the facility, individually or in groups, or the advocate may inspect the physical plant. To the extent possible, entry and investigation provided by this Code section shall be conducted in a manner which will not significantly disrupt the provision of services to children;

(4) To apply to the Governor to bring legal action in the nature of a writ of mandamus or application for injunction pursuant to Code

Section 45-15-18 to require an agency to take or refrain from taking any action required or prohibited by law involving the protection of children;

(5) To apply for and accept grants, gifts, and bequests of funds from other states, federal and interstate agencies, independent authorities, private firms, individuals, and foundations for the purpose of carrying out the lawful responsibilities of the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children;

(6) When less formal means of resolution do not achieve appropriate results, to pursue remedies provided by this article on behalf of children for the purpose of effectively carrying out the provisions of this article; and

(7) To engage in programs of public education and legislative advocacy concerning the needs of children requiring the intervention, protection, and supervision of courts and state and county agencies.

(b)(1) Upon issuance by the advocate of a subpoena in accordance with this article for law enforcement investigative records concerning an ongoing investigation, the subpoenaed party may move a court with appropriate jurisdiction to quash such subpoena.

(2) The court shall order a hearing on the motion to quash within five days of the filing of the motion to quash, and the hearing may be continued for good cause shown by any party or by the court on its own motion. Subject to any right to an open hearing in contempt proceedings, such hearing shall be closed to the extent necessary to prevent disclosure of the identity of a confidential source; disclosure of confidential investigative or prosecution material which would endanger the life or physical safety of any person or persons; or disclosure of the existence of confidential surveillance, investigation, or grand jury materials or testimony in an ongoing criminal investigation or prosecution. Records, motions, and orders relating to a motion to quash shall be kept sealed by the court to the extent and for the time necessary to prevent public disclosure of such matters, materials, evidence, or testimony.

(c) The court shall, at or before the time specified in the subpoena for compliance therewith, enter an order:

(1) Enforcing the subpoena as issued;

(2) Quashing or modifying the subpoena if it is unreasonable and oppressive; or

(3) Conditioning enforcement of the subpoena on the advocate maintaining confidential any evidence, testimony, or other information obtained from law enforcement or prosecution sources pursuant to the subpoena until the time the criminal investigation and prosecution are concluded. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, an investigation or prosecution shall be deemed to be concluded when the information becomes subject to public inspection pursuant to Code Section 50-18-72. The court shall include in its order written findings of fact and conclusions of law.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-744, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-745. Discrimination or retaliation prohibited against persons making complaints or providing information.

(a) No person shall discriminate or retaliate in any manner against any child, parent, guardian, or legal custodian of a child, employee of a facility, agency, institution or other type of provider, or any other person because of the making of a complaint or providing of information in good faith to the advocate or willfully interfere with the advocate in the performance of his or her official duties.

(b) Any person violating subsection (a) of this Code section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-745, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-746. Investigation of complaints.

The advocate shall be authorized to request an investigation by the Georgia Bureau of Investigation of any complaint of criminal misconduct involving a child.

History. — Code 1981, § 15-11-746, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 294, § 1-1/HB 242.

15-11-747. Child advocate advisory committee; membership; role of committee.

(a) There is established a Child Advocate Advisory Committee. The advisory committee shall consist of:

(1) One representative of a not for profit children's agency appointed by the Governor;

(2) One representative of a for profit children's agency appointed by the Lieutenant Governor;

(3) One pediatrician appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives;

(4) One social worker with experience and knowledge of child protective services who is not employed by the state appointed by the Governor;

(5) One psychologist appointed by the Lieutenant Governor;

(6) One attorney from the Children and the Courts Committee of the State Bar of Georgia appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives; and

(7) One juvenile court judge appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Each member of the advisory committee shall serve a two-year term and until the appointment and qualification of such member's successor. Appointments to fill vacancies in such offices shall be filled in the same manner as the original appointment.

(b) The advisory committee shall meet a minimum of three times a year with the advocate and his or her staff to review and assess the following:

(1) Patterns of treatment and service for children;

(2) Policy implications; and

(3) Necessary systemic improvements.

The advisory committee shall also provide for an annual evaluation of the effectiveness of the Office of the Child Advocate for the Protection of Children.
