There is no authority for a codefendant to become the beneficiary of a dismissal under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 merely because of a failure of the plaintiff to comply with the other co-defendant's discovery actions. Singleton v. Eastern Carriers, Inc., 192 Ga. App. 227, 384 S.E.2d 202 (1989); West v. Equifax Credit Info. Servs., Inc., 230 Ga. App. 41, 495 S.E.2d 300 (1998); Barrego v. OHM Remediation Servs. Corp., 245 Ga. App. 389, 537 S.E.2d 774 (2000).

Trial court erred in finding two guarantors in contempt and ordering the guarantors' incarceration for failing to comply with a post-judgment discovery order without affording the guarantors notice and an opportunity to be heard, in violation of the grantors' due process rights. Harrell v. Fed. Nat'l Payables, Inc., 284 Ga. App. 395, 643 S.E.2d 875 (2007).

Intentional false response in negligence action resulted in sanctions. — In a negligence suit wherein a train patron was attacked and raped while exiting a train station, a trial court properly struck a public transportation authority's answer for the authority's intentionally false response regarding the creation and maintenance of the documents that would have reflected the security officers' activities during the relevant shifts. The evidence established that the authority intentionally destroyed the logs of the security officers then represented to the train patron and the trial court that the documents did not exist. MARTA v. Doe, 292 Ga. App. 532, 664 S.E.2d 893 (2008).

False response equivalent to failure to respond and justified sanctions. — An intentionally false response to a document production request, particularly concerning a pivotal issue in the litigation, authorizes a trial court to impose the sanctions permitted by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 for a total failure to respond. MARTA v. Doe, 292 Ga. App. 532, 664 S.E.2d 893 (2008).

Ex parte communications. — Because a patient provided an authorization form that did not in any way restrict discussions between defense counsel and the patient's former treating physicians, the trial court did not err by denying the patient's O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 motion for sanctions based upon ex parte communications between the doctor's attorney and a cardiologist in violation of the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996, 42 U.S.C. § 1320d et seq. Hamilton v. Shumpert, 299 Ga. App. 137, 682 S.E.2d 159 (2009).

No error in reopening discovery as a sanction. — Trial court did not err in reopening discovery as a sanction for a passenger's conduct pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 because it was well within the trial court's discretion to reopen discovery to provide the employer with an opportunity to fully explore the relevant aspects of the employer's defense; moreover, there was evidence to support the trial court's finding as to the lack of completeness and veracity in the passenger's deposition and discovery responses. Mincey v. Ga. Dep't of Cmty. Affairs, 308 Ga. App. 740, 708 S.E.2d 644 (2011).

Motion to compel arbitration properly denied. — In a class action suit seeking to hold a lender liable for payday loans, the trial court properly ruled that the lender could not compel arbitration and denying the lender's motion to compel as moot because the trial court's earlier ruling striking the lender's arbitration defense as a discovery violation sanction was an adjudication on the merits and carried a res judicata effect. Ga. Cash Am. v. Greene, 318 Ga. App. 355, 734 S.E.2d 67 (2012).

Award of attorney fees proper when needless expenses incurred. — In awarding attorney fees to the appellees under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-37 and 9-15-14 after an appellant voluntarily dismissed the appellant's lawsuit, the trial court did not violate the legislative intent behind O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a). The appellees incurred needless expense because of the appellant's discovery violations, and the litigation was unnecessarily expanded prior to the appellant's voluntary dismissal. Hart v. Redmond Reg'l Med. Ctr., 300 Ga. App. 641, 686 S.E.2d 130 (2009).

Order Compelling Discovery

Party "refuses to obey" an order simply by failing to comply therewith. Millholland v. Oglesby, 114 Ga. App. 745, 152 S.E.2d 761 (1966), rev'd on other grounds, 223 Ga. 230, 154 S.E.2d 194 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2111).

Motion to compel not required for sanctions. — Because the filing of a motion to compel is not a condition precedent for seeking sanctions under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d)(1), the court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court granted the defendant's motion to dismiss based on the plaintiff's failure to produce the requested documents. Deep South Constr., Inc. v. Slack, 248 Ga. App. 183, 546 S.E.2d 302 (2001).

Factors in determining whether to enter order of production. — While admissibility is a matter to be determined when records, documents, etc., are tendered in evidence, and is not a test for determining whether an order requiring production should be entered, pertinence or relevance is. Horton v. Huie, 113 Ga. App. 166, 147 S.E.2d 669 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

Refusal to order production of irrelevant material proper. — When it appears from an inspection of the notice to produce that the records and documents sought are not relevant to the issues before the court, it is not error to refuse an order for their production. Horton v. Huie, 113 Ga. App. 166, 147 S.E.2d 669 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2109).

Applicability of paragraph (a)(3) of this section is confusing, and renders the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) inconsistent with the federal rules. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

As to interpretation of Federal Rule 37(a)(3) to mean that trial court may order a complete answer if an evasive answer is given, just as if no answer were given, but not to authorize the entry of a penalty under Federal Rule 37(d) for an evasive answer, see Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

An inadequate response to an order to compel answers to interrogatories is not to be treated under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 as a total failure to respond under subsection (d) so as to authorize a dismissal of the complaint under subsection (d). Rivers v. Goodson, 184 Ga. App. 70, 360 S.E.2d 740 (1987).

Treatment of partial or evasive answers. — Answering partially or giving evasive answers evidences a dispute between the parties, which is brought before the trial court by a motion under subsection (a) of this section to compel discovery, and is resolved through an order to compel answers or a protective order. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

When party answering interrogatories for corporation was not qualified to speak as its agent, the court could have issued an order under subsection (a) of this section, and it was error to strike the defendant's response and enter a default judgment, treating the defendant's inadequate answer as a total failure to make an initial response under subsection (d). Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

To prevent either party from frivolously propounding questions or giving evasive answers, the trial court must require the losing party to pay the expenses involved in obtaining the order, including attorney fees, unless the court feels that opposition to the motion was substantially justified or otherwise excused. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Expenses of motion. — Trial court had the power under subparagraph (a)(4)(A) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 to award the attorney fees incurred by the plaintiffs as a result of the defendant's erroneous denial of the existence of relevant documents as though awarding attorney fees in connection with a successful motion to compel. Orkin Exterminating Co. v. McIntosh, 215 Ga. App. 587, 452 S.E.2d 159 (1994).

Award of expenses must have been made pursuant to paragraph (a)(4) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 as "the reasonable expenses incurred in obtaining the order." Department of Transp. v. Hardaway Co., 216 Ga. App. 262, 454 S.E.2d 167 (1995).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 requires the court to give a party an opportunity to be heard before costs are imposed on a motion to compel. Gomez v. Peters, 221 Ga. App. 57, 470 S.E.2d 692 (1996).

Because the defendant claimed to not have items sought in a request for production, and then claimed to have the items and would produce the items, but then could not find the items, it was reasonable for the trial court to allow discovery to ascertain the fate of the items and to cast the costs on the defendant. City of Griffin v. Jackson, 239 Ga. App. 374, 520 S.E.2d 510 (1999).

Superior court did not err in failing to consider a wife's request for attorney fees and to award fees to the wife on the ground that the husband refused to comply with the discovery and/or there was a substantial disparity in the parties' financial circumstances because the wife did not pursue her motion to compel discovery but instead opted to obtain sought documents from third parties; therefore, an award of expenses for bringing the motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(a)(4) was not warranted. Jones-Shaw v. Shaw, 291 Ga. 252, 728 S.E.2d 646 (2012).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by denying the plaintiff's motion for attorney fees, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37, because although the trial court denied the defendant's motion to compel, the parties entered into a consent order resolving their discovery disputes, and the trial court specifically found that the making of the defendant's motion to compel discovery was substantially justified and an award of expenses would be unjust. Artson, LLC v. Hudson, 322 Ga. App. 859, 747 S.E.2d 68 (2013).

Court did not abuse discretion in charging answering party $100.00 in attorney's fees when the answering party returned interrogatories with some evasive and incomplete responses, notwithstanding the fact that the answering party was acting pro se and the defective answers were not purposeful, but were due to ineptness and ignorance of the law. Stephens v. Howle, 132 Ga. App. 92, 207 S.E.2d 632 (1974).

Post-judgment interrogatories. — Direct appeal of an order to respond to post-judgment interrogatories is improper since such an order is not final. It is appealable only by compliance with subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34. Cornelius v. Finley, 204 Ga. App. 299, 418 S.E.2d 815 (1992).

Orders denying or requiring answers to interrogatories are reviewable on appeal after final judgment if the orders have affected the final judgment and are not moot. Benefield v. Malone, 110 Ga. App. 607, 139 S.E.2d 500 (1964), later appeal, 112 Ga. App. 408, 145 S.E.2d 732 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2111).

Order as final adjudication subject to review. — When the plaintiff contends that it is impossible for the plaintiff to comply with an order which stays the proceeding until the plaintiff appears in order to depose, such an order effectively terminates the plaintiff's right to trial and is a final adjudication subject to review. Millholland v. Oglesby, 223 Ga. 230, 154 S.E.2d 194 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2111). For comment, see 4 Ga. St. B.J. 392 (1968).

Order compelling discovery not condition precedent to sanctions. — When a defendant wilfully, knowingly, falsely, consistently, and unequivocally denies the existence of requested discoverable documents, the plaintiff is not required to obtain an order compelling discovery before seeking sanctions under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d)(1). Howard v. Alegria, 321 Ga. App. 178, 739 S.E.2d 95 (2013).

Failure to Comply with Order

Discretion of court. — By subparagraph (b)(2)(C) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37, the courts are specifically granted the discretion to dismiss complaints or to render default judgments against disobedient parties, including those disobeying an order to produce. Sellers v. Nodvin, 207 Ga. App. 742, 429 S.E.2d 138 (1993).

Imposition of lesser sanctions than dismissal and default was not an abuse of discretion since there was no evidence that the defendant's failure to comply with the court's earlier orders compelling the defendant's complete response to the plaintiff's discovery requests was the result of intent or ill will. Yarbrough v. Kirkland, 249 Ga. App. 523, 548 S.E.2d 670 (2001).

In a negligence suit involving the death of an individual in an automobile collision, a trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by precluding an auto manufacturer from contesting certain issues at trial based on the auto manufacturer's failure to follow the trial court's order to produce crash tests results documentation from prior litigation as the trial court held a hearing in which the auto manufacturer had the opportunity to explain the continued refusal to produce the documents and, instead of imposing the ultimate sanction of dismissal or default judgment for failure to comply with discovery, the trial court instead concluded that the willful disobedience was subject to the lesser sanction of issue preclusion. Ford Motor Co. v. Gibson, 283 Ga. 398, 659 S.E.2d 346 (2008).

Court may impose sanctions for failure to comply with post-judgment discovery orders, including contempt for not appearing at a deposition, notwithstanding the fact that the person to be deposed is a nonresident, although there is apparently no provision for the aggrieved party to move for a dismissal of an appeal. Ostroff v. Coyner, 187 Ga. App. 109, 369 S.E.2d 298 (1988).

Discovery sanction not directly appealable. — In a civil suit, an appellate court properly dismissed an appeal of an order finding the appellants in contempt for violating a discovery order and that dismissed the answer and entered a default judgment as to liability as the order was not directly appealable as a contempt judgment under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a)(2) since the order did not impose a civil or criminal contempt sanction but rather imposed a discovery sanction under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b)(2)(C). Am. Med. Sec. Group, Inc. v. Parker, 284 Ga. 102, 663 S.E.2d 697 (2008).

Attorney fees imposed. — Trial court did not err in ordering the non party object of post-judgment discovery to pay reasonable attorney fees as a sanction for the need to bring a motion to compel that post-judgment discovery after a paper hearing on the plaintiff's motion. Esasky v. Forrest, 231 Ga. App. 488, 499 S.E.2d 413 (1998).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in awarding an assistant professor attorney fees as prayed for in the professor's motion for a protective order because an award of fees was authorized by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(a)(4)(A). Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga. v. Ambati, 299 Ga. App. 804, 685 S.E.2d 719 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0086, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 34 (Ga. 2010).

Award of sanctions in the form of attorney fees against a heating system installer that failed to produce an officer for deposition, despite a court order, was proper under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b)(2), as the sanctions were proper despite the fact that there was no order under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(a) or O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26(c), the failure to appear was not substantially justified, and the amount awarded was not excessive. Carrier Corp. v. Rollins, Inc., 316 Ga. App. 630, 730 S.E.2d 103 (2012).

Court retained jurisdiction after remand. — Before an appellate court reversed the trial court's denial of summary judgment to the defendant, the trial court had found that the defendant had abused the discovery process; as the trial court had expressly reserved the issue of sanctions for later determination, the court had jurisdiction, after remand, to award the plaintiff's attorney's fees under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d). CSX Transp., Inc. v. Deen, 278 Ga. App. 845, 630 S.E.2d 119 (2006).

Party "refuses to obey" an order simply by failing to comply therewith. Millholland v. Oglesby, 114 Ga. App. 745, 152 S.E.2d 761 (1966), rev'd on other grounds, 223 Ga. 230, 154 S.E.2d 194 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2111).

Court has discretion as to consequences to be imposed for failure to comply with discovery provisions. Wilson v. Barrow, 107 Ga. App. 555, 130 S.E.2d 812 (1963) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2111).

Subsection (b)(2) contains two standards — one general and one specific — that limit a trial court's discretion: first, any sanction must be "just"; second, the sanction must be specifically related to the particular "claim" which was at issue in the order to provide discovery. Carey

Can., Inc. v. Hinely, 181 Ga. App. 364, 352 S.E.2d 398, rev'd on other grounds, 257 Ga. 150, 356 S.E.2d 202, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 898, 108 S. Ct. 233, 98 L. Ed. 2d 192 (1987).

Issuance of order compelling an answer is prerequisite to use of sanctions. Corbin v. Pilgrim Realty Co., 151 Ga. App. 102, 258 S.E.2d 758 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Miller Grading Contractors v. Georgia Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 247 Ga. 730, 279 S.E.2d 442 (1981).

Before sanctions may be imposed under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37, the party seeking discovery must first obtain an order under subsection (a) of that section requiring the recalcitrant party to make discovery. Wills v. McAuley, 166 Ga. App. 4, 303 S.E.2d 26, cert. denied, 251 Ga. 41, 305 S.E.2d 120 (1983).

Time for compliance with order. — Absent a definite time for compliance, the 30-day period contemplated by Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-33) should be the applicable time within which to comply with an order to respond to interrogatories. Massengale v. Georgia Power Co., 153 Ga. App. 476, 265 S.E.2d 830 (1980).

When the trial court ordered the defendant to pay the plaintiffs' attorney fees, necessitated by the defendant's failure to comply with discovery and causing a mistrial, the defendant could not wait until final judgment in the action to pay the fees and was properly held in contempt for failure to obey the court's order. Orkin Exterminating Co. v. McIntosh, 215 Ga. App. 587, 452 S.E.2d 159 (1994).

When a motion for sanctions is brought for a party's failure to comply with an order compelling answers to interrogatories, the existence or nonexistence of willfulness should be considered not only in the context of the time period prescribed in the order compelling answers, but in the context of the entire period beginning with service of interrogatories and ending with service of answers. Didio v. Chess, 218 Ga. App. 550, 462 S.E.2d 450 (1995).

Two-step remedial procedure. — Remedy available to a party whose discovery efforts are frustrated by an opponent's refusal to submit to discovery is contained in the two-step procedure of this section: first, a motion for an order compelling discovery must be made, heard, and granted, affording the obstinate party another opportunity to provide discovery, and if the obstinate fails to do so, the second step is for the court to enter such order as is just, including the imposition of one or more of the sanctions set forth in paragraph (b)(2) of this section. Corbin v. Pilgrim Realty Co., 151 Ga. App. 102, 258 S.E.2d 758 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Miller Grading Contractors v. Georgia Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 247 Ga. 730, 279 S.E.2d 442 (1981); Thornton v. Burson, 151 Ga. App. 456, 260 S.E.2d 388 (1979).

Subsection (b) of this section gives the trial court a range of sanctions to be imposed when an order under subsection (a) is violated. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Paragraph (b)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 is designed to punish a willful failure or conscious disregard of an order. Brunswick Mfg. Co. v. Sizemore, 176 Ga. App. 838, 338 S.E.2d 288 (1985).

Mere technical failure to comply with an order will not justify extreme sanctions such as dismissal and default. Thornton v. Burson, 151 Ga. App. 456, 260 S.E.2d 388 (1979).

Hearing required for determination of failure to comply with order. — When the court enters an order that a party comply with discovery, that order cannot be self-executing, i.e., it cannot provide for the automatic imposition of the ultimate sanction of dismissal or default judgment upon the party's failure to file the responses. Rather, the court must first make a determination, following notice of an opportunity for a hearing, that the failure to comply with the order was willful. Hernandez v. State, 200 Ga. App. 368, 408 S.E.2d 160 (1991).

Trial court committed harmful error by denying a party's request to "make an offer of proof" at the hearing on a motion for sanctions. Loftin v. Gulf Contracting Co., 224 Ga. App. 210, 480 S.E.2d 604 (1997).

In a personal injury action, although the trial court stated in the court's dismissal order that an injured party's non-compliance with a court-ordered sanction was willful, because the appeals court could not make that determination from the record, and the injured party was not afforded a hearing prior to the imposition of attorney fees and dismissal, the order was reversed; however, the fact that the court-ordered sanction was erroneous did not excuse the injured party's failure to comply with it. Cole v. Hill, 286 Ga. App. 535, 649 S.E.2d 633 (2007).

Hearing not required. — In an action to recover unpaid legal fees, a law firm was not entitled to a hearing on a motion for discovery sanctions under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d) against former clients because the trial court was not contemplating the ultimate sanction of dismissal or a default judgment and the clients did not willfully fail to comply as the clients did not receive the post-judgment interrogatories. McFarland & McFarland, P.C. v. Holtzclaw, 293 Ga. App. 663, 667 S.E.2d 874 (2008).

Inadequate response due to counsel's error. — Paragraph (b)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 is not designed to punish parties when their otherwise timely but partially inadequate response to discovery orders is the result of their counsel's erroneous misunderstanding of the full mandate thereof. Brunswick Mfg. Co. v. Sizemore, 176 Ga. App. 838, 338 S.E.2d 288 (1985).

Notice of hearing. — After the plaintiff claimed that the trial court erred in not holding an evidentiary hearing on the motion to dismiss for failure to comply with discovery, contending that, because the hearing was noticed by a "rule nisi" order, it could not be the mandated evidentiary hearing, it was held that while it is true that a rule nisi is generally used to notify parties of and compel the parties to appear at hearings for a determination of temporary or other interlocutory matters, it may also be used to notify a final hearing. Smith v. National Bank, 182 Ga. App. 55, 354 S.E.2d 678 (1987).

Willfulness required for harsh sanctions. — If failure is not willful, harsh sanctions of dismissal, default, or the striking of pleadings have no application. Leonard Bros. Trucking Co. v. Crymes Transps., Inc., 124 Ga. App. 341, 183 S.E.2d 773 (1971), overruled on other grounds, Turner v. Harper, 233 Ga. 483, 211 S.E.2d 742 (1975).

Replacement of the word "refusal" with the word "failure" in paragraph (b)(2) of this section by Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 10, was not intended to change the construction of the rule relating to a showing of willfulness prior to imposition of the harsher sanctions of subparagraph (b)(2)(C). Swindell v. Swindell, 233 Ga. 854, 213 S.E.2d 697 (1975).

Showing of willfulness is required in order to impose the sanction of default judgment upon a party. McCane v. Cappett Corp., 151 Ga. App. 423, 260 S.E.2d 379 (1979).

Showing of willfulness is a predicate to imposition of the harsher sanctions. Thornton v. Burson, 151 Ga. App. 456, 260 S.E.2d 388 (1979).

Under subparagraph (b)(2)(C) or subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37, a finding of willfulness is a prerequisite to dismissal. Smith v. National Bank, 182 Ga. App. 55, 354 S.E.2d 678 (1987).

Because the trial court failed to make an explicit finding of willfulness in the court's order dismissing the plaintiff's case for failure to comply with an order compelling discovery, the dismissal was reversed, and the case was remanded for a hearing on the issue. Rouse v. Arrington, 283 Ga. App. 204, 641 S.E.2d 214 (2007).

Question of willfulness only relevant in selection of sanctions. — Failure to comply is the only requisite for finding of a violation, and "willfulness" is relevant only when selecting sanctions. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Showing of willfulness is a predicate to imposition of the harsher sanctions. — Trial court did not err in striking a party's pleadings and entering default judgment against the party since the party's conduct showed a willful failure to comply with the court's order. Butler v. Biven Software, Inc., 238 Ga. App. 525, 522 S.E.2d 1 (1999).

Time period for which willfulness to be considered. — When a motion for sanctions is brought under paragraph (b)(2) of this section for a party's failure to comply with an order compelling answers, the existence or nonexistence of willfulness should be considered not only in the context of the time period prescribed in the order compelling answers, but in the context of the entire period beginning with service of interrogatories and ending with service of answers; events transpiring during this entire time period are probative of whether a party acted with conscious indifference to the consequences of failure to comply with the order compelling answers. Lee v. Morrison, 138 Ga. App. 332, 226 S.E.2d 124 (1976); Thurman v. Unicare, Inc., 151 Ga. App. 880, 261 S.E.2d 785 (1979); City of Griffin v. Jackson, 239 Ga. App. 374, 520 S.E.2d 510 (1999).

Relevant time frame for considering issue of willfulness. — In considering the issue of willfulness, the entire period beginning with service of the interrogatories and ending with the service of the answers must be considered, not just the period mandated by the order requiring answers. Smith v. National Bank, 182 Ga. App. 55, 354 S.E.2d 678 (1987).

Failure to cooperate with counsel as willful misconduct. — Failure to maintain contact and cooperate with counsel about pending litigation so that discovery can be made is willful misconduct; however, a party may claim that it was counsel who failed to communicate with the party. Thurman v. Unicare, Inc., 151 Ga. App. 880, 261 S.E.2d 785 (1979).

Hearing on willfulness not always required. — Trial court need not conduct a hearing on the issue of willfulness in every case. Such a requirement serves no purpose when the court can otherwise determine willfulness on the part of the party against whom the sanctions are sought. Schrembs v. Atlanta Classic Cars, Inc., 261 Ga. 182, 402 S.E.2d 723 (1991).

Since the trial court was authorized to find that a party intentionally and wilfully failed to comply with a court order compelling discovery, such finding could be made from the record, without the necessity of conducting a separate hearing. Johnson v. Lomas Mtg. USA, Inc., 201 Ga. App. 562, 411 S.E.2d 731, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 904, 411 S.E.2d 731 (1991).

Under subparagraph (b)(2)(D) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37, a hearing is not required before contempt may be found for the willful violation of an order compelling discovery. Ryland Group, Inc. v. Daley, 245 Ga. App. 496, 537 S.E.2d 732 (2000), overruled on other grounds, John Thurmond & Assocs. v. Kennedy, 284 Ga. 469, 668 S.E.2d 666 (2008).

Trial court properly dismissed an injured party's complaint as a sanction for violating a discovery order because the injured party failed to appear at a hearing on a driver's motion for a sanction of dismissal, despite being advised of the hearing several times; the injured party did not explain why the two-month delay in complying with the discovery order was excusable, but stated that the injured party's counsel had a "head cold virus" for three months; further, the trial court was not required to hold a hearing on the issue of willfulness. Russaw v. Burden, 272 Ga. App. 632, 612 S.E.2d 913 (2005).

Hearing on willfulness not required. — Trial court did not err in entering a default judgment against sellers pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b)(2) without conducting a hearing on willfulness because the sellers did not file answers to a broker's request for interrogatories and production of documents within the time period prescribed by O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-33(a)(2) and 9-11-34(b)(2), and the sellers only filed a response to the request after the trial court's grant of the broker's initial motion to compel and for sanctions. Cochran v. Kennelly, 306 Ga. App. 838, 703 S.E.2d 411 (2010).

Dismissal without hearing on willfulness improper. — When a couple failed to attend their depositions, it was error to dismiss their personal injury case under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 without holding a hearing on the issue of willfulness; no motion to compel had been filed against the couple, no hearing of any type had been held previously, and the record would support a finding that the couple, who said later that they believed the depositions would be rescheduled because they were still in the process of obtaining counsel, had acted negligently, not willfully. McConnell v. Wright, 281 Ga. 868, 644 S.E.2d 111 (2007).

Remand for willfulness issue when trial court failed to make explicit willfulness finding. — Because the trial court failed to explicitly make a finding of willfulness in the court's order dismissing the plaintiff's damages complaint for failure to comply with an order to compel, directing the plaintiff to fully and completely respond to the defendant's interrogatories and requests for production, and in any event, the court could not say that such a determination could be made from the record, the matter was remanded directing the trial court to conduct a hearing on the issue of willfulness. Rouse v. Arrington, 283 Ga. App. 204, 641 S.E.2d 214 (2007).

Finding of willfulness authorized. — When there is no evidence that a party was unaware of the trial court's order requiring the party to attend a deposition, nor any evidence to indicate that the party made a good faith effort to comply with the order of the trial court, the court was authorized to find that the party's failure to attend the deposition was willful. McCane v. Cappett Corp., 151 Ga. App. 423, 260 S.E.2d 379 (1979).

At least six instances of noncompliance demonstrated that the defendant not only intentionally refused to respond to discovery but also consciously disregarded a court discovery order. Resource Network Int'l, Inc. v. Ritz-Carlton Hotel Co., 232 Ga. App. 242, 501 S.E.2d 573 (1998).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in dismissing a complaint with prejudice after the plaintiff failed to comply with the trial court's order compelling discovery even after being advised of possible dismissal for failure to comply; the trial court found the plaintiff's testimony not credible and that the plaintiff willfully failed to comply with the order compelling the discovery. Amaechi v. Somsino, 259 Ga. App. 346, 577 S.E.2d 48 (2003).

Trial court did not err in imposing discovery sanctions against a credit life insurer in a class action involving 900,000 policies because the insurer failed to provide the requested information on the insurer's policy-holders for over six years after the insurer was ordered to do so, and the information was available to the insurer. Res. Life Ins. Co. v. Buckner, 304 Ga. App. 719, 698 S.E.2d 19 (2010).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by granting the defendant's motion for sanctions and dismissing the complaint with prejudice because the plaintiff provided no explanation to the trial court for the plaintiff's failure even to begin work on collecting the documents at issue before the August 5 deadline; accordingly, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court concluded that the plaintiff's failure to comply with the court's order of July 22 was willful and in total disregard of that order. RLBB Acquisition, LLC v. Baer, 329 Ga. App. 483, 765 S.E.2d 662 (2014).

Recitation of willful misconduct in default order not necessary. — Court order imposing an authorized sanction of default judgment is not fatally defective if it does not contain a recitation of willful misconduct, when there is an adequate showing of failure to comply with a court order which equates to willful misconduct. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Paragraph (b)(2) of this section does not require a specific finding of willfulness in the court order, but only a showing of willfulness in the record on the transcript. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Condition precedent to dismissal. — Statute does not authorize the court to apply the sanction of dismissal of a pleading after purported answers to interrogatories have been served and filed unless the condition precedent has been fulfilled which requires the propounder to file a motion to compel answers and the order to compel has been disobeyed. Bratten Apparel, Inc. v. Lyons Textile Mill, Inc., 129 Ga. App. 384, 199 S.E.2d 632 (1973).

Dismissal authorized for conscious or intentional failure to act. — Under subparagraph (b)(2)(C) of this section, a trial court may in the court's discretion dismiss an action as a sanction for the plaintiff's failure to comply with an order to provide discovery when the court finds a conscious or intentional failure to act as distinguished from an accidental or involuntary noncompliance. Turner v. Gray, 150 Ga. App. 714, 258 S.E.2d 905 (1979).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in striking the appellants' answers and counterclaims, and in entering a default judgment against the appellants, as a sanction order was imposed against the appellants due to discovery misconduct, but the appellants refused to pay the sanction despite the fact that the appellants had sufficient funds to do so, and instead, the appellants continued to argue the propriety of the prior order compelling the appellants' appearance at a deposition and the payment of attorney fees; the appellants' failure to comply was deemed willful. Mateen v. Dicus, 275 Ga. App. 742, 621 S.E.2d 487 (2005), rev'd on other grounds, 281 Ga. 455, 637 S.E.2d 377 (2006); vacated in part, 286 Ga. App. 760, 650 S.E.2d 272 (2007).

Dismissal of complaint proper. — When there was nothing in the record to excuse the plaintiff's failure to serve answers as required by law, or to show that the plaintiff, through counsel, sought by authorized action to obtain a delay or extension of time in which to serve answers, the action of the trial judge in sustaining a motion to dismiss and dismissing the complaint was proper. Morton v. Retail Credit Co., 124 Ga. App. 728, 185 S.E.2d 777 (1971).

There was no abuse of discretion in the trial court's granting the motion to dismiss predicated on the continued failure of the plaintiff to respond with documentation as to the plaintiff's medical treatment and expenses. Lewis v. Evans, 212 Ga. App. 49, 441 S.E.2d 425 (1994).

Because, at the time the trial court dismissed the plaintiff's complaint, the plaintiff's supplemental responses to the defendant's discovery request were still inadequate and evasive, and because of the fact-intensive nature of the claims, dismissal of the complaint was not an abuse of discretion. Potter v. American Medicare Corp., 225 Ga. App. 343, 484 S.E.2d 43 (1997).

Court did not abuse the court's discretion in dismissing the case when the plaintiff twice failed to attend the plaintiff's scheduled deposition. Smith v. Adamson, 226 Ga. App. 698, 487 S.E.2d 386 (1997).

Because an individual failed to attend depositions for which the individual was noticed, even after being ordered to do so by the trial court, and the individual did not respond to a motion for sanctions, the trial court's dismissal of the individual's complaint pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b)(2) was not a clear abuse of discretion. Woods v. Gatch, 272 Ga. App. 642, 613 S.E.2d 187 (2005).

Trial court properly dismissed the plaintiffs' pro se complaint pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d) on grounds that the plaintiffs wilfully failed to appear for the plaintiffs' depositions as the court's failure to rule on the plaintiffs' pending motions, including motions to compel, a motion for a more complete response, and a motion for protective order, did not excuse the plaintiffs' attendance; moreover, the grounds plaintiffs asserted in the plaintiffs' motion for protective order provided no basis for the trial court to order that the plaintiffs were not obligated to attend the depositions. Rice v. Cannon, 283 Ga. App. 438, 641 S.E.2d 562 (2007).

Trial court's dismissal of a suit brought by certain homeowners against an insurer for the homeowners' refusal to comply with various discovery orders of the trial court was upheld on appeal since by sworn affidavit, counsel for the insurer averred and sufficiently established that the homeowners never appeared for depositions; no hearing was required under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 for the trial court to determine the willfulness of the homeowners' noncompliance since the record established that hearings were held on the insurer's motions for sanctions. Nanan v. State Farm Ins. Co., 286 Ga. App. 539, 650 S.E.2d 283 (2007), cert. denied, 555 U.S. 995, 129 S. Ct. 496, 172 L.Ed.2d 358 (2008).

Trial court properly dismissed the plaintiffs' complaint for failing to comply with a discovery order. Plaintiffs' counsel repeatedly misrepresented that counsel would provide discovery about an expert witness and counsel's failure to do so resulted in more than one extension of the discovery period and also more than one continuance of the trial. Freeman v. Foss, 298 Ga. App. 498, 680 S.E.2d 557 (2009).

Striking of pleadings or entry of default for refusal to answer. — On refusal of a party to make answer after being directed to do so by the court, the court may strike the pleadings or render a judgment by default against the disobedient party. Hatcher v. Scarboro, 113 Ga. App. 103, 147 S.E.2d 361 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2111).

In an attorney disciplinary proceeding, the special master was authorized to strike the attorney's answer for the attorney's failure to produce documents. In re Washington, 270 Ga. 60, 504 S.E.2d 704 (1998).

Dismissal of answer improper. — When, in response to a court order, the defendant filed answers to all but seven of the interrogatories served on the defendant, it was improper for the court, on the same day and with no additional notice, to enter an order striking and dismissing the defendant's answer. Delta Equities, Inc. v. Berry, 127 Ga. App. 590, 194 S.E.2d 284 (1972).

Dismissal of complaint improper. — Because damages were presumed to flow from an alleged tortious act, a party alleging the commission of a tort was not required to provide the court with a detailed statement of damages. Thus, the trial court erred in dismissing the case for that party's failure to comply with such an order. Wilson v. Home Depot USA, Inc., 288 Ga. App. 582, 654 S.E.2d 408 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 403 (Ga. 2008).

It was an abuse of discretion to dismiss a dog breeder's breach of contract suit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 against a dog's co-owner due to the breeder's failure to comply with a court order to produce contracts with the breeder's other customers from over seven years earlier. There was no proof that such contracts existed, and even if the contracts did, the contracts' relevance to the lawsuit was questionable. Anderson v. Silver, 300 Ga. App. 1, 684 S.E.2d 73 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0134, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 214 (Ga. 2010).

Trial court erred in dismissing a client's claim against a surveying firm with prejudice under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d) based on the client's failure to respond to discovery without first issuing an order compelling the client to comply with the discovery requests and without scheduling a hearing on the sanctions motion. N. Druid Dev., LLC v. Post, Buckley, Schuh & Jernigan, Inc., 330 Ga. App. 432, 767 S.E.2d 29 (2014).

Default judgment improper. — In a product liability action, grant of a default judgment as to liability against the defendant was too severe a sanction for non-compliance with a discovery order because the defendant was entitled to a hearing on the motion for sanctions; there was no finding of willfulness, or bad faith, or a conscious indifference to the consequences of failure to comply and the evidence of what had transpired in the discovery process did not support the sanction. GMC v. Conkle, 226 Ga. App. 34, 486 S.E.2d 180 (1997).

Dismissal based on willful failure as adjudication on the merits. — Order of dismissal based on a finding of willful failure to comply with an order of the court can rightly have the effect of an adjudication on the merits; however, a dismissal which does not involve any finding of willfulness, but which is merely an automatic action following a certain lapse of time, falls within the "purely technical" rule of former Code 1933, § 110-503 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-12-42) and cannot be considered an adjudication which would bar a subsequent action. Maxey v. Covington, 126 Ga. App. 197, 190 S.E.2d 448 (1972).

Prospective order imposing default not permitted. — Determination to invoke the penalty of default may not be made in a prospective, self-executing order as the court may not assume that a future failure will be unjustifiable; there must be an opportunity to explain the circumstances following the failure, with an express motion and notice to the party concerned. Delta Equities, Inc. v. Berry, 127 Ga. App. 590, 194 S.E.2d 284 (1972).

Language in order compelling responses, to the effect that "failing to comply with this order, defendant's answers to this complaint are ordered stricken," was invalid and unenforceable, as it had the effect of determining in advance that failure to respond to the order was willful or in conscious disregard of the order and such a determination cannot be made in a prospective, self-executing order. Thornton v. Burson, 151 Ga. App. 456, 260 S.E.2d 388 (1979).

Contempt as remedy. — Remedy for failure to answer, refusal to answer, or concealment of information is a citation for contempt. Nathan v. Duncan, 113 Ga. App. 630, 149 S.E.2d 383 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2108).

Attorney's defense to the trial court's order holding the attorney in contempt for the attorney's refusal to turn over a client's file challenging the underlying validity of the prior order requiring the attorney to turn over the file was a collateral attack that could be sustained under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(a) only if the prior order was void on its face. However, the trial court's prior order was not void on its face since: (1) the attorney was served with a motion to compel prior to the entry of the prior order; (2) the trial court had jurisdiction to issue an order to compel a nonparty to release necessary non-privileged documents specifically prepared in anticipation of a divorce action pending before the trial court under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-26(b), 9-11-34(c)(1), and 9-11-37(a); (3) the attorney willfully disregarded the prior order; and (4) the prior order was entered in a matter over which the trial court had subject matter jurisdiction, making its disobedience contempt of court. Mary A. Stearns, P.C. v. Williams-Murphy, 263 Ga. App. 239, 587 S.E.2d 247 (2003).

To impose a contempt of court sanction there must be an order of court as is contemplated by subsection (b) of this section. Kruger v. Kruger, 146 Ga. App. 461, 246 S.E.2d 469 (1978).

Submission of untruthful answers as contempt of court. — Submission of untruthful answers to interrogatories is tantamount to a refusal to submit answers, and if made in defiance of a previous court order could be considered contempt. Aetna Life Ins. Co. v. Greene, 116 Ga. App. 783, 159 S.E.2d 87 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2111).

Jurisdiction of court for contempt purposes. — Contempt proceeding is not such a case as is contemplated by law in the provision that venue shall be in the county where an offense was committed or in the county of the residence of the respondent; in such cases, jurisdiction of the court trying the case in which evidence is taken by deposition extends to every person in the state whose testimony is being taken thereby, and to every county wherein such testimony is being taken. Sorrells v. Cole, 111 Ga. App. 136, 141 S.E.2d 193 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 38-2111).

Under the look-through rule, a hypothetical coercive claim was the basis for federal jurisdiction over petitioner bank's Federal Arbitration Act petition, but petitioner payday loan companies' arbitration petition was precluded by a related underlying state court judgment holding the companies in contempt and striking the companies' arbitration defenses under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b)(2) to respondent borrower's suit alleging violations of Georgia's usury statute, O.C.G.A. § 7-4-1 et seq.; Georgia's Industrial Loan Act, O.C.G.A. § 7-3-1 et seq.; and Georgia's Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-14-1 et seq. Cnty. State Bank v. Strong, 651 F.3d 1241 (11th Cir. 2011), cert. denied, U.S. , 133 S. Ct. 101, 184 L. Ed. 2d 22 (2012).

When the deponent appears and is deposed, but eventually refuses to answer further questions, the better practice is an order directing the deponent to continue the deposition and to answer all questions, rather than immediate sanctions under paragraph (b)(2) of this section. King Orthopedic Appliances, Inc. v. Medical Funding Servs., Inc., 152 Ga. App. 544, 263 S.E.2d 485 (1979).

Objection to award of attorney fees without merit. — Party who fails to respond to interrogatories and does not apply for a protective order is in no position to object to the award of reasonable attorney fees under subsection (b) of this section. Sneider v. English, 129 Ga. App. 638, 200 S.E.2d 469 (1973).

Addition of intervenor plaintiffs in class action after default imposed. — In a class action when discovery of all persons in the class is required to be made of the defendant, and discovery is unduly delayed by failure of the defendant to comply with an order of the court, addition of intervenor plaintiffs, after imposition of authorized sanction of default judgment, is authorized, in the discretion of the trial court. Sta-Power Indus., Inc. v. Avant, 134 Ga. App. 952, 216 S.E.2d 897 (1975).

Striking of answer reasonable sanction. — Failure to comply with the trial court's order compelling discovery is ample reason to impose the sanction of striking the answer. Ale-8-One of Am., Inc. v. Graphicolor Servs., Inc., 166 Ga. App. 506, 305 S.E.2d 14 (1983).

When an insurer failed to produce documents after an order compelling production was obtained and after a trial court found that the refusal to comply with that order was wilful and in conscious disregard of the order, dismissal of the insurer's answer and entry of default judgment against the insurer was a proper sanction. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Health Horizons, Inc., 264 Ga. App. 443, 590 S.E.2d 798 (2003).

Striking arbitration defenses proper. — Defendants' discovery violations were willful when the defendants withheld certain documents in order to "test their position," and as the defendants had not sought a protective order under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-26, but instead violated the trial court's orders compelling discovery by withholding the documents the defendants claimed were objectionable, the defendants' failure to comply with discovery orders was not excused; thus, it was a proper sanction under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 to strike the defendants' arbitration defenses. Ga. Cash Am., Inc. v. Strong, 286 Ga. App. 405, 649 S.E.2d 548 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 709 (Ga. 2007).

Inadequate, evasive and unresponsive answers. — After the court specifically found that answers served after the motion to dismiss was filed were inadequate, evasive, and not responsive and this was amply supported by comparing the straightforward questions and the responses, this finding, along with the time period involved (one year and eight months, of which seven months elapsed between serving of interrogatories and filing of motion to compel answers) was without a doubt sufficient to uphold the exercise of discretion by the trial court in dismissing the complaint. Smith v. National Bank, 182 Ga. App. 55, 354 S.E.2d 678 (1987).

Entry of default judgment and striking of pleading erroneous. — After the defendant complied with that portion of the court's order directing the defendant to answer interrogatories but failed to pay the plaintiff's attorney fees incurred in obtaining the court order as directed by the court, the court erred in striking the defendant's pleading and entering a default judgment for the plaintiff without giving the defendant an opportunity to explain the failure. Serwitz v. GECC, 174 Ga. App. 747, 331 S.E.2d 95 (1985).

Rendering judgment by default and dismissal of counterclaim appropriate sanction. — Since the trial court had correctly followed the two-step procedure of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 and found the appellant to have repeatedly and willfully abused the discovery procedure, the court did not abuse the court's discretion by striking the appellant's answer, rendering judgment by default, and dismissing the counterclaim. Rubin v. Cindyreal, 171 Ga. App. 45, 318 S.E.2d 520 (1984).

Late request for sanctions. — Trial court was not justified in dismissing the plaintiff's lawsuit for failure to comply with a discovery order after the defendant made no motion to have sanctions imposed for some one and one-half months after the defendant received the plaintiff's affidavit and copies of the documents sought. Sossenکو v. Michelin Tire Corp., 164 Ga. App. 201, 296 S.E.2d 754 (1982).

Failure to comply when order ambiguous and much of information already provided. — Trial court erred in dismissing lawsuit for failure to comply with a discovery order since the discovery order was ambiguous and did not require any specific items of information, there was full compliance with the portion of the order pertaining to a request for production of documents, much of the information sought was provided in response to other discovery requests, and counsel attempted unsuccessfully on several occasions to determine what further information was needed. Harwood v. Great Am. Mgt. & Inv., Inc., 171 Ga. App. 488, 320 S.E.2d 269 (1984).

Prospective, self-executing order cannot be used by a trial court to invoke the drastic sanction of dismissal. Steele v. Colbert, 182 Ga. App. 680, 356 S.E.2d 736 (1987).

Imposition of a $500 fine per day for past violations of the court's discovery order was an adjudication of criminal contempt, and the fine was therefore limited by O.C.G.A. § 15-7-4 to $500. Carey Can., Inc. v. Hinely, 257 Ga. 150, 356 S.E.2d 202, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 898, 108 S. Ct. 233, 98 L. Ed. 2d 192 (1987).

Expenses. — Trial court is without authority to award expenses under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 without some evidence upon which to base a determination that such expenses were "caused by the failure" of the party to comply with the discovery order. Tandy Corp. v. McCrimmon, 183 Ga. App. 744, 360 S.E.2d 70 (1987).

Payment of attorney's fees. — Defendant's willful failure to comply with an order requiring the payment of attorney's fees as reimbursement for the expenses incurred by the plaintiff in obtaining a discovery order authorizes the striking of defensive pleadings and the entry of default judgment pursuant to subdivision (b)(2)(C) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37. Serwitz v. GECC, 184 Ga. App. 632, 362 S.E.2d 439 (1987); Toles v. G & K Servs., Inc., 230 Ga. App. 452, 496 S.E.2d 550 (1998).

Defendant's failure to make suitable arrangements to pay attorney's fees imposed as a discovery sanction warranted the sanction of dismissal. Stokes v. Taco Bell Corp., 229 Ga. App. 558, 494 S.E.2d 355 (1998), overruled on other grounds, Tenet Healthcare Corp. v. Louisiana Forum Corp., 538 S.E.2d 441 (Ga. 2000).

Because the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying an employee's motions to compel and for sanctions on the ground that the employee did not satisfy the good faith requirement of Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.4(B), the award of attorney fees to an employer as authorized by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(4)(B) was not improper. Phillips v. Selecto Sci., 308 Ga. App. 412, 707 S.E.2d 615 (2011).

Trial court erred by awarding attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(a)(4)(A) to a driver injured in a motor vehicle accident based on discovery violations of the car owner because the trial court erroneously believed that the court had issued a prior order compelling the car owner to provide information on locating and serving the car owner's nephew, who caused the rear-end collision. Allison v. Wilson, 320 Ga. App. 629, 740 S.E.2d 355 (2013).

Apportionment of expenses of motion. — When it was determined that some of the plaintiff company's discovery requests were not made with sufficient particularity and the plaintiff made a good faith effort to resolve the matter, the plaintiff was entitled to pursue a motion to compel and recover the plaintiff's fees under subparagraph (a)(4)(C) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37. Mansell 400 Assocs., L.P. v. Entex Info. Servs., Inc., 239 Ga. App. 477, 519 S.E.2d 46 (1999).

Poverty as excuse or justification. — Proper time to offer one's poverty as an excuse or justification to the court for one's failure to comply with the court's discovery order is at the hearing on the imposition of sanctions. Serwitz v. GECC, 184 Ga. App. 632, 362 S.E.2d 439 (1987).

Sanctions imposed. — Since the plaintiff was in willful contempt of two judges' discovery orders, the plaintiff was properly assessed with attorney fees, court reporter costs, default judgment entered against the plaintiff and found in continuing contempt. Jones v. Zezzo, 162 Ga. App. 281, 290 S.E.2d 312 (1982).

Expenses on Failure to Admit

It is not necessary to compel admission by court order prior to award of attorney fees under subsection (c) of this section. Spencer v. Dupree, 150 Ga. App. 474, 258 S.E.2d 229 (1979).

Amount of expenses awarded for failure to comply with an order for discovery or to admit the genuineness of a document or truth of any matter is within the discretion of the trial court. Foster v. Morrison, 177 Ga. App. 250, 339 S.E.2d 307 (1985).

Attorney fees properly denied. — Trial court properly rejected the hospital's claim for additional attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(c) because the jury could have determined that the doctor simply did not remember signing a contract and the trial court did not err by finding that the doctor had not failed to admit the truth of the matter. Whitaker v. Houston County Hosp. Auth., 272 Ga. App. 870, 613 S.E.2d 664 (2005).

Failure to Respond to Discovery Requests

Sanctions as enforcement of absolute duty to respond. — Party properly served has an absolute duty to respond, and the court may enforce this duty by imposing sanctions for the duty's violation. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979); Suchnick v. Southern Gen. Ins. Co., 196 Ga. App. 687, 396 S.E.2d 609 (1990); Cannon Air Transp. Servs. v. Stevens Aviation, Inc., 249 Ga. App. 514, 548 S.E.2d 485 (2001).

Order not required. — Prior to imposing the sanction of dismissal under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37, there need be no order to compel discovery as provided for in subsection (b) of § 9-11-37; all that is required is a motion, notice, and a hearing. Stolle v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 206 Ga. App. 235, 424 S.E.2d 807 (1992).

No contempt of court under subsection (d). — Since there will have been no court order in the situations to which subsection (d) of this section speaks, there can be no contempt of court thereunder. Kruger v. Kruger, 146 Ga. App. 461, 246 S.E.2d 469 (1978).

Attorney referred to in subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 is ordinarily the attorney advising the party at the time of the hearing on the motion to compel. Nodvin v. Investguard, Ltd., 261

Notice of hearing on motion to compel required. — Whenever a party seeks sanctions under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 against the other party's former counsel, the former counsel must be notified of the hearing on the motion to compel and must be given an opportunity to be heard. Nodvin v. Investguard, Ltd., 261 Ga. 805, 411 S.E.2d 708 (1992).

Hearing required. — Because a trial court dismissed a healthcare network's breach of contract and fraud action for failure to comply with discovery under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d) without holding a hearing on a hospital's motion to dismiss, the trial court abused the court's discretion. ASAP Healthcare Network, Inc. v. Southwest Hosp. & Med. Ctr., Inc., 270 Ga. App. 76, 606 S.E.2d 98 (2004).

In a suit to confirm paternity and enforce a child support payment, a trial court abused the court's discretion in imposing sanctions against the father under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b)(2) for his alleged failure to comply with production requests because the trial court failed to provide the father an opportunity to be heard prior to imposing sanctions. Harrell v. Ga. Dep't of Human Res., 300 Ga. App. 497, 685 S.E.2d 441 (2009).

Because there was evidence that the defendants' failure to respond to discovery requests was negligent rather than wilful, with the defendants claiming not to have received the discovery requests, and defendants did respond to the discovery, albeit over a year later, the trial court erred in striking the defendants' answer as a sanction without a hearing as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d). Am. Radiosurgery, Inc. v. Rakes, 325 Ga. App. 161, 751 S.E.2d 898 (2013).

Imposition of sanctions under subsections (b) and (d) distinguished. — Subsection (d) of this section deals with failure to make the initial response required, while subsections (a) and (b) provide a method of resolving differences between the parties and enforcing the court's determination; thus, there must be an order under subsection (a) before sanctions are imposed under subsection (b), while under subsection (d) the party aggrieved moves directly for the imposition of sanctions. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Immediate sanctions authorized under subsection (d). — Subsection (d) of this section permits the sanctions of subsection (b) to be imposed immediately for certain failures to act. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Serious or total failure to respond is prerequisite. — Authorization of immediate sanctions under subsection (d) of this section applies to nothing less than a serious or total failure to respond to interrogatories. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979); Wetherington v. Koepenick & Horne, Inc., 153 Ga. App. 302, 265 S.E.2d 107 (1980); Wills v. McAuley, 166 Ga. App. 4, 303 S.E.2d 26, cert. denied, 251 Ga. 41, 305 S.E.2d 120 (1983).

Total failure to serve answers or objections constitutes a failure to respond under subsection (d) of this section, and subjects a party to immediate sanctions. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979); Wills v. McAuley, 166 Ga. App. 4, 303 S.E.2d 26, cert. denied, 251 Ga. 41, 305 S.E.2d 120 (1983).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in dismissing the appellant's complaint after the appellant totally failed to answer, or properly object to, the appellee's interrogatories. Tompkins v. McMickle, 172 Ga. App. 62, 321 S.E.2d 797 (1984).

Upon being informed that the plaintiff still had failed totally to answer the interrogatories and to comply with the other proper and timely discovery, and considering the entire history of the proceeding, the trial court was authorized to impose immediately the ultimate sanction authorized by subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37. Vining v. Kimoto USA, Inc., 209 Ga. App. 296, 433 S.E.2d 342 (1993).

Former employee's federal claims against a former employer were barred by the doctrine of res judicata, even though the state court in the employee's prior action did not hold a hearing before dismissing the employee's complaint under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d)(1), because the employee completely ignored the employer's discovery requests, failed to respond to the employer's properly served motion for sanctions, and failed to request a hearing on the motion; thus, the state court was not required to hold a hearing before imposing the sanction of dismissal. Moten v. Alberici Constructors, Inc., 380 F. Supp. 2d 1355 (N.D. Ga. 2005).

Issuance of order not prerequisite to imposition of sanctions. — When a party entirely fails to respond to a set of interrogatories, sanctions may be imposed directly under subsection (d) of this section and a motion for an order compelling discovery under paragraph (a)(2) is not required. Sneider v. English, 129 Ga. App. 638, 200 S.E.2d 469 (1973).

Under subsection (d) of this section, failure of a party to appear for the taking of a deposition is grounds for the imposition of the sanctions contained therein, and unlike the similar sanctions found in subsection (b), there need be no order of court as a basis for imposition of the sanctions found in subsection (d). Kruger v. Kruger, 146 Ga. App. 461, 246 S.E.2d 469 (1978).

Order compelling discovery was not a condition precedent for the imposition of sanctions under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d), and all that was required was a motion, notice, and a hearing; when a land owner presented no justification for the land owner's failure to respond to discovery and did not respond to motions to compel and for sanctions, the trial court did not err in dismissing the land owner's complaint due to a failure to respond to discovery. Crane v. Darnell, 268 Ga. App. 311, 601 S.E.2d 726 (2004).

Dismissal and default authorized without prior order. — Order dismissing the defendant's answer and rendering a judgment against the defendant as if in default is authorized under subsection (d) of this section without a prior order. Carter v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, 130 Ga. App. 522, 203 S.E.2d 766 (1974).

Order imposing sanctions of dismissing defensive pleadings and rendering default judgment for failure to make discovery may be applied by the court without first ordering compliance. Houston Gen. Ins. Co. v. Stein Steel & Supply Co., 134 Ga. App. 624, 215 S.E.2d 511 (1975).

Willfulness relevant in choice of sanction. — Any failure of the sort described in subsection (d) of this section permits invocation of the rule, regardless of the reason for the failure, but the court has discretion about the sanction to be imposed, and the presence or absence of willfulness remains relevant in the choice of sanction. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Dismissal proper for intentional failure to respond. — Plaintiff's failure to answer served interrogatories was the result of a conscious or intentional failure to act warranting dismissal, as distinguished from an accidental or involuntary noncompliance, since the interrogatories went unanswered for over eight months and were ultimately answered only after the defendant moved for sanctions. Fidelity Enters., Inc. v. Heyman & Sizemore, 206 Ga. App. 602, 426 S.E.2d 177 (1992).

Plaintiff's persistent failure to answer the interrogatories and to comply with other proper and timely discovery warranted dismissal of the complaint as authorized by subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37. Vining v. Kimoto USA, Inc., 209 Ga. App. 296, 433 S.E.2d 342 (1993).

Plaintiff's intentional failure to attend the plaintiff's deposition and answer discovery requests warranted dismissal of the complaint, and the fact that the defendant also failed to respond to discovery did not excuse the plaintiff's failure to comply with the rules. West v. Equifax Credit Info. Servs., Inc., 230 Ga. App. 41, 495 S.E.2d 300 (1998).

Trial court could determine that the plaintiff's noncompliance was intentional based on evidence that the plaintiff failed to respond to requested discovery or to appear at the deposition without excuse or justification for the plaintiff's nonappearance. Rivers v. Almand, 241 Ga. App. 565, 527 S.E.2d 572 (1999).

Trial court's striking of the home owners' complaint in their civil action, arising from allegedly defective construction issues, was not an abuse of discretion pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b)(2)(C) because the owners wilfully failed to comply with discovery requests, despite repeated warnings and orders over an ongoing period of time; there was a motion for sanctions, which allowed the owners an opportunity to be heard on the matter, and the parties had made more than one attempt to resolve the discovery disputes, pursuant to Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.4. Gropper v. STO Corp., 276 Ga. App. 272, 623 S.E.2d 175 (2005).

Finding of willful failure is necessary before trial judge is authorized to enter default judgment against a disobedient defendant. Frady v. Irvin, 245 Ga. 307, 264 S.E.2d 866 (1980).

Failure to make findings of willfulness not always reversible error. — Although it is the better practice to make a specific finding of willfulness, it is not reversible error for the trial court to fail to do so, particularly if the motion for sanctions alleges willful conduct. Phillips v. Peachtree Hous., 138 Ga. App. 596, 226 S.E.2d 616 (1976).

Specific finding of willfulness in judgment not necessary. — Law authorizes the imposition of sanctions striking the defendant's pleadings when the failure to answer interrogatories is willful, but there is no requirement that the court make a specific finding in the court's judgment that such failure to answer was willful. Smith v. Byess, 127 Ga. App. 39, 192 S.E.2d 552 (1972).

Trial court's finding that the litigant's failure to answer was willful need not be explicitly stated in the court's order because it is implicit in the judgment itself that the court made such finding of willfulness. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. v. Echols, 138 Ga. App. 593, 226 S.E.2d 742 (1976).

Finding that the plaintiff not only failed to respond to the defendants' interrogatories in a timely fashion, but failed to seek an extension of time and failed even to contact the defendants concerning the problem, or even to respond to the defendants' motion to dismiss, was sufficient to authorize the trial court to dismiss the complaint. There is no requirement that the plaintiff display and the trial court find actual "willfulness," only a "conscious or intentional failure to act," as distinguished from an accidental or involuntary noncompliance. Bells Ferry Landing, Ltd. v. Wirtz, 188 Ga. App. 344, 373 S.E.2d 50 (1988); Roberts v. Maren Eng'g Corp., 225 Ga. App. 110, 483 S.E.2d 141 (1997).

There is no requirement that the plaintiff display and the trial court find actual willfulness. The sanction of dismissal for failure to comply with discovery provisions requires only a conscious or intentional failure to act as distinguished from an accidental or involuntary non-compliance. A conscious or intentional failure to act is in fact willful. Dyer v. Spectrum Eng'g, Inc., 245 Ga. App. 30, 537 S.E.2d 175 (2000).

Sanctions not authorized despite false swearing. — When the defendant answered the interrogatories and appeared for the defendant's deposition, thereby making the initial response required by subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37, the sanctions imposed, striking the defendant's answer and entering a default judgment finding the defendant liable, were not authorized, although the defendant's false swearing was found to have been deliberate, without an excuse, in an attempt to secrete facts from the court. Wills v. McAuley, 166 Ga. App. 4, 303 S.E.2d 26, cert. denied, 251 Ga. 41, 305 S.E.2d 120 (1983).

Willful attempt to conceal document. — In an action for breach of an employment contract, the trial court did not err by imposing the sanction of dismissal after the court found that the plaintiff willfully attempted to conceal a document which could have had a major impact on the litigation. Santora v. American Combustion, Inc., 225 Ga. App. 771, 485 S.E.2d 34 (1997).

Willful failure to appear at deposition. — Trial court is authorized to impose sanctions under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 when a party has willfully failed to appear at a deposition. Cook v. Lassiter, 159 Ga. App. 24, 282 S.E.2d 680 (1981); Washington v. South Ga. Medical Ctr., 221 Ga. App. 640, 472 S.E.2d 328 (1996); James v. Gray, 229 Ga. App. 39, 494 S.E.2d 198 (1997); King v. Board of Regentes of Univ. Sys. of Ga., 238 Ga. App. 4, 516 S.E.2d 581 (1999).

There is no requirement that a trial court expressly find willful noncompliance in order to impose sanctions under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d). Furthermore, it is unnecessary to issue an order compelling discovery under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(b) as a condition to imposing sanctions. Washington v. Harris, 259 Ga. App. 705, 578 S.E.2d 286 (2003).

Late filing of answers. — Since the record showed that answers were not filed until 65 days after the interrogatories were filed and served by mail, long after the time for timely responses, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in striking the company's defenses in an action brought for toxic gas leaks. Kemira, Inc. v. Amory, 210 Ga. App. 48, 435 S.E.2d 236 (1993).

Late answers to interrogatories which are filed after propounder has filed motion seeking sanction of dismissal do not nullify the motion. To hold otherwise would completely nullify the effect of subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37, for routine acceptance of late filing would have the effect of casting the procedure for sanctions for late filing under subsections (a), (b), and (c) of that section, requiring an order and that order's violation before sanctions could be imposed, and thereby precluding the sanctions of subsection (d) of that section and vitiating the discretion of the trial court. Rucker v. Blakey, 157 Ga. App. 615, 278 S.E.2d 158 (1981).

Dismissal under subsection (d) of this section is discretionary. Old S. Inv. Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co., 124 Ga. App. 697, 185 S.E.2d 584 (1971).

Dismissal and default proper only in flagrant cases. — Drastic sanctions of dismissal and default cannot be invoked under subsection (d) of this section except in the most flagrant cases, when the failure is willful, in bad faith, or in conscious disregard of an order. Delta Equities, Inc. v. Berry, 127 Ga. App. 590, 194 S.E.2d 284 (1972).

Defendant's statement that the defendant would never obey an order of court requiring that the defendant divulge news sources, the defendant's consistent resort to evasive and incomplete responses throughout the defendant's deposition, and the defendant's failure to offer a legal basis for the defendant's refusal to testify when invited to do so during the deposition, supported the trial court's conclusion that the defendant was not acting in good faith, and the court's dismissal of the defendant's defensive pleadings to the defamation action was proper. Georgia Communications Corp. v. Horne, 164 Ga. App. 227, 294 S.E.2d 725 (1982).

Pursuant to paragraph (d)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37, the trial court may impose the immediate sanction of dismissal for the plaintiff's failure to respond to the defendant's discovery requests. Evans v. East Coast Intermodal Sys., 191 Ga. App. 749, 382 S.E.2d 743 (1989).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in striking the respondent's defensive pleadings and entering a default judgment in favor of her former husband in a paternity proceeding, after she willfully and without any legal justification refused to obey the court's order that she submit to a blood test. Roderiguez v. Saylor, 190 Ga. App. 742, 380 S.E.2d 339 (1989).

Trial court properly issued an order finding the plaintiff had willfully failed to comply with the court's earlier order and dismissing the plaintiff's complaint with prejudice, since the plaintiff failed to comply with the trial court's order by failing to serve complete responses to interrogatories, to pay attorney fees and costs as ordered by the court, and to appear for deposition. Huff v. E.L. Davis Contracting Co., 195 Ga. App. 691, 394 S.E.2d 615 (1990).

Dismissal for conscious or intentional failure. — Harsh sanctions of dismissal or default provided in subsection (d) of this section against a party for willfully failing to appear before an officer for the taking of a deposition apply only when there is a conscious or intentional failure to appear as distinguished from an accidental or involuntary noncompliance. Smith v. Mullinax, 122 Ga. App. 833, 178 S.E.2d 909 (1970).

Accidental or involuntary noncompliance. — Sanction of dismissal for failure to comply with discovery provisions requires a conscious or intentional failure to act as distinguished from an accidental or involuntary noncompliance. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. v. Echols, 138 Ga. App. 593, 226 S.E.2d 742 (1976).

When the only reason set forth by the party who failed to respond to discovery does not show the failure was accidental or involuntary, dismissal is appropriate. Barron v. Spanier, 198 Ga. App. 801, 403 S.E.2d 88 (1991).

Dismissal permitted for willful failure to answer. — Subsection (d) of this section allows the court to dismiss a complaint without first issuing an order to comply when a party has willfully failed to answer propounded interrogatories. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. v. Echols, 138 Ga. App. 593, 226 S.E.2d 742 (1976).

Mistrial declared. — When the defendant proffered evidence at trial that should have been disclosed during discovery, the trial court's declaration of a mistrial was proper. Orkin Exterminating Co. v. McIntosh, 215 Ga. App. 587, 452 S.E.2d 159 (1994).

Failure to cooperate with counsel as willful misconduct. — Failure to maintain contact and cooperate with counsel about pending litigation so that discovery can be made is willful misconduct for purposes of sanctions under subsection (d) of this section. Phillips v. Peachtree Hous., 138 Ga. App. 596, 226 S.E.2d 616 (1976).

Willful failure to answer by attorney in fact. — When a nonresident defendant authorized the defendant's attorney to act as the defendant's attorney in fact to do all things necessary in defense of the law suit, the trial judge did not abuse the judge's discretion in finding willful failure to answer interrogatories and in imposing the harsh sanction of striking the defendant's answer and entering a default judgment. Gregory v. King Plumbing, Inc., 127 Ga. App. 512, 194 S.E.2d 271 (1972).

An evasive answer does not authorize entry of penalties under subsection (d) of this section. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Failure to Respond to Discovery Requests (Cont'd)

Dismissal of a complaint as a sanction for giving partial and evasive answers to certain interrogatories was an abuse of discretion when no order was ever entered requiring that the party provide more complete responses to the interrogatories. Strejc v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 197 Ga. App. 88, 397 S.E.2d 501 (1990).

Imposition of penalties under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37 is limited to an absolute failure to respond. When an evasive or incomplete response is given, the proper remedy is a motion to compel resulting in a court order under subsection (a). Orkin Exterminating Co. v. McIntosh, 215 Ga. App. 587, 452 S.E.2d 159 (1994).

Inadequate response not equivalent to total failure. — Response to the order to compel, although inadequate, should not have been treated as a total failure to respond under subsection (d) of this section so as to authorize imposition of the ultimate sanction; the court, in ordering further discovery after finding answers insufficient, could have set forth with specificity the details the answering party was to furnish, and if, after being compelled to supply enumerated deficiencies, the answering party failed to respond either in a timely fashion or in exact accordance with the order, a subsequent order granting judgment by default would be justified. Thornton v. Burson, 151 Ga. App. 456, 260 S.E.2d 388 (1979).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in dismissing the plaintiff's complaint with prejudice after the defendant did not contend that the plaintiff had failed to respond to interrogatories but only that the answers given were insufficient. Holt v. Brown, 177 Ga. App. 823, 341 S.E.2d 486 (1986).

Entry of default for answer by one not qualified to act as agent error. — Since a party answering interrogatories for a corporation was not qualified to speak as the party's agent, the court could have issued an order under subsection (a) of this section, and it was error to strike the defendant's response and enter a default judgment, treating the defendant's inadequate answer as a total failure to make an initial response under subsection (d) of this section. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Since subsection (d) of this section is intended to enforce the duty to respond to interrogatories, imposition of sanctions thereunder was error when the defendant corporation attempted to respond to interrogatories, through an individual who was adjudged not qualified to speak as an agent of the corporation. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 436, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

Default not proper in face of pending motion for protective order. — When a motion for a protective order concerning interrogatories has not been ruled upon, entry of a default judgment for failure to answer under subsection (d) of this section is error. Corey v. Renard, 151 Ga. App. 584, 260 S.E.2d 538 (1979); Dismuke v. Dismuke, 195 Ga. App. 613, 394 S.E.2d 371 (1990), cert. denied, 1995 Ga. LEXIS 1050 (1995), cert. denied, 1999 Ga. LEXIS 39 (1999).

Nonspecific request for sanctions permissible. — Nonspecific request for sanctions to punish a failure to respond to interrogatories is permissible under subsection (d) of this section. Mayer v. Interstate Fire Ins. Co., 243 Ga. 435, 254 S.E.2d 825 (1979).

No authority to impose subsection (d) sanctions if response filed. — Authority to apply sanctions under subsection (d) of this section for complete failure to respond to notice to produce and for failure to answer interrogatories is lost once response has been filed and interrogatories have been answered. Rollins Communications, Inc. v. Henderson, Few & Co., 140 Ga. App. 504, 231 S.E.2d 412 (1976).

Right to seek sanctions is waived when answer filed. — Once answers to interrogatories are filed, even though filed late, the propounder waives the right to ask the court to apply sanctions under subsection (d) of this section. Bratten Apparel, Inc. v. Lyons Textile Mill, Inc., 129 Ga. App. 384, 199 S.E.2d 632 (1973).

Absent timely motion, authority to apply sanctions enumerated in subsection (d) of this section is lost once answers to interrogatories are filed, even though the answers are filed late, because once such answers are filed the propounder waives the right to ask the court to apply sanctions under subsection (d). Record Shack of Atlanta, Inc. v. Daugherty, 147 Ga. App. 753, 250 S.E.2d 154 (1978).

Sanctions not precluded by late response after motion. — Once a motion for sanctions under subsection (d) of this section has been filed, the opposite party may not preclude their imposition by making a belated response at the hearing. Houston Gen. Ins. Co. v. Stein Steel & Supply Co., 134 Ga. App. 624, 215 S.E.2d 511 (1975); Wetherington v. Koepenick & Horne, Inc., 153 Ga. App. 302, 265 S.E.2d 107 (1980).

Once motion for sanctions has been filed, the opposite party may not preclude their imposition by making a belated response in the interim before the hearing or at the hearing itself. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. v. Echols, 138 Ga. App. 593, 226 S.E.2d 742 (1976).

Trial court did not lose the court's authority to impose sanctions due to the defendant's failure to respond to interrogatories simply because answers to the interrogatories were eventually filed following the motion for sanctions and prior to the hearing. Danger v. Strother, 171 Ga. App. 607, 320 S.E.2d 613 (1984).

Once a motion for sanctions is filed for failure to respond to interrogatories, sanctions may be entered under paragraph (d)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37, even if responses are subsequently filed. Gazelah v. Rome Gen. Practice, Inc., 232 Ga. App. 343, 502 S.E.2d 251 (1998).

Sanctions not avoided by attack on request. — Party who fails to respond to a set of interrogatories cannot avoid sanctions by contending that the request for interrogatories was improper or objectionable. Sneider v. English, 129 Ga. App. 638, 200 S.E.2d 469 (1973).

Failure to act in good faith supported award. — In a suit for breach of contract, trade secret misappropriations, and other business tort claims, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by ordering sanctions for discovery violations upon the defendants, including attorney fees, because the trial court concluded that the defendants did not act in good faith compliance with the protective order when the defendants marked more than 129,000 discovery documents confidential. Hull v. WTI, Inc., 322 Ga. App. 304, 744 S.E.2d 825 (2013).

Refusal of sanctions as abuse of discretion. — Although the terms of subsection (d) of this section are discretionary, there may be circumstances when refusal of a party to appear for taking of depositions after proper notice is so flagrantly willful and productive of injury to the other side that it would be an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court to refuse punitive action. Hohlstein v. White, 117 Ga. App. 207, 160 S.E.2d 232 (1968).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in denying the plaintiff's motion for sanctions after the defendant delayed in responding to the plaintiff's interrogatories for 14 months with no apparent justification, while placing on plaintiff the expense of responding to the defendant's own discovery and the expense and delay of moving for the court's intervention. Vlasz v. Schweikhardt, 178 Ga. App. 512, 343 S.E.2d 749 (1986).

Dismissal of earlier complaint justifies later summary judgment for same claim for relief. — Trial court did not err in granting a motion for summary judgment based upon the defense of res judicata, following dismissal of an earlier complaint, containing exactly the same material allegations and asserting the same claim for relief, for failure to answer interrogatories. Brantley v. Sparks, 167 Ga. App. 323, 306 S.E.2d 337 (1983).

Denial of a motion to apply sanctions was not an abuse of discretion since the evidence showed the failure to comply with interrogatories was caused by counsel being a considerable distance from the client and the fact that the client's occupation was a hindrance to the completion of the interrogatories before another lawyer who had similar scheduling problems. Hiney v. Bennaman, 177 Ga. App. 753, 341 S.E.2d 284 (1986).

Since the discovery sanction hearing was not transcribed, the appellate court assumed the trial court's action in imposing sanctions was supported by the record; there was no abuse of discretion in the striking of the city's answer and the entry of default judgment against the city as sanctions for the failure to fully comply with discovery requests. City of Atlanta v. Paulk, 274 Ga. App. 10, 616 S.E.2d 210 (2005).

Failure of party either to respond to interrogatories or to seek protective order authorizes the imposition of immediate sanctions without the preliminary necessity of an order to compel. Bryant v. Nationwide Ins. Co., 183 Ga. App. 577, 359 S.E.2d 441 (1987) (dismissal of complaint not abuse of discretion).

Failure to verify answers. — Plaintiff's failure to verify the plaintiff's interrogatory answers does not constitute a willful total failure to respond and, therefore, did not justify the sanction of dismissing the defendant's complaint since the responses were submitted on behalf of two plaintiffs prior to the motion for sanctions and since the second signed and verified the answers. Rivers v. Goodson, 184 Ga. App. 70, 360 S.E.2d 740 (1987).

Plaintiff's failure to appear at a deposition and to pay certain court-ordered attorney fees warrants the extreme sanction of dismissal of the offending party's pleadings. Peoples v. Yu, 184 Ga. App. 252, 361 S.E.2d 244 (1987).

Response after filing of motion for sanctions. — Once a motion for sanctions has been filed, imposition of sanctions cannot be precluded by a belated response made by the opposite party. Rogers v. Sharpe, 206 Ga. App. 353, 425 S.E.2d 391 (1992).

Assessment of reasonable expenses authorized. — Among the sanctions imposed by subsection (d) of this section is the assessment of reasonable expenses occasioned by the failure. Kruger v. Kruger, 146 Ga. App. 461, 246 S.E.2d 469 (1978).

Proof of damages after imposition of default sanction. — Although subsection (d) of Ga. L. 1970, p. 157, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37) is silent on the question of necessity of proof of damages when the sanction of judgment by default has been imposed against a disobedient party, the principles of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 24 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a)) should apply to a judgment by default imposed under subsection (d) of Ga. L. 1970, p. 157, § 1. House v. Hewett Studios, Inc., 125 Ga. App. 127, 186 S.E.2d 584 (1971); Sterling Factors v. Whelan, 245 B.R. 698 (N.D. Ga. 2000).

Sanctions proper for discovery abuse. — In a negligence case, a trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by striking the defendants' joint answer and counterclaim as a sanction for discovery abuse because the evidence established that the defendants intentionally and in bad faith concealed damaging evidence by repairing the tractor trailer and destroying information from the computer units involved in the accident, provided false answers to interrogatories, and the plaintiff was prejudiced by the misconduct. Howard v. Alegria, 321 Ga. App. 178, 739 S.E.2d 95 (2013).

TRIALS

9-11-38. Right to jury trial.

The right of trial by jury as declared by the Constitution of the state or as given by a statute of the state shall be preserved to the parties inviolate. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 38.)

Cross references. — Right to trial by jury generally, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI. Right to trial by jury in certiorari cases in superior court, § 5-4-11. Juries, T. 15, C. 12.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Right to jury trials in most cases. — Constitution of Georgia as well as the “Civil Practice Act” (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) guarantees the right of a jury trial to civil litigants in most cases. Raintree Farms, Inc. v. Stripping Ctr., Ltd., 166 Ga. App. 848, 305 S.E.2d 660 (1983).

Right to trial by jury not conferred in all cases. — Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, §§ 38 and 39 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-38 and 9-11-39) cannot be interpreted to mean that a person has a right to trial by jury in all cases; in this state there is no constitutional right to a trial by jury in equity cases. Duncan v. First Nat’l Bank, 597 F.2d 51 (5th Cir. 1979).

Because the Seventh Amendment to the U.S. Constitution did not apply in state courts, and an insured’s right to a jury trial thereunder was not infringed when genuine issues of material fact were lacking and disposition of the matter was best handled by way of summary judgment, the insured’s Seventh Amendment right to a jury trial was not infringed; as a result, the insured failed to demonstrate any constitutional deprivation warranting a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action. Cuyler v. Allstate Ins. Co., 284 Ga. App. 409, 643 S.E.2d 783, cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 510 (Ga. 2007).

shall not be taken away in cases when the right existed when the Constitution was adopted in 1798. Cawthon v. Douglas County, 248 Ga. 760, 286 S.E.2d 30 (1982).

Any right to jury trial in equitable proceedings must be statutory. — Interposition of juries in the trial of chancery (equity) cases is purely a matter of legislative regulation, and originated in this state in the Judiciary Act of 1799; it is not a constitutional right or one guaranteed by the Magna Charta. Williams v. Overstreet, 230 Ga. 112, 195 S.E.2d 906 (1973).

Since there is no constitutional right to a trial by jury in equitable proceedings, such a right can exist only in instances when the right is conferred by statute. Duncan v. First Nat’l Bank, 597 F.2d 51 (5th Cir. 1979).

Legislative restriction of right of trial by jury in equity cases would be constitutional. Williams v. Overstreet, 230 Ga. 112, 195 S.E.2d 906 (1973).

There is no statutory right to trial by jury in equity cases in general. Cawthon v. Douglas County, 248 Ga. 760, 286 S.E.2d 30 (1982).

There is no right to a jury in a suit for injunction. Turner Adv. Co. v. Garcia, 251 Ga. 46, 302 S.E.2d 547 (1983).

There is no statutory right to a jury trial in garnishment proceedings. Worsham Bros. Co. v. FDIC, 167 Ga. App. 163, 305 S.E.2d 816 (1983).

Although a trial court trying a suit for injunction may empanel a jury to render special verdicts, the court is not required to do so. Turner Adv. Co. v. Garcia, 251 Ga. 46, 302 S.E.2d 547 (1983).

Enforcement of equitable lien. — Case begun as an action to enforce an equitable lien on funds held by a defendant, and concluded as an interpleader action after the funds were paid into the registry of the court by the stakeholder, is a case in equity in which there is no right to a jury trial. Williams v. Overstreet, 230 Ga. 112, 195 S.E.2d 906 (1973).

Constitutional right to jury trial in law cases. — In a case at common law, a party has the constitutional right to have all questions of fact passed upon by a jury, and a legislative denial of that right is unconstitutional. Williams v. Overstreet, 230 Ga. 112, 195 S.E.2d 906 (1973).

Constitutional right to jury trial in dispossessory actions. — Georgia Constitution provides for the right of trial by jury in dispossessory actions. Hill v. Levenson, 259 Ga. 395, 383 S.E.2d 110 (1989).

Contracts. — Cases heard on contract, when an issuable defense is filed, require trial by jury unless waived. Redding v. Commonwealth of Am., Inc., 143 Ga. App. 215, 237 S.E.2d 689 (1977).

If legal cause involved, jury trial available. — It makes no difference if the equitable cause clearly outweighs the legal cause so that the basic issue of the case taken as a whole is equitable; as long as any legal cause is involved, the jury rights, which it creates, control. Duncan v. First Nat'l Bank, 597 F.2d 51 (5th Cir. 1979).

Dismissal for failure to state cause not contravention of right to jury trial. — When a complaint fails to state a claim, dismissal of such claim is not error even if the complainant has made a demand for a jury trial, and does not contravene the provisions of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 38 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-38) or of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-40), nor of Ga. Const.,

Art. VI, Sec. XVI, Para. I (see now Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI), relating to the right to trial by jury. Bush v. Morris, 123 Ga. App. 497, 181 S.E.2d 503 (1971).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-38 sets no time limit for demands for trial by jury, and if there is no time limit within which a demand for jury trial must be made, a demand may be made at any time before the case is called for trial, or upon the call for trial. Carleton v. State, 176 Ga. App. 399, 336 S.E.2d 333 (1985).

Local court rule requiring parties to timely appeal the adverse ruling of an arbitration board if the parties desired to pursue a jury trial did not deny the parties their constitutional right to a jury trial since the parties were given a reasonable opportunity to demand a jury trial and waived the parties' right to a jury trial by failing to file a timely demand. Tippins v. Winn-Dixie Atlanta, Inc., 192 Ga. App. 172, 384 S.E.2d 199, cert. denied, 192 Ga. App. 903, 384 S.E.2d 199 (1989).

Trial de novo after nonbinding arbitration. — Local court rule provision that a trial de novo be available only upon demand after nonbinding arbitration did not deny the right to a jury trial. Davis v. Gaona, 260 Ga. 450, 396 S.E.2d 218 (1990).

Dismissed employee had no constitutional right to trial by jury on the employee's claim for back pay under the Georgia Equal Employment for the Handicapped Code, Ga. L. 1981, p. 1803. Smith v. Milliken & Co., 189 Ga. App. 897, 377 S.E.2d 916 (1989).

Request for jury trial in suit involving cancellation of lis pendens notice denied. — See Snow's Farming Enters., Inc. v. Carver State Bank, 206 Ga. App. 661, 426 S.E.2d 158 (1992).

Prelitigation contractual waiver of the right to trial by jury is not enforceable in cases tried under the laws of Georgia. Bank S. v. Howard, 264 Ga. 339, 444 S.E.2d 799 (1994).

Implicit waiver of right to jury trial. — In an auto dealer's suit against a car buyer, the buyer's waiver of the right to a jury trial under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XI(a) and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-38 was implied by the buyer's failure to make a written demand for a jury trial or to object to the case being specially set for a bench trial at a hearing on the buyer's successful motion to vacate a judgment entered in favor of the dealer. Cole v. ACR/Atlanta Car Remarketing, Inc., 295 Ga. App. 510, 672 S.E.2d 420 (2008).

Voluntary waiver required. — Waiver of jury trial provision in bank's guaranty agreement was not enforceable against the defendant since the defendant could not have knowingly and voluntarily given up the defendant's right to trial by jury since the defendant could not have been aware of the basis and circumstances of any future claim upon the guaranty. Howard v. Bank S., 209 Ga. App. 407, 433 S.E.2d 625 (1993).

Husband did not waive right to jury trial. — Trial court erroneously denied a husband's motion for a new trial and to set aside the decree of divorce as the husband's actions in showing up 45 minutes late in answering a calendar call did not amount to either an expressed or implied waiver of an asserted right to a jury trial, and the husband did not expressly consent to a bench trial. Walker v. Walker, 280 Ga. 696, 631 S.E.2d 697 (2006).

Waiver of right to jury trial in contempt proceeding. — In a criminal contempt case, the trial court did not err in failing to submit the issue of financial inability to the jury because a business partner waived the partner's right to a jury trial on the issue of financial inability since the partner did not file a jury trial demand until after the evidentiary hearing had commenced and the partner had previously requested that the contempt hearing be placed on a non-jury calendar; a litigant may impliedly waive the statutory right to a jury trial by his or her

Right to jury trial not infringed when no issue of material fact disputed. — Trial court did not violate a purchaser's right to a jury trial under the Georgia Constitution or O.C.G.A. § 9-11-38 by granting summary judgment to a lender because the right to a jury trial was not infringed when the jury would have no role since there were no issues of material fact in dispute. Leone v. Green Tree Servicing, LLC, 311 Ga. App. 702, 716 S.E.2d 720 (2011).

Waiver of right to jury trial in probate proceeding. — Trial court had subject matter jurisdiction to review the probate court's decision under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I and O.C.G.A. § 15-6-8(4)(E) to deny probate of the decedent's 1988 will and the parties' waiver of the statutory right to a jury trial did not deprive the trial court of subject matter jurisdiction to deny probate of the will. Mosley v. Lancaster, 770 S.E.2d 873, No. S14A1914, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 195 (2015).

(a) The parties or their attorneys of record, by written stipulation filed with the court or by an oral stipulation made in open court and entered in the record, may consent to trial by the court sitting without a jury.

(b) In all actions not triable of right by a jury, or where jury trial has been expressly waived, the court may nevertheless order a trial with a jury whose verdict will have the same effect as if trial by jury had been a matter of right or had not been waived. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 39.)

CONSENT TO TRIAL WITHOUT JURY

General Consideration

Local law to yield to this section. — Local law requiring a demand for jury trial on or before appearance day as a condition precedent to jury trial must yield to contrary law set out in this section. Servisco, Inc. v. R.B.M. of Atlanta, Inc., 147 Ga. App. 671, 250 S.E.2d 10 (1978).

Contract actions. — Cases heard on contract, when an issuable defense is filed, require trial by jury unless waived. Redding v. Commonwealth of Am., Inc., 143 Ga. App. 215, 237 S.E.2d 689 (1977).

Equity cases. — Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, §§ 38 and 39 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-38 and 9-11-39) cannot be interpreted to mean that a person has a right to trial by jury in all cases; in this state there is no constitutional right to a trial by jury in equity cases. Duncan v. First Nat'l Bank, 597 F.2d 51 (5th Cir. 1979).

Discretion of court. — Grant or denial of a jury trial is committed to the trial court's discretion with which the appellate courts normally refuse to interfere. Nat'l Health Servs., Inc. v. Townsend, 130 Ga. App. 700, 204 S.E.2d 299 (1974).

Court errs in ruling on issues after grant of partial summary judgment when jury trial requested. — When the defendant requested a jury trial and there was neither a written stipulation nor an oral stipulation made in open court and entered on the record, the trial court errs in ruling upon all of the issues remaining in the case after the grant of the defendant's motion for partial summary judgment. Jackson v. Patton, 157 Ga. App. 410, 277 S.E.2d 769 (1981).

Trial court trying a suit for injunction may empanel a jury to render special verdicts, but the court is not required to do so. Turner Adv. Co. v. Garcia, 251 Ga. 46, 302 S.E.2d 547 (1983), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 824, 105 S. Ct. 101, 83 L. Ed. 2d 46 (1984).

Paternity action defendant was entitled to jury trial since, although he made no written demand for a jury trial, he did file an answer raising issuable defenses to the paternity petition and did not consent by an express stipulation to a bench trial. Stinson v. Pratt, 182 Ga. App. 552, 356 S.E.2d 519 (1987).

Waiver of right to jury trial in probate proceeding. — Trial court had subject matter jurisdiction to review the probate court's decision under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. IV, Para. I and O.C.G.A. § 15-6-8(4)(E) to deny probate of the decedent's 1988 will and the parties' waiver of the statutory right to a jury trial did not deprive the trial court of subject matter jurisdiction to deny probate of the will. Mosley v. Lancaster, 770 S.E.2d 873, No. S14A1914, 2015 Ga. LEXIS 195 (2015).

Trial court authorized to strike jury trial demand from pleadings as sanction for refusal to participate in proceedings. — In a divorce proceeding, the trial court did not err in dismissing a husband's demand for a jury trial because the trial court was authorized to strike from the pleadings the husband's demand for a jury trial as a proper sanction for his willful refusal to participate in the proceedings; by his own admission, the husband deliberately chose not to attend the trial, and he presented no legitimate reason for that decision. Kautter v. Kautter, 286 Ga. 16, 685 S.E.2d 266 (2009).

App. 318, 235 S.E.2d 759 (1977); Gregson & Assocs., Inc. v. Webb, 143 Ga. App. 276, 238 S.E.2d 274 (1977); Cawthon v. Douglas County, 248 Ga. 760, 286 S.E.2d 30 (1982); Utz v. Powell, 160 Ga. App. 888, 288 S.E.2d 601 (1982); Smith v. Smith, 165 Ga. App. 532, 301 S.E.2d 696 (1983); Worsham Bros. Co. v. FDIC, 167 Ga. App. 163, 305 S.E.2d 816 (1983); McElroy v. McElroy, 252 Ga. 553, 314 S.E.2d 893 (1984); Trans-State, Inc. v. Barber, 170 Ga. App. 372, 317 S.E.2d 242 (1984); Tigner v. Shearson-Lehman Hutton, Inc., 201 Ga. App. 713, 411 S.E.2d 800 (1991); Matthews v. Matthews, 268 Ga. 863, 494 S.E.2d 325 (1998); Rose v. Waldrip, 316 Ga. App. 812, 730 S.E.2d 529 (2012).

Consent to nonjury trial. — Parties to an action may consent to a nonjury trial and, thereby, waive their rights to a jury trial under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-39. Whitaker & Rambo Interior Designs, Inc. v. Prudential Property Cas. Ins. Co., 510 F. Supp. 97 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Trial court did not deprive a homeowner of due process by dismissing a claim for damages at the conclusion of a hearing because the homeowner voluntarily participated in a consolidated non-jury hearing on the threshold issue of causation;

there was a consensus among the trial court and the litigants that the homeowner's prayer for a permanent injunction and the claim for damages would both fail unless the homeowner could establish that a county water authority's underground water line was causing pressure waves and vibrations on the homeowner's property. Meacham v. Franklin-Heard County Water Auth., 302 Ga. App. 69, 690 S.E.2d 186 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0865, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 427 (Ga. 2010).

Presumption of waiver conflicts with section. — In general terms, the presumption of waiver in a local rule from failure to demand a jury trial within a certain time conflicts with the requirement of express waiver in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-39; more specifically, a conflict exists when the local rule requires a pretrial demand for jury trial, as that section provides for a jury trial as a matter of right unless the parties consent to a nonjury trial, which must be manifested by express stipulation or by voluntary participation in a nonjury trial. To the extent of the conflict, the local rule is void. Raintree Farms, Inc. v. Stripping Ctr., Ltd., 166 Ga. App. 848, 305 S.E.2d 660 (1983).

Knowing and voluntary waiver. — Requirement of written stipulation before waiver of the right to trial by jury carries the implication that such waivers be knowing and voluntary, i.e., demonstrates full understanding of all circumstances surrounding relinquishment of the known right. Howard v. Bank S., 209 Ga. App. 407, 433 S.E.2d 625 (1993).

Actions of party as waiver. — In exceptional circumstances, a party may waive the right to a jury trial by the party's actions. York v. Miller, 168 Ga. App. 849, 310 S.E.2d 577 (1983).

Requirement for waiver is paramount to any local rule of state court which imposes a stricter condition on the right to a jury trial; a local law which requires a demand for a jury trial as a condition precedent to obtaining a trial by jury must yield to contrary law as set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-39. Whitaker & Rambo Interior Designs, Inc. v. Prudential Property Cas. Ins. Co., 510 F. Supp. 97 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Waiver requires stipulation. — When a party is entitled to trial by jury, waiver requires stipulation which is made part of the record. Whitaker & Rambo Interior Designs, Inc. v. Prudential Property Cas. Ins. Co., 510 F. Supp. 97 (N.D. Ga. 1981).

Waiver in first trial applies to retrials. — When the parties in a case regarding the interpretation of a lease had waived the right to a jury trial and had participated in a bench trial, and then the trial court's ruling was appealed and partially reversed and the matter was remanded, the trial court did not err on remand in refusing to submit to a jury the issue which the appellate court had remanded for determination, despite the lessor's demand for a jury trial on remand, as the lessor's participation in the bench trial was a waiver of the right to a jury trial and the waiver of a jury trial in the first trial applied to the retrial after remand in the same case. Barrow County Airport Auth. v. Romanair, Inc., 260 Ga. App. 887, 581 S.E.2d 402 (2003).

Statement in chambers not sufficient oral stipulation. — Statement by counsel in the judge's chambers does not satisfy requirement of this section that oral stipulation must be made in open court and entered in the record. Blanchard v. Taylor, 136 Ga. App. 237, 220 S.E.2d 757 (1975).

Husband did not waive right to jury trial. — Trial court erroneously denied a husband's motion for a new trial and to set aside the decree of divorce as the husband's actions in showing up 45 minutes late in answering a calendar call did not amount to either an expressed or implied waiver of an asserted right to a jury trial, and the husband did not expressly consent to a bench trial. Walker v. Walker, 280 Ga. 696, 631 S.E.2d 697 (2006).

Prelitigation contractual waiver of the right to trial by jury is not enforceable in cases tried under the laws of Georgia. Bank S. v. Howard, 264 Ga. 339, 444 S.E.2d 799 (1994).

Waiver of right to jury trial in contempt proceeding. — In a criminal contempt case, the trial court did not err in failing to submit the issue of financial inability to the jury because a business partner waived the partner's right to a jury trial on the issue of financial inability since the partner did not file a jury trial demand until after the evidentiary hearing had commenced and the partner had previously requested that the contempt hearing be placed on a non-jury calendar; a litigant may impliedly waive the statutory right to a jury trial by his or her conduct. Affatato v. Considine, 305 Ga. App. 755, 700 S.E.2d 717 (2010).

Withdrawal of jury trial waiver. — As the grant of a mistrial was an appropriate remedy for surprise at trial caused by new claims raised by the plaintiff, the trial court was authorized by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-39(b) to terminate the bench trial and to allow the defendants to withdraw the defendants' jury waiver and demand a new trial by jury. Griggs v. Fletcher, 294 Ga. App. 60, 668 S.E.2d 521 (2008).

9-11-40. Time and place of trial.

(a) Time of trial. All civil cases, including divorce and other domestic relations cases, shall be triable any time after the last day upon which defensive pleadings were required to be filed therein; provided, however, that the court shall in all cases afford to the parties reasonable time for discovery procedures, subsequent to the date that defensive pleadings were required to be filed; provided, further, that, in divorce cases involving service by publication, service shall occur on the date of the first publication of notice following the order for service of publication pursuant to subparagraph (f)(1)(C) of Code Section 9-11-4, and such divorce cases shall be triable any time after 60 days have elapsed since the date of the first publication of notice.

(b) Trial in chambers. The judges of any courts of record may, on reasonable notice to the parties, at any time and at chambers in any county in the circuit, hear and determine by interlocutory or final judgment any matter or issue where a jury trial is not required or has been waived. However, nothing in this subsection shall authorize the trial of any divorce case by consent or otherwise until after the last day upon which defensive pleadings were required by law to be filed therein.

(c) Assignment of cases for trial. The courts shall provide for the placing of actions upon the trial calendar:

- (1) Without request of the parties but upon notice to the parties; or
- (2) Upon request of a party and notice to the other parties.

Except for cause, cases shall be placed upon the calendar in chronological order in accordance with filing dates. Precedence shall be given to actions entitled thereto by any statute. (Ga. ASSIGNMENT OF CASES FOR TRIAL

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, §§ 3-510 and 81-1003 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Dismissal for failure to state claim. — When a complaint fails to state a claim, dismissal of such claim is not error even though the complainant has made a demand for a jury trial, and does not contravene this section. Bush v. Morris, 123 Ga. App. 497, 181 S.E.2d 503 (1971).

Reasonable notice required. — Power of superior courts to determine issues by final judgment at chambers in any county in the judicial circuit when a jury verdict is not required may be exercised only after reasonable notice to the parties. Hinson v. Hinson, 218 Ga. 447, 128 S.E.2d 487 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in denying a motion to set aside a default judgment entered when a builder failed to appear for trial in a breach of contract action; a nonamendable defect was shown on the face of the record, which established that the builder had never received actual notice of the trial as the notice was sent to the wrong address and was returned. Moore v. Davidson, 292 Ga. App. 57, 663 S.E.2d 766 (2008).

Trial court not required to provide notice of trial date. — Superior court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a stepson's motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d) to set aside a judgment entered in favor of an administrator based on the claim that the stepson's attorney had no notice of the trial date because the superior court placed the case on the trial calendar upon the stepson's request; therefore, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-40(c)(2), the superior court was not required to provide the stepson with notice of the trial date, and the stepson's attorney had a duty to attend court and look after the attorney's and the stepson's interests. Bocker v. Crisp, 313 Ga. App. 585, 722 S.E.2d 186 (2012).

Time of TrialConsent of parties inconsequential.

— Under subsection (a) of this section, consent of the parties is inconsequential. Bradberry v. Bradberry, 232 Ga. 651, 208 S.E.2d 469 (1974).

Time for trial set by this section.

— After time for filing defensive pleadings expires, it is not error for permanent child custody hearing to be set by rule nisi less than 30 days later, as the time for trial is set by subsection (a) of Ga. L. 1976, p. 1677, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-40), not Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c)). Brand v. Brand, 244 Ga. App. 124, 259 S.E.2d 133 (1979).

Upon reading the rules within the Civil Practice Act (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) in para materia with Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 24.6(B), the trial court was authorized to grant a divorce well after 30 days from the time an answer would have been due; hence, the trial court did not err in denying a wife's motion to set that judgment aside. Hammack v. Hammack, 281 Ga. 202, 635 S.E.2d 752 (2006).

Reasonable time for discovery required. — All that is required by subsection (a) of this section is reasonableness as to the time allowed for discovery. Partain v. Mayor of Royston, 246 Ga. 297, 271 S.E.2d 201 (1980).

Thirteen months sufficient time for discovery. — Passage of 13 months after joinder of issue before trial was a sufficient period of time for purposes of discovery to satisfy the reasonableness requirement of subsection (a) of this section. Puritan Fashions Corp. v. Naftel, 138 Ga. App. 479, 226 S.E.2d 305 (1976).

Discretion of court as to limitation of discovery. — Trial court has broad discretion concerning the use of and limitations upon discovery procedure, and this discretion will not be disturbed on appeal in absence of abuse of that discretion. Partain v. Mayor of Royston, 246 Ga. 297, 271 S.E.2d 201 (1980).

Publication of trial calendar as notice. — Since the defendant had actual knowledge of the pendency of the defendant's case, the publication of the trial calendar in the county's legal organ constituted sufficient notice of the trial date so as to satisfy due process. Carson v. Morris, 164 Ga. App. 732, 297 S.E.2d 513 (1982).

Publication of the calendar of the state court in the official organ of the county is sufficient notice to parties of pending trials in that court. Automated Medical Servs., Inc. v. Holland, 166 Ga. App. 57, 303 S.E.2d 127 (1983).

Denial of motion to set aside a default judgment against a corporation was not an abuse of discretion as the trial was properly noticed by publication of the trial calendar in the county's legal gazette; publication of a court calendar in the county's legal organ of record was sufficient notice to the parties to appear. Migmar, Inc. v. Williams, 281 Ga. App. 870, 637 S.E.2d 471 (2006).

Reasonable notice not given by the trial court. — Trial court lacked the authority to grant any equitable relief other than an accounting without giving notice, after one partner and the management company did not have notice that another partner was seeking, and the trial court was considering, the granting of a dissolution and injunction at the hearing for a pre-dissolution accounting, the trial court also failed to inform the parties that it would resolve requests for other equitable relief and the management company neither consented nor acquiesced to the trial court deciding any issue besides an accounting. Williams v. Tritt, 262 Ga. 173,

Failure to properly request continuance. — When the record did not support the defendant's contention that a written request for continuance had been made in that a copy of the motion did not show on the motions's face that the motion was ever filed, and when no oral request had been made, there was no abuse of discretion when the case was set for trial four months after the answer was filed. Surgijet, Inc. v. Hicks, 236 Ga. App. 80, 511 S.E.2d 194 (1999).

Trial in Chambers

Equity cases. — There is no constitutional right to trial by jury in equity cases. Phillips v. Gladney, 234 Ga. 399, 216 S.E.2d 297 (1975); Duncan v. First Nat'l Bank, 597 F.2d 51 (5th Cir. 1979).

Final judgment after interlocutory hearing when no issues of fact raised. — When no issues of fact are raised, a trial judge is authorized to enter a final judgment after an interlocutory hearing. Consortium Mgt. Co. v. Mutual Am. Corp., 246 Ga. 346, 271 S.E.2d 488 (1980).

When the defendant filed the defensive pleadings which raised no issue of fact on the vital questions in the case, the trial judge was authorized to enter final judgment after hearing evidence presented at an interlocutory hearing. Phillips v. Gladney, 234 Ga. 399, 216 S.E.2d 297 (1975).

Ex parte hearings only proper in extraordinary cases. — Ex parte hearings are not sanctioned, except in the case of extraordinary matters such as temporary restraining orders and temporary injunctions; in other judicial hearings, both parties should be notified of the hearing and given an opportunity to attend and voice objections. Anderson v. Fulton Nat'l Bank, 146 Ga. App. 155, 245 S.E.2d 860 (1978); Biggs v. Heriot, 249 Ga. App. 461, 549 S.E.2d 131 (2001).

Action for modification not a "divorce case". — Action to modify the custody provisions of an earlier divorce decree is not a "divorce case" within the exception provided in subsection (b). Adair v. Adair, 239 Ga. 494, 238 S.E.2d 46 (1977).

Final judgment was prematurely entered at a temporary hearing in a divorce proceeding since 23 days remained during which defensive pleadings would have been required by law to be filed and both parties had filed timely demands for a jury trial. Henderson v. Henderson, 258 Ga. 205, 367 S.E.2d 40 (1988).

Assignment of Cases for Trial

Subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-40) must be construed in pari materia with Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(a)). Newell Rd. Bldrs., Inc. v. Ramirez, 126 Ga. App. 850, 192 S.E.2d 184 (1972).

Cases placed on calendar on court's motion or request of party. — While under subsection (c) of this section courts may place cases on the trial calendar on notice to the parties, courts must also do so upon request of a party. Etheridge v. Etheridge, 242 Ga. 101, 249 S.E.2d 569 (1978).

Notice of trial by publication of court calendar is adequate notice pursuant to subsection (c) of this section. First Nat'l Bank v. Gorlin, 243 Ga. 707, 256 S.E.2d 450 (1979).

When timely notice of the trial calendar, with the case style, case number, counsel of record, and pro se status is published in the legal organ of the county, such notice satisfies the notice requirements and is adequate under subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-40. Davis v. Butler, 240 Ga. App. 72, 522 S.E.2d 548 (1999).

Publication in official county newspaper sufficient. — Publication of trial calendar in official county newspaper is notice of trial pursuant to subsection (c) of this section. Brown v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 245 Ga. 515, 265 S.E.2d 791 (1980); East India Co. v. Marsh & McLennan, Inc., 160 Ga. App. 529, 287 S.E.2d 574 (1981).

Publication of date and time of trial in the official organ of the county constitute sufficient notice under subsection (c) of this section. Kleiner v. Blender, 152 Ga. App. 426, 263 S.E.2d 232 (1979).

Requirements of paragraph (c)(1) are complied with by mailing notice that case will be on the trial calendar on a given date to the attorney for the litigant, when no question is raised that the notice was received in due course of mail. Trice v. Howard, 130 Ga. App. 895, 204 S.E.2d 808 (1974).

Notice of exact day of trial is not required. Redding v. Raines, 239 Ga. 865, 239 S.E.2d 32 (1977).

Lack of actual notice not determinative. — Even though the party may not have actual notice, if the requirements for giving notice are complied with, notice provisions of subsection (c) of this section are satisfied. Holbrook v. Halpern Enters., Inc., 141 Ga. App. 648, 234 S.E.2d 187 (1977).

Notice to counsel presently of record sufficient. — Giving of notice to attorney who is counsel of record as of time the notice is mailed is sufficient compliance with subsection (c) of this section. Tallman Pools of Ga., Inc. v. Napier, 137 Ga. App. 500, 224 S.E.2d 426 (1976).

Notice to withdrawn counsel. — When party's original counsel of record, who withdraws from the case, receives notice of the trial date, the party is on notice as to the date in accordance with this section, despite the fact that the original counsel might not actually inform the party of the notice before withdrawing from representation. McNally v. Stonehenge, Inc., 242 Ga. 258, 248 S.E.2d 653 (1978).

Default judgment set aside when notice sent to former counsel. — When the defendant's counsel withdraws from the case and notifies the court, but the only notice of the trial date is sent to the former counsel, who makes no effort to inform the former client, a motion to set aside a subsequently entered default judgment should be granted. Georgia Hwy. Express, Inc. v. Whaley, 166 Ga. App. 662, 305 S.E.2d 411 (1983).

Right to rely on compliance with notice requirements. — Parties have a right to rely that notice of trial assignments is given in compliance with court rules and this section. Vaughan v. Car Tapes, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 178, 217 S.E.2d 436 (1975).

Especially in light of the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-40(c) and Ga. Unif. St. Ct. R. 8.3, regarding the trial calendar and notice to the parties, the defendant was entitled to rely on the trial court's written order specifically setting a trial date for October 22, 2001, and, therefore, the trial court erred in holding a bench trial in the defendant's absence on an earlier date without properly placing the earlier date on the trial calendar or giving proper notice. Smith v. Williams, 256 Ga. App. 664, 569 S.E.2d 598 (2002).

Presumption of performance of clerk's duty. — Trial court may properly take judicial notice of the presumption that the court clerk gave notice as required by law. Trice v. Howard, 130 Ga. App. 895, 204 S.E.2d 808 (1974).

Defendant entitled to day in court when notice lacking. — Defendant is entitled to the defendant's day in court on the main case if in fact the defendant proves the essential requirement of assignment notice has been overlooked or absent. Wilkes v. Ricks, 126 Ga. App. 266, 190 S.E.2d 603 (1972).

Failure to give proper notice of trial to adversary is reversible error. Siano v. Spindel, 136 Ga. App. 288, 220 S.E.2d 718 (1975).

Lack of notice as ground for setting aside judgment. — Lack of trial notice as required by subsection (c) of this section is ground for setting aside the judgment. Redding v. Commonwealth of Am., Inc., 143 Ga. App. 215, 237 S.E.2d 689 (1977).

Failure to give proper notice of trial. — When the face of the record shows without contradiction that there was a total lack of notice to the defendant of the trial assignment of the defendant's case, the trial court erred in denying the motion to set aside the judgment. Shelton v. Rodgers, 160 Ga. App. 910, 288 S.E.2d 619 (1982).

Trial of counterclaim, as well as dismissal of the main claim, without proper notice having been given to opposing counsel was error and warranted reversal. Health Images, Inc. v. Green, 207 Ga. App. 455, 428 S.E.2d 378 (1993).

Discretion of court as to setting aside of judgment allegedly obtained without notice. — Trial court must exercise discretion in determining whether under all the circumstances a judgment obtained in the absence of the party or the party's counsel, who contends to having no knowledge of the publication of the calendar or other notice of the calendar, should be set aside. Grindle v. Eubanks, 152 Ga. App. 58, 262 S.E.2d 235 (1979).

Notice of trial by publication of the court calendar in the Fulton County Daily Report is notice pursuant to subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-40); however, this does not mean that the trial court is without authority to set aside the judgment or grant a new trial under Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60), if the circumstances warrant such relief. Spyropoulos v. Linard Estate, 243 Ga. 518, 255 S.E.2d 40 (1979).

Notice held adequate. — When negligence action is set for trial on September 11, and trial calendar for September 11 is published on August 31 in the official organ of the county, properly listing the case, the defendants received adequate notice of the trial date. Martin v. Foxboro Co., 149 Ga. App. 719, 256 S.E.2d 34 (1979).

Defendant's claim that sufficient notice of the trial date was not provided was rejected as the record reflected that a scheduling order was issued by the trial court, the trial date was published on the trial calendar, and the defendant and the defendant's counsel were listed in the notice. It was clear that the defendant was aware of the trial calendar based on an email from the defendant's counsel. Surles v. Cornell Corr. of Cal., Inc., 290 Ga. App. 260, 659 S.E.2d 683 (2008).

It was not error to refuse to set aside judgment for lack of notice under subsection (c) of this section since the court clerk testified that it is not the clerk's practice to fail to mail notice to any attorney, and when the deputy clerk testified the deputy mailed out the court calendar with a cover letter to all counsel, and that the letter had not been returned to the clerk's office undelivered. Belle Interiors, Inc. v. Norman, 130 Ga. App. 669, 204 S.E.2d 364 (1974).

Clerk's oversight in giving notice of assignment. — Trial court erred in denying the motion to set aside the judgment when the record in the case showed that there was a total lack of notice to the defendant of the assignment of the defendant's case to a trial calendar because of a clerical oversight in recognizing the defendant's change of address. Taylor v. Chester, 207 Ga. App. 217, 427 S.E.2d 582 (1993).

By failure to plead, the defendant waived notice of trial on the limited issue of the amount of damages, and there was no requirement to place the case on the trial calendar nor for the plaintiff to comply with the local court rule. Newell Rd. Bldrs., Inc. v. Ramirez, 126 Ga. App. 850, 192 S.E.2d 184 (1972).

Case placed on calendar with notice ripe for trial despite local rule. — When the trial court places a case on a calendar, with notice to the parties as required by this section, it is ripe for trial, notwithstanding any local rule stating that it could not be placed on a trial calendar without a pretrial. Grindle v. Eubanks, 152 Ga. App. 58, 262 S.E.2d 235 (1979).

Party chargeable with notice that case may be called. — Party or a party's counsel is chargeable with notice that the party's case, when ripe for trial, may be called for trial at any time during a term of court, and even out of its regular order on the docket, in the court's discretion, provided the case is placed on a calendar duly prepared and notice is given of the trial. Grindle v. Eubanks, 152 Ga. App. 58, 262 S.E.2d 235 (1979).

Placement of appeal from probate court on calendar. — As it was the express command of former Code 1933, § 6-601 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-3-30) that appeals of probate proceedings be tried by a jury at the first term after entry of the appeal, it would appear to be the duty of the clerk to place the appeal upon the trial calendar for the first term after docketing; if it cannot be reached at that term, or should the court defer the matter, neither party should be penalized. Etheridge v. Etheridge, 242 Ga. 101, 249 S.E.2d 569 (1978).

No greater duty is placed upon counsel for a party appealing to the superior court to bring a case to trial than is placed upon counsel for the appellee, as while the appellant is the moving party as far as the appeal is concerned, once the appeal and the supporting record is docketed in the superior court, it is entitled to de novo treatment. Etheridge v. Etheridge, 242 Ga. 101, 249 S.E.2d 569 (1978).

Dismissal of appeal from probate court not warranted for failure to request placement on calendar. — In case appealed from probate court to superior court, when counsel for appellee requests that case be assigned for trial at the earliest available date and serves notice of this request upon counsel for appellant, it would be folly to require the appellant's counsel to also file a similar demand or suffer dismissal of the appellant's case on appeal. Etheridge v. Etheridge, 242 Ga. 101, 249 S.E.2d 569 (1978).

Dismissal in April 1978, of case appealed from probate court to superior court in September 1977, in which appellee had requested trial at the earliest possible date, on grounds that the appellant had taken no action to obtain a trial since entry of the appeal nor shown good cause for delay, was error. Etheridge v. Etheridge, 242 Ga. 101, 249 S.E.2d 569 (1978).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Authority of nonresident superior court judge in chambers. — Former Code 1933, §§ 24-2613 and 24-2617 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-6-12), when read in light of former Code 1933, § 24-2616 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-6-9) and subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-40) confers authority on nonresident superior court judge in chambers in the judge's own circuit to hear and determine by interlocutory or final judgment, in accordance with subsection (b), any matter in a case from the originating superior court which arises while the originating superior court is in vacation. 1975 Op. Att'y Gen. No. U75-68.

9-11-41. Dismissal of actions; recommencement within six months.

(a) Voluntary dismissal; effect:

(1) By plaintiff; by stipulation. Subject to the provisions of subsection (e) of Code Section 9-11-23, Code Section 9-11-66, and any statute, an action may be dismissed by the plaintiff, without order or permission of court:

(A) By filing a written notice of dismissal at any time before the first witness is sworn; or

(B) By filing a stipulation of dismissal signed by all parties who have appeared in the action.

(2) By order of court. Except as provided in paragraph (1) of this subsection, an action shall not be dismissed upon the plaintiff's motion except upon order of the court and upon the terms and conditions as the court deems proper. If a counterclaim has been pleaded by a defendant prior to the service upon him or her of the plaintiff's motion to dismiss, the action shall not be dismissed against the defendant's objection unless the counterclaim can remain pending for independent adjudication by the court.

(3) Effect. A dismissal under this subsection is without prejudice, except that the filing of a second notice of dismissal operates as an adjudication upon the merits.

(b) Involuntary dismissal; effect thereof. For failure of the plaintiff to prosecute or to comply with this chapter or any order of court, a defendant may move for dismissal of an action or of any claim against him. After the plaintiff, in an action tried by the court without a jury, has completed the presentation of his evidence, the defendant, without waiving his right to offer evidence in the event the motion is not granted, may move for dismissal on the ground that upon the facts and the law the plaintiff has shown no right to relief. The court as trier of the facts may then determine the facts and render judgment against the plaintiff or may decline to render any judgment until the close of all the evidence. The effect of dismissals shall be as follows: (1) A dismissal for failure of the plaintiff to prosecute does not operate as an adjudication upon the merits; and (2) Any other dismissal under this subsection and any dismissal not provided for in this Code section, other than a dismissal for lack of jurisdiction or for improper venue or for lack of an indispensable party, does operate as an adjudication upon the merits unless the court in its order for dismissal specifies otherwise.

(c) Dismissal of counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim. This Code section also applies to the dismissal of any counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim.

(d) Cost of previously dismissed action. If a plaintiff who has dismissed an action in any court commences an action based upon or including the same claim against the same defendant, the plaintiff shall first pay the court costs of the action previously dismissed.

(e) Dismissal for want of prosecution; recommencement. Any action in which no written order is taken for a period of five years shall automatically stand dismissed, with costs to be taxed against the party plaintiff. For the purposes of this Code section, an order of continuance will be deemed an order. When an action is dismissed under this subsection, if the plaintiff recommences the action within six months following the dismissal then the renewed action shall stand upon the same footing, as to limitation, with the original action. General Consideration

Editor’s notes — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, § 3-510 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Inapplicable to criminal cases. — Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, under which O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 is included provides for dismissals with prejudice of only civil cases, and the trial court had no authority to dismiss a charge of criminal trespass. State v. Luttrell, 207 Ga. App. 116, 427 S.E.2d 95 (1993).

Dismissal of party during pretrial procedure. — While the pretrial procedure under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16 has broad general application, the method for dismissing an action is specifically provided under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, and the dismissal of a party is not within the purview of the pretrial procedure. Georgia Am. Ins. Co. v. Mills, 183 Ga. App. 707, 359 S.E.2d 697 (1987).

Dismissal without prejudice does not operate as an adjudication on the merits. Gillis v. Goodgame, 199 Ga. App. 413, 404 S.E.2d 815 (1991), rev’d on other grounds, 262 Ga. 117, 414 S.E.2d 197 (1992).

Options available to the court. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 allows the court to dismiss the action and restrict the dismissal to one without prejudice; however, the trial court also may elect to go forward with the trial of the case, and the judgment that is entered following such a trial is not a dismissal, but an adjudication upon the merits. Accolades Apts., L.P. v. Fulton County, 242 Ga. App. 214, 528 S.E.2d 268 (2000).

Invited error. — When a corporation sought to dismiss an administrator’s wrongful death action because its caption bore the name of a nonexistent court, and the trial court later dismissed the action after the administrator filed a notice of voluntary dismissal, there was no basis for reversal; the trial court adopted the corporation’s reasoning as a basis for dismissal and thus any error was invited by the corporation. Video Warehouse, Inc. v. Newsome, 285 Ga. App. 786, 648 S.E.2d 124 (2007).

Adding or dropping less than all parties. — When less than all of the plaintiff’s claims are added or dropped, the additions and deletions are not dismissals and renewals governed by O.C.G.A. §§ 9-2-61(a) and 9-11-41(a), but simply amendments governed by the liberal amendment rules of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a) and (c). Young v. Rider, 208 Ga. App. 147, 430 S.E.2d 117 (1993).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 does not provide for the voluntary, unilateral dismissal of a party’s claims against some but not all of the parties to the action. Manning v. Robertson, 223 Ga. App. 139, 476 S.E.2d 889 (1996).

Plaintiff's attempted dismissal of one defendant was ineffective in the absence of a ruling by the trial court. Flemister v. Hopko, 230 Ga. App. 93, 495 S.E.2d 342 (1998).

Dismissal erroneously granted. — Trial court erred by dismissing a father's contempt action because the final consent order had not been entered within the five-year rule under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-60(b) because the legitimation, custody, and support matter had been resolved by consent and all that remained was entry of the order; thus, the case presented an exception to the five-year rule. Ga. Dep't of Human Servs. v. Patton, 322 Ga. App. 333, 744 S.E.2d 854 (2013).

Recovery of expenses. — Definition of court costs under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(d) does not include the witness fees, court reporting fees, and copying expenses that a prevailing party in a federal action is allowed to recover. Prison Health Servs. v. Mitchell, 256 Ga. App. 537, 568 S.E.2d 741 (2002).

Attorney fee award after voluntary dismissal proper. — In awarding attorney fees to the appellees under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-37 and 9-15-14 after an appellant voluntarily dismissed the appellant's lawsuit, the trial court did not violate the legislative intent behind O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a). The appellees incurred needless expense because of the appellant's discovery violations, and the litigation was unnecessarily expanded prior to the appellant's voluntary dismissal. Hart v. Redmond Reg'l Med. Ctr., 300 Ga. App. 641, 686 S.E.2d 130 (2009).

Dismissal pursuant to five-year rule. — Trial court properly dismissed law clients' malpractice action pursuant to the "five-year rule," as there was no written order entered in the trial court for at least five years; that period was not tolled during the pendency of an appeal because the trial court had jurisdiction to proceed with at least part of the case. Paul v. Smith, Gambrell & Russell, 323 Ga. App. 447, 746 S.E.2d 739 (2013).

Dismissal erroneous for failure to pay fees. — Since the masseur did not dismiss the prior action against a defendant, but rather, the trial court granted summary judgment to the defendant in the prior action and then awarded the defendant attorney fees, the trial court erred in dismissing the instant complaint for failure to pay the fees awarded in the prior action pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(d). Muhammad v. Massage Envy of Ga., Inc., 322 Ga. App. 380, 745 S.E.2d 650 (2013).

City of Atlanta, 287 Ga. 334, 695 S.E.2d 576 (2010); Cmty. State Bank v. Strong, 651 F.3d 1241 (11th Cir. 2011); Montgomery v. Morris, 322 Ga. App. 558, 745 S.E.2d 778 (2013).

Voluntary Dismissal1. In General

Constitutionality — Subsection (a) of this section is not unconstitutional. Deal v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 236 Ga. 629, 224 S.E.2d 922 (1976).

Legislative intent behind enactment of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 was to afford a plaintiff, faced with a contrary verdict or other untenable position, a second chance to litigate a plaintiff's suit despite the inconvenience and irritation to the defendant. Griggs v. Columbus Bank & Trust Co., 188 Ga. App. 741, 374 S.E.2d 347 (1988); Belco Elec., Inc. v. Bush, 204 Ga. App. 811, 420 S.E.2d 602 (1992).

Intent of the legislature in enacting subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 was to give a plaintiff an opportunity to escape from an "untenable position" and relitigate the case, and thus there is no "bad-faith exception" to the right to dismiss and later relitigate, despite inconvenience and irritation to the defendant. Lakes v. Marriott Corp., 264 Ga. 475, 448 S.E.2d 203 (1994).

Federal rule contrasted. — Although the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is patterned generally after the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, subsection (a) of this section represents a significant departure from Rule 41(a), F.R.C.P. Giordano v. Stubbs, 356 F. Supp. 1041 (N.D. Ga.), aff'd, 483 F.2d 1395 (5th Cir. 1973).

Construction with other law. — Upon a proper appeal from a final order, while neither former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-7-702) nor O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16 required that a complaint be dismissed or stricken for failing to comply with the terms of those statutes, unlike the Anti-SLAPP statute, codified at O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, because the trial court did not enter a final judgment within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68(b)(1), attorney fees were properly denied; moreover, as to the claim that dismissing and refiling in another court constitutes “improper judge shopping,” obtaining a different judge was simply the result of the action, not necessarily the reason for doing so. McKesson Corp. v. Green, 286 Ga. App. 110, 648 S.E.2d 457 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1602, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 656 (Ga. 2007).

Subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 was subject to former § 14-2-123(d) (see now O.C.G.A. § 14-2-744), relating to dismissal of shareholder’s derivative actions, and the plaintiff’s attempted dismissal of the shareholder’s derivative suit was ineffective when no approval of the trial court was sought prior to the attempted dismissal. Reese v. Frazier, 158 Ga. App. 237, 279 S.E.2d 529 (1981).

Substantial justice intended. — Subsection (a) of this section is to be interpreted so as to do substantial justice. Worthen v. Jones, 240 Ga. 388, 240 S.E.2d 842 (1977).

Statute provides a res judicata defense to any party against whom relief is being sought under the same claim which has been brought and voluntarily dismissed on three previous occasions. Belco Elec., Inc. v. Bush, 204 Ga. App. 811, 420 S.E.2d 602 (1992).

Voluntary dismissal terminates the action. Mitchell v. Wyatt, 192 Ga. App. 127, 384 S.E.2d 227 (1989); Collier v. Evans, 205 Ga. App. 764, 423 S.E.2d 704 (1992).

In an action containing a counterclaim, the failure of a defendant to object to a properly written and filed voluntary dismissal of the main action results in the counterclaim’s dismissal. Hardwick-Morrison Co. v. Mayland, 206 Ga. App. 426, 425 S.E.2d 416 (1992).

Trial court lacked jurisdiction to hold a former employee in contempt for an alleged violation of a settlement agreement because the employee’s former employer and a related entity had voluntarily dismissed their suit under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a), which divested the trial court of jurisdiction and rendered null any subsequent trial court orders in the case. Gallagher v. Fiderion Group, LLC, 300 Ga. App. 434, 685 S.E.2d 387 (2009).

Voluntary dismissal as matter of right. — Plaintiff is entitled to voluntary dismissal as a matter of right when the plaintiff substantially complies with statutory conditions. English v. Atlanta Transit Sys., 134 Ga. App. 621, 215 S.E.2d 304 (1975).

Voluntary dismissal is a matter of right and terminates the action. Page v. Holiday Inns, Inc., 245 Ga. 12, 262 S.E.2d 783 (1980).

When the plaintiffs moved to dismiss the plaintiffs’ cause of action without prejudice after the plaintiffs had been permitted to reopen the case to call an additional witness, the plaintiffs were entitled to dismissal without prejudice before the plaintiffs rested the plaintiffs’ case. Redman Homes, Inc. v. Voss, 212 Ga. App. 404, 441 S.E.2d 792 (1994).

Right to dismiss when defendant not prejudiced or deprived of defense. — Plaintiff may always dismiss the plaintiff’s action if no right of the defendant is prejudiced thereby. Palmer v. Palmer, 212 Ga. 616, 94 S.E.2d 722 (1956) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Plaintiff may dismiss any claim when such dismissal will not prejudicially affect the interests of the defendant, but the plaintiff will not be permitted to dismiss when by so doing the defendant’s rights will be prejudiced or the defendant will be deprived of any just defense. Howard v. Housing Auth., 220 Ga. 640, 140 S.E.2d 880 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

When defendant’s answer is purely defensive, plaintiff may dismiss the plaintiff's action without leave or order of court, and after such dismissal there is no case in court and no decree can be rendered therein. Davenport v. Hardman, 184 Ga. 518, 192 S.E. 11 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Plaintiff may dismiss an action after the defendant has filed an answer which is purely defensive in its nature and seeks no affirmative relief over against the plaintiff. Seaboard Air Line R.R. v. Whitman, 107 Ga. App. 375, 130 S.E.2d 272 (1963) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Dismissal prejudicing defendant's affirmative rights not permitted. — While ordinarily the plaintiff may dismiss the plaintiff's action with or without an order of court, an entire cause cannot properly be dismissed over the defendant's objection when the defendant's affirmative rights under the pleadings would be prejudiced thereby. Fender v. Hendley, 196 Ga. 512, 26 S.E.2d 887 (1943) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

When the defendant's answer prays for affirmative relief, the plaintiff cannot dismiss the plaintiff's action so as to interfere with the defendant's prayers for affirmative relief, whether the claims set up therein are legal or equitable; the defendant has the right to a hearing and a trial on the defendant's cross action. Griffin v. Lynn, 214 Ga. 300, 104 S.E.2d 442 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Plaintiff may not dismiss action if such dismissal would prejudice any right of the defendant. GMC v. Jenkins, 117 Ga. App. 527, 160 S.E.2d 906, rev'd on other grounds, 224 Ga. 699, 164 S.E.2d 224 (1968) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Jurisdiction of court to dismiss actions with prejudice. — Contention that trial court's dismissal of actions with prejudice under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 was a nullity because the plaintiffs had already entered a voluntary dismissal was without merit since the court did nothing more than reduce to writing the legal effect accomplished by operation of law with a third voluntary dismissal. Zohoury v. Zohouri, 218 Ga. App. 748, 463 S.E.2d 141 (1995).

Voluntary dismissal of a paternity complaint did not deprive the court of jurisdiction since, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-7-48, the dismissal required the court's approval. Patterson v. Whitehead, 224 Ga. App. 636, 481 S.E.2d 621 (1997).

Summary judgment as to already-dismissed claim. — Trial court's entry of summary judgment with respect to a claim which had already been dismissed was improper since voluntary dismissal operated to divest the court of jurisdiction. Smith v. Memorial Medical Ctr., Inc., 208 Ga. App. 26, 430 S.E.2d 57 (1993); Lotman v. Adamson Contracting, Inc., 219 Ga. App. 898, 467 S.E.2d 224 (1996).

Prayer for temporary alimony is not one for affirmative relief such as would preclude the plaintiff from dismissing the divorce action. Palmer v. Palmer, 212 Ga. 616, 94 S.E.2d 722 (1956) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

No dismissal after plea filed without leave of court on terms. — While plaintiff may dismiss the plaintiff's action if the plaintiff shall not thereby prejudice any right of the defendant, the plaintiff may not dismiss the action after plea of setoff or otherwise is filed so as to interfere with that plea, unless by leave of court on sufficient cause shown, and on terms prescribed by the court. Collier v. DeJarnette Supply Co., 194 Ga. 129, 20 S.E.2d 925 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Plaintiff in any action may dismiss at any time, provided the plaintiff shall not prejudice any right of the defendant or interfere with the defendant's plea, unless by leave of court on sufficient cause shown and on terms prescribed by the court. Riddle v. Riddle, 216 Ga. 549, 118 S.E.2d 83 (1961) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Dismissal erroneous and appealable when defendant sought relief and restitution. — When, as a condition for grant of an interlocutory injunction against interfering with possession of land, the plaintiff was required to file a bond to indemnify the defendant for such rentals as might be due by the plaintiff, which injunction was reversed by the Supreme Court as being mandatory in character, and the defendant in the same proceeding sought restitution and other relief, dismissal of the entire cause on the plaintiff's motion and objection by the defendant was erroneous, and was a final judgment from which appeal would lie. Fender v. Hendley, 196 Ga. 512, 26 S.E.2d 887 (1943) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

When no defensive pleadings have been filed by defendant, none of the defendant's rights are prejudiced by the plaintiff's dismissal of the plaintiff's action. Waldor v. Waldor, 217 Ga. 496, 123 S.E.2d 660 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Claims that were subject to dismissal because the claims were duplicative of prior pending actions and subject to dismissal under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-5 were not void, thus, voluntary dismissal without prejudice of such claims was a dismissal within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41. Zohoury v. Zohouri, 218 Ga. App. 748, 463 S.E.2d 141 (1995).

Dismissal of claims subject to consolidation. — Contention that dismissal of actions with prejudice under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 was improper because some or all of the actions should have been consolidated under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42 was without merit since the consent of all parties is required for consolidation. Zohoury v. Zohouri, 218 Ga. App. 748, 463 S.E.2d 141 (1995).

There is no "bad faith" exception to the plaintiff's right to dismiss an action voluntarily pursuant to subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41. C & S Indus. Supply Co. v. Proctor & Gamble Paper Prods. Co., 199 Ga. App. 197, 407 S.E.2d 346 (1991).

Plaintiff's voluntary dismissal of a legal malpractice action did not violate O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 or public policy since the intent of the legislature in enacting that section was to give the plaintiffs the opportunity to escape untenable positions and relitigate the case, and there is no bad faith exception to this right, despite whatever inconvenience and irritation this may cause the defendants. Bunch v. Vin-

When holders of an alleged easement filed an action in superior court for removal of an obstruction to the easement and then dismissed that action and filed a similar case in probate court, the holders were not guilty of improper "judge shopping," because O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a) allowed the holders to voluntarily dismiss the holders' superior court action without prejudice, and there was no "bad faith" exception to this right. Morris v. Mullis, 264 Ga. App. 428, 590 S.E.2d 823 (2003).

Right of dismissal not unlimited. — Subsection (a) of this section does not provide an unlimited and unfettered right of dismissal. Housing Auth. v. Mercer, 123 Ga. App. 38, 179 S.E.2d 275 (1970).

Dismissal is accomplished by plaintiff, not by court. — Dismissal pursuant to subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 is accomplished by the plaintiff, not by order of the trial court. Swartzel v. Garner, 193 Ga. App. 267, 387 S.E.2d 359, cert. denied, 193 Ga. App. 911, 387 S.E.2d 359 (1989).

Voluntary dismissal is not a judgment of the court, but it is an order in the case. Page v. Holiday Inns, Inc., 245 Ga. 12, 262 S.E.2d 783 (1980).

Complainant may dismiss complaint without leave or order of court. American Legion v. Miller, 183 Ga. 754, 189 S.E. 837 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510); Trusco Fin. Co. v. McGee, 206 Ga. 382, 57 S.E.2d 184 (1950) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

When parties sign and file a formal dismissal, upon entry of the dismissal on the docket, the case is effectively dismissed, and no order of the judge is necessary to effect that result. Minchew v. Minchew, 222 Ga. 593, 151 S.E.2d 144 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Dismissal subject to correction under § 9-11-60(g). — Voluntary dismissal is an "order" within the meaning of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27, and 30 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g)), and is subject to correction as provided therein. Page v. Holiday Inns, Inc., 245 Ga. 12, 262 S.E.2d 783 (1980).

Written notice filed by the plaintiff is required to effectuate the voluntary dismissal of an action. Swartzel v. Garner, 193 Ga. App. 267, 387 S.E.2d 359, cert. denied, 193 Ga. App. 911, 387 S.E.2d 359 (1989).

When plaintiff's counsel informed the court of the plaintiff's intent to dismiss the case, signed a voluntary dismissal that day, and served the dismissal on defense counsel by mail, no voluntary dismissal occurred until the plaintiff actually filed a written notice thereof and the six-month renewal period did not begin until that date. Carter v. Digby, 244 Ga. App. 217, 535 S.E.2d 286 (2000).

Trial court did not err in not voluntarily dismissing the motorist and the passenger's action against the first possible driver and the second possible driver, as the motorist and the passenger's attempts to voluntarily dismiss their action, initially against the second possible driver and then against the first possible driver was ineffective to dismiss either of those parties, as the motorist and the passenger did not first obtain an order from or the permission of the court; accordingly, the first possible motorist and the second possible motorist's appeal of the denial of their summary judgment was not moot. Rosales v. Davis, 260 Ga. App. 709, 580 S.E.2d 662 (2003).

Order must be properly entered in record of court to toll five-year period. — As a jury selection notice sent by the trial court to the parties was not stamped by the clerk of court's office as "filed," and there was nothing else in the record to show that the notice was properly entered in the records of the court, the jury selection notice did not meet the requirements for a written order that tolled the five-year dismissal period of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(e). Therefore, the trial court erred in denying the defendants' motion to dismiss. Pilz v. Thibodeau, 293 Ga. App. 532, 667 S.E.2d 622 (2008).

Nunc pro tunc order could not be used to effectuate a voluntary dismissal since no written notice had ever been filed by the plaintiffs. Swartzel v. Garner, 193 Ga. App. 267, 387 S.E.2d 359, cert. denied, 193 Ga. App. 911, 387 S.E.2d 359 (1989).

Dismissal not on merits. — Dismissal under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 is not on the merits, and case may be refiled within six months of automatic dismissal. Couch v. Wallace, 249 Ga. 568, 292 S.E.2d 405 (1982).

Because the counterclaim-plaintiffs in the second-dismissed case were not plaintiffs in the first-dismissed case, the second dismissal did not operate as an adjudication upon the merits under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a)(3). Consequently, O.C.G.A. § 9-12-40 did not preclude the instant action, and the trial court erred in dismissing the action on that ground. Dillard Land Invs., LLC v. S. Fla. Invs., LLC, 320 Ga. App. 209, 739 S.E.2d 696 (2013).

"Before the plaintiff rests his case" has reference to the actual trial of a case rather than to proceedings on pretrial motions. Muhanna v. O'Kelley, 185 Ga. App. 220, 363 S.E.2d 626 (1987); Delta Air Lines v. Van Diviere, 192 Ga. App. 207, 384 S.E.2d 272 (1989).

Involuntary dismissals not covered by subsection (a). — Interpretation of subsection (a) of this section as referring to involuntary dismissals not on the merits is probably precluded by the fact that subsection (b) of this section specifically deals with such dismissals. Bowman v. Ware, 133 Ga. App. 799, 213 S.E.2d 58 (1975).

Dismissal for failure to state claim. — Ruling which grants a motion to dismiss under Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6)) for failure to state a claim is an adjudication on the merits of plaintiff's claim and is not equivalent to a voluntary dismissal under subsection (a) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41). State v. Golia, 235 Ga. 791, 222 S.E.2d 27 (1976).

In an action in which the court orally granted the bank's motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim but then the trial court granted the plaintiffs' motion for voluntary dismissal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a), the trial court was entitled to change the court's mind as the oral decision had not been reduced to writing pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-6-31. Wachovia Bank Savannah, N.A. v. Kitchen, 272 Ga. App. 601, 612 S.E.2d 885 (2005).

§ 23 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-23(a)(1)) class action without leave of court is ineffectual. State v. Golia, 235 Ga. 791, 222 S.E.2d 27 (1976).

Dismissal after challenge to jurisdiction. — Notice of voluntary dismissal filed after motions challenging jurisdiction of the person of defendant is not untimely. Central Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wofford, 145 Ga. App. 836, 244 S.E.2d 899, rev'd on other grounds, 242 Ga. 338, 249 S.E.2d 21 (1978).

Voluntary dismissal of magistrate court action was not res judicata. — Trial court erred by granting the debtors' motion to dismiss by applying res judicata to the voluntary dismissal of the prior magistrate court actions because of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1 et seq., was inapplicable to magistrate courts, thus, the voluntary dismissal under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a)(1) did not operate as an adjudication upon the merits of the case. Target Nat'l Bank v. Luffman, 324 Ga. App. 442, 750 S.E.2d 750 (2013).

Effect of motion to dismiss for failure to substitute parties. — Plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss action at any time before verdict or oral announcement of judgment by the trial court, and this right is not abridged by the filing of a motion to dismiss based upon the plaintiff's failure to comply with Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25(a)(1)), relating to substitution of parties. Wofford v. Central Mut. Ins. Co., 242 Ga. 338, 249 S.E.2d 21 (1978).

Plaintiffs right to dismiss voluntarily any time before the verdict is not abridged by the filing of a motion to dismiss based on plaintiff's failure to comply with Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25(a)(1)), relating to substitution of parties. Central Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wofford, 145 Ga. App. 836, 244 S.E.2d 899, rev'd on other grounds, 242 Ga. 338, 249 S.E.2d 21 (1978).

Improper third-party claims were not void; thus, voluntary dismissal without prejudice of such claims was a dismissal within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41. Zohoury v. Zohouri, 218 Ga. App. 748, 463 S.E.2d 141 (1995).

Dismissal allowed when issues of liability and damages were bifurcated. — Plaintiff who brought a breach of contract action and was unable to adequately prove lost profits was entitled to voluntarily dismiss the plaintiff's case without prejudice, even though the issues of liability and damages had been bifurcated. Pounds v. Hospital Auth., 197 Ga. App. 598, 399 S.E.2d 92 (1990).

Dismissal allowed before verdict. — Subsection (a) of this section allows dismissal at any time before verdict, not entry of judgment. Stegar v. Northeast Foreign Car Serv., Inc., 143 Ga. App. 760, 240 S.E.2d 95 (1977).

Voluntary dismissal after motion for partial summary judgment. — Plaintiff's voluntary dismissal without prejudice was timely since the submission of the plaintiff's case for a ruling on a motion for partial summary judgment did not result in the plaintiff resting the plaintiff's entire case so as to terminate the plaintiff's statutory right to voluntarily dismiss without prejudice. Bunch v. Vincent, 234 Ga. App. 637, 507 S.E.2d 239 (1998).

Voluntary dismissal not permitted after judgment announced. — Plaintiff may not dismiss action after the verdict is published or after the plaintiff has knowledge that the jury has agreed on a verdict for the defendant, even if such verdict is not yet published. Seaboard Air Line R.R. v. Whitman, 107 Ga. App. 375, 130 S.E.2d 272 (1963) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Once a judgment in a civil case has been announced, though not formally entered, attempted filing of a voluntary dismissal is not permissible and does not effect a dismissal. Jones v. Burton, 238 Ga. 394, 233 S.E.2d 367 (1977); Kilby v. Keener, 249 Ga. 667, 293 S.E.2d 318 (1982); Mixon v. Trinity Servs., Inc., 176 Ga. App. 679, 337 S.E.2d 362 (1985).

Announcement by trial judge of a decision that will terminate a civil case, even though that decision has not been formally reduced to writing and entered, will preclude filing of a voluntary dismissal after such announcement but before the judgment is actually entered by the trial judge. Jones v. Burton, 238 Ga. 394, 233 S.E.2d 367 (1977); Pizza Ring Enters., Inc. v. Mills Mgt. Sources, Inc., 154 Ga. App.

45, 267 S.E.2d 487 (1980); Smith v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 162 Ga. App. 26, 289 S.E.2d 520 (1982); Johnson v. Wade, 184 Ga. App. 675, 362 S.E.2d 469 (1987).

When wife initiated divorce litigation, invoked aid of the court in determining custody and temporary support, appeared at a hearing, and obtained partial relief in the form of the award of temporary custody of one of the three children, along with child support, the announcement of the trial court of the court's decision relative to temporary custody of the children constituted a "verdict" within the contemplation of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, and the wife's subsequent voluntary dismissal resulting from dissatisfaction at not obtaining custody of all three children was ineffective in toto. Groves v. Groves, 250 Ga. 459, 298 S.E.2d 506 (1983).

Voluntary dismissal which was presented to the trial court for filing after plaintiff's counsel received notice that the jury was prepared to announce the jury's verdict, which the court initially declined to accept, but which, following the entry of the verdict for the defendants, the court did accept, backdating the court's decision to reflect an earlier filing, was not timely filed, and the judgment of the trial court was reversed with direction that the judgment be entered on the verdict. Vanderbreggen v. Hodge, 171 Ga. App. 868, 321 S.E.2d 218 (1984).

Regardless of the wording of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, the right of a voluntary dismissal has always been subject to a judicially created limitation prohibiting its exercise, even prior to trial, when there has already been an announcement by the court of the court's intention to rule in favor of the defendant. Bailey v. Austin, 185 Ga. App. 831, 366 S.E.2d 214 (1988).

Because a lender's O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a)(1)(A) notice to withdraw an appeal after sustaining an adverse judgment on the merits did not toll the time in which the lender was required to file a transcript on appeal, the renewal statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61, did not apply; thus, the appeal was properly dismissed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-6-48(c). Schreck v. Standridge, 273 Ga. App. 58, 614 S.E.2d 185 (2005).

Client's voluntary dismissal of the client's action against a magistrate judge for violation of the client's civil rights had no effect because prior to the client filing the voluntary dismissal, the trial court communicated the court's decision on the merits to the parties. Wall v. Thurman, 283 Ga. 533, 661 S.E.2d 549 (2008).

Dismissal prior to announcement of ruling adverse to plaintiff. — Plaintiffs were entitled to refile the plaintiffs' original action after a voluntary dismissal since, even though there had been an arbitration award in favor of the defendants, there was no announcement of an adverse ruling by the trial court. Lakes v. Marriott Corp., 264 Ga. 475, 448 S.E.2d 203 (1994).

When the trial court never actually ruled on a citizen's motion for a directed verdict, the court properly allowed a police officer permission to voluntarily dismiss the police officer's personal injury action as the trial court never addressed whether the wilful and wanton misconduct exception to the Fireman's rule applied. Mikkilineni v. Lawver, 267 Ga. App. 558, 601 S.E.2d 128 (2004).

Although a plaintiff became aware through the plaintiff's litigation opponent's counsel's email, which acknowledged that the trial court had asked the opponent to draft an order on the court's summary judgment motion, that the trial court was probably going to rule against the plaintiff, the plaintiff could still dismiss the plaintiff's claims without prejudice pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a)(1)(A). The trial court had not actually indicated which way the court was going to rule. First Media Group, Inc. v. Doe, 312 Ga. App. 84, 717 S.E.2d 277 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0342, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 483 (Ga. 2012).

Effect of vacation of oral grant of directed verdict. — Rule that an oral announcement of a ruling terminating the litigation will preclude voluntary dismissal under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, even though the ruling is not reduced to writing, did not apply since, prior to the voluntary dismissal, the trial court reconsidered and vacated the court's oral grant of a directed verdict without entering a final judgment. Cecil T. Allgood, Inc. v. Stark Props., Inc., 244 Ga. App. 105, 534 S.E.2d 858 (2000).

Effect of motion for judgment notwithstanding mistrial. — When a mistrial has been declared due to the inability of the jury to reach a verdict and the defendant thereafter files a timely motion for judgment notwithstanding the mistrial, the plaintiff's right of voluntary dismissal is not restored unless and until that motion has been denied. LeRoux v. Levine, 194 Ga. App. 381, 390 S.E.2d 629 (1990).

After party has taken chance of litigation and knows the actual result reached in the action by the tribunal which is to pass upon it, the party cannot, by exercising the right of voluntary dismissal, deprive the opposite party of the victory thus gained. Cooper v. Rosser, 233 Ga. 388, 211 S.E.2d 303 (1974); Bytell v. Paul, 173 Ga. App. 83, 325 S.E.2d 451 (1984).

If verdict returned by jury is void, plaintiff's voluntary dismissal is timely and authorized prior to the return of a valid verdict. McAfee v. Fickling & Walker Dev. Co., 123 Ga. App. 647, 182 S.E.2d 146 (1971).

Oral announcement of ruling on summary judgment constituted "verdict". — Complaint against real estate agents and purchaser of land alleging fraud against the seller of land could not be voluntarily dismissed and reinstated in another county against all parties except the purchaser when the trial court orally announced that the purchaser's motion for summary judgment would be granted since such an oral announcement amounted to a "verdict" permanently affecting the course of the litigation as to all of the parties, not first the purchaser. Guillebeau v. Yeargin, 254 Ga. 490, 330 S.E.2d 585 (1985).

When verdict has been received by the clerk of the court, and read at the direction of the judge, it has been published. A plaintiff may not thereafter dismiss a plaintiff's action unless it is void or for some lawful reason can be set aside.

Dismissal before intervention. — Plaintiff may dismiss petition for injunction, even though there may be persons who might intervene, when such dismissal is effected before such intervention. Davenport v. Hardman, 184 Ga. 518, 192 S.E. 11 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Dismissal after evidence introduced. — When there was no prayer for nor facts pled in the defendant's answer justifying grant of affirmative relief to the defendant, the court did not err in permitting the plaintiff to dismiss the case after introduction of evidence and before the submission to the jury. Christian v. McBryar, 88 Ga. App. 74, 76 S.E.2d 25 (1953) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Announcement in open court that case has been settled is equivalent to dismissal. Jackson v. Taylor, 169 Ga. 300, 150 S.E. 156 (1929) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Ruling not disturbed if "any evidence". — Trial court's ruling on a motion under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 for involuntary dismissal will not be disturbed if there is "any evidence" to support the ruling. Magnus Homes, L.L.C. v. DeRosa, 248 Ga. App. 31, 545 S.E.2d 166 (2001).

Dismissal after settlement agreement inappropriate. — Voluntary dismissal may not be filed after all parties announce a settlement agreement in open court and the trial court adopts the terms of the agreement in an oral order, even if the order is not reduced to writing until a later time. Leary v. Julian, 225 Ga. App. 472, 484 S.E.2d 75 (1997).

Filing of notice of interlocutory appeal acts as supersedeas, so as to prevent the plaintiff from dismissing the case while any issue is on appeal; to hold otherwise would subject the appellant to additional costs and possible harassment by an appellee who dismissed the pending action when faced with reversal on interlocutory appeal. Steele v. Steele, 243 Ga. 522, 255 S.E.2d 43 (1979).

Former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34) indicated the legislative intent that after filing of notice of appeal, status quo was to be maintained, and mandated that once supersedeas attached, interlocutory order should have the same procedural status and dignity as a final judgment; therefore, since subsection (a) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41) would not permit plaintiff-appellee to dismiss the case while a final judgment in the plaintiff-appellee's favor was on appeal, thereby robbing the defendant-appellant of an opportunity to seek reversal, neither would it permit plaintiff-appellee to do so in an interlocutory context. Lawrence v. Whittle, 146 Ga. App. 686, 247 S.E.2d 212 (1978).

Service or notice required to effect dismissal. — Complaint is merely dormant after the plaintiff files a written notice of dismissal, and does not stand dismissed as of the date of filing of the notice unless and until the opposing party is served or has actual notice. Jones v. Jones, 230 Ga. 738, 199 S.E.2d 239 (1973).

Relegation of a notice of dismissal to a footnote within the body of a brief did not comply with the requirement in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 for filing a written notice of dismissal. Wilson v. Barton & Ludwig, Inc., 163 Ga. App. 721, 296 S.E.2d 74 (1982).

Renewal of dismissed action. — When a case filed within the applicable statute of limitation is voluntarily dismissed by the plaintiff, the case may be recommenced either within the applicable limitation period or within six months after the dismissal, whichever is later pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61. Atkinson v. Holt, 213 Ga. App. 427, 444 S.E.2d 838 (1994).

When the plaintiff voluntarily dismissed an action without prejudice and filed another complaint for damages, and the plaintiff did not perfect service by having the second complaint personally served on the defendant, the plaintiff failed to comply with the procedural prerequisites for renewal of the dismissed action. Atkinson v. Holt, 213 Ga. App. 427, 444 S.E.2d 838 (1994).

Trial court properly dismissed a plaintiff's renewal action regarding a personal injury suit because the plaintiff's original action was void in that the trial court had orally dismissed that suit for insufficiency of service and a lack of personal jurisdiction, and the renewal statute only applied to actions that were valid prior to dismissal. Stephens v. Shields, 271 Ga. App. 141, 608 S.E.2d 736 (2004).

Trial court correctly denied summary judgment to a corporation in an appellant's renewal action because the appellant was authorized to file a voluntary dismissal of the superior court appeal of a magistrate decision under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a)(1)(A), which dismissed the appellant's case but did not dismiss the appeal, and because the renewal action was timely filed. Long v. Greenwood Homes, Inc., 285 Ga. 560, 679 S.E.2d 712 (2009).

Court of appeals correctly reversed a trial court's grant of summary judgment to a driver and a corporation based on a second driver's lack of diligence in serving the second driver's complaint in the second driver's voluntarily dismissed original action because the supreme court had previously held that inasmuch as diligence in perfecting service of process in an action properly refiled under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61(a) had to be measured from the time of filing the renewed suit, any delay in service in a valid first action was not available as an affirmative defense in the renewal action; the first driver and corporation essentially sought the rewriting of an unambiguous statute, but their arguments were properly directed to the General Assembly because when the General Assembly wished to put a firm deadline on filing lawsuits, the legislature knew how to enact a statute of repose instead of a statute of limitation. Robinson v. Boyd, 288 Ga. 53, 701 S.E.2d 165 (2010).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a), the voluntary dismissal statute, could be exercised by either party in a de novo appeal filed in superior court following the entry of a judgment in magistrate court, regardless of which party appealed. Once a landlord filed the landlord's voluntary dismissal, the landlord was also entitled to file a renewal action pursuant to O.C.G.A.

Trial court erred by denying a debtor's refiling of an appeal as untimely because the six-month period for filing the debtor's renewal action under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61(a) began the day after the debtor dismissed the original superior court action, and ran until December 6, 2012, based on the method of calculation under O.C.G.A. § 1-3-1(d)(3), thus, the refiling of the action on December 6 was timely. Parsons v. Capital Alliance Fin., LLC, 325 Ga. App. 884, 756 S.E.2d 14 (2014).

Plaintiff's renewal action brought under the renewal statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61(a), was timely because the six-month period was calculated not from the time the plaintiff dismissed some of the defendants, but from the date of the trial court's order granting the voluntary dismissal without prejudice as to all but one of the defendants. Had the plaintiff dismissed all the defendants, no court order would have been required, and the voluntary dismissal would have been effective. Gresham v. Harris, 329 Ga. App. 465, 765 S.E.2d 400 (2014).

Civil renewal provisions apply in habeas corpus proceedings. — O.C.G.A. § 9-14-42(c) was not a statute of repose and not an absolute bar to the refiling of a habeas corpus petition, and therefore, was not in conflict with the provisions of O.C.G.A. §§ 9-2-60(b) and (c) and 9-11-41(e), which allowed for the renewal of civil actions after dismissal. Therefore, the habeas court's dismissal of a petition as untimely was reversed. Phagan v. State, 287 Ga. 856, 700 S.E.2d 589 (2010).

Trial court may not order complaint reinstated after the complaint has been voluntarily dismissed under subsection (a) of this section. Matthews v. Riviera Equip., Inc., 152 Ga. App. 870, 264 S.E.2d 318 (1980); Collier v. Evans, 205 Ga. App. 764, 423 S.E.2d 704 (1992).

Trial court is without authority to reinstate case dismissed by plaintiff's attorney. Bufford v. Farmers & Merchants Bank, 110 Ga. App. 393, 138 S.E.2d 609 (1964) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Reinstatement may be refused. — Minor appellants who dropped out of an action, thereby dismissing the only claims the appellants had, took a voluntary dismissal of the appellants' actions which was effective without court order pursuant to subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, rather than a dropping of parties requiring a court order pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 and thus the appellants' attempt to state the appellants' actions could have been dismissed. Young v. Rider, 208 Ga. App. 147, 430 S.E.2d 117 (1993).

Reinstatement and injunction against similar action error. — When the plaintiff in pending bail-trover action in which the defendant seeks no affirmative relief dismisses the action, it is error for the court, on the defendant's motion, to reinstate such case and enjoin the plaintiff from proceeding with a similar action in another court against a third party. Trusco Fin. Co. v. McGee, 206 Ga. 382, 57 S.E.2d 184 (1950) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Consent order operated to vacate prior dismissal order, and placed the parties to the suit in the status the parties held before the dismissal order was entered, which allowed voluntary mutual dismissals without prejudice under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41. Howell Mill/Collier Assocs. v. Gonzales, 186 Ga. App. 909, 368 S.E.2d 831 (1988).

Voluntary dismissal carries entire case with it, including the answer to the extent of defensive matter. American Legion v. Miller, 183 Ga. 754, 189 S.E. 837 (1937).

When the defendant's answer is purely defensive, the plaintiff may dismiss, and after such dismissal, there is no case in court. Trusco Fin. Co. v. McGee, 206 Ga. 382, 57 S.E.2d 184 (1950) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

When no setoff or cross action pled. — Dismissal of bill in equity carries whole case out of court, including the defendant's answer, if that answer contains no setoff or other prayer for relief in the nature of a cross action. Spence v. Dyal, 202 Ga. 739, 44 S.E.2d 658 (1947) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Further defensive pleading is null. — When pending case is dismissed by the plaintiff, such dismissal carries with it the defendant's answer, and further defensive pleading is a nullity. Trusco Fin. Co. v. McGee, 206 Ga. 382, 57 S.E.2d 184 (1950) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

After dismissal no decree may be rendered thereafter. — When suit in equity is dismissed, it is out of court and no decree can be rendered upon it. American Legion v. Miller, 183 Ga. 754, 189 S.E. 837 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Voluntary dismissal terminates action. — When the plaintiff's dismissal deprived the trial court of jurisdiction over the case and left the parties in the same position as if the suit had never been filed, the trial court had no authority to enter judgment for the defendants in the original suit or in the refiled suit. Lakes v. Marriott Corp., 264 Ga. 475, 448 S.E.2d 203 (1994).

Trial after dismissal is nugatory. — When the defendant's answer was purely defensive in nature and sought no affirmative collateral relief against the plaintiff as in a cross action, the superior court erroneously failed to give full effect to plaintiff's attempted dismissal, and all that took place subsequently in the resulting trial was nugatory. Spence v. Dyal, 202 Ga. 739, 44 S.E.2d 658 (1947) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Cross action seeking affirmative relief. — Dismissal of action will not dismiss the defendant's cross action, if the defendant asks for affirmative relief on matters germane to the original petition. Collier v. DeJarnette Supply Co., 194 Ga. 129, 20 S.E.2d 925 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Right to proceed with cross action on dismissal of divorce action. — Dismissal of the plaintiff's divorce petition could not affect the wife's right to proceed for affirmative relief prayed for in the cross action. Grinnell v. Grinnell, 174 Ga. 904, 164 S.E. 681 (1932) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Wife's right to proceed with cross action for alimony is unaffected by withdrawal or dismissal, for any reason, of original action. Cohen v. Cohen, 209 Ga. 459, 74 S.E.2d 95 (1953) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

When the husband sought a divorce against the wife, who thereafter personally served the answer and cross action upon the husband's attorney of record after issuance of process, and service was accomplished upon her, and husband then dismissed the case and moved out of state, the husband's motion to dismiss the answer and cross action for lack of personal service was without merit as cross action was still pending, the court having jurisdiction of both parties and the subject matter. Wright v. Wright, 217 Ga. 511, 123 S.E.2d 557 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Defendant's right to hearing on equitable claims not interfered with. — When the defendant has set up equitable claims in the defendant's answer by way of setoff or otherwise, dismissal of the complaint does not interfere with the defendant's right to a hearing or trial of such claims. American Legion v. Miller, 183 Ga. 754, 189 S.E. 837 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Defendant entitled to proceed with trial on prayers for affirmative relief. — In action for specific performance, when the defendant's answer denied material allegations, and by cross action asserted that the defendant was the sole owner of the property and that the plaintiff was unlawfully withholding possession and had committed waste thereon, the defendant's answer clearly involved a prayer for affirmative relief, and after dismissal of the plaintiff's petition the defendant was entitled to proceed with a trial on prayers for affirmative relief against the plaintiff. Griffin v. Lynn, 214 Ga. 300, 104 S.E.2d 442 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Plaintiff was not entitled to a voluntary dismissal since the defendants sought affirmative relief in the defendants' amended answer. Brown v. Liberty County, 247 Ga. App. 562, 544 S.E.2d 738 (2001).

Dismissal extinguished attorney's lien. — Dismissal of the plaintiff's complaint in a personal injury action extinguished the attorney's lien. Villani v. Ed- wards, 251 Ga. App. 293, 554 S.E.2d 184 (2001).

Voluntary dismissal without prejudice was not a “final termination” of the case, and so the 45-day “window of opportunity” for moving for penalties and attorney’s fees pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 did not begin to run with the plaintiff’s voluntary dismissal of the plaintiff’s complaint without prejudice, and the plaintiff’s motion for penalties and attorney fees was timely; however, the award of attorney’s fees was vacated and the case was remanded since the trial court’s judgment contained no findings of conduct that authorized the award. Meister v. Brock, 268 Ga. App. 849, 602 S.E.2d 867 (2004).

2. Effect of Pending Counterclaim

Purpose of counterclaim limitation on voluntary dismissals is to prevent the plaintiff from invoking the jurisdiction of the court and then withdrawing when the defendant seeks affirmative relief from the plaintiff. Worthen v. Jones, 240 Ga. 388, 240 S.E.2d 842 (1977).

Standing. — In a wrongful death suit by an administrator against a corporation and the corporation’s alleged employee that was dismissed after the administrator filed a notice of voluntary dismissal, the corporation lacked standing to challenge the dismissal of a counterclaim filed by the alleged employee since the corporation was not a party to the counterclaim. Video Warehouse, Inc. v. Newsome, 285 Ga. App. 786, 648 S.E.2d 124 (2007).

Liberal construction of limitation. — Counterclaim limitation on voluntary dismissals has been liberally construed so as to do substantial justice when the plaintiff seeks to voluntarily dismiss in the face of affirmative relief being sought by the defendant. Sandifer v. Lynch, 244 Ga. 369, 260 S.E.2d 78 (1979).

Defendant’s right to hearing on counterclaims not to be precluded. — While dismissal of petition alone would carry answer with it to the extent of defensive matter, dismissal should not affect any counterclaims, and must not preclude the defendant’s right to a hearing or trial of such claims. Fender v. Hendley, 196 Ga. 512, 26 S.E.2d 887 (1943) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Dropping of unintended party. —

When a person served with process intended for another answers denying that the person is the intended defendant, and counterclaims for malicious use of process, the plaintiff could have moved the court, upon learning of the error, to drop the unintended party pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41. Bank South, N.A. v. Tate, 190 Ga. App. 248, 378 S.E.2d 486, cert. denied, 190 Ga. App. 897, 378 S.E.2d 486 (1989).

Counterclaim is not necessarily subject to dismissal because of dismissal of main complaint. Weems v. Weems, 225 Ga. 19, 165 S.E.2d 733 (1969); Employers Liab. Assurance Corp. v. Berryman, 123 Ga. App. 71, 179 S.E.2d 646 (1970).

Dismissal not permitted unless counterclaim can remain pending. —

If a counterclaim has been pled by the defendant prior to service upon the defendant of the plaintiff’s motion to dismiss, the action shall not be dismissed against the defendant’s objection unless the counterclaim can remain pending for independent adjudication by the court. Stanley v. Stanley, 244 Ga. 417, 260 S.E.2d 328 (1979).

Trial court, when considering a plaintiff’s motion to dismiss voluntarily when a counterclaim is pending, cannot limit the court’s review to the mere filing of defensive pleadings seeking affirmative relief, but must look further to consider whether the claim seeking that affirmative relief can remain pending for independent adjudication by the court once the main claim has been dismissed. Avnet, Inc. v. Wyle Lab., Inc., 265 Ga. 716, 461 S.E.2d 865 (1995).

Counterclaim which presented only defensive matters would not prevent dismissal of a condemnation action. Hinson v. Department of Transp., 230 Ga. 314, 196 S.E.2d 883 (1973).

Motion to intervene as defendant, accompanied by counterclaim, is sufficient to satisfy counterclaim requirement and preclude the plaintiff from voluntarily dismissing the action pending a decision on the motion to intervene. Worthen v. Jones, 240 Ga. 388, 240 S.E.2d 842 (1977).

Dismissal on failure of defendant to object. — Upon the defendant’s failure to object to the voluntary dismissal, the action, including the defendant's counterclaim, becomes dismissed. Moore v. McNair, 145 Ga. App. 888, 245 S.E.2d 25 (1978).

Defendant's failure to object to the plaintiff's voluntary dismissal waived any rights of the defendant to pursue the defendant's counterclaim, even if the defendant vigorously pursued matters relevant to the defendant's counterclaim and failed to acquiesce in the dismissal. D.P.S. Indus., Inc. v. Safeco Ins. Co. of Am., 210 Ga. App. 289, 435 S.E.2d 762 (1993).

By virtue of the codefendant insurer's failure to object, the plaintiff's dismissal of the action against the insurer's codefendant terminated the entire action including the insurer's subrogation cross-claim. Thomas v. Auto Owners Ins. Co., 221 Ga. App. 815, 472 S.E.2d 707 (1996).

In an action involving a promissory note, a trial court improperly granted summary judgment to a bank on the bank's counterclaim because a borrower had voluntarily dismissed the action under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a)(1)(A) a few days prior to the hearing on the summary judgment motion and the bank had not filed any objections to the dismissal; therefore, the dismissal terminated the entire action, and the bank could not go forward with the bank's counterclaim. Mize v. First Citizens Bank & Trust Co., 297 Ga. App. 6, 676 S.E.2d 402 (2009).

Defendant's partial summary judgment motion constituted sufficient objection within the meaning of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 to prevent the automatic dismissal of the defendant's counterclaim pursuant to the plaintiff's filing of the plaintiff's voluntary dismissal. Southern Elec. Distrib. v. Marsh, 229 Ga. App. 821, 495 S.E.2d 43 (1998).

Objection to dismissal. — Defendant's position letter and brief filed in the probate court in opposition to the plaintiff's motion to dismiss the action constituted a timely objection to the voluntary dismissal which would effect the continued liability of the defendant's counter-claim. Johnson v. Hamilton, 211 Ga. App. 268, 438 S.E.2d 715 (1993).

After a review of the record on appeal, given that the defendant neither dismissed nor waived a compulsory counterclaim, but instead objected to the dismissal of the plaintiff's suit a little more than two weeks after receiving actual notice of the dismissal, that counterclaim was preserved; thus, while the main action was properly dismissed, dismissal of the counterclaim was error. Weaver v. Reed, 282 Ga. App. 831, 640 S.E.2d 351 (2006).

Trial court did not err in refusing to allow voluntary dismissal of custody petition, when the request in the defendant's answer for custody of the children without interference was a prayer for affirmative relief. Sandifer v. Lynch, 244 Ga. 369, 260 S.E.2d 78 (1979).

When a voluntary dismissal is clearly shown to bear a certificate of service so that the defendant is served with notice of the voluntary dismissal prior to the defendant's attempt to initiate a counterclaim, there is no pending counterclaim which might permit the defendant to object to the voluntary dismissal, despite the fact that the defendant may not have received actual notice. Young v. Johnson, 167 Ga. App. 837, 307 S.E.2d 730 (1983).

Issues subjected to partial summary judgment. — Since the defendant did not initially file a counterclaim, but did seek affirmative relief in the defendant's answer that was the subject of discovery engaged in by the parties long before the dismissal by the plaintiff was sought, the plaintiff was not allowed to dismiss the complaint so as to deprive the court of jurisdiction over issues preserved by the court's order granting the plaintiff a partial summary judgment. Moore v. Moore, 253 Ga. 211, 317 S.E.2d 529 (1984).

Counterclaim for abusive litigation. — Plaintiff has the right to voluntarily dismiss an action without prejudice even though the defendant has filed a counterclaim for abusive litigation. It is not necessary in order to adjudicate an abusive litigation counterclaim that the underlying action be finally terminated in the defendant's favor. The abusive litigation counterclaim may proceed to adjudication on the claim's merits based on all the relevant facts which have occurred to the point of dismissal, including the dismissal itself. Moore v. Memorial Medical Ctr., Inc., 258 Ga. 696, 373 S.E.2d 204 (1988).

Wholly derivative third party claims. — Order striking a notice of voluntary dismissal was reversed as when a corporation filed the corporation's notice of voluntary dismissal, no counterclaims or other claims seeking affirmative relief were pending against the corporation; third-party claims did not seek affirmative relief from the corporation, so those claims could not be used to invoke the counterclaim limitation on voluntary dismissals. Mariner Health Care, Inc. v. PricewaterhouseCoopers, LLP, 282 Ga. App. 217, 638 S.E.2d 340 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 150 (Ga. 2007).

Counterclaim could not be renewed. — Defendant who voluntarily dismissed without prejudice a compulsory counterclaim could not renew the counterclaim as an original action under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61 after the plaintiff had voluntarily dismissed with prejudice the main claim without objection by the defendant because renewal of the counterclaim was barred by res judicata. Robinson v. Stokes, 229 Ga. App. 25, 493 S.E.2d 5 (1997).

Pending motion for sanctions could not be used to prevent corporation from voluntarily dismissing action. — Corporation did not have prior knowledge that the action would be dismissed as requested in a limited liability partnership's motion for sanctions for alleged discovery abuses when the notice of voluntary dismissal was filed and the pending motion for sanctions was not a basis for invoking the counterclaim limitation on voluntary dismissals. Mariner Health Care, Inc. v. PricewaterhouseCoopers, LLP, 282 Ga. App. 217, 638 S.E.2d 340 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 150 (Ga. 2007).

Res judicata inapplicable. — Because a commercial landlord had dismissed the landlord's prior dispossession action against a tenant upon payment by the tenant pursuant to a settlement of the amount due and owing and such dismissal did not indicate that the dismissal was with prejudice, the dismissal was deemed without prejudice and was accordingly not an adjudication on the merits pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a); accordingly, it was error for the trial court to have barred the landlord's claim for common area maintenance charges in the landlord's second action on the ground of res judicata as the requirement of a previous adjudication on the merits of the claim was not met pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-12-40. Rafizadeh v. KR Snellville, LLC, 280 Ga. App. 613, 634 S.E.2d 406 (2006).

Right of voluntary dismissal to both parties. — It is apparent that O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(c) simply extends the same right of voluntary dismissal afforded to plaintiffs by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a) to parties that have filed counterclaims, cross-claims, or third-party claims; so just as the plaintiffs may voluntarily dismiss the plaintiffs' actions, defendants filing counterclaims, cross-claims, and third-party claims can voluntarily dismiss the defendants' respective claims; nothing in the plain language of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(c) extends the counterclaim limitation to wholly derivative third-party claims for contribution or indemnification so that such claims can be used to bar a plaintiff's voluntary dismissal of the plaintiff's action. Mariner Health Care, Inc. v. PricewaterhouseCoopers, LLP, 282 Ga. App. 217, 638 S.E.2d 340 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 150 (Ga. 2007).

3. Multiple Dismissals

Last sentence of subsection (a) refers to filing of a third notice of dismissal by one who has already filed two prior dismissals. Bowman v. Ware, 133 Ga. App. 799, 213 S.E.2d 58 (1975).

Only voluntary dismissals filed by plaintiff are to be counted for purposes of the last sentence of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41. Reese v. Frazier, 158 Ga. App. 237, 279 S.E.2d 529 (1981).

Only one of two prior dismissals was voluntary. — Because a plaintiff initially filed a personal injury suit in state court, voluntarily dismissed that case and re-filed the case in federal court, after which the federal court dismissed the federal claims asserted and refused to exercise jurisdiction over the state claims, resulting in the claims' dismissal as well, there was only one voluntary dismissal, and the trial court's dismissal of the later re-filing in state court under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a)(3) was error. Troup v. Chambers, 280 Ga. App. 392, 634 S.E.2d 191 (2006).

3. Multiple Dismissals (Cont'd)

First voluntary dismissal under subsection (a) is always without prejudice and does not operate as an adjudication on the merits. Piper v. Piper, 139 Ga. App. 19, 227 S.E.2d 842 (1976).

Second voluntary dismissal. — When plaintiff's first complaint was filed before July 1, 2003, the effective date of the amendment to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a)(3), and the second and third complaints were filed after July 1, 2003, the 2003 amendment did not apply retroactively to make the voluntary dismissal of the second complaint act as an adjudication on the merits. Davis v. Lugenbeel, 283 Ga. App. 642, 642 S.E.2d 337 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 518 (Ga. 2007).

Trial court erred in dismissing a vehicle passenger's third complaint based on the amended O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a), which applied only to cases when the original complaint was filed on or after July 1, 2003. Because the first complaint was filed before July 1, 2003, the pre-amendment version of § 9-11-41(a) applied; accordingly, the passenger's second voluntary dismissal of the passenger's complaint did not operate as an adjudication on the merits. Shy v. Faniel, 292 Ga. App. 253, 663 S.E.2d 841 (2008).

"Renewal suit" filed by a limited liability company (LLC) and the company's manager against three corporations was properly dismissed under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-2-5(a) and 9-2-44(a) as the LLC and manager's prior and nearly identical suit against the corporation had been dismissed and an appeal was pending. However, the second dismissal should have been without prejudice under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b) as the corporation's plea in abatement did not challenge the merits of that suit. Sadi Holdings, LLC v. Lib Props., Ltd, 293 Ga. App. 23, 666 S.E.2d 446 (2008).

Third voluntary dismissal. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 provides that a third notice of dismissal from any court of an action based upon the same claim operates as an adjudication on the merits. Harris v. Sampson, 162 Ga. App. 241, 290 S.E.2d 165 (1982).

Third voluntary dismissal does not operate as an adjudication on the merits if any one of the previous actions is not based on or does not include the claim presented in the third action. Southeastern Hose, Inc. v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 167 Ga. App. 356, 306 S.E.2d 308 (1983).

If the same affirmative relief has been sought against a party three times previously and the action has been voluntarily dismissed on each occasion, the result is an "adjudication upon the merits" of the claims against the party and there can be no further attempt on the part of the plaintiff or other claimant to secure the affirmative relief from that party. T.V. Tempo, Inc. v. T.V. Venture, Inc., 182 Ga. App. 198, 355 S.E.2d 76 (1987).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, which provides a fourth-time defendant with a res judicata defense, cannot be construed as creating a conclusive and absolute right on the part of a three-time defendant to obtain affirmative relief for the defendant should the defendant subsequently choose to seek it as a plaintiff. T.V. Tempo, Inc. v. T.V. Venture, Inc., 182 Ga. App. 198, 355 S.E.2d 76 (1987).

Defendant's set-off or recoupment sought affirmative relief against the plaintiff and, therefore was, in effect, a "counterclaim" rather than a "defense"; accordingly, the "defense" was barred as having been sought in three previously dismissed actions. T.V. Tempo, Inc. v. T.V. Venture, Inc., 182 Ga. App. 198, 355 S.E.2d 76 (1987).

Promissory note maker's third voluntary dismissal adjudicated only the payee's nonliability as to the maker's claims arising from the note, and did not adjudicate the liability of the maker to the payee on the note itself. T.V. Tempo, Inc. v. T.V. Venture, Inc., 182 Ga. App. 198, 355 S.E.2d 76 (1987).

In an action against an employee and an employer arising out of an automobile accident, the plaintiff's third dismissal of the plaintiff's claim against the employee acted as an adjudication on the merits and, therefore, the plaintiff was barred from recovery against the employer under the doctrine of respondeat superior. Hospital Auth. v. Walker, 224 Ga. App. 163, 480 S.E.2d 849 (1997).

After the homeowners brought three actions against the home builder and the builder's principal officer alleging construction defects and the homeowners voluntarily dismissed all three actions, the third dismissal, pursuant to the former provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a), constituted an adjudication against the homeowners; it was inconsequential that the third action resulted in an unconfirmed arbitration award in favor of the homeowners before the homeowners voluntarily dismissed that action and filed suit seeking confirmation of the arbitration award. Ford v. Tycam Home Builders, Inc., 267 Ga. App. 581, 601 S.E.2d 133 (2004).

Adjudication on the merits in wrongful death claim. — Trial court recognized that the wrongful death claim had been voluntarily dismissed on three previous occasions, but held that each parent had a right to assert a wrongful death cause of action independent of the other so that an adjudication on the merits of the mother's claim would occur only after three such actions in which the mother was a plaintiff were voluntarily dismissed. Since she had brought and voluntarily dismissed the action only twice prior to filing the present action, the trial court found there was no adjudication on the merits. Belco Elec., Inc. v. Bush, 204 Ga. App. 811, 420 S.E.2d 602 (1992).

Multiple dismissals by parents in wrongful death action. — Trial court erred by denying the defendant's motion to dismiss since the present wrongful death action pending against the defendant was previously filed and voluntarily dismissed three times, once separately by the father, once by both parents consolidated action, and once separately by the mother. Accordingly, there was an adjudication on the merits. Belco Elec., Inc. v. Bush, 204 Ga. App. 811, 420 S.E.2d 602 (1992).

Prior actions in the form of third-party complaints were subject to the provisions that a third notice of dismissal based upon the same claim operates as an adjudication on the merits. Zohoury v. Zohouri, 218 Ga. App. 748, 463 S.E.2d 141 (1995).

Involuntary Dismissal

1. In General

Federal rule contrasted. — Subsection (b) of this section is not as specific as its federal rule counterpart, Rule 41(b) Fed. R. Civ. P., in providing for findings of fact. Thomas v. Jackson, 238 Ga. 90, 231 S.E.2d 50 (1976).

Construction of subsection (b). — Construction of subsection (b) of this section which will avoid dismissals of actions on technical grounds, to the end that all actions shall be tried on their merits, is consistent with the purposes of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). O'Kelley v. Alexander, 225 Ga. 32, 165 S.E.2d 648 (1969).

Judge's options under subsection (b). — Motion to dismiss under subsection (b) of this section gives judge three possible courses: (1) do nothing until the defendant's evidence is in; (2) grant the motion, with a provision in the order that it was not upon the merits; or (3) determine the facts and sustain the motion, without providing in the order that it should not be upon the merits. Lawyers Coop. Publishing Co. v. Bekins Moving & Storage Co., 135 Ga. App. 12, 217 S.E.2d 372 (1975).

Denial construed as deferral of judgment. — After the defendant moved for involuntary dismissal pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, and the trial court neither granted the motion nor deferred judgment, given that the subsection does not provide for denial of such a motion and that the court went on to hear evidence from the defendant, the "denial" of the motion was construed as a deferral of judgment. Market Place Shopping Ctr. v. Basic Bus. Alternatives, Inc., 227 Ga. App. 419, 489 S.E.2d 162 (1997).

Motion for directed verdict in bench trial. — When there is a bench trial, technically a motion for directed verdict does not lie; instead, it is treated as a motion for involuntary dismissal under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41. Franklin v. Demico, Inc., 179 Ga. App. 775, 347 S.E.2d 718 (1986); Emory Rent-All, Inc. v. Lisle Assocs. Gen. Contractor, 212 Ga. App. 516, 441 S.E.2d 926 (1994).

Motion for directed verdict in a nonjury trial is procedurally incorrect, and the motion will be treated as one for involuntary dismissal under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41. Chamlee v. DOT, 182 Ga. App. 120, 354 S.E.2d 701 (1987); Century 21 Mary Carr & Assocs. v. Jones, 204 Ga. App. 96, 418 S.E.2d 435 (1992); Grebel v. Prince, 232 Ga. App. 361, 501 S.E.2d 538 (1998).

Failure to appear at pretrial hearing. — Authority of the trial court to dismiss the plaintiff's complaint for failure to appear at a pretrial hearing is clearly established by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41. Turner v. T & T Oldsmobile, Inc., 154 Ga. App. 228, 267 S.E.2d 833 (1980).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 authorizes the trial court, upon motion, to dismiss any action for failure of the plaintiff to comply with a court order to appear at a pretrial hearing. Weeks v. Weeks, 243 Ga. 416, 254 S.E.2d 366 (1979); Scott v. W.S. Badcock Corp., 161 Ga. App. 826, 289 S.E.2d 769 (1982).

Entry upon motion of plaintiff not authorized. — Entry of an involuntary dismissal was not authorized after the plaintiff introduced no evidence and there were no facts before the court from which the court could determine whether there was a right to relief, and when the dismissal was entered upon motion of the plaintiff, rather than the defendant. Roberts v. Prakas, 217 Ga. App. 397, 457 S.E.2d 688 (1995).

No authority to set aside dismissal after term expires. — Trial court has no jurisdiction to set aside dismissal and reinstate cause after expiration of the term at which the cause was dismissed; this rule was not changed by enactment of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) and applies with the same force. Askren v. Allen, 132 Ga. App. 292, 208 S.E.2d 165 (1974).

Summary judgment. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 does not apply to calling of motion for summary judgment. Holt v. Bray, 159 Ga. App. 43, 282 S.E.2d 693 (1981).

Failure to appear. — Trial court abused the court's discretion when the court dismissed an appeal from a special master for failure to appear since the case was not in the first five cases on the published calendar and the appellant and the appellant's counsel were not required to be in court. Broadwater v. City of Danville, 184 Ga. App. 886, 363 S.E.2d 316 (1987).

Dismissal of a claim with prejudice for the plaintiff's failure to appear constituted a nonamendable defect on the face of the record, and the trial court erred in denying the plaintiff's motion to set aside the judgment. Howard v. AMLI Realty Co., 226 Ga. App. 372, 486 S.E.2d 649 (1997).

Because an injured party's attorney did not obtain information about the time and location of a peremptory calendar call in the month after learning of it, and because the attorney had actual notice of the calendar call, the trial court properly dismissed the injured party's personal injury case without prejudice under Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 20(A), 14, and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b). Hammonds v. Sherman, 277 Ga. App. 498, 627 S.E.2d 110 (2006).

Failure of defense counsel to attend pretrial conference. — While the plaintiff's failure to appear at a pretrial hearing may result in the dismissal of the complaint at the motion of the defendant, who is statutorily entitled to such a remedy, a plaintiff does not have a similar statutory weapon and striking the defendant's answer and entering judgment against the defendant is too harsh a sanction to impose upon the defendant for defense counsel's failure to appear at a pretrial conference. Boatright v. First Nat'l Bank, 166 Ga. App. 167, 303 S.E.2d 506 (1983).

Failure to comply with order of court. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 authorized the trial court to dismiss an action for failure of the plaintiff to comply with the court's order to file an amended complaint. Omni Express, Inc. v. Kennedy, 216 Ga. App. 485, 455 S.E.2d 83 (1995).

When a trial court orders a plaintiff to make a more definite statement of his or her claims, the court should identify the ways in which the complaint fails to conform to the pleading requirements of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) and the court also should warn the plaintiff about the potential consequences of a failure to replead in a way that conforms to these requirements; if the court still cannot ascertain the nature of the claims that the plaintiff seeks to assert, the court may enter another order to replead again, but the trial court and the defendants need not become caught in an endless cycle of attempts to replead, and if it appears that a plaintiff is unable or unwilling to plead in conformance to the Civil Practice Act and the directions of the court, the court may be authorized in some cases to dismiss the complaint under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b), not for a failure to state a claim, but for disregard of the rules and orders of the court. Bush v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 313 Ga. App. 84, 720 S.E.2d 370 (2011).

Dismissal of earlier complaint asserting same claim for relief. — Trial court did not err in granting a motion for summary judgment based upon the defense of res judicata, following dismissal of an earlier complaint, containing exactly the same material allegations and asserting the same claim for relief, for failure to answer interrogatories. Brantley v. Sparks, 167 Ga. App. 323, 306 S.E.2d 337 (1983).

Case is remanded when court fails to make findings of fact and conclusions of law in the court's dismissal order, and when neither party waives these findings and conclusions. L & L Elec. Serv., Inc. v. L.K. Comstock & Co., 168 Ga. App. 780, 310 S.E.2d 557 (1983).

Motion for nonsuit. — Defendant's motion for a nonsuit made under former law which was specifically repealed by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) was construed as a motion for involuntary dismissal pursuant to

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41. National Carloading Corp. v. Security Van Lines, 164 Ga. App. 850, 297 S.E.2d 740 (1982).

Trial court erred in granting defendant's motion to dismiss. See McKellar v. Associates Fin. Servs., 168 Ga. App. 9, 308 S.E.2d 410 (1983).

In the absence of an explicit order in an executor's renewal action, O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61(a), requiring the executor to identify the executor's expert witnesses by a date certain, the executor's failure to do so did not warrant the extreme sanction of dismissal under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41. Porter v. WellStar Health Sys., 299 Ga. App. 481, 683 S.E.2d 35 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C2031, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 80 (Ga. 2010).

Trial court erred in denying motion for involuntary dismissal. — See Sentry Eng'g & Constr., Inc. v. American Olean Tile Co., 172 Ga. App. 769, 324 S.E.2d 591 (1984).

Dismissal of counterclaim was error when plaintiff voluntarily dismissed action. — When the defendant appeals the dismissal of the defendant's counterclaim following the plaintiff bank's voluntary dismissal without prejudice of the bank's suit for the collection of a debt incurred by a third party for whom the plaintiff mistook the defendant, and the defendant had answered and counterclaimed for malicious use and abuse of process, the trial court erred in dismissing the defendant's counterclaim on the basis that the voluntary dismissal without prejudice of the main action was not a "disposition" for the purposes of the claim for abusive litigation. Roberson v. Central Fid. Bank, 190 Ga. App. 382, 378 S.E.2d 698, cert. denied, 190 Ga. App. 898, 378 S.E.2d 698 (1989).

Dismissal of counterclaim for failure to allege facts entitling to relief. — When an attorney filed a motion to withdraw from the representation of a client, a court of law permitted the attorney's withdrawal, and the client acquiesced to the withdrawal, the client's allegations in the counterclaim for damages based upon the attorney's withdrawal, in a suit in which the attorney sought payment of attorney's fees, set forth no facts that could be construed to entitle the client to relief from the unpaid fees as the client was barred from collaterally attacking the withdrawal ruling by way of a counterclaim. Therefore, the trial court properly dismissed the client's counterclaim. Patton v. Turnage, 260 Ga. App. 744, 580 S.E.2d 604 (2003).

Trial court's dismissal of counterclaim with prejudice due to the defendants' failure to appear at the call of the case constituted a nonamendable defect on the face of the record, and thus, the trial court erred in denying the defendants' motion to set aside the judgment. Bonner v. Green, 263 Ga. 773, 438 S.E.2d 360 (1994).

Trial court's dismissal with prejudice of the defendant's counterclaim due to the defendant's failure to attend a pre-trial conference and the subsequent judgment in favor of the plaintiff on the complaint was an abuse of discretion. Maupin v. Vincent, 245 Ga. App. 635, 538 S.E.2d 529 (2000).

Appeal of denial of motion for involuntary dismissal. — One appealing the denial of a motion for involuntary dismissal under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 may not raise for the first time on appeal a ground not specifically raised in the original motion. Magnus Homes, L.L.C. v. DeRosa, 248 Ga. App. 31, 545 S.E.2d 166 (2001).

Standard of review. — Dismissal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 is not the same as a directed verdict in a jury trial, which may be upheld only if the evidence demands a particular outcome; it does not require the trial court to construe the evidence in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, and can only be reversed on appeal when the evidence demands a contrary finding. Smith v. Georgia Kaolin Co., 269 Ga. 475, 498 S.E.2d 266 (1998).

Dismissal for lack of proper and timely service. — Since the plaintiff did not perfect service until after the running of the statute of limitations, the claim should have been dismissed without prejudice as there had been no adjudication of the claim on the claim's merits and the court erred in dismissing the claim with prejudice. Wilson v. Ortiz, 232 Ga. App. 191, 501 S.E.2d 247 (1998).

Involuntary dismissal erroneously denied. — Because it appeared from the testimony that a widow's standard of living was improved after receiving an award of year's support after the decedent's death, and that the widow had the resources independent of the year's support to afford those improvements, the award was erroneously entered; thus, the trial court erred in denying a motion for involuntary dismissal filed by the decedent's only child. Anderson v. Westmoreland, 286 Ga. App. 561, 649 S.E.2d 820 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 676 (Ga. 2007).

Dismissal deemed without prejudice unless stated otherwise. — Superior court correctly held that a claim for attorney's fees under O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 must be made by motion, not by answer or counterclaim. Neither was summary judgment error under a § 9-15-14 claim for the superior court's failure to specify that its dismissal of such claims was without prejudice. In this regard, the Georgia Civil Practice Act (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) makes it clear that any dismissal in which dismissal with prejudice is not specified is deemed to be a dismissal without prejudice under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b). Thus, to the extent that the complained of counterclaims for abusive litigation rested on § 9-15-14, summary judgment thereon was not error for the superior court's failure to dismiss upon the word "dismissed" alone. Langley v. Nat'l Labor Group, Inc., 262 Ga. App. 749, 586 S.E.2d 418 (2003).

Involuntary dismissal of declaratory action must be without prejudice. — Involuntary dismissal of a declaratory-judgment action for want of justiciability does not operate as an adjudication on the merits and is instead an issue of subject-matter jurisdiction. Accordingly, dismissal must be without prejudice. Pinnacle Benning, LLC v. Clark Realty Capital, LLC, 314 Ga. App. 609, 724 S.E.2d 894 (2012).

Dismissal of action without prejudice granted. — Even though the plaintiffs failed to show good cause for the plaintiffs' failure to serve the defendants within the 120 day service period under Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(m) and failed to diligently serve the defendants after the expiration of the statute of limitations, the action was dismissed without prejudice because of the refiling opportunities accorded under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61. Lau v. Klinger, 46 F. Supp. 2d 1377 (S.D. Ga. 1999).

When clients of a law firm twice filed legal malpractice complaints against the law firm and then twice voluntarily dismissed those complaints because the clients failed to attach an expert affidavit, as required in a legal malpractice case, the trial court properly dismissed the clients' third complaint, which did not have an affidavit, despite the plaintiffs' inclusion of a paragraph under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b) that sought to justify the clients' failure to include an affidavit on grounds that the limitations period was about to expire because the paragraph in question was patently false and was a sham pleading. Smith v. Morris, Manning & Martin, LLP, 254 Ga. App. 355, 562 S.E.2d 725 (2002).

Motion for involuntary dismissal properly denied. — Superior court did not err in denying a land and development company's motion for involuntary dismissal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b) in a county's action under former O.C.G.A. § 24-8-1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-11-2) to establish a copy of an ordinance that had been lost because the superior court thoroughly reviewed the evidence upon which the court relied, including the testimony of the company's forensic expert and several witnesses who were county officials when the ordinance was enacted and their successors in office, as well as the dovetailing of subsequent amendments to the sections and subsections of the proffered copy; that evidence was sufficient to support the superior court's finding that the copy was a true and correct duplicate of the original ordinance adopted at the meeting of the county board of commissioners. East Georgia Land & Dev. Co. v. Baker, 286 Ga. 551, 690 S.E.2d 145 (2010).

Involuntary dismissal of federal complaint. — Trial court erred when the court granted a nonresident's motion to dismiss a driver's third complaint because the complaint was not barred by O.C.G.A.

§ 9-2-61 since the driver never served the nonresident with the second federal complaint, and thus, it was void and could not amount to a renewal of the first complaint; the third complaint was intended as a renewal of the first complaint, which was voluntarily dismissed after the expiration of the applicable period of limitation, and the federal dismissal was not only involuntary but also dismissed without prejudice for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Crawford v. Kingston, 316 Ga. App. 313, 728 S.E.2d 904 (2012).

Trial court erred when the court granted a nonresident's motion to dismiss a driver's third complaint because the dismissal of the driver's second federal complaint was involuntary under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a)(2), rather than voluntary under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a)(1), and could not operate as an adjudication on the merits under § 9-11-41(a)(3); even though the driver requested the dismissal of the federal action, the dismissal itself was by an order of the federal court for a failure of the federal court's own jurisdiction. Crawford v. Kingston, 316 Ga. App. 313, 728 S.E.2d 904 (2012).

2. For Failure to Prosecute

Applies only to cases awaiting disposition. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(e) applies to cases awaiting disposition, not to cases already adjudicated by verdict or judgment. Lott v. Arrington & Hollowell, P.C., 258 Ga. App. 51, 572 S.E.2d 664 (2002).

Stiff sanctions intended for failure to prosecute. — Purpose of subsection (b) of this section is to make available a stiff sanction against the plaintiffs who fail to prosecute claims in filed cases, although it remains within the discretion of the trial judge to provide in order of dismissal that it shall not operate as an adjudication on the merits. Trice v. Howard, 234 Ga. 189, 214 S.E.2d 907 (1975).

Power to dismiss for want of prosecution is an inherent power of the court, and subsection (b) of this section merely codifies this power in part. Krasner v. Verner Auto Supply, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 892, 204 S.E.2d 770 (1974).

Court may dismiss on own initiative. — Although subsection (b) of this section speaks of a motion by the defendant for dismissal for want of prosecution, the court may also act on the court's own without a motion. Krasner v. Verner Auto Supply, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 892, 204 S.E.2d 770 (1974).

Discretion of court. — Order of dismissal for failure to prosecute under subsection (b) of this section is discretionary and is subject to appellate review for abuse of discretion. Hancock v. Oates, 244 Ga. 175, 259 S.E.2d 437 (1979); Mosley v. Lankford, 244 Ga. App. 209, 260 S.E.2d 322 (1979).

All circumstances of case considered. — Dismissal with prejudice for failure to prosecute should not be based solely on absence, but on all circumstances of the case. Hancock v. Oates, 244 Ga. 175, 259 S.E.2d 437 (1979); Maolud v. Keller, 153 Ga. App. 268, 265 S.E.2d 86 (1980).

Failure of plaintiff in certiorari to see that timely proper answer is filed is a "failure to prosecute" within the meaning of subsection (b) of this section. City of Atlanta v. Schaffer, 245 Ga. 164, 264 S.E.2d 6 (1980).

Failure to be diligent in determining delay. — Trial court's finding that the appellants had not been diligent in determining that there would be a delay was not supported by the record which revealed that appellants' counsel ordered the transcript in a timely manner, made timely payment, and made reasonable inquiry as to the status of its preparation, and that the court reporter knew the reporter needed to complete the transcript as soon as possible, that the reporter was aware of the 30-day deadline, and that the earliest the reporter could complete it was the end of July. Welch v. Welch, 212 Ga. App. 667, 442 S.E.2d 857 (1994).

Res judicata effect of dismissal for failure to prosecute. — Dismissals for want of prosecution under subsection (b) of this section operate as an adjudication upon the merits, when the orders of dismissal do not otherwise specify, and are thus res judicata. Askren v. Allen, 132 Ga. App. 292, 208 S.E.2d 165 (1974).

When a dismissal for failure to prosecute is involuntary under subsection (b) of this section, and the trial court does not specify that such dismissal is without prejudice, the dismissed action is res judicata as to essentially the same action brought at a later time. Krasner v. Verner Auto Supply, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 892, 204 S.E.2d 770 (1974).

Application of estoppel by judgment. — Under subsection (b) of this section, dismissal for want of prosecution both bars a subsequent action on the same claim and establishes facts to which an estoppel by judgment can be applied in subsequent litigation on a different claim. Trice v. Howard, 234 Ga. 189, 214 S.E.2d 907 (1975).

Alleging attorney's negligence. — Because negligence of a party's attorney did not appear on the face of the record, it was not a proper ground of a motion to set aside the trial court's order dismissing suit for failure to prosecute. Lankford v. Karkotsky, 171 Ga. App. 283, 319 S.E.2d 117 (1984).

Slight tardiness to trial not grounds for dismissal. — Trial court would not dismiss for failure to prosecute when the plaintiff showed up for trial one-half hour late. Accurate Bonding Co. v. Ponder, 176 Ga. App. 331, 335 S.E.2d 886 (1985).

Failure to appear at hearing. — Trial court exceeded the court's authority in adjudicating an appeal by an applicant for letters of administration of an estate based on the applicant's failure to appear at a scheduled hearing. Boyd v. Crawford, 231 Ga. App. 169, 498 S.E.2d 762 (1998).

Trial court erred in dismissing an application for confirmation of an arbitration award filed by an LLC against three individuals with prejudice for want of prosecution as the appeals court agreed with the movant LLC that it appeared for the only published hearing; moreover, dismissal of an action was restricted for failure to appear at the call of the case to one without prejudice. Wolfpack Enters. v. Arrington, 272 Ga. App. 175, 612 S.E.2d 35 (2005).

Attorney's motion to dismiss a contempt proceeding on grounds that no one physically appeared to present the charges was properly denied as Georgia law did not require anyone to prosecute a contempt action, the conduct charged already occurred and was of record, and a trial judge could make a finding of contempt instant; the judge, sitting as the trier of fact and law in the proceeding, could review the evidence already in existence and make an order based thereon, and the attorney was free to present evidence in mitigation. In re Scheib, 283 Ga. App. 328, 641 S.E.2d 570 (2007).

Trial court did not err in dismissing the plaintiff's claims without prejudice for want of prosecution for failure to appear at a calendar call because the trial court rebutted the plaintiff's assertion that the plaintiff did not receive written notice of the no service/default calendar call; and counsel had a duty to keep informed as to the progress of the case as the trial court's docket, including dates and times of any calendar calls or hearings, was published on the clerk of court's website. Atlanta Bus. Video, LLC v. FanTrace, LLC, 324 Ga. App. 559, 751 S.E.2d 169 (2013).

Failure to attend hearing due to miscommunication. — Trial court abused the court's discretion in dismissing a father's petition for modification of child custody based on the failure of the father's attorney to attend a hearing after it was shown that such failure was due to miscommunication and a well-founded misunderstanding on the part of the attorney. Wallace v. Laughlin, 217 Ga. App. 444, 459 S.E.2d 556 (1995).

Courts without authority to dismiss with prejudice. — The 1982 amendment of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, providing that dismissal for failure of the plaintiff to prosecute does not operate as an adjudication upon the merits, removed from the courts the authority to dismiss with prejudice for failure of the plaintiff to prosecute. Leach v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 172 Ga. App. 785, 324 S.E.2d 494 (1984), aff'd, 254 Ga. 265, 330 S.E.2d 596 (1985); All South Mini Storage #2, Ltd. v. Woodcon Constr. Servs., 205 Ga. App. 393, 422 S.E.2d 282 (1992); Century 21 Mary Carr & Assocs. v. Jones, 204 Ga. App. 96, 418 S.E.2d 435 (1992).

When the trial court's order specifically stated that dismissal was for want of prosecution, the court had no authority to further direct that the dismissal operate with prejudice. Peachtree Winfrey Assocs. v. Gwinnett County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 197 Ga. App. 226, 398 S.E.2d 253 (1990).

Pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, a dismissal for failure of the plaintiff to prosecute does not operate as an adjudication upon the merits; therefore, it follows that such a dismissal cannot be with prejudice. Lloyd v. Whitworth, 210 Ga. App. 714, 437 S.E.2d 636 (1993).

Because the court was unable to determine the trial court's grounds for granting a defendant's motion to dismiss with prejudice after the trial court announced during the hearing that the dismissal would be without prejudice, and appeared to indicate that the dismissal was for failure to prosecute, and because the court was unable to determine from the record whether that grant was error, remand was required for clarification. Wilken Invs., LLC v. Plamondon, 310 Ga. App. 146, 712 S.E.2d 576 (2011).

Trial court erred in dismissing a case with prejudice for failure to prosecute because a dismissal for failure to prosecute was not a ruling on the merits; nor, was there an adjudication on the merits under the voluntary dismissal rule of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(a)(3) because the dismissal was involuntary. Chrysler Financial Services Americas, LLC v. Benjamin, 325 Ga. App. 579, 754 S.E.2d 157 (2014).

Dismissal of a noncompulsory counterclaim for failure to prosecute does not operate as an adjudication on the merits under subsections (b) and (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 and does not bar the later reassertion of the claim. Idowu v. Lester, 176 Ga. App. 713, 337 S.E.2d 386 (1985).

Failure to respond to jury calendar calls. — Appeals in the superior court from writs of possession granted by a magistrate court were properly dismissed for failure to prosecute since the orders dismissing the appeals recited that the actions were dismissed because neither the appellant nor counsel for the appellant responded to the jury calendar calls of those actions. Westwind Corp. v. Washington Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 195 Ga. App. 411, 393 S.E.2d 479 (1990).

Dismissal of a complaint for want of prosecution was not an adjudication on the merits; thus, collateral estoppel and res judicata did not bar a subsequent complaint. Valdez v. R. Constr., Inc., 285 Ga. App. 373, 646 S.E.2d 329 (2007).

Involuntary dismissal upheld and presumption of regularity attached.

— Because an individual who filed a negligence action against a driver failed to show that the judge who dismissed that action for want of prosecution lacked the authority to do so because the judge was not assigned to the case, and also failed to establish any reversible error, a presumption of regularity attached to the court's order which the individual was unable to overcome. Ward v. Swartz, 285 Ga. App. 788, 648 S.E.2d 114 (2007).

Dismissal improperly granted. — Trial court erroneously dismissed a litigant's petition for a writ of mandamus, and erroneously relied on dicta, in finding that orders setting a pre-trial conference in the underlying medical malpractice action were merely "housekeeping or administrative orders" that did not suspend the running of the five-year period under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-2-60(b) and 9-11-41(e). Instead, such orders tolled the running of the five-year rule if the orders were in writing, signed by the trial judge, and properly entered in the records of the trial court. Zepp v. Brannen, 283 Ga. 395, 658 S.E.2d 567 (2008).

No entitlement to attorney's fees. — Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b), since the dismissal of plaintiff individual's complaint was for failure to prosecute, such dismissal did not operate as an adjudication on the merits, and the defendant corporation was not a "prevailing party" for purposes of entitlement to attorney fees and costs under the parties' contract. Floyd v. Logisticare, Inc., 255 Ga. App. 702, 566 S.E.2d 423 (2002).

3. After Presentation of Plaintiff's EvidencePower of judge to decide merits on motion at close of plaintiff's evidence.

— Subsection (b) of this section provides that upon the defendant's motion to dismiss at the close of the plaintiff's evidence in a nonjury trial, the judge has the power to adjudicate the case on the merits. Trump v. Scott Exterminating Co., 138 Ga. App. 866, 227 S.E.2d 859 (1976).

Under subsection (b) of this section, the trial judge in a nonjury case has express power to adjudicate the case on the merits at the conclusion of the plaintiff's case. Pichulik v. Air Conditioning & Heating Serv. Co., 123 Ga. App. 195, 180 S.E.2d 286 (1971); Kennerly v. Mosteller, 133 Ga. App. 879, 212 S.E.2d 447 (1975).

Failure to establish right to relief.

— In a quiet title action, in order to show an unbroken chain of title, it was necessary for the plaintiff to show that the individuals who deeded the land were the heirs-at-law of the prior owner who had died intestate; because the plaintiff failed to establish this fact, the court was not required to find in the plaintiff's favor, and involuntary dismissal of the action was not in error. Smith v. Georgia Kaolin Co., 269 Ga. 475, 498 S.E.2d 266 (1998).

Evidence need not be considered in light most favorable to plaintiff. — If trial judge has the power of adjudication of the facts upon motion for involuntary dismissal in a nonjury case, the judge must weigh the evidence; but there is no obligation in subsection (b) of this section that the judge, in determining the facts, must consider the plaintiff's evidence in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Pichulik v. Air Conditioning & Heating Serv. Co., 123 Ga. App. 195, 180 S.E.2d 286 (1971); Kennerly v. Mosteller, 133 Ga. App. 879, 212 S.E.2d 447 (1975); Control, Inc. v. H-K Corp., 134 Ga. App. 349, 214 S.E.2d 588 (1975); Chamlee v. DOT, 189 Ga. App. 334, 375 S.E.2d 626, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 911, 375 S.E.2d 626 (1988); Ivey v. Ivey, 266 Ga. 143, 465 S.E.2d 434 (1996).

Dismissal of a case pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b) is not tantamount to granting a directed verdict, and a trial court is not required to construe the evidence in the plaintiff's favor; the trial court in a bench trial was authorized to find that a decedent's sister lacked all of the facts when the sister initially agreed to compromise an insurance claim, and that any alleged oral agreement resolving the parties' dispute was not enforceable. Alexander v. Watson, 271 Ga. App. 816, 611 S.E.2d 110 (2005).

Dismissal despite establishment of prima facie case. — On motion to dismiss under subsection (b) of this section, since the court determines the facts as well as the law, such motion may be sustained even though the plaintiff has established a prima facie case. Pichulik v. Air Conditioning & Heating Serv. Co., 123 Ga. App. 195, 180 S.E.2d 286 (1971); Bennett Iron Works, Inc. v. Underground Atlanta, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 653, 204 S.E.2d 331 (1974); Kennerly v. Mosteller, 133 Ga. App. 879, 212 S.E.2d 447 (1975).

Findings and conclusions required. — Ga. L. 1970, p. 170, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a)), requiring that in all actions in superior court tried upon the facts without a jury, with certain exceptions, the court shall find the facts specially and state separately the court's conclusions of law thereon upon entry of judgment, applies when the court enters an involuntary dismissal pursuant to subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41). Salvador v. Wals, 139 Ga. App. 362, 228 S.E.2d 384 (1976).

Findings of judge analogous to jury verdict. — In an action tried without a jury, the trial judge sits as the trier of fact, and the judge's findings are analogous to the verdict of a jury and should not be disturbed if there is any evidence to support the findings. Comtrol, Inc. v. H-K Corp., 134 Ga. App. 349, 214 S.E.2d 588 (1975); Safeway Ins. Co. v. Holmes, 194 Ga. App. 160, 390 S.E.2d 52, cert. vacated, 260 Ga. 164, 393 S.E.2d 477 (1990).

Treatment of motion for directed verdict as one for involuntary dismissal. — Motion for a directed verdict is procedurally incorrect in a nonjury case, but the court may nonetheless treat it as one for involuntary dismissal. Pichulik v. Air Conditioning & Heating Serv. Co., 123 Ga. App. 195, 180 S.E.2d 286 (1971); Kennerly v. Mosteller, 133 Ga. App. 879, 212 S.E.2d 447 (1975).

When plaintiff is not allowed to complete the plaintiff's evidence, judgment of dismissal under subsection

(b) of this section must be reversed and remanded with direction that the plaintiff be allowed to present the plaintiff's case. Lumpkin v. Guthrie, 124 Ga. App. 50, 183 S.E.2d 84 (1971).

Failure of defendant to appear. — Defendant who failed to appear at trial was properly granted an involuntary dismissal by the court sua sponte because the defendant remained a party to the proceedings, and the plaintiff failed to make out a claim against the defendant or the codefendant. Cramer, Inc. v. Southeastern Office Furn. Whsle. Co., 171 Ga. App. 514, 320 S.E.2d 223 (1984).

Motion for involuntary dismissal properly denied. — In a bench trial, the court properly denied a title insurer's O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b) motions for involuntary dismissal at the close of the insureds' case and at the close of evidence as the insureds had offered sufficient evidence of the diminishment in value of the insureds' property in support of the insureds' breach of contract claim. Jimenez v. Chi. Title Ins. Co., 310 Ga. App. 9, 712 S.E.2d 531 (2011).

4. Effect of Involuntary Dismissal

Construction of phrase "dismissal for lack of jurisdiction". — Phrase "dismissal for lack of jurisdiction" should not be construed to limit its application only to those cases in which fundamental jurisdictional defects appear which would render a judgment void and subject to collateral attack, such as cases wherein it appears the court lacked jurisdiction over the defendants or of the subject matter of the action. O'Kelley v. Alexander, 225 Ga. 32, 165 S.E.2d 648 (1969).

Phrase "dismissal for lack of jurisdiction" is broad enough to encompass dismissals based on the plaintiff's failure to comply with a precondition requisite to the trial court's going forward with the determination of the merits of the plaintiff's substantive claim. O'Kelley v. Alexander, 225 Ga. 32, 165 S.E.2d 648 (1969).

Dismissal for failure to pay costs would be for "lack of jurisdiction," which by the language of subsection (b) of this section does not operate as an adjudication upon the merits. Kalin v. Pfarnner, 124 Ga. App. 816, 186 S.E.2d 365 (1971).

Dismissal for lack of jurisdiction exception contained in subsection (b) of this section is applicable to dismissal because of failure to pay costs of a previously dismissed action. Teal v. Reeves, 144 Ga. App. 666, 242 S.E.2d 328 (1978).

Intent of preclusive effect of involuntary dismissals. — Preclusive effect afforded dismissals under subsection (b) of this section was intended to apply to cases in which the defendant must incur the inconvenience of preparing to meet the merits of the plaintiff's claim because there is no initial bar to reaching the merits as there would be in case of defects in pleadings, failure to join necessary parties, lack of jurisdiction, or improper venue. Old S. Inv. Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co., 124 Ga. App. 697, 185 S.E.2d 584 (1971).

Order of dismissal containing no language as to being "without prejudice" operates as an adjudication on the merits of the plaintiff's claim. Vaughan v. Car Tapes, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 178, 217 S.E.2d 436 (1975).

Adjudication on merits with certain exceptions. — While, unless the court otherwise specifies, a dismissal operates as an adjudication on the merits, this does not apply to dismissal for lack of jurisdiction, for improper venue, or for lack of an indispensable party. Rainwater v. Vazquez, 133 Ga. App. 173, 210 S.E.2d 380 (1974).

As a general rule, involuntary dismissal under subsection (b) of this section and any involuntary dismissal not provided for therein other than a dismissal for lack of jurisdiction, improper venue, or lack of an indispensable party, operates as an adjudication upon the merits, unless the court in the court's order of dismissal states that the dismissal is without prejudice. Douglas v. Douglas, 238 Ga. 452, 233 S.E.2d 195 (1977).

Despite absence of phrase "with prejudice" in section. — Unless court in the court's order for dismissal specifies otherwise, dismissal under subsection (b) of this section and any dismissal not provided for in this section, other than a dismissal for lack of jurisdiction, for improper venue, or for lack of an indispensable party, operates as an adjudication upon the merits, despite the fact that this section does not use the expression "with prejudice." Teal v. Reeves, 144 Ga. App. 666, 242 S.E.2d 328 (1978).

Dismissal with prejudice is as conclusive of parties' rights as if action had been prosecuted to final adjudication adverse to plaintiff; it is res judicata of all questions which might have been litigated, and is a final disposition, barring the plaintiff's right to bring or maintain another action on the same claim or cause. Cranford v. Carver, 124 Ga. App. 767, 186 S.E.2d 150 (1971), appeal dismissed, 228 Ga. 847, 188 S.E.2d 792 (1972).

Order of dismissal clearly stating that it is without prejudice is not an adjudication on the merits, and is not a bar to a second action. Barkett v. Jones, 142 Ga. App. 835, 237 S.E.2d 400 (1977).

Willfulness as criterion for determining effect of dismissal. — Order of dismissal based on finding of willful failure to comply with a court order can rightly have the effect of an adjudication on the merits, but a dismissal which does not involve any finding of willfulness and is merely an automatic action following a certain lapse of time cannot be considered an adjudication which would bar a subsequent action. Maxey v. Covington, 126 Ga. App. 197, 190 S.E.2d 448 (1972).

Willful failure to make discovery. — Order of dismissal stating that there was a "willful refusal to make discovery" operates as an adjudication on the merits, and acts as res judicata in a subsequent action between the same parties. Boles v. Bannister, 131 Ga. App. 318, 205 S.E.2d 531 (1974).

Involuntary dismissal for willful failure to make discovery operates as an adjudication on the merits and as res judicata, unless the trial court specifies that such dismissal is without prejudice. North Am. Van Lines v. Hutton, 142 Ga. App. 151, 235 S.E.2d 396 (1977).

Failure to answer interrogatories. — Dismissal of a complaint for failure to answer interrogatories operates as an adjudication on the merits under subsection

(b) of this section absent the trial court's specification to the contrary. Old S. Inv. Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co., 124 Ga. App. 697, 185 S.E.2d 584 (1971).

Failure to obey order to appear at pretrial hearing. — When court order of dismissal did not otherwise specify, dismissal of the plaintiff's complaint for failure to comply with an order to appear at the pretrial hearing acted as an adjudication on the merits, and superseded any temporary orders issued in the case. Weeks v. Weeks, 243 Ga. 416, 254 S.E.2d 366 (1979).

Failure to appear on trial date. — When case is called on the date shown on the calendar as the trial date but the plaintiff is not present in person or by counsel, judgment entered up in favor of the defendant, under the provisions of subsection (b) of this section, operates as an adjudication on the merits. Trice v. Howard, 130 Ga. App. 895, 204 S.E.2d 808 (1974).

Failure to add party. — Dismissal of party under subsection (b) of this section for failure to obtain a court order adding a party to the pending action is without prejudice if the merits cannot be reached because of the failure of the plaintiff to satisfy a precondition. Clover Realty Co. v. J.L. Todd Auction Co., 240 Ga. 124, 239 S.E.2d 682 (1977).

To obtain dismissal which operates as adjudication on merits, the defendant must move therefor under subsection (b) of this section; the defendant must take affirmative action and get an order of dismissal. Kalin v. Pfarner, 124 Ga. App. 816, 186 S.E.2d 365 (1971).

Petition to modify child support adjudication on the merits. — Superior court erred in attempting to recast the court's dismissal of a husband's first petition for modification of child support as "simply a sanction" and not an adjudication on the merits so as to render the dismissal outside the ambit of O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15(k)(2) because in dismissing the husband's first petition for modification, the superior court did not specify that the order was not an adjudication on the merits, and under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b), the order was a final order on the claim for downward modification of child support.

Bagwell v. Bagwell, 290 Ga. 378, 721 S.E.2d 847 (2012).

5. Dismissal of Counterclaims, Etc.

Defendant's failure to pay into registry of court in accordance with court's order would not merit dismissal of the defendant's counterclaims. Lawhorn v. Gaskin, 153 Ga. App. 211, 264 S.E.2d 722 (1980).

Dismissal of counterclaim by defendant after involuntary dismissal of petition. — There is nothing in the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) that prohibits the defendant, after involuntary dismissal of the plaintiff's petition, from dismissing the defendant's counterclaim. Myers v. Morris, 225 Ga. 285, 168 S.E.2d 152 (1969).

Dismissal of cross-claim. — Trial court erred in dismissing the corporation's cross-claim against the mortgage seller for money it paid to the mortgage seller to purchase the mortgage as the trial court's erroneous ruling that the corporation's interest in a promissory note regarding the mortgage prevailed over the bank's security interest meant the trial court's ruling that the cross-claim was moot as a result was also erroneous. Provident Bank v. Morequity, Inc., 262 Ga. App. 331, 585 S.E.2d 625 (2003).

Payment of costs is a condition precedent to right to renew original dismissed action. Grier v. Wade Ford, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 821, 219 S.E.2d 43 (1975); McLanahan v. Keith, 140 Ga. App. 171, 230 S.E.2d 57 (1976), aff'd, 239 Ga. 94, 236 S.E.2d 52 (1977), overruled on other grounds, Little v. Walker, 250 Ga. 854, 301 S.E.2d 639 (1983); Perry v. Landmark Fin. Corp., 141 Ga. App. 62, 232 S.E.2d 399 (1977); Urrea v. Flythe, 215 Ga. App. 212, 450 S.E.2d 266 (1994).

Payment of costs in the dismissed suit is a precondition to the filing of a second suit. Little v. Walker, 250 Ga. 854, 301 S.E.2d 639 (1983); Tucker v. Mitchell, 252 Ga. 545, 314 S.E.2d 896 (1984); Shaw v. Lee, 187 Ga. App. 689, 371 S.E.2d 187 (1988); Kappelmeier v. Amoco Fabrics, 192 Ga. App. 388, 385 S.E.2d 2, cert. denied, 192 Ga. App. 902, 385 S.E.2d 2 (1989).

Ruling in Little v. Walker, 250 Ga. 854, 301 S.E.2d 639 (1983) that the payment of costs in a previous action under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 is a condition precedent to filing a second suit is not limited to prospective application. Robinson v. Simpson, 171 Ga. App. 302, 319 S.E.2d 126 (1984).

Requirement may be relaxed when the plaintiff shows a good faith effort to ascertain and pay the costs. Butler v. Bolton Rd. Partners, 222 Ga. App. 791, 476 S.E.2d 265 (1996).

Right to renew a previously dismissed action after the statute of limitation has expired is governed by O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61, which provides in part that when any case has been commenced in either a state or federal court within the applicable statute of limitations and the plaintiff discontinues or dismisses the case, the case may be recommenced in a court of this state or in a federal court either within the original applicable period of limitations or within six months after the discontinuance or dismissal, whichever is later, subject to the requirement of payment of costs in the original action as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(d); provided, however, if the dismissal or discontinuance occurs after the expiration of the applicable period of limitation, this privilege of renewal shall be exercised only once. Belcher v. Folsom, 258 Ga. App. 191, 573 S.E.2d 447 (2002).

Trial court properly dismissed a third suit brought by a grandfather against a principal because the issues in all three suits were nearly identical, and attorney's fees awarded to the principal in the two earlier suits had not been paid by the grandfather; thus, the trial court was without jurisdiction regarding the third suit. Crane v. Cheeley, 270 Ga. App. 126, 605 S.E.2d 824 (2004).

Payment of costs is essential to valid and pending action. — It is essential that first action be dismissed and costs be paid before second action becomes a valid and pending action. Perry v. Landmark Fin. Corp., 141 Ga. App. 62, 232 S.E.2d 399 (1977); Gober v. Nisbet, 186 Ga. App. 264, 367 S.E.2d 68, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 918, 367 S.E.2d 68 (1988).

Failure to pay costs of court is a defense which is not waivable. Payment of costs is not an affirmative defense but a jurisdictional matter which may never be waived. Little v. Walker, 250 Ga. 854, 301 S.E.2d 639 (1983); Tucker v. Mitchell, 252 Ga. 545, 314 S.E.2d 896 (1984); Hilliard v. Edwards, 169 Ga. App. 808, 315 S.E.2d 39 (1984).

State's failure to pay costs of a criminal bond forfeiture proceeding after the judgment was dismissed did not bar the trial court from entering judgment and issuing execution after a second forfeiture proceeding. Daza v. State, 224 Ga. App. 383, 480 S.E.2d 623 (1997).

Acceptance of check approved. — Payment of costs under subsection (d) of this section of a previously dismissed action in order to bring another action on the same cause may be by check if the clerk accepts the check without objection and the check is honored by the bank. Brock v. Baker, 128 Ga. App. 397, 196 S.E.2d 875 (1973).

Monetary sanction imposed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d) does not constitute a court cost under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 which must be paid before a plaintiff refiles an action the plaintiff previously dismissed. Allied Prods. Co. v. Green, 175 Ga. App. 802, 334 S.E.2d 389 (1985).

Mistaken information from clerk that no costs due. — Costs which must be paid pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, as a precondition to the filing of a new suit, do not include costs unknown to the plaintiff after a good faith inquiry after the attorney was mistakenly informed by the clerk of the trial court that no costs were due on a previous action. But any unpaid costs in a previous action which are unknown after a good faith inquiry but discovered after the filing of a new action must be paid within a reasonable time in order to preserve jurisdiction. Daugherty v. Norville Indus., Inc., 174 Ga. App. 89, 329 S.E.2d 202 (1985); Michaels v. Kroger Co., 193 Ga. App. 40, 387 S.E.2d 2, cert. denied, 193 Ga. App. 910, 387 S.E.2d 2 (1989).

Unknown costs. — Costs which must be paid pursuant to subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 as a precondition to the filing of a new suit do not include costs unknown to the plaintiff after a good faith inquiry. Hiley v. McGoogan, 177 Ga. App. 809, 341 S.E.2d 461 (1986).

Costs unknown to plaintiff's attorney. — Trial court did not err in finding that the plaintiff exhibited good faith when costs were unknown to the plaintiff's attorney before the second suit was filed. Jeff Davis Hosp. Auth. v. Altman, 203 Ga. App. 168, 416 S.E.2d 763, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 906, 416 S.E.2d 763 (1992).

Costs unknown to plaintiff's attorney. — Trial court concluded that a patient who filed a personal injury suit against a hospital was entitled to a relaxed application of the rule that a plaintiff in a renewal action must show that costs were paid in the prior action after the patient's attorney attached an affidavit, stating that the attorney met with the court clerk and unsuccessfully requested a copy of computerized dockets and payment records and that, according to counsel, it was impossible to obtain a certificate showing that no costs were due from the clerk's office, even though a cost payment for filing and service showed on the computer screen reflecting the time of the original filing. Lunsford v. DeKalb Med. Ctr., Inc., 263 Ga. App. 394, 587 S.E.2d 859 (2003).

Non-payment of costs due in prior action is an amendable defect only if the existence of such costs remains unknown despite a good-faith inquiry made prior to the filing of the renewal action and if the deficiency is paid "within a reasonable time" after being discovered. Cox v. Fillingim, 184 Ga. App. 205, 361 S.E.2d 65 (1987).

Renewal action dismissed for non-payment. — Trial court did not err in dismissing the plaintiff's renewal action for failure to pay all costs of the previous action when there appeared to be no dispute that the attorney was aware of those costs long before institution of the renewal action. Oseni v. Hambrick, 207 Ga. App. 166, 427 S.E.2d 559 (1993).

Trial court did not err in declining to dismiss the Cobb County, Georgia, renewal suit for failure to pay costs in the Fulton County, Georgia, action because the defendant had not filed a motion for attorney fees in the original Fulton County suit when the plaintiff filed the renewal suit in Cobb County. Jarman v. Jones, 327 Ga. App. 54, 755 S.E.2d 325 (2014).

Question of fact precludes summary judgment. — When in the plaintiff's affidavit, the plaintiff swore that the plaintiff "did investigate with the Costs Clerk of Fulton County Superior Court the incurred costs in the predecessor action" and that "[at] the time of filing [the renewal action], all the preliminary incurred costs were paid," giving the plaintiff the benefit of the doubt, a question of fact is raised whether the plaintiff's efforts to ascertain the costs owed before refiling the plaintiff's action amounted to a good faith inquiry which would prevent involuntary dismissal for failure to comply with subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41. The trial court therefore properly denied the defendant's motion for summary judgment for failure to pay the costs of empanelling the jury in the prior action. Kroger Co. v. Michaels, 183 Ga. App. 626, 359 S.E.2d 698 (1987), aff'd, 193 Ga. App. 40, 387 S.E.2d 2 (1989).

Automatic Dismissal for Want of Prosecution

Options available to trial court. — Under either O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 or Superior Court Rule 14, the court may dismiss an action without prejudice if the plaintiff fails to appear at the call of the case. Neither provision, however, exhausts the options available to the trial court under the court's authority to control the court's own docket and regulate the business of the court. Kraft, Inc. v. Abad, 262 Ga. 336, 417 S.E.2d 317 (1992).

Subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41) is neither in conflict nor contradictory to Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 342, §§ 1 and 2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-2-60), and they reasonably can stand together by recognizing that Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 342, §§ 1 and 2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-2-60) expands the coverage of the five-year nonaction bar. Fulton County v. Corporation of Presiding Bishop, 133 Ga. App. 847, 212 S.E.2d 451 (1975).

Automatic Dismissal for Want of Prosecution (Cont'd)

Local two-year rule conflicting. — Regardless of efficiency of local two-year want of prosecution rule, (for State Court of DeKalb County) the General Assembly has set forth a five-year rule for all actions of a civil nature in all courts whose practice and procedure is governed by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), so that for those courts a local two-year rule would be conflicting. Johnson v. Barnes, 237 Ga. 502, 229 S.E.2d 70 (1976).

Dismissal for failure to substitute parties distinguished. — Dismissal under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-25(a)) for failure to substitute parties is different from dismissal under subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41), which is automatically obtained and does not operate as an adjudication on the merits. Jernigan v. Collier, 131 Ga. App. 162, 205 S.E.2d 450 (1974).

Notices of attorney's leaves of absences insufficient to avoid application of statute. — Pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-2-60(b) and 9-11-41(e), because an individual's negligence suit sat dormant when the trial court failed to enter any orders for eight years, the suit was automatically dismissed for want of prosecution, and the individual could not overcome application of those statutes as notices of leaves of absence filed by the individual's attorney were insufficient to avoid application. Ward v. Swartz, 285 Ga. App. 788, 648 S.E.2d 114 (2007).

Subsection (e) of this section is not a statute of limitations as to cause of action or right to rebring a dismissed complaint. Harris v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 134 Ga. App. 739, 216 S.E.2d 127 (1975).

Dual purpose of subsection (e). — Subsection (e) of this section has at least the dual purpose of preventing court records from becoming cluttered by unresolved and inactive litigation, and protecting litigants from dilatory counsel. Berry v. Siskin, 128 Ga. App. 3, 195 S.E.2d 255 (1973); Fulton County v. Corporation of Presiding Bishop, 133 Ga. App. 847, 212 S.E.2d 451 (1975); Jefferson v. Ross, 250

Ga. 817, 301 S.E.2d 268 (1983).

Interest of public in removing inactive litigation from court records. — Enactment of subsection (e) of this section is a declaration of the General Assembly that it is in the public interest to remove from court records litigation which has been inactive for a period of five years. Berry v. Siskin, 128 Ga. App. 3, 195 S.E.2d 255 (1973).

Mandatory duty of plaintiff to obtain written order and have it entered in record. — "Five-year rule" under subsection (e) of this section is mandatory, and places squarely upon the plaintiff the duty to obtain a written order of continuance or other written order at some time during a five-year period and make sure the order is entered in the record. Milam v. Mojonner Bros. Co., 135 Ga. App. 208, 217 S.E.2d 355 (1975).

To avoid operation of subsection (e) of this section and thus automatic dismissal, the plaintiff must obtain a written order and have the order entered or filed within five years. Milam v. Mojonner Bros. Co., 135 Ga. App. 208, 217 S.E.2d 355 (1975).

Plaintiff who wishes to avoid automatic dismissal of the plaintiff's case by operation of law has a mandatory duty to obtain a written order of continuance or other written order at some time during a five-year period and to make sure the order is entered in the record. Norton v. Brady, 129 Ga. App. 753, 201 S.E.2d 188 (1973).

Order must be in writing. Maroska v. Williams, 146 Ga. App. 130, 245 S.E.2d 470 (1978).

Until an order is signed by judge it is ineffective for any purpose. Majors v. Lewis, 135 Ga. App. 420, 218 S.E.2d 130 (1975).

Orders are not complete until filed or recorded. Georgia Power Co. v. Whitmire, 146 Ga. App. 29, 245 S.E.2d 324 (1978).

No written order within five years resulted in dismissal. — Trial court properly dismissed a party's counterclaim for failure to prosecute under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-2-60(b) and 9-11-41(e). It was undisputed that there had been no written order entered in the case for a period of over five years; even if there was evidence supporting the party's claim that the party had attempted to have the case placed on the trial calendar, the case the party relied upon had been reversed; and it had been held that the automatic dismissal statutes did not violate due process. Roberts v. Eayrs, 297 Ga. App. 821, 678 S.E.2d 535 (2009).

Printed signature on an instruction sheet is not an order for the purposes of subsection (e) of this section. Majors v. Lewis, 135 Ga. App. 420, 218 S.E.2d 130 (1975).

Unsigned carbon copy of letter to attorney delivered by judge to clerk is not an order within the meaning of this section. Parkerson v. Indies Co., 148 Ga. App. 106, 251 S.E.2d 98 (1978).

Agreement between counsel ineffective to avoid dismissal. — Agreement between counsel to continue a case entered in the record prior to the lapse of five years was not sufficient to avoid the mandatory dismissal provisions of subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41) and Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 342, §§ 1 and 2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-2-60) as the plaintiffs had the duty to obtain a written order of continuance and enter the order in the record. Harris v. Moody, 144 Ga. App. 656, 242 S.E.2d 321 (1978).

Dismissal is automatic on expiration of five-year period and cannot be waived by a party litigant. Maroska v. Williams, 146 Ga. App. 130, 245 S.E.2d 470 (1978).

Subsection (e) does not create a new five-year period starting with the date of its enactment for pending actions to be automatically dismissed if no written order was taken within a period of five years. Berry v. Siskin, 128 Ga. App. 3, 195 S.E.2d 255 (1973).

Five-year rule of subsection (e) is not limited to prospective application, since it does not take away or impair any vested right nor impose any new duty or liability, and therefore comes within the saving provision of Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104. Berry v. Siskin, 128 Ga. App. 3, 195 S.E.2d 255 (1973).

Five-year period is computed from date of filing. Georgia Power Co. v. Whitmire, 146 Ga. App. 29, 245 S.E.2d 324 (1978).

Action refiled more than six months after automatic dismissal was untimely. — Injured party's lawsuit against a business was automatically dismissed for want of prosecution pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(e) five years after the suit was filed, not on the date the trial court entered an order confirming the fact that the lawsuit was dismissed, and the trial court properly granted the business's motion for summary judgment after the injured party refiled a lawsuit because the injured party refiled that lawsuit more than six months after the lawsuit was automatically dismissed. Brown v. Kroger Co., 278 Ga. 65, 597 S.E.2d 382 (2004).

As the plaintiff failed to show that any action in the original suit filed, within the meanings of O.C.G.A. §§ 9-2-60 and 9-11-41(e), occurred to bar dismissal of the suit, and failed to timely file a renewal action, the renewal action was properly dismissed. Nelson v. Haugabrook, 282 Ga. App. 399, 638 S.E.2d 840 (2006).

Five-year period does not run during time case in federal court. — Although dismissal for want of prosecution is automatic on expiration of five years, the statutory five-year period does not run during the time the case is in federal court. When an action in a state court is removed to a federal district court, the jurisdiction of the state court is suspended until the case is remanded to the state court, at which time the case resumes the status the case occupied at the time of the removal. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Perry, 168 Ga. App. 387, 308 S.E.2d 848 (1983).

Motion to reinstate was properly denied because the plaintiff did not refile the action but sought to revive or renew an existing action outside of the time period of five years and six months, which could not be done by the plaintiff. Goodwyn v. Carter, 252 Ga. App. 114, 555 S.E.2d 474 (2001).

Action of clerk of court in marking case dismissed is ministerial as dismissal is automatic on expiration of five years. Norton v. Brady, 129 Ga. App. 753, 201 S.E.2d 188 (1973).

Case completely lifeless from date of dismissal. — When a case stands automatically dismissed the case is completely lifeless for all purposes from the date of dismissal, not from the date on which the case was physically stricken from the docket. Fulton County v. Corporation of Presiding Bishop, 133 Ga. App. 847, 212 S.E.2d 451 (1975).

Subsequent order dismissing case with prejudice ineffective. — When no order was taken in a case within five years after the case was filed, the plaintiff's complaint was dismissed without prejudice by operation of law under subsection (e) of this section, and a subsequent order of the trial court dismissing the case with prejudice was error and was null and void. First of Ga. Ins. Co. v. Georgia Power Co., 146 Ga. App. 756, 247 S.E.2d 574 (1978).

Power of a court of record to enter a judgment on a verdict is not extinguished by the passage of five years without entry of an order. Jefferson v. Ross, 250 Ga. 817, 301 S.E.2d 268 (1983).

Failure to take defendant's default to judgment. — When the defendant failed to answer and was in default, but judgment was not entered for more than five years, the case stood as if a jury verdict had been returned and was not subject to dismissal under the five-year rule. Faircloth v. Cox Broadcasting Corp., 169 Ga. App. 914, 315 S.E.2d 434 (1984).

Leave of absence granted did not suffice to avoid operation of subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 since the order failed to identify the case at hand and was never entered in the record. It was not enough that the order granting the leave of absence was filed in the minutes of the superior court. West v. DOT, 174 Ga. App. 603, 330 S.E.2d 803 (1985).

Defense counsel's request for a formal leave of absence did not, standing alone, satisfy the five-year rule requirements for a written, signed, and entered order. Prosser v. Grant, 224 Ga. App. 6, 479 S.E.2d 775 (1996).

Intervening order prevents dismissal, even though subsequently revoked. — When the trial court's order revoking the grant of a continuance and dismissing the complaint was entered some three years after the entry of the order granting the continuance—although after the expiration of over five years from the last written order prior to the continuance order—"manifest injustice" would result if that order revoking the continuance is affirmed, even though the continuation order had been entered in the absence of a written motion and without notice. Simmerson v. Blanks, 183 Ga. App. 863, 360 S.E.2d 422, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 907, 360 S.E.2d 422 (1987).

Automatic dismissal is not res adjudicata. Kalin v. Pfarner, 124 Ga. App. 816, 186 S.E.2d 365 (1971).

Action may be refiled within six months after automatic dismissal under subsection (e) of this section. Brewer v. Thompson, 135 Ga. App. 70, 217 S.E.2d 395 (1975).

Dismissal under subsection (e) is not on merits. — Dismissal under subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41) is not a dismissal on the merits pursuant to subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41), and after such a dismissal the plaintiff had six months to refile the complaint, pursuant to former Code 1933, § 3-808 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61). Allstate Ins. Co. v. Dobbs, 134 Ga. App. 225, 213 S.E.2d 915 (1975); Calloway v. Harms, 135 Ga. App. 54, 217 S.E.2d 184 (1975); First of Ga. Ins. Co. v. Georgia Power Co., 146 Ga. App. 756, 247 S.E.2d 574 (1978).

Original action must not be barred. — Plaintiff, under former Code 1933, § 3-808 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61), may refile an action within six months following automatic dismissal mandated by Ga. L. 1967, p. 557, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-2-60) or subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41) when the original action was not barred by the statute of limitations. Berry v. Siskin, 128 Ga. App. 3, 195 S.E.2d 255 (1973).

After six months, the plaintiff cannot refile if the statute of limitations has run. First of Ga. Ins. Co. v. Georgia Power Co., 146 Ga. App. 756, 247 S.E.2d 574 (1978).

Claimant not deprived of day in court. — If the claimant has a remedy provided by law under which the claimant can assert the claimant's claim within a reasonable time, the claimant has the claimant's "day in court," and if the claimant fails to assert the claim within such time, then the claimant, not the law, is at fault. Berry v. Siskin, 128 Ga. App. 3, 195 S.E.2d 255 (1973).

Hearing necessary before dismissal of minor's complaint with prejudice for lack of prosecution. — It is error to dismiss with prejudice a complaint brought on behalf of a minor by a next friend for lack of prosecution, without further hearing and determination that dismissal should be with prejudice. Mosley v. Lankford, 244 Ga. 409, 260 S.E.2d 322 (1979).

Issues raised by cross action. — Dismissal of action for want of prosecution, when the defendant has filed a cross action seeking equitable relief, does not dismiss issues raised by the cross action.

Winn v. Armour & Co., 184 Ga. 769, 193 S.E. 447 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 3-510).

Appeal of denial of motion premature. — When five years have elapsed without any orders in action for indebtedness, but orders have been issued on accompanying action for receivership, an appeal from the denial of a motion for automatic dismissal on the action for indebtedness is premature. Consolidated Pecan Sales Co. v. Savannah Bank & Trust Co., 121 Ga. App. 40, 172 S.E.2d 487 (1970).

Dismissal of a survivor's wrongful death suit was proper, and automatic, since five years had passed after the most recent court order, and no further action was documented thereafter. Tate v. Ga. DOT, 261 Ga. App. 192, 582 S.E.2d 162 (2003).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Condemnation proceedings. — Civil Procedure Act (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) was controlling in the declaration of taking method of condemnation, and Ga. L.

1967, p. 557, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-2-60) was controlling in an appeal from an award of assessors or a special master. 1970 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 70-138.

9-11-42. Consolidation; severance.

(a) Consolidation. When actions involving a common question of law or fact are pending before the court, if the parties consent, the court may order a joint hearing or trial of any or all the matters in issue in the actions; it may order all the actions consolidated; and it may make such orders concerning proceedings therein as may tend to avoid unnecessary costs or delay.

(b) Separate trials. The court, in furtherance of convenience or to avoid prejudice, may order a separate trial of any claim, cross-claim, counterclaim, or third-party claim, or of any separate issue, or of any number of claims, cross-claims, counterclaims, third-party claims, or issues. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

CONSOLIDATION

SEPARATE TRIALS

General Consideration

This section parallels § 9-11-24. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42 does not preclude consolidation of claims involving common questions of law or fact if the parties do not consent and, furthermore, that section parallels rather than limits O.C.G.A. § 9-11-24(b). Branch v. Maxwell, 203 Ga. App. 553, 417 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 417 S.E.2d 176 (1992).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42 seeks to further judicial convenience or avoid prejudice, not to circumvent the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54. Cable Holdings of Battlefield, Inc. v. Lookout Cable Serv., Inc., 173 Ga. App. 355, 326 S.E.2d 552 (1985).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-20. — Because the numerous claims involving the various plaintiffs did not arise out of the same transaction, occurrence, or series of transactions or occurrences, but the claims were merely similar, involving common questions of law and fact, and thus could have been consolidated in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(a), the trial court erred in denying the defendants' motion to sever those claims. Lincoln Elec. Co. v. Gaither, 286 Ga. App. 558, 649 S.E.2d 823 (2007).

When the issues are not complex and are so closely related that essentially the same evidence would be presented in the trial of an original complaint and a counterclaim, judicial economy would dictate that the claim and counterclaim should be tried together. Wheels & Brakes, Inc. v. Capital Ford Truck Sales, Inc., 167 Ga. App. 532, 307 S.E.2d 13 (1983).

Jurisdiction over a third-party direct damage claim is not destroyed if the original action is settled or disposed of in some fashion before adjudication of such claim; but the court, in the exercise of the court's discretion, either may proceed with the claim or dismiss the claim. Cohen v. McLaughlin, 250 Ga. 661, 301 S.E.2d 37 (1983).

Being tried with a codefendant who has prior convictions that are made known to the jury does not result in prejudice requiring reversal. Givens v. State, 184 Ga. App. 498, 361 S.E.2d 830, cert. denied, 184 Ga. App. 909, 361 S.E.2d 830 (1987).

No application to motion for contempt. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42 did not apply to a party's motion for contempt because a motion for contempt was not an "action" within the meaning of the statute, and a trial court did not err in conducting a joint contempt hearing involving two parties without the consent of one of the parties. Cook v. Smith, 288 Ga. 409, 705 S.E.2d 847 (2010).

Consolidation

Subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42 applies to the consolidation of separate actions, not the separation or bifurcation of claims or issues in one case. Vitner v. Funk, 182 Ga. App. 39, 354 S.E.2d 666 (1987).

Subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42 applies to dual jury trials and other procedures that combine separate actions in joint court proceedings. Ford v. Uniroyal Goodrich Tire Co., 267 Ga. 226, 476 S.E.2d 565 (1996).

Trial court committed reversible error in ordering a dual jury trial without the consent of the parties. Ford v. Uniroyal Goodrich Tire Co., 267 Ga. 226, 476 S.E.2d 565 (1996).

Agreement through counsel to consolidate cases. — Trial court's finding that parties agreed through counsel to consolidate cases and that the cases have been treated as one since that time removes such consolidation from the prohibition of this section against consolidation without the parties' consent. Wright v. Thompson, 236 Ga. 655, 225 S.E.2d 226 (1976).

At a hearing on a motion for summary judgment in a declaratory judgment action brought by a beneficiary of a will, the executor's counsel acknowledged that the parties and issues between that case and the one filed by the executor were the same and agreed to the consolidation of the two cases. Counsel's agreement to the consolidation was sufficient to meet the consent requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(a). Bandy v. Henderson, 284 Ga. 692, 670 S.E.2d 792 (2008).

Trial court did not err by consolidating brothers' action seeking to set aside quitclaim deeds their mother gave her daughter and grandson with a separate pending action in which the brothers sought to prove that a will the mother executed was invalid because the procedure the parties' agreed to did not amount to consolidation of the actions under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(a), and the daughter and grandson waived any claim that the actions were improperly consolidated without their consent; the daughter, grandson, and brothers entered into a consolidated pre-trial order, which controlled only the trial of the action seeking to invalidate the two quitclaim deeds, and on the day the trial commenced in that action, the trial court entered an order stating that although the court had technically consolidated the two actions, with the agreement of the parties and with the trial court's approval, the two civil actions would be tried separately with the action seeking to invalidate the quitclaim deeds being tried first by a jury and the action concerning the will to be tried later by the trial court sitting without a jury. Schaffer v. Fox, 303 Ga. App. 584, 693 S.E.2d 852 (2010).

Trial court did not err by consolidating a creditor's two cases under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42 because the creditor not only consented, but the creditor actually requested the consolidation at a hearing regarding a discovery dispute; the fact that the creditor later rescinded the consent did not render erroneous the trial court's failure to separate the cases. Thomas v. Brown, 308 Ga. App. 514, 707 S.E.2d 900 (2011).

When trial judge ordered consolidation of related actions without parties' consent, reversal on appeal is not required when the county superior court had jurisdiction and venue over party on counterclaim by reason of party's being made a codefendant in adoption suit. Herring v. McLemore, 248 Ga. 808, 286 S.E.2d 425 (1982).

Dismissal of actions under § 9-11-41. — Contention that dismissal of actions with prejudice under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41 was improper because some or all of the actions should have been consolidated under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42 was without merit since the consent of all parties is required for consolidation. Zohoury v. Zohouri, 218 Ga. App. 748, 463 S.E.2d 141 (1995).

Divorce action brought by wife and claim of equitable interest brought by bank pending before the court both involved competing claims relative to the husband's property; the court was correct to consolidate the two. First Nat'l Bank v. Blackburn, 254 Ga. 379, 329 S.E.2d 897 (1985).

Consolidation of a husband's and a wife's separate negligence lawsuits, though arising out of the same accident, required the consent of the parties, since the actions raised separate issues regarding comparative negligence. Robinson v.

Hall, 177 Ga. App. 181, 338 S.E.2d 699 (1985). But see Stenger v. Grimes, 260 Ga. 838, 400 S.E.2d 318 (1991).

No consolidation of eminent domain proceedings. — It was undisputed that, although the condemnees were all related, the three parcels of property at issue were separately owned and differed in acreage. Thus, any consolidation would create an action involving distinct parties with distinct claims uniting against one party; therefore, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(a) applied and the condemnation petitions could not be consolidated without the company's consent. Ga. Transmission Corp. v. Worley, 312 Ga. App. 855, 720 S.E.2d 305 (2011).

Separate trials

Distinction between subsection (b) and § 9-11-21. — Severance under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21 may be principally directed to the separation of claims within multicclaim litigation because of the peculiar relationship or status of parties with respect to particular claims. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(b), on the other hand, appears to be devoted to the convenience of adjudication, the avoidance of prejudice, and the interests of expedition and economy as dictated by the characteristics and elements of proof of the claims themselves. Vitner v. Funk, 182 Ga. App. 39, 354 S.E.2d 666 (1987).

Defendant may not be tried twice. — Separate trials cannot be justified when result is to require the defendant to try the same case twice. Lincoln Land Co. v. Palfery, 130 Ga. App. 407, 203 S.E.2d 597 (1973).

Discretion of trial judge. — As a general rule, question of severance is a matter of discretion for the trial judge. Lansky v. Goldstein, 141 Ga. App. 345, 233 S.E.2d 437 (1977).

Under subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 42 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42), court has broad discretion in granting a motion for severance of a third-party claim, a counterclaim, or a cross-claim, and that discretion will not be interfered with unless the discretion appears to have been abused. Southern Concrete Co. v.

Carter Constr. Co., 121 Ga. App. 573, 174 S.E.2d 447 (1970); Jackson v. International Harvester Co., 190 Ga. App. 765, 380 S.E.2d 306 (1989).

Granting of a separate trial as to any separate issue is a discretionary matter for the trial judge, and there will be no reversal thereof absent a clear and manifest abuse of that discretion. Sollek v. Laseter, 124 Ga. App. 131, 183 S.E.2d 86 (1971).

Severance to try a counterclaim separately or to hold a bifurcated trial on the issues of liability and damages is largely a matter of discretion for the trial judge, and absent clear and manifest abuse of that discretion, it will not be interfered with on appeal. Wheels & Brakes, Inc. v. Capital Ford Truck Sales, Inc., 167 Ga. App. 532, 307 S.E.2d 13 (1983).

Severance is largely a matter of discretion for the trial judge, and absent clear and manifest abuse of that discretion, it will not be interfered with on appeal. Southern Guar. Ins. Co. v. Nixon, 194 Ga. App. 398, 390 S.E.2d 638 (1990).

In an action against a physician for medical malpractice, fraud, and loss of consortium, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in severing the issue of professional negligence from the trial of issues of liability for, and amount of, punitive damages. Hanie v. Barnett, 213 Ga. App. 158, 444 S.E.2d 336 (1994).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in trifurcating pharmaceutical malpractice case against pharmacist and respondeat superior case against pharmacy when the wrong medication was dispensed to the customer as the trial court had already found against the pharmacist on the issues of duty and breach of duty and against the pharmacy's potential respondeat superior liability; thus, trifurcation of the remaining issues involving causation, compensatory damages, and punitive damages was necessary to avoid improperly influencing the jury in the jury's deliberations. Moresi v. Evans, 257 Ga. App. 670, 572 S.E.2d 327 (2002).

Trial court's denial of a former supervisor's motion to sever a trial commenced by a former employee, alleging a variety of torts arising from the supervisor's alleged improper touching of the employee, was not an abuse of discretion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(b) as there was no showing that the supervisor's interest could not be adequately protected by a limiting instruction to the jury with respect to the liability of the former supervisor and the employer. MARTA v. Mosley, 280 Ga. App. 486, 634 S.E.2d 466 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying a motion filed by owners of land to bifurcate a trespass action filed against the owners by a holder of an easement in light of the holder's failure to file a response to the motion; under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(b), whether to grant such a motion was a matter of discretion for the trial judge, the trial judge was not required to sever the trial solely because the owners requested it, and denial of the motion was not an abuse of discretion in that the parties' verified pleadings disputed the facts surrounding the holder's ownership, and the trial judge wished to resolve questions of fact regarding the easement's ownership. Paine v. Nations, 283 Ga. App. 167, 641 S.E.2d 180 (2006).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by amending a pretrial order to allow for bifurcation of a trial, upon the motion of the defendants, because at the hearing on the motion to amend, the plaintiff never objected on the grounds that the timing of the motion to bifurcate caused any injustice; therefore, no reversible error occurred with regard to the plaintiff's timing argument. Bolden v. Ruppenthal, 286 Ga. App. 800, 650 S.E.2d 331 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 756 (Ga. 2007).

Trial court properly refused to transfer a dispossessory action wherein the landlord was granted a writ of possession from the county civil court to the superior court under O.C.G.A. § 15-10-45(d) based on the tenant filing a counterclaim as that statute only applied to magistrate courts, not the county civil court. Further, whether or not the trial court erred by failing to inquire as to whether the parties were willing to consent to consolidation of the claims could not be determined as the appealing tenant failed to provide a transcript of the bifurcated or dispossessory hearings. Roberts v. Strong, 293 Ga. App. 466, 667 S.E.2d 632 (2008).

Trial court was authorized to conclude, after extensive discussion with the parties, that bifurcation of an insured's breach of an insurance contract and bad faith failure to pay benefits claims was appropriate under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(b) because coverage turned on whether the insured's debilitating condition arose from an injury or sickness, and the discrete coverage issue had to be resolved first since bad faith was irrelevant absent coverage. Saye v. Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co., 311 Ga. App. 74, 714 S.E.2d 614 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1857, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 984 (Ga. 2011).

Discretion in severing issues raised by intervenors. — Language of this section is broad enough to permit the trial court discretion in granting severance to issues raised by intervening parties. McGowan v. North Ga. Prod. Credit Ass'n, 246 Ga. 135, 269 S.E.2d 25 (1980).

Refusal of court to allow trial of severed claim. — In an action related to utility rates, the trial court improperly deprived the plaintiffs of an opportunity to litigate the plaintiffs' claims for damages under RICO and the Sherman Act since the court granted the plaintiffs' motion to sever those claims from another claim based on the alleged unreasonableness of the rates charged, but then, after a trial on the latter claim, ruled that the plaintiffs had abandoned the plaintiffs' claims under RICO and the Sherman Act by not raising those claims during the trial. Management By Design, Inc. v. Lakeview Utils., Inc., 233 Ga. App. 711, 505 S.E.2d 37 (1998).

When questions of law and fact are similar, but not the same, it is an abuse of the trial court's discretion to refuse severance upon timely motion. Paulsen Street Investors v. EBCO Gen. Agencies, 224 Ga. App. 507, 481 S.E.2d 246 (1997).

More than one defense. — There is no provision for severance when there is a single issue but more than one defense is presented. Sheffield v. Lewis, 246 Ga. 19, 268 S.E.2d 615 (1980).

Time for motion for severance. — Motion for severance because of the admission of evidence against a defendant that a second defendant believes is highly prejudicial to that defendant is untimely when the questionable evidence was listed in the pretrial order but the motion was not made until the trial. Gorlin v. Halpern, 184 Ga. App. 10, 360 S.E.2d 729 (1987), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Burgess & Brown v. Gorlin & Long, 258 Ga. 127, 365 S.E.2d 405 (1988).

Denial of severance proper. — In a divorce case in which the paramour of the husband became a named party because the husband allegedly fraudulently transferred assets to the paramour, the paramour was not entitled to severance of the fraudulent conveyances claim under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42(b) as the paramour could not demonstrate the requisite harm by showing prejudice to the husband, and the paramour was not prejudiced by the joint trial because the fact of the paramour's affair with the husband would have been admissible in a separate trial. Moore v. Moore, 281 Ga. 81, 635 S.E.2d 107 (2006).

No standing to raise prejudice. — Companies lacked standing to raise the issue of prejudice to a supervisor as a basis for their motion for bifurcation in an action brought by an employee against supervisor and companies for sexual harassment and negligent hiring when no harm was shown by the companies. Troutman v. B.C.B. Co., 209 Ga. App. 166, 433 S.E.2d 73 (1993).

Separate trial on accord and satisfaction. — In an automobile collision case, it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial judge to grant the defendant's motion for a separate trial on the issue of defense of accord and satisfaction. Sollek v. Laseter, 124 Ga. App. 131, 183 S.E.2d 86 (1971).

Confusion between counterclaim and main action. — When a person served with process intended for another answers denying that the person is the intended defendant, and counterclaims for malicious use of process, the trial court can easily avoid any confusion between the separate trial of the counterclaim and the main action by ordering a separate trial of the counterclaim pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42. Bank South, N.A. v. Tate, 190 Ga. App. 248, 378

Counterclaim severed and transferred for venue purposes. — If a motion to join is granted and a defendant-in-counterclaim is thereafter served, then the actually "joined [rather than potentially joinable] party" may contest venue by filing a motion to dismiss, which is to be treated by the trial court as a motion to transfer pursuant to Uniform Superior Court Rule 19. If venue is shown to be proper elsewhere, it would then be incumbent upon the trial court to enter an appropriate order. Such an appropriate order might sever the counterclaim for separate trial pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42 and transfer only the severed counterclaim, while retaining jurisdiction and venue over the main action. McCabe v. Lundell, 199 Ga. App. 639, 405 S.E.2d 693, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 405 S.E.2d 693 (1991).

Evidence of insurance in negligence action deemed prejudicial. — In a negligence action brought by a bicyclist against insureds and the insureds' insurance carrier for injuries incurred when allegedly struck by the insured's vehicle, the trial court erred by denying the insured's motion to bifurcate claims for the trial of the negligence claim and the bicyclist's claim for benefits under former no fault insurance statute; admission of evidence of insurance coverage was inherently prejudicial in a negligence action against the insureds. Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Reybitz, 205 Ga. App. 174, 421 S.E.2d 767 (1992).

Vehicle collision cases. — Court does not abuse the court's discretion by bifurcating the liability and damages issues in vehicle collision cases. Whitley v. Gwinnett County, 221 Ga. App. 18, 470 S.E.2d 724 (1996).

Bifurcation of liability and damages issues in medical malpractice action avoided prejudice to the doctors and hospital based on the patient's lengthy suffering and eventual death and the emotional, as well as financial, damages imposed on the patient's spouse and children by it. Cantrell v. Northeast Ga. Medical Ctr., 235 Ga. App. 365, 508 S.E.2d 716 (1998).

9-11-43. Evidence.

(a) Evidence on trials. In all trials the testimony of witnesses shall be taken orally in open court unless otherwise provided by this chapter or by statute.

(b) Evidence on motions. When a motion is based on facts not appearing of record, the court may hear the matter on affidavits presented by the respective parties, but the court may direct that the matter be heard wholly or partly on oral testimony or depositions; provided, however, that this provision shall not limit the right of parties to use depositions where they would otherwise be entitled to do so.

(c) Determination of the law of other jurisdictions. A party who intends to raise an issue concerning the law of another state or of a foreign country shall give notice in his pleadings or other reasonable written notice. The court, in determining such law, may consider any relevant material or source, including testimony, whether or not submitted by a party or admissible under the rules of evidence. The court's determination shall be treated as a ruling on a question of law. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 43; Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 10.)

Evidence on Motions

Proffered evidence of negligence insufficient. — When the plaintiffs failed to tender a copy of the Manual on Uniform Traffic Control Devices (MUTCD) into evidence, even though the MUTCD was evidence of a minimum standard of care, the trial court could not determine if MUTCD created negligence per se. Donaldson v. DOT, 236 Ga. App. 411, 511 S.E.2d 210 (1999).

While portions of the Manual on Uniform Traffic Control Devices (MUTCD) were testified to by expert witnesses sufficient to establish a minimum standard of care for ordinary negligence purposes, such testimony was insufficient for either the trial or the appellate court to determine that such portion of MUTCD created negligence per se. Donaldson v. DOT, 236 Ga. App. 411, 511 S.E.2d 210 (1999).

Proper procedure in disposing of matters in abatement before trial is found in Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(d)) and subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 10 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43). Ogden Equip. Co. v. Talmadge Farms, Inc., 232 Ga. 614, 208 S.E.2d 459 (1974); Kirkpatrick v. Mackey, 162 Ga. App. 876, 293 S.E.2d 461 (1982); Dawson v. McCart, 169 Ga. App. 434, 313 S.E.2d 135 (1984); Derbyshire v. United Bldrs. Supplies, Inc., 194 Ga. App. 840, 392 S.E.2d 37 (1990).

Motions in abatement are heard under the provisions of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43, which contemplates consideration of evidence not appearing on the face of the record. Manufacturers Nat'l Bank v. Tri-State Glass, Inc., 201 Ga. App. 253, 410 S.E.2d 808 (1991).

If appellant's summary judgment motion is considered as raising a real party in interest defense, it was properly denied. An objection on this ground may be made at any time up to and including a trial on the merits, which the appellant did in the appellant's motion in limine and motion for a directed verdict. No case, however, should be dismissed for this reason until a reasonable time has been allowed after objection for ratification of commencement of the action by, or joinder or substitution of, the real party in interest. Accordingly, if the appellant renews this objection, the trial court should consider this issue under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43(b). Golden Pantry Food Stores, Inc. v. Lay Bros., Inc., 266 Ga. App. 645, 597 S.E.2d 659 (2004).

Defendant was not entitled to a jury trial on a motion to set aside for lack of jurisdiction over the person as jurisdiction is a question for the court. Montgomery v. USS Agri-Chemical Div., 155 Ga. App. 189, 270 S.E.2d 362 (1980).

Motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction of the defendant, when tried on affidavits pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43, does not become a motion for summary judgment. Terrell v. Porter, 189 Ga. App. 778, 377 S.E.2d 540 (1989).

Consideration of affidavit in motion to dismiss. — In a breach of contract action between a business and an advertiser, while the best evidence rule required the advertiser to produce the first affidavit provided by the advertiser's senior director of business affairs, and the trial court erred in considering the affidavit without requiring the affidavit's production, given that the second affidavit showed that the parties entered into the contract at issue, which included the forum selection clause, the trial court properly considered the affidavit to that effect to support the advertiser's motion to dismiss on personal jurisdiction grounds.

Consequently, when this second affidavit was not filed in violation of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d), the trial court properly considered the second affidavit. Alcatraz Media, LLC v. Yahoo! Inc., 290 Ga. App. 882, 660 S.E.2d 797 (2008).

Hearing on jurisdiction and venue defenses. — Preliminary hearing over defenses of lack of jurisdiction over the person or subject matter and improper venue, whether made in pleading or by motion, may be heard and determined before trial on the application of any party, and at such hearing factual issues shall be determined by the trial court; moreover, there is no reason why the same type of factual determination should not be made by the trial court in a motion to set aside. Montgomery v. USS Agri-Chemical Div., 155 Ga. App. 189, 270 S.E.2d 362 (1980).

Procedural requirements for motion to dismiss complied with. — Order denying motion to dismiss which expressly referred to such motion and stated that ruling was made after oral argument on the issue and after consideration of the pleadings, affidavits, and deposition, comported with procedural requirements that motion to dismiss be determined in accordance with Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(d)) and subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 10 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43). Hart v. DeLowe Partners, Ltd., 147 Ga. App. 715, 250 S.E.2d 169 (1978).

Oral evidence on summary judgment motion not required. — While there maybe circumstances in which the court may, in the court's sound discretion, permit use of oral evidence at a hearing on a motion for summary judgment as, for example, when both parties agree, there is no requirement that the court do so. Johnson v. Aetna Fin., Inc., 139 Ga. App. 452, 228 S.E.2d 299 (1976).

In hearing on motion for new trial, judge may direct that matter be heard on affidavits or partly on oral testimony or on depositions. Johnson v. Johnson, 244 Ga. 155, 259 S.E.2d 88 (1979).

Court to give notice and direction of oral hearing. — In order for motion to be heard orally, statute requires that court make such direction and give notice thereof. Johnson v. Aetna Fin., Inc., 139 Ga. App. 452, 228 S.E.2d 299 (1976).

Consideration of oral testimony. — Nothing in subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43 precludes a court from considering oral testimony at a hearing on a motion to dismiss for insufficient service. Franchell v. Clark, 241 Ga. App. 128, 524 S.E.2d 512 (1999).

Reliance on affidavit justified. — When affidavit does not recite that the affidavit was based on personal knowledge, but the information therein is consistent with and cumulative of the documentary evidence, and it is uncontroverted by the counter-affidavit or other evidence, the court is entitled to rely on the affidavit. Lott v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 154 Ga. App. 474, 268 S.E.2d 686 (1980).

Trial court erred in dismissing a public employee's Georgia Whistle Blower Statute, O.C.G.A. § 45-1-4, suit as moot as: (1) the employer, the Georgia Department of Corrections, continued to employ grandfathered pharmacists according to an affidavit submitted under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43; (2) the employee had been a grandfathered pharmacist while employed by the Department; and (3) the appellate court saw no reason, but for the alleged retaliatory action, that the employee would not remain employed as a pharmacist with the Department; the employee's retirement from the Department made the matter moot only if the employee did not want to return to work or could not because the employee was past the mandatory retirement age, but these facts were not apparent from the stipulation that the employee had retired. Hughes v. Ga. Dep't of Corr., 267 Ga. App. 440, 600 S.E.2d 383 (2004).

Summary judgment motion improper. — When it is necessary to consider matters outside the pleadings in ruling on a motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute the action in the name of the real party-in-interest, this should be done under the provisions of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43 and not by way of a motion for summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56. Warshaw Properties

v. Lackey, 170 Ga. App. 101, 316 S.E.2d 482 (1984).

Motion to dismiss not converted to summary judgment. — Defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, insufficiency of process, and insufficiency of service of process was not converted to a summary judgment motion upon consideration of matters outside the pleadings and, thus, dismissal was not directly appealable under the summary judgment statute. Church v. Bell, 213 Ga. App. 44, 443 S.E.2d 677 (1994).

Tender of evidence to support motion to set aside judgment. — Trial court shall give directions as to how evidence is to be presented, either by affidavit, deposition, oral testimony, or any combination, and notice of any hearing on the motion to set aside the judgment. Herringdine v. Nalley Equip. Leasing, Ltd., 238 Ga. App. 210, 517 S.E.2d 571 (1999).

Law of Other Jurisdictions

Subsection (c) is equivalent to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 44.1, and any construction given to the federal rule is applicable to that subsection. Old Hickory Prods. Co. v. Hickory Specialties, Inc., 366 F. Supp. 913 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

There are two separate and distinct parts in subsection (c) of this section, each of which has a separate and distinct function. Souchak v. Close, 132 Ga. App. 248, 207 S.E.2d 708 (1974).

First sentence of subsection (c) concerns notice, and requires any party who intends to raise an issue concerning the law of another state to give notice in that party's pleadings or other reasonable written notice; this is to give the court and the party's adversary an opportunity to prepare concerning it. Souchak v. Close, 132 Ga. App. 248, 207 S.E.2d 708 (1974).

Second sentence of subsection (c) presupposes compliance with first sentence. — Second sentence of subsection (c) of this section concerns determination of foreign law; it presupposes that first sentence, as to notice, has been complied with, and is conditional thereon. Souchak v. Close, 132 Ga. App. 248, 207 S.E.2d 708 (1974).

Notice requirement instituted by subsection (c). — On its face, subsection (c) of this section ends requirement that foreign law must be pled and proved, substituting instead the requirement that the party who wishes to introduce law of a foreign state or country must give reasonable written notice of that party's intention. Old Hickory Prods. Co. v. Hickory Specialties, Inc., 366 F. Supp. 913 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Notice of intention to rely on foreign law required. — Subsection (c) of this section requires that whoever would rely on foreign law must give notice of such intention to the other party. Ramseur v. American Mgt. Ass'n, 155 Ga. App. 340, 270 S.E.2d 880 (1980).

When the first notice of intent to rely upon foreign law was made at a hearing on a motion for directed verdict, the notice was insufficient to provide the court and opposing counsel an opportunity to prepare. Fortson v. Fortson, 204 Ga. App. 827, 421 S.E.2d 106 (1992).

Notice of intent to rely on foreign law filed some two weeks before pre-trial conference is sufficient compliance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43. Shannon v. Toronto-Dominion Bank, 168 Ga. App. 279, 308 S.E.2d 682 (1983).

Oral notice by defendant given during argument in support of motion for directed verdict of the defendant's intention to rely on Alabama law was statutorily unsound and required reversal of directed verdict in the defendant's favor. Plant v. Trust Co., 164 Ga. App. 387, 297 S.E.2d 37 (1982).

Responsibility on party wishing to raise foreign law issue. — Subsection (c) of this section places responsibility on the party who intends to raise an issue concerning the law of another state. Souchak v. Close, 132 Ga. App. 248, 207 S.E.2d 708 (1974).

Notice pleading philosophy of subsection (c) of this section places upon the party intending to rely upon laws of another state the responsibility of providing the opponent, as well as the court, with notice of such intent. Berry v. Jeff Hunt Mach. Co., 148 Ga. App. 35, 250 S.E.2d 813 (1978).

Notice of intent is required to raise an issue of foreign law, to establish such law by compliance with statutory means, or cause a duty to be imposed on a court to judicially recognize any relevant, existing foreign law. Samay v. Som, 213 Ga. App. 812, 446 S.E.2d 230 (1994).

Because a former president did not give adequate notice of the intention for Delaware law to apply to a corporation's misappropriation of corporate opportunity claim, the trial court did not err when the court applied Georgia law; the president did not raise the issue of the applicability of Delaware law until a post-trial motion. Brewer v. Insight Tech., Inc., 301 Ga. App. 694, 689 S.E.2d 330 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0678, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 455 (Ga. 2010).

Trial court did not err in applying Georgia law in a bank's action against a limited liability company (LLC) and guarantors for breach of a promissory note and guaranty agreements because the LLC and guarantors failed to give proper notice that the guarantors intended to raise an issue concerning Mississippi law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43(c); in their written response to the motion for summary judgment, the LLC and guarantors relied exclusively on Georgia law. Kensington Partners, LLC v. Beal Bank Nev., 311 Ga. App. 196, 715 S.E.2d 491 (2011).

Foreign statutes need not be pled in order to be relied upon. Atlanta Newspapers, Inc. v. Shaw, 123 Ga. App. 848, 182 S.E.2d 683 (1971).

Pleading and proof requirement. — Proof of law or regulations, other than the Official Code of Georgia and state regulations promulgated under the Administrative Procedure Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 13, T. 50, must be pled and proved under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43, because judicial notice cannot be taken of rules, regulations, and ordinances not authorized for publication. Donaldson v. DOT, 236 Ga. App. 411, 511 S.E.2d 210 (1999).

Georgia law applied in an action arising out of a Louisiana divorce decree because neither party met the requirements in O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-43(c) and former 24-7-24 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-9-922) that the parties give notice and thereafter prove the law of another state. Davis v. Davis, 310 Ga. App. 512, 713 S.E.2d 694 (2011).

Law of Other Jurisdictions (Cont'd)

Pleading and proof requirement discarded. — With enactment of subsection (c) of this section, requirement of pleading and proof of foreign law as a question of fact was discarded, along with attendant presumption of identity of common law. Old Hickory Prods. Co. v. Hickory Specialties, Inc., 366 F. Supp. 913 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

When law of South Carolina was not pled or proved, law of Georgia would be applied in interpreting and giving effect to custody judgment of such sister state. Sandifer v. Lynch, 244 Ga. 369, 260 S.E.2d 78 (1979).

Foreign law presumed same as Georgia law. — When no evidence as to Kentucky law was introduced, it will be presumed to be the same as Georgia law. Earley v. Earley, 165 Ga. App. 483, 300 S.E.2d 814 (1983).

When a question is raised whether or not service by certified mail in Georgia as to a foreign suit was proper under foreign law, in the absence of such proof, the law of this state obtains, and when the evidence before the trial court fails to disclose that the defendant in the foreign court was served according to the Georgia long-arm statute, the trial court errs in granting summary judgment in favor of the plaintiff. Southeastern Metal Prods., Inc. v. Horger, 166 Ga. App. 205, 303 S.E.2d 536 (1983).

Absent proper introduction and proof of the law of a sister state, it is presumed that such foreign law is the same as that of Georgia. Abruzzino v. F & M Bank, 168 Ga. App. 639, 309 S.E.2d 911 (1983).

In an action to domesticate a New York default judgment, the trial court properly applied Georgia law because the judgment debtor did not give notice pursuant to subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43, nor did the debtor prove New York law as required by former O.C.G.A. § 24-7-24 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-9-922). Giarratano v. Glickman, 232 Ga. App. 75, 501 S.E.2d 266 (1998).

No judicial notice of foreign law absent notice or evidence thereof. — When party gave no notice in the party's pleadings or other reasonable written notice of intent to raise issue of law of sister state, nor was any evidence adduced as to such law, the court could not take judicial notice thereof. Lauer v. Bodner, 137 Ga. App. 851, 225 S.E.2d 69 (1976).

Subsection (c) controls determination of substantive foreign law. Old Hickory Prods. Co. v. Hickory Specialties, Inc., 366 F. Supp. 913 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Subsection (c) of this section governs state courts' consideration of laws of other states, as well as other countries. Old Hickory Prods. Co. v. Hickory Specialties, Inc., 366 F. Supp. 913 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Subsection (c) of this section, as a whole, governs the determination of foreign law. Ramseur v. American Mgt. Ass'n, 155 Ga. App. 340, 270 S.E.2d 880 (1980).

One objective of subsection (c) is to abandon fact characterization of foreign law and to make the process of determining alien law identical with the method of ascertaining domestic law to the extent possible. Old Hickory Prods. Co. v. Hickory Specialties, Inc., 366 F. Supp. 913 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Determination of foreign law as cooperative venture. — Notice requirement of subsection (c) of this section and mode of proof were deliberately left flexible and informal to encourage court and counsel to regard determination of foreign law as a cooperative venture requiring open and unstructured dialogue among all concerned; thus, judicial practice of automatically refusing to engage in research or to assist or direct counsel would be inconsistent with one of that subsection's basic premises. Old Hickory Prods. Co. v. Hickory Specialties, Inc., 366 F. Supp. 913 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Courts should take active role in process of ascertaining foreign law. Old Hickory Prods. Co. v. Hickory Specialties, Inc., 366 F. Supp. 913 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Whenever possible, foreign law issues should be resolved on their merits and on the basis of a full evaluation of the available materials. Old Hickory Prods. Co. v. Hickory Specialties, Inc., 366 F. Supp. 913 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Subsection (c) supersedes case law, precluding use of Southern Reporter as a relevant source of Florida law, if the trial court so decides, irrespective of whether the Florida cases as therein reported are or are not “published by authority.” Smith v. Davis, 121 Ga. App. 704, 175 S.E.2d 28 (1970).

Tennessee “slip opinions” were not “published by authority” and were therefore not binding on the court, with or without introduction of proof. Swafford v. Globe Am. Cas. Co., 187 Ga. App. 730, 371 S.E.2d 180, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 909, 371 S.E.2d 180 (1988).

Consideration of any relevant material permitted. — Subsection (c) of this section permits court to consider any material relevant to foreign law issue, whether submitted by counsel or unearthed by the court’s own research, without regard to the material’s admissibility under the rules of evidence. Old Hickory Prods. Co. v. Hickory Specialties, Inc., 366 F. Supp. 913 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

Burden of proof of validity of foreign judgment in action to domesticate. — Although law which provides that judicial notice or recognition of foreign laws will not occur unless the foreign laws are produced to the court was modified by subsection (c) of this section, if the defendant defends an action to domesticate by making a collateral attack on the foreign judgment, the burden is not on the defendant to prove that the judgment is no good under the foreign law. Ramseur v. American Mgt. Ass’n, 155 Ga. App. 340, 270 S.E.2d 880 (1980).

When collateral attack is made on a foreign judgment for lacking elements necessary for full faith and credit, the burden is on the party who wishes to have the judgment enforced to prove that the judgment is good under the laws of the state where rendered. Ramseur v. American Mgt. Ass’n, 155 Ga. App. 340, 270 S.E.2d 880 (1980).

When jurisdiction is neither alleged nor proved a foreign default judgment, the issue may be raised in this state in defense of an action on the judgment in a state court, but this does not shift the burden of proving lack of jurisdiction under foreign law to the defendant. Ramseur v. American Mgt. Ass’n, 155 Ga. App. 340, 270 S.E.2d 880 (1980).

Mere proof or admission of fact of duly certified and attested foreign judgment is not prima facie proof of anything except that the judgment was rendered. Ramseur v. American Mgt. Ass’n, 155 Ga. App. 340, 270 S.E.2d 880 (1980).

Foreign order found improperly certified in accordance with Georgia law. See Southeastern Metal Prods., Inc. v. Horger, 166 Ga. App. 205, 303 S.E.2d 536 (1983).

Intent to rely on federal law. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43(c) does not require notice of intent to rely on federal law. Six Flags over Ga. II, L.P. v. Kull, 276 Ga. 210, 576 S.E.2d 880 (2003).

Foreign law on common law marriages. — Wife’s reliance on Alabama law to support her claim of a common law marriage was necessary because the lex loci is the general rule adhered to by courts in questions of marriage; Georgia, like other states not generally recognizing common law marriages, will recognize as valid a common law marriage established under the laws of another state. Norman v. Ault, 287 Ga. 324, 695 S.E.2d 633 (2010).

9-11-45. Subpoena for taking depositions; objections; place of examination.

(a)(1)(A) The clerk of the superior court of the county in which the action is pending or the clerk of any court of record in the county where the deposition is to be taken shall issue subpoenas for the persons sought to be deposed, upon request.

(B) Upon agreement of the parties, an attorney, as an officer of the court, may issue and sign a subpoena for the person sought to be deposed on behalf of a court in which the attorney is authorized to practice or a court for a venue in which a deposition is compelled by the subpoena, if the deposition pertains to an action pending in a court in which the attorney is authorized to practice.

(C) Subpoenas issued pursuant to this paragraph shall be issued and served in accordance with law governing issuance of subpoenas for attendance at court, except as to issuance by an attorney. The subpoena may command the person to whom it is directed to produce and permit inspection and copying of designated books, papers, documents, or tangible things which constitute or contain matters within the scope of the examination permitted by subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-26, but in that event the subpoena will be subject to subsection (c) of Code Section 9-11-26; or the court, upon motion made promptly and in any event at or before the time specified in the subpoena for compliance therewith, may quash or modify the subpoena if it is unreasonable and oppressive, or condition denial of the motion upon the advancement by the person in whose behalf the subpoena is issued of the reasonable cost of producing the books, papers, documents, or tangible things.

(2) The person to whom the subpoena is directed may, within ten days after the service thereof or on or before the time specified in the subpoena for compliance, if such time is less than ten days after service, serve upon the attorney designated in the subpoena written objection to inspection or copying of any or all of the designated materials. If objection is made, the party serving the subpoena shall not be entitled to inspect and copy the materials except pursuant to an order of the court from which the subpoena was issued. The party serving the subpoena may, if objection has been made, move, upon notice to the deponent, for an order at any time before or during the taking of the deposition, provided that nothing in this Code section shall be construed as requiring the issuance of a subpoena to compel a party to attend and give his deposition or produce documents at the taking of his deposition where a notice of deposition under Code Section 9-11-30 has been given or a request under Code Section 9-11-34 has been served, such notice or request to a party being enforceable by motion under Code Section 9-11-37.

(b) A person who is to give a deposition may be required to attend an examination:

(1) In the county wherein he resides or is employed or transacts his business in person;

(2) In any county in which he is served with a subpoena while therein; or

(3) At any place which is not more than 30 miles from the county seat of the county wherein the witness resides, is employed, or transacts his business in person. (Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 19; Ga. L. 1972, p. 510, § 11; Ga. L. 1997, p. 457, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Non-resident who files a lawsuit in Georgia may, in the court’s discretion, be compelled to give a deposition in Georgia. Warehouse Home Furn. Distrib., Inc. v. Davenport, 261 Ga. 853, 413 S.E.2d 195 (1992).

Applicable to deponents who must be subpoenaed. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-45 provides for treatment of deponents for whom subpoenas must be issued (i.e., witnesses) that is distinct from the treatment of the deponents for whom only a notice of deposition must be given (i.e., parties). Warehouse Home Furn. Distrib., Inc. v. Davenport, 261 Ga. 853, 413 S.E.2d 195 (1992).

Geographic limits in subsection (b) do not apply to parties. — Holding in Blanton v. Blanton, 259 Ga. 622, 385 S.E.2d 672 (1989), concerning the geographic limitations of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-45, is not applicable when a notice of deposition has issued to a party in the lawsuit. Warehouse Home Furn. Distrib., Inc. v. Davenport, 261 Ga. 853, 413 S.E.2d 195 (1992).

Motorist's suit was properly dismissed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d) due to the motorist's failure to attend three scheduled depositions. That defense counsel's office was located more than 30 miles from where the motorist resided did not excuse the motorist from attending a properly noticed deposition as the geographical limitations of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-45(b) were not applicable because a notice of deposition was issued under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-30 to a party in the lawsuit. Pascal v. Prescod, 296 Ga. App. 359, 674 S.E.2d 623 (2009).

Out-of-state resident cannot be compelled to come to Georgia for the purpose of taking a deposition. Blanton v. Blanton, 259 Ga. 622, 385 S.E.2d 672 (1989).

Subpoena properly quashed. — Trial court properly quashed a deposition subpoena to an arbitrator as the trial court was authorized to find that the court could determine whether the arbitrator acted in disregard of the law on the record; the deposition of the arbitrator was not needed. Doman v. Stapleton, 272 Ga. App. 114, 611 S.E.2d 673 (2005).

Cited in Brown v. State, 238 Ga. 98, 231 S.E.2d 65 (1976); Norfolk S. Ry. v. Hartry, 316 Ga. App. 532, 729 S.E.2d 656 (2012); Howard v. Alegria, 321 Ga. App. 178, 739 S.E.2d 95 (2013).

ADVISORY OPINIONS OF THE STATE BAR

When subpoenas should issue. — Subpoena issued pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 24-10-22(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-13-23) should only be issued for actual hearings and trials and should not be requested when in fact no hearing or trial had been scheduled. Likewise, a subpoena issued pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-45 of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) should be requested and issued only for depositions which have been actually scheduled by agreement between the parties or when a notice of deposition had been filed and served upon all parties, and should not be issued when no deposition had been scheduled. Adv. Op. No. 84-40 (September 21, 1984).

Notice of deposition required. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-45 provides that a subpoena shall issue for persons sought to be deposed and may command the person to produce documents. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-30(b)(1) requires notice to every other party of all depositions. Reading §§ 9-11-30 and 9-11-45 together, it is obvious that before a subpoena can be issued, notice of the deposition must be given to all parties. Adv. Op. No. 84-40 (September 21, 1984).

9-11-46. Exceptions unnecessary; objections to rulings or orders.

(a) Formal exceptions to rulings or orders of the court are unnecessary. For all purposes for which an exception has heretofore been necessary, it is sufficient that a party, at the time the ruling or order of the court is made or sought, makes known to the court the action which he desires the court to take or his objection to the action of the court and his grounds therefor; and, if a party has no opportunity to object to a ruling or order at the time it is made, the absence of an objection does not thereafter prejudice him.

(b) When motion for mistrial or other like relief is made, the question is thereby presented as to whether the moving party is entitled to the relief therein sought or to any lesser relief, and where such motion is denied in whole or in part, it shall not be necessary that the moving party thereafter renew his motion or otherwise seek further ruling by the court. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 46.)

ANALYSIS

OBJECTIONS
MISTRIALS

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1993, Title 81, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Party cannot merely agree to trial procedure. — Although a party need not except to an unfavorable ruling, the party cannot merely agree to the procedure directed by the trial court; neither can the party engage in conduct or trial procedure which aids in fostering the ruling of which the party later seeks to complain. Fabe v. Floyd, 199 Ga. App. 322, 405 S.E.2d 265, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 405 S.E.2d 265 (1991).

App. 534, 174 S.E.2d 361 (1970); Davis v. Camp Concrete Prods. Co., 122 Ga. App. 551, 177 S.E.2d 798 (1970); Seaboard Coast Line R.R. v. Wallace, 123 Ga. App. 490, 181 S.E.2d 542 (1971); Clyatt v. State, 126 Ga. App. 779, 192 S.E.2d 417 (1972); Moorehead v. Counts, 130 Ga. App. 453, 203 S.E.2d 553 (1973); Carter v. State, 141 Ga. App. 464, 233 S.E.2d 856 (1977); Waddill v. Waddill, 143 Ga. App. 806, 240 S.E.2d 129 (1977); Burce v. State, 146 Ga. App. 383, 246 S.E.2d 412 (1978); Georgia Power Co. v. Green, 158 Ga. App. 717, 282 S.E.2d 145 (1981); Gee v. Chattahoochee Tractor Sales, Inc., 172 Ga. App. 351, 323 S.E.2d 176 (1984); Stone v. State, 177 Ga. App. 750, 341 S.E.2d 280 (1986); Oden v. Legacy Ford-Mercury, Inc., 222 Ga. App. 666, 476 S.E.2d 43 (1996).

Objections

Subsection (a) of this section does not exempt party from voicing some objection to remarks that have the effect of excluding certain evidence from the jury's consideration when such party has opportunity to object. Sancken Assoc. v. Stokes, 119 Ga. App. 282, 166 S.E.2d 924 (1969); Stephenson v. Wildwood Farms, Inc., 194 Ga. App. 728, 391 S.E.2d 706 (1990).

Under subsection (a), objecting party may either make known to court action which the opposing party desires court to take, such as mistrial, or make known the party's objection to court's action and ground therefor. Speagle v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 138 Ga. App. 384, 226 S.E.2d 459 (1976), distinguishing Seaboard Coast Line R.R.

v. Wallace, 227 Ga. 363, 180 S.E.2d 743 (1971), and Averette v. Oliver, 128 Ga. App. 54, 195 S.E.2d 925 (1973), as dealing with prejudicial argument and improper conduct of opposing counsel.

It is clear that, prior to enactment of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-46, there were four, rather than three, recognized “available actions” which the trial court could be requested to take with regard to allegedly improper closing argument in either a civil or a criminal case; in addition to the present three “available actions”, counsel was also authorized merely to object on stated grounds and thereby implicitly request that the trial court acknowledge the impropriety of the closing argument by sustaining the objections thereto, however nothing in subsection (a) supports the conclusion that, contrary to this prior authority, a mere objection on stated grounds should no longer be considered a viable request for “available action” in civil cases. Garner v. Victory Express, Inc., 264 Ga. 171, 442 S.E.2d 455 (1994).

Affidavit attached to brief as sufficient objection. — In a proceeding by a lessor for compensation for an easement on condemned property, the lessor’s affidavit in response to the condemnor’s motion for direction making known to the court that the issue before the court involved questions of law and fact was sufficient to raise the issue on appeal. S & S Food Servs., Inc. v. DOT, 222 Ga. App. 579, 475 S.E.2d 197 (1996).

Invocation of judicial ruling unnecessary on court’s erroneous expression of opinion. — When the error is an expression of opinion from the bench, the error has already been committed without necessity of invoking a judicial ruling to present a reviewable error. Speagle v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 138 Ga. App. 384, 226 S.E.2d 459 (1976), distinguishing Seaboard Coast Line R.R. v. Wallace, 227 Ga. 363, 180 S.E.2d 743 (1971), and Averette v. Oliver, 128 Ga. App. 54, 195 S.E.2d 925 (1973), as dealing with prejudicial argument and improper conduct of opposing counsel.

Relief available on objection to argument. — When there is objection to argument, granting of the following forms of relief are available to the court: (1) an instruction or admonition to the jury to disregard the improper argument; or, if this is deemed inadequate to remove the harmful effect, (2) instruction or admonition of the jury plus a reprimand or rebuke of offending counsel; or, as a last resort, (3) mistrial. Averette v. Oliver, 128 Ga. App. 54, 195 S.E.2d 925 (1973).

Seaboard Coast Line R. Co., 227 Ga. 363, 180 S.E.2d 743 (1971) is overruled and Hall v. State, 180 Ga. App. 881, 350 S.E.2d 801 (1986), which sets forth the applicable requirements for the preservation of error in closing argument in a criminal case, is henceforth to be followed and applied in addressing an enumeration of error which relates to allegedly improper closing argument in a civil case. Garner v. Victory Express, Inc., 264 Ga. 171, 442 S.E.2d 455 (1994).

Hearing on attorney’s fees. — Trial court erred in awarding a property owner $7,515 in attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 48-5-311(g)(4)(B)(ii) against a county board of tax assessors after a jury valued the property in question substantially lower than the board’s valuation; the record did not support the trial court’s conclusion that the property was returned for taxation by operation of law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 48-5-20(a)(2), and the board did not waive the board’s objection to the fees, because the trial court did not hold a hearing on the issue of the attorney’s fees, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-46(a), and the board therefore did not have an opportunity to object to the award. Fulton County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Butner, 258 Ga. App. 68, 573 S.E.2d 100 (2002).

Directed verdicts. — When the trial court sua sponte grants a directed verdict, the party against whom the verdict was directed may challenge the grant by timely appeal notwithstanding the lack of either an objection or exception to the trial court’s ruling. Wade v. Polytech. Indus., Inc., 202 Ga. App. 18, 413 S.E.2d 468 (1991).

To make an objection to evidence available in reviewing court, it must appear that the objection was made in trial court, and upon what grounds. Miller v. Coleman, 213 Ga. 125, 97 S.E.2d 313

(1957) (decided under former Code 1933, T. 81).

For appellate court to reverse judgment refusing to grant mistrial, it must affirmatively appear that a mistrial was essential to preserve the party's right to a fair trial. Fievet v. Curl, 96 Ga. App. 535, 101 S.E.2d 181 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, T. 81).

Mistrials

Trial judge, in passing on motions for mistrial, has broad discretion, dependent on circumstances of each case, which will not be disturbed unless manifestly abused. Houston v. Roberts, 150 Ga. App. 350, 258 S.E.2d 34 (1979).

Corrective measure for improper admission of evidence in discretion of court. — When motion for mistrial is made on ground that inadmissible evidence was placed before the jury, corrective measure to be taken by the trial court is largely a matter of discretion, and when proper corrective measures are taken and there is no abuse of discretion, refusal to grant a mistrial is not error. Rutledge v. State, 152 Ga. App. 755, 264 S.E.2d 244 (1979).

Mistrial for improper remarks of counsel on motion of either party. — Former Code 1933, § 81-1009 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-10-185) had been modified by subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 46 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-46), so that the trial court in a civil case may, upon motion of either party, grant a mistrial for improper remarks of counsel. Counts v. Moorehead, 232 Ga. 220, 206 S.E.2d 40 (1974).

Disclosure of insurance policy as ground for mistrial. — In an ordinary negligence case, not only is a liability insurance policy of a litigant not admissible in evidence, but disclosure to the jury of mere existence of such contract is a ground for mistrial. City Council v. Lee, 153 Ga. App. 94, 264 S.E.2d 683 (1980).

9-11-47. Jurors.

(a) The parties may by written stipulation, filed of record, stipulate that the jury shall consist of any number less than that fixed by statute.

(b) The court may direct that one or two jurors in addition to the regular panel be called and impaneled to sit as alternate jurors. Alternate jurors in the order in which they are called shall replace jurors who become or are found to be unable or disqualified to perform their duties. Alternate jurors shall be drawn in the same manner, shall have the same qualifications, shall be subject to the same examination and challenges, shall take the same oath, and shall have the same functions, powers, facilities, and privileges as the principal jurors. An alternate juror who does not replace a principal juror may be discharged. However, if the court deems it advisable, it may direct that one or more of the alternate jurors be kept in the custody of one or more court officers, separate and apart from the regular jurors, until the jury has agreed upon a verdict. If one or two alternate jurors are called, each party is entitled to one peremptory challenge in addition to those otherwise allowed by law. The additional peremptory challenge may be used only against an alternate juror, and the other peremptory challenges allowed by law shall not be used against the alternates. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 47; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 34; Ga. L. 1989, p. 243, § 1; Ga. L. 1993, p. 91, § 9.)

Twelve member juries in superior courts. — Under this state's Constitution and statutes, a jury in the superior courts must be composed of 12 members. First Fid. Ins. Corp. v. Busbia, 128 Ga. App. 485, 197 S.E.2d 396 (1973).

Equity jury requires 12 members. — When the trial court does authorize a jury trial in an equity case, the composition of the jury is governed by the law which controls those cases in which there is a right to a jury trial, and when such a right is neither waived nor stipulated against, the trial court may not proceed with less than a twelve-person jury. Hague v. Pitts, 262 Ga. 777, 425 S.E.2d 636 (1993).

Agreement to accept verdict by less than twelve jurors. — Since legislature has recognized that in civil cases there is nothing sacerdotal in the number 12 agreement to accept a verdict by less than 12 jurors is not contrary to public policy. Phillips v. Meadow Garden Hosp., 139 Ga. App. 541, 228 S.E.2d 714 (1976).

9-11-49. Special verdicts.

(a) The court may require a jury to return only a special verdict in the form of a special written finding upon each issue of fact. In that event the court may submit to the jury written questions susceptible of categorical or other brief answer or may submit written forms of several special findings which might properly be made under the pleadings and evidence; or it may use such other method of submitting the issues and requiring the written findings thereon as it deems most appropriate. The court shall give to the jury such explanation and instruction concerning the matter thus submitted as may be necessary to enable the jury to make its findings upon each issue. If in so doing the court omits any issue of fact raised by the pleadings or by the evidence, each party waives his right to a trial by jury of the issues so omitted unless before the jury retires he demands its submission to the jury. As to an issue omitted without such demand, the court may make a finding; or, if it fails to do so, it shall be deemed to have made a finding in accordance with the judgment on the special verdict.

(b) Upon written request by any party made on or before the call of the case for trial, it shall be the duty of the court to require the jury to return only a special verdict, as provided in subsection (a) of this Code section, in any case involving equitable relief, mandamus, quo warranto, prohibition, a declaratory judgment, and in any other case or proceeding where special verdicts may be specifically required by law. The court shall prescribe the form of the questions for submission to the jury. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 49; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 21; Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 8; Ga. L. 1993, p. 91, § 9.)

Discretion of court. — It is within the court’s discretion as to whether the court will require a special verdict under this section. Christiansen v. Robertson, 139 Ga. App. 423, 228 S.E.2d 350, rev’d on other grounds, 237 Ga. 711, 229 S.E.2d 472 (1976).

Because a special verdict form did not ask the jurors to determine whether the successor owed anything on a promissory note, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-49(a), the issue was reserved for the trial court. Compris Techs., Inc. v. Techwerks, Inc., 274 Ga. App. 673, 618 S.E.2d 664 (2005).

Trial court erred in granting a new trial, pursuant to the standard of review under O.C.G.A. §§ 5-5-50 and 5-5-51, to appellee insurer in appellant insurer’s declaratory judgment action, after the jury rendered a verdict pursuant to a special verdict form in favor of the appellant, since the form was not defective for including the words “coverage is excluded because” prior to the four potential fact-findings in favor of the appellant; the wording of the form may have been inartful and had mixed questions of law with the factual assertions, but such did not constitute an abuse of the trial court’s discretion as no mandate forbade the use of the language, and the trial court acted within the court’s discretion and authority pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-49(a). Gov’t Emples. Ins. Co. v. Progressive Cas. Ins. Co., 275 Ga. App. 872, 622 S.E.2d 92 (2005).

Submission for general rather than special verdict not reversible absent abuse of discretion. — This section provides that court “may” require jury to return a special verdict on written questions, and absent abuse of discretion, the appellate court would not reverse the trial judge in submitting the case for a general rather than a special verdict. Pressley v. Jennings, 227 Ga. 366, 180 S.E.2d 896 (1971); Shivers v. Webster, 224 Ga. App. 254, 480 S.E.2d 304 (1997).

Requirements of special verdict are not met by instructing jury orally as to questions which must be resolved by the jury in arriving at the verdict. Georgia Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wall, 242 Ga. 176, 249 S.E.2d 588 (1978).

When timely written request for special verdict is made in declaratory judgment proceedings, requirements of Ga. L. 1945, p. 137, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-4-6), relating to submission of fact issues to jury, and of subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 8 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-49) are not satisfied by instructing jury orally as to questions which must be resolved by the jury in arriving at the verdict. Frostgate Whses., Inc. v. Cole, 244 Ga. 782, 262 S.E.2d 98 (1979).

Special verdict form agreed to by all parties. — There was no error in the court’s explanation to the jury of the special verdict form which previously had been agreed to by all parties, including the defendant, when the evidence required a finding of negligence on the part of at least one defendant, as this was not an incident that could have occurred in the absence of negligence. Branch v. Maxwell, 203 Ga. App. 553, 417 S.E.2d 176, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 417 S.E.2d 176 (1992).

Absent specific and timely objection, party waives error relating to manner of submission of questions to jury. Frostgate Whses., Inc. v. Cole, 244 Ga. 782, 262 S.E.2d 98 (1979).

Appellant’s failure to object to special verdict form until after the jury had retired constituted a waiver of rights to do so. Albert v. Albert, 164 Ga. App. 783, 298 S.E.2d 612 (1982).

Charge on proximate cause not waived for failure to make request therefor. — Rule in subsection (a) of this section that matters not requested to be charged when special verdicts are submitted to the jury are waived obviously does not extend to an element so essential as proximate cause in a negligence action because no jury can impose liability in such action without first determining that the plaintiff's injury proximately resulted from the defendant's negligence. Cline v. Kehs, 146 Ga. App. 350, 246 S.E.2d 329 (1978).

Trial court trying a suit for injunction may empanel a jury to render special verdicts. — but the court is not required to do so. Turner Adv. Co. v. Garcia, 251 Ga. 46, 302 S.E.2d 547 (1983), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 824, 105 S. Ct. 101, 83 L. Ed. 2d 46 (1984).

Acceptance of verdict with surplus findings. — When prior to submission to the jury the plaintiffs agreed to the form of the general verdict, and did not request a special verdict, the court could have accepted the initial verdict by disregarding the specific and gratuitous findings as surplusage. Kemp v. Bell-View, Inc., 179 Ga. App. 577, 346 S.E.2d 923 (1986).

Attack on verdict rejected upon failure to seek remedy under statute. — Verdict awarding general damages in a libel suit filed by an attorney against a former client, which showed that the client published facts intimating that the attorney bribed judges, contrary to O.C.G.A. § 16-10-2, was upheld as: (1) the jury could reasonably conclude that the attorney was a limited public figure, and was properly charged on that status; (2) the client failed to seek any remedy regarding the verdict entered, including submission of a verdict form per O.C.G.A. § 9-11-49; (3) the trial court did not err in prohibiting the client from offering testimony about corrupt individuals who were exposed as a result of the publication about the attorney; and (4) based on the evidence of the publication on the client's web site, neither a directed verdict or judgment notwithstanding the verdict in the client's favor was authorized. Milum v. Banks, 283 Ga. App. 864, 642 S.E.2d 892 (2007).

No error in court's refusal to submit special verdict form. — See News Publishing Co. v. DeBerry, 171 Ga. App. 787,

9-11-50. Motions for directed verdict and for judgment notwithstanding the verdict.

(a) Motion for directed verdict; when made; effect. A motion for a directed verdict may be made at the close of the evidence offered by an opponent or at the close of the case. A party who moves for a directed verdict at the close of the evidence offered by an opponent may offer evidence in the event that a motion is not granted without having reserved the right to do so and to the same extent as if the motion had not been made. A motion for a directed verdict which is not granted is not a waiver of trial by jury even though all parties to the action have moved for directed verdicts. A motion for a directed verdict shall state the specific grounds therefor. The order of the court granting a motion for a directed verdict is effective without any assent of the jury. If there is no conflict in the evidence as to any material issue and the evidence introduced, with all reasonable deductions therefrom, shall demand a particular verdict, such verdict shall be directed.

(b) Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict — When made; new trial motion. Whenever a motion for a directed verdict made at the close of all the evidence is denied or for any reason is not granted, the court is deemed to have submitted the action to the jury subject to a later determination of the legal questions raised by the motion. Not later than 30 days after entry of judgment, a party who has moved for a directed verdict may move to have the verdict and any judgment entered thereon set aside and to have judgment entered in accordance with his motion for a directed verdict; or, if a verdict was not returned, such party, within 30 days after the jury has been discharged, may move for judgment in accordance with his motion for a directed verdict. A motion for a new trial may be joined with this motion, or a new trial may be prayed for in the alternative. If a verdict was returned, the court may allow the judgment to stand or may reopen the judgment and either order a new trial or direct the entry of judgment as if the requested verdict had been directed. If no verdict was returned, the court may direct the entry of judgment as if the requested verdict had been directed or may order a new trial.

(c) Same — Conditional rulings on grant of motion; motion for new trial by losing party.

(1) If the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict provided for in subsection (b) of this Code section is granted, the court shall also rule on the motion for a new trial, if any, by determining whether it should be granted if the judgment is thereafter vacated or reversed and shall specify the grounds for granting or denying the motion for the new trial. If the motion for a new trial is thus conditionally granted, the order thereon does not affect the finality of the judgment. In case the motion for a new trial has been conditionally granted and the judgment is reversed on appeal, the new trial shall proceed unless the appellate court has otherwise ordered. In case the motion for a new trial has been conditionally denied, the appellee on appeal may assert error in that denial; and, if the judgment is reversed on appeal, subsequent proceedings shall be in accordance with the order of the appellate court.

(2) The party whose verdict has been set aside on motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict may serve a motion for a new trial not later than 30 days after entry of the judgment notwithstanding the verdict.

(d) Same — Denial of motion. If the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is denied, the party who prevailed on that motion may, as appellee, assert grounds entitling him to a new trial in the event the appellate court concludes that the trial court erred in denying the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. If the appellate court reverses the judgment, nothing in this Code section precludes it from determining that the appellee is entitled to a new trial or from directing the trial court to determine whether a new trial shall be granted.

(e) Erroneous denial of directed verdict. Where error is enumerated upon an order denying a motion for directed verdict and the appellate court determines that the motion was erroneously denied, it may direct that judgment be entered below in accordance with the motion or may order that a new trial be had, as the court may determine necessary to meet the ends of justice under the facts of the case. General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1910, §§ 5926 and 6545 and former Code 1933, § 110-104 and Ga. L. 1953, Nov.-Dec. Sess., p. 440, and Ga. L. 1959, p. 234 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

This section is patterned after the federal Civil Practice Act, and a court may turn to it for guidance. Church's Fried Chicken, Inc. v. Lewis, 150 Ga. App. 154, 256 S.E.2d 916 (1979).

Purpose of this section. — Purpose of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 was to obviate the necessity of a new trial whenever the trial judge finds that the judge has erroneously refused to direct a verdict. Hart v. Columbus, 125 Ga. App. 625, 188 S.E.2d 422 (1972).

Construed with federal rules. — Except for giving presiding judge 30 days for a change of mind, as contrasted with the 10-day period under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 is the same as Rule 50, Fed. R. Civ. P. Hart v. Columbus, 125 Ga. App. 625, 188 S.E.2d 422 (1972).

Standard for granting a directed verdict or a judgment notwithstanding the verdict are the same. Pendley v. Pendley, 251 Ga. 30, 302 S.E.2d 554

(1983); United Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Connell, 166 Ga. App. 329, 304 S.E.2d 131 (1983); Custom Coating, Inc. v. Parsons, 188 Ga. App. 506, 373 S.E.2d 291 (1988); Morris v. Futch, 193 Ga. App. 132, 386 S.E.2d 905, cert. denied, 193 Ga. App. 910, 386 S.E.2d 905 (1989).

Effect of waiver of objections. — Because a father waived any objections concerning the form of the verdict, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court denied a motion for new trial on the father's claims for tortious interference and misappropriation of trade secrets asserted against the father's son; moreover, given the jury's decision not to award damages on those claims, the appeals court declined to consider the son's claim that the trial court erred in failing to grant motions for a directed verdict and j.n.o.v. concerning them. Lou Robustelli Mktg. Servs. v. Robustelli, 286 Ga. App. 816, 650 S.E.2d 326 (2007).

Grant of either a motion for directed verdict or judgment notwithstanding the verdict is authorized only when the evidence and all reasonable deductions therefrom demand a verdict in favor of the movant. Mercer v. Woodard, 166 Ga. App. 119, 303 S.E.2d 475 (1983).

Grant of directed verdict or j.n.o.v. as declaration of lack of conflict in evidence. — Act of directing a verdict or granting a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict declares that there is no conflict in the evidence, and that all deductions and inferences from the evidence introduced demand a particular verdict. Johnson v. Curenton, 127 Ga. App. 687, 195 S.E.2d 279 (1972).

Verdict shall be directed when there is no conflict in the evidence as to any material issue and the evidence introduced, with all reasonable deductions therefrom, shall demand a particular verdict. Joiner v. Lane, 235 Ga. App. 121, 508 S.E.2d 203 (1998).

Motion for directed verdict and j.n.o.v. erroneously denied on a breach of fiduciary duty claim as to a son's wife, who was not a corporate officer, director, or agent, and lacked the power to deal with third parties, including the creation of company obligations, without the son's approval, and the son was a corporate officer. Lou Robustelli Mktg. Servs. v. Robustelli, 286 Ga. App. 816, 650 S.E.2d 326 (2007).

In a personal injury action, the trial court erred by denying a manufacturer's motions for a directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict because the undisputed evidence demanded a finding that the injured party assumed the risk of injuries from driving a doorless off-road vehicle; the injured party testified that the injured party read the operator's manual and warnings posted on the vehicle. Yamaha Motor Corp., U.S.A. v. McTaggart, 313 Ga. App. 103, 720 S.E.2d 217 (2011).

Record as record exists at close of trial controls whether the verdict should be directed. DeLoach v. Myers, 215 Ga. 255, 109 S.E.2d 777 (1959).

Substitution of court's judgment for jury's. — Directing of verdict or granting of motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is a very, very grave matter, as by such act, the case is taken away from the jury, and the court's own judgment is substituted therefor. Johnson v. Curenton, 127 Ga. App. 687, 195 S.E.2d 279 (1972).

Municipal court may be authorized to direct a verdict. Lynch v. Southern Express Co., 146 Ga. 68, 90 S.E. 527 (1916).

To refuse to direct a verdict is within the discretion of the trial court, and absent abuse of such discretion, the appellate court will not reverse a case for such refusal. Claude S. Bennett, Inc. v. Vanneman, 95 Ga. App. 140, 97 S.E.2d 375 (1957).

Motion for directed verdict not waiver. — When the plaintiff and the defendant each separately request a directed verdict, the party unsuccessful in the party's request does not waive the party's right or have issues submitted to the jury or to except to direction of verdict for the other party. Yablon v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 200 Ga. 693, 38 S.E.2d 534 (1946).

Fact that each party moves for direction of a verdict in that party's favor does not, without more, amount to consent by both parties that case should be disposed of by direction of a verdict for one side or the other. Roberts v. Wilson, 198 Ga. 428, 31 S.E.2d 707 (1944).

Attorney's fees. — Trial court correctly found that a homebuilder's argument that the buyers were not entitled to recover attorney's fees on claims for which the jury did not award money damages was precluded since the issue was not raised in the homebuilder's motion for directed verdict; thus, the homebuilder was precluded from raising this argument in the motion for judgment non obstante veredicto. Morrison Homes of Fla., Inc. v. Wade, 266 Ga. App. 598, 598 S.E.2d 358 (2004).

In a breach of contract action between a city and the city's general contractor arising out of a renovation project on property above and within an inert landfill, because the jury could find that the city acted in bad faith in the city's dealings with the general contractor on the issue of overhead costs, was stubbornly litigious, and caused the contractor unnecessary trouble and expense after the contractor encountered landfill materials within the depth of the contractor's excavation which caused the contractor to have to halt work, the contractor properly awarded attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11; thus, the city was properly denied a directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict as to this issue. Evidence sufficient to withstand motions for directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict. See McFarland v. Hodge Homebuilders, Inc., 168 Ga. App. 733, 309 S.E.2d 853 (1983).

Trial court did not err in denying property owners' motions for a directed verdict and for judgment notwithstanding the verdict in the owners' suit to prevent a limited liability company from replacing an existing sewer pipe with a larger one because a sewer-line easement authorized the removal and replacement of a malfunctioning or worn-out sewer pipeline, and there was some evidence that the existing pipe was not functioning properly and was worn out; moreover, there was evidence that the removal of the existing sewer pipe and replacement with either a six-inch or eight-inch pipe would not expand the physical boundaries of the easement. Parris Props., LLC v. Nichols, 305 Ga. App. 734, 700 S.E.2d 848 (2010).

Trial court did not err in denying property owners' motions for a directed verdict and for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on a limited liability company's (LLC) counterclaim for conversion, which was predicated on the owners' disposal of pipe fixtures the LLC owned, because the evidence was sufficient to support the LLC's counterclaim for conversion; the owners exercised dominion and control over the pipe fixtures by having the fixtures removed from the owners' property and disposed of at a landfill, and even if the LLC acted wrongfully by depositing and storing the pipe fixtures on the owners' property, there was evidence that the owners failed to exercise due care in removing the expensive fixtures by having the fixtures dumped at a landfill with no consideration given as to the fixtures' ultimate fate. Parris Props., LLC v. Nichols, 305 Ga. App. 734, 700 S.E.2d 848 (2010).

Trial court did not err in denying a driver's motion for a directed verdict and motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the amount of damages the jury awarded a decedent's estate for pain and suffering because the testimony of two eyewitnesses that the decedent was unconscious when the eyewitnesses saw the decedent immediately after the automobile accident was not necessarily inconsistent with the testimony of the officer who arrived at the scene and observed the decedent while a doctor was ministering to the decedent and talking to the decedent; because the trial court approved the verdict in denying the driver's post-trial motion, a presumption of correctness arose that would not be disturbed absent compelling evidence. Park v. Nichols, 307 Ga. App. 841, 706 S.E.2d 698 (2011).

Question on appeal of direct verdict. — On appeal from order directing a verdict, the question before the court is whether the evidence is without conflict as the evidence pertains to the material issues in the case, and thus, when viewed in the light most favorable to the losing party, whether the evidence demands the verdict ordered. Aldridge v. Dixie Fire & Cas. Co., 223 Ga. 130, 153 S.E.2d 723 (1967).

Direction of verdict for the defendant will be affirmed on review when it appears from all the evidence, both for the plaintiff and the defendant, with all reasonable deductions therefrom, that such verdict was demanded. Riggins v. Equitable Life Assurance Soc'y, 64 Ga. App. 834, 14 S.E.2d 182 (1941).

Notice of appeal timely. — Commercial vehicle liability insurer's notice of appeal of an order denying the insurer's motion for directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict was timely under O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-38 and 9-11-50(b) because the notice of appeal was filed within 30 days of the trial court's order on the insurer's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, which the insurer filed within 30 days of the entry of the judgment. Infinity Gen. Ins. Co. v. Litton, 308 Ga. App. 497, 707 S.E.2d 885 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1110, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 580 (Ga. 2011).

When there is no evidence in the record to show whether a directed verdict or judgment notwithstanding the verdict was warranted, the appellate court must assume that the trial court was correct in the court's denial of the appellant's motions and affirm. First Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. White, 168 Ga. App. 516, 309 S.E.2d 858 (1983).

No harm shown. — Although a trial court denied a property owner's motion for partial directed verdict on the issue of environmental contamination and damages in a condemnation proceeding by the Georgia Department of Transportation, as the jury was instructed not to consider that issue when determining the fair market value of the property there was no harm shown by the trial court's directed verdict ruling for purposes of the owner's appeal thereof. H.D. McCondichie Props. v. Ga. DOT, 280 Ga. App. 197, 633 S.E.2d 558 (2006).

Summary judgment compared. — Although in motions both under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-50 and 9-11-56 the moving party has the burden of showing that the opposite party has not presented sufficient evidence to authorize a jury to find in the party's favor, a ruling in favor of a movant for summary judgment is a more far-reaching determination. Hawkins v. Greenberg, 159 Ga. App. 302, 283 S.E.2d 301 (1981).

Directed Verdict1. In General

Essence of motion for directed verdict is that there is no genuine issue of material fact to be resolved by the trier of facts, and that the movant is entitled to judgment on the law applicable to established facts. McCarty v. National Life & Accident Ins. Co., 107 Ga. App. 178, 129 S.E.2d 408 (1962).

Granting a directed verdict on a single issue is entirely consistent with the general purpose of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9. Gene Thompson Lumber Co. v. Davis Parmer Lumber Co., 189 Ga. App. 573, 377 S.E.2d 15, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 912, 377 S.E.2d 15 (1988).

Signed verdict. — No signed verdict is required. Sirmans v. Jones, 142 Ga. App. 144, 235 S.E.2d 543 (1977).

Judgment entered upon directed verdict not signed by the jury is not void or illegal. Morgan v. Mize, 118 Ga. App. 534, 164 S.E.2d 565 (1968).

Motion for directed verdict is not essential when evidence demanded the verdict. Kelly v. Chrysler Corp., 129 Ga. App. 447, 199 S.E.2d 856 (1973) (on motion for rehearing).

Failure to specify grounds for motion not reversible error. — When motion for directed verdict is granted and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, such judgment should not be reversed merely because the moving party failed to properly specify grounds on which the motion was based. Green v. Knight, 153 Ga. App. 183, 264 S.E.2d 657 (1980); Boykin v. North, 218 Ga. App. 435, 461 S.E.2d 598 (1995).

Fact that both parties move for directed verdict does not constitute waiver by each party of the right to have fact issues decided by the jury, if fact issues remain. Walker v. Bush, 234 Ga. 366, 216 S.E.2d 285 (1975).

Directed verdict compared to summary judgment. — Trial court's function in ruling on a motion for summary judgment is analogous to the function the court performs when ruling on a motion for directed verdict. McCarty v. National Life & Accident Ins. Co., 107 Ga. App. 178, 129 S.E.2d 408 (1962).

Trial court's function in ruling on a motion for summary judgment is analogous to the function the court performs when ruling on a motion for directed verdict; the essence of both motions is that there is no genuine issue of material fact to be resolved by the trier of facts, and that the movant is entitled to judgment on the applicable law. Standard Accident Ins. Co. v. Ingalls Iron Works Co., 109 Ga. App. 574, 136 S.E.2d 505 (1964).

Trial court's function in ruling on a motion for summary judgment is analogous to that in ruling on a motion for directed verdict; the essence of both motions is that there is no genuine issue of material fact to be resolved by the trier of fact, and that the movant is entitled to judgment on the law applicable to the established facts. Chandler v. Gately, 119 Ga. App. 513, 167 S.E.2d 697 (1969).

Motion for summary judgment is analogous to motion for directed verdict; however, although operation of the motions is essentially the same in reference to those issues upon which the movant for summary judgment would have the burden of proof at trial, the operation is somewhat different made by the opponent of the party with the trial burden. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Beaver, 120 Ga. App. 420, 170 S.E.2d 737 (1969).

Summary judgment may be improper when directed verdict proper.

— Grant of summary judgment may be improper in a case in which, at trial, a grant of a directed verdict may be proper. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Beaver, 120 Ga. App. 420, 170 S.E.2d 737 (1969).

Party who moves for summary judgment in a case premised on negligence has a considerable burden, and if the moving party is the defendant, the moving party may not be able to obtain summary judgment even though a directed verdict might be obtained at trial. Turner v. Noe, 127 Ga. App. 870, 195 S.E.2d 463 (1973).

Court's conclusion that summary judgment is inappropriate does not preclude subsequent directed verdict since the denial of a motion for summary judgment decides nothing except that under the evidence considered at that time there can be no judgment rendered as a matter of law. Timber Equip., Inc. v. McKinney, 166 Ga. App. 757, 305 S.E.2d 468 (1983).

Nonjury cases. — Motion for directed verdict is procedurally incorrect in a nonjury case, but the court may nonetheless treat the motion as one for involuntary dismissal. Pichulik v. Air Conditioning & Heating Serv. Co., 123 Ga. App. 195, 180 S.E.2d 286 (1971).

In a nonjury case, it is procedurally incorrect to move for directed verdict; such a motion, as well as the grant thereof, will be construed as one for involuntary dismissal under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b)). Kennery v. Mosteller, 133 Ga. App. 879, 212 S.E.2d 447 (1975).

Evidence. — Trial judge is never authorized to direct a verdict against a party litigant until the party has introduced or had an opportunity to introduce all evidence on the issues involved and rested the case. Mallard v. Mallard, 221 Ga. 480, 145 S.E.2d 533 (1965).

Court is required to grant the verdict based on the evidence, not the statement of counsel. Glenridge Unit Owners Ass'n v. Felton, 183 Ga. App. 858, 360 S.E.2d 418 (1987).

Directed verdict cannot be granted if there is "any evidence" to support a contrary verdict, but there cannot be "some evidence" that all the evidence demands a particular verdict. Carden v. Burckhalter, 214 Ga. App. 487, 448 S.E.2d 251 (1994).

Appellate courts review the denial of a motion for directed verdict under the "any evidence" standard, which requires the appellate court to construe the evidence in the light most favorable to the party who obtained a verdict, and if there is any evidence to support the verdict, the appellate court will not disturb the verdict. Imperial Foods Supply, Inc. v. Purvis, 260 Ga. App. 614, 580 S.E.2d 342 (2003).

Trial court's denial of the motel sellers' motion for a directed verdict as to a claim for damages under a tortious interference with business relationship claim, as well as for property damages, was proper as the evidence produced at trial satisfied the "any evidence" test; there was evidence that the sellers had turned off electricity to an advertising sign, failed to disclose that the sale terminated the motel franchise, and that there were frequent diesel spills on the property as well as evidence as to the cost of repairs to the property. Chhina Family P'ship, L.P. v. S-K Group of Motels, Inc., 275 Ga. App. 811, 622 S.E.2d 40 (2005).

In a tenant's action against the leasing agent of the tenant's apartment complex alleging that the tenant was injured by soot emitted from the apartment's heating system, the agent's motion for a directed verdict on the ground that the tenant did not show that the agent caused the soot to appear in the apartment was properly denied although there was evidence that the tenant smoked, burned candles, and painted the apartment; construed to favor the tenant, the theory that the agent's negligent maintenance caused the problem was substantiated by the opinion of the tenant's expert and by the facts that the problem began before the tenant painted the apartment, and that no residue problems occurred in a subsequent apartment where the tenant also smoked and burned candles. Ambling Mgmt. Co. v. Purdy, 283 Ga. App. 21, 640 S.E.2d 620 (2006).

Trial court did not err in entering a directed verdict against a husband and wife, in the couples' suit seeking uninsured motorist benefits, as the couples failed to prove negligence, and inferences of such provided by the wife's testimony amounted to mere conjecture, which was insufficient for a liability claim to attach. Morton v. Horace Mann Ins. Co., 282 Ga. App. 734, 639 S.E.2d 352 (2006), cert. denied, No. S07C0570, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 201 (Ga. 2007).

Trial court properly denied the motions for a directed verdict and for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict filed by the executors of a will and trust because there was sufficient evidence to support the jury's finding that the documents were invalid as a product of undue influence based on the executors taking complete control of the elderly testator and isolating the testator from the testator's sons, as well as substituting the executors' desires and having the testator sign a new will and trust, which benefitted the executors and excluded the testator's wife and sons. Davison v. Hines, 291 Ga. 434, 729 S.E.2d 330 (2012).

Evidence did not demand verdict.

See Thompson Enters., Inc. v. Coskrey, 168 Ga. App. 181, 308 S.E.2d 399 (1983); Cardin v. Telfair Acres of Lowndes County, Inc., 195 Ga. App. 449, 393 S.E.2d 731 (1990).

Insurer failed to show that the insurer was entitled to a verdict as a matter of law under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a) after: (1) the jury heard the evidence and decided against the insurer as to the driver's duty to mitigate damages; (2) the driver reported the accident to the insurer; (3) the insured was led to believe that the insurer would defend both the driver and the insured; (4) upon service of the negligence suit, the driver contacted the insured, telling the insured of the suit; and (5) the insurer failed to show that there was not a factual issue that the driver exercised ordinary care to mitigate the driver's damages. Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Macleod, 259 Ga. App. 761, 577 S.E.2d 799 (2003).

In a suit over a nursing home manager's non-compliance with a nursing home operator's document requests, the manager was properly denied a directed verdict on a breach of contract claim because the manager failed to provide documents to the operator as required under a management agreement and termination was therefore permitted under the agreement. Additionally, the manager was properly denied a directed verdict on a conversion claim because the manager had held documentation belonging to the operator and had made unauthorized loans and employee payments. Rome Healthcare LLC v. Peach Healthcare Sys., 264 Ga. App. 265, 590 S.E.2d 235 (2003).

Trial court did not err in denying a truck modifying company's motion for a directed verdict in a truck owner's products liability action arising from a fire in the truck cab due to an allegedly defective switch that had been installed by the company as the parties presented conflicting evidence to explain the origin and cause of the fire that burned the owner's body; accordingly, a particular verdict was not demanded and a directed verdict was not mandated. Cottrell, Inc. v. Williams, 266 Ga. App. 357, 596 S.E.2d 789 (2004).

Trial court properly denied an insurance management company and the company's president's motion for directed verdict, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50, in an action by a contractor who was forced to pay for a subcontractor's employee's injuries due to the failure of the subcontractor to have workers' compensation insurance as there was sufficient evidence of misrepresentations by the company and the company's president, and justifiable reliance by the contractor, to support the contractor's fraud and negligent misrepresentation claims; the company and the company's president had assured the contractor repeatedly that the subcontractor had adequate workers' compensation insurance for building purposes, although the subcontractor did not, and based on the fraud by them, punitive damages pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1(b) were properly presented to the jury for consideration. FitzSimons v. W. M. Collins Enters., Inc., 271 Ga. App. 854, 610 S.E.2d 654 (2005).

Trial court properly denied the motel sellers' motion for directed verdict, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50, on the issue of fraud in the parties' agreement as the existence of a valid merger clause in the sale agreement for the motel did not bar the purchasers' claim that there was fraud based on misrepresentations in the agreement; further, there was evidence of such misrepresentations by the sellers as to the boundaries, which properties were covered by the agreement, and whether a restaurant was covered in the agreement. Chhina Family P'ship, L.P. v. S-K Group of Motels, Inc., 275 Ga. App. 811, 622 S.E.2d 40 (2005).

Evidence that a fire rescue emergency vehicle's lights were working properly at the time of an accident and testimony that the lights "were in compliance with Georgia law," was sufficient for a jury to have found that the lights were visible from a distance of 500 feet, in compliance with O.C.G.A. § 40-6-6 for purposes of allowing the vehicle to proceed through a red light; accordingly, a trial court properly denied a driver's motion for a directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a) arising from a collision that occurred at the intersection involving the driver's vehicle and the emergency vehicle. Wynn v. City of Warner Robins, 279 Ga. App. 42, 630 S.E.2d 574 (2006).

In a medical malpractice action, the trial court did not err in denying an original doctor a directed verdict on grounds that the negligence of either the patient or the patient's subsequent doctor cut off the original doctor's liability as: (1) the patient was never put on notice of the need for any ongoing evaluation or treatment, and hence, any failure to seek routine medical care after the original doctor's misdiagnosis for over two years could not serve as the proximate cause of injury; (2) the acts or omissions of the subsequent doctor could not serve to cut off the liability of the original doctor; and (3) the jury was entitled to hear and resolve whether the subsequent doctor supplied an intervening cause of injury. Amu v. Barnes, 286 Ga. App. 725, 650 S.E.2d 288 (2007), aff'd, 283 Ga. 549, 662 S.E.2d 113 (2008).

Trial court did not err by denying a property owner's motion for a directed verdict on the issue of whether a power company had a duty to warn before opening dam flood gates in the property owner's negligence suit for flood damage as whether the power company had a duty to warn under Georgia tort law, as opposed to the power company's emergency action plan, was a matter for the jury. The property owner failed to cite a single appellate case in Georgia that required a dam owner or operator, as a matter of law, to notify downstream residents when opening flood gates and the evidence on the issue was in conflict, thus, the matter did not demand a verdict in the property owner's favor. Lee v. Ga. Power Co., 296 Ga. App. 719, 675 S.E.2d 465 (2009).

Trial court did not err in denying lessees' motions for directed verdict after a jury found in favor of a lessor in the lessor's action to recover the unpaid rent due on a commercial lease because there was sufficient evidence supporting the jury's verdict that the lease was not terminated and that the lessees owed the lessor for past due rent; the language used in the warranty deed transferring title to the property from the original landlord to a purchaser and the quitclaim deed transferring title to the property from the purchaser to the lessor could be read as an assignment of the lease, and the jury was authorized to conclude that the lessor did not force the lessees to vacate the premises when the purchaser hired a locksmith to change the locks on the premises since the lessees sent the lessor a letter stating that the lessees would be leaving the facility. Level One Contact, Inc. v. BJL

Will propounder was not entitled to a directed verdict in a will caveat as the evidence established a question for the jury on the issue of the testator's capacity due to testimony that the testator was regularly confused and did not appear to understand her medical conditions, including dementia. Odom v. Hughes, 293 Ga. 447, 748 S.E.2d 839 (2013).

Will propounder was not entitled to a directed verdict in a will caveat as the evidence established a question for the jury on the issue of whether the testator suffered from delusions based on monomania, and whether the propounder had misrepresented to the testator the nature of a real property transfer for purposes of fraud. Odom v. Hughes, 293 Ga. 447, 748 S.E.2d 839 (2013).

Will propounder was not entitled to a directed verdict in a will caveat as the evidence established a question for the jury on the issue of undue influence because there was more than merely an opportunity for the propounder to influence the testator; there was also evidence of the testator's diminished mental faculties and an established confidential relationship between the propounder and the testator. Odom v. Hughes, 293 Ga. 447, 748 S.E.2d 839 (2013).

Grounds not mentioned in a motion for directed verdict cannot thereafter be raised on appeal. Fidelity & Cas. Ins. Co. v. Massey, 162 Ga. App. 249, 291 S.E.2d 97 (1982).

Reopening of case after oral grant of directed verdict. — To allow reopening of a case after motion for directed verdict had been granted but before it had been reduced to writing was entirely within the court's discretion. Wallace v. Yarbrough, 155 Ga. App. 184, 270 S.E.2d 357 (1980).

Fact that the jury returns a verdict does not render the failure to direct verdict an error by hindsight. Craft v. Hospital Auth., 173 Ga. App. 444, 326 S.E.2d 590 (1985).

Alleged violation of statute presented a jury question. — Upon a claim that a pesticide company violated O.C.G.A. § 2-7-62(b)(3), given the multiple instructions included on the pesticide label, particularly that portion suggesting that the preparer reverse the order of the added components, the trial court properly concluded that the issue of whether the chemical was mixed in a manner inconsistent with its label was a jury question. Moreover, even if the company violated § 2-7-62(b)(3), it did not entitle the plaintiff to judgment as a matter of law, as it would improperly remove the issue of proximate cause from the jury. Chancey v. Peachtree Pest Control Co., 288 Ga. App. 767, 655 S.E.2d 228 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0642, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 459 (Ga. 2008).

New trial. — If neither a directed verdict nor a judgment n.o.v. is warranted, surely a defendant is not entitled to a new trial. Associated Software Consultants Org., Inc. v. Wysocki, 177 Ga. App. 135, 338 S.E.2d 679 (1985).

When the erroneous grant of a directed verdict to one of multiple defendants will require a new trial, particularly when there is extensive evidence and debate, it is a wise exercise in judicial economy to grant a judgment n.o.v., rather than try the matter again as to that defendant, with the resulting prejudice to all parties. Hickman v. Allen, 217 Ga. App. 701, 458 S.E.2d 883 (1995).

While the failure to move for a directed verdict barred a party from contending on appeal that the party was entitled to a judgment as a matter of law because of insufficient evidence, such did not bar that party from arguing their entitlement to a new trial on that ground, as fairness dictated that a party who has failed to move for a directed verdict at trial should not be able to obtain a judgment as a matter of law on appeal based on the contention the evidence was insufficient to support the verdict. Aldworth Co. v. England, 281 Ga. 197, 637 S.E.2d 198 (2006).

Directed verdict proper. — In a medical malpractice action, an executrix failed to support a claim for punitive damages related to a claim of abandonment as the executrix failed to present any expert testimony that there was a reasonable degree of medical certainty the decedent would have survived, even if the doctor or another qualified surgeon had been at the hospital when the decedent began to bleed internally; thus, the trial court properly granted the doctor a directed verdict as to both claims. King v. Zakaria, 280 Ga. App. 570, 634 S.E.2d 444 (2006).

In a breach of contract action associated with a construction project, the trial court properly granted a limited liability company's motion for a directed verdict against a contractor as the contractor failed to present sufficient evidence linking the limited liability company to the contract sued upon, but all the evidence involved the contractor's negotiations and dealings with a businessperson and the businessperson's company. L. Lowe & Co., Inc. v. Sunset Strip Props., LLC, 283 Ga. App. 357, 641 S.E.2d 797 (2007).

Trial court did not err in directing a verdict as to a parent's ordinary negligence claim based on a hospital's decision to not follow the recommended protocol for testing the parent's newborn blood. The hospital had to exercise medical judgment to determine what to do to treat the child and assess the seriousness of the diseases tested for. Walls v. Sumter Reg'l Hosp., Inc., 292 Ga. App. 865, 666 S.E.2d 66 (2008).

Since the first subsidiary company undertook no contractual obligation to perform work on the project for another, but merely hired the contractor to perform the project work, the first company was not a statutory employer liable for compensation to the injured employee under O.C.G.A. § 34-9-8, and had no immunity from suit under O.C.G.A. § 34-9-11. Therefore, the first company was entitled to a directed verdict in the company's favor on the basis that the company was a statutory employer under § 34-9-8, and was therefore entitled to Workers' Compensation immunity from suit under § 34-9-11. Ramcke v. Ga. Power Co., 306 Ga. App. 736, 703 S.E.2d 13 (2010), cert. denied, No. S11C0482, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 583 (Ga. 2011).

Truck repairer's failures to repair an owner's truck to the owner's satisfaction or to agree on a trade-in price for the truck could not have justified the submission of attorney fees to the jury pursuant to

O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11, such that the trial court properly granted a directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 to the repairer. Puckette v. John Bailey Pontiac-Buick-GMC Truck, Inc., 311 Ga. App. 138, 714 S.E.2d 750 (2011).

Directed verdict proper when contract unenforceable as a matter of law. — In a potential home purchaser's action to recover earnest money, the seller was entitled to a directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a) on the basis that the contract was unenforceable because the contract did not list the loan amount or the interest rate on the loan; however, because the contract was unenforceable, the purchaser was not estopped from recovering the earnest money. Parks v. Thompson Builders, Inc., 296 Ga. App. 704, 675 S.E.2d 583 (2009).

Appellate review of denial of motion for directed verdict. — Reversal on appeal of denial of motion for directed verdict means that a directed verdict should have been, and should be, entered. This is tantamount to a reversal with direction, and no retrial can be held. Kirkland v. Southern Disct. Co., 187 Ga. App. 453, 370 S.E.2d 640, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 908, 370 S.E.2d 640 (1988).

Standard of appellate review of the trial court's denial of a motion for a directed verdict is the "any evidence" standard. United Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Connell, 166 Ga. App. 329, 304 S.E.2d 131 (1983); Southern Ry. v. Lawson, 256 Ga. 798, 353 S.E.2d 491 (1987); Davis v. Glaze, 182 Ga. App. 18, 354 S.E.2d 845 (1987); Rizer v. Harris, 182 Ga. App. 31, 354 S.E.2d 660 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Eileen B. White & Assocs. v. Gunnells, 263 Ga. 360, 434 S.E.2d 477 (1993); Honesty v. Tinsley, 183 Ga. Requirements that must be met in a directed verdict situation are very strict, and when there is some, though slight, evidence to support an issue raised in the complaint, it cannot be said, as required by subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50, that "the evidence introduced, with all reasonable deductions therefrom, shall demand a particular verdict." Hall v. Rome Auto. Co., 181 Ga. App. 621, 353 S.E.2d 542 (1987).

When determining whether a trial court erred by denying a motion for a directed verdict, this court reviews and resolves the evidence and any doubts or ambiguities in favor of the verdict. Canal Ins. Co. v. Wilkes Supply Co., 203 Ga. App. 35, 416 S.E.2d 105, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 105 (1992); Southern Gen. Ins. Co. v. Holt, 262 Ga. 267, 416 S.E.2d 274 (1992).

In an action involving the sale of land, because no adequate description of the property sought to be sold could be found within the four corners of the parties' final agreement, no exhibits were attached, and the words used in the contract did not provide a sufficient description of the land, the trial court erred in admitting parol evidence to provide a legally sufficient description of the property at issue; hence, the property owners' motion for a directed verdict was erroneously denied. McClung v. Atlanta Real Estate Acquisitions, LLC, 282 Ga. App. 759, 639 S.E.2d 331 (2006).

As the Supreme Court of Georgia previously concluded that there was no factual conflict during summary judgment or at trial as to an employee being within the zone of danger, on remand the appellate court could not revisit that issue or review whether the trial court's denial of the railway company's motion for a directed verdict on the zone of danger issue was error. Norfolk S. Ry. v. Everett, 322 Ga. App. 867, 747 S.E.2d 92 (2013).

Appellate review of grant of motion for directed verdict. — In reviewing grant of a directed verdict or a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, the appellate court must decide whether all the evidence demanded the verdict, or whether there was some evidence supporting the verdict of the jury. Pendley v. Pendley, 251 Ga. 30, 302 S.E.2d 554 (1983).

Court of Appeals will consider the merits of the appeal after the trial court reserved ruling on a motion for directed verdict and then directed a verdict after the jury rendered a verdict but before there had been an entry of judgment on that verdict, since no special harm resulted to either party from such consideration; overruling Fabian v. Dykes, 210 Ga. App. 703, 436 S.E.2d 819 (1993); Wright v. Millines, 204 Ga. App. 111, 418 S.E.2d 453 (1993); Anaya v. Brooks Auto Parts, 203 Ga. App. 485, 417 S.E.2d 423 (1992), to the extent they are inconsistent. Continental Ins. Co. v. State Farm Mut. Ins., 212 Ga. App. 839, 443 S.E.2d 509 (1994).

Grant of directed verdict can be upheld when it is determined that all the evidence demands that verdict; this requires a de novo review. Carden v. Burckhalter, 214 Ga. App. 487, 448 S.E.2d 251 (1994); Hulsey v. DOT, 230 Ga. App. 763, 498 S.E.2d 122 (1998).

Issue rendered moot by later directed verdict. — Husband's complaint of the trial court's denial of the corporation's motion for summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 was moot as the trial court later granted the corporation's motion for a directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50. Moore v. Moore, 281 Ga. 81, 635 S.E.2d 107 (2006).

Abandoned claims not addressed on appeal. — On appeal from a directed verdict entered against them, because the landowners did not specifically challenge the trial court's ruling as to the denial of their claim for attorney fees and punitive damages, absent evidence of any error resulting from that ruling, to the extent they intended to challenge the directed verdict as to these two claims, that challenge was abandoned. Walls v. Moreland Altobelli Assocs., 290 Ga. App. 199, 659 S.E.2d 418 (2008).

Trial court did not err in denying motion for directed verdict. See Hawkins v. Greenberg, 166 Ga. App. 574, 304 S.E.2d 922 (1983); Spoon v. Herndon, 167 Ga. App. 794, 307 S.E.2d 693 (1983); Brown v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 168 Ga. App. 385, 308 S.E.2d 850 (1983), aff'd in part, rev'd in part on other grounds, 253 Ga. 119, 317 S.E.2d 180 (1984); GEICO v. Presley, 174 Ga. App. 562, 330 S.E.2d 779 (1985); Price v. Hitchcock, 174 Ga. App. 606, 330 S.E.2d 807 (1985).

Employer's motion for a directed verdict, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50, was properly denied in an employee's breach of employment agreement claim after it was found that the elements of breach of contract were proved pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 13-3-1; although the services to be provided were ambiguous in the contract, the use of parol evidence resolved the parties' intention on that issue. ISS Int'l Serv. Sys. v. Widmer, 264 Ga. App. 55, 589 S.E.2d 820 (2003).

Trial court did not err in a wrongful death action by denying the motion for a directed verdict of an engineering company that designed an allegedly defective reinforcing safety net that was installed in the soil above a combined sanitary and storm sewer, and which failed to prevent a hole from developing as: (1) the reinforcing safety net could have been considered a product under a theory of products liability; (2) there was evidence that the reinforcing safety net was not reasonably suited for its intended purposes; and (3) the engineering company could not have been considered a joint tortfeasor with the city for purposes of contribution. Tensar Earth Techs., Inc. v. City of Atlanta, 267 Ga. App. 45, 598 S.E.2d 815 (2004).

Trial court properly denied the defendants' motions for directed verdict and for judgment notwithstanding the verdict in an action by one title company against another, seeking recovery for a mistaken title examination performed by the defendants, as there was evidence that the plaintiff had to reimburse the plaintiff's principal for an amount paid out on a claim due to the defendants not having seen a transfer of title when the defendants performed the title examination; further, because issues raised on appeal as to why the trial court erred in denying the defendants' motions were not raised in the trial court pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(b), or were not raised in the motion for directed verdict, those issues were not preserved for appellate court review. Southern Land Title, Inc. v. North Ga. Title, Inc., 270 Ga. App. 4, 606 S.E.2d 43 (2004).

County's motion for a directed verdict on the county's counterclaim and cross-claim for declaratory relief against the homeowners was properly denied because the jury was not asked to decide issues of inverse condemnation, nuisance, or other claims of county liability for damages purportedly caused when the county dug a trench across a dam in response to the demand for immediate action by the Environmental Protection Division of the Georgia Natural Resources Department, pursuant to the Georgia Safe Dams Act, O.C.G.A. § 12-5-370 et seq., due to the danger posed by the dam. Forsyth County v. Martin, 279 Ga. 215, 610 S.E.2d 512 (2005).

Trial court properly denied both a motion for directed verdict and a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict based on the claim by a dentist and a dental center that a former employee had failed to present evidence on the employee's claim of intentional infliction of emotional distress that the dentist's actions in harassing the employee were extreme and outrageous or that the emotional distress suffered by the employee was severe; the evidence of the dentist's pervasive pattern of harassing behavior demonstrated the extreme and outrageous nature of the dentist's conduct, and the severity of the emotional distress suffered by the employee was evidenced by the fact that the employee became so fearful of the dentist that the employee obtained a gun and kept the gun under the employee's bed until the employee moved out of state. Furthermore, the former employee's claim of negligent hiring and retention of the dentist were well grounded because the former employee presented evidence that officers of the dental center knew, based on allegations that the dentist had previously harassed other employees of the dental center, that the dentist posed a risk of also harassing the former employee and additional motions for directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict were properly denied. Ferman v. Bailey, 292 Ga. App. 288, 664 S.E.2d 285 (2008).

Defendant not entitled to directed verdict. See Tiftarea Shopper, Inc. v. Maddox, 187 Ga. App. 227, 369 S.E.2d 545 (1988); Barentine v. Kroger Co., 264 Ga. 224, 443 S.E.2d 485 (1994).

Trial court erred in denying directed verdict. — Trial court erred in denying a lessee's motion for directed verdict in an action by an assignee for damages relating to the expiration of a lease between the lessee and the lessors because the assignee had no entitlement to recover its lost profits, based on allegations that it could not operate its own convenience store due to the lessee's failure to timely vacate the premises, when it was limited through the assignment to recover only the remedies available to the lessors, i.e., failure to timely deliver possession and property damages. Golden Pantry Food Stores, Inc. v. Lay Bros., Inc., 266 Ga. App. 645, 597 S.E.2d 659 (2004).

Because the provision in a business sales contract for $ 10,000 in liquidated damages for the seller's one-time use of its former name was unreasonable, and the parties did not attempt to estimate the loss, the liquidated damage clause was an unenforceable penalty; the trial court thus erred by failing to grant the seller's motion for a directed verdict. Caincare, Inc. v. Ellison, 272 Ga. App. 190, 612 S.E.2d 47 (2005).

After a trial court erroneously failed to grant a plaintiff a directed verdict on the plaintiff's claim that a liquidated damage clause was an unenforceable penalty, and the defendant only sought liquidated damages, there were no grounds upon which to remand for a new trial on actual or nominal damages under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(e) as a directed verdict on liquidated damages would have resolved the defendant's entire counterclaim. Caincare, Inc. v. Ellison, 272 Ga. App. 190, 612 S.E.2d 47 (2005).

Trial court erred in denying motions for directed verdict, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50, because a real estate broker and a real estate agent owed no duty to a potential buyer of property when the buyer did not engage the broker as defined in the Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transactions Act, O.C.G.A. § 10-6A-1 et seq.; the buyer was, at most, a "customer" of the broker pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 10-6A-3(8), and the broker exercised reasonable care in locating a property owner and checking on the status of desired property pursuant to § 10-6A-3. Harrouk v. Fierman, 291 Ga. App. 818, 662 S.E.2d 892 (2008).

It was error not to direct a verdict pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a) to a putative property owner in an action by various family members seeking to impose a constructive trust on real property under former O.C.G.A. § 53-12-93(a) as it was inequitable to grant the family members an interest in the property because the putative owner had worked the farm for over 18 years and had spent significant sums on the property compared to the very minimal amounts contributed by the family members over the years; the doctrine of part performance as an exception to the Statute of Frauds under O.C.G.A. § 13-5-31(3) was inapplicable because the oral agreement was not sufficiently certain or definite for purposes of enforcement. Troutman v. Troutman, 297 Ga. App. 62, 676 S.E.2d 787 (2009).

Trial court erred in directing a verdict as to damages after a landlord satisfied the requirement for submitting secondary evidence by establishing that the primary evidence, the purchase invoices, had been destroyed and that higher secondary evidence from the company was unavailable; the oral evidence as to the wholesale fair market value and as to the dealer's discount, based upon the actual damaged parts, was sufficient secondary evidence to go to a jury. Hodges v. Vara, 268 Ga. App. 815, 603 S.E.2d 327 (2004).

Because a police officer's evidence of damages was uncertain and there was some evidence that a police officer's shoulder injury was not caused by an individual's negligence, the trial court erred by entering a directed verdict in favor of the officer. Teklewold v. Taylor, 271 Ga. App. 664, 610 S.E.2d 617 (2005).

Trial court erred in granting a directed verdict, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50, to a pediatrician in a medical malpractice action by the parents of a minor whose undiagnosed bacterial meningitis caused brain damage and rendered the minor a quadriplegic as there was some evidence that the doctor violated the standard of care when the doctor allowed an unlicensed nurse to handle weekend calls from patients' families without the necessity of contacting the pediatrician; although the nurse, who spoke with the parents and gave them erroneous information that the child probably had a virus or was hungry, was employed by the pediatrician's professional corporation, the pediatrician could not be shielded from individual liability from the pediatrician's own acts, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 14-2-622(b). Snider v. Basilio, 276 Ga. App. 315, 623 S.E.2d 521 (2005).

Evidence presented by a testator's child, which proved the testator's disease, medication, and its effects, the testator's dependence on the care givers, their isolation of the testator from the child; their active encouragement and arrangements for the drafting and execution of a new will, the testator's short-term relationship with them, the testator's sporadic contact with and lack of trust towards one of the challenged beneficiaries, and the testator's long-standing expressions of testamentary intent to leave all of the testator's property to the child, which the testator repeated the day after execution of the disposition, supplied sufficient evidence to support the child's claim of undue influence to support the jury verdict in the child's favor and not a directed verdict entered by the trial court in the face of this evidence; although this evidence did not demand a finding that the will was the product of undue influence, it was sufficient to authorize the submission of that question to the jury. Bailey v. Edmundson, 280 Ga. 528, 630 S.E.2d 396 (2006).

Directed verdict on a breach of contract claim involving a promissory note was inappropriate because although the amount due was admittedly not paid, fraud and misrepresentation by plaintiffs, a corporation and the corporation's principal, were defenses to that claim; because the evidence presented to support a fraud defense by defendants, a corporation and two guarantors, also supported defendants' counterclaims, the error in granting the directed verdict was not harmless as the jury could have been influenced by that action in determining the viability of the counterclaims. Jocelyn Canyon, Inc. v. Lentjes, 292 Ga. App. 608, 664 S.E.2d 908 (2008).

In a homeowner's breach of contract and negligent construction case, because there was no indication in the record that the trial court determined the cost of repair to be an inappropriate measure of damages and because the homeowner presented some evidence of the cost to repair fire damage, the trial court erred in directing a verdict against the homeowner. John Thurmond & Assocs. v. Kennedy, 284 Ga. 469, 668 S.E.2d 666 (2008).

Directed verdict in competency trial. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for a directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 in the defendant's competency trial because the evidence on competency was in conflict; even though the defendant's expert witness opined that the defendant was not competent to stand trial, the state's expert testified that the defendant was competent to do so. Smith v. State, 312 Ga. App. 174, 718 S.E.2d 43 (2011).

Motion made after case submitted to the jury was untimely. — When a carrier did not file a motion for a directed verdict until after the case had been submitted to the jury, it was untimely under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50. Furthermore, the untimely motion also barred the carrier from contending on appeal that it was entitled to judgment as a matter of law because of insufficient evidence. Ga. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hyers, 291 Ga. App. 316, 661 S.E.2d 682 (2008).

2. Grounds for Directed Verdict

Directed verdicts to be granted reluctantly and scrutinized with care.

— Motions for directed verdict should be granted reluctantly by the trial courts, and upon appeal should be scrutinized with great care by the reviewing court. Lingo v. Kirby, 142 Ga. App. 278, 236 S.E.2d 26 (1977).

Standard for directed verdict. — Verdict should not be directed unless there is no issue of fact, or unless proved facts, viewed from every possible legal point of view, can sustain no other finding than that directed. Davis v. Wight, 207 Ga. 590, 63 S.E.2d 405 (1951); Columbus Wine Co. v. Sheffield, 83 Ga. App. 593, 64 S.E.2d 356 (1951); Whitlock v. Michael, 208 Ga. 229, 65 S.E.2d 797 (1951); Miles v. Blanton, 211 Ga. 754, 88 S.E.2d 273

It is error for the court to direct a verdict in favor of a particular party or parties unless there is no issue of fact, or unless proved facts, viewed from every possible legal point, would sustain no other finding than the one so directed. Horn v. Preston, 217 Ga. 165, 121 S.E.2d 775 (1961); Belch v. Gulf Life Ins. Co., 219 Ga. 823, 136 S.E.2d 351 (1964); Gibson v. Filter Queen Co., 109 Ga. App. 650, 136 S.E.2d 922 (1964).

Test required by subsection (a) of this section is that evidence demands a verdict, not merely that the evidence supports a verdict in favor of the moving party. Jenkins v. Gulf States Mtg. Co., 138 Ga. App. 835, 227 S.E.2d 522 (1976).

Rule in the final sentence of subsection (a) of this section purports to set forth the standard for directed verdict long recognized in this state. Georgia Power Co. v. Nix, 147 Ga. App. 681, 250 S.E.2d 17 (1978).

Verdict may be legally directed when evidence is not conflicting. Tilley v. Cox, 119 Ga. 867, 47 S.E. 219 (1904); Price v. Central of Ga. Ry., 124 Ga. 899, 53 S.E. 455 (1906).

Directed verdict is appropriate only if there is no conflict in the evidence as to any material issue and the evidence introduced, construed most favorably to the party opposing the motion, demands a particular verdict. St. Paul Mercury Ins. Co. v. Meeks, 270 Ga. 136, 508 S.E.2d 646 (1998).

Evidence to be construed most favorably to nonmovant. — General rule on a motion for directed verdict is that the evidence must be construed most favorably to the nonmovant. Johnson v. Curenton, 127 Ga. App. 687, 195 S.E.2d 279 (1972); Folsom v. Vangilder, 159 Ga. App. 844, 285 S.E.2d 583 (1981).

On directed verdict, the court is bound to consider evidence in the light most favorable to the party against whom the verdict is asked to be directed. Murray v. Gamble, 127 Ga. App. 855, 195 S.E.2d 461 (1973); North Ga. Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Vandergrift, 239 Ga. 755, 238 S.E.2d 869 (1977); Talmdage v. Talmdage, 241 Ga. 609, 247 S.E.2d 61 (1978).

Evidence in cases of directed verdict must be construed most favorably toward the party opposing the motion. Kalish v. King Cabinet Co., 140 Ga. App. 345, 232 S.E.2d 86 (1976).

Court's duty is to construe the evidence most favorably toward the party opposing the motion for a directed verdict, and it will labor to retain intact the verdict returned by the jury to whom the system has entrusted the dispensing of justice. Eddie Parker Interests, Inc. v. Booth, 160 Ga. App. 15, 285 S.E.2d 753 (1981).

Evidence should be construed in the light most favorable to the respondent to a motion for directed verdict. Ranger Constr. Co. v. Robertshaw Controls Co., 166 Ga. App. 679, 305 S.E.2d 361 (1983).

In determining whether any conflict in the evidence exists, the court must construe the evidence most favorably to the party opposing the motion for directed verdict. Skelton v. Skelton, 251 Ga. 631, 308 S.E.2d 838 (1983).

When directed verdict proper. — It is error to direct a verdict, except when there is no conflict in the evidence as to the material facts, and the evidence introduced, together with all reasonable deductions or inferences therefrom, demands a particular verdict. Yablon v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 200 Ga. 693, 38 S.E.2d 534 (1946); Jones v. Smith, 206 Ga. 162, 56 S.E.2d 462 (1949); Harrison v. Southeastern Fair Ass'n, 104 Ga. App. 596, 122 S.E.2d 330 (1961); Kesler v. Kesler, 219 Ga. 592, 134 S.E.2d 811 (1964).

Directed verdict is authorized when there is no conflict in the evidence as to any material issue and the evidence introduced, with all reasonable deductions therefrom, shall demand a particular verdict. Grace v. Rouse, 202 Ga. 720, 44 S.E.2d 762 (1947); Isom v. Schettino, 129 Ga. App. 73, 199 S.E.2d 89 (1973); Allred v. Dobbs, 137 Ga. App. 227, 223 S.E.2d 265 (1976); General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Bowers, 139 Ga. App. 416, 228 S.E.2d 348 (1976); Brown v. Truluck, 239 Ga. 105, 236 S.E.2d 60 (1977); Hall County Mem. Park v. Baker, 145 Ga. App. 296, 243 S.E.2d 689 (1978); Wilborn v. Elliott, 149 Ga. App. 541, 254 S.E.2d 755 (1979); Spivey v. Eavenson, 150 Ga. App. 429, 258 S.E.2d 54 (1979); Darwin v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 158 Ga. App. 635, 281 S.E.2d 361 (1981); Jones v. Smith, 160 Ga. App. 147, 286 S.E.2d 478 (1981); Levine v. Peachtree-Twin Towers Co., 161 Ga. App. 103, 289 S.E.2d 306 (1982); Gibson v. Talley, 162 Ga. Holt*, 262 Ga. 267, 416 S.E.2d 274 (1992).

When there are no material issues of fact, it is proper to direct a verdict in favor of a party entitled to the verdict under evidence submitted. Seabolt v. Christian, 82 Ga. App. 167, 60 S.E.2d 540 (1950).

It is only when evidence adduced demands that the jury find in favor of a certain party that it is proper to direct a verdict for such party. Taylor v. Gill Equip. Co., 87 Ga. App. 309, 73 S.E.2d 755 (1952).

It is not erroneous to direct a verdict when there is no conflict in the evidence introduced and when all reasonable deductions or inferences which may be drawn therefrom demand a verdict so directed. Smith v. Welch, 212 Ga. 345, 92 S.E.2d 297 (1956); McCarty v. National Life & Accident Ins. Co., 107 Ga. App. 178, 129 S.E.2d 408 (1962).

It is error for the trial judge to direct a verdict, except when there is no conflict in the evidence introduced as to the material facts, and evidence introduced, with all reasonable deductions or inferences therefrom, demands a particular verdict; and when there is a material conflict in the evidence upon a material issue, the trial judge cannot usurp the province of the jury and instruct the jury to render a given verdict. Parker v. Parker, 214 Ga. 509, 105 S.E.2d 742 (1958).

Motion for directed verdict is in order only when there is no conflict in the evidence and a verdict in the movant's favor is demanded. Daniel v. Weeks, 217 Ga. 388, 122 S.E.2d 564 (1961).

Before the trial court would be authorized to direct a verdict in favor of one party and against another, the evidence must demand the verdict directed. Crosby Aeromarine, Inc. v. Hyde, 115 Ga. App. 836, 156 S.E.2d 106 (1967).

It is only when there is no conflict in the evidence, or when all the evidence introduced, together with all reasonable deductions to be drawn therefrom, demands a particular verdict that the court is authorized to direct the verdict. Maryfield Plantation, Inc. v. Harris Gin Co., 116 Ga. App. 744, 159 S.E.2d 125 (1967).

It is not error to direct a verdict if the evidence and all reasonable deductions therefrom, considered in the light most favorable to the respondent, demands the verdict and fails to disclose any material issue for jury resolution. Burney v. Butler, 243 Ga. 620, 255 S.E.2d 686 (1979).

Directed verdict is proper only if there is no conflict in the evidence as to any material issue and the evidence introduced together with all reasonable deductions or inferences therefrom demands a particular verdict. Carver v. Jones, 166 Ga. App. 197, 303 S.E.2d 529 (1983); Brown v. Phillips, 178 Ga. App. 316, 342 S.E.2d 786 (1986); Beard v. Fender, 179 Ga. App. 465, 346 S.E.2d 901 (1986); Harrell v. Thompson, 182 Ga. App. 470, 356 S.E.2d 69 (1987).

Directed verdict is not authorized unless there is no conflict in the evidence on any material issue and the evidence introduced, with all reasonable deductions demands a certain verdict. Canal Ins. Co. v. Wilkes Supply Co., 203 Ga. App. 35, 416 S.E.2d 105, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 905, 416 S.E.2d 105 (1992).

Viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs, the evidence introduced, with all reasonable deductions therefrom, demanded a verdict for the defendant. B & C Tire & Battery, Inc. v. Cooper Tire & Rubber Co., 212 Ga. App. 228, 441 S.E.2d 468 (1994).

Directed verdict proper in quote accident case. — Because an injured party did not show that a truck driver was employed by the owner at the time of a motor vehicle accident or that the owner actually owned the truck, a directed verdict pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a) in favor of the owner was proper. King v. Evans, 259 Ga. App. 626, 578 S.E.2d 480 (2003).

Directed verdict improper in personal injury action of tenant. — In a tenant's action against the leasing agent of an apartment complex alleging injury caused by soot emitted from the apartment's heating system, a motion for a directed verdict filed by the agent that claimed that the tenant failed to exercise ordinary care for the tenant's personal safety and assumed the risk of being exposed to a hazardous condition was properly denied; construed to favor the tenant, the evidence did not mandate a finding that the tenant knew, or in the exercise of ordinary care, should have known of an intentional and unreasonable exposure to a hazard, or that the tenant had actual knowledge of the danger and knew of a specific, particular risk of harm associated with conditions in the apartment. Ambling Mgmt. Co. v. Purdy, 283 Ga. App. 21, 640 S.E.2d 620 (2006).

Tenant's action against the leasing agent of the tenant's apartment complex alleging that the tenant was injured over a period of almost three years by soot emitted from the apartment's heating system was not time-barred by O.C.G.A. § 9-3-33 because the continuing tort theory tolled the running of the statute of limitations to within two years before the action was filed; because there was evidence that the tenant's exposure to the hazard was not eliminated more than two years before the action was filed, the agent's motion for a directed verdict on that ground was properly denied. Ambling Mgmt. Co. v. Purdy, 283 Ga. App. 21, 640 S.E.2d 620 (2006).

Directed verdict to high school coach in quantum meruit action. — In a contractor's quantum meruit action, a former high school baseball coach was erroneously denied a directed verdict as the evidence showed that although the contractor rendered a valuable service to a school by building an indoor baseball hitting facility, when the school board, and not the coach, accepted those services to create an implied promise of payment, quantum meruit payment for construction of the facility could not lie against the coach; moreover, because there was no implied agreement requiring the coach to pay for the hitting facility, the contractor's argument that the coach was liable for having received a personal benefit from the construction of the hitting facility went to the question of unjust enrichment, and not quantum meruit. Brown v. Penland Constr. Co., 281 Ga. 625, 641 S.E.2d 522 (2007).

Directed verdict in land sales transaction. — In an action premised on allegations of a breach of a land sales contract between a group of sellers and an investor, because testimony regarding the sale of an identical parcel at a different price and time failed to establish as a matter of law the precise market value as of the date of the breach, the trial court erred in denying the third seller's motion for directed verdict or JNOV. Dunn v. Venture Bldg. Group, Inc., 283 Ga. App. 500, 642 S.E.2d 156 (2007).

Directed verdict proper in medical malpractice claim. — Decedent's parents and the administrator of the decedent's estate failed to present evidence showing the proximate cause element for a medical malpractice claim; the lack of continuous monitoring at a hospital was too remote as a matter of law to be the proximate cause of the decedent's suicide approximately 335 miles away in another state, and thus the trial court properly directed a verdict for the hospitals and physicians. Miranda v. Fulton DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 284 Ga. App. 203, 644 S.E.2d 164 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 516 (Ga. 2007).

Directed verdict on malicious prosecution claim. — Absent evidence that a criminal prosecution for check fraud filed against a car buyer was terminated in the car buyer's favor, showing instead that the action against the car buyer remained pending, the trial court properly granted a directed verdict on the car buyer's malicious prosecution claim in favor of a car dealer and two of the dealer's employees. Heflin v. Goodman, 288 Ga. App. 454, 654 S.E.2d 417 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga.

Directed verdict in tortious interference with business case. — Directed verdicts in favor of the defendants in a Georgia corporation's claims for tortious interference with business relations were proper as the assertion that the corporation was affiliated with an Alabama corporation and had a business relationship with the Alabama corporation's customers disregarded the legal significance of the undisputed fact that the Georgia corporation and the Alabama corporation were each a corporation. All Star, Inc. v. Fellows, 297 Ga. App. 142, 676 S.E.2d 808 (2009).

Directed verdict in boundary line dispute. — Trial court did not err in entering a judgment in favor of a church in the church's action against an adjoining landowner to establish a boundary line between their properties because the evidence the landowners presented to support the landowners' claimed boundary line was too vague and indefinite to allow any recovery, and the evidence demanded a judgment for the church with regard to the boundary line established in a survey. Spivey v. Smith, 303 Ga. App. 469, 693 S.E.2d 830 (2010).

Directed verdict when negligence of nightclub owner claimed. — Trial court did not err in granting a nightclub's motion for directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a) in a patron's action to recover for the pain and suffering the patron sustained when the patron was shot at the nightclub because the patron presented no evidence that the nightclub's security measures were insufficient or that the nightclub negligently performed the security measures the nightclub implemented. Yearwood v. Club Miami, Inc., 316 Ga. App. 155, 728 S.E.2d 790 (2012).

Directed verdict improper in auto accident case. — Trial court properly denied the plaintiff's motion for a directed verdict in a negligence suit arising from an automobile accident because a stipulated admission of a codefendant did not admit a prima facie case of liability and the codefendants presented evidence supporting an alternate cause for the plaintiff's claimed damages, namely that the damages were pre-existing. Stoddard v.

Greenberg, No. A12A0182, 2012 Ga. App. LEXIS 1083 (Apr. 25, 2012).

Directed verdict in premise's liability claim. — Trial court properly directed a verdict in favor of a hotel in a guest's suit against the hotel on the guest's premises liability claim after a massage therapist allegedly sexually assaulted the guest because that claim required that the guest show a causal connection between the massage therapist's background and the injuries sustained, and the guest failed to show that the hotel knew or reasonably should have known that the massage therapist had a tendency to engage in behavior relevant to the guest's injuries. Tomsic v. Marriott Int'l, Inc., 321 Ga. App. 374, 739 S.E.2d 521 (2013).

When it is error to fail to direct verdict. — Only when there is no conflict and a verdict is demanded as a matter of law is it error for the trial court to fail to direct a verdict. Marriott Corp. v. American Academy of Psychotherapists, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 497, 277 S.E.2d 785 (1981).

Directed verdict in medical malpractice case appropriate. — In a medical malpractice action arising from an alleged mismanagement of an obstetrical complication during the birth of the patient's child, absent any record evidence of causation, the inapplicability of the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur, and given that the trial court did not err in the court's evidentiary rulings against the patient, the trial court properly granted a directed verdict to the doctor sued. Hawkins v. OB-GYN Assocs., P.A., 290 Ga. App. 892, 660 S.E.2d 835 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1440, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 713 (Ga. 2008).

Directed verdict when no evidence of future medical expenses. — Trial court erred in failing to grant a defending driver's motion for a directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(e) as to the plaintiff driver's damages for future medical expenses because the plaintiff presented no evidence from which it could be inferred that the plaintiff would have future medical expenses nor, if the plaintiff did, the amount thereof. Bennett v. Moore, 312 Ga. App. 445, 718 S.E.2d 311 (2011), cert. denied, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 317 (Ga. 2012).

dence and such a verdict is demanded. Lakeview Memory Gardens, Inc. v. National Bank & Trust Co., 155 Ga. App. 478, 271 S.E.2d 219 (1980); Steele v. Turner, 158 Ga. App. 838, 282 S.E.2d 365 (1981); Hawkins v. Greenberg, 159 Ga. App. 302, 283 S.E.2d 301 (1981); Ehlers v. Schwall & Heuett, 177 Ga. App. 548, 340 S.E.2d 207 (1986).

Directed verdict is authorized only if there is no conflict in the evidence, and the evidence and all reasonable deductions therefrom demand a certain verdict. Dick 'N Dale Sys., Inc. v. Danwil Int'l Trading Co., 199 Ga. App. 840, 406 S.E.2d 270 (1991).

Directed verdict is authorized only if there is no conflict in the evidence as to any material issue and the evidence adduced, with all reasonable deductions therefrom, shall demand a particular verdict. Lawson v. Athens Auto Supply & Elec., Inc., 200 Ga. App. 609, 409 S.E.2d 60, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 895, 409 S.E.2d 60 (1991); Palmer v. Taylor, 215 Ga. App. 546, 451 S.E.2d 486 (1994).

Directed verdict improper when question on scope of employment. — In a pedestrian's personal injury action, because a jury question existed as to whether a cab service's employee was acting within the scope of the employee's employment at the time of the accident striking the pedestrian, a directed verdict in favor of the cab service was properly denied. Decatur's Best Taxi Serv., Inc. v. Smith, 282 Ga. App. 731, 639 S.E.2d 482 (2006).

Mere existence of conflicts in evidence does not render direction of verdict erroneous if it is demanded, either from proof or lack of proof on the controlling issue or issues. Carr v. Jacuzzi Bros., 133 Ga. App. 70, 210 S.E.2d 16 (1974); Lingo v. Kirby, 142 Ga. App. 278, 236 S.E.2d 26 (1977); Lakeview Memory Gardens, Inc. v. National Bank & Trust Co., 155 Ga. App. 478, 271 S.E.2d 219 (1980); Wagner v. Timms, 158 Ga. App. 538, 281 S.E.2d 295 (1981); Hawkins v. Greenberg, 159 Ga. App. 302, 283 S.E.2d

Mere conflicts in evidence do not render direction of a verdict erroneous, if the verdict was demanded on the controlling issue or issues. Bennett v. Associated Food Stores, Inc., 118 Ga. App. 711, 165 S.E.2d 581 (1968).

Trial court properly granted a motion for directed verdict as to all the plaintiffs. Although superficially the evidence was far from harmonious, there was sufficient competent evidence to authorize the trial court to conclude that there existed no genuine conflict as to any material issue. Hutchinson v. Perkins, 194 Ga. App. 389, 391 S.E.2d 122, cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 911, 391 S.E.2d 122 (1990).

Immaterial conflicts. — Mere fact of conflicts in testimony does not render direction of verdict erroneous when it appears that the conflicts are immaterial, and that, giving to the opposite party the benefit of the most favorable view of the evidence as a whole, and of all legitimate inferences therefrom, a verdict against that party is demanded. Gillen v. Coconut Grove Bank & Trust Co., 172 Ga. 908, 159 S.E. 282 (1931); Veal v. Jenkins, 58 Ga. App. 4, 197 S.E. 328 (1938); Oliver v. Wayne, 58 Ga. App. 787, 199 S.E. 841 (1938); Stepp v. Stepp, 195 Ga. 595, 25 S.E.2d 6 (1943); Seabolt v. Christian, 82 Ga. App. 167, 60 S.E.2d 540 (1950); Anderson v. Anderson, 210 Ga. 464, 80 S.E.2d 807 (1954); Healan v. Powell, 91 Ga. App. 787, 87 S.E.2d 332 (1955); Carter v. Whatley, 97 Ga. App. 10, 101 S.E.2d 899 (1958).

Mere fact that there are conflicts in testimony does not render direction of verdict erroneous if the conflicts are immaterial. Berger v. Georgia Power Co., 77 Ga. App. 672, 49 S.E.2d 668 (1948).

Mere conflicts in testimony do not render the direction of a judgment erroneous when it appears that the conflicts are not material. Blalock v. Central Bank, 170 Ga. App. 140, 316 S.E.2d 474 (1984).

Directed verdict was properly granted as to a purchaser's fraud claim against a manufacturer because the purchaser did not show that the manufacturer's alleged fraud proximately caused the purchaser's damages, which consisted of a loss of customers. Pendley Quality Trailer Supply, Inc. v. B&F Plastics, Inc., 260 Ga. App. 125, 578 S.E.2d 915 (2003).

Directed verdict proper when no evidence supports plaintiffs' case. — Trial court did err in directing a verdict in favor of the defendant because the plaintiffs relied upon the doctrine of res ipsa loquitor but submitted no evidence showing that the plaintiffs' damages "were caused by an agency or instrumentality within the exclusive control of defendant" at the time of the collision, and because there was no evidence presented at trial to support a finding that the defendant was negligent. Johnson v. Dallas Glass Co., 183 Ga. App. 584, 359 S.E.2d 448 (1987).

Trial court did not err in directing a verdict in favor of the defendant because the plaintiffs claimed that the defendant was responsible for the plaintiffs' injuries based on the doctrine of respondeat superior, but failed to present evidence showing that the alleged servant's negligence was the cause of the plaintiffs' damages. Johnson v. Dallas Glass Co., 183 Ga. App. 584, 359 S.E.2d 448 (1987).

Because the plaintiff failed to advance any evidence of the requisite agency relationship or of any proximate causation for a realtor's activities, there was no conflict as to any material issue, and the trial court did not err in granting a directed verdict in favor of the defendant. Marcoux v. Northside Realty Assocs., 207 Ga. App. 99, 427 S.E.2d 72 (1993).

In an action for a bank's conversion of loan commitment fees and breach of contract, a directed verdict for the bank was proper because the evidence demanded a finding that the plaintiffs surrendered the plaintiffs' title and right to the loan commitment fees when the plaintiffs paid the fees pursuant to the agreements that clearly provided that such fees were non-refundable and the evidence further demanded a finding that the plaintiffs did not satisfy several condition precedents to the loan commitments, the most important being the rehabilitation of the property in question. Bryant v. Carver State Bank, 207 Ga. App. 659, 428 S.E.2d 621 (1993).

Trial court erred in not granting a beauty pageant operators' motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, directed verdict, or a new trial, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 5-5-23 and 9-11-50, in an action by a beauty pageant contestant who was banned from the contest after it was rumored that she was "stuffing" the ballot boxes, because the contestant failed to establish her claim for tortious interference with business relations because she did not offer direct evidence of the operators' actions to her alleged loss of work and earnings following the pageant, nor could the operators be held liable for tortious interference with the contestant's relationships with others, as they were not strangers to those relationships; it was similarly error to deny the motions with respect to the contestant's slander claim as she failed to show that an employee was directly ordered to make the statements by the employer, there was no respondeat superior liability in slander cases, and the statements between the contest's joint venturers were privileged as intra-corporate communications and, accordingly, publication was also not shown. Galardi v. Steele-Inman, 266 Ga. App. 515, 597 S.E.2d 571 (2004).

In an action by an injured party against a taxicab company, alleging injuries by a taxicab owned by the company that was negligently operated by its driver, who was the company's employee, the evidence at trial showed that the driver leased the taxicab from the company for a certain daily amount and that the company had no control over the manner in which the driver performed the driver's work; therefore, the driver was an independent contractor, the company could not be held liable for the driver's negligence under the doctrine of respondeat superior, and it was error for the trial court to deny the company's motion for a directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a). Metro Taxi, Inc. v. Brackett, 273 Ga. App. 122, 614 S.E.2d 232 (2005).

If plaintiff simply fails to prove case, direction of verdict is proper. Carr v. Jacuzzi Bros., 133 Ga. App. 70, 210 S.E.2d 16 (1974); Neal v. Miller, 194 Ga. App. 231, 390 S.E.2d 125 (1990).

In an action for negligence, plaintiffs' failure to prove any fault on the part of the defendant meant that the trial court did not err in directing a verdict in favor of the defendant. Collins v. Ralston & Ogletree, Inc., 186 Ga. App. 583, 367 S.E.2d 861, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 917, 367 S.E.2d 861 (1988).

Evidence insufficient to support verdict for plaintiff. — If there is no conflict in the evidence and the evidence introduced, construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, is insufficient to support a verdict in the plaintiff's favor, it is not error for the trial court to direct a verdict in favor of the defendant. Stewart v. Western Union Tel. Co., 83 Ga. App. 532, 64 S.E.2d 327 (1951).

If the defendant admits a prima facie case by the plaintiff and assumes the burden of proving an affirmative defense, failure to carry such burden may result in the court properly directing a verdict for the plaintiff. Hall v. Beavers, 78 Ga. App. 722, 51 S.E.2d 879 (1949).

Trial court erred in denying a bank's motion for a directed verdict in a borrower's breach of contract claim against the bank, arising from the bank's foreclosure sale of the borrower's property upon a default in payments, as an enforceable contract did not exist; although the borrower offered to pay a sum in order to postpone the sale, which was accepted by the bank, sufficient consideration was lacking because the borrower already had an obligation to pay that amount, which was due under the mortgage. Citizens Trust Bank v. White, 274 Ga. App. 508, 618 S.E.2d 9 (2005).

As evidence existed to support claims of fraud, conspiracy to commit fraud, and conversion, alleged by a group of investors against a company and the company's fundraisers regarding a patent the fundraisers convinced the investors to support, the trial court did not err in granting the investors a directed verdict; moreover, the fraud claims were not dependent on the characterization of the investments as either debt or equity. Argentum Int'l, LLC v. Woods, 280 Ga. App. 440, 634 S.E.2d 195 (2006).

In a divorce, the trial court did not err in granting a directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 in the wife's claim of fraudulent conveyances; because the wife failed to present any evidence from which the jury could have reasonably inferred that a specific conveyance from the husband to the corporation was fraudulent, there was no conflict in the evidence as to any material issue, and the evidence, with all reasonable deductions therefrom, demanded a verdict in favor of the corporation. Moore v. Moore, 281 Ga. 81, 635 S.E.2d 107 (2006).

Direction of verdict on failure of plaintiff's proof or conclusive refutation. — Only if the plaintiff's evidence fails to prove the case as laid, without revealing as defense matter fatal to the cause pled, or when evidence adduced by the defendant, as a matter of law, conclusively refutes proof made of the plaintiff's case, may verdict for the defendant be directed. Halligan v. Underwriters at Lloyd's London, 102 Ga. App. 905, 118 S.E.2d 107 (1960).

When motion for directed verdict stands. — Although the court is bound to consider evidence in the light most favorable to the party against whom the verdict is asked to be directed, if, having done so, it appears that a verdict for that party is not authorized and cannot stand, motion for directed verdict on behalf of the moving party should be granted. Bennett v. Associated Food Stores, Inc., 118 Ga. App. 711, 165 S.E.2d 581 (1968); City of Atlanta v. West, 160 Ga. App. 609, 287 S.E.2d 558 (1981).

Directed verdict on easement issue. — Trial court erred in not granting the first property owner's motion for directed verdict regarding whether the second property owner could park vehicles on the easement that ran between their property, as neither the recorded easement, nor a personal agreement the parties signed later on following a dispute, was ambiguous regarding the fact that there was to be no interference with the easement; accordingly, the second property owner could not park vehicles on the easement and the trial court should have granted the first property owner's motion for a directed verdict on that issue. Huckaby v.

It is proper to grant directed verdict on single issue. Taylor v. Buckhead Glass Co., 120 Ga. App. 663, 171 S.E.2d 779 (1969), rev'd on other grounds, 226 Ga. 247, 174 S.E.2d 566 (1970).

When directed verdict not proper. — Court cannot direct verdict if there is any reasonable inference, supported by evidence, that would authorize a verdict to the contrary. Taylor v. Chattooga County, 180 Ga. 90, 178 S.E. 298 (1935); Yablon v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 200 Ga. 693, 38 S.E.2d 534 (1946).

If there are issues of fact, it is error to direct verdict. North v. Tolbert, 80 Ga. App. 110, 55 S.E.2d 661 (1949).

Direction of verdict is error if the evidence, together with all reasonable inferences and deductions therefrom, would have authorized the verdict for the opposite party. Glover v. City Council, 83 Ga. App. 314, 63 S.E.2d 422 (1951); Williams v. Slusser, 104 Ga. App. 412, 121 S.E.2d 796 (1961).

It is error to direct verdict in any case if the evidence as to any material fact is in conflict or if circumstantial evidence does not demand the particular verdict. Canal Ins. Co. v. Tate, 111 Ga. App. 377, 141 S.E.2d 851 (1965).

If there is any evidence to support a verdict, denial of a motion for directed verdict is proper. Maloy v. Planter's Whse. & Lumber Co., 142 Ga. App. 69, 234 S.E.2d 807 (1977).

It is error to direct a verdict unless evidence demands the particular verdict and fails to disclose any material issue for jury resolution. Talmadge v. Talmadge, 241 Ga. 609, 247 S.E.2d 61 (1978); Georgia Power Co. v. Nix, 147 Ga. App. 681, 250 S.E.2d 17 (1978); Lorick v. Na-Churs Plant Food Co., 150 Ga. App. 209, 257 S.E.2d 332 (1979); Gibbs v. Jim Wilson Chevrolet Co., 161 Ga. App. 171, 288 S.E.2d 264 (1982); Camelot Club Condominium Ass'n v. Metro Lawns, Inc., 161 Ga. App. 574, 288 S.E.2d 325 (1982); Freyermuth v. Chon, 212 Ga. App. 845, 443 S.E.2d 636 (1994).

Directed verdict denied when no assumption of risk. — Based on the evidence recited, a verdict for the defendant was authorized but not demanded as there was no evidence the plaintiff knowingly tempted fate by intentionally placing a hand into the discharge chute, as would demonstrate assumption of a known risk; therefore, the court did not err in denying the defendant's motion for directed verdict. Barger v. Garden Way, Inc., 231 Ga. App. 723, 499 S.E.2d 737 (1998).

Directed verdict in negligence cases. — In a case in which the plaintiff restaurant manager sued the defendant food vendor to recover damages for personal injuries that the manager sustained when the manager was knocked off the ground by the door of the vendor's delivery truck, which had a broken door latch, and the vendor claimed that the vendor was entitled to judgment because the failure of the leather strap that was used to secure the door was not foreseeable and that there was no evidence as to what caused the strap to break, the trial court did not err in denying the vendor's motions for directed verdict and for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, or in the alternative for a new trial because the evidence: (1) that the vendor's driver knew about the broken latch when the driver left the vendor's warehouse; (2) that the doors were very large; (3) that it was windy when the driver and the manager's employee were unloading the truck; (4) that because of the wind, the driver's attempts to secure the truck door by propping dollies against the door had failed; and (5) regarding the actual strap that was used, was adequate to support inferences by the jury that the vendor was negligent by allowing the use of a delivery truck with an inoperable door latch or was vicariously liable for the negligent attempt to secure the door with an inadequate strap. Imperial Foods Supply, Inc. v. Purvis, 260 Ga. App. 614, 580 S.E.2d 342 (2003).

Directed verdict on bad faith or refusal to settle claim. — No error occurred when the trial court denied the insurer's motion for directed verdict on the injured party's bad faith or refusal to settle claim that was assigned to the injured party by the insured as the insurer was liable to the insured and, thus, to the assignee, the injured party, for failing to tender its policy limits even though the settlement offer made acceptance of the settlement contingent upon the injured party receiving the policy limits of a separate policy from a separate insurance company as the insurer was obligated to do what the insurer prudently could that was within the insurer's control, which included tendering the insurer's policy limits. Cotton States Mut. Ins. Co. v. Brightman, 276 Ga. 683, 580 S.E.2d 519 (2003).

Directed verdict on issue of buyer's good faith. — Though a buyer's failure to get financing, which was a condition precedent to a contract, was not a breach of contract, the buyer was required to pursue the financing diligently, in good faith, and, as there was a question of a material issue of fact on the reasonableness of the buyer's actions, a directed verdict was error. Patel v. Burt Dev. Co., 261 Ga. App. 436, 582 S.E.2d 495 (2003).

Directed verdict against company proper. — Because some evidence supported the jury's award and the individual ran the companies as one unit and did not inform the supplier that there were separate entities, the trial court properly allowed the corporate veil to be pierced and denied the individual's and the companies' motion for a directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a). Scott Bros. v. Warren, 261 Ga. App. 285, 582 S.E.2d 224 (2003).

Directed verdict on breach of confidential relationship claim. — Directed verdict for a seller on the buyers' breach of a confidential relationship claim was reversed because there was a fact issue as to whether the seller exercised a controlling influence over the buyers in the buyer's application for a mobile home permit, such that the buyers were kept from discovering zoning for the property or that the seller had an increased duty to disclose the zoning. Howard v. Barron, 272 Ga. App. 360, 612 S.E.2d 569 (2005).

Directed verdict in government entity's nuisance action. — Trial court erred in granting a city's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and in vacating an owner's attorney fees award because there was sufficient evidence that the city acted in bad faith by refusing to take any action to alleviate damage that the city knew or should have known was being caused by the city's sewer lines because: (1) the city was notified of raw sewage feces floating in a ravine across the street from the property; (2) the city received numerous complaints about an odor in the area; (3) the city's own samplings confirmed that the property was contaminated by unsafe levels of fecal coliform bacteria; and (4) the city's partial compliance with a Georgia Environmental Protection Department order confirmed that the sewer system contained numerous cracks, openings, and separations. City of Atlanta v. Landmark Envtl. Indus., 272 Ga. App. 732, 613 S.E.2d 131 (2005).

Directed verdict against insurer. — Trial court's denial of appellee insurer's motion for a directed verdict, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50, in the appellant insurer's declaratory judgment action regarding contested motor vehicle coverage was proper as the appellant met the three-step requirement for institution of a declaratory judgment action since there was no suit pending that could have gone into default or been prejudiced, the declaratory judgment action was timely filed, and it provided a reservation-of-rights letter which listed the insured's lack of cooperation as the basis for questioning coverage; although the appellant later provided four additional reasons in the declaratory judgment action, including fraud and misrepresentation, which was found by the jury, such additional reasons did not have to be set forth in the reservation-of-rights letter as amendments under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a) were permissible. Gov't Emples. Ins. Co. v. Progressive Cas. Ins. Co., 275 Ga. App. 872, 622 S.E.2d 92 (2005).

Directed verdict in medical negligence cases. — In an action by a patient who was allergic to latex alleging that the hospital's negligent use of a latex catheter caused the patient to develop interstitial cystitis (IC), despite the medical expert's admission that the causes of IC were unknown and that no research linked IC to latex allergies, the expert's testimony that allergic reactions could trigger IC, and did so in the patient's case, was sufficient evidence of medical causation to justify denying the hospital's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. EHCA Dunwoody, LLC v. Daniel, 277 Ga. App. 783, 627 S.E.2d 830 (2006).

Directed verdicts in probate cases.

— Trial court did not err in denying the niece's motion for directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a), as some evidence supported the finding that the deed naming the niece as grantee was never delivered to the niece as required under O.C.G.A. § 44-5-30; there was evidence that the original deed was found in the decedent's safe deposit box and that the key to the box had been in the decedent's control when the decedent died. Robinson v. Williams, 280 Ga. 877, 635 S.E.2d 120 (2006).

Directed verdict in personal injury case. — In a personal injury action, because a fact issue was presented as to whether, at the time of the incident, a partnership's employee was within the scope of employment at the time a pedestrian was injured, and the jury was properly charged on this issue, the pedestrian was properly denied a directed verdict. Marwede v. EQR/Lincoln L.P., 284 Ga. App. 404, 643 S.E.2d 766 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 504 (Ga. 2007).

Directed verdict in property cases.

— Given evidence that the father performed part of the agreement at issue with a son for the latter to transfer title to a house, specifically by selling the father's house and paying the son the proceeds in exchange for the son's promise to convey, when the son failed to convey the house the trial court properly granted the father a constructive trust based on fraud, denied the son a directed verdict, and sustained the jury's verdict. Perry v. Perry, 285 Ga. App. 892, 648 S.E.2d 193 (2007).

Directed verdict in fraud in the inducement case. — Trial court did not err in denying a boyfriend a directed verdict on a fraud in the inducement claim asserted by the boyfriend's girlfriend, given evidence of the personal nature of their relationship which caused the girlfriend to place trust and confidence in the boyfriend's repeated promises of marriage and believe that the boyfriend was acting in the girlfriend's best interest by taking the monies loaned to use for a business, which would ultimately allow the boyfriend to repay the girlfriend and support them after they were married. Tankersley v. Barker, 286 Ga. App. 788, 651 S.E.2d 435 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 742 (Ga. 2007).

Directed verdict in failure to warn case.

— Trial court did not err in failing to direct a verdict for a vehicle manufacturer in a failure to warn action due to lack of causation evidence as representatives of victims who died as a result of an accident involving the van provided evidence to support the causation element by showing that the van had a high center of gravity and lacked stability when fully loaded, and that the driver would not have operated the van if there had been a warning about the instability. Bagnell v. Ford Motor Co., 297 Ga. App. 835, 678 S.E.2d 489 (2009).

Directed verdict in will contest. — Directed verdict for the caveators of a will was improper, although the witnesses to the will had died, given prior testimony from one witness by interrogatory and deposition that the decedent, who was blind, had signed the will voluntarily and knew it was the decedent's will; under O.C.G.A. § 53-5-23(a), this evidence presented a jury question. Ammons v. Clouds, 295 Ga. 225, 758 S.E.2d 282 (2014).

Directed verdict in rescission claim.

— Trial court did not err in denying the seller's motion for a directed verdict on the purchaser's rescission claim for fraud because the purchaser made a sufficient offer to restore to support a claim for rescission pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 13-4-60 and the purchaser did not have to return the car when the seller refused to give the purchaser the money back. Krayev v. Johnson, 327 Ga. App. 213, 757 S.E.2d 872 (2014).

In a medical malpractice action, the trial court erred by directing a verdict in favor of the defending urologist because a trier of fact could have concluded that the urologist did not simply offer informal assistance to colleagues, but by answering the emergency call, conferring with other doctors, then ordering or suggesting specialized tests, was acting as the patient's urologist and, therefore, consented to a physician-patient relationship. Smith v. Rodillo, 330 Ga. App. 365, 765 S.E.2d 432 (2014).

Jury verdict in favor of a former client was upheld on appeal because the trial court properly admitted evidence of the arbitration award involving the fee dispute and did not err by denying the firm a directed verdict on all claims since there was evidence to support the claims that the firm performed work on the former client's divorce case and billed in a manner that placed the firm's financial interests above the interests of the former client, in violation of both the terms of the parties' contract and the firm's fiduciary duties. Cordell & Cordell, P.C. v. Gao, 331 Ga. App. 522, 771 S.E.2d 196 (2015).

If evidence is in conflict on an issue and does not demand a verdict, it is error to direct a verdict thereon. Macon Tel. Publishing Co. v. Elliott, 165 Ga. App. 719, 302 S.E.2d 692 (1983), cert. denied, 466 U.S. 971, 104 S. Ct. 2343, 80 L. Ed. 2d 817 (1984).

If there is any material conflict in the evidence, and when the evidence introduced, if all reasonable deductions and inferences therefrom, does not demand a particular verdict, it is error to direct a verdict. Garrison v. Garmon, 94 Ga. App. 868, 96 S.E.2d 550 (1957).

Because the evidence was conflicting concerning the mutual intention of the parties in a contract case, a material issue of fact remained for resolution by the jury, and the trial court erred in granting the motion for a directed verdict. Doyle v. Estes Heating & Air Conditioning, Inc., 173 Ga. App. 491, 326 S.E.2d 846 (1985).

Conflicting evidence in contract dispute meant no directed verdict. — Because there was conflicting evidence as to material issues of fact with regard to the defendant's contractual liability to the plaintiff for the debt evidenced by one note and concerning the capacity in which the defendant executed another note, the trial court erred in directing a verdict in favor of the plaintiff. Smith v. Allen, 180 Ga. App. 624, 349 S.E.2d 548 (1986).

Directed verdict not proper procedure for seeking particularity of fraud allegations. — Will propounder's claim in a motion for a directed verdict that caveators failed to plead fraud with particularity was procedurally improper as the proper remedy to seek more particularity was by a motion for a more definite statement or by the rules of discovery. Odom v. Hughes, 293 Ga. 447, 748 S.E.2d 839 (2013).

If there is a conflict in material evidence, it is reversible error to direct a verdict. Duncan v. Mayfield, 209 Ga. 882, 76 S.E.2d 805 (1953); Livingston v. Livingston, 210 Ga. 607, 82 S.E.2d 1 (1954).

Evidence does not demand a verdict for any party if it is in sharp conflict concerning material issues. Peacock Constr. Co. v. Turner Concrete, Inc., 120 Ga. App. 357, 170 S.E.2d 440 (1969).

Directed verdict does not lie if there is conflict in the evidence as to any material issue and the verdict is not demanded. Whiddon v. Forshee, 228 Ga. 133, 184 S.E.2d 349 (1971).

It is error to direct a verdict if conflicts exist that would necessitate a jury's resolution. Talmadge v. Talmadge, 241 Ga. 609, 247 S.E.2d 61 (1978).

Contradictory testimony of litigant. — On motion for directed verdict, the general rule applies that testimony of a party litigant that is contradictory, vague, inconclusive, and ambiguous must be construed most strongly against such litigant when that party is the sole witness in that party's behalf. Johnson v. Curenton, 127 Ga. App. 687, 195 S.E.2d 279 (1972).

General principle concerning adverse construction of a litigant's equivocal and contradictory testimony clearly applies on consideration of a directed verdict, if the sole evidence on essential elements submitted by the party is that party's own testimony. Johnson v. Curenton, 127 Ga. App. 687, 195 S.E.2d 279 (1972).

If the evidence relied upon to support a party's case is from that party, and this testimony is vague, contradictory, or evasive, it must be construed against that party; and if that version of the testimony most unfavorable shows that the verdict should be against that party, unless other evidence is presented tending to establish a right to recover, the party is not entitled to a favorable finding. Bennett v. Associated Food Stores, Inc., 118 Ga. App. 711, 165 S.E.2d 581 (1968).

Because there was no conflict in the evidence as to the issue of an insured's receipt of an umbrella policy, the trial court did not err in directing a verdict in favor of an insurer as to that policy; the insured's testimony that the insured could not say if the insured had read the policy because the insured did not know if the insured had received the policy contradicted the insured's earlier testimony that the insured had actually scanned the policy. Gov't Emples. Ins. Co. v. Kralick, 313 Ga. App. 492, 722 S.E.2d 107 (2012).

Evidence strongly supporting, but not demanding, a particular finding does not warrant a directed verdict. Life Ins. Co. v. Dodgen, 148 Ga. App. 725, 252 S.E.2d 629 (1979); Barber v. Atlas Concrete Pools, Inc., 155 Ga. App. 118, 270 S.E.2d 471 (1980); Sugrue v. Flint Elec. Membership Corp., 155 Ga. App. 481, 270 S.E.2d 921 (1980); United Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Connell, 166 Ga. App. 329, 304 S.E.2d 131 (1983).

If the evidence strongly supports, but does not demand, a certain verdict, the factual determination remains for the jury. Ranger Constr. Co. v. Robertshaw Controls Co., 166 Ga. App. 679, 305 S.E.2d 361 (1983); Timber Equip., Inc. v. McKinney, 166 Ga. App. 757, 305 S.E.2d 468 (1983).

Merely having strength or weight of evidence in one's favor is not sufficient cause for the court to take the case from the jury by direction of verdict. Heaton v. Smith, 121 Ga. App. 348, 174 S.E.2d 197 (1970).

Evidence preponderates in one party's favor insufficient. — If there is any material conflict in the evidence and the evidence introduced, with all reasonable deductions and inferences therefrom, does not demand a particular verdict, it is error to direct a verdict, even though the evidence may preponderate strongly in favor of one party. Shockey v. Baker, 212 Ga. 106, 90 S.E.2d 654 (1955).

Court cannot properly direct a verdict merely because it may find the strength or weight of evidence is on one side, or because it might grant a new trial if a verdict should be returned against what it determines to be the preponderance of the evidence. Northwestern Univ. v. Crisp, 211 Ga. 636, 88 S.E.2d 26 (1955); McCarty v. National Life & Accident Ins. Co., 107 Ga. App. 178, 129 S.E.2d 408 (1962); Kesler v. Kesler, 219 Ga. 592, 134 S.E.2d 811 (1964).

Trial judge cannot properly direct a verdict merely because the evidence preponderates to one side rather than the other. Cook v. Sheats, 222 Ga. 70, 148 S.E.2d 382 (1966).

Judge cannot direct verdict because the judge thinks the strength or weight of evidence is on one side, or because the judge might grant a new trial if a verdict should be returned that is contrary to a preponderance of the evidence. Findley v. McDaniel, 158 Ga. App. 445, 280 S.E.2d 858 (1981).

Verdict should not be directed unless there is no issue of fact or proved facts can sustain no other finding than that directed. Pennington v. Wynne, 149 Ga. App. 151, 253 S.E.2d 830 (1979).

Verdict should not be directed unless there is no issue of fact, or unless proved facts, viewed from all possible legal points of view, sustain no other finding than that directed. Bodge v. Salesworld, Inc., 154 Ga. App. 65, 267 S.E.2d 505 (1980).

Judgment not obtained when plaintiff neglects to show some material evidence. — Directed verdict is not a vehicle to obtain a judgment on the technical grounds that a plaintiff has merely neglected to show some evidence material to the plaintiff's case. Particularly, since the trial court may in the court's discretion permit the plaintiff to reopen the plaintiff's case and offer some neglected evidence, in such a case a directed verdict is generally improvident. Able-Craft, Inc. v. Bradshaw, 167 Ga. App. 725, 307 S.E.2d 671 (1983).

No error in court's refusal to grant

Directed Verdict (Cont'd)2. Grounds for Directed Verdict (Cont'd)*motion in dispossessory proceeding.

— See May v. Poole, 174 Ga. App. 224, 329 S.E.2d 561 (1985).

It is never error to refuse to grant motion for directed verdict when questions of fact remain, even though the evidence is strongly supportive of the appellant's contentions. Eddie Parker Interests, Inc. v. Booth, 160 Ga. App. 15, 285 S.E.2d 753 (1981).

In reviewing a trial court's denial of a motion for directed verdict, an appellate court reviews and resolves the evidence and any doubts or ambiguities in favor of the verdict; a directed verdict is not appropriate unless there is no conflict in the evidence as to any material issue and the evidence introduced, with all reasonable deductions therefrom, demands a certain verdict. The buyers' motion for a directed verdict on the issue of fraud in an action by the seller for rescission of a quitclaim deed was proper when jury questions existed regarding whether the buyers' real estate agent misrepresented, or failed to disclose after being questioned, whether adjoining landowners had made improvements on a disputed strip of land that was covered by the quitclaim deed. Cistola v. Daniel, 266 Ga. App. 891, 598 S.E.2d 535 (2004).

Denial of motion only error when no material issue exists. — Denial of motion for directed verdict made at the close of all the evidence is error only if the evidence fails to disclose any material issue for jury resolution. Brumby v. Brooks, 234 Ga. 376, 216 S.E.2d 288 (1975), later appeal, 140 Ga. App. 210, 230 S.E.2d 359 (1976).

Refusal to direct verdict not error when verdict not demanded. — If evidence at the time of the motion for directed verdict is subject to more than one construction and does not demand the verdict for either party, the trial court does not err in denying such motion. Powell v. Ferguson Tile & Terrazzo Co., 125 Ga. App. 683, 188 S.E.2d 901 (1972), overruled on other grounds, Fountain v. Dixie Fin. Corp., 252 Ga. 543, 314 S.E.2d 906 (1984).

Directed verdict in dispossession, conversion, and theft case.

— In an action for wrongful dispossession, trespass, conversion, and theft, the plaintiffs tendered into evidence a list of belongings taken from their mobile home and a price estimate on those items and testified that they were recently married, that the majority of their belongings were newly acquired as wedding or bridal shower gifts, some still in their original packages, and that the items had been priced by plaintiffs either by contacting the gift donors or by checking the Sears catalogue, and also testified about the condition and estimated value of their few older belongings; inasmuch as this evidence and the inferences drawn therefrom did not demand a verdict for the defendants, the denial of the guardians' motion for directed verdict was not error. Sanders v. Hughes, 183 Ga. App. 601, 359 S.E.2d 396, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 907, 359 S.E.2d 396 (1987).

Injured party was properly awarded damages for litigation expenses under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11 as a driver's testimony tended to show that the injured party did not yield the right-of-way and that the driver was liable; the trial court was authorized to conclude that a bona fide controversy did not exist as to liability for the automobile accident and did not err by allowing evidence of the injured party's litigation expenses, denying the driver's motion for a directed verdict, or in charging the jury on the claim for litigation expenses. Daniel v. Smith, 266 Ga. App. 637, 597 S.E.2d 432 (2004).

Court cannot direct verdict if there is any reasonable inference supported by evidence that would authorize verdict to the contrary. Findley v. McDaniel, 158 Ga. App. 445, 280 S.E.2d 858 (1981).

Even if evidence strongly supports but does not demand a particular finding, directed verdict is not warranted. Walnut Equip. Leasing Co. v. Williams, 159 Ga. App. 679, 285 S.E.2d 54 (1981).

Direction of verdict proper only if verdict for opposite party would be set aside. — In order for direction of verdict to be error, it must appear that there was some evidence, together with all reasonable deductions and inferences from the evidence, to support a verdict for the party against whom the verdict was directed; and in determining this question, evidence must be construed in the light most favorable to the party against whom the verdict was directed. Whitaker v. Paden, 78 Ga. App. 145, 50 S.E.2d 774 (1948); Curry v. Durden, 103 Ga. App. 371, 118 S.E.2d 871 (1961).

It is not reversible error to direct verdict if no other finding than that directed can legally be reached or sustained. Charles S. Jacobowitz Co. v. Ferguson, 78 Ga. App. 589, 51 S.E.2d 581 (1949).

There is no error in directing a verdict that is inevitable and the only legal result of the pleadings and evidence. City of Abbeville v. Jay, 205 Ga. 743, 55 S.E.2d 129 (1949); Mize v. Paschal, 206 Ga. 189, 56 S.E.2d 266 (1949); Turner v. Maryland Cas. Co., 104 Ga. App. 693, 122 S.E.2d 479 (1961).

Because there were issues of fact that should have been submitted to the jury, the trial judge committed error in directing a verdict for the defendant. Williams v. Williams, 206 Ga. 395, 57 S.E.2d 337 (1950).

Direction of a particular verdict is not error if, under the pleadings and evidence, no other legal verdict could be reached. Williams v. Harris, 207 Ga. 576, 63 S.E.2d 386 (1951).

It is error to direct verdict unless, construing all the evidence in the light most favorable to the losing party, judgment in that party's favor would not be allowed to stand. Powell v. Barker, 96 Ga. App. 592, 101 S.E.2d 113 (1957).

If more than one inference can be drawn from evidence, the duty of solving the mystery should be placed upon the jury and not the trial judge; this is true with respect to circumstantial evidence as well as direct evidence. McCarty v. National Life & Accident Ins. Co., 107 Ga. App. 178, 129 S.E.2d 408 (1962).

Verdict may only be directed in situations in which, if there were a determination by the jury the other way, it would have to be set aside by the court. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Snyder, 125 Ga. App. 352, 187 S.E.2d 878 (1972); Raybon v. Reimers, 138 Ga. App. 511, 226 S.E.2d 620 (1976); Kalish v. King Cabinet

Co., 140 Ga. App. 345, 232 S.E.2d 86 (1976); Kelly Ford, Inc. v. Paracsi, 141 Ga. App. 626, 234 S.E.2d 170 (1977); Georgia Power Co. v. Nix, 147 Ga. App. 681, 250 S.E.2d 17 (1978); Spivey v. Eavenson, 150 Ga. App. 429, 258 S.E.2d 54 (1979).

Reasonable people could not differ.

— It is only when reasonable people may not differ as to the inferences to be drawn from evidence that it is proper to direct verdict. Canal Ins. Co. v. Tate, 111 Ga. App. 377, 141 S.E.2d 851 (1965).

Trial judge has no right whatever to weigh evidence or decide any issue of fact, and before the court can legally direct a verdict for the defendants, the judge must find that there is no evidence of any kind supporting the plaintiff's position. Barber v. Atlas Concrete Pools, Inc., 155 Ga. App. 118, 270 S.E.2d 471 (1980); Parsons, Brinckerhoff, Quade & Douglas, Inc. v. Johnson, 161 Ga. App. 634, 288 S.E.2d 320 (1982).

It is only if reasonable persons may not differ as to the inferences to be drawn from the evidence that it is proper for the judge to remove the case from jury consideration. Bennett v. Haley, 132 Ga. App. 512, 208 S.E.2d 302 (1974); Raybon v. Reimers, 138 Ga. App. 511, 226 S.E.2d 620 (1976); Brown v. Truluck, 239 Ga. 105, 236 S.E.2d 60 (1977); Plough Broadcasting Co. v. Dobbs, 163 Ga. App. 264, 293 S.E.2d 526 (1982).

Question of prima facie case determinative.

— On motion for directed verdict, question is whether testimony on the plaintiff's behalf and the reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom, in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, make out a prima facie case allowing the plaintiff to have the jury pass on the alleged cause of action. Lashley v. Ford Motor Co., 359 F. Supp. 363 (M.D. Ga. 1972), aff'd, 480 F.2d 158 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 414 U.S. 1072, 94 S. Ct. 585, 38 L. Ed. 2d 478 (1973); Simmons v. Boros, 176 Ga. App. 346, 335 S.E.2d 662 (1985), aff'd, 255 Ga. 524, 341 S.E.2d 2 (1986).

In a suit on open account, oral evidence concerning the amount of the defendant's indebtedness to the plaintiff was introduced without objection. This evidence made out a prima facie case and it was not necessary for the plaintiff to introduce other documents reflecting the balance due in order to prevail against the defendant's motion for a directed verdict. Professional Ins. Servs., Inc. v. Sizemore Elec. Co., 188 Ga. App. 463, 373 S.E.2d 276 (1988).

Prima-facie negligence case. — Although it is true that questions of negligence are ordinarily for the trier of fact, if the plaintiff's evidence suggests only the elements of duty and injury, and nothing is offered to indicate breach of duty or causation, the plaintiff fails to establish the elements of negligence and thereby to make out a prima-facie case. Smith v. Morico, 166 Ga. App. 737, 305 S.E.2d 465 (1983).

Negligence, diligence, contributory negligence, and proximate cause are peculiarly matters for the jury, and the court should not take the place of the jury in solving them, except in plain and indisputable cases. Eyster v. Borg-Warner Corp., 131 Ga. App. 702, 206 S.E.2d 668 (1974).

Because, in an auto accident case, on the evidence of record, reasonable men could have differed on whether the negligence of the defendant was the proximate cause of the plaintiff's claimed permanent injuries and the evidence was neither plain nor palpable, nor was a verdict for the plaintiff demanded, it was not error for the trial court to refuse to direct a verdict for the plaintiff on the issue of liability. Campbell v. Forsyth, 187 Ga. App. 352, 370 S.E.2d 207 (1988).

Directed verdict in fraud action. — In an action for fraud, because the evidence showed the sellers of a restaurant made at least two significant misrepresentations, it was a jury question whether additional diligence by the buyer was necessary; the trial court did not err by denying the seller's motion for a directed verdict. Southern Store & Restaurant Equip. Co. v. Maddox, 195 Ga. App. 2, 392 S.E.2d 268, cert. denied, 195 Ga. App. 2, 392 S.E.2d 268 (1990).

Direction of verdict on liability issue. — Trial judge may, under the correct circumstances, direct verdict for the plaintiff as to liability in a personal injury action, while leaving damages issue to the jury. Johnson v. Curenton, 127 Ga. App. 687, 195 S.E.2d 279 (1972).

Directed verdict in will contest cases. — In a will contest, the trial court did not err in directing a verdict in favor of the propounder on the caveators' claim of improper execution because the evidence was insufficient to raise a conflict as to that issue. Dyer v. Souther, 272 Ga. 263, 528 S.E.2d 242 (2000).

Directed verdict in contractor cases. — When an independent subcontractor sued a retailer for injuries occurring while the subcontractor was doing work on the retailer's premises, the retailer was entitled to a directed verdict in its favor as the retailer exercised no control over the subcontractor's work, and any control over that work was contractually ceded to the subcontractor and to the contractor who hired the subcontractor. Neiman-Marcus Group, Inc. v. Dufour, 268 Ga. App. 104, 601 S.E.2d 375 (2004).

Directed verdict in dog bite cases. — Dog-bite victim sued the dog's owners, alleging the owners failed to warn the victim of the dog's vicious tendencies. As there was no evidence the dog had ever previously bitten or attacked anyone, and an owner's alleged statement that children would not "have to worry about getting bit" if the children stayed away from the owner's truck, when the dog was chained in the truck bed, was insufficient to establish the owners' knowledge of the dog's vicious propensity; thus, the owners were properly granted a directed verdict on this claim. Huff v. Dyer, 297 Ga. App. 761, 678 S.E.2d 206 (2009).

Direction of verdict on residency issue. — When a contractor stated under oath that home, office, business records, and reporting requirements were maintained in Tennessee, the trial court's factual determination as to nonresidency was correct and did not raise a jury issue. Gorrell v. Fowler, 248 Ga. 801, 286 S.E.2d 13, appeal dismissed, 457 U.S. 1113, 102 S. Ct. 2918, 73 L. Ed. 2d 1324 (1982).

No direction of verdict when plaintiff raised issue of fraudulent conveyance. — Because the plaintiff raised the issue of a fraudulent conveyance and established that the signature on the warranty deed was not made by the deceased, a directed verdict for the defendant was not required. Smith v. Greenwood, 247 Ga. 632, 278 S.E.2d 380 (1981).

In an insureds' suit against an insurer, because there was the slightest evidence of waiver of policy requirement of written proof of loss on the insurer's part, it was error to direct a verdict for the appellee-insurance company; rather, a jury question was presented. Worth v. Georgia Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 174 Ga. App. 194, 330 S.E.2d 1 (1985).

Directed verdict proper when issue of ownership previously decided. — Directed verdict for a seller on the buyers' fraud claim was proper because, although the jury could find that the seller intentionally concealed from the buyers that the property's zoning required five-acres for a home to induce the buyers to buy the one-acre tract, misrepresentation as to zoning could not support a fraud claim. Howard v. Barron, 272 Ga. App. 360, 612 S.E.2d 569 (2005).

Trial court properly directed a verdict against the county and in favor of the homeowners on the issue of the county's ownership interest in a dam in the homeowners' suit seeking to limit the county's ability to breach the dam; that issue was resolved in a prior administrative action and appeals from that determination in which the county was found to be an owner required to repair or breach the dam pursuant to the Georgia Safe Dams Act, O.C.G.A. § 12-5-370 et seq., and the suit did not concern whether there were additional owners of the dam. Forsyth County v. Martin, 279 Ga. 215, 610 S.E.2d 512 (2005).

Trial court properly directed a verdict in favor of an engineering firm on the landowners' claims relating to the landowner's standing water and drainage issues because regardless of whether these claims sounded in nuisance, trespass, or negligence, causation was a central element which the landowners failed to support with any evidence. Further, the mere fact that one event chronologically followed another was alone insufficient to establish a causal relation between the events.

Walls v. Moreland Altobelli Assocs., 290 Ga. App. 199, 659 S.E.2d 418 (2008).

Directed verdict in damages determination. — Trial court erred in directing a verdict for the defendants in a fraud case because of insufficient evidence of damages as the evidence, construed in favor of the plaintiff, provided the jury with a basis to estimate the plaintiff's damages. McCannon v. McCannon, 231 Ga. App. 601, 499 S.E.2d 684 (1998).

Trial court erred in directing a verdict as to damages as a landlord presented a detailed, itemized statement describing each item destroyed by water putting out a fire negligently caused by a tenant's guest and showing its approximate wholesale cost as the jury could determine damages without speculation or guess work; further, the landlord had a specific memory of the price the landlord paid for three planetary assemblies and seven blowers and there was testimony as to their fair market value. Hodges v. Vara, 268 Ga. App. 815, 603 S.E.2d 327 (2004).

Trial court erred in failing to order a new trial on the issue of damages after the court granted a directed verdict in favor of a church in the church's action against an adjoining landowner to establish a boundary line between their properties because when the trial court entered the judgment for the church the court should have also refused to enter judgment on the damages portion of the jury's verdict and should have granted a new trial to the church on the issue of damages; if any evidence supported the jury's award in favor of the landowner, then the jury's award of no damages to the church would have been correct. Spivey v. Smith, 303 Ga. App. 469, 693 S.E.2d 830 (2010).

Defendant not entitled to fees when directed verdict should have been granted. — Because the trial court erred in not granting a plaintiff's motion for a directed verdict as to the defendant's counterclaim, the defendant was not entitled to fees under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11 for prosecuting a successful counterclaim. Caincare, Inc. v. Ellison, 272 Ga. App. 190, 612 S.E.2d 47 (2005).

Appellate review. — Standard used to review grant or denial of directed verdict is the "any evidence" test. Georgia Dep't of

Human Resources v. Montgomery, 248 Ga. 465, 284 S.E.2d 263 (1981).

Standard of appellate review of a trial court's denial of a motion for a direct verdict is the "any evidence test"; when evidence was sufficient to support the jury's verdict, the trial court did not err in denying the appellant's motion for directed verdict. Little v. Little, 173 Ga. App. 116, 325 S.E.2d 624 (1984).

Application of law in effect at time of ruling. — Although a motion for a directed verdict must state specific grounds therefor as a basis for appeal, it obviously is not possible to state grounds which do not exist at the time; and, to give effect to the rule that the law is applied as it exists at the time of appeal, the movant, who by new law is entitled to a certain judgment, should not be deprived of it for failure to state as grounds for directed verdict what did not exist at the time. Hensel Phelps Constr. Co. v. Johnson, 164 Ga. App. 404, 298 S.E.2d 261 (1982).

Directed verdict in negligence claim. — Because the evidence unequivocally showed that the plaintiff's knowledge of the danger of the wasps swarming was equal to the defendant-landowner's knowledge, the evidence demanded a verdict in the defendant's favor on the plaintiff's claim of negligence based on the defendant's superior knowledge of the danger. Beard v. Fender, 179 Ga. App. 465, 346 S.E.2d 901 (1986).

Directed verdict when inadequate demand. — Because the testimony of the defendant's agent established without any evidence to the contrary that the only demand for possession of the premises had been made on the previous tenant, not on the defendant, the presumption raised by the allegation in the affidavit that demand was made was rebutted by direct and positive evidence; a directed verdict in the defendant's favor was thereby demanded, and the trial court erred by denying the appellant's motion. Jet Air, Inc. v. Management/USA, Inc., 180 Ga. App. 648, 350 S.E.2d 40 (1986).

Directed verdict on attorney's fees.

— Because the plaintiff failed to offer evidence as to what portion of attorney fees, if any, was attributable to the defendant's negligence, or whether the plaintiff's estimate of legal expenses was a reasonable value of the professional services rendered, the plaintiff did not carry the plaintiff's burden of proof, and the trial court properly directed a verdict on this issue. Redwine v. Windham, 237 Ga. App. 149, 513 S.E.2d 13 (1999).

Directed verdict on issue of liability in auto accident case. — Evidence having shown that the plaintiff was completely free of negligence and the defendant's testimony having revealed no legal reason or excuse for the defendant's failure to avoid colliding with the rear of the plaintiff's automobile, the trial judge did not err in directing a verdict for the plaintiff on the question of liability. R.A. Siegel Co. v. Bowen, 246 Ga. App. 177, 539 S.E.2d 873 (2000).

Directed verdict in dog bite cases.

— Trial court correctly granted a directed verdict as to the dog owner's liability after the injured party failed to submit evidence that the dog owner knew that the dog had the propensity to commit the act that caused the injury and that the dog had ever bit anyone, or that the dog had a tendency to attack humans. However, the trial court did abuse the court's discretion in failing to allow the injured party to reopen the evidence in order to submit a certified copy of the leash law as it did not appear that reopening the evidence would have subjected the dog owner to unfairness or undue prejudice, or that the injured party was trifling with the court or intentionally delaying the trial. Phiel v. Boston, 262 Ga. App. 814, 586 S.E.2d 718 (2003).

Directed verdict on indemnity claim. — Trial court properly granted the insurer's motion for a directed verdict on the insurer's indemnity claim against the mortgage broker since the broker never requested that the insurer litigate or defend against the claim, and the insurer did confirm that the mortgage company either had paid or would have to pay damages in excess of the $50,000 bond. Nguyen v. Lumbermens Mut. Cas. Co.,

Directed verdict on fraud claim. — Directed verdict was proper on the buyer's fraud claims because the defendants admitted the foundation wall was defective; the disagreement went to the repair method not the condition of the wall. McEntyre v. Edwards, 261 Ga. App. 843, 583 S.E.2d 889 (2003).

Directed verdict on guaranty. — In an action to recover from the guarantor, the trial court's entry of a directed verdict was upheld when the undisputed evidence showed that the guarantor did not withdraw the guaranty in the manner expressly required by its terms, and there was no evidence that the retailer consented to revocation on any terms other than those specified in the guaranty. Hill Roofing Co. v. Lowe's Home Ctrs., Inc., 265 Ga. App. 822, 595 S.E.2d 638 (2004).

In an action filed by a bank to recover on a promissory note, as well as to recover on the guaranty tied to that note, the trial court properly granted a directed verdict to the bank, and against both the debtor and the guarantor, as the bank made out the bank's prima facie case by showing that the note was executed and the debtor remained liable thereunder; moreover, the guaranty's broad language obligated the guarantor to the bank, and no issue of fact existed as to whether the guarantor was discharged by any increased risk or any purported novation. Fielbon Dev. Co. v. Colony Bank, 290 Ga. App. 847, 660 S.E.2d 801 (2008).

Directed verdict on conversion issue. — Trial court properly entered a directed verdict in favor of the new owners on the former company president's claims for conversion when there was a dispute as to whether the president had a legal right to the funds from the check on which payment was stopped and the president was the guarantor rather than the owner of the trucks the president claimed the president was owed for. Habel v. Tavormina, 266 Ga. App. 613, 597 S.E.2d 645 (2004).

Directed verdict in defective construction case. — Customer failed to show that a construction company owed the customer a duty in the customer's action to recover for an alleged defective construction of the customer's home, and also failed to show any demonstrable damages; thus, the trial court did not err in entering a directed verdict against the customer. Wise v. Tidal Constr. Co., 270 Ga. App. 725, 608 S.E.2d 11 (2004).

Directed verdict proper following child's drowning. — Trial court did not err in granting the defendants' motion for a directed verdict as a child who drowned in an apartment complex swimming pool was capable of appreciating the risk associated with swimming in the pool, and the child's parent explicitly instructed the child to stay out of the deep end of a pool and never to swim without adult supervision. Rice v. Oaks Investors II, 292 Ga. App. 692, 666 S.E.2d 63 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 963 (Ga. 2008).

Directed verdict on fraudulent conveyance and negligent construction. — In a case involving a home buyer's fraudulent conveyance and negligent construction claims against a corporation, given the buyer's failure to present required evidence on the buyer's attorney fee claim under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11, there was no error in the trial court's refusal to submit the issue to the jury and in directing a verdict on this claim. Sims v. GT Architecture Contrs. Corp., 292 Ga. App. 94, 663 S.E.2d 797 (2008).

Directed verdict in dog bite cases. — Evidence that a dog might have previously harmed a small kitten and puppy did not indicate that the owner had any reason to suspect the dog had a propensity to bite, and was properly excluded. Absent evidence that the dog had any known vicious tendency, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in directing a verdict for the dog owner. Kringle v. Elliott, 301 Ga. App. 1, 686 S.E.2d 665 (2009).

Directed verdict in employment cases. — Because correspondence between the plaintiff and the plaintiff's former employer acknowledged that there was an agreement between the parties, and the plaintiff's testimony and letters between the parties were sufficient to show that the defendant agreed to pay the plaintiff for one-half of the plaintiff's loss on the sale of the plaintiff's house and that the plaintiff had suffered a loss on the plaintiff's house, there was evidence to establish a valid contract under Georgia law, and the trial court erred by directing the verdict for the defendant. Foreman v. Eastern Foods, Inc., 195 Ga. App. 332, 393 S.E.2d 695 (1990).

Because an employer did not show that an employee solicited the employer's clients or improperly took its business or money while still an employee, the trial court properly granted the employee's O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a) motion for directed verdict on the employer's claims for breach of fiduciary duty, conversion, and interference with business relations. Thomas County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Thomasville Garden Ctr., Inc., 277 Ga. App. 591, 627 S.E.2d 192 (2006).

Directed verdict in auto injury cases. — Trial court invaded the province of the jury when the court directed a verdict in favor of the truck-operator who had injured the plaintiff's son in a vehicular collision because the plaintiff testified regarding the sound of slamming brakes immediately prior to the collision, thereby raising an inference of negligence. Cagle v. Ameagle Contractors, Inc., 209 Ga. App. 712, 434 S.E.2d 546 (1993).

In a suit seeking recovery for injuries sustained in a vehicular collision, a directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a) was erroneous because cross-examination testimony of a treating doctor created a disputed factual issue as to whether all of the medical expenses were caused by the collision, and thus, this issue should have been presented to the jury. Allen v. Spiker, 301 Ga. App. 893, 689 S.E.2d 326 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0740, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 454 (Ga. 2010).

Directed verdict denied against state port authority. — Trial court correctly denied a directed verdict to the state's port authority as to its liability as the evidence did not demand that a contested signal by authority's employee was in fact given. Georgia Ports Auth. v. Hutchinson, 209 Ga. App. 726, 434 S.E.2d 791 (1993).

Military truck refurbishing company's foreign corporate representative was entitled to summary judgment when the representative performed the representative's obligations under the contract, the contract was no longer executory, and it suffered compensatory damages as a result; therefore, the company was not entitled to a directed verdict. Commercial & Military Sys. Co. v. Sudimat, C.A., 267 Ga. App. 32, 599 S.E.2d 7 (2004).

Directed verdict in money owed case. — Motion for a directed verdict was properly denied in a case in which a supplier sought to recover money owed on an account because a purchaser failed to refute the supplier's evidence regarding indebtedness and delivery of goods; the purchaser did not show that the goods were not delivered by way of employee testimony, nor did the purchaser show that the amount allegedly owed was not accurate. Kroger Co. v. U. S. Foodservice of Atlanta, Inc., 270 Ga. App. 525, 607 S.E.2d 177 (2004).

Directed verdict improper when corporate president acts inappropriately. — President's motion for a directed verdict was properly denied as fraud and justifiable reliance were not required to rescind the additional shares of stock that were obtained by telling a director that the director had had sexual relations with an employee and that the employee was threatening to sue the close corporation; the president's actions were illegal, oppressive, and unfairly prejudicial. Gallagher v. McKinnon, 273 Ga. App. 727, 615 S.E.2d 746 (2005).

Directed verdict in insurance claim case. — Because the testimony by the insured's daughter as to how the purchase price of the items contained on an inventory of the personal property lost in a fire was calculated, all of which were common household goods, coupled with the proof of loss form showing a depreciated value, was sufficient to uphold the monetary judgment entered, the insurer's motion for a directed verdict on this issue was properly denied. Moreover, the decedent-insured had already submitted a discounted actual cash value in the proof of loss form, the form was timely submitted to the insurer, and it also was admitted ted at trial absent any objection. Allstate Indem. Co. v. Payton, 289 Ga. App. 202, 656 S.E.2d 554 (2008).

Directed verdict improper on issue of waiver. — Trial court properly denied a home remodeling company's motion for a directed verdict on a buyer's breach of home warranty claim as there was evidence that, contrary to the remodeler's assertions, the company had waived the formal notice of defects requirements in a purchase agreement, and the ultimate determination of waiver was a jury question. RHL Props., LLC v. Neese, 293 Ga. App. 838, 668 S.E.2d 828 (2008).

Directed verdict in employment cases. — Trial court did not err in denying a motion for a directed verdict filed by the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia on the issue of whether an assistant professor's employment contract incorporated the Rules and Procedures for Responding to Allegations of Research Misconduct because the Rules were issued by the medical college where the professor worked and were thus "regulations of this institution" within the meaning of the professor's contract, and the contract incorporated the Rules by reference thereto. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga. v. Ambati, 299 Ga. App. 804, 685 S.E.2d 719 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0086, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 34 (Ga. 2010).

Directed verdict on duty in premises liability action. — Trial court properly denied the Department of Correction's motion for directed verdict as to the issue of duty in a premises liability action by an inmate because there was conflicting evidence as to whether the inmate was in the warden's home on a work detail as a benefit to the department and whether the inmate was warned to stay out of the kitchen and dining area where an accident occurred. Ga. Dep't of Corr. v. Couch, 312 Ga. App. 544, 718 S.E.2d 875 (2011).

Directed verdict in slip and fall case. — Trial court properly denied a store's motion for a directed verdict in a slip and fall case because the suing couple presented evidence from which the jury could infer the store's constructive knowledge of the hazard based on water on the floor in the floral area being a recurrent problem and mats on the floor to catch the water were not in place on the day the wife fell. The Kroger Co. v. Schoenhoff, 324 Ga. App. 619, 751 S.E.2d 438 (2013).

Contesting traffic citation meant no directed verdict. — In a suit against the driver of a truck who collided with the back of a pickup in which the plaintiff was a passenger, the plaintiff was not entitled to a directed verdict on the defendant's liability. Although the defendant received a traffic citation and pleaded guilty to the offense, the defendant explained that the defendant did this because the defendant did not understand its significance and had no time to contest the citation, which facts created a jury issue as to liability. Pryor v. Phillips, 222 Ga. App. 116, 473 S.E.2d 535 (1996).

Building purchaser was not entitled to judgment as a matter of law, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a), in a case in which the purchaser contended that the purchaser had done a portion of the salvage work on a contract to remove building materials from a warehouse that was being demolished prior to the seller barring the purchaser's workers from continuing due to the purchaser's failure to have obtained a certificate of worker's compensation; evidence in the record indicated that the lumber removed was valued in excess of the amount claimed due for the work done and, accordingly, there was evidence upon which the jury's verdict could be supported. Lawrence v. Bland, 259 Ga. App. 366, 577 S.E.2d 64 (2003).

Directed verdict was properly denied on negligent hiring and retention claims because there was a conflict in the evidence on the material issue of whether an employee's attack on and killing of a person in the person's apartment was foreseeable by the apartment complex that hired the employee. The issue of foreseeability remained based on evidence: (1) that the property manager who hired the employee knew the employee had been in trouble with the law but kept silent; (2) that the complex did not completely follow the complex's hiring policies; (3) that the complex's hiring process was not designed to determine whether a potential employee was convicted of a crime; (4) that the property manager, district manager, and regional manager did not do their respective jobs in hiring the employee; (5) that apartment key control policies were routinely violated; (6) that the complex knew that there were a recent series of unforced entries and robberies; (7) that an employee was suspected, but no criminal background checks were conducted; (8) that the employee was caught in an apartment; and (9) that despite all this, the complex's management still did not undertake criminal background checks of the small number of employees, control access to the keys, or alert residents to the situation. TGM Ashley Lakes, Inc. v. Jennings, 264 Ga. App. 456, 590 S.E.2d 807 (2003).

No directed verdict in land transaction case. — Motions for a directed verdict on the issue of due diligence in land transaction cases are properly denied if, in addition to inspecting the property, a home buyer asked the seller questions to which the seller gave false, deceptive, or otherwise reckless answers. Cistola v. Daniel, 266 Ga. App. 891, 598 S.E.2d 535 (2004).

No directed verdict in negligent misrepresentation claim. — Trial court did not err in denying the airplane company's motions for directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the corporation's claims for negligent misrepresentation because Georgia law did not require written proof of an oral promise as an element of a negligent misrepresentation claim; also, the evidence supported a finding that the company requested the corporation to purchase two Russian missile launchers and told the owner it would process all paperwork and pay $80,000 for the launchers if the owner delivered the launchers. Boeing Co. v. Blane Int'l Group, Inc., 276 Ga. App. 672, 624 S.E.2d 227 (2005).

No directed verdict in libel action. — Given that defendants, a newspaper, the editor, and a columnist, so doubted the truthfulness of their articles (alleging that a deputy sheriff beat an arrestee to death with a flashlight) that they refused to print contradictory versions of the events, actual malice could be inferred; as a result, the trial court properly denied their motions for a directed verdict and awarded compensatory and punitive damages to a deputy sheriff in the deputy's libel action. Lake Park Post, Inc. v. Farmer, 264 Ga. App. 299, 590 S.E.2d 254 (2003), cert. denied, 543 U.S. 875, 125 S. Ct. 104, 160 L. Ed. 2d 125 (2004).

No directed verdict in conversion case. — In an action between a business and a bank for breach of contract, conversion, and damage to property, the bank's motion for directed verdict on the issue of conversion was properly denied because: (1) the business sufficiently proved ownership of the allegedly converted property and that the bank damaged the business's property; and (2) the seller's valuation of the items was not speculative as the seller was familiar with the items and the seller's figures were based on the value of the items in a used condition. Cnty. Bank v. Handy Auto Parts, Inc., 270 Ga. App. 640, 607 S.E.2d 241 (2004).

No directed verdict in malicious prosecution case. — Trial court properly denied an employer's motion for directed verdict as to a malicious prosecution claim because the employee showed that the employer authorized the employee to write checks to herself and then reported the money stolen, the employer manufactured and post-dated documents to erroneously show that the employee wrote checks in violation of company policy and that the employee was not authorized to use a credit card, and the employer hired investigators to inquire about the alleged theft, who then contacted the police and provided the fabricated documents. Vojnovic v. Brants, 272 Ga. App. 475, 612 S.E.2d 621 (2005).

No directed verdict in will contest proceeding. — Trial court correctly denied an executor's motion for directed verdict in an action wherein the child of the testator filed a caveat and objection to the probate of the testator's last will and testament on the grounds that the will was the product of undue influence as sufficient evidence existed to support the conclusion that undue influence was used to have the testator bequeath the only asset, namely a home, to the caregiver who was hired by the executor. The record established that the executor blocked calls from the testator's child, refused to let the child see the testator, and a confidential relationship was established between the caregiver and the testator as the caregiver took an active role in the planning, preparation, and execution of the will. Bean v. Wilson, 283 Ga. 511, 661 S.E.2d 518 (2008).

No directed verdict in personal injury action. — Since the bar allowed combative patrons to remain on the premises for an inordinate amount of time until a patron's foreseeable and permanent injury occurred during a fight, the denial of a motion for a directed verdict by the bar and the bar's owner in the patron's personal injury action was proper. Mulligan's Bar & Grill v. Stanfield, 294 Ga. App. 250, 668 S.E.2d 874 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0351, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 192 (Ga. 2009).

Directed verdict following improperly entered default judgment. — Trial court erred in denying the vehicle owner's motion for directed verdict as the evidence showed that the wrecker company's default judgment was improperly entered against the vehicle owner since the vehicle owner was improperly notified of the wrecker company's foreclosure action against it after it found the vehicle owner's vehicle abandoned; no dispute existed but that the wrecker company sent notice of the foreclosure proceeding to the wrong address in a different state than where the vehicle owner was located, through no fault of the vehicle owner. Mitsubishi Motors Credit of Am., Inc. v. Robinson & Stephens, Inc., 263 Ga. App. 168, 587 S.E.2d 146 (2003).

Since the adjoining property owners did not show that the owners' had an interest in their neighbors' property, the trial court erred in denying the homebuilders' motion for directed verdict regarding the adjoining property owners' claims for negligent construction, negligent design, and negligent reconstruction as Georgia law did not permit a plaintiff with no interest in the relevant property to bring such claims. D. G. Jenkins Homes, Inc. v. Wood, 261 Ga.

App. 322, 582 S.E.2d 478 (2003).

Directed verdict in tortious interference with business and contractual relations. — Trial court erred in denying the airplane company's motions for directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the corporation's claims for tortious interference with business and contractual relations because the corporation did not produce any probative evidence to show that the airplane company's letters or telephone calls induced a breach of contract or caused a third party to discontinue a business relationship with the corporation; the corporation did not present any evidence that any party, including the addressees, had seen or even knew about the letters and telephone calls. Boeing Co. v. Blane Int'l Group, Inc., 276 Ga. App. 672, 624 S.E.2d 227 (2005).

Directed verdict in actions involving a trust. — As the parties did not reach a meeting of the minds as to what type of trust was contemplated for purposes of a former business partner's deposit of insurance proceeds into a trust for the benefit of the deceased partner's minor daughter, there was no enforceable contract under O.C.G.A. § 13-3-1 and the trial court's denial of a directed verdict to the former business partner was error pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50. Oldham v. Self, 279 Ga. App. 703, 632 S.E.2d 446 (2006).

Directed verdict in recovery on promissory note. — In an action to recover on a promissory note filed by a bank, while the bank might have been negligent in managing and monitoring the loan to the bank's debtor, absent any contrary evidence, the debtor remained obligated under the parties' contractual relationship. Hence, the trial court erred in failing to direct a verdict to the bank on the debtor's claim for negligence, attorney's fees, and punitive damages. Fielbon Dev. Co. v. Colony Bank, 290 Ga. App. 847, 660 S.E.2d 801 (2008).

Directed verdict in property cases. — It was error to deny an adjacent lot owner's motions for a directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 in an action by property owners, alleging property damage and requesting an award of attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11, as there was a bona fide controversy regarding the adjacent lot owner's liability in the circumstances; further, there was no showing that the adjacent lot owner acted with bad faith. Lowery v. Roper, 293 Ga. App. 243, 666 S.E.2d 710 (2008).

Directed verdict in emotional distress claim. — Because an owner did not take a neighbor's threat seriously, and because the neighbor's later trespasses were not committed in the owner's presence, the trial court erred when the court denied the neighbor's O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a) motion for directed verdict on the owner's emotional distress claim. Norton v. Holcomb, 299 Ga. App. 207, 682 S.E.2d 336 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1929, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 804 (Ga. 2009).

3. Time for Motion

There are only two points in time when a motion for directed verdict may be made: (1) at the close of the plaintiff's evidence; and (2) at the close of all the evidence. Gleaton v. City of Atlanta, 131 Ga. App. 399, 206 S.E.2d 46 (1974).

Defendant may be able to reserve right to move for directed verdict out of order or at a time not allowed by law, by stipulation. Anderson v. Universal C.I.T. Credit Corp., 134 Ga. App. 931, 216 S.E.2d 719 (1975).

Only the defendant may move for directed verdict at the close of the plaintiff's evidence. Inabinet v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 124 Ga. App. 514, 184 S.E.2d 514 (1971); Allied Van Lines v. Hanson, 131 Ga. App. 506, 206 S.E.2d 108 (1974).

Directed verdict for plaintiff not authorized when plaintiff rests. — Under subsection (a) of this section, the defendant, but not the plaintiff, may move for directed verdict at the close of the evidence for the plaintiff, and the trial judge has no authority to direct a verdict for the plaintiff on the plaintiff's motion at this stage of the trial. Kay Enters., Inc. v. Shawmac, Inc., 124 Ga. App. 225, 183 S.E.2d 503 (1971); Carpenter v. Citizens & S. Bank, 143 Ga. App. 765, 240 S.E.2d 106 (1977); Colonial Film & Equip. Co. v. MacMillan Professional Magazines, Inc., 148 Ga. App. 632, 252 S.E.2d 61 (1979).

Direction of verdict prior to presentation of plaintiff's full case erroneous. — When the defendants' motion for directed verdict was made before the plaintiff had a full opportunity to present evidence and was based on the defendants' attorney's allegation that testimony that the plaintiff would elicit from the remaining witnesses would not support the plaintiff's case, the trial judge had no authority to direct a verdict for the defendants on motion at this stage of the trial. Williams v. Buckley, 148 Ga. App. 778, 252 S.E.2d 692 (1979).

There is no requirement that the defendant move for directed verdict prior to close of all evidence. Anderson v. Universal C.I.T. Credit Corp., 134 Ga. App. 931, 216 S.E.2d 719 (1975).

Motion for directed verdict before evidence closed. — There was no error in the trial court's grant of a truck repairer's motion for directed verdict before the evidence was closed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a) as the owner failed to proffer additional evidence on the issue such that the owner could not show that the owner was harmed by the trial court's ruling. Puckette v. John Bailey Pontiac-Buick-GMC Truck, Inc., 311 Ga. App. 138, 714 S.E.2d 750 (2011).

Renewal of a motion for directed verdict at the end of the trial is not required. GLW Int'l Corp. v. Yao, 243 Ga. App. 38, 532 S.E.2d 151 (2000).

Trial court erred in finding that the carpet supplier was required to move for a directed verdict on the issue of attorney fees awarded to the carpet purchaser at the close of all of the evidence and not only at the close of the carpet purchaser's evidence as there was no statutory requirement that a motion for directed verdict be renewed at the end of the trial. Lexmark Carpet Mills, Inc. v. Color Concepts, Inc., 261 Ga. App. 622, 583 S.E.2d 458 (2003).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 is not to be construed to vitiate motion not made immediately after close of evidence. — To construe this section so narrowly as to vitiate a motion for directed verdict unless it is made immediately after close of all the evidence would defeat the motion's general purpose and violate the express legislative intent that the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) be construed to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action. Anderson v. Universal C.I.T. Credit Corp., 134 Ga. App. 931, 216 S.E.2d 719 (1975).

Ruling on motion after verdict returned. — Trial court did not err in deferring the court's ruling on the motion for directed verdict until after the verdict was returned. Steinberg v. City of Atlanta, 213 Ga. App. 491, 444 S.E.2d 873 (1994).

Motion may not be made after jury has been charged. — Because the plaintiff made a motion for directed verdict on the issue of liability of the defendant after the jury was charged, having made no such motion during the trial, nothing was presented for the trial court's ruling nor appellate court's review. Dukes v. Ruth, 203 Ga. App. 246, 416 S.E.2d 565 (1992).

Reopening of motion prior to charge to jury. — Because the defendant moved for a directed verdict at the close of the plaintiff's evidence, renewal of the defendant's motion after close of all the evidence and oral argument, but prior to the court's charge to the jury, was timely made. Anderson v. Universal C.I.T. Credit Corp., 134 Ga. App. 931, 216 S.E.2d 719 (1975).

Motion prior to verdict not improper. — Since a case is viable up to the return of the verdict, and the plaintiff can still withdraw the case from the jury by voluntary dismissal at any time before the verdict via O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41, there is no logical reason why the case could not be withdrawn during such period of viability by a motion for directed verdict, giving the defendant somewhat correlative rights with the plaintiff. Anderson v. Universal C.I.T. Credit Corp., 134 Ga. App. 931, 216 S.E.2d 719 (1975).

Trial judge may grant a post-verdict motion for directed verdict of the winning party. Mayor of Savannah v. Palmerio, 242 Ga. 419, 249 S.E.2d 224 (1978).

Regardless of lack of filing of motion for j.n.o.v. — This section does not by the statute's express terms require that a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict be filed in order to preserve jurisdiction of the trial court to rule on a motion for directed verdict after the verdict itself has been returned. Mayor of Savannah v. Palmerio, 242 Ga. 419, 249 S.E.2d 224 (1978).

Judge may insulate jury charges from review thereby. — Trial judge may insulate jury charges from appellate review by granting a post-verdict motion for a directed verdict, so long as the appellate court determines that the trial court was correct in granting the motion for a directed verdict. Mayor of Savannah v. Palmerio, 242 Ga. 419, 249 S.E.2d 224 (1978).

Correctness of jury instructions moot when directed verdict granted. — When a motion for directed verdict is properly granted, any question as to the correctness of the trial court's instructions to the jury is moot. Mayor of Savannah v. Palmerio, 242 Ga. 419, 249 S.E.2d 224 (1978).

Judgment Notwithstanding Verdict

Federal rule compared. — Former Code 1933, § 110-113 was in substance copied from Rule 50 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the only difference being as to time of filing and provision that a new trial may be prayed in the alternative. Echols v. Thompson, 211 Ga. 299, 85 S.E.2d 423 (1955).

Function of motion j.n.o.v. — Function of motion for judgment non obstante veredicto is not the same as that of a motion for new trial, but is a summary method of disposing of the entire litigation if it is obvious that the party against whom the motion is directed cannot under any circumstances win the case. McClelland v. Carmichael Tile Co., 94 Ga. App. 645, 96 S.E.2d 202 (1956).

Purpose to provide for final disposition. — Sole purpose of a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is to permit a court to review and reconsider a ruling on an antecedent motion for directed verdict, and the ultimate result intended is avoidance of another trial when the law demanded a result for the movant on the first trial. Shetzen v. C.G. Aycock Realty Co., 93 Ga. App. 477, 92 S.E.2d 114 (1956).

Section providing for judgment notwithstanding the verdict (now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50) provides for correction of error in refusing to direct verdict in the first instance, and obviates necessity for a second trial. Shetzen v. C.G. Aycock Realty Co., 93 Ga. App. 477, 92 S.E.2d 114 (1956).

Purpose of adoption of the law providing for motion for judgment notwithstanding verdict was to provide for final disposition of the case by the appellate court if evidence is insufficient to justify the verdict rendered on any theory or if judgment for the losing party in the trial court is demanded by law. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Brackin, 215 Ga. 225, 109 S.E.2d 782 (1959); Kicklighter v. Kicklighter, 217 Ga. 54, 121 S.E.2d 122 (1961).

Purpose of judgment notwithstanding verdict after submission to jury. — Purpose of allowing the trial judge to submit the case to the jury and then grant judgment notwithstanding the verdict is to avoid the necessity of retrial if the appellate court determines that the trial court erred in granting judgment notwithstanding the verdict since under these circumstances the appellate court can simply reinstate the verdict. Mayor of Savannah v. Palmerio, 242 Ga. 419, 249 S.E.2d 224 (1978).

Purpose of a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is to provide for final disposition by the appellate court if evidence is insufficient to justify the verdict rendered on any theory or if judgment for the losing party in the trial court is demanded by the law. Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Parsons, 155 Ga. App. 46, 270 S.E.2d 230 (1980).

Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is simply a reasserted motion for directed verdict, with a second opportunity for the trial court to rule on the motion before time and expenses are incurred and appellate judicial resources are expended. It is an instrument designed to reduce court costs and delay.

Famiglietti v. Brevard Medical Investors, Ltd., 197 Ga. App. 164, 397 S.E.2d 720 (1990).

Applicable solely to civil actions. — Section dealing with judgments notwithstanding the verdict relates solely to pleading, procedure, and practice in trial of civil actions. Wilson v. State, 215 Ga. 775, 113 S.E.2d 607 (1960); Fair v. State, 220 Ga. 750, 141 S.E.2d 431 (1965).

Evidence to be construed most favorably to nonmovant. — In considering a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, the court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the party who secured the jury verdict; and this approach governs appellate courts as well as trial courts. Church's Fried Chicken, Inc. v. Lewis, 150 Ga. App. 154, 256 S.E.2d 916 (1979).

In considering a motion for judgment n.o.v., the court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the party who secured the jury verdict. Bryant v. Colvin, 160 Ga. App. 442, 287 S.E.2d 238 (1981).

In considering a motion for judgment n.o.v., the trial court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the party who secured the jury verdict. United Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Connell, 166 Ga. App. 329, 304 S.E.2d 131 (1983).

On motion for judgment n.o.v., the evidence is to be construed most favorably to the nonmovant. Davis v. Glaze, 182 Ga. App. 18, 354 S.E.2d 845 (1987).

When judgment n.o.v. proper. — If evidence demands verdict for the defendant, it is error to deny the defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Wright Contracting Co. v. Davis, 93 Ga. App. 810, 92 S.E.2d 812 (1956).

Judgment notwithstanding the verdict can be rendered only when evidence demands a verdict contrary to the one returned by the jury. Osborn v. Youmans, 219 Ga. 476, 134 S.E.2d 22 (1963).

It is only if a verdict for one party is demanded as a matter of law and the jury has returned an adverse verdict that a motion for judgment non obstante veredicto will lie. Board of Educ. v. Fredericks, 113 Ga. App. 199, 147 S.E.2d 789 (1966).

Grant of a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is proper only if there is no conflict in the evidence as to any material issue and the evidence introduced, with all reasonable deductions therefrom, demands a particular verdict. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Blankenship Plumbing Co., 153 Ga. App. 335, 265 S.E.2d 66 (1980).

As with a directed verdict, a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is proper only if there is no conflict in the evidence as to any material issue and the evidence introduced, with all reasonable deductions therefrom, shall demand a particular verdict. Hiers-Wright Assocs. v. Manufacturers Hanover Mtg. Corp., 182 Ga. App. 732, 356 S.E.2d 903 (1987).

JNOV in breach of lease action. — Trial court erred in denying a landlord's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 in the tenants' breach of lease action; the landlord could not be charged with failing to consent to an assignment arrangement that was offered to the tenants and was refused. Coordinated Props. v. Johnston, 267 Ga. App. 298, 599 S.E.2d 213 (2004).

JNOV in contraction dispute case. — In a case in which judgment was entered in favor of an independent subcontractor who sued a retailer for injuries occurring while the subcontractor was doing work on the retailer's premises, the retailer was entitled to a judgment notwithstanding the verdict because the retailer exercised no control over the subcontractor's work, and any control over that work was contractually ceded to the subcontractor and to the contractor who hired the subcontractor. Neiman-Marcus Group, Inc. v. Dufour, 268 Ga. App. 104, 601 S.E.2d 375 (2004).

JNOV on conversion and trespass claims. — In a debtor's lawsuit against a bank for breach of contract, trespass, conversion, tortious interference with contractual relations, and tortious interference with business relations, the bank's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict was correctly granted on the conversion and trespass claims because the bank had title, under a management agreement, to the debtor's allegedly converted invoices as receivables, and could keep them. Dalton Diversified, Inc. v. AmSouth Bank, 270 Ga. App. 203, 605 S.E.2d 892 (2004).

JNOV in personal injury action against employer. —

Worker's claim under O.C.G.A. § 51-2-5(4) against a tire manufacturing plant, for which the worker did independent contractor work pursuant to an agreement between the plant and the worker's employer, failed because the plant had no statutory or contractual duty to maintain a forklift or to ensure that the employer properly maintained the forklift, and, accordingly, the trial court should have granted the plant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50; the forklift jumped backwards and due to a malfunctioning emergency brake, the transformer that it was carrying dropped and crushed the worker's arm, and it was noted that the forklift was purchased by the employer but was delivered directly to the plant and remained on those premises. Cooper Tire & Rubber Co. v. Merritt, 271 Ga. App. 16, 608 S.E.2d 714 (2004).

JNOV in will dispute case. — Will proponent's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the issue of undue influence was properly granted to the proponent because the evidence failed to show undue influence, in that the attorney who prepared the will testified that the will proponent was not present at the execution of the will, that the attorney discussed the contents of the will only with the testatrix, and that the testatrix had no doubt about what provisions the testatrix wanted in the will; the record also established that the proponent, who lived with the testatrix during the testatrix's last days, did not isolate the testatrix but that, instead, hospice personnel, friends, and family frequented the testatrix's house between the time when the proponent came to live with the testatrix and the time that the testatrix executed the will. Smith v. Liney, 280 Ga. 600, 631 S.E.2d 648 (2006).

JNOV in properly dispute cases. — In an action involving the sale of land, because no adequate description of the property sought to be sold could be found within the four corners of the parties' final agreement, no exhibits were attached, and the words used in the contract did not provide a sufficient description of the land, the trial court erred in admitting parol evidence to provide a legally sufficient description of the property at issue; hence, the property owners' motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict in favor of the buyer was erroneously denied. McClung v. Atlanta Real Estate Acquisitions, LLC, 282 Ga. App. 759, 639 S.E.2d 331 (2006).

JNOV in property dispute cases. — In a boundary line dispute filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 23-3-61, the trial court properly entered judgment on a jury verdict in favor of the plaintiffs, two landowners, and against their neighbor, and then denied the neighbor a new trial, or alternatively a judgment notwithstanding the verdict as: (1) the boundary line indicated on a plat reflecting the locations of monuments on the parcel owned by two landowners complied with the monuments referenced in the original warranty deed; and (2) the neighbor agreed to a special verdict form allowing the jury to find that the plat submitted by the two landowners accurately and sufficiently showed the true boundary line. Dover v. Higgins, 287 Ga. App. 861, 652 S.E.2d 829 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0402, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 237 (Ga. 2008).

JNOV on personal property issue. — Truck seller and the truck's body shop were entitled to a judgment notwithstanding the verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(b) on the truck purchasers' counterclaim regarding damages to the truck's engine during the truck's bailment for repairs to the truck's body because the purchasers failed to provide evidence as to the truck's post-bailment fair market value. Newberry v. TriStar Auto Group, Inc., 297 Ga. App. 313, 677 S.E.2d 370 (2009).

When JNOV. not proper. — If the evidence supports the verdict for the plaintiff, it is not error for the court to refuse to direct a verdict for the defendant and to overrule the defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Echols v. Thompson, 211 Ga. 299, 85 S.E.2d 423 (1955).

If there is any evidence to support the verdict, denial of a motion for judgment n.o.v. is proper. Maloy v. Planter's Whse. & Lumber Co., 142 Ga. App. 69, 234 S.E.2d 807 (1977).

JNOV in matters involving railroad. — Trial court properly denied a railroad's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict (JNOV) because there was evidence that an employee's view was obstructed by vegetation on the railroad's property adjacent to the roadbed in violation of 49 C.F.R. § 213.37(c); further, the railroad's motion for a JNOV based on the fact that it was the employee's job to inspect for hazards was properly rejected because: (1) the employee was a railroad employee who clearly was performing the employee's normal trackside duties and was an intended beneficiary of the regulation; (2) the regulation was unambiguous; and (3) the Federal Employers' Liability Act, 45 U.S.C. § 51 et seq., was to be liberally construed. Norfolk S. Ry. v. Blackmon, 262 Ga. App. 266, 585 S.E.2d 194 (2003).

JNOV in RICO actions. — In victims' lawsuit against the perpetrator of a fraudulent scheme under the Georgia Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-14-1 et seq., after the victims had previously unsuccessfully sued the perpetrator for fraud and related claims, judgment n.o.v. was properly entered in favor of the perpetrator because the victims' claim was barred by res judicata and collateral estoppel as those claims should have been raised in their previous suits against the perpetrator, which involved the same parties and the same subject matter. Austin v. Cohen, 268 Ga. App. 650, 602 S.E.2d 146 (2004).

Based on evidence that a manufacturer interfered with a distributor's business relationship with its customers by marketing to those customers a product the manufacturer had no legal right to sell, that claim was erroneously set aside. Fertility Tech. Res., Inc. v. Lifetek Med., Inc., 282 Ga. App. 148, 637 S.E.2d 844 (2006).

JNOV in interference with business relations claim. — Because sufficient evidence was presented to support a distributor's tortious interference with a contractual or business relationship claim alleged against a manufacturer, and because such was an intentional tort, demonstrating evidence of the manufacturer's bad faith, when coupled with other evidence of bad faith, an attorney-fee award under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11 was authorized; thus, the trial court erred in setting the award aside in granting the manufacturer's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Fertility Tech. Res., Inc. v. Lifetek Med., Inc., 282 Ga. App. 148, 637 S.E.2d 844 (2006).

JNOV in class action suits. — Because there was some evidence supporting the jury's verdict in favor of homeowners in the homeowners' class action against a private water system owner, the trial court did not err in denying the owner's motion for new trial and the owner's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict on general grounds, and since the case involved disputed factual issues, the trial court properly allowed the jury to resolve those issues; although the owner argued that the jury did not interpret the facts as the owner believes the jury should have, that argument presented no grounds that would allow the court of appeals to find error by the trial court in refusing to overturn the jury's verdict. Jones v. Forest Lake Vill. Homeowners Ass'n, 304 Ga. App. 495, 696 S.E.2d 453 (2010).

JNOV not proper in auto accident case. — Trial court properly denied the plaintiffs' JNOV motion pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 in an action arising from an auto accident; the driver did not admit liability, the relevant facts were disputed, and the fact that the driver was unable to stop in time to avoid the collision did not demand a finding that the driver was following too closely in violation of O.C.G.A. § 40-6-49. Cameron v. Peterson, 264 Ga. App. 1, 589 S.E.2d 834 (2003).

JNOV not proper in promissory estoppel case. — Trial court did not err in denying a motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict as to the sellers' claim for promissory estoppel because: (1) the promise to purchase was to be performed within a reasonable time based upon clear and unambiguous terms, and the closing date was set for a day certain in the immediate future; (2) all actions necessary for the sale, except the actual closing, occurred prior to the first closing date, including audits, examination of financial records, change in inventory code, and delivery of additional inventory; (3) all the basic terms of the promise were clear and certain so as to be enforceable; and (4) the sellers established reasonable reliance to their detriment based on their rejection of another potential purchaser's bona fide offer to purchase, change in value of the property, sale of inventory later needed, and other harm shown by the evidence. Rental Equip. Group, LLC v. Maci, LLC, 263 Ga. App. 155, 587 S.E.2d 364 (2003).

JNOV not proper in negligence and product liability claim. — Corporate defendant, in a negligence and product liability action, was not entitled to a new trial or judgment notwithstanding the verdict because the jury was properly charged that each individual tortfeasor's conduct did not have to constitute a substantial contributing factor in the plaintiff's injury in order to be considered a proximate cause thereof. John Crane, Inc. v. Jones, 278 Ga. 747, 604 S.E.2d 822 (2004).

JNOV not proper in inverse condemnation case. — Trial court properly denied a city's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict in an inverse condemnation case because a corporation showed that the corporation's lease was unique: (1) the location was within the traveling range of the corporation's customers who delivered the raw materials and of its customers who purchased the company's finished soil product; (2) some key customers were unwilling to travel very far and if the corporation relocated, the corporation would have lost their business; (3) the property permitted access for large trucks and contained a railroad spur; (4) the property had a dedicated scale house and a building for storing equipment; and (5) the corporation was using all of the nearly 20 acres. City of Atlanta v. Landmark Envtl. Indus., 272 Ga. App. 732, 613 S.E.2d 131 (2005).

JNOV not proper in Hazardous Site Response Act claim. — JNOV was improperly granted to a chemical supplier in a property owner's suit to recover under the Georgia Hazardous Site Response Act (HSRA), O.C.G.A. § 12-8-90 et seq., and under theories of nuisance and trespass for the hazardous waste contamination of the owner's property because while there was testimony that actions of the dry cleaning business in the shopping center on the owner's property may also have contributed to the contamination, there was evidence from which the jury could conclude that the supplier spilled solvent on many occasions over its 30-year history of monthly deliveries to the cleaners and contributed to the contamination even if its spillage was not the sole cause of contamination. Sprayberry Crossing P'ship v. Phenix Supply Co., 274 Ga. App. 364, 617 S.E.2d 622 (2005).

JNOV not proper in breach of fiduciary duty claim. — Trial court did not err in denying the plaintiffs' motion for a new trial or, alternatively, judgment notwithstanding the verdict, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 5-5-25 and 9-11-50, after a jury verdict was rendered in favor of the defendant in a shareholder dispute arising from an agreement for purchase of the defendant's shares as the direct action by the defendant on a counterclaim for breach of fiduciary duty/usurpation of corporate opportunity was properly brought under Thomas v. Dickens, 250 Ga. 772 (1983) because there were exceptional circumstances, despite the fact that the corporation did not fit the definition of a statutory close corporation under O.C.G.A. § 14-2-902. Telcom Cost Consulting, Inc. v. Warren, 275 Ga. App. 830, 621 S.E.2d 864 (2005).

JNOV not proper in contest over partnership agreement. — General partners' (GPs') motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict was properly denied as: (1) a $ 1.6 million award for the limited partners (LPs) for breach of a partnership agreement was supported by expert testimony that damages could be calculated by taking the value of the LPs' interest in a partnership and estimating the increase in that value if it were invested in a manner similar to the LPs' other investments; (2) even if a previous judge's comments as to the determination of damages was an order, it was not the law of the case; (3) the GPs did not object to the verdict form, which allowed the jury free reign to set damages; and (4) the GPs' claim that the award did not directly correspond with specific evidence was properly rejected. Kellett v. Kumar, 281 Ga. App. 120, 635 S.E.2d 310 (2006).

JNOV not proper in negligence case. — In a negligence action seeking damages for a disabling injury filed against a property owner by a friend who assisted the owner in building a fence because the evidence supported a verdict against the friend, and the trial court's various evidentiary rulings regarding: (1) the admission of evidence under both the medical records and business records exceptions to the hearsay rule; (2) the admission of evidence regarding the parties' friendship; (3) the impeachment of the friend's credibility; (4) the opening statement presented by the owner's counsel; and (5) the use of a leading question regarding the friend's use of Oxycontin, did not support a different result, the friend was not entitled to a new trial or judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Imm v. Chaney, 287 Ga. App. 606, 651 S.E.2d 855 (2007).

JNOV not proper in subrogation claim. — Trial court did not err in denying a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict after a jury awarded damages on an insurer's subrogation claim as there could be no apportionment of damages with a city, even if the city was deemed liable, because the city was not a party to the action pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 51-12-33. Universal Underwriters Group v. Southern Guar. Ins. Co., 297 Ga. App. 587, 677 S.E.2d 760 (2009).

Statute allows a trial court to defer the ruling on a motion for directed verdict and submit the case to the jury, subject to later determination of the legal questions raised by the motion. Mayor of Savannah v. Palmerio, 242 Ga. 419, 249 S.E.2d 224 (1978).

Subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 allows the device of a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict to be used when a motion for directed verdict does not end a trial and the trial proceeds to verdict. It is narrow, however, and does not permit reopening the case for new legal issues which are thought of retrospectively, with hindsight. Famiglietti v. Brevard Medical Investors, Ltd., 197 Ga. App. 164, 397 S.E.2d 720 (1990).

Judgment notwithstanding the verdict does not actually change the verdict, but merely enters a judgment notwithstanding the verdict, thus, avoiding application of the old rule that it was error to direct a verdict and was never error to refuse to direct a verdict, and the constitutional problems involved therein as well as to eliminate a new trial. Ammons v. Horton, 128 Ga. App. 273, 196 S.E.2d 318 (1973).

Standard for granting judgment notwithstanding verdict is the same as that for directed verdict. Russell v. State, 155 Ga. App. 555, 271 S.E.2d 689 (1980).

Appellant's standard of review in a judgment notwithstanding the verdict case is whether the evidence, with all reasonable deductions therefrom, demanded a verdict contrary to that returned by the fact-finder. Bagley v. Robertson, 265 Ga. 144, 454 S.E.2d 478 (1995).

General grounds of motion for new trial and for JNOV are not always identical. Shetzen v. C.G. Aycock Realty Co., 93 Ga. App. 477, 92 S.E.2d 114 (1956).

It was never intended that the movant be made to choose between moving for new trial and moving for judgment notwithstanding verdict. Shetzen v. C.G. Aycock Realty Co., 93 Ga. App. 477, 92 S.E.2d 114 (1956).

Motion granted when only one reasonable conclusion possible. — Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict may be granted only when, without weighing the credibility of the evidence, there can be but one reasonable conclusion as to the proper judgment; if there is conflicting evidence or if there is insufficient evidence to make a "one-way" verdict proper, judgment notwithstanding the verdict should not be awarded. Church's Fried Chicken, Inc. v. Lewis, 150 Ga. App. 154, 256 S.E.2d 916 (1979); Bryant v. Colvin, 160 Ga. App. 442, 287 S.E.2d 238 (1981).

When jury's verdict not supported by evidence. — If the verdict returned is not supported by any evidence, denial of a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict is error. Ford Motor Credit Co. v. Parsons, 155 Ga. App. 46, 270 S.E.2d 230 (1980); City of Atlanta v. West, 160 Ga. App. 609, 287 S.E.2d 558 (1981).

Judgment notwithstanding the verdict is improperly granted in the face of conflicting evidence, and an appellate court must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the party who secured the jury verdict. Pendley v. Pendley, 251 Ga. 30, 302 S.E.2d 554 (1983).

Error to strike evidence, then rule on motion. — Motion to strike is not a precursor to a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Moreover, the court may not excise some of the evidence admitted and then rule on the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict viewed with that evidence absent. Famiglietti v. Brevard Medical Investors, Ltd., 197 Ga. App. 164, 397 S.E.2d 720 (1990).

Standard for judgment notwithstanding mistrial. — To warrant a grant of a motion for judgment notwithstanding mistrial, the same test obtains as that for directed verdict. Long v. Walls, 226 Ga. 737, 177 S.E.2d 373 (1970).

Motion for judgment notwithstanding mistrial is analogous to a motion for directed verdict or for judgment notwithstanding the verdict in that the motion can be sustained only when there is no conflict in the evidence as to any material issue and when the evidence introduced, with all reasonable deductions therefrom, shall demand a particular verdict. Georgia Power Co. v. Purser, 152 Ga. App. 181, 262 S.E.2d 473 (1979); Findley v. McDaniel, 158 Ga. App. 445, 280 S.E.2d 858 (1981).

Motion for directed verdict is a condition precedent to a subsequent motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Whitman v. Burden, 155 Ga. App. 67, 270 S.E.2d 235 (1980).

Requirement of directed verdict as prerequisite. — It is a condition precedent to a motion for judgment notwithstanding verdict that a motion for directed verdict must have been made and denied. Southwind Trucking Co. v. Harvey, 96 Ga. App. 715, 101 S.E.2d 223 (1957); Fulton v. Chattanooga Publishing Co., 100 Ga. App. 573, 112 S.E.2d 15 (1959), rev'd on other grounds, 215 Ga. 880, 114 S.E.2d 138 (1960).

Motion for directed verdict is a prerequisite to a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and if it appears from the record that no such motion was made, the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict cannot be considered on appeal. Kiser v. Kiser, 101 Ga. App. 511, 114 S.E.2d 397 (1960).

Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict may be granted only when a valid motion for directed verdict has been made by the movant and erroneously denied. Daniel v. Weeks, 217 Ga. 388, 122 S.E.2d 564 (1961); Simmons v. Watson, 221 Ga. 765, 147 S.E.2d 322 (1966); Maloy v. Planter's Whse. & Lumber Co., 142 Ga. App. 69, 234 S.E.2d 807 (1977).

If the record does not disclose the making of a motion for directed verdict, there is no error in the refusal of the trial judge to grant a motion for judgment non obstante veredicto. DeKalb County v. Brewer, 111 Ga. App. 269, 141 S.E.2d 234 (1965); Tadlock v. Duncan, 215 Ga. App. 441, 451 S.E.2d 80 (1994).

When error is assigned on overruling of a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict made after trial, but no motion for directed verdict was made, no question is presented for determination by the appellate court. Lumbermen's Mut. Ins. Co. v. Blackwell, 112 Ga. App. 398, 145 S.E.2d 287 (1965).

Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict may be entertained only if the movant has previously moved for a directed verdict and is seeking to have judgment entered "in accordance with" that motion. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Rhee, 160 Ga. App. 468, 287 S.E.2d 257 (1981).

If review of the record and transcript reveals that no motion for directed verdict was made in the case, it follows that a motion for judgment n.o.v. was not appropriate, and the trial court erred in granting the judgment. Gray v. Miller, 166 Ga. App. 792, 305 S.E.2d 651 (1983).

If the ground asserted in defendant's motion for judgment n.o.v. in the trial court is argued on appeal, but it was not contained in the motion for directed verdict, as required by subsection (b), it will not be considered on appeal. Wehunt v. ITT Bus. Communications Corp., 183 Ga. App. 560, 359 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

Grounds asserted in the motion for judgment n.o.v. and on appeal were not considered because those grounds were not asserted in support of the motions for directed verdict. Glenridge Unit Owners Ass'n v. Felton, 183 Ga. App. 858, 360 S.E.2d 418 (1987); Tanner v. Gilleland, 186 Ga. App. 377, 367 S.E.2d 257 (1988).

Questions concerning the evidence offered to support a claim for attorney fees raised in a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict would not be reviewed because the defendants did not raise the questions in the defendants' motion for a directed verdict. Dee v. Sweet, 218 Ga. App. 18, 460 S.E.2d 110 (1995).

In light of the guardians' failure to move for a directed verdict during the case, the trial court correctly found that their motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict was procedurally barred under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(b). Moore v. Stewart, 315 Ga. App. 388, 727 S.E.2d 159 (2012).

Equivalent motion held sufficient.

— Motion made at the conclusion of the plaintiff's evidence, described by the movant as one for "involuntary nonsuit," was a sufficient prerequisite for a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Jones v. Spindel, 128 Ga. App. 88, 196 S.E.2d 22 (1973).

Time of making motion for directed verdict.

— Although subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 provides that a motion for judgment n.o.v. may be made "whenever a motion for a directed verdict made at the close of all the evidence is denied," the statutory phrase "at the close of all the evidence" does not deny to a defendant who has moved for a directed verdict at the close of the plaintiff's evidence the opportunity to move for judgment n.o.v. on the grounds presented in the plaintiff's motion for directed verdict. Marett v. Pro-

Professional Ins. Careers, Inc., 201 Ga. App. 178, 410 S.E.2d 373 (1991); Professional Consulting Servs. of Ga., Inc. v. Ibrahim, 206 Ga. App. 663, 426 S.E.2d 376 (1992).

Grounds for motion same as grounds for directed verdict. — Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict must be based on the same grounds raised initially in the motion for directed verdict, for it is in effect only a new ruling on a renewed motion. Famiglietti v. Brevard Medical Investors, Ltd., 197 Ga. App. 164, 397 S.E.2d 720 (1990).

In an action among members of a limited liability company (LLC) that included a breach of contract by a physician against the LLC, in which the physician was awarded attorney fees, the trial court erred in granting judgment notwithstanding the verdict to the LLC on the issue of attorney fees because the LLC failed to raise, in the LLC's motion for directed verdict, the claim that the physician failed to apportion the proof of attorney fees among the claims. James E. Warren, M.D., P.C. v. Weber & Warren Anesthesia Servs., 272 Ga. App. 232, 612 S.E.2d 17 (2005).

In a negligence action by an automobile driver, a trial court erred in granting a judgment notwithstanding the verdict (JNOV) under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(b) to the driver and amending the verdict to include a truck driver in the punitive damages portion thereof as the driver's motion for directed verdict made after the appellants, the truck driver, the driver's employer, and the employer's insurer, rested only addressed the issue of the truck driver's and the employer's liability for compensatory damages. Am. Material Servs. v. Giddens, 296 Ga. App. 643, 675 S.E.2d 540 (2009).

Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict may be considered only when based upon a motion for directed verdict timely made, that is, at the close of all the evidence. Battle v. Yancey Bros. Co., 157 Ga. App. 277, 277 S.E.2d 280 (1981); Buffington v. Haldi, 210 Ga. App. 542, 436 S.E.2d 740 (1993).

Motion filed prior to judgment void. — Motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict that is filed prior to entry of judgment on the verdict is void. Wall v. Citizens & S. Bank, 153 Ga. App. 29, 264 S.E.2d 523 (1980), aff'd, 247 Ga. 216, 274 S.E.2d 486 (1981), overruled on other grounds, McKeever v. State, 189 Ga. App. 445, 375 S.E.2d 899 (1988).

Record as the record exists at the close of trial controls whether a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict should be granted. DeLoach v. Myers, 215 Ga. 255, 109 S.E.2d 777 (1959).

Hearing of motion before transcript of evidence available. — As a motion for new trial may be passed on before the transcript of evidence is filed, and as a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict may be joined with the motion for new trial with a prayer for relief in the alternative, if the court is familiar with the evidence, such latter motion may be heard and, if proper, granted, even though the transcript is not physically available at the time. Castile v. Rich's, Inc., 131 Ga. App. 586, 206 S.E.2d 851 (1974).

Party cannot file, by amending new trial motion, late motion for judgment n.o.v. — If a party after suffering an adverse judgment filed only a motion for new trial within the 30-day period specified in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50, then after the 30-day period expired the party sought to file, in the form of an amendment to the new trial motion, a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict, the latter motion must be considered invalid. Preferred Risk Ins. Co. v. Boykin, 174 Ga. App. 269, 329 S.E.2d 900, cert. denied, 254 Ga. 349, 331 S.E.2d 879 (1985).

Error based on failure to grant motion not considered when directed verdict not asked for at close of evidence. — Because a motion for directed verdict was made by the defendant at the close of the plaintiff's evidence and was denied, and then evidence was offered by the defendant, who failed to renew the motion at the close of all the evidence, the enumeration of error based on failure to grant a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict cannot be considered. Battle v. Yancey Bros. Co., 157 Ga. App. 277, 277 S.E.2d 280 (1981).

Reservation of ruling on pending motion. — Because a motion for directed verdict, renewed at the close of the case, was preserved by the court's reserving ruling until after the jury's verdict, the court's ruling on the pending motion for directed verdict and grant of j.n.o.v. based on it without a formal motion for j.n.o.v. was not error. Brandvain v. Ridgeview Inst., Inc., 188 Ga. App. 106, 372 S.E.2d 265 (1988), aff'd, 259 Ga. 376, 382 S.E.2d 597 (1989).

Conditional ruling on motion for new trial. — Because the defendant moved for judgment notwithstanding the verdict or, in the alternative, for a new trial, and the trial court granted the j.n.o.v. motion, the case would be remanded for a conditional determination on the new trial motion. Ogletree v. Navistar Int'l Transp. Corp., 221 Ga. App. 363, 471 S.E.2d 287 (1996).

Trial court erred in denying a city's motion for a new trial because a corporation failed to cite evidentiary support for the difference between the amount that its expert considered for abandoned processed soil product and the amount of the jury's award. City of Atlanta v. Landmark Env'tl. Indus., 272 Ga. App. 732, 613 S.E.2d 131 (2005).

Right of voluntary dismissal after mistrial. — If a mistrial has been declared due to the inability of the jury to reach a verdict, and the defendant thereafter files a timely motion for judgment notwithstanding the mistrial, the plaintiff's right of voluntary dismissal is not restored unless and until that motion has been denied. LeRoux v. Levine, 194 Ga. App. 381, 390 S.E.2d 629 (1990).

Motion is not tool for opening new legal issues. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(b) allows the device of a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict to be used when a motion for directed verdict does not end a trial and it proceeds to verdict; it is narrow, however, and does not permit reopening the case for new legal issues that are thought of retrospectively, with hindsight. Therefore, the developers' contention that an attorney fee award was based on a legal bill containing inadmissible hearsay did not preserve the denial of their motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict for appeal when the developers failed to raise the argument in the developers' motions for directed verdict. Lincoln v. Tyler, 258 Ga. App. 374, 574 S.E.2d 440 (2002), overruled on other grounds by Monterrey Mexican Rest. of Wise, Inc. v. Leon, 282 Ga. App. 439, 638 S.E.2d 879 (2006).

Standard of review on appeal. — Standard for granting a judgment notwithstanding the verdict is the same as that for a motion for directed verdict; it is warranted only when no conflict exists as to any material issue, and the evidence presented, together with all reasonable inferences, demands a certain verdict. On appeal, a court reviews the denial of either motion under the any evidence standard. Bacon v. Volvo Serv. Ctr., Inc., 266 Ga. App. 543, 597 S.E.2d 440 (2004).

JNOV in asbestos related case. — Trial court did not err in denying the manufacturer's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict as evidence was introduced in the decedent's case against the manufacturer to show that the manufacturer produced products containing asbestos, to which the decedent was exposed at the plant where the decedent worked and that such exposure was a contributing factor to the decedent's asbestos-related illness. John Crane, Inc. v. Jones, 262 Ga. App. 531, 586 S.E.2d 26 (2003).

Motion improperly denied. — Limited liability company's (LLC) motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict was properly denied as the member presented evidence of the LLC's collected funds and cash on hand as aids in the jury's determination of damages for breach of contract, which were based on accounts receivable; the jury's verdict was well within the range of the evidence. James E. Warren, M.D., P.C. v. Weber & Warren Anesthesia Servs., 272 Ga. App. 232, 612 S.E.2d 17 (2005).

JNOV in attorney's fees issue. — Trial court erred in denying the doctor's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the issue of attorney fees awarded to the hospital under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11 because the hospital failed to segregate the attorney fees allocable to the hospital's counterclaim, which were recoverable, from those attorney fees incurred in defending against the doctor's suit alleging that the hospital inappropriately revoked the doctor's privileges in violation of the hospital's bylaws and Georgia public policy, which were not recoverable. Whitaker v. Houston County Hosp. Auth., 272 Ga. App. 870, 613 S.E.2d 664 (2005).

JNOV when punitive damages sought. — Trial court erred in denying a doctor's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the issue of punitive damages awarded to a hospital on the hospital's breach of contract claim as punitive damages are not available for breach of contract claims. Whitaker v. Houston County Hosp. Auth., 272 Ga. App. 870, 613 S.E.2d 664 (2005).

JNOV in rescission claim. — Because the alleged illegalities cited by a trustee were incidental to the purpose of the contracts with the investors, those contracts did not require a securities violation or usurious interest rate; thus, it followed that the trial court erred in denying a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the trustee's rescission claim Douglas v. Bigley, 278 Ga. App. 117, 628 S.E.2d 199 (2006).

Because: (1) the appellate court could not agree that the broad statements regarding merger in the business plan between two investment companies and in an investing trustee's testimony rendered the second of these two companies liable for the first company's conduct; (2) the trustee failed to present evidence documenting a merger transaction between the two companies or establishing that either or both companies no longer existed; (3) the evidence failed to show that one of the companies was absorbed into the other, creating a de facto merger; and (4) the trustee failed to show that the companies lacked separate personalities, the jury was not authorized to find the second company liable for the first company's activities; thus, the trial court erred in failing to enter judgment notwithstanding the verdict as to the trustee's claims against the second company. Douglas v. Bigley, 278 Ga. App. 117, 628 S.E.2d 199 (2006).

Trial court erred when the court denied the motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict filed by two relatives in an action by a third relative to quiet title in property that had been owned by a decedent; the deed filed by the third relative did not contain a complete description of the property to which the deed pertained, and therefore, the deed was invalid and could not supply the third relative with good title. Lord v. Holland, 282 Ga. 890, 655 S.E.2d 602 (2008).

New Trials

Paragraph (c)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 does not require the trial court to make findings of fact and conclusions of law. Simon v. Womack, 158 Ga. App. 47, 279 S.E.2d 254 (1981).

Paragraph (c)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50 does not require the trial court to state the reasons for the court's holding on a motion for judgment n.o.v. and, as to a motion for new trial, it applies only when the movant for judgment n.o.v. and the movant for new trial are one and the same party. Jamison v. First Ga. Bank, 193 Ga. App. 219, 387 S.E.2d 375 (1989).

Discretion of judge to end litigation after trial. — Trial judge has discretion remaining after the trial is over, when the proper motions are made, whether to finally end the litigation or not; if the judge grants a new trial, the litigation is not finally disposed of. Wilson v. Matthews, 120 Ga. App. 284, 170 S.E.2d 346 (1969), overruled on other grounds, Jones v. Burton, 238 Ga. 394, 233 S.E.2d 367 (1977).

Motion for new trial may not be filed prior to entry of judgment on the verdict under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50, and if such motion is filed prior to entry of judgment, the motion is void. Wall v. Citizens & S. Bank, 153 Ga. App. 29, 264 S.E.2d 523 (1980), aff'd, 247 Ga. 216, 274 S.E.2d 486 (1981), overruled on other grounds, McKeever v. State, 189 Ga. App. 445, 375 S.E.2d 899 (1988).

Specification of grounds for grant or denial of new trial when j.n.o.v. granted. — Requirement that, in passing upon a motion for new trial, the trial judge shall specify grounds for granting or denying such motion is only applicable under paragraph (c)(1) of this section if the motion for judgment notwithstanding the

Grant of first trial not error unless verdict for opposite party demanded. — Neither subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 22, 43, and 48 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50) nor any other provision changes the law under former Code 1933, § 6-1608 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-5-50), providing that the first grant of a new trial was not error unless the evidence demanded a verdict for the party opposing the motion therefor. Martin v. Denson, 117 Ga. App. 288, 160 S.E.2d 210 (1968).

When the trial court grants separate motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and for a new trial on general grounds, the grant of a motion for new trial is conditional on the appellate court's vacating or reversing the judgment n.o.v.; when the law and facts of the case do not demand a verdict for either party, the first grant of a new trial will not be disturbed on appeal. Hicks v. American Interstate Ins. Co., 158 Ga. App. 220, 279 S.E.2d 517 (1981).

Motion improperly denied. — In an action involving the sale of land, because no adequate description of the property sought to be sold could be found within the four corners of the parties' final agreement, no exhibits were attached, and the words used in the contract did not provide a sufficient description of the land, the trial court erred in admitting parol evidence to provide a legally sufficient description of the property at issue; hence, the property owners' motion for a new trial was erroneously denied. McClung v. Atlanta Real Estate Acquisitions, LLC, 282 Ga. App. 759, 639 S.E.2d 331 (2006).

New trial motion proper means of attacking excessive nominal damages. — Award of $130,000.00 nominal damages, if palpably unreasonable, excessive, or the product of bias, may be set aside, but these are not the criteria for a directed verdict; the motion for a new trial is the proper means of attack. Miller & Meier & Assocs. v. Diedrich, 174 Ga. App. 249, 329 S.E.2d 918, aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 254 Ga. 734, 334 S.E.2d 308, vacated in part on other grounds, 176 Ga. App.

Granting directed verdict at new trial authorized. — At a second trial following the grant of the plaintiff's motion for a new trial, the trial court was authorized to dismiss the defendant's counterclaims and grant a directed verdict for the plaintiff. Tyson v. Cheek Mechanical & Elec. Serv., Inc., 218 Ga. App. 134, 460 S.E.2d 536 (1995).

JNOV after general verdict. — In an action filed by a trustee alleging various claims, including breach of contract, rescission, breach of fiduciary duty, and fraud against two investors and their two companies, while evidence supported some, but not all of a trustee's claims, because the jury returned a general verdict, it was difficult to decipher on which claims the jury found the defendants liable, warranting a new trial on remand; but, judgment notwithstanding the verdict should have been entered against the second company as to all claims. Douglas v. Bigley, 278 Ga. App. 117, 628 S.E.2d 199 (2006).

When a directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50(a) on medical expenses was erroneously granted in a suit based on a vehicular collision, a new trial was required because after the directed verdict, the jury awarded general damages, and the appellate court was unable to conclude that the error was harmless since it could not determine if the jury factored the medical bills into account in awarding the general damages. Allen v. Spiker, 301 Ga. App. 893, 689 S.E.2d 326 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0740, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 454 (Ga. 2010).

Failure to hold new trial on remand. — On remand, because the only relief sought by a distributor in a contract action with a buyer was a new trial, and not the denial of a directed verdict or JNOV, the trial court erred in entering judgment in favor of the distributor without conducting a new trial; moreover, the buyer was not foreclosed from presenting additional or different evidence in support of the buyer's claim for lost profits in the trial. Strickland & Smith, Inc. v. Williamson, 281 Ga. App. 784, 637 S.E.2d 170 (2006).

As a former husband failed to seek a directed verdict in the trial court, the husband could not argue on appeal that the court should enter judgment in the husband's favor as a matter of law based on the insufficiency of the evidence in a matter, wherein the husband was sued for alleged nonpayment under a promissory note; however, the husband was not barred on appeal from arguing that a new trial was warranted. Cawley v. Bennett, 293 Ga. App. 46, 666 S.E.2d 438 (2008).

9-11-52. Findings by the court.

(a) In ruling on interlocutory injunctions and in all nonjury trials in courts of record, the court shall upon request of any party made prior to such ruling, find the facts specially and shall state separately its conclusions of law. If an opinion or memorandum of decision is filed, it will be sufficient if the findings and conclusions appear therein. Findings shall not be set aside unless clearly erroneous, and due regard shall be given to the opportunity of the trial court to judge the credibility of the witnesses.

(b) This Code section shall not apply to actions involving uncontested divorce, alimony, and custody of minors, nor to motions except as provided in subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-41. The requirements of subsection (a) of this Code section may be waived in writing or on the record by the parties.

(c) Upon motion made not later than 20 days after entry of judgment, the court may make or amend its findings or make additional findings and may amend the judgment accordingly. If the motion is made with a motion for new trial, both motions shall be made within 20 days after entry of judgment. The question of the sufficiency of the evidence to support the findings may be raised on appeal whether or not the party raising the question has made in the trial court an objection to findings or a motion for judgment. When findings or conclusions are not made prior to judgment to the extent necessary for review, failure of the losing party to move therefor after judgment shall constitute a waiver of any ground of appeal which requires consideration thereof. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

FINDINGS, GENERALLY
WHEN FINDINGS NECESSARY
REVIEW OF FINDINGS ON APPEAL
MOTIONS FOR AMENDMENT AND NEW TRIAL

General Consideration

Default judgments. — When the judgment entered against the defendant is by default, compliance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52 is not required. Smith v. Mack, 161 Ga. App. 95, 289 S.E.2d 299 (1982).

Motion to set aside a default judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 does not come within the ambit of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52. Jones v. Christian, 165 Ga. App. 165, 300 S.E.2d 1 (1983).

Applicability. — Award of attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 had to be vacated and remanded for reconsideration when the trial court had not made findings of fact and conclusions of law supporting the award as such findings and conclusions were mandatory and did not have to be requested under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a); furthermore, the lack of findings of fact and conclusions of law in the trial court's order overcame the presumption of regularity of all proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction. Gilchrist v. Gilchrist, 287 Ga. App. 133, 650 S.E.2d 795 (2007).

Hearsay. — Only after making the finding of deprivation may the court consider hearsay. In re D.S., 212 Ga. App. 203, 441 S.E.2d 412 (1994).

Request filed on same day as notice of appeal. — Court could not consider commercial tenant's argument that tenant's motion for findings of fact and conclusions of law was refused; even assuming that the tenant filed a motion that complied with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52, the motion was untimely because the motion was filed on the same day as the notice of appeal, filing of which deprived the trial court of the power to affect the judgment appealed. Keita v. K & S Trading, 292 Ga. App. 116, 663 S.E.2d 362 (2008).

Failure of plaintiff to make a timely request for findings of fact and conclusions of law was a waiver of the plaintiff's claim that the trial court should have made such findings and conclusions, and nothing was presented for appellate review. Cage v. Chase Home Mtg. Corp., 212 Ga. App. 861, 443 S.E.2d 504 (1994).

When the appellants failed to request that the trial court make findings of fact and conclusions of law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a) prior to the entry of the court's order, it was unnecessary for the trial court to make any such findings. Youngblood v. Youngblood, 263 Ga. App. 820, 589 S.E.2d 602 (2003).

Waiver by failure to make postjudgment motion. — Appellant who intends to argue that a trial court's findings are inadequate or incomplete waives that argument by failing to make the postjudgment motion referenced in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(c). In such cases, an appellate court does not remand for additional findings but simply affirms. Brannon v. Perryman Cemetery, Ltd., 308 Ga. App. 832, 709 S.E.2d 33 (2011).

Request made after court's ruling.

— Trial court, following the grant of an injunction requiring the manager of an adult day care center to hand over control of the center to the owner, was not required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law because the manager's request was not made until after the injunction had issued. Kim v. First One Group, LLC, 305 Ga. App. 861, 700 S.E.2d 729 (2010).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by issuing an order that did not include findings of fact and conclusions of law and in failing to amend the court's order to include such findings and conclusions after a debtor filed a request pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52 because the issues presented in the trial court were clearly reflected in the record, the only witness to testify at trial was the debtor, and the resolution of the issues depended on the law as applied to the undisputed facts; O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(c) applied because the debtor did not file a motion asking the trial court to enter findings of fact and conclusions of law until after the trial court entered the court's judgment on the debtor's counterclaim. Sevostiyanova v. Tempest Recovery Servs., 307 Ga. App. 868, 705 S.E.2d 878 (2011).

Request made after entry of judgment.

— In divorce proceedings, because a former spouse moved for findings of fact after entry of the judgment, the trial court had the discretion to grant the motion for findings of fact but was not required to do so under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(c). Hunter v. Hunter, 289 Ga. 9, 709 S.E.2d 263 (2011).

No error in declining to amend judgment.

— Trial court did not err in declining to amend a judgment prohibiting a limited liability company (LLC) from making any permanent changes to the surface of the property owners' land in replacing a sewer pipe by including the additional finding that the owners could not make any permanent changes to the surface of the easement until installation of the new sewer pipe because the issue of the owners' planned construction and any potential claims related thereto were not included in the pre-trial order as matters for determination, and the LLC had not previously requested any declaratory or injunctive relief pertaining to that issue prior to the entry of judgment. Parris Props., LLC v. Nichols, 305 Ga. App. 734, 700 S.E.2d 848 (2010).

Findings, Generally

Subsection (a) mandatory. — Requirement in subsection (a) of Ga. L. 1969, p. 645, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52) that the trial court find the facts specially and state separately the court's conclusions of law thereon and enter judgment pursuant to Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 58 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58) is mandatory and not discretionary. Spivey v. Mayson, 124 Ga. App. 775, 186 S.E.2d 154 (1971); Booker v. J.T. Bickers Realty Co., 127 Ga. Findings of fact and conclusions of law required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52 are mandatory. Frasier v. Department of Human Resources, 159 Ga. App. 1, 282 S.E.2d 667 (1981).

Findings requirement not applicable to permanent injunctions. — City of Atlanta's argument that the trial court's order granting a permanent injunction was deficient because the order did not contain findings of fact and conclusions of law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a) failed as § 9-11-52(a) only applied to interlocutory injunctions. City of Atlanta v. S. States Police Benevolent Ass'n, 276 Ga. App. 446, 623 S.E.2d 557 (2005).

Requirements applicable in both state and superior courts. — Subsection (a) of this section is applicable to the State Court of Cobb County. General Fin. Corp. v. Hester, 137 Ga. App. 367, 223 S.E.2d 763 (1976).

Requirement that judge make written findings of fact and conclusions of law, unless waived, applies to the various state courts as well as the superior courts of this state. Risk v. Turner Coal & Brick Co., 139 Ga. App. 232, 228 S.E.2d 210 (1976); Dyna-Comp Corp. v. Selig Enters., Inc., 143 Ga. App. 462, 238 S.E.2d 571 (1977).

In absence of waiver, subsection (a) of this section is mandatory and failure to comply with the subsection requires reversal. Motes v. Stanton, 237 Ga. 440, 228 S.E.2d 831 (1976).

Purpose of findings of fact is three-fold: as an aid in the trial judge's process of adjudication; for purposes of res judicata and estoppel by judgment; and as an aid to the appellate court on review. Spivey v. Mayson, 124 Ga. App. 775, 186 S.E.2d 154 (1971); General Teamsters Local 528 v. Allied Foods, Inc., 228 Ga. 479, 186 S.E.2d 527 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 1041, 92 S. Ct. 1313, 31 L. Ed. 2d 582 (1972).

Reason for requiring findings of fact and conclusions of law is to assist appellate court in the court's review of the merits of an appeal. Coleman v. Coleman, 238 Ga. 183, 232 S.E.2d 57 (1977).

More than mere legal conclusion required. — When the court order concerning the adoption issue stated only: "The petition for final adoption coming on to be heard and the court having proceeded to a full hearing on the petition and the examination of the parties at interest in open court, under oath, and having given consideration to the investigative report of the Department of Human Resources and the recommendation therein contained, the court is satisfied that it is not in the best interest of (the child) that this adoption be approved," such order constituted a mere legal conclusion not supported by the mandatory findings of fact required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52. Brant v. Bazemore, 173 Ga. App. 294, 325 S.E.2d 905 (1985).

Judge's decision on facts as binding on parties as jury's verdict. — When a question of substantive fact (as distinguished from a decision of law) is submitted to the judge for trial without the intervention of a jury, the judge's decision as to the facts is as binding upon the parties as a verdict and may be set aside under the same rules as apply to the vacating of the finding of a jury. Sunn v. Mercury Marine, 166 Ga. App. 567, 305 S.E.2d 6 (1983).

Evidence supporting findings and conclusions need not be recited in order. — Order complies with the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52, notwithstanding the fact that the order does not specify the evidence actually relied upon in making the findings and reaching the conclusions. Siegel v. General Parts

Corp., 165 Ga. App. 339, 301 S.E.2d 292 (1983).

Order based on finding of fact. — Juvenile court's deprivation order was proper as the order was explicitly based on a mother's physical abuse of a child, although the fact was not included as a formal finding of fact; the trial court's reasoning leading to the conclusion of deprivation was clearly laid out. In the Interest of K.J., 268 Ga. App. 843, 602 S.E.2d 861 (2004).

Following a bench trial, the trial court properly awarded a lessee a monetary judgment and the lessor possession of the premises as the clear language of the underlying contract between the parties provided that the parties intended the contract to be a purchase and sale agreement, and the lessor's failure to perform barred the court from enforcing a liquidated damages provision. Thus, the appeals court refused to disturb the trial court's factual findings as such were not clearly erroneous. Lifestyle Home Rentals, LLC v. Rahman, 290 Ga. App. 585, 660 S.E.2d 409 (2008).

Findings of fact are not intended to amount to brief of evidence, and need be made only on issues necessary to disposition of case and upon which judgment was entered. Spivey v. Mayson, 124 Ga. App. 775, 186 S.E.2d 154 (1971); American Century Mtg. Investors v. Strickland, 138 Ga. App. 657, 227 S.E.2d 460 (1976); Siegel v. General Parts Corp., 165 Ga. App. 339, 301 S.E.2d 292 (1983).

Findings of fact should be brief, concise, pertinent, and adjusted to the evidence as reflected by the record; over elaboration and particularization is neither required nor desired. Spivey v. Mayson, 124 Ga. App. 775, 186 S.E.2d 154 (1971).

Findings of fact should not be redundant or argumentative, but should be inclusive enough to afford an intelligent review. Spivey v. Mayson, 124 Ga. App. 775, 186 S.E.2d 154 (1971).

Findings inclusive enough to afford intelligent review. — One purpose of findings is as an aid in the appellate courts' review; hence, findings should be inclusive enough to afford intelligent review. Donaldson v. Hopkins, 132 Ga. App.

713, 209 S.E.2d 131 (1974).

Both end result and process of inquiry to be stated. — Trial judge is to ascertain the facts and to state not only the end result of that inquiry but the process by which the result was reached. Beasley v. Jones, 149 Ga. App. 317, 254 S.E.2d 472 (1979); Wojcik Constr. Co. v. Schell's Concrete Co., 153 Ga. App. 793, 266 S.E.2d 569 (1980); Woodruff v. B-X Corp., 154 Ga. App. 197, 267 S.E.2d 757 (1980).

Mere recitation of events that took place at trial does not satisfy requirements of subsection (a) of this section as to findings and conclusions, nor does recitation in the order denying the motion for new trial. Fred R. Surface & Assocs. v. Worozbyt, 148 Ga. App. 639, 252 S.E.2d 67 (1979).

Mere recitation of events that took place at trial does not satisfy the requirements of subsection (a) of this section. Woodruff v. B-X Corp., 154 Ga. App. 197, 267 S.E.2d 757 (1980); In re D.L.G., 212 Ga. App. 353, 442 S.E.2d 11 (1994).

Dry recitation that certain legal requirements have been met is insufficient to satisfy the requirements of subsection (a) of this section. Beasley v. Jones, 149 Ga. App. 317, 254 S.E.2d 472 (1979).

Paraphrase of statutory requirements. — Paraphrase of statutory requirements for confirmation of a sale under power and an ultimate conclusion will not suffice as findings of fact and conclusions of law. Pruitt v. First Nat'l Bank, 142 Ga. App. 100, 235 S.E.2d 617 (1977).

Discrepancy in amount of judgment asserted by parties and shown in court's record. — When there is a discrepancy between the amount of judgment asserted by the parties and that shown in the trial court's record, and findings of fact and conclusions of law were not made according to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52, the case must be remanded with any aggrieved party free to enter another appeal. Bourdon v. Plank, 170 Ga. App. 711, 318 S.E.2d 312 (1984).

"Findings of fact" which merely state court's answers to material issues are insufficient, especially when they contain no facts based on the evidence supporting those answers. C & H

Couriers, Inc. v. American Mut. Ins. Co., 166 Ga. App. 853, 305 S.E.2d 500 (1983).

Court may request counsel to prepare findings and conclusions, which the judge is at liberty to amend or change in any respect deemed proper; the judge may also prepare the findings and conclusions without assistance of counsel. Spivey v. Mayson, 124 Ga. App. 775, 186 S.E.2d 154 (1971).

Findings to be made prior to judgment. — Legislative intent was that findings of fact and conclusions of law required by subsection (a) of this section be made prior to the rendition of the judgment, not after expiration of the time for appeal. Jacobs Pharmacy Co. v. Richard & Assocs., 229 Ga. 156, 189 S.E.2d 853 (1972).

In a case of great magnitude and complexity, it was an abuse of discretion to deny the defendant's postjudgment motion for the issuance of findings of fact and conclusions of law, even though a formal request was not made prior to judgment. Gold Kist, Inc. v. Wilson, 220 Ga. App. 426, 469 S.E.2d 504 (1996).

Judgment not invalidated for subsequent making of findings. — When findings and conclusions required by subsection (a) of this section were not entered at time judgment was entered, but were subsequently made and transmitted to the reviewing court, the judgment complained of will not be invalidated. Warren v. Walton, 231 Ga. 495, 202 S.E.2d 405 (1973).

Final order signed on behalf of both parties "approved as to form" constitutes valid waiver of requirement that findings of fact and conclusions of law be stated. Rude v. Rude, 241 Ga. 454, 246 S.E.2d 311 (1978).

Waiver of findings. — While findings of fact should be included in the record in all contested civil cases tried by a judge without a jury, if the judgment rendered is approved in writing "as to form" by counsel for the parties, neither party can thereafter complain of a failure to comply with this section, because this section also provides that the requirement for making and including findings of fact in the record may be waived in writing. Stephens v. Stephens, 232 Ga. 69, 205 S.E.2d 295 (1974).

Waiver of argument that findings were insufficient. — When a purchaser of land did not make a postjudgment motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(c) for amended or additional findings, the purchaser waived the argument that a special master's findings of fact did not set forth sufficient findings to justify the conclusions of law. Waters v. Ellzey, 290 Ga. App. 693, 660 S.E.2d 392 (2008).

Mere signature, without any recital to indicate intention, does not constitute a valid waiver of the requirement that the court enter findings of facts and conclusions of law. Motes v. Stanton, 237 Ga. 440, 228 S.E.2d 831 (1976); Rude v. Rude, 241 Ga. 454, 246 S.E.2d 311 (1978).

After approving form of order party cannot complain of lack of findings.

— If findings of facts and conclusions of law by the court are to be insisted upon, time to do it is when proposed order is presented to counsel for approval; after approving the form of the order, a party cannot complain of the court's failure to include findings of fact and conclusions of law. Rude v. Rude, 241 Ga. 454, 246 S.E.2d 311 (1978).

Absence of findings and conclusions not fatal. — Although findings of fact and conclusions of law are mandatory, their absence is not fatal. Kennedy v. Brown, 239 Ga. 286, 236 S.E.2d 632 (1977).

Failure to incorporate findings as amendable defect. — Failure of trial court to incorporate findings of fact and conclusions of law in order modifying the divorce decree was an amendable defect which appeared on the face of the record, not a defect which would warrant setting aside the judgment. Kennedy v. Brown, 239 Ga. 286, 236 S.E.2d 632 (1977).

Since the failure to include findings of fact and conclusions of law in the order in a proceeding under the "Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act", O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 11, T. 19, was an amendable defect appearing on the face of the record, it was not subject to a motion to set aside and the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to set aside judgment. Powell v. State, 166 Ga. App. 780, 305 S.E.2d 646 (1983).

Bare statement of what the court considered in reaching the court's conclusions is not a recitation of how those facts give support to or what constitutes the separate conclusions. Moore v. Farmers Bank, 182 Ga. App. 94, 354 S.E.2d 692 (1987), overruled on other grounds, Underwood v. Underwood, 282 Ga. 643, 651 S.E.2d 736 (2007); In re D.L.G., 212 Ga. App. 353, 442 S.E.2d 11 (1994).

Writing requirement. — Evidentiary hearing on issue of damages following the defendant's default is subject to requirement that findings of fact and conclusions of law be in writing. Marsh v. Way, 170 Ga. App. 300, 316 S.E.2d 599 (1984).

Oral findings stated into the record as supplemented by arguments of counsel will not satisfy the requirement for written findings and conclusions. Aycock v. Morris Indus., Inc., 171 Ga. App. 50, 318 S.E.2d 780 (1984); Beeks v. Consulatech, Inc., 222 Ga. App. 473, 474 S.E.2d 675 (1996).

Oral recitation is not compliance. — Oral recitations of the court's conclusions presented during the hearing are not a substantial compliance with subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52. Chamlee v. DOT, 182 Ga. App. 120, 354 S.E.2d 701 (1987).

Adoption of proposed findings of prevailing party. — When the trial court adopts the verbatim proposed findings and conclusions of the prevailing party, the adequacy of the findings is more apt to be questioned, the losing party may forfeit the party's undeniable right to be assured that the party's position has been thoroughly considered, and the independence of the trial court's thought process may be cast in doubt, but the practice cannot be condemned when there is no evidence that the trial court did not give serious consideration to and review the proposed findings and conclusions eventually adopted. Outdoor Adv. Ass'n v. DOT, 186 Ga. App. 550, 367 S.E.2d 827, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 918, 367 S.E.2d 827 (1988).

Remand to trial court for preparation of findings and conclusions. — When the trial court fails to make findings or to find on a material issue, and an appeal is taken, the appellate court will normally vacate the judgment and remand the action for appropriate findings to be made. Spivey v. Mayson, 124 Ga. App. 775, 186 S.E.2d 154 (1971); Hickok v. Starka Indus., Inc., 151 Ga. App. 668, 261 S.E.2d 418 (1979).

Absence of findings required by subsection (a) of this section does not require reversal of the judgment, but only a remand of the case for the making of such findings. Jacobs Pharmacy Co. v. Richard & Assocs., 229 Ga. 156, 189 S.E.2d 853 (1972).

When findings of fact and conclusions of law required by subsection (a) of this section were neither made nor waived, the case must be remanded with direction that the judge vacate the judgment, prepare or cause to be prepared appropriate findings of fact and conclusions of law, and enter a new judgment thereon, after which the losing party shall be free to enter a new appeal. Medical Personnel Pool v. Middlebrooks, 133 Ga. App. 148, 210 S.E.2d 372 (1974); Gardner v. Goss, 138 Ga. App. 637, 227 S.E.2d 92 (1976); Jones v. Childs, 139 Ga. App. 337, 228 S.E.2d 363 (1976); Smith v. Randolph, 153 Ga. App. 78, 264 S.E.2d 557 (1980).

Judgment rendered without findings of fact and conclusions of law may be vacated on appeal, and conclusions of law and facts supplied at the direction of the appellate court. Kennedy v. Brown, 239 Ga. 286, 236 S.E.2d 632 (1977).

When the trial court's order contains no recitation of the facts the court found to support the court's conclusions, the appeal is remanded with direction that the trial judge vacate the judgment, prepare, or cause to be prepared, appropriate findings of fact and conclusions of law, and enter a new judgment thereon, after which the losing party shall be free to enter another appeal if the losing party should wish to do so. C & H Couriers, Inc. v. American Mut. Ins. Co., 166 Ga. App. 853, 305 S.E.2d 500 (1983).

Case must be remanded when the trial court fails to make findings of fact and conclusions of law in the court's dismissal order, and when neither party waives these findings and conclusions. L & L Elec. Serv., Inc. v. L.K. Comstock & Co.,

168 Ga. App. 780, 310 S.E.2d 557 (1983); Avery Mechanical Contractors v. Quality Mechanical Contractors, 182 Ga. App. 168, 355 S.E.2d 102 (1987).

Judgment granting the state's petition to validate revenue bonds under the Revenue Bond Law, O.C.G.A. § 36-82-60 et seq., was remanded to the trial court because the trial court failed to mention in the judgment the citizen who intervened in the proceedings and to set forth findings of fact and conclusions of law with respect to various grounds pursued by the citizen as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a); prior to the judgment, the citizen requested findings of fact and conclusions of law. Sherman v. Dev. Auth., 314 Ga. App. 237, 723 S.E.2d 528 (2012).

Trial court erred by validating taxable revenue bonds for a county development authority as the order validating the bonds failed to set forth sufficient findings of fact and conclusions of law to support the court's holdings and, thus, failed to satisfy the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a). Sherman v. Dev. Auth., 320 Ga. App. 689, 740 S.E.2d 663 (2013).

When no enumeration of error is directed to court's failure to include findings of fact and conclusions of law, the judgment of trial court will not be reversed upon such ground. Cunnane v. Cunnane, 237 Ga. 650, 229 S.E.2d 431 (1976); Lavender v. Myers, 150 Ga. App. 547, 258 S.E.2d 257 (1979).

Findings proper in a stockholder's case against shareholder. — In a stockholder's suit against a corporation and the corporation's other owners, the trial court's finding that the stockholder paid in full for the stock issued to the stockholder was not clearly erroneous, based on the uncontradicted testimony from the vice-president of the corporation's bookkeeper, corporate record corroborated by financial and tax findings by the corporation, and no inference based on circumstantial evidence was rebutted by direct testimony. Monterrey Mexican Rest. of Wise, Inc. v. Leon, 282 Ga. App. 439, 638 S.E.2d 879 (2006).

Proper findings in divorce action. — In a divorce appeal, a trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in not making the specific total-marital-estate-value finding that the husband belatedly requested, given the other findings the court made in the decree and the evidence in the record. Driver v. Driver, 292 Ga. 800, 741 S.E.2d 631 (2013).

When Findings Necessary

Findings and conclusions generally unnecessary to motions. — Provisions of this section which require findings of fact and conclusions of law are not applicable to motions. Lupo v. Long, 145 Ga. App. 876, 245 S.E.2d 73 (1978).

Dismissal rendered hearing moot. — Since the plaintiff did not perfect service, the trial court correctly dismissed that suit; dismissal of the action rendered a hearing on the merits and compliance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52 moot. Nally v. Bartow County Grand Jurors, 280 Ga. 790, 633 S.E.2d 337 (2006).

Required findings for involuntary dismissal. — Findings of fact and conclusions of law are unnecessary on decisions of motions under Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 or Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 or O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56) or any other motion, except as provided in Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b)). Walker v. Walker, 238 Ga. 273, 232 S.E.2d 554 (1977).

Requirement of subsection (a) of Ga. L. 1970, p. 170, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52) that in all actions in superior court tried upon the facts without a jury, with certain exceptions, the court shall find the facts specially and state separately the court's conclusions of law thereon upon entry of judgment applies when the court enters an involuntary dismissal pursuant to Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b)). Salvador v. Wals, 139 Ga. App. 362, 228 S.E.2d 384 (1976).

Findings not required for counterclaim dismissal. — Court was not required to give legal or factual reasons for dismissing the appellant's counterclaim. Garrett v. Georgia Higher Educ. Assistance Corp., 217 Ga. App. 415, 457 S.E.2d 677 (1995).

Ruling on O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) motion. — Client's claim of a procedural defect in the trial court's handling of the client's complaint seeking to vacate an arbitration award was rejected as the trial court did not have to make findings of fact and conclusions of law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a) when ruling on an O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) claim; even if O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a) applied, the client did not request such findings of fact and conclusions of law. Durden v. Suggs, 271 Ga. App. 688, 610 S.E.2d 640 (2005).

Findings entered only upon request. — Under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52, as it was amended in 1987, entry of findings and conclusions is mandatory only upon request by a party, as opposed to the earlier law, when such entry was required unless waived by the parties. Poor v. Leader Fed. Bank for Savs., 221 Ga. App. 889, 473 S.E.2d 563 (1996).

Alleged requests for findings that were framed as "issues for determination by the jury" were legally insufficient under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52 to mandate that the trial court issue such findings. Progressive Preferred Ins. Co. v. Aguilera, 243 Ga. App. 442, 533 S.E.2d 448 (2000).

Because conflicting evidence was presented concerning the values of the parties' assets as well as the premarital and marital contributions of each spouse, the trial court, sitting as the trier of fact, was required to determine whether and to what extent a particular asset was marital or non-marital, exercise the court's discretion, and then divide the marital property equitably; hence, inasmuch as the issues on appeal depended upon the factual determinations made by the trial court as fact finder, and neither party asked the trial court to make factual findings, the equitable distribution of marital property was not improper as a matter of law or fact. Mathis v. Mathis, 281 Ga. 865, 642 S.E.2d 832 (2007).

Trial court did not err by failing to set forth findings of fact and conclusions of law after a bench trial hearing in the trial court's denial of an estate administrator's petition for leave to recover and sell the estate's property as the administrator never requested such findings and conclusions of law within the time period required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52. Huggins v. Powell, 293 Ga. App. 436, 667 S.E.2d 219 (2008).

In a dispossessory proceeding, as the mortgagors did not request the state court to enter findings of fact and conclusions of law until after a ruling had been entered, the state court was not required to include that information pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a) as to each of the mortgagors' defenses and counterclaims; O.C.G.A. § 44-7-56, which provided a mechanism for trial courts to enter findings of fact and conclusions of law in dispossessory cases being appealed, was permissive, not mandatory. Mackey v. Fed. Nat'l Mortg., 294 Ga. App. 495, 669 S.E.2d 397 (2008).

Because the parties agreed that a verdict would be rendered without findings of fact and conclusions of law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52, the trial court did not err in failing to make findings of fact and conclusions of law. Swainsboro Cabinet Co. v. Ed Johns Constr. Co., 299 Ga. App. 462, 682 S.E.2d 599 (2009).

Appellant who did not request findings of fact and conclusions of law under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a) failed to demonstrate error in the trial court's failure to specify the court's reasons for issuing an interlocutory injunction. Am. Lien Fund, LLC v. Dixon, 286 Ga. 562, 690 S.E.2d 415 (2010).

Because a chairperson of the board of education failed to allege any error in the sufficiency of the trial court's findings of fact or conclusions of law or request that the trial court amend the court's judgment to separately make such findings or conclusions, the chairperson waived the right to challenge the sufficiency of the findings of fact and conclusions of law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52. Cook v. Smith, 288 Ga. 409, 705 S.E.2d 847 (2010).

When disposition of motion in nonjury case requires weighing of evidence and constitutes an adjudication on the merits, findings of fact and conclusions of law are required. Bob Bennett Enters., Inc. v. Trust Co. Bank, 153 Ga. App. 344, 265 S.E.2d 311 (1980).

Order making settlement agreement judgment of the court is something more than decision of a motion such as is contemplated by exemption in this section, but rather is subject to the requirement of findings of fact and separate conclusions of law. Greene v. Colonial Stores, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 35, 232 S.E.2d 381 (1977).

In an uncontested divorce action, the trial court was not required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law. Russ v. Russ, 272 Ga. 438, 530 S.E.2d 469 (2000).

Contested actions for divorce, alimony, and child custody. — Subsection (a) of this section requires findings of facts and conclusions of law in contested divorce, contested alimony, and contested custody of children actions. Githens v. Githens, 234 Ga. 715, 217 S.E.2d 291 (1975).

Contested child custody cases. — Requirement of written findings of fact and conclusions of law applies to contested child custody cases under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52. Jordan v. Jordan, 179 Ga. App. 155, 345 S.E.2d 675 (1986).

Subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52 is mandatory in contested custody of children actions. Couch v. Couch, 177 Ga. App. 773, 341 S.E.2d 303 (1986).

Divorce, alimony, or child custody case in which separation agreement is modified by the trial judge pursuant to the judge's authority is "contested" within the meaning of subsection (a) of this section. Mullis v. Mullis, 238 Ga. 185, 232 S.E.2d 60 (1977).

Child custody cases. — Requirements of subsection (a) of this section are applicable to contested child custody cases. Avery v. Avery, 234 Ga. 729, 218 S.E.2d 19 (1975); Motes v. Stanton, 237 Ga. 440, 228 S.E.2d 831 (1976); Coleman v. Coleman, 238 Ga. 183, 232 S.E.2d 57 (1977).

Adoption of minor. — Adoption case necessarily involves custody of the adopted person, and "custody of minors" is among the matters excepted from the requirement that the trial court make findings of fact and conclusions of law. Grady v. Hill, 128 Ga. App. 153, 195 S.E.2d 794 (1973).

Subsection (a) of this section applies to an adoption proceeding as it is not among any of the exceptions noted therein. Perry v. Thomas, 129 Ga. App. 325, 199 S.E.2d 634 (1973).

Deprivation petitions. — In ruling on deprivation petitions, findings of fact should be made in accordance with subsection (a) of this section. In re A.A.G., 143 Ga. App. 648, 239 S.E.2d 697 (1977).

Since the trial court treated a deprivation determination as part of a custody determination, which does not require specific findings of fact, the case was remanded with direction that the court prepare findings of fact employing statutory standards for determination of deprivation. In re J.B., 241 Ga. App. 679, 527 S.E.2d 275 (1999).

Confirmation of nonjudicial property sale. — Judge hearing confirmation of a nonjudicial sale of property is required to render a judgment with findings of fact. Weems v. McCloud, 619 F.2d 1081 (5th Cir. 1980).

Application for contempt is a motion before the court not coming within the ambit of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52 and, as such, the trial judge does not err in failing to make special findings of fact and conclusions of law. Baldwin v. National Bank, 165 Ga. App. 381, 300 S.E.2d 209 (1983).

Denial of writ of certiorari. — Subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52 does not apply when an application for writ of certiorari is denied. Flacker v. Berr-Nash Corp., 157 Ga. App. 638, 278 S.E.2d 180 (1981), overruled as being incompatible with O.C.G.A. § 5-4-12(b), relating to the standard to be applied in appeals to superior court by application for certiorari. Smith v. Elder, 174 Ga. App. 316, 329 S.E.2d 511 (1985), overruled on other grounds, 228 Ga. App. 864, 493 S.E.2d 51 (1997), overruled on other grounds as stated in, Norris v. Henry County, 255 Ga. App. 718, 566 S.E.2d 428 (2002).

In an equity case, the court's duty to apply facts to law makes findings of fact and conclusions of law necessary, even when the court calls upon a jury for special verdicts. Hanson v. First State Bank & Trust, 254 Ga. 235, 327 S.E.2d 730 (1985).

Injunctions. — When the order granting injunctive relief fails to set forth findings of fact and conclusions of law pursuant to subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52, the requirements of which were not waived by the parties, that order is deficient as a matter of law. Accordingly, the order granting injunctive relief will be remanded for the preparation of written findings of fact and conclusion of law, after which the losing party may appeal to the court of appropriate jurisdiction. Henderson v. Glen Oak, Inc., 179 Ga. App. 380, 346 S.E.2d 842 (1986), aff'd, 256 Ga. 619, 351 S.E.2d 640 (1987).

Consent order voluntarily entered into by both parties which was presented to the trial judge in order to dispose of all matters pending before the court was covered by the exceptions in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52 and did not require written findings of fact and conclusions of law. Elliott v. Flewellyn, 174 Ga. App. 486, 330 S.E.2d 185 (1985).

Ruling on motion for summary judgment. — Trial court is not required to make findings of fact and conclusions of law with order granting summary judgment. Healthdyne, Inc. v. Henry, 144 Ga. App. 52, 240 S.E.2d 259 (1977).

Trial court need not make findings of fact in ruling on a motion for summary judgment. Edwards v. McTyre, 246 Ga. 302, 271 S.E.2d 205 (1980); Brown v. Reeves, 164 Ga. App. 89, 296 S.E.2d 393 (1982).

Grant of motion for summary judgment was excluded from the operation of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52 by the clear language of the section. Karsman v. Portman, 173 Ga. App. 108, 325 S.E.2d 608 (1984).

It is not necessary to include findings of fact and conclusions of law on decisions on motions for summary judgment. Fudge v. Colonial Baking Co., 186 Ga. App. 582, 367 S.E.2d 814 (1988).

Mere entry of findings of fact and conclusions of law in ruling on a motion for summary judgment does not constitute error per se. In certain cases when the trial court makes findings of fact and conclusions of law in ruling on motions for summary judgment, it can be helpful to the appellate courts and instructive to the parties. Harrell v. Louis Smith Mem. Hosp., 197 Ga. App. 189, 397 S.E.2d 746 (1990).

It is not grounds for reversal that the trial court elected not to issue findings of fact and conclusions of law in support of the court's grant of summary judgment. Hopkins v. Hudgins & Co., 218 Ga. App. 508, 462 S.E.2d 393 (1995).

Motion to set aside default judgment pursuant to Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)) does not come within the ambit of Ga. L. 1970, p. 170, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52). Emery Enters., Inc. v. Automatic Fastners Div., 155 Ga. App. 24, 270 S.E.2d 261 (1980).

Application for contempt. — Since application for contempt does not come within definition of a pleading, it is necessarily a motion as defined in Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 7 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-7(b)), and provisions of Ga. L. 1970, p. 170, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52) which require findings of fact and conclusions of law by the trial court are not applicable to motions. Hines v. Hines, 237 Ga. 755, 229 S.E.2d 744 (1976); Fields v. Fields, 240 Ga. 173, 240 S.E.2d 58 (1977).

Hearing on fitness of applicant to take bar examination is not such an action as is contemplated under subsection (a) of this section, requiring finding of facts and conclusions of law in actions tried upon the facts without a jury. Gardner v. Gwinnett Circuit Bar Ass'n, 241 Ga. 614, 247 S.E.2d 64 (1978).

Foreclosure sale price. — Judgment in an action to confirm a foreclosure sale is inadequate if the judgment contains no specific finding concerning the sufficiency of the price brought at sale. Lanier v. Citizens State Bank, 186 Ga. App. 395, 367 S.E.2d 585 (1988).

Revenue bond validation proceeding. — Because a revenue bond validation order contained merely a dry recitation that certain legal requirements had been met, adequate appellate review of the trial court's decision making process was effectively prevented; the validation order did not specifically address a resident's objection that the transaction did not comply with the Development Authorities Law, O.C.G.A. § 36-62-8(b), or the process by which the court came to the court's conclusion that the proposed transaction followed all proper and necessary steps. Sherman v. Dev. Auth., No. A12A0587,

2012 Ga. App. LEXIS 624 (July 5, 2012).

Review of Findings on Appeal

Subsection (a) of this section contains so-called “any evidence rule,” which has long been binding upon appellate courts in this state on appeals taken from nonjury single-judge judgments. Pinkerton & Laws Co. v. Atlantis Realty Co., 128 Ga. App. 662, 197 S.E.2d 749 (1973).

“Any evidence rule” defined. — “Any evidence rule” provides that when a nonjury single-judge judgment is reviewed, neither the Supreme Court nor the Court of Appeals will interfere with a finding by the trial tribunal when there is any evidence to support the finding. Kingston Dev. Co. v. Kenerly, 132 Ga. App. 346, 208 S.E.2d 118 (1974).

“Clearly erroneous” test is same as “any evidence rule.” — In a bench trial the court sits as the trier of fact and the court’s findings shall not be set aside unless clearly erroneous. The “clearly erroneous” test is the same as the “any evidence rule”; thus, an appellate court will not disturb fact findings of a trial court if there is any evidence to sustain those findings. Allen v. Cobb Heating & Air Conditioning Co., 158 Ga. App. 209, 279 S.E.2d 505 (1981); Smith v. Carlton Farms, Inc., 181 Ga. App. 743, 353 S.E.2d 624 (1987); Kimbrell v. Effingham Bd. of Tax Assessors, 191 Ga. App. 544, 382 S.E.2d 388 (1989); CFUS Props., Inc. v. Thornton, 246 Ga. App. 75, 539 S.E.2d 571 (2000); Ins. Indus. Consultants, Inc. v. Essex Invs., Inc., 249 Ga. App. 837, 549 S.E.2d 788 (2001).

When a nonjury judgment by a trial court is reviewed by an appellate court in Georgia, it will not interfere with the findings of fact by the trial tribunal if there is “any evidence” to support the findings. This “any evidence” test is the same as the “clearly erroneous” test for findings of fact by the trial judge required by subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52. Wolfe v. Rhodes, 166 Ga. App. 845, 305 S.E.2d 606 (1983).

Judge’s finding not disturbed if supported by any evidence. — When a case is submitted to a judge for trial and decision, without a jury, the judge’s finding is given the same weight as a verdict, and if there is any evidence to support the finding, the finding will not be disturbed on appeal unless clearly erroneous. Evans v. Marbut, 140 Ga. App. 329, 231 S.E.2d 94 (1976), cert. dismissed, 238 Ga. 583, 234 S.E.2d 506 (1977); Mullins v. Oden & Sims Used Cars, Inc., 148 Ga. App. 250, 251 S.E.2d 65 (1978).

Appellate courts of this state will not interfere with the findings of a judge sitting without a jury if there is any evidence to support the findings. Associated Distribs., Inc. v. McBee, 140 Ga. App. 433, 231 S.E.2d 449 (1976).

Trial court did not err in entering judgment against the venture capital firm on the firm’s fraudulent misrepresentation counterclaim asserting that the three stockholders misrepresented or fraudulently concealed the existence of a consulting agreement that when revealed resulted in the termination of their company’s most valuable contract; evidence in the record supported the trial court’s finding that the consulting agreement was not material in regard to the venture capital firm’s fraudulent misrepresentation claim. Tampa Bay Fin., Inc. v. Nordeen, 272 Ga. App. 529, 612 S.E.2d 856 (2005).

Even if other findings might also have been authorized. — Even though findings of fact contended for by appellants would have been authorized by evidence presented at trial, when the facts found by the trial court were also authorized by the evidence such findings would not be set aside. Cooper v. Rosser, 232 Ga. 597, 207 S.E.2d 513 (1974).

Clearly erroneous standard of review. — Like the findings of a jury or of the Workers’ Compensation Board, the judge’s findings of fact are binding on appeal, and unless wholly unsupported or clearly erroneous will not afford a basis for reversal. Spivey v. Mayson, 124 Ga. App. 775, 186 S.E.2d 154 (1971).

Findings of fact shall not be set aside unless clearly erroneous, and due regard shall be given to the opportunity of the trial court to judge the credibility. Bell v. Cronin, 248 Ga. 457, 283 S.E.2d 476

(1981); Mutual Ins. Co. v. Dublin Pub. Inc., 190 Ga. App. 94, 378 S.E.2d 497 (1989); Claxton Enter. v. Evans County Bd. of Comm'rs, 249 Ga. App. 870, 549 S.E.2d 830 (2001).

Findings of fact by a trial judge will not be set aside unless "clearly erroneous." Smith v. Smith, 248 Ga. 268, 282 S.E.2d 324 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Abushmais v. Erby, 282 Ga. 619, 652 S.E.2d 549 (2007).

Finding of facts by the trial court in nonjury cases will not be set aside on appeal unless the findings are wholly unsupported by the evidence or are clearly erroneous. Davis v. Hospital Auth., 167 Ga. App. 304, 306 S.E.2d 306 (1983).

Findings of the trial judge were to be set aside as clearly erroneous when the award of back pay to a former president of a corporation was speculative and not supported by the evidence. The former president would not have drawn that salary for that period because the business would not have continued. Davis v. Davis, 262 Ga. 420, 419 S.E.2d 913 (1992).

On a motion to enforce a settlement agreement, the appellate court construes the evidence to uphold the trial court's judgment and will not disturb the trial court's findings thereon unless the findings are clearly erroneous; thus, when the trial court conducted a hearing and considered the evidence before concluding that appellants, the children of a decedent, did not carry the appellants' burden of proving that an enforceable settlement agreement was reached with appellee, the decedent's widow, the trial court acted as a finder of fact, and the clearly erroneous standard of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a) thus applied in reviewing the trial court's decision. Griffin v. Wallace, 260 Ga. App. 857, 581 S.E.2d 375 (2003), aff'd, Ga. , 615 S.E.2d 542 (2005).

If a trial court in a civil case hears live testimony and is called upon to act as the ultimate finder of fact on a duress issue, a clearly erroneous, rather than a de novo standard of review applies. Peacock v. Spivey, 278 Ga. App. 338, 629 S.E.2d 48 (2006).

Finding of trial court upheld. — In light of the plaintiff's own admission that the plaintiff offered to the plaintiff's new employer, a competitor of the plaintiff's former employer, sales catalogues of two of the plaintiff's former employer's customers, to whom the plaintiff attempted to sell products from the plaintiff's new employer, the trial court did not err in finding that the plaintiff solicited sales in violation of the noncompetition provisions of the contract. Fisher v. Marvin Reese Cos., 231 Ga. App. 487, 499 S.E.2d 411 (1998).

There being no showing of a manifest abuse of discretion, the trial court's ruling denying the defendant's request to make findings of fact and conclusions of law in support of the court's judgment was proper. Greene County v. North Shore Resort at Lake Oconee, L.L.C., 238 Ga. App. 236, 517 S.E.2d 553 (1999); Vernon Library Supplies, Inc. v. Ard, 249 Ga. App. 853, 550 S.E.2d 108 (2001).

Probate court properly revoked letters testamentary, ordered reimbursement to a decedent's estate of excessive expenses, and ordered a settling of the estate's accounts after the decedent's executor committed 17 breaches of fiduciary duty, including failing to wind up the estate and failing to provide the decedent's other child with an accounting. Fowler v. Cox, 264 Ga. App. 880, 592 S.E.2d 510 (2003).

In a case in which the trial court denied a petition by the appellants, the children of a decedent, to enforce an alleged settlement agreement between themselves and the appellee, the decedent's widow, which supposedly was reached in a probate case following mediation of a dispute between the parties regarding the validity of the decedent's will, the trial court's finding that the children failed to prove that the widow's settlement offer was still open when the children tried to accept the offer was not clearly erroneous given that the widow testified that the widow did not re-extend the widow's settlement offer after the children rejected the offer and after the widow rejected the children's counteroffer, and given that a letter from the widow's counsel to opposing counsel after the counteroffer was rejected expressed the possibility of considering further settlement offers, but did not refer to any outstanding settlement offer. Griffin v. Wallace, 260 Ga. App. 857, 581 S.E.2d 375 (2003), aff'd, Ga. , 615 S.E.2d 542 (2005).

Because there was evidence to support a trial court's factual conclusions that a tenant's breach of contract terms by failing to remove storage tanks from the landlord's premises upon termination of the lease did not amount to a default, the determination that the landlord was not entitled to exercise cross-default provisions in order to terminate other leases between the parties was affirmed; in order to have committed a default, pursuant to the language of the lease, the tenant was entitled to notice and an attempt to timely cure the default. Dude, Inc. v. Foamex, L.P., 269 Ga. App. 909, 605 S.E.2d 459 (2004).

Trial court properly entered an order compelling a health plan to cover a stem cell transplant to treat an insured's kidney cancer; the health plan failed to meet the plan's burden under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a) in challenging the judgment as the plan never provided the plan's enrollees with notice of plan limitations, which included stem cell procedure limitations, and therefore, the limitation was not enforceable. Hosp. Auth. v. Bohannon, 272 Ga. App. 96, 611 S.E.2d 663 (2005).

In a case in which the trial court found that the appellant altered its lot, for the purpose of operating a used car business, creating an artificial increase in the water flowing onto the appellee's property, the trial court did not clearly err under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a) in determining that an adequate cure for the runoff problem required both implementation of a second engineering plan and removal of motor vehicles from the rear portion of the lot as the record supported the finding that the placement of gravel on the lot, together with the metal roof created by the number of vehicles parked there, rendered a substantial portion of the lot virtually impermeable. Menzies v. Hall, 281 Ga. 223, 637 S.E.2d 415 (2006).

Trial court's factual finding that a car dealer had not breached a verbal agreement to its customer regarding the wiring to an uninstalled radio unit that the customer sought was not clearly erroneous, given the appellate court's deference, as the wiring was not an essential accessory that should have come with the radio as part of the radio's purchase. Rise v. GAPVT Motors, Inc., 288 Ga. App. 246, 653 S.E.2d 320 (2007).

Trial court's findings in favor of a customer on the customer's counterclaim for malicious prosecution in a contractor's breach of contract and trover claim were upheld as the evidence established that the contractor had signed a sworn affidavit stating that the customer committed criminal fraud by not paying for an installed fence on the customer's property and refused to pay when the amount due was merely in dispute and the customer had, in fact, tendered a check for a portion of the amount due indicating that the remaining balance was in dispute. The fact that the contractor's execution of those false statements had consequences not intended, namely that the customer spent two nights in jail, was insufficient to absolve the contractor's liability for making those statements. Gooch v. Tudor, 296 Ga. App. 414, 674 S.E.2d 331 (2009).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by awarding property owners interlocutory injunctive relief against a county to keep the owners from further harm pending the resolution of the case because the county was found to have exceeded the bounds of an easement and it was for the trial court to determine how the county was required to cure the problem. Gwinnett County v. McManus, 294 Ga. 702, 755 S.E.2d 720 (2014).

Findings and judgment not disturbed absent error of law. — In considering arguments concerning fact finding, the appellate courts cannot disturb the judge's findings and judgment absent some error of law. Kingston Dev. Co. v. Kenerly, 132 Ga. App. 346, 208 S.E.2d 118 (1974); Nabors v. Blanche Reeves Interiors, Inc., 139 Ga. App. 638, 229 S.E.2d 117 (1976); Browning v. Federal Home Loan Mtg. Corp., 210 Ga. App. 115, 435 S.E.2d 450 (1993).

Finding based upon erroneous legal theory is cause for reversal or remittal. DOT v. Livaditis, 129 Ga. App. 358, 199 S.E.2d 573 (1973).

While ordinarily a judgment right for any reason must be affirmed, when it is apparent that the court rests judgment on reasons which are erroneous or upon an erroneous legal theory, the court commits reversible error. Ayers v. Yancey Bros. Co., 141 Ga. App. 358, 233 S.E.2d 471 (1977).

Subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52 provides that findings of trial courts in nonjury trials “shall not be set aside unless clearly erroneous.” This principle does not apply, however, when it appears that the trial court’s findings and judgment are based on an error of law. Scott v. Purser Truck Sales, Inc., 198 Ga. App. 611, 402 S.E.2d 354 (1991).

If court’s judgment is based upon stated fact for which there is no evidence, the judgment should be reversed. Lamas v. Baldwin, 140 Ga. App. 37, 230 S.E.2d 13 (1976); Dotson v. Henry County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 161 Ga. App. 257, 287 S.E.2d 696 (1982).

When there is evidence to support finding that settlement had been made, the Court of Appeals is without authority to disturb the settlement on appeal. General Communications Serv., Inc. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm’n, 149 Ga. App. 466, 254 S.E.2d 710, aff’d, 244 Ga. 855, 262 S.E.2d 96 (1979).

Insufficient evidence to support finding of settlement. — In a personal injury action hearing under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(a), it was error for the trial court to grant a motorist’s motion to enforce an alleged settlement agreement between the injured party and the motorist’s insurer because the evidence did not show the insurer’s unqualified acceptance of the injured party’s settlement proposal, nor did the evidence show the injured party’s acceptance of the insurer’s counteroffer. Jones v. Frickey, 274 Ga. App. 398, 618 S.E.2d 29 (2005), aff’d, 280 Ga. 573, 630 S.E.2d 374 (2006).

Insufficient findings to support equitable distribution award. — Trial court erred in the court’s division of marital property in allowing the wife to delay the ultimate payment of funds to the husband for an indefinite period of time as the final judgment simply awarded the home to the wife without making any finding that the husband was entitled to any equitable division of that asset. While the degree of detail required was not significant, as the issue was not complex, some findings were required. Arthur v. Arthur, 293 Ga. 63, 743 S.E.2d 420 (2013).

Every presumption and inference favors judgment, and the evidence must be construed to uphold rather than to destroy the judgment. Kingston Dev. Co. v. Kenerly, 132 Ga. App. 346, 208 S.E.2d 118 (1974).

Concomitant with principle that findings of fact by trial judge who sits without a jury may not be set aside unless clearly erroneous is directive that after judgment every presumption and inference favors such judgment and evidence must be construed to uphold rather than destroy the judgment. Nabors v. Blanche Reeves Interiors, Inc., 139 Ga. App. 638, 229 S.E.2d 117 (1976).

Assumption that evidence sufficient in absence of transcript. — In the absence of a transcript of the evidence, the court must assume evidence presented was sufficient to support judgment. Craig miles v. Craig miles, 237 Ga. 498, 228 S.E.2d 882 (1976).

Judgment of the trial court will not be disturbed if the record does not show error, and in the absence of a transcript of the evidence, the appellate courts must assume evidence was sufficient to support the judgment. National Enters., Inc. v. Davis, 145 Ga. App. 198, 243 S.E.2d 563 (1978).

State’s highest court accepted a probate court’s findings that a daughter’s evidence that the mother’s will had been revoked lacked credibility, that the presumption of revocation had been rebutted, and that the proffered copy was a true copy as the daughter did not provide the state’s highest court with a transcript of the probate court hearing. Tanksley v. Parker, 278 Ga. 877, 608 S.E.2d 596 (2005).

When there is no transcript of evidence, judgment must be affirmed as it cannot be said that the trial court’s findings are “clearly erroneous.” White v. Johnson, 151 Ga. App. 345, 259 S.E.2d 731 (1979).

When there is no transcript of the evidence, the appellate court cannot say a trial court’s finding is clearly erroneous and the court must, therefore, be bound by the finding. Hammond v. State, 168 Ga.

App. 508, 308 S.E.2d 701 (1983).

Findings as to residence and domicile. — Findings of the trier of fact as to residence and domicile will not be disturbed if there is “any evidence” to support the findings. Smith v. Smith, 248 Ga. 268, 282 S.E.2d 324 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Abushmais v. Erby, 282 Ga. 619, 652 S.E.2d 549 (2007).

Attorney’s fees. — Since the trial court found that the plaintiffs failed to offer any competent evidence to support the purported debt underlying an attorneys’ fee lien, the court’s factual finding was upheld on appeal. Ellis, Funk, Goldberg, Labovitz & Dockson v. Kleinberger, 235 Ga. App. 360, 509 S.E.2d 660 (1998).

Findings as to recovery for value of services held erroneous. — After the plaintiff admitted to agreeing to pay a certain sum for the services of one employed by the defendant, the trial court’s ruling that the defendant was entitled to recover a different amount for such services was clearly erroneous. Fruin-Colnon Corp. v. Air Door, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 804, 278 S.E.2d 708 (1981).

Findings departing from policy of board. — Trial court had the authority to reverse or remand decision of the State Personnel Board on ground that the board abused the board’s discretion by departing from the board’s progressive discipline policy. Georgia Dep’t of Labor v. Sims, 164 Ga. App. 856, 298 S.E.2d 562 (1982).

Failure to request. — When the record did not show that the plaintiff, the subject of bank’s dispossessory action, requested that the trial court include specific findings of fact and conclusions of law in the court’s order to vacate premises prior to the order’s issuance, the trial court did not err in failing to include these findings in the court’s final judgment. Burks v. First Union Mtg. Corp., 209 Ga. App. 41, 432 S.E.2d 822 (1993); Middlebrooks v. Fleet Fin., Inc., 217 Ga. App. 263, 456 S.E.2d 627 (1995).

Mother failed to preserve for appeal the mother’s claims that the trial court erred in failing to set forth the basis for the court’s written legitimation order and in the court’s written order granting a father’s motion to change a child’s name as the mother never requested the findings of fact. Carden v. Warren, 269 Ga. App. 275, 603 S.E.2d 769 (2004).

On appeal from an order equitably distributing the parties’ marital property, inasmuch as the issues on appeal depended upon the factual determinations made by the trial court as fact-finder, and neither party asked the trial court to make factual findings, the Supreme Court of Georgia was unable to conclude that the trial court’s equitable distribution of marital property was improper as a matter of law or as a matter of fact. Crowder v. Crowder, 281 Ga. 656, 642 S.E.2d 97 (2007).

In an action to collect on past-due amounts owed by a homebuilder to two contractors, because the homebuilder failed to move the trial court to make or amend the court’s findings, or make additional findings and amend the judgment to the extent necessary for review, the homebuilder waived any claim on appeal that the trial court’s findings were inadequate or incomplete. Hampshire Homes, Inc. v. Espinosa Constr. Servs., 288 Ga. App. 718, 655 S.E.2d 316 (2007).

City waived the right to challenge the sufficiency of the findings of fact and conclusions of law contained in the trial court’s judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52 because the city filed motions to set aside the judgment and to open default within 20 days after the judgment was entered, but such post-judgment motions did not allege any error in the sufficiency of the trial court’s findings of fact or conclusions of law or request that the trial court amend the court’s judgment to separately make such findings or conclusions. City of East Point v. Jordan, 300 Ga. App. 891, 686 S.E.2d 471 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0494, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 337 (Ga. 2010).

Court finding clearly erroneous. See Big Canoe Corp. v. Williamson, 168 Ga. App. 179, 308 S.E.2d 440 (1983).

Finding of trial court not clearly erroneous. See Ridgley v. Helms, 168 Ga. App. 435, 309 S.E.2d 375 (1983).

Motion properly denied. — In a commercial landlord’s suit for damages to the extent that the rent the landlord would have been paid exceeded fair market value, the trial court properly denied the landlord's motions to amend the judgment or for a new trial; the landlord, via O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52(c), had improperly attempted to inject into the case a new methodology for calculating damages to replace the one it had used at trial. Truststreet Props. v. Burdick, 287 Ga. App. 565, 652 S.E.2d 197 (2007).

When findings in child custody case were so deficient the findings precluded review, the case was remanded to the trial court with direction that the trial judge vacate the judgment and make appropriate findings of fact and conclusions of law, and enter a new judgment thereon. Milner v. Milner, 177 Ga. App. 164, 338 S.E.2d 757 (1985).

Subsection (b) not designed as second opportunity to prove case. — Subsection (b) of this section is not a procedural device by which a party may be granted a second opportunity to prove the party's case after the party fails to do so in the first instance. Buckley v. Thornwell, 143 Ga. App. 764, 240 S.E.2d 258 (1977).

Amendment of judgment permitted at any time to include findings and conclusions. — Final judgment which requires but does not contain findings of fact and conclusions of law may be amended by the lower court at any time to meet objections when the judgment is consequently entered of record. Peachtree Mtg. Corp. v. Northside Realty Assocs., 140 Ga. App. 541, 231 S.E.2d 350 (1976), aff'd, 239 Ga. 62, 235 S.E.2d 491 (1977).

Amendment not authorized to bring evidence to appellate courts. — Although amendment to a judgment of the court sitting without a jury, adding thereto certain statements, findings of fact, and conclusions of law, is authorized by subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1970, p. 170, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52), amendment is not an authorized means of bringing evidence to the appellate court on appeal under Ga. L. 1965, p. 18, § 10 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-41). Chapman v. Connor, 138 Ga. App. 518, 226 S.E.2d 625 (1976).

Reason for rule that new trial motion must go to findings of fact is that a new trial is necessarily authorized only when errors occurred which might have affected the finding of the trier of fact; if it is only the judgment thereon which is alleged to be erroneous or illegal, this alludes to a matter of law only and there is no need for a new trial, but the party must merely take direct exception at the proper time. Sunn v. Mercury Marine, 166 Ga. App. 567, 305 S.E.2d 6 (1983).

Time for motion for reconsideration. — In cases tried before the court without a jury, whether or not written findings are required, motion for reconsideration by the trial judge is proper if filed within the ten-day period, irrespective of expiration of the term of court. Hathcock v. Hathcock, 232 Ga. 719, 208 S.E.2d 819 (1974).

Motion for new trial is available remedy to review contested custody case between parents. Adair v. Adair, 236 Ga. 443, 224 S.E.2d 21 (1976).

Supplemental order making findings not new judgment. — Entry of supplemental order making findings of fact and conclusions of law does not change effect of final order dismissing complaint, but merely sets out the basis for a judgment of dismissal; it is not a new judgment. Northside Realty Assocs. v. Peachtree Mtg. Corp., 239 Ga. 62, 235 S.E.2d 491 (1977); Grizzle v. Federal Land Bank, 145 Ga. App. 385, 244 S.E.2d 362 (1978).

Inherent power of judge over judgment during term. — Trial judge has inherent power during same term of court in which judgment is rendered to revise, correct, revoke, modify, or vacate such judgment, even upon the judge's own motion, for the purpose of promoting justice and in the exercise of sound legal discretion. LeCraw v. Atlanta Arts Alliance, Inc., 126 Ga. App. 656, 191 S.E.2d 572 (1972).

JUDGMENT

9-11-54. Judgments.

(a) Definition. The term “judgment,” as used in this chapter, includes a decree and any order from which an appeal lies.

(b) Judgment upon multiple claims or involving multiple parties. When more than one claim for relief is presented in an action, whether as a claim, counterclaim, cross-claim, or third-party claim, or when multiple parties are involved, the court may direct the entry of a final judgment as to one or more but fewer than all of the claims or parties only upon an express determination that there is no just reason for delay and upon an express direction for the entry of judgment. In the absence of such determination and direction, any order or other form of decision, however designated, which adjudicates fewer than all the claims or the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties shall not terminate the action as to any of the claims or parties, and the order or other form of decision is subject to revision at any time before the entry of judgment adjudicating all the claims and the rights and liabilities of all the parties.

(c) Relief granted.

(1) A judgment by default shall not be different in kind from or exceed in amount that prayed for in the demand for judgment. Except as to a party against whom a judgment is entered by default, every final judgment shall grant the relief to which the party in whose favor it is rendered is entitled, even if the party has not demanded such relief in his pleadings; but the court shall not give the successful party relief, though he may be entitled to it, where the propriety of the relief was not litigated and the opposing party had no opportunity to assert defenses to such relief.

(2) As used in this subsection, the term “action for medical malpractice” means any claim for damages resulting from the death of or injury to any person arising out of:

(A) Health, medical, dental, or surgical service, diagnosis, prescription, treatment, or care rendered by a person authorized by law to perform such services or by any person acting under the supervision and control of a lawfully authorized person; or

(B) Care or service rendered by any public or private hospital, nursing home, clinic, hospital authority, facility, or institution, or by any officer, agent, or employee thereof acting within the scope of his employment.

(3) Notwithstanding paragraph (1) of this subsection, where a claim in an action for medical malpractice does not exceed $10,000.00, a judgment by default shall not be different in kind from or exceed in amount that prayed for in the demand for judgment. Where the claim exceeds $10,000.00, a judgment by default may be rendered for the amount determined upon a trial of the issue of damages, provided notice of the trial is served upon the defaulting party at least three days prior to that trial.

(d) Costs. Except where express provision therefor is made in a statute, costs shall be allowed as a matter of course to the prevailing party unless the court otherwise directs; but costs against this state and its officers, agencies, and political subdivisions shall be imposed only to the extent permitted by the law. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

MULTIPLE CLAIMS OR PARTIES

General Consideration

“Judgment” includes summary judgment. — Subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54 includes an order for partial summary judgment as the judgment is appealable under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h). Crolley v. Haygood Contracting, Inc., 207 Ga. App. 434, 429 S.E.2d 93 (1993).

Use of term “final” not dispositive. — Under the express language of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b), the mere designation of a judgment as “final” is not controlling. Whether an order is final and appealable is judged by the order’s function and substance, rather than any “magic language.” Rhymes v. E. Atlanta Church of God, Inc., 284 Ga. 145, 663 S.E.2d 670 (2008).

Appeal not allowed. — After a trial court declined to issue a certificate of immediate review to a former inmate in the inmate’s request to appeal the trial court’s grant of the county’s motion to open a default, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b), that issue remained pending below and, accordingly, the appellate court had no jurisdiction to review that matter under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54. Camp v. Coweta County, 271 Ga. App. 349, 609 S.E.2d 695 (2005), vacated in part, 280 Ga. App. 852, 635 S.E.2d 234 (2006).

Denial of certification as final is not appealable. — Trial court’s determination that a judgment obtained by a lender against two guarantors was not final under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b), because the guarantors’ third-party complaint against two others was still pending, was not appealable, although the remaining parties had no incentive to expedite the litigation. Synovus Bank v. Peachtree Factory Ctr., Inc., 331 Ga. App. 628, 770 S.E.2d 887 (2015).

Inherent power of judge over judgment during same term. — Trial judge has inherent power during same term of court in which judgment is rendered to revise, correct, revoke, modify, or vacate such judgment, even upon the judge’s own motion, for purpose of promoting justice and in the exercise of sound legal discretion. LeCrew v. Atlanta Arts Alliance, Inc., 126 Ga. App. 656, 191 S.E.2d 572 (1972).

Trial judge has the power during the same term of court at which a judgment is rendered to reverse, correct, revoke, modify, or vacate the judgment in the exercise of the judge’s discretion. This inherent power of the trial court was not changed by passage of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9. McCoy Lumber Co. v. Garland Lumber Sales, Inc., 182 Ga. App. 75, 354 S.E.2d 686 (1987).

Garnishment court erred in holding that, because the term of court had expired, the court lacked power to correct a judgment so that the judgment would reflect the proper amount of the funds subject to a garnishment as the judgment was actually an interlocutory order rather than a final judgment. Lott v. Arrington & Hollowell, P.C., 258 Ga. App. 51, 572 S.E.2d 664 (2002).

Trial court may not award relief beyond that sought in the complaint when the defendant does not file defensive pleadings and does not appear at trial, and a complaint cannot be amended to conform to the evidence in such circumstances. Hackbart v. Hackbart, 272 Ga. 26, 526 S.E.2d 840 (2000).

Because the superior court modified the court’s judgment so as to vacate the court’s order of dismissal and provide only for the entry of a default judgment, the issue of dismissal was moot and provided no basis for setting aside the judgment. But, because the court, absent amendment to the demand for judgment or argument supporting the judgment, awarded damages in excess of the amount claimed, that award had to be reversed. Stamps v. Nelson, 290 Ga. App. 277, 659 S.E.2d 697 (2008).

What judge orally declares is no judgment until it is put in writing and entered. Williams v. Horn, 124 Ga. App. 485, 184 S.E.2d 198 (1971).

Writing required. — Superior court is a court of record, and what the judge orally declares is no judgment until the order has been reduced to writing and entered as such. Tyree v. Jackson, 226 Ga.

690, 177 S.E.2d 160 (1970).

Consent orders. — Consent order is final when there is no language in the consent order reflecting it to be anything other than a final judgment. Levingston v. Crables, 203 Ga. App. 16, 416 S.E.2d 131 (1992).

Pending counterclaim. — Actions appealed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a)(2)-(9) may be appealed directly to the Supreme Court without regard to a pending counterclaim and the lack of a final judgment as to counterclaim is no bar to a direct appeal. Westberry v. Saunders, 250 Ga. 240, 296 S.E.2d 596 (1982).

Fieri facias is not an order of final judgment tolling the time for appeal. Newton v. K.B. Property Mgt. of Ga., Inc., 166 Ga. App. 901, 306 S.E.2d 5 (1983).

Denial of summary judgment does not foreclose subsequent grant thereof, as an order or other form of decision is subject to revision at any time before entry of judgment adjudicating all the claims and rights and liabilities of all the parties. Graham Bros. Constr. Co. v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 150 Ga. App. 193, 257 S.E.2d 321 (1979); Malloy v. Cauley, 169 Ga. App. 623, 314 S.E.2d 464 (1984).

Grant of summary judgment during plaintiff's case-in-chief appropriate. — In a suit asserting undue influence and seeking revocation of a testator's will, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to the defendant on the issue of revocation during the presentation of the plaintiff's case-in-chief because, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54, there is no procedural impediment to a trial court granting a party's motion for summary judgment without disposing of the entire case. Morrison v. Morrison, 282 Ga. 866, 655 S.E.2d 571 (2008).

When the judge specifically reserves an issue for later decision, the issue is still pending, and the judge's preliminary decision cannot form the basis of a final decision for the purpose of appeal. Henderson v. Smith, 177 Ga. App. 89, 338 S.E.2d 520 (1985).

Claims for damages and fees not relitigated when judgment was final. — When the trial court directed verdicts as to the plaintiff's claims on the issues of punitive damages and attorney's fees, and the court then entered judgments on those verdicts and certified the judgments as final, the plaintiff's only recourse was to appeal the judgments as to punitive damages and attorney's fees; those issues could not be relitigated in the plaintiff's renewal action raising other issues which were voluntarily dismissed in the initial suit and not reached by the directed verdicts. Broadfoot v. Aaron Rents, Inc., 260 Ga. 836, 401 S.E.2d 257 (1991).

Effect of incomplete adjudication on appeal. — Since the trial court's decision to deny the company's motion to set aside, vacate, and annul the county's declaration of taking in a condemnation proceeding was an adjudication of less than all the claims before the trial court, and because the trial court did not make an express determination that the company could pursue an interlocutory appeal, the appellate court lacked jurisdiction over the company's appeal, which meant the appeal had to be dismissed. TJW Enters. v. Henry County, 261 Ga. App. 547, 583 S.E.2d 144 (2003).

Appeal from order denying substitution was premature. — Trial court's order denying substitution of the decedent's administrator as a party, in place of the decedent, was not a final appealable order and as such did not dismiss the complaint, but left issues remaining to be resolved. Williams v. City of Atlanta, 263 Ga. App. 113, 587 S.E.2d 261 (2003).

Duty to timely appeal an order designated as final. — When, in a dispossessory action, a trial court dismissed a tenant's counterclaim and designated the dismissal as a final judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b), the tenant had to appeal any adverse rulings in that order within 30 days of the entry of judgment, under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-38, and, by failing to so appeal that judgment, the right to review of those rulings was lost. Lewis v. Carscallen, 274 Ga. App. 711, 618 S.E.2d 618 (2005).

Child support guidelines. — Trial court's order upholding the constitutionality of Georgia's Child Support Guidelines was erroneously certified by the trial court since the order did not dispose of any claim. However, since the appellate court granted a parent's application for discretionary appeal, the appellate court proceeded to a consideration of the merits of the constitutional issue. Keck v. Harris, 277 Ga. 667, 594 S.E.2d 367 (2004).

Custodial parent was not prevailing party. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(d) was not applicable to a case because the custodial parent was not the prevailing party as all three counts of the other parent's petition alleging contumacious conduct of the custodial parent were upheld by the trial court. Avren v. Garten, 289 Ga. 186, 710 S.E.2d 130 (2011).

Child custody order in divorce case not a final judgment. — Because neither the original court-ordered parenting plan nor the two subsequent orders amending the plan constituted a final judgment, and the determination of child custody became final only when the final judgment and decree in the divorce case was entered, the wife's motion for new trial, although the motion obviously referenced the bench trial on the child custody issues, was timely filed within 30 days of the date of the final judgment in the divorce case. Hoover v. Hoover, 295 Ga. 132, 757 S.E.2d 838 (2014).

No error in declining to amend judgment. — Trial court did not err in declining to amend a judgment prohibiting a limited liability company (LLC) from making any permanent changes to the surface of the property owners' land in replacing a sewer pipe by including the additional finding that the owners could not make any permanent changes to the surface of the easement until installation of the new sewer pipe because the issue of the owners' planned construction and any potential claims related thereto were not included in the pre-trial order as matters for determination, and the LLC had not previously requested any declaratory or injunctive relief pertaining to that issue prior to the entry of judgment. Parris Props., LLC v. Nichols, 305 Ga. App. 734, 700 S.E.2d 848 (2010).

Mandamus denied when claim remains pending. — Because there had been no ruling on the city's conversion claim, the travel companies incorrectly determined that the companies were authorized to invoke mandamus in an effort to force the trial court to close the city's case as the city's case remained pending, and the trial court properly dismissed the travel companies' petition for a writ of mandamus. Trip Network, Inc. v. Dempsey, 293 Ga. 520, 748 S.E.2d 432 (2013).

Multiple Claims or Parties

Enforceability of judgment. — Judgment entered in a multiple party and/or multiple claims case prior to the disposition of the entire case is not enforceable unless the requirements of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54 are followed. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth. v. Federick, 187 Ga. App. 696, 371 S.E.2d 204, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 908, 371 S.E.2d 204 (1988).

Subsection (b) prevents appellate court from dealing with merits of the trial court's rulings when one of the claims remains for decision and the court did not expressly direct entry of judgment in conformance with subsection (b). Peace Officers' Annuity & Benefit Fund v. Blocker, 135 Ga. App. 822, 219 S.E.2d 456 (1975).

Effect of certification of premature orders. — When the hearing on a declaratory judgment issue was conducted less than 20 days after service of the plaintiff's petitions in violation of O.C.G.A. § 9-4-5, the trial court was without authority to make a ruling on the issue and the court's certification of the court's orders pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54 did not make valid the premature orders. Robert W. Woodruff Arts Ctr., Inc. v. Insardi, 266 Ga. 248, 466 S.E.2d 214 (1996).

Court was without authority to vacate order outside of the term in which the order was entered. — Trial court improperly vacated the court's own order outside of the term in which the order was entered so the order vacating the initial order was a nullity, but, as the initial order, which denied an application to modify or vacate an arbitration award, did not address a counterclaim seeking to confirm the arbitration award, it was not a final order, and so the later order con-firning the award was affirmed. Tanaka v. Pecqueur, 268 Ga. App. 380, 601 S.E.2d 830 (2004).

Two methods of appeal. — There are two principal methods by which an appeal might be brought in multi-claim party cases from orders as to less than all claims or parties involved: (1) the complaining party may obtain a certificate of immediate review from the trial judge under former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b)); and (2) the trial judge may enter an order upon express determination that there are no just reasons for delay and upon express direction for entry of judgment under subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 54 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54). When the second method is used, the appellate court must still determine whether the judgment rendered meets the requirements of finality contained in former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b)). J.C. Penney Co. v. Malouf Co., 125 Ga. App. 832, 189 S.E.2d 453 (1972), rev'd on other grounds, 230 Ga. 140, 196 S.E.2d 145 (1973).

As a church's suit against a minister involved multiple claims, and the trial court's decision adjudicated fewer than all of the claims, in order to appeal, the minister had to either: (1) obtain entry of judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b) based on a finding of no just reason for delay; or (2) obtain a certificate allowing immediate appeal under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b). Because neither § 9-11-54(b) nor § 5-6-34(b) was followed, the minister's appeal was premature. Rhymes v. E. Atlanta Church of God, Inc., 284 Ga. 145, 663 S.E.2d 670 (2008).

Appealability determined by § 5-6-34. — Whether or not judgment was appealable must be determined by former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34), and when a judgment was not dispositive of a case and therefore was not final, and there was no compliance with the interlocutory appeal provision of that section, the appeal was subject to dismissal. Foskey v. Bank of Alapaha, 147 Ga. App. 541, 249 S.E.2d 346 (1978).

Tax commissioner's defective attempt to seek interlocutory review pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b) did not have the effect of making the judgment appealed from res judicata of the issue appealed; thus, the tax commissioner was entitled to appeal the trial court's denial of the tax commissioner's summary judgment motion in a case where the property owner sought to set aside a deed executed pursuant to a judicial tax foreclosure and sued the tax commissioner and property purchaser in order to do so. Canoeside Props. v. Livsey, 277 Ga. 425, 589 S.E.2d 116 (2003).

Direct appeal was proper, despite the fact that a claim for punitive damages remained pending, because the trial court made a final ruling with regard to compensatory damages and specifically found that there was no just reason for delay. Sam's Wholesale Club v. Riley, 241 Ga. App. 693, 527 S.E.2d 293 (1999).

Order granting writ of possession was not subject to direct appeal because other claims remained pending in the trial court (e.g., issue of commissions owed to the defendant and past rent due and owing to the plaintiff). Whiddon v. Stargell, 192 Ga. App. 826, 386 S.E.2d 884 (1989).

Appeal from an order dismissing a complaint as a sanction for repeated failure to attend scheduled depositions was premature since there was a counterclaim pending in the court below, no determination by the trial judge that there was no just reason for delay, and the appellant failed to follow the applicable procedure for review under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b). Fasse v. Sexton, 193 Ga. App. 9, 387 S.E.2d 17 (1989).

Appellate court had jurisdiction over appeal with multiple parties. — Georgia Court of Appeals had jurisdiction over a case wherein a purchaser appealed a trial court's grant of summary judgment to other defendants and dismissed them, which occurred prior to settling with the sellers as the purchaser did not voluntarily dismiss the remaining defendants to obtain a directly appealable final order and if the parties had not reached a settlement and proceeded to trial, the purchaser would have been able to directly appeal the judgment resulting from the trial. O'Dell v. Mahoney, 324 Ga. App. 360,

Determination of finality under subsection (b) satisfies finality requirement of § 5-6-34. — Former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a)(1)) and subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 54 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54) are to be construed together so that a determination of finality under the latter satisfies the finality requirement of the former. Thompson v. Clarkson Power Flow, Inc., 149 Ga. App. 284, 254 S.E.2d 401, aff'd, 149 Ga. App. 284, 260 S.E.2d 9 (1979).

Order expressing clear intent of finality. — "Final Judgment" order which did not recite the exact language of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54 nonetheless expressed a clear intent by the trial judge that the order be final, and therefore appealable, as to two of four defendants. Cherry v. Hersch, 193 Ga. App. 471, 388 S.E.2d 64 (1989).

Section 9-11-42 does not circumvent this section. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-42 (consolidation and severance) seeks to further judicial convenience or avoid prejudice, not to circumvent the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54. Cable Holdings of Battlefield, Inc. v. Lookout Cable Serv., Inc., 173 Ga. App. 355, 326 S.E.2d 552 (1985).

Summary judgment exception to subsection (b). — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, which permits direct appeal from any grant of summary judgment, is an exception to the finality rule expressed in subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54. Edwards v. Davis, 160 Ga. App. 122, 286 S.E.2d 301 (1981).

If a grant of partial summary judgment is not made final under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52, the party against whom summary judgment was granted has the option to either appeal or not appeal at that time, and if the party chooses to appeal, then the appellate decision on the summary judgment ruling is binding under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h). Roth v. Gulf Atl. Media of Ga., Inc., 244 Ga. App. 677, 536 S.E.2d 577 (2000).

Effect of clarification of prior final partial grant of summary judgment. — Trial court's corrective action in clarifying an omission as to post-trial interest in the court's earlier partial summary judgment, which had been certified as final, constituted a final order which was directly appealable. Nodvin v. West, 197 Ga. App. 92, 397 S.E.2d 581 (1990).

Judgment as to fewer than all claims or parties not final unless express determination made. — Absent express determination that there exists no just cause for delay and express direction for entry of judgment, any order or other form of decision, however designated, which adjudicates less than all claims does not terminate an action as to any of the claims. Davis v. Roper, 119 Ga. App. 442, 167 S.E.2d 685 (1969).

Entry of judgment as to one or more but fewer than all claims or parties was not a final judgment under former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a)(1)) and lacked res judicata effect unless the trial court made an express direction for entry of a final judgment and determination that no just reason for delaying finality of the judgment existed. Culwell v. Lomas & Nettleton Co., 242 Ga. 242, 248 S.E.2d 641 (1978).

Pendency of a counterclaim plus absence in order of trial judge's express determination that there was no just reason for delay and express direction for entry of judgment prevented order from being final and appealable. Patterson v. Professional Resources, Inc., 242 Ga. 459, 249 S.E.2d 248 (1978); Cleveland v. Watkins, 159 Ga. App. 885, 285 S.E.2d 546 (1981).

When case against state was still pending in court below, entry of judgment as to one or more but fewer than all claims or parties was not a final judgment under former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a)(1)), lacks res judicata effect, and was not appealable unless the trial court made an express direction for entry of final judgment and determination that no just reason for delaying finality of the judgment existed. Wise v. Georgia State Bd. for Examination, Qualification & Registration of Architects, 244 Ga. 449, 260 S.E.2d 477 (1979).

Uncertified order is not final. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54 makes clear that an order in a pending case which has not been certified is not a final order. Gresham Park Community Org. v. Howell, 652 F.2d 1227 (5th Cir. 1981).

Order entered on the appellants' motion for new trial as to each of three defendants granting a new trial as to one of the defendants was an adjudication of "fewer than all the claims or the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties. . ." within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b); and denial of a motion as to the other defendants did not, in absence of the trial court's "express determination" and "express direction" with regard to finality, "terminate the action as to any of the . . . parties," and was not appealable. Chadwick v. Frix, 165 Ga. App. 20, 299 S.E.2d 93 (1983).

Directed verdict in favor of some of the parties is not a final judgment when the case is still pending as to the other parties and when a determination of no just reason for delay and a certification of final judgment is not issued. Lawson v. Athens Auto Supply & Elec., Inc., 200 Ga. App. 609, 409 S.E.2d 60, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 895, 409 S.E.2d 60 (1991).

In insureds' suit regarding mold remediation work on the insureds' home, the insureds' were not required to appeal a ruling enforcing a settlement agreement with their insured and an order denying reconsideration of this ruling within 30 days because the orders were not final since the insureds' case remained pending against a construction company, and the trial court did not expressly determine that there was no just cause for delay and designate the orders as final judgments pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b). Stephens v. Alan V. Mock Construction Co., Inc., 302 Ga. App. 280, 690 S.E.2d 225, cert. denied, No. S10C1012, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 533 (Ga. 2010).

Trial court erred in denying the children's petition for writ of mandamus to compel a judge to allow the children to appeal from the order dismissing the children's appeals because the judge's prior orders were not final judgments within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a)(1); thus, the children were not required to appeal from the rulings within 30 days after entry in order to preserve their right to pursue appellate review under

O.C.G.A. § 5-6-38(a). Sotter v. Stephens, 291 Ga. 79, 727 S.E.2d 484 (2012).

Decree may be partly final and partly interlocutory. — Decree may be partly final and partly interlocutory; final as to its determination of all issues of law and fact and interlocutory as to its mode of execution. Levingston v. Crables, 203 Ga. App. 16, 416 S.E.2d 131 (1992).

When the trial court entered judgment in favor of two defendants, but did not resolve a counterclaim of one defendant, the judgment was interlocutory, not final, and was not subject to direct appeal; the court's designation of the judgment as "final" was not controlling. Hadid v. Beals, 233 Ga. App. 5, 502 S.E.2d 798 (1998).

Default against one party. — When default judgment was entered against one party in a multiparty suit, the trial court erred in holding that the judgment was final and that the court was without discretion to vacate the judgment. Daniell v. Heyn, 169 Ga. App. 772, 315 S.E.2d 284 (1984).

When a joint defendant defaults for failure to answer and the court subsequently finds in favor of the other joint defendants on the merits, the default judgment against the first defendant will stand since the default on a procedural issue serves to deny the defendant an opportunity to litigate the merits. Fred Chenoweth Equip. Co. v. Oculus Corp., 254 Ga. 321, 328 S.E.2d 539 (1985).

Procedural default. — Court of Appeals erred in reversing the trial court's grant of partial summary judgment in favor of a county because the trial court did not have authority to enter the court's order purporting to make the grant of partial summary judgment final under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b) since by the arrestee's first notice of appeal, an arrestee put the machinery of appellate review into motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(h) and committed a procedural default; accordingly, the arrestee was foreclosed from resubmitting the matter for review on appeal of the final judgment, and because the first direct appeal was dismissed, that dismissal was binding upon the trial court under O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-60(h). Houston County v. Harrell, 287 Ga. 162, 695 S.E.2d 29 (2010).

Voluntary dismissal of joint tortfeasor did not void judgment against remaining defendants. — Voluntary dismissal with prejudice of an alleged joint tortfeasor did not void the judgment entered against the remaining defendants, but only adjudicated the liabilities of that party; as the voluntary dismissal neither terminated the action nor rendered the default judgment void, the trial court did not err in refusing to set aside a default judgment. Mateen v. Dicus, 286 Ga. App. 760, 650 S.E.2d 272 (2007), 129 S. Ct. 89, 172 L.Ed.2d 30 (2008).

Court of Appeals must hear appeal when final judgment ordered.

— When the action is still pending below as to other defendants, and also as to one defendant with respect to damages, but the trial court has entered the court's order pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54, finding that there is no just reason for delay and that final judgment as to liability is previously entered against that defendant, the Court of Appeals is bound to entertain an appeal by that defendant. Wills v. McAuley, 166 Ga. App. 4, 303 S.E.2d 26, cert. denied, 251 Ga. 41, 305 S.E.2d 120 (1983).

When a new trial was granted on one of the claims against one of the parties, this appeal is controlled by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54 and in such circumstances, there must be an express determination under the section or there must be compliance with the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b) (the interlocutory appeals procedure) and when these Code sections are not followed, the appeal is premature and must be dismissed. Holland v. Holland Heating & Air Conditioning, Inc., 203 Ga. App. 213, 416 S.E.2d 557 (1992).

Rulings declaring a mistrial and making pretrial rulings for a new trial involving a judgment debtor did not fall within the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(d) and were not appealable; the case against the debtor remained pending below, although other claims involving the debtor's transferees had been resolved by a jury and were final. Chapman v. Clark, 313 Ga. App. 820, 723 S.E.2d 51 (2012).

Appeal premature absent determination under subsection (b) or certificate under § 5-6-34(b). — When there has been no express determination or no just reason for delay, or direction that an order for entry of judgment was final, providing for immediate appeal, or issuance of a certificate as provided for by former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b)), an appeal was premature. American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Moore, 120 Ga. App. 624, 171 S.E.2d 751 (1969); Carlisle v. Travelers Ins. Co., 195 Ga. App. 21, 392 S.E.2d 344 (1990).

When order appealed from adjudicated less than all claims and did not provide for entry of final judgment as to appellee upon express determination that there was no just reason for delay and upon express direction for entry of judgment as provided in subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 54 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54), and when there was no certificate as provided for by former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b)), there was no appealable judgment. Givens v. Gray, 124 Ga. App. 152, 183 S.E.2d 29 (1971).

In cases involving multiple parties, dismissal of a counterclaim as to one party is not a final order and is not appealable in the absence of an express determination by the judge that there was no just reason for delay, express direction for entry of judgment, and an immediate review certificate. W.L. Pettus Constr. Co. v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 138 Ga. App. 281, 226 S.E.2d 77 (1976).

When record fails to show that a final judgment has been entered or certificate of immediate review granted, an appeal is premature and must be dismissed. Ward v. Charles D. Hardwick Co., 149 Ga. App. 546, 254 S.E.2d 872 (1979).

When case involving multiple parties remains pending in the superior court, and there is no certificate for immediate review nor express determination and direction pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, the appeal is premature and must be dismissed. Hardy v. Georgia Power Co., 151 Ga. App. 803, 261 S.E.2d 749 (1979).

When there is a case involving multiple parties or multiple claims, a decision adjudicating fewer than all the claims or the rights and liabilities of less than all the parties is not a final judgment. In such circumstances, there must be an express determination under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54, or there must be compliance with the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b) (procedure for review of judgments not deemed directly appealable). When neither of these sections is followed, an appeal is premature and must be dismissed. Spivey v. Rogers, 167 Ga. App. 729, 307 S.E.2d 677 (1983); Johnson v. Hospital Corp. of Am., 192 Ga. App. 628, 385 S.E.2d 731, cert. denied, 192 Ga. App. 902, 385 S.E.2d 731 (1989); King v. Bishop, 198 Ga. App. 622, 402 S.E.2d 307 (1991).

Dismissal of claims when other claims pending not appealable order.

— Trial court's order dismissing claims was not an appealable final order because claims remained pending in the trial court, and the trial court did not direct entry of final judgment; additionally, there was no compliance with the interlocutory appeals procedure. Church v. Bell, 213 Ga. App. 44, 443 S.E.2d 677 (1994); Financial Inv. Group, Inc. v. Cornelison, 238 Ga. App. 223, 516 S.E.2d 844 (1999).

Appeal from dismissal of plaintiff's claim when counterclaim pending.

— When there was no express determination that there was no just reason for delay nor express direction for entry of judgment under subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 54 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54), nor was there a certificate for immediate review, under former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b)), an appeal from an order dismissing the plaintiff's claim was premature when there was a counterclaim pending in the court below. Campbell v. George, 129 Ga. App. 644, 200 S.E.2d 503 (1973); Cleveland v. Watkins, 159 Ga. App. 885, 285 S.E.2d 546 (1981).

Appeal premature when counterclaim pending.

— Declaratory judgment finding is not final and an appeal therefrom is premature when a counterclaim is still pending in the trial court and there is the absence of a determination by the trial judge that there is no just reason for delay and an express direction for entry of judgment. Union Indem. Ins. Co. v. Cherokee Ins. Co., 168 Ga. App. 82, 308 S.E.2d 238 (1983).

Multiple Claims or Parties (Cont'd)

Order that merely dismissed a complaint but did not dispose of a counterclaim was not a final appealable judgment. Hogan Mgt. Servs. v. Martino, 225 Ga. App. 168, 483 S.E.2d 148 (1997).

Dismissal of one of two defendants.

— When there is no express determination that there is no just reason for delay, and no express direction for entry of judgment, an order dismissing one of two defendants is not a final, appealable judgment. Taylor v. McBerry, 138 Ga. App. 593, 226 S.E.2d 607 (1976).

Unless court, in order dismissing one of multiple defendants, makes express determination of finality as set out in subsection (b) of this section, the case is still pending in the trial court and the procedure for interlocutory appeals must be followed. Home Mart Bldg. Ctrs., Inc. v. Wallace, 139 Ga. App. 49, 228 S.E.2d 22 (1976).

In a case involving joint claims against several defendants, an order dismissing a complaint as to some but not all defendants for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is not a final appealable judgment. Walker v. Robinson, 232 Ga. 361, 207 S.E.2d 6 (1974).

When the trial court grants a defendant's motion to dismiss and denies another defendant's motion to dismiss, filed on other grounds, and the plaintiff appeals, but the dismissal order contains no express determination that there is no just reason for delay, and there is no express direction for the entry of such judgment, the appeal is premature and must be dismissed, even when the trial court grants a certificate for immediate review. All Risk Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Rockbridge San. Co., 166 Ga. App. 728, 305 S.E.2d 390 (1983).

When a trial court grants a directed verdict in favor of one or some defendants in a joint and several action and the plaintiff elects to proceed against the remaining defendants without protest and without moving for a continuance to appeal the directed verdicts, the plaintiff is not deemed to have abandoned any action against the defendants released by directed verdict and such a release is not a final judgment except by express determination. James v. Allen, 173 Ga. App. 636, 327 S.E.2d 501 (1985).

Order granting one co-defendant's motion to dismiss and an order denying the plaintiff's motion to vacate the order of dismissal were not appealable as final orders because the case remained pending against the other co-defendants. Knowles v. Old Spartan Life Ins. Co., 213 Ga. App. 204, 444 S.E.2d 136 (1994).

Dismissal of third-party complaint.

— When main claim remains pending and the court does not execute a certificate pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, an order dismissing a third-party complaint lacks finality. Davis v. Roper, 119 Ga. App. 442, 167 S.E.2d 685 (1969).

Directed verdict for plaintiff when third-party complaint pending. — Directed verdict and judgment for plaintiff in action on a promissory note in which the defendant answered and filed a third-party complaint against an alleged comaker of the note, without disposition of the third-party complaint, was not a final appealable judgment, and an interlocutory appeal was not authorized therefrom. Cramer v. Parrott, 149 Ga. App. 386, 254 S.E.2d 504 (1979).

Filing of answer by uninsured motorist insurer in damage action. — In an action for damages alleged to be due as a result of an automobile collision, when the plaintiff's uninsured motorist insurer filed an answer in the insurer's own behalf and has thereby elected to assume the status of a named party, and there had been no certificate of finality pursuant to subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 54 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54) nor any permission granted for an interlocutory appeal pursuant to former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b)), the appeal was premature and must be dismissed. Lysius v. Bertha, 151 Ga. App. 702, 261 S.E.2d 459 (1979).

Order denying defendant's motion to implead third party is not appealable, inasmuch as the order does not finally dispose of any rights of defendant. Davis v. Roper, 119 Ga. App. 442, 167 S.E.2d 685 (1969).

Appealability of interpleader order.

— Order which holds that interpleader is a viable remedy and which dismisses the instigating stakeholder is not directly appealable unless the trial court clearly directs the entry of final judgment under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54. Custom One-Hour Photo of Ga., Inc. v. Citizens & S. Bank, 179 Ga. App. 70, 345 S.E.2d 147 (1986).

Denial of motion to set aside default judgment. — Generally, denial of a motion to set aside a default judgment is an appealable judgment, without a certificate of immediate review; however, this is not automatically the case if multiple parties are involved. Cox v. Farmers Bank, 151 Ga. App. 64, 258 S.E.2d 731 (1979).

Treatment of certification under subsection (b) as under § 5-6-34(b). — When the trial court erroneously entered certification pursuant to subsection (b) of Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 54 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54), the appellate court may treat the certification as one entered pursuant to former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b)); however, because in such cases cause will have been treated by the trial court and the parties as an appeal from a final judgment, time limitations imposed by that section were not applicable. Georgia Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wall, 242 Ga. 176, 249 S.E.2d 588 (1978).

Plaintiff's right to appeal summary judgment for defendants. — After the trial court certified that a summary judgment in favor of three of four defendants was final and ripe for review, the plaintiff lost the plaintiff's right to obtain appellate review by failing to file a timely notice of appeal, even though the plaintiff had filed a motion for reconsideration. Jarallah v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 199 Ga. App. 592, 405 S.E.2d 510 (1991).

When a broker who sued a client for a business broker commission also asserted a claim for a real estate commission, and the trial court entered summary judgment denying the real estate commission claim, and found that the judgment was final, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b), the broker had to appeal that judgment within 30 days of the judgment's entry; so, when the broker waited until the conclusion of a trial on the other claims to appeal the summary judgment, the right to appeal the summary judgment was lost, and the broker's appeal of that issue was dismissed. Bienert v. Dickerson, 276 Ga. App. 621, 624 S.E.2d 245 (2005).

Party against whom summary judgment is granted may appeal after grant thereof or after final judgment is rendered. Surgent v. Surgent, 153 Ga. App. 100, 264 S.E.2d 568 (1980).

In a case in which O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54 applies because of multiple parties or claims, a party against whom summary judgment has been entered may appeal that judgment immediately or may wait until the entire action is concluded and then appeal. Thus, the case is still pending and the grant of summary judgment is subject to revision at any time before the entry of judgment adjudicating all the claims and the rights and liabilities of all the parties. Edwards v. Davis, 160 Ga. App. 122, 286 S.E.2d 301 (1981).

When third-party claim was necessarily adjudicated against parties as a matter of law by judgment against the parties in plaintiff's action, it was not necessary to expressly include a third-party defendant in that judgment or to make express determination therein which is provided by subsection (b) of this section for situations wherein fewer than all claims presented are adjudicated. Fraser v. Moose, 226 Ga. 256, 174 S.E.2d 412 (1970).

When claim and counterclaim are submitted to jury, who find verdict for plaintiff in amount sued for, with no reference to the defendant's counterclaim the verdict will be construed as deciding against the defendant's counterclaim so that the judgment is thus final and appealable; such case will not be construed to involve subsection (b) of this section, which concerns undecided issues. Bernath Barrel & Drum Co. v. Ostrum Boiler Serv., Inc., 131 Ga. App. 140, 205 S.E.2d 459 (1974).

Order of dismissal subject to revision at any time absent express determination. — When multiple parties defendant are involved, in order to be an absolute, final, appealable judgment, an order dismissing fewer than all parties should contain an express determination that there is no just reason for delay and an express direction for entry of judgment; without that, the court's decision is subject to revision at any time before entry of judgment adjudicating all claims, rights, and liabilities of all parties. Grizzard v. Davis, 131 Ga. App. 577, 206 S.E.2d 853 (1974).

Revision prior to entry of judgment. — In absence of an express determination that there is no just reason for delay, a decision to direct entry or final judgment is subject to revision at any time before entry of judgment adjudicating all claims, rights, and liabilities of all the parties. Clary v. Brown, 139 Ga. App. 799, 229 S.E.2d 680 (1976).

When orders are subject to revision, appeals are premature. Davis v. Transairco, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 544, 234 S.E.2d 134 (1977).

Dismissal without prejudice may be final judgment. — Even though a dismissal without prejudice may allow the plaintiff to recommence the plaintiff's claim at a later date, it is nonetheless a dismissal of the subject action. Thus, it can be made a final judgment in a case in which other claims remain pending when the trial court expressly determines there is no just reason for delay. Gillis v. Goodgame, 199 Ga. App. 413, 404 S.E.2d 815 (1991), rev'd on other grounds, 262 Ga. 117, 414 S.E.2d 197 (1992).

No final judgment. — Since there was no determination that there was no just reason for delay and express direction of final judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b), the orders which the plaintiff would appeal were interlocutory and not appealable without compliance with the interlocutory appeal procedure of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b). Wright v. Millines, 212 Ga. App. 453, 442 S.E.2d 300 (1994).

Denial of judgment n.o.v. appealable even though new trial granted. — Denial of a judgment notwithstanding the verdict can be considered on appeal even though a motion for a new trial has been granted, if an appeal is taken from a final judgment entered pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54. GMAC v. Bowen Motors, Inc., 167 Ga. App. 463, 306 S.E.2d 675 (1983).

Failure to include dismissal of a defendant in notice of appeal. — Because it is clear from the enumerations of error that the plaintiffs sought to appeal from the trial court's dismissal of the city as a defendant, as well as the grant of summary judgment as to other defendants, the failure to include the dismissal of the city in the notice of appeal does not prevent the court's review of the matter. Rea v. Bunce, 179 Ga. App. 628, 347 S.E.2d 676 (1986), overruled on other grounds, Martin v. Georgia Dep't of Pub. Safety, 257 Ga. 300, 357 S.E.2d 569 (1987).

In a condemnation case, the trial court errs in refusing to review and reconsider a "judgment on tenantability, suitability and lease termination" when such a judgment is not final pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth. v. Gould Investors Trust, 169 Ga. App. 303, 312 S.E.2d 629 (1983).

Specific reservation of issue of damages. — Trial court's order directing the entry of judgment against the defendant pursuant to subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54 does not constitute a "final" judgment which would preclude the application of the liberal criteria set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) for opening default when the trial court's order specifically reserves the issue of damages for later determination. Cryomedics, Inc. v. Smith, 180 Ga. App. 336, 349 S.E.2d 223 (1986).

Piece-meal review is not favored by the courts. Foley v. Shanahan, 133 Ga. App. 262, 211 S.E.2d 367 (1974).

Cause of action several rather than joint when legal theories differ. — After trial court enters judgment pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, determination must be made as to whether the cause of action is joint or several; a cause of action is several, as opposed to joint, when underlying legal theories which comprise the cause of action against the defendants are different. Dehler v. Setliff, 239 Ga. 19, 235 S.E.2d 540 (1977).

Fact that identical relief is demanded of several defendants does not make an otherwise several cause of action "joint," if legal theories against the individual deendants are dissimilar. Dehler v. Setliff, 239 Ga. 19, 235 S.E.2d 540 (1977).

Attorney's fees. — When a trial court grants judgment for a defendant on one count of a multi-count complaint and expressly directs entry of a final judgment under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54, the defendant must move for attorney's fees relating to that claim within 45 days of the judgment. Little v. GMC, 229 Ga. App. 781, 495 S.E.2d 572 (1998).

Summary judgment on one claim. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b) does not in any way preclude the granting of summary judgment on a claim, but merely authorizes a court, even though other claims may remain pending, to enter final judgment on one or more claims if the court makes certain express determinations; assuming a counterclaim by a debtor existed and remained pending in a suit brought against the debtor by a creditor, such did not prevent the trial court from granting summary judgment on the creditor's claim if there was no disputed material fact on that claim. Ahmad v. Excell Petroleum, Inc., 276 Ga. App. 167, 623 S.E.2d 6 (2005).

Seller was entitled to immediate judgment on a promissory note pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b) because the buyers failed to make payments on the note, and the buyers did not show damages in any amount from the alleged failure of consideration; the note was supported by adequate consideration because the buyers took immediate possession of the seller's business and began operating the business as the buyers' own. West v. Diduro, 312 Ga. App. 591, 718 S.E.2d 815 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0522, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 279 (Ga. 2012).

Relief Granted

Trial judge may grant relief although the relief was not specifically prayed for. Empire Banking Co. v. Martin, 133 Ga. App. 115, 210 S.E.2d 237 (1974).

Grant of equitable relief not prayed for authorized when raised. — When the issue is raised, the trial court is authorized to grant equitable relief even though that relief is not specifically prayed for. Logan v. Nunnally, 128 Ga. App. 43, 195 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Injunctive relief was authorized even though there was no express prayer therefor; however, the propriety of the relief must have been litigated and the opposing party must have had the opportunity to assert defenses to such relief. Church v. Darch, 268 Ga. 237, 486 S.E.2d 344 (1997).

Portion of default judgment exceeding prayer is nullity. — To the extent that a judgment by default exceeds the amount prayed for, the judgment is a nullity. Jones v. Cooke, 169 Ga. App. 516, 313 S.E.2d 773 (1984).

Notice to defaulting party required in medical malpractice actions. — Provisions of paragraph (c)(3) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54 requiring that notice of trial be served upon a defaulting party in a medical malpractice case involving a claim for damages exceeding $10,000.00 prevail over the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(a) providing that a defaulting party waives all notices of trial. Southwest Community Hosp. & Medical Ctr. v. Thompson, 165 Ga. App. 442, 301 S.E.2d 501 (1983).

Notice published in county organ inadequate. — Provision of paragraph (c)(3) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54 requiring that the notice of trial be served upon the defaulting party is not satisfied by publication of notice of trial in the official county organ. Southwest Community Hosp. & Medical Ctr. v. Thompson, 165 Ga. App. 442, 301 S.E.2d 501 (1983).

Grant of damages improper when only equitable relief sought. — When the plaintiff sought only equitable relief, the trial court's judgment awarding damages to the plaintiff was not proper. Bennett v. Blackwell, 157 Ga. App. 617, 278 S.E.2d 159 (1981).

Summary judgment proper when no genuine issue. — Court may properly grant summary judgment on a ground other than that assigned in the motion since it is clear there is no genuine issue of material fact. Colbert v. Piggly Wiggly S., 175 Ga. App. 44, 332 S.E.2d 304 (1985).

In every confirmation of sale case, issue of resale is always raised regardless of whether the issue has been affirmatively pled in the creditor's complaint, if the debtor is afforded an opportunity to defend against a confirmation as well as against resale. Adams v. Gwinnett Com. Bank, 140 Ga. App. 233, 230 S.E.2d 324 (1976), aff'd, 238 Ga. 722, 235 S.E.2d 476 (1977).

Failure to pray for in personam relief. — When the plaintiff's complaint set forth a claim for in personam relief against the defendant, failure to demand such relief among the prayers is of no consequences. Allied Asphalt Co. v. Cumbie, 134 Ga. App. 960, 216 S.E.2d 659 (1975).

Money judgment in excess of amount claimed but within range of evidence. — Language of subsection (c) of this section apparently recognizes the right of the claimant to a money judgment exceeding the amount claimed if within the range of the evidence. Jones v. Spindel, 122 Ga. App. 390, 177 S.E.2d 187 (1970), cert. dismissed, 227 Ga. 264, 180 S.E.2d 242 (1971).

Nominal damages need not be specifically prayed for. — Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), it is not necessary to pray specifically for general or nominal damages in order to present a jury question as to nominal damages. Bradley v. Godwin, 152 Ga. App. 782, 264 S.E.2d 262 (1979).

Prejudgment interest. — Plaintiff did not demand prejudgment interest in the plaintiff's complaint or amended complaint, but since the parties agreed to submit the issue of prejudgment interest to a special master, the plaintiff's failure to include a prayer for prejudgment interest did not preclude recovery of the prejudgment interest. Holloway v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 245 Ga. App. 319, 537 S.E.2d 121 (2000).

Motion to strike certain paragraphs of complaint is not motion to dismiss complaint, and the trial judge erred in so treating the motion and dismissing the complaint for alleged defects in portion of prayers for relief. Goette v. Darvoe, 119 Ga. App. 320, 166 S.E.2d 912 (1969).

Grant of relief in accord with evidence not authorized absent opportunity to litigate same. — Provisions of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) respecting amendment of pleadings by introduction of evidence and grant of relief in accordance with such evidence have no application when the propriety of such relief was not litigated and the opposing party had no opportunity to assert defenses to such relief. Cross v. Cross, 230 Ga. 91, 195 S.E.2d 439 (1973).

Wife's right to alimony is not "litigated" when husband has no notice by her pleading that she will claim alimony and does not defend the action. Lambert v. Gilmer, 228 Ga. 774, 187 S.E.2d 855 (1972).

Trial court could not raise defense of usury. — In an action to collect the amount due on a loan, the trial court was without authority to raise the defense of usury on behalf of the borrower and erred to the extent the contract excluded the award of interest in the default judgment on the basis that the loan contract was usurious. Ideal Loan & Fin. Corp. v. Little, 217 Ga. App. 385, 457 S.E.2d 274 (1995).

General prayer for relief insufficient to authorize default judgment for money damages. — General prayer "for such other and further relief, etc.", combined with an allegation of cash value, was not, under subsection (c) of this section, sufficient to authorize a default judgment for money damages. Dempsey v. Ellington, 125 Ga. App. 707, 188 S.E.2d 908 (1972).

Default judgment may not exceed or differ from relief prayed for. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) precludes default judgment from exceeding the amount of or differing in kind or form from that prayed for in demand for judgment. Hall County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Reed, 142 Ga. App. 556, 236 S.E.2d 532 (1977).

Judgment in default case granting more relief than originally requested is to that extent a nullity. Orkin Exterminating Co. v. Townsend, 136 Ga. App. 50, 220 S.E.2d 14 (1975).

Right to assume that only judgment demanded by plaintiff granted. — Defendant should have the right to submit without contest to a judgment specifically demand by the plaintiff in the plaintiff's complaint, and when the defendant so submits, should not be under an obligation to follow the proceedings to see to it that such a judgment is taken against the defendant, but should be protected in the assumption that only such a judgment can and will be granted. Dempsey v. Ellington, 125 Ga. App. 707, 188 S.E.2d 908 (1972).

Judgment by default may be corrected to conform to pleadings at subsequent term of court, even after execution has been issued and property sold. Williams v. Stancil, 119 Ga. App. 800, 168 S.E.2d 643 (1969).

Judgment void when defendant never afforded opportunity to be heard. — Trial court's order which granted full relief to a company seeking certain e-mail records from the Georgia Department of Agriculture was void; the notice for the case management hearing from which the order emanated did not satisfy the notice requirements in O.C.G.A. § 9-10-2(1) for a hearing on the full merits of the case as the notice stated only "small motions" and procedural matters would be considered, and the department was never afforded an opportunity to present the department's opposition to the request through an O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(c)(1) hearing. Ga. Dep't of Agric. v. Griffin Indus., 284 Ga. App. 259, 644 S.E.2d 286 (2007).

Assumption that temporary injunction contested and supported by evidence. — Absent transcript of evidence adduced upon interlocutory hearing, it must be assumed on appeal that each item covered by a temporary injunction was contested and that it was supported by the evidence. DeRose v. Holcomb, 226 Ga. 289, 174 S.E.2d 410 (1970).

When lien antedating final judgment not prayed for, default judgment unauthorized. — As judgments by default are not to be different in kind from or exceed in amount prayed for in demand for judgment, in bank's action seeking special lien on husband's property when bank's complaint contained no prayer for the extraordinary relief of a lien which would antedate the final judgment, the trial court was without authority to order a default judgment and the second trial court was correct in setting aside the bank's equitable lien. First Nat'l Bank v. Blackburn, 254 Ga. 379, 329 S.E.2d 897 (1985).

Grant of bank's motion to set aside default judgment against borrower was proper when a typographical error as to the amount sought in the demand for judgment was in the pleading rather than the judgment, and this defect was apparently intentionally waived by the borrower so as to serve in the borrower's favor in an attempt to take advantage of the limitation imposed by paragraph (c)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54 on damages that can be awarded by default judgment. Betts v. First Ga. Bank, 177 Ga. App. 359, 339 S.E.2d 616 (1985).

In a proceeding seeking an interlocutory injunction, the trial court was authorized to issue a permanent injunction if the evidence presented at the trial authorized the interlocutory injunction. United Cos. Lending Corp. v. Peacock, 267 Ga. 145, 475 S.E.2d 601 (1996).

Costs

Discretion of court. — Subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54 gives the trial court discretion in assessing costs. Gold Kist, Inc. v. Williams, 174 Ga. App. 849, 332 S.E.2d 22 (1985); Dacosta v. Allstate Ins. Co., 199 Ga. App. 292, 404 S.E.2d 627, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 404 S.E.2d 627 (1991).

Because the husband was the losing party on the parties' contested custody dispute in their divorce proceeding, the trial court had authority to assess the husband with the costs of that issue, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(d), including the cost of a guardian ad litem and a psychologist. Nguyen v. Dinh, 278 Ga. 887, 608 S.E.2d 211 (2005).

When one party won that party's appeal and the other party won its cross-appeal, the court's apportionment of costs (by splitting costs equally between the parties) is appropriate. Gold Kist, Inc. v. Williams, 174 Ga. App. 849, 332 S.E.2d 22 (1985).

Award was enforceable even though court did not employ subsection (b) language. — Trial court properly made an award of attorney fees and costs immediately enforceable, when although the court did not employ the language of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54 in directing entry of a final judgment on the award of attorney fees and costs, the court unequivocally expressed the court's intent for the award to be final by declaring the award to be a judgment enforceable by post judgment collection. American Express Co. v. Baker, 192 Ga. App. 21, 383 S.E.2d 576, cert. denied, 192 Ga. App. 901, 383 S.E.2d 576 (1989).

Judgment affirmed with direction that defendant pay plaintiff amount of premiums paid to insurer under contract is not sufficient relief to prevent liability for costs of court. Camp v. Fidelity Bankers Life Ins. Co., 129 Ga. App. 590, 200 S.E.2d 332 (1973).

Order denying costs vacated. — Order declining to award a limited liability company (LLC) costs was vacated, and the matter was remanded for reconsideration because the jury found in favor of property owners on the owners' claim for nuisance but not on the owners' additional claims for trespass and punitive damages; the jury found in favor of the LLC on the issue of whether replacement with a six-inch or eight-inch pipe would constitute a substantial change and on the LLC's counterclaim for conversion but not on the LLC's additional counterclaims for trespass and punitive damages. Parris Props., LLC v. Nichols, 305 Ga. App. 734, 700 S.E.2d 848 (2010).

Taxpayer entitled to fee award. — Fee awards afforded to the taxpayer the additional relief to which the taxpayer was statutorily entitled under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-54(c)(1) and 48-5-311(g)(4)(B)(ii). Fulton County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Toro Props. VI, LLC, 329 Ga. App. 26, 763 S.E.2d 496 (2014).

9-11-55. Default judgment.

(a) When case in default; opening as matter of right; judgment. If in any case an answer has not been filed within the time required by this chapter, the case shall automatically become in default unless the time for filing the answer has been extended as provided by law. The default may be opened as a matter of right by the filing of such defenses within 15 days of the day of default, upon the payment of costs. If the case is still in default after the expiration of the period of 15 days, the plaintiff at any time thereafter shall be entitled to verdict and judgment by default, in open court or in chambers, as if every item and paragraph of the complaint or other original pleading were supported by proper evidence, without the intervention of a jury, unless the action is one ex delicto or involves unliquidated damages, in which event the plaintiff shall be required to introduce evidence and establish the amount of damages before the court without a jury, with the right of the defendant to introduce evidence as to damages and the right of either to move for a new trial in respect of such damages; provided, however, in the event a defendant, though in default, has placed damages in issue by filing a pleading raising such issue, either party shall be entitled, upon demand, to a jury trial of the issue as to damages. An action based upon open account shall not be considered one for unliquidated damages within the meaning of this Code section.

(b) Opening default. At any time before final judgment, the court, in its discretion, upon payment of costs, may allow the default to be opened for providential cause preventing the filing of required pleadings or for excusable neglect or where the judge, from all the facts, shall determine that a proper case has been made for the default to be opened, on terms to be fixed by the court. In order to allow the default to be thus opened, the showing shall be made under oath, shall set up a meritorious defense, shall offer to plead instantly, and shall announce ready to proceed with the trial. General Consideration

Editor’s notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1910, §§ 5654 et seq., and 5662 and former Code 1933, §§ 110-401, 110-402, and 110-404 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 not controlling as to default. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55, not O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, is the controlling statute on the issue of default. A motion for summary judgment is not an appropriate means by which a plaintiff can secure a judgment based upon the defendant’s alleged default. Watson v. Georgia State Dep’t of Educ. Credit Union, 201 Ga. App. 761, 412 S.E.2d 286 (1991).

As there was no such thing as a default summary judgment, summary judgment was not authorized merely because a defendant filed a one-page response that contained no substantive argument and failed to comply with Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.5. Milk v. Total Pay & HR Solutions, Inc., 280 Ga. App. 449, 634 S.E.2d 208 (2006).

“Default” and “default judgment” distinguished. — Law distinguishes between a default, which involves an interlocutory matter, and a default judgment, which represents a final judicial action and the vesting of rights. Clements v. United Equity Corp., 125 Ga. App. 711, 188 S.E.2d 923 (1972); Lanier v. Foster, 133 Ga. App. 149, 210 S.E.2d 326 (1974).

Similarity of current and prior law. — This section is substantially the same as former Code 1933, § 110-401, as amended, which was repealed by enactment of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Sing Recording Co. v. LeFevre Sound Studios, Inc., 122 Ga. App. 327, 176 S.E.2d 657 (1970).

Language of this section relating to automatic default upon failure to answer or plead within time required is substantially the same as under the former practice applying in superior courts. Electro-Kinetics Corp. v. Wilson, 122 Ga. App. 171, 176 S.E.2d 604 (1970).

No conflict with probate court rule. — There is no conflict between O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 and Rule 13 of the Uniform Rules for the Probate Courts. Greene v. Woodard, 198 Ga. App. 427, 401 S.E.2d 617 (1991).

Default does not admit legal conclusions in complaint. — While a default operates as an admission of the well-pled factual allegations in a complaint, it does not admit the legal conclusions contained therein; as such, a default does not preclude a defendant from showing that under the facts as deemed admitted, no claim existed which would allow the plaintiff to recover. Fink v. Dodd, 286 Ga. App. 363, 649 S.E.2d 359 (2007).

Subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 governs an application for year's support and caveat filed in probate court. Greene v. Woodard, 198 Ga. App. 427, 401 S.E.2d 617 (1991).

No distinction between actions seeking money judgments and equity. — Section providing for default when the defendant has not answered as required is inapplicable to an action for divorce. Cohen v. Cohen, 209 Ga. 459, 74 S.E.2d 95 (1953); Brackett v. Brackett, 217 Ga. 84, 121 S.E.2d 146 (1961) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

This section makes no distinction between civil actions seeking money judgments and cases seeking relief in equity. Times-Journal, Inc. v. Jonquil Broadcasting Co., 226 Ga. 673, 177 S.E.2d 64 (1970).

Divorce cases. — Default provisions of this section have no application to divorce cases. Simpson v. Simpson, 240 Ga. 543, 242 S.E.2d 45 (1978).

Equitable division of marital property exempted from section. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 is authority for the grant of default judgments; however, O.C.G.A. § 19-5-8 specifically exempts from the general ambit of § 9-11-55 issues with regard to the equitable division of marital property. Brown v. Brown, 271 Ga. 887, 525 S.E.2d 359 (2000).

Disciplinary proceeding. — Subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 applies in a disciplinary proceeding; thus, in order to authorize the opening of an attorney's default, the attorney was required to show "providential cause," "excusable neglect," or a "proper case." In re Turk, 267 Ga. 30, 471 S.E.2d 842 (1996).

Modification of alimony. — Default provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 have no application to proceedings for modification of alimony. McElroy v. McElroy, 252 Ga. 553, 314 S.E.2d 893 (1984).

Motions to set aside or modify judgments. — This section has no application to motions to set aside or modify judgments. Southeast Ceramics, Inc. v. Ervin Co., 127 Ga. App. 346, 193 S.E.2d 262 (1972).

Collateral attack on valid default judgment unauthorized. — Trial court properly dismissed a business' contribution action, filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 51-12-32, on subject matter jurisdiction grounds as: (1) its finding that the business was the sole tortfeasor barred the action; (2) that finding was not void; (3) no appeal was taken from that finding; and (4) the suit amounted to an improper collateral attack on the default judgment entered against the business. State Auto Mut. Ins. Co. v. Relocation & Corporate Hous. Servs., 287 Ga. App. 575, 651 S.E.2d 829 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 163 (Ga. 2008).

Movant not entitled to default judgment. — Trial court did not err in denying an executor's motion for default judgment because, once the evidence showed that a paragraph of the complaint did not compel the conclusion that a warranty deed was void, the trial court was free to reject the conclusion contained in another paragraph of the complaint. Because the evidence revealed that the executor was not entitled to have the warranty deed set aside, the trial court did not err in denying the executor's motion for default judgment; furthermore, the executor failed to show a tender or refusal of tender, a condition precedent to an equitable action for cancellation of a deed, and the trial court did not err in permitting the introduction of evidence by the conveyees of the deed. Standridge v. Spillers, 263 Ga. App. 401, 587 S.E.2d 862 (2003).

Trial court erred in granting actual damages for orthodontic expenses, as well as punitive damages and attorney fees, to an ex-husband in a fraud claim against the ex-wife, arising from allegations that the ex-wife fraudulently misrepresented that the ex-wife's former husband had abandoned the daughters, which the ex-husband later adopted, as the divorce decree and the adoption order were presumptively valid and in full force and effect and, accordingly, the ex-husband could not recover for expenses that the ex-husband was legally obligated to pay; although the ex-wife failed to respond to the complaint, the trial court erred in granting the ex-husband a default judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a) because the relief was not available to him, and as there was no actual damages awarded, there could be no punitive damages under O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1(b) and no attorney fees. Grand v. Hope, 274 Ga. App. 626, 617 S.E.2d 593 (2005).

In an action between a contractor and a landowner alleging a breach of contract and other related claims in which disputes arising under the parties' contract were required to be submitted to arbitration, the superior court erred in entering a default judgment against the landowner, and in denying relief from the landowner, ignoring a stay pending arbitration, as the issues involved in the litigation were ones that fell under the parties' agreement. GF/Legacy Dallas, Inc. v. Juneau Constr. Co., LLC, 282 Ga. App. 14, 637 S.E.2d 511 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 157 (Ga. 2007).

In a suit arising from a contract for the sale of land, because the buyer waived the right to a default judgment by raising the issue of default for the first time on appeal, the trial court did not err in considering the seller's evidence and entering judgment in the seller's favor. Shirley v. Ficarrota, 285 Ga. App. 169, 645 S.E.2d 667 (2007).

Trial court did not err in denying a candidate's request for entry of a default judgment on a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim that a county board of elections (BOE) and board members violated the candidate's rights under the United States Constitution and on the claim that the board conspired to commit fraud against the candidate by attempting to have the candidate's name removed from the ballot in an election for county commissioner because the answer of the BOE and members to those claims was valid and timely when the BOE and members filed an answer within 30 days after service of the summons and petition; the judgment from which the BOE and members appealed addressed only the candidate's request for injunctive relief and did not address the merits of the candidate's claims for damages based on their alleged violations of the candidate's constitutional rights or their alleged acts of fraud against the candidate, and because those claims were distinct from the injunction appealed, those claims remained within the trial court's jurisdiction. Johnson v. Randolph County, 301 Ga. App. 265, 687 S.E.2d 223 (2009).

Default judgment proper. — Default judgment was properly entered against an LLC as the trial court did not err in holding that the LLC was required to be represented by counsel; further, without a hearing transcript, the appeals court was unable to review the LLC's claims that the trial court erred in denying the LLC the opportunity to hire counsel, file an amended answer, and hold a hearing on the amount of damages owed. Sterling, Winchester & Long, LLC v. Loyd, 280 Ga. App. 416, 634 S.E.2d 188 (2006).

Because a medical care provider failed to assert an available defense in the underlying action which would have absolved the provider from any liability and prevented a default judgment from entering against the provider, the trial court did not err in entering summary judgment against the provider on the provider's claims for contribution and indemnity. Emergency Professionals of Atlanta, P.C. v. Watson, 288 Ga. App. 473, 654 S.E.2d 434 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 407 (Ga. 2008).

Appeals of property evaluations. — As the appeal procedure outlined in O.C.G.A. § 48-5-311(f) does not contemplate the filing of a "complaint" or "answer," a default judgment will not lie for failure to file defensive pleadings in a de novo hearing on appeal in the superior court from a property evaluation. Rogers v. DeKalb County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 247 Ga. 726, 279 S.E.2d 223 (1981).

Default concept inapplicable to workers compensation enforcement proceeding. — Filing in superior court of a petition to enforce an award or a settlement agreement pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 34-9-106 is not a separate suit, but rather a continuation of the board of workers' compensation proceeding and the concept of default is not applicable. Wade v. Harris, 210 Ga. App. 882, 437 S.E.2d 863 (1993).

Forfeiture under § 16-13-49. — O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49 (forfeiture) is a special statutory proceeding which must be strictly construed and complied with, and as such, not all provisions of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, apply, including O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55. Fulton v. State, 183 Ga. App. 570, 359 S.E.2d 726 (1987).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 has no application to the forfeiture provisions of O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49 of the controlled substances law, which provides a special statutory proceeding to which default is not applicable. Hubbard v. State, 201 Ga. App. 213, 411 S.E.2d 44, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 904, 411 S.E.2d 44 (1991); Turner v. State, 213 Ga. App. 309, 444 S.E.2d 372 (1994).

Error in default judgment when no proof established negligence. — In a negligence action involving a nursing home, the trial court erred by entering a default judgment against two shareholder entities of the corporate nursing home as the complaint failed to allege any abuses of the corporate form on their part and did not allege that the shareholder entities actually mistreated the deceased resident. EnduraCare Therapy Mgmt. v. Drake, 298 Ga. App. 809, 681 S.E.2d 168 (2009).

Trial court could not raise defense of usury. — In an action to collect the amount due on a loan, the trial court was without authority to raise the defense of usury on behalf of the borrower and erred to the extent the court excluded the award of interest in the default judgment on the basis that the loan contract was usurious. Ideal Loan & Fin. Corp. v. Little, 217 Ga. App. 385, 457 S.E.2d 274 (1995).

Defendant's default operates as admission of material facts which are well and properly pled in the plaintiff's complaint. Summerour v. Medlin, 48 Ga. App. 403, 172 S.E. 836 (1934) (decided under former Code 1910, §§ 5655 and 5662).

Default only operates as an admission of the well-pled allegations of a complaint and does not preclude a defaulting party from showing that no claim existed that would permit recovery; therefore, although a management company for the landlord of a storage facility was in default, the company properly presented evidence showing that the tenant was limited to recovery for breach of contract, and that the tenant did not assert a valid tort claim based solely on the breach of contract. Lancaster v. Storage USA P'ship, L.P., 300 Ga. App. 567, 685 S.E.2d 474 (2009).

Judgment by default may be corrected to conform to pleadings at a subsequent term of court, even after execution has been issued and property sold. Williams v. Stancil, 119 Ga. App. 800, 168 S.E.2d 643 (1969).

In order to set aside a default judgment, the defendant must have not only a meritorious defense but a legal excuse for the defendant's nonappearance. West Court Square v. Assayag, 131 Ga. App. 690, 206 S.E.2d 579 (1974).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a corporate president's motion to open a default judgment as the corporate president's sole defense regarding why the president thought the default was improperly entered was that the trial court did not have personal jurisdiction over the president; however, the corporate president waived that defense by not properly raising the defense and since, in any event, that defense lacked merit, the trial court did not err in denying the motion to open the default judgment. Furthermore, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the motion as the corporate president did not even argue that the four conditions precedent were met for opening a default judgment and, thus, the trial court did not even have the discretion to consider whether one of the three grounds for opening a prejudgment default was present. Mitchell v. Gilwil Group, Inc., 261 Ga. App. 882, 583 S.E.2d 911 (2003).

Appeal from denial of motion to set aside default judgment. — Generally, denial of a motion to set aside a default judgment is appealable, without a certificate of immediate review; however, this is not automatically the case when multiple parties are involved. Cox v. Farmers Bank, 151 Ga. App. 64, 258 S.E.2d 731 (1979).

When the owners of a corporation sued waived a forum selection clause, the owners also waived the defenses of personal jurisdiction and venue by failing to raise the defenses at the earliest opportunity; thus, as non-parties to the underlying case, the owners could not otherwise appeal the default judgment against the corporation. Rice v. Champion Bldgs., Inc., 288 Ga. App. 597, 654 S.E.2d 390 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 326 (Ga. App. 2008).

Motion for "partial summary judgment" is not an appropriate means by which a plaintiff can secure a judgment based upon the defendant's alleged default. Williams v. Heykow, Inc., 171 Ga. App. 936, 321 S.E.2d 431 (1984).

Motion to strike pending. — It was error to grant a motion for default judgment without explicitly ruling on a pending motion to strike even though no answer was filed. Cato Oil & Grease Co. v. Lewis, 250 Ga. 24, 295 S.E.2d 527 (1982).

Motion for new trial. — Motion for a new trial is not a viable method to attack the liability portion of a default judgment, but such a motion is a viable method to attack the damages portion of a default judgment only insofar as the damages being sought are unliquidated. Nova Group, Inc. v. M.B. Davis Elec. Co., 187 Ga. App. 403, 370 S.E.2d 626, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 908, 370 S.E.2d 626 (1988).

Default judgment against one of several parties. — When the default judgment was entered against one party in a multiparty suit, the trial court erred in holding that the judgment was final and that the court was without discretion to vacate the judgment. Daniell v. Heyn, 169 Ga. App. 772, 315 S.E.2d 284 (1984).

Trial court's oral pronouncement of default on multiple parties not binding. — Trial court's oral announcement that the court was imposing a default judgment against a husband and his parents for abandonment of the husband's child was not binding on the trial court, and the court properly later determined that the court could not impose damages against the parents for the husband's abandonment. Bridges v. Wooten, 305 Ga. App. 682, 700 S.E.2d 678 (2010).

Plaintiff may waive right to default by proceeding to trial. — Statutory right to judgment following default is not an indefeasible right, but may or may not be asserted, and may be waived by a plaintiff by proceeding with the action without taking advantage of the plaintiff's right to judgment in a timely and proper manner. Ewing v. Johnston, 175 Ga. App. 760, 334 S.E.2d 703 (1985).

Default judgment is a final and appealable judgment. Smithson v. Harry Norman, Inc., 192 Ga. App. 796, 386 S.E.2d 546 (1989).

When Case in Default

Under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), all claims, whether in law or equity, require filing of an answer to preclude entry of a default judgment against the defendant. Times-Journal, Inc. v. Jonquil Broadcasting Co., 226 Ga. 673, 177 S.E.2d 64 (1970).

Automatic default after expiration of statutory period. — When no answer was filed by the defendant within the statutory time, and the time for filing was not extended or default opened as a matter of right within 15 days thereafter, the case was automatically in default, and the court erred in overruling the petitioner's oral motion to enter judgment in the petitioner's case when the case was duly called for trial, thereby rendering nugatory all further proceedings in the case. Chapman v. Commercial Bank, 208 Ga. 593, 68 S.E.2d 603 (1952) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

Trial court did not err in granting a financial corporation's motion for default judgment in an action to establish a lost security deed because the buyer failed to respond within the time period allowed by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55. Haamid v. First Franklin Fin. Corp., 299 Ga. App. 828, 683 S.E.2d 891 (2009).

Failure to perfect service. — Time for filing an answer never began to run because the plaintiff did not perfect service on any of the defendants in the case, and thus there was never a default. Nally v. Bartow County Grand Jurors, 280 Ga. 790, 633 S.E.2d 337 (2006).

Answer to amendment adding party not required. — Construing the pertinent provisions of O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-7, 9-11-8, 9-11-12, 9-11-15, and 9-11-21 in pari materia, it is clear that the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, authorizes the addition of parties, by order of the court, and that an “amended complaint” effecting such an addition does not require a responsive pleading unless the trial court orders a reply thereto. As the added party was not required by statute nor affirmatively ordered by the trial court to answer the amended complaint, it follows that the added party was never in default and the default judgment entered against the added party was void. Chan v. W-East Trading Corp., 199 Ga. App. 76, 403 S.E.2d 840, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 403 S.E.2d 840 (1991).

Trial court erred in entering a default judgment against a law firm sued by a client in a legal malpractice action as the law firm was not required to answer an amended complaint, which added the firm as a party, absent a court order directing the firm to file a responsive pleading. Stubbs v. Pickle, 287 Ga. App. 246, 651 S.E.2d 171 (2007).

Answer to be filed within 30 days after service. — Subsection (a) of this section requires an answer to be filed within the time required by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), in other words, within 30 days after service of the summons and complaint. Olvey v. Citizens & S. Bank, 146 Ga. App. 484, 246 S.E.2d 485 (1978).

Because a corporate president did not sign an original answer or submit a valid answer within 30 days, and an answer submitted for the president by a non-attorney corporate principal was not sufficient pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11(a), a default judgment was properly entered against the president under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55. Rainier Holdings, Inc. v. Tatum, 275 Ga. App. 878, 622 S.E.2d 86 (2005).

After a realty group acknowledged a waiver of service under O.C.G.A. § 9-10-73, the group had 30 days to file an answer, and upon failing to do so in that time period, a default judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 was validly entered in favor of a flooring company, despite the fact that the company failed to provide the group with notice pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(a); the group failed to assert a timely defense, and the default certificate filed by the company satisfied the requirements of Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 15. SRM Realty Servs. Group, LLC v. Capital Flooring Enters., 274 Ga. App. 595, 617 S.E.2d 581 (2005).

Because a plaintiff’s personal injury action against a driver lapsed into default due to the driver’s failure to timely file an answer or other responsive pleading, despite the fact that the driver could have moved to open the default, when no attempt was made to do so, the trial court erred in failing to grant the plaintiff a default judgment against the driver and in considering the driver’s motion to dismiss. Lewis v. Waller, 282 Ga. App. 8, 637 S.E.2d 505 (2006).

Extension of time to answer. — In determining whether a valid extension has been granted, O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-6(b) and 9-11-55(a) must be construed together. Roberson v. Gnann, 235 Ga. App. 112, 508 S.E.2d 480 (1998).

Response is required to a pleading construed as a third-party complaint, and default judgment is proper if the party fails to answer. Wolski v. Hayes, 144 Ga. App. 180, 240 S.E.2d 720 (1977).

Since no answer is required to counterclaim, case cannot go into default for failure to respond thereto, and no default judgment can be authorized on this ground. Wolski v. Hayes, 144 Ga. App. 180, 240 S.E.2d 720 (1977).

Failure to file defensive pleadings in de novo hearing on appeal in superior court for property evaluation for tax assessment purposes is not grounds for a default judgment. Hall County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Reed, 142 Ga. App. 556, 236 S.E.2d 532 (1977).

Failure to file certificate required by Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 15. — Because the information required in a Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 15 certificate of default (date and type of service, lack of responsive pleading) could also be found in the record, the failure to file a Rule 15 certificate was not a nonamendable defect in the record sufficient to authorize setting aside a default judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d). The plain language of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 entitled the plaintiff to default judgment when the defendant did not answer and 15 days had elapsed. Williams v. Contemporary Servs. Corp.,

Summons or process on which default based must comply with chapter. — Default judgment under subsection (a) of this section may not lawfully be entered on the basis of a summons or process which was not in compliance with the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Lee v. G.A.C. Fin. Corp., 130 Ga. App. 44, 202 S.E.2d 221 (1973).

Mere filing of a default summary judgment motion did not result in the entry of a default judgment. — Nothing showed a final or conclusive judgment on the merits in plaintiff home buyer's state court case against defendant companies, and the buyer's mere filing of a default summary judgment motion did not result in the entry of a default judgment; thus, the Rooker-Feldman doctrine did not preclude federal jurisdiction upon removal. Jones v. Commonwealth Land Title Ins. Co., No. 11-13469, 2012 U.S. App. LEXIS 1487 (11th Cir. Jan. 25, 2012), cert. dismissed, mot. denied, U.S. , 133 S. Ct. 35, 183 L. Ed. 2d 671 (2012) (Unpublished).

Defendant who defaults does not waive defects in service, even when the defendant receives actual notice of the lawsuit. Dotson v. Luxtron, Inc., 155 Ga. App. 504, 271 S.E.2d 644 (1980).

Late return of service not fatal to default. — When return of service, while filed late, was filed prior to the entry of a default judgment, and there was no attack on the service itself, the court did not err in denying the motions to set aside the default judgment and to dismiss the action. Olvey v. Citizens & S. Bank, 146 Ga. App. 484, 246 S.E.2d 485 (1978).

Late answer filed by uninsured motorist carrier. — Trial court erred in denying an insured's motion for a default judgment and granting the uninsured motorist carrier's motion for summary judgment because the court relied upon a typographical error in case law in determining that the carrier's answer was not filed late and thereby finding that the carrier was not in default. Kelly v. Harris, 329 Ga. App. 752, 766 S.E.2d 146 (2014).

Default operates to admit only the well-pleaded allegations of the complaint and the fair inferences and conclusions of fact to be drawn therefrom; thus, a defendant in default is not precluded by operation of the default from showing that no claim existed which could allow the plaintiff to recover. Azarat Mktg. Group, Inc. v. Department of Admin. Affairs, 245 Ga. App. 256, 537 S.E.2d 99 (2000).

Trial court did not err in awarding damages to an attorney on default judgment without conducting a trial or requiring evidence of the reasonableness of the attorney fees because, in a lawsuit seeking the balance due on an account when the case was in default under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a), a doctor was deemed to have admitted each and every allegation of the attorney's petition. Vaughters v. Outlaw, 293 Ga. App. 620, 668 S.E.2d 13 (2008).

Default judgment held not abuse of discretion. — When party ignores interrogatories served on the party, does not appear at a court-ordered hearing on failure to answer, and further ignores a court order to answer within 30 days, it is not an abuse of discretion to enter a default judgment and assess costs against the party. Williamson v. Lunsford, 119 Ga. App. 240, 166 S.E.2d 622 (1969).

Answer required from all parties named in complaint. — When an answer was filed in the name of only one of four separate entities named as defendants in the action, the other three defendants could not benefit from the answer and, having filed no answer of their own, were in default. McCombs v. Southern Regional Medical Ctr., Inc., 233 Ga. App. 676, 504 S.E.2d 747 (1998).

Default judgment against joint defendants. — If the alleged liability is joint, a default judgment should not be entered against a defaulting defendant until all of the defendants have defaulted; or if one or more do not default then, as a general proposition, entry of judgment should await an adjudication as to the liability of the nondefaulting defendant(s). Stasco Mechanical Contractors v. Williamson, 157 Ga. App. 545, 278 S.E.2d 127 (1981).

Entitlement to verdict and judgment. — When the case lapsed into default after the expiration of the grace period, the plaintiff became entitled to a verdict and judgment by default as if every item and paragraph of the plaintiff's complaint was supported by proper evidence. Sidwell v. Sidwell, 237 Ga. App. 716, 515 S.E.2d 634 (1999).

Forfeiture actions under § 16-13-49.

— Procedures for opening default as a matter of right under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 are applicable, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-81, in forfeiture actions under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49. Ford v. State, 271 Ga. 162, 516 S.E.2d 778 (1999), reversing Ford v. State, 235 Ga. App. 755, 509 S.E.2d 734 (1998) and overruling State v. Britt Caribe, Ltd., 154 Ga. App. 476, 268 S.E.2d 702 (1980).

After an accused failed to appear or otherwise file an answer in a condemnation proceeding filed against the accused in connection with the accused's arrest for possession of methamphetamine, and the accused failed to show that counsel was ineffective in failing to file an answer, the state was properly granted judgment. Walters v. State of Ga., 269 Ga. App. 883, 605 S.E.2d 458 (2004).

Remand required to determine if default. — Remand was required for further proceedings as the record did not make it clear whether, after the moving company defaulted on the customer's complaint and the trial court awarded unliquidated damages to the customer, an evidentiary hearing was held at which the customer established the amount of damages as was required upon a default by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a). Wise Moving & Storage, Inc. v. Rieser-Roth, 259 Ga. App. 832, 578 S.E.2d 535 (2003).

Defendant who defaults is estopped from offering defenses to defeat the right of recovery. — When a law firm sued a client to collect the balance owed to the law firm for legal services that the firm rendered to the client and a default judgment was entered against the client for the client's failure to file an answer, the trial court did not err in awarding the firm attorney fees incurred in bringing the suit to collect the fees owed as the fee agreement allowed the firm to receive reimbursement for the firm's fees in collecting on the debt, and the client, by virtue of the client's default, was estopped from raising the client's asserted defense that the agreement was not binding on the parties. Sprowell v. Thomas & Hutson, 260 Ga. App. 312, 581 S.E.2d 322 (2003).

Defect in answer cured and default error.

— Because a lessee waited over a month to file a motion to open a default without an explanation for the delay, the lessee was estopped from contending that the damages awarded to the lessor were not authorized by the lease; therefore, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a), the trial court properly denied the lessee's motion to open the default judgment. Broad. Concepts v. Optimus Fin. Servs., 274 Ga. App. 632, 618 S.E.2d 612 (2005).

Defect in a corporation's answer, through a nonattorney corporate principal, was cured by the filing of an answer by a licensed attorney, and the properly filed answer related back to the date of the original answer, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c); accordingly, it was error to enter a default judgment against the corporation, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55. Rainier Holdings, Inc. v. Tatum, 275 Ga. App. 878, 622 S.E.2d 86 (2005).

Denial of motion for default judgment error when party failed to answer.

— Denial of a listing broker's motion for default judgment against a buyer was error because the buyer did not file an answer, the time for filing an answer was not extended, and under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a), the buyer's case was automatically in default 30 days after the buyer was served; further, the buyer did not move to open the default. The trial court's earlier findings on cross-motions for summary judgment regarding the co-defendant's lack of contractual liability were irrelevant to the issue of whether the listing broker was entitled to a default judgment. H.N. Real Estate Group, LLC v. Dixon, 298 Ga. App. 124, 679 S.E.2d 130 (2009).

Waiver of default. — Executor of the decedent's estate waived the right to seek a default judgment in a medical malpractice lawsuit because the executor allowed the health care provider to file an untimely answer and then waited over a year and a half before moving for, or otherwise raising, the issue of default, while in the meantime engaging in efforts to compel discovery responses and joining with the health care provider in filing motions to extend the completion of discovery. Laurel Baye Healthcare of Macon, LLC v. Neubauer, 315 Ga. App. 474, 726 S.E.2d 670 (2012).

Proof of Damages1. In General

Phrase “ex delicto” in subsection (a) of this section describes a tort. Taylor v. Stapp, 134 Ga. App. 468, 215 S.E.2d 23 (1975).

Driver in default entitled to discovery. — Even though the issue of liability was resolved by a driver’s default, the question of damages remained; the driver was entitled to introduce evidence as to damages and the driver had the right to engage in discovery. Russaw v. Burden, 272 Ga. App. 632, 612 S.E.2d 913 (2005).

Each material allegation of complaint admitted except as to damages. — When judgment by default is rendered in case in which damages are not liquidated, the defendant is thereby concluded as to the truth of all material allegations of the petition save as to the amount of damages. Summerour v. Medlin, 48 Ga. App. 403, 172 S.E. 836 (1934) (decided under former Code 1910, §§ 5655 and 5662).

Defendant in default in action for damages arising out of a collision is in the position of having admitted each and every material allegation of the plaintiff’s complaint, except as to the amount of damages suffered by the plaintiff. Whitby v. Maloy, 150 Ga. App. 575, 258 S.E.2d 181 (1979).

Trial court properly denied an injured party’s motion for a default judgment as the driver did not dispute that the driver was in default, thereby admitting every material allegation of the complaint, except the amount of damages; as the driver contested damages, the trial court properly set the case for trial as to proximate cause and damages; the injured party was not entitled to court costs as the driver did not seek to open the default. Russaw v. Burden, 272 Ga. App. 632, 612 S.E.2d 913 (2005).

When action based upon liquidated demand is in default, judgment may be entered in favor of the plaintiff without introduction of evidence. Haney v. Brownlee, 102 Ga. App. 424, 116 S.E.2d 347 (1960) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

When contract action based on liquidated demand is in default, judgment may be entered in favor of the plaintiff without introduction of evidence, as if every item and paragraph of the petition were supported by proper evidence. Dickey v. Mingledorff, 110 Ga. App. 454, 138 S.E.2d 735 (1964) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

Debt or demand is liquidated when agreed on by parties or fixed as to amount by operation of law. Shaef Chem. Co. v. Cook, 106 Ga. App. 223, 126 S.E.2d 806 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

If damages are unliquidated, evidence in support thereof must be introduced; otherwise, judgment may be taken without evidence. Wallis v. McMurray, 91 Ga. App. 549, 86 S.E.2d 529 (1955) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

Damages are unliquidated when petition alleges that sum is due as reasonable value of services. Wallis v. McMurray, 91 Ga. App. 549, 86 S.E.2d 529 (1955) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

Attorney’s fees. — While ordinarily attorney’s fees are thought to be in the nature of unliquidated damages, attorney’s fees in a stipulated percentage of a liquidated amount may also be a liquidated claim. Young v. John Deere Plow Co., 102 Ga. App. 132, 115 S.E.2d 770 (1960) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

In a default situation, a request for unliquidated damages, such as attorney’s fees, requires an evidentiary hearing at which each attorney must provide admissible evidence of fees in the form of personal testimony, or through the testimony of the custodian of the applicable billing records as an exception to the hearsay rule. Oden v. Legacy Ford-Mercury, Inc., 222 Ga. App. 666, 476 S.E.2d 43 (1996).

No necessity for open account for liquidated damages. — Subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 imposes no requirement that the cause of action be based on an open account in order for the damages to be considered liquidated. Pittard Mach. Co. v. Eisele Corp., 166 Ga. App. 324, 304 S.E.2d 129 (1983).

Damages for a complaint on an open account are liquidated. Tidwell v. Cherokee Culvert Co., 168 Ga. App. 613, 310 S.E.2d 15 (1983).

Damages were not liquidated for purposes of a default judgment since the contract was not attached to the complaint and only a conclusory allegation was made that a certain sum was due. Hazlett & Hancock Constr. Co. v. Virgil Womack Constr. Co., 181 Ga. App. 25, 351 S.E.2d 218 (1986); Carter v. Ravenwood Dev. Co., 249 Ga. App. 603, 549 S.E.2d 402 (2001).

Trial court's determination that damages alleged were liquidated was erroneous since invoices or agreements from which the amount of damages were derived were not attached to the complaint and incorporated therein. T.A.I. Computer, Inc. v. CLN Enters., Inc., 237 Ga. App. 646, 516 S.E.2d 340 (1999).

When complaint alleges account in certain amount, damage evidence unnecessary. — When the trial court bases a default judgment as to liability and damages on the count of the complaint which alleges an account stated in an amount certain, the movant is entitled to a judgment without presenting evidence of damages. Ale-8-One of Am., Inc. v. Graphicolor Servs., Inc., 166 Ga. App. 506, 305 S.E.2d 14 (1983).

Damages are "ex contractu" when plaintiff seeks recovery for rent due under a lease. Maolud v. Keller, 157 Ga. App. 430, 278 S.E.2d 80 (1981).

Strict proof of damages required. — Under this section, a case does not automatically become in default upon failure to timely file responses when the action involves unliquidated damages, in which event the plaintiff is required to introduce evidence and establish the amount of damages. Hall County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Reed, 142 Ga. App. 556, 236 S.E.2d 532 (1977).

Failure to answer in action for damages arising from collision does not result in admission of existence of any amount of damages, and strict proof of damages is required by law. Whitby v. Maloy, 150 Ga. App. 575, 258 S.E.2d 181 (1979).

When an action is ex delicto, the plaintiff is required to establish the plaintiff's damages by evidence before a jury. Maolud v. Keller, 157 Ga. App. 430, 278 S.E.2d 80 (1981).

Under the provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55, the plaintiff in an ex contractu action for unliquidated damages must prove the amount of the plaintiff's damages even if the defendant is in default. The debt is liquidated when it is rendered certain what is due and how much is due. Copelan v. O'Dwyer, 159 Ga. App. 750, 285 S.E.2d 216 (1981).

After the plaintiff presented cash receipts as evidence of deposits totaling a certain sum with the officer of a credit union, which the officer refused to return, it was error to deny the plaintiff's motion for a default judgment on unliquidated damages. Ward v. Dollar, 216 Ga. App. 143, 453 S.E.2d 142 (1995).

Defendant's failure to answer did not result in the admission of the existence of any amount of damages, and it could properly contest the issue of damages by rigid cross-examination and by the introduction of evidence so long as the cross-examination did not touch on the issue of liability. Magnan v. Miami Aircraft Support, Inc., 217 Ga. App. 855, 459 S.E.2d 592 (1995).

Because the damages sought by an advertiser were not proven as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a) and because no due process violation for want of notice occurred, the trial court properly denied the advertiser's request for damages. BellSouth Adver. & Publ. Corp. v. Kingdom Adventures, LLC, 277 Ga. App. 495, 627 S.E.2d 125 (2006).

Trial court erred in entering a default judgment in the amount of $15,000 against a home inspector because a purchaser's damages were unliquidated, and other than the prayer in the purchaser's complaint for $15,000, the purchaser made no showing of the amount of damages; the purchaser's failure to prove the purchaser's damages constituted a nonamendable defect within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(3) of the Georgia Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9. Strickland v. Leake, 311 Ga. App. 298, 715 S.E.2d 676 (2011).

Default held not to liquidate amount sued for. — When a complaint did not establish, even with its allegations admitted by virtue of default, that a service provider and its client operated under an open account arrangement, nor did it appear from the complaint that the amount was liquidated as between the parties, the fact of default did not render it liquidated. James C. Welch Constr. Co. v. Quantum Group, Inc., 188 Ga. App. 740, 374 S.E.2d 232 (1988).

Judge hearing evidence without jury. — In contract action for unliquidated damages, the trial judge may hear evidence from the plaintiff without a jury and render a judgment. Rogers v. Griggs, 235 Ga. 273, 219 S.E.2d 372 (1975).

Necessity of proof of damages on default for failure to comply with discovery. — Although Ga. L. 1970, p. 157, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-37(d)), relating to sanctions for failure to comply with discovery, is silent as to the necessity of proof of damages when judgment by default has been imposed against a disobedient party, principles of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 24 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a)) should apply to a judgment by default imposed thereunder. House v. Hewett Studios, Inc., 125 Ga. App. 127, 186 S.E.2d 584 (1971); Sterling Factors v. Whelan, 245 B.R. 698 (N.D. Ga. 2000).

Proof of damages against guarantor of open account. — Creditor who obtains default judgment against debtor on open account must prove damages under subsection (a) of this section when the creditor similarly obtains default judgment against the debtor's guarantor, since as to the guarantor, the creditor's action was not one on open account but on the guaranty contract. Graybar Elec. Co. v. Opp, 138 Ga. App. 456, 226 S.E.2d 271 (1976).

Amount admitted by guarantor's principal not conclusive. — Guarantor is not conclusively bound by a judgment or the amount admitted due by the guarantor's principal, and such amount is only prima facie evidence of liability to the creditor; while a default judgment against a guarantor as to liability based on the guarantor's failure to answer the complaint was proper, the trial court erred in granting a judgment against the guarantor without proof of damages, and the case was remanded for further proceedings regarding the damages owed by the guarantor. McCorvey Grading & Pipeline, Inc. v. Blalock Oil Co., 268 Ga. App. 795, 602 S.E.2d 842 (2004).

Proof required in attachment proceeding. — Even if no appearance or answer is filed by the defendant in an attachment proceeding in rem, the plaintiff must still prove allegations of the plaintiff's declaration by a preponderance of the evidence before the plaintiff is entitled to recover any damages resulting therefrom. Homasote Co. v. Stanley, 104 Ga. App. 636, 122 S.E.2d 523 (1961) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

Matters relating to liability foreclosed. — By failure of the defendant in a tort action to answer or by dismissal of an answer, the case is in default and the defendant is foreclosed as to all matters relating to the grounds of liability inhering in the tort action; thereafter, the only issue is the amount of damages to be awarded. Lee v. Morrison, 138 Ga. App. 332, 226 S.E.2d 124 (1976).

Defense which goes to right of recovery. — Upon assessment of damages, defense which goes to the right of recovery cannot be made. Flanders v. Hill Aircraft & Leasing Corp., 137 Ga. App. 286, 223 S.E.2d 482 (1976).

Defense to assessment of damages which goes to the right of recovery cannot be made. Lee v. Morrison, 138 Ga. App. 332, 226 S.E.2d 124 (1976).

Defenses which go to the right of recovery, such as the doctrine of comparative negligence, are not available to the defendant in default, even though the same defense may also go to the assessment of damages. Whitby v. Maloy, 150 Ga. App. 575, 258 S.E.2d 181 (1979).

Defenses that go to the right of recovery are not available to the defendant in default even though the same defense also may go to the assessment of damages. Gibbs v. Abiose, 235 Ga. App. 214, 508 S.E.2d 690 (1998).

Defendant's waiver of right to introduce evidence. — Defendant who fails to answer a suit is given rights under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 to introduce evidence on damages; however, because the defendant failed to answer the suit at all, the rights are deemed waived. Erwin v. Gibson, 205 Ga. App. 136, 421 S.E.2d 752, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 421 S.E.2d 752 (1992).

Nonapplicability of § 9-11-15(b) to default. — Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b)), which provides that when issues not raised by the pleadings are tried by express or implied consent, the issues shall be treated in all respects as if the issues had been raised in the pleadings, has no application when the defendant is precluded by default from raising such an issue. Lee v. Morrison, 138 Ga. App. 332, 226 S.E.2d 124 (1976).

Necessity of determining plaintiff's entitlement to equitable relief. — When case not in equity is in default, the plaintiff is entitled to a default judgment as a matter of law without introduction of any evidence except as to unliquidated damages; however, in equity cases, a determination must first be made that admitting every allegation in the petition as true, the plaintiff is entitled to the relief sought. Times-Journal, Inc. v. Jonquil Broadcasting Co., 226 Ga. 673, 177 S.E.2d 64 (1970).

Amount of damages not to be adjudicated on motion for summary judgment. — When the plaintiff's complaint presents a claim for unliquidated damages, the amount of such damages cannot be adjudicated by the court on a motion for summary judgment, but must be proved as provided by law. Republic Ins. Co. v. Cook, 129 Ga. App. 833, 201 S.E.2d 668 (1973).

Matters in statement of account supported by proper evidence. — In defaulted action on account, when statement of account attached as exhibit to complaint lists debtor corporation by tradename, under this section these matters, as well as those pertaining to materials furnished and amount due as shown on the statement of account, must be deemed "supported by proper evidence," so that the corporation has been duly adjudicated an account debtor in a specified amount. Tri-State Culvert Mfg., Inc. v. Crum, 139 Ga. App. 448, 228 S.E.2d 403 (1976).

Section as authority in cases not involving default. — Order that trial as to amount of unliquidated damages, after grant of summary judgment as to liability, be held without jury pursuant to subsection (a) of this section was not error as this section has been specifically cited by the appellate courts in cases not involving default judgments for proving unliquidated damages when there is no question which a jury must decide. C.P.D. Chem. Co. v. National Car Rental Sys., 148 Ga. App. 756, 252 S.E.2d 665 (1979).

Punitive damages. — Even if the trial court erred in awarding punitive damages in a default judgment case by not making a specific finding on a verdict form that punitive damages were authorized, the error was harmless; prior to awarding the punitive damages, the trial court conducted a separate hearing and received evidence on damages thereby satisfying the statutory requirements. Hill v. Johnson, 210 Ga. App. 824, 437 S.E.2d 801 (1993).

Proof not required. — When, according to the contract, upon breach by the purchaser the broker was entitled to keep up to one-half of the earnest money as the broker's commission, with the balance of the earnest money to be retained by the seller as liquidated damages, inasmuch as there was no broker entitled to a commission, the seller was entitled to keep all of the earnest money as liquidated damages pursuant to the contract. Since the parties agreed to the damages for breach of the contract, the damages were liquidated, and the seller was entitled to a judgment without putting on evidence of damages. McGuire v. Norris, 180 Ga. App. 383, 349 S.E.2d 261 (1986).

When evidence to mitigate punitive damages not allowed. — In an action for trespass, after the defendant's motion to open the defendant's default had been denied and the case proceeded to trial on the issue of compensatory and punitive damages, the trial court correctly refused defendant permission to question the plaintiff concerning whether the plaintiff knew that an easement had allegedly existed on the affected property and also correctly refused to permit the defendant to attempt to mitigate punitive damages by presenting evidence concerning the alleged existence of such an easement, since, although such evidence might have affected the amount of punitive damages assessed, it also bore upon the right of recovery, which had already been established by the factum of the default. Krystal Co. v. Carter, 180 Ga. App. 667, 350 S.E.2d 306 (1986).

No error in trial court granting judgment for damages and attorney fees. — See Danger v. Strother, 171 Ga. App. 607, 320 S.E.2d 613 (1984).

2. Jury Trial of Damage Issue

Editor's notes. — Prior to amendment by Ga. L. 1981, p. 769, § 1, this section required the amount of damages as to actions ex delicto to be tried before a jury. The 1981 amendment deleted this requirement, and inserted the proviso in subsection (a) of this section as to entitlement to a jury trial on demand on the issue of damages in the event defendant raised the issue. Hence, cases prior to the 1981 amendment should be consulted with care.

Requirement under local Act that nonappearing defendant must have demanded jury. — Since this section contemplates foregoing default judgment, it is incorrect to interpolate requirement under local Act that nonappearing defendant must have spoken up to demand a jury to determine the amount of damages to avoid waiver. Canal Ins. Co. v. Cambron, 240 Ga. 708, 242 S.E.2d 32, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 805, 99 S. Ct. 61, 58 L. Ed. 2d 98 (1978).

Amount of damages due has to be fixed by the jury, even when the defendant is in default, but otherwise allegations of petition are to be taken as true.

Flanders v. Hill Aircraft & Leasing Corp., 137 Ga. App. 286, 223 S.E.2d 482 (1976); Lee v. Morrison, 138 Ga. App. 332, 226 S.E.2d 124 (1976).

Evidence of amount of damages admissible. — Evidence was admissible that the damage sustained by the plaintiff's automobile was the same as that sustained in a previous collision, even though the defendant was in default on the issue of liability, since this evidence did not challenge the defendant's liability for damages or the plaintiff's right to recover damages, but went only to the amount of damages. Gibbs v. Abiose, 235 Ga. App. 214, 508 S.E.2d 690 (1998).

Absent jury trial damage award void. — In an action ex delicto, the plaintiff is required to establish damages by evidence before a jury, and when a jury is not impanelled, that part of the default judgment awarding damages to the plaintiff is void. Singleton v. Varnedoe, 141 Ga. App. 311, 234 S.E.2d 86 (1977).

Right to force jury trial is limited. — Right of the defendant in default to force a jury trial on the issue of damages is limited to those instances in which the action is ex delicto or the damages sought are unliquidated. Fadum v. Liakos, 186 Ga. App. 556, 367 S.E.2d 843, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 917, 367 S.E.2d 843 (1988).

Right of defendant to contest amount of damages. — If the plaintiff is required to produce evidence as to the amount of the damages, the defendant impliedly has the right to contest that amount. Ben Hyman & Co. v. Solow, 101 Ga. App. 249, 113 S.E.2d 489 (1960) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

Defendants were entitled to a trial on damages, to notice of a trial on damages, and to ask for a jury trial on damages, but were accorded none of these rights; therefore, it could not be concluded that the defendants had a full and fair opportunity to litigate the issues so as to apply the equitable doctrine of collateral estoppel. Sterling Factors, Inc. v. Whelan, 236 Bankr. 495 (Bankr. N.D. Ga. 1999).

Right of both parties to move for new trial on damage issues. — Legislature did not intend to give the right of appeal to the plaintiff only and withhold the right from the defendant, but to give both parties the right to move for a new trial and to except on issue of amount of damages. Ben Hyman & Co. v. Solow, 101 Ga. App. 249, 113 S.E.2d 489 (1960) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

Failure to make specific demand. — When the defendant merely informed the trial court of the defendant's right to a jury trial on the issue of damages and did not at any time make a specific demand for a jury trial on the issue as to damages, and the defendant failed to make any objection when the judge made the rulings, a demand for jury trial of the issue as to damages was never made an issue before the trial court; thus, no question was presented for appellate review. Stephenson v. Wildwood Farms, Inc., 194 Ga. App. 728, 391 S.E.2d 706 (1990).

Upon a review of the evidence before the trial court, because neither of an individual's filed documents amounted to a "pleading" which placed damages in issue, neither document was in the nature of a formal answer, and neither actually disputed the amount of damages claimed, the trial court did not err in denying the individual a jury trial on the issue of damages; hence, the appeals court noted that to avoid doubt and confusion in the future, a defendant desiring a jury trial should file an answer specifically contesting damages and a demand for jury trial on the issue of damages, both clearly labeled as such. Diaz v. Wills, 286 Ga. App. 357, 649 S.E.2d 353 (2007).

When there was no stipulation that the jury would consist of less than 12 jurors, as provided by Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 34 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-47(a)), the default judgment entered after the trial before 11 jurors was void as not before a jury. First Fid. Ins. Corp. v. Busbia, 128 Ga. App. 485, 197 S.E.2d 396 (1973).

Defendant erroneously precluded from offering evidence. — By deeming claims of wrongful termination and slander as admitted due to a defendant's default in the action, the trial court erred since only well-pled facts in the complaint were deemed admitted by the default, not legal conclusions contained in the complaint; as a result, the trial court erred by precluding the defendant from offering evidence to contradict those claims at a hearing on damages. Fink v. Dodd, 286 Ga. App. 363, 649 S.E.2d 359 (2007).

Defendant's right unaffected by discovery sanction. — Defendant, whose answer denying liability for personal injuries was dismissed as a discovery sanction, was still entitled to notice of the trial on damages and, upon demand, a jury trial on that issue. Green v. Snellings, 260 Ga. 751, 400 S.E.2d 2 (1991).

Opening Default

1. In General

Liberal construction. — Provisions relating to opening of defaults should be given a liberal construction in promotion of justice and establishment of the truth. Bradley v. Henderson, 56 Ga. App. 488, 193 S.E. 79 (1937); Haynes v. Smith, 99 Ga. App. 433, 108 S.E.2d 772 (1959); Strickland v. Galloway, 111 Ga. App. 683, 143 S.E.2d 3 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Rule permitting opening of default is remedial in nature and should be liberally applied, for default judgment is a drastic sanction that should be invoked only in extreme situations. Whenever possible, cases should be decided on their merits for a default judgment is not favored in the law. Boynton v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 207 Ga. App. 756, 429 S.E.2d 304 (1993).

Criteria for opening default. — At any time before final judgment, a judge in the judge's discretion may allow a defendant to open a default, upon payment of costs: (a) for providential cause which prevented filing of a plea; (b) for excusable neglect; or (c) when a judge determines that a proper case has been made for default to be opened on terms fixed by the court. Johnson v. Dockery, 222 Ga. 569, 150 S.E.2d 921 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

As a condition precedent to opening a default, the defendant must set up a meritorious defense, offer to plead instant, and answer ready to proceed with the trial. Johnson v. Dockery, 222 Ga. 569, 150 S.E.2d 921 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Opening Default (Cont'd)1. In General (Cont'd)

Under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55, a prejudgment default may be opened on one of three grounds if four conditions are met. The three grounds are: (1) providential cause, (2) excusable neglect, and (3) proper case; the four conditions are: (1) showing made under oath, (2) offer to plead instant, (3) announcement of ready to proceed with trial, and (4) setting up a meritorious defense. C.W. Matthews Contracting Co. v. Walker, 197 Ga. App. 345, 398 S.E.2d 297 (1990).

Compliance with the four conditions of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 is a condition precedent to opening a prejudgment default, and once met, the question of whether to open the default rests within the sound discretion of the trial court. Anderson v. Flake, 270 Ga. 141, 508 S.E.2d 650 (1998).

Failure to meet statutory requirements. — When the driver's motion to dismiss the complaint and open the default judgment did not contain "a motion to open default judgment" or "an express announcement that he was ready to proceed to trial, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b)," the motion to open the default did not contain all the statutory requirements; thus, the trial court did not have discretion to open the default and erred in granting the driver's motion to dismiss. Cotton v. Lamb, 265 Ga. App. 73, 593 S.E.2d 19 (2003).

Trial court properly declined to vacate a default judgment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b), entered in favor of a development company as to claims that a subdivision association improperly charged various fees as the association's board of directors failed to reply to the company's claims made after the association intervened in the action, and none of the statutory factors allowing vacation were met; however, the trial court erred in permanently enjoining the association from charging the company water service fees as the default did not admit the company's conclusions of law, and covenants on the property allowed the association to charge the water service fees. Crawford v. Dammann, 277 Ga. App. 442, 626 S.E.2d 632 (2006).

Because a party seeking to open a default did not satisfy any of the three O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) grounds for opening a default, a trial court had no discretion to open the default; a city did not show excusable neglect by arguing that the city sent the complaint to the city's insurer, since the city did nothing to ensure that the insurer received the complaint or that an answer was filed; the trial court erred in setting the default aside. Williams v. City of Atlanta, 280 Ga. App. 785, 635 S.E.2d 165 (2006).

Because the plaintiff presented sufficient evidence that, after filing the plaintiff's complaint, the plaintiff provided the sheriff's office with the defendant's correct address, and a few weeks later, contacted the sheriff's office to inquire whether service had been completed upon the defendant and learned that repeated service attempts were unsuccessful, evidence of reasonable diligence supporting the denial of a motion to set aside a default judgment was found; moreover, unlike O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(e)(1), service via overnight delivery was supported and did not violate the defendant's due process rights. B&B Quick Lube, Inc. v. G&K Servs. Co., 283 Ga. App. 299, 641 S.E.2d 198 (2007).

In an action filed for payment of a debt, because a guarantor of that debt failed to provide either a meritorious defense or present sufficient facts to substantiate a claim of excusable neglect, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the guarantor's motion to open the default judgment entered. Butterworth v. Safelite Glass Corp., 287 Ga. App. 848, 652 S.E.2d 877 (2007).

Trial court did not err in declining to open the default judgment because the defendants filed a motion to open the default more than four months after the plaintiff moved for the entry of a default judgment and filed a default certificate which stated that the defendants failed to answer the complaint; the late-filed answer was little more than a general denial and did not present what could reasonably be characterized as a meritorious defense; and the defendants did not present to the court a legal excuse for late filing. Mecca Constr., Inc. v. Maestro Invs., LLC, 320 Ga. App. 34, 739 S.E.2d 51 (2013).

Since it was undisputed that the debtors motion to open default was not made under oath, the debtors failed to comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b), and the trial court had no discretion to open the default. Brazell v. J. K. Boatwright & Co., P.C., 324 Ga. App. 502, 751 S.E.2d 133 (2013).

Motion must show grounds. — Failure of motion to open default to show a meritorious defense is alone fatal to appellant's cause. Global Assocs. v. Pan Am. Communications, Inc., 163 Ga. App. 274, 293 S.E.2d 481 (1982); Thomason v. Exxon Corp., 227 Ga. App. 44, 487 S.E.2d 605 (1997).

Trial court did not err in refusing to open default after the defendants failed to show under oath the existence of a meritorious defense. Stewart v. Turner, 229 Ga. App. 119, 493 S.E.2d 251 (1997).

When the facts detailed in the defendant's affidavits contradicted allegations of the complaint and the defendant acted with reasonable promptness in setting up a meritorious defense, the trial court did not abuse the court's broad discretion in opening the default. Exxon Corp. v. Thomason, 269 Ga. 761, 504 S.E.2d 676 (1998), reversing Thomason v. Exxon Corp., 227 Ga. App. 44, 487 S.E.2d 605 (1997).

In a personal injury case, an individual's motion to open the default was properly denied because the individual made no offer to plead instant as the motion to open the default and attachments thereto were not inclusive of an answer to the patron's complaint. Red Train, Inc. v. Harris, 262 Ga. App. 846, 586 S.E.2d 738 (2003).

To open a default judgment there must be a motion, meritorious defense, a legal excuse for late filing, and payment of costs. Gowdey v. Rem Assocs., 176 Ga. App. 83, 335 S.E.2d 309 (1985).

To open default requires factual information showing meritorious defense. — Trial court did not err in refusing to set aside a default judgment that was entered against the defendant client in the plaintiff law firm's suit to collect the balance owed for legal services that were rendered to the client as the conclusory affidavit of the client's counsel in which the counsel made a general denial of the client's indebtedness to the law firm was insufficient to qualify as a showing of a meritorious defense for purposes of opening the default under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b); factual information showing a meritorious defense was required. Spewell v. Thomas & Hutson, 260 Ga. App. 312, 581 S.E.2d 322 (2003).

Trial court erred in granting a health service's motion to open a default taken against it when it failed to file an answer in a timely manner after a bankruptcy stay was modified, allowing the action against the service to proceed, as the service failed to set forth a meritorious defense; the service's reference to medical records was not sufficient to set forth the "essential elements" of a meritorious defense for purposes of opening the default under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b). Lucas v. Integrated Health Servs. of Lester, Inc., 268 Ga. App. 306, 601 S.E.2d 701 (2004).

In an architecture company's suit against a former client for failure to pay consulting fees, the trial court properly refused to open a prejudgment default because the client failed to show the existence of a meritorious defense as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b); the client's sworn motion was completely devoid of facts and details that would have provided a defense to the action. Water Visions Int'l, Inc. v. Tippet Clepper Assocs., 293 Ga. App. 285, 666 S.E.2d 628 (2008).

When the beneficiaries of a family trust sued an accounting firm retained by the trust's trustee, it was not error to open a default judgment entered against the firm because the firm met the firm's burden to state facts showing a meritorious defense. Mayfield v. Heiman, 317 Ga. App. 322, 730 S.E.2d 685 (2012).

Discretion to open default to be exercised in accordance with law. — Although a motion to open a default judgment is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial judge, such discretion must always be exercised in accordance with the law. Godfrey v. Home Stores, Inc., 101 Ga. App. 269, 114 S.E.2d 202 (1960) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 110-401 and 110-404).

Trial court erred in denying a motion to open a default judgment because the movant made a proper showing of a proper case for reopening the default by making a showing under oath through the filing of the affidavit of one of its directors setting out both the reasons for the default and the company's meritorious defense, offering to plead immediately, attaching a copy of the company's proposed answer to the motion to open the default, tendering court costs, announcing itself ready for trial, and raising a meritorious defense by showing that if relief from default was granted, the outcome of the suit could be different from the result if the default stood; accordingly, it was then up to the trial court to exercise the court's discretion in opening the default. Boggs Rural Life Ctr., Inc. v. IOS Capital, Inc., 255 Ga. App. 847, 567 S.E.2d 94 (2002).

Trial court properly exercised the court's judgment and discretion in granting the seller's motion to open the seller's default when the seller argued that at the hearing on the seller's motion to open default, the seller offered an adequate explanation for the delay. MacDonald v. Harris, 265 Ga. App. 131, 593 S.E.2d 32 (2003).

Default judgment was vacated and the denial of the defendant's motion to open default was reversed because the trial court erroneously found the court lacked discretion to consider the asserted grounds for opening default; thus, a remand was necessary for the trial court to exercise the court's discretion and consider the merits of all asserted grounds in the motion. Ferrell v. Young, 323 Ga. App. 338, 746 S.E.2d 167 (2013).

Judge may not act arbitrarily. — While the trial judge is given broad discretion, this does not mean that the judge may act arbitrarily, but that the judge must exercise sound and legal discretion; the judge may not open a default capriciously or for fanciful or insufficient reasons. McMurria Motor Co. v. Bishop, 86 Ga. App. 750, 72 S.E.2d 469 (1952); Davison-Paxon Co. v. Burkart, 92 Ga. App. 80, 88 S.E.2d 39 (1955); Haynes v. Smith, 99 Ga. App. 433, 108 S.E.2d 772 (1959); Swain v. Harris, 101 Ga. App. 263, 113

S.E.2d 467 (1960); Snow v. Conley, 113 Ga. App. 486, 148 S.E.2d 484 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Court's discretion not disturbed absent manifest abuse. — Unless the discretion of the judge is manifestly abused, it will not be disturbed. McCray v. Empire Inv. Co., 49 Ga. App. 117, 174 S.E. 219 (1934) (decided under former Code 1910, §§ 5654 to 5656).

Discretion of the trial judge in opening the default and permitting the defendant to plead will not be interfered with by the reviewing court, unless manifestly abused, to plaintiff's injury. Bradley v. Henderson, 56 Ga. App. 488, 193 S.E. 79 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

It is discretionary with the trial court to permit a default judgment to be opened after 15 days but before final judgment, but such discretion must be exercised in accordance with the law. Wallis v. McMurray, 91 Ga. App. 549, 86 S.E.2d 529 (1955) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Discretion of trial judge in opening the default judgment and permitting the defendant to plead will not be interfered with unless manifestly abused, to plaintiff's injury. Haynes v. Smith, 99 Ga. App. 433, 108 S.E.2d 772 (1959); Strickland v. Galloway, 111 Ga. App. 683, 143 S.E.2d 3 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Opening default judgment is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court and the exercise of that discretion will not be disturbed absent a showing of abuse. Howard v. Technosystems Consol. Corp., 244 Ga. App. 767, 536 S.E.2d 753 (2000).

Because the defendant effectively waived defenses of a lack of both personal jurisdiction and venue in failing to appear at trial, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in striking the defendant's answer and denying a motion to set aside the default judgment entered. Jacques v. Murray, 290 Ga. App. 334, 659 S.E.2d 643 (2008).

In five consolidated aviation wrongful death cases and one aviation property case, the trial court properly denied the out-of-state seller's motion to open the default judgment entered against the seller as it was within the trial court's discretion to deny the motion on the ground of the seller's negligent and inexcusable failure to keep up with the seller's registered agent to obtain notice and the insurer's inexplicable failure to recognize that the insurer had a duty to defend the lawsuit on behalf of the seller. Vibratex, Inc. v. Frost, 291 Ga. App. 133, 661 S.E.2d 185 (2008).

Filing of appeal acted as supersedeas. — In a personal injury lawsuit, the pendency of the defendant's appeal from denial of the defendant's motion to set aside the default judgment acted as a supersedeas depriving the trial court of the jurisdiction to consider the defendant's subsequent extraordinary motion for new trial. Fred Jones Enters., LLC v. Williams, 331 Ga. App. 481, 771 S.E.2d 163 (2015).

Sole function of an appellate court reviewing a trial court's grant of a motion to open default is to determine whether all the conditions set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 have been met and, if so, whether the trial court abused the court's discretion based on the facts peculiar to each case. Majestic Homes, Inc. v. Sierra Dev. Corp., 211 Ga. App. 223, 438 S.E.2d 686 (1993).

Discretion of court to open default is greater before final judgment than after. Strickland v. Galloway, 111 Ga. App. 683, 143 S.E.2d 3 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Extent of judicial discretion. — Discretion of trial court to open default is greater before final judgment than after, and after judgment this discretion applies only to judgments entered within the same term of court. Haynes v. Smith, 99 Ga. App. 433, 108 S.E.2d 772 (1959); R.H. Macey & Co. v. Chancey, 116 Ga. App. 511, 157 S.E.2d 758 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Compliance with subsection (b) mandatory. — Generally, the opening of a default judgment rests within the sound discretion of the trial court. However, compliance with the four conditions stated in subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 is a condition precedent; in its absence, the trial judge has no discretion to open the default. C.W. Matthews Contracting Co. v. Walker, 197 Ga. App. 345, 398 S.E.2d 297 (1990).

When the defendant failed to satisfy the requisite statutory grounds of "providential cause," "excusable neglect," or a "proper case" necessary to open a default, the trial court properly refused to open the default. Tauber v. Community Ctrs. Two, 235 Ga. App. 705, 509 S.E.2d 662 (1998); Winn-Dixie Charlotte, Inc. v. Brunner Cos. Income Props., Ltd. Pshp. I, 245 Ga. App. 672, 538 S.E.2d 152 (2000).

Opening default after final judgment. — Former section relating to opening of defaults was not applicable when a final judgment had been rendered adverse to the movant. Cravey v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 110 Ga. App. 284, 138 S.E.2d 321 (1964) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Former section relating to opening of defaults was not applicable when final judgment had been rendered before motion to open default and vacate judgment was filed. Rhonehouse v. Jetspra, Inc., 115 Ga. App. 129, 153 S.E.2d 570 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Former section relating to opening of defaults had no application to motion to set aside final judgment rendered after default. R.H. Macey & Co. v. Chancey, 116 Ga. App. 511, 157 S.E.2d 758 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Trial court has no discretion to allow a default to be opened for excusable neglect after final judgment. Cryomedics, Inc. v. Smith, 180 Ga. App. 336, 349 S.E.2d 223 (1986).

Plenary control of court over orders and judgments during term at which orders are rendered extends to judgment of "in default." East Side Lumber & Coal Co. v. Barfield, 193 Ga. 273, 18 S.E.2d 492 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 110-401, 110-402 and 110-404).

Setting aside of default judgment held abuse of discretion. — When the defendant's sole reason for not filing pleadings on time was the fact that "February term" appeared on the back of the petition and process and the defendant thought the defendant had until then to take necessary action, the trial judge abused the judge's discretion in setting aside the final default judgment. R.H. Macey & Co. v. Chancey, 116 Ga. App. 511, 157 S.E.2d 758 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Because a lessee's conduct during the discovery stage of the proceedings below on the lessor's breach-of-lease complaint clearly demonstrated gross neglect, specifically, the lessee's failure to: (1) respond to a motion to compel and attend the hearing thereon; (2) communicate with counsel; and (3) attack the default judgment until eight months after it was entered, the trial court manifestly abused the court's discretion in granting the lessee's motion to set the default aside. Kairos Peachtree Assocs., LLC v. Papadopoulos, 288 Ga. App. 161, 653 S.E.2d 386 (2007).

Trial court erred in setting aside a default against an insured on the ground that the insured mistakenly believed that the insurer was providing a defense; the insured did not show that the insured successfully transmitted the complaint to the insurer, who denied that it received a faxed complaint, and the insured did nothing to ensure that the complaint was received by the insurance company. Wright v. Mann, 271 Ga. App. 832, 611 S.E.2d 118 (2005).

Setting aside of vacation of default judgment during subsequent term improper. — Judgment entered during appearance term, vacating previous judgment "in default" and permitting the defendant to plead, may not be set aside at subsequent trial term and the defendant again be adjudged in default, merely because it was entered of the court's motion and without application of the defendant, or because the court in so vacating the previous entry of default acted upon the mistaken opinion that the plaintiff did not oppose such action. East Side Lumber & Coal Co. v. Barfield, 193 Ga. 273, 18 S.E.2d 492 (1942) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 110-401, 110-402 and 110-404).

Rule as to opening up default judgments does not apply to garnishment proceeding. General Fin. Corp. v. Kelsey, 106 Ga. App. 108, 126 S.E.2d 261 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Proper case must be made for default to be opened. — Right of judge to exercise discretionary power to open default does not arise until after the judge determines, from the facts shown under oath, that a proper case has been made for the default to be opened. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Scarboro, 42 Ga. App. 423, 156 S.E. 726 (1930) (decided under former Code 1910, § 5656).

In light of the evidence that a company was not a proper party in interest to a slip and fall lawsuit, and that the company acted diligently before and after the default, the trial court did not abuse the court's broad discretion in accepting the company's explanation and opening the default under the "proper case" ground of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b). Strader v. Palladian Enters., LLC, 312 Ga. App. 646, 719 S.E.2d 541 (2011).

No discretion of court to open default. — Since the plaintiff filed a response to the defendant's motion for a default judgment, but did not move to open the default, let alone satisfy the four conditions required for opening default, the trial court correctly ruled that the court did not have discretion to open the default. Jesson v. GCH & Assocs., 248 Ga. App. 97, 545 S.E.2d 645 (2001).

When motion to reopen default shows no sound and legal reason for doing so, it is not a matter for exercise of discretion, but a matter of law that the defendant's motion should not prevail. Davison-Paxon Co. v. Burkart, 92 Ga. App. 80, 88 S.E.2d 39 (1955); Snow v. Conley, 113 Ga. App. 486, 148 S.E.2d 484 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

"Excusable neglect" refers to reasonable excuse for failing to answer as distinguished from willful disregard of the process of the court. Georgia Farm Bldgs., Inc. v. Willard, 170 Ga. App. 327, 317 S.E.2d 229, aff'd, 253 Ga. 649, 325 S.E.2d 591 (1984); Mars, Inc. v. Moore, 207 Ga. App. 912, 429 S.E.2d 299 (1993).

Failure to make out "an extremely good case" for excusable neglect is not the correct standard under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55, but rather, excusable neglect refers to a reasonable excuse for failing to answer. Patel v. Gupta, 234 Ga. App. 441, 507 S.E.2d 763 (1998).

Excusable neglect. — When the irregular recording of the return of service and the disappearance of the complaint, both of which occurred through no fault of appellant or the appellant's attorney, were factors in the delay in responding to the complaint and in turning over the complaint to the employer, the appellant did as the appellant was expected to do; contemporaneously with this case, a second case was filed against the appellant by another victim involving the same accident and after the appellant similarly turned over the pleadings to the appellant's employer, the documents were sent on to the insurer and a defense was provided, the evidence demanded a finding of excusable neglect. Spikes v. Holloway, 212 Ga. App. 653, 442 S.E.2d 471 (1994).

Defendant did not establish excusable neglect based on the defendant's claim that the defendant gave the complaint to the defendant's partner for delivery to the partnership's insurance agent since the defendant did not speak with the agent afterwards or receive assurances that the agent was proceeding with the defense. Follmer v. Perry, 229 Ga. App. 257, 493 S.E.2d 631 (1997).

Because of the many methods which now exist for communicating and transmitting documents, exclusive reliance on the postal service for communicating the existence of a legal complaint between the client and the attorney is insufficient to show providential cause or excusable neglect. Ellis v. Five Star Dodge, Inc., 242 Ga. App. 474, 529 S.E.2d 904 (2000).

In an action against the state, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to open the default on the basis of excusable neglect when it was shown that a process server hand-delivered the summons and complaint to an attorney in the Governor's Office of Executive Counsel on the same day the complaint was filed and, due to miscommunications between the Executive Counsel and the State Law Department, the officer responsible for responding to the complaint mistakenly believed that it had not been properly served and, based upon such belief, decided not to answer the complaint. Azarat Mktg. Group, Inc. v. Department of Admin. Affairs, 245 Ga. App. 256, 537 S.E.2d 99 (2000).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in finding that one of the grounds for opening default, excusable neglect, was present since: (1) one defendant sent the plaintiff a check for "final payment" under the contract at issue; (2) the plaintiff accepted and deposited this check; (3) the same defendant, on behalf of the other defendants, forwarded proof of payment to the trial court with a request to remove the plaintiff's materialman's lien; and (4) afterward, the defendants reasonably believed the defendants had settled the case and that no further action on the defendants' parts was necessary. Bridges v. Mann, 247 Ga. App. 730, 544 S.E.2d 755 (2001).

When more than 16 months passed between service of discovery requests on defendants and the trial court's order striking the defendants' responsive pleadings and an additional 25 months passed before the defendants moved to open default, even though the defendants provided evidence that one defendant suffered from a disability and the other was preoccupied with the disabled defendant's care, these circumstances did not excuse such a lengthy period of inattention to the litigation. Carter v. Ravenwood Dev. Co., 249 Ga. App. 603, 549 S.E.2d 402 (2001).

Trial court did not err in granting the alleged wrongdoer's motion for reconsideration of entry of default judgment and in ordering that the default judgment be reopened; the alleged wrongdoer was understandably confused when the alleged wrongdoer was served with the same lawsuit twice, especially since the first process server posed as a person with ties to an insurance company, and thus excusable neglect existed for the failure to timely file a response to the first process after the alleged wrongdoer was served with while the alleged wrongdoer did file a timely response to the second process with which the alleged wrongdoer was served. Gilliam v. Love, 275 Ga. App. 687, 621 S.E.2d 805 (2005).

It was error to open a default against lenders under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) because the lenders had not shown excusable neglect. After sending the complaint to their attorney by e-mail, the lenders had not taken any action to confirm receipt of the e-mail by the attorney, who had not received the complaint and had not represented otherwise. Flournoy v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 289 Ga. App. 560, 657 S.E.2d 625 (2008).

As a communications company was served with a civil complaint and the company did not take steps to ensure that the complaint was forwarded to the company's insurer, resulting in the failure to answer the complaint and the automatic entry of a default judgment against the company pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a), it was an abuse of discretion for a trial court to grant the company's motion under § 9-11-55(b) to open the default as there was no diligence shown by the company that supported a finding of excusable neglect. BellSouth Telcoms., Inc. v. Future Communs., Inc., 293 Ga. App. 247, 666 S.E.2d 699 (2008).

Trial court acted within the court's discretion in finding that failure to answer complaint in medical malpractice suit was not excusable neglect for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) because the failure of the doctor's employer to timely forward the complaint and amended complaint to an insurer was imputable to the doctor. McBee v. Benjamin, 272 Ga. App. 567, 612 S.E.2d 802 (2005).

Costs must be paid to open default. — In a wrongful death action, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by refusing to open the default judgment entered against the defendant because the defendant failed to pay costs upon moving to open the default and under the plain language of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b), payment of costs is a condition precedent for opening default and merely offering to pay costs is insufficient; therefore, because that statutory requirement was not met, the trial court lacked discretion to open the default. Freese II, Inc. v. Mitchell, 318

Payment of costs is mandatory condition precedent to opening default. See Minnesota Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Love, 120 Ga. App. 502, 171 S.E.2d 361 (1969); White Plains Carpet v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 130 Ga. App. 158, 202 S.E.2d 558 (1973); Hazzard v. Phillips, 249 Ga. 24, 287 S.E.2d 191 (1982); Davis v. Southern Exposition Mgt. Co., 232 Ga. App. 773, 503 S.E.2d 649 (1998).

Trial court is authorized to grant a motion to open a default judgment so long as the movant has paid the costs prior to the grant of that motion. Copeland v. Carter, 247 Ga. 542, 277 S.E.2d 500 (1981); Dennis v. National Bank, 182 Ga. App. 634, 356 S.E.2d 563 (1987).

Motion to open not timely filed. — Trial court did not err in denying a motion to open a default and by failing to find that a proper case had been made for the default to be opened when the defendant moved to open the default more than four months after the deadline for filing the answer had passed, and the defendant made no showing under oath in connection therewith and simply offered to pay court costs. Evers v. Money Masters, Inc., 203 Ga. App. 546, 417 S.E.2d 160 (1992).

Right to review of opening of default 153 days after service. — When the defendant obtains an order of the trial court allowing opening of a default 153 days after service of the summons and complaint, there is no requirement that the plaintiff, in order to preserve the right to review, move to set aside such order or seek to take an immediate appeal with a certificate of review. Cate v. Harrell, 128 Ga. App. 219, 196 S.E.2d 155 (1973).

Default not to be opened ex parte. — Nothing in this section provides that a default may be opened by an ex parte order, nor should it be done. Livesay v. King, 129 Ga. App. 751, 201 S.E.2d 178 (1973).

Hearing on opening of default contemplated. — While it is not specifically provided that a hearing must be held on application for opening a default, language of this section indicates that a hearing is contemplated. Livesay v. King, 129 Ga. App. 751, 201 S.E.2d 178 (1973).

Notice and opportunity to object required. — One who moves the court to change the status of a pending matter, such as the opening of a default in order that the defendant may plead, should serve the opposite party with a copy of the motion and of a rule nisi which the court should enter thereon, thus affording the opposite party a fair opportunity to object or to defend against the proposed action. Livesay v. King, 129 Ga. App. 751, 201 S.E.2d 178 (1973).

Relief against penalties for lack of punctuality. — While the law makes requirements of punctuality in pleadings, the law also usually makes provision for relieving against penalties imposed for lack of this virtue, when interests of truth and justice require it. Clements v. United Equity Corp., 125 Ga. App. 711, 188 S.E.2d 923 (1972).

Specific reservation of issue of damages. — Trial court's order directing the entry of a judgment against the defendant pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b) does not constitute a "final" judgment which would preclude the application of the liberal criteria set forth in subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 for opening default when the trial court's order specifically reserves the issue of damages for later determination. Cryomedics, Inc. v. Smith, 180 Ga. App. 336, 349 S.E.2d 223 (1986); Rogers v. Coronet Ins. Co., 206 Ga. App. 46, 424 S.E.2d 338 (1992); Rapid Taxi Co. v. Broughton, 244 Ga. App. 427, 535 S.E.2d 780 (2000).

Denial of request to open default not error. — See Barone v. McRae & Holloway, 179 Ga. App. 812, 348 S.E.2d 320 (1986); Jim Walter Homes, Inc. v. Roberts, 196 Ga. App. 618, 396 S.E.2d 787 (1990); Ryles v. First Oglethorpe Co., 213 Ga. App. 327, 444 S.E.2d 578 (1994); Billy Cain Ford Lincoln Mercury, Inc. v. Kaminski, 230 Ga. App. 598, 496 S.E.2d 521 (1998); K-Mart Corp. v. Hackett, 237 Ga. App. 127, 514 S.E.2d 884 (1999).

Because the defendant presented no excuse for late filing and payment of costs, and the defendant's counsel had actual notice of the pendency of the suit 21 days before the answer was due, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in refusing to open the default judgment. Atlanta Medical Accounting Corp. v. Financial Software, Inc., 227 Ga. App. 311, 489 S.E.2d 93 (1997).

Trial court could determine whether a proper case was made for the default to be opened; the trial court rejected the argument that the guarantor's mistaken belief that a timely, proper answer on behalf of all defendants had been filed amounted to excusable neglect or presented a proper case for opening a default. Associated Doctors of Warner Robins, Inc. v. U.S. Foodservice of Atlanta, Inc., 250 Ga. App. 878, 553 S.E.2d 310 (2001).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a doctor's motion to open a default as the doctor was not justified in relying on a medical corporation to forward a medical malpractice complaint to the insurer after the entry of a default against the doctor; the doctor did not contact the insurer, and the doctor failed to file a motion to open the default for nearly a month. Mcbee v. Benjamin, 272 Ga. App. 567, 612 S.E.2d 802 (Feb. 23, 2005).

Deputy sheriff's service of a wrongful foreclosure complaint on a mortgagee's local branch manager at a branch office, rather than on the designated registered agent for service, was proper service pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-4 and 14-2-1510(d), and the trial court properly denied the mortgagee's motion to open a default pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) based on the mortgagee's claim that there was no jurisdiction due to improper service; the deputy's testimony that the manager indicated that the manager was authorized to accept service and that the manager did in fact accept the papers was entitled to a presumption in favor of the return of service. GMAC Mortg. Corp. v. Bongiorno, 277 Ga. App. 328, 626 S.E.2d 536 (2006).

Because the only explanation offered for the defendant's failure to file a timely answer was the defendant's belief that the defendant's partner was retaining local counsel, and there was no evidence to show that the defendant was diligent in the defendant's efforts to obtain or confirm representation by local counsel, the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion to open a default under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) was proper. Constructamax, Inc. v. Andy Bland Constr., Inc., 280 Ga. App. 403, 634 S.E.2d 168 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying a corporation's motion to open a default judgment against companies that it subsequently acquired, as although regional counsel for the companies had received timely notice that the complaint had been served, regional counsel had not retained local counsel to answer the complaint; even when regional counsel obtained an extension of time in which to answer, no answer was filed within the agreed-to extension, no additional extension was requested until after the time granted in the first extension had expired, and the motion to open the default was not filed until almost three months after the answer was due. COMCAST Corp. v. Warren, 286 Ga. App. 835, 650 S.E.2d 307 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 82 (Ga. 2008).

In a breach of contract suit seeking payment of a commission for a real estate transaction, defaulting defendants were not entitled to reopen a default judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) because the defendants' explanation that, although the defendants had been served, "it was unclear what happened" did not establish a "proper case" to open the default. Northpoint Group Holdings, LLC v. Morris, 300 Ga. App. 491, 685 S.E.2d 436 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0368, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 349 (Ga. 2010).

Superior court did not err by denying a company's motion to open default because the motion was filed after a judgment had been entered against the company, and since the company was in default as a matter of law when the company failed to timely respond to a habeas corpus petitioner's claims, the superior court was authorized to enter a default judgment; although the state's failure to timely respond to a petition for habeas corpus relief did not entitle the petitioner to a default judgment, the company was a private entity, and the relief granted to the petitioner pursuant to the default judgment was not in the nature of habeas relief. Sentinel Offender Servs., LLC v. Harrelson, 286 Ga. 665, 690 S.E.2d 831 (2010).

discretion in denying a corporation's motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) to open and set aside the default judgment because the corporation made no showing that the trial court was substantively in error in rejecting the corporation's attempt to open the default under the "providential cause" or "excusable neglect" provisions of § 9-11-55(b); the trial court heard all of the evidence and determined that none of the grounds under § 9-11-55 were met, including that of a "proper case" being made for opening the default. Cardinal Robotics, Inc. v. Moody, 287 Ga. 18, 694 S.E.2d 346 (2010).

Opening default when multiple parties. — Trial court erred when the court denied a motion to open a default filed by one of two relatives claiming an undivided one-half interest in a property to which a third relative sought to quiet title. The liability of relatives one and two was joint so the third relative was required to recover against both relatives one and two on the strength of the third relative's own title, and as the third relative was unable to prove a case against relative one, a default against relative two was improper. Lord v. Holland, 282 Ga. 890, 655 S.E.2d 602 (2008).

Indivisibility of judgments rule required setting aside of default judgment. — Trial court did not err in denying a contractor's motion to set aside a default judgment after the default judgment was set aside as to a second contract only because the indivisibility of judgments rule required that the joint judgment, if set aside as to the second contractor, had to be set aside as to the first contractor as well; the setting aside of the judgment as to the second contractor was for reasons other than on the merits, and there remained a possibility that the second contractor's liability, if any, to a homeowner could be put in issue. Merry v. Robinson, 313 Ga. App. 321, 721 S.E.2d 567 (2011).

Effect of agreement to extend time for filing answer and late filing. — Trial court erred in opening a default after counsel made an agreement to extend the time to file the answer because the time for filing the answer was not extended as provided by law and the answer was not filed within 15 days of the default; furthermore, the defendant's answer was not made or verified under oath as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) for opening a default. Wilcher v. Smith, 256 Ga. App. 427, 568 S.E.2d 589 (2002).

Default held properly opened. See Donalson v. Coca-Cola Co., 164 Ga. App. 712, 298 S.E.2d 25 (1982); Perkins Masonry Contractors, Inc. v. Housing Auth., 184 Ga. App. 856, 363 S.E.2d 164 (1987); Ford v. Saint Francis Hosp., 227 Ga. App. 823, 490 S.E.2d 415 (1997).

When a bank was sued by a homeowners' association for fees and assessments imposed on lots which the bank foreclosed on, and the bank's default was entered, the bank demonstrated a "proper case" for opening the default, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b), because the bank had acquired recorded title to the lots to secure a debt before the covenants imposing the challenged fees and assessments were recorded, so it set up a meritorious defense calling for a different result from that which would obtain if the default judgment was allowed to stand. Legacy Hills Residential Ass'n v. Colonial Bank, 255 Ga. App. 144, 564 S.E.2d 550 (2002).

Trial court did not err in permitting the corporate officer of two companies in receivership to answer the investors' complaint one day late as the officer was understandably confused by the several lawsuits filed against the officer and all of the materials necessary for compliance with the statute had been filed by the officer. Albee v. Krasnoff, 255 Ga. App. 738, 566 S.E.2d 455 (2002).

After a medical company established a meritorious defense based on excusable neglect, showed that the outcome of a suit might be different, and moved to open a default no more than two weeks late, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in opening the default pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b). Henderson v. Quadramed Corp., 260 Ga. App. 680, 580 S.E.2d 542 (2003).

Trial court did not err in setting aside the default judgment and granting summary judgment to the driver based upon expiration of the two-year statute of limitations for personal injury claims as the driver paid all court costs, announced ready for trial, offered a meritorious defense (the statute of limitation) in the driver's motion and verified answer, and offered a showing of providential cause or excusable neglect under oath. Griffin v. Rutland, 259 Ga. App. 846, 578 S.E.2d 540 (2003).

In a personal injury action, and by reading O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(a) in pari materia with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-21, because a plaintiff sued two parties, but substituted only one, the partnership originally sued was not required to file an answer absent an order from the court to do so, and hence could not be found in default; as a result, the trial court correctly found a proper case was made for the default to be opened. Marwede v. EQR/Lincoln L.P., 284 Ga. App. 404, 643 S.E.2d 766 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 504 (Ga. 2007).

Entertainer and a security service were properly permitted to reopen a default under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a) because they filed a sworn affidavit asserting that the answer was filed as soon as counsel obtained pro hac vice admission in the case, and there was no evidence of any trial delay or prejudice. Herring v. Harvey, 300 Ga. App. 560, 685 S.E.2d 460 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0389, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 305 (Ga. 2010).

Trial court did not err in allowing a lessee to open a default pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) because each of the four conditions precedent to opening a prejudgment default had been met; the lessee filed an answer, announced ready to proceed to trial, and filed a sworn affidavit setting forth a meritorious defense, and the default was the result of a one day miscalculation of the due date, not of a failure to file an answer. ABA 241 Peachtree, LLC v. Brooken & McGlothen, LLC, 302 Ga. App. 208, 690 S.E.2d 514 (2010).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by granting a wife's motion to open her default under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) and allowing a creditor's case against her to proceed on the merits because the record supported the trial court's conclusion that each of the four conditions precedent for opening a default had been met; the wife believed that her attorney had filed an answer on her behalf, the attorney did file an answer on behalf of a debtor, the wife's husband, the parties proceeded with discovery, the wife immediately filed an answer and motion to open default once she realized that she was in default, and the creditor failed to establish any specific claim of prejudice resulting from the opening of the default. Thomas v. Brown, 308 Ga. App. 514, 707 S.E.2d 900 (2011).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in opening the default judgment entered against a hotel because the hotel promptly sought to open the default upon learning of the mistake between in-house and outside counsel, there was no indication that the plaintiff sustained unique harm or specific prejudice from opening the default, and at the time of the hotel's motion to open the default, the hotel already had submitted to the trial court sworn witness testimony containing facts establishing the hotel's meritorious defense. Tomsic v. Marriott Int'l, Inc., 321 Ga. App. 374, 739 S.E.2d 521 (2013).

Defendants had right to open default when trial court prematurely entered default judgment. — Defendants in a RICO action failed to exercise the defendants' right to open a prematurely entered default judgment as a matter of right by filing an answer and costs within the 15-day period provided in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a); instead, the defendants filed an appeal. However, the defendants were permitted to bring a motion to open the default under § 9-11-55(b). Florez v. State, 311 Ga. App. 378, 715 S.E.2d 782 (2011), cert. dismissed, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 64 (Ga. 2012).

Denial of motion to set aside default was reversible error. — Because a contractor presented sufficient evidence showing that an assignee that sued the contractor had actual knowledge through its assignor of the contractor's physical address, yet failed to attempt service at that address before serving the Secretary of State, the trial court erred in denying the contractor's motion to set aside the default judgment entered in favor of the assignee. TC Drywall & Plaster, Inc. v. Express Rentals, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 624, 653 S.E.2d 70 (2007).

Trial court did not err in opening a default judgment as: (1) the movant satisfied the four conditions outlined under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b); (2) the motion was verified and stated that the movant had responsive pleadings to file instant, was ready to proceed to trial, and had a meritorious defense; and (3) the movant contemporaneously filed a verified answer to the complaint setting out the movant's defenses. Patterson v. Bristol Timber Co., 286 Ga. App. 423, 649 S.E.2d 795 (2007).

Trial court erred in denying the county school district employees' motion to set aside a default judgment entered against the employees under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) in the parents' wrongful death action because while the employees were sued in both the employees' official and individual capacities, the parents' wrongful-death suit arose from actions the employees took in the employees' official capacities as employees of the school and, thus, the trial court erred as a matter of law in finding that the entry of the default judgment barred the employees from being able to assert that official immunity protected the employees from the parents' wrongful death action; official immunity is not a mere defense but rather an entitlement not to be sued that must be addressed as a threshold matter before a lawsuit may proceed. Cosby v. Lewis, 308 Ga. App. 668, 708 S.E.2d 585 (2011).

Harmful error required prior to opening default. — While it was clear that the doctor satisfied the conditions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 for a motion to open a prejudgment default, and while the doctor's affidavit created an issue as to whether the doctor was personally served with the patient's complaint, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying the motion to set aside the default judgment as the doctor did not show harmful error. Collier v. Cawthon, 256 Ga. App. 825, 570 S.E.2d 53 (2002).

When defendant's claim much larger than plaintiff's, court authorized to open default. — Trial court was authorized to open the default, notwithstanding the defendant's failure to set forth a meritorious defense "under oath", when the complaint dealt on the complaint's face with only a relatively small indebtedness, while the default affected the defendant's right to assert a much larger claim which the defendant reasonably viewed as being independent of the claim sued upon. Ragan v. Smith, 188 Ga. App. 770, 374 S.E.2d 559 (1988).

Acquiescence in failure to pay costs. — Defendant's acquiescence in vacation and opening of default judgment precluded appellate review of the claim that the required payment of costs had not been made. Robinson v. Moonraker Assocs., 205 Ga. App. 597, 423 S.E.2d 44 (1992).

Belief that complaint already answered. — Since the defendants reasonably believed that the defendants already had answered the same complaint, the trial court was authorized to conclude that the defendants' failure to file a timely answer was not a wilful disregard of all court process. Colonial Penn Life Ins. Co. v. Market Planners Ins. Agency, Inc., 209 Ga. App. 562, 434 S.E.2d 124 (1993).

Belief that insurer was handling. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in opening the default in a negligence action against a physician and others after the physician forwarded the pleadings to an insurer and the insurer misplaced the documents; the defendants had reason to believe that the insurer was defending the suit, there was no prejudice to the plaintiffs in opening the default, and the defendants pled what appeared to be a meritorious defense. Shortnacy v. N. Atlanta Internal Med., P.C., 252 Ga. App. 321, 556 S.E.2d 209 (2001).

Refusal by clerk of proffer of costs. — When the defendant's attorney attempted to pay costs before the hearing, but the clerk refused to accept the proffered check or cash pursuant to instructions from the trial court, the trial court did not err in finding that costs were paid as required by the statute. SunTrust Bank v. Perry, 233 Ga. App. 701, 505 S.E.2d 230 (1998).

Circumstances indicated meritorious defense. — See Muscogee Realty Dev. Corp. v. Jefferson Co., 252 Ga. 400, 314 S.E.2d 199 (1984); Berklite v. Bill Heard Chevrolet Co., 239 Ga. App. 791, 522 S.E.2d 246 (1999).

Meritorious defense must be shown under oath. — Trial court lacked discretion to open a default judgment since the meritorious defense set forth in the answer was not made under oath as the purported verification of the answer did not contain the signature of a notary or any other indication that it was made under oath. SunTrust Bank v. Perry, 233 Ga. App. 701, 505 S.E.2d 230 (1998).

No requirement of showing complete defeat of plaintiff's claim. — Requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) to set up a meritorious defense in order to open a default judgment did not require the defendant to show that it would completely defeat the plaintiff's claim. Johnson v. Am. Nat'l Red Cross, 253 Ga. App. 587, 569 S.E.2d 242 (2002), aff'd, 276 Ga. 270, 578 S.E.2d 106 (2003).

Effect of setting aside of default judgment. — Once default judgment is set aside, case returns to the posture the case occupied prior to the entry of the default judgment, which posture is usually that of being in default. P.H.L. Dev. Corp. v. Smith, 174 Ga. App. 328, 329 S.E.2d 545 (1985).

No excusable neglect where defendant had notice even before service. — When defense counsel had notice before a defendant was served with the complaint that the plaintiff had filed an action seeking declaratory relief, then the defendant did not show excusable neglect for failure to respond, although the defendant stated that the defendant suffered memory loss as a result of the accident which was the subject of the suit, counsel attempted to verify service with the clerk's office, and counsel suggested that there may have been some miscommunication between the defendant and counsel's office. Coleman v. Superior Ins. Co., 204 Ga. App. 78, 418 S.E.2d 390 (1992).

Refusal to open default had nothing to do with ruling as to notice. — Analyzing a personal injury action filed against an insured, and a declaratory judgment action subsequently filed by an insurer, the Court of Appeals of Georgia erred in holding that an insured was estopped from asserting compliance with its insurer's policy provisions regarding notice, and additionally erred, on that basis, in reversing the denial of summary judgment to the insurer in the insurer's declaratory judgment action, as neither res judicata nor collateral estoppel barred inquiry into the question of whether the insureds' notice of a lawsuit to the insurer was timely; furthermore, even if the refusal to open the default was premised on the state court's finding that the insured failed to prove the merits of the insured's claim of insufficiency of service of process, this still would not equate to a ruling that the insured failed to provide the insurer with adequate notice. Karan, Inc. v. Auto-Owners Ins. Co., 280 Ga. 545, 629 S.E.2d 260 (2006).

Voluntary dismissal of joint tortfeasor did not void judgment against remaining defendants. — Voluntary dismissal with prejudice of an alleged joint tortfeasor did not void the judgment entered against the remaining defendants, but only adjudicated the liabilities of that party; as it neither terminated the action nor rendered the default judgment void, the trial court did not err in refusing to set aside a default judgment. Mateen v. Dicus, 286 Ga. App. 760, 650 S.E.2d 272 (2007), 129 S. Ct. 89, 172 L.Ed.2d 30 (2008).

Failure to have registered agent for service not reason to open default. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in deciding not to open a default judgment entered against a limited liability company under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) because the limited liability company offered no reasonable explanation for failing to maintain a proper registered agent for service of process. Sierra-Corral Homes, LLC v. Pourreza, 308 Ga. App. 543, 708 S.E.2d 17 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1121, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 584 (Ga. 2011).

2. As Matter of Right

Defendant is allowed 15 days as a matter of right to open default, upon payment of costs, and thereafter if case is still in default the plaintiff is entitled to judgment on the pleadings without trial, unless action is ex delicto or involves unliquidated damages. Lowrance v. Bank of LaFayette, 115 Ga. App. 788, 156

S.E.2d 158 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

Prerequisite that costs are paid. — Right to open automatic default within 15 day period is expressly conditioned upon payment of costs. Hoard v. Wiley, 113 Ga. App. 328, 147 S.E.2d 782 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

Right to open default judgment within 15 days upon payment of costs is absolute; any judgment entered prior thereto is premature, and must be set aside when proper motion is made and costs paid within 15-day period. Parker v. Branan, 108 Ga. App. 229, 132 S.E.2d 556 (1963) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

Plaintiff is not entitled to judgment by default until expiration of 15 day period during which defendant may, as a matter of right, open default by paying accrued costs and filing a defense to the action. Potts v. Smith Grain Co., 99 Ga. App. 270, 108 S.E.2d 285 (1959) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

Court has no discretion or jurisdiction to decide whether defendant may file defensive pleadings within 15-day period, except that the court, in the exercise of inherent power, would be the arbiter in case of a dispute as to whether or not costs had been paid. Whitsett v. Hester-Bowman Enters., Inc., 94 Ga. App. 78, 93 S.E.2d 788 (1956) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 110-401 and 110-404).

Right of foreign corporation to opening of default within 45 days from service on Secretary of State. — When the defendant foreign corporation filed an answer and paid accrued court costs within 45 days from the time of receipt of a copy of the petition in the office of the Secretary of State, the default against it could be opened as a matter of right. Avis, Inc. v. Graham, 217 Ga. 330, 122 S.E.2d 245 (1961) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-401).

Applicability of subsection (a) to cases when no judgment entered. — Provisions of subsection (a) of this section as to opening default on payment of costs and filing of defensive pleadings relate to those cases when no judgment has been entered. Hill v. Hill, 234 Ga. 836, 218 S.E.2d 619 (1975).

No right to open default when costs not paid. — When it appears from the record that the defendant has not paid costs, the defendant is not entitled to open the default as a matter of right. Hines v. Wingo, 120 Ga. App. 614, 171 S.E.2d 905 (1969).

When an appellant did not pay the costs during the 15-day grace period, the filing of the appellant's answer and counterclaim did not alone open the default as a matter of right. Hazzard v. Phillips, 249 Ga. 24, 287 S.E.2d 191 (1982).

Mere fact that plaintiff will not be prejudiced not justification. — Although the discretion of the trial court in opening a default and permitting the defendant to plead will not be interfered with by the appellate courts unless manifestly abused, to the injury of the plaintiff, the Court of Appeals will not convert this principle to a right to have the default opened unless prejudice to the plaintiff is shown. Barone v. McRae & Holloway, 179 Ga. App. 812, 348 S.E.2d 320 (1986).

Applicability to probate proceedings. — In a probate matter, a trial court erred by dismissing an executor's objection to the setting aside of certain real property as year's support in favor of an estate as the executor had filed an objection within 15 days of the default order amending the year's support order, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a), and by paying costs. The provisions of § 9-11-55(a) relating to the opening of default judgments as a matter of right within 15 days of default applied to a year's support proceedings in probate court. In re Estate of Ehlers, 289 Ga. App. 14, 656 S.E.2d 169 (2007).

3. At Any Time Before Judgment

Subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 should be given liberal construction, in the promotion of justice and the establishment of the truth. Alex v. Parkway-Boulevard Corp., 157 Ga. App. 269, 277 S.E.2d 276 (1981).

Rule permitting opening of default is remedial in nature and should be liberally applied for default judgment is a drastic sanction that should be invoked only in extreme situations. Whenever possible cases should be decided on their merits for default judgment is not favored in law. Generally, a default should be set aside when the defendant acts with reasonable promptness and alleges a meritorious defense. Whatley v. Bank S., 185 Ga. App. 896, 366 S.E.2d 182, cert. denied, 185 Ga. App. 911, 366 S.E.2d 182 (1988).

Purpose of subsection (b) of this section is to furnish relief when there was an understandable misunderstanding. Cobb County Fair Ass'n v. Boyle, 143 Ga. App. 754, 240 S.E.2d 136 (1977); American Erectors, Inc. v. Hanie, 157 Ga. App. 687, 278 S.E.2d 196 (1981).

Subsection (b) of this section conveys very ample powers as to opening defaults; not for only providential cause, which is broad, and excusable neglect, which is still broader, but finally, as if reaching out to take in every conceivable case where injustice might result if the default were not opened, when the judge from all the facts determines that a proper case has been made. Houston v. Lowes of Savannah, Inc., 136 Ga. App. 781, 222 S.E.2d 209 (1975).

Improper if any of conditions precedent not met. — Generally, whether the trial court opens a default is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the trial court, but for the relief to be granted, subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 requires that there must be a motion, a meritorious defense, a legal excuse for late filing, and payment of costs. When the defendant presents no excuse except failure to retain an attorney, and no meritorious defense other than a general denial and for all the record shows, the defendant has not paid costs at any time, it is obvious that at least one of the several conditions precedent to opening the default has not been met; thus, the trial court has no exercisable discretion and errs in opening the default and allowing the defendant to defend against the complaint. Millholland v. Stewart, 166 Ga. App. 431, 304 S.E.2d 533 (1983).

Under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55, a prejudgment default may be opened on one of three grounds if four conditions are met. The three grounds are: (1) providential cause, (2) excusable neglect, and (3) proper case; the four conditions are: (1) showing made under oath,

(2) offer to plead instant, (3) announcement of ready to proceed with trial, and (4) setting up a meritorious defense. Compliance with the four conditions is a condition precedent; in its absence, the trial judge has no discretion to open the default. Grayson & Hollingsworth, Inc. v. C. Henning Studios, Inc., 194 Ga. App. 531, 391 S.E.2d 8, cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 911, 391 S.E.2d 8 (1990).

Three grounds for opening default.

— Subsection (b) of this section provides three grounds for opening default: providential cause, excusable neglect, and when the judge from all the facts determines that a proper case has been made. Houston v. Lowes of Savannah, Inc., 235 Ga. 201, 219 S.E.2d 115, answer conforming to, 136 Ga. App. 781, 222 S.E.2d 209 (1975).

Subsection (b) of this section provides three ways in which a default may be opened. Cobb County Fair Ass'n v. Boyle, 143 Ga. App. 754, 240 S.E.2d 136 (1977).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 states three grounds upon which a trial court may open a default: providential cause, excusable neglect, and a proper case. The Supreme Court will affirm the trial court's decision to open default if the record sustains the decision under any of the three noted grounds. Copeland v. Carter, 247 Ga. 542, 277 S.E.2d 500 (1981).

Subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 allows a prejudgment default to be opened if there is a showing of any one of the following: (1) providential cause; (2) excusable neglect; and (3) a proper case. Womack Indus., Inc. v. Tifton-Tift County Airport Auth., 199 Ga. App. 237, 404 S.E.2d 618 (1991).

There is a difference between tests for opening default under the first two grounds under subsection (b) of this section, i.e., providential cause and excusable neglect, and that of the third; the first two grounds have been narrowly defined in case law and do not allow exercise of the broad discretion of the third. Clements v. United Equity Corp., 125 Ga. App. 711, 188 S.E.2d 923 (1972); Lanier v. Foster,

"Excusable neglect" is defined as neglect which might have been an act of a reasonably prudent person under the same circumstances. Ezzard v. Morgan, 118 Ga. App. 50, 162 S.E.2d 793 (1968); Howell Enters., Inc. v. Ray, 163 Ga. App. 68, 293 S.E.2d 24 (1982).

Excusable neglect cannot be determined by any fixed rule but rather must be determined by the facts of the case. This determination is within the sound discretion of the trial court and will not be disturbed by the appellate court absent an abuse of discretion. First Nat'l Ins. Co. of Am. v. Thain, 107 Ga. App. 100, 129 S.E.2d 381 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404); Dever v. Lee, 188 Ga. App. 483, 373 S.E.2d 224, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 911, 373 S.E.2d 224 (1988).

"Excusable neglect" implies not simply any, but reasonable or excusable neglect as to, or occasioned by, some fact, or something that has or has not been done, of which the complaining party ought to have knowledge, and which, if the party had such knowledge, might have prevented default. First Nat'l Ins. Co. of Am. v. Thain, 107 Ga. App. 100, 129 S.E.2d 381 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Circumstances determine finding of excusable neglect. — What constitutes "excusable neglect" depends upon the circumstances in each case. Snow v. Conley, 113 Ga. App. 486, 148 S.E.2d 484 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Term "excusable neglect" does not mean gross negligence. McMurria Motor Co. v. Bishop, 86 Ga. App. 750, 72 S.E.2d 469 (1952); Haynes v. Smith, 99 Ga. App. 433, 108 S.E.2d 772 (1959); First Nat'l Ins. Co. of Am. v. Thain, 107 Ga. App. 100, 129 S.E.2d 381 (1962); Snow v. Conley, 113 Ga. App. 486, 148 S.E.2d 484 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404); Ezzard v. Morgan, 118 Ga. App. 50, 162 S.E.2d 793 (1968); Sanders v. American Liberty Ins. Co., 225 Ga. 796, 171 S.E.2d 539 (1969), later appeal, 122 Ga. App. 407, 177 S.E.2d 176 (1970); Cate v. Harrell, 128 Ga. App. 219, 196 S.E.2d 155 (1973); Early Co. v. Bristol Steel & Iron Works, Inc., 131 Ga. App. 775, 206 S.E.2d 612 (1974); Cobb County Fair Ass'n v. Boyle, 143 Ga. App. 754, 240 S.E.2d 136 (1977); Hendricks v. Hubert, 158 Ga. App. 371, 280 S.E.2d 396 (1981).

Excusable neglect does not mean willful disregard of the process of the court, but refers to cases when there is a reasonable excuse for failing to answer. McMurria Motor Co. v. Bishop, 86 Ga. App. 750, 72 S.E.2d 469 (1952); Haynes v. Smith, 99 Ga. App. 433, 108 S.E.2d 772 (1959); First Nat'l Ins. Co. of Am. v. Thain, 107 Ga. App. 100, 129 S.E.2d 381 (1962); Snow v. Conley, 113 Ga. App. 486, 148 S.E.2d 484 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404); Ezzard v. Morgan, 118 Ga. App. 50, 162 S.E.2d 793 (1968); Sanders v. American Liberty Ins. Co., 225 Ga. 796, 171 S.E.2d 539 (1969), later appeal, 122 Ga. App. 407, 177 S.E.2d 176 (1970); Cate v. Harrell, 128 Ga. App. 219, 196 S.E.2d 155 (1973); Early Co. v. Bristol Steel & Iron Works, Inc., 131 Ga. App. 775, 206 S.E.2d 612 (1974).

When excusable neglect justifies opening. — Default may be opened for excusable neglect, provided all other aspects of law are complied with as to opening a default. Cobb County Fair Ass'n v. Boyle, 143 Ga. App. 754, 240 S.E.2d 136 (1977).

Parties are bound to take notice of time and place of trial and of when their presence is required; even illiteracy does not excuse one from using diligence to ascertain correctly the contents of a notice duly served. Snow v. Conley, 113 Ga. App. 486, 148 S.E.2d 484 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Failure to read and comply with process as gross negligence. — It is error to grant motion to open default except for providential cause or excusable neglect; failure or even inability to read and comply with process is not a reasonable excuse but constitutes gross negligence. Hatcher v. Scarboro, 113 Ga. App. 103, 147 S.E.2d 361 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Press of business as insufficient excuse. — Press of business, even when accompanied by mistaken belief as to time when defensive pleadings may be filed, is no ground to open default. Snow v. Conley, 113 Ga. App. 486, 148 S.E.2d 484 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-404).

Excusable neglect was not shown when the defendant's failure to file the defendant's answer was a result of a mistake in the office of the defendant's attorney coupled with the attorney's busy trial schedule. United States Xpress, Inc. v. W. Timothy Askey & Co., 194 Ga. App. 730, 391 S.E.2d 707 (1990).

Defendant's failure to timely forward the complaint and summons to the defendant's attorney due to a mix-up in the defendant's office does not constitute excusable neglect, providential cause, or a proper case for the opening of default under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55. Pulliam v. Nichols, 202 Ga. App. 95, 413 S.E.2d 215 (1991).

Failure of the defendant's insurance agent to deliver the summons and complaint to the insurer and the failure of the defendant to check on the suit were omissions which the trial court could find did not constitute excusable neglect. Drug Emporium, Inc. v. Peaks, 227 Ga. App. 121, 488 S.E.2d 500 (1997).

"Proper case" defined. — Statute plainly gives a trial judge the discretion to open a default when the judge considers a proper case has been made, which is materially different from providential cause and excusable neglect. Houston v. Lowes of Savannah, Inc., 136 Ga. App. 781, 222 S.E.2d 209 (1975).

"Excusable neglect" and "providential cause" are not required for "proper case" decision. To impose "excusable neglect" and "providential cause" on a "proper case" decision by the trial judge would be to excise by judicial surgery one-third of the statute. Houston v. Lowes of Savannah, Inc., 136 Ga. App. 781, 222 S.E.2d 209 (1975).

Broader discretion contemplated under "proper case" ground. — Exercise of broader discretion in opening default under the "proper case" ground than under the grounds of providential cause and excusable neglect constitutes the general policy of the law. Broadaway v. Thompson, 127 Ga. App. 600, 194 S.E.2d 342 (1972).

3. At Any Time Before Judgment (Cont'd)

“Proper case” language is coextensive. — Language in this section “where the judge, from all the facts, shall determine that a proper case has been made for the default to be opened” is coextensive with other requirements contained in the section. Kitchens v. Lowe, 139 Ga. App. 526, 228 S.E.2d 923 (1976).

Discretion of trial court to open default. — While this section gives a judge broad discretion in opening a default, it does not mean that a judge can act arbitrarily, but that a judge may exercise sound and legal discretion; the statute does not give a judge authority to open a default capriciously or for fanciful or insufficient reasons. Sanders v. American Liberty Ins. Co., 225 Ga. 796, 171 S.E.2d 539 (1969), later appeal, 122 Ga. App. 407, 177 S.E.2d 176 (1970); Alex v. Parkway-Boulevard Corp., 157 Ga. App. 269, 277 S.E.2d 276 (1981).

Under subsection (b) of this section, at any time before final judgment the judge in the judge’s discretion may open a default when, from all the facts, the judge determines that a proper case has been made. Clements v. United Equity Corp., 125 Ga. App. 711, 188 S.E.2d 923 (1972).

Statute does not give a judge the authority to open a default capriciously or for fanciful or insufficient reasons. Cate v. Harrell, 128 Ga. App. 219, 196 S.E.2d 155 (1973).

While this section gives a judge broad discretion, the statute does not mean that the judge can act arbitrarily, but that the judge may exercise sound and legal discretion. Cate v. Harrell, 128 Ga. App. 219, 196 S.E.2d 155 (1973).

Trial court has no authority to open default for reasons which fall short of a reasonable excuse for negligent failure to answer. Early Co. v. Bristol Steel & Iron Works, Inc., 131 Ga. App. 775, 206 S.E.2d 612 (1974).

Trial court has discretion to open default, even absent showing of providential cause or excusable neglect. Thomas v. McKibben, 135 Ga. App. 886, 219 S.E.2d 621 (1975).

While subsection (b) of this section gives a judge broad discretion, subsection (b) does not give a judge authority to open a default capriciously or for fanciful or insufficient reasons. Thomas v. McKibben, 135 Ga. App. 886, 219 S.E.2d 621 (1975).

Trial judge cannot just act willy-nilly and open default without exercise of any legal discretion whatever, giving as the judge’s reason that a proper case has been made, when no case at all has actually been made, proper or otherwise. Johnson v. Durrence, 136 Ga. App. 439, 221 S.E.2d 652 (1975).

Whether or not the trial court opens a default is a matter resting within the court’s sound discretion. Taurus Prods., Inc. v. Maryland Sound Indus., Inc., 155 Ga. App. 147, 270 S.E.2d 337 (1980).

Even the broad “proper case” ground does not vest the trial court with discretion to open a default for reasons which fall short of a reasonable excuse for failure to answer. First Union Nat’l Bank v. Floyd, 198 Ga. App. 99, 400 S.E.2d 393 (1990), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 897, 400 S.E.2d 393 (1991).

Discretion of trial court not to open default. — Decision of the trial court not to open a default -- like the court’s decision to open a default -- will not be interfered with unless the court’s discretion is manifestly abused. Daniel v. Causey, 220 Ga. App. 589, 469 S.E.2d 839 (1996).

Facts warranting exercise of discretion to be shown. — While this section provides for opening of a default by the trial judge as a matter of discretion, and the judge’s discretion is greater before default judgment is entered than afterward, this discretion is a legal one, and in absence of a showing of facts upon which a finding of providential cause or excusable neglect could be made, it is generally an abuse of discretion to open a default. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Pritchett, 124 Ga. App. 815, 186 S.E.2d 510 (1971).

Judge is required to exercise legal discretion in opening a default, and in order to do so, some facts must be proven which warrant exercise of legal discretion. Johnson v. Durrence, 136 Ga. App. 439, 221 S.E.2d 652 (1975).

Discretion limited to original trial judge. — Generally, whether the trial court opens a default is a matter resting within the sound discretion of the court, but usually the case rests in the bosom of the trial judge who originally heard the case and entered the order. To allow a losing party to bring before a different judge a renewed motion and dispute a ruling on a motion already heard and denied, after the time for appeal has passed, makes a mockery of the principle of res judicata and wholly disregards the rules of appellate procedure. It allows full sway to a practice that courts abhor, the practice of "judge shopping," seeking to find a judge who is more responsive to arguments than the last. Sears v. Citizens Exch. Bank, 166 Ga. App. 840, 305 S.E.2d 609 (1983).

Absence of deliberate failure to obey as prerequisite. — To open default there must be an absence of deliberate and intentional failure to obey process of the court. Cate v. Harrell, 128 Ga. App. 219, 196 S.E.2d 155 (1973).

One who moves to open default must allege and prove some reason good in law for one's failure to make defense at time one was required by law to present a defense. Minnesota Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Love, 120 Ga. App. 502, 171 S.E.2d 361 (1969).

Refusal to open default proper when affidavit states no grounds therefor. — When counsel stipulates and agrees that the answer be withdrawn and dismissed, the case automatically becomes in default, and the motion to open default based upon an affidavit which states no grounds therefor may be overruled. Electro-Kinetics Corp. v. Wilson, 122 Ga. App. 171, 176 S.E.2d 604 (1970).

Conditions precedent to opening default. — This section requires that any showing to open a default shall be made under oath, set up a meritorious defense, offer to plead instante, and announce ready to proceed with trial, and when these conditions precedent are not met, the trial judge has no discretion in the matter. Georgia Hwy. Express Co. v. Do-All Chem. Co., 118 Ga. App. 736, 165 S.E.2d 429 (1968).

Having a defense to an action is not in itself a ground to opening default; for this relief to be granted, there must be a motion, a meritorious defense, a legal excuse for nonappearance, and payment of costs. B-X Corp v. Fulton Plumbing Co., 140 Ga. App. 131, 230 S.E.2d 331 (1976).

For a request to open default to be granted, there must be a motion, a meritorious defense, a legal excuse for late filing, and payment of costs. Taurus Prods., Inc. v. Maryland Sound Indus., Inc., 155 Ga. App. 147, 270 S.E.2d 337 (1980).

Failure to show meritorious defense is alone fatal to motion to open default under subsection (b) of this section; this requirement is a condition precedent, and in its absence, the trial judge had no discretion to open the default. Coleman v. Dairyland Ins. Co., 130 Ga. App. 228, 202 S.E.2d 698 (1973); Town of Thunderbolt v. River Crossing Apts., Ltd., 189 Ga. App. 607, 377 S.E.2d 12, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 913, 377 S.E.2d 12 (1988); Forrister v. Manis Lumber Co., 232 Ga. App. 370, 501 S.E.2d 606 (1998).

Conclusory statement of meritorious defense inadequate. — Facts showing a meritorious defense must be set forth, and a mere statement that the party "has a good and meritorious defense" is inadequate. Coleman v. Dairyland Ins. Co., 130 Ga. App. 228, 202 S.E.2d 698 (1973).

Refusal to open default not error when conditions not met. — When the defendants presented no excuse except inadvertence, no meritorious defense other than general denial, and failed to pay costs until long past the required deadline, the trial court did not err in refusing to open default nor in striking the answer. Taurus Prods., Inc. v. Maryland Sound Indus., Inc., 155 Ga. App. 147, 270 S.E.2d 337 (1980).

Discretion of judge before and after entry of default judgment distinguished. — Prior to entry of default judgment, the court has wide discretion when the court finds that from all the facts a proper case has been made to open default; after judgment, the court generally has "sound discretion" and inherent power to change or modify nonjury judgments entered during the same term. Tippins Bank & Trust Co. v. Atlantic Bank & Trust Co., 151 Ga. App. 179, 259 S.E.2d 179 (1979).

Discretion of the trial court to open a default is greater before the final judgment than after. Alex v. Parkway-Boulevard Corp., 157 Ga. App. 269, 277 S.E.2d 276 (1981).

Available only prior to entry of final judgment. — When the trial court gave no basis for setting aside a default judgment other than the court's failure to provide notice of the judgment to the defendant, the court erred when the court did not re-enter the default judgment but instead opened the default under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55, which subsection is available only prior to the entry of a final judgment. Vangoosen v. Bohannon, 236 Ga. App. 361, 511 S.E.2d 925 (1999).

Court's discretion limited after final judgment. — Subsection (b) of this section authorizes the trial judge, in the judge's discretion, to open a default at any time before final judgment; it is only after final judgment that the trial court's discretion is limited in this regard. Florida E. Coast Properties, Inc. v. Davis, 133 Ga. App. 932, 213 S.E.2d 79 (1975).

Judge has no authority to open a default after the term has passed for reasons which fall short of a reasonable excuse for negligent failure to answer. Sanders v. American Liberty Ins. Co., 225 Ga. 796, 171 S.E.2d 539 (1969), later appeal, 122 Ga. App. 407, 177 S.E.2d 176 (1970).

Failure to answer in conversion claim. — When a plaintiff brought a conversion action against a defendant, the defendant was served with a copy of the complaint and summons the same day, no answer was filed, and the case went into default and judgment was entered in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant, and there was no evidence which would authorize setting aside the original judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(2), thus, it was error for the trial court to set aside the judgment under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55. Allen v. Nash, 195 Ga. App. 597, 394 S.E.2d 395 (1990).

"Excusable neglect" provision only applicable before judgment. — While this section provides that the court may allow default to be opened for excusable neglect, this provision only applies prior to final judgment. Golden Star, Inc. v. Broyles Ins. Agency, Inc., 118 Ga. App. 95, 162 S.E.2d 756 (1968).

Generally, appellate court will not interfere when the judge has exercised discretion in opening the default. Matuszczak v. Kelly, 135 Ga. App. 577, 218 S.E.2d 292 (1975).

When the record shows the court has considered a motion to open default judgment and has exercised the court's discretion in the matter, the Court of Appeals will not interfere, absent a showing of abuse. Sheet Metal Workers Int'l Ass'n v. Carter, 144 Ga. App. 48, 240 S.E.2d 569 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 241 Ga. 220, 244 S.E.2d 860 (1978).

When the defendant answers an original complaint but fails to comply with a court order requiring an answer to an amended complaint, the court has plenary power to vacate or modify the court's order, and under normal circumstances exercise of the court's discretion to open default will not be overruled. Haire v. Cook, 237 Ga. 639, 229 S.E.2d 436 (1976).

When complaints were filed on December 6, 1988, and the defendant was served on December 7, 1988, thereby giving the defendant until Friday, January 6, 1989, to file the defendant's answers, and the answers were mailed to the clerk of the court on January 4 but were not filed by the clerk until Monday, January 9, which was the next business day following their due date, whereupon the plaintiffs proceeded with discovery and took no action regarding the late filing until May 23, 1989, when the plaintiffs filed their motions for default judgment, the trial court abused the court's discretion in refusing to set aside the default judgments and in denying the defendant's motions to open the defaults. West v. Smith, 196 Ga. App. 69, 395 S.E.2d 302, cert. denied, 196 Ga. App. 69, 395 S.E.2d 302 (1990).

Overturning when abuse of discretion is manifest. — Because refusal to open default is discretionary, such refusal will not be overturned unless an abuse of discretion is manifest. Taurus Prods., Inc. v. Maryland Sound Indus., Inc., 155 Ga. App. 147, 270 S.E.2d 337 (1980).

When the judgment permitting opening of default is based on conflicting evidence, discretion vested in the trial court will not be controlled unless manifestly abused. Minnesota Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Love, 120 Ga. App. 502, 171 S.E.2d 361 (1969).

When the defendant has complied with all conditions (i.e., payment of costs, offer to plead a meritorious defense instant, and to announce ready for trial) the judge has wide discretion with which the Court of Appeals will not interfere unless manifestly abused. Clements v. United Equity Corp., 125 Ga. App. 711, 188 S.E.2d 923 (1972).

Discretion of the trial judge in opening a default and permitting the defendant to plead will not be interfered with by an appellate court unless manifestly abused, to the injury of the plaintiff. Alex v. Parkway-Boulevard Corp., 157 Ga. App. 269, 277 S.E.2d 276 (1981); Miller v. Tranakos, 198 Ga. App. 668, 402 S.E.2d 772 (1991).

Default should be opened if “reasonable excuse” for failing to answer is shown. Cobb County Fair Ass’n v. Boyle, 143 Ga. App. 754, 240 S.E.2d 136 (1977).

When the evidence demands a finding of excusable neglect in following the progress of the case, the trial court abuses the court’s discretion in not opening the default. American Erectors, Inc. v. Hanie, 157 Ga. App. 687, 278 S.E.2d 196 (1981).

Hospital entitled to have default opened. — In a medical malpractice action against a hospital and four residents, a proper case was established for the hospital’s default to be opened under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(b) when, upon discovering the default, the hospital acted promptly, the patient and family were not prejudiced as a result of the default being opened, and the hospital alleged a meritorious defense to the lawsuit. Nelson v. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga., 307 Ga. App. 220, 704 S.E.2d 868 (2010).

Reliance on postal service not sufficient to require opening of default. — With several methods of communicating information available in our modern society, reliance on the postal service alone in a matter of such gravity as defense of an action seeking $15,000.00 in damages is not sufficient to require, as a matter of law, that default judgment be opened. Truck & Trailer Sales Corp. v. East Coast Transp. Co., 141 Ga. App. 85, 232 S.E.2d 578 (1977).

Ground of providential cause is clearly not applicable to the failures and shortcomings of the postal service. Truck & Trailer Sales Corp. v. East Coast Transp. Co., 141 Ga. App. 85, 232 S.E.2d 578 (1977).

While failure to follow upon mailing may be understandable, it is not “excusable neglect.” Truck & Trailer Sales Corp. v. East Coast Transp. Co., 141 Ga. App. 85, 232 S.E.2d 578 (1977).

Because of the many existing methods for communicating and transmitting documents, exclusive reliance on the postal service for communicating the existence of a legal complaint between the client and the attorney is insufficient to show “providential cause” or “excusable neglect.” First Union Nat’l Bank v. Floyd, 198 Ga. App. 99, 400 S.E.2d 393 (1990), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 897, 400 S.E.2d 393 (1991).

Failure to pay attention to process. — If party, on reading a writ, reaches the wrong conclusion and therefore pays no attention to the process and fails to answer, the party’s neglect is inexcusable and gross, and the trial court has no authority to open a default for reasons which fall short of reasonable excuse for negligent failure to answer. Jordan v. Clark, 119 Ga. App. 18, 165 S.E.2d 922 (1969); Hendricks v. Hubert, 158 Ga. App. 371, 280 S.E.2d 396 (1981).

Failure to meet any of conditions precedent. — When the defendant presents no excuse except failure to retain an attorney, and no meritorious defense other than a general denial, and for all the record shows, the defendant has not paid costs at any time, it is obvious that at least one of the several conditions precedent to opening the default has not been met; thus, the trial court has no exercisable discretion and errs in opening the default and allowing the defendant to defend against the complaint. Millholland v.

3. At Any Time Before Judgment (Cont'd)

Stewart, 166 Ga. App. 431, 304 S.E.2d 533 (1983).

No explanation for failure to open default. — Trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to open the default and in entering judgment against the defendant based on the default when the defendant offered no explanation whatever for the defendant's failure to open the default during the 15-day period in which the defendant could have done so as a matter of right. Grayson & Hollingsworth, Inc. v. C. Henning Studios, Inc., 194 Ga. App. 531, 391 S.E.2d 8, cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 531, 391 S.E.2d 8 (1990).

Reasonable excuse for failing to file timely answer not established as matter of law when an insurance agency received a complaint and summons on September 9, 1980, but did not forward the documents to the liability insurer until August 13, 1981, and the insured did not move to open the default until over nine months after learning of the default's existence. Georgia Farm Bldgs., Inc. v. Willard, 170 Ga. App. 327, 317 S.E.2d 229, aff'd, 253 Ga. 649, 325 S.E.2d 591 (1984).

Failure to timely secure counsel. — Trial judge properly exercised discretion in opening the default entered when the defendant failed to secure counsel in time to advise the defendant of the deadline for filing an answer. Broadaway v. Thompson, 127 Ga. App. 600, 194 S.E.2d 342 (1972).

Failure to answer because counsel is not ready constitutes willful disregard of the process of the court and cannot be sanctioned. Brown v. National Van Lines, 145 Ga. App. 824, 245 S.E.2d 27 (1978).

Failure of counsel to ascertain the facts or reach an opinion does not constitute "excusable neglect," "providential cause," or a "proper case" for default to be opened. Brown v. National Van Lines, 145 Ga. App. 824, 245 S.E.2d 27 (1978).

Failure to answer complaint. — Trial court had jurisdiction over a home inspector, and the inspector was required under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(a) of the Georgia Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A.

Ch. 11, T. 9) to file an answer to the purchaser's complaint within 30 days, but because the inspector failed to do so, the inspector was in default. Strickland v. Leake, 311 Ga. App. 298, 715 S.E.2d 676 (2011).

Plaintiff's alleged delay in authorizing release to defendant insurer of medical information is not "providential cause" or "excusable neglect" under subsection (b) of this section. Interstate Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Densley, 130 Ga. App. 70, 202 S.E.2d 463 (1973).

Potential subjection of defendant to frequent lawsuits which would cause the defendant serious economic loss should the defendant have to engage legal counsel to defend each complaint is not sufficient excuse to open a default judgment. Cate v. Harrell, 128 Ga. App. 219, 196 S.E.2d 155 (1973).

Opening of default judgment against third-party defendant purely on basis of pleadings, without consideration of fact, when the third-party defendant's motion to dismiss and to open the default stated that the third party misunderstood the nature of the third party practice and was not represented by counsel, was an abuse of discretion as these statements do not constitute a proper case for opening of a default judgment. Dukes v. Burke, 139 Ga. App. 583, 228 S.E.2d 729 (1976).

Default due to reliance on word of another. — Litigant should not unnecessarily be forced into default for having reasonably relied on word of the litigant's fellow, particularly when no innocent party will suffer if the default is opened. Cobb County Fair Ass'n v. Boyle, 143 Ga. App. 754, 240 S.E.2d 136 (1977).

Good cause for belief that insurer was defending suit. — Since there was good cause for the defendant to believe that the suit was being defended by an insurance company, any neglect by the defendant in following the progress of the case was excusable. Powell v. Eskins, 193 Ga. App. 144, 387 S.E.2d 389 (1989); Pinehurst Baptist Church, Inc. v. Murray, 215 Ga. App. 259, 450 S.E.2d 307 (1994).

Filing of a motion to open a default before the remittitur is not an impediment to a trial court's consideration thereof. Marsh v. Way, 255 Ga. 284, 336 S.E.2d 795 (1985).

Once a final judgment is entered, the provisions of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 regarding the opening of default are inapplicable, and the case proceeds under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Archer v. Monroe, 165 Ga. App. 724, 302 S.E.2d 583 (1983); Ferros v. Georgia State Patrol, 211 Ga. App. 50, 438 S.E.2d 163 (1993); Pine Tree Publ'g, Inc. v. Community Holdings, Inc., 242 Ga. App. 689, 531 S.E.2d 137 (2000).

Provisions of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55, regarding the opening of a default, become inapplicable upon entry of a final judgment. Anderson v. Bibb Supply Co., 188 Ga. App. 817, 374 S.E.2d 556 (1988); North Ga. Home Constr. Co. v. Lackey, 193 Ga. App. 346, 388 S.E.2d 766 (1989).

Motion to open default upon remand not proper until remittitur filed. — In an appeal from a default judgment, when the Court of Appeals ordered remand for preparation of findings of fact and conclusions of law and the defaulting party then moved to open the default in the trial court, the motion was not properly before the court since the trial court did not regain jurisdiction until remittitur was actually filed. Marsh v. Way, 173 Ga. App. 399, 326 S.E.2d 499, aff'd, 255 Ga. 284, 336 S.E.2d 795 (1985).

Motion filed following remand untimely. — When a judgment is vacated and the case remanded for findings of fact and conclusions of law with regard to damages, a motion to open default made upon remand is not timely. Marsh v. Way, 255 Ga. 284, 336 S.E.2d 795 (1985).

9-11-56. Summary judgment.

(a) For claimant. A party seeking to recover upon a claim, counterclaim, or cross-claim or to obtain a declaratory judgment may, at any time after the expiration of 30 days from the commencement of the action or after service of a motion for summary judgment by the adverse party, move with or without supporting affidavits for a summary judgment in his favor upon all or any part thereof.

(b) For defending party. A party against whom a claim, counterclaim, or cross-claim is asserted or a declaratory judgment is sought may, at any time, move with or without supporting affidavits for a summary judgment in his favor as to all or any part thereof.

(c) Motion and proceedings thereon. The motion shall be served at least 30 days before the time fixed for the hearing. The adverse party prior to the day of hearing may serve opposing affidavits. The judgment sought shall be rendered forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law; but nothing in this Code section shall be construed as denying to any party the right to trial by jury where there are substantial issues of fact to be determined. A summary judgment may be rendered on the issue of liability alone although there is a genuine issue as to the amount of damage.

(d) Case not fully adjudicated on motion. If on motion under this Code section judgment is not rendered upon the whole case or for all the relief asked and a trial is necessary, the court at the hearing of the motion, by examining the pleadings and the evidence before it and by interrogating counsel shall, if practicable, ascertain what material facts exist without substantial controversy and what material facts are actually and in good faith controverted. It shall thereupon make an order specifying the facts that appear without substantial controversy, including the extent to which the amount of damages or other relief is not in controversy, and directing such proceedings in the action as are just. Upon the trial of the action the facts so specified shall be deemed established, and the trial shall be conducted accordingly.

(e) Form of affidavits; further testimony; defense required. Supporting and opposing affidavits shall be made on personal knowledge, shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in the evidence, and shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein. Sworn or certified copies of all papers or parts thereof referred to in an affidavit shall be attached thereto or served therewith. The court may permit affidavits to be supplemented or opposed by depositions, answers to interrogatories, or further affidavits. All affidavits shall be filed with the court and copies thereof shall be served on the opposing parties. When a motion for summary judgment is made and supported as provided in this Code section, an adverse party may not rest upon the mere allegations or denials of his pleading, but his response, by affidavits or as otherwise provided in this Code section, must set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. If he does not so respond, summary judgment, if appropriate, shall be entered against him.

(f) When affidavits are unavailable. Should it appear from the affidavits of a party opposing the motion that he cannot, for reasons stated, present by affidavits facts essential to justify his opposition, the court may refuse the application for judgment, or may order a continuance to permit affidavits to be obtained or depositions to be taken or discovery to be had, or may make such other order as is just.

(g) Affidavits made in bad faith. Should it appear to the satisfaction of the court at any time that any of the affidavits presented pursuant to this Code section are presented in bad faith or solely for the purpose of delay, the court shall forthwith order the party employing them to pay to the other party the amount of the reasonable expenses which the filing of the affidavits caused him to incur, including reasonable attorney's fees, and any offending party may be adjudged guilty of contempt.

(h) Appeal. An order granting summary judgment on any issue or as to any party shall be subject to review by appeal. An order denying summary judgment shall be subject to review by direct appeal in accordance with subsection (b) of Code Section 5-6-34. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 56; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 25; Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3.)

General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under Ga. L 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq., are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Constitutionality. — Summary judgment does not unconstitutionally deprive litigants of their right to a jury trial since summary judgment may be entered only when there is no issue of fact for consideration. Harry v. Glynn County, 269 Ga. 503, 501 S.E.2d 196 (1998).

Due process requirements. — Although a motion for summary judgment is a vehicle for disposing of a controversy without the necessity of a trial and a summary disposition of the issues in order to efficiently resolve litigation, nevertheless, due process requires that the respondent not be surprised; rather, that the respondent be given reasonable opportunity to refute the movant's showing that there are no genuine issues of material fact. Porter Coatings v. Stein Steel & Supply Co., 247 Ga. 631, 278 S.E.2d 377 (1981).

Crux of summary judgment procedure. — Crux of summary judgment procedure is that if there is no substantial issue as to any material fact, then the court can apply the appropriate legal principles and define the legal rights of the parties without lengthy trials to establish already undisputed facts. Caldwell v. Mayor of Savannah, 101 Ga. App. 683, 115 S.E.2d 403 (1960) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Essence of a motion for summary judgment is that there is no genuine issue of material fact to be resolved by the trier of facts, and that the movant is entitled to judgment on the law applicable to the established fact. McCarty v. National Life & Accident Ins. Co., 107 Ga. App. 178, 129 S.E.2d 408 (1962) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Similarity to federal rule. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 is similar to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56, and on review it is proper for the appellate court to consider federal rulings. Federal Ins. Co. v. Oakwood Steel Co., 126 Ga. App. 479, 191 S.E.2d 298 (1972).

Summary Judgment Act of 1959, Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq., was substantially identical to Rule 56 of the Federal Rules of Practice and Procedure, 28 U.S.C. Holland v. Sanfax Corp., 106 Ga. App. 1, 126 S.E.2d 442 (1962).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 must be strictly followed in consideration of a motion for summary judgment. Southeastern Metal Prods., Inc. v. Horger, 166 Ga. App. 205, 303 S.E.2d 536 (1983).

Unawareness of rules not excusable. — Florida attorney's unawareness of Georgia rule permitting motion for summary judgment to be decided by the court without oral hearing was not excusable neglect that warranted reconsideration of the grant of summary judgment. Dominiak v. Camden Tel. & Tel. Co., 205 Ga. App. 620, 422 S.E.2d 887, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 899, 422 S.E.2d 887 (1992).

Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 56 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56) must be construed with Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-1). Taylor v. Donaldson, 227 Ga. 496, 181 S.E.2d 340, cert. denied, 404 U.S. 805, 92 S. Ct. 163, 30 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1971).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 controls over local court rules. — Local court rules that are not in substantial compliance with the requirements of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) with regard to summary judgment proceedings are of no effect. Smith v. Conley, 152 Ga. App. 589, 263 S.E.2d 453 (1979).

No conflict with superior court rules. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 and Rule 6.3 of the Uniform Rules of Superior Courts work together consistently. Furthermore, Rule 6.3 does not thwart the obvious purpose of a hearing in summary judgment, which is to provide counsel with an opportunity to persuade the court and to provide the court with an opportunity to interrogate counsel. Kelley v. First Franklin Fin. Corp., 256 Ga. 622, 351 S.E.2d 443 (1987).

There is no conflict between the requirements of Uniform Superior Court Rules 6.2 and 6.5 and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56; rather, the requirements are in addition to those set out in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9. West v. Nodvin, 183 Ga. App. 645, 359 S.E.2d 729 (1987).

Rule 6.3 of the Uniform Superior Court Rules is not inconsistent with subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, and it is not error for the trial court to grant summary judgment in accordance with Rule 6.3 without an oral-argument hearing, if neither party requested such a hearing. Dallas Blue Haven Pools, Inc. v. Taslimi, 256 Ga. 739, 354 S.E.2d 160 (1987).

Subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 refers only to filing of opposing affidavits prior to the day of hearing and provides no authority for other responsive materials to be filed outside the 30-day period prescribed in Superior Court Rule 6.2. Winchester v. Sun Valley-Atlanta Assocs., 206 Ga. App. 140, 424 S.E.2d 85 (1992); Coastal Plains Trucking Co. v. Thomas County Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 224 Ga. App. 885, 482 S.E.2d 493 (1997).

Section 9-11-55 controlling as to default. — Motion for summary judgment is not an appropriate means by which a plaintiff can secure a judgment based upon the defendant's alleged default. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55 is the controlling statute on the issue of default. Watson v. Georgia State Dep't of Educ. Credit Union, 201 Ga. App. 761, 412 S.E.2d 286 (1991).

Summary judgment is analogous to directed verdict; operation of the motions is essentially the same in reference to those issues upon which a movant for summary judgment would have, at trial, the burden of proof, but somewhat different if the motion is made by the opponent of the party with the trial burden. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Beaver, 120 Ga. App. 420, 170 S.E.2d 737 (1969).

"Claim" defined. — General Assembly did not intend to give a restrictive meaning to the term "claim" in Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56), and this term is not confined to such actions as contracts, torts, or the like. Taylor v. Donaldson, 227 Ga. 496, 181 S.E.2d 340, cert. denied, 404 U.S. 805, 92 S. Ct. 163, 30 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1971).

Appeal to superior court by propounder of will as "claim". — Term "claim," as used in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, applies if the propounder of a purported will, upon appeal to the superior court, seeks to establish it as the last will and testament of the decedent. Taylor v. Donaldson, 227 Ga. 496, 181 S.E.2d 340, cert. denied, 404 U.S. 805, 92 S. Ct. 163, 30 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1971).

Statute of limitations may be raised in brief in opposition to a motion for summary judgment. Brown v. Quarles, 154 Ga. App. 350, 268 S.E.2d 403 (1980).

Law of the case doctrine. — Because the law of the case doctrine did not apply to issues not previously ruled upon below, enumerated as error on appeal, or discussed in a prior appellate decision, the trial court erred in denying summary judgment to a boat's charterer, and partial summary judgment to both the charterer and the boat's owner, in an action arising out of injuries sustained by a longshoreman while on board a cargo ship as the law of the case rule did not preclude consideration of the charterer's status and the issue of whether both were liable under the International Safety Management Code as such were not previously addressed by the trial court. Eastern Car Liner, Ltd. v. Kyles, 280 Ga. App. 362, 634 S.E.2d 129 (2006).

Respondent to a motion to dismiss is entitled to notice of conversion of the motion into one for summary judgment.

ment and to 30 days to respond to the motion for summary judgment unless such notice and opportunity are waived. Bonner v. Fox, 204 Ga. App. 666, 420 S.E.2d 312 (1992).

Adjudication on summary judgment is an adjudication on the merits. Summer-Minter & Assocs. v. Giordano, 231 Ga. 601, 203 S.E.2d 173 (1974); Dickson v. Dickson, 238 Ga. 672, 235 S.E.2d 479 (1977); Fierer v. Ashe, 147 Ga. App. 446, 249 S.E.2d 270 (1978); National Heritage Corp. v. Mount Olive Mem. Gardens, Inc., 148 Ga. App. 398, 251 S.E.2d 311 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 244 Ga. 240, 260 S.E.2d 1 (1979); Walter E. Heller & Co. v. Aetna Bus. Credit, Inc., 158 Ga. App. 249, 280 S.E.2d 144 (1981).

Summary judgment is an abbreviated trial of no less importance than any other trial on the merits. Summer-Minter & Assocs. v. Giordano, 231 Ga. 601, 203 S.E.2d 173 (1974); Davidson Mineral Properties, Inc. v. Gifford-Hill & Co., 235 Ga. 176, 219 S.E.2d 133 (1975).

Grant of summary judgment is a ruling on merits. Usher v. Johnson, 157 Ga. App. 420, 278 S.E.2d 70 (1981).

Granting summary judgment is a decision on the merits and ends the case; amendments and subsequent motions for summary judgment made after this decision on the merits are too late. Ellington v. Tolar Constr. Co., 142 Ga. App. 218, 235 S.E.2d 729, cert. dismissed, 239 Ga. 849, 240 S.E.2d 551 (1977).

Party against whom summary judgment is granted is in the same position as if having lost a verdict. Summer-Minter & Assocs. v. Giordano, 231 Ga. 601, 203 S.E.2d 173 (1974); Dickson v. Dickson, 238 Ga. 672, 235 S.E.2d 479 (1977); National Heritage Corp. v. Mount Olive Mem. Gardens, Inc., 148 Ga. App. 398, 251 S.E.2d 311 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 244 Ga. 240, 260 S.E.2d 1 (1979); Walter E. Heller & Co. v. Aetna Bus. Credit, Inc., 158 Ga. App. 249, 280 S.E.2d 144 (1981).

There is no such thing as a "default summary judgment." By failing to respond to a motion for summary judgment, a party merely waives the right to present evidence in opposition to the motion. It does not automatically follow that the motion should be granted. McGivern v. First Capital Income Properties, Ltd., 188 Ga. App. 716, 373 S.E.2d 817 (1988); Hughes v. Montgomery Contracting Co., 189 Ga. App. 814, 377 S.E.2d 723 (1989).

Effect of summary judgment on abusive litigation counterclaim. — Because trial courts are not "infallible" when determining whether questions of fact exist on motions for summary judgment, a trial court's grant of summary judgment on a complaint does not control the merits of a subsequent motion for summary judgment on the defendant's abusive litigation counterclaim arising out of the filing of that complaint. Seckinger v. Holtzendorf, 200 Ga. App. 604, 409 S.E.2d 76, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 897, 409 S.E.2d 76 (1991).

Denial of motion for summary judgment decides nothing except that under the evidence before the court at that time there can be rendered no judgment as a matter of law. Ellington v. Tolar Constr. Co., 142 Ga. App. 218, 235 S.E.2d 729, cert. dismissed, 239 Ga. 849, 240 S.E.2d 551 (1977); Graham Bros. Constr. Co. v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 150 Ga. App. 193, 257 S.E.2d 321 (1979); T.L. Rogers Oil Co. v. South Carolina Nat'l Bank, 203 Ga. App. 605, 417 S.E.2d 336, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 908, 417 S.E.2d 336 (1992).

When the plaintiffs contended that because the trial court originally denied the defendant's motion for summary judgment based on the running of the statute of limitations, it was barred from later entering an order granting such a motion, based on the doctrine of res judicata, it was held that the denial of a motion for summary judgment decides nothing, and thus the plaintiffs' argument based on the doctrine of res judicata was inapposite. Gaskins v. A.B.C. Drug Co., 183 Ga. App. 518, 359 S.E.2d 364 (1987).

Costs, fees, awards despite summary judgment denial. — Denial of summary judgment does not preclude as a matter of law the exercise of the trial court's discretion under O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 to award litigation costs and attorney's fees for frivolous actions upon the trial of the case. Porter v. Felker, 261 Ga. 421, 405 S.E.2d 31 (1991).

Denial of summary judgment in a prior case resulted in collateral estoppel of a later claim of abusive litigation. The previous denial of summary judgment to the plaintiff in the abusive litigation case, who was the defendant in the prior case, constituted a binding determination that the claim in the prior case did not lack substantial justification. Walker v. McLarty, 199 Ga. App. 460, 405 S.E.2d 294 (1991), cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 907, 405 S.E.2d 294 (1991) But see. Graves v. State, 269 Ga. 772, 504 S.E.2d 679 (1998), overruled on other grounds, Jones v. State, 272 Ga. 900, 537 S.E.2d 80 (2000), reversing Graves v. State, 227 Ga. App. 628, 490 S.E.2d 111 (1997).

Subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 provides specifically for partial summary judgment. There is no requirement that all claims pled be included in a motion for partial summary judgment. Clark v. West, 196 Ga. App. 456, 395 S.E.2d 884 (1990).

Judgment on the pleadings held not partial summary judgment. — If the record shows that no matter outside the pleadings is presented or considered by the court when making an order on a motion for judgment on the pleadings, entry of judgment is not a partial summary judgment, but a judgment on the pleadings only. Goolsby v. Allstate Ins. Co., 130 Ga. App. 881, 204 S.E.2d 789 (1974).

Disposition of motion to dismiss under summary judgment procedure when matter outside pleadings considered. — Although a petition may amply meet liberalized requirements of notice pleading so as to preclude dismissal from consideration of the petition alone, the court has authority to consider the matter outside the pleadings, if presented, and if the court does so, the court must dispose of the matter under summary judgment procedures. Kiker v. Hefner, 119 Ga. App. 629, 168 S.E.2d 637 (1969).

Defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction, insufficiency of process, and insufficiency of service of process was not converted to a summary judgment motion upon consideration of matters outside the pleadings and, thus, dismissal was not directly appealable under the summary judgment statute. Church v. Bell, 213 Ga. App. 44, 443 S.E.2d 677 (1994).

Motion to dismiss by the state transportation department was treated as a motion for summary judgment because the department, the surviving relatives of the decedents who died in an auto accident, and the trial court relied on numerous documents outside the pleadings. DOT v. Carr, 254 Ga. App. 781, 564 S.E.2d 14 (2002).

Motion for summary judgment on basis of complaint equivalent to motion to dismiss. — If a motion for summary judgment is made by the defendant solely on the basis of the complaint, such motion is functionally equivalent to a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim; such complaint should be liberally construed in favor of the complainant, with the facts alleged in the complaint taken as true, and the motion for summary judgment must be denied if a claim has been pled. Guthrie v. Monumental Properties, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 21, 232 S.E.2d 369 (1977).

Trial judge has inherent power, during the same term of court in which judgment is rendered, to revise, correct, revoke, modify, or vacate such judgment, even upon the court's own motion, for purpose of promoting justice and in the exercise of sound legal discretion. LeCraw v. Atlanta Arts Alliance, Inc., 126 Ga. App. 656, 191 S.E.2d 572 (1972).

Number of motions for summary judgment. — There is nothing limiting the number of times a party may make a motion for summary judgment. Graham Bros. Constr. Co. v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 150 Ga. App. 193, 257 S.E.2d 321 (1979); T.L. Rogers Oil Co. v. South Carolina Nat'l Bank, 203 Ga. App. 605, 417 S.E.2d 336, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 908, 417 S.E.2d 336 (1992).

Renewed or second motion for summary judgment may be considered within the discretion of a trial court, even though there has been no expansion of the record since the denial of the first motion for summary judgment. Southeastern Metal Prods., Inc. v. Horger, 166 Ga. App. 205, 303 S.E.2d 536 (1983); Travelers Indem. Co. v. Thomas, 172 Ga. App. 816, 324 S.E.2d 735 (1984).

Nothing in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 limits the number of times a party may make a motion for summary judgment, even without proffering additional evidence, leaving it within the trial judge's discretion to consider such motions. Eastern Car Liner, Ltd. v. Kyles, 280 Ga. App. 362, 634 S.E.2d 129 (2006).

Although the court found that summary judgment was improperly granted, nothing in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 limited the number of times a party could make a motion for summary judgment; thus, upon remand, either party could file a motion for summary judgment and seek a determination based upon the evidence and standard for summary adjudication. Gold Creek SL, LLC v. City of Dawsonville, 290 Ga. App. 807, 660 S.E.2d 858 (2008).

Grant after previous denial. — Previous denial of summary judgment does not preclude the subsequent grant thereof on the basis of an expanded record. Ellington v. Tolar Constr. Co., 142 Ga. App. 218, 235 S.E.2d 729, cert. dismissed, 239 Ga. 849, 240 S.E.2d 551 (1977); Graham Bros. Constr. Co. v. Seaboard Coast Line R.R., 150 Ga. App. 193, 257 S.E.2d 321 (1979); Christian v. Allstate Ins. Co., 152 Ga. App. 358, 262 S.E.2d 621 (1979); T.L. Rogers Oil Co. v. South Carolina Nat'l Bank, 203 Ga. App. 605, 417 S.E.2d 336, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 908, 417 S.E.2d 336 (1992).

Prior denial of summary judgment does not foreclose the subsequent grant thereof, as an order or other form of decision is subject to revision at any time before entry of judgment adjudicating all claims, rights, and liabilities of all parties. Fierer v. Ashe, 147 Ga. App. 446, 249 S.E.2d 270 (1978).

Although the plaintiffs filed the plaintiffs' negligence lawsuit in the superior court of one county and that court denied the defendants' motion for summary judgment, the circuit court in the county to which the lawsuit was transferred did not err in reconsidering the defendants' motion for summary judgment and granting the motion because nothing limits the number of times a party may make a motion for summary judgment and res judicata does not apply to a denial of a motion for summary judgment. Hubbard v. DOT, 256 Ga. App. 342, 568 S.E.2d 559 (2002).

Striking of a counterclaim after consideration of the proposed pretrial orders of the plaintiff and the defendant, pleadings, evidence, and arguments of counsel is tantamount to a grant of summary judgment motion and appealable without certificate of immediate review, even though interlocutory. Aiken v. Citizens & S. Bank, 249 Ga. 481, 291 S.E.2d 717, cert. denied, 459 U.S. 973, 103 S. Ct. 307, 74 L. Ed. 2d 287 (1982).

Third-party defendant is entitled to move for summary judgment against the original plaintiff on any ground for which the original defendant would be entitled to summary judgment against the plaintiff. Empire Shoe Co. v. Nico Indus., Inc., 197 Ga. App. 411, 398 S.E.2d 440 (1990).

When motion to dismiss is treated as motion for summary judgment. — If a motion to dismiss is supplemented by argument of counsel and matters outside of the pleadings, it is treated as a motion for summary judgment. Blasingame v. Blasingame, 249 Ga. 791, 294 S.E.2d 519 (1982).

An exhibit offered at a hearing on an interlocutory injunction that was the basis of the trial court's decision to grant the appellee's motion to dismiss converted the motion to dismiss to a motion for summary judgment, and the appellants were entitled to have the notice required in the summary judgment provisions. Wallis v. Trustees, Sugar Hill United Methodist Church, 252 Ga. 51, 310 S.E.2d 915 (1984).

In an action filed by children to recover damages for injuries sustained by their parent in a fall in a nursing home facility, a motion to dismiss the action for failure to state a claim filed by the center that operated the facility was converted to a motion for summary judgment and, on appeal, was to be reviewed as such; the children, as nonmovants, submitted documentary evidence in response to the motion, and, by doing so, in effect requested that the motion be converted into one for summary judgment and acquiesced in the trial court's decision not to give notice of the actual nature of the pending motion. Gaddis v. Chatsworth Health Care Ctr., Inc., 282 Ga. App. 615, 639 S.E.2d 399 (2006).

Treatment of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) motion as one for summary judgment. — So long as the parties are afforded sufficient time within which to file affidavits and other evidentiary materials, a trial court sua sponte can treat an O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)(6) motion as one for summary judgment, even though neither party has introduced matter outside of the pleadings. Zepp v. Mayor of Athens, 180 Ga. App. 72, 348 S.E.2d 673 (1986).

Although the trial court converted the defendant limited liability company's (LLC's) motion to dismiss the plaintiff sanitation company's action into a motion for summary judgment when the court considered matters outside the pleadings, the appellate court refused to reverse the trial court's judgment finding that an agreement which allowed the sanitation company to purchase the LLC for $500,000 less than any amount offered by a third party was an unreasonable restraint on alienation because the trial court allowed the sanitation company to introduce evidence in support of the company's claims. RTS Landfill, Inc. v. Appalachian Waste Sys., LLC, 267 Ga. App. 56, 598 S.E.2d 798 (2004).

Notice of conversion of motion to motion for summary judgment. — In a case alleging unfair employment termination, the trial court's failure to notify the employee of the trial court's conversion of the employer's motion to dismiss to a summary judgment motion, and the court's failure to give the employee at least 30 days to respond, although error, was not reversible because the employee failed to show that the employee was harmed by this deficiency in the notice; because the employee failed to provide the appellate court with a transcript of the summary judgment hearing, the trial court's summary judgment was presumed to have been correct on appeal and was affirmed. Bynum v. Horizon Staffing, 266

Motion in limine held not to be, in effect, a motion for summary judgment. — Motion in limine in a dispossessory action that the issuance of the writ of possession had rendered the issue of possession moot was not in effect a motion for summary judgment and, in granting the motion and dismissing the case, the court did not violate the defendant's right, pursuant to subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 and Rule 6.2 of the Uniform Rules for Superior and State Courts, to have at least 30 days to respond to the motion, when none of the parties wished to pursue their damage claims and, therefore, nothing remained to be tried. Diplomat Restaurant, Inc. v. Anthony, 180 Ga. App. 431, 349 S.E.2d 284 (1986).

Standing to oppose motion made by codefendant. — Codefendant in a tort action has no standing to oppose a motion for summary judgment made by the other codefendant, if the codefendant has no existing rights that will be adversely affected by the grant thereof. Southeastern Erection Co. v. Flagler Co., 108 Ga. App. 831, 134 S.E.2d 822 (1964) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Effect of ruling at earlier hearing on admissibility. — Grant of judgment for the plaintiffs on the pleadings after a ruling that no issuable defense had been alleged was not error on the ground that the court had, some months earlier, denied a motion for summary judgment made on behalf of the plaintiffs, when the court was considering the effect of evidence, whereas at the preliminary hearing the court was considering the admissibility of the evidence. Phillips v. Marcin, 162 Ga. App. 202, 290 S.E.2d 546 (1982).

Seventh Amendment right to jury trial not infringed. — Because the Seventh Amendment to the U.S. Constitution did not apply in state courts, and an insured's right to a jury trial thereunder was not infringed when genuine issues of material fact were lacking and disposition of the matter was best handled by way of summary judgment, the insured's Seventh Amendment right to a jury trial was not infringed; as a result, the insured failed to demonstrate any constitutional deprivation warranting a 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action. Cuyler v. Allstate Ins. Co., 284 Ga. App. 409, 643 S.E.2d 783, cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 510 (Ga. 2007).

Purpose of Summary Judgment

Prompt and inexpensive method of disposing of cases. — Motion for summary judgment is designed to provide a prompt and inexpensive method of disposing of any cause if the pleadings, depositions, and affidavits clearly show there is no issue of material fact, although allegations of the pleadings standing alone may raise such an issue. Maxey-Bosshardt Lumber Co. v. Maxwell, 127 Ga. App. 429, 193 S.E.2d 885 (1972).

Purpose of former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq. was to afford to either party litigant, upon motion, a judgment forthwith if the record shows there was not a genuine issue existing between the parties. Southern v. Adams, 111 Ga. App. 217, 141 S.E.2d 320 (1965) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Very purpose of former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq. was to afford either party litigant a judgment forthwith if the record showed there was not a genuine issue existing between the parties, but only after each party had an opportunity to make out a case or establish a defense, as the case may be. Scales v. Peevy, 103 Ga. App. 42, 118 S.E.2d 193 (1961); Sparks v. Rinker, 111 Ga. App. 191, 141 S.E.2d 185 (1965) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Summary resolution has its place; efficient and orderly dispensation of justice is enhanced when unnecessary and protracted litigation is avoided. Shmunis v. GMC, 146 Ga. App. 486, 246 S.E.2d 486 (1978).

Unnecessary jury trials eliminated.

— Summary judgment was clearly intended to dispose of litigation expeditiously and avoid the useless time and expense of going through a jury trial even though the petition fairly bristles with serious allegations, if, when given notice and an opportunity to produce affidavits by persons competent to testify on their own knowledge to the truth of such allegations, the pleader does nothing to contradict affidavits of the movant that show the opposite party has no right to prevail. Crutcher v. Crawford Land Co., 220 Ga. 298, 138 S.E.2d 580 (1964); Brown v. J.C. Penney Co., 123 Ga. App. 233, 180 S.E.2d 364 (1971); Summer-Minter & Assocs. v. Giordano, 231 Ga. 601, 203 S.E.2d 173 (1974); Motel Mgt. Sys. v. Billing, 143 Ga. App. 702, 240 S.E.2d 173 (1977) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Function of motion for summary judgment is to avoid a useless trial if there is no genuine issue as to any material fact. General Gas Corp. v. Carn, 103 Ga. App. 542, 120 S.E.2d 156 (1961) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq. obviously had as one of its purposes, if there was no genuine issue as to any material fact, to allow the trial court to apply appropriate legal principles and define the legal rights of the parties without lengthy trials to establish already undisputed facts. Scales v. Peevy, 103 Ga. App. 42, 118 S.E.2d 193 (1961) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Purpose of the Summary Judgment Act of 1959 (former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.) was to eliminate the necessity for a jury trial if there was no genuine issue as to any material fact in the case. General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Camden Constr. Co., 115 Ga. App. 189, 154 S.E.2d 26 (1967) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Purpose of former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq. was to eliminate the necessity for a jury trial if there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the moving party was entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Holland v. Sanfax Corp., 106 Ga. App. 1, 126 S.E.2d 442 (1962); King v. Fryer, 107 Ga. App. 715, 131 S.E.2d 203 (1963); Lampkin v. Edwards, 222 Ga. 288, 149 S.E.2d 708 (1966); Boston Ins. Co. v. Barnes, 120 Ga. App. 585, 171 S.E.2d 626 (1969); Elder v. Smith, 121 Ga. App. 461, 174 S.E.2d 239, rev'd on other grounds, 226 Ga. 688, 177 S.E.2d 77 (1970); Tony v. Pollard, 248 Ga. 86, 281 S.E.2d 557 (1981) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Purpose of former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq. was to eliminate the necessity for a trial by jury if, giving the opposing party the benefit of all reasonable doubts and all favorable inferences that may be drawn from the evidence, there was no genuine issue as to any material fact, and the moving party was entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Butterworth v. Pettitt, 223 Ga. 355, 155 S.E.2d 20 (1967); Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Beaver, 120 Ga. App. 420, 170 S.E.2d 737 (1969); Kroger Co. v. Cobb, 125 Ga. Purpose of Summary Judgment (Cont'd)

S.E.2d 579 (1978); Mock v. Canterbury Realty Co., 152 Ga. App. 872, 264 S.E.2d 489 (1980); Riddle v. Driebe, 153 Ga. App. 276, 265 S.E.2d 92 (1980); Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Davis, 153 Ga. App. 291, 265 S.E.2d 102 (1980); Lagerstrom v. Beers Constr. Co., 157 Ga. App. 396, 277 S.E.2d 765 (1981); Troutt v. Nash AMC/Jeep, Inc., 157 Ga. App. 399, 278 S.E.2d 54 (1981); Parlato v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 165 Ga. App. 758, 302 S.E.2d 613 (1983); Bowman v. United States Life Ins. Co., 167 Ga. App. 673, 307 S.E.2d 134 (1983) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Purpose of permitting summary judgments is to dispose of unnecessary trials and not to upset a verdict authorized by the evidence merely because at a previous stage of the case a finding may not have been authorized in accordance with such verdict. Hill v. Willis, 224 Ga. 263, 161 S.E.2d 281 (1968).

Ga. L. 1967, p. 234, § 1 et seq. (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56) serves a useful purpose, namely, to eliminate the necessity of trial by jury if there is no genuine issue of fact to be tried. Brown v. J.C. Penney Co., 123 Ga. App. 233, 180 S.E.2d 364 (1971).

Point of summary judgment is to remove from the jury what is so clear as not to need rumination. Siefferman v. Peppers, 159 Ga. App. 688, 285 S.E.2d 61 (1981).

No intent to change existing procedures afforded to parties. — Purpose of former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq. was not to change or amend or do away with any of the existing procedures afforded parties to a lawsuit. Braselton Bros. v. Better Maid Dairy Prods., Inc., 110 Ga. App. 515, 139 S.E.2d 124 (1964) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Not intended to eliminate all trial by jury. — It is not the purpose of summary judgment to change the general rules with reference to submitting questions to the jury, and summary judgment should be granted only if there is no genuine issue of fact as shown by the record before the court. Wasserman v. Southland Inv. Corp., 105 Ga. App. 420, 124 S.E.2d 674 (1962); Clayton v. Steve-Cathey, Inc., 105 Ga. App. 570, 125 S.E.2d 118 (1962) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Purpose of enacting Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq. was not to change the general rule that questions of negligence, of contributory negligence, of cause and proximate cause, and of whose negligence or of what negligence constitutes the proximate cause of an injury are, except in plain, palpable, and indisputable cases, solely for the jury. Malcom v. Malcolm, 112 Ga. App. 151, 144 S.E.2d 188 (1965) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Trial of all the issues of fact by the jury was not intended to be abrogated by summary judgment. Ginn v. Morgan, 225 Ga. 192, 167 S.E.2d 393 (1969).

Material issues identified. — Purpose of summary judgment procedure is to determine whether there is a material issue of fact to be tried, rather than to set up technical pitfalls for the unwary. Glenn v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 158 Ga. App. 98, 279 S.E.2d 481 (1981).

On summary judgment, a trial court determines only whether a material issue of fact exists, and such determination does not include "the discovery of the truth of such fact" or permit frustration of a plaintiff's constitutional right to a trial by jury "by inferring the existence of other facts" from predicate evidence. Bruno's Food Stores, Inc. v. Taylor, 228 Ga. App. 439, 491 S.E.2d 881 (1997).

Procedure pierces formal verbiage of pleadings. — Primary purpose of summary judgment procedure was to allow a party to pierce the allegations of the pleadings, show the truth to the court, and receive judgment if there was no genuine issue of material fact, although an issue might be raised by the pleadings. Scales v. Peevy, 103 Ga. App. 42, 118 S.E.2d 193 (1961); Spratlin v. Manufacturers Acceptance Corp., 105 Ga. App. 463, 125 S.E.2d 110 (1962); Calhoun v. Eaves, 114 Ga. App. 756, 152 S.E.2d 805 (1966); Laite v. Baxter, 126 Ga. App. 743, 191 S.E.2d 531 (1972); Gregory v. Vance Publishing Corp., 130 Ga. App. 118, 202 S.E.2d 515 (1973); Flanders v. Columbia

Nitrogen Corp., 135 Ga. App. 21, 217 S.E.2d 363 (1975); Maxwell v. Columbia Realty Venture, 155 Ga. App. 289, 270 S.E.2d 704 (1980) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Purpose of a motion for summary judgment is to pierce formal verbiage of the pleadings by showing that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Connors v. City Council, 120 Ga. App. 499, 171 S.E.2d 578 (1969); French v. Norman, 124 Ga. App. 567, 184 S.E.2d 663 (1971).

Summary judgment is designed to enable the judge, by piercing formal verbiage of the pleadings, to filter out sham issues that might otherwise cause needless and time-consuming litigation. Boston Ins. Co. v. Barnes, 120 Ga. App. 585, 171 S.E.2d 626 (1969); Porter v. Felker, 261 Ga. 421, 405 S.E.2d 31 (1991).

Very object of a motion for summary judgment is to separate what is formal or pretended in denial or averment from what is genuine and substantial so that only the latter may subject a suitor to the burden of a trial. Maxey-Bosshardt Lumber Co. v. Maxwell, 127 Ga. App. 429, 193 S.E.2d 885 (1972).

Applicability to Certain Actions, Proceedings, Issues, and Defenses

Attorney fees. — When a company sought attorney fees, under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11, and punitive damages from its attorneys regarding their participation in a sale of the company's assets, summary judgment should have been granted in favor of the attorneys because no claims as to which such relief might have been awarded were found to be proper. R.W. Holdco, Inc. v. Johnson, 267 Ga. App. 859, 601 S.E.2d 177 (2004).

In an action to recover on a promissory note with past due interest, and upon entering summary judgment in favor of the lender, the trial court erred in awarding the lender $10,195.40 in attorney fees in a judgment in which the principal and interest amounted to only $6,259.12; under the formula delineated under O.C.G.A. § 13-1-11, such amount was limited to $650.91. Long v. Hogan, 289 Ga.

App. 347, 656 S.E.2d 868 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 516 (Ga. 2008).

Evidence supported an award of attorney fees because the evidence presented by the client in a legal malpractice suit could authorize a jury to conclude that, despite owing the client a fiduciary duty, the attorney's persistent failure to adequately represent the client went beyond mere negligence and rose to the level of bad faith. Brito v. Gomez Law Group, LLC, 289 Ga. App. 625, 658 S.E.2d 178 (2008).

Breach of fiduciary duty. — In a case in which a company sued the company's attorneys for breach of fiduciary duty for closing a sale of the company's assets, summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the attorneys because the attorneys made all proper disclosures to the employee and officer who had apparent authority to conduct the sale, and they justifiably relied on that authority, as well as on certain consent minutes from the corporation which was represented as being the company's parent. R.W. Holdco, Inc. v. Johnson, 267 Ga. App. 859, 601 S.E.2d 177 (2004).

Summary judgment was inappropriate in a breach of fiduciary duty action which centered around a verbal settlement agreement as material fact issues remained as to whether: (1) a company's offer to buy the minority shareholders' stock required a written purchase agreement; (2) the parties agreed to all material terms; and (3) a note signed by one of the minority shareholders had been cancelled. McKenna v. Capital Res. Partners, IV, L.P., 286 Ga. App. 828, 650 S.E.2d 580 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 752, 763 (Ga. 2007).

Because a claim filed by a minority shareholder against the officers and directors of a corporation alleging their depletion of corporate assets through excessive salaries related to the value or price the shareholder would receive in a stock appraisal action, the shareholder's exclusive remedy was within that action; thus, a separate breach of fiduciary duty claim filed in the shareholder's direct action against the officers and directors was properly disposed of via summary judgment. Levy v. Reiner, 290 Ga. App. 471,

Recoupment. — In an action seeking a writ of possession for a mobile home, because the mobile home's tenants expressly waived any recourse against their bankrupt lender arising from a prior judgment, based on a voluntary settlement with the bankrupt lender accepting a general unsecured claim, the tenants could not later assert any right of recoupment; as a result, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment as to that claim against the tenants and in favor of a successor lender. Hill v. Green Tree Servicing, LLC, 280 Ga. App. 151, 633 S.E.2d 451 (2006).

Employee fraud. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) in an employee's fraud claim, wherein the employee contended that the employee was fraudulently induced to give up additional severance benefits in order to accept an at-will position with the successor to the employer, and that such position did not in fact exist, as the record clearly indicated that the employee worked and was paid for a period of almost two years prior to the employee's termination. Cramp v. Georgia-Pacific Corp., 266 Ga. App. 38, 596 S.E.2d 212 (2004).

Acts of employees. — Because an employer had not produced any evidence that established, as a matter of law, that a bartender's actions in breaking up a fight in their bowling center fell outside the class of activities its bartenders performed generally, a jury issue remained, and summary judgment should not have been granted. Brown v. AMF Bowling Ctrs., Inc., 236 Ga. App. 277, 511 S.E.2d 619 (1999).

Plaintiff who could not show that an employee was acting within the scope of employment at the time of a collision could not show a genuine issue of material fact in a wrongful death action against the employer, and summary judgment was therefore appropriate. Tyner v. Comfort Rest Sleep Prods., Inc., 236 Ga. App. 423, 512 S.E.2d 321 (1999).

Grant of summary judgment to an amusement park in an injured worker's personal injury suit was proper because the worker had violated OSHA regulations and National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) standards governing electrical safety in numerous respects, which were mandatory and had the force of law, and the worker's conduct fulfilled all of the requirements of negligence per se. Kull v. Six Flags over Ga. II, L.P., 264 Ga. App. 715, 592 S.E.2d 143 (2003).

Summary judgment in favor of a crane company was reversed because a question of fact remained regarding whether a crane operator, who was an employee of the company, was acting as the company's employee or as a borrowed servant of a general contractor on a construction site when the operator allegedly committed a negligent act that injured a worker. A contract between the company and the contractor labeling the operator a borrowed servant was not dispositive and a question remained regarding how much control the contractor actually had over the crane operator's actions. Gibson v. Tim's Crane & Rigging, Inc., 266 Ga. App. 42, 596 S.E.2d 215 (2004).

Employee on personal errand. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the company on the injured person's lawsuit alleging that the company was liable to the injured party for the actions of its employee, who struck the injured party's vehicle while turning the truck the employee was driving into an intersection as the employee returned from a personal visit with relatives as the injured person could not show that the employee was acting within the scope of employment, that the company had actual knowledge of the employee's driving record, or that the employee's driving record showed a pattern of reckless driving. Upshaw v. Roberts Timber Co., 266 Ga. App. 135, 596 S.E.2d 679 (2004).

Trial court properly granted an employer's motion for summary judgment, in a personal injury action filed by a mother and daughter as the latter failed to show that the former was liable under the doctrine of respondeat superior for the accident caused by its employee, given that the employee was running personal errands at the time of the collision, despite the fact the errands seemed work-related, and was not on a special mission undertaken at the employer's direction; further, any reliance by the mother and daughter on the traveling sales person exception applied in workers' compensation cases was misplaced. Gassaway v. Precon Corp., 280 Ga. App. 351, 634 S.E.2d 153 (2006).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the health center on the patient's claim that the center was responsible for the negligent hiring/retention of the mental health assistant who allegedly raped the patient as the health center showed that the center exercised ordinary care not to hire a person who posed a reasonably foreseeable risk of inflicting harm on others by hiring a professional investigation service to do a background check on the mental health assistant; as a result of that background check, the service advised the health center that the mental health assistant had not been involved in criminal activity and the patient did not show that the health center otherwise knew that the mental health assistant posed a risk of harm to the center's patients. Munroe v. Universal Health Servs., Inc., 277 Ga. 861, 596 S.E.2d 604 (2004).

When a company sued the company's attorneys and accountants for fraud and aiding and abetting fraud regarding their participation in a sale of the company's assets because they did not notify the company's principal of the sale, summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the attorneys and accountants because the employee who conducted the sale had apparent authority to do so and actual fraud was insufficiently pled, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9(b), as a response to the attorneys' and accountants' motion for summary judgment. R.W. Holdco, Inc. v. Johnson, 267 Ga. App. 859, 601 S.E.2d 177 (2004).

Because a corporation's president did not participate in the allegedly negligent work of employees of the corporation at a decedent's home or supervise or direct the employees in the work at the home, summary judgment in favor of the president in a wrongful death action brought by the decedent's children was affirmed; the president's alleged failure to provide proper training to the employees was not a sufficiently direct participation in a tort to expose the president to personal liability. Beasley v. A Better Gas Co., 269 Ga. App. 426, 604 S.E.2d 202 (2004).

In the employer's action to recover for theft of corporate funds, the employee was not entitled to summary judgment because the six-year statute of limitations applicable to constructive trust claims only barred the employer's action as to some, but not all, of the employee's thefts. Total Supply, Inc. v. Pridgen, 267 Ga. App. 125, 598 S.E.2d 805 (2004).

Employer was properly granted summary judgment in an employee's personal injury and loss of consortium suit filed against the employer because the employee's accidental injury, which occurred as the employee was walking to work from an employer-owned parking facility to the employee's work building and who was struck by an employer-operated vehicle, was compensable under the Workers' Compensation Act, O.C.G.A. § 34-9-1 et seq. Longuepee v. Ga. Inst. of Tech., 269 Ga. App. 884, 605 S.E.2d 455 (2004).

Because a contract between a crane owner and a general contractor stated that the owner's employee was a borrowed servant, a trial court correctly granted summary judgment in a negligence action arising from injuries resulting from the crane operation. Tim's Crane & Rigging, Inc. v. Gibson, 278 Ga. 796, 604 S.E.2d 763 (2004).

In a negligent hiring and supervision suit based on respondeat superior filed by a decedent's wife against an employer and its allegedly negligent employee, the trial court properly denied an employer's motion for summary judgment, given that the evidence was in dispute as to whether the employee was acting in the scope of employment at the time of the fatal injury to the decedent, and whether the employee might have foreseen that some injury would have resulted from an act or omission, or that consequences of a generally injurious nature might have been expected, based upon evidence that in the 22 years that the employee had driven for companies owned by the same people, the employee had received two speeding tickets and was involved in two minor car accidents. Remediation Res., Inc. v. Balding, 281 Ga. App. 31, 635 S.E.2d 332 (2006).

In a personal injury action, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to an employer on the issue of respondeat superior as the employer could not be found liable for its employee's personal actions undertaken at the time of the collision, which were not in furtherance of the employer's interests, and were not within the employee's scope of employment nor ratified by the employer. Hankerson v. Hammett, 285 Ga. App. 610, 647 S.E.2d 319 (2007).

In a personal injury action arising from an auto accident, summary judgment to an employer was reversed as an injured driver presented some evidence showing that at the time of the accident the employer's employee might have been on a work-related cell phone call or distracted by such a call that the employee chose not to answer, creating a jury question as to the employer's liability for the employee's actions. Hunter v. Modern Cont'l Constr. Co., 287 Ga. App. 689, 652 S.E.2d 583 (2007).

In a tort action filed by an executrix against a hospital, the hospital was properly granted summary judgment on a claim of medical battery as the undisputed facts supported an inference that the executrix's mother consented to the nursing staff determining what types of food the mother could tolerate, and as a result the nursing staff's conduct in exercising that discretion in deciding what types of food the mother could eat did not support a medical battery claim. Morton v. Wellstar Health Sys., 288 Ga. App. 301, 653 S.E.2d 756 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 292 (Ga. 2008).

County sheriff's authority over county-owned property. — County sheriff had the independent authority to repaint and remark county-owned sheriff's vehicles assigned to the sheriff's exclusive use, but lacked the authority to modify portions of a county-owned building in which the sheriff's office and jail were housed as that facility was shared with the superior, state, and magistrate courts of Clayton County, as well as the clerks of those courts, the solicitor general, and the district attorney, and hence, not under the sheriff's exclusive use. As a result, subject to compliance with O.C.G.A. § 40-8-91, summary judgment in favor of the county as to the extent of the sheriff's authority was reversed as to the former, but affirmed as to the latter. Hill v. Clayton County Bd. of Comm'rs, 283 Ga. App. 15, 640 S.E.2d 638 (2006), , overruled on other grounds, Mayor & Aldermen of Savannah v. Batson-Cook Co., 291 Ga. 114, 728 S.E.2d 189 (Ga. 2012).

Applying this rule in a Federal Employers' Liability Act case and permitting the claimant to reach a jury trial, rather than applying a different theory embodied in the comparable federal rule, did no violence to the principle that federal cases interpreting the substantive law control. Hepner v. Southern Ry., 182 Ga. App. 346, 356 S.E.2d 30 (1987).

Federal Employers' Liability Act. — Trial court erroneously granted summary judgment to an employer, upon an employee's claim for benefits under the Federal Employers' Liability Act, for injuries to the right leg, right knee, and right ankle, given the evidence substantiating those injuries and that the employer was placed on some kind of notice regarding the injuries; but, summary judgment was upheld as to claims for benefits regarding the employee's injuries to both arms, wrists, hands, feet, left ankle, and left knee as no evidence substantiating those injuries, or as to medical causation, was presented. Phelps v. CSX Transp., Inc., 280 Ga. App. 330, 634 S.E.2d 112 (2006).

Quantum meruit for broker's fee. — In a case in which a former employee alleged that the employee was entitled to quantum meruit against the former employer for having found a buyer for the employer's property, for which the employer had orally indicated that the employer would reward the employee, but the employee failed to raise in the trial court that the employee was a referral agent who was exempt from the real estate licensing statutes pursuant to

O.C.G.A. § 43-40-29(a)(9), the issue was not reviewable on appeal; summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) was granted to the employer as the employee was not licensed under O.C.G.A. §§ 43-40-1(2)(A) and 43-40-30(a). The true nature of the exchange was a sale of real estate, an agreement was prohibited by the licensing statutes; accordingly, it could not be the basis of a quantum meruit claim. Everett v. Goodloe, 268 Ga. App. 536, 602 S.E.2d 284 (2004).

Equitable subrogation. — In an action seeking a declaration that a bank held a first priority lien against certain real property that a trust purchased at a non-judicial foreclosure sale, because the trust failed in the trust's burden to show that, as a matter of law, the application of the principle of equitable subrogation would impair its superior or equal equity, or that it would be unduly prejudiced thereby; and similarly failed to show that the bank was culpably and inexcusably negligent, the trial court did not err in denying the trust's motion for summary judgment. Greer v. Provident Bank, Inc., 282 Ga. App. 566, 639 S.E.2d 377 (2006).

Malicious prosecution claim by former employee. — Employer, an armored truck company, reasonably believed that its ex-employee, a messenger, had taken five bags from a bank holding room, signed for only four, and absconded with the missing bag; the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the employer on the messenger's malicious prosecution claim. Gibbs v. Loomis, Fargo & Co., 259 Ga. App. 170, 576 S.E.2d 589 (2003).

Adverse possession by state. — Questions of fact as to whether the state acquired land by adverse possession arise if the state's claim of acquisition by adverse possession is disputed by parties producing evidence that the parties have record title to the land, that the state's possession of the land was permissible, and that the state did not purport to have a valid claim of right to the land or give notice that it did have a valid claim to the land. Tanner v. Brasher, 254 Ga. 41, 326 S.E.2d 218 (1985).

Adverse possession by private party. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the grantor's grandchildren as the grandchildren held the disputed parcel of property under color of title, via a deed to the grantor's daughter, albeit the fact that such was not effective as a deed conveying a present interest, for the prescription period of seven years, and the grantor's heirs at law did not contest the deed until suit was filed. Matthews v. Crowder, 281 Ga. 842, 642 S.E.2d 852 (2007).

Easement. — Trial court properly granted a corporation's summary judgment motion and awarded a corporation injunctive relief, barring an owner from interfering with the corporation's right of access to a highway, as the corporation's predecessor improved property on which it held a parol license, which created an easement that ran with the land under O.C.G.A. § 44-9-4, and which passed to the corporation. Blake v. RGL Assocs., Inc., 267 Ga. App. 709, 600 S.E.2d 765 (2004).

Trial court erred in granting a couple's motion for summary judgment, in an action against a landowner declaring that a warranty deed included an express easement across the landowner's land, as the language contained within the deed failed to contain any means of identifying the quantity, dimensions, or location of the easement intended to be conveyed, and a survey failed to show the easement; thus, the express easement sought to be conveyed was void for vagueness and unenforceable. Smith v. Tolar, 281 Ga. App. 406, 636 S.E.2d 112 (2006).

Because a buyer's proposed landfill would not be a public utility, but would be privately-owned, it was not entitled to a written verification of zoning compliance so it could pursue a state permit to build a landfill; hence, when combined with the fact that the county did not violate the provisions of the Open Meetings Act under O.C.G.A. § 50-14-1(d), the county was properly granted summary judgment as to these issues. EarthResources, LLC v. Morgan County, 281 Ga. 396, 638 S.E.2d 325 (2006).

In an action arising from the sale of property, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the sellers, contrary to both O.C.G.A. §§ 44-5-62 and 44-5-63, as a floodwater detention easement burdened the property by permitting the impoundment of water on it to prevent flooding or increased water runoff on other property located downstream and, even though the lake was certainly open and obvious, the same could not necessarily be said of the easement; moreover, a factual issue remained as damages and although the buyers' constructive notice of the easement by reason of its recordation within the chains of title would provide a compelling reason for exempting the easement from operation of the warranty deed, O.C.G.A. § 44-5-63 provided otherwise. McMurray v. Housworth, 282 Ga. App. 280, 638 S.E.2d 421 (2006).

Applicability to Certain Actions,

Because the record contained no evidence that a neighboring landowner's predecessor in interest, or its agents, used the road continuously for at least 20 years, the predecessor did not acquire a private way by prescription and hence, the neighbor lacked any private way by prescription over a landowner's property to clear timber and remove barbed wire from the roadway without committing a trespass; hence, the trial court did not err in granting the landowner summary judgment as to the issue of trespass. Norton v. Holcomb, 285 Ga. App. 78, 646 S.E.2d 94 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 654 (Ga. 2007).

Because genuine issues of material fact remained as to whether a lessee's failure to reserve an easement to the subject property at the time the lessee executed a corrective quitclaim deed was otherwise unreasonable, foreclosing the condemnation action, partial summary judgment to the lessee was unwarranted. Wright v. Brookshire, 286 Ga. App. 162, 648 S.E.2d 485 (2007).

Pursuant to an expressed dedication involving land owned by an adjacent landowner and a neighbor, the trial court properly granted summary judgment in favor of the neighbor as the declaration authorized the neighbor to rearrange their own building and parking spaces as long as the easement was maintained. Wilcox Hold- ings, Ltd. v. Hull, 290 Ga. App. 179, 659 S.E.2d 406 (2008).

Because the language of an easement agreement between two adjacent commercial landowners was ambiguous, parol evidence was admissible to show the parties' intent. Thus, questions of fact remained regarding intent, making summary judgment inappropriate. McGuire Holdings, LLLP v. TSQ Partners, LLC, 290 Ga. App. 595, 660 S.E.2d 397 (2008).

Action between adjoining landowners. — In a suit between two landowners to enforce the terms of an easement, while no error resulted from an order striking certain affidavits in support of a second landowner's claim for reimbursement for its grading work, genuine material fact issues precluded summary judgment on this claim. Further, summary judgment was unwarranted as to the issue of whether the second landowner was entitled to use a detention pond on the first landowner's property. McGuire Holdings, LLLP v. TSQ Partners, LLC, 290 Ga. App. 595, 660 S.E.2d 397 (2008).

Appeal from probate court. — Appeal to the superior court from the probate court is subject to established procedures for civil actions, thus entitling a party to invoke the summary judgment procedure. Woodall v. First Nat'l Bank, 118 Ga. App. 440, 164 S.E.2d 361 (1968).

Arbitration. — Motion for summary judgment is not a proper procedural vehicle by which to seek to enforce an arbitration provision in a limited warranty because the remedy of a defendant who is aggrieved by the refusal of a plaintiff to arbitrate is to apply to the court for a stay of proceedings pending arbitration. Tillman Group, Inc. v. Keith, 201 Ga. App. 680, 411 S.E.2d 794 (1991).

Case referred to auditor. — Court of record has no jurisdiction to entertain and grant summary judgment in a case which has been referred to an auditor for the purpose of having the auditor determine the questions of law and fact involved, if the auditor has heard the case and filed a report of the auditor's findings of law and fact. Braselton Bros. v. Better Maid Dairy Prods., Inc., 110 Ga. App. 515, 139 S.E.2d 124 (1964) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Verbal contracts. — When a party who leased certain land from its supposed owner, who could not read, and then attempted to enforce an option to purchase the land, which was included in documents the lessee gave the owner to sign, the owner was entitled to summary judgment canceling their agreement because the agreement did not adequately describe the land that was the subject of the transaction, and the lessee was not entitled to summary judgment and specific performance. Makowski v. Waldrop, 262 Ga. App. 130, 584 S.E.2d 714 (2003).

Sellers were properly granted summary judgment in an action filed by a buyer arising out of an oral land sales contract given that: (1) no evidence of the buyer's partial performance existed sufficient to remove that contract from the statute of frauds; (2) a wetlands study and interest rate negotiation were not a part of the contract; and (3) a later negotiated contract was an arm's length transaction, the price of which was negotiated at the time, and hence, did not relate to the original contract. Payne v. Warren, 282 Ga. App. 524, 639 S.E.2d 528 (2006).

In light of the unresolved facts as to whether a monetary transfer between the parties, evidenced by an oral agreement, was either a loan or an investment, and the borrowers failed to affirmatively disprove the lender's claim that the transfer was a loan as alleged in the complaint, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the borrowers. Marcum v. Gardner, 283 Ga. App. 453, 641 S.E.2d 678 (2007).

Because a buyer's direct and uncontroverted evidence sufficiently showed the existence of an enforceable oral agreement for a dealer to sell to the buyer a rare Mercedes-Benz, with the price term being the manufacturer's suggested retail price ultimately arrived at by the manufacturer, and the dealer's circumstantial evidence failed to create a genuine issue of material fact regarding the price, the buyer satisfied the burden required to support an order granting summary judgment in the buyer's favor. Jones v. Baran Co., LLC, 290 Ga. App. 578, 660 S.E.2d 420 (2008).

Contracts. — Because issues of fact existed as to whether the parties entered a binding contract terminating a warehousing agreement, and whether that agreement constituted an accord and satisfaction, summary judgment should not have been granted. Nebraska Plastics, Inc. v. Harris, 236 Ga. App. 499, 512 S.E.2d 388 (1999).

Summary judgment was properly granted to a hospital pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 in the hospital's action against a doctor, seeking recovery of monies loaned to the doctor that were not repaid, because it was found that the doctor breached the agreement within six years of the time that the action was commenced and, accordingly, the action was not time-barred under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-24; the court noted that because the parties had indicated in the contract that the parties "expected" that the amount would be completely repaid within one year of when the repayments were commenced, such was merely a hope and not a binding condition that, when the year expired, started the running of the six-year limitations period, based on contract interpretation laws and the inapplicability of parol evidence under O.C.G.A. § 13-2-1(1). Walker v. Gwinnett Hosp. Sys., 263 Ga. App. 554, 588 S.E.2d 441 (2003).

Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the seller because the trial court properly exercised the court's judgment and discretion in granting the seller's motion to open the seller's default judgment; no ratification of the parties' contract occurred because it was clear that the seller did not authorize the seller's sibling to act in the seller's behalf when the sibling signed the seller's name to the contract. MacDonald v. Harris, 265 Ga. App. 131, 593 S.E.2d 32 (2003).

When items stolen from an electric company were sold to a supply company, the supply company was not entitled to summary judgment dismissing the electric company's breach of contract claim against it because there were issues of fact concerning the scope of the contract between the parties on which this claim was based, including whether the contract covered new and used goods and whether the parties mutually departed from the agreement's terms. Fed. Ins. Co. v. Westside Supply Co., 264 Ga. App. 240, 590 S.E.2d 224 (2003).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 to those in possession of a colt in a tortious interference with a contract claim by a horse trainer, in which the trainer alleged having a contract to keep the recently born colt in exchange for continued services to the mare's owner; the court found that there was no showing that the possessors of the colt were aware of a contract regarding the ownership of the colt, the possessors had followed the necessary procedures for filing a financing statement under O.C.G.A. § 11-9-501 et seq., the possessors had allegedly foreclosed on the possessors' lien on the mare by the time that the possessors became aware of the trainer's claim, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 44-14-490, and the trainer did not record a lien against the colt pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 44-14-511. Medlin v. Morganstern, 268 Ga. App. 116, 601 S.E.2d 359 (2004).

When a retired police officer to whom a city had paid more retirement benefits than the police officer was entitled sued the city for breach of contract when the city corrected the error, the city was entitled to summary judgment because the city's contract with the officer required the payment of the amount of retirement benefits that the city paid after correcting the error, and the city clerk who caused the error had no authority to change that contract, so the contract was not breached. Dodd v. City of Gainesville, 268 Ga. App. 43, 601 S.E.2d 352 (2004).

Summary judgment for the storage companies on an owner's breach of contract claim was proper because the owner failed to show that the storage companies breached any duty owed under the contract; the contract clearly provided that the contract created no duty on the part of the storage companies to protect the owner's personal property and that the owner assumed all risk of loss. Liberty v. Storage Trust Props., L.P., 267 Ga. App. 905, 600 S.E.2d 841 (2004).

Because the trial court was faced with an ambiguity in a covenants declaration regarding the construction of improvements on commercial property, the court erred in granting summary judgment to the property's owner and the lessee, and finding that the ambiguity had to be construed against the developer, instead of first attempting to resolve the ambiguity by applying the rules of contract construction provided in O.C.G.A. § 13-2-2(4). White v. Kaminsky, 271 Ga. App. 719, 610 S.E.2d 542 (2004).

Trial court did not err in dismissing a nine-count complaint filed by two uninsured patients, for failing to state a claim and treated as a motion for summary judgment, alleging that a health care provider overcharged the patients for medical care received at rates grossly in excess of the rates charged to private medical insurers, or to Medicare/Medicaid benefit programs, as the parties entered into a valid contract, which the provider did not breach, and the patients failed to support the patients' claims that the provider committed an unfair trade practice or breached a fiduciary duty owed to the patients. Morrell v. Wellstar Health Sys., Inc., 280 Ga. App. 1, 633 S.E.2d 68 (2006).

In a dealer's action for breach of contract and trespass to chattel against two buyers following the buyers' purchase of a vehicle, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the dealer as the buyers' breach of contract, trespass to chattel, and default on the purchase agreement essentially waived any right they had to arbitrate the dispute; moreover, an appeal as to the propriety of the supersedeas bond imposed was dismissed as moot. Almonte v. West Ashley Toyota, 281 Ga. App. 808, 637 S.E.2d 755 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 71 (2007).

In a buyer's suit arising out of a failed deal to sell the seller's business seeking damages for breach of contract and specific performance, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the sellers as construction of the plain language of an addendum to the parties' letter of intent to sell the business showed that the parties had reached a binding agreement on all material terms concerning the purchase and sale of that business. Goobich v. Wa- ters, 283 Ga. App. 53, 640 S.E.2d 606 (2006).

Based on the application of a merger clause in an expressed and lawful property sales contract, and the clear and unambiguous intent not to hold the lenders liable for transactions concerning the conveyance of a beach house made as consideration supporting the sale, summary judgment was properly granted to the lenders on the sellers' claims of fraud, concealment, breach of contract and unjust enrichment filed against the sellers. Donchi, Inc. v. Robdol, LLC, 283 Ga. App. 161, 640 S.E.2d 719 (2007).

Trial court did not err in awarding summary judgment to the State Medical Education Board, making a student liable for both the amount of the scholarship received and attorney's fees, as: (1) estopels were unfavored under Georgia law; (2) the student came forward with no more than hearsay to support a claim that oral misrepresentations of fact were made regarding the scholarship; (3) the contract was not rescinded by either party; (4) no mutual mistake of fact was found; and (5) any impossibility in performing the contract was personal to the student. Calabro v. State Med. Educ. Bd., 283 Ga. App. 113, 640 S.E.2d 581 (2006).

Because a buyer failed to comply with provisions of its contract with a seller requiring written notice of a breach, this failure barred the buyer from relying on the seller's alleged breach of the agreement as a basis for the buyer's refusal to close and demand for refund of the earnest money; but, because the seller complied with the notice provision by notifying the buyer that the buyer's refusal to close placed the buyer in breach or default of the agreement and that the buyer had 15 days to cure the breach or default, upon the buyer's failure to do so, the buyer was entitled to summary judgment and to retain the earnest money as liquidated damages. Pillar Dev., Inc. v. Fuqua Constr. Co., 284 Ga. App. 858, 645 S.E.2d 64 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 669 (Ga. 2007).

Under the same transaction test, because the claims raised by a buyer in a Georgia state court were judicially determined in litigation between the parties in both the federal district court and the federal circuit court of appeals, and also sought redress for the same wrongs, the state court did not err in denying the buyer's partial summary judgment motion regarding those wrongs. BKJB P'ship v. Moseman, 284 Ga. App. 862, 644 S.E.2d 874, cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 558 (Ga. 2007).

Upon construction of a contract between an independent contractor and a billboard owner under O.C.G.A. § 13-2-2 because: (1) it was clear that the contractor did not waive any right to recover against the owner under any possible scenario, but only waived a right to recover against the owner's predecessor for damages if the waiver did not invalidate the insurance coverage; and (2) the contract only waived the owner's liability if the waiver did not invalidate the contractor's insurance, summary judgment was erroneously entered to the owner on grounds that the contractor waived a right to recover from the owner and because the trial court failed to consider whether the waiver invalidated the contractor's insurance. Holmes v. Clear Channel Outdoor, Inc., 284 Ga. App. 474, 644 S.E.2d 311 (2007).

While the trial court properly found that a separate and independent contract made the subject of the buyers' breach of contract counterclaim against the seller unenforceable, supporting summary judgment for the seller on the buyers' counterclaim, the court erred in finding that the buyers' denial of any liability to the seller on the seller's complaint was insufficient; thus, the seller was not entitled to summary judgment on the seller's complaint for payment under a consignment contract and for attorney fees. Jones v. Equip. King Int'l, 287 Ga. App. 867, 652 S.E.2d 811 (2007).

On appeal from an order granting a broker's customer summary judgment in the broker's breach of contract action, because the merger doctrine did not apply to the fee contract involving a broker and the customer and the loan contract between the lender and the customer, and material fact issues remained as to the compensation due to the broker, and as to what effect, if any, a modification of the amount of the broker's fee had on the broker's fee agreement with the broker's customer, summary judgment in the customer's favor was reversed. Atlanta Integrity Mortg., Inc. v. Ben Hill United Methodist Church, Inc., 286 Ga. App. 795, 650 S.E.2d 359 (2007).

While the trial court did not err in entering an order granting partial summary judgment to a city on the city's breach of contract claim against a county and the county's tax commissioner, ruling that the latter breached the county's contract to bill, collect, and remit ad valorem taxes on the city's behalf because the county was not given adequate notice that the trial court would address the amount of damages incurred by the city as a result of the county's breach, the grant of summary judgment as to the damages issue was reversed on due process grounds. Ferdinand v. City of East Point, 288 Ga. App. 152, 653 S.E.2d 529 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 213 (Ga. 2008).

In a breach of contract action filed by a school against an enrolled student's parents seeking payment of a full year's tuition, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the school as the parents failed in the parents' burden of showing that a liquidated damages clause in the contract amounted to an unenforceable penalty. Turner v. Atlanta Girls' Sch., Inc., 288 Ga. App. 115, 653 S.E.2d 380 (2007).

Because the third party failed to present sufficient evidence supporting that party's position that the third party had a right, as successor in interest, to sue on a creditor's account with the creditor's debtor in order to support the third party's right, summary judgment in the third party's favor in a suit against the debtor was erroneously entered. Ponder v. CACV of Colo., LLC, 289 Ga. App. 858, 658 S.E.2d 469 (2008).

Summary judgment for a bank was proper on a corporation's breach of contract, promissory estoppel, and fraud claims as the bank did not promise not to foreclose the bank's superior mortgage on a property under any circumstances; the bank simply promised to pay the corporation if lots were sold and the corporation removed the corporation's materialman's lien. Kesco, Inc. v. Brand Banking Co., 268 Ga. App. 874, 603 S.E.2d 49 (2004).

Trial court properly denied summary judgment to an independent medical utilization review provider for an employee benefit health plan on a plan participant's breach of contract claim as the participant asserted a third party beneficiary claim against the review provider under a side contract between the review provider and the plan sponsor. Monroe v. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys., 268 Ga. App. 659, 602 S.E.2d 219 (2004).

Summary judgment was improperly granted in favor of a limited partner on that partner's claim that a corporation's breach of contract claim against the partner was barred by the four year statute of limitations applicable to contracts for the sale of goods under O.C.G.A. § 11-2-725 because the contract involved a conveyance of leasehold interests in real property for oil and gas exploration, not the sale of oil and gas. Summary judgment should have been awarded in favor of the corporation on the corporation's claim that the six year statute of limitations in O.C.G.A. § 9-3-24, which was applicable to contracts in writing, applied and did not bar the action. ABF Capital Corp. v. Yancey, 264 Ga. App. 850, 592 S.E.2d 492 (2003).

Trial court improperly granted summary judgment to a claims administrator for an employee benefit health plan on a plan participant's breach of contract claim as the participant raised a jury question on the issue of whether the claims administrator performed the administrator's contractual obligations. Monroe v. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys., 268 Ga. App. 659, 602 S.E.2d 219 (2004).

Contract for specific performance. — Grant of summary judgment to the plaintiff on the plaintiff's action for specific performance of a contract provision that allegedly required the defendant to sell the defendant's stock to the plaintiff was affirmed; the trial court properly found that the contract required one partner to sell that partner's corporate stock to another partner at book value as determined by the corporation's CPA, and that the contract was valid, enforceable, and supported by valuable consideration. Auldridge v. Rivers, 263 Ga. App. 396, 587 S.E.2d 870 (2003).

Attorney fee contracts. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to an attorney in the attorney's action to collect fees due under a written fee agreement with a former client as the attorney provided the services outlined within the contract, and the former client failed to produce any competent evidence supporting an affirmative defense of failure of consideration after the attorney made a prima facie case for summary judgment. Browning v. Alan Mullinax & Assocs., P.C., 288 Ga. App. 43, 653 S.E.2d 786 (2007).

Real estate sales contract. — In an action arising from the sale of a condominium unit, the trial court did not err in denying the owners' summary judgment motion on the owners' claim of a right of first refusal, as the owners had no such right, but the owners were properly granted summary judgment on the buyer's claims of tortious interference with contractual and business relations and for punitive damages as the owners had a legitimate right to protect when the owners voted on the sale of the subject unit. Quality Foods, Inc. v. Smithberg, 288 Ga. App. 47, 653 S.E.2d 486 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 316 (Ga. 2008).

Contract for marital settlement. — Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the executors on an action to enforce a marital settlement agreement entered into before one spouse died as the agreement, which was a contract, was not unenforceable for lack of consideration, but the surviving spouse was also not entitled to judgment as a matter of law because issues regarding the deceased spouse's capacity to enter into the agreement and the surviving spouse's possible rescission of the contract had to be considered by a jury. Guthrie v. Guthrie, 259 Ga. App. 751, 577 S.E.2d 832 (2003), aff'd, 277 Ga. 700, 594 S.E.2d 356 (2004).

Contract to make a will. — In an action to enforce a contract to make a will, the trial court erred in denying both parties' motions for summary judgment since the contract recited adequate consideration and, thus, was not illusory but was binding, the contract was not in furtherance of an immoral relationship and thus unenforceable, and the contract had not been abandoned; thus, there were no issues for which a jury decision was required. Abrams v. Massell, 262 Ga. App. 761, 586 S.E.2d 435 (2003).

Contracts between contractors. — When a subcontractor sought compensation from a contractor for increased labor costs caused by the contractor, the contractor was not entitled to summary judgment dismissing the subcontractor's claim as: (1) the subcontractor did not waive the subcontractor's claim by failing to respond to the contractor's denial thereof within 48 hours as the contractor only decided whether the subcontractor could legally assert the subcontractor's claim; (2) the subcontractor's agreement to perform the subcontractor's work according to the contract's timetable did not bar the subcontractor's claim, as this only barred claims for delays contemplated by the parties when the contract was signed, and this provision did not address whether the subcontractor was entitled to compensation for increased labor costs; (3) change orders the subcontractor signed did not bar the subcontractor's claim as it sought damages for disruption, and not merely damages for delay; and (4) a "no damages for delay" provision in the contractor's contract with the owner did not bar the subcontractor's claim because it conflicted with a superseding provision of the contractor's contract with the subcontractor allowing the subcontractor to seek compensation for interferences and delays. Atl. Coast Mech. v. R. W. Allen Beers Constr., 264 Ga. App. 680, 592 S.E.2d 115 (2003).

Summary judgment on contract issues. — Appellees failed to present any evidence establishing the appellees' status as the current holders of an interest in the contract at issue, despite the appellant's allegation that the contract between them has since been assigned by the appellees to a third party; therefore, since the appellant's objection that the appellees are not the real parties in interest had yet to be addressed, the trial court erred in granting the appellees' motion for summary judgment. Sawgrass Bldrs., Inc. v. Key, 212 Ga. App. 138, 441 S.E.2d 99 (1994).

Lease contracts. — Because fact issues remained as to whether a lessee's conduct in attempting to exercise a credit amounted to a waiver of the credit, and whether the lessee made a good-faith, prompt, and diligent effort to resolve the amount due under a commercial lease so as to prevent the lessor from terminating the lease and gaining possession, both of which a jury was to decide, summary judgment was improperly entered on the lessor's claim for rent, and properly denied on the lessor's petition for a writ of possession. Eckerd Corp. v. Alterman Props., 264 Ga. App. 72, 589 S.E.2d 660 (2003).

Because a lessee failed to create an issue of fact regarding whether the lessor breached the parties' underlying commercial lease or whether the lessee waived the alleged breach, the trial court correctly granted the lessor's motion for summary judgment on the lessee's breach of contract claim. Nguyen v. Talisman Roswell, L.L.C., 262 Ga. App. 480, 585 S.E.2d 911 (2003).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) to the defendants in an action for breach of a lease by the successor in interest to the lessor as the defendants admitted that the defendants had defaulted on the lease and that the successor was owed back rent. Gilco Invs., Inc. v. Stafford Cordele, LLC, 267 Ga. App. 167, 598 S.E.2d 889 (2004).

Because a sublease was ambiguous regarding a sublessee's obligation to pay operating expenses due under the master lease, fact questions remained as to the parties' intent, and a trial court erred in entering summary judgment for the sublessee. Holcim (US), Inc. v. AMDG, Inc., 265 Ga. App. 818, 596 S.E.2d 197 (2004).

Indemnity contracts. — In an action to recover under an indemnity agreement, because the undisputed facts showed that a party was estopped from denying the validity of a bond, and that the party indemnified a surety for payments made thereunder, the surety was properly granted summary judgment as to the party's liability for monies paid under the bond. Samda Inv. Group, LLC v. Western Sur. Co., 287 Ga. App. 235, 651 S.E.2d 152 (2007).

Because the debtor read a plain, unambiguous guaranty contract and signed the contract as written, the court enforced the contract as written and granted summary judgment to the bank; summary judgment on damages was reversed because, although the remainder of the damages could be calculated on the record, no evidence in the record supported the post-closing interest rate. Charania v. Regions Bank, 264 Ga. App. 587, 591 S.E.2d 412 (2003).

Guaranty contract. — As no matter of fact was involved, the construction of a guaranty was a matter of law for the court, which found that the guaranty executed by a guarantor contained a very broad waiver clause that plainly and unambiguously waived any claims the guarantor might have had against the debtor and extended to claims arising in equity, or under contract, statute, or common law; the waiver obviously included a claim under O.C.G.A. § 10-7-41, so the trial court erred by denying summary judgment to the debtor and other defendants, and erred as well in granting summary judgment in favor of the guarantor. Brookside Cmtys., LLC v. Lake Dow N. Corp., 268 Ga. App. 785, 603 S.E.2d 31 (2004).

Because an agent for a limited liability company and a builder's vice president testified that the parties negotiated and agreed on the terms of a construction contract including price, time, and the form of the contract, and the limited liability company authorized the builder to begin, the facts showed that the parties entered into an enforceable contract, and since a contract existed, the members' personal guaranties of the construction contract were valid; a trial court's summary judgment in favor of the builder on the members' personal guaranties was affirmed. Marett v. Brice Bldg. Co., 268 Ga. App. 778, 603 S.E.2d 40 (2004).

In an action to collect unpaid rent and fees owed by a lessee to a lessor under a lease agreement, the trial court properly granted partial summary judgment to the lessor, and against the lessee and the lessee's guarantor, as: (1) the language in the lease could not be construed to limit or modify the guarantor's pre-existing obligations under the guaranty through the time of the guarantor's revocation of the lease; and (2) the language of the guaranty, standing alone, was unambiguous and created an unconditional, continuing guaranty. The Cupboard, LLC v. Sunshine Travel Ctr., 283 Ga. App. 34, 640 S.E.2d 584 (2006).

In an action on a guaranty, because the plain and unambiguous terms of the guaranty and the guaranty's addendum only obligated the guarantor to the lease obligations of the original tenant, who was also the guarantor's subsidiary, and not the obligations of a new tenant, the guarantor was properly absolved of any liability to the landlord for the obligations of that new tenant, entitling the tenant to summary judgment on that issue. Highwoods Realty L.P. v. Cmty. Loans of Am., Inc., 288 Ga. App. 226, 653 S.E.2d 807 (2007).

Successor in interest tax liability. — Order granting summary judgment on the issue of a successor in interest's liability for unpaid taxes in favor of that successor was reversed as the successor failed to protect itself from successor liability for the unpaid sales and use taxes owed by the successor's predecessor under O.C.G.A. § 48-8-46, and the successor failed to protect itself against unrecorded tax liens to the extent allowed by the statute. Graham v. JD Design Group, Inc., 281 Ga. App. 347, 636 S.E.2d 66 (2006).

Warranty contracts. — Summary judgment should have been granted to a store, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), in an action by a dissatisfied customer who asserted causes of action for breach of an express warranty and a violation of the Fair Business Practices Act, O.C.G.A. § 10-1-390 et seq., as the customer failed to offer evidence of the terms of the warranty, which made both claims lack any foundation; the alleged warranty was based on a store employee's notation on the customer's receipt that the kitchen cabinets that the customer purchased had a "10-year warranty," but there was no indication of any further terms, so there was no enforceable warranty proven. Home Depot U.S.A., Inc. v. Miller, 268 Ga. App. 742, 603 S.E.2d 80 (2004).

Consent decree. — Summary judgment was affirmed because no construction was required of a consent decree; therefore, the trial court was required to enforce the agreement as written. Since the terms of a settlement agreement were clear and unambiguous in requiring that a motorist pay $24,600 to settle a wrongful death claim, the settlement agreement was for new money and did not consider credit for $10,000 already paid by the motorist's insurer; if the parties had intended to give credit for the earlier payment, the settlement agreement would have stated this. Hicks v. Walker, 265 Ga. App. 495, 594 S.E.2d 710 (2004).

When a tenant who terminated the tenant's lease early and agreed to pay the landlord the difference between the tenant's rental obligation and rent the landlord was able to obtain from a third party said this agreement was a guaranty from which the tenant had been discharged, the landlord was entitled to partial summary judgment on the landlord's breach of contract claim in the landlord's suit to enforce the agreement because the agreement was not a guaranty subject to the discharge provisions of O.C.G.A. § 10-7-20 et seq., as the tenant did not agree to be answerable for the debt of another but, instead, agreed to continue the tenant's rental obligation to the landlord, subject to any credit the tenant might be entitled to for rent the landlord received from a third party. Equifax, Inc. v. 1600 Peachtree, L.L.C., 268 Ga. App. 186, 601 S.E.2d 519 (2004).

Breach of car dealership agreement. — Summary judgment was properly entered for an automobile manufacturer on a dealership's claim that the manufacturer improperly terminated the parties' dealership agreement as the agreement was terminated after the dealership closed the dealership's business and the dealership's property was foreclosed; the termination was not procedurally defective as the termination notice was sent to the dealership's location of record, to the owner of the dealership at the owner's home address, and to the dealership's attorney. Greensboro Ford, Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 267 Ga. App. 773, 600 S.E.2d 631 (2004).

Summary judgment was properly entered for an automobile manufacturer on a dealership's claim that the manufacturer failed to pay for the repurchase of the dealership's parts, signage, tools, and equipment as: (1) the dealership failed to return the required release; (2) no vehicles were left at the dealership because the inventory had been seized, impounded, and sold; (3) the property on which the dealership was located had been foreclosed; (4) when the business relocated, the dealership was no longer receiving cars or parts from the manufacturer; and (5) the dealership presented no evidence of the value of the items that the dealership contended the dealership should have been paid for. Greensboro Ford, Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 267 Ga. App. 773, 600 S.E.2d 631 (2004).

Vehicle purchase agreements. — Absent a confidential relationship between a lienholder and a prospective buyer of a vehicle subject to a lien, and absent any duty on the lienholder to disclose any problems with the vehicle's title to the buyer, the lienholder was properly granted summary judgment on the buyer's negligence, fraudulent concealment, and derivative claim for punitive damages. Lilliston v. Regions Bank, 288 Ga. App. 241, 653 S.E.2d 306 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 275 (Ga. 2008).

Foreclosure sales. — In a wrongful foreclosure proceeding, summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the foreclosing seller because the seller showed that the buyer failed to maintain property insurance or to pay the taxes and assessments due, as required under a security deed; in addition, the propriety of the foreclosure sale was established through an attorney's affidavit and a newspaper publisher's affidavit. Ledford

v. Darter, 260 Ga. App. 585, 580 S.E.2d 317 (2003).

Tax foreclosure sales. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the property owner on the property owner's action that sought to set aside a deed executed pursuant to a judicial tax foreclosure sale. No genuine issue existed but that the tax sale was void because the sale was from a grantor who did not have title to the property to the property purchaser and that the sale could not pass title, which remained in the property owner. Canoeside Props. v. Livsey, 277 Ga. 425, 589 S.E.2d 116 (2003).

Request for disclosure of tax records. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the corporation on the corporation's request for disclosure of the individual's tax records, which the corporation sought for the limited purpose of determining whether the individual's business properly qualified as a disadvantaged business regarding the awarding to it of a city contract for airport advertising, as Georgia's Open Records Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-18-70 et seq., favored the disclosure of public records, and neither the individual nor the city could find a specific exception that applied to bar disclosure under such circumstances. City of Atlanta v. Corey Entm't, Inc., 278 Ga. 474, 604 S.E.2d 140 (2004).

Foreclosure actions. — Because the debtor failed to send written notice of the correct address of the subject property to the bank or the bank's agents, and could not assert an absent grantee's priority to escape the consequences of the debtor's own failure to provide a correct property address to all future holders of the note and deed, the foreclosure sale was not set aside; thus, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the bank and the assignees of the security interest on the ground that the bank provided sufficient notice of the foreclosure sale. Jackson v. Bank One, 287 Ga. App. 791, 652 S.E.2d 849 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 169 (Ga. 2008).

In a foreclosure action between a bank and the bank's debtors, given that the debtors failed to substantiate the claims of error asserted on appeal with sufficient evidence to create a jury question, and the bank committed no wrong in attempting to collect on a prior judgment against the debtors, summary judgment was properly entered to the bank, disposing of all the debtors' counterclaims filed against the bank. All Fleet Refinishing, Inc. v. W. Ga. Nat'l Bank, 280 Ga. App. 676, 634 S.E.2d 802 (2006).

Wrongful foreclosure. — Lender was properly granted summary judgment on a borrower's claims for wrongful foreclosure and breach of contract because the borrower defaulted and the borrower's claims were barred by releases of liability in loan modification documents. Heritage Creek Dev. Corp. v. Colonial Bank, 268 Ga. App. 369, 601 S.E.2d 842 (2004).

Georgia Land Sales Act. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment against a home buyer's claim that the sale of the property at issue failed to comply with the Georgia Land Sales Act (Act), O.C.G.A. § 44-3-1 et seq., as the property contained a house suitable for occupancy at the time of the sale; further, despite the buyer's argument that the statutory exemption under O.C.G.A. § 44-3-4(2) did not apply to residential property, giving the words of the exemption their plain and ordinary meaning, the exemption had to be read as excluding from the Act property upon which either a commercial building, an industrial building, a condominium, a shopping center, a house, or an apartment house was situated. Mancuso v. Steyaard, 280 Ga. App. 300, 640 S.E.2d 50 (2006).

Land sales contracts. — In an action between a buyer and a seller arising out of a land sales contract, because a question of material fact remained as to whether the failure to close was the buyer's fault, and because both an oral waiver and waiver by conduct could be inferred, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the seller. Miller v. Coleman, 284 Ga. App. 300, 643 S.E.2d 797 (2007).

In an action arising out of an alleged breach of a land sales contract, given that the trial court relied on findings of fact that had been resolved only in the context of the ruling on an interlocutory injunction filed by the buyer, and that issues of material fact plainly remained as to whether the seller fulfilled the contractual obligations to designate land adjacent to the buyer's property for use as a city or county road, the trial court's grant of summary judgment to the seller had to be reversed. Taylor v. Thomas, 286 Ga. App. 27, 648 S.E.2d 426 (2007).

In an action filed by a trust and its trustee against a school board alleging breach of a real estate contract, or in the alternative, specific performance of the contract at a reduced purchase price, summary judgment in favor of the school board was reversed on the breach of contract claim; however, summary judgment on the specific performance claim was affirmed as the trust failed to tender the full purchase price, which was a prerequisite to a specific performance demand, the trust was not excused from doing so, and a tender would not have been futile. Peaches Land Trust v. Lumpkin County Sch. Bd., 286 Ga. App. 103, 648 S.E.2d 464 (2007).

In a dispute over an installment contract to purchase land, because evidence sufficiently showed that a buyer partially performed a subsequent oral agreement that was not barred by a merger clause contained in the contract, and the seller accepted the benefit of such performance, summary judgment to the seller was erroneous; moreover, given that jury questions as to part performance of the oral agreement remained, the order denying the buyer's partial summary judgment motion was upheld. Hernandez v. Carnes, 290 Ga. App. 730, 659 S.E.2d 925 (2008).

Suit against real estate agents. — Trial court properly dismissed an action that a homebuyer filed against the buyer's real estate agent and a seller's real estate agent after the ignition of natural gas that had leaked from the fireplace in the buyer's house because there was no evidence that either agent knew about the leak, concealed the leak, or provided false information about the value of the house. Resnick v. Meybohm Realty, Inc., 269 Ga. App. 486, 604 S.E.2d 536 (2004).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to a home seller and against a realtor in construing the unambiguous language in the brokerage agreement at issue, which was for a definite term and was not terminable at will; moreover, although a sale was not consummated, the realtor remained entitled to the realtor's six percent commission, and the seller remained obligated to pay that amount, which was the proper measure of damages. Ben Farmer Realty, Inc. v. Owens, 286 Ga. App. 678, 649 S.E.2d 771 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 81 (Ga. 2008).

Third party beneficiary. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) to the Stone Mountain Memorial Association and to the Georgia Department of Corrections in a breach of contract action by an inmate who was injured while on a work detail that was required by the Department on the Association's property as the inmate was not an intended beneficiary of the contract pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-2-20(b); although the contract provided for the safety of the workplace, those contract provisions were not intended to benefit the inmates on work details but, instead, the inmates were just incidental beneficiaries. Gay v. Ga. Dep't of Corr., 270 Ga. App. 17, 606 S.E.2d 53 (2004).

In a breach of contract action filed by an employee, who was a third-party beneficiary to an employment contract with a contractor, the trial court erred in granting the employee summary judgment as: (1) under the plain language of the employment agreement at issue between the parties, as well as the county's personnel policy, the contractor was authorized to terminate the employee based on the employee's inability or unfitness to perform the assigned duties due to an injury; and (2) the employee could not perform all the job's requirements. Am. Water Serv. USA v. McRae, 286 Ga. App. 762, 650 S.E.2d 304 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 761 (Ga. 2007).

Because a valid general release entered into by a home buyer and home builder effectuated a binding accord and satisfaction barring any future claims between the parties, and absent evidence to void the release based on fraud, the buyer's filed claims in a subsequent suit filed against the home builder were properly summarily dismissed; thus, assessment of attorney fees was not an abuse of discretion and a penalty for filing a frivolous appeal was ordered. Pacheco v. Charles Crews Custom Homes, Inc., 289 Ga. App. 773, 658 S.E.2d 396 (2008).

Contract action involving road construction. — Summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 was properly granted in the county's action to recover money had and received by the contractor because the contractor asserted that the contract, which was for road striping and which was not opened for public bidding, was for a specialized service under O.C.G.A. § 32-4-63(5), an exception to the public bidding requirements under O.C.G.A. § 32-4-64; however, O.C.G.A. § 32-1-3(6) expressly defined road striping as a form of road construction and not as a special service. Howard v. Brantley County, 260 Ga. App. 330, 579 S.E.2d 758 (2003).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment on a homebuyer's breach of contract claim against the buyer's realtor as material fact issues remained as to whether the realtor violated the realtor's duties under the Brokerage Relationships in Real Estate Transaction Act, O.C.G.A. § 10-6A-1 et seq.; however, summary judgment was proper, based on the testimony presented on the motion, as to the homebuyer's fraudulent concealment claim. Ikola v. Schoene, 264 Ga. App. 338, 590 S.E.2d 750 (2003).

Employment contracts. — Trial court did not err by granting summary judgment to a company on an employee's action to enforce an employment agreement and a promise to convey 20 percent of the company's stock to the employee because: (1) the indefinite statement in the employment contract of the employee's duties, the term of the employment, and the employee's salary made the employment contract unenforceable; and (2) the promise of 20 percent of the company's stock was for past consideration, and that was not sufficient consideration to make the promise enforceable. Key v. Naylor, Inc., 268 Ga. App. 419, 602 S.E.2d 192 (2004).

Because there was some evidence that an employment contract was valid and enforceable, the employer was not entitled to summary judgment; but, the employer was entitled to judgment because the time period for payment of future commissions was too indefinite to be enforced as those commissions were not otherwise billable during the period of employment. Hiers v. ChoicePoint Servs., 270 Ga. App. 128, 606 S.E.2d 29 (2004).

In an employee's suit arising out of the termination of an employment contract, the trial court properly granted the employer's motion for summary judgment as: (1) as an at-will employee, the employee could be terminated without cause at any time; (2) the employer was authorized to protect the employer's interest in the employer's curriculum and property; (3) no evidence supported a claim of slander; and (4) vague statements accusing the employee of a crime did not constitute slander per se. Taylor v. Calvary Baptist Temple, 279 Ga. App. 71, 630 S.E.2d 604 (2006).

Upon a de novo review of the plain terms outlined in an employment contract, a former employer was not entitled to receive commission payments from a former employee, a licensed sales agent, for deals closed with the employee's subsequent employer as any contrary reading would result in an unenforceable contract, under O.C.G.A. § 43-40-19(c); hence, summary judgment was properly granted to the employee on that issue, and the former employer's claim for money had and received also failed. Richard Bowers & Co. v. Creel, 280 Ga. App. 199, 633 S.E.2d 555 (2006).

In an action regarding an alleged breach of an employment contract seeking commissions on deals made by a real estate agent that a former real estate broker alleged it was entitled to, the trial court erred in entering summary judgment against the agent, finding that the agent owed the broker commissions as to one of two contested deals, because: (1) the agent closed the deal with that client after terminating employment with the broker; and (2) it was undisputed that the agent had not agreed to share commissions with the broker on deals struck after the agent left the broker's employ. Thus, since summary judgment was properly entered in the agent's favor regarding commissions paid to the agent as to the second of the two contested clients, the broker was not entitled to litigation costs under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11. Morgan v. Richard Bowers & Co., 280 Ga. App. 533, 634 S.E.2d 415 (2006).

Trial court did not err in denying an employer's summary judgment motion, determining that the employee had performed the services necessary to be entitled to the allegedly agreed-upon per diem compensation; hence, the employee's status as an at-will employee was not determinative, and did not bar the cause of action. Walker Elec. Co. v. Byrd, 281 Ga. App. 190, 635 S.E.2d 819 (2006).

Trial court did not err in granting an employer's motion for summary judgment: (1) denying the employee's request for mandamus relief, given that the employee had no clear legal right to a job reinstatement, and based on a federal conviction, that claim was moot; and (2) denying the employer's quantum meruit claim, as the existence of an employment contract, under which the employee sought the same compensation as a quantum meruit claim, precluded any quantum meruit recovery. Williams v. City of Atlanta, 281 Ga. 478, 640 S.E.2d 35 (2007).

In a renewal action resulting from the termination of a commission agreement in favor of a payee, because the payee's quantum meruit and reformation claims were barred by res judicata, and the fact that the state court potentially lacked jurisdiction over the reformation claim was immaterial, the trial court erred in denying the payor's motion for summary judgment. ChoicePoint Servs. v. Hiers, 284 Ga. App. 640, 644 S.E.2d 456 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 499 (Ga. 2007).

In an action arising from an alleged employment contract between the parties, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to an employer as genuine issues of material fact remained regarding whether a contract indeed existed between the parties, which the employee actually signed and acknowledged. Shilling v. Cornerstone Med. Assocs., LLC, 290 Ga. App. 169, 659 S.E.2d 416 (2008).

Applicability to Certain Actions,
Proceedings, Issues, and

In a breach of contract action centering around a contract of employment with a county employer and the county's board of tax assessors, because the employment contract was never approved by the county commission, and the county's payment of a salary to the employee was not considered a ratification of the contract in the contract's entirety, the employee possessed only an at-will employment. Thus, summary judgment was properly entered against the employee. Powell v. Wheeler County, 290 Ga. App. 508, 659 S.E.2d 893 (2008).

Non-solicitation covenants in employment contracts. — In an action arising from an alleged breach of a non-solicitation covenant within a consultant agreement, because the employee subject to the covenant understood the covenant to apply only to those clients the employee's employer acquired when it bought the employee's former company, or with whom the employee had material contact during the course of that employment, the trial court misconstrued the agreement by limiting the agreement's scope, and the employer was erroneously granted summary judgment based on the employee's alleged breach. Atl. Ins. Brokers, LLC v. Slade Hancock Agency, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 677, 652 S.E.2d 577 (2007).

Action under Fair Dismissal Act. — In an action in which an employee, who was terminated for failing to obtain an educator's certificate, waived a rehearing, and was paid a full salary through the date of a hearing, the employee's due process rights under the Fair Dismissal Act, O.C.G.A. § 20-2-940, were not violated; consequently, the school board was properly granted summary judgment. Oliver v. Lee County Sch. Dist., 270 Ga. App. 61, 606 S.E.2d 88 (2004).

Solemn admission in judicio. — Trial court properly granted a seller's motion for partial summary judgment and denied the escrow agent's motion to dismiss, in the seller's suit to recover the earnest money deposited by the buyers because the buyers admitted in the buyers' answer that the buyers knew the identity and location of the property, and although the buyers later amended the buyers' answer to raise a Georgia Statute of Frauds, O.C.G.A. § 13-5-30, defense, the buyers never withdrew the buyers' admission, and the buyers and the escrow agent were bound by the admission; the admission constituted a solemn admission in judicio under former O.C.G.A. § 24-4-24(b)(7) (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-14-26), and created a conclusive presumption of law under former subsection (a) of that section. Nhan v. Wellington Square, LLC, 263 Ga. App. 717, 589 S.E.2d 285 (2003).

Res judicata. — Appeals court agreed with the trial court that the doctrine of res judicata barred the negligence and breach of contract claims asserted by two property owners against a contractor as: (1) the claims were essentially identical to the allegations in a counterclaim filed in a prior Cherokee County action; (2) the parties in the two cases were identical for purposes of res judicata; and (3) the Cherokee County suit resulted in an adjudication on the merits. Perrett v. Sumner, 286 Ga. App. 379, 649 S.E.2d 545 (2007).

Stock agreement not illegal or immoral. — Although the parties intended to circumvent Georgia Department of Revenue regulations by issuing corporate stock to an employee's spouse, the stock agreement was not illegal or immoral, a trial court erred in voiding the interest of the employee's spouse, and summary judgment in favor of the corporation in the spouse's action for an accounting, dissolution, and other relief was reversed; the corporation's failure to add a different shareholder's name to the corporate stock register did not demand a finding, for summary judgment purposes, that the person was not a shareholder, and the denial of the corporation's summary judgment motion as to that shareholder was affirmed. Edwards v. Grapefields, Inc., 267 Ga. App. 399, 599 S.E.2d 489 (2004).

Oral contract for transfer of real property. — Summary judgment was properly entered against the deceased's child on a claim against the deceased's estate for specific performance in regard to an alleged oral contract for the conveyance of property since no evidence was presented regarding the value of the land or the home or the value of the services performed in exchange for the alleged promise. Miller v. Miller, 262 Ga. App. 546, 586 S.E.2d 36 (2003), overruled on other grounds, Mateen v. Dicus, 281 Ga. 455, 637 S.E. 2d 377.

Landowners' trespass and negligence suit. — Trial court properly denied a neighbor's motion for summary judgment and the appellate court reversed the denial of the cross-motion for summary judgment filed by the adjoining landowners in a trespass and negligence suit because the neighbor purchased property without first obtaining a survey and the adjoining landowners' home was already encroaching upon the neighbor's property by two feet at the time of the purchase; the adjoining landowners were not liable for their predecessor's conduct in building the house and a fence across the property line of the neighbor's predecessor in title, in the absence of evidence that their predecessor was acting as their agent, and were, therefore, entitled to summary judgment. Navajo Constr., Inc. v. Brigham, 271 Ga. App. 128, 608 S.E.2d 732 (2004).

Landowner's trespass and nuisance suit. — In two cases involving a dispute for nuisance and trespass arising out of excessive water runoff which flowed onto a landowner's land, the trial court's grant of summary judgment to a construction contractor as to the issue of the contractor's liability was reversed, while the denial of summary judgment to a developer as to the issue of the contractor's liability was affirmed, as: (1) the combination of the lay and expert testimony as to the presence of the excess runoff and its cause presented questions of fact for a jury to decide; (2) merely because the county approved the development activities did not mean that either the contractor or the developer or both could not be held liable for nuisance; and (3) the landowner's action against the alleged creators of the water-runoff nuisance was authorized, regardless of their having sold the property. Green v. Eastland Homes, Inc., 284 Ga. App. 643, 644 S.E.2d 479 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 629 (Ga. 2007).

Premises liability to invitee. — In a premise liability action, because questions of fact remained as to whether a student was a university's invitee at the time the student was shot on what was alleged to be the university's property at the time of the assault, and thus, whether the university owed the student a duty of ordinary care, and no evidence was presented that the student lost an "invitee" status, summary judgment in the university's favor was reversed. Clark Atlanta Univ., Inc. v. Williams, 288 Ga. App. 180, 654 S.E.2d 402 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 227 (Ga. 2008).

In a premises liability action filed by a guest of a property owner, because the guest failed to show that the owner had any actual or constructive knowledge of the alleged hazard that allegedly caused the guest's injuries, specifically, a hole in an otherwise flat, grassy area of the owner's yard, the court properly granted the owner summary judgment. Thomas v. Deason, 289 Ga. App. 753, 658 S.E.2d 165 (2008).

Restrictive covenants. — On appeal from an order in a declaratory judgment action, the trial court did not err in finding, upon cross-motions for summary judgment, that restrictive covenants which had been made applicable to the subdivision over 20 years earlier remained in effect and prohibited a buyer from re-subdividing certain tracts into residential lots with less than five acres, but did err in ruling that interpretation of the covenants was a legal matter for the court, rather than a factual matter for the jury. Britt v. Albright, 282 Ga. App. 206, 638 S.E.2d 372 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 199 (Ga. 2007).

Credibility. — If credibility is crucial, summary judgment becomes improper and a trial indispensable. Winkles v. Brown, 227 Ga. 33, 178 S.E.2d 865 (1970).

If a question of credibility arises as to a material issue, summary judgment should not be granted. Georgia Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Almon, 122 Ga. App. 42, 176 S.E.2d 205 (1970); Ash v. Spear, 137 Ga. App. 12, 223 S.E.2d 26 (1975).

Questions of credibility cannot be resolved on summary judgment. Jones v. Howard, 153 Ga. App. 137, 264 S.E.2d 587 (1980).

False light and invasion of privacy. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to an auto dealer, mortgage broker, and lender on an accused person's claim for invasion of privacy by placing a person in a false light as the accused person did not show that the false information — that the accused person allegedly participated in a fraudulent financing scheme — was distributed to the public at large. Additionally, the trial court correctly granted summary judgment on the issue of the accused person's claim that there was an invasion of privacy through appropriation as the accused person did not show any evidence that they took the accused person's name and likeness for their own advantage. Blakey v. Victory Equip. Sales, inc., 259 Ga. App. 34, 576 S.E.2d 38 (2002).

Applicability to Certain Actions,

Defamation actions. — Summary judgment procedures are particularly appropriate in defamation actions when U.S. Const., amend. i is applicable. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Because of the importance of free speech, summary judgment is the rule, not the exception, in defamation cases. Rosanova v. Playboy Enters., Inc., 411 F. Supp. 440 (S.D. Ga. 1976), aff'd, 580 F.2d 859 (5th Cir. 1978).

Debtor's defamation claim, under O.C.G.A. § 51-5-1(a), against a creditor for reporting its repossession of collateral from the debtor to credit reporting agencies was properly summarily dismissed, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), because such a claim was preempted by the Federal Fair Credit Reporting Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1681 et seq., absent the creditor's malice or willful intent to injure the debtor, which were not shown. Corbin v. Regions Bank, 258 Ga. App. 490, 574 S.E.2d 616 (2002).

Summary judgment for a city manager was appropriate in a community activist's defamation action because the activist was a limited-purpose public figure by reason of extensive participation in city affairs, and the activist failed to show actual malice by the manager. Sparks v. Peaster, 260 Ga. App. 232, 581 S.E.2d 579 (2003).

Summary judgment was improperly granted to an employer pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) in a terminated employee's suit alleging breach of contract, defamation, and tortious interference with contract because there were disputed questions of material fact and matters of credibility that a jury had to resolve regarding whether the corporation's president discharged the employee in good faith or did so for personal reasons unrelated to the employee's job performance. Salhab v. Tift Heart Ctr., P.C., 260 Ga. App. 799, 581 S.E.2d 363 (2003).

Statement that a sheriff provided to the Georgia Department of Labor (DOL) after the sheriff decided not to rehire an employee and the employee filed a claim for workers' compensation benefits was privileged, and the trial court ruled correctly that the sheriff was entitled to summary judgment on the employee's claim alleging slander, even though the sheriff's statement was published by a newspaper one week later and the newspaper published a follow-on article that stated that the sheriff stood by the statement the sheriff made to the DOL. Cooper-Bridges v. Ingle, 268 Ga. App. 73, 601 S.E.2d 445 (2004).

Trial court erroneously granted summary judgment against an election candidate, and in favor of the incumbent, on the former's defamation claims stemming from a printed newspaper advertisement as issues of fact remained as to the actual malice exhibited by the incumbent in publishing the advertisement, and the flagrant accusations stated therein went beyond the criticism, hostility, and unfairness a candidate might expect to encounter while running for political office. Howard v. Pope, 282 Ga. App. 137, 637 S.E.2d 854 (2006).

Libel actions. — In an action by a contractor against a newspaper and the newspaper's editor, because: (1) the average reader would have interpreted a printed headline's use of the term "rape" as an attempt to convey the severity of the damage to the land that the contractor inflicted rather than to characterize the contractor's conduct that resulted in the damage as criminal; and (2) the article referred to by the headline did not constitute libel per se as the editor unquestion-ably did not intend, and readers did not interpret, the word “rape” as having any sexual connotation in the context used in the article, the editor and the newspaper were properly granted summary judgment as to the contractor’s libel and libel per se claims. Lucas v. Cranshaw, 289 Ga. App. 510, 659 S.E.2d 612 (2008).

Defamation actions by public figures. — If public figures bring defamation actions, summary judgment, rather than a trial on the merits, is a proper vehicle for affording constitutional protection if there is no substantive basis for a finding of knowing falsity or reckless disregard. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

In as much as the First Amendment mandates that a public figure plaintiff prove actual malice by clear and convincing evidence, a court ruling on a motion for summary judgment in a defamation case must be guided by the New York Times “clear and convincing” evidentiary standard in determining whether a genuine issue of actual malice exists — that is, whether the evidence presented is such that a reasonable jury might find that actual malice had been shown with convincing clarity. Barber v. Perdue, 194 Ga. App. 287, 390 S.E.2d 234 (1989), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 967, 111 S. Ct. 430, 112 L. Ed. 2d 414 (1990).

Application of public figure standard in libel case. — Summary judgment as to liability was reversed because the intermediate appellate court and the trial court applied the wrong standard of fault to a limited-purpose public figure involved in a controversy over the operation of a county landfill; the New York Times v. Sullivan standard applied, requiring the public figure to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the Internet user published false and defamatory statements knowing that the statements were false or acting in reckless disregard of their truth or falsity. Mathis v. Cannon, 276 Ga. 16, 573 S.E.2d 376 (2002).

Application of voluntary payment doctrine. — Voluntary payment doctrine did not bar a city’s unjust enrichment and conversion claims filed against a construction contractor as the contractor failed to show that a genuine issue of material fact remained over whether the city was negligent in ascertaining the true facts and any prejudice if the duplicate payment were returned to the city. D & H Constr. Co. v. City of Woodstock, 284 Ga. App. 314, 643 S.E.2d 826 (2007).

Assertions that were merely opinions. — Trial court properly granted the youth leader’s motion for summary judgment on the troop leader’s libel action since the youth leader’s resignation letter, which, inter alia, alleged that the troop leader was “immoral” and did not live life according to the ideals of scouting did not support a libel action since its assertions were only opinions, incapable of being proved false. Gast v. Brittain, 277 Ga. 340, 589 S.E.2d 63 (2003).

Action against police officers. — In an action for false arrest, false imprisonment, and malicious prosecution, the police officers were entitled to summary judgment based on qualified immunity after a school’s principal failed to show the officers acted with actual malice or deliberate intent to injure the principal when the officers arrested the principal for hindering the arrest of two students for fighting and closing a door on an officer’s foot and arm. Reed v. DeKalb County, 264 Ga. App. 83, 589 S.E.2d 584 (2003).

Background check agent was entitled to summary judgment on the employee’s claims for negligence, defamation, libel, and slander since the employee’s agreement with the employer, which contained an exculpatory clause releasing the employer and the employer’s agents from any liabilities, claims, or lawsuits in regard to the information obtained in any background check was valid and the libel, slander, and defamation claims were barred by the one year statute of limitations as publication occurred when the agent sent the report to the employer not when the employer fired the employee. McCleskey v. Vericon Res., Inc., 264 Ga. App. 31, 589 S.E.2d 854 (2003).

Defenses of lack of jurisdiction and insufficient service. — Defenses of lack of jurisdiction over the person and insufficiency of service of process are matters in abatement, not matters in bar, and are not within the scope of summary judgment procedure. Larwin Mtg. Investors v. Delta Equities, Inc., 129 Ga. App. 769, 201 S.E.2d 187 (1973).

Jurisdictional type motion is not within the scope of summary judgment procedure. Hemphill v. Con-Chem, Inc., 128 Ga. App. 590, 197 S.E.2d 457 (1973).

Waiver of most defenses. — Trial court erred to the extent the court ruled that an insurer was prevented from introducing any evidence on liability following a default judgment entered against the insurer because the insurer could still assert policy defenses but, otherwise, by failing to answer timely the insurer was precluded from asserting any affirmative defense included within O.C.G.A. § 9-11-8(c). Willis v. Allstate Ins. Co., 321 Ga. App. 496, 740 S.E.2d 413 (2013).

Motions to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction over the person, when tried on affidavits pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-43(b), do not become motions for summary judgment. McPherson v. McPherson, 238 Ga. 271, 232 S.E.2d 552 (1977); Terrell v. Porter, 189 Ga. App. 778, 377 S.E.2d 540 (1989).

Although a defendant's motion for summary judgment raised the issue of insufficiency of service of process, that defense is a plea in abatement and, as such, it is not properly a basis of a motion for summary judgment, but if the defense is raised for resolution in the trial court and it has not otherwise been waived by the defendant, the nomenclature of the pleading that raises that issue should not be a material consideration. Under these circumstances, the proper disposition of the case is to vacate the order of the trial court on the cross-motions for summary judgment and to remand the case with the direction that the plaintiff's complaint be dismissed for insufficiency of service of process. Cheshire Bridge Enters., Inc. v. Lexington Ins. Co., 183 Ga. App. 672, 359 S.E.2d 702, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905, 359 S.E.2d 702 (1987).

Dilatory pleas. — Because summary judgment was improperly granted on a dilatory plea, and hence was not an adjudication on the merits, a plea of res judicata in a subsequent action would be denied. National Heritage Corp. v. Mount Olive Mem. Gardens, Inc., 244 Ga. 240, 260 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

Discrimination. — Although there was evidence that a homeowner who listed a house with a real estate agency committed discrimination when the homeowner refused to show the house to African-American homebuyers, the evidence did not support the homebuyers' claims that the agency and a broker who worked for the agency participated in that discrimination, and the appellate court reversed the trial court's judgment denying summary judgment in favor of the agency, the broker, and a real estate company that sold a franchise to the agency on the homebuyers' claims alleging violation of Georgia's Fair Housing Act, O.C.G.A. § 8-3-200 et seq., and intentional infliction of emotional distress. Coldwell Banker Real Estate Corp. v. DeGraft-Hanson, 266 Ga. App. 23, 596 S.E.2d 408 (2004).

Dispute as to meaning of words. — When it is clear from a writing and other evidence that the parties' intent as to meaning of certain words contained in the writing is in dispute, summary judgment should not be granted. Jones v. Howard, 153 Ga. App. 137, 264 S.E.2d 587 (1980).

Language of agreement controlled between exterminator and insurer. — Exterminator was properly granted summary judgment in a home owner's action to recover additional damages after a settlement for termite damage because the literal language of the agreement made additional repairs the responsibility of an insurer, rather than the exterminator. Anderson v. Astro Exterminating Servs., 259 Ga. App. 370, 577 S.E.2d 67 (2003).

Domestication of child support judgments of foreign countries. — In a case in which the plaintiff, a West German resident, sought to domesticate a West German judgment for child support, and because the facts established the defendant's minimum contacts with West Germany and that the defendant was afforded adequate notice and a reasonable opportunity to be heard in West Germany, the court abused the court's discretion in failing to rule that the West German judgment be domesticated and was enforceable according to the judgment's terms. Knothe v. Rose, 195 Ga. App. 7, 392 S.E.2d 570 (1990).

Failure to file Family Violence Report. — Officers who investigated a claim of possible child abuse failed in the officers' obligation to file a Family Violence Report, as required by O.C.G.A. § 17-4-20.1(c), and the trial court properly denied a motion for summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 by the officers and others in a wrongful death claim on behalf of a deceased child as genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether their failure to investigate and file the necessary report proximately resulted in the child's injuries and death; the definition of "family violence" was broad under O.C.G.A. § 19-13-1, and although "reasonable discipline" was expected thereunder, the officers had an obligation to investigate allegations that a child was being whipped. Meagher v. Quick, 264 Ga. App. 639, 594 S.E.2d 182 (2003).

Forfeiture of bond. — Jury trial is not required when a bond is forfeited, unless the trial court agrees that there are genuine issues of material fact to be resolved. State v. Slaughter, 246 Ga. 174, 269 S.E.2d 446 (1980).

On forfeiture of bond, securities become quasiparties to the proceedings and subject themselves to the jurisdiction of the court so that summary judgment may be rendered on their bonds. State v. Slaughter, 246 Ga. 174, 269 S.E.2d 446 (1980).

Counterclaim for payments on bond by co-surety. — Summary judgment was properly entered for a lessee bank on a lessor developer's counterclaim that alleged that the bank was obligated to pay the entire debt to the bondholder incurred to fund the project, rather than the debt service over the 15-year term of the lease, as the parties knew that the lease term was 15 years and that the term of the note was 20 years, yet failed to specifically provide that the bank pay the debt after the lease expired; parol evidence was inadmissible under O.C.G.A. § 13-2-2(1) to prove the parties' intentions as the lease was unambiguous. Porter Communs. Co. v. SouthTrust Bank, 268

Ga. App. 29, 601 S.E.2d 422 (2004).

Fraud. — Although summary judgment may in a proper case be obtained in an action based on fraud and misrepresentation, summary judgment will be denied if the moving party is not entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Mitchell v. Calhoun, 229 Ga. 757, 194 S.E.2d 421 (1972).

If information as to a claimed fraudulent transaction rests exclusively within the knowledge of the participants, and the plaintiff has no means successfully to meet the facts alleged in the defendant's affidavit, summary judgment should not be granted on the defendant's affidavit. Mitchell v. Calhoun, 229 Ga. 757, 194 S.E.2d 421 (1972).

Because the plaintiff alleged fraud but failed to point to any evidence to prove an essential element of fraud, there remained no genuine issue of material fact, and therefore the trial court did not err in granting the defendant's motion for summary judgment on the issue of fraud. Brown v. Buffington, 203 Ga. App. 402, 416 S.E.2d 883 (1992).

Trial court erroneously granted summary judgment dismissing the home buyers' fraud claim against the sellers and the sellers' agent, given various misrepresentations made by the sellers' agent on the sellers' behalf, for the purpose of inducing the buyers to purchase the home. Smiley v. S & J Inves., Inc., 260 Ga. App. 493, 580 S.E.2d 283 (2003).

When items stolen from an electric company were sold to a supply company, the supply company was not entitled to summary judgment dismissing the electric company's fraud claim against the supply company because a jury could find that the supply company's principal knew the items were stolen. Fed. Ins. Co. v. Westside Supply Co., 264 Ga. App. 240, 590 S.E.2d 224 (2003).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) to a parent in an action against the parent's child, alleging fraud and coercion in the child's failure to transfer assets to the parent after the parent had transferred them to the parent's two children in order to protect them in the event that the parent was put into a nursing home; the evidence showed that the parent had control over all faculties and was under no duress, fraud, or coercion while engaging in the transfers to the children, and summary disposition of the issues as to liability and vesting of title back to the parent was inappropriate. Friar v. Friar, 265 Ga. App. 680, 595 S.E.2d 374 (2004).

Applicability to Certain Actions,
Proceedings, Issues, and

Because it was shown that a decedent, before dying, substantially depleted his assets by making gifts to his wife and by purchasing land in the name of a corporate entity without consideration from the entity, a jury could infer that the decedent was intentionally depleting his assets to deprive his ex-wife of access to those assets in claims under the terms of a settlement agreement between the decedent and the ex-wife. Since such actions could be construed as an intent to defraud, it was error to grant the decedent's executor, the decedent's surviving wife, and the corporate entity summary judgment on claims of fraud. Miller v. Lomax, 266 Ga. App. 93, 596 S.E.2d 232 (2004).

Buyer presented enough evidence to raise issues of fact concerning the buyer's claim that the sellers knew about the condition of a septic system before the sellers sold the house and intentionally misled the buyer by telling the buyer that the system was in "perfect working order," and the trial court erred by granting the sellers' motion for summary judgment on the buyer's claim alleging fraud. Hudson v. Pollock, 267 Ga. App. 4, 598 S.E.2d 811 (2004).

Summary judgment for storage companies in an owner's fraud claim was proper because: (1) the parties' contract contained a merger clause; (2) the owner did not seek to rescind the contract until the owner filed a complaint; (3) by seeking damages for breach of contract in the owner's complaint, the owner took action inconsistent with a repudiation; (4) the owner delayed almost nine months in attempting to rescind the contract; and (5) since the owner failed to promptly rescind the contract, the merger clause barred the owner's fraud claim. Liberty v. Storage Trust Props., L.P., 267 Ga. App. 905, 600 S.E.2d 841 (2004).

In an action between a home builder and its buyers, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment on the buyers' fraud claim as: (1) the terms of the construction contract explicitly acknowledged that the construction price was based on allowances set in the budget and would change if actual costs exceeded the original allowance amount; (2) the buyers both acknowledged that the buyers understood that the original contract price was not a fixed price, and that the buyers would be responsible for actual costs that exceeded the allowances contained in the contract; (3) the buyers admitted that a portion of the additional costs resulted from changes that the buyers had requested; and (4) as a result, the mere existence of the change orders did not indicate that the builder fraudulently induced the buyers to enter into the contract. Davis v. Whitford Props., 282 Ga. App. 143, 637 S.E.2d 849 (2006).

Trial court did not err in granting a car dealer summary judgment against a customer's fraud claim as: (1) the customer's contention that the dealer knew of the alleged defects in a car sold to the customer at the time of the sale was specifically negated by affidavits submitted by the dealer's service and maintenance employees; and (2) even if the dealer knew of the car's defectiveness after the sale, this knowledge did not amount to either knowledge, or a reckless disregard of the car's defectiveness, at the time of the sale; hence, as a result, the trial court did not err in granting the dealer's motion for summary judgment on the customer's claims for attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11, costs, and punitive damages pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 51-12-5.1. Morris v. Pugmire Lincoln Mercury, Inc., 283 Ga. App. 238, 641 S.E.2d 222 (2007).

Dissolution of nonprofit corporation. — Trial court erred in entering summary judgment for a college as to a Baptist convention's request to enjoin the college from dissolving as: (1) the convention was a member of the college under the Georgia Nonprofit Corporations Code, specifically under an earlier version of

O.C.G.A. § 14-3-140; (2) the college's attempt at dissolving was a sham as the college intended to continue its functions under a new corporate entity; (3) the corporate reorganization was either a merger under O.C.G.A. § 14-3-1103(a)(3) or a disposition of assets under O.C.G.A. § 14-3-1202(b)(3), but it was not a true dissolution, and absent the convention's approval, it could not stand; and (4) O.C.G.A. § 14-3-1430(2)(A) did not justify the dissolution as the convention was the only member and it did not seek dissolution. Baptist Convention v. Shorter College, 266 Ga. App. 312, 596 S.E.2d 761 (2004), aff'd, 279 Ga. 466, 614 S.E.2d 37 (2005).

Stockholders' declaratory judgment action. — Because no evidence was presented that the shares in the administratively dissolved company which the stockholders originally purchased, and which pre-dated the corporation's formation, were ever transformed into the corporation's stock, and the stockholders' fraud claims were vague at best, the corporation was properly granted summary judgment in the stockholders' declaratory judgment action seeking a declaration that the stockholders owned stock in the corporation based on the stockholders' purchase of stock in the administratively dissolved company. Wright v. AFLAC, Inc., 283 Ga. App. 890, 643 S.E.2d 233 (2007).

Georgia Public Service Commission. — Actions against the Georgia Public Service Commission are not exempt from the summary judgment procedures of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56. Statesboro Tel. Co. v. Georgia Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 235 Ga. 179, 219 S.E.2d 127 (1975).

Application to Telephone Customer Protection Act. — Because a telephone customer was enrolled in a radio station's discount program, calls containing unsolicited advertisements fell within the established business relationship exemption and were not automatically prohibited by the Telephone Customer Protection Act (TCPA), 47 U.S.C. § 227; the telephone customer was barred from recovering under the TCPA, and summary judgment in favor of the radio station was affirmed. Schneider v. Susquehanna Radio Corp., 260 Ga. App. 296, 581 S.E.2d 603 (2003).

Open Records Act. — In denying a request under the Open Records Act (ORA), O.C.G.A. § 50-18-70 et seq., an agency was limited to the authority cited in denying an initial request; an insurance commissioner's refusal to disclose an investigation report and records was an abuse of discretion based on the reasons provided for denying the request, and an order granting summary judgment in favor of the commissioner and denying an individual's summary judgment motion in an ORA action was reversed. Hoffman v. Oxendine, 268 Ga. App. 316, 601 S.E.2d 813 (2004).

Insufficiency in the allegations of a complaint is not a matter that is proper for review on a motion for summary judgment if the allegations of the complaint are considered well-pled and the single issue before the court is whether on the merits the moving party in the position of a defendant has carried the party's burden of showing that as a matter of law the party in the position of a plaintiff is not entitled to relief because one essential element under any theory of recovery is lacking and incapable of proof. Robinson v. Starr, 197 Ga. App. 440, 398 S.E.2d 714 (1990).

Insurance fraud. — Issues of fact concerning whether a former employee actually signed an insurance card and whether an insurer detrimentally relied upon alleged misrepresentations precluded the award of summary judgment in the insurer's fraud action against a former employee. Centennial Life Ins. Co. v. Smith, 210 Ga. App. 194, 435 S.E.2d 498 (1993).

Summary judgment was properly granted for the insurer because the insured's complaint fell outside the four-year statute of limitation for fraud and negligent misrepresentation claims. Nash v. Ohio Nat'l Life Ins. Co., 266 Ga. App. 416, 597 S.E.2d 512 (2004).

Auto insurance contracts. — Since there was no law or policy requiring insurance coverage for negligent service of alcohol, the home insurer's motor vehicle exclusion applied as the injured party's damages arose out of an automobile accident, and the alleged independent act of negligence did not negate the exclusion.

Manning v. USF&G Ins. Co., 264 Ga. App. 102, 589 S.E.2d 687 (2003).

When an injured party sued the insurer of a motorist against whom the injured party obtained a judgment, both to collect on the judgment and to assert a claim, as assignee of the motorist, for bad faith failure to settle, the insurer was not entitled to summary judgment because, even though the motorist did not provide the insurer with notice of the claim, the injured party provided the insurer with sufficient notice, under O.C.G.A. § 33-7-15(c), when it provided the insurer a copy of the complaint, with a court clerk's notation of the case number and the date on which the complaint was filed, and the insurer did not show that the injured party's failure to provide the insurer with a copy of the summons deprived it of the ability to timely and adequately investigate the claim. Canal Indem. Co. v. Greene, 265 Ga. App. 67, 593 S.E.2d 41 (2003).

Trial court properly entered summary judgment against a corporation's insurer as the corporation was the named insured on a policy, notwithstanding the policy's identification of the named insured as an individual, doing business as a trade name, as the insurer filed a certificate of insurance with the Georgia Public Service Commission, pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 46-7-12(a), stating that it had insured the corporation, doing business as the trade name; as the insurer failed to rebut testimony that a truck owned by the individual was involved in an accident while it was engaged in the corporation's business, the injured parties' collision with the truck was covered by the policy. Hartford Cas. Ins. Co. v. Smith, 268 Ga. App. 224, 603 S.E.2d 298 (2004).

Summary judgment was properly entered for an insurer in the injured parties' declaratory judgment suit as the insurer clearly stated that the insurer was issuing one contract, albeit in two sections, and that the insurer's insured was entitled to only one payout; the insurer issued two policy numbers and two declarations pages to the insured as the insurer could only accommodate four vehicles under the insurer's policy declarations, and the insured had seven vehicles. Smith v. Allstate Ins. Co., 268 Ga. App. 229, 603 S.E.2d 302 (2004).

Since an injured person was neither named in the policy covering the vehicle in which the person was riding at the time of an accident, nor residing in the same household as the policy holder, and was not a beneficiary of the other four policies owned by the policyholder, the injured person was not entitled to stack the policies; thus, a trial court's summary judgment in favor of the insurance company was affirmed. Beard v. Nunes, 269 Ga. App. 214, 603 S.E.2d 735 (Aug. 23, 2004).

Trial court properly entered partial summary judgment for an insurer and refused to extend the full limits of the policy to the injured parties; the policy excluded "any loss arising out of" the use of an automobile by any person living with the insured, which covered the driver, and the injured parties were injured due to the driver's actions in driving an automobile. Carver v. Empire Fire & Marine Ins. Co., 270 Ga. App. 100, 605 S.E.2d 842 (2004).

In an action concerning the limits of uninsured motorist (UM) coverage available under a claimant's policy, which was held with the claimant's husband who was the named insured thereunder, their insurer was properly granted summary judgment on that issue as the 2001 amendment to O.C.G.A. § 33-7-11 had no effect on the limits of UM coverage under the policy covering the claimant's vehicle, and as such, the insurer was not required to notify the claimant of the change in the law or to secure a separate UM election at the time this vehicle was added to the original insurance policy. Soufi v. Haygood, 282 Ga. App. 593, 639 S.E.2d 395 (2006).

Insurance provision in murder-suicide case. — Because substantial fact issues existed as to whether an insurance policy provision transferring ownership to the insured was activated in an apparent murder-suicide case, and whether the insured had murdered his wife, the owner of the policy, it was error of the court to grant summary judgment. Bland v. Ussey, 172

Insurance contracts. — As the facts were not in dispute and a proper construction of the unambiguous language of the vacancy exclusion of an insurance policy showed that the vandalism that occurred in a certain insured building was not a covered loss because the building had been vacant for more than 60 days prior to the loss, the trial court should have granted the insurer summary judgment in an action by the buyer of the building, who was the assignee of the insured, to recover for the vandalism damage. Sorema N. Am. Reinsurance Co. v. Johnson, 258 Ga. App. 304, 574 S.E.2d 377 (2002).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the casualty insurance company on the insured's claim for damages under the insured's insurance policy it had on the insured's property that was destroyed by fire as the purpose of summary judgment was to determine whether there was a triable issue of fact and whether the insured submitted to an examination as required under the policy could not be determined until that issue was tried. The error occurred because the insured submitted to an examination, but left the examination after three hours of questioning when the insured became angry at the way the insured was being questioned, although the insured did say as the insured left that the insured would continue the questioning with the assistance of the court. Evans v. Ohio Cas. Ins. Co., 264 Ga. App. 485, 591 S.E.2d 378 (2003).

When an insurer sought a declaratory judgment defining the insurer's rights and responsibilities under an insurance policy issued to an insured cemetery that was sued for desecrating a grave, the construction of the policy was a matter for the court that could be resolved by summary judgment. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Somers, 264 Ga. App. 421, 591 S.E.2d 430 (2003).

When an insured sued an insurance agent for fraud and breach of fiduciary duty because the agent allegedly misrepresented the coverage afforded by a policy the insured purchased through the agent, the insured's failure to read the policy entitled the agent to summary judgment, as no confidential relationship between the insured and the agent existed. Canales v. Wilson Southland Ins. Agency, 261 Ga. App. 529, 583 S.E.2d 203 (2003).

Trial court properly declined to rule, as a matter of law, that when a child was with the noncustodial parent, the child was not a "resident" of the noncustodial parent's home for insurance coverage purposes; the questions of domicile and residence were typically fact questions left to the jury, and because the parents had joint custody of a child killed in a home accident while staying at the noncustodial father's home, a jury could find that the child was in fact a resident of the father's home at the time of the accident. Baldwin v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 264 Ga. App. 229, 590 S.E.2d 206 (2003).

Denial of an insurance company's summary judgment motion in a declaratory action brought against an injured person seeking a determination regarding coverage obligations in the injured person's underlying assault and battery claim was reversed because the injured person conceded that there was no coverage, but asserted estoppel based on delays in sending the reservation of rights notice and in filing the declaratory judgment action; since the injured person had no rights under the policy, the injured person was not allowed to sue the insurance company directly, and the injured person also lacked standing to assert the defense of waiver or estoppel against the insurance company for failing to provide a timely notice of reservation of rights. Capitol Indem. Corp. v. Fraley, 266 Ga. App. 561, 597 S.E.2d 601 (2004).

Trial court's grant of summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 to an insurer in an insured's declaratory judgment action seeking a coverage determination was erroneous because the insured, who worked as a roofing supervisor for a livelihood, had been engaged in manual roofing labor for the insured's pastor as a favor at the time of the incident and, accordingly, the insured's actions were not excluded under either the business pursuits exclusion nor under the professional services exclusion as roofing was a trade or occupation; the insured's notice to the insurer within a month of being sued was reasonably timely. Cunningham v. Middle Ga. Mut. Ins. Co., 268 Ga. App. 181, 601 S.E.2d 382 (2004).

Applicability to Certain Actions,
Proceedings, Issues, and

Upon an insurer's interlocutory appeal, the appeals court found that the insurer was properly denied summary judgment on an insured's individual and class action claims for unearned insurance premiums owed under credit life and disability policies as the insured satisfied any contractual notice requirements to filing suit, the class was properly certified, and the insured adequately represented the interests of the class. J.M.I.C. Life Ins. Co. v. Toole, 280 Ga. App. 372, 634 S.E.2d 123 (2006).

In an action between an insurer and its insured regarding the insured's claim for additional coverage, because the provisions regarding blanket liability and additional limits of liability were ambiguous, and application of O.C.G.A. § 13-2-2 was insufficient to eliminate the ambiguity in that it was impossible to ascertain how much coverage was provided for the items at issue, particularly soft cost, a jury was to consider the circumstances surrounding the transaction to determine the scope and effect of the policy; hence, the insured was erroneously granted partial summary judgment on the issue. RLI Ins. Co. v. Highlands on Ponce, LLC, 280 Ga. App. 798, 635 S.E.2d 168 (2006).

Trial court's grant of summary judgment was upheld on appeal, in an insurance applicant's negligent misrepresentation action filed against an agency and its agent, as the applicant failed to include the insurance application, that was the focus of the suit, in the appellate record. Hattaway v. Conner, 281 Ga. App. 20, 635 S.E.2d 330 (2006).

In an action filed against an insurer seeking coverage under a homeowners policy, the insureds were properly denied coverage for damages to a home the insureds did not live in, and the insurer was properly granted summary judgment on the issue of coverage as the policy at issue clearly stated that the "insured premises" meant the residence the insureds used as their primary residence. Varsalona v. Auto-Owners Ins. Co., 281 Ga. App. 644, 637 S.E.2d 64 (2006).

Trial court erred in denying an insurer's motion for summary judgment as to the issue of coverage as an assault and battery exclusion contained in the insurer's commercial general liability policy barred coverage to the insured for damages claims arising from a shooting on the insured's premises in a wrongful death action filed against the insured; moreover, inclusion of the phrase "whether or not" in the exclusion was significant and made clear that the exclusion was intended to apply to all instances of assault and battery occurring on the premises. First Specialty Ins. Corp. v. Flowers, 284 Ga. App. 543, 644 S.E.2d 453 (2007).

Trial court did not err in granting an insurer summary judgment in the insurer's declaratory judgment action finding that the insurer owed no duty to the insured to defend or indemnify the insured in an action filed by the insured's client who was injured in an accident involving the covered vehicle as the policy at issue showed no liability coverage and, hence, did not obligate the insurer to that duty. Simulton v. AIU Ins. Co., 284 Ga. App. 152, 643 S.E.2d 553 (2007).

In a breach of contract action filed by an insured against an insurer, the trial court did not err in granting the insurer summary judgment as to the issue of coverage as questions answered untruthfully in the application for insurance by the insured amounted to misrepresentations warranting a cancellation of the policy at issue, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 33-24-7. T. J. Blake Trucking, Inc. v. Alea London, Ltd., 284 Ga. App. 384, 643 S.E.2d 762 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1101, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 505 (Ga. 2007).

Because Georgia contract law stated that the statute of limitation on a contract which contemplated an actual demand began to run 30 days after notice was sent of the amount due, as contemplated by the contract between an insured and the insured, the trial court erred in finding that the insurer's claim for reimbursement from the insured was time-barred; thus, summary judgment in favor of the insured was inappropriate. Canal Ins. Co. v. Pro

Search, 286 Ga. App. 164, 648 S.E.2d 497 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 870 (Ga. 2007).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to an insured in the insurer's declaratory judgment action, requiring the insurer to defend and indemnify the insured in the underlying suit filed by a resident of the insured's personal care home arising from an attack by a fellow resident as the incident occurred without the insured's foresight, expectation, or design, and was thus properly characterized as accidental under the terms of the insured's policy. Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Magnolia Estates, Inc., 286 Ga. App. 183, 648 S.E.2d 498 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 88 (Ga. 2008).

Due to the inadequacies of an insured's bad faith demand, as its attempt to equate the submission of a claim with the demand for payment required by O.C.G.A. § 33-4-6 was directly contravened by case law, and the fact that the insurer met all the insurer's obligations under the policy the insurer issued to the insured, the trial court did not err in denying summary judgment to the insured and granting summary judgment on the insurer's cross-motion, authorizing the insurer to quitclaim the refinanced property to the insurer in full satisfaction of the insurer's duties and obligations under the policy. BayRock Mortg. Corp. v. Chi. Title Ins. Co., 286 Ga. App. 18, 648 S.E.2d 433 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 108 (Ga. 2008).

Because the damages a tenant sought under a commercial general liability policy issued to the insured-landlord for carbon monoxide poisoning were clearly excluded by the unambiguous terms contained within an exclusion under the policy, the trial court erred in denying the insurer's motion for summary judgment as to the issue of coverage. Auto-Owners Ins. Co. v. Reed, 286 Ga. App. 603, 649 S.E.2d 843 (2007), aff'd, 284 Ga. 286, 667 S.E.2d 90 (2008).

Given that the language in an insurance contract providing for catastrophic coverage only extended to inpatient, and not outpatient, services, the trial court properly granted summary judgment as to the issue of the insurer's coverage as the hospital bill for which the insured sought payment was for outpatient services. Michna v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Ga., Inc., 288 Ga. App. 112, 653 S.E.2d 377 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 214 (Ga. 2008).

Under the ordinary rules of contract construction, because: (1) no ambiguity in an insurance contract existed; and (2) the insurer was authorized to reduce the uninsured motorist policy limits therein per the directions of the insured, no error resulted from the trial court's order granting summary judgment to an insurer as to the issue of coverage. Moreover, separate signatures rejecting bodily injury coverage and property damage coverage were not required, and the court did not rely upon affidavits containing inadmissible evidence. Lambert v. Alfa Gen. Ins. Corp., 291 Ga. App. 57, 660 S.E.2d 889 (2008).

Summary judgment was properly granted to an insured pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) and denied to an insurer in the insured's action seeking to collect unpaid claims under the insured's policy wherein the insured was entitled to indemnification for losses arising from employee dishonesty; however, based on the construction rules of O.C.G.A. § 13-2-2, the ambiguous non-cumulative policy liability limit was construed in the insured's favor, but could not be interpreted to allow the limit for each of the years of coverage, but rather, the limit was applied to the entire three-year policy period. Cincinnati Ins. Co. v. Sherman & Hemstreet, Inc., 260 Ga. App. 870, 581 S.E.2d 613 (2003), aff'd, 277 Ga. 734, 594 S.E.2d 648 (2004).

Insurance settlement. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the vehicle owner in the insurer's suit against the vehicle owner after the insurer settled a claim with an injured victim after the company employee who rented a vehicle from the vehicle owner was involved in an accident that injured the victim; since no evidence showed the insurer and the vehicle owner contracted otherwise, Georgia statutory law dictated that the renter's liability insurance coverage, provided by the insurer, was the primary insurance and the vehicle owner's insurance provided secondary coverage. Zurich Am. Ins. Co. v. General Car & Truck Leasing Sys., 258 Ga. App. 733, 574 S.E.2d 914 (2002).

In an action claiming beneficiary status to two annuities issued to a decedent, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to a foundation, and against an individual, on grounds that the decedent failed to do all that was necessary to change the beneficiary of the decedent's annuities to the individual, as such was specifically required for the change of beneficiary designation to go into effect, and substantial compliance with the requirements was insufficient; hence, no material fact issues remained. Lake v. Young Harris Alumni Found., Inc., 283 Ga. App. 409, 641 S.E.2d 628 (2007).

Uninsured motorist coverage. — Conclusion that an insurer was only obligated to provide an insured with $40,000 of uninsured motorist (UM) coverage was supported by both the unambiguous policy language and by the fact that the insured admitted that the insured had not made a written request pursuant to former O.C.G.A. § 33-7-11(a)(3) for an increase in UM coverage above the minimum coverage required at the time of the accident; thus, the trial court properly granted the insurer summary judgment on the insurer's request for a declaration that the insured only had $40,000 of UM coverage. Payne v. Middlesex Ins. Co., 259 Ga. App. 867, 578 S.E.2d 470 (2003).

Because Georgia public policy prohibited an exclusion within an insurer's uninsured coverage for the use of any motor vehicle by an insured to carry persons or property for a fee, as such denied the statutorily mandated coverage to an otherwise qualified insured, and the requirements under O.C.G.A. § 33-7-11 were plain and not illogical, summary judgment in favor of the insurer on this issue was reversed. Wagner v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 288 Ga. App. 132, 653 S.E.2d 526 (2007).

Trial court erred in denying motions for summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 by an insurer in a declaratory judgment action pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-4-2 seeking to determine whether the insurer had a duty to defend, and by the owners of an automobile on claims of negligent entrustment by the plaintiffs, a driver and passengers; the owners' son, who was driving the vehicle when the accident occurred, did not have permission to drive the vehicle, and therefore the son was not an insured under the owners' insurance policy. Metro. Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. v. McCall, 261 Ga. App. 92, 581 S.E.2d 651 (2003).

Parent who filed a wrongful death action against an unidentified driver after a child's body was found by the side of a road presented no evidence that the unidentified driver was negligent or that the driver's actions caused the decedent's death, and the appellate court affirmed the trial court's judgment granting a motion for summary judgment, which was filed by an insurance company that provided uninsured motorist coverage. Dawkins v. Doe, 263 Ga. App. 737, 589 S.E.2d 303 (2003).

Trial court erroneously granted summary judgment to an UM insurer because the injured claimant, who was also a federal employee, fell under the purview of federal compensation law; thus, under these federal provisions, the medical benefits insurer and the workers' compensation insurer had subrogation liens and were able to enforce the liens upon the injured party's receipt of a settlement from the liable third party, regardless of Georgia's requirement that such action be preceded by a determination that the injured person had been fully compensated. Thurman v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 278 Ga. 162, 598 S.E.2d 448 (2004).

Insured who tried to recover damages for injuries the insured sustained in a motor vehicle accident in Florida, but who alleged that the insured's claim was denied because the insured's did not have the right to sue under Florida's no-fault statute, was entitled to collect uninsured motorist benefits from the insured's own insurance company, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 33-7-11. However, the trial court, which heard the insured's action against, erred when the court denied the company's motion for summary judgment on the insured's claim seeking penalties and attorney fees, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 33-4-6, because the case presented a unique issue of law and there was no evidence that the company acted in bad faith when the company denied the insured's claim. Ga. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Williams, 266 Ga. App. 540, 597 S.E.2d 430 (2004).

Insurance coverage on dealer "loaner" vehicle. — Nothing required an insurer to provide excess insurance on a "loaner" car above the statutory minimum limits but the law required excess coverage in an amount not less than the limits; summary judgment reducing coverage below the limits was error. Hendrix v. Universal Underwriters Ins. Co., 263 Ga. App. 589, 588 S.E.2d 761 (2003).

Death while pursued by emergency vehicles. — Trial court erred in denying summary judgment to a city and the city's employees in a wrongful death action; a police officer's actions were not the proximate cause of the decedent's death during a crash with a vehicle that was fleeing from the police at high speed, and therefore O.C.G.A. § 40-6-6 did not apply. City of Pooler v. Edenfield, 263 Ga. App. 278, 587 S.E.2d 408 (2003).

Punitive damages may not be recovered if there is no entitlement to compensatory damages; because a homeowner had settled the property damage claim arising from an incident in which a truck struck the homeowner's house, and was not allowed to recover under the bodily injury provision of the policy since the homeowner was not injured in and did not witness the incident, summary judgment for an insurance company in the company's declaratory judgment action addressing the company's liability on the homeowner's punitive damage claim was affirmed. Flynn v. Allstate Ins. Co., 268 Ga. App. 222, 601 S.E.2d 739 (2004).

Insurer coverage. — An insurer was entitled to summary judgment in the insurer's declaratory judgment action because the insurer's policy did not cover an injured bar patron's claims against an insured, an investigations and security firm that serviced the bar, because the subject policy's clear exclusions for assault, battery, and punitive damages did not conflict with a security guard endorsement. Capitol Indem., Inc. v. Brown, 260 Ga. App. 863, 581 S.E.2d 339 (2003).

State benefit health plan claims administrator was properly granted summary judgment in an action challenging the administrator's review of a physician's corporation's health plan claims because, in part, the administrator had no duty to produce the administrator's policies absent a confidential relationship, which was not established merely by the corporation's trust and confidence in the administrator. Brown v. Blue Cross Blue Shield of Ga., Inc., 260 Ga. App. 796, 581 S.E.2d 636 (2003).

In a declaratory judgment action, the insurer was entitled to summary judgment on the parents' claim since the homeowners policy issued to the insured specifically excluded coverage for injury to the parents' son, who was shot and killed by the insured's son during an aggravated assault at a pizza restaurant; the exclusion authorized the trial court to find, as a matter of law, that a reasonable person in the insured's son's circumstances could expect bodily harm to result from the son's criminal actions. Tripp v. Allstate Ins. Co., 262 Ga. App. 93, 584 S.E.2d 692 (2003).

Absent an insurance clause showing mutual intent for a subcontractor's insurance to cover losses to the store and contractor, an indemnity clause was statutorily void and unenforceable; thus, summary judgment was properly denied. Federated Dep't Stores v. Superior Drywall & Acoustical, 264 Ga. App. 857, 592 S.E.2d 485 (2003).

Summary judgment in favor of cities and an insured in a declaratory judgment action brought by the insured's insurer was reversed; the underlying claim by the cities against the insured was for loss of grant monies arising from the alleged improper preparation of applications that did not fit into the policy definition of a property loss, and since the policy also excluded losses related to professional services, the insurer had no duty to defend. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. City of Rome, 268 Ga. App. 320, 601 S.E.2d 810 (2004).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-56(c) to an insured in the insured's breach of insurance contract claim against an insurer for the insurer's failure to pay a claim, arising from water and sewage damage to the insured's offices; heavy rains had seeped into a large pit that was excavated by the city, which then flowed into a pipe that overflowed into the insured's office, and such water was not within the well-accepted definition of "surface water," such that the policy's surface water exclusion was inapplicable. Selective Way Ins. Co. v. Litig. Tech., Inc., 270 Ga. App. 38, 606 S.E.2d 68 (2004).

In a mother's suit claiming that an insurer breached an insurance contract with the son by failing to defend the son in the mother's suit brought against the son arising out of a car accident occurring when the son was driving the mother's car, summary judgment was properly granted on the issue of insurance coverage under the policy, which obligated the insurer to pay damages for which the insured was legally liable because of damages arising out of an accident involving the insured car or a car which was not owned by a resident of the insured's household because, while the mother and the son lived in the same house, this was not determinative of the question of whether the mother was a resident of the son's household. The mother's proof showed that she and her son maintained distinct households under different management, in that they each were responsible for separate parts of the house, did not cook or clean for each other, and came and went independently; and the insurer offered no evidence to counter the mother's proof. Southern Gen. Ins. Co. v. Foy, 279 Ga. App. 385, 631 S.E.2d 419 (2006).

Because the trial court erred in construing an insurer's policy to its insured, and a fact question remained as to an issue of slander, summary judgment was inappropriately entered; but, the insurer was not required to provide specific, unambiguous reasons for denying coverage in its reservation of rights letter to the insured. Southern Gen. Ins. Co. v. Foy, 279 Ga. App. 385, 631 S.E.2d 419 (2006).

Because: (1) resolution of the issues raised in a petition filed by the Georgia Insurers Insolvency Pool were dependent upon a determination by the State Board of Workers' Compensation of the amount, if any, an injured employee was entitled to recover in the pending, unresolved claim for workers' compensation; and (2) after a notice to controvert was filed, the Board never held a hearing or issued any findings with regard to liability for the claim, the trial court lacked subject matter jurisdiction to determine the applicability of earlier provisions of O.C.G.A. § 33-36-14(a) to the Pool's claim against an insurer, after another carrier became insolvent, and hence, grant the Pool summary judgment in its declaratory judgment action. Royal Indem. Co. v. Ga. Insurers Insolvency Pool, 284 Ga. App. 787, 644 S.E.2d 279 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 639 (Ga. 2007).

Intent. — In a declaratory judgment action by an insurance company asking for an interpretation of an insurance policy that excludes coverage for injuries expected or intended by the insured, because the insured, while intoxicated, shot and killed his son and daughter-in-law, the question of intent or expectation uniquely fits the pattern of those issues of material fact that are not appropriate issues for summary judgment but are decided by the trier of fact. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Morgan, 258 Ga. 276, 368 S.E.2d 509 (1988).

Summary judgment in corporate actions. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a president of a corporation in the president's petition to remove a lis pendens, which alleged that the president purchased property with embezzled funds as the shareholder's allegation was used to support the shareholder's tort claims of, inter alia, conversion and breach of fiduciary duty; thus, a lis pendens was unauthorized and the president could not be charged with notice of it. Hudson v. Dobson, 260 Ga. App. 473, 580 S.E.2d 268 (2003).

Summary judgment in estate matters. — In an action for conversion of the estate's assets relating to a joint account created under O.C.G.A. § 7-1-813 between the executrix and a half-sister, given that some evidence existed that the decedent's purpose in establishing a joint account between the executrix of decedent's estate and the half-sister was for the decedent's convenience, and not to effect a gift, summary judgment was erroneously granted to the half-sister. Gray v. Benton, 280 Ga. App. 339, 634 S.E.2d 86 (2006).

Summary judgment in matters involving a trust. — In a declaratory judgment action between a settlor's offspring regarding an agreement signed by the settlor to reform a trust, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to one sibling over the other, upholding the agreement as validly reforming the trust in order to fully effectuate the settlor's intent that the offspring divide the remainder of a trust's proceeds equally between them, per stirpes; moreover, the trial court correctly ruled that the prevailing sibling could not rely on the defenses of laches and unclean hands as such were equitable doctrines not applicable in a declaratory judgment action. Briden v. Clement, 283 Ga. App. 626, 642 S.E.2d 318 (2007).

Laches. — If it cannot be said as a matter of law that a plaintiff was dilatory in asserting a claim, the defense of laches is a question for the jury, and summary judgment cannot be granted for the defendant on such issue. Davidson Mineral Properties, Inc. v. Gifford-Hill & Co., 235 Ga. 176, 219 S.E.2d 133 (1975).

Mandamus actions. — Fact that O.C.G.A. § 9-6-20 et seq. provides rules under which mandamus actions shall be tried would not make O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 inapplicable in mandamus actions because there is no express conflict between the sections. Harrison v. Weiner, 226 Ga. 93, 172 S.E.2d 840 (1970).

Matters in abatement and in bar. — Motion for summary judgment applies to the merits of a claim or to matters in bar, but not to matters in abatement. Boyd Motors, Inc. v. Radcliff, 128 Ga. App. 15, 195 S.E.2d 291 (1973); Larwin Mtg. Investors v. Delta Equities, Inc., 129 Ga. App. 769, 201 S.E.2d 187 (1973).

Defenses enumerated in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b), except for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, are matters in abatement, which are not within the scope of summary judgment procedure. Boyd Motors, Inc. v. Radcliff, 128 Ga. App. 15, 195 S.E.2d 291 (1973); Ogden Equip. Co. v. Talmadge Farms, Inc., 232 Ga. 614, 208 S.E.2d 459 (1974); International Indem. Co. v. Blakey, 161 Ga. App. 99, 289 S.E.2d 303 (1982); Kirkpatrick v. Mackey, 162 Ga. App. 876, 293 S.E.2d 461 (1982).

Motion for summary judgment cannot be granted on matters in abatement. Ogden Equip. Co. v. Talmadge Farms, Inc., 232 Ga. 614, 208 S.E.2d 459 (1974); Carlson v. Hall County Planning Comm'n, 233 Ga. 286, 210 S.E.2d 815 (1974); Walsey v. Lockhart, 136 Ga. App. 624, 222 S.E.2d 141 (1975); C.W. Matthews Contracting Co. v. Capital Ford Truck Sales, Inc., 149 Ga. App. 354, 254 S.E.2d 426 (1979); Primas v. Saulsberry, 152 Ga. App. 88, 262 S.E.2d 251 (1979); Safwat v. United States Leasing Corp., 154 Ga. App. 341, 268 S.E.2d 395 (1980); Bennett v. Fine Jewelers Atl. Guild, Inc., 194 Ga. App. 377, 390 S.E.2d 625 (1990).

Summary judgment involves an adjudication on the merits, and should not be used in ruling on a dilatory plea or plea in abatement. National Heritage Corp. v. Mount Olive Mem. Gardens, Inc., 244 Ga. 240, 260 S.E.2d 1 (1979).

Matters in abatement are raised and resolved under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12, and are not proper subjects for a motion for summary judgment. Hight v. Blankenship, 199 Ga. App. 744, 406 S.E.2d 241 (1991).

As a determination whether compliance with the ante litem notice requirement of O.C.G.A. § 36-33-5 was met by property owners who asserted claims against a municipality was properly considered a matter in abatement, which should have been raised in a motion to dismiss under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12, flexibility by the court was required; accordingly, consideration of the matter within the summary judgment context, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, was proper because matters outside of the pleadings, including the owners' depositions, were considered. Davis v. City of Forsyth, 275 Ga. App. 747, 621 S.E.2d 495 (2005).

ically 42 U.S.C. § 11112(a)(4), a professional review action is presumed to have met the requisite conditions for immunity unless the presumption is rebutted by a preponderance of the evidence; thus, in ruling on a motion for summary judgment under the Act, the trial court is required to determine, viewing the facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, whether a reasonable jury could conclude that the plaintiff has shown by a preponderance of the evidence that the peer review activities did not meet the standards set forth in the Act. Patton v. St. Francis Hosp., 260 Ga. App. 202, 581 S.E.2d 551 (2003).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment for a hospital in an action arising out of the refusal to reinstate a doctor's staff privileges, finding that the hospital had immunity under the Health Care Quality Improvement Act of 1986 (HCQIA), 42 U.S.C. § 11101 et seq., because: (1) letters allowing the doctor to resume seeing patients only if the doctor complied with the doctor's psychiatrist's plan were not peer review action; (2) if the letters were peer review action, the doctor was afforded adequate notice and fair process; (3) the doctor failed to rebut the presumption that the peer review process was reasonable; (4) the doctor failed to rebut the presumption that the doctor was afforded adequate notice and a hearing; and (5) any violation of the hospital's bylaws did not necessarily mean that the doctor was denied adequate notice and a hearing under the HCQIA. Taylor v. Kennestone Hosp., Inc., 266 Ga. App. 14, 596 S.E.2d 179 (2004).

Medical malpractice. — If a motion for summary judgment is supported by evidence that there is no genuine issue for trial, as the medical doctor performed the entire procedure in a medically accepted and recognized manner and in so doing exercised the degree of care and skill that is generally employed by physicians under similar circumstances, it would be necessary that the plaintiff offer evidence showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. Swindell v. St. Joseph's Hosp., 161 Ga.

App. 290, 291 S.E.2d 1 (1982); Bieling v. Battle, 209 Ga. App. 874, 434 S.E.2d 719 (1993).

Trial court erred in denying the appellants' motion for summary judgment on the patient's second action for medical malpractice, breach of contract, and failure to secure informed consent as the first action was against the same defendant, it was an adjudication on the merits, and the patient had a full and fair opportunity to litigate the first action. Simon v. Gunby, 260 Ga. App. 3, 578 S.E.2d 482 (2003).

Summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 was properly granted to physicians in a medical malpractice action against the physicians in which the plaintiff patient claimed radiation damage to an arm that the doctors did not reveal until the expiration of the limitations period of O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(a); however, the record revealed that the physicians had repeatedly informed the patient that such damage was one of the possible causes of the arm pain and there was no fraud found on the physicians' part which would have extended the time period pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-3-96. Price v. Currie, 260 Ga. App. 526, 580 S.E.2d 299 (2003).

Summary judgment was granted pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) to a hospital in an action brought by parents who alleged that the mother had received negligent pre-natal care at the hospital, which resulted in permanent injuries to her son; the obstetricians and residents who rendered care to the mother were found to be in private practice and were independent contractors who were not subject to any control over their judgments or decisions by the hospital, rather than employees of the hospital and, accordingly, there was no liability on the part of the hospital for the contractor's actions. Anderson v. Medical Ctr., Inc., 260 Ga. App. 549, 580 S.E.2d 633 (2003).

In a medical malpractice suit decided in favor of a doctor on the doctor's motion for summary judgment, res ipsa loquitur did not apply in a malpractice suit as an unintended result did not raise an inference of negligence; it was presumed that medical or surgical services were performed in an ordinarily skillful manner.

Oakes v. Magat, 263 Ga. App. 165, 587 S.E.2d 150 (2003).

O.C.G.A. § 31-9-6.1(c) squarely places the responsibility for obtaining consent to surgical procedures on the shoulders of the “responsible physician,” who is defined in O.C.G.A. § 31-9-6.1(h) as the physician who performs the procedure or the physician under whose direct orders the procedure is performed by a nonphysician; an assisting physician was not responsible for obtaining a patient’s consent for a leg-nerve surgery, and summary judgment for the doctor in a malpractice case brought by the patient was affirmed. Duke v. Bachner, 266 Ga. App. 109, 596 S.E.2d 414 (2004).

Statute of repose in a medical malpractice claim ran from the date the negligent or wrongful act or omission occurred without regard to when the injury arising from the negligent act or omission occurred or was discovered; thus, a malpractice claim filed more than five years after the date on which the last negligent or wrongful act or omission attributable to the doctor and the medical center could have occurred was time barred, and summary judgment in favor of a doctor and a medical center in a patient’s malpractice claim was affirmed. Christian v. Atha, 267 Ga. App. 186, 598 S.E.2d 895 (2004).

Trial court properly granted a surgeon’s summary judgment motion and held that a patient’s medical malpractice suit was barred by the two-year statute of limitations set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(a), which began to run at the time of the alleged misdiagnosis, when a surgeon advised the patient that the patient did not have breast cancer but recommended close follow-up care; the case did not fall within the limited exception for subsequent injury cases as the patient’s symptoms worsened over time. Harrison v. Daly, 268 Ga. App. 280, 601 S.E.2d 771 (2004).

In a negligence action filed by a decedent’s administrator, summary judgment was properly granted to a doctor and a clinic for the post-op treatment of the decedent as: (1) both the doctor and the clinic remained immune from suit under O.C.G.A. § 51-1-29.1; (2) the doctor’s treatment of the decedent’s complications immediately following the decedent’s surgery did not change the voluntary nature of the treatment as a whole; (3) it was reasonable to expect that a physician would continue to treat a patient following surgery; and (4) the appeals court viewed the doctor’s voluntary treatment of the decedent as a whole, not divided into categories of preoperative, operative, and post-operative; moreover, because no evidence was presented that either the doctor or the clinic was a “charitable institution,” and O.C.G.A. § 51-1-29.1 provided no such exception, waiver of any common-law charitable immunity through the doctor’s procurement of liability insurance did not apply. Wells v. Rogers, 281 Ga. App. 473, 636 S.E.2d 171 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 101 (Ga. 2007).

Because a catheter intentionally placed in a patient’s body was not a “foreign object” as contemplated by O.C.G.A. § 9-3-72, and the fact that the catheter might have been negligently placed did not alter this finding, absent evidence of a doctor’s fraud or concealment of the fraud, summary judgment in a patient’s medical malpractice suit was properly granted to a doctor and a clinic as the applicable two-year statute of limitation had expired by the time the action was filed. Pogue v. Goodman, 282 Ga. App. 385, 638 S.E.2d 824 (2006).

Trial court erred in denying partial summary judgment on a patient’s medical malpractice and ordinary negligence claims, when, given evidence that the patient suffered an injury arising out of the misdiagnosis in January of 1999, when the patient was first seen by the doctor manifesting continuous symptoms of a moderate B-12 deficiency and the doctor failed to make the diagnosis and provide treatment, and the patient failed to file an action within the two years; but, because the patient’s ordinary negligence and breach of fiduciary duty claims were essentially malpractice claims, subject to the same limitations period, summary judgment as to these claims was upheld. Stafford-Fox v. Jenkins, 282 Ga. App. 667, 639 S.E.2d 610 (2006).

tient's medical malpractice action, such as was upheld based on the expiration of the statute of limitation and rejection of the continuous treatment doctrine by the Supreme Court of Georgia and because the exception for a subsequent injury did not apply. Bousset v. Walker, 285 Ga. App. 102, 645 S.E.2d 593 (2007).

In a medical malpractice action, because the record on appeal contained evidence creating a genuine issue of material fact as to the proximate cause of a patient's injuries, the trial court erred in granting a hospital summary judgment; moreover, the appeals court declined to hear the hospital's claim that the patient failed to comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1. Renz v. Northside Hosp., Inc., 285 Ga. App. 882, 648 S.E.2d 186 (2007).

Trial court erred in granting a medical clinic's motion for summary judgment in a patient's medical malpractice action and in finding that an affidavit provided by a patient's expert did not sufficiently establish causation as the expert specifically explained the precautions that should have been taken by the employee administering a shot to the patient, and stated that the failure to take these precautions proximately caused the patient's injury; moreover, given the expert's past relevant experience as a nurse, the expert was competent to provide an opinion in the case. Allen v. Family Med. Ctr., P.C., 287 Ga. App. 522, 652 S.E.2d 173 (2007).

Because a medical care provider failed to assert an available defense in the underlying action which would have absolved the provider from any liability and prevented a default judgment from entering against the provider, the trial court did not err in entering summary judgment against the provider on the provider's claims for contribution and indemnity. Emergency Professionals of Atlanta, P.C. v. Watson, 288 Ga. App. 473, 654 S.E.2d 434 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 407 (Ga. 2008).

In a medical malpractice action, because the undisputed evidence showed that both the personal injury claims and a later-added wrongful death claim were timely filed, both in terms of O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71 and the relevant statute of repose, the doctors sued were properly denied summary judgment as to those claims. Cleaveland v. Gannon, 288 Ga. App. 875, 655 S.E.2d 662 (2007), aff'd, 284 Ga. 376, 667 S.E.2d 366 (2008).

In a couple's medical malpractice action, because: (1) the couple failed to follow the court's case management orders, which the couple selected and consented to; (2) the couple's only expert was properly excluded as a rebuttal witness; and (3) the couple failed to present any evidence of causation, the trial court properly entered summary judgment against the couple. Thomas v. Peachtree Orthopaedic Clinic, P.C., 290 Ga. App. 869, 660 S.E.2d 758 (2008), cert. denied, No. S08C1373, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 915 (Ga. 2008).

In a medical malpractice action, because the suing couple's failure to faithfully engage in discovery could not be remedied by the exclusion of probative trial evidence, specifically, the testimony from the couple's expert witness, the trial court erred in entering summary judgment against the couple. Hart v. Northside Hosp., Inc., 291 Ga. App. 208, 661 S.E.2d 576 (2008).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to an eye doctor and a corporation as even though the type of eye surgery performed on the patient made the patient more vulnerable to an eye infection and even though an eye infection caused the patient's loss of sight, the patient was unable to show the medical malpractice element of causation since the patient did not show that anything the doctor did, or failed to do, caused the eye infection. Berrell v. Hamilton, 260 Ga. App. 892, 581 S.E.2d 398 (2003).

Doctor's liability for certifying patient "safe" for activity. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a doctor on the administrator's wrongful death suit alleging that the doctor negligently certified the truck driver to drive a truck even though the doctor knew or should have known that the truck driver had a pre-existing heart condition as the truck driver three months later died while driving the truck which then struck the decedent's vehicle and killed the decedent; even giving the administrator the benefit of all reasonable doubt, and construing the evidence and inferences in the administrator's favor, the doctor was entitled to summary judgment because the doctor did not have the legal authority to restrain the truck driver for the benefit of the motoring public and, thus, the doctor did not owe a duty to the decedent. Houston v. Bedgood, 263 Ga. App. 139, 588 S.E.2d 437 (2003).

Apparent authority of doctor working in emergency room. — Trial court erred in granting the hospital's motion for summary judgment on the issue of whether an emergency room doctor was an apparent employee of the hospital since the evidence failed to show that the hospital had sufficiently notified the patient that the doctor was not the hospital's employee by allegedly posting a sign or including a paragraph in a two page document so indicating. Cooper v. Binion, 266 Ga. App. 709, 598 S.E.2d 6 (2004).

Hospital's liability for doctor's actions. — Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the hospital on the issue of whether the doctor was an actual employee of the hospital because evidence showed, inter alia, that the doctor was hired to perform a service rather than accomplish a task, the hospital supplied the equipment used by the doctor, the hospital retained the right to control the doctor's hours of work, the doctor was paid by the hour, the doctor spent all working hours at the hospital, the hospital handled all the billing of patients, and the hospital paid the doctor's malpractice insurance. Cooper v. Binion, 266 Ga. App. 709, 598 S.E.2d 6 (2004).

Negligent credentialing. — Surviving spouse's negligent credentialing suit against a hospital was properly dismissed on summary judgment as the undisputed evidence showed that the surgeon did not perform the prostatic cryosurgery negligently. The surviving spouse's own expert witness affirmatively stated that the rectal injury, which caused the deceased spouse's death, was not the result of the surgeon's negligence during the cryosurgery but was a complication that could have occurred during any prostate cancer surgery and in the absence of any negligence, and that the surgeon's negligence did not occur until five weeks later, during the surgeon's treatment of the deceased spouse following an emergency hospitalization. Ladner v. Northside Hosp., Inc., 314 Ga. App. 136, 723 S.E.2d 450 (2012).

Intentional infliction of emotional distress by medical staff. — Trial court's grant of summary judgment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), to a hospital was proper in an action by a patient and her husband, alleging intentional infliction of emotional distress because there was no evidence to support a finding of intent or reckless disregard by an emergency room nurse, who had unsuccessfully attempted to search through the patient's clothing when she came in suffering a miscarriage; the fact that when the wife was home doing laundry, the intact fetus, still in the fetal sac, fell out of her pants could have been sufficient to support a finding that the nurse was negligent, but not more. Roddy v. Tanner Med. Ctr., Inc., 262 Ga. App. 202, 585 S.E.2d 175 (2003).

Legal malpractice. — Trial court properly granted partial summary judgment to an attorney, the law firm partners, and the law firm on a client's breach of fiduciary duty and fraud claims as the claims were merely duplicative of the client's legal malpractice claim. Furthermore, even if the claims were not duplicative, the client's evidence that the attorney charged a grossly excessive fee, charged the client for estate planning software that the attorney retained for general use, failed to inform the client about the attorney's concerns, and misrepresented the attorney's ability would not have survived summary judgment. Griffin v. Fowler, 260 Ga. App. 443, 579 S.E.2d 848 (2003).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the closing attorney on the alleged client's claims for legal malpractice and fraud as genuine issues about whether an attorney-client relationship existed and whether misrepresentations had been made precluded summary judgment, but the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the closing attorney on the alleged client's Georgia Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, O.C.G.A. § 16-14-1 et seq., claim because the alleged client did not show the required “pattern of racketeering” activity. Mays v. Askin, 262 Ga. App. 417, 585 S.E.2d 735 (2003).

Because the evidence showed that an attorney continued to represent a brother and sister as co-executors of an estate after conflicts of interest arose, that the attorney used information obtained from the brother to bring a collection action against the sister, and that the attorney retained another attorney to investigate more of the sister’s debts, material issues of fact existed that precluded summary judgment on the sister’s claims against the attorney for legal malpractice, breach of fiduciary duty, fraud, and conspiracy. Traub v. Washington, 264 Ga. App. 541, 591 S.E.2d 382 (2003).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to an attorney after a client filed a legal malpractice claim against the attorney more than four years and 11 months after the attorney withdrew from representing the client in a bankruptcy matter as no genuine issue of material fact existed but that the client’s claim was barred by the four-year limitations period and, thus, any act of malpractice on the attorney’s part giving rise to the claim had to have occurred more than four years before the client filed the client’s claim. Shores v. Troglin, 260 Ga. App. 696, 580 S.E.2d 659 (2003).

Attorneys’ summary judgment motion in a legal malpractice case was properly denied as there was evidence that a nurse in the injured party’s underlying negligence case deviated from the standard of care, and that but for the attorneys’ negligence in dismissing the negligence case, intending to refile the case later, despite the passing of the time period limited by the statute of repose, the injured party would have won the underlying negligence case. Blackwell v. Potts, 266 Ga. App. 702, 598 S.E.2d 1 (2004).

In a legal malpractice action, because the attorneys’ failure to exercise due diligence in procuring service of process constituted professional negligence, resulting in a loss of their clients’ rights to pursue a claim against their own UM carrier, and conflicting evidence was presented as to the issue of whether the clients’ rights under O.C.G.A. § 9-2-61 to pursue a claim against their own uninsured motorist insurance carrier were impeded by their attorneys’ actions, summary judgment was reversed. Butler v. Gary, Williams, Parenti, Finney, Lewis, McManus, Watson & Sperando, P.L., 280 Ga. App. 207, 633 S.E.2d 614 (2006).

While an attorney was shielded from liability as to the issue of whether a breach occurred as to the duty of care owed to the clients by failing to verify the complaint pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1(b), opting instead to dismiss the complaint and refile the complaint as a renewal action, summary judgment as to the issues of harm to the clients and a breach of the duty of ordinary care as a result of the attorney’s failure to advise was reversed. Chatham Orthopaedic Surgery Ctr., LLC v. White, 283 Ga. App. 10, 640 S.E.2d 633 (2006).

Despite an attorney’s claim that privity of contract with a decedent’s widow was lacking, because the evidence supported a finding that the widow was an intended beneficiary of the decedent’s will, the attorney owed the widow a similar duty to the one owed to the decedent, as the attorney’s client, resulting in the attorney’s liability upon a breach of that duty, making partial summary judgment in the widow’s favor proper. Young v. Williams, 285 Ga. App. 208, 645 S.E.2d 624 (2007).

In a legal malpractice action, despite the fact that the trial court held that the client’s failure to prove proximate causation supported an order granting summary judgment to the attorney and that attorney’s law firm, the appeals court nevertheless held that summary judgment was properly granted to the attorney, under the “right for any reason” rule, as the suit was untimely filed. Moreover, the client’s argument that the attorney could have amended the suit to add a damages claim up until the time of a pre-trial order, and that this later failure to act should be considered the triggering date for the malpractice action, was unavailing, as the attorney's failure to amend constituted a failure to avoid the effect of the earlier breach and a failure to mitigate damages, but was not a failure inflicting a new harm, thus triggering a new limitations period. Duke Galish, LLC v. Arnall Golden Gregory, LLP, 288 Ga. App. 75, 653 S.E.2d 791 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 212 (Ga. 2008).

Attorney contract claim reversed.

— Trial court's denial of a client's summary judgment motion was reversed as the oral contract between an attorney and the client was unenforceable in that: (1) there was no definition of what was to be considered the ultimate or logical conclusion of any given case assigned to the attorney, nor were there standards for determining if the attorney "didn't do the job"; (2) there was no stated duration of the agreement, and the public policy of Georgia was clear that, absent a definite term of employment, the contract was terminable at will under O.C.G.A. § 34-7-1; and (3) the attorney's claimed damages, the attorney's hourly rate times the number of hours it would have taken the attorney to bring each case to its ultimate or logical conclusion, were speculative and not objectively ascertainable from the oral contract. Furthermore, as to an attorney's breach of contract claim, the trial court failed to consider the public policy issues involved in the attorney-client relationship and should have granted summary judgment to the client; in Georgia, because of the fiduciary relationship between an attorney and a client, the client had the absolute right to discharge the attorney and terminate the relationship at any time, even without cause, and the client's freedom in ending the attorney-client relationship without financial penalty was favored over the attorney's right to enforce the damages provision in the attorney's retainer contract because requiring a client to pay damages for terminating the client's attorney's employment contract eviscerated the client's absolute right to terminate. Ga. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Croley, 263 Ga. App. 659, 588 S.E.2d 840 (2003).

Ratification. — When a company sued the company's accountants regarding the accountants' participation in a sale of the company's assets, summary judgment should have been granted in favor of the accountants because the company ratified the actions of the company's employee who had apparent authority to conduct the sale when the company retained the proceeds of the sale and accepted a return of the assets sold in settlement of another lawsuit. R.W. Holdco, Inc. v. Johnson, 267 Ga. App. 859, 601 S.E.2d 177 (2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted to an attorney in a former criminal client's legal malpractice action because the former client failed to establish any grounds to support the client's allegations of ineffective assistance and was merely relitigating the client's denied habeas petitions on which the attorney had represented the client. Cornwell v. Kirwan, 270 Ga. App. 147, 606 S.E.2d 1 (2004).

Denial of summary judgment affirmed.

— Trial court's denial of a client's summary judgment motion was affirmed as to an attorney's conversion claim because the issue of the attorney's consent to the removal of files from the attorney's office was not clear-cut. Ga. Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Croley, 263 Ga. App. 659, 588 S.E.2d 840 (2003).

Negligence. — Even though the facts in the case are uncontradicted and uncontroverted, if the facts are such that there is room for a difference of opinion between reasonable persons as to whether or not negligence should be inferred, the right to draw the inference is peculiarly within the exclusive province of the jury. Yeager v. Jacobs, 111 Ga. App. 358, 141 S.E.2d 837 (1965) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

It is for a jury to decide in a negligence case whether the alleged acts constituted negligence and whether or not the acts were the proximate cause of the plaintiff's injuries, and the mere fact that it is shown without dispute that the plaintiff was guilty of certain acts that could be characterized as negligent would not authorize a grant of summary judgment for the defendant if reasonable minds could differ as to whether the plaintiff's acts amounted to negligence. Yeager v. Jacobs, 111 Ga. App. 358, 141 S.E.2d 837 (1965) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Questions necessitating a decision as to whether the facts show that lack of ordinary care for one's own safety, which will bar recovery, or only that comparative negligence, which will reduce it, are generally for the jury. Stukes v. Trowell, 119 Ga. App. 651, 168 S.E.2d 616 (1969).

In a negligence case, it must be plainly and palpably shown that the defendants in no way contributed to the proximate cause of damages incurred in order for the trial court to sustain a motion for summary judgment in their favor. Chastain v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 122 Ga. App. 90, 176 S.E.2d 487 (1970).

Issues of negligence, including the related issues of assumption of risk, lack of ordinary care for one's own safety, lack of ordinary care in avoiding the consequences of another's negligence, and comparative negligence, are ordinarily not susceptible of summary adjudication, whether for or against the plaintiff or the defendant, but must be resolved by trial. Reed v. Batson-Cook Co., 122 Ga. App. 803, 178 S.E.2d 728 (1970); Shuman Supply of Savannah, Inc. v. Skinner, 128 Ga. App. 431, 197 S.E.2d 152 (1973); North v. Toco Hills, Inc., 160 Ga. App. 116, 286 S.E.2d 346 (1981); Fort v. Boone, 166 Ga. App. 290, 304 S.E.2d 465 (1983).

Negligence, diligence, and contributory negligence are not ordinarily susceptible of adjudication on summary judgment. Lockhart v. Walker, 124 Ga. App. 241, 183 S.E.2d 503 (1971).

Party who moves for summary judgment in a case premised on negligence has a considerable burden, and if the defendant is the movant, sometimes summary judgment may not be obtained even though a directed verdict could be secured at trial. Turner v. Noe, 127 Ga. App. 870, 195 S.E.2d 463 (1973).

Questions involving negligence, and especially those involving whether, under the circumstances, the defendant exercised ordinary care, are properly for the jury. Lockhart v. Beaird, 128 Ga. App. 7, 195 S.E.2d 292 (1973).

Questions of negligence as to cause and proximate cause, and as to what negligence, and whose negligence, constitutes proximate cause of damages in tort cases are generally solely for the jury, except in plain and palpable cases. Summers v. Milcon Corp., 134 Ga. App. 182, 213 S.E.2d 515 (1975).

Summary judgment will not usually be as feasible in negligence cases, when the standard of the reasonable person must be applied to conflicting testimony, as it is in other kinds of litigation, since even if there is no dispute as to the facts, it is usually for the jury to say whether the conduct in question met the standard of the reasonable person. Epps Air Serv., Inc. v. DeKalb County, 147 Ga. App. 195, 248 S.E.2d 300 (1978); Jones v. Crown Constr. Co., 152 Ga. App. 578, 263 S.E.2d 460 (1979).

Unless no other conclusion is permissible, questions of negligence are matters for jury resolution and are not ordinarily susceptible to summary adjudication. Epps Air Serv., Inc. v. DeKalb County, 147 Ga. App. 195, 248 S.E.2d 300 (1978).

Questions of negligence and proximate cause are peculiarly questions for the jury except in clear, plain, palpable, and undisputed cases. Only in the rare case in which there is an admission of liability or an indisputable fact situation that clearly establishes liability should summary judgment be granted. Lozynsky v. Hutchinson, 159 Ga. App. 715, 285 S.E.2d 70 (1981).

Negligence in the workplace. — In an action against the issuer of a property loss policy covering a boiler involved in an explosion, the defenses that the death of the decedent was the result of the negligence of others and that the decedent and the decedent's employer knew of the defective condition in the subject boiler and did not rely on inspections, did not require affirmative pleading and involved questions of fact, precluding a grant of partial summary judgment. Cleveland v. American Motorists Ins. Co., 163 Ga. App. 748, 295 S.E.2d 190 (1982).

If the facts conclusively show by plain, palpable, and undisputed evidence that the defendant was not at fault, including a case involving contentions of negligence, contributory negligence, or exercise of ordinary care for one's own safety, the case properly may be resolved as a matter of law through the vehicle of summary judgment. Fort v. Boone, 166 Ga. App. 290, 304 S.E.2d 465 (1983).

Issues of negligence, assumption of risk, contributory negligence, and comparative negligence are not susceptible of summary adjudication except in plain, palpable, and indisputable cases. Malvarez v. Georgia Power Co., 166 Ga. App. 498, 304 S.E.2d 542 (1983).

When issues of negligence, diligence, and contributory negligence are involved, it is necessary that such issues be resolved by a jury rather than by summary adjudication. Georgia Power Co. v. Knighton, 169 Ga. App. 416, 312 S.E.2d 872 (1984).

In an automotive negligence action, because the materials relied upon by the defendant pierced the plaintiff's pleadings, the plaintiff's failure to set forth specific facts showing there was a genuine issue for trial warranted an award of summary judgment for the defendant. Butler v. Huckabee, 209 Ga. App. 761, 434 S.E.2d 576 (1993).

In a negligence action, questions of proximate cause are peculiarly reserved for jury determination except in clear, plain, and undisputed cases. Coweta County v. Adams, 221 Ga. App. 868, 473 S.E.2d 558 (1996).

Because the plaintiff failed to present any evidence that raised a question of fact as to whether the defendant was negligent, the plaintiff's contentions regarding what might have happened disappeared in light of the uncontradicted witness testimony as to what did happen, and the trial court correctly granted summary judgment to the defendant. Etheredge v. Kersey, 236 Ga. App. 243, 510 S.E.2d 544 (1998).

Because the plaintiff in a negligence case failed to make a showing that the defendant's negligence caused the plaintiff's injuries, but could only speculate that a greasy substance caused the plaintiff to slip and fall, summary judgment was properly awarded to the defendant. Christopher v. Donna's Country Store, 236 Ga. App. 219, 511 S.E.2d 579 (1999).

Resolution of an employer's obligation to indemnify a manufacturer with regard to a claim brought by an employee did not turn on whether the employer was negligent but instead hinged on whether the manufacturer was solely negligent, and since the manufacturer submitted evidence creating a fact issue as to whether the employee failed to exercise ordinary care for the employee's own safety, the trial court erred when the court granted partial summary judgment to the employer on the manufacturer's contractual indemnification claim; the manufacturer failed to show that the employer did not adequately train the employee, so summary judgment as to that issue was affirmed, and the trial court did not err in denying partial summary judgment to the employer on the manufacturer's claim for a defense. Nat'l Gypsum v. Ploof Carriers Corp., 266 Ga. App. 565, 597 S.E.2d 597 (2004).

Even though later damage to a gas line left exposed in a home was an intervening act that led to a fatal gas fueled fire in the home, the liability of a corporation for the negligence of the corporation's employees in leaving the gas line exposed was still allowed if the employees could have reasonably anticipated or foreseen the intervening act as a consequence of the original negligence; as the evidence would have allowed a jury to find that the natural and probable consequence of leaving a line exposed was that the line would have been damaged, the issue of proximate cause should have been decided by a jury, and summary judgment in favor of the corporation in a wrongful death action brought by the decedent's children was reversed. Beasley v. A Better Gas Co., 269 Ga. App. 426, 604 S.E.2d 202 (2004).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment against an employee, in a third-party action against two contractors and a consultant, because: (1) the employee failed to present sufficient evidence that the alleged negligence by these third parties caused excessive clogging of the conveyor as the employee was injured and forced the employer to operate a conveyor without its cover; and (2) even if the employee established a factual issue as to whether these third parties were negligent in failing to install an emergency pull-cord on the conveyor or in failing to put a second light switch in the tunnel, the employee was still required to show that such was a proximate cause of the injury, which the employee failed to do; moreover, none of the third parties could have reasonably anticipated or foreseen that the employer would negligently seal off the access where the tunnel light switch was located and disregard the manufacturer's warnings and OSHA regulations by running the conveyor with a section of the cover removed. Cieplinski v. Caldwell Elec. Contrs., Inc., 280 Ga. App. 267, 633 S.E.2d 646 (2006).

Because any duty a construction site owner and various contractors had to warn a construction worker of the buried electrical lines was satisfied by notice to that worker's supervisor, who admitted to notice and knowledge of the buried lines, the trial court properly entered summary judgment against the worker in a negligence action filed against them as no other duties existed; moreover, the worker's denial as to being informed by the supervisor of the existence and location of the buried lines in the area worked on was neither relevant nor material to the issue of any duty owed to the worker, and was not a genuine issue of material fact that would have precluded summary judgment. McKinney v. Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga., 284 Ga. App. 250, 643 S.E.2d 736 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 497 (Ga. 2007).

Negligence from sporting event. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a professional baseball player and the player's team, and against a baseball fan, in the latter's negligence suit as the fan voluntarily assumed the risk of injury from an errantly thrown baseball, and thus failed to come forth with specific evidence giving rise to a triable issue of fact. Dalton v. Jones, 260 Ga. App. 791, 581 S.E.2d 360 (2003).

Contractor's negligence. — Trial court properly granted partial summary judgment to a contractor, the contractor's business, and a subcontractor under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) because: (1) a party was injured while attempting to put out a fire allegedly caused by the contractor's negligence, injuring the party's leg and foot; (2) despite being prescribed a removable cast and crutches, the injured party walked to the bathroom without the cast and crutches and fell, injuring the party's shoulder; (3) the treating physician testified that if the injured party was not experiencing pain, the injured party could walk short distances without the cast and crutches, however, the injured party had been experiencing pain; and (4) the injured party's own intervening act broke the chain of causation for the shoulder injury. Hynes v. Cagle, 264 Ga. App. 367, 590 S.E.2d 770 (2003).

Summary judgment is appropriate in negligence cases when, viewing all the facts and reasonable inferences from those facts in a light most favorable to the plaintiff, the evidence does not create a triable issue on the question of proximate cause; although the question of proximate cause is ordinarily for the jury to decide, plain and indisputable cases may be decided by the court as a matter of law and the inquiry in such cases is whether the causal connection between the defendant's conduct and the injury is too remote for the law to countenance a recovery. Brown v. All-Tech Inv. Group, Inc., 265 Ga. App. 889, 595 S.E.2d 517 (2004).

Negligence in auto accident. — Summary judgment was properly entered for a trucker in a third-party negligence action brought by a driver who turned into a truck to avoid a head-on collision while the driver was attempting a pass that was illegal under O.C.G.A. § 40-6-42; there was nothing to show that the trucker knew, or in the exercise of ordinary care should have known, that the driver was likely to attempt an illegal pass and the trucker was complying with the traffic regulations at the time of the accident. Rios v. Norsworthy, 266 Ga. App. 469, 597 S.E.2d 421 (2004).

Trial court correctly rejected a res ipsa loquitur claim brought against a car owner by a passenger injured in an accident that occurred when the car suffered a sudden steering malfunction since there was evidence that negligent driving may have caused the accident and since the malfunction could have occurred for reasons other than negligent maintenance or repair; however, the trial court erred in denying the car owner's summary judgment motion on the injured passenger's negligence claims since the car owner showed that the owner diligently repaired and maintained the car for over two years until the accident here, since the injured person's evidence did not support a reasonable inference that the malfunction resulted from negligent repair or maintenance and since negligence by the owner could not have been reasonably inferred solely because the owner had repaired and maintained a car that suffered a malfunction. Ken Thomas of Ga., Inc. v. Halim, 266 Ga. App. 570, 597 S.E.2d 615 (2004).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a vehicle driver on the vehicle passenger's negligence action against the driver and a second driver after the second driver pulled into the intersection and caused a collision with the vehicle driven by the first driver; the passenger could not show that the first driver breached any duty owed to the passenger or that the first driver's actions were the proximate cause of the passenger's injuries. McQuaig v. Tarrant, 269 Ga. App. 236, 603 S.E.2d 751 (2004).

Trial court properly denied a driver's summary judgment motion in a police officer's personal injury action against the driver as the officer's suit was not barred by the Fireman's Rule given that the alleged negligence that occurred to cause the accident which injured the officer had nothing to do with the officer's presence at the scene. Davis v. Pinson, 279 Ga. App. 606, 631 S.E.2d 805 (2006).

Conclusion of the expert's testimony as to the cause of an auto accident was speculative and could not support summary judgment as the credibility of the expert and the weight to be given to the opinion were matters to be addressed by the jury; moreover, if the expert's opinion was based upon inadequate knowledge, this fact did not mandate the exclusion of the opinion but, rather, presented a jury question as to the weight which should be assigned to the opinion. Layfield v. DOT, 280 Ga. 848, 632 S.E.2d 135 (2006).

In a negligence action stemming from an auto accident between a driver and a farmer's cow, the trial court properly granted summary judgment on the driver's claim for consequential damages, which was sought for a "ruined vacation," as the driver failed to show any evidence of a physical injury which was a necessary element on a claim premised on ordinary negligence. Hoeflick v. Bradley, 282 Ga. App. 123, 637 S.E.2d 832 (2006).

In a personal injury action arising from a child's injuries as a pedestrian, because conflicting testimony was presented to the trial court as to the issue of a driver's negligence as well as a parent's comparative negligence and apportionment of fault, if any, the trial court properly denied the driver's motion for summary judgment. Sutton v. Justiss, 290 Ga. App. 565, 659 S.E.2d 903 (2008).

In a negligence action arising from a vehicular accident, the trial court did not err in denying summary judgment to the driver of the other car and its owner, because the injured party's testimony supplied a reasonable basis to conclude that the injuries were more likely than not the result of the impact of the collision with the car's driver. Wilson v. Allen, 272 Ga. App. 172, 612 S.E.2d 39 (2005).

In a personal injury action against a vehicle's owner filed by an injured passenger based on the negligence of the vehicle's driver, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the owner, finding no liability under the family purpose doctrine because: (1) the driver was not a member of the owner's immediate household; and (2) the passenger failed to present competent evidence in response to the owner's summary judgment motion as neither hearsay or evidence of conjecture and speculation was sufficient. Patterson v. Lopez, 279 Ga. App. 840, 632 S.E.2d 736 (2006).

In a personal injury action filed by a husband and wife against a driver and that driver's employer, a negligent entrustment claim asserted against the employer was properly disposed of on summary judgment, but because the motion did not include both their negligent hiring and respondeat superior claims, and the husband and wife were not given full and fair notice that those claims were to be included in the motion, those claims also survived. Parker v. Silviano, 284 Ga. App. 278, 643 S.E.2d 819 (2007).

Applicability to Certain Actions,
Proceedings, Issues, and

Gross negligence. — Summary judgment was properly entered for the storage companies on an owner's gross negligence claim because: (1) assuming the owner's allegations were true, the storage companies' actions would only be ordinary negligence; (2) the storage companies owed no duty to the owner; and (3) the storage companies were not liable under Georgia's Good Samaritan Doctrine, as the companies did not assume a duty to conduct a vehicle count in the companies' operations manual, the owner was not aware of the manual until after the owner filed suit, and were the storage companies required to conduct a vehicle count, their failure to do so would not have increased the risk of theft as daily counts could only detect that a theft might have occurred after the theft had already occurred. Liberty v. Storage Trust Props., L.P., 267 Ga. App. 905, 600 S.E.2d 841 (2004).

Negligence by independent contractor. — Although exculpatory clauses signed by a pilot and a safety pilot who flew an aircraft company's plane and engaged in simulated aerial combat were not against public policy under O.C.G.A. § 1-3-7, they were not enforceable if the company was found to have been grossly negligent or to have engaged in willful misconduct, which was an issue to be resolved by the jury; additionally, a jury issue remained as to whether one of the pilots was an independent contractor for purposes of the company's liability under O.C.G.A. § 51-2-5(5), and, accordingly, a grant of summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 to the company was error. McFann v. Sky Warriors, Inc., 268 Ga. App. 750, 603 S.E.2d 7 (2004).

To establish a negligence claim, a plaintiff must come forward with specific facts establishing the elements of negligence as to each defendant, including proximate causation, and may not rest upon generalized allegations. Summary judgment was properly granted to a construction company and an architectural firm in an action alleging construction work near the intensive care unit where a patient was being treated stirred up a fatal fungus that caused the patient's death because: (1) it was not established that the construction company performed the work; (2) no medical evidence supported a finding that any alleged construction work was the proximate cause of the transmission of the fungus; (3) the architectural firm was not responsible for deciding when or how the work would be performed; and (4) the architectural firm was not responsible for the hospital's decisions regarding patient treatment, treatment locations, or timing of treatment. Piedmont Hosp., Inc. v. Reddick, 267 Ga. App. 68, 599 S.E.2d 20 (2004).

Negligence by a restaurant. — In a case brought by an injured person against a restaurant seeking damages arising from the injured person's slip and fall in a restroom, summary judgment for the restaurant was reversed; the restaurant failed to show that the restaurant lacked superior knowledge of the water condition in the restroom because the restaurant knew that a toilet in an adjacent restroom had overflowed onto the floor, a restaurant employee had pushed water from the adjoining restroom into the restroom at issue, the restaurant was notified by the injured person's sister that there was water everywhere, the sister's warning to the injured person stopped short of expressly extending to the inside of the restroom, and there was no warning cone placed at either the door of or inside the restroom in question. Belcher v. Ky. Fried Chicken Corp., 266 Ga. App. 556, 597 S.E.2d 604 (2004).

Summary judgment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), was properly granted to a restaurant by a trial court in an action by a restaurant patron, alleging emotional distress when the patron discovered two blood spots on the french fry container, fearing that the patron would contract HIV or hepatitis, because the patron failed to provide evidence of more than the patron's "fear" of exposure to the diseases; accordingly, the patron's claims for negligence, negligence per se, and breach of the implied warranty of merchantability, under O.C.G.A. §§ 11-2-314 and 51-1-23, failed due to the patron's failure to meet the damages requirement. Wilson v. J & L Melton, Inc., 270 Ga. App. 1, 606 S.E.2d 47 (2004).

Administrative errors as negligent act. — When a retired police officer, to whom a city paid more retirement benefits than the officer was entitled, sued the city for negligence when the city corrected the error, the city was entitled to summary judgment because the city had no authority to pay the officer more retirement benefits than were provided in the officer's retirement plan, and the officer's alleged "early retirement," based on a city clerk's representation that the officer would receive the higher benefit amount the officer was erroneously paid was not an injury for purposes of a negligence cause of action. Dodd v. City of Gainesville, 268 Ga. App. 43, 601 S.E.2d 352 (2004).

Assumption of risks. — Summary judgment in favor of a skate center was affirmed in a claim brought by a skater who was injured when another skater collided with the skater on an ice rink; it was found that the skater assumed the risks of ice skating, which, by the skater's own admissions, were known to the skater. Fowler v. Alpharetta Family Skate Ctr., LLC, 268 Ga. App. 329, 601 S.E.2d 818 (2004).

Negligence by railroad. — Appellate court erred in concluding that the trial court's denial of summary judgment to the town and railway on the estate representative's claim that they failed to keep a railroad right-of-way free of visual obstructions caused by overgrown vegetation should be reversed; genuine issues of material fact remained with respect to two separate, independent duties that they may have owed the decedent, whose tractor-trailer was struck by a train as the decedent drove the tractor-trailer across the town's railroad tracks, with one duty arising under the common law and one duty arising under O.C.G.A. § 32-6-51 if there was an absence of any governmental authorization that allegedly obstructed decedent's view. Fortner v. Town of Register, 278 Ga. 625, 604 S.E.2d 175 (2004).

§ 9-11-56(c) to a railroad in a negligence action by an injured car driver, whose car was hit in the rear by a drunk driver, propelling the driver's vehicle forward into a train, as the injured car driver was unable to establish proximate cause between the accident and the negligence of the railroad in maintaining the crossing; whether the reflectorized crossbuck was at the wrong height or not was irrelevant as the drunk driver's intervening act broke the chain of causation. CSX Transp., Inc. v. Deen, 269 Ga. App. 641, 605 S.E.2d 50 (2004).

Simple negligence by medical professionals. — While the trial court erred in granting summary judgment against a patient in a medical malpractice action based on a failure to attach an expert affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 because the complaint could be construed as alleging claims of ordinary negligence, to the extent the complaint could be read to allege professional malpractice claims, summary judgment was proper; moreover, there were instances in which actions performed by a professional were nevertheless not professional acts constituting professional malpractice, but, rather, were acts of simple negligence which would not require proof by expert evidence. Brown v. Tift County Hosp. Auth., 280 Ga. App. 847, 635 S.E.2d 184 (2006).

Farmer's negligence. — In a negligence action, summary judgment entered against a driver on a property damages claim was reversed, based on the collateral source rule, defendant farmer's failure to prove the existence of a subrogation agreement, and the issue of the farmer's liability to the driver, if any, was a jury question. Hoefflick v. Bradley, 282 Ga. App. 123, 637 S.E.2d 832 (2006).

Negligence of D.O.T. — Because alternative grounds in a negligence action arising out of the construction and resurfacing of a road, specifically, whether competent evidence showed that there were any defects in the roadway and whether the Department of Transportation's acceptance of the paving project exonerated the contractor, presented questions of fact for a jury to decide, the Supreme Court of Georgia's reversal of an order granting summary judgment to the Department and the contractor was adopted. Layfield v. DOT, 283 Ga. App. 151, 640 S.E.2d 618 (2006).

Trial court's summary judgment order in a negligence suit was properly entered against a couple, and in favor of a parent, as: (1) the family purpose doctrine did not apply to the couple's lawsuit; (2) the parent's child was not a member of the parent's household; and (3) upon a review of the record, after the parent came forward with sufficient evidence to support the motion, the couple as the non-moving party failed to come forward with evidence in opposition to the motion. Hicks v. Newman, 283 Ga. App. 352, 641 S.E.2d 589 (2007).

Because the undisputed facts presented before the trial court showed that the insurer of the leased premises owed no duty to those who leased the premises, and did not undertake any duty itself or through the insurer's claims adjuster, the trial court erred in denying the insurer's summary judgment motion on the lessees' negligence claim filed against the lessee. GuideOne Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hunter, 286 Ga. App. 852, 650 S.E.2d 424 (2007).

Negligence based on breach of duty. — In a lessee's negligence action against a lessor, because questions of fact remained regarding the lessor's breach of a duty owed to the lessee in reporting the recovery of a previously stolen rental trailer, and as to whether a breach of that duty proximately caused the lessee to become arrested for being in possession of stolen property and remained detained for a lengthy period of time, those issues could not be resolved as a matter of law; thus, an order granting the lessor summary judgment had to be reversed. Halilovic v. Penske Truck Leasing, 287 Ga. App. 215, 651 S.E.2d 160 (2007).

Negligence by court clerk. — Because a litigant could not utilize a theory known as "outsider reverse veil-piercing" to support a claim of negligence against a superior court clerk to satisfy a judgment owed to that litigant by a third party, and because the litigant failed to present any other viable proximate cause argument, the clerk was entitled to complete summary judgment as to the issue. Lollis v. Turner, 288 Ga. App. 419, 654 S.E.2d 229 (2007).

Negligence by bus accident. — In a negligence action between an injured bus passenger and a bus company, because the passenger failed to present evidence regarding the cause of the injuries the passenger sustained while walking in a field after disembarking from the bus after the bus had pulled over, and because the cause remained a matter of pure speculation or conjecture, the trial court had a duty to grant summary judgment to the bus company. Greyhound Lines, Inc. v. Williams, 290 Ga. App. 450, 659 S.E.2d 867 (2008).

Negligence in felling tree. — In a civil action for damages caused by felling of a tree under the doctrine of respondeat superior, the trial court erroneously denied the homeowner's motion for summary judgment as an independent contractor was hired to fell the tree and the homeowner had no control over the contractor's actions, and the act of felling the tree was not wrongful in itself; moreover, the homeowner's single suggestion or comment that the contractor could proceed with felling the tree as an entire unit did not necessarily have to be followed and did not create liability on the homeowner's part, but was simply confirming the freedom of the contractor to fell the tree as that contractor deemed appropriate. Whatley v. Sharma, 291 Ga. App. 228, 661 S.E.2d 590 (2008).

Good Samaritan law and negligence action. — In a negligence action filed by the parents on behalf of their injured son, because jury questions remained as to whether a doctor had to provide immediate "emergency care at the scene of an accident or emergency" to the son within the meaning of the Good Samaritan statute, O.C.G.A. § 51-1-29, as well as the employer-hospital's immunity from any vicarious liability, summary judgment was erroneously entered against the parents and in favor of both the doctor and the hospital. Gilley v. Hudson, 283 Ga. App. 878, 642 S.E.2d 898 (2007).

Premises liability to licensee. — Trial court properly entered summary judgment for a radio station in an injured party's negligence action as the injured party was a licensee and the station did not wilfully or wantonly injure the injured party by maintaining in a perfectly level condition the floor upon which the injured party fell. Howard v. Gram Corp., 268 Ga. App. 466, 602 S.E.2d 241 (2004).

Liability for hunter's death who was licensee on property. — Premises owner and its operator were properly granted summary judgment in an action filed against them by a decedent's administrator, as the decedent, who was granted permission to hunt on the property without a permit, was not shown to be anything other than a licensee, no breach of any duty owed to the decedent as a licensee was presented, and an intervening illegal act by a third party was the proximate cause of the decedent's death; moreover, because the evidence showed that there had never been an accidental shooting of one hunter by another on the premises, no basis existed for holding that the owners or operator should have foreseen that a third party would come onto the property and illegally shoot at a target which the third party could not identify. Hadden v. ARE Props., LLC, 280 Ga. App. 314, 633 S.E.2d 667 (2006).

Premises liability to lessee. — In a wrongful death action filed by a decedent-lessee's administrator in which the decedent was killed when crossing a public highway that the lessor did not control, the lessor was properly granted summary judgment as the administrator failed to show that the lessor was negligent per se or that the lessor breached either a common law or private duty owed to the lessee. Walton v. UCC X, Inc., 282 Ga. App. 847, 640 S.E.2d 325 (2006).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the homeowners, in a personal injury action filed by a caretaker who worked in the home, as the caretaker's equal knowledge of the improper construction of the stairs in the home barred recovery, despite the fact that the construction violated the applicable building code; moreover, the caretaker's claim was not saved by an admission of contributory negligence. Argo v. Chitwood, 282 Ga. App. 156, 637 S.E.2d 865 (2006).

In a premises liability action arising from a slip and fall on ice by an injured lessee, because jury issues existed as to whether the party exercised the requisite care, and as to the premises owner's knowledge of the hazard, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the owner and an insurer and in reasoning that the lessee failed to exercise due care. Little v. Alliance Fire Prot., Inc., 291 Ga. App. 116, 661 S.E.2d 173 (2008).

Appraisers were properly granted summary judgment on the buyers' professional negligence claim, alleging that the appraisers grossly over-inflated the value of the subject property, since the appraisers were not manifestly aware of the use to which the information was to be put and did not intend that the information be so used; despite the fact that the mortgagees were listed among the class of persons to whom the report could have been distributed, the appraisers were clearly unaware that one occupying such status would rely on the appraisal in purchasing the property. Martha H. West Trust v. Mkt. Value of Atlanta, Inc., 262 Ga. App. 90, 584 S.E.2d 688 (2003).

Negligent infliction of emotional distress. — Trial court properly entered summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 for the owner of a truck and the truck owner's employee in a train engineer's suit for the negligent infliction of emotional distress arising out of an accident between a train and a truck as the engineer was not physically injured in the accident, and the engineer did not have a property interest injury resulting in a pecuniary loss arising out of the engineer's inability to continue working as the engineer was an at-will employee; the employee's argument that the zone of danger rule should be adopted in negligent infliction of emotional distress actions was rejected. Shores v. Modern Transp. Servs., 262 Ga. App. 293, 585 S.E.2d 664 (2003).

Because an injured party alleged a physical impact and physical injuries, but did not claim that these injuries caused the party mental suffering or emotional distress, the party's mental distress claim was barred by Georgia's impact rule;

hence, the trial court erred in denying summary judgment to the driver of the other car involved in the accident and the owner of the car. Wilson v. Allen, 272 Ga. App. 172, 612 S.E.2d 39 (2005).

Trespass. — Summary judgment was properly entered for a realtor as to a landowner's trespass claim; the landowner never determined that the offending silt fence was actually on the landowner's property, and the realtor testified that the fence was located on a public right-of-way. Sorrow v. Hadaway, 269 Ga. App. 446, 604 S.E.2d 197 (2004).

Person who rented space in a cousin's apartment without the landlord's knowledge or consent was a trespasser, and the trial court properly dismissed an action that the person filed against the landlord and a company that managed the apartment complex seeking damages for injuries the person sustained when the person slipped and fell, because the evidence showed that neither the landlord nor the property manager breached their duty not to willfully or wantonly injure trespassers. Gomez v. Julian LeCraw & Co., 269 Ga. App. 576, 604 S.E.2d 532 (2004).

Imputed liability for acts of independent contractor. — Summary judgment was properly entered for a realtor and a developer as to a landowner's claim that the realtor and the developer were liable under O.C.G.A. §§ 51-2-4 and 51-2-5 for failing to ascertain the location of the boundary between the realtor's lot and the landowner's lot and communicate the boundary line to an independent contractor hired by the developer to brush the realtor's; the developer testified that a creek and a transformer had been used as landmarks for the boundary line in instructing the contractor, and the landowner did not challenge the use of the landmarks. Sorrow v. Hadaway, 269 Ga. App. 446, 604 S.E.2d 197 (2004).

Contractors and subcontractors. — Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the home center company on the homeowners' negligence claim because welding was not an intrinsically dangerous activity for which the company remained responsible for its subcontractors; the company was not restricted by the contract in subcontracting the break down and removal of the trade-in mobile home, and was therefore not liable if this were done negligently. Luther v. Wayne Frier Home Ctr. of Tifton, Inc., 264 Ga. App. 827, 592 S.E.2d 470 (2003).

Since a cause of action alleging that a subcontractor had negligently installed wiring in a house accrued on the date of substantial completion of the house for purposes of damage to the realty, a trial court erred in denying the subcontractor's motion for summary judgment, which asserted that the case, filed more than four years after substantial completion of the house, was time barred as to damage to the real property; however, since the cause of action for damage to personal property damaged in the fire accrued on the date of the fire and not the date of substantial completion, the claim for damage to personalty was not time barred, and summary judgment as to that claim was properly denied. Stamschror v. Allstate Ins. Co., 267 Ga. App. 692, 600 S.E.2d 751 (2004).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the materialman on an action to recover on a lien release bond after an electrical subcontractor did not pay for materials supplied to the subcontractor by the materialman, and despite the claim of the general contractor and surety that the materialman did not comply with a lien statute notice requirement; the lien statute notice requirement was meant to protect prospective purchasers from unknowingly buying property encumbered by liens and did not apply to the materialman's situation because the materialman, acting as a lien claimant, was attempting to recover on a lien discharge bond that the general contractor and the surety had filed to discharge the lien against the electrical contractor. Washington Intl Ins. Co. v. Hughes Supply, Inc., 271 Ga. App. 50, 609 S.E.2d 99 (2004).

There was no such thing as a default summary judgment, and even if a building owner failed to respond to a subcontractor's summary judgment motion, the sub-contractor was required to show that summary judgment was appropriate; summary judgment for the subcontractor against the building owner was reversed because there was no claim that the building owner was liable under the contract, no claim that the building owner received money to which the subcontractor was entitled, and no evidence that allowing the building owner to retain heat pumps supplied by the subcontractor violated some principle of equity, and the circumstances were insufficient to authorize summary judgment based on an implied constructive trust. Tabar, Inc. v. D & D Servs., 267 Ga. App. 659, 601 S.E.2d 143 (2004).

Enforcement of materialman's liens. — Because a notice under O.C.G.A. § 44-14-361.1(a)(3) was not filed within 14 days of a lien claimant's suit being initiated, the lien was unenforceable, and the trial court did not err in granting a developer's motion for partial summary judgment against the lien claimant; while the appeals court sympathized with the lien claimant's argument that the claimant received a file-stamped copy and as a result believed no fee was due, ultimately it was the responsibility of the plaintiff and plaintiff's counsel to see that the appropriate fees were paid in a timely manner. Kendall Supply, Inc. v. Pearson Cmtys., Inc., 285 Ga. App. 863, 648 S.E.2d 158 (2007).

Fair Business Practices Act. — Pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 10-1-401(a)(1), an action under the Fair Business Practices Act (FBPA), O.C.G.A. § 10-1-390 et seq., cannot be brought more than two years after the person bringing the action knew or should have known of the occurrence of the alleged violation; since the alleged contradictory language in a construction contract on which an FBPA claim was based was present when the contract was signed, the statute of limitations began running when the contract was signed; thus, an FBPA suit filed against a homebuilder more than two years after the date of the contract was untimely, and the trial court's summary judgment in favor of the homebuilder was affirmed. Tiismann v. Linda Martin Homes Corp., 268 Ga. App. 787, 603 S.E.2d 45 (2004).

Misappropriation of trade secrets.

— Because: (1) the trial court erred in holding that mere suspicion of a possible misappropriation of an employer's trade secrets by one of its former employees amounted to objectively reasonable notice sufficient to trigger the running of the statute; and (2) a fact issue existed as to whether the suspicions reflected in the employer's letters to the former employee's counsel were sufficient to cause a reasonable person to investigate whether its trade secrets had been misappropriated, the trial court erred in granting the former employee partial summary judgment on the basis of the five-year statute of limitations under O.C.G.A. § 10-1-766. Porex Corp. v. Haldopoulos, 284 Ga. App. 510, 644 S.E.2d 349 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 498 (Ga. 2007).

Fair Credit Reporting Act. — Because the record evidence showed that a customer failed to file suit alleging claims under the Fair Credit Reporting Act within the two years after a wireless service provider reported the customer's outstanding debt to one credit agency, as required by 15 U.S.C. § 1681p, the suit was properly dismissed via summary judgment as time-barred. Lamb v. Verizon Wireless Servs., LLC, 284 Ga. App. 696, 644 S.E.2d 412 (2007).

General premises liability for commercial entities. — In a customer's premises liability action, because factual issues existed as to whether a retailer knew or should have known of a hazardous condition when it left a rolled-up carpet mat leaning on its end in the produce department, and whether the retailer could foresee that it would be knocked over and become a tripping hazard, summary judgment in favor of the retailer, and against the customer, was reversed. Freeman v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 281 Ga. App. 132, 635 S.E.2d 399 (2006).

In a wrongful death action against a church as a premises owner, because the decedent's husband, as administrator of the estate, failed to raise a material fact question of the church's liability for allowing its parishioners to park on the side of the roadway, and thus, obstruct the decedent's view of the adjacent intersection, causing the decedent to collide with an

Applicability to Certain Actions,
Proceedings, Issues, and

oncoming northbound vehicle, the church was properly granted summary judgment. Gay v. Redland Baptist Church, 288 Ga. App. 28, 653 S.E.2d 779 (2007).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a retailer, in a customer's negligence action filed against the retailer for injuries sustained when a tomato tower punctured an eye, as the customer's injury arose out of a third party's actions which the retailer did not and could not have foreseen, and hence no evidence was presented that the retailer breached a duty owed to the customer. Thomas v. Home Depot, U.S.A., Inc., 284 Ga. App. 699, 644 S.E.2d 538 (2007).

In a customer's personal injury action, a property owner was properly granted summary judgment as the owner had no duty to foresee any danger from the owner's criminally damaged pay phone falling on the customer's head, the way the injury occurred was not reasonably expected, and due to the fact that such could not occur except from the customer's unexpected acts. McAfee v. ETS Payphones, Inc., 283 Ga. App. 756, 642 S.E.2d 422 (2007).

Because: (1) the undisputed evidence presented to the trial court was that a retailer had no knowledge of a hazard posed by a previously loaded BB gun placed on an open display shelf and accessible to children; and (2) a parent failed to show that it was reasonably foreseeable that the parent's child would take the gun and shoot the child's sibling, the trial court did not err in granting the retailer summary judgment as to the issue of the retailer's liability. Roberts v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 316, 651 S.E.2d 464 (2007).

In a premises liability action, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to a participant in a contest held by a licensee, without considering the question of whether the participant assumed the risk of falling by participating in a jump-rope in a suit and dress shoes, as that participant failed to show that the licensee had control over the condition of the premises where the contest was held, and had superior knowledge of the hazard or defect which allegedly caused the participant's injuries. Dixon v. Infinity Broad. East, Inc., 289 Ga. App. 71, 656 S.E.2d 211 (2007).

Because a party injured in a fall admitted to having actual knowledge not only of the alleged hazard which caused the fall, but of the specific danger the hazard presented, and as a result appreciated the danger involved, the trial court erred in denying summary judgment to the premises owner as to the issue of liability, given that based on the foregoing, the party should have avoided any injury in the exercise of ordinary care. Callaway Gardens Resort, Inc. v. Bierman, 290 Ga. App. 111, 658 S.E.2d 895 (2008).

Because a skating rink patron failed to present sufficient evidence showing that the rink owners breached a duty by failing to have identifiable floor guards on duty at the time of the patron's fall, and that the breach proximately caused the patron's injuries, but instead, the unequivocal evidence showed that a floor guard was on duty at that time of the fall, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the owners as to the issue of the owner's liability. Moreover, testimony from other management personnel, who were not at the rink at the time of the fall, did not contradict the assistant manager's positive assertions or written report and did not create a material issue of fact. Evans v. Sparkles Mgmt., LLC, 290 Ga. App. 458, 659 S.E.2d 860 (2008).

General premises liability for homeowners, landlords, and others.

— Summary judgment in favor of homeowners was affirmed in a premises liability claim based on an injury to a four-year-old child on a trampoline in the homeowners' yard because there was no showing that the homeowners willfully or wantonly led the child into a hidden peril on the homeowners' premises and, therefore, did not breach the duty of care owed to the homeowners' social guest; however, when jury questions existed as to whether the homeowners undertook the supervision of the child and whether the homeowners used reasonable care to protect the child from injury, summary judgment on a negligent supervision claim was reversed. Nunn v. Page, 265 Ga. App. 484, 594 S.E.2d 701 (2004).

In a personal injury action, because an injured party failed to show that the landlords could not have had constructive notice of the deteriorated condition of the steps upon which that party fell and was injured, the landlords were not liable for the landlords' failure to keep the premises in repair. Thus, the landlords were properly granted summary judgment as to the issue of liability for the party's injuries. Stelter v. Simpson, 288 Ga. App. 402, 655 S.E.2d 237 (2007).

In a premises liability action filed by a repairman arising from injuries suffered while repairing a roof, because the trial court properly found that an out-of-possession landlord and its tenants who surrendered control of the owned premises did not ratify the repairman's employer's actions in not providing safety equipment, and did not have superior knowledge of the dangers involved, the out-of-possession landlord and its tenants were properly granted summary judgment in the repairman's premises liability action. Saunders v. Indus. Metals & Surplus, Inc., 285 Ga. App. 415, 646 S.E.2d 294 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 624 (Ga. 2007).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to an apartment complex owner, and against the decedent's personal representative, in the latter's premises liability action against the former as: (1) evidence was lacking that the vacant apartment where the decedent was murdered was negligently left unlocked; and (2) despite the criminal history of the area where the apartment was located, the owner had no reasonable belief to anticipate that a murder would have occurred on the owner's premises. Moreover, guesses or speculation which raised merely a conjecture or possibility were insufficient to create even an inference of fact for consideration on summary judgment. Wojcik v. Windmill Lake Apts., Inc., 284 Ga. App. 766, 645 S.E.2d 1 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 637 (Ga. 2007).

Because a painter failed to show that a homeowner's knowledge of an electrical wiring defect was superior to that of the painter, the homeowner was entitled to summary judgment as to the issue of the homeowner's liability. Schuessler v. Bennett, 287 Ga. App. 880, 652 S.E.2d 884 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 230 (Ga. 2008).

Landlord liability in guest's premises liability lawsuit. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a landlord on the guest's premises liability lawsuit as the pleadings, affidavits, depositions, and other material on file did not establish a genuine issue of material fact and the landlord was entitled to judgment as a matter of law; the guest did not show that the guest lacked knowledge of the hazard presented by descending a steep stairway to reach the tenant's basement apartment since the guest had descended the stairway on four occasions without incident before being injured in a fall, and the guest also did not show that the steep stairway was the only way to access the apartment. Yon v. Shimeall, 257 Ga. App. 845, 572 S.E.2d 694 (2002).

Slander of title. — Petition that a husband and wife filed against an attorney seeking $50,000 "for humiliation and embarrassment" they experienced because an attorney initiated a foreclosure action after they refused to pay a promissory note did not state a claim for special damages, and the state supreme court held that the trial court properly granted the attorney's motion for summary judgment on the husband and wife's claim alleging slander of title, even though the trial court dismissed the claim on other grounds. Latson v. Boaz, 278 Ga. 113, 598 S.E.2d 485 (2004).

Negligent inspection claim. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment dismissing a home buyers' claim of professional negligence against an engineering firm that performed an allegedly negligent inspection of the home because the buyers had no privity with the firm and none of the exceptions to this requirement applied. Smiley v. S & J Inves., Inc., 260 Ga. App. 493, 580 S.E.2d 283 (2003).

Summary judgment was properly entered for a railroad as to an injured party's premises liability claim based on a premises owner's non-delegable duty to keep

Applicability to Certain Actions,
Proceedings, Issues, and the premises safe for the protection of invitees. The railroad neither owned nor occupied the sidetrack that was the site of the accident. Assuming that the railroad did own the sidetrack, there was no evidence that the railroad had any knowledge of the defective condition that was the result of its lessee's use of a defective iron grate. The injured party conceded that the defective grate was not readily apparent and the injured party failed to show that the railroad would have discovered the defect had the railroad conducted a reasonable inspection. Mixon v. Ga. Cent. Ry., L.P., 266 Ga. App. 365, 596 S.E.2d 807 (2004).

Landlord and tenant actions. — Summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 for an owner, a manager, and a lessor of an apartment was properly entered in a tenant's action for trespass arising out of the tenant's eviction; the entry of the writ of possession was proper, on the writ's face, under O.C.G.A. § 44-7-50. Vickers v. Merry Land & Inv. Co., 263 Ga. App. 316, 587 S.E.2d 816 (2003).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) to a lessor in a lessee's breach of contract action; pursuant to a lease for roof space to be used for a billboard, the lessee defaulted by interfering with a cellular antenna already placed on the roof, and the lessor provided the proper notice of termination. Tower Projects, LLC v. Marquis Tower, Inc., 267 Ga. App. 164, 598 S.E.2d 883 (2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted to a landlord in the landlord's dispossessory action against a tenant because: (1) the tenant failed to pay the rent timely on at least two prior occasions within the 12 months preceding the payment at issue; (2) the tenant mailed the rent payment on July 10th; (3) although the lease did not specifically state that the rent was to be paid and received by 5:00 p.m., "paid" did not mean "tendered," and the terms "normal hours of business" and "by 5:00 p.m." also implied that receipt of the rent was necessary, rather than just the rent's tender; (4) the lease provided that written notice of the lease's cancellation would be given after three late payments; and (5) a claimed conflict between the executive director's affidavit and a newsletter did not create an issue of material fact as the tenant's payment was mailed after the deadline set forth in the newsletter. Baker v. Hous. Auth. of Waynesboro, 268 Ga. App. 122, 601 S.E.2d 350 (2004).

Trial court properly entered summary judgment for a landlord against a tenant and a guarantor because the tenant admitted that the tenant withheld rent for over one year and the outstanding balances due under the lease and the guaranty were undisputed; the trial court was not required to wait until discovery was completed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(a) as the matter was ripe for a ruling. Vick v. Tower Place, L.P., 268 Ga. App. 108, 601 S.E.2d 348 (2004).

After applying the rules of contract construction under O.C.G.A. §§ 13-2-2 and 13-2-3, the Court of Appeals of Georgia upheld an order granting summary judgment to a lessee as the lessee was not required to pay the lessee's portion of the security related costs under the terms of the lease, according to the Common Area Costs formula contained therein; hence, the lessee was authorized to refuse to pay those costs without being in breach of the lease agreement. Covington Square Assocs., LLC v. Ingles Mkts., Inc., 283 Ga. App. 307, 641 S.E.2d 266 (2007).

In a case involving a commercial lease, because the tenant failed to prove all the elements of the tenant's constructive eviction defense, the landlord was properly granted summary judgment on the landlord's claim for rent and late fees; but because genuine fact issues remained as to the tenant's diminution of rent counterclaim when the landlord terminated the water service and for the time period the tenant was without water, as well as regarding the issue of whether the landlord waived a requirement that the tenant install a submeter, the landlord was not entitled to summary judgment regarding these issues. Delta Cleaner Supply Co. v. Mendel Drive Assocs., 286 Ga. App. 227, 648 S.E.2d 651 (2007).

While the trial court properly granted summary judgment to a lessee regarding the enforcement of a lease provision barring removal of certain improvements to the leasehold originally made by the lessor's predecessor-in-interest, despite the lessor's demand that such be removed, given a non-waiver provision in the lease, and the fact that a demand for reimbursement for insurance premiums paid over the life of the lease could be made at any time, the landlord was entitled to the premiums. Ranwal Props., LLC v. John H. Harland Co., 285 Ga. App. 532, 646 S.E.2d 730 (2007).

Specific performance of land sales contract. — In a buyer's suit seeking specific performance of a land sales contract that contained a clear and unambiguous clause stating that time was of the essence, the trial court properly granted summary judgment against the buyer, due to the buyer's failure to timely tender additional earnest money, and because that action amounted to a breach authorizing the sellers to terminate the agreement. Chowhan v. Miller, 283 Ga. App. 749, 642 S.E.2d 428 (2007).

Because the evidence presented at trial made it clear that a lessor conveyed no ownership interest to a tenant, leaving that tenant with only a right to possess and use the leased property, and more specifically, a usufruct, the tenant did not own an interest in the property, and thus could not pursue an easement by necessity under O.C.G.A. § 44-9-40; hence, summary judgment in the lessor's favor as to this issue was upheld on appeal. Read v. Ga. Power Co., 283 Ga. App. 451, 641 S.E.2d 680 (2007).

In an action seeking specific performance of a land sales contract, because genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether the $45,000 sales price was adequate in relation to the fair market value of the subject property, and whether enforcement of the contract was equitable, the trial court erred in granting the buyers of that land summary judgment. Weeks v. Rowell, 289 Ga. App. 507, 657 S.E.2d 881 (2008).

Class action suit for breach of lease. — Trial court properly dismissed a class action suit arising out of a breach of a lease agreement and filed by a group of uninsured patients against a hospital for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted, which the court converted to a motion for summary judgment, as the class members: (1) failed to timely object to the merits of the oral motion; (2) acquiesced to the evidence in support of the motion; and (3) failed to show they were third-party beneficiaries of the agreement, with sufficient standing to sue upon a breach of the agreement's terms. Davis v. Phoebe Putney Health Sys., 280 Ga. App. 505, 634 S.E.2d 452 (2006).

Commercial lease agreements. — In a lessor's action to enforce the provisions of a commercial lease pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 13-1-11, because a lessee's predecessor-in-interest failed to strictly comply with a cancellation option in the lease, and time was of the essence, the trial court erred in ruling otherwise, resulting in an expiration of the option due to the failure to timely exercise the option; thus, on remand the lessor was entitled to summary judgment on the lessor's possession claim and to the past rent due under the lease for the term sought. Piedmont Ctr. 15, LLC v. Aquent, Inc., 286 Ga. App. 673, 649 S.E.2d 733 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 749 (Ga. 2007).

Equipment lease agreements. — In an action arising out of its lessee's breach of an equipment lease, the lessor was properly granted summary judgment, as a claim that an affidavit from the lessor's valuation expert was raised for the first time on appeal and thus was not addressed, and the lessee could not complain that the equipment or delivery was defective, as the lessee took the equipment under the lease "as is." Locke's Graphic & Vinyl Signs, Inc. v. Citicorp Vendor Fin., Inc., 285 Ga. App. 826, 648 S.E.2d 156 (2007).

Injunctive relief against housing authority. — Since there was no evidence of a continuing trespass and since a housing authority had an adequate remedy at law, summary judgment granting an injunction barring entry on the housing authority's property by a husband and wife was reversed. Strange v. Hous. Auth. of Summerville, 268 Ga. App. 403, 602 S.E.2d 185 (2004).

Applicability to Certain Actions,
Proceedings, Issues, and

Owners and occupiers of land. — Homeowners' summary judgment motion should have been granted as the homeowners had no actual or constructive notice of a problem with a deck that collapsed, injuring the injured party; the home had been inspected one year earlier, and no problem with the deck was identified, although the inspection report indicated that the deck was not bolted to the house. Nailing a deck to a house was acceptable at the time of the inspection. Wingo v. Harrison, 268 Ga. App. 156, 601 S.E.2d 507 (2004).

Summary judgment on zoning issue. — Because no evidence was presented regarding the content of the relevant county zoning ordinance at the time a landowner purchased the land in question, and whether the use of the property as a landfill was prohibited by the ordinance, and because laches did not apply against the state in which a zoning issue was involved, summary judgment was improperly granted in favor of a landowner. Further, the trial court erred in finding that the landfill was grandfathered as a non-conforming use under that zoning ordinance. Flippen Alliance for Cmty. Empowerment, Inc. v. Brannan, 267 Ga. App. 134, 601 S.E.2d 106 (2004).

Breach of warranty of title. — In a breach of warranty of title action, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment in favor of the title insurance company despite the company's failure to object to title within 30 days of the date the sales contract was executed since the sales contract provided that no provisions survived closing, including the title-objection; thus, after the closing, the provisions of the warranty deed superceded any time limitations regarding objections to the title in the contract. Weiss v. Old Republic Nat'l Title Ins. Co., 262 Ga. App. 120, 584 S.E.2d 710 (2003).

Quiet title actions. — In quiet title actions initiated by each party regarding the same parcel of residential property, the trial court properly adopted a special master's order granting summary judgment in favor of a bank, who was the assignee of the holder of the loan secured by the property, finding that fee simple title vested in the bank, as the transfer of the property to the assignee of the holder of the security deed was valid when the deed under power was recorded; in the absence of any court order invalidating or setting aside that deed, the deed legally vested title in the property in the assignee of the holder of the security deed, and thus in the bank. Vereen v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Trust Co., 282 Ga. 284, 646 S.E.2d 667 (2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1143, 128 S. Ct. 1089, 169 L. Ed. 2d 811 (2008).

Action against partners for payment of judgment against another partner. — In a case in which the plaintiff sued a limited partnership and two of its general partners for payment of a judgment gained against another general partner (a corporation), the trial court properly granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment because they were not parties to the prior suit. Hartley v. Shenandoah, Ltd., 170 Ga. App. 868, 318 S.E.2d 508 (1984).

Breach of fiduciary duty. — When a company sued a company's accountants for breach of fiduciary duty regarding a sale of the company's assets, summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the accountants because the evidence was insufficient to create a factual dispute as to whether the accountants exercised a controlling influence over the will, conduct, and interest of the company as required under O.C.G.A. § 23-2-58 for a fiduciary relationship to arise. R.W. Holdco, Inc. v. Johnson, 267 Ga. App. 859, 601 S.E.2d 177 (2004).

Breach of settlement agreement. — Trial court properly entered summary judgment for a company, the company's subsidiary, and an employee in an injured party's claim that the company breached its settlement agreement with the injured party by adding a term barring the injured party from the company's premises as the company's desire to keep the injured party off of the company's property was independent of the settlement agreement and did not change or vary the terms of the settlement agreement; a private property owner may at any time restrict persons from coming onto its property. Batayias v. Kerr-McGee Corp., 267 Ga. App. 848, 601 S.E.2d 174 (2004).

Issue of nonmaterial fact in beneficiary's suit for mishandling of funds.

— Although there was a genuine issue of fact as to whether a savings and loan association had knowledge of a court order requiring court permission before encroaching upon the corpus of a trust, it was not a material fact because, even if the association had such knowledge, the association was permitted by O.C.G.A. § 7-1-190 to pay out the funds on the order of the trustee under the presumption that the trustee was acting in compliance with the trustee's fiduciary duties, so summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the association in the beneficiaries' suit for mishandling of the trust. Chelena v. Georgia Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 256 Ga. 336, 349 S.E.2d 180 (1986).

Misappropriation of trade secrets.

— Because a doctor's patient list was not a trade secret within the meaning of the Georgia Trade Secrets Act, O.C.G.A. § 10-1-761(4)(A), and because an attorney the doctor sued for misappropriation was not in the same industry as the doctor, the attorney's possession of the list did not reduce the doctor's competitive advantage in the field, which was the main purpose of protecting a trade secret; thus, the attorney was entitled to summary judgment on the doctor's claim of misappropriation. Vito v. Inman, 286 Ga. App. 646, 649 S.E.2d 753 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 770 (Ga. 2007).

Promissory estoppel and reasonable reliance. — Because promissory estoppel involves reasonable reliance, and questions of reasonable reliance are usually for the jury to resolve, the grant of summary judgment to the defendant was improper because jury issues remained on the plaintiff's promissory estoppel claim. Ambrose v. Sheppard, 241 Ga. App. 835, 528 S.E.2d 282 (2000).

Tortious interference with business relations. — Trial court properly granted a hospital's summary judgment motion pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 as to a doctor's claims for tortious interference with business relations because the doctor's claim was precluded as a matter of law by the stranger doctrine. Mulligan v. Brunswick Mem'l Hosp. Auth., 264 Ga. App. 39, 589 S.E.2d 851 (2003).

In an action alleging both tortious interference with business relations and a tortious interference with contract filed by an uncle against a nephew and the nephew's wife, summary judgment was properly entered against the uncle, as the evidence in support of the claims failed to show that the nephew had an improper purpose; more specifically, as regarding the former claim, the evidence amounted to either hearsay or double hearsay, and as to the second claim, the nephew could act with privilege with regards to the contract at issue. Kirkland v. Tamplin, 285 Ga. App. 241, 645 S.E.2d 653 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 616 (Ga. 2007); 552 U.S. 1297, 128 S. Ct. 1750, 170 L.Ed.2d 541 (2008).

Tortious interference with employment relationship.

— Summary judgment was properly entered for a company, the company's subsidiary, and the company's employee in an injured party's tortious interference with employment relationship claim as the injured party was an at-will employee of a contractor working at the company's plant, and the action of requesting that the injured party leave the premises was not malicious and did not fit within the definition of wrongful conduct. Batayias v. Kerr-McGee Corp., 267 Ga. App. 848, 601 S.E.2d 174 (2004).

Tortious interference with contracts. — Buyer's tortious interference with contracts claims were properly disposed of on summary judgment as: (1) all parties to an interwoven contractual arrangement were not liable for tortious interference with any of the contracts or business relationships; and (2) a claim for tortious interference with contractual relations could not be predicated upon an allegedly improper filing of a lawsuit. BKJB P'ship v. Moseman, 284 Ga. App. 862, 644 S.E.2d 874, cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 558 (Ga. 2007).

Business relationship. — Proof that a defendant was no stranger to the business relations at issue is fatal to a claim of tortious interference with business relations. By offering the services of off-duty police officers to provide private security at baseball games, a security company brought a city and the city's police department into the business relationship. The stranger doctrine foreclosed the security company's tortious interference with a business relationship claim brought against the city and police supervisors based on the supervisors' decision to deny permission to the off-duty officers to provide private security through the security company, and summary judgment in favor of the city and the police supervisors was affirmed. Cox v. City of Atlanta, 266 Ga. App. 329, 596 S.E.2d 785 (2004).

Storage facility owner's duty of care. — Disputed facts regarding whether a storage facility owner fulfilled the owner's duty of exercising ordinary care in keeping its approaches safe by providing a walk board with no means of securing the board to a loading dock or moving van precluded summary judgment. McGinnis v. Admiral Moving & Storage Co., 223 Ga. App. 410, 477 S.E.2d 841 (1996).

Usury. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a water company in the purchaser's complaint that a late fee for unpaid water bills was a cloak for a usurious loan as there was no evidence giving rise to a triable issue regarding the agreement to provide water. Mallard v. Forest Heights Water Works, Inc., 260 Ga. App. 750, 580 S.E.2d 602 (2003).

Pending action. — Motion for summary judgment will lie on the ground of pendency of the former original action, in a second action brought by the same plaintiff against the same defendant and involving the same cause of action as in the former action. Reeves Transp. Co. v. Gamble, 126 Ga. App. 165, 190 S.E.2d 98 (1972).

Interspousal immunity doctrine barred a suit by a husband's estate against a wife's estate for injuries sustained by the husband in an auto accident in which the wife was driving the auto occupied by the husband; the danger was that the wife's estate could have conceded fault to get insurance proceeds for both estates, and the trial court's summary judgment in favor of the wife's estate was affirmed. Larkin v. Larkin, 268 Ga. App. 127, 601 S.E.2d 487 (2004).

Intentional infliction of emotional distress. — Trial court properly entered summary judgment against an uncle, and in favor of the uncle's nephew and the nephew's wife, on the uncle's intentional infliction of emotional distress claim, as the complained of statements amounted to common expressions from family members and a common vicissitude of ordinary life, though given in a threatening tone of voice, and were not extreme and outrageous. Kirkland v. Tamplin, 285 Ga. App. 241, 645 S.E.2d 653 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 616 (Ga. 2007); 552 U.S. 1297, 128 S. Ct. 1750, 170 L.Ed.2d 541 (2008).

Because an employee failed in the burden of showing that the conduct and behavior of the employee's former manager did not, as a matter of law, qualify as extreme and outrageous conduct, the trial court properly granted summary judgment as to the issue of liability to the employee's former employer and former manager; moreover, while comments made within the context of one's employment might be horrifying or traumatizing, the comments were generally considered a common vicissitude of ordinary life. Wilcher v. Confederate Packaging, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 451, 651 S.E.2d 790 (2007).

Official immunity. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a county school board and the board's superintendent in a parents negligence action arising out of an attack on school grounds that injured their daughter as the board and the superintendent presented sufficient evidence that a school safety plan was in place at the elementary school at the time the child was attacked, entitling the board and the superintendent to official immunity barring the parents' negligence claims. Leake v. Murphy, 284 Ga. App. 490, 644 S.E.2d 328 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 671 (Ga. 2007).

In a tort action for personal injuries and property damage arising from an auto collision filed against a city and the city's police officer, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the officer, given that the officer was engaged in a discretionary function of responding to an emergency situation at the time the accident at issue occurred. Weaver v. City of Statesboro, 288 Ga. App. 32, 653 S.E.2d 765 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 221 (Ga. 2008).

Personal injury. — Because the plaintiff was injured in a restaurant by an exploding bottle, the fact that the plaintiff's evidence did not prove definitively which of the two manufacturers supplied the particular bottle — or, indeed, that the bottle's disintegration and the plaintiff's subsequent injuries were due to fault on the part of either manufacturer — was of no significance in determining whether summary judgment should be granted against the plaintiff. Scott v. Owens-Illinois, Inc., 173 Ga. App. 19, 325 S.E.2d 402 (1984).

Defendant insurer was properly granted summary judgment on a claim by the plaintiffs, a postal worker and spouse, for underinsured motorist benefits in a case in which the plaintiffs received $95,554 from the tortfeasor who injured the postal worker, representing the tortfeasor's cumulative policy limits of $100,000 less $4,445 that was paid to the postal service for damage to a postal truck, because, even though $34,666 of the $95,554 went to a workers' compensation program and a health insurer on their subrogation claims, the subrogation sums represented money that the postal worker had already recovered in the form of workers' compensation and health benefits coverage for some of the worker's damages; thus, the subrogation claims did not constitute "payment of other claims or otherwise" that reduced the tortfeasor's available coverage. The plaintiffs recovered more than their available $75,000 in uninsured/underinsured motorist coverage, and the trial court was correct that the tortfeasor was not underinsured for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 33-7-11(b)(1)(D)(ii). Thurman v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 260 Ga. App. 338, 579 S.E.2d 746 (2003).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the amusement park operator on the injured party's personal injury claim after the party was struck in the face with a lap restraint bar as the party did not show that the ride was a perilous instrumentality, that the amusement park operator had a superior knowledge of the hazard, or that the amusement park operator was in exclusive control of the car the party was getting into at the time of the accident such that the party should have been allowed to apply the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur to the party's case. Harrelson v. Wild Adventures, Inc., 263 Ga. App. 569, 588 S.E.2d 341 (2003).

Summary judgment was properly granted to a warehouse corporation because the record did not reflect a genuine issue of material fact as to causation in a worker's claim for an injury suffered in the warehouse since there was no evidence the worker actually tripped. Pennington v. Wjl, 263 Ga. App. 758, 589 S.E.2d 259 (2003).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment in favor of a sheriff's deputy who was sued by a motorist who was injured when the motorist's car was struck by a car being driven by a suspect fleeing from police. Standard v. Hobbs, 263 Ga. App. 873, 589 S.E.2d 634 (2003).

Summary judgment in favor of a trading firm and a security company on a personal injury action was affirmed because the action was based on damages to victims of a shooting rampage by a former customer of the trading company; the shooter's criminal act was an intervening cause to any possible foreseeable injury the firm might have created, and the security company did not owe any of the victims of the rampage a duty. Brown v. All-Tech Inv. Group, Inc., 265 Ga. App. 889, 595 S.E.2d 517 (2004).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment for a school board in an injured party's personal injuries claim based on the injured party's failure to present evidence that the injuries were actually caused by a defective condition in a slide as the argument was not presented in the school board's motion and the injured party had no opportunity to respond to it; the injured party did not have a full and final opportunity to meet and controvert the ground for summary judgment upon which the trial court relied, and the summary judgment could not be affirmed under the right for any reason rule. Hart v. Appling County Sch. Bd., 266 Ga. App. 300, 597 S.E.2d 462 (2004).

Summary judgment in favor of a ranch owner was affirmed in a case brought against the owner by an injured person who believed that the injured person had been hit by bullet shrapnel at a shooting range on the ranch owner's property but did not see the object after the bullet struck the injured person, did not know what had happened to the bullet, did not know who had shot the rifle, and did not know what type of rifle the person had used or the caliber of bullet involved; the injured person was unaware of anyone else being hit with any debris, and the injured person's expert testified to not having an opinion of what struck the injured person and could not say whether any particular target at the range would have caused a bullet to ricochet to the spot on which the injury occurred. Hobday v. Galardi, 266 Ga. App. 780, 598 S.E.2d 350 (2004).

In a personal injury action against a utility and the utility's independent contractor, the trial court properly granted summary judgment against a cable installer finding that: (1) the utility was not vicariously liable to the installer for the allegedly negligent acts of the utility's contractor; (2) the utility's right to inspect the work did not render the utility liable for the contractor's negligence as that right was intended for the limited purpose of making sure the contractor competently carried out the terms of the contract; (3) the utility was not liable for the utility's failure to flag a power line trench in which the installer fell and was injured, as surface markings showing the path of the trench would not have informed the installer of the danger, and the installer was not injured as a result of excavating or blasting; and (4) the High-voltage Safety Act, O.C.G.A. § 46-3-30 et seq., did not apply to afford the installer a remedy. Perry v. Georgia Power Co., 278 Ga. App. 759, 629 S.E.2d 588 (2006).

Retailer was properly granted summary judgment in a personal injury action filed against the retailer by one of the retailer's customers under the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur as the customer failed to show that the retailer retained exclusive control over the box that fell from a stationary position on a shelf and allegedly caused the customer's injuries, and the customer conceded that there was no evidence that the retailer had superior knowledge of an allegedly dangerous condition; further, the retailer was not required to show that the retailer's employees carried out an inspection of the shelved items within a reasonable time period before the incident. Aderhold v. Lowe's Home Ctrs., Inc., 284 Ga. App. 294, 643 S.E.2d 811 (2007).

In a personal injury action arising from the electrocution of two construction workers while operating a crane leased by a buyer and seller of heavy equipment, the trial court properly denied summary judgment to the buyer/seller of the crane as material fact issues remained as to the condition of the crane when the crane left the buyer/seller's possession, and as to the element of causation; moreover, the learned intermediary doctrine did not apply. Dozier Crane & Mach., Inc. v. Gibson, 284 Ga. App. 496, 644 S.E.2d 333 (2007).

In a personal injury action arising from a fall suffered by a lessee's visitor from a pull-down staircase, because no questions of fact remained as to an out-of-possession landlord's liability for failure to repair, defective construction, or failure to warn, the landlord was properly granted summary judgment as to those issues. Gainey v. Smacky's Invs., Inc., 287 Ga. App. 529, 652 S.E.2d 167 (2007).

Because a driver failed to present sufficient record evidence that a city received timely ante litem notice that the driver sustained a personal injury, much less the nature, character, or particularities of any such injury, but the notice submitted merely established that the driver sustained property damage, the driver did not substantially comply with O.C.G.A. § 36-33-5(b); thus, the trial court properly granted the city summary judgment on that issue. Harris-Jackson v. City of Cochran, 287 Ga. App. 722, 652 S.E.2d 607 (2007).

Recreational Property Act. — Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to a city on allegations of negligence asserted against the city by an injured motorcycle driver as the Recreational Property Act (Act), O.C.G.A. § 51-3-20 et seq., prevented the driver from recovering from the city based on allegations of simple negligence; moreover, the Act clearly applied because it was undisputed that the injuries occurred when the driver collided with the cable fence on the city's recreational property, and the city permitted the general public to use the park and open field where the accident occurred for recreational purposes without charge. Carroll v. City of Carrollton, 280 Ga. App. 172, 633 S.E.2d 591 (2006).

Wrongful death action brought by parent. — Despite evidence of a parent's cruel treatment of the decedent, the trial court erred in finding that the parent forfeited parental rights, and thus lost the status as a parent and, in so doing, lost the right to recover as an heir of the decedent's estate as the loss of parental power did not necessarily result in a parent's loss of a right to inherit as an heir from the estate of that parent's child, short of having the parent's rights terminated prior to the child's death; hence, summary judgment against the parent on the issue was reversed. Blackstone v. Blackstone, 282 Ga. App. 515, 639 S.E.2d 369 (2006).

Wrongful death. — In a wrongful death action, because the employer of a driver was not responsible for the personal activities the employee was involved in at the time of the fatal accident that killed the decedent, and the special mission exception did not apply, the employer was properly granted summary judgment in a suit filed against the employer by the decedent's estate and survivors. Banks v. AJC Intl., Inc., 284 Ga. App. 22, 643 S.E.2d 780 (2007).

In a wrongful death action filed against a county sheriff's deputy and the county, the administrator's claim that the deputy failed to report an accident and failed to render aid, in violation of both O.C.G.A. §§ 40-6-270(a)(3) and 40-6-273 were rejected, and the deputy and the county were erroneously denied summary judgment as the evidence showed that: (1) the deputy radioed for officer assistance; (2) the two officers looked for a second vehicle that might have been involved in the accident, to no avail; and (3) based on the results of the investigation, no evidence existed that the deputy breached the duty imposed by § 40-6-273 Purvis v. Steve, 284 Ga. App. 116, 643 S.E.2d 380 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 517 (Ga. 2007).

In a wrongful death action filed on behalf of a deceased employee, because jury questions remained as to whether the defenses of assumption of the risk and equal knowledge of danger barred the claims of negligence, negligence per se, respondeat superior, and premises liability, and as to whether the claims were barred by the exclusive remedy provision of the Workers' Compensation Act, summary judgment to the decedent's employer was reversed. Champion v. Pilgrim's Pride Corp. of Del., Inc., 286 Ga. App. 334, 649 S.E.2d 329 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 83 (Ga. 2008).

Because the trial court properly found that a decedent's son, as a sole heir, could recover at least a portion of a settlement under 45 U.S.C. § 51 for the wrongful death of the decedent, and because the decedent father's widow validly waived a claim under 45 U.S.C. § 59, pursuant to a prenuptial agreement, the court did not err in granting partial summary judgment to the heir. But, the matter was remanded for the trial court to determine how the proceeds at issue should be divided between the survival and wrongful death claims. Tadlock v. Tadlock, 290 Ga. App. 568, 660 S.E.2d 430 (2008).

Wrongful death in workplace. — Because a subsidiary had no ownership interest in the equipment that killed an employee, and to the extent that the subsidiary was acting in concert or in a joint enterprise with the employer/owner, O.C.G.A. § 34-9-11 of the Workers' Compensation Act barred the spouse's wrongful death suit; consequently, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to the subsidiary pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c). Jones v. Macon Soils, Inc., 270 Ga. App. 298, 606 S.E.2d 316 (2004).

Dog bite cases. — In a plaintiff's suit against the dog owners to recover for injuries sustained from a dog bite, summary judgment against the plaintiff was improper because the plaintiff's evidence that the owners' dog had bitten another person on the hand before the incident, that one of the owners had made a statement that the owner did not allow the dog in the house with guests because the dog could bite somebody, and that the same owner had admitted to the plaintiff's mother that the owner should have warned the plaintiff to stay away from the dog raised a jury question as to whether the owners knew that the dog had a propensity to bite; moreover, the evidence did not show that the plaintiff assumed the risk as a matter of law by ignoring the dog's growl; since a dog's growl does not put a dog owner on notice of the dog's propensity to bite, it is not plain evidence that a third party actually knew about and appreciated the danger that the dog might bite. Raith v. Blanchard, 271 Ga. App. 723, 611 S.E.2d 75 (2005).

Premises liability and injuries by animals. — True ground of premises liability is the landowner's or occupier's superior knowledge of the perilous condition and the danger therefrom to persons coming upon the property; a trial court's summary judgment dismissing claims against real estate agents and brokers for injuries arising from a dog bite while the injured person was viewing listed property for sale was affirmed because there was no showing that the real estate agents and brokers had any knowledge that the dogs were dangerous. Gibson v. Rezvanpour, 268 Ga. App. 377, 601 S.E.2d 848 (2004).

In an action to enjoin enforcement of a judgment, the trial court improperly entered, sua sponte, summary judgment in favor of the judgment creditors because the trial court's judgment was based on an issue not previously raised by the parties, and judgment was entered without giving the judgment debtor a full opportunity to respond to the issues raised. Studenic v. Birk, 260 Ga. App. 364, 579 S.E.2d 788 (2003).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the dog owners on the worker's negligence claim after the worker was knocked down allegedly by the dog owners' dog as a genuine issue of material fact existed about whether the one dog owner voluntarily undertook a duty to restrain the dogs on the owner's premises and, if so, whether that voluntary undertaking was negligently performed. Osowski v. Smith, 262 Ga. App. 538, 586 S.E.2d 71 (2003).

When premises owner was deemed to have superior knowledge of the hazard that was alleged to have caused the slip and fall, based on the testimony of the injured patron's daughter that the owner had actual knowledge of the hazard, summary judgment in the owner's favor was unauthorized, and the appeals court erred in finding otherwise. Dickerson v. Guest Servs. Co., 282 Ga. 771, 653 S.E.2d 699 (2007).

Slip and fall by pedestrian in pothole. — Trial court erred in denying summary judgment to both a city and the Department of Transportation, in a slip and fall case filed against them by a pedestrian, as: (1) the pedestrian conceded that the pedestrian was a licensee with equal constructive knowledge of any hazard posed by potholes; (2) the pothole in which the pedestrian fell was not a concealed or camouflaged danger; and (3) no evidence was presented that the pothole was maintained wilfully or wantonly. Ga. DOT v. Strickland, 279 Ga. App. 753, 632 S.E.2d 416 (2006).

Normal household items causing fall by licensee in home. — In a licensee's personal injury action, the trial court properly found that a homeowner was entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law as the homeowner owed no duty to the licensee to warn of the obviousness of a broom handle, tools on the floor, or the couch corner, which the licensee alleged caused a fall, as such were plainly visible and not hidden perils. Ellis v. Hadnott, 282 Ga. App. 584, 639 S.E.2d 559 (2006).

Slip and fall in businesses. — In a slip and fall case based on an injured party's fall in a truck stop's shower, the truck stop owner was not entitled to summary judgment because the owner's admitted lack of a regular inspection procedure created a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the owner had constructive knowledge of the condition that caused the injured party to fall, and it was not shown that the injured party failed to exercise care for the party's own safety as the injured party removed two used bars of soap from the shower floor. Pylant v. Samuels Inc., 262 Ga. App. 358, 585 S.E.2d 696 (2003).

In a slip and fall case brought by an injured person who alleged that the fall was caused by a newly waxed tile floor in a golf course clubhouse, the trial court erred in finding, based on some deposition responses, that the injured person had abandoned the claim that the wax had caused the fall and was claiming only that the tile floor, not the wax on the floor, caused the fall, and that the injured person knew walking on a tile floor with spikes was risky; the injured person's complaint and the evidence offered that the injured person had not unequivocally conceded that the wax on the floor did not cause the fall, and the trial court's summary judgment in favor of the premises owner was reversed. Berson v. Am. Golf Corp., 265 Ga. App. 772, 595 S.E.2d 622 (2004).

In a slip and fall case, an injured person's knowledge of uneven, unlit steps at the place where the injured person fell, obtained from ascending the steps once in the dark, did not equal a hotel's knowledge from sweeping the area daily and maintaining the steps regularly; thus, a trial court's denial of the hotel's summary judgment motion was affirmed. Mac International-Savannah Hotel, Inc. v. Hallman, 265 Ga. App. 727, 595 S.E.2d 577 (2004).

Summary judgment for a grocery store in a slip and fall case was proper because an injured person slipped in water caused by another customer and the grocery store had no actual or constructive knowledge of the water. Mock v. Kroger Co., 267 Ga. App. 1, 598 S.E.2d 789 (2004).

Mere fact that an injured person slipped and fell while on a department store's premises did not give rise to liability absent some evidence that a foreign substance was present; a department store in a slip and fall case was entitled to summary judgment, and a trial court's denial of the department store's summary judgment motion was reversed because an injured person did not see or touch anything on the floor that caused the injured person to fall but was merely supposing or hypothesizing that there was some sort of substance on the ground that caused the injured person to fall, and a department store employee testified that the floor was clean and dry, and that no foreign substance was on the floor after the fall. Belk Dep't Store of Charleston, S.C., Inc. v. Cato, 267 Ga. App. 793, 600 S.E.2d 786 (2004).

Trial court erred in denying a corporation's motion for summary judgment on a customer's claim seeking damages for injuries the customer sustained by slipping and falling on a wet floor after entering a restaurant because the customer was aware of the hazard and the evidence did not show that people who worked at the restaurant possessed superior knowledge that the floor was wet and posed a hazard to customers. Flagstar Enters., Inc. v. Burch, 267 Ga. App. 856, 600 S.E.2d 834 (2004).

Summary judgment for a restaurant in a slip and fall case was proper and was affirmed because there was no showing that the restaurant had actual or constructive knowledge of the grease which allegedly caused the slip and fall that was superior to that of the injured person; an inspection by the restaurant manager only 5 to 10 minutes before the incident was sufficient, as a matter of law, to establish that the restaurant exercised ordinary care under O.C.G.A. § 51-3-1 to inspect the premises and keep the premises safe. Markham v. Schuster's Enters., Inc., 268 Ga. App. 313, 601 S.E.2d 712 (2004).

In a customer's slip and fall action against a store, because genuine issues of material fact existed as to whether the store had superior knowledge of the alleged water on the floor where the customer allegedly fell, summary judgment was erroneously entered in the store's favor. Durham v. Patel, 282 Ga. App. 437, 638 S.E.2d 851 (2006).

In a slip and fall action filed by a mall patron against the mall's owner and the mall's cleaning contractor, summary judgment was properly granted to the latter as no evidence was presented that the contractor wrongfully failed to clean the spot on which the patron slipped; however, summary judgment in the owner's favor was reversed as the owner failed to present evidence of any reasonable inspection procedures, giving the patron the benefit of an inference of the owner's constructive knowledge of a hazard. Prescott v. Colonial Props. Trust, Inc., 283 Ga. App. 753, 642 S.E.2d 425 (2007).

Because the trial court correctly determined that the parking lot in which a customer fell was owned and maintained by the grocery store's landlord, not by the grocery store, and was not an "approach" to the premises for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 51-3-1, the grocery store was properly granted summary judgment as to the issue of liability in a customer's personal injury suit filed against the store. Robinson v. Kroger Co., 284 Ga. App. 488, 644 S.E.2d 316 (2007).

Because an injured employee testified that the rain, and not any sloping surface, caused the slip and fall at issue, the employee was charged with equal knowledge of the rainy day conditions, and as a result no evidence was presented that the hospital exposed the employee to any unreasonable risk of harm; thus, the trial court erred in denying the employer's motion for summary judgment. Sunlink Health Sys. v. Pettigrew, 286 Ga. App. 339, 649 S.E.2d 532 (2007).

In a slip and fall case filed by a retailer's patron alleging a breach of the retailer's duty to keep the retailer's premises reasonably safe, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the retailer on the issue of whether the retailer's nearby employees were in a position to discover the hazard on which the patron slipped, specifically a grape on the floor; however, in the absence of clear evidence of how long the grape was present on the floor, and in the absence of evidence that the retailer actually carried out its inspection procedures, the retailer could not show as a matter of law that the retailer lacked constructive knowledge of the hazard which caused the patron's fall. Blocker v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 588, 651 S.E.2d 845 (2007).

Court of appeals upheld an order granting summary judgment to a janitorial services company on claims filed against the company by a premises owner's invitee for damages sustained by the invitee resulting from a slip and fall on the owner's premises as the janitorial services company was an independent contractor and not an owner occupier of the premises where the invitee fell, and hence owed no contractual duty to the invitee. Taylor v. AmericasMart Real Estate, LLC, 287 Ga. App. 555, 651 S.E.2d 754 (2007).

In a personal injury action arising out of a slip and fall, because jury questions existed as to whether a premises owner's inspection procedure was reasonable, the appeals court refused to say that the owner lacked constructive knowledge of a hazard that allegedly caused a slip and fall as a matter of law. Thus, summary judgment entered in favor of the owner was reversed. Gibson v. Halpern Enters., 288 Ga. App. 790, 655 S.E.2d 624 (2007).

In a premises liability action against a retailer, because the patron failed to show proof that a single employee of the retailer was in the immediate area of the spill that allegedly caused the patron's fall, and could have easily seen and removed the spill prior to the slip and fall, or proof that the liquid had been there for a sufficient length of time that the retailer should have discovered and removed the spill during a reasonable inspection and: (1) inasmuch as the purported hazard was not readily visible to the patron; and (2) the patron failed to establish that the retailer's employees, who were at least 20 to 30 feet away, could have easily seen and removed the spill, or that the liquid had been on the retailer's floor long enough that the retailer should have discovered and removed the spill during a reasonable inspection, the trial court erred in denying the retailer's motion for summary judgment as to the retailer's liability to the patron. Kmart Corp. v. McCollum, 290 Ga. App. 551, 659 S.E.2d 913 (2008).

Because genuine material fact issues remained as to whether a supermarket's inspection procedures in the area in which a customer fell were reasonable and whether a reasonable inspection procedure would have detected a mixture of blood and water on the floor, summary judgment in favor of the supermarket was reversed; moreover, the appeals court rejected the supermarket's claim that the customer had equal knowledge of the hazard since the customer had previously walked down the aisle before the customer fell there. Food Lion, LLC v. Walker, 290 Ga. App. 574, 660 S.E.2d 426 (2008).

Summary judgment was proper because no evidence showed an office park knew of, or caused, material to collect at the place a pedestrian slipped on steps, there was no breach of a duty to discover the leaves, and the pedestrian did not show that handrails were required on the steps. Porter v. Omni Hotels, Inc., 260 Ga. App. 24, 579 S.E.2d 68 (2003).

Owner of a grocery store was erroneously granted summary judgment in a negligence suit by a store patron who slipped on a grape and fell as the testimony regarding the manager's unobstructed view of the area in which the fall occurred, the manager's admission that the manager could have seen the grape, and the evidence that the manager and two other employees were in the immediate vicinity and could easily have removed the hazard had they seen it, all revealed that there was a genuine issue of material fact as to whether the store owner had constructive knowledge of the dangerous condition. Dix v. Kroger Co., 257 Ga. App. 19, 570 S.E.2d 89 (2002).

Summary judgment should have been granted to a property owner in a customer's suit to recover for injuries sustained when the customer slipped and fell on a bean on the floor of the owner's store because the owner did not have actual notice of the bean, and the evidence was insufficient to show that the owner had constructive notice of the bean, in that no bean was seen during an inspection of the area in which the customer fell five minutes before the fall, and no evidence showed that the owner's employees were in the immediate vicinity of the fall. Kroger Co. v. Williams, 274 Ga. App. 177, 617 S.E.2d 160 (2005).

Store owner was entitled to summary judgment in an action brought by a client who fell upon an allegedly slippery sidewalk because the plaintiff did not show that the sidewalk was negligently painted, and the record proved exactly the contrary. Caven v. Warehouse Home Furnishings Distribs., Inc., 209 Ga. App. 706, 434 S.E.2d 532 (1993).

Slip and fall in other cases. — Executive Committee of the Baptist Convention was not entitled to summary judgment on the injured party's claim arising out of injuries sustained when the injured party fell in a pothole while attending a women's conference sponsored by the church because whether the injured party's failure to observe the defect amounted to a lack of reasonable care was a jury question. Thomas v. Exec. Comm. of the Baptist Convention, 262 Ga. App. 315, 585 S.E.2d 217 (2003).

Trial court erred in granting an owner's summary judgment motion in a slip and fall case brought by an injured party, as questions remained as to the owner's liability because: (1) the owner was on constructive notice as to the condition of a drainage culvert; (2) a reasonable inspection would have revealed that the cement surrounding the drainage culvert was slanted and had not been painted to alert pedestrians to any danger; (3) the injured party could not have seen the dramatic slope of the culvert from the injured person's vantage point on the median and could not appreciate the danger involved; (4) that the rough uneven pavement was a static condition did not automatically absolve the owner; and (5) the failure of the injured party to watch every step did not require summary judgment against the injured person. Hagadorn v. Prudential Ins. Co., 267 Ga. App. 143, 598 S.E.2d 865 (2004).

Premises owner was properly granted summary judgment in an occupant's personal injury action filed against it as the uneven and unstable brick-paved walkway where the occupant fell was an open and obvious static condition which the occupant was presumed to have knowledge of, given that the occupant had successfully traversed the area before; moreover, while the occupant might have disagreed with the trial court's application of the law to the facts presented, that disagreement did not warrant reversal. Nemeth v. RREEF Am., LLC, 283 Ga. App. 795, 643 S.E.2d 283 (2007).

Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to a seller in a buyer's personal injury action alleging negligence and nuisance as: (1) speculation as to what caused the buyer's fall was insufficient to sustain the former; and (2) evidence was lacking that the seller created, continued, or maintained the alleged nuisance, or controlled the release of a discharge on the property that allegedly caused the buyer's slip and fall. Grinold v. Farist, 284 Ga. App. 120, 643 S.E.2d 253 (2007).

In a slip and fall case, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to a premises owner on grounds that: (1) no material issue of fact remained as to whether a roof repair contractor's injuries were caused by the owner's failure to keep the subject premises safe; (2) the contractor failed to present any evidence that a foreign substance or any unusual hazard on the roof surface caused the fall; (3) it was not raining on the day of the fall; and (4) prior to the fall, the contractor inspected the roof by walking the length of the roof and looking at the roof from below, satisfied that the area was safe. Hardnett v. Silvey, 285 Ga. App. 424, 646 S.E.2d 514 (2007).

Slip and fall in homes. — Evidence that showed: (1) that a caretaker who was hired to care for a homeowner's invalid wife used stairs in the homeowner's house six to eight times before the caregiver was injured when the caregiver's knee buckled while carrying laundry down the stairs; (2) that the caregiver did not slip on a foreign substance that was on the stairs; and (3) that the stairs were properly manufactured and maintained, warranted summary judgment for the homeowner on the caretaker's claim alleging negligence, and the trial court's judgment denying the homeowner's motion for summary judgment was reversed. Duvall v. Green, 262 Ga. App. 669, 586 S.E.2d 369 (2003).

In a patron's slip and fall action filed against a home seller, the trial court properly found that the seller was entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law because the patron could not show that the seller's knowledge of the condition which allegedly caused the patron's fall, specifically, loose gravel on the ground immediately adjacent to unbuffered metal trailer tongues, was superior to the patrons. Whitley v. H & S Homes, LLC, 279 Ga. App. 877, 632 S.E.2d 728 (2006).

In a slip and fall action between a daughter and the daughter's mother, because the evidence showed that the daughter was a mere social guest or licensee in the mother's home at the time of the daughter's injury, present only in the home for the daughter's convenience, and the mother did not act with any intent to harm the daughter, the mother was properly granted summary judgment on the issue of liability for the daughter's personal injuries resulting from a slip and fall. Behforouz v. Vakil, 281 Ga. App. 603, 636 S.E.2d 674 (2006).

Summary judgment for the tortfeasor was affirmed because the injured party failed to show a genuine issue of material fact as to the existence of a slippery floor, the tortfeasor's knowledge of the condition, or that the tortfeasor's knowledge of the condition was superior to the knowledge of the injured party, given the injured party's use of the hallway, and the injured party's responsibility to see that the tortfeasor did not fall as the injured party was the care giver to the alleged tortfeasor. Sudduth v. Young, 260 Ga. App. 56, 579 S.E.2d 7 (2003).

Drunk driving. — Trial court properly granted the hosts' motion for summary judgment in an injured party's action under the Georgia Dram Shop Act, O.C.G.A. § 51-1-40(b), because: (1) the intoxicated driver's brother testified that the driver was not noticeably intoxicated at the party; (2) at the request of the brother, the driver agreed to stay with the hosts after the party because the driver had been drinking; (3) because there was direct evidence that the driver agreed not to drive soon, contrary knowledge could not be imputed to the hosts. Hodges v. Erickson, 264 Ga. App. 516, 591 S.E.2d 360 (2003).

When proof of spoliation present following drunk driving accident. — Given proof of spoliation under former O.C.G.A. § 24-2-22 in an action filed against a tavern pursuant to Georgia's Dram Shop Act, O.C.G.A. § 51-1-40(b), the trial court erred in granting summary judgment to an injured party's guardian, as the tavern's manager was aware of the potential for litigation and failed to preserve whatever videotaped evidence might have been captured as to whether one of the tavern's intoxicated patron's would soon be driving; hence, a rebuttable presumption arose against the tavern that the evidence destroyed would have been harmful to the tavern, rendering summary judgment inappropriate. Baxley v. Hakiel Indus., 282 Ga. 312, 647 S.E.2d 29 (2007).

Summary judgment was properly granted dismissing the motorists' suit against a restaurant under the Dram Shop Act, O.C.G.A. § 51-1-40(b), for injuries sustained in a collision with one of the restaurant's patrons because the evidence did not present a question of fact as to whether the restaurant knew that the patron would be driving soon after the patron left the premises. Sugarloaf Cafe, Inc. v. Willbanks, 279 Ga. 255, 612 S.E.2d 279 (2005).

Under the voluntary departure rule, if an invitee voluntarily departed from the route designated and maintained by the owner/occupier for the invitee's safety and convenience, the invitee assumed the risk of those hazards existent in the selected route as the conditions did not constitute a hazard when the traversed property was used for its intended purpose unless the hazard was common to both areas or the owner had notice that the unauthorized route was being regularly used improperly; because an injured person voluntarily departed from a sidewalk and fell on a partially exposed drainage pipe, and there was no evidence that the unauthorized route was being used improperly on a regular basis, summary judgment for a landlord in the injured person's premises liability case was affirmed. Chamblee v. Grayco, Inc., 266 Ga. App. 154, 596 S.E.2d 683 (2004).

Railroad not liable for railroad crossing fatality. — Railroad and the town were entitled to summary judgment in a survivor's action claiming damages from the survivor's decedent's fatal collision with a train because the survivor failed to show that the allegedly vision-obstructing vegetation was planted or maintained in violation of any statute, code, or local ordinance, and although railroads could be liable under common law negligence principles, the failure to maintain a railroad right of way was addressed by the Georgia Code of Public Transportation, specifically by O.C.G.A. § 32-6-51. Town of Register v. Fortner, 262 Ga. App. 507, 586 S.E.2d 54 (2003).

Delivery drivers. — In a personal injury action filed by an injured driver, the trial court granted summary judgment to a bus delivery courier on grounds that the delivery person who the driver alleged caused the accident was an independent contractor, and not the courier's employee as: (1) the courier did not control how the delivery person carried out the delivery of the bus, or what route to take in making the delivery; (2) the delivery person was required to comply with all governmental requirements, was required to maintain log books, and was required to pay all incidental fees and taxes; and (3) a requirement that the bus be delivered the next day was placed on the delivery person by the buyer, and not the courier. Larmon v. CCR Enters., 285 Ga. App. 594, 647 S.E.2d 306 (2007).

Uninsured motorist coverage. — Insurer was properly granted summary judgment in an insured's action for uninsured motorist coverage because there was no evidence of actual physical contact between the insured and an unknown driver, who allegedly struck either a manhole cover or the bottom of a construction barrel that then struck the insured's car, nor was there any corroborating eyewitness evidence. Hambrick v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 260 Ga. App. 266, 581 S.E.2d 299 (2003).

Teenager driving past curfew. — In a case in which the injured parties sought punitive damages from a motorist who collided with their vehicle because the motorist was a minor whose license did not allow the minor to drive after 1:00 a.m., and the collision occurred after 1:00

Applicability to Certain Actions,
Proceedings, Issues, and

a.m., the minor was entitled to partial summary judgment dismissing the punitive damages claim because the time the motorist was driving did not proximately cause the accident, nor was the motorist's action part of a pattern or policy of dangerous driving, such as driving while intoxicated or speeding excessively. Brooks v. Gray, 262 Ga. App. 232, 585 S.E.2d 188 (2003).

Pending cross action. — Motion for summary judgment will lie on the ground of pendency of substantially the same cross-claim filed against the party in a former action. Reeves Transp. Co. v. Gamble, 126 Ga. App. 165, 190 S.E.2d 98 (1972).

Summary judgment proper notwithstanding failure to show factual issues when counterclaim could not stand on own. — Because a housing authority failed to show that factual issues regarding the counterclaim brought by a husband and wife alleging violations of the Open Records Act, O.C.G.A. § 50-18-70 et seq., must have been decided in its favor, the trial court erred in granting summary judgment in favor of the authority on this claim; but since the husband and wife did not appeal the summary judgment for the authority on their slander claim, and since the civil conspiracy claim could not stand without this underlying tort, summary judgment for the authority on this issue was proper. Strange v. Hous. Auth. of Summerville, 268 Ga. App. 403, 602 S.E.2d 185 (2004).

Oral contract to make a will. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment for an executor in a suit by a child of the decedent alleging that the decedent orally contracted to leave a portion of the decedent's estate to the child as: (1) the validity of an agreement to make a will was a substantive matter for choice of law purposes, so Florida law applied; (2) oral contracts to make a will were invalid under Fla. Stat. ch. 732.701(1); and (3) the decedent's child failed to identify any terms in an earlier will made by the decedent that stemmed from a contract to leave a portion of the estate to the child. Harper v. Harper, 267 Ga. App. 553, 600 S.E.2d 659 (2004).

Probate of will. — If the evidence authorizes it, a superior court is empowered to grant summary judgment probating a will in solemn form so as to administer a decedent's estate. Taylor v. Donaldson, 227 Ga. 496, 181 S.E.2d 340, cert. denied, 404 U.S. 805, 92 S. Ct. 163, 30 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1971).

On appeal to the superior court from the probate court of a proceeding to probate a will, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, either party may move for summary judgment. Tony v. Pollard, 248 Ga. 86, 281 S.E.2d 557 (1981).

Trial court properly granted the widow's and the co-executor's motion for summary judgment and denied the family members' motion against the decedent's widow and the co-executor for partial summary judgment in the family members' lawsuit seeking their alleged share of the portion of the decedent's estate that the decedent inherited under the decedent's father's will, because of the transfer documents from a family settlement that occurred under the father's will and because the decedent left a lineal descendant surviving the descendant in decedent's adopted child. Haley v. Regions Bank, 277 Ga. 85, 586 S.E.2d 633 (2003).

Summary judgment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, was reversed because a genuine issue of material fact remained as to whether a transfer of money to the decedent's child before the decedent died was an advancement on the child's inheritance, and whether the child breached a fiduciary duty as a result. Walters v. Stewart, 263 Ga. App. 475, 588 S.E.2d 248 (2003).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 to will caveators in a will propounder's action seeking to probate a decedent's will because the decedent had sufficiently signed the will on the signature line of the self-proving clause, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 53-2-40.1, and there existed two competent witness signatures, which were sufficient for attestation purposes; accordingly, the statutory requirements for proper execution of a will under O.C.G.A. § 53-2-40 appeared to have been met and a jury issue was raised as to whether, in fact, the requirements were met. Miles v. Bryant, 277 Ga. 362, 589 S.E.2d 86 (2003).

Will provision did not require the executors to fund a marital trust with non-publicly traded stock, and did not conflict with the executor's power to fund the trust with assets the executor deemed advisable; since the will empowered the executors to sell the estate's assets and did not require them to fund the trust with the specific stock, the parol evidence rule barred use of an affidavit of the attorney who prepared the will to shed light on the testator's intent, and summary judgment in favor of a wife and against the executors was reversed. Reynolds v. Harrison, 278 Ga. 495, 604 S.E.2d 184 (2004).

In a probate action, because the testatrix's older four children failed in their burden of showing undue influence at the time that the will was executed, and an affidavit submitted by one of the testatrix's older children did not change this result, as such consisted of inadmissible hearsay, the superior court properly granted summary judgment to the testatrix's youngest child. Barber v. Holmes, 282 Ga. 768, 653 S.E.2d 448 (2007).

Co-executors' conduct in an estate administration. — Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the co-executors in claims of breach of fiduciary duty and constructive fraud or conspiracy filed by the beneficiaries of an estate because it was necessary for a jury to decide whether the co-executors breached their fiduciary duties to the beneficiaries or committed constructive fraud or engaged in a conspiracy through their actions due to the factual questions that arose regarding the co-executors' actions. Bloodworth v. Bloodworth, 260 Ga. App. 466, 579 S.E.2d 858 (2003).

Processioning proceeding. — When the protestant in a processioning proceeding pleaded a defense of res judicata and moved for summary judgment on this ground, the supporting motion with the record of a prior processioning proceeding between the same parties concerning the same issue of boundary, and in which the protestant obtained judgment, and the applicant made no contrary showing, a motion for summary judgment was properly granted. Souther v. Kichline, 124 Ga. App. 111, 183 S.E.2d 87 (1971).

Promissory note. — Ordinarily, summary judgment offers a speedy and efficient disposition of a case if there is an executed promissory note and the sole question is how much, if any, is due. Pollard v. First Nat'l Bank, 169 Ga. App. 598, 313 S.E.2d 785 (1984).

Because a guarantor's daughter and son-in-law's bankruptcy plan did not identify the guarantor's obligation on promissory notes that the guarantor co-signed in favor of a bank, the inquiry mandated by 11 U.S.C. § 1322(b)(1) was not performed, the guarantor's liability to the bank was not discharged by the bankruptcy court's judgment, the bank was entitled to recover principal and interest due on the promissory notes in an action filed in state court, and the state trial court properly granted the bank's motion for summary judgment against the guarantor. Hampton v. Bank of Lafayette, 259 Ga. App. 677, 578 S.E.2d 486 (2003).

In an action filed by a trust on a promissory note and guaranty against a guarantor, the trial court properly granted the trust summary judgment as the guarantor's unsworn affidavit did not qualify as competent evidence creating a factual issue as to the issue of whether the guarantor was entitled to a setoff; moreover, the court disagreed that the guaranty showed that the guarantor signed the guaranty in a representative capacity. Keane v. Annice Heygood Trevitt Support Trust, 285 Ga. App. 155, 645 S.E.2d 641 (2007).

Former member of a golf club was not entitled to summary judgment in the club's suit on a promissory note for an installment plan of a non-refundable membership as the member breached the note by failing to pay the final two installments, the club was entitled to keep the sums paid as liquidated damages, consideration was adequate, the fees paid for initiation were not contingent on the continuation of a membership, and nothing in the record showed that the membership contract was ever rescinded. Bonem v. Golf Club of Ga., Inc., 264 Ga. App. 573, 591 S.E.2d 462 (2003).

After obtaining consent from the probate court to sell construction equipment an executrix's decedent secured with a promissory note, the executrix was entitled to summary judgment as to the tort claims alleged against the decedent's corporation, after the corporation wrongfully retained possession of the equipment, converted two certificates of deposit, and the decedent's liability on the notes was extinguished under a provision of a stock sales agreement; furthermore, evidence was presented that the corporation's failure to release the equipment prevented the equipment's sale to third parties and thereby constituted a breach of a duty to mitigate damages. Midway R.R. Constr. Co. v. Beck, 281 Ga. App. 412, 636 S.E.2d 110 (2006).

In an action to recover on two promissory notes, because material fact issues remained regarding the consideration given for the promissory notes, creating an ambiguity for which parol evidence was admissible, and as to whether the notes were signed as part of the same transaction, summary judgment to either the lender or the debtor was inappropriate. Foreman v. Chattooga Int'l Techs., Inc., 289 Ga. App. 894, 658 S.E.2d 470 (2008).

Negotiable instruments. — Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to a bank and a credit union on claims of conversion, civil conspiracy, and for attorney fees and punitive damages as: (1) no probative evidence existed that the buyer received delivery of the check, and thus, it never became a holder of the instrument at issue or entitled to enforce it; (2) no evidence was presented that the bank and credit union acted in concert against the buyer; (3) no evidence of misconduct or bad faith on the part of the bank or the credit union was presented; but, the trial court properly found that a genuine issue of material fact existed as to whether the bank and the credit union were holders in due course. Hartsock v. Rich's Empls. Credit Union, 279 Ga. App. 724, 632 S.E.2d 476 (2006).

Debtor and creditors. — Trial court erred in entering summary judgment for a creditor in a debtor's suit seeking to quiet title as: (1) a co-debtor paid the creditor's note in full, which extinguished the debt; (2) once the note was paid, the collateral should have been released; (3) the creditor could not assign the note to the co-debtor; (4) the co-debtor had only a right to contribution as there was no indication that the co-debtor was a surety under the co-debtor's agreement with the debtor; and (5) O.C.G.A. § 9-13-78 was inapplicable as the statute pertained to co-defendants against whom a judgment had been obtained. Johnson v. AgSouth Farm Credit, 267 Ga. App. 567, 600 S.E.2d 664 (2004).

In an action to recover the balance of the money owed under a loan, because the guarantor of the loan failed to show the lack of an adequate foundation for the admitted evidence, a claim that the trial court erred in admitting the loan history report as a business record failed; hence, the proponent bank was properly granted summary judgment on the issue. Ishak v. First Flag Bank, 283 Ga. App. 517, 642 S.E.2d 143 (2007).

Trial court's order granting summary judgment to a collection company, and against a debtor, in the former's deficiency action, was upheld on appeal as it was not based on inadmissible hearsay, but upon records admissible under the business records exception to the hearsay rule, and was dispositive of the debtor's counterclaims, which arose out of the company's request for a deficiency judgment. Boyd v. Calvary Portfolio Servs., 285 Ga. App. 390, 646 S.E.2d 496 (2007).

Because genuine material fact issues remained as to a portion of the indebtedness owed to a creditor by a debtor, the creditor was not entitled to summary judgment as to that portion; moreover, the debtor was not entitled to a credit for the debtor's payment to the creditor as one of the signatories on the account admitted that such was made on behalf of another corporation the debtor's president and vice-president owned. Sweet Water Tree Farm, Inc. v. J. Frank Schmidt & Son, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 455, 651 S.E.2d 787 (2007).

Action to collect unpaid credit card debt. — Because an action filed by a creditor to collect unpaid credit card charges was based on a written contract, and not an open account, the trial court properly held that the six-year limitations period under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-24 applied, supporting summary judgment in the creditor's favor; moreover, because the transaction at issue was a written contract, the form of the debtor's acceptance was immaterial. Hill v. Am. Express, 289 Ga. App. 576, 657 S.E.2d 547 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 490 (Ga. 2008).

Actions against financial institutions. — In an action filed by a bank customer's son after the bank paid the customer the proceeds of a certificate of deposit (CD) the customer purchased in both the customer's name and the son's name, alleging violations of the son's rights in the CD, the appellate court held that the bank was protected from liability by O.C.G.A. §§ 7-1-816 and 7-1-820 because the customer's telephone request for redemption was made in accordance with conditions of the customer's account and the bank's regulations, and the appellate court affirmed the trial court's judgment granting summary judgment for the bank. South v. Bank of Am., 260 Ga. App. 91, 579 S.E.2d 80 (2003).

When a debtor who purchased credit disability insurance sued a creditor for wrongful repossession, the trial court erroneously granted summary judgment to the creditor, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), because the creditor had an obligation to look to the credit disability insurance first before repossessing the debtor's vehicle. Corbin v. Regions Bank, 258 Ga. App. 490, 574 S.E.2d 616 (2002).

Bankruptcy. — In a Chapter 7 bankruptcy proceeding, a debtor's failure to remit lottery proceeds from the debtor's retail store to the Georgia Lottery Corporation satisfied the defalcation while acting in a fiduciary capacity exception to the discharge provision under § 523(a)(4) of the Bankruptcy Code, 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(4); thus, summary judgment in favor of the Corporation on the issue of liability was proper. Georgia Lottery Corp. v. Thompson (In re Thompson), 296 B.R.

563 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 2003).

Re-acceptance of vehicle after alleged revocation. — Buyer's acts of ownership over a truck after informing the buyer's creditor that the buyer would be returning the truck constituted, as a matter of law, re-acceptance of the vehicle; therefore, there was no genuine issue of fact with respect to the buyer's revocation of acceptance and the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment. Olson v. Ford Motor Co., 258 Ga. App. 848, 575 S.E.2d 743 (2002).

Repossession of vehicle. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to an auto dealer, a mortgage broker, and a lender on the accused person's claim for tortious interference with business relations; even if it was assumed that the accused person had established all the other elements of tortious interference regarding the repossession of a vehicle another person bought using the accused person's name, the accused person did not offer any proof that they acted maliciously by reporting the repossession. Blakey v. Victory Equip. Sales, inc., 259 Ga. App. 34, 576 S.E.2d 38 (2002).

Summary judgment was properly entered for a credit union on an owner's claim for wrongful possession as the owner defaulted on the agreement with the credit union by failing to pay the storage fees for the car which resulted in a garageman's lien; under O.C.G.A. § 11-9-601(a), as the owner was in default, the credit union could, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 11-9-609(a), take possession of the collateral, and under O.C.G.A. § 11-9-610, the credit union could sell the collateral. Endsley v. Robins Fed. Credit Union, 267 Ga. App. 512, 600 S.E.2d 441 (2004).

In a civil action arising from a creditor's repossession of a debtor's vehicle, summary judgment on a debtor's conversion and punitive damages claims against a creditor was reversed as the trial court erroneously found that the debtor's failure to demand that the creditor return the subject vehicle was fatal to the claim, given that the creditor wrongfully repossessed and then sold the car subject to the parties' finance agreement, and hence no demand was necessary; but, as the debtor

Applicability to Certain Actions,
Proceedings, Issues, and

did not challenge summary judgment on the debtor's emotional distress claim, the judgment was upheld. Williams v. Nat'l Auto Sales, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 283, 651 S.E.2d 194 (2007).

Duty to warn in products liability action. — Because the trial court granted summary judgment to a spine plate manufacturer pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, based on the doctrine of learned intermediary, in the patient's failure to warn claim, it was clear that the trial court determined that the warning given by the manufacturer to the physician was adequate or reasonable as a matter of law and, accordingly, the Court of Appeals should have reviewed the patient's arguments on that doctrine in the patient's appeal. McCombs v. Synthes, 277 Ga. 252, 587 S.E.2d 594 (2003).

Real-party-in-interest objection. — Summary judgment cannot properly be granted to a defendant on the basis of a real-party-in-interest objection. Warshaw Properties v. Lackey, 170 Ga. App. 101, 316 S.E.2d 482 (1984).

Since a real-party-in-interest objection is a matter in abatement and does not go to the merits of an action, such an objection cannot be disposed of by means of summary judgment but is properly disposed of pursuant to a motion to dismiss. Fleming v. Caras, 170 Ga. App. 579, 317 S.E.2d 600 (1984).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 to a boat owner in an action arising from a boat/jet ski accident; although the plaintiffs were not proper parties to the action, as the plaintiffs did not own the jet ski and did not hold any valid subrogation claim, a real party in interest defense pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17 was not a proper subject for summary judgment, and the trial court should have dismissed the action. Franco v. Cox, 265 Ga. App. 514, 594 S.E.2d 717 (2004).

Third-party beneficiaries. — When an attorney sued a former client's ex-spouse to enforce a lien on the former client's former marital residence, which was titled in the ex-spouse's name, the attorney was entitled to summary judgment because the ex-spouse's separation agreement with the former client provided for the satisfaction of liens against the former client, and the attorney was an unnamed third-party beneficiary of that separation agreement. Northern v. Tobin, 262 Ga. App. 339, 585 S.E.2d 681 (2003).

RICO. — Because the plaintiffs, in neither the complaint nor the evidence in opposition to a motion for summary judgment, produced any evidence raising the issue that the defendants committed two predicate criminal acts indictable under state or federal law and within one of the categories allowing an action under the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organization statute, 18 U.S.C. § 1961 et seq., summary judgment for the defendant was proper. Roth v. Connor, 235 Ga. App. 866, 510 S.E.2d 550 (1998).

Court properly denied the defendants' motion for summary judgment in a bank's state RICO action because a genuine issue of fact remained as to the defendants' participation in a pattern of racketeering activity sufficient to ground liability under O.C.G.A. § 16-14-4(a); the jury could also reasonably find that the defendants were knowing and voluntary participants in a racketeering enterprise sufficient to establish liability under O.C.G.A. § 16-14-4(b). Faillace v. Columbus Bank & Trust Co., 269 Ga. App. 866, 605 S.E.2d 450 (2004).

Termination of employment. — Because a decision to terminate the plaintiff was made after the plaintiff had tendered a resignation, which resignation triggered a provision in the plaintiff's Buy-Sell Agreement that required the repurchase of the plaintiff's stock, the price for which would decrease if the plaintiff was fired for cause, and because the evidence, construed in the plaintiff's favor, supported an inference that the president's stated reasons for terminating the plaintiff were contrived, there was some evidence from which a jury could infer a lack of good faith on the part of the president, and the trial court erred in granting partial summary judgment on the issue of whether the plaintiff was fired for good cause. Phillips v. Key Servs., Inc., 235 Ga. App. 564, 510 S.E.2d 304 (1998).

Summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) was properly granted to the defendants, a city, a city mayor, and a city council, in a police chief's action alleging wrongful termination and tortious interference with business relations as the defendants acted within the defendants' authority in discharging the police chief for falsifying another police officer's application for training; further, the chief was an at-will employee and, accordingly, the chief's employment was terminable at will and such action did not give rise to a claim for alleged wrongful termination. Wilson v. City of Sardis, 264 Ga. App. 178, 590 S.E.2d 383 (2003).

Sexual harassment and retaliation. — Although the supervisor's isolated attempt to kiss the employee was clearly inappropriate and reprehensible, alone it was insufficient to create a jury question regarding the employee's claim of sexual harassment from a hostile work environment; thus, summary judgment was appropriately granted. Furthermore, the employer was entitled to summary judgment on the employee's retaliation claim after the employee resigned; the employee could not show that the employer took any adverse employment action against the employee by requiring the employee to leave on the original date the employee chose. Liebno v. Drexel Chem. Co., 262 Ga. App. 517, 586 S.E.2d 67 (2003).

Battery. — Grant of partial summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 to a physician in a patient's action alleging breach of fiduciary duty and battery arising from an alleged failure to obtain valid consent prior to performing a medical procedure was erroneous because the physician had represented to the patient that the patient's orthopedic surgeon had been made aware of the treatment plans and had approved the plans, but there was no direct evidence that the surgeon had actually received the plans and had been aware of the plans and approved of the plans; accordingly, the jury could have found that the physician misrepresented that situation with an intent to deceive pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 51-6-2(b), which would have constituted sufficient fraud to have vitiated the consent. Petzelt v.

Tewes, 260 Ga. App. 802, 581 S.E.2d 345 (2003).

Employee's claim of battery. — Grant of summary judgment in favor of the employee on the employee's claim of battery was reversed because there were factual issues regarding whether a co-worker's conduct constituted an offensive touching and whether the touching was intentional. Vasquez v. Smith, 259 Ga. App. 79, 576 S.E.2d 59 (2003).

Public employee's freedom of speech. — Summary judgment was properly granted to the defendants on the employee's claim that the employee was dismissed for exercising the constitutional right to free speech, in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983, because the employee's speech, made during an internal investigation of university officers, was made primarily in the employee's role as an employee and not as a citizen; thus, the speech was not constitutionally protected. Jones v. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga., 262 Ga. App. 75, 585 S.E.2d 138 (2003).

Local government personnel issues. — Because a county tax commissioner's employees were within the county's civil service system, the county was properly granted summary judgment and, hence, the county's personnel director was authorized to refuse to implement raises to the employees as the commissioner sought; moreover, the commissioner's reliance on O.C.G.A. § 36-1-21 did not change the result as that statute expressly applied only to civil service systems created by county governing authorities, and the civil service system at issue was created by the Georgia General Assembly. Ferdinand v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 281 Ga. 643, 641 S.E.2d 787 (2007).

Exclusivity doctrine of the Georgia Workers' Compensation Act. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment in favor of a co-worker and an employer as the exclusivity doctrine of the Georgia Workers' Compensation Act, specifically O.C.G.A. § 34-9-11(a), barred an employee's assault and battery and intentional infliction of emotional distress claims against a co-worker, and the employee's negligent retention and respondeat superior claims against the employer as the claims were ancillary to a physical occurrence arising in the course of employment; the injuries were incurred when the co-worker inflicted a minor punch or poke on the employee, not an incidental contact, which showed some level of physical harm. Lewis v. Northside Hosp., Inc., 267 Ga. App. 288, 599 S.E.2d 267 (2004).

Applicability to Certain Actions,
Proceedings, Issues, and

In a wrongful death action, the trial court erred in denying an employer's motion for summary judgment against the claims filed by the decedent's parents, as those claims were limited by the exclusivity provisions of the Georgia Workers' Compensation Act, given evidence that the decedent's death arose out of and in the course of employment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 34-9-1(4). Burns Int'l Sec. Servs. Corp. v. Johnson, 284 Ga. App. 289, 643 S.E.2d 800 (2007).

State preemption of county ordinance. — Because the plain language of O.C.G.A. § 16-11-173 expressly precluded a county from regulating the carrying of firearms in any manner, a county ordinance attempting to regulate the carrying of firearms was preempted by the statute; thus, the trial court erred in concluding otherwise and by denying summary judgment to a citizen and advocacy group on those grounds. GeorgiaCarry.Org, Inc. v. Coweta County, 288 Ga. App. 748, 655 S.E.2d 346 (2007).

Whistleblowers. — Summary judgment was erroneously granted to the board of regents on the employee's claim under O.C.G.A. § 45-1-4, the "whistleblower" statute, because a jury issue existed regarding whether "action" was taken against the employee for purposes of § 45-1-4; the record contained at least some circumstantial evidence that the employee was dismissed in reprisal for the employee's investigation into the university's officers and for disclosing information of fraud in connection with the investigation. Jones v. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys. of Ga., 262 Ga. App. 75, 585 S.E.2d 138 (2003).

Breach of implied warranties of merchantability and fitness for particular purpose. — Seller was denied summary judgment on the customer's action alleging breach of implied warranties of merchantability and fitness for a particular purpose; the customer's failure to serve the seller with notice of the defect in the product until two years and three days after the customer suffered an injury was, by itself, not enough of a delay to prejudice the seller and bar relief. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Wheeler, 262 Ga. App. 607, 586 S.E.2d 83 (2003).

Conversion. — Denial of summary judgment as to a claim that funds were allegedly converted to the defendants' personal use was reversed because there was no evidence in the record to support such a claim. Harris v. Gilmore, 265 Ga. App. 841, 595 S.E.2d 651 (2004).

Consignment. — While a buyer of a motor home on consignment was entitled to summary judgment after the dealer never paid the consignors, when the consignors refused to execute an assignment and warranty of title when the buyer sought the same, the buyer was entitled to damages, including reasonable attorney's fees under O.C.G.A. § 40-3-32(a) caused thereby. Smith v. Hardeman, 281 Ga. App. 402, 636 S.E.2d 106 (2006).

Debtor/creditor issues. — Summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) was properly granted to a creditor in the creditor's action seeking to collect on a debt since the debtor's defense consisted of a claim in recoupment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 13-7-2 and 13-7-13, based on personal injuries the debtor suffered from the negligent conduct of the creditor; the court ruled that such a defense was not applicable to the creditor's claim because the claims were legally distinct. Long v. Reeves Southeastern Corp., 259 Ga. App. 257, 576 S.E.2d 641 (2003).

Desecration of cemetery. — Summary judgment for the secretary of a land company was affirmed in a case brought by family members claiming that acts committed by the land company allegedly desecrated the family members' family cemetery because affidavits submitted by the secretary attested to the fact that the secretary never acted outside of the scope of the secretary's authority as an officer of the land company, did not personally direct, supervise, or control the operator who cleared the land in question, and did not personally direct, supervise, or directly take part in the land clearing that allegedly resulted in the desecration; the burden shifted to the family members, who put forth no affidavits or other evidence that demonstrated the secretary's individual liability for the alleged tortious acts. Cesar v. Shelton, No. A04A0717, 2004 Ga. App. LEXIS 355 (Mar. 15, 2004).

Georgia Recreational Purposes Act defense. — Trial court erred in granting summary judgment for a school board as to an injured party's personal injury claim based on the Georgia Recreational Purposes Act, specifically O.C.G.A. §§ 51-3-22 and 51-3-23, as the school board presented no evidence that the playground was open to the public and the injured party presented evidence that the playground: (1) was fenced-in; (2) was only for the use of children enrolled in the school; and (3) was not open to any segment of the general public. Hart v. Appling County Sch. Bd., 266 Ga. App. 300, 597 S.E.2d 462 (2004).

Tort action. — One spouse's claim for damages for a motorcycle accident against the other spouse involved only a tort claim, and was not a divorce case within the meaning of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. VI, Sec. VI, Para. III(6), even though the spouse sought a divorce in another count of the complaint, and the Supreme Court of Georgia did not have jurisdiction over the interlocutory appeal of the denial of the other spouse's motion to dismiss, which had been treated as a motion for summary judgment; the spouse claimant's argument that the appeal fell within the Supreme Court of Georgia's appellate jurisdiction over constitutional issues was rejected as no allegedly unconstitutional statutes were specified, and argued only that the interspousal tort immunity doctrine, as codified in O.C.G.A. § 19-3-8, was unconstitutional as applied. Gates v. Gates, 277 Ga. 175, 587 S.E.2d 32 (2003).

Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to the defendants in a tort action, based on a bankruptcy court's order confirming their Chapter 11 plan, which discharged the tort claim and barred the plaintiffs from continuing their suit as the plaintiffs did not dispute that their tort claim was within the scope of the defendants' discharge in bankruptcy; further, the trial court correctly concluded that such constituted a defense which barred the plaintiffs' tort action to collect the discharged claim. Roy v. Garden Ridge, L.P., 283 Ga. App. 74, 640 S.E.2d 665 (2006).

In a parent's suit as a next friend to the parent's daughter, the trial court erred in denying summary judgment to a retailer and the retailer's employees on the parent's claim of tortious misconduct as no evidence was presented that the child victim was the retailer's business invitee, but was merely a licensee under both O.C.G.A. §§ 51-3-1 and 51-3-2 as the child merely entered the business with the sole intent to use the restroom; however, summary judgment was properly denied as to the invasion of privacy, intentional infliction of emotional distress, false imprisonment, false arrest, and damages claims filed by the parent against the defendants. Todd v. Byrd, 283 Ga. App. 37, 640 S.E.2d 652 (2006), overruled on other grounds, Ferrell v. Mikula, 295 Ga. App. 326, 672 S.E.2d. 7 (2008).

Tort claim arising from flooding. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the city on the claimant's tort claims arising from the back up of a sewer that flooded the claimant's home as no genuine dispute existed that the claimant did not file a written ante litem notice with the city within six months of the happening of the event that gave rise to the claim, the first flooding. The claimant was required to file written notice within that time even though the claimant alleged the flooding was a continuing nuisance as the city was entitled to notice arising from the first flooding so the city could attempt to fix the problem, and the claimant's failure to timely give the city written notice meant the city could not be held liable. Cundy v. City of Smyrna, 264 Ga. App. 535, 591 S.E.2d 447 (2003).

Slander claims. — In a suit between feuding neighbors, the trial court properly held that the words spoken by one against the other, which the latter alleged were disparaging against America's loss on September 11, 2001, were not slanderous

Applicability to Certain Actions,
Proceedings, Issues, and

as the words were an expression of pure opinion, which was neither provable as true nor as false; as a result, the neighbor who uttered the allegedly slanderous comments was entitled to summary judgment on the other's claim of slander per se. Bullard v. Boulter, 286 Ga. App. 218, 649 S.E.2d 311 (2007).

Stalking arising to invasion of privacy. — Because: (1) evidence was presented that the appellee denied the intent required under the stalking statute, O.C.G.A. § 16-5-90; and (2) a motion quashing a subpoena for the appellee's cell phone records was proper as those cell phone records were not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence or information relevant to the intrusiveness of the appellee's behavior, the trial court properly denied partial summary judgment on the appellant's stalking claim and entered an order quashing a subpoena for appellee's cell phone records; but, because the appellee's alleged repeated actions of following the appellant and taking pictures arose to an invasion of privacy, summary judgment was inappropriate. Anderson v. Mergenhagen, 283 Ga. App. 546, 642 S.E.2d 105 (2007).

Action brought by auctioneer for tort of auction company. — When an auctioneer sought damages from the auction company for whom the auctioneer worked and the principal because the auctioneer was arrested in another state for contracting and advertising for an auction without a license, the auction company and principal were entitled to summary judgment because the auctioneer did not show the auction company or principal violated any duty owed the auctioneer that caused the auctioneer's injury, as the auctioneer knew, when the auctioneer advertised and contracted for the auction in the other state; further, the auction company did not have a license to conduct an auction in that state so the auctioneer did not establish the elements necessary to recover for the auction company's or principal's alleged tortious conduct under

O.C.G.A. § 51-1-1. Morris v. Gavin, Inc., 268 Ga. App. 771, 603 S.E.2d 1 (2004).

Products liability. — Under the learned intermediary doctrine, a warning included with a plate surgically implanted into a consumer by the consumer's physician stating that the plate could break when subjected to the increased loading associated with delayed union or non-union, and such occurred to the consumer, was adequate and reasonable under the circumstances of the case; thus, summary judgment against the consumer was properly entered. McCombs v. Synthes (U.S.A.), 266 Ga. App. 304, 596 S.E.2d 780 (2004).

Because: (1) a couple failed to present sufficient evidence to show an original manufacturing defect in their used car at the time the car left the car's manufacturer; (2) two product recalls did not apply to the vehicle; and (3) the doctrine of res ipsa loquitur did not apply, summary judgment was properly granted to the car's manufacturer on the couple's negligent manufacturing, failure to warn, and one of the spouse's loss of consortium claim; moreover, even if the trial court erred in considering the affidavits submitted by the manufacturer's expert, such did not amount to reversible error. Miller v. Ford Motor Co., 287 Ga. App. 642, 653 S.E.2d 82 (2007).

Privileged communications. — Attorney's statements regarding a doctor made in the form of two phone messages to the doctor's patients were privileged as the statements were made in anticipation of a lawsuit the attorney was preparing to file, were not slanderous, and did not interfere with the doctor's business relations; thus, the attorney was entitled to summary judgment on the doctor's claims of slander and tortious interference with business relations. Vito v. Inman, 286 Ga. App. 646, 649 S.E.2d 753 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 770 (Ga. 2007).

Creation of easement by implication. — Trial court erred in granting summary judgment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, to a property owner who sought an easement by implication of law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 44-9-1 over an adjoining property owners' land as the record was insufficient to support such a determination; the parties' accounts of how the land was divided upon foreclosure from the original grantor differed greatly and there were no deeds, deed assignments, dates, or foreclosure information provided in the record in order to properly determine if such an easement was created. Boyer v. Whiddon, 264 Ga. App. 137, 589 S.E.2d 709 (2003).

Condemnation actions. — In a condemnation action, partial summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the Georgia Department of Transportation because an owner was unable to recover losses for business damages as the evidence showed that the owner was not actually conducting a business on the condemned land, despite the fact that a lease agreement between the owner and a lessee gave the owner some control over the business operations of a service station and store located on the property. Davis Co. v. DOT, 262 Ga. App. 138, 584 S.E.2d 705 (2003).

Statutes of limitations. — Motion for summary judgment is the proper procedure by which to secure a ruling on the statute of limitations. Houston v. Doe, 136 Ga. App. 583, 222 S.E.2d 131 (1975).

Although the act that originally caused the nuisance might not have been committed within the period of limitations of the action, the defendant presented some evidence that the groundwater contamination was a continuing tort that continued to inflict damages in the four years prior to the suit; therefore, summary judgment was inappropriate when based upon the suit being time barred. Tri-County Inv. Group v. Southern States, Inc., 231 Ga. App. 632, 500 S.E.2d 22 (1998).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a driver in the victim's action stemming from a vehicular collision on the basis that service did not relate back to the time of filing the complaint as the victim did not ensure that the suit was being filed in the proper county. Williams v. Bragg, 260 Ga. App. 377, 579 S.E.2d 800 (2003).

In a medical malpractice action, because the trial court erroneously applied the five-year statute of repose contained in O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(b), and not O.C.G.A. § 9-3-73, in finding that the parents' amended negligence complaint against certain doctors and nurses was time-barred, the trial court erred in entering summary judgment against the parents; further, the trial court also erred in finding that the doctors and nurses were rendering care to only the mother, and not the mother and the newborn child. Johnson v. Thompson, 286 Ga. App. 810, 650 S.E.2d 322 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 90 (Ga. 2008).

Because a sublessee failed to file its claims under a divisible sublease within the six-year period after the claims arose, pursuant to the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-3-24, and a different limitations period applicable to construction contracts and express warranties did not apply, partial summary judgment to the sublessor as to the time-barred claims was properly entered. New Morn Foods, Inc. v. B & B Egg Co., 286 Ga. App. 29, 648 S.E.2d 428 (2007).

Because a belated claim in a breach of contract action filed against an alleged homebuilder's partner did not relate back to the date of the original complaint, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(c), summary judgment in favor of the homebuilder was correctly granted based on the expiration of the six-year limitation period under O.C.G.A. § 9-3-24. Wallick v. Lamb, 289 Ga. App. 25, 656 S.E.2d 164 (2007).

Tree limb hitting visitor to property. — In a case brought against a property owner by an injured person who was hurt when a limb fell from a tree in the property owner's yard and struck the injured person, summary judgment for the property owner was affirmed because the property owner's expert signed an affidavit in which the expert stated that because there were green leaves growing on the limb, the average person would not have known that the limb was diseased and in which the expert also stated that the tree was healthy, with no visible signs of stress and no visible signs of existing hazards; there was no evidence that the tree was diseased or decayed, and thus there was no prior notice to the property owner that the tree may have constituted a dangerous condition. Klein v. Weaver, 265 Ga. App. 390, 593 S.E.2d 913 (2004).

Applicability to Certain Actions,
Proceedings, Issues, and

Forfeiture. — Massage parlor operator was entitled to summary judgment in a civil forfeiture action instituted by the State of Georgia in connection with a Georgia Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act action because the state merely rested on the state's allegations used to procure a search warrant and did not have admissible evidence, documentary or testimonial, to support the state's allegations that the operator had engaged in the predicate acts of prostitution, federal money laundering, mail fraud, and Travel Act violations, both individually and in conspiracy with others. Pabey v. State, 262 Ga. App. 272, 585 S.E.2d 200 (2003).

Inverse condemnation action. — City was properly granted summary judgment in an inverse condemnation suit because the city's change in making a road a one-way street did not disturb the direct vehicular access existing from the owners' land to the abutting street; thus, there was no compensable taking, despite the fact that access was less convenient. Hanson v. City of Roswell, 262 Ga. App. 671, 586 S.E.2d 341 (2003).

Trial court properly granted partial summary judgment to a county in an action filed against the county by a competitor in the water supply business because a claim of inverse condemnation arising from the county's operation of a competing water supply system and resulting loss of business was not based on physical damage to the competitor's property, but rather left the claim extant, whether advanced under a theory of trespass or inverse condemnation. Jones v. Putnam County, 289 Ga. App. 290, 656 S.E.2d 912 (2008).

Immunity of city for death of fleeing suspect. — Appellate court erred in denying a city's motion for summary judgment in a police pursuit case as the statute stating that a city could be held liable for injuries sustained during a police pursuit, under certain circumstances, applied only to innocent persons who were injured and not to fleeing suspects unless it was shown the officer intended to injure the suspect; since no such showing was made, the parents of the fleeing suspect who was killed trying to drive away from the officer could not recover from the city. City of Winder v. McDougald, 276 Ga. 866, 583 S.E.2d 879 (2003).

42 U.S.C. § 1983 action. — Janitorial service owner's 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim against a police detective, a police chief, and a police department could not withstand summary judgment because the police detective properly relied upon a trustworthy source to establish probable cause to arrest the owner for a theft from a customer's spa without investigating. Means v. City of Atlanta Police Dept., 262 Ga. App. 700, 586 S.E.2d 373 (2003).

Abusive litigation. — Because a construction company's counterclaims alleging abusive litigation under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-15-14 and 51-7-80 et seq., alleged in the pleading that the claims constituted "notice" to assert such claims under O.C.G.A. § 51-7-81, the trial court properly determined that the claims were not counterclaims and, accordingly, dismissed the claims for want of subject matter jurisdiction under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(h)(3); it was also found that the required notice provided in O.C.G.A. § 51-7-84(b) was not provided prior to the filing of a claim, nor was the prior litigation ended in the defendants' favor, both of which were requirements in order to bring such a claim, and disposing of the claim under a summary judgment analysis, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, was proper. Langley v. Nat'l Labor Group, Inc., 262 Ga. App. 749, 586 S.E.2d 418 (2003).

Because the Court of Appeals of Georgia merely found in a prior action between the parties that an employer failed to prove the employer's claims against a former employee at trial, and that holding did not amount to a binding determination that those claims were without substantial justification or that the employer engaged in abusive litigation, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the employer as to the former employee's abusive litigation claims; moreover, although questions of reasonableness were generally for the jury, given that the employer was successful at every stage of the litigation, tion prior to the appeal, the trial court was authorized to determine as a matter of law that the company acted in good faith in filing and pursuing the company's claims. Bacon v. Volvo Serv. Ctr., Inc., 288 Ga. App. 399, 654 S.E.2d 225 (2007).

Punitive damages. — When a company sued the company's accountants for punitive damages regarding their participation in a sale of the company's assets because they did not notify the company's principal of the sale, summary judgment was properly granted in favor of the accountants because the accountants' failure to inform the principal of the sale and their participation in the sale breached no duty the accountants owed the company and was attributable to the company's and principal's own failure to apprise the accountants that the corporation represented as the company's parent was no longer the parent and was not authorized to approve the sale. R.W. Holdco, Inc. v. Johnson, 267 Ga. App. 859, 601 S.E.2d 177 (2004).

Summary judgment was properly entered for a realtor and a developer as to a landowner's punitive damages claims as the realtor and the developer were entitled to summary judgment on the landowner's underlying claims. Sorrow v. Hadaway, 269 Ga. App. 446, 604 S.E.2d 197 (2004).

Because the appeals court found that other intentional tort claims survived summary judgment which would authorize the imposition of punitive damages if the jury were to find that a retailer and the retailer's employees acted with a wanton disregard of a nine-year-old child's rights, the trial court did not err by denying summary judgment on these grounds. Todd v. Byrd, 283 Ga. App. 37, 640 S.E.2d 652 (2006), overruled on other grounds, Ferrell v. Mikula, 295 Ga. App. 326, 672 S.E.2d 7 (2008).

In a legal malpractice action, because the evidence sufficiently showed that the client was precluded from seeking punitive damages in the underlying suit against the opposing party, the attorney being sued was properly granted summary judgment on the issue. Brito v. Gomez Law Group, LLC, 289 Ga. App. 625, 658 S.E.2d 178 (2008).

Tax issues. — Summary judgment for a county board of tax assessors (BTA) in a taxpayer's suit seeking injunctive relief and a writ of mandamus compelling a board of equalization (BOE) to adjudicate its appeal of a reassessment for one tax year was reversed as: (1) there were no objective criteria in place for choosing businesses for audits when the taxpayer was chosen for a four-year audit; (2) there was evidence that the BTA attempted to thwart the taxpayer's statutory right to prompt adjudication of its appeal before the BOE under O.C.G.A. § 48-5-311; and (3) there was a jury question as to whether the audit was begun by an accounting firm or the BTA for an improper purpose in violation of O.C.G.A. § 48-5-299(a). Parisian, Inc. v. Cobb County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 263 Ga. App. 332, 587 S.E.2d 771 (2003).

County and the county tax commission were entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law in an action filed by a trucking company seeking a refund for ad valorem taxes the company paid as it was undisputed at trial that the company failed to timely file for either an apportionment in two subject years, as required by Ga. Comp. R. & Regs. r. 560-11-7-.02, and that the company did not appeal the company's ad valorem assessment within 45 days of the assessment in either year, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 48-5-311; furthermore, O.C.G.A. § 48-5-380, which allowed a taxpayer to seek a refund up to three years after paying an erroneous or illegal tax, did not apply. Trans Link Motor Express, Inc. v. Dougherty County, 265 Ga. App. 10, 592 S.E.2d 859 (2003).

In a bench trial, in which an order was issued establishing the 1997 fair market value of the taxpayer's property at a value of $4,709,000, which was an amount greater than the value set by the board of equalization, but when the taxpayer paid taxes in 1997, 1998, and 1999, based on the board of equalization's 1997 valuation and when because the 1997 value of the taxpayer's property was finally determined to be $4,709,000, the taxpayer automatically returned the property in 1998 and 1999 at that value, the taxpayer underpaid taxes for the 1997, 1998, and 1999 tax years and the tax assessors were entitled to a summary judgment finding that the taxpayer had underpaid taxes and that the taxpayer owed additional sums; furthermore, the statutory notice requirements of O.C.G.A. § 48-5-306 did not preclude summary judgment. Pine Pointe Hous., L. P. v. Bd. of Tax Assessors, 269 Ga. App. 855, 605 S.E.2d 443 (2004).

Because taxpayer's assignee lacked standing to claim a refund of ad valorem taxes allegedly overpaid by the assignor, the trial court erred in finding that the assignee was entitled to the refund; as a result, the court also erred in denying the respective counties summary judgment on the issue. Clayton County v. HealthSouth Holdings, Inc., 288 Ga. App. 406, 654 S.E.2d 143 (2007).

Sovereign immunity. — Trial court erred in granting a school board's motion for summary judgment as to an injured party's personal injury claim based on sovereign immunity as: (1) the trial court applied the wrong version of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e), which was amended, prospectively, after the accident; (2) the applicable version of Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. II, Para. IX(e) was that in effect at the time of the accident in 1990; and (3) the parties agreed that an insurance policy would have constituted a waiver of the board's sovereign immunity, which implied that a policy existed; the case was remanded so that the trial court could reconsider the court's decision in light of the correct law and any insurance policy. Hart v. Appling County Sch. Bd., 266 Ga. App. 300, 597 S.E.2d 462 (2004).

In an action arising out of an arrest, despite the way the arrestee was treated, the trial court properly dismissed a complaint against a county, and granted summary judgment on the same complaint against a city on sovereign immunity grounds because the arrestee failed to show that the immunity had been waived. Scott v. City of Valdosta, 280 Ga. App. 481, 634 S.E.2d 472 (2006).

In a tort action for personal injuries and property damage arising from an auto collision filed against a city, because the facts did not involve an officer's pursuit of a fleeing suspect, or damages caused by a fleeing suspect, O.C.G.A. § 40-6-6 did not apply to the action, and thus, the trial court erred in relying on the statute as a ground for granting summary judgment to the city on sovereign immunity grounds. Weaver v. City of Statesboro, 288 Ga. App. 32, 653 S.E.2d 765 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 221 (Ga. 2008).

Official immunity for discretionary acts. — As a student's personal injury damages claims against three school employees were based on the employees negligent failure to supervise the student when the student was with a non-party, and that such failure allegedly led to the student being molested by the third-party, the supervisory decisions made were discretionary acts requiring personal deliberation and judgment; hence, any reliance on O.C.G.A. § 19-7-5 did not provide a basis for civil liability against the employees for a negligent breach of a ministerial duty, and the student's claims were barred by the doctrine of official immunity as a matter of law. Reece v. Turner, 284 Ga. App. 282, 643 S.E.2d 814 (2007).

Display of skeletal remains by state. — Adult child's tort claims against a state university board of regents for the autopsy, study, and display of the parent's skeletal remains in a glass case in a medical school for decades were dismissed because the claims accrued no later than 1950, at which time sovereign immunity applied to Georgia and its agencies; thus, a trial court erred in denying the board's motions for summary judgment and dismissal. Bd. of Regents v. Oglesby, 264 Ga. App. 602, 591 S.E.2d 417 (2003).

Proceedings to renew judgment. — While O.C.G.A. § 9-12-21 did not prevent the assignee of a judgment from seeking to enforce the judgment in the amount the assignee paid for the judgment, O.C.G.A. § 9-12-21 intended the transfer of an entire judgment so the assignment of a part interest in a judgment required the judgment debtor's consent in order to prevent the judgment debtor from being subjected to a multiplicity of suits arising from the same judgment; absent that consent, the assignee of a part interest in a judgment against the judgment debtor could not seek to renew the judgment so the assignee, in a suit to renew the judgment, was not entitled to summary judgment. Rathbone v. Ward, 268 Ga. App. 822, 603 S.E.2d 20 (2004).

Uninsured motorists. — Trial court properly granted an insurer's summary judgment motion in an insured's suit for uninsured motorist benefits as the insured's suit against a deputy sheriff in the deputy's official capacity was barred by the statute of limitations; the insured could not establish that the insured was legally entitled to recover from the deputy, as required by O.C.G.A. § 33-7-11(a)(1). Soley v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 267 Ga. App. 606, 600 S.E.2d 707 (2004).

Action to open intestate estate. — Putative heir's action seeking an order opening the intestate estate was subject to the three-year statute of limitations contained in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(f), and the trial court erred when the court denied a motion for summary judgment that was filed on behalf of a widow who administered the estate because the heir's action was filed more than three years after the probate court issued an order discharging the widow as administrator. Moore v. Mack, 266 Ga. App. 847, 598 S.E.2d 525 (2004).

Frivolous litigation. — In the absence of fact issues as to malice and lack of substantial justification, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the attorney and the former client on a lawyer's frivolous litigation claim against them. Furthermore, the filing of the abusive litigation suit outside the statute of limitations was justified and proper given the absence of any clear authority under Georgia law as to precisely when the statute of limitations commenced under O.C.G.A. § 51-7-84(b). Land v. Boone, 265 Ga. App. 551, 594 S.E.2d 741 (2004).

Premises liability. — Summary judgment was properly entered for a railroad as to an injured party's premises liability claim based on a premises owner's non-delegable duty to keep the premises safe for the protection of invitees. The railroad neither owned nor occupied the sidetrack that was the site of the accident. Assuming that the railroad did own the sidetrack, there was no evidence that the railroad had any knowledge of the defective condition that was the result of its lessee's use of a defective iron grate. The injured party conceded that the defective grate was not readily apparent and the injured party failed to show that the railroad would have discovered the defect had the railroad conducted a reasonable inspection. Mixon v. Ga. Cent. Ry., L.P., 266 Ga. App. 365, 596 S.E.2d 807 (2004).

In a wrongful death action premised on both negligence and negligence per se filed on behalf of a mother's deceased minor son, a premises owner was properly granted summary judgment as the independent contractor that hired the decedent, and not the premises owner, had sole control over its personnel, and the son's hazardous occupation on the owner's premises for a third party did not in and of itself demonstrate that the owner was in violation of Georgia's child labor laws; thus, the appeals court declined to reach the issue of whether an owner who knew or had reason to know that the contractor's independent contractor was employing a minor under the age of 16 to perform a dangerous occupation on the owner's premises was in violation of O.C.G.A. § 39-2-2. Benson-Jones v. Sysco Food Servs. of Atlanta, LLC, 287 Ga. App. 579, 651 S.E.2d 839 (2007).

Reimbursement under indemnity agreement. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 to a surety company in the company's reimbursement action against indemnitors because the company met the company's burden of showing good-faith payments on the bonds and the indemnitors failed to meet their burden of showing bad faith by the company; issues as to the validity, reliability, and admissibility of supporting documents and affidavits lacked merit as the issue was not whether a factual dispute existed, but whether there was any evidence of bad faith on the part of the company for which nothing was offered by the indemnitors. Anderson v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 267 Ga. App. 624, 600 S.E.2d 712 (2004).

between the LLC and one of its shareholders, the shareholder was liable for costs associated with defending claims made by its agent against the LLC; but, the shareholder was not liable for costs associated with a suit over the payment of commissions, as such did not relate to the marketing and sales efforts covered by the indemnity clause and undertaken by the shareholder. SRG Consulting, Inc. v. Eagle Hosp. Physicians, LLC, 282 Ga. App. 842, 640 S.E.2d 306 (2006).

Custody case could not determine other civil issues. — Because the trial court relied upon documents other than the pleadings, a motion to dismiss should in fact have been treated as a motion for summary judgment; a juvenile court had no jurisdiction over claims of fraud, breach of contract, perjury, and defamation made by one former spouse against the other, and thus a custody case between the parties, which was litigated in juvenile court, was not an adjudication of the spouse's claim for purposes of res judicata. Litsky v. Schaub, 269 Ga. App. 254, 603 S.E.2d 754 (2004).

Divorce. — Because questions pertaining to alimony, property, and all other issues of the marriage were intended to be covered by the parties' prior separation agreement in the event the parties divorced, and the wife freely entered into the agreement, her subsequent claim for alimony and an interest in the marital home were properly dismissed via summary judgment. D'Errico v. D'Errico, 281 Ga. 508, 640 S.E.2d 30 (2007).

Personal injury. — Because the plaintiff, in a personal injury action, having failed to present some evidence that the defendant's security was inadequate or that any such inadequacy was the proximate cause of the plaintiff's injuries, summary judgment was properly granted to the defendant. Collins v. Shepherd, 212 Ga. App. 54, 441 S.E.2d 458 (1994).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in granting the defendant motorist summary judgment based on a lack of timely service of process in an action by the plaintiffs, a driver and the driver's passenger, to recover damages for personal injuries and property damage because: (1) the renewal complaint was timely filed within the applicable limitation period, but there was no evidence that the motorist was served within five days after the applicable limitation periods of O.C.G.A. §§ 9-3-31 and 9-3-33 for property damage and personal injury claims, respectively, expired, or that the motorist was served at all; and (2) the plaintiffs offered only the conclusory allegation of the plaintiffs' counsel in an affidavit that diligent efforts were made to serve the motorist after a failed attempt at service in one county led to the discovery that the motorist had apparently relocated to a different area in Georgia; the unsuccessful attempt alerted the plaintiffs to a problem with service, requiring the plaintiffs to exercise the greatest possible diligence in serving the motorist, but the plaintiffs failed in the plaintiffs' burden of proving such efforts by failing to offer specific details regarding what efforts the plaintiffs made to locate and serve the motorist. Carter v. McKnight, 260 Ga. App. 105, 578 S.E.2d 901 (2003).

Summary judgment was properly granted to dismiss a dump truck driver's insurer from a counterclaim arising in a motor vehicle accident case because the insurer was statutorily exempt from any direct action against the insurer. Morgan Driveaway, Inc. v. Canal Ins. Co., 266 Ga. App. 765, 598 S.E.2d 38 (2004).

Analyzing a personal injury action filed against an insured, and a declaratory judgment action subsequently filed by its insurer, the Court of Appeals of Georgia erred in holding that an insured was estopped from asserting compliance with its insurer's policy provisions regarding notice, and additionally erred, on that basis, in reversing the denial of summary judgment to the insurer in the insurer's declaratory judgment action as neither res judicata nor collateral estoppel barred inquiry into the question of whether the insureds' notice of a lawsuit to the insurer was timely. Karan, Inc. v. Auto-Owners Ins. Co., 280 Ga. 545, 629 S.E.2d 260 (2006).

Trespass. — Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to the plaintiff on the defendants' counterclaims for trespass to property, wrongful filing of a dispossessory action, and illegally acquiring title to the defendants' property because all of the counterclaims were based on the erroneous theory that the defendants were the owners of the property that the defendants had lost by foreclosure. Green v. Sommers, 254 Ga. App. 446, 562 S.E.2d 808 (2002).

Promissory notes. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a bank and against the obligors on the promissory notes that the obligors executed and allegedly defaulted on, and on the obligors' counterclaim for intentional infliction of emotional distress as the evidence showed the obligors executed the notes, defaulted on the notes, had no defense, and did not show how modification agreements to which the obligors were not parties relieved the obligors of their obligations; furthermore, the obligors did not show that the attorney was acting for the bank when the attorney allegedly made a statement to a third party that the attorney was going to make life miserable for the obligors, and, thus, the obligors did not show an intentional infliction of emotional distress claim. Reece v. Chestatee State Bank, 260 Ga. App. 136, 579 S.E.2d 11 (2003).

Rights in life insurance policy. — Insured was properly granted summary judgment in a lawsuit filed by a beneficiary to whom the insured assigned the right to collect the proceeds of a supplemental group life insurance policy because the insured did not die, and cancelled the assigned policy, as the terms of the viatical settlement allowed the beneficiary to have a vested right in a renewal of that policy, but not in a replacement policy. Livoti v. Aycock, 263 Ga. App. 897, 590 S.E.2d 159 (2003).

Inappropriate based on defect in expert's affidavit. — Defect in an expert's affidavit attached to the complaint in a legal malpractice action should be attacked via motion to dismiss, and summary judgment on the basis of such defect was inappropriate. Freeman v. Pittman, 220 Ga. App. 672, 469 S.E.2d 543 (1996).

Action for return of earnest money. — Trial court erred in granting summary judgment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), to a seller in an action to recover earnest money for the sale of a shopping center; the purchaser was entitled to the return of the money because the purchaser could not obtain financing, which was a condition for the return of the money under the terms of the contract, interpreted pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 13-2-1 and 13-2-2. Ali v. Aarabi, 264 Ga. App. 64, 589 S.E.2d 827 (2003).

Prison nurse not entitled to summary judgment on prisoner's overdose claim. — Trial court properly denied a prison nurse's motion for summary judgment on the estate administrators' 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim against the nurse, following the death of an inmate by Tylenol overdose, because the administrators presented sufficient evidence that the nurse, who examined the decedent, refused to act despite knowledge of the substantial risk of harm to the decedent. Minor v. Barwick, 264 Ga. App. 327, 590 S.E.2d 754 (2003).

Prison officials not entitled to summary judgment. — Trial court incorrectly denied a prison official's motion for summary judgment on the estate administrators' 42 U.S.C. § 1983 claim against the official, following an inmate's death from a Tylenol overdose because, although the official was aware that the decedent faced a substantial risk of serious harm, the administrators did not show that the official displayed deliberate indifference to the decedent's serious medical needs. Furthermore, the administrators failed to prove that the official was acting outside the scope of the person's official duties or employment; consequently, even if the official acted with malice or intent to injure the decedent, the official was immune from liability on the administrators' state law claims against the official. Minor v. Barwick, 264 Ga. App. 327, 590 S.E.2d 754 (2003).

Action for breach of lease. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) to a lessor in a lessee's breach of contract action; pursuant to a lease for roof space to be used for a billboard, the lessee defaulted by interfering with a cellular antenna already placed on the roof and the lessor provided the proper notice of termination. Tower Projects, LLC v. Marquis Tower, Inc., 267 Ga. App. 164, 598 S.E.2d 883 (2004).

Public nuisance. — Trial court correctly entered summary judgment against the plaintiffs on the plaintiffs' public nuisance count because the evidence did not show that all members of the public who came into contact with the river were injured, and thus, the plaintiffs' public nuisance cause of action was effectively erased. During the decades prior to the deaths, no other person had ever drowned when entering the river via the boat ramp, whether during power generation or otherwise, and the other six boys who accompanied the decedents into the water on the ramp that day were uninjured. White v. Ga. Power Co., 265 Ga. App. 664, 595 S.E.2d 353 (2004).

No evidence for jury in inadvertent distribution of pornographic material. — Summary judgment was properly granted to the video store on the parent's suit against the store after the parent discovered that a children's video contained explicit pornographic material, as the intervening criminal act of an unknown third party who recorded explicit pornographic material on the store's children's videotape was not reasonably foreseeable; thus, the store met the store's burden under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) by establishing that there was no evidence to create jury issues on the essential elements of the parent's case. Davis v. Blockbuster, Inc., 258 Ga. App. 677, 575 S.E.2d 1 (2002).

Defendants' negligence in allowing gun to be accessible prevented summary judgment. — Although at trial the burden of proof as to each element of negligence would be upon the plaintiff, on summary judgment the burden is upon the defendants as movants to negate at least one of the elements, and if the defendants' evidence fails to conclusively refute the plaintiff's allegations of their negligence in allowing a gun to remain in a place accessible to a trustee who robbed and raped the plaintiff, the defendants' motion for summary judgment should be denied, as a jury could reasonably conclude that the trustee's criminal action was foreseeable and that the defendants were negligent by knowingly allowing a gun to be kept in an unlocked drawer in an area where a convicted criminal was authorized to be in the performance of the criminal's duties. Tolbert v. Tanner, 180 Ga. App. 441, 349 S.E.2d 463 (1986).

Summary judgment awarded to bank. — Since two affidavits presented by a bank's risk operations officer averred that a business card application filed by both debtors represented the agreement that they would both be jointly and severally liable for the full account in the event of default, the bank was entitled to summary judgment. Nugent v. SunTrust Bank, 263 Ga. App. 730, 589 S.E.2d 298 (2003).

Recoupment from attorney. — Partial summary judgment was properly granted to a client in the client's contribution action to recoup the attorney's portion of the judgment the client satisfied since the evidence in the record proved the client paid the judgment in full by entering into a release agreement with the prevailing party, and the attorney failed to point to any evidence in the record to prove otherwise. Gerschick v. Pounds, 262 Ga. App. 554, 586 S.E.2d 22 (2003), overruled on other grounds by VATACS Group, Inc. v. HomeSide Lending, Inc., 281 Ga. 50, 635 S.E.2d 758 (2006).

Propriety of Summary Judgment

Seventh amendment right to jury.

— Summary judgment is authorized if there are no issues of material fact in dispute; in such circumstances the jury, as trier of fact, has no role, and the opposing party's Seventh Amendment rights are not infringed. Barrett v. Independent Order of Foresters, 625 F.2d 73 (5th Cir. 1980).

Intended scope of summary judgment. — If a motion for summary judgment were to be denied in every instance in which an issue appears in the pleadings by allegation and denial, there would be little or no use or need for summary judgment as there would be no functional difference between a motion therefor and the traditional system of taking advantage of defects in the pleadings by demurrers; it is obvious that the General Assembly intended summary judgment to have a greater and more beneficial scope. Scales v. Peevy, 103 Ga. App. 42, 118 S.E.2d 193 (1961) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Summary judgment is an extreme remedy and should be awarded only when the truth is quite clear. Watkins v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 113 Ga. App. 801, 149 S.E.2d 749 (1966) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Courts cautious in granting summary judgment. — Since summary judgment is a peremptory method of disposing of a case once and for all on its merits, courts will be cautious about foreclosing parties from a valid defense. Simmons v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 111 Ga. App. 738, 143 S.E.2d 55 (1965) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Trial essential if genuine issue exists. — If there is a genuine issue as to any material fact, a trial under the normal process is absolutely essential. Davis v. Holt, 105 Ga. App. 125, 123 S.E.2d 686 (1961) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Absence of genuine issue and entitlement to judgment are prerequisites. — Because the strategies by a county and the municipalities within the county under the Service Delivery Strategic Act, O.C.G.A. § 36-70-20 et seq., had nothing to do with a developer's actions, given that it was not the decision of the developer, or any individual property owner, to control the property owner's supplier of water, the developer was properly granted summary judgment in a city's action for declaratory and injunctive relief. Also, the city's quest to overturn the May 2005 service delivery strategy was rendered moot by the enactment of later strategy. City of Demorest v. Town of Mt. Airy, 282 Ga. 653, 653 S.E.2d 43 (2007).

In a suit filed by the car owner against a lienholder for wrongful repossession and conversion of the subject vehicle, summary judgment to the lienholder and partial summary judgment to the owner was inappropriate given that questions of fact remained as to whether the vehicle was on a lienholder's debtor's lot for repairs, or if the vehicle had been sold or consigned to the debtor, and was thus subject to the lienholder's security interest. Gavahi-Kashani v. Auto. Fin. Corp., 286 Ga. App. 69, 648 S.E.2d 672 (2007).

Because material fact questions remained regarding the quality of a utility company's inspection and whether the company had constructive knowledge of an electrical wiring defect outside of a homeowner's home, summary judgment was properly denied. Schuessler v. Bennett, 287 Ga. App. 880, 652 S.E.2d 884 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 230 (Ga. 2008).

Lack of jury issue. — Because the evidence was not such as to raise a jury issue, the trial court therefore properly granted summary judgment in favor of the plaintiff. Davison's Auto Serv. Co. v. Security Ins. Co., 187 Ga. App. 220, 369 S.E.2d 538 (1988).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a relative after the home healthcare agency sued the relative for a balance due on a contract the relative signed to have nursing services provided to the relative's father. The relative clearly signed in a representative capacity the contract that the home healthcare agency drafted and provided for the relative to sign, the principal, the relative's father, was clearly named in the document as such, and it was evident that the contract was substantially in the name of the principal; accordingly, there was no issue for the jury to decide because the contract obligated the father, not the relative, to pay. Associated Servs. of Accountable Prof'ls, Ltd. v. Workman, 265 Ga. App. 348, 593 S.E.2d 882 (2004).

Because there was no dispute that: (1) the owner sold the property to a tenant obtained by the realty firm and that the sale occurred during the lease term; and (2) the realty firm satisfied the precedent terms under its commission agreement with the owner entitling the firm to a full commission and prejudgment interest thereon, the trial court erred in denying the realty firm summary judgment on this claim. Tommy McBride Realty v. Nicholson, 286 Ga. App. 135, 648 S.E.2d 468 (2007).

In an action arising from the sale of a condominium unit, because there was no issue of material fact as to whether the declaration of condominium's "lender" exception applied to the sale of the unit to the buyer, the trial court erred in concluding that the issue was for the jury. Quality Foods, Inc. v. Smithberg, 288 Ga. App. 47, 653 S.E.2d 486 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 316 (Ga. 2008).

Regulatory investigation. — Trial court properly dismissed a declaratory judgment action brought by a bank and a cash advance lender, which was operating as an agent for the bank, to stop the Georgia Industrial Loan Commissioner from conducting an investigation of their lending activities because the Commissioner was authorized to conduct an investigation of the two entities' loan activities, in spite of the lender's claim that the bank and the lender were operating under the authority of federal banking law. BankWest, Inc. v. Oxendine, 266 Ga. App. 771, 598 S.E.2d 343 (2004).

Directed verdict compared. — Grant of summary judgment may be improper even though, at trial, a grant of directed verdict may be proper. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Beaver, 120 Ga. App. 420, 170 S.E.2d 737 (1969); Kroger Co. v. Cobb, 125 Ga. App. 310, 187 S.E.2d 316 (1972).

Summary judgment for the defendant is not necessarily authorized merely because under the evidence adduced the defendant might be entitled to a directed verdict on trial. Continental Assurance Co. v. Rothell, 121 Ga. App. 868, 176 S.E.2d 259 (1970), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 227 Ga. 258, 181 S.E.2d 283, vacated on other grounds, 123 Ga. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 541 (1971); Chastain v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 122 Ga. App. 90, 176 S.E.2d 487 (1970).

Grant of summary judgment may be improper even though, at trial, a grant of a directed verdict may be proper, if the party making the motion for summary judgment is not required to carry the burden on the trial of the case. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Woolfolk Chem. Works, Ltd., 122

Ga. App. 789, 178 S.E.2d 710 (1970); Ray v. Webster, 128 Ga. App. 217, 196 S.E.2d 175 (1973).

Summary judgment may be granted on evidence that would compel direction of a verdict and should be denied when a directed verdict would be improper. Eiberger v. West, 247 Ga. 767, 281 S.E.2d 148 (1981).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the tax sale purchaser and other parties, and properly denied the summary judgment motion filed by the tax sale challengers as the purported sale of the property by the bankrupt party to one of the tax sale challengers was void ab initio since the sale was conducted in violation of the bankruptcy court's automatic stay and the bankrupt party did not first obtain permission from the bankruptcy court to sell the property to one of the tax sale challengers. As a result, the tax sale challengers did not have standing to challenge the tax sale of the property at issue. Edwards v. Heartwood 11, Inc., 264 Ga. App. 354, 590 S.E.2d 734 (2003).

Failure to state a claim compared. — Because the Georgia superior court should not have exercised the court's equitable jurisdiction when the property owners failed to exhaust the owners' administrative remedies under O.C.G.A. § 48-5-311 through the county board of equalization, the superior court's judgment for declaratory relief in favor of the property owners at summary judgment was reversed; instead, the superior court should have dismissed the property owners' suit for failing to state a claim. Chatham County Bd. of Assessors v. Jepson, 261 Ga. App. 771, 584 S.E.2d 22 (2003).

Absence of reasonable explanation in medical malpractice case. — Summary judgment in favor of a doctor in a medical malpractice case was affirmed because a patient failed to point to any damage flowing from the doctor's single alleged failure to communicate a correct diagnosis that was not time barred; additionally, the patient admitted in a deposition that the doctor did tell the patient of the diagnosis, although this contradicted the patient's own affidavit testimony, and because the favorable portion of a party's self-contradictory testimony was the only evidence of such party's right of recovery, the opposing party was entitled to summary judgment in the absence of a reasonable explanation. Oliver v. Sutton, 265 Ga. App. 787, 595 S.E.2d 598 (2004).

Summary judgment should be granted only in cases in which undisputable, plain, and palpable facts exist on which reasonable minds could not differ as to the conclusion to be reached. Stuckes v. Trowell, 119 Ga. App. 651, 168 S.E.2d 616 (1969); Indian Trail Village, Inc. v. Smith, 139 Ga. App. 691, 229 S.E.2d 508 (1976).

Absence of genuine issue and entitlement to judgment are prerequisites. — Genuine issue as to a material fact is required in order to preclude summary judgment. Dillard v. Brannan, 217 Ga. 179, 121 S.E.2d 768 (1961) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Summary judgment cannot deprive a party of the opportunity to have a trial of a genuine issue as to any material fact; however, a shadowy semblance of an issue is not enough to defeat the motion. Holland v. Sanfax Corp., 106 Ga. App. 1, 126 S.E.2d 442 (1962) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

It is permissible to grant a motion for summary judgment only if there is no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Malcom v. Malcolm, 112 Ga. App. 151, 144 S.E.2d 188 (1965) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

On summary judgment, the inquiry must be whether there remains any genuine issue of fact after consideration of the pleading and supporting evidence. Alexander v. Boston Old Colony Ins. Co., 127 Ga. App. 783, 195 S.E.2d 277 (1972).

If evidence produced in a motion for summary judgment pierces the allegations of the pleadings and shows that there is no genuine issue of material fact, a summary judgment motion should be sustained. Crawford v. McDonald, 125 Ga. App. 289, 187 S.E.2d 542 (1972).

Essence of a motion for summary judgment is that there is no genuine issue of material fact to be resolved by the trier of facts. Turner v. Noe, 127 Ga. App. 870, 195 S.E.2d 463 (1973).

Grant of a motion for summary judgment is not "appropriate" within the meaning of subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 unless the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Southern Protective Prods. Co. v. Leasing Int'l, Inc., 134 Ga. App. 945, 216 S.E.2d 725 (1975).

If the record has been fully developed by depositions and affidavits, and construing all the facts and inferences to be drawn therefrom in favor of the nonmovant, such party would not be entitled to have a jury verdict stand, a grant of summary judgment is proper. Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Summary judgment should be granted only in cases in which undisputable, plain, and palpable facts exist on which reasonable minds could not differ as to the conclusion to be reached. Stuckes v. Trowell, 119 Ga. App. 651, 168 S.E.2d 616 (1969); Indian Trail Village, Inc. v. Smith, 139 Ga. App. 691, 229 S.E.2d 508 (1976).

If there is no genuine dispute of material fact and the admitted facts point to the right of one party to a judgment as a matter of law, then summary judgment is the proper remedy. Sands v. Lamar Properties, Inc., 159 Ga. App. 718, 285 S.E.2d 24 (1981).

In a motion for summary judgment, the decision is made based upon the pleadings and evidence of record as to whether there is no genuine issue of material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Southeastern Fid. Ins. Co. v. Tesler, 159 Ga. App. 60, 282 S.E.2d 703 (1981).

While the party opposing a motion for summary judgment is entitled to the benefit of all favorable inferences, if, after this is done, the record still shows no genuine issue of a material fact, summary judgment for the moving party is authorized. Shockley v. Henslee, 122 Ga. App. 163, 176 S.E.2d 470 (1970); Cole v. Jordan, 161 Ga. App. 409, 288 S.E.2d 260 (1982); Gurley v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 163 Ga. App. 875, 296 S.E.2d 171 (1982).

Subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 allows summary judgment only if there is no genuine issue as to any material fact, and the evidence shows that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Pugh v. Frank Jackson Lincoln-Mercury,

Inc., 165 Ga. App. 292, 300 S.E.2d 227 (1983).

If there is no evidence presented that would create a genuine issue on any material fact, the trial court does not err in granting summary judgment. Houser v. Tilden Fin. Corp., 166 Ga. App. 710, 305 S.E.2d 440 (1983).

If the nonexistence of any genuine issue of material fact is established by such credible evidence that on the facts and law the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, the motion should be granted, unless the respondent shows good reason why the respondent is at the time of the hearing unable to present facts in opposition to the motion. Fort v. Boone, 166 Ga. App. 290, 304 S.E.2d 465 (1983).

If allegations of pleadings are pierced and there is no issue of material fact, so that a party is entitled to judgment, it is incumbent on the court to grant a motion for summary judgment. Gregory v. Vance Publishing Corp., 130 Ga. App. 118, 202 S.E.2d 515 (1973), overruled on other grounds, Clements v. Toombs County Hosp. Auth., 175 Ga. App. 651, 334 S.E.2d 188 (1985); McGee v. Gillis, 171 Ga. App. 47, 318 S.E.2d 521 (1984).

Motion for summary judgment should not be granted unless it affirmatively appears from the pleadings and evidence that the party so moving is entitled to prevail. McGivern v. First Capital Income Properties, Ltd., 188 Ga. App. 716, 373 S.E.2d 817 (1988).

It is permissible to grant a motion for summary judgment only if there is no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. International Bhd. of Boilermakers v. Newman, 116 Ga. App. 590, 158 S.E.2d 298 (1967); Weekes v. Parker, 120 Ga. App. 549, 171 S.E.2d 660 (1969); Chastain v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 122 Ga. App. 90, 176 S.E.2d 487 (1970); Metco Plumbing & Heating, Inc. v. Southeastern Plumbing Supply Co., 124 Ga. App. 584, 184 S.E.2d 670 (1971); Smith v. Sandersville Prod. Credit Ass'n, 229 Ga. 65, 189 S.E.2d 432 (1972); Galloway v. Banks County, 139 Ga. App. 649, 229

S.E.2d 127 (1976); McCraw v. Watkins, 242 Ga. 452, 249 S.E.2d 202 (1978); Jackson v. First Bank, 150 Ga. App. 182, 256 S.E.2d 923 (1979); Myers v. McLarty, 150 Ga. App. 432, 258 S.E.2d 56 (1979); Jimerson v. Republic Land & Inv. Co., 234 Ga. App. 417, 506 S.E.2d 920 (1998).

Because a customer did not present an issue of fact as to whether a store had equal or superior knowledge of a dangerous condition, the trial court did not err in granting the store's summary judgment motion. Ergas v. Home Depot, Inc., 260 Ga. App. 734, 580 S.E.2d 684 (2003).

Evidence should demand verdict.

— If no evidence is offered that would form a basis for the conclusions contained in the affidavit, it is error to grant a motion for summary judgment as the proof did not demand as a matter of law, a finding in the plaintiff's favor. Bob's Dairy Barn & Restaurant, Inc. v. I.D.S. Leasing Corp., 135 Ga. App. 227, 217 S.E.2d 462 (1975).

Test under subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 is not merely that the evidence supports a verdict for the moving party, but that the evidence demands the verdict. Custom Coating, Inc. v. Parsons, 188 Ga. App. 506, 373 S.E.2d 291 (1988).

Single outcome must appear without dispute.

— Summary judgments should only be granted if, construing all inferences against the movant, it yet appears without dispute that the case can have but a single outcome. Lawrence v. Gardner, 154 Ga. App. 722, 270 S.E.2d 9 (1980); Bragg v. Missroon, 186 Ga. App. 803, 368 S.E.2d 564 (1988).

Improper if genuine issue exists.

— On consideration of a motion for summary judgment, the evidence adduced thereon in the form of depositions, affidavits, etc., should be construed most strongly against the movant, and if under any view of the case there appears to be a dispute as to any material issue of fact, summary judgment should not be granted. King v. Schaeffer, 115 Ga. App. 344, 154 S.E.2d 819, aff'd, 223 Ga. 468, 155 S.E.2d 815 (1967).

It is error to grant a motion for summary judgment if the pleadings, depositions, and affidavits do not show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. McChargue v. Black Grading Contractors, 119 Ga. App. 35, 166 S.E.2d 43 (1969).

Summary judgment cannot deprive a party of the opportunity to have a trial of a genuine issue as to any material fact. Weekes v. Parker, 120 Ga. App. 549, 171 S.E.2d 660 (1969).

Summary judgment should not be granted if there is the slightest doubt as to the facts. Woodford v. Kinney Shoe Corp., 369 F. Supp. 911 (N.D. Ga. 1973).

It was error for the trial judge to grant the plaintiff summary judgment as to the issue of settlement because there remained a genuine issue as to a material fact. Ravan v. Stephens, 243 Ga. 289, 253 S.E.2d 753 (1979).

Summary judgment is improper if there is a genuine issue as to any material fact. Piano & Organ Ctr., Inc. v. Southland Bonded Whse., Inc., 139 Ga. App. 480, 228 S.E.2d 615 (1976); Griffin v. Bremen Steel Co., 161 Ga. App. 768, 288 S.E.2d 874 (1982).

Trial court properly denied an employer's motion for summary judgment in a personal injury action brought against the employer by an auto accident victim because a jury issue existed as to whether the employer's employee was calling the employer on the employee's cell phone while driving on the way to work at the time of the auto accident. Clo White Co. v. Lattimore, 263 Ga. App. 839, 590 S.E.2d 381 (2003).

Summary judgment was properly denied on a broker's claim for attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11 because there was no evidence that the client made the contract, agreeing to pay commission on the sale of the home to the broker, in bad faith or that the client's breach was the result of a sinister motive as a matter of law; issues of fact existed as to whether the client was stubbornly litigious because there was a factual dispute as to the client's understanding of the client's obligations. Steel Magnolias Realty, LLC v. Bleakley, 276 Ga. App. 155, 622 S.E.2d 481 (2005).

Because the record revealed that a family's action for trespass, continuing trespass, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and declaratory judgment was timely filed, and jury questions remained as to the issues of abandonment and the family's standing to bring the family's suit against a developer who allegedly destroyed the family's cemetery, summary judgment was erroneously awarded to the developer. Ceasar v. Shelton Land Co., 285 Ga. App. 421, 646 S.E.2d 689 (2007).

In an action to invalidate an allegedly forged quitclaim deed filed by a husband, which transferred an interest in certain property to the husband's wife, summary judgment was erroneously granted to the husband, as a bankruptcy trustee presented sufficient evidence of disputed issues of material fact concerning the husband's equitable claim; hence, the matter was remanded for further proceedings under the Quiet Title Act, O.C.G.A. § 23-3-60 et seq. Hurst v. Evans, 284 Ga. App. 274, 643 S.E.2d 824 (2007).

Because a genuine dispute precluded the recovery of attorney fees from the attorney by the client based upon the client's claim of stubborn litigiousness, summary judgment was reversed. Brito v. Gomez Law Group, LLC, 289 Ga. App. 625, 658 S.E.2d 178 (2008).

Because an actual and ongoing controversy existed regarding the rights of competing parties to a condominium unit, specifically the unit's owners and the unit's buyer and disputes concerning ownership of or right of access to land were classic candidates for resolution via declaratory judgment, the trial court correctly denied the owners' motion for summary judgment on the buyer's counterclaim for declaratory judgment. Quality Foods, Inc. v. Smithberg, 288 Ga. App. 47, 653 S.E.2d 486 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 316 (Ga. 2008).

If the facts are heatedly contested, with both sides supporting their contentions with affidavits and depositions, it cannot be said that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact. Pritchard v. Neal, 139 Ga. App. 512, 229 S.E.2d 18 (1976).

Evidence does not pierce defenses. — When the plaintiff's evidence does not in any way address or pierce the defenses to the action, it is error to grant the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment.

Jones v. Howard, 153 Ga. App. 137, 264 S.E.2d 587 (1980).

Failure to eliminate every issue. — If there are substantial issues of fact, it is error for the court to grant summary judgment. Caldwell v. Mayor of Savannah, 101 Ga. App. 683, 115 S.E.2d 403 (1960) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

If a defendant fails to eliminate every genuine issue of material fact, the judge errs in granting a motion for summary judgment. Smithwick v. No. 2 D Curtis Mock Assocs., 127 Ga. App. 749, 195 S.E.2d 271 (1972).

If the defendant fails to carry the burden of showing that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the defendant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law as to all matters for which relief is sought, the denial of a motion for summary judgment is correct. P.F. Collier, Inc. v. Dreesen, 128 Ga. App. 64, 195 S.E.2d 766 (1973).

If more than one inference can be drawn from the evidence, the duty of solving the mystery should be placed upon the jury and not the trial judge; this is true with respect to circumstantial evidence as well as direct evidence. McCarty v. National Life & Accident Ins. Co., 107 Ga. App. 178, 129 S.E.2d 408 (1962) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

It was error to grant summary judgment in favor of an anesthesiologist association group and a doctor in an action by an independent anesthesiologist and a professional corporation that claimed conspiracy to restrain trade and tortious interference stemming from an arrangement in which the independent anesthesiologist was permitted to provide services at a hospital served by the group because it was for the jury to determine whether the group improperly manipulated the surgery schedule, the assignment of cases, and first call duty so that the independent anesthesiologist and two colleagues were not used or preferred by the doctors and hospital staff. Mulligan v. Alta Anesthesia Assocs. of Ga., P.C., 260

Ga. App. 727, 580 S.E.2d 678 (2003).

Denial may be proper even absent responsive affidavit. — Because a summary judgment motion was not adequately supported by the evidence, it was appropriate for the trial court to deny the motion even in the absence of a responsive affidavit. Beard v. McDowell, 174 Ga. App. 793, 331 S.E.2d 104 (1985).

Conflicting affidavits. — If the affidavits in the record are in conflict as to material facts, the court does not err in denying summary judgment since there remain substantial issues to be determined. W.J. Bremer, Inc. v. United Bonding Ins. Co., 122 Ga. App. 183, 176 S.E.2d 633 (1970).

Grant of motion on basis of admissions. — If a party fails to answer a request for admissions within the requisite time, and the admissions remove all issues of fact, the other party is entitled to a grant of that party's motion for summary judgment. Moore Ventures Ltd. Partnership v. Stack, 153 Ga. App. 215, 264 S.E.2d 725 (1980).

Denial in face of offsetting counterclaim. — Trial court may, in the court's discretion, deny summary judgment in the face of a valid, pending counterclaim, if there is a reasonable probability that the plaintiff's recovery will be greatly mitigated or even offset by the defendant's recovery on trial of the counterclaim. Mock v. Canterbury Realty Co., 152 Ga. App. 872, 264 S.E.2d 489 (1980).

There is no sound reason to conclude that, if there is a pending valid counterclaim, the trial court must deny a persuasive and valid motion for summary judgment, or alternatively, that it is error per se to grant a motion for summary judgment if there is a pending, valid counterclaim. Williams v. Church's Fried Chicken, Inc., 158 Ga. App. 26, 279 S.E.2d 465 (1981).

Trial court does not commit error per se by granting summary judgment in a case with a valid pending counterclaim. Ackerman v. First Nat'l Bank, 239 Ga. App. 304, 521 S.E.2d 221 (1999).

Error to deny judgment if ultimate result is clear. — It is error to deny a trial when there is a genuine dispute of facts, but it is just as much error, or perhaps more in cases of hardship or if the impetus is given to strike suits, to deny or postpone judgment if the ultimate legal result is clearly indicated. Maxey-Bosshardt Lumber Co. v. Maxwell, 127 Ga. App. 429, 193 S.E.2d 885 (1972).

Dispute over irrelevant or de minimis matters. — Because not every detail of sundry disputed factual matters was conclusively resolved in the pleadings or through discovery procedures, but examination of the record indicated that such disputed matters were either irrelevant or, at best, de minimis, the evidence clearly indicated that there remained in the case no genuine issues of material fact that would preclude an award of summary judgment, and the court below did not err in granting the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment. James v. Ford Motor Credit Corp., 166 Ga. App. 879, 305 S.E.2d 604 (1983).

Failure to exhaust administrative remedies. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the industrial loan commissioner after the loan companies sought a declaratory judgment that the industrial loan commissioner did not have jurisdiction over its business practice of using an out-of-state bank to make loans through the loan companies; since the industrial loan commissioner had not ruled on whether the practice violated the Georgia Industrial Loan Act, O.C.G.A. § 7-3-1 et seq., the loan companies had not exhausted their administrative remedies under the Act and, thus, were not entitled to seek declaratory relief from the courts. USA Payday Cash Advance Ctrs. v. Oxendine, 262 Ga. App. 632, 585 S.E.2d 924 (2003).

Summary judgment improper if possible to infer acting within scope of employment. — In a personal injury case in which an employee was involved in a collision during the employee's day off, but because the employee regularly made deliveries on that day between the employer and affiliated companies, summary judgment for the employer was improper because a jury could have inferred that the employee was acting within the scope of employment at the time; summary judgment for the affiliates was proper because the employee was acting, at most, as an independent contractor with respect to them. Thompson v. Club Group, Ltd., 251 Ga. App. 356, 553 S.E.2d 842 (2001).

Summary judgment for plaintiff. — Mere want of knowledge does not prevent summary judgment in favor of the plaintiff; it should be a sufficient ground of defense only when it appears that a thorough investigation has been made and that ignorance persists after genuine efforts to ascertain facts about the validity of the plaintiff's claim. Berrien v. Avco Fin. Servs., Inc., 123 Ga. App. 862, 182 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

Upon a motion for summary judgment, if the defenses set up in an answer are pierced by the plaintiff's affidavits and the defendant fails to respond with specific facts showing a genuine issue for trial, summary judgment is properly granted. Soni v. Coppedge, 159 Ga. App. 889, 285 S.E.2d 604 (1981).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to sellers on the sellers' suit for non-payment of purchase-money promissory notes as the buyers waived the buyers' defense of fraud by not electing to pursue a remedy regarding it and, instead, continuing to pay on the notes, and the buyers did not show that the sellers' suit was filed beyond the applicable six-year statute of limitations. Little Sky, Inc. v. Rybka, 264 Ga. App. 744, 592 S.E.2d 154 (2003).

Summary judgment when statute inapplicable. — Trial court did not have to consider the testing company's summary judgment motion regarding whether the company and others had a right to a refund of the unlawful collection of excessive fees as the court properly granted the state environmental agency's motion to dismiss because the statute under which the testing company sought the refund, O.C.G.A. § 48-2-35, did not apply because the state revenue commissioner did not collect or administer the fee for which the testing company and others sought the refund, and that statute only applied to the illegal collection of tax or license made by the state revenue commissioner. Ga. Emission Testing Co. v. Reheis, 268 Ga. App. 560, 602 S.E.2d 153 (2004).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the county on the telecommunications company's challenge to the county's ordinance imposing a one-time permit fee on telecommunications companies applying to use the county's public rights-of-way. Due to state statutory law, no question existed that the county had the right to enforce the county's ordinance imposing the permit fee as the fee was reasonably related to the county's attempt to recoup the county's administrative cost for processing the permit; furthermore, the telecommunications company did not show that application of the ordinance violated the company's equal protection rights. BellSouth Telecomms., Inc. v. Cobb County, 277 Ga. 314, 588 S.E.2d 704 (2003).

Because the defendant offered nothing to refute the plaintiff's proof, a grant of summary judgment was demanded under subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56. General Am. Ins. Co. v. Boyens, 125 Ga. App. 414, 188 S.E.2d 172 (1972).

If the plaintiff on a motion for summary judgment makes a prima facie case, and there is no evidence in rebuttal, the plaintiff is entitled to summary judgment. Continental Assurance Co. v. Rothell, 121 Ga. App. 868, 176 S.E.2d 259 (1970), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 227 Ga. 258, 181 S.E.2d 283, vacated on other grounds, 123 Ga. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 541 (1971).

If a party is the sole witness in the party's own behalf and so has naturally presented the case in its most favorable light, and the presentation discloses that the defense has no legal validity, it is incumbent upon the court to rule adversely to the party without further ado. Maxey-Bosshardt Lumber Co. v. Maxwell, 127 Ga. App. 429, 193 S.E.2d 885 (1972) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

If the plaintiff moving for summary judgment introduces evidence showing that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that the plaintiff is entitled to prevail on the undisputed facts, and the defendant rests on the pleadings without offering any evidence to suggest any remaining factual issue, the trial court's grant of a motion for summary judgment is correct. Cox v. Frost, 147 Ga. App. 429, 249 S.E.2d 695 (1978).

Because the plaintiff established a prima facie right to recover on notes and the defendant did not establish a legally sufficient defense, the plaintiff was entitled to summary judgment. Area v. Cagle, 148 Ga. App. 769, 252 S.E.2d 655 (1979).

Summary judgment for defendant. — To prevail on a motion for summary judgment a defendant-movant is required to pierce the allegations of the complaint and to establish as a matter of law that the plaintiff could not recover under any theory fairly drawn from the pleadings and the evidence; once the defendant pierces the pleading of the plaintiff and shows the court that one essential element, under any theory, is lacking and incapable of proof, the defendant-movant is entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law, irrespective of any issues of fact with regard to other essential elements. Holiday Inns, Inc. v. Newton, 157 Ga. App. 436, 278 S.E.2d 85 (1981).

Consideration of defendant's affidavits. — Trial court properly considered a motion for judgment on the pleadings as one for summary judgment because matters outside of the pleadings were presented and considered; such other documents included affidavits filed by the defendant, which the plaintiff moved to strike, but never obtained a ruling on the motion. Premier/Georgia Mgmt. Co. v. Realty Mgmt. Corp., 272 Ga. App. 780, 613 S.E.2d 112 (2005).

Strict liability for injury caused by animal. — In a wrongful death action based on the death of an infant caused by a dog, the dog owner was entitled to summary judgment on the strict liability claim because the parents were required to proffer more than a subject belief regarding the animal; the parents failed to present evidence that the animal was ferae naturae or an animal of wild nature or disposition. Harper v. Robinson, 263 Ga. App. 727, 589 S.E.2d 295 (2003).

If the evidence introduced by the movant pierces the pleadings and discloses an absence of a right to recover, the grant of summary judgment is proper and should follow. Brown v. J.C.

Penney Co., 123 Ga. App. 233, 180 S.E.2d 364 (1971).

Defendant who has cast upon the plaintiff the burden of responding with evidence to create or preserve a genuine issue of fact is entitled to prevail by summary judgment in the absence of any rebuttal evidence. Walker v. Hall, 123 Ga. App. 457, 181 S.E.2d 508 (1971).

If the defendant, as the movant for summary judgment, produces evidence conclusively establishing a fact or facts that negate one or more essential elements of the plaintiff's action, it is useless to present the case to a jury, and the defendant is entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law. Laite v. Baxter, 126 Ga. App. 743, 191 S.E.2d 531 (1972).

Once a defendant who is moving for summary judgment pierces the pleadings of the plaintiff and shows the court that one essential element under any theory of recovery is lacking and incapable of proof, the defendant is entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law, irrespective of any issues of fact with regard to the other essential elements. Waldrep v. Goodwin, 230 Ga. 1, 195 S.E.2d 432 (1973); Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Defendant is entitled to summary judgment if the defendant produces evidence conclusively establishing facts that negate one or more essential elements of the plaintiff's action. Reed v. Ed Taylor Constr. Co., 198 Ga. App. 595, 402 S.E.2d 346 (1991).

Plaintiff, having received nothing for a claimed homestead exemption, commenced an action against the clerk of the superior court for the amount of the homestead exemption, alleging that the loss thereof was because the defendant had failed to record the deeds, but the plaintiff had no aggregate interest in the property against which to assert the claimed homestead exemption, and the plaintiff therefore had no claim upon which relief could be granted, and the defendant was entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law. Wallis v. Clerk, Superior Court, 166 Ga. App. 775, 305 S.E.2d 639 (1983).

If the defendant, as movant for summary judgment, produces evidence conclusively establishing a fact or facts that negate one or more essential elements of the plaintiff's action, it is useless to present the case to a jury, and the defendant movant is entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law. Calhoun v. Eaves, 114 Ga. App. 756, 152 S.E.2d 805 (1966) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Summary judgment upon motion therefor by the defendant should never be entered except if the defendant is entitled to its allowance beyond all doubt. To warrant its entry, the facts conceded by the plaintiff or demonstrated beyond reasonable question to exist should show the defendant's right to judgment with such clarity as to leave no room for controversy, and they should show affirmatively that the plaintiff would not be entitled to recover under any discernible circumstances. Watkins v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 113 Ga. App. 801, 149 S.E.2d 749 (1966).

Because the plaintiff's petition, as a matter of law, set forth a cause of action, unless depositions set forth as exhibits to the defendant's motion for summary judgment showed without dispute that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, the motion for summary judgment should have been denied. McGeeney v. Robertson, 102 Ga. App. 318, 116 S.E.2d 252 (1960) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Summary judgment for plaintiff and defendant. — Trial court can grant judgment for both the plaintiff and the defendant on their respective claims, even when only the plaintiff moves for summary judgment. Massey v. Consolidated Equities Corp., 120 Ga. App. 165, 169 S.E.2d 672 (1969).

Summary judgment can be granted to a nonmoving party provided that the grant is proper in all other respects. Golston v. Garigan, 245 Ga. 450, 265 S.E.2d 590 (1980); Eiberger v. West, 247 Ga. 767, 281 S.E.2d 148 (1981).

Trial court may grant summary judgment to a nonmoving party if filing would be a pure formality. Cruce v. Randall, 152 Ga. App. 183, 262 S.E.2d 488 (1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 669, 266 S.E.2d 486 (1980).

Order granting partial summary judgment motion properly enforced.

— Trial court properly granted the limited partners' motion seeking to enforce an order granting the limited partners' motion for partial summary judgment against the general partner, which required that the limited partners be paid their preferred returns before the general partner could charge management fees to the books, as the general partner's affidavit stated that management fees had been paid, the general partner's counsel stated at the hearing that management fees had been paid, and the limited partners' expert testified that the partnership had generated sufficient revenue to pay the limited partners' preferred returns. Kellett v. Klein, 267 Ga. App. 749, 600 S.E.2d 686 (2004).

Summary judgment for less than amount sued for. — Motion for summary judgment may be granted for less than the total amount sued for if there is no material issue of fact as to such amount. Friend v. Bank of Eastman, 112 Ga. App. 756, 146 S.E.2d 110 (1965) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Mere possibility of causation in a negligence case is not enough, and when the matter remained one of pure speculation or conjecture, or the probabilities were at best evenly balanced, it became the duty of a court to grant summary judgment for the defendant; because the homeowners' own expert deposed that the expert could not determine the cause of an explosion and fire at the homeowners' house, summary judgment should have been granted to a furnace installer in a case brought by the homeowners claiming that the installer had acted negligently in installing or repairing the furnace, causing the furnace to explode. Denson Heating & Air Conditioning Co. v. Oglesby, 266 Ga. App. 147, 596 S.E.2d 685 (2004).

Genuine issue of material fact found. — Plaintiff moved for summary judgment, contending that the parties had agreed to a settlement of the case in which the defendant by and through the defendant's attorney had agreed to pay in full the claim of the plaintiff, but the letters from the defendant's attorney, although expressing a general inclination towards adaptation of a written agreement for settlement of the case, contained conditional language that the record did not show to have been satisfied, and an affidavit of the plaintiff's attorney was ambiguous, if not self-contradictory, as to whether there was an agreement that the defendant pay the plaintiff's entire claim, genuine issues of material fact remained for jury resolution, and summary judgment against the defendant was reversed. Tedoff v. Moncrief Unique Indoor Comfort, Inc., 166 Ga. App. 426, 304 S.E.2d 529 (1983).

Because material fact issues regarding a guarantor's waiver and estoppel defenses existed, a creditor was erroneously granted summary judgment in the creditor's suit against the guarantor regarding a debtor's underlying open account. Everts v. Century Supply Corp., 264 Ga. App. 218, 590 S.E.2d 199 (2003).

No genuine issue of material fact was found. See Dozier v. Wallace, 169 Ga. App. 126, 311 S.E.2d 839 (1983); Koets, Inc. v. Benveniste, 169 Ga. App. 352, 312 S.E.2d 846 (1983), aff'd, 252 Ga. 520, 314 S.E.2d 912 (1984).

Because the plaintiff insured had two policies covering all-risk personal property coverage, one of which was expressly "for direct physical loss of, or damage to" covered property and the second of which specified that the policy was for "direct physical loss or damage to" such property if caused by or the result of a peril not otherwise excluded, the trial court properly denied the insured's motion for summary judgment on the insured's claim for a declaration that the insured was insured for remediation costs incurred in converting the insured's computer systems from two-digit to four-digit date recognition capability to avoid Y2K (year 2000) computer problems; the policies clearly contemplated an actual change due to an accident or other fortuitous event acting directly upon the property causing the property to become unsatisfactory for future use or requiring repairs to make it fit. Since the insured admitted that the deficiency in the computer systems existed from the time the systems were created and the insured avoided problems by undertaking the remediation program, no change in the systems by direct physical loss of, or damage thereto, as a result of a fortuitous event was alleged, and the insured, thus, failed to provide any evidence to give rise to a genuine issue of material fact supportive of the insured's claim for coverage and failed to make a prima facie claim for recovery. AFLAC Inc. v. Chubb & Sons, Inc., 260 Ga. App. 306, 581 S.E.2d 317 (2003).

Since the parties stipulated that the county tax assessors board denied the taxpayer an exemption from ad valorem taxation of certain tangible personal property based on an undervaluation of its inventory, since the taxpayer properly filed for the exemption, and because statutory law stated that the exemption was waived for failing to report inventory, and not an undervaluation of inventory, the trial court properly granted summary judgment to the taxpayer on the issue of whether the county equalization board properly determined that the taxpayer was entitled to the exemption. Gwinnett County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Std. Distrib. & Supply, 263 Ga. App. 128, 587 S.E.2d 262 (2003).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a city on a parent's negligence claim against the city stemming from a child's serious automobile accident at a known dangerous intersection that was inappropriately signaled because the city was immune from suit as to whether to install a traffic signal at the intersection, which was a discretionary act, entitling the city to sovereign immunity; further, a successful tax referendum to fund a new traffic light did not create a duty to install a traffic light at the intersection before completing other projects. Riggins v. City of St. Marys, 264 Ga. App. 95, 589 S.E.2d 691 (2003).

Malicious prosecution. — Summary judgment, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), was properly granted dismissing a parent and child's suit against a neighbor for malicious prosecution because: (1) the parent showed no evidence that the underlying criminal prosecution had been terminated in the parent's favor; and (2) the child's evidence that the prosecution against the child had been terminated as a result of mediation was not evidence that the prosecution had been terminated in the child's favor, so neither the parent nor the child were able to prove an element of a cause of action for malicious prosecution. Smith v. Lewis, 259 Ga. App. 548, 578 S.E.2d 220 (2003).

No facts establishing breach of duty. — Summary judgment was properly entered against an injured party because the party's evidence merely established that an unfortunate event occurred and the party was injured, without specific facts establishing a breach of duty, as well as the other elements of negligence; the presentation of hearsay and affidavits that contained information that lacked the affiant's personal knowledge, and was based on the best of the affiant's knowledge and belief, was nothing more than opinion without any demonstrated basis. Hodges v. Putzel Elec. Contrs., 260 Ga. App. 590, 580 S.E.2d 243 (2003).

Medical malpractice. — Trial court properly granted the defendants, an orthodontist and an orthodontic corporation, summary judgment in a medical malpractice action by the plaintiffs, a patient and the patient's parents, for misdiagnosis and mistreatment of the patient, as the complaint was filed more than two years after the patient last saw the orthodontist for treatment, no new injury occurred subsequent to the last day of treatment, and the plaintiffs failed to provide evidence to support the plaintiffs' claim that fraud tolled the running of the limitation period; thus, the action was time-barred under the two-year limitation period of O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71 for medical malpractice actions. Kane v. Shoup, 260 Ga. App. 723, 580 S.E.2d 555 (2003).

Summary judgment was properly granted to sublessors, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, in a sublessee's multi-claim action arising from agreements entered into between the parties with respect to concert promotion at a particular venue, which was done in order to satisfy a minority business enterprise participation minimum that was imposed by the city; based on the terms of the various documents signed between the parties, there was no legal partnership pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 14-8-1 and no joint venture since the sublessors did not share control of the concert promotions, did not share profits or liabilities, the terms used in the agreements were not dispositive on the issue, and the sublessee's assistance was titular only. Jerry Dickerson Presents, Inc. v. Concert/Southern Chastain Promotions, 260 Ga. App. 316, 579 S.E.2d 761 (2003).

Negligence in failing to maintain smoke detectors. — Summary judgment was properly entered for a landlord and a property manager (appellees) in a negligence suit filed by an injured party as the appellees complied with state law as to the installation of smoke detectors contained in O.C.G.A. § 25-2-40(a)(2), and as evidence of any failure to maintain the detectors was inadmissible under § 25-2-40(g); as § 25-2-40(a)(2) was more specific, it governed over any conflicting statutory or common law duty of care, such as those contained in O.C.G.A. §§ 44-7-13 and 51-3-1 and as § 25-2-40(g) was enacted more recently than the older statutes, it controlled. Hill v. Tschannen, 264 Ga. App. 288, 590 S.E.2d 133 (2003).

Taxpayers' challenge to county's detectors. — Summary judgment was properly awarded to a county on an action by county residents who were challenging, through injunction, mandamus, and declaratory judgment, whether a county commission's decision to enter a lease purchase agreement was either constitutional under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. IX, Sec. V, Para. I(a) or in compliance with O.C.G.A. § 36-60-13; the agreement did not create a debt under the constitution that was subject to a county vote, and the lease, as written, did not create any county obligations that were not in compliance with the statute. Bauerband v. Jackson County, 278 Ga. 222, 598 S.E.2d 444 (2004).

Lease violation. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) to the defendants in an action for breach of a lease by the successor in interest to the lessor as the defendants admitted that the defendants had defaulted on the lease and that the successor was owed back rent. Gilco Invs., Inc. v. Stafford Cordele, LLC, 267 Ga. App. 167, 598 S.E.2d 889 (2004).

Violations of implied trust in property. — Summary judgment was properly granted to a husband in an action regarding the existence of an implied trust pertaining to certain property, as he quitclaimed any interest he had in that property to the wife as part of a divorce settlement. Whiten v. Murray, 267 Ga. App. 417, 599 S.E.2d 346 (2004).

In an equitable action regarding the existence of an implied trust, because a resulting trust arose in favor of the wife through monthly payments to the financing company and taxes, because the husband quitclaimed his entire interest in the property at issue to her, and because the alleged bona fide purchasers had notice of the wife's interest by filing suit to have a mobile home on the property removed and also had a duty to make inquiry as to the wife's rights in the premises, summary judgment entered against the wife was reversed. Whiten v. Murray, 267 Ga. App. 417, 599 S.E.2d 346 (2004).

Breach of fiduciary claims. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the claims administrator and medical utilization review provider for an employee benefit health plan on an estate administrator's breach of fiduciary duty claims, as they owed no fiduciary duties to the estate administrator, and the appellate court refused to recognize a cause of action for aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty. Monroe v. Bd. of Regents of the Univ. Sys., 268 Ga. App. 659, 602 S.E.2d 219 (2004).

Construction contracts. — Summary judgment was properly awarded to a city as a HUD lender to homeowners who needed an emergency home improvement loan in a case in which the homeowners' action was based on alleged construction problems by the contractor chosen to perform the work. The city, as lender, was not a party to the construction contract, was not liable on the contract, and was explicitly excluded in the contract as a liable party for any construction problems; since the city did not assume any duty to the homeowners to inspect the property, summary judgment was properly awarded to the city. Waller v. Econ. & Cmty. Dev. Dep't, 269 Ga. App. 129, 603 S.E.2d 442 (2004).

When a county contracted with a landfill construction company to relocate parts of a landfill, and the contract provided for a certain method of compensating the company, and when the county orally agreed to make interim payments to the company using a different method, with the final payment to be adjusted according to the payment method specified in the contract, the company was not entitled to summary judgment in the company's breach of contract suit against the county for not using a method other than that stated in the contract to determine the company's compensation, because there was no evidence that the parties mutually agreed to depart from this contract provision so as to require notice, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 13-4-4, that one party insisted on strict compliance with the original contract terms; thus, the county was entitled to summary judgment. Handex of Fla., Inc. v. Chatham County, 268 Ga. App. 285, 602 S.E.2d 660 (2004).

Mechanic's lien. — Trial court did not err by granting partial summary judgment to a buyer on the buyer's claim that the seller's mechanic's lien was invalid for failure to record an affidavit for the commencement of an action so as to establish the lien as required by O.C.G.A. § 44-14-361.1(a)(3). Krut v. Whitecap Hous. Group, LLC, 268 Ga. App. 436, 602 S.E.2d 201 (2004).

Real estate sales contract. — When a buyer claiming the buyer was fraudulently sold real estate argued, on appeal, that the trial court's summary dismissal of the buyer's complaint under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-12(b)(6) and 9-11-56 deprived the buyer of the right to a jury trial, this claim had no merit because, when the opposing parties filed an affidavit with their motion for summary judgment claiming that the misrepresentation alleged in the buyer's complaint did not occur, and the buyer did not respond to that motion, the evidence in the record was undisputed that the misrepresentation, which was the crux of the buyer's claims, did not happen, so there was no fact-finding role for a jury to perform. Crane v. Samples, 267 Ga. App. 895, 600 S.E.2d 624 (2004), cert. denied, 544 U.S. 927, 125 S. Ct. 1650, 161 L. Ed. 2d 488 (2005).

Duty arising to supervise adult son out on bond. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) to a grandmother of an adult grandson who shot and killed his girlfriend as there was no showing that the grandmother had any duty to supervise the grandson, nor did she own the premises on which the shooting occurred, such that a claim of premises liability could stand under O.C.G.A. § 44-7-1(a); summary judgment to the mother of the adult son was also proper on the negligent supervision claim as she only had a duty to supervise the son, who was out on bond, during her non-working hours, and the son committed the killing during her work hours. Spivey v. Hembree, 268 Ga. App. 485, 602 S.E.2d 246 (2004).

Summary judgment was properly granted, dismissing an unjust enrichment claim brought by the purchasers of a home against the seller because the doctrine of unjust enrichment did not apply in that the undisputed evidence showed that the purchasers acted with the intention of personally benefiting from the repairs and additions the purchasers made to the house and without any expectation that the seller would be responsible for the cost; further, since the purchasers failed to exercise the purchase option in accordance with the contract, title was not transferred, and the trial court did not err in failing to treat the transaction as a sale with a mortgage. Morris v. Britt, 275 Ga. App. 293, 620 S.E.2d 422 (2005).

Driver operating vehicle on personal mission. — Summary judgment dismissing an administrator's suit against a corporation to recover for the death of the administrator's decedent, who was struck by a car operated by a driver and given to the driver by a corporation, was proper because the evidence showed that the driver operated the restaurant as an independent contractor, there was no evidence to show that the corporation had the authority to control the operation of either the restaurant or the truck, and the undisputed evidence showed that the driver was driving the truck at the time of the accident on a purely personal mission. Williams v. Chick-fil-A, Inc., 274 Ga. App. 169, 617 S.E.2d 153 (2005).

Summary judgment improperly granted as burden of proof different in civil and criminal cases. — Summary judgment was improperly granted to a beneficiary in an insurer's interpleader action to determine whether the beneficiary was entitled to the life insurance policy proceeds of the insured, the beneficiary's wife, because evidence that the insured died of a gunshot wound while in Mexico, that the beneficiary was carrying a gun while in Mexico, and that the beneficiary lied about the insured's cause of death created a genuine issue of fact as to whether the beneficiary's recovery was barred under O.C.G.A. § 33-25-13; the fact that the beneficiary had been acquitted of the insured's murder had no impact on the outcome of the civil case because the civil case had a different burden of proof. Cantera v. Am. Heritage Life Ins. Co., 274 Ga. App. 307, 617 S.E.2d 259 (2005).

Improper when genuine issue exists. — Summary judgment for a ship owner and a charterer in a longshoreman's negligence claim brought pursuant to the Longshore Harbor Worker's Compensation Act, 33 U.S.C. § 905(b), was reversed because there were fact issues as to ballast and roll issues, the safety of the ship at turnover, the officers' and crew's active involvement in the cargo operations, whether the ship owner's actions were negligent, the ship owners' duty to intervene, whether the International Safety Management Code was violated, and whether that proximately caused the longshoreman's injuries. Kyles v. E. Car Liners, Inc., 266 Ga. App. 784, 598 S.E.2d 353 (2004).

When questions remain summary judgment properly denied. — City's motion for summary judgment was properly denied because the employee was terminated because, due to the employee's physical limitations, there were no assignments for which the employee was qualified, which created an issue of fact as to the basis for termination. Additionally, Barnesville, Ga., City Ordinance art. II, § 16(a)(1) could not be read to mean that, at the time of termination, the employee had already met Social Security Administration (SSA) disability entitlement, there was an issue of fact as to whether the employee's application to the city for disability retirement was timely and, if untimely, whether any delay was caused by a pendency of a disability determination by the SSA, and there was evidence that the employee's physical disability began on a specific date while the employee was employed by the city and that the employee was awarded SSA benefits based upon that physical disability. City of Barnesville v. Littlejohn, 264 Ga. App. 185, 590 S.E.2d 376 (2003).

Summary judgment improperly awarded when party unable to read.

— Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to the defendant in the face of the plaintiff's uncontroverted assertion that the plaintiff could not read with any degree of proficiency or understand and was tricked into signing a release while under a disability and in considerable pain and under medication. Mallard v. Jenkins, 179 Ga. App. 582, 347 S.E.2d 339 (1986).

Trial court improperly granted summary judgment in an action under O.C.G.A. § 16-12-31 [repealed] to forfeit monies, because the defendants set forth specific facts advancing a genuine issue for trial through documentation evidencing saving withdrawals, a loan repayment, a back pay award, a legal settlement and, their long-time accumulation of coins. Wilson v. State, 206 Ga. App. 599, 426 S.E.2d 192 (1992).

Failure to negate element of prima facie case. — Trial court erred in granting a motion for summary judgment because evidence was insufficient to negate any element of the plaintiff's prima facie case. Huntington v. Fishman, 212 Ga. App. 27, 441 S.E.2d 444 (1994).

Failure to timely designate appraiser. — Because an insurer denied coverage since the insureds did not designate an appraiser within the policy's time limits, summary judgment was improper; there was evidence from which a trier of fact could determine that the insurer waived strict compliance with the time limit in which to designate an appraiser. Gilbert v. Southern Trust Ins. Co., 252 Ga. App. 109, 555 S.E.2d 69 (2001).

Racial discrimination. — Lower courts erred in granting summary judgment to a poultry integrator whom a black poultry grower accused of racial discrimination, breach of contract, and intentional infliction of emotional distress as the grower provided sufficient allegations to overcome summary judgment. Blockum v. Fieldale Farms Corp., 275 Ga. 798, 573 S.E.2d 36 (2002).

Excessive fee collection by local government. — Fact that the county increased the county's fees for building permits and other real estate development fees when the county had accumulated a two million dollar surplus from those fees was evidence that the fees may have exceeded the reasonable cost of the county's regulatory activity, and summary judgment for the county was reversed in a case alleging a violation of O.C.G.A. § 48-13-9. Home Builders Ass'n of Savannah v. Chatham County, 276 Ga. 243, 577 S.E.2d 564 (2003).

Since a jury issue existed as to the extent of the accord and satisfaction of a hospital's claims for treatment provided to a company's employees, and the company's liability for any remaining claims for the employees, summary judgment was improperly granted to the company. Hosp. Auth. v. Pyrotechnic Specialties, Inc., 263 Ga. App. 886, 589 S.E.2d 644 (2003).

Employment termination dispute. — Because an employment agreement did not specifically define what was meant by the word "due," as such term was used in determining what compensation the employee was entitled to through the effective date of the employee's termination, summary judgment on the employee's breach of contract claim regarding what amount of compensation the employee was to receive was erroneously entered. Reichman v. Southern Ear, Nose & Throat Surgeons, P.C., 266 Ga. App. 696, 598 S.E.2d 12 (2004).

Impact of failure to submit sworn statements. — Vacation and remand of the denial of a motion for summary judgment by the principals of a corporation was appropriate because the trial court denied the motion for the reason that the principals did not present sworn statements to negate alleged facts, but the court did not consider the issues pertaining to the ground that was asserted by the principals in the motion. Meredith v. Thompson, 312 Ga. App. 697, 719 S.E.2d 592 (2011).

Lack of personal jurisdiction. — Trial court erred in denying summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 to a guarantor in a company's action to collect on a promissory note; the guarantor was not subject to personal jurisdiction in Georgia pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-10-91 as the guarantor was a resident of Illinois and was never in Georgia during the course of the negotiations, the guarantor did not initiate or solicit the sale of a restaurant to the guarantor's son, and the guarantor agreed to guaranty the note only after a company requested the guaranty as a condition of the sale, and therefore the guarantor did not purposefully take advantage of the privilege of doing business in Georgia. Stuart v. Peykan, Inc., 261 Ga. App. 46, 581 S.E.2d 609 (2003).

Subject matter jurisdiction is a matter in abatement to be resolved pursuant to § 9-11-12(b). — Because subject matter jurisdiction is a matter in abatement, jurisdiction had to be resolved on a motion pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b), and not by a motion for summary judgment. First Christ Holiness Church, Inc. v. Owens Temple First Christ Holiness Church, Inc., 282 Ga. 883, 655 S.E.2d 605 (2008).

Proper if no independent claim to support attorney fee claim. — Because there were no viable independent counterclaims remaining in a construction company's claims against a labor supplier, the construction company could no longer assert a claim for attorney fees and litigation costs under O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11 and, accordingly, summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 to the supplier was proper. Langley v. Nat'l Labor Group, Inc., 262 Ga. App. 749, 586 S.E.2d 418 (2003).

Conversion from motion to dismiss. — Because the trial court, without objection, considered a contract between the parties and both parties relied heavily on the contract language before the trial court, the movant's motion to dismiss was converted to a motion for summary judgment. Cox v. Athens Reg'l Med. Ctr., Inc., 279 Ga. App. 586, 631 S.E.2d 792 (2006).

Partial summary judgment. — In an action between a car dealer and the dealer's customer, the trial court did not err in granting partial summary judgment to the former, on the latter's claims for fraud, willful misrepresentation, theft, conversion, compensatory and punitive damages, and travel expenses as the claims would have ultimately failed at the bench trial; thus, the propriety of the trial court's partial summary judgment order on these claims was a moot question and was not addressed by the court. Rise v. GAPVT Motors, Inc., 288 Ga. App. 246, 653 S.E.2d 320 (2007).

Because: (1) evidence demonstrating an agency relationship between the grantees and the grantor of a security deed was lacking, and (2) the mere lapse of time was insufficient to establish the affirmative defense of laches, partial summary judgment was properly entered in the trustee's favor on that claim based on mutual mistake as well as an order invalidating the foreclosure sale upon the deed. Harvey v. Bank One, N.A., 290 Ga. App. 55, 658 S.E.2d 824 (2008).

Burdens on Motion for Summary Judgment

1. In General

Duty of each party to present case in full. — It is the duty of each party at a hearing on a motion for summary judgment to present that party's case in full. Summer-Minter & Assocs. v. Giordano, 231 Ga. 601, 203 S.E.2d 173 (1974); Thomas v. Allstate Ins. Co., 133 Ga. App. 193, 210 S.E.2d 361 (1974); HFC v. Rogers, 137 Ga. App. 315, 223 S.E.2d 462 (1976); Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976); Colodny v. Dominion Mtg. & Realty Trust, 141 Ga. App. 139, 232 S.E.2d 601 (1977); Hip Pocket,

Inc. v. Levi Strauss & Co., 144 Ga. App. 792, 242 S.E.2d 305 (1978); Walsey v. American Fletcher Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 151 Ga. App. 104, 258 S.E.2d 760 (1979); DOT v. Garrett, 154 Ga. App. 104, 267 S.E.2d 643 (1980).

Grounds of motion need not be specified. — Motion for summary judgment is not subject to dismissal for failure to specify grounds upon which the motion relies. Shockley v. Zayre of Atlanta, Inc., 118 Ga. App. 672, 165 S.E.2d 179 (1968).

Insufficient evidence of assumption of risk. — Summary judgment was properly denied to an electric installation company in an action by a restaurant employee who suffered a severe shock when the employee touched a heated table, which was allegedly caused by a plug that was not grounded and by a loose electrical wire as the company did not prove that the employee assumed the risk of the injury as a matter of law when the employee put the employee's hands on the table after a customer informed the employee that the customer received a mild shock; whether the employee appreciated the risk of the injury was an issue for jury determination as it was not established that the employee fully appreciated the risk faced by touching the table, given the information. D & S Elec., Inc. v. Batson, 270 Ga. App. 210, 606 S.E.2d 37 (2004).

Speculation insufficient evidence. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to the company on the widow's wrongful-death claim as the widow did not present any evidence that the actions of the driver of the company's truck in running over her husband caused his death. The husband had been lying in the middle of the roadway after he was thrown from his motorcycle while traveling at a high rate of speed when it was struck by a truck that suddenly pulled out into the middle of the road, and witnesses could not tell if the husband was alive or dead at the time the company's truck drove over him less than a minute after the first accident, which meant that only speculation, not proof, was involved in whether he was dead by the time the company's truck accidentally drove over him while trying to avoid his motorcycle in the road. Mobley v. Nabisco, Inc., 264

Ga. App. 352, 590 S.E.2d 741 (2003).

2. Burden on Movant Generally

Movant must pierce opponent's affirmative defense. — Party moving for summary judgment has the burden of piercing the opponent's affirmative defense. Peppers v. Siefferman, 153 Ga. App. 206, 265 S.E.2d 26 (1980); Olympic Dev. Group, Inc. v. American Druggists' Ins. Co., 175 Ga. App. 425, 333 S.E.2d 622 (1985); First Union Nat'l Bank v. J. Reisbaum Co., 190 Ga. App. 234, 378 S.E.2d 317 (1989).

Movant must establish absence of defenses. — On a motion for summary judgment, the burden is on the movant to conclusively establish the absence or non-existence of any defense. Fletcher v. Ford, 189 Ga. App. 665, 377 S.E.2d 206 (1988), cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 912, 377 S.E.2d 206 (1988).

Burden of showing lack of genuine issue and entitlement to judgment. — Burden of showing the absence of a genuine issue of any material fact rests on the party moving for summary judgment. Shadix v. Dowdney, 117 Ga. App. 720, 162 S.E.2d 245 (1968); Sullivan Enters., Inc. v. Stockton, 118 Ga. App. 542, 164 S.E.2d 336 (1968); Matthews v. North Cobb Tire Co., 120 Ga. App. 269, 170 S.E.2d 57 (1969); Anderson v. Redwal Music Co., 122 Ga. App. 247, 176 S.E.2d 645 (1970); Lockhart v. Walker, 124 Ga. App. 241, 183 S.E.2d 503 (1971); Mitchell v. Calhoun, 229 Ga. 757, 194 S.E.2d 421 (1972); Benson Paint Co. v. Williams Constr. Co., 128 Ga. App. 47, 195 S.E.2d 671 (1973); Whitehead v. Capital Auto. Co., 239 Ga. 460, 238 S.E.2d 104 (1977); Southern Trust Ins. Co. v. Clark, 148 Ga. App. 579, 251 S.E.2d 823 (1978); Taylor v. Taylor, 243 Ga. 506, 255 S.E.2d 32 (1979); Scroggins v. Whitfield Fin. Co., 152 Ga. App. 8, 262 S.E.2d 168 (1979); Romanik v. Buitrago, 153 Ga. App. 886, 267 S.E.2d 301 (1980); Edwards v. McTyre, 246 Ga. 302, 271 S.E.2d 205 (1980); Jonesboro Tool & Die Corp. v. Georgia Power Co., 158 Ga. App. 755, 282 S.E.2d 211 (1981); Hanover Ins. Co. v. Nelson Conveyor & Mach. Co., 159 Ga. App. 13, 282 S.E.2d 670 (1981); Mallard v. Jenkins, 179 Ga. App. 582, 347 S.E.2d 339 (1986).

Burden is on the movant for summary judgment to establish contentions relied on to authorize such judgment by proper affidavits or other permitted evidence when such contentions are controverted by the pleadings of the adverse party. Massey v. National Homeowners Sales Serv. Corp., 225 Ga. 93, 165 S.E.2d 854 (1969).

In summary judgment proceedings, the burden is on the movant to demonstrate the lack of a substantial factual issue. Brown v. Sheffield, 121 Ga. App. 383, 173 S.E.2d 891 (1970); Gregory v. Vance Publishing Corp., 130 Ga. App. 118, 202 S.E.2d 515 (1973), overruled on other grounds, Clements v. Toombs County Hosp. Auth., 175 Ga. App. 651, 334 S.E.2d 188 (1985).

Burden of proof is on the movant to establish an entitlement to summary judgment by proper affidavits and other permitted evidence. Mica-Top Fixture Co. v. Frank G. Shattuck Co., 124 Ga. App. 100, 183 S.E.2d 15 (1971).

Burden is upon the movant to affirmatively show that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that the movant is entitled to summary judgment. Smith v. Sandersville Prod. Credit Ass'n, 229 Ga. 65, 189 S.E.2d 432 (1972); Lawson Prods., Inc. v. Rousey, 132 Ga. App. 726, 209 S.E.2d 125 (1974); Peachtree Bottle Shop, Inc. v. Bessemer Sec. Corp., 134 Ga. App. 729, 215 S.E.2d 692 (1975); Stratton & McLendon, Inc. v. Cameron-Brown Co., 140 Ga. App. 430, 231 S.E.2d 447 (1976); Cumberland Assocs. v. Market Assistants, Inc., 142 Ga. App. 483, 236 S.E.2d 109 (1977).

Burden of establishing the nonexistence of any genuine issue of fact is upon the moving party on a motion for summary judgment, and all doubts are to be resolved against the movant. Lansky v. Goldstein, 136 Ga. App. 607, 222 S.E.2d 62 (1975); Williams v. Trust Co., 140 Ga. App. 49, 230 S.E.2d 45 (1976).

Movant has the burden to prove the nonexistence of any genuine issue of material fact, and in so determining, the court will treat the respondent's paper with considerable indulgence. Fletcher v. Ford, 189 Ga. App. 665, 377 S.E.2d 206, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 912, 377 S.E.2d 206 (1988).

Burdens on Motion for SummaryJudgment (Cont'd)*2. Burden on Movant*Generally (Cont'd)

Because an insurer carried the insurer's burden of showing that the representation of an insured's business was false, and that the representation was material in that the representation changed the nature, extent, or character of the insurance coverage risk, the trial court did not err in granting the insurer summary judgment. Marchant v. Travelers Indem. Co., 286 Ga. App. 370, 650 S.E.2d 316 (2007).

When burden shifts. — Burden of showing the absence of a genuine issue of material fact rests on the party moving for summary judgment; the burden does not shift until the pleadings are pierced. Allen & Bean, Inc. v. American Bankers Ins. Co., 153 Ga. App. 617, 266 S.E.2d 295 (1980).

On a motion for summary judgment, the burden of proof is squarely on the moving party, and does not shift to the respondent unless the movant, by affidavits or other evidence, shows a prima facie right to such judgment. Ramseur v. American Mgt. Ass'n, 155 Ga. App. 340, 270 S.E.2d 880 (1980).

Burden of proof is shifted when the moving party makes a prima facie showing that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. At that time the opposing party must come forward with rebuttal evidence or suffer judgment against that party. Trust Co. Bank v. Stubbs, 203 Ga. App. 557, 417 S.E.2d 373, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 908, 417 S.E.2d 373 (1992).

Prima facie case not established. — In an action based on a personal guaranty because the guaranty agreement left blank the name of the principal debtor, it was unnecessary for the appellants to present rebuttal evidence or respond to the motion because the evidence the appellee presented did not establish a prima facie case entitling the appellee to summary judgment. Ellis v. Curtis-Toledo, Inc., 204 Ga. App. 704, 420 S.E.2d 756 (1992).

In an action to collect on a debt filed by a creditor's assignee, the trial court erroneously granted summary judgment in the amount of the debt owed, plus interest because the assignee failed to attach to either the motion for summary judgment or affidavit prepared by the legal account manager the necessary documents that purported to establish the debt owed by the debtor. Powers v. Hudson & Keyse, LLC, 289 Ga. App. 251, 656 S.E.2d 578 (2008).

Burden is upon the movant to establish a lack of a genuine issue of fact and the right to judgment as a matter of law, and any doubt as to the existence of such an issue is resolved against the movant. Holland v. Sanfax Corp., 106 Ga. App. 1, 126 S.E.2d 442 (1962) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Movant must negate at least one essential element. — Moving party has the burden of negating at least one of the essential elements of the opponent's case, and of establishing that no genuine issues of material fact remain. Vizzini v. Blonder, 165 Ga. App. 840, 303 S.E.2d 38 (1983); Progressive Ins. Co. v. Kelly, 181 Ga. App. 181, 351 S.E.2d 544 (1986).

Best way to preserve a party's fundamental right to a jury trial is to require the moving party to negate by proof an essential element of the nonmoving party's claim. Hepner v. Southern Ry., 182 Ga. App. 346, 356 S.E.2d 30 (1987).

Uncontradicted evidence required. — Burden is on the moving party to establish every element necessary to sustain a grant of the motion by uncontradicted evidence. Berrien v. Avco Fin. Servs., Inc., 123 Ga. App. 862, 182 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

Plaintiff is entitled to summary judgment only if it appears without contradiction that there is no genuine issue of fact, and the burden is on the plaintiff to establish every element necessary to sustain a grant of the motion by uncontradicted evidence. Berrien v. Avco Fin. Servs., Inc., 123 Ga. App. 862, 182 S.E.2d 708 (1971).

Evidence must be of necessary certitude. — On a motion for summary judgment by the plaintiff, the burden is upon the plaintiff to produce evidence of the necessary certitude, that is, that demands a finding as a matter of law that the defenses pled are untrue. Hurston v. Dealer Serv. Plan, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 148, 232 S.E.2d 641 (1977); Sun First Nat'l Bank v. Gainesville 75, Ltd., 155 Ga. App. 70, 270 S.E.2d 293 (1980).

Evidence must conclusively eliminate all material issues. — To prevail on a motion for summary judgment, the movant has the burden to produce the evidence that conclusively eliminates all material issues in the case. Kohlmeyer & Co. v. Bowan, 130 Ga. App. 386, 203 S.E.2d 630 (1973); Fountain v. World Fin. Corp., 144 Ga. App. 10, 240 S.E.2d 558 (1977).

Movant must show truth of essential matters. — It is the obligation of the movant for summary judgment to show positively the truth of the matters that are essential to a judgment in the movant's behalf. Watkins Prods., Inc. v. England, 123 Ga. App. 179, 180 S.E.2d 265 (1971).

Defendant movant's evidence must refute plaintiff's allegations and show truth. — In order to pierce allegations of material fact contained in the plaintiff's petition, evidence offered by the defendant on a motion for summary judgment must unequivocally refute those allegations and must clearly show what is the truth of the matter alleged. Watkins v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 113 Ga. App. 801, 149 S.E.2d 749 (1966) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

It is not sufficient if evidence merely preponderates toward the defendant's theory rather than the plaintiff's, or if it does no more than disclose circumstances under which satisfactory proof of the plaintiff's case on trial will be highly unlikely. Watkins v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 113 Ga. App. 801, 149 S.E.2d 749 (1966) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Shifting of burden to plaintiff respondent to produce rebuttal evidence. — When the defendant has made a motion for summary judgment, which motion is supported by affidavits, depositions, or other evidentiary matter showing a prima facie right on the part of the defendant to have summary judgment rendered in the defendant's favor, duty is cast upon the plaintiff to produce rebuttal evidence at the hearing thereof, by introduction of depositions or affidavits sufficient to show to the court that there is a genuine issue of fact to be decided by the jury. Cochran v. Southern Bus. Univ., Inc., 110 Ga. App. 666, 139 S.E.2d 400 (1964) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Burden is upon the movant to establish a lack of a genuine issue of fact and a right to summary judgment as a matter of law, and any doubt as to the existence of such an issue is resolved against the movant. Georgia Mut. Ins. Co. v. Morgan, 115 Ga. App. 520, 154 S.E.2d 720 (1967); Chapman v. Turnbull Elevator, Inc., 116 Ga. App. 661, 158 S.E.2d 438 (1967); Boston Ins. Co. v. Barnes, 120 Ga. App. 585, 171 S.E.2d 626 (1969); Lawson v. Duke Oil Co., 155 Ga. App. 363, 270 S.E.2d 898 (1980).

Burden is upon the party moving for summary judgment, and the party opposing the motion is given benefit of all favorable inferences that may be drawn from the evidence. International Bhd. of Boilermakers v. Newman, 116 Ga. App. 590, 158 S.E.2d 298 (1967); Whisenhunt v. Allen Parker Co., 119 Ga. App. 813, 168 S.E.2d 827 (1969); Carr v. Young, 120 Ga. App. 464, 170 S.E.2d 834 (1969), overruled on other grounds, Stanger v. Cato, 182 Ga. App. 498, 356 S.E.2d 97 (1987).

Burden is upon the movant to pierce the pleadings and to establish a lack of a genuine issue of fact and the movant's right to judgment as a matter of law; any doubt as to the existence of such issue or issues is resolved against the movant, and the opposing party is given the benefit of all reasonable doubts and all favorable inferences that may be drawn from the evidence. Caldwell v. Gregory, 120 Ga. App. 536, 171 S.E.2d 571 (1969); Connors v. City Council, 120 Ga. App. 499, 171 S.E.2d 578 (1969); Chastain v. Atlanta Gas Light Co., 122 Ga. App. 90, 176 S.E.2d 487 (1970).

Party moving for summary judgment has the burden of showing the absence of a genuine issue of any material fact; and if the trial court is presented with a choice of inferences to be drawn from the facts, all inferences of fact from the proofs proffered at the hearing must be drawn against the movant and in favor of the opposing party. Fountain v. World Fin. Corp., 144 Ga. App.

10, 240 S.E.2d 558 (1977).

Burden when movant does not have burden of proof at trial. — Movant for summary judgment has the burden of proof even as to issues upon which the opposing party would have the trial burden. Whisenhunt v. Allen Parker Co., 119 Ga. App. 813, 168 S.E.2d 827 (1969); Lansky v. Goldstein, 136 Ga. App. 607, 222 S.E.2d 62 (1975); Danny's Cabinet Shop, Inc. v. G & M Fire Extinguisher Sales & Serv., Inc., 149 Ga. App. 215, 253 S.E.2d 802 (1979).

On motion for summary judgment, the burden of establishing the nonexistence of any genuine issue of fact is upon the moving party, and all doubts are to be resolved against the movant; the movant has that burden even as to issues upon which the opposing party would have the trial burden. Ham v. Ham, 230 Ga. 43, 195 S.E.2d 429 (1973); Black v. Hamilton, 133 Ga. App. 881, 212 S.E.2d 449 (1975); Piano & Organ Ctr., Inc. v. Southland Bonded Whse., Inc., 139 Ga. App. 480, 228 S.E.2d 615 (1976).

Burden to show that there is no genuine issue of material fact rests on the party moving for summary judgment, whether the moving party or the opposing party would at trial have the burden of proof on the issue concerned, and rests on the moving party whether the moving party is required to show existence or nonexistence of facts. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Beaver, 120 Ga. App. 420, 170 S.E.2d 737 (1969); Central of Ga. Ry. v. Woolfolk Chem. Works, Ltd., 122 Ga. App. 789, 178 S.E.2d 710 (1970); Kroger Co. v. Cobb, 125 Ga. App. 310, 187 S.E.2d 316 (1972).

If the party upon whom the burden of proof upon trial does not lie, makes motion for summary judgment, all the evidence adduced on that motion, including testimony of the party opposing the motion, is construed most strongly against the movant. Burnette Ford, Inc. v. Hayes, 227 Ga. 551, 181 S.E.2d 866 (1971), overruled on other grounds, Tri-Cities Hosp. Auth. v. Sheats, 247 Ga. 713, 279 S.E.2d 210 (1981); Hospital Auth. v. AGN Mfg., Inc., 124 Ga. App. 159, 183 S.E.2d 58 (1971); Burnette Ford, Inc. v. Hayes, 124 Ga. App. 65, 183 S.E.2d 78 (1971); Epps Air Serv., Inc. v. DeKalb County, 147 Ga. App. 195, 248 S.E.2d 300 (1978); Roberson v. Home Ins. Co., 149 Ga. App. 590, 254 S.E.2d 908 (1979); Brooks v. Douglas, 154 Ga. App. 54, 267 S.E.2d 495 (1980); Combs v. Adair Mtg. Co., 155 Ga. App. 432, 270 S.E.2d 828 (1980); Aiken v. Drexler Shower Door Co., 155 Ga. App. 436, 270 S.E.2d 831 (1980); Pugh v. Frank Jackson Lincoln-Mercury, Inc., 165 Ga. App. 292, 300 S.E.2d 227 (1983).

On motion for summary judgment by a party on whom the burden of proof does not lie on the trial of the case, all the evidence must be construed against the movant and in favor of the party opposing the motion. Pugh v. Frank Jackson Lincoln-Mercury, Inc., 165 Ga. App. 292, 300 S.E.2d 227 (1983).

To prevail at summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, the moving party must demonstrate that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that the undisputed facts, viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party, warrant judgment as a matter of law. A defendant may do this by showing the court that the documents, affidavits, depositions, and other evidence in the record reveal that there is no evidence sufficient to create a jury issue on at least one essential element of the plaintiff's case. If there is no evidence sufficient to create a genuine issue as to any essential element of the plaintiff's claim, that claim tumbles like a house of cards. Lee v. Dep't of Natural Res. of Ga., 263 Ga. App. 491, 588 S.E.2d 260 (2003).

Allegation of incapacity in the plaintiff's complaint must be met by some evidentiary matter in order for the defendant movant to pierce the pleadings on a motion for summary judgment. Keith v. McLanahan, 147 Ga. App. 342, 249 S.E.2d 128 (1978).

Hospital entitled to summary judgment in personal injury action. — Hospital was entitled to summary judgment in an action brought by one of the hospital's physicians, who was injured after tripping in the staff parking lot, when the physician was unable to link the cause of the injury and the hospital's responsibility for that cause. Baldwin County Hosp. Auth. v. Martinez, 204 Ga. App. 840, 420 S.E.2d 760, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 921, 420 S.E.2d 760 (1992).

If evidence insufficient, timely responsive brief irrelevant. — Because the evidence relied upon by the movant was insufficient to support the movant's motion for summary judgment, regardless of the timeliness of the brief in response to the motion, the movant was not entitled to summary judgment. Hill v. Loren, 187 Ga. App. 71, 369 S.E.2d 260, cert. denied, 187 Ga. App. 907, 369 S.E.2d 260 (1988).

Movant asserting forgery as defense. — Movant who asserts forgery as a defense has the burden of proof that the signature is not authentic and, if so, not authorized, even though the respondent holder in due course would have such burden at trial. Southtrust Bank v. Parker, 226 Ga. App. 292, 486 S.E.2d 402 (1997).

Burden not met. — In response to the defendant's motion for partial summary judgment, the plaintiff did not come forward with any specific evidence in support of the plaintiff's claim that the defendant wrongfully, illegally, or fraudulently calculated the plaintiff's premiums; therefore, the defendant was entitled to summary judgment on that portion of the counterclaim. T & R Custom, Inc. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 227 Ga. App. 144, 488 S.E.2d 705 (1997).

3. Burden on Nonmovant

No conflict exists between this rule and the mandate of Superior Court Rule 6.5; rather, that rule's requirement of filing a statement of material facts in issue is in addition to and not contrary to the Code provision. Mills v. J.E. Sharber Oil Co., 181 Ga. App. 81, 351 S.E.2d 275 (1986).

Options of respondent to motion. — Respondent may resist a motion for summary judgment by doing nothing, relying on the failure of the movant to remove all issues of fact from the case, or by presenting evidence showing an issuable fact. Benefield v. Malone, 110 Ga. App. 607, 139 S.E.2d 500 (1964), later appeal, 112 Ga.

App. 408, 145 S.E.2d 732 (1965); Alexander v. Boston Old Colony Ins. Co., 127 Ga. App. 783, 195 S.E.2d 277 (1972) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

One page response inadequate. — Summary judgment was not authorized merely because a defendant filed a one-page response that contained no substantive argument and failed to comply with Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.5. Milk v. Total Pay & HR Solutions, Inc., 280 Ga. App. 449, 634 S.E.2d 208 (2006).

Upon a wife's request for year's support, because a son never presented argument or evidence to contest the amount sought by the wife, never sought a hearing on the issue, and failed to rebut the wife's claim of entitlement to that support, the son's claims of error on appeal from an order granting the wife summary judgment in the superior court lacked merit. In re Estate of Avery, 281 Ga. App. 904, 637 S.E.2d 504 (2006).

Opposing party not required to refute evidence until burden carried. — No duty devolves upon the opposing party to produce rebuttal evidence until a prima facie showing is made by the movant. Matthews v. North Cobb Tire Co., 120 Ga. App. 269, 170 S.E.2d 57 (1969); Lockhart v. Walker, 124 Ga. App. 241, 183 S.E.2d 503 (1971); Houston v. Doe, 136 Ga. App. 583, 222 S.E.2d 131 (1975); Lawrence v. Gardner, 154 Ga. App. 722, 270 S.E.2d 9 (1980).

Burden of proof always lies with the movant for summary judgment, and this burden must be carried by the movant before the opposing party is required to refute evidence submitted by the movant. Guthrie v. Monumental Properties, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 21, 232 S.E.2d 369 (1977).

If a prima facie showing is made that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, the opposite party must come forward with rebuttal evidence at that time or suffer judgment against the opposing party. Meade v. Heimanson, 239 Ga. 177, 236 S.E.2d 357 (1977).

Opposing party in a summary judgment proceeding is under no duty to present counter evidence in opposition to the motion for summary judgment until the moving party has produced evidence demanding that judgment. Peoples Bank v.

Burdens on Motion for SummaryJudgment (Cont'd)*3. Burden on Nonmovant (Cont'd)

Austin, 159 Ga. App. 223, 283 S.E.2d 81 (1981); Horton v. Wombles, 182 Ga. App. 214, 355 S.E.2d 124 (1987).

Although it is true that on motion for summary judgment, the burden of establishing the nonexistence of any genuine issue of fact is upon the moving party, the burden of proof is shifted when the moving party makes a prima facie showing that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. At that time the opposing party must come forward with rebuttal evidence or suffer judgment against the party. Leonaitis v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 186 Ga. App. 854, 368 S.E.2d 775, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 918, 368 S.E.2d 775 (1988).

Once the moving party for summary judgment has carried the movant's burden of making out a prima facie case, the burden shifts and the opposite party must come forward with rebuttal evidence or suffer judgment against the opposing party. Hinkley v. Building Material Merchants Ass'n, 187 Ga. App. 345, 370 S.E.2d 201 (1988).

Once the party moving for summary judgment has made a prima facie showing that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, the burden shifts to the nonmovant, who must then come forward with rebuttal evidence sufficient to show the existence of a genuine issue of material fact. Weldon v. Del Taco Corp., 194 Ga. App. 174, 390 S.E.2d 87 (1990); Southern Gen. Ins. Co. v. Davis, 205 Ga. App. 274, 421 S.E.2d 780 (1992).

Until the moving party produces evidence or materials that prima facie pierce the pleadings of the opposing party, no duty rests upon the opposing party to produce any counter evidence or materials in affirmative support of its side of the issue as made by the pleadings. Southern Bell Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Beaver, 120 Ga. App. 420, 170 S.E.2d 737 (1969); Guthrie v. Monumental Properties, Inc., 141 Ga. App. 21, 232 S.E.2d 369 (1977); Sun First Nat'l Bank v. Gainesville 75, Ltd., 155 Ga. App. 70, 270 S.E.2d 293 (1980).

Until the movant produces proof that pierces the pleadings, there is no requirement that the opposing party offer counterproof. Anderson v. Redwal Music Co., 122 Ga. App. 247, 176 S.E.2d 645 (1970); Sapp v. ABC Credit & Inv. Co., 243 Ga. 151, 253 S.E.2d 82 (1979).

Respondent has no burden whatever; the burden of proving a right to summary judgment lies with the movant. Watkins Prods., Inc. v. England, 123 Ga. App. 179, 180 S.E.2d 265 (1971).

Until movant shows absence of material issue. — Respondent in summary judgment proceeding is not ever required to rebut a motion until the movant has carried the burden of showing no material issue. Ginn v. Morgan, 225 Ga. 192, 167 S.E.2d 393 (1969); Mica-Top Fixture Co. v. Frank G. Shattuck Co., 124 Ga. App. 100, 183 S.E.2d 15 (1971).

Entitlement to judgment. — On motion for summary judgment, the respondent has no burden at all until the movant has first shown that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law on the basis of the pleadings and the affidavits. Doughty v. Associates Com. Corp., 152 Ga. App. 575, 263 S.E.2d 493 (1979).

Until such time as judgment is demanded, the defendant respondent to the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment is not required to produce any evidence. Maxwell v. Columbia Realty Venture, 155 Ga. App. 289, 270 S.E.2d 704 (1980).

By proper affidavits and permitted evidence. — It is only when a motion for summary judgment is supported by proper affidavits or other permitted evidence that the adverse party had a duty to produce evidence of fact. Massey v. National Homeowners Sales Serv. Corp., 225 Ga. 93, 165 S.E.2d 854 (1969).

Burden shifts to nonmovant when prima facie showing made. — If a motion for summary judgment is supported by affidavits, depositions, or other evidentiary matter showing a prima facie right in the movant to have judgment rendered in the movant's favor, the duty is cast upon the opposing party to produce rebuttal evidence at the hearing sufficient to show existence of a genuine issue of fact. Germaine v. Webster's Shopping Ctr., Inc., 116 Ga. App. 547, 158 S.E.2d 682 (1967); Stephens County v. Gaines, 128 Ga. App. 662, 197 S.E.2d 424 (1973); Lawyers Title Ins. Corp. v. Noland Co., 140 Ga. App. 114, 230 S.E.2d 102 (1976).

One opposing a motion for summary judgment must present the essence of the party's case or else suffer judgment. Meade v. Heimanson, 239 Ga. 177, 236 S.E.2d 357 (1977).

Burden is on moving party to show that no material issues of fact exist; burden of proof can be shifted, however, when a prima facie showing is made that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, and the opposite party must come forward with rebuttal evidence at that time, or suffer judgment against the opposing party. Skinner v. Humble Oil & Ref. Co., 145 Ga. App. 372, 243 S.E.2d 732 (1978); Herman v. Walsh, 154 Ga. App. 712, 269 S.E.2d 535 (1980).

Summary judgment in workers' compensation case. — Pretermitted whether the trial court correctly determined that no benefits had been paid under Georgia's Workers' Compensation Act, and thus the employer had no right of subrogation to the tort claim settlement proceeds, the trial court's order granting partial summary judgment to the employee extinguishing the employer's subrogation lien had to be affirmed as the employer failed to carry the employer's burden of showing that the injured employee was fully and completely compensated within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 34-9-11.1(b). Paschall Truck Lines, Inc. v. Kirkland, 287 Ga. App. 497, 651 S.E.2d 804 (2007).

Nonmovant must present alternative theories. — If the movant for summary judgment presents evidence that shows that there is no genuine issue of material fact, the movant has met the movant's burden, and the burden then shifts to the opposite party to present any alternative theories, if such exist, which would support the opposing party's action and within which genuine issues of fact remain. Culwell v. Lomas & Nettleton Co., 148 Ga. App. 478, 251 S.E.2d 579 (1978).

Nonmovant must meet and controvert specific facts set forth by the moving party. Stone Mt. Mem. Ass'n v. Herrington, 225 Ga. 746, 171 S.E.2d 521 (1969); Hartline-Thomas, Inc. v. H.W. Ivey Constr. Co., 161 Ga. App. 91, 289 S.E.2d 296 (1982); City of Cordele v. Turton's, Inc., 163 Ga. App. 327, 293 S.E.2d 560 (1982).

Summary judgment in favor of a consulting group was proper since an entertainment club, which presented evidence on the club's behalf, failed to present evidence that refuted the consulting group's evidence establishing the entertainment club's breach of a contract and the amount of damages due to the consulting group as a consequence of that breach of contract. Oasis Goodtime Emporium I, Inc. v. Crossroads Consulting Group, LLC, 255 Ga. App. 375, 565 S.E.2d 573 (2002).

Nonmoving party must set forth specific facts showing genuine issue.

— If the party moving for summary judgment has presented evidence of the necessary servitude, the opposing party must, in opposing affidavits, set forth specific facts showing a genuine issue to be decided by the jury. Hyman v. Horwitz, 148 Ga. App. 647, 252 S.E.2d 74 (1979).

When a motion for summary judgment is made, the adverse party may not rest upon the allegations of the pleadings, but must set forth specific facts showing there is a genuine issue for trial. Oliver v. Thomas, 158 Ga. App. 388, 280 S.E.2d 416 (1981); Curtis v. J.L. Todd Auction Co., 159 Ga. App. 863, 285 S.E.2d 596 (1981).

When a motion for summary judgment is submitted and supported by evidence, the adverse party may not rest upon the case as made, but must set forth specific facts and present the case in full in order to show there is a genuine issue for trial. Alghita v. Universal Inv. & Mfg. Co., 167 Ga. App. 562, 307 S.E.2d 99 (1983).

Opposing affidavits must set forth specific facts. — Mere conclusions are not sufficient to overcome allegations or admissions in an opposing motion for summary judgment, if the moving party has presented evidence of the necessary certitude; the opposing party must, in the opposing affidavits, set forth specific facts showing a genuine issue to be decided by a jury. Scroggins v. Whitfield Fin. Co., 152 Ga. App. 8, 262 S.E.2d 168 (1979).

Burdens on Motion for SummaryJudgment (Cont'd)*3. Burden on Nonmovant (Cont'd)

Mere statement of conclusion insufficient. — Adverse party must set forth “specific facts”; the opposing party cannot merely state a conclusion. Norris v. Kunes, 166 Ga. App. 686, 305 S.E.2d 426 (1983).

When motion to dismiss is converted. — When matters outside the pleadings are considered by the trial court on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the motion is converted to a motion for summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, and the trial court has the burden of informing the party opposing the motion that the court will consider matters outside the pleadings and that, if the opposing party so desires, the party has no less than 30 days to submit evidence in response to the motion for summary judgment; moreover, when patients in a class action suit against a hospital acquiesced in the hospital’s submission of evidence in support of their motion to dismiss, and in effect, requested that the motion be converted into one for summary judgment by submitting evidence and by urging the trial court and the appeals court to consider it, the patients waived the right to any formal 30-day notice from the trial court. Davis v. Phoebe Putney Health Sys., 280 Ga. App. 505, 634 S.E.2d 452 (2006).

“Plaintiff breached the contract” insufficient response. — In a suit on account, the trial court does not err in granting the plaintiff’s motion for summary judgment while reserving ruling on the defendant’s counterclaim, if the defendant does nothing other than allege generally in the defendant’s answer that “plaintiff breached the contract.” Concert Promotions, Inc. v. Haas & Dodd, Inc., 167 Ga. App. 883, 307 S.E.2d 763 (1983).

Because the plaintiff failed to carry the burden of piercing the defendant’s defense of release, it was not necessary that the defendant come forward with evidence sufficient to show the release, and since the plaintiff was not entitled to judgment as a matter of law, the trial court did not err by denying the court’s motion for summary judgment. Howell Mill/Collier Assocs. v. Gonzales, 186 Ga. App. 909, 368 S.E.2d 831 (1988).

Imputing liability to owner of car.

— In a passenger’s personal injury action against an owner of another vehicle that had been negligently driven by another, causing it to collide with the car in which the passenger was riding, summary judgment was properly granted to the owner under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 since the passenger did not offer evidence to support the passenger’s claim for imputing liability on the owner, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 51-2-2, beyond the passenger showing that the owner owned and insured the vehicle; it was noted that the true test of liability for imputing liability was not the title or ownership, but rather the agency. Collins v. Hamilton, 259 Ga. App. 52, 576 S.E.2d 42 (2002).

Punitive damages. — In a case in which the defendant filed interrogatories requesting that the plaintiffs give “each and every fact” upon which the plaintiffs relied in support of their general allegations that the defendant’s “wilful and wanton” conduct authorized a recovery of punitive damages and the plaintiffs responded that the plaintiffs were relying upon the fact that the defendant was physically unable to drive an automobile and had continued to drive notwithstanding the defendant’s limitations, but the defendant, in support of the motion for summary judgment, submitted the defendant’s own affidavit, as well as that of a physician, both of which were to the fact that, at the time of the collision, the defendant was physically capable of driving safely and without restriction, and in opposition, the plaintiffs submitted only the affidavit of a witness who stated that, on one prior occasion, the witness had seen the defendant drive dangerously and recklessly as to speed and following too closely, but without injurious result, the plaintiffs failed to produce specific facts that would rebut the defendant’s evidence of the lack of aggravating circumstances so the trial court correctly granted the defendant partial summary judgment on the issue of punitive damages. Currie v. Haney, 183 Ga. App. 506, 359 S.E.2d 350, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905, 359 S.E.2d 350 (1987).

Affidavit showing refusal to cohabit. — If the party moving for summary judgment files an affidavit setting forth evidentiary facts showing refusal to cohabit and the lack of any prospects for reconciliation, summary judgment will be granted unless there is an opposing affidavit showing that the movant has not refused to cohabit or has shown prospects for reconciliation. Bryan v. Bryan, 248 Ga. 312, 282 S.E.2d 892 (1981).

Reference to depositions filed after summary judgment motion not permitted. — Because depositions relied upon by a husband and wife in their personal injury and loss of consortium action were not filed prior to the time a motion for summary judgment was ruled upon, their reference to the testimony contained therein could not be considered, and their brief in opposition to the summary judgment motion citing the testimony was not proper evidence for opposing the motion. Parker v. Silviano, 284 Ga. App. 278, 643 S.E.2d 819 (2007).

Failure to present evidence of actual knowledge supporting negligent entrustment claim. — In a personal injury action asserting negligent entrustment, because the injured party failed in the burden of presenting evidence that a passenger in the opposing vehicle had actual knowledge of the incompetent driving of that vehicle's driver, or of facts from which such knowledge could be inferred, due to that driver's intoxication, summary judgment in the passenger's favor was properly entered; the injured party failed to prove an essential element of the entrustment claim. Williams v. Ngo, 289 Ga. App. 44, 656 S.E.2d 193 (2007).

4. Burdens When Defendant Is Movant

Burden on the defendant's motion for summary judgment is on the defendant to pierce the pleadings and to show conclusively that the plaintiff has no right to recover. Reed v. Batson-Cook Co., 122 Ga. App. 803, 178 S.E.2d 728 (1970).

Movant defendant must effectively pierce any state of facts contained in the plaintiff's complaint or those that may be proved in connection therewith so as to preclude as a matter of law the plaintiff's right to prevail under any theory alleged. Morton v. Stewart, 153 Ga. App. 636, 266 S.E.2d 230 (1980).

When the movant is the defendant, the movant has the additional burden of piercing the plaintiff's pleadings and affirmatively negating one or more essential elements of the complaint. Corbitt v. Harris, 182 Ga. App. 81, 354 S.E.2d 637 (1987).

If a motion for summary judgment is made by a defendant, that defendant shoulders the burden of disproving the plaintiff's case, that is, the defendant must affirmatively disprove the case by uncontroverted evidence that demands a finding that no genuine issue as to any material fact remains, and the defendant is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. Equitable Life Assurance Soc'y v. Reynolds, 186 Ga. App. 608, 367 S.E.2d 879 (1988).

When the defendant moves for summary judgment, the defendant has the burden of piercing the pleadings and affirmatively negating one or more essential elements of the plaintiff's case. Church v. SMS Enters., 186 Ga. App. 791, 368 S.E.2d 554 (1988).

Defendant may demonstrate that there is no genuine issue of material fact to be decided by showing the court that the documents, affidavits, depositions, and other evidence in the record reveal that there is no evidence sufficient to create a jury issue on at least one essential element of the plaintiff's case. Brown v. Brewer, 237 Ga. App. 145, 513 S.E.2d 10 (1999).

Defendant must unequivocally refute allegations. — In order to pierce allegations of material fact contained in the plaintiff's petition, evidence offered by the defendant on a motion for summary judgment must unequivocally refute those allegations and must clearly show what is the truth of the matter alleged. Whisenhunt v. Allen Parker Co., 119 Ga. App. 813, 168 S.E.2d 827 (1969); Matthews v. North Cobb Tire Co., 120 Ga. App. 269, 170 S.E.2d 57 (1969); Supreme Oil Co. v. Brock, 129 Ga. App. 863, 201 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Movant's evidence must be of necessary certitude. — On a motion for summary judgment in favor of the defendant on the ground that the plaintiff has no valid claim, the defendant has the burden of producing evidence of the necessary certitude that negates the plaintiff's claim. Central of Ga. Ry. v. Woolfolk Chem. Works, Ltd., 122 Ga. App. 789, 178 S.E.2d 710 (1970); Kroger Co. v. Cobb, 125 Ga. App. 310, 187 S.E.2d 316 (1972).

Movant's evidence must negate one essential element under every theory of recovery. — In order for the defendant to prevail on a motion for summary judgment, pleadings, uncontradicted evidence, or admission must negate an essential element of recovery. Seligman & Latz of Atlanta, Inc. v. Grant, 116 Ga. App. 539, 158 S.E.2d 483 (1967).

Burden is on the defendant who moves for summary judgment to produce evidence that conclusively negates at least one essential element entitling the plaintiff to recover under every theory fairly to be drawn from pleadings and evidence. Goodwin v. Mullins, 122 Ga. App. 84, 176 S.E.2d 551 (1970); Central of Ga. Ry. v. Woolfolk Chem. Works, Ltd., 122 Ga. App. 789, 178 S.E.2d 710 (1970); Reed v. Batson-Cook Co., 122 Ga. App. 803, 178 S.E.2d 728 (1970); Lockhart v. Beaird, 128 Ga. App. 7, 195 S.E.2d 292 (1973); Turner v. Noe, 127 Ga. App. 870, 195 S.E.2d 463 (1973); Moss v. Central of Ga. R.R., 135 Ga. App. 904, 219 S.E.2d 593 (1975); Horner v. Savannah Valley Enters., Inc., 138 Ga. App. 117, 225 S.E.2d 458 (1976).

To entitle the defendant to summary judgment, undisputed facts, as disclosed by the pleadings and evidence, must negate at least one essential element entitling the plaintiff to recovery and under every theory fairly drawn from the pleadings and evidence and, if necessary, prove the negative or nonexistence of an essential element affirmatively asserted by the plaintiff. Epps Air Serv., Inc. v. DeKalb County, 147 Ga. App. 195, 248 S.E.2d 300 (1978); Lawrence v. Gardner, 154 Ga. App. 722, 270 S.E.2d 9 (1980); Waller v. Transworld Imports, Inc., 155 Ga. App. 438, 271 S.E.2d 1 (1980).

Burden is on the defendant who moves for summary judgment to produce evidence that conclusively negates the essential elements entitling the respondent to recover under any theory that may be drawn fairly from the pleadings and the evidence. Fort v. Boone, 166 Ga. App. 290, 304 S.E.2d 465 (1983).

To prevail on a motion for summary judgment, a defendant-movant is required to pierce the allegations of the complaint and to establish as a matter of law that the plaintiff could not recover under any theory fairly drawn from the pleadings and the evidence. Reed v. Adventist Health Systems/Sunbelt, 181 Ga. App. 750, 353 S.E.2d 523 (1987); Trust Co. Bank v. Stubbs, 203 Ga. App. 557, 417 S.E.2d 373, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 908, 417 S.E.2d 373 (1992).

When the defendant is the movant, the defendant has the burden of negating conclusively at least one of the essential elements of the plaintiff's case. Ryder Truck Rental, Inc. v. Carter, 189 Ga. App. 43, 374 S.E.2d 830 (1988).

Defendant may meet the burden for summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 by showing the court that the documents, affidavits, depositions, and other evidence in the record reveal that there is no evidence sufficient to create a jury issue on at least one essential element of the plaintiff's case; if there is no evidence sufficient to create a genuine issue as to any essential element of the plaintiff's claim, that claim tumbles like a house of cards, and all of the other disputes of fact are rendered immaterial. Sudduth v. Young, 260 Ga. App. 56, 579 S.E.2d 7 (2003).

Defendant's burden not carried by failure of evidence to prove plaintiff's case. — Defendant, on whom burden of proof at trial does not lie, and who on motion for summary judgment in the defendant's favor does not pierce the issues made by the pleadings or disprove one or more of the essential elements of the plaintiff's case, does not carry the defendant's burden merely because evidence submitted fails to prove the plaintiff's case. Continental Assurance Co. v. Rothell, 121 Ga. App. 868, 176 S.E.2d 259 (1970), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 227 Ga. 258, 181 S.E.2d 283, vacated on other grounds, 123 Ga. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 541 (1971).

Burden discharged by pointing out absence of evidence. — Defendant who will not bear the burden of proof at trial need not affirmatively disprove the non-moving party's case; instead, the burden on the moving party may be discharged by pointing out, by reference to the affidavits, depositions, and other documents in the record, that there is an absence of evidence to support the nonmoving party's case. If the moving party discharges this burden, the nonmoving party cannot rest on its pleadings, but rather must point to specific evidence giving rise to a triable issue. Lau's Corp. v. Haskins, 261 Ga. 491, 405 S.E.2d 474 (1991); Brown v. Buffington, 203 Ga. App. 402, 416 S.E.2d 883 (1992).

Contrary to the plaintiff's argument, a driver and the driver's passenger, in opposing the defendant motorist's summary judgment motion in the plaintiffs' action to recover for personal injuries and property damage, the motorist was not required to produce evidence to support the motorist's assertion that the motorist was never served with process; rather, the motorist met the summary judgment burden by pointing out in the record that there was an absence of evidence to support the plaintiffs' case in that regard and, specifically, that there was evidence that the sheriff's office had been unable to serve the motorist. Carter v. McKnight, 260 Ga. App. 105, 578 S.E.2d 901 (2003).

Affirmative showing that plaintiff not entitled to recovery required. — To warrant entry of summary judgment in favor of the defendant, undisputed facts should show the right of the defendant to judgment with such clarity as to leave no room for controversy, and should show affirmatively that the plaintiff would not be entitled to recover under any discernible circumstances. Lockhart v. Walker, 124 Ga. App. 241, 183 S.E.2d 503 (1971); Buford-Clairmont, Inc. v. Jacobs Pharmacy Co., 131 Ga. App. 643, 206 S.E.2d 674 (1974); Allen & Bean, Inc. v. American Bankers Ins. Co., 153 Ga. App. 617, 266 S.E.2d 295 (1980).

Evidence that merely preponder-ates toward the defendant's theory rather than the plaintiff's, or if it does no more than disclose circumstances under which satisfactory proof of the plaintiff's case on trial will be highly unlikely. Whisenhunt v. Allen Parker Co., 119 Ga. App. 813, 168 S.E.2d 827 (1969); Matthews v. North Cobb Tire Co., 120 Ga. App. 269, 170 S.E.2d 57 (1969); Supreme Oil Co. v. Brock, 129 Ga. App. 863, 201 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Burden on nonmovant plaintiff. — If the defendant moves for summary judgment, there is no burden on the plaintiff to come forward with proof of the plaintiff's case until evidence adduced prima facie disproves an essential element of the plaintiff's theory of recovery. Continental Assurance Co. v. Rothell, 121 Ga. App. 868, 176 S.E.2d 259 (1970), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 227 Ga. 258, 181 S.E.2d 283, vacated on other grounds, 123 Ga. App. 423, 181 S.E.2d 541 (1971).

If the movant defendant's showing on a summary judgment motion pierces material issues made by the pleadings, an evidentiary response by the plaintiff respondent is required for the plaintiff to avoid an adverse summary judgment. Alexander v. Boston Old Colony Ins. Co., 127 Ga. App. 783, 195 S.E.2d 277 (1972).

When the defendant makes a motion for summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, which motion is supported by affidavits, depositions, or other evidentiary matters showing a prima facie right on the part of the defendant to have summary judgment rendered in the defendant's favor, the duty is then cast upon the plaintiff to produce rebuttal evidence at the hearing on the motion, by the introduction of depositions, affidavits, or other evidence sufficient to show to the court that there is a genuine issue of fact to be decided by the jury. Rehak v. Mathis, 239 Ga. 541, 238 S.E.2d 81 (1977).

Plaintiff need not produce evidence until the defendant's evidence pierces the plaintiff's pleadings and demands a finding in the defendant's favor on the particular issue of fact made by the pleadings. Fort v. Boone, 166 Ga. App. 290, 304 S.E.2d 465 (1983).

Plaintiff is not required to respond to issues that are not raised in the defen-defendant's motion for summary judgment or to present the plaintiff's entire case on all allegations in the complaint; thus, until the defendant pierced the allegations of the complaint on a particular issue, the plaintiff was not required to respond to the motion on that issue. Hodge v. Sada Enters., Inc., 217 Ga. App. 688, 458 S.E.2d 876 (1995).

If the defendant hospital makes a motion for summary judgment and the attending physician gives a medical affidavit that states a medical opinion that the alleged deviation from the standard of care has no causal connection with the injury or aggravated a pre-existing condition, such motion has pierced the plaintiff's pleadings, refuted causation, and shifted the burden to the plaintiff of coming forward with some evidence to create a material issue of fact. Estate of Patterson v. Fulton-DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 233 Ga. App. 706, 505 S.E.2d 232 (1998).

Once the defendant has carried burden of showing an absence of a genuine issue of fact, the plaintiff is required to offer refuting evidence, and if the plaintiff has failed to produce refuting evidence, the trial court's grant of summary judgment is proper. Gilbert v. Jones, 187 Ga. App. 303, 370 S.E.2d 155 (1988).

Standard for defendant's burden. — When the defendant moving for summary judgment presents evidence apparently destroying the plaintiff's cause of action, the defendant meets the burden; the burden then shifts to the plaintiff to present any alternative theories, if such exist, which would support the action and within which genuine issues of fact remain. Gerald v. Ameron Automotive Ctrs., 145 Ga. App. 200, 243 S.E.2d 565 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 245 Ga. 5, 262 S.E.2d 895 (1980).

Nonmovant plaintiff need not prove entitlement to relief. — In opposing a motion for summary judgment, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to produce sufficient evidence to show that the plaintiff is entitled to the relief sought.

Wall v. Georgia Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 238 Ga. 275, 232 S.E.2d 555 (1977); Thomas v. McGee, 242 Ga. 441, 249 S.E.2d 242 (1978).

If the movant defendant has pierced the allegations of the pleadings and shown the truth to the court, the defendant may receive a grant of summary judgment if there is no genuine issue of material fact considering the pleadings and available evidence. Fort v. Boone, 166 Ga. App. 290, 304 S.E.2d 465 (1983).

Plaintiff's options of producing counterproof or doing nothing. — If the defendant moves for summary judgment, the plaintiff has the choice of producing counterproof and thus making an issue of fact, or doing nothing, that is, creating no issue of fact and suffering judgment. Brown v. J.C. Penney Co., 123 Ga. App. 233, 180 S.E.2d 364 (1971).

If the defendant alleges that cashing of check and retaining proceeds constitutes accord and satisfaction, regardless of any protest, oral or written, and regardless of whether the other party is given notice of protest or any purported reservation of rights, the defendant thus undertakes to discharge a treble burden: not only that ordinarily imposed upon the proponent of an affirmative defense, but a second burden that requires the movant for summary judgment to establish that there exist no material issues of fact in the case, and yet a third that requires the movant who is also the defendant affirmatively to negate one or more essential elements of the case made out by the plaintiff. Wallace v. Harrison, 166 Ga. App. 461, 304 S.E.2d 487 (1983).

In a "slip and fall" case, on a motion for summary judgment the burden was on the defendant store owner, as movant, to come forward with evidence tending to show that the defendant did not have constructive knowledge of the presence of the alleged hazard. Shiver v. Singletary, 186 Ga. App. 746, 368 S.E.2d 523, cert. denied, 186 Ga. App. 918, 368 S.E.2d 523 (1988).

In a slip and fall case, if the plaintiff has alleged that the defendant had actual knowledge of a defect, the defendant-movant must proffer some evidence that the defendant did not know of the defect, in order to proceed toward summary judgment. Baldwin County Hosp. Auth. v. Coney, 188 Ga. App. 339, 373 S.E.2d 252 (1988).

Defendant's motion granted absent testimony negating allegation. — In a product liability action, given the plaintiff's continued inability or unwillingness to cite any specific instances of the manufacturer's alleged negligence in the design and manufacture of a van, the trial court was authorized under such circumstances to conclude that no such conduct had in fact occurred and that no material issue of fact remained to be tried with respect to this claim, even in the absence of sworn testimony affirmatively negating the allegation that such conduct had occurred. Collins v. Byrd, 204 Ga. App. 893, 420 S.E.2d 785, cert. denied, 204 Ga. App. 921, 420 S.E.2d 785 (1992).

Evidence on Motion

1. In General

Purpose of summary judgment procedures would not be advanced by artificial blockades against production of facts helpful in a determination of whether or not a jury issue exists, and this includes both oral and documentary evidence. Kiker v. Pinson, 120 Ga. App. 784, 172 S.E.2d 333 (1969).

Conversion from motion to dismiss. — When matters outside the pleadings are considered by the trial court on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the motion is converted to a motion for summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, and the trial court has the burden of informing the party opposing the motion that the court will consider matters outside the pleadings and that, if the opposing party so desires, the party has no less than 30 days to submit evidence in response to the motion for summary judgment. Morrell v. Wellstar Health Sys., Inc., 280 Ga. App. 1, 633 S.E.2d 68 (2006).

List of forms of evidence not exclusive. — Forms of evidence listed in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 are not exclusive means of presenting evidence on a motion for summary judgment; the trial court may consider any material which would be admissible or usable at trial. Benton Bros. Ford Co. v. Cotton States Mut. Ins. Co., 157 Ga. App. 448, 278 S.E.2d 40 (1981).

Court will consider all materials which meet standards of this section.

— Court is obliged to take account of the entire setting of the case on a summary judgment motion, and the court will consider all papers of record, as well as any material prepared for the motion that meets the standard prescribed in subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56. Glisson v. Morton, 203 Ga. App. 77, 416 S.E.2d 134 (1992).

Introduction of items in subsection (c). — There is no requirement under subsection (c) of this section that the items listed be introduced into evidence. Thompson v. Abbott, 226 Ga. 353, 174 S.E.2d 904 (1970), overruled on other grounds, Ogden Equip. Co. v. Talmadge Farms, Inc., 232 Ga. 614, 208 S.E.2d 459 (1974).

Introduction of evidence not prerequisite to consideration. — Trial court properly considered defendant's answers to interrogatories in passing on a motion for summary judgment, even though such answers were not introduced into evidence, as introduction of evidence is not a necessary condition for consideration of such evidence on summary judgment. Ford v. Georgia Power Co., 151 Ga. App. 748, 261 S.E.2d 474 (1979).

Subsection (c) limits certain evidence considered on motion. — Subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 requires that only supporting material which is "on file" at least 30 days before the hearing shall be considered for the movant. Porter Coatings v. Stein Steel & Supply Co., 247 Ga. 631, 278 S.E.2d 377 (1981).

Complaint is not evidence, and thus may not be considered in deciding a motion for summary judgment. Clements v. Hendi, 182 Ga. App. 118, 354 S.E.2d 700 (1987).

Patient's complaint was not evidence and thus could not be considered in deciding a motion for summary judgment. Wellstar Health Sys. v. Painter, 288 Ga. App. 659, 655 S.E.2d 251 (2007).

Improper legal standard in withdrawal of admissions. — Because the trial court applied the wrong legal standard in refusing to allow the defendants to withdraw the defendants' admissions, and should have applied the standard set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-36(b) and considered whether withdrawal would serve the presentation of the merits and whether it would prejudice the plaintiffs, summary judgment was improper; moreover, the trial court erroneously held that summary judgment was proper because the defendants had shown no excuse for their former counsel's failure to respond to the plaintiffs request for admissions as the defendants were not required to make such a showing. Sayers v. Artistic Kitchen Design, LLC, 280 Ga. App. 223, 633 S.E.2d 619 (2006).

Documentary evidence. — Subsection (c) of this section does not preclude use of documentary evidence in a summary judgment proceeding. Kiker v. Pinson, 120 Ga. App. 784, 172 S.E.2d 333 (1969).

Statement of facts. — Statement of facts submitted pursuant to Uniform Superior Court Rule 6.5 is not evidence for purposes of a motion for summary judgment. Rapps v. Cooke, 234 Ga. App. 131, 505 S.E.2d 566 (1998).

Additional evidence. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 does not prohibit successive motions for summary judgment based on additional evidence. Conversely, the statute does not prohibit the filing of additional evidence once a motion for summary judgment is denied. If a deficiency in evidence can be cured short of trial, then the obvious expedient of a motion more fully supported will achieve final resolution more quickly and inexpensively for all concerned. Hogans v. Food Giant, Inc., 185 Ga. App. 645, 365 S.E.2d 496 (1988); NeSmith v. Ellerbee, 203 Ga. App. 65, 416 S.E.2d 364 (1992).

Competent and admissible evidence required. — "Genuine issue" test is not met unless evidence offered is competent and admissible. General Ins. Co. of Am. v. Camden Constr. Co., 115 Ga. App. 189, 154 S.E.2d 26 (1967) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Case must be provable by competent evidence. — Depositions or affidavits offered in support of the plaintiff's case and in opposition to the defendant's motion for summary judgment must affirmatively show that the plaintiff's case is provable by competent evidence. Cochran v. Southern Bus. Univ., Inc., 110 Ga. App. 666, 139 S.E.2d 400 (1964) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Deposition improperly excluded because it was an unsigned copy. — In a parents' action against a care home arising out of the death of their adult son, the trial court erred in refusing to consider a copy of the deposition of the parents' expert because it was not an original and had not been signed by the deponent; the copy contained the court reporter's signed certification that the transcript was a true and complete record of the evidence given by the expert. Blake v. KES, Inc., 329 Ga. App. 742, 766 S.E.2d 138 (2014).

Speculation insufficient. — Speculation which raises merely a conjecture or possibility is not sufficient to create even an inference of fact for consideration on summary judgment. Emory Univ. v. Smith, 260 Ga. App. 900, 581 S.E.2d 405 (2003).

Showing of competency to testify required. — Affidavit which fails to show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to matters stated therein fails to comply with subsection (c) of this section as to evidence under motions for summary judgment. Watkins Prods., Inc. v. England, 123 Ga. App. 179, 180 S.E.2d 265 (1971).

Evidence in support of or in opposition to a motion for summary judgment, whether by deposition, affidavit, interrogatory, or otherwise, must show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to matters stated therein. Crawford v. McDonald, 125 Ga. App. 289, 187 S.E.2d 542 (1972).

Incompetent complainant. — When the complainant's affidavit affirmatively revealed that the complainant was not competent to testify as to the matters stated therein, the affidavit would not support a motion for summary judgment. Ireland v. Matthews, 120 Ga. App. 510,

171 S.E.2d 387 (1969).

Competence to testify as to law of foreign state. — When there is no showing that the defendant is competent to testify as to the law of the foreign state, the affidavit of the defendant as to such matters is without probative value on a motion for summary judgment. Ryle v. Ryle, 130 Ga. App. 680, 204 S.E.2d 339 (1974).

Subsection (e) does not change proof required to defeat motion for summary judgment, when evidence submitted therewith has pierced the pleadings; it is merely a statutory amendment to reflect what has already been decided judicially as to the opposing evidence required. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Seagraves, 117 Ga. App. 480, 160 S.E.2d 912 (1968).

Enactment of subsection (e) of this section did not eliminate requirement that pleadings be pierced. Alexander v. Boston Old Colony Ins. Co., 127 Ga. App. 783, 195 S.E.2d 277 (1972).

Consideration of entire setting of case. — Court is obliged to take account of the entire setting of a case on a motion for summary judgment; in addition to the pleadings, it will consider all papers of record as well as any material prepared for the motion that meets the standard prescribed in subsection (e) of this section. Union Circulation Co. v. Trust Co. Bank, 146 Ga. App. 612, 247 S.E.2d 197 (1978).

Court is obligated to take account of entire setting of case on a motion for summary judgment. Smith v. Jones, 154 Ga. App. 629, 269 S.E.2d 471 (1980).

Trial judge should always search entire record before granting motion for summary judgment, and should not be limited to evidence introduced at hearing. Thompson v. Abbott, 226 Ga. 353, 174 S.E.2d 904 (1970), overruled on other grounds, Ogden Equip. Co. v. Talmadge Farms, Inc., 232 Ga. 614, 208 S.E.2d 459 (1974); Jackson v. Couch Funeral Home, 131 Ga. App. 695, 206 S.E.2d 718 (1974); Realty Contractors, Inc. v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 146 Ga. App. 69, 245 S.E.2d 342 (1978); Union Circulation Co. v. Trust Co. Bank, 146 Ga. App. 612, 247 S.E.2d 197 (1978); Sacks v. Bell Tel. Labs., Inc., 149 Ga. App. 799, 256 S.E.2d 87 (1979).

In ruling on motion for summary judgment, particularly one based upon a contract which is controlling, it is axiomatic that the court must search the entire record and consider all papers of record properly before the court. American Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Llewellyn, 142 Ga. App. 824, 237 S.E.2d 227 (1977).

On consideration of summary judgments, trial court must look at the entire record. Lawson v. Duke Oil Co., 155 Ga. App. 363, 270 S.E.2d 898 (1980).

Completion of discovery not required before ruling on motion. — In an action by the children of a decedent against the operators of a nursing home, the trial court was not required to allow the children to complete discovery before ruling on the operators' motion for summary judgment. If the children needed additional discovery for their response to the motion, the children should have invoked O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(f). Carr v. Kindred Healthcare Operating, Inc., 293 Ga. App. 80, 666 S.E.2d 401 (2008).

Additional evidence may be ordered by judge. — If there is doubt in the trial judge's mind as to whether the movant has carried the burden of showing there is no substantial issue of material fact, the judge may require such additional evidence as the judge deems advisable and prescribe the method by which additional evidence must be presented. Benefield v. Malone, 110 Ga. App. 607, 139 S.E.2d 500 (1964), later appeal, 112 Ga. App. 408, 145 S.E.2d 732 (1965) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Parties need not formally offer outside matter as evidence or have the evidence marked as an exhibit at a hearing on the motion. Union Circulation Co. v. Trust Co. Bank, 146 Ga. App. 612, 247 S.E.2d 197 (1978); Smith v. Jones, 154 Ga. App. 629, 269 S.E.2d 471 (1980); Bimbo Bldrs., Inc. v. Stubbs Properties, Inc., 158 Ga. App. 280, 279 S.E.2d 730 (1981).

Personal affidavit sufficient to raise jury issue. — When a party resisting a motion for summary judgment offers nothing more than the party's own personal affidavit, even if assumed to be self-serving, the conflicting allegation in the parties' competing affidavits may be enough to defeat the motion and require jury resolution. Shalom Farms, Inc. v. Columbus Bank & Trust Co., 169 Ga. App. 145, 312 S.E.2d 138 (1983).

Affidavit based on information not in record. — When an affidavit offered by the plaintiff was based solely on information not part of the record in the case, the affidavit had no probative value in response to the motion for summary judgment. Nettles v. Laws, 172 Ga. App. 241, 322 S.E.2d 546 (1984).

Affidavit from an out-of-state expert, whose conclusions were based on medical records not attached to the affidavit and not otherwise in the record, filed in opposition to a motion for summary judgment, was inadmissible under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56. Oakes v. Magat, 263 Ga. App. 165, 587 S.E.2d 150 (2003).

Court should not exclude affidavit when documents on file. — Although the documents referred to in an affidavit are not attached to the affidavit, as required by subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, the trial court should not exclude the affidavit when all of the documents are filed in the case. Hughey v. Emory Univ., 168 Ga. App. 239, 308 S.E.2d 558 (1983).

Deposition need only be on file to be considered. — Deposition need not be introduced in evidence in order to be considered in ruling upon a motion for summary judgment as the law only requires that the deposition be on file. GMC v. Walker, 244 Ga. 191, 259 S.E.2d 449 (1979); Porter Coatings v. Stein Steel & Supply Co., 157 Ga. App. 260, 277 S.E.2d 272, aff'd, 247 Ga. 631, 278 S.E.2d 377 (1981).

Depositions must be filed 30 days before the hearing to be considered on behalf of the movant for summary judgment. Lynch v. Georgia Power Co., 180 Ga. App. 178, 348 S.E.2d 719 (1986).

Trial judge is bound to consider pleadings, including amended complaint, in ruling on a motion for summary judgment. Alexander v. Boston Old Colony Ins. Co., 127 Ga. App. 783, 195 S.E.2d 277 (1972).

Amended pleadings filed after summary judgment hearing but before rendition of judge's order are to be considered in passing on motion for summary judgment. Haskins v. Jones, 142 Ga. App. 153, 235 S.E.2d 630 (1977).

In addition to the pleadings, court will consider all papers of record, as well as any material prepared for the motion that meets the standard prescribed in subsection (e) of this section as submitted by both parties. Smith v. Jones, 154 Ga. App. 629, 269 S.E.2d 471 (1980).

Examination of materials extraneous to pleadings. — On motion for summary judgment, the court is authorized to examine proffered materials extraneous on the pleadings, not for the purpose of trying an issue, but to determine whether there is a genuine issue of material fact to be tried; such extraneous matter most often consists of depositions, answers to interrogatories, admissions on file, and affidavits, if any, but also among matters which may be considered are oral testimony, judicial notice, presumptions, stipulations, concessions of counsel, certified transcript of a court, exhibits, and other papers that have been identified by affidavit or otherwise made admissible in evidence or useable at trial. Bodrey v. Cape, 120 Ga. App. 859, 172 S.E.2d 643 (1969).

Interrogatories and answers may be considered. — Even when the movant based the movant's motion on the pleadings and the depositions of the plaintiffs, nevertheless the court was authorized to also consider the interrogatories and answers thereto. Stone Mt. Mem. Ass'n v. Herrington, 225 Ga. 746, 171 S.E.2d 521 (1969).

Indication of review by judge sufficient. — If a trial judge in the judge's order recites that the judge has considered each affidavit, deposition, and document submitted, there will not be a reversal on appeal on the ground that the judge did not do so. Vaughn & Co. v. Saul, 143 Ga. App. 74, 237 S.E.2d 622 (1977).

If the trial court indicates in an order granting a motion for summary judgment that such motion is being granted after review of the record, the appellate court will not hold that the trial court failed to review the relevant portions of a deposition simply because the original on file remained sealed and was not opened until after the order granting the motion was entered. GMC v. Walker, 244 Ga. 191, 259 S.E.2d 449 (1979).

Order of trial court indicating that record was reviewed was sufficient showing of review of documents, even though the depositions were still sealed. Smith v. Jones, 154 Ga. App. 629, 269 S.E.2d 471 (1980).

Evidence adduced at former trial and judgment of appellate court may be relied upon by the movant as well as pleadings and other forms of evidence specifically mentioned in this section. Goldsmith v. American Food Servs., Inc., 123 Ga. App. 353, 181 S.E.2d 95 (1971).

Introduction of record of former case on different cause. — In an entirely new case not constituting continuation of a previous case based on same cause of action, record adduced on former case could be introduced in support of the motion for summary judgment; this record would be of no greater weight than other affidavits, depositions, and other documentary evidence in support or in opposition to the motion. Miller v. Douglas, 235 Ga. 222, 219 S.E.2d 144 (1975).

Copy of transcript of prior hearing of same case. — When evidence adduced upon prior hearing of the same case is relied upon to support a motion for summary judgment, a transcript of such evidence must be attached to or introduced in support of such motion. Reid v. Wilkerson, 223 Ga. 751, 158 S.E.2d 241 (1967).

Transcript of probate proceeding. — When a transcript of a probate proceeding is certified by a court reporter and transmitted from a probate court to a superior court, the transcript can be relied upon to support or oppose a motion for summary judgment. Tony v. Pollard, 248 Ga. 86, 281 S.E.2d 557 (1981).

Vacation of summary judgment and new hearing set. — When a summary judgment is vacated and a new hearing set, in the absence of an express order, the matter is reopened for all purposes including the subsequent filing of affidavits, depositions, etc., until the date of the new hearing. Bishop v. Stephens, 164 Ga. App.

Premising of judgment on document not in record and not in evidence before court. — Trial court's order granting summary judgment, premised entirely upon a document not in the record, not in evidence before the trial court, and not appearing in the record before the appellate court must be reversed. Nelson v. Smothers, 164 Ga. App. 112, 296 S.E.2d 414 (1982).

Deposition testimony quoted in brief. — Since a brief in support of a motion for summary judgment is not proper evidence upon which summary judgment can be granted, deposition testimony as quoted in the movant's brief could not serve as the basis for summary judgment. Lynch v. Georgia Power Co., 180 Ga. App. 178, 348 S.E.2d 719 (1986).

Requests for admissions. — When both defendants asserted that the lease was altered, the failure of one defendant to file a separate denial of requests to admit did not remove all issues of fact and entitle the plaintiff to judgment. Freeway Junction Bakery, Inc. v. Krupp Cash Plus III, 202 Ga. App. 703, 415 S.E.2d 312 (1992), overruled on other grounds, 287 Ga. 358, 695 S.E.2d 586 (2010).

Judicial notice of separate action. — In a suit on two promissory notes, the trial court erred in taking judicial notice of the evidence presented in a separate declaratory judgment action on the notes in granting summary judgment. Kaplan v. Krosco, Inc., 167 Ga. App. 197, 306 S.E.2d 88 (1983).

Inconsistent statements constituted "direct" contradiction. — When a customer fell from a raised platform in a store, the customer's statement in a deposition that the customer was distracted by the need to summon assistance from a clerk was directly contradicted by the customer's subsequent statement in an affidavit that the customer was distracted by a need to negotiate the customer's way around boxes, thereby justifying the trial court in disregarding the affidavit. Simone v. Hancock Textile Co., 175 Ga. App. 191, 332 S.E.2d 669 (1985).

Suggestion of vague defense by opposing party inadequate. — Purpose of this section would be defeated if the party opposing the motion for summary judgment was permitted to defeat the motion by suggesting so vague a defense as to prevent the movant or court from ascertaining the theory behind the motion. Meade v. Heimanson, 239 Ga. 177, 236 S.E.2d 357 (1977); Goodman v. St. Joseph's Infirmary, Inc., 144 Ga. App. 614, 241 S.E.2d 487 (1978); Reuben v. First Nat'l Bank, 151 Ga. App. 476, 260 S.E.2d 498 (1979).

When the plaintiff in an action to enforce an indemnity agreement made a prima-facie showing of the indebtedness and moved for summary judgment, the defendant's general assertion of partial failure of consideration, unsupported by specific facts or arguments, was insufficient to avoid judgment. Thomasson v. Pineco, Inc., 173 Ga. App. 794, 328 S.E.2d 410 (1985).

Inference from circumstantial evidence without probative value. — In passing on a motion for summary judgment, a finding of fact which may be inferred but is not demanded by circumstantial evidence has no probative value against positive and uncontradicted evidence that no such fact exists. Ussery v. Koch, 115 Ga. App. 463, 154 S.E.2d 879 (1967), overruled on other grounds, Raven v. Dodd's Auto Sales & Serv., Inc., 117 Ga. App. 416, 160 S.E.2d 633 (1968); Mullis v. Merit Fin. Co., 116 Ga. App. 582, 158 S.E.2d 415 (1967); Brewer v. Southeastern Fid. Ins. Co., 147 Ga. App. 562, 249 S.E.2d 668 (1978); Withrow Timber Co. v. Blackburn, 244 Ga. 549, 261 S.E.2d 361 (1979).

In an action based on respondeat superior, after an alleged employee and employer gave direct and positive testimony that at the time of the accident the employee was not acting within the scope of the employee's employment, the plaintiff must show, in addition to the presumption that the employee driving the employer's automobile is acting within the scope of employment, some other fact indicating that the employee was so acting; if this other fact is direct evidence, that is sufficient to allow the case to go to the jury, but if the other fact is circumstantial evidence, it must be inconsistent with the defendant's evidence, or if consistent, it must demand a finding of fact on the issue in favor of the plaintiff. Withrow Timber Co. v. Blackburn, 244 Ga. 549, 261 S.E.2d 361 (1979).

Nature of admission made by motion. — While it is frequently said that a motion admits certain allegations of the opponent, this admission is purely for the sake of argument and to enable the court to arrive at the law uncluttered with questions of fact; it is a temporary negative admission, that is to say, mere failure to deny for an immediate purpose, and does not constitute a positive admission or estoppel for later phases of the case. Worlds v. Worlds, 154 Ga. App. 850, 270 S.E.2d 68 (1980).

Time for objection to evidence. — There is no specific time limit for objection to evidence offered on a motion for summary judgment. Area v. Cagle, 148 Ga. App. 769, 252 S.E.2d 655 (1979).

Untimely submission of nonmovant's evidence. — When a debtor, faced with a creditor's motion for summary judgment supported by an affidavit, did not timely respond with an affidavit or other evidence placing the facts supported by the creditor's affidavit in dispute, the debtor waived the right to present evidence in opposition to the motion, and the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in declining to consider the untimely affidavits submitted by the debtor. Gerben v. Beneficial Ga., Inc., 283 Ga. App. 740, 642 S.E.2d 405 (2007).

2. Admissibility of Evidence

Admissibility governed by rules of evidence. — In considering evidence submitted in connection with and in opposition to a motion for summary judgment, the court should apply applicable rules of evidence and, after having done so, construe the evidence as the evidence then stands in favor of the party opposing the motion. Chandler v. Gately, 119 Ga. App. 513, 167 S.E.2d 697 (1969).

Admissibility of evidence on motion for summary judgment is governed by rules relating to form and admissibility of evidence generally so that evidence inadmissible on a hearing of the case is inadmissible on a motion for summary judgment. Matthews v. Wilson, 119 Ga. App. 708, 168 S.E.2d 864 (1969); Crawford v. McDonald, 125 Ga. App. 289, 187 S.E.2d 542 (1972); Ryle v. Ryle, 130 Ga. App. 680, 204 S.E.2d 339 (1974); Thomasson v. Trust Co. Bank, 149 Ga. App. 556, 254 S.E.2d 881 (1979); Vickers v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 158 Ga. App. 434, 280 S.E.2d 842 (1981).

Rules as to admissibility of evidence are applicable in summary judgment proceedings. Wheat v. Montgomery, 130 Ga. App. 202, 202 S.E.2d 664 (1973).

Evidence which would be admissible on a hearing of the case would generally be admissible on a motion for summary judgment. Thomasson v. Trust Co. Bank, 149 Ga. App. 556, 254 S.E.2d 881 (1979).

Court cannot consider hearsay, opinions, and conclusions in affidavits submitted. Davis v. Haupt Bros. Gas Co., 131 Ga. App. 628, 206 S.E.2d 598 (1974).

Affidavit must set forth admissible facts. — Affidavit filed in support of a motion for summary judgment must contain evidentiary matter which would be admissible under the rules of evidence if the affiant were in court and testifying. Bell v. Bell, 114 Ga. App. 507, 151 S.E.2d 880 (1966) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Affidavits in support of or in opposition to motions for summary judgment must set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence at trial. Mullis v. Merit Fin. Co., 116 Ga. App. 582, 158 S.E.2d 415 (1967) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

This section requires that an affidavit set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence to show that charges are in good faith controverted. Resolute Ins. Co. v. Norbo Trading Corp., 118 Ga. App. 737, 165 S.E.2d 441 (1968).

Affidavit may contain all evidentiary matter which, if the affiant were in court and testifying on the witness stand, would be admissible under the rules of evidence as part of the affiant's testimony. Resolute Ins. Co. v. Norbo Trading Corp., 118 Ga. App. 737, 165 S.E.2d 441 (1968) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

When an affidavit contains conclusions which would not be admissible in evidence, the conclusions are to be disregarded in considering the affidavit in connection with the motion for summary judgment. Dews v. Ratterree, 246 Ga. App. 324, 540 S.E.2d 250 (2000).

Evidence rule applicable to depositions, interrogatories, and other evidence. — Subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 requires application of evidence rules to affidavits in support of or in opposition to a motion for summary judgment, and if such rules are applied to affidavits those rules must also be applied to depositions and interrogatories which may be submitted. Chandler v. Gately, 119 Ga. App. 513, 167 S.E.2d 697 (1969).

Rule that affidavits shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence also applies to depositions, interrogatories, and other evidence submitted on a motion for summary judgment. Matthews v. Wilson, 119 Ga. App. 708, 168 S.E.2d 864 (1969).

Inadmissible evidence may not be considered. — All hearsay, unsupported conclusions, contemporaneous oral agreements contrary to an unambiguous written contract, and the like, as well as favorable portions of a party's self-conflicting evidence, must be stricken or eliminated from consideration. Chandler v. Gately, 119 Ga. App. 513, 167 S.E.2d 697 (1969).

Since the document upon which the plaintiffs relied to prove the plaintiffs' tort claim was inadmissible as evidence, there was no genuine issue of material fact, and the entry of judgment in favor of the defendant was proper. Davidson v. American Fitness Ctrs., Inc., 171 Ga. App. 691, 320 S.E.2d 824 (1984).

When an injured party sued the owner and the manager of a shopping mall for injuries suffered when the party was shot in the mall's parking lot, a printout of crimes at the mall for the previous 30 months and police incident reports, neither of which were certified or authenticated, could not be considered in ruling on the owner's and manager's summary judgment motion as the rules of evidence applicable to a trial of the case also applied to a hearing on the summary judgment motion. Baker v. Simon Prop. Group,

Evidence on Motion (Cont'd)2. Admissibility of Evidence (Cont'd)

Inc., 273 Ga. App. 406, 614 S.E.2d 793 (2005).

Inadmissible hearsay. — Ride safety checklist had not been authenticated as a business record and thus was merely inadmissible hearsay that could not be considered as evidence in support of a motion for summary judgment. Valentin v. Six Flags Over Ga., L.P., 286 Ga. App. 508, 649 S.E.2d 809 (2007).

Burden not satisfied by inadmissible evidence. — Party resisting summary judgment, in addition to coming forward with evidence which is sufficient to create a genuine issue of material fact, must present some credible warrant for admissibility, and the trial court did not err in awarding summary judgment when the court perceived the resisting party's evidence to be inadmissible. Wilson v. Nichols, 253 Ga. 84, 316 S.E.2d 752 (1984).

Judge bound by uncontradicted evidence in affidavits irrespective of improper material therein. — Affidavits on motion for summary judgment are no place for opinions, ultimate facts, and conclusions of law, and should be restricted to admissible evidentiary facts, but the trial judge may consider such affidavits, and is bound by the uncontradicted evidentiary matter in such affidavits, irrespective of the opinions, ultimate facts, and conclusion of law stated therein. Harvey v. C.W. Matthews Contracting Co., 114 Ga. App. 866, 152 S.E.2d 809 (1966); Caldwell v. Gregory, 120 Ga. App. 536, 171 S.E.2d 571 (1969) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Discovery material. — Filing those portions of discovery material necessary to motions for summary judgment is not error. Jacobsen v. Muller, 181 Ga. App. 382, 352 S.E.2d 604 (1986).

Interrogatories and answers thereto may properly be considered when ruling on a motion for summary judgment. Benefield v. Malone, 110 Ga. App. 607, 139 S.E.2d 500 (1964); Atlantic Coast Line R.R. v. Daugherty, 116 Ga. App. 438, 157 S.E.2d 880 (1967) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Movant cannot rely on evidence while invoking inadmissibility of evidence.

— Movant cannot rely on evidence to support motion for summary judgment and at the same time invoke rule of inadmissibility of the evidence. Jordan v. Ailstock, 230 Ga. 67, 195 S.E.2d 425 (1973).

Respondent is not limited to mere rebuttal of movant's affirmations; respondent's range of resistance to motion for summary judgment is limited only by the pleadings, and the respondent may show anything properly within their ambit which portrays an issuable fact. Benefield v. Malone, 110 Ga. App. 607, 139 S.E.2d 500 (1964), later appeal, 112 Ga. App. 408, 145 S.E.2d 732 (1965) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Highest and best evidence required. — Affidavit of an attorney that the attorney checked the property records in the clerk's office and that the chain of title including the described deeds failed to meet the requirement of subsection (e) of this section that affidavits submitted in support of motions for summary judgment shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence as the deeds themselves would be the highest and best evidence. Green v. Wright, 225 Ga. 25, 165 S.E.2d 843 (1969).

Certified copy of a court transcript is one of the items a trial court is authorized to examine on a motion for summary judgment to determine whether there is a genuine issue of material fact to be tried. Abalene Pest Control Serv., Inc. v. Orkin Exterminating Co., 196 Ga. App. 463, 395 S.E.2d 867 (1990).

Testimony by a witness given under oath in the form of a transcript to an earlier criminal proceeding was admissible on a motion for summary judgment in a subsequent civil action. Abalene Pest Control Serv., Inc. v. Orkin Exterminating Co., 196 Ga. App. 463, 395 S.E.2d 867 (1990).

Uncertified office records produced and authenticated by the defendant's physician and placed in the record were sufficient support to the plaintiffs' opposing affidavit as to satisfy the requirements of subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56.

Paulin v. Okehi, 264 Ga. 625, 449 S.E.2d 291 (1994).

Ordinance. — When the plaintiffs, in opposition to a motion for summary judgment, filed a number of affidavits, but a tendered ordinance was neither a certified copy nor accompanied by an appropriate affidavit authenticating the ordinance as a duly enacted ordinance, the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 were not satisfied. Roth v. Connor, 235 Ga. App. 866, 510 S.E.2d 550 (1998).

Copies of police arrest reports and federal drug enforcement agency investigation reports were properly admitted in support of a motion for summary judgment, and certification was not required since the copies were not referred to in an affidavit. Freeman v. City of Atlanta, 195 Ga. App. 641, 394 S.E.2d 784, cert. denied, 195 Ga. App. 641, 394 S.E.2d 784 (1990).

Criminal conviction. — Since a criminal conviction cannot be taken as evidence in a civil action to establish the truth of the facts on which the conviction was rendered and since only admissible evidence should be considered in ruling on a motion for summary judgment, the fact that the plaintiff was found guilty of driving without a taillight was not before the court, although the defendant averred such conviction in the defendant's affidavit supporting the defendant's motion for summary judgment. Myers v. Barnard, 180 Ga. App. 192, 348 S.E.2d 733 (1986).

Medical narrative reports. — In a wrongful death suit brought by a minor son's parents, alleging negligence and police misconduct arising out of an incident in which emergency surgery on their son was delayed due to police detention of the doctor who was to perform the surgery, summary judgment was improperly granted to the hospital, the hospital's security officer, and the police officer on a finding that there was no issue of fact as to causation; the medical narrative report prepared by the doctor was admissible evidence under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-18(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-826) and could be considered in opposition to a motion for summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), in that the doctor's opinion in the report that the son, "in all likelihood," would have survived had the doctor not been prevented from caring for the son constituted a properly expressed medical opinion. Dalton v. City of Marietta, 280 Ga. App. 202, 633 S.E.2d 552 (2006).

Requirement that pleadings be considered does not make pleadings evidence. — Requirement that pleadings must be considered on a hearing does not make the pleadings evidence, but merely shows the causes alleged, in order that by comparison with the evidence it can be determined if the movant should prevail. Butterworth v. Pettitt, 223 Ga. 355, 155 S.E.2d 20 (1967) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

When excerpts from plaintiff's personnel file met the standards prescribed in subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, the trial court did not err in considering the documents filed in support of the defendant's motion for summary judgment. Glisson v. Morton, 203 Ga. App. 77, 416 S.E.2d 134 (1992).

Proof of agency. — When there was no evidence that a principal authorized someone to act as the principal's agent, agency could not have been proven by declarations of the alleged agent, and a summary judgment affidavit describing statements made by a payee's attorney which had allegedly accelerated a note was properly excluded when the only evidence that the attorney was the payee's agent was the affidavit itself. McManus v. Turner, 266 Ga. App. 5, 596 S.E.2d 201 (2004).

3. Conclusory Statements

Determining whether genuine issues exist. — In considering depositions and affidavits in support of or in opposition to a motion for summary judgment, facts contained therein, and not conclusions stated, determine whether genuine issue of fact exists. Matthews v. Wilson, 119 Ga. App. 708, 168 S.E.2d 864 (1969); Fannin v. Fannin, 133 Ga. App. 681, 212 S.E.2d 16 (1975).

Ultimate or conclusory facts and conclusions of law cannot be utilized on summary judgment motion. Belcher v. Logan, 150 Ga. App. 249, 257 S.E.2d 299 (1979); Morton v. Stewart, 153 Ga. App. 636, 266 S.E.2d 230 (1980).

Evidence on Motion (Cont'd)3. Conclusory Statements (Cont'd)

General conclusory statement in pleadings to the effect that the contract was breached, in the face of an instrument attached to those pleadings showing that no contract existed which could be breached, failed to state a cause of action sufficient to withstand a motion for summary judgment. Levine v. First Bank, 154 Ga. App. 730, 270 S.E.2d 20 (1980).

Conclusions may not generally be used in affidavits to support or oppose summary judgment motions. Holloway v. Dougherty County Sch. Sys., 157 Ga. App. 251, 277 S.E.2d 251 (1981).

Conclusory allegations by the plaintiff are insufficient, in the absence of substantiating facts or circumstances, to raise a material issue for trial. Sherwood v. Boshears, 157 Ga. App. 542, 278 S.E.2d 124 (1981).

Allegations, conclusory facts, and conclusions of law cannot be utilized to support or defeat motions for summary judgment. Peterson v. Midas Realty Corp., 160 Ga. App. 333, 287 S.E.2d 61 (1981).

When although an affidavit recites that the affidavit was made on personal knowledge, the affidavit sets forth only contentions and conclusions without reference to any factual basis for them, the affidavit is insufficient to demonstrate the absence of a genuine issue as to any material fact. Parlato v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 165 Ga. App. 758, 302 S.E.2d 613 (1983).

Conclusory allegations are insufficient, in absence of substantiating fact or circumstances, to raise a material issue for trial. Cornell Indus., Inc. v. Colonial Bank, 162 Ga. App. 822, 293 S.E.2d 370 (1982).

Statement in an affidavit that "neither I nor my wife owe the plaintiff anything" was not one of fact, but a conclusion or allegation of the ultimate fact which was not sufficient to support a motion for summary judgment. Sullivan v. Fabe, 198 Ga. App. 824, 403 S.E.2d 208 (1991), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 899, 403 S.E.2d 208 (1991).

Statements in affidavit that "none of the debts alleged in the complaint would be the responsibility of these defendants" were conclusions, and not statements of specific fact sufficient to support a motion for summary judgment. Sullivan v. Fabe, 198 Ga. App. 824, 403 S.E.2d 208 (1991), cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 899, 403 S.E.2d 208 (1991).

Property owner's defamation of title action under O.C.G.A. § 51-9-11 failed because the owner's conclusory allegations that the owner had fully paid a surveyor's bill for work done, although sworn to, did not, without more, create a material issue of fact regarding the falsity of statements in a surveyor's lien; thus, the owner failed to establish an essential element of defamation of title and summary judgment in favor of the surveyor was appropriate. Simmons v. Futral, 262 Ga. App. 838, 586 S.E.2d 732 (2003).

Buyer, who adduced only one conclusory affidavit, failed to create any genuine issue of material fact regarding the nexus between an alleged arson, a defamation claim, and a community club; accordingly, summary judgment in favor of the club was proper. Smith v. Jones, 278 Ga. 661, 604 S.E.2d 187 (2004).

In a medical malpractice action, a physician's affidavit submitted by the nonmovants was properly struck as being merely conclusory as the affidavit referred to the standard of care but did not state what the standard of care was; an affidavit that stated no particulars was not sufficient to rebut a motion for summary judgment. Whitley v. Piedmont Hosp., Inc., 284 Ga. App. 649, 644 S.E.2d 514 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 626, 651 (Ga. 2007).

Bare legal conclusions in affidavits in support of a motion for summary judgment are insufficient to show either absence of any material issue of fact or to create an issue of fact. Mica-Top Fixture Co. v. Frank G. Shattuck Co., 124 Ga. App. 100, 183 S.E.2d 15 (1971).

In an insurer's interpleader action to determine whether the beneficiary of an insured's three life insurance policies was entitled to the proceeds of the policies, the beneficiary's statements in an affidavit that the beneficiary did not kill the wife and did not know who caused the death were not competent evidence in support of the motion for summary judgment because the statements were conclusions or allegation of the ultimate fact, there were no substantiating facts, and the affidavit was self-serving. Cantera v. Am. Heritage Life Ins. Co., 274 Ga. App. 307, 617 S.E.2d 259 (2005).

Statements made on information and belief. — Ultimate or conclusory facts and conclusions of law, as well as statements made on belief or on information and belief, cannot be utilized on summary judgment motion. Cel-Ko Bldrs. & Developers, Inc. v. BX Corp., 136 Ga. App. 777, 222 S.E.2d 94 (1975); Dickson v. Dickson, 238 Ga. 672, 235 S.E.2d 479 (1977).

Statement only amounting to denial of allegation by other party. — Because the defendant's statement by affidavit that the defendant mailed the application "as soon as practicable" did no more than meet the plaintiff's allegation that the plaintiff "had a duty to forward the application as soon as practical," the defendant's statement in the defendant's affidavit has no more effect than the denial of the allegation in the defendant's answer, and as the issue is still very much in dispute, summary judgment was improper. Stewart v. Boykin, 165 Ga. App. 868, 303 S.E.2d 50 (1983).

Denial of existence of agency relationship as statement of fact. — Bare denial of existence of an agency relationship, made by a purported party thereto, is a statement of fact sufficient to support a motion for summary judgment in an action based on the doctrine of respondeat superior. Withrow Timber Co. v. Blackburn, 244 Ga. 549, 261 S.E.2d 361 (1979).

4. Affidavits

A. In General

Three requirements for affidavit. — To constitute a complete affidavit, three essential features are requisite: first, the written oath embodying the facts sworn to by the affiant; second, the signature of the affiant thereto; and, third, the jurat or attestation, by an officer authorized to administer the oath, that the affidavit was actually sworn to and subscribed before the officer by the affiant. Glenn v. Metro- politan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 158 Ga. App. 98, 279 S.E.2d 481 (1981).

Affidavits permitted but not required. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 permits motions for summary judgment to be supported by affidavits, but does not require the affidavits. English Restaurant, Inc. v. A.R. II., Inc., 194 Ga. App. 639, 391 S.E.2d 462 (1990).

Affidavits not required when question is one of law only. — If there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the pleadings show the question to be one of law only, affidavits are not essential prerequisites to the granting of summary judgment. Dillard v. Brannan, 217 Ga. 179, 121 S.E.2d 768 (1961) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Showing that no jury issue existed is sufficient. — There was no merit to a customer's argument that because a corporation and employee did not file any affidavits or other sworn testimony, summary judgment could not be granted in their favor; they simply had to show that no jury issue existed as to an essential element of the customer's claim. Kirkland v. Earth Fare, Inc., 289 Ga. App. 819, 658 S.E.2d 433 (2008).

Affidavits under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b). — Affidavits made in support of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 4 and 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b)) motions must conform to the requirements of subsection (e) Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56). McPherson v. McPherson, 238 Ga. 271, 232 S.E.2d 552 (1977).

Applicability of subsection (e) to affidavits. — Although requirements of subsection (e) of this section are not expressly applicable to affidavits in general, those requirements stand as a codification of the common-law requirements as to affidavits and hence are applicable as such. McPherson v. McPherson, 238 Ga. 271, 232 S.E.2d 552 (1977) (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56)).

Contents must be admissible in evidence. — Affidavit considered on motion for summary judgment must show that affiant has personal knowledge of facts stated therein, and must contain evidentiary matter which, if the affiant were in court and testified, would be admissible as part of the affiant's testimony.

Only facts within the personal knowledge of the witness and admissible in evidence may be considered on a motion for summary judgment or in opposition thereto. Summer v. Allison, 127 Ga. App. 217, 193 S.E.2d 177 (1972).

Partial summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 was properly granted to a labor supplier in a construction company's counterclaim alleging tortious interference with its contractual relations, based on an allegedly illegal lien filed by the supplier against a property, when no factual basis was found for the counterclaim and, accordingly, the counterclaim was dismissed; it was noted that the affidavit of the administrative manager of the company contained irrelevant matter which was properly excluded under former O.C.G.A. § 24-2-1 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 24-4-402 and 24-4-403) as the affidavit related to the supplier's failure to sign a lien waiver and the affidavit had no logical bearing to the material fact in issue and, further, it was found to be inadmissible hearsay under former O.C.G.A. § 24-3-1(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-802). Langley v. Nat'l Labor Group, Inc., 262 Ga. App. 749, 586 S.E.2d 418 (2003).

Bare legal conclusions in affidavits create no issue of fact on motion for summary judgment. Resolute Ins. Co. v. Norbo Trading Corp., 118 Ga. App. 737, 165 S.E.2d 441 (1968) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Noncomplying affidavits. — Affidavits not complying with this section must be disregarded. Oglesby v. Farmers Mut. Exch., 128 Ga. App. 387, 196 S.E.2d 674 (1973).

Because plaintiff's expert opinion was based on medical records that were not attached to the affidavit nor otherwise made a part of the record, the affidavit was deficient and lacked probative value. Herndon v. Ajayi, 242 Ga. App. 193, 532 S.E.2d 108 (2000).

Only portions of affidavits in compliance to be considered. — When affidavits are offered in support of a motion for summary judgment, only those portions which were made upon the personal knowledge of the affiant, which were not mere conclusions unsupported by facts, and which would be admissible under general rules of evidence upon trial should be considered. Short & Paulk Supply Co. v. Dykes, 120 Ga. App. 639, 171 S.E.2d 782 (1969).

Unexplained contradictory portions of affidavits. — Under contradictory testimony rule, unexplained contradictory portions of an affidavit must be eliminated. McCoy v. State Farm Ins. Co., 199 Ga. App. 675, 405 S.E.2d 743 (1991).

Rule in Georgia is that if, on a motion for summary judgment, a party offers self-contradictory testimony, the trial court must eliminate the favorable portions of the contradictory testimony unless a reasonable explanation is offered for the contradiction; if a contradiction is explained, then the issue is merely one of credibility of the witness. Any conflicting responses given by a principal of a seller later in the principal's deposition could have been reasonably explained by the principal's uncertainty whether the seller was seeking to recover the seller's lost profits and to confusion by both the principal and the supplier's attorney as to the content of a specific letter, and any conflict was a matter of credibility for the jury to resolve so the trial court erred in holding on entering summary judgment that the seller was not entitled to seek lost profits. Mitchell Family Dev. Co. v. Universal Textile Techs., LLC, 268 Ga. App. 869, 602 S.E.2d 878 (2004).

Trial court properly refused to consider contradictory testimony in the participant's affidavit submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment since statements in the affidavit contradicted the deposition testimony, and the record contained no explanation for those contradictions; while the trial court erred in excluding even the uncontradicted portions of the participant's affidavit, any error was harmless as the remaining portions of the affidavit were duplicative of the participant's deposition testimony, which was before the trial court. Liles v. Innerwork, Inc., 279 Ga. App. 352, 631 S.E.2d 408 (2006).

Propriety of motion to strike affidavit. — Motion to strike an affidavit submitted on summary judgment is properly considered if such motion is properly and timely made. Ford v. Georgia Power Co., 151 Ga. App. 748, 261 S.E.2d 474 (1979).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a buyer's motion to strike the affidavit of an expert filed by the seller two days before oral argument on the seller's summary judgment motion because the buyer was offered a continuance but declined, thereby waiving the 30-day requirement in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c). Ficklin v. Hyundai Motor Am., Inc., 272 Ga. App. 61, 611 S.E.2d 732 (2005).

Motion to strike affidavit. — To the extent that an affidavit contains materials which would not be admissible in evidence, it is subject to a motion to strike. But a motion to strike must be timely or the objection is waived. Vickers v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 158 Ga. App. 434, 280 S.E.2d 842 (1981).

Striking affidavits as sanction. — Sanctions provided for in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(g) do not authorize the trial court to strike or disregard the affidavits presented by a party as a sanction. Whitley v. Piedmont Hosp., Inc., 284 Ga. App. 649, 644 S.E.2d 514 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 626, 651 (Ga. 2007).

Untimely affidavits. — In ruling on a motion for summary judgment, the trial court has discretion to consider untimely affidavits. United States Enters., Inc. v. Mikado Custom Tailors, 163 Ga. App. 306, 293 S.E.2d 533, rev'd on other grounds, 250 Ga. 415, 297 S.E.2d 290 (1982).

Court is vested with discretion whether to consider affidavits untimely served. Strickland v. DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 197 Ga. App. 63, 397 S.E.2d 576 (1990).

In a summary judgment action, while O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(b) permitted late service of affidavits in support of a motion, in giving such permission, the trial court was not required to make a written finding of excusable neglect; accordingly, the court was not required to state the court's basis for finding excusable neglect. Green v. Bd. of Dirs. of Park Cliff Unit Owners Ass'n, 279 Ga. App. 567, 631 S.E.2d 769 (2006).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment to a dog owner in a neighbor's malicious prosecution suit without considering the neighbor's affidavit on the basis that the affidavit was not timely filed pursuant to Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.2. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) required a trial court to consider opposing affidavits filed any time prior to the hearing. Woods v. Hall, 315 Ga. App. 93, 726 S.E.2d 596 (2012).

Copy not considered. — Since an affidavit of one of the defendants' witnesses was not the original, but only a copy, the trial court could not consider the affidavit, and could not use the affidavit as evidence. Clauss v. Plantation Equity Group, Inc., 236 Ga. App. 522, 512 S.E.2d 10 (1999).

Unsworn document cannot be regarded as affidavit. — Testimony of the plaintiff's counsel, in response to a motion for summary judgment, was presented in the form of an unsworn document, which could not be regarded as an affidavit, and thus failed under subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 to create a question of fact. Barrett v. Commercial Union Ins. Co., 188 Ga. App. 353, 373 S.E.2d 59 (1988).

Verified pleading should have no greater effect than affidavit. — Subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 demands that both supporting and opposing affidavits be made on personal knowledge, set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein. To the extent that a verified pleading meets that requirement then the verified pleading may properly be considered as equivalent to a supporting or opposing affidavit, as the case may be. Foskey v. Smith, 159 Ga. App. 163, 283 S.E.2d 33 (1981), cert. vacated, 249 Ga. 32, 289 S.E.2d 248 (1982).

Verified pleadings have been held equivalent to a supporting or opposing affidavit for purposes of raising an issue of fact on summary judgment. Harrison v. Harrison, 159 Ga. App. 578, 284 S.E.2d 83 (1981).

Verified pleading used in support of a motion for summary judgment had no greater effect than an affidavit tendered under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(e), and the pleading had to have been made on "personal knowledge;" when the contents of a deposition showed that the material parts of the deposition were statements of personal knowledge, the requirement as to personal knowledge was met although the jurat did not so state. Adcock v. Adcock, 259 Ga. App. 514, 577 S.E.2d 842 (2003).

Disavowal of authorship renders statements inadmissible. — Verification of response to interrogatories stating that "the word usage and sentence structure may be that of the attorney" was language of disavowal of authorship and rendered the statements in the response inadmissible under subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56. Johnson v. Hames Contracting, Inc., 208 Ga. App. 664, 431 S.E.2d 455 (1993).

Affidavit in contravention of motion for summary judgment must state more than mere conclusions; the affidavit must state specific adverse facts. Hyman v. Horwitz, 148 Ga. App. 647, 252 S.E.2d 74 (1979).

Conclusory opinion of defendant's negligence insufficient. — Malpractice plaintiff as respondent on summary judgment cannot prevail on the motion merely by presenting a conclusory opinion that the defendant was negligent or failed to adhere to professional standards of conduct without stating the parameters of such conduct and the particulars of the defendant's deviation therefrom. Turner v. Kitchings, 199 Ga. App. 860, 406 S.E.2d 280 (1991).

Court may consider admissible parts of affidavit and ignore conclusions. — Fact that affidavits contain certain averments which could be characterized as conclusions and hearsay does not prohibit the trial judge from considering the admissible parts thereof and from granting summary judgment if appropriate. Vickers v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 158 Ga. App. 434, 280 S.E.2d 842 (1981).

Affirmative defenses may not be raised by affidavit in support of motion for summary judgment. First Nat'l Bank

v. McClendon, 147 Ga. App. 722, 250 S.E.2d 175 (1978).

When appellees did not raise failure of consideration as an affirmative defense in the appellee's pleadings, such a defense was waived and could not be raised by affidavit in support of a motion for summary judgment. Hanover Ins. Co. v. Nelson Conveyor & Mach. Co., 159 Ga. App. 13, 282 S.E.2d 670 (1981).

Cross-examination. — Affidavits in support of summary judgment are not subject initially to cross-examination. Norton v. Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust, 248 Ga. 847, 285 S.E.2d 910 (1982), aff'd, 253 Ga. 596, 322 S.E.2d 870 (1984).

Affiant need not be subjected to cross-examination before the affiant's affidavit may be considered in support of a motion for summary judgment. Mustin v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 168 Ga. App. 549, 309 S.E.2d 822 (1983).

When, under discovery, the plaintiff had an opportunity to cross-examine the defendant on deposition, but failed to exercise such right, the affidavit was not subject to attack. Pass v. Bouwsma, 239 Ga. App. 902, 522 S.E.2d 484 (1999).

Inability to question defense witnesses precludes judgment. — In a negligence action, the court erred in granting summary judgment before the plaintiff was able to question two key defense witnesses who avoided the plaintiff's discovery attempts, but who filed affidavits in support of the defendant's motion. This judgment deprived the plaintiff of an opportunity to develop proof which may have well given rise to triable issues of fact, and also overlooked the rule that, when a party fails to produce evidence, the charge or claim against the party is presumed to be well founded. ShIPLEY v. Handicaps Mobility Sys., 222 Ga. App. 101, 473 S.E.2d 533 (1996).

Failure to object would constitute a waiver of any formal defects in an affidavit; however, when the deficiency is one of substance rather than form, the trial court errs in the court's grant of summary judgment even though the affidavit is not objected to. Parlato v. Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Auth., 165 Ga. App. 758, 302 S.E.2d 613 (1983).

Objections to affidavits presented by parties in support of or against a motion for summary judgment will not be entertained for the first time on appeal when such affidavits were considered by the trial judge, without objection, in ruling on motions for summary judgment. Chapman v. McClelland, 248 Ga. 725, 286 S.E.2d 290 (1982).

Because a family who filed suit against a driver after a collision did not object to any of the driver's affidavits supporting the driver's motion for summary judgment, the court would not entertain objections to the affidavits on appeal. Abimbola v. Pate, 291 Ga. App. 769, 662 S.E.2d 840 (2008).

B. Personal Knowledge

Personal knowledge required. — Affidavit which shows that the affidavit is not made on personal knowledge of the affiant is insufficient to show to the court that there is a genuine dispute for the jury to decide. Cochran v. Southern Bus. Univ., Inc., 110 Ga. App. 666, 139 S.E.2d 400 (1964) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Affidavits must be made on personal knowledge. Wakefield v. A.R. Winter Co., 121 Ga. App. 259, 174 S.E.2d 178 (1970); Worley v. Pierce, 211 Ga. App. 863, 440 S.E.2d 749 (1994).

Affidavits not showing the affidavits were made on personal knowledge must be disregarded. When affidavits in support of a motion for summary judgment do not recite or show affirmatively that statements therein were made on personal knowledge of affiants, those the affidavits may not be considered. Mica-Top Fixture Co. v. Frank G. Shattuck Co., 124 Ga. App. 100, 183 S.E.2d 15 (1971).

When nowhere in an affidavit is it recited or shown affirmatively that the statement was made on personal knowledge and that the affiant is competent to testify as to matters stated in the affidavit, the affidavit fails to meet the personal knowledge requirement of subsection (e) of this section. Eaton Yale & Towne, Inc. v. Strickland, 228 Ga. 430, 185 S.E.2d 923 (1971); Lubbers v. Tharpe & Brooks, Inc., 160 Ga. App. 709, 288 S.E.2d 54 (1981).

If it appears that any portion of the affidavit was not made upon the affiant's personal knowledge, or if it does not affirmatively appear that it was so made, that portion is to be disregarded in considering the affidavit in connection with the motion for summary judgment. Morris-Bancroft Paper Co. v. Coleman, 188 Ga. App. 809, 374 S.E.2d 544, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 912, 374 S.E.2d 544 (1988).

When, in a malpractice action, defendant's own affidavit established by personal knowledge that the defendant met the appropriate standard of care, the defendant pierced the plaintiff's pleadings, and the plaintiff's expert's affidavit in opposition to summary judgment, based solely on medical records rather than the affiant's personal knowledge of the facts, was without probative value. Williams v. Hajosy, 210 Ga. App. 637, 436 S.E.2d 716 (1993).

Summary judgment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, was improperly granted to a store in a customer's slip and fall premises liability action, arising from the customer having slipped on a puddle of clear liquid on the floor of the store's center aisle, as the store manager's affidavit in support of the motion for summary judgment was found to be legally insufficient pursuant to § 9-11-56(e) in that the affidavit did not indicate that the affidavit was based on the manager's personal knowledge as to the specific inspection just prior to the incident and various other allegations made therein; further, the court found that jury issues were presented as to the reasonableness of the store's inspection program under the circumstances, and whether the customer had exercised reasonable care while in the store. Davis v. Bruno's Supermarkets, Inc., 263 Ga. App. 147, 587 S.E.2d 279 (2003).

Statement as to personal knowledge generally sufficient. — Statement in affidavit that the affidavit is based upon personal knowledge generally is sufficient, especially when the affidavit's averments are supported by attachments to the affidavit. Whitaker v. Trust Co., 167 Ga. App. 360, 306 S.E.2d 329 (1983).

Showing of personal knowledge may be met by other evidence. — Statement in the jurat that the affidavit is made upon personal knowledge is generally sufficient, but requirement of personal knowledge may be met by other material in evidence, at least when no objection to the form of the affidavit was made in the trial court. Wakefield v. A.R. Winter Co., 121 Ga. App. 259, 174 S.E.2d 178 (1970).

Requirement of personal knowledge may be met by other material in evidence, at least when no objection to the form of the affidavit was made in the trial court. Georgia Hwy. Express, Inc. v. W.D. Alexander Co., 124 Ga. App. 143, 183 S.E.2d 215 (1971).

Even though an affidavit did not expressly state that the affidavit was based on personal knowledge, the affidavit was sufficient when the affidavit clearly reflected that the affidavit's contents were rooted in the affiant's personal knowledge and observation. Edwards v. Campbell Taggart Baking Cos., 219 Ga. App. 806, 466 S.E.2d 911 (1996).

Statement in jurat or showing in deposition sufficient. — Statement in the jurat to the effect that the affidavit is made upon personal knowledge is generally sufficient, and when the contents of the deposition show that the material parts of the deposition are statements of personal knowledge, the requirement as to personal knowledge is met even though the jurat does not so state. Holland v. Sanfax Corp., 106 Ga. App. 1, 126 S.E.2d 442 (1962) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Summary judgment not void for failure to make statement of personal knowledge. — If there is no motion to strike or objection to the sufficiency of a motion for summary judgment based upon the invalidity of affidavits, a judgment entered thereon is not void because of a failure to state explicitly that this fact is within the personal knowledge of the deponent. Smith v. Ragan, 140 Ga. App. 33, 230 S.E.2d 89 (1976).

Noncompliance with "personal knowledge" requirement. — Affiant's statement that "the following facts are true and correct to the best of the affiant's knowledge and belief" did not evince compliance with the "personal knowledge" requirement of subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56. Morris-Bancroft Paper Co. v. Coleman, 188 Ga. App. 809, 374 S.E.2d 544, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 912, 374 S.E.2d 544 (1988).

Statement of affiant "upon information and belief" cannot be considered, as this evidence is not upon the personal knowledge of the affiant. Gann v. Mills, 124 Ga. App. 238, 183 S.E.2d 523 (1971).

Basis for professional expert's opinion must be shown. — Expert's affidavit in opposition to a motion for summary judgment in a malpractice suit must state the particulars; the affidavit must establish the minimum requirements of professional conduct applicable to the various professional categories of the defendants involved, and set forth how or in what way the various defendants deviated therefrom. Strickland v. DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 197 Ga. App. 63, 397 S.E.2d 576 (1990).

Unsworn allegations made on best of lawyer's knowledge not evidence. — Unsworn allegations are not evidence, nor do they rise to that level when accompanied by an affidavit made, not upon personal knowledge, but upon "the best of [lawyer's] knowledge," which is just a variation of "information and belief." Heavey v. Security Mgt. Co., 129 Ga. App. 83, 198 S.E.2d 694 (1973).

Personal knowledge held shown. — Although the attached verification did not state that the allegations of the complaint were made upon the plaintiff's personal knowledge, as required in order to be considered on a motion for summary judgment, the allegation that the defendant did not give the plaintiff proper notice of foreclosure was sufficient to affirmatively indicate that such allegation was within the plaintiff's personal knowledge. Rapps v. Cooke, 234 Ga. App. 131, 505 S.E.2d 566 (1998).

Appellee's affidavit regarding the profits of a business satisfied the personal knowledge requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(e). The affidavit showed that the appellee was the manager of the business, that the appellee was familiar with its records and accounts, and that the appellee's statements concerning the business's financial statements were based on the appellee's personal knowledge. Ellison v. Hill, 288 Ga. App. 415, 654 S.E.2d 158 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 282 (Ga. 2008).

Bank officer's affidavit attesting to the authenticity of a line of credit agreement, note, and guaranties, confirming the occurrence of default, and setting out the outstanding indebtedness, was sufficiently made on personal knowledge despite the creditors' objections that the officer had no personal involvement in the transactions. Windham & Windham, Inc. v. Suntrust Bank, 313 Ga. App. 841, 723 S.E.2d 70 (2012).

On a lessor's motion for summary judgment on a lease and guaranty, although the lessor successor's assistant general counsel's initial affidavit was not made on personal knowledge and demonstrated no familiarity with the lessor's business records, the deficiencies were cured in a second affidavit filed eight months before the trial court's decision. Triple T-Bar, LLC v. DDR Southeast Springfield, LLC, 330 Ga. App. 847, 769 S.E.2d 586 (2015).

Personal knowledge held not shown. — Affidavit did not meet requirements of subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 when, although the affiant indicated that the affiant had personal knowledge of the codefendant's prior conduct, the affidavit did not reflect that the affiant was even present at the time of the alleged battery, or that the affiant had any personal knowledge of the codefendant's conduct at that time or the circumstances of the battering by the defendant upon the plaintiff. Johnson v. Crews, 165 Ga. App. 43, 299 S.E.2d 99 (1983).

Doctor's statements in medical records constituted hearsay and, although the records were attached to an affidavit, the relevant information was not within the affiant's personal knowledge. Georgia Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 228 Ga. App. 607, 492 S.E.2d 339 (1997).

C. Records and Supporting Documentation

Records should be attached to affidavit. — When records relied upon and referred to in an affidavit are neither attached to the affidavit nor included in the record and clearly identified in the affidavit, the affidavit is insufficient. Pratt v. Tri City Hosp. Auth., 193 Ga. App. 473, 388 S.E.2d 69 (1989).

In a medical malpractice action, because it was undisputed that the record on appeal failed to include the medical records on which the parents' expert's conclusions were based, the parents failed to comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(e), hence, the trial court did not err when the court granted summary judgment against the parents on this basis. Conley v. Children's Healthcare of Atlanta, Inc., 279 Ga. App. 792, 632 S.E.2d 409 (2006).

Attorney-in-fact for the entity serving as manager of a lender's assignee could authenticate the business records of the lender and the assignee in support of an action to collect on three promissory notes, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 24-8-803(6); however, as to the third note, the affidavit failed to attach the payment history and that claim failed. Ware v. Multibank 2009-1 RES-ADC Venture, LLC, 327 Ga. App. 245, 758 S.E.2d 145 (2014).

Attachment of all records not required. — When depositions of doctors and documents identified and referred to by the doctors provided a sufficient factual basis for an expert's opinions as to the care provided by the defendants, the fact that other records listed by the expert were not in the record was not fatal to the expert's affidavit. Washington v. Georgia Baptist Medical Ctr., 223 Ga. App. 762, 478 S.E.2d 892 (1996), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, Porquez v. Washington, 268 Ga. 649, 492 S.E.2d 665 (1997).

Sufficiency of affidavit relating to records made in regular course of business. — Affidavit submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment which satisfies the requirements of Ga. L. 1952, p. 177, §§ 1-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-803), relating to records made in the regular course of business, likewise meets the requirement of subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56). Thomasson v. Trust Co. Bank, 149 Ga. App. 556, 254 S.E.2d 881 (1979).

Absent preliminary proof required to qualify under Ga. L. 1952, p. 177, §§ 1-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-8-803), relating to records made in the regular course of business, the affiant's statements as to facts, knowledge of which the affiant obtained from records not personally kept by the affiant, were hearsay and had no probative value. Thomasson v. Trust Co. Bank, 149 Ga. App. 556, 254 S.E.2d 881 (1979).

When the plaintiff's affidavit referred to certain business records purportedly supporting the plaintiff's motion, but the records were not attached to the affidavit, the references to the business records cannot be used to support the motion. Val Preda Motors v. National Uniform Serv., 195 Ga. App. 443, 393 S.E.2d 728 (1990).

Expert's affidavit may not rely on unintroduced documents. — Court may not consider an expert's affidavit which is based solely upon documentation which is neither a part of the record nor attached to the affidavit. Landers v. Georgia Baptist Medical Ctr., 175 Ga. App. 500, 333 S.E.2d 884 (1985); Augustine v. Frame, 206 Ga. App. 348, 425 S.E.2d 296 (1992).

Expert's affidavit was not sufficient, to support the movant's motion for summary judgment when the affidavit did not show the statements made therein were from the witness' personal knowledge, the affidavit did not pierce the pleadings on each basis for imposing liability, and even assuming the expert was qualified, the affidavit did not establish when the expert examined the property in question or that the expert was personally familiar with the property. King v. Sheraton Savannah Corp., 194 Ga. App. 618, 391 S.E.2d 457 (1990).

Expert affidavit is insufficient to oppose the defendant's motion for summary judgment if the documents on which the affiant relies in forming the expert's opinions are not certified or sworn, even if unsworn copies are attached to the affidavit, and if the expert's affidavit relies on the plaintiff's affidavit, when the plaintiff's affidavit does not contain sufficient facts on which the expert, relying on the affidavit alone, could base the expert's opinions.

Johnson v. Srivastava, 199 Ga. App. 696, 405 S.E.2d 725 (1991).

Unsupported affidavit of expert witness. — When the affidavit of the plaintiff's expert would have created a genuine issue of fact as to whether a qualified inspector should have found visible evidence of termite infestation but for the absence from the record of the supporting material relied upon by the expert, it was not probative to contradict the defendant's affidavit, and the defendant was entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Gunnin v. Swat, Inc., 195 Ga. App. 344, 393 S.E.2d 700 (1990).

Erroneous exhibit attached to affidavit. — Trial court erred in entering summary judgment in favor of the plaintiff when there was no evidence authorizing such judgment since Exhibit "B" attached to the affidavit of the custodian of plaintiff's accounts attached to the motion for summary judgment was clearly erroneous in the calculations reaching the balance due the plaintiff. Fowler v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 180 Ga. App. 738, 350 S.E.2d 319 (1986).

X-ray films require certification. — X-ray films relied on by physician-affiant in medical malpractice case were material requiring certification under subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56. Bush v. Legum, 176 Ga. App. 395, 336 S.E.2d 284 (1985).

Medical records not attached. — When the medical records upon which a medical expert reached the expert's conclusions were not attached to the expert's affidavit or included in the record, the affidavit was insufficient to meet the evidentiary standards under subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 on a motion for summary judgment and, as a matter of law, lacked any probative value. Estate of Patterson v. Fulton-DeKalb Hosp. Auth., 233 Ga. App. 706, 505 S.E.2d 232 (1998).

Medical records attached. — Summary judgment was properly granted in favor of a doctor, the doctor's anesthesiology clinic, and others since the doctor properly attached to the affidavit a certified copy of the medical record which was referred to in the affidavit, and the affidavit was made upon the doctor's personal knowledge, and rather than relying on the complained-of medical record in reaching the doctor's conclusions, merely concurred in the possible causes of the injuries at issue. Oakes v. Magat, 263 Ga. App. 165, 587 S.E.2d 150 (2003).

D. Application

Trial court did not err in converting motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment in a medical malpractice case; the patient did not object to the trial court's decision, and even if the patient was not clear as to the trial court's intent, the patient did not show that the patient would have filed additional affidavits, briefs, or other supporting documentation had the patient been given additional time to do so in the context of a motion for summary judgment. Tucker v. Thomas C. Talley, M.D., P.C., 267 Ga. App. 820, 600 S.E.2d 778 (2004).

Affidavit of neurologist found sufficient to create issue of fact as to testamentary capacity. Baldwin v. First Tenn. Bank, 251 Ga. 561, 307 S.E.2d 919 (1983).

Affidavit asserting diligent service efforts insufficient. — Statements in a plaintiff's affidavit asserting that diligent efforts were made to serve an owner prior to the order for service by publication and that the owner hid to avoid service were bare conclusions that were neither supported by facts nor based on personal knowledge, and thus the affidavit was properly stricken; a statement in a process server's affidavit that, in the process server's professional opinion, the owner was intentionally evading service of process, was also a bare conclusion, not supported by facts, about the owner's true motives and intent, and was also properly stricken. Baxley v. Baldwin, 279 Ga. App. 480, 631 S.E.2d 506 (2006).

Affidavit asserting plainly that, to affiant's knowledge, mother did not sign deed, raises issue for a jury to determine as to genuineness of the deed. Mathews v. Brown, 235 Ga. 454, 219 S.E.2d 701 (1975).

Letter to plaintiff not considered affidavit. — Letter from a person who had inspected a vehicle destroyed by fire, addressed to the plaintiff, did not qualify as an affidavit and the contents of the letter therefore amounted to no more than factual allegations additional to those in the pleadings. Barber v. Threlkeld Ford, 199 Ga. App. 787, 406 S.E.2d 249 (1991).

Reliance on technical manuals. — Trial court abused the court's discretion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) in refusing to permit an injured party to supplement the party's response to a manufacturer's reliance, for the first time at the summary judgment hearing, on a technical manual not produced during discovery; the injured party was prejudiced by the ruling, which was not in accordance with the intent of the Georgia Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, to promote justice and not to obstruct the administration of justice. Hunter v. Werner Co., 258 Ga. App. 379, 574 S.E.2d 426 (2002).

Affidavit opinion as to cause of accident properly struck. — Police officer's affidavit stated that a van owner and the owner's friend chased a thief who stole the van and did not lose sight of the van, and opined that a crash between the van and two accident victims would not have occurred but for the chase. The trial court properly struck portions of the affidavit that consisted of the officer's opinions based on the officer's conversations with the van owner and were not based on physical evidence that the jurors without training in accident investigation might be unable to properly evaluate, such as skid marks, distances, and the positions and damage to the vehicles. Whitlock v. Moore, 312 Ga. App. 777, 720 S.E.2d 194 (2011), cert. denied, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 304, 321 (Ga. 2012).

5. Opinion Evidence

No absolute rule against opinion evidence. — Rule that opinion evidence cannot be used to support grant of summary judgment is not absolute. Tony v. Pollard, 248 Ga. 86, 281 S.E.2d 557 (1981).

Opinion testimony insufficient for summary judgment. — Summary judgment can never issue based solely upon opinion evidence; in all such cases, the jury must decide the case. Ginn v. Morgan, 225 Ga. 192, 167 S.E.2d 393 (1969).

Opinion testimony of ultimate fact to be decided is never sufficient to authorize a grant of summary judgment. State Hwy. Dep't v. Charles R. Shepherd, Inc., 119 Ga.

App. 872, 168 S.E.2d 922 (1969); Jordan v. Scherffius, 121 Ga. App. 685, 175 S.E.2d 97 (1970); Galloway v. Banks County, 139 Ga. App. 649, 229 S.E.2d 127 (1976); Dickson v. Dickson, 238 Ga. 672, 235 S.E.2d 479 (1977).

Opinion evidence is not permissible as basis for summary judgment although it may be used in opposition. Summer v. Allison, 127 Ga. App. 217, 193 S.E.2d 177 (1972).

Testimony that amounts to no more than opinion does not require grant of motion for summary judgment. Lockhart v. Beaird, 128 Ga. App. 7, 195 S.E.2d 292 (1973).

Summary judgment can never issue based solely upon opinion evidence. Hawkins v. Greenberg, 159 Ga. App. 302, 283 S.E.2d 301 (1981), overruled on other grounds, Haynes v. Hoffman, 164 Ga. App. 236, 296 S.E.2d 216 (1982), overruled on other grounds, Smith v. Finch, 285 Ga. 709, 681 S.E.2d 147 (2009).

Opinions which are nothing more than ultimate conclusions of fact and law are of no probative value and must be disregarded on a motion for summary judgment. Adkins v. Adkins, 168 Ga. App. 151, 308 S.E.2d 432 (1983).

Opinion used to preclude summary judgment. — While opinion evidence adduced by respondent is sufficient to preclude the grant of summary judgment, it does not follow that introduction of opinion evidence by the movant will authorize the grant of summary judgment. Harrison v. Tuggle, 225 Ga. 211, 167 S.E.2d 395 (1969).

While opinion evidence adduced by the nonmovant is sufficient to preclude grant of summary judgment, it does not follow that introduction of opinion evidence by the movant will authorize the grant thereof, since no burden is on the respondent to rebut the movant's case until the movant has first removed, by affidavits, admissions, interrogatories, etc., all jury questions from the case. Davidson Mineral Properties, Inc. v. Gifford-Hill & Co., 235 Ga. 176, 219 S.E.2d 133 (1975).

Opinion evidence cannot be utilized for the granting of a summary judgment motion; however, opinion evidence in affidavits can be sufficient to preclude the granting of a summary judgment motion. Stevens v. Wakefield, 160 Ga. App. 353, 287 S.E.2d 49 (1981), rev'd on other grounds, 249 Ga. 254, 290 S.E.2d 58 (1982).

Grant of summary judgment cannot be supported by opinion evidence, but opinion evidence in affidavits can be sufficient to preclude the grant of a summary judgment. Lee v. Lee, 194 Ga. App. 606, 391 S.E.2d 654, cert. denied, 194 Ga. App. 912, 391 S.E.2d 654 (1990).

Opinion evidence precluding summary judgment. — While opinion evidence is not sufficient to authorize a grant of summary judgment, it may preclude grant of a motion therefor. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Cowan Supply Co., 125 Ga. App. 155, 186 S.E.2d 556 (1971).

Opinion evidence can be sufficient to preclude grant of summary judgment. Dickson v. Dickson, 238 Ga. 672, 235 S.E.2d 479 (1977).

If plaintiff must produce expert's opinion in order to prevail at trial, and the defendant produces an expert's opinion in the defendant's favor on a motion for summary judgment but the plaintiff fails to produce a contrary expert opinion in opposition to that motion, there is no genuine issue to be tried by the jury and it is not error to grant summary judgment to the defendant. Howard v. Walker, 242 Ga. 406, 249 S.E.2d 45 (1978); Golden v. Payne, 152 Ga. App. 800, 264 S.E.2d 292 (1979); Parker v. Knight, 245 Ga. 782, 267 S.E.2d 222 (1980); Lawrence v. Gardner, 154 Ga. App. 722, 270 S.E.2d 9 (1980); Davidson v. Shirley, 616 F.2d 224 (5th Cir. 1980); Hawkins v. Greenberg, 159 Ga. App. 302, 283 S.E.2d 301 (1981); Hardinger v. Park, 159 Ga. App. 729, 285 S.E.2d 212 (1981); Jones v. Wike, 654 F.2d 1129 (5th Cir. 1981); Savannah Valley Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Cheek, 248 Ga. 745, 285 S.E.2d 689 (1982).

If the plaintiff must produce an expert's opinion that the defendant was negligent in order to avoid the grant of a directed verdict in favor of the defendant, the plaintiff must also produce an expert's opinion in order to avoid the grant of summary judgment in favor of the defendant when the defendant moves for summary judgment solely on the basis of the defendant's own affidavit, submitted in the defendant's capacity as an expert, that the defendant was not negligent. Payne v. Golden, 245 Ga. 784, 267 S.E.2d 211 (1980).

Expert opinion supporting allegations of both parties. — Simply because the defendant is initially responsible for production of certain expert witnesses, the defendant is not entitled to summary judgment when experts the defendant relies upon also offer expert testimony which a jury could find supports the plaintiff's allegations of medical negligence. Lawrence v. Gardner, 154 Ga. App. 722, 270 S.E.2d 9 (1980).

Conflicting expert testimony precludes summary judgment. — Given the conflict between the experts' testimony concerning an obviously hazardous condition, and the inferences to be drawn from the absence of prior accidents, a question of fact exists whether a defective condition existed which the defendant, in the exercise of ordinary care in keeping the defendant's premises safe in the more than 30 years the defendant has owned the premises, knew or should have known would cause injury to an invitee. Haire v. City of Macon, 200 Ga. App. 744, 409 S.E.2d 670, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 896, 409 S.E.2d 670 (1991).

Opinion evidence on competency of party to contract insufficient. — In a case in which the issue is whether one of the parties had the requisite mental capacity to make a contract, opinion evidence will not authorize the grant of summary judgment that such party was competent. McCraw v. Watkins, 242 Ga. 452, 249 S.E.2d 202 (1978).

Seller's affidavit as to value insufficient. — Genuine issue of fact is not raised by the seller's own affidavit as to the value of property in a suit for specific performance. Baker v. Jellibeans, Inc., 252 Ga. 458, 314 S.E.2d 874 (1984).

Opinion evidence that marriage not irretrievably broken. — When the respondent files an affidavit expressing the respondent's opinion that the marriage is not irretrievably broken and that there are genuine prospects for reconciliation, then summary judgment should be denied. Bryan v. Bryan, 248 Ga. 312, 282 S.E.2d 892 (1981).

In legal malpractice action, attorney-defendant may make affidavit as expert in the attorney's own behalf. In view of the presumption that legal services are performed in an ordinary skillful manner, the movant is then required to produce an expert's affidavit, unless there is "clear and palpable" negligence. Rose v. Rollins, 167 Ga. App. 469, 306 S.E.2d 724 (1983).

Statements held to be conclusions bearing on ultimate fact. — In an action against a tavern owner arising out of an alleged battery by one patron upon another, statements in the owner's affidavit that the owner had no reason to anticipate the actions of the patron and that the owner could not by exercise of reasonable care have discovered or prevented injury were conclusions bearing on the ultimate fact to be decided and could not be utilized on a summary judgment motion. Johnson v. Crews, 165 Ga. App. 43, 299 S.E.2d 99 (1983).

6. Medical Opinion Evidence

Medical malpractice plaintiff cannot prevail on conclusory opinion. — Plaintiff in a medical malpractice case cannot prevail on a motion for summary judgment by merely presenting a conclusory opinion that the defendant was negligent or failed to adhere to the professional standard. Plaintiff must state the particulars and establish the parameters of the acceptable professional conduct and set forth how or in what way the defendant deviated therefrom. Loving v. Nash, 182 Ga. App. 253, 355 S.E.2d 448 (1987); Connell v. Lane, 183 Ga. App. 871, 360 S.E.2d 433 (1987).

Records must be sworn or certified. — To be sufficient to controvert the defendant's expert opinion and create an issue of fact in a medical malpractice case, the plaintiff's expert must base the expert's opinion on medical records which are sworn or certified copies, or upon the expert's own personal knowledge, and the expert must state the particulars in which the defendant's treatment of the plaintiff was negligent. Loving v. Nash, 182 Ga. App. 253, 355 S.E.2d 448 (1987).

Failure of opposing party to present expert evidence in malpractice case. — When the opposing party does not present an expert medical opinion to counter the defendant physician's expert opinion in a medical malpractice case, the physician is entitled to summary judgment. Aaron v. Harrison, 160 Ga. App. 172, 286 S.E.2d 762 (1981).

Absent evidence of causation in an action under the Federal Employers' Liability Act provided by the employee's treating physician as the doctor based a diagnosis on an incomplete medical history of the employee without considering earlier lung-related illnesses, and while unaware of the employee's prior chemical exposure and treatment by other physicians, the trial court properly granted an employer's motion for partial summary judgment on the employee's claim for benefits. Shiver v. Ga. & Fla. Railnet, Inc., 287 Ga. App. 828, 652 S.E.2d 819 (2007), cert. denied, No. S08C0394, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 330 (Ga. 2008).

Sufficiency of doctor's expert opinion in malpractice case. — Doctor's own affidavit as an expert that the doctor had not negligently performed the doctor's medical duties is a sufficient expert opinion to establish grounds for summary judgment in a malpractice action unless the plaintiff-patient refutes such testimony by an expert opinion that the defendant's treatment was not reasonable under the circumstances. Gragg v. Spenser, 159 Ga. App. 525, 284 S.E.2d 40 (1981).

Physician moving for summary judgment in a medical malpractice case may rely on the physician's own affidavit, submitted in the physician's capacity as an expert, that the physician was not negligent; to avoid summary judgment, the plaintiff must then produce expert testimony to the contrary. Hardinger v. Park, 159 Ga. App. 729, 285 S.E.2d 212 (1981).

Sufficiency of affidavit of non-treating physician. — When in the plaintiff's expert's affidavit, the affiant, a non-treating physician, states that the affiant's opinions are based, at least in part, on the affiant's personal knowledge of the facts of the case, and the affiant goes on to state the particulars in which the affiant believes the defendants were negligent, the affidavit is sufficient to raise a genuine issue of material fact and preclude the trial court's grant of summary judgment. Crawford v. Phillips, 173 Ga. App. 517, 326 S.E.2d 593 (1985).

Plaintiff's expert in a medical malpractice action was entitled to base the expert's opinions upon medical records which the expert reviewed and would be the same facts introduced hypothetically at trial since all documents referenced in the expert's affidavit were part of the record prior to the hearing on the summary judgment motion. Hall v. Okehi, 194 Ga. App. 721, 391 S.E.2d 787 (1990).

When the plaintiff's expert's affidavit does not state that the expert has any "personal knowledge of the facts of the case," and in fact states that the expert's knowledge concerning the case is confined to uncertified medical records, the affidavit is insufficient to create a question of material fact (notwithstanding that, in reality, it is always questionable whether an affidavit statement of a non-treating physician has substantially more "knowledge" than derived from a personal review of the medical records). Crawford v. Phillips, 173 Ga. App. 517, 326 S.E.2d 593 (1985).

Testimony of plaintiff's medical witnesses as to the probability of a connection between an automobile accident and the plaintiff's later physical problems was sufficient to avoid summary judgment for the defendant, the driver of the other car. Holley v. Smallwood, 174 Ga. App. 365, 330 S.E.2d 136 (1985).

Application of the contradictory testimony rule was improper. — In a medical malpractice case brought by a married couple, it was error to grant summary judgment to the defendants based on the finding that the testimony of the couple's expert was conflicting and lacking in credibility; application of the contradictory testimony rule was improper when the testimony was that of a non-party expert witness, and accordingly, notwithstanding the inconsistencies in the expert's testimony, the trial court should have given the couple the benefit of the most favorable version of such testimony as a whole which the jury would be authorized to accept. Whitley v. Piedmont Hosp., Inc., 284 Ga. App. 649, 644 S.E.2d 514 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 626, 651 (Ga. 2007).

While an expert witness can base opinions on medical records reviewed by the witness, subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 requires that sworn or certified copies of such material be attached to the affidavit. If such medical records are not part of the record in the case, the records would have no probative value. Lance v. Elliott, 202 Ga. App. 164, 413 S.E.2d 486 (1991).

7. Oral Testimony

Subsection (c) construed. — It is not the general purpose of subsection (c) of this section to permit use of oral testimony. Price v. Star Serv. & Petro. Corp., 119 Ga. App. 171, 166 S.E.2d 593 (1969).

Section makes no reference to oral testimony. — This section refers strictly to affidavits, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, but does not refer to oral testimony. Johnson v. Aetna Fin., Inc., 139 Ga. App. 452, 228 S.E.2d 299 (1976).

Motions not generally heard on oral testimony. — Generally, motions for summary judgment are not heard on oral testimony. Orr v. Woodruff-Robinson, Inc., 142 Ga. App. 861, 237 S.E.2d 463 (1977).

Oral evidence may be used with proper notice. — Evidence on motion for summary judgment may be heard orally in some instances, provided proper notice is given. Orr v. Woodruff-Robinson, Inc., 142 Ga. App. 861, 237 S.E.2d 467 (1977).

When motion for summary judgment is to be heard on oral testimony, proper notice must be given to the opposite party, unless notice is waived. Myers v. McLarty, 150 Ga. App. 432, 258 S.E.2d 56 (1979).

No obligation to permit use. — Law creates no obligation on court to permit use of oral evidence at a hearing on a motion for summary judgment. Gunter v. National City Bank, 239 Ga. 496, 238 S.E.2d 48 (1977).

Discretion of court. — While there may be circumstances in which the court may, in the court's sound discretion, permit use of oral evidence at the hearing on a motion for summary judgment as, for example, when both parties agree, there is no requirement that the court do so. Johnson v. Aetna Fin., Inc., 139 Ga. App. 452, 228 S.E.2d 299 (1976).

In the exercise of sound discretion the trial court may permit the introduction of oral evidence, but there is no obligation that the court do so, and if the court does, it must be done in strict conformity with the law. Pierce v. Gaskins, 168 Ga. App. 446, 309 S.E.2d 658 (1983).

Introduction over objection not permitted. — Trial court is without authority to permit introduction of oral testimony over the opposing party's objection. Pierce v. Gaskins, 168 Ga. App. 446, 309 S.E.2d 658 (1983).

Denial of use of oral testimony not reversible error. — Denial of request to permit use of oral testimony on hearing on motion for summary judgment is not ground for reversal. Price v. Star Serv. & Petro. Corp., 119 Ga. App. 171, 166 S.E.2d 593 (1969).

Writing requirement. — Evidentiary hearing on issue of damages following the defendant's default is subject to requirement that findings of fact and conclusions of law be in writing. Marsh v. Way, 170 Ga. App. 300, 316 S.E.2d 599 (1984).

Undisputed testimony of witnesses admitted in probate court will sustain grant of summary judgment admitting the will to probate. Norton v. Georgia R.R. Bank & Trust, 248 Ga. 847, 285 S.E.2d 910 (1982), aff'd, 253 Ga. 596, 322 S.E.2d 870 (1984).

Construction of Evidence and Inferences

Respondent's papers given considerable indulgence. — Movant's papers should be carefully scrutinized, while opposing party's papers are treated with considerable indulgence. Herrington v. Stone Mt. Mem. Ass'n, 119 Ga. App. 658, 168 S.E.2d 633, rev'd on other grounds, 225 Ga. 746, 171 S.E.2d 521 (1969); Whisenhunt v. Allen Parker Co., 119 Ga. App. 813, 168 S.E.2d 827 (1969); Ham v.

Construction of Evidence and Inferences (Cont'd)

Ham, 230 Ga. 43, 195 S.E.2d 429 (1973); Gregory v. Vance Publishing Corp., 130 Ga. App. 118, 202 S.E.2d 515 (1973); Lansky v. Goldstein, 136 Ga. App. 607, 222 S.E.2d 62 (1975); Piano & Organ Ctr., Inc. v. Southland Bonded Whse., Inc., 228 S.E.2d 615 (1976); Danny's Cabinet Shop, Inc. v. G & M Fire Extinguisher Sales & Serv., Inc., 149 Ga. App. 215, 253 S.E.2d 802 (1979); Sun First Nat'l Bank v. Gainesville 75, Ltd., 155 Ga. App. 70, 270 S.E.2d 293 (1980).

Movant's proof is carefully scrutinized while respondent's proof is treated with indulgence. Whitehead v. Capital Auto. Co., 239 Ga. 460, 238 S.E.2d 104 (1977).

In determining whether any genuine issue of material fact exists, the court will treat the respondent's paper with considerable indulgence. Mallard v. Jenkins, 179 Ga. App. 582, 347 S.E.2d 339 (1986).

Court must carefully scrutinize movant's papers to determine whether the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, regardless of the opponent's response or lack thereof. Southern Protective Prods. Co. v. Leasing Int'l, Inc., 134 Ga. App. 945, 216 S.E.2d 725 (1975).

Allegations of both the complaint and answer must be taken as true in a summary judgment case, unless the movant successfully pierces the allegations so as to show that no material issue of fact remains. Alexander v. Boston Old Colony Ins. Co., 127 Ga. App. 783, 195 S.E.2d 277 (1972); Gregory v. Vance Publishing Corp., 130 Ga. App. 118, 202 S.E.2d 515 (1973), overruled on other grounds, Clements v. Toombs County Hosp. Auth., 175 Ga. App. 651, 334 S.E.2d 188 (1985).

Allegations of both the petition and the answer must be taken as true in a summary judgment case, unless the movant successfully pierces the allegations so as to show that no material issue of fact remains. Cotton States Mut. Ins. Co. v. Martin, 110 Ga. App. 309, 138 S.E.2d 433 (1964); Butterworth v. Pettitt, 223 Ga. 355, 155 S.E.2d 20 (1967) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Piercing pleadings required before summary judgment. — Absent piercing of the pleadings, court errs in granting summary judgment. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Wendler, 115 Ga. App. 452, 154 S.E.2d 772 (1967).

On motion for summary judgment, pleadings of opposing party must be taken as true until it appears beyond controversy that no fact issue exists. Joiner v. Mitchell County Hosp. Auth., 125 Ga. App. 1, 186 S.E.2d 307 (1971), aff'd, 229 Ga. 140, 189 S.E.2d 412 (1972); Duke Enters., Inc. v. Espy, 140 Ga. App. 527, 231 S.E.2d 522 (1976); Sapp v. ABC Credit & Inv. Co., 243 Ga. 151, 253 S.E.2d 82 (1979).

Evidence construed favorably to nonmovant and unfavorably to movant. — Party opposing motion for summary judgment is entitled to liberal construction in that party's favor of the pleadings and evidence. Saunders v. Vickers, 116 Ga. App. 733, 158 S.E.2d 324 (1967); Dollar v. First Bank, 153 Ga. App. 789, 266 S.E.2d 566 (1980); Mixon v. Georgia Bank & Trust Co., 154 Ga. App. 32, 267 S.E.2d 483 (1980).

On motions for summary judgment, evidence must be construed most favorably toward the party opposing the granting of summary judgment; and most unfavorably toward the party applying for the motion. State Hwy. Dep't v. Charles R. Shepherd, Inc., 119 Ga. App. 872, 168 S.E.2d 922 (1969); Pritchard v. Neal, 139 Ga. App. 512, 229 S.E.2d 18 (1976); Drake v. Leader Nat'l Ins. Co., 153 Ga. App. 314, 265 S.E.2d 114 (1980).

All evidence adduced on a motion for summary judgment, including the testimony of the party opposing the motion, was to be construed more strongly against the movant. Tri-Cities Hosp. Auth. v. Sheats, 247 Ga. 713, 279 S.E.2d 210 (1981).

All ambiguities and conclusions on consideration of summary judgment must be construed most favorably toward the respondent and against the movant. North v. Toco Hills, Inc., 160 Ga. App. 116, 286 S.E.2d 346 (1981).

Evidence must be construed most favorably to party opposing motion for summary judgment. McCarty v. National Life & Accident Ins. Co., 107 Ga. App. 178, 129 S.E.2d 408 (1962) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.); Harris v. Stucki, 116 Ga. App. 371, 157 S.E.2d 507 (1967); Chandler v. Gately, 119 Ga. App. 513, 167 S.E.2d 697 (1969); Summer v. McCrory Corp., 146 Ga. App. 515, 249 S.E.2d 768 (1978); Keappler v. Allen, 152 Ga. App. 746, 264 S.E.2d 37 (1979); Mixon v. Georgia Bank & Trust Co., 154 Ga. App. 32, 267 S.E.2d 483 (1980).

Nonmovant given benefit of reasonable doubts and inferences. — Party opposing the motion is to be given the benefit of all reasonable doubts in determining whether a genuine issue exists, and the trial court must give that party the benefit of all favorable inferences that may be drawn from the evidence. Holland v. Sanfax Corp., 106 Ga. App. 1, 126 S.E.2d 442 (1962) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.); Malcom v. Malcolm, 112 Ga. App. 151, 144 S.E.2d 188 (1965) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.); Watkins v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 113 Ga. App. 801, 149 S.E.2d 749 (1966) (decided under former Ga. Party opposing motion for summary judgment must be given the benefit of all favorable inferences. McCarty v. National Life & Accident Ins. Co., 107 Ga. App. 178, 129 S.E.2d 408 (1962) (decided under Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.); Ussery v. Koch, 115 Ga. App. 463, 154 S.E.2d 879 (1967), overruled on other grounds, Raven v. Dodd's Auto Sales & Serv., Inc., 117 Ga. App. 416, 160 S.E.2d 633 (1968).

Party opposing motion for summary judgment must be given benefit of all reasonable doubts. McCarty v. National Life & Accident Ins. Co., 107 Ga. App. 178, 129 S.E.2d 408 (1962) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Party opposing motion for summary judgment is to be given benefit of all reasonable doubts in determining whether a genuine issue exists, and the trial court must give that party the benefit of all favorable inferences that may be drawn from the evidence. Chapman v. Turnbull Elevator, Inc., 116 Ga. App. 661, 158 S.E.2d 438 (1967); State Hwy. Dep't v. Charles R. Shepherd, Inc., 119 Ga. App. 872, 168 S.E.2d 922 (1969); Anderson v. Redwal Music Co., 122 Ga. App. 247, 176 S.E.2d 645 (1970); Cotton States Mut. Ins. Co. v. Proudfoot, 123 Ga. App. 397, 181 S.E.2d 305 (1971), later appeal, 126 Ga. On motion for summary judgment, evidence must be construed most favorably to party opposing the motion, and the opposing party must be given the benefit of all reasonable doubts and all favorable inferences. Weekes v. Parker, 120 Ga. App. 549, 171 S.E.2d 660 (1969).

Law is very strict respecting motions for summary judgment and any doubt must be resolved in favor of respondent in such motions. Boston Ins. Co. v. Barnes, 120 Ga. App. 585, 171 S.E.2d 626 (1969).

All inferences must be resolved in favor of party opposing motion for summary judgment. W.J. Bremer, Inc. v. United Bonding Ins. Co., 122 Ga. App. 183, 176 S.E.2d 633 (1970); Scroggins v. Whitfield Fin. Co., 152 Ga. App. 8, 262 S.E.2d 168 (1979).

Every inference will be indulged in favor of defendants and all doubts will be resolved against plaintiff moving for summary judgment. Winkles v. Brown, 227 Ga. 33, 178 S.E.2d 865 (1970).

Evidence must be construed most favorably to the opposing party, and the trial court must give the opposing party the benefit of all favorable inferences that may be drawn from the evidence. Textile Prods., Inc. v. Fitts Cotton Goods, Inc., 124 Ga. App. 421, 184 S.E.2d 14 (1971); Smith v. Sandersville Prod. Credit Ass'n, 229 Ga. 65, 189 S.E.2d 432 (1972); Peachtree Bottle Shop, Inc. v. Risk Mut. Ins. Co., 155 Ga. App. 136, 270 S.E.2d 238 (1980).

Party opposing motion for summary judgment is to be given benefit of all reasonable doubts in determining whether genuine issue exists. Smith v. Sandersville Prod. Credit Ass'n, 229 Ga. 65, 189 S.E.2d 432 (1972); Peachtree Bottle Shop, Inc. v. Bessemer Sec. Corp., 134 Ga. App. 729, 215 S.E.2d 692 (1975); National Life Assurance Co. v. Massey-Ferguson Credit Corp., 136 Ga. App. 311, 220 S.E.2d 793 (1975); Cumberland Assocs. v. Market Assistants, Inc., 142 Ga. App. 483, 236 S.E.2d 109 (1977).

Party resisting motion for summary judgment is given benefit of all favorable inferences that may be drawn from the evidence. Benson Paint Co. v. Williams Constr. Co., 128 Ga. App. 47, 195 S.E.2d 671 (1973); Gregory v. Vance Publishing Corp., 130 Ga. App. 118, 202 S.E.2d 515 (1973), overruled on other grounds, Clements v. Toombs County Hosp. Auth., 175 Ga. App. 651, 334 S.E.2d 188 (1985); Mattison v. Travelers Indemn. Co., 157 Ga. App. 372, 277 S.E.2d 746 (1981).

All inferences, all ambiguities, and all doubts are resolved against the movant for summary judgment and in favor of the party opposing the grant of summary judgment. Summers v. Milcon Corp., 134 Ga. App. 182, 213 S.E.2d 515 (1975).

Opposing party is given the benefit of all reasonable doubts and favorable inferences that may be drawn from the evidence, and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law only if there is no genuine issue as to any material fact. Hip Pocket, Inc. v. Levi Strauss & Co., 144 Ga. App. 792, 242 S.E.2d 305 (1978).

Party opposing the motion for summary judgment is to be given the benefit of all reasonable doubts and all favorable inferences that may be drawn from the evidence. Eiberger v. West, 247 Ga. 767, 281 S.E.2d 148 (1981).

All inferences of fact from the proof proffered at the hearing must be drawn against the movant and in favor of the party opposing the motion. Jonesboro Tool

& Die Corp. v. Georgia Power Co., 158 Ga. App. 755, 282 S.E.2d 211 (1981).

Parties opposing the motion are entitled to all favorable inferences and the evidence is to be construed most strongly in their favor. Hanover Ins. Co. v. Nelson Conveyor & Mach. Co., 159 Ga. App. 13, 282 S.E.2d 670 (1981).

On a motion for summary judgment, the evidence must be construed most strongly against the movant, and the party opposing the motion is entitled to all inferences that may fairly and reasonably be drawn in support of the nonmovant's case. Vizzini v. Blonder, 165 Ga. App. 840, 303 S.E.2d 38 (1983).

On a motion for summary judgment, the party opposing the motion is to be given the benefit of all reasonable doubts and all favorable inferences that may be drawn from the evidence; this is so even when the movant is the party on whom the burden of proof at trial does not lie. Georgia Int'l Life Ins. Co. v. Huckabee, 175 Ga. App. 343, 333 S.E.2d 618 (1985).

In ruling on a motion for summary judgment, the opposing party should be given the benefit of all reasonable doubt and the court should construe the evidence and all inferences and conclusions arising therefrom most favorably toward the party opposing the motion; moreover, opinion evidence can be sufficient to preclude the grant of summary judgment. Mitchell v. Rainey, 187 Ga. App. 510, 370 S.E.2d 673 (1988).

Evidence of the nonmovant is to be believed, and all justifiable inferences are to be drawn in the nonmovant's favor. Barber v. Perdue, 194 Ga. App. 287, 390 S.E.2d 234 (1989), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 967, 111 S. Ct. 430, 112 L. Ed. 2d 414 (1990).

When the evidence is ambiguous or doubtful, the party opposing the motion must be given the benefit of all reasonable doubts and all favorable inferences and such evidence must be construed most favorably to the party opposing the motion. Jordan v. Ailstock, 230 Ga. 67, 195 S.E.2d 425 (1973); Match Point, Ltd. v. Adams, 148 Ga. App. 673, 252 S.E.2d 90 (1979), overruled on other grounds, Mock v. Canterbury Realty Co., 152 Ga. App. 872, 264 S.E.2d 489 (1980); Reese v. Sand- ers, 153 Ga. App. 654, 266 S.E.2d 313 (1980).

Construction of testimony of parties. — Although general rule is that upon trial of case testimony of party litigant, when self-contradictory or ambivalent, must be construed against the litigant, yet on motion for summary judgment made by party upon whom burden of proof does not lie at trial, all evidence must be construed against the movant and in favor of the party opposing the motion. Columbia Drug Co. v. Cook, 127 Ga. App. 490, 194 S.E.2d 286 (1972); Benton Bros. Ford Co. v. Cotton States Mut. Ins. Co., 157 Ga. App. 448, 278 S.E.2d 40 (1981).

In dealing with summary judgments, the rule concerning construction of party's testimony is to adopt that construction favorable to the opposing party when conflicting testimony comes from a litigant. Johnson v. Curenton, 127 Ga. App. 687, 195 S.E.2d 279 (1972).

All evidence and materials submitted on a motion for summary judgment, including testimony of the parties, must be construed most strongly against the movant. Keheley v. Benham, 155 Ga. App. 59, 270 S.E.2d 285 (1980).

Once the trial court has eliminated the favorable portions of contradictory testimony, the court must take all testimony on motion for summary judgment as the testimony then stands, and construe the testimony in favor of the party opposing the motion in determining whether summary judgment should be granted. Prophesy Corp. v. Charles Rossignol, Inc., 256 Ga. 27, 343 S.E.2d 680 (1986).

Vague or contradictory testimony.

— Rule as to construing evidence most favorably to the party opposing the motion for summary judgment applies to testimony of that party, even though the testimony may be vague and contradictory. Jordan v. Ailstock, 230 Ga. 67, 195 S.E.2d 425 (1973); Gregory v. Vance Publishing Corp., 130 Ga. App. 118, 202 S.E.2d 515 (1973); Match Point, Ltd. v. Adams, 148 Ga. App. 673, 252 S.E.2d 90 (1979); Aiken v. Drexler Shower Door Co., 155 Ga. App. 436, 270 S.E.2d 831 (1980).

"Contradictory testimony rule" applies to testimony presented in support or response to a motion for summary judgment.

This rule provides that a party's self-conflicting testimony is to be construed against the party. If a reasonable explanation is offered for the contradiction, however, the inconsistency will not be construed against the party witness. The burden rests on the party giving the contradictory testimony to tender the reasonable explanation, and whether this has been done is an issue of law. Stone v. Dayton Hudson Corp., 193 Ga. App. 752, 388 S.E.2d 909 (1989).

If no explanation is given for the conflict in testimony or a party's explanation is determined to be unreasonable, the trial court must eliminate the favorable portions of the contradictory testimony and then take all testimony on motion for summary judgment, as it then stands, and construe the evidence in favor of the party opposing the motion in determining whether summary judgment should be granted. Stone v. Dayton Hudson Corp., 193 Ga. App. 752, 388 S.E.2d 909 (1989).

Self-contradictory statements. —

When the respondent to a motion for summary judgment makes deliberate and intentional self-contradictory statements about a material issue of fact, that party's unfavorable testimony may be used against that party. Ward v. Griffith, 162 Ga. App. 194, 290 S.E.2d 290 (1982).

Contradictions by movant to be resolved against movant. —

When a party directly contradicts themselves, the conflict will be resolved against the party on a motion for summary judgment unless a reasonable explanation is offered. Georgia Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. Nolan, 180 Ga. App. 28, 348 S.E.2d 554 (1986).

Conflict or contradiction in testimony of opposing party, must be construed in the opposing party's favor; such contradictions, at the most, may themselves create a conflict in the evidence, as well as a question of credibility, which is solely for the jury. Keheley v. Benham, 155 Ga. App. 59, 270 S.E.2d 285 (1980).

When the deponent's testimony is somewhat vague and inconsistent, but does not disclose an attempt to confuse or mislead the court, although such inconsistency might weaken the deponent's case at trial it does not, as a matter of law, entitle the movant to summary judgment. Aiken v.

Drexler Shower Door Co., 155 Ga. App. 436, 270 S.E.2d 831 (1980).

Inconsistencies between plaintiff nonmovant's affidavit and deposition immaterial. — On motion for summary judgment made by the defendant, it is immaterial that there are inconsistencies between the plaintiff's affidavit and the deposition, as that part of the plaintiff's testimony most favorable to the plaintiff's position will be taken as true. Columbia Drug Co. v. Cook, 127 Ga. App. 490, 194 S.E.2d 286 (1972); Roberson v. Home Ins. Co., 149 Ga. App. 590, 254 S.E.2d 908 (1979). But see Davis v. Ferrell, 118 Ga. App. 690, 165 S.E.2d 313 (1968), construing plaintiff's deposition testimony which conflicted with his affidavit most strongly against him.

Intentional or deliberate self-contradictions. — When a party is intentionally or deliberately self-contradictory, the court may be justified in taking against the party that version of the party's testimony which is most unfavorable to the party. Brooks v. Douglas, 154 Ga. App. 54, 267 S.E.2d 495 (1980); Combs v. Adair Mtg. Co., 155 Ga. App. 432, 270 S.E.2d 828 (1980); Aiken v. Drexler Shower Door Co., 155 Ga. App. 436, 270 S.E.2d 831 (1980).

Only if party testifying in that party's own behalf intentionally or deliberately contradicts oneself in order to confuse or mislead the court so as to elude summary judgment shall the more favorable portion of the contradictory testimony be treated as though it did not exist. Aiken v. Drexler Shower Door Co., 155 Ga. App. 436, 270 S.E.2d 831 (1980).

Explanation by party of contradictions. — Rule in Prophecy Corp. v. Charles Rossignol, Inc., 256 Ga. 27, 343 S.E.2d 680 (1986), that when a party offers a reasonable explanation for contradictory testimony the inconsistency will not be used against the party, applies to the movants for summary judgment as well as the respondents, so that if a movant for summary judgment provides a reasonable explanation for a contradiction, the inconsistency will not be construed against the movant. However, the reasonable explanation merely permits the favorable portion of the contradictory testimony to remain as evidence to be considered; it does not operate to eliminate the unfavorable testimony so as to establish any fact authorizing the grant of summary judgment. Gentile v. Miller, Stevenson & Steinichen, Inc., 257 Ga. 583, 361 S.E.2d 383 (1987).

Contradictory statements by nonparty witnesses. — Requirement that testimony of a party who personally offers to be a witness in one's own behalf is to be construed most strongly against that party, when passing upon a motion for summary judgment, does not apply to contradictory statements by witnesses who are not parties to the litigation. Miller v. Douglas, 235 Ga. 222, 219 S.E.2d 144 (1975).

Effect of burden of proof at trial. — Doubts are to be resolved against the movant, even if at trial opposing party would have burden of proof. Whitehead v. Capital Auto. Co., 239 Ga. 460, 238 S.E.2d 104 (1977).

All evidence adduced on motion for summary judgment, including testimony of party upholding the motion, is construed more strongly against the movant, even though the movant may not be the party upon whom the burden of proof lies at trial. Combs v. Adair Mtg. Co., 245 Ga. 296, 264 S.E.2d 226 (1980).

Application of Prophecy rule. — Appellate court properly found that the company was not entitled to summary judgment as even though the Prophecy rule applied such that a party could adopt the party's unsworn statement that the party affirmed under oath even when the unsworn statement contradicted the party's later, sworn testimony, the record did not show that the employee affirmed under oath that portion of the employee's unsworn statement that the company relied on to obtain summary judgment in the employee's personal injury case, and, thus, the employee was entitled to rely on the employee's later, more favorable deposition testimony, which created a genuine issue of material fact and precluded summary judgment. CSX Transp., Inc. v. Belcher, 276 Ga. 522, 579 S.E.2d 737 (2003).

Insufficient evidence. — Defendants may prevail under subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 by showing the court that the documents, affidavits, depositions, and other evidence in the record reveal that there is no evidence sufficient to create a jury issue on at least one essential element of a plaintiff's case. Bandy v. Mills, 216 Ga. App. 407, 454 S.E.2d 610 (1995).

Circumstantial evidence as basis for summary judgment. — Trial court's denial of the first possible motorist and second possible motorist's summary judgment motion was error as the motorist and the passenger conceded that the second possible driver was neither the owner nor the driver of the car that struck the motorist and the passenger's vehicle, and circumstantial evidence failed to point more strongly to a conclusion opposite the direct testimony of the first possible driver and the second possible driver that their car which struck the motorist and the passenger's vehicle had been stolen on the night in question and, therefore, the first possible driver was not driving the car when the car struck the motorist and passenger's vehicle. Rosales v. Davis, 260 Ga. App. 709, 580 S.E.2d 662 (2003).

More specificity required to support motion. — When the administrative law judge used the improper legal standard when the judge granted summary judgment to the Georgia Environmental Protection Division on grounds that the draft permit included the name of the receiving body of water in the fact sheet attached with the draft permit, more specificity was required and, thus, reversal of the summary judgment order was warranted. Hughey v. Gwinnett County, 278 Ga. 740, 609 S.E.2d 324 (2004).

Clear and convincing evidence to support appointment of conservator. — Similar to a ruling on a motion for summary judgment in a civil action, because a parent's gravely-impaired judgment, which combined with a physical frailty and impaired vision, made the parent vulnerable to exploitation by a new person living with the parent, the probate court properly concluded that the parent lacked sufficient understanding to make significant responsible decisions concerning the management of the parent's property; moreover, because the parent chose not to include the transcript of the evidence in the appellate record, and, as any pre-trial ruling on the parent's capabilities was, after a trial determining the matter, harmless if not moot, the probate court's ruling was upheld. Yetman v. Walsh, 282 Ga. App. 499, 639 S.E.2d 491 (2006).

Time and Notice for Hearing of Motion for Summary Judgment

Spirit of the summary judgment procedure. — Granting motion for summary judgment without affording opposite side time provided or without giving notice or opportunity to be heard does not comport with spirit of this section. Peoples Fin. Corp. v. Jones, 134 Ga. App. 649, 215 S.E.2d 711 (1975).

Denial of motion for extension of time proper. — Because a motion for an extension of time to respond to a summary judgment motion and conduct additional discovery failed to set forth specific reasons why additional time was necessary and failed to include the affidavit required under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(f), a trial court acted within the court's discretion in declining to grant the requested extension of time. Smyrna Dev. Co. v. Whitener Ltd. P'ship, 280 Ga. App. 788, 635 S.E.2d 173 (2006).

Notice of affirmative defense. — Affirmative defense of limitations cannot be raised for the first time orally at a hearing on a summary judgment motion without any notice to the opposing party. Hansford v. Robinson, 255 Ga. 530, 340 S.E.2d 614 (1986).

Phrase "at any time" is simply used to distinguish between times plaintiffs and defendants have in which to file a motion for summary judgment; it means at any time before a trial begins in which a final judgment is to be rendered, and does not mean that a motion for summary judgment may be filed without any time limit whatsoever. Braselton Bros. v. Better Maid Dairy Prods., Inc., 110 Ga. App. 515, 139 S.E.2d 124 (1964) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Party may move for summary judgment at any time. — Party against whom claim is asserted may move at any time for summary judgment. Fierer v. Ashe, 147 Ga. App. 446, 249 S.E.2d 270 (1978); Christian v. Allstate Ins. Co., 152 Ga. App. 358, 262 S.E.2d 621 (1979).

Defendant may move at any time for summary judgment, with or without supporting affidavits. Nimmer v. Strickland, 242 Ga. 430, 249 S.E.2d 233 (1978).

Notice and hearing required. — Subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 requires notice to an adverse party and a hearing. Ferguson v. Miller, 160 Ga. App. 436, 287 S.E.2d 363 (1981).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment on an election candidate's claim for defamation by a radio broadcast as the candidate did not have a full and fair opportunity to meet and attempt to controvert the assertions with respect to that claim. Howard v. Pope, 282 Ga. App. 137, 637 S.E.2d 854 (2006).

Party must have 30 days' notice of hearing and an opportunity to respond to a motion for summary judgment. Leverich v. Roddenberry Farms, Inc., 253 Ga. 414, 321 S.E.2d 328 (1984).

When a motion to dismiss was converted to a motion for summary judgment, and nothing in the record reflected that the plaintiff received any notice that the motion would be heard, the dismissal of the complaint was error. Barrett v. Wharton, 196 Ga. App. 688, 396 S.E.2d 603 (1990).

Granting the plaintiffs motion for summary judgment without holding a hearing or fixing a time for a hearing thereon and without giving the defendant notice of the time when judgment would be rendered is a procedural shortcoming requiring reversal. Smith v. Conley, 152 Ga. App. 589, 263 S.E.2d 453 (1979).

Actual notice. — Spirit of the summary judgment procedure contemplates that the respondent shall have actual notice of a day upon which the matter will be heard and judgment rendered upon the record then existing. A mere reference to the local court rules sent by the attorney does not give such actual notice and an opportunity to be heard. Ferguson v. Miller, 160 Ga. App. 436, 287 S.E.2d 363 (1981).

Failure to give notice. — It is error to grant final relief without giving party opposing motion statutory requirement of notice prior to a hearing on the merits of the claim for final relief. Royston v. Royston, 236 Ga. 648, 225 S.E.2d 41 (1976).

Court's error in conducting a hearing on the defendant's motion in absence of proper service of notice of the hearing on the plaintiff was not harmless since the plaintiff was deprived of the plaintiff's statutory right to file opposing affidavits up to one day before the hearing. Goodwin v. Richmond, 182 Ga. App. 745, 356 S.E.2d 888 (1987).

When a trial court orally noted that a limitations period did not bar a lessor's action to recover for a lessee's alleged default in the lessee's financing obligations for office equipment, such was not controlling since the trial court's written order sua sponte granted summary judgment to the lessor on a finding that all defenses were barred by a prior order of the Bankruptcy Court; however, when there was no indication that proper notice had been provided to the lessee, it was determined that the lessee had not been given a full opportunity to address the basis on which the summary judgment order had been entered. Carroll v. Finova Capital Corp., 265 Ga. App. 517, 594 S.E.2d 720 (2004).

In a wrongful foreclosure action, the trial court erred in conducting a hearing on the defendants' motion to dismiss and in converting the motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment by considering evidence outside the pleadings, without giving the plaintiff prior notice as the trial court's notice of hearing stated that the court was conducting a status conference, and the notice made no mention of the defendants' motion to dismiss. Garner v. US Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 329 Ga. App. 86, 763 S.E.2d 748 (2014).

Statutorily mandated service requirement waived. — Even though the defendant was never served with a motion for summary judgment, since the trial court gave the defendant fair notice of,

and an opportunity to respond to, the motion, the statutorily-mandated service requirement was waived. Ferguson v. Duron, Inc., 244 Ga. App. 19, 534 S.E.2d 142 (2000).

Receipt of notice of claim. — Summary judgment for an insurer was reversed as factual issues remained as to whether an insurance agency was able to accept notices of claims on behalf of an insurer as a fiduciary and as a dual agent. Bowen Tree Surgs., Inc. v. Canal Indem. Co., 264 Ga. App. 520, 591 S.E.2d 415 (2003).

Grant of summary judgment without notice at hearing on motion to compel. — It was error to grant summary judgment in the defendant's favor in the plaintiff's absence at a hearing on a motion to compel, without notice to the plaintiff that summary judgment would be heard or that a judgment for money damages would be sought on grounds entirely distinct from those pled in a prior summary judgment motion, and by support of an affidavit of which the plaintiff had no notice. Jackson v. Bekele, 152 Ga. App. 417, 263 S.E.2d 225 (1979).

Hearing motion before discovery complete. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by hearing the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment before discovery was complete. Garner v. Roberts, 238 Ga. App. 738, 520 S.E.2d 255 (1999).

Ruling on summary judgment motion instead of discovery motion. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in not ruling on a motion to compel discovery prior to ruling on a motion for summary judgment because the questions from the discovery procedure sought to clearly invade the attorney-client privilege. NationsBank v. SouthTrust Bank, 226 Ga. App. 888, 487 S.E.2d 701 (1997).

Trial court's consideration of a summary judgment motion by the defendant was premature as the plaintiffs raised discovery issues that required judicial scrutiny; accordingly, the case had to be remanded to permit consideration of the plaintiffs' motion to compel discovery that was denied by the trial court. Parks v. Hyundai Motor Am., Inc., 258 Ga. App. 876, 575 S.E.2d 673 (2002).

Hearing of Motion for Summary Judgment

Purpose of hearing. — Obvious purpose of hearing on motion for summary judgment is to provide counsel with an opportunity to persuade the court and to provide the court with an opportunity to interrogate counsel. Premium Distrib. Co. v. National Distrib. Co., 157 Ga. App. 666, 278 S.E.2d 468 (1981).

Hearing procedure is designed to give the opposing party fair opportunity to contradict the supporting material relied upon by the movant. Porter Coatings v. Stein Steel & Supply Co., 247 Ga. 631, 278 S.E.2d 377 (1981).

Subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 requires that hearing date be set and hearing conducted before a motion for summary judgment is granted; the failure of the trial court to do so is error. Premium Distrib. Co. v. National Distrib. Co., 157 Ga. App. 666, 278 S.E.2d 468 (1981).

"Hearing" does not necessarily mean an oral hearing, but O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 at the very least contemplates notice to the respondent that the matter will be heard and taken under advisement as of a certain day. Ferguson v. Miller, 160 Ga. App. 436, 287 S.E.2d 363 (1981).

"Hearing" means opportunity to respond. — Hearing referred to in subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 simply means an opportunity to respond. If the adverse party is given this opportunity, then the party has been heard within the meaning of that statute. Brown v. Shiver, 183 Ga. App. 207, 358 S.E.2d 862 (1987).

Both respondent and movant have a right to be heard as provided in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56. Sentry Ins. v. Echols, 174 Ga. App. 541, 330 S.E.2d 725 (1985).

Duty of each party at a hearing on the motion for summary judgment is to present each party's case in full. Bible Farm Serv., Inc. v. House Hasson Hdwe. Co., 157 Ga. App. 358, 277 S.E.2d 341 (1981); Walter E. Heller & Co. v. Aetna Bus. Credit, Inc., 158 Ga. App. 249, 280 S.E.2d 144 (1981).

Opposing party to present evidence at time of hearing. — When there has been an order to show cause under a motion for summary judgment, the time for the opposite party to present that party's relevant evidence, if any, is at the time of the hearing on the order to show cause, and if this is not done, it is too late to complain later. Scales v. Peevy, 103 Ga. App. 42, 118 S.E.2d 193 (1961) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Time for party opposing motion for summary judgment to present relevant evidence or show satisfactory reasons for nonproduction is at hearing on an order to show cause, and if this is not done, it is too late to complain later. King v. Fryer, 107 Ga. App. 715, 131 S.E.2d 203 (1963); Planters Rural Tel. Coop. v. Chance, 108 Ga. App. 146, 132 S.E.2d 90 (1963) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Defendant's failure to demand hearing does not constitute waiver of that right. Premium Distrib. Co. v. National Distrib. Co., 157 Ga. App. 666, 278 S.E.2d 468 (1981).

Hearing sanctioned even if motion never filed. — In a procedural context, the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, sanctions the hearing of a motion for summary judgment even though no such motion is ever filed. Richmond Leasing Co. v. First Union Bank, 188 Ga. App. 843, 374 S.E.2d 746, cert. denied, 188 Ga. App. 912, 374 S.E.2d 746 (1988).

Denial of motion does not negate need for hearing. — Necessity of a hearing in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 is not abrogated merely because the motion is ultimately denied. Sentry Ins. v. Echols, 174 Ga. App. 541, 330 S.E.2d 725 (1985).

Failure to hold hearing. — When the record and the briefs of the parties reflect that, while a hearing on the motion was scheduled and the parties notified, no hearing was actually held, the appropriate course of action is to remand the case to the trial court for a determination as to whether the respondent waived the respondent's right to a hearing. Hillis v. First Nat'l Bank, 168 Ga. App. 408, 309 S.E.2d 404 (1983).

While it was error for the trial court to fail to hold a hearing on a motion for summary judgment, which was granted, as the losing parties did not show harm by the denial of their right to a hearing — not stating what defense they expected to raise and not arguing that the grant of summary judgment was improper — a reversal was not demanded. Harper v. Birmingham Trust Nat'l Bank, 171 Ga. App. 618, 320 S.E.2d 622 (1984).

Failure of a trial court to hold a hearing on a motion for summary judgment prior to a ruling thereon is error; nonetheless, that error is not reversible absent a showing of harm. Sentry Ins. v. Echols, 174 Ga. App. 541, 330 S.E.2d 725 (1985); Christensen v. State, 219 Ga. App. 10, 464 S.E.2d 14 (1995).

Purpose of the 30 day waiting period required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 is to place the opposing party on notice as to the material relied upon by the movant in support of the motion so that the opposing party might have sufficient opportunity to prepare a response. Benton Bros. Ford Co. v. Cotton States Mut. Ins. Co., 157 Ga. App. 448, 278 S.E.2d 40 (1981).

Statutory requisite that, unless waived or extended, supporting material must be on file at least 30 days before a summary judgment hearing is an implementation of the fundamental principle of due process. Bonds v. John Wieland Homes, Inc., 177 Ga. App. 254, 339 S.E.2d 318 (1985).

Service of motion less than 30 days before hearing. — When motion for summary judgment is served less than 30 days before the time fixed for hearing, but no prejudice occurs to the party opposing the motion, the trial court may properly proceed with the hearing. Cel-Ko Bldrs. & Developers, Inc. v. BX Corp., 136 Ga. App. 777, 222 S.E.2d 94 (1975).

Waiver of 30-day requirement. — The 30-day requirement under subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 can be waived. Mobley v. Coast House, Ltd., 182 Ga. App. 305, 355 S.E.2d 686 (1987).

When the trial court inquired of counsel the best time available to hear the several pending motions and respondent's attorney expressly asked the court to rule upon all motions for summary judgment at one time and no mention or objection was made by the attorney that only six days had expired between the time of filing and the time of ruling on several of the motions, any defect as to the timeliness of the granting of the disputed motions for summary judgment was waived. Mobley v. Coast House, Ltd., 182 Ga. App. 305, 355 S.E.2d 686 (1987).

Court did not err in holding a hearing on a summary judgment motion only 15 days after the motion was supplemented with citations to authority, and did not deprive the nonmovants of the right to 30 days to respond, when the nonmovants waived expansion of the time and resetting of the trial by not only rejecting the court's offer but by affirmatively asking the court to move forward with the summary judgment determination. Southern Trust Ins. Co. v. Georgia Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 194 Ga. App. 751, 391 S.E.2d 793 (1990).

Nonmoving party waived the matter of the trial court's failure to comply with the procedural mandate that the nonmoving party be afforded 30 days within which to respond to a motion as the nonmoving party for summary judgment failed to raise this procedural defect at the hearing. Dennisson v. Lakeway Publishers, Inc., 196 Ga. App. 85, 395 S.E.2d 366 (1990).

Timeliness of hearing waived by appearance and argument. — When both parties appeared and argued plaintiff's motion to strike and dismiss (in effect a motion for summary judgment or judgment on the pleadings) on the day assigned, without objection as to time, no complaint may later be made as to the timeliness of the hearing. Connell v. Connell, 119 Ga. App. 485, 167 S.E.2d 686 (1969).

Permissible not to require oral argument hearing unless requested. — When O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-56, 9-11-78, and 9-11-83 are considered in conjunction, it is permissible for the court rules to provide that an oral argument hearing is not required unless the party requests a hearing. Dallas Blue Haven Pools, Inc. v. Taslimi, 180 Ga. App. 734, 350 S.E.2d 265 (1986), aff'd, 256 Ga. 739, 354 S.E.2d 160 (1987).

When timely response to motion filed, oral argument erroneously denied. — Because the responding party timely responded to a summary judgment motion, pursuant to Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.3, the trial court erred in denying that party oral argument on that motion and in granting summary judgment to the movant. Green v. Raw Deal, Inc., 290 Ga. App. 464, 659 S.E.2d 856 (2008).

Entry of order prior to expiration of 30 day period. — Unless the record unequivocally demonstrates that the nonmovant's defenses to the motion are wholly meritless and frivolous or the nonmovant fails to raise the procedural defect at the hearing, the trial court's entry of an order on the motion prior to the expiration of 30 days from its service is reversible error, even though the trial court may ultimately determine on a renewed motion that the movant is entitled to summary judgment. Dixon v. Midland Ins. Co., 168 Ga. App. 319, 309 S.E.2d 147 (1983); U. S. Traffic Corp. v. Turcotte, 246 Ga. App. 187, 539 S.E.2d 884 (2000).

Trial court's error in initially ruling upon a motion for summary judgment before expiration of the 30-day response period was not prejudicial since the court reaffirmed the court's grant of summary judgment after the expiration of the 30-day period during which time no response was made. Segrest v. Intown Value Hdwe., Inc., 190 Ga. App. 588, 379 S.E.2d 615 (1989).

Trial court's error in granting the defendants' summary judgment motion prior to the end of the 30-day response period did not require reversal and remand when the plaintiff's action was barred by the exclusive remedy provision of the Workers' Compensation Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 9, T. 34. Larraga v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 222 Ga. App. 654, 475 S.E.2d 649 (1996).

Entry of judgment for both movant and nonmovant plaintiffs permitted when defendant has notice of issues.

— It is proper to enter summary judgment in favor of nonmovant party plaintiff as well as for movant party plaintiff, absent written notice or waiver thereof if issues are the same as those involved in the movant's motion of which the opposite parties have notice. Cruce v. Randall, 245 Ga. 669, 266 S.E.2d 486 (1980).

Continuance or refusal to allow filing when opposing affidavits not served prior to hearing. — There may be situations when failure to serve opposing affidavits prior to the day of hearing will result in the trial court refusing with propriety to allow the affidavits to be filed, or situations when the court may allow the affidavits to be filed but grant a motion for continuance. Simmons v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 111 Ga. App. 738, 143 S.E.2d 55 (1965) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Conversion of Other Motions to Motions for Summary Judgment

Conversion of motion to dismiss. — Party is entitled to notice of conversion of motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment as well as 30 days to respond to such motion. Riverhill Community Ass'n v. Cobb County Bd. of Comm'rs, 236 Ga. 856, 226 S.E.2d 54 (1976).

When on a hearing on a motion to dismiss a complaint because of failure to state a claim, evidence is introduced and admitted by the court, the motion to dismiss is converted to one for summary judgment, and the opposing party must be given 30 days notice of the motion. Jaynes v. Douglas, 147 Ga. App. 678, 250 S.E.2d 14 (1978).

Upon the trial court's conversion of a motion to dismiss to one for summary judgment, being the first notice to the plaintiffs in the record that the motion was one for summary judgment, the plaintiffs were then entitled to 30 days to respond to the motion as converted before a ruling was made on the motion, and the entry of the trial court's order on the summary judgment motion without allowing the plaintiffs 30 days to respond was error. Hart v. Sullivan, 197 Ga. App. 759, 399 S.E.2d 523 (1990).

Attachment of an affidavit to a motion to dismiss does not constitute notice that the motion will be converted to a motion for summary judgment. Until the trial court decides whether to consider or exclude matters outside the pleadings, the mere attachment of an affidavit to a motion to dismiss should not be construed to constitute notice of the conversion of that motion to dismiss into a summary judgment motion. Hart v. Sullivan, 197 Ga. App. 759, 399 S.E.2d 523 (1990).

Trial court's order denying dismissal of a fraud claim in a medical malpractice action against a doctor, upon a motion which the trial court treated as one for summary judgment when the court considered material beyond the pleadings, was reversed as there was no evidence that the doctor knew or even suspected that the patient had a pancreatic tumor, or that the doctor withheld information regarding the tumor; thus, the doctrine of equitable estoppel did not apply and the fraud claim was barred by the statute of repose, O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(b). Balotin v. Simpson, 286 Ga. App. 772, 650 S.E.2d 253 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 803 (Ga. 2007).

When a party did not object in the trial court to the conversion of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim into one for summary judgment, and the party did not challenge or address the conversion on appeal, any objection to the conversion was waived. Action Concrete v. Portrait Homes - Little Suwanee Point, LLC, 285 Ga. App. 650, 647 S.E.2d 353 (2007).

When motions to dismiss asserted, among other things, that the complaint failed to state a claim and the trial court considered material beyond the pleadings in ruling on the motions to dismiss, those motions were required to be treated as motions for summary judgment, and the losing party maintained the right to a direct appeal from an order granting partial summary judgment. City of Demorest v. Town of Mt. Airy, 282 Ga. 653, 653 S.E.2d 43 (2007).

Trial court erred in failing to grant a client's request for a hearing on a former attorney's motion to dismiss claims for legal malpractice and intentional infliction of emotional distress because the trial court considered matters outside the pleadings. Under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(b), the motion was required to be treated as one for summary judgment and disposed of as provided in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, and all parties were to be given a reasonable opportunity to present all material made pertinent to such a motion. Fitzpatrick v. Harrison, 300 Ga. App. 672, 686 S.E.2d 322 (2009).

Conversion of motion for judgment on pleadings. — When there is only a motion for judgment on the pleadings under consideration, which motion is converted into a motion for summary judgment by the presentation of matters outside the pleadings not excluded by the court, the trial judge must give reasonable opportunity to the opposing party to present all material pertinent to such motion; however, when a motion filed and heard is for summary judgment as well as judgment on the pleadings, and a motion for summary judgment is the only motion ruled upon, there is no requirement that the trial court offer the opposing party a reasonable opportunity to secure evidence or materials as the opposing party has already had notice that such would be required. Hanson v. Byers, 120 Ga. App. 298, 170 S.E.2d 315 (1969).

Personal guarantor did not show that the guarantor was harmed by a trial court's converting a bank's motion for judgment on the pleadings to a motion for summary judgment because the guarantor did not show that given additional time the guarantor would have filed additional affidavits or other supporting documentation in response to the motion for summary judgment. Brooks v. Multibank 2009-1 RES-ADC Venture, LLC, 317 Ga. App. 264, 730 S.E.2d 509 (2012).

Conversion of interlocutory injunction application. — Trial court has the authority to convert an application for interlocutory injunction into a motion for summary judgment. However, the court cannot do so without compliance with the provisions of subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56. Charming Shoppes, Inc. v. Black, 252 Ga. 207, 312 S.E.2d 604 (1984); Electronic Data Sys. Corp. v. Heinemann, 217 Ga. App. 816, 459 S.E.2d 457 (1995).

Motion at hearing for temporary relief. — Motion for summary judgment can be made orally at hearing for temporary relief. Royston v. Royston, 236 Ga. 648, 225 S.E.2d 41 (1976).

Hearing on interlocutory injunction held not one for summary judgment. — When no motion to dismiss the complaint or other motions or responsive pleadings are made until after the plaintiffs have presented evidence at a hearing on an application for interlocutory injunction, the hearing cannot properly be considered as a hearing on a motion for summary judgment. McGregor v. Town of Fort Oglethorpe, 236 Ga. 711, 225 S.E.2d 238 (1976).

Summary judgment for nonjoinder of indispensable party improper at hearing adjudicating indispensability. — It is not proper for the trial court to grant summary judgment against the plaintiff for failure to have an indispensable party joined in the same order in which the trial court adjudicates that individual to be indispensable. Fradley v. Irvin, 245 Ga. 307, 264 S.E.2d 866 (1980).

Time for trial on permanent child custody. — After time for filing defensive pleadings expires, it is not error for permanent child custody hearing to be set by rule nisi less than 30 days hence, as time for trial is set by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1677, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-40(a)), not subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56). Brand v. Brand, 244 Ga. App. 124, 259 S.E.2d 133 (1979).

Construction with Notice and Hearing Provisions of Superior Court Rules

Sufficiency of service under Superior Court Rule 6. — When the plaintiff alleged receiving no prior notice of the date of a ruling on motions for summary judgment, it was held that under Superior Court Rule 6, service of a motion on an opposing party serves as notice to that party that the court will take the matter under advisement after 30 days (the time during which the opposing party may file a response to the motion) after service of the motion has passed. Jacobsen v. Muller, 181 Ga. App. 382, 352 S.E.2d 604 (1986).

Superior Court Rule 6.2. — Superior Court Rule 6.2, which requires a party who opposes a motion to file a response, reply memorandum, affidavits, or other responsive material not later than 30 days after service of the motion unless otherwise ordered by the trial judge, does not conflict with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), which requires that the motion be served at least 30 days before the time fixed for hearing. Spikes v. Citizens State Bank, 179 Ga. App. 479, 347 S.E.2d 310 (1986).

Construction with Notice and Hearing Provisions of Superior Court Rules (Cont'd)

In the event of a conflict between Uniform State Court Rule 6.2, requiring opposing affidavits to be filed not later than 30 days, and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), subsection (c) prevails. Walton v. Datry, 185 Ga. App. 88, 363 S.E.2d 295 (1987), cert. denied, 185 Ga. App. 911, 363 S.E.2d 295 (1988).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 permits the respondent to serve opposing affidavits at any time "prior to the date of the hearing" in the event that a hearing is set. To the extent the requirements of Uniform State Court Rule 6.2 conflict with the statutory provision, the rule must yield. Wyse v. Potamkin Chrysler-Plymouth, Inc., 189 Ga. App. 64, 374 S.E.2d 785 (1988).

Superior Court Rule 6.3. — Superior Court Rule 6.3 does not conflict with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, since the rule does not require that litigants seek a hearing or waive the hearing, nor does the rule invest the trial court with discretion to deny to parties a right granted by statute. Spikes v. Citizens State Bank, 179 Ga. App. 479, 347 S.E.2d 310 (1986).

Superior Court Rule 6.3 regarding hearings was promulgated by a governmental body (the Supreme Court) pursuant to a constitutional delegation of authority, and the rule has the force and effect emanating from the delegating authority, the Constitution. Hence, even if the rule were contrary to a statute, such as O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), the constitutional rule would control, and permit granting a motion for summary judgment without setting a hearing. Dallas Blue Haven Pools, Inc. v. Taslimi, 180 Ga. App. 734, 350 S.E.2d 265 (1986), aff'd, 256 Ga. 739, 354 S.E.2d 160 (1987).

Rule 6.3 of the Uniform Superior Court Rules is not inconsistent with subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, and it was not error for the trial court to arrive at the court's decision in accordance with Rule 6.3, Uniform Superior Court Rules, without an oral argument hearing, when neither party requested such a hearing. Dallas Blue Haven Pools, Inc. v. Taslimi, 180 Ga. App. 734, 350 S.E.2d 265 (1986), aff'd, 256 Ga. 739, 354 S.E.2d 160 (1987).

Hearing not required in absence of request by either rule or statute. — Neither O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) nor Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.3 required that the trial court hold an oral hearing on a trustee's motion for summary judgment in the trustee's action against an executor for breach of fiduciary duty because no party requested a hearing as set forth in Rule 6.3. Royal v. Blackwell, 289 Ga. 473, 712 S.E.2d 815 (2011).

Service and Filing of Affidavits

Purpose of subsection (c) to prevent surprise. — Purpose of subsection (c) of this section is to prevent a party from being surprised on the day of the hearing by an affidavit that the party would not be in a position to answer. Vann v. Bice, 127 Ga. App. 579, 194 S.E.2d 259 (1972).

Subsection (c) and § 9-11-6(d) to be read together to permit variance in time for service of opposing motions. — Subsection (c) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56) and Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5 and 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d)) should be read together so as to vest in the court discretion to permit opposing affidavits to a motion for summary judgment to be served at some other time than provided in Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 25. Sasser & Co. v. Griffin, 133 Ga. App. 83, 210 S.E.2d 34 (1974).

Subsection (e) and § 9-11-6(d) to be read together in determining time requirements. — In determining whether affidavits in support of a motion for summary judgment are properly before the court, Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5 and 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d)), relating to time for motions and affidavits, and subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56) must be read together. Jones v. Howard, 153 Ga. App. 137, 264 S.E.2d 587 (1980); Bailey v. Dunn, 158 Ga. App. 347, 280 S.E.2d 388 (1981); Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Dorsey, 159 Ga. App. 784, 285 S.E.2d 242 (1981); McIntosh v. McLendon, 162 Ga. App. 220, 290 S.E.2d 157 (1982).

Under prevailing authority, subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56) and Ga. L. 1967, p.

226, §§ 5 and 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d)) require affidavits in support of a motion for summary judgment to be served with the motion, unless the movant seeks and obtains an extension from the court pursuant to Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5 and 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d)), and any such extension of time within which to file supporting affidavits should also ensure that the party opposing the motion will have 30 days within which to respond. Jones v. Howard, 153 Ga. App. 137, 264 S.E.2d 587 (1980).

When the supporting affidavit of a party moving for summary judgment was filed less than 30 days before the originally scheduled hearing date of June 19, but the affidavit had been on file for more than 30 days when the actual hearing was held because the trial court had continued the hearing until July 13, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion when the court granted the summary judgment motion. Smith v. Shaw, 196 Ga. App. 2, 395 S.E.2d 286 (1990).

Supplemental affidavit was not filed 30 days before the time fixed for the hearing and therefore was not properly considered by the trial court. Brandon v. Mayfield, 215 Ga. App. 735, 452 S.E.2d 181 (1994).

Affidavits are required to be filed prior to the hearing. Rose v. Rollins, 167 Ga. App. 469, 306 S.E.2d 724 (1983).

Filing of response. — When a hearing on the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment and the time for response was continued by agreement to the date of the hearing, and the defendant's response was filed on that date, the filing was timely. Liberty Forest Prods., Inc. v. Interstate Paper Corp., 138 Ga. App. 153, 225 S.E.2d 731 (1976).

Response to a motion for summary judgment is timely filed if filed on the date of the hearing, notwithstanding the language in Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 4 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(d)) requiring all papers after the complaint to be filed within the time allowed for service. Gross v. Pyrofax Gas Corp., 151 Ga. App. 130, 259 S.E.2d 137 (1979).

Response to a motion for summary judgment is timely filed if filed on the date of hearing, notwithstanding the language in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d) requiring all papers after the complaint to be filed within the time allowed for service. Martin v. Newman, 162 Ga. App. 725, 293 S.E.2d 18 (1982).

Failure to file responsive pleading.

— Plaintiff's failure to file a responsive pleading to the defendant's motion to dismiss, which was properly treated as a motion for summary judgment, constituted non-compliance with the provision governing affidavits supporting and opposing summary judgment and, thus, the defendant was entitled to an award of summary judgment. Gaddy v. Thomasson, 172 Ga. App. 876, 324 S.E.2d 817 (1984).

Opposing affidavits. — Party opposing motion for summary judgment has until the day prior to hearing to serve opposing affidavits, unless the trial court in the court's discretion permits the affidavits to be served at a later date, and service by mail is complete upon mailing. Gross v. Pyrofax Gas Corp., 151 Ga. App. 130, 259 S.E.2d 137 (1979).

Adverse party may serve opposing affidavit prior to the day of the hearing on a motion for summary judgment. Bailey v. Dunn, 158 Ga. App. 347, 280 S.E.2d 388 (1981).

Affidavit made in opposition to a motion for summary judgment should be served on the opposite party at least one day prior to hearing the motion; however, the court has discretion to consider affidavits not so filed and the court's ruling on this issue will not be reversed unless there is an abuse of discretion. Liberty Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Houk, 157 Ga. App. 540, 278 S.E.2d 120, aff'd, 248 Ga. 111, 281 S.E.2d 583 (1981).

Affidavit made in opposition to a motion for summary judgment not served at least one day before the hearing is barred from consideration as evidence unless the record discloses the trial court, in the exercise of the court's discretion, has allowed the affidavit to be served and considered. Talley v. City Tank Corp., 158 Ga. App. 130, 279 S.E.2d 264 (1981); Dutton v. Dykes, 159 Ga. App. 48, 283 S.E.2d 28 (1981).

When a party opposing summary judgment filed an affidavit and served the affidavit by mail the same day, one day before the summary judgment hearing as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c), the affidavit was not untimely; under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(b), service by mail was complete upon mailing. Kirkland v. Kirkland, 285 Ga. App. 238, 645 S.E.2d 626 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 646 (Ga. 2007); 552 U.S. 1312, 128 S. Ct. 1898, 170 L.Ed.2d 749 (2008).

Affidavits supplied before court's decision considered. — Since the trial court made no decision at the summary judgment hearing but took the matter under advisement, and it is undisputed that the defendant supplied the supporting affidavits before the trial court's decision on the matter, the trial court was authorized to consider the evidence submitted by the defendant. Howell Mill/Collier Assocs. v. Gonzales, 186 Ga. App. 909, 368 S.E.2d 831 (1988).

Failure to exercise reasonable diligence or greatest possible diligence in attempting service of process. — Because the evidence presented before the trial court failed to show that an injured passenger exercised either reasonable diligence or the greatest possible diligence in attempting service of process on an opposing driver, but instead showed that: (1) numerous attempts at service were unsuccessful; (2) the passenger filed the complaint eight days before the expiration of the limitation period, and service was not perfected until 16 months after the statute ran; (3) long lapses in time existed between failed attempts when apparently no actions were taken to effectuate service; and (4) the driver continued to reside in the same small community during the 16 months that it took to ultimately perfect service, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to the driver. Moore v. Wilkerson, 283 Ga. App. 340, 641 S.E.2d 578 (2007).

Late filed affidavit. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in considering an affidavit that was submitted after the trial court conducted a hearing on the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment and was not on file for at least 30 days before the trial court issued the court's order on the motion since defendants were put on notice by the trial court's letter requesting the information that the evidence contained in the affidavit would be filed with the court. Moreover, before the trial court issued the court's decision, defendants filed a response to the plaintiff's "renewed" motion containing nothing to counter the affidavit. NeSmith v. Ellerbee, 203 Ga. App. 65, 416 S.E.2d 364 (1992).

Trial court's "failure to rule" on a motion to consider additional evidence in opposition to a grant of summary judgment is not error when the affidavits to be filed would be untimely. Splish Splash Waterslides, Inc. v. Cherokee Ins. Co., 167 Ga. App. 589, 307 S.E.2d 107 (1983).

Even though O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d) and subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 require an opposing affidavit to be served at least one day prior to the summary judgment hearing, the trial court is vested with discretion to consider affidavits not so served. Liberty Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Houk, 248 Ga. 111, 281 S.E.2d 583 (1981).

Trial court does not err in considering the plaintiff's supplemental affidavits even though the affidavits are served upon the defendant only a few days before the hearing when the affidavits either contain nothing that was not already admitted by the defendant by the defendant's failure to respond to the plaintiff's request for admissions, or the affidavits merely document the time spent on the case by the plaintiff's attorney in support of a prayer for attorney fees in addition to damages. Concert Promotions, Inc. v. Haas & Dodd, Inc., 167 Ga. App. 883, 307 S.E.2d 763 (1983).

When the plaintiff filed an affidavit in opposition to the defendant's motion for summary judgment, but the affidavit was filed after the entry of the order granting summary judgment to the defendant, since the plaintiff's affidavit was not timely under subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, the plaintiff's affidavit was not effective to contradict the averments in the defendant's affidavit. Myers v. Barnard, 180 Ga. App. 192, 348 S.E.2d 733 (1986).

Consideration of untimely filed material will not warrant reversal of the court's ruling on a motion for summary judgment if the record demonstrates either that the material was harmless or that the respondent acquiesced in the court's consideration of the motion. Connell v. Houser, 189 Ga. App. 158, 375 S.E.2d 136 (1988).

Opposing affidavit which was not filed until the day of the hearing was untimely, and the trial court did not err by refusing to consider the affidavit. Valhalla, Inc. v. O'Donnell, 199 Ga. App. 679, 405 S.E.2d 895 (1991).

On a lessor's motion for summary judgment on a lease and guaranty, because neither party requested a hearing on the lessor's motion and no hearing was held, the 30-day period for filing the lessor's counsel's affidavit in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(c) did not apply. The requirement in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(d) that the affidavit be served with the motion was to ensure adequate notice; in this case, the affidavit was filed eight months prior to the trial court's decision. Triple T-Bar, LLC v. DDR Southeast Springfield, LLC, 330 Ga. App. 847, 769 S.E.2d 586 (2015).

Objection at hearing rather than by motion. — When an affidavit made in support of a summary judgment motion is not served with the motion, the burden is on the movant, not the opposing party, to invoke the trial court's discretion with regard to the late filing, and objection by the opposing party at hearing instead of by motion is not a waiver of that objection. Jones v. Howard, 153 Ga. App. 137, 264 S.E.2d 587 (1980).

Trial court may deny verbal motion made on date of hearing to use certain depositions taken in another court. Knight v. Bryant-Durham Elec. Co., 169 Ga. App. 502, 313 S.E.2d 758 (1984).

Waiver of requirement of timely filing. — Affidavit relied on in support of a motion for summary judgment must be on file for at least 30 days prior to the hearing. This strict requirement may be waived by the opposing party's acquiescence in the use of the untimely materials, or if the movant seeks and obtains an order from the trial court under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(b) extending the time for filing. Gunter v. Hamilton Bank, 201 Ga. App. 379, 411 S.E.2d 115 (1991).

Error in untimely affidavit waived by failure to object. — Any error arising from a failure to timely file an affidavit in support of a motion for summary judgment is waived by the adverse party's failure to object to the filing of the affidavit in question in the trial court. Southeastern Hose, Inc. v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 167 Ga. App. 356, 306 S.E.2d 308 (1983).

Objection to the timeliness of an affidavit submitted in response to a motion for summary judgment will be deemed waived unless the objective is itself timely raised in the trial court. Pruitt v. Tyler, 181 Ga. App. 174, 351 S.E.2d 539 (1986).

Interest of justice. — Affidavit made in opposition to a motion for summary judgment may be admitted without objection, the time of service may be waived, or the court may for some other reason find it in the interest of justice to consider the evidence. Liberty Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Houk, 157 Ga. App. 540, 278 S.E.2d 120, aff'd, 248 Ga. 111, 281 S.E.2d 583 (1981).

Procedure When Affidavits Unavailable

Purpose of subsection (f). — Subsection (f) of this section should be used to protect the opposite party when a necessary motion for continuance is made on the ground of surprise. Kiker v. Pinson, 120 Ga. App. 784, 172 S.E.2d 333 (1969).

Discretion as to continuances. — Grant or denial of a continuance is within the discretion of the trial judge, and unless clearly abused will not be interfered with. Calcutta Apts. Assocs. v. Linden & Deutsch, 131 Ga. App. 743, 206 S.E.2d 559 (1974); Patterson v. Lanham, 182 Ga. App. 343, 355 S.E.2d 738, cert. denied, 484 U.S. 913, 108 S. Ct. 260, 98 L. Ed. 2d 218 (1987).

Continuances on motion for summary judgment are within the sound discretion of the trial court. Cole v. Jordan, 158 Ga. App. 200, 279 S.E.2d 497 (1981).

Express ruling on motion for continuance is preferred. — Better practice is for the trial court to address a motion for continuance under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(f) by issuing an express ruling thereon; such a ruling, of course, can be issued as part of the court's ruling on the summary judgment motion. A ruling on a pending § 9-11-56(f) motion would be especially well advised when a motion to compel discovery is also pending. Jaraysi v. City of Marietta, 294 Ga. App. 6, 668 S.E.2d 446 (2008).

Procedure When AffidavitsUnavailable (Cont'd)

Mere possibility that some new facts may turn up is not enough to require postponement. Herring v. R.L. Mathis Certified Dairy Co., 121 Ga. App. 373, 173 S.E.2d 716, appeal dismissed, 400 U.S. 922, 91 S. Ct. 192, 27 L. Ed. 2d 183 (1970).

Affidavit as to professional malpractice. — When the plaintiff in a medical malpractice action is unable to present an affidavit of an expert witness on a motion for summary judgment, subsection (f) of this section authorizes the plaintiff to execute an affidavit to this effect and the court may, among other things, order a continuance to permit affidavits to be obtained. Larson v. Friedman & Snyder, 154 Ga. App. 702, 269 S.E.2d 532 (1980).

Affidavit as to professional malpractice. — Mandatory direction of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 that a plaintiff alleging professional malpractice “shall be required to file with the complaint” a specific expert affidavit necessarily preempts and supersedes the judicially-created rule that no plaintiff’s expert affidavit might be required in cases of malfeasance so “clear and palpable” as to be reasonably ascertained by the jury without expert evidence. Barr v. Johnson, 189 Ga. App. 136, 375 S.E.2d 51, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 911, 375 S.E.2d 51 (1988).

Denial of continuance for lack of diligence. — When the record is devoid of any discovery, requests for admissions, or notices to take depositions addressed to the party moving for summary judgment, during the period between the time the opposing party made a request for continuance pursuant to subsection (f) of this section and the time motions for summary judgment were argued at a hearing over two months later, the trial court properly entertained arguments for summary judgment in spite of a motion for continuance. Shmunis v. GMC, 146 Ga. App. 486, 246 S.E.2d 486 (1978).

It was not error to deny a continuance solely on the hope that an amnesia victim’s memory might improve to the point that the victim could remember the events at the time of the collision since the victim offered no medical or other expert evidence that this was likely to occur. Gray v. Gober, 185 Ga. App. 624, 365 S.E.2d 279 (1988).

Trial court properly denied the defendants’ motion for a continuance pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(f) in a breach of a lease agreement, as the dispute involved written leases and assignments which were not alleged to be ambiguous, and it was unclear what possible evidence employees of the successor in interest to the original lessor could provide to affect the intent of the documents. Gilco Invs., Inc. v. Stafford Cordele, LLC, 267 Ga. App. 167, 598 S.E.2d 889 (2004).

Trial court’s grant of summary judgment to a supplier on the supplier’s complaint for money due under an agreement and on account was affirmed; a defendant’s affidavit pursuant to the O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(f) continuance motion failed to specify any information that the defendant could possibly obtain to dispute the debt owed to the supplier and, thus, the trial court did not abuse the court’s discretion when the court denied the motion for a continuance. Wilson v. Edward Don & Co., 275 Ga. App. 787, 622 S.E.2d 18 (2005).

Affidavits Made in Bad Faith

Subsection (g) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 only applies when a party to a lawsuit files a motion for summary judgment and it becomes apparent that the motion was filed in bad faith or solely for the purpose of delay. Ravenwood Church v. Starbright, Inc., 168 Ga. App. 870, 310 S.E.2d 582 (1983).

Subsection (g) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 was violated when the affidavit contained statements known to be false and statements based on other than personal knowledge. Malloy v. Cauley, 169 Ga. App. 623, 314 S.E.2d 464 (1984).

Function of Trial Court

Court not to sit as judge and jury. — In no sense does this section authorize the court to sit as both judge and jury. Watkins v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 113 Ga. App. 801, 149 S.E.2d 749 (1966) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.); Kohlmeyer & Co. v. Bowan, 130 Ga. App. 386, 203 S.E.2d 630 (1973); Black v. Hamilton, 133 Ga. App. 881, 212 S.E.2d 449 (1975); Peachtree Bottle Shop, Inc. v. Bessemer Sec. Corp., 134 Ga. App. 729, 215 S.E.2d 692 (1975); Fountain v. World Fin. Corp., 144 Ga. App. 10, 240 S.E.2d 558 (1977).

Court will not resolve questions for jury. — Law relating to summary judgment does not purport to confer upon judges any greater authority to decide issues of fact normally reserved for decision by a jury than the judges possessed before the law's enactment. Yeager v. Jacobs, 111 Ga. App. 358, 141 S.E.2d 837 (1965) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Questions as to diligence and negligence, including contributory negligence, are questions peculiarly for the jury, and the court will decline to resolve the questions except in plain and indisputable cases. Haire v. City of Macon, 200 Ga. App. 744, 409 S.E.2d 670, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 896, 409 S.E.2d 670 (1991).

Function in ruling on motions for summary judgment and directed verdict analogous. — Trial court's function in ruling on a motion for summary judgment is analogous to the function the court performs when ruling on a motion for directed verdict. McCarty v. National Life & Accident Ins. Co., 107 Ga. App. 178, 129 S.E.2d 408 (1962); Standard Accident Ins. Co. v. Ingalls Iron Works Co., 109 Ga. App. 574, 136 S.E.2d 505 (1964); Chandler v. Gately, 119 Ga. App. 513, 167 S.E.2d 697 (1969); W.J. Bremer, Inc. v. United Bonding Ins. Co., 122 Ga. App. 183, 176 S.E.2d 633 (1970) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Court only to determine if issues of fact exist. — Cardinal rule of summary judgment procedure is that the court may not resolve facts nor reconcile issues, but may only look to ascertain if there is an issue. Suggs v. Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, 104 Ga. App. 219, 121 S.E.2d 661 (1961) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.), overruled on other grounds, Benefield v. Malone, 110 Ga. App. 607, 139 S.E.2d 500 (1964); Fountain v. World Fin. Corp., 144 Ga. App. 10, 240 S.E.2d 558 (1977); Woodstock Rd. Inv. Properties v. Lacy, 149 Ga. App. 593, 254 S.E.2d 910 (1979); Scroggins v. Whitfield Fin. Co., 152 Ga. App. 8, 262 S.E.2d 168 (1979); Aiken v. Drexler Shower Door Co., 155 Ga. App. 436, 270 S.E.2d 831 (1980); Jonesboro Tool & Die Corp. v. Georgia Power Co., 158 Ga. App. 755, 282 S.E.2d 211 (1981); Foskey v. Smith, 159 Ga. App. 163, 283 S.E.2d 33 (1981).

On summary judgment, the court is concerned only with whether there is a genuine issue of fact for determination, and not with the difficulty a party opposing the motion may have in proving the party's case. Rigby v. Powell, 233 Ga. 158, 210 S.E.2d 696 (1974).

Only authorized function of court is to determine existence of genuine issue of fact. — On motion for summary judgment, court is not authorized to try and resolve issues of fact; function of the court, and the court's only authorized function under this procedure, is to determine existence of a genuine issue of material fact. Watkins v. Nationwide Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 113 Ga. App. 801, 149 S.E.2d 749 (1966) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.); Kohlmeyer & Co. v. Bowan, 130 Ga. App. 386, 203 S.E.2d 630 (1973); Black v. Hamilton, 133 Ga. App. 881, 212 S.E.2d 449 (1975); Peachtree Bottle Shop, Inc. v. Bessemer Sec. Corp., 134 Ga. App. 729, 215 S.E.2d 692 (1975); Fountain v. World Fin. Corp., 144 Ga. App. 10, 240 S.E.2d 558 (1977); Porter v. Moschella, 152 Ga. App. 678, 263 S.E.2d 538 (1979).

In ruling on a motion for summary judgment, the court does not try the case but merely determines from the record whether there are any genuine issues of fact. Flanders v. Columbia Nitrogen Corp., 135 Ga. App. 21, 217 S.E.2d 363 (1975).

In ruling on a motion for summary judgment, a trial court is not empowered to resolve disputed issues of material fact but merely to determine if such issues exist for resolution. Colquitt County Hosp. Auth. v. Health Star, Inc., 262 Ga. 285, 417 S.E.2d 147 (1992).

Credibility of affidavits. — On motion for summary judgment, court is not concerned with the credibility of affidavits, only with whether the affidavits show the existence of a genuine issue of fact. Ussery v. Koch, 115 Ga. App. 463, 154 S.E.2d 879 (1967); Mullis v. Merit Fin. Co., 116 Ga. App. 582, 158 S.E.2d 415 (1967).

Court cannot weigh evidence or determine credibility. — On summary judgment proceedings, the court is not in a position to weigh the evidence or determine the evidence's credibility. When the facts alleged in the affidavits clearly create a conflict in the evidence as to a material issue, summary judgment is precluded. HOH Co. v. Ethridge, 168 Ga. App. 20, 308 S.E.2d 43 (1983).

It is within the discretion of the trial judge to consider a renewed motion for summary judgment even without an expansion of the record. Premium Distrib. Co. v. National Distrib. Co., 157 Ga. App. 666, 278 S.E.2d 468 (1981).

Findings and conclusions not required. — Trial court is not required to enter findings of fact and conclusions of law in ruling on a motion for summary judgment. Nelson v. Mexicana de Jugo y Sabores, 139 Ga. App. 612, 229 S.E.2d 102 (1976); Healthdyne, Inc. v. Henry, 144 Ga. App. 52, 240 S.E.2d 259 (1977); Victor v. First Trust & Deposit Co., 154 Ga. App. 97, 267 S.E.2d 639 (1980); Thomas v. DeKalb County, 227 Ga. App. 186, 489 S.E.2d 58 (1997).

Fact that the trial court's order granting the defendant's motion for summary judgment does not affirmatively indicate that the court considered the record is not cause for reversal, nor is it necessary to include findings of fact and conclusions of law on decisions on motions for summary judgment. Fudge v. Colonial Baking Co., 186 Ga. App. 582, 367 S.E.2d 814 (1988).

An entry of findings of fact and conclusions of law was not necessary in a case where the trial court granted summary judgment to the defendants on all five of the plaintiff's tortious claims against the defendants, even though one of the defendants filed a counterclaim upon which the trial court did not rule; furthermore, the plaintiff made no showing that it was practical for the trial court to do so. Kuruvila v. Mulcahy, 264 Ga. App. 626, 591 S.E.2d 491 (2003).

No error in entering findings of fact. — Mere entry of findings of fact and conclusions of law in ruling on a motion for summary judgment does not constitute error per se. In certain cases when the trial court makes findings of fact and conclusions of law in ruling on motions for summary judgment, it can be helpful to the appellate courts and instructive to the parties. Harrell v. Louis Smith Mem. Hosp., 197 Ga. App. 189, 397 S.E.2d 746 (1990).

Presumption that court performs duty. — It is presumed that the trial judge, as a public official, faithfully and lawfully performed the duties devolving upon the judge by law. Smith v. Jones, 154 Ga. App. 629, 269 S.E.2d 471 (1980).

Court may decide issue of fraud in undisputed cases. — Although the question of fraud is ordinarily within the province of the jury, in plain and undisputed cases it is proper that the determination be made by the court. The trial court does not err in such a case in granting a motion for summary judgment upon the issue of fraud. Horton v. Middle Ga. Bank, 191 Ga. App. 51, 380 S.E.2d 749 (1989).

Appealability and Finality1. In General

Subsection (h) is peculiar to this state and does not appear in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Bush v. City of Albany, 125 Ga. App. 558, 188 S.E.2d 245 (1972).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h) must be read in conjunction with O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-34 and 5-6-35 regarding the procedure for appeal to this court. Jarrett v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 178 Ga. App. 600, 344 S.E.2d 440 (1986).

Defendant's direct appeal from a trial court's grant of partial summary judgment in favor of the plaintiff was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction because an application to appeal under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-35(a) was required but not submitted and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h) did not provide for direct appeals from all grants of summary judgment, but had to be read in conjunction with O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-34 and 5-6-35. Bullock v. Sand, 260 Ga. App. 874, 581 S.E.2d 333 (2003).

Exception to finality rule. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h) is an exception to the finality rule which is for the benefit of the losing party, and when the losing party appeals after the rendition of the final judgment, the grant of summary judgment is still subject to appellate review. Although a trial court properly dismissed a mechanic's negligence claim, the mechanic's fraud claim, the mechanic's reduction in force claim, and certain of the mechanic's wage claims as time barred, since each paycheck which failed to pay all wages due was a new violation, the trial court erred in dismissing the balance of the mechanic's wage claims. Willis v. City of Atlanta, 265 Ga. App. 640, 595 S.E.2d 339 (2004).

Section controlling in determining appealability. — Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56), being the last expression of legislative intent, controls over former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34) as to the appealability or reviewability of a motion for summary judgment. Young v. Reese, 118 Ga. App. 114, 162 S.E.2d 831 (1968).

Right to direct appeal under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h) is for the losing party's benefit and is in addition to the party's right to appeal after the resolution of the entire case. Gresham Park Community Org. v. Howell, 652 F.2d 1227 (5th Cir. 1981).

De novo review. — Appellate court's review of an appeal from summary judgment is de novo. Mohamud v. Wachovia Corp., 260 Ga. App. 612, 580 S.E.2d 259 (2003).

Partial summary judgment. — Subsection (h) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 includes an order for partial summary judgment. Crolley v. Haygood Contracting, Inc., 207 Ga. App. 434, 429 S.E.2d 93 (1993).

Subsection (h) inapplicable to motions to set aside and vacate judgments. — Subsection (h) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56) is not applicable to motions to set aside and vacate judgments authorized by Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27 and 30 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)). Farr v. Farr, 120

Ga. App. 762, 172 S.E.2d 158 (1969).

Voluntary dismissal not appealable judgment. — Plaintiff's own voluntary dismissal with prejudice of counts of the plaintiff's complaint did not constitute a final, appealable judgment for purposes of appellate review of rulings on the partial grant of summary judgment entered by the trial court more than 30 days from the filing of the notice of appeal. Studdard v. Satcher, Chick, Kapfer, Inc., 217 Ga. App. 1, 456 S.E.2d 71 (1995).

In an action on a credit card contract brought by a creditor, the debtor's voluntary dismissal of an appeal from an order granting the creditor summary judgment before the case was ever docketed served to dismiss the debtor's direct appeal, even though the trial court did not enter a formal dismissal order; thus, the appellate court lacked jurisdiction to hear the issue, and a payment of appeal costs became moot. Ghee v. Target Nat'l Bank, 282 Ga. App. 28, 637 S.E.2d 742 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 62 (Ga. 2007), 552 U.S. 859, 128 S. Ct. 141, 169 L.Ed.2d 97 (2007).

Question before appellate court. — In reviewing the grant of a motion for summary judgment, the question before the appellate court is whether allegations of the pleadings have been pierced so that no genuine issue of material fact remains. Duke Enters., Inc. v. Espy, 140 Ga. App. 527, 231 S.E.2d 522 (1976).

On review of summary judgment, the first essential question for determination by the appellate court is whether a genuine issue of material fact exists which should be decided by a jury; if no jury issue is found to exist, the next query is whether the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law after each party has an opportunity to make out their case. Hayes v. Brown, 108 Ga. App. 360, 133 S.E.2d 102 (1963) (decided under former Ga. L. 1959, p. 234, § 1 et seq.).

Entire record reviewed on appeal. — Appellate court does not err in examining all the material of record to determine if there remain any issues for trial. City of Rome v. Turk, 235 Ga. 223, 219 S.E.2d 97 (1975).

On consideration of summary judgments, the appellate court must look at the entire record. Lawson v. Duke Oil Co., 155 Ga. App. 363, 270 S.E.2d 898 (1980).

Appealability and Finality (Cont'd)

Trial court did not err in concluding that the record upon which the summary judgment was based would be necessary for appellate review as the obligation of both the trial court and the appellate court is to consider the entire record when such a motion is ruled on. Sumner v. First Union Nat'l Bank, 200 Ga. App. 729, 409 S.E.2d 212, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 897, 409 S.E.2d 212 (1991).

Pleadings considered on appeal. — On review of grant of summary judgment, reviewing court's consideration of the pleadings, as amended, is required, whether specifically argued or not. Alexander v. Boston Old Colony Ins. Co., 127 Ga. App. 783, 195 S.E.2d 277 (1972).

Additional evidence may not be admitted on appeal. — Appellate courts will only review evidence presented to the trial court before the court's ruling on the motion, and additional evidence will not be admitted on appeal. Meade v. Heimanson, 239 Ga. 177, 236 S.E.2d 357 (1977); Stephens v. Tate, 147 Ga. App. 366, 249 S.E.2d 92 (1978).

Prior objection by nonmoving party not required. — Issue in an appeal from the grant of summary judgment is whether the movant met the burden established by subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 and, in addressing that issue on appeal, the nonmoving party is entitled to advance all arguments without regard to whether the arguments were raised by way of objections below. Dental One Assocs. v. JKR Realty Assocs., 269 Ga. 616, 501 S.E.2d 497 (1998).

Objection to errors not prerequisite to review. — It is not a prerequisite for the review of enumerated errors that the plaintiff object to or make an issue of these errors at trial below, when the alleged errors are asserted as reasons why the trial court should not have granted the motion for summary judgment. Southern Protective Prods. Co. v. Leasing Int'l, Inc., 134 Ga. App. 945, 216 S.E.2d 725 (1975); Binswanger Glass Co. v. Beers Constr. Co., 141 Ga. App. 715, 234 S.E.2d 363

(1977); Griffin v. Wittfeld, 143 Ga. App. 485, 238 S.E.2d 589 (1977).

Absent particularized enumerations of error only denial of motion as to whole case determined. — When the appellant fails to enumerate any error on the trial court's omission to make an order specifying whether certain facts appear without substantial controversy, the appellate court can determine only whether the court below erred in denying the summary judgment motion as to the whole case. Ireland v. Matthews, 120 Ga. App. 510, 171 S.E.2d 387 (1969).

When the motion for summary judgment sets out that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and thus seeks judgment as to the whole case, and enumeration of error likewise is with regard to summary judgment in toto and makes no mention of any partial recovery, the appellate court can determine only whether the trial court erred in denying the motion as to the whole case. Borden, Inc. v. Barker, 124 Ga. App. 291, 183 S.E.2d 597 (1971).

Credibility not considered on appeal. — On motions for summary judgment, the appellate court cannot consider the credibility of witnesses or their affidavits, and a jury must resolve the question and the conflicts in the evidence which it produces. Miller v. Douglas, 235 Ga. 222, 219 S.E.2d 144 (1975).

Appellate court on review of summary judgment is not concerned with the credibility of affidavits, but only with whether the affidavits show the existence of a genuine issue of fact. Ussery v. Koch, 115 Ga. App. 463, 154 S.E.2d 879 (1967).

Reversal of order overruling summary judgment motion. — When the trial court overrules a motion for summary judgment, the appellate court will not reverse, unless from the entire record construed against the movant it appears that there is an absence of any genuine issue as to all material facts and that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Black v. Hamilton, 133 Ga. App. 881, 212 S.E.2d 449 (1975).

When no ruling invoked, no question for review. — There was no error in the trial court's failure to allow the plaintiff's expert's affidavit to be supplemented when the plaintiff never made a motion to supplement the affidavit, because when no ruling is invoked in the trial court ordinarily there is no question for review in appellate courts. Crawford v. Phillips, 173 Ga. App. 517, 326 S.E.2d 593 (1985).

Motion for new trial is not proper vehicle to obtain reexamination of the legal conclusions solely involved in a grant of summary judgment. Sands v. Lamar Properties, Inc., 159 Ga. App. 718, 285 S.E.2d 24 (1981).

When trial court has considered dispositions, appellate court will not say that the trial court did not do so. Porter Coatings v. Stein Steel & Supply Co., 157 Ga. App. 260, 277 S.E.2d 272, aff'd, 247 Ga. 631, 278 S.E.2d 377 (1981).

Order granting plaintiff's motion for partial summary judgment on the issue of the defendant's liability on an insurance policy was interlocutory, not res judicata as to the issues resolved therein, and subject to revision by the trial court at any time prior to final judgment, as by admitting evidence in support of a defense to liability which in substance vacated or set aside the court's previous order. Glover v. J.C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co., 181 Ga. App. 753, 353 S.E.2d 587 (1987).

Res judicata defense based on prior summary judgment in malpractice case. — When a prior summary judgment for an attorney in a legal malpractice action was based on a recognition that, regardless of the applicability of any pleading requirements imposed by the subsequently enacted provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1, the client's failure to have complied with the evidentiary requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 nevertheless mandated the grant of summary judgment on the merits, the attorney's res judicata defense in a subsequent action was viable and the trial court erred in failing to grant the attorney's motion for summary judgment based upon that viable defense. Robinson v. Starr, 197 Ga. App. 440, 398 S.E.2d 714 (1990).

Evidence sufficient to demand judgment for defendant. See Peppers v. Veres, 168 Ga. App. 367, 309 S.E.2d 388 (1983).

In an action by a physician for termination of the physician's hospital privileges, grant of the physician's motion seeking a determination that the defendants breached the hospital bylaws, which did not include a ruling that the physician was entitled to recover on the physician's claim, was not a grant of summary judgment subject to direct appeal. Saint Francis Hosp. v. Patton, 228 Ga. App. 544, 492 S.E.2d 303 (1997).

Appeal dismissed absent evidence that exception to finality rule applied. — Because the trial court's order was best viewed as an order dismissing the plaintiffs' complaint for failure to comply with the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-17, and summary judgment could not properly be granted to a defendant on the basis of a real-party-in-interest objection, absent any evidence that an exception to the final judgment rule applied, the appeal from the trial court's order had to be dismissed. First Christ Holiness Church, Inc. v. Owens Temple First Christ Holiness Church, Inc., 282 Ga. 883, 655 S.E.2d 605 (2008).

Appeal dismissed as untimely filed. — Motion to dismiss an appeal on grounds that the appealing party failed to timely appeal an order granting summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-6-38(a) was granted; moreover, the appeal was not taken from the final judgment entered in the case. Patterson v. Bristol Timber Co., 286 Ga. App. 423, 649 S.E.2d 795 (2007).

Malicious prosecution claim by priest. — Trial court did not err in granting summary judgment to a property owner on the priest's malicious prosecution claim as probable cause existed to prosecute the priest since a police officer saw the priest violate a restraining order by committing a criminal trespass and by threatening another person; probable cause also existed because the two restraining order violations arose out of the same incident and were reasonably related even though the criminal charge for aggravated stalking arising out of the threat's made to the property owner's employee was later merged into another offense. Holmes v. Achor Ctr., Inc., 260 Ga. App. 882, 581 S.E.2d 390 (2003).

Subcontractor's action. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a property owner after the subcontractor sued the property owner so that the subcontractor could perfect its materialman's lien against the property owner's property as the subcontractor's method of providing notice of the lien to the property owner did not comply with applicable statutory law, O.C.G.A. § 44-14-361.1(a)(2), since that statute expressly allowed the lien notice to be provided to the property owner by registered mail, certified mail, or statutory overnight delivery, and not through the facsimile transmission that the subcontractor used, especially since the facsimile transmission was not the equivalent method of providing notice as those methods set forth in the statute. Phillips, Inc. v. Historic Props. of Am., 260 Ga. App. 886, 581 S.E.2d 389 (2003).

Employment contract. — Trial court properly granted partial summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 to an employer on an employee's action alleging breach of an employment contract, holding that the employee could only recover wages payable up to the time of trial; O.C.G.A. § 10-6-37 provided that in all employment contracts for a definite duration, an employee could sue for the value of the services rendered, or could wait until the expiration of the year and sue for and recover the employee's entire wages, and in this action the employee elected to affirm the contract and bring an immediate suit for damages based upon the company's alleged breach thereof, and under this option, the employee only had the right to prove, and to recover for, all damages which may have accrued up to the date of the trial. Harvey v. J. H. Harvey Co., 276 Ga. 762, 582 S.E.2d 88 (2003).

Tortious interference with inheritance. — Trial court properly granted summary judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 to the defendants in the plaintiffs' action alleging tortious interference with an inheritance and other claims arising out of transfers of land to defendants as the parties' mother was still alive, and therefore the plaintiffs had no standing to bring such an action, and because the plaintiffs' claims were barred by collateral estoppel; the trial court erred in denying the defendants' summary judgment motion as to claims raised by a guardian because no claims were actually raised by the guardian. Copelan v. Copelan, 261 Ga. App. 726, 583 S.E.2d 562 (2003).

Summary judgment appropriate as county did not waive immunity. — Trial court properly entered summary judgment for a county as to two injured parties' tort claims as the county's self-insurance plan for certain claims did not constitute a waiver of the county's sovereign immunity because the county did not purchase a motor vehicle liability insurance policy — a requirement under O.C.G.A. § 33-24-51(b); there is no statute which provides that by establishing a self-insurance plan, a county waives sovereign immunity. Smith v. Chatham County, 264 Ga. App. 566, 591 S.E.2d 388 (2003).

2. Grant of Summary Judgment

Legislative intent. — Clear and last expression of legislative intent with respect to appeals from grants of summary judgments, as expressed in Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 56 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h)), was to except summary judgments from general appealability provisions of former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34) and to allow appeal when summary judgment was granted on any issue or as to any party, even though the case is still pending within the purview of former Code 1933, § 6-701. McLeod v. Westmoreland, 117 Ga. App. 659, 161 S.E.2d 335 (1968).

Subsection (h) as exception to rule requiring final judgment for appeal. — Grant of summary judgment is an exception to rule requiring final judgment in order to appeal. Whisenhunt v. Allen Parker Co., 119 Ga. App. 813, 168 S.E.2d 827 (1969).

Although generally an appeal is premature when a case remains pending, subsection (h) of this section makes the grant of summary judgment an exception to the rule requiring a final judgment in order to appeal. Overstreet v. Doctors Hosp., 142 Ga. App. 895, 237 S.E.2d 213 (1977).

Subsection (h) of this section states an exception to the finality rule which is for the benefit of the losing party. Culwell v. Lomas & Nettleton Co., 242 Ga. 242, 248 S.E.2d 641 (1978); Bozard v. J.A. Jones Constr. Co., 148 Ga. App. 425, 251 S.E.2d 362 (1978).

Subsection (h) of this section gives the losing party the right to direct appeal from an order granting summary judgment on any issue, even if judgment is not final, as when the order disposes of fewer than all claims; this is also true when an appeal is from the grant of partial summary judgment. Sapp v. ABC Credit & Inv. Co., 243 Ga. 151, 253 S.E.2d 82 (1979).

Under subsection (h) of this section, grant of summary judgment is excepted from rule requiring final judgment as to all parties and claims before an appeal may be taken. Capital Bank v. Levy, 151 Ga. App. 819, 261 S.E.2d 722 (1979).

Subsection (h) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, which permits direct appeal from any grant of summary judgment, is an exception to the finality rule expressed in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54. Edwards v. Davis, 160 Ga. App. 122, 286 S.E.2d 301 (1981).

Grant of partial summary judgment is an appealable order. Cohen v. Garland, 119 Ga. App. 333, 167 S.E.2d 599 (1969); Thomas v. McGee, 242 Ga. 441, 249 S.E.2d 242 (1978); Tri-County Feed & Seed, Inc. v. Savannah Valley Prod. Credit Ass'n, 158 Ga. App. 815, 282 S.E.2d 344 (1981).

Dismissal of an owner's appeal of a summary judgment on a breach of contract and fraud complaint was improper since the complaint was amended to include a negligence count hours before a summary judgment on the fraud and breach of contract claims was filed, and therefore entered pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58(b) (although the summary judgment order had been signed the previous day); the negligence claim was pending at the time that the summary judgment was entered, and although the summary judgment was subject to a direct appeal by the owner, the owner was not required to file an appeal at that time under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h). Liberty v. Storage Trust Props., L.P., 267 Ga. App. 905, 600 S.E.2d 841 (2004).

Grant of the plaintiff's motion for partial summary judgment to the effect that a contract with the defendant was valid was not a final judgment and left the action pending below, but was directly appealable nevertheless under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h) without a certificate of immediate review under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b). Jack V. Heard Contractors, Inc. v. Adams Constr. Co., 155 Ga. App. 409, 271 S.E.2d 222, overruled on other grounds, South-east Ceramics, Inc. v. Klem, 156 Ga. App. 636, 275 S.E.2d 723 (1980).

Time for appeal. — Appeal of partial summary judgment for the plaintiff must be filed within 30 days and is not extended by a motion for reconsideration. Becker v. Fairman, 167 Ga. App. 708, 307 S.E.2d 520 (1983); Jones v. Walker, 209 Ga. App. 532, 433 S.E.2d 726 (1993).

While a plaintiff can appeal directly an order granting summary judgment as to the main action, when the plaintiff fails to do so within 30 days, thereafter it can only appeal that order after final judgment. Gulf Oil Co. v. Mantegna, 167 Ga. App. 844, 307 S.E.2d 732 (1983).

Grant of summary judgment on one count of three-count petition is directly appealable, though remaining counts are still pending in trial court. Ferguson v. United Ins. Co. of Am., 163 Ga. App. 282, 293 S.E.2d 736 (1982).

Summary judgment on any issue or as to any party may be appealed. Whisenhunt v. Allen Parker Co., 119 Ga. App. 813, 168 S.E.2d 827 (1969).

Submission of specific issue on appeal permitted. — Subsection (h) of this section permits submission of a specific issue to the appellate court. Bush v. City of Albany, 125 Ga. App. 558, 188 S.E.2d 245 (1972).

Summary judgment for one of parties defendant appealable. — Order granting summary judgment in behalf of one of the parties defendant was appealable under subsection (h) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56) and under former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34), even though the case was still pending. George v. Lee, 118 Ga. App. 302, 163 S.E.2d 262 (1968).

Summary judgment only final when entire case disposed of. — Grant of motion for summary judgment is appealable, but such grant constitutes final judgment only if it disposes of the entire case and the case is no longer pending in the court below. Insurance Co. of N. Am. v. Fowler, 148 Ga. App. 509, 251 S.E.2d 594 (1978).

Direct appeal even though judgment is not final. — Subsection (h) of Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56) gives the losing party the right to a direct appeal from an order granting summary judgment on any issue or as to any party, even if the judgment was not final under former Code 1933, § 6-701 or Ga. L. 1976, p. 1047, § 2 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-34(a)(1) or 9-11-54(b)). Bozard v. J.A. Jones Constr. Co., 148 Ga. App. 425, 251 S.E.2d 362 (1978); Southern Guar. Ins. Co. v. Jeffares, 190 Ga. App. 449, 379 S.E.2d 167, overruled on other grounds, Strozier v. Simmons U.S.A. Corp., 192 Ga. App. 601, 385 S.E.2d 677 (1989).

Right to review lost by failure to appeal. — After the trial court certified that summary judgment in favor of three of four defendants was final and ripe for review, the plaintiff lost the plaintiff's right to obtain appellate review by failing to file a timely notice of appeal, even though the plaintiff had filed a motion for reconsideration. Jarallah v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., 199 Ga. App. 592, 405 S.E.2d 510 (1991).

Subsection (d) covers adjudication of less than all issues. — Rule embodied in subsection (d) of this section is designed to cover situations where the court makes partial adjudication of some but not all issues presented as, for example, when there is more than one claim for relief and the movant is entitled to favorable judgment on some of the claims, but on others there are disputed issues of fact necessitating trial. Finney v. Pan-Am. Fire & Cas. Co., 123 Ga. App. 250, 180 S.E.2d 253 (1971).

Interlocutory order establishing facts not in controversy permitted. — This section provides that when a party applies for summary judgment on the entire case or on one claim when several claims for recovery are pleaded or on a counterclaim or cross-claim, and the trial judge finds that summary judgment as to the entire case, claim, counterclaim, or cross-claim is not appropriate, the judge is authorized to enter an interlocutory order establishing for trial those facts which are without substantial controversy. Robinson v. Franwylie, Inc., 145 Ga. App. 507, 244 S.E.2d 73 (1978).

Power of judge to reassess interlocutory order. — As with a pretrial order entered under Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 5 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16), a trial judge retains full power to reassess an interlocutory order entered under subsection (d) of Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56) and to make one complete adjudication on all aspects of the case when the proper time arrives. Robinson v. Franwylie, Inc., 145 Ga. App. 507, 244 S.E.2d 73 (1978).

Temporary adjudication of lack of issues. — Under subsection (d) of this section, trial judge may adjudicate temporarily the lack of issues until a final judgment in the case. Mays v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 132 Ga. App. 602, 208 S.E.2d 614 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Mock v. Canterbury Realty Co., 152 Ga. App. 872, 264 S.E.2d 489 (1980).

Adjudication on less than all claims or parties remains interlocutory absent court's determination. — In a case involving multiple claims or parties, when the trial court fully adjudicates one or more but fewer than all claims or rights and liabilities of fewer than all parties, the court can make an adjudication under subsection (d) of Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56) final by making express determination and direction called for by Ga. L. 1976, p. 1047, § 2 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b)); however, failing to do that, the adjudication remains interlocutory. Robinson v. Franwylie, Inc., 145 Ga. App. 507, 244 S.E.2d 73 (1978).

Adjudication of nondispositive issues not authorized. — Subsection (d) of this section does not authorize initiation of motions of which the sole object is to adjudicate issues of fact which are not dispositive of any claim or part thereof. Robinson v. Franwylie, Inc., 145 Ga. App.

507, 244 S.E.2d 73 (1978); Planet Ins. Co. v. Ferrell, 228 Ga. App. 264, 491 S.E.2d 471 (1997).

Losing party who commits procedural default is foreclosed from re-submitting matter for review. — If a losing party suffers dismissal of the party's O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h) appeal for failure to fulfill procedural requirements, the losing party should, in return for that party's privilege of direct appeal, suffer the same sanction of res judicata which attaches to a final judgment from which a procedurally defective appeal is taken; therefore, a losing party on summary judgment who puts the machinery of immediate appellate review under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h) into motion, yet commits a procedural default fatal to the losing party's appeal, is foreclosed from thereafter resubmitting the matter for review on appeal of the final judgment. Eckerd Corp. v. Alterman Real Estate, Ltd., 266 Ga. App. 860, 598 S.E.2d 510 (2004).

Opposing party may appeal after grant of summary judgment or final judgment. — Party against whom summary judgment is granted may appeal either after grant of summary judgment or after rendition of final judgment, and when the party appeals after rendition of final judgment, the grant of summary judgment is still subject to appellate review. Culwell v. Lomas & Nettleton Co., 242 Ga. 242, 248 S.E.2d 641 (1978); Bozard v. J.A. Jones Constr. Co., 148 Ga. App. 425, 251 S.E.2d 362 (1978).

Defendant's motion to dismiss a party is normally appealable only as an interlocutory appeal, but as a grant of a motion for summary judgment it is directly appealable under subsection (h) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56. McMullan v. Georgia Girl Fashions, Inc., 180 Ga. App. 228, 348 S.E.2d 748 (1986).

Only if co-defendants are sued as joint tort-feasors does the grant of summary judgment as to one potentially affect the other's rights of contribution. Therefore, it is only in this situation that the co-defendant would be deemed a losing party and have standing to appeal the grant of summary judgment to another co-defendant. C.W. Matthews Contracting Co. v. Studard, 201 Ga. App. 741, 412 S.E.2d 539 (1991).

Pending claims. — Party may appeal grant of summary judgment after rendition of final judgment in the case, and the summary judgment is not res judicata as to any other claims which had remained pending. Ramseur v. American Mgt. Ass'n, 155 Ga. App. 340, 270 S.E.2d 880 (1980).

Order as to ex delicto claims not final if ex contractu claim pending. — Order granting the defendant's motion to strike certain ex delicto allegations and the prayers of the plaintiff's complaint was not final when the appellant's ex contractu claim was still pending and, accordingly, the order was not directly appealable. Whatley v. Blue Cross of Ga./Columbus, Inc., 165 Ga. App. 340, 301 S.E.2d 60 (1983).

Grant of motion for summary judgment in Civil Court of Bibb County can be appealed directly to the Court of Appeals. Middle Ga. Bank v. Continental Real Estate & Assocs., 168 Ga. App. 611, 309 S.E.2d 893 (1983).

Grant of summary judgment held erroneous. — Trial court erred in granting the appellee's motion for summary judgment and in failing to grant the appellant's motion for summary judgment. Georgia Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co. v. DeKalb County, 167 Ga. App. 577, 306 S.E.2d 924 (1983).

On de novo review of a decision granting summary judgment to a consulting firm in an action against the firm by a hotel franchisee alleging negligence and negligent misrepresentation, it was error to grant summary judgment to the firm when the franchisee submitted an affidavit from an expert that demonstrated familiarity with the standard of care required of the consulting firm in performing an impact study and that concluded the firm breached that duty. The questions surrounding the expert's factual accuracies and conclusions were issues for trial, not summary judgment. Marquis Towers, Inc. v. Highland Group, 265 Ga. App. 343, 593 S.E.2d 903 (2004).

Summary judgment on partial issues held proper. — Summary judgment was properly entered on fraud claim as such claim was time-barred; but, when fact issues remained as to a foreclosure allegedly resulting from a non-existent debt, slandering the title to the underlying property, summary judgment was reversed as to these claims. Boaz v. Latson, 260 Ga. App. 752, 580 S.E.2d 572 (2003).

Judgment final only when entire case disposed of. — Because a partial taking condemnation order did not consist of a viable grant of partial summary judgment, and was not otherwise a final appealable judgment within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a), but the parties could have appealed by complying with the relevant interlocutory appeal requirements but did not do so, the appeals court lacked jurisdiction to consider either the appeal or the cross-appeal; moreover, the superior court's rulings on the admissibility of certain evidence constituted no judgment on the merits of any part of the appealing party's claim for just and adequate compensation. Forest City Gun Club v. Chatham County, 280 Ga. App. 219, 633 S.E.2d 623 (2006).

Court of appeals had appellate jurisdiction to review the grant of summary judgment in favor of a bank on the bank's conversion claim against a real estate firm because the grant of summary judgment was directly appealable under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h), and the firm's cross-appeal of that grant of summary judgment could stand on its own merits; because the court of appeals had jurisdiction to review the grant of summary judgment in favor of the bank on the bank's conversion claim, the court also had jurisdiction pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(d) to review the denial of the firm's motion for summary judgment on that same issue. Trey Inman & Assocs., P.C. v. Bank of Am., N.A., 306 Ga. App. 451, 702 S.E.2d 711 (2010).

3. Denial of Summary Judgment

Editor's notes. — As originally enacted by Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 56, subsection (h) of this section provided that an order denying summary judgment was not appealable. The subsequent amendment by Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 25, stated that denial of summary judgment was not subject to review by direct appeal or otherwise unless the trial judge certified within ten days that such order should be subject to review, in which case it would be subject to review by direct appeal. The 1975 amendment by Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 made an order denying summary judgment subject to review by direct appeal in accordance with § 5-6-34(b). The latter section provides for review of an order, decision, or judgment not otherwise subject to direct appeal if the trial judge certifies that such order, etc., is of such importance that immediate review should be had, and if the appellate court, on application, permits an appeal to be taken. Hence, decisions dealing with appealability of denial of summary judgment should be consulted with care, with particular attention to the dates on which such decisions were rendered.

Denial of motion not final judgment. — Denial of motion for summary judgment is not a final judgment. Giordano v. Stubbs, 129 Ga. App. 283, 199 S.E.2d 322 (1973), rev'd on other grounds, Summer-Minter & Assocs. v. Giordano, 231 Ga. 601, 203 S.E.2d 173 (1974).

Denial not appealable unless certain conditions are met. — Grant of motion for summary judgment is subject to direct appeal, but denial of such motion is not appealable unless certain conditions are met. Southeast Ceramics, Inc. v. Klem, 246 Ga. 294, 271 S.E.2d 199 (1980).

Procedure in § 5-6-34(b) held requisite to appeal. — Order denying summary judgment must be appealed in accordance with former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b)). First Nat'l Bank v. Ferrell, 239 Ga. 8, 235 S.E.2d 507 (1977).

Denial of a motion for summary judgment is not subject to review by direct appeal, except on the grant of permission to appeal as set out in former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b)). Johnston-Willis Hosp. v. Cain, 142 Ga. App. 305, 236 S.E.2d 374 (1977).

Appealability of denial of motion governed by subsection (h) and § 5-6-34(b). — Denial of motion for summary judgment was not reviewable other than by procedures set forth in former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b)) and subsection (h) of Ga. L.

1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56). Vaughn & Co. v. Saul, 143 Ga. App. 74, 237 S.E.2d 622 (1977).

Observance of interlocutory review procedures required. — No appeal lies from denial of a motion for summary judgment, standing alone, unless an interlocutory review procedure is observed. U.S.I.F. Atlanta Corp. v. Paul, 138 Ga. App. 625, 227 S.E.2d 90 (1976).

Appeal of other issues when appeal of summary judgment. — When direct appeal of the grant of summary judgment is taken, any other judgments, rulings, or orders rendered in the case and which may affect the proceedings below may be raised on appeal including the denial of a motion for summary judgment. Southeast Ceramics, Inc. v. Klem, 246 Ga. 294, 271 S.E.2d 199 (1980).

Cross appeal of denial of motion. — Denial of motion for summary judgment may be carried up as a cross appeal to appeal by the opposite party of a grant of a motion for summary judgment. Southeast Ceramics, Inc. v. Klem, 246 Ga. 294, 271 S.E.2d 199 (1980). But see, Campbell v. Carroll, 121 Ga. App. 497, 174 S.E.2d 375 (1970).

Availability of direct appeal irrelevant to interlocutory appeal decision. — As the losing party on cross-motions for summary judgment, the defendant was entitled to proceed under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b) to seek an interlocutory appeal from the denial of its motion or, in the alternative, to file a direct appeal from the grant of the plaintiff's motion pursuant to subsection (h) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56. Because the defendant elected to invoke the interlocutory appeal procedure, the mere availability of the alternative of the direct appeal procedure would not be a factor in determining whether to grant an interlocutory appeal. Southeastern Sec. Ins. Co. v. Empire Banking Co., 268 Ga. 450, 490 S.E.2d 372 (1997).

Denial of summary judgment moot after trial of case. — Verdict and judgment appealed from after trial renders moot the order on a prior motion for summary judgment not certified and appealed as required by subsection (h) of this section. Old Equity Life Ins. Co. v. Barnard, 120 Ga. App. 596, 171 S.E.2d 636 (1969).

Order denying motion for summary judgment becomes moot when court reviews evidence upon trial of the case. Patterson v. Castellaw, 119 Ga. App. 712, 168 S.E.2d 838 (1969).

After verdict and judgment, it is too late to review judgment denying summary judgment. Pascoe Steel Corp. v. Turner County Bd. of Educ., 142 Ga. App. 88, 235 S.E.2d 554, rev'd on other grounds in part, vacated on other grounds in part, 240 Ga. 88, 239 S.E.2d 517 (1977); Gosnell v. Waldrup, 158 Ga. App. 685, 282 S.E.2d 168 (1981).

After verdict and judgment have been entered, the Court of Appeals cannot review a judgment denying a motion for summary judgment because that issue became moot when the court heard evidence at trial. Preferred Risk Mut. Ins. Co. v. Thomas, 153 Ga. App. 154, 264 S.E.2d 662 (1980).

After verdict and judgment, it is too late to review a decision denying a summary judgment motion for that judgment becomes moot when the court reviews the evidence upon the trial of the case. Hardaway Constructors, Inc. v. Browning, 176 Ga. App. 530, 336 S.E.2d 579 (1985), cert. denied, 475 U.S. 1095, 106 S. Ct. 1491, 89 L. Ed. 2d 893 (1986).

After verdict and judgment, it was too late to review a judgment denying summary judgment for that judgment became moot when the court reviewed the evidence upon the trial of the case. Argentum Int'l, LLC v. Woods, 280 Ga. App. 440, 634 S.E.2d 195 (2006).

Husband's complaint of the trial court's denial of the corporation's motion for summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56 was moot as the trial court later granted the corporation's motion for a directed verdict under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-50. Moore v. Moore, 281 Ga. 81, 635 S.E.2d 107 (2006).

Effect on trial on merits. — Appellate court declined to review the trial court's denial of a defendant's motion for summary judgment because a trial on the merits was conducted. Tensar Earth Techs., Inc. v. City of Atlanta, 267 Ga. App. 45, 598 S.E.2d 815 (2004).

Extent of review following trial. — When a motion for judgment is overruled and the case is tried, appellate courts will review the sufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict, as well as enumerations of alleged trial errors, but will not also review the denial of the motion for summary judgment. Drillers Serv., Inc. v. Moody, 242 Ga. 123, 249 S.E.2d 607 (1978); Simmons v. Edge, 155 Ga. App. 6, 270 S.E.2d 457 (1980).

When a motion for summary judgment is overruled and the case is tried, the appellate court will review evidence in support of the judgment as well as other enumerations of error, but because ordinarily the same issues are involved, the court will not review denial of the motion for summary judgment. Rothstein v. Mirvis & Fox, Inc., 155 Ga. App. 79, 270 S.E.2d 301 (1980).

Because the issue of the purported illegality of the parties' contract was not presented to the jury, the court would review the trial court's denial of the motion for summary judgment on this ground; the court would not, however, consider the defendants' argument on summary judgment that damages were not proven since the jury considered damages in the subsequent trial. Smith v. Saulsbury, 286 Ga. App. 322, 649 S.E.2d 344 (2007).

Error in denial harmless after trial.

— When a motion for summary judgment is overruled and the case proceeds to trial and evidence introduced at trial authorizes a verdict on this same issue, any possible error in overruling the motion for summary judgment is harmless. Clark v. Piedmont Hosp., 117 Ga. App. 875, 162 S.E.2d 468 (1968).

Losing party who initiates appellate review, yet commits procedural default fatal to appeal, is foreclosed from thereafter resubmitting the matter for review on appeal of the final judgment. Mitchell v. Oliver, 254 Ga. 112, 327 S.E.2d 216 (1985).

Party that sought and was granted an interlocutory appeal from the denial of the party's motion for summary judgment but failed to timely file the party's notice of appeal in compliance with O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b) committed a procedural default fatal to its appeal and was foreclosed from resubmitting the matter for appellate review. It was improper for the trial court to vacate the court's original order denying summary judgment to provide the party with the opportunity to resubmit the party's application for interlocutory appeal. International Indem. Co. v. Robinson, 231 Ga. App. 236, 498 S.E.2d 795 (1998).

4. Certificate and Application for Review

Editor's notes. — As originally enacted by Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 56, subsection (h) of this section provided that an order denying summary judgment was not appealable. The subsequent amendment by Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 25, stated that denial of summary judgment was not subject to review by direct appeal or otherwise unless the trial judge certified within ten days that such order should be subject to review, in which case it would be subject to review by direct appeal. The 1975 amendment by Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 made an order denying summary judgment subject to review by direct appeal in accordance with § 5-6-34(b). The latter section provides for review of an order, decision, or judgment not otherwise subject to direct appeal if the trial judge certifies that such order, etc., is of such importance that immediate review should be had, and if the appellate court, on application, permits an appeal to be taken. Hence, decisions dealing with appealability of denial of summary judgment should be consulted with care, with particular attention to the dates on which such decisions were rendered.

Certificate from trial judge required. — When there is no certificate of a trial judge allowing an appeal of the refusal to grant a motion for summary judgment, the appellate court is without authority to review such ruling. Peachtree on Peachtree Inn, Inc. v. Camp, 120 Ga. App. 403, 170 S.E.2d 709 (1969); Central Bd. on Care of Jewish Aged, Inc. v. Henson, 120 Ga. App. 627, 171 S.E.2d 747 (1969).

Absent proper certificate, denial of summary judgment is not subject to review. Campbell v. Carroll, 121 Ga. App. 497, 174 S.E.2d 375 (1970); Carroll v. Campbell, 226 Ga. 700, 177 S.E.2d 83 (1970).

Order deriving summary judgment shall be subject to review by obtaining certificate of immediate review. Hiller v. Culbreth, 139 Ga. App. 351, 228 S.E.2d 374 (1976).

Appeal by certificate is the only method whereby denial of a motion for summary judgment may be reviewed. First Nat'l Bank v. Ferrell, 239 Ga. 8, 235 S.E.2d 507 (1977).

When grant of summary judgment is appealed, it is impermissible for denial to be appealed simultaneously without certificate of immediate review. Jones v. Neighbor Newspapers, Inc., 142 Ga. App. 365, 236 S.E.2d 23 (1977). (But see Southeast Ceramics, Inc. v. Klem, 246 Ga. 294, 271 S.E.2d 199 (1980)).

Certificate and application required. — There was no provision for review of denial of summary judgment in subsection (h) of Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56) or former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b)), except by direct appeal with a certificate of the trial judge and an application for review to the appropriate appellate court. Marietta Yamaha, Inc. v. Thomas, 237 Ga. 840, 229 S.E.2d 753 (1976), overruled on other grounds, Marathon U.S. Realities, Inc. v. Kalb, 244 Ga. 390, 260 S.E.2d 88 (1979); American Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. Llewellyn, 142 Ga. App. 824, 237 S.E.2d 227 (1977).

Judgment denying summary judgment is reviewable only by certificate of immediate review and application for review by the appellate court. Thomas v. McGee, 242 Ga. 441, 249 S.E.2d 242 (1978).

When grant of the plaintiff's motion for partial summary judgment was not raised via cross appeal, but was appealable only under subsection (h) of Ga. L. 1975, p. 757, § 3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56), and not under former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34), denial of the defendant's motion for summary judgment could not be considered without a certificate for immediate review and application to the appellate court for permission to appeal. Jack V. Heard Contractors, Inc. v.

Adams Constr. Co., 155 Ga. App. 409, 271 S.E.2d 222 (1980). But see Thomas v. McGee, 242 Ga. 441, 249 S.E.2d 242 (1978); Southeast Ceramics, Inc. v. Klem, 156 Ga. App. 636, 275 S.E.2d 723 (1980).

When grant of partial summary judgment was appealed with denial of summary judgment, judgment granting partial summary judgment was appealable, but judgment denying summary judgment was reviewable only by certificate of immediate review. Jack V. Heard Contractors, Inc. v. Adams Constr. Co., 155 Ga. App. 409, 271 S.E.2d 222 (1980). But see Thomas v. McGee, 242 Ga. 441, 249 S.E.2d 242 (1978); Southeast Ceramics, Inc. v. Klem, 156 Ga. App. 636, 275 S.E.2d 723 (1980).

Denial of summary judgment is not reviewable by the appellate courts in the absence of a timely certificate of immediate review and the granting of an interlocutory appeal by the appellate court unless there be a final judgment in the case and the cause is no longer pending in the lower court. Weldon v. Southeastern Fid. Ins. Co., 157 Ga. App. 698, 278 S.E.2d 500 (1981).

Denial of a motion for summary judgment cannot be considered without a certificate for immediate review and an application to the court for permission to appeal. National Equip. Sales, Serv. & Supplies, Inc. v. Hamrick Mfg. & Servs., Inc., 186 Ga. App. 400, 367 S.E.2d 287 (1988).

Certification and grant of application not exclusive means of appeal. — When summary judgment is denied, it may be appealed after certification by the trial judge and the granting of an application by the appropriate appellate court, but this is not the exclusive means of appealing the denial of a motion for summary judgment. Southeast Ceramics, Inc. v. Klem, 246 Ga. 294, 271 S.E.2d 199 (1980).

Certification not matter of right. — Certification for review is not automatic or a matter of right, but is a matter of discretion with the trial judge. Barber v. Baker, 118 Ga. App. 513, 164 S.E.2d 349 (1968).

Authority of judge as to issuance of certificate. — Trial judge is invested

Appealability and Finality (Cont'd)
4. Certificate and Application for Review (Cont'd) with absolute authority in issuance of certificate of appealability of denial of motion for summary judgment under subsection (h) of this section. Lewis v. Williford, 235 Ga. 558, 221 S.E.2d 14 (1975).

Certification should be made use of only sparingly, in close cases, when real doubt exists as to the merits of the motion. C & A Land Co. v. Wilson Constr. Corp., 117 Ga. App. 744, 161 S.E.2d 922 (1968); Barber v. Baker, 118 Ga. App. 513, 164 S.E.2d 349 (1968).

Routine certification not contemplated. — Routine certification by trial courts of appealability of orders denying motions for summary judgment might well annul legislative intent as to subsection (h) of this section, the purpose of which was to do away with unnecessary delay and to assist the flow of cases toward trial on the merits. C & A Land Co. v. Wilson Constr. Corp., 117 Ga. App. 744, 161 S.E.2d 922 (1968); Flanagan v. Malsby, 119 Ga. App. 474, 167 S.E.2d 739 (1969).

No review of facts without certificate. — Absent certificate for direct appeal on denial of a motion for summary judgment, the appellate court cannot review factual contentions. Redfern Meats, Inc. v. Hertz Corp., 134 Ga. App. 381, 215 S.E.2d 10 (1975).

No direct appeal without certificate. — Order denying summary judgment is not subject to review by direct appeal or otherwise in absence of certificate for review by the trial judge within ten days of the order. John L. Hutcheson Mem. Tri-County Hosp. v. Oliver, 120 Ga. App. 547, 171 S.E.2d 649 (1969); City of Jesup v. Spivey, 133 Ga. App. 403, 210 S.E.2d 859 (1974); Egerton v. Jolly, 133 Ga. App. 805, 212 S.E.2d 462 (1975).

Denial of summary judgment is not subject to review by direct appeal or otherwise, unless the lower court certifies it for direct appeal. Home Indem. Co. v. Godley, 122 Ga. App. 356, 177 S.E.2d 105 (1970); Bush v. City of Albany, 125 Ga. App. 558, 188 S.E.2d 245 (1972); Starkey v. Metro- politan Hotels, Inc., 129 Ga. App. 643, 200 S.E.2d 482 (1973).

Attempting review without certificate following final judgment. — When there is no certificate of immediate review as to denial of summary judgment, and the case is appealed after final judgment, enumeration of error on denial of summary judgment will not be considered. Rustin Oldsmobile, Inc. v. Kendrick, 123 Ga. App. 679, 182 S.E.2d 178 (1971).

Appellate court cannot consider merits of denial of a motion for summary judgment without a certificate of immediate review, even though there is a final judgment which forms the basis for an appeal. Royal Atlanta Dev. Corp. v. M.D. Hodges Enters., Inc., 141 Ga. App. 838, 234 S.E.2d 676 (1977). (But see Southeast Ceramics, Inc. v. Klem, 246 Ga. 294, 271 S.E.2d 199 (1980)).

Certificate from trial judge unnecessary. — Summary judgment granted in favor of one of several defendants is a final and appealable judgment under subsection (h), and it is unnecessary to obtain a certificate from the trial judge that it should be reviewed. LuAllen v. Home Mission Bd. of S. Baptist Convention, 125 Ga. App. 456, 188 S.E.2d 138 (1972).

Denial tied to appealable order or judgment may be appealed without application. — Denial of a motion for summary judgment can be appealed without application when it is tied to an appeal of an appealable order or judgment. Southeast Ceramics, Inc. v. Klem, 246 Ga. 294, 271 S.E.2d 199 (1980).

Review of denial of summary judgment is permitted without necessity of making application for interlocutory appeal when there is a final judgment which is the basis of the appeal as for instance when both the plaintiff and the defendant moved respectively for summary judgments with the court granting the motion of the defendant and denying that of the plaintiff. U.S.I.F. Atlanta Corp. v. Paul, 138 Ga. App. 625, 227 S.E.2d 90 (1976).

Refusal to grant certificate not reviewable. — There is no right to a certificate of review to the overruling of a motion for summary judgment; whether or not such certificate is granted rests solely with the trial judge, and the judge's refusal is not reviewable by the appellate court. Newsrack Supply, Inc. v. Heinle, 127 Ga. App. 843, 195 S.E.2d 193 (1973).

Failure to apply for and obtain order granting appellate review. — When the defendant obtained a certificate for immediate review from the trial judge within ten days of the denial of the defendant's motion for summary judgment in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, but failed to apply to and obtain an order from this court granting an appeal, the defendant's appeal is premature. Hargraves v. Turner, 160 Ga. App. 807, 287 S.E.2d 664 (1982).

Although the repair company did not obtain a certificate of immediate review from the trial court's order denying a renewed motion for summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56, the appellate court had jurisdiction to address an order denying the renewed motion for summary judgment under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(d); the appellate court had jurisdiction to address the trial court's order denying the company's motion for reconsideration under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(b) since the company had obtained a timely certificate of immediate review from the trial court's order denying the court's motion for reconsideration. Gulfstream Aero. Servs. Corp. v. United States Aviation Underwriters, Inc., 280 Ga. App. 747, 635 S.E.2d 38 (2006).

5. Standing

Appeal by plaintiff to grant of summary judgment to third-party defendant.

dant. — Since the plaintiff asserted no claim against a third-party defendant, the plaintiff was not aggrieved by the grant of summary judgment to the third-party defendant on the third-party action, which established only the third party's nonliability to the defendant and, thus, the plaintiff lacked standing to appeal an order granting such judgment. Wallace v. Scott, 164 Ga. App. 129, 296 S.E.2d 423 (1982).

Multi-party cases. — Grant of a motion for summary judgment in a multi-party case will not, standing alone, necessarily authorize the initiation of a direct appeal therefrom by any party to the underlying case. An appeal must be filed by one who has standing to pursue the appeal. Shackelford v. Green, 180 Ga. App. 617, 349 S.E.2d 781 (1986), aff'd, 257 Ga. 9, 356 S.E.2d 27 (1987).

Standing to appeal not present for order against another party. — Guarantor and the guarantor's principal had no standing, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h), to file a direct appeal of a trial court's grant of summary judgment to a contractor against a property owner because the guarantor and the guarantor's principal were not losing parties to the trial court's order against the owner on the contractor's breach of contract claim and because the guarantor and the guarantor's principal were not sued as joint tortfeasors of the owner. Adams v. D-Money Enters., 312 Ga. App. 537, 718 S.E.2d 870 (2011).

9-11-58. Entry of judgment; judge's name to be typed, printed, or stamped after signature; filing of civil case disposition form.

(a) Signing. Except when otherwise specifically provided by statute, all judgments shall be signed by the judge and filed with the clerk. The signature of the judge shall be followed by the spelling of the judge's name and title legibly typed, printed, or stamped. The failure of the judgment to have the typed, printed, or stamped name of the judge shall not invalidate the judgment.

(b) When judgment entered. The filing with the clerk of a judgment, signed by the judge, with the fully completed civil case disposition form constitutes the entry of the judgment, and, unless the court otherwise directs, no judgment shall be effective for any purpose until the entry of the same, as provided in this subsection. As part of the filing of the final judgment, a civil case disposition form shall be filed by the prevailing party or by the plaintiff if the case is settled, dismissed, or otherwise disposed of without a prevailing party; provided, however, that the amount of a sealed or otherwise confidential settlement agreement shall not be disclosed on the civil case disposition form. The form shall be substantially in the form prescribed in Code Section 9-11-133. If any of the information required by the form is sealed by the court, the form shall state that fact and the information under seal shall not be provided. The entry of the judgment shall not be made by the clerk of the court until the civil case disposition form is filed. The entry of the judgment shall not be delayed for the taxing of costs. This subsection shall not apply to actions brought pursuant to Code Sections 44-7-50 through 44-7-59. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 58; Ga. L. 1993, p. 91, § 9; Ga. L. 2000, p. 850, § 2; Ga. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Construction with O.C.G.A. §§ 9-2-60(b) and 9-11-41(e). — Trial court erroneously dismissed a litigant’s petition for a writ of mandamus, and erroneously relied on dicta, in finding that orders setting a pre-trial conference in the underlying medical malpractice action were merely “housekeeping or administrative orders” that did not suspend the running of the five-year period under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-2-60(b) and 9-11-41(e). Instead, such orders tolled the running of the five-year rule if the orders were in writing, signed by the trial judge, and properly entered in the records of the trial court. Zepp v. Brannen, 283 Ga. 395, 658 S.E.2d 567 (2008).

Construction with Title 5. — What additional requirements are imposed by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58(b) of the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, for entry of a judgment are not relevant for purposes of the Appellate Practice Act, O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-31 and 5-6-38(a), which has its own definition of when a judgment is entered. GMC Group, Inc. v. Harsco Corp., 293 Ga. App. 707, 667 S.E.2d 916 (2008).

Prerequisites for effective judgment. — Two requirements must be met before an adjudication becomes an effective judgment: (1) judgment must be set forth in writing and signed by the judge; and (2) judgment so set forth must be entered in the civil docket by the clerk of court; before then, such judgment is inchoate and is of no effect for any purpose. Bloodworth v. Thompson, 230 Ga. 628, 198 S.E.2d 293 (1973).

In courts of record, all judgments must be in writing, signed by the judge, and entered by filing with the clerk. Maroska v. Williams, 146 Ga. App. 130, 245 S.E.2d 470 (1978).

Judgment inchoate until entered. — What judge orally declares is no judgment until it has been put in writing and entered as such. Dunagan v. Sims, 119 Ga. App. 765, 168 S.E.2d 914 (1969).

Order granting or refusing motion must be in writing. Addis v. First Kingston Corp., 225 Ga. 231, 167 S.E.2d 656 (1969).

Until an order is signed by the judge, the order is ineffective for any purpose.

Majors v. Lewis, 135 Ga. App. 420, 218 S.E.2d 130 (1975).

Until entered in accordance with the provisions of subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58, a judgment is inchoate and of no effect for any purpose. Zeitman v. McBrayer, 201 Ga. App. 767, 412 S.E.2d 287 (1991).

Because a superior court's contempt finding was based upon a violation of a verbal order that had not been reduced to writing, signed by the issuing judge, and filed with the clerk, the finding was ineffective pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58(b) and, thus, had to be reversed. Shirley v. Abshire, 288 Ga. App. 819, 655 S.E.2d 694 (2007).

Denial of motion not precluded by oral announcement that motion would be granted. — Order denying motion for new trial and order denying motion to set that order aside are not illegal when the judge had orally announced that the judge would grant the motion for a new trial. Waller v. Waller, 226 Ga. 279, 174 S.E.2d 433 (1970).

Filing of signed judgment constitutes entry. — Under both Ga. L. 1965, p. 18, § 23 and Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 6, T. 5 and Ch. 11, T. 9), a judgment is effective only upon entry and filing of a judgment signed by the judge with the clerk constitutes entry. Minnich v. First Nat'l Bank, 154 Ga. App. 439, 268 S.E.2d 688 (1980).

Dismissal of an owner's appeal of a summary judgment on a fraud and breach of contract complaint was improper when the complaint was amended to include a negligence count hours before the summary judgment on the fraud and breach of contract claims was filed, and therefore entered pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58(b) (although the summary judgment order had been signed the previous day); the negligence claim was pending at the time that the summary judgment was entered, and although the order granting summary judgment was subject to a direct appeal by the owner, the owner was not required to file an appeal at that time under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h). Liberty v. Storage Trust Props., L.P., 267 Ga. App. 905, 600 S.E.2d 841 (2004).

As a child advocate did not establish that the juvenile court directed that the court's oral order was effective on the day the order was made, the advocate's motion to reconsider was premature under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58(b) because the order was filed before the juvenile court filed a written order. In the Interest of N. W., 309 Ga. App. 617, 710 S.E.2d 832 (2011).

Entry on docket not required. — Nothing in subsection (b) of this section requires entry of a judgment or order on the court docket; filing of a judgment, after the judgment has been signed by the judge, with the clerk is all that is required to complete the judgment's entry. Thomas v. Allstate Ins. Co., 133 Ga. App. 193, 210 S.E.2d 361 (1974), overruled on other grounds, Culwell v. Lomas & Nettleton Co., 242 Ga. 242, 248 S.E.2d 641 (1978); Fastenberg v. Associated Distribs., Inc., 134 Ga. App. 213, 213 S.E.2d 898 (1975).

It is not essential to the validity of a judgment that the judgment be entered on the docket sheet. Krasner v. Verner Auto Supply, Inc., 130 Ga. App. 892, 204 S.E.2d 770 (1974).

Entry dates from filing rather than signing. — Date of filing of judgment with the clerk of the court, not the date the judgment was signed by the trial judge, constitutes "entry" of the judgment. Blanton v. Moseley, 133 Ga. App. 144, 210 S.E.2d 368 (1974).

Because a custody transfer order had not been filed with the court clerk, in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58(b), when an administrative employee allegedly failed to comply with the order, the trial court erred by finding the employee in contempt under former O.C.G.A. § 15-11-5(a) (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-11-31). In the Interest of K.D., 272 Ga. App. 803, 613 S.E.2d 239 (2005).

No time limit given for signing and filing. — All judgments are signed by the judge and filed with the clerk; no time limit is given for such signing and filing. Hiscock v. Hiscock, 227 Ga. 329, 180 S.E.2d 730 (1971); Moore v. Moore, 229 Ga. 600, 193 S.E.2d 608 (1972); Maloy v. Planter's Whse. & Lumber Co., 142 Ga. App. 69, 234 S.E.2d 807 (1977).

No time limit is given for the signing and filing of judgments. Jefferson v. Ross, 250 Ga. 817, 301 S.E.2d 268 (1983).

Entry of dismissal on court calendar or docket not entry of judgment.

— Entry of “DWOP” (dismissed for want of prosecution) on the court’s calendar or docket, without the judge’s signature and without filing with the clerk, does not amount to entry of a judgment. Rothstein v. Brooks, 133 Ga. App. 52, 209 S.E.2d 674 (1974).

Order to comply with settlement agreement. — State court order declaring that the defendants had not defaulted with respect to a settlement agreement and ordering the parties to comply with the terms of the agreement did not constitute a final judgment when the order did not expressly provide either that the action was dismissed or that the plaintiffs receive judgment in accordance with the terms of the agreement. Zeitman v. McBrayer, 201 Ga. App. 767, 412 S.E.2d 287 (1991).

Entry of judgment required for disposition of case or appeal. — There must be an entry of judgment to finally dispose of a case or for the purpose of using the judgment to support an appeal. Dunagan v. Sims, 119 Ga. App. 765, 168 S.E.2d 914 (1969).

In the absence of a judgment in writing, no question for decision is presented to the appellate court. Dunagan v. Sims, 119 Ga. App. 765, 168 S.E.2d 914 (1969).

Oral order is not final nor appealable until and unless the order is reduced to writing, signed by the judge, and filed with the clerk. This constitutes “entry”; and it is only an “entered” decision or judgment which is appealable. Sharp v. State, 183 Ga. App. 641, 360 S.E.2d 50 (1987).

Judgment should be certain and definite, or should be capable of being made so by proper construction, which sometimes requires reference to the complaint. Pico, Inc. v. Mickel, 138 Ga. App. 856, 230 S.E.2d 488 (1976), aff’d, 238 Ga. 218, 232 S.E.2d 841 (1977).

Judgment must be specific enough for outsider to understand. — Judgment must be specific enough for an individual without inside knowledge to understand the judgment, especially when a judgment is to be a muniment of title. Sease v. Singleton, 246 Ga. 278, 271 S.E.2d 187 (1980).

Power of judge over judgment during term of entry.

— Unless a judgment is based upon the verdict of a jury, it remains in the breast of the court until the end of the term during which the judgment was entered, and the judge has the power on the judge’s own motion to vacate the judgment, with or without notice to the parties. Rothstein v. Brooks, 133 Ga. App. 52, 209 S.E.2d 674 (1974).

Continuing jurisdiction to enter judgment on jury verdict. — Court of record has continuing jurisdiction to enter judgment on a jury verdict at any time. Jefferson v. Ross, 250 Ga. 817, 301 S.E.2d 268 (1983).

Intent to record previously unrecorded action actually taken or judgment actually rendered. — Juvenile court had jurisdiction to award custody of a child to the Department of Human Resources and properly entered the court’s order of disposition awarding permanent custody to the Department because the mother and father had no rights to surrender to the great-grandparents when the termination order reflected the juvenile court’s intent to record a previously unrecorded action actually taken or judgment actually rendered; the juvenile court rendered judgment terminating the child’s parental rights at the conclusion of the hearing on September 3, 2008, and although the court’s oral ruling was not memorialized in a written order until September 9, 2008 and not filed until September 17, 2008, such order clearly stated that it was nunc pro tunc to September 3, 2008, the date of the termination hearing. In re D.C.H., 300 Ga. App. 827, 686 S.E.2d 434 (2009).

Renewal of dormant judgment. — Except for determining whether or not a judgment has been dormant, provisions of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58 are immaterial in an action for renewal of a dormant judgment. Watkins v. Citizens & S. Nat’l Bank, 163 Ga. App. 468, 294 S.E.2d 703 (1982), aff’d, 250 Ga. 29, 301 S.E.2d 892 (1983).

Proof of entry of order. — Finding that order was entered was supported by independent evidence of record in the form of testimony of the clerk of the probate court that the clerk entered the order by entering the notation “granted” in the docket book and an extract of a “granted” entry appearing in the probate court docket. Jabaley v. Jabaley, 208 Ga. App. 179, 430 S.E.2d 119 (1993).

Mandamus to compel written order.

— When a juvenile court failed to enter a written order, the court failed to carry out an administrative act; therefore, mandamus was appropriate not to review the propriety of the court’s denial of the filing, but to compel the judge to enter a written order from which an appeal could be taken under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58(a) and Ga. Unif. Juv. Ct. R. 17.1. Titelman v. Stedman, 277 Ga. 460, 591 S.E.2d 774 (2003).

Contempt based on oral judgment improper. — To the extent that a later contempt finding was based on the trial court’s oral pronouncement, the finding was a nullity. In re Tidwell, 279 Ga. App. 734, 632 S.E.2d 690 (2006).

Debtor failed to show rights were violated by order confirming sale. — Debtor sought to nullify the confirmation of the foreclosure sale by invoking the rule that a judgment must be in writing, signed by the judge, and filed with the clerk in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58 to be effective, irrespective of any oral announcement by the trial court. The superior court at the second confirmation hearing correctly determined that, while a final order should be entered “to close [the first] case out,” the confirmation proceedings in connection with the foreclosure sale nevertheless comprised “a new action”, and with respect to such proceedings, the superior court signed a final order and duly filed the order with the clerk; thus, the debtor’s rights were not violated. Friedman v. Regions Bank, 288 Ga. App. 57, 653 S.E.2d 507 (2007).

When an appellant filed a bankruptcy petition after a temporary restraining order was issued verbally but before the order was reduced to writing, signed, and filed, it was error to hold the appellant in civil contempt as under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58 the order was not effective until the order was written, signed, and filed. Huffman v. Armenia, 284 Ga. App. 822, 645 S.E.2d 23 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 554 (Ga. 2007).

Time for filing motion for attorney fees not impacted by civil disposition form filing. — As real property contestants failed to file a request for attorney fees pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 within 45 days following a trial court’s final disposition in a real property proceeding, the trial court erred in granting the contestants’ request because the court lacked jurisdiction to consider the motion; the time for filing the motion began to run when judgment was entered under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-31, and the time when a civil disposition form was filed under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-58(b) had no effect on the timing for purposes of the motion. Horesh v. DeKinder, 295 Ga. App. 826, 673 S.E.2d 311 (2009).

(a) Collateral attack. A judgment void on its face may be attacked in any court by any person. In all other instances, judgments shall be subject to attack only by a direct proceeding brought for that purpose in one of the methods prescribed in this Code section.

(b) Methods of direct attack. A judgment may be attacked by motion for a new trial or motion to set aside. Judgments may be attacked by motion only in the court of rendition.

(c) Motion for new trial. A motion for new trial must be predicated upon some intrinsic defect which does not appear upon the face of the record or pleadings.

(d) Motion to set aside. A motion to set aside may be brought to set aside a judgment based upon:

(1) Lack of jurisdiction over the person or the subject matter;

(2) Fraud, accident, or mistake or the acts of the adverse party unmixed with the negligence or fault of the movant; or

(3) A nonamendable defect which appears upon the face of the record or pleadings. Under this paragraph, it is not sufficient that the complaint or other pleading fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, but the pleadings must affirmatively show no claim in fact existed.

(e) Complaint in equity. The use of a complaint in equity to set aside a judgment is prohibited.

(f) Procedure; time of relief. Reasonable notice shall be afforded the parties on all motions. Motions to set aside judgments may be served by any means by which an original complaint may be legally served if it cannot be legally served as any other motion. A judgment void because of lack of jurisdiction of the person or subject matter may be attacked at any time. Motions for new trial must be brought within the time prescribed by law. In all other instances, all motions to set aside judgments shall be brought within three years from entry of the judgment complained of.

(g) Clerical mistakes. Clerical mistakes in judgments, orders, or other parts of the record and errors therein arising from oversight or omission may be corrected by the court at any time of its own initiative or on the motion of any party and after such notice, if any, as the court orders.

(h) Law of the case rule. The law of the case rule is abolished; but generally judgments and orders shall not be set aside or modified without just cause and, in setting aside or otherwise modifying judgments and orders, the court shall consider whether rights have vested thereunder and whether or not innocent parties would be injured thereby; provided, however, that any ruling by the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals in a case shall be binding in all subsequent proceedings in that case in the lower court and in the Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals as the case may be. General Consideration

Editor's notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Civil Code 1910, §§ 5957 and 5965 and under former Code 1933, § 37-219 and Ch. 7, T. 110, are included in the annotations for this Code section.

Rule includes both equitable and legal grounds. — Since the 1986 amendment, both equitable and legal grounds for setting aside a judgment are now included in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Fulton v. State, 183 Ga. App. 570, 359 S.E.2d 726 (1987).

Rooker-Feldman doctrine. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 establishes a method for attacking Georgia state court judgments, but only in Georgia state courts; this is in accord with the Rooker-Feldman doctrine. Rice v. Grubbs, 158 Fed. Appx. 163 (11th Cir. Nov. 9, 2005).

Legislative intent of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 was to make a comprehensive determination of procedures for attacks on judgments. Payne v. Shelnutt, 126 Ga. App. 598, 191 S.E.2d 487 (1972); Jordan v. G.A.C. Fin. Corp., 136 Ga. App. 641, 222 S.E.2d 149 (1975).

Federal Arbitration Act. — It was error to refuse to enforce a foreign judgment against a company that was based on an arbitration award. The company had not sought to vacate the arbitration award within the three-month period allowed by the Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq., and the company could not circumvent this limitation period by raising a claim under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. McDonald v. H & S Homes, LLC, 290 Ga. App. 103, 658 S.E.2d 901 (2008).

Means of attack prescribed in this section are exclusive. — This section specifies the manner in which a judgment may be attacked, and the means prescribed herein are exclusive. Henry v. Adair Realty Co., 141 Ga. App. 182, 233 S.E.2d 39 (1977); Henry v. Polar Rock Dev. Corp., 143 Ga. App. 189, 237 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

Civil judgments cannot be attacked by motion for reconsideration. — This section provides the exclusive methods by which civil judgments may be attacked, and a motion for reconsideration is not one of the methods enumerated therein. Propes v. Stonington Homeowners Ass'n, 149 Ga. App. 135, 253 S.E.2d 813 (1979).

Direct appeal is not covered by section. — This section deals with methods of attack on judgments other than by direct appeal; it is not necessary that a judgment be attacked by one of the methods provided by this section as any final judgment may be timely appealed. Hiscock v. Hiscock, 227 Ga. 329, 180 S.E.2d 730 (1971).

Post-judgment motions are not permitted to raise arguments or introduce evidence previously known to the parties but not addressed at trial. Kim v. McCullom, 222 Ga. App. 439, 474 S.E.2d 654 (1996).

Term "face of the record" has never been held to include papers involved in the litigation that are not a part of the record kept under the authority and direction of the clerk of the court in which the suit is pending; the phrase itself refers to the court record, not the file built up by litigants for the litigants personal use. Jennings v. Davis, 92 Ga. App. 265, 88 S.E.2d 544 (1955) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Application to both foreign and domestic judgments. — This section applies to both domestic judgments and judgments from other states. Logan v. Nunnally, 128 Ga. App. 43, 195 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Verdicts and judgments in divorce cases. — Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27, and 30 and Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 9 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-40 and 9-11-60) now embrace all situations that Ga. L. 1935, p. 481, relating to setting aside verdicts and judgments in divorce cases, was designed to meet. Bradberry v. Bradberry, 232 Ga. 651, 208 S.E.2d 469 (1974).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 not applicable to action for child support arrearages under foreign state judgment. — Paragraph (a)(1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 and O.C.G.A. § 9-3-20 did not apply to a Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act action to enforce arrearages on a foreign child support order. Georgia Dep't of Human Resources v. Deason, 238 Ga. App. 853, 520 S.E.2d 712 (1999).

Enforcement of support order. — When the defendant failed to investigate paternity despite his suspicion that he was not the father of all his wife's children, and when his failure to investigate was not caused by any alleged misrepresentation by his former spouse, he failed to show either actionable fraud or that his lack of investigation was unmixed with his own "negligence or fault," and the trial court erred in staying the enforcement of the out-of-state support order. Department of Human Resources v. Fenner, 235 Ga. App. 233, 510 S.E.2d 534 (1998).

Prior provisions carried forward. — Provisions of former Code 1933, §§ 110-702 and 110-705 are substantially carried forward in subsection (d) of this section. Cook v. Bright, 150 Ga. App. 696, 258 S.E.2d 326 (1979).

Attack on a void judgment may be made directly in equity or collaterally. Wasden v. Rusco Indus., Inc., 233 Ga. 439, 211 S.E.2d 733 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Murphy v. Murphy, 263 Ga. 280, 430 S.E.2d 749 (1993).

Three methods prescribed for direct attack. — Omitting judgments void on the judgments' face and clerical errors, direct attack must be made on a judgment in one of three ways: a motion for new trial must comprise an error that does not appear on the face of the record; a motion to set aside must attack an error that does appear on the face of the record; and fraud, accident, or mistake may be raised only by an equitable petition in the appropriate superior court, and are subject to a three-year statute of limitation. Payne v. Shelnutt, 126 Ga. App. 598, 191 S.E.2d 487 (1972).

Procedures for reaching defects in a judgment, as opposed to a levy of execution, are controlled by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 and must be made by either motion for new trial, motion to set aside for a nonamendable defect appearing on the face of the record, or petition in equity. Mason v. Fisher, 143 Ga. App. 573, 239 S.E.2d 226 (1977).

Direct action required to vacate void judgment. — Because an attack on a punitive damage award was an impermissible collateral attack, a petition to vacate a void judgment was properly dismissed as the petition could only be brought as a direct action. Walker v. Blackwell, 259 Ga. App. 324, 577 S.E.2d 24 (2003).

Jurisdiction of probate court to vacate judgment probating will. — Both prior to and since enactment of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), the probate court has had jurisdiction to vacate the court's judgment probating a will in solemn form that was obtained by fraud or other irregularity that renders the judgment voidable. Dennis v. McCrary, 237 Ga. 605, 229 S.E.2d 367 (1976).

Trial court had to determine whether attorney was authorized to accept service. — Trial court abused the court's discretion by dismissing a landlord's suit against a tenant under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 for lack of personal jurisdiction because a determination was necessary as to whether a law firm who accepted service was authorized to represent the tenant before the trial court determined that the court lacked personal jurisdiction over the tenant. Endover Palisades, LLC v. Stuart, 324 Ga. App. 90, 749 S.E.2d 381 (2013).

Presumption of validity of judgment. — There is a presumption that every fact necessary to make a general judgment by a court of competent jurisdiction valid and binding was before the court. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Coburn, 129 Ga. App. 520, 200 S.E.2d 146 (1973).

Judgment not void on judgment's face valid until set aside. — Until it is set aside as prescribed by this section, a judgment not void on the judgment's face is a valid and subsisting judgment, which allows the plaintiff to refile the plaintiff's petition. Camera Shop, Inc. v. GAF Corp., 130 Ga. App. 88, 202 S.E.2d 241 (1973).

Court disregards label of motion and looks to substance. — Because the defendant chose to denominate the motion as one to vacate and set aside the summary judgment, but the motion was nothing more than a request for a reconsideration of the trial court's summary judgment award, the motion did not extend the time for the filing of a notice of appeal, and therefore the notice of appeal was not timely filed. Perryman v. Georgia Power Co., 180 Ga. App. 259, 348 S.E.2d 762 (1986), overruled on other grounds, MMT Enters., Inc. v. Cullars, 218 Ga. App. 559, 462 S.E.2d 771 (1995).

Arrest of judgment motion cannot be used to extend time for civil appeals. — Exclusive method by which civil judgments may be attacked is set forth in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 and an arrest of judgment is not enumerated therein. Thus, even though O.C.G.A. § 5-6-38 lists "arrest of judgment" as one of the motions that extends the time for filing a notice of appeal, it apparently refers to criminal appeals. Daniels v. McRae, 180 Ga. App. 732, 350 S.E.2d 317 (1986); Willard v. Wilburn, 203 Ga. App. 393, 416 S.E.2d 798, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 908, 416 S.E.2d 798 (1992).

Judgment infected by perjury. — If a judgment has allegedly been infected by perjury, the remedy is the institution of a direct attack upon that judgment and not a civil action against the alleged perjurer. Shepherd v. Epps, 179 Ga. App. 685, 347 S.E.2d 289 (1986).

Trial court had no authority in law to cancel allegedly dormant judgments upon the record, and the court's denial of a child's motion to do so on behalf of the child's deceased parent was not erroneous because collateral attacks on judgments are permissible only if the judgment is void on the judgment's face or if the judgment or other parts of the record contain a clerical mistake or error; in addition, because this motion to set aside judgment was not brought within the three-year period beginning at the entry of the judgment prescribed in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, the movant cannot get relief. Cronic v. State, 172 Ga. App. 675, 324 S.E.2d 533 (1984).

Husband did not waive right to jury trial. — Trial court abused the court's discretion in denying a husband's motion for a new trial and to set aside the decree of divorce as the husband's actions in showing up 45 minutes late in answering a calendar call did not amount to either an expressed or implied waiver of an asserted right to a jury trial, and the husband did not expressly consent to a bench trial. Walker v. Walker, 280 Ga. 696, 631 S.E.2d 697 (2006).

Postjudgment attack on forfeiture. — Defendant's motion in a criminal proceeding for return of money that was forfeited in a civil proceeding was properly denied because the proper method of making a postjudgment attack on a forfeiture is through O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Youree v.

State, 220 Ga. App. 453, 469 S.E.2d 208 (1996).

Surety sued a city after the cash bond the surety posted was forfeited. The suit was properly dismissed based on sovereign immunity; if the bond forfeiture was improper, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d), the surety's remedy lay not in a suit against the city, but in a motion in the traffic court to set aside the forfeiture. Watts v. City of Dillard, 294 Ga. App. 861, 670 S.E.2d 442 (2008).

Res judicata and estoppel by judgment will not bar either a motion to set aside a judgment or an extraordinary motion for new trial based upon newly discovered evidence. Herringdine v. Nalley Equip. Leasing, Ltd., 238 Ga. App. 210, 517 S.E.2d 571 (1999).

Consideration with nolle prosequi. — Trial court properly vacated the court's first nolle prosequi order entered pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 17-8-3 and substituted one entered in open court almost two years later; although a trial court could vacate an order of nolle prosequi at will only during the term of court, and the trial court here indisputably vacated the court's order outside the term, this situation was governed by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, and treating the second ground of the defendant's motion as a motion to set aside under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(2), the trial court was within the court's rights in essentially modifying the court's order under § 9-11-60(h). Montgomery v. State, 259 Ga. App. 153, 575 S.E.2d 917 (2003).

Prior decision binding precedent. — If a corporation was able to prove a breach of a consent judgment by the corporation's previous owner, the corporation could not show actual damages and was limited to recovering nominal damages because the corporation's claim was foreclosed by a previous decision of the court of appeals; that case was binding precedent and established that regardless of the owner's proof of claim, a sale of a motel would not have occurred, precluding the corporation's recovery of actual damages on the corporation's breach of contract claim. Duke Galish, LLC v. Manton, 308 Ga. App. 316, 707 S.E.2d 555 (2011).

As property owners' application for a discretionary appeal as to the trial court's order that awarded a business entity attorney fees was previously denied, that decision was res judicata with respect to the issue of the fees; accordingly, the owners could not seek a second review by appealing the award of fees. Elrod v. Sunflower Meadows Dev., LLC, 322 Ga. App. 666, 745 S.E.2d 846 (2013).

Dismissal of appeal based on lack of appellate jurisdiction. — Because an appeal by the parents from the juvenile court's order denying their motion to rescind and re-enter the dismissal order under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g) on the grounds that the trial court failed to give proper notice of the court's decision, in accordance with O.C.G.A. § 15-6-21(c), failed to challenge the juvenile court's error in denying the motion, but rather, challenged specific rulings entered by the juvenile court in the deprivation proceedings, denial of the motion to rescind and re-enter was affirmed on appeal as the appellate court lacked jurisdiction to consider the errors asserted by the parents in the underlying deprivation case. In the Interest of S.C., 283 Ga. App. 387, 641 S.E.2d 618 (2007).

Failure to prove damages nonamendable defect. — Trial court erred in entering a default judgment in the amount of $15,000 against a home inspector because a purchaser's damages were unliquidated, and other than the prayer in the purchaser's complaint for $15,000, the purchaser made no showing of the amount of damages; the purchaser's failure to prove the purchaser's damages constituted a nonamendable defect within the meaning of the Georgia Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(3). Strickland v. Leake, 311 Ga. App. 298, 715 S.E.2d 676 (2011).

Motion to compel arbitration properly denied. — In a class action suit seeking to hold a lender liable for payday loans, the trial court properly ruled that the lender could not compel arbitration and denying the lender's motion to compel as moot because the trial court's earlier ruling striking the lender's arbitration defense as a discovery violation sanction was an adjudication on the merits and carried a res judicata effect. Ga. Cash Am. v. Greene, 318 Ga. App. 355, 734 S.E.2d 67 (2012).

Power of Court over Judgments, Generally

Trial court has the inherent power to amend or set aside a judgment for any “meritorious reason,” provided the motion to set aside is filed during the term in which the judgment was rendered. Goode v. O’Neal, Banks & Assocs., 165 Ga. App. 162, 300 S.E.2d 191 (1983).

Power to amend granted to the trial judge is plenary. Camera Shop, Inc. v. GAF Corp., 130 Ga. App. 88, 202 S.E.2d 241 (1973).

Power of court over judgment during term in which entered. — Court of record has plenary control of the court’s orders and judgments during the term rendered, and may amend, correct, modify, supplement, or vacate them; exercise of this power during the term will not be disturbed unless there is an abuse thereof. Drain Tile Mach., Inc. v. McCannon, 80 Ga. App. 373, 56 S.E.2d 165 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Trial judge has power during the term of court at which a judgment is rendered to revise, revoke, or vacate that judgment, even on the judge’s own motion, for the purpose of promoting justice and in the exercise of sound discretion. Bandy v. Smith, 211 Ga. 192, 84 S.E.2d 449 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Superior court has power, during the same term at which an order or judgment is rendered, to revoke or vacate the judgment for meritorious cause, and such power is not lost during the term merely because the time for excepting to the judgment directly has expired. Williams v. Lawler Hosiery Mills, Inc., 212 Ga. 617, 94 S.E.2d 699 (1956) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Superior court retains plenary control over judgments entered, during the term in which the judgments are entered, and in the exercise of sound discretion may revoke or vacate the judgments, and such discretion will not be interfered with by the appellate courts unless manifestly abused; such discretion may be applied in reinstating cases dismissed for lack of prosecution, reinstating cases dismissed on general demurrer, reinstating cases in default in which final judgment had been rendered, and, for good cause shown, reinstating a case after a verdict was rendered but before it is spread on the minutes. Carolina Tree Serv., Inc. v. Cartledge, 96 Ga. App. 240, 99 S.E.2d 705 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-702).

Superior court retains plenary control over the court’s judgments during the term in which the judgments are entered and, in the exercise of sound discretion, may revoke the judgments; this inherent power applies to all judgments, save those that are founded on verdicts. Allen v. Allen, 218 Ga. 364, 127 S.E.2d 902 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Court of record has continuing jurisdiction to enter judgment on a jury verdict at any time. Jefferson v. Ross, 250 Ga. 817, 301 S.E.2d 268 (1983), overruling Maroska v. Williams, 146 Ga. App. 130, 245 S.E.2d 470 (1978).

Whatever limitations may exist in subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 for post-term motions to set aside, a trial judge has the power during the same term of court at which a judgment is rendered to reverse, correct, revoke, modify, or vacate the judgment in the exercise of the judge's discretion. Piggly Wiggly S., Inc. v. McCook, 216 Ga. App. 335, 454 S.E.2d 203 (1995).

Although a judgment cannot be set aside under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d) unless the grounds relied upon are unmixed with negligence or fault of the movant, a trial court in the exercise of the court's discretion still has the inherent power during the same term of court at which a judgment is rendered to reverse, correct, revoke, modify, or vacate the judgment. Kirkley v. Jones, 250 Ga. App. 113, 550 S.E.2d 686 (2001).

Opening default. — Trial court has no discretion to allow a default to be opened for excusable neglect after final judgment. Cryomedics, Inc. v. Smith, 180 Ga. App. 336, 349 S.E.2d 223 (1986).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in not granting the vehicle owner's motion for a directed verdict and setting aside the default judgment entered against the vehicle owner as the evidence showed that the wrecker service that found the vehicle owner's vehicle abandoned did not send notice of the foreclosure action against the vehicle owner to the vehicle owner's correct address; rather, the wrecker company sent notice of that action to an incorrect address located in a state other than that in which the vehicle owner was located, through no fault of the vehicle owner. Mitsubishi Motors Credit of Am., Inc. v. Robinson & Stephens, Inc., 263 Ga. App. 168, 587 S.E.2d 146 (2003).

In a personal injury lawsuit, the pendency of the defendant's appeal from the denial of the defendant's motion to set aside the default judgment acted as a supersedeas depriving the trial court of the jurisdiction to consider its subsequent extraordinary motion for new trial. Fred Jones Enters., LLC v. Williams, 331 Ga. App. 481, 771 S.E.2d 163 (2015).

Time for filing. — Motion to set aside made pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 does not have to be filed within the same term of court in which the challenged judgment was rendered. Shepherd v. Metropolitan Property & Liab. Ins. Co., 163

Ga. App. 650, 294 S.E.2d 638 (1982).

Judgments and decrees in breast of court during term of entry. — Decree, during the term at which the decree was rendered, is said to be in the breast of the judge; after the term is over, the decree is upon the roll. This rule as to the finality of judgments has not been changed. Holloman v. Holloman, 228 Ga. 246, 184 S.E.2d 653 (1971); Adams Drive, Ltd. v. All-Rite Trades, Inc., 136 Ga. App. 703, 222 S.E.2d 174 (1975).

Because a motion to re-open a case based on the failure to adjudicate a material issue was filed and acted upon after expiration of the term of court at which the final judgment was rendered, the trial court no longer had inherent authority over a case within the breast of the court. Gabel v. Revels, 203 Ga. App. 131, 416 S.E.2d 103 (1992).

Contractor's motion for reconsideration was an improper attempt to attack the trial court's judgment outside the term of court without setting forth a basis under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d); because the trial court's term expired before the filing of the motion for reconsideration, the judgment was no longer within the breast of the trial court and could not be set aside or altered. J. Kinson Cook of Ga., Inc. v. Heery/Mitchell, 284 Ga. App. 552, 644 S.E.2d 440 (2007).

Judgment may be set aside in exercise of discretion. — Judgment is in the breast of the court during the term in which the judgment is rendered, and the judge may set the judgment aside in the exercise of the judge's discretion. Crowe v. Crowe, 245 Ga. 719, 267 S.E.2d 14 (1980).

Excusable neglect. — Because a dental patient's expert affidavit pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was not based on certified or sworn records, nor was the affidavit based on the personal knowledge of the expert, the trial court erred in denying the dentist's motion for summary judgment in the patient's dental malpractice action; although the records custodian failed to properly provide certified copies of the records upon the patient's discovery request, the patient waived the right to present such evidence pursuant to Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.2 after the patient did not file a timely response to the dentist's summary judgment with an O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(f) affidavit, and the patient did not show excusable neglect for purposes of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(b). Rudd v. Paden, 279 Ga. App. 141, 630 S.E.2d 648 (2006).

Judgment not based on jury verdict. — If a judgment is not based on the verdict of a jury but is the act of the judge, it is in the breast of the court during the term in which the judgment is rendered, and in the exercise of sound discretion the judge may set the judgment aside. Martin v. GMC, Fisher Body Div., 226 Ga. 860, 178 S.E.2d 183 (1970).

Judgment based on jury verdict. — If a prior judgment was based on a jury verdict trial a court does not, under the court's inherent power, have authority to vacate the judgment or set the judgment aside, even during the same term of court in which the judgment was rendered. Edwards v. Yelverton, 147 Ga. App. 525, 249 S.E.2d 334 (1978).

Judgment based on settlement. — If the trial court orders entry of a settlement amount and dismisses a case with prejudice and the plaintiff files a motion for new trial and a motion to set aside, contending that the plaintiff did not agree to the settlement and that the plaintiff's attorney was without authority to compromise, the trial court does not err in hearing this attack on the judgment; the matter is still in the breast of the trial court and the proceedings toll the time for appeal. Sunn v. Mercury Marine, 166 Ga. App. 567, 305 S.E.2d 6 (1983).

Even though relief is denied under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. — Trial judge may exercise inherent power to set aside a judgment, even though the judge denied the moving parties' prayers for relief under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, as long as the term of court has not ended. Crowe v. Crowe, 245 Ga. 719, 267 S.E.2d 14 (1980).

Although a party's claim as to lack of notice of trial may be without merit, this does not mean that the trial court is without authority to set aside the judgment or grant a new trial, if the circumstances warrant such relief. Maolud v.

Keller, 153 Ga. App. 268, 265 S.E.2d 86 (1980).

When a defect is not on the face of record. — If a meritorious motion is made to set aside a judgment during the term in which the judgment is rendered, the proceeding may be entertained, even though the motion is not based on a defect appearing on the face of the record. Martin v. GMC, Fisher Body Div., 226 Ga. 860, 178 S.E.2d 183 (1970).

Hearing required because error not clear on face of judgment. — Because the facts presented did not create a circumstance showing the parties knew what order the trial court intended, and it was not obvious what the correct judgment should have been, the order entered could not have been corrected without an opportunity for the parties to be heard on this issue. Rouse v. Arrington, 283 Ga. App. 204, 641 S.E.2d 214 (2007).

Provided some meritorious reason is given. — Rule that the judge retains plenary control over judgments and orders during the term at which the judgments and orders are rendered was never intended to authorize a judge to set aside a judgment duly and regularly entered, unless some meritorious reason is given therefor. Hicks v. Hicks, 226 Ga. 798, 177 S.E.2d 690 (1970).

Failure to give notice of trial. — Because a judgment was entered in contravention of a party's due process rights to notice, the trial court was authorized to set the judgment aside. Crenshaw v. Crenshaw, 267 Ga. 20, 471 S.E.2d 845 (1996).

Power to vacate consent order. — Under the court's power to revise, correct, revoke, modify, or vacate a judgment or order if a meritorious reason exists for doing so, a trial court properly reconsidered and vacated a consent order transferring the case. Southern Drayage, Inc. v. Williams, 216 Ga. App. 721, 455 S.E.2d 418 (1995).

Court has inherent power to modify the court's own judgment during the term at which the judgment was rendered, and this power may be exercised on the court's own motion, with or without notice to the parties. Cagle v. Dixon, 234 Ga. 698, 217 S.E.2d 598 (1975); Clark v.

Ingram, 150 Ga. App. 127, 257 S.E.2d 33 (1979).

Because the superior court modified the court's judgment so as to vacate the court's order of dismissal and provide only for the entry of a default judgment, the issue of dismissal was moot and provided no basis for setting aside the judgment. But, because the court, absent amendment to the demand for judgment or argument supporting the judgment, awarded damages in excess of the amount claimed, that award had to be reversed. Stamps v. Nelson, 290 Ga. App. 277, 659 S.E.2d 697 (2008).

In exercise of sound discretion. — Trial judge has inherent power, during the same term of court in which a judgment is rendered, to revise, correct, revoke, modify, or vacate such judgment, even upon the judge's own motion, for the purpose of promoting justice and in the exercise of sound legal discretion. LeCraw v. Atlanta Arts Alliance, Inc., 126 Ga. App. 656, 191 S.E.2d 572 (1972).

Trial judge has power during the same term of court at which a judgment is rendered to reverse, correct, revoke, modify, or vacate the judgment in the exercise of the judge's discretion. Bank of Cumming v. Moseley, 243 Ga. 858, 257 S.E.2d 278 (1979); McCoy Lumber Co. v. Garland Lumber Sales, Inc., 182 Ga. App. 75, 354 S.E.2d 686 (1987).

Power over judgments not unlimited but discretionary. — Courts of record retain control over their orders and judgments during the term at which the judgments are made and, in the exercise of sound discretion, may revise or vacate the judgment; but the power to so deal with a judgment is not an unlimited or arbitrary power, but a discretionary one. Burger v. Dobbs, 87 Ga. App. 88, 73 S.E.2d 75 (1952) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Law seeks an end of litigation; and when parties have had full opportunity to plead and be heard, and a judgment is entered which in the judgment's nature ends the controversy, that judgment should not be disturbed, even while in the breast of the court, except in the exercise of sound legal discretion when it is necessary to do it in order to promote justice.

Burger v. Dobbs, 87 Ga. App. 88, 73 S.E.2d 75 (1952) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Power of court over judgment ceases with expiration of term. — Subsection (h) of this section has not changed the rule that after the expiration of the term at which a decree was entered, the decree is out of the power of the court to modify and revise the decree in any matter of substance or in any matter affecting the merits. City of Cornelia v. Gunter, 227 Ga. 464, 181 S.E.2d 489 (1971).

After expiration of the term at which a decree is entered, it is out of the power of the court to modify and revise the decree in any matter of substance or in any matter affecting the merits. Adams Drive, Ltd. v. All-Rite Trades, Inc., 136 Ga. App. 703, 222 S.E.2d 174 (1975).

After a judgment has become final and the court's discretion to change or modify the judgment ceases because a new term of court has supervened, the court can in no event set aside such judgment, unless the judgment is absolutely void, by an ex parte order and in the absence of notice and hearing afforded to the opposite party. Adams Drive, Ltd. v. All-Rite Trades, Inc., 136 Ga. App. 703, 222 S.E.2d 174 (1975).

With few exceptions, judgment may not be set aside beyond term in which judgment is rendered. Hughes v. Powell, 152 Ga. App. 851, 264 S.E.2d 303 (1980).

Statutory power to set aside judgment from others term. — Trial court is not authorized at a subsequent term of court to set aside a final judgment rendered at a prior term, except as provided in this section. Holloman v. Holloman, 228 Ga. 246, 184 S.E.2d 653 (1971).

Jurisdiction to set aside dismissal after term expires. — Judgment of dismissal for want of prosecution is a final judgment, and the trial court has no jurisdiction to set aside such dismissal after expiration of the term of court during which the judgment was entered, absent compliance with this section. Stocks v. Colonial Stores, Inc., 143 Ga. App. 722, 240 S.E.2d 151 (1977).

Trial court has no jurisdiction to set aside a dismissal and reinstate a case after expiration of the term at which the case was dismissed, nor can a judgment of the court be changed, amended, or modified after the expiration of the term during which that judgment was entered. Stocks v. Colonial Stores, Inc., 143 Ga. App. 722, 240 S.E.2d 151 (1977).

Power of Court over Judgments, Generally (Cont'd)

Just cause required to set aside or modify judgment. — Subsection (h) of this section, dealing with the law of the case rule, provides that with just cause a judgment may be set aside or modified, the court of course considering whether rights are vested and whether or not innocent parties would be hurt. Camera Shop, Inc. v. GAF Corp., 130 Ga. App. 88, 202 S.E.2d 241 (1973).

Although the law of the case rule, at the trial level, has been abolished, an order should not be set aside or modified without just cause, and the burden is on the movant to demonstrate that the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Tanner v. Tinsley, 152 Ga. App. 330, 262 S.E.2d 602 (1979).

Continuing jurisdiction of foreign court. — Because a Florida court issued an original custody decree, subsequently issuing a modification, and because one of the “individual contestants” continued to live in Florida and did not consent to the Georgia court’s jurisdiction, Florida exercised “continuing, exclusive” jurisdiction, a Georgia county court erred in entering an order domesticating the final divorce decree and increasing the amount of child support, and the superior court should have granted the plaintiff’s motion to set aside the order. Connell v. Woodward, 235 Ga. App. 751, 509 S.E.2d 647 (1998).

No power over judgment once appeal taken. — Although, as a general proposition, the trial court has power to correct mistakes in judgments, a notice of appeal operates as a supersedeas and deprives the trial court of the power to affect the judgment appealed so that subsequent proceedings purporting to supplement, amend, alter, or modify the judgment, whether pursuant to statutory or inherent power, are without effect. Brown v. Wilson Chevrolet-Olds, Inc., 150 Ga. App. 525, 258 S.E.2d 139 (1979).

Habeas court lacked jurisdiction to amend the court’s original order during the pendency of an appeal from that order as the filing of the notice of appeal operated as a supersedeas and deprived the trial court of the power to affect the judgment appealed. Upton v. Jones, 280 Ga. 895, 635 S.E.2d 112 (2006).

Court of appeals erred in reversing the trial court’s grant of partial summary judgment in favor of a county because the trial court did not have authority to enter the court’s order purporting to make the grant of partial summary judgment final under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b) since by the arrestee’s first notice of appeal, an arrestee put the machinery of appellate review into motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(h) and committed a procedural default; accordingly, the arrestee was foreclosed from resubmitting the matter for review on appeal of the final judgment, and because the first direct appeal was dismissed, that dismissal was binding upon the trial court under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h). Houston County v. Harrell, 287 Ga. 162, 695 S.E.2d 29 (2010).

Cause in which the trial court has been reversed on appeal is still pending in the trial court for further proceedings, or until what is de facto ordered to be done by the appellate court’s reversal is done. West v. Dorsey, 167 Ga. App. 233, 305 S.E.2d 840 (1983), rev’d on other grounds, 252 Ga. 92, 311 S.E.2d 816 (1984).

Collateral Attack

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 provides, generally, for collateral attack in any court by any person if a judgment is void on the judgment’s face; otherwise, judgments are subject to direct attack only in the court of rendition by motions to set aside or for new trial or by complaint in equity. C & S Nat’l Bank v. Burden, 145 Ga. App. 402, 244 S.E.2d 244 (1978).

Timeliness. — In a case in which a defendant filed a “petition seeking relief from judgment” under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(2), after a trial court denied the defendant’s habeas corpus petition, the “petition” could not be considered untimely as such a petition did not have to be filed in the same term of court in which the judgment the petition attacked was entered, but the “petition” was the wrong vehicle for seeking relief because the defendant did not allege the habeas court’s judgment was obtained or procured by extrinsic fraud, accident, or mistake, which were the grounds upon which a motion under § 9-11-60(d)(2) could be granted. If the “petition” was considered to be a motion for reconsideration of the merits of the habeas court’s judgment, it would have been untimely filed as such a motion had to be filed in the same term of court in which the judgment the petition attacked was entered. Harris v. State, 278 Ga. 280, 600 S.E.2d 592 (2004).

For a judgment to be attacked by third person it must be void on the judgment’s face. Peek v. Southern Guar. Ins. Co., 142 Ga. App. 671, 236 S.E.2d 767 (1977), rev’d on other grounds, 240 Ga. 498, 241 S.E.2d 210 (1978).

Judgment is “void on its face” when a nonamendable defect appears on the face of the record or pleadings that is not cured by verdict or judgment, and the pleadings affirmatively show that no legal claim in fact existed. Unigard Ins. Co. v. Kemp, 141 Ga. App. 698, 234 S.E.2d 539 (1977); Albitus v. F & M Bank, 159 Ga. App. 406, 283 S.E.2d 632 (1981); Lawing v. Erwin, 251 Ga. 134, 303 S.E.2d 444 (1983).

Collateral attacks provided for under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 are limited strictly to circumstances in which the trial court lacks either subject matter or personal jurisdiction, rendering such a judgment “void on its face” within the meaning of subsection (a), such that a nonamendable defect appearing on the face of the pleadings in a divorce suit was not such a judgment and was presentable only within the three-year limitations period of subsection (f). Murphy v. Murphy, 263 Ga. 280, 430 S.E.2d 749 (1993).

In a suit for damages arising from a motor vehicle accident, a trial court erred by failing to set aside a default judgment entered against a transport corporation for the corporation’s failure to file an answer to an amended complaint as no order from the trial court required the corporation to answer. As a result, the default judgment was improper since the default created a nonamendable defect. Hiner

Transp., Inc. v. Jeter, 293 Ga. App. 704, 667 S.E.2d 919 (2008).

If a nonamendable defect appears on the face of the record or pleadings, judgment is void and may be collaterally attacked by any person when the judgment becomes material to the interests of the parties to consider it. Cooper v. Public Fin. Corp., 144 Ga. App. 572, 241 S.E.2d 839 (1978).

Void judgment is a mere nullity, and may be so held in any court when the judgment becomes material to the interest of the parties to consider the judgment; laches is no bar. DeJarnette Supply Co. v. F.P. Plaza, Inc., 229 Ga. 625, 193 S.E.2d 852 (1972).

Judgment regular on its face not subject to collateral attack. — Judgment of superior court cannot be collaterally attacked, unless the invalidity of such a judgment appears on the judgment’s face; any attack upon such a judgment not void on the judgment’s face must be made in a direct proceeding for that purpose. Payne v. McCrary, 187 Ga. 573, 1 S.E.2d 742 (1939) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

If an order is not void upon the order’s face, but appears upon the order’s face to be perfectly legal and binding, such order may not be attacked collaterally in a proceeding praying for mandamus only. Poole v. Doyal, 203 Ga. 667, 47 S.E.2d 744 (1948) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Although a judgment rendered by a court lacking jurisdiction of the parties or of the subject matter is void and may be attacked by any party in any court where such want of jurisdiction appears upon the face of the record, the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction may not be collaterally attacked in any other court for irregularity, but shall be held as a valid judgment until the judgment is reversed or set aside. Thompson v. Central of Ga. Ry., 98 Ga. App. 228, 105 S.E.2d 508 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

If a judgment does not show on the judgment’s face that the judgment is void for lack of jurisdiction of the subject matter or of the parties, it will only be subject to direct attack. Logan v. Nunnally, 128 Ga. App. 43, 195 S.E.2d 659 (1973).

Action against an insurer arising from settlement of a minor's claim for personal injuries reached over 20 years prior was an improper collateral attack on the judgment of the court that approved the settlement and should have been dismissed. Zepp v. Toporek, 211 Ga. App. 169, 438 S.E.2d 636 (1994).

Alleged conspiracy to issue a writ of possession in a case would not render the judgment therein void on the judgment's face, and the judgment could be subject only to direct rather than collateral attack. Dean v. Schreeder, Wheeler & Flint, 222 Ga. App. 426, 474 S.E.2d 648 (1996).

Superior court lacked jurisdiction to vacate or set aside an order of the state court that was not void on the order's face and that had been affirmed on appeal. Moseley v. Interfinancial Mgt. Co., 224 Ga. App. 80, 479 S.E.2d 427 (1996), cert. denied, 522 U.S. 925, 118 S. Ct. 322, 139 L. Ed. 2d 249 (1997).

Since the allegations in a joint suit would not render the judgments in the prior suits void on their face, the effect of the joint suit was to collaterally attack the judgments in the prior suits in violation of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Richardson v. Simmons, 245 Ga. App. 749, 538 S.E.2d 830 (2000).

Attorney's defense to the trial court's order holding the attorney in contempt for the attorney's refusal to turn over a client's file challenging the underlying validity of the prior order requiring the attorney to turn over the file was a collateral attack that could be sustained under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(a) only if the prior order was void on the order's face. However, the trial court's prior order was not void on the order's face since: (1) the attorney was served with a motion to compel prior to the entry of the prior order; (2) the trial court had jurisdiction to issue an order to compel a nonparty to release necessary non-privileged documents specifically prepared in anticipation of a divorce action pending before the trial court under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-26(b), 9-11-34(c)(1), and 9-11-37(a); (3) the attorney willfully disregarded the prior order; and (4) the prior order was entered in a matter over which the trial court had subject matter jurisdiction, making its disobedience contempt of court. Mary A. Stearns, P.C. v. Williams-Murphy, 263 Ga. App. 239, 587 S.E.2d 247 (2003).

When a citizen failed to show that the judgment in the citizen's first case lacked either personal or subject matter jurisdiction, the citizen failed to show that the judgment was void; because the original order was not appealed, the citizen was not permitted to relitigate that same issue in a later action. Nally v. Bartow County Grand Jurors, 280 Ga. 790, 633 S.E.2d 337 (2006).

Trial court properly dismissed a business' contribution action, filed pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 51-12-32, on subject matter jurisdiction grounds as: (1) the court's finding that the business was the sole tortfeasor barred the action; (2) that finding was not void; (3) no appeal was taken from that finding; and (4) the suit amounted to an improper collateral attack on the default judgment entered against the business. State Auto Mut. Ins. Co. v. Relocation & Corporate Hous. Servs., 287 Ga. App. 575, 651 S.E.2d 829 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 163 (Ga. 2008).

Trial court properly granted summary judgment to a law firm and one of the firm's attorneys because the claims that formed the litigation constituted an unauthorized collateral attack on the settlement the mother accepted in an underlying medical malpractice action. Buttacavoli v. Owen, Gleaton, Egan, Jones & Sweeney LLP, 331 Ga. App. 88, 769 S.E.2d 794 (2015).

Absent fraud. — If a judgment is regular on the judgment's face, the presumption is that there was sufficient evidence to authorize the judgment, and the judgment is conclusive as to the subject matter that the judgment purports to decide until the judgment is reversed or impeached for fraud; the judgment cannot be attacked collaterally on account of any error or want of regularity in its exercise. Rowell v. Rowell, 214 Ga. 377, 105 S.E.2d 19 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Judgment procured by fraud must be deemed absolutely void before the judgment can be collaterally attacked. Wood v.

Wood, 200 Ga. 796, 38 S.E.2d 545 (1946) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Trial court did not err in setting aside the alimony and equitable division portions of a divorce decree in a case in which one spouse proved that the other spouse fraudulently hid assets to prevent their equitable division during the divorce, as under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(2), fraud is a ground for setting aside a judgment. White v. White, 274 Ga. 884, 561 S.E.2d 801 (2002).

Judgment or decree of court having no jurisdiction is a mere nullity and may be attacked in any court and by any person. Drake v. Drake, 187 Ga. 423, 1 S.E.2d 573 (1939) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Void judgment may be attacked in any court by any person. Dupree v. Blankenship, 83 Ga. App. 664, 64 S.E.2d 457 (1951) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-701).

Third person not a party cannot go into court and move to set aside a judgment that is not against that party. Merchants' & Mfrs'. Nat'l Bank v. Haiman, 80 Ga. 624, 5 S.E. 795 (1888) (decided under former law); Suwannee Turpentine Co. v. Baxter & Co., 109 Ga. 597, 35 S.E. 142 (1900) (decided under former law); Chapman v. Taliaferro, 1 Ga. App. 235, 58 S.E. 128 (1907) (decided under former law).

In motions to set aside, only parties to the record can make a motion. Bruce v. Neal Bank, 147 Ga. 392, 94 S.E. 241 (1917) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5957).

One not a party to a judgment cannot on mere motion procure the judgement to be set aside. Bivins v. Fleischer, 214 Ga. 380, 105 S.E.2d 12 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

When the owners of a corporation sued waived a forum selection clause, the owners also waived the defenses of personal jurisdiction and venue by failing to raise those defenses at the earliest opportunity; thus, as non-parties to the underlying case, the owners could not otherwise appeal the default judgment against the corporation. Rice v. Champion Bldgs., Inc., 288 Ga. App. 597, 654 S.E.2d 390 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 326 (Ga. 2008).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 inapplicable to individual not a party to judgment. — Action against the attorney who represented a minor arising from the settlement of the minor's claim for personal injuries reached over 20 years prior was not barred by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 since the claim alleging that the attorney violated the attorney's professional obligations to the minor arose from the attorney's services as such. Zepp v. Toporek, 211 Ga. App. 169, 438 S.E.2d 636 (1994).

Consent judgment not subject to collateral attack for want of assent. — Consent judgment showing on the judgment's face that the judgment is a consent judgment cannot be attacked collaterally for want of assent; the attack must be by direct proceedings for that purpose, brought within the three-year period provided by law. Evans v. Evans, 62 Ga. App. 618, 9 S.E.2d 99 (1940) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Collateral attack for fraud on judgment of foreign court. — Judgment of a court of a foreign state having jurisdiction of the subject matter and the parties cannot be collaterally attacked in the courts of this state on the ground of fraud. Wood v. Wood, 200 Ga. 796, 38 S.E.2d 545 (1946) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Jurisdiction to set aside judgment affecting property. — Action to enjoin the sale or encumbrance of property in accordance with certain judgments was actually a collateral attack to set aside adverse judgments, and could only be entertained in the jurisdiction of the rendering court since the judgments were not void on the judgments' face. Williams v. Nuckolls, 229 Ga. 48, 189 S.E.2d 82 (1972) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Conviction based on a guilty plea to an unenforceable ordinance is void on the conviction's face and a mere nullity, and may be attacked. Cofer v. Cook, 141 Ga. App. 646, 234 S.E.2d 185 (1977).

Collateral attack is proper in a license suspension case, if conviction on which the suspension was based is void on the conviction's face. Hardison v. Shepard,

246 Ga. 196, 269 S.E.2d 458 (1980).

Judgment based on insufficient service. — If service is insufficient to give the court jurisdiction to render a judgment, and there is no waiver of service, the judgment may be attacked by any person whose rights are affected by the judgment. Barnes v. Continental Ins. Co., 231 Ga. 246, 201 S.E.2d 150 (1973).

Levy under a void judgment against garnishee may be successfully resisted by an affidavit of illegality, alleging invalidity in the judgment. Jenkins v. Community Loan & Inv. Corp., 120 Ga. App. 543, 171 S.E.2d 654 (1969).

Motion to dismiss contempt citation for failure to pay alimony. — Motion to dismiss a contempt citation for failure to pay alimony makes a collateral attack on the alimony judgment, which can only be sustained if the judgment is absolutely void. Lambert v. Gilmer, 228 Ga. 774, 187 S.E.2d 855 (1972).

Insufficient evidence. — Judgment may not be collaterally attacked on the ground that the judgment was based on insufficient evidence. Lawing v. Erwin, 251 Ga. 134, 303 S.E.2d 444 (1983).

Uninsured Motorist Act is not an exception. There is absolutely nothing within the terms of the Uninsured Motorist Act to evince a legislative intent that a judgment, otherwise valid on the judgment's face, is not to be afforded the statutory protection against collateral attack simply because that judgment was obtained in an action against an uninsured motorist. Chitwood v. Southern Gen. Ins. Co., 189 Ga. App. 697, 377 S.E.2d 210, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 911, 377 S.E.2d 210 (1988).

Insurer could not collaterally attack a judgment against an uninsured motorist, in the insured's action to recover a judgment, by relying on extraneous evidence to show that the uninsured motorist had not been properly served in the underlying action. Chitwood v. Southern Gen. Ins. Co., 189 Ga. App. 697, 377 S.E.2d 210, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 911, 377 S.E.2d 210 (1988).

No relief against judgment creditor for fraudulently securing judgment.

— Law provides various forms of relief that can be pursued by one who believes that a judgment has been wrongly entered. However, a cause of action for damages based upon the judgment creditor's alleged fraudulent securing of the judgment is not among them. Matthews Group & Assocs. v. Wages, 180 Ga. App. 151, 348 S.E.2d 695 (1986).

Collateral attack on foreign judgment. — Collateral attack on a judgment entered in another state, based on lack of personal jurisdiction of the foreign court, is precluded only if the defendant has appeared in the foreign court and has thus had an opportunity to litigate the issue. Ramsey Winch Co. v. Trust Co. Bank, 153 Ga. App. 500, 265 S.E.2d 848 (1980).

Plaintiff's judgment obtained in Texas by default against a Georgia resident was properly set aside when the plaintiff failed to negate the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction. Chambers v. Navare, 231 Ga. App. 318, 498 S.E.2d 173 (1998).

In a Tennessee case in which there was no proof that the Georgia court lacked jurisdiction over either the mother or the subject matter when the court ordered the termination of the mother's parental rights, the mother could not mount a collateral attack on the Georgia termination order. Downey v. Downey (In re Adoption of Downey), 2003 Tenn. App. LEXIS 322 (Tenn. Ct. App. Apr. 30, 2003).

Collateral attack of summary judgment. — Debtor could not collaterally attack the trial court's prior summary judgment order through the filing of a subsequent lawsuit because the trial court's prior summary judgment order was not void on the judgment's face; thus, the only manner in which the debtor could have attacked the judgment was through a direct proceeding brought in the trial court that entered the judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Rose v. Household Fin. Corp., 316 Ga. App. 282, 728 S.E.2d 879 (2012).

Motion for New Trial

Extraordinary motions for new trial were still an available procedure under former Code 1933, § 70-303 and Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27, and 30 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-41 and 9-11-60).

Windsor Forest, Inc. v. Rocker, 121 Ga. App. 773, 175 S.E.2d 65 (1970).

Motion for new trial goes only to the verdict, and reaches only such errors of law and fact as contributed to rendition thereof. Alexander v. Blackmon, 129 Ga. App. 214, 199 S.E.2d 376 (1973).

Proper venue required. — In an action which represented the tenth time a litigant had made the same argument that summary disposition of a prior state court case deprived the litigant of the federal Seventh Amendment right to a jury trial, a motion for a new trial was properly dismissed given that: (1) the claims therein had been previously addressed and rejected; (2) Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XII was a right of choice provision, not a right of access provision; and (3) the motion was both untimely under O.C.G.A. § 5-5-40(a), and filed in the wrong county court, in violation of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(b). Crane v. Poteat, 282 Ga. App. 182, 638 S.E.2d 335 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 54 (Ga. 2007); cert. dismissed, 551 U.S. 1101, 127 S. Ct. 2912, 168 L. Ed. 2d 241 (2007).

Negligence of party or counsel. — Plaintiff's negligence in failing to prepare for trial, and the plaintiff and plaintiff's counsel's lack of diligence in following the progress of the proceedings, did not equate with an intrinsic defect necessitating a new trial, and the lack of showing of a legal excuse for the plaintiff's non-appearance at trial supported the trial court's order denying the plaintiff's motion for a new trial. Scriver v. Lister, 235 Ga. App. 487, 510 S.E.2d 59 (1998).

In a medical malpractice action, a motion for new trial asserting new evidence was properly denied due to a lack of the movant's diligence to procure the evidence as the new evidence was the identity of a witness who was revealed to the movant on the eve of trial, the movant declined the trial court's offer of a continuance to locate the witness, and did not attempt to locate the witness until after a verdict was returned. Gill v. Spivey, 264 Ga. App. 723, 592 S.E.2d 132 (2003).

It is not proper to contest sufficiency of an opponent's pleadings by motion for new trial. Johnson v. Cleveland, 131 Ga. App. 560, 206 S.E.2d 704

(1974); Pillow v. Seymour, 255 Ga. 683, 341 S.E.2d 447 (1986).

Motion for new trial required for evidentiary matters. — Ordinarily, a motion for new trial is required if a motion is made to set aside a judgment based solely upon matters of evidence or want of evidence, and if the motion is denominated a motion in arrest or to set aside, it will be considered a motion for new trial if it meets the requirements for attacking the verdict. Adams v. Morgan, 114 Ga. App. 180, 150 S.E.2d 556, cert. dismissed, 222 Ga. 820, 152 S.E.2d 693 (1966) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Exclusion of evidence. — General partners' motion for a new trial was properly denied as evidence of the limited partners' attempts to liquidate their interests in the partnership was properly excluded as evidence of settlement negotiations. Kellett v. Kumar, 281 Ga. App. 120, 635 S.E.2d 310 (2006).

Evidence properly admitted. — General partners' (GPs') motion for a new trial was properly denied as evidence of a GP's involvement in a prior suit was properly admitted to show a course of conduct because the prior suit also involved a breach of a partnership agreement, a breach of fiduciary duty, a nursing home, and accusations that the GP violated the plain language of the partnership agreement by failing to pay the limited partners their preferred returns. Kellett v. Kumar, 281 Ga. App. 120, 635 S.E.2d 310 (2006).

Ground of motion for new trial must be complete in itself. Blakeney v. Bank of Hahira, 176 Ga. 190, 167 S.E. 114 (1932); Anderson v. State, 46 Ga. App. 728, 169 S.E. 60 (1933) (decided under former Civil Code 1910).

Availability of motions for new trial after involuntary dismissal. — After an order of involuntary dismissal under Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 41 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-41(b)), extraordinary motions for new trial are still available under former Code 1933, § 70-303 and Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27, and 30 (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 5-5-41 and 9-11-60). Vaughan v. Car Tapes, Inc., 135 Ga. App. 178, 217 S.E.2d 436 (1975).

Verdict based on perjured testimony. — Extraordinary motions for new trial are available if a verdict and judgment are based on the testimony of a witness who is subsequently found guilty of perjury. Windsor Forest, Inc. v. Rocker, 121 Ga. App. 773, 175 S.E.2d 65 (1970).

Extraordinary motions for new trial rest largely within the trial court's discretion and the court's judgment will not be interfered with unless the court's discretion has been manifestly abused. Windsor Forest, Inc. v. Rocker, 121 Ga. App. 773, 175 S.E.2d 65 (1970).

Objections that go to judgment only cannot properly be made grounds of a motion for new trial. A motion for new trial seeks to set aside the verdict. No new trial is necessary to correct a judgment or decree. If a judgment or decree is erroneous or illegal, direct exception should be taken to it at the proper time. Sands v. Lamar Properties, Inc., 159 Ga. App. 718, 285 S.E.2d 24 (1981).

Juror misconduct. — General partners' (GPs') motion for a new trial was properly denied as the juror affidavits filed by the GPs outlining alleged juror misconduct constituted an attempt to impeach the jury's verdict in the exact manner prohibited by O.C.G.A. § 9-10-9. Kellett v. Kumar, 281 Ga. App. 120, 635 S.E.2d 310 (2006).

Reason for the rule that a new trial motion must go to findings of fact is that a new trial is necessarily authorized only if errors occurred that might have affected the findings of the trier of fact; if it is only the judgment thereon that is alleged to be erroneous or illegal, this alludes to a matter of law only and there is no need for a new trial, but the party must merely take direct exception at the proper time. Sunn v. Mercury Marine, 166 Ga. App. 567, 305 S.E.2d 6 (1983).

Motion to re-open considered motion for new trial. — Motion to re-open a case, based upon the failure to adjudicate a material issue, is in essence a motion for new trial under which must be based upon an intrinsic defect not appearing upon the face of the record or pleadings. Gabel v. Revels, 203 Ga. App. 131, 416 S.E.2d 103 (1992).

Denial of application for discretionary review could have been based merely on a determination that the application was rendered redundant and unnecessary by the pendency of a present appeal and did not constitute a prior adjudication of the merits of the present appeal. Berger & Washburne Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Commercial Ins. Brokers, Inc., 204 Ga. App. 146, 418 S.E.2d 640 (1992).

Court erred in failing to hold hearing on motion. — Trial court erred in denying a hotel owner's motion for new trial without holding the hearing mandated by Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 6.3; while the motion reiterated arguments made in the owner's unsuccessful motion to set aside a default judgment, the motion also argued that evidentiary errors occurred during the trial on damages and that the award was excessive, and thus sought a reexamination of the issues of fact. PHF II Buckhead LLC v. Dinku, 315 Ga. App. 76, 726 S.E.2d 569 (2012), cert. denied, No. S12C1257, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 1041 (Ga. 2012).

Motion to Set Aside

Editor's note. — As originally enacted, the first sentence of subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 stated that a motion to set aside must be predicated on some nonamendable defect which does appear on the face of the record or pleadings. Georgia Laws 1974, p. 1138, § 1, added the exception relating to jurisdictional errors. Hence, decisions relating to motions to set aside predicated on jurisdictional errors, based on O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 prior to its 1974 amendment, should be consulted with care.

Constitutionality of subsection (d). — Subsection (d) of this section is not unconstitutionally vague. Moore v. American Fin. Sys., 236 Ga. 610, 225 S.E.2d 17 (1976).

Subsection (d) as revision of prior law. — Subsection (d) of this section does not purport to resemble Fed. R. Civ. P. 60; it is a revision of the earlier law that was found prior to 1966 in former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110, and as far back as the Code of 1873. Moore v. American Fin. Sys., 236 Ga. 610, 225 S.E.2d 17 (1976).

Subsection (e) inapplicable to motions under subsection (d). — When an individual files a motion under subsection

(d) of this section, subsection (e) and the equitable principles set forth therein are inapplicable. Eder v. American Express Co., 138 Ga. App. 168, 225 S.E.2d 737 (1976).

Based on notice under O.C.G.A. § 15-6-21(c). — Judgment was entered by the trial court based on a jury verdict in favor of the defendant, and the trial court instructed the defendant to mail a notice of the judgment to the plaintiff, which the plaintiff admittedly timely received; thus, the mandate of O.C.G.A. § 15-6-21(c) was met and the trial court properly denied the plaintiff's motion to set aside the judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g); although the trial court did not make a specific finding as to whether the notice requirements of § 15-6-21(c) were met, the facts that supported denial of the motion to set aside were set out and those indicated compliance with the notice statute. Woods v. Savannah Rest. Corp., 267 Ga. App. 387, 599 S.E.2d 338 (2004).

Trial court properly set aside the dismissal of a declaratory judgment action brought by putative heirs against two trustees of an estate as the trial court failed to provide notice of a peremptory calendar call the case was placed on, which led to the dismissal, therefore, the trial court had the authority to correct the error. Andrus v. Andrus, 290 Ga. App. 394, 659 S.E.2d 793 (2008).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34. — Wife's appeal of a judgment granting a husband's motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(2) to set aside an order awarding the wife sole legal and physical custody of the parties' children, eliminating the husband's right of visitation, and increasing the husband's child support obligations was a "custody case" subject to direct appeal pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a)(11); the grant of a motion to set aside in a child custody case is directly appealable, and an action seeking to change visitation qualifies for treatment as a "child custody case". Edge v. Edge, 290 Ga. 551, 722 S.E.2d 749 (2012).

Court of appeals was unable to determine whether the trial court's denial of a driver's motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g) to set aside an order dismissing a lawsuit was proper because the trial court made no findings of fact about whether the court sent the notice of the order of dismissal to the driver as required by O.C.G.A. § 15-6-21(c); the driver submitted affidavits in which members and employees of the driver's law firm attested that the firm did not receive notice of the order of dismissal, which also was some evidence that notice was not sent. Tyliczka v. Chance, 313 Ga. App. 787, 723 S.E.2d 27 (2012).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 5-6-35. — While the denial of a motion to set aside may be considered appealable in its own right when the motion is filed pursuant to subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, the right of appeal is conditioned, under such circumstances, upon compliance with the application procedures set forth in O.C.G.A. § 5-6-35. North Carolina Constr. Co. v. Action Mobilplatform, Inc., 187 Ga. App. 507, 370 S.E.2d 800 (1988).

Appeals from the denial of a motion to set aside the judgment under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 are subject to the discretionary appeals procedure (O.C.G.A. § 5-6-35(a)(8)), even when coupled with motions for a new trial or judgment n.o.v. (§ 5-6-35(d)). Fabe v. Floyd, 199 Ga. App. 322, 405 S.E.2d 265, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 906, 405 S.E.2d 265 (1991).

Appeal from an order denying a motion to set aside filed pursuant to subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 is subject to the application procedures set forth in O.C.G.A. § 5-6-35(b). Agency Mgt. Servs. v. Escape Travel/Tour Servs., 199 Ga. App. 882, 406 S.E.2d 285 (1991); TMS Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Galloway, 205 Ga. App. 896, 424 S.E.2d 71 (1992).

Order that simultaneously denies both a motion for new trial and a motion to vacate or set aside a judgment is not directly appealable. Gooding v. Boatright, 211 Ga. App. 221, 438 S.E.2d 685 (1993).

Denial of a defendant's motion to set aside the judgment required an application for discretionary appeal. Bonnell v. Amtex, Inc., 217 Ga. App. 378, 457 S.E.2d 590 (1995).

Appeal from a denial of a motion for relief from a foreign judgment based on the foreign state's lack of personal jurisdiction was subject to the discretionary appeal statute, O.C.G.A. § 5-6-35. Okepkpe v. Commerce Funding Corp., 218 Ga. App. 705, 463 S.E.2d 23 (1995).

Although the denial of a motion to set aside a judgment was ordinarily subject to the discretionary appeal procedure, O.C.G.A. § 5-6-35(a)(8), the denial of a stepson's motion to set aside was reviewable in conjunction with the stepson's appeal from the superior court's judgment reviewing the probate court's decision because the superior court's judgment reviewing the probate court's decision was directly appealable under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34(a)(1). Bocker v. Crisp, 313 Ga. App. 585, 722 S.E.2d 186 (2012).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 34-9-106. — In a worker's compensation action, because an employer's motion to set aside an award in favor of an injured employee focused exclusively on issues that the employer could have had corrected in a direct appeal to the Workers' Compensation Board, or in the hearing before the administrative law judge, the superior court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying that motion. Winnersville Roofing Co. v. Coddington, 283 Ga. App. 95, 640 S.E.2d 680 (2006).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 15-6-21. — Because the trial court failed to make an explicit finding of willfulness in the court's order dismissing the plaintiff's case for failure to comply with an order compelling discovery, dismissal was reversed, and the case was remanded for a hearing on the issue; as a result, the appeals court declined to consider an argument that the plaintiff's counsel did not receive notice of the order compelling discovery, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 15-6-21(c), as any remedy for an alleged lack of notice was to pursue a motion to set aside pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(2). Rouse v. Arrington, 283 Ga. App. 204, 641 S.E.2d 214 (2007).

Construction with O.C.G.A. § 14-11-304. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a motion to set aside a consent judgment entered against a debtor, a limited liability company, as the fact that the company's sole member did not receive notice of the complaint or approve the consent judgment was insufficient to warrant that relief as the member was considered a separate legal entity from the company. Old Nat'l Villages, LLC v. Lenox Pines, LLC, 290 Ga. App. 517, 659 S.E.2d 891 (2008).

Subsection (d) of Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60) does not conflict with Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b)), relating to amendments to conform to the evidence. Moore v. American Fin. Sys., 236 Ga. 610, 225 S.E.2d 17 (1976).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b) does not overlap with subsection (d). — Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-15(b)) only concerns amendments to conform to the evidence, and in no respect overlaps with subsection (d) of Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60). Moore v. American Fin. Sys., 236 Ga. 610, 225 S.E.2d 17 (1976).

Power of court. — Judgment cannot be set aside unless the grounds relied upon are unmixed with the negligence or the fault of the movant; however, a trial court in the exercise of the court's discretion has inherent power during the same term of court at which a judgment is rendered to reverse, correct, revoke, modify, or vacate the judgment and the exercise of such discretionary power will not be reversed in the absence of a manifest abuse of discretion. Young Constr., Inc. v. Old Hickory House #3, Inc., 210 Ga. App. 559, 436 S.E.2d 581 (1993).

Motion considered outside term in which judgment rendered. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 makes no distinction between fraud, accident, mistake, lack of jurisdiction, or a nonamendable defect as grounds for setting aside a judgment. Therefore, a motion to set aside a judgment based upon fraud, accident, or mistake may also be properly considered and granted outside of the term in which the judgment was granted. Wright v. Archer, 210 Ga. App. 607, 436 S.E.2d 775 (1993).

When a trial court erroneously granted an insured statutory damages against an insurer, for bad faith, under O.C.G.A. § 33-4-6, for each of 26 medical bills arising from one automobile accident, this was a nonamendable defect that appeared on the face of the record so the trial court could correct the court's judgment in the term of court after the term in which the judgment was entered by granting one statutory damages award for all claims arising from the accident. Byrd v. Regal Ins. Co., 275 Ga. App. 779, 621 S.E.2d 758 (2005).

Claim was unauthorized as basis and was outside time limit. — In an action by a client against the client's former attorney, the client's claims that an order was invalid because the order was unreasonable, unlawful, ambiguous, or against public policy, or because the order resulted from the attorney's fraud or other wrongful acts, were either unauthorized as a basis for setting aside the judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d) or were raised outside of the three-year time limit of § 9-11-60(f). Hook v. Bergen, 286 Ga. App. 258, 649 S.E.2d 313 (2007), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 697 (Ga. 2007).

Stay pending arbitration. — In an action between a contractor and a landowner alleging a breach of contract and other related claims in which disputes arising under the parties' contract were required to be submitted to arbitration the superior court erred in entering a default judgment against the landowner, and in denying relief from that judgment, ignoring a stay pending arbitration, as the issues involved in the litigation were ones that fell under the parties' agreement. GF/Legacy Dallas, Inc. v. Juneau Constr. Co., LLC, 282 Ga. App. 14, 637 S.E.2d 511 (2006), cert. denied, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 157 (Ga. 2007).

Party must avail oneself of statutory procedure. — Assuming, arguendo, that a dismissal was improperly vacated and set aside by means of a consent order, a subsequent action against others is not a proper forum for addressing that issue. Rather, a plaintiff must resort to the procedure set forth in subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 for setting aside a judgment. Howell Mill/Collier Assocs. v. Gonzales, 186 Ga. App. 909, 368 S.E.2d 831 (1988).

Court not required to hold evidentiary hearing. — After a plaintiff attached only a list of documents to a motion to set aside a judgment, but not the documents themselves, and nothing indicated that the documents were newly discovered or that the documents showed the judgment was in error, the trial court was not required to hold an evidentiary hearing to develop the evidence. Hooper v. Harris, 236 Ga. App. 651, 512 S.E.2d 312 (1999).

Superior court cannot set aside state court judgment. — Superior court of a county does not have authority to set aside a judgment of the state court of that county on the ground that publication of the state court calendar is legally insufficient notice of the trial date if the superior court is not the court of rendition. Loveless v. Conner, 254 Ga. 663, 333 S.E.2d 586 (1985).

Superior court could not set aside probate court order. — Superior court did not have jurisdiction to set aside an order of the probate court dismissing a guardian when the probate court judgment was not void on the judgment's face. Utica Mut. Ins. Co. v. Mitchell, 227 Ga. App. 830, 490 S.E.2d 489 (1997).

Judgment not set aside before case transferred to superior court. — Because a tenant's motion to set aside a default judgment in a dispossessory action was not granted, the default judgment stood as a final order, and the magistrate court's attempt to transfer the case to superior court by agreement of the parties was improper. Abushmais v. Erby, 282 Ga. 619, 652 S.E.2d 549 (2007).

Domestication of foreign judgment. — If the party seeking to domesticate a foreign judgment fails to fulfill the party's burden in establishing the jurisdiction of the foreign court, the Georgia trial court may set aside the judgment. E. Howard St. Clair & Assocs. v. Northwest Carpets, Inc., 237 Ga. App. 537, 515 S.E.2d 660 (1999).

Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Law. — Proper method for attacking a foreign judgment filed under the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Law, O.C.G.A. § 9-12-130 et seq., is a motion to set aside under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d), and the only appealable judgment in a case when a creditor sought to domesticate a New Jersey judgment in Georgia was the order denying the motion to set aside; because the corporation and the individual failed to appeal the denial of the motion to set aside by application, the order directing the corporation and the individual to pay in accordance with the New Jersey judgment was a nullity and provided no basis for review so the appellate court had no jurisdictional basis for the appeal and the appeal was dismissed. Arrowhead Alternator, Inc. v. CIT Communs. Fin. Corp., 268 Ga. App. 464, 602 S.E.2d 231 (2004).

Appeal of an order denying the appellants' motion to vacate a foreign judgment was dismissed because the appellants failed to follow the correct procedure for appealing the trial court's decision; the appellants never filed a motion to set aside the judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d), which was the proper method for attacking a foreign judgment filed under the Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Law, O.C.G.A. § 9-12-130 et seq.; the underlying subject matter of the appellants' motions was an attempt to set aside a judgment, and the denial of the appellants' motions was subject to discretionary appeal because the underlying subject matter generally controlled over the relief sought in determining the proper procedure to follow to appeal. Noaha, LLC v. Vista Antiques & Persian Rugs, Inc., 306 Ga. App. 323, 702 S.E.2d 660 (2010).

Because a trial court was required by O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-60 and 9-12-132 to accord a foreign judgment full faith and credit if the judgment was proper under the law in which the judgment was rendered, the court erred in holding that Georgia law governed the filing of the debtors' answer in a New York case; the trial court erred in granting a motion to set aside the judgment since the debtors were in default for failing to timely serve an answer upon counsel in accordance with N.Y. C.P.L.R. 320(a), 2103(b). LeRoy Vill. Green Residential Health Care Facility, Inc. v. Downs, 310 Ga. App. 754, 713 S.E.2d 728 (2011).

In an action to enforce a foreign judgment from Arkansas, the trial court erred by setting aside the judgment against an individual defendant because that individual defendant appeared in the Arkansas court by filing in that court a motion to dismiss the action; thus, the individual defendant waived the defense of lack of personal jurisdiction by failing to raise the issue in the motion to dismiss in the Arkansas court. Carter v. Heritage Corner, Ltd., 320 Ga. App. 828, 741 S.E.2d 182 (2013).

Complaint seeking to set judgment aside for fraud treated as motion to set aside. — Because the complaint was framed as an unauthorized complaint in equity, but was actually an effort to set aside the judgment of the probate court because of fraud, the plaintiff's complaint must be treated as a motion to set aside the judgment in which relief was denied. Manley v. Jones, 203 Ga. App. 173, 416 S.E.2d 744, cert. denied, 203 Ga. App. 907, 416 S.E.2d 744 (1992).

Defendant's motion to set aside based on fraud was properly dismissed because the fraud did not come within paragraph (d)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 and the defendant failed to exercise proper diligence to discover the forgery prior to judgment. Herringdine v. Nalley Equip. Leasing, Ltd., 238 Ga. App. 210, 517 S.E.2d 571 (1999).

Jurisdiction over workers' compensation award. — Superior court, rather than the board of workers' compensation, is the proper forum for bringing a motion to set aside a workers' compensation award. Griggs v. All-Steel Bldgs., Inc., 201 Ga. App. 111, 410 S.E.2d 309 (1991), cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 903, 410 S.E.2d 309 (1992).

Setting aside judgment on ground of mistake in workers' compensation action. — Superior court abused the court's discretion in denying a city's motion to set aside a judgment granting a police officer's demand for judgment on the Workers' Compensation Board's award because the city was authorized to move to set aside the judgment on the ground of mistake under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(2), and in the city's first opportunity to submit factual support for the city's argument regarding mistake, the city provided un rebutted evidence that a second stipulation and agreement the officer signed was entirely the product of a mistake; the failure of the city's effort to appeal the award to the superior court on the second stipulation and agreement was entirely the fault of the superior court because the superior court failed to issue a timely order on the city's initial appeal to that court, which resulted in an affirmance by operation of law of the Board's award. City of Atlanta v. Holder, 309 Ga. App. 811, 711 S.E.2d 332 (2011).

Superior court abused the court's discretion in denying a city's motion to set aside a judgment granting a police officer's demand for judgment on the Workers' Compensation Board's award because any earlier trial court orders were subject to a proper motion to set aside pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-12-40. City of Atlanta v. Holder, 309 Ga. App. 811, 711 S.E.2d 332 (2011).

Divorce granted by a court lacking personal jurisdiction is a nullity, and may be remedied by a motion to set aside the judgment in the court of rendition. Peters v. Hyatt Legal Servs., 211 Ga. App. 587, 440 S.E.2d 222 (1993).

Challenge to residency assertion in divorce case was challenge to court's jurisdiction. — In a divorce case, a husband's enumerations of error raising the issue of the wife's residency under O.C.G.A. § 19-5-5(b)(2) were challenges to the trial court's jurisdiction over the subject matter; these related to a motion to set aside under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(1). Kuriatnyk v. Kuriatnyk, 286 Ga. 589, 690 S.E.2d 397 (2010).

Modification of juvenile court orders. — Motion for modification of a juvenile court order terminating parental rights is similar to a motion to set aside under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, which is appealable but does not sustain an appeal from the underlying judgment. In re H.A.M., 201 Ga. App. 49, 410 S.E.2d 319 (1991).

Adoption. — Superior court erred in granting a mother's motion to dismiss a former partner's petition to adopt the mother's child because a judgment denying the mother's motion to set aside the adoption decree was res judicata as to the validity of the adoption decree, and the superior court that dismissed the partner's petition for custody was not entitled to revisit the validity of the decree; whether or not the superior court properly had jurisdiction of the question of adoption when the court entered the court's adoption decree, the court was competent to entertain the motion to set aside that decree and to decide, in connection with that motion, whether the court had jurisdiction when the court entered the decree. Bates v. Bates, 317 Ga. App. 339, 730 S.E.2d 482 (2012).

Petition for blood test. — Putative father's petition for a blood test was, in substance, an extraordinary motion for a new trial based on newly discovered evidence, not characteristic of a motion to set aside, and was not subject to consideration pursuant to paragraph (d)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 in an attack upon an earlier consent judgment entered in a support proceeding. Department of Human Resources v. Browning, 210 Ga. App. 546, 436 S.E.2d 742 (1993).

No limit on time for relief based on nonamendable section. — Notwithstanding subsections (d) and (f) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, a judgment in which there is a nonamendable defect apparent on the face of the record is always subject to attack by motion to set aside, regardless of the length of time the judgment has been in existence. Smyrna Marine, Inc. v. Stocks, 172 Ga. App. 426, 323 S.E.2d 286 (1984).

While in breast of court, a trial court may, in the court's discretion, set aside a judgment, even on a motion to set aside, in which there are no nonamendable defects on the face of the record. Sunn v. Mercury Marine, 166 Ga. App. 567, 305 S.E.2d 6 (1983).

Judge's decision on facts, while binding as jury's verdict, may be set aside. — If a question of substantive fact (as distinguished from a decision of law) is submitted to the judge for trial, without the intervention of a jury, the judge's decision as to the facts is as binding upon the parties as a verdict and may be set aside under the same rules as apply to the vacating of the finding of a jury. Sunn v. Mercury Marine, 166 Ga. App. 567, 305 S.E.2d 6 (1983).

Judge tries defense of lack of personal jurisdiction. — Because a default judgment had already been entered, the defendant could raise a defense of lack of jurisdiction over the defendant's person by motion to set aside the judgment, and submit the judgment to the trial court for disposition, but because this defense was raised by a motion after judgment, the trial court sat as the trier of fact. Wolfe v. Rhodes, 166 Ga. App. 845, 305 S.E.2d 606 (1983).

Motion to set aside not covered by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52. — Motion to set aside a default judgment pursuant to subsection (d) of Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60) does not come within the ambit of Ga. L. 1970, p. 170, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-52), relating to findings of the court. Emery Enters., Inc. v. Automatic Fasteners Div., 155 Ga. App. 24, 270 S.E.2d 261 (1980); Jones v. Christian, 165 Ga. App. 165, 300 S.E.2d 1 (1983).

Inapplicability of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h). — Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 25 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h)), relating to appeals, is not applicable to motions to set aside and vacate judgments authorized by subsection (d) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27, and 30 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60). Farr v. Farr, 120 Ga. App. 762, 172 S.E.2d 158 (1969).

Matter developed by evidence not within orbit of subsection (d). — Subsection (d) of this section requires that a nonamendable defect appear upon the face of the pleadings or record, and if a matter asserted to be error, such as a defect in notice, does not appear upon the face of the record but is developed by the evidence, judgment may not be set aside under that section. Newman v. Greer, 131 Ga. App. 128, 205 S.E.2d 486 (1974).

Motion under subsection (d) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27, and 30 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60) will not be granted if matters upon which the motion is predicated must be developed by evidence. Wiley v. Wiley, 233 Ga. 824, 213 S.E.2d 682 (1975); Gough v. Gough, 238 Ga. 695, 235 S.E.2d 9 (1977); Glenn v. Maddux, 149 Ga. App. 158, 253 S.E.2d 835 (1979); Emery Enters., Inc. v. Automatic Fasteners Div., 155 Ga. App. 24, 270 S.E.2d 261 (1980).

Matter which is developed by the evidence rather than appearing upon the face of the record or pleadings does not fall within the orbit of subsection (d) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27, and 30 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60). Prudential Timber & Farm Co. v. Collins, 155 Ga. App. 492, 271 S.E.2d 43 (1980); Gulf Oil Co. v. Mantegna, 167 Ga. App. 844, 307 S.E.2d 732 (1983).

Defendant's efforts, following a default judgment, to attack the underlying claim (i.e., the original entry of judgment) would have required the development of the issue by evidence and was not a proper subject for a motion to set aside. Clements v. Trust Co. Bank, 171 Ga. App. 600, 320 S.E.2d 576 (1984).

Proper vehicle to take exception to judgment. — Because, regardless of how the appellant's motion was denominated, the basis of the motion was that the consent judgment was entered in violation of the settlement agreement, the proper vehicle through which to take exception to the judgment was a motion to set aside and not a motion for new trial. Accordingly, the appellant failed to follow the discretionary appeal procedures of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-35(b). Magnum Communications, Ltd. v. IBM, 206 Ga. App. 131, 424 S.E.2d 379 (1992).

Use of motion to introduce new evidence improper. — Motion to reconsider and set aside judgment, used to bring additional affidavits before the court so as to gain a reversal based on "new evidence," is not proper. Glenn v. Maddux, 149 Ga. App. 158, 253 S.E.2d 835 (1979).

Failure to provide court with all the evidence. — Trial court erred by setting aside the denial of a biological father's petition for legitimation because the voluntary acknowledgment of paternity preempted the denial as the father failed to make the trial court aware of the acknowledgment and could not subsequently use the document to set aside the trial court's final judgment. Allifi v. Raider, 323 Ga. App. 510, 746 S.E.2d 763 (2013).

Motion to set aside must be based upon a nonamendable defect appearing on the face of the record or pleadings. Southeast Ceramics, Inc. v. Ervin Co., 127

Ga. App. 346, 193 S.E.2d 262 (1972); Prudential Timber & Farm Co. v. Collins, 155 Ga. App. 492, 271 S.E.2d 43 (1980); Hawkins v. Walker, 158 Ga. App. 562, 281 S.E.2d 311 (1981).

Substance of subsections (a), (b), and (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 is that a void judgment may be attacked by motion to set aside for a nonamendable defect that appears, not just on the face of the judgment, but also on the face of the record or pleadings. Lamas v. Baldwin, 128 Ga. App. 715, 197 S.E.2d 779 (1973).

If no nonamendable defect appears on the face of the record, a default judgment cannot be set aside by motion. Security Mgt. Co. v. Keasler, 131 Ga. App. 230, 205 S.E.2d 515 (1974).

Motion made pursuant to subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 must be predicated on some nonamendable defect that appears on the face of the record or pleadings. Archer v. Monroe, 165 Ga. App. 724, 302 S.E.2d 583 (1983).

Absence of a judge's or clerk's signature on an affidavit for garnishment did not constitute a nonamendable defect justifying the grant of a motion to set aside a judgment. Horizon Credit Corp. v. Lanier Bank & Trust Co., 220 Ga. App. 362, 469 S.E.2d 452 (1996).

Since the defendant established the presence of a nonamendable defect on the face of the record, the trial court erred in denying the motion to set aside a default judgment which was based on the defendant's failure to answer an amended complaint. Shields v. Gish, 280 Ga. 556, 629 S.E.2d 244 (2006).

Although a spouse alleged on appeal that a motion to set aside that portion of the divorce decree which dealt with the issue of child support, which incorporated the parties' settlement agreement, was properly granted because the decree failed to set forth a specific baseline dollar amount for child support, as required by O.C.G.A. § 19-5-12, the decree contained stated dollar amounts which could be considered baseline payments; hence, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-6-15 as applicable at the time, the trial court properly found that the spouse was liable for paying child support for two children in the range of 23 to 28 percent of the spouse's gross income.

Scott v. Scott, 282 Ga. 36, 644 S.E.2d 842 (2007).

Denial of motion which nonamendable defect. — Motion to set aside and vacate a judgment that is not based on a nonamendable defect appearing in the record is properly denied. Farr v. Farr, 120 Ga. App. 762, 172 S.E.2d 158 (1969).

Meaning of "nonamendable defect". — Absence of consideration as a defense is a matter to be developed by the evidence, and it is not a nonamendable defect within the meaning of subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. First Baptist Church v. King, 208 Ga. App. 250, 430 S.E.2d 635 (1993).

Because the information required in a Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 15 certificate of default (date and type of service, lack of responsive pleading) could also be found in the record, the failure to file a Rule 15 certificate was not a nonamendable defect in the record sufficient to authorize setting aside a default judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d). Williams v. Contemporary Servs. Corp., 325 Ga. App. 299, 750 S.E.2d 460 (2013).

Claims based on decisional or judgmental error not cognizable. — Inasmuch as the party seeking to set aside a judgment of dismissal directed the party's claims of mistake to decisional or judgmental error underlying the trial court's judgment of dismissal, such claims were not cognizable under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(2). Brown v. Gadson, 288 Ga. App. 323, 654 S.E.2d 179 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 236 (Ga. 2008).

In a divorce action, the husband's motion to set aside a juvenile court's custody order for lack of personal or subject matter jurisdiction and for a nonamendable defect on the face of the record was not authorized since jurisdiction of the juvenile court was unquestioned and, because the record showed the mother had a claim to custody, there was no showing of a nonamendable defect. Barnes v. Williams, 265 Ga. 834, 462 S.E.2d 612 (1995).

When an attorney sued a former client's ex-spouse to enforce a lien on the former client's former marital residence, which was titled in the ex-spouse's name, the ex-spouse had no standing to seek to set aside the judgment on which the lien was based as O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d) did not authorize a non-party to bring a motion to set aside a judgment, and the ex-spouse did not allege that the judgment was void on the judgment's face, which could have provided standing under § 9-11-60(a). Northern v. Tobin, 262 Ga. App. 339, 585 S.E.2d 681 (2003).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in granting a husband's motion to set aside a judgment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, after the court granted a divorce to the wife pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 19-5-5 and awarded her the parties' marital residence and all of the personal effects therein as the husband was not represented by counsel and thought that he would have to receive notice prior to the wife obtaining the divorce. The court noted that although he was served, the husband did not file responsive pleadings and accordingly, was not noticed for the final hearing which distributed the property, representing the husband's entire life savings, completely to the wife, and further, the motion to set aside the judgment was made during the same court term as the initial judgment was granted. Pope v. Pope, 277 Ga. 333, 588 S.E.2d 736 (2003).

Husband's application to vacate an arbitration award under O.C.G.A. § 9-9-13 should have been dismissed rather than denied since the trial court's divorce decree in which the court approved the arbitration award was final on the date that the court issued the decree even though the arbitration award had, in fact, not been issued on that date; thus, the husband should have filed an application for a discretionary appeal from the trial court's final judgment within 30 days of the entry of the judgment and decree under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-35(d) or filed a motion to set aside the judgment and decree under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Since, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-9-15 the order confirming the arbitration award became the judgment of the trial court on the date that the trial court issued the court's divorce decree, all matters in litigation in the action were final on that date, including those submitted for arbitration, and the later purported arbitration award was of no effect. Ciraldo v. Ciraldo, 280 Ga. 602, 631 S.E.2d 640 (2006).

Upon reading the rules within the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, in para materia with Ga. Unif. Super. Ct. R. 24.6(B), the trial court was authorized to grant a divorce well after 30 days from the time an answer would have been due; hence, the trial court did not err in denying a wife's motion to set the judgment aside. Hammack v. Hammack, 281 Ga. 202, 635 S.E.2d 752 (2006).

Trial court erred in granting a husband's motion to set aside an order awarding a wife sole legal and physical custody of the parties' children, eliminating the husband's right of visitation, and increasing the husband's child support obligations because the husband did not provide the trial court with an appropriate basis to set aside the court's final order pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(2); to establish mistake, the husband could not rely on the mistake of trial counsel as if counsel were acting adversely to the husband, rather than as his representative before the trial court because trial counsel's failure to include a correct address for the husband on a motion to withdraw was an insufficient ground to set aside the case under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(2). Edge v. Edge, 290 Ga. 551, 722 S.E.2d 749 (2012).

Trial court erred by denying an ex-husband's motion to set aside a divorce decree with the ex-wife because the marriage was void from the marriage's inception due to the ex-wife having a living spouse from an undissolved marriage at the time and there was no issue of the protection of a child to prevent the decree from being set aside. Wright v. Hall, 292 Ga. 457, 738 S.E.2d 594 (2013).

Irregularities not on face of record.

— In a proper proceeding, courts of this state may exercise jurisdiction that obtained at common law to set aside judgments for irregularities not appearing on the face of the record; such a petition may be brought at law as well as in equity. Simpson v. Bradley, 189 Ga. 316, 5 S.E.2d 893 (1939), cert. denied, 310 U.S. 643, 60 S. Ct. 1105, 84 L. Ed. 1410 (1940) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Despite the fact that a spouse might have been negligent for not attacking the divorce decree by direct appeal, when that spouse failed to show a non-amenable defect on the face of the record, the trial court erred in granting a O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(3) motion to set the decree aside as to the issue of child support. Scott v. Scott, 282 Ga. 36, 644 S.E.2d 842 (2007).

Defect on face of record required to set aside judgment after term of entry. — Motion in arrest of judgment or motion to set aside can be sustained only upon such cause as is apparent upon the face of the record. Wofford v. Vandiver, 72 Ga. App. 623, 34 S.E.2d 579 (1945) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-702).

Motion to set aside a judgment, if there is no claim that the judgment was fraudulently procured, can be sustained only if the defects rendering the judgment invalid appear on the face of the record. Fields v. Arnall, 199 Ga. 491, 34 S.E.2d 692 (1945) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-702).

Motion to set aside a judgment made after the term at which the judgment was rendered must be based on some defect appearing on the face of the record. Reid v. Anderson, 88 Ga. App. 298, 76 S.E.2d 541 (1953); Charles S. Martin Distrib. Co. v. Southern Furnace Co., 88 Ga. App. 339, 76 S.E.2d 662 (1953) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Motion to set aside a judgment, not predicated upon some defect apparent upon the face of the record or pleadings, was without merit. Tobin v. Tobin, 212 Ga. 205, 91 S.E.2d 508 (1956) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-702).

If the term of court has expired, judgment is res judicata and is no longer in the breast of the court, and the court has no authority to vacate or set aside such judgment except for defects appearing on the face of the record. Carolina Tree Serv., Inc. v. Cartledge, 96 Ga. App. 240, 99 S.E.2d 705 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-702).

Judgment will not be set aside after the expiration of the term in which the judgment was rendered for defects not appearing on the face of the record that are amendable. Allen v. Allen, 218 Ga. 364, 127 S.E.2d 902 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-702).

As a debtor did not file bankruptcy documents in a promissory note holder's action against the debtor, there was no error in the denial of the debtor's motion to set aside a default judgment taken against the debtor as the record was devoid of a nonamendable defect which appeared upon the face of the record or pleadings. Chugh Shopping Ctr., Inc. v. Ameris Bank, 323 Ga. App. 243, 746 S.E.2d 855 (2013).

Except when motion to set aside was continued to next term. — Trial court cannot, after the term at which a judgment or order is entered, set aside, alter, amend, or revoke the court's final judgment or order except for defects appearing on the face of the record; the only exception is if the motion or petition to set aside or arrest the judgment was filed at the term at which the judgment or order was rendered and was regularly continued to a succeeding term. American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Satterfield, 88 Ga. App. 395, 76 S.E.2d 730 (1953) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

End of term of court necessitates motion. — Since summary judgment was entered before the term of court ended and a motion was not filed until after that, a motion to set aside the judgment under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 was required. First Baptist Church v. King, 208 Ga. App. 250, 430 S.E.2d 635 (1993).

Setting aside of judgment if no cause of actions exists. — Motion in arrest of or to set aside a judgment may be interposed as provided by law if it appears from the face of the record or the pleadings that no cause of action exists against a defendant. Smith v. Franklin Printing Co., 54 Ga. App. 385, 187 S.E. 904 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Because the adopted son identified no basis for voiding the award of a year's support to the decedent, his adopted mother, and the son's action to set aside the award was untimely under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(f), the award in favor of the biological mother (the decedent's daughter) was upheld. Harris v. Johnson, 257 Ga. App. 182, 570 S.E.2d 582 (2002).

Trial court erred in setting aside consent decree. — Trial court erred in finding that a consent judgment was void due to impossibility of performance or lack of mutuality and in denying the sellers' motion for judgment instant on the consent judgment because the purchasers accepted the risk that the purchasers would be unable to complete the road on time per the agreement and set up an alternative method of compliance, namely, the payment of money to the sellers. Kothari v. Tessfaye, 318 Ga. App. 289, 733 S.E.2d 815 (2012).

Defendant's failure to answer based on an allegation of mistake did not justify setting aside the default judgment because the alleged mistake was not "unmixed with negligence or fault" of the defendant. Lee v. Restaurant Mgt. Servs., 232 Ga. App. 902, 503 S.E.2d 59 (1998).

Gross neglect during discovery supported denial of motion to set aside default judgment. — Because a lessee's conduct during the discovery stage of the proceedings below on the lessor's breach-of-lease complaint clearly demonstrated gross neglect, specifically, the lessee's failure to: (1) respond to a motion to compel and attend the hearing thereon; (2) communicate with counsel; and (3) attack the default judgment until eight months after the judgment was entered, the trial court manifestly abused the court's discretion in granting the lessee's motion to set the default aside. Kairos Peachtree Assocs., LLC v. Papadopoulos, 288 Ga. App. 161, 653 S.E.2d 386 (2007).

If the pleadings are so defective that no legal judgment can be rendered, the judgment will be arrested or set aside; but a judgment will not be arrested or set aside for any defect in the pleading or record that is aided by the verdict or is amendable as a matter of form. Auld v. Schmelz, 199 Ga. 633, 34 S.E.2d 860 (1945) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Meritorious reason necessary for setting aside of judgment. — Although a motion to set aside a judgment is addressed to the sound discretion of the judge, the motion should not be granted unless some meritorious reason be given therefor, even though the motion is made during the term at which the judgment was rendered. Hurt Bldg., Inc. v. Atlanta Trust Co., 181 Ga. 274, 182 S.E. 187 (1935); Drain Tile Mach., Inc. v. McCannon, 80 Ga. App. 373, 56 S.E.2d 165 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110). See also Hicks v. Hicks, 226 Ga. 798, 177 S.E.2d 690 (1970).

Failure to appear not a meritorious reason. — Failure of the defendant to appear and plead, in consequence of a misunderstanding between the defendant and defense counsel, does not afford a meritorious reason for granting a motion to set aside a judgment, even though made during the term, while the judgment was yet in the breast of the court. Drain Tile Mach., Inc. v. McCannon, 80 Ga. App. 373, 56 S.E.2d 165 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Superior court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a stepson's motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d) to set aside a judgment entered in favor of an administrator based on the claim that the stepson's attorney had no notice of the trial date because the superior court placed the case on the trial calendar upon the stepson's request; therefore, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-40(c)(2), the superior court was not required to provide the stepson with notice of the trial date, and the stepson's attorney had a duty to attend court and look after the attorney's and the stepson's interests. Bocker v. Crisp, 313 Ga. App. 585, 722 S.E.2d 186 (2012).

Pleadings must show that no claim existed. — To set aside a judgment under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, a movant must show that the motion is predicated upon some nonamendable defect that does appear upon the face of the record or pleadings, and that the pleadings affirmatively show that no claim in fact existed. Midland Guardian Co. v. Varnadore, 148 Ga. App. 742, 252 S.E.2d 685 (1979); Hyman v. Plant Imp. Co., 151 Ga. App. 553, 260 S.E.2d 531 (1979).

Unless motion is based on lack of jurisdiction. — Unless a motion to set aside a judgment is based upon lack of jurisdiction over the person or subject matter, the motion must be predicated upon some nonamendable defect that appears upon the face of the record or pleadings. Gough v. Gough, 238 Ga. 695, 235 S.E.2d 9 (1977).

Regardless of whether lack of jurisdiction appears on face of record or pleadings. — Under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, as amended in 1974 by Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1, a motion to set aside a judgment may be based upon lack of jurisdiction over the person or subject matter, regardless of whether such lack of jurisdiction appears upon the face of the record or pleadings. Cook v. Bright, 150 Ga. App. 696, 258 S.E.2d 326 (1979); Hawkins v. Walker, 158 Ga. App. 562, 281 S.E.2d 311 (1981).

Lack of jurisdiction of the person usually arises from one of two defects: invalidity of service or faulty venue; either may or may not appear on the face of the record, but for purposes of a motion to set aside it does not matter. Cook v. Bright, 150 Ga. App. 696, 258 S.E.2d 326 (1979).

Service essential to personal jurisdiction. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 provides that a judgment is subject to being set aside at any time by a motion premised upon lack of jurisdiction over the person, and unless a party has waived lawful service of process, such service is essential to give a court jurisdiction over that party's person. Benton v. Modern Fin. & Inv. Co., 244 Ga. 533, 261 S.E.2d 359 (1979).

Misleading identification of intended defendant. — Because a complaint actively misled as to the identity of the intended defendant, the action of an agent for service of process in returning the complaint was appropriate, and since there was no proper service upon any defendant, a motion to set aside should have been granted. Carrier Transicold Div. v. Southeast Appraisal Resource Assocs., 233 Ga. App. 176, 504 S.E.2d 25 (1998).

Effect of subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 is to prevent waiver of the defense of lack of jurisdiction under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12(h)(1) by allowing the defense to be raised in a motion to set aside. Phillips v. Williams, 137 Ga. App. 578, 224 S.E.2d 515 (1976).

Under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, a person may bring a motion to set aside a judgment void for lack of jurisdiction at any time, and O.C.G.A. § 9-11-12 could not be constitutionally applied to preclude a nonresident from bringing such a motion after a default judgment was entered against the nonresident. Hoesch Am., Inc. v. Dai Yang Metal Co., 217 Ga. App. 845, 459 S.E.2d 187 (1995); B & D Fabricators v. D.H. Blair Investment Banking Corp., 220 Ga. App. 373, 469 S.E.2d 683 (1996).

Rule of waiver by nonaction not abolished. — The 1974 amendment by Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1, relating to jurisdictional defects, did not abolish the general rule of waiver by nonaction, which exists if the defendant is properly served and elects not to respond to process, despite notice therein of its requirements. Vanguard Diversified, Inc. v. Institutional Assocs., 141 Ga. App. 265, 233 S.E.2d 247 (1977).

One who, being properly served, wishes to rely on the defense of lack of venue, must bring the defense to the attention of the court at the proper time or the defense is waived; the 1974 amendment to subsection (d) by Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1, relating to jurisdictional defects, does not give a litigant who has been served and has knowledge of all the facts the right to sit idly by while a trial verdict and default judgment are entered against the litigant, and then set the whole procedure aside on a venue defense which should have been raised prior thereto. Allen v. Alston, 141 Ga. App. 572, 234 S.E.2d 152 (1977).

Diligence rule applies when an individual uses a motion to set aside, and precludes the movant from using a ground which the movant had known or could have discovered through reasonable diligence. Camp v. Fidelity Bankers Life Ins. Co., 129 Ga. App. 590, 200 S.E.2d 332 (1973); Rhodes v. Top Dog, Inc., 209 Ga. App. 777, 434 S.E.2d 578 (1993).

If an individual chooses a motion to set aside to obtain relief from a judgment, the principles applicable to a motion for new trial and to a complaint in equity would be applicable if the ground for the attack was one that was known or could have been discovered by reasonable diligence. Camp v. Fidelity Bankers Life Ins. Co., 129 Ga. App. 590, 200 S.E.2d 332 (1973).

Motion to set aside a judgment cannot be based on a ground that could have been discovered by the appellant through the exercise of reasonable diligence prior to entry of a judgment. Shepherd v. Metropolitan Property & Liab. Ins. Co., 163 Ga. App. 650, 294 S.E.2d 638 (1982).

Defect on calendar appears on face of record. — Trial calendar is a part of the record of a case, and a defect appearing on the calendar is a defect appearing on the “face of the record” within the meaning of subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Brown v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 245 Ga. 515, 265 S.E.2d 791 (1980).

Plaintiff was estopped by laches from seeking to set aside a dismissal on the equitable grounds set forth in paragraph (d)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 because the plaintiff's counsel was aware of the existence of the dismissal order within a few days after the order was entered but waited more than two years to move to set the order aside and offered no explanation for the delay. Lee v. Henson, 198 Ga. App. 701, 402 S.E.2d 548 (1991).

Motion to set aside may be barred by laches as if an action in equity. Herringdine v. Nalley Equip. Leasing, Ltd., 238 Ga. App. 210, 517 S.E.2d 571 (1999).

Lack of notice as nonamendable defect. — Judgment or order based on a trial or hearing, entered against a party without notice of the trial or hearing, is subject to a motion to set aside when lack of notice appears on the face of the record. Brown v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 245 Ga. 515, 265 S.E.2d 791 (1980).

Absence of an attorney's name on the trial calendar is a defect on the face of the record, and publication of this defective calendar did not constitute notice of trial; this lack of notice constituted a nonamendable defect on the face of the record, as contemplated by subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Brown v. Citizens

& S. Nat'l Bank, 245 Ga. 515, 265 S.E.2d 791 (1980).

If the defendant's counsel withdraws from the case and notifies the court, but the only notice of the trial date is sent to this former counsel, who makes no effort to inform the former client, a motion to set aside a subsequently entered default judgment should be granted. Georgia Hwy. Express, Inc. v. Whaley, 166 Ga. App. 662, 305 S.E.2d 411 (1983).

Lack of notice of a divorce hearing, unless notice is waived, constitutes a “nonamendable defect that does appear upon the face of the record or pleadings,” thus authorizing a setting aside of the judgment. Coker v. Coker, 251 Ga. 542, 307 S.E.2d 921 (1983).

Failure of counsel or a party acting pro se to receive notice of trial is such a defect as will authorize the setting aside of the judgment. Beach's Constr. Co. v. Moss, 168 Ga. App. 462, 309 S.E.2d 382 (1983); TMS Ins. Agency, Inc. v. Galloway, 205 Ga. App. 896, 424 S.E.2d 71 (1992).

Failure of counsel or a party acting pro se to receive notice of a hearing constitutes such a defect as will authorize the setting aside of the judgment under paragraph (d)(3) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Housing Auth. v. Parks, 189 Ga. App. 97, 374 S.E.2d 842 (1988).

Trial court abused the court's discretion in denying an O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d) motion to set aside a default judgment entered when a builder failed to appear for trial in a breach of contract action; a nonamendable defect was shown on the face of the record, which established that the builder had never received actual notice of the trial as the notice was sent to the wrong address and was returned. Moore v. Davidson, 292 Ga. App. 57, 663 S.E.2d 766 (2008).

Trial court erred by denying the borrowers' motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g) to set aside the order granting a bank summary judgment because while the trial court established that notice was sent the court failed to make any findings as to whether the attorneys for the borrowers had received notice of the order. C & R Fin. Lenders, LLC v. State Bank & Trust Co., 320 Ga. App. 660, 740 S.E.2d 371 (2013).

Authority to grant motion to set aside at subsequent term of court. —

Trial judge had authority at a subsequent term of court to grant a motion to set aside an order denying a new trial and reenter it based upon lack of timely notice because this was not a modification or revision affecting the substance or merits of a decree, which must be accomplished during the term in which the decree was entered. City of Monroe v. Jordan, 201 Ga. App. 332, 411 S.E.2d 511 (1991).

Lack-of-notice claim failed when defendant could not be reached. —

In a suit brought on a note, in which there was nothing in the complaint to indicate that the damages were unliquidated, in which the defendant was represented by counsel, who received notice of trial but was unsuccessful in informing the defendant of the trial date even though the defendant had the same mailing address at all times, and in which default judgment was entered after the defendant failed to appear, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in denying a motion to set aside on the grounds of lack of notice and unliquidated damages. Clements v. Trust Co. Bank, 171 Ga. App. 600, 320 S.E.2d 576 (1984).

Defendant's failure to attend not justification for setting aside judgment. —

Because the trial court found that, according to the defendant's own personal recollection, the defendant had been telephoned at 9:45 A.M. on April 6, 1982, and told to appear at 10:45, the defendant's answer was stricken and default judgment was entered at 10:55 A.M., the defendant's counsel appeared in the judge's chambers at 11:09 A.M., the trial court considered all circumstances of the case, and it cannot be said that rendition of the default judgment was unmixed with negligence on the part of the defendant in failing to appear given notice, there was no abuse of discretion by the trial court in denying the defendant's motion to set aside the default judgment. Archer v. Monroe, 165 Ga. App. 724, 302 S.E.2d 583 (1983).

Refusal to set aside the judgment on the ground of mistake or accident was not error because the trial court specifically found that the failure of the defendant or defendant's counsel to appear at the call of the case for trial was due "solely to the negligence of the defendant and defendant's legal counsel, unmixed with any acts of the court, the court administrator, the plaintiff's legal counsel, or any other person or entity." Aycock v. Hughes, 189 Ga. App. 838, 377 S.E.2d 689, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 911, 377 S.E.2d 689 (1989).

Denial of motion to set aside a default judgment against a corporation was not an abuse of discretion as the corporation's counsel admitted that the counsel failed to appear for trial because the counsel did not read the legal newspaper in which the trial calendar was published; the corporation offered no legal excuse for the corporation's failure to appear at the trial calendar. Migmar, Inc. v. Williams, 281 Ga. App. 870, 637 S.E.2d 471 (2006).

Judgment's violation of statute not grounds for motion. —

Motion to set aside is not the proper remedy if a party attacks a judgment as a violation of a statute, e.g., O.C.G.A. § 19-6-27, not because of some nonamendable defect on the face of the record or pleadings or lack of personal or subject matter jurisdiction. Page v. Page, 255 Ga. 145, 335 S.E.2d 865 (1985).

Absent confidential or fiduciary relationship between parties. —

As a general rule, equity will grant no relief to one against whom an unfavorable judgment has been rendered, even in consequence of fraud, when one could have prevented the return of such judgment by the exercise of proper diligence; but this rule is not applicable if there is a confidential or fiduciary relationship between the parties, in which case the law requires the utmost good faith and does not require the parties to anticipate or watch for fraud. Lewis v. Lewis, 228 Ga. 703, 187 S.E.2d 872 (1972).

If the relationship between the parties is that of business people, and although in the majority of business dealings the parties have trust and confidence in each other's integrity, there is no confidential relationship between the individuals. Parson-Nicholson, Inc. v. Dalton Carpet Finishing Co., 161 Ga. App. 595, 289 S.E.2d 25 (1982).

Affidavit of illegality insufficient. — Defendant cannot use an affidavit of illegality to attempt to reach any alleged defects in a default judgment; this can be done only by the means set out in subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Ryle v. Gold Kist, Inc., 172 Ga. App. 398, 323 S.E.2d 269 (1984).

Except if notice requirement waivable. — Because the notice requirement is waivable, inadequate notice is not a nonamendable defect appearing on the face of the record, and cannot be the basis for setting aside a judgment. City of Calhoun v. Hamrick, 243 Ga. 716, 256 S.E.2d 599 (1979).

Failure to verify a pleading is an amendable defect and is no basis for setting aside a judgment. Dunn v. Lockheed-Georgia Co., 146 Ga. App. 750, 247 S.E.2d 601 (1978).

Relief under paragraph (d)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 may only be granted if the grounds are unmixed with the negligence or fault of the movant. Northeast Atlanta Sur. Co. v. State, 197 Ga. App. 399, 398 S.E.2d 435 (1990).

Mistake means misapprehension of fact. — Claim of mistake refers to the misapprehension of a past or present fact. Northeast Atlanta Sur. Co. v. State, 197 Ga. App. 399, 398 S.E.2d 435 (1990).

Condemnation judgment could not be set aside on the basis of mistake of fact, because the mistake was due to the negligence or fault arising from a surveying error by the county's surveyor. Gatefield Corp. v. Gwinnett County, 234 Ga. App. 621, 507 S.E.2d 164 (1998).

Motion to set aside a voluntary dismissal with prejudice on the ground of mistake was properly denied because the mistake was the result of the plaintiffs' own negligence or fault. Kent v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 233 Ga. App. 564, 504 S.E.2d 710 (1998).

Misnomer is amendable if it does not result in substitution or addition of another party. Carroll v. Equico Lessors, 141 Ga. App. 279, 233 S.E.2d 255 (1977).

Misnomer in complaint. — Description of the defendant corporation in the complaint as "U.S. Shelter Corporation of Delaware" instead of "U.S. Shelter Corporation" was a mere misnomer and not a nonamendable defect that would warrant setting aside a default judgment against the corporation. Miller v. United States Shelter Corp., 179 Ga. App. 469, 347 S.E.2d 251 (1986).

Discrepancy in the defendant's name between the exhibits (inaccurate) and the pleadings (accurate) does not afford a basis for setting aside the judgment if the pleadings and record do not affirmatively show that no claim in fact existed against the defendant or that the plaintiff sued the wrong party. Pittard Mach. Co. v. Eisele Corp., 166 Ga. App. 324, 304 S.E.2d 129 (1983).

Motion to set aside the judgment mistakenly docketed as a new and separate action that fulfilled all the requirements of a motion to set aside under paragraph (d)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 would be so construed. Herringdine v. Nalley Equip. Leasing, Ltd., 238 Ga. App. 210, 517 S.E.2d 571 (1999).

Remand necessitated when trial court only considered one asserted ground of relief. — As a debtor's motion to set aside a default judgment taken against the debtor by the promissory note holder was only considered by the trial court on the ground of a nonamendable defect, a remand was necessitated in order for the trial court to consider the motion under the other ground asserted by the debtor. Chugh Shopping Ctr., Inc. v. Ameris Bank, 323 Ga. App. 243, 746 S.E.2d 855 (2013).

Alleged fraud of the plaintiff's attorney was not such a fraud as would authorize setting aside a dismissal under paragraph (d)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 because the fraud that will justify setting aside a judgment is that of the other side of the suit. Moore v. Barfield, 189 Ga. App. 348, 375 S.E.2d 623, cert. denied, 189 Ga. App. 913, 374 S.E.2d 771 (1988).

Motion for reconsideration distinguished from motion to set aside. — Nonstatutory motion to reinstate an action dismissed as a sanction for failure to comply with the trial court's order to timely answer interrogatories is the equivalent of a motion for reconsideration and cannot be considered as a motion to set aside as it is not based upon a nonamendable defect that appears upon the face of the record. Daniels v. McRae, 180 Ga. App. 732, 350 S.E.2d 317 (1986).

Court must decide issue of sufficiency of process. — Court could not use the doctrine of laches to deny a motion to set aside a judgment based on a claim that the court lacked personal jurisdiction due to a failure of process without first deciding the issue of the sufficiency of the process. Power v. Mobley, 170 Ga. App. 167, 316 S.E.2d 580 (1984).

Issue of usury not a nonamendable defect. — Contention that late fee charges awarded by a court were a device to cover up usury raises a question of fact for jury resolution, and such an issue cannot be said to be a nonamendable defect that is not cured by judgment. Hyman v. Plant Imp. Co., 151 Ga. App. 553, 260 S.E.2d 531 (1979).

Bank's motion to set aside default judgment against borrower. — Grant of a bank's motion to set aside a default judgment against a borrower was proper since a typographical error as to the amount sought in the demand for judgment was in the pleading rather than the judgment, and this defect was apparently intentionally waived by the borrower so as to serve in the borrower's favor in an attempt to take advantage of the limitation imposed by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(c)(1) on damages that can be awarded by default judgment. Betts v. First Ga. Bank, 177 Ga. App. 359, 339 S.E.2d 616 (1985).

Affidavit containing unnecessary hearsay is not a nonamendable defect within the contemplation of subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Henry v. Polar Rock Dev. Corp., 143 Ga. App. 189, 237 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

Failure to incorporate findings and conclusions amendable. — Failure of the trial court to incorporate findings of fact and conclusions of law in an order modifying a divorce decree was an amendable defect appearing on the face of the record, and thus not a defect that would warrant setting aside the judgment. Kennedy v. Brown, 239 Ga. 286, 236 S.E.2d 632 (1977).

Since the failure to include findings of fact and conclusions of law in the order in a proceeding under the "Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act", O.C.G.A. Art. 2, Ch. 11, T. 19, was an amendable defect appearing on the face of the record, it was not subject to a motion to set aside, and the trial court did not err in denying the defendant's motion to set aside judgment. Powell v. State, 166 Ga. App. 780, 305 S.E.2d 646 (1983).

Motion must be predicated on nonamendable defect or lack of jurisdiction. — Because the defendant's "Motion to Vacate and Set Aside Judgment" was not predicated upon a nonamendable defect or a lack of jurisdiction, but was nothing more than a request for a reconsideration of the trial court's summary judgment award, the motion did not extend the time for the filing of a notice of appeal from the order granting the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment. Miller v. Bank of S., 177 Ga. App. 42, 338 S.E.2d 436 (1985), overruled on other grounds, MMT Enters., Inc. v. Cullars, 218 Ga. App. 559, 462 S.E.2d 771 (1995).

Judgments will not be set aside merely because the judgments may be contrary to principles of law applicable to the case. Shepherd v. Metropolitan Property & Liab. Ins. Co., 163 Ga. App. 650, 294 S.E.2d 638 (1982).

Absence of the attorney's name on a trial calendar is a defect on the face of the record, which constitutes a nonamendable defect on the face of the record as contemplated by subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Scott v. W.S. Badcock Corp., 161 Ga. App. 826, 289 S.E.2d 769 (1982).

Considerations of fraud applicable. — Considerations of fraud applicable to equitable complaints to set aside under subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 also are applicable to timely motions for new trial and motions to set aside. Jackson v. Jackson, 254 Ga. 280, 328 S.E.2d 733 (1985).

Fraud perpetrated by a stranger could not be used as the basis for setting aside a judgment in favor of the defendant who was not linked to the fraud. Shilliday v. Dunaway, 220 Ga. App. 406, 469 S.E.2d 485 (1996).

No fraud in the inducement. — Dismissal of the plaintiff's complaint extinguished an attorney's lien and there was no authority to set aside the dismissal based on fraud in the inducement. Villani v. Edwards, 251 Ga. App. 293, 554 S.E.2d 184 (2001).

Setting aside of judgment granting punitive damages when fraud not alleged. — Motion to set aside should have been granted insofar as the motion related to a punitive damage award because the complaint alleging breach of agreement to procure automobile insurance contained no allegation of fraud upon which an award of punitive damages could have been based. Covington v. Saxon, 163 Ga. App. 646, 295 S.E.2d 105 (1982).

Including life insurance provisions in divorce decree. — Even if the trial judge makes, in effect, a mistake of law by including life insurance provisions in a divorce decree, this does not constitute a ground for setting aside the decree. Coker v. Coker, 251 Ga. 542, 307 S.E.2d 921 (1983).

Contention that denial of a motion was "contrary to principles of justice and equity" sets forth no ground for reversal. Norman Serv. Indus., Inc. v. Lusty, 168 Ga. App. 164, 308 S.E.2d 411 (1983).

Motion for interest, filed after expiration of the term during which a judgment had been entered, provided no vehicle for the court to add interest to the judgment already entered because there had been no motion to set aside the judgment. Moore v. Thompson, 187 Ga. App. 672, 371 S.E.2d 111 (1988).

Paternity action should be separated. — Although a petition for determination of paternity must be brought where the child resides when the father lives outside of the state, the superior court should not have dismissed an entire motion/petition that included a motion to set aside the judgment for want of jurisdiction simply because one aspect of the case should have been heard elsewhere; the superior court should have transferred the paternity portion of the case, not dismissed it. Suggs v. Suggs, 204 Ga. App. 72, 418 S.E.2d 427 (1992).

Failure to disprove agent's authority. — Defendant's failure to present any evidence regarding the lack of authority of the defendant's agent to receive service on behalf of a partnership warranted the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion to set aside the default judgment on that basis. Northgate Village Apts. v. Smith, 207 Ga. App. 479, 428 S.E.2d 381 (1993).

Validation judgment not subject to set aside. — Constitutional mandate that validation proceedings are conclusive does not allow these judgments to be set aside for fraud, accident, or mistake. AMBAC Indem. Corp. v. Akridge, 262 Ga. 773, 425 S.E.2d 637, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 817, 114 S. Ct. 69, 126 L. Ed. 2d 38 (1993).

Attack on a prior judgment based on the competency of the defendant is not a nonamendable defect that appears upon the face of the record or pleadings. Sellers v. Bell, 151 Ga. App. 440, 260 S.E.2d 538 (1979).

Because attorney's fees were improperly included in the judgment, that part could be set aside or arrested. Love v. National Liberty Ins. Co., 157 Ga. 259, 121 S.E. 648 (1924) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5957).

Failure to name the holder of a note in a notice of intention to include attorney's fees, as required by law, was not an amendable defect, and that portion of the judgment was absolutely void and rendered the judgment open to attack. Carey v. Wyatt, 17 Ga. App. 517, 87 S.E. 770 (1916) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5957).

Failure to pay costs of previous action. — Contention that judgment for total divorce should be set aside because the plaintiff failed to pay court costs of a previous action came too late when made for the first time in a petition to set aside. Crenshaw v. Crenshaw, 198 Ga. 536, 32 S.E.2d 177 (1944) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Objection to a petition on the ground of misjoinder of parties affords no ground to arrest the judgment. Love v. National Liberty Ins. Co., 157 Ga. 259, 121 S.E. 648 (1924) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5957).

Failure to notify court of renewal status of case not nonamendable defect. — Failure of the plaintiffs to notify the trial court of the renewal status of plaintiffs' action pursuant to Superior Court Rule 4.8 was not a nonamendable defect appearing on the face of the record as required by paragraph (d)(3) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 and did not warrant setting aside the judgment for the plaintiffs. Hardeman v. Roberts, 214 Ga. App. 484, 448 S.E.2d 254 (1994).

Rescission of judicial sale. — After a judicial sale has been confirmed, the court has no discretion to rescind the sale, except upon some special ground such as fraud, accident, or mistake that has worked an injustice, and which was unknown to the complainant at the time of confirmation. Hurt Bldg., Inc. v. Atlanta Trust Co., 181 Ga. 274, 182 S.E. 187 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

Motion to set aside a consent judgment was subject to dismissal because the plaintiffs failed to set forth any reason why the plaintiffs could not have ascertained grounds of the plaintiffs' complaint by proper diligence prior to entry of judgment and failed to show any fraud by the defendant in procuring the plaintiff's consent to the decree as rendered. Raines v. Lane, 198 Ga. 217, 31 S.E.2d 403 (1944) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

Binding effect of consent judgment. — In the absence of fraud, accident, or mistake, a client is bound by a consent judgment entered into by counsel acting within the general scope of counsel's employment, and because neither the allegations nor proof were sufficient to bring the case from operation of this rule, the movant failed to show cause to set aside the consent judgment complained of. Midtown Chains Hotel Co. v. Merriman, 204 Ga. 71, 48 S.E.2d 831 (1948) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

Alleged agreement to dismiss not ground for setting aside judgment after defendant appeared and defended. — Alleged agreement by the defendant with the plaintiff's attorney, made before judgment, that the suit would be dismissed, is no ground for setting aside the judgment or arresting execution if the defendant appeared at trial and defended against the action. Felker v.

Johnson, 189 Ga. 797, 7 S.E.2d 668 (1940) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Severe illness as proper ground for setting aside judgment. — Severe illness of a party, preventing the party from attending trial, will generally be treated as casualty or misfortune constituting proper ground for vacating or setting aside judgment rendered against the party. Thomas v. Travelers Ins. Co., 53 Ga. App. 404, 185 S.E. 922 (1936) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-701).

Erroneous rulings on pleadings are not proper grounds for motions to set aside judgments, nor proper grounds of a motion for new trial. Hambrick v. Nova, 112 Ga. App. 258, 144 S.E.2d 922 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Motion to set aside portions of a decree that were alleged to be void, filed during the term at which the verdict and decree were rendered, because the nonamendable defects appeared on the face of the record, was the proper and authorized method to attach such parts of the decree. Summers v. Summers, 212 Ga. 614, 94 S.E.2d 725 (1956) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Motion to set aside is not a proper vehicle to belatedly attack the sufficiency of a complaint, unless the complaint affirmatively shows the utter lack of a claim. Johnson v. Cleveland, 131 Ga. App. 560, 206 S.E.2d 704 (1974); Smith v. Security Mtg. Investors, 139 Ga. App. 635, 229 S.E.2d 115 (1976); Fudge v. Weissinger, 201 Ga. App. 409, 411 S.E.2d 62, cert. denied, 201 Ga. App. 903, 411 S.E.2d 62 (1991).

Default judgment rendered in an action on account was subject to a motion to set aside under subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 at the instance of an individual defendant sued jointly with a corporate defendant because the sworn itemized statement of account attached to the complaint affirmatively showed that the items and services were sold and delivered to the corporate defendant only, and that no claim in fact existed against the individual defendant from whom recovery was sought for the indebtedness of the corporation. Gilham v. Stamm & Co.,

117 Ga. App. 846, 162 S.E.2d 248 (1968).

Garnishee entitled to hearing. — In a case in which a garnishee, who paid a default judgment rendered against the garnishee but had witnesses who would testify that such payment was under duress, brought a motion to set aside such judgment for lack of jurisdiction due to failure of service, denial of the motion to set aside on the basis that payment had rendered the issue moot, without affording the garnishee an evidentiary hearing on the issue of duress, was improper. Homemakers, Inc. v. GAC Fin. Corp., 135 Ga. App. 242, 217 S.E.2d 475 (1975).

Lack of jurisdiction of the person when garnishment summons defective. — Trial court erred in denying an employer's motion to set aside a default judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(1) because the court was without jurisdiction of the employer's person since the garnishment summons a bank caused to be served against the employer was defective; the summons did not substantially comply with the requirement of O.C.G.A. § 18-4-113(a) that the summons be directed to the garnishee because the summons was directed to a corporation that was legally separate and distinct from the employer's paint and body shop. Lewis v. Capital Bank, 311 Ga. App. 795, 717 S.E.2d 481 (2011).

Garnishment proceedings. — Because a default judgment can be entered pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 18-4-115(a) only when the garnishee fails to timely file an answer, and by the plain terms of O.C.G.A. § 18-4-113(a)(1), the time in which an answer must be filed is triggered by the service of a summons of continuing garnishment, a default judgment is entered as provided in § 18-4-115(a) only after the garnishee has been served with proper process or has waived service of process, and § 18-4-115(b) provides relief, therefore, only when process has been served or waived; when a court enters a default judgment in a continuing garnishment proceeding in which the garnishee has not been served with a summons of continuing garnishment and the court has not obtained jurisdiction of the person of the garnishee, the default judgment is not one entered as provided in § 18-4-115(a), and subsection (b) of § 18-4-115 affords no relief, and in such a case, the garnishee is entitled to bring a motion to set aside the default judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(1). Lewis v. Capital Bank, 311 Ga. App. 795, 717 S.E.2d 481 (2011).

Motion to set aside a judgment allegedly void on the judgment's face does not require a brief of the evidence, since the questions presented by such motion do not require consideration of such evidence. Siefferman v. Kirkpatrick, 121 Ga. App. 161, 173 S.E.2d 262 (1970).

When a default judgment is set aside, the case returns to its prior posture, and the defendant must file responsive pleadings to avoid defaulting a second time; and this is in no way changed when a default judgment is set aside, not under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), but through exercise of the trial court's discretion, as derived from the court's inherent powers. Bank of Cumming v. Moseley, 243 Ga. 858, 257 S.E.2d 278 (1979).

Judgment of dismissal for failure to prosecute. — In a case in which a personal injury suit was dismissed without prejudice when neither party appeared for a peremptory calendar call, the trial court failed to notify the parties of the dismissal, and the parties did not learn the case had been dismissed until nine months later, it was proper to grant the plaintiff's motion to set aside the judgment and reenter a new order dismissing the case, thereby enabling the plaintiff to refile the action within six months. Morgan v. Starks, 214 Ga. App. 265, 447 S.E.2d 651 (1994).

Standing to bring motion to set aside. — Only the person against whom a judgment is rendered has standing to bring a motion to set aside the default judgment for nonamendable defects in the record and pleadings under subsection (d) of this section. Peek v. Southern Guar. Ins. Co., 142 Ga. App. 671, 236 S.E.2d 767 (1977), rev'd on other grounds, 240 Ga. 498, 241 S.E.2d 210 (1978).

Restrictions on motions to set aside not applicable to void judgments. — If a judgment is void, restrictions on the use of motions to set aside set out in subsection (d) of this section cannot apply. Holloway v. Frey, 130 Ga. App. 224, 202 S.E.2d 845 (1973).

Grant of motion to set aside not a final judgment. — Grant of a motion to set aside a judgment, like the grant of a motion for new trial, leaves the case still pending, and thus is not a final judgment. Mayson v. Malone, 122 Ga. App. 814, 178 S.E.2d 806 (1970); Hooper v. Taylor, 230 Ga. App. 128, 495 S.E.2d 594 (1998).

Denial of motion is final and appealable. — Denial of a motion authorized by Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27, and 30 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60) to set aside and vacate a judgment is final and appealable under former Code 1933, § 6-701 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-34). Farr v. Farr, 120 Ga. App. 762, 172 S.E.2d 158 (1969).

Appeal as a matter of right. — Denial of a motion to set aside is appealable as a matter of right. Dudley v. Monsour, 155 Ga. App. 269, 270 S.E.2d 686 (1980).

Appealability of refusal to set aside judgment. — Refusal to arrest a judgment or to vacate a judgment and set a judgment aside is such a final judgment as may be excepted to in a direct bill of exceptions (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 5-6-49 and 5-6-50). Jewell v. Jewell, 209 Ga. 678, 75 S.E.2d 3 (1953) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-703).

Appeal from denial of motion. — Denial of the plaintiff's motion to set aside a judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 is expressly a matter of discretionary appeal under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-35(a)(8), and a different result does not occur merely because the plaintiff's motion also sought a new trial. Parker v. Bellamy-Lunda-Dawson, 190 Ga. App. 257, 378 S.E.2d 502 (1989).

Although the Court of Appeals had jurisdiction to consider the grant of the appellee's O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g) motion to correct a clerical mistake in a default judgment, the court had no jurisdiction to address the denial of the appellants' motion to set aside the default judgment because an application must be filed to appeal from an order denying a motion to set aside a judgment. Brooks v. Federal Land Bank, 193 Ga. App. 591, 388 S.E.2d 704, cert. denied, 193 Ga. App. 909, 388 S.E.2d 704 (1989).

Court lacked jurisdiction to hear the caveator's appeal of the probate court's order denying the caveator's motion to set aside the court's previous orders granting letters of dismission to the executrix because the caveator's direct appeal was untimely and the caveator's application to the appellate court for a discretionary appeal also was untimely. Thierman v. Thierman, 234 Ga. App. 716, 507 S.E.2d 489 (1998).

In a case in which the appellant sought review of the denial of a motion to vacate and set aside a consent order, the appellate court lacked jurisdiction over the appeal; the appellant did not file a timely application for a discretionary appeal under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-35, as was required under § 5-6-35(a)(8) for orders under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d) denying a motion to set aside a judgment. Rogers v. Estate of Harris, 276 Ga. App. 898, 625 S.E.2d 65 (2005).

Denial of a motion to set aside a default judgment against a corporation was affirmed as: (1) there was no pending motion in the record when the default judgment was entered since the corporation's summary judgment motion had been denied as premature; (2) a colloquy between the trial court and the corporation's counsel did not create a pending motion; and (3) the fact that the corporation was entitled to resubmit the corporation's summary judgment motion did not mean that a motion was pending. Migmar, Inc. v. Williams, 281 Ga. App. 870, 637 S.E.2d 471 (2006).

Denial of a motion to set aside a default judgment against a corporation was not an abuse of discretion as the trial was properly noticed by publication of the trial calendar in the county's legal gazette; publication of a court calendar in the county's legal organ of record was sufficient notice to the parties to appear. Migmar, Inc. v. Williams, 281 Ga. App. 870, 637 S.E.2d 471 (2006).

Because the defendant effectively waived defenses of a lack of both personal jurisdiction and venue in failing to appear at the trial, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in striking the defendant's answer and denying a motion to set aside the default judgment entered. Jacques v. Murray, 290 Ga. App. 334, 659 S.E.2d 643 (2008).

Trial court erred in refusing to set aside a default judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d) because the affidavit filed by the registered agent for the party against whom a default judgment was taken, stating that the agent was never served, did not constitute an answer or appearance and the party against whom default was taken raised the issue via a motion to set aside the judgment. Stokes & Clinton, P.C. v. Noble Sys. Corp., 318 Ga. App. 497, 734 S.E.2d 253 (2012).

Denial of a "discretionary" motion to set aside is never appealable in its own right, nor does the filing of such a motion extend the time for filing an appeal. Stone v. Dawkins, 192 Ga. App. 126, 384 S.E.2d 225 (1989).

Discretionary appeal. — Court of Appeals lacks jurisdiction to consider a direct appeal from a trial court's order denying a motion to set aside a default judgment because the court previously held that a discretionary appeal was the only appellate remedy available and the application for a discretionary appeal was denied. Lewis v. Sun Mgt., Inc., 187 Ga. App. 591, 370 S.E.2d 840 (1988).

Action to open intestate estate. — Putative heir's action seeking an order opening the putative heir's father's intestate estate was subject to the three-year statute of limitations contained in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(f), and the appellate court held that the action was untimely because the action was filed more than three years after the probate court issued an order discharging the decedent's widow as administrator, and the heir did not provide evidence sufficient to show that the statute of limitations should be tolled, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-3-96, because the widow fraudulently kept the heir from learning that she filed a petition seeking letters allowing her to administer her husband's estate. Moore v. Mack, 266 Ga. App. 847, 598 S.E.2d 525 (2004).

Partition action. — Trial court did not err when the court denied a mother's motion to set aside a judgment of partition because the motion to set aside was filed more than three years after the entry of the judgment of partition, and that judgment was made by a court with jurisdiction; the trial court had subject-matter jurisdiction to enter the partitioning judgment since the land sought to be partitioned was partially located in the county of the trial court, and that court had personal jurisdiction of the mother since, under the partitioning statutes, the notice of intent to seek partitioning was the only process necessary to bring a defendant into court to meet the application for partitioning. Cabrel v. Lum, 289 Ga. 233, 710 S.E.2d 810 (2011).

Voluntary dismissal adjudication on the merits. — Drug store's voluntary dismissal of the store's inverse condemnation suit with prejudice barred the store's damages claim against a state agency in a direct condemnation action based on res judicata and the purported mistake of dismissing with prejudice was not subject to correction under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. DOT v. Revco Disc. Drug Ctrs., Inc., 322 Ga. App. 873, 746 S.E.2d 631 (2013).

Complaint in Equity1. In General

Editor's note. — The procedure for using a complaint in equity to set aside a judgment was deleted and prohibited by the 1986 amendment to this Code section.

Jurisdiction to relieve against verdicts inequitably obtained exists as certainly as it does against awards, judgments, and decrees obtained by imposition. Gentle v. Georgia Power Co., 179 Ga. 853, 177 S.E. 690 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5965).

Principles of former law embodied by subsection (e). — Subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27, and 30 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60) provides for a complaint in equity to set aside a judgment for fraud, and inculcates the same principles of law found in former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710. Lewis v. Lewis, 124 Ga. App. 579, 184 S.E.2d 672 (1971).

Subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27, and 30 (see now O.C.G.A.

§ 9-11-60) is identical with the provisions of former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710, and cases decided under the former Code sections are applicable in principle to cases arising under this subsection. Erwin v. Marx, 228 Ga. 495, 186 S.E.2d 735 (1972).

Subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27, and 30 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60) embodies the principles of former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710, and cases under those sections apply under subsection (e). Canal Ins. Co. v. Cambron, 240 Ga. 708, 242 S.E.2d 32, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 805, 99 S. Ct. 61, 58 L. Ed. 2d 98 (1978).

Purpose of subsection (e) of this section is to give equitable relief to those parties who are victims of fraud, accident, or mistake in the rendering of a judgment. Jordan v. Caldwell, 231 Ga. 226, 200 S.E.2d 868 (1973), overruled on other grounds, Cambron v. Canal Ins. Co., 246 Ga. 147, 269 S.E.2d 426 (1980).

Grounds for relief in subsection (e) not all-inclusive. — Although subsection (e) of this section only mentions that a complaint in equity may be brought to set aside a judgment for fraud, accident, or mistake or the acts of the adverse party unmixed with the negligence or fault of the complainant, equity has the power to afford relief on more grounds than those mentioned. Canal Ins. Co. v. Cambron, 240 Ga. 708, 242 S.E.2d 32, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 805, 99 S. Ct. 61, 58 L. Ed. 2d 98 (1978).

Former Code 1933, § 110-709 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-12-16) gave a remedy under subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27, and 30 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60) to third parties who attack a judgment as void for any cause because lack of jurisdiction or power in a court entering judgment always avoids the judgment, especially as the judgment relates to and affects the rights of other parties; such action is a mere usurpation of power and may be declared void collaterally without any direct proceedings to revise the judgment. Canal Ins. Co. v. Cambron, 240 Ga. 708, 242 S.E.2d 32, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 805, 99 S. Ct. 61, 58 L. Ed. 2d 98 (1978).

Former Code 1933, § 110-709 (see now

O.C.G.A. § 9-12-16) allowed a party, through complaint in equity under subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60), to attack a judgment void for any cause. Bonneau v. Ohme, 244 Ga. 184, 259 S.E.2d 631 (1979).

Principles of former Code 1933, § 110-709 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-12-16), provided that the judgment of a court having no jurisdiction over the person or subject matter or that was void for any other cause was a nullity and may be so held in any court when material, applied to subsection (e) of Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60). Canal Ins. Co. v. Cambron, 240 Ga. 708, 242 S.E.2d 32, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 805, 99 S. Ct. 61, 58 L. Ed. 2d 98 (1978).

State court without authority to set aside judgment under subsection (e).

— State Court of DeKalb County had no authority to set aside a judgment at a subsequent term of court on the basis of fraud under subsection (e) of this section, since such court has no equity jurisdiction. Bouldin v. Haverty Furn. Cos., 136 Ga. App. 30, 220 S.E.2d 48 (1975).

Subsection (e) of this section cannot be used to excuse an untimely notice of appeal. Jordan v. Caldwell, 231 Ga. 226, 200 S.E.2d 868 (1973).

There is no constitutional right to a jury trial in equity cases, even when questions of fraud are involved, and under subsection (e) of this section there is no error in the judge proceeding to hear a matter involving a question of negligence sitting as both a judge and jury. Burns & Ledbetter, Inc. v. Primark Marking Co., 244 Ga. 341, 260 S.E.2d 58 (1979).

No right to jury trial when seeking to set aside divorce. — Filing of a petition to have a divorce decree and agreement set aside for fraud and misrepresentation invokes the equitable powers of the court, and there is no constitutional right to a jury trial thereon. Keith v. Keith, 231 Ga. 230, 200 S.E.2d 891 (1973).

Complaint in equity to set aside judgment authorized. — Absent an adequate remedy in law, a complaint in equity may be brought to set aside a judgment for fraud, accident, or mistake or the acts of the adverse party unmixed with the negligence or fault of the complainant. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. v. Hale, 119 Ga. App. 565, 168 S.E.2d 204 (1969).

Requirements for setting aside judgment based on verdict. — If a judgment is based on a verdict, the same requisites for setting aside for fraud apply as to setting aside the judgment alone. Dollar v. Fred W. Amend Co., 184 Ga. 432, 191 S.E. 696 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

Decree entered upon a verdict void for uncertainty is necessarily itself too uncertain to be enforced, and must be set aside or arrested upon a proper motion. Jones v. Jones, 220 Ga. 753, 141 S.E.2d 457 (1965) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Judgment rendered by fraud, accident, or mistake. — Judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction may be set aside by the court that renders the judgment for fraud and irregularity. Mobley v. Mobley, 9 Ga. 247 (1851) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5957).

Judgment founded on a verdict obtained by fraud practiced on a defendant and the court may be set aside, and the original case reinstated, in a court of law, with proper pleadings, and with all the parties at interest as parties to the motion, if such motion is made at the term of the court at which the verdict and judgment were entered, and if the movant shows that the movant was not in laches, has a meritorious defense, and announces ready for an instant trial. May v. May, 214 Ga. 352, 105 S.E.2d 11 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

If a judgment sought to be set aside or arrested was procured by accident, mistake, or fraud or through any defect not amendable appearing on the face of the record or pleadings or by perjury or any other irregularity, the judgment may be set aside or arrested. Chambless v. Oates Plumbing & Heating Co., 97 Ga. App. 80, 102 S.E.2d 83 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

If a defendant has been served and judgment is rendered against the defendant by fraud, accident, or mistake, without fault or negligence on the defendant's part, a petition in equity to set aside the judgment will lie. Dollar v. Fred W. Amend Co., 184 Ga. 432, 191 S.E. 696 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(2) in setting aside a default judgment as the defendants' failure to answer could be found to be the direct result of the attorney's statement and inaction in leading the defendants to believe the suit was resolved. Cheuvront v. Carter, 263 Ga. App. 837, 589 S.E.2d 609 (2003).

Authority of court to grant necessary relief. — Ordinarily, a judgment may be set aside for fraud, accident, or mistake or acts of the adverse party unmixed with negligence or fault of complainant by petition in equity after the term has passed; in such cases, the court may grant such relief, legal or equitable, as may be necessary to afford complete relief. Clark v. Ingram, 150 Ga. App. 127, 257 S.E.2d 33 (1979).

If a plaintiff in petition and a defendant in counterclaim ask for such other and further relief as the court deems just and proper, the court has authority to grant such relief, legal or equitable, as may be necessary to afford complete relief, and the relief granted by the court is not sua sponte. Johnson v. Johnson, 244 Ga. 155, 259 S.E.2d 88 (1979).

Good defense must be shown. — In order to successfully attack a judgment in equity on the grounds of fraud, accident, or mistake, a petitioner must show that there is a good defense to the action at law and that failure to make the defense was owing not to any negligence or fault of the petitioner, but to the fault of the defendants in equity or their attorney. Baxter v. Weiner, 246 Ga. 28, 268 S.E.2d 619 (1980).

Divorce decree not subject to be set aside in equity for restraining remarriage. — Divorced wife cannot use the equitable proceedings under subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 to complain that a portion of the divorce settlement agreement restrains her from remarrying and is void as a matter of law; such a decree may not be set aside in equity unless the wife's assent was procured by fraud, duress, or mistake. Cronic v. Cronic, 238 Ga. 600, 234 S.E.2d 515 (1977).

Estoppel against parties to divorce by acknowledgment of service and admission of residency. — Parties to divorce proceedings who have acknowledged service and admitted residency are estopped thereafter to claim that the court rendering the divorce decree was without jurisdiction to grant the divorce. Thompson v. Thompson, 237 Ga. 509, 228 S.E.2d 886 (1976).

Judgment against incompetent. — Judgment rendered against an insane person who has no legal guardian and for whom no guardian ad litem has been appointed is voidable, even if the insane person was represented by counsel in the case. Keith v. Byram, 225 Ga. 678, 171 S.E.2d 120 (1969).

To set aside a judgment rendered against an incompetent defendant on the basis of the voidability, it is incumbent to file a petition in equity for such relief and proceed by complaint and summons. Sellers v. Bell, 151 Ga. App. 440, 260 S.E.2d 538 (1979).

Attack on judgment by incompetent defendant. — Insane person may institute, by next friend, in the court in which the judgment was rendered, proceedings in the nature of a motion to set aside the judgment as void. Perry v. Fletcher, 46 Ga. App. 450, 167 S.E. 796 (1933) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

In a case in which a person who was non compos mentis was sued upon a purported contractual obligation, being served only by the leaving of a copy of the petition and process at the incapacitated person's residence, and was not represented in the suit by any guardian or other person, judgment rendered against the incapacitated person was capable in a proper proceeding brought in the incapacitated person's behalf of being set aside as invalid. Perry v. Fletcher, 46 Ga. App. 450, 167 S.E. 796 (1933) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Complaint seeking to set aside a deed conveying an incompetent's interest to the defendant was a proper petition in equity under subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, warranting a set-aside of the ordinary court's judgment. McLendon v. Georgia Kaolin Co., 813 F. Supp. 834 (M.D. Ga. 1992).

Judgment improperly obtained against minor. — General rule that an infant is bound by a judgment rendered in a suit in which the infant is represented by a next friend is subject to an exception in case of fraud, collusion, or like conduct on the part of the next friend, in which case the judgment may be set aside at the instance of the minor, even though it may be a consent judgment. Nelson v. Estill, 190 Ga. 235, 9 S.E.2d 73 (1940) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Stipulation of state court held no bar to setting aside void judgment. — Stipulation recited in an order that there was no fraud, accident, or mistake or any acts of the adverse party unmixed with negligence or fault of complainant in obtaining a judgment in the State Court of DeKalb County would not prevent the court of equity from setting aside such judgment as void for lack of jurisdiction of the person. Fain v. Hutto, 236 Ga. 915, 225 S.E.2d 893 (1976).

Prior denial of motion not res judicata when additional grounds asserted. — If an equitable complaint also asserts additional grounds that were not included in a prior motion, the prior ruling of the trial judge against the motion to set aside the judgment is not res judicata. Holloway v. McCarthy, 151 Ga. App. 828, 261 S.E.2d 732 (1979), aff'd, 245 Ga. 710, 267 S.E.2d 4 (1980).

Evidence that the plaintiff in equity did not receive actual notice of a lawsuit did not constitute "fraud, accident, mistake, or the acts of the adverse party," and hence it was not a cognizable ground to vacate that judgment in a suit brought pursuant to subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Loveless v. Conner, 254 Ga. 663, 333 S.E.2d 586 (1985).

Sufficient redress under subsection (e) in federal civil rights action. — Existence of a state judicial procedure to set aside judgments obtained by fraud (O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60) was sufficient to redress the plaintiff in a federal civil rights action for the deprivation the plaintiff alleged occurred in the plaintiff's prior divorce proceeding through the alleged conspiracy of the divorce participants to take advantage of the judge's debilitated condition to procure rulings favoring the plaintiff's spouse. There was no violation of procedural due process and, because of this, the plaintiff could not state a claim for the denial of substantive due process. Collins v. Walden, 613 F. Supp. 1306 (N.D. Ga. 1985), aff'd, 784 F.2d 402 (11th Cir. 1986).

Due process. — Judgment is void if the court which rendered the judgment acted in a manner materially inconsistent with due process. Johnson v. Mayor of Carrollton, 249 Ga. 173, 288 S.E.2d 565 (1982).

Party prevented by duress from defending a suit may be relieved from judgment. Hirsch v. Collier, 104 Ga. App. 271, 121 S.E.2d 318 (1961), later appeal, 106 Ga. App. 652, 127 S.E.2d 859 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Before a judgment will be set aside for duress, it must appear that the complainant had a good defense that the complainant was prevented from asserting at the original hearing or trial. Frost v. Frost, 235 Ga. 672, 221 S.E.2d 567 (1975).

Both an extraordinary motion for new trial and a complaint in equity require the petitioner's showing that there is a good defense to the action at law, but no adequate remedy at law. Saxon v. Covington, 178 Ga. App. 271, 342 S.E.2d 754 (1986).

Failure to show fraud or inequitable conduct. — Trial court did not err in denying the first tenant in common's protest to the court-ordered public sale of a sign owned by the first tenant in common and the second tenant in common as the sale was conducted at a proper time and place under the circumstances, and the second tenant in common did not commit any fraud or inequitable conduct in purchasing the sign at the public sale. Caudell v. Toccoa Inn, Inc., 261 Ga. App. 209, 582 S.E.2d 180 (2003).

2. Fraud

Judgment obtained by fraud is void and may for that reason be set aside by a court of equity. Lewis v. Lewis, 228 Ga. 703, 187 S.E.2d 872 (1972).

When each of the victims of a fraudulent scheme unsuccessfully sued the perpetrator for fraud and related claims, because the perpetrator filed an affidavit stating that the perpetrator had never had any business dealings with the victims, when, in fact, the perpetrator had such dealings and admitted this in a related criminal case, it appeared that the perpetrator may have obtained the judgments dismissing the victims' claims by fraud on the court, and the victims could seek to set those judgments aside under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(2). Austin v. Cohen, 268 Ga. App. 650, 602 S.E.2d 146 (2004).

Fraud must be by adverse party or that party's counsel or agent. — If equity has jurisdiction to set aside a judgment obtained through perpetration of fraud, it must be made to appear in an application for this purpose that the fraud was perpetrated by the adverse party or the adverse party's counsel or agents. Dorsey v. Griffin, 173 Ga. 802, 161 S.E. 601 (1931) (decided under former Civil Code 1910); Elliott v. Elliott, 184 Ga. 417, 191 S.E. 465 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

Type of fraud that would authorize the setting aside of a verdict at the instance of the movant is fraud of the other party or the other party's counsel. Ketchum v. Ketchum, 191 Ga. 140, 11 S.E.2d 788 (1940) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Although a court of equity has authority to annul and set aside a judgment obtained by fraud, accident, or mistake, it must be made to appear in an action therefor, if fraud is claimed, that the fraud was perpetrated by the adverse party or the adverse party's counsel or agent. Pike v. Andrews, 210 Ga. 553, 81 S.E.2d 817 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Rather than third party. — One who obtained a judgment at law and was not chargeable with any conduct amounting to fraud or imposition upon the adverse party in relation to the judgment would not be interfered with by a court of equity for mere reason that a stranger perpetrated a fraud that prevented the other party from interposing a defense. Pike v. Andrews, 210 Ga. 553, 81 S.E.2d 817 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Fraud must be extrinsic to issues in case. — Judgment cannot be vacated from fraud when the particular fraud was in issue in the original proceedings, even if additional evidence is discovered since trial to prove the fraud. Walker v. Hall, 176 Ga. 12, 166 S.E. 757 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5965).

Before equity will set aside a judgment on the ground of fraud by the opposite party, the fraud must be extrinsic to the issues in the case. Pike v. Andrews, 210 Ga. 553, 81 S.E.2d 817 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Fraud must be actual rather than constructive. — General rule is that a court of equity, upon proper application, will set aside a judgment obtained by fraud, if such fraud is extraneous to the issues in the proceeding attacked, and especially if the court has been imposed upon by such fraud; such fraud must be actual and positive, not merely constructive, and must involve perpetration of intentional wrong or breach of a duty growing out of a fiduciary relation. Walker v. Hall, 176 Ga. 12, 166 S.E. 757 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5965).

Fraud in procurement of a judgment to be set aside must have been actual and positive, done with knowledge, and not merely constructive fraud, committed in ignorance of the true facts. Rivers v. Alsup, 188 Ga. 75, 2 S.E.2d 632 (1939) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Fraudulent acts to be specifically alleged. — In order to authorize a court of equity to entertain a petition to set aside a judgment for fraud, the acts claimed to constitute the fraud must be clearly and specifically alleged. Wessel-Duval & Co. v. Ramsey, 170 Ga. 675, 153 S.E. 744 (1930) (decided under former Civil Code 1910).

Equity will not set aside a judgment for any matter that was actually presented and considered in the judgment assailed. Walker v. Hall, 176 Ga. 12, 166 S.E. 757 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5965).

Court will not retry same issues absent fraud, accident, or undue advantage. — Court of equity will not retry the same issues determined in a former hearing by a court of competent jurisdiction in the absence of fraud, accident, or undue advantage of the prevailing party. Hubbard v. Whatley, 200 Ga. 751, 38 S.E.2d 738 (1946) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

Fraudulent inducement of withdrawal of defense. — Equity will provide relief against a judgment obtained by the plaintiff's inducing the defendants to withdraw an equitable plea the defendants had filed by the plaintiff's promise to do the equity set up in the plea and to enter into writing to that effect if the plea were withdrawn, which the plaintiff failed to do. Jordan v. Harber, 172 Ga. 139, 157 S.E. 652 (1931) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

If one party fraudulently induces an adversary to withdraw a defense, the judgment will be set aside. Walker v. Hall, 176 Ga. 12, 166 S.E. 757 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5965).

Keeping opposing party from court. — When a litigant keeps the opposite party from court, equity will relieve against the judgment obtained in the other party's absence. Walker v. Hall, 176 Ga. 12, 166 S.E. 757 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5965).

One of the most frequently recurring forms of fraud on the part of one litigant against the other, entitling the latter to relief in equity against the judgment finally entered, is the making of some agreement or representation for the purpose of preventing an appearance or defense in the original action, reliance on which has the effect intended. Jordan v. Harber, 172 Ga. 139, 157 S.E. 652 (1931) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

When one party gives the other party assurances, upon which the other party can reasonably rely, that the suit will be dismissed or judgment will not be taken, and then procures a judgment, taking advantage of the trust and confidence of the other party, the party misled, who is not negligent, has a ground to set aside the judgment. Hirsch v. Collier, 104 Ga. App. 271, 121 S.E.2d 318 (1961), later appeal, 106 Ga. App. 652, 127 S.E.2d 859 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Verdict rendered on basis of fraudulent acknowledgment of service. —

In a case in which an action requiring personal service on the defendant proceeds on an acknowledgment of service by defendant under O.C.G.A. § 9-10-73, the verdict rendered therein in favor of the plaintiff is invalid if such acknowledgment was, in fact, a forgery or was obtained by fraud, and a motion to set aside such verdict, made at the same term at which the verdict was rendered, would be available. Ketchum v. Ketchum, 191 Ga. 140, 11 S.E.2d 788 (1940) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Failure to disclose matters defeating own claim not fraud. — Mere failure of a party to disclose to the court or an adversary matters that would defeat the party's own claim or defense is not such fraud as will justify or require vacation of the judgment. Buice v. T. & B. Bldrs., Inc., 219 Ga. 259, 132 S.E.2d 784 (1963) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Averments of fraud cannot be predicated upon misrepresentations of law or as to matters of law. Robbins v. National Bank, 241 Ga. 538, 246 S.E.2d 660 (1978).

Fraud must be collateral to issues tried. — Matters once litigated generally are final, and hence the fraud shown by the complainant seeking to set aside the judgment and in equity must be extrinsic or collateral to the issues tried in rendering that judgment. Frost v. Frost, 235 Ga. 672, 221 S.E.2d 567 (1975).

Duress included in term "fraud". — Word "fraud" in subsection (e) of this section may be construed to include duress, as duress is but a species of fraud whereby one is induced contrary to one's will from presenting a defense to an action. Frost v.

Frost, 235 Ga. 672, 221 S.E.2d 567 (1975).

Fraud not predicated on oral promise not to enforce consent judgment.

— Consent judgment partakes of characteristics of both a contract and a judgment, and just as fraud cannot be predicated upon an oral promise not to enforce the unambiguous terms of a written contract, it cannot be predicated upon similar promises not to enforce unambiguous terms of a consent judgment. Chambers v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 242 Ga. 498, 249 S.E.2d 214 (1978), overruled on other grounds, Tri-Cities Hosp. Auth. v. Sheats, 247 Ga. 713, 279 S.E.2d 210 (1981).

Proof of fraud. — Rule that fraud may be shown by slight circumstances, contained in O.C.G.A. § 23-2-57, is not applicable to suits to set aside judgments. Leventhal v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 249 Ga. 390, 291 S.E.2d 222 (1982).

It is not fraudulent to assert a claim against a person voluntarily dismissed as a defendant in an earlier suit. Murray v. Chulak, 250 Ga. 765, 300 S.E.2d 493 (1983).

Attorney's knowing pursuance of claim against wrong person. —

"Fraud" within the meaning of subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 was practiced upon the defendant by the plaintiff through actions of the plaintiff's attorney, who was aware of the plaintiff's employee-spouse's representation to the defendant that the spouse would "handle" the matter of the action's having been filed against the wrong person, but who nonetheless pursued the claim of the plaintiff to judgment and sought to enforce the judgment by legal process. Cox v. Kirkland, 249 Ga. 796, 294 S.E.2d 514 (1982).

Superior court may set aside a judgment of a probate court as void for fraud, if an allegation of fact in the petition to the probate court that was necessary to give the court jurisdiction was known by the petitioner to be false and was therefore a fraud upon the court. Henderson v. Hale, 209 Ga. 307, 71 S.E.2d 622 (1952) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Real-estate broker's liability to purchase for misrepresentation or non-disclosure of physical defects in property sold. — Judgment of a probate court discharging the administrator may be set aside in a court of equity, if the judgment was procured by fraud practiced upon the heirs or the court. White v. Roper, 176 Ga. 180, 167 S.E. 177 (1932) (decided under former Code 1933, § 37-219 and Ch. 7, T. 110).

Although superior courts are not ordinarily empowered on equitable petition to set aside the probate of a will by a probate court, a superior court may set aside as void a judgment of the probate court for fraud, accident, or mistake. Abercrombie v. Hair, 185 Ga. 728, 196 S.E. 447 (1938) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Fraudulently procured divorce decree not set aside at instance of participant. — One who participates in fraudulently procuring a divorce decree may not then go into equity to have the decree set aside as allegedly void due to continuous cohabitation of the parties after the action was filed. Crowe v. Crowe, 245 Ga. 719, 267 S.E.2d 14 (1980).

Court of “appropriate jurisdiction” for attack on divorce decree obtained by fraud. — For an attack upon part of an original divorce decree, if the court’s jurisdiction was based upon the original decree having allegedly been obtained by fraud, a superior court that granted the decree attacked was the superior court of “appropriate jurisdiction.” Hill v. Harper, 230 Ga. 246, 196 S.E.2d 397 (1973).

Superior court retains jurisdiction. — If a party attacks a judgment via complaint in equity on the basis that the judgment was obtained by fraud, the superior court granting the judgment attacked is the superior court of appropriate jurisdiction. Peagler v. Glynn County Fed. Employees Credit Union, 171 Ga. App. 9, 318 S.E.2d 687 (1984).

Fraud not found. — Trial court abused the court’s discretion by vacating the domesticated foreign judgment because the seller failed to establish a jurisdictional defense before the trial court in Georgia or in Texas; the court did not find that the seller was harmed by the conduct of the purchaser, including extrinsic fraud, unmixed with its own negligence as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(2), or that the conduct of the purchaser created a non-amendable defect in the judgment as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d)(3). Mindis Metals, Inc. v. Oilfield Motor & Control, Inc., 2003 Tex. App. LEXIS 3312 (Tex. Ct. App. Apr. 17, 2003).

3. Negligence of Petitioner

Relief against judgment obtained when defendant not negligent.. — If the defendant has been deprived of a hearing by the plaintiff’s fraud, unmixed with negligence on the defendant’s own part, a petition in equity to set aside the judgment will lie. Nix v. Baxter, 46 Ga. App. 153, 167 S.E. 115 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910).

Negligence by complainant. — Equity will not intervene to set aside a judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction that might have been prevented except for negligence of the complainant. W.T. Rawleigh Co. v. Seagraves, 178 Ga. 459, 173 S.E. 167 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5965).

Judgment will not be set aside in a court of equity on the ground that the defendant had a good defense of which the defendant was ignorant, unless the defendant’s ignorance and failure to assert such defense were unmixed with any fault of negligence on the defendant’s part. W.T. Rawleigh Co. v. Seagraves, 178 Ga. 459, 173 S.E. 167 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5965).

Judgment may be set aside in equity for fraud, accident, or mistake, but only if there is no negligence or fault of the petitioner. Bach v. Phillips, 200 Ga. 308, 37 S.E.2d 407 (1946) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Motion to vacate or set aside a verdict and judgment after the term of court at which the verdict and judgment are rendered will be denied if it appears that the movant has not been diligent or is negligent. Fricks v. J.R. Watkins Co., 211 Ga. 110, 84 S.E.2d 51 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Because the defendant in a pending lawsuit negligently failed to make a defense, equity would not intervene to grant any relief from a judgment obtained against the defendant in consequence of the defendant’s negligence. Erwin v.

Marx, 228 Ga. 495, 186 S.E.2d 735 (1972); Stratton v. Bingham, 238 Ga. 287, 232 S.E.2d 560 (1977).

If the defendant negligently allows a default judgment to be entered against the defendant, equity will not intervene to grant relief from the judgment obtained in consequence of the defendant's negligence. Richardson v. Industrial Welding & Tool Supplies, Inc., 238 Ga. 144, 231 S.E.2d 760 (1977).

Phrase "unmixed with the negligence or fault of complainant," in subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, modifies the words "fraud, accident or mistake" as well as the words "acts of the adverse party." Leventhal v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 249 Ga. 390, 291 S.E.2d 222 (1982).

If there is any negligence or fault on the part of the movant, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 is inapplicable. Mitchell v. Speering, 239 Ga. App. 472, 521 S.E.2d 419 (1999).

No relief in equity from consequences of one's own negligence. — If a party has a good defense at law and from negligence fails to set it up at the proper time, that party must take the consequences of its own laches; the party cannot go into equity to be relieved from the consequences of such negligence. Peacock v. Walker, 213 Ga. 628, 100 S.E.2d 575 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

To authorize setting aside a judgment after the term at which the judgment was rendered, the actions of the adverse party causing the party's failure to appear and defend must be of such character that reliance on those actions did not amount to laches or negligence. Hirsch v. Collier, 104 Ga. App. 271, 121 S.E.2d 318 (1961), later appeal, 106 Ga. App. 652, 127 S.E.2d 859 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Negligence of a client or the client's attorney in failing to examine the original pleadings in a case is not ground for setting aside the judgment. Rahal v. Titus, 110 Ga. App. 122, 138 S.E.2d 68 (1964) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Party must exercise reasonable diligence. —

Party is charged with the legal duty of keeping advised as to the progress of litigation in which the party is interested, and of being prepared, so far as reasonably possible, to meet every emergency arising therein. Hurt Bldg., Inc. v. Atlanta Trust Co., 181 Ga. 274, 182 S.E. 187 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

Individual who, through ignorance, allows judgment to go adversely cannot afterwards have the judgment set aside, even on the ground of fraud, if that individual has not exercised ordinary diligence in the premises. Hoke v. Walraven, 57 Ga. App. 106, 194 S.E. 610 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

For a setting aside of judgment, it must appear that it was not due to the defendant's negligence that fraud was perpetrated, and that due diligence by the defendant would not have prevented the fraud. Hirsch v. Collier, 104 Ga. App. 271, 121 S.E.2d 318 (1961), later appeal, 106 Ga. App. 652, 127 S.E.2d 859 (1962) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Judgment will not be set aside if the party complaining thereof does not show proper diligence in discovering or attempting to discover facts upon which the party relies to annul the judgment. Marshall v. Russell, 222 Ga. 490, 150 S.E.2d 667 (1966), cert. denied, 386 U.S. 911, 87 S. Ct. 857, 17 L. Ed. 2d 783 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

Court of equity will not act unless it is shown that the party seeking relief has exercised reasonable diligence. Vinson v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 223 Ga. 54, 153 S.E.2d 436 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

One who would have equity must do equity. — Although the judgment of a court having no jurisdiction of the person or subject matter or void for any other cause is a mere nullity, and may be so held in any court when it becomes material to the interest of the parties to consider it, this rule must be construed in the light of principles that one who would have equity must do equity, that one who comes into a court of equity with unclean hands must be denied relief, and that one will not be permitted to take advantage of one's own wrong or to trifle with the courts. Corder v. Fulton Nat'l Bank, 223 Ga. 524, 156 S.E.2d 452 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

Question of diligence for jury. — Ordinarily, the question of whether or not the complainant could have ascertained the falsity of representations by proper diligence is for determination by the jury. City of Dalton v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 216 Ga. 602, 118 S.E.2d 475 (1961) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

Negligence in determining contents to divorce action after waiver of process. — Because a wife voluntarily signed an acknowledgment of service and waiver of process with respect to a suit for divorce, left the state, and made no investigation as to the contents of the suit, despite allegations that the husband breached an agreement not to submit the question of custody, judgment could not be set aside in equity because of the petitioner's negligence. Bach v. Phillips, 200 Ga. 308, 37 S.E.2d 407 (1946) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Failure to appear due to erroneous assumption as to date of trial. — Failure of a defendant to attend and defend a suit cannot be relieved in equity upon the ground that the defendant was advised by the defendant's attorney that the case would not be tried until a later term, which advice was based on an erroneous assumption. W.T. Rawleigh Co. v. Seagraves, 178 Ga. 459, 173 S.E. 167 (1934) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5965).

Absence of counsel. — After a trial on the merits, if evidence is presented to the judge sitting as the trier of facts, it is an abuse of discretion for the trial court to set aside the judgment, which in effect amounts to the grant of a new trial, merely because counsel failed to appear and defend the case when the case was called to trial, even though the reason for such nonappearance is that counsel mistakenly thought the case would be checked or had been checked over or that because of other duties counsel overlooked the fact that the case had been called for trial. Carolina Tree Serv., Inc. v. Cartledge, 96 Ga. App. 240, 99 S.E.2d 705 (1957) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-702).

Judgment rendered while counsel on leave with permission of court. — Because the defendant's attorney was granted a leave of absence by the judge and the pleadings showed that the defendant might have a good defense, equity could issue an injunction and set aside judgment rendered in the attorney's absence. Eatonton Oil & Auto Co. v. Ledbetter, 174 Ga. 715, 163 S.E. 891 (1932) (decided under former Civil Code 1910, § 5965).

Taking of judgment after settlement as fraud. — Because an insured party accepted a draft from the insurance company in full and final settlement of insurance claims and in consideration of an express or implied promise to pay the costs of court and dismiss the pending lawsuit against the company, the insured's taking of judgment thereafter amounted to "fraud" within the meaning of subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, and the insurance company was not under these circumstances negligent or at fault in the meaning of subsection (e) in relying upon the insured's promise and in failing to answer, pay the costs, and file the insured's attorney's written dismissal. Marsh v. Northland Ins. Co., 242 Ga. 490, 249 S.E.2d 205 (1978). For comment, see 31 Mercer L. Rev. 359 (1979).

4. Accident or Mistake

Nature of mistake relievable in equity. — Mistake relievable in equity is an erroneous mental condition, conception, or conviction induced by ignorance, misapprehension, or misunderstanding of the truth, but without negligence, and resulting in some act or omission done or suffered erroneously by one or both parties to a transaction, without the mistake's erroneous character being intended or known at the time. Whipple v. County of Houston, 214 Ga. 532, 105 S.E.2d 898 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

To be remediable at equity, a mistake must be one of past or present fact and not one of law. Robbins v. National Bank, 241 Ga. 538, 246 S.E.2d 660 (1978).

Docketing error made in the clerk's office amounts to an accident or mistake relievable in equity so far as the defendant is concerned, provided that the failure to answer is attributable thereto, without fault or negligence on the defendant's part. Dollar v. Fred W. Amend Co., 184 Ga. 432, 191 S.E. 696 (1937) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

Mistake as to legal effect no ground for relief. — Simple mistake by a party as to the legal effect of an agreement that the party executes or as to the legal result of an act that the party performs is no ground for either defensive or affirmative relief. Robbins v. National Bank, 241 Ga. 538, 246 S.E.2d 660 (1978).

Judgments erroneously entered should be set aside if the mistake was that of the court and not that of the parties. Toomer v. Hopkins, 204 Ga. 34, 48 S.E.2d 733 (1948) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-710).

Vacation of default judgment because clerk failed to enter filing of answer. — Because the clerk of the superior court, through inadvertence, omitted to make an entry of filing on the garnishee's answer, which had in fact been filed, it was not an error upon such showing being duly made to direct the clerk to make such an entry nunc pro tunc, and when the record was so amended, corrected pleadings and record alone authorized the court to arrest and vacate the default judgment against the garnishee. Simmons v. J.A. Jones Constr. Co., 72 Ga. App. 517, 34 S.E.2d 300 (1945) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 7, T. 110).

When court unaware of filing answer by garnishee. — Showing that a letter asserting that the letter was an answer to a summons of garnishment was filed within the time required and that the court, unaware of this filing, signed a default judgment against the garnishee was a sufficient showing upon which to grant a motion to set aside the default judgment. Aetna Fin. Co. v. Lee County

Mfg., Inc., 116 Ga. App. 200, 156 S.E.2d 374 (1967) (decided under former Code 1933, § 110-702).

Relief from condemnation judgment based on mistake of fact. — Because, due to a mistake of fact unmixed with negligence, a condemnation proceeding for a public road was conducted throughout upon the theory that abutting property would be improved rather than damaged, the petition in equity, alleging the facts and alleging that the mistake prevented the owners from proving consequential damage, alleged a cause of action to set aside an award and judgment of condemnation and to recover full damages. Whipple v. County of Houston, 214 Ga. 532, 105 S.E.2d 898 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Contested decisional error by trial or appellate court not "mistake". — Although a court of equity may set aside a judgment for mistake, fraud, or accident, a contested decisional error by a trial or appellate court, as to fact, law, or both, resulting in a judgment, is not such a mistake as can be rectified by a subsequent action, in equity or otherwise, challenging that judgment. Todd v. Dekle, 240 Ga. 842, 242 S.E.2d 613 (1978).

Complaint seeking to set aside a judgment on the ground that the judgment resulted from a contested decisional error of a court fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. Todd v. Dekle, 240 Ga. 842, 242 S.E.2d 613 (1978).

Entry of default judgment against garnishee who filed answer as accident or mistake. — Entry of default judgment against a garnishee who filed an answer, for the amount claimed to be due on the garnishor's judgment, was erroneous, and under the court's equitable authority the superior court was authorized to set aside the default judgment on the ground that the judgment had been entered by accident or mistake. Gibbs v. Spencer Indus., Inc., 244 Ga. 450, 260 S.E.2d 342 (1979).

Factual dispute regarding error or omission must be rectified by complaint in equity. — If there is a factual dispute between the parties about an error or omission, the only way for the complaining party to rectify the alleged error or omission is by complaint in equity to set the judgment aside because of the alleged mistake. Park v. Park, 233 Ga. 36, 209 S.E.2d 584 (1974).

Divorce rendered against wife without process and notice. — Allegation that the defendant obtained a divorce on November 2, 1942, although the parties lived together as husband and wife until November 1, 1942, that the petitioner had no knowledge of the pendency of a divorce action, not having been served with process nor having acknowledged service thereof, and that the defendant kept the petitioner ignorant of the pending suit, sufficiently stated grounds of fraud for setting aside the divorce decree in equity. Robertson v. Robertson, 196 Ga. 517, 26 S.E.2d 922 (1943) (decided under former Code 1933, §§ 37-219 and 110-710).

Complaint seeking to modify a divorce decree for fraud may be treated as a petition in equity under subsection (e) of this section when the complaint was not filed within the term in which the decree was entered, but was filed within three years from entry of the decree. Towns v. Towns, 242 Ga. 580, 250 S.E.2d 453 (1978).

Failure of party accepting substitute process to forward process. — If substituted process is served on a person of suitable age and discretion residing with the defendant, the failure of the person served actually to hand over the summons and complaint to the party defendant does not constitute “fraud, accident, or mistake” within the meaning of subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 and, thus, does not constitute grounds in equity for the setting aside of a default judgment. Villaruz v. Van Diviere Oil Co., 251 Ga. 145, 304 S.E.2d 58 (1983).

Erroneous failure to appear not a “mistake”. — Because a notice of hearing on a motion for summary judgment was given to the appellant’s counsel of record, and failure to appear was due solely to a mistake on the part of the appellant or the appellant’s counsel, subsection (e) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 did not afford a basis for relief from summary judgment granted to the appellee. McCullough v.

Molyneaux, 163 Ga. App. 352, 294 S.E.2d 560 (1982).

Relief from a workers’ compensation award in which the employer was erroneously found to be uninsured should properly have been sought in a court of equity pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Russell v. Fast Framers, Inc., 164 Ga. App. 771, 298 S.E.2d 303 (1982).

Time of Relief

Applicability of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(a). — Subsection (f) of Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60) falls squarely within the rule of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 5 and 6 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-6(a)), which provides that the day of the act, event, or default from which the designated period of time begins to run shall not be included, whether the period is measured in days, months, years, or some other unit of time. Earwood v. Liberty Loan Corp., 136 Ga. App. 799, 222 S.E.2d 204 (1975).

Judgment that is void for lack of jurisdiction of the person may be attacked at any time; and a default judgment entered against a party in an action in which there was no valid service of process is void, notwithstanding evidence that the defendant had actual knowledge of the suit. Gieger Fin. Co. v. Travis, 146 Ga. App. 224, 246 S.E.2d 132 (1978).

Subsections (d) and (f) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 provide that a judgment is subject to being set aside at any time by motion premised upon a lack of jurisdiction over the person; unless a party has waived lawful service of process, such service is essential to give a court jurisdiction over that party’s person. Benton v. Modern Fin. & Inv. Co., 244 Ga. 533, 261 S.E.2d 359 (1979).

Even if execution has been issued. — Void judgment is a mere nullity and has no vital force under any consideration or at any time; such a judgment may be attacked in any court and by anybody whenever it becomes necessary, even if an execution has been issued upon it. Ricks v. Liberty Loan Corp., 146 Ga. App. 594, 247 S.E.2d 133 (1978).

No bar, estoppel, or limitation on attack on void judgment. — Statutes of limitation have no application to void judgments, and there can be no bar, estoppel, or limitation as to the time when a void judgment may be attacked. Wasden v. Rusco Indus., Inc., 233 Ga. 439, 211 S.E.2d 733 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Murphy v. Murphy, 263 Ga. 280, 430 S.E.2d 749 (1993); Ricks v. Liberty Loan Corp., 146 Ga. App. 594, 247 S.E.2d 133 (1978).

Three-year limit not applicable to judgment void on its face. —

Three-year limitation of subsection (f) of this section does not apply to an action to set aside a judgment that is void on the judgment's face. Ricks v. Liberty Loan Corp., 146 Ga. App. 594, 247 S.E.2d 133 (1978).

Judgment void for lack of personal jurisdiction. —

Three-year statute of limitation that applies to all motions or proceedings to attack or set aside a judgment does not apply to a judgment void because of lack of jurisdiction of the person, which may be attacked at any time. Webb v. National Dist. Co., 148 Ga. App. 313, 251 S.E.2d 163 (1978).

Relation back of service. — Because a suit in equity to attack judgments was filed prior to the running of the statute of limitations, but process was not served until the statute had run because the defendant was residing outside the state and maintained no fixed address and the defendant's attorney would not accept process nor divulge the defendant's location, process would relate back to the time of filing. Canal Ins. Co. v. Cambron, 240 Ga. 708, 242 S.E.2d 32, cert. denied, 439 U.S. 805, 99 S. Ct. 61, 58 L. Ed. 2d 98 (1978).

Untimely motion did not afford relief. — Trial court properly denied a motion to correct a judgment entered against two debtors and their guarantors, five years and eight months after the expiration of the term of court in which the judgment was entered as they failed to show any entitlement to relief or exception as to why they could not have timely sought the relief requested; moreover, while a judgment which was void for lack of jurisdiction could be attacked at any time, all other motions to set aside a judgment had to be brought within three years after the judgment was entered, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(f). De La Reza v. Osprey Capital, LLC, 287 Ga. App. 196, 651 S.E.2d 97 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1928, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 819 (Ga. 2007).

Motion filed out of term in which judgment issued. —

In a dispute involving new and former owners of a daycare center, the trial court was without authority to grant the new owners' motion for reconsideration of the dismissal of their motion to set aside a default judgment. The motion for reconsideration was filed and granted four terms after the judgment at issue; thus, the order granting the motion for reconsideration was void. Levin Co. v. Walker, 289 Ga. App. 299, 656 S.E.2d 588 (2008), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 399 (Ga. 2008).

Judgments that are not void on their face must be attacked by direct proceeding. —

Such an attack upon the judgment by a third party may be made at any time, whether at law or equity, in an affirmative defense. Ray v. Tattnall Bank, 167 Ga. App. 871, 307 S.E.2d 754 (1983).

Denial of request to reconsider decision not appealable in own right. —

Denial of a motion that does not purport to be based either on a nonamendable defect or on a lack of jurisdiction but is simply a request for the trial court to reconsider the court's decision, is not appealable in its own right pursuant to subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, and the filing of such a motion does not extend the time for filing a notice of appeal. Dougherty County v. Burt, 168 Ga. App. 166, 308 S.E.2d 395 (1983).

Complaint filed three years after judgment properly dismissed. —

Because the plaintiff brought a complaint in equity seeking to set aside a final judgment that granted to the plaintiff the adoption of the defendant's child, alleging that the adoption had been fraudulently procured by the defendant's misrepresentation concerning the child's legitimacy, but the complaint in equity was filed more than three years after the entry of the challenged adoption decree, the trial court did not err in dismissing the complaint under subsection (b) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Kirby v. Kirby, 165 Ga. App. 163, 300 S.E.2d 192 (1983).

Action to set aside, on the ground of duress, that portion of a divorce decree that obligated the former wife to pay child support was required to have been brought within three years of the decree's entry. Mehdikarimi v. Emaddazfull, 268 Ga. 428, 490 S.E.2d 368 (1997).

Statute of limitations. — Suit in equity to enjoin enforcement of a judgment that allegedly has been satisfied by settlement after institution of the litigation, and payment of the agreed amount, is not barred by the three-year statute of limitations set forth in subsection (f) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, nor is it barred by the four-year statutes applicable to a breach of contract. Wells v. Mullis, 255 Ga. 426, 339 S.E.2d 574 (1986).

Putative father's petition for a blood test was, in substance, an extraordinary motion for a new trial based on newly discovered evidence and was not subject to the limitation period in subsection (f) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Department of Human Resources v. Browning, 210 Ga. App. 546, 436 S.E.2d 742 (1993).

Incompetent's fraud claim not expired. — Although the judgment under attack in the case was entered in 1971, and the case was not filed until 1985, given O.C.G.A. § 9-3-90's grace period for mental incompetents, the statute of limitations on the incompetent's fraud claim never began to run. McLendon v. Georgia Kaolin Co., 813 F. Supp. 834 (M.D. Ga. 1992).

Seller could not circumvent time period. — Because a collateral attack of an Alabama arbitration award was untimely for purposes of 9 U.S.C. § 12, which outlined a three-month statute of limitations to challenge such an award based on fraud, corruption, or partiality of the arbitrator, and a home seller's motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d) did not afford the seller an avenue to circumvent this time period, the trial court erred in denying a home buyer's petition to domesticate the award. McDonald v. H & S Homes, LLC, 290 Ga. App. 103, 658 S.E.2d 901 (2008).

Dismissal pursuant to five-year rule. — Trial court properly dismissed law clients' malpractice action pursuant to the "five-year rule" as there was no written order entered in the trial court for at least five years; that period was not tolled during the pendency of an appeal because the trial court had jurisdiction to proceed with at least part of the case. Paul v. Smith, Gambrell & Russell, 323 Ga. App. 447, 746 S.E.2d 739 (2013).

Correction of Clerical Mistakes

Application for appeal not required. — Although, basically, the import and result of motions to set aside and to correct judgments are in most instances identical, and logically the legislature probably did not contemplate allowing direct appeals from orders under subsection (g) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 while mandating a discretionary approach for those under subsection (d) of § 9-11-60, the clear language of the statute prevents an interpretation that would render both motions subject to O.C.G.A. § 5-6-35(b) and, therefore, motions under subsection (g) of § 9-11-60 do not require applications to appeal. Crawford v. Kroger Co., 183 Ga. App. 836, 360 S.E.2d 274, cert. denied, 183 Ga. App. 905, 360 S.E.2d 274 (1987).

Denial of a motion to set aside brought under subsection (g) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 is directly appealable. Kendall v. Peach State Mach., Inc., 215 Ga. App. 633, 451 S.E.2d 810 (1994).

Orders entered upon motions to correct a clerical error pursuant to subsection (g) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 do not require applications to appeal. Leventhal v. Moseley, 264 Ga. 891, 453 S.E.2d 455 (1995); Downs v. C.D.C. Fed. Credit Union, 224 Ga. App. 869, 481 S.E.2d 903 (1997).

Court authorized to correct clerical mistakes at any time. — Under subsection (g) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, clerical mistakes in judgments, orders, or other parts of the record and errors therein arising from oversight or omission may be corrected by the court at any time of the court's own initiative or on motion and such notice as the court orders. Clark v. Ingram, 150 Ga. App. 127, 257 S.E.2d 33 (1979).

Clerical errors from any accident, slip, or omission may at any time be corrected by the court. Clark v. Ingram, 150 Ga. App. 127, 257 S.E.2d 33 (1979).

Trial court improperly stated that the court had no jurisdiction over any matter involving the defendant's case as certain issues, such as the correction of a clerical mistake in a judgment or court order at any time under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g) remained within a trial court's jurisdiction; however, the trial court properly ruled on the defendant's motion to correct the defendant's sentence on the merits. Wilson v. State, 259 Ga. App. 627, 578 S.E.2d 260 (2003).

Trial court properly corrected an omission in a prior summary judgment order, which failed to reserve the matter of the amount of attorney fees awarded to a seller for final determination, even though the term of court in which the summary judgment had been entered had expired; the buyer cited no evidence creating a factual dispute as to the trial court's own admission that the court's failure to reserve the matter of the amount of attorney fees for final determination was due to oversight or omission. Sofran Peachtree City, LLC v. Peachtree City Holdings, LLC, 272 Ga. App. 851, 614 S.E.2d 111 (2005).

Probate court violated O.C.G.A. § 15-6-21(c)'s notice requirements by setting aside a partial final consent order sua sponte without notice to the parties' counsel. If the intent of the final order the court later entered was to supplement and not supplant the partial final order, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g) allowed the fact-finder to correct "at any time" the mistaken omission of the partial final order's provision concerning appointment of an executor from the final order. Harwell v. Harwell, 292 Ga. App. 339, 665 S.E.2d 33 (2008).

Provided matters of substance not affected. — Clerical mistakes can be corrected by the court at any time, provided the mistakes are confined to the plain meaning and not inflated to include matters of substance. Clark v. Ingram, 150 Ga. App. 127, 257 S.E.2d 33 (1979).

Clerical error or omission should be obvious on face of record. — Ordinarily, a judgment should be modified under subsection (g) of Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60) only if the clerical error or omission is obvious on the face of the record. Cagle v. Dixon, 234 Ga. 698, 217 S.E.2d 598 (1975).

Subsection (g) of Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, §§ 26, 27, and 30 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60) was ordinarily to be used when a clerical error or omission was obvious on the face of the record. Smith v. Smith, 230 Ga. 238, 196 S.E.2d 437 (1973).

Except after hearing establishing clerical nature of omission. — There is an exception to the general principle of modifying only obvious clerical errors if there has been a hearing on a motion to correct a judgment and the evidence compels the conclusion that an omission was in fact a clerical error. Cagle v. Dixon, 234 Ga. 698, 217 S.E.2d 598 (1975).

Voluntary dismissal is "order" within meaning of subsection (g) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60, and is subject to correction as provided therein. Page v. Holiday Inns, Inc., 245 Ga. 12, 262 S.E.2d 783 (1980).

Reentry of order of dismissal. — Since a dismissal order was never served upon the plaintiff because the trial court's staff misaddressed the envelope, the court properly set aside and then reentered the dismissal order and the order was effective as of the date the order was actually reentered. Carnes Bros., Inc. v. Cox, 243 Ga. App. 863, 534 S.E.2d 547 (2000).

Dismissal with prejudice could be corrected to dismissal without prejudice. — Trial court erred in denying the plaintiffs' motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g) to withdraw the plaintiffs' dismissal with prejudice and submit a dismissal without prejudice. The plaintiffs' counsel and the defendant driver's counsel submitted affidavits that they had intended the dismissal to be without prejudice and had filed the dismissal with prejudice in error; § 9-11-60(g) allowed the correction of errors arising from oversight or omission, and the plaintiffs' UM insurer was not prejudiced by this mistake. Mullinax v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 303 Ga. App. 76, 692 S.E.2d 734 (2010).

Judgment by default may be corrected to conform to the pleadings at a subsequent term of the court, even after execution has been issued and the property sold. Williams v. Stancil, 119 Ga. App. 800, 168 S.E.2d 643 (1969).

Court, when no adverse rights have intervened, has jurisdiction nunc pro tunc to enter an order of dismissal accurately reflecting what occurred upon trial of the case. Israel v. Joe Redwine Ins. Agency, 120 Ga. App. 14, 169 S.E.2d 347 (1969).

Correction of irregularities in judgment. — Not only mere clerical errors, but also irregularities in the judgment, if the irregularities appear on the face of the record, may be corrected after expiration of the term, and irregular judgments may be made perfect. Williams v. Stancil, 119 Ga. App. 800, 168 S.E.2d 643 (1979).

Mathematical error on face of judgment. — If a mathematical error in the principal amount of the judgment is complained of, but the error is shown on the face of the judgment, the judgment can be amended at any time so as to speak the truth. Brannon v. Trailer Craft Mfg. Co., 130 Ga. App. 766, 204 S.E.2d 477 (1974).

Correction of mutual mistake. — If an omission is made in a judgment by mutual mistake of the parties, the trial judge is authorized to correct the judgment on the motion made for that purpose. Smith v. Smith, 230 Ga. 238, 196 S.E.2d 437 (1973).

Trial judge had authority to correct the judgment in a divorce case incorporating an agreement of the parties, which by mutual mistake omitted the words "per child," because the adverse party was given notice of the motion to correct such judgment, and at the hearing admitted that the agreement that was made the judgment of the court omitted the words "per child" as intended by the parties. Smith v. Smith, 230 Ga. 238, 196 S.E.2d 437 (1973).

Correction of judgment to conform to parties' agreement. — If both parties to a judgment agree that the judgment entered did not speak their agreement, a motion to modify and correct such judgment is permissible. Brown v. Brown, 233 Ga. 581, 212 S.E.2d 378 (1975).

Because the mother's attorney unknowingly signed a general release that was inadvertently prepared by the injured party's insurer instead of a limited release to which the mother had agreed, the trial court should have granted the motion to rescind the dismissal under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g); the mother's attorney immediately took steps to correct the mistake, and the mother's insurer, the only party that refused to consent to rescission of the dismissal, was not prejudiced, as allowing the correction would have merely placed it in the position it expected to be in before it realized that the mother's attorney had signed the wrong papers. Sanson v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 276 Ga. App. 555, 623 S.E.2d 743 (2005).

Omission of language from judgment. — If words, sentences, or paragraphs are omitted from a judgment and there is no factual dispute between the parties about such error or omission, the judgment may be corrected. Park v. Park, 233 Ga. 36, 209 S.E.2d 584 (1974).

Vacation of order entered by misconception or misrepresentation. — Original order of the court that was entered either by misconception or as a result of a misrepresentation was properly vacated. Hunt v. Household Fin. Corp., 138 Ga. App. 693, 227 S.E.2d 467 (1976).

Amendment of record by reducing oral order to writing. — Language "amend its own records" in former Code 1933, §§ 24-104 and 81-1202 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-1-3(6)) included amending the record by reducing to writing an order, which had previously existed only as an oral statement and was therefore not properly a part of the record at all, although it had been recognized as such during the trial of the case. Maloy v. Planter's Whse. & Lumber Co., 142 Ga. App. 69, 234 S.E.2d 807 (1977).

Conformance of child support judgment to verdict. — Because a jury verdict in a divorce action provided for child support at the rate of $100.00 per month until the children reached the age of 21, but the judgment entered on the verdict provided for payment of child support at the rate of $50.00 per month for each minor child, until such child became self-supporting, married, or attained the age of 21, the court was able to order that the judgment be corrected for clerical error to conform to the verdict. Lowe v.

Correction of Clerical Mistakes (Cont'd)

Lowe, 243 Ga. 398, 254 S.E.2d 323 (1979).

Vacation and reentry of judgment for appeal purposes when losing party not timely notified of decision.

— Under former Code 1933, §§ 24-2620 and 24-2621 (see now O.C.G.A. § 15-6-21), it was the duty of the judge to file the judge's decision with the clerk of the court and notify the attorney of the losing party of the judge's decision; and if no notice was sent by the court or the clerk to the losing party, an action may be brought under subsection (g) of Ga. L. 1974, p. 1138, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60) to set aside the earlier judgment, and upon a finding that notice was not provided as required by former Code 1933, §§ 24-2620 and 24-2621, the motion to set aside may be granted, the judgment reentered, and the 30-day period within which the losing party must appeal would begin to run from the date of the reentry. Cambron v. Canal Ins. Co., 246 Ga. 147, 269 S.E.2d 426 (1980); Fremichael v. Doe, 221 Ga. App. 698, 472 S.E.2d 440 (1996).

In considering whether the trial court's denial of a motion to set aside was erroneous because a party did not receive notice of the entry of judgment, the issue is not whether the losing party had knowledge that the judgment was entered, but rather whether the duty imposed on the court by O.C.G.A. § 15-6-21(c) was carried out; it is necessary that the trial court first make a finding regarding whether such duty was met and, if not, the earlier judgment must be set aside before judgment is reentered to commence a new 30-day period for appeal. Kendall v. Peach State Mach., Inc., 215 Ga. App. 633, 451 S.E.2d 810 (1994).

In a workers' compensation case, when the trial court did not send the parties the court's judgment as required by O.C.G.A. § 15-6-21(c), the court erred in denying the employer's motion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g) to vacate and re-enter the judgment so that the employer could file a timely appeal; O.C.G.A. § 34-9-105(b) did not prevent granting of the motion because the trial court had complied with the court's time limitations, and it was improper for the trial court to decide the motion based upon the court's determination that the employer knew or should have known that a judgment had been entered. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Parker, 283 Ga. App. 708, 642 S.E.2d 387 (2007).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in setting aside a default judgment entered in favor of former police officers under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d) because the default judgment was entered despite the fact that the record disclosed that a pension fund board of trustees timely answered the complaint and, thus, there was no basis upon which to claim a default judgment; the board's answer was filed 31 days after service, but because that day was a Monday and the 30th day after service fell on a Sunday, under O.C.G.A. § 1-3-1(d)(3), the answer was timely. Stamey v. Policemen's Pension Fund Bd. of Trs., 289 Ga. 503, 712 S.E.2d 825 (2011).

Although a bicyclist failed to comply with the trial court's order to notify a driver of a default judgment against the driver for $2.9 million, such failure did not permit the trial court to vacate the judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g) because the trial court had no duty to notify the driver of the judgment, pursuant to O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-5(a) and 15-6-21(c). Winslett v. Guthrie, 326 Ga. App. 747, 755 S.E.2d 287 (2014).

Effect of correction on final order.

— Trial court's corrective action in clarifying an omission as to post-trial interest in the court's earlier partial summary judgment, which had been certified as final, constituted a final order which was directly appealable. Nodvin v. West, 197 Ga. App. 92, 397 S.E.2d 581 (1990).

Judgment changing previously entered order on evidentiary grounds not authorized.

— Court was without authority to enter a nunc pro tunc judgment changing a previously entered order not involving correction of a clerical mistake arising from oversight or omission, but based on a motion to reconsider and set aside final judgment and decree on the ground that certain provisions were not supported by the evidence. Brown v. Brown, 233 Ga. 581, 212 S.E.2d 378 (1975).

Waiver by acceptance of benefits under judgment. — Wife waived the right to file a motion under subsection (g) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 to correct a divorce judgment by accepting alimony payments and other benefits under the judgment for over two years prior to filing the motion. Fender v. Fender, 249 Ga. 773, 294 S.E.2d 474 (1982).

Court omitting signing of order orally granted. — If the plaintiff files an amendment to the complaint and a motion to add parties, a proposed (unsigned) order granting the motion is placed in the file at the same time as the motion, a hearing on the motion is held, and the trial court, in the exercise of the court's discretion, orally grants the motion, all within the limitations period, but, through oversight, the court omits the actual signing of the order, the trial court does not err in later entering a nunc pro tunc order so as to correct the court's own oversight and to make the record speak the truth. Savannah Iron & Fence Corp. v. Mitchell, 168 Ga. App. 252, 308 S.E.2d 569 (1983).

Foreign divorce decree. — Because an action to domesticate a Pennsylvania divorce decree was barred by the five-year statute of limitations in Georgia and, further, there was no authority for a Georgia court to "correct" a domesticated judgment of another state, denial of a summary judgment in favor of a former wife as to the wife's claim for domestication and correction of the decree was proper. Eickhoff v. Eickhoff, 263 Ga. 498, 435 S.E.2d 914 (1993).

New award of damages not clerical mistake. — Trial court erred in modifying a judgment to add prejudgment interest after the term of court in which the original judgment was entered as the award of prejudgment interest was the addition of a new award of damages and not a mere correction of a clerical mistake. Capital Cargo, Inc. v. Port of Port Royal, 261 Ga. App. 803, 584 S.E.2d 54 (2003).

No clerical errors found. — In an objector's appeal from an order enforcing a settlement agreement with a trust administrator, there was no error in denying the objector relief under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g) because the errors alleged by the objector could not in any way be said to be clerical or typographical errors. Head v. Wachovia Bank, N.A., 264 Ga. App. 608, 591 S.E.2d 424 (2003).

Trial court erred by entering a second final decree of divorce pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(g) after the term of court in which the first final decree had been entered had already expired because there were no clerical mistakes made with respect to the first final decree; the alleged mistake by the clerk, if any, related to the clerk's failure to file the husband's premature motion for new trial and had nothing to do with any alleged clerical errors in the first order and, accordingly, the trial court could not "correct" any mistake relating to the handling of the husband's motion for new trial by issuing a "corrected" second order based on a first order that contained no clerical mistakes. Tremble v. Tremble, 288 Ga. 666, 706 S.E.2d 453 (2011).

Orders improperly vacated when requirements were not met. — Trial court erred in vacating the court's orders denying a trust's temporary restraining order and an executor's motions for a declaratory judgment and for injunctive relief because, when the orders were not void on the orders' face, the O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 requirements were not met, a party did not file a motion to set aside the orders, the executor did not receive notice of the challenge, and the action was not the correction of a clerical error. Cherry v. Moreton Rolleston, Jr. Living Trust, 273 Ga. App. 876, 616 S.E.2d 157 (2005).

Amount of income intentionally included in divorce decree was not "mistake". — When a particular amount of income was intentionally inserted into a divorce decree that incorporated a negotiated child support amount, a trial court could not later "correct" the amount, as if it were a clerical mistake, without setting aside the whole judgment. Porter-Martin v. Martin, 280 Ga. 150, 625 S.E.2d 743 (2006).

Law of the Case Rule

Law of the case rule abolished. — Although an unsuccessful motion for summary judgment by the appellants, a doctor and the doctor's professional corporation, had been based on the statute of repose, O.C.G.A. § 9-3-71(b), and so was their later motion in limine, the fact that the statute of repose issue was decided against them in the ruling on the summary judgment motion did not make the prior ruling the law of the case so as to bar the appellants from raising the same statute of repose issue in their appeal from the denial of their motion in limine as the law of the case rule was statutorily abolished in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h). Eyzaguirre v. Baker, 260 Ga. App. 53, 579 S.E.2d 47 (2003).

Law of the Case Rule (Cont'd)

Trial court was not bound by an order in which the court previously found that the court lacked jurisdiction over a dispute between neighbors as the law of the case doctrine had been abolished pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h). Knapp v. Cross, 279 Ga. App. 632, 632 S.E.2d 157 (2006).

Under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h), the law of the case had been abolished and did not bind the trial court to the court's interim ruling ordering the wife of a mortgagor to pay rent into the registry of the court pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 44-7-54(a)(1) during a continuance of the lender's dispossessionary action. Harper v. JP Morgan Chase Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 305 Ga. App. 536, 699 S.E.2d 854 (2010).

Judgment is the law of the case until set aside or reversed. Hill v. Willis, 224 Ga. 263, 161 S.E.2d 281 (1968).

Ruling on motion for new trial as law of case until set aside or reversed. — If a motion for new trial is filed and ruled upon by the trial court, it establishes the law of the case until set aside or reversed. Hill v. Willis, 224 Ga. 263, 161 S.E.2d 281 (1968).

Unless prevented by appeal or enumeration of error. — Losing party may prevent a judgment overruling a motion for new trial from becoming the "law of the case" by appealing directly from such judgment, or by appealing from other appealable judgments and enumerating the error on the overruling of the motion for new trial. Byers v. Lieberman, 126 Ga. App. 582, 191 S.E.2d 470 (1972).

Failure to appeal from a judgment overruling a motion for new trial or failure to enumerate error thereon will not effect a dismissal of the appeal, but merely concludes the party as to the grounds urged in the motion for new trial. Byers v. Lieberman, 126 Ga. App. 582, 191 S.E.2d 470 (1972).

Defendants successfully sought an interlocutory appeal from the state court's order striking the defendants' arbitration defense, the state-court judgment was affirmed by the Court of Appeals of Georgia, and the Supreme Court of Georgia denied certiorari, so the judgment was now final for all preclusive purposes. Cnty. State Bank v. Strong, 651 F.3d 1241 (11th Cir. 2011), cert. denied, U.S. , 133 S. Ct. 101, 184 L. Ed. 2d 22 (2012).

Law of the case rule still pertains insofar as appellate courts are concerned, if rulings of the trial judge are unexcepted to. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Wendler, 120 Ga. App. 839, 172 S.E.2d 360 (1969).

Law of the case rule has formally been abolished except as the rule applies to rulings by one of the appellate courts and those rulings are binding in all subsequent proceedings, including a second trial. Continental Corp. v. DOT, 185 Ga. App. 792, 366 S.E.2d 160, cert. denied, 185 Ga. App. 909, 366 S.E.2d 160 (1988); McLean v. Continental Wingate Co., 222 Ga. App. 805, 476 S.E.2d 83 (1996); In re Spruell, 237 Ga. App. 259, 517 S.E.2d 190 (1999).

"Law of the case rule," as applied in Hill v. Willis, 224 Ga. 263, 161 S.E.2d 281 (1968), has been abolished, provided, however, that any ruling by the appellate court in a case shall be binding in all subsequent proceedings in that case in the lower court and in the appellate court. Jebco Ventures, Inc. v. City of Smyrna, 529 Ga. 599, 385 S.E.2d 397 (1989); Security Life Ins. Co. of Am. v. Clark, 273 Ga. 44, 535 S.E.2d 234 (2000).

If the decision of an appellate court becomes "incorrect" because the law changes—either because of subsequent case law or because of later-enacted statutes—it may not be binding precedent for other situations; however, between the parties to the original decision it remains the law of the case. Fulton-DeKalb Hosp. Auth. v. Walker, 216 Ga. App. 786, 456 S.E.2d 97 (1995).

Court of Appeals holding was the law of the case as between the parties to an action even though the rationale of the holding was thereafter overruled by the Supreme Court in an unrelated case. Dicks v. Zurich Am. Ins. Co., 231 Ga. App. 448, 499 S.E.2d 169 (1998).

Questions decided by appellate court binding as law of case. — If judgment is reversed by the appellate court, all questions as to pleadings and effect of evidence adjudicated by the appellate court are binding as the law of the case on a second trial, unless additional pleadings and evidence prevail to change such adjudications. Monroe Motor Express v. Jackson, 76 Ga. App. 280, 45 S.E.2d 445 (1947) (decided under former Code 1933).

Because a contempt order was previously affirmed on appeal by the Georgia Court of Appeals, a claim made thereafter that the order was void was rejected as the affirmed order became the law of the case. Rice v. Lost Mt. Homeowners Ass'n, 288 Ga. App. 714, 655 S.E.2d 214 (2007), cert. denied, 2008 Ga. LEXIS 376 (Ga. 2008).

Although the law of the case rule was abolished, the appellate court's finding in an earlier proceeding involving the termination of the mother's parental rights in the mother's three minor children that the children were deprived, the deprivation was caused by lack of parental care and control, and the deprivation was likely to continue was binding on the juvenile court in subsequent proceedings since an exception applied to the abolishment of the law of the case rule that allowed a ruling by the appellate court to be binding on all subsequent proceedings in the lower court. In the Interest of D.F., 261 Ga. App. 148, 582 S.E.2d 16 (2003).

Because an appellate court previously ruled that an insurer was entitled to partial summary judgment on the issue of recoverable damages relating to the assignees' claims against it for failure to settle an underlying case, the amount of recoverable damages on a remanded trial was limited to the policy limits pursuant to the prior decision, and the matter could not be relitigated pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h). Empire Fire & Marine Ins.

Co. v. Driskell, 264 Ga. App. 646, 592 S.E.2d 80 (2003).

Widower could not relitigate claims for compensatory and punitive damages based on the claim that the father-in-law had broken a verbal promise to give the widower a portion of life insurance proceeds to help defray the deceased wife's burial costs as the matter had been previously resolved by summary judgment in favor of the father-in-law, which decision was affirmed on appeal; such a decision was binding, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h), in the subsequent trial with respect to whether a promise had been made and broken as to the disposition of the life insurance proceeds, and the widower was barred from raising the issues relating to those damages by the doctrines of collateral estoppel and res judicata, under O.C.G.A. § 9-12-40. Hardwick v. Williams, 272 Ga. App. 680, 613 S.E.2d 215 (2005).

Under principles of both law of the case and judicial estoppel, a defendant could not complain when, after a modified sentence was overturned, the trial court reimposed the sentence originally imposed on the defendant. Williams v. State, 277 Ga. App. 841, 627 S.E.2d 808 (2006).

Affidavit of the plaintiff limited liability company's sole member did not demand summary judgment for the plaintiffs because the evidentiary posture of the case had not changed by the addition of the affidavit given the similarity of the arguments and evidence presented in the current and previous appeals before the appellate court; the affidavit was parol evidence, which a court could not consider unless an ambiguity existed in the contract, and there was no ambiguity in the parties' agreement. IH Riverdale, LLC v. McChesney Capital Partners, LLC, 292 Ga. App. 841, 666 S.E.2d 8 (2008).

In an action regarding an alleged defect in a home's septic system, the home buyers' agent was properly granted summary judgment as to a fraud claim based on the law of the case doctrine under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h) because on a prior interlocutory appeal, the court reversed the trial court's denial of summary judgment to the listing agent, finding justifiable reliance had not been shown as to the fraud claim as no question existed that the buyers were informed through their agent that the septic tank had been pumped twice within a four-month period. Davis v. Silvers, 295 Ga. App. 103, 670 S.E.2d 805 (2008).

Because the Supreme Court of Georgia had already held on certiorari that a defendant's claims challenging the constitutionality of consecutive sentences were properly the subject of a motion to vacate a void sentence, that order constituted the law of the case, and the trial court was not authorized to make any ruling to the contrary, including the court's ruling that the defendant's constitutional challenges were waived. Rooney v. State, 287 Ga. 1, 690 S.E.2d 804, cert. denied, U.S. , 131 S. Ct. 117, 178 L. Ed. 2d 72 (2010).

Trial court erred in granting summary judgment in favor of a former clerk and a deputy clerk in an inmate's action alleging that they breached their duty to notify the department of corrections of the inmate's amended sentence as required by O.C.G.A. § 42-5-50(a) because the court of appeals previously ruled in the case that the clerks were not entitled to official immunity in their individual capacities for failing to perform the ministerial act of communicating the inmate's sentence to the DOC, and nothing in the record following remand changed that ruling; § 42-5-50(a) is imperative, and its performance is neither discretionary nor dependent upon a direction from the parties at interest. McGee v. Hicks, 303 Ga. App. 130, 693 S.E.2d 130 (2010), aff'd, 289 Ga. 573, 713 S.E.2d 841 (2011).

Trial court erred in denying the defendant's challenge to the jury traverse on the ground that the court lacked jurisdiction since the defendant was essentially seeking a writ of mandamus because in the court's order transferring the defendant's appeal to the court of appeals, the supreme court held that the matter did not involve a mandamus action brought against a public officer, and instead involved only the denial of a motion in a criminal case, and that transfer order established the rule of the case. MacBeth v. State, 304 Ga. App. 466, 696 S.E.2d 435 (2010).

Trial court did not err in ruling that under the law of the case rule, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h), the defendant's custodial statement could not be used for retrial because the court of appeals had explicitly determined that the custodial statement at issue had been procured in violation of defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel, and such determination stood as the law of the case between the parties; because the suppression ruling concerning the defendant's custodial statement had already received interim appellate review, the trial court correctly determined that the issue was governed by the law of the case rule. State v. Stone, 304 Ga. App. 695, 697 S.E.2d 852 (2010).

Appellate court dismissed the defendant's appeal of a trial court's denial of an extraordinary motion for correction of sentence in which the defendant argued that the sentence imposed was void because the appeal was barred by the law of the case doctrine since the appeal involved the exact same subject matter of the defendant's previous appeals. Paradise v. State, 321 Ga. App. 371, 740 S.E.2d 238 (2013).

Parent could not raise various enumerations of error in the parent's appeal of a custody modification decision because the same issues had been raised in the prior appeals. Gilchrist v. Gilchrist, 323 Ga. App. 555, 747 S.E.2d 75 (2013).

State's challenge to the adequacy of nonhearsay evidence to support a trial court's finding that the defendant asserted the right to a speedy trial in due course lacked merit as the appellate court's prior holding that there was significant evidence of the defendant's attempt to obtain a speedy trial remained the law of the case. State v. Takyi, 322 Ga. App. 832, 747 S.E.2d 24 (2013).

In a class action litigation by a facsimile recipient against the sender, the affirmation of the certification of the class, which excluded certain recipients with whom the sender had shown an established business relationship, became the law of the case to which the courts were thereafter bound in further litigation in the matter. Am. Home Servs. v. A Fast Sign Co., 322 Ga. App. 791, 747 S.E.2d 205 (2013).

Appellate decisions on attorney fees binding. — As a prior action arising from a real estate contract dispute resolved the issue of attorney fees against an attorney and the attorney's clients pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14, that became the law of the case pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h), such that a second action seeking attorney fees against the attorney was precluded. Fortson v. Hardwick, 297 Ga. App. 603, 677 S.E.2d 784 (2009), cert. denied, No. S09C1447, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 407 (Ga. 2009).

In the appellees' suit to recover attorney fees from appellants, the appellate court's opinion had specified the hours appellees spent on an appeal which the appellants had claimed were fraudulent. As the appellees deleted those challenged hours from the billing they presented to the trial court on remand, there were no issues to be tried; pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h), the appellate court's prior decision was binding on the trial court as the law of the case. Furthermore, the trial court did not err in striking the appellants' amended answer raising, for the first time, a statute of limitations defense as the prior appellate court ruling was determinative of all claims. Falanga v. Kirschner & Venker, P.C., 298 Ga. App. 672, 680 S.E.2d 419 (2009).

Clerk's duty to notify under O.C.G.A. § 42-5-50. — Court of Appeals erred in determining that the law of the case required a finding that a clerk's duty to notify the department of corrections of sentencing orders under O.C.G.A. § 42-5-50 was discretionary rather than ministerial because the Court of Appeals' prior decision did not resolve whether the clerk's acts were discretionary or ministerial but merely recognized that the plaintiff was asserting that the duties were ministerial. Hicks v. McGee, 289 Ga. 573, 713 S.E.2d 841 (2011).

Applicability. — "Law of the case" rule applies when the same parties and issues are involved and the evidentiary posture of the case remains the same. Bruce v. Garges, 259 Ga. 268, 379 S.E.2d 783 (1989); Dacosta v. Allstate Ins. Co., 199 Ga. App. 292, 404 S.E.2d 627, cert. denied, 199 Ga. App. 905, 404 S.E.2d 627 (1991).

Law of the case is the controlling legal rule established by a previous decision between the same parties in the same case. However, the principle only establishes the law of the case in its then existing evidentiary posture. Lee v. DOT, 198 Ga. App. 716, 402 S.E.2d 551 (1991).

Ruling that in a first trial the court did not err in refusing to direct a verdict or in refusing to grant judgment notwithstanding a mistrial became the law of the case was binding in all subsequent proceedings. Grindle v. Chastain, 229 Ga. App. 386, 493 S.E.2d 714 (1997).

Because the trial court denied the defendant's claim for return of property and the supreme court subsequently affirmed that denial, the latter ruling was binding and, because the defendant could show no change in the evidentiary posture of the case, the defendant was prohibited from relitigating the claim for return of the property. Day v. State, 242 Ga. App. 899, 531 S.E.2d 781 (2000).

Because the trial court had initially granted partial summary judgment to a landlord upholding the landlord's position that the tenant was not entitled to a credit for reconditioning expenses, but it reserved ruling on whether a writ of possession should be granted, and when the tenant appealed that judgment pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h) but the court dismissed that appeal for failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 44-7-56, the landlord's subsequent appeal from the final order granting a writ of possession to the landlord was dismissed to the extent that the landlord sought to relitigate the identical issues that the tenant attempted to litigate in the first appeal under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-56(h), and the prior appellate ruling was binding on the court under the law of the case rule, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h). Eckerd Corp. v. Alterman Real Estate, Ltd., 266 Ga. App. 860, 598 S.E.2d 510 (2004).

Testimony, in the defendant's second murder trial, given by two witnesses who had been jurors in the defendant's first murder trial, that the jurors heard the defendant make an admission of guilt while exiting the courtroom during the first trial, did not violate the law of the case rule, despite the fact that a footnote in a prior appellate opinion mentioned that the record indicated that the jury had exited the courtroom before the defendant made the statement; the footnote was not a “ruling” so as to have been binding in subsequent proceedings. Slakman v. State, 280 Ga. 837, 632 S.E.2d 378 (2006), cert. denied, 549 U.S. 1218, 127 S. Ct. 1273, 167 L. Ed. 2d 95 (2007).

Because the law of the case doctrine did not apply to issues not previously ruled upon below, enumerated as error on appeal, or discussed in a prior appellate decision, the trial court erred in denying summary judgment to a boat's charterer, and partial summary judgment to both the charterer and the boat's owner, in an action arising out of injuries sustained by a longshoreman while on board a cargo ship as the law of the case rule did not preclude consideration of the charterer's status and the issue of whether both were liable under the International Safety Management Code as such were not previously addressed by the trial court. Eastern Car Liner, Ltd. v. Kyles, 280 Ga. App. 362, 634 S.E.2d 129 (2006).

In a dispute between adjoining landowners over title to approximately six acres of land, the Supreme Court of Georgia's prior finding that the deeds relied upon by the appellant neighbors to convey the property to a third party were insufficient as a matter of law, was binding as the law of the case under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h), and no amount of new evidence could change the court's holding that the deeds bore an insufficient description of the property to be conveyed as such was a question of law unaffected by circumstances extrinsic to the deeds themselves. Pirkle v. Turner, 281 Ga. 846, 642 S.E.2d 849 (2007).

Because the trial court, in a prior injunction proceeding, rejected a landowner's claim to a prescriptive right to maintain a garage encroachment by virtue of having received permission to build the garage and having erected the garage three years prior to the lawsuit, the claim was barred in a later proceeding as the law of the case; moreover, the landowner was prohibited from changing the evidentiary posture of the case merely by changing testimony as to when the garage was built after summary judgment was already granted on the issue. Daiss v. Bennett, 286 Ga. App. 108, 648 S.E.2d 462 (2007).

Law of the case rule of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h) did not prevent a court from deciding the issue of a county's entitlement to sovereign immunity because in an earlier appellate decision the court had not considered the issue of sovereign immunity. DeKalb State Court Prob. Dep't v. Currid, 287 Ga. App. 649, 653 S.E.2d 90 (2007), aff'd, Currid v. DeKalb State Court Prob. Dep't, 285 Ga. 184, 674 S.E.2d 894 (2009).

Former employer did not expand the evidentiary record in the trial court by submitting an affidavit in support of a second motion to set aside a default judgment after the appellate court entered an order denying the employer's application for discretionary appeal from the denial of a first motion but instead submitted the affidavit one month prior to the appellate court's denial; thus, the law of the case rule under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h) applied and the trial court improperly granted the second motion. Guthrie v. Wickes, 295 Ga. App. 892, 673 S.E.2d 523 (2009).

Because the appellate court, in a wrongful death action against a county, did not directly address whether the Community Service Act, O.C.G.A. § 42-8-70 et seq., waived sovereign immunity but instead focused on the issue of gross negligence on a prior appeal, the law of the case rule of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(h) could not be expanded to encompass an implied ruling on an implied finding of a waiver of sovereign immunity. Currid v. DeKalb State Court Prob. Dep't, 285 Ga. 184, 674 S.E.2d 894 (2009).

Denial of practice groups' motion to dismiss the parents' medical malpractice action based on the parents' failure to comply with the expert affidavit requirement of former O.C.G.A. § 9-11-9.1 was error because a prior appellate decision concluded that, at the time the litigation was brought, the question of whether a plaintiff was subject to the expert affidavit requirement depended not on the identity of the defendant, but on the cause of action, and explicitly held that, without an expert affidavit, the parents could have sustained only an ordinary negligence claim; the trial court's ruling, which held that because the practice groups were not licensed professionals or licensed health care facilities, no expert affidavit was needed, violated the law of the case. The parents could not have successfully argued on the appeal that the parents' malpractice claims were exempt from the expert affidavit requirement. Atlanta Women's Health Group, P.C. v. Clemons, 299 Ga. App. 102, 681 S.E.2d 754 (2009).

Standing orders with regard to subsequent proceedings. — Subsection (h) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 has abolished the law of the case, but does not accommodate the view that a standing order can be ignored with regard to subsequent proceedings. If the order has been ratified by an appellate court, it must be treated with due deference. However, if the order is merely interlocutory in character, it remains within the breast of the trial court even after the expiration of the term. Barber v. Collins, 201 Ga. App. 104, 410 S.E.2d 444 (1991).

Statement constituting obiter dictum not binding. — Statement of an appellate court on a motion for rehearing that was not a binding holding of the court and was obiter dictum as it was not necessary to the decision, was not binding on the lower courts as the law of the case. Browning v. Europa Hair, Inc., 145 Ga. App. 361, 243 S.E.2d 742 (1978).

Affirmance without opinion. — Although the Supreme Court of Georgia's affirmance without opinion of a trial court decision had no precedential value, it still established the law of the case. Moreton Rolleston, Jr., Living Trust v. Kennedy, 277 Ga. 541, 591 S.E.2d 834, cert. denied, 541 U.S. 1042, 124 S. Ct. 2168, 158 L. Ed. 2d 732 (2004).

Finality of reversal by appellate court. — If a trial court, after hearing a motion to set aside a prior order in a pending case, vacates the judgment complained of and on appeal the trial court's decision is reversed without direction, the judgment of the appellate court is final; upon the filing of the remittitur in the trial court, the issue is res judicata, and the lower court has no authority to allow the movant to amend the movant's motion, nor hear further evidence or consider any other matter that would otherwise affect the finality of the judgment of the appellate court. Shepherd v. Shepherd, 243 Ga. 253, 253 S.E.2d 696 (1979).

Finality of affirmance of summary judgment. — Because the trial court had previously granted summary judgment on a conversion claim, and that summary judgment was affirmed on appeal, the decision on appeal was binding and the plaintiff could not replead the claim. Faircloth v. A.L. Williams & Assocs., 219 Ga. App. 560, 465 S.E.2d 722 (1995).

Not sole remedy in conversion action. — In a conversion action brought by a vehicle owner against the owner of a towing company, there was no merit to the towing company owner's argument that O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60(d) was the exclusive vehicle by which the vehicle owner, who was not a party to the foreclosure proceedings involving the vehicle, was entitled to seek relief. Thus, the trial court did not lack jurisdiction to consider the conversion action. Horner v. Robinson, 299 Ga. App. 327, 682 S.E.2d 578 (2009).

Law of the case established by Court of Appeals. — Superior court should follow the law of the case as established by the Court of Appeals in conducting the jury trial. Westinghouse Elec. Corp. v. Rider, 168 Ga. App. 136, 308 S.E.2d 378 (1983).

Absent a change in the evidentiary posture, the rulings of the Court of Appeals are binding on the trial court in all subsequent proceedings in the case and may not be disregarded. Eastgate Assocs. v. Piggly Wiggly S., Inc., 200 Ga. App. 872, 410 S.E.2d 129, cert. denied, 200 Ga. App. 896, 410 S.E.2d 129 (1991).

If the Court of Appeals holds that the appellant's allegations are either without merit or not applicable to the circumstances in the case, this becomes the law of the case. Blake v. Continental S.E. Lines, 168 Ga. App. 718, 309 S.E.2d 829 (1983).

Direction of the Court of Appeals upon remand of a forfeiture proceeding requiring the trial court to determine whether the forfeiture violated the constitutional prohibition against excessive fines was mandatory and the trial court had no discretion to refuse to comply with the direction. Rabern v. State, 231 Ga. App. 84, 497 S.E.2d 631 (1998).

Relitigation of sanctions following remand. — Because the issue of a nonnoticing defendant's entitlement to sanctions for the plaintiffs' failure to appear for depositions was at least incidentally involved in the case and served as the basis for ordering a remand, rather than outright reversal, statements by the Court of Appeals on that issue were not dicta, but the law of the case. South Ga. Medical Ctr. v. Washington, 269 Ga. 366, 497 S.E.2d 793 (1998).

Trial court properly ruled that an attempt to relitigate sanctionability of the conduct was beyond the scope of the remand directive and thus barred by the law of the case rule. Harkleroad v. Stringer, 231 Ga. App. 464, 499 S.E.2d 379 (1998).

Transfer to Court of Appeals conclusive as to existence of constitutional questions. — Transfer by the Supreme Court to the Court of Appeals of a case that questions the constitutionality of a statute is a final determination that no constitutional question was in fact properly raised or, if so raised, that it was not meritorious. Egerton v. Jolly, 133 Ga. App. 805, 212 S.E.2d 462 (1975).

Holding on validity of ordinance. — If the validity of a city ordinance is challenged and on review by the Supreme Court of a judgment on demurrer the court holds that the ordinance is valid, the law of the case is thus fixed, and amended pleadings thereafter cannot again raise that question. Medlock v. Allison, 224 Ga. 648, 164 S.E.2d 112 (1968).

Holding that no verdict demanded by evidence. — Because the Court of Appeals, in considering a motion for new trial after the first trial of a case, held that the evidence did not demand a verdict for either party, such ruling was the law of the case. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. v. Johnson, 120 Ga. App. 395, 170 S.E.2d 869 (1969).

Prior erroneous reason for dismissal cannot be treated as binding under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60 pursuant to the law of the case rule. Davis v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 143 Ga. App. 782, 240 S.E.2d 191 (1977).

Effect of expansion of evidentiary record. — Defendant's submission of affidavits after a denial of summary judgment was affirmed served to expand the evidentiary record; thus, consideration as to whether the new evidence demanded summary judgment for the defendant was required. Brown v. Piggly Wiggly S., Inc., 228 Ga. App. 629, 493 S.E.2d 196 (1997).

Change in evidentiary posture of case. — Father could collaterally attack the validity of an order that modified custody as a defense to the wife's contempt motion since the evidentiary posture of the case has changed in view of subsequent rulings by the Alabama courts demonstrating that Alabama had retained jurisdiction over the custody of the child at issue. Henderson v. Justice, 237 Ga. App. 284, 514 S.E.2d 713 (1999).

Inapplicability to issues not earlier decided. — Law of the case rule is in no way dispositive of or even applicable to an issue that was not addressed in the earlier decision. Modern Roofing & Metal Works, Inc. v. Owen, 174 Ga. App. 875, 332 S.E.2d 14 (1985); Parks v. State Farm Gen. Ins. Co., 238 Ga. App. 814, 520 S.E.2d 494 (1999).

Res judicata. — Because the state relied upon a former judgment which fully adjudicated the issue made by the appellants and that judgment had neither been reversed nor modified by any exception that the appellants had taken to it, such unreversed and unmodified judgment was res judicata as between the same two parties and thus was the law of the case. Camp v. State, 181 Ga. App. 714, 353 S.E.2d 832 (1987).

Trial court erred in granting a limited liability company summary judgment in the company's ejectment action against a property owner on the ground of res judicata under O.C.G.A. § 9-12-40 because there remained a question of fact regarding whether the owner was a party to the prior action; the owner asserted and presented affidavit evidence supporting the claim that the trial court in the quiet title action lacked personal jurisdiction over the owner, thus creating a genuine issue of material fact regarding whether the owner was a party to the earlier litigation. James v. Intown Ventures, LLC, 290 Ga. 813, 725 S.E.2d 213 (2012).

If a grant of partial summary judgment is not made final under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-54(b), the party against whom summary judgment was granted has the option to either appeal or not appeal at that time, and if the party chooses to appeal, then the appellate decision on the summary judgment ruling is binding under subsection (h) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-60. Roth v. Gulf Atl. Media of Ga., Inc., 244 Ga. App. 677, 536 S.E.2d 577 (2000).

Appellant's allegations without merit or inapplicable. — If the Court of Appeals holds that the appellant's allegations are either without merit or not applicable to the circumstances in the case, this becomes the law of the case. Blake v. Continental S.E. Lines, 168 Ga. App. 718, 309 S.E.2d 829 (1983).

9-11-61. Harmless error.

No error in either the admission or the exclusion of evidence and no error or defect in any ruling or order or in anything done or omitted by the court or by any of the parties is ground for granting a new trial or for setting aside a verdict or for vacating, modifying, or otherwise disturbing a judgment or order, unless refusal to take such action appears to the court inconsistent with substantial justice. The court at every stage of the proceeding must disregard any error or defect in the proceeding which does not affect the substantial rights of the parties. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 61.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Error is presumed hurtful unless the error appears to have had no effect upon the result of the trial. Foster v. Harmon, 145 Ga. App. 413, 243 S.E.2d 659 (1978).

Reversible error consists of error plus injury or harm. Durham v. State, 129 Ga. App. 5, 198 S.E.2d 387 (1973).

One who seeks reversal of verdict and judgment must show harm as well as error. Maloy v. Dixon, 127 Ga. App. 151, 193 S.E.2d 19 (1972).

Injury as well as error must be shown before new trial is granted. City Dodge, Inc. v. Gardner, 130 Ga. App. 502, 203 S.E.2d 729 (1973), aff'd, 232 Ga. 766, 208 S.E.2d 794 (1974).

To obtain a new trial, party must show injury as well as error. Bennett v. Haley, 132 Ga. App. 512, 208 S.E.2d 302 (1974).

An appellant must show harm as well as error to require reversal of the trial court's judgment. Ideal Pool Corp. v. Champion, 157 Ga. App. 380, 277 S.E.2d 753 (1981).

Harm, as well as error, required for showing. — Parent alleged the trial court erred in denying the parent a copy of the transcript of the hearing on the petition for termination of parental rights for use at a new trial hearing. Under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-61, the parent was required not only to show error, but harm as well, and no such showing was made. In re D. R., 298 Ga. App. 774, 681 S.E.2d 218 (2009), overruled on other grounds, In re A.C., 285 Ga. 829, 686 S.E.2d 635 (2009).

Grant of new trial is appropriate when refusal would be inconsistent with substantial justice. Warren v. Mann, 117 Ga. App. 787, 161 S.E.2d 894 (1968).

Admission of irrelevant evidence not reversible error unless prejudicial. — Admission of irrelevant evidence is not a ground for reversal unless the appellant can show the evidence was prejudicial to the appellant. Southwest Ga. Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Wainwright, 241 Ga. 355, 245 S.E.2d 306 (1978); Drew v. Collins, 153 Ga. App. 794, 266 S.E.2d 570 (1980).

Evidence harmless when legitimately before the jury. — Appellate courts will not grant a new trial or reverse a case for error unless it is shown that the error is harmful; evidence is harmless when evidence of the same fact has been admitted and is legitimately before the jury. Platt v. National Gen. Ins. Co., 205 Ga. App. 705, 423 S.E.2d 387, cert. denied, 205 Ga. App. 900, 423 S.E.2d 283 (1992).

Exclusion of evidence is harmful when the exclusion affects a substantial right of a party to establish the party's case with apparent, competent, and relevant evidence. Newman v. Travelers Ins. Co., 143 Ga. App. 757, 240 S.E.2d 139 (1977).

Exclusion of substantially similar evidence harmless. — In a product liability case, as pertinent testimony of plaintiff's expert conveyed substantially the same information to the jury (concerning a warning symbol placed on the defendant's product) as contained in the relevant portions of the defendant's requested exhibit, any error in failing to admit the exhibit was harmless. Continental Research Corp. v. Reeves, 204 Ga. App. 120, 419 S.E.2d 48 (1992).

Exclusion of damage evidence harmless when jury verdict is against recovery. — Error in exclusion of evidence that pertains only to damages is harmless when the jury determines that the complainant is not entitled to recover. Reliford v. Central of Ga. R.R., 140 Ga. App. 782, 232 S.E.2d 129 (1976).

Errors when verdict rendered as demanded. — Errors in court's instructions or in admission or exclusion of evidence will not be considered when the verdict was rendered as demanded. Gaddis v. Georgia S. & Fla. Ry., 145 Ga. App. 826, 245 S.E.2d 8 (1978).

Ex parte communication not harmless error. — In a medical malpractice case, the plaintiffs were entitled to a new trial because the communication between the court and the jury was not disclosed to the plaintiffs or the plaintiffs' counsel until after the verdict, the note and response were not made a part of the record, recollections differed as to the nature and timing of the communication, and it was impossible for the appellate court to determine if a defense verdict would have been demanded regardless of the effect of the communication on the jury. Phillips v. Harmon, 328 Ga. App. 686, 760 S.E.2d 235 (2014).

Jury charge creating conclusive presumption. — Even if the jury charge creates a conclusive presumption, the error is harmless when intent is not at issue at the trial or when evidence of intent is overwhelming. Hill v. Zant, 638 F. Supp. 969 (M.D. Ga. 1986), aff'd, 833 F.2d 927 (11th Cir. 1987).

Judge's characterization admitted in error but error harmless. — Even though it was error to allow a federal judge's characterization of a principal's transactions as a sham into evidence in a breach of an employment contract suit, such error was harmless. Ins. Indus. Consultants, LLC v. Alford, 294 Ga. App. 747, 669 S.E.2d 724 (2008), cert. denied, No. S09C0465, 2009 Ga. LEXIS 200 (Ga. 2009).

Burden is on the appellant to establish the trial court's error; moreover, error which is harmless will not be cause for reversal. Miller Grading Contractors v. Georgia Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n, 247 Ga. 730, 279 S.E.2d 442 (1981).

Objecting party failed to carry burden of proving that admission of evidence unduly prejudiced rights. See DOT v. 2.734 Acres of Land, 168 Ga. App. 541, 309 S.E.2d 816 (1983).

People's right to litigate with governmental bodies should not be decided on technicalities any more than one citizen's right to litigate with another citizen. City of Atlanta v. International Soc'y for Krishna Consciousness of Atlanta, Inc., 240 Ga. 96, 239 S.E.2d 515 (1977).

When the appellant has failed to comply with Uniform Superior Court Rule 6.5, but the error of procedure was harmless, in that the error did not affect the substantial rights of the plaintiff, the severe sanction of striking the affidavits was not mandated. O'Quinn v. Southeast Radio Corp., 190 Ga. App. 608, 380 S.E.2d 487 (1989), overruled on other grounds, Okekpe v. Commerce Funding Corp., 218 Ga. App. 705, 463 S.E.2d 23 (1995).

Error not harmless. — In a medical malpractice case, the trial court committed reversible error by finding that the patient waived a hearsay objection as to a defense pathologist's deposition testimony because the patient had the right to object to the testimony at trial and the testimony was inadmissible hearsay entitling the patient to a new trial since it was not harmless error in that the evidence was critical in the case because the evidence directly addressed the core disputed issue of whether the clinic's neurosurgeon left an excessive amount of cotton in the patient's brain. Thomas v. Emory Clinic,

9-11-62. Stay of proceedings to enforce a judgment.

(a) Stay upon entry of judgment. No execution shall issue upon a judgment nor shall proceedings be taken for its enforcement until the expiration of ten days after its entry, except that, in the case of a default judgment, execution may issue and enforcement proceedings may be taken at any time after entry of judgment and except that, in any case in which both the plaintiff or plaintiffs and the defendant or defendants agree, in writing, and file a copy of such agreement with the clerk of the court, execution may issue and enforcement proceedings may be taken at any time after entry of judgment. Unless otherwise ordered by the court, an interlocutory or final judgment in an action for an injunction or in a receivership action shall not be stayed during the period after its entry and until an appeal is taken or during the pendency of an appeal. Subsection (c) of this Code section governs the suspending, modifying, restoring, or granting of an injunction during the pendency of an appeal.

(b) Stay on motion for new trial or for judgment. The filing of a motion for a new trial or motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict shall act as supersedeas unless otherwise ordered by the court; but the court may condition supersedeas upon the giving of bond with good security in such amounts as the court may order.

(c) Injunction pending appeal. When an appeal is taken from an interlocutory or final judgment granting, dissolving, or denying an injunction, the court in its discretion may suspend, modify, restore, or grant an injunction during the pendency of the appeal upon such terms as to bond or otherwise as it considers proper for the security of the rights of the adverse party.

(d) Stay in favor of the state or agency thereof. When an appeal is taken by the state or by any county, city, or town within the state, or an officer or agency thereof, and the operation or enforcement of the judgment is stayed, no bond, obligation, or other security shall be required from the appellant.

(e) Power of appellate court not limited. The provisions in this Code section do not limit any power of an appellate court or of a judge or justice thereof to stay proceedings during the pendency of an appeal or to suspend, modify, restore, or grant an injunction during the pendency of an appeal or to make any order appropriate to preserve that status quo or the effectiveness of the judgment subsequently to be entered.

(f) Stay of judgment as to multiple claims or multiple parties. When a court has ordered a final judgment under the conditions stated in subsection (b) of Code Section 9-11-54, the court may stay enforcement of that judgment until the entering of a subsequent judgment or judgments and may prescribe such conditions as are necessary to secure the benefit thereof to the party in whose favor the judgment is entered. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 62; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 28; Ga. L. 1970, p. 550, § 1; Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, § 9; Ga. L. 1973, p. 693, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Judgments effective upon entry. — Absent supersedeas, judgments are effective and therefore payable upon entry, even though execution thereon may be delayed ten days. Leventhal v. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank, 249 Ga. 390, 291 S.E.2d 222 (1982).

Clear mandate of subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-62 is to provide the party against whom a judgment has been entered the right to be free from execution and from proceedings for enforcement of the judgment for a period of ten days in order to determine the party's future course of action. Bank S. v. Roswell Jeep Eagle, Inc., 200 Ga. App. 489, 408 S.E.2d 503 (1991).

Trial court's issuance of a writ of fieri facias at the time of the entry of the court's judgment against a law client violated O.C.G.A. § 9-11-62(a) as the judgment deprived the client of the client's right to be free from execution of the judgment for ten days in order to determine the client's future course of conduct; however, the trial court thereafter ordered that the client could post a cash bond, which rendered the issuance of the writ harmless. Landau v. Davis Law Group, P.C., 269 Ga. App. 904, 605 S.E.2d 461 (2004).

Exemption of injunction cases from automatic supersedeas. — It was the intention of the legislature in enacting Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 62 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-62) to exempt injunction cases from the automatic supersedeas provisions of former Code 1933, § 6-1002 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-46). Howard v. Smith, 226 Ga. 850, 178 S.E.2d 159 (1970); Davis v. Creative Land Dev. Corp., 230 Ga. 47, 195 S.E.2d 411 (1973).

Trial court had authority to hold a property owner in contempt for failure to comply with a court order that imposed a permanent restraining order in favor of the owner's neighbors, even though the order was on appeal, as there was no order by the court that stayed the judgment pending appeal, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-62(a), which was an exception to the automatic supersedeas provisions of O.C.G.A. § 5-6-46. Knapp v. Cross, 279 Ga. App. 632, 632 S.E.2d 157 (2006).

Because a property owner complied with an injunction without first obtaining a grant of supersedeas, the owner's appeal from the judgment granting the injunction was dismissed as moot, pursuant to a rule of equitable jurisprudence and appellate procedure as well as O.C.G.A. § 9-11-62(a). Babb v. Putnam County, 269 Ga. App. 431, 605 S.E.2d 33 (2004).

Exemption of receivership case from automatic supersedeas. — In an action to dissolve a corporation, the filing of a notice of appeal from an order providing for either a forced sale or redesignation of a custodian as a receiver did not divest the trial court of jurisdiction to enter a final order converting the custodianship into a receivership since the final order merely implemented the earlier determination. Black v. Graham, 266 Ga. 154, 464 S.E.2d 814 (1996).

Exemption of administrative decisions from automatic supersedeas. — In an action in which the school district appealed an administrative law judge's (ALJ) decision in favor of the parents that awarded $14,875 to the parents for reimbursement of the cost of private education services provided to the child and paid for by the child's parents, enforcement of that provision of the ALJ's final decision was stayed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(f) because in Georgia, the school district was a county agency, under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-62(d), the district would be entitled to a stay without having to post a bond. Dekalb County Sch. Dist. v. J.W.M., 445 F. Supp. 2d 1371 (N.D. Ga. 2006).

Good cause for a supersedeas bond was financial difficulties. Leventhal v. Seiter, 208 Ga. App. 158, 430 S.E.2d 378 (1993).

Trial court is empowered to suspend or modify an injunction after appeal is taken therefrom by requiring a bond of plaintiff or otherwise so as to insure the security of the rights of the adverse party. Stephens v. Geise, 226 Ga. 639, 176 S.E.2d 923 (1970).

Under subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-62, the trial court was authorized to modify an earlier order to protect the rights of the parties notwithstanding a pending appeal. Etheredge v. All Am. Hummer Limousines, Inc., 269 Ga. 436, 498 S.E.2d 60 (1998).

Burden rests upon appellant to obtain such order as will protect the appellant's rights and preserve the status quo during the pendency of the appeal. Howard v. Smith, 226 Ga. 850, 178 S.E.2d 159 (1970); Davis v. Creative Land Dev. Corp., 230 Ga. 47, 195 S.E.2d 411 (1973).

To stop an action that has been ordered by trial court, supersedeas must be obtained from the trial court or from an appellate court in the event the trial court refuses to grant a supersedeas. Padgett v. Cowart, 232 Ga. 633, 208 S.E.2d 455 (1974).

Failure to file supersedeas or notice of appeal. — Subsection (a) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-62, by negative implication, clearly allows an execution to issue upon a judgment after the ten-day period has run, if a notice of appeal or post-trial motion acting as a supersedeas has not been filed. Bank S. v. Roswell Jeep Eagle, Inc., 200 Ga. App. 489, 408 S.E.2d 503 (1991).

Once ordered action is done appeal becomes moot. — Without supersedeas, an action ordered by the trial court must be done as ordered, and once the ordered action is taken, the complaint about its being erroneously ordered becomes moot. Padgett v. Cowart, 232 Ga. 633, 208 S.E.2d 455 (1974); Jackson v. Bibb County Sch. Dist., 271 Ga. 18, 515 S.E.2d 151 (1999); Peters v. State, 237 Ga. App. 625, 516 S.E.2d 331 (1999).

To prevent appeal of an order requiring action which may affect the rights of litigants from becoming moot, it is necessary for the appealing party to obtain a supersedeas; if supersedeas is not obtained, and the ordered action takes place as ordered, the appeal becomes moot. Padgett v. Cowart, 232 Ga. 633, 208 S.E.2d 455 (1974); Jackson v. Bibb County Sch. Dist., 271 Ga. 18, 515 S.E.2d 151 (1999).

Vendor's appeal from a one-year disqualification period from the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) was moot because the one-year period had expired by the time the appeal was heard; the vendor had not sought a stay or an injunction preventing the disqualification from taking place pending the appeal, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-62. Babies Right Start v. Ga. Dep't of Pub. Health, 293 Ga. 553, 748 S.E.2d 404 (2013).

Appeals not to amount to independent establishment of injunction. — No appeal from denial of an injunction should have the effect of establishing an injunction independently of an order of the court entered pursuant to subsection (c) of this section. Howard v. Smith, 226 Ga. 850, 178 S.E.2d 159 (1970); Davis v. Creative Land Dev. Corp., 230 Ga. 47, 195 S.E.2d 411 (1973).

Mere appeal from an order denying an injunction, without further application for an interim order of supersedeas, does not impose any judicial restraint upon appellees' activities nor prohibit execution of the matter sought to be enjoined. Clarke v. City of Atlanta, 231 Ga. 84, 200 S.E.2d 264 (1973).

When judgment is entered declining to enjoin consummation of a future transaction, there is no legal impediment to prohibit the transaction from thereafter being effected; to erect such an impediment it is necessary for the losing party in the trial court to apply to such court for an injunction during the pendency of the appeal, and if the trial court denies such injunction, the losing party may then apply to the Supreme Court therefor. Citizens to Save Paulding County v. City of Atlanta, 236 Ga. 125, 223 S.E.2d 101 (1976).

Appeal from denial of injunction moot once act is done. — When injunctive relief is denied at the trial level, and pending appeal such relief is not allowed by either the trial court or the Supreme Court, there is no legal prohibition against consummation of the act or transaction in question, and once such act or transaction has been consummated, appeal from the judgment that denied injunctive relief becomes moot. Citizens to Save Paulding County v. City of Atlanta, 236 Ga. 125, 223 S.E.2d 101 (1976).

Appeals from restraining orders. — In action to enjoin holding of corporate stockholders meeting for the purpose of electing directors, when the trial court, after hearing, dissolves a restraining order and dismisses the complaint for failure to state a claim, and the stockholder's meeting is then held, an appeal of the order dissolving the restraining order and dismissing the complaint must be dismissed pursuant to Ga. L. 1972, p. 624, § 1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 5-6-48).

Strickland v. Adams, 231 Ga. 729, 204 S.E.2d 294 (1974).

Trial court has no authority to require county to post a supersedeas bond. Guhl v. Tuggle, 242 Ga. 412, 249 S.E.2d 219 (1978).

Indigency does not avoid bond requirement. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-62 contains no provision for avoiding bond by filing an indigency affidavit. Byelick v. Michel Herbelin U.S.A., Inc., 260 Ga. App. 111, 578 S.E.2d 907 (2003).

Dismissal of prematurely instituted garnishment action. — Ordering that funds be paid into court and merely suspending the funds' disbursal until such time as the judgment becomes final or until a supersedeas bond is posted is clearly not harmless when the proper action was dismissal of a prematurely instituted garnishment action. Tate v. Burns, 172 Ga. App. 688, 324 S.E.2d 485 (1984).

Exempting custody provisions for the supersedeas action. — Appellate court found no error in the trial court's inclusion in the court's grant of a husband's motion for supersedeas bond a provision excepting the custody provisions of the final decree from the supersedeas arising from the wife's filing of a motion for new trial. Frazier v. Frazier, 280 Ga. 687, 631 S.E.2d 666 (2006).

Motion for new trial did not act as supersedeas given court's order to abide by child support award. — Trial court did not err in holding a spouse in contempt for failing to pay the child support that accrued while the spouse's motion for new trial was pending; O.C.G.A. § 9-11-62(b) provided that filing a motion for new trial acted as a supersedeas unless otherwise ordered, and in this case, the trial court ordered the spouse to abide by the child support award. Franklin v. Franklin, 294 Ga. 204, 751 S.E.2d 411 (2013).

PROVISIONAL AND FINAL REMEDIES AND SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS

9-11-64. Reserved.

9-11-65. Injunctions and restraining orders.

(a) Interlocutory injunction.

(1) Notice. No interlocutory injunction shall be issued without notice to the adverse party.

(2) Consolidation of hearing with trial on merits. Before or after the commencement of the hearing of an application for an interlocutory injunction, the court may order the trial of the action on the merits to be advanced and consolidated with the hearing of the application. Even when this consolidation is not ordered, any evidence received upon an application for an interlocutory injunction which would be admissible upon the trial on the merits shall become a part of the record on the trial and need not be repeated upon the trial. This paragraph shall be construed and applied so as to save any rights of the parties which they may have to trial by jury.

(b) Temporary restraining order; when granted without notice; duration; hearing; application to dissolve or modify. A temporary restraining order may be granted without written or oral notice to the adverse party or his attorney only if:

(1) It clearly appears from specific facts shown by affidavit or by the verified complaint that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage will result to the applicant before the adverse party or his attorney can be heard in opposition; and

(2) The applicant's attorney certifies to the court, in writing, the efforts, if any, which have been made to give the notice and the reasons supporting the party's claim that notice should not be required.

Every temporary restraining order granted without notice shall be endorsed with the date and hour of issuance, shall be filed forthwith in the clerk's office and entered of record, and shall expire by its terms within such time after entry, not to exceed 30 days, as the court fixes, unless the party against whom the order is directed consents that it may be extended for a longer period. In case a temporary restraining order is granted without notice, the motion for an interlocutory injunction shall be set down for hearing at the earliest possible time and shall take precedence over all matters except older matters of the same character; when the motion comes on for hearing, the party who obtained the temporary restraining order shall proceed with the application for an interlocutory injunction; and, if he does not do so, the court shall dissolve the temporary restraining order. On two days' notice to the party who obtained the temporary restraining order without notice or on such shorter notice to that party as the court may prescribe, the adverse party may appear and move its dissolution or modification; and in that event the court shall proceed to hear and determine the motion as expeditiously as the ends of justice require.

(c) Security. As a prerequisite to the issuance of a restraining order or an interlocutory injunction, the court may require the giving of security by the applicant, in such sum as the court deems proper, for the payment of such costs and damages as may be incurred or suffered by any party who is found to have been enjoined or restrained wrongfully. A surety upon a bond or undertaking under this Code section submits himself to the jurisdiction of the court and irrevocably appoints the clerk of the court as his agent upon whom any papers affecting his liability on the bond or undertaking may be served. His liability may be enforced on motion without the necessity of an independent action. The motion and such notice of the motion as the court prescribes may be served on the clerk of the court, who shall forthwith mail copies to the persons giving the security if their addresses are known.

(d) Form and scope of injunction or restraining order. Every order granting an injunction and every restraining order shall be specific in terms; shall describe in reasonable detail, and not by reference to the complaint or other document, the act or acts sought to be restrained; and is binding only upon the parties to the action, their officers, agents, servants, employees, and attorneys, and upon those persons in active concert or participation with them who receive notice of the order by personal service or otherwise.

(e) When inapplicable. This Code section is not applicable to actions for divorce, alimony, separate maintenance, or custody of children. In such actions, the court may make prohibitive or mandatory orders, with or without notice or bond, and upon such terms and conditions as the court may deem just. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 65; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 31; Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 10, 11.)

TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDERS

FORM AND SCOPE OF INJUNCTIONS AND RESTRAINING ORDERS

General Consideration

Editor’s notes. — In light of the similarity of the statutory provisions, decisions under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55 are included in the annotations for this Code section.

This section deals with extraordinary relief which may be sought and granted during the interim between filing of a complaint and final adjudication of a case on the case’s merits. Times-Journal, Inc. v. Jonquil Broadcasting Co., 226 Ga. 673, 177 S.E.2d 64 (1970).

Power of trial court to protect rights of parties. — Trial judge whose ruling is sought to be reviewed is empowered to impose such terms and conditions as in the judge’s judgment are necessary to preserve and protect the rights of the parties until the Supreme Court can finally rule upon the question. Bankers Life & Cas. Co. v. Cravey, 209 Ga. 274, 71 S.E.2d 659 (1952) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55).

When judgment refusing an interlocutory injunction is brought to the Supreme Court for review, the trial judge is authorized to grant a supersedeas upon such terms as the trial judge deems necessary to preserve the rights of the parties until the judgment of the Supreme Court can be had; it is left, however, in the sound legal discretion of the judge to grant or refuse it. J.C. Lewis Motor Co. v. Mayor of Savannah, 210 Ga. 591, 82 S.E.2d 132 (1954) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55).

Failure of court to ensure preservation of status quo as error. — Trial judge, by issuing rule nisi and granting supersedeas without requiring bond or making other provision to preserve the status quo, effectively deprives the plaintiff who prevailed in the suit for an injunction of the fruits of the plaintiff’s victory and thereby commits error. Abney v. Harris, 208 Ga. 184, 65 S.E.2d 905 (1951) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55).

Issuance of injunctive relief without notice and hearing. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) absolutely prohibits issuance of an interlocutory injunction or temporary restraining order without service of notice and hearing thereon, except that a temporary restraining order may issue ex parte as provided in subsection (b) of this section. Paine v. Lowndes County Bd. of Tax Assessors, 124 Ga. App. 233, 183 S.E.2d 474 (1971), overruled on other grounds, Chancey v. Hancock, 233 Ga. 734, 213 S.E.2d 633 (1975).

Because a homeowner asked for a hearing on the permanent injunctive relief the homeowner was seeking, the homeowner would not be heard to argue a lack of notice that the hearing would be a final hearing on the merits of the injunction. Meacham v. Franklin-Heard County Water Auth., 302 Ga. App. 69, 690 S.E.2d 186 (2009), cert. denied, No. S10C0865, 2010 Ga. LEXIS 427 (Ga. 2010).

Although other parties had filed summary judgment motions regarding the disputed ownership of equipment, no one had raised the issue of injunctive relief before the hearing, and another party, who did not participate in the hearing, could not be bound by an interlocutory injunction issued against that party without notice under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65(a)(1). Abel & Sons Concrete, LLC v. Juhnke, 295 Ga. 150, 757 S.E.2d 869 (2014).

Responsibility to file responsive pleadings. — This section cannot be construed so that in actions seeking a permanent injunction the defendant is relieved of the responsibility of filing responsive pleadings. Times-Journal, Inc. v. Jonquil Broadcasting Co., 226 Ga. 673, 177 S.E.2d 64 (1970).

Entitlement of plaintiff to injunction when no defensive pleadings filed. — When no defensive pleadings are filed, the plaintiff seeking a permanent injunction is entitled to such injunction as a matter of law if the facts alleged authorize such relief. Times-Journal, Inc. v. Jonquil Broadcasting Co., 226 Ga. 673, 177 S.E.2d 64 (1970).

Right to recover actual damage resulting from a wrongful restraint is recognized by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65 by requiring the applicant to give security against such damages. Moody v. Harris, 170 Ga. App. 254, 316 S.E.2d 781 (1984).

Trial court granted the employee leave to amend the answer to include a claim for wrongful restraint, which remained pending below, and thus, the appellate court had to decide whether the restrictive covenant actually enforced against the employee was illegal; if the restrictive covenant was, then the employee's wrongful restraint claim was meritorious, and the employee could recover such costs and damages, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65(c), as the employee may have suffered during the period of the injunction's enforcement.

Therefore, the ex-employer's motion to dismiss the appeal as moot under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-48(b)(3) was denied. Cox v. Altus Healthcare & Hospice, Inc., 308 Ga. App. 28, 706 S.E.2d 660 (2011).

Insufficient evidence of damages resulting from wrongful order. — When the only evidence of actual damages resulting from a wrongful restraining order was testimony by the parties affected as to how much the parties lost without any basis upon which the jury could determine the extent of the losses suffered, such evidence was insufficient to support a damages award. Moody v. Harris, 170 Ga. App. 254, 316 S.E.2d 781 (1984).

Issuance of permanent injunction upheld despite failure to request such relief. — Issuance of permanent injunction preventing city officials from making any further charitable donations was upheld despite the fact that the resident did not request such relief as there was nothing improper in the prohibition of improper practice. Harris v. Gilmore, 265 Ga. App. 841, 595 S.E.2d 651 (2004).

Permanent injunction to preserve property owners association's covenants. — Trial court properly entered an injunction against a husband and wife requiring them, as homeowners and members of a neighborhood property owners association, to remove a chain link fence that was not allowed pursuant to the association's covenants and the association did not waive enforcement, nor did estoppel apply to grant the husband and wife an exception from the association's rules. Wright v. Piedmont Prop. Owners Ass'n, 288 Ga. App. 261, 653 S.E.2d 846 (2007).

Contempt adjudication for violation of restraining order not error. — After the trial court issued a restraining order which was personally served on the defendant and thereafter violated by the defendant, the court did not abuse the court's discretion in adjudging the defendant in contempt of court after the hearing, the defendant's only defense being that the court was without jurisdiction to grant the restraining order. Martin v. Harris, 216 Ga. 350, 116 S.E.2d 558 (1960).

Insureds could not be held in contempt for violating an invalid injunction. — Georgia insured, who had been specifically excluded from an Alabama class action, lacked standing to challenge the Alabama settlement, either in an individual capacity or a representative capacity; an injunction that was granted at the insured's request was invalid as the insured lacked a legal right to relief and the insurers could not be held in contempt for violating the injunction. Am. Med. Sec., Inc. v. Parker, 279 Ga. 201, 612 S.E.2d 261 (2005).

Dissolving temporary restraining order to allow bank foreclosure proceeding. — Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion by dissolving a temporary restraining order and allowing a bank to proceed with the bank's foreclosure action as it was within the trial court's discretion to condition the extension of injunctive relief upon the mortgagor's placement of an amount of money in escrow reflecting past-due payments on the mortgage, which the mortgagor declined to do. Morgan v. U. S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 322 Ga. App. 357, 745 S.E.2d 290 (2013).

Injunction sufficiently specific. — Injunction which stated that the defendants were not permitted to continue with the salary and position reductions at issue and were not allowed to interfere with the chief magistrate's ability to interview and hire personnel sufficiently described what was and was not permitted so as to allow for enforcement of the injunction. Pike County v. Callaway-Ingram, 292 Ga. 828, 742 S.E.2d 471 (2013).

Security bond requirement. — Trial court's decision under subsection (c) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65 to require the giving of a security bond is not a prerequisite to a wrongfully restrained party's right to recover damages. Hogan Mgmt. Servs., P.C. v. Martino, 242 Ga. App. 791, 530 S.E.2d 508 (2000), cert. denied, 531 U.S. 1075, 121 S. Ct. 770, 148 L. Ed. 2d 670 (2001).

Appellate review. — Trial court properly entered a temporary restraining order directing that the north entrance to a shopping center be opened instantaneously because a 2004 easement was clear and unambiguous and provided for full enjoyment of the easement of ingress and egress to the shopping center. Nat'l Hills

Interlocutory Injunctions1. In General

Possibility of failure on merits not determinative. — It is not the function of a preliminary injunction to decide a case on the merits, and the possibility that the party obtaining a preliminary injunction may not win on the merits at trial is not determinative of the propriety or validity of granting the preliminary injunction. Eastman Kodak Co. v. Fotomat Corp., 317 F. Supp. 304 (N.D. Ga. 1969), appeal dismissed, 441 F.2d 1079 (5th Cir. 1971).

Trial courts have the authority to convert an application for an interlocutory injunction into a motion for summary judgment. — Under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65(a)(2), when a trial court has given notice of a hearing on an interlocutory injunction, the court may determine the merits of the issues after the interlocutory hearing, but it may do so only if the parties have not objected or have acquiesced. RTS Landfill, Inc. v. Appalachian Waste Sys., LLC, 267 Ga. App. 56, 598 S.E.2d 798 (2004).

Notice to the adverse party is all that is required by paragraph (a)(1) of this section. Consortium Mgt. Co. v. Mutual Am. Corp., 246 Ga. 346, 271 S.E.2d 488 (1980).

There is no requirement of personal service prior to issuance of an interlocutory injunction. Consortium Mgt. Co. v. Mutual Am. Corp., 246 Ga. 346, 271 S.E.2d 488 (1980).

Order held valid. — When initial restraining order is void for want of notice, second order termed a continuance of the prior order, granted after notice and opportunity to be heard, is valid and has the effect of an interlocutory injunction under subsection (a) of this section. Finney v. Pan-Am. Fire & Cas. Co., 123 Ga. App. 250, 180 S.E.2d 253 (1971).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in granting an interlocutory injunction upon finding that a home builder was causing a private nuisance by allowing water to run-off from the builder's property, damaging the property of an adjoining property owner, since the builder was in default in the action and the property owner's pleadings established that the owner was entitled to the relief sought; the trial court could issue the court's order without giving the builder notice and an opportunity to be heard. Wallace v. Lewis, 253 Ga. App. 268, 558 S.E.2d 810 (2002).

Permanent injunction generally improper after interlocutory hearing. — General rule is that unless there is an order consolidating the trial on the merits with the hearing on the application for interlocutory injunction as provided in paragraph (a)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65, then the entry of permanent relief after an interlocutory hearing is improper. Gwinnett County v. Vaccaro, 259 Ga. 61, 376 S.E.2d 680 (1989).

Trial court's injunction ordering that former employee be enjoined perpetually from disclosing the trade secrets of a former employer was improper because a permanent injunction cannot issue following an interlocutory hearing, and the record established that the trial court did not enter an order consolidating the trial of the action on the merits with the hearing on the former employer's application for the interlocutory injunction. Ward v. Process Control Corp., 247 Ga. 583, 277 S.E.2d 671 (1981).

Limitations on preservation of jury trial. — Last sentence of paragraph (a)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65 preserves the right to a jury trial as to claims for damages when tried with an equity case. It does not create a right to trial by jury in permanent injunction hearings. This is consistent with the second sentence of paragraph (a)(2) of that section, because if there were a right to a jury trial in permanent injunction hearings, then the evidence received at the earlier hearing would have to be reintroduced and repeated. Cawthon v. Douglas County, 248 Ga. 760, 286 S.E.2d 30 (1982). See also 20/20 Vision Ctr., Inc. v. Hudgens, 256 Ga. 129, 345 S.E.2d 330 (1986).

Determination on merits. — When there is notice of an interlocutory injunction hearing, the court may determine the issues on their merits after the interlocutory hearing when there is no objection or when the parties have acquiesced. Georgia Kraft Co. v. Rhodes, 257 Ga. 469, 360 S.E.2d 595 (1987); Gwinnett County v. Vaccaro, 259 Ga. 61, 376 S.E.2d 680 (1989); Dortch v. Atlanta Journal, 261 Ga. 350, 405 S.E.2d 43 (1991); A & D Asphalt Co. v. Carroll & Carroll of Macon, Inc., 238 Ga. App. 829, 520 S.E.2d 499 (1999).

In the absence of a transcript of a hearing on a request for an interlocutory injunction, it would be assumed that, consistent with the court's order, the trial court timely exercised the court authority under paragraph (a)(2) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65 and that the court did so with the landowners' consent. Sapp v. Owens, 270 Ga. 36, 504 S.E.2d 665 (1998).

After a trial court held a hearing on the companies' requests for a temporary restraining order (TRO) and to compel arbitration regarding a former executive's decision to accept employment with a competitor, and the TRO hearings were not consolidated with a trial on the merits, nor did the companies acquiesce in any decision to issue a final ruling on the merits pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65(a)(2), there was no error in the trial court's determination that the covenant not to compete in the executive's employment agreement was not enforceable as the court was authorized to make such a determination in considering the likelihood of the companies' success on the merits. Once the covenant was found to be unenforceable on the covenant's face, the trial court was authorized to enter a definitive ruling as to the covenant's unenforceability. BellSouth Corp. v. Forsee, 265 Ga. App. 589, 595 S.E.2d 99 (2004).

Evidence at hearings on interlocutory injunctions. — In hearings on interlocutory injunctions, rules of evidence are not in all respects as rigidly enforced as on final trials, and admission of some secondary evidence, or admission of some hearsay or opinion evidence, will not necessarily require reversal. State Hwy. Bd. v. City of Baxley, 190 Ga. 292, 9 S.E.2d 266 (1940); Kniepkamp v. Richards, 192 Ga. 509, 16 S.E.2d 24 (1941) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55).

Treatment of fact issues on hearing of application for interlocutory injunction. — On the hearing of an application for an interlocutory injunction, the presiding judge should not undertake to finally adjudicate issues of fact, but should pass on such questions only so far as to determine whether the evidence authorizes the grant or refusal of the interlocutory relief. Kniepkamp v. Richards, 192 Ga. 509, 16 S.E.2d 24 (1941) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55).

In an action arising out of an alleged breach of a land sales contract, given that the trial court relied on findings of fact that had been resolved only in the context of the ruling on an interlocutory injunction filed by the buyer, and that issues of material fact plainly remained as to whether the seller fulfilled the contractual obligations to designate land adjacent to the buyer's property for use as a city or county road, the trial court's grant of summary judgment to the seller had to be reversed. Taylor v. Thomas, 286 Ga. App. 27, 648 S.E.2d 426 (2007).

Discretion of judge as to grant of interlocutory injunction. — When, in a suit for injunction, evidence introduced at an interlocutory hearing consisted only of an original petition and the defendant's answer, which considered together presented an issue of fact as to the truth of the allegations made by the plaintiff as a basis for the relief sought, the presiding judge was not bound to grant an interlocutory injunction, and the judge's judgment refusing the injunction would not be disturbed. Spivey v. Pope, 180 Ga. 609, 180 S.E. 118 (1935) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55).

Absent any findings that the status quo was endangered or in need of preservation, and because an interlocutory injunction did not in fact preserve the status quo but forced a dog kennel owner to cease operations, the trial court abused the court's discretion in granting relief to an adjacent neighbor of the business, especially since that business had been in operation for several years without complaint. Green v. Waddleton, 288 Ga. App. 369, 654 S.E.2d 204 (2007).

In hearings on an application for interlocutory injunctions when the evidence on material issues of fact is in conflict, grant or refusal of the application is within the discretion of the judge, and the exercise of the judge's discretion in granting or refusing the relief prayed for will not be controlled unless manifestly abused. Turner v. Trust Co., 214 Ga. 339, 105 S.E.2d 22 (1958) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55).

Trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in issuing an interlocutory injunction enjoining officers from disposing of any of the documents or assets of a corporation and continuing a receivership because the officers controlled the assets that were a subject of the litigation, raising the possibility that the assets could be dissipated before the litigation is resolved; although the officers made several vague arguments about the powers granted to the receiver, the officers failed to show that the trial court abused the court's discretion in granting those powers. Pittman v. State, 288 Ga. 589, 706 S.E.2d 398 (2011).

Appeal will lie to grant or refuse an interlocutory injunction. Walker v. Ful-Kalb, Inc., 181 Ga. 574, 183 S.E. 776 (1935); Moore v. Selman, 219 Ga. 865, 136 S.E.2d 329 (1964) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55).

Appeal will lie to grant or refuse an interlocutory injunction, and to any judgment which would have constituted a final determination of the cause. Hagans v. Excelsior Elec. Membership Corp., 207 Ga. 53, 60 S.E.2d 162 (1950) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55).

When, after interlocutory hearing, a trial judge passes an order continuing in effect a previous restraining order until further order of the court, such order is in effect the granting of an interlocutory injunction and may be appealed directly. Moore v. Selman, 219 Ga. 865, 136 S.E.2d 329 (1964) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55).

Appeal from dissolution of temporary injunction after notice and hearing. — Appeal will lie from the order of the trial court, rendered after notice and hearing, dissolving a temporary injunction previously granted by the court, after notice and hearing. Moore v. Selman, 219 Ga. 865, 136 S.E.2d 329 (1964) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55).

Order held erroneous for lack of notice and hearing. — Order in a pending suit making additional parties defendant and granting an interlocutory injunction as to the parties, without any notice, rule nisi, or hearing, is erroneous. Fitzpatrick v. Bloodworth, 205 Ga. 366, 53 S.E.2d 917 (1949) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55).

Trial court erred in broadly and permanently enjoining two partners, who had been accused of wrongfully dissolving the partnership, from taking certain business actions on behalf of the partnership because the trial court failed to provide notice that the court was considering an award of preliminary and permanent injunctive relief prior to the hearing. Petrakopoulos v. Vranas, 325 Ga. App. 332, 750 S.E.2d 779 (2013).

Manifest abuse of trial court's discretion found. — In a cause of action involving a dispute between joint venturers, the trial court manifestly abused the court's discretion in granting a temporary injunction which prohibited the plaintiff from engaging in any act which would have the effect of contesting the voting rights of investors in plaintiff's member entities, when those investors wanted to use the votes to gain control of the plaintiff and dismiss the lawsuit. The injunction did not maintain the status quo and failed to balance the equities of the parties properly. Hampton Island Founders v. Liberty Capital, 283 Ga. 289, 658 S.E.2d 619 (2008).

Order denying interlocutory injunction held erroneous. — In a suit brought by a property owner seeking to specifically perform an oral agreement to purchase a strip of real estate, the trial court properly denied the property owner's request for an interlocutory judgment based on a violation of the statute of frauds and because another held a first right of refusal over the sale/purchase of the property. However, the trial court erred by concluding that the property owner had not obtained a parol license to use the strip since the property owner had made expenditures to improve the land and, as to the right of first refusal held by another, the grant of a parol license was not the equivalent to a sale of the property to have in anyway interfered with that right. Meinhardt v. Christianson, 289 Ga. App. 238, 656 S.E.2d 568 (2008).

2. Consolidation

Paragraph (a)(2) of this section authorizes court to make prohibitive or mandatory orders in the court's discretion, and gives the court discretion, for example, to postpone a contempt action pending a separate determination on the merits of the matter involved in the defendant's plea in abatement. Crosby v. Greene, 237 Ga. 56, 226 S.E.2d 739 (1976).

Consolidated hearing necessary for final determination of issues. — Trial court can grant an interlocutory injunction to preserve the status quo, but cannot make a final determination of the issues at an interlocutory hearing unless there is a consolidated hearing as authorized by paragraph (a)(2) of this section. Miller v. Wells, 235 Ga. 411, 219 S.E.2d 751 (1975), overruled on other grounds, Wheatley Grading Contractors v. DFT Invs., Inc., 244 Ga. 663, 261 S.E.2d 614 (1979).

Grant or denial of an interlocutory injunction, as well as the affirmance thereof by the appellate court without opinion, does not establish the law of the case for a trial on the merits. Sneakers of Cobb County v. Cobb County, 265 Ga. 410, 455 S.E.2d 834 (1995).

Consolidation not required. — Paragraph (a)(2) of this section permits, but does not require, consolidation of a trial on the merits with hearing on the application for interlocutory injunction. Kirk v. Hasty, 239 Ga. 362, 236 S.E.2d 667 (1977).

Consolidation not permitted when party objects. — Trial court is not permitted to consolidate a hearing on an injunction with a hearing on the merits over the objection of one of the parties. Brevard Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Ford Mt., Inc., 261 Ga. 619, 409 S.E.2d 36 (1991); Fontaine Condominium Ass'n v. Schnacke, 230 Ga. App. 469, 496 S.E.2d 553 (1998).

In an action by a city to, inter alia, compel a county tax commissioner to pay school tax receipts, a trial court erred in converting a hearing on an interlocutory injunction into a final hearing on a permanent injunction and a writ of mandamus without the proper notice under O.C.G.A. § 9-6-27(a); the commissioner was only given two days' notice and also did not consent to having any mandamus issue heard by the trial court without a jury under § 9-6-27(c) or to having the request for permanent injunctive relief under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65(a)(2) heard at the same time. Ferdinand v. City of Atlanta, 285 Ga. 121, 674 S.E.2d 309 (2009).

Judgment was vacated and the case was remanded because the trial court consolidated an initial hearing on a landowner's application for an interlocutory injunction against a neighbor with a hearing on the merits of the landowner's complaint, and issued a permanent injunction in favor of the landowner over the neighbor's objection to the hearings being consolidated. Smith v. Guest Pond Club, Inc., 277 Ga. 143, 586 S.E.2d 623 (2003).

Trial on merits held proper absent objection by adverse parties. — When lessors in a landlord/tenant case were on notice of the hearing on their motion for interlocutory injunction and did not object at trial to the trial judge's hearing the merits of the case at the interlocutory injunction hearing, the trial court did not err in advancing the trial on the merits without prior notice to the parties. Wilkerson v. Chattahoochee Parks, 244 Ga. 472, 260 S.E.2d 867 (1979).

Consolidation of hearing for an interlocutory injunction with the final hearing on the merits. — In an action to abate a nuisance and for injunctive relief against the owner and operator of a spa, the trial court did not abuse the court's discretion in advancing the trial on the merits and consolidating the trial with the hearing on the interlocutory injunction. Kim v. State, 272 Ga. 343, 528 S.E.2d 798 (2000).

Temporary Restraining Orders

Section to be strictly construed. — Because ex parte temporary restraining orders are harsh remedies, statutes authorizing such remedies must be strictly construed; therefore, statutory notice requirements were determined to be mandating and jurisdictional. United Food & Com. Workers Union v. Amberjack Ltd., 253 Ga. 438, 321 S.E.2d 736 (1984).

Compliance with subsection (b) of this section is jurisdictional and mandatory. Board of Comm'rs v. Allgood, 234 Ga. 9, 214 S.E.2d 522 (1975).

Requirements of subsection (b) of this section are jurisdictional and unless the movant or applicant complies with such conditions precedent for granting a restraining order without notice to the opposite party as are set forth therein, the judge to whom the application is made acquires no jurisdiction to issue such order. Mar-Pak Mich., Inc. v. Pointer, 226 Ga. 189, 173 S.E.2d 206 (1970).

While subsection (b) of this section does not specifically use the word "jurisdiction," the statute's language is not subject to any interpretation other than that the statute denies authority to the judges of the superior courts to issue ex parte restraining orders unless it clearly appears from specific facts shown by affidavit or verified complaint that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage will result to an applicant before notice can be served and a hearing had thereon. Mar-Pak Mich., Inc. v. Pointer, 226 Ga. 189, 173 S.E.2d 206 (1970).

Mootness. — Because a suspect was indicted, and the case was before an assigned trial court, an order granting the suspect's motion to restrain extra-judicial statements to the media was vacated, and a new order addressing non-disclosure was entered, the media's appeal of the restraining order was moot. AJC Gwinnett News v. Corbin, 279 Ga. 842, 621 S.E.2d 753 (2005).

Officers' argument that a temporary restraining order (TRO) was invalid was moot because the TRO had been superseded by an interlocutory injunction, and the officers did not argue that any alleged error in entering the TRO somehow infected the interlocutory injunction, which was entered after notice to the officers and a full hearing. Pittman v. State, 288 Ga.

Force of temporary restraining order. — Temporary restraining order granted to remain of force until hearing of application for interlocutory injunction has all the force of an injunction, until rescinded or modified by the court. Corley v. Crompton-Highland Mills, 201 Ga. 333, 39 S.E.2d 861 (1946) (decided under former Code 1933, Ch. 2, T. 55).

Affidavit or verified complaint required. — Restraining order is not issued in compliance with subsection (b) of this section if there is no affidavit or verified complaint making the required factual showing. Finney v. Pan-Am. Fire & Cas. Co., 123 Ga. App. 250, 180 S.E.2d 253 (1971).

Grant of restraining order void when conditions precedent not complied with. — Failure of applicant to comply with conditions precedent in subsection (b) of this section for the granting of a temporary restraining order without notice renders issuance of a temporary restraining order utterly void. Finney v. Pan-Am. Fire & Cas. Co., 123 Ga. App. 250, 180 S.E.2d 253 (1971).

Amendment of restraining order without notice to plaintiffs. — Any error in amending a temporary restraining order without notice to the plaintiffs is harmless when the amended order does not permit anything which the plaintiffs had sought to have enjoined. Grafton v. Turner, 227 Ga. 809, 183 S.E.2d 458 (1971).

County and county's employees had immunity from damages. — Employee was not entitled to damages arising out of a violation of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65(b) in obtaining a temporary restraining order (TRO) against the employee as the county had sovereign immunity and the county manager and the county attorney had sovereign immunity in their official capacities; the county manager and the county attorney had official immunity in their individual capacities as obtaining the TRO was a discretionary action that they undertook to protect the public and workplace safety after they were advised of the employee's actions. Wallace v. Greene County, 274 Ga. App. 776, 618 S.E.2d 642 (2005).

Temporary restraining order valid against corporation. — Temporary restraining order entered against a corporation and the corporation's officers was not invalid because the verified complaint and the state's attorney's certification were sufficient under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65 to show that immediate and irreparable injury would result unless relief was granted before the officers could be heard in opposition and why notice would not be required. Pittman v. State, 288 Ga. 589, 706 S.E.2d 398 (2011).

Automatic dissolution of temporary restraining order is not an appealable judgment. Clements v. Kushinka, 233 Ga. 273, 210 S.E.2d 804 (1974).

Dissolution only appealable when heard on merits. — Issue of dissolution of a temporary restraining order must have been heard and determined on its merits before a judgment dissolving or refusing to dissolve the restraining order is subject to interlocutory appeal. Clements v. Kushinka, 233 Ga. 273, 210 S.E.2d 804 (1974).

Temporary protective order obtained under the Family Violence Act was not subject to the 30-day expiration period applicable to temporary restraining orders. Carroll v. State, 224 Ga. App. 543, 481 S.E.2d 562 (1997).

Late perfection of service. — Fact that service is not perfected on a party until four days after a temporary restraining order has been issued does not divest the trial court of jurisdiction when the statutory requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65 have been met. Stewart v. McLean, 252 Ga. 455, 314 S.E.2d 439 (1984).

Form and Scope of Injunctions and Restraining Orders

Applicability of specificity requirement of subsection (d). — Specificity requirement of subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65 applies equally to mandated acts and acts of restraint. Caring Hands, Inc. v. Department of Human Resources, 214 Ga. App. 853, 449 S.E.2d 354 (1994), appeal dismissed, appeal after remand, 222 Ga. App. 608, 475 S.E.2d 660 (1996).

Personal care home could not be held in contempt for failure to comply with an order to relocate residents from its premises which failed to set forth a reasonably detailed plan for the relocation and a reasonable time limit for the relocation. Caring Hands, Inc. v. Department of Human Resources, 214 Ga. App. 853, 449 S.E.2d 354 (1994), appeal dismissed, appeal after remand, 222 Ga. App. 608, 475 S.E.2d 660 (1996).

Party is bound by restraining order of which a party has notice, despite the fact that personal service of the order upon the party may have been defective in some respect. Cameron v. Richards, 246 Ga. 231, 271 S.E.2d 146 (1980).

Duty of defendant to determine meaning of order. — If the defendant is in doubt as to what acts the defendant may or may not do under an order granted pursuant to subsection (d) of this section, the defendant should request modification or construction of the statute's terms; if the defendant proceeds under the defendant's own construction, the defendant does so at the defendant's own peril. General Teamsters Local 528 v. Allied Foods, Inc., 228 Ga. 479, 186 S.E.2d 527 (1971), cert. denied, 405 U.S. 1041, 92 S. Ct. 1313, 31 L. Ed. 2d 582 (1972).

City of Atlanta's argument that the permanent injunction issued against the city lacked specificity pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65(d), despite the fact that the city later withdrew a motion seeking the trial court's clarification of the injunction, failed as the motion for clarification in the trial court was the proper procedure. City of Atlanta v. S. States Police Benevolent Ass'n, 276 Ga. App. 446, 623 S.E.2d 557 (2005).

Subsection (d) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65 requires a specific description of the property or assets which are the subject of the injunction to appear on the face of the order. Hendrix v. Hendrix, 254 Ga. 662, 333 S.E.2d 596 (1985).

Injunctive order which refers to the complaint for its sole description of the property which the defendant is restrained from encumbering or conveying attempts an impermissible incorporation by reference. Hendrix v. Hendrix, 254 Ga. 662, 333 S.E.2d 596 (1985).

Injunction improper when order not specific in terms. — Trial court's injunction ordering that a former employee be enjoined perpetually from disclosing the trade secrets of a former employer was improper because of the undefined term “trade secrets” which violated the requirement of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65 that every injunction order be specific in the order’s terms. Ward v. Process Control Corp., 247 Ga. 583, 277 S.E.2d 671 (1981); Sanford v. RDA Consultants Ltd., 244 Ga. App. 308, 535 S.E.2d 321 (2000).

With regard to the disclosure of proprietary information, the trial court’s order which granted an employer an interlocutory injunction enforcing non-solicitation and non-disclosure clauses against an employee lacked the specificity mandated by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65(d) as the trial court’s order lacked sufficient detail to fully apprise the employee of which materials could not be used or disclosed. Pregler v. C&Z, Inc., 259 Ga. App. 149, 575 S.E.2d 915 (2003).

Order enjoining the construction of a cell phone tower on leased property was vacated because the order did not comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65(d) by describing the property subject to the injunction in reasonable detail; O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65(d) was to be strictly applied in the context of interests in land, and the order’s attempt to describe the property subject to the injunction by making reference to a lease attempted an impermissible incorporation by reference. Verticality, Inc. v. Warnell, 282 Ga. App. 873, 640 S.E.2d 369 (2006).

Details of injunctive order need not reveal trade secrets. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65 does not require that a trial court’s injunction against the disclosure of a trade secret itself disclose the trade secret; rather, the trial court’s injunction need only include a general description of the trade secret sought to be protected. Ward v. Process Control Corp., 247 Ga.

Nature of reasonable detail. — Trial court’s injunction against property owners who refused to allow a power company access to conduct surveys for a planned electrical transmission line was proper because the injunction was in “reasonable” detail when the injunction specified the land affected and the acts that the property owners were not to interfere with. Bearden v. Ga. Power Co., 262 Ga. App. 550, 586 S.E.2d 10 (2003).

Preservation of marital asset. — In divorce proceedings, a trial court was within the court’s discretion under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65(e) to order that a former wife pay the amount remaining from a line of credit the wife took out on the parties’ marital residence into the court registry as evidence was presented that the wife had been dissipating a significant marital asset without notice to the former husband. Hunter v. Hunter, 289 Ga. 9, 709 S.E.2d 263 (2011).

Trial court could enjoin non-parties over whom court lacked personal jurisdiction. — Trial court did not err in enjoining property managers who were the defendants in a suit involving a property management agreement from pursuing a suit regarding the same agreement in Virginia. Under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-65(d), the injunction also properly reached the defendants’ associated entities over whom the trial court lacked personal jurisdiction. Am. Mgmt. Servs. East, LLC v. Fort Benning Family Cmtys., LLC, 313 Ga. App. 124, 720 S.E.2d 377 (2011), cert. denied, No. S12C0630, 2012 Ga. LEXIS 386 (Ga. 2012).

Since the owner of the lot on which the road existed was in concert with the property owner and had notice of the action and the judgment entered against it, the trial court’s injunction against the lot owner, who was not a party to the action, was valid. S-D Rira, LLC v. Outback Prop. Owners’ Ass’n, No. A14A1307, 2014 Ga. App. LEXIS 813 (Nov. 21, 2014).

In an action in which any part of the relief sought is a judgment for a sum of money or the disposition of any other thing capable of delivery, a party, upon notice to every other party, and by leave of court, may deposit with the court all or any part of such sum or thing to be held by the clerk of the court, subject to withdrawal, in whole or in part, at any time thereafter upon order of the court, upon posting of sufficient security. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Prejudgment and postjudgment interest. — In a contract action, a party was not entitled to prejudgment and postjudgment interest when deposits were made pursuant to the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-67. Sacha v. Coffee Butler Serv., Inc., 215 Ga. App. 280, 450 S.E.2d 704 (1994).

Unconditional deposit required to relieve defendant from liability. — Check deposited in the clerk's office without leave of court, which was made out to the plaintiffs with an endorsement that "the undersign [sic] payees accept the amount of this payment in full satisfaction of all claims against drawer to property located at [the premises in issue]," failed to comply with the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-67 because it attempted to impose conditions on its acceptance, thereby rendering the money unavailable to the plaintiffs for withdrawal. Thus, the deposit did not relieve the defendant from all liability for postjudgment interest on the sums deposited in the court, and the trial court did not err by entering judgment therefor. Gunnin v. Parker, 198 Ga. App. 864, 403 S.E.2d 822, cert. denied, 198 Ga. App. 897, 403 S.E.2d 822 (1991).

Failure to deposit funds into registry. — Since the county in a condemnation proceeding did not deposit funds into the registry as required by a consent decree, the requirements of the statute were not complied with; therefore, the trial court did not have authority to abate prejudgment interest by making the court's order retroactive to the date of the consent decree. Threatt v. Forsyth County, 250 Ga. App. 838, 552 S.E.2d 123 (2001).

Violation by attorney deemed contempt. — When, in a divorce proceeding, the husband's attorney violated O.C.G.A. § 9-11-67 and pertinent court rules, the court properly awarded attorney's fees paid to the wife personally by the husband's attorney either on the basis that the actions of the latter constituted contempt, or as a sua sponte award of attorney's fees. Cohen v. Feldman, 219 Ga. App. 90, 464 S.E.2d 237 (1995), overruled on other grounds by Williams v. Cooper, 280 Ga. 145, 625 S.E.2d 754 (2006).

9-11-67.1. Settlement offers and agreements for personal injury, bodily injury, and death from motor vehicle; payment methods.

(a) Prior to the filing of a civil action, any offer to settle a tort claim for personal injury, bodily injury, or death arising from the use of a motor vehicle and prepared by or with the assistance of an attorney on behalf of a claimant or claimants shall be in writing and contain the following material terms:

(1) The time period within which such offer must be accepted, which shall be not less than 30 days from receipt of the offer;

(2) Amount of monetary payment;

(3) The party or parties the claimant or claimants will release if such offer is accepted;

(4) The type of release, if any, the claimant or claimants will provide to each releasee; and

(5) The claims to be released.

(b) The recipients of an offer to settle made under this Code section may accept the same by providing written acceptance of the material terms outlined in subsection (a) of this Code section in their entirety.

(c) Nothing in this Code section is intended to prohibit parties from reaching a settlement agreement in a manner and under terms otherwise agreeable to the parties.

(d) Upon receipt of an offer to settle set forth in subsection (a) of this Code section, the recipients shall have the right to seek clarification regarding terms, liens, subrogation claims, standing to release claims, medical bills, medical records, and other relevant facts. An attempt to seek reasonable clarification shall not be deemed a counteroffer.

(e) An offer to settle made pursuant to this Code section shall be sent by certified mail or statutory overnight delivery, return receipt requested, and shall specifically reference this Code section.

(f) The person or entity providing payment to satisfy the material term set forth in paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this Code section may elect to provide payment by any one or more of the following means:

- (1) Cash;
- (2) Money order;
- (3) Wire transfer;
- (4) A cashier's check issued by a bank or other financial institution;
- (5) A draft or bank check issued by an insurance company; or
- (6) Electronic funds transfer or other method of electronic payment.

(g) Nothing in this Code section shall prohibit a party making an offer to settle from requiring payment within a specified period; provided, however, that such period shall be not less than ten days after the written acceptance of the offer to settle.

(h) This Code section shall apply to causes of action for personal injury, bodily injury, and death arising from the use of a motor vehicle on or after July 1, 2013. (Code 1981, § 9-11-67.1, enacted by Ga. L. 2013, p. 860, § 1/HB 336.)

9-11-68. Offers of settlement; damages for frivolous claims or defenses.

(a) At any time more than 30 days after the service of a summons and complaint on a party but not less than 30 days (or 20 days if it is a counteroffer) before trial, either party may serve upon the other party, but shall not file with the court, a written offer, denominated as an offer under this Code section, to settle a tort claim for the money specified in the offer and to enter into an agreement dismissing the claim or to allow judgment to be entered accordingly. Any offer under this Code section must:

- (1) Be in writing and state that it is being made pursuant to this Code section;
- (2) Identify the party or parties making the proposal and the party or parties to whom the proposal is being made;

(3) Identify generally the claim or claims the proposal is attempting to resolve;

(4) State with particularity any relevant conditions;

(5) State the total amount of the proposal;

(6) State with particularity the amount proposed to settle a claim for punitive damages, if any;

(7) State whether the proposal includes attorney's fees or other expenses and whether attorney's fees or other expenses are part of the legal claim; and

(8) Include a certificate of service and be served by certified mail or statutory overnight delivery in the form required by Code Section 9-11-5.

(b)(1) If a defendant makes an offer of settlement which is rejected by the plaintiff, the defendant shall be entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees and expenses of litigation incurred by the defendant or on the defendant's behalf from the date of the rejection of the offer of settlement through the entry of judgment if the final judgment is one of no liability or the final judgment obtained by the plaintiff is less than 75 percent of such offer of settlement.

(2) If a plaintiff makes an offer of settlement which is rejected by the defendant and the plaintiff recovers a final judgment in an amount greater than 125 percent of such offer of settlement, the plaintiff shall be entitled to recover reasonable attorney's fees and expenses of litigation incurred by the plaintiff or on the plaintiff's behalf from the date of the rejection of the offer of settlement through the entry of judgment.

(c) Any offer made under this Code section shall remain open for 30 days unless sooner withdrawn by a writing served on the offeree prior to acceptance by the offeree, but an offeror shall not be entitled to attorney's fees and costs under subsection (b) of this Code section to the extent an offer is not open for at least 30 days (unless it is rejected during that 30 day period). A counteroffer shall be deemed a rejection but may serve as an offer under this Code section if it is specifically denominated as an offer under this Code section. Acceptance or rejection of the offer by the offeree must be in writing and served upon the offeror. An offer that is neither withdrawn nor accepted within 30 days shall be deemed rejected. The fact that an offer is made but not accepted does not preclude a subsequent offer. Evidence of an offer is not admissible except in proceedings to enforce a settlement or to determine reasonable attorney's fees and costs under this Code section.

(d)(1) The court shall order the payment of attorney's fees and expenses of litigation upon receipt of proof that the judgment is one to which the provisions of either paragraph (1) or paragraph (2) of subsection (b) of this Code section apply; provided, however, that if an appeal is taken from such judgment, the court shall order payment of such attorney's fees and expenses of litigation only upon remittitur affirming such judgment.

(2) If a party is entitled to costs and fees pursuant to the provisions of this Code section, the court may determine that an offer was not made in good faith in an order setting forth the basis for such a determination. In such case, the court may disallow an award of attorney's fees and costs.

(e) Upon motion by the prevailing party at the time that the verdict or judgment is rendered, the moving party may request that the finder of fact determine whether the opposing party presented a frivolous claim or defense. In such event, the court shall hold a separate bifurcated hearing at which the finder of fact shall make a determination of whether such frivolous claims or defenses were asserted and to award damages, if any, against the party presenting such frivolous claims or defenses. Under this subsection:

(1) Frivolous claims shall include, but are not limited to, the following:

(A) A claim, defense, or other position that lacks substantial justification or that is not made in good faith or that is made with malice or a wrongful purpose, as those terms are defined in Code Section 51-7-80;

(B) A claim, defense, or other position with respect to which there existed such a complete absence of any justiciable issue of law or fact that it could not be reasonably believed that a court would accept the asserted claim, defense, or other position; and

(C) A claim, defense, or other position that was interposed for delay or harassment;

(2) Damages awarded may include reasonable and necessary attorney's fees and expenses of litigation; and

(3) A party may elect to pursue either the procedure specified in this subsection or the procedure specified in Code Section 9-15-14, but not both. (Code 1981, § 9-11-68, enacted by Ga. L. 2005, p. 1, § 5/SB 3; Ga. L. 2006, p. 589, § 1/HB 239.)

Editor's notes. — Ga. L. 2005, p. 1, § 1/SB 3, not codified by the General Assembly, provides that: "The General Assembly finds that there presently exists a crisis affecting the provision and quality of health care services in this state. Hospitals and other health care providers in this state are having increasing difficulty in locating liability insurance and, when such hospitals and providers are able to locate such insurance, the insurance is extremely costly. The result of this crisis is the potential for a diminution of the availability of access to health care services and a resulting adverse impact on the health and well-being of the citizens of this state. The General Assembly further finds that certain civil justice and health care regulatory reforms as provided in this Act will promote predictability and improvement in the provision of quality health care services and the resolution of health care liability claims and will thereby assist in promoting the provision of health care liability insurance by insurance providers. The General Assembly further finds that certain needed reforms affect not only health care liability claims but also other civil actions and accordingly provides such general reforms in this Act."

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Constitutionality. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68(b)(1) does not merely prescribe the methods of enforcing rights and obligations, but rather affects the rights of parties by imposing an additional duty and obligation to pay an opposing party's attorney fees when a final judgment does not meet a certain amount or is one of no liability; by creating this new obligation, the statute operates as a substantive law, which is unconstitutional under Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. X, given the statute's retroactive effect to pending cases. Fowler Props. v. Dowland, 282 Ga. 76, 646 S.E.2d 197 (2007).

Trial court clearly erred in finding that the Tort Reform Act of 2005, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68, impeded access to the courts and violated Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XII, because Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XII was never intended to provide a right of access to the courts, but was intended to provide only a right of choice between self-representation and representation by counsel; § 9-11-68(b)(1) does not deny litigants access to the courts but simply sets forth certain circumstances under which attorney's fees can be recoverable and, therefore, even if a constitutional right of access to the courts provision did exist, the provision would not be applicable. Smith v. Baptiste, 287 Ga. 23, 694 S.E.2d 83 (2010).

Trial court erred in finding that the Tort Reform Act of 2005, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68, violated Ga. Const. 1983, Art. I, Sec. I, Para. XII, since the court permitted the recovery of attorney's fees absent the prerequisite showings of either O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 or O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11, because there was no constitutional requirement that attorney's fees be awarded only pursuant to § 9-15-14 or § 13-6-11; in Georgia, attorney's fees are recoverable when authorized by some statutory provision or by contract, and § 9-11-68 is such a statutory provision authorizing the recovery of attorney's fees under specific circumstances. Smith v. Baptiste, 287 Ga. 23, 694 S.E.2d 83 (2010).

Tort Reform Act of 2005, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68, does not violate the uniformity clause of the Georgia Constitution, Ga. Const. 1983, Art. III, Sec. VI, Para. IV(a), because § 9-11-68 is a general law since the statute applies uniformly throughout the state to all tort cases; the purpose of the general law to encourage litigants in tort cases to make and accept good faith settlement proposals in order to avoid unnecessary litigation is a legitimate legislative purpose, consistent with the state's strong public policy of encouraging negotiations and settlements, and the fact that the statute applies to tort cases, but not other civil actions, does not render the statute an impermissible special law. Smith v. Baptiste, 287 Ga. 23, 694 S.E.2d 83 (2010).

Purpose. — Clear purpose of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68 is to encourage litigants in tort cases to make and accept good faith settlement proposals in order to avoid unnecessary litigation. Canton Plaza, Inc. v. Regions Bank, Inc., 325 Ga. App. 361, 749 S.E.2d 825 (2013).

Construction with other law. — Upon a proper appeal from a final order, while neither former O.C.G.A. § 24-9-67.1 (see now O.C.G.A. § 24-7-702) nor O.C.G.A. § 9-11-16 required that a complaint be dismissed or stricken for failing to comply with the terms of those statutes, unlike the Anti-SLAPP statute, codified at O.C.G.A. § 9-11-11.1, because the trial court did not enter a final judgment within the meaning of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68(b)(1), attorney fees were properly denied; moreover, a right to dismiss voluntarily without prejudice would be meaningless if doing so would trigger the payment of the defendant's attorney fees. McKesson Corp. v. Green, 286 Ga. App. 110, 648 S.E.2d 457 (2007), cert. denied, No. S07C1602, 2007 Ga. LEXIS 656 (Ga. 2007).

Retroactive application of statute proper. — Trial court did not err when the court applied the 2006 version of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68 in the property owners' action against the builders because, inasmuch as the owners did not obtain any judgment amount in the owners' favor, it did not matter whether the original or amended version of the statute was applied, or whether the amendment was substantive or procedural in nature; under either version of the statute the owners were liable for the builders' reasonable fees and expenses from the date the offer of settlement was rejected. O'Leary v. Whitehall Constr., 288 Ga. 790, 708 S.E.2d 353 (2011).

Applicable to case filed after enactment despite injury predating effective date. — Georgia's offer of settlement statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68, applied to a negligence action in which the injury occurred prior to the effective date of the statute because the action was filed after that date; although § 9-11-68 involved substantial rights and could only apply prospectively, the statute only related to rights arising within the litigation; as a result, L. P. Gas Industrial Equipment Co. v. Burch, 306 Ga. App. 156, 701 S.E.2d 602 (2010) is overruled. Crane Composites, Inc. v. Wayne Farms, LLC, 296 Ga. 271, 765 S.E.2d 921 (2014).

Preemption. — Fed. R. Civ. P. 68 did not preempt O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68 because the two were not in direct collision, and there was no reason to believe § 9-11-68 could not be applied in harmony with Rule 68 and, also, because § 9-11-68 was substantive in nature and did not conflict with Rule 68, the Georgia statute was not preempted by the federal rule. Wheatley v. Moe's Southwest Grill, LLC, 580 F. Supp. 2d 1324 (N.D. Ga. 2008).

Challenge to statute did not require service on Attorney General. — Because a personal injury plaintiff challenging the constitutionality of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68(d) was not required by Georgia law to serve the Attorney General with notice of the action, an order granting the defendants' motion for attorney fees under § 9-11-68(d) was reversed. Buchan v. Hobby, 288 Ga. App. 478, 654 S.E.2d 444 (2007).

Provision not retroactive. — Plaintiffs in a medical malpractice and contract case were not entitled to attorney's fees because the plaintiffs did not specifically plead O.C.G.A. § 13-6-11 and did not allege any bad faith by a doctor and clinic. Further, claims for fees under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68 were properly dismissed on directed verdict because the statute was not in effect at the time the complaint was filed; because the statute added duties and obligations, the statute could not be retroactive. Morrison v. Mann, No. 07-11294, 2008 U.S. App. LEXIS 6772 (11th Cir. Mar. 26, 2008) (Unpublished).

Statute had no application as statute became effective during pendency of litigation. — Because O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68 did not apply as the statute became effective during the pendency of the litigation, because the trial court failed to include specific findings of fact to support an award of attorney's fees and costs of litigation under O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14, and because neither the first driver nor the first driver's attorney were afforded an opportunity to be heard before sanctions were imposed, the trial court erred in awarding the second driver attorney's fees and costs of litigation. Olarsch v. Newell, 295 Ga. App. 210, 671 S.E.2d 253 (2008).

Because O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68 was not in effect when an action a husband and wife filed against a company accrued, the couple was not entitled to a benefit conferred on the plaintiffs by the statute, which was the right to recover the couple's own attorney's fees and expenses of litigation if the company had rejected the couple's settlement demand and if the couple had obtained a final judgment in an amount greater than 125 percent of such offer of settlement. L. P. Gas Indus. Equip. Co. v. Burch, 306 Ga. App. 156, 701 S.E.2d 602 (2010).

Trial court did not err in denying a company's motion pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68 to recover the attorney fees and expenses of litigation the company incurred after a husband and wife rejected the company's settlement offer because § 9-11-68 was inapplicable. O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68(b) operated as a substantive law, and it was not yet in effect when the substantive rights of the husband and wife became fixed; thus, the couple was entitled to seek compensation in tort from the company, free from any duty and obligation to pay attorney fees if the couple failed to obtain a final judgment that was at least 75 percent of any offer of settlement. L. P. Gas Indus. Equip. Co. v. Burch, 306 Ga. App. 156, 701 S.E.2d 602 (2010).

Rejection of second offer does not negate rejection of first offer. — After an insurer made an offer of settlement to a widower and an estate administrator, the fact that the insurer made another offer of settlement, which was also rejected, did not negate the effect of the rejection of the first offer for purposes of seeking attorney fees and costs under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68, after a jury rendered a verdict of no liability for the insurer. Great West Cas. Co. v. Bloomfield, 303 Ga. App. 26, 693 S.E.2d 99 (2010).

Settlement offer not made in good faith. — Truck driver's and owner's offer of settlement for $ 25,000 under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68 was not made in good faith, although ultimately a second truck driver was found 100 percent liable to the decedent, because it was a wrongful death case in which the accident would not have occurred but for the first truck driver's admitted negligence. Great West Cas. Co. v. Bloomfield, 313 Ga. App. 180, 721 S.E.2d 173 (2011).

Settlement offer not made in bad faith. — School's offer of judgment under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68 to a parent to settle the parent's slander claims for $750 was not made in bad faith; the school reasonably and correctly anticipated that the school's exposure was minimal. Similarly, the fact that the school ultimately incurred $84,000 in fees and expenses did not preclude a finding of good faith. Cohen v. Alfred & Adele Davis Acad., Inc., 310 Ga. App. 761, 714 S.E.2d 350 (2011), cert. denied, No. S11C1795, 2011 Ga. LEXIS 976 (Ga. 2011); cert. denied, 132 S. Ct. 2106, 182 L. Ed. 2d 869 (2012).

Post-judgment motions for fees does not toll the time to appeal from final judgment. — Supreme court was without jurisdiction to review the propriety or substance of the trial court's order denying the property owners' motion for new trial because the owners failed to timely file a notice of appeal in regard to that order, and the builders' post-judgment motions for fees under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-68 and 9-15-14 did not toll the time for the owners' to appeal from the order denying the owners' motion for new trial; the trial court entered a final judgment on October 4, 2007, and the owners' filing of a motion for new trial tolled the time for appeal under O.C.G.A. § 5-6-38(a), but as soon as the trial court issued the court's order disposing of the motion for new trial, the thirty-day time period to file a notice of appeal began to run, and the owners' filed the motion for new trial on March 9, 2009. O'Leary v.

Whitehall Constr., 288 Ga. 790, 708 S.E.2d 353 (2011).

Motion for attorney's fees meritless. — That portion of the defendants' renewed motion for attorney's fees that sought attorney's fees and expenses of litigation incurred on appeal was meritless since O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68 expressly limited the award of fees and expenses to those incurred "from the date of the rejection of the offer of settlement through the entry of judgment". Wheatley v. Moe's Southwest Grill, LLC, 580 F. Supp. 2d 1324 (N.D. Ga. 2008).

Basis for denying fees and costs should be set forth in trial court's order. — In a case in which: (1) a widower and an estate administrator rejected an insurer's offer of settlement; (2) the jury later entered a verdict in favor of the insurer; and (3) the trial court denied the insurer's motion for fees and costs, remand was required because the trial court did not set forth the basis for the court's determination as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68(d)(2). Great West Cas. Co. v. Bloomfield, 303 Ga. App. 26, 693 S.E.2d 99 (2010).

Court erred by failing to indicate whether court segregated fees and expenses. — Award of attorney fees and expenses under Georgia's offer of settlement statute, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68, to a defending bank was vacated because the trial court did not indicate whether the court was able to ascertain the fees and expenses attributable to the bank's defense of plaintiffs' claims as opposed to the bank's prosecution of its unsuccessful counterclaims; thus, there was no way to determine if the trial court segregated the recoverable fees and expenses from those which were nonrecoverable. Canton Plaza, Inc. v. Regions Bank, Inc., 325 Ga. App. 361, 749 S.E.2d 825 (2013).

Award of attorney's fees and expenses proper. — In calculating a reasonable fee amount, a district court did not abuse the court's discretion in finding that the rates requested by defendant companies were reasonable since the plaintiff oil company's bare assertion that a discount should have applied to the rates simply because the defendants actually negotiated a discount on the rates of the out-of-town lawyers the company hired was incorrect. Moreover, the district court did not abuse the court's discretion in awarding fees for hours for multiple-attorney meetings or for including time spent on unsuccessful claims. Gowen Oil Co. v. Abraham, No. 12-12354, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 4563 (11th Cir. Mar. 6, 2013) (Unpublished).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68(b)(1) allowed a defendant to recover fees and expenses incurred not only by the defendant but also "on the defendant's behalf" and, thus, the defendants' insurance did not insulate the plaintiff from the payment of legal fees and expenses under § 9-11-68. Moreover, the defendants were entitled to fees that were incurred between the entry of summary judgment and the entry of judgment. Gowen Oil Co. v. Abraham, No. 12-12354, 2013 U.S. App. LEXIS 4563 (11th Cir. Mar. 6, 2013) (Unpublished).

Franchisor showed that attorney's fees the franchisor sought under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68(b)(1) from the date of the rejection of the offer of settlement through the entry of judgment did not duplicate any part of the settlement, which reimbursed the franchisor for other attorney's fees incurred in defending against the claims. Eaddy v. Precision Franchising, LLC, 320 Ga. App. 667, 739 S.E.2d 410 (2013).

Award of attorney's fees and expenses proper but calculation not proper. — While an inmate was entitled to attorney's fees and litigation expenses under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68(b), the trial court erred in calculating the award based solely, as far as the record reflected, on the contingency agreement rather than on evidence of hours, rates, or other indications regarding the value of the attorneys' professional services actually rendered. Ga. Dep't of Corr. v. Couch, 295 Ga. 469, 759 S.E.2d 804 (2014).

Because a retroactive application of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68 would have impaired the offeror's rights to recover attorney's fees and costs, the trial court did not err in applying the statute in effect at the time the offer was made. Kromer v. Bechtel, 289 Ga. App. 306, 656 S.E.2d 910 (2008).

Particularity requirement met. — Offer of settlement met the particularity requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68(a)(4), even though acceptance of the offer required execution of a release, which was not attached to the settlement offer. Great West Cas. Co. v. Bloomfield, 303 Ga. App. 26, 693 S.E.2d 99 (2010).

Particularity requirement not met.

— Because the plaintiff asserted a claim for punitive damages, and such claim was pending at the time the offer of settlement was made, the defendant was required to state with particularity the amount proposed to settle that claim, which the defendant failed to do, thus, the defendant's offer did not meet the requirements of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68(a), and the trial court did not err in ruling that the defendant could not recover attorney fees for an offer of settlement pursuant to that Code section. Chadwick v. Brazell, 331 Ga. App. 373, 771 S.E.2d 75 (2015).

Application to State of Georgia in tort claims suit.

— In a suit brought by an inmate wherein a successful jury verdict was obtained against the Georgia Department of Corrections after the inmate was injured while working on a painting detail at the warden's house, the trial court properly denied the Department's motion to dismiss based on sovereign immunity because the state waived sovereign immunity for the torts of state employees while acting within the scope of the employees' official duties in the same manner as a private individual or entity would be liable under like circumstances; thus, since the Department rejected the inmate's offer of judgment, the Department was subject to the ramifications of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68, including attorney fees. Ga. Dep't of Corr. v. Couch, 322 Ga. App. 234, 744 S.E.2d 432 (2013).

Offer failed to identify claims and did not meet particularity requirement in tort case. — In a slip and fall case, an offer of settlement under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68 for $1,000 was ambiguous as to whether accepting the offer required the plaintiff to relinquish the plaintiff's claims against a co-defendant, against whom the plaintiff already held a default judgment, and therefore the offer failed to comply with § 9-11-68(a)(3) and (4). The trial court therefore erred in ordering the plaintiff to pay the offeror's attorney's fees of $24,696. Tiller v. RJJB Assocs., LLP, 331 Ga. App. 622, 770 S.E.2d 883 (2015).

Necessity for hearing on motion for attorney's fees.

— Trial court did not err in awarding attorney's fees and expenses of $27,276 after a restaurant prevailed in a patron's action, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68; although the court suggested that a hearing was necessary under O.C.G.A. §§ 9-15-14 and 14-2-1604, in this case, the patron waived a hearing by failing to request the hearing or otherwise challenge the reasonableness of the fees sought. Bell v. Waffle House, Inc., 331 Ga. App. 443, 771 S.E.2d 132 (2015).

Preservation for review. — Court of Appeals declined to address the constitutional issues raised for the first time on appeal by an offeree, and even if the issues had been raised below, jurisdiction would have been in the supreme court. Kromer v. Bechtel, 289 Ga. App. 306, 656 S.E.2d 910 (2008).

Because the appellees did not raise the issue that retroactive application of the Tort Reform Act of 2005, O.C.G.A. § 9-11-68, was unconstitutional in the trial court and obtain a distinct ruling on it from that court, the issue could not be considered for the first time in the supreme court. Smith v. Baptiste, 287 Ga. 23, 694 S.E.2d 83 (2010).

9-11-69. Execution; discovery in aid thereof.

Process to enforce a judgment for the payment of money shall be a writ of execution unless the court directs otherwise. In aid of the judgment or execution, the judgment creditor, or his successor in interest when that interest appears of record, may do any or all of the following:

- (1) Examine any person, including the judgment debtor by taking depositions or propounding interrogatories;
- (2) Compel the production of documents or things; and
- (3) Upon a showing of reasonable necessity, obtain permission from a court of competent jurisdiction to enter upon that part of real property belonging to or lawfully occupied by the debtor which is not used as a residence and which property is not bona fide in the lawful possession of another;

in the manner provided in this chapter for such discovery measures prior to judgment. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 69; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 32; Ga. L. 1987, p. 816, § 1.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Purpose of this section is to aid enforcement of a judgment or execution after it has become a final determination of the issue between the parties. McLarty v. Emhart Corp., 122 Ga. App. 677, 178 S.E.2d 344 (1970).

Purpose of post judgment discovery under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-69 is to aid a litigant to recover on a liability which has been established by a judgment. Miller v. United States Shelter Corp., 179 Ga. App. 469, 347 S.E.2d 251 (1986).

Post-judgment discovery procedures have for their purpose identifying assets to satisfy the judgment. Fleming v. Busey, 153 Ga. App. 489, 265 S.E.2d 839 (1980).

Allowable questions. — Any question which would lead to any property or sources of income of judgment debtor is pertinent and allowable. Fleming v.

Busey, 153 Ga. App. 489, 265 S.E.2d 839 (1980); Miller v. United States Shelter Corp., 179 Ga. App. 469, 347 S.E.2d 251 (1986).

There is no territorial limitation in discovery statutes as to location of witnesses, documents, assets, etc. Thrift v. Vi-Vin Prods., Inc., 134 Ga. App. 717, 215 S.E.2d 709 (1975).

Service by mail. — “In the manner provided in this chapter” includes service by mail upon counsel pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-5(b), such that the trial court erred in dismissing the plaintiff’s pleadings. Clinton Leasing Corp. v. Patterson, 209 Ga. App. 336, 433 S.E.2d 422 (1993).

Inapplicability of privilege as to matters working forfeiture. — Defendant is not privileged to refuse to answer on grounds that an answer would cause a forfeiture of the defendant's estate and interfere with the defendant's right to earn a living. Aldridge v. Mercantile Nat'l Bank, 132 Ga. App. 788, 209 S.E.2d 234 (1974).

Privilege as to matters tending to work a forfeiture of an estate was inapplicable to post-judgment discovery proceedings geared toward uncovering or identifying assets to satisfy the judgment as the forfeiture did not result from answering questions or producing documents, but rather, results from a judgment already entered. Kushner v. Mascho, 143 Ga. App. 801, 240 S.E.2d 290 (1977).

Post-judgment discovery held only proper procedure. — In action brought by bank against corporation seeking recovery on several notes and trade acceptances, as well as to recover an overdraft on a checking account, the trial court was without authority to direct the appellants, sole stockholders in the corporation, to either return all collateral to the premises of the corporation or to provide a list of the equipment; the proper procedure for obtaining such information is by post-judgment discovery in aid of execution, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-69, and the appellee's contention that the order to provide a list was authorized pursuant to the trial court's inherent power to issue orders necessary to the exercise of the court's jurisdiction was without merit. Ponderosa Granite Co. v. First Nat'l Bank, 173 Ga. App. 105, 325 S.E.2d 591 (1984).

Court may impose sanctions for failure to comply with post-judgment discovery orders, including contempt for not appearing at a deposition, notwithstanding the fact that the person to be deposed is a nonresident, although there is apparently no provision for the aggrieved party to move for a dismissal of an appeal. Ostroff v. Coyner, 187 Ga. App. 109, 369 S.E.2d 298 (1988).

Use of privilege against self-incrimination. — When interrogatories in fiat facias do not constitute or evidence extensive questioning as to the judgment debtor's financial affairs which would tend, as a matter of law, to incriminate the debtor, work a forfeiture of the debtor's estate, or bring disgrace or infamy upon the debtor or the debtor's family, but are clearly within the ambit of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-69, the burden is on the debtor to state the general reason for the debtor's refusal to answer and to specifically establish that a real danger of incrimination exists with respect to each question. Petty v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 169 Ga. App. 418, 312 S.E.2d 874 (1984).

Scope includes nonparties. — Plain language of paragraph (1) of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-69 works an express expansion of the permissible use of post-judgment written interrogatories to any person, regardless of whether the person is a party to the underlying action in which the money judgment was rendered. Esasky v. Forrest, 231 Ga. App. 488, 499 S.E.2d 413 (1998).

Impleader of persons not parties to the underlying judgment not permitted. — O.C.G.A. § 9-11-69 does not authorize a judgment creditor to implead and hold liable persons who were not parties to the underlying judgment. C-Staff, Inc. v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 275 Ga. 624, 571 S.E.2d 383 (2002).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-69 did not authorize a judgment creditor to implead and hold liable persons who were not parties to the underlying judgment; a judgment creditor must initiate a separate civil action against persons the creditor claims are liable for a judgment to which they were not parties by filing a complaint and serving the defendants under the procedures set forth in the Civil Practice Act, see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9. Pazur v. Belcher, 272 Ga. App. 456, 612 S.E.2d 481 (2004).

O.C.G.A. § 9-11-69 did not authorize a judgment creditor to implead and hold liable persons who were not parties to the underlying judgment; instead, the judgment-creditor had to initiate a separate civil action against persons the judgment-creditor claims were liable for a judgment to which they were not parties. However, in the instant case, the plaintiff judgment creditors were not seeking to hold the defendant transferee liable for the consent judgment, only to avoid an allegedly fraudulent transfer. Reyes-Fuentes v. Shannon Produce Farm, Inc., No. 6:08-cv-59, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 61739 (S.D. Ga. May 2, 2012).

Action against shareholder for piercing corporate veil. — Employer's complaint alleged against one of the employer's shareholders for piercing the corporate veil was not subject to a seven-year statute of limitations under O.C.G.A. § 9-12-60 as the employee failed to first obtain a judgment against the employer and then file a separate action to pierce the corporate veil, but instead filed an amended complaint against that shareholder over six years after the original complaint was filed. Pazur v. Belcher, 272 Ga. App. 456, 612 S.E.2d 481 (2004).

Scope includes spouse of debtor. — Spouse of a judgment debtor is within the scope of the post-judgment discovery process, subject to the limitations created by the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, provisions governing discovery generally. In re Callaway, 212 Ga. App. 500, 442 S.E.2d 309 (1994).

Non-party spouse. — Non-party spouse of a judgment debtor is within the scope of post-judgment discovery, including post-judgment interrogatories. Esasky v. Forrest, 231 Ga. App. 488, 499 S.E.2d 413 (1998).

No supplementary proceedings against non-parties. — District court erred when the court granted judgment-creditor's motion to commence supplementary proceedings against various third parties because in Georgia a judgment-creditor had to initiate a separate civil action against persons it claimed were liable for a judgment if they were not parties to the underlying action which granted the judgment. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. C-Staff, Inc., 318 F.3d 1052 (11th Cir. 2003).

9-11-70. Judgment for specific acts; vesting title.

A decree for specific performance shall operate as a deed to convey land or other property without any conveyance being executed by the vendor. The decree, certified by the clerk, shall be recorded in the registry of deeds in the county where the land lies and shall stand in the place of a deed. In all other cases where a judgment directs a party to perform other specific acts and the party fails to comply within the time specified, the court may direct the acts to be done at the cost of the disobedient party by some other person appointed by the court; and acts when so done have like effect as if done by the party. The court may also in proper cases adjudge the party in contempt. If real or personal property is within the state, the court in lieu of directing a conveyance thereof may enter a judgment divesting the title of any party and vesting it in others; and the judgment has the effect of a conveyance executed in due form of law. When any order or judgment is for the delivery of possession, the party in whose favor it is entered is entitled to a writ of execution upon oral or written application to the clerk. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 70.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Divorce decree placing title to property in wife is just as valid as deed from husband would have been. Elrod v. Elrod, 231 Ga. 222, 200 S.E.2d 885 (1973).

Decree granting a life estate in property took precedence over quitclaim deed. — Husband's quitclaim deed of property to his second wife did not take priority over a recorded divorce decree stating that the husband had only a life estate in the property with his two children from his first marriage as remaindermen. Price v. Price, 286 Ga. 753, 692 S.E.2d 601 (2010).

Definite description of property required. — Decree for specific performance operates as a deed and should therefore contain a description as definite as that required to support a deed. Plantation Land Co. v. Bradshaw, 232 Ga. 435, 207 S.E.2d 49 (1974); Scheinfeld v. Murray, 267 Ga. 622, 481 S.E.2d 194 (1997).

Because there was no clear identification of the land to be conveyed in a parents' divorce settlement, their son was not entitled to a decree of specific performance under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-70. Haffner v. Davis, 290 Ga. 753, 725 S.E.2d 286 (2012).

Suit for specific performance is prematurely brought when time for performance has not yet arrived. Kirkland v. Morris, 233 Ga. 597, 212 S.E.2d 781 (1975).

Superior court order reconveying land to a vendor under an option to repurchase is not one of specific performance and does not act as a deed to convey when the order makes the reconveyance of the land contingent on a sum of money being paid into the court registry. The court's order does not become a decree of specific performance until the contingency is met. Nelson v. Smothers, 168 Ga. App. 120, 308 S.E.2d 239 (1983).

GENERAL PROVISIONS

9-11-71 through 9-11-77. Reserved.

9-11-78. Motion days.

Unless local conditions make it impracticable, each court shall establish regular times and places, at intervals sufficiently frequent for the prompt dispatch of business, at which motions requiring notice and hearing may be heard and disposed of; but the judge at any time or place and on such notice, if any, as is reasonable may make orders for the advancement, conduct, and hearing of actions. Permissible not to require oral argument hearing unless requested. — When O.C.G.A. §§ 9-11-56(c), 9-11-78, and 9-11-83 are considered in conjunction, it is permissible for court rules to provide that an oral argument hearing is not required unless the party requests a hear-all such proceedings. (Ga. L. 1966, p. 609, § 81; Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 33; Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 12.)

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Special statutory proceedings are preserved under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) to the extent that the statutes prescribe specific rules of practice and procedure in conflict herewith. Gifford v. Courson, 224 Ga. 840, 165 S.E.2d 133 (1968).

Exceptions. — This section makes provision for special statutory proceedings, which are the only exceptions to the practice and procedure prescribed by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) permitted in courts of record. Lee v. G.A.C. Fin. Corp., 130 Ga. App. 44, 202 S.E.2d 221 (1973 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-81)).

Creation of court by special Act not determinative. — Fact that a trial court is created by a special Act of the General Assembly does not mean that all proceedings in that court are special statutory proceedings. Johnson v. Barnes, 237 Ga. 502, 229 S.E.2d 70 (1976).

Substance of chapter not to be contravened by local Acts and rules. — Local practice rules, and even local statutes referring to specific courts, may control the flow of business, the hearing of cases, and other issues, but may not contravene the substantive framework of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Auerback v. Maslia, 142 Ga. App. 184, 235 S.E.2d 594 (1977).

Appeal to superior court from a county tax assessment is a “complaint,” as contemplated by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), which is required to be answered by responsive pleading. Hall County Bd. of Tax Assessors v. Reed, 142 Ga. App. 556, 236 S.E.2d 532 (1977).

In a gas company’s suit against the state revenue commissioner for mandamus compelling the commissioner to accept its property tax returns under O.C.G.A. §§ 48-1-2(21) and 48-5-511(a), remand was proper to determine if the company had an acceptable alternative remedy in the company’s pending county tax appeals under O.C.G.A. § 48-5-311, as required by O.C.G.A. § 9-6-20, if the commissioner could be made a party to those appeals by joinder or some other procedure. Southern LNG, Inc. v. MacGinnitie, 294 Ga. 657, 755 S.E.2d 683 (2014).

Application of chapter as to remedies not prescribed by special statutory proceedings. — Fact that special statutory proceedings provide only one remedy, but do not expressly prescribe against others, does not bar application of the Civil Practice Act (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) as to the other remedies. General Acceptance Corp. v. Bishop, 126 Ga. App. 421, 190 S.E.2d 825 (1972).

Arbitration proceedings. — Even though an arbitration award confirmation proceeding is not a civil action, the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, governing discovery applies; thus, limited discovery relating to affirmative defenses to confirmation may be permitted. Hardin Constr. Group, Inc. v. Fuller Enters., Inc., 265 Ga. 770, 462 S.E.2d 130 (1995).

Condemnation is a “special statutory procedure”. Nodvin v. Georgia Power Co., 125 Ga. App. 821, 189 S.E.2d 118 (1972).

Including condemnation before special master. — Statutes (see now O.C.G.A. §§ 22-2-100 through 22-2-114), relating to condemnation proceedings before a special master, are not controlled by the Civil Practice Act (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), but are a special statutory proceeding. Roberts v. Wise, 140 Ga. App. 1, 230 S.E.2d 320 (1976).

Time for filing of defensive pleadings in a special master condemnation proceeding, as opposed to their sufficiency, is governed by special statutory procedure and when there has been a final adjudication in such proceeding which is designed to be expeditious, a party may not later tender an answer to the petition under the general rules of civil practice. Nodvin v. Georgia Power Co., 125 Ga. App. 821, 189 S.E.2d 118 (1972).

Condemnation proceedings. — Provisions of the Civil Practice Act (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) may be applied if not in conflict with the condemnation act (see O.C.G.A. T. 22 and Ch. 3, T. 32). Dorsey v. DOT, 248 Ga. 34, 279 S.E.2d 707 (1981).

Requirements of the condemnation act override all provisions of the Civil Practice Act (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) in conflict with the condemnation act’s specific purposes. DOT v. Defoor, 173 Ga. App. 218, 325 S.E.2d 863 (1984).

Trial court properly refused to dismiss a landowner’s appeal on grounds that the court failed to express dissatisfaction with the compensation awarded by the special master as the court provided the utility with sufficient notice, under the Civil Practice Act (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), that the landowner was objecting to the valuation given on the landowner’s property; moreover, in light of the interest that the utility acquired in the property, and the purposes for which the utility intended to use that property, consequential damages potentially represented a significant portion of the compensation the landowner could recover. Ga. Power Co. v. Stowers, 282 Ga. App. 695, 639 S.E.2d 605 (2006).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) applies to habeas corpus proceedings insofar as questions arise therein regarding the sufficiency of the pleadings, admissibility of evidence under the petition as drawn, amendments, and other elements of pleading and practice enumerated in this section. Johnson v. Caldwell, 229 Ga. 548, 192 S.E.2d 900 (1972).

Legislature intended, in enacting the 1968 amendment to Ga. L. 1967, p. 226, § 33 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-81), to repeal pro tanto the provisions of Ga. L. 1967, p. 835, § 1 et seq. (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-14-40 et seq.), insofar as they prescribed any different rules governing sufficiency of pleadings, amendments, and what evidence would be admissible in support of a claim of illegal imprisonment, and intended that thereafter the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) should apply. Johnson v. Caldwell, 229 Ga. 548, 192 S.E.2d 900 (1972).

Civil renewal provisions apply in habeas corpus proceedings. — O.C.G.A. § 9-14-42(c) was not a statute of repose and not an absolute bar to the refile of a habeas corpus petition and, therefore, was not in conflict with the provisions of O.C.G.A. §§ 9-2-60(b) and (c) and 9-11-41(e), which allowed for the renewal of civil actions after dismissal. Therefore, the habeas court’s dismissal of a petition as untimely was reversed. Phagan v. State, 287 Ga. 856, 700 S.E.2d 589 (2010).

Divorce proceedings are governed by the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Ivey v. Ivey, 233 Ga. 45, 209 S.E.2d 590 (1974).

This section provides that the Civil Practice Act (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) is applicable to all divorce and alimony proceedings with respect to relief from judgments and the effect of judgments in such proceedings. Johnson v. Johnson, 230 Ga. 204, 196 S.E.2d 394 (1973), overruled on other grounds, Abushmais v. Erby, 282 Ga. 619, 652 S.E.2d 549 (2007).

Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) does not apply to juvenile courts. Coleman v. Coleman, 238 Ga. 183, 232 S.E.2d 57 (1977).

Juvenile court properly concluded that the court had no authority to impose attorney fees under O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14 of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) because the juvenile court had not adopted § 9-15-14, and there was no implicit attorney fee award for frivolous litigation in the former Juvenile Court Code; the Civil Practice Act does not apply to juvenile courts. In re T.M.M.L., 313 Ga. App. 638, 722 S.E.2d 386 (2012).

Application of chapter to mandamus proceedings. — Provisions of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) governing summary judgment and other named procedures apply to all mandamus proceedings. Harrison v. Weiner, 226 Ga. 93, 172 S.E.2d 840 (1970).

Although proceeding was a special proceeding by way of a writ of mandamus, the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) provides that it is controlling and shall apply to all motions. Hatcher v. Hancock County Comm'rs of Rds. & Revenues, 239 Ga. 229, 236 S.E.2d 577 (1977).

O.C.G.A. § 9-6-27(a) complemented rather than conflicted with O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(k), which expressly established that the methods of service could have been used as alternative methods of service in special statutory proceedings; a taxpayer's failure to comply with O.C.G.A. § 9-6-27(a) in a case seeking mandamus and injunctive relief against a county was immaterial because the taxpayer served the county in the ordinary manner, and the county's reliance on O.C.G.A. § 9-11-81 was misplaced. Haugen v. Henry County, 277 Ga. 743, 594 S.E.2d 324, cert. denied, 543 U.S. 816, 125 S. Ct. 63, 160 L. Ed. 2d 22 (2004).

Quo warranto. — Action seeking a writ of quo warranto is one of the special statutory proceedings referenced in O.C.G.A. § 9-11-81. Anderson v. Flake, 270 Ga. 141, 508 S.E.2d 650 (1998).

Trover actions. — Trover and the defenses against a conditional vendor in a trover action are special statutory proceedings not controlled by the Civil Practice Act (see O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). J.G.T., Inc. v. Brunswick Corp., 119 Ga. App. 719, 168 S.E.2d 847 (1969).

Service in dispossessory proceedings. — Since former Code 1933, § 61-302 (see O.C.G.A. § 44-7-51), relating to dispossessory proceedings, did not expressly prescribe that the cumulative service provisions of Ga. L. 1972, p. 689, §§ 1-3 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-4(i)) were unavailable, Ga. L. 1968, p. 1104, § 12 (see now O.C.G.A. § 9-11-81), providing for exceptions to applicability of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9), was inoperable. Navaho Corp. v. Stuckey, 141 Ga. App. 271, 233 S.E.2d 217 (1977).

Sufficiency of affidavit seeking dispossessory warrant. — Sufficiency of an affidavit seeking a dispossessory warrant must be measured by the same strict rules applicable prior to enactment of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) since the Act does not apply when in conflict with special statutory proceedings. Brinson v. Ingram, 120 Ga. App. 271, 170 S.E.2d 39 (1969).

Dispossessory proceedings under O.C.G.A. Art. 3, Ch. 7, T. 44 do not dispense with the applicability of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) except in certain designated limited circumstances. Trust Co. Bank v. Shaw, 182 Ga. App. 165, 355 S.E.2d 99 (1987).

Foreclosure proceedings. — Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) controls in an application to confirm a foreclosure sale and permits the adding of parties to the proceedings. An application should not be dismissed because additional parties are necessary for adjudication but additional parties may be added. Small Bus. Admin. v. Desai, 193 Ga. App. 852, 389 S.E.2d 372, cert. denied, 193 Ga. App. 911, 389 S.E.2d 372 (1989).

In rem quiet title actions. — Default judgment against owners in a quiet title action based on the owners' failure to answer was improper because, once the in rem proceeding was instituted, the trial court was required, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 23-3-63, to submit the matter to a special master, and a special master was never appointed such that service could have properly been completed pursuant to the Quiet Title Act, O.C.G.A. § 23-3-60 et seq.; since the Quiet Title Act provided specific rules of practice and procedure with respect to an in rem quiet title action against all the world, the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, was inapplicable. Woodruff v. Morgan County, 284 Ga. 651, 670 S.E.2d 415 (2008).

Confirmation proceedings. — Discovery is permitted in a confirmation proceeding on a nonjudicial foreclosure sale because it is a special statutory proceeding and no statute establishes a contrary rule of discovery. Alliance Partners v. Harris Trust & Sav. Bank, 266 Ga. 514, 467 S.E.2d 531 (1996).

Procedure for appeal from probate court to superior court. — While the right of appeal to the superior court from a decision of the probate court is a constitutional right, the method and procedure by which that right is exercised is a “special statutory proceeding” within the meaning of that term as used in this section. Bragg v. Bragg, 225 Ga. 494, 170 S.E.2d 29 (1969).

Forfeiture proceedings. — Under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-81, the incorporation by reference provision of O.C.G.A. § 9-11-10(c) (form of pleadings), including incorporation of exhibits attached to pleadings, applies to forfeiture proceedings, unless specific, expressly prescribed rules of the forfeiture statute conflict with the incorporation of exhibits provisions. Bell v. State, 234 Ga. App. 693, 507 S.E.2d 535 (1998); Woods v. State, 243 Ga. App. 195, 532 S.E.2d 747 (2000).

O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49 (forfeiture) is a special statutory proceeding which must be strictly construed and complied with, and as such, not all provisions of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) apply, including O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55, the default judgment statute. Fulton v. State, 183 Ga. App. 570, 359 S.E.2d 726 (1987).

Since the claimant contesting the forfeiture of property was authorized to amend the claimant’s answer to a forfeiture complaint, the court erred in granting the state’s motion to strike the amendment. Jackson v. State, 231 Ga. App. 320, 498 S.E.2d 159 (1998).

Procedures for opening default as a matter of right under O.C.G.A. § 9-11-55(a) are applicable, pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-11-81, in forfeiture actions under O.C.G.A. § 16-13-49. Ford v. State, 271 Ga. 162, 516 S.E.2d 778 (1999), reversing Ford v. State, 235 Ga. App. 755, 509 S.E.2d 734 (1998) and overruling State v. Britt Caribe, Ltd., 154 Ga. App. 476, 268 S.E.2d 702 (1980).

Application to attorney fees. — Trial court did not err in granting declaratory relief to an attorney via a default judgment because a petition for declaratory judgment was an action at law pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 9-4-2 and a petition for declaratory judgment was governed by the practice rules contained in the Civil Practice Act, O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9, specifically O.C.G.A. § 9-11-81, including the rules pertaining to default judgment; the attorney was entitled to a judgment that a doctor was not entitled to attorney fees from the doctor’s former spouse under O.C.G.A. § 9-15-14(b) based on the admissions that the former spouse had successfully obtained a family violence protective order against the doctor and that this order was only vacated after the former spouse agreed to voluntarily dismiss the case. Vaughters v. Outlaw, 293 Ga. App. 620, 668 S.E.2d 13 (2008).

OPINIONS OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Service requirements for city court governed by Act creating it. — Requirements for service of summons under the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9) would not apply to the city court when Act creating the court provides that in cases of $200.00 or less the procedure and practice to be followed shall be governed by the law relating to and governing justice of the peace courts in force at the date of the passage of the Act. 1967 Op. Att'y Gen. No. 67-419.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

Enactment of new procedural method of bringing in parties cannot change the jurisdictional rules of the Constitution of this state. Register v. Stone’s Indep. Oil Distribs., Inc., 227 Ga. 123, 179 S.E.2d 68 (1971). For comment, see 8 Ga. St. B.J. 428 (1972).

Jurisdictional distinctions between law and equity remain. Burnham v. Lynn, 235 Ga. 207, 219 S.E.2d 111 (1975).

Constitutional venue provisions may not be altered or changed by the legislature or the courts, and the adoption of procedural devices for adjudicating claims of various parties in the same action does not effect a change in the venue requirements of the Constitution of this state. Pemberton v. Purifoy, 128 Ga. App. 892, 198 S.E.2d 356 (1973); Haley v. Citizens & S. Nat’l Bank, 141 Ga. App. 13, 232 S.E.2d 362 (1977).

Substantive framework of chapter not to be contravened. — Local practice rules, and even local statutes referring to specific courts, may control the flow of business, the hearing of cases, and other issues, but may not contravene the substantive framework of the Civil Practice Act (see now O.C.G.A. Ch. 11, T. 9). Auerback v. Maslia, 142 Ga. App. 184, 235 S.E.2d 594 (1977).

COMPLAINT

The defendant C.D., herein named, is a resident of _____ (street), _____ (city), _____ County, Georgia, and is subject to the jurisdiction of this court. (Add appropriate statement about domicile of remaining defendants.)

1.

On or about June 1, 1965, plaintiff issued to G.H. a policy of life insurance whereby plaintiff promised to pay to K.L. as beneficiary the sum of $10,000.00 upon the death of G.H. The policy required the payment by G.H. of a stipulated premium on June 1, 1966, and annually thereafter as a condition precedent to its continuance in force.

2.

No part of the premium due June 1, 1966, was ever paid and the policy ceased to have any force or effect after July 1, 1966.

3.

Thereafter, on September 1, 1966, G.H. and K.L. died as the result of a collision between a locomotive and the automobile in which G.H. and K.L. were riding.

4.

Defendant C.D. is the duly appointed and acting executor of the will of G.H., defendant E.F. is the duly appointed and acting executor of the will of K.L., and defendant X.Y. claims to have been duly designated as beneficiary of said policy in place of K.L.

5.

Each of the defendants, C.D., E.F., and X.Y., is claiming that the above-mentioned policy was in full force and effect at the time of the death of G.H.; each of them is claiming to be the only person entitled to receive payment of the amount of the policy and has made demand for payment thereof.

6.

By reason of these conflicting claims of the defendants, plaintiff is in great doubt as to which defendant is entitled to be paid the amount of the policy if it was in force at the time of death of G.H.

Wherefore, plaintiff demands that the court adjudge:

(1) That none of the defendants is entitled to recover from plaintiff the amount of said policy or any part thereof.

(2) That each of the defendants be restrained from instituting any action against plaintiff for the recovery of the amount of said policy or any part thereof.

(3) That, if the court shall determine that said policy was in force at the death of G.H., the defendants be required to interplead and settle between themselves their rights to the money due under said policy and that plaintiff be discharged from all liability in the premises except to the person whom the court shall adjudge entitled to the amount of said policy.

(4) That plaintiff recover its costs.

ANSWER

First Defense

The complaint fails to state a claim against defendant upon which relief can be granted.

Second Defense

If defendant is indebted to plaintiff for the goods mentioned in the complaint, he is indebted to him jointly with G.H. G.H. is alive, is subject to the jurisdiction of the court, and has not been made a party.

Third Defense

Defendant admits the allegations contained in paragraphs 1 and 4 of the complaint, alleges that he is without knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations contained in paragraph 2 of the complaint, and denies each and every other allegation contained in the complaint.

Fourth Defense

The right of action set forth in the complaint did not accrue within six years next before the commencement of this action.

COUNTERCLAIM

(Here set forth any claim as a counterclaim in the manner in which a claim is pleaded in a complaint.)

CROSS-CLAIM AGAINST DEFENDANT M.N.

(Here set forth the claim constituting a cross-claim against defendant M.N. in the manner in which a claim is pleaded in a complaint.)

ANSWER

Defense

Defendant denies the allegations stated to the extent set forth in the counterclaim herein.

COUNTERCLAIM FOR INTERPLEADER

Defendant received the sum of $10,000.00 as a deposit from E.F.

2.

Plaintiff has demanded the payment of such deposit to him by virtue of an assignment of it which he claims to have received from E.F.

3.

E.F. has notified the defendant that he claims such deposit, that the purported assignment is not valid, and that he holds the defendant responsible for the deposit.

Wherefore, defendant demands:

(1) That the court order E.F. to be made a party defendant to respond to the complaint and to this counterclaim.

(2) That the court order the plaintiff and E.F. to interplead their respective claims.

(3) That the court adjudge whether the plaintiff or E.F. is entitled to the sum of money.

(4) That the court discharge defendant from all liability in the premises except to the person it shall adjudge entitled to the sum of money.

(5) That the court award to the defendant its costs and attorney's fees.
